Polish Workers Stage Warning Strike

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The blare of factory whistles shattered Poland's labor peace today as the 10 million-member Solidarity independent labor union staged a four-hour warning strike, defying Warsaw Pact troops and tanks maneuvering on the nation's borders.

"We don't want to overthrow the (Communist) party," national Solidarity leader Lech Walesa told striking workers at a steel mill near here. "We only want to get rid of the people putting the brakes on renewal."

Renewal is the word Poles have given to the economic and political reforms sought by Solidarity, the Communist bloc's first non-governmental trade union.

The strike began at 8 a.m. — 2 a.m. EST — and ended on schedule four hours later. But union officials have threatened a general — and open-ended — strike for next Tuesday if their demands are not met.

A Solidarity strike bulletin published today quoted Polish radio and television chief Stanislaw Balicki as saying the government was prepared for "30 days of strikes." It also quoted him as saying the government was ready to proclaim "a state of emergency,' and that government leaders had told him the current Warsaw Pact maneuvers had been prolonged. It did not elaborate.

A Solidarity spokesman said workers walked off their jobs in the Silesia coal mines, at factories in Wroclaw, Jelenia Gora, Katowice and Lublin, and in the shipyards of Gdansk, flashpoint of last summer's labor protests. The spokesman could not say immediately what portion of the Solidarity membership participated.

The warning strike was the first since Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski became Poland's premier Feb. 10 and called for a 90-day respite from strikes. It was believed to be the largest coordinated labor protest in Communist Poland's 38-year history.

Poland's official news media reported the work stoppages without comment. The Soviet news agency Tass, which called the situation "tense" in a lengthy article Thursday, did not refer to the strikes directly today.

In Washington, officials were watching developments with new concern.

Solidarity leaders met at a Warsaw hotel to prepare for the expected resumption later today of negotiations postponed by the government Thursday. The talks are expected to focus on union grievances stemming from last week's beatings of farmers and unionists in Bydgoszcz.

Polish shoppers, meanwhile, prepared for the worst, joining block-long lines outside of grocery stories and emptying the shelves of what little food was available.

In Warsaw, factory whistles heralded the strike. Transportation in the capital ground to a halt. Some 4,000 employees at the giant Huta Warszawa steel mill on the city's northern outskirts stopped work, as did 5,000 at the Ursus tractor factory nearby.

Walesa toured a number of the plants by car. At the Huta Warszawa plant, he appealed for support — but also for patience. "We want to give the premier some time to restore order."

At the tractor plant, site of 1976 disturbances over food prices, activists distributed half-loaves of bread and workers stood atop fork lifts to place the red and white Polish flag on beams.

The official Polish news agency PAP took note of the strike with the observation that "a state of social tensions prevails but there is peace everywhere." But it also quoted the Polish Catholic and Social Union, an independent organization of intellectuals, as declaring, "Poland is on the verge of national disaster and extreme forces are coming into prominence."

The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda charged today that the AFL-CIO was collaborating with the CIA in an effort to subvert socialism in Poland.

The Czechoslovak Communist party newspaper Rude Pravo added that Solidarity was engaging in "threats, blackmail and terror" in a "concentrated attack" on the Communist system. The Yugoslavian daily Politika said Poland was "paralyzed," its future "completely uncertain."

On Thursday, Tass had said Poland was "virtually flooded with provocative leaflets containing direct threats against the Communists."

The phrasing was reminiscent of the "threats" Moscow cited in explaining its military intervention in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

The Soviet concern over Poland was underlined by continued Warsaw Pact maneuvers in or near Poland's border.

In Washington, the State Department said the maneuvers appeared to have been extended as a "warning flag."

A statement issued at the White House Thursday warned the Soviet Union "may intend to take repressive action in Poland" and warned this would have "a grave effect on the whole course of East-West relations." Asked about that later by reporters, President Reagan said, "It's a very tense situation."

The spark for Poland's latest labor crisis, the worst since last summer's wave of work stoppages, was the beating last Thursday of 23 protesting farmers and unionists in the northwestern city of Bydgoszcz. The activists had refused to leave a meeting with Communist officials and were forcibly ejected. Three of them were hospitalized.

Solidarity demanded the dismissal of officials it claimed were responsible for the beatings and warned it would hold a warning strike today and an all-out work stoppage Tuesday if the demands were not met.

Government officials were working on a report on the Bydgoszcz violence expected to be published Saturday.

On the eve of the walkout, Poles stocked up on peas, beans, vinegar and whatever else was available.

"Why am I buying five bottles of vinegar?" asked one Polish woman. "Frankly, I don't really need that much but everybody is buying everything and anyway what is this money worth?"

West Studies Its Options On Poland

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said today the Polish situation "still looks pretty serious" and that the United States and its allies are considering possible measures in the event of Soviet military intervention.

Weinberger refused to say what kind of steps are under discussion. When asked whether he meant to include an allied military option, the defense secretary replied: "I don't rule it in and I don't rule it out."

After Weinberger's comments at a breakfast meeting with newsmen, top aides said any allied military counter-action to a Soviet move against Poland is not in the cards, but they said that Weinberger wanted to keep the Russians guessing and was being purposely vague.

The only reference Weinberger made to any specific counter-measure was his statement that "if they (the Russians) did go in, it would effectively end any possibility of talks" of any kind, whether on strategic or theater nuclear arms limitations or conventional force reductions.

"It would be absolutely futile to sit down with a country that behaves that way," Weinberger said.

The Pentagon chief said, "I think there would be some concerted effort" by the allies in response to a Soviet military action to crush the Polish independent labor movement.

There are "a number of things that a number of countries are talking about," Weinberger said.

At the same time, he expressed a belief that the Russians would rather not intervene militarily, but that the Soviets hope that the problems inside Poland can be resolved without such drastic action.

"I think they would much rather get what they want without going in," Weinberger said of the Russians.

He met with reporters a day after President Reagan issued a pointed statement warning that Soviet use of force against Polish labor unions or any suppression of the Poles by armed might "could have a grave effect on the whole course of East-West relations."

Asked what prompted the president's statement, Weinberger said it was the "apparent extension of the maneuvers" by Russian and other Warsaw Pact armies in and near Poland that contributed to what he called a "growing tense situation."

Although a four-hour protest strike had ended earlier today, Weinberger said, "there still are an awful lot of troops around (Poland)."

However, Weinberger said that "I'm not aware of any specific troop movements" by Warsaw Pact forces that could be considered immediately threatening to Poland.

He also said that "I don't think there has been any special private statement" from the United States to the Soviet Union conveying the depth of American concern that the Russians refrain from harsh tactics.

On other matters, Weinberger made these points:

El Salvador — The assignment of 54 U.S. military trainers and technicians is "a temporary one" and fulfills requests by the beleagured government coping with a leftist insurgency.

Loan Approved

The approval by the Farmers Home Administration of a $50,000 loan to the Pactolus Rural Fire Department Inc. was announced by Rep. Walter B. Jones.

Jones said the loan, which will be repaid in 20 years at five percent, will be used to purchase a new 750 GPM pump truck to replace a 1946 pumper truck. He noted that the fire department serves the Pactolus area.

John J. Langley is current president of the fire department.

Mayor Pleased With Project

Mayor Don McGlohon expressed delight that Greenville has been chosen by the Department of Housing and Urban Development to submit a full application for funding of the South Evans Community Development Project.

It was pointed out that an invitation to submit a full application virtually assures that program funding will be made available.

"Securing the funds for this project has been a top priority for the city council," the mayor observed. "The previous council adopted a policy statement directing the city manager and the city staff to implement and complete our existing Community Development projects with all possible dispatch. The present council placed great emphasis on continuing these efforts."

McGlohon explained that "the threshold requirements set by HUD in order to qualify for funding were especially difficult this year. We were required to have a certain percentage of our past funding expended and for the first time the threshold criteria required that our two remaining urban renewal projects be officially closed out."

He added, "Although it appeared that our chances for funding this year were not very good, we felt it was important to apply for the funds and place a maximum effort on meeting the threshold requirements. Of course, developing a competitive application was equally important."

The mayor commended the city's Engineering and Inspections Department for its work in getting the 14th Street project underway which represented a major portion of the remaining funds. He said the effort of the Redevelopment Commission in closing out the last two urban renewal efforts here and completing land acquisition for the 14th Street project was also a key.

He also cited the efforts of City Manager Ed Wyatt and Ben Shivar, the city's CD director, as well as city department heads who were involved in the funding effort.

The South Evans project is a three-year comprehensive program to rehabilitate and upgrade the living environment of the area. The total grant request amounts to some $3 million.

McGlohon said the full application for the first year's work will be written for $996,200, with work expected to begin by Oct. 1.

DOMESTIC STRESS REFUGE?

Would you please print in the paper some kind of services that women who are being mentally or physically abused by their mates can use, places they can go? Because I fear for my life, I will not give my name.S

Mary Smith, director of the REAL Crisis Intervention Center here, asked that you call REAL as soon as possible — 758-HELP (4357). She said domestic stress is one of the many areas in which REAL provides crisis counseling and information referral. REAL keeps itself constantly abreast on all the services in the county available for whatever problem and will put you in touch with someone who can help you.

As for places they can go, she said Pitt County has no shelter for abused women, per se, but will refer you somewhere if there appears to be sufficient need. There are shelters in some other towns in the state, she said, and arrangements could possible be made for you to go to one of these.

FAMILY NEEDS HELP

Joan Chenier of Catholic Social Services has asked Hotline to appeal for help for a family with four small children who moved here in January. They are living without heat, cookstove or refrigerator. If you have any of these appliances in usable condition that you would be willing to donate to CSS, call Joan Chenier, 756-1593. The donation would be tax-deductible.

Find No Atlanta Links In New York Abduction

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Atlanta police say a New York City man who was arrested with a 9-year-old boy in his truck is not a suspect in the deaths or disappearances of 22 black children in Atlanta.

Frankie Edmonds, 32, a Vietnam veteran and former mental patient, was held on $25,000 bail today in the Dutchess County Jail in Poughkeepsie, about 90 miles north of New York City, on charges of unlawful imprisonment and endangering the welfare of a minor.

Edmonds, of the New York City borough of Queens, was seized in East Fishkill, N.Y., on Sunday in a rented truck with Georgia license plates. In the rear of the truck was Bernard Robinson of Beacon, N.Y., whom Edmonds allegedly had abducted from the Rombout Junior High School playground about 20 miles away.

Local police and FBI agents were quick to note several "running lines of coincidence," as FBI Director William Webster put it, between the Edmonds case and the Atlanta slayings. However, FBI agents have been unable to question Edmonds because his court-appointed lawyer, Dutchess County public defender Sam Collins, won't let them.

Atlanta's police commissioner, Lee Brown, said, "at this point, we are not calling him a suspect."

Andrew Criscolo, police chief of East Fishkill, reported that Edmonds had revealed nothing that would link him to the Atlanta cases.

The "lines of coincidence" apparently included:

—The Georgia plates on the truck;

—A flier found in the truck promoting a New York City vigil for the Atlanta victims;

—Reports that dog hairs, possibly from a husky or chow-chow, were found on

Old Country Store Burned

FIRE DESTROYS OLD STORE — Firemen from five Pitt County fire departments battle a blaze that destroyed an old store at Hudson's Crossroads early this morning. According to Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner, the fire was reported at 2:47 a.m. and Eastern Pines and Black Jack firemen arriving at the scene said the building was completely engulfed in flames. Owner of the old wood frame building was listed as Frank Edwards. Joyner said the building had not been used as a store for about ten years, but was used for storage. Value of the structure, was $17,000 which was a total loss. Additional departments responding to the call were Simpson, Grimesland, and Winterville. There were no injuries reported. Fine Furniture Is Explained

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

NEW BERN — Furniture maker Wright Horne, clad in knee breeches and buckled shoes, constructed a Chippendale-style mahogany table — carefully fitting each part with mortises and tenons, dovetails or wooden pegs.

This was not the long-ago birth of a now prized antique, but an intriguing reenactment of how antique furniture was made. Horne, master cabinetmaker at Colonial Williamsburg's Anthony Hay Cabinet Shop, demonstrated his trade for 170 participants in the annual Tryon Palace Symposium here.

The symposium, for professionals and lay persons interested in the decorative arts of the colonial period, is co-sponsored by the Tryon Palace Commission and Restoration and the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Eduction in cooperation with the N. C. Division of Archives and History.

Furniture making is not really an "art," a "craft" or a "service," Horne explained. "It's a way to make a living, a business like any other."

Colonial furniture makers, like their modern counterparts, produced furniture to please their customers. And since not every furniture maker is a good designer, makers have always relied upon pattern books, such as Thomas Chippendale's "Director."

To maintain a profitable shop, makers traditionally used fine woods "where it shows," and less expensive woods for the backs and undersides which are left unfinished.

Makers sought to please and sometimes spent most of their time pointing out possible designs in the pattern books to prospective customers. "Anthony May probably spent 30 hours a week just talking to customers," Horne said.

Advertising as a means of attracting notice is not at all new. Horne showed several early printed advertisements for "carpenters," "joiners," "turners" and "cabinetmakers," including one for the London firm of "Elizabeth Bell and Son."

Furniture makers in the colonies borrowed ideas from the famous English designers — Chippendale, Hepplewhite and Sheraton — as well as from each other.

Horne showed photographs of good and better furnishings made on both sides of the Atlantic and singled out characteristics often seen but seldom noticed — the octagonal forms in "13-pane" glass cupboard and bookcase fronts and the bird profiles formed by the cut-out spaces of splat-backed chairs.

As Horne assembled his table, he explained how good pieces are made to allow for the inevitable "shrinking, swelling and warping" of wood.

"Drawer bottoms should have a little overlap at the back so there won't be a crack running across for bobby pins to fall through," he said.

Other symposium speakers were Peter Sandbeck, Betty Ring, Carolyn J. Weekley, Louise Belden and Mary Reynolds Peacock.

Participating from the Greenville area were: Greene County, Snow Hill, Mrs. J. C. Exum Jr.; and Pitt County, Greenville, Dr. Lawrence Brewster and Antoinette Jenkins.

DINNER FOR FOUR
Turkey Cutlets Green Beans
Parmesan Potatoes Rolls
Ricotta Cake Espresso

PARMESAN POTATOES

My young friend, Veronica Petta, first made this in a cooking class at New York University, then tried it in my kitchen. It's great!

¼ cup butter
4 medium baking potatoes (about 1¾ pounds), scrubbed but unpeeled
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon white pepper

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees and melt the butter in a 10 by 6 by 1¾-inch baking dish. Cut potatoes in half lengthwise; with the cut surfaces facing down, slice each potato half lengthwise into ¼-inch wide strips; reserve the ends that are almost entirely covered with peel. Layer the remaining potatoes in overlapping rows in the baking dish, sprinkling each layer with the cheese and pepper. Top with the reserved potato ends, skin side up, the Parmesan and pepper. Bake uncovered in the preheated oven until tender when tested with a fork and top layer is on the crisp side — 40 to 50 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Doctor Chokes On Advice

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband just celebrated his 50th birthday. He's a physician who tells all his male patients who reach 50 to "slow down." If they smoke, he orders them to quit or cut down, but he's a two-pack-a-day man.

