Coal Walkout Appears Inevitable

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national coal strike appears inevitable following collapse of contract talks between the industry and the United Mine Workers. But it may be much shorter and less disruptive than the record 111-day walkout three years ago.

Negotiators for the 160,000-member union and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the industry bargaining agent, broke off talks Tuesday in the quest for their first strike-free settlement since 1964.

UMW President Sam Church declared that the industry representatives were not interested in good-faith bargaining, and he sent members of the union's bargaining council home. The BCOA countered that it was willing to return to the bargaining table for "serious" talks.

Although both sides were reluctant to say what went wrong, union negotiator Paul Gaston of Kentucky said industry-sought changes in work rules were the hangup.

The two sides also were far apart on wages and benefits and industry proposals for overhauling the pension plan.

UMW spokesman Eldon Callen said a strike at 12:01 a.m. EST on March 27 is unavoidable, given the union's 10-day process for ratification by the 39-member bargaining council and rank-and-file miners.

Callen said there could be no extension of the March 27 contract deadline but that a settlement reached before then would mean a short-lived strike.

Miners at one Ohio mine staged a wildcat walkout today in protest over the stalled contract talks. About 450 miners at the Southern Ohio Coal Co.'s Raccoon Mine No. 3 staged the job action shortly after midnight. Larry Birchfield, secretary of the UMW local, said a meeting would be held later today to urge the miners to return to work.

Callen said there remained an "outside chance" that the two sides could return to the bargaining table, and Church said a key core of union negotiators staying in Washington would contact industry representatives to see if there was any change in their position. The BCOA's three-man negotating team, however, went home.

There was no indication the Reagan administration would intercede in the bargaining, and UMW officials maintained they didn't want any involvement by the government.

A new coal strike probably would have much less impact on the economy than the protracted walkout of the winter of 1977-78, which precipitated mass layoffs and some power cutbacks in the coal-dependent Midwest.

Electric utilities, major purchasers of union-mined coal, are believed to have a 90-day stockpile, and the winter heating season is nearing its end.

The miners' union may have sacrificed leverage at the bargaining table by striking the industry for 15½ weeks three years ago. It had the effect of moving the contract expiration date from December to nearly spring at a time when non-union Western strip mines have become more important coal producers.

Negotiations to avoid a strike this year collapsed in the predawn hours Tuesday.

Callen said the industry representatives gave the union an ultimatum: Accept the proposals on the table, which the UMW spokesman termed "impossible to accept," or quit talking.

More El Salvador Aid In Administration's Plans

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans to increase U.S. aid to El Salvador from $98 million this year to $117 million next year, administration and Senate sources say.

The aid plans were revealed Tuesday as Sen Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., introduced a bill that would prohibit the president from keeping 54 U.S. military advisers in El Salvador or delivering any military aid until five conditions were met.

The $117.2 million request for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1 breaks down to $91.2 million in economic assistance, up from $63.1 million this year, and $26 million in military aid, a decrease from $35 million this year.

The $35 million for 1981 includes a recent increase of $25 million.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was expected to deliver the figures to the House Foreign Affairs Committee today. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee planned a hearing on them this afternoon.

The $63.1 million this year includes credit for El Salvadoran businessmen to revitalize commerce, funds to create public service jobs quickly and Food for Peace aid, the Senate sources said in revealing the details for the first time. The sources asked that their names not be used.

An administration source, who also asked not to be identified, said it is too early for El Salvador to be able to use aid to rebuild war-damaged towns and city areas.

Kennedy said his bill was "designed to take the road of peace, not the road of war, in El Salvador."

"Negotiation, not military escalation, is the only hope for a peaceful solution of this tragic conflict," he said. "Successive steps are being taken to escalate U.S. military involvement, without specifying clear limits."

Redistricting Plan Would Trim 1st By 2 Counties

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

A Spring Hope legislator has drawn up a proposed congressional redistricting plan that would trim three counties from the existing 21-county 1st Congressional District and add Onslow County.

The proposal by Rep. Allen C. Barbee, D-Nash, would avoid the necessity for incumbent Rep. Walter Jones to face another incumbent in the event he seeks re-election after North Carolina's new district lines are drawn by the Legislature.

Redistricting is necessary to comply with the U.S. Supreme Court's "one-man, one-vote" mandate and the 1980 Census figures for the state. Under that mandate, each district must be as nearly equal as possible in population with other districts in the state.

Barbee's proposal would delete Lenoir, Greene and Martin counties from the 1st District and shift them to the 2nd District, which is now served by Rep. L.H. Fountain of Tarboro. To make way for their addition, Orange County would be shifted from the 2nd District to a new 4th District that would include only Orange, Wake and Durham counties.

Pitt County would not be affected by Barbee's proposal, which was distributed to members of the joint state House-Senate Congressional Redistricting Committee on Tuesday.

Barbee said today he is optimistic about the plan's adoption by the Legislature.

"There'll be a hundred different plans, but this one seems to have gotten off the ground more than the rest of them," Barbee said in a telephone interview from his office in Raleigh.

Barbee said he believes his proposal would give the 1st District "a little better balance."

Barbee said he had not dicussed the plan with Jones, who was not available for comment today. However, Barbee said he had talked with at least one other congressman who thought the plan would be acceptable.

The legislative committee has called for hearings across the state in April to hear public input about the various proposals for congressional redistricting.

In addition to Pitt and Onslow, the 1st District under Barbee's plan would include the counties of Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Carteret, Chowan, Craven, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Hertford, Hyde, Jones, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Tyrrell and Washington.

Coal Trains?

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Coal shipments on Southern Railway Co. tracks from Raleigh through either Greenville or Goldsboro to the Morehead City port facilities are anticipated to begin later this month, according to a Southern spokesman.

Charles Morgret, public relations manager in Southern's Washington, D.C. offices, said plans call for the coal shipments from Raleigh to be handled initially as single-car load lots on regular trains in lieu of coal trains.

Morgret said the coal shipments will be on either the route through Wilson, Greenville and Chocowinity to New Bern or on lines running through Goldsboro and Kinston to New Bern. From New Bern, the trains would go through Havelock and on to Morehead City.

He said plans are such that either route can be used initially and "down the road." Morgret said if "we have a train going to a point through Greenville, we would put coal cars on that train." The same would apply to trains scheduled to go through Goldsboro, he added.

Tracks on both routes are sufficient now to handle the anticipated shipments, he reported.

"Until such time as the coal volume builds up," the spokesman explained, "we do not plan to run any coal trains...just cars of coal on regular trains."

Questioned regarding the number of trains that could be expected through this area, Morgret said "until we see what kind of volume results from the movement, we don't know and the coal company doesn't know how many trains will be involved."

Coal dispersed from Raleigh to the Morehead port will come from Alla-Ohio Co. mines, the Southern official reported.

He said Alla-Ohio is "talking in terms of starting out small and gradually increasing volume," with no particular time frame involved in the coal movement.

Good News And Bad, In Surplus From Budget Of Pitt Hospital

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital has an $800,000 surplus of funds in this year's budget, thanks to its nursing staff deficit, board treasurer and finance committee chairman Thomas Bennett told the board last night.

So it's good news and bad news, Assistant Administrator for Nursing Betty Trought said. The money's saved, but the need for nurses continues be urgent, with no sign of letting up. "Even if Pitt Memorial were to get every nurse that graduates from every nursing program in the state in the next few years," she said, "it would not be enough. We must expand our recruitment outside the state." She described several efforts now underway to recruit and retain nurses and nursing students, including nurse extern and medication assistant programs, and cooperation with Pitt Community College and East Carolina University schools of nursing to write a grant proposal for a nurse residency program which would be run with the help of the Eastern Area Health Education Center and serve as a model for the state.

As for day-to-day dealing with the problem, she said there is a constant need to transfer patients to areas of the hospital where nurses are plentiful. This causes an overwork situation for nurses and nursing administrators alike, she added. She said she would be back before the board soon with requests for salary increases that would make the hospital more competitive in its efforts to get and retain nurses, especially ones needed in leadership positions.

New members of the board were introduced by Chairman Henry Leslie. They are Mrs. Mamie Smith and Marvin Baldree Jr., both of Ayden, and Leroy James and Dr. Frank Longino, both of Greenville.

Recognition was given to outgoing board members, J. B. Kittrell Jr., Dan Wooten, Billy Phillips and Dr. John Wooten. Phillips and Dr. Wooten were present to accept plaques and a round of applause.

The recommendations of the nominating committee were unanimously accepted: Reelected were Henry Leslie, chairman; Albert Martin, vice-chairman; Ephraigm Smith, secretary; Thomas Bennett, treasurer; and Mildred Indorf, assistant treasurer. Named to the executive committee, in addition to the president, vice-president and secretary, were Thomas White, Glenn Strickland, D. T. Jones and Moses Moye.

The board approved a new contract for medical direction of Greenville Chapter No. 149 Order of Eastern Star would like to hear from one of our charter members, Mrs. Iva Spencer (Frank Warren) Brown. She moved to Pennsylvania some years ago and we have not heard from her in several years. We keep her on our rolls and would like to know how she is. A. T.

You were able to provide Hotline with the name of Mrs. Brown's daughter, and we called the register of deeds of Blair County, Pa., where Mrs. Brown was last known by you to reside. He was friendly and accomodating and checked a 1980 Altoona, Pa. city directory and found a street address for Mrs. Brown's daughter, Mrs. Verne (Iva) Evans.

Mrs. Evans' phone number was unlisted, so we wrote to her and asked her to call collect. She did so very promptly. She said her mother, Mrs. Brown, died in October, 1978. However, she was delighted to hear that you ladies have remembered her mother all these years. She said the family moved away from Greenville in 1947, but she has fond memories of her childhood here and sends best wishes to relatives and old friends here.

Mrs. Evans, whose father was a Greenville native, is the area director of the Lupus Erythematosus Society for a six-county area of Pennsylvania and is the mother of five and the grandmother of four.

Budget Cuts Roll Through Senate Committee

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a sympathetic Republican majority providing the muscle, President Reagan's proposals for slashing billions of dollars in federal spending are rolling through the Senate Budget Committee with only minor changes.

More intense wrangling was anticipated today with consideration of cuts in a variety of social service payments — food stamps, Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security — and other popular programs such as housing assistance and urban mass transportation payments.

But during Tuesday's 11-hour work session, the panel's Republican majority was able to overcome any Democratic opposition and the $12.5 billion in approved cuts exceeded the administration's recommendations in some cases.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., the committee chairman, said Congress is "going to have to make all the cuts the president proposed ($48.6 billion) and then some" to meet his goal of balancing the federal budget by 1984.

The panel is expected to complete work on the package tonight.

The committee voted Tuesday to:

—Support the administration's proposal to reduce federal subsidies to the Postal Service by nearly $1 billion in 1982.

—Recommend acceptance of the president's revised federal pay system at an estimated savings of nearly $3.7 billion next year.

—Adjust retirement benefits for civilian and military pensioners once a year instead of the current two times, for estimated savings of $800 million.

Technically, the committee is not enacting the budget cuts, but formulating instructions to other Senate committees.

Once both houses of Congress agree to overall totals, the other committees will be required to make the cuts needed to meet the bottom line. However, the other committees will have leeway to apportion the cuts among the programs under their jurisdictions.

At its meeting Tuesday, the Budget Committee supported administration positions by turning back attempts to eliminate Saturday mail service and rejecting a proposal to freeze federal civilian pay for a year.

However, the committee voted to cut spending by $3 billion more than Reagan recommended when it called for private financing of the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

Under the plan, major oil importers would pump 125 million barrels a year into the stockpile, which is intended to be used in times of national emergencies. The government, instead of buying the oil directly, would repay the companies at the rate of 10 percent a year for 11 years.

Committee members also voted to exceed the president's own proposed cuts by $155 million with a recommendation to abolish the Small Business Administration's program of direct government loans to small businesses. They also voted to collect $150 million in user fees from boat owners instead of the $100 million Reagan wanted.

In the only outright reversal of an administration recommendation Tuesday, the panel voted to spend $25 million that Reagan wanted cut from Vietnam era veteran counseling centers.

Dear Abby

Unprofessional Behavior

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My 15-year-old son needed to see a doctor in an emergency situation, so I called our physician. He was not available, so he recommended another doctor. I called him, and was told that he, too, was busy, but if I brought my son in they would squeeze him in between patients at 12:45 p.m.

Before leaving for the appointment, I couldn't find my checkbook, so rather than be late, I went without it. I explained this to the receptionist, but gave her the name of my husband's company and told her that my regular doctor could vouch for my credit. She gave me some forms to fill out and I promptly completed them.

The doctor saw my son, and while waiting for the results of some tests, the doctor stormed into the waiting room, and in a fury he shouted, "You have some nerve! You can just go right home and bring back your checkbook!"

I was shocked and left the office in tears. Abby, we live in Florida, which has a lot of transients, so I can understand caution against deadbeats, but this doctor could have called the doctor who recommended him and checked on my credit.

My question: Do you think the American Medical Association would consider this doctor's behavior unprofessional?

NO DEADBEAT IN JENSEN BEACH, FLA.

DEAR NO DEADBEAT: My guess is yes. Write to your state and/or county medical association and file a complaint.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 11-year-old boy who has been reading your column in the Camden Courier-Post ever since I can remember. I sure have learned a lot. One thing it got me to thinking about is this: If I should die or get killed accidentally before I am a grown man, I would like to donate my eyes and kidneys to some young kid who needs them. Children who are blind or have kidney trouble must need transplants, and I understand they can't use organs from an adult.

Abby, I am healthy and don't plan on dying before I grow up, but just in case I do, I would really like to donate whatever parts of me are usable to some kid who needs them. I think it is a crime to bury good organs in the ground when some child needs them. Maybe this will give other kids an idea.

Do they send donor cards to kids? Answer soon. Love,

TIMMY IN N.J.

DEAR TIMMY: Yes. But minors require the consent of their parents or guardians before they can become donors. Discuss this with your parents, Timmy, and if they agree, write to The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77005, and ask for a donor card. (Confidential to Timmy's parents: You certainly raised a beautiful son.)

DEAR ABBY: Would it be tasteful to run a combination bridal and baby shower?

ROSITA

DEAR ROSITA: Profitable, si. Tasteful, no! I don't recommend it.

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old and have a big problem. My mom and dad fight at night, and last night they had a big one. There was loud yelling and I woke up scared and sick. I started to cry and my dad came into my room and gave me a glass of water. I asked him why they had to argue all the time, and he said, "Your mother is not well."

Abby, they act like children. My mom puts my dad down, and I don't like to listen to it. Please print this to let them know that I love them both, but I sure wish they wouldn't argue so loud. Thank you, Abby.

PROBLEM CHILD

DEAR CHILD: I am printing this letter because you aren't the only child with this problem. I hope all parents will realize that little pitchers have big ears. And are easily shattered.

Roz Russell Fancied This Dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

German cooks certainly know how to get the best out of apples. Their use of them in desserts — from kuchen to strudel — is well known.

But they also pair apples with vegetables in wonderful ways. One of the most familiar of these is sauerkraut with apple plus onion, potato and white wine. Another is called by the delicious name of Himmel und Erde (Heaven and Earth); in one version, it's a combination of apple, potato, onion and bacon.

Recently a third German recipe was tried in my kitchen. It's so good and so thrifty, I'm eager to pass it along to you. Consider offering this main dish — chicken livers topped with butter-simmered onions and fried apple rings — at a light supper or brunch.

If you store chicken livers (as you buy and use one or two chickens) in your freezer, until you have a dozen or more livers, you can easily make this dish. To keep the livers in first-rate condition, we remove them from the chickens as soon as the birds come into the kitchen. Then we wrap each liver individually and tightly in saran before putting it into a tightly covered container in the freezer. (We carefully mark the container, "Livers.") When I get around to using the livers, I always feel my food budget has been given a bonus. One pointer: the maximum time for storing chicken livers in your freezer is three months.

We came on the Auntie Mame chicken liver dish in a cookbook, published about 30 years ago, giving recipes from a restaurant specializing in German food. The chicken liver, onion and apple combination is said to have been a favorite of Rosalind Russell.

ROSALIND RUSSELL — Of "Auntie Mame" fame.

AUNTIE MAME CHICKEN LIVERS

12 chicken livers (about ¾ pound)
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
6 tablespoons butter
½ pound Spanish onion, cut in thin strips
1 pound (3 medium) McIntosh apples (cored but unpeeled and each cut into 4 rings)
Parsley or watercress or other garnish

Cut livers in half, discarding center membranes; dry thoroughly. Dust with a mixture of the flour, salt and paprika; reserve.

In a 10-inch skillet heat 2 tablespoons of the butter; add the onion and cover; cook gently, stirring occasionally, until soft — about 20 minutes; remove and keep hot in covered foil or dish in a warm oven.

Add 2 tablespoons more butter to the skillet, and over moderate heat quickly brown the livers — they should be barely cooked through; remove to a hot serving platter and keep hot in the warm oven.

Add the remaining 2 tablespoons butter to the skillet and quickly fry the apple rings in single layers (in 2 batches) until they are cooked through and golden brown but still hold their shape.

Makes 4 servings.

the rehabilation center with Dr. Donald Weir and other medical associates to whom he might delegate duties. The contract is for $60,000 a year now with another $20,000 in escrow for when Dr. Weir employs a second associate. Included in the contract is the go-ahead for the doctors to bill patients independently of the hospital for physician services not related to the running of the center.

A two-year contract with Allied Security was approved. Allied was the low bidder, offering service at $4.86 per hour the first year and $5.10 per hour the second year, plus five cents per hour for radio communication. Total cost to the hospital will be about $130,000 per years. The three higher bidders were Burns International with $5.19 first year and $5.70 second year; McKenzie with $5.22 and $5.38 and Pinkerton Inc. with $5.45 and $5.89.

Capital expenditures of $40,954.50 for equipment were approved. Included are a Karl Storz resectoscope for the operating room, $5,671.30; a thermodilution cardiac output machine for the critical care unit, $5,025; a pediatric bronchoscope, $5.316.20; a nurse call auxiliary system for the rehab center for $8,500; and two pnuematic tube stations, one for labor and delivery and one for the hemodialysis unit, $16,442.

Changes in the ECU medical school-PCMH affiliation agreement were made to reflect changes previously made in the hospital charter. Included are reduction of the size of the board to 20 members, eight of whom will be recommended by the UNC Board of Governors; designation of the dean of the school of medicine as a member, and deletion of the word, staggered, from the description of the members' three-year terms.

Some $357,535 was added to cash reserves for building projects being planned. Already set aside are $100,000 for modification to the kitchen; $103,448 in the parking lot revenue account; and $1,159,382 in the funded depreciation account. Current estimates of needs are for $1,104,365 for Certificate of Need application, $95,000 for a metal building to be used first for office and education space and later for storage; $40,000 for paving a rear parking lot, $250,000 for equipment for a new bed tower; and $75,000 for completion of renovation to the kitchen. Contingency was set at 10 percent, $156,000. Hence the difference between the $1,362,830 set aside and the $1,720,365 expected to be needed.

Building Committee Chairman Charles Gaskins reported the psychiatric unit renovations will be completed in another month. The west bed tower, he said, is having walls put in and problems between architects and contractor concerning ceilings have been worked out to the benefit of the hospital, which will get better-constructed ceilings than were anticipated. The contractor has asked for and been granted a 30-day extension because of the ceiling situation, he said, so 299 days more are expected for completion.

Noah Lee Jr. said the chaplaincy committee will have a report ready for the board by April on the need for a hospital chaplain and how such a program can be funded. As its educational program, the board heard a presentation by P. W. Aitehn, director of chaplaincy services at Duke University Medical Center.

An ambulatory surgery workshop will be held here May 12 by Blue Cross-Blue Shield. PCMH has a model ambulatory surgery program, one that has been in operation five years, Richardson said, and Blue Cross is seeking to encourage other hospitals to emulate it.

Budget planning for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 is underway, Richardson said, with department-level workshops already being held.

John Ennis, assistant director for Computer Services, reported on the initial phase of computerizing hospital services. He explained how a vender will be picked Mar. 27. Bids forms have been picked up by IBM, Univac, Honeywell, Digital, Burroughs, and National Advance Systems, he said. Ennis has had experience in computer conversion in 15 different hospitals, he said. This conversion hopefully can take place around Oct. 1. He said he is pleased with the enthusiasm he has encountered here and thinks the tie-in with East Carolina University will be a positive step for Pitt Memorial.

Approval was given for quality assurance and utilization review plans reviewed by the medical staff and recommended by Dr. Williams McConnell, chief of staff, on their behalf.

Medical School Dean Dr. William Laupus said the roof of the Brody Medical Science Building, under construction, is sealed and work is going well inside. He said partial occupancy is expected by the end of 1981, with full occupancy by May, 1982. Twelve new clinical staff members of the medical school and a veterinary program director have been picked he said. All the 28 medical students who expect to graduate from ECU in May have been matched with residency situations somewhere in the country, he said, a major reflection of success for ECU.

Building Bases

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia plans to build a new naval base only 200 miles south of the Israeli port of Eilat, a Saudi newspaper reported.

The paper said the base will be built in the northern reaches of the Red Sea at Al Wajh. It said another base will be built at Yanbu, 200 miles further south on the western coast of the Arabian peninsula.

The paper quoted Col. Badr Saleh el Saleh, the commander of the main Saudi naval base at Jubail, on the eastern Persian Gulf coast, as saying facilities there would be quadrupled soon.

Lady Bug Is Unendorsed

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The latest memo from lobbyist Norman Adler has caused quite a buzz around the state Capitol.

Adler, chief lobbyist for the powerful District Council 37, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Workers, AFL-CIO, issued a statement this week declaring the union's opposition to a bill designed to make the ladybug New York's official insect.

"District Council 37 represents 110,000 workers, over 60 percent of which are women," said the memo. "It is because of this that we must object to the use of the obsolete and sexist term 'lady' in describing the proposed state bug."

While the memo noted that the union had nothing against the ceratomegilla fuscilabris itself, it said the union "cannot endorse the proposed legislation unless the appellation 'lady bug' is changed to 'woman bug' as a sign of honor and respect for the women we represent and for all female New Yorkers."

Adler later admitted the memo was a joke designed to "add a little levity" to the routine of the legislative session.

"We looked around for the stupidest bill we could find," he said. "This may not be it, but it suits the purpose. We wanted to poke a little fun at the pomposity (at the state Capitol)."

'B' Stamps Go On Sale

The Postal Service said today that nondenominated "B" postage stamps and related items of postal stationary will be issued next week to correspond with new rates that go into effect 12:01 a.m., March 22.

At that time, the cost of mailing a first-class letter will rise to 18 cents from the current 15 cents and increases will take place in other classes of mail. It will be the first domestic increase since May, 1978.

According to Postmaster General William F. Bolger, there will be an adequate supply of stamps to meet the nation's needs. A "B" embossed stamped envelope and a "nondenominated" postal card will also be issued. The embossed envelope will sell for 22 cents (18 cents postage, four cents for the envelope), and the postal card for 12 cents, the new postal card rate.

