Hostages Released, Hijackers Surrender

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Three Pakistani airplane hijackers surrendered to Syrian authorities Saturday and released more than 100 hostages when a planeload of exchange prisoners arrived from an odyssey around the Mediterranean.

The 13-day ordeal that started in the air over Pakistan ended suddenly on the tarmac at Damascus airport when the heavily armed hijackers emerged from their commandeered plane. They were whisked away in three Syrian military vehicles.

"It was 300 hours of looking down a machinegun (barrel)," said Jeffrey Balkind, a hostage who identified himself as a World Bank official, as he emerged from the plane.

A mobile stairway was pushed to the Pakistani International Airlines jet and a group of Pakistani and Syrian negotiators, accompanied by journalists, arrived at the aircraft.

The hostages — including three Americans — climbed down the stairway holding flowers and laughing and crying. Two Pakistanis — an elderly man and woman — were aided by Syrian authorities as they went down the steps of the plane, but the other hostages did not require aid.

A number of the hostages were earlier reported to be suffering from severe psychological strain. Syrian sources said they would be taken to a Damascus hospital for checkups and then be flown to an undisclosed location.

Minutes before the surrender a Syrian airlines jet carrying more than 50 freed Pakistani prisoners — intended for exchange for the hostages — touched down at the airport after a suspensful eight-hour circuit of the eastern Mediterranean.

The prisoners, dissidents freed by Pakistan at the hijackers' demand, left Aleppo, Syria in the morning headed for Tripoli, where the Libyan regime of Moammar Khadafy was to have given them, as well as the hijackers, asylum.

With the plane reported a half-hour from the desert capital, Libya reneged, telling Pakistan's envoy the plane would not be allowed to land and asylum would be denied.

After a tense wait for clearance to land somewhere else, the jetliner, running short of fuel, was permitted to stop in Athens briefly and take on more fuel for the trip to Damascus.

A Pakistani spokesman, who declined to be identified, said Syrian President Hafez Assad, in a message to Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, offered to "keep" the hijackers and the prisoners.

The Pakistani declined to say if that meant the granting of asylum.

At Damascus international airport, where the hijacked jet sat on an auxiliary runway, the Pakistani Minister of Education Mohammed Ali Hoti, Syrian Information Minister Ahmed Iskandar Ahmed and Pakistan's ambassadors to Syria and Jordan shuttled in and out of their crisis headquarters in the VIP lounge.

Lights aboard the hijacked plane were switched off as night fell.

The hijackers had pledged to free their hostages only when the prisoners' plane landed in Tripoli.

Libya's official JANA news agency said Friday that Libya would grant asylum to the prisoners and hijackers "for motives of humanity and to save the lives of the human beings aboard the hijacked plane."

A Pakistani government spokesman said Khadafy's government had conveyed its "reconsideration" to the Pakistani ambassador in Tripoli. Libya provided no explanation as to why it reneged.

The released prisoners, who numbered 51 or 54 according to conflicting reports, are activists opposed to President Zia. Their freedom was demanded by the sky pirates who seized the PIA Boeing 720 jetliner on a domestic flight March 2 and ordered the plane to Kabul, Afghanistan.

Protection For Wealthy

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposed tax cut would provide more inflation protection to wealthy Americans than to middle-income and poor families.

The Reagan plan assumes that Americans will receive pay increases totaling 35 percent through 1984 to offset inflation. But those raises also will boost taxpayers into higher income brackets — and people at upper-income levels, although they would pay more taxes in dollar terms, would pay a smaller percentage of their additional earnings in taxes than those at lower levels.

Under the administration's inflation projections, the $75,000-a-year family of four would pay 17 percent more in federal income taxes in 1984 than in 1980, up from $18,282 to $21,394, while the $15,000 family would pay 18.7 percent more, up from $1,233 to $1,464.

The biggest tax increase would fall on the middle-income brackets — those that Reagan's advisers say would benefit most. The $40,000 family of four would pay 23.5 percent more tax in 1984 than in 1980, up from $6,312 to $7,795.

The Associated Press calculations, based on Treasury Department figures, reinforce what Reagan and his backers have been saying for months — that any tax cut Congress might pass would be too small to offset the tax increases caused by inflation.

Those increases occur when a pay raise designed to offset increased living costs nudges a worker into a higher tax bracket, and gives the government a bigger share of each additional dollar earned. The worker must look for a still-bigger raise to make up the difference.

The Reagan bill would cut personal tax rates by an average of 5 percent this year, 10 percent in 1982, 10 percent in 1983 and 5 percent in 1984. That would result in an average reduction in tax liabilities of 27.3 percent.

Because couples and individuals with incomes above $40,000 pay 45 percent of federal taxes, it is no surprise that they would get more than 42 percent of the tax cut.

Clothes Found In Atlanta Search

ATLANTA (AP) — Vice President George Bush met Saturday with city officials and parents of five of Atlanta's 20 slain black children, saying the Reagan administration's concerns "mirror the feeling of the entire country."

The vice president and his wife, both wearing green ribbons to symbolize concern for the 20 killings and two children still missing, flew to Atlanta a day after President Reagan announced the city would receive $1.5 million in federal funds for the investigation of the unsolved crimes.

Bush said Reagan "feels very, very deeply as a human being" about the deaths and disappearances, adding the killings have "traumatized the community in what we feel is an unprecedented way."

Meanwhile, hundreds of volunteer searchers, their ranks swollen because of the addition of another name to the list of missing children, resumed their hunt for clues. They found, and turned over to the special task force investigating the child cases, a blue jacket with white stripes on the sleeves. One missing boy was last seen wearing a blue jacket with white stripes on its sleeves.

The two missing children are 15-year-old Joseph Bell, considered a runaway after he disappeared March 3 but added to the special inquiry Friday; and 10-year-old Darron Glass, who vanished last September.

Volunteer searchers Saturday found several articles of clothing, including a blue warmup jacket with white stripes on the sleeves that prompted East Point police to call the special task force.

Bell was last seen wearing a blue cotton jacket with white stripes on the sleeves, according to police. Police spokesman Ben Sims said police had neither positively identified the jacket as Bell's nor ruled out that possibility.

The first volunteer search last October turned up the body of a child, but no bodies have been found by the volunteers since. Searchers have turned a number of items and pieces of clothing over to police.

The bodies of 20 black youngsters between the ages of 7 and 16 have been found since July 1979. No arrests have been made.

Search leaders said Saturday the citizens don't intend to quit until the missing children are found.

"If these were your children, would you want us to quit?" said John Bascom, a search leader for the United Youth-Adult Conference, the group coordinating the effort.

"None of us can rest until we find the missing children," UYAC leader Arthur Langford told the searchers as they gathered at the West Hunter Street Baptist Church. "None of us can rest until we find the person or persons who are responsible for these vicious attacks."

'New Evidence' Found

By EDUARDO VAZQUEZ BECKER
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Anti-junta guerrillas stepped up their attacks on government troops and installations in the capital Saturday, a day after a U.S. congressional fact-finding mission postponed its visit from Washington for "security reasons."

A Salvadoran investigation into the murders of four American woman missionaries, meanwhile, has turned up "new evidence" which was given to the FBI in Washington, Junta President Jose Napoleon Duarte said.

Authorities said there were casualties in the Saturday fighting but they gave no figures. Fighting was also reported in the countryside and 10 people were reported killed Friday and Saturday in at least three other cities. Three soldiers, a woman and a judge were killed Friday when guerrillas attacked a bus in San Miguel.

The government said guerrillas attacked a Treasury Police barracks in the capital late Friday but there were no deaths. A carload of national police were ambushed downtown Saturday morning, but no details were available.

The Reagan administration is sending the Salvadoran junta $20 million in additional military aid and seeks congressional approval for another $5 million. Congressional sources also said the administration proposes $63 million in economic assistance.

The arms aid is in response to allegations by the junta and the Reagan administration that surrogates of the Soviet Union are shipping arms to the leftists.

The United States also is sending additional military advisers here to train security forces in anti-insurgency techniques and how to use the equipment the aid package will provide. Administration officials have told congressmen in briefings that no more than 54 advisers are planned.

Sewage Plant Delays Have Cost City Money

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"We've done everything in the world to expedite," construction of a new waste water treatment plant. But there has been, "one stumbling block after another," Greenville Utilities Commission Director Charles Horne said last week, after utility board members were told of still another delay in the project which began in 1973.

And the delays have cost money.

In July of 1973, according to Horne, in anticipation of continued growth and the need for larger waste water treatment facilities, the commission contracted with consulting engineers for a study of long-term waste treatment requirements. But in less than a year — in February 1974 — the U. S. government entered the picture, saying a 201 Facilities Plan would be required prior to any federal funding or federal approval of construction of any sewage treatment facility. That's where the problems, the delays began, Horne indicated.

In March 1974, in light of the new federal regulation, the commission revised its contract with Olsen Associates to conform with the broader, more detailed requirements of the Environmental Protection Agency's 201 Facilities Plan.

In 1975, after the planning process was underway, the Olsen contract was amended — in March and November — to account for regulatory revisions and newly promulgated requirements, increasing the scope of the work. Also, in September, a Step I preliminary planning grant offer was extended by EPA.

Then in April 1976, all but two chapters of the 201 plan were submitted to the State Department of Environmental Management and EPA's Atlanta office to assist them in an infiltration/inflow analysis review — not a customary requirement. Following a public hearing in July, the plan was completed and submitted to the state and to EPA.

When the initial review of the plan was completed in March 1977, revisions, including a reduction in the design flow capacity, were requested. The cut in flow capacity, from the proposed 11.65 million gallons a day to 9 MGD, was, "the only revision which surely prevented immediate implementation of the plan," Horne commented.

For the next six months, considerable time and effort were expended to document Greenville's need for a design capacity greater than 9 MGD, and to express concern that, "spending any federal, state or local funds at the existing plant site (to enlarge the capacity of the old facility), would be long term planning at its worst." according to Horne. However, the state continued to say that 9 MGD was the maximum capacity which would be approved.

At a second public hearing in January 1978, the 9 MGD upgraded and expanded existing plant was presented as the most cost effective alternative for the short term. Also discussed was the possibility of operating the existing plant at 4 MGD and building a new 5 MGD plant downstream, a move which would be almost as cost effective.

As a result of a February meeting between the Greenville Utilities Commission, the City Council and State DEM personnel, Horne outlined, the DEM, "began to realize the city's commitment to long-term wastewater treatment facilities," and the city's determination not to waste money at an old plant that would ultimately have to be abandoned. So the DEM said so long as the cost estimate was no more than five percent higher than the alternative of expanding the existing plant, a two-plant or single new plant plan could be approved.

For the next several months, until August, extensive documentation of detailed cost and performance estimates was requested and reviewed by DEM. Those reviews indicated that use of the existing plant would be more cost effective, but that the cost of the two-plant alternative would be only 4.6 percent greater. The cost of a single new plant, the review indicated, would be only 4.3 percent greater than expanding the existing facility.

That same month, the State said further development of the 201 Facilities Plan should be delayed until the allowance in the plant's design capacity for infiltration could be determined (in accordance with federal guidelines under a program entitled Sewer System Evaluation Study.)

The SSES, on which work had been started in August 1977, was received in May 1979, and the SSES report from Sloan Construction Co., along with an addendum by Olsen, was presented to DEM for review in September. And the next several months were spent seeking agreement with DEM on the amount of infiltration allowable to be included in the plant design, so the 201 Plan could be completed.

Written comments on design loadings from EPA were received on June 27, 1980, two days after a meeting here between GUC, DEM and EPA officials to establish a schedule for completion and implementation of Greenville's 201 plan.

"Things had bogged down. We needed to break it out of the hole...set reasonable dates," Horne said of the session.

In light of the previous delays, that schedule held pretty well, Horne said, including the submission of the entire 201 plan to DEM and EPA for review, and tentative approval of the plan from EPA, until the State's DEM, said new effluent limits would be set for the Tar River, and "a level C analysis," would be done in order to, "set reasonable discharge limits," for a new wastewater treatment facility.

According to Horne, "December, January, February, were spent sampling the river," as part of the process in determining the quality of the river and establishing discharge limits which will maintain a safe level.

Saying that in the past, discharge limits for the Tar have been, "set without a detailed analysis," the director noted the limits, tentatively set last week, were, "more stringent than anticipated. All the planning up to this time...the preliminary design," has been based on the old discharge limits.

Fire Claims 19 Lives In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — A smoky fire swept a four-story apartment building on the city's North Side early Saturday, killing at least 19 people and injuring a dozen more. Witnesses said "everybody panicked" as the blaze raced from the basement to the roof.

Rescue workers searched the ruined interior for more victims as investigators hunted for the cause of the fire, believed to have started in a first-floor laundry room.

Cmdr. Edward M. Nichols of the police bomb and arson squad refused to speculate whether the fire may have been set.

Authorities said many smoke detectors in the building, formerly a hotel, failed to work. Some were without batteries, they said.

"People were panicking and smoke was everywhere," said Michael Vest, a 23-year-old tenant who escaped by breaking a window and scrambling down a ladder.

Tenants battled thick smoke in darkened hallways and stairwells to reach safety, and some crawled across a ladder balanced between a window in their building and a window in an apartment house next door. Firefighters helped others down ladders as smoke poured from all sides of the building.

As many as 100 people fled the brick structure before daybreak or were evacuated from an adjacent building. The number of tenants was not immediately known, but officials said 62 of the 68 units were occupied.

A knot of neighbors and survivors huddled across the narrow street, weeping and watching as firefighters and police officers repeatedly carried corpses in purple body bags from the gutted building.

The first victim to be identified was Stephen West, 35, a resident of the second floor, said Frank Flanagan, chief investigator for the Cook County medical examiner's office. West was identified by his father, Nathaniel West, of suburban Markham, Flanagan said.

A single arm was brought into the morgue along with the 19th body — which had two arms — but Flanagan said he did not believe the arm indicated a 20th fatality.

"I suspect it's from one of the charred bodies we've already got, although it is possible they could find one more. But they've combed through the wreckage pretty well already," Flanagan said.

He said about five or six bodies were "burned beyond recognition" and that dental records would be used, if possible, to identify them.

The building resident manager will view photos of the other victims on Monday or Tuesday to try to identify them, Flanagan said. He said that because many residents were transients who might not have dental records, they may never be identified.

Fred S. Morgan, a deputy district fire chief, said a preliminary investigation showed the fire broke out in a first-floor laundry room, spread quickly to a rear stairwell and traveled up to the third and fourth floors.

"The fire was burning from the basement through the fourth-floor roof when we arrived at 3 a.m.," said Capt. Thomas O'Connell, a fire department spokesman. The blaze was brought under control about two hours later by some 100 firefighters, and mainly was confined to the third and fourth floors.

Firefighters discovered most of the bodies inside rooms of the building, but some were found in a fourth-floor hallway and a stairway landing.

Although it appeared all units in the building had smoke detectors, many did not work properly, authorities said. "Some were without batteries," said Edward Altman, a deputy district fire chief.

Ethyl Willczewski, 53, who managed the building and lived on the first floor, said she was alerted to the fire when she went into the hallway after hearing her dog bark. She said she tried to walk to the rear of the building "but the smoke was too dense."

There were smoke detectors and fire extinguishers in every room of the building, she said.

"Everybody panicked," said Vest, an unemployed welder who lived on the fourth floor.

He said he smelled smoke shortly after he returned to his room from the first floor, where he had gotten some soup from a vending machine.

Plant Delays

discharge limits to be made final, and modifying the 201 Facilities Plan to reflect the new requirements.

The net result, Horne explained, is to push back the tentative December 1980 date for submitting an application for a Step II grant for preparation of detailed plans and specifications (as set at the June 1980 meeting) to May, and push back the tentative April date for receiving approval from DEM and EPA to proceed with detailed plant design, until July.

However, Horne emphasized that his hope is that there will still be enough time so the detailed plans and specifictions for the new plant faciljties can be completed and submitted to DEM and EPA for approval, along with a grant application for Step III, the construction phase, by the scheduled April 1982 date.

If that date, and others are met, according to Horne, the proposed new sewage treatment facility could be completed around January 1985 — 11½ years from the time the project was first started.

And Horne emphasized the time delay has cost money.

The present treatment plant was built in 1962 at a cost of $750,000 (including a 30 percent federal grant), according to Horne, adding that the present plant's capacitry was doubled with an addition in 1972 that cost $1.2 million (including a 50 percent federal grant).

The proposed new plant — a 10.5 million gallon per day facility giving 75 percent more capacity that the present 6 MGD plant — "will cost on the order of $10 million, Horne explained.

"The delays have been absolutely ridiculous...one stumbling block after another," Horne commented.

If the city's new $11.4 million water treatment plant, scheduled for completion in October 1982, is finished on schedule, that project, from feasibility study to completion, will have been accomplished in four years.

The, "only one difference," between the water plant timing and the 11½ years for the sewage plant, according to Horne, "is both require state approval. The wastewater treatment plant has to have the approval of a federal agency."

If the wastewater plant, from start to finish, had taken only four years, Horne suggested, it could have been built for, half what it costs now. And even with federal and state participation (75 percent federal, 12.5 percent state), "it will end up costing us more local money than if we had been permitted to do it on our own. That's what's been so disgusting."

Another factor in the months of delaying, Horne pointed out, is the possibility now of having no federal participation in the construction phase.

Citing Pres. Ronald Reagan's budget cuts, Horne said there is a possibility there will be no federal funds available when final approval is given for construction.

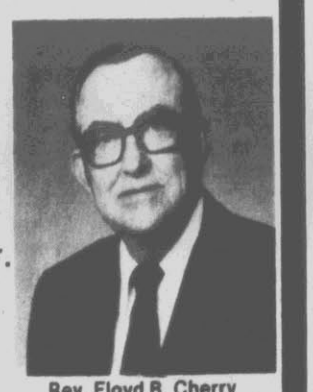

"I don't know," Horne said, asked what position the city would be in if no federal construction mony is available.

"There's so much speculation now...so many unknowns...it would just be a wild guess."

Greenville, Horne emphasized, needs a new sewage treatment facility. The present 300,000 gallons per day reserve at the old plant will be taken up over the next few years by residential development. "We could handle a 'dry' industry, such as Procter & Gamble," but according to Horne, there is no way the present facility could accomodate a, "wet," plant like Burroughs-Wellcome.

Bonnie Attracts Attention

By SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writer

Bonnie the Baroness furiously peddles her bicycle across the carpet floor, waves goodbye and rides in a car for four days without getting car sick or uttering a word. It must be devotion to her trainer and handler, Barbara Firestone Myers, that gives her the incentive to do so.

Bonnie, a Greater Sulpher Crested Cockatoo (owned by Busch Gardens of Virginia), in true Mae West fashion attracts attention wherever she goes. She is five years old and exceptionally intelligent. Unlike many of her tropical friends back at the Garden, Bonnie is warm and loving and doesn't mind if you stroke her. Her feathers are downy soft and appear to be covered with baby powder. According to Barbara, the powder is a natural type of protection from rain and dirt, not a cosmetic to enhance Bonnie's natural radiance.

Cockatoos are thought to be as intelligent as most three year old children. "But Bonnie is more clever than that. She knows how to get attention when she wants it.". Bonnie reaches over and coyly busses Barbara on the cheek. In addition to being a truly engaging personality, Bonnie can wave goodbye. She does so with some reluctance however, as if she really doesn't want to go. She is a true actor in every sense of the word. As if on cue, she puffs her feathers out and strikes an aloof pose.

Bonnie is a little shy of men however, and Barabra attributes this to the fact that she was trained by a woman. Bonnie perched on Joe Jenkin's (a Daily Reflector employee) wrist for a while, but she got a bit peevish and hissed a few times shifting her weight from foot-to-foot. She was worn out by her long trip and from having met so many people.

Bonnie has a boyfriend back at the Gardens named Clyde who makes up the other half of their show. According to Barbara, Bonnie is not exposed to mating conditions however, because the show would interfere with the process, which in captivity sometimes takes up to ten years.

Barbara has been with Busch for ten years this coming May and has been involved with the birds for six years or so. Prior to coming to The Old Country Barbara was the top bird trainer for Busch Gardens in Los Angeles, working with cockatoos, macaws, penguins, owls and hawks. She is an English major and graduate of California State University at Northridge.

Giving some background on Cockatoos, Barbara pointed out that most live to be about 60 years old. "So Bonnie will still be around after I'm gone," she quipped. All the birds at Busch Gardens are kept in top form and fed the best of diets. For instance, Bonnie eats sunflower seeds and peanuts supplemented with plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables, and a little dog food for protein.

All of the birds in the Busch show have one of their wings clipped to keep them from flying away and for their own saftey. If any of the birds got loose either a predator or the chilly climate of Virginia would be the end of them.

Bonnie is so full of herself it is apparent why she is named the Baroness. She thrives on affection and ducks her head for Barbara to scratch behind her yellow crest. It is interesting to ponder if cases of jealousy and professional rivalry arise in the family show biz world of Busch birds.

Six Firms Agree To Pay Bid-Rigging Settlement

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Transportation Board approved on Friday settlements with six North Carolina paving companies that will repay the state more than $4.5 million for overcharges on rigged paving bids since July 1975.

Documents released by state prosecutors showed the firms rigged at least 130 bids on projects costing the state $82 million.

In return for the settlements, the board agreed to put the firms back on the state's list of approved bidders on highway contracts and to grant the firms immunity from civil or criminal prosecution.

Following is a list of the companies and their individual settlements:

— The Dickerson Group Inc. of Monroe: $1,690,000 for rigging 68 projects — the largest settlement with the state so far.

— S.T. Wooten Construction Co. Inc. of Wilson: $1,165,106 for 32 projects worth $19,882,307 in Edgecombe, Frankin, Granville, Halifax, Johnston, Nash, Northampton, Vance, Warren, Wayne and Wilson counties.

— Blythe Industries Inc. of Charlotte: $995,000 for 15 projects worth $17,297,703 in Mecklenburg and Cabarrus counties.

— Lee Paving Co. of Sanford: $375,000 for 15 projects worth $4,628,910 in Chatham, Hoke, Lee, Moore and Scotland counties.

— C.C. Mangum Inc. of Raleigh: $150,000 for one project worth $76,136 in Wake County.

— L.A. Reynolds Co. of Winston-Salem: $125,000 for five projects worth $1,091,277 in Davidson, Guilford, Forsyth and Randolph counties.

Rea Construction Co. of Charlotte paid $650,000 and Barnhill Construction Co.of Charlotte paid $450,000 in settlements approved by the Transporation Board last October.

The companies will be required to pay the money within a specified time ranging from two to five years.

"In the name of North Carolina taxpayers, we have solicited fines in the form of restitution payments of $5,600,106 (including earlier settlements)," said Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw. "The attorney general is saying the state will be better served by collecting restitution than by going to court."

Fifteen paving companies in North Carolina either have been indicted on or pleaded guilty to charges of violating the federal Sherman Antitrust Act. The violations were uncovered by an 11-state investigation by the U.S. Department of Justice.

So far more than 60 executives and 40 corporations have pleaded guilty to felony charges. The federal government has collected more than $7.6 million in fines.

H. Al Cole Jr., the special deputy attorney general who is negotiating the settlements for the state, said the state may revoke the immunity offer, keep any money the companies have paid and once again bar the firms from bidding should the state learn of other incidents in which the firms colluded on bids.

Andrew A. Vanore, senior deputy attorney general, said the state used several formulas to determine how much money the firms owed the state.

He said the state would get all the profits the companies made over the amounts they would have earned if the bids had not been rigged.

"They've been additionally punished because most of them have been off the state bidding list at least four months," Vanore said. "Where the state would not get what we considered sufficient restitution through the profit criteria, we looked at other criteria." Vanore noted that Lee Paving is being required to pay three times the federal fine for violating the antitrust law.

He said the state is talking with 25 to 35 other North Carolina firms, some of whom have not entered pleas, but he would not say if and when any additional settlements could be expected.

In the written settlements, Wooten also acknowledged submitting 56 complimentary bids at the request of others since July 1975.

The company already has been fined $400,000 by the federal government and its president, Seth Wooten, has been sentenced to 120 days in prison.

Reynolds has been fined $125,000 by the federal government and its president, Jon R. Reynolds, was sentenced to four months in prison and fined an additional $10,000.

Mangum also admitted submitting complimentary bids on 10 other projects at the request of others.

The company has paid a $150,000 fine to the federal government and its president, William E. Mangum, was sentenced to 60 days in prison. The firm's vice president, Charles Young, also was sentenced to 45 days in prison.

Lee also submitted 39 complimentary bids since July 1975, the agreement says.

The firm paid $125,000 in federal fines and its president, Roy Stewart, the former mayor of Sanford, was sentenced to 60 days in prison.

Ferry Tolls Up, Schedules Cut

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Transportation Board attacked the ferry system's estimated $1.1 million shortfall this year by voting Friday to double ferry fees and halve the number of ferry runs on two routes.

The board also voted end the reservation system for the ferries from Cedar Island and Swan Quarter to Ocracoke beginning May 1.

"There will be no deletion of service," state Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw told the board. "We want to make some economic changes and change some fee structures."

The changes result from months of study since officials discovered that funding for the ferry division would fall $1.1 million short of the amount needed to continue current schedules through June 30, Bradshaw said.

Increased fuel costs are to blame for the shortfall, transportation officials said.

"Some people feel this is something we've done overnight, but it's been a hard, tough decision by this Board of Transportation," Bradshaw said.

The basic toll for passenger vehicles at the Cedar Island-Ocracoke and Ocracoke-Swan Quarter ferry operations will rise to $10 and the basic rate at Southport-Fort Fisher will rise to $3 on April 1. Rates for bicycles, pedestrians and other vehicles would be raised by similar amounts.

The Ocracoke-Swan Quarter operation would be reduced to one run a day during the winter and continue the two current runs from June through September under plans approved by the board. The board originally considered limiting the ferry to one daily run year round.

"One trip would be a very drastic reduction in service compared to the other ferry schedules with numerous trips each day," Bradshaw said.

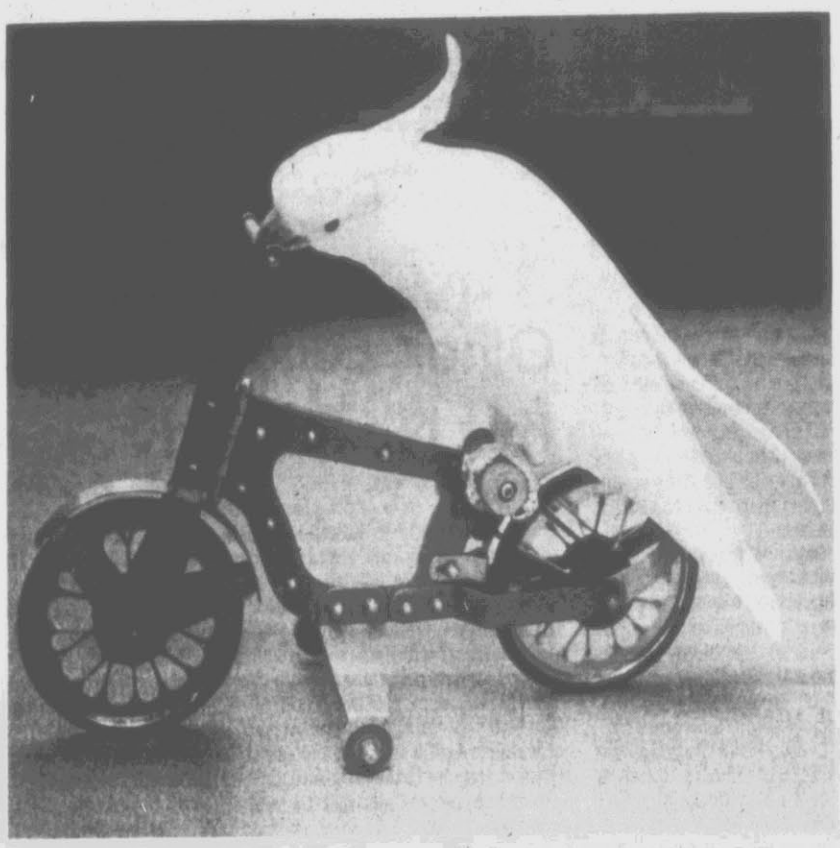

The decision to keep two daily runs in the summer months came after the board met with legislators from the coastal counties. Bradshaw said the lawmakers expressed concern that reduced schedules might hurt local residents.

The legislators also recommended doing away the practice of reserving trips on the ferries to Ocracoke.

"Many in the area feel the reservation system works to the detriment of tourism," Bradshaw said.

The board voted not to do away with reservations until May 1, because reservations are taken 30 days in advance.

In other action at Friday's meeting, the board awarded 16 contracts worth $19.4 million for highway projects across the state. Among the contracts was one for construction of four miles of the U.S. 74-Maxton bypass, one for resurfacing on Interstate 40 from U.S. 158 to U.S. 311 in Winston-Salem and one for building the Raleigh Beltline interchange for the planned Interstate 40 link to I-95 near Benson.

Clay Kirkman Says . . .

Spring is a good time to get your lawn and garden into shape. It is one of the best times to plant, prune and fertilize. This is also a good time to rejuvenate your house plants. Many of them have probably suffered from the short days of winter.

To start getting your plants back in shape, some of them may need repotting. When buying a larger container, be sure not to buy one too large. If the roots of the plant have begun to circle the pot, you will need to break them up before repotting. Use a good potting soil around the roots. Also prune away any of the dead or diseased leaves. You may want to start leaving them outside some in the shade on warm days.

Some of your plants may not be worth saving. Belk Tyler Garden Shops now have a large selection of beautiful foliage plants from Florida. One of the plants you will find is the Ponytail Palm or Elephant Foot plant as it is sometimes called. These names make reference to the plants different stages. While young, the bulbous root supports long, grassy like leaves. As the plant gets older the bulbous root grows larger and becomes gray and wrinkled in appearance, which give the plant its other name. Most of the plants grown indoors will reach a height of about two feet. These plants are fairly easy to grow, provided they get enough light. It needs about four hours or more of direct sunlight or bright, indirect light. It will become pale, weak and floppy without enough light. If your plant should develop these symptons, move it gradually to a brighter location. Allow the soil to dry out between thorough waterings. The Ponytail plant makes a single flush of growth in the spring with any house plant fertilizer. The plants will live for years in a small container, but will grow more quickly if repotted into a larger container in the spring. This is a beautiful plant to brighten any home.

Come by Belk Tyler Garden Shops and see our great selection of foliage plants. Be sure to take a look at our fine selection of shrubbery. Remember us for all your spring gardening needs.

Red Tape Strangles Planning

Greenville's dilemma in planning a new waste water treatment plant becomes worse.

Olsen Associates, the engineering firm plann- plant, reported last week that new and ingent effluent standards have been set by the State Divsion of Environmental Management for the Tar River.

It will mean perhaps another month's work for the engineering firm to redesign the facility. Then it must be approved by both the state and gencies.

Even though Greenville citizens have funds for construction of the plant, Utilities officials are worried that federal matching funds may be lost because of the budget cuts proposed by the Reagan administration.

The planners of the facility have run into one snag after another as they designed the waste water treatment facility. By comparison, a new water plant, authorized at the same time, is already under construction.

The waste treatment plant may still be years away, if adequate funds are available at all.

In the meantime the city is growing and the treatment facility could possibly be a factor in future industry location in our area.

It appears to be an example of governmental red tape that does more harm than it does good. The construction could be underway if regulatory agencies had acted promptly. As it is, who knows where we are going?

Don't Destroy The Program To Save It

Social Security has money problems, just as does most every other activity operated by government.

That, however, doesn't mean Social Security is a failure. A national commission says the system is still the best for supporting the elderly and disabled.

The system's popularity with most Americans is unquestioned, and it figures into almost everyone's planning for retirement.

The system does need some adjusting, of course, and we must do it now if it is to remain viable. That does not call for dismantling the entire Social Security system.

BusinessUp,IncomeIsn't

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Nervous restaurant owners across North Carolina are taking a close look at a disturbing trend — business is up; but income is not.

That seems particularly worrisome at a time when all social and economic indicators say that more people are eating out more often. The strong trend toward working mothers is creating a situation in which families sit down for fewer homecooked meals.

A spot check of food establishments across the state has turned up the fact that projections are on target in growth of customers, but falling off on projections of income.

Jerry T. Williams, executive vice president of the North Carolina Restaurant Association, puts it this way: "Because state food and lodging sales increased by only 10 percent compared to a national inflation rate of 12.4 percent in 1980, industry officials are seeking the latest ways to cut spiraling food and labor costs...."

Trading Down

The reason that restaurant sales increased at less than the national inflation rate even during a time when customer counts are climbing is that people are "trading down" on the menu so they can afford to eat out just as often while spending less money.

Williams describes a typical case: A 1979 steak dinner which was priced at $9 probably went up to $10 in 1980. The customer chose that steak only half as often; picking a $6 seafood dinner instead. The restaurant did steady business with a good customer count, but dollar volume of those two meals from the same custoimer dropped $2 compared to the previous year..."All because of the menu trade down."

The practice can be traced from the finest dining establishments to neighborhood fast food outlets, affecting every segment of the economy.

The condition is somewhat parallel to that taking place in the state's Highway Fund. Secretary of Transportation Tom Bradshaw says the average motorist is still driving about the same number of miles as before, but it is doing it in a smaller, more fuel efficient vehicle. Therefore, gasoline sales are down, and the state's highway money taken mostly from gas taxes is falling.

Signals point at a similar situation in retail sales across the board: sales show a steady growth, but not even on par with the rate of inflation. Christmas season buying this past December produced sales tax collections less than $5 million higher than in December of 1979.

Sales tax collections are a reliable guage of retail activity, and the lack of growth which had been projected is a major part of the shaky revenue picture for the state — the gain for the first six months of this fiscal year is only 9.33 percent over the same period last year when inflation is running 12.4 percent, and projections were 11 percent.

New Ways

Meanwhile, the Restaurant Association is taking a long week later this month in Charlotte for a thorough exploration of the economic condition, with a view to suggesting ways in which food service people can trim other costs such as energy and waste to offset the trend. Some 14,000 are expected to attend.

The restaurant business affects a number of people in the state where tourism is considered a major industry. Last year, commercial food sales from restaurant, cafeterias, vending, snackbars, taverns, night clubs, grills and drink stands totaled more than two billion dollars.

Says Williams: "Twenty years ago eating out was considered a luxury by many....Today, eating out is essential and directly or indirectly affects every segment of our economy and society."

Coupled with lodging, the combined industry did $2.56 billion in North Carolina last year.

Sunday Morning Notes

Gas is expensive, as anyone who operates a vehicle these days well knows.

Many of us have seen it go from 34 cents a gallon to as much as $1.45 this year.

Some people remember when it was even less, selling at less than 30 cents per gallon in depression days. And there were price wars which sometimes carried gas prices below 20 cents per gallon.

Those days are gone, alas. Most of us are now paying $1.20 per gallon or more, and the prospects are for still higher costs in the months and years ahead.

Still most people can afford to fill up at the gas pumps.

It wasn't always that way.

One depression reared friend recalled that his father always purchased five gallons at the gas pump stop.

"I was 18 before I realized you could buy gas any other way," he chuckled.

If gas has gone up so have other things. Some of us can recall five cent soft drinks. There was quite a battle when they went to six cents. Now they might be 35 to 50 cents.

And, if you think $1 movie matinees are special, there was a time when the kids got in for nine cents. Another nickle would buy the popcorn.

You don't have to have been around too long to remember five-cent coffee. Some restaurants now charge 50 cents, including refills.

Then you only have to go back to last year when a city auto tag cost $1. Lo and behold, now it is five bucks.

Inflation.

Well, driving is virtually a necessity in our modern society, and most of us will

Other Editors Say It Is No Subsidy

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

In the wake of President Reagan's announced proposals of cutting various subsidized programs, recent news reports have incorrectly labeled the tobacco price and production program a government "subsidy" for farmers. The implication is that this "subsidy" sould be cut along with others.

To begin with, there is no tobacco subsidy. There is a government program to stabilize tobacco prices and to control production of this crop.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture administers laws to stabilize leaf production and assure fair prices. To be eligible to participate in the program, a grower must guarantee not to produce more than specific acreage and poundage allotments.

When growers approve marketing quotas for a certain type of leaf, price supports for it are mandatory. Under this program, the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) makes loans to farmers through their cooperative associations with the tobacco as collateral.

If a grower's tobacco fails to bring an auction bid of at least one cent above the price support, a grower-owned cooperative takes the leaf and uses the funds from CCC to make the farmer a loan equal to the support price.

The cooperatives process and store the leaf until it is sold, repaying the loans, plus interest. This program is the most successful of all farm commodity programs.

Since it began in 1933, the cooperatives have handled a total of $5.5 billion in loans. During the past 47 years, loans advanced to farmers, minus interest paid on the loans and sales of tobacco collateral, equal a net cost of $56.7 million to the American taxpayers.

This amounts to 0.1 percent of the cost for all 13 farm commodity price support programs. Put another way, the net cost of the tobacco loan program over 47 years represents about the same amount of money the federal government spends every 45 minutes.

It also should be noted that during the life of the program, about $130 billion has been collected by federal and state governments in cigarette excise taxes. Tobacco also contributes heavily to the U.S. balance of payments, netting nearly $2 billion in foreign trade last year.

Instead of asking if the tobacco support program should be eliminated, the question should be "how can other farm commodity programs be altered to operate as efficiently as the tobacco program?".

Eau de Fido Is Coming

NEW YORK (AP) — Is your dog shunned on the street by other dogs? Do you secretly fear your 3-year-old toy poodle will wind up an old maid? Do other people's dogs seem to be having all the fun?

If you have answered yes to but one question, it's a sign. Your dog may be suffering the heartbreak of ... doggie odor.

Worry no more. Monsieur Chien, the French perfume for dogs, is almost here. If you have the right address, that is.

"We hope to have it in the test markets by June," says the British-accented Jennifer Adler. "You know, New York's Madison Avenue, Chicago's Miracle Mile on Michigan Boulevard, Los Angeles' Rodeo Drive, Southampton. Places like that."

And if this new product is snapped up in these marts of affluence, it just might be playing in the boondocks in time for your 1981 Christmas gift-giving.

THE INSIDE REPORT

ReplyToCaribbeanStand

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When the first of four Soviet naval vessels slipped quietly into Marxist Mozambique's main port Feb. 19, post-detente U.S.-Soviet rivalry notched up to a new peak with the Kremlin serving notice it would trump President Reagan's Caribbean ace.

This shows how hard it is for the Reagan administration to conduct a forceful, catch-up foreign policy from a position of relative military weakness. The new policy of boldness in the Caribbean, overdue after years of futile courtship of Cuba's Fidel Castro, has triggered a heightened Soviet challenge in even more important regions where the Soviets hold the high cards.

Such a Soviet response has been predicted by worried pro-Reagan hard-liners in Congress. While applauding the president and Secretary of State Alexander Haig for long-overdue drawing of the line, they have been concerned about too much talk.

While making no public criticism of a toughened Caribbean policy they applaud, aimed at ending Soviet-backed arms shipments to El Salvador, Reagan's hard-line critics have privately cautioned administration officials that too much talk could promote Soviet responses. These would come with the U.S. so far behind in the arms race that countermeasures would be difficult.

Arrival of the Sverdlov-class light cruiser Suvorov in the port of Maputo Feb. 19 showed the accuracy of these warnings. The Suvorov was shortly followed by three other Soviet navy ships: a Kashin-class destroyer, a frigate and an auxilary vessel, all detached from the Soviet Indian Ocean fleet.

That formidable naval power has now been added to a rapidly-increasing number of military and economic "advisers" from the communist bloc now numbering more than 5,000, well over twice those working in Mozambique less than three years ago. These include 2,500 Soviet and East German military specialists who, with 1,500 Cubans, are now training Mozambique military officers to fly MiG 17s, to operate SAM 3 anti-aircraft missiles and to drive over 200 tanks.

The stakes in the Southern Africa power game, where Mozambique is one of the high cards held by the Soviets, are breathtaking: control of the most concentrated mineral wealth anywhere in the world on land; and control of the oil sea-lane from the Persian Gulf down the East Coast of Africa. Europe gets 90 percent of its imported oil through that route and 70 percent of it imported minerals from Southern Africa.

The Soviet game in Southern Africa is to win what Haig called "the era of the resource war" in testimony to a House subcommittee last fall, before he became secretary of state. He said that if "future trends, especially in Southern Africa, result in alignment with Moscow of this critical resource area, then the U.S.S.R. would control as much as 90 percent" of key minerals vital to the economy of the U.S., Western Europe and Japan.

The sudden arrival of four naval vessels in Maputo, together with the steadily ex-

SEED AND FLOWER

Plant a seed and get a flower. Yet who would ever believe as he looks at a little seed in the palm of his hand that it would produce a petunia, a zinnia, or a marigold?

St. Paul, in the fifteenth chapter of I Corinthians, uses the figure of the seed and the harvest to explain the resurrection of the body. Just as something beautiful comes out of the seed and finally emerges as the flower, so the body of the flesh, sown in corruption, is raised in corruption. Sown a natural (or physical) body, it is raised a spiritual body. The seed has to decay and disintegrate before it becomes the flower. Our natural body has to disintegrate before it becomes the flower. Our natural body has to disintegrate also before the emergence of the spiritual body takes place.

We need not be discouraged because life here on earth seems unpromising. Seed and flower, earthly body and heavenly — this is the order and this is the progression. — Elisha Douglass

Budget-Cutting Like Dieting

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In general, budget cutting — personal, corporate and governmental — is as attractive as dieting. Its the specifics — what to cut, when to cut and how much to cut — that produce the conflicts.

For four years President Carter promised to balance the budget, but the specifics forced him to concede that with 75 percent of the budget "uncontrollable," budget balancing had to wait for another term.

That term went instead to Ronald Reagan and, viewing his mandate, the new president concluded that the specifics must be dealt with. The public demands cut, he said. And now it will be learned just how much.

When, for example, the National Small Business Administration asked members how they would end inflation, they answered: "cut government spending, reduce the size of government, and decrease regulation."

But the specific, a proposed cut in Small Business Administration loans by $45 million this year and $116 million next year, as well as other reductions, probably made some respondents think again.

Whenever members of the big-business community were asked the same question they gave much the same response. Now some of that tribe are claiming the national interest is endangered because the president seeks to cut $2.9 billion earmarked for five synthetic fuel projects.

The battle is on, and members of every social and economic group faced with cuts are writing congressmen and testifying before them, claiming that their interests are national — and only incidentally self-serving.

There is no backing off. Unlike Carter, who viewed budget cutting as desirable but not essential, Reagan's entire program depends on cuts. Without them, nothing else can work. In fact, he warns, disaster awaits if the government isn't slimmed down and the private sector rebuilt.

As he views it, the economy is a boat adrift in a wild stream, with the roar of the falls growing louder. If the motor isn't restarted, he suggests, the boat and its occupants will go over the falls together.

In such a dire situation, he says, forget "politics as usual." Return to "economic sanity." Get the motor started.

Though there may be strong support for cutting, not everyone in Congress is likely to view the predicament with the same urgency as Reagan, whose attitude is seen by some as the "perils of Ronald."

If this is a battle of one-issue interests, it is said, then Reagan's has to be included. His one-issue is across-the-board cuts, one as important to him as clean air is to enviromentalists.

If it comes to a vote they conceivably could be less supportive of his one major issue than they are about serving their many single-issue clients, if those clients make up a large part of their constitutency.

In brief, the temptations are like desserts put before the dieter, who succumbs after rationalizing that just one more won't hurt. Historically, it's the sort of conduct that has made politicians fat.

But for President Reagan, such behavior is intolerable because it can undermine his entire program of trimming government. He needs the cuts. They are the efficiencies that can make all else possible.

He is, in effect, the biggest, most prominent and potentially still the most successful of the single-issue advocates.

Time For A Prop. 13?

By MARVIN K. BLOUNT Sr.

For many years taxation has been the means by which our states and communites live and breathe. Ideally, we should be able to support our worthwhile public projects voluntarily, but, in reality, some form of involuntary taxation has been with us since the beginning. This form of taxation has never been popular. It was a rare individual who happily "rendered unto Caesar." Involuntary taxation is something people have learned to live with for the greater good of all. In North Carolina, however, I feel the homeowner now bears a portion of this tax burden which is too great, and the time has come to re-evaluate the homeowner's role in the tax burden.

My own experience with the problems of taxation began in 1931. Much effort was needed in those hard times to raise money to fund our schools. Teachers throughout the state were being paid in script — there was no money. It was then that measures were introduced in the legislature such as the state sales tax and the merchant's license tax. No one could deny that the taxes went to a good cause: the preservation of our school. But here was the rub: many people felt we should have a luxury tax on things such as tobacco, rather than a tax on food. The sales tax has never been popular. The best thing to be said about it is that it falls on all alike, and gives a sure means of support for our state.

In 1935, the North Carolina Classification Amendment commission was created by the Legislature to study various tax angles, including Florida's new Homestead Exemption Law. The law allowed for certain exemptions from real property values for the purpose of taxation. This caused a reduction in real property taxes and encouraged an increase in the tax base: home ownership. Although considered, no similar legislation was or has been adopted by our state. The burden of taxation on the homeowner is very high, and at this time I feel the need for the state to again consider some form of tax relief for the homeowner.

Just recently, the state of California has experienced Mr. Jarvis' Proposition 13. People there rebelled because of an imposed unrealistic real property tax that hindered the growth of California and was a great hardship to the citizens of the state. I am of the opinion that we should have some form of California's Proposition 13 or Florida's Homestead Exemption Law here in North Carolina. The tax on real estate and residential property must be reduced.

If our people are given some tax reduction it is certainly reasonable to believe that we will have many more homes under construction in this state. Yet at the present time the tax situation in North Carolina discourages such building. In a recent study by two Chicago economists, Robert J. Genetsky and Young D. Chin, the findings show that to grow, keep taxes down; to stagnate, boost taxes. Similarly, the results of a study by Arthur Laffer, an economist at the Univeristy of South California, indicate that tax cuts lead to sharp economic growth.

Both Florida and California have experienced this growth because of wise taxation. Can't we learn from these two states, so that our state can take steps toward wise taxation soon? Isn't it high time we did?

N.C. School Of The Arts Really Comes Of Age

By NOEL YANCEY

It is only 16 years old, but the North Carolina School of the Arts, once snidely referred to by legislators as the "toe-dance school," has really come of age.

There is solid evidence that the Winston-Salem institution has achieved the kind of international acclaim as a cultural center that Gov. Terry Sanford envisioned when he pushed for the creation of a state-supported school of the performing arts.

The latest proof of the school's world-wide stature, is contained in the cover story in the March issue of Smithsonian, a nationally-circulated magazine affiliated with the prestigious Smithsonian Institution.

In his 11-page, profusely-illustrated article, art writer Frank Getlein, expounds on his thesis that "the school is good," a conviction he derived in a recent visit of nearly a week on the Winston-Salem campus.

From this visit, Getlein said he emerged with "a profound respect for what the NCSA is doing" and "some grasp of how the school works in its essentials: the imparting of performance skills from the experienced and talented to the talented and inexperienced."

Getlein recalled that a couple of years ago, a young producer, Gabrielle Flossman, did a survey of the arts in the United States for the Austrian state television system. He said she "chose only one center of learning for inclusion in her whirlwind survey of the best we've got: the North Carolina School of the Arts."

From his visit, Getlein also emerged with a "lively admiration" for the school's affiliated professional companies — the North Carolina Shakespeare Festival, the Piedmont Chamber, the North Carolina Dance Theatre and the Carolina Scenic Studios which give NCSAS students, alumni and faculty an opportunity to perform in tours that take them across the state, the nation and Europe. All told, he said, the students presented almost 500 performances last year to some 135,449 people.

Getlein said that he attended a performance at the Shakespeare Festival of "The Last Meeting of the Knights of the White Magnolia" and "found it at least the equal of the Broadway production with Fred Gwynne" which he had seen several times.

"Everything about the NCSA supports and/or intensifies the stress on performance," Getlein wrote. "Students spend no time acquiring teaching credits" as they do in many university art schools. "The students are studying not to learn to teach but to learn to perform...by performing under expert, word-by-word, note-by-note guidance..."

The record of NCSA, Getlein wrote, "speaks for itself: a record of high alumni employment on Broadway, in regional theater and in international opera and ballet from the Metropolitan to the Netherlands Dance Theatre."

In reciting a bit of the history of the NCSA, Getlein paid high tribute to Sanford — now president of Duke Univeristy — as "possibly the most intellectually active governor since Connecticut's Wilbur Cross or even Virginia's genuine genius, Thomas Jefferson."

Getlein's article brings back memories of the days when Sanford

Workers Own Company And It's Like A Family

WINDSOR — Six a.m. Already the women driving into the grassy field that is the parking lot for the Workers Owned Sewing Company can feel the 95-degree heat of August days in this eastern North Carolina town. Six had not always been the hour the day shift began, but the Workers Owned factory has no air conditioning. So, at the beginning of the summer, the board of directors called a meeting at which the workers voted to start their day early in order to finish before the heat of the day became unbearable.

As the name implies, the Workers Owned Sewing Company is totally owned by the workers. This means that each worker eventually buys a share of stock in the company for $100; each worker then gets one vote in company decisions, including deciding which brokers will comprise the board of directors.

Founded in the fall of 1979, Workers Owned recorded its first monthly profit in May, 1980, only eight months after opening. The business plan projects annual sales of $2 million and an annual profit of $134,000 within two years.

"It's something we started ourselves. We're proud," says one board member. A worker who joined the co-op in March when she lost her transportation to another job now prefers Workers Owned: "It's a worker-owned cooperative so you can get a chance to help make decisions. You watch the company as it grows; you're part of it."

The workers (mostly women) at Workers Owned now earn the minimum wage. Outside Eastern North Carolina, that may sound pretty poor for a worker-owned co-op, especially since the stock may never bring great financial dividends. But in Bertie County, where few industrial jobs exist, especially for women, the pay at Workers Owned is a welcomed contrast to unemployment or low-paid seasonal farmwork. Chairman of the Board Timothy Bazemore is not joking or exaggerating when he says that, "At minimum wage, we're average."

Worker ownership is seen as the key to survival for this company, in a very competitive industry. In the first place, costs for supervisors are kept to a minimum: supervisors at Workers Owned mainly coordinate, and never discipline; when a machine is free, they often join the other workers sewing garments since no one is bound by job descriptions.