He puts all his overweight patients on diets, but he is considerably overweight himself and can't stay on a diet for two days. He insists that daily exercise is a must, but he doesn't exercise at all.

He says that an annual vacation away from one's daily work is essential to good health, but he hasn't had a vacation in six years. And this will floor you: He wants all his patients to have a thorough checkup every year, but the last one he had was 12 years ago. What's wrong with him, and how can I get through to him?

DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: He's human. He finds advice much easier to give than to take. You can get through to him (maybe) by insisting that he consult a colleague for a checkup. And if he refuses, ask him to keep paying those life insurance premiums, so you and your next husband can retire in luxury. Cruel? Not really. Sometimes we have to be cruel to be kind.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine is marrying a minister. He plans to perform the marriage ceremony himself. He insists that since he is authorized to perform marriage ceremonies, there is no reason why he should not perform his own.

Somehow this doesn't seem right to me. Can you please find out if such a marriage would be legal in South Carolina? Thank you.

BRIDE'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: According to Robert N. DuRant, executive director of the South Carolina Bar:

"Only ministers of the gospel or accepted Jewish rabbis and officers authorized to administer oaths in this state are authorized to administer a marriage ceremony in this State.

"Complications could arise when one attempts his own wedding ceremony. To be strictly legal, one could avoid the question by having a third party perform the marriage ceremony."

DEAR ABBY: Why would a person laugh at his own jokes?

JOEY

DEAR JOEY: Maybe he just wants to make sure somebody laughs.

DEAR ABBY: You recently quoted G.K. Chesterton, who said, "The truly great person is the one who makes every person feel great."

May I share an anecdote that illustrates that point beautifully: In Queen Victoria's time, a young woman had the good fortune of being escorted to dinner by William E. Gladstone, who was considered one of the most brilliant statesmen of the 19th century. On the following evening, the same young lady was escorted by Benjamin Disraeli, novelist, statesman and twice prime minister of Great Britain.

When asked for her impression of these two great rivals, she replied, "After an evening with Gladstone, I thought he was the most brilliant man I'd ever met. After an evening with Disraeli, I thought myself to be the most fascinating woman in the world!"

DEAR ABBY: I notice that your column has a great deal to do with this sex business.

Tell people that sex is nature's bait for reproduction, and if you go for the bait, you get stuck with the freight.

Now, if they say the urge is too great to control, tell them that carnal concupiscence — or plain old-fashioned "lust" — can be cooled by physical and mental exercise.

Okay, Friedman, get back in the shallow water. (Remember me? I was the lifeguard at Riverside pool where you and your twin sister used to swim when you were kids in Sioux City, Iowa.)

JIM FLANAGAN (STILL IN SIOUX CITY)

DEAR JIM: Of course I remember you. I never forget a good-looking Irishman! What happened to you? Did you study for the priesthood?

"Cooling" the ardor won't work, Jim. The population must be controlled in more reliable ways. The flesh is often weaker than the mind is strong. Now, you get back in the shallow water, Flanagan. You're already in over your head!

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

From age 13 to 19, your teenagers will go through the seven stages of Career Searching. Why, do you ask, does he or she vacillate between one profession and another? Because it is the first time he has faced the realities of how to make a living.

Stage I (age 13) — He has learned to sign his name and can sign it just as well as Bill Walton. Bill Walton gets a million dollars a year for signing his name. Besides, coach says if he keeps growing this summer he might "start" in the fall.

Stage II (age 14) — Has not grown enough to dunk higher than Walton's knees. Decides sports is for jocks who don't want to grow up. Did an article for school paper and discovered Katharine Graham, publisher of the Washington Post, earned in excess of $375,000 in one year. Getting out the paper is all work after school, but it's worth it. Journalism gets in your blood.

Stage III (age 15) — New girl with nice-smelling hair called Shelly wanted to be walked home every night after school. He let someone else get the stupid paper out. Besides, stupid faculty censored everything. Shelly thinks he should go into law like her father. Chief Justice Warren Burger makes $84,700 a year. Besides, all those years in law school would give them a chance to mature.

Stage IV (age 16) — Shelly took shorter time to mature than he thought. He decided after she dumped him that girls are overrated. He said she'd be surprised when she hears he's going to become a priest. They don't make a lot of money, but you get a lot of people looking at you and saying, "Wonder why he never got married. He has such charisma and can reach people."

Stage V (age 17) — Son decided he didn't need religious life when he discovered the hours. He said if he wanted to work Sundays he'd be a realtor. With all the charisma people said he had, he figured he'd go into politics. After all, the mayor of New York City makes $80,000 a year.

Stage VI (age 18) — Charisma bombed out at student council level. Is undecided about career, but seems to have narrowed it down to either game show contestant who won $132,000 by knowing Butterfly McQueen was the maid in "Gone with the Wind," or a plumber who took 27 pounds of his hair out of the hall drain and makes $53,000 a year.

Stage VII (age 19) — Enrolled in liberal arts at local college. Works summers for minimum wage scale at firm selling roofing over the phone.

Is open to suggestions.

EARLY MORNING WRECK — Mark Alexander Palmer of Greenville, was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 1:17 a.m. collision today at the intersection of Fifth and Elm Streets that injured three persons. Police Department investigators said the Palmer car collided with a van driven by Curtis Tedesco of Greenville, causing an estimated $2,300 damage to the car and $4,500 damage to the van, which overturned. Palmer was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of leg injuries he received in the mishap, police reported, while Tedesco and a passenger in the van received minor injuries. Life As It's Lived

Modesty Puts Parents On An Unjust Sideline

I am tired of the recognition sports figures receive in our society. Not only are the inflated salaries of the professionals appalling; the fame of our so-called amateur athletes ticks me off, too. We go crazy over a 16-year-old who, after 12 years of training, can do tricks on a glorified gym set. But what about the parents who chauffered her, encouraged her, rearranged their schedules for her, and paid her coach? Aren't they the real sports?

Parents are like that. Their modesty prevents them from demanding a share of the limelight. But it really is unfair. I therefore advocate the establishment of a Parents Olympics in order that the true heros and heroines of our culture can finally get the recognition they deserve.

Although I realize that the possibilities here are infinite, I have chosen 10 events which I think this kind of sports spectacular should include. Each event measures not only physical prowess but mental and emotional stamina as well.

1. The 100 Foot Dash. Parents will have a choice of goals in this event. They will be timed in response to: (a) a baby who has just plugged his finger into an electrical outlet; (b) a toddler who releases the emergency brake while the parent is putting the groceries in the backseat of the car; or (c) a 6-year-old who is hanging from a tree limb by three toes.

2. The Midnight Crawl. This has nothing to do with swimming. The participant will be judged on the time he or she needs to drop to his or her knees and crawl from an unlit room after putting a fussy baby to bed. A 10-minute rocking penalty will be imposed each time the participant hits a creaking floorboard or a jingle toy.

3. The Nose Run. The participant will be judged on the time it takes for him or her to locate the 4-month-old remains of a ham sandwich in the typical teenager's bedroom.

4. The Supermarket Relay. Each contestant is equipped with a grocery list, with all but three items checked off, a grocery cart containing the remaining items on the list, and two whining children. The winner will be the first parent who can locate the three missing items and get through checkout with the least number of superflous items in her cart (i.e., cereal, candy, cookies, and Golden Books).

5. The Readathon. The winner will be the parent who can read without respite the most Dr. Seuss books before stumbling over a word.

6. The Memory Vault. The winner will be the parent who can remember most accurately the content of the average child's two hour monologue.

7. The Tricycle Slalom. The parent will be judged on the speed and style which he or she can push the trike and its protesting occupant from the middle of a busy intersection onto the sidewalk.

8. Arm Wrestling. Parents in evening dress will attempt to kiss their children goodnight before leaving them with the babysitter. The winner will be the parent who gets through the encounter with the fewest jelly stains.

9. The Carpool Free Style. The object of this event is to drive 7 third-graders, all of whom are fighting for a window seat, except the one who is making dirty signs out the back window, to school the fastest with the fewest traffic vilations.

10. The Toy Lob. The winner will be the parent who can pitch the most toys into the closet after the minister or rabbi rings the front doorbell.

I'm open to suggestions concerning the prizes the best good sports should receive, but the traditional medals don't seem adequate in this case. Right now I'm thinking more along the lines of a year's free counseling at the local mental health center.

JOIN THE EASTER PARADE (Part II)

In my last article I mentioned that fine jewelry plays a part in the celebration of Easter. Of course it's used to accent the lovely spring clothing fashions, but, more importantly, it pays tribute to the miracles of nature which bring us precious metals and fine gemstones.

Diamonds are a spring favorite because they catch the light of the sun and reflect it and disperse it in the most beautiful way possible. What better way to announce the return of the sun in springtime after a cloudy winter than to capture the sun's rays with a scintillating diamond.

Emerald and aquamarine are spring favorites because of their appropriate pastel hues. Emerald's finest color imitates that of new grass; aquamarine's prime color resembles the blue of a sunlit mountain lake. Both of these gems are transparent, so they dance and sparkle when light hits them.

Pearls are a spring favorite because of their unique glow which blends so well with any complexion or color of outfit. And the pearl jewelry available this year is very creatively designed. The familiar strand of round beads is a timeless look. A popular variation is the mixture of pearls with colored gemstone beads, such as malachite, lapis lazuli, coral or tiger eye.

As a member of the American Gem Society, I am required to keep up with the latest developments in the jewelry industry so that you, my customers, are protected form inferior merchandise. Please stop by and see our spring line.

Test May Be Near

The situation in Poland is worsening with a strike possible if the government does not fire those responsible for the beating of union members.

It could be that Solidarity is moving rapidly for a direct confrontation with the communist government. How the Polish government would react is not so important as how the Soviet Union, currently holding military maneuvers, would react.

There are few who doubt that the Soviets will invade Poland if the internal situation seems serious enough to become a threat to the communist world. Communism can't abide dissent. Any unraveling anywhere would be a major threat to all communist governments.

So the possibilities of a Soviet military invasion of Poland once again seem strong.

Then comes the question of how the Reagan administration will react. There has been much tough talk in Washington about the Soviet threat, but as in the past, there seems little the United States can do in the event of Soviet military action in Poland. Use of American military force there is out of the question, and military operations elsewhere in the world are remote.

Poland may be a blockbuster of a test of the Reagan administration's foreign policy, and it is a test that may come very soon.

Reagan Decision Accepted

It was inevitable that there would soon be conficts between strong personalities in the Reagan administration.

It happened quickly with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, Jr. when the president put Vice President George Bush in charge of a crisis management team.

The reports were that Haig was upset and possibly considering resigning. However, in an appearance before a congressional subcommittee the secretary of state sought to put the matter behind him and said, "My energies will be dedicated in the period ahead to the substance of American foreign policy."

It appeared that Haig will accept the vice president's new role, although clearly the secretary of state doesn't like it.

REMEMBER---

Fearful Of El Salvador

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Two out of every three "informed Americans" fear that the situation in El Salvador will develop into "another Vietnam," with about equal numbers saying it is "very likely" or "fairly likely" that the United States will become more deeply involved as times goes on.

The Gallup, completed March 15, survey also reveals that only 4 percent of the informed group thinks the U.S. should send troops to help the government of El Salvador. At the same time, however, most in the survey favor other forms of aid, including economic assistance, military supplies, and military advisers.

The United States is officially supporting the current Salvador regime of President Jose Napoleon Duarte, providing both substantial economic aid as well as military supplies and advisers. According to testimony by Secretary of State Alexander Haig on Capitol Hill last week, El Salvador is the second of four countries on a communist "hit list" of Central American nations targeted for subversion.

Survey respondents were first asked whether they had heard or read about the situation in El Salvador and whether they knew which side the U.S. is officially supporting. A total of 63 percent both reported having heard or read about it and were informed about the United States' official position.

The following question was asked of the informed group:

"How likely do you think it is that U.S. involvement in El Salvador could turn into a situation like Vietnam — that is, that the U.S. would become more and more deeply involved as time goes on? Would you say this is very likely, fairly likely, not very likely, or not at all likely?"

Here are the national results:

How Likely Situation Become 'Another Vietnam'?

Very likely	19%
Fairly likely	21
Not very/not at all	21
No opinion	2
TOTAL 'INFORMED'	63
UNINFORMED	37

Those most fearful of a Vietnam-like entanglement are Democrats and independents and persons who say they voted for third-party candidate John Anderson in the November presidential election.

This question was also asked:

"Which of these types of aid (respondents were handed a card with options listed) do you think the U.S. should provide to the government of El Salvador? Mention as many as you want."

Here are the national results based on the informed group:

What Kind Of Aid To El Salvador?

Economic aid	54%
Military advisers	30
Military supplies	41
U.S. troops	4
Don't know/No answer	22

The results reported today are based on 1,363 in-person interviews conducted in over 300 scientifically-selected locations throughout the nation during the period March 13-15. Of these 887 comprise the informed group.

For results based on the total sample, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction. For those based on informed respondents five percentage points should be allowed.

First 50 Years

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — What does a law cost?

Fifty years ago, the average cost of a statute passed by the North Carolina General Assembly was $130. In the last session, the cost was $10,350.

That is only one of dozens of fascinating changes in North Carolina's state and local governments which have taken place over the past 50 years. That information on the cost of a law was produced by Milton S. Heath Jr., a faculty member of the Institute of Government headquartered at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The upcoming fiscal year marks the 50th anniversary of the Institute of Government, and to honor that occasion the staff has produced a valuable addition to the state's history and literature — an anniversary edition of "Popular Government", the quarterly periodical published by the Institute and typically devoted to carefully researched and documented explorations of current state programs or problems of significance.

Changes

As pointed out in the foreword to this special publication, the commemorative issue is "not primarily a recital of the history and achievements of the Institute of Government, such as might be indulged on this occasion.

"It consists instead of a series of articles describing important changes that have occurred in North Carolina state and local government during the Institute's lifetime."

Recorded in detail and in the always readable fashion which has long marked the publication are the patterns of state government organization and function; the shifting roles of governors and legislators; the ever-changing relationships between state, county and municipal officials; exhaustive analyses of population changes and accompanying tax data; the dawning of the age of professional management in government — and on.

There are examinations of criminal law and the revolutionary changes which have swept that field, complete with pictures of the 1930 State Trooper on his motorcycle compared to the modern well-equipped patrolman.

The courts come in for thorough treatment, along with the various agencies and activities of a number of state and local governmental programs.

Not to overlook the Institute itself, Henry W. Lewis devoted himself to producing some "unresearched impressions derived from an affiliation with the subject that began in 1946", as he wrote an article wondering: "Is It The Same Institue?"

