

Swift Decontrol Is Endorsed By Judge

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's swift action in eliminating price controls on gasoline, propane and crude oil was legal and prevented artificial shortages of petroleum products, a federal judge says.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene's written opinion Wednesday said Reagan was not required to call for a public hearing before eliminating the ceiling prices in a Jan. 28 executive order.

Nine members of Congress, three state governments and organizations representing unions, blacks and consumer groups contended in a suit that a hearing was required.

Greene said he agreed with the administration position that advance notice of decontrol likely would have led to stockpiling by suppliers hoping to sell the fuels at higher, decontrolled prices.

Stockpiling "could have caused spot shortages of petroleum products," said the judge, quoting from an administration statement.

The controls were scheduled to expire by law Sept. 30, Greene noted.

Michael Cooper, an attorney for the nine members of Congress in the suit, said no decision has been made on an appeal. There was no immediate comment from the White House.

Another Shuttle Repair

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A team of specialists will begin work this weekend on the latest problem threatening to delay the planned April maiden voyage of the space shuttle.

The team called to repair loose cork insulation on the external fuel tank arrived at the Kennedy Space Center this week, but modifications to the launch tower complex for the installation of special access platforms delayed their work by several days, officials said Wednesday.

The patch job is expected to take 13 days.

A fuel loading operation on Jan. 20 damaged the tank in two places. When the extremely cold fuels from the tank which will power the shuttle into orbit were pumped in, an outer layer of insulation came unglued from the tank's aluminum walls.

The problem is the latest of numerous problems that have plagued the space shuttle Columbia, which was to have been launched two years ago.

When the reusable shuttle is operational, it is to be the workhorse of the U.S. space program — ferrying satellites, scientific equipment and experiments into space. Astronauts will guide the shuttle back to Earth for a landing in California.

BUDGET WORKSHOP
The Greenville City Board of Education will hold a 1981-82 capital outlay budget workshop meeting on March 9 in the central office board room. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Out Of The Past

DOWNED TREE YIELDS PAST HISTORY — George Braxton holds a horse shoe he found in an oak tree while cutting it down. Braxton said the horse shoe was apparently attached to the tree when it was about ten years old, making a place for town's citizens to tie their horses. The tree measured some six feet in diameter, and Braxton estimated the age to be about 200 years old. It took Braxton about eight hours to cut down the tree which was located in Farmville. Braxton said when he struck the tip end of the horse shoe with his chain saw, a piece of metal struck him in his eye, causing a minor injury. The tree was decayed inside making it hollow, and a heart section was where the shoe was located. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Building Official Avers State Code Was Violated

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Alton Warren said Wednesday that he was suspended from his duties as chief building official here after he claimed he was being forced by his department head to violate state building codes in occupying the city's community facility on Greene Street.

Warren contended in an interview that the community building, which has housed the city's engineering, inspections and planning departments since early February, was "occupied before it should have been and was occupied in an unsafe and hazardous condition."

Warren claimed that inspections personnel "have been opposed to the move the whole time until it is fixed for the handicapped and is safe to occupy."

The suspended official said city inspectors were asked to inspect the building prior to Feb. 26 and Warren noted he asked Dennis Tripp, who is responsible for the inspection of older buildings here, to handle the job. Tripp, according to Warren, made the inspection, accompanied by Jerry McLawhorn, local fire marshal.

Warren said Tripp noted 14 building code violations in his report, ranging from split stairway steps and loose wires to lack of handrails on the front steps and violations of handicap regulations. The fire official cited in his report, Warren pointed out, that stairways were not of non-combustible material, storage was allowed under the stairways, a lack of electrical outlets, and an overload on extension cords.

The building official said the facility was in "general run down condition."

Warren said Ron Sewell, director of engineering and inspections here, requested a permit on Jan. 12 to undertake alterations and repairs on the building and the $30,000 work permit was issued that day. He added a preliminary inspection was not required by his department for alterations and repairs.

He claimed the relocation of the engineering, inspections and planning staffs took place "even though they (city officials) knew they had not made the necessary repairs." He noted that "we brought up points about the handicapped," particularly the need for an elevator, and were told the

Bids Accepted On Three Parcels By Commission

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Redevelopment Commission, meeting Wednesday morning, accepted bids submitted on three disposal parcels, subject to city council approval, and approved the bidders as qualified developers.

The successful bids were submitted by Reynolds May for disposal parcel J-1, located at Pitt and Howell Streets; the Rev. Alfred Norfleet for parcel J-1a, which adjoins his property at Pitt and Howell Streets; and Matthew Lewis for parcel 6A-1, located at Mooring Street and Melody Lane.

May, according to Joe Laney, executive director, plans to move a house from the area between Railroad and 14th Street and rehabilitate the structure on the J-1 tract.

Norfleet expressed an interest in purchasing the small J-1a tract in order to have a drive-way and offstreet parking for an existing private residence. Lewis indicated plans to either build a single family dwelling on the 6A-1 lot or move a structure to the site for renovations.

Laney said the J-1 and J-1a parcels are located in the Southside urban renewal area, while the tract sought by Lewis is located in the West Meadowbrook area.

Faye Brewington, staff real estate officer, reported four parcels were acquired in the West Meadowbrook section during February and demolition activity involved two Meadowbrook parcels and two in South Evans.

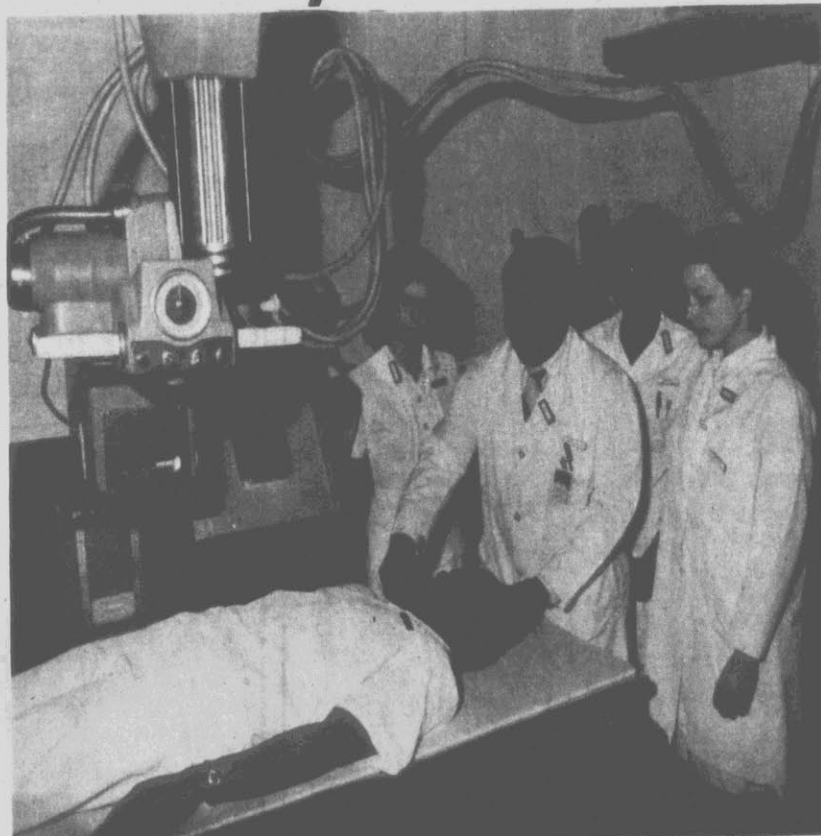

Mrs. Brewington said relocation activity during the month included two Meadowbrook cases and single parcels in South Evans and West Greenville Thoroughfare areas.

Laney said the 14th Street thoroughfare segment between the railroad and Charles Street is in good shape with clearance nearing on the needed right-of-way.

Commissioners received a letter from Mayor Don

X-Ray Lab Is Added To Pitt PCC Facilities

A new addition to the teaching facilities in the Radiologic Technology Department at Pitt Community College has made it easier for students to learn the essentials of their trade.

An energized X-ray laboratory, equipped with radiographic-fluoroscopic equipment and an automatic processor capable of processing X-ray film in 90 seconds, provides the students with the opportunity to practice patient positioning and radiographic exposure using X-ray phantoms.

The PCC R-T program is a 24-month AMA-approved curriculum. Upon graduation, radiologic technology students are eligible to write the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists Examination for certification as a registered Radiologic Technologist.

The PCC program is designed to enhance the radiologic technology profession by including those related courses which are necessary for the completion of an associate degree. This program is conducted in close coordination between didactic and clinical education experiences.

The clinical facilities include Pitt Memorial Hospital, Eastern Radiologists, Inc., Greenville; Washington County Hospital, Plymouth; North Carolina Memorial Hospital, Chapel Hill; Roanoke Chowan Hospital, Ahoskie; and Beaufort County Hospital, Washington. Clinical rotations for the students, off campus, begin as early as the fall quarter of the first year of enrollment.

The Radiologic Technology program was established in September, 1975, through a joint effort on the part of Pitt Memorial Hospital and Pitt Community College. Since that time, the department has established a reputation in its field and recently was awarded high marks by the site survey team from the Joint Review Committee, on Education for Radiologic Technology and the American Medical Association of Chicago, Ill. This group stated PCC's program was one of the most well-organized they had visited and that resources available to the program were remarkable.

"The report made by this national accrediting agency shows that we have come a long way in our field of professional education during the past seven years," said Department Chairman Garrie Moore. "The committee also recommended that we increase our student enrollment capacity."

Moore added that students are strongly encouraged to take an active part as participants in their professional organization on a local, state and national level. "During the course of the two-year program," he continued, "students will be afforded the opportunity of attending educational seminars sponsored by various professional organizations. Annually, the North Carolina Society of Radiologic Technologists holds each spring. This event presents the students with an opportunity to attend lectures by well-known members of the field, as well as physicians, and to observe exhibits sponsored by the representatives of commercial manufacturers of radiologic equipment."

A large group of PCC Radiologic Technology students and staff attend the annual conference of the North Carolina Society of Radiologic Technologists held each spring. This event presents the students with an opportunity to attend lectures by well-known members of the field, as well as physicians, and to observe exhibits sponsored by the representatives of commercial manufacturers of radiologic equipment.

"Individuals entering the profession of radiologic technology, as well as any health profession, should be anxious to serve the public. It is of the utmost importance that health professions realize that the first and foremost goal in health care is the rendering

NO PWP NOW

Is there a Parents Without Partners chapter in Greenville now? B. A.

No, there is not, according to a former member to whom we talked. There used to be, but it isn't active now. There is an active Singles Club, she said, and suggested you call and talk to John Grimsley, president, 756-0135.

Hotline called Grimsley, who said that his club does serve some of the same functions as PWP, but is, of course, not so child-rearing oriented. He said the club is selective and takes members only upon recommendation. He agreed, though, that he'd be glad to talk to you or anyone who is seriously interested.

Town Without Men: Fact Or Fiction?

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer
The tiny community, as the story goes, was called Bethsheba, an all-female village located for a short time in 1893 on the Oklahoma prairie between the present-day towns of Enid and Perry.
The women who were supposed to have settled Bethsheba scorned men — in fact, anything masculine, down to their farm animals and horses.

There is some doubt whether the story of Bethsheba is true, or merely the fabrication of a newspaper reporter from Kansas anxious to appease his demanding editor.

Dr. John W. Morris, a professor emeritus at the University of Oklahoma, says if the settlement existed, it vanished as quickly as an Oklahoma twister — lasting only about three weeks.
Morris mentions the all-female town in his book, "Ghost Towns of Oklahoma," but says, "We never could specifically locate it."

Wayne Ward, curator of the Museum of the Cherokee Strip of Oklahoma in Enid, says a New York Times article on the opening of the strip in the first week of September 1893 mentions a woman named Annette Daisey trying to set up an all-female community in Oklahoma.

"That lends a little credibility to the story," Ward says.

Robert E. Cunningham, writing in the publication, Orbit, on Feb. 19, 1961, quotes a Kansas newspaper reporter's accounts of the town.

Cunningham's article, "The Town Without Men," did not list the name of the reporter or the Kansas newspaper. Efforts to reach Cunningham, who now lives in Arlington, Texas, were unsuccessful.

"The village originally consisted of 33 women, but 12 of them deserted after the first week, one was expelled when it was learned she had a razor in her possession. The local court held that masculine implements were subversive to the vital principles of the community," the Kansas reporter is quoted as writing.

Cunningham's account said the town had been formed in the Cherokee Strip on Sept. 16, 1893. But there are no records in Garfield County to indicate the town ever existed.

Ward said he had checked and also had found no filings under Annette Daisey's name.

The reporter quoted in Cunningham's story either had one whale of a story, a colorful imagination or an editor who breathed fire and brimstone.

After reporting on the existence of the community, the reporter was ordered to go back and get additional information on it, according to Cunningham's account.

To keep from getting shot by the police chief, who carried a shotgun, the reporter took with him a strong pair of field glasses to observe the activities of Bethsheba.

The reporter said each time he had moved closer, more and more women had appeared until some dozen stood behind the police chief. All wore identical long, black dresses and dark shawls tied around their heads.

"As I moved closer, the woman raised the gun once more, while the remainder of the population held their hands over their ears. Some averted their faces, presumably dreading to see the death throes of another human being, even though he happened to be a man," the reporter wrote.

Obviously, the woman was not a great shot.
The newsman moved into the village and looked around.

"The first thing that caught my eye were a lot of chickens, all hens. At the end of the street were a half a dozen mares, and a curious dog sniffed at my heels. It was female. Attempts to catch the eye of one of the inhabitants of this non-descript rookery was unavailing," the reporter said.

"Some miles further on I met a farmer. He told me the village was made up entirely of women, who abjured the masculine sex completely. In proof of this he said that some of his chickens strayed into the settlement, and among the chickens was a rooster. The women killed this unlucky fowl with druidistic rites," the newsman reported.

Cunningham's story said the editor had ordered the reporter back to Bethsheba and told him to get the names, ages and former residences of the women living there.

Cunningham said the newsman, after riding about 30 miles on horseback, had gone back only to discover Bethsheba was gone.

His story said a neighbor had told the newsman that the women had disappeared one night because, they told his wife, they were lonely and afraid and dissension had blighted their expected happiness.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Well, who would believe it. After over 25 years, Mamie Eisenhower's very own favorite recipe has won new glory. Ike called her recipe, "my wife's million-dollar fudge" and Americans have taken it to their hearts. The recipe appears in innumerable cookbooks. Two good reasons: it is easy to make and tastes good.

Now Gloria Ward of Yuma, Ariz., has won $1,000 for a version of Mamie's fudge.

Ward entered a contest. She used Mamie's main ingredients but added new flavoring. She calls her offering Cappuccino Candy — probably because coffee is one of the new flavorings. In Italy Cappuccino is espresso served with steamy frothy milk — therefore the new candy's name.

The results of the cooking contest (one seeking ways to use marshmallow creme) were announced in March in New York City. Ward's entry won the prize in one of the four categories of the contest; there were three other first-prize-winning recipes in three other categories of $1,000 each and one overall grand prize winner of $5,000.

If you are interested in trying this winning candy, clip the following recipe now. It's been given exclusively to this food writer — for a while.

Those cooks who are interested in gastronomic history may like to know that I found the earliest original recipe for Mamie's Million-Dollar Fudge in a cookbook, "Who Says We Can't Cook!" published in 1955 by the Women's National Press Club of Washington, D.C. If you have a copy of the book, hang on to it. It may become a collector's item.

