ECU Trustees Increase Students' Rent

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University trustees wrestled with finances yesterday and took action they didn't appear to want to take.

In the face of a one-man challenge by Greenville attorney and board member Louis Singleton, they authorized the administration to move ahead with plans for a $166-per-year increase in room rent for students and a $26 student fee increase. "We appreciate your intent," they told Singleton. "But how are we going to pay the utility bill?"

With an amendment on the floor to approve the $166 room rent increase (from $590 to $756), Singleton read a letter to the editor he wrote, but never mailed last year after the room rent was increased from $524 to $590. In the letter, he despaired that college costs are going to place a college education out of range of the children of ordinary working people if boards of trustees keep agreeing to go along with rate increases and blaming it on inflation.

He then offered an amendment to the motion to place the room rent increase at $110, rather than $166.

James Maynard, chairman of the finance committee, said much as he'd like to, he could not go along with Singleton's amendment, because the costs prohibited it. Of the $166, he said, $60 is for utilities, $30 for salary increases mandated by the state, $60 for a telephone in each room, and $16 for equipment and supplies.

The board seemed to agree to work very hard next year to hold student increases to a minimum.

The provision of telephones in each dorm room by the school is a measure being taken this year in an effort to make for greater security and convenience for students, Student Life Vice Chancellor Elmer Meyer said. "It removes the hidden cost of phone installation, once a student gets to school and saves yearly installation costs," he said.

Ninety percent of all students have phones in their rooms now, he said.

After a question by student representative to the board Charlie Sherrod, it was made clear that students who can prove they cannot afford a phone can be given a discount of the $60. No mention was made of whether a student can elect not to have a phone, even if he or she is financially able.

Current Expense Budget Given City School Board

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A recommended current expense budget calling for $270,146.57 in county funds — an increase of $356,656.79 over 1980-81 — was considered by the Greenville City Board of Education last night at their action meeting.

The current expense budget totals $3,066,343.28, with $442,096.71 from the state and $354,100.00 from other sources.

"I am presenting this to you at this point for your information only," Sup'l. Glenn Cox told the board. "These are the figures we have come up with and now they're recommended for your consideration."

The current expense total includes $10,300 (all from the county) for central support; $3,023,260.28 ($2,235,063.57 from the county) for employee benefits; $30,283 (all from the county) for community schools; and $12,800 ($4,800 from the county) for summer school.

A recommended $180,950 in county funds for capital outlay projects was also discussed. The tentative 1981-82 capital outlay figure totals $233,498, with $160,150 earmarked for acquisition of property and construction or renovation, $40,800 for acquisition or replacement of furnishings/equipment, and $32,548 for acquisition of school buses and other motor vehicles.

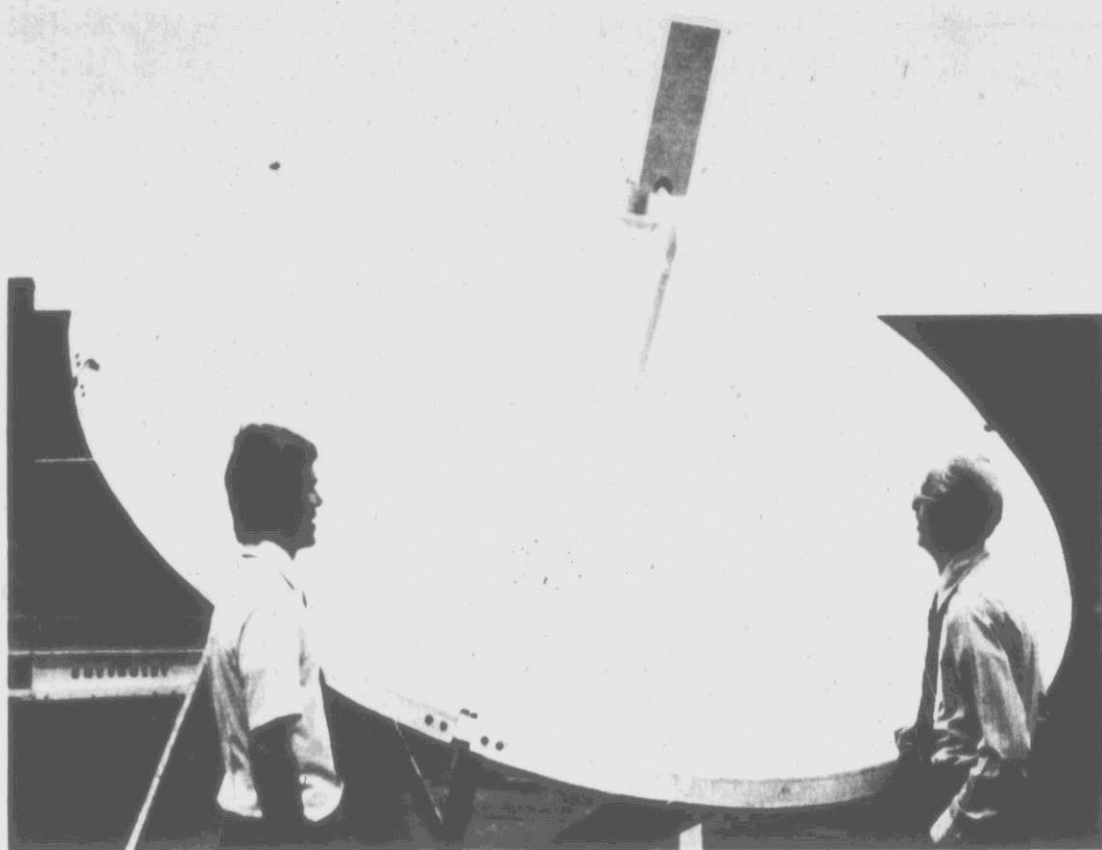

"The money is divided between the schools based on $2 per child according to projected enrollment," explained Cox. "Once again, this is not a proposed budget, only one under consideration."

These tentative figures will be discussed in a budget workshop scheduled for March 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the central office.

In other action, the board approved three amendments to the 1980-81 budget, one of which called for $35,096 for the purchase of two small activity buses. One of the buses will be purchased by the Rose-Aycock Athletic Foundation, a move discussed at the last meeting.

The board also approved the 1981-82 calendar. The first workday for teachers will be August 17 and students will report August 25 for pupil orientation. The first day of school will be August 26. Graduation is scheduled for Tuesday, June 8, 1982.

REYE'S SYNDROME!

I have been hearing a lot lately about Reye's Syndrome. I wonder if there have been any cases in Pitt County and would like to hear what the symptoms are. C. R.

Pitt County Health Department Personal Health Director Tillie Cullipher said she has had no cases of Reye's Syndrome reported for Pitt County.

According to information released by the National Reye's Syndrome Foundation, P. O. Box 829, Bryan, Ohio 43506, Reye's can strike with mystifying swiftness as a youngster is recovering from a preceding viral infection.

Since there is no known cause or cure, early diagnosis and treatment are essential and even waiting overnight can be life-threatening.

Because of possible risk factors linking aspirin with Reye's, parents should consult their physician before using this drug to treat flu or chicken pox, the Foundation advises.

It says that Reye's follows a regular pattern, occurs after a viral or upper respiratory infection:

Continuous vomiting — lasting up to several hours almost always the first sign.

Listlessness — The youngster will lose pep and energy and interest in what is going on around him. He may also become groggy and possibly stagger when walking.

Personality changes — irritability, hostility and an apparent urge to fight.

Confusion, disorientation — to the point where the child is not sure where he is or cannot identify close family members.

Delirium — confusion with irrational behavior which may become more violent as the child thrashes about and screams. This can lead to coma, sometimes within hours.

Medical aid should be sought immediately. If a doctor is unavailable, take the child to a hospital emergency room, where liver enzyme and blood ammonia tests can provide a diagnosis.

The non-profit, tax-exempt foundation seeks to educate the general public and aid in early diagnosis and provide funds for research into the cause and prevention of the disease. Information is available upon request. There are 80 affiliate chapters in 28 states, its president, John E. Freudenberger, said.

Satellite System Being Installed

The Daily Reflector is gearing up for participation in a new communications system that will involve satellite transmission of its state, national and international news report from The Associated Press.

Passersby may have seen the white "space saucer" sitting at the rear of the Reflector. That's the 10-foot dish that will capture microwave signals coming to earth from Western Union's Westar III satellite.

Those signals originate at an AP station near New York, where the AP beams them to the satellite which in turn bounces them back to the receiving points on earth.

The result is fast, accurate transmission of the news in virtually uninterrupted fashion.

The Daily Reflector traditionally has received its AP news via land-based telephone lines which, just as your phones at home, were subject to interruption from storms or manmade causes.

The satellite system has provided good transmission in all types of weather, without interruption, in tests conducted by AP technicians at several points around the country.

The Daily Reflector is among the first North Carolina newspapers to be connected to the system, which will be placed in operation in the near future. Eleven North Carolina newspapers are scheduled to participate in the initial phase of the satellite operation.

Nationally, 400 AP newspaper members have agreed to join the initial program. Eventually, AP expects to place more than 900 of the saucer-shaped dishes throughout the country.

Oil Production Cut Said Ahead

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia and three other Persian Gulf oil producers met today today amid speculation they were about to decide on a big cutback in their crude oil production to offset the glut on world markets.

The four countries together produce 14 million barrels of crude oil a day, with Saudi Arabia alone pumping 10.3 million barrels.

The meeting was held behind closed doors.

Will Hear Meal Service Plan

By STUART SAVAGE

The Pitt County board of commissioners yesterday scheduled a special meeting for March 23, to hear an additional proposal for food service at the county office building at 1717 West Fifth St. before making a decision on whether or not to make meals available to employees in the new facility.

The board, two weeks ago, heard a proposal from the Macke Co., and had indicated that some decision would be made yesterday. However, another firm, ARA (a division of which provides food service at Pitt Memorial Hospital) indicated late last week its desire to make a proposal.

The board is considering cutting the present one hour lunch break to 30 minutes, and either starting the work-day 30

U.S. Productivity Drops In Report For February

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

The nation's industrial production declined about 0.5 percent in February after six straight monthly increases, the government reported today.

Federal Reserve Board officials said output dropped off "in most major components" of the board's production index and that "significant drops occurred in the production of primary metals, instruments, furniture and lumber."

The overall production index had been rising by ever-smaller percentages in recent months, and economists had predicted it might dip into negative figures in February. The new statistic is generally in line with analysts' predictions of sluggish economic performance in the first part of this year.

In another report released today, the Commerce Department announced that Americans' personal income rose about 0.7 percent in February, an increase that probably did not keep pace with inflation.

February income was up $15 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.3 trillion, while personal spending rose $23.5 billion to a rate of $1.9 trillion, an increase of about 1.3 percent.

The inflation rate, as measured by the consumer price index, has been rising at an annual rate of more than 10 percent. February's inflation rate is to be announced next week.

February production figures showed output declining about 0.7 percent for products and 0.3 percent for materials, according to the Federal Reserve Board.

The decline in output of products would have been greater except for "a moderate increase in automotive products as auto assemblies increased nearly 7.5 percent to an annual rate of 5.8 million units from the very low January rate," the report said.

The January increase, reported earlier at 0.6 percent, was revised to 0.4 percent in the new report. The preliminary February figure also is subject to later revision.

In other production details, the Federal Reserve reported that mining output rose 0.7 percent in February, while utility output was down, "largely because of relatively mild weather and less demand for electricity."

The 0.7 percent gain in personal income followed a 1 percent rise in January, according to the Commerce Department figures.

And the fact that increased personal spending outstripped the income increase for the second consecutive month meant a second straight decline in new personal saving. New saving dropped about 12 percent in February after declining 7.7 percent in January, the report said.

Little Relief For Dry Forests From Storm

By MEL LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

A blustery March storm breezed through Pitt County late Monday, toppling a few trees in rural sections of the county but failing to bring with it the moisture needed to offset dangerously dry conditions in the woodlands.

Less than two-tenths of an inch of rain was recorded by employees of the Greenville Utilities Commission. The Greenville area, like the rest of eastern North Carolina, is running from three to six inches behind its normal rainfall for this time of year.

Wind gusts up to 40 mph were clocked in midafternoon Monday, but sustained winds were well below that figure for most of the county. Overnight temperatures hovered at the freezing mark.

Greenville and the rest of the county escaped major damage from the wind, although a few limbs — mostly those already weakened and ready to fall — were blown into roadways and yards.

"There was nothing to cause any special attention," Mayo Allen, superintendent of public works in Greenville, said today.

The forest service, however, continued to give special attention to the weather, primarily because of the dryness and the windy conditions.

"It is basically the same as it was Monday morning... the burning ban is still on," county forest ranger Mark Webb said.

Webb said the slight rainfall did little to calm the threat of fire.

The county has escaped a major forest fire, but Webb said the possibility of such a fire was a reality and reminded the public to exercise extreme caution.

Webb said the dryness so early in the year is uncommon for this area. "It's a little bit early for us. Normally, we would see this about April 15 or at the end of April," he said.

Despite the dryness, agricultural observers said the county's croplands were in good condition for early planting.

"The cropland is in excellent shape," assistant agricultural extension agent Sam Uzzell said this morning, noting that some farmers have already begun planting such crops as corn.

"The real problem is the water level, and that's low," Uzzell said. "Farm ponds that would be used for irrigating tobacco plant beds and possibly crops later are quite low."

"But if we can have a normal planting season from here on, we'll be O.K."

Uzzell said corn already in the field would not be harmed by the 32-degree weather early today, although germination of the seed would be slowed until overnight temperatures warm at least another five degrees or more.

Just In Case: Civilian Hospitals Being Lined Up

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is urging the nation's civilian hospitals to set aside about 50,000 beds to help care for heavy casualties that would be expected early in a major war.

Officials emphasized this effort is in no way prompted by any current tensions, but is part of prudent, long-term planning "to build a wartime system on foundations existing in peacetime."
Help from civilian hospitals, especially in the first month of a major war, would be vital because the anticipated casualties likely would swamp military and Veterans Administration hospitals in the United States, officials said.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has signed an appeal for aid from civilian hospitals and the program, in the planning stage for about five years, has the backing of the American Hospital Association and the American Medical Association.

