Saudi Importance Underscored By Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The controversial decision by the Reagan administration to sell F-15 fighter-plane equipment to Saudi Arabia underlines the growing importance of that nation to U.S. interests in the world's key oil-producing region.

It also points up the United States' precarious balancing act in pursuing its two chief foreign-policy aims in the Middle East: protecting Israel and ensuring U.S. access to the region's vast oil riches.

There are indications that the Saudis are growing increasingly impatient with that balancing act, a development that could force the new administration into making decisions it would like to avoid.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. will travel to Saudi Arabia next month. The trip also will take him to Egypt, Israel and Jordan, but its chief focus will be on Saudi Arabia.

In Friday's announcement, the administration sought to portray its decision to sell the F-15 equipment to Saudi Arabia as a move to counter a deterioration of U.S. security interests in the region vis-a-vis the Soviet Union.

But that was only part of the reason. More important was that the Saudis virtually demanded the equipment as a test of their relationship with the United States.

The equipment — extra-large fuel tanks and air-to-air missiles for as many as 62 F-15 aircraft — has the effect of helping transform the jet fighters from defensive to offensive weapons.

The administration was caught between what had the earmarks of a Saudi ultimatum and the opposition of Israel, which fears the jets might someday be used against them.

Mindful of Israel's concerns and influence, the Carter administration had previously refused to sell the equipment to the Saudis. Some members of Congress already have announced they will challenge Reagan's decision, but he is likely to prevail.

Had Reagan refused the equipment, there were suggestions that the Saudis might reevaluate their ties to this country, a suggestion fraught with anxiety for the new administration.

It would not be difficult to make a case that there is at the moment no other nation in the world whose good will is more important to the United States.

Saudi Arabia is the most important of the major oil-producing nations in the Middle East. It also is one of the very few where the United States has any influence at all. Libya and Iraq are aligned with the Soviets; Iran is both anti-American and anti-Soviet.

Two other key producers of the region, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, generally follow Saudi policy.

Saudi Arabia currently produces more than 10 million barrels of oil a day, more than 40 percent of the total from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

It is also the one oil-producing nation that could easily afford to cut back its production, a position that gives it considerable leverage over the economies of the industrialized West and Japan.

North-Of-The-Border Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When President Reagan crosses the border Tuesday for a two-day state visit to Canada, he will be the first American president to do so in 10 years.

The trip symbolizes Reagan's top foreign policy goal of establishing closer relations with America's northern neighbor which an aide says are "basically in good shape."

Reagan went to Camp David for the weekend to pore over briefing books and draft the speech he will deliver to a joint session of the House of Commons and Senate on Parliament Hill in Ottawa.

Reagan, who will be accompanied by his wife, Nancy, views the journey as a "get acquainted" visit with Canada's Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, whom he will be meeting for the first time.

The Reagans, on their third visit to Camp David since he became president, took along their personal friends Charles Wick and his wife, Wick, the co-chairman of Reagan's inaugural committee, has been nominated director of the International Communication Agency.

Soon after his election, Reagan set out to establish warmer ties with the United States' two neighbors on the North American continent.

He apparently succeeded in establishing a personal friendship with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo last January when the two leaders met on the Texas border shortly before Reagan took office. They will meet again on the California-Mexico border in late April.

Reagan, the conservative Republican, and the more internationally-minded Trudeau, leader of the Liberal Party, will have a private talk and participate in a number of ceremonial events together, including a formal welcome and a state dinner.

At his news conference Friday, Reagan said while he does not expect any major new agreements to emerge as a result of his dialogue with Trudeau, he hopes to lay the groundwork for future negotiations on some problems dividing the two countries.

At the same time, an aide told reporters at a background briefing the agreements concluded with the United States during the Carter administration on the Alaska pipeline and the fisheries pact will not be reversed.

Even before making the trip, Reagan passed the word to New England senators that he did not want the stalled Canadian-U.S. fishing treaty to remain in "diplomatic limbo."

"I want to see a settlement of this whole issue," he said.

However, he indicated he felt there would be extensive negotiation before the fishing treaty could be ratified. In a letter to Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he asked the panel to separate fishing rights from a proposed maritime boundary treaty with Canada.

UNC Budget Cuts Would Hurt ECU

East Carolina University Vice-chancellor for Business Affairs Cliff Moore said Friday that he has no idea what effect a proposed six percent cut in the University of North Carolina budget would have on the school, other than, "hurt."

Moore's comments came in response to questions about a legislative staff recommendation that the University of North Carolina's 1981-1983 budget be trimmed by six percent. ECU is a member of the 16 campus UNC system.

"I haven't seen anything on it," Moore emphasized. "Whatever has taken place has been between Friday (UNC system Pres. William Friday) and the Legislature."

However, Moore added that such a cut in appropriations, "would hurt."

Earlier proposals, as recommended by the governor, the business affairs official said, will, "cut 16 positions," from the ECU staff, and $200,000 from the budget. He noted, however that none of those 16 positions involve faculty slots.

Hunt's job reduction plan has trimmed almost 200 positions from the UNC system, saving some $7 million.

Moore said, too, that he had no idea what will become of the school's request for its number one capital project, an $18 million classroom building, or funding for the second phase of the Wright Auditorium renovation project.

Friday told a joint House-Senate base budget committee Thursday that, "You would hobble our ability to attract quality graduate students...cripple this institution...close down programs," if the proposals are approved.

The suggestions — which could save as much as $70 million — are options recommended by the legislative staff, and now being considered by committees of the General Assembly. A six percent reduction would total some $66.1 million over the two-year budget period.

The governor and the Advisory Budget Commission have recommended a budget — $537.3 million in 1981-1982 and $570.6 million in 1982-1983 — that would continue UNC programs.

The staff's recommendations include abolishing the state's Agricultural Extension Service, hiking student-faculty ratios, increasing tuition, and doing away with tuition breaks given out-of-state students gifted in such areas as athletics and the performing arts.

According to the legislative staff, cutting the Agricultural Extension Service would save more than $15 million each year, while increasing tuition by one percent could save $600,000 a year. A 15 percent hike in tuition would save $9.1 million a year, the report indicated.

The staff report suggested that $6.2 million a year could be saved if the system's student-faculty ratio were increased by one student, a move that could eliminate 230 faculty positions.

If the ratio were increased by two students, 758 positions could be cut, with a resulting savings of $21.4 million each year.

If tuition advantages granted to talented out-of-state students were eliminated, $2.9 million a year could be saved, the staff report indicated, while an increase of 25 percent in graduate student tuition could save $1.3 million a year.

Tuition for undergraduates and graduate students is now the same, and UNC's proposed budget already includes a 10 percent tuition increase projected to bring in an additional $6 million.

Friday told the joint committee that the proposals are of such magnitude that, "if they are implemented, clearly the quality of the university would be severely damaged."

Ferry System Must Cut Back

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina's ferry system must cut back its service, double its fares, and borrow $1 million to keep its budget balanced through June, Highway Administrator Billy Rose says.

Rose told a legislative committee Friday even with those changes, the budget proposed for 1981-83 falls $2.8 million below expected costs.

He warned the Transportation Department would recommend eliminating runs across the Cape Fear and Neuse rivers unless more money was appropriated.

Rose's dire predictions set the stage for what could be an important week for the ferries. On Friday the Transportation Board will decide whether to implement the cutbacks starting April 15.

Until then, coastal legislators and members of the state's $2.1 billion travel industry will be lobbying to keep the ferry service afloat. The intensity of their efforts will peak during a General Assembly breakfast Wednesday sponsored by the North Carolina Travel Council.

The cutbacks could especially hurt Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, whose district includes the Southport-Fort Fisher ferry across the Cape Fear.

'Minor Things' Wrong With City Building

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Bob Wray, Director of Engineering for the N.C. Department of Insurance, said late Friday that a letter would be sent in, "the five o'clock mail," to Greenville officials outlining the results of an inspection of the city-owned building at the intersection of Fourth and Greene Streets.

Wray said city spokesmen, last week, were correct when they said a request had been made in writing for an inspection of the building, and noted that department employees checked the structure last Tuesday.

Earlier in the day, Wray told "The Daily Reflector" that as far as he could determine, there had been no written request for an inspection of the facility and said in light of that, apparently no official inspection had taken place.

The Insurance Department official explained that a formal request, dated February 26, had been found Friday afternoon.

"The upshot of it," Wray explained, "is that two of our men...two of our senior building engineers were in Greenville," for a seminar on March 4. "Someone called the deputy commissioner (of Insurance) the day before," about inspecting the facility. "He told one of the men to look at the building," while he was in Greenville.

He continued by saying the letter to Ron Sewell, director of engineering and inspections for the city, lists, "just minor things to be added," as far as the general construction inspection is concerned.

"The only things I can see here," Wray explained, "...it's desirable to add smoke detectors, exit signs, a fire alarm system that can be heard throughout the building, and battery powered emergency lights, because the building is used at night."

Wray said the building, "technically violates the building code," but described the violations as, "very minor...certainly not major."

The question of the state inspection arose last week after Alton Warren, the city's chief building official, claimed he was suspended after he complained that he was being forced by his department head (Sewell) to violate state building codes in occupying the Greene Street building.

Warren said a letter from Sewell notifying him of the suspension said that Warren had been derelict in his duties and the suspension was for failure to perform his duties.

The building official said an inspection of the facility by building inspector Dennis Tripp, accompanied by fire marshal Jerry McLawhorn, turned up 14 building code violations.

Lower Releases At Fuel Plant

ERWIN, Tenn. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, citing past accidents that have worried this small Tennessee town, has proposed cutting by three-fourths the radioactive emission limits of the country's only producer of nuclear submarine fuel.

The NRC wants the new limits to take effect at the end of this year, but Nuclear Fuel Services Inc., wants to wait until the end of 1982.

The move comes as U.S. Navy officials, seeking a larger nuclear fleet, are considering building a fuel plant in South Carolina.

The enriched uranium plant, producing nuclear submarine fuel in this isolated Appalachian town since 1957.

Convicted Of Five Killings

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Billy Hardesty, convicted of killing five people, including his parents, in a 1978 shooting spree, is being held in a psychiatric center while corrections officials determine whether he will face a life in prison or will undergo treatment.

Hardesty, 23, of Van Buren Township, was convicted Friday by a Washtenaw County Circuit Court jury of called the jury's decision "proper."

Hardesty was returned to the state Center for Forensic Psychiatry near Ypsilanti, where he has been held since his arrest.

Judge Ross W. Campbell set sentencing for April 3. While Hardesty could be sent to prison, it will be up to the state Department of Corrections to determine how much psychiatric treatment he needs and where the treatment should be given.

Police estimated he pumped at least 50 bullets into his victims. The body of his father, Ronald, was found by authorities buried under a pile of meat in a freezer on the Hardestys' back porch.

The night before killing his mother, Jan, "while she was doing the dishes," Asked to explain his actions, Hardesty said he was "bloodthirsty."

While on the stand, Hardesty also acknowledged "killing some people" in California. Campbell warned such statements could be used against him, but Hardesty went on to describe how he stabbed Willie Dunn, 35, of Indio, 50 times as Dunn stepped from a bathtub. Hardesty has been accused by California authorities of the Dunn slaying.

Brown is paralyzed. Baker was shot 14 times.

Hardesty, who took the stand in his own defense, testified he shot his father because, "I was tired of him calling me queer."

He said he killed his mother, Jan, "while she was doing the dishes." Asked to explain his actions, Hardesty said he was "bloodthirsty."

Campbell warned such statements could be used against him, but Hardesty went on to describe how he stabbed Willie Dunn, 35, of Indio, 50 times as Dunn stepped from a bathtub. Outside the courtroom after the verdict, Hardesty's attorney, Don Ferris, said he expected the conviction.

Central Purchasing

The City of Greenville implemented a centralized purchasing system for all departments last week. Under this system, one office will procure all of the supplies, materials, equipment, and apparatus necessary to operate the city government.

Centralized purchasing will result in substantial cost savings, city officials said. This savings will be realized by purchasing supplies and materials in bulk, and by purchasing through the state contract system. Centralized purchasing will allow the city to develop uniform standards of procurement, reduce the amount of time required in getting supplies and materials, and provide the opportunity for departments to plan their purchasing requirements.

Greenville's purchasing office was established in October under the direction of the Budget and Management officer. It is located at 1500 Beatty Street at the Public Works Department, and is staffed by two employees who were transferred from within the city organization. Leavy Brock serves as purchasing agent.

Ban Whale Trade

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — An international conference Saturday banned trade in products made from three endangered species of whales, but the embargo will have limited effect on hunting by the world's biggest whalers.

In a vote of 37-2, the delegates outlawed sales of sperm, fin and sei whale products among the 67 countries that have signed the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Flora and Fauna.

Japan and the Soviet Union, the world's two principal whaling nations, threatened to object formally to the vote, but the ban does not prevent them from hunting the whales for domestic use.

A West German conservationist said the pressure of world opinion could make the two whaling nations reconsider.

"The massive vote in favor of the ban is the most forceful statement on whaling by the international community since the 1972 Stockholm conference on the environment," said Petra Deimer, president of the West German Society for the Protection of Marine Mammals.

"This is a great day for whales," she said.

West German delegates argued that products from endangered species of whales — fertilizer, margarine, cosmetics, lubricating oil and mink food — were easily replaceable by substitutes.

The West German delegation pushed the whale trade ban through the 10-day conference, ending Sunday.

WARD SECRETARIES IRISTEEN AWARD

Ward Secretaries Graduate At PCC

Graduation exercises for Hospital Ward Secretary students at Pitt Community College were held Thursday night in the auditorium of Pitt Memorial Hospital, according to a PCC representative.

A new student award was inaugurated during the ceremonies and was presented to June Whaley of Winterville by students Patricia Pittman and Ellen Silverthorne.

This award, known as the "Iristeen Award", is given for clinical excellence and general interest in people. It was established by the previous group of graduates of the Ward Secretaries Program. Iristeen Atkinson, a native of Greenville, and a ward secretary student, was killed in an automobile accident just a week after graduation last year. Iristeen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert R. Atkinson, attended the ceremonies and were so recognized during the presentation.

The fall class of 19 students set a record — 100 percent graduated. The present graduating class is the sixth of ward secretaries graduated from PCC.

The program began in the fall of 1978 and has previously graduated 62 students. Eighty percent of these graduates have been employed by PCMH. The remaining 20 percent were either employed out of Pitt County, returned to school or chose other employment. Of the 80 percent at PCMH, 75 percent are currently employed.

The speaker for the graduation exercises was Gail Cherry, manager of Medical Records at PCMH. Ms. Cherry told the graduates they were now PCC graduates and that the letters PCC-G could be translated into a description of their careers.

She stated, "The letter 'p' — stands for the word pride, to arrive at this day of graduation should make you proud of your achievement.

The first 'c' shows that you have challenged yourself in your study to complete this important step in your life. The second 'c' means that you care for others, especially the patients you will serve in the future. The letter 'g' emphasizes your work connection of obeying the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Ms. Cherry concluded, "The important key to your job success is the tie that binds your working day, cooperating with the physicians and the nurses so that the three of you can successfully work together for the well being of the patient. You, as ward secretaries, must perform in an excellent manner to see that the patient is well served."

Angela Buck, ward secretary instructor, complimented PCMH for allowing PCC to use its clinical facilities for training ward secretaries. She noted that in the past the hospital has generously supplied materials for instructional needs. Ms. Buck also gave special thanks to the hospital for supplying the auditorium for graduation exercises.

June Whaley, who is also president of the class, gave the welcome and Betty Leroux was pianist. The Benediction was given by Rev. Ralph Messick.

Honored guests for the exercises were Edgar Boyd, dean of students; Joe Downing, assistant of curriculum programs; Dr. Ed Bright, dean of instruction and Judith Kuykendall, director of nursing.

The following graduates received certificates: Melba Alexander, Donna Moore, Dorothy Streeter, Donna Tripp and Judy Whitehurst, all of Greenville; Cynthia Cannon, Oak City; Patricia Hardee of Grimesland; Patricia Reighn, Mareton, N.J.; Marina Cox and June Whaley, both of Winterville

Car Seen In Area; 20th Body Found

ATLANTA (UPI) — A musician who admits he is now afraid for his own life said Saturday he saw a suspicious car in the area where firemen found the body Friday of 13-year-old Curtis Walker, latest victim of Atlanta's child killer.

The body was discovered in South River just southeast of downtown Atlanta by firemen who happened to be driving across a bridge and saw it floating in the water.

About 600 volunteers conducted a further search of the area Saturday, looking for the last of 21 missing Atlanta black children. The other 20 have all been found slain.

"I work late. I was coming home at 3:50 a.m. (Friday)," the musician said. "There was a car out there. He was on the wrong side of the road. That's what struck me. His headlights were out but he cut them back on."

The musician said he could not make out who was in the car.

The witness, who was questioned by police Saturday, said after he drove across the bridge, the car took off.

He described the vehicle as an early model Chevrolet, a description that tallies with an earlier report of a car that was seen near the spot where the body of another victim was found last month.

The musician talked with a UPI reporter, but asked that his name not be used. "He (the slayer) is killing children now. I don't want to be the first adult he's starting on."

Searchers Saturday split into nine groups to search the area where Walker's body was discovered. Walker, like 10 other of the victims, died of asphyxiation, officials said.

The only child still unaccounted for on the list of a special task force that has been set up to investigate the baffling string of crimes is 10-year-old Darron Glass, who disappeared last September.

Walker dropped from sight Feb. 19, when he disobeyed his mother and left their northwest Atlanta housing project apartment and went to a gunshop looking for work. An eagerness to earn money has been a characteristic of many of the victims and an employee at the gunshop said Walker would have been particularly vulnerable.

"Curtis was such an eager kid, he might have gone out or gotten in a car with anybody who said he could make a few bucks," the gunshop employee said.

Officials said Walker's body was not "badly decomposed," but refused to speculate on how long he had been in the water.

Nor would they say whether Walker was clothed. Investigators believe it is significant that in some cases articles of clothing have been removed from the bodies, but they have refused to elaborate on their theories.

This weekend's search was the 21st such volunteer effort and Eddie Dodson, counselor of United Youth Adult Conference, said "we intend to continue our weekend searches until we either find the remains (of Darron Glass) or until we find the killer or killers."

Another black youth, 15-year-old Joseph Bell, has also been reported missing but police have not turned his name over to the task force because they believe he is a runaway.

The string of disappearances and slayings date back 19 months, but the pace has quickened in recent months. Since the first of the year four children have vanished, or one about every two weeks.

Walker's body was discovered only a quarter of a mile from the Chapel Hill Harvester Church, whose pastor, the Rev. Earl Paulk, ran an advertisement in local newspapers in early February urging the killer to surrender.

Paulk said he had received numerous calls since then, and feels two of the contacts may have a bearing on the case. He said one of the callers apparently was a white man and the other black.

The minister said after Walker's body was discovered near his church he received a call from a man who sounded like the previous white caller.

"It's hard for me to believe that this was an accident," said Paulk. "I think we may have surfaced the man.

'Off The Cuff'

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — South Carolina's chief industrial recruiter Saturday softened claims he had made earlier that his state was swamping North Carolina in the competition for new businesses.

Bob Leak had told the South Carolina State Development Board Wednesday that the Tar Heel state's claims of prowess were hot air.

"We are beating the hell out of them, to be perfectly honest," he said at the time.

"There is a governor there who is running for president on an economic development platform," he also said, alluding to Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.

But in a telephone interview Saturday with UPI from his Columbia, S.C., home, Leak said his remarks were "totally off the cuff, pep-talk type stuff in the spirit of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tourney. It should not have been made public."

Asked if he believes South Carolina is beating North Carolina, he replied "I'd say on a per-capita basis, perhaps."

Leak also backpeddled slightly on his claims of the state's ability to draw industry.

Referring to a claim that North Carolina has attracted $8 billion in industry during the Hunt administration, Leak said Wednesday "We have brought in $7 billion during that time, and we have half the industry to draw on and half the people North Carolina has."

Clay Kirkman Says . . .

Spring is almost here and I know all gardeners are anxious to get outside. As the days turn warmer and longer, your lawns and gardens will be bursting with spring color.

This is also the busiest season of the year for the gardener. There is much to be done to keep your home looking beautiful. When the daffodils and other spring flowering bulbs begin to fade, fertilize them with a complete fertilizer such as 8-8-8. Do this at the rate of 1/2 cup per square yard of planted area. Clip off the faded flowers, but do not cut back the foliage. Let it die back naturally, since the foliage is needed to ensure blooms next year.

March is also a good time to fertilize just about everything in your yard. Use a complete fertilizer for your lawn, such as 8-8-8 at the rate of 20 lbs. per 1000 square feet of lawn area. To ensure even distribution, be sure to use a spreader. Large shrubs need about 1 tablespoon of fertilizer for each foot in height of the plant. Smaller shrubs may only need 1 or 2 teaspoons.

This is a good time to clean up your houseplants. Repot any overcrowded plants or ones where the roots are protruding through the drainage holes. Cut back leggy plants such as geraniums or wandering jews and root the cuttings. Wash any dust or insecticide off the plants by sponging them off with soapy water. You may want to take some of your houseplants outside during the day and bring them in at night.

Let Belk Tyler Garden Shops be your spring gardening headquarters. We now have a good selection of summer bulbs, potting soil, fertilizer and all your spring gardening needs.

Must Find The Best For Schools

There is little to go on in assessing the city board of education's decision not to renew Sup't Glenn Cox's contract.

Board Chairman Nancy Middleton said simply the board desired to seek new leadership and the position of superintendent would be open on July 1.

She expressed the board's appreciation to Cox for 14 years of service.

Cox, himself, understandably disagreed with the decision but acknowledged that it was "within the board's prerogative."

Certainly Cox, like all public school administrators, has had to bring the city school system through some difficult times over the past 14 years. He deserves the thanks of the community for the job he has done.

We can assume the board means it when the members say they are searching for new leadership, and the search over the next few months should be thorough.

In the years ahead the city schools are going to face declining enrollments, less funding from all sources, and physical facilities which will be steadily aging. In addition the prospect of merging the city and county schools, while dim now, very well may prove necessary if either system is to continue to do an adequate job.

It puts a very heavy burden on the search committee, which will be accepting applications until April 15, to find a new superintendent who will do an exceptional job in planning the course of the city schools, perhaps for the rest of this century.

If anyone thought the Charles Darwin theory of evolution was settled in 1925 following the Scopes trial in Tennessee, he only has to read about the new wave of "creationism" which is seeking to force the teaching of divine creation in the schools of a number of states.

There is plenty of room in our society for anyone to study and believe whatever he wants about the development of man. It is well to remember that science has never been able to fully explain the impetus for the life giving forces which operate on our planet. It has only attempted to chronicle how life occurred.

Even if there are faults in the Darwin theory of evolution, we can only arrive at the true facts by continued scientific study and thought.

Figures Are Real People

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Government statistics are so deceiving. Not the numbers themselves, but the impact.

The figures are remote, and the bigger they are, the less they mean to the average person.

Suppose you know of one baby born to an ignorant girl-child down the street who isn't married, hasn't finished high school, can't get a decent job, and didn't want the baby in the first place.

The immediate impulse is to be worried about that particular case.

During 1979, young girls (under 18) gave birth to 11,237 babies. More than half (6,036) were born out of wedlock.

And that despite the fact that more than $9 million is being spent each year for family planning services to welfare and low-income people in North Carolina.

This sounds like a lot of money and it is, but when you realize that today almost one of five babies are born out of wedlock across the state... we are not making an adequate effort to see that unwanted children are not conceived in the first place", says Dr. Sarah T. Morrow, secretary of human resources.

What does the record show is happening to these babies? Health hazards, malnutrition, neglect and abuse... and more candidates for welfare in the future.

Despite the high figures on births and dollars spent to prevent such births, Dr. Morrow has this to say: "I feel that the number of teenagers becoming pregnant and having babies would even be greater today (without funds) that give minors the right to receive family planning services."

THE INSIDE REPORT

A Coalition Of Hostility?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The hope that computer technology will save the Democratic Party, as claimed by newly-elected National Chairman Charles T. Manatt, looked forlorn Feb. 26 when Manatt, suddenly confronted by what has ravaged his party the past decade, blinked.

Major Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., leader of the black caucus, threatened a black walkout from the Democratic National Committee meeting unless his demands were met. That continued a decade of "mau-mauing" by black Democrats claiming "racism." But something new was added: what appeared to be anti-semitic overtones weakening the flimsy bonds holding the Democratic coalition together.

When Manatt did not tell Hatcher to go ahead and walk, he perpetuated his party as a loose confederation of mutually-hostile caucuses of blacks, women, Jews, Hispanics and others. Computers were cited by Manatt in his successful campaign for chairman as the answer to Republican superiority in fund-raising and campaign organization. But what ails the Democrats cannot be cured by computers.

What ails the Democrats stems from the quota system started in 1972. Democratic politicians now regard themselves as caucus members first, party members second. So divided,

Other Editors Say Where Does It End?

(Winston-Salem Sentinel)

Private colleges and universities are struggling with tough financial problems. On the one hand, inflation continues to drive up costs; on the other, the declining student-age population holds down enrollment.

Their plight was described in somber terms for North Carolina legislators by Terry Sanford, the former governor who is now president of Duke University. Unless the state helps relieve the pressure by increasing the amount of aid, some institutions may be forced to close, he warned.

The situation is real, whether or not so severe as Sanford depicted. Private higher education, like everyone else, faces hard challenges to manage resources wisely and cut corners to survive. The question for Tar Heel citizens, and those in the legislature who represent them, is the degree of state responsibility to come to the rescue of private colleges and universities.

North Carolina has been generous in lending a hand to private higher education. Over the past decade, the grants for Tar Heels enrolled on private campuses has tripled. Budget proposals awaiting action of the legislature provide further increases. There are no comparable subsidies to a private area which have fared so well.

Like the rain from heaven, the state aid falls alike on all institutions...the well-managed and the poorly-managed share on the same basis. No strings of accountability are tied to the money, to give the state or taxpayers assurance that it is actually needed by the specific institution or really put to sound use.

Perhaps that is as it should be. The state adopted the aid policy on the ground that preserving the dual, public-private system of higher education is in the best interests of all concerned. The policy deserves closer scrutiny as the amount of aid increases, thereby creating competition with other state needs in putting together the total budget.

Some private colleges are being forced to raise tuition beyond the reach of students, Sanford said. The tuition difference between private and public campuses, he added, is a disadvantage difficult to overcome. "I think it would be a tragedy if we let most of the private colleges dwindle away. The difference in tuition is the only problem the private colleges face", he said.

It would be an equal tragedy if the private institutions came to depend so heavily upon public subsidy that they lost some of the independence which is their greatest asset. It would be foolhardy if state aid continued to shore up colleges of doubtful academic quality and inept management which ought to change or close.

Club Is For The Women

By MAGGIE BROWN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It all started when two female executives found it increasingly difficult — and irritating — to find a first-class restaurant to entertain male clients without the maitre d' handing menu, wine list and check to the man.

What resulted is a private club designed with the professional woman in mind, and patterned after the all-male enclaves, a place where the "old girls" network can take root and grow.

Claiming to be the first private club for professional women in the nation, the Wilshire Club plans to open its doors first in Los Angeles this summer, then spread across the country to New York City, Houston, Seattle, Chicago and Atlanta, said founders Jennifer Armstrong, 27, and her mother, Joan McCarthy, 47.

"For centuries," said Ms. Armstrong, "the successful man has conducted business and spent his leisure time at 'the club' — an exclusive environment where his every need is met, professionally, socially, personally."

Now, she said, successful women will have their own posh club to rival the established Bohemian, California or Cosmos clubs; their own place to entertain clients, make business contacts and take advantage of educational opportunities — all the prerequisites offered by the male-only facilities.

For a $1,500 annual fee, club members can use a French continental restaurant, patio garden restaurant, cocktail lounge with live entertainment, conference and banquet rooms, Harmony For Small Business?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — Small business has finally got its act together here, said Milton Stewart as he prepared to leave the U.S. Small Business Administration. "All groups are talking to one another."

Critics say it's about time. The small-business portion of output has steadily diminished in relation to large enterprises, and to many Americans the word business has an automatic "big" before it.

Stewart sees an end to the trend. Times have changed; small business can help resolve today's problems, he said as he left for Boston to become editor of Inc., a growing, enterprising magazine for small business. He also becomes an officer of the company that publishes it.

"You must look at small business because it's where the innovation is," he said, claiming "small business is four to 24 times more cost effective than big business."

He was warning to the subject. "If you want to look at jobs you have to look at small business," he declared, producing a study that showed businesses of fewer than 50 workers produced 56 percent of jobs in the years 1969-1976. That trend continues, he said. He was sure of it.

He was emphatic. He was sure also that small business was more appreciated than it had been in years. "People all over town are beginning to realize that the expansion of small business is critical to solutions," he said, by now sounding almost evangelistic.

If indeed there is a new appreciation of small enterprise — an often vague term that generally means companies of 500 or fewer workers — it didn't simply evolve. Various organizations have long preached the message, but too often the result was discordance.

The organizations — the National Small Business Association, the Federation of Independent Business, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce among them — stepped up their legislative efforts in recent years, keeping scorecards on congressmen — and then remembering at election time.

Success encouraged cooperation, and when President Carter convened a White House Conference on Small Business in January 1980, the advocates had learned the advantages of cooperation. They pressed their demands, and when they returned home they pressed their legislators.

Now, said Stewart, who has spent most of his adult years in some aspect of small business, five major pieces of legislation have been enacted, all in a few months between last summer and last November.

The Regulatory Flexibility Act assures small business that it will be treated differently from large business. Before the act, a regulation that might affect a large company only slightly might put a smaller enterprise out of business. The act reduces that possibility.

The Equal Access to Justice Act recognizes the distinction between big business, which often can afford to defend against costly government litigation, and small business, which sometimes had to knuckle under if it couldn't afford to defend itself, no matter how just its cause.

A patent act allows small businesses and universities to work on government projects without having to give up rights to discoveries they make in doing so. An incentive act changes the securities laws to make it easier for small businesses to raise money. And a small business development act helps small businesses improve liquidity.

Stewart, a lawyer, aided the cause as the SBA's Chief Counsel for Advocacy, a delicate position for such a relentless, dedicated, driving person, one that easily could have put him in conflict with other administration executives because of his right to prod their agencies.

He knew, however, that support was growing behind him. National, state and local small-business groups have grown more active and convincing. And they aren't likely to relax now that they've begun winning a few.

"They've gotten raw meat," said Stewart. "Now they want the rest of the program." Triumphant he declared the decade of the 1980s "the decade of the entrepreneur, the decade of small business."

Strength For Today

REALITY OF THE INVISIBLE

In the physical world we have a striking illustration of the reality of the invisible as it works through certain natural forces.

We cannot see the power of gravity, but we acknowledge it in every physical movement we make. We cannot see electricity; indeed, with all of our modern scientific knowledge we are not yet sure exactly what electricity is. Yet we light our homes with it, talk over the telephone by means of it, and utilize it to operate our television sets.

Why then, when we use unseen physical powers every day do we doubt the existence of unseen spiritual powers? Many people cannot believe that there is a destiny toward which the whole creation is being moved by the strong hand of God. They cannot see that above the darkness of this world is the glory of a kingdom of power and light.

Physical forces await the response of men's ingenuity; spiritual forces await the response of their faith. — Elisha Douglass

Republicans Gain Ground

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Nationwide Gallup surveys reveal that the public is placing new confidence in the Republican Party.

1. Twice as many voters currently name the Republican as the Democratic Party as better able to deal with the nation's top problems — the widest margin the GOP has held over its rival party in national surveys conducted over the past 36 years.

Currently, 39 percent say the GOP is better able to handle the nation's top problems compared to 20 percent who name the Democrats. (Three in four voters now name the high cost of living as the most important problem facing the nation, with unemployment (8 percent) and energy problems (5 percent) named next most often.)

2. The number of voters who classify themselves as Republicans has increased during recent months, and in the latest surveys, 27 percent identify themselves as Republicans. This is the highest level recorded since 1972 and six percentage points above the figure recorded one year ago. Nonetheless, a substantially higher percentage of the electorate, 42 percent, continues to claim allegiance to the Democratic Party and 31 percent say they are political independents.

While recent surveys offer encouragement for the Republicans, these trends do not seem to reflect any major shift towards the conservative viewpoint. The proportion of Americans who place themselves to the right-of-center on a nine-point liberal-conservative scale varies little from that found in earlier surveys.

Can Gains Be Sustained?

The question arises as to whether recent gains for the GOP — in terms of public confidence in the ability of the party to handle the nation's top problems and in terms of party affiliation — can be sustained in the months ahead or whether they are merely a temporary manifestation of the public's goodwill at the start of the Reagan presidency.

In the period immediately following Dwight Eisenhower's landslide victory in the 1952 presidential election, sharp increases were noted, both in confidence in the Republican Party and in GOP party affiliation. In subsequent months, however, this dissipated.

This question was asked:

"What do you think is the most important problem facing this country today?"

Here are the national findings:

Most Important Problem

Inflation; high cost of living	73%
Unemployment; recession; depression	8
Energy problems	5
Defense; war	3
Crime	2
Dissatisfaction with government	2
Moral decline	2
International, foreign affairs	2
Miscellaneous	6
Don't know	3
	106*

*Total adds to more than 100 percent due to multiple responses.

All persons who named a problem were then asked this question:

"Which party — the Republican or the Democratic — do you think is better able to deal with the problem you just mentioned?"

Here are the national results:

Party Better Able To Handle Most Important Problem	Republican	Democratic	No difference	No opinion
Party Better Able To Handle Most Important Problem	39%	20	30	11

This question is asked to measure political party affiliation: "In politics, as of today, do you consider yourself a Republican, Democrat or independent?"

Following is the trend in political party affiliation since January 1980:

Party Affiliation

Republicans Democrats Independents

	Nov. 1980 (post-election)-Feb. 1981	27%	42%	31%
July-Oct. 1980	25	48	27
April-June	23	47	30
January-March	21	47	32

Note: Totals exclude those who do not classify themselves as belonging to one of the three categories.

Finally, this question was asked:

"People who are conservative in their political views are referred to as being right-of-center and people who are liberal in their political views are referred to as being left-of-center. (Survey respondents were handed a card listing eight categories.) Which one of these categories best describes your OWN political position?"

Here is the recent trend, based on those choosing a category:

Public's Political Philosophy

	1976	1980	1981
Right-of-center	31%	32%	34%
Middle-of-road	45	49	47

The latest findings on which political party can better handle the most important national problem are based on in-person interviews with 1,609 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period Jan. 30-Feb. 2. The question on political philosophy was asked most recently in a similar survey of 1,589 adults, conducted Feb. 13-16.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

The findings on political party affiliation are based on over 9,000 in-person interviews from six national surveys conducted between Nov. 7, 1980, and Feb. 16, 1981. For a sample of this size, the possible sampling error would be between one and two percentage points.

As I Recall It N.C. Prison 'Inspection' By Rhode Islanders

By Noel Yancey

"Dungeons of Hell." That's the expression of a Providence, R.I., attorney used to describe the North Carolina prison system in his battle to persuade Rhode Island Gov. John Notte not to return two escapees to a North Carolina prison.

Noote ordered the Rhode Island attorney general to investigate the Tar Heel prisons after John A. Powell and James Hammond asserted that they were chained, beaten and denied medical treatment before they fled the Jackson County prison unit near Sylva.

Instead of telling Notte to mind his own business, Gov. Terry Sanford said he would welcome an investigation. So, in early January, 1962, William Grande, attorney for the escapees, Rhode Island Assistant Attorney General Thomas O'Halloran and State Police Capt. Arthur Newton embarked on their probe.

The highlight of their first day was a tour of the Ivy Bluff Prison in Caswell County, the "little Alcatraz," where North Carolina then confined its toughest inmates. The visit was marred by verbal clashes among the Rhode Islanders after O'Halloran took Grande to task for violating the ground rules which North Carolina Prisons Director George Randall had laid down.

Randall had told his visitors that to avoid any possibility of touching off a disturbance or riot among the potentially dangerous inmates, he wanted the visitors to tour the prison first without talking to the prisoners. Then, he said, they could send for any inmate with whom they wished to talk.

But Monroe Toews, a Providence TV reporter who came equipped with a tape recorder, began to question the inmates in their cells as the group passed. Grande dashed over to listen to the exchanges.

Although Randall ignored this violation of his rule, O'Halloran shouted to the group, "Let's go."

"Are you conducting this tour right now?" Grande shouted back. "Are you trying to muzzle me?" Later when O'Halloran told Grande he had violated an agreement the visitors had made with Randall, the attorney replied, "You're not telling me what to do. I'm not gullible."

Back at the prison office, Randall and Grande clashed when the attorney announced that instead of going to western North Carolina to inspect the minimum security Jackson County unit where the escapees had said they were mistreated, he was going east to have a look at Odom prison, another high security unit in Northampton County.

As a matter of fact, said Grande, "I'm not interested in Jackson or Ashe" — another prison unit where Hammond had once served time.

"I wish you'd go up there," said Randall. "Your clients were raising hell about their treatment up there."

