Polish Unrest May Lead To Emergency Summit

PRAGUE (UPI) — The Soviet Union will hold an emergency summit meeting in Prague with its East European allies in the next four days to discuss the unrest in Poland, sources said Saturday.

The East Bloc sources said there were strong indications Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev would preside over the meeting, which was expected to coincide with the 16th Czechoslovakian Communist Party Congress. The congress opens Monday.

Word of the summit came just as the official Polish media reported that Monday's scheduled meeting of Poland's parliament that had been postponed until Friday because of the "temporary indisposition" of Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski. There were no additional details.

"It's still not clear what level the summit will be, but no one is denying rumors that Brezhnev is coming," said a source with close ties to Czechoslovakian government.

The party congress runs for three days and there was no firm word exactly when the summit would be held.

"They could be meeting any time, all they have to do is get here and go off to the side," an East Bloc journalist said.

Reports of the summit emerged just hours after the U.S. State Department issued its latest warning to the Soviet Union against intervention in Poland.

The State Department said it had evidence of major troop movements near the Polish border. Moscow denounced the State Department warning as scare tactics and said the Soviet Union would not be intimidated from protecting the rights of its Socialist allies.

The sources in Prague said the Soviet Union intended to feel out its allies about the situation in Poland during the summit.

"I don't think they want to go in, but if the Russians intervened in Poland, that would mean we all would have to lend a hand," one source said. "Poland's problems will become ours."

The source said, "It's not the same thing we had here in 1968. In 1968, when the Russians came in, Czechoslovakia had a sound economy. Everything was running well. All they had to do was come in and start running things. If they went into Poland now, they would have to put a lot into setting things straight and we would all have to lend a hand."

The call for a summit came less than one week after Poland's leaders defused the latest and most dangerous crisis in eight months of labor unrest with an agreement that averted a threatened nationwide strike.

Lost 'Atlantis' May Be Off Portugal Coast

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet oceanographers say they may have discovered the lost continent of Atlantis on the seabed several hundred miles west of Portugal.

Andrei Monin, director of research aboard the Soviet vessel Akademichan Kurchatov, said scientists based their hypothesis on "mysterious structures" seen in 460 photographs taken of sunken Ampere Mountain, 450 miles west of the Straits of Gibraltar, between Portugal and Madeira Island.

"In a number of pictures of the northeastern part of the summit, (researchers) discerned rectangular structures. On one of the photos, we can see rectangular plates (one yard) wide rising from bottom," the Tass news agency quoted Monin as writing in the Soviet magazine Earth and Universe.

"The position of plates, individual blocks, as well the regular shape of the plates photographed... may testify to their artificial origin," Monin said.

Describing the stonework, he said, "Its surface is divided with equal seams." He said the photographs show "a stone wall (18 inches) wide, made out of blocks."

"On other photos, one can see a plate having a regular form and joining rectangular blocks. All the plates and walls can be clearly seen on the photos," Monin said.

Two years ago, Soviet scientists said a diving bell lowered from the vessel Akademichan Kurchatov took eight photographs of Ampere which showed "vestiges of walls and stairways" similar to those described by Monin.

The Soviet researchers cautiously theorized then that the ruins might be of Atlantis, the sunken continent referred to by the ancient Greek philosopher Plato. Plato's works described a highly developed civilization.

"Archaeologists, after studying the pictures, expressed the theory that they were the remains of ancient stonework," Tass said.

Monin said his research ship made its most recent voyage to follow up similar evidence of Atlantis discovered in 1976 by the Soviet vessel Moscow University.

There are dozens of theories on the possible location of Atlantis and societies seeking to find it have formed in numerous countries and undertaken searches.

Some scholars believe Plato may simply have been describing an imaginary, ideal civilization, a utopia, rather than an actual island-continent. The scientist Jacques Cousteau said in 1976 he was convinced Atlantis was only a myth.

Is Discipline Satisfactory? Schools Get Mostly 'Yes'

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer
(First of a four-part series.)

Discipline in the public schools ... does it exist? In Pitt County and Greenville, parents, students and administrators say yes.

A telephone survey of parents and students and interviews with school administrators and teachers shows that the vast majority consider classroom discipline to be at least satisfactory in both school systems.

There are exceptions, but for each parent or student surveyed who offered a complaint there were three or more who said discipline was good.

Glenn Cox, superintendent of the Greenville schools, and Pitt Superintendent Ott Alford acknowledged that problems do exist in their systems but each said the situation was improving.

"The greatest problem is plain disrespect," Alford said. "After that, problems come up with kids with no purpose being there. They're there because they are under 16 or because they have no other place to go."

Cox, who recalled his days as principal at Rose High School during a bitter integration move in 1969-70, and Alford said violence has subsided — especially the type of violence directed at teachers. Fights, cuttings and loudly debated verbal disputes involving students remain, but teachers generally are secure from physical harm.

Even the schools with a generally strong discipline program have the student fights. In a recent week, D.H.

Conley High experienced a free-for-all among several girls and an incident in which two boys were cut on their arms by a girl.

Alford said "girl-type" disputes have been the major source of problems in the county schools. He also considers a major share of today's disciplinary problems to be a result of the attitudinal confusion created by integration-consolidation of the school system a decade ago.

"It threw the door open," Alford said. "Teachers were afraid to discipline ... black to white, white to black. It was hands off."

Integration also caused problems with black students, Alford said. "We had better discipline in the (all) black schools. When integration came, they were not ready for it ... for the new freedom," he said.

But Alford and Cox said race has little to do directly with student conduct today. Student fighting is mostly "black with black, white with white," Alford said.

Reagan Alert, Has Fever

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite a lingering fever, President Reagan was described in "good condition" Saturday — snapping jokes about his bullet wound and getting hospital room briefings on the tense situation in Poland.

Tubes inserted in his left lung to drain off clotted blood were removed in the morning and his chest X-ray has improved, Dr. Daniel Ruge, his personal physician, told reporters.

The president was shot in the chest Monday in an assassination attempt that also injured three others, including White House press secretary James Brady.

His progress following surgery for a bullet wound in the lung has been called "remarkable" by doctors, but they reported a "limited setback" Friday when the 70-year-old Reagan registered a 102-degree temperature in the morning. The fever has fluctuated since and, as a "precautionary measure," the president has been put back on an antibiotic, his doctor said.

Savage Winds Kill Six In Wisconsin

WEST BEND, Wis. (AP) — Savage winds tore through the north edge of West Bend early Saturday, mowing down homes in a curving, multimillion-dollar path of destruction. Officials counted six storm-related deaths, and said at least 50 people were injured.

The National Weather Service at first termed the storm a tornado, and the mayor called it the first tornado ever in the city of 20,000 some 25 miles northwest of Milwaukee. But the Weather Service later backed off, saying it may have been "severe thunderstorm downbursts" — very high winds.

The storm cut through quiet streets of single-family homes — seemingly exploding some house into splinters and leaving houses on either side untouched.

A tornado specialist was to survey the area Sunday, forecasters said. They said they could not estimate the force of the winds.

The storm claimed three deaths outright, and officials attributed three highway deaths to the weather.

Officials said 39 people were treated and released at hospitals, and 12 people were admitted. Another 100 people were processed at an emergency center, including an undetermined number with minor injuries.

Police Chief James Skidmore estimated damage at $15 million, but Mayor John Pick put damage at $6 million. Forty-six homes and apartment buildings were destroyed by the storm, which struck in darkness at 12:08 a.m., and another 47 were damaged.

"It was just absolute, abject destruction," said Pick. "I've never seen anything like it."

Pick said he did not believe the National Guard would be needed.

"It's a terrible thing," Pick said. "It's the first time in the history of West Bend that a tornado has hit."

A widespread storm system moved across the Midwest on Friday and Saturday. In all, eight people were killed and (Please turn to page A-2)

Aides Start Trips

By United Press International

President Reagan's key foreign policy coordinators — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State Alexander Haig — began their first official trips abroad Saturday on separate missions warning of Soviet threats in Poland and the Middle East.

Arriving in Britain at the start of a week-long trip to meet with Washington's NATO allies in Europe, Weinberger warned that an extension of Warsaw Pact military maneuvers around Poland "was consistent" with a Soviet invasion of Poland. But he said there was no sign invasion was imminent.

Haig landed in Cairo on the first leg of a Middle East tour on which he hopes to persuade friendly Arab states to unite against what Washington sees is a Soviet threat to the region's security.

The secretary of state was prepared, however, to break off his trip immediately and return to Washington should the Soviets invade Poland.

It was their first official foreign trip for both men since they joined Reagan's cabinet in January.

At London's Heathrow Airport, Weinberger said, "the situation in Poland is still pretty serious."

"The (military) exercise is going on longer than planned and the air supplies being moved would seem to be more than those required for the units involved in the exercise — much more."

Weinberger said, "It all started with a troop exercise, but there is activity consistent with a move to go into Poland. We hope they don't go in and I'm sure the Poles hope they don't go in."

He said the NATO allies had been working on possible political and economic plans if Poland were invaded.

Before he left Washington, Defense Department officials said that while the Polish crisis was not the chief reason for Weinberger's trip, "It certainly will be a hot item" at the ministerial-level meeting in West Germany of the Nuclear Planning Group.

Two Killed In Scuffle At Texas Prison Farm

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A maximum security inmate apparently drowned the warden of a state prison in a shallow ditch Saturday after fatally shooting the manager of the prison's farm, a Texas Department of Corrections official said.

The prisoner, a 30-year-old convicted robber who was serving a 12-year term, was captured within 15 minutes of the incident, which occurred shortly after noon Saturday at a farm area of the Ellis Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections.

The body of Wallace M. Pack, 54, warden of the 3,000 inmate unit, was found face down in a shallow ditch in about two feet of "dark, muddy water," prison spokesman Rick Hartley said.

He said there was no blood on Pack's body, but he had apparently been beaten and drowned.

The body of prison farm manager Maj. Billy Max Moore, 49, was found about 40 yards away near his flatbed truck. He had been shot once in the head, Hartley said.

"Apparently, after Mr. Moore was fatally struck," said Hartley, "the inmate became involved in an altercation with the warden. They scuffled from the original scene, across a road, down an embankment and apparently into the water," a shallow ditch that runs through the prison farm in an area known as "the bottom."

Both men were pronounced dead at the scene. Their bodies were taken to Houston, about 75 miles south of Huntsville, for autopsies.

Officials declined to identify the inmate, but said he had permission to work outside the prison walls and was assigned to the farm shop, where tractors and other equipment were kept.

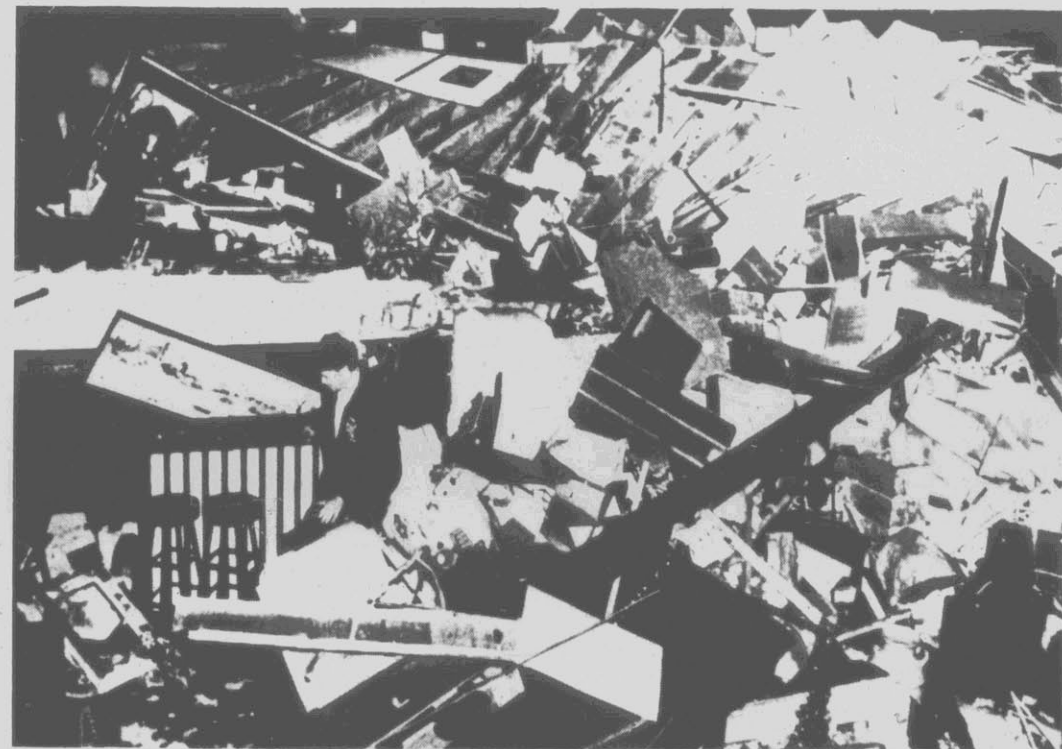

Hartley said the incident involved only one inmate, and said all was quiet Saturday evening at the Ellis Unit. The unit houses 137 death row inmates, as well as other maximum security prisoners.

"The inmate had been taken from the farm shop of the unit to the garden shop because he had violated a disciplinary rule," Hartley said. "He was in the truck with Mr. Moore."

Hartley declined to say what rule had been violated.

"At the same time, the warden drove up and apparently, the inmate bolted out of the truck and that's when the scuffle took place."

Hartley said he did not know where the inmate got the .38-caliber revolver later recovered near the scene of the double slaying, and he discounted earlier reports that the inmate was "high on marijuana."

Most Say Discipline In Schools Is 'Good'

"The thing that bothers me most is when I get a 10-year-old child whose conduct was that of a high school freshman a few years ago," Alford said.

In both systems, administrators listed disrespect by students as perhaps the major problem. Vandalism also was noted, but has been a major problem primarily at Ayden-Grifton High. Truancy, tardiness and theft also were ranked high by the administrators and by some parents.

One Greenville parent said her three children "live in terror" that personal items will be stolen. The children attend Aycock Junior High and Rose High.

"My children have had so many things stolen," the parent said. She listed such items as a class ring, a $40 pair of shoes, light weight jackets and other clothing.

"That costs a lot of money. We buy them, and as soon as they take them to school, they disappear," she said.

Rose High Principal Howard Hurt agreed with the parent that theft is an issue of concern, but he said that "for a school this size ... it has pretty good discipline." Hurt said perhaps a half-dozen students have been identified in thefts since the first of the year.

"We are having some problems with theft, with people going into people's lockers. The thefts range from 50 cents to ... to something more valuable," Hurt said.

Other school administrators agree there is a theft problem, but don't always agree with the cause of the thefts.

At D.H. Conley, Assistant Principal Jimmy Dunn blamed most thefts on "pure carelessness" by students who leave items unattended or in unlocked student lockers.

Hurt said he couldn't explain the apparent increase in students being accused of theft, but added: "Maybe are are catching more." He said students accused of theft at Rose are turned over to police or asked to leave school.

A few parents and two students contacted in the random telephone survey complained of unruly or noisy classes in some Greenville schools.

Cox acknowledged that some classrooms were noisier than others, saying it depended upon the individual teacher's ability and desire to control the activity.

"Basically, I think discipline is good," Cox said. "I think our folks do a good job."

Pet Tiger Claws Boy

ALCOA, Tenn. (AP) — A 10-month-old Bengal tiger that was being led around a crowded flea market broke loose from its handler Saturday and attacked a 5-year-old boy, biting and clawing him, authorities said.

The boy, Joseph Anthony Vaughn, was listed in satisfactory condition Saturday night following surgery at the University of Tennessee Memorial Hospital in nearby Knoxville.

Roy Vaughn Jr. said the tiger bit his son numerous times on the head, neck, chest and arms during the attack, which occurred about 1 p.m.

"A man was leading the tiger through a crowd of people at the flea market, and when it got next to my son, it attacked him," said Vaughn, a Maryville insurance agent. "I don't know what provoked the animal. My son didn't provoke it, but it just attacked."