Also, when the workers own the company, they obviously have a greater desire to do good work; productivity rates are high. As one worker said when Workers Owned appraoched its first birthday, "Everybody here's trying to make money for the company. I find myself more interested in the quality since I'm working in a workers' co-op." Says board member Louise White, "I feel like I'm doing for myself."

The real advantage of Workers Owned, however, lies in the good working conditions, in the power of the members to control their own lives. Says Maggie Cherry, "Here it feels just like I'm working at home."

One of the great achievements of Wokers Owned has been the positive way blacks and whites work together. The idea that the future of the company depends on the workers appears to be the force creating cooperation. Board member Louise White (white): "One big family, that's all. If you cut your finger, it'll bleed just like mine." Lila Dudley (black): "We have learned to deal with people, not color. That's one of the reasons we're going to make it."

There have been problems along the way, but a solid foundation for the co-op has been laid. "We've got a long way to go," says Dudley, "but we're going." In August, 1980, Dudley was honored by her church, one of the most influential in Bertie County, for her role in the Workers Owned Sewing Company.

Meanwhile, the idea of worker ownership is slowly spreading. Seventy miles away in New Bern, 250 people showed up for a meeting in the late summer of 1980: Texfi Corporation had announced its intention to close its plant there; these angry workers began to discuss creating new jobs for themselves by starting a co-op. In this they can listen to one Bertie County worker for inspiration: "When you get into something like this, it makes you think about what could be done."

slobber, Mycroft does admirably as a huckster.

"He likes the attention," avers Ms. Adler. "He particularly likes to be up on a table. He thinks he's back in the show ring."

What dog might want to wear Monsieur Chien — Mr. Dog, that is?

"It's designed for the dog whose social life is the pits," says Ms. Adler. "I've noticed other dogs following Mycroft on the streets since he started wearing it," she adds, with a semi-straight face.

Gray plans a $150,000 ad campaign, mostly in "upscale print media" in selected urban areas.

The product, an eau de toilette to be precise, comes from Laboratoire Alfamed, a big pet products company in Grasse, France, in the heart of perfume country. The company produces things like animal vitamins and flea collars and if the perfume goes well, they may give us nail polish designed for dogs and shampoos with a color rinse.

"We have a feeling we'll be finding people wearing it," Ms. Adler says of the polish. "It will be quite a lot stronger than regular nail polish since it is for dogs. It has some special stuff in it."

Colors for four feet include mauve, golds and greens.

While the nail polish is somewhat speculative, the perfume is nearer at hand — or at paw.

"It's very seductive," says Ms. Adler, "but with a fresh lemony scent, the smell of springtime and all the naughty thoughts that come to animals at that time."

To the untrained human nostril, Monsieur Chien bears a decided resemblance to a man's after-shave lotion.

And the manufacturer's recommended place to wear it?

"Behind the ears, of course," answers Ms. Adler. She confesses that in Mycroft's case, she douses it all over him.

And, lastly, the price: suggested retail is $8 for the eight ounces.

But if you're the type who would let money stand in the way of your dog's social life, it's probably not for you anyway.

panding contingent of communist "advisers," shows that "alignment with Moscow" is moving ahead fast. Indeed, some diplomats here believe that the Soviet bloc pushed hard for the unusually harsh edict of the Mozambique government that expelled four American Embassy officials last week on spy charges. That followed a daring South African raid Jan. 30 on the Maputo headquarters of the anti-South African National African Congress.

Using its 1977 friendship with Mozambique, the Soviet Union is believed to be leaning on the Maputo government to invoke Article 9 of the treaty, pledging Soviet aid to eliminate any "threat" to peace.

South Africa, along with its racial policies, is the cement used by the Soviets to bind Moscow to black Southern Africa and create a band of Soviet power across the Southern tip of the continent from Mozambique to Angola. Hoping to close the final link in that band, the Soviets finally won full diplomatic relations with Zimbabwe last month.

Dealing with this Soviet subversion in an area as important to the industrial democracies as the Persian Gulf is unavoidably more challenging than imposing a long-needed Caribbean quarantine now planned by the new administration. It requires military strength — the existence of real power to compete with the Soviet Union.

Reagan has asked Congress to give him that, but he is far from possessing it. Until he gets it, his conservative critics will praise his resolve, but continue to worry about too much loud talk in America's backyard.

Sugar 'n' Spice Is Nice But Not For Everybody

Phillip and I have never believed that the way to prepare Meg for womanhood is to expect her to conform to the "sugar 'n spice" stereotype of little girls. Of course, I'm not sure we could force her into that mold even if we tried. She is far too noisy, far too active, and far too independent to accept Little Miss Muffet as a role model.

I can't truthfully say that this never bothers me. Sometimes I find myself succumbing to the pressures of society and wishing that she would be a little more ladylike. I see the better socialized girls in her class and wonder when Meg, too, will learn that hitching up her skirt and scratching her fanny in public is unacceptable behavior.

There are many days when I would give a week's grocery money if she'd use the toy mop Santa brought as a housekeeping tool rather than as a weapon with which to ambush me while shouting, "Aha, me matey! Walk the plank or I'll run you through!"

I often find her attitude toward clothes distressing, too. Her idea of the ideal outfit for a birthday party is a Mickey Mouse sweatshirt and her bluejeans with the patches on both knees. When I protest, she grumbles, "Whoever heard of having a good time in a dress?"

I really don't she why she's worried. Her wearing apparel rarely has any effect at all on her ability to have a good time. She'd just as soon slog through a mud puddle in white tights and mary janes as in tennis shoes.

And upon reflection, I'm grateful for this attitude. I've found that I am simply not equipped to handle her flirtatons with stereotypical womanhood. Being poked in the back with a mop handle while cleaning the bathtub is minor compared to what happens when Meg begins to worry about the greasies and to ask if her bruises are age spots.

Her most recent lapse into prissiness began on a Sunday morning 10 minutes before we were due at the church. As I rushed past the bathroom door, I heard her stage whisper. "Mommy, come here."

I responded impatiently. "I can hardly hear you. Speak up."

"I can't," she whispered.

"Why?"

"When you want to capture someone's attention, you have to whisper."

To say that I suddenly smelled trouble is to put it mildly. I didn't have to see the empty bottle to realize that she had doused herself with Phillip's aftershave.

Several days later she lathered herself from top to bottom (and I mean that literally) with hand lotion. "Don't you think my skin looks younger?" she asked. "Daddy will never know the secret of this younger-looking skin."

After this episode, I made sure that all potentially dangerous substances, like red lipstick, creme rinse, and Lady Bics, were out of reach. Unfortunately, I couldn't do the same at her best friend's house. I had barely arrived to pick Meg up one afternoon when her friend's mother and I heard her scream. Rushing to the bathroom, we found that she had painted her eyelashes.

Little girls do that, of course, but most ot them use mascara. Meg used pink nail polish.

Meg may someday be ready for womanhood, but I have a feeling that womanhood will never be ready for Meg.

Basic Premise Remains: Just Pay As We Go

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — So much comment has focused upon Mr. Reagan's proposals for reducing federal outlays that his proposals for raising federal revenues have been almost overlooked. The president wants to raise "user fees" on inland waterways, coastal waterways and airports. His recommendations are probably too optimistic, but they make great good sense.

Specifically, Mr. Reagan will ask Congress for increased taxes on barge operators, airlines and private plane owners. He will ask new fees on the owners of yachts, recreational craft and merchant vessels.

In each case, the taxes and fees are intended to cover services of direct, personal benefit to the users. Mr. Reagan sees no good reason why a yacht owner shouldn't contribute something toward the costs incurred by the Coast Guard in maintaining navigational aids and rescue operations. The president has a good point.

For many years the nation's barge operators paid nothing at all toward the cost of maintaining the locks and channels of the inland waterway system. After a prolonged fight, the 96th Congress imposed a tax of 4 cents a gallon on barge fuel. By the government's estimates, the proceeds will meet only 11 percent of these maintenance costs in 1981.

Mr. Reagan now expects to send a bill to the House this month that would hike the tax from 4 cents to 29 cents a gallon, effective July 1. If Congress goes along, the Inland Waterways Trust Fund would gain by $306 million in fiscal '82. The Office of Management and Budget says the increase would be less than 0.4 cents per ton mile for the shippers. It seems a reasonable charge for use of a $6 billion system.

Anthony L. Kucera, head of American Waterways Operators, Inc., says his members generally will support the president, if — if Mr. Reagan's user fees are in fact equitably distributed across the whole of the transportation industry. Mr. Kucera adds that if user fees have become the name of the game, municipalities and industries that take water from the inland system, either for drinking purposes or for industrial use, also should be hit for a share of the cost. Such an extension would complicate a simple tax bill, but it's hard to argue with his reasoning.

The fees proposed for an estimated nine million boat owners are based on the same line of thought. This year the taxpayers will put up $1.3 billion to finance the U.S. Coast Guard. A part of this outlay, of course, is of general benefit for law enforcement, weather forcasting, coastal security and the like. But the bulk of the cost benefits only a small segment of the public.

Mr. Reagan's idea is to impose modest fees, ranging from $10 to $30 a year for most boat owners. Operators of commercial vessels would pay "several hundred or a thousand dollars" a year. The proceeds would offset the direct costs of navigation lights, buoys and rescue helicopters. By 1986, says OMB, revenues should approach $500 million.

In a third area, the administration will ask higher fees from airlines and from general aviation, intended to cover a larger portion of the cost of maintaining our air control system. The proposal embraces new taxes on aviation fuel, passenger tickets and freight waybills. By the OMB's estimate, these taxes would generate $3.3 billion in new revenues in fiscal '82 and as much as $5.2 billion in 1986.

Taken as a whole, Mr. Reagan's plan admittedly would impose some additional burdens upon consumers. The barge operators, for example, haul 700 million tons of freight every year, chiefly in petroleum, coal, building materials, chemicals and grain. Presumably the expense of higher fuel taxes would be passed along. The airlines, already hard pressed by mounting fuel costs, can be expected to resist any proposal to raise passenger fares even higher.

But the president's basic contention is convincing: We never will get out of the economic mess without belt-tightening all along the line. More than 150 years ago, John Randolph of Roanoke startled the House by crying, "Mr. Speaker! I have discovered the philosopher's stone. It is this, Sir — Pay as you go! Pay as you go!" The rule is as wise now as it was then.

Annual Testing

The Greenville City Schools will be administering the N.C. Annual Testing Program to students in grades 1, 2, 3, 6, and 9. Grades 1 and 2 will begin their testing with a practice test on Monday, March 16. Greenville City Schools will give grades 4, and 5 the same type of test for the first time this year. A practice test and/or general instruction on Monday, March 23 will begin the testing for students in grades 3, 4, 5, 6, and 9. The tests will be given during the first part of the the morning on the dates specified.

The State Board of Education has asked each school unit to administer the annual statewide testing program in reading and mathematics to help local school systems and teachers identify and correct student needs in these basic skills. The program will also help to evaluate the effectiveness of the educational process and to ensure that each pupil receives the maximum educational benefits from his/her work in school.

School officials have requested that each child bring two No. 2 pencils with good erasers each day of the testing. Make up examinations will be scheduled for students who are absent because of sickness.

When test results are received, the school will provide you with a report which will help you understand your child's performance on the major skills measured by the tests. Conferences with teachers may then be scheduled if so desired.

Lynchburg Raids Nip-Joints

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — Wide-sweeping raids against 53 people charged with selling liquor illegally in Lynchburg were conducted by more than 120 police officers late Friday night and early Saturday, but the initial results disappointed police.

City Police Chief John K. Swan described the raids as "the biggest here in a number of years." Police closed in on some 17 locations when the simultaneous raids began about 11:30 Friday night.

The operation was aimed against the illegal sale of alcoholic beverages and after-hours drinking establishments known as nip joints.

While police believed the raids had been planned in secrecy, word of the impending action obviously leaked and more than one police squad found an empty establishment when it arrived.

One disappointed raiding party included Swan, City Sheriff Lawrence Simpson and Commonwealth's Attorney William Petty. The three chose to join a raid on The Stallion Lounge.

When police arrived, the place was empty, the beer cold and the heat running. The lounge was licensed to sell beer, but not liquor and half-gallon bottles of liquor were found.

Swan, Simpson and Petty said little while in the lounge, appearing crestfallen.

Early today, only about 10 people had been arrested, although Swan said the pace of arrests was picking up.

Earlier Friday Lynchburg Circuit Judge O. Raymond Cundiff placed injunctions against about 30 locations in the city that prohibited them from even possessing alcohol.

The 17 locations being hit in the midnight raids were among those placed under the injunctions, which will remain in effect until they are either modified or lifted.

The raids were the culmination of an operation code named "Lucky Friday," for Friday the 13th, Swan said.

The chief said the six-month investigation involved a special undercover agent who bought whisky from violators and gathered enough evidence to have search warrants issued.

Operation "Lucky Friday" was a combined effort of the Lynchburg Police Department's Investigations Bureau and the Virginia Alcohol Beverage Control Board, Swan said.

At least 110 ABC charges were filed in the city and 53 people were indicted on multiple counts ranging from the illegal sale of alcohol, sale of untaxed whisky moonshine operation of a common nuisance and aiding and abetting in the operation of a common nuisance.

A Lynchburg Circuit Court grand jury met in special session Friday morning and handed down indictments against the 53 people.

The raid squads were made up of law enforcement officers from the Lynchburg Police Department, the Virginia ABC Board, the City Sheriff's Department, Virginia State Police and deputy sheriffs from adjoining counties.

Swan said all known nip joints and known bootleggers have been charged. These illegal establishments have been trouble spots in the past and have had a history of continuous operation, he said.

Friday Wrecks

An estimated $2,900 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police Friday.

Heavest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 3:40 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets, involving cars driven by Katherine Robinson Stox of Ayden, and Donald Earl Hannah of Route 5, Greenville.

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,000 to the Stox car and $800 to the Hannah vehicle by investigators, who charged Hannah with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Cars driven by Myra Gale Fleming of Route 1, Stokes and Antoinette Smith Jenkins of 407 South Eastern St. collided about 12:10 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard, causing $650 damage to the Fleming car and $450 damage to the Jenkins vehicle.

Shooting-Abduction

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP) — Authorities were conducting a three-state search Saturday for a Roxboro man who allegedly shot two youths and abducted his ex-girlfriend and her 10-month-old child from their Person County home.

The wounded youths were taken to Durham County General Hospital, where they were reported in stable condition Saturday.

Law Enforcement officers in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia were looking for Cecil Terry Bolton Jr., 25, who is charged in warrants with kidnapping and two counts of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

Person County Sheriff Ernest Dixon said Bolton had gone to the home of his ex-girlfriend, Lisa Oakley, 19, sometime Friday.

How indeed.

joined forces with Vittorio Giannini, the Italian born composer, in calling for the creation of a state-supported art school. Because of the governor's strong backing, a bill calling for a contingent state appropriation of $325,000 was passed by the legislature with relative ease. The House approved the bill on June 21, 1963 by a vote of 80-18. Rep. David Britt of Robeson County, now an associate justice of the state Supreme Court, led off the debate for the bill as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. An art school, he told the house, could help North Carolina lose its reputation as a "vale of humility."

After Winston-Salem won in a competition among North Carolina cities as the home of the school by promising to donate an abandoned high school for the campus and $1 million in cash, the school was opened in 1965. Its enrollment has grown from about 250 that first year to about 650 this year. About half the students are from North Carolina and the others come from other states and other countires.

Britt recalled in a recent telephone interview that when the art school appropriation was before the House, he persuaded the late Rep. John Kerr of Warrenton, to speak on its behalf. One reason he called on the Warrenton legislator was his recollection that several years previously Kerr had made the speech which is credited with persuading the House to vote the first $1 million appropriation which made the North Carolina Museum of Art possible.

In a ringing oration, Kerr recalled that "the beauty and glory of ancient Greece have not faded one iota," He concluded by thundering that "if there is going to be toe-dancing, I want it to be here."

UNC Attacks Proposal To Shift Programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A University of North Carolina vice president attacked on Friday federal suggestions that UNC close and shift programs to increase racial balance in the 16-school university system.

Dr. Raymond H. Dawson termed the government consultant's suggestions a "quick fix" that would "cripple the university system."

Dawson, vice president for academic affairs, senior vice president for UNC and top assistant to UNC president William Friday, testified Friday on behalf of the university at Department of Education hearings.

The department wants to cut off $100 million a year in federal funds now going to UNC because of alleged failure to eliminate discrimination against blacks.

Dawson said the proposals to close and shift programs to attain greater racial balance would "destroy faculty morale" because of the inevitability of faculty layoffs because of massive program relocations. He also said required relocations under the proposals would "disrupt" the education of those students already enrolled.

Relocation is only a euphemism for closings, Dawson contended. He said they would be "a jarring blow" to student and faculty recruitment at the affected schools.

Dawson also criticized a study made by government consultant Dr. Robert Dentler, the senior sociologist at Abt Associates, a Cambridge, Mass., firm contracted by the government in 1979 to conduct a study of the UNC system.

Joseph J. Levin, chief lawyer for the university, said Abt was paid more than $80,000 to make the study.

The study recommended program consolidations to eliminate what Dentler called "unnecessary program duplication." Under the model, certain programs that were "educationally unnecessary" would be relocated to other schools in the system.

Dentler said students would follow the programs, thereby changing the racial mix at the institutions involved.

Dawson said the "wholesale closing" of nine targeted fields was based on the "the fundamental fallacy that when the program is picked up and put down somewhere else, that everyone will obediently pack up their trunks and move wherever we tell them. Dentler is talking about the moving of people.

"This plan suggests that you can take some field and relocate it without regard to program development, without regard to faculty and students and without regard to resources such as library and support staff," Dawson said.

Dawson also criticized the methods used by Dentler in the study, calling Dentler's recommendations for program shifting "a remarkable document ... remarkable for its incompleteness."

Dawson cited what he called numerous omissions in the study, discussing each of the nine degree programs in Dentler's study and detailing the harm he said would result if they were consolidated.

Dawson cited the criminal justice program in the UNC system as an example. Dentler's plan calls for closing the criminal justice program on six UNC campuses and consolidating it at the campus of Western Carolina University in Cullowhee.

But Dawson said the action would fail to service commuter students who are enrolled in the criminal justice program at the other campuses. Many of the commuters, explained Dawson, are law enforcement officials who are attending college part time.

Illegal Fur Arrests

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — More arrests are expected in a crackdown on illegal fur trafficking that has resulted in the arrest of one man and the seizure of $10,000 worth of pelts, a South Carolina official says.

Bill Chastain, chief of law enforcement for the S.C. Wildlife and Marine Resources Department, said Friday's arrest of Allen Cousar of Sardinia, S.C., was the first stage in a massive operation aimed at halting the illegal fur trade in South Carolina.

Cousar, in his mid-50s, was arrested in Robeson County, N.C., near Interstate 95 about 45 miles from the South Carolina border.

Authorities said the arrest was made by wildlife officers from both Carolinas and agents of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Agents seized about 500 pelts, including those of bobcats, red foxes, gray foxes and raccoons.

Cousar was charged with illegal transport of furs across state lines and the sale of untagged fur pelts, according to the South Carolina officials.

He faces possible state and federal fines of some $25,000, plus confiscation of equipment and furs.

Chastain said the South Carolina agency's undercover team, created two years ago, is investigating "the criminal element that deals in the sale of illegal furs, venison, gamefish and polluted shellfish."

Social Work Month Noted

During the month of March, social workers all over the country will celebrate Social Work Month. To commemorate this event, Anne Speight, president of the Eastern North Carolina Regional Association of Black Social Workers, has announced the following program.

A public forum on "Educational Needs of the Black Child, Family and Community," will be held on Saturday, March 21 from 1-4 p.m. at Greenville Middle School. The speaker will be C. Melvin Creecy, representative. A panel of professionals from various disciplines will discuss current trends in their respective fields as related to black experience. Scheduled panelists are: Mrs. Viola Vines, retired teacher; Dr. Jasper Register, sociologist; James Brown, attorney; Dr. Andrew A. Best, family practice; Rev. Randy Royal, Phillipi Church of Christ; and Dr. Faheene C. Ashanti, clinical psychologist.

Following the panels presentation, the public will be invited to ask questions and exchange ideas.

The program is sponsored by D.D. Garrett Realty Agency and the Greenville Area Shriners 175. The public is invited to attend.

Fees Revised

The City Council, meeting Thursday night, adopted a revised schedule of animal control fees.

The new schedule sets a revised fee charged by the city for redemption of and feeding and caring of animals which are impounded by the city.

Included in the new schedule are fees for adopting animals which are not claimed by their owners.

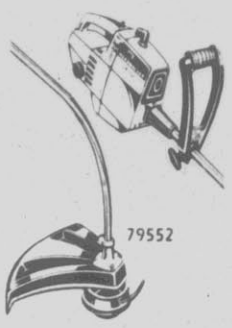

The city said the new schedule, which became effective on March 12, represents the first increase in fees since the animal control program was started in 1973.

World Peace 'Precarious'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., concerned about possible Soviet military intervention in Poland, says outstanding differences between the United States and the Soviet Union have "brought the state of world peace to a very precarious level."

Haig said also that he and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin will begin talks soon that could lead to a summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

But he said that unless the Soviets act soon to improve the political climate, a summit is unlikely for some time.

Haig and other senior officials expressed concern Friday about a hardening of Soviet attitudes on continuing labor unrest in Poland and the scheduling of apparently large-scale military maneuvers by Warsaw Pact nations near Poland's borders in Central Europe.

Walter Stoessel, the newly confirmed undersecretary of state for political affairs, said the possibility that the maneuvers may in fact lead to Soviet intervention in Poland "remains rather high."

Haig said in interviews that recent publicity about attempts to stem a Marxist and allegedly communist-supplied insurgency in El Salvador has obscured what he said is a larger pattern of Soviet interventionism worldwide.

"I think it is clear to the American people and I know it's clear to our West European partners, that were we to continue to ignore these Soviet actions, the objective of assuring world peace and international stability would be gravely threatened," Haig told interviewers on the Public Broadcast System's "MacNeil-Lehrer Report."

"Clearly the time is come for the Soviets to understand this is no longer acceptable action," Haig said.

He refused to say what the consequences of Soviet intervention in Poland would be, saying only that they would be "grave and lasting."

"The bottom line of the consequences has been made very clear to the Soviet leadership," Haig said.

Earlier Friday, Haig told The Associated Press the United States has noted a "stiffening" of the Soviet position on Poland which he said coincides with the beginning of "a huge (military) exercise" near Poland's borders.

Stoessel said that while the United States does not know what consequences may flow from the military exercise, "the possiblity of intervention through such maneuvers — as we recall was the case in Czechoslovakia in 1968 — remains rather high."

Speaking before a conference of American educators, Stoessel remarked on the "cycle of tension and compromise which has been going on for some time" between the Polish government and dissident workers.

He said this cycle of instability has been heightened by "the constant threat of intervention from the Soviet Union."

Also Friday, a senior U.S. official, speaking on the understanding he not be identified by name, said the situation in and around Poland is "somewhat more tense than it was three weeks ago."

He said the two elements contributing to the increased tension are "the hardening Soviet line" and the approach of Soviet-bloc maneuvers, "the scope of which we as yet do not know."

The official said these two factors "give Western observers pause and cause an intensification of the overwatch of the situation in Poland."

Other State Department officials have said recently that there are unmistakable signs that Warsaw Pact forces are about to begin military exercises in Central Europe.

They said that they have not been able to gauge the scope of the exercises.

Under the Helsinki accords, the Soviet Union is required to notify the United States and other signers in advance of military maneuvers involving more than 25,000 troops.

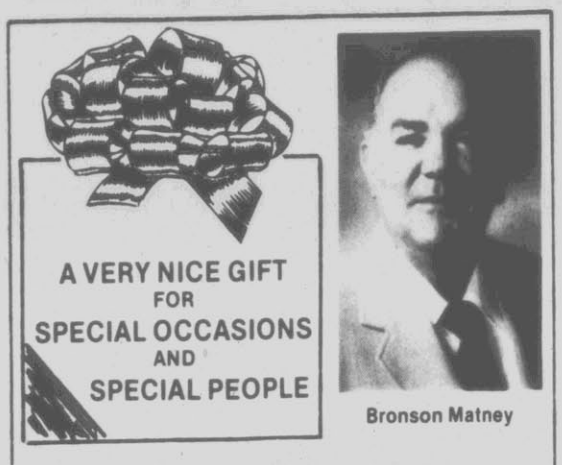

Although Haig said the size of the force to be involved in the exercise "approaches or exceeds 25,000," no such notification has been received.

Later Friday, a State Department official said up to 50 Soviet military personnel have been sent to Chad to assist the Libyan-backed government in that country.

The official said the Soviet action is another aspect of "the broad gauge Soviet arms supply and technical relationship" which has been "indispensible to Libyan intervention in Chad."

According to the official, who asked not to be identified, the Soviets are believed to be training Libyan or Chadian technical personnel.

The situation in Chad has been cited by the State Department as an example of Soviet-sponsored international terrorism because of Moscow's role in supplying weaponry to Libya.

MAY BE THE WAY IT IS ... This scene from December 1980, of idled trains in the Cabot Yard of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority could portend what lies ahead for Boston as it faces a critical financial crisis. Now, in addition to the subway, other cuts are being considered. (AP Laserphoto)

Is Boston Going To Dogs?

BOSTON (AP) — Schools may close two months early, the subway system is in trouble again, fewer fire trucks will be answering alarms and thousands of city workers are wondering if they'll have jobs next year.

Even the city's beloved Boston Bruins are considering bolting to play at a dog track in New Hampshire. The general state of affairs has some Bostonians wondering if their city, like the hockey team, is going to the dogs.

"We are really in a situation of paralysis," says banker Daniel Morley, who heads the Boston Private Industry Council. "No one wants to make any decisions and no one has the direction."

Less than three months after wrapping up a proud celebration of its 350th year, Boston faces some grim possibilities:

—A complete shutdown of its public school system sometime in April, throwing 64,000 students out of classes eight weeks early.

—Layoffs of up to 5,000 of the city's 12,000 workers and a forced budget reduction of at least $100 million because of property tax slashes mandated by Proposition 2½.

—A sharp reduction in mass transit serving 250,000 daily commuters. The cuts begin the end of March with a shutdown of much of Sunday service and, for the first time in the system's history, layoffs of 650 of 6,700 workers.

—An inability to float bonds. "Investors don't usually want to invest in a city that can't afford a police force," warns attorney James Perkins, a city bond counselor.

City officials estimate at least 500 police officers in a force of 2,000 will be laid off, plus 400 firefighters from a force of 1,700.

Boston is not unique. Cities across the country face similar trouble. But this city leads in taxes, debt and costs for fire, police and administration services compared to the similarly sized cities of Baltimore, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Memphis, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Pittsburgh, San Diego and San Francisco, contends the privately financed Boston Municipal Research Bureau.

"Clearly, costs here are too high," the bureau concluded.

Bureau researchers say Boston's financial bind, years in the making, came to a boil when Massachusetts voters passed Proposition 2½ last November. The referendum limits property taxes to 2½ percent of market value. Boston's rate was 8 percent, the state's highest. To comply with the new limits, the city must slash property taxes, its major source of revenue.

That means about $130 million available next year for the city's operating budget, compared to $248 million this year, the bureau estimated. The operating budget does not include $585 million the city is obliged to pay in fixed costs such as pension funds, which cannot be cut.

Without new revenue sources, Harry Durning, bureau executive director, forecasts that by the 1983-84 fiscal year: "There would be no money left beyond that needed for those fixed costs." In other words, no operating money.

Mayor Kevin White is seeking approval to borrow $90 million with bonds backed by taxes on hotels, meals, offstreet parking and development property.

Florida Promotes 'Jaws' Dinners As Delicious And Nutritious

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — If Florida promoters have their way, Americans will soon be turning the tables on "Jaws."

Shark meat, it seems, is delicious, nutritious, inexpensive — and it doesn't have any of those tiny bones.

"It's a novelty item now," said Sally Patrenos, a shark meat promoter for the State of Florida, but more consumers are catching on.

State leaders are so convinced about the potential of the fledgling shark meat market that they've launched promotional campaigns in 36 U.S. cities and in Canada, Mrs. Patrenos said in a recent interview.

Florida is circulating shark promotion pamphlets — complete with recipes — and marine officials are extolling the virtues of the toothy animals to food editors across the country.

Florida marketing officials have appeared on television shows as far away as Salt Lake City, and the state's home economists have traveled to dozens of cities to give viewers tips on preparing and cooking shark, said O.B. Lee of the Department of Natural Resources.

What's more, said Lee, "when our people are traveling, we like to drop in and see the managers of the grocery chains to tell them about shark meat."

Lee said shark has always been plentiful in the Atlantic Ocean and seas throughout the world, but it has become much more available on the retail level in recent years because of improvements in freezing methods and transportation.

Fred Devens of Dixie Fish Co. near Fort Myers said demand for shark is up dramatically.

"A year ago, I was lucky if I could sell five or 10 pounds a day," he told the Fort Myers News-Press. "Now, I could sell 200 pounds every day if I could get it. It outsells everything else."

Devens' retail price for shark meat is $2.15 a pound, considerably less expensive than snapper, black grouper or fileted redfish.

"You think about it before you eat it, but that's just natural," says shark meat aficionado Joe Dickinson, a park ranger. "When I go into a restaurant now and it's not on the menu, I'm really disappointed. The texture is so nice and flaky."

Prepared properly, shark has a mild taste, according to consumers. For best results, sharks should be bled after they're caught.

"We recommend soaking the meat in salty water or milk about an hour before cooking," Mrs. Patrenos said.

"Less than 5 percent of those who taste it don't eat it," he said. "People get a mental picture, but lobsters are super ugly, too."

Association To Hold Meet

The regular monthly membership meeting of the Association for Retarded Citizens/Pitt County will be held Thursday at 6:30 p.m. at First Free Will Baptist Church, 2600 Charles Blvd.

This meeting will be a covered dish dinner, and each member is asked to bring a covered dish.

Special recognition will be given those who have given their time during the recent telephone membership campaign. All members are encouraged to attend this special event highlighting Mental Retardation Week.

There will be a short board meeting following the regular membership meeting.

Sentencing Bill Before Legislature

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A legislative opponent of Gov. Jim Hunt's uniform sentencing act has proposed a bill that would widen the discretion of judges, even allowing them to wipe the slate clean for some accused criminals.

Sen. Robert Swain, D-Asheville, is sponsoring a bill that would permit "deferred prosecution" of selected first offenders.

The provision could be used to prevent the entry of a conviction on a person's record, while at the same time having the accused serve a negotiated prison term or do alternate public-service work.

"This is a way to punish an offender without destroying him, and it does protect society," Swain said Friday as he filed the bill for formal introduction Monday.

He said the bill would help provide alternatives to prison.

Swain, an attorney, has been an outspoken critic of legislation passed in 1979 — and subjected to amendments this year — that requires judges to impose similar sentences for similar types of crimes.

In an interview, Swain dismissed the suggestion that his proposal runs counter to that uniform sentencing concept proposed by Hunt.

In fact, Swain said he spoke with Hunt about the bill before filing it and said, "I did get the impression that he's in favor of this type of concept."

Zeb Alley, Hunt's legislative lobbyist, stiffled a chuckle when told of Swain's comment. After discussing the bill with the governor Friday afternoon, Alley later said Hunt would consider the proposal.

"But it's not part of the governor's package (of proposals)," Alley said.

Under the bill, a judge could work out an agreement with an accused person to serve some type of sentence. After completion of the agreement, the accused person's record would be cleared. Swain said the person's record would show an arrest and dismissal of charges.

Under the proposal, judges could use the procedure in first offenses involving charges ranging up to those serious enough to carry maximum 10 year prison sentences.

That would mean that convictions could be avoided for persons accused of offenses ranging from traffic violations, such as drunk driving, up to charges such as involuntary manslaughter.

According to a list compiled by the Institute of Government, some of the charges that could be dismissed under the bill include second-degree rape and a variety of other sex offenses, larceny, safecracking, embezzlement, perjury, dumping toxic wastes and conspiracy to manufacture drugs such as heroin.

Swain said he expected it would be used only in exceptional cases, however.

"There's nothing shady about this," he told reporters.

In other legislative action:

The proposals arose Friday as legislative budget committees searched for ways to trim $200 million from the state's operating budget, a goal set by Jordan and his House counterpart. Hunt has proposed a 4 percent to 5 percent cost-of-living pay raise.

Bankruptcy

A federal bankruptcy judge appeared before the Senate Small Business Committee and defended portions of the federal bankruptcy code. The committee is considering a bill that would prevent North Carolina debtors from using the federal provisions that exclude some personal property from creditors.

Judge Thomas Moore of the Eastern District of North Carolina said the federal exemptions do not appear to be too high. He also said the increase in bankruptcy filings appears to be due to economic hard times, rather than the enticement of federal bankruptcy provisions.

Income Tax

The House approved a bill that would change the state's personal income tax laws to allow non-residents the same deductions as residents.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, said it would be a eliminate an inequity that has existed since the personal income tax law was enacted in 1921.

South Carolina passed a law in 1979 that cut off its deductions to North Carolinians working in that state until North Carolina changes its law, he said.

A group of South Carolina legislators visited the General Assembly earlier this week to support the bill, saying it would affect 50,000 people in South Carolina and 20,000 in North Carolina. Lilley said the bill would cost the state about $1 million a year.

Alimony

The House passed a bill that would remove the automatic deletion of alimony to a person who files for a no-fault divorce.

Environment

Acting at Hunt's suggestion, a legislative committee recommended elimination of an agency that handles environmental permits in the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.The joint base budget subcommittee on Natural and Economic Resources recommended cutting the Office of Intergovernmental Regulatory Relations. The move would eliminate eight of its 11 staff members, including the director. The other three would be transferred to other sections in the department.

Anne Taylor, director of the office, was shocked by the move and sharply disagreed that the program would not be hurt.

Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce said that despite the recommendation contained in a memo to legislators this week, Hunt did not want to see the office eliminated. Pearce said Hunt would urge the subcommittee to reverse its action next week and restore part of the office.

Medical Benefits Cut Recommended

By W.A. WERONKA JR.
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A panel in charge of retirement benefits for state employees Friday recommended cutting benefits in employees' medical insurance inorder to avoiding increasing costs.

The Board of Trustees of the Teachers and State Employees Retirement System rejected state Treasurer Harlan Boyles' recommendation to open medical insurance to bidders.

The board, comprised of legislators and state officials and chaired by Boyles, met in special session to consider a 31 percent cost increase in medical insurance coverage for teachers and state employees.

The increase by Blue Cross and Blue Shield would take effect Oct. 1.

Officials of Blue Cross and Blue Shield gave reasons for the increase and suggested several optional programs the board could consider to keep the increase down.

Boyles said that under the current contract with the insurance company, the board can terminate it with six months notice and call for bids on a new program.

To avoid forcing state personnel to pay the 31 percent increase themselves, Boyles said, notice would have to be given by April 1 so the contract could be terminated by Oct. 1.

Boyles said nothing would be lost because the board could renew the contract with Blue Cross and Blue Shield if it wanted to.

The 31 percent increase would cost the state about $44 million during the 1981-1983 biennium. During 1981-82, the state has allocated $93.5 million for the program, in which the state pays all the premium.

But the board rejected Boyles recommendation and backed a move by state Rep. Tom Ellis, D-Henderson, and state Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Deep Run, both members of the board. They recommended that the board's advisory health committee analyze Blue Cross and Blue Shield's optional programs to look for a program that would stay within the current appropriation.

Members of the committee said they could come back with a plan before April 1, so the board could consider it and still have time to give notice of termination and call for bids.

"It's just one of those things," Boyles said of the decision. "What they effectively said was they wanted to capture all the gains from the existing carrier before facing the question of new bids.

"My concern was if we make significant modifications in the contract, what do we do to the credibility of the competitive bidding process the state depends on? I wanted to preserve all the options available. But I submit to the wisdom of the board."

Boyles said he made his recommendation because the board represents 450,000 people. "We have to show them we tried to get the best possible deal. But if we don't open it to bids, then all we can tell them is we think, not know, we got the best deal."

Hardison and Ellis backed their stance by noting the current budget situation and said there is no extra money available. Both added that Blue Cross and Blue Shield had been doing a good job and should be given a chance to develop options.

Some of the options offered by the company included going to a comprehensive major medical program, in which the employee would pay a deductable amount for in-patient care and then 20 percent of additional care up to a certain amount.

Social Work Month Is Proclaimed

March has been proclaimed by Mayor Don McGlohon as "Professional Social Work Month" here.

He said that "social problems continue to impede our society's progress toward a productive and rewarding life for every citizen."

The mayor said "trained, professional social workers are addressing our human problems directly and effectively in both crisis and everyday situations."

According to McGlohon, "these professionals need the informed support of our community to continually maintain and improve the quality of social services to individuals and groups."

He urged citizens to join the Coastal District Unit, Theta Chapter—Alpha Delta Mu—Social Work Honor Society and ECU Student Organization of the N.C. Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers in the observance.

He also urged "each citizen to join and support the social work profession in its efforts to advance the quality of life in our community."

Officials Mum On Prisoner

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — As Ku Klux Klan members continue to agitate over the case of a black prisoner accused of raping a white woman, authorities are keeping their lips sealed about the location of the prisoner.

Suspect Ernest Eugene Smith, 20, has been moved twice this week under heavy guard following a Klan demonstration and anonymous threats from people identifying themselves as Klansmen.

"I know where he's (the suspect) being held, but in the interest of peace and safety of everyone involved, we're trying to keep it a guarded secret," said Clark Parker, the court-appointed attorney for Smith.

Smith, a textile worker at Burris Industries in Lincolnton, was arrested Monday and charged with raping a 33-year-old Lincoln County woman. He is being held in lieu of $25,000 bond.

Men in hooded robes were among 20 Klansmen and supporters who assembled outside the Lincoln County jail the day after Smith's arrest. The Klansmen read a letter of protest and told authorities they wanted Smith released into their custody.

"We weren't going to take him out and lynch him," said Klan leader Joe Grady of Winston-Salem. "We wanted to get to the man before the NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People) paid his bail, and he ran."

One Klan supporter was arrested at that rally following a scuffle. Grant Connor, 29, was charged with assault on a police officer. He was released after Jerry Paul Smith posted his bond.

Jerry Paul Smith was one of six Klansmen and Nazis acquitted last year in the November 3, 1979, shooting deaths of five Communist Workers Party members at an anti-Klan rally in Greensboro.

Earnest Eugene Smith was moved to the nearby Catawba County Jail in Newton after the Klan demonstration Tuesday. Lincoln County Sheriff Harven Crouse said Smith was moved after jailers began receiving telephone calls from purported Klansmen who warned, "We're going to get that SOB."

Crouse said Friday he wants to avoid a conflict between jailers and Klansmen. "It's all the work of the Klan," he said.

Meanwhile, Kelly Alexander, a Charlotte NAACP official, said the incidents are "the same old soup warmed over again.

"The KKK activities aren't new to me," said Alexander, a member of the NAACP for 42 years and currently vice-chairman of the national board of directors. "We (blacks) have to suffer in certain parts of North Carolina because of the KKK harassment. And it appears that KKK activity is picking up in the western part of the state."

Parker said his client's case probably will come to trial in late April or May. He said he will ask to have the trial moved from incoln County "if tempers don't cool down."

Parker said he felt Smith would be safe until the trial. "The good people of Lincoln County aren't going to rush any jails," he said.

Smith was arrested Monday after a woman reported that a black man forced his way into her house Monday morning and raped her. The woman, who said the assailant had knocked on her door and asked highway directions, identified Smith as the man who attacked her.

Search Under Way

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Searchers have found two empty lifeboats in the frigid Bering Sea near where a Japanese fishing boat sank in a storm with 26 crewmen aboard, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

A Navy plane and 20 Japanese fishing boats were looking again today, but Coast Guard spokesman William Boatman said, "There's not much hope for survivors."

He said "the best thing to hope for is to find debris."

With water temperature in the mid-30s, the life expectancy of someone in a lifejacket is about 90 minutes, officials said.

The 105-foot Daito Maru 55 was traveling with 10 other Japanese vessels fishing for cod when it suddenly went down early Friday, the Maritime Safety Agency of Japan reported.

The boat sank about 380 miles northwest of Adak Island, which is part of Alaska's Aleutian Islands, as the crew of another boat watched, unable to help because of high waves and strong winds, officials said.

The martime agency reported that the Daito Maru sent a distress signal late Thursday. Although the Taisei Maru No. 68 responded, the storm kept it from getting close to the sinking boat.

South Korea Considering Realignment With Japan

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The South Korean government is reported to be considering a realignment of its basic relations with Japan — relations that remain strained despite efforts to improve them.

While details of the realignment were not clear, there is evidence in statements attributed Friday to South Korean officials that the government here expects Japan to do much of the moving or changing. A phrase noted here calls for Japan to change its "basic posture" toward Korea and to understand the real situation in this part of the world.

One of the fears expressed by the South Koreans is that Japan may be thinking of establishing better links with Communist-governed North Korea.

Despite centuries of cultural ties, and, in more recent years, extensive economic involvement, deep differences still exist between Japan and South Korea. Memories remain here of Japanese invasions of the Korean Peninsula, forced annexation in 1910 and 35 years of harsh colonial rule. These same feelings may well be held in the North as well.

Relations between Seoul and Tokyo were normalized in 1965, and Japanese business began to move in. In 1979, the direct foreign investment inflow to Korea amounted to $126 million, with $55 million, or 43.7 percent, from Japan.

But the late 1970s also brought new tensions, some involving human-rights issues in South Korea.

The case of leading South Korean dissident Kim Dae-jung pointed up the controversy between the two countries. Japan raised some of the strongest protests when Kim was sentenced to death last year on charges of sedition. In turn, South Korea was particularly incensed by reports quoting Japanese leaders as saying the Kim case might lead to new overtures between Tokyo and Communist North Korea.

Kim's sentence was commuted in January to life in prison. Japan officially welcomed the action, but criticism was not stilled. Japan has a Korean resident population of 665,000, many divided in sympathies between the North and South. Seoul blames pro-North elements in Japan for repeatedly heightening frictions.

While recent weeks have seen renewed moves to smooth relations between Seoul and Tokyo, the parts have not yet fallen into place.

Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito attended the March 3 inauguration of President Chun Doo-hwan. Ito was the highest ranking Japanese official to visit Korea in more than two years, and delivered a letter to Chun from Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki. There was speculation that it included an invitation for a meeting between the two, but no announcement of such talks followed.

Legion Celebrates 62nd Anniversary

On the dates March 15-17, The American Legion will be celebrating the 62nd anniversary of its organization. Legion posts throughout the State of North Carolina are making preparations to participate in this celebration in their own way.

American Legion Post No. 39 in Greenville has scheduled several activities coinciding with the Legion's anniversary. They will be entertaining the ladies at an annual ladies night banquet Tuesday at 7 p.m. Gold Star mothers, wives of legionnaires, and auxiliary members are invited to attend. Mayo Allen, superintendent of the Greenville Public Works Department, will be guest speaker.

In connection with North Carolina's celebration, Michael J. Kogutek, national commander, will be visiting the state for three days. Commander Kogutek will participate in special meetings in Hickory, Benson, and in Raleigh.

The American Legion was founded March 15-17, 1919 in Paris, France, at a meeting os representatives of the various outfits of the American Expeditionary Force of World War I. Formed and chartered for the express purpose of assisting World War I veterans in their rehabilitation to civilian life following their discharge from service at the cessation of hostilities, the organization has since opened its doors to veterans of World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War. It has broadened its scope of assistance to include the veteran's family and the community as a whole.

American Legion posts in North Carolina sponsor such programs as: veterans' rehabilitation, legion baseball, Boys's State, Boy Scouts, high school oratorical contests, awarding ROTC medals, special olympics, and many other activities involving children and youth and community service.

"I'm looking forward to retiring at The Albemarle."

—Wadie Winslow

"I like the idea of retiring among friends. That's most important. But there are added attractions, like its location. It's close enough that you can walk to the post office, and stores, and other parts of town, like the parks.

"It's important that people not confuse The Albemarle with a nursing home. It's an entirely different approach. At The Albemarle, everybody has their own complete apartment and total independence. But they also have a health care facility available right there where they live.

ECU Concert Choir To Perform

The East Carolina University Concert Choir, under the direction of Brett Watson, will appear in concert at Wright Auditorium Wednesday, March 18 at 8:15 p.m. The choir will perform works by Josquin des Prez, Heinrich Schultz, J.S. Bach, Anton Bruckner, Hugo Wolf, and Felix Mendelssohn as well as madrigals and folk songs.

ECU CHOIR CONCERT...The East Carolina University Choir will appear in concert in Wright Auditorium Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. The choir will perform works by Josquin des Prez, Heinrich Schutz, J.S. Bach, Anton Bruckner, Hugo Wolf, and Felix Mendelssohn and madrigals and folk songs. Tickets, priced at $1, will be available at the door.

A double-choir section will be featured in Bach's Motet No. V, Komm, Jesu, komm. The motet is the most romantic of the six written by Bach and contains chord progressions in the third section on which many 20th century popular songs have been based.

The choir will leave on a five day tour March 25 to Virginia, Washington, D.C., and New York. The 42 singers will appear in two public schools in Northern Virginia and will sing a concert Friday evening, March 27 at Central Presbyterian Church in New York City. The choir will also perform during the Saturday afternoon Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York and will sing the Sunday morning Latin Mass at St. Mathew's Cathedral in Washington.

Tickets for the Wright Auditorium performance, priced at $1, will be available at the door.

Blowpipes Gaining In Favor

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — Blowpipes, once used mainly by African and South American tribes in warfare and hunting, have gained a higher use in civilized nations — the control and medical care of wild and domesticated animals.

Veterinarians and animal control officers now routinely use blowpipes to administer medicines or to immoblize animals instead of the noisy, more powerful capture gun.

Dr. Morton S. Silberman, Emory University veterinarian and an authority on the capture and restraint of wild and domestic animals, says the nearly noiseless blowpipe causes hardly any pain and does far less tissue damage because it fires a smooth needle instead of a barbed one.

It is also less expensive than a capture gun and is safer for the operator, the animal and bystanders, Silberman said.

Silberman has captured animals as large as chimpanzees with a blowpipe. He has used blowpipes to vaccinate lions, tigers, rhinoceroses and other animals.

"It's like giving a hand injection," says Silberman. "They are especially useful in zoos. You can do (vaccinate) 30 cats and nobody knows the difference. Everybody is calm and cool."

In the same situation, Silberman said with the first explosive shot of a capture gun "every cat in the house would just go crazy."

The capture gun uses an explosive charge to fire a barbed dart. It has been in use since the 1950s in animal control work.

Silberman says the blowpipe does not replace the gun, which is the only alternative in many situations.

The dart gun, he says, has an effective range of up to 50 yards, contrasted to a range of 10-15 feet for the blowpipe. The closer to the target, the better, said Silberman. "If you get within five feet of them with a blowpipe, you have an excellent chance of administering some agent.

"The blowpipe certainly has its limitations because of distance and wind factors."

The dart fired by the blowpipe is so light a wind current could force it off target.

The modern blowpipe generally is made of aluminum and is 3-6 feet long.

The dart is about four inches long and can deliver larger quantities of drugs than the old jungle darts, which were dipped in a toxic substance such as curare.

Silberman emphasized that anyone using a blowpipe to vaccinate or capture animals must be well-trained in the use of the weapon, know what it can do and know its limitations.

Comedian Cook Floats Along With The Tide

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — English comedian Peter Cook, claiming no specific ambitions, says he just floats along with the tide.

Cook, winner of two Tony Awards and one Grammy, and his long-time partner, Dudley Moore, went their separate ways after they completed an American tour with "Good Evening." Moore wanted to pursue a career in the movies and was later cast in "10."

"It's not that I don't have ambition," says Cook. "I don't have any specific ambitions. I've floated along happily on a series of accidents. This show is a happy accident."

Cook is referring to "The Two of Us," also starring Mimi Kennedy, which CBS plans to telecast as a spring tryout series. The tall, lanky, lantern-jawed Cook plays a smooth and snobbish English butler in the comedy series. Miss Kennedy plays his employer, a New York talk show hostess. The series will run for four episodes.

Cook was here last year on vacation when he received several scripts during the torrential downpours that flooded Southern California. One script was for "The Two of Us."

"I'd just met with my agent the day before and one thing we'd ruled out was an American situation comedy," he recalls. "There are no roles for Englishmen, and if there are and it's a success you're stuck here for five years.

"I said, 'I can't come down. Benedict Canyon is a river.' So they sent some four-wheel-drive military vehicle to pick me up. I made the pilot, and it was a surprise to get a cable saying it had been picked up."

The Marble Arch production of "The Two of Us" is based on the English comedy "Two's Company," in which Elaine Stritch played an American author living in London and Donald Sinden was the butler.

In the TV series, Cook plays a snooty butler whose employment with a British delegate to the United Nations suddenly ends when the diplomat meets "a horrible American death." He's thrown from a bucking mechanical bull at a disco.

He answers a newspaper ad for a butler placed by a person described as "an English major." Cook thinks he's about to meet a military officer. But Miss Kennedy, who placed the ad, is talking about her college degree.

Cook won Tonys for American stage appearances in "Beyond the Fringe" and "Good Evening."

After "Beyond the Fringe" ended its Broadway run, Cook returned to London and did a weekly, one-man TV series in which he wore a macintosh and delivered deadpan monologues on outlandish themes. Later, the 6-foot-1½ Cook and 5-foot-3 Moore teamed up for the hit BBC series "Not Only... But Also."

"It was just a series of sketches," says Cook. "We had some characters, Pete and Dud being the principal ones. I tended to be the bossy one. We were both extremely ignorant, but I was more forcible in my ignorance. Other characters included Dudley as a one-legged actor who wants to play Tarzan. I was his agent.

"I hope we can work together again."

BALLET BIRD — Odetta, Queen of the Swans, played by Elaine Bauer, is taken away by the evil sorcerer Von Rothbart, who, in the form of an owl, is played by Arthur Leeth, in the Boston Ballet production of "Swan Lake." Clash Of Titans

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The marquee might read, simply: "Clash of the Theatrical Titans," starring impresario Roger L. Stevens of Washington and the Shuberts of Broadway.

Stevens, chairman of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, is a high-stakes gambler in the American theater. For years, in his marbled cultural palace on the Potomac, he has had the capital practically to himself.