GLORIA WARD'S
CAPPUCCINO CANDY
2 cups sugar
1/2 cup margarine
1 cup evaporated milk
One 12-ounce package semisweet chocolate pieces
One 7-ounce jar marshmallow creme
1 cup chopped nuts
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 tablespoon instant coffee granules
2 teaspoons orange flavoring or orange juice
2 teaspoons brandy flavoring
Combine sugar, margarine and milk in heavy 2 1/2-quart saucepan. Bring to a full rolling boil, stirring constantly. Continue boiling 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; stir in chocolate pieces until melted. Add marshmallow creme, nuts, orange rind, instant coffee and flavorings; beat until well blended. Pour into greased 13-by-9-inch pan. Cool at room temperature; cut into squares. Makes 3 pounds.

You can perk up meals by using a liquid other than water when you cook vegetables. How about substituting tomato juice, skim milk or bouillon?

Cauliflower has another name — rich man's cabbage. It's sometimes called that because it's harder to grow than regular cabbage.

At Wit's End

Some people have the weirdest ideas for relieving stress. The newest one is called a flotation tank. For $25, you climb into a wooden box with eight inches of 93-degree water to which 800 pounds of salt has been added and for the next hour float in complete darkness and get in touch with your feelings.

Doesn't that sound like fun? Sorta like being sucked up in your sweeper bag to get your mind off your split ends.

Frankly, the flotation tank sounds like just another way to get the phone to ring.

It's nothing new. Back in the '40s every slick magazine on the newsstand was pushing for the mid-afternoon hot tub soak. It was to be the housewife's answer to boredom, depression, neurosis, unfulfillment, lower back pains, a short pay week and unrequited love.

It always showed the woman immersing herself into three feet of suds, leaning back with her eyes closed and a sensuous smile on her lips ... lost in space.

It never worked for me. Even with my eyes closed. I smelled the mildew on the shower curtain and realized if I cut off any more on the bottom, I'd end up with only the rings.

I'd pretend my legs were only as big as what surfaced on the water and became very depressed when the rest floated to the top.

And I would strain to hear the muted voices outside the bathroom door. "I'm telling." "What kind of animal is it?" "You got that all over Mom's fur collar." "You're bleeding all over that bedspread." "A lot of people live without a car."

Sometimes, a note would come under the door and as I struggled to beach myself, shivering from the cold, yet consumed with curiosity, I would open it to read, "Can we split a Pepsi?"

The worst part of the hot bubble bath was the dreaming. How do you get spaghetti stains out of a plastic tablecloth? What does it mean when the lawn around the septic tank turns to quicksand? If a kid toes in and you don't do anything about it, will she still be invited to the prom?

After awhile, I stopped trying to relax by artificial means. I made up my mind a hot bath couldn't solve all my problems. I just stopped sweating the small stuff.

Some say I'm too practical. I oversimplify things. Like when my friend said her dog was getting too fat and she paid 57 cents a can for dietary dog food, I said, "Why don't you just feed him less?"

She looked at me like I should have known the answer, but I honestly didn't.

I don't have stress, but I think I'm a carrier.

Loving Words Ease Burden

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 55-year-old chemical engineer, married to a 52-year-old woman for 32 years.

Since last August I have suffered a heart attack, my wife has had a malignant tumor and one kidney removed, my 64-year-old sister died of cancer, my wife's 46-year-old sister died of cancer, and our closest friend has just been diagnosed as terminal with an inoperable brain tumor.

And as if that's not bad enough, two of our three children have hit bottom — drugs, alcohol, charged with robbery and all the other things that tear parents up. In one month I must return to the hospital for removal of an aneurysm and replacement by aortic graft.

Yesterday I came home and found a "love letter" from my wife. It read in part, "Darling, you are like a rock and I am like a balloon. And if we weren't tied together, I'd have floated off into space long ago and burst! Thank you for your commitment to a lasting marriage. I don't know all the hurts I've caused you, but knowing myself, I've caused you plenty. I just want to say I love you, and I'm glad you love me." Abby, my spirits are high, and I feel so lucky I had to share this with someone.

I MARRIED AN ANGEL (ATHENS, GA.)

DEAR MARRIED: Your letter started out like the Book of Job, but what a lovely O. Henry ending! Thanks for sharing. And may you and your angel enjoy another 32 years together.

DEAR ABBY: A woman signed ENVOUS wrote in to list all the advantages of being "the other woman" instead of the wife. Well, she is all wet. I have been the other woman, and I know firsthand that it's a losing game. I was married. My lover wasn't, but he was living with a woman who watched him closer than most wives watch their husbands. He managed to see me anyway. He kept telling me he loved me, but as long as I was a married woman there was no hope of marrying me, so he might as well live with this other woman and let her keep house and cook for him.

I was so in love with him that after two years I couldn't stand it, so I got a divorce. Did he marry me? Are you kidding? He ran like his pants were on fire!

LOVED AND LOST

DEAR LOVED: From the sound of your lover, you didn't lose much.

DEAR ABBY: Lately you have fallen into a terrible rut. You tell everyone who has a problem to see a psychiatrist or some kind of therapist.

Abby, if these people could afford to go to psychiatrists, they wouldn't be writing to you. I know what I'm talking about, because my husband would never go anywhere if he had a problem, but if he saw something in your column that really shook him up he'd pay attention to it.

As a matter of fact, a couple of years back you had something in your column about how unpleasant it was to go to bed with a husband who didn't shower regularly. Right after that, my husband started showering nearly every day, which made me very happy. And I'm sure his co-workers were a lot happier, too. Now, if you will just print something about husbands under 50 who have lost all interest in sex ...

MILLIE

DEAR MILLIE: Sorry, but I send men under 75 who've lost all interest in sex to their urologists. And if they're physically sound, then I send them to psychiatrists.

Mrs. Gardner Is Honored

Special tributes were paid to Mrs. Alton Gardner Sunday at Timothy Christian Church on Iva Gardner Day.

She was honored by friends for hours of service rendered to the church program, choir and Christian Women's Fellowship. Speakers for the ceremony were the Rev. Paul Brown, Louis Haddock, Carrie Dixon and Robert Halstead.

She was given an orchid, a gift from the choir, an appreciation plaque and a gift from the CWF. Flowers were also placed in the church in her honor. The ceremony was ended by a dinner in the fellowship hall.

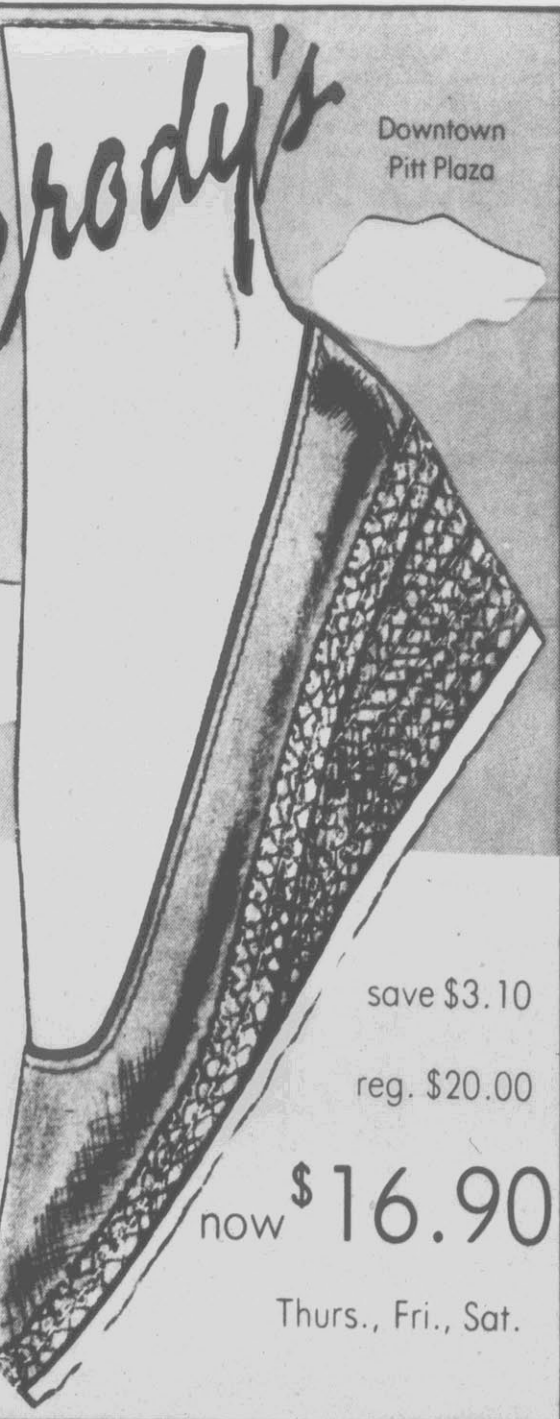

Special guests attending were her children, Mrs. Randy Huggill, Mr. and Mrs. Ben A. Gardner and her grandchildren. Other guests included Dr. and Mrs. R. N. Redford, Mrs. Margrete Weeks, Mrs. Virginia Everett, Mrs. Vera Smith, Mrs. Colvin Joyner, Mr. and Mrs. Corey Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Little.

Imported Cars Claim Record Market Share

By STEPHEN JONES
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Imported cars claimed a record share of the U.S. market and sales by domestic automakers dropped 4.2 percent last month compared to a year ago, the companies say.

However, the sales figures for the final days of February brought some good news at last for the beleaguered American auto industry.

Rebate programs by four of the five U.S. automakers sparked a 21 percent sales surge in the final third of the month, the automakers reported Wednesday.

Import sales amounted to 219,164 cars in February, a market share for the month of 28.7 percent. That was a 4.7 percent increase from the 217,965 cars sold in the same month a year ago, when the market share was 26.9 percent, the previous record.

The 543,593 cars sold during the month by the five major U.S. automakers amounted to a seasonally adjusted annual selling rate of 7.4 million cars, the highest since a 7.5 million rate in March 1980.

The annual rate for imports was 2.7 million cars, to make total industry sales wind up at an annual rate of 10.1 million for the month, the best since February 1980, when the rate was 10.4 million.

But it was the final third of the month, not the month as a whole or the annual rate, that pleased auto executives.

General Motors Corp., which started offering rebates Feb. 18 of $500 to $700 on about half its cars, led a late February surge with a 27-percent increase to 152,430 cars, compared to 137,013 in the same period of 1980.

GM's daily sales rate of 21,776 set a company record for the late February period and was GM's highest daily selling rate for any 10-day period in 21 months.

Chrysler Corp., which has been offering rebates since early December, saw sales jump 47 percent, from 22,262 to 28,690, during the final third of the month. Chrysler offered rebates of about 7 percent of the total price on most of its cars.

American Motors Corp. offered 10 percent price reductions on its cars through the entire month. Its sales in the final selling period rose an estimated 25 percent, from about 4,984 to about 5,443. The estimate is necessary because AMC reports sales only for the entire month.

Volkswagen of America reported a 5.6 percent drop in sales during the final selling period, from 8,082 to 6,679. VW was the only domestic manufacturer not offering rebates or other buyer incentives.

Despite rebates of 10 percent of the base car price, Ford Motor Co. suffered a 2 percent decline, for Feb. 21-28 from 53,051 to 45,510.

Two Dead In Greek Quake

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Another earthquake rocked Greece today, adding to the fear and misery of thousands of people camping out in the streets and squares across the nation after a quake less than a day earlier.

Many schools, stores and offices were closed because Athenians were afraid that new tremors would bring down more buildings. No new casualties were reported in the latest quake, which measured 5.8 on the Richter scale.

Police said more than 170 houses in rural areas collapsed and hundreds were damaged in the quake Wednesday night. Many of the houses had been weakened by two previous quakes over the past two weeks.

Two Greeks died of heart attacks and 30 were injured in Wednesday's quake, which measured 6.2 on the Richter scale and was centered 42 miles west of Athens in the Gulf of Corinth.

The state radio said the tremor caused a three-foot high wave in the gulf that pounded the beaches of the town that was damaged by the quake on Feb. 24. That quake left 18 dead nationwide and caused some damage to the nation's ancient artifacts.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 5 on the Richter scale can cause considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

repairs would be made.

Warren said on Feb. 17, he "started down the stairs and slipped on saw dust," injuring himself in the fall. He said yesterday a physician diagnosed his injury as a broken coccyx, the area commonly referred to as the "tailbone."

Warren observed, "Due to the number of complaints I had from contractors and citizens, I wrote Ron a letter and told him he was forcing me to violate state building codes and I sent him a copy of the inspection on the building." He added, "Contractors came to me and said 'you are doing something you would not allow me to do. How can you uphold building requirements if you are not doing this yourself?'"

According to Warren, he received a letter the following day from Sewell on Feb. 27 notifying him of the suspension. He added the letter indicated the suspension would remain in effect until an inspection of the building was made by the N.C. Department of Insurance.

Warren noted Sewell said in the letter that Warren had been derelict in his duties and the suspension was for failure to perform his duties.

Sewell said Wednesday that he requested the Department of Insurance inspection of the facility and the inspection has been made. He added that the city is awaiting a written report from the insurance department.

Due to state law prohibiting public discussion of personnel matters, the city has had no comment on Warren's suspension other than to confirm the action.

Asked this morning about Warren's status, Sewell noted that Warren is still on suspension. He added that he could not comment on when the suspension might be terminated.

Sewell said a Department of Insurance representative inspected the building Tuesday. He said the report of the inspection will be made public as soon as it is received by city officials.

The community building was built in 1946 as an education facility for the Memorial Baptist Church, and was purchased by the city in 1973.

City manager Ed Wyatt noted that the site was purchased with the idea of first creating a parking lot there, then using the site for a new city hall.

Commissioner of Insurance John Ingram this morning said his department had had a telephone request to inspect the building, but he indicated that city officials had been asked to make the request for an inspection in writing.

Later, he said, "I can't verify that any of our people have been down there," to check the building.

Ingram said, however, that electrical plans for the facility had been submitted to his department and were approved.

Redevelopment

McGlohon thanking the board and staff "for the progress achieved over the past year in completing our urban renewal projects and important aspects of the Community Development program."

McGlohon agreed in the letter, addressed to Chairman David Gordon, that "the most significant action of the year was the mutual adoption of the project completion agreements to close out the Central Business District and Southside Urban Renewal Projects."

The mayor stated, "Completion of the remaining project activities will end some 20 years of urban renewal activities that literally transformed the face of Greenville through better neighborhoods, improved public facilities, and a greatly improved economic base. The council is grateful that the commission's leadership has distinguished Greenville as a leader in efforts to eradicate slums and blight."

McGlohon added, "We are confident that the remaining urban renewal and community development activities can be fully completed by October, 1981, and the Redevelopment Commission staff transitioned full-time into (the) Housing Authority as we have previously discussed."

A letter to McGlohon was approved yesterday by the commissioners, addressing areas discussed in a Jan. 6 meeting involving city and Redevelopment officials. In the letter, it was reported that the "CBD and Southside Urban Renewal Projects will be closed out on the agreed schedule and...the remaining commission staff should be in position to make a transition to the Housing Authority by the October, 1981 target date in the event the city does not receive additional CD funding."

The letter continued, "In the meantime, we have approved, executed and returned the CD Cooperation Agreement approved by city council Feb. 12...which will provide a basis for compensation for Redevelopment Commission staff activities from the urban renewal turn-over funds."

According to the letter, signed by Gordon, "This will allow us to continue Redevelopment activity in accordance with the project completion agreement, complete the West Meadowbrook project, and perform work in South Evans as approved by council, funds permitting."

Laney said that he indicated to McGlohon some $50,000 would be needed to fund the Redevelopment Commission staff activities for the remainder of the year. The money would come from turn-over funding provided to the city by the commission as a result of the cash surplus from close-out of the urban renewal projects.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development has estimated the cash turnover and approximately $500,000 in disposal parcels, the proceeds of which will be turned over to the city as the property is closed out, will total some $1.5 million.

The March meeting of the commission was held Wednesday, rather than on the regular second Monday night meeting date, due to scheduling conflicts.