Grande said the escapees had not complained about treatment at

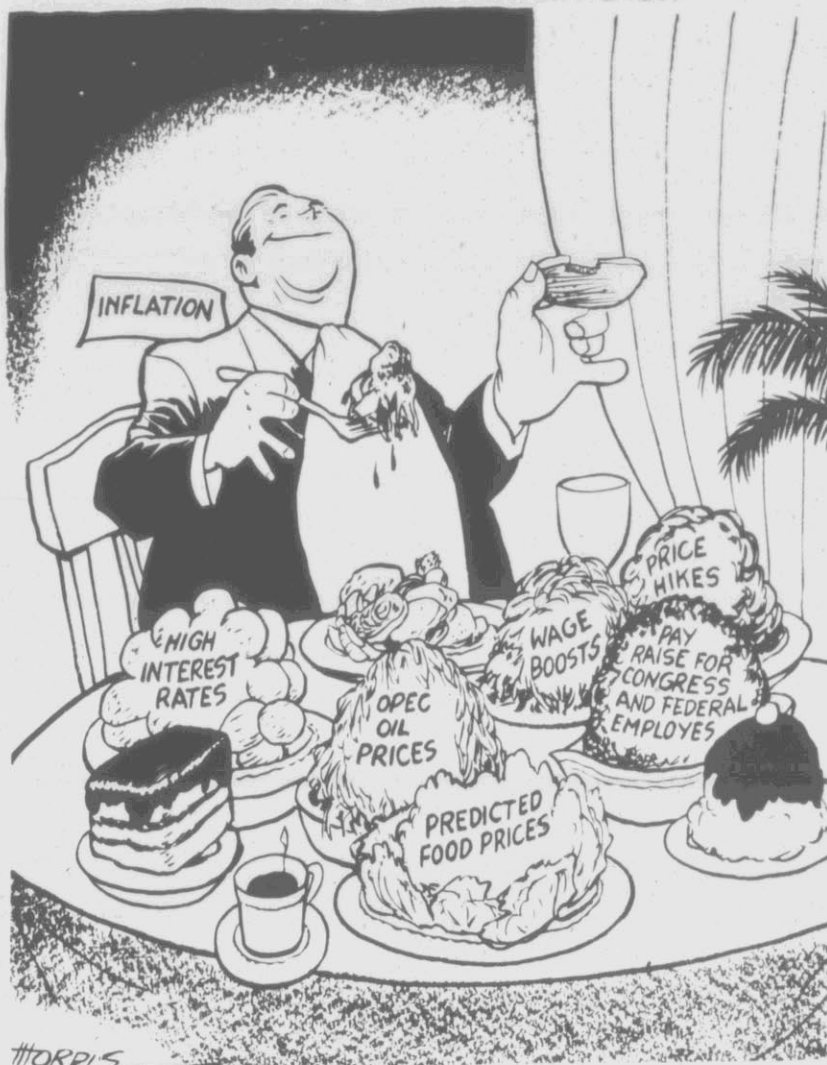

Jackson, but asserted "they live in fear of tomorrow."

"Why don't you go up there and see the fear they lived in?" Randall persisted. But Grande said Randall should not tell him which prisons to visit and asked if the North Carolina official was withdrawing his invitation for the Rhode Islanders to go where they wished.

"You're not going to force me to end that invitation," replied Randall. so the inspection forces split

HARDLY A STARVATION DIET!

By Gail Michaels

More Is Required Than A 'Playful Babysitter'

One afternoon last week Phillip called me from work and said, "You could use a night out. Why don't you get a babysitter and I'll treat you to dinner and a movie?"

Some treat. As a general rule I would rather clean the tiles in the bathroom with a complexion brush than try to find a babysitter. But he caught me at a weak moment. After spending the day pulling Zachary out of the kitchen cabinets, trash cans, diaper pails, and toilets, I found the appeal of lifting nothing weightier than a fork overwhelming.

I was so desperate I would have left the kids with a gang leader from the Bronx, but Meg has higher standards. "No," she said sternly when I suggested a repeat performance by a 14-year-old neighbor. "Irene is not a playful woman."

Perhaps her objections should have been overruled, but Meg is a master at inducing guilt. The minute she heard that her father and I were planning an evening out without her, she sighed, "I just love movies."

I ignored her. Several minutes later she said, "Do you know what makes me happiest?"

I immediately fell into the trap. "What?"

"Spending time with my mommy. Does spending time with your beautiful daughter make you happy?"

"Of course."

"Then why do you want to go off by yourself and leave me at home with some stranger?"

After that dialogue, I felt that the least I could do was leave her with a stranger who was playful.

This was no easy order to fill. Those playful sitters in the 14 to 17-year-old category are always dating, cheerleading, or working. Those playful sitters in the 50 to 70-year-old category generally have a waiting list for each night of the week.

That leaves the 12 and 13-year-olds. These kids have two strikes against them. In the first place, they burn out easily. After two sittings for me, they start manufacturing "other plans" as soon as they hear my voice over the phone.

In the second place, whereas Meg doesn't object to them, Phillip does. His response to the 12-year-old I finally hired was, "I can't leave the children with her. I'm not sure she's even weaned yet."

"Don't be silly," I said. "She was highly recommended. She has plenty of experience with babies."

"What kind?" Human or polyethylene?"

"You're not being fair."

"Oh yes I am. I just happen to remember that the only other cloth diaper was insufficient for stemming Zachary's tide. At least she changed him, which is more than I can say for the four sitters before her."

Phillip was adamant. "Well, I don't care. I don't want her back."

I refused to devote one more precious minute to the search. "If that's the way you feel, you find the sitter."

His tone changed immediately. "Now Gail. If a movie and dinner aren't worth it, what is?"

I'm not sure. Maybe a trip to Hawaii.

"There are some 40,000 women in the Los Angeles area alone who earn more than $20,000," Ms. Armstrong said. "Yes, there is a need for a facility like this. And yes, there is an interest."

Wilshire Club membership is limited to 4,000, including men, on a first-come basis. Within 10 days, Ms. Armstrong said, the club received nearly 300 applications.

"We're not anti-men," she stressed. "But I doubt they would see a plus in being a member since the facilities are geared toward women."

"I'm joining to further my business ventures," said Dina Franklin, an account executive with a Los Angeles paper firm. "I expect to double my business when this club gets going."

"We're not a bunch of rabid feminists trying to get away from men," Ms. Franklin added. "But I'm a sales executive, and it's so difficult when I take a client to lunch. It's the nature of our society. Men are preferred. The waiter gives the man the menu, the check. It's always a hassle, saying, 'No, no, give me the check.'"

"Now I will have the prestige of taking a client into my own club... where I will be preferred. When you're trying to control a situation, make a sale, you need the upper hand."

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
MEXICO CITY — By some definitions it already is the largest city in the world — 14 million now, 30 million by the turn of the century. The city pulses with a restless, uncontrollable vitality; the buses are packed, the sidewalks are packed, the traffic is New York times two. Everywhere one looks, a giant construction crane, like some praying mantis out of science fiction, is lifting a new building into being.

And out in the small towns and countryside, men still labor with pick and shovel and hoe and horse-drawn plows, doing old tasks the same old way.

To a visitor making his first trip south of the American border, Mexico bursts upon the senses with the impact of one of those vast murals by Diego Rivera. For most Americans, provincial people that we are, the image of Mexico still is the snoozing Pablo beneath the palm tree, his faithful burro browsing nearby. The image has small connection with reality.

Yes, much of the country still escapes the oppressive afternoon heat by a two-hour siesta, but this is a nation that rises early and works late. The rate of illiteracy, which not long ago embraced half the inhabitants, is dropping steadily. A new generation of architects and engineers has come along. New capital is fueling new industry. Mexico sits atop petroleum reserves thought to be greater than those of Saudi Arabia. South of the border, a sleeping giant is waking up.

A first-time visitor can deal only in impressions, not in researched conclusions. It may be that the impression of this tremendous, surging city is as deceptive in its way as Pablo and his patient burro. The sophisticated hotels of Acapulco, Puerto Vallarta and Mexico City, crowded with rich Mexicans and rich Americans, are light-years removed from the squalid hovels that house much of the population. We read incessantly about the gap that separates rich and poor in Latin America, but the gap almost has to be seen to be believed.

The social and economic problems plainly are immense. In "Global 2000," a study prepared last year by the State Department, Mexico's population is estimated at 60 million now and 131 million 20 years hence, with an annual growth rate of 3.1 percent. The authoritative Environmental Fund says 71.8 million now, 142 million at the end of the century, a growth rate of 3.6 percent. Whatever the correct figures may be, these tides of humanity will roughly double in the next two decades.

Unemployment is high, a visitor is told, but underemployment is worse, partly because of a policy that puts manual labor ahead of efficiency. Up in Puerto Vallarta 50 men with picks and shovels dig up cobblestones one at a time. One big Caterpillar could do the work in a tenth of the time, but 49 men might be displaced. Better to pay the $8 a day minimum wage.

Inflation is running at better than 30 percent, roughly triple our own rate, and the peso, which has been holding steady at 23 to the dollar for the past several years, is getting nervous. Last week Mexico's commerce secretary announced new efforts to restrict imports and to promote exports; pervasive price controls and subsidies are keeping a lid on the kettle.

As thousands of peasants migrate to the cities, social problems multiply. There are reportedly six million alcoholics in Mexico, half of them between the ages of 14 and 29. Crime increases also. But the country seems politically stable under the popular administration of Jose Lopez Portillo. Identified in the papers as JLP, just as we had our HST, JFK and LBJ, President Lopez Portillo runs a tight ship. A visitor is repeatedly assured that JLP's embrace of Fidel Castro ought not to be construed as an embrace of Soviet communism; it is a manifestation of Latin solidarity and also an expression of still smoldering resentment against the United States for the bungled deal three years ago.

So it goes. President Reagan already has made overtures toward improving relations with Mexico, and common sense suggests that Mr. Reagan's "North American Accord" should be actively pursued. We need this brawny giant on our side.

Los Angeles at age 45. Manatt abhors confrontational politics. Elected California state Democratic chairman in 1971 as a non-ideological technician, he has survived in the maelstrom of California and national politics by coolly avoiding intra-party warfare and promoting conciliation. On the eve of his greatest political triumph, Manatt was not about to deviate from form.

He approached Siegel, who was working the floor for him at the committee meeting, with this proposition: Would he and Campbell withdraw their candidacies today if appointed slots on the committee could be found for them tomorrow? Under no conditions, Siegel replied, if he withdrew today, there would be no tomorrow.

Other voices in the party angrily intervened. Georgia's State Chairman Marjorie Thurman warned that 55 state chairmen would walk out if Campbell and Siegel were thrown overboard. AFL-CIO officials backed her. Teddy Kennedy risked black wrath by telephoning committee members in Siegel's behalf. So Hatcher was promised his two black seats the next day by appointment, and he did not walk.

"Dick Hatcher's just not a team player, not a party man," one Democratic old pro explained to us. Why, then, on Feb. 27 was he elected deputy chairman of the Democratic National Committee? Why is that deputy chairmanship reserved for blacks as two others are reserved for Hispanics and women? What good do all these special caucuses do for the party?

Few Democrats question these intricate arrangements not even dreamed of a decade ago. Manatt does not ask. When he let Mayor Hatcher's attack on Siegel go unanswered, the new chairman showed no stomach for turning a loose confederation of caucuses into a working coalition capable of national leadership.

up into two groups with Grande heading east to visit Odom and the Rhode Island officials going west with Randall for a check on the Jackson County unit.

Back in Providence after his two-day inspection tour, Grande told reporters he had indeed found "dungeons of hell" in North Carolina, and he was convinced his clients had told the truth about their alleged mistreatment at the Jackson County prison. At the same time, he complained that North Carolina prison officials had tried to "brainwash" him by taking him to see "show prisons."

But O'Halloran and Newton saw things differently. Returning to Raleigh after their trip to Jackson County, they told Gov. Sanford, "There are certainly no such things as dungeons of hell," and that they considered Grande's statement "a gross exaggeration."

When asked for comment, Sanford said, "The best comment I could make is to point out he wasn't interested enough to even go to the prisons he came to see."

When he signed the extradition papers a few days later, Governor Notte said his investigators had reported the escapees had "grossly exaggerated conditions in the North Carolina prison system."

The Providence Journal summed up the affair with an editorial in which it asserted "the whole concept of the investigation was an insult to the sister state of North Carolina, and the amazing thing was that while the insult was hurled, Rhode Island's investigators were hospitably received."

Divers Emerge Safely After 43 Days

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Corks popping off champagne bottles were the only sign of pressure Friday as three divers ended their 43-day simulated dive at Duke University's F.G. Hall Laboratory.

All three participants in Atlantis III said they would participate in another simulated dive if they had the chance.

Len Whitlock said he would like to do a dive attempting to compress divers faster than Atlantis III. That dive brought Whitlock, Steve Porter and Erik Kramer to the record depth of 2,250 feet on Feb. 3, on a compression schedule beginning Jan. 23.

Kramer said he would be happy to go on another dive. And Porter said, "I'm already scheduled, I hope, to do Atlantis IV."

Dive director Dr. Peter Bennett said that dive will come in the fall of 1982, if there is enough funding.

Porter was first out of the chamber as the divers threw off the schedules of laboratory and television crews by appearing 44 minutes early. He explained how the chamber door wouldn't stay closed as the pressure neared sea level.

"I yelled at Len and stepped out and one of our chamber operators tried to get me to go back in. That was a lost cause. But I'd been going through so many days of being told what to do that I actually did go back inside ... but I came right back out."

Now the divers can trade the pressures of the chamber for those of the media.

Porter and Bennett are scheduled for an appearance on NBC's "Good Morning America." And, while Bennett will fly to New York for the show, Porter has to be patched in from Durham. Bennett said the diver could get the bends if he got on a plane in the next week or so.

Bennett said he has mixed feelings about doing the popular show. "I hate coming down to the lowest common denominator in explaining science," he said. "I'd prefer to give it to them straight and hope they pick it up."

Porter and the other divers will undergo more tests in the coming two weeks, but Bennett said they will not be confined. They all plan to spend their spare time with girlfriends and — in Whitlock's case — his wife.

Whitlock, of Vero Beach, Fla., celebrated his return by changing the diapers of his 3½-month-old son David. He said the infant was delivered shortly before he went into training for this dive, and he looks forward to renewing the acquaintance.

Bennett said the objective of the dive was to determine the effects various gas mixtures and rates of compression and decompression on human performance at great depths. He said he hopes the projects will one day allow divers to work on oil rigs and exploit other ocean resources in deep water.

Bennett has been trying to learn how to control a high pressure nervous syndrome that causes nausea, dizziness and tremors, making it impossible for divers to work. He has found his TRIMIX compound and slower compression rates work wonders in relieving those symptoms.

The experiment has been so successful, said Whitlock, that divers only need the proper equipment to begin undersea explorations undreamed of ten years ago.

"There's probably an equipment lag," he said. "Otherwise we could be doing the same things in the water that we've shown we can do in the lab."

Lawyer Challenges Barnes' Knowledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal lawyer challenged the expertise of a University of North Carolina official on Friday about his knowledge of racial proportions in other state university systems.

The challenge came as Gary Barnes, vice president for planning at UNC, completed five days of testimony at a hearing on alleged vestiges of discrimination in the UNC system.

Barnes testified before an administrative judge who will determine whether the U.S. Department of Education will be allowed to cut off about $100 million in annual aid to pressure UNC into submitting an acceptable desegregation plan.

Federal lawyer William Michaels questioned Barnes extensively about his knowledge of the university systems of Virginia, Georgia, Florida and Tennessee. Michaels sought to raise doubts about assertions made by Barnes in previous testimony.

Barnes had used enrollment data from the four states to compile statistics that he said shows North Carolina is complying with Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Acts as much as states that are implementing government-approved desegregation plans.

Barnes admitted that his knowledge of the education systems in neighboring states is less than his knowledge of the UNC system.

Michaels also pressed Barnes about how he had formed his opinions, asking if his opinions were based strictly from analysis of statistics or from other factors.

Barnes said his conclusions were formed not only from statistics, "but from my general knowledge of higher education and administration, my general experience and from my general review of appropriate data. I bring in whatever I think is germane."

Earlier in the week, Administrative Law Judge John J. Mathias cautioned UNC lawyers that Barnes could not testify beyond his expertise as a statistical analyst.

Michaels said Barnes' statement "casts doubts on Barnes' entire testimony."

The hearing continues next week. Douglass Hunt, special assistant to the chancellor at UNC-Chapel Hill; Jeffrey H. Orleans, special assistant to UNC President William Friday; and Dr. Raymond H. Dawson, senior vice president of UNC, are scheduled to testify.

Friday's name is not included on the list of 30 witnesses slated to testify for UNC.

Older Worker Week

March 8-14 has been proclaimed by Mayor Don McGlohon as "Older Worker Week" in Greenville.

McGlohon said that over two million North Carolinians are aged 40 and older, and nearly 1.5 million are working or seeking work.

"These middle-age and older workers bring extensive experience and high job qualifications to the work force of the state and are steady, reliable workers," he proclaimed.

He said the federal government and North Carolina identify the employment of middle-aged and older workers as a priority in attaining maximum productivity of the labor force.

The mayor added that President Ronald Reagan and Gov. Jim Hunt designated the period as "Employ the Older Worker Week" and he urged all local employers "to carefully consider the qualifications of persons aged 40 and over when they seek new employees."

McGlohon asked "public officials with job-placement responsibility to intensify their efforts throughout the year to help older workers find suitable jobs."

Moves To Escape Atlanta

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A black Atlanta mother of three says she'll live in Charlotte until the killer of 20 black children in her home city is brought to justice.

Marion James and her fatherless family lived until last fall in southwest Atlanta, where a murderer has been stalking black children. On Friday, the body of the 20th victim was pulled from an area river. The 13-year-old boy had been asphyxiated.

Ms. James (not her real name) moved to Charlotte last September, found a job and a reliable babysitter and tried to make a new life for herself and her children.

"I lived at Pryor Circle in southwest Atlanta," she said. "I knew the murdered kids by them playing with my kids out in the yard," she said. "The little girl who was found dead — she lived in the area I had just moved from. Some of the children taken had lived in the area where my parents stayed."

Ms. James has two boys, ages 2 and 3, and a 5-year-old daughter. Most of the victims are older than her children, but Ms. James said she lived in fear that one of her children would be killed.

One day last September, she said, she came home from work to find that her two boys were not there. They had been taken from the babysitter by their father, from whom Ms. James is divorced.

"I found them. They were OK," she said. "But it was that day I realized it could have been my kids missing. Murdered. They weren't in that age range of the other missing children, but it was still something to think about."

The same day, Ms. James packed up all of her belongings, rented a truck and drove to Charlotte.

"There had been break-ins in the neighborhood, things like that. The murders were happening all around me. I didn't know the names of the children who were being found dead, but I recognized their faces on television," she said. "They had played with my kids. It frightened me."

"My daughter wanted to know how they were killed and why. I told her nobody knows. When the pictures would come on television, the boys would say 'Mama, somebody's dead'."

Carter Warehouse Sold

ATLANTA (AP) — An Illinois feed processing firm has bought former President Jimmy Carter's peanut warehouse in Plains for $1.2 million, according to an aide to a Carter adviser.

The peanut warehouse was placed in a blind trust when Carter was elected president in 1976 and the former president's brother Billy managed the warehouse for several years before resigning that post in 1976.

Atlanta-based Gold-Kist Inc., which has leased the warehouse since September 1977, is expected to surrender the lease April 1, said Jean Bray, secretary to Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo. Ms. Bray announced closing of the sale on Friday.

Kirbo, as trustee of the property, has been handling negotiations for its sale to Archer-Daniels-Midland of Decatur, Ill.

Further details were not available.

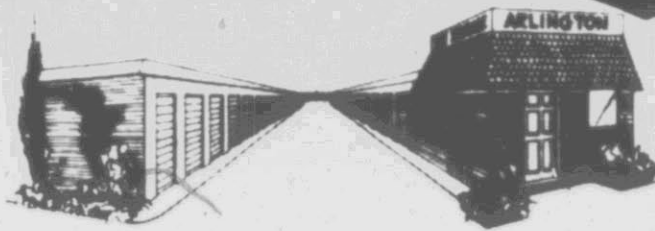

A Carter friend quoted by The Atlanta Journal earlier this week said the warehouse was carrying so much debt that the Carters were not expected to profit much from the sale.

"I suspect the sale will get them out of debt and that's all," the anonymous friend said.

Employ Older Worker Week Noted

Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., has proclaimed March 8-14 "Employ the Older Worker Week." The national observance has emphasized the importance of older workers for more than 20 years.

The message of the proclamation is that in an age of shrinking budgets and increased emphasis on maximum productivity, the value of the older worker should not be overlooked as a means to increase efficiency.

"National Employ the Older Worker Week" is an annual means of focusing public attention on the importance of using this valuable employment resource," said Sandra Zadnik, older worker specialist in the Greenville Job Service office. "When you realize that more than two million North Carolinians, two-thirds of whom are in the civilian labor force of the state, are 40 years old and older, you begin to see how important it is that we make good use of their experience and knowledge."

Since 1967, congressional legislation has mandated equal opportunity and non-discrimination for people on the basis of age.

Through the Greenville local office, 259 older workers have been placed on permanent jobs within the past year. The older worker group comprises 10 percent of all registered applicants. The placement of the 259 older workers comprises 11.2 percent of the total placements made for the year.

"We urge employers to consider older workers when they are hiring," Zadnik said. "At Job Service, we will help match employer needs with applicants skills."

Energy Symposium Is Planned

ECU News Bureau "Energy: Alternatives for the '80's" is the topic of a symposium set for March 20 at East Carolina University, sponsored by the ECU Department of Chemistry.

All sessions will be held in the Carol Belk Auditorium.

John Leigh, MITRE Corp., "National Resources, Needs and Political Constraints," 10 a.m.

Henry Bent, N.C. State University, "The Laws of Nature and Natural Constraints," 11 a.m.

John DeRuyter, E.I. Du Pont de Nemours, "Industrial Response — Conservation at Du Pont," 1:30 p.m.

James Bresee, N.C. Energy Institute, "The Future of Energy in North Carolina," 2:30 p.m.

A 3:30 p.m. panel discussion and question and answer session will conclude the symposium.

Co-sponsors are the American Chemical Society, Eastern N.C. Section; Union Carbide Corp.; Burroughs Wellcome Co.; and Greenville Utilities Commission.

The symposium is open to all interested persons, and will be of particular interest to those in academic, industrial and governmental occupations.

Prior notice of attendance is requested. Further information is available from Dr. James Hix Jr., symposium committee chairman, ECU Department of Chemistry, East Carolina University, Greenville, NC 27834.

Not Enough DAs Write Laws

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's district attorneys say one reason the courts do not work well is that there aren't enough district attorneys on the committees that write criminal laws.

The state District Attorneys' Association told Gov. Jim Hunt in a letter this week that they must be better represented on the committees.

"We're hopping mad about it," said Joe Freeman Britt, president of the district attorneys group. "One reason the criminal justice system is getting skewed in favor of the criminal today is because these criminal justice study commissions have mirrored the defense point of view."

The district attorneys told Hunt they have been excluded from commissions on criminal laws while defense lawyers have been included in excessive numbers. At least three important commissions have either no district attorney or only one — the Governor's Crime Commission, the Courts Commission and the Evidence Code Study Commission, Britt said. "The people are the ones who are being shortchanged," Britt said. "Talk to the man on the street and he'll tell you the courts are going to hell in a handbasket."

Wake County District Attorney J. Randolph Riley agreed that recent laws seem to have favored defendants. "There's been a sense of frustration among the members of the DA's association that its voice was not being heard," he said.

The bill seeks a revamped court commission which would add three members to the currently 15-member body.

PONDERING THE FUTURE...CBS Evening News Managing Editor Walter Cronkite relaxes in his New York office. He'll have more time to put his feet up on his desk and ponder since his last regularly scheduled newscast Friday night. (AP Laserphoto).

'I'll Be Back From Time To Time'

NEW YORK (AP) — Gently chiding "those who have made anything of this departure," Walter Cronkite passed the "CBS Evening News" anchor to a younger colleague with the promise, "I'll be back from time to time."

"Old anchormen, you see, don't fade away," Cronkite, 64, said at the close of his last "Evening News" broadcast Friday. "they just keep coming back for more."

Cronkite, whose desk will be occupied Monday by Dan Rather, characterized the occasion as "but a transition, a passing of the baton."

But his last day as anchorman, a job he took over in 1962 to build a reputation as one of the most trusted men in America, was marked by an outpouring of tribute from viewers as well as peers.

"He was a formidable competitor," NBC anchorman John Chancellor, said at the conclusion of his "Nightly News" broadcast. "And he brought such distinction to his work ... that he made the rest of us look a bit better."

Frank Reynolds, anchorman for ABC's "World News Tonight," ended his newscast with recognition of Cronkite as "a symbol of responsibility."

"All of us," Reynolds said, "his colleagues, his competitors, his fellow citizens, ought to be grateful to him."

Cronkite, reserving the last couple of minutes of his final broadcast for his farewell, admitted the occasion came "with some sadness."

"For almost two decades, after all, we've been meeting like this in the evenings," he said, "and I'll miss that."

But he added, "I'm not even going away." He said he will return "with special news reports, documentaries, and, beginning in June, every week, with our science program, 'Universe'."

Both Houston, where Cronkite grew up, and New York City, his home since 1950, honored the newsman Friday. Cronkite was at City Hall before noon to receive New York's first LaGuardia Medal from Mayor Edward Koch.

New York's Gov. Hugh Carey stopped by Cronkite's office with a proclamation declaring Friday "Walter Cronkite Day" in the state, and Houston made the same proclamation.

By mid-day, several hundred letters and several floral bouquets had been received by Cronkite's office from well-wishing viewers.

One letter — actually a postcard — was given Cronkite at a private party for the "Evening News" staff directly after the broadcast. The card, 8 feet by 16 feet, listed the signatures of 40,000 residents of Binghamton, N.Y.

Cronkite was invited to a number of parties in his honor, including receptions staged at the universities of Missouri, Michigan and Dayton. In Sparta, Ill., high school teachers held a party in his honor under a banner bearing Cronkite's habitual sign-off words, "That's the way it is."

But the anchorman was having lunch with William S. Paley, CBS' founder and chairman, who said in a statement later in the day:

"I have mixed emotions about the end of Walter's association as managing editor and anchorman of the 'CBS Evening News.' I will miss him greatly in that spot, and that saddens me.

"On the other hand ... I am excited with Walter's coming assignment, and predict he will set records in that role."

Replanting Near Volcano

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — Fir seedlings are being replanted on thousands of acres of ash-covered foothills denuded by eruptions of nearby Mount St. Helens, a lumber company says.

About 5,000 acres are to be replanted by early May, said Mike Bickford, spokesman for Weyerhaeuser Co., which plans to plant 37,000 acres in Douglas and noble fir by the end of 1984.

Fifty to 60 tree planters have been working for more than a week 15 miles northwest of the crater, though several areas will comprise the 5,000 acres to be planted with 2 million seedlings this year.

Tree planters said they have had to clear away two to four inches of ash for each seedling, "scalping" an area at least 10 inches across to get down to the soil and allow air and water to get into the earth.

"This has been very good forest land. It still is," said Weyerhaeuser district forester Jerry Gutzwiller.

He said the land had been replanted in 1979, and seedlings had only begun to grow when Mount St. Helens exploded May 18, stripping the hills.

Gutzwiller said he expected 85 percent of the seedlings planted in the ash to survive, compared with a normal survival rate of 90 percent to 95 percent.

A total of 15 million seedlings would be needed to replant the 37,000 acres. Noble fir seedlings would be used at higher elevations.

Weyerhaeuser last summer began researching the problems associated with growing trees in the ash. Trees were planted on an experimental basis during the research but the latest plantings represent the first effort to replant vast acreages near the volcano.

Weyerhaeuser said planting was generally being done at least 12 miles away from the crater.

Moving Toward Decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who already has wiped out federal controls on oil prices, is hoping to do the same for natural gas, a move that would cost consumers billions of dollars a year.

Edwin Dale, spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget, said Friday the Reagan administration will seek the help of Congress in equalizing prices for oil and natural gas.

Dale hinted, however, that the plan might not be submitted until next year. His boss, David A. Stockman, is said to fear that involving the lawmakers in such a heated controversy at this time might jeopardize action on Reagan's program of tax and spending cuts.

Present law will allow most controls on natural gas prices to expire at the end of 1984. Reagan wants to accelerate the process as part of his effort to reduce the government's role in business and to spur exploration for more gas.

The president used that reasoning in January to immediately end oil-price controls, pushing the schedule ahead by eight months. He told a news conference Friday that was a proper move, even though rising energy prices continue to feed inflation.

He said only three or four cents of recent increases in gasoline prices were attributable to expedited oil price decontrol. In return, decontrol has provided the oil industry greater incentives for exploration and production, Reagan said.

"We do believe that as time goes on we're going to see increased exploration and development of oil in this country and that is the road toward lower prices when supply begins to match demand more," he added.

The Department of Energy has not estimated how speeding up the phase-out of price controls on natural gas would affect utility bills of the 55 percent of American homes heated by gas.

But Energy Action, a private group that opposes deregulation, recently estimated that abolishing price controls at once — because of problems it might cause for the Reagan economic program.

Stockman raised the natural gas issue in an interview printed in Friday's Los Angeles Times. His remarks were repeated later by Dale.

Dale quoted Stockman as saying that when the law phasing out controls was written in 1978, it was intended to raise gradually the price of a unit of natural gas to equalize it with the price of the amount of oil needed to produce the same amount of heat. In other words, heating a typical home with oil should cost no more than heating it with gas.

"But that schedule was before the Iranian revolution and the new explosion of oil prices," Dale explained. "Therefore, the deregulation track is now unrealistic because gas would remain indefinitely below the price of oil."

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A time when you have conflicting views with others. So be sure to accept differences in a philosophical manner. Don't force any issues with family members at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make certain you handle responsibilities you have in a most precise manner. Engage in favorite hobby with congenials.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use diplomacy instead of forcefulness with loved one at this time. Make long-range plans to have more abundance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try to please family members and come to a better understanding with them. Take no risks where your reputation is concerned.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to have greater income in the days ahead. Analyze your aims and gain the support you need from others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Concentrate on how you can be more productive in the future. An intuitive prompting could be erroneous now so don't follow it.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to enlist the help of loyal friends for a new project you have in mind. Make practical plans for the days ahead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make some needed changes at home so that you have more comfort there. Allow time for recreational activities you enjoy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good day to engage in activities that most appeal to you. Adopt a philosophy that can be good for you in the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to have more harmonious relations with family members. Make plans that can bring advancement in your career.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MAR. 9, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Make sure that you do nothing today that could upset one who has authority over you. Strive to make progress in your line of endeavor. Secrets come to light at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Do nothing that could cause a severance of connections with an associate. Be sure to keep an important appointment.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Concentrate on the future and then make concrete plans to improve it. Take modern treatments to improve your health.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try a new approach with friends and reach a better understanding with them. Know what is expected of you by associates.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have to be tactful and clear thinking to patch up a problem of long standing. Take no risks with money at this time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can get along better with associates by adopting a new attitude. Take no chances with one who has harmed you in the past.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study your duties well and figure out a way to handle them more efficiently. Don't do anything that could anger loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Use a different approach in a civil matter and get excellent results. Avoid one who is detrimental to your best interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make work the keynote in your activities today and accomplish a great deal. Not a good day to engage in new outlets.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be extra patient in the face of any pressures today and you win out. Strive for greater prestige in civic affairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be tactful with family members and maintain harmony at home. Take no chances with a well-known troublemaker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use good judgment in the handling of problems connected with regular routines. Come to a better understanding with loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your monetary prowess is better now than for some time so make the most of this now. Obtain data you need from the right sources.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be a capable person who can study new ventures and understand them well. But it's important to teach to finish one thing before going on with another. Don't neglect ethical training early in life.

Shoes Trod Rock Course

JOHN MURPHY

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Shoes doesn't have the usual rock group history. Its members decided to write songs before they could play instruments. They made records themselves instead of playing live and inviting bigshots to hear them or making demo tapes and sending them to record companies.

They're on Elektra Records, with a second LP, "Tongue Twister," No. 140 and climbing in its third week on the best-selling charts of Feb. 14. The first LP was "Present Tense," out in September 1979.

Shoes just did what came naturally. There wasn't much of a music scene — and no bar scene — in Zion, Ill., a dry town north of Chicago. So there wasn't anybody to ask about the usual route to rock groupdom. And Shoes didn't play live because only two of its members were at the University of Illinois in Urbana.

Shoes started with Gary Klebe and John Murphy. There were two of them, just like a pair of shoes. Now they've heard all the plays on words that people came up with when they heard the name and they're sick of them all. But they're philosophical; most are complimentary like "Shoes shine" and "Shoes take great strides" and it gives rock writers something to say.

Klebe says, "The whole concept which is the basis of us is that we were listeners first. We listened to the radio and wanted to make stuff that was good to listen to, rather than us learning to play guitars at age 9."

"We thought there was a lack. The actual sounds of 1970s records were fantastic as opposed to the '60s when they could have used some improvement. But there was nothing hummable on the radio."

Murphy says, "A good melody, that's the tops. Something catchy. The best melodies seem to come from simple hooks, repetition in certain areas. You'll hear a nice little phrase sometimes in a song and not hear it again; you think the writers didn't quite know what they had. When we come up with something, we know where is the attractive part that makes it a little more interesting or different."

GARY KLEBE

"At first we were frustrated because we had to take time to learn instruments. We wanted to dive right into it."

Klebe says, "We started when we began to realize that people who compose the songs on the radio are mere mortals and it could be done. You learn three or four chords and simple chord progressions and that's all it took."

Murphy's younger brother, Jeff, in high school when the other two started at the U of I, worked his way into the group. Drummer Skip Meyer, also from Zion, joined in 1976, the year Klebe was graduated from college in architecture. John Murphy didn't quite make it to graduation in fine arts. All sing and all write except the drummer.

The self-produced records started, Murphy says, "because we weren't playing live very much. If we were writing songs and not playing and didn't have anything to show, we would have got directionless."

In 1974, with Klebe studying for a year in France, the Murphy brothers cut an album, "Un Dans Versailles" and had 300 copies pressed. In 1975 the three made "Bazooka" tapes but didn't have the money to get it pressed. In 1976, with Meyer added, they made the record "Black Vinyl Shoes."

Murphy says, "You find a place that presses records for high-school marching bands. We spent a little over $2 on each record and sold them for $3.50. I never thought we'd sell off 1,000 but we got rid of them all. We did our own art work and had a lyric sheet in there and a t-shirt iron-on. We were proud of this package."

"We went to a local record store. They took 100 copies. We found a magazine, Bomp, in California that sold 400 or 500 of them."

Klebe says, "One main purpose was to get something going with the press. A Chicago writer gave it a real good review and he told us about some other writers. We had reviews all over the country and didn't have a record label."

Murphy says, "Historically, it's okay that we put 'Black Vinyl Shoes' out. But we consider it a demo record. Our real debut is 'Present Tense.'"

MEMORIES RE-RAISED — Arthur Godfrey, Bob and Ray, Patti Page and Teresa Brewer are among a star-studded lineup in THE FIFTIES: MOMENTS TO REMEMBER, a gala, three-hour musical special airing Sunday, March 21 at 8:00 p.m. as part of Festival Nights on Center, Channel 25.

Stars Of Golden Days Are Recalled

The performers and performances that made the Fifties a fabulous time of entertainment come together in two programs on March 21 ON CENTER Channel 25. TV: THE FABULOUS FIFTIES at 6:00 p.m. recalls the golden days of television — the days of live performances in drama as well as comedy, the days of experimentation. In THE 50'S: MOMENTS TO REMEMBER at 8:00 p.m., many of the singers from the era join in a romantic, three-hour television musical tribute to the standard, non-rock music of that time.

Using clips from dozens of early programs, TV: THE FABULOUS 50'S presents six distinct segments, each hosted by a performer outstanding in the field back then. Red Skelton hosts the part on comedy. Lucille Ball takes a look at the most enduring program types, the situation comedy. Action series, everything from crime fighters to space cadets, are examined by the late David Janssen. "The Fugitive," whose downcast anti-hero looks inspired cults of supporters.

An exploration of TV's Wild, Wild West in the '50s is hosted by a man who grew up in the medium, Michael Landon.

For those old enough to remember the early

Murphy adds, "We found out later there were 'garage bands' doing singles and extended-play records on their own. We wanted to show our song writing; we had 15 songs, five apiece. A single or EP wouldn't have done it for us."

days of TV, there should be a special warmth for Mary Martin, who will present the segments of drama. Dinah Shore hosts the segment on variety specials of the time. Together, the six segments of TV: THE FABULOUS FIFTIES recall the wonderful energy and enthusiasm that made television "come alive."

Arthur Godfrey, himself responsible for discovering many of the top entertainers of the Fifties, headlines the star-studded line up in THE 50'S: MOMENTS TO REMEMBER, live from the Grand Ballroom in New York's Waldorf-Astoria. The program takes viewers on a special journey through the Fifties with contemporary performances by Godfrey, Teresa Brewer, Rosemary Clooney, the Four Lads, Eddie Haywood, Frankie Laine, Guy Mitchell and Patti Page. Mitch Miller will once again lead the gang in song and the perennially-popular Bob and Ray will offer their own humorous commentary to the goings-on.

Memorable moments from other fifties entertainment — movies, theatre, cabarets, records, radio and television — will help jog viewers' memories through authentic film clips woven throughout the show. Highlighting these clips will be scenes from Leonard Sillman's "New Faces" (1952), the first Broadway show ever to be filmed intact and the second movie ever made in Cinemascope. Paul Lynde, Eartha Kitt and Carol Lawrence were three of the future stars introduced to audiences in "New Faces."

Television is represented by one of its most celebrated variety programs, Max Liebman's "Your Show of Shows," with Sid Caesar, Imogene Coca, Carl Reiner and Howard Morris.

One Dinosaur Who Avoids Fossildom

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Danny Thomas is a dinosaur who refused to trudge into fossildom with the others of his species, television pioneers who have all but disappeared into the La Brea tar pits.

Danny is still around as producer and actor, co-starring in "I'm a Big Girl Now," an updated version of his old "Make Room for Daddy" series which began in the Mesozoic TV era.

Actually, the beak-nosed comedian goes back even further, to the Paleolithic era with NBC-TV's "Four Star Revue" in 1950. He starred every fourth week in the variety show, alternating with Jimmy Durante, Ed Wynn and Jack Carson.

All but Danny, 67, are in their graves.

Unlike the others, Danny became a video impresario. In his three decades in television, Danny has amassed an astounding fortune from productions owned outright or backed financially. At one time he ran a "comic supermarket."

"Make Room For Daddy" ran 11 years, perhaps a record for sitcoms. His other successes as an investor included "The Real McCoys" (six years) and "The Andy Griffith Show" (11 years, including its run "as Mayberry R.F.D.").

He also backed the first "Dick Van Dyke Show," "Gomer Pyle," "My Favorite Martian," "The Bill Dana Show," "The Joey Bishop Show," "Mod Squad," "Make Room For Granddaddy," "The Practice" and "The Danny Thomas Hour," an anthology.

Altogether, Danny was involved with a baker's dozen series which provided more than 52 seasons worth of shows involving uncounted hours of entertainment.

His record probably is un-rivaled in the brief history of television.

Looking back, Thomas takes a measure of pride in the quality and content of the shows, convinced that television did a better job in the 1950s and '60s than it has in the past decade.

"We thought we were reflecting the family life and morals of our time, something our viewers could associate with themselves," he said. "Today, writers think they are doing the same thing. But I disagree."