Now Stevens faces an unlikely new challenge from a frumpy maiden aunt who has joined his poker game with an impressive pile of chips.

The maiden aunt is the 145-year-old National Theater, which had fallen on hard times in recent years and barely escaped the wrecker's ball in a deteriorating section of Pennsylvania Avenue, three blocks from the White House.

The Kennedy Center managed the National after a fashion for five years. Then, frustrated by leftover theatrical fare and a darkened stage six months of the year, the National's board of directors dumped the Kennedy Center as theater operators in early 1980 and hired the Shubert Organization — the "Tiffany of show business" — to reverse its declining fortunes.

The Shuberts moved quickly to fulfill their promise to restore the National to its historic place of distinction with "the finest productions we can offer." They led their first season with the American premiere of Peter Shaffer's London hit, "Amadeus."

Further, there are two Neil Simon offerings, "They're Playing Our Song," and "I Ought to Be in Pictures," and Mark Medoff's award-winning "Children of a Lesser God." Next season, the Shuberts hope to bring "Amadeus" back for a return engagement, plus "Evita" and the new "Piaf."

"Roger Stevens is formidable opposition," says Maurice Tobin, president of the National Theater. "He has done a good job at the Kennedy Center. Now he is going to have to do a better job, because competition is staring him in the face."

Says Bernard B. Jacobs, the Shubert president: "Before we entered the picture, the economics of taking a show to the Kennedy Center meant 'you play on my terms.' Now there is competition on terms. So Roger will have to use a sharper pencil."

Competition from the National? Stevens dismisses the notion.

"I just get mad at them saying how scared I am," Stevens snaps. "I couldn't care less whether the Shuberts are in town ... We have the best musical theater in the country. Nobody will take a musical into the National if they can come here."

Stevens, 71 and trying to slow down after a second heart attack, is tired of the controversy. "I've written it off. I've forgotten it."

He is more concerned at the moment with planning the celebration of the Kennedy Center's 10th anniversary this September, and laying the groundwork for his inevitable retirement.

Most of all, Stevens wants to establish a permanent resident theater company in time for the Eisenhower Theater's 1981 season this fall.

Jacobs, meanwhile, says he aims to bring quality theater to Washington and make it pay. The Shuberts, after all, operate 17 theaters in New York — about half the total in that city — and in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and Los Angeles, and believes the 1,600-seat National is a potential gold mine.

"Washington has been a source of distress in the theatrical community," Jacobs says. "Roger has run it as a one-opertor town, and the theater has been dominated by Roger's taste, which has its limitations."

The hostility between Stevens and the National Theater's new leadership is unmistakable, and so is the eagerness of the National, at least, to engage in battle. Both sides agree that whatever the outcome, Washington theatergoers will be the winners.

"A theater is like a restaurant," says the National's Tobin. "If the food is good, you'll get more people going out to eat."

Rosen Performance

CHARLOTTE — Cellist Nathaniel Rosen will be the soloist in a performance with the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra, Leo Driehuys, directing, at 8:15 p.m. on Wednesday, March 18. This is the final Wednesday series of the season.

Rosen will play Haydn's "Concerto in D Major for Cello and Orchestra." Also on the program will be works by Aaron Copland and Sergei Rachmaninoff.

'Sophisticated Lady' Is A New Broadway Hit

By GLENNE CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gregory Hines is responsible for about 90 percent of the Broadway success of "Sophisticated Ladies."

This colorful, fast-moving, singing-dancing revue to the music of Duke Ellington opened at the Lunt-Fontanne Theater March 1. Already it has become a "hot ticket," the first musical hit of 1981, right up there competing with "42nd Street" and "The Pirates of Penzance" for honors of the 1980-1 Broadway season.

A lot of money has been spent to good effect — particularly on Willa Kim's myriad costumes — and it's a great show visually.

But without Hines it wouldn't be the same. His singing, drumming, mugging and dancing — helped immeasurably by the tap routines devised by Henry LeTang — keep the show humming.

That extraordinary dancer Judith Jamison shares top billing with Hines, but choreographers Donald McKayle and Michael Smuin have given her nothing to suit her style. Her singing doesn't measure up, and a couple of her costumes are highly unsuitable.

Fortunately the show has two other fine young dancers, Hinton Battle and Gregg Burge (both played the Scarecrow in "The Wiz"), and a great performer in singer-comic P.J. Benjamin.

Mercer Ellington's 18-piece orchestra, on a platform above the stage, ploughs through 37 numbers without much variety of dynamics. There are too many songs, sung by singers who are really not good enough, which let spirits sag between production and tap numbers. Four or five songs could be eliminated to advantage.

Highlights: "It Don't Mean a Thing," with Hines, Burge and four chorus men in a tap routine; "Caravan," sung and danced beautifully by Burge with a chorus in white flying suits which suddenly combine to create an airplane with Burge's cane as propeller; "Bli-Blip" with Benjamin and Terri Klausner singing and leading a jitterbug chorus; and "Kinda Dukish," in which Hines dons his familiar vest and open shirt for a fantastic tap solo.

But it's Gregory Hines's best Broadway show yet, and a triumphant justification for his being rehired after being dropped from the show out of town for less than a day.

He currently is playing one of his most famous roles, the disintegrating lawyer Bill Maitland in John Osborne's "Inadmissible Evidence" at the Off Broadway Roundabout Stage One, where it opened Feb. 23. Williamson originated the role in London and on Broadway in 1964 and 1965.

Maitland is onstage throughout the play, coming apart at the seams as his career and all his personal relationships rage out of control, due to his drinking, wenching and sharp practices.

The role is so long that noone could maintain an inspired performance throughout, and Williamson frequently has to depend on technique. But he rises to heights that few actors, if any, could match today.

Another Broadway entry was "The Survivor," a play about a group of teen-agers in the Warsaw Ghetto in World War II, which opened March 3 at the Morosco Theater and closed March 8.

It was based on a survivor's account of that black period in history. But the play was so poorly written, directed and played — its doomed characters were never more than two dimensional — that "The Survivor," however well-meaning, was an insult to those who died and a disservice to those who live.

Romulus Linney's "Childe Byron," which opened March 1 at the Off Broadway Circle Rep, has the poet's ghost summoned up by his daughter on her death bed so she can chide him for being an unrepentant bisexual.

The white-draped corner set by David Potts and Marshall W. Mason's direction are excellent. William Hurt as Byron and Lindsay Crouse as his daughter Ada give lightweight performances, and the playwright's intent is obscure.

Thea Musgrave's opera "Mary, Queen of Scots" was given its New York premiere by the New York City Opera March 1, and it proved to have nearly everything an opera needs except interesting music.

The orchestral score has moments of high dramatic tension, but they are rare, and the vocal score is relentless modern recitative. Both owe much to Benjamin Britten, but are far from his standards.

Miss Musgrave has wisely decided to tell the story of Mary, Queen of Scots, as a power struggle with her bastard half-brother James Stewart, Earl of Moray. The opera ends with James's death, with Mary still on the throne.

Singing actors are imperative here, and Ashley Putnam as Mary, Richard Fredricks as James, and particularly Rico Serbo as the emotional Darnley are excellent. The sparse set, dominated by a huge monogram of Mary, and the costumes are superb. The costumes are from the original Scottish production and the set from the Virginia Opera American premiere production of 1978.

TALKING IT OUT — Poet-turned rocker Jim Carroll talks about his debut album, "Catholic Boy," and its most talked about song, "People Who Died," during a recent Los Angeles interview. The song comes as no surprise to anyone familiar with Carroll's prose and poetry, material for which is drawn from the author's own dark past. (AP Laserphoto)

HISTORIC BRIDGE'S DAYS NUMBERED — Presidio County officials say virtually all obstacles have been overcome in their effort to build a new bridge across the Rio Grande in Presidio County, Texas. It would force the closing of the existing bridge, built in 1926 as a "temporary" structure but still in use today. (AP Laserphoto)

LONELY REMINDER — The wooden-shingled lookout tower at the old Penny's Hill Coast Guard Station stands as a reminder of the days when a constant vigil was kept along North Carolina's coast for enemy ships. A Woman's Portraits Proved A Cure For Acute Depression

By LORI LINENBERGER

WELLSVILLE, Kan. (UPI) — Three years ago, 71-year-old Elizabeth Layton picked up a drawing pencil and accomplished what mental hospitals and electric shock treatment had failed to do.

From the time she was 32, the white-haired, bespectacled wife, mother and grandmother had suffered continuous depression, severe enough to warrant institutionalization several times and electric shock treatments. The depression peaked in 1977 when Mrs. Layton lost her youngest son.

As she describes it, she had two choices: "Go back to the mental health clinic or kill myself."

A daughter recommended she take an art course at Ottawa University to keep busy. There she was taught contour drawing, a little-used method in which the artist looks only at her model and not at her pencil and paper.

The result is a seemingly uncontrolled line that emphasizes the mood of the picture and the model's expression — be it sorrow, anger, pain, terror or humor.

Mrs. Layton insists that contour drawing cured her depression. She noticed an immediate change in her moods, she says, and was able to start forgetting a torturous time of her life.

The fact that she currently has 30 of her works on display at a Washburn University museum and was named Kansas artist of the year does not convince Mrs. Layton that she might have a touch of artistic flair. Nor does the fact that she was chosen one of four Governor's Artists for 1980-81.

The only value Mrs. Layton sees in her passionate drawings is the potential they have for making others aware of the therapeutic value in drawing.

"There are so many depressed and unhappy people," she said. "I can't promise drawing will help them like it did me, but they must at least try it."

Mrs. Layton draws animated pencil sketches of an old woman with age spots and droopy skin standing on a bathroom scale that reads 200 pounds.

The haunting self-portraits — all signed "Granma Layton" — at first startled her friends.

"They would look at a self-portrait and say, 'Why do you do that to yourself? You don't look like that.' But that was how I felt. I had to do what I had to do."

She has difficulty today pinpointing what depressed her.

"I know that I hated myself," she said emphatically. "But I don't know why that was exactly.

"I traced it back to a time in my childhood when I read some old books written by some old Englishmen. The books talked about women and how worthless they were, how inferior and even how disgusting. I didn't resent those books like I should have; I believed them wholly.

"I think I felt that because I was a woman, I was nothing and I couldn't get over it. I don't know why those books affected me so. My sister read them, but didn't look at them like I did."

A University of Kansas professor of art has called Mrs. Layton's work "technically brilliant." An art therapist at the Menninger Foundation labeled her drawings "eloquent."

But Mrs. Layton regards her pencil sketches as "just pictures that anybody can do." In fact, she refuses to sell them, saying they have little aesthetic value.

Writers To Be At ECU

ECU News Bureau

"Readings: Four Writers," a program featuring four poets or novelists who will read from their works, will be held at East Carolina University at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 26 in the Leo W. Jenkins Fine Arts Center Auditorium.

The four writers scheduled to appear on the program are Louis Simpson, author of poetry collections "The End of the Open Road," "Searching for the Ox," and "Caviar at the Funeral;" Jay Neugeboren, author of "Sam's Legacy," "Stolen Jew" and other novels; Janet Burroway, author of "Raw Silk" and other novels as well as poetry; and Lawrence Lieberman, author of "God's Measurements," a poetry collection and "Unassigned Frequencies," a book-length criticism of contemporary poetry.

Simpson is winner of a National Book Award and is the 1963 winner of the Pulitzer Prize in poetry. Lieberman has also had poems published in "The New Yorker," "Atlantic" and "Harper's" magazines.

The Thursday reading is free and the public is invited to attend.

Also, during their visit to Greenville, the four writers will conduct workshops from 10:30 a.m. to noon on Thursday and again on Friday, March 27, in Mendenhall Student Center.

The public is also invited to attend the workshops. Works to be read and discussed at the workshops however, are limited to writings by members of the ECU Poetry Forum, the Greenville Writers Club and ECU classes.

The readings and the workshops are sponsored by the ECU Department of English.

Book Selections

RALEIGH — Several selections have been chosen and announced for subscribers to the North Carolina Book Club.

"Sherman's March," a dramatic, full-scale account of General William T. Sherman's devastating march through Georgia and the Carolinas, is the club's quarterly historical selection. North Carolina native Burke Davis is the author of the book recently published by Random House.

A first novel by Burke Davis III, "Dwelling Places," published by Charles Scribner's Sons, is the book club's quarterly literary selection.

Two recent publications from the University of North Carolina Press — "Birds of the Carolinas" by Eloise F. Potter, James F. Parnell and Robert P. Tuelings, and "Wouldn't Take Nothin' for My Journey Now" by Jock Lauterer, are being offered as the N. C. Book Club's general selections.

All four books are offered to members of the N. C. Book Club at discounts of 25 percent less than the publishers' list prices, and all are publisher's editions, not special economy editions.

For details on the book club, interested people are to contact: Frances W. Kuntsling, N. C. Book Club, N. C. Literary and Historical Association, 109 E. Jones Street, Raleigh, N. C., 27611, or telephone 733-7305.

Morgan Art In Group Show

PHILADELPHIA, — Clarence Morgan, a faculty artist of the School of Art, East Carolina, is currently having his work featured in a group exhibition in the West Gallery of the Peale House Galleries of the School of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts in Philadelphia.

Morgan was chosen to have his work exhibited along with three other artists — Fred Danziger, Anthony Ciambella and Idaherma Williams.

The Academy's East Gallery has a solo exhibition of the work of artist Gilbert Lewis.

The two shows, which went on view on March 5, will remain up through March 27.

Seeking N. C. Admirals

WILMINGTON — Admirals of the North Carolina Navy are being requested to contact the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial.

The USS North Carolina Battleship Commission is planning two events this year in which it is hoped N. C. admirals will take part.

The first is the annual observance of Memorial Day on May 25, with Hugh Morton as speaker. The second event will be the anniversary of the ship coming up the Cape Fear River on October 2, 1961.

All N. C. admirals are urged to send a letter or postcard to: Captain Frank S. Conlon, USN (Ret.), Director, USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial, P. O. Box 417, Wilmington, N. C., 28402, prior to April 30, with name, street address, city and county.

Lectures On Glass

NORFOLK, VA. — Eight of the nation's outstanding authorities on glass will lecture at the Glass Forum at The Chrysler Museum in Norfolk April 2-4. Fee for the three day event is $80 and covers all lectures, tours and social events. Because of limited seating capacity, people registering for the entire forum will receive priority. After March 16, tickets for individual lectures will be offered for $6 on a space available basis. House tours are open only to those registering for the entire forum.

Speakers will include personnel from the Smithsonian Institution, Corning Museum of Glass, Jones Gallery of Glass and Ceramics, Greenfield Village and the Henry Ford Museum.

Those interested in a prospectus are to write: Glass Forum, Chrysler Museum, Olney Road at Mowbray Arch, Norfolk, Va., 23510.

Art Exhibit

"Works on Paper," a national juried art exhibition sponsored by East Carolina Univeristy, will be shown in the ECU Gray Gallery March 22-April 12.

Juror for the show is Edward Henning, chief curator of modern art at the Cleveland, Ohio, Museum of Art. Works submitted represent entries from numerous artists throughout the nation.

Gray Gallery is open to the public each weekday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. and from 1-4 p.m. on Sundays.

Bitter-Sweet End To Story Of The Torture Trail

By CYNTHIA BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

TICONDEROGA, N.Y. (AP) — The auction of 57 ponies and horses rescued on upstate New York's "Torture Trail" was a bittersweet moment for animal lovers. They saved the animals, but had to outbid horsemeat buyers to do it.

Interstate 87, the Adirondack Northway, is the major Northeast corridor for transporting horses to Canada for slaughter. Horsemeat is sold to European and Asian markets, where as a delicacy it sells for more than $7 a pound.

The Northway gained its nickname — "Torture Trail" — not because animals were being transported to slaughter, but because they were being treated cruelly along the way.

Dr. Robert Lopez, a veterinarian and member of the North Country Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, says he became aware of the problem in 1973, when State Police apprehended the driver of a tractor-trailer van stuffed with 35 full-grown horses. The truck was designed to hold 20.

When Lopez arrived on the scene, several horses "were down," victims of neglect, freezing temperatures, exhaustion and starvation.

He believes thousands of horses are subjected to abuse traveling the "Torture Trail" to Canada each year, although there is no official estimate.

In the most recent case, in December, near the town of Schroon Lake, state troopers confiscated a vehicle after a gas-station attendant told them he had seen "the frozen head of a dead horse sticking out of the back of the truck, covered with blood." The tractor-trailer held 85 horses and ponies — 45 over its capacity.

Trooper Ed Haroff recalls that when he finally managed to open the truck, the doorway was blocked by the carcass of a frozen, mangled horse. Inside, he found four more dead horses.

The surviving animals were moaning, Lopez said. Four were so badly trampled they had to be put to sleep at the scene. Others died later.

"Some of the horses could not stand up," he recalled. "Others stood and fell down immediately. Some crawled to the snow and began eating. One horse stood, an eye dangling."

The driver was fined $300 for cruelty to animals and sent on his way. There is no state law governing the transportation of livestock.

The inhumane shipments have stirred a wave of public outrage, but the Legislature has yet to pass a law to tighten livestock transportation laws.

State Sen. Hugh T. Farley, of the Adirondack village of Niskayuna, has been introducing legislation since 1977, but it has failed to pass. He says the "bugs" have now been worked out, and he is confident it will pass this session.

The problem with earlier versions was ambiguities that would have affected families transporting a pet horse or other livestock, he said.

This year's bill would ban two-tier trucks and mandate non-slip floors, adequate ventilation, sufficient protection against the elements, compartments and doorways high enough for horses to stand tall, plus ramps for loading and unloading.

A violator could be fined up to $100 per animal. A second violation would be punishable by up to a year in jail and a fine of $500 per horse.

State police say their biggest problem is that they must spot evidence of cruelty before they can stop a truck. The new law would allow them to make spot checks "before they see the horses, bleeding and mutilated," said state Sen. Joseph Bruno of Brunswick, a co-sponsor.

Neighboring Vermont's attorney general has pledged full cooperation so shippers won't be tempted to detour through the Green Mountain State, he said.

It fell to Bruce Crammond of Ticonderoga to shelter and feed the ponies and horses confiscated in December. Crammond, the nearest livestock trader with adequate room for the animals, says most of them suffered from a stress-related virus called "shipping fever."

Lopez said the surviving ponies seemed to be mainly family pets, from 3 to 20 years old. No longer wanted, they had been auctioned to horsemeat buyers.

An auction was set after state officials were unable to contact Perfecta International, the Jasper, Fla., company that had hired the driver. Repeated telephone calls to the company by The Associated Press went unanswered.

A pair of matched chestnuts went for more than $300. A pregnant pony sold for $110. A sturdy little 5-year-old brought $75 and was led off by a grinning little boy.

The American Horse Protection Association authorized Lopez to bid freely on two of the weakest survivors. It bought two ponies — one distinguished by its gaunt appearance, the other by its missing eye. Both will be allowed to graze out their lives at a farm in Virginia.

Linda Denton and her uncle bought a string of eight — "They'll never have to do another thing in their lives," said the Upper Jay, N.Y., woman.

After all, she added, "If a man can't be kind to an animal, he certainly can't be kind to his fellow man."

Missionaries Back To Haiti

Pastor and Mrs. James G. Fulfer of Lynchburg, Va. will be returning to Haiti this month to administer the S.A.W.S. program in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Mrs. Fulfer is the former Olive Mae Lyson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Lyson of Ballards Cross Roads.

S.A.W.S. stands for Seventh-Day Adventist Welfare Services. They will be in charge of a feeding program for 65,000 undernourished children.

Pastor and Mrs. Fulfer served earlier in the Carribean area for 11 years as Seventh-Day Adventist missionaries in Trinidad and Haiti.

JOY NIGHT

Joy night will be held tonight at Poplar Hill FWB Church at 7:30 p.m., with the Rev. J. Wilkes and Burnchapter. The pastor, the Rev. J.L. Tyson, invites the public to attend.

Keeping Tight

By TERRY KINNEY
Associated Press Writer

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — John Smith's layup with three seconds left carried St.Joseph's to a shocking 49-48 victory over No.1 DePaul and Ray Tolbert scored 26 points as Indiana crushed Maryland 99-64 in the second round of the NCAA Mideast Regional playoffs Saturday.

Ninth-ranked Indiana, which earned a trip to its own backyard at Bloomington, Ind., for the regional championships, will face the winner of Sunday's second-round contest between Kentucky and Alabama-Birmingham. St.Joseph's will meet the winner of Sunday's Boston College-Wake Forest game.

Smith, a senior foward, was all alone under the DePaul basket when he took a pass from reserve Lonnie McFarlan and dropped in a layup to boost the unranked Hawks past the Blue Demons.

"He (McFarlan) was wide open for the shot and I was just getting into position to rebound," Smith said. "No question about it, this is the biggest thrill of my life."

St. Joseph's Coach Jim Lynam said the victory over DePaul was the crowning achievement of his coaching career.

"This is the glamour of what this tournament is all about — for a team that doesn't have a national reputation to have a chance to go out and do this," Lynam said.

DePaul Coach Ray Meyer said he made a coaching error that might have cost the game.

"We slowed down on offense and that was a mistake," Meyer said. "We became too passive, to conservative, and we let them catch us. They had the poise, we panicked."

It was the second loss of the season for the Blue Demons, 27-2. St. Joseph's is now 24-7 record.

Smith finished with 12 points for the Hawks. Bryan Warrick also had 12 and Tony Costner added 11.

Clyde Bradshaw was the top scorer with 11 points. All-American Mark Aguirre was held to eight.

St. Joseph's knew it had to slow the tempo of the game to play with DePaul. But in the end, the Hawks forced Depaul into its style of play.

St. Joseph's traded baskets with DePaul most of the first half, content to let the lead go back and forth.

But when DePaul went ahead by four, the Hawks began their delay, holding the ball the final four minutes, scoring just before the half to trail by two points.

St. Joseph's tried to repeat that strategy after intermission but could not keep pace early in the half as the Blue Demons stretched their lead to seven points.

The blow-out victory by the Hoosiers over No. 18 Maryland was a far cry from the conservative game St. Joseph's-DePaul game, and left no doubt in Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell's mind that Indiana was the team to beat in the Mideast.

"If they play like they played today, nobody's going to beat them," Driesell said. "Nobody's ever beat us like this. Everything they did was right and everything we did was wrong. We just got whapped. We just got our fannies beat," Driesell said.

"Some days you might as well's today, they'd have blown them out."

The victory pleased Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, but he said his team got many lucky breaks and that their level of play was far from perfection.

"A lot of things really broke well for us," Knight said. "If we play Maryland another 10 times, they might beat us five."

Knight said Maryland's quick 8-0 advantage early in the game spurred the Hoosiers.

"It took us a while, but we finally got things going our way. Maryland threw some passes away and we hit some shots I really wasn't too enthused about t taking," he said.

Landon Turner had 20 points, Isia Thomas had 19 and Ted Kitchel 13 f Indiana, which controlled the run-an shoot tempo thoughout the game. Albe King led the Terrapins with 22 point Buck Williams added 16, and Erne Graham 14 for Maryland, 21-10.

Indiana shot 65 percent from the fiel in the first half en route to a 16-point lea at intermission and increased its margi throughout the second half, finishing th game with reserves.

ECU-Virginia Suspended

East Carolina's baseball game with Virginia was suspended because of darkness yesterday at the end of eight innings with the Cavaliers leading, 6-5.

It will be resumed today at 11 a.m., followed by another game between the two schools. East Carolina will then meet Connecticut, winner of a 5-4 ten-inning game against the Cavaliers earlier Saturday, in a 3 p.m. game this afternoon.

Borg: Not Hurt

STOCKHOLM (AP) — "I had an off day and played a guy in top form. That's the only reason for the loss," Bjorn Borg told a Swedish newspaper after being beaten in straight sets by Rolf Gehring in the Brussels World Championship of Tennis on Thursday.

Meanwhile, Borg denied rumors of a back injury.

Gehring, a West German ranked only 39th in the world, edged the world's No. 1 player 7-6, 7-5 in the second round. This caused speculation that Borg had suffered a spine injury, but he denied that afterwards.

Oregon State Is Shocked By Unheralded Kansas State, 50-48

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Senior Rolando Blackman hit a 16-foot jumper with two seconds remaining Saturday to give unranked Kansas State a shocking 50-48 victory over second-ranked Oregon State in the first game of an NCAA Western Regionals basketball doubleheader.

In the second game at Pauley Pavilion, senior forward Mark Smith made two free throws with three seconds remaining to give No.19 Illinois a 67-65 triumph over No.17 Wyoming.

Blackman, a 6-foot-6 guard, hit from the right baseline to give the Wildcats of the Big Eight Conference their only lead of the afternoon with his game-winning shot. Oregon State's Jeff Stoutt missed a 40-foot shot at the buzzer.

Kansas State (23-8) and Illinois (21-7) will square off in a semifinal game of the Western Regionals at Salt Lake City next Thursday night.

Illinois led nearly all the way in the nightcap. Wyoming, which finished the season 24-6, took its first advantage on a long jump shot by Mike Jackson with 7:44 to go. That made it 56-55 and neither team led by more than three points after that.

Forward Eddie Johnson led Illinois with 19 points. Smith finished with 14 points and a game-high eight rebounds, and Range added 12 points.

Bradley led all scorers with 25 points for Wyoming. Garnett and Jackson added 15 and 10 points respectively for the Cowboys.

In Kansas State's dramatic victory, Blackman, a member of the 1980 U.S Olympic team, said he wanted the last shot.

"I wanted the ball," said Blackman. "I got it with eight seconds left and I wanted to go one-on-one on the baseline.

"I knew it (the final shot) was going in. The rhythm felt good."

The 6-foot-6 Blackman's game-winner produced the Wildcats' only lead of Saturday's game and helped erase some bitter NCAA tournament memories of the past two years. Kansas State was beaten by eventual champion Louisville in overtime last March and suffered a close defeat at the hands of Marquette two years ago.

"We were tired of losing in the NCAA by one or two points," said Blackman, who had six of Kansas State's turnovers but led his team with 14 points, "Maybe the tide has turned. Now it's someone else's turn."

That someone else turned out to be the Beavers, who were undefeated and ranked No.1 during most of the college season, before losing the season finale to Arizona State March 7.

"We made too many crucial mistakes, especially in the last three or four minutes," Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller said of his senior-dominated team that won the Pacific-10 championship two straight years. "When you compound that many mistakes against a fine ballclub you're apt to pay the price.

"The last shot was a good one but it was the kind of shot that easily can be missed."

Pirates Open Spring Grid Drills Friday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Come Friday afternoon, Coach Ed Emory and his staff will welcome over 100 candidates out for spring football practice — Emory's second spring as the East Carolina head football coach.

However, Emory might not be blamed if he misses some familiar faces. Gone are two of the finest backs ever to play at East Carolina, fleet Anthony Collins, and bull-like Theodore Sutton. Emory will have the job of replacing them, along with several other familiar faces — like all-American Wayne Inman in the offensive line; split end Vern Davenport; defensive linebackers Chuck Jackson and Jeffrey Warren; along with backs James Freer and Willie Holley and linemen Rocky Butler, Nate Wigfall and Cliff Williams.

Also missing are both of the Pirates kicking specialists, punter Rodney Allen and placekicker Bill Lamm.

The team will actually get its first test on Wednesday, with speed tests. Actual practice will get underway on Friday, and continue on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays until April 25, when the spring game is scheduled. Emory is leaning to a night game for that, too.

Among the 136 expected are several new faces. Four incoming junior college recruits have joined the team, including Mike Grant, a 6-1, 210-pound linebacker; Kenny Phillips, a 6-0, 190-pound defensive back (formerly of D.H. Conley High School); Jody Schulz, a 6-3, 225-pound defensive end; and Amos Twitty, a 6-1, 210-pound linebacker. All come from Chowan Junior College.

There will be several other new faces, too. They include Terry Tierney, a 6-6, 250-pound transfer from Lees-McRae, a defensive lineman; Martin Daniels, a 6-3, 240-pound defensive lineman, also a transfer from Lees-McRae; Jeff Speight, a 6-1, 235-pound offensive lineman, from Chowan; and Alvin Sparks, a 6-3, 225-pound defensive end from Santa Ana, Calif., Junior College, formerly of 71st High School in Fayetteville.

"We have a number of priorities on a team level," Emory said. "We want to make out young players as fundamentally sound as possible. We're going to keep them out of pileups and scrimmages as much as possible to avoid injuries. We will concentrate more on individual and group work, using scrimmages to evaluate what has been learned.

"Second, we want to develop self-discipline in carrying out assignments and doing the things we ask of them. We don't want players doing what they think is best, and finding out that their assignment area was where the offense went while he wasn't there."

Emory said the third priority is to develop some leadership on both sides of the ball. "We've got to have this," he emphasised.

"We also want to build confidence, a positiveness. Our players must believe in each other. We also have to build a sound kicking game with the loss of Allen and Lamm."

The Pirates have a young, yet experienced offensive line returning. "We have to take that line and mold it into a seasoned one that can win. We have to get those who were injured or redshirted into the proper positions to be productive. I feel that we have depth and competition at all spots in the offensive line."

The quarterback situation is still up in the air, and may continue so during the spring. Carlton Nelson, who underwent surgery for a neck injury sustained last year, will miss the drills, and is expected to rejoin the team in the fall. Greg Stewart, who handled the qb duties late in the season comes into camp as the number one signal-caller.

A number of others will get looks, including Chuck Bishop, who played in the defensive backfield last year; Larry Brobst, who had the credentials to be a good quarterback; Byron Horton, a freshman; Jeff Neale, moved from defense; and Chuck Barnette.

"We have to develop a first and second quarterback who can win," Emory said.

At split end, Larry O'Roark returns from a fine back-up year and could move into Davenport's shoes.

The backfield also is a question mark. Mike Hawkins' status for the fall is up in the air, pending clarification of his fifth year eligibility. But there are a number of candidates waiting in the wings, like Earnest Byner, Marvin Cobb, Chip Simmons, Harold Blue and Roy Wiley.

Joining Nelson on the sidelines due to injuries will be Warren Brookins, a running back; Adam Mattocks, a safety; and Mike Jordan, an offensive guard.

Several others expected to return, but not in school this spring, include Brian McDaniel, a defensive end; Randy Green, a fullback; Reggie Harden, a split end; and Doug Smith, a defensive tackle.

On defense, "losing Warren was the big thing," Emory said. "Our line has gotten stronger thanks to the off-season work, but we lost both defensive ends and both linebackers, along with at least one tackle. And we also lost two defensive backs."

Emory said the Pirates will attempt to reconstruct the linebacking crew from veterans and transfers. The secondary is okay in certain areas, but two corner backs are needed. "We have some more speed this year, but I'm still concerned about that area," Emory said.

Emory looks to Schulz, Sparks, Daniels and Tierney to add a lot to the defense. He noted that Terry Long could end up being switched to the offensive line, also.

"I really think that our defense will be stronger this year," Emory said.

"Our philosophy is going to be to put the strongest 11 we have on offense and defense and get them on the field, with the second 22 behind them. I think we can do that and be successful. And I really don't think that freshman may play a big role in our game this year. We're really looking for them to be back-ups most of the way."

Football Clinic Set

The activities get underway at 6 p.m. Friday, March 27, at Mendenall Student Center, with the East Carolina Offensive Clinic. That will feature Wright Anderson on running backs; Jim Bengala on quarterbacks; Terry Lewis on the offensive line; Gary Weller on receivers; and Jimmy Heggins on tight ends.

That will be followed later in the evening by group clinics on defensive units. Speakers will be Norm Parker, linebackers; Jim Holland, ends; Bob Sanders, line; Rickey Bustle, backs, and Rod Broadway, nose guards.

On Saturday, speakers include Pirate head coach Ed Emory; University of Georgia offensive coordinator George Haffer; Bill Lewis, Georgia secondary coach; Tom Moore, Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback and receiver coach; Richard Dupree of the ECU faculty on "Marketing High School Football;" and observation of the ECU practice session for that day.

Sunday's program, which winds up at noon, includes Jeff Johnson, on ECU weight training, along with Haffner and Lewis.

Pre-registration is available at $15 per coach. Registration at the door will be $17.50 per person.

Further information is available from Norm Parker, Scales Fieldhouse, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834, or by calling (919) 757-6330, 6117, or 6447.

Nyambui Leads Miners To Another Title

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Suleiman Nyambui won the mile for the third consecutive year and became the greatest individual winner in the 17-year history of the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships, while leading Texas-El Paso to the team title Saturday.

The Miners, capturing the team championship for the second straight year and the sixth time in eight seasons, amassed a record tieing 76 points in the two-day, 18-event extravaganza at Joe Louis Arena. Texas-El Paso also scored 76 points last year.

The graceful, smooth-gliding Nyambui, a 27-year-old junior from Tanzania, won the mile in 4:01.85 seconds, about one and a quarter hours after he had been thwarted in an attempt to capture the two mile for the third year in a row, finishing second to Brigham Young's Doug Padilla in a stirring duel.

Going into this years meet, Nyambui had been tied for the record four victories with former Kansas distance star Jim Ryan, winner of the mile from 1967-69 and the two mile in 1968.

Now, Nyambui, the 1980 Olympic silver medalist in the 5,000 meters and the indoor record holder at that distance, has won five NCAA indoor titles and he has one year of eligibility remaining. He also has won three NCAA outdoor championships, the 10,000 in 1979 and the 5,000 and 10,000 in 1980.

While Nyambui was making history, so was sophomore Carl Lewis of the University of Houston. The versatile Lewis, a 19-year-old from Willingboro, N.J., added the 60-yard dash title to the long jump crown he had won Friday night, making him the first athlete in NCAA indoor history to win a track event and field event.

The last athlete to take the sprint and the long jump in a NCAA meet was the legendary Jesse Owens, in the 1936 outdoor championships.

In the 60, the fast stepping Lewis rallied in the closing strides to edge Mel Lattany of Georgia in 6.16 seconds.

While Lewis was Houston' only point scorer in the meet, heavily-favored Texas El-Paso rolled up 44 points on the final day to surpass opening day leader Southern Methodist University.

SMU, which collected 49 points Friday, on the strength of victories by triple jumper Keith Connor, shot putter Michael Carter, weight thrower Michael Weir and half miler Sammy Koskei, was limited to two points Saturday, on Dennis Brantley's fifth place finish in the 60-yard high hurdles.

In addition to Nyambui's 18 points Saturday, Texas-El Paso got ten for Peter Lemashon's victory in the 1,000-yard run in 2:12.29, eight from Milt Ottey's second in the high jump and eight from its two-mile relay team which finished second.

Tennessee finshed third in the team scoring with 33 points and Brigham Young was fourth with 26, 18 by Padilla.

In the two-mile, Padilla, a senior from San Lendio, Calif., out-dueled Nyambui in 8:26.52.

The gutty BYU runner and Nyambui ran stride for stride for about the final four and a half laps. Padilla, in front, kept warding off repeated challenges from his Texas-El Paso rival.

Afterward, Nyambui, who was clocked in 8:26.58, contended that he would have won the race had not Padilla kept hitting him with his elbow.

"If he hadn't pushed me he wouldn't have beat me," said Nyambui. "I could never get away with that. The officials wouldn't let me. With others, they seem to look the other way. I would never do it (push another runner) anyway. I do not like that kind of race."

Texas-El Paso Coach Ted Banks said, however, that there was nothing wrong with what Padilla did.

"That's part of indoor running," said Banks. "Nyambui felt bad. It hurt his ego to lose, but Padilla did a great job. There was nothing illegal."

Padilla said, "If he (Nyambui) had ever gotten past me I don't think I could have gotten back (in front). I had to hold him off."

Padilla also said that this was only the second time he had beaten Nyambui in about 30 races. The other time was in the recent Western Athletic Conference 1,500-meter championship.

Nyambui got even with Padilla in the NCAA mile. The fleet-footed Miners' runner burst into the lead with about one half lap remaining then held off Padilla's strong finishing kick. Padilla was timed in 4:01.96.

After the mile, Nyambui said he bore no animosity toward Padilla.

"I like Padilla," said Nyambui. "He's a good runner, but I don't like the way he runs with his elbows."

One other meet record fell, as Leo Williams of Navy leaped 7-5¼, in the high jump, breaking Franklin Jacobs' NCAA mark of 7-5 set in 1978.

Other individual winners included: Terron Wright of Memphis State in the high hurdles in 7.14; Eugene Sanders of Mississippi Valley in the 600 in 1:09.84, and Ed Langford of Purdue in the pole vault at 17-9½.

The relay winners were Villanova in the distance medley in 9:47.20, Seton Hall in the mile in 3:15.91 and Rutgers in the two mile in 7:30.95.

Kinston Nips Ayden-Grifton

KINSTON — Kinston High School took its second straight win over Ayden-Grifton's Chargers by a 4-3 score Saturday. Both games ended with the same score.

Kinston pushed into the lead in the first inning. Gary Ewell singled and scored when Jeff Jenkins tripled. Parrish Sasser singled in Jenkins, then scored the third run when Donnie Burkette doubled.

Ayden-Grifton cut the lead to 3-2 with a pair in the top of the fourth. Bernard Ricciarelli singled and moved up on an out. Terry Locust singled him to third and both of them came around on Brant Allen's double.

But Kinston came back and got what proved to be the difference in the bottom of the inning. Derrick Johnson reached on an error and advanced on Vernon Byrd's hit. Mickey Wade then singled Johnson over for a 4-2 lead.

Locust led the A-G hitting with two, while no one for Kinston had more than one.

Greene Central Rips Bruins

STANTONSBURG — Greene Central High School romped to a 13-6 baseball victory over Wilson Beddingfield yesterday.

It took a five-run fifth inning, however, to put it away for the Rams.

Greene Central took the initial lead in the first, scoring a run. Al Speight doubled and took third when David Shirley reached on an error. The two pulled a double steal, with Speight scoring.

Beddingfield came right back to score two in the bottom of the first to take a 2-1 lead. After two were out, Donald Williams doubled and both Charles Davis and Joel Patterson walked. Al Hardison then singled in Williams and Davis.

Greene Central scored two in the top of the second, but Beddingfield countered with one, for a 3-3 tie. Greene Central then pushed over one in the top of the third, only to see the Bruins score twice in the bottom of the frame for a 5-4 lead.

But in the fifth, Greene Central pushed over five for a 9-5 lead. Ron Tyndall walked and Jesse Freeman, attempting to sacrifice, reached on an error. Butch Brown walked, loading them up. Chris Ginn also walked, scoring Tyndall. Dwight Daniels singled in Freeman and Brown and the runners were sacrificed up. Speight singled in Ginn, and a double steal scored Daniels with the final run.

The Rams added one in the sixth and three more in the seventh to finish off the Bruins, who got their only other run in the sixth.

Speight led the Ram hitting with three, while Brown had two. Both had doubles. Williams and Hardison each had three hits for Beddingfield, while John Wilson had a pair.

Teel First Woman In Race

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Mike Porter of Princeton, W.Va., who won the late model sportsman half of last year's Dogwood 500 Classic, captured a 25-lap qualifying race at Martinsville Speedway Saturday to earn the 21st starting position for Sunday's renewal of the event.

Bud Elliott of Roanoke Rapids, N.C., and Rick Mast of Rockbridge Baths, Va., took the other two sportsman qualifying races and will start 22nd and 23rd, respectively, in the 40-car field for the 250-lap, 131.25-mile race. All three drove Pontiacs.

Diane Teel of Seaford, Va., a 33-year-old mother of two who drives a school bus on weekdays, was fourth in the qualifying race won by Porter and will start 30th in the sportsman race, becoming the first woman to compete in the track's 34-year history.

Mrs. Teel will drive a Pontiac owned by her husband, Donald Teel.

The 40-car field for the other half of Sunday's twin bill — the 250-lap modified race — also was completed Saturday in qualifying races won by Roger Treichler of Sanborn, N.Y., Don Howe of Water Mill, N.Y., and Greg Sacks of Mattituck, N.Y.

Geoff Bodine of Pleasant Garden, N.C., who put on a record-breaking performance in time trials, will start in the pole position in both races.

Bodine qualified for the sportsman race with a record speed of 92.113 mph in a Pontiac and, in the modified event, hit the fastest speed ever recorded here — 96.693 mph on the .525-mile track.

The last driver to win the pole in both events was Ray Hendrick of Richmond, Va., in 1970. Hendrick went on to capture both races.

If Bodine can make a sweep of the two races, as achieved by Hendrick and by Paul Radford of Ferrum, Va., in 1977, and also lead the most laps in each race, he would take home $20,300.

Pirate Golfers Tied For Ninth

DURHAM — East Carolina stood ninth in the 22 team Iron Duke Classic field following the second day of the three-day golf tournament.

N.C. State held the lead after two rounds, carding a team score of 749. Clemson was second with 751, followed by Duke with 760 and South Carolina with 767. The Pirates had to share ninth place with Kentucky, both coming in with 783 scores.

Larry Pendley led the individual scorers, as the Clemson golfer carded a 143. Duke's Charles Bolling, who was the East Carolina Invitational champion earlier this week, stood second with a 145, while State's Thad Daber had a 146.

East Carolina's leaders were Steve Jones and Dan Gaffner with 154. Jones had an 81 Saturday to go with his first round 73, while Gaffner had a 76. Mike Moye had an 81 to go to 159, while Carl Beaman carded an 81 to stand at 156. Mike Helms with an 85, went to 164, while Jerry Lee, with an 83, also stood at 164.

East Carolina's Jones was fifth and the Pirates were sixth as a team after the first day of the Iron Duke Classic Friday afternoon.

Jones shot an opening-day 73, three strokes behind leader Penley. Bolling of Duke and Daber were tied for second with 71s and Hall Hindsley of Duke was fourth with a 72.

N.C. State led after the first day with a 370 followed by Clemson at 373, Duke and Marshall at 376, South Carolina was at 381, just ahead of ECU at 383.

ECU's Beaman was 17th after the first day with a 75. Other Pirate scores were: Moye (78), Gafner (78), Mike Helms (79) and Jerry Lee (81). The top five scores count toward the team total.

"No one played really well in the entire tournament considering the conditions," ECU coach Bob Helmick said. "We played relatively good for our team and if we can play two more days like that we have a chance of finishing high."

Arkansas Nips Cardinals; LSU Romps

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It took a 49-foot miracle midcourt missile by Arkansas senior guard U.S. Reed to knock defending champion Louisville out of the NCAA basketball tournament Saturday, setting up a match with Louisiana State next week in the finals of the Midwest Regional.

Reed launched his killer satellite from beyond the midcourt line, and it swished the net without drawing iron to send the Razorback fans into delirium as the No. 12 rated Cardinals fell 74-73.

LSU, the nation's No. 4 team, routed Lamar University 100-78 in the opener behind Durand Macklin's 31 points.

"That's what you call throwing up a prayer and having it answered," Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton said. "The defending champions definitely don't die easy. Reed has made that shot before in practice but you could throw it up 20 times and not have it go in."

Sutton joked, "Of course, that's the way we drew it up on the sidelines."

Louisville Coach Denny Crum shared the shock his players felt when Reed's shot fell through.

"Some years it's just not supposed to be. We lost a game this same way in the first game of the year at Oklahoma State. They hit a 45-footer at the buzzer," Crum said.

"We played with a lot of character at the end ...we were just unlucky. Last year maybe we had luck on our side."

Reed rushed to the press table after his cross-country bomb and began shaking hands with writers.

"I was really shocked when I saw Louisville at half court because I expected them to be staying back. It was a push shot and it just went in. ... I'll give the praise to God," Reed said.

"I knew I had a good release on it, and I knew it had a good chance," he added.

Reed ran off the court instead of joining in the Razorback celebration, saying "I hit one like that last year and almost got hurt. I'm really happy. I feel like a new father."

After the game was over, someone put a tape measure to the shot. It was 49 feet away, and Reed came down 44 feet 5 inches from the goal.

Arkansas was all but dead after junior forward Derek Smith connected on an eight-foot follow shot with five seconds to play. The Razorbacks had trouble inbounding the ball, and Reed was hounded by two Louisville players as he neared the midcourt line.

In desperation, he launched a line drive missile that whisked through the basket without touching the rim.

The basket set off a wild celebration by the Arkansas players, some of whom tackled each other near the spot where Reed made his incredible shot.

Reed, who finished with 19 points, kept Arkansas in the game with his free throw shooting down the stretch, as did center Scott Hastings, who was 6-for-6 from the charity line.

The Southwest Conference champion Razorbacks, now 24-7, were led in scoring by sophomore guard Darrell Walker, who tied a career high by scoring 23 points, 19 of them in the first half.

No. 12-rated Louisville, the Metro Conference champions, saw their winning streak snapped at 15 as the Cardinals' season took a sudden end at 21-9.

Pancho Wright hit two free throws and a bucket with 20 seconds to play to set up the apparent game-winning basket by Smith. But that was before Reed made his miracle shot.

Rodney McCray and Scooter McCray each scored 11 points to lead the Cardinals.

Louisiana State was led by senior forward Durand Macklin's 31 points and 16 rebounds. The Tigers shot 60 percent from the field and out-rebounded the Cardinals 43-24 in a surprising rout.

LSU Coach Dale Brown said, "It was near perfection ... it was close to a flawless performance. We controlled the boards and got the fastbreak off the rebounds.

"Now we owe some favors. We lost to Arkansas earlier this year and Louisville knocked us out of the playoffs last year. We want 50,000 Cajuns shouting in the Super Dome in New Orleans next week."

Lamar Coach Pat Foster said "LSU is the best we've seen this year. They just have to be one of top one or two teams in the country.

"It was obvious we weren't at the emotional level you need to play against a team like LSU. They have a great team. They controlled us at both ends of the court," he said.

Macklin said, "We were ready emotionally for Lamar. When they beat Missouri it got us emotionally high. In the NCAA tournament intensity is automatic."

Macklin, whose previous high was 29 against Mississippi State, dominated the Cardinals as LSU crushed Lamar's zone with bruising board work.

The Tigers, now 29-3 for the year, got 26 points from sophomore Howard Carter and 18 points from freshman Leonard Mitchell in the runaway over the Cardinals, who finished 25-5 for the season.

Lamar, which upset Missouri 71-67 Thursday night, trailed 55-43 at halftime and saw the Tigers rip off nine straight points to start the second half.

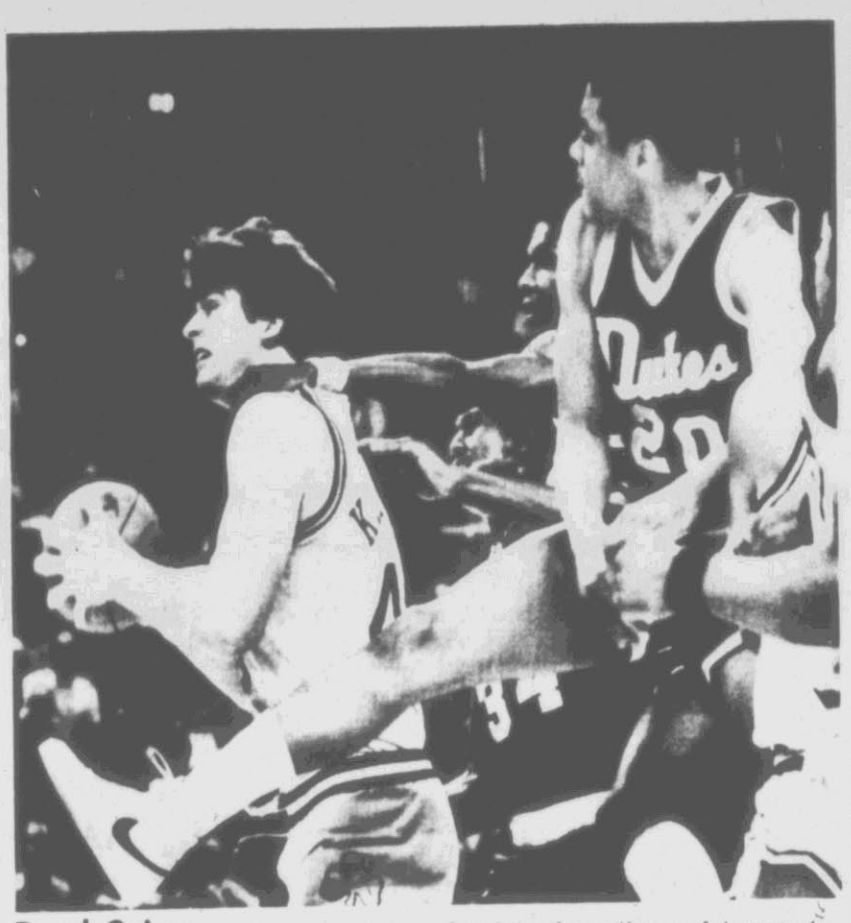

The Southland Conference champion Cardinals were led by senior guard Mike Olliver, who scored 29 points — most of them on long-range jump shots.

Macklin, whose career-high is 40 points in a game, scored three three-point plays against the Cardinals as he dominated Lamar's frontline which had out-rebounded Missouri.

DON'T ASK

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Basketball coach Ted Owens of Kansas admits there is a time for silence when going about the performance of his duties.

When Jayhawk center Victor Mitchell reported to fall practice heavier than his assigned weight of 240 pounds, Owens did not take him to task.

"I don't know what he weighs," Owens said. "And besides he's much too big to ask."

Irish Win; BYU Blasts Bruins

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Tracy Jackson and John Paxson each hit three-point plays in the final 5½ minutes to boost seventh-ranked Notre Dame over James Madison 54-45 in the second round of the NCAA East Regional basketball playoffs Saturday.

The victory earned Notre Dame the right to face 16th-ranked Brigham Young next Thursday at Atlanta in the East regional semifinals. Brigham Young trounced 10th-ranked UCLA 78-55 in the earlier second round game.

Jackson also grabbed 12 rebounds from his guard position and Coach Digger Phelps said that may have developed from something he noticed in films of the Dukes.

"I noticed in the films that when James Madison took its outside sides, the rebounds went off," Phelps said. "We changed the positions of our guards, and that's probably why Jackson had so many rebounds."

Jackson said James Madison was a patient team. "But we were able to get into our tempo, our type of game."

Notre Dame played a ball-control game and James Madison Coach Lou Campanelli said he would have preferred to play a running game.

"But when you can't clear the ball against such big bodies, it's hard to get out and run the fast break," Campanelli said. "And if a couple of shots would have fallen in the second half that we normally hit," Campanelli said, "It could have been different. But when you lose to the number seven team in the country by nine points, it shows where you're coming from."