Useless Legal Fees

Let us say first and foremost, we see nothing wrong with printing a prayer on the state maps.

Having said that we can observe the state of North Carolina has spent a lot of money uselessly in the legal fees to carry the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

It had to be obvious the court would rule against the state of North Carolina, given the separation of church and state provided for in the Constitution.

The funds are spent now on the expensive appeals process, and that particular amount of money won't be there to meet pressing needs of our state.

There are adequate ways in our society to distribute this same prayer to any motorist who lives or passes through our state. Any church group could have hundreds of thousands of them printed up rather inexpensively, and surely there are enough church volunteers to hand them out.

We never raised a peep about the prayer being on the highway maps, but to spend state funds carrying this to the U. S. Supreme Court surely is not the best use of our tax dollars.

Doing Nothing Hurts Most

Paul V. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is not going to be very popular around Washington.

The capital is abuzz with concern over Reagan-recommended budget cuts. In the face of that Volcker told the House Ways and Means Committee, "I wouldn't be disappointed if you went beyond the Reagan cuts."

He said the danger of "overshooting" the budget cuts is "non-existent."

Volcker is as knowledgeable as anyone concerning what it will take to get inflation under control. The budget cuts are going to hurt some, but the alternative of doing nothing will hurt us far more.

THIS AFTERNOON

Crime And Courts

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The courtroom is the arena in which the fight against crime is won or lost. In recent years, it has looked more and more like the fight is a losing game.

When Chief Justice Warren Burger spoke from his commanding position on the U.S. Supreme Court recently, he was a latecomer to the field in criticizing lax handling of criminals.

The public has been aware for a long time that excessive concern for civil rights, Constitutional rights, psychological mumbo-jumbo, and social or economic deprivations has all but turned the bar of justice into a haven for criminals.

As State Rep. George Miller of Durham sees it, the public has been puzzled and frustrated by negotiated settlements and plea bargains which further reduce serious crimes to lesser ones; the whispered conferences; the delays and confusion of legal maneuverings which often seem to result in the appearance of less than sure and just punishment for the guilty.

Miller is sponsoring a package of legislative proposals which dovetail with the crime message which Gov. Jim Hunt delivered in the opening weeks of the North Carolina General Assembly.

State Rep. Parks Helms of Charlotte has chaired the N.C. Courts Commission for the past year or so in taking a close look at the courts and producing recommendations for change.

That document is at the printers and due on desks of legislators in a week or so.

Helms says of the overall approach: "It was written before Justice Burger spoke but it will strongly reinforce what he has said. That has been our major direction, to help define the courts as a frontline participant in the crime fight, and to increase credibility."

Among the numerous proposals, one will likely draw much fire from reformists. The commission will push for sharp limits on appeals by defendants. One appeal should be sufficient, and that based on a complaint of actual error in trial proceedings and not just a fishing expedition in hopes of getting a verdict overturned. And appeals when the defendant entered a plea of guilty would be eliminated.

Meanwhile, district attorneys are upset that they had so little influence in the recommendations from the Courts Commission. The association of prosecutors was heard from at meetings of the Courts Commission.

No Involvement

But in drafting legislative proposals and voting on the various recommendations, the district attorneys were not involved. Which leads to this comment from a set of legislative proposals drawn up by prosecutors for legislative consideration: "This is an anomaly, since district attorneys are elected to represent the people's interest. They utilize the major portion of court time in both trial divisions of the General Court of Justice, and are vitally interested in all issues that affect the administration of criminal justice."

The district attorneys are asking for at least three prosecutor members on the Courts Commission, and in a related recommendation are urging that on any commission, council or committee engaged in court or criminal justice matters that prosecutors be appointed "at least in equal number as criminal defense attorneys."

BY GARRY WILLS

Jas. Madison Off Rolls

NEW YORK — The Reagan economic policy is going to have effects whether or not it proves efficient in reaching its stated goals. All over America, people are hastily assessing the probable effects while no one can have more than a pious hope about the plan's efficiency.

Some rightfully deplore the probable effects upon the poor, where (for instance) urban black unemployment has created social crises inadequately redressed by government programs. Now even the inadequate programs are to be undermined. Those are the cuts that truly matter; not what, dear reader, may partly inconvenience you or me.

But the Reagan election was an explicit declaration that America does not want to hear from or about its dispossessed, at the moment, but from those whose possessions seem threatened or eroding. So, let's look at some of those.

My chance to do so came here in New York, where the executive director of the NHPRC (National Historical Publications and Records Commission) was making a report to a body that had been formed to give him a report. The Mellon Foundation sponsored a survey of the job being done by the NHPRC, to help improve its performance. But all the consulting and recommendations have now gone by the board. The Reagan team simply canceled the NHPRC's budget.

This commission is small by government standards (it got by on $4 million a year) and stranded in the bureaucracy. As an adjunct to the National Archives in the General Services Administration, it is not a grant-giving giant like the National Endowment for the Humanities, whose budget was $170 million. The commission has funded the printing of historical records and editions (e.g., of the early Congress and of the Founding Fathers' papers).

Even among its own clients, the commission has come under fire for elitism, for concentrating on the great men of the past, not on the common people — that was one criticism the outside survey was meant to consider. But the basic documentation of America's past was a job few would care to criticize till now. Who can doubt the value of a full edition of James Madison's papers?

Frank Burke, the director, brought news that the appeal to restore $500,000 to the canceled budget had been rejected out of hand by the OMB. That small sum was meant to keep up the basic Founding Fathers projects. On a budget of zero, Mr. Burke was told to cut his staff from 22 to 12 by October, with the commission's future in doubt.

Not a tale of great tragedy, by comparison with the blighted lives of our society's real victims. But the ripple effect of this small decision is a symbol of the many displacements President Reagan is effecting in the hope that his plan is not a chimerical one. Perhaps some of the editing projects can find outside private funding. But others, it seems certain, will be suspended.

What does that matter? Well, editors with long experience of their material, and with minds well-stocked after years of effort, must turn elsewhere, all their hard-earned expertise going for naught. Documents laboriously collected may go into warehouses, so that scholarly access, which was on the verge of accomplishment, will be denied. Skilled staff will be turned out into a job market glutted with their talents.

I asked Mr. Burke if he thought outside money could be found. "Actually, our main hope is on the right wing, among supporters of the people who have cut off our funds." The patriotic importance of the Founders' papers has made some very conservative congressmen

COULD UPSET THEIR WHOLE APPLCART!

Georgia Has Witnesses

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — I know not what nectars the natives of these lovely Georgia coastal marshes have been nipping of late, but there have been sightings of a giant sea serpent along the lines of the Loch Ness monster in the Altamaha River.

Having devoted considerable time as a foreign correspondent in pursuit of Scotland's elusive Nessie, including many evenings in the public rooms of the Drumnadrochit Hotel where it all happens in the Highlands, I take a scholarly interest in monster sightings.

Georgia's giant sludge or whatever it is differs from Scotland's slithering beastie in that people actually claim to have seen it. Around the shores of Loch Ness, you only meet people who know people who have seen Nessie, like Father Aloysius, the prior of the Benedictine monastery on the west shore of the loch who has written a book on the monster.

"Father Aloysius," I once asked him in an interview, "have you ever actually seen the Loch Ness monster?"

"Och no," he admitted, "but now me brother has. He was out there on the loch fishing on a windless moonlit night when all of a sudden there was this great mooling of the waters..." Etc. Etc.

Georgia, on the other hand, offers at least three first-hand witnesses to the Altamaha River monster and a fourth who saw the wake it left in the river, causing boats to rock and bump against the dock.

Former newspaper publisher Larry Gwin, who lives on the banks of the river, reported he was eel fishing with his partner, Steven Wilson, late in December when they saw a snake-like creature 15 to 20 feet long "as big around as a man's body with two brownish humps about five feet apart." It dived "in a big swirl of water and was not seen again but boiled up a swell that was "like the wake of a racing boat."

With that, Harvey Blackman, 74, of Brunswick, came forward and recalled something similar in the river a few years back at a place called, interestingly enough, Two Way, Ga. Blackman, who has been fishing the river for 20 years, was standing on a floating dock which suddenly was rocked by a great wave. He saw "a monstrous something, 15 to 20 feet long... big around as a man's body." The thing had a slick-looking body, was grayish-brown and when it "raised its head up out of the water it looked like a snake head."

Frank Culpepper, who owns the fishing camp at Two Way, was inside a camp building when the monster surfaced, so he didn't actually see it, but he witnessed its wake, bumping the boats about, and remembers one of the men running inside for a rifle.

That, of course, was bad form. Fortunately, the marksman was too late or the sea serpent too swift. If Georgia is going to have itself a first-class tourist attracting monster, folks can't go around shooting it at first sighting. You don't want to kill the glob before it lays its golden egg. Like the Loch Ness monster, it will have to be declared a protected species, which shouldn't be too difficult in Georgia where anything that Sherman didn't burn down has either been declared part of the national trust or awarded a historical marker by the Confederate Daughters. I understand everything from the original Coke bottle and Lester Maddox's ax handles to cans of Billy Beer are part of the cherished cultural heritage down here.

The next thing needed is for the monster to acquire an affectionate nickname, like maybe Altamaha Annie. Then a logbook must be kept at a local road house or fishing camp of official sightings. That way, the scientists become interested and the monster becomes eligible for government research grants. Nessie lives on in Loch Ness because scientific expeditions keep arriving with sonar and radar and what not to track her to her watery lair.

In recent years both the New York Times and the late Chicago Daily News have invested time and money in a serious scientific search for Nessie. The last time I went to Loch Ness a Japanese photographic expedition had arrived with a minisubmarine and all sorts of diving gear. They said they were going to photograph the monster and give the pictures to Princess Anne as a wedding present.

Their chief scientist, a tiny gentleman from Japan with large beer bottle eyeglasses, held a press conference for the skeptical British press at the Drumnadrochit Hotel on the shore of the loch. The chap from the London Economist (or was it the Observer?), a no-nonsense science writer, was particularly pessimistic in his questions.

"Now look here, old fellow," he asked, "Have you any idea of what you are searching for? Is it a giant eel, a sea serpent trapped in one of the underwater caves or a whole school or herd of reptilians? Just what are you looking for?"

The gentleman from Japan cut him down like a Samurai swordsman attacking a plate of sushi.

"We are rooking," he said, "for something with a wrong neck."

There are those who think that the gloriously polluted skies over Loch Ness, fed by

Other Editors Say It's Still There

(Carteret News-Times)

How many more times, we wonder, is the huge phosphate resource off the southern North Carolina coast going to be "discovered"? If it's twice, it's thrice, the saying goes.

Dr. Orrin Pilkey, Duke University geologist, reported the offshore deposit in 1965. Last week the phosphate deposits were termed "a very exciting find" by a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

Robert L. Upton of Texasgulf, which mines phosphate north of here in Beaufort County, says, "It has been known for some time that most of the eastern seaboard is underlaid with phosphate." He termed recent studies by an East Carolina and South Florida University researchers "an indication of the extent."

Dr. Stanley Riggs, ECU, and Dr. Albert C. Hine, University of South Florida, do not claim they made a discovery. Rather, they have "discovered" that the deposit is extremely large. Their sampling of the seabed in Onslow Bay, south of here, at depths of 50 to 130 feet, was financed by a National Science Foundation grant of $150,000.

Their work is not yet finished. On the basis of what they have done, the National Science Foundation made the announcement of vast deposits that led to interpretation by some that phosphate beds have just been found.

The researchers are not half through with their work. When it resumes, they will find data that will probably increase estimated extent of what has already been called the largest phosphate deposit in the world.

Phosphate is a major ingredient of fertilizer. Without it many peoples of the world would face starvation in future years. Having experienced the stranglehold that oil-producing nations have on us, it is gratifying to know that this country won't face the same problem some day with phosphate.

DIVINE TELEPHONE

When you put in a telephone call to God, do you make it station-to-station, or a party-to-party call?

Most people make it station-to-station. Their prayers are general; or if they deal with special petitions, they emphasize the getting of something and not spiritual union with the Most High. We bow our heads in the sanctuary and listen to the preacher as he leads the people in prayer. But how many of us really participate in this conversation?

Prayer is above all direct communication with God.

Try putting in a party-to-party call. You can even put in a collect call, and be sure that it will be accepted at the other end of the line. But whatever you do, make it personal.

"I want to put in a party-to-party call to the Most High God.... Your circuits are all busy? I don't believe it. My book says, 'Ask and you shall receive; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you.'" — Elisha Douglass

Uphold N.C. Right To Fund Abortions

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Supreme Court upheld the state's legal right Wednesday to fund voluntary abortions for the poor but barred counties from using tax monies to supplement abortion programs.

In upholding lower court rulings, the Supreme Court also ruled that a fetus has no constitutional claim to be a "legal person."

The rulings in a 1978 Wake County suit brought sharp statements of protest from right-to-life spokesmen.

"The state finds itself murdering for fun and profit," said the REV. Daniel Carr, a Raleigh opponent of abortion. "All abortions in the state with state funding are simply unwanted people because federal funds take care of the others."

The court's ruling applies to medically unnecessary abortions for the poor — those in which the mother's health is not endangered.

The state will reimburse up to $150 for abortions done in the first trimester of a pregnancy and up to $500 for abortions in the second trimester. According to statistics compiled by the state Department of Human Resources, the state paid out nearly $1.4 million for 6,343 abortions during fiscal 1979-80.

A few counties — including Wake, Mecklenburg and Guilford — have been supplementing those payments.

Paul Stam Jr., an Apex attorney and acting president of Wake County Right to Life, challenged the Wake County payments in his suit filed in 1978. He had argued that a fetus is a "person" and is therefore protected under the state Constitution.

June Milby of the Human Resources Department said qualified applicants for state-funded abortions during 1979-1980 included those who made less than $4,226

Court Reduces Death Sentence

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A death sentence imposed in Nash County on Stephen Karl Sihon has been reduced to per year for an individual or less than $8,126 per year for a family of four.

She said that of more than 6,000 who received state funds for medically unnecessary abortions in 1979-1980, 40 percent were 19 years or younger including four 10-year-olds, 13 12-year-olds, 41 13-year-olds and 120 14-year-olds.

State figures showed 92 percent were unmarried and 80 percent of the abortions were performed during the first trimester of pregnancy.

tion? "At least 27 of the 40." How many historians and editors would that put out of work? "About 90."

There is never a good time to kill a useful project. But this time is especially sad, since a whole new wave of technological aids had just arrived at the offices of major editions. Word-processors and computers were breaking the logjam in stalled editions like the Jefferson Papers, cutting the index and filing time by a half to three-quarters, promising a brand-new spurt in these materials of scholarship.

Well, President Reagan said it was going to hurt. Now that he has thrown James Madison off the welfare rolls, I suppose that means he has taken Madison off our back. The problem is that he has gone some way toward taking Madison out of our brain. It seems a funny way to make America great again.

Survey Jobs, Work Cuts In Transportation Dept.

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A legislative budget subcommittee has taken its first look at massive cuts in jobs and operations proposed for the state Department of Transportation, and some legislators didn't like what they saw.

"I think everybody in this room realizes we've got to have some more money for the roads," said Sen. Jim Garrison, D-Albemarle, as the cuts were presented to the joint base budget subcommittees on natural and economic resources Wednesday.

Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw listed 394 jobs that will be eliminated by this summer, and 2,657 more to be cut out over the next two years if legislators don't find more highway money.

Accompanying the cuts, state Department of Transportation officials warned, will be "significant and severe" cutbacks in construction and maintenance of highways.

"It seems to me we're wasting our time if we're not going to have any more money than is in this budget," said Rep. Vernon James, D-Elizabeth City.