First-day sales of these iems took place March 15 in Memphis, Tenn. and San Francisco, Ca. The items went on sale in all post offices March 16.

A summary of the postal rate increases is as follows: nonpresorted letters, first ounce, 18 cents, each additional ounce, 17 cents; presorted letters, three/five digit presort, 15 cents, carrier route presort, 14 cents, additional ounces, 17 cents; cards, 12 cents, presorted cards, three/five digit presort, 11 cents, carrier route presort, ten cents.

Business reply, advance deposit, five cents, other, 18 cents; priority mail, $2.22 to $71.70; express mail, $5.30 to $93.00; second class, in county, 3.2 cents per pound, 1.6 cents per piece; third class, bulk rate regular, pound rate, 33 cents; fourth class parcel post, $1.38 to $19.16; special rate, first pound, unpresorted, 63 cents.

Budget Figure Was Incorrect

The total county appropriations in the Greenville City Schools tentative budget was incorrectly reported in yesterday's edition. The total should have read $2,270,146.57 rather than $270,146.57.

The amount of employee benefits was also incorrect. County funds requested for benefits exceed $151,928, while the entire amount is approximately $168,928.

Record Number Haitians Arrive

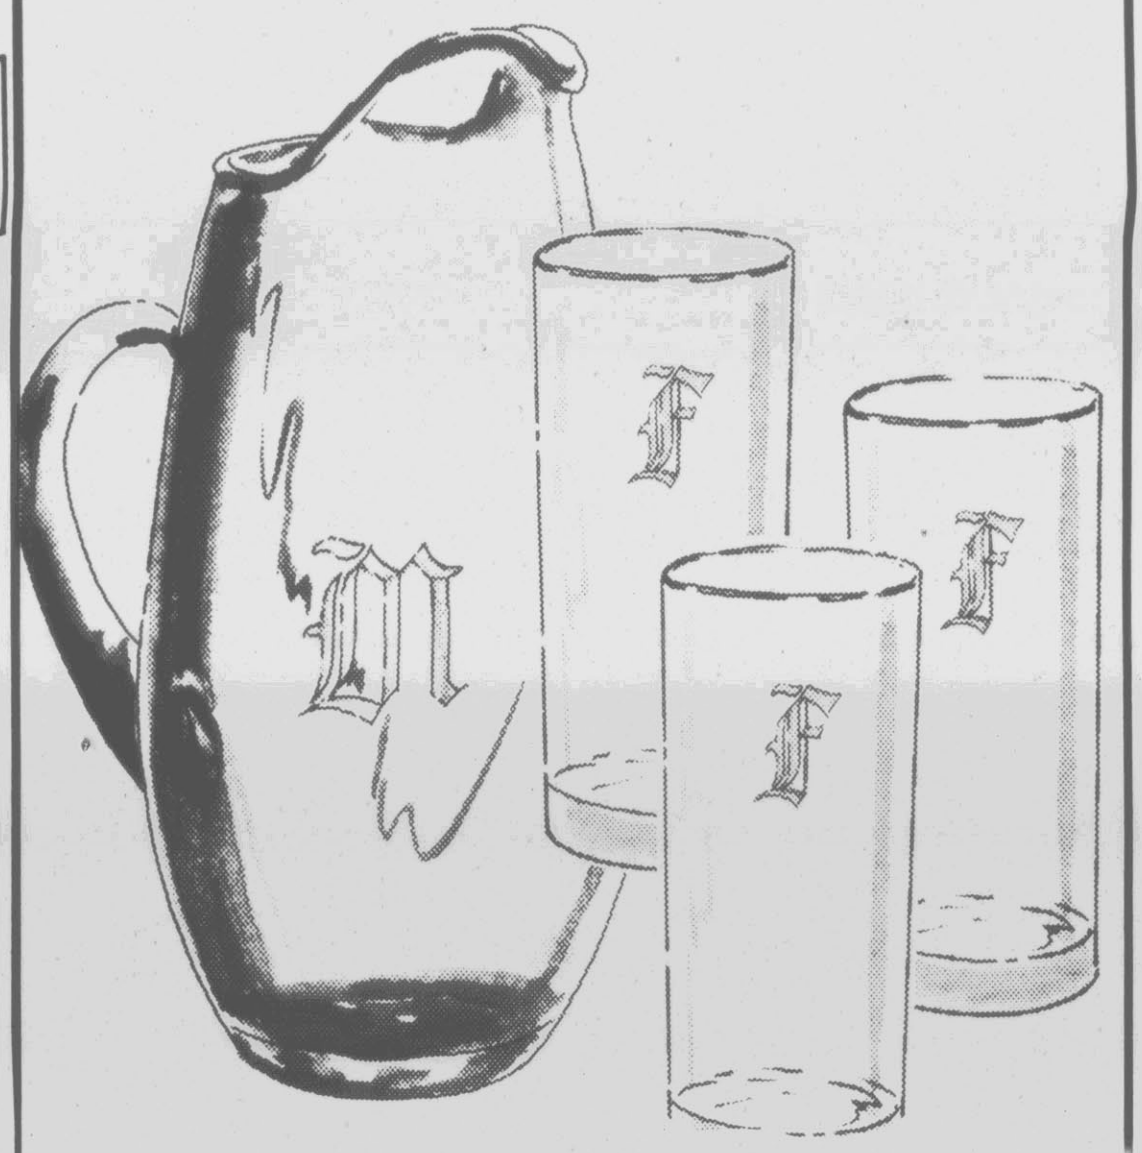

MIAMI (AP) — A record number of Haitian refugees may sail to U.S. shores this year and they're already on their way, a State Department official says.

"We've had over 500 in the last week," Larry Mahoney, of the department's Cuban-Haitian Task Force, said Tuesday. "It has something to do with the weather. ... We have no reason to believe the influx will stop."

Shows A Lack Of Clout

Regrettably funding for the county model health department program appears to be one of the items that will be lost from the state budget.

County Manager Reginald Gray said a legislative staff research committee will recommend a phased reduction of the appropriations.

It is to be recommended that the appropriation be $481,000 for 1981-82 which is a reduction of $144,000 from the 1980-81 fiscal year. There will be an appropriation of only $50,000 in lthe 1982-83 fiscal year.

It is too bad that this change will take place. The Pitt Health Department has been serving a purpose which reached far beyond the borders of the county, and it would not be fair to expect the taxpayers of Pitt County to pick up the additional burden for something that benefits the state.

Some other regional projects will remain in the state budget, thanks to some shrewd work on the part of representatives of those areas.

We fear that the ease with which this appropriation is being eliminated is an indication of the lack of clout by representatives of our county.

Another Technology Change

The large dish being installed alongside The Daily Reflector building is our link with space.

Soon Associated Press signals will feed from the satellite Westar III, some 22,300 miles in space, via the dish and into our own computers, where the resulting stories will be called up by our editors for inclusion in daily editions.

It is one more radical advancement in technology which has greatly changed the way we produce the newspaper, and it will give us a better, more reliable method of receiving worldwide news to keep our community informed.

'Avoiding Reality'

By BILL NOBLITT

Raleigh — People who choose to live near a city to enjoy its many attractions but choose to fight to avoid becoming a resident of that city are avoiding reality, a report to the General Assembly contends.

"We do not believe that an individual who chooses to buy a lot and build a home in the vicinity of a city thereby acquires the right to stand in the way of action which is deemed necessary for the good of the entire urban area.... he has chosen to identify himself with an urban population ....sooner or later his property must become urban."

With that assessment of policy, the North Carolina League of Municipalities is urging legislators to defend the state's effective municipal annexation law against attack and the steady erosion of local exemptions which has seen 60 of 460 municipalities across the state winning exemptions from the law in recent years.

The organization of municipal officials will seek legislative action to: 1. Block further erosion; 2. Halt a proposal to give outlying residents a vote on bond issues from which funds for annexation would come; and 3. Compel cities to annex developed areas in a more timely way.

Essential

Gov. Jim Hunt stands firmly behind the state's municipal annexation law as essential to continued economic growth. "Whenever I talk with governors in other states, the North Carolina law on annexation is one which they say they wish they had..." Hunt says.

Between 1950 and 1958 when residents of areas set for annexation were given a vote in the matter, the defeat rate ran nearly 40 percent. An unknown number of annexation plans were simply abandoned because local officials recognized that defeat was certain.

Today, the law allows a city to annex without a vote when ready to provide municipal services within a reasonable time.

A study committee of the state League of Municipalities made up of both city and county officials has told members of the

BILL NOBLITT

General Assembly that the "needs and interests of the larger urban community must prevail .... The orderly growth of the state's urban areas and the development of local government services, functions, and facilities in an economical manner should be blocked by a relatively few citizens in small portions of the state."

While not calling for direct legislative action, the report also suggests that local officials in the some 60 municipalities which, over the years, won exemptions from the state law take a second, hard look at current conditions with an eye to reversing that situation.

The principle which should undergird all policy considerations on municipal growth is the contention that "whatever is urban should become municipal," the report states.

Other Ways

Without spelling out specific remedies, the municipal and county study committee suggests as well that "defensive incorporation" moves in which communities form city governments to avoid annexation to a nearby city should be discouraged. Such maneuvers have caused a number of legislative battles in the past.

Recommended practices for local officials are also contained in the study, including suggestions that improved planning, zoning, and construction regulation in areas destined to become part of the city are needed; that joint city-county financing and planning of water and sewer lines is critical to avoiding future conflicts; and that some unrest could be avoided by talking more

It's All In The Name

A man stopped me on the street in Manhattan the other day and asked me to sign a petition.

"What's it for?" I asked him.

"We want to change the name of the Bronx to El Salvador."

"Why El Salvador?"

"We figure if we change our name we can get as much economic aid as El Salvador is getting. We worked it out that what Reagan is cutting out of the budget for the Bronx comes to exactly what he is putting into El Salvador."

"My good man," I said, "you can't compare El Salvador to the Bronx."

"You ever been there?" the man asked.

"To El Salvador?"

"No, to the Bronx. We're the same size as El Salvador and we got as many problems as they do."

"But, sir," I said, trying not to get the man angry. "El Salvador is being threatened by 10,000 guerrillas."

"We got more than that in the Bronx. It's safer to walk in the jungles of El Salvador at night than it is in the parks of the Bronx."

"But your people get your arms right here in the United States. The guerrillas in El Salvador are being supplied by the Russians and the Cubans. That's why we're giving El Salvador aid and taking it away from you."

"I'm not too sure I follow that," the man said. "You mean just because our guerrillas in the Bronx can get any arms they want, right in this country, we're not entitled to American aid?"

"That's correct. The $100 million is not aid for El Salvador, but a message to Russia and Cuba to keep their hands off Central America."

"Well, why can't the people in Washington give us $100 million so it will be a message to the Soviets to keep their hands off the Bronx?"

"Because the Russians don't want the Bronx."

"How come?"

"They've seen it on television."

"That's why I want you to sign the petition, man. If we can change the name of the Bronx to El Salvador, maybe they'll want it, and then we'll get some of that money they're throwing at the people down there."

"I don't believe the Russians can be that easily fooled."

"I know they can't, but I figure the people in Washington can be. Hell, I don't think there's a dozen people in the capital who know where El Salvador is."

"I think you would be better off, instead of changing your name to another country, if you changed it to a new

Other Editors Say Angry Fisherman

(Greensboro Daily News)

The East Coast fisheries dispute between the U.S. and Canada is a fierce one, going back to the mid-1970s when both countries decided to extend their territorial rights out from the 12-mile limit to 200 miles offshore. Unfortunately, these extended limits overlap one another in the world's richest saltwater fishing areas, Georges Bank — believed to harbor oil and natural gas deposits as well.

In this region of bountiful resources, the problem is one of where to draw the boundaries to the mutual satisfaction of both the U.S. and Canada. At best the territorial quarrel may be settled one day by the International Court at The Hague. For the time being the Carter administration had worked with the Canadian government to draw up an agreement which would divide the fisheries until some more permanent settlement was reached.

But many U.S. fishermen were displeased with the terms of the agreement which, therefore, was never ratified by the U.S. Senate and recently scrapped by President Reagan.

Canadian outcries came quickly after the treaty was dumped, and were expressed again during President Reagan's state visit to Ottawa. Canadian officials expressed fears that without an agreement dividing territorial rights between the two countries, Georges Banks fisheries were likely to be depleted by competitive North American fishing.

These real commercial concerns have much to do with the richest industry in the Georges Bank area: scallops. Canada netted $65 million worth of scallops last year alone from Georges Bank. For the past four years, while the treaty had been debated by senators and negotiators, the American scallop fleet managed to double in size. Now it pulls in more than half the scallops along Georges Bank.

But the interim treaty devised during the Carter administration would have given American fishermen rights to only around 27 percent of the scallops. In light of that glaring inequity, Reagan's scrapping of the treaty should raise no international legal eyebrows. Of more concern are its implications for larger, more important sea treaties which lie ahead.

Strength For Today

THAT DEFINITIVE WORD APPLIED

Johann Sebastian Bach was not only one of the greatest geniuses that ever lived, he was also one of the most noble men. On every one of his compositions he made the same dedication: "To the Glory of God Alone".

He lived and died in obscurity compared to the world-wide acclaim he was later to receive. Some of the great musicience of his day knew about him and appreciated his abilities. For the most part he was a simple-living man, devoted to his large family, diligent in his duty as a professional musician. Yet, like an eternal flame glowing within him, was his love and devotion to God.

If any man would be great, he must be great in God. If you and I seek any other destiny, we are making a mistake, the fatal mistake of our lives. Bach was always looking up and reaching up. "To the Glory of God Alone". The word "alone" is significant, definite. "There is none other." — Elisha Douglass

NSC Chief In Crossfire

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — High-level conflict over the routine administration decision to postpone or attend a March 25 SALT session in Geneva with the Soviet Union reveals a troubling weakness in President Reagan's national security apparatus, threatening more serious problems in the future.

The issue seemed simple enough when on Feb. 20 Richard V. Allen wrote a brief "Dear Cap" note to Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger. Reagan's national security assistant instructed Weinberger to set up a meeting with the State Department, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA). Subject: the March 25 Geneva compliance-review meeting of the Standing Consultative Commission (SCC).

Allen quickly found himself in a bureaucratic crossfire so lethal that three weeks later, the fast-closing question of the March 25 meeting was still unresolved and Weinberger never has called the meeting Allen asked for. That leaves this question: In his effort to avoid the open warfare that so weakened the Carter administration's State Department and National Security Council (NSC) staff, is Reagan substituting an even more costly clandestine warfare?

Allen's memorandum to Weinberger was never acknowledged by Weinberger. Instead, nearly one week later Secretary of State Alexander Haig's deputy, William P. Clark, and Weinberger's deputy, Frank Carlucci, sent word back to Allen that a "joint position" was being developed and that "if this matter requires" the president's attention, the president (not Allen) would be informed.

Having effectively rejected Allen's instruction to Weinberger, the anti-NSC bureaucracy then called a meeting on its own on March 4, chaired not by defense, as Allen wanted, but by the State Department. The department is in the forefront of those wanting to postpone the March 25 session.

This high-level meeting was convened by Rick Burt, director of the department's political-military bureau. Clearly under instructions, Burt blithely revealed that Haig and Weinberger at breakfast that morning had agreed to postpone the March 25 Geneva session for two months to give the U.S. time to get its nuclear policy in shape.

Among those gathered around the table in Burt's State Department conference room was Maj. Gen. Robert L. Schweitzer, the NSC director of defense policy and Allen's agent. He refused to accept the Haig-Weinberger verdict, just as top officials at ACDA had refused to accept a proposed State Department cable to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow on Feb. 27 announcing postponement of the Geneva meeting. In vetoing the postponment notice, acting ACDA Director Michael Pillsbury insisted the decision could not be made by Haig and Weinberger alone but required "government-wide" participation — meaning Allen and the NSC.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff also opposed postponment of the Geneva session and refused to go along with the State Department's Feb. 27 cable, despite Weinberger's consent. The chiefs want to hear what the Russians have to say about their "compliance" with provisions of the treaties.

In addition to this tactical reason the uniformed Pentagon leaders give for opposing any postponment, some high officials — particularly in that one-time nest of dovishness at ACDA — want to use the March 25 meeting to unveil nearly 40 alleged Soviet violations of the pacts. These are contained in a 167-page super-secret document ("the hottest document in town," one official told us) that has been painfully and scrupulously assembled by ACDA. It could put Moscow on the defensive on the compliance issue.

Haig, Weinberger and their aides privately agree that this compilation of alleged violations could become a

Former Thrift Now Poverty

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Few things more clearly demonstrate the tendency of economies to change than when an old maxim, steeped in years, appears to lose its validity. Such as "a penny saved is a penny earned."

Were he alive today, for example, Ben Franklin might be confused too. In his dedication to a conventional definition of thrift, he might lose his money, his reputation and conceivably his good health as well.

Thrift today, that is, isn't what it used to be, as the depositor in a 5½ percent passbook savings account at a so-called thrift institution is learning to his chagrin. Interest earned of 5½ percent, minus taxes, and minus inflation of 12 percent or so, equals eventual poverty.

And, as inflation continues, the old link between thrift and caution is likely to remain strained if not broken. Conservation of assets, once associated with riskless saving, may require greater risks today.

It may even involve debt, as many Americans have learned. If inflation continues, for example, a dollar borrowed today may not involve a similar dollar in payment tomorrow. A cheaper dollar can be used.

Ordinarily cautious homeowners, the thrifty kind who once believed a loan was something to be repaid as fast as possible, now covet their mortgages, knowing that a 7 percent loan is like money in the bank.

For those who made such loans, such as the thrift institutions — savings banks and savings and loan associations — such loans pave the road to the poorhouse. What they thought was thrift was waste instead.

Tough, say some of those who took advantage of the convolution that wiped out the old definition of thrift. But some critics say the situation can't easily be dismissed. There are implications, they say.

First, can the country so easily pass off the misfortune of those who did believe there was a future to saving? Can the lost assets of such people, who helped raise capital for investment in the factories that built the economy, be dismissed as the grumblings of cranks?

There is the matter of institutions. Can the thrift industry be allowed to deteriorate as it has? And if savings institutions become passe, who will provide the money for home mortgages?

What happens to the economy in general if savings — the rate is once more below 5 percent, lowest of all major industrial nations — becomes insufficient to support needed capital investments.

Some answers already are evident. Growing companies, one answer to improving productivity, find it difficult to raise money at affordable rates. Companies in basic industries forego expansion and improvement. Production efficiency deteriorates. And as a consequence, prices rise.

Something even more perverse happens: The big bets are placed not on the health of the future economy but on its difficulties, on the hope of continued high interest rates rather than a return to normal, on speculations rather than investments in companies of substance.

The answer, according to some economists, lies in tax incentives to old fashioned thrift, the kind of thrift that involved living within incomes, paying off bills and saving small sums regularly.

All such recommendations, however, depend on something else that seems to be badly lacking: Faith in the future. With so many bets now placed on a continuation of inflation, that faith will be hard to restore.

Fear Worsening Trend In State Forest Fires

By The Associated Press

Forest fires sweeping through North Carolina could worsen in the next few days, despite rain forecast for today, a state Forest Resources Division spokesman said Tuesday.

"We could be back in critical conditions in a day or two," said Tom Hegele. He said 15 fires continue to char the state's timberlands, although firemen had put 50 fires under control by Tuesday afternoon.

The National Weather Service forecast called for either rain or snow in most regions of the state. The service said there was an 80 percent chance of precipitation from the mountains to the coast today.

But Hegele said the high and gusty winds could continue to cause some fires to jump control lines.

A State Forest Service dispatcher said a 100-acre fire burned Tuesday in the Upper Hominy section near Pisgah Mt. near the Blue Ridge Parkway.

The fire started early Tuesday afternoon, and fighters were still at the scene Tuesday night.

Brush fires were reported in the Fayetteville area Monday as wind gusts as high as 54 miles per hour fanned the Cumberland County woodlands.

Several forest fires were reported Monday night, the worst off Manchester Road near Pope Air Force Base. Firemen from the Manchester Road Volunteer Fire Department, Spring Lake, Pope Air Force Base and the N.C. Forestry Service combined forces to battle the blaze.

A thunderstorm Monday dropped less than a quarter-inch of rain in the immediate Fayetteville area. And the area's water table remains far below the normal level for this time of year.

Eight fires were reported in Robeson County, burning over 407 acres.

Hegele also said a 200-acre fire was burning in Moore County west of Carthage.

A flurry of brush and woods fires swept Gaston County Monday. Two major woods fires — one on Spencer Mountain Road and one in the Mountain Island Dam area north of Mount Holly — each required firefighters from three departments to bring those blazes under control.

Across the county, 18 brush and woods fires were reported in an 8½-hour period from 11:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday.

One fire near a grocery on Spencer Mountain Road burned for more than three hours. District Forest Ranger Ray Hinson said the fire, which destroyed 16 acres of forest, apparently was caused by lightning.

But he added, "We've had a fair number of fires lately that have been deliberately set. People set them and go off and leave them and they spread. I don't think people understand the ban on burning."

Last week, the state forestry service issued a limited ban on open burning. A permit is required if a fire is to be set more than 100 feet from a residence or within 500 feet of a wooded area.

Super Champ Finals At Conley

The finals for the 1981 Super Champ Competition will be held March 28 at D.H. Conley High School. Winners from local elimination tournaments across the county will enter the competition.

There will be three winners out of each of the six divisions. The groups are as follows: 8-9 boys; 10-11 boys; 12-13 boys. The girls will be divided in similar age groups.

The event, sponsored by the Pitt County Community Schools Program and various recreation departments in the county, "will be the largest we've ever had," stated Alice Keene, community schools coordinator.

Keene added, "The kids seem to enjoy the individual competition as well as representing their school at the finals."

Ten or more will have competitors at the county-wide tournament. "We owe a lot to the PE teachers and principals who worked with us on Super Champ," noted Keene. "The kids look forward to it each year."

highly-useful U.S. tool in the future. To table it at the March 25 meeting, however, would be premature, they say; charging Soviet violations of SALT I (expired) and SALT II (never ratified) might tend to reduce U.S. flexibility if President Reagan decides not to abide by the unenforceable treaties in the future (as Haig has announced the U.S. will do for the present).

Some hard-liners, said by aides to include NSC assistant Dick Allen, believe postponment of the March 25 meeting will cost the U.S. a choice time to play this trump card. Other hard-liners disagree; the alleged violations should not be thrown at the Russians before Reagan knows exactly how he wants to play the SALT game.

Accordingly, conflict over postponing the Geneva meeting cannot be flamed on ideology. It is the result of a national security process without form or substance, so vulnerable that it makes for more baleful jokes than it produces tough decisions.

weapons system," I said.