The Dukes, 21-9, had clawed their way to within 40-37 on a shot jump shot by Steve Blackmon with 7:24 remaining. The Irish, however, scored the next five points, capped by Paxson's layup and foul shot, to lead 45-37 with 5:30 to play.

Jackson's three-point play gave the Irish a 50-41 lead with 2:53 left and Notre Dame held on for the victory and stayed in the running for its first national title.

Jackson scored 21 points and Kelly Tripucka added 13. Blackmon and Linton Townes each had 12 for the Dukes, winners of the Eastern College Athletic Conference's Southern Division and 61-55 victors over Georgetown in the tournament's first round.

Notre Dame looked like it would put away James Madison early in the second half, outscoring the Dukes 8-3 in the first 4:30 to lead 31-23. However, the Dukes clawed their way back, and cut the margin to three, 36-33, on two free throws by Blackmon with 9:44 left. The teams traded baskets until Notre Dame began its five-point run with 6:52 left started a basket by Bill Varner, his only two points of the game.

Danny Ainge scored 37 points for Brigham Young in the opener and he said afterwards that all signs of earlier back problems had disappeared.

"I woke up this morning and my back hurt a little bit," said Ainge, who suffered muscle spasms in his back Wednesday night and had been a doubtful starter in the Cougars' opening-round 60-51 victory over Princeton. "I didn't feel it at all during the game."

Ainge said he was glad for the opportunity to play Princeton.

"I liked the idea of having that first game because it let me get rid of my nerves,' Ainge said.

Brigham Young Coach Frank Arnold called UCLA "one of the best teams in the country. We are not much better than they are."

UCLA Coach Larry Brown, expected to go the New Jersey Nets of the National Basketball Association next season, said, "This is not a typical UCLA game, and Brigham Young had a lot to do with it. BYU had great poise and sacrifice, and every kid fulfilled a role."

Ainge scored the last eight points of the first half and his 17-foot jump shot eight seconds before the buzzer gave BYU a 31-22 halftime lead. The Cougars scored seven straight points to open the second half and take a 38-22 lead with 17:58 to play.

The Cougars stretched that lead to as many as 24 points on two foul shots and a basket by Greg Kite late in the contest.

UCLA, a three-point favorite, was slowed considerably by an injury to guard Rod Foster. Foster, who had not played in UCLA's previous two games, played sparingly, and the advantage of speed and height went over to Brigham Young.

The Bruins managed to get within 12 points, 58-46, on a short jumper byy Mike Sanders with 5:54 to play.

The Cougars, however, outscored UCLA 12-2 in the next three minutes and led 70-48 on a spectacular double-pumping underhanded layup by Ainge with 2:36 left in the game.

Fred Roberts added 17 points for Brigham Young and Kite had 12. Sanders had 14 for UCLA, and Darren Daye added 12.

The victory raised Brigham Young's record to 24-6, while UCLA dropped to 20-7.

UCLA, which advanced to the final game against eventual champion Louisville in the 1980 tournament, had not lost its first tournament game since 1963 when Arizona State beat the Bruins 93-79.

Falcons Rally From 12 Down To Nip Redskins

Scenes From The Eastern Regional

WILSON — Roanoke coach Clarence Atkinson will remember this 3-A Eastern Regional. For a long time. And perhaps never again will Friday the 13th be just another day for either.

Atkinson will remember this: his Redskins taking the lead early, managing a four-point bulge at intermission and then leading by 12 going into the final eight minutes.

He will also remember this: how with Maurice Chance sitting on the bench having fouled out early in the final period the Redskins let that 12-point lead dissolve before the onslaught of Durham Jordan.

Finally, he will remember this: Durham Jordan 56, Roanoke 54.

The win moved the Falcons into last night's Eastern Regional final against Burlington Cummings, a 51-45 winner over West Carteret earlier Friday night. Roanoke ends the season at 24-5.

"When Maurice fouled out we fell apart," Atkinson said. "We had people in there at the end who aren't used to being in there then. I saw it going away and we just couldn't stop it."

Perhaps the only person who could have stopped it was Chance. But he was forced to the bench with 5:41 left after picking up his fifth foul. Not only that, but while laying sprawled on the floor after the foul he was whistled with a technical for protesting the call.

"I asked Maurice what he said and he said, 'Coach, I didn't say anything,'" Atkinson said. "He was just showing emotion."

Regardless, it was the turning point in the game. Before the calls, the Redskins had led, 49-39. After them, the lead was 49-43.

Scott Pearce hit one of the two free throws, Shaffer added the technical free throw and then Cliff Morris muscled inside for a field goal to cut what had once been a 12-point deficit to six with 5:30 left.

Two free throws by Ricky Highsmith, who finished with a team-high 17 points, and one of two by reserve Kenneth Hyman countered a bucket by Morris to give the Redskins a 52-45 lead with 4:19 left. The Redskins scored just two points the rest of the game.

The Falcons, meanwhile, reeled off 10 straight points to take a 55-52 lead. Shaffer, who scored 24 points, nine in the last four minutes, hit a jumper from the baseline and Pearce connected on both ends of a one-and-one to cut the lead to 52-49.

Then, after missed scoring opportunites by both clubs, Shaffer gave the Falcons the lead for good.

Two free throws cut the lead to 52-51 and then the 6-6½ senior took a pass from Pearce for a layup to give the Falcons a 53-52 lead with 1:25 left. It was Durham's first lead since its opening bucket gave the Falcons a 2-0 lead and for a brief moment it appeared it wouldn't last long.

On their ensuing trip downcourt, Roanoke appeared to have retaken the lead when Highsmith tapped in a miss by Jeremiah Outerbridge. But the official, who at the time was at midcourt, called offensive goaltending.

Two free throws by Shaffer and a layup by Highsmith followed and the Falcons led, 55-54, with eight seconds left. Four seconds later Roanoke had the ball back after Shaffer was called for palming the ball.

But the Redskins called for a timeout — a timeout they didn't have. And instead of having the ball with four seconds left and a chance to win, Shaffer walked to the line and hit the free throw to seal the victory.

"I'm certain we had a timeout," Atkinson said. "We were going to get the ball to our little point guard (Michael Wilson) and have him put it up fast and have Ricky (Highsmith) underneath to tap it in."

The shot never came, much to the relief of Durham Jordan coach Johnny Avery.

"I've never been through a game like this," Avery said. "Words can't express how I feel. It was a great comeback by our kids against a great Roanoke team. I was wondering at times if we could come back.

"When were down by 12 with six minutes to go I didn't know if we could do it. But the team kept its composure."

Going into the game, Atkinson had been concerned about the difference in experience of the two sides. The Falcons finished third in the state last year with a 27-2 record and returned its frontline intact. The Redskins, 14-14 a year ago, returned just one player — Chance.

For the first three quarters, however, it was Roanoke that looked like the playoff-experienced club. While the Falcons were throwing up shots from all over the court, the Redskins for the most part worked patiently in their semi-spread offense.

With Highsmith at high post or on the wing to pull Shaffer from underneath the basket, the Redskins worked the inside. Ronnie Broadie's follow shot with 3:30 left gave Roanoke a 14-9 lead.

The Falcons countered with three buckets by Shaffer and a jumper by Pearce to take a 15-14 lead. Roanoke sandwiched a jumper by Chance and a follow shot by Wallace around two free throws by Morris to take an 18-17 lead at the end of the period.

Two free throws and a jumper by reserve guard Michael Wilson and two free throws by Chance gave the Redskins a 28-23 lead with 4:18. Moments later, however, Chance was called for charging.

It was his third foul and Atkinson was forced to take him out. At the same time, the coach also removed Highsmith, Neal and Outerbridge, all of whom except Outerbridge had two fouls.

Playing with only one starter (Spruill), the Redskins saw their lead cut to 32-31 when Andre Webb stole a pass in backcourt and converted it into a layup. But the Falcons could not take the lead. Two free throws by Wilson and one by William Brown gave Roanoke a 35-31 cushion at the half.

"We had tried to be patient,"

Bruins, Rocky Mt. In Regional Finals

By The Associated Press

The top boys basketball teams in the state collided Friday night in the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's regional semifinals. Following are the results.

4A Boys

In the western 4A regionals played at Salisbury, Chapel Hill crept past Grimsley 48-46 behind a 19-point performance by Sandy Anderson, while Winston-Salem Reynolds eclipsed Hickory 65-51 on the strength of an 18-point night by Tony Gregg.

At Wilson, where the eastern regionals were played, Beddingfield downed Hoke County 60-52 as Antonio McCray garnered 16 points for Beddingfield. Meanwhile, George McClain with a 20-point night led Rocky Mount to a 59-57 victory over Raleigh Broughton.

3A Boys

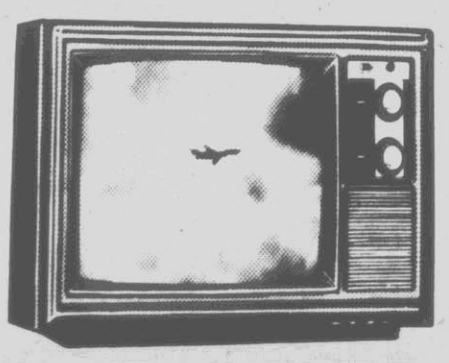

At Hickory and the western 3A regionals, Rutherfordton-Spindale's Chris Michaels hit for 16 points in a 78-56 punishing of Madison-Mayodan. Gary Leonard claimed 15 points in the nightcap as North Davidson downed Pisgah 65-61.

In the eastern region, Durham Jordan overtook

Pirate Nine Rally Past Connecticut, 8-7

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Sparked by two hits, including a two-run double, by Charlie Smith, East Carolina rallied from five runs down in the final two innings to defeat the University of Connecticut Friday, 8-7.

It was the fourth straight victory for the Pirates, while Connecticut was losing its opener. Connecticut later lost, 9-2, to Virginia in a second game at Harrington Field.

Helped along by two three-run homers, the Huskies built up a 7-2 lead in the top of the eighth inning. But East Carolina rallied for three in the bottom of the eighth, then pushed over three more in the ninth to gain the victory.

"Connecticut really deserved better," East Carolina coach Hal Baird said. "They played hard and well, but I'm proud of our kids and the way they came back.

"Charlie (Smith) really came through with two fine hits. He's earned the right to be our designated hitter."

Smith came on in the DH spot in the final two innings after regular designated hitter Mark Wakai injured a shoulder sliding back into first on a pickoff play attempt. Smith delivered a two-run single in the eighth, then came back with a single in the ninth to drive in the tieing run. Fran Fitzgerald followed with the game-winning hit.

Bobby Patterson opened the game for the Pirates, but was not very effective, giving up four runs on six hits in just over five innings of work. Kirk Parsons came on in relief and got the win. He allowed just three hits, and all three of the runs off him were unearned.

"Kirk pitched well in relief," Baird noted. "I really don't know what's causing Bobby his problems. He has been pitching real well in practice. I just hope he can bounce back."

Baird was also pleased with the hitting, as the Pirates picked up 12—10 of them in the last four innings.

East Carolina came right back with one in the bottom of the inning to tie it up. Kelly Robinette singled to left and was sacrificed up. With two away, Todd Evans, who went four-for-five, doubled to right center, scoring Robinette.

The Huskies moved back out with three runs in the fifth. Tom Capalbo singled and was sacrificed up. He scored on Tally Noble's single. With two away, Johnson slapped a homer over the fence in left center to make it 4-1.

The Pirates came back with a run in the seventh. Mike Sage singled and Wakai got a hit. With two away, Robinette reached on an error, allowing Sage to score.

The Huskies seemed to put it out of reach with three more runs in the top of the eighth. With two away, Douglas Elliott's liner to third hit the bag and bounced back toward the mound. But the time the ball was recovered, he was safely to first. Kevin Trahan then reached on an error, and Capalbo followed with a three-run homer. That left the Huskies up, 7-2.

But the Pirates didn't give up. John Hallow opened the bottom of the eighth with a walk and Evans singled. With one down, Sage singled to right, scoring Hallow. Smith then followed with a two-run double to right center, scoring both Evans and Sage. That cut the gap to 7-5.

In the bottom of the ninth, the Pirates got the winning runs. Mike Sorrell led off with a walk and Hallow beat out a high-hopper to short. Evans followed with a single to right, loading the bases. Todd Hendley hit a sacrifice fly to score Sorrell, with Hallow moving to third on the play. He scored when Smith followed with a two-out single.

"The kids hit some balls early for outs, but they started falling in there late in the game," Baird said. "And we had a lot of good defensive plays."

The Pirates were to face Virginia in a single game on Saturday, then are scheduled to face Virginia in an 11 a.m. game today, followed by a 3 p.m. contest with Virginia.

Bath Whips Bear Grass

BEAR GRASS — Bath pitcher's Roger and Carl Woolard combined for nine strikeouts and a two-hitter as the Pirates whipped Bear Grass, 6-2, Friday afternoon in a Tobacco Belt Conference baseball game.

Roger Woolard struck out six and walked five in five innings before being relieved by Carl in the sixth. Carl struck out three and walked four as the two pitchers held the Bears to one extra base hit — a double by Clay Gardner.

Bath jumped out to a 3-0 lead after the first half inning and led 6-0 before the Bears finally scored in the bottom of the sixth.

Mark Taylor walked, Walter Bullock singled and Bob Peele walked to load the bases. William Roberson and Gardner then worked Carl Woolard for walks to score Taylor and Bullock.

It was too little, too late for the Bears, who lost their first game in three outings.

Roberson started for the Bears and struck out eight and walked five. He was relieved in the fifth by Gardner, who struck out four and walked two.

Rose Buries Rams, 13-0

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's Rampants, banging out ten hits and taking advantage of eight walks and six errors, rolled to a 13-0 victory over Greene Central Friday. It was the third straight win of the young season for the Rampants.

Roger Williams, who went the first five innings, gave up only one hit, while Scott Galloway pitched two innings of hitless ball.

But their efforts were marred by control problems. Williams walked six, while striking out ten. Galloway walked one and struck out four.

"I thought we got a good pitching effort, except for the walks. That high number worries me," Coach Ronald Vincent of Rose said.

"I'm pleased with our defense and our ability with the bat," he added. "We're coming along well now."

Emmett Walsh led the Rampant hitting with three, including a double, while Mitch Brann had two hits, one of them a solo homer.

The Rampants got things going in the first inning with three runs. Mark Douglas reached on a fielder's choice and with two away, Walsh doubled. Williams walked to load the bases and Kenny Barnes drew another walk, scoring Douglas. Gordon Douglas followed with a two-run single to center.

Four more Rampants crossed the plate in the second. Sammy Hodges opened with a walk and Mont Carter also drew one. Mark Douglas beat out a drag bunt, loading them up. Brann singled, scoring Hodges, and a wild pitch brought Carter home. Walsh singled, scoring Douglas and Brann.

Two more scored in the fourth, making it 7-0. Brann opened the inning with his homer, a line-drive to right. Walsh singled and courtesy runner Tom Buie moved up on a wild pitch. He scored on an error when Barnes reached on a fielder's choice.

Three more came across in the fifth. Hodges reached on a fielder's choice and Buie reached on an error, batting on his own. Douglas walked and Terry Smith reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Hodges. An error allowed Buie to score also. Crowell Pope singled in Smith with the 12th Rampant run.

The final run came in the sixth. Billy Dough doubled and Bill Kittrell reached on an error. Hodges singled to score Dough.

Villanova Thrashes Cougars; Virginia, Sampson Waiting

VCU Survives Scare, Defeats Long Island

By TOM FOREMAN, Jr.
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — If there's a new defense for Virginia center Ralph Sampson, Villanova coach Rollie Massimino was in no mood Friday night to consider what he would do against the 7-foot-4 All-American.

By virtue of a 90-72 thrashing of Houston, the Wildcats gained the dubious distinction of facing the Cavaliers in the first game of a double-header in the NCAA East Regional today.

In the second game, Virginia Commonwealth will battle Tennessee. VCU survived a scare in the second half of its game with Long Island to claim an 85-69 victory Friday.

Massimino was savoring a victory in which five Wildcat players reached double figures and the Villanova team shot 67.3 percent from the field. So you couldn't really blame him for not worrying about the future right away.

However, he did say there would be something special in store for Sampson.

"We're gonna try and do something a little different," Massimino said. "We're not going to put three people on him unless I go in and play."

Massimino said he has seen Sampson just once, and added he would have to rely on films and scouting reports to prepare for the Cavaliers.

Based on Friday night's performance, Villanova's best defense may be its offense. Alex Bradley scored 22 points, including 12 of 15 from the free-throw line. John Pinone muscled in 19 points on a variety of drives and hooks, while Tom Sienkiewicz threw in 16, mostly on medium-range jumpers.

Mike Mulquin came off the bench to contribute 10 points as Villanova raised its record to 22-10.

Houston coach Guy Lewis was physically upset with his team's performance, which included a 47.2 percent shooting tally. But Lewis said his team should be in the thick of the title chase next year.

"I think we'll be better next year. We'll go back and work hard," Lewis said.

When asked about Villanova's performance, Lewis stopped far short of giving the Wildcats any praise.

"They're a good basketball team," Lewis said. "I honestly don't know how good they are because we weren't a good test for them."

Rob Williams led Houston with 23 points, while Michael Young had 12 and Clyde Drexler chipped in 11. Houston's season ended at 21-9.

In the opener, Virginia Commonwealth ran away from Long Island to set up a 38-24 halftime lead. But the Blackbirds refused to quit.

LIU whittled a 17-point deficit down to one on two separate occassions late in the second half. But VCU regained its composure and put the Blackbirds out of reach.

"We lost some momentum because we failed to attack when they pressed," VCU coach J.D. Barnett said. "In the first half and early in the second half, we got some back-door cuts when we attacked the pressure. Then we stopped."

Barnett said his team was banged up as a result of the physical nature of the game. But he added that he wouldn't know the extent of those injuries until today.

LIU coach Paul Lizzo gave credit to his opponents for holding together, but saved some praise for his own squad, especially when it rallied in the second half.

"Our kids have fought back all season and we didn't quit. We just wanted to get a point or two ahead and spread them out, but we just didn't do it," Lizzo said.

Blazers Bounce W. Kent.

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Three years ago, the University of Alabama-Birmingham didn't even have a basketball program.

The virtually new-born Blazers advanced to the second round with a surprisingly easy 93-68 victory over Western Kentucky in the Mideast Regionals Friday night.

Glenn Marcus scored 22 points for Gene Bartow's up-and-coming team, as the Blazers earned a berth against eighth-ranked Kentucky in Sunday's game at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

"I couldn't imagine that point spread," said Bartow. "We played about as well as we could play."

The Blazers' victory followed a Mideast opener in which Boston College edged Ball State 93-90.

In first-round action in the West Regionals at El Paso, Tex., Pittsburgh defeated Idaho 70-69 in overtime and Northeastern nipped Fresno State 55-53.

In the East at Charlotte, N.C., Villanova routed Houston 90-72 after Virginia Commonwealth put down Long Island University 85-69. In the Midwest at Wichita, Kan., Kansas edged Mississippi 69-66 and Wichita State routed Southern University 95-70.

Dwan Chandler and John Bagley each scored four points in the final 98 seconds as Boston College overcame a late seven-point deficit and downed Ball State 93-90. Bagley scored a team-leading 19 points for the Eagles, who will meet 11th-ranked Wake Forest Sunday.

"It was the kind of game you feel sorry someone had to lose," said BC Coach Tom Davis, who saw Ball State's last shot at victory bounce off the rim when John Williams missed a 35-footer with a second left and his team trailing by one point.

Coach Steve Yoder of Ball State said the plan had been for Ray McCallum or C.C. Fullove to take the final shot and "I believe McCallum would have hit it."

Dwayne Wallace banked in a 10-foot jump shot with three seconds left in overtime to give Pittsburgh a 70-69 victory over Idaho. Pittsburgh earned the right to meet sixth-ranked North Carolina in the second round Sunday.

Chip Rucker hit a layup with four seconds left to give Northeastern its upset over Fresno State and a berth in Sunday's second round against 14th-ranked Utah.

Kenny Stancell scored 22 points as Virginia Commonwealth whipped LIU and earned a shot Sunday at 15th-ranked Tennessee. The Rams held a 17-point lead, 55-38, at the 12:03 mark of the second half before holding off the Blackbirds.

Darnell Valentine scored 16 points and Johnny Crawford tossed in two free throws with 22 seconds remaining to lift Kansas over Mississippi. Cliff Levingston and Antoine Carr combined for 42 points to help Wichita State whip Southern. Kansas meets Arizona State and Wichita State takes on Iowa Sunday.

UNC's Perkins Gets ACC Rookie Honor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina freshman Sam Perkins turned last year's optimistic predictions into honors this week as he was named basketball Rookie of the Year in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Sports observers said the best high school player of 1980 who could star right away in college was the 6-foot-9 center from Latham, N.Y.

And now, just a few days after being chosen most valuable player in the ACC's championship tournament, Perkins will receive the Ray Reeve Award from the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

The association had no trouble selecting Perkins as Rookie of the Year, as 85 of 92 votes went to Perkins.

Other freshmen receiving votes were Othell Wilson of Virginia and Vince Hamilton and Clark Bynum of Clemson.

Perkins was a key member of the Tar Heel front line, acclaimed by some as the best in the country with Al Wood and James Worthy.

Coach Dean Smith made Perkins the starting center early in the season when Pete Budko sustained a severe ankle sprain.

Perkins has demonstrated coolness under fire, hot outside shooting talent and the abiltiy to use his unusually long arms effectively. His 64.2 percent field goal accuracy is the best in the ACC. His average 7.7 rebounds per game is fourth best in the league. He has averaged 14.9 points per game.

The leading scorer in the championship tournament last week, Perkins tallied 53 points, 25 rebounds and five blocks in three games.

Coaches voted Perkins the second freshman ever to be the tournament's most valuable player. Phil Ford, also of North Carolina, won that distincion in 1975.

NIT Completes Opening Round

By The Associated Press

Marquette played in the NCAA Basketball Tournament the last 10 years and Syracuse appeared in the last eight. But there they were in the National Invitation Tournament Friday night, with Syracuse posting an 88-81 victory before a crowd of 20,123 at its Carrier Dome.

As the NIT completed its opening round, two other home teams also won. Tulsa trimmed Pan American 81-71, while West Virginia shaded Penn 67-64.

Tony Bruin led Syracuse with 26 points and the Orangemen took the lead for good on Danny Schayes' layup after 13 minutes en route to a 13-point bulge two minutes later. But Coach Jim Boeheim, sore at being overlooked by the NCAA, was far from happy.

"There was no time when we had control of the game, not at all, even when we were up 10 or 12 points," he said.

Marquette pulled within one point late in game but could come no closer and Bruin put the Warriors away with a dramatic slam dunk. Erich Santifer contributed 18 points for Syracuse and Schayes added 17. Glenn Rivers led Marquette with 28 and Oliver Lee had 20.

"I really thought we were going to get them. I really did," Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds said. "We had great opportunities. Two or three times we had the ball when we were a point down, but something always seemed to happen."

West Virginia also wasted a number of opportunities, but managed to outlast Penn. The winners missed three key free throws in the final minute but overcame a 4-point deficit after blowing a 16-point lead.

"When you have athletes and you have a good team and you're up 4 points with 2½ minutes to go or so, you shouldn't lose it," Penn Coach Bob Weinhauer said. "We did everything we shouldn't have done. We turned it over and just gave it to them."

"For the last two minutes we controlled the tempo of the game, and that is the position you want to be in," said West Virginia's Gale Catlett.

Despite the Mountaineers' late misses, Greg Jones and Diego McCoy converted free throws in the final minute to secure the triumph. With West Virginia holding a 64-62 lead, Jones sank one of two free throws with 17 seconds left. Three seconds later, after a Penn turnover, McCoy converted two foul shots.

Phil Spradling's outside shooting and Greg Stewart's muscle inside sparked Tulsa over Pan American. The Hurricane broke away from a 53-53 tie midway through the second half and built a 12-point lead. Spradling finished with 17 points while Stewart added 15.

Rough Handling

Yarborough's Frown A Smile After Friday's 500 Qualifying

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Cale Yarborough was smiling and confident Friday, a stark contrast to the veteran superstar's mood one day earlier when he failed to qualify for today's Coca-Cola 500 auto race.

Yarborough took only one of his two qualifying turns around Atlanta International Raceway's 1.522-mile oval Thursday, ran a sluggish 158 mph in his Oldsmobile and muttered: "We're bad off."

He came back Friday, however, to run at 163.42 mph, the second fastest during the two days of qualifying and gained the 17th position for the $317,000 race on Sunday.

"The car was just not handling yesterday. I only ran one lap and I knew I wouldn't make the field. If I had run two laps, I probably would have wrecked," he said.

"We changed some things, and now I feel that we've got the handle on it. We're pretty well set up. We're near the race setup," said Yarborough.

Terry Labonte captured the pole position Thursday with a 162.940 mph when the first 15 drivers qualified.

Ricky Rudd, who failed to qualify Thursday when he was late for his scheduled run, narrowly edged Yarborough Friday for the fastest time, clocking 163.50 mph to take the 16th position.

So far, 30 drivers have qualified for Sunday's 40-car field. Ten more drivers will qualify today.

The most notable absentee from qualifiers remains Bobby Allison, who has been involved in a spoiler controversy since Thursday with NASCAR officials.

Effective with Sunday's race, NASCAR had levied a new spoiler rule, limiting Allison to 2½ inches on the rear of his Pontiac. He previously had raced with a 3½-inch spolier and had won the opening race at Riverside and ran well in the other three races this season.

NASCAR officials met most of the day with Allison and offered the 2½-inch spolier, an additional half-inch from the day before. It was refused.

"We need to run a 3½-inch spolier, nothing less," Allison said. "We've tried to run less and it just doesn't work. The upshot of it is that we can't be competitive and reasonably safe with anything less than 3½ inches.

"We're not interested in going out there and running around the racetrack for a position back in the pack. That is not our idea of racing," he said.

AIR President L.G. DeWitt said he hoped the problem between NASCAR and Allison could be worked out.

"There is an awful lot at stake for this team and I hope an agreement can be reached," he said.

Other qualifiers Friday included Lennie Pond and Donnie Allison.

Darrell Waltrip, a two-time winner this year, made it Thursday in the 11th spot while Richard Petty was 14th.

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — The top 30 qualifiers for Sunday's Coca-Cola 500 auto race, with type of car and qualifying speed in mph. The rest of the 40-car field was to be filled with time trials Saturday:

1. Terry Labonte, Buick, 162.94.
2. Harry Gant, Buick, 162.83.
3. Buddy Baker, Oldsmobile, 162.14.

Chargers Whip Cougars

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton got strong two-hit pitching from Tyrone Gay and rolled up a 5-1 Eastern Carolina Conference baseball victory over Southwest Edgecombe Friday afternoon.

Gay, in going the distance, struck out 15 and walked two on the way to the two-hitter.

Ayden-Grifton got only two hits off the Southwest pitching, but used them well, getting homers each time.

Southwest struck first, getting a run in the top of the first. Junior Bess walked and stole second. Jeff Ellis singled and moved up on an error. Porky Proctor then hit into a fielder's choice, scoring Bess.

Ayden-Grifton came back with a run in the bottom of the first. Chris Strickland walked, moved up on a wild pitch and an out and scored on a passed ball.

In the third, the Chargers moved ahead with two runs. Art Rouse reached on an error and Chuck Smithwick slapped a two-run homer.

The other two came in the fifth. Jerry Locust reached on a fielder's choice, and Gay provided the fireworks with another homer.

Ellis had both of the Cougar hits.

ECU Swimmers Among Top 20

MARQUETTE, Mich. — East Carolina's women's swim team was among the top 20 after the first day of competition Friay at the National AIAW Division II Championships.

The Lady Pirates had 64 points after the second of three days of competition, which finished up yesterday.

Sally Collins had ECU's top finish of the day, coming in sixth in the 200 freestyle with a time of 1:57.06. The time was a varsity and freshman record.

ECU's Dordi Henriksen was 14th in the 200 butterfly with a time of 2:11.71 and the medley relay team came in 10th with a clocking of 1:41.87.

C.B. Aycock Edges Farmville Central

FARMVILLE — Charles B. Aycock High School held off a late Farmville Central rally to gain a 4-3 baseball victory over the Jaguars Friday.

Aycock scored first, getting a run in the top of the first. Grantham doubled and moved up on an out. He scored when Thomas singled.

Farmville tied it up with one in the third. Wade Corbett reached on a fielder's choice and moved up when Greg Hardison reached on an error. Bobby Avery's single brought Corbett in.

Aycock came back with two runs in the fifth to move ahead. Gurganus led off with a home run. Grantham then singled and scored when Bunn doubled.

What proved to be the winning run came over in the top of the sixth. Rose singled and came all the way around when Carvey's sacrifice bunt was errored on the throw to first.

Farmville tried to rally, scoring twice in the bottom of the inning, but never caught up again.

Gurganus, Bunn and Rose led the Aycock hitting with two each. Corbett, Avery and Mike Tugwell each had two for the Jaguars.

Henderson Tourney Set May 2-3

The 25th annual Henderson Invitational Golf Tournament will be held May 2-3 at Henderson Country Club.

The tournament, among the longest running in the state, annually features some of the area's top golfers.

The field this year, is open to 192 players, bracketed in flights according to their first day's scores.

Last year's winner was Riley Featherston of Raleigh, who held off a late charge by Henderson's Cole Whitt. Featherston also took the top prize in 1975 and 1976. The only player with more triumphs in the tournament is Louisburg's Louis Wheless, Jr., a five-time champion.

Bids to the tournament are expected to be mailed out in mid-March. Further information can be obtained by contacting the Henderson Country Club, Henderson, N.C. 27536.

The Men's Golf Associaton of Falling Creek Country Club in Kinston will sponsor a two-man "Super Ball" tournament on April 11-12.

The entry deadline is April 8 and interested golfers should contact pro Carl Beaman by calling 522-1828 or by writing him at Rt. 2, Box 121, Kinston, 28501.

The field is limited to 80 teams.

AA-1 Champions

ECU Gymnasts Third In Div. II AIAW Regionals

William & Mary, the defending champion, won the event with 127.3 points, but Longwood had been favored in the competition. That school finished second with 122.9 points.

East Carolina had 118.8 points, while Western Carolina finished with 118.5. Furman was fifth with 100.2. A sixth school, Radford, was expected to compete, but did not, having been placed on disciplinary status by the school's administration.

East Carolina's move to third represented a two-step gain over last season's fifth place finish.

In the vaulting, Louise Matthews finished highest for the Pirates, taking third place with an 8.6 score. Joanie Ford was sixth at 8.3. Wendy Meyer, 7.9 and Cathy McNerney, 8.15, did not place.

On the uneven bars, Jennifer Bell placed third with a 7.8 score. Nan George was fourth at 7.65, while Meyer was sixth at 7.45. Lisa Tammaru, 7.0, and Claudia Hauk, 6.8, did not place.

No one placed in the balance beam competition for the Lady Pirates. Bell had a 6.85, while McNerney, Elizabeth Jackson, and George each scored 6.75.

East Carolina also did not place in the floor exercises. Ford led the ECU scoring with a 7.7, while Bell had a 7.65. Matthews scored 6.8, while Annie Loeschke had a 6.7.

"There were some beautiful routines on the beam and in the floor exercises that were scored low," East Carolina coach Jon Rose said. "We had a tough time on the bars, having some bobbles that we were unaccustomed to having. Overall, however, I'm pleased with the way we did up here and over the season."

Rose cited the performance to two Pirates in particular. Jackson, coming off a dislocated elbow, designed her whole beam routine for one arm only, and suffered no bobbles or falls. Houk had also been out with an ankle injury, just returning for the meet.

The Pirates also lost Tammaru with a back injury after two of the four events.

East Carolina has announced that it will discontinue women's gymnastics at the school after this season.

Knicks Won't Coast In

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks are assured of a spot in the National Basketball Association playoffs for only the second time since 1975, but that doesn't mean they'll be coasting for the remaining two weeks of the regular season.

"The rest of the season is important because we've got to get the team moving and playing well for playoffs," said forward Sly Williams after the Knicks clinched a playoff spot with a 127-117 victory over the Chicago Bulls Friday night.

"We've got to continue to play aggressive defense and not be afraid to do the things that got us here," added Williams. "That means running well and getting open shots off the break."

The Knicks, who take on the Philadelphia 76ers, leaders of the Atlantic Division, in a nationally televised game on Sunday, will likely face Indiana in the best-of-three first round of the playoffs. Whichever club finishes the regular season with a better record would gain the home-court advantage in the odd game of that series, which could be important.

"We overcame the first hurdle by getting into the playoffs," said Knicks Coach Red Holzman. "Even I'm exhilirated. This is what we've worked for all year. Now we've got to maintain our position (ahead of Indiana) to get the home court."

The Knicks, 43-30, held a 2½-game edge over the Pacers before Indiana's game against Detroit Saturday night.

The victory over Chicago pulled New York out of a slump in which it had lost three in a row and six of the last seven.

"This is the one we needed," said reserve guard Mike Glenn. "We beat a good, big, physical team like Chicago. When we were losing we had gotten tentative and hesitant. But against Chicago we ran, we got steals, we played our game and got the momentum."

"We had to get a win, no matter who we beat," said Knicks guard and team captain Ray Williams, who broke out of a personal slump with 27 points and 13 assists. "Any win makes you feel better and more relaxed for the next game."

Beating Philadelphia would be a major step for the Knicks, who scored just 32 points in the second half in losing 115-95 to the 76ers at Philadelphia Wednesday night.

"We've got to do what we did against Chicago," said New York center Bill Carwright. "We have to play good defense. That's our whole trick. That gives us a chance to get easy shots and makes it hard for our opponent to set up."

Guard Michael Ray Richardson agreed.

"We've got to play real good defense," he said. "In the last two weeks we didn't play any defense."

And good defense stems from a team's attitude, according to assistant coach Butch Beard.

"Intensity is the key," said Beard. "We have to be mentally ready."

Floyd Takes Stroke Doral Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Although troubled by a balky putter, defending champion Ray Floyd managed a 1-under-par 71 and took sole control of the lead Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament.

"In my heart, I feel it's the kind of round that I should have spread the field," Floyd said after posting his 205 total, 11 shots under par on the 7,065 yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

"From the fifth hole in, I never had the ball 20 feet away from the hole and I just kept missing them," said Floyd, who had shared the lead at the end of the first and second rounds.

"It's the kind of round that I feel like I could have shot 61 easier than 71.

"On the other hand, I guess I should feel fortunate that after a round like that, after missing all those putts, I'm fortunate that I'm in the lead, even close to the lead.

"But it's pretty dejecting to play that well and come up with a 1-under-par round."

He wasn't nearly so dejected as Lanny Wadkins however.

From a share of the lead, Wadkins made a quadruple-bogey "8" on the final hole, falling four shots off the pace with a 75 and a 209 total.

While Wadkins took himself out of it with some adventures on the bank of the lake by the 18th green, Dr. Gil Morgan remained harder to shake than a summer headcold.

Morgan, a non-practicing optometrist who started the warm, sunny day a single shot back of Floyd and Wadkins, remained one back of Floyd with a 71 that included a bogey from a bunker on the 18th. He takes a 206 total into the final round of the chase for a $45,000 first prize.

Only two shots off the lead at 207 were Australian David Graham, Leonard Thompson and Keith Fergus. Graham birdied the last hole for a 68. Fergus had a 69 and Thompson rallied from a double-bogey "7" for a 71.

Tom Kite, a winner last week in Inverrary, birdied three of his last four holes for a 70 that left him three shots back at 208 and still in position to make a run for a huge bonus prize. He'll receive an additional $250,000 if he could add this title to last week's victory. A sweep of Inverrary, Doral and next week's Tournament Players Championship would be worth $500,000.

"I'm trying to win the golf tournament," Kite said. "I'll accept what they give me."

"And if they want to give me a whole bunch of money, that's okay, too.

"It's kind of hard not to think about the bonus. I'm not sure I want to close it entirely out of my mind. But I'm kind of taking it with a grain of salt, trying to keep it in perspective."

He was tied at 208 with Bruce Lietzke, Mike Reid, Mark Lye and Bob Murphy. Lye closed up with a 65, which matches the best round in the tournament. Reid had a 68, Lietzke and Murphy 69s.

Morgan, Floyd and Wadkins played together in the final threesome and, according to Morgan, seemed to get caught up in their own battle "and let the rest of the field catch up with us."

All three led or shared the lead at one time or another. Over the front side lone, Floyd led alone on two occasions and Wadkins led alone on two occasions.

And, after all their jockeying for position, they went to the 18th tee tied for the lead.

Floyd put his second shot on the green and 2-putted for the par that, eventually, provided him with sole control of the top spot. Morgan made bogey from the right bunker.

His second shot trickled down the bank of the lake on the left and came to rest, above water, on some coral.

He tried to play it, but didn't get it out of the hazard. He and tried it again. This time it went back into the water, had to take a penalty and drop, pitched on and 2-putted for the "8" that dropped him from a tie for first to a tie for 11th.

Cavs See Lineup Change

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Virginia basketball coach Terry Holland said his starting lineup for today's contest with Villanova in the second round of the NCAA East Regional would undergo some changes because of an injury to Lee Raker and lack of offense from forward Craig Robinson.

Fifteenth-ranked Tennessee meets Virginia Commonwealth in the second game of the doubleheader today.

Raker has developed calcium deposits within a charley horse in his right thigh. Holland said Raker has been working out to remain in condition, but added that the senior guard hasn't done much running or shooting because of the ailment, and is a doubtful starter.

Subsequently, Holland has moved Othell Wilson into Raker's spot in the starting lineup, while shifting guard Jeff Lamp to a forward position.

Also, Holland announced during a news conference Saturday afternoon that Terry Gates would replace Craig Robinson at a forward position.

"What's happened to Craig is, as the season's gone on, he has struggled with his shooting," Holland said. "Right now, his shooting is probably bothering him more than it's bothering us. So, we're going to let him take it easy and come off the bench."

As for Raker, Holland said Saturday's practice session would determine just how much time Raker gets on Sunday.

"Early in the week, he didn't have enough motion to run on it. Now he's gotten to the point that they think he'll be able to run today. If he doesn't get anymore bleeding in it, he'll get to play tomorrow," Holland said.

The injuries added to Holland's concern about a Villanova team which dominated Houston Friday night en route to a 90-72 victory.

"Obviously, they create some problems for us," Holland said. "Houston tried to put pressure on them and they handled the pressure very well."

Wildcat coach Rollie Massimino said he was concerned about the entire Virginia lineup, but knew the key to victory was taking Ralph Sampson's influence out of the contest.

"He's gonna have his share of dunks, his share of rebounds and he's gonna score his share of points," Massimino said. "We're gonna try and keep him off the baseline as much as possible and try and contain him."

Massimino said his team would make adjustments to Virginia in general and Sampson in particular, but added that those adjustments would have to come within Villanova's philosophy and not the Cavaliers.

"We're not going to put three people on him unless I go in and play," Massimino said.

Virginia Commonwealth squandered a 17-point lead against Long Island Friday night, then regained its composure and took an 85-69 victory. But the physical nature of that battle took its toll, as coach J.D. Barnett described Saturday.

Barnett said guard Edmund Sherod took an elbow to the shoulder and has been sore since Friday night. He said Saturday's practice would determine just how effective Sherod would be.

Guard Danny Kottak has been suffering from a lymph infection, but he is also expected to start against the Volunteers.

Oregon State Defeated

It wasn't missed, and Kansas State Coach Jack Hartman had a reason for that.

"There was tremendous execution and tremendous timing on the last-second shot," said Hartman. "That was a standard play for us. We've worked to clear Blackman on that side all year.

"We didn't play well early. We didn't have good movement. It seemed we were aware of who we were playing. We couldn't get unlocked, but we were able to stay within reach."

The upstart Wildcats, who had come from 12 points down to beat San Francisco 64-60 in a first-round game Thursday night, trailed Oregon State 26-19 at halftime and 39-28 with just under 14 minutes to play before they surged back.

Two free throws by Ed Nealy with 3:23 left made it 48-48 all, giving the Wildcats their first tie since the game's opening minute.

Oregon State center Steve Johnson, who led the Beavers 16 points and six rebounds, fouled out on the play. Johnson, in foul trouble in nearly every Oregon State game during the season, had only one foul in the first half Saturday and had played the entire game until leaving with his fifth personal.

Despite fouling out, the 6-10 senior played more minutes than in any game this season.

Oregon State, which finished its season at 26-2 and lost its NCAA tournament opener for the second straight year, then ran the clock down until freshman Charlie Sitton was fouled with 2:03 to go.

Sitton missed the free throw, the first of a one-and-one, and Kansas State rebounded. The Wildcats got the ball into their frontcourt and called time out with 1:51 left.

Kansas State, which had been hampered by turnovers throughout the defensive-minded contest, then worked around the ball around smartly until Blackman shot his time into the West Regional semifinals.

Blackman led the Wildcats with 14 points. Forward Tyrone Adams added 12 points for the Wildcats and Nealy finished with 11 points and a game-high nine rebounds.

After winning 26 straight games, the Beavers had been beaten 87-67, by Arizona State in a regular-season finale March 7.

Patty Hayes In Sun City Lead

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Patty Hayes fired a 3-under-par 70 Saturday to take over sole possession of the lead after three rounds in the $100,000 LPGA Sun City Classic.

Hayes, the co-leader with Pat Bradley after 36 holes Friday, played steady golf, with two birdies on the front nine and two on the back to move to an 11-under-par 208 total, one stroke ahead of Hollis Stacy.

Stacy set a course and tourney record Saturday with her 8-under round of 65. She started the day at 2-under — six strokes off the pace.

Bradley shot a 1-over-par 74 Saturday on the 6,279-yard par-73 Hillcrest Golf Course in Sun City West to slip to 212 with Janet Alex, who had a 71. Both are four strokes behind Hayes.

Karolyn Kertzman, who trailed by one shot after two rounds, was 10-under after 13 holes but bogied the 14th and 15th to finish at 210.

Silvia Bertolaccini was in fourth place at 211. Sandra Palmer and Betty Burfeindt tied for seventh at 213.

Hayes has never led an LPGA event after three rounds but said it would not bother her to play the final 18 holes with golfers right behind her.

"It's not match play," Hayes said. "It's me and the golf course. There are an awful lot of people with low scores, but they have to catch me. I'm going to try to put as many birdies as I can up on the board."

The tournament ends Sunday.

Lady Bucs Finish 21st

MARQUETTE, Mich. — East Carolina University's women finished 21st in a field of 61 teams in the Division II AIAW Swimming and Diving championships yesterday.

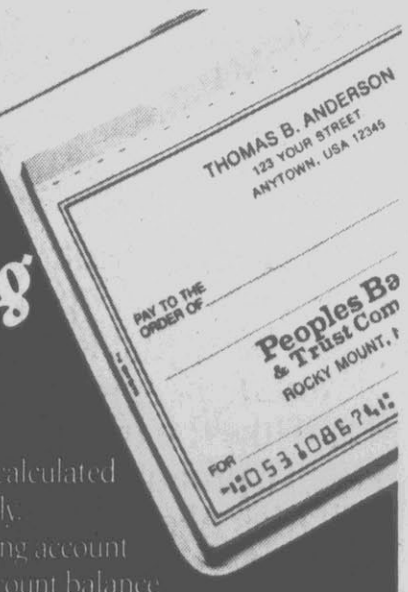

The Lady Pirates finished with a total of 81 points, an increase over last year.

Only two individuals placed in Saturday's finals. Carol Shacklett finished 12th in the 50-yard butterfly in 27.37, and seventh in the 100-yard individual medley in 1:02.26, both varsity records.

Jennifer Jayes was 12th in the 50-yard backstroke in 29.32.

All eight Lady Pirates attending placed during the three-day event, and made All-America status.

Saturday's Exhibition Baseball

St. Louis.....5
New York (N).....3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — George Hendrick, the National League's No. 2 run-producer last season, and newcomer Darrell Porter each knocked in two runs in the St. Louis Cardinals' first exhibition game Saturday, a 5-3 victory over New York Mets.

Hendrick, who drove home 109 runs in 1980, helped set up the decisive three-run fifth against Tom Hausman and rookie left-hander Ray Searage. The Mets, now 1-2 in Florida, had pulled into a 2-2 tie in the fourth against non-roster right-hander Steve Busby.

A one-out Rusty Staub double and Mike Jorgensen's single tied it. An infield hit by Templeton, a stolen base, and Hernandez's single broke the tie before Hendrick again doubled and Porter drilled a clinching two-run single off Searage.

New York (A).....5
Baltimore.....3

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The New York Yankees scored three times in the first inning, then got the decisive run on Lou Piniella's run-scoring ground out in the third for a 5-3 exhibition baseball victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

The Yankees reached Baltimore left-hander Mike Flanagan for three runs in their first at bat as they sent nine men to the plate. Bob Watson, Piniella and Rick Cerone knocked in the runs with singles.

Ken Singleton, who had singled in a run in the first, lifted the Orioles into a 3-3 tie in the third when he singled in another run and eventually scored on winner Tom Underwood's wild pitch.

But the Yankees went ahead in the bottom of the third as Watson led off with a double, moved to third on Singleton's wild throw to the infield and scored as Piniella grounded to shortstop off Scott McGregor, who was the loser. McGregor retired all nine men he faced after Watson.

New York added a run in the sixth against Sammy Stewart on a double by Oscar Gamble, a single by Graig Nettles and Bucky Dent's groundout.

Singleton and Rich Dauer had three hits for Baltimore.

Tokyo.....5
Atlanta.....2

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Former New York Yankees star Roy White smashed a two-run home run in the third inning to give the Tokyo Yomiuri Giants a 5-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves in exhibition baseball Saturday.

White, who left the Yanks and joined the Giants last season, connected off Braves' starter Rick Camp following a leadoff single by leftfielder Tadashi Matsumoto.

The Giants added three runs off Braves reliever Tommy Boggs, scoring twice in the fourth and once in the fifth.

Singles by Tatsunon Hara and Kohji Yamamoto, along with an error, accounted for the two runs in the fourth inning. A walk, a double by ex-San Fransico Giant and Los Angeles Dodger Gary Thomasson and a sacrifice by Hara contributed to the run in the fifth.

Minnesota.....8
Detroit.....4

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Minnesota outfielder Gary Ward delivered a two-run home run and a two-run single to give the Twins an 8-4 exhibition victory over the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

Ward has hit in seven of 16 trips to the plate for a .438 average and five runs batted in.

Minnesota's Ron Jackson went 2-for-4 with two RBI and has hit 10 for 19 this spring. He has a .526 average with four RBI.

Cincinnati.....9
Toronto.....5

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP) — Shortstop Dave Concepcion blasted two home runs and drove in four runs to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 9-5 exhibition baseball triumph Saturday over the Toronto Blue Jays.

It was Cincinnati's first spring training game, while the Blue Jays saw their record drop to one win against four defeats.

Concepcion, who had elbow surgery during the offseason, hit a three-run shot off Toronto starter Jim Clancy in the first inning to put the Reds in front.

The Blue Jays came back with two runs in the third as Cincinnati native Barry Bonnell tagged Reds' starter Tom Seaver for a home run.

Concepcion hit a solo homer off Roy Lee Jackson in the fourth inning, but the Blue Jays went ahead 5-4 with three runs in the sixth, highlighted by Gene Petralli's two-run single.

In the eighth, Blue Jays relief pitcher Phil Huffman walked the first two batters and gave up a single to Nick Esasky to load the bases. Lefty Jerry Garvin came on in relief and walked Steve Christmas to force in one run.

Dale Murray replaced Garvin and yielded a bad-hop single to pinch hitter Tom Lawless to score two runs. Germane Barranca doubled to drive in the Reds' fourth run of the inning.

Philadelphia.....5
Pittsburgh.....2

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Shortstop Luis Aguayo drove in two runs, atoning for an earlier throwing error, to help the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday in exhibition baseball.

It was the second victory in as many spring games for the 1980 World Series champions, while the Pirates fell to 1-1.

Pittsburgh, outhit 12-5, took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Dale Berra scored from third on a throwing error by Aguayo.

But Aguayo rapped a double in the third, scoring Ramon Aviles, who had singled and taken second on a sacrifice.

Kansas City.....4
Texas.....2

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — John Wathan's eighth-inning homer broke a 2-2 tie Saturday and propelled the Kansas City Royals to a 4-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Wathan's blast over the left field wall came off loser Don Kainer, who worked the last three innings for the Rangers.

Kainer was also nicked for an unearned run in the ninth when Willie Wilson reached first on an error by second baseman Odie Davis and later scored on U.L. Washington's third single of the afternoon.

Kansas City evened things in the third on Hal McRae's RBI single and took the lead an inning later when Frank White scored on Clint Hurdle's double.

Chicago (A).....11
Boston.....1

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Bill Almon, a non-roster player looking for a job, capped Chicago's 16-hit attack with a two-run, inside-the-park homer Saturday in the White Sox' 11-1 exhibition rout of the Boston Red Sox.

The White Sox tagged Boston starter Chuck Rainey for six hits and four runs in the first three innings, Bruce Hurst for seven hits and four runs in the middle three before completing the scoring against Bob Ojeda.

Ron LeFlore, making only his second appearance in a Chicago uniform, walked, doubled and singled, scoring three runs and driving in three.

Mike Squires drove in three runs with a double and a single, while Harold Barnes allowed eight hits and one walk but only one run on singles by Reid Nichols, Jerry Remy and Dave Stapleton. In his three innings, Barnes was helped by two double plays and a runner thrown out at the plate.

Remy had three hits and Stapleton two for the Red Sox, who took their fourth loss in five exhibition outings.

Houston.....6
Los Angeles.....5

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Dave Bergman drove in the winning run with an eighth-inning single Saturday as the Houston Astros edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-5 in an error-marred exhibition baseball game.

The Dodgers committed five errors, a wild pitch, a passed ball and a balk. The Astros made two errors.

With Houston trailing 5-4, Mike Fischlin opened the Astros eighth with a single and went to third when Jeff Leonard singled. Chris Bourjos tied the game with a sacrifice fly, Julio Gonzalez was safe on Howe's error and Bergman singled home Leonard from second base.

Houston's Joe Niekro made his spring pitching debut and permitted only one hit in three innings.

The Astros are 2-1 and Los Angeles 0-3 in spring games.