Among the proposed cuts is a complete end to two ferry operations this July 1 — the Southport-Fort Fisher and Cherry Branch-Minesott Beach ferries.

Meanwhile, other budget-cutting subcommittees continued their review of state government spending.

The state Board of Education responded to calls by legislative leaders for it to propose a 6 percent cutback in education spending, saying it was unable to list school programs that can sustain that size of cut. Community college leaders also challenged the proposed cut, saying they could not meet a Friday deadline.

In the subcommittee on criminal justice, legislators marked for possible cuts the Correction Department's Inmate Grievance Commission.

State Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Statesville, suggested that the presence of the commission may encourage inmates to file grievances, and the panel scheduled further hearings on the grievance process.

In the Transportation Department, the first group of jobs are to be cut regardless of legislative action, and are in response to Gov. Jim Hunt's call for trimming more than 1,000 jobs throughout state government.

The second group of job reductions, to be made over the next two years, represent a more tentative proposal. They would come in the department's division of highways, and are to be applied if the General Assembly does not increase the state gasoline tax or take other action to increase money going to the highway program.

Because of projections for further decreases in state gasoline tax collections due to lower gasoline sales, and because of the end of state highway bond money, the proposed budget projects a $342 million decrease in construction money compared to the amount spent during the current two-year budget.

"The personnel reductions required by the present budget under consideration will in effect gut the division of highways," highway Administrator Billy Rose said.

In other legislative developments:

Taxes
Rep. John Jordan, D-Saxapahaw, filed a bill that would increase a state income tax exemption for persons 70 or older. Currently, a special $1,100 exemption is given to persons 65 or older, and Jordan's bill would raise the exemption to $10,000 for persons 70 or older.

The bill is estimated to reduce anticipated state revenues by $15 million a year. Jordan said his bill is co-sponsored by 59 other House members.

"We would be leaving $15 million in the hands of this age group, which needs it more than any other," Jordan said.

Marriage

The House gave tentative approval to a bill that would give a husband and wife joint control over income-producing property and the profits from the property.

North Carolina currently adheres to common law practice under which the husband is entitled to full control of the property and the profits although the property may be listed in the names of both the husband and wife.

Rep. H. Martin Lancaster, D-Goldsboro, estimated the measure would reduce anticipated state revenue by $2 million because it would put many people in a lower income tax bracket.

Accidents

The House also gave tentative approval to a bill that would require accidents that don't involve personal injury but involve at least $500 property damage be reported to law enforcement officials.

Current practice requires that accidents involving $200 property damage be reported.

Property Tax

The Senate Finance Committee also approved a bill that would repeal the local property tax charged to out-of-state firms who have purchased North Carolina goods but have not had the goods shipped from the manufacturer yet.

Testimony

A bill that would allow husbands and wives to testify against their spouse in a criminal trial was filed. Rep. Joe Hackney, one of the bill's sponsors, said the bill would not automatically require such testimony.

Regulations

Representatives of state veterinarians, physical therapists and water treatment facility operators appeared before the joint House-Senate

State Government Committee in a public hearing on proposed legislation regulating their professions.

All three groups criticized proposals to enlarge their regulatory boards by adding more public members.

Loans

Backers of two bills raising legal limits on interest rates for most types of consumer and small-business loans postponed Senate action, scheduled for Thursday, until next Tuesday.

One of the bills, raising rates on installment loans and second mortgages, has already won tentative approval after undergoing major changes.

ERA

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green commended the Senate members who agreed not to discuss, debate or vote on the Equal Rights Amendment in the state Senate during the 1981 or 1982 sessions of the General Assembly.

In a news release, Green said the move essentially delays possible ratification of the constitutional amendment in North Carolina until 1983. The national deadline is June 30, 1982.

"By electing or returning a majority of opponents of the Equal Rights Amendment to the North Carolina Senate, the voters of the state of North Carolina voted down the Equal Rights Amendment in November 1980," Green said. "The Senate leadership, and a majority of opponents and proponents of ERA, recognize this fact, and this decision frees the Senate to turn its attention to the $12 billion budget, and the many other issues of great importance to the citizens of the state."

Babysitting Classes Set

A one-day babysitting class will be held Monday, March 9 for sitters aged 11-15 who attend the Pitt County Schools.

For those who attend the Greenville City Schools, the class will be held Tuesday, March 10. Classes will meet from 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. and are being sponsored by the Pitt County 4-H and the Pitt County Home Economics Extension Office.

Participants should bring a bag lunch with a drink and 25 cents for craft material.

The course will cover such topics as characteristics and responsibilities of a good babysitter, responsibilities of the sitter's parents and the parent-employer, and personal safety measures. A booklet and certificate will be given to those attending.

The course will be taught by a Home Extension Agent with the cooperation of local law enforcement and fire and rescue departments.

Participants should pre-register by calling the 4-H office at 758-1196 or 752-2934, ext. 362.

Administration's Military Spending Has Support

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, finding support in Congress for its proposed $32.6 billion buildup in military spending through 1982, is promising to seek even more money for defense if it fails to tame inflation.

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, outlining a budget he said would make "a major start on meeting needs too long unmet," said Wednesday he would submit a supplemental request if prices of military hardware increase beyond the administration's estimates.

"We have to keep this program intact, absolutely," Weinberger told the Senate Armed Services Committee. Under questioning by Sen. John Warner, R-Va., Weinberger conceded the revised defense budget envisions lower inflation than the Carter administration's forecast, which he previously said was underestimated.

But he said it is "fair to assume a lower (inflation) rate" if President Reagan's proposed tax cut and domestic spending reductions are enacted.

The Reagan administration predicts inflation will drop steadily to 7.2 percent in 1982 and 4 percent in 1986 as the president's economic recovery program takes hold. It was 12.4 percent last year, and the Carter administration's last forecast was for 9.6 percent in 1982 and 6 percent in 1986.

"If what we hope does not come to pass and we are not able to reduce inflation and don't get the cuts we are seeking, then I will have to present you with a supplemental," Weinberger said.

Members of the committee generally welcomed the budget increase, which would pay for an expanded Navy, a new bomber, a new kind of nerve gas and substantial pay raises for military personnel.

"There is no doubt that increased resources are required," said Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, the committee chairman.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., the senior Democrat on the panel, told Weinberger, "I believe you will get your money this year," and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said the additional spending is "absolutely essential."

Tower indicated he wants the Pentagon's major budgets approved by Congress before there is any backlash about cuts in domestic programs.

"Our proposed increases would significantly and quickly strengthen our ability to respond to the Soviet threat at all levels of conflict and in all areas of the world vital to our national interest," Weinberger said.

He said it probably will be midsummer before the Pentagon decides on two key elements of the arms buildup: the choice of a long-range bomber to penetrate Soviet air defenses and whether to launch MX missiles from submarines or from hidden sites in the West.

The budget asks $2.5 billion for the bomber, designed to replace the aging B-52. Alternatives under study are a simplified version of the B-1, which the Carter administration abandoned; modification of existing F-111s; and the so-called "stealth" bomber designed to foil Soviet radar. The F-111s could be available soonest, but Weinberger said, "I don't think it is going to produce what we need."

The Reagan plan would nearly double the Carter administration's shipbuilding program, with an additional 15 Navy ships to be financed in 1982 as a start toward expanding the American fleet from 456 ships to 600.

Process Begun

The Pitt County Development Commission has begun the process of selecting a new executive director to replace Reese Hart, who resigned last month. Development Commission chairman Bruce Beasley Jr. said today.

Hart resigned February 9 to accept the position of director of marketing services for Peirson and Whitman, Inc., a Raleigh architect-engineering firm.

The selection committee, including Beasley, James Black and Delano Wilson, "has met to establish a basic job description, to review the many applicants and candidates we have had and to begin the selection process," Beasley said.

"We have had several very qualified people to apply and our main concern now is to follow a procedure as quickly and as smoothly as possible in order to announce a replacement for Hart at the earliest possible time."

Beasley noted that local interest in making sure the commission selects the most qualified professional possible, "has been very encouraging to me and to the committee. The continuation of the present program of the commission is of special importance to everyone in the county."

The next meeting of the Development Commission is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. March 18 in the commission office at 201 East Second St.

of the highest quality of patient care," commented Moore.

"The most important person in the structure of the health care environment is the patient," he added. "Those giving care to the patient must be dedicated to the principle of serving to alleviate pain and suffering of their fellow man."

Moore noted employment opportunities for graduates are good. "Our students are able to obtain employment in hospitals, doctor's offices and more recently, there is a developing interest in industrial radiology," he explained. "Future employment opportunities are excellent due to the shortage of X-ray technologists."

Students who wish to enter the Radiologic Technology program next September must be prepared to take a medical admissions test at PCC which will be administered June 18, 1981. After this date the fall class will be closed. Those interested should contact an admissions counselor at their earliest convenience, phone 756-3130, ext. 245 or 268.

Sharing Probe

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — District Attorney J. Randolph Riley said Wednesday his office will join the SBI in an investigation of the activities by former Wake County School Superintendent John Murphy.

Murphy resigned last month during a controversy over his use of county telephones and the awarding of county contracts to consultants for whom he worked.

The investigation will determine "whether there is sufficient basis to suppose ... criminal conduct was indicated," Riley said.

TAX BATTLE — Sue Long of Bellevue, Wash., faces a wall of cameramen in Washington after failing to get Internal Revenue Service computer tapes that agency officials say could be a roadmap for tax cheaters. (AP Laserphoto)

Govm't Hunts Another Judge To Protect Secrets Of IRS

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, turned down by one Supreme Court justice, is shopping for another one who will bar release of some secret statistics the Internal Revenue Service contends might destroy one of its most effective weapons against tax cheaters.

Lawyers for the Justice Department, rebuffed at every level of federal court including Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist on Tuesday, decided Wednesday to ask a second justice — or the full court — to enter the case.

At issue are 58 reels of computerized statistics drawn from audits of individual tax returns by the IRS from 1972 through 1975.

U.S. District Judge Walter T. McGovern of Seattle ordered the government to release the tapes to Susan and Philip Long of Bellevue, Wash., but enforcement of that order was delayed.

After Rehnquist ended the delay, Mrs. Long marched to the Washington offices of the Bureau of Economic Analysis on Wednesday, demanded the tapes and was refused.

"I'm sorry you won't follow the law," Mrs. Long told Robert Parker, a division chief at the bureau, which is a statistics-collecting part of the Commerce Department.

"I believe the appeals process is part of the law," Parker replied, saying he could not hand over the tapes until his lawyers exhausted their appeals.

Back in Seattle, the Longs' lawyer, Stephen Strong, accused the government of foot-dragging and won a "writ of assistance" from the clerk of the U.S. District Court. That directs marshals in the nation's capital to assist in enforcing the judge's order to hand over the material under the Freedom of Information Act.

In seeking to keep the tapes secret, the IRS contends the figures could be used by someone with expertise in statistics and mathematics to undermine the agency's audit procedures. That, in turn, could lead to gross tax cheating, IRS lawyers say.

Mrs. Long, now a fellow at Princeton University, says she needs the tapes for her research, for which she is trying to get a $134,000 grant from the Justice Department's own National Institute of Justice. Her husband has said he wants to use the tapes to publicize what he considers the IRS's under-handed tactics.

The miles of tapes with their millions of figures probably would be meaningless to the average taxpayer. But the statistics provide the basis for the auditing system that, according to the IRS, helps keep taxpayers honest. IRS randomly selects about 50,000 individual tax returns a year for an exhaustive audit. After those audits, the agency expects to end up with 50,000 returns that are accurate in every detail. By comparing the original returns with the corrected versions, IRS determines what entries are likely to produce errors or cheating on the other 93 million returns.

The IRS contends release of the tapes would allow a person to beat the system by switching deductions or income to different categories.

For example, a person who claimed too high a deduction for medical expenses might cheat by designating the money as a contribution.

The Longs, who have been trying to get the tapes for six years, were the target of an audit in 1969 but challenged IRS and won. That battle led to a dozen successful fights by the pair to gain public release of various IRS documents.

Women's Week Is Proclaimed

The week of March 8-14 has been designated as Women's History Week by Governor James Hunt.

In a recent proclamation, Hunt recognized the importance of public awareness of the contributions of women and its necessity in a total understanding of history. He said the great accomplishments of women in diverse cultures and societies need to be further emphasized, highlighted and stressed through educational programs and family living.

According to Hunt, the next decade presents a great challenge to both men and women to correct deletions, distortions and misrepresentations of women as history makers, and to encourage women to attain greater personal dignity and respect in fulfilling their roles in shaping the future of America. He said women in history is a theme to be celebrated and it is fitting and proper to commemorate women as economic, social and political partners of our state and nation.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Snow is expected in the forecast period until Friday morning from the Ohio Valley into the Northeast. Snow is also expected from northern Arizona to Montana. Mild weather is expected from the Plains to Florida and the Carolinas. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Weather forecasters say North Carolina may be in for a windy, chilly and sometimes violent evening.
A cold front moving into the region may be preceded by scattered thunderstorms.

some with hail and gusting winds, through tonight, the National Weather Service said.
Added to that is the threat of scattered snow flurries in the northern mountains tonight.
High temperatures Wednesday ranged from the upper 30s across the northern mountains, where the day began with sleet and light snow, to the low 60s in the southeast. Overnight temperatures were in the upper 30s in the west and the 50s nearer to the coast.

Judge Martin Removed By State's High Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Supreme Court removed a lower court judge from office Wednesday for allegedly seeking sexual favors from two women with cases in his court, rejecting the jurist's claims that his conduct was private and had no bearing on his role as a judge.

The court, in an order written by Chief Justice Joseph Branch, stripped District Court Judge Bill J. Martin of Hickory from office and barred him from holding any other judicial office in the state.

Martin, 49, was one of seven non-lawyer judges in the state. He had held the elective District Court office in Caldwell, Catawba and Burke counties since 1974, although the Supreme Court had censured him in 1978 for mishandling several cases.

In issuing the removal order, the court concurred with an earlier finding by the state Judicial Standards Commission in accepting the complaints of two women who said Martin made sexual advances to them while they had cases pending in his court.

The court found that Martin "attempted on several occasions, by innuendoes or directly, to obtain sexual favors from two female defendants" who, the court noted, were in a bad "bargaining position" because they had cases pending in Martin's court.

Martin also was censured for presiding over his own case involving a citation for a stop sign violation.

During hearings on the move to oust him, Martin had contended that the accusations by the women were private in nature and had no bearing on his position as a judge.

The court rejected that contention.

"We do not agree nor have we ever held that 'willful misconduct in office' is limited to the hours of the day when a judge is actually presiding over 'court,'" Branch wrote. "A judicial official's duty to conduct himself in a manner befitting his professional office does not end at the courthouse door."

In calling for Martin's removal, the Judicial Standards Commission concluded that that Martin met one of the women, Debbie Lail, at a Hickory parking lot at night and "attempted to force himself on her during this meeting by attempting to embrace and kiss her." Ms. Lail had appeared before Martin on charges of passing four bad checks.

The commission found in a second case that Martin approached a defendant being tried before him, Carol Birchfield, and went uninvited to her home and "made sexual advances toward her by attempting to fondle her breasts, and attempted to kiss her and pushed her down on a bed."

Martin's lawyers argued to the Judicial Standards Commission and later to the Supreme Court that Martin had not tried to kiss Ms. Lail but only wanted to force her to turn her head to listen to him. They said Martin went to Mrs. Birchfield's home to inquire about buying a dog.

"An independent review of the evidence ... leads us to agree with the findings and conclusions of the commission," the Supreme Court said.

The court also rejected Martin's contention that the move to oust him was based on a vendetta by attorneys who objected to him as a non-lawyer judge. North Carolina voters approved a proposal last year that now requires all new judges to be lawyers.