"Because of technical advances in weaponry on the battlefield, we are now faced with the possibility of substantially high numbers of casualties in a very short period of time," Weinberger said.

"In addition, we will not have the past luxury of time to build and mobilize the necessary military medical support base here in the United States for casualties returning from a large-scale war fought in another part of the world," the defense secretary said.

So far, officials developing the Civilian Military Contingency Hospital System report they have won voluntary agreements from 58 civilian hospitals to allocate nearly 4,200 beds in the St. Louis, Seattle and Norfolk, Va., areas.

James T. Doherty, the program director, said in an interview he and aides planned to visit 28 areas of the country "to explain why the system is needed and to solicit their interest."

The objective is to enlist as many civilian hospitals as possible in the vicinity of existing military hospitals and within a relatively short reach of air bases into which casualties would be flown from abroad.

Doherty conferred late last month with hospital officials in the Sacramento, San Francisco and Oakland areas of California.

They are scheduled to make similar missionary visits to Denver and the Dallas-Fort Worth area of Texas later this month, to Los Angeles early in April and to Miami-Tampa-Orlando, Fla., in late April.

In the event a civilian hospital accepted military casualties, officials said, they would be paid for their services.

The hospitals would be expected to use their own staffs of doctors, nurses and other personnel to treat the casualties, which experts said would begin to arrive in the United States from the war zone within 48 hours of the outbreak of fighting.

After the initial crunch period, officials said, military hospitals in the states would gradually expand to wartime capacity, including assignment of reservist doctors who would be ordered to active duty.

Administration Keeps Student Aid 'On Hold'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan Administration is reported to be holding up thousands of applications for the federal government's principal college aid program, which gives money to one student in four, while it tries to get Congress to tighten requirements.

The Washington Post today quoted unidentified officials as saying they had blocked processing of "basic educational opportunity grants" by Systems Development Corp.

in Santa Monica, Calif., the contractor that does the paperwork.

The grants can provide up to $1,750 a year. About 2.8 million college students are getting them this year; about 6 million are expected to apply eventually for 1981-82 grants.

Grants are awarded according to a formula that determines how much a family should spend on college expenses. The formula deducts certain living costs from total family income to determine how much is available for college.

The Carter administration decided in January to increase the allowable deduction for 1981-82 living costs by 12.5 percent to compensate for inflation, thus reducing the amount to be applied to college expenses. The Reagan administration, however, announced a regulation to eliminate the adjustment.

The elimination probably would drop 100,000 students from eligibility, and would save $183 million in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, administration officials have said. Most of those dropped probably would come from families with annual incomes of $21,000 to $25,000.

The administration also wants to tighten eligibility for loan subsidies now going to an additional 2 million students in a program that, in 1978, made everyone eligible regardless of income.

Either house of Congress could overturn the regulation that dropped the 12.5 percent adjustment. Democrats in control of the House probably could muster the votes, but that would take time and leave many students uncertain about what they could count on this fall.

Congressional sources were reported to be hoping to persuade the Education Department to substitute an across-the-board cut in grants for the regulation dropping the 12.5 percent adjustment.

ECU Board.....

Chancellor Thomas Brewer explained personnel cuts of 24 positions and $300,000 in salaries per year already requested by the state, and said this is prior to consideration of a six percent cut to public higher education now being talked by the General Assembly. He said if East Carolina has to take its proportionate 10 percent share of the $32 million cut that's being considered, it will mean a "shattering of quality" here and in every school in the UNC system. "It will mean the people of North Carolina are giving up a long-standing commitment to higher education," he said.

He also pointed out that legislators appear to be listening to the cries for increased aid to private colleges and universities. Trustee Dr. John Bridgers said, while public colleges are prohibited by law from having legislators on their boards of trustees, private college "have rushed out and recruited legislators for theirs."

This ought to be publicized," he added.
Dr. Brewer added that, while the UNC board of governors works hard to prevent duplication of programs to save taxpayers money, as it stands now, private schools will be able to duplicate with no public control. The question becomes, he said, "At what point does public support mandate public control?"

In other action, the board:
— approved a tentative graduate list of 2,985 students, compared with 2,534 last year and heard that 28 of these will be M. D.'s — Approved addition to Minges Coliseum of 12 offices, a seminar room and storage space (about 3,000 square feet total) at a cost of approximately $150,000, and approved addition to Scales Field House of four offices and a laundry room (about 1,800 square feet) at an approximate cost of $50,000. Funds for both projects would come from monies from student-fees earmarked to retire bonds on these same buildings.

— Approved a change in the makeup of the Media Board to include the president of SOUL, the umbrella organization for campus minority groups and a change that would have the media board go through the chancellor instead of the student life committee.

— Heard a report by Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Dr. Robert Maier concerning the location of a Southern Regional College Board Advanced Placement meeting here and of honors received by a number of faculty members. He said a dean of the school of music will soon be picked and that plans are underway for B. S. programs in both accounting and communications. Though the number of high school graduates is decreasing, he said he is cautiously optimistic about increasing registration for next year. "We're doing a good job of retaining students," he said.

— Heard Dr. William Laupus, dean of the medical school, say that 12 new med school faculty members should be here by July 1. The Brody Medical Science Building is 55 percent complete, he said.

— Heard from Cliff Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs, that fire alarms and smoke detectors are being bought for all the dorms.

— Heard Dr. Ken Karr, director of athletics, report on efforts to become a part of an athletic conference that would include ECU, four schools in Virginia, and a sixth that he could not divulge.

— Expressed appreciation to Charlie Sherrod for his service on the board of trustees as a student representative.

— Approved a resolution of appreciation to ECU graduate Nicky Francis for his work on behalf of the transit program and other student activities while at ECU.

— Approved resolutions of respect to deceased faculty member, Dr. Roman Lauber, and deceased students, Janet Brewer of Aurora, Ronald Reid of Roanoke Rapids, and Robert Sutton Jr. of Kinston.

— Heard a description by faculty members, Dr. Dave Lunney and Dr. Bob Morrison concerning their and their students' development of a way to enable blind students to operate independently in a science laboratory with computer assistance.

— Heard that their next meeting will be at 2 p. m. May 8, ECU commencement day.

City School Bd....

Carolyn Ferebee of Community Schools reported to the board that three evenings of activities for families have been scheduled for March 31, April 2 and April 14 at various schools. Seminars are planned for adults, children and teenagers, on topics such as "Tips on Fishing," and "Home Vegetable Gardening" for adults, and "Babysitting Techniques," and "Bike Repairs" for teenagers.

On March 31 the classes will be at Wahl-Coates School, on April 2 at Greenville Middle, and on April 14 at South Greenville School. Registration for these activities begins at 6:30 each night, and the activities themselves run from 7:30 p.m. Representatives from numerous organizations and businesses will conduct the classes.

"This is an attempt to meet our goals," said Ferebee, "one of which is providing activities for all ages at a time convenient for them. It's inspiring to have businesses and organizations willing to participate in this."

The possibility of establishing an advisory council on transportation to deal with school bus conflicts was discussed. "Perhaps we should have a look at creating a council to resolve these problems," commented board member Terry Shank.

Sup't. Cox said he had no objection to a council of this type. "I have no problem with that, my problem is with the 'responsibility' part of it," he explained. "I don't feel like this board wants to give a group the authority to say who can and who can't ride buses, etc."

Yolanda King Is Speaker On Campus

Yolanda King, 25-year-old daughter of the late Dr. Martin Luther King spoke here last night at Mendenhall Student Center on the East Carolina University Campus.

Miss King, who spoke on, "The Challenge to Inure the Future," was originally scheduled to talk here February 26 as part of the Black Arts Festival at the university. However, conflicts caused the program to be rescheduled for last night.

She told the audience it may have been, "fate," that caused the rescheduling of the program, saying black culture and history are too often relegated to a place in Black History Month. People should be aware of black history and culture the year-around, she noted.

Miss King, who is currently directing an off-Broadway play in New York, traced the development of non-violence as a tactic in the civil rights movement and outlined its effectiveness.

The speaker also challenged the audience to be concerned about injustices that still exist, noting the major injustices at the present time are found in the economic sector.

She added that rises in racism are usually tied to economic problems.

Science Fair Set At Cox

Projects from the A.G. Cox Grammar School science fair will be exhibited in the school gym on March 18 from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The judging of the projects will be held Tuesday and the first and second prize winners in the seventh and eighth grade will be entered in the East Carolina Regional Fair held in Minges Coliseum on March 27.

Russians Claim Small Exercise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has told the United States the planned military exercises near Poland do not threaten that country and are too small to require notice to the West, the Washington Star reported today.

Asked about the report, State Department spokeswoman Sue Pittman said if the Russians had made such an assertion, "it's been in the last 24 hours and I'm not aware of it."

The Star said U.S. Embassy officials in Moscow were told last week, in response to a U.S. request, that fewer than 25,000 troops would take part. That is the limit above which parties to a 1975 agreement must notify each other of upcoming maneuvers.

The department's chief spokesman, William Dyess, said Monday the administration had asked the Soviets for information about deployments of Warsaw Pact forces in Eastern Europe.

Dyess said even if the forces involved fell below the size requirement for notice, tensions still would be eased if the Russians provided information.

U.S. defense analysts, according to the Star, now support Soviet assertions that "command exercises," as opposed to maneuvers, are planned. The analysts said the exercises seem to involve staff, command, communications and transport units — but few combat troops — drawn from Polish, East German and Russian forces. They would be working in those countries and possibly Czechoslovakia as well.

Reagan administration officials have worried that the exercises, though usual in the spring, might be linked to the current unrest in Poland. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. last week expressed concern over what he said was the "huge" size of the exercises.

School Break-In

LITTLEFIELD — Pitt County deputies investigated a break-in reported this morning at Ayden-Grifton High School on NC 11, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

The sheriff said the school lunch room appeared to be the target of the break-in as various food items were apparently taken. Several items were found on the ground outside the cafeteria, he added.

Sheriff Tyson, who noted that several vending machines at the school were vandalized in the incident, pointed out the shop area at Ayden-Grifton was the apparent point of entry.

The break-in was reported at 6:30 a.m.

A SUNBURST... of mock cables highlights this seamless sweater.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Knit a seamless sweater with a rounded yoke worked in a sunburst of mock cables, with the same simple pattern stitch used for bands and ribbons. Make it in Heatherblend (a blend of synthetic and wool) or in knitting worsted weight Wintuk yarn. Easy-to-follow directions for making the sweater in one piece with circular needles are for small (10-12), medium (14-16) and large (18-20).

To obtain directions for knitting Sunburst Cardigan, send your request for Leaflet No. PT-1581 with $1.00 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-1581 by sending check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. For kit containing Heatherblend yarn, send $16.50 for small or medium sizes or $18.50 for large size. For Wintuk kit, send $14.50 for any size. Please specify your choice of blue heather, gray heather, wheat heather, daffodil or ecru. Kit price includes yarn, instructions and shipping charges.

Dear Pat: While I dearly love to knit, I'm just about to give it up. Nothing ever seems to fit — most of the sweaters I make would fit a pygmy or a giant! There must be some answer to this. Can you help? — Fed Up in San Diego

The answer lies in three little words — checking your gauge. Your gauge, or tension, must match that of the designer or the garment will not turn out to be the intended size.

As most of you know, every set of directions gives the correct gauge at the beginning. Too many of us, however, ignore this and just start knitting or crocheting with the size needles or hook suggested or with whatever size we happen to have on hand. As a constant reminder, I keep on hand a sweater I once knitted for my husband. Never before having had any trouble with fit, I didn't bother to check my gauge either with a sample swatch or on the body of the sweater. Instead of measuring 44 inches around the chest, this monster-size sweater ended up almost 52 inches at that point, with all other measurements in proportion to that 52 inches.

I made a beeline to the shop where I had purchased the yarn to complain that the instructions must have been wrong. Very patiently the owner checked my gauge and tactfully pointed out that I had knitted four stitches to the inch instead of four-and-a-half. With pencil and paper she proved to me mathematically why my sweater would fit a 300-pounder instead of my normal-size husband!

Maybe, by reading this column, you will become a believer without having to suffer a disaster like mine. I'll give you just a few figures to illustrate that gauge does make a tremendous difference.

On a piece of knitting or crochet that has 100 stitches, a gauge of 3 stitches per inch will give you a piece measuring 33 1/3 inches; 3 1/2 stitches per inch will result in a 29-inch piece; 4 stitches per inch will give you a 25-inch width; 4 1/2 stitches per inch will give you a 22-inch piece and at 5 stitches per inch you will have a 20-inch piece.

A glance at the figures will show you that the lower the numbers in your gauge, the

Dear Abby

Accept Lady's Hearty Laughter

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 39-year-old man who has recently started dating a very attractive 37-year-old woman. We both enjoy theater and movies — especially comedies, and that's the problem. Abby, this lady's laughter attracts a lot of attention. She doesn't just laugh, she screams and hoots! I am sure I am not overreacting. When she laughs, people turn around and look at us.

I'm afraid if I ask her to try to hold it down, she will become self-conscious, and that would spoil the entertainment for her.

I am a fairly quiet person and dislike being conspicuous. Should I remind this lady that too-loud laughter is embarrassing? If it weren't for this one fault, she would be an ideal companion.

EMBARRASSED IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Hearty, explosive laughter is characteristic of an uninhibited, outgoing personality — a healthy plus. Furthermore, it's appropriate to laugh at comedy, so why not accept the lady as she is?

***

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to marry Jeff in a few months, but a problem has developed.

I have three cats who are like a part of my family. Jeff hates them and is jealous of the attention I give them. Now he tells me that after we are married he doesn't want to see any cats around the place! Abby, I really do love Jeff, but I just cannot see myself parting with my cats. What should I do?

TORN IN TOLEDO

DEAR TORN: If you are honestly "torn" between Jeff and the cats, you'd be better off with the cats.