Vaughn said it took four to five people to get the animal off his son.

about 125 injured. Hundreds of homes and buildings were wrecked.

The National Weather Service said about 20 tornadoes and 121 severe storms were reported Friday and Saturday in Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Kansas, Arkansas, Illinois and Oklahoma. High winds also struck Indiana and Texas.

Among the dead in West Bend was 10-year-old Scott Schlefke, whose body was found in the ruins of his home by a team of firefighters that included his father.

Gov. Lee Dreyfus said West Bend could become eligible for federal disaster assistance, Pick said, adding that the governor was expected to fly over the area to inspect the damage.

Police Sgt. Jim Schwartz said police received two phone calls simultaneously at 12:08 a.m. and emergency sirens were sounded. "By that time the tornado was pushing its way through," he said.

Rescuers completed the search for victims Saturday morning. Police reported snarled traffic in the devastated area, and urged people to stay away. Only residents were being allowed through police lines.

Meanwhile, a twister touched down in a mobile home park in Calumet County in east central Wisconsin, injuring six people, and high winds caused damage elsewhere in the state.

"It's gone. There's nothing left," said Helen Urbaniak of the West Bend home where she lived with her family for seven years. "But the five of us are out and alive," she added, standing wrapped in a quilt at the Red Cross emergency center.

"The roof just flew off," said her 11-year-old son, Steve, who was on crutches with a bandaged ankle and cuts on his legs.

DIVORCE and REMARRIAGE EVIL

This is a work of the flesh that is destroying thousands of people. Gal. 5:19-21, "...adultery, fornication, ...they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

It is a tragic thing in America when one out of every three marriages ends in a divorce court. Have we reached the height of sin as Sodom and Gomorrah? The civil voices of our land do not have greater authority than the Word of God. It appears that the sanctity of the home and the obligation of those who take the marriage vows is of little value today. Have we come to the conclusion, that because persons of prominence, highly esteemed in the eyes of the public, have for every whim divorced and remarried as many as six, seven or more times, that such a way of life has God's approval?

The Bible says, "And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, let not the wife depart from her husband; But and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife." (1 Cor. 7:10, 11). "For the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband so long, as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So then if, while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress..." (Rom. 7: 2, 3).

Jesus is very clear in putting forth this truth. "Whoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery." (Mk. 10:11). There is no more responsibility laid upon one of the companions than upon the other. Scripture is very clear in speaking about the woman who puts away her husband and marries another—she is called an adulteress. And the husband who puts away his wife and marries another woman commits adultery. Both are responsible for keeping the marriage vows sacred. My friend, can any one of you deny the plainness of these scriptures? The question will arise, "Does the Bible allow and cause at all for remarriage?" Yes, it does, two causes are given: The first one is death. "But if the husband be dead she is loosed from the law of her husband...she is no adulteress though she be married to another man." (Rom. 7:2,3). Paul also stated that it is permissible for widows to marry. (1 Cor. 7:9).

The second Biblical cause that allows a person to remarry is fornication. To define "fornication," we must turn to the Bible. Matt. 19:7-9 says, "Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away? He saith unto them, Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives: But from the beginning it was not so...whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; And whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery."

Jesus also said in Matt. 5:32, "But I say unto you, that whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: And whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery." These scriptures give fornication as a cause for divorce, and this is the only Bible cause given for divorce and remarriage. Of course, we understand that death gives permission for remarriage, but fornication is the only Bible grounds given for divorce of the party who are living with and marrying another. Therefore, it becomes urgent and vitally necessary for us to know and to understand what constitutes the sin of fornication.

The Bible commands all of those so entangled to free themselves. In fact, 1 Cor. 6:18 says to "flee fornication." Acts 15:28, 29 shows that the early church taught to abstain from fornication. After the General Assembly of the Early Church in Acts 15: they gave a writing to be sent out to local churches commanding the people to abstain from the sin of fornication. In 1 Cor. 6:9, 10, we read, "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God. Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners shall inherit the kingdom of God. Here we see that the Bible is definitely against fornication. The early church was taught to flee fornication—and here the Apostle Paul tells us that the unrighteous, among which he lists fornicators, are not going to inherit the kingdom of God.

Many people claim that fornication is unfaithfulness. But the Bible denies such a claim. Read 1 Cor. 6:16, "What? Know ye not that he which is joined to a harlot is one body? For two, saith he, shall be one flesh." Many people say that if one's companion is unfaithful, this is a cause for divorce—they call this fornication. But no matter how unfaithful, or how wicked, your companion may be, the Bible does not give this as grounds as divorce. Scripture plainly says, "He which is joined to a harlot is one body." Regardless of the evil of the one you are married to, if he is your rightful companion, God has recognized this marriage, and you two are one body. The scriptures teach that fornication is being married to another man's wife, or another woman's husband. 1 Cor. 5:1—"It is reported commonly that there is fornication among you, and such fornication as is not so much as named among the Gentiles, that one should have his father's wife." So, the Bible definition of fornication is being married to another man's wife, or another woman's husband. Matt. 14:3, 4, says, "For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife. For John said unto him, it is not lawful for thee to have her." It was not lawful for Herod to have Philip's wife! Why? First of all, Philip was alive; secondly, Herod's wife was still living. Actually Herod had Philip's wife in fornication. Herod had laid hold on John and put him in prison for Herodias' sake, because John had preached against fornication and told Herod it was not right for him to have his wife, as was the case of the Corinthians. But, it is no worse than to have a stranger's wife. It still constitutes the sin of fornication, which is being married to another man's wife, "And let every woman have her own husband."

So, if you have somebody that is not your wife, if you have another man's wife, you are living in the state of fornication. Now, since we have the meaning of fornication, let us continue with the subject—"Divorce and Remarriage." In Matt. 19: Jesus gives five definite reasons for not approving divorce. "The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?" Notice the words "for every cause." At this particular time divorce was widely practiced, and there were two schools of thought on the subject. The first thought was, that divorce could only be given on the basis of adultery; the second school taught that divorce could be given for many reasons. For instance, if you found a woman you liked better than your wife you could get a divorce and remarry. In one country even if the wife failed to salt the food for the husband, this constituted grounds for divorce. Jesus proved both schools wrong. He said, "Have ye not read, that he which made them at the beginning made them male and female, and said, for this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: And they twain shall be one flesh? Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." Marriage is divine; it is sacred. It was originated by God, not man. Secondly, there is expressed consent on the part of both parties to enter into this union. They covenant to live together until death does them part. The Bible also teaches that the couple, when united, became one by an act of God. Jesus said, "They twain (or they two) shall be one flesh." Man did not do this; He was not able to tie them together and make them one flesh. But when they covenanted together, God tied them together in holy matrimony.

Then we have the example of the first pair. There was no polygamy; there was no plural marriage, or wives. And there was no divorce between Adam and Eve! God created them male and female. He did not create them male and females, or female and males. And, using as an example the first pair, the Bible does not allow for divorce. "They say unto him, why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away?" It appears that they thought when Jesus said that God made them in the beginning, and what God had joined together man should not put asunder, that this command was set aside when Moses was allowed to give a writing of divorcement. Moses gave a Bill of Divorcement as Jesus said, "Because of the hardness of your hearts." But notice this clause, "From the beginning it was not so." That is, it was against the plan of God from the very beginning!

Some try to justify remarriage by saying that they were not a Christian when the first marriage first took place, so they may marry a Christian after conversion. Read 1 Cor. 7:10-16. If God does not recognize the first marriage because the parties were unsaved, then we would be forced to say that all unsaved people are not married. Others say, God forgave them of this sin. But, God does not forgive a person of this sin, then allow him or her to continue in the same sin. That would be the same as a liar saying that God forgave him of his lying, so he may now lie and be justified. The same is true of drunkards, thieves, etc. Coming to Christ does not give anyone licenses to continue in sin.

Another popular explanation which tries to justify double marriages is, "God does not break up homes." At first thought, this sounds reasonable. However, God is going to be the Judge by His Word, and not man. Was John trying to break up Herod's and Herodias' home when he cried forth and said, "It is not lawful for thee to have her"? It cannot be denied that John was instructing these two to separate and for Herodias to be reconciled to her rightful husband, Philip, or remain unmarried. John was thrown into prison and finally beheaded because he would not compromise on this Bible doctrine for anyone. What we need today is for those that name the name of Christ to cut their lives to fit the Bible, not try to cut the Bible to fit their lives.

Marriage is very serious, because we are bound until death to our mate. We have the Word of God, so it not God's fault if we mix our lives up. There are some church organizations that will not allow their ministers to be divorced and remarried. Some will not allow church officers to be divorced and remarried. It is encouraging to know that some groups recognize this evil to this extent. But, did you know that there is an organization with a church in Greenville that does not allow its ministers, church officers, nor any of its members to be divorced and remarried? Would you like to be a member of a church that stands up for the truth as fearlessly as John the Baptist, Jesus Christ, Apostle Paul and others did? The Churches of God of Prophecy are in all the states of the U.S.A. and fifty-four foreign countries. It does not knowingly receive nor retain any person into the church membership who has divorced his or her rightful husband or wife and is married to another.

Brady Showing More Progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential Press Secretary James S. Brady, displaying continued improvement from a severe brain injury, engaged in a brief dialogue with his doctors Saturday, the White House said.

Brady, who was removed from the critical list Friday, was asked by the physicians to explain what his job involved, according to a medical bulletin released by the White House press office.

"I answer questions," was his reply.

"Who for?"

"Anyone who asks them," responded Brady.

Doctors said the press secretary, his head bundled in bandages, tried without success Saturday to open his eyes, which remained swollen as a result of the bullet wound to his head and subsequent surgery at George Washington University Hospital.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, a hospital spokesman, said Brady tried to open his eyes "to see who is the doctor asking all of these dumb questions."

Brady's verbal responses over the past two days have left doctors cheerfully surprised at the pace of his comeback since Monday, when an explosive .22-caliber bullet through the brain left him gravely wounded in the assassination attempt on President Reagan.

The president, who is recovering at the hospital from a bullet wound to his left lung, expressed great pleasure when told that Brady and two law officers injured in Monday's shooting were all making progress.

"That's great news, just great, especially about Jim," the press office quoted Reagan as saying. "We'll have to get four bedpans and have a reunion."

Saturday's medical bulletin said that a "mild fever" Brady developed Thursday night was being "easily controlled."

The bulletin also said that the entry wound in Brady's skull "is compatible" with the thesis that the bullet exploded on impact. However, the doctors doubted that "much if any" of the explosive material in the bullet, lead azide, "actually penetrated the skull," the bulletin said.

On Friday, a doctor overheard Brady respond to the sound of a ringing telephone. "Someone answer that phone, the phone's ringing," Brady was quoted as saying.

Earlier Friday, asked what his job was, Brady replied, "press secretary at the White House." He also was quoted as offering an encouraging assessment of his condition: "I'm feeling fine."

Considering the gravity of his injury, Brady "has done very well," according to the surgeon who removed about 20 percent of the right cerebral portion of Brady's brain.

Dr. Arthur I. Korbine, who estimated that eight of 10 people would die from such an injury, cautioned Friday that Brady's condition could worsen if infection sets in.

However, the doctor added, Brady "probably is over the hump on one of the main problems following an injury like this — massive brain swelling."

Swelling could have caused permanent damage to the brain and brain stem, which controls breathing, blood pressure and sleep.

Korbine said it was too early to determine how impaired Brady may be as a result of the severe damage to the right half of his brain. The left side of Brady's body, which is controlled by the right part of his brain, has only sensation and little movement, the neurosurgeon said.

Movement of the right side of Brady's body is about normal because the left half of his brain suffered only minor damage, Korbine said.

Under the most optimistic outlook, according to Korbine, Brady could wind up without any mental impairment.

But the press secretary probably will lose his sense of smell and taste — a great loss for a man whose hobbies include gourmet cooking.

Teen-Ager In 'Devil' Trial Wins Reduction Of Charge

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The trial of a 13-year-old girl, who prosecutors say became a devil-worshiper after seeing the movie "The Omen" and shot her younger sister to death on Satan's orders, will continue on manslaughter but not murder charges, a judge has ruled.

Superior Court Judge Mamoru Sakuma dismissed the murder charges against Kimberly Goytia on Friday, saying the prosecution had failed to show malice or premeditation.

Sakuma also ordered further proceedings in the Juvenile Court trial closed to the public and press, citing a new state law that opens juvenile trials in certain violent crimes, including murder but not manslaughter.

Sakuma said he was opposed to closing a trial that has been open since it began more than a month ago but felt compelled to abide by the statute. He said the law does not permit public manslaughter trials.

To prove voluntary or involuntary manslaughter, prosecutors must show that the defendant shot her sister in the heat of passion, or during a dangerous act without intent to kill, the judge said.

Prosecutor Steve Secrest has argued that the girl shot her 11-year-old sister Stephanie on Feb. 3 in front of the family's apartment because she believe Satan had instructed her to do so.

The teen-ager had worshipped Satan since she saw the movie "The Omen" in 1976, Secrest said. She had many copies of the books "The Omen" and "Damien," he added. The central character in the books kills his relatives as they discover he is a son of Satan.

Hinckley Is Expected To See Psychiatrists

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr. is expected to meet Monday with psychologists brought in by attorneys preparing his defense against charges of trying to assassinate President Reagan, a Justice Department spokesman said Saturday.

The 25-year-old Hinckley met with defense attorneys, in addition to spending several hours with his parents Friday, said Tom DeCair, a Justice Department spokesman in Washington.

"The court-ordered (psychological) exam has begun and the defense team of lawyers is expected to see him again on Monday," he said.

In a court order issued in Washington, the government was ordered to allow the defense to have "concurrent access" during 90 days of court-ordered mental examinations.

DeCair said Dr. Sally Johnson, staff psychiatrist at Butner, has begun examining Hinckley.

"Doctor Johnson began testing yesterday and there will be other doctors from the staff participating — psychiatrists, sociologists and physicians — to achieve a complete profile," he said.

The court order that resulted in Hinckley being sent to the Federal Correctional Institution at Butner directed government psychiatrists to determine Hinckley's competence to stand trial and to determine his "productivity" — whether the alleged offense resulted from mental disease, a mental defect or mental disorder.

Reagan continued his recovery from a wound suffered Monday.

Hinckley's parents spent about three hours with their son Friday before flying to Washington, presumably to meet with defense attorneys, said a government official who asked not to be identified.

"We're following the policy that the Bureau of Prisons has used, and that is to accord privacy of the individuals in prison," he said.

Hinckley is housed under tight security in an eight-room area of the hospital in the prison's top security area.

Accompanied by a security guard, Hinckley was allowed to exercise in the unit's dayroom Friday, said John K. Russell, a Justice Department spokesman.

"When the testing begins, it's more or less an orientation time between him and the doctor," Russell said. "It's kind of laid back."

Russell said Hinckley has been given periodicals to read, but is not allowed access to radio, television or newspapers. He said Hinckley has made several phone calls to his parents and to his attorneys.

Parents Pleased Over Treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The parents of accused presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr. on Saturday issued the following statement through the office of their son's attorney.

The Hinckleys arrived in the nation's capital late Friday, but have remained in seclusion.

Here is the text of their statement:

"We visited our son John recently and are pleased with the manner in which he has been treated and protected."

"We are all very grateful for God's mercies in the miraculous way in which He has sustained the lives of the president, Mr. Brady, agent (Timothy) McCarthy and officer (Thomas) Delahanty, and, of course, we pray constantly for their continued recovery to full health, and for the comfort of their families.

"We also cannot begin to express our gratitude for the outpouring of prayers and offers of help that we have received from all over the country in this time of terrible need. We are overwhelmed by it and thank everyone from the bottom of our hearts."

Highway U.S. 264 'On Fast Track'

Tom Bradshaw, secretary of the N. C. Department of Transportation, was reassuring in regard to the Highway 264 Wilson to Greenville project as he spoke to a Chamber of Commerce meeting Tuesday morning.