From the beginning, Lewis recounts, the Institute has concerned itself with "the law in action" as the real world exists in North Carolina — not as it might exist in a textbook or a laboratory.

Laboratory

Indeed, North Carolina has been the "laboratory" for the Institute of Government as ideas, studies, and analyses have been tested in action.

"This is a large state, with well-defined geographic and economic divisions that produce healthy and useful variety. But, throughout North Carolina's history, seeds of discord and dis-

Our Heart Is Too Big

One of the major reasons the U.S. armed forces are woefully short of every type of military equipment is that we have such a big heart, and we keep giving it away to countries who claim they need it more than we do.

If the U.S. military believes that the new Reagan appropriation requests are going to beef up their forces, they're in for a surprise.

I was at one of the larger fighter aircraft companies, where several Air Force officers were eagerly waiting for the planes to come off the assembly line, when I saw the following scene:

A brand-new fighter came rolling out of the hangar, and one of the U.S. pilots jumped up on the wing.

"What the hell do you think you're doing?" a company foreman said.

"I'm just looking over our new plane."

"That plane doesn't belong to you. The State Department has promised the first 20 to Saudi Arabia."

"When do we get ours?" he said.

The foreman looked over his order list. "After Saudi Arabia, the next 12 go to Chile, 14 have been set aside for Argentina, the following 15 have been allocated for Taiwan, and if we have any left over we're to ship them to South Yemen."

"Wait a minute. We came all the way from the East Coast to pick up these planes. We can't go back empty-handed."

The foreman checked over his list. "What military service did you say you were with?"

"The U.S. Air Force. You know, 'Off we go into the wild blue yonder.'"

"I don't see anything here for the U.S. Air Force. Are you sure you're supposed to get American fighter planes?"

"That was the whole idea of giving the Pentagon more money. Who's in charge around here?"

"There's a fellow from the State Department over there. You might talk to him."

The head of the Air Force delegation went over to a man wearing striped pants and a tailcoat. "How come we're not getting any fighter planes from this plant?"

"What country do you represent?" Striped Pants asked.

"The United States, dummy."

"You don't have to be rude. We have certain priorities when it comes to the allocation of fighter planes. We have to see that our friends get them first."

"I don't get it. I thought the U.S. was trying to play catch-up with the Russians. What are we doing giving all our stuff away?"

"If we don't give the Third World our best planes, the Soviets will start supplying them with MiGs. Therefore, it's in our national interest to see that every country in the Free World gets all the military equipment it asks

I am a student at J. H. Rose High School and a member of the Journalism Department. We are responsible for printing the school newspaper and the program for the annual spring musical. In order to pay for the printing of these items, we must sell ads. This year we have had an extremely hard time selling ads. We would greatly appreciate it if more companies and stores would buy ads to help us out. Selling ads is the only financial aid we have. The paper is free of charge and is distributed every month to everybody in school and to those in the community who order it. The program is also free of charge and is handed out to everyone who attends the play.

The newspaper staff works very hard in printing the paper and would appreciate your help in their efforts.

To the editor:

In 1979-80, our tax dollars went to kill almost 12,000 babies in North Carolina. Many were cut up, while others were chopped, shredded, pickled alive and some even killed through the suction method. Nationwide, almost 1,500,000 babies were killed, one baby every 30 second, 120 abortions each hour, here in America, One Nation Under God.

Right now in Raleigh, the House Base Budget Subcommittee on Human Resources is considering a request from the Department of Human Resources to take more of our tax dollars to kill more babies ($4.4 million to kill babies in 1981-82).

Will you help? Write a letter to Senator White and Rep. Ed Warren asking them to support legislation to remove tax-funded abortions from the budget. Write that letter today! Send your mail to: The Legislative Building, Raleigh, N. C. 27611.

Strength For Today

MAN IS DIFFERENT

The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, the animal kingdom comes and goes. But with man it is not so. Here we are dealing with entirely different beings, and of course what makes men different is the possession of the immortal soul. What is this soul? No one can answer that question, but every religious believer is confident that he and other human beings have souls. Furthermore, he believes that the soul lives on forever.

This in itself gives dignity to the whole of human life. It sets up a goal for us which is worth attaining, a destiny which is in keeping with the designs of God. The conviction that we have souls lies not only at the base of all religion; it lies at the base of all law, of poetry and music. It is the source of human aspiration. It is the thing which keeps us going even when we are inclined to lose heart and give up.

The whole of life is made different as we ponder the awesome truth that we have souls. — Elisha Douglass

Property Underwriting Losses

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The property-casualty insurance industry suffered an underwriting loss of at least $3 billion last year, and investment analysts who cover the industry say the losses may continue for years.

"In fact," says Allen Nadler, who studies the industry for Goldman Sachs, the big securities investment firm, "it is entirely possible that underwriting may never again be profitable."

Big awards by sympathetic juries, increases in the cost of automobile repairs, rising medical bills and inflation in general are among factors helping to spread the red ink across the industry's books.

And yet, some analysts say shares of property-casualty insurers are worthwhile investments. Nadler himself says some "appear to provide good value," especially for periods beyond 18 months.

The reason is suggested by another set of numbers.

Despite underwriting losses, says the Insurance Information Institute, the property-casualty industry last year earned $7.51 billion, up from $6.92 billion in 1979, a one-year gain of $590 million.

The gain, you might have surmised, came in part from the same source of the underwriting loss: It came as a result of inflation and other economic factors that drove up the return on money invested.

Last year the property-casualty people showed a net investment gain of $11.32 billion before taxes, coming mostly from dividends earned on stocks and interest earned on bonds, as well as from capital gains.

Insurance companies have lots of money to invest, and so long as they don't get caught by turns in the market, so long as they manage to ride with the investment tide, they tend to make money on investments.

An item called policyholders' surplus — holdings after liabilities have been deducted from assets — gives an idea of the amounts. Last year it reached $57.4 billion, up $10.5 billion for the year.

After viewing these investment results, you might correctly conclude that the business of insuring was poor, but the business of investing returned rich rewards. And Nadler expects the pattern will continue.

The industry is a good investment, he says, because it is "absolutely necessary for the world's economy." And, he says, it can be expected to continue offering dividend increases, underwriting losses or not.

There are deeper reasons too, connected for example with the up-downs of the underwriting cycle, with inflation, and with what are considered by some analysts to be relatively low price-earnings ratios.

And there are several lessons to be learned and a question to be asked as well, at least by the ordinary person.

First, it would appear, is that numbers aren't always what they seem, not only in insurance but in many industries. Insurers don't hide their numbers, but if you're not careful you might settle on the wrong ones.

There is the obvious lesson that business conditions today are trickier than they might appear, especially with extremes of inflation and interest rates reflecting even serious, deep economic problems.

And there is the question: How long can it all continue?

Bi-Lingual Education A Problem For Germany, Too

By SHELLEY KOFLER
Associated Press Writer

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Erol and Uracik Muhterem, a Turkish husband and wife, put in 10 years of hard work during West German's economic boom. But they also gave the Germans something they hadn't planned on — three children who had to be educated here.

It has created educational problems similar to those involving children of Spanish-speaking parents in some parts of the United States.

"The West Germans closed their eyes to that until around 1973, when they realized they had to educate these children," said Dr. Czyrene Wilpert, an American sociologist who has studied the problem of "guest worker" children here for the past 10 years.

Millions of workers, primarily single men from the poorer Mediterranean lands, flooded into West Germany during its economic heyday in the mid-1960s.

Dr. Wilpert said the West German government expected them to return. But instead the workers used their earnings to send for their wives and children. Most of them could not speak German.

Now, there are some 4.1 million foreigners in this nation of 62.5 million and the West Germans must either educate the children among them or face the possiblity of their contributing to the nation's rising unemployment rate.

In several suburbs of this industrial port city of 1.6 million people, up to 70 percent of primary school classes are made up of guest-worker children, more than half of whom are Turkish.

School officials say that a comparatively higher birth rate among the workers, and their continued efforts to send for other family members will in the mid-1980s make German children a minority in some of their own schools.

In the suburb of Wilhelmsburg where the Muherem's live, a few German parents have already transferred their children to schools with a lower concentration of foreign children.

"Some of the German parents fear their children will not learn as quickly, when they are in class with so many foreigners," said Ursel Brauckmueller, principal at the 500-student school where the Muhterem children attend class.

The language barrier is the biggest hurdle for the guest-worker children, despite the fact that about half of the pupils were born in West Germany, Mrs. Brauckmueller said.

Although a 1976 conference of state ministers of education cited bilingual education of immigrant children as a primary goal, Dr. Wilpert said bilingual education in Germany is "mostly all talk" with little money to back it up.

Unlike the federally mandated bilingual education programs in the United States, West Germany's schools are advised — but not required — to provide instruction in the pupil's native language.

Education of foreign children, therefore, varies within this decentralized country.

At Mrs. Brauckmueller's school, pupils study math, science and other basic subjects in their native language for two years, while taking German as an extra subject. After two years, pupils join their German classmates in regular courses.

Instructors say older children have it tougher. The older the student begins classes in the German system, the more difficult it becomes to master the language, teachers say.

Many children who enroll in German schools after age 10 never earn a high school diploma. Half of the non-German students at Mrs. Brauckmueller's school do not earn a certificate during their nine years of compulsory education.

Educators say chances of foreign students receiving any instruction in their native tongue become more difficult in smaller communities, where it is not financially possible to hire a teacher fluent in less frequently spoken languages for two or three pupils.

Cultural differences between foreign children and their German classmates also pose problems.

Educators must deal with German parents who don't want their children exposed to customs they don't understand. Foreign parents fear their children will become "too German."

"These children come from a different world," said Mrs. Brauckmueller, citing pupils' Moslem religion, a protective attitude of Turkish parents toward girls and parents' inability to speak German.

Educators agree that assimilation would be easier if no more than 20-percent of any class was made up of foreign students. But Hans-Jochaim Swenke, Hamburg's director of foreign student programs, said that goal "is no longer possible."

Swenke rejects busing or the changing school boundary lines as possible solutions to the lopsided distribution of guest worker children in this community, contending these solutions often have failed in the United States.

"Busing would be unpopular with German and Turkish parents, and might incite racial confrontations," said Swenke.

for."

"What are we giving Chile and Argentina planes for?"

"They both have military governments and need them to stay in power. With some countries it's a question of defense, with others it's a matter of prestige."

"What about Taiwan?"

"We've always sent fighter planes to Taiwan. It's an old American tradition."

"Look, fellow, the basis of American foreign policy is to be able to face up to the Russians anywhere, any place. How do we do it if you keep giving away our new military equipment?"

"We're aware of the problem, but no self-respecting military junta will take hand-me-downs. They want only the best military hardware that money can buy. If we gave the U.S. armed forces our newest equipment before we gave it to the Third World, they would be very insulted."

"So where does that leave the U.S. Air Force?"

"I think you'll get yours after Pakistan, or is it Jordan? I know your name came up as a possibility for fighters somewhere along the line."

"Isn't there any way we can get planes before Chile?"

"Colonel, it's absolutely out of the question. Where would we be today if we hadn't given Iran our first-class fighter planes years ago?"

sension have lurked in these regional variations. The Institute has consistently functioned on the premise that a broad perspective enhances the likelihood of sound governmental policies and has tried to bring the solutions as well as the problems of each region to the attention of all," Lewis writes.

Skeptical As To Intelligence Security

By ANDREW WARSHAW
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Lawmakers and several newspapers say they remain skeptical about the security of Britain's scandal-plagued intelligence network despite Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's assurances that a former counter-intelligence chief was not a Soviet spy.

The Conservative prime minister Thursday told a hushed House of Commons that claims that Sir Roger Hollis, former director-general of the MI-5 counter-intelligence agency, was a Soviet "mole" were unfounded.

The allegations were made by veteran British defense reporter Chapman Pincher in a new book, "Their Trade is Treachery," which has been serialized in the independent Daily Mail newspaper.

Hollis, who headed the agency for nine years from 1956 until his retirement in 1965, died in 1973.

Pincher alleges that Hollis was investigated twice and may have been "the most damaging spy in history." Pincher said Hollis never cracked under questioning, but claimed his "answers to questions were regarded as unsatisfactory."

Although admitting that an inquiry into Hollis was carried out, Mrs. Thatcher said Pincher's account of its conclusions was "wrong" and that much of the informaion is his book was "inaccurate and distorted."

The inquiry officially resolved that Hollis "had not been an agent of the Russian intelligence service," she said, adding that she has launched a new probe of the intelligence services.

Laborite Christopher Price said the prime minister's statement "reminds me of nothing so much as Ronald Ziegler, President Nixon's press spokesman, denying there was any substance in the Watergate allegations."

"It's an affront to the British public to suggest that MI-5 can indicate which member of the public is subversive but has difficulty in satisfying itself which of its own senior officers are not foreign agents," said Labor lawmaker Robin Cook.

Even some of Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative colleagues privately expressed displeasure with the prime minister's statement, according to government sources.

The lack of details in her statement and the three days it took to deny Pincher's allegations apparently upset several Conservatives, the sources said.

The Conservative-leaning Daily Telegraph said it was "absurd" to suggest that Mrs. Thatcher's statement "had removed all anxieties about the conduct of the intelligence services" and about "penetration by the agents of a foreign power."

But like most papers, the Telegraph welcomed the announcement that the Security Commission, set up in 1963 after a spy and sex scandal involving then War Minister John Profumo, would now review security measures in Britain's intelligence agencies in the light of the Pincher allegations.

Mrs. Thatcher said the findings of the commission would be made public.

"Let dead men rest," pleaded the pro-Conservative Daily Express, where Pincher once worked.

"If the endless naming of defenseless dead men continue, it can only make the situation far worse," said the Daily Star.

The Daily Mail, which touched off the scandal in its week-long serialization of Pincher's book, said Thatcher's statement did nothing to "dispose of the evidence of major leakages of information from Britain's security services over a period of many years."

Pincher's sensational claims came only 16 months after Mrs. Thatcher admitted in the House of Commons that Anthony Blunt, a former MI-5 operative and Queen Elizabeth II's art adviser, had spied for the Kremlin.

The 67-year-old Pincher stood by his claim that Hollis "may have been" a Soviet agent and challenged Mrs. Thatcher to identify the errors she said the book contained.

Senate Begins Consideration Of $36.4 Billion Budget Cut

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is beginning consideration of a $36.4 billion budget-cutting blueprint with a prediction from Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. that President Reagan will win most of the reductions he has recommended.

Reagan won one and lost one on his economic program Wednesday.

The Senate gave him his first victory on spending cuts by approving a measure to scrap an April 1 boost in dairy subsidies.

But the chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee said the three-year tax cut that the president wants to go along with the budget cuts is all but dead.

Democrats were holding another caucus today prior to action on the Senate floor to continue their three-day review of the cuts approved by the Senate Budget Committee.

"We will have a sort of a consensus package, but it will be presented by separate amendments," Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California said Wednesday.

But he acknowledged that the Democrats' alternate package would "probably be voted down on a party-line" vote by the Republicans, who have a slim majority in the Senate.