***

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for four years. I love my husband and have much to be thankful for, including two darling children. Would you please help settle a dispute between my mother-in-law and me? I don't want our relationship to go sour, and right now it is curdling a bit. My in-laws recently moved, and they sold us their used living room rug for $40. It's in very good condition and is worth much more. We were glad to get it because our little house has bare floors and we can't afford carpeting yet.

The problem is that my mother-in-law insists that the rug belongs in our living room, but I put it in our bedroom. I think it looks better there. Besides, I have to get up at night to feed the baby, and it's nice to have a warm rug under my feet.

Every time my mother-in-law comes over, she tells me she thinks I should move that rug into the living room. To avoid an argument, I say, "Maybe I will, when I get around to it." Abby, do you think I should move it to please her? My husband also prefers the rug in our bedroom, but he stays out of the discussion.

COLD FEET

DEAR COLD FEET: You can be assertive without being offensive. Tell your mother-in-law you appreciate her suggestion, but you and your husband have decided to keep the rug in your bedroom. Period.

To avoid cracking or chipping when driving nails into a plaster wall, warm the nails first.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I don't expect anyone to get too choked up about this, but I just completed my "15 x 20 Stamped For Beginners-On Pure Irish Linen-Tomorrow's Heirloom-Colonial Lady At White House."

It has a $35 frame on it and if I do say so myself, it has qualities I've seen only in tapestries on museum walls.

I started to embroider "Colonial Lady at White House" in 1967... the very night I bought it. It had been one of those days where the most creative thing I had done was to witness/assist at/applaud a b.m. from a child who thought a bathroom was God's playground.

As soon as I started it, I knew in my heart that I wanted to dedicate my entire life to embroidery. I didn't go to bed that night until I had finished stitching the Colonial Lady's face, skirt, parasol and dog.

The next morning at breakfast, I was at it again, driven by some strange creative curse. Someone bled toward the end of the week and I stopped working on it temporarily... and then I was on a phone committee... and went to the store a few times... and made a few beds, and the next thing you know, it was 1973.

Every time I discovered it among the sewing supplies, I would do a few more stitches and renew my vows to finish it in my lifetime. After awhile, it got to be quite depressing. It was like a conscience that shouted, "You never finish anything!" As I saw it tucked away among an unfinished needlepoint glass case, a couple of squares of a granny afghan, a half-done crewel pillow top, and an unfinished Christmas wreath, I knew it was right.

In 1976, I was sick for a couple of weeks and dragged out

"Colonial Lady at White House." A friend of mine was visiting and observed, "If handiworks and crafts could only talk... what a story they could tell."

I looked at the crumpled gray piece of pure Irish linen, tomorrow's heirloom, in my hand and knew there was only one way to silence her. But I couldn't help but wonder what would happen on the day I finished it. Would the clocks stop? Would my heart stop beating? Would this end an era?

Last Monday, I brought "Colonial Lady at White House" home... framed and ready to hang... exactly 14 years in the making. "What do you think?" I asked my husband.

"What's the matter with the tree? I think you forgot to stitch it!"

I leaned in closer for a better look. I had missed it. "Are you crazy? It's March," I said. "Trees don't have leaves in March."

What's such a big deal about finishing something?

Tobacco Farmer Beware

The tobacco farmer had better beware.

We are in danger of seeing the tobacco program nibbled away.

The Reagan administration hasn't cut the basic program on the surface but we are in real danger of seeing it chipped at, revised and reviewed until there is nothing left.

First, with the blessings of Sen. Jesse Helms, the administration recommended eliminating the tobacco inspections program, something that is essential to making the entire thing work.

Next the government operated Commodity Credit Corp. ended low borrowing rates for farm commodities, something that is going to affect the tobacco industry.

Now Budget Director David A.

Stockman, the real power in the Reagan administration, says he favors a reassessment of the federal tobacco price support program.

Stockman spoke of a new system for tobacco, although he wasn't specific.

We can be certain that any new system devised by Stockman will mean the end of the tobacco program, and the administration may be able to accomplish this anyway by hitting around the edges of the program.

Never mind that the tobacco program works, and has worked for decades, it simply doesn't fit the philosophy of the people in power today.

Our tobacco program currently is not in good hands.

IF WE ONLY KNEW WHERE IT COMES OUT!

A Republican Bob Strauss

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The skill of James A. Baker III as a player in the game of Republican succession was demonstrated by his inclusion in a Human Events photo spread of "conservatives in the Reagan administration" even though he is perceived as an arch-enemy by key figures on the right.

They view him as an arch-enemy because of his coolness, displayed behind the scenes, to the cutting issue of the right: supply-side tax reduction. But Human Events, the right-wing weekly, was justified in including Baker in its centerfold pantheon considering his very public promotion of conservatives to high office in the Reagan administration.

In less than two months, Baker has established himself as the most accomplished politician in the White House and a major player in future games to determine the successor to Ronald Reagan. "Next to Bob Strauss," a White House colleague told us, "Baker is the best politician in town."

Like fellow Texan Robert S. Strauss, Baker managed to enter a president's inner circle after opposing his progress there. But whereas Strauss's opposition to Jimmy Carter never was formal, Baker managed campaigns against Reagan in 1976 (for Gerald R. Ford) and 1980 (for George Bush). Moreover, Baker is much closer to Reagan than Strauss ever was to Carter.

Nancy Reagan has been a principal patron of Baker, an urbane, Princeton-educated Houston lawyer, in his quick progress up from oblivion. He gained the confidence of both Reagans during the campaign when he was the first adviser to insist that the candidate should and must debate President Carter. His subsequent selection as White House chief of staff stunned the right.

Baker immediately set off on conciliation, volunteering responsibility for insuring appointment of right-wingers in the administration's middle levels. Nor did Baker hide from the right that he was protecting it while their fellow conservatives long associated with Reagan — including presidential counselor Edwin Meese III — were oblivious to its interest.

Baker's first peace offering was the selection of Thomas W. Pauken, a right-leaning Dallas politician, as director of ACTION (which includes the Peace Corps). Baker then successfully supported Donald Devine, doggedly backed by conservatives to head the Office of Personnel Management, in a long struggle against Meese.

That Jim Baker was staking out ground on the right became indisputable when he maneuvered an assistant secretary of education slot for a bona fide new right activist: the Rev. Bob Billings, former executive director of Moral Majority. Routinely passed over as too far out by Reagan's headhunters, Billings had abandoned hopes of federal office when Baker intervened.

Actually, such activity does not constitute abandonment of principles by Baker, who was rigorously conservative in his losing but impressive 1978 candidacy for attorney general of Texas. But neither Baker's campaign oratory in Texas nor his good works for deserving rightists in Washington undercuts the contention that he is riding the point in the Republican war of succession.

Militant advocates of Kemp-Roth tax reduction, both inside the administration and on Capitol Hill, see that war as the backdrop for Baker's coolness toward deep tax reduction. They attribute the White House emphasis on spending cuts at the expense of tax cuts to Baker and his lieutenant, White House staff director David Gergen (another Bush campaign veteran).

When Baker came down hard against deep tax cuts on dividends and interest ("unearned" income) as proposed by Rep. Jack Kemp, this was viewed by many supply-siders as an attack on Kemp in Vice President Bush's behalf in the succession sweepstakes. That collides with the reality that Baker has not been all that close to Bush since joining the

Can They Do Less?

Congress is often accused of not listening to the public and not reading its mood. Right now however, Congress must be listening — it voted down a pay increase for itself and for 37,000 top government officials.

In these times when major cuts are being made in the federal budget and some of them are going to hurt the poor, we think the action was entirely appropriate. No doubt it can be shown that the top officials draw less than those in private industry, but even executives of companies which are in financial trouble forgo raises. With the federal government in economic trouble, can its executives do any less?

THIS AFTERNOON

Annexation Fight

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Various moves now being plotted in the General Assembly to undercut North Carolina's highly effective municipal annexation law could work to stifle economic growth in the future, Gov. Jim Hunt fears.

Coming down hard against any relaxation in the annexation law, Gov. Hunt contends that the ability of a city to stretch its boundaries is essential to attracting new industrial and commercial installations.

Forward looking firms seek both the services which a city can offer in cultural, educational, recreational, medical and shopping amenities, and the water, sewerage, police, and fire protections which an urban area can provide.

Keeping up with the costs of providing such services makes it critical that cities be able to annex surrounding areas as they develop. The tax income is one element. Perhaps even more important is the ability of the city to plan and direct the elements of growth.

Two Ways

But obviously a lot of people across this state want the best of two worlds:

—They want to live near a city to enjoy the benefits.

—They don't want to pay the tax bills.

Attacks on the state law which currently allows a city to annex adjoining developed territory without a vote of the residents in that area whenever city government is ready to provide essential services have increased in recent years.

Lately, county commissioners have in some instances joined annexation foes in their battles against city growth despite an official position of the Association of County Commissioners that local government officials should remain aloof.

Annexation battles have been especially bitter in so-called bedroom communities which have grown up close to rapidly growing cities. A favored tactic is to seek to establish a municipal government in these suburban communities, thereby becoming municipal themselves and not subject to annexation.

This year the General Assembly will face perhaps a dozen local proposals which in one way or another attempt to escape annexation on the parts of some communities. A statewide measure which has already been previously defeated is expected to be renewed: that giving residents of an area slated for annexation a vote in any bond elections in the city from which proceeds would be used to finance extension of the city limits.

This maneuver is seen as almost the same as restoring the right to vote yes or no on the question of joining the city: a move which if openly proposed would lead to certain defeat.

Complain

Gov. Hunt said it is popular to complain that not allowing residents of the area to be annexed a vote on the question deprives them of basic rights. But that, he said, presumes that the citizens are without any representation whatsoever. In the real world of politics, city councilmen will listen carefully and consider the complaints of people slated sooner or later to become city residents because those citizens, sooner or later, will have a vote in city government.

Since the state's model annexation law was adopted

Suicide, Not Homicide

WASHINGTON — This is a hard column to write. For the past seven years, in lonesome opposition to fellow conservatives in Congress and in the press, I have been sticking up for the Legal Services Corporation. Now President Reagan wants to abolish it. It hurts to abandon a favorite cause, but maybe the time has come to let it go.

If Congress concurs, it will be said of the Legal Services Corporation that Mr. Reagan and the New Right "killed it off." Don't believe it. This would be a case of suicide, not homicide. The Legal Services Corporation, through its own failure to heed repeated warnings against its own activism, will have done itself in.

The concept was so good. Call me a starry-eyed idealist if you will, but some American ideals deserve a starry-eyed devotion. One of these is carved in stone above the Supreme Court: "Equal ministered, rubber stamp style. Every city has such tribunals. Here merchants and doctors and loan sharks sue for unpaid bills. Landlords seek eviction orders. Many defendants never appear at all. Other defendants stand in bewildered resentment. They never heard of a garnishee. "Judgment granted... Judgment granted... Judgment granted." Ordinarily the poor fellow never stands a chance.

Thus in 1974 came the Legal Services Corporation, with a mission to help. And it has helped. Through 323 local programs employing 5,000 lawyers, the corporation has gone to bat for thousands of poor persons in need of legal assistance: domestic relations, child custody, housing problems, welfare checks, divorce, employment. Such humble causes are overwhelmingly the business of the LSC.

But the corporation is heavily and unhappily influenced by ideological activists who have grander ideas. They see their role as a remaking of society. Many of the younger LSC lawyers are fresh caught from law school. Often their energy is surpassed only by their immaturity. Their passions cannot be fired by the humdrum fuel of a custody case. They want to be "aggressive."

One of the corporation's oldest hands, research director Alan Houseman, circulated a fire-breathing staff memorandum on Dec. 29. He feared for the survival of "committed, aggressive and political staff." He pleaded for "aggressive advocacy," which he defined in terms of "legislative and administrative representation, litigation and community

Justice Under Law." It is an impossible ideal, to be sure, but no matter. We ought to strive for the impossible now and then.

The idea behind the Legal Services Corporation was to put some element of balance in those famous scales of justice. The idea was to see that the poor person got a fair shake in his encounters with the civil law. Was he being wrongly evicted from his home? Was he being unfairly persecuted by a creditor? Was he being denied some public benefit that rightfully was his? Was he trapped in some impenetrable maze of regulations?

Almost 40 years ago, as a young reporter, I covered what were known as the Civil Justice Courts. Here a rough form of justice was ad-

Other Editors Say Search For Roots

(Greensboro Daily News)

Adoption laws in North Carolina discourage adopted children and their natural parents from getting together — and for sound reasons. Emotionally and psychologically it seems better for all concerned.

But times are changing, and pressure grows for more communication, at least after children reach maturity. An organization called Adoptees Together, established in 1977, has been lobbying to change the law. The General Assembly is pondering such changes in a bill introduced the other day in Raleigh.

The bill would allow adopted children over 21 and their natural parents to learn about each other, and communicate if they care to, if both parties independently sign consent forms. Such changes strike us as sound; provided they aren't amended as some propose, to lower age requirements or otherwise stir up interest where it doesn't exist.

Under an adoptive process three parties, not two, are usually involved — the child, his natural parents and his adoptive parents. All have something at stake. Some adoptive parents have no hesitancy about letting their adopted child establish relations with his natural parents in years following adoption. But others may disagree, for any number of reasons.

The pertinent point is whether consenting adults — that is, the adoptive child after he reaches maturity and his natural parents — want to get together. As adults they ought to have that choice since most adoptive parents really are relieved of direct responsibility for what happens then, their child having taken over management of his own affairs.

But this should be a matter involving adults, not children. "You need to be as grown-up as you can to handle that very emotional time," said Ruth McCracken, executive director of the N.C. Children's Home Society, a private adoption agency based in Greensboro. And she is right.

So if the General Assembly decides to amend North Carolina's adoption laws, it ought to consider the views of all parties involved. But it seems reasonable to allow an adult who wants to trace his roots to pursue that objective — provided, of course, the feelings are shared by his natural parents.