"It doesn't matter. The only real money that's going to be spent in this country for the next four years is going to be for armaments. If you have a sexy military name, you'll get all the money you want."

"Do we have to put the system in the Bronx?"

"It would be nice if you did. Everyone wants the U.S. to have an MX system, but no one wants it in their own back yard. If the Bronx offered to put it there, the military would be very grateful to you, and reward you handsomely."

"So you think that's a better deal than changing our name to El Salvador?"

"I really do," I told him. "Giving El Salvador $100 million would be a one-shot thing. But they're going to have to pour money into an MX missile system forever."

How North Carolina Senators Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Here's how area senators were recorded in major roll call votes the week of March 9-13. There were no closely contested votes in the House.

OIL PRICE CONTROLS — The Senate rejected, 24 for and 68 against, an amendment to restore government controls on the prices of crude oil, gasoline and propane. The ceilings were to be lifted Sept. 30, 1981, but President Reagan, in late January, removed them eight months early by executive order. The amendment sought a return to the September deadline. The vote came during debate on an energy bill (S 573) on which final action was deferred.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, the sponsor, said: "This vote today will give (senators) an opportunity to indicate to their constituents whether they are really in favor of the 12-cents-a-gallon increase (in gasoline prices) or the additional 12 to 20 cents yet to come" as a result of decontrol.

Opponent Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said: "The benefits of decontrol are numerous. We know, for instance, that decontrol reduces this country's demand for oil imports, and thus reduces our political and economic vulnerability to oil supply disruptions."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to reimpose oil price controls.

Sens. Jesse Helms, R, and John East, R, voted "nay."

CREDIT CHARGES — By a vote of 41 for and 56 against, the Senate refused to allow businesses to charge extra for purchases made with credit cards in order to recover the fees charged to merchants by credit card companies. Rejection of the amendment left intact a three-year extension of the rule prohibiting surcharges on credit purchases. S 414, later passed and sent to conference with the House, also permits unlimited discounts to cash customers.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., sponsor of the move to allow credit card surcharges, said Congress should stop "forcing this hidden subsidy charge on cash customers fopr the benefit of the credit card industry."

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, an opponent, said the extra fees would "have a chilling effect on the use ot credit cards..."

Senators voting "yea" favored allowing the extra charges.

East and Helms voted "yea."

FEDERAL PAY — In four record votes, the Senate said it was against 16.8 percent pay hikes for members of Congress; top congressional staffers; certain judicial branch employees, and a category consisting of the vice-president, cabinet officers, and high-level civil servants. The votes were cosmetic because the proposed increases were scheduled to die anyway on March 16. In a non-record vote, the House earlier took a symbolic stand against federal pay hikes.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, a supporter of the raises, said "we should pay enough to attract people with the top capability in every field."

Opponent William Roth, R-Del., said "it would be highly inequitable to approve these salary increases at a time when the American people are being asked to sacrifice for the common good."

The Senate voted:

— 91 for and 3 against to disapprove raises for top congressional staffers from the $52,000 neighborhood to about $61,000.

Voting "nay" and thus for the raise: Sens. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, Slade Gordon, R-Wash., and John Melcher, D-Mont.

Not voting: Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Robert Dole, R-Kans., Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Edward Kennedy D-Mass.; Russell Long, D-La., and John Tower, R-Tex.

Voting "yea" and thus against the raise: All other senators.

— 93 for and zero against to disapprove raises for members of Congrees from $60,662 to $70,853.

Not voting: Sens. David Boren, D-Okla., Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Robert Dole, R-Kans., Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Russell Long, D-La., and John Tower, R-Tex.

Voting "yea" and thus against the raise: All other senators.

— 86 for and 7 against to disapprove raises for the vice president ($79,125 to $92,418), cabinet members ($69,630 to $81,328) and some 30,000 top-level civil servants ($50,112 to $58,530).

Voting "yea" and thus against the raise: All other senators.

— 87 for and 8 against to disapprove raises for federal clerks of court ($50,112 to $58,530), bankruptcy judges ($53,500 to $62,488), U.S. magistrates and Court of Claims examiners (both from $15,167 to $59,763). Federal judges from the district court level up on recently received raises and were not directly affected by this vote.

Not voting: Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Robert Dole, R-Kans., Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Russell Long, D-La..

Voting "yea" and thus against the raise: All other senators.

College System Seen As Healthy

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Despite North Carolina's financial woes, its higher education system is healthier than most in the Southeast.

At least that's the diagnosis of Winfred Godwin, chairman of the Atlanta-based Southern Regional Education Board.

Godwin reviewed the comparative condition of the state's colleges and universities Tuesday for the joint House-Senate Education Committee.

"North Carolina always has been a generous supporter of higher education and I think that's showed up in the quality of the state institutions," Godwin said.

During the 1970s, he said, the General Assembly spent far more money on its colleges and universities than other Southern states.

"But in the past two or three years, that edge has fallen somewhat," he added. "You provide more overall support to the private sector by far than any other state in this region. But you have more students who benefit too."

Faculty salaries in North Carolina are among the most competitive in the South, Godwin said, noting that the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill leads the region in salaries.

"Faculty salaries are one reason the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and North Carolina State University have been able to attract and keep good teachers," he said.

Although the universities and colleges charge in-state tuitions similar to those in other Southern states, Godwin said North Carolina's out-of-state tuition is the highest in the area.

The state's community colleges, meanwhile, are charging only a third of the tuition charged by similar institutions in the 14-state region.

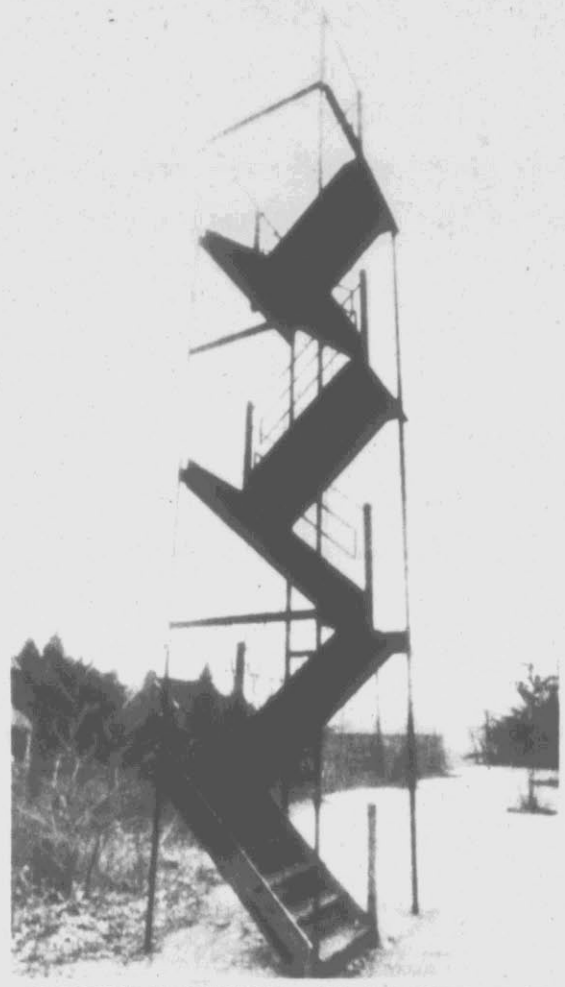

"They are the lowest in the Southeast and the Southwest," Godwin said. "They average about a third of the tuition elsewhere."

Godwin praised the state for the stance it has taken in its dispute with the federal government over desegregation efforts in the 16-campus UNC system.

"The issue remains important to a number of our states," he said. "UNC and the state have drawn the line on a very important issue. I think they are dead right in deciding they alone must determine the importance of educational issues in the individual institutions."

An administrative law hearing is going on now in Washington to determine if the Department of Education may cut off nearly $100 million in federal funds that go to UNC each year.

The federal government contends UNC has failed to integrate properly.

Merger Offers Seen Rejected

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Many North Carolina city school districts — which used to reject mergers with poorer nearby county districts — now find that county districts are rejecting their merger offers. And civil rights leaders say the trend is leading to more segregation.

County school system leaders are turning down merger offers as they swell with upper-income residents, many of whom have fled the increasingly black cities. The county schools officials and residents are worried a merger might precipitate cross-county busing.

Union County superintendent Paul Hammack remembers pleading unsuccessfully for help 10 years ago from a prominent Monroe leader to bring about a merger. He remembers thinking, "I hope the day will come when you'll be begging to be part of the county school system."

That day has come — and the result is a growing racial imbalance that bothers civil rights leaders like Charlotte lawyer Julius Chambers, who foresees possible virtual school resegregation in some counties.

Educators say the trend is evident in:

— Fayetteville-Cumberland County, where the city district is 57 percent black, the county about 30 percent. "We've seen white flight during the past five or six years," said Fayetteville Superintendent Fletcher Womble.

— Thomasville-Davidson County. Thomasville is about 38 percent black, compared with about 4 percent in the Davidson district. "Many years ago, the county felt merger was a good way to go," Thomasville Superintendent Derwood Honeycutt said. "Now the county people don't want it. They're afraid of busing."

— Goldsboro-Wayne County. Goldsboro is 75 percent black, while Wayne County schools are about 30 percent. "There was talk of the city board resigning en masse so the county would have to take over the system," said Goldsboro Superintendent William Johnson. "But board members decided the county would just appoint a new city board and go on."

Other city school districts facing similar problems included Albemarle, Asheville, Concord, Durham City, Greensboro, Greenville, Hickory, High Point, Kinston, Lexington and Salisbury.

"It's not the most attractive situation. Frequently it bodes ill for black kids," said Chambers, who argued the Swann v. Mecklenburg case that mandated court-ordered busing in 1969.

No court cases are pending over the state's increasingly black city systems, although Chambers said his firm may have a case on such an issue later this spring.

To win court relief, a test case probably would have to show that the racial imbalance came about "by intentional acts of the boards," Chambers said. "Sometimes that's difficult to prove."

Although some civil rights leaders and city school officials lament the situation, many county school system residents fight mergers, citing a fear of cross-county busing.

"I'm prejudiced," said a Union County woman who asked her name not be used. "Not against blacks, but against busing. I'm a mother. Like all mothers, I want to put my child in a cocoon and protect him. I try to teach right and wrong, but riding that bus there's sexual talk and drugs. And peer pressure is stronger than parent pressure."

State law allows two methods for merger - by agreement of both school boards and the county commissioners or through an act of the state legislature.

But with the county residents — and voters — opposing such mergers, politicians are reticent to push the issue.

"If there's a merger, the whites in the county would be bused in (to the city) and the blacks in the city would be bused out. How is that going to help either of those groups?" asked Union County Commission Chairman Joe Hudson. "The only ones that would be helped are the whites in Monroe ... We're not going to push merger."

"We're not looking at the situation now," acknowledged state Senate Education Committee chairman James Speed, D-Franklin County. "I haven't heard the concern voiced."

Education experts expect the trend will continue, barring political or court-forced changes.

Andy Venore Jr., senior deputy attorney general, said North Carolina school districts now face "no requirement to bus back and forth" for racial balance as long as those school districts are separate.

Many educators say the most flagrant example of racial disparity in the state is the Durham City-Durham County schools.

The city district, which takes in only part of the town, is 86 percent black, with a black superintendent and predominantly black school board. The county district is about 29 percent black, with a white superintendent and all-white school board.

Twenty years ago, merger was favored by the county and rejected by the city. Now both groups oppose merger.

"We feel we've got a good system and that we can improve it," said Durham City Superintendent Cleveland Hammonds. "We're not pushing for merger.

Durham County Superintendent Frank Yeager, a former civil rights expert for the federal government, said, "For 200 years in this country, people have tended to migrate to places where people had the same ethnic and racial backgrounds. You can't expect to change now.

"People here feel merger wouldn't save money. They know city children would probably have to be shipped out and county children shipped in," he said. "We know it's 'a situation of a predominantly white school system versus a predominantly black system. But we get along."

N.C. Budget-Cutters Back To School Programs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Knife-wielding legislative budget panels again have turned their attention to education, specifically teachers aides and paid work days for teachers.

Subcommittees agreed Tuesday to eliminate programs totaling more than $84 million a year from the proposed education budget for 1981-83 and to recommend elimination of high school classes at the Eastern North Carolina School for the deaf.

The budget cuts came on a day when a judiciary committee recommended the state repay rape victims for medical examinations and the House supported a bill outlining exemptions in the state's open meetings law.

Joint base budget subcommittees on education, driving to meet demands by legislative leaders for a $200 million reduction in the state's operating budget for next year, set priorities on a hit-list of proposed reductions.

The panel gave top priority to a $1-million cut in the Department of Public Instruction's administrative costs, a move that department spokesman Tom I. Davis said would eliminate 51 state jobs.

"That's in addition to 100 jobs we're already expecting to lose with federal money," Davis said.

The biggest items recommended were cuts in the primary reading program for grades one through three, a $35-million a year reduction that would cut Gov. Jim Hunt's program in half and eliminate 4,831 teaching aides.

It also recommended a $34-million saving by reducing from 14 to seven the number of days teachers are paid to work without students.

The subcommittee voted the last cut to be considered, if needed, should be a $2.2-million slash in money for kindergarten through third grade, meaning an increase in class size from 26 to 29.

Actions by all the subcommittees are subject to review by the full Base Budget and Appropriations committees, which are scheduled to begin receiving the recommendations Thursday.

The joint base budget subcommittee on human resources voted 9-5 to delete money for the high school. The move would shift students in grades nine through 11 at the school in the next fiscal year to the Western North Carolina School for the Deaf at Morganton.

The Wilson school, which now offers grades one through 11, will continue to offer grades one through eight, legislative staff analysts said.

Still another budget subcommittee targeted the Council on the Status of Women for a possible money reduction. The council, operating under the Department of Administration, receives $317,000 a year in state money, plus more federal money.

In other legislative action:

Rape

While the subcommittees were looking for ways to save money, the House Judiciary II Committee was considering a bill that would get money back to rape victims.

The committee approved the bill, sponsored by Rep. Kenneth Spaulding, D-Durham. Now the measure heads to the House Appropriations Committee, where it needs a $330,000 appropriation if it is to go to the full House.

Spaulding's bill would provide compensation of up to $500 to pay for medical examinations required after a rape. It would not make the payments if a victim's insurance covered the costs.

He argued that since the medical examinations are required if a rape case is to be prosecuted, the victim should not have to pay those costs of prosecution.

The new program would be run by the Governor's Crime Commission.

Open Meetings

The House approved by a 62-52 vote and sent to the Senate a bill providing exceptions to the state's open meetings law for state and county boards of elections.

The bill would authorize closed meetings to plan investigations and to deliberate action following investigations.

Judges

A bill that would require Superior Court judges to be elected by districts rather than statewide failed to win approval in the House Committee on Courts and Judicial Districts. The bill, proposed by Rep. Howard Coble, R-Greensboro, failed on an 8-5 vote.

Although the bill failed to pass, opponents did not move to kill the bill in committee. Coble said he may try to amend the bill and have the committee vote again.

Rather than calling for a vote by judicial districts, Coble said he may try to change the bill to have the votes taken by judicial divisions. There are four divisions in the state, each with eight or nine judicial districts.

Efficiency

House and Senate Republican leaders filed identical resolutions calling for Gov. Jim Hunt to set up an efficiency study commission like one established by Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser in 1973.

Rep. Frank Redding, R-Asheboro, said the commission, which would study ways for government to use its resources more economically, would not be financed by state money.

"It would appear that having an outside team to look at state government could have great benefits, not to discredit any department, but to find savings which might be overlooked by those who are close to the situation on a day-to-day basis," Redding said.

He said the earlier study commission made 676 recommendations, of which 75 percent have been implemented at a savings of more than $52 million a year.

Redding said he had talked with business leaders who liked the idea and said he was to meet with Gov. Jim Hunt on Tuesday to discuss the proposal.

Redistricting

The joint committees on congressional redistricting agreed to hold public hearings later this spring on proposals to draw new Congressional District lines. Committee chairman Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Statesville, said the hearings would be held in the 4th and 6th districts, and perhaps in others if major changes appear likely.

Huskins also said the committee would hold no more meetings until the final and official U.S. Census figures for North Carolina's 100 counties are released. That final count is due by April 1, although legal challenges to the census nationally could delay the release, some legislators say.

The committee has a number of potential redistricting plans now, submitted by legislators, staff aides and others. One plan put forward by Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Spring Hope, the speaker pro tem of the House, would put Orange, Durham and Wake counties together to make up the 4th District, a plan that drew sharp opposition from some lawmakers.

Loans

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles told a banking subcommittee that he supports a recent banking industry proposal to tie interest rate ceilings to a rate set by the state treasurer.

The industry has withdrawn a bill that would tie most consumer and small-business loan interest rates to the federal discount rate. Instead, the subcommittee is considering linking the rates to the rate set weekly by the state treasurer.

"The state treasurer's rate is more reliable and is a good bench mark," Boyles said. He added that he personally would prefer lifting interest rate ceilings altogether.

Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Chapel Hill, expressed concern that an interest limit linked to the treasurer's rate would subject the treasurer to undue political pressure.

N.C. Farmers Keep Optimism

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Farmers in North Carolina and South Carolina are hoping — despite the current drought — that the coming growing season will be better than the past four.

Three of the last four years have brought bad growing seasons, profit losses and higher market prices for farm produce.

And this year, seven months of sparse rainfall has lowered water levels in irrigation reservoirs and stunted growth of pasture land and small grains.

"It's not a critical situation, but it's close to it," said Dan Tucker of the North Carolina Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

"Compared to any other year I can think of, we're going into the planting season in the worst shape this year," he said.

"We haven't lost our optimism," he said. "There's still time to pick up a few inches of rain between now and the planting dates to get good results for the 1981 season."

Since September, rainfall in North Carolina and South Carolina has run from 2 to 7 inches below normal.

That leaves crop watchers thirsting for some steady rainfall to launch the planting season, which should begin early next month with corn and stretch into late June with sweet potatoes.

"What we're desperately needing for good planting is a steady soaking rain of 4 or 5 inches over a period of four days," said Henry Smith, spokesman for the South Carolina Department of Agriculture.

A good planting season would be a first step in offsetting the drought-related crop losses that totalled more than $200 million in North Carolina and $400 million in South Carolina last year.

Drought and heat damage was so severe in 1980 that the U.S. Department of Agriculture declared 84 of North Carolina's 100 counties and all 46 South Carolina counties disaster areas.

"We can't take another bad year, not on the heels of last year's losses," said South Carolina's Smith.

In Washington at the winter meeting of the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA) this week, state agriculture commissioner Jim Graham called for continued federal drought relief and price supports for tobacco and peanuts. He was joined by his South Carolina counterpart Bryan Patrick.

The three-day meeting ends today with the NASDA scheduled to make policy recommendations to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Bonds Sold By County

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mecklenburg County commissioners took advantage of the fluctuating economy Tuesday and decided to sell $45 million in hospital and school improvement bonds.

By unanimous vote, they accepted a bid from the Wachovia, First Union National Bank, First Charlotte Corp. and Chase Manhattan Bank syndicate to buy the long-term bonds at an 8.66 interest rate.

The interest rate is considerably lower than the 10.3 average for other municipal bonds sold recently and means a savings of about $5 million during the county's 17 year payments on the bonds.

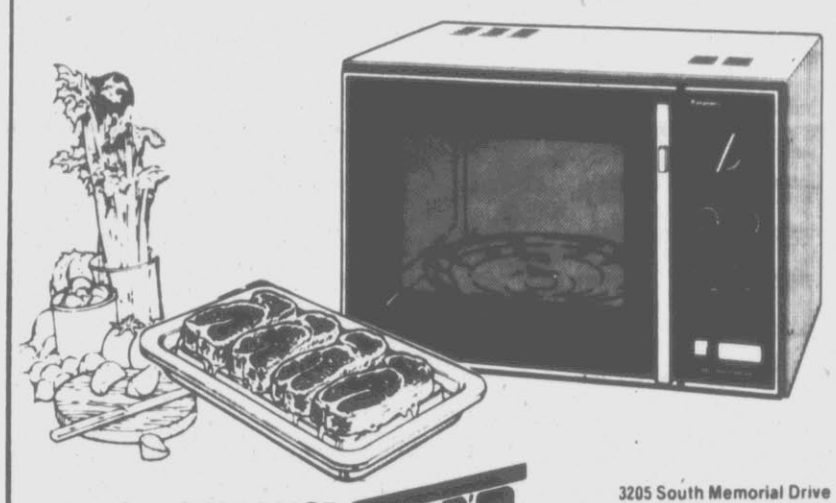

A Triple A bond rating for the county, the highest given to a local government, was the major reason for the relatively low interest rate. The bond rating is based on the financial stability of a community. When financial institutions bid on bonds, there's usually a lower interest rate for a high bond rating.

"We have a stable tax base," said Nathan Alberty, assistant county manager for finance. "Our community and government has a positive image nationwide. We had institutions all over the United States bidding for our bonds."

Leaves Post And Pays In Restitution

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lewis P. Wilson, an assistant commissioner of motor vehicles suspended amid allegations he misused state telephones and travel funds, resigned Tuesday and made restitution.

State Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw announced Tuesday that he had received and accepted Wilson's letter of resignation, along with a check for $1,274.66.

Under an agreement with Wake District Attorney J. Randolph Riley, Wilson will not be prosecuted. Riley said his offer to accept restitution was "based on the evidence and probability of conviction."

Bradshaw suspended Wilson Nov. 17 as the result of a State Bureau of Investigation probe after an auditor reported possible misuse of the state telephone system and unauthorized travel expenses.

In the letter, Wilson said he contested the amount which he owed the state and added that he wanted to stay in the department. But he added that he wanted the bring an end to the issue.

"I feel it necessary to bring a halt to the embarassment which this matter has caused the administration of the Governor of North Carolina and the heartache it has caused my family," Wilson said in the letter.

Wilson had said as recently as a week ago said he would not resign. He claimed that he did no wrong and was a victim of political maneuvering.

The SBI investigated Wilson last October concerning more than 7,000 telephone calls charged to Wilson's credit card since he was appointed to the $43,000-per-year job by Gov. Jim Hunt four years ago.

Riley said investigators traced $1,014 worth of unauthorized telephone calls to Wilson, but that Wilson previously reimbursed the department by $186 for calls challenged by other officials.

"That left $828 for phone calls covered by this investigation and $446 for travel claimed, mostly for meals," Riley said.

Wilson allegedly made many calls to political allies and filed expense vouchers for trips to certain cities when credit card charges indicated that he was in another part of the state at the time.

Wilson said his secretary failed to note on his calendar that he sometimes traveled to two or more widely separated areas on the same day.

U.S. Reassured On Warsaw Pact Maneuvers

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials say new assurances from the Soviet Union have alleviated some of the Reagan administration's concern that upcoming Warsaw Pact maneuvers may mask Soviet military intervention in Poland.

As recently as last Friday, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was expressing concern to reporters about an apparent threat to Poland and to peace in Europe over a "huge exercise about to take place" on Poland's frontiers.