He said the project is "really on a fast track" because those along the route are working together.

Right-of way acquisition in Wilson County is expected to begin late this year, and construction on that portion is expected to begin by this time next year.

Bypasses at both Wilson and Greenville are also being considered and hearings are expected soon on these plans.

Bradshaw said U. S. 264 was a major commitment of the Board of Transportation.

But Bradshaw also took the occasion to point out again that highway building "is being hit on all sides" by rising costs and lower revenues. Particularly suffering is highway resurfacing work, which could lead to far higher costs in the future.

There are many problems ahead in building, maintaining and financing highway work, but we are quite happy to see the U. S. 264 project on schedule. Its completion is highly important to our area.

First District Should Be Kept Intact

A public hearing on congressional redistricting will be held at Martin Technical Institute Monday at 11 a.m.

It is one of five being held across the state as the Legislature prepares to redistrict in conformance with the 1980 U. S. census.

It is important that the first congressional district be kept as near to its present make-up as possible. It may be that counties might have to be added to balance the population, but we hope the thrust of the comments will be against wholesale shifting of counties to accommodate other areas of the state.

No-Strike Law Weighed

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Like many other states, North Carolina has a law making it illegal for public employees to strike. How, then, do such strikes sometimes happen?

There is no punishment provided in the law. A small group of legislators is currently debating among themselves how best to tackle that situation.

Emerging as the frontrunner idea is the proposition that if an employee of state or local government engages in a strike he or she would automatically be fired for one year, with the further provision that the individual could not get a job with any unit of government during that period.

It is still uncertain whether such a measure will be introduced for consideration in the General Assembly this year.

session of the General Assembly.

At the urging of Gov. Jim Hunt, the three main organizations of state employees are presenting a united front to legislators in an effort to gain a checkoff system.

Leadership of both the N.C. State Employees Association and the N.C. State Governmental Employees Association oppose collective bargaining, but favor what they choose to call "voluntary membership dues withholding".

Whatever the name, the system would allow government payroll clerks to withhold from those individuals who choose to participate the money for membership in employee organizations.

Benefits to the associations are numerous, including reduced necessity to remind people their checks are due; a more certain income picture; and perhaps most importantly a reduced dropout rate since it is human nature to continue letting a deduction run, while having to write a check or hand over cash makes you stop and think.

Working Sails

Visitors from inland to Coastal Carolina in upcoming warm weeks will likely do a doubletake when they spy Capt. Lane Briggs' tugboat pulling a load or fishing.

The new tug sports a full set of sails: gaff-rigged on the main and with retractable bowsprit to carry a working foresail.

Briggs and Norfolk naval architect Merritt Walter produced the hybrid which they have dubbed a "Tugatine". The deck is a tug. Overhead the spars and lines of a sailing craft. Below the water is a sleek, full-keeled sailboat bottom. A diesel turning up 320 horses completes the package.

The National Marine Fisheries and the Sea Grant program at Virginia Institute of Marine Science are helping with the project in hopes of demonstrating that wind can help relieve the mounting pressures on watermen from gasoline prices.

Briggs was born and raised in the North Carolina mountains but has been on the coast for 30 years fishing and running tugboats.

The sailing tug idea came five years ago when a dockside party was opened with a sailboat race which Briggs promoted. But he didn't have a sailboat himself, so he boosted a mast on his tug and hoisted a parachute, a tablecloth and other odds and ends.

Briggs recalls that a few days later he was towing a barge with the sails still in place. Speed picked up and fuel consumption went down. He found he could make three knots better with the sails and cut gas use 30 percent — even with the wallowing tugboat.

With the new tug designed for sail, he hopes to cut gas use 40 percent and enjoy the added advantage of getting home without help if his motor fails.

The Sea Grant program at University of North Carolina is picking up the idea to launch a fullscale study of working sails and the potential for fishing and commercial use in Carolina waters.

THE INSIDE REPORT

If Soviet Union Marches

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Soviet invasion of Poland would instantly enshrine President Reagan's toughened stance toward Moscow as foreign policy gospel for the Western world, a political change that has led the new president's advisers to see benefits resulting from the dangers confronting Poland.

Reagan's own skepticism over the effectiveness of nuclear arms control would become a conviction shared by leaders and major political parties among U.S. allies. Reagan could give up the present pretense of being for arms control talks with the Soviets once U.S. rearmament has started to advance.

Soviet intervention, as measured by these presidential advisers, would accomplish in one swift transition what has been beyond U.S. reach since the late 1960s and Vietnam: true Western unity under U.S. leadership. "No one wants Poland to bear the cost or pay that price," one administration official told us, "but it is a fact that the redemption of American leadership is what the Russians buy if they intervene."

Until March 29, when the central committee of Poland's ruling Communist Party met in Warsaw, the Kremlin seemed to be moving toward imposing hard-line leadership on Poland's Politburo and Central Committee. Western officials privately predicted hard-lining Stefan Olszowski would be elevated as party chief in the prelude to a major internal crack down on Solidarity, the free workers' union.

Instead, moderate party leader Stanislaus Kania surprisingly strengthened his control. That casts doubt on whether an internal crackdown by Polish police and militia, privately predicted by Secretary of State Alexander Haig as far more probable than outright Soviet intervention, will now take place. If it does not and Solidarity continues to undermine central communist authority, Soviet invasion becomes more probable.

Once invading troops cross the Polish border, the Soviets would elevate the U.S. as the acknowledged leader of the West. That is partly because of the impact in Europe of the AFL-CIO and its liberal political friends becoming Reagan's steadfast allies. AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland is in close touch with Western European labor unions, including leftist unions in Britain, West Germany, Scandinavia and the low countries. All have a deep stake in the fate of Solidarity.

to the pre-Afghan invasion detente. Even the left wing of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's West German Social Democratic Party would not risk turning its back on Solidarity.

"The Germans would buy nuclear modernization overnight if Poland gets invaded," one West European diplomat predicted. "Reagan wouldn't have to say another word about it."

In France, confidential polls taken by political allies of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing show that the Communist Party vote in this fall's presidential election would drop from its normal 20 percent to about 15 percent — a 40-year low — if Moscow marches.

Nobody can predict the effect on the Soviet Union of the sudden coming together of the Western alliance, which reached its lowest state during the Carter presidency. Officials both here and in Europe have not been subtle in spelling out their sentiments to Soviet leaders.

That message comes down to this: The certainty of the United States moving toward a position of military power (Continued on Page A-5)

GENIUS IN ACTION

Someone has said that genius is fifty percent inspiration and fifty percent perspiration.

The great English novelist Charles Dickens would probably have agreed with this remark. On one occasion he wrote: "Whatever I have tried to do in life, I have tried with all my heart to do well. What I have devoted myself to, I have devoted myself completely. Never to put one hand to anything on which I did not throw my whole self, and never to allow my work to decline in quality, I find now to have been the golden rule."

Doubtless none of us could write with the genius of Dickens, but if all of us could apply ourselves to our chosen tasks with the single-mindedness and concentration of Dickens, the results might be very surprising. Although geniuses can make great triumphs in art and literature, the success of our civilization in providing for human welfare has been the result of the hard, devoted work of millions of people who never felt the spark of genius. — Elisha Douglass

Sunday Morning Notes

March 30 will be remembered as another dark day for the American political system. A president was attacked by a gunman. President Reagan was wounded. So were a secret service agent, a Washington, D. C. policeman and Press Secretary James Brady.

Other Editors Say Abuse & Need

(Washington Daily News)

Sometimes when we talk or write we tend to interchange different words which also have far different meanings.

When it comes to the two words "abuse" and "need", we should be very careful to use the one which applies correctly. And these two words are often applied to the subject of food stamps today in our land and how food stamps are used.

U.S. Senator Jesse Helms is leading the fight against abuse, but not even Mr. Helms is attacking genuine need. A recent newspaper headline read "Helms Vows to Cut Food Stamp Abuse", and the words in the headline tell a story with which most of us will agree.

What Senator Helms said before the committee was "I am determined to do everything I can to eliminate from receiving food stamp benefits those able-bodied recipients who refuse to work and those households whose gross incomes are above the poverty line."

Later he was quoted as saying "the American people are almost up in arms about alleged abuses in the program."

Whether the cause be led by Jesse Helms or Jim Hunt or Beetle Bailey or whomever might be out front, we too join in the criticism of any persons getting food stamps who fall into the class of "abusers". We want those who truly need them and who might well go hungry without them to have the benefit of food stamps. The great difficulty comes in the establishment of a dividing line between the ones who NEED food stamps and the ones who ABUSE the program.

Just a short while ago right here in Beaufort County we had people working the county making the all-out effort to get individuals and family heads on the food stamp program. Now this all-out effort certainly did not set well with working people in this Pamlico area. And we have been told that right many people were sold on the food stamp approach and actually got on the program because these people urged them to do so in this all-out effort. That type of approach does not seem either wise or wholesome to us.

Here in our area we have no idea how many people are getting food stamps unjustly. We know that there are always people looking for something for nothing; and there are people who will fight to get in line for something free whether they have a need or not. And there are people who will not work regardless of the jobs offered but who are well able to work.

There are people who make a living "chiseling" whatever they have to eat and wear and whatever be the needs of their families rather than use a little muscle and sweat to earn some dollars.

Let us make sure that in our burning crusade today toward austerity, we do not eliminate needy people who actually are honest but poor.

Nevertheless the crisis ended far more positively than some of the previous tragedies that have struck our presidents. Reagan underwent surgery which was successful and physicians say he will fully recover to resume his duties.

It was not to be so on Nov. 22, 1963. That day President John F. Kennedy was struck in the head by a high powered bullet which it was ultimately concluded was fired by Lee Harvey Oswald. John Connally, then governor of Texas, was wounded but recovered. For Kennedy however, it was almost instant death.

Locally people were just as shocked as they were elsewhere in the nation.

C. Heber Forbes said, "I am very much hurt and am very sorry. It is not worth much, but it is the way I feel."

E.M. Foley said, "I have a feeling of indignation against anyone who disagrees with a man or his politics to this extreme. I don't think whoever did it will receive any sympathy."

He didn't. In fact Oswald was soon shot down himself as he was taken from the Dallas jail.

Campus Mall Knived

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL
INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Every day in Indianapolis, hundreds of women set out for the nearest shopping center to pick up groceries, clothes, sundries and a college education.

Extending the campus to the shopping center is an idea whose time has come, says James East. He has seen it spread to 20 states and four Canadian provinces in just five semesters.

East dreamed up the popular Learn and Shop program to help combat declining enrollment at the Indiana University-Purdue University-Indianapolis campus.

IUPUI officials in December 1978 asked East what the school could do to draw more students. He had been involved in innovative programming for several years.

"It was a very simple thing," he said. "I had been a widower with four young children for several years, and I had learned to think along the lines of women who have a lot to do and so few hours to do it."

"They have to do the shopping. So I thought if we could some way take our professors to the shopping centers, women could do the shopping, get the groceries and take college courses, all in one trip," East said.

IUPUI loved the idea — but had no money to rent space off campus. East marched out to a department store to ask for help and discovered most major stores have small classrooms where they train their personnel. There was his campus, ready-made — if he could get it free.

Successes Of Investment Club

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — During its 41-year history, members of Detroit's Mutual Investment Club have bought $137,038 worth of stocks, withdrawn $257,643 for other uses and now have a million dollar portfolio.

The best is to come, said George A. Nicholson, Jr., usually credited with being the father of the investment club movement. Nicholson, a member, estimates that by 1986 the club may be worth $2.3 million.

The biggest paper profit in its present portfolio of 42 stocks is Moog, Inc., up more than nine times. Trinity Industries has risen seven times, Air Products, Avco and Mobil Oil four times. Two socks have tripled, six have doubled.

Critics sometimes argue the Detroit group isn't typical of clubs in the 3,900-member National Association of Investment Clubs because some of its members are professionals. They concede this, but insist nevertheless amateurs can be properly prepared to make big gains.

Tom O'Hara, chairman of the NAIC board of trustees, tells the story of one of the club's biggest gains. As is the custom, members allowed their wives to pick a stock at the annual meeting. In 1974 they chose Amcord. The purchase price, said O'Hara, a member, was $2.875.

In 1979 Amcord shares were repurchased from shareholders at $34. Suddenly finding themselves with about $54,000, the biggest lump of cash they ever had the opportunity to invest, they bought among other things 1,200 shares of Kennecott Copper at $24 a share. Recently offer from Standard Oil of Ohio was approved by both boards at $62 a share.

O'Hara revealed the club's figures, which showed a portfolio value of $1,039,000 on the morning of March 31 (helped along by Moog reaching a new high) in an effort to encourage people to spur the movement.

He contends there's money to be made by small investors, and he observes that, somewhat underpublicized, "individuals have been making money in the market for the past five years."

During these years, he said in an interview, there has been a gradual rebuilding of confidence in the market. "People view stocks as I do — that stocks are one of the few things that have not risen sharply, and that if there are bargains anywhere they're to be found in stocks."

O'Hara detects a growing enthusiasm that he feels will lift the number of clubs steadily over coming months. In fact, he says, it has begun. Association membership last year fell to 3,600, from a high of 14,000 clubs in 1970, but it has grown now for six straight months to 3,900.

Those figures roughly parallel what the New York Stock Exchange census of shareholders has shown. After reaching a high of 31 million a decade or so ago, shareownership dipped to 25 million, before growing again to 29.8 million in 1980.

O'Hara finds other confirmations also. The NAIC, he says, has received nearly as many inquiries on how to start a club during the first three months of 1981 as it did in all 1980.

The association has also begun a Low Cost Investment Plan, whereby individuals can build a portfolio by buying a single share of a stock and then committing an additional $25 every three months. That plan, O'Hara said, has drawn more than 19,000 inquiries.

What is the investment club secret? There isn't any, says O'Hara. There are basic principles, it seems, but nothing that rank amateurs cannot observe.

First, club members very carefully study a range of stocks — with suggestions and tools supplied by the association.

Next, they make their purchases, usually in small amounts, and continue investing in the stocks through market ups and downs, believing that their fundamental analysis will in time provide gains.

There's another reason for the steady investing: If a club has done its homework, it can feel confident that temporary declines merely represent opportunities to obtain more shares for less.

Finally, clubs reinvest all funds.

The record of The Mutual Investment Club, though not typical, does suggest there's something to it, and it expects to be around for another 41 years at least.

While two members, retired from their fulltime jobs, now withdraw $10,000 a year, four new members under age 30 have joined the ranks and are eager to offer knowledge, cash and confidence.

What is really remarkable about this whole silly controversy to me is that people are so surprised that Rose High teenagers experiment with alcohol. It's hardly a phenomenon. It has been happening since the invention of something called "alcohol" and something called "high school." And the Reflector is certainly not guilty of defamation. The truth is a complete defense.

Guess what else? High school teenagers experiment with life and death and drugs and sex and failure and success and money and poverty and love and hate. And a lot of other things. Get the picture?

They're people. They just happen to be victims of demographic discrimination.

I think they're terrific.

Counting the stamp, there's my 20 cents worth.

Charles P. Adams Jr.

To the editor:

The recent attempt to assassinate our President cannot be regarded as an isolated incident. It is indicative of a rising tide of lawlessness and ignorance in our land which threatens us and can, if left unchecked, destroy organized society in our beloved country.

We must change the public attitude toward violent crime. We must come to realize that criminals must be punished swiftly and justly if civilization is to survive. We must reject the misguided sentimentality which seeks to protect the criminal from just retribution, regardless of what he has done. We must face the fact that, under existing conditions, crime pays. We must realize that there are some among us who tend to identify with the criminal and to callously ignore the rights of the victim. We must cope with the horrible fact that there are, in this country, thousands of citizens who, because of their alleged "entitlement" not only condone the attempt on the President's life, but wish it had been successful.