Strength For Today

STRENGTH AND AIMS

"Measure your strength by your aims, not your aims by your strength", wrote Adam Mickiewicz, the great nineteenth-century poet and patriot.

His maxim is an inspiration for people who want to make the most of their lives. Far too many of us are content to set ourselves a mark that is almost within reach, and then settle back complacently when we have attained it. Such limited goals may lead to what psychologists call "adjustment", but they certainly do not lead to great achievements.

If we study the lives of the great figures of the past we see that some of them had outstanding abilities, even genius. But most of these men achieved their goals simply by refusing to let their felt limitations stand in the way of their unlimited aspirations.

No one will ever discover his own powers until he sets himself too high a goal — and then grows to reach it. — Elisha Douglass

Sports, Business Line 'Fuzzy'

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — The line between sports and business grows fuzziest by the day, with business borrowing the suspense, the glamour and drama of games, and athletics getting involved in multimillion dollar deals.

Malcolm Baldrige, the new Commerce Secretary and former chairman of Scovill Inc., is off riding in the rodeo, while a pinstriped Al Kaline, the former baseball star, endorses U.S. News' sound economic reporting.

Ray Kroc, who succeeded in business with McDonald's hamburgers, would like to do the same with his San Diego Padres baseball team. But Robert Carpenter, who loves baseball, is nevertheless selling the Philadelphia Phillies because the economics of the game aren't what they used to be.

George Steinbrenner, who runs the New York Yankees, assembles teams with dollars and imagination, buying the best available talent with the yield produced by earlier purchases, a technique similar to that used by Charles Bluhdorn, who assembled Gulf & Western into a conglomerate by using the assets of old acquisitions to buy up still more companies.

The goals, the manners, the flair for publicity are similar in sports and business. The news, especially during baseball spring training, sounds the same. Dollars signs abound. So do tales of sharp bargaining, strikes, wage demands, profits, losses, and employee benefits.

Does David Mahoney, chairman of Norton Simon, Inc., deserve annual compensation of $2 million or so? How about Rick Burleson of the California Angels; is he worth $4.2 million over a six-year period?

Will Nolan Ryan's arm strike out 300 batters this year? Will Joe Granville's stock forecasts be accurate? Will the weaker baseball teams survive financially? How about Chrysler and American Motors? Will a certain group win control of the Phillies? Will Seagram & Sons succeed in its bid to acquire St. Joe Minerals Corp.? Will baseball attendance be up this year? What about retail sales? Can Rod Carew win still another batting title? Can the price of gold hit still another high?

Perhaps it is only because of the season, but the sports page and the business page do seem alike, and statistics have a lot to do with it.

Statistics, especially esoteric ones, have long fascinated baseball fans, but have you noticed some of the numbers they've been playing around with in business lately? Like M3, interest rate to price ratios, taxation to productivity equations and the like. Are they more meaningful than batting averages, runs batted in, earned run averages?

It's hard to say, but there is at least a suggestion that averages in sports are more to the point. Sports statistics pin blame. They are personalized; more so than in business, they deal with individuals. A pitcher's earned run average, for example, can make or break him. He can use it to get pay raises, and management can use it as a basis for trading him. When he joins another team, so do his statistics.

There is nothing comparable for a business executive, and perhaps as a result there are instances of ineffectual but somehow impressive executives moving from one company to another at ever higher salaries.

In fact, because their numbers aren't personalized, many an executive is at this moment on a business tour of the Southland, where by mere coincidence the baseball teams are holding spring training camps.

You may not be able to identify him there in the stands, any more than you would be on opening day back in the city, because of that one great remaining dissimilarity between executives and ballplayers.

Ballplayers wear numbers, executives do not.

To the editor:

As a teenager, I am really beginning to take notice of the different national events that are taking place. One event that greatly disturbs me is our involvement with El Salvador; I am not very knowledgeable about wars, but this involvement of El Salvador seems to be a nice way to start one.

When I study past wars in my history class, I see a lot of unnecessary killings. Many precious lives could have been saved if different attempts of settlement other than war had been considered. Some people believe that war is necessary to defend our country. I agree with a part of that — we do have to defend our country, but is war the answer?

Some days while in class, I begin to think, "What if a war really started?" Then I look around the room at many of my friends and ask myself, "Are we future victims of a war which seems to be the only defense of our country?"

N.C. House Narrowly Avoids Closed Meeting OK

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Last week Gov. Jim Hunt thought the Office on Regulatory Relations would be a good place for legislative budget-cutters to point their knives, but this week he wants it back.

So a legislative budget committee, after agreeing to ax the office from the proposed budget for the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, did an about-face Monday.

Meanwhile, the state House voted narrowly Monday night to give tentative approval to a bill that would give state and county boards of elections more authority to hold closed meetings. The bill passed by only a two-vote margin, and needs approval again before heading to the Senate.

The conflicting votes on the regulatory agency came as budget subcommittees made their final drives to find places to cut the proposed state operating budget for the next two years. They face a Thursday deadline set by legislative leaders, although they have postponed the deadline twice already.

The agency, which spends $207,000 a year and handles many environmental permits, impact statements and related issues in the department, was put on the chopping block by politics.

Jim Newlin, senior fiscal analyst for the committee, told legislators, "Some of the motives involved may have been personality rather than function."

John A. Williams, senior advisor to Hunt, said the original recommendation was an error, but he declined to say who was responsible for it or if it was an attempt by Lee to get rid of the agency.

"It is embarrassing," Williams said outside the meeting. "It's embarrassing anytime you make a mistake."

In other legislative action:

Open Meetings

Voting 55-53, the House gave tentative approval to a bill that would set down instances in which boards of elections could hold secret meetings.

Final action on the bill was postponed.

The measure would allow state and county election boards to meet in executive session to plan investigations and reports concerning election law violations, and to deliberate decisions in election contests.

The bill was vigorously opposed in debate by several House members, including Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, who said Hunt, who suggested it as a place to cut in a memo to legislative leaders.

The joint base budget subcommittees on natural resources followed Hunt's original suggestion when it voted to eliminate the agency, voting with a one-vote margin cast by the Senate chairman, Sen. Dallas Alford, D-Rocky Mount.

The vote was reversed, however, after deputy state budget officer Marvin Dorman told legislators that the administration decided it had made a mistake.

"The assumption was made by the governor, and incorrectly made by us, that this office was so heavily involved in federal funds that the loss of federal funds made it one that could be reduced substantially," he quietly told the committee.

"We have looked at it again," he added.

The panel voted unanimously to reconsider its action on Friday, but left a final decision pending. The committee left a "flag" on the agency in the proposed state budget, meaning it will be reviewed at least one more time before a recommendation is made to the full base budget committees.

The agency is headed by Anne Taylor, an outspoken environmentalist and former state chairman of the Sierra Club. There has been speculation that the original recommendation may have been a result of internal department it was contrary to the state's open meetings law. He also said the open meetings law contains provisions allowing executive sessions by any state or local board when considering investigations of criminal misconduct.

"This bill would violate that public policy," Miller said. Rep. Howard Coble, R-Greensboro, also opposed it. "This would extract yet another tooth from the jaw of the open meetings law," he said.

But it was supported by Rep. Al Adams, D-Raleigh, who said it arose from a contested sheriff's race in Wake County. In that case, he said, the lawyer for a defeated candidate who contested the election sought to be allowed into the board's deliberations.

The sponsor, Rep. Doug Clark, D-Kenansville, said the bill contains a provision requiring that board members publicly reveal their votes after a private meeting. Clark said the bill was "endorsed" by the N.C. Press Association.

Clark produced a letter from the association's lobbyist, Hugh Stevens, which said the press group had "no objection" to the amended version of the bill but did not say the association supported the measure.

Greeks

The House voted 103-2 to make March 25, Greek Independence Day, a state holiday. The bill was sent to the Senate. As a state holiday the day would be officially recognized but would not be a holiday for government workers.

Lighthouse

The state Senate approved unanimously and sent to the House a resolution using the National Park Service to take actions to save the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse from ocean erosion.

Sterilization

The Senate approved 45-0 and sent back to the House a bill authorizing parents to petition the courts for a sterilization operation for their mentally retarded or mentally ill children. The floor manager, Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Kings Mountain, said now the petition must be begun by the head of a mental institution.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Clear skies are expected in the forecast period until Wednesday morning for most of the nation. Cold weather is predicted from the Great Lakes into the Northeast. Warm to mild weather is indicated for most other regions. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Storms that plagued North Carolina on Monday have moved far north to bother the Yankees, according to the National Weather Service.

Sunny weather will predominate over North Carolina most of today, followed by increasing cloudiness.

The intense storm system that swept North Carolina with strong winds Monday and Monday night has moved far to the north and was centered off the New England coast this morning.

Rather brisk winds continued much of the night along the coast. But the gale warning for the coastal waters and sounds was lowered to a small craft advisory before sunrise.

A weak high pressure system moved into the tar heel state overnight. Skies statewide were clear and temperatures were rather chilly.

At most inland reporting stations readings were in the 20s while 30s persisted near the coast. At a few locations the mercury dipped into the teens.

A record low for this date was established at the Raleigh-Durham airport. Early this morning the temperature there dropped to 18.

High pressure will continue to control our weather today, so sunny weather will prevail.

The wind flow over the region will gradually become more southwesterly. This will result in fairly pleasant afternoon temperatures. Highs will reach the 50s and 60s except some cooler 40s will continue in the higher mountains.

A low pressure system is developing over the central United States, promising to bring us increasing cloudiness tonight.

The low is expected to move through the Mississippi valley tonight and into the southeastern United States Wednesday.

As a result, some light rain may reach the mountain sections late tonight and all of North Carolina will have an increasing chance of rain Wednesday.

In the northern mountains, where temperatures will remain on the chilly side, the rain may be mixed with snow.

Lows will be in the 30s tonight except for 20s in the northern mountains.

ATTEND CONFERENCE

Over 190 Jehovah's Witnesses and interested people from here attended a two-day Bible conference in Fayetteville during the weekend.

A New York Bible lecturer, John D. Busby, spoke on "Facing the Future with Faith and Courage." The announcement was made by W. R. Nichols, local minister.

UNC Priority Is Given Five Black Campuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The University of North Carolina plans to improve its five black campuses faster than its 11 white campuses, a UNC official testified Monday at federal desegregation hearings.

Raymond H. Dawson, vice president of academic affairs for UNC, disputed government claims that UNC favored the white institutions. He said current plans call for 30 new programs at the five black campuses, with 31 new programs going to 11 white institutions.

But Dawson admitted 113 programs have been implemented at white institutions since 1972, compared to 31 at the black campuses.

Dawson defended UNC in an administrative hearing deciding whether the Department of Education may cut off about $100 million a year in federal funds to UNC.

The five black institutions are Elizabeth City State University, Fayetteville State University, Winston-Salem State University, N.C. Central University and North Carolina A&T State University.

Dawson earlier said desegregation of the 16-campus system failed because of the uncooperative and arrogant attitude of federal officials.

He said former Department of Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Patricia Harris was "quite frankly arrogant and rude" during the final meeting between university and HEW officials in 1979.

WHEN SOMEONE IS ready to buy, they turn to the Classified Ads. Place your Ad today for quick results.

Officials of HEW, now the Department of Education, declined to clarify their positions on key issues during early stages of the negotiations, Dawson said. For example, he said, they would not clarify academic standards or what they meant by "significant" in discussions of enrollment.

Test-Drive Alcohol Cars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four women, including race drivers Janet Guthrie and Lyn St. James, are on their way to Washington, D.C., in a cross-country test drive of cars powered by mixtures of alcohol.

Mayor Tom Bradley, national chairman of the Carter administration's still-active ride-sharing program, sent the drivers on their way Monday from a starting line at City Hall.

Ms. Guthrie's Mercury Lynx was fueled by ethanol, or grain alcohol as used in alcoholic drinks, while Ms. St. James' Ford Escort was powered by methanol, or wood alcohol, said Ford Motor Co. spokesman Bob Harnar.

The third car, also an Escort, was powered by a gasohol mixture of gasoline and methanol and driven by Kay Bignotti, wife of race car builder George Bignotti, Harnar said. Arlene Thorne, a representative from the ride-sharing program, drove another Lynx with an ethanol-gasoline mix.

The tour has scheduled stops in 12 cities before arriving at the nation's capitol on March 23.

Austria Arrests 2 On Spy Charges

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The retired head of the Vienna police headquarters' aliens registration office and another police officer were arrested today on suspicion of spying for communist Romania.

The Interior Ministry said Edgar Berger, retired, and Josef Czernanski, a leading plainclothes officer, were under arrest and two other unidentified officials were also suspected to be involved.

The two police officers who were named were detained "on suspicion of betraying state secrets" and of "malfeasance in office," the announcement said.

The Interior Ministry said the arrests were made after "evaluation of material" that came from Florian Rotaru, a Romanian Embassy officer who defected to the West in November.

The announcement followed a report by the Vienna newspaper Kurier that authorities had smashed a Romanian spy ring involving 15 Austrians, including security policemen, civil servants and a top bank employee.

It said the police officers allegedly passed on information about East Bloc refugees whose cases they handled, while the civil servants informed Romania about planned Austrian political activities in the Middle East.

The bank employee was reported to have divulged details on bank accounts of Romanian refugees in Austria and classified economic information.

High Winds Lashed N. Carolina

By The Associated Press
Winds as high as 77 mph pounded North Carolina on Monday, damaging buildings, dropping snow on some areas and shattering any illusions that spring arrived over the weekend.

Thundershowers accompanied the winds in eastern North Carolina, but did little to recharge dwindling water resources or to slake the state's raging forest fires. High winds pushed ocean water over parts of Hatteras Island. The Dare County Sheriff's Department said surf was over roads in Hatteras and north of Avon, and winds of 40 to 50 miles per hour were expected to cause flooding through this morning.

In Avery and Watauga counties in the mountains, schoolchildren went home early as snow swirled amid plunging temperatures. A metal building was blown apart by winds in Wilmington, and the rear window of a police car was shattered by the force of a gust, police said. Officials also reported huge trees down and roofs ripped away — including the one on the mayor's office. Winds also knocked down the transmitting tower for WWIL, taking the station off the air.