Also at that time, a senior official who asked not to be identified said the apparent large size of the exercise, along with a "hardening line" by the Soviets toward the independent labor movement in Poland, made the situation "somewhat more tense than it was three weeks ago."

Now, just five days later, those concerns seem to be ebbing.

The shift started when Jack F. Matlock, the top U.S. diplomat now in Moscow, was told by Soviet officials, apparently last Friday, that fewer than 25,000 troops will be involved in the exercises and that no large-scale crossings of the Polish border will occur.

The Helsinki Accords require the Soviet Union and other countries which signed them to give advance notification of all troop movements involving 25,000 or more military personnel. No such notice has been received from the Soviets regarding the upcoming maneuvers in Eastern Europe.

Another State Department official, who also prefers to remain anonymous, called the upcoming maneuvers "fairly standard for this time of year" and suggested that, "in hindsight," Haig may have exaggerated the potential threat.

State Department spokesman William Dyess said Tuesday that because of the Soviet assurances, "our concern is somewhat less today than it was last week."

Dyess suggested that instead of full-scale maneuvers involving masses of troops, the exercise might well be command and control training with significantly less than 25,000 personnel.

Despite the new assessment, officials emphasized they will keep a close watch on the situation.

At the Pentagon, officials said they also have indications that what is intended is a command and staff exercise not involving a sizeable number of ground units.

The military sources, who also asked not to be identified, estimated the total number of troops will not exceed 25,000. They said the exercise is likely to involve Poland, the western military district of the Soviet Union and include some amphibious landings on the East German coast of the Baltic Sea.

The officials said there is no sign of the sort of preparation inside the Soviet Union that could be expected if the true purpose of the exercise was to hide military intervention in Poland.

While Dyess indicated that the level of concern about the possiblity of such intervention had lessened, he did say that fuller and more timely explanations would have been desirable "simply because of the concern that so much of the world has with regard to Poland."

"I would stop short of saying that they were cooperative," Dyess said.

Nonetheless, it appeared the Soviets may have surprised U.S. officials by providing any information at all last Friday.

A State Department official, who asked not to be identified, said the Soviets told Matlock troop levels will not reach the 25,000 mark and assured him there will be no border crossings by large numbers of troops into Poland.

Best, Worst Of Tippers

LIVINGSTON, N.J. (AP) — Bartenders are better off serving construction workers and homosexuals than doctors and politicians, according to Bartender Magazine's survey of tipping habits.

After telephone interviews with 250 barkeepers on the eve of St. Patrick's Day, the trade monthly compiled a tongue-in-cheek guide to the best and worst tavern tippers.

Topping the list of best tippers were people who depend on tips themselves, plus construction workers, homosexuals and people who sport diamond pinky rings.

"Guys who work in gay bars always make a lot of money," said publisher Ray Foley.

Politicians and doctors headed the list of worst tippers, followed by teachers, wives, insurance agents and pipe smokers. Politicians don't know how to tip "because somebody else is usually buying," Foley said. And doctors "save all their money, I think."

Women were on last year's list of "seven stiffs," but they were replaced by wives this year, said Foley.

"Now, a lot of women out in the world working are used to tipping when out alone or with other women," said Foley, "but wives hate to see their husbands tip."

As for insurance agents, he said, they "watch every cent they spend. Pipe smokers? Nobody can figure that out."

Again Intercept Off East Coast

OTIS AIR FORCE BASE, Mass. (AP) — For the second time in six weeks, state Air National Guard F106 fighters have intercepted Soviet reconnaissance planes along the East Coast, officials say.

The latest interception came before dawn Tuesday as two fighters — manned by graduate students at Northeastern University — scrambled to meet the Soviets about 190 miles off the coast, the Air Force said.

The interceptors were flown by Capt. Chris Lowry of Forestdale and Capt. Joseph Scavuzzo, Monument Beach.

Cruising within 1,500 feet of the Soviet aircraft, the U.S. planes escorted them at more than 500 mph for about 30 minutes at altitudes of 31,000 and 28,000 feet. At that point, Air Force F106 fighters from Langley Air Force Base, Va., took over, said Major Dick Penney, support officer of the state ANG.

"The Soviet aircraft remained over international waters and did not penetrate U.S. air space," the Air Force said.

The closest the Soviet planes got to land was 135 miles from Cape Hatteras, N.C., said an Air Force statement. They were 190 miles southeast of Nantucket when intercepted, said Penney.

Penney said U.S. air space extends three miles beyond the shore.

The planes were identified as TU95 Bear D reconnaissance aircraft.

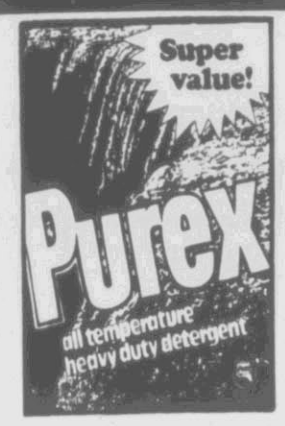

The interception was the second of the year, both involving planes from Otis Air Force Base, said Penney. The last was Feb. 3.

The destination of the Soviet planes was not disclosed.

There was no contact with the pilots of the Soviet aircraft, said Penney.

According to the Air Force, radar detected the planes when they entered the Air Defense Identification Zone, about 200 to 250 miles off the East Coast, at 6:25 a.m.

Try Prevent Pollution Of Persian Gulf

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait is spearheading a drive to rid the Persian Gulf of pollution caused by oil rigs, factories and dust storms.

The Kuwait Foundation for the Advancement of Sciences has urged countries in the Persian Gulf area to take collective action.

"The money is there in abundance, but we need collective action to combat pollution," the foundation's director general, Adnan al-Aquil, said in an interview. "If the pollution menace is left unchecked, it would unfold disasters for Kuwait and other countries of the region."

The other countries are Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Oman, Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates, Iraq and Iran.

Kuwait has invested millions of dollars in fish and shrimp industries and, like its neighbors, relies on the gulf for most of its needs of drinking water, produced through desalination units scattered along the coast.

The Iraqi-Iranian war has drawn attention away from the collective anti-pollution campaign, although the countries of the region had agreed to pool money and efforts.

Kuwait has earmarked an initial $500,000 for research on the origin and nature of the annual summertime Tauz dust storms, originally believed to blow into Kuwait from Saudi Arabia and Iraq.

"Preliminary studies have shown that at least 80 percent of the Tauz come from Kuwait itself, and the remaining 20 percent from Saudi Arabia and Iraq," said al-Aquil. "Efforts are continuing and it is too early for us to say if the problem can be overcome decisively. We are yet to ponder the type of forests that we might spread around the desert tracts to check the Tauz."

Tauz, he said, turns the sky red during the sweltering summer months, sends tiny grains of sand into city buildings and "shortens the lifespan of electronic equipment." The losses are enormous, he added.

One project sponsored by the foundation calls for using laser-operated radar networks to measure air pollution, al-Aquil said.

Bahrain also has been spearheading a project for combating seawater pollution caused by accidental oil slicks in the Persian Gulf.

A recent spill of crude oil, originating in Saudi Arabia's eastern offshore oilfields, touched off widespread panic around the gulf, with no adequate scientific precautions to face it.

The slick kept floating perilously near Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates and Oman until it finally broke up near the Strait of Hormuz.

The director of World Information Systems, Richard Golob, was quoted here as warning that oil pollution in the gulf will increase dramatically over the next decade unless preventive action is taken by all area countries.

Golob said studies had estimated the total amount of oil pollution in the region during 1979 was 144,000 tons, the equivalent of about a million 42-gallon barrels of oil.

"We can expect this figure to reach 1.5 million tons (10.5 million barrels) over the next decade," Golob told Arab delegates at a recent meeting of the Marine Pollution Workshop in Bahrain. "Oil pollution in the Kuwait action-plan region represents 3.1 percent of the total oil pollution in the world."

Bahrain and Kuwait have been masterminding contacts to set up a gulfwide Marine Emergency Mutual Aid Center.

"The gulf region faces real hazards of pollution from land, sea and air," cautioned Bahrain's health minister, Dr. Ali Fakhro, as he appealed for urgent action to fight what he called the "common menace of pollution."

Officials said ballast discharge from tankers at gulf terminals is the main source of pollution, in addition to the burgeoning petrochemical plants, oil refineries, smelters and other factories that add their discharges to the water.

The gulf is like a lake where water is contained by the narrow Strait of Hormuz, at the southern outlet to the Indian Ocean.

Charge 2 In Car Thefts

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte police have broken up a car-theft ring, charging two men with stealing older cars found stalled along highways.

Police found 19 stolen veicles on a Charlotte scrap-metal dealer's lot. Most of the cars were stolen this year after breaking down along freeways or interstate highways, police said. The cars were towed away by thieves while owners were seeking help.

Charged last week with two counts each of auto theft were Michael Anthony Thompson, 20, and Willie Pettis, 36, both of Charlotte. Police said more charges were expected in the case. Both have been released on bond.

The two were arrested after scrap dealer Gary Kiser of City Salvage One Inc. tipped police that he believed some of the cars he had bought were stolen.

Investigator Charlie Rankin said the two men have been linked to seven stolen vehicles and allegedly sold 14 others to Kiser.

Police are still checking about 300 other cars, Rankin said.

Confirm Schools Have A Lower Passing Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nursing graduates from the University of North Carolina's white schools score much higher on professional and certification tests than nursing graduates from UNC's black schools, a UNC official said Tuesday.

Dr. Raymond Dawson, UNC vice president of academic affairs, said under federal cross-examination that white institutions had a passing rate of between 78 to 90 percent, compared to 18 to 33 percent at black schools. He added that UNC officials are very concerned about the difference.

Dawson testified at a hearing to determine if the federal government may cut off nearly $100 million in aid because of UNC's alleged failure to eliminate vestiges of a racially dual system of higher education.

After the hearing, Dawson said reasons for such disparities are complex. He said it isn't that the white schools are better.

"It's probably due to educational background," he said. "It's more a reflection of socio-economic background than it is race."

The figures are from 1980 and concern only first-time test-takers.

There was also a disparity in teachers' exams administered by the state Board of Education, said Dawson.

"We found a high correlation between the SAT (scholastic aptitude tests) verbal and the pass rate," he explained.

Dawson acknowledged there was even a disparity among the three black nursing schools, which include North Carolina A&T State University, N.C. Central and Winston-Salem State.

He said that 33 percent at Winston-Salem passed the exam in 1980 compared to less than 20 percent at the two other schools.

During cross-examination by chief government counsel Richard Foster, Dawson said that Winston-Salem had made a concerted effort to upgrade its program, including the hiring, admission and retention standards.

Dawson said the two other schools were planning to revamp their programs.

Foster reminded Dawson of the university's 1977 desegregation plan which stipulated that any nursing school would be disbanded if it had under a 66 percent passing rate by 1981.

The plan, however, was never accepted by the government, and Dawson indicated that such a move was not likely.

Reward In Coed's Death

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt offered a $5,000 reward Tuesday for clues to the stabbing death of 23-year-old Leslie Hall-Kennedy, an honors horticulture student at North Carolina State University.

Raleigh Police Major John Haley said Mrs. Hall-Kennedy spoke with her husband in Florida just half an hour before the slaying Sunday evening. The husband told police she seemed calm during the conversation.

Dr. Laurin J. Kaasa, a Wake County medical examiner, said the woman died just moments after being stabbed twice in the chest with a knife in her apartment.

Mrs. Hall-Kennedy, who attended public schools in Asheville, was found about 10:45 p.m. on her bed dressed in a nightgown, police said.

Banks Lowered Prime Rates

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's three largest banks lowered their prime rates Tuesday to 17½ percent — the lowest rate since Nov. 26.

Following the lead of the nation's biggest financial institutions, North Carolina National Bank, Wachovia and First Union all announced that their prime interest rates had dropped from 18 percent to 17½ percent.

On Nov. 26, lending institutions boosted their rates from 17 percent to 17¾ percent.

The prime rate is the interest banks charge their best corporate customers, although the banks sometimes offer lower rates to keep from losing borrowers.

The prime rate does not apply to consumer loans.

Nevada Still Happy With Gambling

RENO, Nev. (AP) — It was a perfect match — a wild, penniless state wedded to a young rogue of an industry that promised to make money hand over fist.

On March 19, 1931, when Gov. Fred Balzar signed legislation legalizing casino-style gambling, this state became a pariah to the rest of the country, but Nevadans didn't care. They looked on themselves as a breed apart — tough, independent and open-minded.

As far as Nevadans were concerned, it was easier to tax people than to purify them. And the gaming industry now is pulling in $250 million for the state each year — though not without problems.

In the late 19th century, said Mark Twain, lawyers, bankers, desperadoes and gamblers occupied the highest niche of Nevada society. The history of gambling since 1931 is a story of good guys and bad guys, mobsters and eccentrics.

The first territorial Legislature outlawed gambling in 1861, as did the first state Legislature in 1864. Gov. Henry Blasdel thundered against wagering as "an intolerable and inexcusable vice."

Nevertheless, gambling flourished, and in 1869, legislators overrode a gubernatorial veto and sanctioned backroom gambling parlors.

The women's temperance movement found a natural enemy in gambling. In 1909, the Reno Evening Gazette published a poem, which ran: "Oh, Nevada wicked state, cut the gambling ere too late, lift yourself out of the mire, throw the crap game in the fire."

Apparently better at lobbying than poetry, the Women's Civic Union succeeded in outlawing gambling later in 1909.

By 1915, lawmakers had hedged again, allowing "social games played only for drinks or cigars."

None of the state's controlling efforts really paid off. A Las Vegas newsman, recalling the days before legalization, said, "There were raids, of course, but they were more or less token raids, and nobody paid much attention to them."

Someone paid attention. In 1931, Phil Tobin, a square-jawed freshman Assemblyman from the northern range country, decided Nevada could bail out a badly ailing economy by legalizing casino wagering.

"I didn't really give a damn about gambling and I certainly didn't know much about it," he said years later. "But I felt that if we legalized it, the tax revenue would be beneficial to the state."

He was right. Soon, gambling taxes provided the state's No. 1 source of revenue. By the 1980-81 fiscal year, Nevada's largest industry was pumping over $250 million a year into state coffers.

But Nevada paid a price for what one writer termed "basing its economic structure on the weaknesses of its fellow man."

In the mid 1950s, Sen. Estes Kefauver's Crime Committee exposed a web of corruption in the Las Vegas gambling industry. Said Kefauver: "Nevada's gambling centers have become headquarters for some of the nation's worst mobsters."

Bugsy Siegel, who charmed Hollywood and died in a hail of bullets in Beverly Hills, is said to have pushed his way into Las Vegas in 1942 as Al Capone's representative on the Trans-America race wire service. He quickly dominated the local bookmaking business and became a powerful man in what was then a small desert town.

Siegel is generally credited with dreaming up the notion of turning Las Vegas into a posh resort. In 1946, with the backing of top mobsters, he began building the Flamingo Hotel.

In a short time, swank casinos lined the new Strip and organized crime flourished. In 1955, the state created an investigative agency — the Gaming Control Board — to regulate the industry.

The board bore down on mobsters, with some success. Still, as recently as last June a major Las Vegas casino — the Aladdin — was closed by authorities because of alleged hidden ties to organized crime.

Howard Hughes came to town in 1967. The story goes that after a short stay in the penthouse of the Desert Inn, the aviation pioneer was asked to leave to make room for a visiting high-rolling gambler. Instead, Hughes bought seven hotel-casinos and a large chunk of private land — and began the industry's corporate era.

A few principal casinos remain in private hands. But a glance at ownership records is more likely to reveal names like MGM, Hyatt, and Hilton. The corporations are bullish on gambling. They've learned it pays, despite devastating fires and extortion threats.

"Some potential investors and lenders have been slow to embrace the gaming industry for one reason — the lingering moral issue," said financial analyst Anthony Hopkins. "But they'll change their attitudes in time. It's clear to anyone who's watching this business that the growth potential is unlimited."

THUMB-SUCKING SYNDROME

Does thumb-sucking lead to crooked teeth? Most experts don't think occasional thumb-sucking in infancy causes any problems with teeth. But there is a general agreement among dentists that prolonged and intensive thumb-sucking can lead to misshapen mouths and displaced teeth.

Actually, the position of individual teeth displaced by thumb-sucking is of less concern to orthodontists than the effect on the bony support of the teeth—and the development of abnormal, deforming muscle activity. If, for example, the habit persists past two years, it could alter the child's swallowing pattern. Once this happens, the youngster may develop a protrusion of the upper front teeth; a narrowness of the upper dental arch; and an obvious malocclusion (improper bite) problem. As long as there are infants, there will be thumb-suckers. However, if the habit continues longer than usual, it's best to have the child checked by a dentist before it causes any problems.

DMSO: New Miracle Drug?

I have arthritis and have been told that it will eventually get worse. I am 47 and at the present time I am able to work without too much pain or difficulty. I have been told that DMSO is the coming miracle drug. I know that it is not approved in the United States, but I can get it in a foreign country. Is it worth a try? How safe is it? — Mr. L.D., Texas.

Dear Mr. D.:

Dimethylsulfoxide (DMSO) is an industrial solvent. It has been tried by many people in the United States for the treatment of arthritis and other musculo-skeletal disorders. A preparation of DMSO has been used by veterinarians for large animals. This veterinary preparation has been tried to treat athletes with severe injuries.

In the United States, a 50 percent solution of DMSO has been approved for use in a special type of bladder disease. The National Academy of Sciences has been interested in this unusual substance. There is no doubt that there is some diminution of pain and muscle spasm following treatment with DMSO for severe muscle injuries.

A great deal is known about DMSO. It is rapidly absorbed from the skin. A garlic-like taste and odor on the breath is noticeable a few minutes after DMSO is applied to the skin. The odor and taste may last as long as 72 hours. Severe allergic reactions have been reported in those people who have used DMSO without constant scientific medical supervision.

The conclusion reached by investigators is this: DMSO in high concentrations may prove to be effective in diminishing the pain, muscle spasm and swelling associated with various inflammatory conditions and soft-tissue injuries. The report continues: "There is no convincing evidence that DMSO is effective for any type of arthritis... and DMSO preparations that have not been purified for human use could be dangerous."

There is much more work to be done on DMSO until all the advantages are known and its dangers eliminated. It is wise that you continue with conventional forms of treatment.

A man fainted in my office the other day. I was shocked that one of my co-workers slapped him to make him recover. Does this make sense? — Miss S.J., Wash.

Dear Miss J.:

People who have fainted feel miserable enough without being subjected to a slap in the face, drenching with ice water, or a shot of whiskey forced down their throats.

When people faint, our job is to make them comfortable by loosening their tight clothing, ties and belts, and, if possible, keep them lying flat on their back with the head lower than the feet. This brings the blood to the brain more rapidly and helps to revive them. Be sure that there is sufficient ventilation, cover the victim, and, of course, seek medical help as soon as the person is revived.

Fainting may be a simple problem. Sometimes it is more complicated and requires professional help.

Still Talks Road Taxes

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians "may very well have to pay more in taxes to keep our roads and highways from going to pot and to keep our jobs," Gov. Jim Hunt said Tuesday.

In remarks to the annual meeting of the N.C. Traffic League Inc., Hunt said, "North Carolina's roads are the lifeblood of our economy. If we let them go to ruin, our economy will wither and die.

"That is the choice before our state: progress or potholes," Hunt told the group, whose members handle the routing of industrial shipments.

Hunt has said he will make recommendations to the General Assembly next month for providing additional funding for the Highway Fund.

The governor noted that 1969 was the last time that the gasoline tax was raised in North Carolina.

"It has stayed the same, and the price of gasoline has increased more than 300 percent," Hunt said.

Hunt's remarks were part of a series of talks he is making in an effort to build support for additional revenue for the Highway Fund. The extra money likely will come through a 9.25-cent-per-gallon motor fuel tax.

REVIVAL

Revival services are being held through Friday night at Brown's Chapel Holiness Church, which is located on the Belvoir Highway. Pastor R. A. Griswould invites the public to attend. Services begin nightly at eight o'clock.

LAKE STEVENS, Wash. (AP) — Two ambulance attendants were left holding the stretcher when a reluctant patient drove away with their ambulance, police say.

The Baker's Ambulance crew was dispatched to a Lake Stevens address Monday with orders from the woman's doctor that she be taken to Everett General Hospital.

However, the would-be patient, who was not identified by police, informed the attendants she wasn't in the mood to go.

The men stood by for 45 minutes, stretcher in hand, while the woman's relatives tried to persuade her to follow doctor's orders. But the woman managed to slip out the back door of the house with her 10-year-old daughter and drove off in the ambulance, said Xon Baker, vice president of the ambulance firm.

State troopers stopped the woman on U.S. 2. She said she was on her way to a friend's house to seek refuge.

Minutes later, Snohomish County sheriff's deputies arrived with the two attendants in tow. After a short talk with the officers, the woman agreed to ride to the hospital in the ambulance.

Argue Role Of Fats On Heart

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Smoking, obesity, high blood pressure, cholesterol in the blood — most doctors agree these increase the risks of getting coronary heart disease.

But the role of diet — which some say is the most important factor of all — is sharply disputed by some of the most prominent figures in heart research.

Two of those doctors squared off Tuesday before hundreds of physicians attending a conference of the American College of Cardiology here.

Dr. James Schoenberger, president of the American Heart Association, insisted that a diet low in saturated fats and cholesterol is the reason nations like Japan have heart disease death rates far lower than those in the United States.

But Dr. Robert E. Olson, agreeing diet plays some role, said he thinks the evidence isn't strong enough to make a war on saturated fats and cholesterol a centerpiece in the battle against coronary heart disease.

Olson, who headed the Food and Nutrition Board for the National Academy of Sciences, said a variety of studies on a total of 8,000 Americans have been unable to prove a strong link between a saturated-fat diets and death from coronary heart disease.

Schoenberger blamed that on technical flaws and difficulties in the individual studies, and said it is unfair to combine them.

"The evidence is consistent and overwhelming that diet plays a major role," said Schoenberger, whose organization has campaigned for years to push the American diet away from eggs, greasy meats and other foods rich in saturated fats and cholesterol.

He pointed to a major study of diets and heart disease in seven nations. "The higher the total cholesterol, the greater the risk of coronary heart disease," he said.

Although the Japanese have far lower coronary heart disease rates than Americans, when Japanese eat like Americans, they have American-style heart problems, Schoenberger said.

Even in the United States, the coronary heart death rate has declined 25 percent in the past decade, and Schoenberger said that is caused by changes in the American diet.

Olson, however, insisted that scientists still are unable to prove exactly how saturated fats are transformed into the arterial cholesterol buildups that contribute to heart attacks.

Both scientists agreed that in the United States, known risk factors such as being a man, smoking, obesity, diabetes, hypertension and high blood cholesterol rates can account for only about half the incidence of heart disease.