This is an effort to enlist the nation's leaders of all races and creeds in a concerted effort to educate and influence our citizens by:

- restoring respect for duly constituted authority;
- urging parents to control their children and accept responsibility for them;
- emphasizing the importance of education and helping restore the effectiveness of our schools;
- mobilizing public opinion against the perpetrators of violent crime;
- helping preserve domestic tranquility by improving the effectiveness of our courts of law;
- explaining the difference between freedom and license and explaining why the rights of the individual must not be allowed to supercede the rights of society.

We that love America pray that our leaders will put aside their individual differences and participate wholeheartedly in this campaign.

Which subject should be taught in our schools: evolution or creation?

Some suggest that evolution is blasphemous and should not be taught in schools. And, if it is to be taught, it should be taught jointly with creationism.

First of all, evolution does not necessarily exclude the existence of God. Secondly, why should creationism be taught without any material evidence to back it up? Evolutionism at least has some pretty hard evidence of actually occurring at one time.

Even if creationism is taught in school, there will always be the issue of which version should be taught: Christian, Jewish, Muslim, Catholic, Buddhist, and so on.

To the editor:

The article, "Beer, Whiskey Flow Freely at Rose" is an obvious case of irresponsible "yellow" journalism. As was stated in the article, there was no basis for the statements that were made and I hardly can justify the conjecture of a 16-year-old co-ed and five others as front page news.

It is a shame the town newspaper, "the voice of Greenville," so to speak, has to go "muckraking" in the public high school for a headline. In this case, the irresponsible zeal of your reporters and editors in the search for a story was detrimental to all involved. It destroyed the credibility of the Daily Reflector and the staff of our high school. Most of all, it hurt the students. With the modern generation gap, a story such as this one hardly helps the relations between the younger and older members of our community.

Rose High School is no haven for junior alcoholics as your article most ridiculously suggested. Why must the Daily Reflector report on the negative aspects of our high school when there are many more positive ones? Where are the headlines for our academic achievements (our high-ranking PSAT and SAT scores, our domination of state and local math contest, our winning of the State Quiz Bowl)? Where were the headlines telling the public about our winning of the conference cup given to the school with the most outstanding athletics each year? These are more worthy of coverage in your paper than our drinking problems.

I do hope that the Daily Reflector will show more responsibility and print "Truth in Preference to Fiction" in the future.

To the editor:

I am concerned with the law on mopeds. The law states that you must be 16 to drive a moped, but that you do not need to have a license. This enables a person who has lost his or her license because of driving intoxicated or for various other reasons to drive a moped. Mopeds are often referred to as "drunk mobiles."

It disturbs me that an irresponsible adult can drive a moped when a responsible 15-year-old cannot. Who is the greater risk? I believe you should be at least 16 to drive a moped, but I also believe you should have a license. This would be fair to everyone concerned.

As I Recall It Which Is True Basis For The Tar Heel Title?

By NOEL YANCEY

Many North Carolinians like to think the name Tar Heel is a tribute to the tenacity the state's sons display in battle and that it is an accolade bestowed by Gen. Robert E. Lee, the great Confederate commander.

One version has it that during a hotly contested Civil War battle, a regiment of North Carolinians stood its ground and saved the day after regiments on either side had broken and run. When General Lee asked what regiment it was, a brigadier general replied that the men were North Carolinians and the "reason they didn't run is because they've got tar on their heels and can't run."

"God bless North Carolina and its Tar Heels", Lee is supposed to have said.

Another version of that story says that after the fierce battle in which it held its ground while other outfits were fleeing, the North Carolina regiment was greeted with this question from a soldier of one of the derelict outfits: "Any more tar down in the Old North State, boys?"

"No, not a bit. Old Jeff's bought it all up," came the quick answer.

"Is that so? What is he going to do with it?" was the next question.

"He is going to put it on you'n's heels to make you stick better in the next fight."

These incidents or something similar may have happened, but they do not explain the origin of the term Tar Heel which some historians say was used, often in derision, to refer to North Carolinians long before the Civil War and possibly before the American Revolution.

Another legend credits the British with coining the term during the Revolution. That story relates how when the British Army under Lord Cornwallis was marching through Eastern North Carolina, Patriots dumped huge quantities of tar into the Tar River to impede their foes' progress. The British soldiers got tar on their shoes, and some of it remained weeks later when they surrendered at Yorktown. When asked about it, some British soldiers said North Carolina rivers flowed tar and that the people had tar on their feet.

This story sounds farfetched, and there's no solid historical evidence to back it up. So is the one to the effect that some slaves from North Carolina broke up a gambling game down in Mississippi. Under the rules, a person could keep all the pennies he could carry with his feet out of a ring on the ground. The North Carolina slaves smeared tar on their feet and walked off with the money. After that, they were known as Tar Heels.

There is no solid historical evidence to back up any of these stories, but they do point up the fact that the state undoubtedly got its nickname from a product of what was its most important industry for more than a century — the manufacture of naval stores, i.e., tar, pitch and turpentine. Historian Hugh Lefler says that "although the exact origin of the nickname 'Tar Heel' has never been established, ... it certainly has a connection with North Carolina's vast production of tar."

The term possibly developed as a derisive appellation for laborers in naval stores production whose bare feet became blackened by bits of tar which fell on the floors of tar kilns. With the passage of time, the name apparently came to be applied to North Carolinians generally, but until the time of the Civil War, the people of the state considered the term an expression of

WE'RE ALL GETTING THAT 'HOSTAGE' FEELING!

By Gail Michaels

Take The Word 'Rude' - And Don't Bring It Up

In the ongoing struggle to teach good manners, most parents eventually introduce the concept of rudeness. This concept appeals to parents because it covers behavior ranging from bad table manners to outright insults.

"But what does rude mean?" is the usual response to a parent's use of the term. "It means behavior that irritates another person or hurts his feelings."

"But why does not saying 'yes, ma'am' hurt an old person's feelings?"

"Because it implies that you don't have respect for that person."

"But what is respect?" We'll save that one for another day.

Of course, the battle against rudeness is, in the short run anyway, a losing one. In the first place, what may be irritating to an adult invariably delights a child. Witness the contests between siblings to see who can chew the most food with his mouth wide open before something falls out. The food that makes its way back to the table elicits giggles. A big belch is an occasion for glee.

In the second place, it's not only the irritating behavior itself which thrills the child; it's the very fact that it is so irritating. The average child's capacity for empathy is zilch. So what if his beloved mother will acquire a headache that defies Extra-Strength Excedrin. That monster-face she makes when she's angry is worth it.

That's another problem. Children just love to be scared. If they didn't, Hansel and Gretel would never have endured this long. So if I think that my grunts, glares, and grimaces are going to prevent Meg from interrupting my telephone conversations, I'm just plain stupid. She cowers behind the door for a few seconds, then comes bank prodding for more.

Quiet threats and hissing don't help much either. "That hurts my feelings!" Meg wails in the direction of the receiver.

"So?" "So, hurting my feelings is rude!"

Quite frankly, it's not for Meg's sake that I mourn my ineffectuality in this struggle. I assume that Meg will eventually develop a civilized veneer. I just hope I don't die of embarrassment first.

Her propensity for making public comments about strangers is her most discomfiting behavior, and these comments are on the increase. The other day, while we were waiting to have a prescription filled, we sat down next to an old lady with a gold front tooth.

"Look, Mommy," Meg bellowed. "That lady has a yellow tooth."

I gave Meg a stern glance and a mild pop on the bottom.

"Why did you do that?" she asked in a loud, wounded voice. "Did you do that just because I said that lady has a yellow tooth? Well, she does."

This incident seems insignificant when compared to what happened the very next day. I was talking to the manager of a local department store when Meg tapped him on the arm. "Hey," she said, "do you know you've got hair like a vampire?"

I was mortified. I apologized to the man and made Meg do so, too. He merely smiled. Then I laughed. And I couldn't stop. The man, did, indeed, have hair like a vampire's. The more I tried to apologize, the harder I laughed. It was awful.

On the way back to the car, Meg said, "Did you think I was funny or were you just being rude, too?"

I'm beginning to wish I'd never heard of that word.

Facing South

The Goatman, Now 97, Retired From Travels

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ga. — Charles "Chess" McCartney is 97 years old. He's spent almost a third of those years traveling about the country in a trinket-laden wagon pulled by 16 large Angora goats. The "Goatman" — as he's mostly called — has travelled with his goats to every state in the Union except Hawaii. They've even been to Alaska!

The Goatman's journeys began in the early years of the Great Depression. Through working long hours in the fields six days a week, and teaching the Gospel on the seventh, Chess was able to own his own home, some farmland and a church near his parents' homelace in middle Georgia. Compared to many of their neighbors, Chess and his family were prosperous.

But the economic crash of 1929 changed their lives completely. Seeing no future in farming, since food was plentiful but money was not, Chess and his family decided to see how the rest of the world was doing.

Leaving their worldly goods behind for those less fortunate, Chess took his wife, son and dog and set off in an old two-stage iron-wheeled wagon train, with enough food to last them through a long cold winter. These travels were to last — for the Goatman at least — for over 30 years.

The Goatman and his family, when they were with him, used to walk alongside the billy goats as they pulled his two wagons along the road. The first wagon carried the postcards and novelty trinkets which the Goatman sold along the way. The second wagon, which was hooked onto the first, was where they slept. The nanny goats and the young ones were tied behind it. Some of his goats stayed with their master for as long as 25 years.

A close friend of the Goatman, Hub Gardner, recalls the primitive conditions in which the Goatman thrived: "I've been over to Rome, Georgia, delivering cards to him when the snow would be knee-deep. And the only heat he had was a kerosene lantern hanging in the wagon. It burned all night. As I walked up I could see straight through the cracks in the wagon. He stayed on the road winter and summer enjoying it all."

Maybe due to the lack of competition in his unusual line of work, the Goatman has made plenty of money. He had many shrewd tricks for getting the most for his cards and novelties. One was building a fire near the road out of pieces of old rubber tires. The black smoke would roll up, bringing people running to see what it was.

"Look all you want to, folks," the Goatman would say. "Take pictures if you have cameras. If not, I have picture postcards for sale, 15 cents each or three for 50 cents." He says you wouldn't believe how many people would jump at that offer, thinking they were saving money. He would also preach to his customers out of his ever-handy Bible.

The Goatman invested his money in land, back when land was dirt-cheap and few people, especially in the South, had cash to buy it. He owns one-acre plots all over the United States. The Goatman's hobby is building churches — five, so far. One is a little log church on an acre of Louisiana swamp-land.

Life hasn't always been easy for the Goatman. "My arm was chewed all to pieces where a horse drug me across the road once," he told me recently, showing his twisted arm which he can still use very well. "But the only pain I have now at age 97 is where my leg has been slit on both sides and has eight screws in it, where the doctor fixed it up after some teen-age boys overturned my wagon with me in it. They also cut the throats of eight of my lead-goats and left them laying dead on the highway." Soon after this incident, in the early 1960s, the Goatman retired from the road to his homeplace near Jeffersonville.

Four or five years ago, his house there burned down. The Goatman lost most of his shoulder-length hair in escaping from the flames.

Still a traveling man at heart, he now lives in an old school bus near the site of his burned out house. Like his wagon, the bus has no electricity or other modern conveniences. But the Goatman doesn't miss them. The postcards and novelties are still selling, and people still come by to visit, buy, and listen to his tales of adventure on the road.

To any who have missed him since his retirement from his travels, the Goatman would like to say, "I'm still around and kicking, which I hope to be for some years to come. So look me up for a visit or drop me a line. It's always good to see and hear from old friends."

Principles Become Modified In Practice By Facts

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — A long time ago, James Fenimore Cooper laid down what might be defined as Cooper's Law for Practicing Politicians. As he grapples with the intractable dilemma of Japanese imports, President Reagan might find some comfort in it.

"Principles," said Cooper, "become modified in practice by facts."

The problem of Japanese imports meets all the qualifications of a true dilemma. When his sorely divided counselors finally stop arguing, Mr. Reagan will have two choices only. He can come down on the side of free trade; or he can come down on the side of protectionism. Under the unhappy circumstances at hand, there is not much to be said for free trade; there is not much to be said for protectionism either.

In the end Mr. Reagan must make a choice. If principles alone could decide the issue, the president would go for free trade. He would jaybone the Japanese, urging upon them the wisdom of voluntary restraint in their booming export business, but he would use every weapon at his command — including his power of veto — to prevent the imposition of quotas. All of Mr. Reagan's instincts go in this direction.

But the old Deerslayer had it right. The very best principles run into the very best facts and something has to give.

The case for principle is clear. In theory at least, ours is a free society, dedicated to the rule of the marketplace and to the rights of the consumer. If American auto manufacturers can't make it in the competitive marketplace, so the principle avows, let 'em go under. If American auto buyers want Toyotas instead of Chevies, that's their freeborn privilege. And besides, the argument continues, if principle were to be abandoned in the matter of the beleaguered auto industry, what other troubled industry would be next? In this view principle is like virginity; once lost, it cannot be regained.

The facts are equally clear. The American auto industry is our greatest industry. Directly or indirectly it provides one of every five jobs in the country. But the industry is a sick industry. Last year the sale of domestic cars slumped to 6.5 million units, less than the sales of 10 years ago. Undeniably, one big reason for the slump is that Americans last year bought 1.9 million Japanese imports.

How did the industry get in this fix? It is easy enough to say, in hindsight, that management should have foreseen a demand by 1981 for small, fuel-efficient cars. Management should have foreseen OPEC, and soaring gasoline prices, and swiftly changing consumer demands. Through a rear-vision mirror, 20-20 eyesight is no trick at all.

Today's root problems are directly traceable to political and economic folly. While the price of gasoline was increasing elsewhere in the world, thus compelling the development of Volkswagens, Toyotas and Hondas, our government kept gasoline prices low here at home. We loved it. No one can recall complaints against 30-cent gas. But the effect was to create a market for the gas guzzlers.

That economic misjudgment then was compounded by other factors, especially by a mountainous burden of federal rules and regulations. Inflation pushed up the wages of auto workers to a point where hourly wages in the U.S. are double those in Japan. For a number of reasons, our productivity lagged. Japanese plants are highly automated. Robots do much of the work. The car-per-worker ratio for a Toyota is 66-to-1. The ratio for a Ford or GM car is 10-to-1.

Sick as it is, the domestic industry is not terminally ill. Spokesmen for both labor and management contend that if reasonable quotas could be imposed upon Japan for the next three years, most of the problem would be solved. Old principles, they insist, would not be permanently compromised. These arguments may not convince Mr. Reagan, but they seem mighty persuasive to me.

Churches planned special services and prayers locally in memory of the fallen president.

David Julian Whichard, then publisher of The Daily Reflector, wrote of previous presidential tragedies:

"In 1901, in addition to publishing The Reflector, my father was manager of the local Western Union telegraph office, combined with his editorial offices. I happened to be on hand at the office when the first news flash of the shooting of President McKinley at the Buffalo world's fair occurred.

"Death did not come suddenly as was the case with President Kennedy yesterday, and therefore the country had a brief shock and prepare itself for the end that was sure to follow."

The newspaper commented editorially, "Though the period of mourning will of necessity be short as the ship of state moves forward, the memory of the man, his ideals, his dedication and his achievements for his nation will linger as long as this generation survives. They will be written indelibly upon the pages of history to provide a sure and challenging guide for the new generations of Americans to whom the torch of liberty and democracy will be passed."

Nov. 22, 1963 was indeed a dark day for the nation. March 30, 1981 came so close to being equally as dark. Fortunately, it was not so.

Such a program is exactly what the Reagan administration wants to accomplish in the next four years. That the Kremlin would become its unwitting agent may influence deliberations in Moscow. In using force against Poland, the Soviets are delivering to Washington the most elusive goal of the past two decades: acknowledged leadership of the anti-Soviet alliance.

Beaches Set For Annual Trek

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — This north Florida resort has surpassed Fort Lauderdale in the battle for business during the lucrative spring break, when tens of thousands of sun-starved, exam-weary college students flock to beaches and bars.