Martin had been suspended with pay from his $36,960-per-year job since December.

MILLION DOLLAR FALL — Joseph William Coyle, left, is escorted by an FBI agent at New York's Kennedy airport Wednesday after being arrested when he allegedly tried to board a Mexico-bound plane carrying more than $100,000 which officials said fell from an armored truck in Philadelphia last week. The FBI said a "substantial portion" of the missing $1.2 million which fell from a Purolator armored truck had been recovered in Philadelphia (AP Laserphoto)

Find Much Of Missing Cash

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The man who allegedly picked up $1.2 million that fell from an armored truck here last week has been arrested by FBI agents at a New York airport with $105,000 stuffed inside his socks, officials said.

Joseph John Coyle, 28, an unemployed Philadelphia longshoreman, was arrested Wednesday morning at Kennedy Airport as he was about to board a flight to Mexico, the FBI said.

Coyle was taken into custody along with Francisco Anthony Santos, 27, of Sicklerville, N.J., and both were charged with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for grand larceny, authorities said.

Meanwhile, Philadelphia police recovered an additional $611,000 of the missing cash, but $484,000 remained missing.

Acting on an anonymous tip, police recovered $381,000 Wednesday in a shopping bag in a patch of weeds behind a diner parking lot here, officials said.

Another $230,000 was returned Wednesday night by two acquaintances of Coyle's at the Police Administration Building, officials said.

The two men who returned the money, Thomas DiBruno, 30, and Michael DiCriscio, 34, both of south Philadelphia, were released after questioning, police said.

An extradition hearing for Coyle and Santos was scheduled Friday in New York, police said.

Municipal Court Judge Samuel M. Lehrer issued a warrant Tuesday charging Coyle with theft, receiving stolen property and conspiracy, investigators said.

The money, in two bank bags in a yellow cart, fell out of the unlatched rear door of a Purolator Armored Inc. truck last Thursday afternoon as the truck made its way from the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia to Purolator headquarters in south Philadelphia.

Witnesses said they saw a car stop near the bags. A man jumped out, loaded the bags into the car and drove away.

Police said John Behlau, 21, and John Pennock, 20, both of Philadelphia, have admitted they were riding in a car with Coyle when he allegedly picked up the money, and have been cooperating in the investigation.

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Senate committee outlined several major concerns Wednesday with a bill that would outlaw the possession and sale of drug-related accessories.

Gov. Jim Hunt and his crime commission have strongly supported the bill aimed at cracking down on North Carolina drug traffic.

But members of the Senate Law Enforcement and Crime Control Committee acknowledged there may be some serious constitutional questions about the bill proposed by committee chairman Sen. Joe Raynor, D-Fayetteville, and others.

The bill classifies as paraphernalia items that include scales and balances, dilu-tents such as quinine, separation gins and sifters, blenders, hypodermic syringes and a variety of pipes.

David Crump of the state Attorney General's office said hypodermic syringes are the only drug paraphernalia outlawed by present laws. He said a doctor's prescription is required to buy the syringes.

"Some of the language is shocking," Sen. William Creech, D-Raleigh, said. "I don't see how you could enforce it. There is quinine in almost every home today. And I would imagine most good cooks have something for sifting."

Crump said other factors would be considered in determining if the items are drug-related and covered by the proposed ban. Crump said factors used to determine intent include prior drug law convictions, proximity of the object to an illegal drug and descriptive material accompanying the object.

"I think this bill is as close to being constitutional as any," Sen. Robert Swain, D-Asheville, said. "I think it would be a question of sufficient evidence."

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Roanoke Rapids, questioned what kind of evidence would be needed to prove illegal intent.

"It seems to me you're in difficulty unless you can prove it has actually been used for an illegal substance," he said.

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Statesville, also suggested some stores be exempt from the paraphernalia ban. As an example, he cited farm supply stores that sell syringes for vaccinating animals.

Another area of the bill questioned by the panel was the section prohibiting advertising of drug paraphernalia.

Crump said a similar law in Ohio was ruled unconstitutional by a U.S. court of appeals. He said local advertising might be successfully prohibited, but said he doubted the legislators could legally restrict paraphernalia advertising in national magazines.

Crump said similar laws have been enacted in about 10 states, most recently in Virginia, and a number of cities and counties in North Carolina.

So far, only one appeals court and three district courts in other states have found the laws unconstitutional, Crump said. He predicted a challenge to the law eventually will go before the U.S. Supreme Court.

All the laws have been based on a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration model.

The governor, in his legislative package to fight crime, vowed to use the law to "put every 'head shop' in North Carolina out of business."

The Senate committee delayed any action on the bill until next month.

So-called head shops are stores dealing in marijuana pipes and other drug-related accessories.

Rep. Charles Evans, D-Nags Head, has introduced a similar bill in the House.

Infiltrated By Felines

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Feline infiltrators are raising havoc at the Norfolk Naval Air Rework Facility.

Navy officials have started a counterattack against stray cats they say have destroyed important documents, startled employees by jumping from under desks, and left their mark in other, unsavory ways.

After careful thought, Navy officials set 15 cat traps that operate like rabbit traps.

Although the traps worked, some facility employees began aiding and abetting the enemy. They put out food and water for the cats and liberated some of the trapped animals.

In an effort to get cats that are out of the bag back in, Frank Purdy, a safety and health official, has warned employees in a message that "more drastic action" will be taken if they don't stop helping the cats.

"I love cats," Purdy said in his message, "but the work site is not the place for them. This is causing unsafe and unhealthy conditions for both the employees and the cats."

Six to ten cats prowl the naval facility's offices and hangars, according to Sharon White, a spokeswoman for the huge complex at Norfolk Naval Air Station where about 4,200 workers renovate jet planes and missiles.

"We don't know for sure" where the cats are coming from, she said. Intelligence reports indicate that they may be from nearby Navy and civilian homes.

Some cats have been trapped and turned over to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, although Ms. White was unable to say how many

Schedule Classes In Diving, Sailing

ECU News Bureau
Classes in the popular water sports of scuba diving and sailing will be offered this spring at East Carolina University.

"Basic NAUI or PADI

Scuba Certification," an evening course for adult swimmers, is scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday evenings, March 31-April 23.

Each student must provide fins, mask, snorkel and weight belt, and other equipment can be rented during the course. Class instructor is ECU aquatic director Ray Scharf.

"Basic Sailing," a Thursday evening and Saturday class, will begin April 9. Classroom sessions will be used for instruction in terminology, knot-tying, docking, anchoring and safety.

Three weekend afternoons on 19-26 foot boats will be held on the Pamlico River. Students will have opportunities to practice with various sizes of sailboats.

Beatrice Chauncey of the ECU music faculty, experienced sailor and sailing instructor, will direct the course.

Further information about these and other evening and weekend classes is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, ECU, telephone 757-6143.

Art Work On Display

Art work in various media by Ann Davis of Raleigh, senior student in the East Carolina University School of Art, is on display in Mendenhall Student Center through March 8.

Her exhibition, which includes graphic designs, photographs, and batik and tie-dyed fabric works, is entitled "The Brass Ring."

Miss Davis is a candidate for the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in communication arts with a minor concentration in fabric design.

Upon graduation she plans to pursue a career in graphic design and advertising.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Davis of 5040 Kaplan Drive, Raleigh.

'Ill-Advised' To Ignore Cuts Request

By W.A. WERONKA JR.
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State House base budget committee chairman Al Adams, D-Raleigh, thinks the state Board of Education is "ill advised" in its decision Wednesday not to adhere to a legislative request to recommend possible cuts in the state's public education budget.

"I think they're ill advised," Adams said. "If they won't cut the money, we'll have to do it ourselves. I would hope they state Board of Education would give us the advantage of their expertise and advise."

The co-chairmen of the joint base budget subcommittee on Education sent a letter to the board on Feb. 27, requesting it identify 6 percent reductions in the 1981-83 operating budgets under its jurisdiction.

All base budgets subcommittees have been charged by the full base budget committees to identify 6 percent reductions in all operation budgets.

The subcommittee on Education has been discussing a list of options for cutting the Department of Public Education budget by about $85 million a year.

Instead, the board said it would draft a response to the committee, stating why it felt a board recommendation now is premature and how proposed cuts would affect the quality of education in the state.

But the board remained cautious, and suggested that the response say the board is willing to work with the committee, and even suggest cuts, should it become evident that they were absolutely necessary.

"We're willing to help," board member John Tart said. "But I think we should refrain at this time from making a decision too early. I don't want to agree to cutting $85 million."

"I'm going to be optimistic and say we're going to have enough money to fund the continuation budget, so let's let nature take its course," board member Evelyn Tyler of Greensboro said.

Primarily the board members suggested that the response make clear that it was only unwilling to make recommendations for cuts now because there are too many unknowns — such as if the cuts will be necessary will the full state revenue picture is clear, sometime in late spring. It was the consensus of the board that it could not make "an intelligent" response on cuts with the information available now.

The board set up a subcommittee to draft the response. It will be presented to the full board today for approval.

In other action a committee of the board gave tentative approval to a new formula for allocating state money to local school systems for school transportation.

The new formula, which state officials estimate could save the state about $5 million a year, is based on per pupil miles, the total number miles each student lives from the school. As cash value will be put on each per pupil mile. That will account for the largest sum of money allocated. The rest will be allocated on other conditions.

But each system will be given a flat sum three times a year for transportation, instead of the present system of upon request. Any additional money the school requests will require the approval of the board, which will investigate the need.

The full board is expected to give its approval to the measure today.

Pirates Drill ASU; Seek Regional Bid

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina University, denied the right to play in the NCAIAW championship game against N.C. State, took some of its frustration out on Appalachian State last night, rolling to a 103-40 victory over the Mountaineers in the consolation game of the state tournament.

Later in the evening, top-seeded N.C. State rolled to a 70-50 victory over North Carolina, an upset winner of the Pirates on Tuesday, to claim another title, its sixth in a row.

Early on, the game showed that there was no question as to the outcome, but the Lady Pirates seemed to have something to prove, not only to themselves, but to some others also.

At stake for the Pirates is an at-large bid to the Region II AIAW Tournament, which starts Tuesday. Winners in the Carolinas, Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia automatically get bids, while three at-large entries from the five-state area are added in.

"We knew that we had to win tonight, and win soundly," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "We're 23-6 right now, and no one else in North Carolina has anywhere near that good a record. We've been nationally ranked four weeks, and only State as done that. I think we deserve an at-large bid. Andruzzi added that East Carolina's upset loss to the Heels should not eliminate the Pirates from regional consideration. "Look, if N.C. State should upset North Carolina in the first round of the ACC tournament (in men's basketball), would North Carolina not get picked to the NCAA. Of course not. And we're in the same boat."

It will be Sunday night, however, before the Pirates do learn whether they get a berth in the tournament — or whether the season is over. "We're not going to try and get a bid to the Women's National Invitational Tournament," Andruzzi said.

"It would cost us $8,000 to go out there, and I think that we could put that money to better use somewhere else in our program."

The Lady Pirates left no doubts in the minds of the Appalachian players that they would dominate the game. In fact, it goes so bad for ASU that the Lady Mountaineers shot only 8.3 per cent in the second half, hitting just two of 24 shots against the stingy ECU defense.

"We played a good game," Andruzzi said. "I wasn't that pleased in the first half with our defense, but we did a tremendous job in the second half."

"I think it showed that we have a great deal of class, poise and want coming off the loss," she added. "We only beat ASU by 12 the last time we played them. They've been coming, but we played a tremendous defense game. I can't say enough for the effort in the second half."

"They really shouldn't have gotten 26 points in the first half, but we really did the job in the second."

Andruzzi said that following the loss to Carolina on Tuesday night, the team morale dipped to one of its lowest points of the year. "Our morale was dead. We hurt. There was just no talking today. They were real silent. So I can't say enough for this comeback they showed tonight."

Riley All-Tourney

CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina's Kathy Riley, who scored 62 points in two games, was the only Lady Pirate named to the five-member All-Tournament team at the NCAIAW championships, which ended last night.

N.C. State, which beat North Carolina, 70-50, for the title, landed three members on the team. They included Angie Armstrong, Trudi Lacey and Ginger Rouse. North Carolina's Henrietta Wells rounded out the team.

Lacey was named the most valuable player in the tournament.

Four members of the Pirate team were also named to the All-State team for the regular season, dominating that unit.

Riley was a unanimous choice, along with N.C. State's Lacey. Center Marcia Girven of the Pirates joined Kathy Crawford of North Carolina, and Barb Karuse of Duke in making up the first team.

The second team included Lydia Rountree and Laurie Sikes of East Carolina, along with Armstrong of N.C. State, April Shaffer of Carolina and Muriel Higginbotham of Appalachian State.

The all conference team was selected by a vote of the six Division coaches, while the all-tournament team was named by media covering the tournament.

Denkier's 13. Higginbotham led ASU with 16 points, while Carolyn Cameron had 11.

East Carolina shot 50.5 per cent for the game from the floor, while holding ASU to just 24.5 per cent.

For ASU, now 7-21, it was the second straight solid beating it received. N.C. State, also out to do some impressing — in case it lost in the finals — rolled to a 118-54 win over the Lady Apps on Tuesday in the semifinals.

Now, for East Carolina, it's a four-day wait. Is the season over, or do they play again?

Miller Returns To Scene Of His Golf Turnaround

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — A year ago Johnny Miller came into this tournament as a struggling also-ran.

He hadn't won in four long years and, he said, he was "sick and tired of answering questions about 'what's wrong with Johnny Miller?'"

He turned his career around with a victory in the event that was known as the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic. Gleason no longer is associated with the tournament.

And Miller no longer is a struggling also-ran.

He opened his defense of the title in the $300,000 American Motors-Inverrary Classic today as the hottest player in the game.

It's been a complete turnaround for the man who once held the No. 1 position in the game. Player of the Year in 1974 when he also set a money-winning record, U.S. Open champ in 1973, British Open champ in 1976. Then his game went into a mysterious decline. In 1978 he won only $17,000.

He improved in 1979 then made his first major step in the comeback here last year.

Now, he's won two tournaments already this season and leads the money-winners with $121,548 and leads in stroke average at 68.63.

"I don't think I'm all the way back yet," Miller said before teeing off in the first round over the 7,129-yard, par 72 Inverrary Golf Club course.

"I'm not sure I'll ever get all the way back to where I was in '74."

"I'm not even sure I want to."

"It's a terrible responsibility (being No. 1). People expect you to win every tournament. If you don't shoot 63 every round, they start asking what's wrong."

The change in his fortunes, however, has made golf "kind of fun again for the first time in a long while," Miller said and prompted him to expand his playing schedule for the year.

His chief opponent in the 144-man field chasing a $54,000 first prize was old nemesis Jack Nicklaus, a three-time winner on this golf course.

"It's time for me to start putting some numbers on the board," said Nicklaus, winner of the U.S. Open and PGA last year.

Some other major standouts include 1981 tournament winners Andy Bean, Hale Irwin and John Cook, along with Ray Floyd, Jerry Pate and Hubert Green.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be telecast nationally by CBS.

Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's baseball team opens the 1981 season Saturday, and Coach Ronald Vincent is hopeful that a Division I crown may lie ahead in the month of May.

The Rampants play host to Kinston at 2 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

"We've been coming along about at the right pace," Vincent said this week. "But we're concentrating on getting ready for the conference season, and are not going to put a lot of pressure on the kids early."

Vincent returns his entire pitching staff, but has to replace every other position except for catcher and shortstop. For the most part, those positions will be filled by newcomers.

Still, the coach is optimistic about the chances of the Rampants to win the Division I title and move into the State 4-A Playoffs.