The most dangerous part of cholesterol is low-density lipoprotein, or LDL, which clumps along blood vessels, said Dr. W.B. Kannel of Boston University. He has conducted major population studies of heart disease.

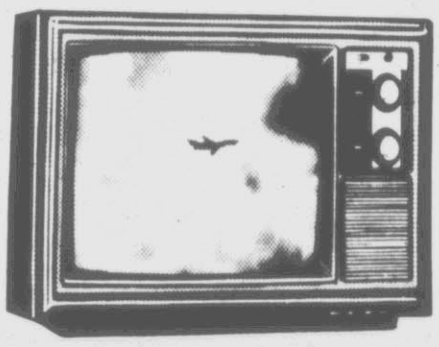

The high-density version, HDL, actually helps dispose of excess cholesterol, Kannel said, "sort of like a garbage disposal unit."

The ratio between the two types of cholesterol is considered a major factor in arteriosclerosis risk, Kannel said.

Among the factors believed to increase the beneficial HDL are losing weight, giving up smoking, exercising, adding female hormones, eating lots of fish and, oddly, taking in poisons like alcohol — moderately — or pesticides, he said.

Exercise, smoking and drinking don't seem to have much effect on the pernicious LDL, Kannel said. But he said that eating saturated fats or cholesterol tends to increase the LDL in the bloodstream.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, continuing the retreat that began on Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.26 to 990.27 in the first half hour.

Losers took a slight lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said all signs were pointing toward a continuing decline in interest rates. The news Wednesday that housing starts dropped nearly 25 percent in February was regarded as a strong indication that the economy was slowing.

But brokers also noted that the market had suffered a letdown when its latest run at the Dow 1,000 level, begun on Monday, ended so quickly with Tuesday's drop.

Scott Paper led the active list in early trading, up ⅛ at 27⅛. A 143,700-share block changed hands at that price.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 10.26 to 992.53.

The NYSE's composite index fell .38 to 76.81.

Bloodmobile Gets 136 Pints

The Bloodmobile, making its last visit to the county schools for the current year, collected 136 pints of blood Tuesday at North Pitt High School.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor of the Pitt County Red Cross, reported that the Bloodmobile experienced a "real good day" at North Pitt, with blood collection activities going "very smooth."

Mrs. Taylor offered her thanks to Josh Potter, school principal, for his coordination of the school visit and she also expressed appreciation to the new group of volunteer nurses from the Bethel area, as well as the women of the Greenville Service League and other volunteers for their help.

In addition to the collection total yesterday, there were 15 persons deferred for various health reasons, she reported.

The next Bloodmobile visit will be Wednesday, March 25 at the Moose Lodge here.

Grew Marijuana In The Greenhouse

WINGATE, N.C. (AP) — Three men have been charged with possession of about 5,000 marijuana plants after allegedly telling a greenhouse owner they wanted to rent her structure to grow "very hybrid" tomatoes.

Gary R. Woodard, 30, Ormand Berry Crabtree, 32, and Griffin Dale Cox, 34, were arrested Monday after Union County Sheriff's deputies confiscated about 5,000 small marijuana plants in the building.

The men, all from Denver, N.C., were charged with possession of marijuana with intent to sell and deliver and with trafficking in marijuana.

Crabtree and Cox remained in the Union County Jail Tuesday under $75,000 bonds. Woodard remained jailed under a $20,000 bond.

The plants were in 5,000 plastic pots and sprouting seeds were found in 38 plastic trays. The plants ranged in size from one to 10 inches.

Investigators said that if plants had fully matured in the greenhouse, they would have been worth $5 million to $6 million at street value.

Sheriff Frank McGuirt said the three men had been leasing the greenhouse for about a year, telling owner Mary Coleman of Wingate that they were tomato growers.

"They said it was a tomato operation. And they did have a few tomato plants," McGuirt said. "But after about 10 feet in (to the rows of plants), there was just nothing but marijuana."

"I don't believe she was involved," McGuirt said of the greenhouse owner.

Deputies reported discovering the marijuana in one of several greenhouses on a tract of land off Ansonville Road, about five miles northeast of Wingate.

McGuirt said the plants ranged in size from just above the ground to about a foot tall.

Break-Ins Investigated By Deputies

STOKES — Investigation is underway by the Pitt Sheriff's Department into three break-ins at neighboring houses near Stokes that resulted in the theft of over $8,000 in personal property.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the incidents were reported Tuesday morning at three rural residences located about three miles east of Stokes on Highway 1551.

Sheriff Tyson said personal property valued at $4,370 was reported stolen from the home of Ronald Crisp on Rt. 1, Stokes. The stolen items included several shotguns, rifles, a pistol, a diamond ring, pocket scanner, walkie-talkie, $30 in silver dollars, and several 50-cent pieces.

According to the sheriff, the house next door, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leggett, was also entered and a suit of clothes and tape recorder were reported stolen. The items were valued at $200, he said.

The third break-in, at the nearby home of Charles Franklin Wynne, resulted in the theft of property valued at $3,485, the sheriff said, including several rifles, scopes, shotguns, ammunition, a gold ring, and a wedding band.

In all three incidents, he noted, the homes were ransacked. Entrance was gained by forcing the back doors of each house, he noted, and approximately $200 in damages were reported at each residence.

O'Berry Shines For 'Green' Reds On Day Of The Irish

By The Associated Press

Leave it to McNamara and O'Berry to shine on St. Patrick's Day.

With the normally red-and-white clad Cincinnati Reds playing in the club's traditional green-on-white uniforms in honor of the "Day of the Irish," the National League team captured two exhibition baseball games Tuesday, blanking the Minnesota Twins 3-0 while a split squad stopped the St. Louis Cardinals 5-2.

"At this stage, what we're pleased about is the fact that they're throwing strikes," Reds Manager John McNamara said of his four pitchers who stopped Minnesota on five hits.

Mike O'Berry caught the entire game and solidified his challenge for the Reds' third catching spot with two hits in three at-bats.

Elsewhere, the Chicago White Sox edged Toronto 7-6, Pittsburgh stopped Boston 4-1, Detroit defeated Houston 8-3, Atlanta beat the New York Yankees 6-4, Los Angeles whitewashed Texas 2-0, Baltimore downed Montreal 6-3, the New York Mets crushed Pittsburgh 11-4, Oakland edged Milwaukee 3-1, the Chicago Cubs needed 10 innings to outlast Cleveland 2-1 and California beat San Francisco 5-3.

Seattle also split its squad, beating San Diego 9-5 and routing Arizona State 11-1.

Cincinnati's No.1 catcher, Johnny Bench, made his spring debut at first base, going errorless and making two unassisted putouts.

"Like everything, it takes work," Bench said of his new position. "You can't just walk in and make it happen."

McNamara said Bench will also play third base and catch during the exhibition season. Bench has asked to catch no more than twice a week.

Dan Driessen doubled in two first-inning runs against Minnesota.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., George Foster sparked a three-run second inning with a double and then slammed a two-run homer in the third.

Jim Morrison hit a first-inning grand slam and doubled in a run in the third to power the White Sox over Toronto. Ken Macha homered for the Blue Jays.

Burt Hooton and Fernando Valenzuela combined on a five-hitter to give Los Angeles its victory over Texas.

Detroit's Richie Hebner went 3-for-4 and drove in two runs as the Tigers defeated Houston. Chris Bourjas had a two-run homer for the Astros.

Steve Carlton, a 24-game winner last year, hurled four impressive innings as Philadelphia stopped Boston. The lefthander gave up only three singles and one unearned run, walking one and striking out three. Orlando Isales had three of the Phillies' seven hits, driving in two runs and scoring once.

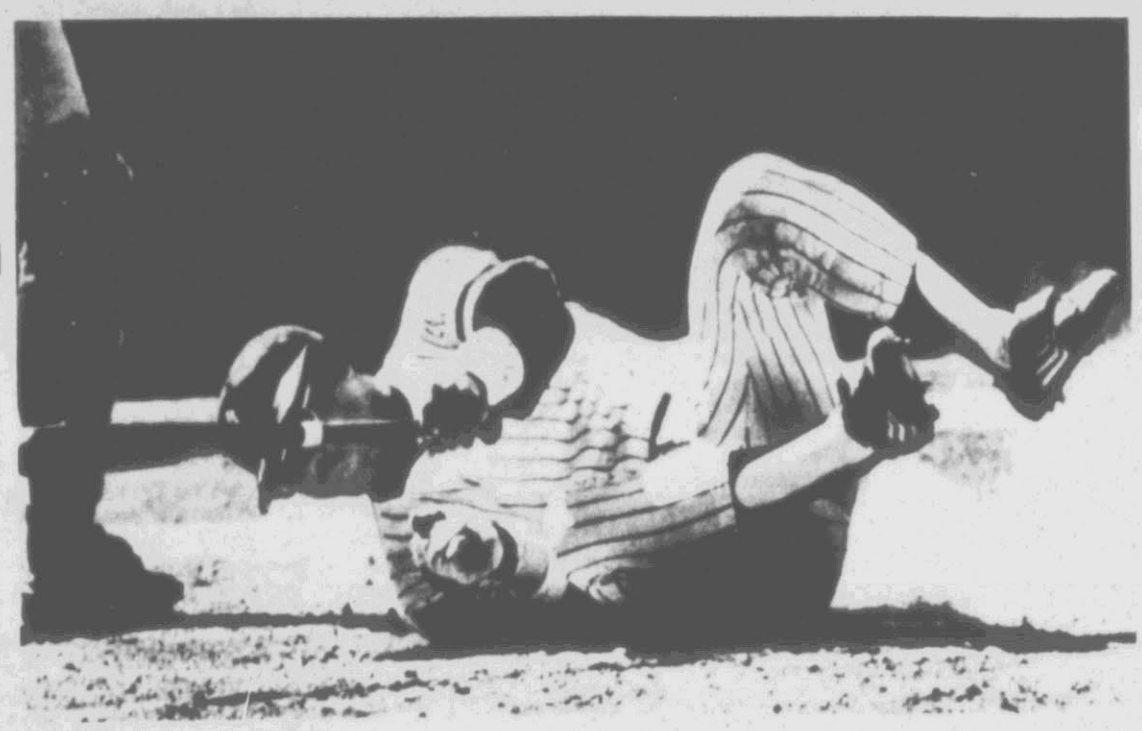

Dwayne Murphy's two-run double snapped a seventh-inning tie and gave Oakland its victory over Milwaukee. Ben Oglivie homered for the Brewers's lone run.

Home runs by Hubie Brooks, Lee Mazzilli and Mike Jorgensen powered the New York Mets over Pittsburgh. Mazzilli also drove in two more runs with a double and a triple, while Rusty Torres hit a two-run homer for the Pirates.

Scott Fletcher's 10th-inning single scored Jim Tracy as the Chicago Cubs edged Cleveland. The Cubs had tied the game in the ninth on consecutive doubles by Scot Thompson and Steve Dillard.

A two-out, two-run double by reserve catcher Brian Harper paced California over San Francisco. The Giants' Jack Clark and Brian Downing of the Angels each hit solo home runs.

Baltimore's Jim Dwyer doubled home the tying run in the sixth inning, then scored the winning run when Montreal shortstop Chris Speier dropped the ball for an error on a rundown play.

Wild Pitch Downs Reggie

Reggie A Walking Keg Of Dynamite

"I'm a walking keg of dynamite," the New York Yankee outfielder said Tuesday as he continued to throw around sparks in his celebrated feud with team owner George Steinbrenner.

"I can't hold in my feelings any more," Jackson fumed in the Yankee clubhouse. "I so much want to have a confrontation with him that I can't wait for it to happen. I want to tear this building down, but I know he won't come in here."

Jackson hopes to renegotiate his contract which expires at the end of the 1981 season. But Steinbrenner, vividly upset when Jackson was AWOL at the start of spring training, has purposely delayed the negotiations.

"I'm tired of the whole situation," said Jackson. "It's affected my play. It's affecting it right now. I talked to the front office over a week ago. The front office knows how I feel. There's only one way to solve it — (but) I won't say what it is."

Asked if that meant he wanted to be traded, Jackson said: "I'm not going to say it."

Jackson was supposed to report to training camp here with the regulars March 1, but came in two days late and was reportedly fined $5,000. Jackson was also angered by a remark by the Yankee owner about how the outfielder "talks out of both sides of his mouth."

"It has eaten at me since I heard it," said Jackson of the Steinbrenner quote. "(He should) tell me I'm no good to my face."

Jackson said he feels Steinbrenner never wanted to sign him to a new contract in the first place. Jackson currently makes about a half-million dollars a year, roughly $1 million less annually than the Yankees' newest acquisition, Dave Winfield, and Steinbrenner traces Jackson's feelings to "pressure he feels from Winfield's presence."

"I could have predicted it," said the Yankee owner. "Winfield has looked so good and you can see it in Reggie's

Larry Farmer

Farmer Hired At UCLA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Farmer brings a solid basketball background, heavily steeped in John Wooden philosophy, and a diverting sense of humor to his new job as UCLA's basketball coach.

The first attribute may help him bring a sense of continuity to the school's basketball program, and the second might ease him over rough spots that contributed to the departure of his three immediate predecessors.

Farmer, a 30-year-old former Bruin star under Wooden and a UCLA assistant for the past six years, was named Tuesday to replace Larry Brown as the team's coach.

"It's been a tough six years for me," Farmer said at a news conference. "I had to get rid of three coaches to get the job. Now guys are lining up for my old spot for the same reason."

Asked how long he thought it may take for him to receive his first criticism, he grinned and said: "What time is it?"

Farmer said he's quite aware of the pressure of coaching the Bruins, who won 10 NCAA titles under Wooden before the legendary coach retired in 1975.

"I like the challenge that people expect UCLA to win and I accept it full well knowing what I have to do," Farmer said. "So much of the tradition here at the school, I have been a part of."

Brown, who left to become coach of the National Basketball Association's New Jersey Nets, held the Bruin post for two years, as did Gene Bartow and Gary Cunningham before him.

Those three all had winning records at UCLA — never failing to reach 20 victories in a season — but the marks paled in comparison to the Wooden string of championships.

"This is day one of what I hope is not a two-year stint," said Farmer. "I have been with the Bruin basketball program for 11 years and I intend to stay a lot longer."

Lady Bucs Sweep N.C. Wesleyan

ROCKY MOUNT — East Carolina University's softball team handed N.C. Wesleyan its first two losses of the season yesterday. The Lady Pirates registered wins of 14-1 in the first game and 10-1 in the second game of the doubleheader.

At the onset of the first game, the Lady Pirates came out strong as they scored four runs in the first inning of play and came back with six in the second.

"Our girls really dominated both games," coach Alita Dillon said. "I was really pleased with both their offensive and defensive play."

Third baseman Mitzi Davis nded the first game rout with a home run in the sixth inning.

"Half our girls went two for four; that really shows me a lot about our hitting," Dillon said.

East Carolina's freshman played well, the coach added. "Tammy Parham, our first baseman, made some really clutch plays for us."

In the second game, the Lady Pirates again came out strong as they collected three run in the second inning and four in the third. Leftfielder Melody Ham connected for a home run in the fourth inning and third baseman Davis hit a homer in the seventh.

Aside from a couple of defensive breakdowns, Dillon expressed a feeling of confidence in her veteran team.

"These two games have shown me a lot about where we stand both defensively and offensively," she said. "All in all the team is shaping up as expected."

The Lady Pirates will be on the road this weekend as they travel to Raleigh to compete in a round robin tournament on Saturday. The Lady Pirates will then face the Wolfpack of N.C. State on Sunday in a doubleheader.

It Was A Hitter's Day On The Diamond

D. H. Conley 30, C. B. Aycock 25

PIKEVILLE — Football in the spring? In North Carolina? It might look that way to anyone who sees the score between D.H. Conley and C.B. Aycock. The Vikings of Conley won it, 30-25.

But it wasn't football. It was baseball.

The wild affair, which saw Conley troop three pitchers to the mound, while Aycock brought in four, one of them making two appearances, took nine innings, with both teams scoring five times in the eighth, and Conley scoring five more times in the ninth to win it.

Conley took the lead in the first, scoring a run, then added six more in the second. Four more crossed in the third and four more in the fourth. The Vikes added three in the fifth and two in the sixth.

Aycock, ever struggling back from behind, scored one in the second, three in the third, then got nine in the fourth. The Falcons added three in the fifth and two in the sixth to trail, 20-18, going into the final frame. In that, they scored twice to tie it up.

Both teams pushed over five runs each in the eighth, but Conley finally broke Aycock's back with five more in the ninth. Joey Joyner led off the ninth with a walk and Emory Vines was hit by a pitch. Dixon Page walked, loading the bases and a sacrifice fly by Roy Lassiter brought in Joyner. Jeff Cox singled in Vines and Page, and Sammy Tucker homered to score Cox ahead of himself with the final runs.

Page and Cox led the Conley hitting with five each, while Lassiter and Chris Buck each had four and Vines and Tucker each had three. Lassiter had a solo homer in the first, while Cox hit a three-run blast in the fourth.

Aycock's hitting was led by Andy Bunn, who had five — three homers and a triple among them. He had solo homers in the second and fourth, and a two-run homer in the eighth to keep Aycock in the game. Vernell Grantham added a three-run homer in the fourth, while Todd Gurganus had a three-run blast in the third.

Conley travels to North Pitt on Friday for its next outing.

Jamesville 22, Pantego 0

JAMESVILLE — Clarence Thomas, starting his first game ever on the mound, pitched a one-hitter and got plenty of help from his teammates as Jamesville bombed Pantego, 22-0, Tuesday afternoon in a Tobacco Belt Conference baseball game.

Thomas, who had pitched on briefly in a relief roll before yesterday, struck out six and walked none. He pitched to just 18 batters in a game called in the fifth inning.

Thomas had a no-hitter going until the top of the fifth when, with one out, Ronnie McCabe singled just fair down the third baseline.

"It was just six inches fair," Jamesville coach Ron Davenport said. "I'm real pleased with him. It's the first game he's ever started and he did a good job."

Jamesville, which has split their first four games this season, scored once in the first and then sent 20 batters to the plate in the second as the Bullets scored 14 runs.

In the first, Thomas reached on an error, stole second and third and scored on a passed ball.

Then came the 14-run second, highlighted by eight walks (including two hit batters), a two-run singles by Kevin and Keith Waters and a two-run triple by Carl Ange.

Jamesville was led at the plate by Ricky Bell, who was two for two. Rex Bell was two for three and Thomas two for four.

The Bullets play host to Belhaven Friday.

Ayden-Grifton 23, Roanoke 15

LITTLEFIELD — It was a hitter's game. Ayden-Grifton and Roanoke took no mercy on either's pitching staff yesterday. In all, there were 38 runs scored on 37 hits and 13 errors in this nonconference baseball game.

The Chargers, behind an eight-run second and a seven-run third, overcame a 10-0 deficit to defeat the Redskins, 23-15.

The Redskins led 6-0 after the first inning and 10-0 after the second when Quince Morning hit a grand slam home run to drive home Neal Cargile, who had singled, and Joey Ross and Mutt Smith, both of whom had reached on errors.

But the Chargers, now 2-3 overall, did not quit. Ayden-Grifton scored eight runs in the bottom of the second to cut the deficit to 10-8 and then took the lead in the third.

Roger Moye led off with a walk, moved to second on Doug Coley's single and scored when Chris Strickland reached on an error. Bernard Ricciarelli followed with a single to score Coley and when Terry Locust went all the way to second on an error both Strickland and Ricciarelli scored.

Chuck Smithwick then singled and stole second and scored on Brandt Allen's fielder's choice. Art Rouse followed with a single and Moye a double to drive home Rouse with the Chargers' final run of the inning, giving A-G a 15-10 lead.

Roanoke narrowed the gap with a run in the fourth but Ayden-Grifton countered with three runs in the fifth. Roanoke added two runs in the sixth and one in the seventh and the Chargers scored five in the sixth to seal the victory.

Allen led A-G in hitting with four doubles in five at bats. Rouse was three for three and Chuck Smithwick, Tyrone Gay and Coley were all three for five.

Gay had a lead off home run in the fifth for one of his three hits.

Ricky Smimpson led the Redskins with four hits in four at bats, including a home run. Cargile was three for five and Edward Grimes and Morning were both two for four.

Ayden-Grifton travels to Farmville Central Friday.

Simpson Lifts N.Pitt By S.Nash

BETHEL — Jerry Simpson one-out triple in the ninth scored Greg Briley to give North Pitt a 9-8 win over Southern Nash Tuesday afternoon in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

Southern Nash scored a run in the top of the seventh to send the game into extra innings. Then, in the bottom of the ninth, Briley singled with one out and Simpson followed with his triple to give the Panthers their second win in as many outings.

Southern Nash jumped out to a 3-0 lead after the first-half inning but the Panthers tied it up in the bottom of the first.

Gregory Briley (no relation to Greg) walked and moved to second on Quintin Dove's single. Bob Hemingway followed with a double to drive home Briley. Richard Heller then had an infield single to load the bases before Mike Brown singled to score Dove and Hemingway.

Both teams scored single runs in the second but the Firebirds added a run in the third to take a 5-4 lead. North Pitt erased that lead with a three-run fifth and led 7-5 going into the sixth.

Southern Nash, however, scored twice in the sixth to tie the game only to have the Panthers score once in the bottom of the inning to regain a one-run advantage.

The Firebirds then tied the game with a run in the seventh and send the game into extra innings.

North Pitt was led at the plate by Dove and Greg Briley, both of whom were two of five.

G. Central Whips Farmville Nine, 6-2

SNOW HILL — Ronnie Tyndall scattered four hits and struck out nine and Gary Bryant knocked in three runs to lead Greene Central to a 6-2 victory over Farmville Central Tuesday afternoon in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

The Rams scored three runs in the second and added single runs in the third, fifth and sixth for their third victory in four outings. Greene Central is 1-0 in the ECC. Farmville is 1-2 and 0-2.

With one out in the second Chris Ginn walked and went to second on Tony Barrow's single. Both moved up a base on a wild pitch before Bryant singled to score both.

Bryant, on second following a steal, scored on David Shirley's single to give the Rams a 3-0 lead.

In the third, Tyndall and Butch Brown walked and Ginn singled to score Jeff Suggs, who was running for Tyndall.

No one on either team had more than one hit. Eddie Johnson had a double for Greene Central and Wade Corbett had a two-bagger for Farmville.

Challange Bonus Posted For Earnhardt In Charlotte

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the Charlotte Motor Speedway have posted a $100,000 challenge bonus for driver Dale Earnhardt if he wins the 22nd World 600 stock-car race May 24.

