Investigate 'Mole' Story

By ANDREW WARSHAW
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Officials made a hurried investigation today into charges that a Labor government in 1974 covered up an inquiry report supporting allegations that former counter-intelligence chief Sir Roger Hollis was a Soviet spy.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher ordered the investigation after Chapman Pincher, the defense correspondent of the London Daily Mail, wrote in Monday's edition of the Conservative paper that Hollis, the director-general from 1956 to 1965 of MI5, the counter-intelligence service, may have been Britain's "most damaging spy in history." Hollis died in 1973.

Pincher said Hollis was investigated secretly in 1970 and during a 48-hour interrogation "never cracked." But the correspondent wrote that in 1974, a year after Hollis died, a former secretary to the Cabinet, Lord Trend, made another secret investigation and concluded he was a "likely suspect" whose answers during his long interrogation were "unconvincing."

Prime Minister Harold Wilson headed a Labor government at the time of Trend's report.

Mrs. Thatcher ordered a full report on Britain's latest spy scandal to be waiting for her when she returned tonight from a summit conference of the European Economic Community in Holland. She was expected to make a statement on the matter in the House of Commons Thursday.

"It seems like yet another cover-up by the Establishment," Dennis Canavan of the opposition Labor Party told Commons Monday night.

Solidarity Strike Ultimatum Confronts Polish Government

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
BYDGOSZCZ, Poland (AP) — Solidarity voted today to conduct a four-hour warning strike Friday and a general strike next Tuesday unless the Polish government fires officials responsible for the beating union members.

The deputy premier in charge of union affairs, Mieczyslaw Rakowski, said Solidarity officials considered themselves Poland's "new owners" and questioned whether they were leading the nation to civil war.

Solidarity's vote for a two-stage strike plan backed a motion by national leader Lech Walesa, who at one point threatened to resign if his proposal was defeated.

It was taken by the national coordinating commission of the independent union's highest body as Soviet-led Warsaw Pact troops continued their maneuvers.

On Monday, Walesa stormed out of the session as the assembly seemed to oppose the motion. But today, his idea was seconded by several important unionists and the vote was 35-3, with 2 abstentions.

Walesa wants the warning strike first to pressure the government to respond to the union's demands for the dismissal of officials it holds responsible for the beating of local union leaders by police in Bydgoszcz.

Rumors circulated that the communist government would declare a state of emergency and order a curfew if a general strike was called. The Solidarity commission responded Monday with a unanimous vote that such a proclamation by the government would automatically trigger a nationwide walkout of the federation's 10 million members.

The union charges that 23 Solidarity members were beaten last Thursday by police when they refused to leave a government building after officials broke off a negotiating session with them. Three of the union men were hospitalized. The union is demanding the dismissal of Deputy Premier Stanislaw Mach, who was present; Vice Governor Roman Bak, the local police commander and the regional prosecutor.

It was the first police violence against members of the independent labor movement reported since the birth of the movement during the nationwide strike wave last summer. Solidarity's leaders responded with a nationwide strike alert, raising the threat of a serious new confrontation while Soviet and other Warsaw Pact troops are holding maneuvers in Poland and neighboring countries. But over the weekend, strike plans were suspended while negotiations with the government began.

When the first negotiating session ended without satisfaction for Solidarity's demands, a meeting of the national commission was called to discuss strike plans. At the meeting Monday night, about two-thirds of the commission members appeared to vote for Walesa's plan, but the situation became confused as more motions were offered. Some commission members argued for an immediate general strike.

City School Board Talks Big Federal Funds Loss

By MARY SCHULKEN

A potential loss of $284,000 in federal funds — hinging on the acceptance of the Reagan budget cuts — dominated the discussion at the Greenville City Board of Education's current expense workshop last night.

"As of last Friday," Sup't. Glenn Cox told the board, "this information is up to date." Cox said he was told in a meeting with North Carolina Superintendent of Public Instruction that the state's education budget this year will be snipped by $84 million.

"When these reductions are applied to us, it cost us $133,000 in child nutrition, $95,000 in Title I funds, $6,000 in libraries and equipment, and $50,000 in additional monies," he explained.

Cox added that these figures represented a loss of approximately 19-20 personnel. "This is not exact, but you are looking at three positions in ABM, one and one-half positions in support personnel, two and one-half vocational positions, and at least three Title I positions," he said.

Although the board is reportedly "looking at alternatives" for the food services program, Cox also estimated a loss of four personnel there.

The $356,656 in additional current expense funds the board is contemplating seeking from the county in 1981-82 will cover several of the personnel losses.

"This extra takes up the vocational positions, the three teachers in ABM, and the central support position," said Cox. The board's 1981-82 current expense budget includes (Please turn to Page 2)

Gasoline Hikes Cost-Of-Living

WASHINGTON (AP) —

The largest gasoline price surge in more than a year pushed the nation's cost of living up at an annual rate topping 12 percent in February, the government reported today, as consumers began to feel the effects of President Reagan's decontrol of domestic oil prices.

The Labor Department reported a 1 percent rise for the month, which would translate into a 12.7 percent annual increase if that rate persisted for 12 straight months. However, the department calculated the annual rate at 12.1 percent, indicating that February's actual increase was a shade under the rounded-off 1 percent it reported.

Moderate price increases for food and housing were overwhelmed by the large energy price increases, including 6.6 percent for gasoline, 7.9 percent for fuel oil and 1.8 percent for other petroleum products such as motor oil and coolant.

The largest previous price increase for gasoline was a 7.4 percent climb posted in January 1980.

Overall inflation had risen 0.7 percent in January, a 9.1 percent annual rate, after climbing 12.4 percent for all of last year.

The figures released today by the Labor Department show:

—Food and beverage prices rose 0.3 percent in February after remaining stable in January.

—Housing costs rose 0.6 percent, the Labor Department said, as "substantial increases in prices of household fuels were partially offset by a decline in house prices" due to high mortgage interest rates.

—New car costs fell about 0.1 percent, primarily due to large rebate programs being offered by U.S. automakers.

All the increases are adjusted for seasonal variations.

The Labor Department reported that its Consumer Price Index rose to 263.2 in February, which means that goods and services costing $10 in 1967 cost $26.32 last month.

Private School Lobbyist Would Revise State's Program Of Aid

(Second of Two Parts)
By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

North Carolina's financial assistance program for resident students enrolled at private colleges and universities has cost taxpayers nearly $85 million since it began in 1972.

Former state Sen. John Henley of Spring Lake, who was a legislator when the aid program was approved by the General Assembly, now heads the 38-member North Carolina Association of Independent Colleges and Universities. As such, he has become a highly visible lobbyist in Raleigh on behalf of the private schools.

Yet, Henley says he personally favors at least one change in the aid program — to place a limitation on the amount a student can receive under the program because of personal need. As it is now operated, the program provides $200 to each school for each resident student enrolled. That money then can be used for grants to needy students, with no limitation on the amount going to the student.

The aid program also provides direct grants of $550 per resident student.

Henley noted that his association, in 1978, advanced the proposal that private students should be subsidized by the state at a rate equivalent to 50 percent of the amount set aside for students attending state-financed institutions. That currently runs about $3,500 a year, which would give the private students $1,750 a year in state funds.

That concept has been promoted within the Legislature, where reaction has been subdued. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has given his backing, and Sen. Vernon White, D-Winterville, also says he favors the program.

"I'm highly for it," White said. "It would cut out the arguments."

But much of the ongoing controversy over the aid program has centered on the trustee situation.

A Daily Reflector survey showed that 10 legislators now serve on trustee boards for private colleges and universities in North Carolina although legislators are barred by statute from serving on boards in the University of North Carolina system. High Point pediatrician John David Bridgers, a trustee at East Carolina University, is among those who believe there should be a change.

"It's against the law for any legislator to serve on any state (university) board," Bridgers said. "But these private schools are under no such constraint. And I have been told many of them have been recruiting legislators."

Henley, who denied any organized effort to recruit (Please turn to Page 2)

Judge Flays State Officials In Bid-Rigging

By SUSAN USHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree lashed out at state officials Monday as he sentenced six paving company executives to prison terms ranging from 60 to 120 days and fined a North Carolina paving firm $300,000 for rigging bids on state highway paving contracts.

Dupree said a continuing federal investigation into the corruption "brings sharply into question whether or not our (state) officials charged with responsibility in this area have been doing their jobs.

"One, our officials in the state highway department have either been completely remiss in uncovering it and bringing it to light," Dupree said. "Or, what is far worse, they turned their backs on it."

Dupree handed out the following prison sentences in the plea bargaining agreement:

— Wilbur E. Dees, vice president of Crowell Constructors Inc. of Fayetteville, 60 days.

— William W. Crowell, president of Crowell Constructors, 90 days.

— Alban K. Barrus Jr., executive vice president of Barrus Construction Co. of Kinston, 60 days.

— T.R. Mewborn, president of Barrus Construction Co., 120 days.

— John W. Thompson Jr., president of Thompson-Arthur Paving Co. of Greensboro, 120 days.

— W.L. Salmon Jr., executive vice president of Thompson-Arthur, 90 days.

Dupree fined Crowell Constructors $300,000.

In one exception to plea bargains negotiated before the sentencing, Dupree reduced Barrus' sentence by one-third the amount agreed upon earlier. "Bits of information in the file indicated a lesser degree of culpability than others on trial," Dupree explained.

The six men pleaded guilty

March 9 before Dupree. They could have received up to one year in prison or a $50,000 fine for each count of violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. Each of the defendants was charged with two counts.

"This constitutes one of the most disturbing things that I can recall having happen as it relates to state government," Dupree said. "We have prided ourselves in North Carolina on having clean government, relatively scandal free."

This year major business organizations, such as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, will not testify on behalf of the legislation.

A congressional source said the Chamber will say it supports the legislation in a letter to the subcommittee but does not want to open its flank to the possibility of increasing the minimum for older workers.

"They don't want to be put in the position of organized labor saying it would go along with a compromise, a subminimum wage for teen-agers but a higher minimum wage for everyone else," said the source.

Lower Minimum Wage For Youths Studied

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate subcommittee, trying to increase job opportunities for teen-agers, is considering bills that would lower the minimum wage for them.

The Reagan administration is behind the general idea but is not backing a specific proposal.

Business reception of three bills being considered today by a subcommittee of the Labor and Human Resources Committee was lukewarm. Organized labor was expected to oppose any changes in the current minimum of $3.35 per hour, as it has in the past.

Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan was instructed to testify in favor of a "subminimum" wage but not to endorse a specific plan. Deputy White House press secretary Karna Small said Monday after President Reagan discussed the subject with his top economic advisers.

Reagan, a frequent critic of the current law during his campaign, has said a lower figure for young people would increase job opportunities for them, especially in entry-level jobs.

"It's very valuable for a young person to have a job, any kind of a job, just to get started," Ms. Small said.

In January 1980, a year before he took office, Reagan said, "The minimum wage has caused more misery and unemployment than anything since the Great Depression."

But in a blueprint for the president's first 100 days, Budget Director David A. Stockman suggested that proposals sure to antagonize organized labor, such as exemptions from the minimum wage for teen-agers, be deferred.

Nineteen percent of all teen-agers looking for work — about 1.6 million youngsters — cannot find a job. Thirty-five percent of those are members of minority groups. In large cities, the proportion of unemployed teen-age members of minority groups frequently approaches 30 percent.

Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., subcommittee chairman, said in a statement for the opening of two days of hearings that youth unemployment "has become a national burden of unparalleled magnitude, and this jobless rate continues its alarming rise every year."

"It is time for innovation and institutional changes which will allow a unrestrained free enterprise system to increase employment opportunities for youths," he added.

A bill sponsored by Nickles would exempt all people under 18 from the minimum wage requirement. Another, by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the full Labor Committee, would permit the hiring of 16-to-19-year-olds at 75 percent of the minimum wage for the first six months of a job. A third bill, proposed by Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., is similar to the Hatch measure but would set the

WHO PURCHASES STAMPS?

From time to time, I have seen requests for cancelled stamps. However, several stamp companies and the Salvation Army no longer accept them. Why do some clubs request cancelled stamps? What is the money value? Who purchases them? E. B.

Hotline talked to Frank Sente at the American Philatelic Society headquarters in State College, Pa. He said that some dealers do still purchase bulk quantities of cancelled stamps. "Having individuals and clubs collect them is their source for those big bags of stamps you can buy at the dime store for a dollar," he said. "It's an awful lot of work for a little bit of money," he added, "but if people do it of their own volition, that's their business, and with clubs, the work can be spread out over the membership and even the community."

It's his opinion, he said, that odds are slim to none that the buyer of those bags would ever find anything of value.

If anyone's interested, he said, Linn's Stamp News, P. O. Box 29, Sidney, Ohio 45367 has offers from dealers to buy these cancelled stamps, with prices to be paid stated.

Community Schools Sessions Set

A number of evening classes and activities for all ages have been scheduled by the Community Schools program of the Greenville City Schools the end of March and in April.

Carolyn Ferebee, director of the program, has announced that activities have been planned in conjunction with the "Swing into Spring" theme.

The classes and activities, for which complete details will be announced soon, will take place at three different sites in Greenville — at Wahl-Coates on March 31, at Greenville Middle School on April 2, and at South Greenville School, April 14.

legislators because of their state positions, said the statutory ban on legislators serving on the UNC boards came about, at least in part, because of appointive abuse.

"It got out of focus because legislators were always electing legislators to the (former) Board of Higher Education," Henley said.

Dr. W. Burkette Raper, president of Mount Olive College, also denied that the three legislators serving on his board — Rep. Sam Bundy, D-Farmville; Rep. Richard R. Grady, D-Seven Springs, and Sen. Harold W. Hardison, D-Deep Run — were chosen simply because they are legislators.

"We look for good men. We don't turn out a good man because others see leadership in him, too," Raper said. "Their being in the General Assembly was not a factor."

He also defended the legislators' presence on the board, saying: "We don't look at this in terms of political impact on the board."

White and Harrington were nominated to the Chowan College board for similar reasons, college president Bruce E. Whitaker said.

"They were nominated by the Baptist State Convention because they were Baptists and good men... These people are outstanding in their communities and for this reason they were recruited," Whitaker said.

Whitaker described both legislators as being "supportive of aid to private students."

White, adamant in denying that he was recruited as a legislator, said there was no conflict in his service in the General Assembly and on the Chowan College board.

"There is no conflict of interest," he said. "Basically, they're after people interested in education." White, acknowledging his support of the private-aid program, said it was "saving the state of North Carolina at least $2,500 per student each year... And you're giving these 25,000 (North Carolina) students at private colleges the opportunity to go to the college of their choice."

"And we're not taking one dime away from the University of North Carolina," White said.

Asked about the possibility of a conflict, Bundy replied: "I haven't given it much thought. I've never felt any area of conflict."

Bundy said he voted in 1971 to create the program for private students and continues to support it. "If some of these schools weren't getting the money, they would go out of business," he said.

"I can see that it would appear to some people that, if you are going to let legislators serve on one board and not the other... it seems odd. I don't fault that," Bundy said.

The assistance program for private students is part of the budget package now being considered by the General Assembly. A final decision on its funding for 1981-83 probably will not be made until at least May.