Baker's confidence reflected Cranston's pessimism.

"The president is going to get most of what he wants — a high percentage of his package," the GOP leader said.

Baker has said previously he hopes to complete action on the package this week — including a Saturday session, if necessary.

Reagan is recommending $48.6 billion in cuts for the 1982 fiscal year which begins Oct. 1. The package up for floor action is smaller than that because some additional savings are to be made through separate legislation and others through administration actions that don't require congressional action.

The Democrats reportedly have agreed to seek more money than the administration wants for some social programs in the areas of education, health and assistance for low-income families in buying heating fuel.

One of the Budget Committee's proposed cuts that many Democrats and the Reagan administration do not want would save more than $3 billion by financing the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve with private funds.

Sens. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Henry Jackson, D-Wash., have sent letters to all senators urging that the Strategic Petroleum Reserve money be restored.

The bill to scrap the April 1 increase in dairy price supports was due for a vote this afternoon in the House, where Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. predicted "smooth sailing" after the Senate approved it on an 88-5 vote Wednesday.

The administration said eliminating the April 1 increase in dairy subsidies would save the government an estimated $147 million.

Meanwhile, Rep. Daniel Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said the tax-cut bill that emerges from his panel will be smaller than the $54 billion that Reagan wants for 1982, in part to help hold down the deficit. And he said it "would be a one-year bill" rather than a guaranteed three-year cut proposed by Reagan.

some of the slain children and statements by Edmonds' neighbors that he owned a husky;

—Edmonds' alleged victim is a black boy, as have been all the Atlanta victims except for two black girls. Edmonds, too, is black.

But friends, relatives and neighbors of Edmonds said they had seen him almost daily for 18 months and that he had never been to Atlanta.

Meanwhile, Webster said in Washington that he was unable to give a "strong comment" on the Edmonds case. "I can't tell you whether he's been named by us as a suspect," he said.

Collins said he has prevented the FBI from questioning Edmonds in part because there are no federal charges against Edmonds, and as far as he is concerned there is no reason for the FBI to talk to him.

Edmonds was stopped by police around noon last Sunday after officers had reports that a man who had been jogging on the school track grabbed a boy by the ankles and threw him into a big yellow truck.

The Poughkeepsie Journal reported today that Edmonds came to Beacon to look for Catherine DuBois, a nurse at the Fishkill Correctional Facility where Edmonds served a sentence on a weapons conviction.

According to James O'Neil, assistant district attorney in Dutchess County, Edmonds became infatuated with the nurse while in prison and she later filed a harassment complaint against him in 1979.

Investigators said Edmonds sent the boy to knock on the door of the residence of a Madeleine DuBois who lives in a Beacon housing project. Police said the woman told the boy she did not know any Catherine DuBois.

Man Returned On Burglary Charge

A 38-year migratory worker was returned to Pitt County from Florida early today to face charges stemming from the investigation of an Aug. 17, 1980 break-in and assault incident at a rural home.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that he and a Pitt deputy brought Jimmie Lee Dantzler back to Pitt County and charged him with the first degree burglary at the home of Mrs. Eula Heath in the Clay Root community.

Sheriff Tyson, who said further charges are pending against Dantzler, said that Mrs. Heath was severely beaten in the incident, suffering a fractured skull. He added that some $400 in currency was also taken from her home.

The sheriff said that Dantzler, who is originally from West Point, Miss., was working on the farm where Mrs. Heath lived at the time of the incident. Mrs. Heath is 78 years old.

According to Sheriff Tyson, Dantzler was arrested in Leesburg, Fla. by a Lake County deputy sheriff. Dantzler, who waived extradition to Pitt County, is being held here without privilege of bond.

Ghana Civilian Govm't Has Declining Economy

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer

ACCRA, Ghana (AP) — Military police here arrested a young man who, they said, made no secret of the fact he had joined the army to stage a coup that he hoped would make him president of Ghana.

According to Ghanaian politicians and Western diplomats, about 50 soldiers and civilians were arrested with him in early February. They since have been tried and convicted, these sources said. But as coup attempts go in this West African nation of 12 million people, they added, it was not much to get worked up about.

Although a civilian government in office since October 1979 has not been able to do much to redress the country's difficult economic situation, the army, which twice toppled civilian governments and ran the country for 13 of the 24 years since independence in 1957, appears willing to let the politicians wrestle with the steadily declining economy, the informants said.

Others say the army is simply too disorganized to do anything else.

One of President Hilla Limann's first acts after taking office was to set up a commission to study the 12,000-member army. Appeals Court Justice Charles Coosey is expected to issue recommendations in an interim report within two months.

A senior Western diplomat said Limann, a 47-year-old former diplomat, has done "a credible job under the circumstances."

These include an acute shortage of foreign exchange, dwindling cocoa exports — which provide 70 percent of the country's hard currency and 60 percent of government income — and a sort of barter economy called "kalabule" that lives off the smuggling of cocoa, gold and the few local manufactured items plus illegal currency trading in exchange for all kinds of imported goods.

An economics lecturer at the University of Ghana, who asked not to be identified, said statistics on the country's economic health were usually "plucked out of the air." Figures on the annual rate of inflation run anywhere from 35 percent to near 200 percent.

But he said few would argue that the standard of living of the average Ghanaian has declined since the former British Gold Coast colony became the first independent nation in black Africa.

A doctor with seven years in the national health service earns 700 cedis a month. The cedi, a very soft currency, is officially pegged at 2.75 to the dollar. But the black market rate is 10 times that.

A loaf of bread costs 20 cedis, and a bottle of beer, when available, is 12 cedis, the same as the minimum daily wage. Nearly all of life's basic necessities are available only at black market prices.

According to the World Bank, the per capita income is $390 a year.

Limann also quickly retired Flight Lt. Jerry J. Rawlings, the young officer who led non-commissioned colleagues in a June 1979 coup against corruption in the military government.

After ordering the execution of several high-ranking officers and blowing up the Makola market here where much of the black market flourished, Rawlings called for presidential elections among five politial parties. He then handed over power to Limann.

Rawlings, 34, who still enjoys considerable popular support here, now spends much of his time on the university campus where several of his associates teach. He complains of being harassed by police. Students recently stoned a car carrying military intelligence personnel who often follow him.

But both Ghanaians and foreigner observers say civil liberties have mostly been restored, and a 140-member Parliament carries on open debate on a variety of issues. The major daily newspapers, although government-owned, freely criticize public officials and carry articles deemed highly accurate.

As recently as three years ago, Ghana was the world's leading cocoa producer and after the World War II mined 35 percent of the world's gold. Cocoa sources indicated that only 20,000 tons of cocoa have been exported so far this year, compared with a record 565,000 tons in one year in the mid-1960s.

Although production is only a fraction of 1960s levels, gold exports still account for 14 percent to 18 percent of hard currency earnings.

Both the cocoa and gold industries suffer from a lack of capital for new equipment and fertilizer and spare parts as well as poor transportation and communications.

No Policy Change For Enquirer

THANKS FOR THE VERDICT — Smiling Carol Burnett talks with jury foreman Richard Pettit shortly after an 11-member jury ruled the National Enquirer libeled Burnett in a 1976 gossip column. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Carol Burnett says her $1.6 million victory in a libel suit against the National Enquirer "evens the score" and may teach the popular tabloid a lesson, but its editors say they don't plan to change editorial policy.

Miss Burnett, who sat in court throughout the trial, covered her face and began to cry when the jury announced its verdict Thursday.

"If they had given me a dollar plus carfare, I would have been happy," she said. "It was the principle. I feel like I've been pregnant for five years, and the baby is beautiful."

The verdict also cheered other celebrities who have suits pending against the weekly.

"Yippee!" said Jeff Wald, husband-manager of singer Helen Reddy, who is suing the Enquirer.

"I'm delighted for anyone who is attacked by publications like the Enquirer," said "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson, whose televised attack against the Enquirer for an item about his marriage prompted the dismissal of two jurors. Carson said he would not file suit.

The suit, which began in 1976 after the Enquirer reported that Miss Burnett acted boisterously at a Washington restaurant, ended when a jury that deliberated for more than 13 hours awarded Miss Burnett $300,000 in damages and $1.3 million in punitive damages.

The suit originally sought $10 million, but in closing arguments her attorney urged the jury to award the popular entertainer $1.5 million — the Enquirer's estimated net profit for a year.

Enquirer attorney William Masterson said he would file a motion next week for a new trial, reduction of damages and reversal of the verdict. If those motions are denied, he will appeal, he said.

"These were clearly excessive damages," said Masterson. "It's ridiculous — for five lines in a gossip column to take a year's earnings and half of a company's net worth. ... This is the equivalent of capital punishment against a corporation."

"I don't want to see anybody go out of business," Miss Burnett said. "I just want to improve them. This evens the score."

Enquirer President and Editor Iain Calder — who was a defendant in the case until charges against him were dismissed — said the Lantana, Fla.-based tabloid had no plans to change its policy.

"Our job is to provide our readers with interesting, informative and accurate articles," he said. "That is what we will continue to do."

The verdict was unanimous, though only nine of the remaining 11 jurors needed to agree. However, one juror said there had been "a lot of disagreement about the amount of personal damages."

"It was the money factor where we really got heated," said Anthony Brown. "We did get mad at each other while discussing the money."

The case centered on a March 2, 1976, item saying Miss Burnett argued loudly with then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in a Washington restaurant, "traipsed" around offering other diners tastes of her dessert, spilled wine and giggled.

Miss Burnett said the article was inaccurate and implied she was drunk, which she found offensive because her parents were alcoholics.

Her attorney, Ed Bronson, charged the Enquirer had been unable to confirm the story totally before printing it. Masterson said the Enquirer tried to check the story and noted that after publication it had been retracted.

"There are some who may feel some news is more important than others, but under the Supreme Court, news is news," Masterson said.

Miss Burnett declined to speculate on how the verdict might affect the work of other publications. However, she said earlier she felt her biggest triumph was Judge Peter Smith's decision that the Enquirer was a magazine, not a newspaper.

Under California law, a newspaper is not liable for damages if it retracts an item within 21 days of such a demand.

"Now they don't have the legal protection that a newspaper does. That's victory for all of us," Miss Burnett said. "I think the public has a right to know — but to know the truth, not the fibs."

Miss Burnett said she planned to donate her award to charity — "I was told they (the Enquirer) might get a tax deduction so I'll write the check myself." But Bronson warned no money would change hands until appeals are resolved.

Ott Alford Speaker At Meeting

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Superintendent of Pitt County schools Ott Alford spoke to the annual meeting of the Oklahoma Association of School Library Media Specialists on March 20, sharing his strategies with Oklahoma library media specialists.

One of the highlights of the program included a screening of "A Winning Combination," a 16 mm color film made at Pitt County schools. The film, produced by the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction, depicts the role of the chief school administrator as one of support for a quality media program.

While attending the conference, Alford was a guest at the Sequoyah Children's Book Award Luncheon. Over 36,000 students of Oklahoma grades 3-6 annually select their favorite book from a master list of approximately 25 books.

A native of Laurinburg, Alford has served the Pitt County school system for all of his professional career — 28 years.

Joy And A Warning After Carol's Victory

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While Hollywood celebrities showered Carol Burnett with warm words of congratulation at the news of her $1.6 million libel victory against the National Enquirer, one entertainer warned the tabloid to beware.

The warning came Thursday from comedian Johnny Carson, who used his NBC-TV "Tonight Show" last week to blast the Enquirer and its editors as "liars" and to dare the publication to sue him.

"I'm not only delighted for Carol, but I'm delighted for anyone who is attacked by publications like the Enquirer," said Carson, whose own broadside was prompted by an Enquirer report that his marriage was headed for divorce.

"If this does anything, it puts publications like the Enquirer on notice that those of us who are in the public eye have rights."

Carson has not sued the weekly tabloid, but those engaged in litigation against it include his announcer and sidekick, Ed McMahon. Others are Dolly Parton and Jeff Wald, who filed a $30 million suit along with his wife, singer Helen Reddy, when the publication described him as "a madman" and her as "a faded singing star."

"Yippee!" Wald exclaimed at the news of the verdict.

"I think it's an absolute moral victory," he said. "My suit will stand on its own merits. But in my opinion, it's like winning the first battle against Hitler."

Another couple — comedian Marty Ingels and actress Shirley Jones — sued the Enquirer for $20 million, contending it reported she was too drunk to work.

Ingels said he telephoned news of the Burnett verdict to Miss Jones in North Carolina, where she is making a movie, "and it was the first time I ever heard her yelp."

"We are ecstatic, elated, exhilarated and we also feel pretty good," said Ingels. "It was such a clear cut evil, these guys are such bad guys, that it was clearly a question of truth against the system.

"It was such a clear cut case of evil that responsible people were doing things they had no right to do, like Johnny Carson and the governor," he said, referring to Carson's attack and Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s telephone call to wish Miss Burnett well in her suit.

"We're next now," Ingels said, adding, however, that it would probably be at least two years before his case went to trial.

He said the Enquirer had not issued a retraction of the article about him and Miss Jones.

"Our case is 46 times stronger than Carol's," he said, adding he was troubled about one aspect of Miss Burnett's suit, based on a 1976 item which said she was boisterous and argumentative in a Washington restaurant.

"Believe or not, during this entire siege, the circulation of the Enquirer went up," Ingels said. "That just devastated me."

Renovation Is Underway

Renovation work at the Pitt Plaza office of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. here is well underway, according to the bank, with completion expected by mid-year.

J. Reid Hooper, Greenville office executive for Wachovia, reported that approximately 1,000 square feet is being added onto the existing structure, which is located on Greenville Boulevard.

According to Hooper, three additional private offices are included in the expansion program. He noted that construction of three drive-up lanes at the office has already been completed.

Contractor for the construction work is the Charlie Lewis Construction Co. of Greenville, it was noted.

Revival Planned

The Rev. Willie Joyner of Farmville will hold a revival at Antioch Holiness Church Wednesday through April 4, with the service beginning at 7:30 p.m. nightly.

A musicial program will be presented at each service and the the church's junior choir will observe its eighth anniversary at a 6 p.m. service on Saturday.

Antioch Holiness Church also will present the Rev. Blake Phillip of Zion Hill in a special program Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Final Notices

Final correction notices on the Pitt County Revaluation program are due to be mailed April 10, according to officials of the W. P. Ferriss Co.

The notices will give final corrected figures for property values, officials noted.

Pitt County tax officials reminded owners of land being farmed that has been valued at its highest and best use (use other than farmland), to apply for the farm use tax deferment at the Tax Supervisor's Office.

Under the farm use deferment, land may be taxed as farm land, provided it meets certain standards, rather than for its highest and best use value.

The 20th Century Club will meet Sunday at 5:30 p.m. in the home of Douglas Barnhill, 1009 W. Fifth Street.