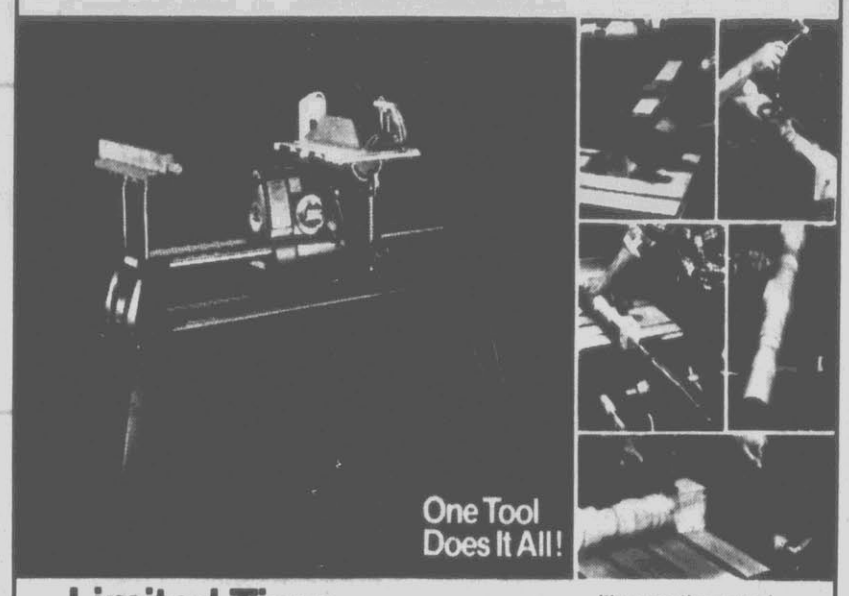

A victory in the event would mark the second consecutive victory for Earnhardt on the 1½-mile Charlotte track. The 29-year-old native of Kannapolis, N.C., scored his first Charlotte Motor Speedway triumph last October in the National 500.

During that event, a similar bonus was posted for 1980 World 600 winner Benny Parsons, Parsons was involved in a wreck and knocked out of contention.

76ers Lose, Fall Out Of First

The horn blared, the scoreboard blinked and the Philadelphia 76ers sputtered.

Philadelphia lost its hold on first place in the Atlantic Division by dropping a 126-120 overtime decision to the New Jersey Nets in a game that was interrupted in the first half by a malfunctioning scoreboard.

The Boston Celtics climbed a half-game ahead of the 76ers in the division race by trouncing the Washington Bullets 112-91. Boston now owns the best record in the National Basketball Association at 58-17, with Philadelphia at 58-18.

Boston has seven games remaining, Philadelphia six, and they play each other twice. Whichever club finishes ahead will get a bye through the first round of the playoffs as well as the home-court advantage in every series.

Play was halted for seven minutes during the first quarter of the 76ers' game at Piscataway, N.J., when the lights on the overhead scoreboard suddenly began flashing uncontrollably and the horn blared for a full 15 seconds. A stop-watch was used to clock the remainder of the first half, and it's still ticking on the 76ers, who blew a 15-point fourth-quarter lead in bowing to the lowly Nets.

"We can't just turn it on and off, we have to take good basketball into the playoffs," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "When you lose three in a row you have to begin thinking and questioning. This was probably the toughest of the losses."

Philadelphia led 104-88 early in the fourth quarter before the Nets reeled off 11 points in a row to draw close. New Jersey tied it for the first time at 105-105 on two free throws by Maurice Lucas with 3:43 to play, and it was a layup by Lucas with 11 seconds left that sent it into overtime at 113-113.

The 76ers led 120-117 in the overtime period before the Nets scored the final nine points on a basket by Cliff Robinson, two free throws by Edgar Jones and five straight points by Lucas.

Mike Newlin led the Nets with 23 points. Julius Erving scored 23 for Philadelphia, which was without center Darryl Dawkins, who missed the game because of an inflamed ankle.

Celtics 112, Bullets 91

Boston ran away from Washington in the final period, outscoring the Bullets 34-15 after leading by just two points after three quarters. It was the 23rd game in which the Celtics, the league's best defensive team, have held their opponents below 100 points.

"We've played a lot of games like this," said Larry Bird, the Celtics' leading scorer with 25 points. "We usually have a good fourth quarter and our great depth is the reason."

"The difference was their defense got tough in the fourth quarter," said Bullets Coach Gene Shue. "And once we started missing, they got their running game going."

Lakers 114, Mavericks 109

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 28 points and Paul Westhead recorded his 100th coaching victory since taking over the Lakers early last season as Los Angeles beat the Mavericks before 17,828, the first sellout in the history of the Dallas expansion franchise.

Brad Davis had 24 points and tied his club record with 16 assists, but Coach Dick Motta was infuriated by the officiating.

"I'm ashamed of our league tonight," Motta said. "We deserve to make a living just as much as the Lakers do. They (officials) didn't call a thing against Jabbar. I'll probably get fined $500 for saying this, but I'm really hot. Every close call of the game went against us. I told our players one official made at least 12 mistakes out there and 10 of them went against us."

Knicks 114, Pacers 89

The Knicks shot 57 percent from the field in routing the Pacers behind 20 points apiece by guards Michael Ray Richardson and Ray Williams. It was New York's first victory in four games against the Pacers, their likely first-round playoff rival.

Spurs 94, Jazz 86

Guards George Gervin and James Silas scored 23 and 21 points, respectively, for San Antonio, which went ahead to stay midway through the third period and then drew away.

Cavaliers 122, Hawks 107

Forward Mike Mitchell scored 18 of his 31 points in the third quarter as Cleveland pulled away to a 20-point over Atlanta and coasted home. Center Bill Laimbeer added 25 points and 19 minutes.

Bulls 116, Bucks 106

Artis Gilmore scored eight straight points in a three-minute spurt late in the fourth quarter and finished with a game-high 30 points as the Bulls moved four games ahead of Washington in the battle for the final Eastern Conference playoff berth. Each team has six games to play, and any combination of two Chicago victories and Washington defeats will put the Bulls in the playoffs.

Nuggets 124, Sonics 112

Dave Robisch, making only his fourth start of the season for Denver, scored 26 points and reserves Glen Gondrezick and Kiki Vandeweghe helped the Nuggets overcome a five-point halftime deficit to beat Seattle.

Blazers 127, Clippers 112

Jim Paxson scored 16 of his team-high 24 points in the third quarter as Portland built a 15-point lead and held on. Kelvin Ransey added 23 points and 10 assists and Mychal Thompson had 20 points and eight rebounds for Portland, which has won six of its last nine starts.

Raider Trial Delayed Again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The often-delayed Oakland Raiders-National Football League trial that was scheduled to begin Monday will be delayed again, probably until the middle of next month.

The NFL's request to have the trial moved out of Los Angeles was denied Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson.

The NFL contended that the anti-trust suit, in which the Raiders and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission claim the NFL and others conspired to block the Raiders' move to Los Angeles, could not be tried fairly here.

But Pregerson said in a 43-page ruling that he felt an impartial jury could be seated in Los Angeles.

In Maui, Hawaii, where the NFL owners' meeting is in progress, the league issued a statement saying it would appeal Pregerson's ruling on the change of venue, and NFL attorney Patrick Lynch left for San Francisco almost immediately.

The NFL said appeal would be filed on an emergency basis within 24 hours in the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal in San Francisco.

The appeals court could make a decision within 10 days. If the appeal is denied, the anti-trust trial could start about 10 days after the decision is made.

The trial was originally scheduled to start Feb. 9 but was put off until next Monday. Now, it appears impossible for proceedings to begin before mid-April.

"The judge's denial of our motion to change venue to a neutral site reflects what appears to be a determination to keep the case in Los Angeles regardless of obvious exposure to serious risks of unfairness," the NFL said in a prepared statement.

"We are obviously concerned about going to trial in the very jurisdiction whose citizens have the biggest stake in the outcome."

Said Howard Daniels, attorney for the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission: "We consider this an important victory. Since the Rams moved to Anaheim, the Coliseum is not in the greatest of financial shape and it would have been much more expensive for us if the trial had been held somewhere else.

"Too, there would have been witnesses we would not have been able to subpoena if the trial had been moved out of this district."

Brown Returns To NBA

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Cliff Robinson, like his New Jersey teammates, discarded his anxiety over the Nets' who-will-replace-MacKinnon quiz well before today's formal introduction of Larry Brown as coach.

"I feel it's better for the team now that it's all over," Robinson said Tuesday night, one day after Brown told his UCLA squad he quit to lead the Nets into the new Meadowlands Arena.

Brown is expected to bring Bill Blair, who recently resigned as coach at Colorado, as his top assistant. Bob MacKinnon, who took over as Nets coach after Kevin Loughery resigned in December, will be named general manager.

"I'm anxious for next season to start," Robinson added. "Everything will be new — new arena, new coach, and new players from the draft. It will be like starting from scratch."

Maurice Lucas, a veteran forward, also was relieved when months of speculation ended over the National Basketball Association coaching job.

"Everyone will be glad to have this matter settled, to know where we are going to go next year and the years after," said Lucas.

"It's a positive sign for the club, especially the young guys, to know who their coach will be. It clears some of the mist out of the air," Lucas said.

Brown, who made $40,000 a year as UCLA's head coach, will receive a four-year contract with a base salary of $200,000 a year plus incentive bonuses. The 40-year-old coach built a reputation on his ability to mold young players into fine performers, and the Nets, with six rookies, are enthusiastic.

Robinson, who at 20 is the youngest player in the NBA, said he is eager to play for Brown.

"I've heard good things about him, about how he could coach young ballplayers. He was one of the first coaches to let freshmen come in and play as much as they did," said Robinson, who attended the University of Southern California.

Brown had a 251-134 record in five years with the Denver Nuggets before quit ting Feb. 1, 1979 in a contract dispute. He was hired by UCLA the following year and coached the Bruins to a second-place finish in the NCAA tournament and a 22-10 record. This season the 10th-ranked Bruins, who suffered an embarrassing 78-55 NCAA playoff loss to BYU Saturday, finished 20-7.

Farmer Hired...

He will try to coach "like Larry Farmer," he said.

"My background is closely linked to John Wooden, so my foundation is rooted in Coach Wooden's style," Farmer explained. "The icing on the cake is what I've learned from Gene Bartow, Gary Cunningham and Larry Brown while I served under them."

Asked if his teams will resemble Wooden's on the floor, Farmer grinned and replied: "I hope so...at the end of the game."

Brown had a 22-10 record his first year at the school, and his young Bruins surprised most observers by making it to the championship game of the NCAA tournament, where they lost to Louisville. This season, UCLA was 20-7 and lost its opening game of the playoffs, a surprising 78-55 defeat by Brigham Young last Saturday.

The general response of the Bruin players to the coaching change seemed one of happiness for Farmer and sadness over Brown's departure.

actions. I've known him for four years. I know how he reacts to these things. Winfield looks so good and Reggie is struggling defensively and offensively and it is bothering him a little. That's Reggie's way of reacting and I must says it's not very mature. But I know Reggie, and he'll be there when the time comes."

Earlier in the day, Jackson also displayed a good deal of displeasure when knocked down by a pitch from Atlanta's Al Hrabosky.

When Jackson got up, the two played a cat-and-mouse game. Finally, time was called when Jackson was apparently not ready to hit. Hrabosky threw the ball anyway, and Jackson smugly stepped across the plate and tried to catch the pitch with his hand. He apparently wasn't hurt, as he went to first on a walk and later came out of the game after six innings with a double in two at-bats.

In 1980, the San Diego Chargers were the first team in pro football history to have three 1,000-yard receivers. They were Kellen Winslow, John Jefferson and Charlie Joiner.

AIAW Nationals Set To Begin

By The Associated Press

The 14th-ranked University of Oregon women's basketball team is hoping to return to its starting point when the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women final four meet at Eugene March 27-29.

The Ducks and seven other teams host first-round games today with the winners advancing to the home sites of the eight top-seeded teams Saturday night for round two.

Oregon was upset by 18th-ranked Oregon State Sunday for the Northwest region championship. But Coach Elwin Heiny's dispair turned to joy a few hours later when the national pairings were announced.

The Ducks, 24-6, host 17th-ranked Colorado, 28-4, the Intermountain champion, which is making its tournament debut. The contest will be a battle at center between Oregon's 6-1 junior, Bev Smith, a member of the Canadian Olympic team, and the Lady Buffs' 6-4 freshman Lisa Van Goor. The winner meets fourth-seeded Southern California, 24-6, the Western champion, Saturday night.

Minnesota, 28-6, the Midwest runnerup, makes its second national tournament appearance when it hosts Southeast runnerup Jackson State, 31-7. The 15th-ranked Gophers, who are also Big Ten champions, played in the 1977 nationals when they automatically qualified by being the host team.

'Bama Coach Quits, To Marry EC's Payne

Cronic will marry East Carolina assistant basketball coach Eddie Payne in May. Allen will return to her Raleigh, N.C., home to help manage her family-owned golf course.

Cronic succeeded Ed Nixon as the Tide women's coach last summer. The team posted a 21-12 record in the 1981 season, finished second in the Southeastern Conference Championship and was second in the Alabama Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women's state tourney.

'Daffy' Dean Dead At 66

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Paul "Daffy" Dean took a little bit of baseball with him when he, the other half of the "Me and Paul," combination died of a heart attack Tuesday in Springdale, Ark.

Dean, who was 66, never liked the Daffy monicker. A sportswriter was responsible for the nickname after the 1934 season when Dean teamed with his more famous brother Dizzy to win 49 games for St. Louis and all four games of the World Series against the Detroit Tigers.

The "Me and Paul" duo combined for 200 career wins in the '30s for the Gashouse Gang. Dizzy had 150 of those, and his 30 wins in 1934 still stands in the St. Louis Cardinals' record book.

Even so, insiders concede Daffy might have been the better pitcher.

"Criminy, he didn't need a curve, not when he threw the damnedest, heaviest sinker you ever saw," said Frankie Frisch, when he managed the 1934 team. "When a batter hit one of those pitches, his hands stung as painfully in July as if he'd swung an icicle in December."

A shoulder injury ended Daffy's promising career after he'd won 19 games in 1934 and 1935. The farmboy from Lucas, Ark., was 5-5 in 1936 before asking to be placed on the voluntarily retired list.

Although Daffy won seven more games before retiring for good in 1943, it was 1934 his fans remember.

In September, when the Cardinals were playing a makeup doubleheader in Brooklyn, Dizzy went out and won the first game on a three-hitter. But Daffy, in what he termed his greatest moment in baseball, bested that effort by no-hitting the Dodgers.

The Cardinals won the pennant that year by two games after the New York Giants collapsed and lost six of their last seven.

In the series against Detroit, Dizzy and Daffy gave the Cardinals a 2-1 lead in the series by sandwiching victories around a loss to Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe. The Cardinals lost the next two, but Daffy picked up the win in the sixth game and Dizzy closed out the series by winning the seventh.

While Dizzy went out and bought an airplane, Daffy bought a farm and married a former beauty queen.

A salary dispute with the Cardinals followed when Daffy was offered $8,500 for the 1935 season. The hurler sat out until the last day of spring training before signing.

"They tell me I'm too young to be making so much money," Daffy said while leaning against a plow on his Arkansas farm. "Well, I'm old enough to win a danged lot of ball games for 'em."

After pitching the Little Rock Travelers to a 4-2 win in a comeback attempt in April 1946, Daffy thought he'd found "the old snap and zing." But less than a month later, he was released.

Tennessee Muscle Faces Virginia Height In East

ATLANTA (AP) — It will be muscle against height when Tennessee tangles with Virginia in the NCAA East Regional college basketball tournament Thursday night.

Notre Dame meets Brigham Young in the nightcap.

At 6-foot-7 and 235 pounds, Tennessee center Howard Wood uses his muscle to stop opponents who often tower over him. Thursday, he faces 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson, who has led the Cavaliers to a 26-3 record and the regular season championship of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

They are ranked No. 5 in the country and are top-seeded in the regional.

"There's no way I've been losing sleep over Sampson now," Wood said before Tuesday's practice in Knoxville. "This will be just another big game for us.

"Man-to-man defense has gotten us here, and I don't think we'll change that much for Sampson," Wood said. "What I'll do is try to push him out as much as possible, because there's no way you can stop him if he gets the ball too low.

"I don't know how physical they (the officials) will let us play. I'll have to see how they call early and go from there."

Irish star Kelly Tripucka and other seniors played on the Notre Dame squad that made it to the NCAA final four in 1978. They lost the opener to Duke, then the consolation game to Arkansas.

"To have something like that happen so fast just coming out of high school, it was like you didn't even get to enjoy it," Tripucka said by telephone from South Bend, Ind.

The Irish are 23-5 and ranked No. 7 in the country.

"Now we're all seniors, and I figure we're good enough to go back," he said. "With me, I think I've accomplished everything here at Notre Dame. We've done well, beaten good teams, and I feel I've done well. I've been lucky. The only thing that's really left is the final four, to go back and win it all."

Tripucka, a 6-foot-6, 215-pounder leads the Irish in scoring with 18.3 points per game and in free throw shooting with 82.5 percent accuracy.

In Brigham Young, the Irish face the only surprise team in the East regional semifinals. Brigham Young, 24-6, is led by Danny Ainge, a first-team All America selection.

Ainge, who is 6-foot-4, is "the equivalent of (the Philadelphia Phillies') Pete Rose," said Irish Coach Digger Phelps. "He leads the team, not necessarily in scoring, but by inspiration."

Ainge had the range Saturday as Brigham Young upset UCLA 78-55 to win a semifinal berth. He scored 37 points in that game.

St. Joseph's Trying To Forget DePaul

By The Associated Press

Now that St. Joseph's has knocked top-ranked DePaul out of the NCAA basketball tournament, the Hawks' biggest problem might be trying to avoid living in the past.

The Philadelphia team didn't lead the whole second half against DePaul in the NCAA Mideast Regional until the final seconds, when John Smith's unmolested layup gave the Hawks a 49-48 victory.

"The reality of the situation is that there are 16 teams left," said Hawks Coach Jim Lynam. "So we beat the No.1 team. But we've got to play again Friday."

That game will be in the Mideast Regional semifinals against Boston College, which beat 11th-ranked Wake Forest in another of the big upsets in the second round last weekend. No.9 Indiana faces unranked Alabama-Birmingham in the other Mideast game at Bloomington, Ind.

"This is the glamour of what this tournament is all about — for a team that doesn't have a national reputation to go out and do this," said Lynam. He was referring to his own St. Joseph's team but could have been talking about any of the other five unranked teams, including Boston College, still alive in the tournament.

The state of Kansas boasts three of the unranked teams.

Kansas upset No.3 Arizona State and Wichita State defeated 13th-ranked Iowa to advance to the semifinals of the Midwest Regional Friday at New Orleans, where they will play each other for the first time since 1955. No.20 Arkansas and fourth-ranked Louisiana State meet in the other Midwest semifinal.

Kansas State also took the upset route, advancing to the semifinals of the West Regional against No.19 Illinois Thursday by beating second-ranked Oregon State. No.14 Utah faces No.6 North Carolina in the other West game at Salt Lake City.

UNC-Utah Game On TV

The North Carolina-Utah basketball game in the Western Regionals will be telecast over WITN-TV, Channel 7, in Washington. The two teams will be meeting Thursday night in the semifinals of the regional.

The game will be aired beginning at 9 p.m.

North Carolina reached the semifinals by defeating Pitt in the second round of the NCAA regionals. Utah won over Northwestern in its second round game.

The game will be played in Salt Lake City, the Ute's home court.

Syracuse Rolling Into Quarterfinals Vs. Mich.

By The Associated Press

And, actually, they have.

Since finishing their worst regular season in a decade with a 15-11 record, the Orangemen have brightened considerably in playoff competition. Jim Boeheim's team swept three games to win the Big East tournament and has since won twice in the National Invitation Tournament.

Thursday night, the Orangemen hope to keep rolling against Michigan in their $27 million Carrier Dome in one of two NIT quarterfinal games. In the other, Minnesota hosts West Virginia.

Quarterfinal play continues Friday night, with South Alabama playing at Tulsa and Duke visiting Purdue.

"It's an excellent matchup," observed Boeheim of his team's game with Michigan. "They like to run. We like to run. Any team that has beaten teams like Arkansas, Kansas and Indiana — teams that are still going in that other tournament — has got to be good."

The Wolverines have had a season much like the Orangemen. They fell out of contention in the Big Ten with a late-season slump, losing seven of their last eight games. But they have since bounced back with two NIT victories, including an 80-68 rout of Toledo last Sunday night.

"It seems strange playing here this late," says Syracuse center Danny Schayes of the 26,000-seat Dome.

Owners Out To Pin Defeat On Miller?

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Marvin Miller, the executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, rejects the notion that baseball owners are out to pin him with a defeat.

"I don't think it's that personal," Miller said Tuesday, following a closed-door meeting with the Detroit Tigers at their spring headquarters. "I think they want to give the players a loss. That, I think, is more likely and almost proven by what has happened."

What has happened is that the owners have spent a reported $35 million for strike insurance through Lloyds of London in anticipation of a player walkout May 29.

When the compensation matter was tabled in the agreement last May, a committee of player and management representatives was set up to seek a solution, but the study group was unable to solve the matter.

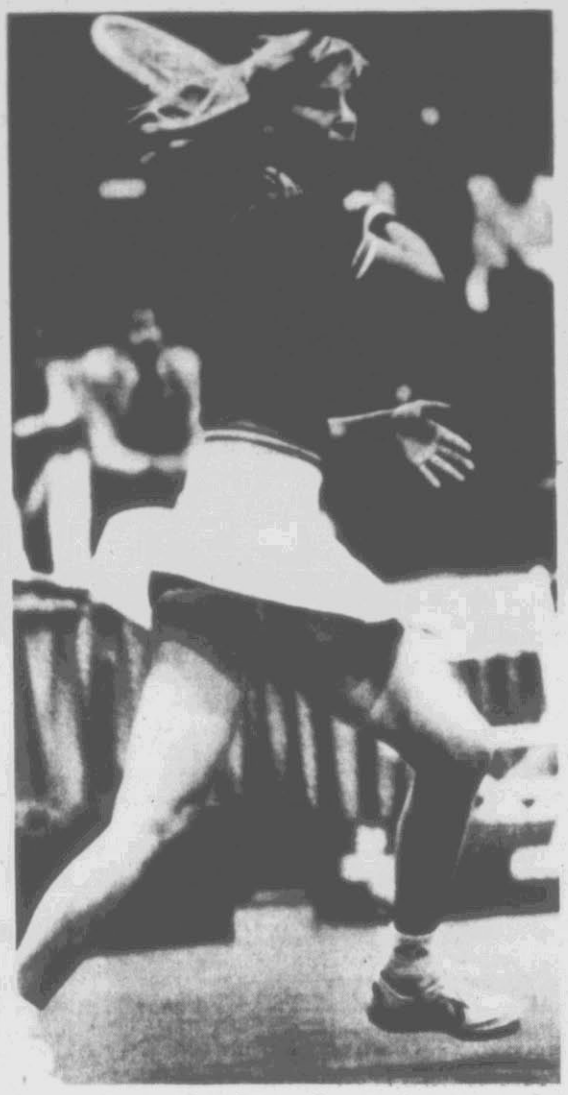

"Maybe the word 'compensation' is getting in the way," Miller said. "We're not opposed to a club losing a really quality player and getting something in return — without damaging the free agent. (However), any proposal we make that doesn't damage the free agent isn't good enough for them to accept, and that's the crux of the problem," Miller added.