Power lines were down in Charlotte, "scattered everywhere all over the city," said Duke Power spokesman Dick Pierce.

In Brunswick County, a tobacco barn was lifted and set down onto a rural road about 2 p.m. Monday by what residents said was a tornado. And other tornado sightings were reported in Cumberland County.

In Raleigh, safety workers in the Archdale Building advised workers on the fourth through 14th floors to come downstairs because the building was swaying slightly and there was potential danger from broken windows and flying debris.

Trees were uprooted in the Piedmont and a gale warning was issued along the coast. Along the coast, the airport at Wilmington reported winds up to 77 mph and further inland, the Raleigh-Durham Airport reported winds of 60 mph.

East of the mountains, some scattered light rain continued to move toward the coast Monday. Most of the rain was spotty and light and often was not enough to settle the dust or improve dangerously dry conditions. The cold temperatures follow a spring-like weekend. Highs Sunday were mostly in the 60s. The warmest temperature reported was 70 at Fayetteville while the coolest temperature east of the mountains was 57 at Cape Hatteras.

Meanwhile, agricultural officials said the cold weather could hurt crops. About $11 million worth of peach trees are blossoming in the Sandhills region, said George R. Hughes, a horticultural expert with the state Agriculture Extension Service.

Temperatures in the low 20s, aggravated by steady winds, could kill up to 90 percent of the blooms, Hughes said.

But the long-range problem confronting agriculture continues to be lack of rain. Most cities are between 3 and 6 inches below normal rain accumulations, and Monday's showers did little to solve that problem. Dr. Katie B. Perry, an extension service meteorologist, said normal rainfall is predicted for the next 10 days. But because the ground already is so dry, normal accumulations "won't catch us up but will keep us from getting further behind," she said.

Wishes Killer Avoids Penalty

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The widow of Lawrence Evans, slain last summer at a motel here, says she's relieved a man has been convicted of killing her husband, but she wishes he had not received the death penalty.

"I just happen to be one of those people who oppose the death penalty," she said from her Hayesville, N.C., home Monday after learning Clifford Henry Bowen had been convicted and sentenced to death by an Oklahoma County District Court jury Friday.

Bowen, of Tyler, Texas, was convicted of slaying Raymond Peters, then gunning down Evans and Marvin Nowlin, because they had witnessed Peters' slaying. A former policeman, Harold Behrens, was convicted of first-degree murder in hiring Bowen to kill Peters, allegedly because Peters was a threat to a drug distribution ring authorities say Behrens headed.

"But, there must be someone who loved him (Bowen)," she said, "someone who is as puzzled as I am about why all this happened."

She remembers well the night of July 6 when her husband died hundreds of miles away.

"About 2 o'clock in the morning, I suddenly woke up in a cold sweat," she said. "I'd had a dream that Lonnie (Lawrence Evans) was in a casket. He was cold and I tried to cover him up. But I couldn't for some reason."

A few hours later, Mrs. Evans received a phone call saying her husband had been shot in the back three times as he sat around a poolside table drinking beer at the Guest House Inn here.

A trucker by profession,

Lonnie had left on Monday headed for Oklahoma City.

The North Carolina housewife and mother of Evans' two children said the puzzling story will not be complete until she has talked with prosecutors who know more about the case.

Agrees Sell Trailer To Pay For Child Support

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A long-bearded Edgar Britt, imprisoned 16 months ago for refusing to pay child support, may soon walk out of jail a free man.

Britt, 37, of Robeson County, was jailed in contempt of Guilford County District Court in December 1979. On Monday, he agreed to let court-appointed receiver Steve Schlosser sell his mobile home to pay the $2,350 he owes.

District Court Judge Joe John ordered Britt to remain in jail until the money is paid. Whether it will bring in enough to cover the debt is uncertain.

A month ago, Britt refused John's suggestion he sell the mobile home to pay the money. Britt said he was letting his son use it and he would never make him move out.

That is the kind of stubbornness that put Britt in jail. When District Court Judge Elreta Alexander-Ralston ordered his 40-acre farm used as security for future child support payments of $50 a week to his wife, Mrs. Judy Britt of Greensboro, Britt sold it to his brothers for $30,000.

Former District Court Judge James Pfaff found Britt in contempt of court for selling the land and ordered him jailed in December 1979. Chief District Judge Robert Cecil reviewed the case late last year and concurred with Pfaff's action.

Pfaff ordered the case reviewed every 90 days.

John made the first 90-day review in February and appointed Schlosser to find out what Britt owns so the court could use the property to raise money for the overdue payments.

Schlosser reported that Britt sold the timber rights on his farmland in October 1978, but there is no indication how much money he got or what he did with it. Schlosser's report, however, noted that Britt's mother sold timber rights on some adjoining land half the size of Britt's farm for $20,400.

The report also said Britt sold 1.2 acres in Robeson County to a brother and that he had a $1,700 savings account at Home Federal Savings and Loan Association which Mrs. Britt took out of the joint account in April 1980.

The only remaining assets Schlosser located was $337 Britt took to jail with him. Besides the child support debt, Britt has to pay $1,000 to Schlosser plus expenses, which includes long distance telephone calls, 303 miles of travel and other expenses.

While Mrs. Britt is going to get the money owed to her, she apparently won't have much security for future payments. Her only recourse may be to bring Britt back to court if he refuses to continue payments.

Damage Results From Wrecks

More than $2,700 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5:14 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth Street and College Hill Drive involving cars driven by Larry Wayne Dutton of New Bern and Lana Lorene Helms of Raleigh.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $465 to the Dutton car and $750 to the Helms vehicle.

Elizabeth Wiggins Scottile of Jacksonville was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 8:50 a.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets.

Investigators reported the Scottile car collided with an auto driven by Patricia Louise Bullock of 1813 Battle Dr., causing an estimated $400 damage to the Bullock car and $600 damage to the Scottile vehicle.

Trucks driven by Marvin Key Blount III of Route 9, Greenville and Queenie Barrett Moyer of 1109A Fairview Way collided about 3:08 p.m. at the intersection of Farmville Boulevard and Line Avenue, resulting in $150 damage to the Blount vehicle and $350 damage to the Moyer truck.

Inner Peace Speaker Is Lecturing Wednesday

By CAROL TYER
 Reflector Staff Writer
 Howard Wimer, representative of the international Inner Peace movement, says he remembers that he saw auras around people's bodies when he was a small child.

HOWARD WIMER

But he was encouraged by his elders not to mention or believe them so they went away. Now, with Inner Peace training, he sees them again and their colors and depths give him invaluable clues as to how to relate to various individuals at various times. Auras (energy fields around people) are real and detectable through kirlian photography, he said, and can be visible to anyone who reacquaints the ability to see them.

Wimer says his organization, founded by Dr. Francisco Coll in 1964, exists in 23 countries around the world to show people that each of us has psychic and sensitive qualities that can be re-developed. Each of us had a free mind not unlike a sponge at birth, he said, but by six or seven years of age most of our spontaneous abilities have been programmed out.

Psychic gifts, he said, are divided into four areas of our true nature, he said: (1) clear hearing — intuitive ability based on what one hears in his mind for no apparent reason; (2) prophecy, inner knowing, often about happenings before they occur, without words or visual images; (3) clear vision — seeing images within the mind, often of things and people and actions before they actually appear physically in the same area of time and space; and (4) clear feeling — knowing things emotionally prior to their becoming real on this level.

Most people, he said, are stronger in one of the four fields than in all the others. However, all can develop in all four areas, he said.

All of us are positive energy, he said, and we must work hard to create negative energy and thus negative situations.

Wimer will present some of the techniques of the Inner Peace curriculum, including aura-seeing, in a lecture at the Ramada Inn here Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Cost of the lecture is $3.

Inner Peace espouses no religious or political philosophies and requires no membership or other commitment, he said. Classes can be set up here if there is sufficient interest after his lecture, he said, and the cost of each class is $2, with no contracts and no payment except for attendance at each individual class. For more information, one may call the Inner Peace toll-free number in Washington, D.C., 1-800-424-3670.

Books are also available from headquarters, he added.

Gardner
GARDNERSVILLE — Mrs. Iva Dixon Gardner died Monday. Funeral services will be held at Timothy Christian Church Wednesday at 3 p.m. with the Rev. Paul Brown and the Rev. Raymond Redford officiating. Burial will follow in the Ayden Cemetery and the Eastern Star rites will be held at the grave.

Mrs. Gardner was a member of the Timothy Christian Church where she served as organist for several years. She also was a former Sunday School teacher there. She was a member of the Ayden Chapter No. 52, Order of the Eastern Star.

Mrs. Gardner graduated from Ayden High School and Greensboro College and was music director for Pitt County County Extension Club. She was former president of the Woman's Society of Timothy Christian Church.

She is survived by her husband, B. Alton Gardner of the home; a son, Ben A. Gardner Jr. of Greenville; a daughter, Mrs. Jeanette Gardner Huggill of New York City; and three grandchildren.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Pitt County Heart Fund, Timothy Christian Church, or Chapter No. 52, Order of the Eastern Star in Ayden.

Family visitation will be at Farmer Funeral Home in Ayden from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday.

Rogers
 Mr. Larry Grey (Poncho) Rogers, 31, died Monday morning in Wilson.

A funeral service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. A.S. Yorkman, pastor of the Greenville Church of God. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Not Yet Deep Enough?

By CLIFF HAAS
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate budget writers, starting the "torment and torture" of slashing federal spending, now are being told by congressional economists that the deep cuts proposed by President Reagan still are far from enough to balance the budget by 1984.

Preliminary estimates from the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office forecast that the Reagan administration underestimated inflation, interest rates, unemployment and spending.

Spending could be as much as $25 billion more than the administration figured in 1982 and up to $50 billion more in 1984, Reagan's target year for balancing the budget, the report said. If accurate, that would require more budget cuts or smaller tax cuts for Reagan to meet his goal.

As Reagan headed into a meeting today with Republican allies in Congress, he said of the report: "The figures are phony. Their estimates are based on continuing things the way they have run them for the last 30 years."

The information was contained in a memorandum forwarded to Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., the Senate Budget Committee chairman, and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, the panel's ranking Democrat.

The committee opened hearings Monday on what Domenici called "the most massive reduction in spending in American history."

Technically, the committee is drafting instructions to the other Senate committees to reduce spending for programs under their jurisdiction and is to tell each how much it should cut.

Reagan is recommending cuts of $6.4 billion in the current fiscal year, ending Sept. 30, and $48.6 billion in 1982. The cuts would hit about 300 government programs. Reagan also is proposing cuts in personal income tax rates and business taxes.

Domenici has vowed to keep the committee in session day and night, beginning today, to complete the package this week.

Domenici and Hollings predicted the committee will approve cuts at least as big as the administration is asking, and possibly bigger, but along different lines in some areas.

Reagan is forecasting a deficit of $45 billion for 1982. But Hollings said Monday the committee should not "go through the torment and torture" of making cuts only to end up with a huge deficit next year. He predicted the 1982 deficit would be more like $70 billion under the president's program.

Hollings added that the committee should use "economics that respond to reality" and reject "Reagan economics," which he said are based on "wildly optimistic" assumptions.

The budget office memorandum may have provided some support for that argument.

"These re-estimates will be done in detail during the next week, and are therefore subject to change," wrote Jim Blum, the agency's chief budget analyst who compiled the figures. But he added that he believes his "numbers are in the right ball park, and probably on the conservative side."

The budget office said 1982 spending will be $10 billion above Reagan's estimates because the administration forecasts for inflation and interest rates are too optimistic. Faulty estimates in other areas could add an additional $10 billion to $15 billion, the memorandum said.

Blum noted, for example, that his own estimated defense spending for 1982 would be about $7 billion more than the administration is forecasting, and he said Reagan's proposals for spending cuts actually would save $4 billion less than the administration claims.

In a separate analysis, staff economists for the Senate Budget Committee said they concluded the cuts Reagan is proposing actually would save $5.7 billion less than the administration predicts.

The administration predicts inflation will drop to 9.1 percent in 1982 and 6.5 percent in 1983 under Reagan's economic program. Congressional budget experts see less dramatic improvement, with 9.7 percent inflation next year and 9.1 percent in 1983.

The administration says interest rates on 91-day Treasury bills will average 9.3 percent in 1982 and 8 percent in 1983. Budget office figures estimate 13.7 percent in 1982 and 12.2 percent in 1983.

Charlene A Pickford Fan

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — "Dallas" star Charlene Tilton apparently was the big buyer at the auction of silent movie star Mary Pickford's estate, spending about $30,000 of "Ewing" money.

Nearly $400,000 was raised during the weekend auction, said auctioneer James Goodman.

Miss Tilton, who plays the youngest member of the wealthy Ewing clan, paid $6,000 for a Louis Vuitton upright vanity steamer trunk with MP initials. She also paid $3,750 for a 14 carat, six-piece vanity set — hairbrush, comb, mirror and the like — with initials, $3,750 for an oil portrait of Miss Pickford and snared "lots of hats and costumes."

Singer Bette Midler plunked down $2,200 for an oil portrait of Miss Pickford and bought many old dresses and fans.

The "Mark of Zorro" costume worn by Douglas Fairbanks Sr. went for $3,250, and Valentino's cape went for $4,750. The wedding gown in which Miss Pickford married Fairbanks sold for $1,200.

Dennard Lifts Duke By Alabama

DURHAM, N.C. — Duke forward Kenny Dennard, usually a free spirit on and off the court, said that his shattered nerves were to blame for his 46 percent performance from the free throw line this season. But then there was Monday night.

The Blue Devils downed pesky Alabama, 75-70, in a second-round game of the National Invitation Tournament. Duke will travel to Purdue for a quarterfinal game Friday night.

The victory was due in part to Dennard's 25 points, including an amazing 11 of 12 free throws for the King, N.C. native.