Milwaukee.....9
Chicago (N).....1

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Cecil Cooper, Larry Hisle and Mark Brouhard hit home runs to power the Milwaukee Brewers to a 9-1 Cactus League victory over the Chicago Cubs Saturday.

Cooper, playing in his first exhibition this year, gave the Brewers a 2-0 lead with his first swing of the bat in a game this spring.

Hisle hit his third homer of the exhibition season to highlight a four-run fifth inning. Singles by Gantner and Cooper, a double by Ted Simmons and a passed ball produced the first two runs.

Brouhard, fighting for one of the two open outfield spots on the Brewer roster, hit a three-run homer in the seventh off Rawly Eastwick.

Jim Slaton, sidelined for all but three games last year by a rotator cuff injury in his right shoulder, pitched three shutout innings and earned the victory. Slaton allowed two hits and threw two double play balls.

Cleveland.....11
San Francisco.....2

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Joe Charboneau hit a homer in Cleveland's six-run first inning and the Indians went on to an 11-2 exhibition baseball win over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

Angelo LoGrande added a three-run home run in the seventh inning as the Indians battered five Giants pitchers for 16 hits.

Miguel Dilone opened the game with a triple over Jack Clark's head in right field scored on an infield out.

Charboneau then hit his first spring training home run, and after LoGrande reached second on Bill North's two-base error, Ron Hassey doubled and Larry Littleton singled. One out later, a walk and hit batter, followed by Dilone's two-run single, ended the uprising.

San Francisco scored in the sixth on Jack Clark's run-scoring triple and in the seventh on Jeff Ransom's solo homer.

Oakland.....8
Seattle.....2

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Duane Murphy had two singles and a triple to key a 16-hit attack as the Oakland A's posted an 8-2 Cactus League baseball win over the Seattle Mariners Saturday.

The win gave the A's a 4-0 spring training record while the Mariners dropped to 2-4.

McCatty, the lost man in Oakland's highly publicized starting rotation with a 14-14 record last season, struck out one batter and limited the Mariners to a leadoff single by Gary Gray in the second inning.

Oakland got to Seattle starter Floyd Bannister for two runs in the first inning and single runs in the second and third. The A's built a 6-0 lead with two more runs off Rob Dressler in the fourth.

The Mariners scored when Alan Wirth gave up a two-out double to Mario Guerrero and a single to Dave Edler in the fifth inning.

Johnson Finds Cure As Bucks Whip Philadelphia

By The Associated Press

Marques Johnson found that a visit from the Doctor was just what he needed to overcome a lingering case of the flu.

Johnson, who had missed two games in the past week because of illness, scored 29 points and grabbed 10 rebounds Friday night to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to a 120-104 victory over Philadelphia despite 25 points by the 76ers' Dr. J, Julius Erving.

"It's definitely the same kind of excitement it always was, just being on the same court with him," Johnson said of Erving. "It's always a challenge and I try to respond as positively as possible. He may score 40 on me the next night, but I'm going to cherish this one tonight."

The victory was a big one for the Bucks, who still harbor hopes of overtaking both Boston and Philadelphia and finishing with the best record in the National Basketball Association, which would give them the home-court advantage throughout the playoffs.

Milwaukee, which has clinched the Central Division title, has a 54-20 record. That's four games behind Philadelphia, whose 58-16 log is the best in the NBA.

Boston missed a chance to gain ground on Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division chase by dropping a 101-94 decision to the Indiana Pacers. Boston, 56-17, trails the 76ers by 1½ games.

The New York Knicks, meanwhile, became the seventh team to clinch a berth in the 12-team playoffs by snapping a three-game losing streak with a 127-117 decision over the Chicago Bulls.

In other NBA games, the New Jersey Nets outscored the Cleveland Cavaliers 140-125; the Houston Rockets beat the Portland Trail Blazers 126-104; the Atlanta Hawks edged the Denver Nuggets 119-117, the Seattle SuperSonics trimmed the Detroit Pistons 102-100 and the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the Kansas City Kings 116-101.

The Bucks, ahead 67-61 at halftime, held the 76ers scoreless for nearly the first six minutes of the second half and led 93-74 after three quarters. The 76ers sank only four of 18 shots in the period.

"I can't use excuses," said 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham. "Good teams have to make adjustments, hang in there and compensate. Tonight we just got beat by a better team."

Pacers 101, Celtics 94

Guard Johnny Davis scored 12 of his 24 points in the final four minutes to lift the Pacers past Boston. The victory, the Pacers' fourth in their last five games, reduced Indiana's magic number for clinching a playoff berth to two. The loss was only the Celtics' second in the last 10 games — both at the hands of the Pacers.

Knicks 127, Bulls 117

Ray Williams broke out of a slump with 27 points, including 17 in the third quarter, and handed out 13 assists as the Knicks clinched a playoff berth for only the second time since 1975. The loss trimmed Chicago's lead over Washington to two games in their battle for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

Nets 140, Cavaliers 125

Maurice Lucas scored 26 points and the four other New Jersey starters each added 20 or more as the Nets handed Cleveland its ninth straight loss.

Rockets 126, Blazers 104

Mike Dunleavy scored 27 points, Calvin Murphy added 25 and Moses Malone hauled down 19 rebounds as Houston beat Portland in a game between two clubs that are contending for Western Conference playoff spots. Kansas City and Golden State are also in the scramble for the final three West berths.

Hawks 119, Nuggets 117

Sonics 102, Pistons 100

James Bailey scored 21 points, including a 10-footer at the buzzer for Seattle's winning margin. John Long, who had 22 points for Detroit, had tied the score with a three-point goal with seven seconds left.

Lakers 116, Kings 101

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 28 points for Los Angeles and became the fourth NBA player to surpass 26,000 points for his career. The Lakers are now 5-2 since guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson returned to action following knee surgery. Johnson had 21 points, 11 assists and seven steals against the Kings.

Redskins Fall...

Atkinson said of his offensive attack. "We didn't get into the pattern like we were suppose to. But I felt good after the first period, we weren't down by 15 or 20."

Atkinson must have been just short of estatic in the third period. Despite playing nearly all the third period without Chance, the Redskins outscored Jordan 10-2 to take a 45-33 lead into the final quarter.

Chance, who finished the night with nine points, picked up his fourth foul 32 seconds into the third quarter and sat out the remaining 7:28. It didn't seem to bother his teammates.

Highsmith went backdoor for a layup and Spruill added two follow shots and suddenly the Redskins were up, 41-31, and Jordan wanted a timeout. It didn't help.

Highsmith and Michael Neal then drove for backdoors and the Redskins led by 12 going into the final eight minutes. The lead remained at 12 (49-37) two minutes into the fourth quarter, but the Redskins saw their hopes of playing in the regional finals fade when Chance picked up his fifth foul and a technical with 5:41 remaining.

When asked about the call and the officiating in general, Atkinson said: "Well, well, well. God Bless America. I'd better not say anything."

For the night, Roanoke was whistled for 28 fouls, the Falcons 18. Jordan hit 22 of 32 from the line compared to Roanoke's 12 of 19. That was the only statistic the Falcons had in their favor.

Roanoke outrebounded Durham, 28-18, led by Neal's six and Spruill's five. Spruill also had 10 points. "They were tough inside," Shaffer said. "They're the best rebounding team we've faced all season."

The Redskins also outshot the Falcons, 21 of 39 (54%) to 17 of 42 (40.5%) and commited 23 turnovers (17 in the second half) compared to Durham's 17.

In the end, however, without Chance, the young Redskins were unable to hold off the Falcons.

"When Maurice Chance fouled out it showed how much we look to him," Atkinson said. "The other boys look to him for leadership. He controls what we do."

Bruins Win...

Roanoke 56-54 on the strength of a 24-point night by David Shaffer and Mike Gattis's 12 points was enough to forge a 51-45 victory for Burlington Cummings over West Cateret.

2A Boys

At Statesville in the western regional 2A, Union Pines took a 72-68 victory in overtime over East Lincoln as Darryl Pearson claimed a game-high 18 points. In a second overtime contest, Bandy's won 80-76 over Monroe as Vernon Odom got all eight points scored by Bandy's in the extra period. Bandy's high man for the contest was Bryan Harvey with 24.

In the eastern regional at Wilson, Bunn edged Enfield 80-67 as James Cooke scored 20 to lead his team to the victory. In the second game, Southwest Onslow downed Clarkton 67-56 with Marvin Phillips scoring the game-high 18 points for Onslow.

1A Boys

At Goldsboro in the 1A eastern regional, Pantego clipped Maxton 83-56 as Bruce Peartree and Greg Spruill each hauled down 20 points. And Midway raced past Aurora 71-59 behind the 22-point shooting of Donny Lane.

There were no western 1A regionals Friday night.

Ghost Town Taxation

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

TERLINGUA, Texas (AP) — Some folks living in this former ghost town are complaining about "taxation without representation" and saying it may be time for the south to split from the north.

They're not talking about another American Revolution or a repeat of the War Between the States. They are residents of the largest county in Texas, and they feel they are being ignored by "city people" living in the county seat at Alpine, 90 miles to the north.

Billy Pat McKinney, a rancher who earns $125 a month as constable in the southern half of the remote West Texas county, wants to break away from Alpine and create a brand-new county here. He said Alpine wouldn't care anyway.

"Those people up there think this part of the county is populated with nothing but thieves and outlaws," said McKinney, 50.

"That may have been true at one time, but times change," he said, planting the palm of his hand on the butt of the .45-caliber automatic pistol he wears on his hip. His territory covers a vast area of mountains, canyons, deserts, draws, abandoned mines — and precious few people.

McKinney said the population of Terlingua is 14, although other residents said they count only six. But it's not how many people you've got that counts, McKinney says — it's square miles.

"The federal government has said precincts should be based on population — not area. That's one of the more stupid things the government has come up with," said the constable, whose area encompasses more than 3,000 square miles but has fewer than 300 registered voters.

So McKinney and his wife, Sadie Jo, the local justice of the peace, came up with the idea at a meeting of the Terlingua Improvement Association to split Brewster into two counties. After all, it's plenty big enough — the county's 6,204 square miles make it larger than the states of Connecticutt and Rhode Island combined.

A feasibility study for a new county was authorized by the association, which includes southern county residents and business people.

"We have, in effect, taxation without representation," said McKinney, who admitted he has a vested interest in the outcome of his campaign — last year he bought 100 acres of "downtown Terlingua" — including all "improvements," for more than $125,000.

The former town of 2,000 prospered during the 1920s, but was abandoned when the local mercury mine dried up during World War II. All that remain are a few crumbling adobe structures, including a church and an uninhabited mansion on a hillside overlooking the old mine.

Terlingua enjoyed a revival during the late 1960s when it became the site of the annual world champion chili-cooking contest, but even that has been moved up the road a few miles and is no longer held here. McKinney and his family hope the town will come back to life once again, and are turning an old dry goods store into a restaurant.

Besides Terlingua, the southern part of the county includes Lajitas, a resort rebuilt to look like a frontier town of the Old West, and Study Butte, a small cluster of stores on the edge of the Big Bend National Park catering mainly to park tourists. About 35 people live in each community, and about a dozen teen-agers in the area have to ride a bus — nearly 100 miles one way — to Alpine to attend the nearest high school.

McKinney said if southerners had their own county, they could have their own high school. But some residents fear higher taxes.

"A new county would need a courthouse, a fireproof vault for county records, a sheriff's department, a county judge, a tax assessor-collector," said Bill Ivey, who owns the old trading post at Lajitas and is opposed to the idea of a new county.

Milly Wooster, a widow who owns 640 acres near Lajitas, said, "People think of the benefits, but they don't consider the taxes. I came here from Corpus Christi to avoid taxes."

COMPLAINING ABOUT NORTHERNERS ... Deputy Constable John Alexander leans against the Terlingua, Texas jail where he discussed the possibility of carving a new county out of Brewster County, the state's largest. Most residents of the remote west Texas countylive in the northern part and, some say, ignore the needs of the southerners. (AP Laserphoto)

Kissinger Says Burnett Acted 'Perfectly Ladylike'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Henry Kissinger says Carol Burnett acted in a "perfectly ladylike fashion" when they met at a Washington restaurant, but says he has no plans to testify in her $10 million libel suit against the National Enquirer.

The Enquirer published a gossip item which said Miss Burnett and the former secretary of state had had a noisy row.

Kissinger, who has given a deposition in the suit against the Enquirer, told reporters Friday that there was "no commotion of any kind going on" during their January 1976 encounter.

Earlier Friday, a former Enquirer reporter testified that he was unable to verify the item published in the tabloid.

Greg Lyon, called as a witness at the Superior Court jury trial of Miss Burnett's suit, said he was working as a reporter for the Enquirer at its Lantana, Fla., headquarters in February 1976 when he was asked by Brian G. "Mike" Walker to check out an item for the gossip column Walker was writing.

The article, carried in a March 1976 issue, alleged that Miss Burnett had a noisy run-in with Kissinger at the Rive Gauche restaurant, traipsed around offering everyone a bite of her dessert, and knocked over a glass of wine.

"It was 10 a.m. on Wednesday and I had one hour before deadline to check it out," Lyon said.

He said he called Mary Jo Stewart, then public relations director of the restaurant.

"I was given the information orally to be checked out," Lyon said. "He (Walker) said there had been some sort of altercation and to check it out."

Lyon said Miss Stewart told him that Miss Burnett had had a good-natured talk with Kissinger and had shared her dessert with several people.

He said: "I didn't use the word 'traipsing,' and neither did she. She said she couldn't confirm anything about the spilled wine."

Business Notes

TAKES POST

T. Charles Entzminger, president of Cha-Rich Music Inc. of Greenville and Washington, announced that William (Bill) English has joined the company as floor manager at the Arlington Boulevard location here.

English, who is originally from Goldsboro, graduated from Greene Central High School and East Carolina University. He was associated with The Music Hut in Goldsboro and Southern Life Insurance Co.

CT&T COURSES

Carolina Telephone reported that Louis W. Dail Jr. and Milliard L. Harrell, both PBX installer repairmen for CT&T in Greenville, recently completed courses offered by the company in Rocky Mount.

Dail completed a circuit reading and relay adjustments course and a transmission fundamentals course, while Harrell finished a four-week Rolm CBX session.

SALES POSITION

Grant McCammon, a Greenville resident, has joined Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp. as a sales representative for the Carolina Division, the company announced.

A graduate of The Citadel where he earned a B.S. degree in business administration, McCammon was formerly a sales representative for Lanier Business Products.

TO ATTEND SESSION

Donald C. McGlohon of the Hines Agency Inc. here will be one of 11 independent insurance agents from across the state attending the fifth annual National Legislative Conference set for March 22-24 in Washington, D.C.

The session, sponsored by the Independent Insurance Agents of America, will be attended by over 400 agents from the across the nation. The session will permit agents to discuss insurance related federal legislation and regulation with their congressmen.

McGlohon is mayor of Greenville.

BW APPOINTMENT

Burroughs Wellcome announced that Thomas M. Moore has accepted a position with the General Packaging Division here as a supervisor II.

Prior to joining the company, he held such positions as director of pharmacy services for the Community Medicine Foundation in Tarboro, pharmicist surveyor for the N.C. Division of Facility Services, and director of pharmacy aboard the hospital ship, the S.S. Hope.

Moore earned his pharmacy degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and his M.S. degree in public health administration from East Carolina University.

CONSULTING FIRM

Keith Beatty, director of operations for Sportsworld Inc., announced the formation of Sportsworld Consulting Services with headquarters here.

Beatty said the firm's activities will center on providing general and consulting services to those engaged in the formation and operation of indoor roller skating facilities.

He added that the firm will specialize in the design, construction, and operation of family recreation facilities featuring roller skating.

SPRING SESSION

The Purchasing Management Association of Carolinas-Virginia will holds its spring meeting March 19-21 at Kiawah Island, S.C.

The association represents over 800 industrial purchasing managers from the three state area.

BOUGHT COMPANY

Eaton Corp. announced that it has acquired Lorlin Industries Inc. of Danbury, Conn., a producer of semiconductor test equipment. The price was not disclosed.

Lorlin, a small privately held company employing 130 persons, manufactures equipment to test discrete power and small signal semiconductor circuit devices. The firm's 1980 sales were in excess of $5 million, it was reported.

Eaton manufactures advanced technology products serving worldwide transportation and industrial markets. Total sales for 1980 were $3.2 billion.

EMPLOYEES CITED

Four local employees of Carolina Telephone received emblems recently in recognition of service tenures with the company.

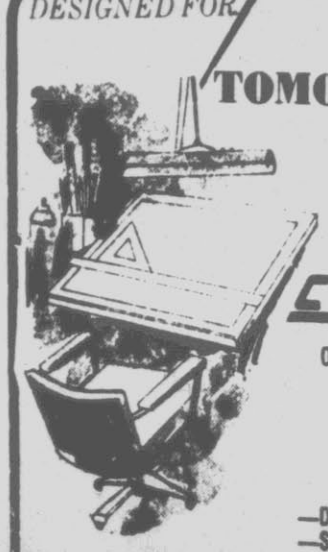

Receiving recognition were: Frances Nanney, a service center clerk, 35 years; Billie Cottingham, an operator, 15 years; Mrs. Geraldine Little, an operator, ten years; and Kenneth Cobb, an installer repairman, five years service.

ASSISTANT VP

Farmville native John M. Nichols, manager of Cameron-Brown's New Bern loan office, has been promoted to assistant vice president with the company, it announced.

Nichols, who joined the mortgage banking firm in 1976, attended East Carolina University.

Pork Belly Futures Plunge

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Pork belly futures prices plunged their daily limit on Friday for the third time this week as the outlook for supply and demand remained negative and traders awaited a government cattle inventory report.

Analysts said belly prices, already weak because of abundant supplies and slack consumer demand, slid late in the session to 42.45 cents a pound for March delivery after traders sold cattle contracts in anticipation of the U.S. Agriculture Department cattle on feed report.

Cattle lost .25 cent to .87 cent and closed at 62.65 cents a pound in the contract for delivery in April; feeders fell as much as 1.50 cents and closed at 69.25 cents a pound for the March contract.

The report, released after the close of trading, showed the number of cattle on feed lots March 1 and the number placed in feedlots last month had not declined from year earlier figures as much as anlaysts had earlier thought they would.

"I think a lot of people anticipated that bearish report," said Larry Young, an analyst with Thomson McKinnon Securities Inc.

The USDA reported that the number of cattle being fed for slaughter in seven major producing states was at its lowest point for this time of the year since 1975. But futures markets had been anticipating still sharper cutbacks in production.

"The crucial thing this year is that all three sectors — beef, pork and poultry — will be competing for the relatively tight consumer dollar," Young said. "We have more than abundant beef and more than abundant pork and it will cer-tainly drive prices down more."

Grain and soybean futures prices ended the day mixed in a narrow range Friday, with very little change from Thursday's close.

Wheat, which settled at $4.32 a bushel for March delivery, was ¼ cent lower to 2 cents higher. Soybeans were unchanged to 2¼ cents higher, $7.33 a bushel for the March contract.

Prices bounced back and forth during most of the day as some traders sought to cover commitments for delivery and even up contract positions before the weekend, sources at the Chicago Board of Trade said.

ACQUIRED ASSETS

Caskie Paper Co. of Lynchburg, Va. reported it acquired the assets of Richmond Paper Co., Richmond, Va., which serves customers in Virginia and North Carolina.

Caskie distributes printing and industrial papers from its Lynchburg headquarters. Distributions sites are also in Charlotte and Greenville, S.C.

TOPPED MARK

Paced in May and December by its first $1 billion sales months ever, Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. reported that its sales crossed the $10 billion mark for the first time in 1980.

The company said face amount of policies sold totaled $10.5 billion, an increase of 20.2 percent over the $8.8 billion sold in 1979 and more than double 1976 sales.

May was the highest month in NML history with sales of $1.094 billion, while December sales totaled $1.087 billion. Northwestern said it first achieved sales of $1 billion for the entire year in 1963.

HIGHER RESULTS

TRW Inc. reported higher sales and earnings for the year and the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1980.

Sales totaled $4.98 billion, up nine percent from 1979's $4.56 billion. Net earnings reached $211.9 million, a nine percent gain over the $194.6 million posted in 1979.

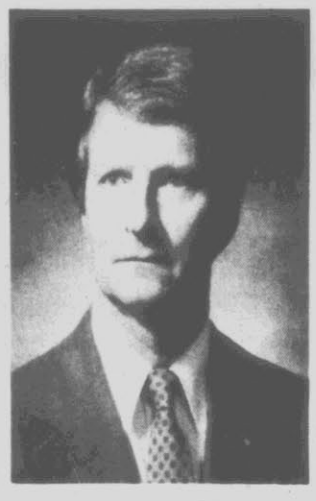

For the fourth quarter, sales reached $1.3 billion, compared to $1.2 billion for the year-ago period. Net earnings were $57.2 million compared with $50.3 million in 1979.

Dutch Get Glum News On Economy

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (ap) — Government leaders are dealing out some gloomy economic news these days, even though they face elections in 2½ months. People are being told they must expect less from Western Europe's most generous social system.

"Only very gradually are large sectors of our society beginning to realize that the trees no longer grow to the heavens," K.H. Beyen, the state secretary for economics, told business leaders recently.

Premier Andries van Agt and other officials predict widespread factory closings, half a million unemployed workers and a sharp drop in living standards by 1985 unless there is genuine sacrifice.

No one expects the death knell to be sounded, however, for the country's cradle-to-grave welfare system that has developed here since 1960. The principle of redistributing wealth remains sacrosanct. But as in Scandinavia and West Germany, the cries of "less more" have become increasingly strident.

The government, for instance, made a slight cut this year in the "13th-month pay" most workers get for vacations. Some officials and others are questioning the disability-payment program, which provides 100 percent pay for the first year and 75 percent or more for the next two years for 600,000 persons on the disabled lists.

Premier van Agt, a Christian Democrat, has named a study commission to come up with ways to shave $10 billion from the budget, now at $58 billion, over the next four years. That report, to be made available to the Cabinet that takes power after the May 26 elections, also will examine ways to cut $5 billion from the social security system.

Government spending and social security payments now take 65 percent of the national income, up from 53 percent in 1974. Of the total, 34.5 percent was for social benefits — the highest rate in Western Europe. With tax revenues lagging behind those costs, the government budget deficit has grown from 2.9 percent to 7 percent or $11 billion, putting pressure on interest rates and driving down investment. Even the rising revenues from Dutch natural gas reserves, which helped finance the growth of the social security system, failed to stem the growing deficit.

Unemployment, which was at 56,000 in 1970, rose above 300,000 last January for the first time since World War II, hitting 7 percent. The Central Planning Bureau says it could reach 380,000 before the year is out, and Finance Minister Fons van der Stee said it could climb to 500,000 — 10 percent of the work force — by 1985 unless drastic changes are made.

Another figure causing despair among business leaders is that less than 5 percent of the average firm's income is left for investment and profit after wages and taxes are paid. Employer organizations say the profit margin, one of the smallest in Western Europe, is simply too low to justify investment, which was projected to fall 3 percent in 1980.

In 1978, the new center-right coalition government announced an ambitious plan that was going to reverse these problems: Unemployment was going to drop to 150,000, investment was to grow by 5.5 percent a year, exports were to grow by 7.5 percent.

But van Agt's government, with a fragile two-seat majority in Parliament and a restive left wing, has been unable to make a real dent in government spending.

Revival

The Rev. C. L. Patrick will conduct revival services at Bethany Free Will Baptist Church near Winterville, March 15 through March 20.

The services will begin each evening at 7:30. In addition to Gospel messages, the program will include sacred music.

The public is invited to attend the special services.

School Program Offered Patients

By DIANE R. PAQUETTE
PCMH Communications

Ten-year-old Terry is a patient at Pitt County Memorial Hospital for the second time this month. He is the victim of a chronic illness that requires frequent hospitalization. For seriously ill patients like Terry (a fictitious name), hospitalization at Pitt Memorial no longer means their education will be forgotten.

Pitt Memorial recently began a program to provide bedside and classroom instruction for patients five to 17 years old who must be hospitalized for more than two weeks. And "Teacher at Work" is a sign patients, staff and visitors will be seeing on the doors of patient rooms more and more around the medical center.

"Every child in the hospital is a potential student," says Barbara Close, the hospital's teacher. Sponsored by the N. C. Department of Public Instruction, Close teaches patients in the medical center on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Students receive credit for school work completed at Pitt Memorial, but no grades are assigned. Textbooks are furnished by the students' school and brought to the hospital by parents.

Dr. Jon Tingelstad, professor and chairman of the Department of Pediatrics at the ECU School of Medicine, thinks Close's instruction will keep chronically ill patients from falling behind in their school work.

"Pitt Memorial's patients are changing," says Dr. Tingelstad. "We have patients with chronic illnesses that sometimes keep them out of the classroom for a month at a time. The school program is a segment of the comprehensive care scheme we like to provide all of our patients."

Dr. Tingelstad played an instrumental part in the establishment of the program at the hospital and he encourages physicians and staff to refer their patients to Close. Parents and the child's home school teacher are asked to participate in the program by provydi g books, supplies and assignments.

"Parents are very important to making the hospital classroom program a success," says Close. "First, they must recognize that their child needs this continuity in his or her education. The parents are a valuable link between me and the child's home school teacher.

"The program is very new and I am trying to determine what educational materials I will need," says Close. "Patients are in different grades, from different schools and from counties outside Pitt. So far, I have been using arithmetic flash cards, puzzles and games that my own three children used when they were young and books brought from the students' home town schools."

Randy Thompson, a 14 year old student from Roper in Washington County, says he did not expect to have school while in the hospital, but he admits enjoying his "class" with Close three times a week.

"I try to spend at least 45 minutes with each student daily," says Close. "But this time varies depending uqon iow!many students are enrolled and how many students are able to come to the classroom, which is located in occupational therapy."

Close spends most of her teaching time sharpening the students' skills in the three R's — reading, writing and arithmetic. She does not give report cards but reminds her pupils that her time is for school, not play. "The program is beneficial for me and the students. It gives me the opportunity to use my skills in a setting away from the traditional schoolhouse. It gives patients a chance to keep up with their education.

Being Chico's Daughter Wasn't Easy

MAXINE MARX

By PRUDENCE HELLER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "I think any child who's raised with famous parents has enormous problems, some very subtle and some not so subtle."

That's Maxine Marx speaking from experience. She's Chico Marx's daughter. And one of her problems was thinking people liked her only because of who her father was. Marx Brothers fans will remember Chico as the one who wears the felt hat and short jacket in the movies.

In a recent interview, Miss Marx recalled that when she was very young she overheard one girl tell another that she didn't really like Maxine, but associated with her because "she's Chico's daughter."

"I remember that from then on I was very wary of people, always expecting them to like me only because of my father," she said. "Consequently, I leaned a lot on my father. I was very anxious that everybody would know always that he belonged to me and I belonged to him because I figured nobody cared about me..."

She says it took years of psychoanalysis to overcome these feelings and she doesn't know whether she has ever totally got rid of them.

Miss Marx, brought up in a stage world, became an actress and had her share of success. But then came romance, in the form of Jimmy Culhane — or "Shamus," to use his nickname. She married him, and joined him working in his animation studio in New York. They had two sons.

Eventually, however, the marriage broke up. She had been away from the stage for 14 years — too late to go back, she says. So she became a casting director in the advertising field, and now heads the casting department for a big New York agency.

Hardly the limelight for someone who was — is — one of the Marxes. Does she miss it?

"If you've once wanted to perform you always like performing," she admits, and describes being a guest recently at a dinner of prominent people in television arts and sciences. "I was on the dais and I loved it. I sat up there and made a lot of funnies and people laughed and every time I got a laugh I just adored it. And I would be happy to be there for the rest of my life."

She also says, however, that she is a basically happy person — that she has her father's basic optimism. "I think I take a great joy in life. If I see a tree in the park and it's spring and it's green, I feel such a surge of joy — and I think daddy did that."

Miss Marx has written a book about "Growing Up With Chico," a womanizer, compulsive gambler, "whimsically funny man" and loving father. The household wasn't always harmonious.

She likes her current work, because she's dealing with actors. TV commercials are one of the ways they keep in bread and butter pending their break on Broadway, she says. And she "covers the waterfront," including way "off" Broadway, looking for talent.

Looking for a future Marx Brothers team, perhaps? No, you won't find them these days, she says. That's because there aren't the vaudeville circuits on which they honed their zaniness, working on an act night after night, making little changes to adjust to audience reaction.

Today, she says, comedy is wit rather than physical antics. But then she promptly suggests an exception — Woody Allen, at least on occasion. She calls him the "most inventive, genuine comic we have today of the new generation." She also says there are a number of very good comic actors around these days. But she distinguishes them from "comics."

All the Marx brothers — Chico and Groucho and Harpo, Zeppo and Gummo — are dead now. But Maxine Marx says she still feels very much a Marx, and keeps in touch with some of the brothers' children.

Gastric Partitioning Patients Must Change Their Lifestyle

By DICK BROOM

CHAPEL HILL — Barbara Whitaker has been fat all her life.

At 209 pounds, she was the biggest girl in her high school freshman class. Eight years later, married and working as a secretary she had ballooned to an unhealthy 283.

"It had gotten so bad that by the time I walked from my office to the parking lot in the afternoon, I could hardly get my breath."

Barbara (a fictitious name) had tried all kinds of diets and lost a few pounds here and there, but she always gained them back. Finally, ashamed of the way she looked and worried about her health, she decided to do something drastic.

Last spring she had an operation at North Carolina Memorial Hospital that reduced the size of her stomach and, thereby, limited the amount of food she could hold. She has lost 113 pounds since then and expects to lose another 25 by the first anniversary of her surgery.

The operation that has Barbara on her way to becoming an average-size person for the first time in her life is a gastric partition procedure. The front and back of the stomach are staple together near the top so that only a pouch the size of an egg remains as a reservoir for food. Food is channeled through the rest of the digestive system by attaching a section of intestine to the newly-formed pouch or by cutting a small hold in the partition between the pouch and the lower part of the stomach.

Gastric partitioning was first done in North Carolina six years ago by Dr. Joseph Buckwalter, professor of surgery at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Since then, Buckwalter and Dr. Charles Herbst, associate professor of surgery, have performed about 400 partition procedures at N.C. Memorial Hospital. They currently do about four operations a week between them, and the demand is so great that patients accepted for surgery often have to wait thrue or four months.

The operation also is being done at a few other hospitals in the state, including Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville.

Buckwalter and Herbst stress that partition surgery is not for everyone with a weight problem. Generally they only accept patients who are at least 100 pounds over what is considered ideal, based on their height and frame. These patients are labeled "morbidly obese," because their weight poses a significant health threat.

Medical problems that often can be relieved by weight loss include high blood pressure, diabetes and arthritis.

"I've seen people confined to wheelchairs because they've gotten so heavy they can't walk without hurting their knees and ankles," Buckwalter said. "They are completely immobilized, simply because joints that were designed to carry 125 pounds are being asked to support 400 to 500 pounds. Not only are these people ruining their health, they are miserable human beings."

Herbst said the best candidates for partition surgery are reasonably healty young adults for whom "there is good chance of preventing or reversing medical problems before they cause irreparable damage."

"We've had diabetics who were on high doses of insulin every day, and they were able to get off insulin completely after losing weight."

People whose obesity is related to a thyroid or adrenal disorder and those who have been obese for only a few years are not considered for surgery. And Herbst said that even for those who qualify, surgery is a last resort.

"It is far better to lose weight through dietary efforts than to go into surgery."

But for so many of his patients, Herbst said, the problem is maintaining a sustained weight loss through dieting.

"If you go on a diet and lose 40 pounds, that's still only a drop in the bucket for someone who weighs 400. It's terribly discouraging."

Gastric partition surgery is by no means a guaranteed cure for obeisty, but some patients lose so much weigh so fast they can practically see the pounds falling off. Buckwalter tells of a man who lost 225 pounds in just eight months and a woman who went from more than 500 pounds to 165.

For most patients, however, the weight loss is more modest, and a few lose 20 or 30 pounds. Four out of five patients lose two-thirds of their excess weight within two years. But the physicians stress that in order to achieve an optimum, permanent weight loss, patients must change their lifestyles to include proper eating habits and regular exercise.

"Many of these people have atrocious eating habits and consume unbelievable amounts of food," Buckwalter said, recalling a woman who made a meal of five pounds of raw hotdogs the night before entering the hospital. "In addition to doing the operation, we have to help them adopt a completely new lifestyle that doesn't totally revolve around eating."

Ann Harmon, a dietitian at the N.C. Memorial Hospital, advises patients on proper nutrition and eating habits and helps them develop a healthier attitude toward food.

Scholarship Recipient Selected

The Patient Circle of The King's Daughters and Sons held its meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Dr. Lois Staton. A student ministry scholarship recipient has been selected.

The report was made by Dr. Staton. The meeting was conducted by President Mrs. R. E. Corbett Jr.

Campbell Soup labels, cancelled postage stamps, unused jewelry and eyeglasses were collected and members were asked to continue saving these items and bring them to the next meeting. Mrs. Jean Weaver reported a box of used eyeglasses had been mailed.

Mrs. Clara Shackell reported a draftsman is working on plans for The Patient Circle Retirement Home to be built in the future.

In discussing plans for the state convention to be held in Greenville this fall, a needlepoint square with the silver cross, made by Mrs. Shackell, was displayed, with the idea of using the design as one of the favors.

Dr. Will R. Wallace, pastor of the First Christian Church here, introduced by Mrs. Corbett, gave a talk on "Parables of the Bible." He will finish the discussion at the April meeting.

On The Young Side

By Elizabeth Ito

North Carolina Personnel and Guidance Association Week was held March 1-7. The Rose Guidance Committee honored the week by inviting representatives from East Carolina and Pitt Community College to the campus to answer questions students might have concerning the institutions.

Additionally, the faculty at Rose were invited to an open house in the guidance office last week. One of the purposes of the week was to educate students and public on the services provided by guidance personnel which include student appraisal services, career and vocational development, counseling and placement services.

The Quiz Bowl team was victorious in its second round of competition held last Saturday in Tarboro. The team will next travel to Raleigh in April to defend the school's 1980 state championship title.

Senior speakers for graduation have been announced. These students, who will speak at commencement exercises to be held June 9 at Ficklen Stadium, are Michael Tucker, Sarah Houston, Teresa Little, Alison Keel and Mary Gay.

The annual National Mathematics Exam for high school students was administered at Rose Tuesday morning. For the past three years, Rose has scored the highest of all participating schools in the state. The exam is sponsored jointly by the Mathematical Association of American, the Society of Actuaries, Mu Alpha Thea, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics and the Casualty Actuarial Society.

Shaun Wallace has been chosen as Greenville's 1981 Community Ambassador. Wallace, who is a member of Rose's swim team and drama club, stated Denmark or Norway as his first choices for a host country. In order to be selected for the program, which is sponsored by businesses in the community, Wallace had to write a "Dear Family" letter to his host family abroad, answer a questionnaire and take part in an interview.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Ten years ago, America had a dream.

Garbage was to be unisex.

Replacing toilet tissue spindles was to be a "sharing experience."

Laundry was to become an equal opportunity employer.

In theory, it sounded terrific. In reality, it just hasn't happened. Every day a new study confirms what my grandmother used to chant over the washboard in the backyard: Man works from sun to sun . . . but woman's work is never done!

One survey showed that even the sympathetic husband only puts in a couple of hours a day to help his "working wife." (Is there any other kind?) And another study didn't help things when it circulated statistics saying that housework heads the list of "Burnout," a syndrome that leaves its victims weakened, unenthusiastic about life and unable to make decisions.

The frightening fact is housework has a bad name and unless we can do something about it — and fast — no one is going to be doing it in the near future.

I approached a friend of mine who is in public relations and told him about the problem.

"Sweetie," he said, "you're talking self-image. I'm going to give you the bottom line. Housewives need a PR number done on them. They're beige, do you know what I'm saying? They're positively invisible. People 'into waxing corners' don't get noticed. No one quotes them. No one hears them. They're out of the fast lane. They need a concept."

"How do we do that?" I asked.

"Listen up," he said. "What are we looking at? We want housework to be a sensuous experience, lusted after like silky hair. We want babies crying for it and men begging to have their own food processor. First, we put out eight million bumper stickers saying, 'HONK IF YOU LOVE FLUSHING!' Then we do ads in the trades showing a sexy housewife saying, 'Reach out and dust someone.' Then we get together spots on all the TV stations of a housewife sitting in a wicker chair and toying with her food saying, 'I will throw away no leftover before its time.' Don't you love it?

"We'll get billboards that say, 'THE FAMILY THAT CLEANS TOGETHER IS SEXIER.' We'll schedule housewives on talk shows who will talk about their latest low sudser experience and finally we'll have a recruiting spot 'for a few good homemakers' that shows a woman with the American flag flying behind her that says 'The few. The proud. The housewives.'"

I love it.

Couple Weds Saturday In La Grange Church

MRS. WILLIAM GEORGE JOHNSON

LA GRANGE — Miss Helen Jo Foss and William George Johnson were united in marriage at the La Grange Christian Church at 3:30 p.m. Saturday. The Rev. Gordon Lee officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Helen Sutton Foss and the late Mr. Y. Z. Foss of La Grange and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Margaurite Johnson and the late Mr. Fred Johnson of Shelby.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride was attired in a gown of silk organza. The gown was fashioned with an empire waistline, Queen Anne neckline, keyhole back and long bishop sleeves. The gathered skirt featured a front accordian pleated panel. In the center of the chapel length train, which fell from the waist, was a lace panel insert. The bride wore her sister's chapel length mantilla of imported silk illusion and rosepoint lace.

Special music was provided by the bride's cousins, Dan Arnette, fluist, and Jeff Arnette, guitarist. Mrs. Beverly Arnette Beverly and Jeff Arnette were vocalists. Mike Edmundson, organist, accompanied Lori Chadwick, who sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Mrs. Gale Foss Mooring of La Grange, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Denice Dennis of Bethel, cousin of the bride, Lynn Watts of Greenville, Beth Pittman of New Bern, and Patty Johnson of Morehead City, sister-in-law of the bridegroom. The bride's nephew, Trent Mooring of La Grange, was ring bearer.

Thomas Frederick Johnson of Morehead City, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers included James Edward Mooring of La Grange, brother-in-law of the bride, Paul Provost of Havelock, Bill Brady of Raleigh, Ben Summer of Rock Hill, S. C., cousin of the bridegroom, and Ray Burke of La Grange, cousin of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Peace College, Raleigh, and East Carolina University, where she was a member of Delta Zeta Sorority. The bridegroom is a graduate of N. C. State University, Raleigh.

After a cruise to the Bahamas and Virgin Islands, the couple will live in New Bern.

Following the ceremony, the bride's mother entertained at a reception at the Walnut Creek Country Club.

The wedding party, out-of-town guests and family were entertained at a wedding breakfast at the Walnut Creek Country Club. Hosts and hostesses included Mr. and Mrs. Lamm Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Carr Foss, Mr. and Mrs. James Foss, Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Mooring, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Sutton and Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Tetterton, Mr. and Mrs. Al Eason and Mr. and Mrs. Hanzie Bauhoffer and Mrs. Ruth Sexton.

On Friday evening, the wedding party and guests were entertained at a buffet dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Mooring, sister and brother-in-law of the bride. Hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl Dennis, aunt and uncle of the bride, and John Abdallah.

Dear Abby

Suicide Threats More Than Empty Words

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday at work I overheard a young, well-educated co-worker (I'll call her Judy) talking to a fellow employee. She said, "My mother is having this middle-age menopause depression. This morning she threatened to kill herself, so I calmly said, 'Mom, in case you've forgotten where the gun is, it's under the pillow on Dad's side of the bed. The gun is loaded, so why don't you quit talking about it and go ahead and kill yourself?'" Then Judy went on to say, "You know, people who keep threatening to commit suicide never do. Sure enough, a few hours later, Mom called me at work to apologize for threatening to kill herself."

I was shocked. Maybe Judy handled the situation properly because her mother didn't kill herself, but I've heard that a suicide threat is a cry for help and should never be taken lightly. Who is right?

BETHLEHEM, PA.

DEAR BETHLEHEM: You are. Judy repeated a common misconception. My experts in the field of suicide prevention say that no threat of suicide should be taken lightly — that statistically the likelihood of suicide increases every time a person goes untreated after attempting suicide or threatening to. Judy's mother needs help.

DEAR ABBY: This could be classified as a stupid question, but it has been bugging me. I am 15 years old. A few weeks ago I read an article in the newspaper. It was an interview with a gigolo. He told how much he enjoyed his work and said it was a wonderful way to make a living.

As I was reading this article, a thought suddenly occurred to me. If what hookers do is against the law, then why isn't what gigolos do against the law? It is practically the same thing.

JU'ST WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: First, the only "stupid questions" are those that aren't asked for fear of appearing stupid.

What hookers do is vastly different from what gigolos do. A "hooker" is a female prostitute who solicits men for the purpose of selling them sexual favors.

A gigolo is a male who is available for a fee to escort a woman wherever she wants to go. Sexual favors are not included.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know why, but whenever I get a compliment I feel embarrassed and don't know what to say, so I put myself down. For example, if someone says, "My, that's a pretty dress," I say something like, "Oh, this old rag. It's two years old."

How should I handle a compliment without appearing conceited?

SHY IN EVANSVILLE, IND.

DEAR SHY: Smile, say "Thank you," and shut up.

DEAR ABBY: Want to know the quickest way to get a thank-you after spending hard-earned money on just the right gift for ill-mannered people? It's easy. My mother dreamed up this great technique, and I have been practicing it ever since.

After waiting one month for an acknowledgment, telephone the store where the gift was purchased and ask them to put a tracer on it. (Most stores are very cooperative, and will promptly call or write a letter asking if the gift was ever received.)

It's amazing how soon you will get a thank-you! Who cares if they're embarrassed? They could use a lesson.

NO DUMMY

Changing Lifestyles

"It's merely a mechanism to help support a weight loss, and you can easily sabotage it by eating small amounts of high calorie foods all the time. You have to be really committed to losing weight and keeping it off."

Miriam (a fictitious name) weighed 350 pounds two years ago. She lost 150 pounds after surgery, but has gained 20 back.

"My big weakness is candy and bread," she explained. "But I know that just because I've had the operation, it doesn't mean I can make my meals on candies and breads, or I'll be back to the same size I was."

Herbst said no one considering partition surgery, no matter how desperate, should take the operation lightly.

"This is big-time surgery, and the possibility of complications should not be minimized," he said. "The chance of having a complication is 20 percent. The chance of having a major, life-threatening complication is five percent and that's significant.

Because of the risks, Herbst said he doesn't operate on people he calls "curiosity seekers."

"I'm not interested in just making people pretty," he said. "I'm interested in making them healthy."

Nevertheless, both physicians agree that the boost to psychological well-being brought about by an improved appearance can be as important as the strictly physical benefits.

"For many people, this literally transforms their lives," Buckwalter said. "They feel re-born because they are able to do things they haven't done in years. They have a new self-image and renewed self-respect.

Buckwalter noted that at least 90 percent of the people who have partition surgery at N.C. Memorial Hospital are women. The reason, he said, is that obesity seems to create more psychological and social problems for women. "They tend to be more ashamed of it."

The motivation that brings morbidly obese people — both men and women — to the hospital for gastric partition surgery is simple, Buckwalter said. They just want to be moral.

CARTOON MUSEUM

GRIEN SHOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — An exhibition of some 90 prints and drawings by Hans Baldung Grien is being shown at the National Gallery of Art through April 5.

The museum says the artist was one of the least known yet most creative and versatile artists of the German Renaissance and "an expressive and highly spirited draftsman and the most important artist to emerge from the circle of Durer."

Paroled Dr. Coppolino Finds World Unforgiving

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The iron prison gates swung open 17 months ago and Dr. Carl Coppolino walked out a free man.

Outside, he has found an unforgiving society that offers no escape from the stigma of one of the nation's most celebrated murder cases.

"There are people who will never be satisfied — even after the 12 years I spent in prison," he says. "To those who believe me guilty, my debt to society is not paid. And it never will be."

The years of incarceration don't seem to show on the 49-year-old grandfather, who has written a book about the case entitled "The Crime That Never Was." But his glamorous, fast-paced lifestyle and circle of well-to-do friends are gone.

As a condition of parole, he's barred from practicing medicine.

In 1967, the nation's newspapers and magazines were filled with Coppolino, just as they were recently with reports of another high-society love triangle murder case — the conviction of former headmistress Jean Harris in the slaying of "Scarsdale Diet" doctor Herman Tarnower.

Twice in 1967, Coppolino, then 34, went on trial for his life — first charged with murdering his lover's husband, then accused of killing his wife.

He hired attorney F. Lee Bailey and was acquitted in the July 1963, death of Ret. Army Col. William E. Farber, 52, in Monmouth County, N.J.

Five months later, a jury in Naples, Fla., found the Brooklyn-born anesthesiologist guilty of second-degree murder in the death of his wife, Carmela, a 32 year-old physician. The government said he murdered her with an injection of a paralyzing muscle relaxant. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Key testimony came from Coppolino's spurned mistress, Marge Farber, 18 years his senior. After Coppolino married someone else, she went to police and claimed her ex-lover killed her husband in New Jersey and his wife in Sarasota.

Mrs. Farber testified she was a hypnotic "love slave" in the throes of Coppolino's trance when she tried to kill her husband. She said Coppolino finished the job by smothering him with a pillow.

An autopsy on Farber's exhumed body showed a heart attack didn't cause his death, the state said, attributing death instead to suffocation caused by a fractured neck bone.

In the second trial, prosecution witnesses painted a picture of a playboy doctor, used to the good life, who had the drug, the motive and the opportunity.

The defense branded the testimony the vendetta of a woman scorned.

But in the end, it came down to a battle of experts.

New York City Medical Examiner Dr. Milton Helpern and his chief poison expert, Dr. Charles Umberger, testified they found enough succinylcholine, the muscle relaxant, in Carmela's body to cause her death.

Defense experts said the drug was untraceable. The jury believed Helpern.

The conviction cost Coppolino 12½ years of his life, his plush lifestyle on fashionable Longboat Key, and his medical license.

"But it probably made me stronger," he says. "It changed my whole sense of priorities radically.

"The puff set, the country club crowd, the frills of high-flying living that were important were of absolutely no value where I went.

"You carry nothing with you. Prison even takes your name away and gives you a number. All you have is you. And you learn that you become important."

Coppolino says his strength through those years came from his second wife, Mary Gibson, a former bridge partner and wealthy Southern divorcee five years his senior. He married her six weeks after Carmela's death.

An independent, strong-willed and articulate woman, she raised her two children and Coppolino's two daughters, worked, drove 500 miles every weekend for five years to visit him in the state prison at Raiford, and personally led the campaign to free him.

"He's all the family I've got," she says flatly. "And if hope is all you have, you never let go of iired at times. Friends and family abandoned them. But she pushed on, knocking on doors, talking to anyone who might help.

Ironically, it was Umberger's conflicting testimony in a case 10 years later that paved the way for Coppolino's freedom. Umberger said tests were still being developed to trace succinylcholine.

And not long after that, Dr. Franco Fiorese, a toxicologist, said he was sworn to secrecy when his tests didn't confirm the Helpern findings. Both Umberger and Helpern are now dead.

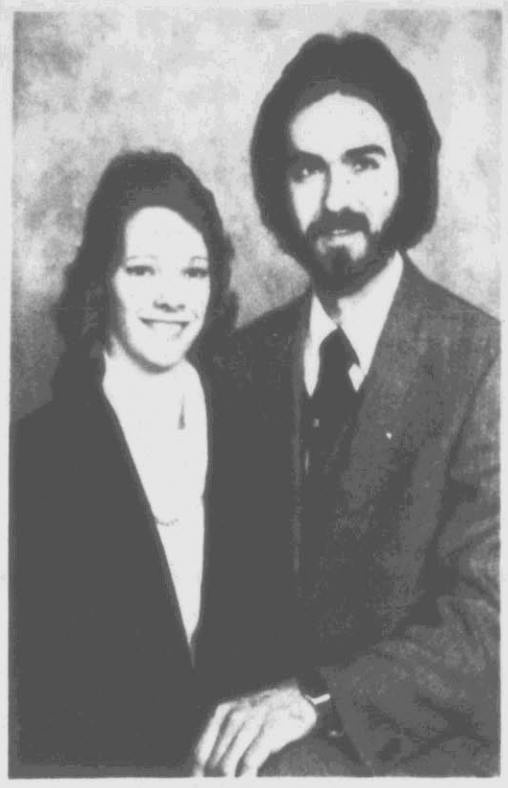

With that new information, Mary Coppolino found an ally in state Rep. Arnett Girardeau of Jacksonville, then-chairman of the committee on correction, parole and probation.

There's a brief foreword by Girardeau in the book Coppolino just published about his experience — the years he served; his battle against the system, and allegations of neglect, brutality and inhumanity he claims he witnessed within Florida's criminal justice system.

Writes Girardeau: "After a year and a half of collecting information and scientific studies, I had the irrefutable proof that Dr. Helpern and Dr. Umberger had intentionally fabricated the facts...

"Dr. Coppolino was paroled in October 1979 after losing 12 years of his life on a conviction for a 'crime that never was.'"

No One Can Win Canada's Struggle

OTTAWA (UPI) — America's northern neighbor has become embroiled in a bitter political battle that no one can win.

Canada's central government and its provincial administrations are locked in a struggle over who controls the nation's vast resource wealth. At stake is more than $400 billion in revenues this decade.

Canada emerged from 1980 still united, but wounded deeply by the Quebec referendum on independence for Canada's largest province. Celebration of Quebec's endorsement of the Canadian federation has been short-lived.

The dispute over western Canadian resources poses as much, or more, of a threat to a united Canada that Quebec ever did. American and other foreign capital and investment would have flowed out of an independent Quebec, making it doubtful it could survive economically. Western Canada has no such fears.

Pierre Trudeau, 61, put off a planned retirement after 11 years as prime minister to lead his Liberals back to power last February only nine months after Joe Clark's Conservatives won election with a minority government.

Trudeau's Liberals returned to office with a near-sweep of Quebec, rife with uncertainty over the independence vote, and on a wave of anger in industrialized Ontario against the Conservatives' high-price energy policy.

Western Canada maintained its hostility to the Liberal government and Trudeau found himself with only two members west of populous Ontario.