"Lately, the emphasis is on sex, violence and drugs. Well, those elements in society represent only about two percent of American homes."

"There are some exceptions like 'Eight Is Enough' and 'The Waltons.' But most of the rest of television, especially situation comedies, are based on a concept of America that doesn't relate to reality."

"Maybe that's why there are fewer and fewer sitcoms. The ring-a-ding pace, and sex jokes are turning people away. How much can you talk about sex? It's like the real thing — when it's over, it's over."

"I think the show I'm in now, 'I'm a Big Girl Now,' reflects certain realistic elements in the 1980s. It's a single parent home with an extended family. Its trials and tribulations ring true."

"In the old days 'Father Knows Best,' 'My Three Sons,' 'Make Room For Daddy' and the others were a much truer indication of what was and still is going on in American households."

"But the people who decide which shows go on the air are saying no. They'd rather deal with venereal disease, swinging parents and drugs."

According to Thomas, the content of today's series cannot match the quality of the old shows. But he adds that considerable technical improvements have been made.

"That doesn't upgrade the substance of the shows, however," Danny said quickly. "Today's producers, writers and directors should pay more attention to the content of the story than how the show looks."

"Even though there are more TV sets in homes than ever before, fewer people are tuning in to network shows. Cable TV and cassettes are taking their toll. I see TV going more and more to miniseries, even for situation comedy."

"There's no reason why they can't wrap up an entire TV situation comedy season in six hours with a beginning, middle and end strung out over a few weeks."

"It makes sense, because today's producers never know how long they're going to be on the air. They go from one show to another looking for a hit."

Hollywood Myths Last Better Than 'Real Thing'

By GLORIA OHLAND
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The myths and legends Hollywood created have endured the ravages of time better than Hollywood itself.

The several million tourists who come to the famous corner of Hollywood and Vine each year don't see anything that recalls the former glory of the movie capital of the world.

Yes, there's a little plaque tacked on a savings and loan building down the street indicating Hollywood's first big movie was filmed there in 1913. But it's on the wrong side of Vine Street — the correct location now is a parking lot — and it's indicative of Hollywood's irreverence for the past.

The movie studios and their stars left town a long time ago for the cooler suburbs — places like Culver City, Burbank and Beverly Hills.

"Like many a starlet, Hollywood was seduced and abandoned," laments a pamphlet published by Hollywood Heritage, one of several recently formed historical societies.

But the situation is changing. Property values are back up, commercial rentals are running at near capacity and people have begun to put money into saving what's left of historical Hollywood.

"Our success in resurrecting the Hollywood sign was the watershed" for the town's restoration renaissance, says Michael Simms, past president of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce. Simms was one of those who raised $250,000 to rebuild the landmark atop Mount Lee.

Now Simms is creating a movie industry museum in the old barn where Cecil B. DeMille, Samuel Goldfish (later Goldwyn) and Jesse Lasky filmed Hollywood's first truly big movie, "The Squaw Man," in 1913.

an estate in her native Illinois.

About five miles from downtown Los Angeles, it was later annexed by the city, yet has always had its own identity.

In the middle of the main drag stands one of the town's oldest existing buildings — the Janes Sisters school for movie children, circa 1900. Targeted for restoration by Hollywood Heritage, the rickety Victorian home is still inhabited by one of the Janes girls, now 93 years old.

It stands incongruously amidst the jumble of head shops and discount stores that currently line Hollywood Boulevard.

When money began flowing into Hollywood in those days, lavishly-decorated hillside palaces became commonplace among Hollywood's stars.

Rudolph Valentino constructed his Falcon's Lair — tour buses now point out a half-dozen huge Mediterranean-style mansions as the original and even historians are confused — and Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were soon to rule Hollywood's social set from Pickfair. The estate was recently sold for $5.3 million.

The Bernheimer mansion, its Oriental palazzo used as a backdrop for Marlon Brando in "Sayonara" and in "Teahouse of the August Moon" as well as hundreds of TV shows, is now a restaurant. Another of the old mansions, the Holly Chateau, is now a chic club for magicians.

In the 1930s the Sunset Strip was transformed from a bridle path through farmland into a playground of nightspots for the flashiest of stars. Unable to compete with the glitter of nearby Las Vegas, many of the dinner clubs became rock 'n' roll spots in the 1960s and '70s. Although its complexion has changed, the Strip is busier than ever.

Downtown, crowds still queue up outside Grauman's Chinese Theatre even though bejeweled movie stars don't exit from their limousines at curbside anymore to walk up red carpets to gala movie premieres. The elaborate art nouveau Pantages Theatre has been filling nightly since it converted to live stage productions.

The drug store across the street from Hollywood High, where Lana Turner and Carol Burnett reportedly were discovered, is still a busy ice cream parlor.

And the once-swank original Brown Derby restaurant, another spot where studio executives looked for just the right fresh, young face, was saved from destruction by a well-publicized storm of protest.

Says Marion Gibbons of Hollywood Heritage: "I think some people here finally realized that people from all over the world may not know where Washington, D.C., is and they may not even know where Los Angeles is, but they all know where Hollywood is and that it is worth saving."

MARTIANS? — German sculptor Professor Henrich Kirchner of Pavolding, Bavaria is the creator of these funny people set up at the entrance of the village near Lake Chiemsee. The art professor has his studio nearby, and villagers and passers-by enjoy the open-air art exhibit. (AP Laserphoto)

Now, Books On Phyllis Schafly And Baseball

THE SWEETHEART OF THE SILENT MAJORITY: The Biography of Phyllis Schafly. By Carol Felsenthal. Doubleday. 337 Pages. $13.95.

After Congress passed the Equal Rights Amendment in 1972 and sent it to the states to be ratified, they reacted with such speed that within a year 30 states had done so. With six years left before the end of the ratification time limit, only eight more were needed to make it a part of the Constitution.

Today, despite an extension of the time for ratification from the original March 22, 1979, to June 30, 1982, ERA is still stalled, with 35 of the 38 needed states having ratified.

What happened to stop the momentum?

Phyllis Schafly happened. In October 1972 she founded STOP ERA, and she is given credit by friend and blamed by foe for doing just that.

Carol Felsenthal, who had written a magazine article on Mrs. Schafly, found, "once I concluded that Schafly was not an unadulterated villain, she became much more complex and interesting," and decided to write a book about her. She has meticulously researched her subject, including spending time at the Schafly home and interviewing her children, relatives and friends.

Though the author admits she considers herself a feminist, she set out to be objective and has succeeded. Nobody feels neutral about Phyllis Schafly — she is either loved or loathed.

This book probably will not change anyone's mind, but the reader will get an insight into what has made its subject such a formidable opponent of the women's liberation movement. Even her enemies might come away with grudging admiration for a woman who has raised six children, written nine books and earned a law degree in her 50s.

TOOT-TOOT-TOOTSIE, GOOD-BYE. By Ron Powers. Delacorte. 406 Pages. $9.95.

A seldom-seen part of the baseball world is the subject of Ron Powers' novel that should be a hit with readers.

"Toot-Toot-Tootsie, Good-Bye" portrays the last season of L.C. Fanning, once the premier radio broadcaster of baseball. "Half lucid, half deluded, redolent of another time," Fanning practices his art for the hapless New York Nats with his sideman, former catcher "Turtle" Teweles.

In 42 years of broadcasting, Fanning has remained true to the era when play-by-play men painted rich word pictures not only of the game, but also of the players, the fans and the American "way of life." Naturally, he hates television, sees it as synthetic. But his self-created world is rapidly crumbling.

The announcer has cancer and he is losing the support of the station that broadcasts the Nats' games. To stem diminishing listenership, the station management hires a former beauty queen as an announcer.

The result is, at times, hilarious. But the presence of Robyn Quarries in the booth eventually stifles the man whose claim to fame is the cry, "Toot-toot-tootsie, good-bye!" when a home run is hit.

Some of the parallels between Powers' book and sports history are unmistakable. But the novel is much more than a roman-a-clef. It adds an understanding about the changes that have occurred in America since the advent of television.

"Simple Pleasures," collaborative works of Greenville artist George Brett, will be on view at the Greenville Museum of Art now through March 26.

An opening reception was held Thursday night from 7-9 p.m. Brett's show features black and white photography, drawings, and sculpture.

Highlighted at the reception Thursday night was the premiere of "Dress," a kinetic sculpture that is a collaborative work of Brett, costume designer Patrice Alexander, choreographer Pat Pertallion, and dancer Mary Ruth Spagnolo. "Dress" will be displayed again each Tuesday night during the exhibition, March 10, 17, and 24 at 8:00 and 8:15 p.m.

Brett received a bachelor of fine arts degree from Florida State University and a master of fine arts degree in fabric design from the University of Georgia and is currently working as the educational media coordinator for East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Brett's own image appears in all of the photographs, titled "Ghostings," most of which are of Brett's colleagues. His faded image appears in an almost mystical sense. The series of photographs are fun. But this visual concept in Brett's photography portrays a feeling of closeness — not only visual, but also personal sensitivity.

Brett utilizes open space in the majority of his work in such a way that it does not appear to be empty. He said that space brings attention to two-dimensional spaces that are usually taken for granted (For example, the open space between the branches of a tree or between two buildings.)

Brett is also interested in "correspondence art," which involves art people who are pen pals on a visual level, and the artists exchange hand-made postcards. His interest in "mail art" has resulted in international exhibitions and led him to experiment with collage. He began by gluing collage elements to the postcards, then sewed them and then he taped them. In "Simple Pleasures," he now uses Scotch tape as the sole element of the collage.

Brett's "Dress" piece is what he calls "kinetic sculpture." (Kinetic meaning movement from the force of the human body.) This is how he differentiates this type of sculpture from other sculpture in that it is not powered by machine or wind, but by the human body. "Dress" was Brett's idea, but the total concept was formulated by the collaboration of costume designer, Patrice Alexander, choreographer, Pat Pertallion, and dancer Mary Ruth Spagnolo, who interpreted Brett's ideas. The simple effect from the sculpture is exhibited by the use of a white gown on the dancer.

Three galleries in Washington, D.C., and Atlanta, Ga., are interested in exhibiting Brett's "Dress" piece. The premiere, however, will be held at the Greenville Museum of Art.

Coinciding with Brett's exhibition and reception was the "Peace Corps 20th Anniversary Show." This show was held to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Peace Corps. Artifacts and art objects collected by former Peace Corps members who now reside in the Pitt/Greenville area will be on display.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Recently added to our shelves are some useful guides that feature valuable information and irresistible appeal for the tourist and arm-chair traveler alike.

The 1981 "Mobil Travel Guides," covering all areas of the United States, can help you save gasoline, money and time. The seven regional volumes contain sections with information about attractions and special events, state road maps, map coordinates for cities and towns, and a handy list of toll free reservation numbers. The guides also contain a cross-section of food and lodging establishments and offers a wide range of prices. Specific cities in Canada are presented in the "Northwest and Great Plains States," "Northeastern States and Great Lakes Area" volumes, based on their points of entry from the United States.

Another guide filled with ideas to add an extra dimension to your travels is "Discovery Trips in Europe" by the editors of Sunset Books and Magazine. Many of the trips and destinations suggested here can be enjoyed in less than a day. Others require more time and planning. An outstanding feature of the Guide suggests different experiences in transportation — cycling, horse-drawn wagon, river and canal boats, buses and trains. But the Guide's most charming feature is that it describes the real Europe outside the cities.

"John Wilhelm's Guide to Mexico," now in its fifth edition, is a comprehensive and up-to-date guide of modern Mexico. The author, who has a deep affection for Mexico and its people, knows this beautiful south-of-the-border country as few Americans do. As a resident for many years, he draws from this experience and knowledge to tell the reader how to get to Mexico, how much it will cost, what to take, where to stay, where to eat, what to see, and what to buy there. Throughout the book he includes interesting background on Mexico, its history and culture, its people and their way of life.

How many times have you heard someone say: "The only sure way of making money these days is to go into business for yourself," or "Nobody gets rich working for others." H.S. Kahn underscores these maxims in his book "101 Businesses You Can Start And Run With Less Than $1,000." It makes no difference if you are a beginner, whether you are young or old, man or woman, anyone of the businesses outlined in this book can bring you more money in the next few months than you might have earned in a whole year in addition to your regular income.

Perhaps the preparation of food is your expertise. "Successful Catering," by Bernard R. Splaver may be just the guide you need. Its purpose is two-fold: to show those who wish to become caterers how to get started and to help those who are already established in the field to improve their business.

"How To Start A Typing Service In Your Own Home," by Patricia M. Wilbanks contains everything you need to know to establish, organize, and operate a profitable business at home plus tips on how a limited typing service can be expanded to a complete letter shop operation with a minimum investment.

Americans spend an estimated annual seven billion dollars on their dogs. In "How To Make Money In Dogs," Kurt Unkelbach tells how anyone who likes dogs can reap some of the profits. From dog walking, grooming and training, to boarding dogs, working with professional handlers and kennel owners, to photographing dogs, carpentry, portraiture, and writing, literally all the angles are discussed with the aim of demonstrating how to make the most of the dog game dollar.

'Works On Paper' Contest Here Posse Against Rustlers

By LEIGH COAKLEY
Reflector Staff Writer

With a March 2 deadline, artists across the United States recently submitted their work for judging in the "Works on Paper," a National Juried Competition which is scheduled to open at the Gray Gallery/East Carolina University Museum of Art March 22 through April 12.

The juror for the new exhibition is Edward B. Henning, Chief Curator of Modern Art, Cleveland Museum of Art, Cleveland, Ohio. Of the 287 accepted pieces of work submitted for judging, Henning eliminated over one half of them.

Gray Gallery director, Randy Osman, said this is a major national show and is an important one to ECU and eastern North Carolina. Osman said they selected the most qualified juror possible. According to Osman, this show provides the university and area with exposure in art circles around the country.

Henning, a native of Cleveland, Ohio, has an impressive background in the art field. Beginning with his educational training, he graduated Magna Cum Laude from Western Reserve University for his B.S., 1949; received his certificate from The Cleveland Institute of Art, 1949; attended Academy Julian in Paris 1949-50; and received his M.A. from Western Reserve University, 1952.

Henning has been affiliated with the Cleveland Museum of Art since 1951. He has served in the capacity of instructor, assistant curator, assistant to the director, curator of modern art, and presently, chief curator of modern art.

In addition to his present position as chief curator of modern art at the Cleveland Museum of Art, he has served as a member of the Art Advisory Panel to the IRS and is an adjunct professor of Art History at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland. He is a member of Society for Aesthetics, College Art Association, American Association of Museums, and the New Organization for the Visual Arts. Hennings reviews and articles have been published in such publications as "Art Journal," "Apollo," "Artnews," and "Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism." To his merit are such publications as "Fifty Years of Modern Art," published by The Press of Case Western Reserve University and the Cleveland Museum of Art, and "The Spirit of Surrealism," by Indiana University Press and the Cleveland Museum of Art.

Sponsored by the East Carolina University School of Medicine and School of Art, this new competition came about when Deans of the ECU School of Art and School of Medicine, Richard Laing and William Laupus, decided this would be an excellent way to build the permanent collection of the East Carolina Museum of Art. Most of the works recommended for purchase by Henning will be hung in the new ECU Medical School. Funds for purchase of the works will be provided by the ECU School of Medicine.

"This is a very strong show," said Henning. "There is such a variety of styles represented here. Some of the images are very subtle, some strong, and some extremely powerful." He said because he does not know the artists, he has to look at each piece of work and try to feel what the artist wanted to say or do. "I see humor in some of the works, irony, and some character-like impressions," he said. "Some of the impressions are very severe, while others are quite geometrical and many are purely abstract."

Prior to most juried exhibitions, Henning said artists send slides of their work before they send the real thing. "This serves as somewhat of a screening process," he said. "We can weed out those that would not qualify in a competition of this nature. He discussed how difficult it is to critique a slide of an artist's work because the images are often misleading. "The image you see on a slide sometimes appears smaller, larger, or is less or more severe than the work itself," Henning said. "The slide can flatter or can take away from the work."

Henning was impressed with the variety of works submitted. The real criteria for Henning's selection of a particular piece of work for competition is — whether or not he likes it.

tion. The national exhibition is co-sponsored by the East Carolina University School of Medicine and School of Art. (Reflector Photo By Leigh Coakley)

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Horse thieves and cattle rustlers have stolen off with increasing numbers of North Carolina livestock in recent months, and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham says he's going launch a posse to study the problem.

Graham announced a special committee Friday to study increasing thefts of horses, cattle and swine and urged owners to keep good identification records.

Although no figures are available, officials say horse thefts are rising and that many horses are being shipped on floating slaughterhouses to Europe, where their meat is considered a delicacy. They say cows are being slaughtered in pastures only yards from their owners' homes.

Agriculture specialists, crime control agents and Justice Department representatives will serve on Graham's committee, which plans a coordinated effort to brand and register all horses and cattle in the state.

The branding program grows out of an effort by the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety to number and register farm equipment, which also has become a target for thieves.

At least 12 counties in eastern North Carolina have suffered a surge in cattle and horse rustling in the past several months, said committee members, although no figures are available.

Final Shows To Be Given

GREENSBORO — The final four performances of "Rise and Fight Again!," the play that depicts the history of Guilford County 200 years ago, will be held during the coming week.

Performances will be at 8:15 p.m. at the Carolina Theater Performing Arts Center, 310 South Greene Street, Greensboro, on Wednesday through Saturday, March 11 through 14. Tickets are priced at $5 for adults and $3 for students and senior citizens.

The most recent figures show that in 1979, horses and other farm animals worth $463,109 were stolen from North Carolina farmers, up nearly $100,000 from the year before.

F. Carlyle Teague, spokesman for the N.C. Department of Agriculture, said officials believe thefts have increased since then, but he gave no precise figures.

E.B. Harris agrees that cattle rustling is on the rise. Harris, an auctioneer who raises cattle, said five calves were stolen from his barn last week while he was sleeping in his house less than 250 yards away.

"In the last 30 days, there have been 40 head of cattle stolen within 25 miles of my house," Harris said. The thieves who cut through his fence and drove a pickup truck into his barn were familiar with cattle operations, he said.

"Another cattleman done this, or someone who works for a cattleman," Harris said. "It was very professionally carried off."

"They're pretty brazen," said Paula M. Pickler, administrative assistant for the N.C. Cattleman's Association. "A lot of times, a farmer will find his cattle butchered right in the field." She said the thieves often take only choice cuts from the hindquarters.

The association is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of cattle rustlers, but hasn't paid any since beginning the award program in December, association officials said.

Branding and tattooing are not always effective because cattle are often butchered in the field or soon after they are stolen, Teague said.

Teague said some horses stolen from North Carolina may be routed through Tampa, Fla., and end up on a floating slaughterhouse bound for the palates of Europe. He said the animals are dressed and iced by the time the ship crosses the Atlantic.

Theatre Group Has Meeting

The Carolina Regional Theatre was elected president of the North Carolina Association of Professional Theatres (NCAPT) during the association's annual meeting held recently at Quail Roost Conference Center near Durham.

Other companies elected to office include "The Lost Colony," outdoor drama of Manteo, vice-president; North Carolina Shakespeare Festival of High Point; secretary; and "The Liberty Cart," outdoor drama of Kenansville, treasurer.

NCAPT is a membership organization comprised of the not-for-profit professional performing art companies based in the state. Founded in 1976, NCAPT was established to provide a central direction for unified promotion and development of the performing arts in North Carolina.

No Charges

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — No charges will be filed in connection with an out-of-control car that injured eight people as it rammed a crowd watching an exhibition of the Budweiser Clydesdale horses, Chapel Hill police said Friday.

District Attorney Wade Barber Jr. said a police investigation showed that Mildred Cheek Cox, 79, of Chapel Hill, the driver of the car, "had every intention of driving her car lawfully" in the Feb. 25 accident.

Barber said that when police an engineer hired by an insurance company tested Mrs. Cox's 1972 Buick, "they found that when the car was cranked and put into drive, it accelerated quickly."

Authorities are still concerned about possible civil litigation stemming from the accident, and Barber refused to give further details about the car.

Two of the children injured critically in the accident remained at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill Friday.

Christopher Kipatrick, 10, underwent surgery Friday and was listed in stable condition. Lance Badgett, 8, was listed in stable condition in the pediatric intensive care unit. Both are from Chapel Hill.

Heels Nip Terps, 61-60, For ACC Title

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — James Worthy, North Carolina's 6-foot-9 sophomore forward, said he was able to control his own mind — and when he did, he led the Tar Heels to their ninth Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament basketball championship Saturday night.

Worthy scored 19 points, and Jimmy Black hit a layup with 2:55 left in the game that snapped the seventh tie in the second half, propelling the Tar Heels to a 61-60 victory over Maryland in the ACC tournament's title game.

"My main problem has been concentrating mentally," said Worthy, who was held to eight points in the Tar Heels' 69-54 first-round victory over North Carolina State and scored just 12 when North Carolina earned a berth in the title game Friday night with a 58-57 victory over Wake Forest.

"If I can keep my mind in the game and keep myself going mentally, I'm okay," Worthy said.

Worthy was in the game from the start Saturday night. He hit on a variety of inside shots, but mostly it was that short jump hook he has developed that made him so effective. Worthy hit on eight of 14 shots from the field and grabbed a team-leading eight rebounds to offset the 11-rebound performance of Maryland center Buck Williams.

It was North Carolina Coach Dean Smith's ninth ACC playoff title and third in the past five years, and he said that now he was looking forward to the NCAA playoffs.

"We want to get the monkey off our back and win the first game of the NCAA," said Smith, whose team was eliminated by Texas A&M in the second round of the Midwest regionals last year.

"We are very happy to have won the 1981 league championship, but Virginia to me is the regular season champion and that's harder to do," Smith said. "Tonight, I thought we were very impressive and played a very good basketball game. I give credit to Maryland. They never gave up."

Williams chalked up the loss to fate. "We never seem to have much luck in this tournament," Williams said of a team that has won the ACC playoffs only once, in 1958. "Maybe next year."

With the score tied at 54, Black stole a pass, dribbled the length of the court and hit a layup with 2:55 left. Al Wood's offensive rebound and layup made it 58-54 with 1:57 to play, and after Maryland turned the ball over on a traveling call on Albert King, Worthy hit one of two free throws to give the Tar Heels a five-point lead, 59-54, with 1:25 to play.

A pair of foul shots by Maryland's Buck Williams cut the North Carolina lead to three with 1:14 to play, but with a chance to pull within one, a shot by Maryland's Greg Manning was blocked by Wood.

With 32 seconds left, Wood hit a stuff shot that sealed Maryland's fate.

Ernest Graham, who scored 27 points for Maryland, got the Terps within one, representing the game's final score, with a pair of baskets in the last 22 seconds. The final basket came on an offensive rebound and layup with five seconds to go.

After Maryland called time, Mike Pepper inbounded from under the Terrapins' basket to Black, who ran out the clock as Tar Heels fans swarmed onto the court to congratulate their heroes.

Perkins, a freshman who was pressed into a starting role midway through the season when Keith Budko was injured, scored 13 points for the 12th-ranked Tar Heels and Wood had 14.

After the game, Perkins was named as the tournament's most valuable player and was the first to be hoisted on his teammates' shoulders and began cutting down the net.

For 20th-ranked Maryland, it was the Terps' second ACC final disappointment in two years. The Terps lost the 1980 tournament to Duke, 73-72.

The game contained another disappointment for the Terrapins, who played in this tournament only a short distance from their home in College Park. Albert King needed only 15 points to become Maryland's all-time leading scorer, ahead of John Lucas. But King was held to 10, giving him 2,011 in his career.

King undoubtedly will break the mark in either the NCAA or NIT tournaments, but many of his faithful fans will miss sharing it with him.

Maryland, 20-9, led by four points at the half, 36-32. But North Carolina, 25-7, scored six straight points early in the second half, capped by a hook shot by Perkins that gave the Tar Heels a 42-40 lead with 16:46 to play.

Following that lead, there were seven ties before North Carolina pulled away. Maryland led by as many as eight, 34-26, on a jump shot by Graham with 2:23 left in the first half. However, North Carolina pulled within four points at intermission.

Number One Oregon State Is Stunned By Arizona State

By BOB BAUM
Associated Press Writer

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) Center Steve Johnson says his Oregon State basketball team's 87-67 loss to No. 5-ranked Arizona State Saturday "meant nothing really."

Don't try to get the Sun Devils to believe that. Arizona State, led by sharpshooting guard Byron Scott, ripped open a 20-point lead in the first half as Johnson spent all but three minutes on the bench in foul trouble.

"It happens," Johnson said of the loss that spoiled the Beavers' bid for an unbeaten regular season. "Now the pressure is off. Now we can go about our business."

The No. 1-ranked Beavers shot an icy 29 percent in the first half and wound up hitting just 43 percent of their field goal tries. Arizona State sank 64 percent from the field, 77 percent in the first half.

"It's the first time we've ever beaten a No. 1-ranked team so it has to be our biggest," said Arizona State Coach Ned Wulk. "We forced them to take some shots they didn't want and we gave them shots that normally would fall. They just had a horrendous shooting night."

"Yes, we deserve some more recognition now," said Scott, who hit 11 of 14 shots. "We beat them by 20 on their home floor."

Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller was upset with calls from the Pacific 10 Conference officials that put Johnson in foul trouble early.

"We won't have Pac-10 officials anymore and I think Steve will appreciate that," Miller said.

"I'm just glad I don't have to deal with Pac-10 officials anymore," Johnson said. "The loss meant nothing, really. The next loss would mean something. That means you're all through."

Pac-10 officials won't officiate NCAA playoff games involving Pac-10 teams.

Scott drilled 17 of his game-high 25 points in the first half.

Oregon State, which clinched the Pac-10 title with a victory over Arizona Thursday night, finished at 17-1 in the conference and 26-1 overall. Arizona State finished the regular season at 16-2 in the Pac-10 and 24-3 for the season.

Oregon State held a 6-4 lead in the opening minutes before everything collapsed for the Beavers. The usually sharpshooting Beavers didn't score for the next 6:20 as the Sun Devils opened up an 18-6 margin.

It got worse for the Beavers after that as Scott bombed away from outside and 7-foot Alton Lister dominated play inside.

Oregon State pulled to within 12 points, 65-53, on three straight baskets by Ray Blume with 6:49 to play. But center Steve Johnson fouled out a minute later and the Beavers' comeback hopes were dead.

The Sun Devils opened a 23-point lead late in the first half and still were up by 20, 40-20, at halftime. Arizona State hit 17 of 22 shots in the first half while the Beavers were 7 of 24.

Sam Williams added 19 points, including eight crucial free throws in the second half, for the Sun Devils.

Johnson paced Oregon State with 18, while Lester Conner added 13 and Blume 12.

Mississippi Wins In SEC

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Elston Turner scored eight points within a three-minute span as Mississippi erased a seven-point deficit in the final nine minutes and downed Georgia 66-62 Saturday night in the Southeastern Conference basketball tournament championship game.

The Rebels, earning a berth in the NCAA tournament for the first time in the school's history, had trailed by 13 points in the first half but stayed with a deliberate style offense and a tenacious defense that overcame the Bulldogs lead.

Wilder Hurls 2-0 Victory For Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Despite temperatures in the 40's and a wind chill factor that made it a good deal colder, East Carolina's Bill Wilder appeared in mid-season form Saturday afternoon as he hurled a 2-0 victory for the Pirates over N.C. State.

Wilder, the ace of the staff last year, allowed only three hits, all singles, and struck out 12 batters as he hurled an outstanding game.

In return, the Pirates played flawless ball behind him, and stroked seven hits off State's Dan Plesac, a number two draft choice of the St. Louis Cardinals last summer.

East Carolina drove in single runs in the fourth and sixth innings, and missed out on a couple of other threats. State, which had several threats, saw all of them go by the board as Wilder bore down after getting in trouble with four walks.

State also took advantage of speed on the basepaths, stealing five bases in six attempts.

But it was Wilder's day to be triumphant.

phant.

"This was a big win for us, against State, and it being our first game," Wilder said. "I was pleased that I got to pitch the whole game. I knew that they had a couple of people who could hit the ball well, and both of them got a couple of good shots off me that I hung up there for them." Wilder referred to two long shots, both foul, by Louie Meadows and Chuckie Canady.

"I tried to keep 'em guessing, keeping it low and away or low and inside. It helps too when you've got a good team behind you."

Wilder said all of his pitches worked well despite the gusty wind. "The only one I really had trouble with was my change-up. I only got it in there once."

Coach Hal Baird had lots of praise for the junior righthander. "It was vintage Bill Wilder," Baird said. "They got runners on base and Bill made awfully good pitches when he had to, a fine game."

"I'm tickled pink about the game. Our defense played well. But we always seem to look good when we get good pitching."

While Baird didn't expect to have a power-hitting team, he was pleased with the way the club stroked the ball, striking out only once. "We kept the ball in play well, and against their infield, which played well."

"Winning this first one is good for us, especially against N.C. State," Baird added.

State did offer several threats. In the first, second and fifth innings, they left men stranded on third. Another was left standing at second in the ninth. State's best chance, however came in the fourth, when the first two batters reached, only to watch as Wilder struck out the next three batters to retire the side.

East Carolina, after a first inning threat that saw Kelly Robinette die at third, didn't threaten again until the fourth—but this time it paid off.

John Hallow led off with a single up the middle and was sacrificed to second. Then, with two away, Mike Sage singled to center, scoring Hallow for a 1-0 lead.

The other run came in the sixth. Mike Sorrell opened the inning with a single to left, just off the glove of shortstop Mike Sprouse, who recorded seven assists. Hallow was hit by a pitch, and with one down, Todd Hendley singled to center, scoring Sorrell with the final run of the game.

"We had a chance to look at some people today, and I hope we get another chance tomorrow (Sunday)," Baird said.

The Pirates are scheduled to play host to William & Mary today at 2 p.m. The two meet again on Monday at 3 p.m.

Rose Crushes Kinston In Opener, 25-1

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Either Greenville Rose's baseball team is very, very, very good or Kinston's is very, very, very bad. The Rampants looked awesome and the Vikings woeome Saturday afternoon.

Rose, opening its 1981 campaign looking in midseason form, banged out 21 hits and made just two errors. Kinston, looking like a team that had just assembled for its first practice, had just three hits and made 11 errors.

When the Rampants and Vikings finally took shelter from the mid-40 degree temperatures made to feel 20 degrees colder by a knife-like wind, Rose had demolished Kinston, 25-1, yesterday in Guy Smith Stadium.

"This is a good way to start the season," Greenville Rose coach Ronald Vincent said. "Obviously, we're not that good and they're not that bad. When we get some better competition we'll get a better indication of how good we are and what we need to work on."

If Saturday was any indication — and it may not have been — the Rampants have a stockpile of hitting talent. But as impressive as the hitting was, the pitching of Roger Williams and Mark Douglas was just as impressive and could prove to be more dependable as the season goes along.

Williams, who started on the mound, struck out the first three batters he faced. When he was relieved in the fourth by Douglas, Williams had struck out six, walked two and yielded just one hit.

Douglas was just as hard on the Vikings: In three innings, the right-hander gave up just one hit, struck out six and walked one.

"Our pitching was very good today," Vincent said. "We had planned to try to let Roger go four innings and then bring Gordon in and pitch three. We intend to do that for the next few games."

Along with their pitching, both hit the ball well — as did nearly all the Rampants.

Catcher Emmett Walsh led the 21-hit parade with three hits, including a double. Seven other Rampants had two hits each: Williams, Douglas, Mont Carter, Mitch Brann, Kenny Barnes, Crowell Pope and Paul MacMillan.

MacMillan, Williams and Scott Galloway had three RBIs each for Rose. Barnes and reserve shortstop Keith Phillips had two RBIs apiece.

It was that hitting attack that helped the Rampants score six runs in the first inning and seven in the second and put the game away. Rose added two runs in the third and five runs in both the fourth and sixth.

The Rampants wasted little time in scoring their first run in the new season. In their first at bat in 1981, the Rampants sent 10 men to the plate to face Kinston starter Derrick Johnson.

Carter led off with a single down the third base line and Mark Douglas reached on an error by Kinston rightfielder Jeff Jenkins. Carter subsequently scored on Brann's double.

A single by Walsh brought Douglas home from third and Williams then tripled to score both Brann and Walsh. Barnes singled home Williams and later scored on Pope's triple. Pope scored Rose's sixth and final run of the inning on Galloway's foul fly to the third baseman.

The Vikings used their second of four pitchers in the second inning but had no better success than in the first. Eleven players went to the plate in the second and the Rampants came away with seven runs.

The inning was keyed by Walsh's double and consecutive RBI-producing singles by Williams, Barnes, Pope, Galloway, MacMillan and Carter.

A third Viking pitcher, Greg May, entered to retire the side but then gave up two runs in the third and five runs in the fourth. All seven runs were unearned.

Rose closed out its scoring in the sixth with a five-run outburst, keyed by Phillips single that brought home two runs and Warren's triple.

Appropriately enough, the game ended when Tony Grady, who doubled and moved to third on a wild pitch, was got caught straying too far off base and was tagged out after a rundown.

Greenville Rose travels to D.H. Conley Tuesday, a game that Vincent said would give him a better indication of his club's talent.

Youth Didn't Stop Redskin Charge

First Of A Series

ROBERSONVILLE — The uniforms distributed and the final cuts made, Roanoke basketball coach Clarence Atkinson studied a list of players that included just one returning starter as his Redskins readied for their opener against Ayden-Grifton.

Four months and 27 basketball battles later, Atkinson has molded his young group of Redskins into a quick, ball-hawking, well-disciplined club which stands just three games away from the state 3-A championship — the closest ever to a state title for the Robersonville school.

The Redskins, 23-4 following their 63-52 victory over North Pitt in the District I 3-A finals, face Durham Jordan Friday (8:30 p.m.) in Wilson in the Eastern Regionals.

The winner will play the survivor of the West Carteret-Burlington Cummings matchup Saturday (8:30) for the regional championship and the right to travel to Greensboro for the state title game.

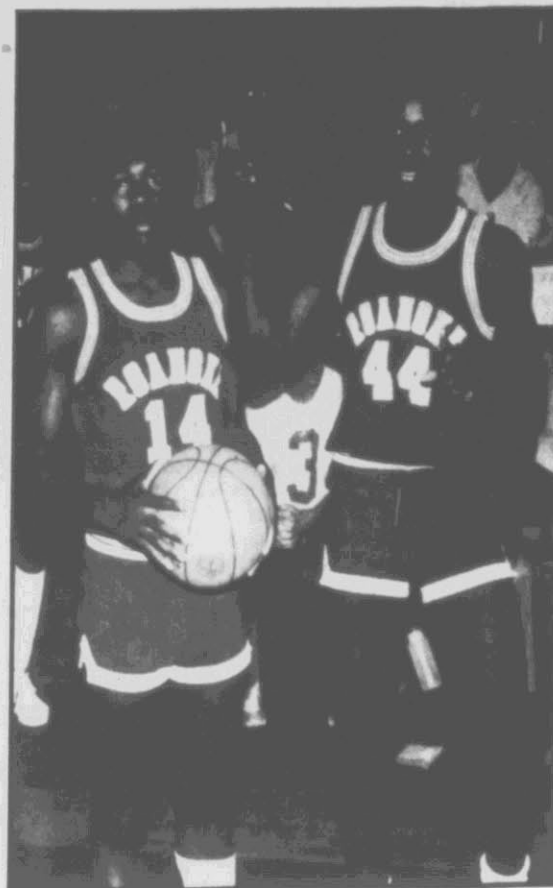

Until this year the Redskins had never advanced past the district finals and when Atkinson replaced Henry Land as head coach this season, visions of a state championship were not dancing in his head.

With only Maurice Chance, a 6-1½ all-conference forward, returning off a 14-14 club, Atkinson had more pressing concerns.

"One of the hardest things for me to do was try to get growth from our jv program up to the varsity," Atkinson said. "Basically, our team this year came from the jv program."

The young Redskins matured quickly, thanks in part to a team-oriented system that did not put too much pressure on any one individual.

"We tried to stress the team concept," Atkinson said. "We've tried to get each player to recognize his strengths and weaknesses. When they grow older they don't always see, or don't always want to see, their weaknesses."

District Champs

"We wanted to utilize each player to the best of our system, to be part of the team concept."

The system has worked. Nine players have led the Redskins in scoring at least once this season. Still, the key to Roanoke's success has been Chance.

Voted the district tournament's most valuable player, Chance leads the Redskins in scoring with a 15.1 average and is second in rebounding with an 7.5 average.

"Our team is centered on the leadership of Maurice Chance," Atkinson said. "As Maurice goes, so goes our team."

Chance has had help, however. Ricky Highsmith, a 6-4 sophomore center, is averaging 11.8 points a game and is the Redskins' leading rebounder at 7.8 a contest.

Angelo Spruill, a 6-1 junior guard, is the third Redskin scoring in double figures, averaging 10.5 points a game. Michael Neal, a 6-4½ junior forward, averages 5.5 points and 5.7 rebounds a game while point-guard Jeremiah Outerbridge averages just 2.5 points and 3.0 rebounds a game.

Despite scoring 19 points in the district finals and being voted to the all-tournament team, reserve point-guard Michael Wilson will not start

Friday. Instead, Wilson, who is averaging 7.0 points and 2.0 rebounds a game, will likely be the first man off the bench, a bench that has served Atkinson well this season.

"We haven't got consistent play from the bench but we have got good play from it," Atkinson said. "X may do it one night and Y may do it the next time. That's one of our strong points, a team can't concentrate on any one of our players or someone else will hurt you."

Another of the Redskins' strong suits is defense. Playing a variety of defenses, from a man-to-man to a 3-2 and 1-3-1 zone, the Redskins have held their opponents to 44.1 points a game while scoring an average of 52.3 a game.

It is that defense that has helped the Redskins win 23 of their 27 games this season, including a 14-2 mark that tied them with Tarboro for the Northeastern championship.

The Redskins won their first eight contests before losing back-to-back games to Williamston (38-37) and Tarboro (57-55). Then, after winning four more games, the Redskins were upset by Ahoskie (40-39).

The Redskins did not lose again until the semifinals of the conference tournament, where they were beaten by Edenton (62-55). Thus, Roanoke lost four games by a total 10 points. Not bad for a club that returned one starter.

"We've grown up a lot this season," Atkinson said. "We've grown up a lot during the season and the kids believe in themselves now."

"Losing in the conference tournament hurt us, but I think the kids matured quickly in the districts and that'll help us. We're much more experienced now."