"I was just nervous a lot," Dennard said in describing his previous difficulty. "I got over my nervousness. I'm looking at the basket. I'm concentrating."

That concentration helped Duke keep close in the first half of the contest. Dennard hit all seven of his free throw attempts to thwart any efforts by the Crimson Tide to breakaway. Although Alabama had held a five-point lead early in the period, the score was tied at 36 as both teams went to their locker rooms.

Duke emerged from halftime with a quick 7-2 burst and spent the rest of the night keeping Alabama off its backs.

The Crimson Tide did close to within 3 at 61-58 with 4:03 remaining on a tap-in by Eddie Phillips. But Vince Taylor, who followed Dennard in the scoring with 17 points, scored Duke's next seven points to lift the Blue Devils to a 68-64 advantage with 1:32 remaining.

Alabama got no closer after that as Duke took advantage of Alabama's

"They got themselves mentally prepared for this game at a time when it would have been easy to make excuses," Krzyzewski said. "I can't single out one player because many guys gave us great plays."

One of those guys was not Gene Banks. The 6-7 forward was sitting on the bench, nattily attired in white tie and tails and nursing a broken wrist. But Jim Suddath, the replacement for Banks, added 16 points. Chip Engelland also came off the bench and added 10.

Dennard said things would be different with Banks on the bench, but added that there's enough talent on the team to compensate for the void.

"We've got good players on this team. They just don't get a chance to shine," Dennard said.

Duke was 25 of 35 from the free throw line, while Alabama took just 12 free shots and hit eight. Crimson Tide head coach Wimp Sanderson noted that fact, plus the fact that Duke enjoyed a 34-29 edge on the boards.

"We shouldn't have been beaten on the boards," Sanderson said. "Duke shot very well from the outside against our zone. Maybe we stayed in it too long."

"They beat us at the line. We had six more field goals," he added.

Alabama had an anxious moment early in the second half when Mike Davis fell on his head while scrambling for a rebound underneath his own basket. He was taken from Cameron Indoor Stadium by stretcher to nearby Duke Medical Center. Although the extent of his injury was not revealed, Davis was treated and released from the facility Monday night.

ECU Graduate Assistant Quits For Duke Post

East Carolina graduate assistant Rod Broadway has resigned to accept a full-time position at Duke University, it was announced today. Broadway will coach nose guards and defensive linemen for the Blue Devils.

Broadway came to East Carolina last year and coached noseguards for Pirate head coach Ed Emory.

Previously, Broadway played defensive line at the University of North Carolina from 1973 to 1978 and also played briefly for the Miami Dolphins of the National Football League and the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League.

Broadway is a native of Albemarle, N.C., where he played for West Stanley High School.

Big 10 Looms Big In NIT

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Big Ten is looming bigger every day in the National Invitation Tournament.

On the verge of the quarterfinals, Minnesota, Purdue and Michigan are all still standing tall — and looking pretty healthy at that, according to their latest victims.

"That team was 9-9 in the Big Ten — and it gives you an idea of how they play basketball in the Big Ten," said Connecticut Coach Dom Perno after suffering an 84-66 humiliation at home to the Gophers Monday night.

"They got inside people, they got outside people, they have seven quality players and will be tough to beat in the NIT."

So will Purdue, which beat Dayton 50-46 in another second-round game Monday night.

"They just manhandled us on the boards," said Dayton Coach Don Donohoe. "It was a case of finesse."

Those games were two of seven played Monday night as the NIT field dwindled to eight teams. Elsewhere, Syracuse whipped Holy Cross 77-57; Duke stopped Alabama 75-70; South Alabama nipped Georgia 73-72; West Virginia edged Temple 77-76 in overtime and Tulsa downed Texas-El Paso 72-67. Michigan scored a run-away 80-68 victory over Toledo in the only NIT game played Sunday night.

The results set up the following quarter-final pairings: Michigan at Syracuse and West Virginia at Minnesota on Thursday night and Duke at Purdue and South Alabama at Tulsa Friday night.

Trent Tucker, hitting 14 of 17 shots from the field, scored a career-high 35 points as Minnesota rolled past Connecticut.

Seven-foot-two sophomore center Randy Breuer added 19 points for the Gophers, 16 in the second half when the Big Ten team pulled away from a tight 37-33 lead at intermission.

"I felt I couldn't miss," said Tucker. "Our team is oriented to the big guy (Breuer), but I had the rhythm, and the coach told me to put it up."

Tucker entered the game with a 14.1 average.

"Tucker has been a real good shooter," said Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher. "But he just proved himself a little more tonight."

Forward Mike Scearce had three baskets and two assists in the final seven minutes to help Purdue beat Dayton. Dayton was forced to play most of the game without Mike Kaniecki, its leading scorer and rebounder for the season. The 6-10 junior center sprained his right ankle taking a jump shot at the 17:02 mark of the first half.

He was sent to the hospital for X-rays, which were negative, at halftime after soaking the ankle in ice. Later, he returned to the Flyers' bench on crutches.

Leo Rautins and Erich Santifier combined for 41 points to power Syracuse over Holy Cross.

Rautins, a 6-foot-8 sophomore transfer from Minnesota, scored 21 points and pulled down 10 rebounds. Santifier finished with 20 points to help the Orangemen improve their record to 20-11.

The victory was the fifth straight in postseason play for Syracuse. The Orangemen had finished with their worst regular season record in a decade and were excluded from the NCAA tournament, despite winning their own Big East playoffs, for the first time in nine years.

"He's one of the finest big-man passers in the country," said Holy Cross Coach George Blaney of Rautins. "He's an exceptional player."

Ed Rains hit two pressure free throws with four seconds remaining to give South Alabama its tight victory over Georgia. Rains, who finished with a game-high 25 points, hit the free throws after Georgia had called three consecutive timeouts before he went to the line.

South Alabama had trailed 70-65 with less than three minutes remaining before staging a comeback.

"We never lost our composure," said South Alabama Coach Cliff Ellis, noting that the lead had changed 21 times in what he called "a great game."

"It was just a game that went down to the final minute and I'm glad it didn't go further," he added.

It's Bye, As In Goodbye In NCAA

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

"It would seem," Ron Abernathy observed, "that this year, the word 'bye' is short for 'goodbye.'"

Louisiana State's assistant coach knows whereof he speaks. Eight of the 16 teams which received first-round byes waved bye-bye to the rest of the field in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament by the end of last weekend's second round.

That included the nation's three top-ranked teams — DePaul, Oregon State and Arizona State — leaving LSU's Tigers, No. 4 in the final regular-season poll, the highest-ranked team still alive heading into the regional semifinals.

The other teams to receive first-round byes, then leave sooner than expected, were UCLA, Wake Forest, Kentucky, Louisville and Iowa. Along with LSU, the "bye" teams still alive are Notre Dame, Virginia, Tennessee, Illinois, Utah, North Carolina and Indiana.

"Considering all the other upsets," Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said Monday, "we are awfully happy to be where we are right now."

Thursday night it's Brigham Young, 24-6, vs. Notre Dame, 23-5, and Virginia, 26-3, vs. Tennessee, 21-7, in the East Regionals at Atlanta; and Kansas State, 23-8, vs. Illinois, 21-7, and Utah, 25-4, vs. North Carolina, 26-7, in the West at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Friday night it's LSU, 29-3, vs. Arkansas, 24-7 and Wichita State, 25-6, vs. Kansas, 24-7, in the Midwest in New Orleans; and St. Joseph's, 24-7, vs. Boston College, 23-6, and Alabama-Birmingham, 23-7, vs. Indiana, 22-9, in the Mideast at Bloomington, Ind.

Notre Dame has been a giant killer of sorts dating back to the 1940s. More recently, the Fighting Irish have halted winning streaks of 28 games by Virginia (this year), 26 games by DePaul (last year), 29 games by San Francisco (1977), 34 games by South Carolina (1974), and 88 games by UCLA (also 1974).

Now Notre Dame faces the unenviable task of trying to put the clamps on Danny Ainge. BYU's scoring machine whose 37 points last Saturday helped demolish UCLA's once-awesome Bruins 78-55.

In the schools' only previous meeting, in New York's

Madison Square Garden Dec. 28, 1956, the Irish routed the Cougars 91-66.

"We couldn't have been more impressed with Brigham Young after watching them beat UCLA," Phelps said. "Danny Ainge is a true All-American and the rest of their players complement him so well."

"We'll have to come out and try to take charge right away and just hope that Orlando Woolridge can help us at least to some extent."

UVA's Lamp, Raker Named Academic All-Americans

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Jeff Lamp and Lee Raker of Virginia and Andy Kolesar of Virginia Military were named Monday to the 10-man Academic All-American basketball squad by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Lamp was the second leading vote-getter on the squad while Kolesar, chosen for the second consecutive year, was fourth in the balloting and Raker was ninth.

Kolesar, a civil engineering major, had the highest grade point average on the team, 3.688 on a 4.0 scale. Lamp carries a 3.295 average in psychology and Raker has a 3.085 in economics.

The 6-foot-6 Lamp became Virginia's all-time leading scorer in Sunday's 54-50 NCAA tournament victory over Villanova, pushing his career total to 2,238 points. Also named to the team were Canny Ainge of Brigham Young, Darnell Valentine of Kansas, Dan Schayes of Syracuse, Craig Zanon of Montana, Brian Walker of Purdue, Maarty Bodner of Michigan and Mike Kesieski of Dayton.

UCLA's Brown Resigns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After two winning seasons at UCLA, Larry Brown has been lured back to the National Basketball Association as coach of the New Jersey Nets.

He disclosed his decision to the Bruins at a closed-door meeting with them Monday, and although he would not confirm he was leaving, two players who asked to remain anonymous said that was what Brown told them.

They also said Larry Farmer, a Bruin assistant basketball coach for six years and a player under former coach John Wooden, would be the new UCLA head coach.

Nets General Manager Charlie Theokas confirmed late Monday night that Brown, a former coach of the Denver Nuggets, had signed to coach the team starting next season.

Theokas, in an interview with ABC Radio Sports, said: "We're really excited about Larry and about next year. We feel we have half turned around our program and with the addition of Larry Brown we feel next year basketball in New Jersey will be exciting."

Several players were near tears as they filed out, one-by-one, from Monday's meeting in Pauley Pavilion.

Freshman center Kenny Fields, who had been dropped from the team and then reinstated by Brown, said: "We hate to see him go. Coach has a tendency to get real close to his players. Wherever he goes, I hope he keeps in touch."

Brown had been rumored to be leaving UCLA for the past month, but said he would wait until after the Bruins finished the season to make a decision. Monday's talk with the team came two days after the club lost its opening game of the NCAA tournament.

He becomes the third UCLA head basketball coach to leave in the past six years. Following the end of Wooden's 27-year reign at the school, Gene Bartow, Gary Cunningham and Brown each guided the team for two years.

This season Brown's 10th-ranked Bruins, who suffered an embarrassing 78-55 NCAA playoff loss to BYU Saturday, finished with a 20-7 record. In 1979-80, Brown coached the team to a second-place finish in the NCAA tournament and a 22-10 overall record.

Brown, 40, had become the focus of considerable controversy at UCLA during the past two months. The speculation about his going to New Jersey was never really quieted. Brown publicly criticized the school for, among other things, not allowing enough students easy access to Bruin basketball games.

Later, he dropped Fields from the team because of what Brown described as an attitude problem.

Royal Rookie Impressive

By The Associated Press
Ken Phelps knows how to impress the boss.

The 26-year-old rookie first baseman slammed a two-run homer Monday to spark the Kansas City Royals to a 6-5 exhibition baseball victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I thought he got an A-plus today," Royals Manager Jim Frey said of Phelps. "Any time a man hits home runs, you take that into consideration."

Phelps, who played with Kansas City's Triple-A farm club at Omaha last season, hopes to move north with the American League team this year.

"We're going to head north with 25 names," Frey said. "What he (Phelps) does down here will determine our decision."

In other exhibition games Monday, Minnesota crushed Toronto 14-3, Baltimore defeated Atlanta 3-1, Detroit blanked Los Angeles 9-0, Cincinnati outlasted Houston 12-10, Pittsburgh beat St. Louis 7-3, Milwaukee stopped Cleveland 5-2, San Diego edged Oakland 5-4, California nipped the Chicago Cubs 2-0, Seattle slipped by San Francisco 9-8, the Chicago White Sox downed the New York Mets 6-5, Boston squeezed by Montreal 6-5 and the New York Yankees and Texas battled to a 4-4 tie that was called after 17 innings because of darkness.

For Phelps, it was his second game-winning hit in two days. He collected his four-bagger Monday off Philadelphia pitcher Porfirio Altamirano in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Reliever Dan Quisenberry pitched the final three innings to preserve the victory over the Phillies, who beat the Royals four games to two in last year's World Series. Mike Schmidt homered for the Phils while Amos Otis added a two-run homer for Kansas City.

The Boston Red Sox handed Montreal its first loss in five starts as veteran Carl Yastrzemski keyed a three-run outburst in the first inning with a run-scoring double. The Expos pulled to within one run by scoring twice in the ninth but left the bases loaded against reliever Mark Clear.

Ken Singleton drove in two runs with a pair of doubles and three pitchers scattered nine hits in Baltimore's victory. Singleton now is 7-for-12 and has driven in five of the Orioles' 10 runs. Biff Pocoroba

homed for Atlanta's lone run.

Lance Parrish tripled twice, doubled and singled and Al Cowens drove in four runs with a triple and double as Detroit trounced Los Angeles. Five Detroit pitchers, including Mark Fidrych, held the Dodgers to just four singles.

Ron Oester, Ken Griffey and Nick Esasky hit home runs as Cincinnati routed Nolan Ryan with 10 runs in two innings, then had to hold on for its victory. Jose Cruz homered for Houston in a game that was played in gale force winds that swept toward the outfield.

Home runs by Pete Mackanin and John Castino combined with excellent pitching by Jerry Koosman led Minnesota to its romp.

Koosman, making his third start this spring, went five innings and allowed only one hit, a solo home run by John Mayberry to lead off the fifth.