Two Charged

Two persons were arrested by Pitt County deputies following investigation of a break-in reported Monday morning at the Sunnyside Eggs facility south of Greenville.

Charged with breaking, entering and larceny, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, were Roy Lee Speight, 23, of Lot 1, Wells Trailer Court, and Dennis May, 22, of Rt. 2, Greenville.

Sheriff Tyson said that a calculator, radio and crate of soft drinks, valued collectively at $83, were reported missing following the break-in. Entrance was gained through a roof vent, he said.

Bond for each man was set at $1,000, the sheriff said.

Ask Penalty For Hazing

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A group of California college students, disturbed that fraternity initiations have claimed nine lives in two years, is seeking help from lawmakers in resolving a "silent but potentially dangerous problem."

The California State Students Association is sponsoring a bill in the Legislature calling for fines of $5,000 and up to a year in jail for hazing that results in injury or degradation.

"We believe that hazing is a silent but potentially very dangerous problem. We want to send a clear message to fraternal organizations that if you haze you're in trouble," spokesman Steven Glazer said Monday. Glazer was a fraternity member himself while attending San Diego State University.

Glazer said his group represents 300,000 students of the 18-campus state colleges and university system. Current law defines hazing as any method of initiation that causes "bodily danger or physical harm." It is a misdemeanor with a maximum penalty of $500 and six months in jail.

The student group's bill, introduced last week by Assemblyman Jim Cramer, would expand the definition to include any method causing "personal degradation or disgrace."

Glazer said nine students have died during fraternity initiations nationwide in the past two years.

British Field Marshal Auchinleck Dies At 96

MARRAKECH, Morocco (AP) — Field Marshal Sir Claude Auchinleck, who commanded British forces in the Middle East and India during World War II, died in his sleep at his home in Marrakech Monday night, the official Moroccan news agency announced today.

Auchinleck was 96. He had been ill with influenza for three weeks, the news agency said.

Divorced in 1946 and childless, he had made his home in Marrakech since 1967. A detachment of British army troops looked after him.

"He had been unwell since the end of last month and had received treatment from local civilian doctors and he was seen by a military doctor from Gibraltar," a spokesman for the British Defense Ministry said in London.

Born June 21, 1884, Auchinleck was sent to India when he graduated from Sandhurst, the British military academy, in 1903. He was commander-in-chief there in 1941 when he was transferred to command Britain's forces in the Middle East.

Known as "the Auk," he launched a major offensive on Nov. 18, 1941, but a German counter-offensive by Marshal Erwin Rommel's Afrika Korps forced the British back to the Egyptian frontier in the first half of 1942.

Auchinleck, then a general, established a defensive position at the small town of El Alamein, 80 miles west of Alexandria, and in the summer of 1942 won the first battle of El Alamein against Rommel's combined German and Italian armies.

This prepared the way for the allied counter-attack against Rommel. But Prime Minister Winston Churchill had lost confidence in Auchinleck and named Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery to replace him.

Montgomery led the counter-attack, won the second battle of El Alamein late in 1942, then went on to command Britain's troops in the invasion of France and the victorious drive against Germany. He became a viscount, a field marshal and after the war chief of Britain's Imperial General Staff.

Many historians regarded Auchinleck as the man who laid the foundations for the British victory in the North African desert. Britain's official history of World War II commented: "In retrospect the vital importance of the July fighting stands out clearly, and to Gen. Auchinleck belongs the credit for turning retreat into counter-attack."

Auchinleck himself refused to be drawn into any controversy over who did what in North Africa.

After transferring his command to Montgomery, he returned to India as commander-in-chief of British forces there. He was promoted to field marshal in 1946, and in 1947, after the partition of India, he was made Supreme Commander in India and Pakistan.

Through a Joint Defense Council he was responsible for the reconstruction of the Indian Army as two separate dominion forces. At midnight on Aug. 14, 1947, when India and Pakistan became independent, he gave up his last command.

$2,270,146.57 in county appropriations.

The Reagan cuts will trim $53 million in food service funds from North Carolina, $15 million from Title I monies, $5 million in handicapped finances, and $4 million in vocational education funding.

According to Cox, the state has listed the areas of reduction in order of priority. Category I, which will be cut first, deals with reduction in staff — superintendents and comptroller's office personnel. Category II reduces various services such as developmental day care centers, and category III cuts staff development, reading programs and teacher workdays.

"Category III is where it begins to hurt the individual staff," commented Cox.

In other action, the board voted to uphold the J.H. Rose attendance policy which exempts students with acceptable averages and the specified number of absences from final exams. The policy allows excused absences only for school-related activities and death in the immediate family.

The policy was challenged by the parents of three Rose High swimming students participating in an international meet in Atlanta. "Our son qualified for this participation because of his involvement in the Rose swim team," said one of the parents, "therefore we feel this should qualify as an excused absence."

"At this point it is not so much a matter of having to take the final exams," he added, "but that the school board has put him in the position of not supporting this activity which in itself has taught him good study habits and discipline."

"In addition, this meet is an opportunity for college recruiters to see swimmers in action and offer them scholarships."

After an executive session, temporary Chairman Jon Tingelstad announced the board would uphold the policy. "After much careful deliberation it is the decision of the administration to not allow excused absences for these students," he said.

REFACING, YOU SAY?

Yes, refacing. Cabinets.

If your kitchen looks tired, and if you're tired of looking at it, call us in. We will give you an estimate of what it will take to make that kitchen look spanking new.

What we do is put a bright and fresh face on all your kitchen cabinetry—in any finish and color of your choice. Wood, marble, leather, mirror, slate. White, gold, yellow, green, plum—pick a color, any color.

And all laminated, so that you'll never have to paint your cabinets again.

Your tired kitchen need never look tired any more. Just bright and cheerful is all. (A happy addition, too, to the value of your home.)

Call us or come by, won't you? No obligation.

Dear Abby

Readers Reply To Fair Share

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: I did it again. I invited my readers to express themselves, and did I get mail! Here's the original letter:

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother, who is in her 80s, has come to live with us. She's financially secure and draws a nice Social Security check every month. We have four teen-agers at home and one in college, and with prices so high these days, we barely make ends meet. I added up all the household expenses and divided them by the number of people who live here, and it comes to $275 a month. (Not including clothing.) Mother thinks $150 a month is adequate for her share. My husband agrees with her. This includes driving her to town to shop, to the doctor and anywhere else she wants to go. She watches TV all day long and we have to keep the furnace higher for her. I would like the opinion of your readers concerning what Mother's fair share should be. (What would she pay in a nursing home that doesn't offer all these extras?) Mother said she would abide by what Dear Abby's readers say.

WAITING IN WASHINGTON

DEAR WAITING: I'm waiting, too. Readers?

DEAR WAITING: Thank God your daughter-in-law is willing to take you in. You should give her your entire Social Security check. You couldn't find a decent nursing home for under $1,000 a month. Personally, I wouldn't take my mother-in-law into my home for a million dollars a week! She's given me nothing but trouble since I married her son.

FONTANA, CALIF.

DEAR WAITING: May God forgive you! You should be ashamed of yourself. If I could only have my mother in my home, I would wait on her hand-and-foot. My mother died at 42, and I never got to pay her back.

APPALLED IN COLORADO

DEAR ABBY: Tell Grandma to pry herself away from the tube long enough to sample the real world. Butter is now $2 a pound and so is round steak. I paid 39 cents for four small white potatoes and 16 cents for one sweet potato today. The old lady should keep $100 a month for her personal expenses and give the rest to the family she's living with. That won't even begin to pay for the inconvenience and adjustments they will have to make by her presence.

GETTING THERE IN GREELEY

DEAR WAITING: Your mother-in-law should pay at least $400 a month. She can't take her money with her. Just make sure if she has anything left (after she dies), it will go to you and not to the other relatives. Some old folks are funny when it comes to relatives. It's always the ones who do the least for them while they're living who wind up getting the most.

VANCOUVER, B.C.

DEAR WAITING: What kind of woman would charge an 80-year-old mother-in-law to live with her? Would you feel the same about your own mother? Did your mother-in-law charge your husband for his food and shelter while he was growing up? Did she require compensation for all the hours of lost sleep and the sacrifices she made during the Depression years when times were really tough? I would consider it a privilege to chauffeur my mother-in-law around. Instead, I go to visit her under a marble slab on a hilltop shaded by a rhododendron bush. God bless all 80-year-olds. They've been through plenty and deserve to be rewarded.

TACOMA, WASH.

DEAR WAITING: Take whatever amount you can get and be quiet! My mother is in a nursing home. It costs $4,000 a month for a private room, which she needs because she can't get along with anybody. Everything else is extra. Doctors, medicine, and $35 every time she gets her toenails trimmed. My brother and I pay the bills, and we aren't complaining. It beats having her live with us. Your mother-in-law must be an exception. No home is big enough for two families.

NO NAME IN CHICAGO

More tomorrow.

For The Heart Fund

HEART FUND BALL — Co-Chairmen Sharon Lewis and Becky Beland review reports on proceeds realized after the annual Heart Fund Ball which was held Saturday evening at the Casablanca. Music for the evening was provided by Maurice Williams and the Zodiacs. They were assisted by Karen Rogers, Patricia Cade,

Eastern Star Officers To Be Installed

Members of Greenville Chapter No. 149, Order of Eastern Star, named officers for the coming year at a recent meeting.

Named were Mrs. Mary J. Freeland, Worthy Matron; Clifton Stokes, Worthy Patron; Mrs. Nancy Corbett, Associate Matron; Jerome Bostick, Associate Patron; Mrs. Jean K. Tharp, Secretary; Mrs. Cleve Wallace, Treasurer; Mrs. Margaret Schiller, Conductress; Mrs. Ruth Forrest, Associate Conductress; Miss Brenda Gay Garris, Chaplain;

Mrs. Grace Hill, Marshal; Mrs. Marguerite Cook, Organist; Mrs. Jean Riggan, Adah; Mrs. Sarah Caprell, Ruth; Mrs. Mayo Rogers, Esther; Mrs. Lillian Hendrix, Martha; Miss Camille Leggett, Electa; Mrs. Ellen Bostick, Warden; and Richard Riggan, Sentinel.

The installation will be held Friday, April 3, at 8 p.m. at the Masonic Temple. Members of the order and friends are invited.

Club Social Held Friday

"America the Beautiful" was the theme of the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club social held Friday night at the clubhouse.

Flags, candles, flowers and items of Americana were used as decorations.

With husbands as guests, members brought dishes typical of different areas of the United States. Of special interest was a map on which each person placed a flag indicating their hometown.

Beverly Cotten, visiting artist at Pitt Community College, gave a program on traditional North Carolina music and dance featuring the banjo, guitar, clogging and singing.

Barbara Hall and Geneva Yadav were in charge of organizing the evening.

The next meeting will be held April 7 at 8 p.m. with Virginia Crabtree presenting a fashion show.

Clothing Storage Program Planned

A demonstration and exhibit of items to improve one's clothing storage will be held at the Agricultural Extension Service Thursday.

Mrs. Linda Boyette, Bertie County home economics extension agent, will show how to expand and care for clothing storage by purchasing or making aids.

The program will be held at 10 a.m. The Agricultural Extension Service is located on the second floor of the Pitt County Office Building.

Mrs. Brown Is Hostess

The Sweet Gum Grove Extension Homemakers held its meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Adrian Brown. Mrs. Lonnie Staton and Mrs. Herbert Randolph were assisting hostesses.

Mrs. Margaret Briley conducted the meeting and gave the program on "Shopping at Discount Stores." She also announced the annual district meeting will be held in Williamston April 22. Mrs. Eric Whichard gave the devotional.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Cloud soft yarns in dreamy pastels create the new mood of elegance in a V-neck classic cardigan crocheted in a lacy shell stitch for an ultra feminine air.

Designed to be worked in Cloudspun, a cozy blend of wool, mohair and acrylic yarn, the cardigan can be made in small (8-10), medium (12-14) or large (16-18). Directions are written without abbreviations for ease in following. For a more tailored look, sports yarn may be substituted.

To obtain directions for crocheting this original design, send your request for Leaflet No. 2281 with $1.00 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-2281 by sending check or money order in amount specified to Pat Trexler at the same address. Kit price includes yarn, instructions and shipping charges. For small or medium sizes, send $19.50 for Cloudspun yarn or $14.00 for sports yarn. For large size, send $22.50 for Cloudspun or $15.50 for sports yarn. Please specify your choice of camel, ecru or any of the following pastels: peach, green, lavender or yellow.

Dear Pat: Would you include in your column the directions for crocheting bands onto knitted sweater fronts? — Lou B., Camden, S.C.

Dear Lou: Personally, I prefer to first work the band that will have buttons on it and then crochet the side with the buttonholes. This makes for easier placement of the buttonholes.

Unless specifically directed otherwise, it usually is best to use single crochet. Starting at an edge of one front, make one row of single crochet all along the edge. If your edge of knit stitches is loose, which is often the case, insert your hook through the work one stitch in from the edge.

Most people make the mistake of taking one crochet stitch for every row of knitting. This often will cause the band to ripple. Trial and error may best tell you exactly how many stitches to pick up in a given area, but a good rule of thumb is to take two crochet stitches for every three rows of knitting.

Once you have determined how many crochet stitches to take for each inch of knitting, place a marker in every 10th crochet stitch. Plastic-tipped bobby pins make good markers.

These markers will make it easy for you to have exactly the same number of stitches in the other front band, insuring that they will match exactly.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The mothers of bridegrooms, vice presidents of the United States, and mistresses all share a common image: they smile and keep their mouths shut.

In the past, it has just been understood that each knew the ground rules and each would stay in his respective place... if he had one.

Now it seems that one of them is to become an endangered species: Mistresses.

When you think about it, you wonder why it has taken them so long to see that marriage rarely occurs between three dissenting adults.

Maybe one of the things that made mistressing so attractive was the romantic novel. Who among us — if given a choice — would not have opted to be Lily Langtry, dressing up all day and playing naughty while her married counterpart ironed all those lousy ruffles, bathed the royal dog, waxed the castle, was in three carriage pools, brushed floor-length hair, took minute lessons on Tuesdays and fought the vapors all winter.

The job description of a mistress was a simple one: be loyal, jump on the master's lap the moment he came home, watch him eat and drink, never go out in public with him, listen to his problems, make no demands, and go crazy anytime you get a present.

I don't know who was the first mistress to realize that this described her pooodle to a T, but when she did, mistressing began to fall off considerably.

A lot of things are cutting into their numbers. Women today are too practical for it. It's just not an equal opportunity employer. Why should misunderstood husbands have a place to go after dinner and a misunderstood wife gets stuck ironing in front of the TV?

There are no Social Security or retirement benefits, and besides, no one is impressed with infidelity anymore. The titillation level has peaked and stabilized.

Also, several thousand mistresses were lost in one year alone when the wives of the men they were living with invited them into their kitchens, crawling with dishes, laundry and kids, and announced, "Just think. One of these days, all of this will be yours."

Lately, I've noticed mistresses have become less subservient than their masters would want them to be. At a wedding ceremony in Rio de Janeiro, a priest was just about to ask the important question of the couple, when a pregnant woman waddled out and announced she had been living with the bridegroom for ten years. A riot followed in which she was rushed to the hospital and gave birth to an eight-pound, two-ounce son.