Brigham Young Upsets Utah

PROVO, Utah (AP) — "If we're not one of the top 48 teams in the country, I'd like to see what's better," said Brigham Young Coach Frank Arnold after his 18th-ranked Cougars blew out No. 9 Utah 95-76 Saturday in a regionally televised Western Athletic Conference basketball game.

The loss dropped Utah, 24-4 overall, into a tie with No. 19 Wyoming for the WAC title. Both teams finished 13-3 in the WAC, but Utah earned the guaranteed championship berth in the 48-team NCAA tournament by a halftime coin toss Saturday. BYU, 22-6 and 12-4 in the conference, finished third in the WAC.

"I think all three will go to the NCAA tourney," said a disappointed Utah Coach Jerry Pimm. "It's kind of a sorry consolation for us to earn the championship bracket through a coin toss — but it's sure better than losing it that way. I just can't believe Utah, Wyoming and BYU aren't three of the best 48 in the country."

"I definitely think we'll go, despite the third-place finish," said Arnold. "Our four conference losses were by a total of nine points and they were all on the road. Nobody's going to tell me we're not as good as Utah or Wyoming."

"Going into today's game, there were only a dozen teams in the country that won more games than we have and only 18 have lost less. Only North Carolina and Notre Dame have played more top teams," Arnold said.

Danny Ainge scored a game-high 35 points as BYU erased a five-point halftime deficit with a furious second-half rally.

"With seven minutes left, we still only needed a basket or two and a couple of free throws to be in the game," said Pimm. "But we didn't knock it in anyplace and you can't stay in games that way. We shot 68 percent from the field in the first half and only 29 percent for the second half and our free throw shooting was just as terrible."

BYU, which trailed going into the second half 46-41, battled back on the strength of Ainge's ball handling and floor leadership.

Utah took a quick 10-0 lead and BYU did not score until 2:28 into the game. The Cougars came back to within 15-12, and Timo Saarelainen scored to close the margin to 22-20 with 11:12 left in the half.

That was as close as BYU could come in the half. After Ainge hit for a 24-22 margin, the Utes took off again and pulled out to a 34-24 lead.

BYU managed to close within three points just before the half, but Utah ran out the last 2:26 and the Utes' Tom Chambers scored with four seconds left for the halftime lead.

BYU roared back in the second half and finally tied it with 15 minutes remaining at 53-all. Fred Roberts, who finished with 21 points, gave the Cougars their first lead at 55-53, with 14:45 remaining.

The game was tied again at 59-all, but BYU went on a 30-11 scoring spree over the next 10 minutes to put the game away.

Chambers was the leading scorer for Utah with 27 points and 10 rebounds.

Illinois Rolls By Wildcats

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Mark Smith scored 24 points and Eddie Johnson added 16 Saturday to lead 16th-ranked Illinois to a 98-76 victory over Northwestern in a Big Ten season finale.

Illinois closed with a 20-7 record overall and a 12-6 mark for a third-place finish in the Big Ten. Northwestern finished last with a 3-15 conference mark, and 9-18 on the season.

It marked the first time since 1908 that an Illinois basketball team had won 20 regular season games and gave the Illini their first first-division finish in the Big Ten since 1973, when they tied for third place.

Illinois took a quick 6-0 lead, but the Wildcats tied it twice before Smith put Illinois back ahead 12-10 as the Illini out-scored Northwestern 15-3 for a 25-13 advantage.

With Smith, Johnson and Perry Range scoring, the Illini doubled the score at 34-17 and finally settled for a 47-33 halftime lead. John Egan and Jim Stack scored eight of Northwestern's final 10 points in the first half.

Stack, who led Northwestern with 18 points, scored to open the second half and pulled the Wildcats within 12 points. But that was as close as Northwestern could get in the second half.

Range added 13 points for the Illini and Rod Roberson scored 16 for Northwestern.

Burroughs Dealt By Braves To Seattle

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The long-discussed Jeff Burroughs trade was completed Saturday when the Seattle Mariners acquired the American League's most valuable player of 1974 from the Atlanta Braves for minor league pitcher Carlos Diaz.

The trade had been on the burner since baseball's major league winter meetings in December in Texas.

To get Burroughs, 30, the American League Mariners had to assume a $400,000 loan Burroughs had with the Braves. The loan was what was holding up the deal.

"We more or less have assumed Atlanta's position in every respect on the loan that Jeff has," said Mariner President Dan O'Brien. "It's a clean break from the Braves as far as he's concerned."

Burroughs, an off-season resident of Long Beach, Calif., did not report to the Braves' spring training camp this year because of the pending deal. The Mariners are training here.

He was expected to arrive in Tempe from California Sunday and probably will work out with the Mariners Monday.

Burroughs has been with Washington, Texas and Atlanta in his 11-year major league career. He has eight full seasons in the big leagues. He was with the Texas Rangers when he was the AL's MVP.

He spent the past four seasons with the Braves, batting .263 with 13 home runs and 51 RBI in 99 games last year. He has 196 homers and 801 RBI in his career in the big leagues.

Burroughs is expected to play left or right field in Seattle.

His addition means the Mariners, who had the worst record in the major leagues at 59-103 last season, have added two power hitters since 1980.

They got designated hitter Richie Zisk in a trade with Texas in December. Zisk hit 19 homers and had 77 RBI in Texas last season.

Asked what numbers he thought Burroughs was capable of producing in the smallish confines of the Kingdome, where the Mariners play their home games, O'Brien said, "I wouldn't want to project something like that. But his potential is something you can really get excited about."

Lady Pirates Finish Third In Tournament

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — East Carolina's softball team took third place Saturday in the 16-team Florida Invitational Tournament. The Pirates bowed out of the double-elimination tournament after losing to host Florida in the semifinals.

ECU rightfielder Cynthia Shepard sparked the Lady Pirates' 5-2 tournament by going 13 for 23 at the plate. She had four home runs, five doubles and 11 RBIs.

After being bumped into the losers' bracket Friday, ECU strung together four wins and played Florida for the right to advance to the tournament finals against unbeaten Florida State. The Seminoles had beaten ECU, 9-2, in the Lady Pirates' second game.

Florida, limiting ECU to seven singles, pounded the Lady Pirates, 13-1, and brought freshman pitcher Jeannette Roth's four-game unbeaten streak to an abrupt end.

ECU, now 5-2 this season, opened the day with a 7-1 romp over Jacksonville. Shepard went two for four with a home run and freshman Melody Ham, a former high school star at Greene Central, had three hits as ECU rapped out 17 hits to the Dolphins' four.

Shepard and Shirley Brown had two doubles apiece as the Lady Pirates dismantled Florida A&M, 17-3, later in the day. ECU exploded for 13 runs in the fourth inning to erase a 2-0 deficit. Shepard and Ginger Rothermel were three for four to led the 19-hit attack.

Another Shepard home run beat South Florida, 2-1. The Brahmas eliminated North Carolina from the field earlier Saturday, 5-4. Miltz Davis, Rothermel and Janis Parlon each had two hits for ECU.

Pam Pack Tops Conley By 6-2

WASHINGTON — Washington High School rallied for five runs in the fifth inning to take a 6-2 victory over D.H. Conley Saturday in the opening game for both teams.

Conley's three pitchers gave up only two hits to the Pam Pack, but committed four errors and gave up two bases-loaded walks.

Washington scored first, getting a run in the second. Van Parker walked and moved to third when Mike Askew's sacrifice bunt was misplayed. Jim Landern then grounded out, scoring Parker.

In the third, Conley came back to tie it up. Keith Mills singled and stole second. Roy Lassiter reached on an error and Joey Joyner walked, loading the bases. Todd Rouse then singled to score Mills.

The Vikings took a 2-1 lead in the top of the fifth. Mills walked and was sacrificed up. He scored on a double by Ken Holland.

But Washington then came up with five runs in the bottom of the frame to win it. Ted Eubanks led off with a single and Lonnie Harris' swinging bunt was overthrown at first. Seth Edwards reached on a single that loaded the bases. Mike Hooks and Parker both walked, forcing in two runs. Askew reached on another Conley error, scoring Edwards and Hooks. Landern finished it off with an infield grounder that scored Parker with the sixth Pam Pack run.

Neither team had any one to get more than one hit.

Mile Relay Qualifies

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. — East Carolina's mile relay team qualified for the Nationals Saturday at the Last Chance Invitational, finishing second to N.C. State with a time of 3:13.94.

The Pirates finished third in the nation last year in the nationals and hope to repeat as national finalists again this season. All-America Carlton Bell anchored the Pirate relay team with a 47.9 leg to bring ECU home a half-second ahead of North Carolina.

Freshman Craig Rainey led off with a 48.08 quarter, followed by freshman Ray Dickerson (48.09) and sophomore Tim Cephus (48.00).

The indoor nationals will be held Friday and Saturday in Detroit, Michigan.

Close Defense

Louisville Is Metro Champ

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville Coach Denny Crum said that he did what he had to do to defeat Cincinnati 42-31 in the championship game of the Metro Conference basketball tournament Saturday, even though he didn't like what he did.

"I don't like this. The spectators don't like this. It's just not good entertainment," Crum said after his defending NCAA champions gained a berth in this year's playoffs.

Crum was referring to a stall that he ordered his team into early in the second half in an effort to pull Cincinnati out of a zone defense.

Louisville, clinging to a six-point lead, held the ball for nearly 11 minutes before Cincinnati came out of the zone, but it was too late and Louisville won for the 15th straight time and raised its season record to 21-8.

"It's not the kind of win I like, but a win is a win," Crum said. "I did what I had to do to win."

"We went into the delay so we wouldn't have to attack the zone," Crum said. "We weren't playing that well anyway and to let the other team dictate the game is foolish."

Both Crum and Cincinnati Coach Ed Badger said this type of game points out the need for a 30-second shot clock in college basketball.

Derek Smith and Lancaster Gordon scored all but two of Louisville's second-half points.

Smith finished with a game-high 15 points and Gordon added 10 in the regionally televised contest.

Dwight Jones led Cincinnati, which finished 16-13, with 13 points as Cincinnati scored its fewest points in a game since the 1945-46 season. Cincinnati also set a record for fewest points by a team in a Metro Conference tournament game.

Perry Set For First Action

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Veteran pitchers Phil Niekro and Gaylord Perry and rookie Dan Morogello will take the mound Tuesday when the Atlanta Braves open the exhibition baseball season against the Montreal Expos. Manager Bobby Cox announced Saturday.

Mayer Battles Into Net Finals

DENVER (AP) — No. 1 seed Gene Mayer fought his way to a finals berth in the $125,000 United Bank Tennis Classic, overcoming second-year pro Mel Purcell 3-6, 6-3, 6-2 Saturday.

In the other semifinals, No. 3 seed John Sadri faced No. 6 seed Fritz Buehning at night. In doubles semifinals, Andrew Pattison and Butch Walts were matched with Steve Krullevitz and Terry Moor, and Purcell teamed with Dick Stockton against Tim Gullikson and Bernie Mitton.

Mayer, the defending champion at this Volvo Grand Prix tour stop, built a 3-2 lead in the opening set, but lost his service to Purcell in the sixth game.

victories are more than the rest of the Braves staff combined.

Morogello was 7 years old when Perry won his first major league game in 1962.

Niekro has won 233 games as a Brave, while Perry has compiled 289 victories with four teams — San Francisco, Cleveland, Texas and the New York Yankees.

Perry signed with the Braves as a free agent during the off-season, and only needs 11 victories to become the 15th pitcher to achieve 300 career victories.

"It's hard not to think about getting 300 wins, because the writers won't let me forget it," Perry said. "That is the first thing that comes up in an interview, but I look forward to it."

Pirate Swimmers Finish Sixth In Easterns

CLEVELAND, Ohio — East Carolina's University's Pirates dropped from fifth into sixth place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Championships held at Cleveland State during the final events Saturday. The Pirates had been in fifth place going into the final day of competition. "A sixth place finish is not at all bad considering the quality of the competition," ECU Coach Ray Scharf said. A total of 16 teams participated.

Pittsburgh, scoring 541 points, won the event, followed by West Virginia with 503. Maryland finished third with 395, while Penn State had 376, and Syracuse had 255. East Carolina had 243.

"The difference in fifth and sixth place was that they had divers," Scharf said.

Perry Newman set a new varsity record in the 200-yard butterfly, finishing fifth in 1:53.49. Also in the same event, Kevin Richards set a new freshman mark, finishing ninth in 1:54.87.

Matt McDonald finished seventh in the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:11.4. Doug Nieman clocked in ninth in the 200-yard backstroke, with a time of 1:57.45.

In the 100-yard freestyle, Jack Clowar finished 16th with a time of 47.2.

Jan Wiklund recorded a time of 16:04.98 to finish fourth in the 1,650-yard freestyle. The 400-yard freestyle relay team finished tenth in 3:11.5.

The men's team will have several members participating in the NCAA tournament to be held at the University of Texas, March 25-28.

East Carolina's women will compete in the AIAW Division II nationals at Northern Michigan on March 12-14.

Wisconsin Nips Gophers In OT

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin forward Claude Gregory hadn't been having one of his better afternoons, and he said he was looking for an open man closer to the basket as the final seconds in overtime ticked away Saturday.

But when he couldn't find one, he let fly with an 18-foot shot from the right corner that went through with four seconds left in the extra period, giving the Badgers a 60-58 Big Ten basketball upset victory over Minnesota.

"There was no one else to pass to, so I just took it, man," said Gregory, who finished with 17 points. "I thought I was fouled after the shot, but it didn't make any difference."

The defeat, leaving Minnesota 9-9 in the conference and 17-10 for the season, virtually dashed any hopes that the Gophers might get an NCAA tournament bid.

Wisconsin, having escaped the Big Ten cellar by beating Northwestern 60-57 here Thursday night, finished the conference race with a 5-13 mark, and is 11-15 for the season going into Tuesday's finale against Marquette.

Gregory, a 6-foot-8 senior forward averaging 20.2 points a game coming into Saturday's game, had only 13 through the end of regulation time. Two of those came on a basket with 3:20 left that tied the score at 54-all, where it stayed until time ran out.

But any slack left by Gregory's inability to find the range was taken up by Larry Petty, the 6-foot-9 senior center who scored a career-high 31 points, including the first basket of the overtime.

Many of his baskets came over Minnesota's 7-foot-1 Randy Brewer.

"His height didn't bother me," said Petty, who held the Gopher center to 16 points and outrebounded him 14 to four. "I just kept thinking, 'Stay low and go for the basket.'"

"I'm glad he had an outstanding game," Gregory said of Petty. "I was having a horrendous shooting game."

"We're playing with emotion now," said Wisconsin Coach Bill Colfield, whose teams have traditionally done well near the end of the season. "Emotion can help you in certain games, but it won't make up for certain weaknesses over an entire season."

Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher and his players spent little time in the locker room after the game was over, hurrying to their bus.

After Gregory's basket tied the score at 54, Minnesota stalled until 1:20 remained on the clock, when Gary Holmes missed a jumper and Wisconsin got control of the ball.

UTC Tops Apps In Finals

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Tennessee-Chattanooga's Moccasins — who won the NCAA basketball tournament as Southern Conference champions, and Coach Murray Arnold says "the important thing about this club is the belief that we could play in tough times."

Junior guard Nick Morken scored 24 points to lead the Moccasins, 21-8, to a 59-55 victory Saturday over Appalachian State's Mountaineers in the title game of the conference tournament.

At one point in the season, the Moccasins — who won the NCAA Division II championship just three years ago — were 12-7, and Arnold said "anybody who would have said we would be 21-8 now would not have been believed."

"But we have 11 kids who believed it. That's why we are where we are today. Appalachian has a great club. It would be shame if they are not playing in the NCAA or the NIT next week."

Arnold said Morken "got almost every big point for us. He always gets the ball to the people we want to have it. And today he had the other stats to go with that."

The Moccasins outrebounded Appalachian State 20-8 in the first half and 32-21 for the game.

"After seeing Chattanooga against Western Carolina, I knew we had to fight on the boards or we would get killed. Chattanooga is a very good defensive basketball team," said Mountaineer Coach Bobby Cremins.

"We got off to a bad start but came back and almost pulled off another miracle. Morken was just outstanding. The thing that makes him great is what he has between the ears," Cremins said.

The Moccasins opened the scoring with a field goal by Eric Smith and never were caught as James Jones added 10 points for UTC.

After building a 34-25 halftime lead, the Moccasins opened the gap to 12 points twice in the second half.

The Mountaineers, led by Preston Gant, Kelvin McMillian and Charles Payton, cut the gap to two points, the last time at 57-55 with 1½ minutes left.

But Morken, voted the tournament's most valuable player, hit two clinching free throws for the Moccasins with one second left. Just one second earlier, Morken blocked a field goal try by the Mountaineers' John Fitch.

Payton, a junior center voted the conference player of the year, had 21 points for the Mountaineers, who finished 20-9. He got 15 of his points in the second half.

Indiana Captures Big 10 Title As Spartans Fall

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Senior center Ray Tolbert and junior forward Landon Turner combined for 33 points as 14th-ranked Indiana won its second consecutive Big Ten basketball title, burying Michigan State 69-48 Saturday night.

Bobby Knight's Hoosiers finished their season at 14-4 in league play, one game ahead of second-place Iowa. Indiana was 21-9 for the season, while the Spartans slipped to 7-11 and 13-14.

After yielding the lead to Michigan State for five minutes midway through the first half, the Hoosiers rallied, hitting nine of their last 10 shots from the field.

Indiana outscored the Spartans 10-4 in the last four minutes of the first half to take a 34-26 lead at intermission.

The Hoosiers opened the second half by outscoring the Spartans 10-4 in the first six minutes to increase their margin to 44-30. Michigan State was unable to close the gap, falling into foul trouble quickly after the Hoosiers went into their four corners offense.

Jay Vincent, who hit seven of 10 from the floor in the first half, lead the Spartans with 20 points. Ben Tower added 14 for the Spartans.

Tolbert scored 17 for the Hoosiers, while Turner had 16 and Isiah Thomas added 14.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Western Kentucky survived a second-half rally by Murray State, regained the lead and, behind Percy White's 18 points, defeated the Racers 71-67 to win the Ohio Valley Conference basketball tournament Saturday night and a bid to the NCAA playoffs.

Western had led at halftime 38-35 after leading by as much as 11 points in the first half.

But Murray, sparked by a game-high 21 points from All-Conference guard Lamont Sleet of Eminence, Ky., wasn't through.

The Racers took the lead 39-38 with 17:55 to play and the lead changed before Murray seemed to take firm control at 61-56 with 6:27 to go.

Western rallied and regained command 68-67 at 2:29 on a free throw by All-Conference center Craig McCormick.

McCormick was bottled up and held without a field goal, but scored seven points from the free throw line, three of them on technicals called on Murray State Coach Ron Greene.

White's 18 points was high for Western, followed by 10 from Mike Reese. Jerry Smith added 17 for Murray.

Pennsylvania 76

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — George Noon and Dave Lardner each scored 14 points as Pennsylvania held off a furious Columbia rally and defeated the Lions 76-71 in Ivy League college basketball Saturday.

Penn is now 13-1 in a horse race for the Ivy crown with Princeton, which met Cornell Saturday.

James Madison Tops Richmond

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — Steve Blackmon and Linton Townes combined for 39 points and keyed a 10-0 first-half spurt that sent James Madison in front for good and the Dukes went on to a 69-60 victory over Richmond's Spiders Saturday night to claim the ECAC South basketball title.

The triumph gave the Dukes, 20-8, an NCAA tournament berth after only four years in Division I competition.

Trailing 16-13 with 9:37 to go in the first half, James Madison got four points each from Blackmon and Townes as the Dukes ran off 10 straight points in the next 2:47 to take a 23-16 lead. The Spiders, 15-14, never got closer than four points after that.

Blackmon finished with 21 points and Townes added 18 points and grabbed a game-high 12 rebounds. Charles Fisher, who had only two points before intermission, scored 10 in the second half and wound up with 12.

Mike Perry, who had only four points in the first half because of foul trouble, finished with 17 to lead the Spiders. Jeff Pehl and John Schweitz had 14 each.

Lopez Rolls Out To 4-Shot Lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton fired a course-record 68 to take a four-stroke lead over Myra Van Hoose after Saturday's third round of the $125,000 Arizona Copper Classic Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Lopez-Melton, who has led throughout the tourney, takes a 210 total into Sunday's final round.

Van Hoose, the 1989 LPGA Rookie of the Year, shot a 70 Saturday to overtake Friday's second-place finisher, Pat Bradley.

Bradley had a round of 72 Saturday to slip into third place with a 215 total.

Patty Hayes is alone in fourth at 217 — seven strokes behind Lopez-Melton.

Three players are tied for fifth — Alice Ritzmen, Amy Alcott and Alice Miller — with even-par 219s.

Lopez-Melton made six birdie putts Saturday, but said she had problems with her driving. That fact gave Van Hoose some optimism heading into the final round.

"Nancy can be caught," said Van Hoose. "If I can catch my putts, it's possible."

Lopez-Melton said playing in the same pairing with Van Hoose and Bradley helped keep her charged up.

"You don't play safe golf that way," she said. "I've learned that if you're careful, they'll catch you."

Sunny skies and temperatures in the upper 60s are predicted for Sunday's final round — a stark contrast from the drizzly conditions which plagued the first two rounds.

The first place prize in the tourney is $18,750.

Winners & Losers

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) Mike Pepper didn't see Maryland's surprising 85-62 romp over fourth-ranked Virginia, but the North Carolina guard knows what must be done to stop the Terps into night's finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament.

"We can't let them go up and down the court," said Pepper, whose 16-foot jumper with nine seconds remaining gave North Carolina a 58-57 victory over Wake Forest in the other ACC semifinal game Friday night. "That's their game. We want to control the tempo."

Virginia was unable to stem the fastbreak of the 20th ranked Terps after a 12-point streak gave Maryland a 20-9 lead with 11:45 remaining in the first half.

"We rushed our shots and got into Maryland's game instead of our own," said Ralph Sampson, Virginia's 7-foot-4 center who was outplayed by Maryland's 6-8 Buck Williams.

Williams had an 11-10 edge in points as Sampson went 5-for-13 from the floor, and a 14-8 margin in rebounds, making up for his two-point performance in a loss to Virginia last Saturday in the last regular season game.

"Buck boxed out, got to the boards and got our break going," said Albert King, who led Maryland with 24 points. "He had some help, but he did most of it on his own."

Maryland, which blew leads frequently during a somewhat disappointing season, put the Cavaliers away with another 12-point string that built up a 62-40 advantage with 7:50 left.

"Once we get our break going, we're awfully tough," said Greg Manning, who scored 17 for Maryland. Jeff Lamp scored 25 points for Virginia, which hit only 39 percent from the floor to Maryland's 60 percent.

"I guess it was one of the best tournament games we have played," Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said after the doubleheader opener in the Capital Centre before a sellout crowd of 19,035.

The Terps have been in five previous title games, but came away the winner only in 1958, when they beat North Carolina 86-74.

Pepper's clutch shot, meantime, qualified the 12th-ranked Tar Heels for their 13th championship final and they'll be seeking their eighth crown in the last 15 years when they take on the Terps.

The 11th-ranked Demon Deacons blew a seven-point second half advantage before regaining the lead at 57-56 on a basket by Alvis Rogers with 1:30 left.

Al Wood, who had an off night with eight points, missed a jumper on North Carolina's next trip down the floor but freshman center Sam Perkins grabbed his 15th rebound.

Another shot by Jimmy Black was off the mark, touching off a mad scramble for the ball and Perkins again was the man on the spot. By the time he recovered it in the backcourt, however, only 25 seconds remained.

"We didn't set up a specific play during the timeout," said Pepper, who finished with 12 points. "It felt good when it went in, but the game was far from over."

Indeed, after a Wake Forest timeout, Pepper committed North Carolina's last allowable foul, hacking Wake's Frank Johnson as soon as he crossed midcourt. That stopped the clock with four seconds left, giving the Deacons little time to run a final play.

Johnson, Wake's chief offensive threat who had 14 points, was far off the mark with a 25-footer at the buzzer as Pepper completed his clutch finish with a fine defensive effort.

First ECU Invitational Set

Eleven schools will join East Carolina Tuesday for the first-ever ECU Invitational golf tournament at the Brook Valley Country Club.

ECU, which will field both an "A" and "B" team in the tournament, will lead a field that includes Duke and Temple, two of the strongest teams in the tournament according to ECU coach Bob Helmick.

Others competing for the tournament championship will be Appalachian State, Campbell, N.C. State, Old Dominion, UNC-Chapel Hill, UNC-Charlotte, UNC-Wilmington and William & Mary.

The two-day, 36-hole tournament begins at 9 a.m. on the #1 tee at Brook Valley. Teams will consist of six golfers with the top five counting in the team score.

Carolina, Terps Riding Momentum

Tangled Up

LANDOVER, Md. — Momentum and confidence — two intangible items that basketball teams live and die by — carried Maryland and North Carolina into the finals last night of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

The momentum belongs to the Terrapins. They have weathered adversity heaped upon them by their fans and local media and captured two exciting victories.

The Tar Heels are riding an emotional high based on their play since the month of January. They have lost only four games since a disastrous western trip during the Christmas-New Year's holiday season. One of those losses, an 84-68 drubbing at the hands of Wake Forest, was avenged Friday night by a 58-57 score.

What Maryland did to Virginia in the opening game of the semifinal round almost defies description. While scoring machines Albert King and Ernest Graham sat on the bench saddled with foul trouble, the Terrapins actually ran away from the Cavaliers in the first half.

King and Graham returned in the second half and added insult to a deep Virginia injury and wound up with an 85-62 victory.

Maryland's lead reached 10 points on several occasions, but center Ralph Sampson was convinced his Virginia teammates were bound to make a comeback.

"We knew if we could hang in there, we could come back," Sampson said. "This time, we didn't."

North Carolina, members of the walking wounded society, had to play catch up throughout the second contest. Only Mike Pepper's jumper with 11 seconds left preserved a spot in the championship game for the Tar Heels.

Ironically, Pepper said after the game that he had no plans for becoming the hero.

"Actually, I was telling Jim Braddock to take the shot," Pepper said. "He's a great shooter and I was telling him to spot up at the top of the key."

Pepper stole the spotlight from team leader Al Wood, who finished the game with 8 points on a 4-of-12 performance from the floor. But the lack of points didn't keep Wood from flashing a wide grin at game's end.

"I couldn't throw it in the ocean from the beach," Wood said. "Every time I got the ball, they had somebody playing it tough."

So North Carolina survived a scare, not to mention Frank Johnson's last gasp shot.

"The last play was set for a pick and roll," said Johnson, "but Pepper just defended me too well and I couldn't get off a good shot. Everyone was yelling for me to shoot, so I did."

"The last shot was set for Frank, but it just wasn't to be," said Carl Tacy, Wake's tearful coach. "We certainly hope we get an NCAA bid. We feel we are deserving."

Perkins, who led North Carolina with 18 points, said he would play his regular game and play Williams of Maryland, "straight up."

"You can't change anything just because he's strong and a good jumper," Perkins said. "I'm positive, confident and relaxed."

But the question remained as the Tar Heels readied for last night's finals: how many players would actually perform at full speed.

Strange Vaults Into Four-Shot Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Curtis Strange, armed with a 4-shot lead going into Sunday's final round of the $300,000 American Motors Inverrary Golf Classic, considered the work remaining before he can claim the third victory of his career.

"The course is just sitting there waiting to be taken," Strange said Saturday after taking control with a no-bogey, 6-under-par 66.

"I have to shoot another good, solid round. I have to play decent tomorrow. Somebody can come out and play extremely well and I can't do anything about it, but I have a 4-shot lead they have to shoot at."

And it's a formidable margin.

Tom Kite and Larry Ziegler, tied for second, know it.

"I'll just try to make some birdies on the front nine and get myself in position to charge on the back," Kite said. "I've played solid but not flashy, and that's what I'll have to do to win."

"I'll have to play a lot better if I'm to have any chance at all," said Ziegler.

Strange, 27, one of the game's more promising young stars, took command with a 32 on the back nine Saturday. He finished 54 holes with a 201 total, 15 strokes under par on the 7,129 yard Inverrary Golf Club course.

Kite and Ziegler, who played in the last threesome with him, were at 205. Kite birdied two of the last four holes for a 68. Ziegler, a 2-shot leader when the day's play started, managed to salvage a round of par 72 with an eight-foot putt for an eagle-3 on the 15th.

Johnny Miller was next with a 66 and a 206 total. Miller won this event last year when it was known as the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic. Gleason is no longer associated with the tournament.

Miller, already a two-time winner this season, said he had little hope of overtaking Strange.

"I figured I had to shoot 66 to get back into it," said Miller, who opened up with a birdie-eagle-birdie start. "I shot 66 but it didn't do me much good. Curtis shot 66, too and I didn't make up any ground. He's too good a player. I can't expect him to back off in the last round."

Jack Nicklaus was another shot back at 207. He had a 69, including a 16-foot birdie putt on the final hole after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day.

"I didn't play very well," said Nicklaus, who hit only four fairways.

"But I learned something from it. I made an adjustment in my swing over the last few holes and it was a lot better. My swing became repetitive for the first time this year. I should hit the ball better tomorrow. If I can make some putts, well, then we'll see."

Tom Purtzer, with a 71, Bob Murphy, with a 69, and Ray Floyd, with a 68, were at 207, seven shots off the pace.

Ziegler, a 15-year veteran looking for his fourth PGA Tour title, backed off in a hurry. He bogeyed three of the first six holes and turned in 38.

"I just hit it terrible," he said. "The eagle saved the day."

While he was struggling, Strange quickly took control.

He rolled in a 20 footer for birdie on the fourth hole and stroked a 6-iron to within four feet of the flag for another birdie on the seventh.

That put him in front and he held it the rest of the way.

He reached each of the two par-5 holes on the back side in two and 2-putted for birdie, and he holed two other putts of about eight feet, each off a mid-iron for two more.

He finished off the back with three consecutive pars that, he said, "was just a little disappointing; 17 and and 18 both were playing pretty easy and I thought I should have done a little better."

Syracuse Nips Villanova In Third Overtime, 83-80

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Leo Rautins broke a personal 24-minute scoring drought by tipping in a rebound with three seconds left in the third overtime Saturday as Syracuse edged Villanova 83-80 to win the Big East Conference basketball championship.

Seven-foot Dan Schayes, who scored nine of his 15 points in the overtimes, iced the game with a technical free throw called on Villanova for attempting to take an extra timeout.

Forward Tony Bruin of the Orangemen led all scorers with 22 points, while teammate Erich Santifer chipped in with 18 and Rautins 16.

Alex Bradley led the Wildcats with 21 points, following by 19 for John Pinone, 14 for Stewart Granger, 11 for Aaron Howard and 10 for Tom Sienkiewicz.

Syracuse, now 18-11, replaced Georgetown as champion of the 2-year-old league.

Villanova, 19-10, which had twice beat Syracuse this year but was eliminated from national playoffs by Syracuse last year, appeared to have won the game in the first overtime. The Wildcats surged to a 70-64 lead with 2:18 remaining on four points by Bradley and two free throws by Sienkiewicz.

But Ed Moss connected for a basket, fed Schayes for an easy layup and tied it 70-70 with 1:15 remaining after Santifer stole the ball from Sienkiewicz under the Villanova basket.

In the second extra period, Syracuse broke away to lead 78-74. But in the final 66 seconds, Sienkiewicz connected on a 17-footer and then pressured Moss into the backcourt for a turnover that allowed Bradley to tie it 78-78 with 18 seconds left.

Schayes sank two free throws early in the third overtime, but Granger made a 20-foot jump shot for the 13th tie of the game, 80-80, with 1:16 remaining.

Moss's free throw with 64 seconds left in regulation time made it 82-82. His second free throw would have won the game but Rautins stepped into the foul lane early and nullified the point.

Long Island In ECAC Victory

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Earl Fuller scored nine points in the second half to pace Long Island University to a come-from-behind 77-72 victory over Iona Saturday in the Metro Division finals of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference college basketball playoffs.

That assured the Blackbirds of their first appearance ever in the NCAA postseason tournament.

The contest was marred by a second-half fight between Riley Clarida of LIU and Steve Burt of the Gaels. The scuffle occurred 2:47 into the second half, with both players charged with flagrant fouls and ejected from the game.

The incident occurred only moments after LIU Coach Paul Lizzo and his assistant, Warren Lifschutz, were charged with technical fouls for vociferously arguing about a referee's call.

Iona, which was led by the 23-point production of Jeff Williams, converted all four free throw attempts awarded for the technicals, giving the Gaels their biggest lead of the game at 47-34.

LIU roared back with Bob Cole, Rudy Johnson and Fuller leading the way. The Blackbirds forged ahead with 8:49 left in the game, moving on top 57-56 on a free throw by Johnson.

The lead then changed hands five times and there were two more ties before Fuller, who finished with 11 points and was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player, converted a pair of free throws to put LIU on top to stay 67-65 with 4:59 left.

Iona cut the margin to 73-72 on a jumper by Tim Richardson with eight seconds left, but Gary Springer of the Gaels then called an illegal timeout and Fuller hit the two free throws awarded for the technical. Russell Davis then added a pair of free throws to complete the scoring.

Cole paced LIU with 15 points, while Johnson, Jeff Meriwether and Davis each had 13. Springer threw in 21 points for Iona and collected 17 rebounds.

The loss deprived Iona of a third straight trip to the NCAA tournament.

LIU boosted its record to 18-10, while Iona dropped to 15-14.

Creighton Is Champ

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Creighton, led by sharpshooting Kevin McKenna's 23 points, upset Wichita State 70-64 Saturday to win the Missouri Valley Conference basketball tournament.

Creighton, now 21-8, had finished in a second-place tie in regular-season conference play and moves into the NCAA Tournament. The Shockers, who dropped to 23-6, and had finished first in the conference, must hope for an NCAA at-large bid.

The Bluejays came from behind in the first half, took the lead before halftime and held on as the Shockers made a determined run at them early in the second half.

McKenna scored 12 points in the first half to lead the Bluejays' comeback from a 10-point deficit. He hit six points in a row to put a stop to the Shockers' attempt to overtake Creighton in the second half.

Creighton, leading 40-30 at the half, moved to a 44-32 lead with 19:17 left. The Shockers grabbed the momentum and outscored the Bluejays 17-6 during the next eight minutes to close to within 50-49.

McKenna then hit on three straight jumpers to push Creighton's lead to 56-51. After that, Wichita State only could get to within 63-60 with 2:37 left.

McKenna was joined by three other Bluejays in double figures. George Morrow had 13 and Daryl Stovall and Alex Stivrins each contributed 10.

A&T, Howard Gain Finals

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — James Horace came off the bench to spark a comeback rally with 19 points Saturday as North Carolina A&T slipped by Bethune-Cookman 54-51 in the semifinals of the Mid Eastern Athletic Conference basketball tournament.

North Carolina A&T will face in the finals Howard University, a 75-73 victor over second-seeded Florida A&M in Saturday's opening game. The winner of the A&T-Howard game gets an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

The A&T victory came despite a Bethune-Cookman 41-29 advantage with 15:27 left in the game.

That's when Horace came off the bench and hit 8 of 9 shots from the floor. He eventually led all scorers with 19 points.

Bethune-Cookman, trailing 52-51, went into a freeze with 8:20 left and kept control until, with just 3 seconds left, Harold Peoples missed a short jumper from the baseline.

A&T's Joe Binion took the Peoples rebound, was fouled and added the extra two points to the A&T margin.

In the night's opening game, Florida A&M missed two last-ditch chances to tie the game up and send it into overtime.

Howard's Larry Spriggs blocked Anthony Knighton's shot, out-of-bounds with just four seconds left. Then Darrell Spence's aerial to the basket went long as time ran out.

Paul Grady led Florida's scoring with 18 points and a game-high 16 rebounds.

Florida A&M had led 38-34 at the half with Walter "Pete" Taylor and Spence both scoring 10 points in the opening half.

Both Howard and the Florida team had 6-4 conference records in regular season. Florida A&M won the second-place regular season honors on a coin toss.

Exhibitions Get Underway

By The Associated Press
The major league exhibition season got underway Saturday afternoon in Lakeland, Fla., where the Minnesota Twins rode Pete Mackanin's three-run homer to a 6-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

It was the first Grapefruit League contest between two major league teams. The same two teams were scheduled to play Sunday in the only action involving just major league clubs. And the Twins and Tigers will do the same thing on Monday before the exhibition schedule gets in full swing on Tuesday.

Mackanin's home run in the seventh inning drove in Rob Wilfong and Hosken Poveil as the Twins scored four runs in the inning.

Outfielder Rick Peters led the Tigers with three hits.

Pete Redfern was the winning pitcher and Jack Morris was the loser.

Meanwhile, the Atlanta Braves and Seattle Mariners completed a deal first formulated last December at the winter baseball meetings, with veteran outfielder Jeff Burroughs joining the Mariners. Atlanta received minor league pitcher Carlos Diaz.

In addition, the Mariners agreed to assume a $400,000 loan Burroughs, 30, had received from the Braves. The loan had held up the deal involving the American League's most valuable player of 1974.

It will be the fourth team for Burroughs, who began his 11-season major league career with Washington. He also played for Texas — where he won the MVP honor — and the Braves.

hander, will report to the Braves' minor league affiliate at Richmond.

Catcher Bruce Kimm asked the Chicago White Sox to place him on the voluntary retired list. Kimm had injured his shoulder playing winter ball in the Dominican Republic.

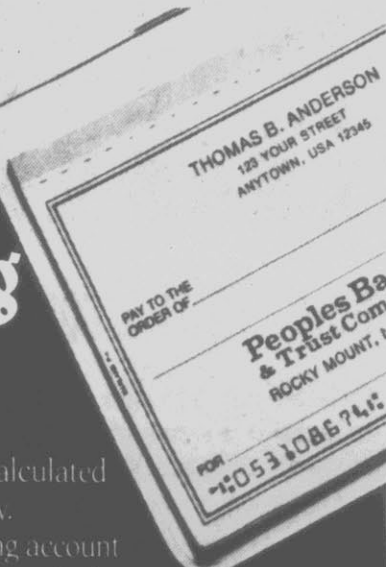

Perhaps the biggest topic of conversation in major league training camps was Friday's announcement by Phillies owner Ruly Carpenter that the world champions were up for sale.