Pittsburgh's Dave Parker slammed a two-run homer on his first swing of the exhibition season, leading the Pirates past St. Louis. Dale Berra added a double and a triple to the Pittsburgh attack.

Jim Anderson's home run to lead off the ninth inning started a seven-run rally as Seattle came from behind to nip San Francisco. Julio Cruz tripled and scored Seattle's first run, then drove home the tying run with a two-run triple in the ninth and scored the winning tally on Rod Craig's sacrifice fly.

Cecil Cooper had three hits, including a bases-loaded homer, to power Milwaukee to victory. Rookie Wayne Cagle homered for Cleveland.

Johnny Oates' run-scoring single in the ninth inning gave the New York Yankees a 4-4 tie with Texas. The 4-hour, 33-minute contest, which had 47 players see action, continued until the end of the 17th inning, when it was called because of darkness.

Unsold: 'It's Just Time To Quit'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Center Wes Unseld, saying "it's just time to quit," announced Monday night that he will retire from the National Basketball Association's Washington Bullets at the end of this season, the Washington Post reported.

"I'm retiring basically because of the way my legs are acting, especially the good one," Unseld, the mainstay of the Bullets for the last 13 seasons, told the Post.

"I don't know if I'd be able to play next season even if I wanted to. There are other things I want to do anyway. It's just time for me to stop playing basketball."

Unseld said he informed Bullets owner Abe Pollin of his decision two weeks ago.

"I explained my reasons to him and he understood," Unseld said. "I told him it was up to him to announce it whenever he thought the time was right."

The Bullets are expected to formally announce the retirement at a news conference Wednesday.

Unseld, who turned 35 last Saturday, has been bothered much of this season by arthritic knees and has already missed 14 games. The only other time during his career he missed that many games was during the 1973-74 season, when he had major surgery on his left knee and was told by some doctors that he would never play again. He played in all 82 games last season.

"When I started having trouble with my leg during Christmas time is when I started thinking about quitting," he said. "Especially when I wasn't playing. There's something about getting paid and not playing that bothers me."

Unseld is known for his strength, his court sense and his outlet passes. Listed at 6-foot-7, he said he is really only 6-5 1/2.

He said he was afraid to tell the Bullets his true height when he was an All-American at the University of Louisville because he thought the team, then located in Baltimore, wouldn't draft him if they knew he was that small.

The Bullets made Unseld the first pick in the 1968 draft. That season, he was named the Rookie of the Year and Most Valuable Player, becoming only the second player in league history to win both honors simultaneously. Wilt Chamberlain was the first.

The Bullets had never had a winning season before Unseld's rookie season, but they have made the playoffs every year he has been with them and had a winning record in 10 of those seasons. He also played a major role in their NBA championship season in 1977-78 and led the team to the finals three other times.

Unseld is the all-time Bullet leader in games played, minutes played, rebounds and assists, and is second in points scored and blocked shots.

Rule Changes Proposed In NFL

MAUI, Hawaii (AP) — Changes in National Football League playing rules will be proposed today amid continued conjecture on the suit the Oakland Raiders and Los Angeles Coliseum have brought against the league.

The Competitions Committee makes the rules report, including one to lessen the penalty for pass interference, while the owners are expected to stand fast in their determination not to let the Raiders move from Oakland.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle was asked if he expected a vote on the Oakland situation after the ballot went 22-0 a year ago. He answered, "Not unless the Raiders ask for one."

Rozelle said the league expects the antitrust case will go to trial and eventually could reach the United States Supreme Court.

Asked if he would step down if the Raiders should win the litigation, the commissioner answered:

"As long as I enjoy being part of the league, I will want to stay. If any circumstances occur, including personal, that I don't enjoy it, I will step down."

Rozelle would not enjoy a victory by the Raiders' managing general partner Al Davis. Yet he emphasizes he is only acting for the other 27 NFL team owners in this fight.

"I have a contract that says I enforce the constitution and by-laws," Rozelle said at the league's annual meeting of its owners began. "That is what I am doing."

He told the media he saw no out-of-court settlement in the Raiders case which goes to trial on an antitrust accusation shortly. The loser is expected to appeal.

Asked if a victory by the Raiders and LA Coliseum in district court would mean the Raiders would be able to move immediately, the commissioners said that depended on the jury verdict or what the appeals court says when it receives it.

He said that a full appeal procedure probably would take more than two years.

Rozelle based his opinion of no out-of-court settlement of the Raiders' matter on the fact "four corners are involved."

He named them as the Oakland Coliseum and Raider fans, Al Davis and the Raiders, the Los Angeles Coliseum and fans there and the 27 defendants — meaning the other NFL owners.

The Los Angeles Coliseum seeks a replacement for the Los Angeles Rams who moved to Anaheim in adjacent Orange County starting with the 1980 season.

Davis claims the Oakland Coliseum has not increased seating nor made improvements during the team's tenure. The Oakland Stadium holds 54,615. The Los Angeles Coliseum could hold 90,000.

Group Trying To Improve Boxing Hope Is To Establish Rating System For Officials

By EDSCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

Boxing referees and judges often are ridiculed even when they do their jobs properly, so it is a pleasure to have an opportunity to acknowledge a group that is trying to improve the sport.

The group is the Boxing Officials Association of New York, founded in 1977 by referee Arthur Mercante. It now has a membership of 32 referees and judges.

Mercante says the group has been discussing its goals with the New York State Athletic Commission, chaired by Jack Prenderville. That the commission is listening is also an encouraging sign. Too many boxing commissioners seem to have been born without ears.

Two of those goals are to be applauded and hopefully to be reached not only in New York, but in every boxing state.

"We're trying to establish a rating system for officials based on seniority and capability," says Mercante, "and we want to establish a mandatory clinic for referees and judges twice a year."

It is especially important that any rating system put capability ahead of seniority but not ignore seniority, which should mean experience.

A big step toward improving capability was gained when the association gained in the area of incentive by achieving its goal of increased fees.

Mercante says the $750 he got for working the first Ali-Frazier in 1971 — each fighter got $2.5 million — was the biggest check for a referee in New York State at that time. He also remembers getting paid $500 the night Ali got $6 million and Ken Norton more than $2 million for their fight at Yankee Stadium in 1976.

Now the main-event pay scale is $1,000 for referees and $600 for judges if the gate is from $100,000 to $300,000. If it is more than $300,000, then the fees are negotiated between athletic commission and the promoter. Mercante says Harold Valan got $2,000 for refereeing the Larry Holmes-Mike Weaver heavyweight title fight in the Garden in 1979 and that he got $1,000 for working the Roberto Duran-Carlos Palomino bout, an important 10-round match on the same card.

The mandatory clinics for officials would teach and revue the mechanics in scoring and refereeing. It would also be a teaching and revue period for referees in the ways to recognize injuries and to recognize signs which should tell them to stop a fight.

Mercante also said the establishment of insurance for fight officials is being discussed. "We're trying to resolve problems that arise where legal action is taken against an official," and "we're trying to establish tight security for officials in the wake of riots in sports, not only in boxing."

Insurance and security are linked. In these days, when missiles hurled from by crowds are not the exception and when it no longer uncommon for the crowd to reach the ring, referees and judges should be insured from injury.

As for security — or, more accurately, the lack of it — it is an issue for which nobody should have to campaign. Promoters must be held responsible to point of license revocations and court action, for security. If security dips into a promoter's profits, so be it.

In these days where people sue at the drop of a pin, fight referees are finding themselves targets of suits in cases where fighters are injured or killed.

Perhaps the referee is at fault. But if he is, then he is at least entitled to be provided with counsel by the commission that appointed him.

The goals of the officials association are worthy.

Lady Bucs Unranked

East Carolina's Lady Pirates fell out of the top 20 this week in the latest AP poll.

ECU, ranked 20th last week, lost to Old Dominion, 81-70, last week in the Region II AIAW tournament. ODU moved from #6 to #3 in this week's poll, behind only #1 Louisiana Tech and #2 Tennessee.

Southern Cal is ranked #4, Maryland #9 and N.C. State #13.

Tree Testify Kush Did Not Punch Rutledge

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Arizona State University football Coach Frank Kush grabbed punter Kevin Rutledge by the face mask after a bad kick in a 1978 game and shook it vigorously but did not punch him, three spectators testified Monday.

One other witness said he watched Kush latch onto Rutledge by the shoulder pads "near the neck area," but did not see a punch.

Rutledge is suing Kush, the university and others for $2.2 million in damages. He claims Kush split his lower lip with a "knuckle-punch" following a 27-yard punt in the fourth quarter of Arizona State's 41-7 loss to Washington Oct. 28, 1978, in Seattle.

Kush has previously testified that he "can't ever recall touching Rutledge" in the game and "was nowhere near him" when the incident supposedly happened.

Rutledge, who now attends the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, also alleges Kush and former Arizona State defensive secondary coach Bill Maskill harassed him into quitting the team in 1979 and forfeiting his scholarship.

Kush, in testimony, and Maskill via a deposition, have denied the harassment charges.

The Washington witnesses called to the stand Monday represented the final ones for the defense in the trial's first phase which is now in its seventh week. Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Thomas C. Kleinschmidt said he may present the case to the jury of 10 women and three men "sometime on Wednesday" for deliberation.

One of the witnesses — Edward "Jed" Jennings, a Seattle retail store owner and season-ticket holder to University of Washington football games — said he was "250 feet from the Arizona State sidelines" when the alleged altercation occurred.

"After the punt, the punter was trotting slowly off the field. Two or three steps from the sidelines, Frank Kush confronted him straight on and grabbed him by the front here," Jennings said, pointing to a spot slightly below the knot of his necktie.

"He (Kush) shook him. They conferred for about 10-15 seconds and then the punter walked away to a spot behind the team bench. Another coach in street clothes — or it could have been another player — then came over to him (Rutledge) and talked to him. It looked like he was being consoled after being chewed out."

Jennings said from his 50-yard line seat, he did not see Kush throw any kind of punch.

"There was no such action," he said. "But I thought it was kind of odd that someone would grab somebody like that when the game was already lost. I didn't think it was right."

The 41-7 loss to Washington was the worst of Kush's 22-year career as head football coach at Arizona State.

Another witness, Jack Oord, said he watched Rutledge "shank a punt off the side of his foot, leave the field where he was met by Frank Kush who grabbed his face mask and shook it."

Oord, a Seattle elementary school principal, told the court his 35-40 yard line seats "are close to the visiting team's bench and it's interesting to me to see how different coaches react."

But he could not recall in which quarter the punt in question occurred.

Navratilova Returning To Old Form Once More

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Parental concern is nice if you're a little girl in pigtails and ribbons but, if you're over 21 and an independent-minded multimillionaire, it can be a drag.

Martina Navratilova found it so when her parents and little sister moved in on her last year and took much of her attention away from tennis, which is her livelihood.

"I love them dearly," said the gifted Czechoslovakian defector Monday when she came to New York to promote the $300,000 Avon Championships March 25-29 in Madison Square Garden, "but they were miserable over here."

"My father didn't speak English and didn't want to learn. In Prague he was a successful engineer. Over here, not knowing the language, he didn't know what to do. He missed going to the club, drinking and talking with his friends.

"My mom was equally miserable. She told me what time to go to bed, what to wear and what to take for a cold. It was like I was a kid coming home from college."

"I am not one to cry 'wolf.' I don't complain when my shoulder hurts. But it was a troublesome year for me. I had to take care of them financially as well as emotionally."

Martina's father, Mirek, mother Jana and little sister Jana returned to Prague at the end of last year after eight months in this country. America wasn't for them. With fewer responsibilities, Martina's tennis game, which had been in the doldrums, suddenly came to life again.

The 24-year-old left-hander, twice winner at Wimbledon and No. 1 in world women's rankings in 1978 and 1979, has won four of the six tournaments on the Avon winter tour, losing only two matches, and is the top-seeded favorite in the climactic Avon Championships.

Although three of her strongest rivals — Chris Evert Lloyd, enjoying a sabbatical with her family; Tracy Austin, sidelined by a sciatic nerve, and young Andrea Jaeger, with a foot ailment — haven't been fit to challenge, Martina refuses to concede that her winter's success would have been different if everybody had been well and active.

"When I am healthy and able to apply myself, I can beat any or all of them," she says with finality. Most tennis critics agree — this young Czechoslovakian has all the tools for greatness.

She has been overpowering in winning at Cincinnati, Chicago, Los Angeles and Dallas. She crushed Jaeger 6-4, 6-0 in Los Angeles and Pam Shriver 6-2, 6-4 in Dallas.

Martina first came to America as a 16-year-old in 1973 and fell in love with the country. During the U.S. Championships at Forest Hills in 1975, she announced that she planned to leave her home and family in Czechoslovakia and seek asylum in the United States.

"Everybody was so nice to me," she said. "Life was so different. If I wanted a pair of shoes, I could go into the first store and get them. In Czechoslovakia, you would have to queue up and probably would take five hours. Then the shoes wouldn't fit."

Martina Americanized herself immediately. She learned English until now she speaks fluently. She went through the jeans and rock craze. She became an avid Dallas Cowboys football fan.

"I still make some silly mistakes in English," she says. "I say, 'I couldn't hit the wide part of the barn.' And instead of 'That's no skin off my nose,' once I said, 'That's no hair off my chest.'"

Martina has gone through all procedures for American citizenship and is awaiting final word, expected in the next couple of three months. Meantime, she spends idle moments visiting Thomas Jefferson's Monticello and other shrines of America's cradle days.

Kuhn: Tummy Says No To Strike This Season

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said he does not think there will be a player strike this year.

Kuhn, in Arizona to visit spring-training camps, said Monday while watching the San Francisco-Seaside game at Phoenix Municipal Stadium that he doesn't consider the current impasse over free-agent compensation to be a serious threat to the sport.

Asked why he thinks owners and players will be able to get together, Kuhn replied: "My tummy tells me so."

The executive board of the Major League Players Association voted unanimously Feb. 25 to strike May 29 if the compensation issue is not resolved by then.