Miller said, as he has many times, he hoped there wouldn't be a strike but maintained that the issue is up to the owners.

"I think the one thing that's happened in the coverage of this dispute is that it has not been made clear to the fans that the players have no demands," Miller said. "The players have no proposals for improvement. The dispute is caused by an owner demand to take back rights players already have. I do not think that has gotten across to the fans.

"Last year both sides disagreed on the issue of compensation and that's why it was set aside until this year. In putting aside this issue (compensation), there were no commitments whatsoever on either side as to what would come out of the study committee effort and the negotiations to follow that.

"When Mr. (baseball commissioner Bowie) Kuhn says there was a commitment — implied or otherwise — he is terribly in error, and I'm being as polite as I can."

Tough Choices To Avert Social Security Collapse

By PETER A. BROWN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Social Security, the Depression-era retirement innovation that has grown into the largest federal program, faces bankruptcy unless Congress makes some difficult decisions it would rather avoid.

The choice for lawmakers in this time of tight budgets is not pleasant — reduce benefits, limit recipients, raise taxes or, quite possibly, some combination of the three.

What began in 1935 as the government's first venture into social welfare — modeled after Germany's now century-old system — has because of inflation and bureaucratic growth become the largest single item in the federal budget.

The problem is that more money is flowing out of the Social Security system than is coming in. For every $10 paid out in benefits, it collects only $9.50 in taxes.

The job facing Congress is to balance the Social Security books. And it must decide whether to reverse the trend in recent years of placing more and more welfare programs under the Social Security Administration.

No longer is it solely a program, as conceived by the New Deal, to help old folks retire with dignity. Now, beneficiaries include spouses, children and disabled persons.

More than 36 million Americans will collect $136 billion from Social Security this year. The maximum monthly benefit for a worker retiring at age 65 in 1980 was $553.30. The average check paid such workers was $283.

Lawmakers almost certainly cannot eliminate the Social Security deficit without making some people unhappy.

So, Congress seems ready to approve whatever unpopular measures it must to ensure that Social Security does not run out of money — a calamity experts foresee occurring by 1983 unless something is done to prevent it. They also agree the system faces even more serious financing problems next century.

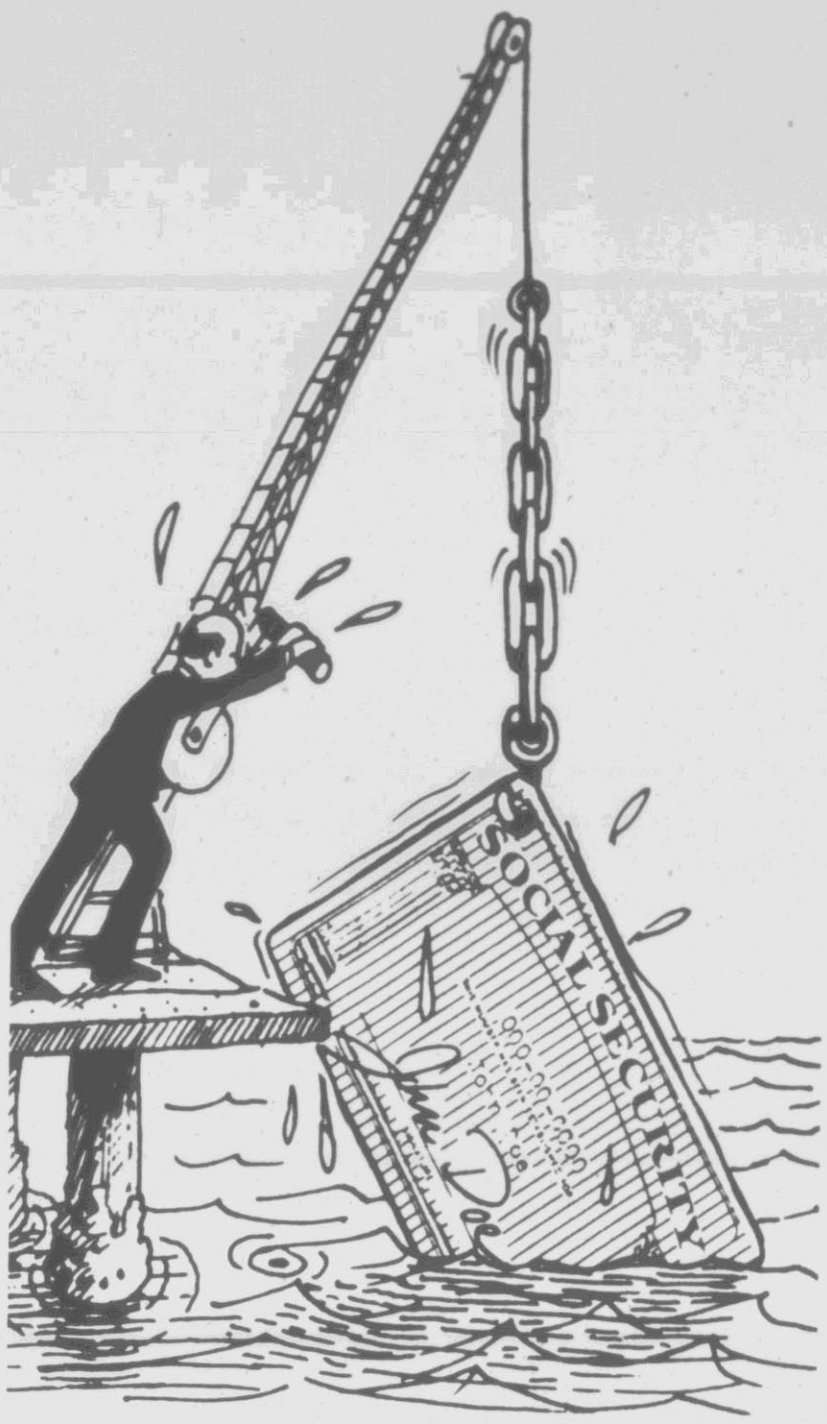

Two factors make a solution to the Social Security crisis even more difficult: the troubled economy and the declining birth rate. Both mean reduced revenues with which to pay the benefits.

Secretary Richard Schweiker of the Department of Health and Human Services, which has jurisdiction over the Social Security Administration, forecasts a time of "hard choices, some unpopular decisions and some difficult trade-offs."

"There are no easy answers," says Schweiker. The final solution, he says, will have to be "tough medicine."

The list of distasteful considerations ranges from reducing benefits to using general tax revenues to make up the deficit, and in between there is the possibility of extending the retirement age.

"We've been wrapping up the Social Security system in bailing wire for years," said Rep. Barber Conable, D-N.Y., a member of the House Ways and Means Committee that must propose legislation to keep benefits flowing. "This problem threatens to ultimately result in generational warfare between the young and the old."

SOCIAL SECURITY — The Depression-era retirement innovation that has grown into the largest federal program, is in trouble. (UPI Drawing)

It will almost certainly generate political warfare. Democrats have championed benefit increases. Republicans generally have provided what opposition there was.

President Reagan did not touch the basic retirement program in his first round of proposed spending cuts. But his top aides made it clear that does not necessarily mean he won't do it later.

Congress' view

Democrats, although outnumbered in the Senate, control the House, where all tax legislation must originate.

"Changes coming will be made by my subcommittee," insists Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the Social Security subcommittee that will actually write the bill.

"This bill is not going to be written at the White House. It is not going to written by (Budget Director) Dave Stockman or Richard Schweiker."

Pickle's counterpart in the Senate is Bill Armstrong, a conservative Colorado Republican with close ties to the White House and Schweiker.

"Either we find a way to reduce the cost of the program or increase the tax burden or someone is going to pull a rabbit out of the hat," says Armstrong.

The long-range solution will involve reducing the number of people getting benefits. That will probably mean raising the retirement age, either through a change in the law or incentives to persuade people to work longer.

There are also two thorny political questions: How lawmakers can require participation by the public, but not federal workers? What about the status of women?

All agree women are discriminated against by the present law, but it would cost money to remedy this at a time when the emphasis is on cutting spending.

Since its inception during Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, the retirement and survivors program has been supported by payroll taxes, called "FICA" on paycheck stubs.

The tax is the most regressive of federal levies because the rate does not increase as a person earns more money. Workers don't finance their own retirements, but support current beneficiaries on the assumption that following generations will pay the freight when today's workers are ready to retire.

As the government expanded and went headlong into social welfare, several programs were added to Social Security to be financed by the payroll tax.

They include benefits for students age 18-22 whose parents are dead or disabled, disability payments for workers, and Medicare, the government health insurance program for the elderly.

"Since the enactment of Social Security a number of unearned benefits have been added to the core old-age and survivors insurance program," Reagan said in his budget message. These "add-ons" have threatened the solvency of the program, he said, and it is time to revert to the basic retirement role Social Security was meant to play.

Inflation's effect

In 1937, when the program began operating two years after the Social Security Act was passed, workers paid a maximum of $30 a year in payroll taxes. By 1950 that had risen to $45. It was $174 in 1965 and $374 in 1970. This year the limit is $1,975 and there are scheduled increases until 1986.

The huge jump is partly because of the add-on programs, like Medicare and benefits for full-time students, but it is mostly due to the 1972 passage of legislation adjusting all Social Security benefits for inflation.

The rocky economy of the 1970s and the declining birth rate of recent years have taken their toll so that each retiree collecting benefits is supported by 3.2 workers, compared to 1945 when 50 workers supported one retiree. Projections are by 2035 the ratio will shrink to 2-to-1.

"Most of the short-term problems facing Social Security are caused not by the system, but by the economy," says Pickle.

Rising unemployment means fewer people contributing payroll taxes and inflation requires higher benefits, so there is less money coming into the fund and more going out.

All sides agree the long-range problem is more serious because it is going to require changes that will alter American lifestyles — probably either delayed retirement or limits on cost-of-living increases.

Even Pickle, a folksy fellow from Austin, Texas, who prefaces virtually everything with an assurance the system won't go broke, warns it would be "a fatal mistake if we assume the problems facing Social Security can be handled by stonewalling against change."

Reagan wants to eliminate benefits for students age 18-22, tighten disability eligibility, and abolish the minimum payment of $122 a month. That minimum goes mostly to government employees who worked briefly in private jobs. Without it, they would get much smaller payments.

Reagan stands a good chance of winning approval of those changes, although it is likely that Congress will phase them out by degrees rather than eliminate them outright.

Depending on whether you believe the Congressional Budget Office or the White House, the retirement fund faces a $63-billion or $40-billion cash shortage by 1986, and the Reagan cuts will eliminate only $20 billion of the shortfall.

Possible remedies

To fix the immediate problem there are several alternatives, but each has political liabilities. Some possibilities:

—Limit cost-of-living adjustments that have dramatically driven up the program's budget because of skyrocketing inflation, although this would have less effect in the short term than the long run.

—Finance Medicare through income taxes and use the payroll tax money for the retirement fund.

—Borrow from income tax revenues.

—Require federal and state government workers to belong to Social Security.

—Allow the retirement fund to borrow from the Medicare and disability funds.

—Raise payroll taxes; limit basic benefits or eligibility for them.

It is almost inconceivable lawmakers would raise payroll taxes — they did that in 1977 and the increases are now being felt by workers — or cut core retirement benefits. Restricting eligibility, unless done in a massive way, is not a big money item.

Staff Member Will Speak To Union

Ms. Elizabeth Webb, faculty member in the ECU Department of English, will be the speaker at a meeting of the Greenville Branch of the English-Speaking Union to be held at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church at 3:30 p.m. Sunday. The program will be held in the Ladies' Parlor of the church.

Ms. Webb's lecture will be entitled "Kilver: The Curate of Clyro" and will be illustrated with color slides. The Rev. Francis Kilvert (1840-79) was a country clergyman who spent some years in the Welsh border county of Radnorshire in England. He kept a diary which reveals a portrait of English country life in mid-Victorian times. When excerpts were published in 1938-40, Kilvert was recognized as an outstanding English diarist.

Ms. Webb is a native of the area covered in the diary and is active in the English-Speaking Union. She has served as Books-Across-The-Sea chairman for the local Union branch and is currently chairman of the scholarship committee.

Increasing Persecution

LA MARADA, Calif. (AP) — The Rev. Georgi Vins, leader of independent Russian Baptists who was exiled to this country in 1979 after eight years of imprisonment, told Biola College students that persecution of Christians is spreading in the world. He said "it is very possible that there are great trials facing you" in America.

Tough Choices On Social Security.....

Allowing the retirement fund to borrow from the better-heeled Medicare or disability funds would not solve the problem since they don't have a large enough surplus to carry Social Security for more than a couple of years.

Finally, including all federal workers — among them the Social Security commissioner — is politically popular in the provinces, but will face stiff opposition in Washington.

How much could be saved by limiting inflation adjustments depends on what formula is used. Of the $21 billion in additional Social Security costs this year, $16 billion went for cost-of-living adjustments.

Armstrong and Pickle, while wary of commiting themselves on anything, see cost-of-living adjustments as a potential area of agreement.

Cost-of-living

"There seems to be some consensus on the cost-of-living ... some adjustment must be made," says Pickle.

"I am going to be concentrating on ways to deal with the problem through eligibility changes or possibly through benefit level changes — not necessarily present benefit level changes, but conceiveably changes in the method by which the program is adjusted in the future," says Armstrong.

It is not likely that Congress will ever eliminate the cost-of-living adjustments. "It is critical that we protect our older citizens against changing economic conditions because they are the group least able to afford the protection themselves," Pickle says.

But he talks of indexing the adjustments to either the increase in wages or prices — whichever is lower — thereby not giving those on retirement larger increases than those working and supporting the system. Others have suggested only increasing benefits by a large fraction — say 90 percent — of inflation.

The proposal to change the way Medicare is financed is popular with many Democrats, but key GOP players haven't taken a position on it, deliberately keeping their options open.

There is the question of whether income taxes would have to be raised or other programs cut to pay for a change in Medicare financing, which makes a seemingly easy solution very treacherous politically.

Several study panels, Conable and three former Social Security commissioners recommended to Congress last month that the method of funding Medicare be changed and the freed monies be used for retirement benefits.

"The payroll tax is appropriate for cash benefits programs (retirement) because benefits are related to past earnings and to the taxes paid on those earnings," a relationship that does not apply to Medicare, argues William Driver, who headed the Social Security Administration until January.

A congressionally mandated study urged in February that Medicare be financed with income tax funds. But it wants a 2.5 percent income tax surcharge to pick up the slack in the treasury and congressmen are not likely to vote for that.

Even Pickle lectured a witness during last month's hearings that Congress would "find some way to do it (fix the system) without raising taxes."

Taking money for Social Security from income tax revenues is a sacred political cow — especially this year — because of the consensus that doing so would make it even more difficult to balance the budget.

"Once you get into the habit of using that money, it's hard from a political standpoint to stop," says Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, the ranking GOP member on Pickle's subcommittee.

Retirement age

Probably the most controversial idea, although one gaining acceptance, is cutting costs by keeping the elderly working longer by raising the retirement age.

That would have dual benefits for the system: more money coming in and less going out. But it is questionable how many lawmakers intending to run for re-election would bite that bullet.

Nevertheless, supporters of postponing retirement come from all points on the political spectrum. They would phase it in gradually next century so not to affect anyone now age 45 or older. Younger workers, they say, should have enough time before then to make the needed changes in their retirement plans.

They argue that because of medical advances people now live much longer than when the program began 45 years ago, so it would not be unreasonable to postpone the retirement age.

Most proposals would push back the age for retirement from 65 to 68 by 2012, and for early retirement with reduced benefits from 62 to 65. Experts generally agree that would probably solve the system's long-term funding problems.

Armstrong says raising the retirement age "is one we will consider very seriously ... I think it is a reasonable thing to look at."

Others like Conable, who are wary of the "political hornets nest ... fraught with political perils" that raising the retirement age would become, say it would be easier to provide sufficient incentives for workers not to retire.

Work incentive plan

Early retirement, now taken by two-thirds of workers, is a special problem. Although early retirement would likely be raised if the normal retirement age is, lawmakers want to provide incentives to make it worthwhile for people to continue in the work force until the regular age.

Not only does early retirement mean three fewer years of taxes being paid and three more years of benefits being collected, but the checks received are less than from normal retirement.

Someone who retires at 62 gets 80 percent of what he would get if he retired at 65. Most workers choose to collect reduced benefits early because it takes 10-13 years of collecting such checks before they begin losing money.

But the lower benefits leave many elderly needy, and they then turn to federal aid programs that further adds to budget deficits.

"Rather than using the stick approach of raising the retirement age," says Conable, "we can use the carrot instead and encourage people to work longer."

"That is one of the features we will certainly look at," Schweiker promises.

Among the major vehicles he could choose are:

—Changing the law that now reduces Social Security benefits $1 for every $2 earned over the 1981 limit of $5,500, which would mean additional benefit costs, but also mean more money in the fund from additional payroll taxes.

—Providing other tax incentives, such as lower payroll levies, for workers 65 or over and making it less profitable for people to retire early.

—Abolishing the law that allows firms to have mandatory retirement at age 70.

State and federal workers have always been exempt from Social Security, although periodic suggestions have been made that their retirement systems be merged with it.

Public employee unions, whose members say their pension systems afford greater benefits, have always been able to successfully fight efforts to merge them into Social Security.

"It is absolutely politically untenable for the commissioner of Social Security not to be covered by Social Security," Says Conable. "It will not bail out the system, but it should be done. The public has a right to wonder if there is something wrong with this system if federal employees are not covered."

Equity for women

The question of how women — whose place in the work force has changed dramatically since the program was begun — should be treated is also a thorny one.

Virtually all the proposals to change the ways benefits are allotted to provide greater protection for women would cost money — so it would be surprising in this year of tight budgets if anything is done in that area.

Feminists for years have claimed the Social Security system does not treat women equitably, arguing that they are not given economic credit for the years they spend out of the workforce raising a family. They claim women, who as a rule live longer than men, make up 72 percent of the elderly population.

"To overlook the needs of elderly women as we begin the process of re-examining Social Security is to ignore a basic inherent problem with the system," says Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, who is leading the drive for the reforms.

Faced with the seeming fiscal and political realities of trying to increase spending for a program everyone else is resigned to cutting, she is optimistic.

"I think we can get the changes. It's a question of equity and sometimes pricetags are not the only thing that ought to be looked at," she said.

While the decision-makers are putting their program together, lobbyists for labor, the elderly, welfare recipients and other groups have been holding their own meetings to organize resistance.

Former Health Education and Welfare Secretary Wilbur Cohen, now a professor at the University of Texas, is one of the leaders of the forces trying to stop proposed cuts.

Labor, the elderly, student groups and welfare recipients make up the coalition and they hope that although there is a consensus on Capitol Hill for cutting spending, Social Security will be treated differently.

"The climate on the hill is related to cuts, but I don't know if it is related to cuts in Social Security," Cohen said. "Social Security is something people have made specific contributions for. What we don't know is whether that distinction will be made by Congress."

City Landmark Also Landmark Of 'Chemical Age'

By MIKE HENDRICKS
Associated Press Writer

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Binghamton's tallest building, centerpiece of a modern, multi-million-dollar downtown government complex, is now a landmark of the Chemical Age, an empty monolith filled with deadly dioxins.

What started out as a routine electrical fire in the State Office Building on Feb. 5 eventually released some of the most toxic chemicals on earth throughout the interior of the 18-story structure.

Today only a few people wearing protective garb and respirators are allowed inside. The 725 state employees, separated from their offices and files, are working elsewhere while people try to figure how to make the building safe again.

Officials who initially approved a routine cleanup, and called it off when the gravity of the situation was realized, are now awaiting advice from a panel of international experts. People who originally thought the bill would run into the thousands of dollars are now talking about millions of dollars. More than $1 million was spent on the initial, aborted cleanup.

What happened in the State Office Building here on Feb. 5 apparently has never happened before in this country, but authorities say it could happen again, in any of most of the nation's large office buildings.

Binghamton Fire Chief Ed Faughnan says his investigators have not completed their study of the fire, but they do know that more than 180 gallons of coolant laden with toxic polychlorinated biphenyls, commonly known as PCBs, leaked out of the building's electrical transformer into the fire.

The intense heat and oxygen combined with the PCBs to produce an even more deadly poison, dioxin, the same form of dioxin found in Agent Orange, widely used as a defoliant during the Vietnam war. Veterans' lawsuits throughout America blame Agent Orange for a host of physical ailments and birth defects.

The poisons spread through the building, coating ventilation shafts, desks, drapes and restroom facilities with what appears to be a layer of black soot. In the early cleanup, contaminated water from toilets inside the building was flushed into the city's sewer system.

No one immediately understood the severity of the situation. The deadliest chemicals were not discovered until eight days after the fire, after some workers had walked through contaminated areas without protection.

"We've been trying to comprehend the magnitude of this incredible, astounding incident, which, quite frankly, none of us could believe was happening for the first time anywhere right here in quiet Binghamton," said Dr. Arnold Schecter, the Broome County health director.

Schecter, who is a medical doctor and professor of preventive medicine at the state university's medical school here, walked through a contaminated area in his street clothes. Now he minces no words when discussing the seriousness of the problem.

"We now have a new environmental hazard to live with," he said in a recent interview. "We have a unique event here that could only happen in the Chemical Age. Nothing quite like this has ever happened before, not in an office building this way, not in a city. What happened here had happened only in the laboratory.

"The question that is raised by all this is: Do we have this health hazard in most office buildings across the country?"

Transformers using coolant containing PCBs are common throughout the country, Schecter said. In 1979, after a similar, but less extensive, incident in Toronto, the Canadian government banned such transformers.

The Binghamton fire and explosion came at 5:30 a.m., Schecter noted.

"If this had happened at 9 a.m. in a building like the World Trade Center (in Manhattan), there would have been a lot of dead people, and a lot of people whose health would have to be monitored the rest of their lives, and a lot of babies would be born with problems. There would be reason to worry," Schecter said.

Still, as many as 200 people were exposed to the dangerous chemicals, including one pregnant woman who worked in a City Hall office contaminated by cleanup workers who unknowingly tracked dioxins in with them, Schecter said.

"We're faced with a problem we don't know much about," he said. "We don't know much about the medical consequences or exposure to low level PCBs and dioxins."

The chemicals contaminating the building have been linked to cancer, and are known to attack the liver and nervous system, cause fetal damage and remain in the human body, he said.

Two workers involved in the initial cleanup say they will sue the state, contending they were not informed of the dangers they faced.

The reactions of state officials have ranged from alarm to attempts at humor.