Heavy Snow Headed Our Way

The massive snowstorm that recently razed large parts of the country is headed our way.

Temperatures will begin to plunge tonight, and by mid-afternoon we will begin to see a sprinkling of snow.

continue through the night and into the following day. 10-12 inches is expected.

The mayor warned that snow plows and other machinery may not be enough to effectively battle the storm. "We will do what we can, but our equipment is badly in need of repair."

Notes...

The Roanoke-Albemarle Chapter of the North Carolina/National Wild Turkey Federation will hold a spring meeting Friday, March 13.

The meeting will be held at the Scotfield Country Club, located between Scotland Neck and Enfield on State Road 1153, and will begin at 6 p.m.

The Federation is a national, non-profit educational and conservation organization made up of state and local affiliates. It works for the restoration and wise management of the American Wild Turkey and other conservation causes.

For more information on the club and the meeting, write NC/NWTF, Box 437, Scotland Neck, N.C. 27874.

More than 15 million schoolchildren and conservationists are expected to participate in the observance of National Wildlife Week this March 15 through 21.

"We Care About Oceans" is the theme for the 44th annual wildlife week, first proclaimed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938.

The 1980-81 Federal Duck Stamp is out. The stamp, a color rendition of mallards in flight, is by Richard W. Plasschaert and was selected from over a record 1,363 entries.

The artist chose an uncomplicated design against a background of medium-blue sky for his entry. "I wanted it simple, thinking that it would have the best chance to win," Plasschaert said. "I chose mallards because they are very common."

Plasschaert, 38, has spent the last 25 years in the fields of commercial art, layout and design, portrait art and landscape and wildlife painting. This was his first entry in the Federal Duck Stamp competition.

For information about the stamp, contact J. Ray Chapman, president Ambassador Graphics and Wildlife, 219 Shaftsbury, Lane, Summerville, S.C. 29483.

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Fourteen former winners, including both defending race champions, head a field of more than 110 drivers for next Sunday's $109,020 Dogwood 500 Classic National Championship double-header at Martinsville Speedway.

The twin bill, which opens the track's 34th year of racing, consists of a 250-lap Late Model Sportsman race and a 250-lap event for Modified cars.

Heading the field are 20-time Martinsville winner Ray Hendrick of Richmond, Va., who has been winning races here since 1963, defending Dogwood Sportsman champion Mike Porter of Princeton, W.Va., and defending Dogwood Modified champion Geoff Bodine of Pleasant Green, N.C.

Hendrick is one of two drivers ever to sweep a double-header here. He won halves of the 1970 Cardinal 50 Classic, while Paul Radford of Ferrum, Va., swept the 1977 Dogwood 500 Classic.

Radford, Bodine and Joe

Thurman and Gerald Compton of Rocky Mount, Va., are the only drivers entered in both races this year.

Other former winners include Carl "Bugs" Stevens of Rehoboth, Mass.; Jerry Cook of Rome, N.Y.; Sam Ard of Asheboro, N.C.; Jimmy and Billy Hensley of Ridgeway, Va.; Donald "Satch" Worley of Rocky Mount, Va.; George Kent Jr. of Horseheads, N.Y.; Ron Bouchard of Fitchburg, Mass.; John "Monk" Tate of Ruffin, N.C.; and Richie Evans of Rome, N.Y.

Only the fastest 40 cars will start in each race. Sportsman cars will have time trials Thursday with the fastest 20 earning starting positions. Bodine holds the track qualifying record with a speed of 92.659 m.p.h. in a Pontiac.

The first 20 positions in the Modified race will be decided Friday. Evans holds the track qualifying record of 95.626 m.p.h. in a Pinto.

The rest of each starting field will be determined Saturday in six 25-lap qualifying races, three in each division.

The winner of the Sportsman race, which opens the Sunday program at 12:30 p.m., EST, and the Modified event each earns $8,250, while the driver leading the most laps in each race picks up $1,000.

The Little League baseball program in Compton, Calif., has produced six outfielders who made the Major Leagues.

Kinston Nips Chargers

LITTLEFIELD — Kinston rallied for two runs in the seventh inning after two men were out to gain a 4-3 baseball victory over Ayden-Grifton Friday afternoon.

The Chargers, who had rallied from a 2-0 first inning deficit, were ahead, 3-2, and had two men out when Kinston came up with the winning runs.

The Vikings jumped ahead in the top of the first, scoring twice. Gary Ewell walked, stole second and gained third on a passed ball. Jeff Jenkins then walked, and Parrish Sasser singled, driving in Ewell. Jenkins, who had moved to third on the play, scored when Sasser stole second and the ball was thrown away in the attempt to get him.

Ayden-Grifton came back with a run in the bottom of the inning. Bernard Ricciarelli singled and was sacrificed up. A passed ball moved him to third and he scored on a wild pitch.

The Chargers took the lead with two more runs in the fifth. Joey Kennedy walked and Ricciarelli reached on a bunt single. An error on the play, however, scored Kennedy and sent Ricciarelli to third. Art Rouse then sacrificed him over for a 3-2 Ayden-Grifton lead.

In the seventh, Johnson led off with a walk, and moved up on an out. After two were away, Jenkins singled, scoring Johnson with the tying run. Jenkins then stole second, scoring when Danny Borkette singled.

Sasser led the Kinston hitting with two, while Ricciarelli had two for Ayden-Grifton.

Lady Bucs Open Year

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — East Carolina's Lady Pirates, missing several of their top players still with basketball, opened the 1981 softball season in the Florida Invitational Tournament Friday, winning two of three games.

The Lady Pirates won their opener, 10-1, over Florida Junior College, then lost to Florida State, 9-2, in the second.

Cynthia Shepard led the Pirates to a 9-7 comeback win in the third game over Lake City Community College, with a three-run homer in the seventh inning.

The results left East Carolina in the losers' bracket of the double-elimination tournament, along with Jacksonville and North Carolina. Florida, South Florida and Florida State were in the winners' bracket after Friday's games.

In the opener, Ginger Rothermel had two doubles, while Yvonne Williams and Mitzi Davis each had two-baggers. Mary Powell and Shepard each homered for the Pirates in the Florida Junior College game. Freshman Jeanette Roth hurled the win.

In the second game, highly regarded Florida State held the Pirates to only eight hits, while pounding out 18 singles and two doubles of its own. East Carolina held a brief 1-0 lead before FSU took command with three second inning runs and four more in the third.

The Pirates then came back to win the third game behind Shepard's three run homer, giving ECU a 4-6 lead going into the bottom of the eighth inning. The two had been tied 6-6 at the end of regulation play after Lake City had scored two runs in both the sixth and seventh innings to knot it.

Janice Parlon and Shirley Brown each had doubles to go with Shepard's homer.

The tournament wound up on Saturday.

Shad Net Event Set

GRIFTON — The Shad Festival Tennis Tournament will be held in Grifton on April 3-5.

Events scheduled include men's doubles, women's doubles and mixed doubles with a consolation bracket in each event for first round losers. Trophies will be presented to first and second place finishers in each bracket of each tournament.

All tennis balls will be furnished, and each participant will receive a tee-shirt.

A $7.50 fee is charged to people entering one event, and $12.50 for those participating in two. All entries must be received by Sunday, March 22.

Entry forms are available in Greenville at the River Birch Tennis Center and at Bond's Sporting Goods.

Rosettes In Meet

The Rosettes Gymnastics Team held a Class II compulsory meet with Wilmington here on Saturday.

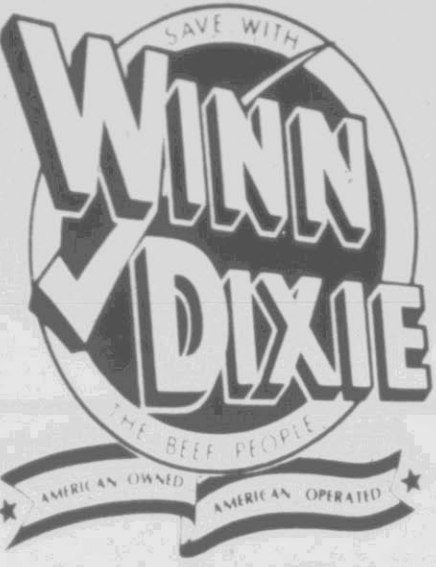

Jenny Johnsrude finished second in the vaulting with an 8.9 score, was second in floor exercises with a 8.4, fourth on the uneven bars with 6.6 and finished fourth in the all-around with a 29.45.

Carmella Weber was fifth on the bars with a 6.25, third on the balance beam with a 7.9, and sixth in the floor exercises for a 24.40 all-around total, good enough for fifth.

Ginger McLendon was fifth on the beam with a 7.1 score.

In an optional meet, held later in the day, Weber took fourth in the vault with a 7.8, was second on the beam with a 7.25, second in the floor exercises with a 7.55, and first on the bars with a 6.55. She finished second overall with a 27.15 score.

In the 100-meter dash in the 1952 Olympics at Helsinki, the first four finishers were timed the same, 10.4 seconds. The judges gave the gold medal to Lindy Remigino of the United States.

EC Swimmers

In 5th Place

CLEVELAND — After two days of competition, East Carolina's Pirates were in fifth place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Championships, being held at Cleveland State University.

Pittsburgh continued to hold the lead with 347 points, followed by West Virginia with 318. Maryland was third with 219, while Penn State had 206. East Carolina was fifth with 169. There are a total of 16 teams participating.

Nine individuals and one relay team scored for the Pirates during the activity.

In the 100-yard butterfly, Jack Clowar set a new varsity record of 49.95 seconds as he placed third. Kevin Richards set a new freshman mark of 52.15 in the same event, finishing tenth. Perry Newman finishing 16th in 52.53.

Doug Nieman placed fourth in the 400-yard individual medley with a time of 4:10.47. John Ackright finished eighth with a time of 4:13.96, while John Bennett was 11th in 4:15.76.

In the 200-yard freestyle, Jan Wiklund was 14th with a time of 1:43.61.

John Richards finished 15th in the 100-yard backstroke, clocking in at 55.55.

Matt McDonald, in the 100-yard breaststroke, was seventh in 59.80.

The 800-yard freestyle relay team finished sixth in 6:57.22.

The meet winds up Saturday evening.

Lifegate Wins, In Semifinals

MONROE — Lifegate Christian School moved into the semifinals of the ACE State Basketball Tournament Friday night, with a 60-52 victory over West Duplin of Warsaw.

Lifegate pushed out into a 19-16 lead in the first period, only to see West Duplin rally to close the gap and take a 30-29 halftime lead.

In the third period, however, Lifegate inched back out into the lead, grabbing a 41-40 margin as the frame came to an end. In the final quarter, Lifegate pulled away, outscoring West Duplin, 19-12, to take the victory.

Terry Duncan led Lifegate with 36 points, while Greg Jones added 14. Willie Langston led West Duplin with 18, while Eddie Taylor had 15.

The victory moved Lifegate into a 12 noon Saturday game against Berean of Fayetteville, which had a first round bye. Tabernacle of Monroe downed Resurrection of Charlotte, 51-47, in the other first round game, and was to meet Liberty of Durham in the other semifinal match at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Consolation and championship games were to be played Saturday evening.

Lifegate (60) — Duncan 13-10-14-36, G. Jones 7-0-2-14, Walls 2-0-2-4, Hartley 3-0-4, J. Jones 0-0-0-0, Manning 0-0-0-0, Totals 25-10-18-60.

Ram Girls Whip Rose

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's girls' softball team rolled to a 10-5 victory over Rose High School Friday. It was the opening game of the year for the Ramettes.

Greene Central actually got all it needed in the first inning, scoring six times. The Lady Rams added three in the second and one more in the fifth. Rose scored twice in the second, and got single runs in the third, fifth and sixth.

Laura Vincent led Rose with two hits, while no one had more than one for Greene Central.

The Lady Rams got only one walk off the Rose pitching, but were helped along by seven errors by the Ramettes. Rose got five walks off the Ram hurling.

Rose plays host to Farmville Central on Tuesday in its first home game.

DON'T ASK TED
 NEW YORK (AP) — Ted Williams, the last man to bat 400, is rooting for George Brett or anyone else for that matter to reach that magic figure this season.

"If somebody does hit 400," Williams, a .406 batter in 1941, said, "people will stop asking me if I think anyone can go that high ever again. They'll have to ask him."

Doctor J. Brings 76ers Back To Life

By The Associated Press

It took the Doctor to breathe some life back into the Philadelphia 76ers.

After a lopsided loss to Chicago Wednesday night, Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham had said the 76ers "looked like a dead basketball team." But Friday night, Julius "Dr. J." Erving scored 26 points to lead nine Philadelphia players in double figures as the 76ers clobbered the Denver Nuggets 131-112.

"It was just the type of game we needed," said Cunningham. "I had been concerned with individual work, but tonight there was a good team effort and we got the job done. We are going in the right direction again."

That victory, combined with the Indiana Pacers' 110-104 decision over the Boston Celtics, gave Philadelphia a one-game lead over Boston in their battle for the Atlantic Division title and the best overall record in the National Basketball Association. Philadelphia is now 55-15, Boston 54-16.

The 76ers went ahead to stay 23-22 on Caldwell Jones' fast-break layup with 3:41 left in the first quarter. Philadelphia led 72-65 at halftime and drew away in the second half.

Lionel Hollins had 20 points for Philadelphia and Maurice Cheeks, Steve Mix and Darryl Dawkins added 14 apiece. Denver's David Thompson led all scorers with 34 points.

Pacers 110, Celtics 104

Indiana center James Edwards, scoreless in the first three quarters, got eight points in the final period and six in the last 4½ minutes to seal Indiana's victory. Billy Knight had a game-high 32 points for Indiana, which outscored Boston 14-6 down the stretch.

Former Indiana State All-America Larry Bird, who helped draw a capacity crowd of 17,032 to Market Square Arena, had 28 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists for Boston.

Bucks 122, Knicks 111

Reserve forward Junior Bridgeman, playing 41 minutes because all-star Marques Johnson missed the game with the flu, scored 34 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead Milwaukee to its sixth straight victory. Bucks guard Brian Winters added 25 points.

Hawks 109, Nets 106

Dan Roundfield scored 24 points, half of them from the foul line, and Eddie Johnson added 20 as Atlanta handed New Jersey its seventh loss in a row. It was the third victory in the last four games for the Hawks, keeping their slim playoff hopes alive.

Bullets 105, Rockets 104

Mitch Kupchak sank four free throws in the final 1:36 and drew a charging foul in the closing seconds to help the Bullets to a big road victory. Greg Ballard was high scorer with 24 points for Washington, which trails Chicago by two games in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

Suns 128, Blazers 107

Guard Walter Davis scored 29 points and seven other Suns scored in double figures as Phoenix breezed to its 53rd win of the season. The Suns broke the game open by outscoring Portland 35-19 in the third period.

Clippers 140, Cavaliers 125

San Diego outscored Cleveland 13-2 to start the third quarter, erasing a 64-63 halftime deficit, and went on to its highest-scoring game of the season. Guards Freeman Williams and Phil Smith scored 26 and 23 points, respectively, for the Clippers, who sent Cleveland to its sixth consecutive defeat.

Warriors 115, Mavericks 109

Bernard King scored 22 of his 28 points in the second half as Golden State turned back a Dallas rally in which the Mavericks had cut a 17-point deficit to four with 5:40 to play. Joe Barry Carroll added 26 points and Purvis Short 24 for the Warriors.

Sonics 102, Spurs 94

Fred Brown and Jack Sikma combined for 22 points in the fourth quarter and finished with 25 points apiece as Seattle wiped out an early 17-point deficit and beat San Antonio, which made just three of 25 field goal attempts in the final period.

Phils Go On Sale; Owner: Bickering, Salaries To Blame

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Owner Ruly Carpenter has put the world champion Philadelphia Phillies up for sale, saying he is fed up with escalating salaries and bickering between baseball management and the Major League Players Association.

After practice at the club's spring training complex Friday, Carpenter told his players in a brief but tension-charged meeting that he was getting out of baseball.

"It was one of the most difficult decisions the (Carpenter) family has ever had to make," Carpenter said in a brief statement read to the sweating players in the locker room.

Although Carpenter declined to say what it would cost to purchase one of baseball's best franchises, it is believed the price will fall somewhere between $20 and $30 million.

In the most recent baseball team sales, the New York Mets went for an estimated $21 million, the Chicago White Sox $20 million, the Oakland A's $12 million and Seattle $10 million.

Carpenter's only reference to price was that if a purchaser has to ask how much, he can't afford it.

"The primary reason for the decision to sell is that it has become apparent to me that some deeply ingrained philosophical difference exists between the Carpenter family and some of the other owners as to how the baseball business should be operated," Carpenter said in his statement.

The Phillies' owner obviously was disenchanted with the New York Yankees paying outfielder Dave Winfield in excess of $20 million, including $1.5 million per year, a $1 million signing bonus and cost-of-living clauses over 10 years.

Carpenter was also upset by the Atlanta Braves giving outfielder Claudell Washington $3.7 million over five years. Carpenter thinks the bidding will ruin baseball.

"It's been a dramatic increase in salaries, and what I'm saying now is that enough is enough," he said.

Carpenter said he had hoped that the 1980 re-entry draft would restore some sanity to the game.

Carpenter said that he and his family endorsed the position taken by management in the most recent battle with the players' association over the issue of player compensation.

The owners want an established player in return for losing a highly rated free agent. They have implemented a plan under which a certain number of each team's 40 players would be protected, with the compensation player chosen from those remaining.

Boston's New Deal Secret — Even To Fisk

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Having struck out twice already, the Boston Red Sox are coming in with a third offer in their bid to re-sign slugging catcher Carlton Fisk.

But, except for an estimated total value of the package, they are keeping it a secret, even from Fisk.

Declaring that he didn't want to get into a bidding war, Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan said Friday the new offer guarantees "more than $2 million plus incentive bonus clauses" for the free agent. But he said the Red Sox will not present the package "until we sit down face to face" with Fisk.

Sullivan said he talked with Fisk's agent, Jerry Kapstein, Thursday and turned down an invitation for the Red Sox to send a representative to San Diego, where Fisk is meeting with his advisers.

Sullivan said his negotiating team of John Harrington and Al Curran have talked with Fisk, Kapstein, and Fisk's attorney Robert Teaff in San Diego.

"We informed them that when they're ready, we would like to sit down and discuss things, preferably in Boston or here in Florida," Sullivan said.

"They wanted the details of our new proposal but we refused to go into them over the phone," he added. "They said they'd be out in San Diego for the next several days so we told them only that our new offer would guarantee over $2 million plus incentives."

Earlier, Sullivan outlined the new offer at a news conference.

Swindled Bride Puts Larcenous Lover In Jail

SEATTLE (AP) - When Verna Cameron came home from work one night, she found her husband of eight days had disappeared with her money, her car and her pride. By the time she caught up with him, he had allegedly left another wife behind and was about to marry a third.

Ms. Cameron says her whirlwind courtship was "a real good snow job."

"I'm not a vindictive person, but I wanted to get him caught," said the 50-year-old resident of Des Moines, a suburb of Seattle.

She paid the state of Washington $1,000 to extradite Larry K. Shelton after tracking him down in North Carolina - where he was allegedly about to take his third wife in as many months.

Shelton, 53, whose real name is Richard Kirkman, was sentenced Wednesday to six months in jail for stealing $10,000 in cash, a new car and numerous personal possessions from Ms. Cameron's condominium.

"It's not so much what it does to you financially," Ms. Cameron said later. "It's like losing somebody in a sudden death - then when you realize the guy has conned you!"

Ms. Cameron met Shelton through an ad in a singles newspaper. They met Aug. 23, married Oct. 2, and he was gone Oct. 10, after dropping Ms. Cameron off for work one morning and never returning to pick her up. She eventually took a bus from downtown Seattle to her home, finding it stripped of valuables.

"He's no Don Juan, but he's a very nice person, real charming," Ms. Cameron said of her husband. "He came across as being so honest."

"By marrying me, he had really tied my hands," she said. "I had the worst time getting police to investigate."

It wasn't until alleged bride No. 2 called Ms. Cameron from Houston about three months ago that the whole story fell together.

The Houston woman traced Ms. Cameron by the license plate on the 1980 Oldsmobile that Shelton was still driving.

"She and I kind of commiserated, but there wasn't much we could do," said Ms. Cameron, a paralegal worker. "But when I told the police (about the second marriage) it made them much more interested."

Around Christmas, Ms. Cameron said she got a call from a woman in Albuquerque, N.M., who also traced her through the car, which Shelton was driving around with his alleged third bride-to-be. The caller was worried because her friend had just left with Shelton to get married.

Police arrested him on theft charges in North Carolina. Ms. Cameron's car was impounded.

Tobacco Imports

WASHINGTON (AP) - The question of curbing tobacco imports has again moved to the forefront with the renewal of an investigation by the International Trade Commission.

The investigation had been put off at the urging of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., but he recently dropped his opposition after hearing from the North Carolina tobacco industry.

The N.C. Farm Bureau Federation contends that import curbs are needed to protect U.S. tobacco farmers from increasing cheap tobacco from abroad.

The ITC commissioners decided Friday to hold a hearing on the issue May 1 and give President Reagan a recommendation by July 2.

Reagan could order a restriction on the amount of foreign tobacco allowed into this country. Helms has said that could trigger a trade war.

Before leaving office, former President Carter ordered the ITC probe at the urgings of N.C. Gov. Jim Hunt and Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C.

Senate Moves Against Equality Bill; For Judge

By W.A. WERONKA JR.
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would enforce equal distribution of property for divorced couples received another setback in the Senate Friday, while another measure restoring retirement benefits to an ousted judge moved closer to approval.

The delay of the equitable distribution bill led to a confrontation between the bill's sponsor, Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gastonia, and the instigator of the delay, Sen. Robert Swain, D-Asheville. She accused Swain of "obstructionist tactics."

Swain moved to delay the vote until Wednesday because he said a legislative committee had forged "dramatic changes" in the bill that could cost the state more money. His motion passed over the objections of supporters because of a request that the fiscal research staff of the Legislature determine what, if any, the bill would cost the state.

LI. Gov. Jimmy Green agreed to the request, which under Senate rules requires a delay of two legislative days.

After the session Mrs. Marvin and Swain had words, as Mrs. Marvin accused Swain of "making something up" just to delay the vote on the bill.

Swain maintained that Mrs. Marvin has misled him by saying that committee action earlier had added a provision allowing judges to consider the fault of one spouse in the disruption of the marriage. Swain contended that the bill still didn't contain such a provision, while Mrs. Marvin said that it did and offered to give him a list of "dozens and dozens of lawyers" who would confirm her side.

"A court wouldn't interpret that as 'fault,'" Swain said. "If you meant to put fault into it, why didn't you say 'fault'?"

"Why didn't you say that instead of making something up?" Mrs. Marvin responded. Swain did not answer.

The equitable distribution bill is one of several legislative proposals aimed at making state laws equal for both sexes.

The bill was tentatively approved by the Senate earlier, before it was sent back to the Senate Judiciary III Committee.

The bill would allow a judge, following divorce, to provide both the husband and wife with equal portions of property accumulated during their marriage.

In other legislative action:

Peoples

The proposed legislation to restore retirement benefits to judges removed from office for reasons other than mental or physical reasons is aimed at one person — former judge Linwood Peoples of Henderson.

The bill's sponsor, Sen. James Speed, D-Louisburg, amended it slightly so Peoples would not be allowed to run for judicial office again, but would allow him to file for state retirement benefits the state Supreme Court barred him from receiving.

The bill passed its first vote in the Senate 33-11, but the final vote was delayed until Monday because of the objection of Sen. John Cavanagh, R-Winston-Salem.

RALEIGH: Cavanagh, R-Winston-Salem.

The state Supreme Court in 1978 barred Peoples from holding judicial office after he had resigned a District Court judgeship and won election to a Superior Court seat. The court also barred Peoples from receiving any retirement benefits.

Peoples was acquitted in three separate trials of 33 criminal charges involving misconduct. The Supreme Court held that Peoples had engaged in "repeated and purposeful misconduct."

The proposed change in the law would only affect those judges removed from office before 1979.

Tax Exemption

The House gave tentative approval to a bill extending a $1,500 state income tax exemption on active duty pay for members of the U.S. Army Reserve and other military reservists.

The sponsor, Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, said the exemption on duty pay is now available to members of National Guard units, and that his bill would equalize the tax status of reserve and guard members.

The bill was scheduled for final House action next week. It is anticipated to reduce state revenues by about $1 million a year, Lilley said.

Public Information

The base budget subcommittee on Human Resources recommended a larger cut in the Department of Human Resources' Public Information Office than it originally planned. The subcommittee earlier decided to recommend cutting about $27,000 from the department, which included one vacant position and the office's printing budget.

The subcommittee altered that, and recommended the elimination of two public information specialists and one clerk-typist, plus the printing budget. The proposed cut would now total about $72,000.

Education Cuts

Sen. Vernon White, D-Winterville, told a legislative committee that he wanted more information before recommending any cuts in the state's operating budget for education.

"Everybody's talking about cutting," White said. "But the governor and the Advisory Budget Commission has sent over a balanced budget. I don't want to do anything until we find out what we're going to use that money (to be cut) for."

White is a member of the joint base budget subcommittee on education, which has been charged with identifying 6 percent cuts in all education operating budgets.

Alumni Of A&T Plan Meet

The Pitt County Chapter of A & T State University Alumni Association will host the mideastern Regional Spring conference March 13 and 14 at the Ramada Inn in Greenville. Representatives from alumni chapters from North Carolina and Tidewater Virginia will attend the meeting.

Among the scheduled activities are a business session involving key personnel from the University and from the national Alumni Association of A & T and a career planning workshop, open to high school juniors and seniors, school counselors, and parents of prospective A & T enrollees. During the workshop there will be university representatives on hand to explain program offerings in the school's departments of business and economics, engineering, nursing, accounting, among others. University personnel will also explain details on admission and financial aid. A buffet style lunch will be served from 12-1 p.m. Saturday.

Dr. Velma R. Speight, president of the National Alumni Association, of Columbia, Md., and Marvin Graeber, director of the mideastern region, of Greensboro, will be among the speakers at the conference.

The Pitt County Chapter has also planned an "Aggie disco" to entertain visiting Aggies and other supporters of A & T University. Richard B. Johnson and Charles Whitener are coordinating the weekend activities.

Schedule Is Listed

The schedule for registrars taking calls for the Pitt County Private Duty Nurses Registry includes: Ann Barlow, R.N., 758-2360, March 9-15; Shellie Hudson, R.N., 752-7090, March 16-22; and Grace Turner, R.N., 756-0375, March 23-29. The above take calls for all registered private duty nurses and keep information on all persons available for these services. The registry is open Monday through Saturday. On Sunday or for any emergency, call any of the above. They may be reached at home or work.

QUARTERLY MEETING
Quarterly meeting will be held at Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist Church today and the following services will be held: Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, the pastor, Rev. J. E. Suggs, will speak; 12:30 p.m., holy communion; 2 p.m., dinner; the Rev. D. M. Suggs and congregation of Suggs Christian Temple, Wilson, will render the service at three o'clock. The public is invited to attend.

WRITERS MEET
The first meeting of the Greenville Writers Club for the month of March will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 10 at the home of Mrs. Helen Parks, 1609 Oaklawn. People interested in any form of creative writing are invited to attend.

Commodity Prices Were Mixed

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Prices for a number of commodities closed mixed or slightly higher Friday as traders made purchases to even up their contract positions at the end of a week of quiet markets and bouncing prices.

"It's just been a crummy week," one analyst said. "Commodities markets in general have been rather excited — there has not been a high degree of activity."

Commodities fell sharply and broadly Monday, rose Tuesday in what was said to be a technical correction, fell again Wednesday and for the most part were up again Thursday. The moves came in the face of the strong U.S. dollar, high interest rates and uncertainty over the economy.

"What you have got for yourself is one beautiful question mark," said Jack Boyd of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., noting that the producer price index and unemployment figures released Friday seem to indicate the "maybe the economy still has a little poop left in it."

"But then you look at the money supply and you have a total state of balance between the forces that would imply vigor in the economy and the forces that would imply not so much vigor in the economy," he said. "So you have quixotic markets at the moment."

Dull activity was noted in a number of markets because of hesitance on the part of commercial interests to hold inventories of commodities while interest rates are high and the future cost of money remains uncertain, analysts said.

Amid a lack of any fresh news that was positive for prices, buying in grain and soybeans appeared to be coming from traders attempting to cover their short positions, sources said.

Wheat prices were mixed, with the distant months down as much as 1 1/4 cents and the nearby months up as much as 2 1/4 cents. The contract for March delivery closed at $4.28 1/2 a bushel. Traders noted the mix between old-crop and new crop contracts and cited forecasts for a weekend storm in winter wheat growing areas. Weather beneficial to yields in the upcoming crop is negative for prices.

At the close, soybeans were 1/4 cent to 7 cents higher, the contract for delivery in March was $7.08 1/4 a bushel.

Feeder cattle prices rose the daily allowable limit of 1.50 cents a pound in some months. The April contract closed at 64.57 cents a pound in activity dominated by local traders.

Coal Reserves In China Huge

NEW YORK (AP) — According to United Nations' estimates, the Chinese have the world's largest proven reserves of coal, some 600 billion tons.

Currently, China draws 70 percent of its energy requirements from coal.

Recently, the U. N. sent engineers from 16 developing countries with coal reserves to China to study Chinese methods of coal mining and utilization.

OFFICE PROPOSED

Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. has filed an application with the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency to establish banking facilities in Beaufort at Beaufort Square Shopping Center, according to John D. Civils, the bank's office executive in Morehead City.

ASSISTANT MANAGER

Teresa Lucas, owner of Down To Earth, a natural foods grocery here, announced the appointment of Ms. Donna Hudspeth to assistant manager. Originally from Winston-Salem, Ms. Hudspeth is a graduate of East Carolina University and now resides in Greenville. Down To Earth is located in Rivergate Shopping Center.

PURCHASE AGREEMENT

Jack Eckerd Corp., a Florida-based retailer, and American Home Video Corp., a retailer of home video products headquartered in Denver, announced that the two companies have executed an agreement in principle for the acquisition of AHVC by Eckerd through an exchange of stock. The firms said the consummation of the transaction is subject to the execution of a mutually acceptable definitive agreement, and certain contingencies, such as confirmation of acceptable accounting and tax treatment.

Annual Reports

Due April 15

Annual reports of 1980 earnings must be filed by April 15 by people receiving social security benefits who earned more than the annual exempt amount in 1980, a social security spokesperson said recently.

The 1980 annual exempt amounts were $5,000 for people over 65 and over and $3,720 for people under 65 all of last year.

People who received no benefits in 1980 are not required to file a report, but those people should file a report to make sure that any benefits that might be due for the year are paid.

More information about annual reports and the annual earnings test can be obtained at any social security office.

Renovation Of School Renews Community

Text and Photos By Mary Schulken

STOKES — Like the legendary phoenix bird, the old Stokes-Pactolus High School site has risen from the ashes to become a proud, beautiful thing.

"I feel like we have all been drawn closer together as a result of this project," said community member Judy Warren. "We've all been working on a common goal and this, as well as the increased activities the center has brought into the community, has revived us."

Although the Stokes-Pactolus High School building is no longer standing, community members, through the help of Pitt County Community Schools, have salvaged the school's gymnasium and cafeteria and turned them into the Stokes Activity Center, a place where folks can recreate, meet, and enjoy fellowship with neighbors.

Since 1979, $7,643.10 has been spent on the project by the Stokes community, matched by $7,600 from Community Schools. Much of the community money came from labor. "Folks came out," said Barry Gaskins of Community Schools, "fueled by the enthusiasm of people such as Judy Warren, Dickie and Zula Leggett, Bruce Bland and many others too numerous to mention, to clean, scrub, and paint for hundreds of hours to restore the facility to tip top shape."

Citizens worked especially hard on the gym and softball field. The roof of the gym had to be replaced and inches of pigeon droppings on the floor had to be removed. "That gym floor must be the best one in the world," said one worker, "to look as good as it does now after the way it looked when we started." The community plans to re-varnish the floor as soon as money allows, and restore the bluejay painted on the floor by a graduate of the old high school.

Fresh white paint has already been applied to the upper half of the facility, and a medium blue shade has been earmarked for the bottom. "We hope to have the whole thing painted before too long," explained Warren. "We're going to be having boys' basketball teams playing out here beginning in March."

The softball field, located next to the gym, also required many hours of labor since it had been disked up and was overgrown with head-high weeds. "Everybody got out on that field and pulled weeds, youngsters five and six years old were out there with their parents," said Warren. "Then we had sand and dirt hauled in and community members graded the field, donating their time and equipment. We seeded the field in fescue, and finally installed a back stop and a chain link fence around the entire playing area."

The softball field was the focus of activity in the community last summer. "When we were working on it and afterwards when we had all the different teams playing on it," commented Warren, "we had something going out here every night." Stokes had men's, boys', women's and girls' softball teams last year.

A July 4 celebration at the center highlighted the summer. "We had a big picnic and had softball games all day," said Warren. "The men would play, then the women would play, and so on, and then we'd start all over again. Nearly everybody involved in the project was there and after the day was over, many people from the community went to Greenville to see the fireworks together."

Stokes-Pactolus High School at one time was one of the oldest active school houses in the area. It was built in the 1920's, along with several other schools in the county. "At that time," explained Barry Gaskins, "These schools were the center of each community they served. They were built by the community and used by all members of the community."

In 1971-72 the high school was consolidated with others and students went to North Pitt High off one of the quilters' lap quilts. Classes on CPR, banking and other topics are scheduled, in connection with PCC, at the center.

A LOT OF TIME AND A LOT OF PAINT...made the old gymnasium, left, at Stokes-Pactolus High School site into a place where the young and old alike can recreate. The gym, restored by members of the community, now has basketball games nightly when the weather is warm. Above, community member Alston James applies the second coat of paint to the lobby of the gym.

SCOUTS...and other community groups never had a set place to meet until the old cafeteria was converted into a community building.

Now Stokes boasts Girl Scouts and Cub Scouts as well as Boy Scouts.

PICNIC TABLES...under the trees make a good vantage point for watching softball games and waiting to play. On July 4, 1980, the community held an all-day picnic and softball marathon at the activity center to celebrate their new field.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

In a world that is as fast-paced as ours, it is tricky to come up with the fastest man or woman in it.

A friend of mine has a contender.

He says the fastest person he has ever seen is the kid in the car wash who, in the 43 seconds it takes for your car to come off the conveyor belt and for you to get in it, accomplishes the following:

Directs your three mirrors skyward.

Changes position of the car seat.

Locks your window vents in an open position.

Starts your windshield signals.

Turns on your directional signals.

Changes your radio dial to a German-speaking station you have never heard with Communist news bulletin.

When I asked him what was so amazing about that, he said, "This is the same kid who minutes before said he knew nothing about foreign cars and took ten minutes to figure out where to put the gas nozzle."

That's pretty fast, but I have a few entries of my own.

I had a cleaning woman once who moved with the speed of bureaucracy. However, let me carelessly throw away an important piece of paper in my wastebasket and she would grab it like it was timed to go off, race past the container in the garage and often run four-minute miles to catch up with the garbage truck to speed it on its way out of the city.

Another one I'd recommend for the Top 10 was a child of mine who at the age of two would go into the bathroom and shut the door. In a scant three minutes, mind you, this little person would empty a 30-gallon hot water tank, permapaint the walls with lipstick, unroll the toilet tissue, stuff a small appliance down the lint trap, feed Alka-Seltzers to the toilet, pull a towel bar out of the wall, melt two bars of soap, eat the head off a rubber duck, and drown the Tidy Bowl man.

He could not pull his own pants up.

Come to think of it, the fastest person I ever saw was a waitress I encountered right after the birth of my first child. I hadn't been out of the house in four months and my best friend and I were going to have a nice, long, leisurely lunch. She came to the table and said, "Drink? Wanta order?" and was back in three minutes with the drink AND the food. She burnt my lips with the pot as she refilled my coffee cup, dropped the check in my lap as she replaced the top tablecloth and made change. It was all over in 20 minutes.

JANE CAROL HUDSON... is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Keith C. Hudson of Ayden, who announce her engagement to Melvin Leo Stocks, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Stocks of Greenville. The wedding is planned for June 6.

She told us she had to get ready for the luncheon "rush."

On the average, men and women in the 55-75 year span need 300-400 calories less per day than they did during the 35-55 year period.

Paramore-Sutton Vows Solemnized On Friday

Miss Sandra Kay Sutton and Snode Allen Paramore III were united in marriage in a candlelight ceremony at eight o'clock Friday evening at the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Willis Wilson officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Johnson Sutton of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S.A. Paramore Jr. of Rt. 2, Winterville.

A program of nuptial wedding music was presented by Annette Braxton, organist. Randy Sawyer sang "Whither Thou Goest," "If" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of chiffonette and chantilly lace. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline and shadow sleeves. Chantilly lace outlined the neckline, applied the sleeves and adorned the bodice. Clusters of seed pearls etched the patterns of the lace. The full length skirt extended into a chapel train. Garlands of chantilly lace applied the chiffonette skirt. A double layered flounce bordered with lace encircled the hemline of the gown. The bride chose a layered mantilla of bridal illusion bordered with chantilly lace flowing from a lace Camelot cap etched with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of blue, yellow and white daisies with baby's breath and greenery.

MRS. SNODE ALLEN PARAMORE III

Robin Harrell of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of blue silesta over peau do soie fashioned with a blouse bodice with split cape sleeves, scooped neckline and flowing skirt. Self-bows accented the waistline and shoulders. She carried a basket of assorted daisies.

The bridesmaids were Julie Morgan of Farmville, cousin of the bride, Mary Sutton of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride, Mary Lee Smart of Winterville and Marjorie Sutton of Greenville, sisters of the bridegroom and Jackie Bryant of Greenville. They wore dresses identical to that of the honor attendant and carried similar baskets of assorted daisies.

Toni Robinson of Ayden, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest register and distributed the wedding programs.

The bridegroom's father was best man. The ushers were Ronnie Sutton of Greenville, brother of the bride, Ricky Franks of Grifton, cousin of the bride, Larry Smart of Winterville and Richard Sutton of Greenville, brothers-in-law of the bridegroom and Ervin Hardee of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a blue polyester formal gown with a high neckline and long, sheer organza sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal length ensemble of coral knit and French Nottingham lace with the gown styled with a lace bodice with sheer chiffon sleeves. Both mothers wore orchid corsages. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. Verna Jackson and the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. Alma Paramore were miniature white carriages.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S.A. Paramore Jr.