The bridegroom's mother just smiled.

Had the vice president been there, he would have just smiled.

And another mistress was eradicated.

No 'High' Is Necessary

It is not something our society can be proud of to learn that most high school students drink alcohol and a third of them are moderate to heavy drinkers.

It is a real matter of concern that a considerable portion of teenagers are rated as "heavy" drinkers.

A national study by the Research Triangle Institute shows three out of ten high school drinkers are categorized as "problem drinkers." The results of heavy drinking by high school students is all negative. They generally get lower grades, smoke more marijuana and have lower interest in religion and parents.

It is obvious that consumption of alcohol is a problem among teenagers — even more of a problem than drugs, since alcohol is more socially acceptable.

It is not a problem our society can ignore. Schools, churches and parents must impress on young people the dangers of the misuse of alcohol.

More than anything the belief is apparently prevalent that use of alcohol is associated with "having a good time," but, of course, the teenager doesn't have to be high on anything to enjoy life. It is a message that needs to be gotten across to our young people.

Present Plans Working

Dr. Donald K. Smith, a former senior vice president for the University of Wisconsin, made a point that should be listened to in the UNC administrative hearings last week.

He said the UNC plan for increasing minorities on the former white campuses works; the federal desegregation plan will not.

No one can deny that minorities attending the formerly white campuses have steadily increased. Thus it is a plan that works. Who knows about the untried plans advanced by the Department of Education.

Tactics For Union

BY BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — An elaborate scheme to unionize a number of local school districts in North Carolina is currently underway by the N.C. Association of Educators.

The first step — collective bargaining between local school boards and local representatives of the Association of Classroom Teachers — is being pushed forward in at least a dozen locations.

It is not happenstance that a number of communities are suddenly faced with militant teacher demands on educational policy at regular meetings of the local school boards. That is the foundation of the plan.

NCAE in Raleigh. The plan states that the NCAE provided $22,000 to implement the program, and that dues for membership in the Association of Classroom Teachers were doubled to provide additional funds.

Contained in the document which until now has been closely guarded, are comments on why this scheme is being put into effect (to overcome public resistance to teacher unionization, quietly, and explanations of how much opposition to unionization actually exists among teachers themselves.

"The problems facing bargaining in North Carolina are great, but not impossible. Primary among these problems is a negative attitude towards the subject by uninformed or misinformed members of NCAE," the document states.

Lighthouse Locals
The project's purpose is to "improve the image problem and secondly to find and train a cadre of organizers committed to moving on this issue."

That cadre is now in place in some communities, and is being trained in others. The so-called "lighthouse locals" are the ones supposed to push local school boards into letting NCAE representatives become the bargaining agents for local teachers.

Intimate details of the plan are contained in a publication entitled: "Collective Bargaining Project, 1980-1981". A special task force of the Classroom Teachers group which is the foundation of the NCAE produced the document. Guidance for the plan came from the National Education Association and the state headquarters of the

Go-Betweens
Then, NCAE representatives would offer to serve as go-betweens to help resolve the bad feeling, and the school board, anxious to settle the disputes, would agree.

At that point, collective bargaining would become a reality and could be broadened to include all manner of educational policy and working conditions in the schools while, at the same time, national and state labor officials would be informed that the local organization had been "recognized" by the local school board as the bargaining agent for local teachers.

THOSE THINGS SURE DO HAVE NINE LIVES!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The Debate With Bella

KANSAS CITY, MO. — We were doing all right, Bella Abzug and I, behaving ourselves nicely, speaking the parliamentary speech, until the last four minutes. That was when she said that "Canadians never have to pay a medical bill," and when I tried to inquire who was paying the Canadians' bills if the Canadians themselves weren't paying them, she got to hollering and I got to hollering, and we wound up bellowing at each other like a pair of foghorns at four paces. It wasn't genteel, but it sure was noisy.

We flew out to Kansas City at the invitation of the Midwest Health Congress to debate this question. Resolved, that the role of the federal government in health care should be increased. My able and distinguished opponent, the gentelperson from New York, had the affirmative. I had the negative.

JAS. J. KILPATRICK

In one sense, our debate was only a forensic exercise, for no one expects to see the role of the federal government expanded any time soon. President Reagan has recommended major slowdowns in projected spending for Medicaid and Medicare; he wants to trim some of the programs of the National Institutes for Health; he proposes major changes in medical scholarships; he would get rid of the Professional Standards Review Organizations; and he has other ideas along these same lines.

Ms. Abzug, you will correctly surmise, found this prospect depressing. She came armed with statistics on the horrendous increases in the cost of medical care, and on that score she was plainly right. The increases have in fact been horrendous. Over the past 15 years, while consumer prices have increased by 162 percent, doctors' fees have gone up by 205 percent and the cost of a hospital room has soared by 444 percent. Ten years ago the nation's outlay for health care was estimated at $74.7 billion. Now it's placed at $245 billion.

No disagreement here. Then we rode off in different directions. My able and distinguished opponent had no explanation for these increases, though the explanations are not hard to find. Hospitals must maintain a staff of nurses, orderlies, cooks, interns, residents and technicians 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Fifteen

Other Editors Say Put'em In School

(Raleigh Times)
With a major shift to high-tech industry brewing, needs more discerning planning and support than North Carolina's vocational education. As Phares Nye of Wake Technical College puts it, "We're going to be expected to gear up for jobs we don't even have titles for now."

Wake will be one major locus of the microelectronics boom. Yet public awareness of vo-ed is particularly low here, where it sometimes seems that every other youngster is aiming for a PhD.

A recent forum at Wake Tech spotlighted some problems that would not continue if more people realized vo-ed's significance as an essential buttress of the job market.

Among them were the growing lag in up-to-date training equipment and facilities, and Wake's need for scattered satellite job-education sites other than Wake Tech's main campus. This need not involve a fortune in new buildings, as Wake Tech President Bruce Howell noted. Why wouldn't such vacant facilities as Rex Hospital, for example, be adaptable for this use?

Another serious vo-ed problem is caused by outmoded certification requirements for part-time vocational specialty teachers in high schools.

Thanks to the stranglehold education's fulltime professionals have on access to teaching, those who have learned a trade by doing it, rather than gaining teacher credentials by taking education credits, cannot easily pass their know-how along to youngsters.

Clearly, people already competent in any sophisticated new field growing faster than its worker supply are the best teaching resource for potential new employees. County Commissioner Betty Ann Knudsen suggested to the forum that state law be relaxed so "an IBM executive, for example," could instruct vocational students an hour a day at Broughton or Sanderson or Athens.

But the principle shouldn't be limited to microelectronics or other glamorous hi-tech jobs. Youngsters should be able to learn at least some aspects of trades like auto mechanics, appliance repair, heating and cooling and home energy conservation — any field with strong community demand — from those who already know them.

Vo-tech people need to take this message to the legislature, and other far-sighted citizens need to back them up.

Strength For Today

COUNTER-IRRITANTS
Modern medicine is said to repudiate — at least theoretically — the mustard plaster and other forms of counter-irritation. Yet counter-irritants in an intellectual sense are very necessary if we are to live life to its fullest.

It takes opposition to develop stamina within us. Our minds take on a vigor and our souls begin to manifest new life when we come up against the hard situations of life, fight them if need be, parley with them if possible, solve them if they shove a hard question under our noses.

All of us at one time or another object to what we consider the abrasions and frustrations that enter our lives. There is a lot of whining in all of us. But we should consider these hard circumstances as counter-irritants which have a maturing and curative power. We should never forget that meeting and solving problems under difficult circumstances is what it takes to make us grow up. Counter-irritants hurt, but they help. — Elisha Douglass

Cleaning Up The Kitchen

BY ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The "kitchen cabinet," whose members financed Ronald Reagan's long road to the White House and want to continue advising him now that he is there, are being evicted in the latest battle for the administration's soul.

After weeks of an artillery duel of conflicting legal opinions between him and the kitchen cabinet, presidential counselor Edwin Meese III issued this decree last week: Out! The law is clear; this privately-funded band of private citizens can no longer occupy government quarters; the modest offices in the Executive Office Building next door to the White House must be vacated.

"Getting us out of the White House is not the same as getting us out of town," a defiant kitchen cabinet member told us. But removal from the president's proximity will not help the millionaire kitchen cabinet conservatives promote Reaganite loyalists for high office.

Even before Meese delivered his eviction notice, that effort had been flagging. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger last week told a conservative personnel aide: I will not accept any more recommendations from the White House, so don't bother sending them. Weinberger and other officials who place pragmatism and administrative competence above loyalty and ideology were advancing on all fronts, causing this question to be repeated: Can Reaganite policy be maintained by non-Reaganite officials?

In the heady days following his election, Ronnie Reagan's old California kitchen cabinet cronies thought they were picking the entire official Cabinet. Their comeuppance came early when Meese helped thwart the nomination of their East Coast colleague, William Simon, as secretary of the Treasury.

By the time they came east after the inauguration, kitchen cabinet members had switched from offense to defense. They were attempting to veto non-Reaganites regularly selected for high government posts by the White House personnel office, headed by Meese's close friend, E. Pendleton James.

Longtime Reagan aide Lyn Nofziger, who was performing much the same function as White House political aide, provided the kitchen cabinet office space adjoining his own. "You can't imagine," one Reagan aide told us, "how much trouble Lyn got himself into doing that. This was not a popular decision with the White House staff."

"The kitchen cabinet has been treated shabbily, disgracefully," said another insider. Reagan's oldest supporters were denied the convenience of a regular White House pass (except for Southern California tycoon William Wilson, who got his by virtue of being the president's envoy to the Vatican). They were often treated with condescension.

Meese and his second-in-command, Mike Deaver, marshalled legal opinions holding that the kitchen cabinet was an illegal occupant of government property. Kitchen cabinet member Joseph Coors, the Golden, Colo., brewer who long has dreamed of a Reagan presidency, produced conflicting legal opinions. He lost, and now Reagan's oldest buddies must move, possibly to Republican National Headquarters on Capitol Hill.

The loss of proximity will further reduce kitchen cabinet successes (such as appointment of Donald Devine to run the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) over the objections of Meese and James). What's more, it coincided with a serious setback for James' deputy, Willa Johnson, placed there by conservatives to safeguard ideological purity in national security posts.

Weinberger, a Reagan intimate and veteran bureaucratic fighter, has resisted all such tests for his lieutenants. In a personal confrontation with Johnson last week, he told her to stop sending resumes of "Reaganauts" for the Defense Department because he would pay no attention to

Some Claims Hold Up Poorly

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The median price of existing single-family homes rose 11.7 percent in 1980, or 1.8 points less than the consumer price index, and that, it is claimed, proves housing no longer is a good investment.

The figures are welcomed by some claimants, among them brokers who maintain that stocks and bonds are the only investments for the masses, and authors who forecast a coming collapse in real estate prices.

But claims are claims, and on examination some claims hold up poorly, such as the claim that the world is flat and the earth is the center of the universe, and that the dollar is as good if not better than gold.

It is no news to anyone except perhaps some investment analysts that, unlike stocks or bonds, houses can be lived in, a fact that gives home-ownership an overwhelming comparative advantage to begin with.

There is also the relative stability of home ownership.

If a loss of inflation of 1.8 percentage points in a year represents a catastrophe, as it has been depicted, what then are we to make of an entire decade in which blue chip stock values were seriously eroded by inflation?

But even the apparent loss of value may not be real. Housing usually is bought with only 10 percent to 30 percent of the purchase price in cash, but any increase in value accrues to the owner at 100 percent.

To explain: Last year, according to the National Association of Realtors, the median sale price rose to $62,200 from $55,700 in 1979. A large increase but, as we know, not enough to offset inflation.

However, if the owner bought the house with only $15,000 down, and benefited from a $6,500 increase in value, his return is much greater — 43 percent greater, in fact, before deducting for financing costs.

Those financing costs, however, have benefits of their own in that they are deductions from adjusted gross income on federal, state and local income taxes. Uncle Sam splits financing costs with the owner.

The tax benefits don't end there. Tax credits, better than tax deductions, also can be earned. With a tax deduction, a person's gross income, or the amount on which he is taxed, is reduced. With a tax credit, a person's liability is reduced dollar for dollar.

This results in a unique situation: The person who invests in a house can raise the value of his assets while at the same time earning a tax deduction. He can do so by making his house more energy efficient.

For example, a maximum tax credit of $300 or 15 percent of $2,000 is allowed for installing insulation, caulking or weatherproofing, adding thermal windows, or installing other specified energy efficiencies.

The laws also encourage the purchase and installing of solar heating and cooling equipment, as well as wind and geothermal energy systems. Such systems may earn a federal tax credit of up to $4,000, and many states offer additional tax credits.

The tax benefits don't end there. As with stocks and bonds, when the house is sold the appreciation is taxed at the lower capital gains rates, and those rates may soon be lowered even more.

In addition, homeowners over age 55 may earn a once-in-a-lifetime exclusion of up to $100,000 in gains when a primary residence, lived in for three of the previous five years, is sold. It's a unique benefit.

Relax, therefore, when somebody tells you that you're going to lose your shirt on your house. Anything is possible, even a total collapse, but right now there's little evidence of it in home ownership.

It still remains a solid investment, and perhaps the best, even if current sales prices aren't rising as fast as the inflation rate. When you add up all the benefits it's still a great investment.

And the only one with a fireplace.

Hear Draft Argued

WASHINGTON (AP) — The question of whether any military draft or draft registration must apply to women as well as men is taking center stage at the Supreme Court.

The high court, which was hearing oral arguments this afternoon, is expected to issue its decision by early summer on whether the Military Selective Service Act is unconstitutional because it exempts women.

The Reagan administration, whose leader often voiced doubt about draft registration during his 1980 campaign, argues that a three-judge federal court in Philadelphia was wrong last year when it ruled that it is unconstitutional to register and draft men and not women.

Although no draft now exists, the Philadelphia court's ruling came in a case started in 1971 before the draft was abolished.

Coincidentally, legislation was introduced Monday to reinstate the military draft.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said his bill to reinstate a draft would require young men — but not young women — aged 18 to 22 to serve nine months of active service for basic training, possibly followed by reserve duty.

Donald Weinberg, the Philadelphia lawyer who successfully challenged male-only draft registration in the lower court, said the Hollings bill probably would play no part in the Supreme Court's deliberation.

If the Supreme Court agrees that sex discrimination against men exists, Congress will have to scrap the 32-year-old law which authorizes draft registration or amend it to include women.

In the last decade, the court has allowed government to treat men and women differently only when such laws serve "important governmental objectives" that are "substantially related" to the government's goals.

The three-judge court applied that standard, but government lawyers have argued in written briefs to the Supreme Court that laws involving national defense should be ruled constitutional if they are "rationally related" to their objectives — a less-stringent standard of judicial scrutiny.

The government also relies heavily on an argument that goes beyond draft registration itself. Although this case does not involve the separate policy of excluding women from combat duty, the government contends that such inflexibility in assigning female soldiers is a factor to be considered.