BRITISH DOUBLE-AGENTS — Reports this week that the former head of the British counter-espionage agency, the late Sir Roger Hollis, second from left, was suspected of being a Soviet agent has raised the ghosts of a line of highly placed traitors who have haunted Britain since World War II. Another British recruit for Soviet spying was Anthony Blunt, left, exposed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in November 1979 as a Soviet agent while serving as Queen Elizabeth's art historian. Guy Burgess, second from right, defected from the British diplomatic service in 1951 and fled to Moscow. Harold "Kim" Philby, right, who had worked closely with U.S. intelligence also fled to Moscow. Ghost Of Past Traitors Have Been Raised By Spy Scandals

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The report this week that the former head of the British counter-espionage agency, the late Sir Roger Hollis, was suspected of being a Soviet agent has raised the ghosts of a line of highly-placed traitors who have haunted Britain since World War II.

The seeds of their treachery were sown nearly 50 years ago in the hallowed cloisters and quadrangles of Britain's two most prestigious universities, Cambridge and Oxford.

Soviet spymasters, seeking recruits among Britons after security authorities rolled up their network of Russian agents in the 1920s, established their first cell in Cambridge in the summer of 1931.

It was made up of a group of brilliant, politically disillusioned young men who became a generation of traitors. These young idealists infiltrated the upper echelons of British Intelligence, then run by the "old boy" network, and the class-conscious governing Establishment.

One, Anthony Blunt, exposed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in November 1979 as a longtime Soviet agent, wormed his way into the royal household as Queen Elizabeth II's art historian.

Moscow took advantage of the young, well-connected undergraduates' bitterness about the collapse of Britain's first Labor government in the economic catastrophe of 1931 and the hunger of 2 million unemployed. For them, the Soviet Union was the socialist panacea and, amid Britain's policy of appeasement, the only hope of combating fascism.

Two key figures emerged. One was Samuel Cahan, the Kremlin's top man in Britain before the war, who spun the web of well-placed agents.

The other was Blunt, a Cambridge tutor who helped Cahan recruit and worked with MI-5, the counter-intelligence agency, during and after the war.

The 1930s recruits included Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean, two members of the diplomatic service who defected in 1951 as British agents were closing in on Maclean. Blunt is believed to have warned Burgess to flee also and to have arranged their escape.

Another was Harold "Kim" Philby, who became a key figure in MI-6, the wide-ranging British secret service, and worked closedly with U.S. Intelligence. He sat out the crackdown following the defection of Burgess and Maclean but fled to Moscow in 1963 after being warned that his cover had been blown.

Burgess died in Moscow. Maclean and Philby are still there.

Blunt, Burgess and Maclean were also linked by their homosexuality.

One of their Oxford contemporaries was the admitted homosexual Tom Driberg, a senior Labor Party official and member of Parliament who died in 1976. Veteran defense reporter Chapman Pincher, who touched off the latest scandal this week with the report that Hollis had been suspected of being a double agent, reported Driberg worked secretly for both the Soviet KGB and MI-5 and and that both knew it.

Hollis was an Oxford man who joined MI-5 before World War II and became its director-general for nine years. There has been no intimation that he was homosexual, but he had an affair for 18 years with his secretary and married her after he retired and divorced his wife. He died in 1973.

Blunt, who some intelligence sources believe was the linchpin in the whole network he helped set up, was uncovered in 1963 after U.S. Intelligence sources identified him as a traitor.

Andrew Boyle, whose book "The Climate of Treason" led to Blunt's public exposure 16 years later, believes that at least two other prominent members of the Cambridge set were Soviet agents during the crucial Cold War period. Boyle claimed both were cornered by British and U.S. security agents in the 1960s but like Blunt were given immunity from prosecution in return for confessions.

Some sources believe there may have been as many as 25 other "moles" who have not yet been identified.

The government has never spelled out exactly what damage the traitors caused, but intelligence circles believe they betrayed a large number of agents. Official sources said Philby compromised scores of operatives around the world during his 30 years as a double agent.

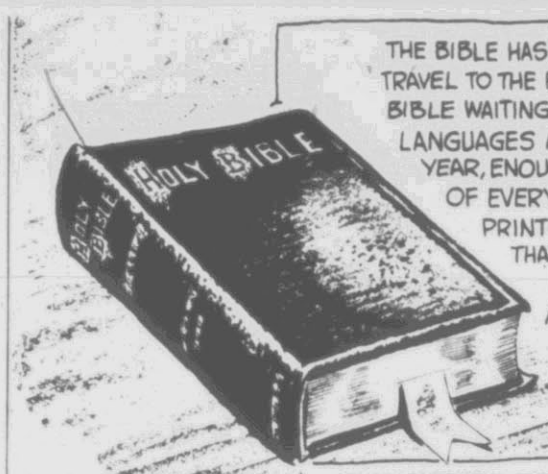
Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI



THE BIBLE HAS BEEN THE WORLD'S "BEST SELLER" FOR MANY YEARS. ONE CAN TRAVEL TO THE FAR CORNERS OF THE EARTH AND STILL FIND A COPY OF THE BIBLE WAITING FOR HIM THERE. IT HAS BEEN TRANSLATED INTO 195 DIFFERENT LANGUAGES AND MILLIONS OF COPIES ARE SOLD EACH YEAR. IN A SINGLE YEAR, ENOUGH COPIES ARE DISTRIBUTED TO AVERAGE 47 FOR EVERY MINUTE OF EVERY HOUR, NIGHT AND DAY. WITH SO MANY EDITIONS AND SO MANY PRINTINGS OF THIS GREAT BOOK, OVER THE YEARS, SMALL WONDER THAT THERE HAVE BEEN OCCASIONAL ERRORS MADE IN ITS PRINTING! HERE ARE A FEW:

THE BREECHES BIBLE: IN 1560 AN EDITION OF THE BIBLE SAID ADAM AND EVE "SEWED FIG LEAVES TOGETHER AND MADE THEMSELVES BREECHES."

THE VINEGAR BIBLE: IN 1717, AN EDITION HAD THE 20TH CHAPTER OF LUKE HEADED AS "THE PARABLE OF THE VINEGAR" INSTEAD OF "VINEYARD."

THE WICKED BIBLE: IN 1631, A PRINTER WAS FINED 300 POUNDS BECAUSE HE LEFT OUT "NOT" IN ONE OF THE TEN COMMANDMENTS SO THAT IT APPEARED IN EXODUS 20:14 "THOU SHALT COMMIT ADULTERY."

THE TREACLE BIBLE: AN EDITION IN 1568 HAD JEREMIAH 8:22 READING "IS THERE NO TREACLE IN GILEAD" INSTEAD OF "BALM".

THE PRINTERS BIBLE: IN 1702 THE 119TH PSALM, VERSE 161, READ: "PRINTERS HAVE PERSECUTED ME WITHOUT CAUSE" INSTEAD OF "PRINCES."

NOTWITHSTANDING THE ERRORS, THE BIBLE, IN THE THOUSANDS OF EDITIONS PUBLISHED AND THE MANY MILLIONS OF COPIES THAT HAVE BEEN DISTRIBUTED, CONTINUES TO BRING TO HUMANITY THE SPIRITUAL AND MORAL VALUES SO NEEDED BY THE WORLD AT LARGE!

NEXT WEEK: WOMEN'S LIB IN THE BIBLE?!!

Call To Serve Simply Runs Out Of Excuses

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — To the casual observer, Joseph G. Quinn was a man who had it made: member of a well-respected family, successful lawyer, federal magistrate, teacher, musician and college trustee.

Quinn has crowded a lot of living into his 30 years. Yet, he had this nagging feeling that something was missing. The answer finally came while recovering in 1979 from hepatitis: give it all up and become a Roman Catholic priest.

"It's been in the back of my mind as long as I can remember. Finally, I just ran out of excuses. There was no parting of the clouds," says Quinn, who begins his four-year study in September at the prestigious North American College in Rome, a graduate school seminary.

"Nothing prompts you to think about your own life better than to be flat on your back. I found out the world moved along without me. When I returned to work, I became serious about investigating the priesthood."

As a lawyer, Quinn's work has been evenly split between his private practice and duties as U.S. magistrate. When named in 1976 at age 25, he was the youngest person ever appointed to a federal magistrate's job — a record he still holds. He will resign as magistrate July 15 and close out his law practice a month later.

Last month, Quinn, a bachelor and one of 12 children, told his parents and other relatives of his decision during a family dinner.

"I was looking at the most effective way to be of service to others," Quinn said. "This is the ultimate form of service to others."

A major influence on that decision, he said, was his uncle, the late Monsignor Joseph Quinn.

"Close exposure to a priest aided me in my decision. Also, he served as a tremendous role model for me," Quinn said. "His death contributed to my realizing a decision."

Once the decision was made, Quinn said the hardest thing for him to do was adjust to the idea of returning to a classroom as a student, although the academic world is not alien to him.

After graduating from the Jesuit-operated University of Scranton in 1972, Quinn became the youngest member ever appointed to its board of trustees.

Leaving that position in 1978, he became board chairman of the Scranton Prepartory School, also run by the Jesuit order. He also has taught at three area colleges, including the University of Scranton.

Describing himself as "an avid musician," Quinn was good enough to play weekends at supperclubs to help pay his way through college and Seton Hall University Law School in South Orange, N.J.

Although not taking a vow of poverty as a diocesan priest, Quinn will give away his library, car, household furnishings and baby grand piano before leaving for Rome.

After being ordained, Quinn will return to the Scranton area with an eye toward working as a parish priest.

"I would want to work as closely with people as I could, which I guess implies a strong desire to work in a parish setting ... to work with people on a one-to-one level," he says.

Roman Catholic officials say Quinn's decision to abandon his law career and become a priest is not unusual and actually represents a return to the way things used to be.

"It's a change in attitude on the part of the church. The church is getting some sense and letting older people back in," says the Rev. William Ferree, director of the Second Career Vocation Project at the University of Dayton in Ohio.

Ferree, recognized by other clerics as an expert in this field, says until the 19th century the church universally used older men as priests.

"In the 19th century, the church changed to youth recruitment for priests but in the 1960s that stopped," Ferree says. He noted the change tied to the youth counter-culture of that time and turmoil over church teaching and litergy in the wake of the Second Vatican Council.

Ferree says there are five seminaries in the United States that specialize in training men leaving a previous profession to become a priest.

He says altogether, there are about 340 seminarians over 40 at these five schools, located in Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Connecticut and Texas.

Disturbed Over Talks

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. Jewish leaders are keenly disturbed by a meeting this week of a high Vatican official with a Palestine Liberation Organization representative, calling the talks an encouragement to terrorism.

The meeting Wednesday was between Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Cassoroli and the head of the PLO's political department, Farouk Kadoumi.

By holding this meeting, "the Vatican has contributed to the legitimatizing of the use of terrorism in international relations," says Maynard I. Wishner, president of the American Jewish Committee.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith says the Vatican in receiving offically the PLO representative gives "these murderers and blackmailers a form of legitimacy and recognition that encorages more barbarism..."

The Vatican says it arranged the meeting to "acquaint itself directly" with PLO views on solving the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Rabbi Henry Siegman, head of the American Jewish Congress, comments, "Can it be possible that in all these years the Vatican has not heard of the PLO's view that the resolution of this conflict lies in the destruction of Israel?" He says the meeting seemed part of an emerging pattern of church actions threatening relations with Jews.

Missionary Day Planned

FARMVILLE — The Missionary Circle of Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church here will observe Missionary Day Sunday at 11 a.m.

Revival Planned

FARMVILLE — Revival services will be held Sunday through Wednesday at 7:30 each evening at Wesley United Methodist Church on the Stantonsburg Road near here.

TOUR OF HERITAGE HOMES
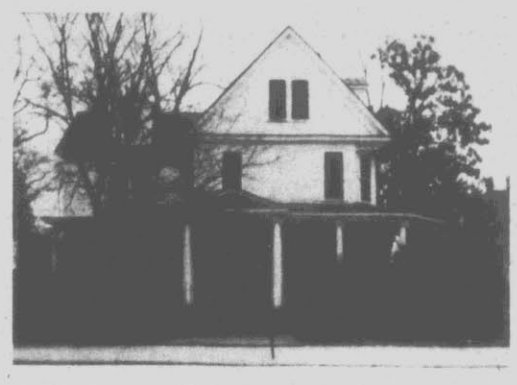
PRESENTED BY THE GREENVILLE AREA PRESERVATION ASSOCIATION



Saturday, April 4
10:00 A.M.-6:00 P.M.
TICKETS $5.00

THE ROBERT LEE HUMBER HOUSE located at 117 W. Fifth St. is a traditional turn of the century historic showplace, built in 1895. The interior details of the house are simply magnificent and have been carefully preserved. The grand staircase is handsomely carved. Superb stained panels in cherry in the attic and pine in the east gable provide a rich dark background for the newly added library. Moldings and cornices are richly detailed. From room to room, ticket holders will be treated to exquisite surprises—the clam shell bookshelves in the walnut paneled library flanking a marble French fireplace, and the fascinating basement under the house which was excavated by Dr. Humber's children as part of a summer family project. Humber was a humanitarian, champion of World Peace, lawyer, politician and the founder of the N.C. Museum of Art. His house has been donated by his heirs to the City of Greenville & County of Pitt & will soon be used for a branch office of the N.C. Division of Archives & History.

THE JUDSON HASSELL BLOUNT HOUSE located at 500 Elizabeth Street is a charming and stately residence, completed between 1933-34 by a prominent Greenville family. The house offers all modern conveniences. Much charm is added by an interesting pineapple and dogwood architectural design which graces the entrance door and above the landing window to the second floor. A chandelier and fireplace illuminate a high ceiling living room next to a Main Hallway. The house is constructed of brick veneer with a slate roof and slate is used on the porches and patio. It is an unusually large (three stories over a finished basement and attic) home with lovely stairs and archways. Just as the house now lends itself to entertainment by the East Carolina University Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, who purchased the home in 1971, the same house was landmark of cultural interest when occupied by the Blounts.

THE HUMBER HOUSE AND THE BLOUNT HOME ARE TWO OF 14 HOMES OF THE HERITAGE TOUR.

Wilder Hurls Pirates Past Fairfield

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Bill Wilder probably breathed a sigh of relief. He had gotten through a game without an error behind him. And he had won.

Thanks to a perfect day by the Pirate defense, some timely hits and good baserunning, and a fine game on the mound by Wilder, East Carolina gained a 4-1 victory over Fairfield.

Wilder, who is now 3-2, saw both of the losses agaist him come through misplays behind him. Even in his last win, there were some bobbles by his defense.

But for the second straight game, the Pirates playeed flawlessly in the field. And Coach Hal Baird liked what he saw.

"This was a well-pitched and well-played game," he said. "No errors? That's two in a row. I'm pleased with the defense. That's the key for us. If we can play solid defense and get good pitching like this, we can win most of them."

Baird didn't quite feel that Wilder was totally on top of the game, however. "He didn't have as good a stuff as he did against N.C. State (a 2-0 win), but he mixed it up well. He lost his rhythm a couple of times, but got back. I think maybe he used his breaking stuff a little too much."