By Easter Sunday, Daytona Beach will be able to boast some 300,000 student visitors since the first week of March. Fort Lauderdale officials say their total will be about 200,000.

For migratory students, spring break means swilling beer, baking in the sun and scanning scantily clad members of the opposite sex. "Young people need a release, especially college-age young people," said Jerry Taylor, an executive of National Lampoon magazine. "This is a very confusing time in their lives. They're still being treated like kids in some ways, but they're becoming adults."

The popular movie, "Where the Boys Are," 20 years ago romanticized Fort Lauderdale as the place to go on spring break. But city officials, concerned about the proliferation of fast-food restaurants and "head shops," have set their sites on wealthier, older tourists. They have rezoned the area to attract posh hotels, elegant clothing stores and corporate conventions.

And Daytona Beach, aided by opening of Disney World and other theme parks, has picked up spring break business.

Fort Lauderdale's new zoning affects a stretch of Florida Route A1A known as the "strip." Aimed at the spring break crowd, teen-age runaways and drug peddlers, the laws forbid opening some new businesses such as "head shops," fortune tellers and moped rentals. New bars would also be forbidden unless they are part of a hotel.

East, a speech teacher, associate dean of IUPUI's liberal arts school, and director of the Learn and Shop and Weekend College programs, sold store managers on giving him free classroom space by telling them they'd sell merchandise to all those students.

Experience proved the students were grateful for a chance to learn close to home. East said one woman recently told him because of that gratitude, "Every time I come to Sears I buy something."

The first semester the courses drew 503 students. This semester 2,102 people are enrolled, 73 percent of them women.

They pay $29 for a one-credit course or $87 for a three-credit course. Unlike students on campus who would attend three 50-minute lectures a week, the shopping center students attend one 2½-hour lecture a week.

East planned first for general education courses, whose credits would be useful going into most degree programs. Then he worked in skills courses, such as English composition, grammar review, speech and foreign languages.

Now he's into special interest areas.

"The theme of women seems to attract a number of people," he said, so there are courses on women in literature and politics, and the psychology and biology of women.

"Professors fight to get those classes," East said, because they discovered the ablest students are the older ones at the shopping centers.

Students entering IUPUI at the main campus are tested their first day for English skills. More than half have to take remedial courses. Only 15 percent of the shopping center students need remedial work, East said.

"So many of these women doubt their abilities. They think they won't be able to keep up with those bright young things. Then they find out that they are the bright young things," East said.

A breakdown by age shows 21 percent of Learn and Shop students are 21 and under, 38 percent are 22 to 30, 24 percent are 31 to 40, 10 percent are 41 to 50, and 4 percent are over 50.

For some women, that first course is a way to ease themselves into a degree program—a thing some don't dare admit to their husbands, East said.

But it's not frightening to student or spouse to start with one course for one credit at $29.

"It's a real bargain to be able to go to college for $29," he said.

82nd Airborne Troopers Draw Praise For Quick-Strike Jump

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — More than 1,800 troopers from the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg took part in a mass drop Friday which drew praise from top Army, Air Force and Rapid Deployment Force leaders.

On hand for the show of quick-strike force were the secretaries of the Army and Air Force and several commanding generals to watch the huge jump of three Fort Bragg infantry battalions.

After jet ground support aircraft screamed over the drop zone for about 15 minutes, nine C-130 transport aircraft dropped the paratroopers' heavy equipment on 72 pallets.

Close afterwards came the 15 C-141B jet transports dropping lines of paratroopers into the air.

Except for a handful of troopers dropped into trees along one side of the drop zone and one soldier whose neck was slightly cut by a static line as he exited the aircraft, the jump went off without incident, according to initial reports.

Lt. Gen. Thomas Tackaberry, commander of the XVIII Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg, praised the exercise as unique opportunity for his troops.

"The advantage in an exercise like this is that we rarely get to jump such a large number of men and have them go through the whole process," he said.

While praising the rapid-deployment exercise, the Army and Air Force leaders said that the United States is desperately short of airlift capability for a large-scale deployment.

Gen. Robert E. Huyser, commander of Military Airlift Command, said that in a large-scale emergency deployment, the military could experience a 50-percent shortfall in airlift.

"We do very well with our peacetime mission, but in a large contingency situation, we'll fall 40 or 50 percent short of our requirements," Huyser said. "We don't have sufficient airlift to do all of our job."

Huyser and other high-ranking Air Force officials have come out publicly for the purchase of a new airlifter capable of both strategic and tactical missions.

The proposed aircraft, dubbed the CX, does not yet have an approved contractor and would probably not be available before 1987.

Because of the time and cost of creating a new aircraft, some congressional members are pushing for the use of civilian-type aircraft to meet the airlift shortfall.

Air Force Secretary Verne Orr said Friday he will make a recommendation to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on which route to take to meet the shortfall, but declined to choose a preference.

Another issue involving which branches of the service should participate in the Rapid Deployment Force came up after the drop.

Lt. Gen. Kelly said he could not speak for the Marine Corps, but stated his personal belief that the Rapid Deployment Force needs elements from four armed service branches.

"I say unequivocally as commander of the Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force that I could not accomplish my mission without a four-service force," Kelly said.

Army Secretary Marsh said the decision on the make-up of the RDF is not in his hands, but he supports a continued strong Army role.

He said the decision is up to the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The troops are scheduled to conduct two more days of training before returning to Fort Bragg.

Also participating in the maneuvers at Eglin are aircraft from the 9th Air Force of Shaw Air Force Base, S.C., and aircraft from the 21st Air Force from Scott Air Force Base, Ill.

Dayan Enters Race

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Moshe Dayan entered Israel's election race Saturday, making an exciting three-way contest out of what had looked like a straightforward battle between Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Labor Party leader Shimon Peres.

If the 65-year-old soldier-statesman succeeds, it will be the third comeback in his stormy, drama-filled career.

An opinion poll predicted 11 seats for Dayan's newly-launched party in the Knesset, or Parliament, 46 for the Labor Party and 33 for Begin's Likud bloc in the elections June 30.

Such an outcome would give Dayan a commanding position from which to dictate terms for joining a coalition government.

Dayan has served as defense minister for the Labor Party and as foreign minister for Likud.

It was left for Zebulon B. Vance, North Carolina's highly popular governor, to make the nickname an accolade rather than an epithet. The story is that while campaigning for reelection in 1864, Vance visited the Army of Northern Virginia where General Lee ordered a mammoth review in his honor. After the review, Vance addressed the North Carolinians among the troops. The governor, who had doffed the uniform of colonel when he took office, was quoted as saying:

"I hardly know where to begin. I can't call you fellow soldiers since I no longer am a fighting man. I can't call you fellow citizens, since none of us are citizens of this state.

"But I can and will call you fellow Tar Heels," Vance added.

Some who were present said that

Vance's words were followed by a pause and that then a mighty cheer arose from the troops.

"From that time, 'Tar Heel' has been honored as an epithet worthy to be offered to a gallant North Carolina soldier," recounted Maj. W.A. Graham, a Confederate officer who heard the speech.

So, North Carolinians, particularly those who attended the University of North Carolina, became proud to be called Tar Heels. By 1888, sports writers were referring to the UNC baseball team as the Tar Heels, and in 1911, they gave the same name to the UNC basketball team. Since 1893, the UNC student newspaper has been known as the Tar Heel, and the voices of UNC alumni choke slightly when they sing their Alma Mater, "Hark the sound of Tar Heel voices," which was written in 1897.

State Firefighters Placed On "Red Flag" Alert For Today

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Three major forest fires continued to give harried firefighters problems Saturday as the state Forest Service prepared for what a spokesman called "the most critical day yet" for the state's forests.

But by evening, foresters were cautiously optimistic after a relatively light day of new reports.

A 50-man supervisory team was placed on alert and a "Red Flag Alert" remained in effect, spokesman Dane Roten said Saturday.

A statewide burning ban issued Thursday also remained in effect.

"Today is still critical. Even though the humidity is higher (than it was on Friday) were some areas reported humidity as low as 8 percent), winds are expected to be 25 to 30 miles an hour and temperatures will be in the 80s," he said.

The earliest relief could come Sunday, when scattered thundershowers are predicted, he said. However, rainfall amounts were predicted to be light.

On Friday, firefighters battled blazes on 120 fronts. The fires destroyed more than 2,000 acres of wood and brush.

The three fires that vexed firefighters the most problems Saturday included a fire in Watauga County near Aho, which charred 636 acres and destroyed a summer home Friday, an 800-acre fire in Hyde County where five tanker trucks were assigned and a fire burning over several hundred acres in Perquimans County near Elizabeth City, Roten said.

Roten said a flying Neptune tanker dropped more than 3,000 gallons of fire retardant on a fire on Roan Mountain in Mitchell County Friday, helping bring that blaze under control.

"The situation today (Saturday) is the most critical day yet, with high temperatures and high winds. Fires are more likely to escape with high winds as it will blow sparks and debris across fire lines.

"We're expecting the worst and we hope it doesn't happen," said Roten Saturday morning.

By Saturday evening, however, forest service fire prevention specialist Tom Hegele said conditions were much better than anticipated. Only 31 fires were reported during the day and all but seven had been extinguished.

However, Hegele cautioned his report reflected only fires reported "so far."

"I'm pleased," said Hegele just before 5 p.m. Saturday. "If it just stays this way. Of course, we'll get final figures in the morning, but for this time of day, I'm encouraged considering the severity of the weather. People are being careful."

Hegele noted that although higher humidities were predicted for overnight, gusty winds, and scant accumulations of rain would keep fire dangers high into Sunday.

Among the new fires reported Saturday was one which burned 300 acres in Jones County north of Jacksonville and a 200-acre fire in Robison County south of Lumberton.

Hegele also said a 30-acre fire still burning in Swain County could turn into a problem because of mountainous terrain hampering fire fighting efforts.

Meanwhile, a cancellation of all burning permits continued, which means that all outdoor burning, regardless of the distance to wooded areas or the time of day, is prohibited.

Violation of the ban is a misdemeanor and is punishable by a fine of $50 and imprisonment for 30 days.

Industry Is Blamed For Acid Rain

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A North Carolina researcher considered to be a national expert on pollution fallout said industry deserves much of the blame for acid rain which has blanketed the Northeast.

"Acid rain falls in Michigan almost every time it rains," Ellis Cowling, associate dean of forest resources at North Carolina State University at Raleigh.

Cowling was one of more than a hundred scientists who gathered for a three-day Michigan State University conference on the relatively new environmental problem.

The scientists are sharing research work and ways to combat acid rain. Acid rain is created when sulfur and nitrogen combine with oxygen in the atmosphere.

The product sometimes forms hydrochloric acids in solutions strong enough to kill lakes, forests, fish and plants.

Scientists blame tall industrial smokestacks, metal smelters, cars, home furnaces and coal-burning electric plants in the Midwest and Great Lakes states for the pollution.

"We can all enjoy a major portion of the credit for emissions," Cowling said.

Cowling said he had no list showing the biggest polluters in Michigan or the areas of the state most vulnerable to the moisture cited as the culprit in the death of lakes, fish and forests.

However, studies show that rain in Michigan sometimes has a pH level of between 4 and 4.5 — a liquid with the acidity of "between pickle juice and normal," Cowling said.

Rain in Michigan has been logged at 10 to 20 times more acidic than average precipitation, he said.

Researchers have evidence of acid rain's "substantially detrimental" effects on lakes, forests, plants and animals.

Crop land appears to be less vulnerable to the moisture because it is "so intensively managed" by farmers and others, Cowling said.

At a news conference summarizing the conference, Cowling also called on people to learn more about the potential hazards of acid rain.

Earthquake Shakes Rhode Island Area

PORTSMOUTH, R.I. (UPI) — An noisy earthquake shook residents awake in a dozen communities in the eastern third of Rhode Island Saturday but caused no damage.

Boston College's Weston Observatory in Newton, Mass., said the 4:24 a.m. quake, in the Narragansett Basin, registered 2.7 on the Richter scale.

"It was large enough to be felt and was shallow enough to be heard," said Weston seismologist Peter Raica. "It was a rather average New England earthquake but relatively minor by other standards."

The sound resembled a thunder clap or sonic boom — and its jarring noise prompted residents to call local police departments in a matter of minutes.

"We got quite a few (calls) beginning at 4:29," said Portsmouth Patrolman Richard Medeiros. "The guys at the station here said they thought it was a plane crash or something."

The center of the quake was pinpointed as 41 degrees, 59 minutes north and 71 degrees, 22 minutes west — in Narragansett Bay, just off the northern tip of Portsmouth.

Medeiros, 43, said was home sleeping when the quake woke him up.

"It sounded like one heck of a rumble and roar," he said. "I didn't know what it was at first, but I figured it was a quake because I heard the two in '76."

Two earlier quakes occurred in Portsmouth on March 11, 1976. They registered Richter readings of 3.5 and 2.4.

Consumer Group Seeks Reduction Of Profits

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A consumer group is pushing a bill to cut the profit margin of credit insurance in half to short circuit what it calls the "tremendous profits" creditors and insurance companies reap from it.

At the urging of Legal Services of North Carolina, state Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Charlotte, has filed a bill that do just that.

Credit insurance is sold in connection with loans or installment sales that covers the life, health or collateral of the borrower. For example, a borrower would purchase such insurance to pay off a loan should he die or become disabled.

"Tremendous profits are being earned by the companies," said Mathis, who chairs the Senate Insurance Committee. "For every dollar paid, consumers only get back 28 cents."

"It's very expensive insurance considering the benefits and I think it needs to be looked at, especially since we have been raising the interest rates on loans."

Legal Services said in 1979, North Carolina consumers paid $124.8 million in credit insurance premiums, but only received $35.7 million in benefits. That means the insurers were only suffering a loss of about 28 percent.

The consumer group said the National Association of Insurance Commissioners has determined that a 60 percent loss is reasonable to provide a fair rate of return to the insurance industry.

And this is what the Mathis bill calls for, which Mathis says would save North Carolina consumers more than $65 million a year.

In a prepared statement, Legal Services said charges for credit insurance can be a sizeable part of the loan. "For example, on a $1,400 cash advance loan, more than $35 in credit life, disability and property insurance can be added, increasing the borrower's liability by 37 percent," the statement said.

And the group adds that since the insurance is so profitable, more coverage than necessary to cover the loan is sometimes sold.

Mathis said the insurance companies are not the only ones reaping the benefits. She said creditors are given commissions as high as 50 percent for selling the insurance — another area that has to be studied. She also said many consumer finance companies also own insurance companies, "so they are piling up the profits."

Mathis said her bill calls for a study to be conducted by the Department of Insurance into the problem.

But Mathis is not optimistic about getting the bill through intact.

"We're going to get so much flak from the insurance industry that I don't think we're going to get it all through," she said. "That's why we're asking the Department of Insurance to analyze what's appropriate for North Carolina."

She added that it is something the Insurance Department should have already done.

Fair Sentencing Backer Fearful Of More Changes

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The senator most responsible for shepherding amendments to the Fair Sentencing Act through the General Assembly says he's scared opponents to the act will still sabotage his work.

Sen. Henson P. Barnes, D-Wayne, says three years of legislative struggle to put the act into effect could be ruined if the opponents can push a certain bill by Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, into law.

The measure would gut the Fair Sentencing Act's intent of mandating standard sentences for crimes. Jenkins' bill would go back to the current system of giving judges a wide range of prison terms and fines they can levy.

The act actually comes in two versions, neither of which have yet been enacted — a sign of the heated debate over the question.

The original act, passed in 1979 and now scheduled to take effect April 15, puts every felony in a class based on its severity and establishes so-called "presumed" sentences for each class. Judges who want to give a different sentence than the presumed one can change the sentence only on the basis of a few listed factors.

On Friday, the Senate concurred to a substantial rewrite of the act and scheduled the changes to take effect July 1. The amendments downgrade almost all but the severest presumed sentences by 25 percent, exempt from the act all cases where the defendant bargains for a sentence and add 27 new factors permitting a harsher or tougher sentence.