Enquirer Case Goes To Jurors

By LINDA DEUTSCH Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a reminder from the defense that "news is news" entitled to First Amendment protection no matter who publishes it, jurors were beginning deliberations today on Carol Burnett's libel suit against the National Enquirer.

As the case went to the jury, Miss Burnett, who sat through all eight days of trial, said she already felt vindicated.

"No matter what happens, I haven't lost," she said. "We've won a moral victory, and that's all we wanted ... The first victory was getting this publication into court."

Miss Burnett's attorney, Ed Bronson, urged jurors during closing arguments Monday to hit the popular weekly tabloid "where it hurts ... in the pocketbook."

He dropped a request for $10 million in damages and suggested the comedian be awarded $1.5 million — the estimated annual net profit of the Enquirer.

Attorney William Masterson, representing the Enquirer, urged jurors to reject Miss Burnett's suit in defense of freedom of the press.

"News dissemination is important," he said. "It's the stuff this country is all about. There are some who may feel some news is more important than others, but under the Supreme Court, news is news. It's all entitled to the same protection."

Both attorneys focused on the question of whether the Enquirer acted with malice when it published an article about Miss Burnett. The requirement to prove malice stems from her status as a public figure.

The 1976 article in a gossip column reported Miss Burnett argued with then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in a Washington, D.C., restaurant, "traipsed" around, spilled wine and giggled instead of apologizing. Miss Burnett contended the article portrayed her as drunk, which she said was offensive because her parents were both alcoholics.

The item later was retracted.

Only 11 jurors were deliberating. Nine must agree for a verdict in the civil case.

Two jurors were sent home last week after saying they were aware that "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson attacked the Enquirer on the air for once reporting that his marriage was on the rocks, an allegation Carson said was untrue. One juror was dismissed for undisclosed reasons. The three dismissed jurors were replaced by two alternates.

Superior Court Judge Peter Smith made the Enquirer the sole defendant Friday by dismissing accusations against editor Iain Calder, columnist Steve Tinney and a distributor, ARA Services Inc.

Smith told jurors in his instructions Monday that Miss Burnett "is a public figure ... subjected to a wider amount of comment than others."

"An article which is only unpleasant or embarrassing to the plaintiff but does not hold her up to ridicule is not libelous," he said, stressing the jurors must be convinced the National Enquirer acted with "actual malice" in publishing the item.

Smith said the jurors could award damages only if convinced the Enquirer acted with a reckless disregard for the truth.

Masterson, telling jurors Miss Burnett had played drunks on her comedy-variety TV show, said the tabloid tried to check the story and noted the March 2, 1976, item was retracted — a point the judge said could be considered "in mitigation."

Bronson read excerpts from trial testimony that Enquirer writers were unable to confirm the article before it appeared.

"Carol Burnett has had the courage to stand up and say, 'OK, I'm not going to take it,'" Bronson said, concluding, "Miss Burnett has had the courage to bring this suit and I hope you have the courage to bring in the verdict that's called for."

Grand Jury Indicts 2 Former Jaycee Prexies

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Randolph County grand jury indicted two former North Carolina Jaycees presidents Monday on charges of conspiring to misapply charity funds in the "Jamscam" jelly sale investigation.

J. Harold Herring Jr. of Mount Olive, president of the state organization in 1978-79, and Johnny Lee Fletcher of Concord, president in 1977-78, are named in the conspiracy indictments.

Monday's charges bring the total amount of money involved in Jamscam probe to $239,590.

The charges stem from a State Bureau of Investigation probe that began last spring in the wake of allegations that Jaycee charity funds, many of them raised for the North Carolina Burn Center in Chapel Hill through the sale of jars of grape jelly, had been misused.

Herring was a candidate for president of the U.S. Jaycees in 1980 but withdrew after "Jamscam" began to receive widespread attention.

Former state Jaycee president Maurice Wilson of Charlotte is charged in additional "Jamscam" indictments returned Monday.

Wilson testified before the Randolph County grand jury Monday morning, according to the new indictment.

The grand jury handed down eight two-count indictments, each of which named Wilson. Herring was named in four of the indictments, while Fletcher was named in four other indictments.

Previous indictments in the SBI probe include Wilson, former U.S. Jaycees President Robert Archie Rushton of Gray, Ga., and Thomas Anthony Alsop of Charlotte, former president of the Charlotte Jaycees. All have pleaded innocent to the charges.

The new indictments allege that between September 1978 and April 1979, Wilson conspired with Herring to misapply $69,158 in charity funds.

The indictments charge that half the alleged crimes were committed while Wilson was executive vice president of the N.C. Jaycees and Herring was president of the organization and a director of the N.C. Jaycees Foundation Inc.

years ago these staff salaries were deplorable; they're much better now, though nurses still are in desperately short supply.

There have been other reasons for increases in hospital costs. Hospitals are the most regulated institutions in the nation — more regulated than atomic energy, or steel, or the stock market. A 1978 study of New York hospitals found 164 separate agencies of government involved in their operations; their cost of filling out forms and reports was placed at $128 million a year. Someone has to pay these costs. And when hospitals are not fully reimbursed for Medicaid and Medicare patients, someone has to close the gap. It's the private patient, directly or indirectly, who pays.

My able and distinguished, etc., had a solution: national health insurance. Her proposal would be uniform, comprehensive and compulsory. It would also be fearfully expensive, but that was not Ms. Abzug's concern. In rebuttal I argued the unwisdom of turning over health care to the same marvelously efficient people who have given us Amtrak and the Postal Service. I argued the advantages of variety over uniformity, of voluntarism over compulsion.

Roughly 94 percent of the American people now are protected, in varying degrees, by some form of health and hospitalization coverage. Virtually all new industrial contracts carry provisions for insurance against "catastrophic" illness. More than 1,200 companies now offer insurance tailored to individual needs. This voluntary system is not working perfectly, but in terms of cost it is working at least as well as Canada's system.

Increase the federal role? Heaven forbid! A far better course would be to decrease the federal role, just as Mr. Reagan recommends, with a view toward returning many responsibilities to the states and localities, and to the private sector. The gentleman from New York, to be sure, disagrees with that view, but the voters who last November anesthetized Jimmy Carter may be thankful that for a time, the gentleman will be following in the wind.

them. She promptly resigned and returned to her old job at the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank (but later was talked into returning).

One reason for Johnson's pique was the fact that San Francisco millionaire financier William Draper, who has been serving in James's personnel office, was present but said nothing in her defense during the confrontation with Weinberger. Johnson's aggravation was heightened by her irritation that Draper, who backed George Bush for the 1980 presidential nomination, would soon be named president of the Export-Import Bank, a job the kitchen cabinet had slated for ardent Reaganite Washington banker William Middendorf.

Kitchen cabinet plans to battle for Middendorf vanished March 12 when the president himself asked Middendorf to give up his Ex-Im bank ambitions for ambassador to the Organization of American States (OAS). He had no choice but to agree.

Reagan's call suggests the battle for ideological purity is lost. It is not imaginable for the kitchen cabinet to be evicted, Cappy Weinberger to refuse to consider political qualifications for defense posts or Bush backers to gain preference over Reagan backers for prestigious jobs if Ronald Reagan opposed it. If his political revolution is set back by acts of the non-Reaganites given command posts, the blame will be his alone.

Copyright 1981 Field Enterprises, Inc.

The indictments naming Fletcher and Wilson charge that Fletcher was president of the N.C. Jaycees at the time of the alleged crimes, while Wilson was executive vice president of the state Jaycee organization.

Wilson and Fletcher are charged with misapplying $26,480 in Jaycee charity money.

Pat's Pointers...

Selecting the proper hook size is important, too. Most instructions will tell you the proper size, but if yours do not, here is a general guide for you. If you are using size 5 or 6 needles for your garment, a size D hook should work well; with size 7 or 8 needles, try a size E hook; and with size 9 or 10 needles, select an F or G hook.

After making your first row of single crochet, chain one and turn your work. Five rows of single crochet work well with medium-weight yarn. You will probably need more rows with fine yarn and fewer rows with very bulky yarn.

When you have finished the first band, either sew on the buttons or mark the positions for each button.

For the other side, work exactly the same number of single crochets as you did for the first band, again marking every 10th stitch. At the end of the first row, compare markers to see that you have the same number. On the middle row (the third row if you are working a five-row band) you will make your buttonholes.

When you come to the point where a buttonhole is needed, chain two stitches (or more if your buttons are large) and skip the same number of stitches from the previous row. On the next row, a single crochet is worked in each of the chain stitches as well as in the single crochets.

Wildlife Week Is Observed

During the week of March 15-21, Wellcome Middle School observed National Wildlife Week. The theme, "We Care About Oceans" emphasized the need for concern about the future of the world's oceans.

"By calling attention to the importance of the oceans in the lives of man and wildlife," noted school librarian Linda Teel, "the school hoped that Wildlife Week would stimulate a greater interest in protecting the quality of the oceans as well as the quality of all wildlife environments."

Students participated by drawing pictures of wildlife, creating paper mache animals, writing stories about animals and by bringing in some specimens of mounted animals for display in the school's media center.

The collection of Joe Teel, local taxidermist, was featured in the display.

"National Wildlife Week was a big success at Wellcome," said Teel. "The students gained valuable insight into the need to preserve and secure our wildlife."

Canoe Race Is Expanded

GRIFTON — The canoe race at the Shad Festival is being expanded to two divisions this year with the addition of a co-ed category for teams consisting of one male and one female.

This race will follow a shorter course than the traditional open division, which usually attracts two male team members.

The open division will be raced at 1:30 p.m. April 5, with the co-ed following after a short breathing spell to enable those who wish to participate in both races to do so.

The entry fee is $6 per canoe and participants must provide their own canoes and Coast Guard approved life vests. Trophies will be given to each team member for the winning three places in the open division and winning two places in the co-ed division.

For further information, write Grifton Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, N.C. 28530, call 524-4356 or contact Eber Mitchell at 524-4468, Van Mitchell at 524-4833.

Retired Ass'n Meets Wednesday

Members of the Pitt-Greenville Retired Teachers and School Personnel Association will hold a meeting at noon, Wednesday, March 25.

The meeting will be in the Rotary Building, located at 809 Johnston Street.

Those planning to attend are urged to arrive a little early.

Group Has Workshop

Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church's young adult group will sponsor a minority awareness workshop on March 28 from 10 a.m.-2:30 p.m. at the South Greenville Recreation Center.

Selected topics of emphasis include the hows and whys of financial aid, campus/dorm life, and how to survive class registration.

Transportation and lunch will be provided. All interested junior and senior students are urged to attend.

Ramsey Suggests 2nd Session For Federal Cuts

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Faced with $100 million more in federal budget cuts than was expected, House Speaker Liston Ramsey has suggested that lawmakers may need to hold a second session of the General Assembly this fall to complete work on the state budget.

Ramsey, D-Marshall, held out that possibility Monday after state budget leaders raised to nearly $300 million their estimate of how much money North Carolina stands to lose under President Reagan's proposed federal budget cuts.

The developments came as the House and Senate held only brief Monday night sessions, which saw the introduction of a Senate bill that would establish four-year terms for legislators.

The loss of money in North Carolina, state officials said, would eliminate 1,000 or more federally financed state jobs, 5,000 jobs in local governments and another 3,000 jobs through federal job-training programs.

Marvin Dorman, deputy state budget officer, said latest estimates show that $299.6 million in federal aid to the state would be lost under the president's plan.

That is above the $204 million Dorman's office projected last month. The latest figures were contained in a memo to Gov. Jim Hunt last week and released by Dorman Monday.

"I don't see it increasing much more than this," Dorman said.

Because the federal budget year doesn't begin until October, three months after the state budget year begins, Ramsey said a fall legislative session might be needed to bring the biennial state budget in line with federal changes.

"I would suggest that we go ahead and do the best we can with the budget, and as far as Medicaid goes expect the worst. Then if we need to we can come back after Congress has made up its mind," Ramsey said.

Ramsey did not suggest an early end to the current legislative session, which many legislators have been suggesting in recent weeks. By tradition, legislative sessions in odd-numbered years usually end around the first of July.

The biggest change in estimates of the loss of federal money came in education. State budget officials estimated a $30.8 million in an analysis presented to Hunt in late February, but Dorman said that figure is now put at $86.3.

The cuts in elementary and secondary education will mean the loss of 4,000 staff jobs in state and local school systems, Dorman said. Those jobs include teachers, administrators and teachers' aides.

The earlier estimate failed to include cuts in the school nutrition program, which will be cut by $54 million in North Carolina, according to the latest figures. Most of that money goes into subsidized school lunches.

Dorman said the estimates also reflected increased levels of spending reductions added by the president to his proposal earlier this month. In education, for instance, the president's cut rose from 20 percent to 25 percent of aid to the state, he said.

Other changes anticipate an extra $10 million in cutbacks of federal highway aid, making North Carolina's expected loss $42.8 million. Other increased losses, under the new figures, also fell in social and health services, mental health, job training and natural resources.

Dorman said Medicaid, with an expected loss of $41.3 million, will pose the most difficulty for state budgetmakers. Legislative budget committees have listed proposals for reducing health care service to the poor in order to meet those cuts, but about half their list is contingent upon a relaxing of federal regulations that would give the state more freedom in limiting payments.

Dorman said legislators should consider including several options for Medicaid cuts in the 1981-1982 budget document. He said provisions could be written into the budget so that "if it (federal money) drops below a certain level, you cut out another service."

In other legislative action:

Terms

A proposed constitutional amendment establishing four-year terms for state legislators instead of their present two-year terms was introduced by Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Goldsboro.

Barnes said he was sponsoring the proposal as a way to reduce some of the expenses and time required for people to run for and serve in the General Assembly.

"If we continue the way we're going, the businessman or employee cannot come up here," Barnes said. "Unless you're rich or retired, you cannot serve in the North Carolina Legislature."

Barnes' bill would establish four-year terms for both House and Senate members, beginning with the 1982 election. Under the proposal, legislators would be elected every four years thereafter, thus making the legislative election fall two years after elections for president and governor.

Barnes won Senate approval of a similar proposal in 1979, only to see it die in the House.

Voter Registration

Rep. Kenneth Spaulding, D-Durham, filed a bill that would authorize public high school librarians to register voters.

"This legislation will help tremendously in the registration and representation of 18-year-olds and young people on the voter rolls," Spaulding said.

He added that it would improve representation of young people in jury pools.

Intangibles Tax

Sen. Cary Allred, R-Burlington, introduced a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow counties to exempt themselves from assessing the state intangibles tax.

Transcripts

The Senate gave tentative approval to a House-passed bill making it a crime to forge school transcripts.

Mill's Owner Has No Objections To Workers Taking Over Plant

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — In a bid to take over the Paul J. Thompson & Co. textile mill, textile workers testified Monday that they were not paid for several days they worked after Thompson filed for bankruptcy.

The mill workers appeared along with owner Paul J. Thompson at a preliminary hearing in U.S. Middle District Bankruptcy Court and said they were not notified that Thompson had filed for bankruptcy.

Thompson denied accusations that he kept the mill open only to get free labor. He testified that he kept the mill open hoping to be able to find capital to continue operating.

But Thompson said he would have no objection to a plan that would permit employees to take over the mill. "We'd be open to any method that would solve the problem," according to his lawyer, Tom Heller of Mebane.