"I think we've got as good a chance as anyone," Vincent said. He looks to Rocky Mount to be strong, as usual, along with Northeastern. "Fike could also be a surprise team," the coach warned. "But we have as many lettermen back as anyone, so I think we'll be all right."

So far, Vincent has been impressed with his team's hitting. "Right now it's way ahead of the pitching," he said. "I'd like to think it's because the hitting is that good, rather than our pitching being slow to come around, but I don't know. A lot of it may be because we're taking our time with the pitchers."

The mound staff, led by Roger Williams and Kenny Barnes, returns intact. Both won over a half-dozen games last year. Scott Galloway, who saw relief or starting action in nearly every game, also is back, along with Gordon Douglas, who comes up from the junior varsity.

"I haven't settled on any rotation yet, but all four of them are likely to see a lot of action," Vincent said. He does not expect any of his pitchers to go the distance for a while yet, however. "We're going to mix it up a lot during the early season."

Defensively, there have to be question marks, with only two regulars returning. However, Vincent feels, if the pitching is as good as it should be, the defense will be more than adequate.

"We're solid at the catching position with Emmett Walsh, who played there last year. That position should be one of our strong points this year. Then, Mark Douglas returns at shortstop, and we're looking for improved play from him. This will be his third year starting."

The rest of the infield will be taken over by newcomers. Billy Kittrell has looked strong at first base, while there are battles going on for second and third. Mont Carter and Tom Buie are fighting for the key-stone sack, while third base could see Crowell Pope, Gordon Douglas (when he's not pitching) or Buie at the position. Unless Buie moves to third, it's likely he and Carter will alternate at second, depending on the opposition pitching. Buie is a right-hander, and Carter, a lefty.

There are a number of candidates for the outfield positions, including a couple who saw a lot of action last year, Mitchell Brann and Paul MacMillian. Also up for positions there are Sammy Hodges, and Billy Dough along with Barnes and Williams, when they are not on mound duty.

Terry Smith will be giving backup duty both in the infield and outfield.

"In these early games, we want to execute fundamentals," Vincent said. "We want to get a real good look at our new people and see how they react. Most of them have a great deal of playing experience, but not on the high school level."

Overall, Vincent feels that the team has an excellent chance for a good year. "Our hitting is way ahead of where it was at the same time the last two or three years, and our pitching should start coming around soon, too. We have plenty of proven ability on the team."

But with only one bid available to the Division I teams this year, it all comes down to winning the championship. And Vincent firmly believes that Rose has that capability.

Ronnie Barnes Named Trainer For Giants

Ronnie Barnes, a graduate of East Carolina University, has been named as the head trainer of the New York Giants of the National Football League.

A native of Wilson, Barnes graduated from Fike High School, and was the first student to go through the East Carolina Sports Medicine Program under Sports Medicine Director Rod Crompton. He graduated from East Carolina in 1975.

After serving for two years as an assistant trainer at East Carolina, Barnes joined the staff of Michigan State University, serving as assistant trainer there for two years.

He was named assistant trainer for the Giants this past fall, and was elevated to the head position this week when the former head trainer retired.

Barnes had worked with the Giants for four years during preseason camp prior to the start of the Michigan State and East Carolina fall football drills before becoming a full-time staff member with the NFL team.

As head trainer, he will be in charge of the Giant medical staff, including three assistants, the team doctors and consultants.

Barnes is the first black to be elevated to the head position in the NFL.

Tar Heel Practice Draws Whole Squad

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
LANDOVER, Md. (AP)

North Carolina's 12th-ranked basketball team worked out for 45 minutes Wednesday in the Capital Centre in preparation for tonight's first-round game with North Carolina State in the Atlantic Coast Conference championship tournament.

Normally, such an event would not raise many eyebrows. But this particular practice session was special.

For the first time since mid-December, the entire Tar Heel basketball team appeared for a workout. As late as Tuesday, several members of the team had been forced to sit out practice because of various injuries.

Forward Al Wood re-injured his bruised knee in practice Monday, while guard Mike Pepper stepped on a basketball and sprained his ankle. They joined Pete Budko, Sam Perkins and James Worthy as members of Dean Smith's infirmity list.

But all hands were present and accounted for during the workout Wednesday. Worthy, who is recovering from a sprained back suffered in the Georgia Tech game one week ago, appeared to have no after-effects of the injury but it wasn't certain whether he would play in the 7 p.m. first-round game.

Budko suffered a sprained ankle in North Carolina's victory over Wake Forest in January. Although he returned to practice, he is expected to see limited action.

Smith said he was not worried about the mental preparation for the tournament.

But he said getting a healthy team ready to play was a problem.

"The physical preparation is no different, except I just wish there was some way we could have the same people we started Oct. 15th with," Smith said.

"It's become ridiculous."

Smith expressed concern about N.C. State's front line, based on their previous performances. In the regular season, North Carolina escaped with a pair of three-point victories.

"I think they have great rebounding strength," the Tar Heel coach said. "I think they are very quick, and I think they could win the tournament."

When told that he had never lost to the Wolfpack in tournament play, Smith replied, "I don't pay any attention to that. Each year is different."

The Wolfpack skipped a workout in Landover Wednesday.

In tonight's final game, Duke faces a Maryland team bent on avenging a loss in last year's tournament championship game. The Terrapins, ranked 20th nationally, also will be remembering a 55-34 loss they suffered in Durham this season when Tom Emma sank two free throws with just seconds remaining.

"It's just another game for us," first-year Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "Just another game against Maryland."

Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy, whose Deacons faced Clemson, also sent his team through a light workout Wednesday at the Centre. He also said some of his concern about the ACC tourney had diminished.

"Sure, I feel different about the tournament now," Tacy said. "It's still a great tournament, but not the greatest. I'd much rather be playing for the national title."

Paul (Tank) Younger, a Los Angeles Ram star at running back from 1949 to 1957, was a graduate of Grambling and was the first NFL player from a black school.

Annual ACC Bash Gets Going

By GORDON BEARD

AP Sports Writer

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) —

The luck of the draw gave North Carolina and Duke extra time to heal their injured players before playing first round games in the Atlantic Coast Conference Basketball Tournament tonight.

North Carolina, ranked No. 12 in the nation and seeded second in the 28th annual tournament, had to face North Carolina State in a 7 p.m. game with James Worthy, Sam Perkins and Pete Budko still battling physical ailments.

Duke, slated to take on 20th ranked Maryland at 9:30 p.m., was uncertain how effective

Mike Tissaw would be after being hurt in the last regular season game.

Another doubleheader, starting at 11 a.m., matched 11th-ranked Wake Forest against Clemson and fourth-ranked Virginia, the ACC's regular season champion, against Georgia Tech, 0-14 during the regular season.

Worthy, who averaged 14 points and seven rebounds a game and was second team member of the All-ACC team, injured his back last week and didn't play when the Tar Heels were upset by Duke in the regular season finale.

Perkins, North Carolina's freshman starter at center, sustained a bruised knee in the Duke game and Budko, a reserve center, practiced Monday for the first time since suffering a leg injury on Jan. 22.

North Carolina whipped State twice during the regular season, each time by three points, but Coach Bill Foster of Clemson said the Wolfpack could turn the table this time.

"Carolina is going to have its hands full," said Foster, whose team would face the winner should Clemson get past Wake Forest. "I wouldn't be surprised to see that one go the other way."

Duke, which beat Maryland in the championship game last year, had all the more reason to play its slowdown game with Tissaw limping on a sprained ankle.

"If Tissaw isn't able to play," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski, "I might start Allen Williams at center, or I could go with a three-guard offense."

"My ankle feels a little better," Tissaw said after working out at the Capital Centre Wednesday, "but it's still sore."

If Tissaw can't go at full speed, he'll be severely hampered in trying to guard Maryland's rugged Buck Williams. "Give Buck an inch," Tissaw said, "and he'll take a foot."

Duke compiled a 7-7 record while employing a racehorse style of play early in the season. After slowing the tempo, the Blue Devils went 8-4, losing two games by a Centre, in 1976, Virginia was combined total of three points. "We were consistent the whole second half of the year," Krzyzewski said. "Our defense has controlled the tempo, and we've had better shot selection. I just wish Tissaw was in better shape."

Coach Lefty Driesell of Maryland, who lashed out against his critics last week and then was blasted by senior forward Ernest Graham this week, said he thought the Terps were mentally prepared to make amends for a disappointing 18-8 season.

"But you never know," Driesell said. "Sometimes when you think the team's ready, they play bad. When you think they're not ready, they play great."

This was the second time for the tournament to be played at the Capital Centre, the only arena outside of North Carolina to host the affair. When it was last played at the Capital Centre, in 1976, Virginia was the upset winner after finishing sixth during the regular season.

Zimmer Can't Forget Those Boston Days

By WILL GRIMSLEY

AP Special Correspondent

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) —

While Don Zimmer sits in the dugout down here, spitting tobacco juice into an oil barrel and salivating over his revived Texas Rangers, he can't completely erase memories of Boston, where he was victim of a different kind of tea party.

"My daughter, Donna, still lives there," the rotund one-time Dodger says, "and she's always writing me about what's going on."

"She called the other night and said, 'Daddy, guess what? They announced your game here on Patriot's Day is already a sellout.'"

Zimmer smiled at the thought of it.

"Yeah, we go in on April 20." He paused to release a spurt of brown juice, then added, "It ought to be interesting."

The little round man is still bitter over the abrupt, insensitive manner he was fired last fall after four years as manager of the Red Sox, to be replaced by his old friend, Ralph Houk.

As was the case when he was a shortstop for the Dodgers, Cubs and old Senators — twice rallying from what could have been career-ending injuries — he bounced up and landed on his feet with the Rangers.

It is a rare challenge. The Rangers, loaded with talent, were favored to win the American League West last year. They floundered and wound up fourth, 20½ games behind Kansas City.

Derogatory rumors spread: It was a club lacking in pride. They were individualists who never played as a unit. They choked. No winning attitude.

"I hear all this stuff — not from baseball people but mainly disgruntled fans and sore-toe critics," Zimmer said. "I tell them, 'I don't want to hear it.'"

"I tell them, 'Wait and tell me about it in July.'"

Zimmer is not ready to predict the club will win the division or the pennant but he is certain they will be competitive and have a shot.

"In my seven years of managing I've never had a better pitching staff," he says. "In my last two training camps at Boston, I had eight pitchers and would have scrounge around for two more. Here we've got 20 and it's hard to reduce them to 10."

Jim Kern, the ace reliever of 1979, has fully recovered from a tenacious elbow injury. The Rangers have an intimidating corps in guys like Ferguson Jenkins, Jon Matlack, Doc Medich, Danny Darwin and Rick Honeycutt.

The team is solid in other areas with such reliables as Al Oliver, Mickey Rivers and Buddy Bell.

"I like the spirit here," Zimmer said. "We feel we've got something to prove."

The moon-faced ex-Dodger had something to prove in Boston also. And he felt he did, before receiving that unceremonious boot.

"I never knew why I got fired," he said. "It left a bad, bitter taste in my mouth. In my four years there, I won 415 games, twice finishing second, then third and last season, when we had so many injuries, fourth."

"They told me it was economics. With that small park (Fenway, 32,000 capacity) we averaged 2.2 million in attendance, home and away."

Zimmer said he felt it was Vice-President Buddy LeRoux who fired him and left it to General Manager Haywood Sullivan to perform the nasty job.

"I felt Sullivan and Mrs. (Tom) Yawkey were on my side but LeRoux wanted to make a change."

"For three years LeRoux, who lives in Winter Haven, Fla., kept telling me, 'Zim, let's sit down over dinner and talk about the team.' He kept promising to take me to a club over in St. Pete. I haven't seen that dinner yet."

"I think LeRoux is mostly responsible for the big offseason sweep — getting rid of Fred Lynn and Rick Burleson and maybe losing Carlton Fisk."

"I feel sorry for the Boston fans. The Red Sox will miss Burleson — a hell of a player. It's a shame to lose a great talent like Lynn. They draw people to the ballpark."

"Sully (Sullivan) — I like the man — will get all the heat. At least, the least LeRoux could do would be to share it."

Zimmer spat, a beautiful spray indeed.

Lady Bears Win First

BEAR GRASS — The Bear Grass girls got their softball season off to a roaring start with a 21-0 rout of Pantego yesterday.

The Lady Bears pushed over seven first-inning runs to put the game on ice. They added ten in the second inning and added four more in the fourth.

Deborah Gurganus led the Bear hitting with two, a triple and a three-run homer. Mary Rawls, Sherri Williams, Valerie Leggett and Lynn Whitehurst each added two hits. Jackie Jones had two hits to lead Pantego.

The Bears, now 1-0, host Belhaven on Friday.

Bears Open With 15-0 Romp

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass roared to a 15-0 baseball victory over Pantego in its opener on Tuesday, as three pitchers combined for a five-inning no-hitter.

Mark Taylor started the game on the mound, giving way in the third to Clay Gardner. William Roberson came on in the fourth to finish up. Taylor struck out four and walked none, while Gardner fanned two and walked none. Roberson had three strikeouts, and walked none.

The only Pantego player to reach base arrived in the fifth inning on an error as the Bears just missed a perfect game.

Meanwhile, the Bears were pounding two Pantego hurlers for 12 hits in the four innings.

they went to bat.

Five crossed in the first, for all the Bears needed. Bob Peele led off, reaching on an error. After stealing second, he scored when Roberson reached on another error. Roberson also stole up, scoring on Gardner's double. Ricky Harrison arrived on another error, which let Gardner score. After Jody Peaks walked, a two-base error on a ball hit by Greg Harrison scored two more runs, for a 5-0 lead.

Bear Grass added four in the third and six in the fourth to wrap it up.

Celts Win, 76ers Lose

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

It's been nine years since the National Basketball Association has had two teams with records as good as the Philadelphia 76ers and Boston Celtics have today.

Both teams are 54-15, a .783 percentage, the best since Los Angeles finished .841 and Milwaukee was .768 in 1972.

But after Boston beat Houston 108-101 on the road and the Chicago Bulls upset the 76ers 111-100 in Philadelphia Wednesday night, the moods of the two powerful teams were decidedly different.

"I'll have to sit down and figure out what went wrong," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "We looked quite dead. It didn't look like it was any fun to be out on the court. I guess I'll have to make changes in the lineup. I'll decide that after practice tomorrow."

"The Bulls came out and played a determined game, while we were flat and tentative," said Sixers forward Julius Erving. "And we let them run the show."

The Celtics, who won their second in a row on the road, were happy.

"When we went on this road trip, we felt that we had a good chance to win two of the three games. We now have a chance to win all three," Boston star Larry Bird said. "Philadelphia thought that they could widen their lead on us when we went on the road, but now we have pulled even and the pressure is on them."

"I don't think that Houston played as well as they can, but it is a tribute to our team when we can have a bad quarter or a half on the road and still win the game," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch.

Kings 111, Spurs 97
Kansas City passed Houston in their battle for a Western Conference playoff berth as Otis Birdsong scored 39 points to beat Midwest Division leader San Antonio. Portland is 36-33, Golden State 34-34, the Kings 34-36 and Houston 33-36 in the race for three playoff spots.

The victory was the first for the Kings in San Antonio in 10 games and snapped a four-game winning streak for the Spurs.

Birdsong had 20 points in the second period, when the whole San Antonio team scored just 14.

Bullets 115, Clippers 103
Greg Ballard scored 24 points and Elvin Hayes 19 to pace Washington to an important road victory over San Diego.

The triumph kept the Bullets 2½ games behind Chicago, the team they are chasing for an Eastern Conference playoff berth.

Mitch Kupchak had 18 points and 16 rebounds for Washington as he replaced injured center Wes Unseld, who missed the game because of knee problems.

Nuggets 123, Lakers 114
Alex English, David Thompson and Dan Issel combined for 86 points as Denver won its fourth game in a row.