Jenkins' bill now is in the Senate Judiciary I Committee, which is chaired by conservative Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, and includes in its membership another conservative, Sen. Robert Swain, D-Buncombe.

"I'm a little worried that the bill could come out of Judiciary I," Barnes said Friday. "There have been comments made on the floor by three members of that committee (Jenkins, Allsbrook and Swain) that I don't like."

Allsbrook, for example, commented during Friday's debate over whether to concur on House changes to the amendments that he didn't like the act even with all its new provisions.

Women Told To Expect Role Of Tokenism

ATLANTA (UPI)—South Carolina Lt. Gov. Nancy Stevenson told Democratic women Saturday the Reagan administration will be marked by "years of tokenism" with very few women appointed to federal jobs and judgeships.

"The appointment situation is so bad that even Republican women are complaining," she told the Georgia Federation of Democratic Women.

She said Phyllis Schlafly, the anti-Equal Rights Amendment activist who formed the "Stop ERA" organization, recently complained President Reagan named only four women among 57 appointments. She said Republican National Committee cochairman Betty Heilman called the new administration's record "not too good to date."

The South Carolina lieutenant governor said Reagan's judicial appointments could "seriously damage our future for years to come." She noted that five of the nine U.S. Supreme Court justices are over 70, including "two of the most progressive justices," Thurgood Marshall and William Brennan.

"Should President Reagan replace three to five of these older justices, there will be a dramatic change in the composite attitude of the court," she said. "An unsympathetic court could reverse much of what has been done."

She added, "nor can we count on our Constitution to protect us" without the Equal Rights Amendment. Former President Carter supported the ERA, but Reagan opposes it.

"Under President Carter,

we were making a little progress — at least having an opportunity to prove ourselves," she said. "President Carter appointed 71 percent of all the female federal judges in the history of this country. He appointed 50 percent of all the female cabinet officers that had ever been appointed and nearly 40 percent of all female ambassadors."

During the Carter administration, she said, women "were able to make a small dent in that awful stereotyped image of women as emotional creatures who break down under stress and who are totally incapable of balancing a checkbook."

She said it will be impossible to change such an image of women unless female judges and administrators continue to be appointed to policy-making positions.

"Unfortunately, I'm afraid the next four years are going to be years of tokenism as far as appointments of women are concerned," she said. "I'm afraid we are going to be denied access to highly visible positions."

She said American women "face much more than a challenge" to themselves.

Final Census Figure Shows State Gained 15.5 Percent

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Final census figures show North Carolina's population grew 15.5 percent during the 1970s, with a development boom, on the coast and in the mountains.

The figures also showed that more people moved into the state than left.

Mecklenburg County retained its position as the state's most populous county, with 404,270 residents as of April 1, 1980.

Dare County's population on the coast increased 91.2 percent, to 13,337, to make it the fastest-growing area. Currituck was second with a 59 percent increase to 11,089 residents.

Wake County added 31.4 percent for a total of 300,833 people.

Total population for the state after the figures were adjusted showed North Carolina's population as 5,874,429.

Because of relaxed annexation laws, four of North Carolina's five biggest cities grew: Charlotte hit 314,447, up 30.2 percent, and Greensboro, Raleigh and Durham also added people. Only Winston-Salem lost residents, down 1.3 percent from the 1970 figures.

An estimated 393,000 more people moved into North Carolina than left, turning around the figures for the previous two Census years. In the 1950s, about 328,000 more people left the state than moved in and in the 1960s, about 70,000 more left.

North Carolina's reversal was most apparent in the mountain area and coastal areas. The mountains grew 17.1 percent during the 1970s, up from 11.4 percent the previous decade, and the coast grew 13.6 percent, up from 4.5 percent.

The Piedmont stood steady at a 16.3 percent increase.

The adjusted figures, which are the official results of the 1980 Census, will be used to determine North Carolina's share of $50 billion in federal money.

Three Wrecks Cause About $925 Damage

An estimated $925 in property damages resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police Friday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 9:20 a.m. collision on East Fifth Street involving cars driven by Johnnie Mack Tucker Jr. of Route 1, Box 390AA, Bethel, and Catherine Joyce Carraway of 1308 Davis St., Jacksonville.

Damage was set at $250 and $75 to the Carraway vehicle.

A car driven by John Long of 1222 Farmville Blvd. struck a parked car in the parking lot of Hardees on Greenville Boulevard about 12:38 p.m. Friday, resulting in $200 of damage to the parked vehicle and none to the Long vehicle, police said.

A 12:40 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard involved cars operated by Donald Edward Carr of 1223 E. Patrick Cir., Cary, and Kennet Wayne Sloope of 807-B 66th Ave. N., Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Damage was set at $300 to the Sloope vehicle and none to the Carr vehicle.

Two Victims Are Buried As Search Goes On

By NANCY KENNEY
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A city that has buried a score of young blacks mourned two more victims Saturday as 125 searchers fanned out across rugged terrain seeking clues to the string of killings.

"How long will these attacks go on?" said Mayor Maynard Jackson at funeral services for Eddie "Bubba" Duncan, a 21-year-old retarded black man whose body was fished from the muddy Chattahoochee River last week.

"How long will the families of Atlanta be able to take it? How long will I, as mayor, be able to take it? How long will the police, working 24 hours a day, seven days a week, be able to take it? The answer is: as long as we have to ... We have no choice but to endure, to be tougher than those who would attack us," he said.

Duncan is the only adult on the list of a special police task force investigating the slayings of 22 blacks. The task force also is investigating the disappearance of two black youngsters.

Funeral services were scheduled later Saturday for 13-year-old Timothy Hill, whose body was pulled from the same river last Monday.

A light-colored coffin covered with red, white and pink flowers held Duncan's body as his sobbing mother Betty was helped into Thornton Mortuary. Duncan was buried on the hillside of a southwest Atlanta cemetery.

"Eddie's family today is citywide," said the Rev. Terry Moncrief, director of the Clark Howell-Techwood Baptist Center, in the housing project where Duncan lived.

Meanwhile, some 125 searchers spread out across an 81-square-mile area that encompassed stretches of the river where the two bodies were found. The area south of Atlanta included developed roads as well as dense, wooded areas laced with small creeks flowing into the Chattahoochee.

Searchers had lists of the clothes Duncan and Hill were wearing when they were last seen in March, as well as the clothes that one of the missing youths, 16-year-old Joseph Bell, was wearing when he was last seen March 2.

Hill and Duncan, like at least two other victims, were clad only in undershorts when their bodies were found.

Medical examiners said Hill, like most of the other victims, was asphyxiated before his body was dumped into the river. No cause of death has been established for Duncan, but authorities classified his death as a homicide because of similarities with some of the child slayings.

In other developments Saturday:

—Atlanta authorities said they will seek extradition of a 34-year-old black arrested in Hartford, Conn., last week as a fugitive from an Atlanta attempted robbery charge. Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton said the man, Larry Marshall, may have known Timothy Hill.

"We will interview him because there is some indication he knew one of the victims," Slaton said.

But a spokeswoman for Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said the commissioner does not consider Marshall a suspect in the slayings.

—A source close to the task force said police have received information that as many as seven of the slain or missing youths were seen in the company of people who frequented a house known as a homosexual hangout.

"Police aren't going to say anything publicly until they have some evidence," the source said.

The source cited a report received by police that Hill had been spotted with a known homosexual about 10 days ago.

Police Expect More Bodies

WEEKI WACHEE, Fla. (UPI) — Police said Saturday they believe two or more bodies may still be buried near the rural home of two alleged sex offenders where the skeletons of three women have been found so far.

The third skeleton was uncovered Friday night and taken to Tampa where it was to be examined in the laboratories of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement. Investigators said they could not yet identify it.

The bones were uncovered by a digging machine, and then deputies with masonry trowels and paint brushes moved in to remove the sandy soil from around the skeleton.

Maj. C.E. Crosby of the Hernando County Sheriff's Department said digging operations were suspended after the skeleton was found, but would resume Monday.

"We're just going to expand the search a little further. We shall stay there until we are completely satisfied there are no more bodies out there," Crosby said. "We're looking for two, maybe three, more bodies at this time."

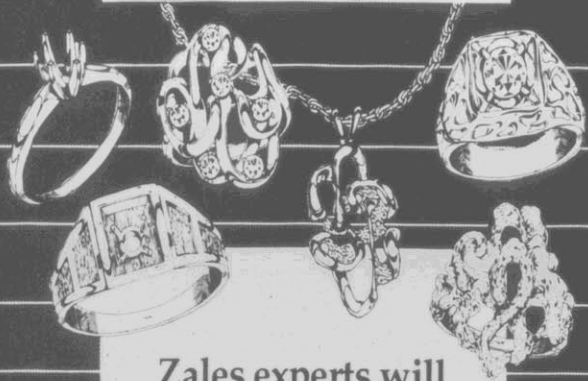

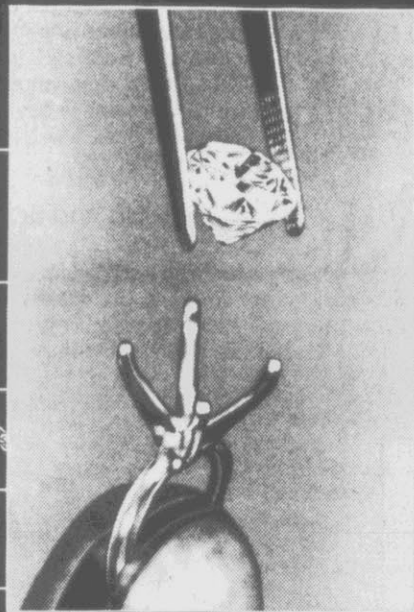

The homesite is owned by William Mansfield, 56, who was sentenced last November to 30 years in prison for sex crimes involving young girls. His 25-year-old son Billy Mansfield also is in jail for a crime involving a female.

The younger Mansfield is awaiting trial in Santa Cruz, Calif., for murder of a 30-year-old woman whose body was found along a road Dec. 7.

Crosby said the elder Mansfield is not a suspect in the deaths of the three victims whose skeletons have been found. But he said Billy Mansfield is a prime suspect in the death of Elaine Ziegler, 15, of Warren, Ohio, whose skeleton was the second uncovered.

She disappeared from a campground nine miles away on Dec. 31, 1975 and the search warrant which led to the start of the search March 16 listed Billy Mansfield as the suspect in her disappearance.

ECU Hosts Festivals

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University's School of Music was host to two recent statewide music festivals, sponsored by the N.C. Federated Music Clubs and the N.C. Music Teachers Association.

Students from various North Carolina locations performed before judges for ratings and written comments. A total of about 500 students were involved in the events.

Judges for the Federated Music Clubs Festival were ECU faculty members Charles Bath, Henry Doskey, Patricia Foltz, Virginia Linn, Marilyn Lucht, Richard Lucht, Stephen Maziarz and Robert Irwin.

The competition was coordinated by Dr. Chales Bath of ECU and Rachel Mundine, a private teacher in Newport, who is eastern district chairman.

Judges for the N.C. Music Teachers Association contest were Neill Andrews of Burlington, Frances Evans and Loren Withers of Durham and Paul Stewart of Greensboro. Dr. Bath was chairman for local arrangements.

Contest Ends At Elmhurst

Elmhurst School has just completed a school wide reading contest. During the past month the 350 students at Elmhurst have read 10,798 books.

The story of the Gingerbread Boy was the theme of the contest: "Read, Read as Fast as You Can". Each child had a gingerbread boy to move on the school wide bulletin board each time five books were read.

Every child who read 20 or more books received a certificate and those who read 30 or more received a book as a prize. The top reader in each grade level was presented with a trophy. Stephen Wyatt a kindergarten read 97 books. Sheila Carter, first grader, read 81 books. Genny Redding a second grader read 106 books and Heather Crawford, third grade, read 94 books.

Auditor Says State Too Easy In Nursing Home Enforcement

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Elderly residents of some nursing homes in North Carolina are risking their health because the state is too lenient in enforcing nursing home regulations, the state auditor's office charged Friday.

The report, released by state Auditor Edward Renfrow, says the Department of Human Resources has not enforced many regulations among nursing homes that operate with state Medicaid money.

"We think that, overall, the state is doing a lousy job of administering that program," Renfrow said in an interview with the News and Observer of Raleigh.

A few nursing homes in the state have been cited for "many severe violations" but continue to operate and collect money from the Medicaid program, the report said.

Renfrow called for new penalties for nursing homes that fail to provide adequate care.

The report also recommended that the Legislature adopt a system to rate nursing homes' compliance with state and federal regulations, similar to the grading of restaurants.

The report cited these reasons for the problem:

— "Leniency" by the department's division of facility services in enforcement of certification and license requirements.

— A lack of sufficient documentation by the department for nursing home deficiencies that warrant enforcement proceedings.

— A lack of established criteria to determine when penalties should be imposed or temporary licenses issued.

— A lack of enforcement methods, short of revoking a nursing home's license.

"While we fully realize that examples of unacceptable conditions may be limited to a few nursing homes, it seems that the current system, with all its papers, time and cost, cannot effectively encourage or require that these few nursing homes improve their operations to an acceptable level," Renfrow said in a prepared statement.

"Apparently, the same homes year after year continue to have problems and patients in these homes must continue to live in substandard conditions," he said.

Renfrow proposed legislation that would allow the state to assume temporary control of homes when it finds conditions that may be hazardous to nursing home residents.

Other proposals would give the state power to impose civil penalties for various classes of violations and power to give nursing homes public ratings based on their degree of compliance with state standards.

Auditors found examples of several new nursing home projects with more than $4 million in unapproved costs, according to the report.

Jim Graham Says Peanut Plan Needed

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The Reagan administration's plans to deregulate the federal peanut program would seriously hurt North Carolina's farmers, Agriculture Secretary James A. Graham says.

Graham warned Agriculture Secretary John R. Block in a letter Friday that Block's proposals "will essentially ruin the operating procedures that have been developed since mandatory price support loans and marketing quotas were established."

"I very much oppose this action and will do everything in my power to prevent it," he wrote.

Block urged Congress Tuesday to wipe out the acreage allotment system now and phase out the marketing quota system by 10 percent a year.

Allotments are limits on the amount of peanuts the government lets each farmer grow. In exchange for those restrictions, the government promises to buy the farmers' product at a certain price if they cannot get a better offer on the open market.

Those allotments and quotas restrict the peanut industry, Block claimed. Graham looked to the benefits instead.

"This program has provided production stability to the peanut grower and has removed a large amount of his risk over the years," he said. "The unrealistically low support prices and drastic cuts in quotas as have been proposed will not be in the best interest of the peanut farmer."

About 11,000 North Carolina farmers in 14 counties, mostly in the northeast, grew $1 million worth of peanuts last season. The state's crop constitutes about 10 percent of the national total.

Staph Strains Cited As Cause Of Many Ills In Hospitals

ATLANTA (UPI) — The National Centers for Disease Control says a common bacterial infection resistant to antibiotics is emerging as a major cause of hospital infections.

The bacteria, staphylococcus aureus, has long been resistant to penicillin and is becoming increasingly resistant to methicillin, the main antibiotic used to fight it, the CDC said Friday.

There are several strains of staph aureus, which is the cause of many hospital infection cases following surgery or the insertion of catheters.

The CDC said that over the last 10 years methicillin-resistant staph aureus has become a major cause of hospital infections in many countries but did not appear in the United States as early as in other countries.

The federal health agency cited a survey of hospitals conducted by the University of Virginia Hospital, where the resistant-strain first cropped up. The survey showed that methicillin-resistant staph aureus was present in all categories of medical centers surveyed. Hospitals reporting the resistant bacteria were widely distributed geographically.

"Staph aureus is one of the more common bacteria that cause infections in people in hospitals or out," said Dr. James Allen of the CDC's hospital infections branch. He said the bacteria caused a lot of infection in people during the 1950s and 1960s, in epidemic proportion, but that its incidence had decreased, for unknown reasons, since then.