Gov. Hugh Carey, for example, offered to drink a glass of PCBs and clean the building with a vacuum cleaner. The remarks caused a small furor in Binghamton, and the governor later backed off, saying he had only meant to warn New Yorkers of what he called overreaction to the contamination.

Schecter said that a glassful of the toxins in the building would kill Carey. "It's Agent Orange, essentially, not just PCBs in that building. They're all bad," he said. "Depending on the governor's system, he would be dead within a few minutes or hours."

CONTAMINATED BUILDING — The state office building, tallest building in downtown Binghamton, stands empty more than a month after an explosion spewed some deadly chemicals through its 18 stories. Officials are unsure how to clean up the mess. (AP Laserphoto)

Ferrets As Family Pet Also A Rabies Source

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — Health authorities say the ferret, similar to domestic cats in many ways, is becoming an increasingly popular pet in the United States with a five-fold increase in sales during the past five years.

The sales increase has been noted in both pet and laboratory animal markets, according to the Viral Diseases Division of the national Centers for Disease Control. Twelve-thousand ferrets are sold each year in this country.

Along with the growing popularity of ferrets, however, lies the danger of exposure to rabies, say viral disease experts at the CDC. They cite a marked increase in queries the CDC and some state health departments are receiving regarding ferrets and associated possible exposure to the disease.

Writing in the agency's Veterinary Public Health Notes, the CDC had this message for ferret owners: the ferret "is assumed to be highly susceptible and capable of transmitting rabies if infected."

At the same time, however, the CDC said, "it appears that the ferret, while a potential source of rabies exposure for man, is much less likely to be exposed to rabies than are pet skunks, raccoons, or foxes, which are often trapped in the wild and then sold as pets."

As pets, the experts said, ferrets are usually kept in cages except when actually being handled.

Ferrets belong to the same animal family as the skunk, otter, mink and weasel. The only wild native ferret in the United States is the black-footed ferret which is among the rarest of the endangered mammals and is rapidly approaching extinction. The CDC said there have been only two or three reliable sightings of black-footed ferrets since 1973.

Ferrets sold as pets in the United States come from domesticated European stock, which over centuries have been selectively bred for productivity and desirable behavior traits. They are noted for their inquisitiveness.

"As pets, ferrets are similar to domestic cats in many ways. Like cats, they are fastidious in their toilet, self-training easily to a litter box or paper. Their behavior is docile and cat-like," the CDC said.

Ferrets are not normally released outside, as a cat might be, and the CDC said that if they escape it is often difficult to recover them. "Escaped ferrets rapidly develop the cunning, speed, and stealth for which their wild counterparts are noted; even so, escaped ferrets do not appear capable of reproducing and establishing themselves in the wild."

The CDC said that if, in the investigation of a ferret bite, the investigator is reasonably certain that the animal has had no contact with rabies carriers in the wild and was not vaccinated with rabies vaccine, (which sometimes causes rabies) "then the likelihood of the ferret's having rabies seems extremely remote, and anti-rabies treatment of the bite victim would not seem warranted.

"If, on the other hand, the ferret has possibly been in contact with wildlife, then rabies should be considered."

Rabies is a nearly-always fatal disease in man. It can be readily prevented, however, by vaccination.

The CDC's Viral Diseases Division, Bureau of Epidemiology, said it would like to get any information relative to ferrets and rabies so that it could be passed along to others who have questions about the subject.

Yarmulkes On Sports Court

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Jewish Congress reports it has won a temporary court order allowing two Jewish high school basketball teams to wear yarmulkes on the court.

The order was issued by U.S. District Court Judge Milton Shadur, temporarily restraining a rule of the Illinois High School Athletic Association prohibiting headwear in interscholastic basketball games.

Public Broadcasting Cut Posed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new chairman of the Senate communications subcommittee has introduced a bill that would impose drastic budget cuts on public broadcasting stations while encouraging them to explore other sources of income — possibly "limited advertising."

The measure introduced Tuesday by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., also would force stations to use federal grants and money from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting solely for program production. That money now may be used for anything.

Smaller stations would receive a larger share of the available federal money, but the larger stations would receive a clear mandate for the first time for fund-raising experiments, Goldwater said.

The bill "strongly encourages the Federal communications Commission to re-examine its rules regarding on-air sponsorship identification. Perhaps the time has come for some form of limited advertising for public broadcasting," Goldwater said.

He noted that some stations already earn money through rental of equipment and the sale of advertising in program guides.

The Corporation for Public Broadcasting is a private, non-profit firm established in 1967 at Congress' direction to encourage the growth of commercial-free radio and television. CPB's most important roles are to distribute federal funds to individual radio and TV stations and to pay for high-quality programming.

Congress must renew legislation authorizing CPB this year if it is to continue. The task takes on added importance since the Reagan administration has proposed major cuts in CPB's budgets for the 1982 and 1983 fiscal years, already approved by Congress at $172 million each year.

Goldwater did not indicate whether he would support changing those budgets. His bill, however, would continue the practice of approving CPB's budgets two years in advance as a way to insulate public broadcasters from political pressure.

"The federal role in public broadcasting can, and must, be reduced," Goldwater said. His measure would renew CPB's authorization for three years, but restrict the government's contributions to $110 million in fiscal 1984 and $100 million in fiscal 1985 and 1986.

Fifty percent of each year's appropriation would go to individual stations for their program production and 40 percent to 45 percent would be used by CPB for programming.

The bill would cap the annual grant to any one station at $1 million. A station now may get 50 cents from the federal government for every dollar it raises on its own, with no limit on the federal grant.

The restriction would reduce grants to stations in cities like New York, Boston and Los Angeles. New York's WNET-TV, for example, expects about $4 million from CPB in fiscal 1982, according to Goldwater.

'Rockathon'

The pledge class of Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity at East Carolina University will be sponsoring a "rockathan" outside the student supply store on the main campus March 23 from 7 a.m.-7 p.m. for the benefit of the American Lung Association.

Members of the pledge class will be rocking in rocking chairs during the 12 hour period to raise money to aid the American Lung Association in the fight against lung disease.

Mark Jacobs, chairman of the project, stated, "Each member of the pledge class will be working very hard during the week to obtain sponsors to pledge a monetary amount for each hour they rock. They will also be receiving donations at the site of the Rockathon on March 23."

Mrs. Connie Landen, regional director of the American Lung Association of North Carolina, eastern region, said "The undertaking of a community project such as this indicates a positive effort by these students to be involved in a solution to local and world health problems. The Ameriocan Lung Association is grateful for their support."

Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity encourages the community to support the project by observing the Rockathon on March 23 at ECU or by calling the fraternity at 752-1073 to make a contribution.

'Dallas' Regains Lead In Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — "Dallas" was again the most-watched show in prime time and Dan Rather's version of the evening news was the most popular with the viewers as CBS held on to its dominance in the three-way ratings race, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

In fact, CBS had seven of the 10 highest-rated programs in the week ending March 15, including the top five. The victory for CBS, the network's fourth straight in the weekly competition, was accomplished with an average rating of 19.7, to 16.6 for ABC and 15.7 for NBC.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.7 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

For "Dallas," the first-place finish was the 14th for the program in the 19 weeks since mid-November. The rating for "Dallas" was 32.3, and Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, just under a third saw at least part of the episode.

CBS' "Evening News" held onto its No. 1 position among newscasts as Rather succeeded Walter Cronkite as anchorman, the first permanent change in the position in nearly two decades.

Rather compiled a rating for his first week of 15.1, compared with the 16.6 recorded by Cronkite during his last week in the job. Cronkite's average for that week included a huge audience for his final broadcast.

Production Will Premiere

CHAPEL HILL — Marion Fitz-Simons and William Hardy are starring in the new cabaret production, "Tennessee's Waltz," which premieres at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, March 21 in the Tiffany Lounge of Chapel Hill's Holiday Inn.

Tickets for the opening performance of "Tennessee's Waltz" are priced at $5. Reservations can be made by calling 933-5300.

A theatrical celebration of Tennessee Williams' poetry, "Tennessee's Waltz" will have the two well known veterans of North Carolina stage in this Carolina Regional Theater production which will tour throughout the state this spring.

Others in the cast are Lisa Whalin of Chapel Hill, singer and guitarist Carol Leight Ponder of Asheville, and pianist Benny Kay of Chapel Hill.

The production is directed by Norman Ussery, and Dean Johnson is musical director.

Other performances during March will be held at Mars Hill College, Caldwell Community College, Stanly Technical College, and the Wilmington Hilton. In April, productions will be given at Pembroke State University and Kinston Community Theater.

McCartney In Prestige List

LONDON (AP) — Fame found Paul McCartney nearly 20 years ago, but the British establishment has just now listed the ex-Beatle in "Who's Who."

With annual earnings estimated at $50 million, the son of a Liverpool factory worker merits 41 lines in the 1981 edition of the famous tome, more than many of the judges, politicians and other outstanding public figures who share the 2,800 pages with him.

Declarer often walks a very thin line between success and failure of a contract. Therefore, any line that affords an extra opportunity, no matter how slim, should be grasped eagerly. South applied this principle to bring home a contract that would have failed with more thoughtless play.

The auction was routine. North showed his red suits around South's club rebid, then settled for the no trump game when South showed no interest in any suit other than clubs.

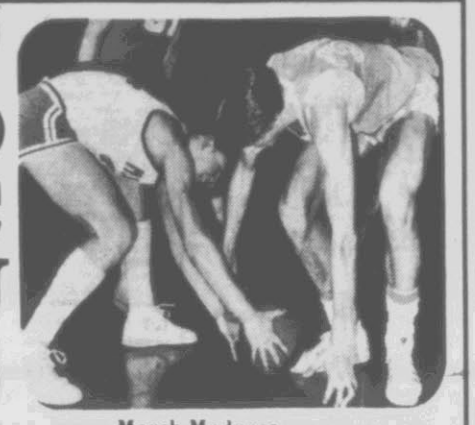

West's lead of the queen of spades was a blow to declarer because it attacked his only entries to the club suit. It was obvious that the clubs would have to be developed to make the no trump game, but if declarer led a low club to the jack and either defender could hold up, the suit would be dead. Declarer would be able to get to his hand only once to establish the suit; he would have no entry back to cash the good clubs.

The normal distribution of five missing cards is 3-2, so the careless declarer will lead the king of clubs from his hand and continue the suit until the ace is forced out. If the clubs split according to the odds, the suit will be established while declarer still has the spade honor in his hand as an entry.

As the cards lie, that line would fail. West's fourth club would become a stopper and the long clubs would wither on the vine. But declarer made his contract by giving himself a slight extra chance.

At trick two, declarer crossed to dummy with the ace of hearts and then led the jack of clubs. Had East followed with a low club, declarer intended to overtake the jack of clubs with the queen and play the percentages. As it turned out, East had to play the ace of clubs on the jack. Now declarer's club suit was set up while he still had a spade entry to his hand. Allowing for the extra chance—that East might have the singleton ace of clubs—had landed the vulnerable game.

FOCUS

March Madness

It's called "March madness," and it happens every year, as high school and college sports fans turn much of their attention and energy to basketball. More than 1,000 colleges and 20,000 high schools in the United States have basketball teams. Their games attract millions of fans each year. The nation's top college teams are now competing in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) tournament and in the National Invitation Tournament (NIT). Both of these nationwide tournaments began in the late 1930s. The first state high school basketball tournament took place in Wisconsin in 1905. Today, almost every state holds a yearly tournament for its high school teams.

DO YOU KNOW — On a basketball court, how high above the floor is the ring of the basket?

LEGAL NOTICE

Jack W. Richardson, General Director, Pitt County Memorial Hospital, filed notice on March 11, 1981 of intent to incur a capital expenditure for the proposed expansion of laboratories, cafeteria, medical records departments, respiratory therapy, and pulmonary function services. The project (Q-1463-81) is estimated to cost $1,104,365 and is scheduled for completion in March 1982.

Under provisions of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 and Chapter 131, Article 18, of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the proposal was submitted to the Certificate of Need Section, Division of Facility Services, North Carolina Department of Human Resources, for review by planning agencies, including the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, Inc.

These agencies, in examining the proposal, will seek to determine whether the project is needed, if it can be adequately staffed and operated, whether it is economically feasible within prevailing rate structures, and if it proposes specific cost-containment features.

is a roof!

Poets we're not. Roofers we are.
What we'd like to do, now during our off season, is inspect your roof. We'll check for loose or missing shingles, dried out caulking and rusted flashing.
If your roof is more than a few years old, chances are it could use a going over.
If repairs are needed, we'll give you an estimate on doing them, quickly and reasonably.

fishing for good nutrition from SCROD

Eat a variety of foods everyday

About 200 years ago, Massachusetts hung a five-foot wooden fish in its Statehouse, as a monument to the keystone of its nutrition—SCROD. And today that same food can be an answer to many of our modern nutrition problems, too.

Boston Scrod can improve your diet as well as your budget. So KROGER wants you to know the facts about this fine, lean white fish — how to choose it, cook it and plan it into meals for good nutrition.

For example, you should now that technically, there is no such fish as a Scrod. The name is applied to a number of fish — except at KROGER. Here you can depend on it that Boston Scrod is exactly what Boston meant it to be, young North Atlantic COD from cold New England waters. It's a cod that hangs proudly in the Statehouse.

For moderns, Boston Scrod is a way to get high quality protein with little fat, and so keep calories down at dinner. You get two-thirds of a whole day's recommended protein at a price of only 130 calories.

Even if you're not familiar with handling fish cookery, KROGER will help you with techniques and recipes that show you how to make the most of Boston Scrod's potential for flavor and economy. And how to add to your family's good nutrition with the good taste of KROGER variety.

Junkyard Is Seen 'Wave Of Future'

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

HURRICANE, W.Va. (AP) — Kenny Davis spends his days surrounded by twisted, rusting idols that once were worshiped, petted and pampered but now lie abandoned on a wooded hillside patroled by a flock of chickens.

To put it plainly, Davis runs an auto junkyard.

But Davis, a wiry man with oil-stained hands and a greasy grin, sees no eyesore when he surveys his immobilized fleet. He sees the wave of the future.

"A few years ago people would just get rid of their old cars and buy a new one, but not anymore," he said, watching a bedraggled hen scratch beneath a 1950s vintage bus he had towed in with his wrecker a few months earlier.

"No sir. Not anymore. From now on, I think, people will be hunting for parts so they can keep their old cars running for as long as possible."

And when the people arrive, in search of a thingamajig for an old Hupmobile, Kenny Davis will be ready for them.

"I used to sell most of my stuff for scrap," he said, "but the money's going to be in parts from now on. I've begun stripping my cars and cataloging the parts."

Davis, who estimates he has some 500 vehicles scattered over two hillsides that border his rural Putnam County home, says a day doesn't go without somebody calling in search of parts.

"I get 'em from all over the country. Ripley, Point Pleasant, from over in Ohio; you name it and I get calls from there.

"Say you're looking for a hood for a 1970 Impala," he added, warming to his subject. "Well, there's a lot of those cars still on the road these days but the dealers quit carrying parts for them after five years. So where are you going to go if you need the parts? You're going to some salvage yard, that's where."

He says that some of the bigger yards have as many as 5,000 vehicles and that the price and competition for wrecked and abandoned cars and trucks is getting steeper and stiffer every day.

"When I first started out in this business 10 years ago, you could get an old car for $5," he said. "Now, they might cost as much as $40.

Asked how he happened to be in the business, Davis sighed.

"You could write a book about it," he said. "I used to do electrical work for contractors. I was working up in New York about 10 years ago and making good money but it cost me so much to live that I couldn't send home more than $100 a week. Then, too, I couldn't come home on weekends very often because it was too far.

"So, I came back one day and told my wife I was going to stay home and go into business for myself. I had five old cars around the house here, to start with. I went out and bought an old GMC truck and started hauling in cars from everywhere."

He slowly built up his inventory. A wrecked Dodge here, an abandoned Chevy there. A couple of years ago, he expanded.

"I got a permit to operate a wrecker service," he said. "I've reached the point now where I can make a decent living. It's hard work and I haven't made the living some lawyer might make, but I've raised my five kids with it."

"I've hauled cars in here from everywhere," the younger Davis said. "I even got a call from a guy one day who had bought an old T-bird at Charleston and it had broken down on him before he got any farther than Hurricane. I remember him because I gave him a few bucks for the car and the last time I saw him he was hitch-hiking down the road."

His father grinned.

"Yes, you can make a living in this business," he said. "But, you've got to know parts. You've got to know what fits what and you've got to know what makes an automobile tick."

He paused and listened as a big red rooster atop a battered 1973 Ford began crowing loudly.

Aliens Pose Problem In Classrooms

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Until two months ago, 9-year-old Julio had never held a pencil, used scissors or sat at a desk. He still has trouble writing, cutting paper and speaking English.

Julio is one of 750 undocumented children enrolled in local schools for the first time this year under a federal judge's order. Among those children is a smaller number who, like Julio, had never been to school, even in Mexico.

Before his family moved to this border city six months ago, he worked on a large ranch carrying firewood and doing odd jobs. The nearest school was more than 10 miles away in Matamoros, across often impassable roads.

Along with 26 other youngsters, Julio is in a special program for children who lack basic skills in either English or Spanish.

"These youngsters at first went into regular, bilingual classrooms. But problems emerged very clearly when teachers found the children had no (classroom) skills," said Cesar Cisneros, director of elementary education for the Brownsville Independent School District. "You can imagine the frustrations of teachers trying to conduct a regular class when there's one who can't hold a pencil."

Texas law prohibited free schooling for illegal aliens before a federal judge struck down the statute as unconstitutional in July 1980.

The Brownsville district set up special classes in January at three elementary schools and plans to start the program in two more schools when teachers are available. The bulk of illegal aliens entering school for the first time are in regular, bilingual classrooms.

At Cromack Elementary School, Blanca Betancourt teaches eight pupils, aged 9 to 13, in the special program. Her classroom is reminiscent of a one-room schoolhouse. A girl who normally would be in the second grade sits in front of a boy whose peers are in the seventh.

"It's unbelievable what can happen when a child doesn't get an education," she said. "I never realized there were children with no schooling at all. I've found it very difficult with the wide age-range and maturity of the children."

Some have "been around" like one boy, aged 13, who worked as a street vendor in Matamoros after his parents died. He enrolled in local schools after moving in with an aunt and uncle here.

"I grew up speaking only Spanish at home but I had brothers and sisters who went to school and we would talk English among ourselves. But when these kids go home, that's it," Ms. Betancourt said.

She uses English as often as possible for instruction but frequently switches to Spanish to make herself understood.

Nevertheless, these children with little or no schooling often lack even a basic Spanish vocabulary.

"I must teach them the Spanish word so they will know what I mean when I tell them the word in English," the teacher said.

Instructional materials include first grade-level flash cards and a lot of improvisation. The setting is similar at Egly Elementary School, not far away.

Betty Frausto has seven students, aged 10 to 13, including two who lived on large ranches in Mexico and had never been to school.

One of Mrs. Frausto's students, Oscar, lived in Brownsville three years without going to school. He had been in a Matamoros school before moving to the United States.

"I would go with a friend all the time and try to find a job," the 13-year-old said in Spanish. "But they would tell me I was too young and needed an education. They told me I should go to school."

Unable to enroll here because of the state law.

Fall From A Mechanical Bull Has Left A Rider Paralyzed

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Last month, Harry Broda went to the Urban Cowboy Bar to have a few beers and ride "Big Sid," the mechanical bull. Now physical therapists are teaching him how to write with his mouth and preparing him for life in a wheelchair.

"They ought to outlaw all of them," the 21-year-old man said of the mechanical bulls, a nationwide rage.

At the bar on Feb. 13, Broda said he drank three 12-ounce beers, paid $1 to ride the bull — "It sounded like fun" — and signed a document without reading it.

The document was a waiver that released the club from injuries incurred while riding Big Sid, a hydraulic contraption that can be made to buck with increasing force.

When Broda climbed on Big Sid for a third ride and told the operator he wanted to try it at a faster speed, he was flipped off and landed head first on mattresses placed around the bull.

"I went up in the air. When I came down, I heard three cracks and my whole body went numb," he said.

His neck was broken at the second and fifth vertebrae, according to Dr. Thomas A. Kelley, director of Louisville's Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilation.

Paralyzed, Broda can only shrug his shoulders and move his head now. Doctors hope he will regain movement in his upper-arm muscles, but say his chances of ever moving again with his own strength are less than 1 percent.

Although numerous injuries ranging from bruises to broken bones have been blamed on falls from mechanical bulls, Broda is believed to be the first person in the country to be paralyzed in such an accident.

Since the accident, Broda has undergone operations to fuse his spine and install a pacemaker in his chest because spinal-cord injuries affect the sympathetic nervous system that controls the heart beat.

He has also been bothered by respiratory problems and urinary-tract infections. His weight has dropped from 185 to 154 pounds.

"That bull, it hurt me bad," Broda said.

The mechanical bull fad popularized in the movie, "Urban Cowboy" began at Gilley's Club in Pasadena, Texas, where the beast in residence has been ridden almost 150,000 times.

Jerry Wilrich, of the Bronco Shop, which manufactured the Gilley bull, said he has never heard of an injury as serious as Broda's from any of his customers. He said his firm has sold 420 mechanical bulls.

And A.M. Bowen, administrator of the National Spinal Cord Injury Data Reseach Center in Phoenix, said the center's 14 affliated facilities have never reported an injury like Broda's.

Hospitals in Louisville have reported various injuries from the city's two bulls. They include broken bones, split pelvises, sprains, crushed testicles, gynecological injuries and a punctured lung.

Negligence suits have been filed in Colorado and Florida, seeking millions of dollars for plaintiffs hurled from the mechanical bulls. At least one other man suffered a broken neck.

And Jimmy Skaggs, manager of the Urban Cowboy, has sold Big Sid.

"I felt bad about somebody getting hurt," Skaggs said. "That was the first time in the three months we've had it, and I don't want it to happen again."

Skaggs said he doesn't have insurance for such accidents. He said no one would sell it to him.

Broda is undergoing physical and occupational therapy. Therapists are using a tilt table to prepare his body for remaining upright in a wheelchair. Last week, therapist Terri Wolfe began teaching him how to write with his mouth.

"This is too embarrassing," said Broda. "I'm used to writing with my hands — and walking."

Units Idle When Garage Is Open

NEW YORK (AP) — A fuel-conservation plan which relies on nothing more than worker self-interest has been devised by an auto-center repair company, reports an energy-orjented journal.

According to Energy User News, garage doors were often left open much longer than necessary, wasting a considerable amount of energy. A cold wind could wipe out an hour's worth of costly heating in a minute or so.

To discourage carelessness, supervisors rigged the heating units so they would not operate if the doors were open, the publication explains.

Knowing that a chill would quickly move in, workers instantly became more energy conscious than before at the workshops of J.C. Penney's auto centers division. They could not close the doors fast enough, the industry journal reports.

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