Still, he couldn't complain with the results. Wilder, in going the distance, struck out five, walked just two and gave up only four hits, one of them a freak one. He retired the first eight men he faced before Sean Brophy beat out a slow hopper to second in the third inning.

The lone Fairfield run came in the fourth when Fred Dana hit a solo home run.

Wilder also got into trouble in the seventh, when the Stags loaded the bases with none out. Dana led off with a walk and Al Zappala singled to center. Pete Ciardiello put down what was intended to be a sacrifice bunt, but when Wilder turned to throw to first after fielding the ball, no one was there.

Instead, second baseman Mike Sorrell, who was coming over to cover the base, was writhing in the dirt between first and second.

"Mike came over to cover and collided with the baserunner," rightfielder John Hallow said. "The runner was looking at the play, to make sure the ball was down, and didn't see Mike. He just ran into him and knocked the breath out of him.

"I had come in to back up the play, and if I had realized what was happening in time, I could have covered the base."

But as it turned out, it was the best thing. With the bases loaded, Joe DeVellis grounded back to the mound, and the Pirates got a double play, Wilder to home to first, and a fly out after that ended the inning.

East Carolina got its first run in the first. Kelly Robinette bunted, reaching on an error. He then raced to third when a pickoff attempt was also thrown away. He then scored on Todd Evans' infield out.

The second run came in the third. With two away, Robinette tripled to right center, scoring when Sorrell reached on an error.

The final run came in the eighth. Sorrell led off with a double to left and scored when Mike Sage singled to center.

For Hallow it was a banner day at the plate, as he collected three hits in four trips.

The win boosted the Pirate record to 11-4, while Fairfield fell to 1-4. East Carolina goes on the road for the first time this year today, traveling to William & Mary. They are back home on Saturday at 3 p.m. facing Fairfield one more time.

Sampson AP Player Of Year

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ralph Sampson, 7-foot-4 center who led Virginia to the NCAA Final Four this year, today was named recipient of the Adolph F. Rupp Trophy as The Associated Press' 1980-81 college basketball Player of the Year.

Sampson, a first-team All-American, was only the fourth sophomore to be voted the player of the year by the news service's panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

The others were Mark Aguirre of DePaul last season and two UCLA players, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, then Lew Alcindor, in 1967 and Bill Walton in 1972. Alcindor went on to win the award again in his senior year and Walton won for a second time in his junior year.

Sampson was unable to attend the presentation of the Rupp Trophy, sponsored by the Commonwealth Athletic Club of Kentucky, because of Virginia's travel plans for the NCAA tournament. He and his teammates were scheduled to meet Atlantic Coast Conference rival North Carolina in the semifinals of the tournament on Saturday.

The AP also announced today that Ralph Miller of Oregon State University had been named the college basketball Coach of the Year by the same panel.

Sampson received 26 votes from a nationwide panel of 62 sports writers and broadcasters. Aguirre, a junior forward who probably will turn professional next season, was second with 19½ votes. Brigham Young guard Danny Ainge, a senior, was third with six votes, and Oregon State center Steve Johnson received 4½ votes for fourth. Isiah Thomas of Indiana received three votes. One voter cast a tie ballot between Aguirre and Johnson.

Receiving one vote each in the balloting were Notre Dame forward Kelly Tripucka, Louisiana State forward Durand Macklin and Houston guard Rob Williams.

Sampson averaged 18.4 points per game as the Cavaliers won 28 consecutive ballgames over two seasons before losing 57-56 to Notre Dame on Feb. 22 at Chicago. The winning streak, at the time the longest in the nation, included the Cavaliers' first 23 games of this season.

"He's the most important player in the world of basketball," says North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano. "I mean, there's not another player who will have the same impact on the game because Ralph Sampson is the second coming of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar."

Virginia went into the Final Four with a 28-3 record and ranked No.5 in the nation, thanks in large measure to the awesome Sampson, who developed from a stringbean as a freshman into a true strongman in the middle in his second year of college ball.

Sampson had 22 points and 13 rebounds to help the Cavaliers beat Brigham Young 74-60 and win the NCAA tournament's East Regional title. He has averaged nearly 12 rebounds a game, and he blocked 92 shots this season.

"As much better as Ralph's stats are this year, he is double that much better in everything else," says teammate Jeff Jones, a playmaking guard. "He is consistent, competent, patient. He hasn't blocked as many shots, but he has intimidated everybody."

Sampson probably is best remembered this season for his performance on national television in Virginia's 89-73 victory over highly regarded Ohio State on Jan. 25. Sampson scored a career-high 40 points and grabbed 16 rebounds in that game.

Rooting In A Birdie

Tom Watson roots in a birdie putt on the 17th green on the way to taking the first round lead in the Heritage Golf Classic. Watson shot a five-under par 66. (AP Laserphoto)

Watson Finds Right Stance

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Tom Watson went to the practice tee with some high hopes of turning his game around.

"Golf is a funny game," said the man who has played that game, for the past four seasons, better than anyone else in the world.

"Sometimes a little change, a little adjustment like this is all it takes. It can make everything fall into place again.

"Sometimes it's like a car that isn't running right. You make an adjustment on the carburetor and all of a sudden it's running perfect."

Watson made a little adustment to his hip position in his address during the first round of the $300,000 Sea Pines-Heritage Classic and it helped him to a 5-under-par 66 and the first round lead.

He made the change, he said, standing on the 15th tee at the 6,650 hard Harbour Town Golf Links.

And what, he was asked, was the result?

"Birdie, birdie, birdie," Watson said with a grin.

He needed that burst of three consecutive sub-par holes to take a 1-shot lead over Gil Morgan, who bogeyed the last hole for a 67.

The group at 68, 3 under par on the tight, testing layout on this resort island, included Hale Irwin, twice a winner of this event, former Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller and the current Masters titleholder, Seve Ballesteros of Spain.

Ray Floyd, winner of the last two PGA Tour titles and shooting for a rare third in a row, shot a 69 despite a double-bogey on the 17th hole. Floyd, who insists he's playing "the best golf of my life," came right back with a birdie on the 18th.

"Except for that one hole, I played a real nice round of golf. I'm pleased with it. I felt my score could have been a little bit lower, but I'm very, very pleased with the way I played."

Also at 69 were Jerry Pate, veteran Don January, Buddy Allin, Morris Hatalsky, Gibby Gilbert, Jack Renner, Brad Bryant and Mark O'Meara.

Defending champion Doug Tewell had a 72 in the warm, sunny weather.

Watson, for the past four seasons golf's Player of the Year, was rebounding from his poorest performance since he became the game's outstanding performer. He shot a fat 80, his highest score in five years, and missed the cut in last week's Tournament Players Championship. He has not yet won this season and is far behind his normal pace.

"Obviously, I haven't played well enough to win," Watson said. "I've had a bad set-up. I haven't been comfortable over the ball."

The problem, or at least part of the problem, was in his hip position, Watson said. "I had them too open. On the 15th tee I closed them up a little and have much more freedom in the backswing. I feel more comfortable."

Immediately after making the change, he stroked a nine-iron to 18 inches for birdie on the 15th, used the same club to set up a six-foot birdie putt on the 16th and birdied the 17th from 20 feet.

Until he made the change, however, Watson had to scramble. He one-putted 13 times in the round.

"I'm still putting well, still scrambling well, still scoring well," he said.

"Maybe the change will help. Maybe that's the trouble. I won't really know for sure until I work on it for a while."

No Fairy Tale For Martina

NEW YORK (AP) — This week's $300,000 Avon Women's Tennis Championships may be the story of Martina Navratilova and the Seven Unknowns, but the two-time Wimbledon champion says it might be a fairy tale that her veteran status is an advantage.

Navratilova said Thursday night after defeating Leslie Allen 6-3, 6-0 that the fact she's the only one of the eight players who has played in the winter tour finale before "is quite a phenomenon, especially for women's tennis."

"The old names like Chris Evert, Tracy Austin and Billie Jean King are either not playing or half-retired, and there's fresh blood coming in," said Navratilova, who clinched a berth in the semifinals with the victory. "I don't know if it's an advantage to me or not. My first time (in the Virginia Slims finals in 1974) I was so happy to be there that I played great."

Fifteen-year-old Andrea Jaeger also raised her record to 2-0 and advanced to Saturday's semifinals with an easy 6-2, 6-3 victory over West Germany's Sylvia Hanika.

In the loser's bracket of the double-elimination tournament, Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia eliminated Pam Shriver 6-2, 7-6 and Bettina Bunge of West Germany ousted Barbara Potter 6-3, 6-2.

Mandlikova plays Hanika and Allen faces Bunge in tonight's matches, with the winners advancing to the semifinals.

Despite her veteran status here, Navratilova said she still had to fight off nervousness in her first two matches.

"I was much looser tonight," she said. "I was still nervous, but not about my play. Just being in the Garden and the people is enough to make you a little nervous."

Allen, the first black woman to win a tennis title against world-class players since Althea Gibson 23 years ago, upset the third-seeded Mandlikova on Wednesday. But she never threatened the top-seeded Navratilova, who never lost her serve and won the last seven games of the match.

"How can I not be confident?" Navratilova asked. "I'm playing well. I didn't miss any easy shots. And Leslie wasn't on her game and didn't help herself."

Jaeger, practically error-free from the baseline, also held her serve throughout her match with Hanika.

"My strategy was not to miss," said the precocious Jaeger, and she carried out that plan flawlessly, frustrating Hanika to the point where the 21-year-old West German did not win a point in the last two games.

"I wanted to make her try to beat me. If I keep hitting the ball back and she hits winners, then she deserves to win," Jaeger said.

"For me it's boring to play her," said Hanika. "She doesn't do anything but hit the ball back all the time."

Oregon State's Ralph Miller Is Named AP Coach Of The Year

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ralph Miller, who turned his passing game into a winning game at Oregon State University, today was named The Associated Press' 1980-81 college basketball Coach of the Year.

Miller received 26 votes from a nationwide panel of 62 sports writers and broadcasters. Dale Brown of Louisiana State was second with 12 votes, and Ray Meyer of DePaul received six votes for third. Bobby Knight of Indiana had four votes, one more than both Gene Bartow of Alabama-Birmingham and Tom Davis of Boston College.

Eight other coaches received one vote. They were Terry Holland of Virginia, Dean Smith of North Carolina, Ned Wulk of Arizona State, Boyd Grant of Fresno State, Don Monson of Idaho, Jack Hartman of Kansas State, Jim Lynam of St. Joseph's, Pa., and Jerry Pimm of Utah.

Miller was to receive his honor at a reception here today, the day before the start of the 1981 NCAA tournament Final Four.

At the same time, it was announced that Virginia's Ralph Sampson had been voted the college Player of the Year by the news service and will receive the Adolph F. Rupp Trophy from the Commonwealth Athletic Club of Kentucky.

Miller, 62, the third winningest active coach in college basketball, guided the Beavers to a No.1 ranking until they lost their last game of the season March 7 at home to Arizona State, 87-67.

The Beavers, however, already had clinched their second straight Pacific 10 Conference title, the first of which broke a 13-year UCLA stranglehold on the league championship.

The Beavers were ranked second in the final AP poll, released just before the NCAA playoffs. Oregon State lost 50-48 to Kansas State on a last-second shot by Rolando Blackman in the second round of the tournament, thus ending the most successful season ever for an Oregon State basketball team.

The Beavers finished 26-2, giving Miller 512 career victories against 293 losses in his 30 years as a college coach and ranking him behind just two other active coaches, Ray Meyer of DePaul and Marv Harshman of Washington.

Recruiting almost exclusively in Oregon, Miller has taught a game of quick, crisp passing that earned his team a 56.7 field goal percentage mark, best in the country and half a point under Missouri's NCAA season record set last year.

"The pass is our weapon of attack," Miller says. "We are the best passing team in the country, or at least one of them. The kind of shots we get are the ones we want."

Miller began his major college coaching career in 1952 with Wichita State, compiling a 220-133 mark in 13 years. He spent his next six seasons at Iowa, where he recorded a 95-51 record.

Miller is one of few men to be named coach of the year in three conferences. He was named Missouri Valley Conference coach of the year in 1954 and 1964. He earned the same honor in the Big Ten in 1968 and 1970. He was Pacific 8 Conference coach of the year in 1975.

"My teams have always been noted for their passing, fullcourt pressure and defense," Miller says. "I've been playing the same game since 1948."

Bradley Leads Lady Kemper

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — The nicest part about her round in the $175,00 Kemper Open women's golf tournament, Pat Bradley said, was finishing it.

"I'm just glad to be off of that course," Bradley said Thursday after shooting a 71 that gave her the lead in the wind-ravaged first round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

Her par round over the 6,134-yard, par 36-35—71 Mesa Verde Country Club course gave her a one-stroke lead over Joyce Kazmierski as chilly winds gusting to 45 mph sent scores soaring.

"These are the worst conditions we've played in all year," said Bradley, seeking her first LPGA victory of 1981. "The wind made a three-club difference in distance on the holes that were going into the wind."

Kazmierski, who has yet to win in 13 years on the tour, said: "There were even difficulties on the green because the wind would move the ball. I was afraid to ground the club for fear of picking up a penalty stroke.

"The gusts were just incredible."

The gusts took their toll, as 78 of the 127 players shot 80 or above.

Judy Rankin, Karolyn Kertzman, Donna Davis, Lori Garbacz and Beverly Klass all withdrew, with Klass walking off the course after she hit two balls into the water on her ninth hole of play.

Hollis Stacy was alone in third with a 74, while defending champion Nancy Lopez-Melton and JoAnne Carner were in a group of eight at 75. Also in the group were Jan Stephenson, Jane Blalock, Sandra Palmer, Sandra Haynie, Alice Ritzman and Mary Dwyer.

Beth Daniel, the 1980 LPGA Player of the Year, struggled to her worst round in memory, an 81, and Sally Little fared even worst, carding an 82.

Among the other prominent names who were baffled by the wind were Donna Caponi, last week's winner at Las Vegas, U.S. Open champion Amy Alcott, and JoAnn Washam, all of whom had 79s.

Cowboys' Cole Set To Retire

DALLAS (AP) — Larry Cole, the touchdown-scoring defensive lineman of the Dallas Cowboys, will announce his retirement from pro football at a news conference Friday.

Cole, 35, informed Cowboys coach Tom Landry of his decision earlier in the week. The 6-4, 250-pound veteran has been with the Cowboys for 13 seasons.

Cole came to the Cowboys in 1968 as a 16th-round draft choice out of the University of Hawaii. He went on to play in 26 playoff games, a National Football League record, played in five Super Bowls and scored four touchdowns — all against the Washington Redskins.

Jamesville Rolls, 10-7

Bath regained the lead in the fifth with two runs but the Bullets took the lad for good with three runs in the sixth. Jamesville, which withstood 10 errors to win, added an insurance run in the seventh.