Kuhn said he thinks a solution will be reached once the two sides devote their full attention to doing so.

"I think once the spring camps are over and both sides sit down to some serious bargaining, the issue is eminently solvable," he said.

"The union is in no rush. That's not an abnormal thing in a union-management situation."

Kuhn said he does not agree with the idea that the public is becoming fed up with baseball's labor-management spats.

"This kind of happening has gone on for 15 years," he said. "I think the fans take it pretty much in stride."

But he admitted that he would prefer to rid of such hassles.

"Our problems are nagging — they need solutions," Kuhn said. "But I don't see this as a critical year for baseball."

He said that the free-agent compensation matter is just a drop in the economic bucket as far as baseball's overall picture is concerned.

"Only a small percentage of players would be involved in compensation," he said. "And there is a tendency for the good players to head for the teams that have a chance to win. Those teams have a greater supply of players (for compensation)."

Kuhn said he considers rising ticket prices a far greater concern.

"Even since free-agency, ticket prices have not moved up dramatically," he said. "It's below the rate of inflation. If they went up dramatically, that would be a danger sign."

Kuhn was asked whether he could sympathize with Philadelphia Phillies owner Ruly Carpenter, who announced recently that he wants to sell his team because of escalating player salaries.

"I'd like to say no, but the answer is yes," Kuhn said. "Ruly Carpenter didn't see things adding up right."

Kuhn said that he does not foresee realignment in the near future but that the National League may add a couple of teams within the next five years.

He listed Phoenix as a possibility for an expansion franchise, along with Washington (D.C.), Denver, New Orleans, Southern Florida, Central Florida, Buffalo and Vancouver, British Columbia.

There were 668 skaters from 38 speed clubs representing 13 states at the tournament, held at the Highview Rollerdom in Louisville.

CROSS-EXAMINATION — Iain Calder, left, editor of the National Enquirer, and attorney Ed Bronson respond to judge during testimony Monday in the Carol Burnett-National Enquirer lawsuit. Under cross-examination by Bronson, Calder

Burnett Will Testify In Enquirer Libel Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The editor of the National Enquirer says he decided not to follow a request from attorneys for actress Carol Burnett to put a separate headline over a retraction of a story about her because "people wouldn't read it." "We didn't use the headline because we felt people wouldn't read an article that said 'retraction' or 'correction,'" editor Iain Calder testified Monday in Superior Court.

Miss Burnett is suing the tabloid for $10 million, contending the Enquirer libeled her in a gossip item about an encounter with then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in a Washington restaurant. She contends the article, published five years ago, implied that she had been drinking or was drunk.

She was to testify in the case today.

The Enquirer did publish a correction of the item on April 13, 1976, but it ran in a gossip column headlined "$6 Million Man Blows Bionic Fuse."

"People who read the gossip column will be attracted to the column and read the retraction. To put 'retraction' in the headline, I think, would be a disincensive," Calder testified.

Under cross-examination by Ms. Burnett's attorney,

E.D. Bronson Jr., Calder said retractions are sometimes given headlines.

The editor testified he had received a letter from Miss Burnett's attorneys demanding a retraction of the article, which described a purportedly rowdy confrontation between Miss Burnett and Kissinger.

He said Ms. Burnett's attorney suggested in the letter how the retraction should be written and asked that it have a headline.

"They specifically didn't want the same words from the original column used," he said, "but I felt that, without using those same words, people wouldn't recognize what we were retracting."

The attorneys also demanded that a statement that the Enquirer had been "negligent in not investigating" the gossip item be included in the retraction, Calder testified.

The original article said Ms. Burnett had spilled a glass of wine, had a glass of water spilled on her and had "traipsed" around the restaurant offering bites of her dessert to other diners.

Previous witnesses and Dr. Kissinger denied Miss Burnett had been boisterous or that there was any sort of argument. Kissinger, who said he gave a deposition and has no plans to testify, said Miss Burnett behaved in a "perfectly lady-like fashion."

Food Stamp Dependancy Cited By Puerto Ricans

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of poor Puerto Ricans will migrate to the United States if Congress agrees to a proposal to reduce the island's food stamp program, says Gov. Carlos Romero-Barcelo.

The commonwealth's governor urged the Senate Agriculture Committee on Monday to reject the Reagan administration's plan to save $300 million by combining the island's food and nutrition money into a block grant in fiscal 1982.

"The discriminatory block grant plan, as conceived for Puerto Rico, is a disaster," he said. "Worse than that, it is an insult to a people who have earned the right to demand equality as American citizens."

If the block grant were put into effect, he predicted, "without any doubt whatsoever, tens of thousands, if not hundreds of thousands, of economically disadvantaged Puerto Rican families...would migrate to the mainland."

He also contended that accepting the proposal would send an "alarming" message to Caribbean and Latin American nations about the administration's "sincerity...to foster closer and more mutually beneficial relationships."

The administration contends that with the block grant, Puerto Rico could use the money where it is most needed and duplication of federal services would be eliminated.

Another committee witness, Richard Weisskoff of Iowa State University, argued that the Puerto Rican food stamp program, started in 1975, has been an "economic and moral disaster" for the commonwealth.

The program should be phased out over three years and an economic development program implemented, he said.

According to figures presented at the hearing, about 10 percent of all food stamps issued go to Puerto Rico, where more than half of the people receive them.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., committee chairman and a critic of food stamps, opened the hearings by saying the American people were "almost up in arms" about the food stamp program because of its increasing costs and reports of error and fraud.

Two state officials, Sammie Lynn Puett of Tennessee and John Fredericks of New York, told the panel about problems they had in administering the program.

Ms. Puett, who stacked about a half-dozen thick notebooks of food stamp program rules on the witness table to illustrate her complaints, said regulations and administrative requirements encouraged abuse by recipients and hindered government workers' efforts to respond to their clients.

"What I am calling for is reform that will enable us to target our assistance and to recognize regional differences in family income, in shelter deductions, and in utility costs," said the Tennessee commissioner of human services.

Fredericks, assistant commissioner in the New York Department of Social Services' division of income maintenance, cautioned that budget cutting "could adversely affect the one area where significant progress has been made — the entitlement of all Americans to a satisfactory level of nutritional well-being."

Improvements could be made, he said, in simplifying eligibility determination and eliminating the disparity between households with senior citizens and those without.

The Reagan administration has recommended that the fiscal 1982 food stamp program be about $1.8 billion less than the $12.5 billion amount former President Carter recommended.

The reductions would be made primarily by lopping off about 1.2 million people from the upper end of the income scale of those now eligible for food stamps and deducting the value of free school meals from a family's benefits.

Approximately 22 million Americans receive food stamps.

Strong Quakes Shake Mt. Etna

CATANIA, Italy (AP) — Unusually strong tremors jolted the northeastern slopes of Mount Etna today. Experts predicted that a major eruption of the volcano might follow.

There were 200 jolts in 48 hours, the strongest registering 5 on the Mercalli scale, a 1 to 12 scale measuring the intensity of an earthquake at a specific location.

Some of the tremors were also felt in the residential area at the foot of the volcano, Europe's most active.

MET WITH KHOMEINI — Iran's President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr is surrounded by reporters after Monday's meeting with the nation's top-ranking officials and the revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in Tehran. The ayatollah, appealing for an end to a political warfare between Bani-Sadr and his foes, named a peace-making committee which will be made up of three men, one representing Khomeini, another Bani-Sadr and the third the "other side," meaning Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai. (Pars via AP Laserphoto)

Iran's Former Deputy Premier Goes On Trial For Conspiracy

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's former deputy prime minister and government spokesman, Abbas Amir Entezam, went on trial in Tehran today on a charge of conspiring against the Islamic revolution in collusion with the Central Intelligence Agency, Iran's official Pars news agency reported.

Hojatoleslam Mohammad Gilani headed the Islamic revolutionary court that is deciding the case of Entezam, who was arrested a few days after the November 1979 seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by militant Iranian students, Pars said.

Entezam served under former Prime Minister

Mehdi Bazargan, who headed the first government after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's toppled the monarchy in February 1979. Bazargan, who resigned in protest against the U.S. Embassy seizure, attended the court session along with foreign and local reporters, according to Pars.

Khomeini, who is trying to quiet the political warfare between President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and his foes, met with the battling politicians Monday and told them their speeches were being used by opponents of the revolution "to promote conspiracy and corruption," Pars said.

For that reason, said Khomeini, "these officials should not make any speeches until the war" with Iraq is over.

Khomeini said the committee will be made up of three men, one representing him, another Bani-Sadr and the third the "other side," meaning Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and members of the clergy-dominated Islamic Republican Party who have been sniping at Bani-Sadr for 10 months.

He said the panel would "closely scrutinize" Iranian news coverage of their disputes, and "if two members of the committee consider them harmful, they should inform the public and the prosecutor general's office so that the latter can take legal action."

Khomeini also urged

Moslem leaders of Friday prayer services to promote calm and avoid making remarks "that might cause disunity or public concern," Pars reported.

Afterward, the ayatollah told a delegation of women: "If, God forbid, the country is defeated in the imposed war, or the solution may take long, the blame for this will rest with those who fan the flames of discord or bring about tensions."

Iraq invaded Iran Sept. 22 and said its forces will remain until it gains complete sovereignty over the Shatt al-Arab estuary, the southern border between the two countries and Iraq's waterway to the Persian Gulf.

The trouble with writing a bridge column is that, on occasion, you fall in love with a pretty play you have uncovered and are blind to everything else. As a result you tend to overlook another, perhaps better, line of play. Several readers took us to task on this hand.

The defenders started with three rounds of hearts, and declarer ruffed the third. Since he had to lose a diamond trick, it seemed that declarer would have to rely on the club finesse. Our contention was that East, for his opening bid, had to have the queen of clubs, so the finesse was bound to fail. We suggested a backward finesse — lead the jack of clubs, East covers and you win the ace, then finesse the nine of clubs.

Several of our readers have pointed out that there is no need to rely on West's having the ten of clubs. East must also have both the king and queen of diamonds, so he can be squeezed end played.

After ruffing the heart, cross to the ace of diamonds, take the trump finesse and run trumps, reducing the hand to this position:

♦ 5 4	♣ K J 9

When South leads the last trump, East cannot afford to let go a club, so he must part with one of his diamond honors. Now declarer simply exits with a diamond, giving East his trick in that suit. East must lead away from the queen of clubs, and the contract is fulfilled even if East started with Q-10-x in clubs.

True enough. But an expert East, foreseeing the end position, will not discard so revealingly. He might well discard a club and hold the K-10 of diamonds. Now when you lead a diamond, he cashes the ten of diamonds for the setting trick, and you are left red-faced for going down in a "cold" contract.

New MX Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 15-member panel of citizen experts and former defense officials will try to come up with a way to deploy the proposed MX missile to satisfy both national security and the objections of environmentalists.

In announcing the panel Monday, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said he asked for a report by July 1.

The Carter administration examined about 35 different plans before settling on the "racetrack" scheme of putting 200 missiles among 4,600 shelters in the deserts of Utah and Nevada, a plan that could be the subject of long court battles delaying deployment.

Charles Townes, professor of physics at the University of California, heads the new review group.

ABC Confirms Psychic's Role

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC now confirms that network President Fred Pierce employed a psychic for two years as a program consultant.

The network, apparently embarrassed that its supposedly secret relationship had come to light, would only say that Miss Beverly Dean had indeed been hired as a consultant in 1978 and that she left the network in last summer.

Miss Dean, reached at her home in nearby Encino, was more expansive. "Being a psychic was only a hobby of mine," she said. "I was hired as a consultant, Fred (Pierce) knew I was very much into television, but it's been very, very difficult to get work."

Before her job at ABC, Miss Dean had never actually written or produced any programs that actually made it to air. She "had several in development," she says, "all game shows that never went on. I've had a lot of bad luck."

Miss Dean said she met Pierce when he and Tony Thomopoulos, now President of ABC's Entertainment division, came to her home for a "reading" in 1977.

Fred Silverman was in Thomopoulos' present job at the time.

"I kept saying that Freddy Silverman's going to leave ABC, and it happened," says Miss Dean, referring to Silverman's eventual move to NBC.

"I kept running into them (Pierce and Thomopoulos) in Las Vegas and New York, and they said, 'God, it's so coincidental,' and they couldn't get over it."

"Finally, Fred and I had breakfast and he said, 'You know, you really are a very creative and talented woman, and I'd like to use you as a consultant. But I'm not hiring you because you are a psychic.'"

"He told me to keep it a secret." Miss Dean says she was paid $24,000 for her first year of consultation, $30,000 for the second year. During her stay at ABC, Miss Dean served as co-producer of "A Time for Miracles," the story of Mother Seton.

The network sent scripts to Miss Dean's home and Miss Dean would inform ABC of her feelings about the projects. She knew that "Benson" would be a hit, she says, and that "Lazarus Syndrome" would flop. She liked "Tenspeed and Brown

Theater Sued By Josh Logan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stage and film director Joshua Logan is seeking $1.5 million in damages in a suit alleging unsafe conditions at a theater where he fell off the stage.

The federal court suit filed last week names the Writers Guild of America West and the Wilshire Ebell Theater, Logan's attorney said Monday.

Logan was guest speaker at a writers awards banquet 11 months ago and "was blinded by the lights and fell into the orchestra pit" as he left the stage, said attorney James McCarthy.

Logan suffered a fractured collarbone, bruises, broken ribs and an eye injury, McCarthy said.

The Writers Guild had no immediate comment on the suit.

Shoe," a detective series starring Ben Vereen and Jeff Goldblum, but knew that it wouldn't catch on.

The show was canceled. "But then," says Miss Dean of her feeling about "Tenspeed," "My mother in Milwaukee could have done the same thing."

Indeed. However, it is an amusing image: Fred Pierce and Tony Thomopoulos, chiefs of a multimillion-dollar entertainment conglomerate, crouched over a reading table in the San Fernando Valley, trying to divine the new fall schedule.

And you thought television was an imprecise art.