Immediately following the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception held in the church parlor.

The refreshment table was covered with a white cloth and lace overlay and the centerpiece was white snapdragons, miniature carnations, blue daisies and baby's breath and silver candleholders. Punch was served by Mrs. Merline Morgan, aunt of the bride.

The four tiered wedding cake was served by Mrs. Sally Robinson and Mrs. Viola Stancill, aunts of the bride.

Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Tim Tyndall and the good-byes were said

Wedding Vows Solemnized

Anne Young Brabrand of Greenville and Carey Lewis Joyner of Winterville were united in marriage Saturday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. John Randolph Price at high noon.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Brabrand of West Point, Va. and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Ruth W. Joyner and the late Carey A. Joyner of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was provided by Tom Hawley, organist, from St. Timothy's Episcopal Church.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a full length gown of candlelight chantilly lace with an empire waist and chapel length train. Her candlelight veil was attached to a wreath of cream colored spring flowers with a center of pink rosebuds and long trailing ribbons of off white and pink.

Joyce L. Lampkin of Williamsburg, Va. was maid of honor. She wore a daphne rose gown featuring an empire waist and accented pleated, full length skirt with camisole bodice and sleeveless jacket. She wore a hat to match her bouquet of long-stemmed spring flowers in shades of pink with pink rosebuds in the center with long, trailing ribbons of rose and pink. Janet L. Werner of Gloucester, Va. was mistress of ceremonies.

Bridesmaids were Marguerite A. Staley and by Mr. and Mrs. R.B. Franks Jr., aunt and uncle of the bride. The ceremony was directed by Mrs. Becky Moye.

The bride is a graduate of Greenville Christian Academy and is presently attending Pitt Community College and is employed with Pitt Crown and Bridge Lab. The bridegroom is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and is presently engaged in farming.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Rt. 2, Winterville.

MRS. CAREY LEWIS JOYNER

Cyndy Latham, both of Greenville. Their gowns, hats and flowers were identical to that of the maid of honor.

Robert C. Joyner, the bridegroom's brother of Wilmington, was best man.

Ushers were John P. Brabrand, the bride's brother of Nags Head, and Sydney Bowen of Greenville. The bridegroom's nephew, Christopher Robert Coggins of Greenville, was ring bearer.

A reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Ruth W. Joyner, immediately following the ceremony.

After a wedding trip to Nags Head, the couple will reside in Winterville.

The bride is a student at East Carolina University and the bridegroom is employed by Olsen Associates, Inc.

BAKED DATE RICE PUDDING

This worthwhile combination of flavors may be new to you.

1/2 cup long-grain rice
1 quart milk
1-3rd cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/2 cup pitted dates (as fresh as possible), each cut into eighths

In a buttered 1 1/2-quart round casserole (7 1/2 by 2 1/4 inches) stir together the rice, milk, sugar, salt and nutmeg. Bake uncovered in a preheated 300-degree oven, stirring midway, for 1 hour. Stir in the dates. Continue baking uncovered, stirring midway, until rice is tender and milk is absorbed — about 1 hour longer. Good served warm or cold with half-and-half, heavy cream or milk. Makes 6 servings.

Miss Cherry, Mr. Corey Speak Vows

The wedding vows of Miss Karen Denise Cherry and Henry Tilmon Corey were spoken Saturday at 4 p.m. The Rev. Melvin Rawls performed the double ring ceremony in the Mount Pleasant Christian Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. James Ray Jackson of Greenville and Mr. Jack Alton Cherry of Stokes. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Corey of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal white gown of sheerganza and chantilly lace fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in lace encrusted with pearls. The full lace bishop sleeves featured lace cuffs and the full sheerganza skirt with ante bellum scallops over cascading lace ruffles flowed into an attached cathedral train. Her chapel length veil of silk illusion, bordered in lace, was attached to a matching lace capulet etched with pearls and iridescents. She carried a cascade of pink and white silk roses, carnations and greenery.

A program of music was presented by Mrs. Jewell Whitehurst, of Bethel, organist. Renee Davis, guitarist, accompanied Kathy Worthington, who sang "If" Carlyle McGowan sang "Evergreen" and "The Wedding Prayer" during the candlelight ceremony.

The bride's sister, Mrs.

Vicki Sweeney of Greenville, was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Robin Briley and Brenda Brown, stepsister of the bride, both of Stokes. Donna Brown, stepsister of the bride, and Penny Corey, sister of the bridegroom, both of Greenville. Kathy Sweeney was junior bridesmaid and Lori Sweeney was flower girl. Both are nieces of the bride.

The honor attendant wore a formal gown of frost rose silesta designed with an open neckline, criss-cross empire bodice with gathered shoulders and a cowl drape in back. The wrap styled gown with side tie and streamers fell in circular tiers around the skirt. The bridesmaids wore gowns of wine silesta styled like that of the honor attendant. The junior attendant wore a gown of burgandy and the flower girl wore a formal gown of pink floral with a matching cape. They carried bouquets of pink and red silk roses, carnations and greenery. The flower girl carried a basket of pink and red silk roses and carnations.

The mother of the bride wore a formal mauve polyester knit gown and the mother of the bridegroom selected a formal blue polyester knit gown. Both were remembered with orchid corsages and the grandmothers of the bride couple were given corsages.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Randy Cherry, brother of the bride, Gary Mayo, both of Greenville, Carl Briley, cousin of the bride of Stokes, Greg Keel of Bethel, Tim Cherry, half-brother of the bride, was junior usher and Davie Brown was ring bearer.

Mrs. Pam Young, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the wedding and Mrs. Linda Worthington directed the wedding.

The bride, a graduate of North Pitt High School, attends North Pitt Community College and works at Service

Roofing Co. The bridegroom, also a graduate of North Pitt High School, attends NCSU.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by Mr. and Mrs. James Ray Jackson. Mrs. Kathy Brown assisted in serving cake after it was cut by the couple. Punch was poured by Mrs. Pam Brown. Assisting were Mrs. Joyce Cherry, Mrs. Joyce Briley, Miss Deborah Briley and Miss Renee Briley. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Alton Cherry.

A rehearsal party was given Friday by the parents of the bridegroom in the church fellowship hall.

Dear Abby

Simply Ignore Her Remarks

DEAR ABBY: When my mother-in-law, who lives in Oregon, heard that we were expecting our fourth child in six years, she wrote, "What on earth is wrong with you crazy kids? How do you expect to support the family you are going in for?" We told her we plan to have six children.

Abby, we have never asked her (or anybody else) for financial support, and her attitude bugs me.

Should I ignore her question, or write back and give her a piece of my mind?

MAD IN MISSOURI

DEAR MAD: Giving your mother-in-law a piece of your mind will bring no peace to yours. Ignore her uncalculated remarks.

DEAR ABBY: Every time I read a letter in your column about a man who thinks he's all washed up sexually because he's impotent, my blood boils! These men are convinced that no woman would want them. Are they merely ignorant, or are they just using that as an excuse to mask the real reasons?

Such men are male chauvinists who see sexual satisfaction only in traditional male terms, and if they aren't able to deliver that way, they don't want to play! How naive and uninformed!

Your column is filled with letters from women who complain that they are married to cold sex machines who don't know the first thing about how satisfying warm hugs and tender caresses can be.

Our libraries and bookstores are full of excellent sex manuals detailing the various ways men and women can please and satisfy each other without going in for exhausting intercourse marathons. In these enlightened times, everyone should know that impotent men can be wonderful lovers!

For a man to satisfy a woman, he need only cast off his prudishness and inhibitions, forget all the stereotyped nonsense he heard from other men about what women really want, and show some imagination and sense of adventure. He will be amazed at how much mutual enjoyment can be achieved.

For heaven's sake, who knows better than the woman herself what it takes to satisfy her? Just ask her to be honest. And when she tells you — believe her! Sign me... BLISSFUL IN BALTIMORE

DEAR BLISSFUL: You have said well what many people need to know.

DEAR ABBY: How does a respectable man keep from falling in love with his neighbor's wife?

FALLING IN SPRINGFIELD, OHIO

DEAR FALLING: He keeps a "respectable" distance from her.

CREAMY CABBAGE
Cheese gives an old-time recipe new flavor.

1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon sugar
Salt
1/2 cup milk
1 1/2-pound head green cabbage (sliced into 1/4 to 1/2-inch strands), 2 quarts tightly packed
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup grated (medium fine) lightly packed extra sharp cheddar cheese Stir together the cornstarch, sugar and 1/2 teaspoon salt; gradually stir in the milk, keeping smooth. In a 5-quart saucepot bring 3/4 cup water to a boil; add 1/2 teaspoon salt and the cabbage, cover and boil, turning cabbage over several times, until tender-crisp — 7 to 10 minutes; drain off any water. Toss butter with cabbage; push to side of saucepot; add cornstarch mixture to free size of pan; over moderate heat, stir cornstarch mixture until it thickens and boils; quickly stir in cheese and toss with cabbage. Makes 6 servings.

ORANGE PEAS
Good flavor and pretty appearance.
10-ounce package frozen tiny peas in butter sauce
1/2 cup thin strips Spanish onion
Membrane-free sections

from 2 large seedless oranges (1 cup)

Thaw (do not cook) the peas in their pouch; slit the pouch and empty the peas and their sauce into a 1- or 1 1/2-quart saucepan. Add the onion. Cover and simmer briefly, stirring several times, just until very hot and the onions are tender-crisp; stir in the oranges and let stand, covered, off heat until they warm. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR GOREN

Q.1—What is a splinter bid? Can it be used by both opener and responder? Do you think it is a useful convention?—K. Johnson, Cincinnati, Ohio

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—This is not the first time we've answered a question about "splinter" bids, nor do we expect it to be the last. As some of the modern bidding conventions become more widely known, it is natural for the casual player to become familiar with these ideas in an effort to improve his game. So I'm not in the least reluctant to discuss this topic.

A "splinter bid" is an unusual jump in a suit to show a singleton. It can be used by both opener and responder. It is equivalent to showing a game raise in partner's suit but, by highlighting shortness, it has considerable advantages. Before we consider those, let us look at the theory of the bid and some examples.

As a rule, you do not want to preempt your partner out of the auction. Therefore, when your side has opened the bidding, a double jump has no natural meaning. It is an idle bid that can be put to better use. Look at South's last bid in each of these auctions:

a) South	North
4 ♠	1 ♥
b) South	North
1 ♣	1 ♠
c) South	North
3 ♠	1 ♥

When playing splinter bids, South's last bid in each auction shows a singleton in the bid suit and values for a game raise in partner's suit. In sequence a) and b) South's four club bid is unnecessary in any natural sense. Sequence c) is different. You might have a weak hand with a long spade suit and wish to pre-empt to keep the opponents out of the auction. However, possession of the highest-ranking suit weighs heavily in your favor, so you can show that type of hand by responding one spade and then bidding spades as cheaply as possible thereafter.

On what type of hand would you make a splinter bid? Here are two hands that would qualify for the first two sequences:

a) ♠ K x x	b) ♠ Q J x x
♥ A J x x	♥ A Q x
♦ K J x x x	♦ A K J x x

Community School

School. The old Stokes-Pactolus School then became a middle school, but in 1976, with the completion of Welcome Middle, the facility was completely abandoned.

Between 1976 and 1980 the building was vandalized severely. Windows were broken, walls destroyed and doors knocked down. In 1980 the main structure was demolished.

On February 20, 1979, however, a community meeting was held at the Stokes Elementary School to determine community interest in restoring parts of the building. Thirty-five people attended, and all expressed a desire to participate.

On March 6, 1979 Community Schools Coordinator Alice Keene requested permission from the board of education to spend $1,200 of community schools' money to restore the lunch-room building, to place the responsibility for the facility under community schools, and to work with the Stokes Community to get the project started as soon as possible. The board approved the request.

Since then, long hours and hard work have gone into the restoration. The cafeteria is converted to a community building which houses meetings, Pitt Community College classes, arts and crafts, and senior citizens.

"Over a period of 50 years plus this school facility is still the center of the community," commented Gaskins. "Children of all ages use the facility and the people of Stokes, as well as the Pitt County Community Schools Advisory Council, Pitt County Commissioners, Pitt County Board of Education and all other supportive agencies should be commended for the hard work they put forth."

The community members put a great deal of the credit on Community Schools Coordinator Alice Keene. "If it were not for her patience, dedication and know-how," said Warren, "We wouldn't have been as successful. She and Barry both have put in long hours and we deeply appreciate it."

"The biggest benefit I see from this project," she continued, "is the increased communication between the community and the schools. We are involved and have something right here in our backyard we can work at, relax at and learn at. The community is alive again."

Gaskins feels this project is a sign of the future. "I hope that this would be the direction we'd take in other areas of the county where schools have been abandoned," he explained. "Community Schools hopes that school buildings will cease to be destroyed and will remain the community center they were meant to be."

In the meantime, communities such as Stokes have their own answer.

♦ x ♦ x

How does partner react a splinter bid? The less he has in the splinter suit, the better his hand becomes. An ideal holding would be A x x x or x x x x. In the first case it means there are no losers in the suit; in the second, there is one loser, but all the high cards in the other suits are "working".

The worst holding in the splinter suit would be something like K-J-x. Although you have four points in the suit, they might not produce a single trick, and you have a certain loser in the splinter suit.

If you have no wasted values in the splinter suit, you can often make a slam on far fewer than the 33 points usually prescribed. For instance, here's a hand North might have for his one heart opening bid in the first sequence:

♦ A x ♥ K Q x x x ♦ A x ♠ x x x x. Although the combined high card count for the two hands is only 25, the prospects for 12 tricks are excellent.

Jack Kemp Revels In Washington Atmosphere

AP Newsfeatures Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Jack Kemp doesn't just breathe Washington's new Republican air. He revels in it.

"I'm at the center of the most exciting revolution since 1776," exults the New York congressman who has become one of the Republican Party's most eminent young men since he began to preach "supply-side" economics four years ago.

He speaks with bounding enthusiasm. Give Kemp a word, an idea — particularly on economics — and he's off, citing ideological kinsmen from Ronald Reagan to the 12th century philosopher Maimonides.

The political image of Jack Kemp has changed spectacularly since he was elected to Congress in 1970, at 35 fresh from a football career as a quarterback for the San Diego Chargers and Buffalo Bills.

He was first regarded as a curiosity. The only congressman ever to hand off to Cookie Gilchrist or pass to Elbert Debenion, onetime holder of the pro record for fumbles recovered — 38, all his own.

Moreover, the football prowess that got him elected as a conservative Republican from a Democratic district made him an intellectual lightweight by definition to the unfriendly.

Then, in 1977, he became "Jackie One Note," the man who drew Laffer curves on napkins at Republican dinners throughout the nation. The curves depict the theory by economist Arthur Laffer that forms the basis for Kemp's economics. When tax rates get too high, productivity and tax revenues drop. Cut them, and the trend reverses.

The prescription became the Kemp-Roth bill, providing for a 30 percent tax cut over three years, a measure its backers believe will create such economic expansion and productivity that it will eventually make up for lost revenues — and dampen inflation, besides.

Adopted as a Republican campaign plank in 1978 and by Reagan in 1980, it's now at the heart of Reagan's economic program. But it has plenty of detractors, economists and politicians in both parties who call it shortsighted, simple-minded and inflationary. During his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination, Vice President George Bush called it "voodoo economics."

Kemp laughs at the voodoo tag and continues to stump for the bill. Compulsively energetic, he is now a national figure, a man already "mentioned" for the presidency, the vice presidency and the Senate.

He was an adviser to Reagan during the presidential campaign, is newly elected chairman of the Republican conference, third-ranking member of the House GOP hierarchy, and spends his days bustling from Capitol Hill to the White House and all over Washington stumping for Republican programs.

Kemp's own political fortunes have risen with the ascendancy of Laffer's "supply side" economics over more traditional Republican doctrine that gives a higher priority to a balanced budget than a tax cut.

And Kemp's fraternal association with David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, has further consolidated his position among the influentials.

Stockman credits Kemp with with consolidating his economic thinking. Kemp says: "Dave's my best friend." The two "talk every day. Dave's an intellectual giant. He was the most brilliant member of Congress as far as I was concerned."

Kemp's zeal about taxes is the kind of zeal he's lived with all his life.

In his younger days, in high school and at Occidental College, it was football. He's remembered as a quarterback who though undersized — 5-10, 185 pounds — could carry his team on sheer determination.

In his early professional years, he was a marginal player, cut by four teams in the United States and Canada. He knew that even a successful football career can be ephemeral. So he looked to another competitive field, politics, and began reading economics and political science as voraciously as game plans.

Beginning in 1958, he began making appearances and speeches for various Republican gubernatorial candidates — Nelson Rockefeller in New York, Richard Nixon and Reagan in California. He struck out on his own five years after he joined the Buffalo Bills when a congressional seat opened up. He won with 52 percent of the vote in a blue-collar Democratic district. In 1974 he got 72 percent, and he's had only token opposition in his last two races.

In 1976, Kemp met Jude Wanniski, then an editorial writer for the Wall Street Journal, who introduced him to Laffer's theorem. With typical enthusiasm and not a little ambition, Kemp took the Laffer curves on the road.

He covered 43 states in 1977 and 1978, impressing GOP audiences with verve and drive as well as the message. When California approved Proposition 13 in June 1978, tax cuts were all the rage and reporters started trailing Kemp. By that fall he was talked of as presidential material.

Some colleagues grumble that Kemp was more interested in publicity than his congressional chores. Rep. Robert Michel, now House minority leader, allowed that he'd like to see more of Kemp at Appropriations Committee meetings, but added: "You can't have it both ways. Jack's done a whale of a job in public relations for the party."

Kemp at any rate does his best to have it both ways. He seems to operate as he did in the last quarter of a football game: When fatigue sets in, push on and get by on sheer drive.

Between a round of hectic meetings and telephone calls recently, Kemp took time to expand on his views of the new economic thinking.

"It's a revolution of ideas. New ideas are replacing old ideas. The Keynesian consensus is being shattered by the experience of the Western democracies with high inflation and low rates of growth."

Of Reagan, he says: "Whereas Ford and Carter looked at parts of the problem, whipping inflation now or cutting energy consumption, Reagan has a grand vision, a grand strategy for the '80s."

"No one besides John F. Kennedy had a grand strategy for putting America back to work and bringing prosperity to the nation. And with due respect, Reagan is the first president in some time to have a strategy, to have a plan to stabilize the budget without going through the Herbert Hoover answer to inflation."

Kennedy was considered a liberal Democrat. Kemp has always been identified as a conservative Republican. How does he describe himself?

Kristol, a theoretician for the neo-conservative movement that includes many erstwhile liberals, is one of Kemp's intellectual mentors. Kemp feels neo-conservatism perfectly expresses what he calls capitalism with a conscience.

Walter Lippmann said it's true that the government which governs least is best, but that it's also true that government is best which does the most for people."

Kemp says: "Irving has given me the appeal of neo-conservatism — recognizing that people want government to be more humane and conservatism to be more compassionate."

The week after this conversation, during a trip back to his district, Kemp showed some of his ideas in action.

Speaking to the Chamber of Commerce in Hamburg, a Buffalo suburb, he reiterated Reagan's pledge that money for justifiable projects for the truly needy would be available — but none, Kemp said, for what he called corporate socialism, including Hamburg's request for $400,000 to expand its golf course.

Kemp thinks his "compassionate conservatism" is the reason he's been elected overwhelmingly from a blue-collar district. He believes other factors are his union background — he was president of the National Football League's Players' Association — and his rapport with blacks, helped by many friendships from his football days.

Not everybody is converted. George Wessel, president of the Buffalo AFL-CIO Council, suggests Kemp's celebrity appeal accounts for his success at the polls and adds: "We're blaming Jack Kemp for a lot of what's happening now. We're blaming him for cutbacks in food stamps and unemployment insurance" in the administration's program.

Besides tax cuts, Kemp's current project is "enterprise zones," a proposal to set aside bereft inner city areas for rehabilitation by encouraging businesses by tax breaks to locate there.

It ties in with a commitment to civil rights that he feels the Republican Party lost sight of for a time. "We lost the black vote in 1934 and it never came back," he says. "We were the ones who walked away from our roots in 1932 — the full dinner pail, social justice and opportunity that Lincoln and the 1920s had given the Republican Party."

You're Warned: A Big Zip May Zap Your Memory

By JAMES V. HEALION
United Press International

Whether you're Einstein or Joe Blow, the new 9-digit Zip Code will tax your memory span.

The brain can absorb just so much. With digits, it's seven plus or minus two. After that, it's numerical overload. But don't toss out the postage stamps and start sending smoke signals just yet.

You can get the hang of remembering almost anything — even the names of that couple from the cocktail party — if you put your mind to it. That's because the Greeks had a word for it, and it's more than 2,000 years old: Mnemonics.

There were no pens or pencils to speak of then so orators usually relied on their memories to remember all the things they were going to say in their speeches. They used meaningful associations to do it — a technique taught by Aristotle.

So Demosthenes may have imagined a baked ham to guide himself through the verbal thickets as he branded his accuser, Aeschines, a "third rate actor" in his famous "On the Crown" oration. So spellbinding was his address that Aeschines exiled himself to Rhodes.

The memory techniques the Greeks used have been studied from a scientific point of view only recently. And when Dr. William G. Chase, professor of psychology at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, started analyzing them — "Gee whiz! We found they really do work. And they work in a very striking way."

Talk about remembering a 9-digit Zip Code? Piece of cake. There was one Chase student using mnemonic devices who was able to increase his memory span from the normal 7 digits up to 80 digits.

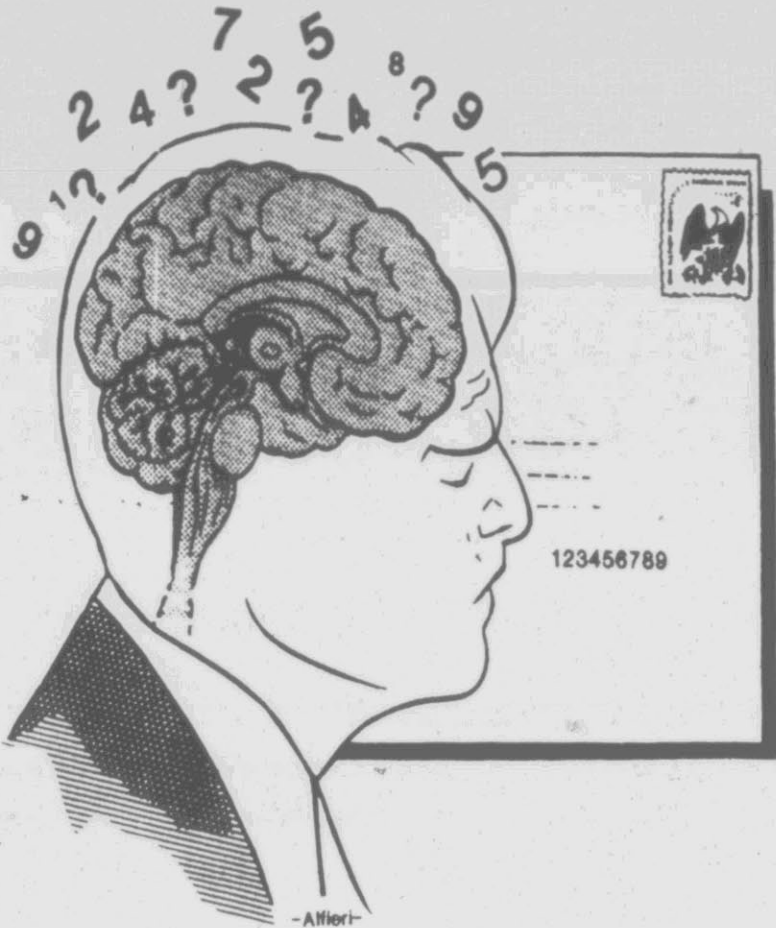

"You can read him 80 digits, and he'll be able to spout them back at you at a normal rate," Chase said.

The average mortal can only remember up to seven or eight. Of course, it took the student 200 hours to be able to bounce those 80 digits back at Chase. But not everybody needs to remember 80 digits.

Back to the Zip Code, which goes into effect in June so that the additional four digits will further pinpoint the mail's destination.

"The thing about memory is to associate the unknown with something you already know. The problem is not the first five digits so much, it's the last four," Chase said.

"One technique that I use is to make an age or a year out of those. Say the four additional numbers are 1550. That would be 15½ years old. Imagine a girl almost 16 and you would have no trouble remembering it. That's probably all you need to bring the number within your memory span."

Some people have trouble remembering names. No problem, says Chase. You select the stranger's most prominent feature and concentrate. Take Big Nose Samson. The first thing that comes to mind is Samson with the long hair from the bible.

"Imagine if you clipped off that hair, the guy would lose his strength. Next time you see him, you'll see his nose — and you'll be surprised how really well that works. The Samson association will come right back."

Meaningful or vivid association is the key to remembering.

Professor Ronald Salafia of Fairfield (Conn.) University, who also teaches students how to increase their memories, has a tip for hosts or hostesses who introduce newcomers to a half dozen people at once.

"By the time you've gotten to the middle of the group, you've forgotten the people you were introduced to first. By the time you've gotten to the end, you've forgotten all of them."

"The thing is you're going so fast, the information is going into short term memory and being dumped. You're allowing the distraction of the next person on the list to overload and dump the information in your short term memory," he said.

He said some people really aren't as forgetful as they think they are.

"Sometimes when they say, 'I've forgotten' it's not that they are having a retrieval difficulty, it's that the information never really got in there in the first place. No matter how much they search, ponder, think and strain, they're not going to get that information out. It's just not there.

"Usually, hosts and hostesses make the mistake — and I think it's the silliest thing in the world — when one person or one couple arrives at a party they start running through all the names," Salafia said.

"That is just a futile exercise. What would be better would be for the host and hostess to bring those people in, introduce them to say one or two people, and then go around and have them meet more people later."

Whether you concentrate on remembering an introduction, a Social Security number, which has nine digits, or a telephone company credit card number, he said, it goes into long term memory, which has no real limit, and is permanent.

A telephone credit card number can run to 14 digits. It was committed to memory by one subscriber, used repeatedly, and then one day out of the blue, the second group of three digits vanished in one of life's little mysteries.

"That's an incomplete number, sir," the operator kept saying. It took five minutes for the caller to dredge it up from the murk.

Sometimes the testimony of a witness relating to a crime doesn't always mesh with that of other witnesses. Salafia was asked about the discrepancy.

"The brain doesn't work like a tape recorder or video tape machine. It doesn't record information exactly. When you try to recall information from your brain, it's almost like a random access memory in a computer."

"It searches through different memory files and what comes out is really a construction of what is stored in the brain. It may not be exactly as the events occurred because what's stored gets integrated with what's already there."

Salafia's Pittsburgh colleague, Dr. Chase, was asked for his telephone number if the need arose to call him back in connection with this story. Chase began giving it and stopped. "Gee, I forgot it," he said.

He was kidding, darn it!

Both Above And Underground

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)

The city that leads this nation in pioneering underground industrial development is continuing expansion above ground right over its International Trade Center, with preparations under way for a 230-acre, rail-served industrial park.

Approximately 24 million cubic yards of earth are scheduled to be moved for grading, rail and utility extension, and construction of streets and roads connecting with an interstate highway. The project is a joint venture of the Great Midwest Corporation and Burlington Northern Railroad.

Down below, Kansas City's underground Terropolis houses over 50 commercial and industrial companies doing over $100 million business annually. The city's Foreign Trade Zone also is located in this underground center.

Tax Protestor Asserts God Told Him Not To Pay

By WILLIAM P. COLEMAN
TAFI, Calif. (UPI) — Paul Bell battles the Internal Revenue Service with a religious fervor.

In fact, his anti-income tax fight is his religion, or at least a big part of it.

Bell, 43, is a former teacher who says he was instructed by God to take up the battle against the income tax and the IRS.

In 1974 he formed Belanco, a non-incorporated organization he describes as "dedicated to follow and serve God and battle the forces that are trying to take citizens' civil rights away from them."

He feels the income tax and the Internal Revenue Service were established to do just that: take away the civil rights of United States residents.

One of the requirements for joining Belanco, which operates from Bell's home here, is a vow to "free yourself from the bondage of this world, including laws of the land that are contrary to the Laws of God."

One of those laws, says Bell, is the income tax. Members of Belanco must "eschew the income tax." They must vow not to allow income tax to be taken out of their pay and not to ever again file a tax return, either federal or state.

Bell said he has not filed an income tax return for the past 10 years. He said the fact that he's never been prosecuted "is proof that the IRS knows I'm right and that they cannot successfully prosecute me."

"God told me to file a W-4 form which forces the employer to stop withholding taxes from your paycheck," he said.

He cites the Bible for his decision to quit paying income taxes.

I say if I don't volunteer to pay it there is nothing the government can do."

He also contends that Belanco and its members are tax exempt because it is a religious organization.

"Each January since 1977 I have gone to the local IRS office and asked to be arrested and prosecuted because I have not filed an income tax return and have not paid taxes," Bell said. "But each year nothing has happened."

Belanco has a legal defense fund to pay legal costs of any member who is taken to court for failing to pay income taxes.

"It costs each member $500 to join the legal defense fund," Bell said. "Then if the IRS or the state hauls him into court we provide whatever legal aid is necessary to fight them."

While Bell says the fact that he hasn't been prosecuted is proof that he is right and that the government is afraid to take him to court, a former U.S. attorney who prosecuted tax cases contradicts his contention.

"It's just a matter of time until they catch up with him," said Anthony Capozzi, an attorney now in private practice in Fresno handling a number of clients with tax problems.

"His arguments against the income tax aren't new and they've all been thrown out by the courts in previous cases."

In answer to Bell's contention that the income tax is voluntary, Capozzi said that laws require voluntary compliance and that violation of those laws could result in prosecution.

"Of course the income tax is based on voluntary assessment and compliance," said Capozzi. "But if you don't volunteer you are breaking the law."

Exodus 30:11-26 shows how the Lord provided for expenses and services of the tabernacle, the spiritual and civil headquarters of God's people," he said. "Moses was to have each male over the age of 20 give a half a shekel for the services of the tabernacle."

He said Verse 15 showed that God never intended for people to be taxed based on how well off they were financially.

"Verse 15 says, 'The rich shall not give more and the poor shall not give less than half a shekel,'" Bell said. "So God is definitely against a tax based on a person's worth."

Besides the Bible, Bell bases his refusal to pay income taxes on the U.S. Constitution.

"The Constitution clearly says the income tax is based on voluntary assessment and compliance," Bell said. "And

Belanco has a legal defense fund to pay legal costs of any member who is taken to court for failing to pay

Sierra Club To Show Film7

The Cypress Group of Sierra Club will meet on Monday, March 9, at 8 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, Elm Street and 14th Street.

Two films will be featured. The first film, "A Closer Look," is a natural history film about the Piedmont region of North Carolina. The second film, "The Rise and Fall of the Great Lakes," is both humorous and hard-hitting. Tastefully done by a Canadian company, the film deals with the journey of a red canoe.

Visitors are welcome.

Slim Short: On The Air For 30 Years

GETTING READY...Susan Roberts, the newest member of the Carolina Today Show, attaches Slim Short's (Bob Allen) microphone, as Walter Hearne, director for the show, looks on.

Text By LaRona Murray

Photos By Tommy Forrest

In the early 1950s Bob Allen was a disc jockey for a county music show at radio station WGTM in Wilson.

"I was doing the record show as well as straight announcing and commercials," he explained. "My manager suggested that I acquire another name to differentiate the activities."

Bob went into a back room, flipped open a phone book and at random picked the name "Short".

"Now, all I need is a first name," he told his manager.

"It shall be 'Slim'," he was informed.

Consequently, the man that became known as Slim Short began a career that has spanned more than 30 years of broadcasting.

"I have seen great strides in the broadcasting profession," he stated. "When I first started in the business we did live commercials and played 78 RPM discs."

Since then scientists have talked by radio to men in space and rockets have carried information to the earth from beyond the moon.

When Slim was 16 he applied for his first broadcasting job in his hometown of Kinston. "A year later I got the job," he recalled.

That was the beginning of other jobs in other towns like Wilson, Elizabeth City, Asheville, Henderson and Mullins, S.C., interrupted only by two years in the army.

In 1959 Slim joined the staff of WNCT Television as a host for the early morning, Carolina Today Show. His colleagues included W.E. Debban, Sherman Husted and form director Clint Long.

Slim speaks with a pronounced southern accent that was developed for his early country music shows. "There were those who said that the show wouldn't last," he said, "because of its makeup and difference in character. But because of this difference it has continued to be a success."

Over the years he has interviewed some notable personalities including Art Linkletter, Andy Griffith and Mrs. Richard Nixon.

"Art Linkletter was the easiest to talk to, Slim remembers. "He was just a warm down-to-earth man. As I remember he talked about things in general and about drugs and their abuses."

According to Slim Short there have been some awkward moments before the camera, like the time he referred to a Democratic candidate for governor as a Republican candidate.

"But my philosophy is," he explained, "that if you make a mistake on camera don't try and correct it, just let it slide or it nearly always gets worse."

And there were the amusing moments. "Like the time I shot the marine sergeant," he smiled. "I was interviewing him on safety in handling weapons. Our guns were loaded with blanks, but I reminded him that unloaded guns kill more people than loaded ones. I wanted to get the message across so I fired my pistol and the sergeant scrambled to his feet so fast he almost knocked the table over."

In 1964 Slim Short succumbed to a desire to enhance his career and went to Hollywood.

"I thought I'd be there for a year or two at least but I came home after 45 days," he said. "I never saw so many people aspiring to the entertainment field and most of them were from Oklahoma and North Carolina. Besides, there was a restaurant in the middle of Hollywood called the Carolina Pines and I got very homesick."

Slim Short has the unique hobby of deer hunting with a bow and arrow.

"Walter Hearne, program director for Carolina Today introduced me to the sport. Our first hunt was in Hyde County. The landowner laughed when he saw that we're hunting with a bow and arrow."

They came home empty handed that day. "But I've bagged two since then," Slim said.

A typical weekday for Slim begins at four in the morning when he arises to prepare for the telecast that begins at six. Asked how he manages to get out of bed so early in the morning he replied, "It just becomes a numbing habit."

Slim leaves the television station about nine and goes to his office in his home on Heritage Street. From there he conducts an advertising and public relations firm.

Slim is married to the former Sue Lee from Kinston. They have two sons, Bobby and Steve and a five month old granddaughter, Jennifer Erin.

"I have enjoyed the people that I've interviewed over the years," he concluded. "Everyone of them, from the farmers to politicians. And I would like to thank those in Eastern North Carolina who have been loyal to Carolina Today. Without them there would be no Slim Short."

HELP FROM HOME...Sue Allen, Slim's wife, and Slim look over a script for a television show he is working on. Getting up at 4 a.m. is part of Slim Short's daily routine, a part he describes as numbing.

Educator Advocates Parents School Children At Home

By KEN FRANKLING
BOSTON (UPI) — John Holt believes America's traditional concept of education is all wrong.

Armed with 20 years of research, he preaches a message on the poor quality of education he believes youngsters receive in public schools and advocates parents teach them, instead, at home.

It's a long way from Holt's professional beginning in the early 1950s as a traditional, conservative teacher in Colorado.

"It seemed sensible that adults decide what kids should learn. But as time went on, I found it didn't work," Holt said. "In my simple-minded way, if I was teaching and kids weren't learning, there had to be a better way."

The Boston-based educator, now 57, first stirred up the educational establishment in the 1960s with two books: "How Children Fail" and "How Children Learn."

Both were aimed at making changes within traditional schools. They said kids do poorly because they are bored with busy work, scared of punishment or confused by their teachers.

"Kids were losing their natural curiosity because of pressure," Holt says.

He suggested schools be made student-oriented, rather than teacher-oriented.

The message was viewed as a radical departure at a time when many teachers implied something was wrong with students who didn't learn, not with the way they were taught.

Holt pressed on until he found "it was a delusion that if we preached the message hard enough, the schools would change their ways."

He departed in the late 1970s to a new position — that youngsters are better off learning at their own pace through home education.

Holt became the father of a new movement, called "Growing Without Schooling." He publishes a newsletter of the same name from his high-ceilinged office overlooking historic Boston Common.

His office is crammed head-high with files, bundles of mail, and papers reaching art works on his walls. The balding, casual dresser has to clear off a chair for a visitor. To call the room cluttered would be kind.

Holt has four sources of income — a mail order book service, funds from his books on education, lecture fees, and subscriptions to his newsletter.

He encourages people to keep their youngsters out of school, educate them at home and nurture a natural curiosity he feels is crushed by classroom pressures.

"As I see it, schools have three primary functions," Holt said.

"One. They keep kids out of adults' hair — out of an adult world that has no use for them."

"Two. They are a social sorting mechanism — a way to distribute citizens to the possibilities of life and work — to grade and label students so society can tell where they should go."

"Three. To teach children to sit still, shut up and do what they're told. To conform."

"It's passivity. Don't rock the boat. It's the Army for kids," Holt said.

The foremost mistake in traditional education, Holt says, is believing that learning is best acquired in a sheltered atmosphere.

"Learning is not the product of teaching," he said. "Vast amounts of things are learned that are not taught. The best time to learn something is when you have a compelling need to do something."

"Society's concept of education is wrong. The idea that I can decide what and when you are to learn is wrong. It's reducing the human animal to laboratory rat with sufficient penalties and rewards — A's, gold stars, and F's."

Home education, he says, doesn't require parents to set up classrooms at home and hammer lessons into their youngsters' heads for six hours a day.

"I know from my own schooling that I rarely got 15 minutes of real teaching a day."

He said most school time is spent on getting ready to work, teacher demonstration or repetitive drills.

However, Holt said the home education movement will never replace traditional education because many people are apprehensive about it, and a vast majority aren't aware of it.

Holt's displeasure with schools still contains a message for the educational establishment.

Holt says school "turned off a large part of my natural curiosity. Ten years after I got out of college, I rediscovered the habit of reading for curiosity and pleasure."

"There is an immense amount of hypocrisy and hocus in requiring students to 'read this' and 'read that.' Because of it, few adults love reading."

"We're a learning animal. You have to be interested in what you are doing."

Holt cited his own experiences, where he said the best learning atmosphere was in World War II. He was a junior officer aboard the Navy submarine U.S.S. Barbero.