Westerners were incensed over the election results and, with little representation at the federal government level, they turned even more to their provincial administrations to serve their interests.

"We must remind ourselves," Trudeau told the nation on the night of the most dramatic election comeback in Canadian history, "that Canada has been, Canada is and Canada will remain more than the sum of its parts."

Trudeau moved swiftly to fulfill his key election pledges of a "made-in-Canada" constitution and greater Canadian ownership of the nation's foreign-dominated energy sector.

In his first Canadian budget, Finance Minister Allan MacEachen avoided any personal income tax increase on Canadians battered by 10 percent-plus inflation, but he moved decisively in the energy sector to reduce the government's forecast $14 billion deficit.

MacEachen's budgetary measures would almost triple the domestic price of oil within six years — sending gasoline and home heating fuel bills skyward.

Oil prices went up $1 per barrel Jan. 1 and will increase by that amount every six months until the end of 1983; then $2.25 per barrel every six months until the end of 1985; then $3.50 per barrel until they reach an "appropriate quality-determined level."

With a measure that shocked the industry and the provinces, MacEachen also took dead aim on a significantly higher share of the estimated $400 billion in petroleum production income anticipated this decade.

Canada's government now receives 10 percent of revenues with the provinces and industry sharing the remainder. By 1983, the budget would give the federal government 24 percent, the provinces 43 percent and industry 33 percent.

The budget also slapped a tax on all natural gas production, a special tax on net revenues from oil and gas, a lower depletion allowance for foreign-owned companies for exploration costs and tax incentives for Canadian companies.

The budget was "the worst economic and financial decision in the history of Canada," Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed protested. Alberta's Heritage Fund — a provincial bank account — now has a whopping balance of $8.4 billion. Canada's richest province intends to use it to diversify its energy-based economy.

On top of unsuccessful negotiations on a new oil pricing formula, the federal budget was more than Lougheed could bear.

More than half of Alberta's 1,030,000 workers are employed in the energy industry and Lougheed's response to the budget started a power struggle that will drain millions from both the federal and provincial treasuries.

Beginning in March, Alberta will cut oil production by 60,000 barrels a day — which will cost the federal government more than $1 million daily for substitute imports and Alberta $350,000 a day in lost revenues. By September, the cutbacks will be tripled and the costs three times as much.

Lougheed's government also withheld approval for the Syncrude and Alsands projects, effectively shelving two $8 billion oil sands plants desperately needed by Canada to lessen dependence on costly imported oil. The Alsands consortium warned the entire project will be scrapped by mid-1981 unless Alberta's go-ahead was given.

With Canadian companies benefitting from tax breaks, choice leases on government land and investment incentives, some major multinationals — such as Shell, Imperial and Gulf — slashed their 1981 investment and exploration budgets for projects in Canada.

Other companies, such as Dome Petroleum, set up separate companies that were 75 percent Canadian-owned to benefit from the 'Canada first' policy. Another company negotiated to sell off its interests to state-owned Petro-Canada.

Petro-Canada is in the final stages of completing a $1.4 billion purchase of Petrofina Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Petrofina S.A. of Belgium. The deal would involve Petro-Canada in every aspect of the industry — from exploration and development, through the refining process to a string of more than 1,000 gas stations from coast-to-coast.

Canadian Energy Minister Marc Lalonde said "several" other multinationals were negotiating with Canadian interests. He has not identified them but speculation was focused on second-ranked Gulf, 14th-ranked Acquitaine and the nation's 20th largest oil company, BP Canada.

The budgetary measures and the government's determination to lessen the estimated 80 percent foreign-ownership of the industry has had a ripple effect through the economy that some industrialists warn could become a tidal wave.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business said the federal-provincial power struggle threatened some $200 billion in foreign investment this decade, capital desperately needed to spur the nation's flagging economy.

"To be frank, our problems are the product of power politics and cannot be blamed on any kind of inherent economic weakness," federation president John Bulloch said.

The Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors contended that by mid-year the energy policy would drive out 287 of the 560 drilling rigs now operating in Canada. Such moves would create "ghost towns" across western Canada, Conservative Member of Parliament Len Gustafson said.

Canada's energy minister has staunchly defended his policy and disputes the contractors' association figures, contending there were more drilling rigs operating in Canada (532) than a year ago (496).

What cannot be disputed is growing opposition to the federal policy. The federal-provincial battle has given impetus to "free the west" independence movements that even pro-federalist Quebec Liberal Party leader Claude Ryan said were more committed than separatist forces in Quebec.

Premier Lougheed, who insists he's committed to a united Canada, said westerners who support independence were "as good Canadians as you or I, just frustrated and angry."

Support for independence is marginal now, but cause for concern. A recent poll showed 85 percent of westerners want to remain in Canada while only 7 percent favor independence and 4 percent favor joining the United States.

In a recent western speech, Prime Minister Trudeau pleaded with westerners to "put reason before passion" and forget what region they live in.

"Let's talk a little bit with our intelligence ... and then hopefully, when that is done, our gut feeling will be more for Canada than for any particular province or division of this country," Trudeau said.

"Canada will survive and it will survive as a strong nation.

"If it were to die merely because we're patriating the constitution or because we are sharing the wealth ... then let me express the opinion that Canada would not deserve to live if it were going to tear itself apart for these reasons."

Outraged By Jersey Joke

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — New Jerseyans have long chafed under the ridicule heaped upon their state by their big-city neighbors across the Hudson River.

But the last straw for the mayor of this central New Jersey town came when he heard a "Saturday Night Live" player who was portraying a goofy chemical worker give Piscataway as his address.

Mayor Robert Smith said he was "outraged" by the skit on the NBC late-night comedy program and is demanding either a public apology or time to respond.

Last week the regularly featured character played by actor Joe Piscopo was shown endorsing his fictitious place of employment, United Chemical Co. in Piscataway, as "chemicals dripped off his helmet and onto his sandwich," said Smith.

"When they said the guy was from Piscataway, I got outraged. These people have slandered us," said Smith, a professor of chemistry and environmental sciences at Middlesex County College.

"We have written NBC and asked for a public apology. If they don't agree to that, we want equal time to tell our side of the story."

Interviewing Is To Begin

The Survey Research Center of the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research will begin the 14th annual wave of interviewing for its Panel Study of Income Dynamics.

The professionally trained interviewers for this area are Dorothy K. Allen, Ruby Wallace and Bronnie Lee.

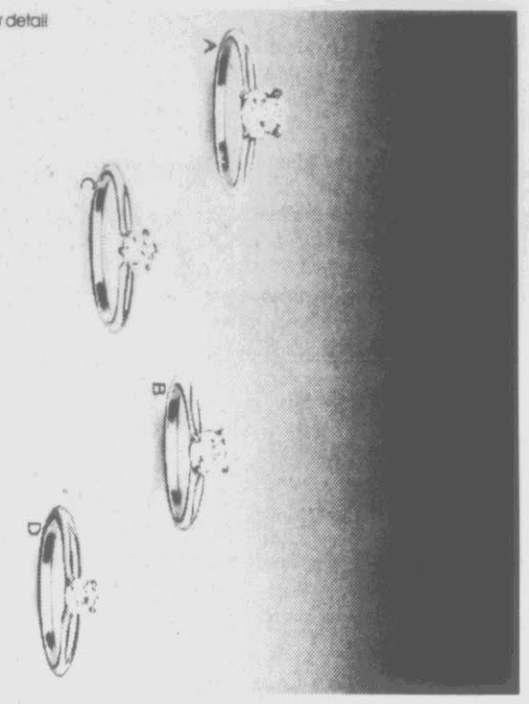

Sponsored by the National Science Foundation and Department and the Department of Health and Human Services, the study deals with the causes and results of year-to-year changes in family income and, within an economic framework, explores many aspects of American family life. It follows the fortunes of the same families over many years, monitoring their economic ups and downs to second generations with their own households.

Findings are reported in a series of annual volumes called "Five Thousand American Families, Patterns of Economic Progress."

Build Anew In United States

PACIFIC PALISADES, Calif. (AP) — Exiled Soviet author Vasily Aksyonov found at least one way that life in America is more restricted than in Russia. He was stopped for driving 75 miles an hour on a wide desert highway on his trip to become a writer in residence at the University of Southern California.

"There is no strict limitation of speed in Russia. I thought I would have difficulty with the California highway patrolman because I was a Russian citizen, but that was not a problem," Aksyonov said. stewet 0jgthen, when we arrived here a few hours later, I was told for the first time my Russian citizenship had been taken away," said Aksyonov.

When two of the Metropole group were banished from the Soviet writers' union, Aksyonov and two others resigned from the union in protest.

"My wife and I left Russia in July. It was clear they wanted me to leave. We were granted Soviet passports, and as the passports were issued they warned me, 'You can keep your citizenship if you have good behavior.' When I asked what they meant by bad behavior, they wouldn't elaborate."

Aksyonov and his wife, Maya, each have one child. Aksyonov's son, Alex, is an art student in Moscow. His wife has a daughter, Elena Greenberg, who emigrated with the couple last summer and lives in Seattle.

"My son couldn't follow me. He has his mother and grandmother there. He has his art and his art friends. But I'm anxious whether in the future I'll see him or not."

A possible cause of the Soviet withdrawal of his citizenship was recent publication outside of Russia of Aksyonov's "The Burn." He said it was a partly autobiographical novel of a writer's existence in modern Russia with flashbacks to Stalinist repression of the 1930s.

Upcoming is publication of "Crimea Island," which Aksyonov described as a tragi-comic novel about a fictitious island off Russia — somehow not overrun by the Red Army during the 1917 Communist revolution. He said his mythical island developed in the 20th century into "a prosperous, cosmopolitan mixture of languages and cultures — but still most people were remaining eager for reunion with big brother Russia."

Aksyonov said he didn't want to leave, and would like to return someday if a "thaw, or springtime occurs." But he said in recent years the atmosphere for writers in Russia had been more like the repressive purges under Joseph Stalin — with dissident writers now exiled rather than sent to Siberia.

Most Traffic On Interstates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Interstate highway system in the United States, which totals 40,000 miles, comprises only 1 percent of all paved roads in the country but carries 20 percent of the total traffic, according to The Road Information Program, a nonprofit highway research agency.

The system is 98 percent complete, but the Program says that many of the unfinished spots are in heavily populated urban areas, adding to traffic tie-ups in those cities.

The lost art.

A simple, but disturbing change has been sweeping our country's supermarkets. The result has flattened bread loaves, smashed potato chips, crushed eggs, and caused untold misery among fresh fruit and vegetable lovers everywhere.

The bag boy is gone.

Remember the bag boy? As your purchase was recorded, he was busy placing heavy items like cans in the bottom of your bags. Then lighter items. Until at last, the delicate things like eggs were gently placed on top. In fact, the best bag boys even checked your eggs to make sure they were whole when they left the store.

And, immediately after paying your bill, you turned, and . . . terriffic! . . . there's a smiling young man with your groceries in hand, ready to proceed to your car. No waiting for the checkout person to load your bags. No smashed tomato surprises. No extra trips to the car carrying loads of groceries!

Alas! The bag boy is nearing extinction. Yet, at Overton's he flourishes. And, every hour that Overton's is open, a covey of bagging artisans practice their craft.

Experience it. Come to Overton's, buy several heavy items and one bag of potato chips. Witness as the chips are delicately placed on top and your shopping bag maneuvered into your car. Collect your smile and thanks, then take your groceries home. And, as you open your bag and remove your first whole potato chip, you may declare a lost art found.

Come see us.

LBJ's Son-In-Law Is Planning

By JOHN H. MORGAN

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Charles Robb's first stint in the national limelight came in his storybook role as "Prince Charming" of the Lyndon Johnson White House. Whether he has another probably depends on Virginia voters.

After a lifetime of unbroken success, the suave, self-assured Robb finds himself isolated as the highest elected Democratic official in a state where the Republicans reign virtually supreme.

Robb, however, apparently views the office as a springboard to what one close aide said could include a bid for the vice presidential nomination as early as 1984.

"Everyone assumes I'm committed to a political life and I wouldn't want to dissuade them at the moment," he said in an interview. "I'm not cocky, but I also don't suffer from a lack of self-confidence."

His attitude is understandable.

After capturing the hand of Lynda Bird Johnson while a Marine color guard at the White House, Robb served a highly decorated tour of combat duty in Vietnam. He went on to graduate with honors from the University of Virginia Law School and was successful in his first — and thus far, only — attempt at elective office.

Detractors, however, maintain Robb is virtually untested as a politician. They snidely suggest his biggest asset is his physical resemblance to some telegenic Ken doll.

"I think he's probably a nice guy — a genuinely nice guy," said state Sen. Wiley Mitchell Jr., R-Alexandria, minority whip of the Senate where Robb presides. "But I don't think there's any way to tell what his substance is.

"Chuck is one of the few pepple who've managed to get into high elected office without serving somewhere else first," Mitchell said. "And given the limited duties of the lieutenant governorship, there's been no way to measure his creativity or political philosophy. He's a question mark."

While he was a law student, he was apparently not above using his father-in-law's influence to further his own. Robb managed to be elected as president of the school's Legal Forum, which required him to line up speakers at the group's dinners.

"He had Johnson call up (Supreme Court Justice) Thurgood Marshall to come and speak," recalled one State Capitol source. "Needless to say, Marshall spoke. And there were others on the list that got the same calls."

An old classmate knew another side of Robb. "Chuck wasn't presumptuous in the classroom," he said. "He wasn't the type to raise his hand to answer a question, although he was always prepared when called upon."

White House insiders during the LBJ years said the saga of Robb and Lynda began when they were chance bridge partners. Later, he became her official escort at social functions. Many of their subsequent dates took place inside the White House gates because the intensely shy Lynda abhorred publicity.

Soon after the honeymoon, during which the newlyweds suffered the presence of Secret Service agents, Robb was on his way to Vietnam. And it was there that Robb went to extreme lengths not to use his father-in-law's influence.

"He was in combat 98 percent of the time," recalled Robb's former battalion commander.

Other Marines portrayed him as being amazingly cool under fire. "The skipper takes too many chances," said one of Robb's platoon leaders at the time.

While the private Robb may remain an enigma, the public Robb has recently begun taking definite shape. He was lambasted last year by the liberal wing of his party for not taking stands on controversial issues, a criticism he hotly denies.

Since then, Robb has espoused a philosophy that seems a curious hybrid between populism with conservativism, an outlook that defies any label.

He has taken stands favoring repeal of Virginia's taxes on food and non-prescription drugs. Meanwhile, he supports a balanced federal budget and a constitutional limit on state spending, but has called for increased defense expenditures. And while Robb has endorsed the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, a pet goal of the powerful Virginia Education Association, he raised the same group's ire by opposing collective bargaining for teachers or other public employees.

His stance is a far cry from the Great Society ideals of his father-in-law, but Robb maintained he rarely discussed politics with LBJ.

Regardless of the positions he takes in 1981, however, Robb still must wear the Democratic label in a state that is increasingly considered a GOP stronghold.

Indeed, the party of native son Thomas Jefferson has not won a gubernatorial race since 1966 and Virginia has not been carried by a Democrat in presidential balloting since 1964. The general assembly is the only remaining bastion of the Democrats.

"Clearly, we've had a long dry spell," Robb admitted. "It's the most dismal record of any Democratic party in the nation. If the Democrats in Virginia were to lose badly in 1981, it would pretty well foreclose any victories or any viable candidates for a long time."

But the seemingly stiff odds have not deterred Robb strategists from mapping out a political future for their boss in which the sky is the limit.

Some observers believe that if he's successful in the governor's race, Robb could be catapulted into a position as one of the stellar young scions of the national party.

"There's no doubt that being governor would put him in a prominent position," said State Sen. Clive DuVal, D-McLean, one of Robb's closest allies. "I should think it would give him a good start up the ladder. He'd make an excellent governor, too, because he's a moderate and he's fiscally prudent."

Robb already moves in lofty circles. He is next-door neighbor of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., in Washington's poshest Virginia suburbs. He is a former associate in the law firm of political kingmaker Edward Bennett Williams. He is the dinner partner of notables ranging from Kissinger to Sol Linowitz.

One surprising obstacle could come from his wife, who some Robb insiders said would balk if he seeks any office beyond that of governor.

"She was disappointed when I left the Marine corps," he conceded. "She learned how tough it can be to be the child of a politician.

KC Eyes Bigger St. Pat Parade

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Organizers of Kansas City's St. Patrick's Day parade, which began only seven years ago, claim this year's march will be second in size in this country only to the parades in New York and Chicago.

Organizers forecast at least 200 marching units and more than last year's record attendance of 100,000 in the downtown area. The first "parade" seven years ago included five marchers led by a rider on goatback.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MAR. 15, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Much confusion is in your mind today. But if you accept new and modern methods you can turn trouble into interesting opportunities. Don't force any issues with family members.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Follow only accepted rules for handling any problems you may have, whether private or otherwise, and avoid trouble.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A good day to be with influential persons who can help you in your line of endeavor. Take no chances with your health.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A new project you have in mind needs more research before you put it in operation. Allow time to engage in favorite hobby.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may be thinking you are not progressing as you should, but keep plugging and you will gain your goal.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Listen to advice of a family tie who has your best interest at heart. Make long-range plans for the days ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Good day to visit friends and relatives for mutual enjoyment. Be more precise in handling your personal affairs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Forget a worrisome affair and delve into something more practical and profitable. Make plans to improve your social life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good day to study facts and figures so you can advance in career affairs. Strive for increased harmony at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Contact friends in the afternoon and discuss an important plan you have in mind. Allow time for recreational activities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Perfect day for getting out to new activities and perking up your enthusiasm. Relax at home tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Listening to the suggestions of an expert can be most helpful to you now. Make this a most worthwhile day.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Follow your hunches early in the day because they are likely to be off target later. Take no risks with your reputation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can comprehend a task easily, so be sure to give as fine an education as possible along the chosen field of endeavor. Don't neglect sports early in life and give religious studies that are helpful.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is excellent for making plans to expand your activities, personal interests and gain more benefits. Be sure to compliment others if and when it is deserved.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day to discuss new ideas with associates. Any delays should be accepted philosophically. Take needed exercise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan your affairs on a more satisfying basis and have more security. A new contact could give you good suggestions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Have talks with partners so you can take advantage of a new situation that arises. Analyze your progress in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Stop putting off tasks at hand and gain more profits. Take treatments to improve health and appearance.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Jump into regular routines without delay and get much accomplished, whether of a business or personal nature.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be more willing to compromise at home for the sake of harmony. Study projects that could give you added income.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are now able to get the support of associates in a new project you have in mind. Use extreme care in motion today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Analyze your financial status and find better ways of adding to abundance. Listen to what an expert has to suggest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go after your aims in a most positive way and gain excellent results. Strive for increased happiness. Be poised.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take steps to improve the quality of your life. Let your conversation with others be quiet and cultured.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Sociability is the keynote today and much can be accomplished. You are able to gain a personal aim at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good day to gain the respect of higher-ups who can give you the support you need. Many benefits can come your way now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can comprehend matters of great importance, so be sure to give the best education you can afford. One here who will have a great interest in religious matters. A sports-minded person in this chart.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—Our game is completely split about a fundamental question: If you decide to lead from three low cards in a suit, should you lead the top, middle or bottom card? —J. Chamberlain, Bronx, N.Y.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—Your game is in much the same state as the bridge world—there are sharp differences of opinion on this issue.

The old standby is to lead top-of-nothing, and that is still my choice. I like to know that when partner leads a low card in the suit, he either has at least four cards or an honor in the suit. On occasion, of course, I won't be sure whether partner holds two or three cards in the suit, but I think that that is the lesser of evils.

The modern tendency is to lead low from three cards. Adherents of this school argue just the reverse of the way I do—they feel that it is more important to differentiate between a doubleton and a tripleton than it is to know whether partner has at least four cards in the suit or is leading from an honor. However, if you are leading a suit that partner has bid and you have supported, they, too, lead the top card—partner will expect three cards from you from your raise.

The one lead I cannot recommend is the one known as MUD—from middle, up, down. All that the lead of the middle card accomplishes is to leave partner completely muddled about your holding until the second round of the suit has been played. By then he may have had to make a crucial decision with nothing to guide him.

Q.—Under what circumstances might it be correct to take an anti-percentage line in the play of the hand?—J.D.K, Miami Beach, Fla.

A.—In rubber bridge it is seldom right. The only time to go against the percentages is if you have some clue from the bidding or play that suggests the percentage line won't work.

In team competition or duplicate pairs, there are other circumstances that might make you take an anti-percentage line. Suppose you judge that you are about 10 IMPs behind in a team game with two boards to play, and you arrive in a slam that depends on losing only one trick from this combination:

Dummy
Q 10 9 5
Declarer
A 8 7 4

The percentage play is to run the ten and, if it loses, to repeat the finesse. You can presume, if the declarer at the other table is competent, that that is the way he tackled the suit. You have a chance to win the match if you take the inferior line of laying down the ace of the suit and leading towards the queen. If your left-hand opponent has both missing honors, you will make the slam while the percentage line fails. You would make the same play if you were looking for a swing in a duplicate pairs event.

Divers Plan Recovering World War II Planes

By CARRICK LEAVITT

SEATTLE (UPI) — The wreckage of more than 100 World War II vintage airplanes — including the once sparkling white flagship of Admiral Chester Nimitz — is strewn across bottom of Lake Washington.

"It's just a graveyard out there," said diving enthusiast Larry D. Allen, of the 22-mile-long lake which borders Seattle's eastern edge.

Allen, 39, heads Underwater Historical Research and Recovery Foundation, a non-profit group of six amateur divers. They have begun work to raise this spring the first of several well-preserved bombers they have located and hope to turn over to museums.

The planes were lost during training and routine Navy operations on the lake, mostly during the 1940s and '50s.

"All divers dream of finding something like this," said Allen. "This is a treasure, but it belongs to everybody — to all the public and that's what we want to do, bring it up for them."

Their first effort centers on a twin-engine PBM-5 Martin Mariner gullwing patrol bomber, about the size of a Boeing 737, but built to land and fly off the water. The plane sank in the south end of Lake Washington in May 1949 and rests in 70 feet of water.

Navy records show that it was about 1,000 feet offshore when a gust of wind pushed it into a log piling and snapped off a pontoon. The plane rolled over and sank as all seven of its crew scrambled to safety.

The plane must be freed of silt that partially covers it, raised in slings and barged to shore. The recovery cost may be $50,000. It would be turned over to the Seattle-based Pacific Museum of Flight for restoration display, Allen said.

Museum director Howard Lovering completed signing of documents Feb. 5 which released the bomber from the Navy to his care.

Interest and even competition for the airplane was high because there is only one other PBM known to be in existence. Owned by the Smithsonian Institute, it is on display at the Pima Air Museum in Tucson, Ariz.

The biggest prize of all is the personal plane of Chester Nimitz, the Pacific's five-star Admiral of the Fleet.

A white-painted PBM-3 Martin Mariner with Nimitz's flag painted on the tail and fully decked out inside, including brass fittings — the aircraft was lost in 1946.

It was moored to a buoy when a gust of wind whipped broke the plane loose. It sank when wind-whipped waves poured through its open doors, Allen said.

Allen's fellow divers include an electronic technician, a carpenter, a plumbing estimator, a truck driver and a blue print company executive. They have spent hundreds of hours finding the approximate locations of the plane wrecks in the lake.

Among those they have information on are a PBY Navy float bomber, at least six fighters, three more PBM Martin Mariners, a four-engine PB4Y2 land-based plane (about the size of a DC-6) and two single-engine Corsair gullwing fighters.

"We are not in it to make money," Allen said, "but only to recover our costs through donations and the help of people wanting to see them in museums."

Right Of Eminent Domain Leaves Its Heartbreaks

By MARK CRANE
Associated Press Writer

MANALAPAN, N.J. (AP) — Margaret Davison cried as she watched bulldozers rip apart the house her parents struggled to build 30 years ago in this diverse community of old farms and new residential developments.

Almost seven years have past, but she still cries over the loss of her girlhood home — leveled because it stood in the right-of-way of a new highway project that probably will never be constructed.

Government arguments about the greater good of society taking precedence over an individual's wishes mean little to a woman who blistered her hands using a drill press to help her parents build the house from the ground up after World War II.

"It hurt us. But if the government was actually going to build the roadway, then taking our land would have served some purpose," she says. "But no road will ever be built there. This is just plain foolishness.

"Thank God my parents were dead before the New Jersey Turnpike Authority came around," she says, sobbing and crying as she talks.

The authority finally declared the Alfred E. Driscoll Expressway project dormant last year after almost a decade of planning, legal battles and land acquisitions that totalled $17 million. Now the authority is preparing to put the lands up for public sale, reneging on a promise to give the former owners first option to buy.

"I don't want it now," Mrs. Davison says. "That land was our homestead."

Even if Mrs. Davison and her neighbors wanted the property, they probably couldn't afford it.

Land values have increased significantly in the past seven years and some parcels have doubled or tripled in value since the authority purchased 100 tracts of land from some 30 or 40 owners along a 38-mile strip from Toms River to North Brunswick.

And the initial buy-back offer was retracted by the authority, which decided instead to seek top dollar for the land at a public auction.

Cost estimates escalated from $315 million to $475 million over the years for the project, which would have linked the turnpike with the Garden State Parkway and eased traffic congestion on Routes 1 and 18.

The project finally was shelved, primarily because Gov. Brenden T. Byrne opposed the roadway for economic and environmental reasons.

Less than 15 percent of the right of way had been acquired when the project was pronounced dead, say Turnpike Authority lawyers.

"We learned all about eminent domain," says Joan Simcox, whose family was forced to sell a farmhouse and 11 acres of land for about $74,000 in 1974. "Now, just four acres in that area sell for well over $100,000.

"We didn't want to sell but no one could fight them," she says. "And we tried every angle we could think of."

Herbert I. Olarsch, the authority's senior attorney for land acquisition, says he has sympathy for those who were forced to sell their land, but he says the authority was "more than fair."

"Everyone always wants as much money as possible," he says. "But we paid fair market value and no one was forcibly evicted."

Olarsch believes the authority will have a difficult time selling the land at an auction. He referred to the tracts as "a strip of land in the middle of no place. Most of it is land-locked."

When the authority first attempted to buy the land in the fall of 1973, property owners stormed Township Hall and demanded a hearing.

Town officials wanted to know how the authority could offer residents $2,300 an acre when land was selling at between $5,000 and $7,000 an acre throughout the town.

Authority officials said they could offer no more than fair market value as determined by appraisers, and the meeting broke down into emotional outbursts and name-calling.

"It wasn't that big an issue in town. Few people cared about what was happening," says Theresa R. Enright, township tax assessor. "The turnpike was taking land, but it wasn't near any of the new developments and that's where the votes were.

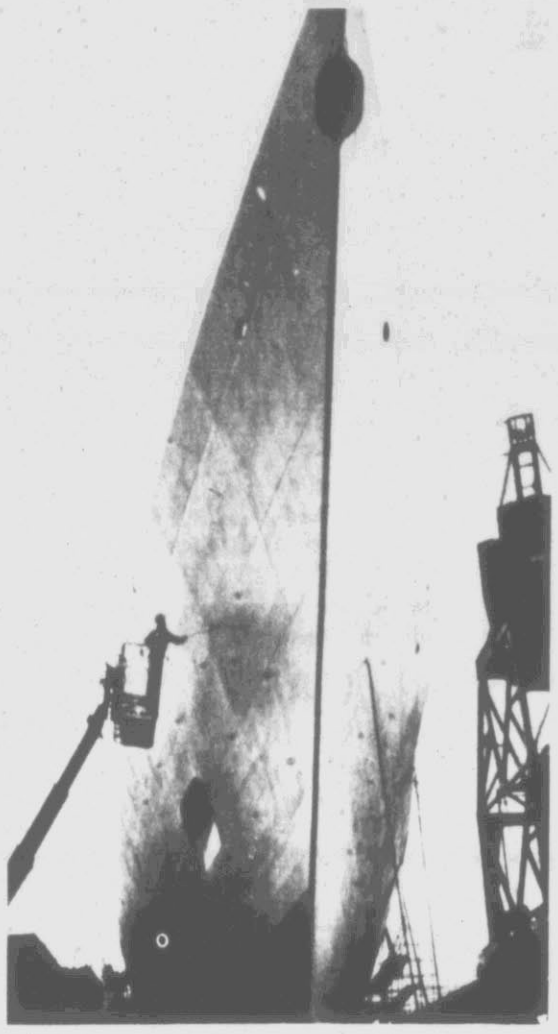

"The turnpike took land from the older residents, mostly farmers. And many people just gave in on the first offer," she says.

Manalapan was a farm town until the late 1960s when developers put up housing units at a fever pitch. The population skyrocketed from 3,990 in 1960 to 14,000 in 1970 and almost 20,000 in 1980.

Olarsch says the law of eminent domain "gives government a big stick and we have to handle it carefully. We're very sensitive and concerned but it was the legislature that set the road alignment.

"What is in the public interest is greater than the individual interest," he says.

"That's hard for some people to accept."

Three Meetings Will Address Stress Problems

Three meetings featuring speakers who will address topics relating to stress are planned for successive Thursdays at the Recreation and Parks administrative building on Cedar Lane, beginning March 19.

The meetings are sponsored by the Parents Advisory Council for Children with Special Needs, Community Schools Program, Greenville City Schools, Pitt County Mental Health Center, and the Mental Health Association.

On March 19, Dr. Sam Williams of the Pitt Mental Health Clinic will discuss "Stress and Distress in Ourselves and Others," while the March 26 session will have Dr. Hal Shigley of the Eastern TEACCH Center addressing "Dealing with Stress as a Parent of a Child with Special Needs."

On April 2, David Mills of the Department of Public Instruction and Shigley will discuss "Coping Together-Parents and Professionals in Partnership."

Each session is planned from 12 noon until 1 p.m. and is aimed at parents of children with special needs and interested professionals.

An extended session is also scheduled for April 2 from 1-3:30 p.m. for those who are able to stay. "Less Stressful Communications" will be the topic for the extended session, which will serve as a communication workshop for parents and professionals.

Interested persons are invited to bring lunch and attend the "talk sessions." Sandwiches and drinks will be available for purchase at the meeting.

Intrigued By Darwin's Life

By MICHAEL HUDSON

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Author Irving Stone admits he turned to biographical novels when he failed at plays, short stories and fiction.

"The two things I always liked to do in college were writing and research, so I finally combined the two," he said during a visit here.

The result was "Lust For Life," Stone's biographical novel about artist Vincent Van Gogh. After being rejected by 17 publishers, an 18th published the book and it has become an all-time best-seller.

Now, 46 years and 25 biographical books later, Stone has written "The Origin" (Doubleday), the story of naturalist Charles Darwin, whose evolutionary theories radically changed the way man looks at himself.

Stone and his wife, Jean, researched "The Origin," for 2½ years and then Stone spent another 2½ years writing the book.

Stone said he found Darwin interesting because "he was a carefree, happy-go-lucky boy who really didn't want to do anything. He was a mediocre student who couldn't make up his mind what he wanted to do with his life."

But that all changed after 1832 when as an amateur naturalist, Darwin began a five-year world tour on the H.M.S. Beagle. He returned with a beginning reputation, a priceless collection of rare and unknown plants and creatures, and a set of notebooks containing the germ of an idea about the origin of the species.

A quiet and gentle man who hated argument and criticism, Darwin knew that the publishing of his master work would launch a storm of controversy and break up many old friendships. Worry over this resulted in a variety of largely psychosomatic illnesses prior to the book's publishing which he tried to cure with a variety of quack cures.

The work came out and the predicted storm of controversy erupted, but Darwin found strong support from men like Thomas Huxley.

Spring's Early Bouquet Of Color

In the last days of February and during the first two weeks of March, the first harbinger of spring is a bouquet of brilliant flowers, wild and cultivated.

Weeks before hardwood trees put forth their new cover of green leaves, ground flowers, shrubs and trees color the still wintry looking landscape of bare fields and forests in vivid yellows, reds, pinks, purples and snowy whites.

Golden yellow is the most dominant of early spring colors with daffodils, forsythia and modest dandelions coming into full flower early in March.

The paper-thin petals of Japanese flowering quince add a touch of sparkling red, and in yards and forests maple trees, covered with showers of catkins that range from ruby to burgandy, sometimes russet, glow in the sunlight.

In sunny corners of yards and especially on ditch banks, the purple of clustered violets carpet stretches of dark, moist earth.

Graceful branches of spirea and sturdy branches of pear trees provide luminous whites, and peach trees put forth an exquisite show of pale pink flowers.

After months of winter's gray, nature's annual display of its rainbow of flowering color never ceases to bring delight with its beauty and its promise of the full green of spring just around the corner.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The SolarWay

A Passive Solar Masterpiece

By Jerry Bishop

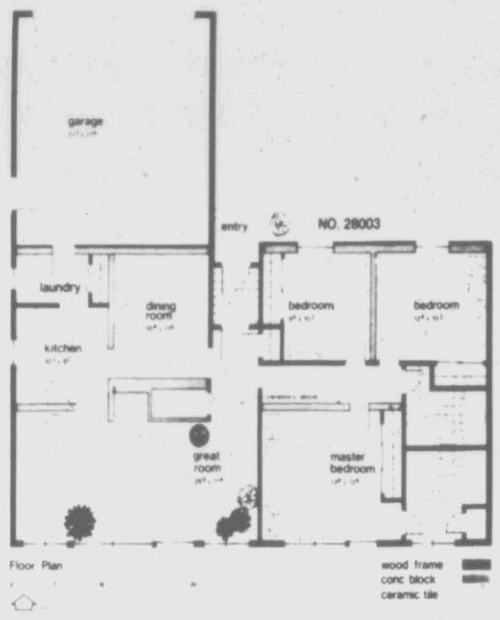

This passive solar home is a modified ranch design with over 1,500 square feet of living area highlighted by a Great Room with a brick-accented wood burning stove. The SolarWay has 3 bedrooms, all featuring large closets, 2 baths, a private bath for the master bedroom, and a formal dining room strategically placed with easy access from the kitchen, also adjacent to the kitchen is a convenient laundry room.

The SolarWay is designed for a flat site with a north driveway access to the 2-car garage.

Among the energy conserving features are 2 x 6 exterior walls with R-19 insulation, an air-lock entry and earth berming. In Indianapolis, about 62% of space heating needs will be provided by passive solar gain through south facing windows and a large bank of clerestory windows.

In the Indianapolis area, The SolarWay, would cost approximately $64,000 without lot and basement based on Spring, 1980 construction costs.

Revolution Seen In New Finishings In Furniture

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Next time you visit a furniture store, take a look around at the variety of colors, glossiness and styles of finish on wood furniture on the floor.

You may be surprised to discover that a large number of different types of finish are on view. This variety represents a revolution in the way furniture is finished, according to the technologists responsible.

Today, furniture finish is not merely a reflection of the type of wood used in the piece. Instead, it is designed in the same way that other aspects of the piece are designed, to appeal to consumers.

Though most consumers may still be thinking in terms of "natural" finishes, in which the basic color and grain of the wood used in the piece is simply brought out with varnish, shellac or oil, the furniture they see on store floors is probably the result of between 20 and 36 separate steps in a finishing process that can completely change the character of the wood beneath.

As with most revolutions, this one had a reason for coming into being.

"Using today's technology, we are able to create an exciting piece of furniture where the basic wood we are working with is just not that exciting," explained Ralph Fosner, chief color stylist for Guardsman Chemical Coatings, Inc., a finish design firm and supplier to the furniture industry.

Fosner says the demand for fine furniture veneers is now so great that the cost of first class veneers has risen astronomically and supply has diminished. Consequently, the finisher's arts have been developed to create allure in an average piece of veneer or to make a wood composite surface look as good as wood veneer.

The revolution in furniture finishing is also a product of changing consumer taste, said George Coffin Jr., who is in charge of finishes and graphic design at Drexel Heritage Furnishings. Prior to the mid-60s, finishes on most new furniture were antiseptic, pristine, perfectly clear and clean. Today, most furniture is full of highlights, varied, lively, he said.

Coffin credits the influence of some department stores plus more sophisticated consumers for the change. Stores such as Bloomingdale's in New York began buying furniture in Italy and Spain with deeply varied, antiqued finishes. Their customers liked what they saw and bought. This led domestic manufacturers in the industry to create such finishes, he explained.

At the same time, Americans were becoming better traveled. They were learning to appreciate the fine, old furniture they saw in their European travels.

It's a long step from starting out to create furniture with more depth to today's furniture finishing room where prototypes of each new furniture style are sent so that a special finish can be designed to complement that style. Today, though, finish is one of the most sensitive, most closely guarded and most debated aspect of each new furniture design. This is because it has been shown that finish directly affects saleability.

Industry statistics are filled with examples of a furniture grouping that was not selling well. A change of finish then brings about a dramatic rise in sales, said Fosner.

The technology of furniture finishing is not greatly different from the arts of the past. A depth and richness is developed by layering one color over another and then by selectvely removing some of the color bywiping it off, explained Fosner. But other methods that affect finish are a departure.

One technique whose use is growing rapidly, for example, is the practice of gravuring wood to make it look better than the original. Gravuring is a form of photographic printing which superimposes the grain of any of about 15 types of wood on a base wood, which can be different.

"Gravuring can make a printed grain that looks better than most originals," said Coffin.

Sice gra ure techniques can be used to create the look of wood grain on a composite product as well as on largely featureless wood, they result in furniture that has greater eye appeal at much lower prices than would be required if the actual veneer had been used.

Despite a lack of consumer acceptance of gravured or printed veneers in the past, more manufacturers have begun using the technique, especially for back and end panels on wood furniture. These engraved components used in combination with wood solids and wood veneers bring down the cost of furniture without being noticeable, according to Fosner.

What used to be luxuries for many families are now necessities — or, at least, appear to be.

High on the list of items falling into that category are room air conditioners, which is what we use when we do not need or cannot afford — or, for some other reason, do not want — a central air conditioning system.

Air conditioning, has become an integral part of our lifestyle, far more so than we realize unless we deliberately think about it. Consider just one example: The vast computer operations in every phase of life could not proceed satisfactorily without air conditioning.

Whether you have or are just contemplating the purchase of one or more room air conditioners, here are some facts you should know:

A room air conditioner should be the proper size for the area it is intended to cool. It usually is better to buy a model that tends to the side of having less cooling capacity than too much. That's because an air conditoner with too much cooling capacity will cool an area quickly, then shut off before it has time to control humidity. The proper size will operate a much larger percentage of the time, controlling both temperature and humidity.

When getting ready to buy a room air conditioner, measure the room or area carefully. Take the measurements to your dealer and ask him to use his chart and cooling estimate table to determine your needs. He probably will give you a range of cooling capacities from which to choose, which is your key to select from the lower end of that range.

To cut down on operating costs, look for a model in the lower cooling capacity range with a higher efficiency rating. Efficiency is expressed in an Energy Efficiency Rating, usually signified by EER. The higher the number, the more efficient the air conditioner. While an EER of 7.5 is considered high efficiency, ratings can go somewhat higher in more costly models.

The warning about buying a room air conditioner that is not too large for its intended coverage area does not mean you should get one too small, since that will result in it running too much, obviously a wasteful method of cooling. When you get the air conditioner, learn how to clean the coils and change or clean the filter. To run at optimum efficiency, the unit must be free of dust and dirt.

A window air conditioner should not be placed in a sunny window facing west or south if at all possible. Instead, it should be positioned so the afternoon sun will not hit it. Otherwise, the sun strikes the coil and heats it up, reducing the cooling capacity of the unit.

An effective way to save energy with your air conditioner this year is to set the thermostat so the room temperature is somewhat higher than in past years. You'll still have a cooler area, but for every degree of cooling that you give up, you will save about 5 percent on energy. Be sure, too, to close heating ducts and fireplace flues during the summer to keep cool air from escaping from the room.

(Home do-it-yourselfers will find useful tips on many subjects by reading Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending 50 cents plus a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to this newspaper at P.O. Box 5, Teaneck, N. J. 07666.)

Gardening Questions

Q. We have just built a new house, the architecture is rustic contemporary. Any ideas on landscaping around the foundation which we can do ourselves? (E.P., Swansboro)

A. You can avoid many landscaping mistakes by considering the following ideas. First, don't think that you must surround the house completely with shrubs. Second, try to create and enhance a pleasing entrance by incorporating the walk and drive into your landscape plan. Third, consider slow-growing varieties of evergreens and possibly a large bed of groundcovers. Native plants, such as wax myrtle and salt cedar in your area, often make good choices. Fourth, try to unite varieties of plants. In other words, don't plant "one of each" around the house. Finally, consider how much time and money you want to spend on landscaping. If both are limited, choose a low maintenance landscape plan. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticultural specialist)

Q. My apple and pear trees suffered last year from fire blight. Any suggestions for preventing a reoccurence this year? (R.T., Rocky Mount)

A. Once established, fire blight is difficult to control. Here are some suggestions which may help. Remove all cankers and blighted twigs before growth starts in the spring. Make cuts four to six inches below evidence of dead tissue. Remove newly infected twigs and shoots, but be careful in doing so. Make cuts 10 to 12 inches beyond evidence of disease. Sterilize cutting tools between each cut with a mixture of 10 percent Chlorox and 90 percent water. Control sucking insects, such as aphids, which can carry the bacteria that cause fire blight. Do not use insecticides during bloom because of the need to protect bees. You can use agricultural streptomycin during bloom. Follow label directions. A final suggestion is to remove watersprouts and try to hold down succulent growth, which is highly susceptible to fire blight. (D.F. Ritchie, extension plant pathologist)

Q — There is a crack between the cap and the flue at the top of our chimney. I didn't think too much about it, but have been advised that the opening may admit water to the masonry around the flue liner and now I would like to repair it. Can you tell me how to go about doing it? It is not a large crack, but I wouldn't call it a small crack either.

A. — If the crack were very small, which you said it isn't, you could get by merely by filling it with a special concrete crack sealer. But you had better play safe by using a mortar mix and a concrete bonder. First, clean the crack of any loose mortar. Wet the area thoroughly, then apply some concrete bonder with a paint brush. When it becomes tacky, apply a mix compound of the bonder and ready-mixed mortar, following the directions on the container of bonder. Make this repair when the temperature is at least 45 degrees Fahrenheit.

Q. — Many years ago I used a large drum sander to sand a floor before refinishing it. I recall that I had a lot of trouble controlling the big machine, which tended to pull forward as I was using it. I am a small person weighing only 120 pounds. I have to do a similar job again and wonder whether there is anything I should know to give me better control of the sander?

A. — Not very much. I once saw a professional loop a rope around his waist and tie the ends to the handle of the machine. This undoubtedly lessened some of the strain on the man's body, but he was a fairly big man and this might not work for you. Sorry I can't give you a certain solution.

Q. — I want to make a cedar closet and have a set of plans for doing so. There is nothing in the instructions about how to care for the closet after it is completed. Also, it doesn't say what kind of finish should be put on the wood. What is your advice?

A. — Nothing should be put on the wood. Any kind of finish will seal in the cedar fumes and make the closet ineffective as a moth repeller. The only maintenance necessary is an occasional wiping with a slightly damp cloth to remove dust, since even dust can prevent the fumes from escaping readily. Every year or two — when the cedar fumes are barely noticeable — sand the wood. This will open the pores to let out the fumes. Before doing any sanding, remove all clothes from the closet. Also, vacuum the closet before putting back the clothes. Remember that a cedar closet works properly only when the fumes are kept inside the closet. So there should be a tight latch, plus rubber or vinyl weatherstripping along the door edges. And do not store any clothes in the closet which have not been thoroughly cleaned and aired. Cedar fumes repel moths; they do not kill them.

Seeking New Generation Of Steam Locomotives

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Maybe the "Whoooooo, Whoooooo!" that pierced the air amid thick plumes of black smoke has been consigned to the dustbins of memory.

But if Ross E. Rowland Jr. has his way, the haunting echoes of steam locomotives will reverberate across the nation's landscape again.

Rowland is trying to develop a new generation of coal-powered steam locomotives — with the whistle, without the noxious smoke and at half the operating cost of diesel electric engines.

"We are going to produce a locomotive ... that has the potential of cutting the nation's fuel bill by a conservative third and more likely a half," Rowland says. "And since fuel is the railroads' second greatest expense, next to labor, that's a big saving."

American Coal Enterprises Inc. (ACE), a fledgling company started last year by Rowland, a New York-based commodity futures trader, is designing a second-generation coal-powered steam engine to take advantage of the abundance of American coal and its low cost.

By the early 1950s, steam engines, which helped revolutionize travel in the late 19th century and rumbled across the nation for the first half of the 20th, were replaced by the more efficient and cleaner diesel-powered electric engines.

But with fuel costs soaring and coal in new-found favor, its use on the rails once again seems practical.

According to a recent study done for Rowland by West Virginia University's Energy Research Center, U.S. railroads in 1979 used 4.3 billion gallons of diesel fuel, or 110 million barrels — 6.2 percent of all diesel and heating oil used — at a cost of $3.66 billion.

The new, computerized locomotive would be capable of 70 mph speed, would recycle its steam to water for re-use and be capable of operating for up to 15 hours, and 1,000 miles, at full throttle.

Coal would be carried in three 11-ton closed containers, or packs, per engine.

The ash and coal dust will not be exposed to the atmosphere, and the byproduct will be usable for industrial products.

Rowland and his research team are confident of gaining significant private financial backing and have a lot of people pulling for them.

"We're cautiously open-minded in a favorable way about the prospect," says Daniel Lang, spokesman for the Washington-based Association of American Railroads, whose researchers have met with ACE's designers.

Steven Ditmeyer, associate administrator for research and development of the Federal Railroad Administration in Washington, says, "Diesel is more efficient, but the tradeoff is that coal is cheaper, and we don't have to import it."

He adds, "We're not prepared to say there are going to be steam locomotives running everywhere, but there is a possibility that there will be a steam locomotive running again. Put it this way: there's now a finite chance."

The keys to success, Rowland says, are fuel economy and maintenance and life-cycle costs of the machine. In addition, there is the need to meet the most stringent pollution control requirements, though there are no standards currently for steam locomotives.

Rowland, 40, a longtime railroad buff who founded the American Freedom Train that toured the nation during the 1976 American Bicentennial celebration, says his machine will more resemble a diesel than its steam predecessors, and its coal-and ash-handling system will eliminate "practically all human involvement," he says.

Some coal interests, particularly low-sulfur producers, are ecstatic over the prospect, says Bill Kling, a spokesman for Sen. John R. Warner, R-Va., who is a member of the Senate Energy Committee.

But plans to use low-sulfur coal to minimize sulfur emissions seem to dampen hopes in such high-sulfur coal states as Illinois.

Rowland sees the cost savings as the trump card of his reciprocating steam engine. On paper and in computer analysis it "came out head and shoulders above" such other steam systems as turbine and hydraulic, with "by far the best fuel economy," he says.

The steam whistle will remain, at Rowland's insistence, despite objections of his engineers, who were leery over its associations with the past.

"I said, 'Listen, gentlemen, if you can go out and save the railroads 50 percent of their fuel costs, they'll love the whistle.'

"To me, it's the sound of freedom."

Data On Computer Discs Is Salvaged

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Information on computer discs damaged in the recent MGM Grand Hotel fire has been retrieved, saving nearly $15 million, according to a management-information publication.

MIS Week reports the work was done by specialists whose expertise is salvaging data presumably lost from a computer due to operator error, power failure or disasters such as the Las Vegas fire.

After the tragedy, the hotel's discs were so damaged that officials were unable to even guess the value of the records.

The publication explains that information normally is derived from a computer by an exchange between two components — recording heads and discs. The head writes data onto or reads data from rapidly spinning discs.

The heads of a computer fly over the discs at miniscule heights of from 20 to 25 microinches, the journal says, but when smoke or other contaminants become lodged in the space it causes instability in the computer.

However, specialists have been able to devise methods of instructing the computer to disregard any blockages resulting from messy heads or discs.

Pre-School Clinic Set

G.R. Whitfield School will hold its pre-school clinic on March 17 from 9 a.m. until 12 noon. Parents are requested to contact the school to receive information blanks and other forms.

Students entering kindergarten must be five years old by October 16, 1981 to be eligible for enrollment. Parents are to bring their child's birth certificate, immunization records and information to the clinic.

Additional information may be obtained by calling the school at 752-6614.

BEAUTY ALERT

The American was in Lone Pine Koala Sanctuary, Brisbane, Australia, recently trying to photograph five koalas for use as a Colorama in Grand Central Terminal here.

For three days, every time he tried to snap their picture, the little animals became lazy and dropped off to sleep. The problem was solved when he placed a young model in the picture, making the koalas more attentive and cooperative. Montanus used some 350 rolls of film while in Australia, shooting wildlife, general scenes and people.

A roof, is a roof,
is a roof!

Poets we're not. Roofers we are.
What we'd like to do, now during our off season, is inspect your roof. We'll check for loose or missing shingles, dried out caulking and rusted flashing.
If your roof is more than a few years old, chances are it could use a going over. If repairs are needed, we'll give you an estimate on doing them, quickly and reasonably.

Guamanians Ponder Where Do They Go From Here

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer

AGANA, Guam (AP) — After almost 300 years of the Spanish sword, 80 years of U.S. Navy commissaries, three years of Japanese control and 10 years of running their own affairs, Guamanians are trying to figure out where they go from here.

"We're in limbo," Gov. Paul Calvo said in referring to the 200 square-mile island's present status as an unincorporated territory of the United States.

Guam, located 6,007 miles west of Los Angeles and 1,593 miles east of Manila, is next door to Asia but is very much America.

The 35-mile-long island, which is the peak of a 40,000-foot undersea mountain, boasts it has the world's biggest McDonald's restaurant. Burger King is here, too, along with Kentucky Fried, Taco Bell, used car lots and six-lane highways.

Eight-cylinder American limousines which guzzle $1.60 a gallon gasoline at the rate of 12 miles to the gallon are used as taxis; there is no public transportation. Guam also has cable television which features week-old tapes of Los Angeles programs complete with commercials.

And the islanders, a mixture of native Chamorro-speakers, Filipinos, Koreans, Japanese and Hawaiians, and some 25,000 U.S. military personnel and their dependents, constantly remind the rest of the world they live in America's westernmost outpost. The sign at Guam Airport welcomes visitors to "Guam U.S.A. The place where America's day begins."

"Guam is America," said the 47-year-old Calvo, who was born in Agana, the capital, and educated at Peacock Military Academy in San Antonio, Texas. He graduated from Santa Clara (Calif.) University in 1958.