Allen said that given its prevalence in Europe, the length of time it took the resistant strain to show up in this country was puzzling. "But we do feel that physicians need to be aware that it's out there and to make sure you're giving the right drug."

Staph aureus is the same family of bacteria that causes toxic shock syndrome, a sometimes fatal infection of women that strikes during menstrual cycles. But Allen said the increase in cases related to the methicillin-resistant strain had nothing to do with the incidence of toxic-shock syndrome.

Is "CHAPTER 13" BANKRUPTCY?

Certainly it is! Ask any bank, lending or finance company, or credit business. It is administered by bankruptcy officials and considered bankruptcy. It damages your credit record. It hurts your ability to get credit in the future.

Don't be misled by those who encourage you to "take Chapter 13" and tell you it isn't as damaging as bankruptcy. Ask if they will make money if you "take Chapter 13" or file bankruptcy. Ask yourself why they encourage you to take this drastic step that can affect your life unfavorably for years and years.

If you think "Chapter 13" or a regular bankruptcy isn't damaging to you, the answers to these questions will surprise you. Think twice before you ruin your credit standing and your personal life through the advice of those who will profit from your making such a tremendous mistake.

Grand Jury Biased Hobby Lawyers Say

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Citing alleged grand jury abuse, attorneys for state AFL-CIO president Wilbur Hobby have asked for dismissals of fraud and conspiracy indictments against Hobby.

In an effort to prove abuse by the jurors and by the U.S. Attorney's Office, the lawyers requested access Friday to the records of the federal grand jury that indicted Hobby. Grand jury records and proceedings are confidential.

Hobby, a suspended state official and a Hobby associate were indicted in February by a federal grand jury in connection with the alleged misuse of federal job-training funds by Hobby's printing company. Hobby's trial is scheduled for June 8 in Raleigh.

Lawyers have filed several hundred pages of pretrial requests in U.S. District Court.

The federal government has until April 24 to reply to the eight motions submitted by attorneys Donald H. Beskind of Durham and David S. Rudolf of Chapel Hill.

U.S. Attorney James L. Blackburn refused to comment on the motions, saying the government's answers would be filed "at the appropriate time."

Hobby's lawyers allege that:

- The indictments against Hobby were based on invalid subpoenas.
- Grand jurors were biased by prejudicial pre-indictment publicity and political advertising.
- The indictments were vague and failed to state specific offenses that Hobby allegedly committed.
- Grand jurors were improperly selected, and some possibly missed significant evidence because of an alleged informal rotation scheme whereby jurors took turns taking time off from grand jury sessions.

The law requires that 16 members of the 23-member grand jury be present in a quorum before indictments can be returned. Twelve of the jurors must vote to indict.

Hobby's attorneys contend that the 12 jurors who voted to indict "must have been present to hear all of the evidence presented by the prosecutor."

The attorneys also have requested access to grand jury records to determine the source of alleged leaks to the media of grand jury proceedings.

They also want a hearing to determine whether the grand jurors were biased by pre-indictment media reports about Hobby's alleged violations, as well as television commercials that suggested Hobby had received job-training contracts as a "political payoff."

The commercials were aired in the fall of 1979 by the conservative Congressional Club in an attack on the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt.

Memphis March Marks King Death

Hundreds of others marched in New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and other cities.

In Atlanta, where 24 black youths have been slain or disappeared during the past 20 months, King's widow, Coretta, marked the anniversary of her husband's assassination by warning that "storm clouds of poverty, racism and violence are gathering all across America."

Highlight of this year's observance will be the re-enactment Sunday in Selma, Ala., of the start of the historic Selma-to-Montgomery march. The event will kickoff a nationwide campaign aimed at saving the 1965 Voting Rights Act, scheduled to expire next year. The march was credited with getting the act on the books.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of the Chicago-based Operation Push, and other black leaders organized the Selma effort. "Congress is threatening to water down the Voting Rights bill," said Jackson. "We need it extended in 1982 and we need it intensified."

"The purpose of this march is to maintain the right to vote. The right to vote is being cut back by the Strom Thurmond element," he said, charging the conservative South Carolina Republican with trying to shackle black voters by opposing the legislation.

Jackson joined other black leaders Saturday for a rally at Kelley Ingram Park in Birmingham, where many of the civil rights movement's bitterest battles were fought.

In New York City, the National Black United Front conducted a "march on racist violence" to commemorate King's death. The marchers set out from separate points in Brooklyn and Harlem and met at Herald Square in Manhattan for a rally.

More than 350 marched in Pittsburgh and in Philadelphia, the intermediate chapter of Mega Psi Phi fraternity sponsored a walkathon, with proceeds to go to families of Atlanta's slain children.

Before the Memphis march, a small group gathered to place a wreath on the Mountain Top Sculpture, a downtown monument erected in King's honor.

Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., his state's first black Congressman, said his election and the selection of Odell Horton of Memphis as the state's first black federal judge is evidence King's work lives on.

"Since 1968 we have come a mighty long way," said Ford.

But Mrs. King said the assassination attempt on President Ronald Reagan "is the latest incident in a growing national and international crisis of violence." The incident, she said "leaves us with an alarming but clear conclusion — no one is safe and secure and everyone is affected by the current epidemic of violence."

Mrs. King said violence was becoming increasingly race related. "All of us," she said, "are going to have to put aside our personal agendas and work together if we are going to forge a serious challenge to violence."

"In the last years of my husband's leadership of the civil rights movement, he began to focus increasingly on the campaign for economic progress. Indeed, he gave his life in a struggle for economic decency for striking sanitation workers in Memphis, Tenn."

Mrs. King said "it is terribly important that the voting rights act be renewed. It has not accomplished its mission and purpose," she said.

She noted that less than one percent of the elected officials in this country were black.

Coal Spokesman Still Pessimistic

By ANDREW BLUM
United Press International
The top soft coal industry bargainer Saturday expressed pessimism about quick settlement of the United Mine Workers strike, now in its second week.

"I'm not optimistic," said B.R. Brown, president of Consolidation Coal Co., who heads negotiations for the Bituminous Coal Operations Association.

Brown said he has had no contact with UMW President Sam Church Jr., who was reported on vacation. Church, who was secluded Friday, could not be reached Saturday.

"There is nothing planned," said Brown, who last week said the BCOA was not ready to resume talks in the strike by the nation's 160,000 soft coal miners.

Brown did confirm that he has been in touch with West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller, who has been trying to shorten the strike that began March 27.

"I talked to Rockefeller Friday afternoon," Brown said in a telephone interview, but provided no details.

Rockefeller told reporters he would stay in communication with both parties, but added, "I'm going to have very little if anything to say about it."

Based on the miners' 2-to-1 rejection of a tentative contract last Tuesday, many on both sides feel the strike could go longer than the 111-day 1977-78 walkout.

Bill Lamb, former UMW District 6 International Executive Board member and now a Pennsylvania miner, called Brown and Church roadblocks to negotiation of an acceptable contract.

"There is no need for this to be a long strike," said Lamb. "I think our membership sent a loud and clear signal to Church and Brown that if you people want to mine coal, fine. But quit trying to gut our contract and quit trying to bust our union."

Since miners walked out, there have been reports of scattered violence throughout coal regions in Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky.

ALCU Director Hits New Move

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union says a conservative movement is gaining strength across the nation which he warned is the most dangerous threat to individual constitutional rights in 60 years.

Ira Glasser, speaking on "The Threat to Civil Liberties from the Moral Majority," said that the Moral Majority is only one of several groups trying to impose their values through laws.

"Some of these people seem opposed to concepts within the Bill of Rights," said Glasser.

"For these people, the Bill of Rights has acquired a radical reputation. But our traditional liberties are just that — and not just creations of the radical left," he said.

He said people of great influence and positions such as senators, congressmen and people in the White House sympathize with movement proposals for "weeding out of the system certain people who do not have the resources or representation to fight for them."

He cited recent attacks on the Voting Rights Act, the federal court system and the cutting out of legal aid for welfare recipients as part of this effort.

Hunt Aide Says Poll Inaccurate

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — A University of North Carolina poll on the governor's efforts to bring a microelectronics center to the state is "totally inaccurate," an aide to Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. says.

Stephanie Bass, deputy news secretary to Hunt, said the poll, conducted by the School of Journalism at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, was useless because the question was worded improperly.

The question asked, "have you heard that Gov. Hunt has committed $24 million in state funds to attract high technology industries to North Carolina?"

Miss Bass said the wording of the question was "totally inaccurate."

She said Hunt has not committed any funds yet, but has simply requested the Legislature to provide the funds in the 1981-82 budget.

"The question is wrong," she said. "It's not indicative of reality. The whole premise is false. The whole poll is useless."

University officials said the results of the poll are accurate to within plus or minus 3.5 percent 95 out of 100 times.

The Carolina Poll, a survey of 770 people taken Feb. 22-25, showed less than half had heard about Hunt's request for $24.4 million to attract the microelectronics industry into the state.

Miss Bass said people are not aware of the proposal because it has not been discussed in the General Assembly.

First Run In New Boat Ends Fatally

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (UPI) — A Virginia Beach man, whose new boat capsized in the Atlantic Ocean, was within sight of shore when he was rescued by fishermen and died after six hours of struggling for land.

Robert Goode, 43, was pronounced dead Friday in a local hospital emergency room, apparently of drowning, three hours after he was brought ashore, a hospital spokeswoman said.

His companion, Frank "Pete" Manuel, 27, of Chesapeake, was admitted in satisfactory condition at a local hospital where he was treated for exposure and hypothermia.

The men were forced to abandon their sinking 36-foot sport fishing boat, the Fighting Lady, about midnight while enroute to Virginia Beach from Hatteras, N. C., said Coast Guard spokesman George Stuart.

Charlie Tuck, one of the fishermen involved in the rescue, said Goode was within sight of the beach, about 2,000 feet offshore, when he was picked up. Hospital spokeswoman Mrs. J.C. Downs said doctors "took all life-saving measures" but were unable to save him.

Stuart said Coast Guard officials were notified Thursday night that the boat was overdue. A helicopter, dispatched from Elizabeth City, N.C., combed the ocean off the outer banks all night in an unsuccessful search.

Fishermen mending their nets off Sandbridge in Virginia Beach saw Manuel swimming just after dawn and pulled him aboard, then rushed him to the hospital.

Manuel told his rescuers he had been separated from Goode about an hour earlier. About 30 minutes later, the fishermen found Goode floating face down in the water.

Goode had just purchased the boat and was sailing it from Hatteras to Virginia Beach when it began to sink off Sandbridge about midnight, the Coast Guard said.

Pate said the victim, who was treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital, was raped at knife point by a man who broke into her home before dawn.

In summer these reliable energy-savers supplement and enhance air conditioning, allowing thermostats to be set as much as 6-8 degrees higher with no loss of cooling comfort. In winter, they recycle heat by pushing rising warm air down to colder areas where it's needed. The savings on utility bills can be astounding because a Hunter Ceiling Fan uses as little energy as a 100 watt light bulb.

MAPS' Smith Arrested By FBI

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Boxing promoter Harold Smith, in seclusion since an alleged $21.3 million fraud at Wells Fargo Bank was uncovered in January, was arrested Saturday by the FBI.

Smith, 37, was taken into custody for investigation of making a false statement on an application for a passport, said Edgar N. Best, agent in charge of the FBI bureau here.

Smith's lawyer said the arrest followed Smith's giving a deposition to the bank's attorneys. Smith, chairman of Muhammad Ali Professional Sports (MAPS), is a defendant in a $46.3 million civil suit filed by the bank after the its losses were discovered in January.

The bank's money allegedly was funneled into 13 MAPS accounts by a bank employee, L. Benjamin Lewis, who also was a MAPS official.

Attorney Albert M. Sheppard said he "can't speculate" on how the FBI knew where to find Smith or on the validity of the accusation the FBI made against him.

"I was with him at the time (of the arrest)," said Sheppard, the attorney handling criminal matters for Smith. "We had gone to a trailer — a van type of thing — near the police academy to give a deposition to the Wells Fargo attorneys," Sheppard said of the 10:30 a.m. arrest at a park near Dodger Stadium, north of downtown Los Angeles. "He was arrested as we walked through Elysian Park."

In a two-minute telephone conversation with The Associated Press, Sheppard said, "I'll appear in his behalf at the arraignment Monday and we'll find out more then. I don't mean to be rude, but I've got a million things to do and I can't talk anymore."

Best said Smith would be arraigned by a U.S. magistrate on Monday.

George Caulfield, Wells Fargo's senior vice president for public relations, said he first heard of the arrest through a radio news report.

"I hadn't heard a thing," he said. "I don't think it really relates to our case unless they're just picking him up just to hold him."

FBI spokesman John Jackson said, "Nothing will occur in regard to the posting of bond until the arraignment Monday morning. 'He (Smith) will be held over the weekend until he can be brought before the magistrate.'"

Smith was being held at the Los Angeles County jail across a street from the federal courthouse. Federal prisoners who are awaiting arraignment or trial are held through an arrangement with the county.

The FBI agent declined to give out the specific circumstances of the arrest and would not say whether additional charges against Smith would be sought. Agents also declined to say whether they had Smith under surveillance.

Smith, the chairman of MAPS, has surfaced periodically for interviews with the media, but his exact whereabouts have remained a mystery since he dropped from sight in late January.

Smith's attorneys have appeared before a federal grand jury probing the alleged embezzlement.

In interviews arranged at secret locations, and through phone calls and tapes mysteriously left at radio and television stations, Smith has charged that the case is far more extensive than outlined in the fraud suit against him and the other defendants.

Smith claimed several officers of the Wells Fargo Bank were involved in the alleged money siphoning scheme, and also said hundreds of millions of dollars were actually involved. The bank denied the allegations.

And Smith said late last month on NBC-TV's "Today" show that former heavyweight champion Ali's receipt of $890,000 in funds from MAPS was completely above board, despite news accounts that the money was part of the allegedly embezzled funds.

Smith said the money came from Wells Fargo and was paid to Ali for his promotional help and the use of his name by MAPS.

Ali has said he has no connection with MAPS other than permitting the use of his name for a fee and he disassociated himself from the organization after Wells Fargo filed suit.

Besides Smith, L. Ben Lewis, a MAPS board member and at the same time an operations officer at a Wells Fargo Bank branch where MAPS had an account, also dropped from sight since the scandal came to light.

The bank has dismissed Lewis from his post.

NBA Playoffs Into Semifinals

By The Associated Press

Bill Cartwright of the New York Knicks knows all about the powerhouse teams in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

There are clubs like Boston, Milwaukee, Phoenix and San Antonio, whose successful regular season records earned of them first-round playoff byes. And there's Philadelphia, which won two straight in a mini-series to advance to the second round.

But Cartwright also thinks he knows a good underdog when he sees one and that's why he figures Chicago has a shot.

The Bulls eliminated Cartwright's Knicks in two straight games, finishing New York's season with a 115-114 overtime victory Friday night.

"I hope they go all the way," said Cartwright. "They can if they play like they did against us."

The Bulls' next hurdle comes Sunday when they travel to Boston to open the Eastern Conference semifinals against the Celtics, who tied Philadelphia for the best record in the regular season with a 62-20 log.

The 76ers, who finished second in the standings because of intra-conference records, wiped out Indiana in their mini-series and advanced to the other conference semifinal against Milwaukee. That series also begins Sunday.

In Sunday's other games, Houston plays at Los Angeles and Kansas City is at Portland, wrapping up the two Western Conference mini-series which are tied at 1-1. In both best-of-three series, the home teams have yet to win a game. The Lakers stayed alive with a 111-106 victory over Houston and the Trail Blazers defeated Kansas City 124-119 in overtime Friday night.

Milwaukee, after a week off, goes back to work against Philadelphia in the other Eastern Conference semifinal. Coach Don Nelson hopes the rest helps center Bob Lanier's aching knees. Lanier has arthritis but approaches the confrontation with the 76ers philosophically.