"It was exciting, there was camaraderie. The pressure was demanding. It was a very important experience."

"I had a very unusual captain who believed in giving his youngest and most inexperienced officers a lot of responsibility right off the bat. This fellow realized that the best way for a person to learn to do something is to start doing it."

Holt recently took his own advice that a learner bear the responsibility for subject matter. He taught himself to play the cello.

Holt currently is finishing a book on home-based education. He then plans to revise his first two books to include some afterthoughts since their initial publication more than a decade ago.

Reflecting on education in general, Holt said the greatest role anyone can play is "helping kids discover things for themselves. I want to break down barriers that divide children from adults. They should be accessible to the adult world."

He avoids classrooms but considers his work "real teaching."

"Some people have a special passion for enhancing others' skills and information. I even love giving people traffic directions on the street."

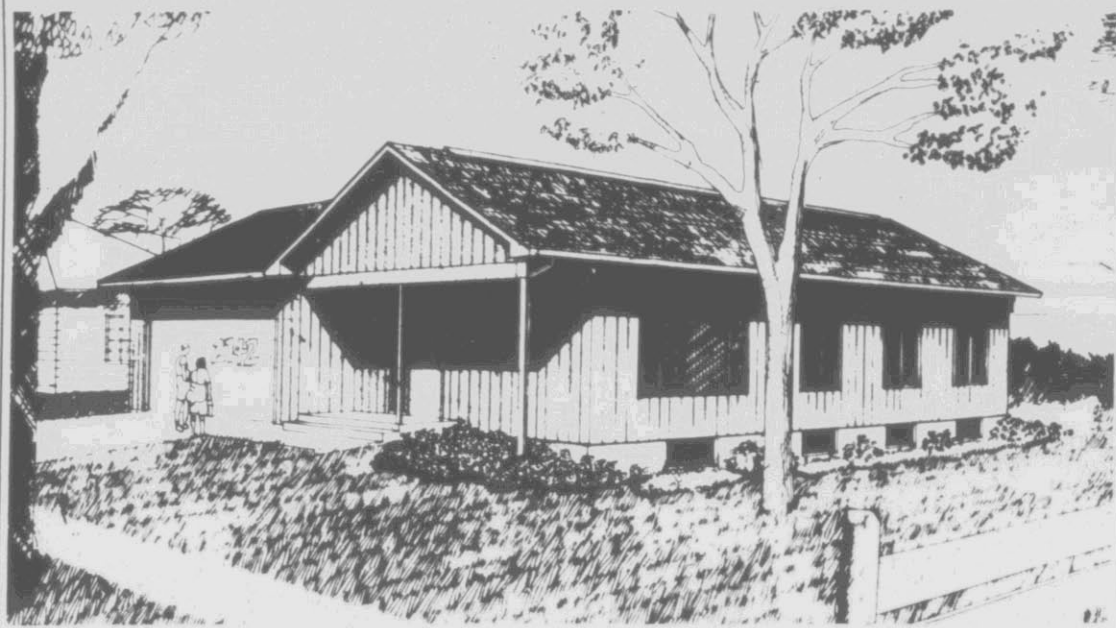

EDUCATION MAVERICK BELIEVES IN TEACHING CHILDREN AT HOME...John Holt, armed with 20 years of research, believes youngsters receive a poor education in the public schools and advocates parents teach them, instead, at home. The Boston-based educator first stirred up the educational establishment in the 1960's with two books: "How Children Fail" and "How Children Learn."

The CedarWood

Passive Solar Design Features Super Kitchen

By Jerry Bishop

The CedarWood is a 1,200 square foot single story ranch design, with 3 bedrooms and 2 baths, the master bedroom features a walk through closet and private bath. Also shown is a full basement and an attached 2-car garage, the garage opens to the dining area. Highlighting this home is the large combination kitchen and dining area, complete with laundry facilities and plenty of work room for the culinary aficionado.

The CedarWood is designed for a flat site with driveway access from the west. Access from the south is optional.

Greatly reducing home heating and cooling requirements are R-30 insulation in the double 2 x 4 walls, R-40 ceiling insulation, double and triple glazed windows, and an air-lock entry. In addition, the home is designed to minimize infiltration, using an air-to-air heat exchanger to provide fresh air. In Cedar Rapids, lowa over 50% of this home's heating requirement is supplied by direct solar gain through the four south facing windows.

In the Cedar Rapids area, The CedarWood, would cost about $56,000 without lot, based on Spring, 1980 construction costs.

First floor—1,222 sq. ft.
Basement—1,200 sq. ft.

Furniture Kit Market Is Growing At Steady Pace

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Figures turned up by one company indicate that, overall, the furniture industry is only keeping pace with population growth. But the market for furniture kits is growing at a rate of about 20 percent a year.

These statistics encouraged Heath Co. to go ahead with its planned expansion into wood furniture kits. And the firm, known for its do-it-yourself electronics kits, has just come out with a catalog offering 13 furniture projects.

"We studied the market and what other kit manufacturers were doing and concluded that this is an excellent growth area for high quality products," said Dennis Foley, product manager for Heath Craft Woodworks.

Three basic reasons are responsible for heightened public interest in furniture kits. They satisfy a demand for quality furniture, lower cost, and the desire for meaningful use of leisure time, according to Foley.

"People are interested in getting more furniture for their dollar. But they don't want to sacrifice quality to low cost," he said. Traditionally, kits in which one invests one's own labor solve the problem of how to get quality at lower cost, noted Foley.

Furthermore, he added, furniture building is a way to enrich one's life and learn something in the process.

Heretofore, the typical customer for a Heathkit project has been a college-educated male earning over $25,000 a year who is most likely to be engaged in a technical occupation. Company executives anticipate that wood furniture kits will appeal to a wider spectrum of consumers, including women.

The projects include dining, coffee and sofa tables, a desk, dining chairs, and several small accessory items such as a wood-framed hall mirror, a dictionary stand and a plant stand. Some of the furniture is in the mid-19th-century oak style known today as nostalgic oak.

There are also a group of glass and brass coffee tables in transitional styles suitable for both modern and traditional interiors. The time required to complete the projects varies from two or three hours for simple projects such as the dictionary stand to about 100 hours for a rolltop desk.

According to Foley, the level of skill called for is not too high. "If you can build one of the kits, you can build all of them," he said. However, it takes considerably less concentration to build the small items than to put together one of the larger projects. No special tools beyond a hand or electric drill and a screwdriver and clamps are required.

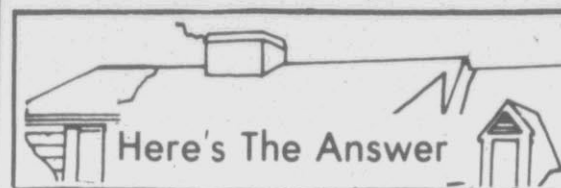

All parts—including such items as sandpaper, glue screws and drill bits, wrenches and hardware—are provided in the kit, along with large, poster-size directions. Optional finishing kits are also available with paste varnish and stain.

One aspect of the growth of the market for furniture kits has been a growing awareness among consumers that all furnitures kits are not created equal, according to Foley. Among some of the features to watch for when choosing a kit are logical and clear instructions, and a well-thought-out method of packing so that all parts needed together are together.

The most successful kits are those which are designed to be built as kits, so that assembly methods are suited to the individual who is building at home. Instructions should take the builder through every step in a logical sequence and it is also helpful if the manufacturer provides an address or phone number where help is available if trouble crops up. Some manufacturers arrange to test their instructions while developing them and then submit finished kits to consumers of average ability to see if any difficulties occur. In each instance, the kits are revised to incorporate suggestions of the kit testers, said Foley.

Q.—A wet glass was left on our varnished dining room table for several days. A white mark now is there. We have hesitated to do anything about it for fear of ruining the finish altogether. What can we do about it other than refinishing the entire table top? We have received a number of suggestions, including using cigarette ashes.

A.—Cigarette ashes, mixed with camphorated oil, sometimes work. So does camphorated oil used alone. Denatured alcohol also is good for this purpose, although it might affect the finish if used on a surface that has been coated with shellac. Whichever product is used, the area must be rubbed with a clean, soft cloth. If the stain doesn't disappear immediately, keep rubbing. Sometimes it may take as much as 10 minutes of rubbing to get the desired result.

Q.—We soon will be paving the area in back of our house with bricks. We intend to use the type of installation that requires only sand. Is this practical and what tips can you give us?

A.—It is reasonably practical, but not as good as using mortar. Once the bricks have been laid, spread dry sand on them. Using a broom, spread the sand into the cracks between the bricks. When all the gaps have been filled, carefully—very carefully—sweep off the excess sand. If you do this too vigorously, you will sweep some of the sand out of the cracks, which is what you do not want. After everything seems in order, get your garden hose and turn on the sprinkler part of it to the finest spray. Hold the hose slightly upward so that the water does not push the sand from between the bricks. Check every few days to be certain that the sand has not settled too much. You occasionally may have to add more sand, which is what might be considered the weakness of the method.

Q.—I read in a magazine about using shellac stick to fill out a gouge in a table, but I have been unable to purchase any such thing. In fact, one hardware dealer said he didn't know what I was talking about. Is there such a thing as a shellac stick and where can I buy one?

A.—There surely are shellac sticks, but not all stores carry them. Try a store that carries wood-finishing materials. When you purchase such a stick (it looks like a fat piece of crayon), you have to get the right color so that the old finish can be matched. Shellac in stick form seems darker than when it is melted and spread out thinly.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, remover, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual replies cannot be undertaken.)

Grocery Bill Seminar Set

Ways to slash grocery bills with manufacturers' coupons and refund offers will be taught at a special consumer education seminar at East Carolina University in early April.

"Coupons and Refunds: How to Save Money on Groceries," will be offered twice, Tuesday, April 7, 7 p.m.-9 p.m., and Wednesday, April 8, 10 a.m.-Noon.

Instructor is Cheryl Pevehouse, editor of two consumer-interest newspapers, whose success with coupons and refunds has been the subject of numerous television and newspaper features.

The class is designed for homemakers, single people, students and all bargain hunters interested in cutting costs of food and household products, says Ms. Pevehouse.

Further information is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834, 757-6143.

From various sources come these bits of information of interest to the homeowner:

Some purists might object to the fact that fiberglass roof shingles are being installed on the cottage in New Rochelle, N.Y., where Thomas Paine, author-hero of the American Revolution, lived in the early 1800s. There were no fiber glass shingles in those days, which rules them out in a restoration, but George Licht, White House architect during the administrations of Calvin Coolidge through Harry Truman, made the specification to prevent burning embers from neighborhood fires from igniting wooden shingles.

Solar hot-water systems were first offered as an option in 1976 by Continental Homes of Phoenix, Ariz. Three years later, it introduced these solar systems as standard on new houses in five of its 16 subdivisions. It will soon have solar hot-water systems in all 27 of its subdivisions. A feature of the flat-plate solar collectors is that they have a tough, durable polyvinyl fluoride film which has the appearance of glass but is much lighter and easier to handle.

In the "Passive Solar House," a book by architect Rodney Wright, an analysis of 31 cities across the country shows that, in Seattle, solar heating can provide 94 percent of the total heating requirement, ranging from 89 percent in January to 100 percent February through November. The study, Wright claims, also disclosed that in Burlington, Vt., where the normal January low is 7 degrees Fahrenheit, the sun can provide 92 percent of the total requirement, ranging from 83 percent in December to 100 percent May through October.

Gardening Questions

Q Can I plant watermelons and cucumbers together? (R.F., Raleigh)

A Yes There are some diseases that might attack both types of plants, but they will not cross pollinate. (George Hughes, extension horticultural specialist)

Q I have a sunny knoll on which I would like to set some apple and peach trees this spring. The soil is clay. How should I prepare it? (R.P., Siler City)

A Have the soil tested, and then apply lime and phosphate according to the soil test report. Remove all old tree roots. Make sure the soil is well drained. Plant the trees as deeply as they grew in the nursery. Paint the tree trunks with latex paint next November. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticultural specialist)

Q Are there any chemicals that I can use to control weeds in a vegetable garden? (C.H., Durham)

A Yes, but I am not sure it is practical to use them. The two herbicides with the broadest label clearance for use on vegetables are Dacthal and Treflan. They both can be purchased in granular form. But neither will do the entire job of controlling all weeds in all vegetable crops. Generally, home gardens are too small to justify the expense of chemical weed control. Also, the small recommended rate makes uniform application difficult. (Lary Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q How much fertilizer would you put by a blueberry bush one foot tall, two feet tall, three feet tall, etc. (W.S., Wilson)

Don't Wait
On Planting

MASSAPEQUA PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — Gardeners who order plants, shrubs and trees by mail would be wise to dig holes for the plants before they arrive.

Clay Logan, immediate past president of the Mailorder Association of Nurserymen, says new trees, shrubs and perennials will grow healthily sooner if they are planted soon after arrival. Mail-order nurseries ship such items at the proper planting time for each customer's geographic location.

Logan is an executive of a Louisiana, Mo., nursery that specializes in fruit trees.

If you cannot set plants out immediately, Logan says, or if you're not going to be home when they arrive, ask a neighbor to look out for the package and care for it until your return.

Here are his tips for storing plants, if you must:

Place the package in a dark, cool, frost-free spot. Open the box, remove the coverings on top of the plants and make sure the packing material around the roots remains moist until you plant them.

Twenty-four to 48 hours before planting, soak the roots of bare root plants in a bucket of water. Adding soluble fertilizer at 1/4 label strength gives them a good boost, Logan says.

Plants should be moved directly from soaking bucket to planting hole, he says. Don't let the roots dry out while planting. And don't be afraid to use pruning shears to remove damaged or broken roots or stems while planting.

Drives Beauty Salon For Dogs

By KAREN M. MAGNUSON
MUSCATINE, Iowa (UPI) — Linda Ferreira's beauty salon offers the traditional services — a shampoo, haircut and manicure. Her shop occupies a 4-year-old van. Her customers are dogs.

Mrs. Ferreira, a Muscatine mother of three, operates a mobile pet grooming center called Puppy Love. She serves about 300 dogs.

"It's good for me because I have my freedom as my own boss and it's good for them (the dogs) because they get taken care of while they're still at home," said Mrs. Ferreira, a former secretary who started her business in Oklahoma City and moved it to Muscatine three years ago.

The rear of her powder blue van is a regular grooming haven for hounds — complete with sink, running water and a counter with a hanging harness to hold pesky pups.

Clipping tools line the walls. A wooden cabinet is jammed with other accessories such as dog cologne, flea spray, and nail polish with color-coordinated ribbon for bows. An extension cord hooks the van up with each home for lights, hair dryer and vacuum cleaner.

"There is no way you can do a dog in somebody's house," Mrs. Ferreira said. "I don't even do my own dogs in my house. Everything here is so compact, it's just clip, clip, clip and you're done."

Her advertisement showing a poodle calmly sitting under a hair dryer reading a magazine does not represent her typical customer.

Most dogs don't find it easy to stand still for the hour-long process of clipping, washing and trimming. Many are not crazy about getting bows in their hair or polish on their nails.

"Each one is different," said Mrs. Ferreira, adding that she soothes frightened pups with "baby talk."

"To me, you have to treat them like little kids. Some are so loving, some hate it and some shake so bad you can hardly do them. It's amazing how different the tempers of dogs can be."

That is one reason why people should not get into the business unless they love dogs, Mrs. Ferreira said.

"You have to like it because if you don't, you'll end up hating it," the talkative brunette said. "I've always had a dog at home and I understand them. Now as for cats, I don't do them because I don't like them."

She learned her skill at a pet shop in Oklahoma City and bought the business from a Nebraska man as a hedge against inflation. At $15 a dog and about 35 dogs a week, she makes $25,000 a year — $18,000 above expenses.

Pursuant to the General Statutes of North Carolina, Section 143-129, sealed bids will be received by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners until 2:00 p.m., on Monday, March 16, 1981, in the County Manager's Office, 117 West Fifth Street, Greenville, N.C. for the lease or lease purchase of the following:

One computer system with the necessary software needed to accomplish the duties of a computer operator in the Department of Public Works of Pitt County.
Specifications are on file in the office of H.R. Gray, County Manager, and copies of same can be obtained upon request.
No proposal will be considered unless it is accompanied by a bid bond, a cash deposit, or certified check on some bank or trust company insured by the Federal Depositary Insurance Corporation in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the proposed bid. Bids from the unsuccessful bidders will be returned as soon as bids are awarded or rejected.
The Pitt County Board of Commissioners reserves the right to reject any and all proposals and waive any informalities in bid.

Barbara Shares Her Two-Hour Diet

There's no doubt about it — Barbara Eden is not getting her just dessert Munching happily on a chocolate bar, the shapely star of NBC-TV's "Harper Valley PTA" (Fridays, 8-8:30 p.m.), says it's her third of the day.

"I know I shouldn't indulge in so many sweets," she says, looking exactly like most women wish they did — at 20! But Barbara, who like her character Stella Johnson has something of a sweet tooth, jokes. "I diet for two hours at a time."

So she must be huffing and puffing and tearing down the track each day, right? Not exactly.

"Jogging is a great spectator sport," grins the actress whose legs advertise hosiery on television.

What's left to justify Barbara's fabulous figure to the women of America? She's no longer "I Dream of Jeannie's" genie, so it can't be magic. Mainly it's in the genes, of course. And the truth is that Barbara — but for a few binges now and then — tries to eat sensible, well-balanced meals.

"Once in a while I do have to pay the piper by skipping dinner for a few days following a binge of desserts," she allows.

She also takes tennis lessons and burns off calories by being "always in motion."

The actress-singer divides her time between homes in Hollywood and Chicago where her husband Charles Fegert is a newspaper advertising executive. She headlines her own nightclub act in Las Vegas, Puerto Rico, Australia and cities throughout the U.S., appears at Walt Disney World annually and stars in musicals such as "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" and "Annie Get Your Gun."

And of course she's running after Harper Valley hypocrites this year, too.

"We feature a lot of stunts and slapstick so I'm burning up calories while I work," she continues. "Doing it this way is so much more enjoyable for me than getting up at the crack of dawn to jog around the block. And it's hard to imagine coming home after expending all that energy at the studio and doing two dozen sit-ups."

Still, one of life's little injustices seems to be that some people can have their cake and eat it too.

TRIM BARBARA EDEN who runs after Harper Valley hypocrites as free-spirited Stella Johnson in the new comedy series, "Harper Valley PTA," Fridays (8-8:30 p.m.), says "Jogging is a great spectator sport."

'Rev. Grady'

Production has been completed on "Reverend Grady," a half-hour NBC comedy project starring the Rev. Grady Nutt of "Hee Haw" fame. Co-starring are Elinor Donahue ("Father Knows Best"), Debby Lynn, Raleigh Bond, Edward Marshall and Peggy Pope.

The show focuses on a small-town Midwestern pastor, Rev. Grady Williams (Nutt). His sense of humor helps him solve various problems posed by his colorful congregation and loving teen-age daughter Becky (Lynn) and wife Ellie (Donahue).

Michelle Will Tell

Q: Did Redd Foxx, who stars on "Sanford and Son," play Uncle Remus in "The Song of the South"? P. FOSNOW, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Foxx's only film credit is an outrageously funny comedy, "Norman Is That You," which was released in 1976. Pearl Bailey shared top-billing.

Q: In what year did the country singer Jim Reeves die, and what was the cause of his death? E. HEDGE, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Reeves and his piano player, Dean Manuel, were killed in a plane crash that occurred a few miles from Nashville (Tenn.) July 31, 1964.

Q: Who played Sarah Kendrick on "Beulah Land"? What other TV shows has she been in? S. SMITH, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: Talented actress Lesley Ann Warren portrayed the strong-willed character in The Old South saga. Her recent TV credits include leading roles in "Portrait of a Stripper," "Betrayal," "79 Park Avenue" and "Pearl."

Q: I read somewhere that actors James Arness and Peter Graves are brothers in real life. Is this true? M. POOLE, ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

A: It's true! They were born James and Peter Aurness, sons of Rolf and Ruth Aurness, of Minneapolis, Minn.

Q: Is Hans Gudegast, who starred in "Rat Patrol," the same actor who's now playing Victor Newman on "The Young and the Restless"? S. MILLER, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Yes, but he had his name changed to Eric Braeden several years ago.

Q: What's going on between Rona Barrett and Tom Snyder? Why isn't she on "The Tomorrow Show"? INTERESTED IN HENDERSONVILLE, N.C.

A: There's a red-hot feud going on between the two that's already reached the boiling point! In fact, sharp tongue 'Miss Rona' is even taking 'pot shots' at Snyder during her segment on the "Today" show. (P.S....I'm placing my bet with Barrett!)

Q: Is Timothy Van Patten, who's on "The White Shadow," Dick Van Patten's son? G. THOMAS, MT. AIRY, N.C.

A 'New' Holbrook Emerges

Four-time Emmy Award winner Hal Holbrook has established a solid reputation as one of our finest actors. So he wasn't quite prepared when director Sam Wanamaker began tinkering with his style for "The Killing of Randy Webster," a telefilm airing Wednesday, Mar. 11 (9-11 p.m.), on CBS.

"I think Sam may have taught me something valuable," said Holbrook, who first rose to prominence in the late 1950s with an inimitable interpretation of folksy philosopher Mark Twain in the one-man stage and television show, "Mark Twain Tonight!"

The Killing of Randy Webster, based on an actual incident, is the story of a Louisiana couple who wage a tireless investigation into the slaying of their teen-age son by Houston police officers.

Gary McCleery portrays Randy, who was a troubled but likable 17-year-old, taken with joy-riding fast cars, gabbing with passing truckers on his CB radio, and adopting stray puppies. In February 1977, after a series of conflicts at school and with his parents, the Shreveport, La., youth takes off on a spree to Houston, where he steals a van and leads police on a wild chase through suburban streets. When the van is finally halted, Randy is shot to death by police officers who maintain that the boy had emerged from the vehicle pointing a gun at them. A .22 caliber pistol found near Randy's body is used as evidence in the case, and the slaying is quickly ruled justifiable homicide.

Holbrook and Dixie Carter portray Randy's parents, John and Billie Webster who, shattered by the loss of their only child, begin their own search into his behavior and his death. Their long, often frustrating inquiry eventually leads them to believe that the gun found with Randy's body was not the boy's, but was a 'throwdown.' This is police parlance for a weapon planted on a victim after a shooting.

Aided by United States Attorneys, John and Billie uncover new evidence which allows them to reopen the case. The final verdict was issued in October 1980.

She Didn't Go 'Crackers'

The process of turning a novel into a movie can be most unsettling to an author who sees the thrust and substance of his or her creation being twisted.

But that's not the case with Joyce Rebetta-Burditt, author of the novel on which "The Cracker Factory" is based. The drama, starring Natalie Wood, is airing as The ABC Friday Night Movie, Mar. 13 (9-11 p.m.).

Joyce speaks glowingly of the job done by Richard Shapiro, who produced and wrote the teleplay for "Cracker Factory," the story of a woman who has been a daughter, wife, mother and lover. But she's never taken the time to grow up and become herself.

"I think Dick was enormously sensitive to the material. He was concerned because it is autobiographical, and we talked often while he was writing it. He even listened to my opinions, which is very unusual in this case," she continued.

Joyce considers Shapiro's role of adopting "Cracker Factory" for TV to be one of the most difficult in the writing field. "Dick, in a very real sense, put himself into the material he was working with and made a serious attempt to capture both the story and the spirit of the novel. I think he succeeded," she said decisively.

Wood stars as Cassie, who discovers that a wonderful husband, three healthy children, a house in the suburbs and a mortgage can be enough to drive any woman crackers, and goes off on a rocky and often hilarious search for her real self.

Perry King co-stars as her psychiatrist, Dr. Edwin Alexander. Peter Haskell is cast as her husband, Charlie Barrett, and Shelly Long appears as Cara, a loving but troubled young woman who becomes her friend and ally.

Cassie's quest for herself takes her to the psychiatric section of a local hospital, where surrounded by characters who are sometimes wiser and funnier than those outside, she begins to put the pieces of her world back together.

Others in the cast include Vivian Blaine as Helen, and Marian Mercer as Eleanor — two women who help Cassie on her very personal journey. Juliet Mills is seen as Tinkerbell, a caring nurse at the hospital.

"Wacked-Out"

RCA 25" diagonal ColorTrak with ChannelLock Keyboard Control

• Automatic Color Control keeps colors consistent from program to program, channel to channel.
• Automatic Flashtone Correction keeps flashtones within a natural range.
• Automatic Contrast/Color Tracking lets you adjust contrast, color and brightness with one control.
• Automatic Light Sensor adjusts picture for changes in room light.
• RCA Super Acoustic Filter black matrix picture tube has tinted phosphors to help keep colors vivid.
• RCA's ChannelLock electronic tuning with all-channel Keyboard Control—so accurate, so automatic there's no need to fine tune—over.
• BlackLock Contrast Circuit automatically maintains picture detail in black areas, white areas and all shades in between.
• RCA's energy-efficient XtendedLife chassis averages only 182 watts.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — Bobby Ewing may be having his share of problems on "Dallas," but PATRICK DUFFY couldn't be happier — his wife, CARLYN, is expecting the couple's third baby in mid-May.

The stork's also about to pay a visit to the home of GREG EVIGAN, the star of "BJ AND THE BEAR." Pam, who is Greg's manager as well as his wife, says the addition is due "any day now."

Rumors have it that SUZANNE SOMMERS, whose bid for a huge salary increase was nixed by ABC, may now be negotiating with CBS to star in a similar series that could mean the end of "THREE'S COMPANY."

Vivacious QUINN CUMMINGS — who shot to stardom via her role in "THE GOODBYE GIRL" — is 13 years old now and even has her first boyfriend, actor CHRIS FRANKLIN, who's 16. "I always feel so great when I'm with him," bubbles Quinn. "He's just so cute!"

Another new teenage twosome around town is CHRIS ATKINS and LORI LOUGHLIN, one of the "regulars" on "THE EDGE OF NIGHT." They've been dating since "THE BLUE LAGOON" star broke up with BO DEREK'S younger sister, KELLY.

In spite of the fact that BILL HUDSON publicly announced that he and his wife, GOLDIE HAWN, are reconciling, they couldn't be farther apart. Apparently it's just wishful thinking, as far as Bill is concerned.

In spite of the fact that sexy TOM SELLECK and his wife JACKI are no longer together, he's still a close friend of her parents, and even flew them to Hawaii where he's filming "MAGNUM, P.I." for an all-expense paid trip.

Divorce: all-American style.

FOR MARVIN MITCHELSON, attorney and author of Living Together
How would there be any benefits in uniform national divorce laws? —P.S., Charlottesville, Va.

● It would help everyone because it would result in true equality under the law. Couples would not have to go to different states for more favorable decisions, and it would be easier for lawyers such as myself who practice all over the country. As it stands now, all lawyers who practice in different states have to be familiar with each state's law. I am presently campaigning for uniform marriage, divorce and cohabitation laws. If uniform laws do come in, there may be fewer contested divorces, meaning that lawyers' fees might not be as big, since if the divorce is not contested, there isn't as much legal work involved, and there will be fewer procedural difficulties.

FOR JANET GUTHRIE, race-car driver

How many speeding tickets have you had? —E.M., Panama City, Fla.

● My first and last was in 1961. I was going from Manhattan and was glad to get out of traffic. When I got to an open-field section, I sped up a bit. It was in the middle of the night; there was no one around; and the cop who had been following me pulled me over and gave me a ticket. This, by the way, was before I started professional car-racing.

FOR PETER STRAUSS, star of ABC-TV's Masada

Is it true you spent much time researching for your role in the series? —G.H., Hutchinson, Kan.

● I did spend an enormous amount of time reading and thinking about that period of history. Because my character — Eleazar, a rebel leader who lived almost 2,000 years ago — was a fisherman before the war with the Romans began, I spent a night on a fishing boat on Lake Kinneret in Israel, and that taught me a lot. I also spent time atop the real Masada.

FOR LINDA KELSEY, star of CBS-TV's Lou Grant

Has your role of reporter made you feel differently about journalists, and were you once a writer? —H.F., Casper, Wyo.

● I identify with reporters more than I did before I took the role. Now I know what's a good quote and what's a bad one. Before, that didn't bother me. As for being a writer, no way. It takes me a few hours to write one paragraph. I like the interviewing bit; but I'd want someone to write up my notes.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Any foundation to the gossip that Jackie Onassis prefers giving cheap gifts to cash tips? —J.M., Racine, Wis.

● The only bit of evidence we could uncover on this one concerns the time when Mrs. O., on her way home from her publishing job, asked the driver to stop at a candy store to allow her to pick up the evening papers. When she came out, she handed the cabbie a candy bar as a thank-you for waiting. But she also tipped him well when she got out. Perhaps the rumor started with the driver himself. The only other time he had a celebrity passenger, and was asked to wait, his reward was not candy, but a kiss. And the donor? A prominent actress. Perhaps the cabbie was annoyed because he expected similar treatment from our former First Lady, and this was his way of getting even.

FOR GEORGE GALLUP of the Gallup poll

What questions is the public the most and least interested in answering? —N.M., Aberdeen, S.D.

● People are much more eager to talk about the problems and issues that immediately concern them — the high cost of living, unemployment, crime, the schools, health. They are less interested in issues dealing with our foreign relations and issues on which they are ill-informed. The exception, of course, was the recent hostage situation in Iran.

FOR CAROL SERLING, widow of Rod Serling and assoc. publisher of The Twilight Zone magazine

Have you ever had a "twilight zone" experience? —A.S., Morgantown, W.Va.

● Almost everyone has — in a way. Once we had a cat that had to be given to the Humane Society (some distance away). The next morning, there it was purring on the doorstep. I vividly remember my shock. As it turned out, a little girl down the block had gone to that Humane Society to adopt a cat — ours.

FOR IAN LLOYD, rock star

Since your parents are classical musicians, how come you didn't follow in their footsteps? —M. Hellis, Flint, Mich.

● When I was a kid I was made to play the piano and the violin. From my first lessons, I hated both. Classics did nothing for me except send me to sleep. I slept through every Carnegie Hall concert I ever went to. Classics are boring. Rock is exciting. Classics can only be played one way. Rock constantly changes.

PRO Casper Weinberger, Secretary of Defense

Money alone, of course, cannot guarantee our security, but military needs are very great now. I have assigned a very high priority to readiness, retention and training. We intend to pay our men and women better, and so attract and retain the capable people necessary to design, build and operate our weapons. We will give increased attention to munitions, fuel and spare parts. The rate of modernization of our forces must be maintained and our defense industrial base revived. If these increases are made, they will greatly improve our national security.

PRO AND CON

Will Increasing the Defense Budget Insure National Security?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Senator Mark O. Hatfield, (R.-Ore.)

Indiscriminate increases in the defense budget will syphon off resources and technology that are needed to revitalize the economy and reduce our dangerous dependence on foreign oil. The U.S. now possesses the equivalent of 650,000 Hiroshima bombs. We have placed too much faith in exotic weapons to the neglect of other vital areas. Better pay and educational benefits and insuring that we have increased spare parts and ammunition should be our highest priorities. Throwing money at the Pentagon will hinder, not enhance, our national strength.

"Go, baby, go!": Cronkite, here with John Glenn, was an unabashed champion of the space program.

Good Night, Walter

What Cronkite Means to Us

A Final Tribute by Mark Goodman

To Postwar America, Walter Cronkite has been the Walt Disney of world events. Each man in his own way was as rich in reassurance, as finely woven into the tones and textures of American life as the sturdy and benevolent old uncle of folk legend who shows up at holidays with presents and slide shows.

And if Disney was the purveyor of our gaudiest dreams, Cronkite was the prime-time arbiter of our grimmest realities, the redoubtable figure who joined us at the dinner table each weekday evening and explained, with patient good humor, the events of the day that seemed terrifyingly beyond all rational interpretation, beyond all human control. By the time he closed with the fabled pronouncement, "And that's the way it is," we were left with a reasonable assurance that, while all was plainly not right with the world, at least it would not go to hell in a hand basket before the roast was carved.

Whatever shall we do without him? The planet will survive and sober men will continue to explain its murky and fantastic workings. But when Walter Cronkite stepped down on Friday after 18 years as anchorman of the CBS Evening News, a black hole seemed to appear in the knowable universe. In his duties at that well-fixed post, Cronkite himself had become an event, a national repository of uprightness and truth in an age when uprightness and truth are endangered commodities. His very stature cloaked Cronkite with a special imprimatur that has sometimes bemused him. As he once put it, "Every day, somebody says to me, 'My mother won't believe anything until Walter Cronkite says it's so.'" And Cronkite, the purest humanist our televised life has to offer, is the last man who would have the public well-being dependent on wizardry. Thus, he demurs.

"I know it sounds funny, and a little pompous," he says, "but I think people really do see me as a newsman and nothing else. I have no desire to be a pundit, just a journeyman editor-reporter really after the facts, showing as little emotion as possible, and I think that's how the public sees me."

Of course, the viewing public — as well as his colleagues and the powerful men with whom he has dealt for four decades — sees him as a good deal more than that. Henry Kissinger has crowned Cronkite "a voice of conscience." Author Frank Mankiewicz dubbed him "the Great Certifier of American fact and opinion," pointing out, accurately, that it was Cronkite's clear-eyed reflections after the Tet offensive in 1968 that rendered the antiwar movement respectable. As Mankiewicz wrote: "How could you believe LBJ, Rostow and Westmoreland, after all, if Walter Cronkite said it wasn't true?"

Cronkite's credibility is firmest among his colleagues. Just as all golfers pay tribute to Arnold Palmer for making them rich and popular, so Walter's very rivals credit him with investing television journalism with its hard-earned believability. Said NBC's John Chancellor: "If it hadn't been for Walter, none of us would be around. Walter believes in the 'news' more than he believes in the 'show.' Walter is one of the good guys, not a hot dog."

That theme is echoed in Theodore White's wartime remembrances of Cronkite. "We heard that United Press's combat correspondent in Europe, Walter Cronkite, was one of the good guys," White wrote. "He'd flown over the landings on D-Day, on a low-level B-17 mission; had hit the beach himself on D-plus-5; had crash-landed when he glided into Eindhoven on the foredoomed Market-Garden Operation. We got the UP [United Press] copy in China and read Cronkite's deceptively simple stories — understated, clean, crisp. As far away as the press hostel in Chungking, the word ran, 'If you get to Europe, look up Cronkite, a good guy to be with.'"

A good guy. A dedicated newsman. A journalist with a passion for dealing dispassionately with facts: That is the rock upon which the Cronkite citadel is founded and the reason he retreats from mythic imputations. Still, no other journalist in history has, by dint of his very stature, exerted so profound an influence on the course of the largest human events. In 1968, when he returned from a firsthand look at Vietnam, post-Tet, he sat down with Robert Kennedy over lunch in the Senator's office. This was the moment in which Kennedy was deciding whether or not to run for President against Lyndon Johnson. Cronkite finally told Kennedy, "If you feel that strongly about the war, then you ought to run."

Later, in 1976, Cronkite persuaded Henry Kissinger, then Secretary of State, to report on the pending success of his mission to Rhodesia and Ian Smith's acceptance of majority rule in that volatile country before the agreement had been officially announced, before Kissinger had even reported back to President Gerald Ford. Moral: Presidents come and Presidents go, but Walter Cronkite abideth. Indeed, he has abided so deeply in an otherwise troubled national conscience that, in the past decade, he has been seriously proposed as a Vice-Presidential candidate by both the Democrats and the Republicans. If that does not bespeak an authoritative figure who walks a fair line, nothing does.

Cronkite's stern sense of commitment and easy, unruffled manner had always seemed something of a contradiction: Cronkite, the benign Calvinist. But that is simply the way it is. Born in Missouri, descended from Dutch settlers and the son and grandson of dentists, young Walter grew up in Houston, began studying mining engineering at the University of Texas. He quit school in his third year for a job on the Houston Press and in 1937 went to Kansas City for United Press. In 1942 Cronkite was sent to London as a war correspondent, and by war's end he was America's most famous European Theater correspondent this side of Ernie Pyle.

When the Korean War broke out in 1950, Cronkite was called to Washington by another old London hand named Edward R. Murrow.

COVER STORY

Cronkite

Cronkite in his CBS office: "the genius to personify the prototypical Middle American."

who wanted him to cover the conflict for CBS news. Cronkite prepared for the assignment so thoroughly that CBS cancelled his trip and instead gave him the evening newscast at the network's Washington station. In 1952 he was assigned to cover the Presidential nominating conventions in Chicago; 28 years later, when he signed off at the Democratic Convention in New York City, Cronkite had logged more than 450 hours of CBS convention coverage.

Nothing will take the fight out of a journalist quite like the exhausting hours spent on a convention floor, and it was there that Cronkite gained his "Old Iron Pants" reputation for being unflappable. But he brought something else to television news, something it badly needed, and TV critic Ron Powers once identified it as "the good luck, or the genius, to personify the prototypical Middle American," the ability "not only to deliver the news but to act as its curator."

So the contemporary history of television news began on September 2, 1963, when CBS, over strong objection from its affiliates, challenged NBC's 15-minute Huntley-Brinkley report with a full half-hour of news every evening, starting — there is no other word for it — Walter Cronkite. There he sat, night after night, through riots, assassinations, space shots ("Go, baby, go!" he cried, at Apollo XI, the only newsman in the world who could possibly get away with such a spontaneous utterance on the air); through Vietnam and Watergate, the darkest hours this country has known since the War Between the States.

The agonizing difference was that the nation was torn and trembling live on the air, in prime time, for all its angry, alienated citizenry to see. Then Cronkite would emerge to tell us in full but gentle throat, that the Republic would endure, if we would only know the Truth.

And that's the way it was, and never quite will be again.

"Million Dollar" Zoysia Lawn! Water Once! Never Needs Watering Again!

UP TO 900
PLUGS!

Lakeland's Famous 30-Below-Zero Zoysia Takes Wear, Tear, Cookouts, Children's Games... After 30 Below Zero Winters, It Bounces Back Green, Thick, And Beautiful! Closest Thing To An Indestructible Lawn You Have Ever Seen!

Zoysia Lawn Wasn't Mowed For A Month! Not A Weed In Sight!

By Mike Senkiw, Agronomist, Lakeland Nurseries

If your family is like mine, you're squeezing every dollar to make sure you have enough to go around. And it looks like things are going to stay that way.