Kim Floyd led the Bullets with three hits in four at bats and drove in two runs. Tammy Williams went two for three with an RBI and Hardison and Deanne Spence both were two for four.

Brzezinski Says Soviets Seek Destablize Poland

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is deliberately trying to destabilize Poland to prevent reform and bring hardline elements to power there, according to Zbigniew Brzezinski, the former U.S. national security adviser.

"It is quite evident that the Soviets are engaged in provocations executed by the secret police in Poland designed to destabilize any compromise between the government and the trade unions," he said in an interview Thursday.

Calling the strategy "a profoundly dangerous miscalculation," he said it could spark massive violence which then would give the Soviets an excuse for military intervention.

However, Brzezinski said, the Soviets' apparent aim now is to halt liberalization, rather than to set a pretext for using force to take control of the country.

"They want to prevent reform, to bring to power hardline elements who would engage in suppression, the calculation being that this can be done largely through domestic or internal means," former President Carter's adviser said.

"My concern is that this is a profoundly dangerous miscalculation which could contribute to a very volatile situation which everyone should desire to avoid.

"I believe that a Soviet intervention in Poland would set back the evolution of international politics towards more constructive relationships by many, many years.

"You could also generate more significant consequences in terms of defense spending, East-West relations, relations with China, and so forth."

Any use of Soviet forces in central Europe "is bound to have profound consequences, including those in the strategic realm," Brzezinski said.

Interviewed in his office at Georgetown University's strategic institute, Brzezinski disagreed with President Reagan's shuffling of his foreign policy advisers and said the flap over the role of Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. confuses other countries.

He said Haig — and not Vice President George Bush — should be in charge of managing overseas crises.

"The crisis manager should be someone who is deeply engaged in the operational aspects of foreign policy because you cannot divorce crises from ongoing decision-making," he said.

Brzezinski said he played that role under Carter.

When presidents are deeply involved in foreign affairs on a daily basis, the crisis manager should be the national security adviser, he said.

That was the case, he said, under Carter, Richard M. Nixon, John F. Kennedy and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

However, Brzezinski said, Reagan is not "an activist," and like former Presidents Ford and Eisenhower, should have his secretary of state manage crises.

Reagan has assigned that role to Bush, causing Haig to complain publicly and, according to some accounts, consider resigning.

Brzezinski, discussing the feud, came down on Haig's side.

"I do not feel that the crisis manager can be someone who is not engaged operationally in the day-to-day decisions that have to be made," he said.

"If the president is a dominant figure in foreign policy, the national security adviser should be the crisis manager. If the dominant role has been delegated to the secretary of state, as appears to have been the case with Secretary Haig, then the secretary of state should be the crisis manager."

While reserving a judgment on Reagan's foreign policy decisions, Brzezinski said the disagreement is unfortunate, particularly with events coming to a boil in Poland.

"I think it's important for all nations to feel that the United States will act firmly, decisvely and intelligenty in the event of a crisis," Brzezinski said.

"The flap probably has made for some confusion as to how decisions might be made."

Former Advisor Opines Haig Is Due Crisis Role

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Zbigniew Brzezinski says President Reagan should leave Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in charge of foreign policy crises.

Reshuffling his advisers and putting Vice President George Bush in charge is a mistake that tends to confuse other governments, Brzezinski said in an interview.

Here, in question-and-answer form, is the text of the interview Thursday with former President Carter's national security adviser in his office at the Georgetown University strategic institute:

Q. What is your reaction to the flap Secretary of State Haig finds himself in?

A. My reaction is a very simple one. If the president is an activist president, deeply engaged in foreign affairs on a daily basis, the way Carter, Nixon, Kennedy and Roosevelt were, then the crisis manager should clearly be the national security adviser.

I was the crisis manager because President Carter was deeply engaged.

If the president is more in the tradition of Presidents Ford and Eisenhower, then I think the secretary of state should be the crisis manager.

In any case, the crisis manager should be someone who is deeply engaged in the operational aspects of foreign policy because you cannot divorce crises from ongoing decision-making.

For example: the situation in Poland. Is it right now a crisis or is it not? And if it becomes a crisis this coming weekend or week, then how do you relate the response to a crisis to the very many decisions that earlier were made, presumably by the secretary of state?

Q. Your two possibilities don't leave room for the vice president being the crisis manager?

A. I do not feel that the crisis manager can be someone who is not engaged operationally in the day-to-day decisions that have to be made, nor is engaged in the supervision of the implementation of the decisions that have been made.

You cannot divorce crises from the larger issues of foreign policy. Therefore, if the president is a dominant figure in foreign policy, the national security adviser should be the crisis manager.

If the dominant role has been delegated to the secretary of state, as appears to have been the case with Secretary Haig, then the secretary of state should be the crisis manager.

It depends very much on the nature of presidential leadership.

If the president is dominant and active, he tends himself to make authoritative comments on foreign policy. Carter was along those lines.

Whenever I spoke, I spoke with his authority and with his endorsement.

If the president is not actively involved, then clearly the secretary of state is the No. 1 voice, and his interpretations are the authoritative ones.

Q. A lot has been written about you and Secretary of State Vance being in conflict. Did you get along in policy and in a personality way?

A. We got along personally very well. We got along on most foreign policy issues.

We disagreed on two issues — namely how to deal with Iran and how to handle the very complicated U.S.-Soviet relationship.

Q. What's your appraisal of Reagan's foreign policy so far?

A. I think it's too early to judge.

The flap over crisis management has been unfortunate in a larger national sense. I think it's important for all nations to feel that the United States will act firmly, decisively and intelligently in the event of a crisis.

The flap probably has made for some confusion as to how decisions might be made.

At the present moment, it seems to me that the basic strategic decisions regarding the Middle East, regarding China, regarding SALT and the U.S.-Soviet relationship have not yet been made.

I have the impression that this administration is being very deliberate in the formulation of its policies, but is also being somewhat slow.

Events do move forward, and one cannot always afford the luxury simply of deliberation and reflection.

Q. Is this a mild criticism?

A. It's an expression of concern. I do not think much time is left for some clearer sense of direction to emerge on such issues as U.S.-Soviet relations, or China, or the Middle East, etc.

Mayor Victim Of Own Policy

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch has become a casualty in his own war against illegal parkers in midtown Manhattan, but the outspoken Koch says he'll fight the parking ticket slapped on his official car.

"I am not peeved. I'm not annoyed," the mayor said Thursday at City Hall. "I simply cry out for justice."

Koch said his driver told him a traffic enforcement agent wrote out a ticket for the mayor's blue Chrysler, which was parked in a no-parking zone while the mayor was paying a courtesy call on a foreign visitor at the Plaza Hotel.

He said the agent ignored a "richy limousine" parked in front of his car and a unmarked police car parked behind.

Koch said his car is an official police vehicle. He said his driver showed the agent a windshield plaque allowing the vehicle to be in the no-parking zone.

A week ago Koch announced a crackdown on motorists who double park or park in no-standing zones in the busy midtown area.

Hunt Says Time Poor For N.C. Bond Vote

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt warned legislators Thursday not to put a proposed $600 million school bond referendum on the ballot this year because economic conditions could force voters to reject it.

"I favor a school bond issue, but I wouldn't want it passed by the General Assembly unless the economy was reasonably normal and it had a chance of being considered favorably," Hunt said.

Hunt made his remarks during a speech to the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners in Raleigh.

A bill to hold the referendum on Nov. 30 is pending in a legislative joint finance committee. Some educators have called for the bond referendum as soon as possible.

"My own opinion is we should get on with it," said A. Craig Phillips, secretary of public instruction. "We should lay it out for the people in November, and if they don't want the state to borrow the money, they'll say so."

Phillips said in an interview that if the voters were informed of school needs, they would support the bonds. He said the Legislature could put the bond issue on the ballot but leave Hunt the power to set the election date.

The school bond issue, which the state estimates would cost $717 million with a 9 percent interest rate, would be used for construction and renovation.

Each county would receive $750,000 for building new schools or renovating old ones. The remaining $523.5 million would be divided among the state's 144 school systems on the basis of enrollment.

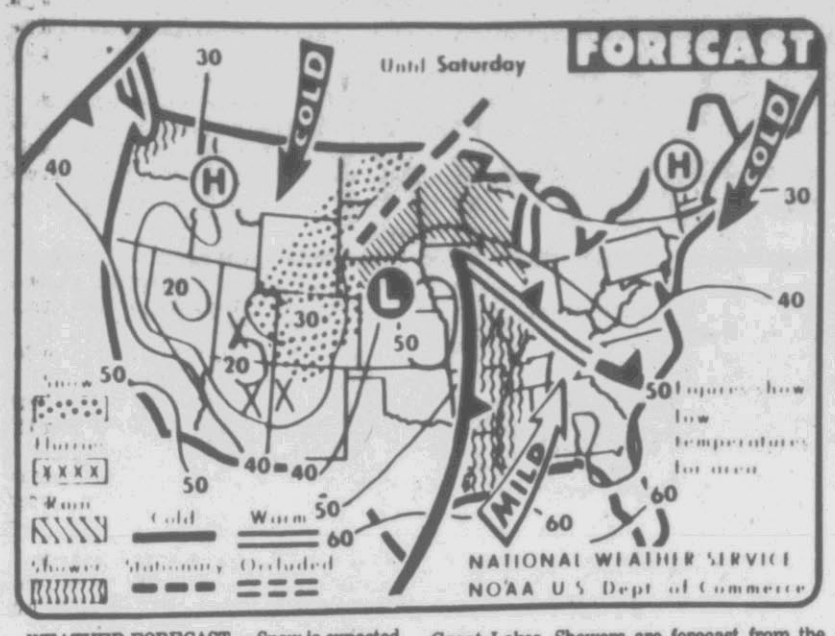
How's The Weather?



WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is expected in the forecast period until Saturday morning from the western to the northern Plains. Rain is due from the eastern Plains to the upper Great Lakes. Showers are forecast from the western Gulf to the Midwest. Mild weather in the Southeast and cold weather is due for most regions. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A gentle south wind pattern is driving North Carolina weather mild, according to the National Weather Service.

Temperatures have been creeping up each day for the past several days and it looks as if this trend will continue into the weekend.

High pressure drifted off the coast late Thursday. This set up a gentle south and southwest wind pattern across the region Thursday and Thursday night.

Under a generally sunny sky, temperatures ranged mostly in the upper 60s with the exception of some 50s along the northern coast and northern mountains.

The warmest reported value was the 71 at Wilmington. The coolest was the 54 at Cape Hatteras.

Overnight, temperatures continued rather mild with the early morning readings in the 40s and low 50s.

Southwest breezes continued through the night in response to high pressure offshore and out ahead of a cold front that is progressing southeast from western New York to southern Missouri.

This front will drift down across North Carolina tonight then retreat northward as a warm front on Saturday.

The forecast calls for mild spring days this weekend. Some cloudiness will be in evidence today, mainly over the north portion.

And there is a slight possibility of a few showers over the northeast portion of the state this afternoon as a cold front slides southward into the north portion by nightfall.

High temperatures will range mostly in the upper 60s and low 70s with slightly cooler readings in the northern mountains and along the immediate coast. The 70s will be fairly common to the area over the weekend.

Winds along the coast will be southwest increasing to 10 to 20 mph and becoming more westerly during the afternoon.

Winds will shift to the north and northeast down the coast tonight and on Saturday as a cold front moves southward and high pressure over the Great Lakes moves to the New England states on Saturday.

Jane Doe's Memories Stirred

PEMBROKE PINES, Fla. (AP) — With a shy, awkward "I'm pleased to meet you," an amnesia victim called Jane Doe has been reunited with her family after seven years' separation.

She still does not recognize them, and she isn't quite ready to wholeheartedly adopt her real name, but a family photo album sparked a recollection of her pet dogs and some other "little things" about her past.

"Only in the annals of movie script-writing do we anticipate there will be...instant recognition," said Dr. Jessie Kaye, a psychiatrist at South Florida State Hospital. "It only happens in storybooks."

It didn't happen here.

Hospital spokeswoman Jackie Dale, who was at the reunion, said Cheryl Ann Tomiczek said to her father, mother and brother, "I'm very happy that you came. I'm pleased to meet you."

Her brother Robert, 32, said that during the meeting, "She was studying us while we were trying to study her. We had to break the ice at the beginning. Finally, everybody seemed to relax."

Her father, Andrew, broke down during the meeting with his 34-year-old daughter and was given medication, hospital officials said. He did not appear at a subsequent news conference.

Her mother, Irene, said her daughter — found last September naked and near starvation by a ranger patrolling a wooded area in Birch State Park in Fort Lauderdale — did not recognize her family members but did remember "little things" about the family's past after being shown a photo album.

"I'm very happy. I assured her how much we love her. We discussed many things about the dogs she used to have when she was a little girl," said Mrs. Tomiczek, of Roselle, Ill.

"There is no doubt that Jane Doe is Cheryl Ann Tomiczek," said Kaye. "The police are content with the identification and so am I."

Miss Tomiczek seemed calm at the news conference. She said she is not ready to take the name Cheryl Tomiczek, and for the time being will hold on to "Jane," the name she was given by officials after being found in the park.

"I think 'Jane' is nice," she said. "I'm kind of used to that." She said she put "Cheryl" "in a storage place in my mind."

Family members said they had last heard from Miss Tomiczek seven years ago, and they were unable to cast any light on the mysterious circumstances of her amnesia.

A man who said he had been living with Miss Tomiczek in Fort Lauderdale for the last several years told police earlier this week that they had been having problems, and that when she disappeared, he assumed she had moved away.

The hospital and police agencies received thousands of calls from people claiming they knew the woman after her story was made public. But officials narrowed the list to the Tomiczeks after the woman revealed details of her childhood while being treated with a "truth serum" drug.

Robert Tomiczek said there were no particular family problems when Cheryl disappeared.

"We're a family. They've got their problems like everybody else. She was like a bird leaving the nest. Everybody's got to fly," he said.

For the time being, he said, his sister will remain at the hospital.

Now that Miss Tomiczek is aware of her true identity, Kaye said, the prognosis for a complete recovery is excellent. "In this saga we expect to have a very happy conclusion for all parties," he said.

Fund Campaign Is Conducted

ECU News Bureau

A recent telephone fund raising campaign, conducted in the Tidewater area by ECU alumni, will help purchase band uniforms and support scholarships, says Richard Robins, director of annual support at ECU.

"During our four days of telephoning we received pledges from 305 alumni, totaling $7,142.50. We're delighted with the generosity shown by our friends in this area," he said.

A similar "telefund" effort in the Tidewater area last year yielded 254 donors who gave $5,520.

To Investigate Plant Plaints

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission plans to investigate a nuclear technician's complaints about leaks and other problems at a Brunswick County nuclear plant, an NRC official said Thursday.

The NRC wants to talk with an anonymous employee who told Wilmington reporters about technical problems at the Carolina Power & Light plant, said Ken Clark, public information officer for the NRC's Atlanta office.