But the main hotels on Tumon Bay are Japanese, and so are their customers. More than 75 percent of the 300,000 tourists to Guam last year were Japanese. Japan is only three hours flying time away, compared with 10 to the United States. And it is this distance from mainland U.S.A. that is part of Guam's problem, according to Calvo.

"We are 9,000 miles from Washington. No matter how smart they are, their sensitivity to Guam will be lacking," he said.

Although Guam has been part of the United States since it was bought from Spain in 1898 in a $20 million package deal that included the Philippines and Puerto Rico, the island is sensitive about how neighboring U.S.-administered islands are treated.

Guam is part of the Marianas group, but the northern Marianas — Saipan, Rota and Tinian — have negotiated commonwealth status with the United States, giving them some advantages over Guam in negotiations with other countries.

Other islands, Palau, Yap, Truk, Ponape and Majuro in the Caroline and Marshall groups, have been part of the U.S. Trust Territory of the Pacific since the end of World War II. Upon termination of the trusteeship, the islands will be able to negotiate independently in foreign affairs. This means money for fishing rights, airline landing rights and foreign investment.

Guam has none of these rights and feels frustrated — and dependent.

The island has its own governor, lieutenant governor and 21-seat legislature, collects its own taxes and sends a representative to Congress, although he or she may not participate in House votes. The 110,000 Guamanians are U.S. citizens but may not vote in U.S. elections.

The federal government provides 20 percent of the employment on the island; tourism and the local government supply most of the rest.

There is virtually no significant agriculture or industry. So much of the island was destroyed or damaged in World War II that the government is still struggling to install a workable telephone and power system.

The island's unemployment rate is between 6.5 percent and 7 percent. The average annual per capita income is $4,198.

Opportunities for the islanders are limited. Some 2,000 young people graduate from college or high school each year, but many cannot find work and leave for the mainland.

During a 58-day strike by 700 of the island's 1,600 teachers, which ended March 10, many parents sent their high school-age students to Hawaii or the mainland so they would be able to qualify for college this fall.

Guam also depends on federal government grants for a big chunk of its revenue — $47.8 million in 1979 — and on local U.S. military purchases, which totaled $306 million in 1979.

The military owns one-third of the Singapore-sized island. The Strategic Air Command has B-52s based on Guam and the Navy has long-range reconnaissance aircraft and its Polaris submarine national defense may reverse some defense cutbacks planned for Guam. The island's ship repair facility and its Polaris fleet are scheduled to be phased out in 1981.

Calvo is eager for the United States to base an aircraft carrier at Guam. His government estimates that a carrier's crew and dependents would mean more than $18 million a year to the Guam economy and do much to offset some of Guam's pressing economic problems.

Calvo believes Guam should achieve eventual statehood.

"That is the goal," he said. "Meantime, we want more autonomy. We are at the mercy of congressmen. We have no say."

City Seeks Foreign Aid

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis. (AP) — Figuring their community might get more attention from Washington if it gained some international renown, city officials have appealed to Japan and West Germany for help in the emergency closing of a Mississippi River bridge.

The attempt to seek foreign aid is aimed more at tweaking some noses in the capital than gaining money from abroad, but Mayor James Bittner says he is taking the effort seriously.

The bridge closing was ordered by transportation officials in Wisconsin and Iowa after a four-inch crack was found in a steel plate. The nearest alternate route across the river is about 30 miles north, at Lansing, Iowa.

Businessmen here have been feeling the pinch of the loss of customers from neighboring Iowa.

Terry Burrington, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, helped write the letters requesting assistance from the two countries. He said Thursday the letters were mailed Wednesday to the embassies in Washington.

He declined to disclose the contents, however, saying, "The mayor has decided that we're not going to say anything to anybody until we receive word that the embassies received them." He added that the letters were in good taste and took a positive approach.

Belvoir School Will Register

On March 17 from 8:30 a.m. until 12 noon Belvoir Elementary School will register all pre-school children who will be attending kindergarten next school year.

Children who will be five years old on or before October 16, 1981 are eligible for kindergarten in the fall. Anyone having a child eligible should contact the school (752-6365) to get necessary information for kindergarten registration.

Parents must present the child's birth certificate and immunization record to register a child.

Donahue Hosts Hard-Hitting Special

And it's a show about youngsters. Special youngsters, whose experience with life-threatening illness has helped them develop an extraordinary and uplifting outlook on life.

"This special deals with the challenge of life itself and the drama of life," says its host, Phil Donahue. "It deals with life-threatening and traumatic illnesses — cancer — leukemia — words normally concerned with nightmares, terror and horror. Yet we deal with this subject not in a maudlin, soap opera way but in a human, sometimes humorous, and at all time insightful way. I was impressed with the joy of these youngsters and their families. They have learned how to place the emphasis on living. We can learn from them and take joy from their example."

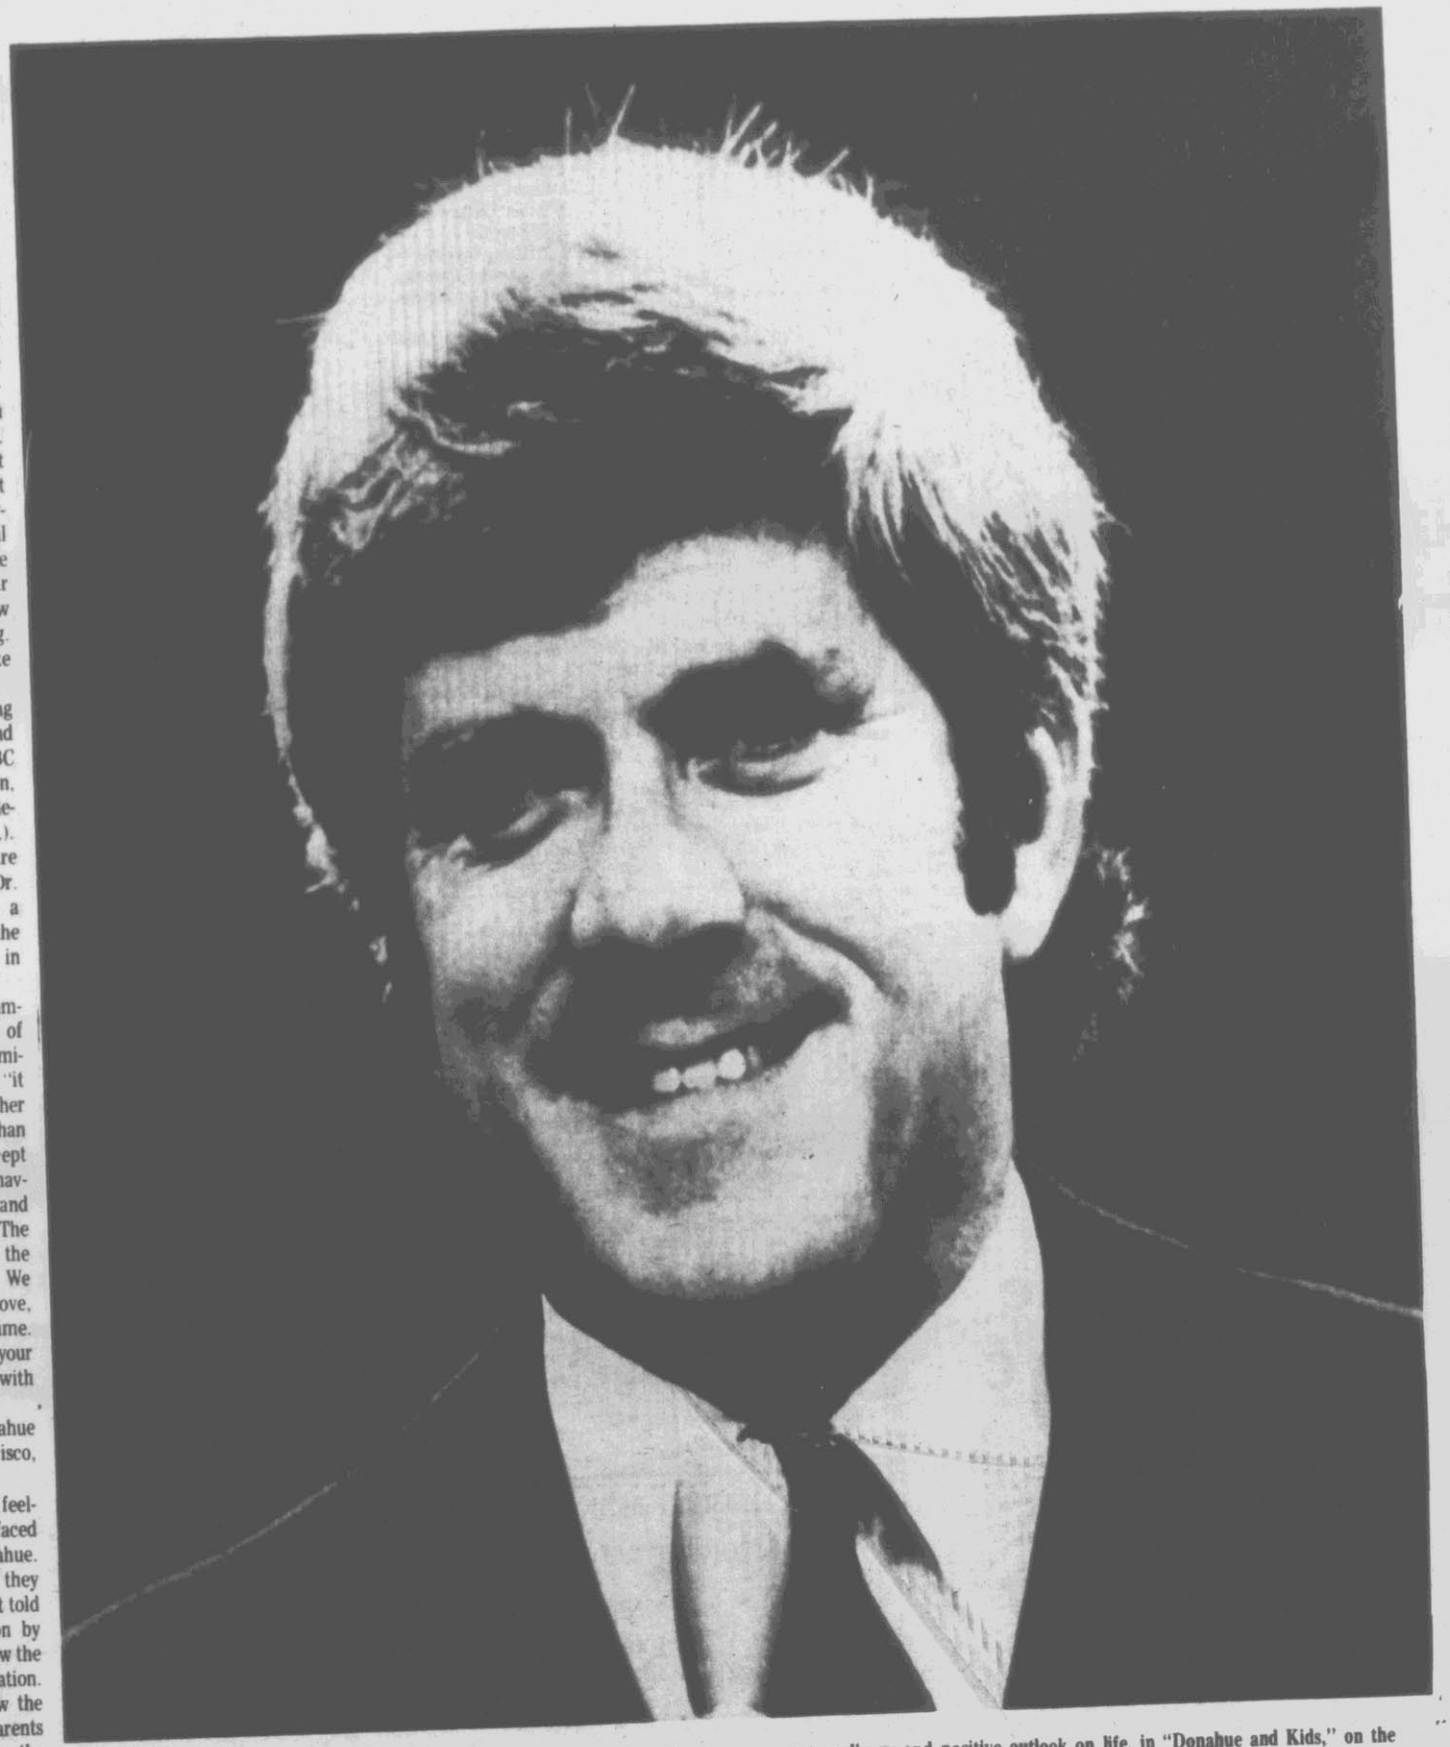

Donahue will be interviewing these unusual youngsters and their families on the next NBC Project Peacock presentation, "Donahue and Kids," to be telecast Monday, Mar. 16 (8-9 p.m.).

Their attitude and outlook are the result of the work of Dr. Gerald G. Jampolsky, M.D., a psychiatrist and founder of the Center for Attitudinal Healing in Tiburon, Calif.

The philosophy that led Jampolsky to change the lives of these youngsters and their families stems from his belief that "it is possible to choose peace rather than conflict, love rather than fear, and that we can accept responsibility for our own behavior. Inner peace is the goal, and the tool for healing is love. The emphasis is on letting go of the past and on forgiveness. We learned that when you give love, you receive it at the same time. By helping others you forget your own pain. You become one with others."

The show, which Donahue taped recently in San Francisco, is hard-hitting.

"We deal with the honest feelings of children and parents faced with these issues," said Donahue. "The children tell us what they felt like when they were first told the truth of their condition by their doctor. We find out how the parents reacted to the situation. And we see and learn how the whole family reacted — parents and siblings — and how the family and doctors became partners in dealing with life-threatning illnesses."

EMMY AWARD winner Phil Donahue interviews young people whose experiences with life-threatening illnesses have helped them develop an extraordinary and positive outlook on life, in "Donahue and Kids," on the Project Peacock series Monday, Mar. 16 (8-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'Zhivago' Set Was Star

OMAR SHARIF and Geraldine Chaplin star in "Dr. Zhivago," Sunday, Mar. 15 (8 p.m.-12 a.m.) on ABC-TV.

One of the most spectacular settings ever created for a motion picture was erected on the outskirts of Madrid, Spain, for the filming of "Doctor Zhivago" (airing Sunday, Mar. 15, 8-12 midnight, on ABC-TV). Some 780 construction workers spent six months building the complex of Moscow streets in which some of the drama's most tumultuous action takes place.

Dominating the giant set — which included 10 acres — was a half-mile-long paved business street, reflecting early 20th century Russia. It was lined with 50 shops and dominated by the famous Kremlin. A tram line for trolley cars of the period was erected, and there was a street in the factory workers' section of the city with a viaduct and railway tracks above it. In addition to these, there was a square featuring a statue of Alexander II on horseback, a police station, a church, three complete interior settings and detailed entranceways to six others.

The force of workers included 210 carpenters, 120 plaster specialists, 60 masons, 25 tubular-steel specialists, 30 painters, 20 electricians, 10 welders and 305 unskilled workmen.

Streets and sidewalks required a total of 65,000 square feet of concrete, four inches thick. Approximately 55,000 hollow bricks were used, and these were held together and surfaced by 97,000 pounds of cement.

Among the details of the huge street setting were well-filled shop windows, each representing a Russian business enterprise. Products were changed to correspond with the advancing years of the story.

Michelle Will Tell

Q: What are the most popular shows on TV? F. SAMUELS, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: The scene changes each week, of course, but among the series that are consistently on the top of the heap are "Little House on the Prairie," "60 Minutes," "Dallas," "Trapper John, M.D.," "M*A*S*H" and "The Love Boat."

Q: Where is the boy who played Jody on "Family Affair"? Is he in another series now? He was one of my favorite child stars. R. THOMPSON, GOLDBORO, N.C.

A: Johnny Whitaker, who portrayed Jody, is now 20 years old, attending college and occasionally appears in segments of TV series as well as in motion pictures. His last time as a 'regular' on a show was NBC's "Sigmund and the Sea Monsters."

Q: Who played the part of Albert Ingalls' 14-year-old girlfriend in a segment of "Little House on the Prairie" titled "Sylvia"? Did the character die? B. MOORE, GREENVILLE, N.C.

A: Talented young actress Olivia Barash portrayed the tragic rape victim in the two-part segment. Yes, the character died. Incidentally, Michael Landon, who wrote the script, says that his research on the subject reveals that there are three times as many rapes as homicides in America, and that most victims are between the ages of 12 and 19.

Q: Why don't they show re-runs of more "Gunsmoke" segments featuring the character who had a limp, Chester Goode? B. ALFORD, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: It's because Dennis Weaver, who played Chester, was only in half of the segments that were filmed. The series was on the air from 1955 to '75, but Dennis left in '64. The only two cast members who lasted throughout "Gunsmoke's" long run were James Arness and Milburn Stone.

Q: I'm writing about Barbara Rucker, who plays Ginny Marshall on "Texas" — is she the same actress who was cast as Rebecca on "Days of Our Lives"? E. CAIN, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: No. Brooke Bundy, now on "General Hospital," played Rebecca. Barbara, however, portrayed Sandy Thompson on "As the World Turns" for four years.

Q: When is "Sanford" coming back on NBC? E. SMITH, HOPE MILLS, N.C.

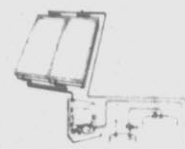

A: "Sanford" has been put 'on hold' by the network, and there's been no announcement concerning the series' future.

Q: How old is the girl who played Tabitha on "Bewitched," and what is she doing now? S. DIXIT, LUMBERTON, N.C.

A: Erin and Diane Murphy, indentical twins, took turns before the cameras as Tabitha. They're now 16, living in California with their parents, and occasionally make commercials.

Rogers Had No Double

One of the most popular performers in the entertainment world today stars in "Kenny Rogers as The Gambler," a telefilm to be rebroadcast Wednesday, Mar. 18 (9-11 p.m.), on CBS. This was the highest-rated TV movie of the 1979-80 season, and one of the highest-rated broadcasts.

Christine Belford, Bruce Boxleitner, Harold Gould, Clu Gulager, Lance LeGauld, Lee Purcell and Ronnie Scribner also star.

This western adventure is set in the Southwest during the 1800s. The script by Jim Byrnes uses as a narrative springboard the lyrics from Kenny's hit single of the same title. In 1979, "The Gambler" won the Song of the Year Award at the 13th annual Country Music Association Awards, and Rogers' album, "The Gambler," was named Album of the Year. Last year, during the 22nd Annual Grammy Awards, Rogers' rendition of the title cut won him the coveted award for Best Country Vocal Performance, Male.

The story concerns Brady Hawkes (Rogers), a cool, steely-eyed professional gambler who plays by the rules and knows the power of a good bluff. Brady sets out by train from El Paso to Yuma, responding to a plea from a son (Scribner) he never knew he had. It is the most dangerous move that Brady has ever made, because he knows that his son's cruel stepfather, Rufe Bennett (Gulager), harbors an abiding hatred of him and will try to ambush him.

Along the way, Brady falls in with Billy Montana, an impetuous young gambler (Boxleitner), and Jennie Reed, a society lady with shady past (Purcell). In separate encounters with the arrogant railroad owner (Gould) in his private car and with a gang of cutthroats in a wayside town, Brady defends Jennie and Billy before having to face his own private showdown with Bennett.

Production has been completed on "Misunderstood Monsters," an animated/live action special for The CBS Library series. Featured in the live action segments is 10-year-old Meeno Peluce.

Problem Explored

Beau Bridges portrays a broken man whose American Dream has collapsed through divorce and who fears losing his children to another man in "The Child Stealer," an orginal two-hour dramatic movie airing Friday, Mar. 20, on ABC-TV. Overcome by jealousy, he decides his only recourse is to abduct his two young daughters and flee the state.

Kidnapping of children by their divorced parents is a current social problem rapidly on the increase, with an estimated 100,000 cases of child stealing a year, according to local, state and federal agencies dealing with this subject. And Bridges believes a strong sense of love is the reason.

"Love is such a strong emotion that it can cause a person to become irrational and do almost anything. 'The Child Stealer' is the story of two people who, because of fears, are unable to communicate. David (Bridges' character) fears the loss of his children and his own spirit of the child within him — leaving him terribly frightened of being left alone.

"People do everything because of love, both negative and positive, and unfortunately, because a parent panics, the children become the innocent victims."

Although admittedly very emotional like his character in "The Child Stealer," Bridges sees his own personal life very together and maintains a secure relationship with his two young sons.

"That's not to say that I would never behave like David. Under the right circumstances, I would probably do anything short of murder to be with the people I love."

Beau chose to do the drama because it was a story worth telling. And he found that the role reaffirmed the importance of children in his life.

"I love kids and I love working with them. Having children on the set is important in this business because I think it brings everything into perspective. All of us have a little bit of the child still within us and being with children, laughing and pretending, allows us to be a child again. And after all, the basis for acting is to make believe and pretend."

Co-starring with Bridges as his ex-wife, Jan, is Blair Brown. David Groh is seen as Jack Farnham, who falls in love with Jan, and Cristina Raines plays Karen, the new love interest in David's life. Portraying the two young daughters are Lauri Hendler as Andrea and Tracey Gold as Pam.

Dawkins: Dr. of the Dunk

Darryl Dawkins is a winner, and he plays on a winning team, the Philadelphia 76ers. This however, doesn't stop him from having fun, and that's why he plays basketball.

The 76ers are involved in a spine tingling race with the Boston Celtics in the Atlantic Division of the National Basketball Association and one would think this kind of pressure would tend to make somebody a little more reflective and quite a bit more tense.

Such is not the case with Darryl Dawkins and Sunday, Mar. 15, at 1 p.m. on CBS-TV, the 76ers will play a crucial game against the New York Knicks in hopes of keeping their slim lead over the Celtics.

The Knicks have gone through some personnel changes and after slumping in the early season they have become quite a respectable basketball team. It is almost assured they won't lay down in front of the 76ers and play dead.

Dawkins' specialty is the slam dunk. He is probably most noted for his smashing of a backboard during the 1979-80 season. He brought the ball down with such force that the glass backboard just shattered, forcing delay of the game, and raising a furor for rule changes.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — "It's like I've died and gone to Pageant Heaven," exclaims an overjoyed BERT PARKS, who's just firmed a deal to host the 1981 MRS. AMERICA PAGEANT. The event, to be held April 3 in Las Vegas, will be syndicated nationally, and about 100 stations have picked it up so far.

LEIGH McCLOSKEY and CHARLENE TILTON may be terribly lovey-dovey while they're filming scenes for "DALLAS." But things are different off-camera. It seems that mail is pouring in for Leigh and Charlene is absolutely furious over this surge of popularity!

You don't see them around town together very often, but one of the "FLAMINGO ROAD" stars, MORGAN FAIRCHILD, and stunt man DAR ROBINSON are obviously enjoying the pleasure of each other's company.

JOHN TRAVOLTA will be portraying singer JIM MORRISON, the leader of THE DOORS rock group who died of a drug overdose several years ago, in an upcoming movie. Incidentally, the $4,000 mechanical bull John was given following filming of "URBAN COWBOY" is no longer in his home. It seems that too many of John's guests landed on the floor after attempting to ride the monster, and he gave it away.

Amanda McFarren, KATHLEEN CULLEN'S character on "GUIDING LIGHT," goes through one trauma after another. But the opposite's true in Kathy's real life. She and her hubby of two years are expecting their first baby in August, and they're ecstatic!

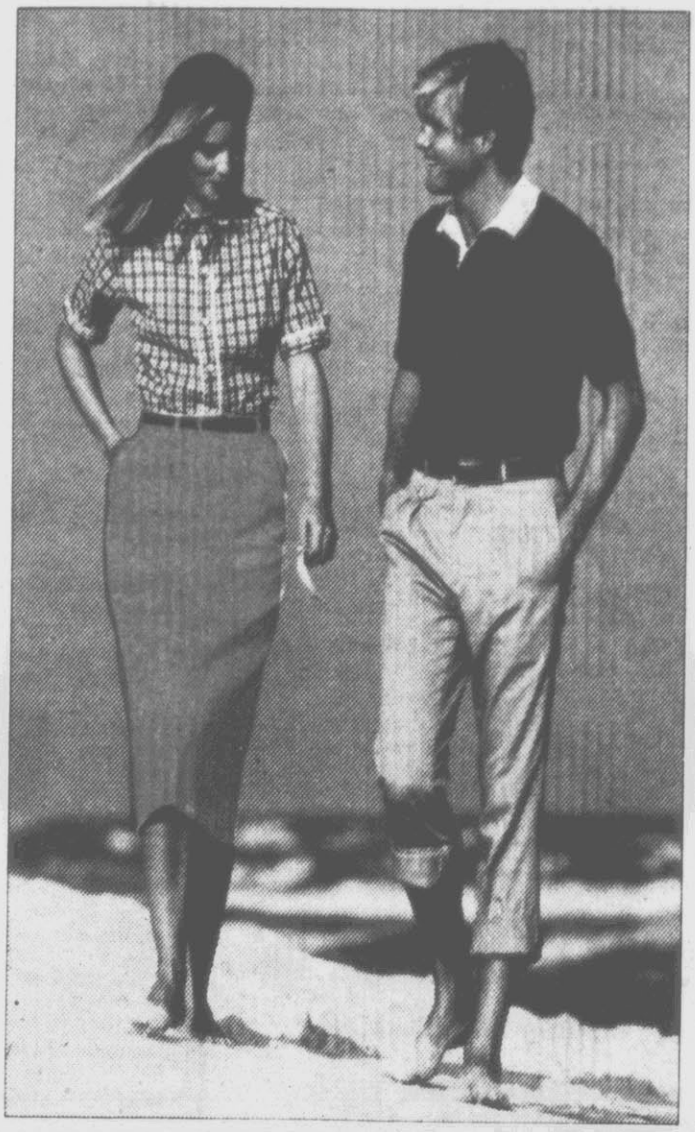

Also anticipating a visit from the long-legged bird this summer is GAIL RAE, who plays Susan on "GENERAL HOSPITAL." Gail's husband is actor STEVE CARLSON, and the two met when he was appearing as Gary Lansing on "G.H."

JAMES GARNER will be returning to the tube next season in a series for NBC — it's a revamped version of the "MAVERICK" show of yesteryear.

A Hall of Fame for women only.

FOR CAROL N. STALLONE, executive director, Women's Hall of Fame, Inc.

How do you select personalities for the National Women's Hall of Fame? — W.P., Cheyenne, Wyo.

● From nominations submitted by the public. A research committee studies each nominee to determine if she meets certain criteria, including whether her accomplishments are of national significance. A ballot is prepared and sent to our National Honors Committee, a panel of 25 eminent men and women representing a balance of occupational specializations. The next women to be installed will be announced about a month prior to the July 29th Honors Ceremony. We would welcome nominations from your readers to be sent to: The National Women's Hall of Fame, P.O.B. 335, Seneca Falls, N.Y. 13148.

Swearing: bark without biting.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

I have so many friends who are always swearing. What makes people want to swear? — J.K., Hutchinson, Kan.

● For the answer we approached Reinhold Aman, Ph.D., editor and publisher of the Maledicta Journal, who told us: "Swearing, name-calling, etc. are our reactions to offensive stimuli....First, we are angered, next, our body and mind get into a state of affect, which can be thought of as a vessel full of emotional steam which, if not released, will damage or destroy this vessel. The third step is the release of this emotional steam. While swearing and name-calling are not the most acceptable safety valves, our verbal outbursts are therapeutic by restoring us to a normal state; and swearing, generally, is more civilized than hitting or killing the source of our anger."

FOR ALDO RAY, star of upcoming film, Boxoffice

What do you remember about working with Ronald (President) Reagan in The Killers? — G.B., Sacramento, Calif.

● Mainly that he was unhappy with his role of a vicious killer because, up to then, he had played nothing but heroes. The director, Don Siegel, kept telling Ronnie that Bogart, Cagney and Gable had played gangsters and that didn't detract from them. I think Reagan has yet to see that movie — in which he beats up Angie Dickinson — and I don't think he ever will.

FOR MARIAN SELDES, star of Broadway's Deathtrap

You teach at the Julliard School, so what is the first thing you tell your students; and what's the hardest part of being a teacher? —R.J., Waco, Texas

● I greet new students by saying that whatever I teach, they must question. That they should use only what is valuable to them. That if they have no instinct or drive for acting or music, they should not be in the class. As for the hardest part of teaching, I'd say it is not having enough time to develop the subject.

FOR DIANE LADD, star of CBS-TV's Alice

Have your two divorces turned you off marriage? —S.P., Bangor, Maine

● No. My first was long, eight and a half years, to Bruce Dern. We went through poverty and struggle. Tragedy either pulls you together or draws you asunder. When tragedy is mixed with poverty, you move apart. My second husband and I were both lonely, but after a year we both knew we needed a friend, not a spouse. Yes. I would be happy to marry again.

FOR JOHN DAVIDSON, TV host

Given the choice, would you rather be interviewed or be the interviewer? — A.B., Florence, S.C.

● I'd rather interview than be interviewed. I don't really enjoy talking about myself that much. Although, when I am interviewed, I have been accused of being too honest and too outspoken. To be a good guest on an interview show, one must be quick and contribute to that show. As a host, I do my homework too; but I think it's harder to answer questions than to ask them.

Why can some people remember what happened years ago, yet fail to recall what they did the previous day? —V.O., Bowling Green, Ky.

● As we acquire information, it is laid down in the form of the chemical code which we call short-term memory. It seems that as we grow older our chemical capability responsible for the short-term memory suffers first. The system appears to be inherited.

FOR IRMA SHORELL, skin-care expert

At what age can youngsters start using makeup? — G.B., Burlington, Vt.

● There's no harm in making an early start. Young people seem to be starting younger and younger, at 13 or 14, but they do such a good job, they don't look made up. Using cosmetics early in life is not harmful if the young lady takes the time to learn how. What teenagers do that their mothers did not is take the time to read and follow directions.

PRO AND CON

Should the Ceiling on Retirement Earnings Under Social Security Be Eliminated?

PRO Senator Barry Goldwater (R.-Ariz.)

One of the major problems in the Social Security program is the work disincentive of the earnings ceiling. Instead of encouraging older persons to remain productive workers benefiting themselves and the entire economy, Social Security penalizes work incentives by imposing a tax of 50 percent on any wages earned over $5,500. The major argument for repealing the ceiling is equity for older persons. The money they pay into Social Security is theirs, not the Government's and the Government should have no say in how it is paid back..

CON Michael J. Romig, Director, Human Resources, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The earnings limit is consistent with Social Security's basic purpose of replacing income and protecting against dependency and hardship during retirement or disability. An employed person earns income and, therefore, is neither retired nor disabled. To eliminate the ceiling would destroy sound policy, unfairly divert scarce Social Security funds to employed persons without need, force young workers to supplement the incomes of older co-workers, give a windfall to those who were not taxed for such benefits, raise costs and require a tax increase.

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

Weather Forecast: The Lull Before the Storm

By Robert Jastrow

Last summer, scorching heat blistered the South. Now, drought parches the East and Midwest. A noted scientist contends this is but a taste of what lies ahead.

The world has seen many changes in climate, and each one has worked a profound effect on the history of life and the history of man. The fate of America depends on questions that have to do with climate: Is the earth growing colder — or warmer? What will conditions be like for American farmers in 20 years? How much water will be available for the expanding population of the Sun Belt in the 21st century?

Some recent progress by climate experts suggests the answers: Drought is the specter that hovers over America; the hot, dry summer of 1980 is a foretaste of our future.

To understand the new developments in the climate picture, we must go far back into the earth's past. Every 200 million years or so, a major ice age sets in on our planet. We are in a major ice age now, although at this moment the earth is in a temporary period of warmth, in which the ice sheets have retreated to the North and South poles.

The last major ice age before the present one occurred about 250 million years ago. At that time the warm-blooded mammals began to evolve out of the cold-blooded reptiles, presumably in response to the cold climate. But then the world slipped out of that early ice age into a period of unparalleled warmth and tranquility that lasted 150 million years. Palm trees grew in Alaska, and Europe resembled the South Sea islands.

The first dinosaurs appeared early in that idyllic interval. They flourished in the warm, moist climate of the times and reached their zenith in the ferocious Tyrannosaurus rex and its kin, who lived about 100 million years ago. Throughout the long reign of the dinosaurs, the mammals continued to exist, but they were small, inconspicuous and subordinate to the ruling reptiles.

Now the world's climate took a turn for the worse. The weather grew colder, the seasonal extremes became harsher, and the days of the giant reptiles were numbered. By 65 million years ago, they were gone. The little mammals came out of their burrows and looked around them. They had inherited the earth.

Wide World

UPI

Feast or famine? The future looks dry.

Wide World

The bonanza of water is evaporating

The world continued to grow colder and drier. The furry mammals were well-equipped to deal with the pressures of the new climate, and they prospered. Time passed, and new forms of life — cats, dogs, horses and monkeys, for instance — evolved among the mammals. The weather was not as pleasant as it had been in the time of the dinosaurs, but most continents were still free of ice.

Two million years ago, a new ice age — the present one — began. By that time, the ancestors of man had appeared on the African savanna. The summers grew cooler; heavy snows fell on the north; the snow turned into ice. Glaciers began to flow slowly southward. About a half-million years ago our ancestors, moving north from Africa into Europe and Asia, came into contact for the first time with the chill winds blowing off the frozen wastes.

It was a grim time for the early humans. Summers in Europe were nearly as cold as Europe's winters are today. But early man responded to the challenge. His wits were sharpened by the struggle for survival in that bitter climate; the first man to think of wrapping a pelt from a dead beast around his shivering limbs must have been the Einstein of his day. The fossil record reveals an explosive spurt in the growth of the human brain at just this time.

The continents of the northern hemisphere lay under thick covers of ice during most of the last half-million years. Now and then the ice sheets retreated, only to advance again. Their most recent advance on the American continent occurred 18,000 years ago, when Michigan, Wisconsin and New England lay under sheets of ice as much as two miles thick. Then changes in the earth's orbit and in the tilt of its axis relative to the sun warmed the continents and caused the ice sheets to retreat once more. By 11,000 years ago the last of the ice was gone, except for the polar caps and a few mountain glaciers. America was populated by Indian tribes, and wooly mammoths roamed the plains.

The tilt of the earth's axis continued to favor warm weather, and the temperature of our planet rose to higher levels. It reached its peak 6,000 years ago, in the fourth millennium B.C. For several thousand years thereafter, the world enjoyed season after season of very warm weather.

Some regions — notably the central and western parts of the United States — were dry as well as hot, and drought lay on those lands. Other areas of the globe — such as Mideastern Egypt and Mesopotamia — were moist and warm and ideal for agriculture. Big agricultural surpluses appeared in these areas for the first time. The output of a small number of farmers was sufficient to support hordes of nonfood producers. They clustered together, and the first cities came into existence.

But changes in the world's temperature are cyclic: What goes up always comes down. In this case, after a few thousand years of good growing weather, the temperature of the world began to drop once more, and the planet braced against the next advance of the ice sheets. There have been ups and downs, but the general trend has been toward colder weather during the last few thousand years.

Except that a new factor has entered the picture. Man has been burning coal, oil and gas at prodigious rates for the last 30 years or so, releasing vast amounts of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. This invisible gas absorbs the heat that is radiating upward from the ground. The heat would normally escape to space and cool our planet. Trapped by the carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, it returns to the ground and warms the planet instead. The amount of the warming has been calculated by experts on the earth's climate. If the present trends in the burning of coal, oil and gas continue for another 50 to 100 years, the carbon dioxide effect will be sufficient to drive the temperature of the earth up to the very warm levels of 4000 B.C. (global temperatures of three or four degrees F. warmer).

COVER STORY WEATHER

All this has been known to climate experts for some time. Until recently, however, measurements of the earth's temperature failed to reveal the predicted warming effect, which left the experts somewhat puzzled. Their theories held that carbon dioxide must warm the atmosphere, but nature did not seem to agree with the theories. Now that situation has changed. The newest studies of the world's temperatures, brought up to date as of January 1980 by Dr. James Hansen of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, finally show a temperature increase of exactly the amount predicted due to the burning of coal, oil and gas. The warming effect is real.

The main reason why the warming failed to appear in the earlier temperature records is that it was masked by a temporary cooling of the earth, resulting from the ejection of mammoth amounts of sulphur and dust into the stratosphere during the explosion of two Indonesian volcanoes in the 1960's. One of those explosions was twice as violent as the Mt. St. Helens eruption. The sulphur, in particular, formed droplets of sulphuric acid that created a high-level smog layer, which blocked the sun's rays and canceled the warming effect of the carbon dioxide in the atmosphere.

Now that the existence of the warming effect has finally been confirmed, we can predict its course during the next 100 years with some confidence. Allowing for the normal ups and downs of climate from year to year, conditions in the U.S. from now to the end of the century will resemble the weather of the 1970's, but will be a little on the warmer side. And if coal and oil burning continue, the 21st century will be very warm: in this country, six to 10 degrees F. warmer year-round.

What will that mean in practical terms, especially for farmers? Dr. William W. Kellogg of the National Center for Atmospheric Research has reconstructed the climate of the fourth millennium B.C. by studying geological evidence and has arrived at an interesting answer.

For farmers in the Soviet Union, Dr. Kellogg's news is very good. At various times in the past decade or so, Soviet wheat production has been badly hit by drought as well as by short growing seasons due to cold weather. A return to the conditions of 4000 B.C. would produce wetter and warmer weather in a vast belt of Soviet territory, stretching from the Ukrainian breadbasket to the wheat-producing New Lands east of the Ural Mountains.

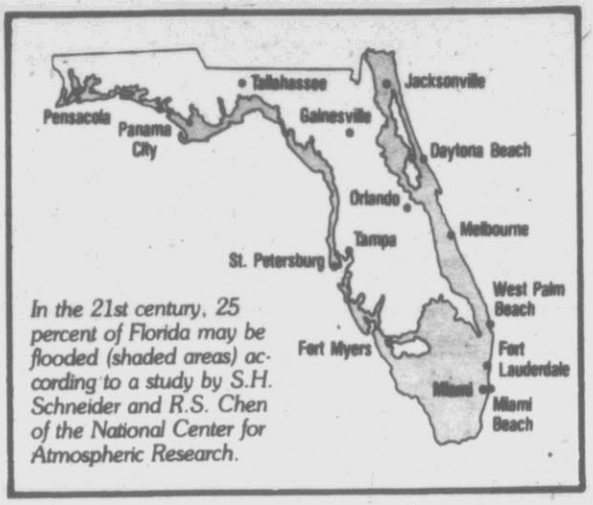

For American farmers, the news is bad. They can expect hot, dry weather in the central and western states. The states of the farm belt will see year after year of sustained drought, with dust bowl conditions that could persist for more than a century. As for the Sun Belt, the outlook there is also discouraging because decreased rain and snowfall in the western mountains will mean less runoff feeding into western rivers.

Another consequence of the temperature increase will be bad for the entire world. According to the calculations of the climate experts, the temperature in the Antarctic will rise about eight to 10 degrees F., which is enough to melt the West Antarctic ice sheet. The ice could melt in as short a time as a few decades, and the runoff from the melted ice could raise the level of the world's oceans by about 15 feet, flooding 25 percent of Louisiana and Florida and 10 percent of New Jersey.

These are grim prospects. Can we do anything about them? Only one-third of the man-made carbon dioxide in the atmosphere comes from America, but if we could control even that part, we would be able to postpone the heat catastrophe for a few decades — probably sufficient to find another technological fix. Whatever we do, it should be done fairly soon because these climate changes, once set in motion, are irreversible.

American options are limited. A changeover from oil to coal will not help; coal releases even more carbon dioxide into the atmosphere than oil. Solar and hydroelectric power are clean; they release no carbon dioxide at all. However, they could not supply more than a fraction of America's energy needs. Fusion power is also clean, and it is very promising for the long run if scientists can ever get it to work; but they have not succeeded yet, and probably won't for several years. Until they do, an energy policy based on fusion power will be too risky to chance.

That leaves nuclear power, which releases no carbon dioxide and could supply a large part of the energy needs of the United States without heating up the atmosphere. Nuclear power is unpopular today, but it could turn out to be America's best option. It may seem foolish to contemplate a trade-off between this difficult technology and the threat of a temperature rise that will not become important until the 21st century, but our grandchildren may think differently about the matter, as the water rises above their ankles. FW

In the 21st century, 25 percent of Florida may be flooded (shaded areas) according to a study by S.H. Schneider and R.S. Chen of the National Center for Atmospheric Research.

WARNING!

TO L.P. GAS (PROPANE) WATER HEATER OWNERS

Under certain conditions, the thermostat on your L.P. gas water heater has the potential of causing an explosion.

Please read and act today.

A voluntary recall of certain propane gas water heater thermostats manufactured by the White-Rodgers Division of Emerson Electric Co., and installed on A. O. Smith and other brands of residential water heaters is underway. These thermostats, installed on L. P. gas water heaters sold between 1961 and mid-1980, may pose a potential risk of explosion and serious injury if physical damage to the pilot gas control knob of the thermostat has occurred. If your water heater is equipped with one of these thermostats and the pilot flame goes out, do not attempt to relight it yourself. Instead, call your gas supplier or plumber immediately.

White-Rodgers will replace the thermostats without cost to you. If you own an L. P. gas water heater manufactured by A. O. Smith, including such brand names as A. O. Smith, American Standard, Continental, Glascote, Kee, National, Minnegasco, NORGAS and Homart, or own a water heater manufactured by any other company and is likely to have been purchased since 1961, call immediately toll free to White-Rodgers at

All these events and more mark "American Energy Week," which starts today in communities all over America.

Skits and bits. What's "American Energy Week"? It's a grass-roots happening designed to make folks aware of energy problems, and solutions, too. National sponsors include the American Automobile Club, the NAACP, the American Chamber of Commerce Executive Association, the National School Boards Association, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and the U.S. Jaycees. Participants include all age groups: High school students in 47 states will perform "Energy Night Live," an extravaganza that includes "crude" humor, like this advice to oil drops on their way to the surface: "Oily to bed, oily to rise." OK. So it isn't Shakespeare. But it's fun.

"She says she's the Carry Nation of energy conservation!"

You're John Hancock. Seriously though, folks, the sponsors of Energy Week will ask you to put your name on the line for American energy. So sign up please... on a "Declaration of Energy Independence" that includes a plea to "free the people"—from over-dependence on foreign oil. How? By "saving on our use of oil," sure, and also by urging "leaders of government and industry to speed up production of domestic oil and gas, to expand the use of electricity generated by coal, hydroelectric and nuclear energy, and to expedite development of promising energy technologies...."

Hockey's Stastny Brothers
In from the Cold

By Barry Wilner

One day last August, the phone rang in the office of Gilles Leger, personnel director for the National Hockey League's Quebec Nordiques. The call was from Innsbruck, Austria, from a Peter Stastny.

Mr. Stastny just happened to be the best hockey player in Czechoslovakia, and this trans-Atlantic call began an episode of international intrigue worthy of a Mission: Impossible script.

Since 1976, Peter Stastny and his brother Marian had performed brilliantly for the Czech Nationals, a team so powerful it won the world championship in '76 and '77, beating even the Soviets. In 1979 younger brother Anton joined his siblings to form one of the best forward lines in the world. The trio was idolized throughout their country.

But it all came crashing down that day last August when Peter Stastny went to an Innsbruck post office and placed the momentous call: He and Anton wanted to defect. Marian, realizing it would be harder to leave with a wife and three children, chose to remain in Czechoslovakia.

Peter and Anton Stastny

Peter recalls the resolve he felt that day: "If Quebec says no, they are not interested in us, then I call other Canadian teams. I call all of them until someone says yes."

Both Leger and Nordiques' president, Marcel Aubut, immediately flew to Innsbruck — where the Czechs were playing an exhibition with the Soviets — well aware that smuggling a pair of sports stars like the Stastnys out from under the noses of Czech security was a massive undertaking.

After several hours of secret negotiations, the Stastnys agreed to terms (six-year contracts for each at $250,000 a season). But the hardest part was yet to come — getting them out of Austria to Quebec.

Anton and Peter insisted on playing one more game for the Czechs but promised they'd leave afterward. They told Marian of their plans and, after the game, rode off toward Vienna in a car driven by a man many consider a Canadian spy. With them was Peter's pregnant wife, Darina.

Despite all the precautions, the Czech officials located the Stastny party and telephoned them at the embassy in Vienna to "dissuade" them from defecting. The Stastnys never got on the phone, though, and flew to Montreal later that night.

There's been no looking back, and they've fit into the N.H.L. from the opening face-off. Despite playing for the lowly Nordiques, both are enjoying excellent seasons. Peter, a 24-year-old center, is one of the top-scoring rookies in the league and is a superb skater and puck handler. Anton, 21, a left-winger, is a better shooter and has the potential to be one of the top players in the league.

Accustomed to European hockey, a game of speed and finesse, the brothers now have to cope with the more physical — at times, bludgeoning — style of the N.H.L. "Hockey is very gentle in Czechoslovakia," says Peter. "Here, the rinks are smaller, the players are stronger and rougher, always holding or hooking with their sticks. In Europe, that's a penalty."

Anton and Peter miss their homeland but say life in Quebec is just fine, merci. "It is much like our home in Czechoslovakia," says Peter. "It's quiet, a good place for a family." Not to mention the league's tremendous salaries — probably the biggest inducement for their defection. Their only complaint: the food. It's tough to find a good Czech restaurant.

A cloud hangs over the success of the brothers Stastny, though — eldest brother Marian back in Czechoslovakia. Without going into detail, they describe his situation as "dark."

"Marian was suspended by our old club," notes Anton. "He is not being treated very well, and he is not playing. The rest of our family, it is O.K. But Marian has suffered."

Anton is hopeful, though realistic. "There were some stories in newspapers in Quebec that Marian was coming," he says. "I called him and he said he didn't know why they print such a story, that it is not true."

And until Marian joins them, the final chapter in the amazing story of Peter and Anton Stastny must remain open.

PEOPLE QUIZ

Jealousy—Is It the Same For Men and Women?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Psychologists define jealousy as "an attitude whose organizing principle is resentment that a beloved person shows affection for a third party" — and sometimes it doesn't matter much who that third party is.

2. Men tend to react differently than women do when jealous.

3. Jealousy can be directed toward animals and even inanimate objects.

4. Jealousy is a selfish and, therefore, unworthy human sentiment.

5. If jealousy persists, there isn't much you can do about it.

ANSWERS

1. True. Georgetown University Hospital studies, which also evaluated findings of other research, show, for example, that "the most common negative reaction of a new father to breast-feeding is jealousy, the feeling of being displaced by the infant from the primary place in his wife's affection...jealousy of the physical and emotional closeness of the nursing mother and child." It is noted that the degree of jealousy is partly determined by how much and how happily the wife breast feeds. Some husbands also are jealous because they have no similar way to bring food and contentment to their baby.

2. True. Research on the psychodynamics of jealousy, conducted at the University of Richmond (Va.), cites findings showing an interesting sex difference. Males, it was found, "responded to a jealous provocation with anger; women, on the other hand, attempted to make themselves more attractive when made to feel jealous."

3. True. It is noted in a University of Texas study on jealousy that "though jealousy is primarily a social emotion, involving the satisfactions and frustrations coming from another person, jealousy may also be aimed at inanimate objects. The wife may wish to bend the husband's golf club into a corkscrew or she may be seen giving the television set, so absorbing to her husband, a jealous kick in the shins." She may also give the dog — or other pet the husband is particularly fond of — a bad time, or at least feel like doing so. Obviously a husband may feel the same way about his wife's interests.

4. False. Jealousy may or may not be justified, but few people have not experienced it to some degree under one circumstance or another. As psychiatrist Ping-nie Pao points out in his study of the subject, it is a universal experience. When jealousy is unreasonable and feeds on baseless suspicions, the problem lies with the personality of the individual rather than the target of his jealous feelings. On the other hand, it is observed that a lover incapable of jealousy is under suspicion of being no lover at all.

5. False. Most normal or garden-variety jealousy stems simply from misunderstandings or reading something into another's act or statement that has little or no justification. And it is concluded from studies on the jealousy phenomenon of couples, conducted at Purdue University, that it results to a large extent from a simple failure of the two to "level" with each other by revealing their thoughts, feelings and desires. The findings indicate that the most appropriate treatment for jealousy between them is to sit down together and make an honest effort to communicate, to clear out the cobwebs of confusion and misapprehension, which can cause each to jump to conclusions which may have little or no basis.

James Beard Presents:

NEW RECIPES FOR MEN

By Marilyn Hansen

With so many men interested in cooking and learning more about the whys and wherefores, they are finding that the kitchen is not a mystery anymore. As they spend more time there, they are finding out that they like this new territory and want new ideas and information to sharpen their skills.

And so, with our menfolk especially in mind, we asked James Beard, noted American food authority, to give us some informed masculine cooking insights.

James Beard has been in the forefront of the American cooking scene for the past 50 years and through this vantage point has been able to observe and make astute judgments on our native food ways.

On a January afternoon, James Beard talked about the widespread interest in good food in America today and especially the phenomenon of men cooking.

Jim feels that "men want to make anything if they like to cook. Men are wonderful bread bakers — and sauce makers. They are successful experimenters and have a great curiosity about things that they haven't tried before. They are inquisitive and want to know why."

Jim has a few suggestions for men who cook and for those who would like to cook:

1. Have no fear and have fun.

2. Try the recipe honestly once — exactly how it was written the first time — before making any changes of your own.

3. Read the recipe thoroughly and figure out timing.

4. Clean up behind yourself, or you'll be lost. It's a wonderfully economical thing to learn. Keep a sense of order.

5. Use the equipment you have and find out what you lack. Don't buy everything at once. Buy well.

On Entertaining

Jim says, "It depends. Don't try something new, or else you'll get gummed up and won't enjoy your own party.

"Be simple, if you're going to be flirting with someone you can't have your mind on flipping something in the kitchen."

James Beard will bring out a new cookbook this August, The New James Beard, (Alfred A. Knopf). It will be a big one with over 1,000 recipes. It is a follow-up to James Beard's Theory and Practice of Cooking, (Alfred A. Knopf) with different ways and techniques to cook.