One way to cut expenses is to cut the costs, and work, of lawn care. For example, a woman wrote about her zoysia lawn that she had mowed it only twice ALL SUMMER. She hadn't spent a cent on weed-killers. Not one cent for fertilizers. Yet her lawn was as green and weed-free as a pile carpet.

ZOYSIA LAWNS STAY GREEN THROUGH HEAT AND DROUGHTS

Let the scorching sun burn lawns around you into hay—your zoysia stays fresh and green, an emerald isle of beauty. I have yet to water my own zoysia lawn. One day I saw that my sprinkler had gotten clogged! In lawn, a zoysia lawn was declared the area's "Top Lawn—nearly perfect." Yet this lawn had been watered only once that entire summer!

CUT YOUR WATER BILLS. SAVE THE WORK OF LAWN SPRINKLING. START A FAMOUS ZOYSIA GRASS LAWN NOW.

Weed-killing chemicals are NOT NEEDED for a weed-free Famous Zoysia Lawn

How is it possible that Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia stays weed-free without using expensive, risky chemicals? It grows so thick that crabgrass (weed) seeds don't get enough light to germinate!

Has Cut Mowing To Once A Month

Zoysia grows sideways, not just up like ordinary grass. It forms a thick, interwoven carpet of turf that keeps its well-groomed look weeks longer. It cuts your mowing by half, 2/3 or more!

No-Re-seeding—Not Ever!—With Lakeland's FAMOUS Zoysia

Plug in Lakeland Zoysia and never buy grass seed again. Zoysia lawns don't grow old; they just grow better. They sparkle under 100° heat... stay green through droughts. They resist diseases and insects which ruin ordinary grasses. After sharp frosts, they only give up their green color, then green up better than ever each following Spring. Famous Zoysia gives you the closest thing to an indestructible lawn you have ever seen.

Ends Washouts on Steep Slopes Perfect Where Other Grasses Do Poorly Deep-rooted zoysia holds soil in place, stops it from washing away from slopes. It's your perfect answer for worn out or weedy areas, too.

In a typical newspaper article I read (quote):

NO NEED TO DIG UP YOUR LAWN PLUG IN Z 52 ZOYSIA

"upgrading your current lawn" requires the right selection of grass seed plus "regular applications of fertilizer (and lime where needed)." This article also said you need, "weed, insect and disease control." Sound familiar? Of course!

Why not forget all that work and expense, and plug in Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia? To upgrade your lawn with zoysia, don't dig it up. Just set plugs into holes in the soil a foot apart or less. Let those plugs spread toward each other so form a carpet of solid turf. Growth is so vigorous it chokes out old growth you want to get rid of. WEEDS INCLUDED.

From Coast to Coast People Write to Mike Senkiw

From Hudson, N.Y., E. LaRoche writes how he planted plugs "in the worst possible place—clay with weeds and gravel... It formed a 4" thick carpet of grass. Not children, dogs, cats, rabbits, extremely hot sun or drought could kill it."

From Sacramento, Calif., Jack Morse writes how he bought our Zoysia "for a weed infested spot—it took care of the problem."

From Indiana, M.A. Low, Sr. writes how he visited a physician friend in Albert Lea, Minn. where he saw a "whole back yard was entirely in zoysia and it was beautiful... a deep green."

The success of many thousands of delighted Famous Zoysia owners awaits you. Prove it to yourself today.

"Same Day Fresh"

The day we cut your plugs is the day they are on their way to you. Because freshness counts, Lakeland has 2 shipping points, one in the Midwest and one in the East. Your plugs go out from the nearest point "Same Day Fresh" and ready to grow, shipping charge collection the most economical way. On credit card orders, the shipping cost will be prepaid by us and billed to your account.

Poor Soil? No Problem!

Our Famous Zoysia plugs are so vigorous we guarantee them to grow whatever your soil—from heavy clays to sandy sub-soils. You cannot lose.

Lakeland's Total Guarantee

- Drought Won't KILL It
- Heat Won't KILL It
- Cold Won't KILL It
- Disease Won't KILL It

Even though we don't know your soil, we guarantee EVERY plug of Famous Z-52 Zoysia to live and grow in it. No ifs. No buts. Should any plugs fail to grow, just let us know within 90 days. We replace them FREE. That guarantee clearly means that Famous Zoysia has to do everything we say—and more! Otherwise there's no way we could give you such unique protection.

IT'S SO EASY AND INEXPENSIVE TO START A MAGNIFICENT ZOYSIA LAWN

Start your own magnificent, perennial zoysia lawn with as few as 100 plugs. Just let your plugs establish solid turf. Then take up transplants and plug in other places to your heart's desire. Plugged areas grow right back into solid turf. Your supply of plugs is endless.

Prices and Bargains

If you plant more grass that sits there and struggles—or dies on you—you may not miss your work and money. It's the time you cannot recover! So please don't confuse Lakeland's 30-Below-Zero Zoysia with any ordinary turf offered as a "bargain." If our plugs cost a little more in the beginning, they remain, in the long run, the only true bargain for your lawn.

Order guaranteed Famous zoysia plugs now, for delivery from our nearest shipping point. Your order will be sent at the earliest proper time to plant in your area.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by the U.S. Govt. and released in co-operation with the U.S. Golf Association.

SPORTS

Yes, Virginia, Ralph Sampson Is Slim but Awesome

Shot-blocker supreme: His is the potential to rewrite the rules.

By Loren Feldman

Sometimes it looks so easy. It doesn't matter where the passer is. And it doesn't matter where the center is, so long as he and the basketball converge about three feet above the rim. It doesn't matter, because Ralph Sampson is 7 feet 4 inches tall.

The University of Virginia's devastating ally-ooop dunk has helped make Sampson the most talked about college center since an equally skinny kid named Lew Alcindor went to U.C.L.A. and panicked the grand wizards of college basketball into (temporarily) outlawing the dunk. A sophomore from Harrisonburg, Va., where his mother (5-11) works in the office of a pants factory, his father (6-0) works in an aluminum factory, and his two sisters (6-2 and 5-10) play high-school basketball, Sampson has the kind of potential that transcends points and rebounds and blocked shots. Like Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (née Alcindor), his is the potential to rewrite the rules.

"Everybody compares me with Jabbar," says Sampson, who doesn't really mind, adding, "Jabbar's the best in the NBA, and I guess I'm skinny and I look like him." At 210 pounds, 20-year-old Sampson might be skinny even if he were a foot shorter. He also might be a pro prospect even at a 6-foot-10-inch height. He is an athlete, not a stiff, who can pass, shoot and handle the ball. This season, averaging about 20 points and 12 rebounds a game, he has propelled Virginia to the top of the college rankings — where it is a leading contender to win it all when N.C.A.A. tournament play begins later this week.

There are many times it almost looks too easy. How do you stop someone who can just about touch the rim with his feet flat on the ground? What keeps an opponent from shrinking in fear when Sampson bumps his head on the rim? "It's happened a couple of times," he notes. It seems incredible but Sampson is actually unable to run full speed on a basketball court. "It's literally impossible for him to get to full stride," says his coach, Terry Holland. "He wouldn't be able to stop before the end line."

If this angular Goliath destroys all perspective on a basketball court, remember that when the game ends, he is still 7-4. Picture him driving a compact car, taking a bath, buying pants. "Put yourself in his place," says teammate and roommate Louis Collins. "Imagine coming out of high school and everyone looking at you like you're some kind of freak show."

Withdrawn and reticent by nature, Sampson has not always been comfortable with an ever-demanding public: kids who want to compare shoe sizes; adults who want to measure their height against his; photographers who want him to pose with his head sticking through the rim. And yet, it's a sign of his maturity that when yet another wag asks, "How's the weather up there, big fella?" he can smile and say, "Fine, how's the weather down there?" Or when one more rubberneck asks how tall he is, he'll respond, "5-4." He has accepted the notoriety. "I like being tall," he says. "It's me."

Sampson even laughed it off when Howard Cosell made a reference to the University of Virginia having, "a 7-foot 4-inch kid at the fifth-grade reading level." The comment was as inaccurate as it was thoughtless. "Because Ralph would answer in short fragments of sentences and short words," says Collins, Sampson's designated elaborator, "people sometimes questioned his intelligence. You know, 'He's just a big jock.'" Taking regular courses at this fine school, Sampson has been getting B's and C's. He has yet to declare a major, but enjoys psychology and speech. And should he jump to the NBA before his four years have passed, would Sampson consider returning for his degree? "Definitely," he says.

After leading Virginia to the NIT championship last year, Sampson could have jumped straight to the pros and be drawing on a reported $3 million contract with the Boston Celtics right now. But he found Celtic General Manager Red Auerbach less than forthright in discussions. He wasn't excited about riding the bench. And he wasn't ready to leave Virginia. No doubt the pros will again come calling this spring, and Sampson will again entertain the offers. Meanwhile, to insure that sudden injury doesn't destroy the promise of pro basketball wealth, his folks have taken out a disability policy with Lloyds of London.

The publicity that envelops a 20-year-old, 7-foot 4-inch, future millionaire has not made life easier. "Most people that had heard about him," says Holland, "have watched him play in a film clip in which he blocks every shot and dunks everything at the other end. When they see him the first time, and he's not a highlights film, they're disappointed."

There have been countless other highlight film stars: Jim McDaniels, LaRue Martin, Tom Riker. Behemoths all. NBA duds all. Centers who sometimes played as if they had, instead of were, seven feet. "I'm sure it seems to people, 'Gee, he's that tall, just throw him the ball!'" says Holland. "And it's really not that simple." When Holland dug up some films from Kareem's senior year, the coach was comforted to learn that Kareem didn't score every trip down court. "It was good to see that we're not the only idiots in the world," says Holland. "Even John Wooden at U.C.L.A. had problems doing the same thing."

Sampson has improved tremendously this year and is a sure first or second-team All-American. He's now more aggressive both on offense and defense and, in a 40-point performance on Super Bowl Sunday against Ohio State and its fine center, Herb Williams, Sampson looked simply awesome.

And the horizons remain unlimited.

"When you talk about Ralph Sampson," says Coach Holland of the young man who, as a freshman, was merely NIT MVP, honorable mention All-American, and who declined to be the NBA's Number-One draft choice, "you are still talking in terms of potential." FW

Classrooms were not designed with Sampson in mind.

Rock's Blondie: from Punk to Citified Chic

By Bruce Pollock

Are they the Sonny and Cher of the 80's or a 60's version of Bo Derek and her Sven-gali-style husband, John? Either way, Debbie Harry and Chris Stein, otherwise known as the rock group Blondie's better half (he writes most of the music, she sings the songs) are the perfect contemporary couple: trendy and nostalgic, suburban soft at the edges, urban hard at the core.

"Our lifestyle is not what you'd call gracious living," jokes Debbie, as she primly sits at a desk in the office of her record company, Chrysalis, attired in a modish military uniform and cap. "It's more like slum living."

She's not merely turning a quip here. Though Debbie herself was born in Florida and grew up in New Jersey, and Chris, her boyfriend of seven years, was born and raised in Brooklyn, N.Y., Blondie was spawned in the seamy depths of Manhattan's downtrodden Bowery district. The group would trudge through the littered streets, past the sleeping drunks, to a club called CBGB, where its rudimentary music first took shape. In those days it was a race for the Punk Rock pennant, and Blondie fought it out for its corner of the turf with the Ramones, Talking Heads, Television and scores of other bands, since forgotten.

Chris, now 30, and Debbie, 35, spent the dismal 70's, forming and disbanding bands, regrouping groups. Thoughts of marriage and family ran a distant second and third to the quest for rock 'n' roll gold. For funds, Debbie tried her hand at waitressing and was a Playboy bunny for awhile. "One of the worst things about being a man and woman together is not having any money," says Chris, a more somber vision than Debbie in his V-neck sweater, glasses and corduroys. "We used to fight a lot when we didn't have money; now that we don't have to worry about it, a lot of the pressure is off."

Their number-one single, "Heart of Glass," released in 1979, took care of their immediate money problems. "Call Me," which was the top song of 1980, made them somewhat prosperous. "The Tide is High," which hit the top of the charts at the start of this year — along with their album, Autoamerican — threatens to make them almost affluent.

While Blondie was out chasing fame on the roads of Europe, back in the U.S.A. Chris and Debbie's loft-apartment burned to the ground, quite starkly signifying an end of an era. Blondie had finally jumped from the pack and established itself in a league of one.

Since then, Debbie's lifestyle, though still low-key, has no longer been her own. "Sometimes it gets to be too much," she says. "It's like anybody else working all the time. In this business it's like they say, when you're hot, you're hot. It's not like, O.K., I can take a month or two off and come back and pick up. If you're lucky you can. But for the most part you have to work."

Debbie's luck has been finding a country hungry for a rock 'n' roll sex symbol. When her musical ship came in it carried a boat load of offers — to exploit her visibility in films, to peddle jeans, to banter with talk-show hosts like Merv Griffin. Her group likes to keep its cool, sunglassesed persona, but Debbie has been decidedly underwhelmed by all the fuss. "It's sort of funny in a way," she says, reverting to a favorite adjective. "In a sense it's a little bit embarrassing and absurd. People are so flattering and so nice. Two years ago we were garbage time."

As a group Blondie has always been interested in the visual aspects of rock 'n' roll. Its previous album, Eat to the Beat, will soon be out as a video-disk (you see the group on TV as you hear it on the stereo). So the move to the wider screen seemed inevitable for Debbie, with her classic slinky looks and pouting lips. She debuted last year, playing herself, in the film Roadie, and she was back again, in a meatier role, as a bored suburban housewife in Union City. The reviews were mixed. "As an actress in front of the camera," says Debbie, "the responsibility I have is so small compared to being a rock 'n' roll performer, that, in a sense, it's like a breeze."

For the most part, Debbie prefers to stick with good old rock. "There's nothing greater or more thrilling than to perform for a live audience," she says, dropping for a moment her blasé pose to become passionate. "It's the greatest thing in my life. I love it. Everybody gets turned on and has a good time."

Bruce Pollock frequently reports on the music scene for FAMILY WEEKLY.

DOES 60 lbs. OF TOMATOES FROM ONE YIELD SOUND INCREDIBLE?

NOT IF YOU OWN THE Amazing TREE TOMATO

(Solanum esculentum)

GROWS INDOORS OR OUTDOORS...
YOU PICK BASKET AFTER BASKET OF RIPE, TASTY TOMATOES...
ONE BUMPER CROP AFTER ANOTHER... 5 TO 7 MONTHS
A YEAR... YEAR AFTER YEAR!

We Get Letters!
Read what Leo F. Schuh, Mandeville, Wisc. has to say...
"Just a line to let you know the Tree Tomato is doing great... about 5½ ft. tall... you said leaves grew 12"... mine are 15 and 16". It's just beautiful!"

W. A. Fletcher, noted Citriculturist of the New Zealand Dept. of Agriculture says:
"Ripening in New Zealand from late April to early November, the tree tomato has a very long fruiting season. Its wide range of culinary uses make it a valuable winter and spring fruit... a welcome addition to the menu."
"Although introduced into New Zealand many years ago, it is only in recent years that the tree tomato has become better known for its many uses. It is now much sought after, and its popularity is indicated by the high price realized for it on local markets... Under suitable conditions the plant will produce from 40 to 60 lbs. of fruit annually."

From the New Zealand Dept. of Agriculture comes the biggest garden sensation of the century... THE PERENNIAL TOMATO!

The TREE TOMATO... a remarkable new horticultural concept... unlike anything you've ever seen before! NOT a vine... NOT a regular tomato plant that withers and dies after one summer... the TREE TOMATO is a living, growing tree that BEARS FRUIT SEASON AFTER SEASON... YEAR AFTER YEAR! Why settle for garden-fresh tomatoes a few short weeks of the year? Why put up with hothouse tomatoes that taste like cardboard the rest of the time? Not when you can pick crop after crop of red, plump juicy TREE TOMATOES up to 7 months a year (all year round when grown indoors)!

WAVE AFTER WAVE OF SUCCULENT TREE TOMATOES GROW AS QUICK AS YOU CAN PICK 'EM!

Your TREE TOMATO will arrive already leafed-out... in full, green hardy vigor! When ready to bear, the branches will literally droop with huge clusters of delicious TREE TOMATOES, hundreds upon hundreds... and, as one crop is harvested, another rushes forth to take its place... so you have a virtually constant supply of luscious TREE TOMATOES!

LAKELAND'S DOUBLE GUARANTEE
All plants must arrive in perfect condition. If you are not totally satisfied with any order, return within 10 days for a prompt replacement or refund of purchase price. And all plants must thrive after planting, or return anytime within 3 months for prompt replacement—no questions asked!

LAKELAND NURSERIES SALES, Hanover, Pa. 17331

GROW IT OUTDOORS AS A TREE—INDOORS AS A HOUSEPLANT!
The TREE TOMATO will thrive marvelously—indoors or out! If you live in a temperate zone, plant it outdoors and enjoy its beautiful, exotic beauty in your garden! Or, tub-grow the TREE TOMATO, bring it indoors for winter, and surprise your family and friends with ripe, just-picked tomatoes even during the coldest months of the year! Or... cultivate the TREE TOMATO as a house-plant anytime... anywhere! The TREE TOMATO will achieve heights of up to 8 ft. outdoors, but it can be trimmed and trained to any size or shape you wish!

ENJOY TREE TOMATOES SO MANY DELECTABLE WAYS!
We think TREE TOMATOES are much tastier than ordinary tomatoes... it's hard to find a meatier, firmer, more bursting-with-goodness taste treat! Rich in Vitamin C, TREE TOMATOES are fabulous in salads, sandwiches and are absolutely fantastic just sliced up and popped in your mouth! Nothing beats fresh produce, so why continue to pay high supermarket prices for inferior tomatoes, when you can grow your own TREE TOMATOES! REMEMBER, WE SHIP MATURE PLANTS... NOT SEEDS... ORDER YOUR TREE TOMATOES TODAY! Full growing instructions included.

LAKELAND NURSERIES SALES, Dept. NL-1523, 340 Poplar St., Hanover, Penna. 17331

What Women Should Know About Cesareans

Jim Pozarik/Gamma Liaison

Now that the operation has been made safer, one out of six U.S. babies born today is a cesarean.

just all the emotions. I felt cheated and frustrated and anxious about my baby."

Moreover, if cesarean mothers are given general anesthesia, they cannot spend much time with their new babies during the first few hours or even days after birth. Comments Dr. Michael Newton, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Northwestern Medical School in Chicago, "There's pretty good evidence that the children who experience close relations with their mothers very soon after birth tend to be better adjusted."

Many obstetricians are solving this problem for cesarean mothers by giving them a regional anesthesia (an injection in the spinal area) so that they can remain awake and hold their babies immediately after birth.

If you think you might have to have a cesarean — a possibility virtually any child-bearing woman should consider — doctors now urge you to learn as much as possible about what to expect.

There are numerous support groups springing up, offering cesarean childbirth classes and discussion groups. It's also advised that you discuss with your obstetrician in as much depth as time allows why you must have a cesarean.

Also, if you know in time, you should check out the procedures and facilities at your hospital. What kind of anesthesia will you receive? Can your husband remain with you in the operating room? When can you hold your baby after birth? You have a right to answers for all these questions. FW

By Sarah Hardesty

During the birth of her first child, Alison G. was just going into hard labor when her obstetrician told her that he would have to operate — the baby's head was too large to pass safely through Alison's pelvis.

Alison's experience is becoming increasingly common. In the past decade, the number of cesarean sections (an operation in which a baby is delivered through a small surgical opening in the mother's abdomen) has tripled in some hospitals. It is estimated that in the United States, one out of every six children is now born by cesarean.

Cesareans can be life-saving, but a number of experts in childbirth are saying that some of the increase is unnecessary.

In most hospitals today, cesareans are performed routinely in high risk or crisis situations: when the umbilical cord gets tangled, when the baby is going to be born in breech position (legs or buttocks first) or for related problems that prevent the baby from progressing through the birth canal.

Fundamentally, the dramatic upswing in the number of cesareans in recent years reflects their frequent use today as a precautionary measure. This is partly because antibiotics and improved surgical techniques have made the operation itself significantly safer — the national death rate from cesareans has plunged to below .01 percent. Then, too, the expanding use of fetal monitors — which reveal fetal distress — has encouraged doctors to perform cesareans in situations where previously they would not have known risks were present.

However, since interpreting a fetal monitor is imprecise, fetal distress is diagnosed far more often than it actually exists. As obstetrician Dr. Richard Hausknecht states in his book (written with Joan Heilman), Having a Cesarean Baby, "The fact is that never before have so many babies been delivered by cesarean section because of fetal distress, many of them turning out to be normal infants who showed no signs of such distress."

Contributing as well to the increase in cesareans is the growing fear of malpractice by doctors. "It's often one of the reasons that a physician will resort to a cesarean early rather than risk a long labor after which the baby might be brain-damaged," explains one obstetrician.

The cesarean clearly offers tremendous benefits: healthy babies. The disadvantages?

Pain and discomfort for the mother, who must undergo a major surgical operation, urinary catheterization and a week's recovery in the hospital. And complications can occur, such as infections, profuse bleeding, damage to the bladder.

The most negative side effects of cesareans are often psychological. "The operation itself wasn't so bad," explains one woman. "It was

It's Easy, It's Fun, It's Stir-Frying

By Marilyn Hansen

FRIED-RICE

- 1/4 cup peanut or vegetable oil
- 1/2 cup diced onion
- 1/2 cup diced celery
- 1 cup diced cooked ham
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 3 cups cooked rice, cold
- 1 cup frozen peas
- 1 cup bean sprouts
- 3 eggs, slightly beaten
- 3 tablespoons soy sauce

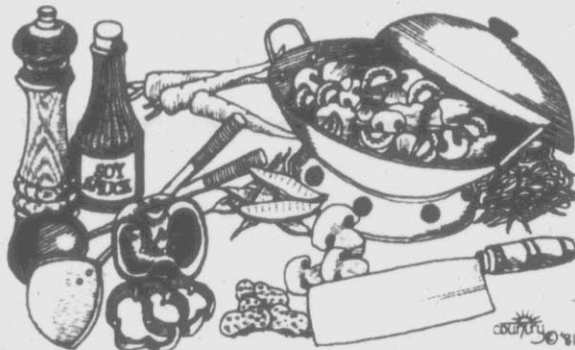

1. Add oil to wok or skillet, pouring it around sides; heat at medium, about 2 minutes.
2. Add onion, celery, ham, garlic; stir-fry about 2 minutes. Make well in center; add rice, peas, bean sprouts; stir-fry about 3 minutes. Make well in center; add eggs to center of wok or skillet; cook 1 minute without stirring, then 1 additional minute, stirring constantly. Stir all ingredients together. Make well in center; add soy sauce; stir all ingredients together until well blended — about 1 minute. Makes 5 or 6 servings

STIR-FRIED VEGETABLES

- 1 large (1/2-lb.) cucumber
 - 2 tablespoons peanut or vegetable oil
 - 1 cup sliced carrot
 - 1 cup (1/4-lb.) quartered fresh mushrooms
 - 1/2 cup sliced water chestnuts
 - 2 large cloves garlic, minced
 - 2 cups fresh Chinese pea pods or 1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen pea pods, partially thawed
 - 1 can (10 3/4 oz.) chicken broth
 - 2 tablespoons dry sherry
 - 1 tablespoon soy sauce
1. Slice cucumber in half lengthwise; remove seeds. Cut into strips.
2. Pour oil into wok or skillet; heat over medium heat about 2 minutes. Add carrots, mushrooms, water chestnuts and garlic. Stir-fry 6 minutes.
3. Push foods to one side of wok. Add pea pods and cucumber; cook 3 minutes, stirring constantly.
4. Stir in remaining ingredients. Cook, stirring until thickened. Makes 4 servings

Editor's Note: Add whole stemmed fresh or frozen green beans if pea pods are unavailable.

Sharpen your knives and get out your wok; you can turn out a sizzling supper in no-time flat!

CHICKEN WITH PEANUTS

- 4 large chicken breast halves
 - 1/4 cup water
 - 1/4 cup dry sherry
 - 1/4 cup soy sauce
 - 2 tablespoons dark corn syrup
 - 1 tablespoon vinegar
 - 4 teaspoons cornstarch
 - 1/4 cup peanut or vegetable oil
 - 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
 - 1/2 cup peanuts
 - 2 tablespoons sliced green onions
 - 2 cloves garlic, minced
 - 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
 - 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper
1. Remove skin from chicken breasts; cut meat from bones; cut into 1-inch cubes.
2. Prepare seasoning sauce. Stir together water, sherry, soy sauce, syrup, vinegar, cornstarch; blend thoroughly; set aside.
3. Add oil to wok, pouring it around sides; heat at medium heat about 2 minutes. Add chicken cubes; stir-fry 2 or 3 minutes or until chicken turns white.
4. Make well in center; add green pepper, peanuts; stir-fry 1/2 minute.
5. Make well in center; add onions, garlic, ginger, red pepper; stir-fry 1 minute. Make well in center; stir seasoning sauce, then add to center of wok; bring to boil without stirring — about 1 minute; cook additional 1 minute or until thickened, stirring rest of ingredients with sauce. Makes 4 servings

STIR-FRY CHICKEN

- 1 can (8 oz.) chunk pineapple in juice
- 3 chicken thighs
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 cup quartered mushrooms
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 medium tomato, seeded and chopped

- 2 green onions, sliced
- Hot fluffy rice

1. Drain pineapple; reserve chunks (use juice for tea, etc.).
2. Skin and bone chicken; cut into 1-inch pieces. Dredge chicken with cornstarch.
3. Heat oil in large, heavy skillet or wok. Add chicken and stir-fry on high heat 2 minutes.
4. Add mushrooms and soy sauce. Sprinkle with garlic and ginger. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 3 to 5 minutes, stirring constantly.
5. Stir in tomato and reserved pineapple. Cook one minute longer.

Makes 2 servings

STIR-FRIED GREEN BEANS

- 1/2 lb. fresh green beans
 - 2 tablespoons peanut oil
 - 1 clove garlic, minced
 - 1/2 cup chicken broth
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon sugar
 - Dash ground black pepper
 - 1 teaspoon sesame oil, optional
1. Wash beans; cut diagonally into 1 1/2-inch lengths. Add oil to wok, pouring it around sides; heat at medium 2 minutes.
2. Add green beans, garlic; stir-fry 30 seconds to coat beans with oil. Add broth; bring to boil; reduce heat to low; cover; cook 8 minutes, stirring occasionally. (Beans should be bright green, crisp and crunchy.)
3. Remove cover; add salt, sugar, pepper, sesame oil; stir to blend. Makes 2 or 3 servings

News from the Home Front

The Value of Family Rituals

Many families have personal ceremonies which, to an outsider, may seem mystifying or silly. But these rituals — stories or jokes or observances — can have deep and vital meaning as part of the pattern of family life.

Experts point out that whereas church and community used to be the focus of traditions that knit people together, today's family bears most of that obligation. But with each member of the family having so many outside interests, the concept of rituals is being lost.

What is a family ritual? Many families have them and don't know it: birthday celebrations, Thanksgiving feasts, family reunions. Others have special rituals: A grandfather takes his youngest grandchild for the traditional walk in the woods each spring; a couple help their children mark the transition from summer's end to school's start with an annual picnic. Many families have ritual "jokes" or "sayings" that turn off arguments or turn on laughter.

According to sociologist Dr. Brent Miller, rituals serve important purposes: They preserve the continuity of family traditions; they model proper behavior in certain situations; they serve as a link between the generations; and they help to pass on family values.

How to Handle a "Bossy" Child

What do you do with a child who thinks he or she is the "boss" in the family? Family therapist Dr. Ann Ruben, of North Miami Beach, believes that such a youngster should be "fired" from his self-appointed position. She tries to convince a bossy child that "it's nice being a child." Dr. Ruben's technique: to encourage the youngster to fit into the family system where he or she rightfully belongs and to help parents take leadership of that system.

She suggests the following:

1) Overcome your inability to say "no" to your child.

2) Stop giving in to the child-boss just because it makes you feel anxious or uncomfortable to resist him.

3) Try to tolerate your child's increased unhappiness or tantrums as he finds it harder to get his own way.

4) Help your youngster learn to tolerate frustration and separation from parents or siblings.

5) Carry out your own adult roles as family leaders.

Says Dr. Ruben: "It is clear that when a child-boss gets fired from the job it is a boon to the whole family. But the child should never have had that job in the first place."

Retirement: Now It's a Woman's Problem, Too

Though more and more women hold jobs, little attention has been paid to what happens to marriages after a wife retires. But a new study by Dr. Maximiliane Szinovacz, reported in the Journal of Family Issues, shows that a wife's retirement has important effects on a couple's relationship.

• Many women say they find it difficult to "settle down" to household work after having held a job. Among the problems: loss of social contacts; a lack of status and satisfaction; difficulty in reorganizing their daily schedules, and a feeling that housework is a "waste of time."

• While most couples continue to share household tasks as they did while a wife was working, a substantial number say that after retirement women take on more responsibility at home — especially when a husband continues to work. Some of these women, relieved of the stress of handling a dual role, are pleased to be able to handle chores in a way "I never felt I had time to when I had to rush through them."

• For many men, sharing household tasks provides a feeling of closeness. Others, however, claim that their wives — now home all day — "find more things for me to do."

• While a wife's retirement occasionally leads to marital problems (some spouses resent having the other "underfoot"), most couples find that their relationship improves. Nearly half of those interviewed said their marriage was more satisfying since the wife stopped working. Main reasons: less tension, more time to be together in a relaxed way.

Need a helping hand with household chores? How about a robot?

A mobile robot that can navigate a room strewn with obstacles was recently developed at Carnegie-Mellon University's Robotics Institute. The robot uses a TV screen to see the objects, while a computer feeds it directions. Granted it takes the robot (which resembles a card table with wheels) five hours to cross a 20-yard room — but it's a start.

And it won't be long — 10 or 20 years says Robotics Institute research scientist Dr. Hans Moravec — until we have robot help in the house. "At first, it may be a robot arm attached to the stove, stirring pots," he says. "But we'll quickly move to mobile robots that can open the refrigerator, stir a pot and put the whole dinner in the microwave."

And they may even do windows.

WHAT WORLD

IN THE

Takaishi (center of picture) thinks his nation's slumping bowling skills need to be straightened out. So he invented this machine to measure the proper bow. Takaishi, 70, heads a large department-store chain and hopes that by bending over, er, forward, for customers, he can boost sales.

Seven electric eyes evaluate the bow at three settings — 15 degrees for a fellow employee, 30 degrees for a customer and 45 degrees for a superior or a customer making a purchase.

The machine costs $10,500 and, as of now, no other business has stooped to the asking price. But for the idea at least, what can we say, Mr. Takaishi, expect take a bow.

WHERE TEACHERS GOOF

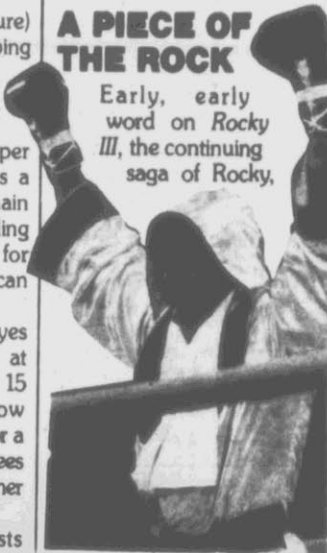

When a teacher praises a child for a correct answer, he or she may be doing more harm than good, concludes a new study. By parroting back the right answer or giving verbal praise, a teacher encourages the student not to analyze problems or become intellectually curious, report the study's authors, Dr. Clifford Edwards, professor of secondary education at Brigham Young University and Michael Surma of Illinois State University.

"We've shown that in teaching, a teacher gets what he or she reinforces," says Edwards. "If you reinforce small, rather insignificant answers, then this type of response will increase in frequency."

The best way to reinforce students and to develop probing minds, according to the authors? Use the students' responses as the focus for class discussion.

A PIECE OF THE ROCK

Early, early word on Rocky III, the continuing saga of Rocky,

Adrian, Paule et al, that begins filming soon: Apollo Creed retires to become Rocky's trainer, and Rocky faces an aggressive new opponent named Clubber Lang. The film is scheduled for release Christmas 1981.

FORMULA FOR CONTROVERSY

In the recent movie The Formula, major oil companies conspire to protect the secret of producing oil from coal. Well, in real life, the process isn't so secret. Texas A&M University has 175 tons of documents that detail how Germany used the synthetic fuel process in World War II. Only 10 percent have been analyzed so far, but it's not the oil companies holding up the works — it's the Department of Energy.

By 1944, Nazi Germany had 24 plants producing three million barrels of synthetic fuel from coal each month. The documents at Texas A&M outline the daily production problems the Germans faced and how they handled them. The school has asked D.O.E. for about $750,000 over the next three years to analyze the half-million pages of information. But, so far, D.O.E. has refused.

Several oil companies have expressed interest in the documents, but according to Spencer Baen, director of Texas A&M's Center for Energy and Mineral Resources, the school wants to keep the information in the public domain so everyone can have access to it.

"With the big push for syn-fuels, I think the Government would want to study this information," says Baen. "If the documents can prevent one explosion or keep one plant from going off line for a week, then the cost will be well worth it."

car pool this Wednesday. So in honor of fretful ones everywhere, they founded Worriers of America. W.O.A. promises no solutions, cautions Rasmussen, "just the comfort that there's strength in numbers."

So far, Oregon governor Vic Atiyeh has joined up and, minutes after the inauguration, membership was offered to Ronald Reagan. So far, no response. But give him a few months in office. He'll come around.

GIANT CLIMBING TOMATOES

Vines Grow 12'-18' — Sometimes 25' Tall!
Produce Tomatoes Up To 6" Across — Weight 2 Lbs.!

Enjoy growing your own big, sweet, juicy, vine-ripened tomatoes this year — even if you don't have room for a garden. It takes only a few feet of space, because these big crimson tomatoes will grow on a trellis. Or they will out-yield other varieties when grown as a bush tomato. And how they do grow! We have letters from customers who have harvested as much as 2 bushels of these tomatoes from just one vine! These climbers are plump and smooth, with meaty centers and solid divisions, excellent for canning and sauces and eating fresh. EASY TO GROW — even beginners have good luck with them. They produce crop after crop all summer long. Blight-free and drought-resistant. Save money and eat better this year.

DOGWOOD HEDGE

Only 20 for $2.98

Some shrubs give beautiful spring flowers, others give nice summer foliage, and most seem to wither away unattractively each winter. But these hardy Red Twig Dogwood (Cornus Stolonifera) have beautiful clusters of white flowers in the spring, loads of lush green leaves in the summer, and in the winter, when you expect a drab yard, they put on a fiery show of color with their bright red stems contrasting against the snow — an outstanding year around hedge! You get nice 1 to 2 foot well rooted nursery grown shrubs. Grow to 6 feet, but can be trimmed for a beautiful hedge. Stock No. 726.

Our Story: ON THE FROZEN RIVER RHONE VAL FINDS 'THE WANDERER' AND GIVES HER THE CASKET OF HUMILITY. SHE EYES IT SADLY. "I WAS SO BEAUTIFUL ONCE. ALL THE SWAINS VIED FOR MY HAND IN MARRIAGE. BUT I WAS PROUD."

"A CERTAIN DIM-WITTED LAD LOVED ME MORE THAN ALL THE REST. ONE DAY I FOUND HIM BY A STREAM. 'I AM WAITING FOR THE WATER TO FLOW BY SO I CAN CROSS,' HE SAID."

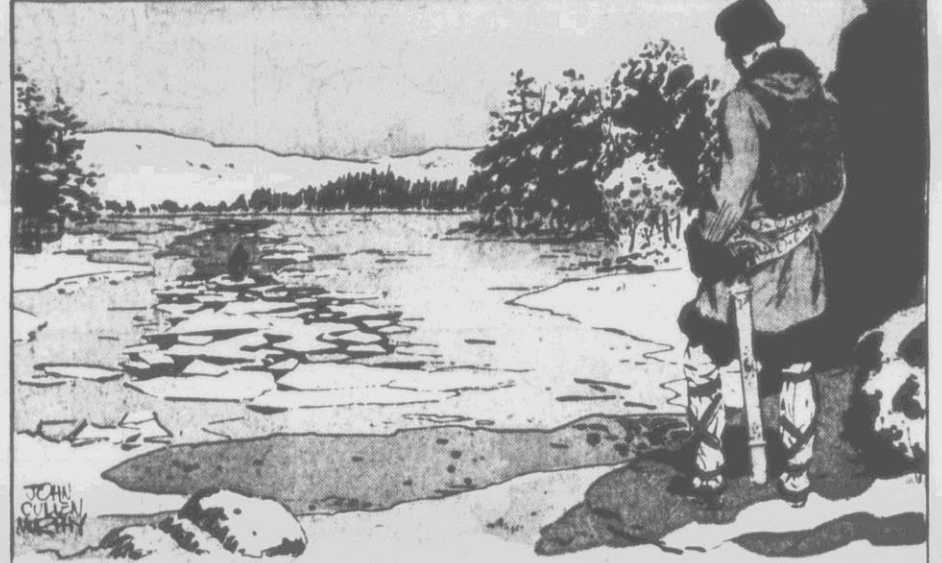

"I MOCKED HIM SAVAGELY. SUDDENLY AN OLD WIZARD SLUNK OUT OF THE FOREST. WITH A WAVE OF HIS HAND HE STRIPPED ME OF MY BEAUTY AND LOCKED IT IN THIS CASKET. EVER SINCE, I HAVE BEEN AS YOU SEE ME."

"BUT NOW YOU HAVE BROUGHT MY BEAUTY BACK." FOR A MOMENT SHE GAZES FONDLY AT THE CASKET... THEN CASTS IT BOLDLY INTO THE RIVER. "THAT IS HUMILITY, SIR VALIANT. LEARN IT." WITHOUT FURTHER WORD SHE WALKS AWAY.

SPRING IS NEAR AND THE ICE WEAKENS IN THE WARMTH. WITH A TIRED GROAN THE SURFACE CRACKS LIKE GLASS, AND VAL LEAPS HURRIEDLY TO SHORE.

BUT 'THE WANDERER' STANDS UNPERTURBED ON AN ICE FLOE AS IT CARRIES HER SWIFTLY DOWNSTREAM. VAL WATCHES FOR A FEW MINUTES, THEN HEADS NORTH TO THULE, FOR HE HAS NOT SEEN HIS FATHER IN THREE YEARS. AND AS HE TRAVELS HE PONDER'S 'THE WANDERER'S' WORDS.