Mill workers were told on Feb. 26 that the plant would shut down for inventory and that workers would be called to return within several days, said Judy Pulliam of Denver.

But Thompson had filed for bankruptcy six days earlier.

The day after the closing, workers went to the mill to get their paychecks but found an unwelcome surprise instead.

"Thompson drove up in his (car) and went in and locked the gate behind him," Pulliam told a reporter. "There was a mob of people out there shouting and cursing. When the police came, he came out and told us he didn't have anything for us."

The workers said they weren't paid for the two-week pay period that had ended earlier that week, plus several days more.

"He just worked the people six days after filing for bankruptcy to get that much more out of us," Pulliam said.

Thompson said the mill's problems stemmed from a fire last June that destroyed the Covington, Va., plant of Hercules, Inc., a company that makes Herculon furniture upholstery.

Hercules sent synthetic fibers to Thompson's mill to be spun into yarn for a fee. The fire meant the main source of work for the mill was destroyed, Thompson said.

"Since then, we've lost money every week," he said.

Thompson said he kept the employees working in hopes of finding another source of fiber and that Hercules would get back in operation at a new plant.

"It was a cash flow problem," he said. "If I could have found capital to stay open a little while longer, we could have kept going."

In financial statements filed with the court, Thompson listed debts of more than $2.2 million for his company, including $44,810 owed to the employees. But Hodges said that figure doesn't include all the wages owed.

He listed assets of about $3 million for the company, including $2.1 million for the mill building, land and equipment it contains.

The employees got the idea of taking over the mill from Martin Eakes, a lawyer with the Center for Community-Self Help in Durham. CSH is a non-profit organization set up by Eakes to promote employee ownership in cases of plant shutdowns or layoffs.

The employees hope to provide jobs for 75 to 85 people if they reopen the mill, Eakes said.

But under federal bankruptcy law, Thompson has the right to be the first to propose a plan for getting his business back on its feet.

Eakes said Thompson might propose a plan under which he will retain ownership.

Burning Permits Again Being Issued By State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Forestry officials lifted a ban on outdoor burning Monday after rain and snow lessened the danger of forest fires that have destroyed about 16,000 wooded acres in 11 days.

During the ban, 1,321 fires burned 16,042 acres of land. And officials say fires may resume if the weather becomes dry again.

"The weather has definitely helped the fire situation," Tom Hegele, fire prevention specialist for the division, said. "It's giving the firefighters a well deserved rest. But it won't last long. As soon as the next cold, dry front moves in, fires will be springing up all over the state."

The state Division of Forest Resources imposed the ban 11 days ago as drought and high winds created ideal conditions for forest fires.

Forestry officials said people who violated the ban and burned debris contributed to the problem. But arson was suspected in a number of the fires.

The situation was especially critical in southeastern North Carolina and eastern portions of the state where rich peat deposits made ideal fuel.

"For the most part, people were very good about observing the ban on burning," Dane Roten, chief of the state Forest Service's fire staff, said.

The ban was lifted after a winter storm brought rain and snow to North Carolina on Sunday and Monday. The storm dumped up to two feet of snow on the mountains while dropping half an inch to 1½ inches of rain and sleet in the eastern portions of the state.

But Roten warned the precipitation won't clear up all the fire hazards.

"Although this rain and snow will help relieve the fire problem for a while, it will not get us out of the critical dry conditions we have been experiencing," he said. "When the weather dries out and the winds pick back up, we'll be having fires again within a few days."

"We are still many inches short of rainfall and people will have to continue to be careful with their activities that could cause a forest fire," he said.

The National Weather Service in Raleigh reported that rainfall for March still is about 1½ inches less than average.

So far this year, 3,300 fires have burned 31,800 acres in North Carolina, according to forestry division statistics.

The division resumed issuing burning permits at noon Monday. The permit is required by law for all burning in or within 500 feet of a wooded area between the hours of midnight and 4 p.m.

A special burning permit is required in 14 eastern North Carolina counties for burning material left from land-clearing operations. Those counties are Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Carteret, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Hyde, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Tyrrell and Washington.

Three Injured In City Wrecks

Three persons were injured and damages were estimated at over $6,000 in a series of accidents investigated Sunday and Monday by Greenville police.

A Sunday night wreck on Greenville Boulevard at Memorial Drive resulted in one injury and damages totaling $2,150 to two vehicles. Police said that Leslie Roberson of 1805 Kennedy Circle was injured in the 9:27 p.m. wreck and taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Officers reported that the accident involved vehicles operated by Roberson and Patricia Kennedy Davis of Rt. 1, Richlands. No charges were preferred and damages were set at $1,200 to the Roberson car and $950 to the Davis vehicle.

Two persons were injured in a 9:40 a.m. accident Monday on N. Greene Street near Airport Road involving vehicles operated by Oscar Lewis Holloman Jr. of 3018 Memorial Drive and Curtis Levone Adams of 1507-A Fleming Street.

Officers said Adams and a passenger in his car were injured and transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital. Adams was charged with driving too fast for existing conditions.

Damage was estimated at $300 to the Adams car and $100 to the Holloman vehicle. Some $950 in damages occurred in a 11:23 a.m. mishap Monday at the Rose High School parking facilities.

Police said the wreck involved vehicles operated by Francis Ware Dorey of 1602 Berkley Road and Tonya Denise Lewis of 109 Trent Circle.

No charges were preferred and no injuries were reported in the accident, which resulted in damages estimated at $800 to the Lewis vehicle and $150 to the Dorey car.

A 7:25 a.m. wreck Monday on S. Charles Street near Red Banks Road resulted in damages estimated at $850 to a car operated by William Lee Suggs Jr. of Rt. 3, Greenville and $175 to a vehicle driven by Claudia Carmon Bynum of Rt. 2, Greenville.

Police said that no charges or injuries resulted from the accident.

Vehicles operated by Henry F. Morris III of 122 Longmeadow Road and James Clifford Killen Jr. of 703 Chestnut Drive, Smithfield, were involved in a 1:30 p.m. accident Monday on Greenville Boulevard near Arlington Boulevard.

Officers, who reported no charges or injuries as a result of the wreck, estimated damages at $600 to the Killen vehicle and $150 to the Morris car.

A 5:15 p.m. wreck Monday on Dickinson Avenue at Line Avenue involved cars operated by Glenda Dail Hinnant of 205 Pearl Drive and Ella Hill Dawson of Rt. 3, Greenville, according to police.

No injuries were reported and no charges were preferred in the mishap, which resulted in damages of $350 to the Hinnant car and $200 to the Dawson car.

A 5:47 p.m. accident yesterday on Greenville Boulevard near Evans Street involved vehicles driven by Timothy Wayne Anderson of 504 Winchester Drive, Ayden, and Sheila Moore Currey of Lot 8, Edgewood Trailer Park, Greenville.

Police said that damages were estimated at $350 to the Currey car and no injuries or charges were reported.

Seven public hearings are slated for the Thursday's regular meeting of the Greenville Board of Adjustments, while the Joint City-County Board of Adjustments will conduct one hearing.

The city board will hold hearings on requests by: Mrs. Ginger Jengia Kim for a special use permit to operate an international food store at 314 E. Tenth Street; Moore & Sauter for a special use permit to erect and operate self-service gasoline pumps on property located on Eastbrook Drive; Home Federal Savings & Loan Association for a variance to erect a sign at 218 Arlington Boulevard;

Heilig-Meyers for a variance to enlarge the existing structure at 518 E. Greenville Boulevard; Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce to operate a Farmer's Market on the lot located on Reade Circle between the Western Auto and Marathon Restaurant; A. B. Whitley Jr. for a variance to enlarge the existing warehouse at 1311 W. 14th Street for equipment storage; and J. T. Manning and Red Oak Nursery School to operate a pre-school, after school and summer camp at 2022 W. Greenville Boulevard.

The joint board will conduct a hearing on a request by Willie Eakes for a special use permit to place a mobile home approximately one-half mile from the city limits on the north side of the Pactus Highway.

Western Allies In Berlin Maneuvers

BERLIN (AP) — Western allies began military exercises in this divided city today despite Soviet criticism the maneuvers indicate "aggressive desires."

Four days of planned exercises will see 2,500 French, British and U.S. troops and 300 combat vehicles tested for military preparedness, according to French military officials leading the maneuvers.

The official Soviet news agency TASS complained that the exercises would turn Berlin into "a military training place for (NATO's) aggressive wishes." The Berlin maneuvers began as

Up To 20 Inches Of Snow Fell On N.C.

By The Associated Press
 Up to 27 inches of snow fell on North Carolina before a surprise spring storm moved out to sea Monday.

The storm caused at least four traffic deaths, but in eastern North Carolina, it provided farmers with some needed rain and allowed officials to lift a ban on outdoor burning throughout the state.

The storm wreaked havoc off the coast, and gale warnings were posted Monday as rescuers found one of two boats reported missing Sunday.

A search for another vessel with two North Carolina men aboard was to resume today.

Arrest Made

A 19-year-old Greenville man was arrested at South Greenville School last night by a patrolling policeman after the officer spotted someone inside the city school facility.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said that the officer arrested Kenneth Ray Harris of 208 W. Gum Road and charged him with breaking, entering and larceny at the school.

Chief Cannon pointed out that the officer, on routine patrol around 8:15 p.m., saw someone in the school and called for assistance. Before help arrived, however, the person climbed from a window and the officer cornered Harris between two wings of the building, the chief said.

Harris was charged with the theft of a calculator, valued at $18, and two other small items, according to the chief, who noted that several desks in classrooms at the school were rifled in the incident.

Bond for Harris was set at $10,000 and a first appearance hearing was scheduled for today in District Court here.

Tulsa, Syracuse Move Into NIT Finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Syracuse and Tulsa, two teams with identity crises, are solving them in the National Invitation Tournament.

Syracuse, snubbed by the NCAA selection committee, advanced to the final of the 44th NIT with a gritty 70-63 victory over Purdue Monday night. In the opener of the semifinal doubleheader, before a crowd of 14,995 at Madison Square Garden, unheralded Tulsa edged West Virginia 89-87.

Syracuse, 22-11, will face Tulsa, 25-7, for the title Wednesday night after Purdue, 20-11, meets West Virginia, 23-9, in a consolation game.

Syracuse labored through a mediocre 15-11 regular season, then won the Big East conference tourney only to be snubbed by the NCAA selection committee. And when the Orangemen won their first three NIT games, the critics were to quick to point out that all six postseason wins had come on Syracuse's home court, the 26,000-seat Carrier Dome.

"A lot of people said we were winning only because of the home-court advantage and playing before all our fans," said Syracuse guard Erich Santifer. "But we've been playing great ball. We're playing as well as anyone in the country — home or away."

But leaving their home floor almost proved disastrous for the Orangemen. Coach Jim Boehm ran his players through a short workout Monday morning so they could adjust to the Garden's wooden floor — Syracuse plays on a harder, springier artificial surface at home — and it almost cost them their center, 7-foot senior Dan Schayes.

Schayes stepped on a ball during the workout and sprained his left ankle. He limped noticeably throughout the Purdue game and often trailed the other players on the transition, yet he came through with come clutch play down the stretch to help the Orangemen pull away.

"He's a blue-chipper and blue-chippers have to learn to play with pain," said his proud father, former NBA great Dolph Schayes.

"Danny was only half a player out there, but we needed him and he did the job," said Boehm. "We went to a zone defense to protect him because he couldn't keep up with his man one-on-one. But we needed him in the middle."

Schayes played the entire second half and finished with nine points and four rebounds. But he had three points, two rebounds, an assist and a blocked shot in the final minute to help nail down the victory.

Leo Rautins led Syracuse with 19 points and 11 rebounds, Santifer added 18 points and Tony Bruin scored 16 before fouling out with 2:55 to go. Santifer, Rautins and Schayes each hit tie-breaking baskets down the stretch, Schayes putting the Orangemen ahead to stay 63-61 with a basket from the low post with one minute left.

Forward Mike Searce led Purdue with 18 points and 13 rebounds.

"It was a heartbreaker," said Purdue Coach Gene Keady, whose team fell behind by nine points early in the second half but fought back to tie three times in the final 5½ minutes before fading. "When it was close they made the big plays and that was it. Neither offense played very well, but they hung tough. You have to give them credit."

Credit is something that should also go to the Tulsa administrator who decided that the road to basketball success led to Snyder, Texas. That's the site of Western Texas Junior College, which compiled a 37-0 record under Coach Nolan Richardson last year and won the national Jucio title.

Tulsa, coming off a 8-19 season, hired Richardson last summer, and Richardson had the good sense to bring four of his Jucio stars with him — center Greg Stewart, forward David Brown and guards Paul Pressey and Phil Spradling. And the 6-5 Pressey was the hero in the Golden Hurricane's victory over West Virginia.

Pressey scored 11 of his team-high 20 points in the final 7:50 and played the point in Tulsa's full-court press that thoroughly disrupted the Mountaineers down the stretch.

"We're not the kind of team that can sit back and let the other team dictate what will happen," explained Richardson. "It's the live and die theory — the press got us here, the press was going to have to pull it out."

Pull it out they did, wiping out a seven-point deficit in the final 8½ minutes. Tulsa went ahead to stay 82-80 on a jumper by Pressey with 3:32 left and stayed ahead by sinking seven of 10 foul shots after that.

"We call Pressey the 'rubber-band man' because his arms seem to stretch without him moving," said Richardson. "He does so much for us on the front end of our press, I think their guards were looking for him and got rattled. He becomes so important to us late in the game because of his role on defense, and tonight he also took the offense in his hands."

Greg Stewart added 19 points and 10 rebounds for Tulsa, which is enjoying its winningest season ever. Guard Diego McCoy scored a career-high 30 points and forward Greg Nance had 22 points and 13 rebounds for West Virginia, which shot 61 percent from the field but was outscored 29-13 from the foul line and was guilty of 29 turnovers.

"When they press you, you've got to realize what's happening and make good decisions," said West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett. "We didn't. We couldn't protect the ball and that killed us."

And how do the rival coaches view the final? "Tulsa is a great basketball team," said Syracuse's Boehm. "They are very physical, something we have problems with. It should be a rough game."

"Syracuse is an excellent ballclub which is at a peak right now," said Tulsa's Richardson. "But whatever music is being played, we're gonna dance to it. This is the whole ball of wax and we'll be ready."

Potter Learning Lessons Well: In Select Field

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Potter says she had to learn how to win. She learned her lesson well enough to land in the select eight-woman $300,000 Avon tennis championships at Madison Square Garden.

"My progression has been solid and not meteoric," said Potter, who lives in Woodbury, Conn.

The 19-year-old left-hander will play West Germany's Sylvia Hanika in a first-round match Wednesday. The double-elimination tournament ends Sunday with $100,000 going to the winner.

Wednesday's other opening-day matches will pit top-seeded Martina Navratilova against Pam Shriver, second-seeded Andrea Jaeger against Bettina Bunge and

Leslie Allen against Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia. "I feel very lucky to be here," Potter said of her first trip to the Avon Championships, the culmination of the 11-week Avon Circuit. "I feel I earned it but it's a great pleasure and a treat. If I can just go out and not be killed by any of the players, then I'll feel happy."