The Nuggets shot under 40 percent for three quarters and still trailed 104-98 with nine minutes remaining, but they outscored the Lakers 25-10 the rest of the way as Ken Higgs contributed most of his nine assists in the waning minutes.

English scored 31 points, Thompson 28 and Issel 27 for Denver.

Suns 126, Cavaliers 106
Truck Robinson scored 20 points, including 10 in a crucial third-quarter spurt, to lead six Phoenix players in a double figures.

Cleveland led 71-70 midway through the third period before the Suns, with Robinson leading the way, outscored the Cavaliers 22-8 the rest of the quarter to take a 92-79 lead.

Sonics 105, Pacers 93
Vinnie Johnson scored 22 points and Seattle fought off two Indiana comebacks to snap a three-game losing streak.

The Sonics led 59-45 at halftime as the Pacers shot 33 percent from the field in the first half. Seattle built the margin to 17 points in the third quarter before Indiana whittled the lead to 78-71.

Then Seattle reeled off 10 points in a row early in the fourth quarter to take another 17-point lead, and Indiana cut the advantage to 94-86 before falling back again.

Warriors 107, Jazz 105
Bernard King's basket with seven seconds remaining gave Golden State its victory over Utah.

King scored nine points in the final 3½ minutes to finish as the Warriors' high scorer with 31. Adrian Dantley led Utah with 34 and Darrell Griffith added 29 for the Jazz.

The massive snowstorm that recently razed large parts of the country is headed our way.

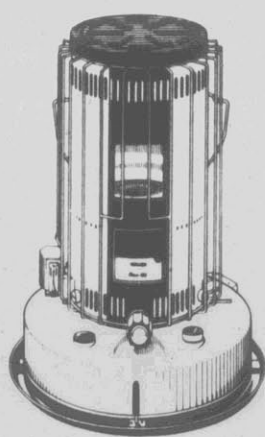

Temperatures will begin to plunge tonight, and by mid-afternoon we will begin to see a sprinkling of snow.

Heavy snow is expected to arrive late in the evening, and is expected continue through the night and into the following day. 10-12 inches is expected. The mayor warned that snow plows and other machinery may not be enough to effectively battle the storm. "We will do what we can, but our equipment is badly in need of repair."

A Cut Above The Rest

David Stockman is now one of the dominant names in the news. But six months ago Mr. Reagan barely knew the man he would appoint Budget Director. Stockman was in his second term as a Republican congressman, when he was chosen to help Mr. Reagan prepare for his debate with John Anderson. Stockman's intelligent approach during their debating sparring sessions impressed Mr. Reagan. Later he joked that he "lost every debate to Dave Stockman." Mr. Reagan is thought to have decided early in these sessions that Stockman was the right person to recast the federal budget. Since then, he has been a major force behind the President's economic proposals.

Schedule Conference In Children's Literature

ECU News Bureau
"Melting Pot or Not: Children's Literature in a Multi-Ethnic Society" is the theme of the 1981 East Carolina University Children's Literature Conference.

The April 10 conference, sponsored by the ECU Division of Continuing Education and Department of English in cooperation with the N.C. Humanities Committee, is designed for librarians, teachers and others who work in the field of children's reading.

A special feature of this year's conference is a Thursday, April 9, evening session especially for parents. The Thursday event is open to the public free of charge.

Featured speakers at the conference are Caroline Feller Bauer, internationally-known storyteller and author of "Handbook for Storytellers" as well as many stories in "Cricket" magazine, and author-illustrator Nathalie Babbitt whose "Kneeknock Rise" is an ALA Notable Book, a Newbery Honor Book and a Horn Book Honors List book.

The program will also include:

"Ezra Jack Keats: A View from the Melting Pot," Nancy Staley of the University of South Carolina-Aiken; "Breeches and Bathing Suits: Clothes and the Essential Self in Girls' Series Books," by Sarah Smedman of UNC-Charlotte; "From Pamlico to Parmele: Fifty

Court Urges Re-Write Insurance Law

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Surcharges aimed at recovering losses under North Carolina's mandatory vehicle liability insurance program are legal under existing law, the state Supreme Court ruled Wednesday. But the court also urged the Legislature to rewrite the law.

The ruling rejected a challenge to the surcharge by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, Gov. Jim Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten. They had contended that the surcharges levied by the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility constituted rates and, as such, should be subject to review by Ingram.

The facility, by law, provides liability insurance for drivers turned down by companies for normal coverage. However, the surcharges have been applied not only to drivers covered by the pool but also on all other drivers.

North Carolina's Court of Appeals had ruled last year that the surcharges essentially were "rates" and were subject to review.

Since March, drivers in North Carolina have paid more than $50 million in premium surcharges to allow companies making up the facility recover their losses.

Wednesday's ruling came in response to a plea by the state officials for an injunction halting the surcharges until a pending lawsuit is completed in Wake County Superior Court.

In the opinion, Justice J. Phil Carlton noted that the court had moved expeditiously on the matter because the Legislature was in session.

"No area of the law should be controlled by statutes which are so confusing and unwieldy that constant recourse to the judicial branch is inevitable," Carlton wrote.

"We hope that our Legislature, now in session, will resolve the issues before it in this area of the law expeditiously and express its intent in language which is crystal clear."

He called for a law which would protect the public interest but insure the "liquidity and solvency of participating insurance companies in our state who must also be assured of a reasonable profit."

In other opinions handed down Wednesday the court: — Ruled that the state legally could provide payments in medically unnecessary abortions for the poor, but said counties cannot use tax monies to supplement the abortion programs.

— Removed District Court Justice William Martin of Hickory from office after accepting complaints from two women that he had sought sexual favors from them. The women had cases pending in Martin's court.

— Set aside a death sentence for Stephen Karl Sihen, who was convicted in the stabbing death of Mary Jo Coates, 14, of Spring Hope. The court reduced the sentence to life in prison after ruling that jurors considered improper aggravating circumstances.

Bruce N. Fritz of Charlotte, chairman of the reinsurance facility's board of governors, said the court's decision on the surcharges was "extremely gratifying."

"It reaffirms the board's position that we have tried to abide by both the spirit and the letter of the law," Fritz said.

A spokesman for the attorney general's office said the court's opinion was under study.

Ingram, however, expressed pleasure that the court had considered the existing rate-making plan unclear. Ingram has given his endorsement to a bill pending in the Legislature that would amend that law by eliminating insurance surcharges on safe drivers.

The bill's sponsor, state Rep. Richard Barnes, D-Winston-Salem, explained the bill to the House Insurance Committee Wednesday. He also submitted minor changes in his original bill, which were approved tentatively by the committee.

Barnes said there are now 378,592 drivers with more than one point not in the facility. He said putting them in the facility would generate about $60 million a year for the facility. The facility is now losing about $30 million a year. The surcharges are to recoup those losses.

Under law the facility cannot operate at a profit or a loss.

Barnes said the bill would do away with the need for a surcharge and at the same time "free three million safe drivers in North Carolina from having to pay for the mistakes of the bad drivers."

The bill, Barnes said, would still allow insurance companies to cede safe drivers to the facility but would keep the companies from charging such drivers the facility surcharge.

The bill also would require that the surcharges be treated as rates, making them subject to the present 6 percent ceiling which expires July 1.

The committee took no action on the bill Wednesday.

OK Hazardous Waste Handling

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina and 15 other states were granted approval Wednesday by the Environmental Protection Agency to manage their own hazardous wastes.

The states are the first to receive such approval under a 1976 law requiring stringent monitoring of toxic chemical wastes.

Other states receiving EPA approval for their programs were Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Iowa, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Montana, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas, Utah and Vermont.

Mother's Milk Bank Reported Saving Baby's Lives

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP)
—The bank operates out of a basement freezer and charges no service fees. The deposits and withdrawals are all liquid assets.

Two Kansas City women have set up the Midwest's first breast milk bank, one of about a dozen nationwide. Its aim is to save young lives.

"I think a breast milk bank is just as important as a blood bank or an eye bank," says Linda Miller, who is expecting her third child and is one of the bank organizers. The local venture has a growing array of backers, including a doctor's wife who believes donated breast milk saved her adopted baby; a Springfield, Ill., woman who turned to Kansas City mothers for breast milk for an ailing infant, and several Kansas legislators who snickered about the idea three weeks ago.

The legislators dropped the levy Feb. 17 when a parade of witnesses told how new mothers feel when they cannot breast feed but their babies reject cow's milk and formula and how parents search in vain for breast milk for their adopted infants.

Such was the case of the doctor's wife, who watched anxiously in the summer of 1979 as her adopted 6-week-old daughter rejected normal infant fare, lost weight and grew weak.

"We felt time was running out," said the woman, who asked not to be identified to protect her daughter's privacy. "We were sure she was going to die. We felt we'd done everything we could."

Heading an allergist, the couple turned to a breast milk bank in New York, the closest they could find. In the year that followed, the couple spent nearly $2,000 to fly breast milk from banks in New York and Worcester, Mass.

When milk could not be obtained from New York, the baby's pediatrician appealed to nursing mothers he knew in the Kansas City area. Among them was Mrs. Miller, now 27.

A year later, Mrs. Miller met Denise Link, 24. The milk bank was started when the two began recruiting nursing mothers for donors.

They have plunged ahead despite the foggy legal ramifications of supplying milk to someone else's child. The legislators decided the state should not get involved in the licensing of breast milk banks. But they said the state Health Department could provide guidance to the two women without legal entanglement.

Dr. Michael Sheehan, a neonatologist at Children's Mercy Hospital, said he had some reservations about milk banks: "Donors must be rigidly screened for illnesses such as tuberculosis, venereal disease and hepatitis. And the milk must be carefully sterilized, frozen and stored."

The two women say they screen their candidates carefully. They reject some women — smokers, for example. "Smoke, even something like aspirin, can go through breast milk," Mrs. Link said.

GUEST SPEAKER

Clara Williams will be the guest speaker at Sunday services in the Winterville Pentecostal Holiness Church in celebration of Ladies Auxiliary Day. Services will begin at 11 a.m.

TV Time-Buyer Cuts 'Big 3' Programming

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter
NEW YORK (UPI) — Only the fact that Stanley Moger generates in the neighborhood of $78 million a year in revenues for the three commercial networks deters the three commercial networks from sticking pins into a wax dolly shaped like Stanley Moger.

Moger is one of the most successful advertising time-buyers in the nation, and what he does with one hand is offset somewhat by the other, which constantly is plucking tailfeathers out of the NBC peacock, poking a finger into the CBS eye and making ABC feel like XYZ.

"There are three kinds of people," Moger said. "The ones who make things happen, the ones who watch things happen and the ones who say, 'What the hell happened?'"

"I like to think I'm a member of the first group."

What Moger made happen was his own SFM Entertainment, Inc., Holiday Network — one that cuts deeply into the programming muscle of the ratings-obsessed Big 3. Their affiliates, more interested in the moneymine of the local marketplace, increasingly are turning to Moger's wares, pre-empting regular network shows to run such great films as "Ivanhoe," "A Prisoner of Zenda" and "The Big Fisherman" — and the Supreme Court says the networks can do nothing to quell the rebellion.

Independents, always in need of programming to compete with the network barrage of sitcoms and soap operas, clamor for Moger's Holiday Network and its predecessor, the Mobil Showcase Network — all of which proves the age of the American entrepreneur does not belong to history.

Moger's job is to purchase advertising space and television time for a host of clients who hire him to help them peddle their wares. He resurrected the old "Mickey Mouse Club" for television in a successful bid to hype sagging sales in the Walt Disney empire, and he specializes in the "total package" — press kits, posters, logo-printed items for advertisers to give away, and classroom guides designed to draw youngsters into the television audience.

But his personal passion is film, and when the chance came to add film to the array of services he already was providing for advertisers, he pounced like a hungry cat.

"You've got to have an enormous respect for film," he said. "I happen to love film. I love it. This has been a great dream to do something like this."

He did not set out to compete with ABC, CBS and NBC. The Nielsen ratings, and the effect they had on one of his best clients, took care of that.

"The Mobil Showcase Network was created because the three major networks would not tell Mobil when a particular program was going to run," he said. "They would move it at the last minute, vis a vis the competition, because they're crazy about the ratings."

He said the breaking point came after Mobil launched a media blitz to promote a program the corporation was sponsoring on one of the major networks. The blitz included day and time the program was to be run, but at the last minute, the network changed the signals.

"Twenty thousand posters went down the toilet because the network wanted to move it up a week and get it out of the ratings sweep," said Moger. "It was crazy. So Mobil had the courage to put money behind buying the program."

That was the beginning. Instead of dealing with the commercial networks to place Mobil advertising, Moger started taking Mobil-sponsored specials — offering half the available commercial time for sale to local advertisers — directly to independent and affiliate stations.

The stations loved it. So did other advertisers. So Moger decided to clone the concept. "The Holiday Network is a direct outgrowth of this whole philosophy of supplying and meeting the advertiser's need — to help the advertiser market his product the way the advertiser wants to market his product and not the way the network wants to schedule certain things," Moger said.

"We had a crying need from many of our advertisers for wholesome, all-family entertainment. Many advertisers won't buy 'Three's Company.' Many won't buy 'Soap.' They won't buy violence, sex or what have you."

Meanwhile, I knew great film classics were languishing in the vaults or running at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, so I started obtaining distribution rights.

Moger now buys film classics from every major distributor in the world, upgrades their quality, transfers them to 35-millimeter film, finds an underwriter to cover costs and offers the result to local stations, asking only the guarantee that they be run at a set time — network schedules notwithstanding.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Max Robinson, a competent, serious-minded journalist, is at a crossroad.

Max Robinson, journalist, has helped make ABC's "World News Tonight" a success. Max Robinson, concerned black American, has put a flowering career in jeopardy by publicly speaking his mind on issues that cut deep.

Robinson recently made the mistake of becoming news — a no-no in his business — by giving a college speech in which he discussed racism in our society and suggested that racial considerations have played a part in decision-making even at ABC News.

The next day, Robinson was called on the carpet by ABC News chief Roone Arledge, and an explanatory statement from Robinson was immediately drafted.

In that statement, Robinson softened his tone considerably, saying that his remarks were distorted and that he hadn't intended "to leave the impression that decisions at ABC News are based on racial considerations."

ABC's chariness over

Robinson's public speaking adventures is rooted in the nature of national TV journalism, an institution that relies less on credibility per se than on a journalist's acceptance by the public, his personal appeal. A certain credibility is implied in that relationship.

ABC knows that Robinson isn't about to go radical on the air — he just reads scripts on "World News Tonight." But what worries the network is how Robinson is perceived by network news viewers, whose attentions are daily becoming more valuable as the evening news competition intensifies in the post-Cronkite era.

An anchorman who raises uncomfortable questions becomes newsworthy himself in doing so. And that is the very antithesis of the "ideal" network news persona, institutionalized by Walter Cronkite.

The Smith College incident wasn't Robinson's first adventure in controversy; a few months ago, in Los Angeles, he told an audience that he didn't think the election of Ronald Reagan was necessarily good for black people.

That statement stirred a lot of conversations, but it was the suggestion of racism at ABC that brought Robinson's future into question. Arledge and others felt their anchorman was "throwing down the gauntlet to news management," as one staffer put it.

Robinson's conflicts come at a crucial moment, a time in which all three networks will be re-evaluating their nightly news programs. His own contract expires this spring.

Chastened but not cowed, Robinson insists he can do his job and fulfill what he regards to be his responsibility as a black American.

"I think it would be very dangerous for anyone in this society to suggest that anyone gives up his or her First Amendment rights no matter what his or her job may be," he says.

But he notes that "a great deal of care" must be used by a man of his station in dealing with a subject as race, saying that such dialogue "can be more vigorous within the company."