A PLEASING SALAD

1 bunch (2 lbs.) fresh asparagus
1 bunch green curly garden lettuce
1 bunch bronze leaf lettuce
2 heads red radicchio
1 red onion thinly sliced

Mustard Vinaigrette Dressing*

1. Wash asparagus and trim ends evenly, making uniform-length stalks. Arrange asparagus, tip ends up, in clear glass salad bowl, lining side of bowl.

2. Tear lettuce into large leaves and place in salad bowl with radicchio leaves. Arrange onion slices randomly in green. Chill, covered, until ready to serve.

3. Pour Mustard Vinaigrette Dressing over all just before serving.

Makes 6 servings

* Recipe follows

Editor's Note: Red radicchio is a small-sized version of red cabbage originating in Italy. It is lovely to look at, crunchy in texture and milder in flavor than red cabbage. If you can't find it, use small central leaves of red cabbage.

MUSTARD VINAIGRETTE DRESSING

1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon coarse salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1½ to 2 tablespoons wine vinegar
6 tablespoons fruity olive oil

1. Blend the mustard, salt, pepper and vinegar together with a fork. Add the oil and blend well with the other ingredients. Taste and add more mustard if necessary.

Makes about ½ cup

BANANAS ON HALF SHELL

3-lb. hand of bananas

1. Place unpeeled bananas still attached at the top on a baking sheet.

2. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven about 30 minutes or until skin is almost completely black.

3. Place on serving platter. Each person takes a banana and cuts it lengthwise into 2 separate halves and eats it right out of the shell with a spoon. Excellent with fish, ham, pork or beef dishes. Or serve for dessert, sugared and then flamed with brandy or rum.

Makes 8 servings

LENTIL SOUP

1 lb. lentils
2 qts. chicken stock
2 onions, coarsely chopped
3 cloves garlic, coarsely chopped
1 carrot, grated
2 dried red chili peppers, crushed
1 can (1 lb. 12 oz.) whole tomatoes in thick puree
½ cup bourbon
2 knockwurst, thickly sliced
Garnish with chopped parsley

1. Put the lentils in a deep pot with stock and half the onions and cook u

CITRUS TARTLETS

Pâté Sucree for crust
- 3½ cups sifted all-purpose unbleached flour
- 16 tablespoons (2 sticks) unsalted butter, firmly chilled, cut into small pieces
- 2 egg yolks, slightly beaten with ¼ cup ice water
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup sugar

Tartlet Filling
- ¼ lb. butter
- Grated rind and juice of 1 lemon
- Juice of 3 limes
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups sugar
- 3 egg yolks
- 3 whole eggs
- ½ cup Grand Marnier
- 1½ cups heavy cream
- Garnish with thin slices of lemon and lime dipped in sugar syrup

1. Make Pâté Sucree. Put the flour in a mixing bowl; make a well in the center and put the butter in the well. Work the butter and flour together quickly with the fingertips until the mixture forms small, flaky granules, like oatmeal.

2. Blend in the egg-yolk mixture, lemon juice, salt and sugar

3. Cupping your hands tightly, gather the dough into a rough ball. Break off small pieces, about 2 or 3 tablespoons each, and smear them across the board by pushing hard with the heel of your hand. This process, called the "fraisage," ensures the complete blending of the butter and flour.

4. Gather the dough together and form it into a ball; wrap in waxed paper and chill for 30 minutes or until the dough is firm, but not so firm that it cracks at the edges when rolled out.

5. Roll half the pastry out to a thickness of ⅛ inch. Cut out 6-inch circles and place a tartlet pan in the center of the circles. Lift up the pastry to fit around the outside of the tartlet pan; invert and place on a baking sheet. Continue with the remaining pastry in the same manner.

6. Preheat oven to 375°F. Prick the pastry on the bottom of the tartlet pans with a fork and bake for 15 minutes or until nicely brown. Remove from the oven to a wire rack to cool. When cool, remove the pastry shell from the tartlet pan and reserve. Handle gently; the pastry shell is fragile.

7. Make filling: Melt the butter in the top of a double boiler and add the grated rind and juice of 1 lemon and 3 limes, salt and sugar. Cook over hot water with the egg yolks and whole eggs beaten together, whisking constantly until the mixture is shiny and thick. Add the Grand Marnier and cool.

8. Whisk the heavy cream in a chilled mixing bowl until very thick. Fold the cream into the lemon and lime mixture and fill the pastry shells. Garnish with a thin slice of lemon or lime dipped into a heavy syrup (½ cup sugar to ¼ cup water brought to the boil and allowed to simmer for 2 to 3 minutes).

DISGUSTINGLY RICH POTATOES

6 large Idaho potatoes
¾ cup butter, very soft
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground coarse black pepper
1 cup heavy cream
4 tablespoons butter
1 cup shredded Gruyere or Cheddar cheese

1. Bake the potatoes until soft; split lengthwise and scoop the pulp into a mixing bowl, scraping the shells well.

2. Leave scooped-out potato just as is, do not mash or chop, add the soft butter, salt, pepper and cream. Mix lightly and transfer to a flat baking dish.

3. Dot with the 4 tablespoons of butter and sprinkle with shredded cheese. Bake 375°F. oven for 15 minutes.

Makes 6 servings

TWICE-BAKED POTATO SKINS

Idaho potatoes
Melted butter
Tabasco
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper

1. Bake potatoes and remove all the pulp. Cut in half lengthwise when they come out of the oven and scoop out potato with spoon.

2. Cut the skins with scissors in strips about an inch wide; put on a baking sheet, brush generously with melted butter, season with salt, freshly ground black pepper and a sprinkling of Tabasco.

3. Put in a preheated 475°F. oven or under the broiler until they get brown and quite crisp. Serve with drinks as an appetizer. These are better than any potato chips.

In Marilyn's Kitchen

One of the little reliables we find in our neighborhood supermarkets from coast-to-coast is the trim, foil-wrapped silver and blue package of smooth "background" cheese that we all have come to recognize and devour around the year with great appetite. The cheese in the spotlight is cream cheese and this old food friend is celebrating its 100th birthday this year. Its great record of usefulness and diversity we know from the many different ways it is enjoyed.

HOLLYWOOD CHEESECAKE

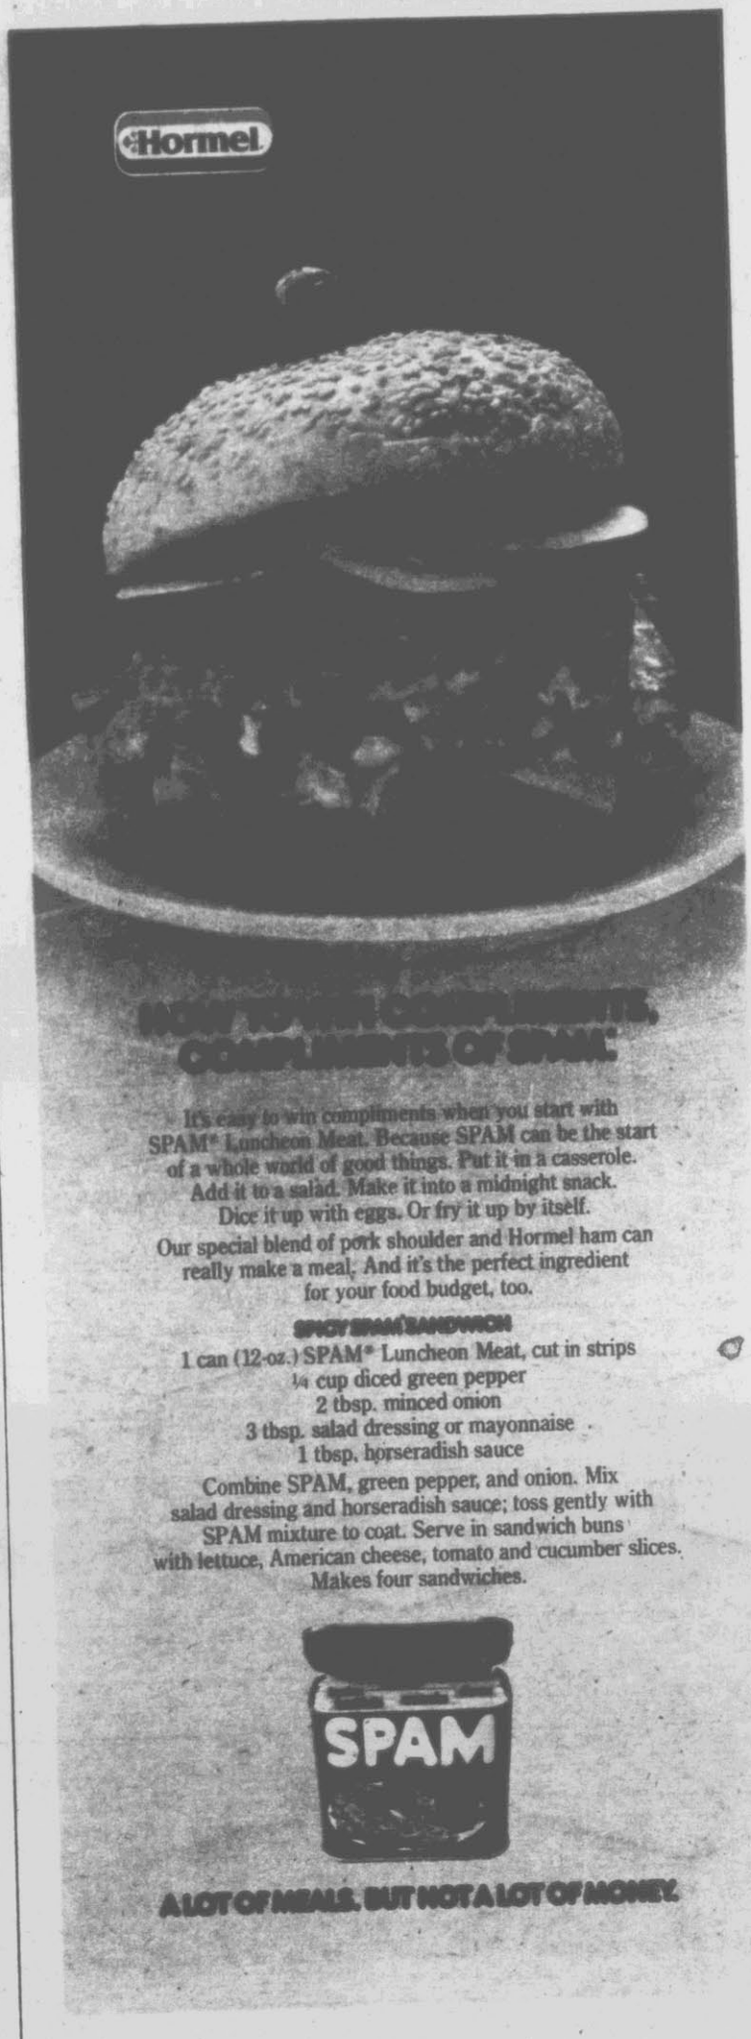

1 cup graham cracker crumbs
3 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons margarine, melted
2 pkgs. (8 ozs.) cream cheese
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
2 eggs, separated
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

1. Combine crumbs, sugar and margarine; press onto bottom of 9-inch springform pan. Bake at 325°F. 10 minutes.

2. Combine softened cream cheese, sugar, lemon juice, rind and vanilla, mixing at medium speed on electric mixer until well blended. Add egg yolks, one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites; pour over crust. Bake at 300°F. 45 minutes.

3. Combine sour cream, sugar and vanilla. Carefully spread over cheesecake; continue baking 10 minutes. Loosen cake from rim of pan; cool before removing rim of pan. Chill.

Skiing Chefs Compete for Speed, Technique and Prizes

We all know that chefs can stand the heat of the kitchen and many also revel in the chill thrills of downhill racing.

Tony Wein

Jacky Ruette and Timothy Bourne look jaunty and fit as they prepare to ski in the finals at the U.S. Chef's Ski Race.

Hunter Mountain in New York State's Catskill Mountains is a comfortable two-hour-plus drive from New York City, where so many fine restaurants abound. It's a curious fact that many chefs, especially of European background, are avid skiers, and it wasn't long until the word got around through the chef's "grapevine," that Hunter, with its excellent snow-making facility, was a fine place to ski.

It seems a long time now, actually six years ago, in 1975, when Karl Plattner, owner of the Hunter Mountain Ski School, spoke to one of his long-time ski instructors, an outstanding young chef named Jacques Pepin. "Jacques," began Karl, "we have so many chefs skiing here now, why don't you organize a chef's ski race?"

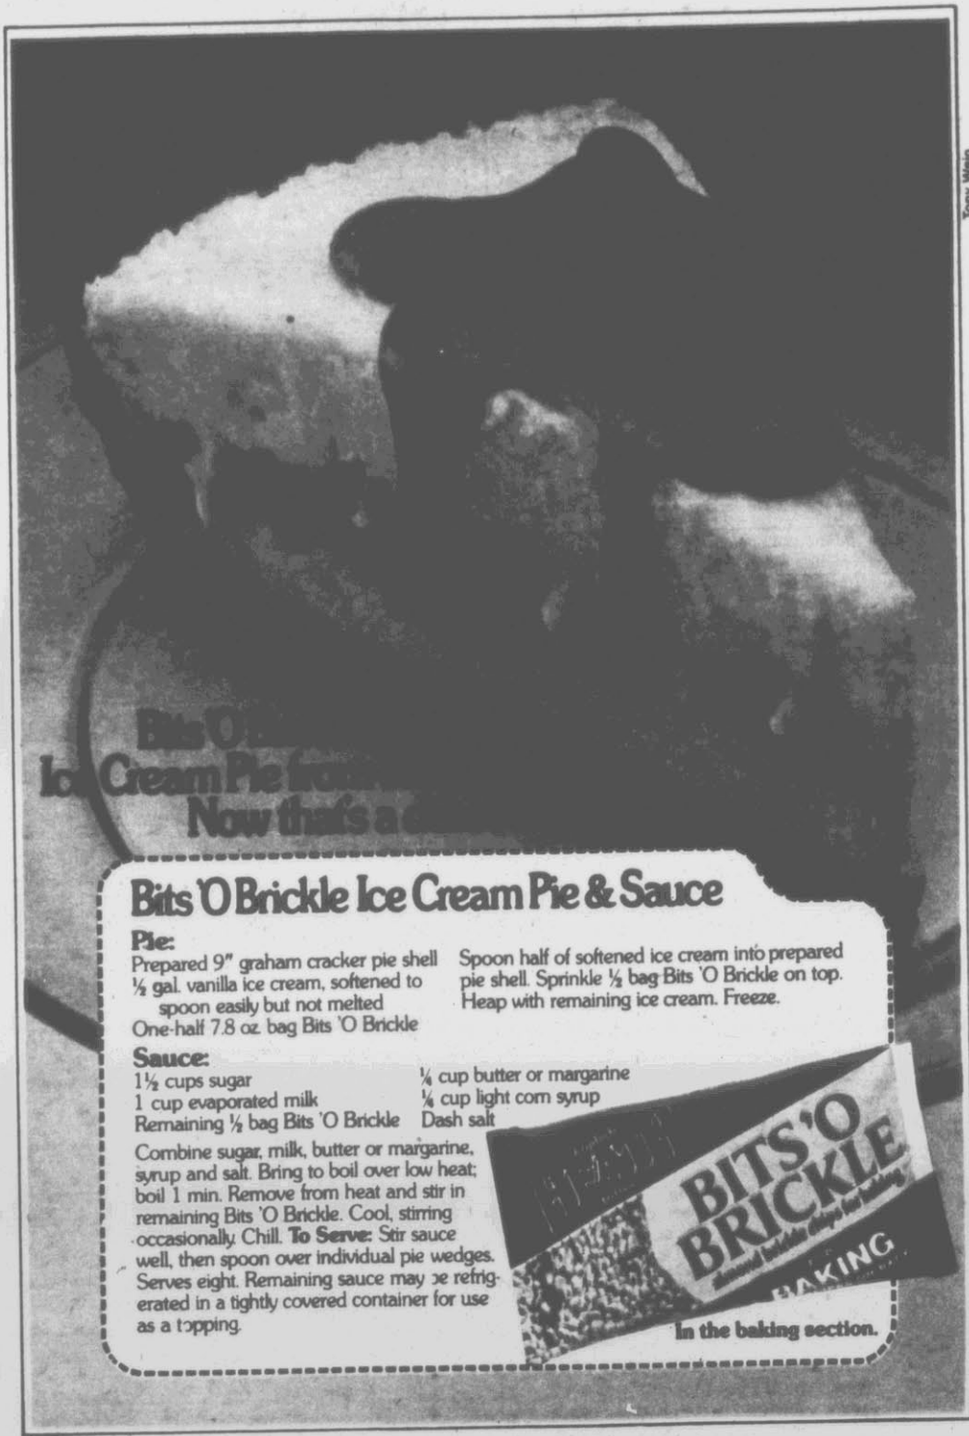

And so, Jacques got busy and called his friends, and with the promotional help of Jacky Ruette, chef of La Petite Marmite, the U.S. Chef's Ski Race was born.

At first, there were only French chefs competing, but through the years, the word spread and chefs from widespread origins have entered. This year, among the 200 chef contestants, were many French chefs plus chefs from Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Florida and New Jersey of diverse national backgrounds: Italian, Swiss, Austrian and, of course, native and naturalized Americans.

It was clear and cold on Sunday, January 25, 1980, at Hunter Mountain when the skiing chefs assembled for the sixth annual U.S. Chef's Ski Race.

The race was divided into four categories for men according to age. Precisely: 18 to 25, 26 to 35, 36 to 45 and the 46-over category.

Thirty women chefs entered the race this year and skied against each other. Next year, the age categories will be open equally to both men and women. Voilà!

Bits 'O Brickle Ice Cream Pie & Sauce

Pie:

Prepared 9" graham cracker pie shell
One-half 7.8 oz. bag Bits 'O Brickle

Sauce:

1½ cups sugar
1 cup evaporated milk
Remaining ½ bag Bits 'O Brickle
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup light corn syrup
Dash salt

Combine sugar, milk, butter or margarine, syrup and salt. Bring to boil over low heat; boil 1 min. Remove from heat and stir in remaining Bits 'O Brickle. Cool, stirring occasionally. Chill. To Serve: Stir sauce well, then spoon over individual pie wedges. Serves eight. Remaining sauce may be refrigerated in a tightly covered container for use as a topping.

In the baking section.

The contestants in each age category skied against each other, and four winners from each category raced each other for the prized silver cups. The 16 winners qualified this year to go to Courcheval, France, for the International Chef's Ski Race; indeed they are skiing there today.

The chef who came out first this year, making him also a three-time winner, was Pietro Lavillotti of the Albany Campus Restaurant in Albany, N.Y. As the three-time winner, Pietro was awarded the Jacques Pepin Super Cup. So named for Jacques Pepin, chef, skier and cookbook author, for inspiring and helping support the U.S. Chef's Ski Race through the years.

When asked what keeps his interest and enthusiasm in the U.S. Chef's Ski Race, Jacky Ruette promptly replied, "I love the restaurant people, I love skiing, and I like to see everybody having a good time, which happens every year in the Chef's Ski Race."

In the 26-to-35 age category was Timothy Bourne, the personal chef of movie star Jack Nicholson. He followed Jack on location with a camper affectionately nicknamed "Johnny's Roadhouse," cooking for anywhere from two to 20 people each night. Jack is a gregarious host, and Timothy says, "The hardest part of the job is not knowing how many to cook for!"

Timothy says he grew up with Hunter Mountain and was there when "the first tree fell" to start the area.

Pietro Lavillotti, Jacky Ruette, and Timothy Bourne, each share a recipe with you today.

BAKED ZITI SICILIANO

3 ozs. ziti, cooked al dente
2 (½-inch-thick) slices eggplant
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
¼ cup ricotta cheese
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
1 oz. shredded mozzarella
½ cup marinara sauce
2 slices mozzarella cheese

1. Cook ziti just to the al dente (to the tooth) — slightly chewy stage; drain.

2. Coat eggplant slices with flour and fry in oil until browned and tender. Drain and dice.

3. Combine ziti, eggplant, ricotta, grated Parmesan cheese, mozzarella and ¼ cup marinara sauce.

4. Spoon mixture into lightly greased, shallow, individual au gratin dish. Bake in preheated 325°F. oven for 15 minutes.

5. Remove au gratin dish; top with remaining ¼ cup marinara sauce and cover with mozzarella slices. Broil about 4 inches from heat source until cheese is completely melted. Makes 1 serving

Recipe from Pietro Lavillotti.

BROKEN LEG

¾ cup cider
¼ cup bourbon, rum or whiskey
Cinnamon stick

1. Heat cider until it boils rapidly; pour into warm mug. Add bourbon and cinnamon stick.
2. Serve immediately; sip slowly. Makes 1 serving

Recipe from Timothy Bourne.

SKIER'S SUNSET

¼ cup Grand Marnier, warmed
Orange slice

1. Brew tea in large mug. Add Grand Marnier. Place orange slice at rim of mug.
2. Serve immediately; sip slowly. Makes 1 serving

Recipe from Timothy Bourne.

DAUBE DE BOEUF

1½ lbs. chuck beef, cut in 1-in. size cubes
Butter with vegetable oil for browning
2 cups red wine
3 cups chicken stock
1 leek
1 carrot
2 onions
1 small bouquet garni: 1 stem parsley, ½ teaspoon thyme leaves, 1 bay leaf
3 cups chicken stock
2 tablespoons butter
16 chunks carrots, 2-inch pieces
16 small pearl onions
16 wedges white turnip
Clove garlic, crushed
Chopped parsley

1. In Dutch oven, sauté beef in combination of butter and oil until brown. Do not crowd pan; remove meat when brown and brown remaining cubes.
2. Meanwhile, while meat browns, heat red wine in open saucepan, boiling slowly until reduced by half.
3. Combine in Dutch oven, browned beef, reduced wine, 3 cups chicken stock and the braising vegetables: 1 leek, 1 carrot, 2 onions and bouquet garni. Heat to boiling; reduce heat to simmer; cover and cook 1 hour or until meat is tender.
4. About 20 minutes before meat is done, cook the garniture vegetables. Combine in skillet, 3 cups chicken stock, butter and carrots; cover and cook 10 minutes. Now add turnips, onions and garlic; cover and cook another 10 minutes.
5. When meat is tender, strain the braising liquid. Discard braising vegetables and bouquet garni. Set meat aside. Return liquid to Dutch oven; heat to boiling and boil, uncovered, to reduce by one-third. Season to taste with salt and pepper.
6. Return meat to Dutch oven; add cooked garniture vegetables (save and use garniture broth for soup). Heat daube just to boiling point in order to heat through. Serve in oven-to-table casserole garnished with a sprinkle of chopped parsley. Makes 6 to 8 servings

With Hamburger Helper

Beef Vegetable Soup

1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1 package Hamburger Helper mix for beef noodle
6 cups water
1 bay leaf
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 can (16 ounces) whole tomatoes
1 package (10 ounces) frozen mixed vegetables or 2 cups cooked vegetables

Cook and stir ground beef and onion in Dutch oven until beef is brown; drain. Stir in Sauce Mix, water, bay leaf, salt, pepper and tomatoes (with liquid); break up tomatoes with fork. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Reduce heat; cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, 10 minutes. Stir in Noodles and vegetables; cover and cook 10 minutes longer. 5 or 6 servings.

High Altitude Directions (3500 to 6500 feet): Stir in Noodles and vegetables with the Sauce Mix. Continue as directed except—cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, 20 minutes.

"It's Soupendous!"

Now in only 30 minutes, you can make a homemade Beef Vegetable Soup so thick and delicious you'll serve it as supper.

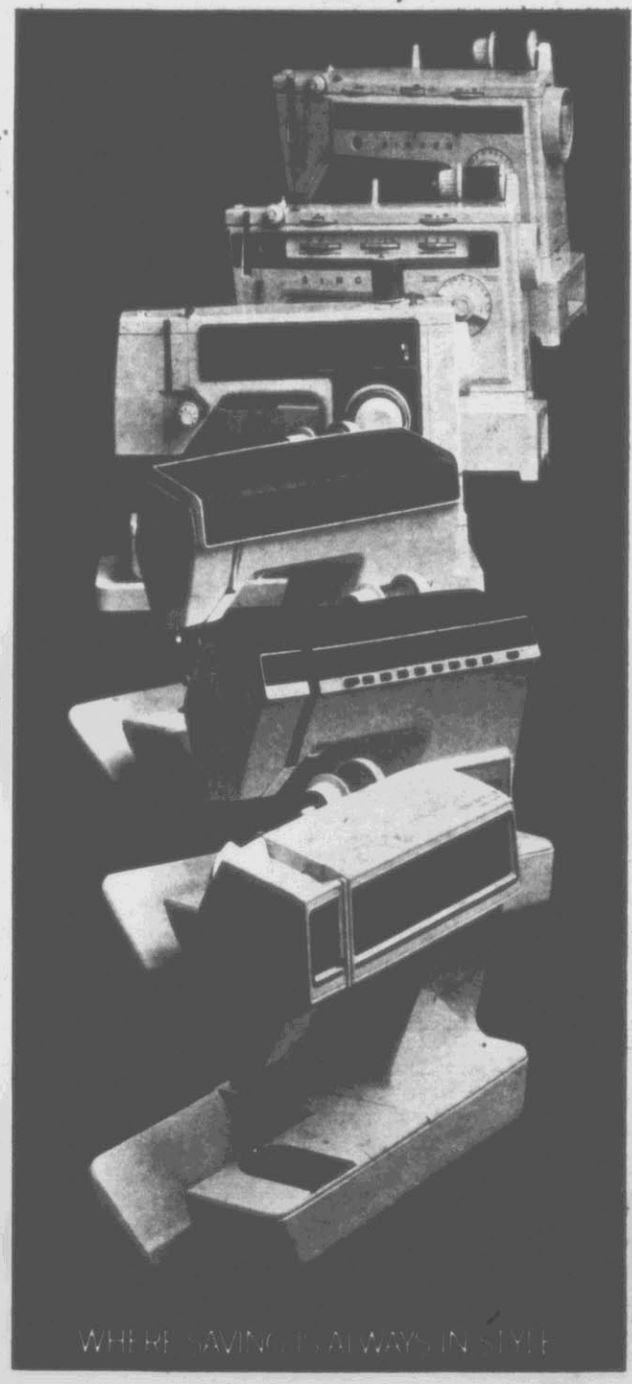

Hamburger Helper has hearty egg noodles and savory seasonings to turn your vegetables and fresh meat into home-style soup your family will love.

BOOKS AND COOKS:

A Review of What's New In the World Of Cookbooks

More and more, Americans are learning to appreciate what the Japanese have known all along — less is more, especially in food. The elements are simplicity itself: nutrition, flavor and presentation.

A feast is an array, a wealth of choice, a selection of special preparations. And that is what Small Feasts is about. It is actually three separate cookbooks — Soups, Salads and Sandwiches — in one volume.

Here are several recipes from the book:

MOZZARELLA IN CARROZZA

8 slices white bread
8 thin slices mozzarella
4 eggs
3 tablespoons milk
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
Fine dry bread crumbs
Oil for frying

Anchovy Sauce (optional)

¼ cup butter or margarine
1 tablespoon chopped anchovies
2 teaspoons finely chopped parsley
1 teaspoon capers, chopped
1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice

1. If serving the anchovy sauce with these sandwiches, prepare it first: Melt the butter or margarine over low heat in a small saucepan and stir in the anchovies, parsley, capers and lemon juice. Keep the sauce warm until the sandwiches are ready to serve.

2. Using a 3-inch cookie or pastry cutter, cut the bread, 2 slices at a time, into 3-inch circles.

3. Make sandwiches of the bread and cheese, centering 2 slices of mozzarella between 2 bread rounds. The slices of cheese should be slightly smaller than the circles of bread.

4. Beat together the eggs, milk, salt and pepper. Spread bread crumbs on a large plate or sheet of waxed paper. Dip each sandwich in the egg mixture and then roll the edges, wheel-like, in the bread crumbs. This is to seal in the cheese.

5. Fry the sandwiches in a large, oiled skillet until brown on both sides. Drain on paper towels and serve while still hot, spooning anchovy sauce on top, if desired.

Makes 4 sandwiches

EGGS FLORENTINE

1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen chopped spinach
2 tablespoons butter
Nutmeg
2 tablespoons cream
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
4 eggs
4 slices white bread or 2 English muffins, split
Paprika

1. Cook the spinach according to package directions until tender but still green. Then put it in a fine strainer and push out all the water.

2. Melt the butter in a saucepan, add a pinch of nutmeg and the spinach. Using a wooden spoon, stir the mixture over medium heat, gradually adding the cream. Stir constantly until the mixture begins to boil; reduce heat to low. Let simmer for 1 minute, then add salt and pepper to taste.

3. To serve, poach the eggs and toast the bread. Spoon a liberal amount of spinach on each slice of toast and top with a poached egg. Garnish with paprika. Makes 4 servings

24-KARAT SALAD

4 large carrots, shredded
¼ cup salad oil
½ tablespoon fresh lemon juice
½ teaspoon sugar or honey
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup raisins
¼ teaspoon celery seed (optional)
¼ cup chopped walnuts (optional)

1. In a bowl, combine all the ingredients except the walnuts, and adjust the seasonings.

2. Let the mixture marinate at room temperature for one hour.

3. Just before serving, add the walnuts, if desired, and toss gently. Makes 4 servings

A Sweet Variation: Marinate the raisins in orange juice and substitute orange juice for lemon juice in the recipe. Drain the raisins and add them to salad before serving.

A Less-Sweet Variation: Use fresh lemon juice, as called for in the master recipe, and in place of raisins and walnuts use 1 teaspoon chopped parsley and ¼ teaspoon celery seed. Season with freshly ground white pepper to taste.

The Treasures of the Imperial Dynasties

MINIATURE VASE COLLECTION

A limited edition. Advance subscription deadline: April 30, 1981.

Imagine a collection of delicate and beautiful vases—authentic re-creations of historic Chinese porcelain designs. Imagine, too, that each vase is an extraordinary example of miniaturization approximately 3" high, and you have a collection which will attract the admiration and envy of all who see it.

Now you can own just such a collection: The Treasures of the Imperial Dynasties Miniature Vases. Twelve exquisite vases that reflect a thousand years of Chinese porcelain artistry.

Yet, despite the care and craftsmanship that must go into the creation of each vase, the price for each one is just $12.50. And with the collection you'll receive a beautiful black hardwood display shelf—at no additional charge.

A treasury of classic porcelain art

Here is a Mei-p'ing vase of the type created during the very early Sung Dynasty, when only the Chinese knew the secret of making fine porcelain. A handsome temple vase, one of the earliest examples of blue-and-white ware, representing the 14th century Yuan Dynasty. A beautifully decorated Baluster vase, reflecting the Ch'ing Dynasty. A 16th century vase—of classic double gourd shape—from the historic Ming Dynasty . . . and eight more beautiful, delicate vases.

Franklin Porcelain has entrusted the crafting of these vases to its Far East subsidiary in Tokyo. Thus, you are assured that each will be created from the finest porcelain to the highest standards of quality.

A collection to grace any room in your home

Because each vase is representative of an important period in Chinese history, every one is different, yet each complements all the others, making this a collection fascinating in its diversity. It's as though you personally searched the antique marts of the world and assembled this collection piece by piece.

To show these elegant vases to their best advantage in your home, each complete collection will be accompanied by a beautiful black hardwood display shelf. And to add still more to the enjoyment these miniature vases will bring to your home and family, you will receive with each vase a specially written reference folder that will provide details on the style of the vase and the long and colorful history of Chinese porcelain, as well as historical insight into the period which that vase represents.

In the tradition of fine works in porcelain, The Treasures of the Imperial Dynasties will be available for a limited time only. There is a further limit of one collection per person. The total edition will thus be forever limited to the exact number of individuals who place valid subscriptions by the end of 1981. After that time, the collection will never be made available again.

To acquire this intriguing collection, you need send no money now. The vases will be sent to you at the convenient and systematic rate of one each month, and you will be billed just $12.50 for each one when it is ready to be shipped.

To subscribe, please mail the application below directly to Franklin Porcelain, Franklin Center, Pennsylvania, by the advance deadline of April 30, 1981.

The Many Faces of Nancy Marchand

By Katrine Ames

If there were an actors' race to avoid the trappings of fame, Nancy Marchand would run a four-minute mile. She has become a household name — and face and voice — but if you bumped into her, you probably, to Marchand's delight, wouldn't recognize her.

The classic, classy bone structure is there, and that laser-beam look that can paralyze its victims, but where is the tailored, rather haughty gray-haired woman with the tone that's never heard within a mile of the wrong side of the tracks? In short, where is Margaret Pynchon — Mrs. Pynchon to her awed minions — the aristocratic newspaper publisher on the Lou Grant show?

Nancy Marchand, looking

Martha Swope

a generation younger than Mrs. Pynchon, has cropped red hair, the fine-grained skin that goes with it, a voice utterly unlike the one she bestows on Mrs. Pynchon — and talks in italics. Though she appreciates some of the benefits that a hit TV series has brought to her fine, but quiet 30-year career (including her recent Broadway assignment as Ida Bolton in the acclaimed Morning's at Seven), she'd just as soon turn her back on stardom.

Katrine Ames writes about show business for Newsweek magazine.

"It's made an enormous difference in my life," she says. "It made it necessary to define a lot of things I never had to before because it was just fantasy. Things like interviews — talking to people about my thoughts, my home life, people asking me, 'What's your favorite food? What's your favorite color? What's your secret for a happy marriage? How did you raise your children?' I don't want it in the papers. I've always adored acting: It makes me think, encourages me to question myself and human behavior, all the things that have made it possible for me to have a more fulfilled life. And now, to make it public?" The private Marchand shudders.

Born 52 years ago, daughter of a pianist and a dentist, Marchand grew up in Buffalo, N.Y., logging a lot of hours at the movies and in front of the radio — "it stimulated your imagination," she says approvingly — and studied drama at Carnegie-Mellon University (then known as Carnegie Tech). "I had wonderful training," she says. "You know what they taught me? Simple exercises: how to come into a room, how to sit down, how to listen. All those little basics. Now all they teach you is how to unlock your emotions. How the hell can you do that at 17? You don't know what they are at 17."

After graduation, her emotions intact, Marchand went to New York and quickly established herself in theater, radio and live TV. In one play she met actor Paul Sparer, to whom she was soon — and still is — married. While their son and two daughters were very young, the parents took turns acting and minding the kids, but as that became artistically and economically stultifying, they joined a repertory company in New York and got someone to help out at home. Both made the rounds of TV soap operas.

CBS

In recent years, Marchand has drawn praise for a variety of stage roles, including the uptight sister in And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little and the outraged Queen Elizabeth in Schiller's Mary Stuart. Then came the mercifully short-lived TV series Beacon Hill, the Bostonian answer to Upstairs/Downstairs, which Marchand dubbed "Bunker Hill."

The disaster proved to be a victory for Marchand, for it helped launch her as Mrs. Pynchon, and in four years in that role, she has won two Emmy Awards. But the attention and the job have not lured Marchand away from New York. For some months, she commuted to Los Angeles to tape Lou Grant and dashed back to do Morning's at Seven. Eventually the schedule was too much even for Marchand, and she left the play; TV forces her to lead a semi-bicoastal existence.

The success of Lou Grant lies in the believability of its characters and situations and the remarkably good ensemble work. Marchand's individual success is also due to her own hard work. "I'm always reading something about journalism," she says, "about the newspaper business." She denies that her character is based on Katharine Graham, of The Washington Post.

A straightforward, articulate and naturally funny woman, Marchand is anxious not to spread herself too thin. She used to teach poetry at New York's Juilliard School but gave it up upon realizing that, due to the demands of Lou Grant, she was short-changing her students.

Marchand won't short-change herself, either, by bowing to the often unreasonable demands of the public. "I don't have photos to mail out. People want to hook up with a fairy-tale image. Society once adulated knights in clanking armor; now it's sports figures and entertainers. I didn't go into acting for that." FW

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

OUTSIDE IN

I'm sorry for those
With a car that's no fun,
Since its doors must be locked
With a key, one by one.

Our car I prefer,
With its doors we lock fast
By pressing a knob
On each door, first to last.

In ours, though, I take
A little less pride
When I've locked all the doors
And the key is inside.

—Richard Armour

Well, there's equity in this all right. My neighbor was musing about the state of things and said, "Only one thing worries me about America's future under President Reagan. What if there's another actors' strike?" —Robert Orben

SWEET DREAMS

Fattening foods are what we crave,
We might as well declare it;
Did you ever wake at 3 A.M.—
With a longing for a carrot?

—Rosemarie Williamson

THE COMPLEAT ANGLER

The business tycoon's daughter was home on spring vacation from college, and he was showing her around the newly acquired family estate. They stopped at the oversized swimming pool to watch several athletic and handsome young men performing from the diving board.

"Oh, Daddy," exclaimed his spoiled daughter, "you've stocked it for me."

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

One morning, my 3-year-old son came into our bedroom at about 6, asking if it were time to get up. My husband and I both mumbled something to the effect that he should go back to bed and that it was practically the middle of the night. Our early riser thought about this for a moment and said, "But, Mummy, it's morning downstairs." —Mrs. Vicky Yob

ST. PATTY'S TOASTY TREAT

To help warm up St. Patrick's Day this week, here's our favorite Irish coffee recipe. Heat a stemmed, whiskey goblet by running hot water through it. Then pour in an ounce of Irish whiskey. Add one heaping teaspoon of brown sugar. Fill the goblet with strong, black coffee to within an inch of the brim and stir to dissolve the sugar. Then scoop some fresh whipped cream onto the back of a spoon and hold it just over the top of the coffee so it slides onto the surface. Don't stir the cream in. The real treat is sipping the hot coffee through the cold whipped cream and getting a little white mustache.

R2D2 ON YOUR FM DIAL

"There's no limit to what the mind can imagine if it's given the proper stimulus," says John Madden. "That's the basic idea behind radio."

Madden should know. As director of National Public Radio's current 13-week adaptation of Star Wars (check local listings), it was his job to translate the visual brilliance of the smash movie onto radio.

The radio version includes much of the original sound track as well as material recorded for the film but never used. Conjuring up one famous scene, though, required some real auditory imagination. The film showed the heroes sinking into a giant heap of garbage. When you tune into the radio version, listen carefully for Mark Hamill, re-creating his role of Luke Skywalker, imitating this sound by rapidly dunking his head in and out of a bucket of water.

TWO LEFT FEET

Bet you never realized that, until the 1860's, there were no left and right shoes in America. According to William Rossi's book, The Sex Life of the Foot and Shoe, lefts and rights had popped up over the past 4,000 years but never caught on. People wanted the symmetrical look of straight shoes that could be worn on either foot.

In 1822 a Philadelphia shoemaker introduced lefts and rights but was laughed out of town. Then, during the Civil War, some military shoes were made for lefts and rights. After the war, ex-soldiers tried to buy these shoes, but it was almost another generation before stores began carrying them.

NANCY THE KID

There's a basketball star in Bellevue, Ohio, who has a tough life: She can never be a hero, only a goat. Nancy, an Alpine goat, used to play catch with trainer Phil Price by butting a basketball back to him with her head. One day, when she was walking across a catwalk behind the backboard, Price threw the ball up — and Nancy butted it straight through the hoop. Now she's a scoring whiz. She denies rumors, however, that the New Jersey Nets have offered her a three-year, no-cut contract and has referred all inquiries to her agent.

NOISE DRIVES MONKEYS APE

Can the noise of daily life cause high blood pressure? In monkeys, at least, the answer appears to be yes.

For the past several years, Dr. Ernest Peterson, chief of auditory research at the University of Miami School of Medicine, has exposed rhesus monkeys to a typical human-noise environment. The monkeys wake at 7 A.M. to a clock radio, watch the Today Show, listen to the sounds of a hair drier. Then at 7:30, recorded transportation noises are played, followed by a few hours of taped factory sounds. A break for cafeteria noises comes next, then more factory clamor, transportation noises home and a few hours of TV football. From about 11 P.M. to 7 A.M. the monkeys sleep to the low hum of an air conditioner, accompanied by the sound of an occasional truck rolling by.

And how did the monkeys respond to this routine? Well, after nine months, their blood pressure shot up 30 percent and stayed at the higher level long after the noise was cut off.

THE REAL NORMA RAE

The 1979 movie Norma Rae told of one feisty woman's struggle to bring the union to the Southern textile mill where she worked. The film grossed over $11 million and won an Oscar for its star, Sally Field.

Crystal Lee Sutton is the real-life Norma Rae — and the film has changed her life in many ways.

The J.P. Stevens mill in Roanoke Rapids, N.C., where she led the labor fight, finally settled with the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union last October. Crystal Lee now works for A.C.T.W.U., trying to unionize Stevens' 71 other mills and all nonunion plants in the South.

Incredibly, though, Crystal Lee hasn't made a dime from the film. She allegedly signed a movie release, but in New York recently for an advisory board meeting of the National Congress of Neighborhood Women, she said, "I think I'm entitled to all the profits. I was the one who stood on that table [holding a scrawled sign that read UNION]. I was the one who went to jail. I lived it." Then she sighs, "But the money's not that important. I was born poor, and I'll die poor."

[Her lawyer, Robert Levine, says he and the film's distributor, 20th Century-Fox, "have basically reached an agreement that will be announced soon." He would not specify how much money Crystal will receive.]

You don't have to wait. It's here now! The help you need for catastrophic medical bills... payable both IN and OUT of the hospital.

MUTUAL OF OMAHA'S $1,000,000 CATASTROPHIC MAJOR MEDICAL COVERAGE

can provide these added dollars for covered sickness and accidents at a cost most families can readily afford. Yours over and above your basic hospital benefits.

Nearly every American family has its own horror story of the rampaging costs of an extremely long illness.

Either the family knows such a story, or they have personally experienced it.

Most people now realize that a family's earnings, bank accounts, entire life savings can be wiped out—swept away by the costs of a catastrophic illness—the kind of illness (or accident) you hope against hope will never happen, but which, unfortunately, sometimes does.

But even a catastrophic illness need not be a financial catastrophe. Now you can give yourself and your family the protection you need against the runaway bills caused by catastrophic illness or accident.

At Last, The Million Dollar Answer.

Mutual of Omaha's Catastrophic HealthCare Plan supplements the basic coverage most people have, which is fine for ordinary bills—but can't be expected to cover the cost of a truly catastrophic illness.

Mutual's new Plan provides up to $1,000,000 in protection for every member of your family. That's a MILLION dollars over and above your basic hospital coverage, which may sound like more protection than you could possibly need. But some people may, unfortunately, have to use all or most of it when faced with a long-term illness. That's when they'll be thankful they have Mutual's Catastrophic HealthCare Plan. It's the answer to medical bills that can run into hundreds of thousands of dollars today.

Why Coverage IN And OUT Of The Hospital?

When dealing with a long illness, where hospital costs of from $170 to $200 a day* are involved, it is sometimes economically and even therapeutically advisable to care for the patient out of the hospital.

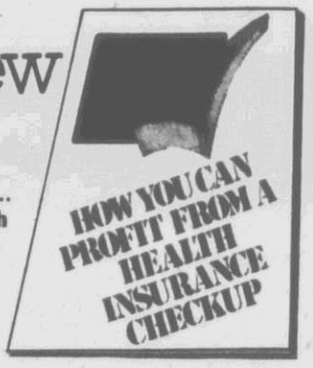

Your present health insurance plan may only pay for hospital care. This plan can pay whether the patient is hospitalized, or recuperating at home, or in a convalescent facility. It pays for treatment by a physician or surgeon. X-ray and laboratory examinations. Drugs and medicines requiring a prescription and purchased upon a physician's order and dispensed by a licensed pharmacist ... and much, much more!

The World's most Luxurious folding hunting knife, Now Only $6.99! (Belt Holster Included)

FREE BONUS GIFT

Leatherette Belt Holster for folding hunting knife included FREE of charge

RETAIL VALUE $1.99

Here's a classic, folding hunting knife you'll be proud to carry, proud to use out there in the great outdoors. It's a fully-featured knife, 4" long, with a barrel and bolsters forged from a massive block of solid brass. And handles are rivited to the body to give you a safe, sure grip.

The brake is razor-sharp, hand honed stainless steel, 3¼" long. And, it's probably the safest folding knife ever made. When you snap open the blade, a spring-steel bar locks the blade in place. It simply can't be closed until you release the lock.

This is the knife for hunting and fishing, for camping, for just plain cutting up around the house. Similar knives sell for up to $25, and this exact same knife is nationally advertised for dollars more than our low $6.99. Automatic Nightlight Turns Itself On At Night, Off In The Morning,

Light sensing "electric eye"

Plus . . . it contains a special long-lasting incandescent bulb that will burn for 50,000 hours . . . more than 13 years of normal use. And, based on the national average of 3½¢ per kilowatt hour, this Automatic Nightlight uses just about 5¢ worth of power for a full year's use!

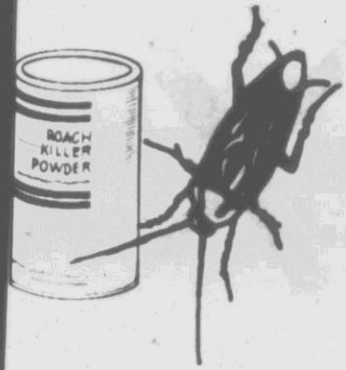

There are so many places around your house where you'll want to use these convenient little Nightlights. The nursery. The bathroom, the upstairs hall. Even in your garage and entry foyer. And, at just $3.99 each, you may want to keep a few extra on hand, just in case. Send for yours, today.

New! "Water Bed" Insoles Cushion Your Feet...

You Walk On Water So Your Feet Feel Like They're Walking On Air!

Ideal for Policemen, Postmen... Anyone Who Has To Stand On Tired, Aching Feet!

Every time you take a step, you put hundreds of pounds of pressure on the dozens of tiny bones, ligaments, sinews and and muscles of your feet... feet that weren't designed by nature to be locked up in hard unyielding shoes! "Water Bed" Insoles cushion your feet with soft pillows of water — to restore the healthful natural "give" nature intended for your feet! The result: blissful comfort, relief from painful arches, corns, calluses and bunions — even if you have to walk or stand on your feet all day.

Each insole has sealed-in pockets of water to shape themselves to the unique contours of your feet. You'll be able to walk miles in comfort, stand for hours and still feel great!

These remarkable insoles are not bulky, not visible, fit any shoes. Even switch them from one pair of shoes to another instantly. Completely undetectable in use — even with the barest sandals! "Water Bed" insoles give you supple support and comfort at a minimal price. Only $3.99 a pair — order several pair today!

WATER BED INSOLES ..... $3.99 2/$6.99

Remarkable "Water Bed" insole molds itself to your foot... it's actually a fabulously comfortable "water bed" inside your shoe!

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Bottle is missing. 2. Emblem is different. 3. Mirror is missing. 4. Fogger is smaller. 5. Goggles are missing. 6. Buckle is smaller.

Junior Whirl®

by Hal Kaufman

● PIPE THIS! If the bagpipe band had marched two abreast, there would have been one member in the rear; if three abreast, two in the rear; four abreast, three in the rear; five abreast, four in the rear. At least how many are in the band?

At least fifty-nine.

● Country Style! Add a letter and rearrange the lot to yield the name of a country: 1. INCH + A. 2. CRANE + F. 3. RAYON + W. 4. DARLIN' + E. Example: SNAP + I yields SPAIN.

1. China. 2. France. 3. Norway. 4. Ireland.

● SUM FUN! Pick a number 1-9, multiply by 3, add 1, multiply by 3, add the original number. Now, drop the right-hand digit and what have you got?

The original number.

● Riddle-Me-This! Which animal is named for a nut? The almond-dillo. Which dance did the flowers attend? The zinnia hop.

LETTER PERFECT MATH EXERCISE!

Let's see if you can cope with this timely "math" exercise. Begin with the number 15 and count letters in words and phrases to work out arithmetic.

Jot down 15.
Add: SAINT PATRICK
Multiply by DUBLIN
Subtract 26
Divide by ERIN
Add: SHAMROCK
Add: COLLEEN
Subtract: 14
Divide by BLARNEY
Add: MIKE
Subtract PAT
Add: ERIN GO BRAGH
Result: March Date.

Merry St. Pat's Day!

EYES RIGHT! Hey there, skater friend, you'd better look the other way. Add lines dot to dot to complete the scene.

GREEN LIGHT! Add colors neatly to enhance the start of the Paddy's Day parade: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Kelly green. 7—Dk. blue. 8—Purple. 9—Black.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

AMBULATE

- - - - - - - - -

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THREE WEEKS HAVE PASSED. PRINCE VALIANT'S QUEST IS ENDED AND HE JOURNEYS NORTH, TO HIS FATHER IN THULE. WORD HAS BEEN SENT AHEAD. NOW HE REVELS IN THE WARM SPRING BREEZE AS THE CLIFFS OF SCANDIA COME INTO SIGHT.

VAL DISEMBARKS AT TRONDHEIM, BUSTLING GATEWAY TO THULE. THE WHARVES ARE PILED HIGH WITH SKINS FOR PARCHMENT, BEESWAX FOR CANDLES, WALRUS IVORIES, SALTED FISH, IRON NAILS--ALL READY FOR LOADING ON SOUTHBOUND SHIPS. IN RETURN COMES GOLD AND SILVER FOR KING AGUAR'S MINT.

IT IS TWO DAYS' RIDE UP THE FJORD TO AGUAR'S PALACE. AND SUDDENLY, OVER A RISE, THERE IT IS: VIKINGSHOLM! THAT OLD WITCH, HORRIT OF THE FENS, HAD PROPHESIED THAT VAL WOULD NEVER KNOW CONTENTMENT. BUT HE HAD KNOWN IT HERE, IN HIS BOYHOOD, BEFORE THE EVIL SLIGON FOR TWELVE YEARS USURPED HIS FATHER'S THRONE, BEFORE HIS FAMILY FLED IN EXILE TO BRITAIN, BEFORE HIS MOTHER'S DEATH.

IT IS NOT THE GLARE THAT MOISTENS VAL'S EYES AS AGUAR RIDES FORTH TO GREET HIM. "CAREFUL, MY SON," THE OLD KING WARNS. "YOU WILL RUST YOUR ARMOR." BUT IT IS RECORDED IN THE SAGAS THAT MORE THAN ONE COAT OF MAIL MUST BE CLEANED THAT NIGHT.