Potter is considered to have one of the strongest serves in women's tennis. With her serve-and-volley game, she battled her way into the finals at the Avon Championships of Seattle, beating Kathy Jordan and Anne Smith before losing to Hanika in the title match. She reached the semifinals in Kansas City, Chicago and Detroit.

"I (was) taking tremendous amounts of lumps against players that I felt I could beat," Potter said. "But they were playing well and winning or experience, or winning because of reasons I hadn't learned yet."

Potter is typical of this year's Avon Championships field. Only Navratilova has played in this tourney before, winning the 1979 title and losing last year's finals to Tracy Austin.

Austin has been sidelined since January with a back ailment. Chris Evert, ranked No. 1 in the world last year, played in only one Avon tournament this season, winning last week in Boston, and failed to qualify for the Madison Square Garden event. Navratilova won the Avon stops at Cincinnati, Chicago, Los Angeles and Dallas. Jaeger, at 15 the youngest player in the field, captured Avon titles in Kansas City and Oakland. Hanika won the Seattle stop, while Mandlikova won at Houston and Allen won at Detroit, becoming the first black woman to win a major tennis title since Althea Gibson won both Wimbledon and the U.S. Nationals — now the U.S. Open — in 1958.

Bunge made it to the finals at Houston while Shriver was a finalist at Dallas.

The tour's top four doubles teams will meet in a straight-elimination draw. Top-seeded are Navratilova and Shriver, who will play Sue Barker and Ann Kiyomura in one semifinals Friday. The other semifinals will pit Potter and Sharon Walsh against Rosie Casals and Wendy Turnbull.

Ex-Tiger Will Be With Team

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "I'm so happy I can't believe it," said former Louisiana State University basketball player Mark Alcorn, who was told Monday that his surgery for cancer had been postponed for a week so that he can be on the bench with his former teammates this weekend in Philadelphia.

"I got the good word this afternoon," Alcorn said from his home. "They've put off the surgery until the middle of next week."

LSU meets Indiana Saturday in a semifinal game of the Final Four in NCAA championship play.

"I'll be on the bench this weekend," Alcorn said. "It's like a lifelong dream come true. I won't be playing, but just being there will mean a great deal to me. Just to be a part of something like this is great."

It was the second time Alcorn had managed to put off the surgery in which tumors are to be removed from his chest and abdomen. He had it postponed last weekend so that he could be with the team during its 96-85 win over Wichita State in the Midwest Regional championship Sunday.

Alcorn, 22, was a freshman starter at guard for St. Louis University before transferring to LSU in 1978. He played sparingly during the 1978-1979 season there and was expected to add back-court depth this season.

"I can't express what it felt like when I learned I could go," said Alcorn. "It made my day."

Taiwan, Olympic Group Agree On Participation

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Both China and Taiwan have become eligible to compete in the Olympics, starting with the Los Angeles Games in 1984, because of an agreement signed Monday at International Olympic Committee headquarters.

The agreement reached between the IOC and the National Olympic Committee of Taiwan entitles Taiwan to participate in future Olympic Games with the same rights as every other National Olympic Committee.

The accord came after two years of talks and Taiwan's eventual acceptance of a formula — under which its Olympic team will use a new flag, a new emblem and a new name — to clear the way for readmitting the People's Republic of China into the Olympic family. Until 1979, Taiwan had been recognized by the IOC as the Olympic Committee of the Republic of China, using the traditional red and blue flag and the emblem of China. Peking authorities have consistently refused to rejoin the games as long as Taiwan was recognized in this way.

But athletes from the People Republic of China competed at the 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y.

"The accord assures Chinese participation at Los Angeles (site of the 1984 Summer Games) and Sarajevo (Yugoslavia, where the '84 Winter Games will be held,) and all subsequent games," said spokesman Alain Coupat. When asked if this agreement would settle the China problem in regard to the Olympics, Coupat said, "yes, I would think so."

Chow Chung-Hsun, secretary-general of the Nationalist Chinese Amateur Athletic Federation, said:

"Now that the (name) problem has been settled, our athletes should be able to take part in more international competitions. In the past few years, some international federations have made excuses to deny us rights to compete in international games. Now we can strengthen our training and ask our athletes to make their utmost efforts for the honor of the country."

A small contingent of athletes and coaches from Taiwan came to the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid after Lord Killanin, then head of the IOC, had worked out a formula by which Taiwan dropped its Olympic name "Republic of China" and changed its flag and emblem.

However, when they got to Lake Placid, they attempted to fly their flag and were expelled. Taiwan filed a suit against the IOC in an attempt to keep its committee name and flag.

Coupat said he understood that all litigation initiated by Taiwan had come to an end as a result of the agreement.

Rain Hits Area Sports

Rain forced the postponement of all area sports activity yesterday, but most have been rescheduled for today.

East Carolina's baseball game with Princeton has been rescheduled as part of a doubleheader, to begin at 2 p.m. today at Harrington Field.

A tennis match between East Carolina at Atlantic Christian was postponed, but it was not known if a date for the replay has been set.

Track meets between Rose and Farmville Central, for both boys and girls, were cancelled and will not be rescheduled. Greene Central's boys and girls will travel to Hunt today, while Conley's boys and girls are scheduled for Washington.

A golf match involving the Eastern Carolina Conference teams at Southern Nash, was reset for today. Also reset for today was a golf match between Rocky Mount and Rose at Brook Valley.

NCAA Tournament: The Final Four

North Carolina

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina basketball Coach Dean Smith says he's glad to be one of four Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams invited to the NCAA playoffs. He just wishes one of them wasn't Virginia.

"We're proud there are two ACC teams in the Final Four," Smith said. "However, I now understand the concern UCLA's John Wooden and J.D. Morgan had about allowing more than one team from a conference in the NCAA tournament."

North Carolina, at 28-7, meets Virginia in the NCAA semifinals in Philadelphia Saturday night — and the Tar Heels will try to reverse their two regular-season losses to the Cavaliers.

"I know if we had beaten Virginia twice in the regular season, I'd trade both those wins for a victory Saturday," Smith said. "Of course, we failed in those two upset bids and certainly are underdogs again."

The Tar Heels lost 63-57 and 80-79 to the Cavaliers during regular-season play. But they won the ACC tournament — and a bid to represent the league in the playoffs — without having to meet the Cavaliers a third time. Virginia, 28-3, was upset 85-62 by Maryland in the ACC semifinals.

"Our problem against Virginia in our first two games wasn't our offense but theirs," Smith said. "They scored on 18 of their last 19 possessions in Charlottesville and did just about as well in Chapel Hill."

"I think they are an awesome team and, with (Ralph) Sampson, could easily win the national championship."

Sampson, the Cavaliers' 7-foot-4 sophomore center, scored 46 points and had 24 rebounds in the two victories over the Tar Heels.

But North Carolina finished the season with a rush, going 10-2 after the second loss to Virginia. The Tar Heels have won their last six games — three in the ACC tournament and three in the NCAA West Regional.

The Tar Heels, who beat NCAA semifinalist Indiana 65-56 at Chapel Hill early in the season, surprised many North Carolina faithful because several top players graduated. But freshman sensation Sam Perkins was a key to the team's strong showing.

Perkins, a 6-foot-9 center, averaged 15.2 points and 8.8 rebounds a game to surpass the Tar Heel freshman records of Phil Ford and Mike O'Koren.

"So far I think we've improved our play in each game of the NCAA tournament," said Smith. North Carolina whipped Pittsburgh 69-54, Utah 61-69 and Kansas State 82-68 to sweep into Saturday's semifinal round at Philadelphia.

"I just hope that continues," he added. "I'm extremely happy with our season. Considering our difficult schedule and the fact that we were without five of our top seven players from last year, this has been an outstanding season."

Louisiana State

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The only other time Louisiana State University went to the Final Four, southern basketball was just something to keep football players in shape off-season, recalls Benny McArdle, point guard on that 1953 squad.

"It was a big deal to be interviewed by a reporter, then," he said. "I don't think I was ever interviewed on television."

Indiana was the opponent then, and it will be LSU-Indiana in a Final Four semifinal again Saturday.

"I remember that in the first quarter, we were kind of awed at the whole situation — not the large crowd as much as being in the Final Four," McArdle said.

"Television was not a big thing, then. I really don't remember if the game was televised at all. I do remember that it was on radio, because we had everybody listening in."

"We were awed by Indiana. We had never seen them. All we had was scouting reports and box scores."

"As it turned out, they got a 13-point lead on us right away, and from there on, we played them even."

Indiana won that one 80-67. The Hoosiers are a slight favorite to beat LSU this time, too.

McArdle's job on that 1953 team was to get the ball to LSU's big men — Bob Pettit, who went on to stardom in the National Basketball Association, and Ned Clark.

This time, it's point guard Ethan Martin with the task of getting the ball to big men

Rudy Macklin. Leonard Mitchell and Greg Cook.

The three big men combined for 57 points in beating Wichita State 96-85 before a crowd of 32,747 in the Midwest Regional championship game Sunday.

"When we played in the Agriculture Center, we were drawing 10,000, and that was capacity," McArdle recalled.

"We played at Kentucky when Kentucky had a gym that held, I think, 11,700 or something like that — a tremendous arena."

"I didn't even think about anything above 15,000."

Although Pettit was the acknowledged star of the team and became an even greater star at Milwaukee and St. Louis in the NBA, McArdle said the 1953 squad was — as is this year's team — more than a one-man show.

"We won without Bob, too," he said. "He was out with pneumonia. We played six ball games without him, and we won them all."

"That brought us together, knowing we were a good ball club without Pettit. With him we were a great ball club, but we were a good team without him."

He said that when he travelled from New York to play basketball with LSU, Kentucky dominated the Southeastern Conference.

"Kentucky was the only team in the South," he said.

"In the Midwest, particularly Indiana, there was a tradition of playing basketball for a couple of generations, at least."

"I think it will be competitive," says third-team All-American Jeff Lamp of the third meeting between the two teams. As for Gates, he says "I'd rather be playing Kansas State," an 82-68 victim of North Carolina in the finals of the West Regional.

But the Cavaliers, who lost three of their last five games prior to the NCAA tournament after winning their first 23, may be peaking again at just the right moment.

"It's no fluke that we're going to Philadelphia," Holland says.

Virginia

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — It may come as a shock to Brigham Young — and perhaps to Villanova and Tennessee — but Coach Terry Holland says his fifth-ranked basketball Virginia Cavaliers says "can play better."

At the same time, Holland admits the Cavaliers, 28-3, are "getting close" to the nearly flawless game it may take to beat North Carolina's sixth-ranked Tar Heels, 28-7, in Saturday's NCAA tournament semifinal in Philadelphia.

The key to the Cavaliers' hopes of adding the NCAA title to the National Invitation Tournament championship they won last year may well be All-American Ralph Sampson.

Hounded by multiple collapsing defenses much of the season, Sampson broke loose in the second half of last Saturday's 74-60 East Regional victory over BYU to finish with 22 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots.

In an 80-79 overtime victory over Atlantic Coast Conference rival North Carolina on the Tar Heels' home court in which the Cavaliers came from 16 points down in the second half, Sampson had 32 points before he fouled out.

Can Sampson sustain for an entire game the kind of offensive and defensive intensity he provided against BYU?

"Ralph can't dominate a game for 40 minutes. He would kill himself, or somebody would kill him," says senior Terry Gates, who has started all three of Virginia's games in NCAA competition.

BYU Coach Frank Arnold became a believer last Saturday. "We've got a couple of 6-11 kids who took some shots against him and ate leather sandwiches," said Arnold. "If you're going to take the ball to him, you'd better be ready for him to reject the shot a lot faster and harder than you put it up."

This will be Virginia's third game against North Carolina. When the two teams met on the Cavaliers' home court, Virginia came from 13 points behind in the second half for a 63-57 triumph.

The last time North Carolina Coach Dean Smith lost to an ACC team three times in one season was in 1974 when North Carolina State and David Thompson pulled it off.

North Carolina won the ACC tournament, but the Tar Heels' victim in the final was Maryland after the Terps blew out Virginia 85-62 in the semifinals in a game Holland later was to call "an oddity."

"I think it will be competitive," says third-team All-American Jeff Lamp of the third meeting between the two teams. As for Gates, he says "I'd rather be playing Kansas State," an 82-68 victim of North Carolina in the finals of the West Regional.

But the Cavaliers, who lost three of their last five games prior to the NCAA tournament after winning their first 23, may be peaking again at just the right moment.

"It's no fluke that we're going to Philadelphia," Holland says.

Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana's Hoosiers have started practice for Saturday's NCAA semifinal showdown against Louisiana State, but the preparation won't be anything out of the ordinary, says Coach Bobby Knight.

"You people talk about the underdogs and the favorites, but it really makes no difference at all," Knight said Monday at a news conference at Assembly Hall.

"We don't prepare differently in terms of what outside people say."

The No. 9-rated Hoosiers, 24-9 after beating St. Joseph's, Pa., 78-46 for the Midwest Regional championship on Sunday, will leave for Philadelphia Thursday night or Friday morning, Knight said.

In the meantime, he said, "We'll begin schooling the team on LSU. We'll look at LSU's defense and offense and probably bring in some of our players individually to look at the things they do."

LSU, ranked fourth with a 31-3 record, is "very quick, and with that quickness they have excellent strength," Knight said. "They're a talented team and can come at you in different ways. They don't really lack anything it takes to be a good team."

Two Atlantic Coast Conference rivals, Virginia and North Carolina, will meet in the other semifinal, with the two winners on Saturday advancing to the NCAA championship game Monday night. Virginia has already beaten North Carolina twice in regular-season play, while

North Carolina defeated Indiana early in the year.

"You always think that if things go right for you, you have a chance to get somewhere," Knight said of Indiana's turnaround after a 7-5 start in December. "All through this season I felt this team was maturing. We've talked about this before. Landon Turner, Tony Brown, Isiah Thomas and even Ray Tolbert have been maturing over the course of the season."

"We're still in the process of building a team, and we're going to have a lot of these kids playing next year and the following year. I can't help but look at the makeup of this team and make the assessment that they're going to get better," Knight said of his young Hoosiers, who start only one senior, Tolbert. "Of course, you never know, but if we're successful this year maybe we won't work as hard at it next year."

In 1973, a similarly young Indiana team reached the NCAA Final Four before losing to eventual champion UCLA in the semifinal round.

In 1975, Indiana won 31 straight games before losing to Kentucky in the regional tourney. The next year, the veteran team won 32 straight games and captured the university's third NCAA crown with an impressive victory over Big Ten Conference rival Michigan.

Willie Stargell Admits He's Concerned About Game's Future

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell, one of baseball's elder statesmen, admits concern for the game.

Stargell refers to the labor strife, the growing adversary relationship between the media and the players and the overall reaction of the fans.

"I see a concern from the owner's standpoint. I see a concern from the fan's standpoint. I see a concern from the players' standpoint," said Stargell, expected to miss the Pirates' season opener due to a knee problem that has limited his spring training work.

"The one good thing about the game is that it's virtually unchanged over the long time it's been played. I'm talking about once you get on the field. Then, it's see the ball, hit it, throw it, catch it, slide, run, all these same basic things have existed," Stargell declared.