The employee said the area where he works is filthy and is operated by temporary equipment that doesn't work. He also said radioactive wastewater is leaking at the plant.

The worker asked not to be identified, saying he would be fired if company offficials knew who was making the complaints.

Aaron Padgett, assistant to the general manager of the Brunswick plant, acknowledged earlier this week that workmen were unable to find the source of a small leak at the plant.

Clark said it was unusual for a small leak at the plant to continue for several months, as Padgett had indicated.

The plant employee, who said he is an auxiliary plant operator, told reporters for television station WWAY in Wilmington that he works in the "RAD" waste area where radioactive wastewater is handled before it is stored or shipped out.

The NRC would like to talk privately with the auxiliary nuclear operator about complaints concerning the "RAD" waste area, Clark said.

"He would remain anonymous with us also," said Clark. "He would not have to get in touch with plant management or with the resident inspectors."

The NRC will call the television station and try to get in contact with the station's source, he added.

Padgett said that officials are "90 percent certain" that the leak is coming from a pool of spent fuel cooling water contained in a storage area inside the reactor building. But the leak could come from one of several areas, he said.

He compared the leak to a slow-dripping faucet and said it is very small.

The water is of a "very low" radioactive level, he said.

"There are no safety implications from this leak," said Padgett.

Although there may be no safety problem, a longterm leak is unusual, according to Clark.

Clark said, "It is not routine for a leak to go on like that for several months. But it would be inaccurate to say they have not been doing anything about it. Obviously they have been working on it."

Padgett, who until recently was director of nuclear safety and quality assurance at the plant, said a "continual housekeeping problem" exists in the "RAD" waste area, the subject of the employee's complaints.

But "there is a whole contingent of people who clean up all the time," he added.

Talk Show Fantasy Returning

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Allen's marvelous, strange fantasy of a talk show, "Meeting of Minds," returns for its fourth season on PBS with what may be the liveliest demonstration of Allen's considerable talents yet to appear on this series, one of public television's best.

"Meeting of Minds" is a sort of electronic Steve Allen resume, a showcase display of the man's singular comedic and intellectual capacities as well as his rare working knowledge of the medium. Allen may no longer be in vogue with the commercial networks' Nielsen families, but he absolutely shines here.

"Meeting of Minds" is a sort of dream "Dick Cavett Show," a talk show featuring the great personalities of history — Cleopatra, Leonardo da Vinci pop in for a 30-minute chat, as real and casual as you please. Allen dreams up some questions he'd liked to have asked the great ones, and then asks them. They answer according to Allen's thoroughly researched script.

The amazing thing about this show is that it actually comes off as a talk show, with a talk show's rhythm and pace. A truly conversational script is a tough trick to turn; Allen turns it with apparent ease.

If you haven't seen "Meeting of Minds," Sunday night's season premiere is a good entre. Allen's guests are Catherine the Great, Oliver Cromwell and Irish patriot Daniel O'Connell.

It's an intriguing combination. O'Connell and Cromwell are what baseball folk would call "don't invite-'ems," Cromwell being the perpetrator of heinous crimes against Ireland during his "protectorship" of Great Britain.

Just as Cromwell and O'Connell reach the incendiary point, Allen brings in Empress Catherine, and gets right to the point. Did she really have 10,000 lovers? And her death, did it really have something to do with, er, bestiality?

With astonishing dexterity, the conversation slides from gossip to philosophy to politics, managing along the way to lay down a historical foundation that allows perspective.

This is good television, and, Allen being Allen, it is also fun television. And not one guest is there to peddle a diet book.

Fred Silverman is in good spirits these days, apparently buoyed by his new boss's assurance that he, Silverman, will remain in charge of NBC at least until this summer.

It had been speculated by some that Silverman would be out by the time Thornton Bradshaw officially became chairman of the board of RCA, NBC's parent company. The rumors picked up when Bradshaw hedged on Silverman's status while talking to reporters a couple of weeks ago.

The ensuing stir prompted Bradshaw to say that Silverman would still be NBC President in July, when Bradshaw takes office.

The next week, at a St. Patrick's Day address to Savannah's Hibernian Society, Silverman joked about his rumored ouster, saying: "I want to assure all of you here that I'm not concerned. I talked to the NBC psychic this morning — who was formerly the ABC psychic — and she promised me that come July, my problems will be solved.

"I'll have the exclusive Chrysler dealership in downtown Tehran."

A cute rendering of a favorite Silverman joke. Still, rumors persist about the NBC president and his supposed successors at the woebegone network.

They include NBC executive Robert Mulholland, ABC News and Sports chief Roone Arledge, and a new candidate, Red Adair, who caps burning oil wells.

Monday Night Is Oscar Time

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The ballots are in, the limousines are being polished and movie lovers are expecting the best as the night draws near for the biggest celebrity ritual of them all.

It's Oscar time again for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

The show — the 53rd annual awards ceremony — begins at 10 p.m. EST Monday, an hour later than last year. Academy spokesman Art Sarno said the 1980 ceremony started early as an experiment to capture more of the East Coast audience, which tends to tune out by the time a 10 p.m. telecast ends about 1 a.m.

"What happened (last year) was that the ratings improved in the East but went down in the West, so there was no real gain," Sarno said.

It could be a vintage year for Oscar watching, whether viewers plan to get up at dawn to grab a seat on the bleachers outside the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion at the Music Center here or just sit in front of the family television for the ABC telecast.

An estimated 300 million viewers in the United States and 65 other nations are expected to watch the show.

More than 30 Hollywood personalities — from Alan Arkin to Franco Zeffirelli — are slated to present gold statuettes in 20 categories, one fewer than last year. (The best adapted film score category was canceled this year because of a lack of qualified candidates.)

Even President Reagan will make an appearance, in a taped segment.

In keeping with its theme, "Film Is Forever," the three hour-plus show will open with a special production number featuring Lucie Arnaz and a montage of great moments in film including Marlon Brando's anguished "I coulda been a contender" speech in "On the Waterfront" and Humphrey Bogart's farewell to Ingrid Bergman in "Casablanca."

Clips from a record 155 films are to be shown.

The Best Song award will be presented by tenor Luciano Pavarotti, who will sing "Torna a Surriento" ("Return to Sorreto"). And President Reagan, a former actor, will become the first U.S. president to participate in an Oscar. He will appear in a segment taped at the White House March 5.

Charge White House 'Entry'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Secret Service has charged a 25-year-old woman with unlawful entry after she climbed over a White House fence.

Spokesman James Boyle said Antoinette Alicia James, for whom the Secret Service has no address, was arrested immediately after she climbed the fence near East Executive Avenue. The woman was unarmed, Boyle said.

Contractor Is Given 90 Days

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge sentenced a Fayetteville contractor to 90 days in jail Thursday for paving a state highway official's driveway in exchange for confidential highway bid estimates.

W. W. Crowell, 60, pleaded guilty in to influence peddling in a plea bargain which includes testifying against a the the former Department of Transportation official.

Crowell, who could have been sentenced to 10 years in prison, refused comment after court adjourned.

In the plea bargin, Crowell agreed to testify for the state at the trial of James Preston Allen, who has been charged with giving Crowell highway bid estimates in exchange for Crowell paving his Allen's driveway.

Allen was suspended in January from his job as a proposal and contract project engineer for DOT. His trial is set for Wake Superior Court on April 13.

"Mr. Crowell has been instrumental thus far and will continue to be in the prosecution of Mr. Allen," J. Randolph Riley, Wake District Attorney, told Superior Court Judge Samuel E. Britt of Lumberton.

State Bureau of Investigation agent William Dowdy testified Thursday that Allen gave Crowell information on highway bid estimates both before and after Allen's driveway was paved in August 1978.

About a month after the driveway was paved, Crowell gave Allen $1,810 om cash — the alleged cost of the job, Dowdy said. Afterwards, Allen wrote Crowell's paving company, Crowell Constructors Inc., a check for $1,809.98, Dowdy said.

"In Mr. Crowell's dealings with Preston Allen, he never realized or thought that what he was doing was wrong in his own mind," said defense lawyer Richard M. Wiggins of Fayetteville. Crowell and Allen had been friends "for quite some time," Wiggins said.

In accepting Crowell's plea bargain, Britt agreed that Crowell's sentence could run concurrently with a 90-day sentence Crowell received in U.S. District Court earlier this week.

Sale Of F-16s Decided Upon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has decided to sell 36 F-16 jet fighters to South Korea for $900 million.

The State Department confirmed that an agreement for the sale has been made in principle after Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., told a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing Thursday that the administration plans to formally propose the sale after Congress' Easter recess in mid-April.

Hayakawa, chairman of the East Asia and Pacific Affairs subcommittee, said the sale will include the planes, support equipment, spare parts, training and technical assistance. The State Department said the details are not final.

"North Korea presently has a two-to-one numerical advantage over South Korea in the number of aircraft," Hayakawa said.

Discussing Cost Of Sentencing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Several criminal justice experts told an inquiring legislator Thursday that uniform sentencing will be costly, but they were unable to give exact figures on the projected cost of needed prison facilities.

Sen. Robert Swain, D-Asheville, asked the six experts about the impact of Gov. Jim Hunt's uniform-sentencing act, which is set to take effect on April 15. The law would set uniform sentences for each type of crime.

Only one speaker at the three-hour seminar in the auditorium of the Legislative Building did not predict disaster for the judicial and prison system under the new law.

Jeff Williams, director of management information and research for the North Carolina Department of Correction, said projections generally are rather inconclusive. But he said, "Most likely there will be no increase in prison population in the beginning as the law goes into effect April 15.

"We are now having a large and costly increase in prison population and some action is needed to deal with it, but that is independent of the fair-sentencing act," Williams said.

The act was passed by the General Assembly in 1979 at Hunt's urging. Its effective date has been postponed twice by legislators, once last year and once this year.

Kay Harris, Washington director of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency; James F. Austin, senior research associate from the council's San Francisco office and William F. Naegel, president of the American Foundation Inc. in Lake Wales, Fla., expressed doubts about what Naegel called North Carolina's "lock 'em up penology."

Wade Barbour, Chatham County district attorney, said prosecutors across the state are opposed to the presumptive-sentencing law.

"I think, and the district attorneys of the state think, it will have a great impact on the need for additional court personnel," Barbour said.

At least one study shows that implementation of the new law will require 30 to 35 more courtrooms.

German physicist Wilhelm Roentgen, born on this day in 1845, made a discovery that forever changed medicine, science, and industry. Roentgen won the first Nobel Prize in physics for his discovery of X rays. X rays are invisible concentrations of energy much like light. But they are so powerful that they can be used to penetrate and photograph the inside of the human body and even deep inside metals. Doctors regularly X ray patients to determine medical problems such as broken bones and ulcers. X rays are also used to kill diseased tissue caused by cancers. X rays in industries examine products for flaws that may not appear on the surface.

DO YOU KNOW — What metal do doctors use to protect themselves when using X rays?

Opening lead: Nine of ♣.

South combined all his chances to bring home a difficult slam on this hand from a recent team match.

After North showed a powerful, balanced hand with his jump to four spades, South was fully justified in making a move toward slam. The sensible approach was a diamond cue-bid, and North, with first-round controls in the other suits, needed no further encouragement to bid the slam. Perhaps a contract of six no trump might have been a better choice in view of his heart and club tenaces.

West elected to lead a club—a heart would have given declarer no practical chance. Since the lead made it unlikely that West held the queen, declarer wisely did not attempt the "free" finesse—he had other ideas for dummy's jack of clubs. Declarer won in his hand, drew trumps in two rounds and cashed the ace and king of diamonds. Then came the ace of clubs, followed by the jack.

West produced the queen of clubs, but declarer did not ruff. Instead, he discarded his remaining diamond. That was a good play, for if diamonds were 3-3, declarer would be able to set up dummy's long diamond by ruffing a diamond, and the heart finesse would no longer be needed.

The diamonds did not break evenly, but South's fine technique was rewarded in another way. When East was left on lead with the third club, he was ensnared in an end play. Since East had been stripped of diamonds, he was faced with unpleasant alternatives. A club lead would permit declarer to discard a heart loser from one hand while ruffing in the other; and to lead a heart was tantamount to surrendering the contract, for it would be into dummy's ace-queen.

Whichever line East chose was suicide. Declarer made his slam with the loss of only a club trick!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Patrol Cars Can't Rush To All Calls

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The days when police departments send a patrol car to answer every citizen call are numbered — and they ought to be, a federally financed study says.

"Although citizens have become accustomed to expecting police officers to respond to all their calls, and to do so immediately, it is now impractical and wasteful for police officers to do so," said Gary P. Hayes, director of the Police Executive Research Forum, and just-retired Birmingham, Ala., Police Chief Bill R. Meyers in a preface to the report.

The study was conducted by the forum, a private group of police chiefs around the country, and the Birmingham police department under a grant from the Justice Department's National Institute of Justice. The conclusions do not necessarily represent Justice Department policies or views, the report said.

The researchers surveyed the practices of 221 large police departments and devised alternative strategies in cooperation with the police departments in Birmingham, Peoria, Ill., Hartford, Conn., and San Jose, Calif.

"As municipal allocations to police departments have diminished while the number of calls for service has risen, many police administrators have come to realize ... they may simply be unable to continue sending a police car to all citizen calls for service," the report said.

The report said multimillion-dollar "911" telephone systems installed by many large departments have produced more citizen calls. At the same time, state and local law enforcement spending rose 3.3 percent a year between 1974 and 1980, down from 5 percent a year between 1965 and 1970.

The study found that many departments already are stacking up calls or not sending officers on some types of calls, but that no department had devised a systematic plan for the changes.

The report noted that "most police officials claim that rapid response is a prerequisite to assuring citizen satisfaction." But it contended that sending a patrol car on every call was neither justified by the nature of calls police receive nor by surveys of citizen attitudes.

"Most analyses of police calls suggest that emergency calls — medical emergencies, crimes in progress, disturbances — account for fewer than 15 percent of all calls," the study found. The other calls involve family troubles, juvenile problems, reports of crimes that are days old, requests for information, reports of missing or suspicious persons, animal problems and even complaints about uncollected trash.

The report also noted that a 1977 study in Kansas City, Mo., found that rapid response to a sample of 949 calls led to arrests only 3.6 percent of the time.

The researchers said a survey of Birmingham and San Jose residents who called the police showed that a majority would have accepted a delayed response or a response by a civilian police employee. The researchers said the key to public satisfaction was whether the police actually did what the operator promised they would do.

If police telephone operators can be trained to elicit more information from callers, departments can delay sending cars on non-urgent calls, send civilian employees on some, take some reports by telephone, make later appointments for meetings, or refer some callers to other city agencies, the report argued.

The researchers said patrol officers could then devote more time to following up investigative leads on previous crimes, patrolling to prevent crime or meeting with neighborhood and community groups to increase public cooperation with the police.

Police telephone operators should concentrate on whether the call is about personal injury or property loss and when the reported incident occurred, the study said.