"We've been talking with each other in an atmosphere that has improved," Robinson says of his relations with the network since the Smith College controversy. Indeed, Robinson has been able to convince ABC of more in-depth coverage of a story deeply concerning the black community, the murders of black children in Atlanta.

"It's important for me to share my perspectives," Robinson says. "But my role is not to go out talking about issues at every turn."

"I'm in the business of covering news, not making it."

Five Wrecks Are Reported By Police

An estimated $4,850 damage resulted from a series of five traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 7:26 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Charles Streets, involving cars driven by Roya Shahid Shokoufan of Raleigh, and Teresa Ann Stokes of Route 3, Greenville.

Police, who charged Shokoufan with failing to stop for a stop light, estimated damage at $800 to the Shokoufan car and $900 to the Stokes vehicle.

A 4:55 p.m. collision at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and 14th Street involved cars operated by Judith Rose Dail of Winterville, and Latela Gray Barnes of Denton. Damage from the collision was set at $1,100 to the Dail car and $350 to the Barnes auto.

Cars driven by Patti Kay Malone of Route 2, Williamston; Patricia Grace Embler of Route 9, Greenville, and Roger Learmearte Adams of 400 Westhaven Rd. collided about 7:26 p.m. on Tenth Street, 84 feet west of the Cotanche Street intersection, causing $350 damage to the Malone car and $300 damage to the Embler vehicle. Investigators said no damage resulted to the Adams car.

A 3:40 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets involved cars driven by Martha Hope Bryan of 404 Clement Dorm, and Janice Delois Williams of 414B Tyson St.

Police reported damage from the mishap at $400 to the Bryan car and $150 to the Williams auto.

A 10:05 p.m. collision on Glendale Drive, 150 feet east of the Hooker Road intersection involved cars driven by Phyllis Heath Hodges of 202B Shiloh Dr. and Mary Daniels Byers of 1913A Kennedy Cir.

Officers estimated damage at $200 to the Hodges car and $300 to the Byers auto.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CUPIDITY IS CERTAINLY NOT A CLOSE FRIEND OF CUPID.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: X equals D

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 NT Pass 3 NT Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Five of ♠.

It is a natural instinct to win a trick when it is presented to you, especially if, by so doing, you have the chance to retain a potential second stopper in the suit. But before you do, study the position carefully.

The auction was routine. South had a minimum no trump, but no other bid should be considered. And although North had something in reserve for his jump to three, he did not have enough to contemplate slam.

West led the fourth-best of his longest and strongest suit, East played the queen and declarer won the king, bringing his total available tricks to seven. It was obvious that the club suit would have to be developed for the extra tricks declarer needed for his contract, so he ran the queen of clubs. East took the king and returned a diamond, and West scored four diamond tricks to defeat the contract one trick.

Bad luck, you say. After all, the contract hinged on the club finesse, a 50-50 shot. Not so! Declarer's line of play was something less than best.

Declarer was in too much of a hurry to win the first diamond trick. Consider what would happen if South allowed East to hold the first trick! East returns a diamond (no other return is better), and the contract would be safe whether East started with two or three diamonds. If East started with three diamonds, best defense is for West to let declarer hold the second diamond trick. When East gains the lead with the king of clubs, he continues another diamond, enabling the defenders to score two more diamond tricks. But that gives them only three diamond tricks and a club, and declarer has nine tricks.

As the cards lie, West can win the second diamond and return the suit to knock out declarer's stopper. But West has no entry to his two diamond winners, and declarer coasts home with ten tricks after losing the club finesse.

N.Y. Hamlet Notorious For Its Snow

By MIKE HENDRICKS
Associated Press Writer
BARNES CORNERS, N.Y. (AP) — It's the gusty blasts blowing off Lake Ontario, they say, that make this upstate New York hamlet one of the country's most snowed-on spots.

Notoriously snowy cities like Buffalo and Rochester can't hold a snow shovel in comparison. This winter alone, while Buffalo dug out from under 46 inches of snow, and Rochester shoveled through 79 inches, Barnes Corners received 170 inches.

In a typical winter, more than 250 inches of snow falls on Barnes Corners, much of it dumped during blinding blizzards stirred by winds from Lake Ontario, 20 miles to the west.

"Some people might think this is the worst place in the world, but I don't see it that way," said Kenneth Newton, who has lived through 67 winters in Barnes Corners. "I spent some time in New York City and I minded the cold and damp there more than I do 30 below zero here."

New York has had just over 10 inches of snow this winter.

"I've seen blizzards that lasted seven days and you couldn't see anything," Newton recalled. "We didn't go anywhere and we would probably have died if we did. We get a lot of snow, that's for sure. This is tough country."

Meteorologists say a few geographical quirks combine to produce the giant blizzards that so thoroughly bury the region around Barnes Corners.

Cold winds, filled with water vapor from Lake Ontario, rise as they blow over the warmer waters of the lake and lift even further when they hit the higher elevations of the 70-square-mile Tug Hill Plateau. And that's where the winds drop their load of snow on communities like Barnes Corners, Boonville and Sears Pond.

Livingston Lansing, who has been Boonville's weather observer for the National Weather Service for 32 years, says only a few uninhabited places in the Rocky Mountains and the Sierra Nevada get more snow than the communities of the Tug Hill Plateau.

While lifetime snowbelt residents like Newton and Lansing tolerate the weather, the abundant snowfall actually lured Matthew Macierowski from Connecticut. Macierowski, who calls himself a "snow lover," built his house here at the end of a 300-foot driveway.

"I take care of the driveway myself most of the time. My sons tell me, 'You love the snow, you do it,'" said Macierowski, who keeps records of local weather conditions as an official observer for the weather service.

Since coming to Barnes Corners eight years ago, Macierowski has enthusiastically documented such memorable blizzards as the 1975 storm that unloaded 54 inches of snow in 17 hours and left six-foot drifts in his front yard.

Macierowski, who said he was frustrated by the slush and freezing rains of Connecticut, explained his delight in the Barnes Corners winters: "What makes me happy is not the amount of snow so much, but the way it comes down. A foot of snow over 18 hours is not a hard snow here."

"What I like about the lake-effect snow is that you can get a foot of snow in three hours."

Macierowski loves to talk of the Winter of 1977-78, when the Lake Ontario winds dumped 369 inches of snow on Barnes Corners. Newton, however, said he remembers much worse winters during his childhood.

"We don't seem to have the storms the way we used to anymore," Newton said. "I remember my father opening the door to a wall of snow. He had to go upstairs and climb out a window to get out of the house."

"When I was a kid, the roads were hardly ever open during the winter. They didn't even try to plow the roads. In those days you didn't go anywhere, but we didn't mind it back then. Nowadays, with the big snowplows that the county has got, if they can just see, the snow is no problem for them."

The snowstorms begin in November and continue through April around the Tug Hill region.

"We keep plenty of groceries in the cupboard in case there is a storm and we get through it all right," said Newton. "If you're healthy, there is no problem."

During this year's unseasonable warm spell in late February, nearly 30 inches of snow melted from Macierowski's front yard, leaving just 20 inches covering the ground.

But Macierowski hasn't given up. There are a good six weeks of winter left hereabouts, he figures, and that should mean at least another 90 inches.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, MAR. 6, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to sit back and observe the progress you have made, and to make plans to have even greater progress in the days ahead. You have good opportunity to express your talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Analyze your position with friends and know which to retain and which to let go out of your life for best results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Conditions in the business world may appear strange now, but later can turn to your benefit. Be more self-assured.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't rush into a new interest before making a careful study. Take no risks with your reputation at this time.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Come to a better understanding with the one you love. A new contact can bring many benefits your way.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Resolve a problem you have with an associate and cement better relations with this person. Be wary of newcomers.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be sure to finish regular routines before engaging in amusements. An argument with a friend is not serious, so forget it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't try to be forceful with others, or you could regret it later. Don't neglect a worthy friend of long standing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure to keep promises made to family members. A new project needs more study before going ahead with it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be more objective in dealing with others and get better results. Use extreme caution in motion and avoid possible accident.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to save more money instead of spending more than you can afford. Show others you have wisdom.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A time to be calm and serene while going after a personal aim. Be sure to use your money wisely at all times today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Taking on a martyr complex will gain you nothing at this time. Quietly get things done in a sure and positive manner.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who has much ability in scientific matters, so send to right schools where your progeny can learn modern methods and gain good background for life's work. A most unusual profession could emerge here.

Crafts Show Is Planned For Festival

GRIFTON — A two-day crafts show will be held outdoors at the Grifton Shad Festival April 4-5. The show will be held outdoors on the east lawn of First Citizens Bank.

Crafters will be responsible for setting up their own area, including tables, sale and clean-up. A $10 fee will cover participation both days, and interested persons may write to Crafts, Grifton Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, N.C., 28530.

Those pre-registering should indicate which days they plan to exhibit and how much space is needed. There will be a limited space available at the Friendship Center (senior citizens) at the Grifton Civic Center, and persons wishing to display (no sales allowed) at that location may contact Mrs. Etta Harrell, Friendship Center director, at 524-5072, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Also at the Civic Center will be a two-day art show featuring a large mural created by the children in the town during art classes, as well as sculpture and other work created by both children and adults.

Persons wishing to exhibit art work should contact Mrs. Maxine Harker at Box 225, Grifton, or call 524-4681. Ribbons will be awarded for adult and high school work in several categories, including photography and sculpture.

The art show is co-sponsored by the Grassroots Arts program of the North Carolina Arts Council and the Grifton Shad Festival.

Revival Is Planned

BLACK JACK — Revival services will begin Monday, March 9, and continue through March 15 at the Black Jack Pentecostal F.W.B. Church, Rt. 3, Greenville.

Services will begin at 7:30 p.m. Guest minister for the services will be the Rev. J.T. Hammond, pastor of the Dublin Pentecostal F.W.B. Church. He is a graduate of Pembroke University, having recently received his masters degree. He is also a graduate of the Evangelical Theological Seminary in Goldsboro.

The Rev. Hammond has served as pastor of churches in Goldsboro, Turkey and Dublin, as well as being an instructor at Heritage Bible College, Dunn.

He is married to the former Donna Joyce Dixon of Rt. 3, Greenville.

The pastor, the Rev. R.M. Stewart and the congregation of Black Jack Pentecostal F.W.B. Church invites the public to attend these services.

Shad Meeting Was Held

GRIFTON — A planning meeting for the Grifton Shad Festival will be held at the Grifton Historical Museum March 9 at 8 p.m.

All interested persons are invited to attend. New Shad Festival brochures will be available for distribution and help is needed to get them quickly to area advertisers and others wanting them. Persons who can help distribute are asked to call Janet Haseley at 524-4356.

Most committee chairmen report all is going smoothly. Persons having questions, problems or needs are asked to call Mrs. Haseley, Shad Festival President Keith Newby at 524-4811, or attend Monday's meeting. Around one month remains before the annual festival, scheduled for April 1-5.

Registration Will Be Held

Falkland Elementary School will hold registration for kindergarten and first grade March 9 from 9 a.m.-noon.

Children who will be five years old on or before October 16 at midnight, or will be six years old at this time, need to be registered for school. Parents should bring the child's birth certificate and immunization records with them. For additional information, call 752-7820.

NOTICE OF RE-SALE OF LAND BY COMMISSIONER
NORTH CAROLINA
PITTS COUNTY

Under and by virtue of an order of resale by the Honorable Sandra Gaskins, Clerk of Superior Court of the County of North Carolina, dated February 26, 1981, made in that certain Special Proceeding pending in said court entitled JOSEPH HARVEY FARMER, JR. and wife, Donna Jones Warren, et al vs. Pitts-Greene Production Credit Association and The Federal Land Bank of Columbia, the same being File No. 80 SP 352, the undersigned Commissioner will on the 9th day of March, 1981, at 12:00 Noon, at the Courthouse door in Greenville, North Carolina, offer for resale to the highest bidder for cash at an opening bid of $89,300.00, those certain tracts or parcels of land lying and being in Pactolus Township, Pitts County, North Carolina, and more particularly described as follows:

Tract No. One: Lying and being on the western side of N.C.S.R. #1517 and being bounded by the north by the lands of Elizabeth W. Farmer, and the east by N.C.S.R. #1517 and on the south and west by the lands of the H.O. Warren Heirs, and containing 3 acres, more or less, and being the same tract of land as appears on survey by Joe M. Dresbach, R.L.S., and designated thereon as Tract 15, page 6 of the Pitts County Public Registry, reference to said map being made herein and incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein for a more full and accurate description thereof.

Tract No. Two: Lying and being on the western side of N.C.S.R. #1517 and being bounded now or formerly on the north by the lands of the H.O. Warren Heirs, on the east by N.C.S.R. #1517, on the south by the lands of James Whichard and on the west by the run of Grindale Creek, and containing 44.4 acres, more or less, and being the same tract or parcel of land as appears on survey by Joe M. Dresbach, R.L.S., and designated thereon as Tracts 6 and 1B as the same appears of record in Map Book 15, page 6 of the Pitts County Public Registry and being that same tract as shown as Tract No. 1 containing 44.4 acres, more or less, on Map of Division between E.E. and Frances Warren as the same appears attached to that deed appearing of record in Book R 47, page 314 of the Pitts County Public Registry, reference to both said maps being incorporated herein by reference for a more full and accurate description of said land.

The tracts of land above described will be sold subject to all 1980 Pitts County Ad Valorem Taxes and any outstanding drainage assessments now due and owing on said property. The successful bidder at said sale will be required to deposit a sum equal to ten (10%) percent of the first $1,000.00 of said successful bid and five (5%) percent of the excess of said successful bid pending confirmation of said sale by the Court. This the 20th day of February, 1981.

NOTICE OF SALE OF LAND UNDER DEED OF TRUST
FILE NO. 80 SP 449

IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION BEFORE THE CLERK
NORTH CAROLINA
PITTS COUNTY
IN RE: Foreclosure of Deed of Trust executed by F.L. Garner, Inc., dated July 19, 1979, and recorded in Book E 48, page 108, Pitts County Registry, by C.W. Everett, Jr., Substituted Trustee, by instrument recorded in Book O 49, page 546, Pitts County Registry.

Under and by virtue of the power and authority contained in that certain deed of trust dated July 19, 1979, executed by F.L. Garner, Inc., and duly recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds for Pitts County, North Carolina, in Book E 48, page 108, in which John A. Gray, Jr., was named Trustee (C.W. Everett, Jr., having been duly substituted as successor trustee by instrument recorded in Book O 49, page 546, Pitts County Registry), default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured, and pursuant to the demand of the owner and holder of the indebtedness, and secured thereby, and after notice and hearing and order authorizing foreclosure to proceed by the Clerk of Superior Court of Pitts County dated February 9, 1981, and done in accordance with Section 45-21.16 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, and the Power of Sale contained in the above described deed of trust, the undersigned Substituted Trustee will, at 12:00 Noon on March 11, 1981, at the front door of the Pitts County Courthouse, offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, at such public auction, that certain real property and the improvements located thereon described as lying and being in Pitts County, North Carolina, and more particularly described as follows:

Being all of Lot No. Three (3) in Block "N" of the Club Pines Subdivision, Section V, as shown on map prepared by Rivers & Associates, Inc. (C.E. dated April 2, 1978, and recorded in Map Book 26, Page 156 and 156A, Pitts County Registry). The improvements on said property are included in the sale. Said sale will be made subject to all ad valorem taxes and any outstanding governmental assessments, building restrictions and easements of record.

The last and highest bidder at the sale will be required to make a cash deposit of ten percent (10%) of the first one thousand dollars of the bid price and five percent (5%) of the balance of the bid price at said sale. This the 23rd day of February, 1981.