The 41-year-old Pirates' first baseman then turned to the things that have changed and which bother him.

Stargell said he discovers that now when he picks up a newspaper he finds out more about what the players are making than how they're playing.

"Basically I think the way things are presented now they ought to be on the financial

"If my kid picks up the newspaper and wants to learn about what's going on in baseball so he can go to a playground and work on the things that maybe came out of interviews with players, he can't find them."

Stargell continued, "But if he wants to know how much a Dave Parker or a Dave Winfield or Mike Schmidt or Fred Lynn is making, he can find that."

"Very little is being said about how you hold a baseball, how you throw a baseball, the valuable information for youngsters. And I think even women would like to relate to the game. The lack of this I don't particularly like," Stargell said.

"I think whatever a person is making, whether it's the President of the United States or anybody else, I think that if one person is going to reveal his salary then everybody should," Stargell declared.

"I don't think it should be a one-way street. I don't think it's important, because when you get on the field, regardless of how much money you make you can't pay that pitcher to throw the ball down the middle of the plate and see it hit. You got to earn everything you get."

"So, that's probably one of the most overrated things," Stargell said as he compared the game of today with the way it was when he joined organized ball in 1959.

"I was brought up in that old school that when you put on that uniform it's all baseball and you're supposed to put out the best that's in you on a day-in, day-out basis."

Stargell isn't happy with the way labor problems are negotiated.

"I just hope we can come up with something that we both can live with," Stargell observed. "I think it's important for the fans, the youngsters of tomorrow, to be able to direct all their attention to the game."

Stargell says he tells people that (labor) negotiations should be concluded either before or after a season.

"It requires (during the season) too much integrity, too much sacrifice, too much dedication to worry about how you're going to negotiate."

whether you don't like the way negotiations are going. This shouldn't be done during the season. I think all that does is cloud the whole atmosphere," Stargell said.

The 225-pound first baseman, who is as mild-mannered as he is huge, says it all adds up to the fact that nobody — owners, fans, players, or media — enjoy themselves.

Bonham May Be Finally Coming Around As Hurler For Cincinnati

By The Associated Press
The Cincinnati Reds lost a ballgame Monday but may have found a pitcher.

Bill Bonham is far from a rookie. He has spent eight full seasons and most of two others in the major leagues. But recurring elbow soreness — he had surgery a couple of years ago and again last October — limited him to four appearances with Cincinnati last year and three more in the low minors.

On Monday, the 32-year-old right-hander pitched to a major league batter for the first time in nearly eight months. He worked two scoreless innings in the Reds' 5-4 loss to the Chicago White Sox, surrendering one hit and walking two.

"He's further along than anyone anticipated," Manager John McNamara said.

"I feel I'm able to throw," said Bonham. "My arm felt good. I threw all my pitches. I hope to pitch again in three or four days. I felt last year that I was going to pitch well. I pitched in four games. I keep bringing that up because to me it wasn't a lost season. I worked on a lot of things."

"I knew I could still pitch and get hitters out. So I thought if I could get the shoulder to where it doesn't hurt, I'd be back this year."

In 1978, Bonham had bone chips removed from his elbow. Last year, doctors removed an inflamed lubricating pad in his shoulder.

"In a way, it's like a last chance, because the operation has to prove successful," Bonham said. "But it wasn't a long shot. I felt that as long as I didn't have any pain, I'd be able to pitch." Paul Moskau, also trying to come back from shoulder surgery, followed Bonham and pitched two innings. He gave up two hits, one walk and one run while striking out two in his second appearance of the spring.

Another convalescent pitcher, Philadelphia's Larry Christenson, hurled five shut-out innings as the Phillies beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-1. Christenson, limited to 14 appearances in 1980 by arm miseries and a recurring groin injury, gave up three hits and struck out three.

Meanwhile, Doug DeCinces drove in three runs with a triple and single and Mike Flanagan pitched six innings as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Montreal Expos 9-3. The Orioles played without Manager Earl Weaver, who began a three-game suspension for pulling his team off the field against Kansas City last week in a dispute with the umpires over the lineup card.

Rookie Jorge Bell, drafted from the Phillies' organization, and Otto Velez each belted two home runs as the Toronto Blue Jays hammered the Pittsburgh Pirates 12-6.

Rookie outfielder Terry Harper drove in three runs with a double and two singles, leading the Atlanta Braves to a 7-5 victory over the New York Yankees.

San Francisco center fielder

Bill North misplayed a fly ball for a three-run error with two out in the top of the ninth inning that allowed the Oakland A's to beat the Giants 4-3.

Alan Ashby drove in the winning run with a fourth-inning single as the Houston Astros snapped a six-game losing streak with a 3-2 triumph over the Boston Red Sox. Winning pitcher Nolan Ryan allowed one hit and an unearned run in four innings.

Consecutive home runs by Dan Ford and Don Baylor plus Beniquez's first single gave California a 3-1 lead in the first inning and the Angels went on to defeat the Seattle Mariners 11-2.

Ex-Cubs Miguel Dilone and Karl Pagan helped the Cleveland Indians defeat Chicago 6-2. Dilone singled in the third inning, stole second and scored on an error to break a 1-1 tie. Pagan singled home a run in the inning and singled and scored in the sixth. Hal McRae slammed a tie-breaking three-run homer off Ferguson Jenkins to lead the Kansas City Royals to a 5-1 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Dan Norman tripled home the tying run in the seventh inning and scored on Mike Jorgensen's sacrifice fly and Dave Kingman hit his third homer in two games as the New York Mets rallied from a 6-1 deficit to nip the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-6.

Detroit's Lou Whitaker tripled and drove in two runs as the Tigers downed a split Cincinnati squad 9-2.

Floyd Wins Bundle In Playoff Marvin Webster Again Doing Thing For Knicks

POINTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A couple of early season disappointments were the spurs he needed, Ray Floyd said, to send him to two consecutive victories and the biggest payoff in the history of golf.

"In a way," Floyd said after collecting $72,000 plus a $250,000 bonus, for his playoff triumph in the Tournament Players Championship Monday. "It was like a young fellow out here. Maybe the first time he's in position to win a tournament, it gets away from him. Maybe the second time it gets away, too. Then, maybe on the third time, he grasps it."

Floyd let a couple get away in California, then reaped a massive harvest when the PGA Tour reached Florida.

A week ago the 38-year-old veteran, a former Masters and PGA champion, scored his 13th career victory in the Doral-Eastern Open.

Then, in the day-late windup of the storm-delayed championship of golf's tournament players, he came from six shots back with a no-bogey 68, tied Barry Jaeckel and Curtis Strange for the top spot at 285 and won the sudden death playoff with a par on the first extra hole.

The first prize from the total purse of $440,000 was $72,000. In addition, there was a bonus of $250,000 put up by the sponsors of three Florida tournaments for any man able to win two of them in a row.

Floyd did it. He won his 14th career title with a one-foot par-saving putt on the playoff hole. Both Strange and Jaeckel missed the green, and each failed on a 5-6 foot par putt.

Floyd, who said he hadn't really thought much about his one-footer, suddenly was faced with 12 inches of real estate to cover for a total of $322,000.

"All of a sudden the cash register started ringing and I had to back off and think about it a little," Floyd said.

He tapped it in on the green still wet from the inch of rain dumped on the tough Sawgrass links by the thunderstorms that washed out Sunday's play.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't thinking about the money," Floyd said. "But coming back and defending my title in Doral, then winning two tournaments back to back — that's something I've never done before — that's reward enough for me. The monetary reward is just icing on the cake."

And he returned to the disappointments he'd had earlier this season.

"I finished two shots back in the Crosby," he said. "I lost a playoff in San Diego."

"But I persevered. I endured."

Marvin Webster Again Doing Thing For Knicks

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

At Morgan State he was known as the "Human Eraser" because of his ability to wipe out opponents' shots with a sudden swipe of a hand. At Denver, his first pro stop, he was nagged by illness, but at Seattle he blossomed into a first-rate center and helped the SuperSonics to the playoff finals.

Now, after two frustrating seasons in New York, Marvin Webster is once again doing the things he does best — rebounding, blocking shots, clogging the middle and generally causing havoc on defense. Although not a starter, the likeable 7-footer is a key factor in the Knicks' 48-30 record, their best since the 1973-74 National Basketball Association season.

Taking care of the middle is something that doesn't show up in boxscores, but it's what Webster does best. Philadelphia's Julius Erving gave him credit after the Knicks stunned the 76ers 120-109 in a recent national TV game.

Man In The Street: Players Are Overpaid

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

One of the confusing aspects of the threatened big league baseball strike is the reaction of the man on the street.

To the average guy, generally, the players are overpaid, greedy and selfish. There ought to be a limit, he says, on their salaries. Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, realized that most fans would take such an attitude when he marshalled his clients into a solid bloc resisting any surrender of players' hard-earned bargaining rights.

talents. They sell them to their employers for a price, whatever the market will bear. In turn, the employer, like a retailer, sells these talents to the fans.

Ballplayers, the same as guys who pour hot steel and ladies who sit in cramped attics to sew seams, belong to a union. They negotiate playing conditions, basic pay, pensions and other benefits as any other person not self-employed.

So what turns the average guy off?

The fan still looks upon baseball as a game played by men in doubleknits — a fun game learned on the corner lot. Work? Hogwash.

He fails to grasp the whole picture — a hard-knuckled business run by corporate executives, dominated by television, infested by commercial wheelers and dealers, all out for the big buck.

Marvin is as perplexed as anyone.

We were intrigued by the responses given to the New York Daily News' Inquiring Photographer, who took to the streets to ask the following question:

"Do you agree with Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner that top salaries for athletes should be $300,000 to $400,000, with the average about $100,000 to $150,000?"

The vote was five-to-one "yes."

"Salaries are outrageous," commented a supervisor. "If the trend continues, some teams will go bankrupt."

For most players, it's a short, hazardous career.

It's a well-worn cliché — but a hard truth — that the ballplayer, while a working man in one sense, is a show business personality in another. He is paid not just for his skills but also for the number of people he can pull through the turnstiles.

In the cases of charismatic stars such as Reggie Jackson, Pete Rose and George Brett, they earn their bread. Their roles are not dissimilar from those of movie and TV personalities who wouldn't sneeze for a salary less than six or seven figures.

A credit controller said: "No one player deserves $1 million a year. In a way, I hope Dave Winfield (the $20 million Yankee) flops to show that he isn't worth that kind of money."

"Turner is right," said a housewife. "While the fans don't resent high salaries, they can't relate to real life."

A high school student said, "It's going to turn sports into a money market ruled by the rich teams." A credit manager, conceding that a superstar should be paid according to his talent, added, "Turner's average salary of $100,000 to $150,000 is too high. The average player isn't worth that much."

Turner's proposal of a lid on ballplayers' earning power is patently unconstitutional. It is about as logical — and workable — as asking Turner to limit the profits on his communications enterprises, stripping oil barons of their billions and telling General Motors how much it can pay its vice presidents.

But to the little guy with a weekly pay envelope, it's a hard sell.

Only one man, a customer field representative, took the players' side, arguing, "The owners have made millions. The players are entitled to all they can get."

This is a strange social phenomenon. One would think that the average citizen, the bricklayer, truck driver, accountant or mill hand would hoist their cudgels in defense of baseball's working stiff.

Except in the size of their paychecks, they are brothers in arms. They have certain

L. League Registers

Registration for new candidates for the Greenville Little Leagues will be held Thursday and Friday from 4 to 6 p.m. at Elm Street Center.

To be eligible, candidates must reside within the established boundaries of the Greenville Little Leagues, that is, within a six-mile radius of Five Points.

They must also have been born between August 1, 1968 and July 31, 1972, and must present a certified birth certificate and be accompanied by at least one parent when registering.

Cartwright remains the Knicks' starting center and he is an outstanding shooter, but the rest of his game is spotty. Webster provides the defense and rebounding the Knicks need from the pivot position. At times, against clubs with big lineups, Holzman has used the two centers together to beef up New York's lineup.

"When I'm in there with Marvin, I can concentrate on my man more," said Cartwright. "I know he's taking care of the middle."

Show South No Living Cartoon

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's very nice to see the Alex Haley-Norman Lear creation, "Palmerstown," back on television for the CBS spring season. Prime time, and CBS especially, owe Dixie this much.

I sometimes wonder whether young viewers outside the South grow up believing that region to be a sort of living cartoon peopled by Yankee Li'l Abner types who say YOU-all instead of y'all. The Southerner according to "Flo," "Dukes of Hazzard," "Concrete Cowboys," "Enos" (CBS) and "Lobo" (NBC) is a boorish lout whose time on this planet is spent in pursuit of the loudest whoop and longest screech of tire.

But "Palmerstown," which returned to the CBS schedule for a limited run last week, is a different place. It's a small-town South of enduring strengths and values, a place of manners and passions and life's lessons, mean and gentle; a real place, a place to grow up in — home.

The central characters in the story belong to two families, one black, one white, who co-exist in a gray region surpassing neighborliness but only approaching unqualified friendship. It's a favorite theme of Haley's, who rediscovered in his "Roots II" research that special relationship between blacks and whites in the South that is the sweet reverse side of the region's grim racial history.

More, "Palmerstown" is simply good TV, entertaining family television of the sort that "The Waltons" served up for all those years. A fine cast helps: Beeson Carroll and Bill Duke play the near-friends, sometime-antagonists, W.D. Hall (the town's white grocer) and Luther (the proud blacksmith).

Jermain H. Johnson, who portrays Luther's boy Booker T. is far and away TV's cutest kid. You might have been sold on young Johnson — I was — by his performance in the two-hour "Palmerstown" that began the series last spring.

That episode had young Johnson and Brian Wilson, who plays W.D.'s young son David (Brian G. Wilson), stumbling in anger over inherited racial prejudices. Suddenly discovering "the difference" between yourself and your closest childhood pal is one of a young Southerner's bitter rites of passage, a stinging memory from Haley's own youth that led directly to the creation of this series.

Little Jermain Johnson cried and swore and clenched his fists when he and his pal tripped over the race line, but mainly he conveyed hurt. It was nice.

Anyway, this season's first episode employed TV's favorite tools — sex and violence — to uplifting ends. W.D.'s teen-age boy Willie-Joe, ennobled by love, offered to marry the pregnant daughter of his Daddy's longtime enemy, even though he's not the father of the expected child. Shotguns were welded and threats made, but fear and ignorance eventually yielded to wisdom, and a satisfactory conclusion was reached.

Tonight, "Palmerstown" leads into the conclusion of "Gone With the Wind." Not a tire will screech, nor piece of chewing gum pop. There will be no belches. If you live outside of the South, and your youngster has been feeding on a steady diet of "Dukes of Hazzard" and "Lobo," put him in front of the tube tonight and tune in CBS.

Shock Killed Kite-Flyer

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A Virginia Beach boy is dead after he was electrocuted when the metal string of the kite bought on the way home from church touched a 19,900-volt power line in front of his home.

The shock knocked 8-year-old Mario Wiggins 14 feet from where he was standing and started a small brush fire Sunday.

Despite the efforts of rescue squadmen, the boy was pronounced dead at 3 p.m., about an hour after the incident.

Young Wiggins, his brother and a friend were flying his kite in a field next to his house, said Detective D. F. Stiles. The boy's father, Clarence Wiggins, bought the kite while the family was going home from church.

Wiggins told Stiles he was behind the house and heard a sound like a shotgun blast. He ran to the front of the house and saw a fire in some brush in a lane that leads to his house, he told the detective.

He quickly put out the fire and then ran to his son, who was lying across the lane near the house, Wiggins told Stiles.

The boy had been standing almost directly under the power line when his kite, which was about 100 feet in the air, nosed toward the ground, draping the thin wire across the electric line.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Three of ♣.

Familiarity breeds contempt. Declarer was so sure that he recognized a card combination that he played by rote and went down in a makeable contract.

Any time you hold three aces and a partner opens the bidding, you have a good hand. Thus, North made a forcing jump raise of his partner's one diamond opening bid and he was delighted to hear South convert to three no trump.

West led a low heart and East's ten was captured by the queen. Declarer had only seven fast tricks, and it was obvious that he had to develop diamonds. Equally obvious was the fact that he would have to take a diamond finesse. So declarer led a diamond to the ace, and though that fetched East's queen, declarer had only eight tricks and careful defense held him to that.

Declarer was right in assuming that the percentage play in diamonds was the finesse, but he did not give the matter sufficient thought. If East has any four diamonds, the defenders will always have a stopper in the suit. If West has four diamonds, declarer can still collect four tricks in the suit if East's singleton is the queen.

We are not suggesting that declarer lay down the king of diamonds at trick two—that would be a double-dummy play. But it costs declarer nothing to cross to a black-suit ace at trick two and lead a low diamond toward his hand.

If East follows with a low diamond, declarer, of course, makes the percentage play of finessing the jack. Should that succeed and the diamonds are 3-2, declarer will be able to run the suit. But when East produces the queen of diamonds, declarer wins the king, cashes the jack to reveal the 4-1 division, and is now positioned to take the marked finesse of the nine of diamonds to produce four tricks in the suit. As a result, the contract is fulfilled.

Judge Wants Records To Help Him Set Fine

By PAUL MOSES
Associated Press Writer
NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — CBS attorneys were ordered to appear in court today with either the unused portions of a 1978 "60 Minutes" segment or a corporate balance sheet to help a judge determine the size of "a terribly large" fine.

U.S. District Judge Herbert Stern ordered CBS Monday to turn over tapes of interviews by correspondent Mike Wallace for a segment on an alleged food franchise fraud.

CBS attorney Timothy Dyk said the company would refuse to comply.

In December 1978, the highly rated weekly newsmagazine show described an alleged scheme to sell worthless franchises in the Wild Bill's Family Restaurants Inc. chain.

Six people indicted in the case nine months later are to go on trial before Stern next Monday. Defense attorneys contend interviews that were not broadcast might help their case, and Stern agreed.

Stern said CBS did not use interviews that would tend to clear the defendants during the segment called, "From Burgers to Bankruptcy," and did not mention that those under investigation were presumed innocent.

CBS agreed to turn over the material if it would not be released to the defendants, but Stern rejected that proposal. CBS argued the unused tapes were confidential.

Stern warned that any contempt fine would be "coercive to the extent that you must comply."

Wallace, who testified Monday, objected to the judge's opinion.

He said the program attempted to include exculpatory information. A transcript of the show indicated he questioned an alleged fraud victim on whether he neglected to protect his own interests properly.

The veteran correspondent also said Wild Bill's refused interviews.

The network charged there is a growing effort by litigants to exploit professional news gatherers by subpoenaing materials, turning reporters into private investigators.

Stern argued CBS knew a grand jury was probing the Wild Bill's franchise sales and could reasonably expect its tapes might someday be needed for a criminal trial. He also said those interviewed waived confidentiality.

Comics United For New Film

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — John Belushi and Dan Aykroyd star together in "Neighbors," based on the book by Thomas Berger.

The movie, for Zanuck-Brown Productions and Columbia Pictures, goes into production April 20 in New York City.

Belushi and Aykroyd gained fame on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" and were together in "The Blues Brothers."

Clapton Faces Long Time-Out

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — British rock star Eric Clapton will spend about two more weeks in the hospital, then several months at home, before resuming his career, spokesmen say.

Clapton, 36, entered United Hospitals 10 days ago with a perforated ulcer.

He was in serious condition then but now is listed in fair condition, hospital spokesman George Ryan said Monday.

Clapton's personal manager, Roger Forrester, said the rest of the singer's four-month North American concert tour will be canceled, and Clapton will spend several months recuperating after he leaves the hospital.

The judge had ordered CBS to turn over the records more than a year ago and levied a $1 a day fine until the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals could decide the issue.

The federal appeals court stayed the fine and sent the case back to Stern with instructions for him to weigh CBS' First Amendment right of free press and the defendants' Sixth Amendment right to a fair trial.

Disguised As Newsmen

NEW YORK (AP) — The city's Health and Hospitals Corp. has apologized to WCBS-TV after the station protested that private investigators hired by the city agency posed as reporters in order to film striking doctors.

"The corporation never intended its investigators to use media cover for their activities," corporation President Stanley Breznoff said in a letter to the station. "I issued a clear prohibition in this regard as soon as I learned of the incident."

WCBS Vice President Edward Joyce had complained to Mayor Edward Koch that the conduct of the two investigators was "dangerous and irresponsible."

A private investigator, Edmund Pierson, testified at a court hearing Friday on the strike that he and another investigator posed as members of a television camera crew to film picketing interns and residents who were on strike against city hospitals.

"We have to assume different identities at times," Pierson said. "At times, it's not considered too safe to identify yourself as an investigator."

The investigator played a videotape of an interview in

'Barnum' Actor Marries Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Dale, who does acrobatics every night as the star of the Broadway hit "Barnum," has taken the big leap into marriage.

Dale, who won the 1980 Tony award as outstanding actor in a musical, married Julie Schafner, the owner of an artisans' gallery, on Monday.

Dale has been in show business for 30 years. He wrote the song "Georgy Girl."

The marriage was his second, her first. His three sons were his attendants.

which he told strikers he was a journalist, "free-lance for Channel 2 (WCBS)."

The New York Press Club, a journalists' organization, wrote a letter of protest to New York Secretary of State Basil Paterson, who handles licensing of private investigators.

SITTING PRETTY — Shapely Jacque Ireland, 22, has burned her bridges — she has given up her job as secretary/receptionist to concentrate full time on what was a part time career, modelling. Jacque has worked in Holland, Germany and France, and will soon return to France from her Midlands, England home for another modelling assignment. (AP Laserphoto)

Measuring the Economy

The government announces hundreds of facts and figures each day. But to most citizens, few are as important as the Consumer Price Index, or CPI, which measures the rate of inflation. The CPI for February is scheduled to be released today. Each month to calculate the CPI, the Department of Labor pretends to buy 400 items on a shopping list ranging from bacon to rental housing. Items on the list reflect the spending habits of the average family. The total cost, or Consumer Price Index number of these items, is compared with the CPI for the previous month and the previous year. In this way, price increases are recorded and the rate of inflation is measured.

DO YOU KNOW — What was the rate of inflation for 1980?
MONDAY'S ANSWER — General Zia ul-Haq is currently the military ruler of Pakistan.

Garwood Attorneys Seek Continuance

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Convicted collaborator Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood's attorneys requested a continuance Monday for his trial on charges of molesting a 7-year-old girl.

The lawyers want the trial delayed until Garwood completes psychiatric treatment in Virginia. Action on the request is not expected this week because the presiding judge is out of town.

Defense attorneys made several motions last week in connection with the trial. They asked that jurors be sequestered during jury selection and that jurors be prohibited from taking notes during the trial.

The attorneys also asked that prosecution witnesses be sequestered and that prosecutors be required to furnish the defense with a list of witnesses and information about the witnesses.

Garwood was indicted by an Onslow County grand jury Feb. 23 on charges of taking indecent liberties with a child, attempted first-degree sexual offense, attempted first-degree rape and first-degree sex offense.

The sex offense charges initially were filed against Garwood last fall while he was awaiting the opening of his court-martial on collaboration charges.

But Onslow County authorities decided to wait until the military trial was over to begin their prosecution.

The 34-year-old Indiana man was convicted Feb. 5 of collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam, despite testimony by psychiatrists that 14 years in Vietcong captivity drove him insane. He was ordered stripped of rank and dishonorably discharged.

Few details of the alleged attack have been made public, although there have been published reports that it allegedly occurred while Garwood was taking the girl home from church.

Garwood maintains he is innocent of the sexual charges.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CAR POOL PERISHED; RIDERS LATCHED ON TO SUBURBAN BUS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: U equals E

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

How can you use a classified ad to help with the family budget?

1. Sell that tuba that hasn't sounded a note the last three years. Any musical instrument will do if you don't have a tuba.
2. Take a good look in your garage. If there's a bike, moped, or motorcycle that hasn't had a rider in a long time, now's the time to exchange it for cash.
3. Grown-ups also let still-good items go unused! Got a sewing machine, typewriter or knitting machine you haven't mastered? Find a cash buyer for it.
4. Don't forget sound equipment . . . radio, TV, stereo, tape recorder, CB, walkie-talkie . . . people are always looking for things to listen to.
5. And the workshop . . . wherever it is . . . is the place to spot tools which still have a lot of good use in them. Let someone else put them to work while you fatten your budget.

That's how!

Just take inventory of the many good items in your home some family would like to have. Then give us a call to place your ad. Classified ads have been helping families stretch their budgets for years . . . and they can help you, too

American Economy Leaving City Of Weehawken Behind

ABANDONED PIER — Seagulls have taken over an abandoned pier directly across the Hudson River from New York. Weehawken faces a dwindling economic base due to lost major municipal tax

By DAVID KAYE
Associated Press Writer
WEEHAWKEN, N.J. (AP) — In 1904, in a duel on a bluff here, Vice President Aaron Burr stepped off his paces, whirled and squeezed off a shot that fatally wounded Alexander Hamilton.

In 1981, this township is dueling a similarly formidable opponent — the flagging American economy.

Weehawken today is a community of 13,500 people but no major taxpayers, facing layoffs of half the police and firefighting force or a major tax increase — or both.

Located just across the Hudson River from Manhattan, Weehawken once served as the terminus for the then-mighty New York Central Railroad and as the home of the biggest banana warehouse in the world.

For almost a century, the railroad paid most of the municipal taxes, and the township thrived. Bootleggers and silent movie actors built magnificent mansions atop the Palisades. A tramway carried residents from the bluff to the Hudson shoreline hundreds of feet below.

By 1920, more than 25,000 passengers a day were being ferried across the river to Manhattan's once-grand 42nd Street.

The Lincoln Tunnel connected New Jersey with Manhattan in 1937, gobbling up a big chunk of township land in the bargain. But officials thought the increased traffic would cultivate business construction.

It did — for a while. The ferry service was discontinued in 1959, a victim of the popularity of the car and the ease of travel through two tunnels and across the George Washington Bridge.

In 1968 New York Central's financial problems proved insurmountable. When its merger with the Pennsylvania Railroad failed two years later, it signaled financial doom for Weehawken.

"Weehawken has had a champagne appetite for years because of the railroads," Mayor Wally Lindsley said recently. "That appetite is no longer appetizing."

United Fruit Co. and its banana warehouse left town in 1973. Two major piers burned to the water line in the last few years, cutting an additional $15 million from tax rates.

And Seatrain Lines Inc., which owns a third of the now-deserted riverfront, filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws in February.

For years, the township literally banked on the huge tax base from Seatrain, United Fruit and the railroad, habitually borrowing from still uncollected taxes. Each October, the township found itself short and took emergency allocations from the next year's budget, said John Riepe, the mayor's press secretary.

In 1980, the township already had borrowed $700,000 from its $5 million 1981 tax total, said Township Finance Chairman Jack Gallo. Not unusual, except that Seatrain ran into trouble at the same time.

When Seatrain collapsed, Weehawken lost more than $2 million in taxes, or 40 percent of the 1981 budget.

Seatrain now owes a bit less than $100,000 in 1979 taxes, $861,000 in 1980 taxes and an anticipated $1.2 million for 1981. Riepe said. The closing of the Seatrain container shipping facility — the last business on the once bustling waterfront — threw 500 people out of work.

On top of those job losses, Lindsley last month sent layoff notices to 47 of the township's 150 employees, including 11 police officers from a force of 22 and 12 of the city's 40 firefighters.

"This town is going to be Dodge City. It'll be wide open," said Cosmo Del Rosso, president of the Weehawken Policemen's Benevolent Association.

Plans, as yet unimplemented, call for cutting two of the five daily shifts.

"You can't take away from something you don't have," Sgt. John Nahrwald protested, explaining that officers already answer an average of 33 calls per shift. He noted that the local crime rate has climbed 25 percent in two years.

Township officials had planned a referendum this month to ask residents to approve raising the property tax rate $26 per $1,000 of assessed valuation. But Weehawken's current rate of about $66 per $1,000 means the owner of an $80,000 home already pays about $5,000 in taxes each year, a tab that could have risen to $7,000 under the proposed new rate.

Gallo said he was sure the referendum would have lost "by at least a 10-1 margin" and the referendum was canceled. But he's also said the township needs at least a $24 increase, and even then, layoffs "are 99.9 percent sure."

Uniformed employees are currently locked in contract negotiations with the township. They are asking for a 10 percent wage increase. Officials have made no offer: "There's no money," said Riepe.

Weehawken recently received $103,000 in state urban aid funds and hopes for more. "We pray every night something is coming from the state," Gallo said.

If the community can pull through the next 18 months, it stands to collect on a financial bonanza.

The foreclosure action on Seatrain, expected to be settled by July 1982, would pump $19 million into Weehawken's coffers — six times the back taxes Seatrain would owe by then.

And the waterfront, overlooking the Manhattan skyline, is attracting developers who consider it a prime site for condominiums. But so far, it remains a maze of junkyards and abandoned railroad tracks with only one access road.

Raps Delay On 2 New Jetties

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt demanded Monday that the Reagan Administration end its "intolerable" delay on construction of two huge jetties designed to stabilize the dangerous shoals of Oregon Inlet.

After flying with other state officials from Raleigh through heavy turbulence created by a howling coastal storm, Hunt dedicated the Wanchese Seafood Industrial Park on Roanoke Road.

"The present impasse on the Oregon Inlet stabilization project is intolerable," Hunt said in his dedication speech. "Not only is the delay costing us millions in construction and lost business, it may cost us lives."

"Lives and property continue to be lost in navigation through the inlet and its dangerous channels," Hunt said.

The state has invested $7.3 million in developing the Wanchese Seafood Park, designed to attract businesses associated with the fish processing industry. It is expected to be self-sustaining once it is fully developed.

But some prospective tenants are holding back on investing in the park because of the squabble between the Army Corps of Engineers and the Interior Department over the jetties, said Robert G. Williams, director of the park.

The idea for the park arose 20 years ago when the corps first planned to stabilize the shifting Oregon Inlet channels by building the half-mile long jetties.

The jetties were to be part of the larger Manteo-Shallowbag Bay Project, which would include a federally-maintained deepwater channel into Wanchese Harbor.