"When you have two arthritic knees with bone chips floating around in them, they can go out on you walking down the street," he said.

Marcis Ends Drought, On Pole For Today's 400

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Dave Marcis ended a four-year drought Saturday, shattering the North Wilkesboro Speedway qualifying record and winning the pole position for the $140,000 Northwestern Bank 400 Grand National stock car race.

Marcis, who trailed defending NASCAR driving champion Dale Earnhardt after the first day of the unusual two-day qualifying format at North Wilkesboro, blew the competition away with a fast lap of 115.485 mph in a new black and blue Chevrolet Malibu.

That trip around the 58-mile blacktop oval, coupled with his first-day lap of 113.820, came out to an average of 114.646, far outdistancing the old two-day qualifying mark of 113.797 mph set last April by Bobby Allison. Saturday's quick lap broke the one-lap record of 114.074 mph, set Saturday by Earnhardt.

It was the first pole victory for the 40-year-old Marcis since 1976, the same year he last won a Grand National race.

"I felt it would be tough beating Earnhardt today," the smiling Marcis said. "But the car's just working really good and we fell we're really competitive for the race because we qualified with nothing trick on the car.

"The way we ran today is the way we'll run tomorrow (Sunday)."

Earnhardt also went faster Saturday, turning a lap of 114.178 in his Pontiac Grand Prix. But his 114.126 average was good enough only for second place on Sunday's 32-car grid.

Bobby Allison, in a Pontiac LeMans, clocked a fast lap of 114.596 and wound up third overall at 114.094.

Fourth overall was Ricky Rudd in a Buick Regal at 113.993, followed by rookie Mark Martin — making his first Grand National start — in a Grand Prix at 113.665, Benny Parsons in a Ford Thunderbird at 113.647, Darrell Waltrip in a Regal at 113.014 and Harry Gant in an Oldsmobile Cutlass at 113.002.

Claude Queen, the chief mechanic for Marcis for the past 18 months, was elated.

"Something like this makes all the hard work worthwhile," Queen said. "We've put in so much time and work in just trying to be competitive, but this just wipes away that tired feeling and makes you want to work even harder."

Ross One-Hits SWE As 'Skins Win, 14-0

PINETOPS — Roanoke High School romped to a 14-0 victory over Southwest Edgecombe Saturday afternoon, backed up by one hit pitching by Joey Ross.

Ross, who went the distance, had a no-hitter going until the sixth when he gave up the lone hit. He walked just one and struck out seven along the way.

Roanoke got all the runs it needed in the first, scoring three times. After two were out, Ross singled and Neal Cargile doubled. Maurice Chance drew a walk, loading the bases. Robert Smith walked, forcing in Ross, and Lee Briley reached on an error, scoring two more runs on the play.

The Redskins then scored seven more runs in the third, sparked by a grand slam homer by Angelo Squill.

The other four came in the fourth.

Ross led the hitting, too, getting three, while Squill and Cargile each had two.

The victory boosted the Redskins to 3-6 on the year. They entertain Washington on Tuesday, as they return to Northeastern Conference play.

Tar Heel Stickmen Edge Terps In OT

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — North Carolina's Doug Hall scored in the second overtime period Saturday to pace the Tar Heels to a 13-12 victory over Maryland, their first lacrosse win ever over the Terrapins.

Hall scored the winning goal on a shot which was at first knocked down by goalie Kevin O'Leary, but then went into the goal. It was the second-ranked Tar Heels, 4-0 and 2-0 in the ACC, first win after 17 losses to the Terrapins.

The fifth-ranked Terrapins took a 10-8 lead in the fourth quarter on their fourth consecutive goal, but the Tar Heels responded with a three goal burst for an 11-19 lead. Maryland, 5-1 and 2-1 in the ACC, tied the score at 11, but Hall put the Tar Heels on top 12-11 on a goal with 1:24 left in the game.

Ron Martiniello, Pete Worstell and James Wilkerson each scored three times for Maryland, in a game in which the score was tied nine times and neither team led by more than two goals.

Arnie Leads Seniors Classic By 2 Strokes

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer reeled off seven birdies Saturday for a 4-under-par 68 to move into the third-round lead of the $125,000 Michelob Seniors Classic, the first event of the 1981 Professional Golfers' Association seniors tour.

Palmer had a 9-under-par 207 total, two strokes ahead of second round co-leader Doug Ford.

Ford put together a 2-under-par 70 Saturday. Miller Barber, who had shared the second-round lead with Palmer and Ford, stumbled into a tie for fifth after firing a 3-over-par 75 Saturday.

"When you're playing good, you can sure have fun," the 50-year-old Palmer said. "I'm certainly looking forward to getting going (Sunday)."

Palmer has 15 birdies in three days of competition over the 6,529-yard Carrollwood Country Club.

Palmer, in his first year on the seniors tour, is among a field of 50 golfers vying for the $20,000 championship, to be decided Sunday.

Nebraska Wins Gymnastics Title

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska scored consistently in every event and swept to its third consecutive team title Saturday at the 39th NCAA Gymnastics Championships.

Sparked by all-arounders Jim Hartung and Phil Cahoy and a brilliant floor exercise performance by Steve Elliott, the Cornhuskers became the first school to win three straight championships since Penn State accomplished the feat from 1959-61.

Championships in the six individual events were to be decided Saturday night.

Nebraska delighted the partisan crowd of 8,572 at the Bob Devaney Sports Center by compiling 284.60 points. Oklahoma, which defeated Nebraska for the Big Eight Conference title a month ago, was second with 281.95 and UCLA took third with 280.50.

UCLA had a chance to make the race closer when the Bruins trailed Nebraska by only 1.2 points heading into the final event. However, the Bruins faltered on the parallel bars and Nebraska turned in a strong performance on the high bar to win the title handily.

Nebraska scored at least 47 points in every event except the parallel bars and the Cornhuskers just missed in that, finishing with 46.90. Nebraska would have topped 47 in that event if Cahoy, the defending individual champion, had not slipped. He finished with a modest 9.20.

Hill One Stroke Up On Blalock

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Young Carolyn Hill, who had a 1-stroke lead over veteran Jane Blalock after three rounds of the $250,000 Colgate-Dinah Shore women's golf tournament, was both confident and a little nervous.

"I feel I have the capabilities to win this tournament," said Hill Saturday after her third consecutive 2-under-par 70. "But I don't know if I will win."

"I'm nervous but it's kind of an anxious nervous feeling, good nervous feeling."

Hill, who finished second in the Ladies Professional Golf Association Rookie of the Year balloting in 1980, has a 6-under-par 210 total after 54 holes. The 72-hole event winds up Sunday.

Jane Blalock, who won the inaugural Dinah Shore tournament in 1972, carded her second successive 70 after an opening 71 over the 6,242-yard, par 72 Mission Hills Country Club.

Hill and Blalock are close friends and the veteran has helped the 22-year-old Hill with her game. The friendship will be partially laid aside.

"I know she'll be going for my throat," a smiling Hill said of Sunday's final 18 holes. "I can feel that already. A 1-shot lead with a field like this is nothing."

"I'll be cheering for Carolyn," said Blalock. "But I'm not going to lose my concentration, get out of my game."

"She is a very consistent player and she's been hitting the ball very well."

Blalock said her experience edge might make a difference.

"Experience never hurts," she said. "But it really depends mostly on the individual. Some handle pressure differently than others."

"I do like my position heading into the final round, however."

Eight other players were within striking distance of the lead after 54 holes of the event, the richest on the ladies' circuit.

Lynn Adams, in her fourth year on the tour, chipped three strokes off par with a third round 69 that put her two strokes back of the leader. Two past winners of the tournament, Sandra Palmer and Judy Rankin, were another shot back at 213 along with Nancy Lopez-Melton.

Jan Stephenson, Amy Alcott and Susie McAllister were all four strokes off the pace at 214. Myra Van Hoose, who had led the tournament since her opening 66, struggled to a third-round 77. Her score included a 2-stroke penalty for accepting a golf cart ride from a course marshal during the round.

Defending champion Donna Caponi had a third-round 71, to be just five strokes off the lead heading into Sunday's nationally televised final round.

JoAnne Carner, one of the favorites when the tournament began, shot a 74 and fell eight strokes off the pace going into the final 18 holes.

Two of the front-runners — Hill and Adams — have never won an LPGA tournament. Hill, the 1979 U.S. Amateur champion, collected $35,908 in her first year on the tour in 1980 to rank 41st on the earnings list. Her best finish was a tie for second in the Barth Classic.

Adams, 30, had an off year in 1980, winning just $13,196. The previous year, her second on the tour, she had won $24,987.

The 35-year-old Blalock, one of the most consistent players on the circuit for the past decade, ranked eighth on the money-winning list this year, with a $32,518 bankroll. She has topped $100,000 in earnings for each of the past four years.

Lopez-Melton, the tour's leading money winner in 1978-79, is looking for her first victory in the Dinah Shore, which carries a winner's prize of $37,500, the tour's biggest.

OXFORD, N.C. — Farmville Central girls' track coach Hilda Worthington took six girls to the Triangle Invitational Relay Meet here Saturday afternoon and those six were enough to give the Jaguars two meet records and a fourth place finish.

Durham Hillsdale won the 13-team meet with 68 points. Northern Durham was second with 56½ points, followed by host J.F. Webb with 51, High Point Andrews 48 and Farmville Central with 40.

"I think we did great. We were up there with the big 4-A schools and the girls did well. I think this will help the girls," Worthington said. "It was a fun meet, they had medals for first, second and third and ribbons for fourth, fifth and sixth."

The Lady Jaguars fared well in their first trip to the invitational, which requires an invitation for participation. Leading the way was Charlene Lane, who finished first in the shot put and set a meet record with a throw of 39-6. The old record was 39-5½.

Also setting a meet mark Saturday was the Farmville distance medley relay team. Rose Lang, ran the 800 meter leg, Hattie Joyner and Gail Lang the two 400 meter legs and Karen Dunn the mile leg. When it was over Farmville had finished with a time of 10:15.6, cutting nearly five seconds off the old mark of 10:20.1.

Rose Lang finished second in the 400-meter dash with a time of 1:00.8 and Karen Dunn finished second in the 800-meter run with a clocking of 2:26.9.

The mile relay team ended up fourth with a time of 4:25.8. Running the relay for Farmville were Marion Tutton, Joyner, Gail Lang and Rose Lang.

Farmville Central returns to action Monday when they host a four-team meet featuring Southern Nash, Charles B. Aycock and Rosewood.

Summary:
Shot put — 1. Charlene Lane 39-6 (Meet Record), 800 — 2. Karen Dunn 2:26.9, 400 — 2. Rose Lang 1:00.8, Mile relay — 4. Farmville Central (Marion Tutton, Hattie Joyner, Gail Lang, Rose Lang) 4:25.8, Distance medley relay — 1. Farmville Central (Rose Lang, Hattie Joyner, Gail Lang, Karen Dunn (mile) 10:15.6 (Meet Record).

Wilder Spins Two-Hitter Against UNCC

CHARLOTTE — East Carolina University bounced back from a 4-3 loss to N.C. State on Thursday to roll to an 11-0 victory over UNC Charlotte Friday behind outstanding pitching by Bill Wilder.

Wilder, who earned his fifth victory in seven decisions, limited Charlotte to only two hits, both singles, and saw only three baserunners against him all day long.

All three did manage to get into scoring position, however, in the second and ninth on singles, and in the third on a double error by Kelly Robinette. Wilder struck out eight along the way and walked none.

East Carolina, which banged out 15 hits along the way, led by John Hallow's three, had little trouble with the Charlotte pitching, sweeping aside the starter early and going through quite a bit of the bullpen in the following innings.

East Carolina jumped onto the scoreboard early, scoring three times in the first inning. With one down, Mike Sorrell singled and stole second. Todd Evans then brought him home with a single. With two away, Hallow was hit by a pitch and Todd Hendley singled, loading the bases. Charlie Smith then got a single, driving in both Evans and Hallow.

The third saw East Carolina push over two more runs. They came on back-to-back leadoff homers by Mike Sage and Hallow. Sage's homer, incidentally, hit a baseball-sized sign in the minor league park, awarding $500 to the professional hitter banging it. Hallow's homer then just missed by a couple of inches of going through an award hole on another sign. Naturally, neither player was eligible for those prizes.

The Pirates picked up two more runs in the fourth, running the lead to 7-0. Robert Wells led off with a walk and Robinette doubled him to third. Sorrell hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Wells and moving Robinette up. Evans then hit another sacrifice fly, driving in Robinette.

The sixth inning saw another run cross the plate. Fran Fitzgerald singled and Wells reached on an error. Sorrell singled in courtesy runner Mark Shank.

In the seventh, the Bucs picked up two more. Hallow singled and Hendley drove him in with a triple. Smith then singled in Hendley.

The final run came in the eighth. Shank singled — his first collegiate hit — and Sage followed with a single. Hallow got his third hit of the day, driving in Shank with the 11th and final run of the afternoon.

In addition to Hallow's three hits, Sorrell, Sage, Hendley and Smith each added two to the Pirate total.

East Carolina jumped to 15-6 with the victory, while Charlotte dropped to 11-18. East Carolina was to face Campbell in a doubleheader in Buies Creek Saturday afternoon, then travels to Norfolk, Va., to meet Old Dominion on Monday. The Bucs return home on Tuesday hosting the University of North Carolina at 7 p.m.

Yellow Jackets Down Roanoke

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Roanoke Rapids rolled to a 9-3 victory over Roanoke High School in a Northeastern Conference baseball game Friday.

The Yellow Jackets took the lead for good in the first inning, getting a single run. Tim Hux tripled and scored when Chubby Butler singled.

In the second, Roanoke Rapids added two more. Alston walked, moved up on an out and scored when Carpenter singled. Carpenter came around when Al Ferguson reached on an error.

The third saw the Yellow Jackets put it away, scoring three more times for a 6-0 lead. Hux reached on an error and Butler walked. Gibson singled, loading the bases. Burgwyn singled in two runs and Chip Edwards singled in the third.

Roanoke Rapids then added two in the fourth and one in the sixth.

Roanoke got one run in the fifth and two more in the sixth.

Butler, Gibson, Edwards and Carpenter each had two hits to lead the Jacket hitting. Neal Cargile had two hits to pace Roanoke.

The Redskins are now 2-6 overall and 1-3 against Northeastern opponents. Following a Saturday afternoon game with Southwest Edgecombe, Roanoke plays host to Washington on Tuesday.

Page Sparks Conley Victory

WHEAT SWAMP — D.H. Conley coach Ritchie Wynns said that every time he looked up there was Dixon Page on second. No wonder. Page ripped out four hits, including three doubles, to lead D.H. Conley to an easy 11-5 victory over North Lenoir Friday afternoon.

Page entered the game the ECC's leading hitter at .692. When the day was over he was hitting .722 and the Vikings had upped their record to 3-6 overall and 3-3 in the league. North Lenoir falls to 2-6 overall and 1-5 in the league.

After spotting the Hawks a 2-0 lead in the first inning, which included Kevin Battle stealing home, the Vikings exploded for eight runs in the second inning to all but seal the victory.

Sammy Tucker opened the inning by reaching on an error and then stole second. Todd Rouse singled Tucker to third and then stole second. With one gone, Keith Mills walked to load the bases.

Wesley Smith reached on an error to score Tucker and Emory Vines followed with a single to score Rouse. Page then doubled home two runs and Chris Buck lifted a sacrifice fly for the Vikings' fifth run of the afternoon.

Jeff Cox walked and then stole second. Tucker followed with a double to score two runs and Rouse added a single for the Vikings' eighth and final run of the inning.

The Vikings added two runs in the fifth and one in the seventh while North Lenoir scored one run in the fifth, sixth and seventh for its total.

Vines was three for five for the Vikings with a double and Tucker and Rouse were two for four. Tucker had a double for one of his hits.

Tigers Roll By Vikings

WILLIAMSTON — Tim Hines' second-inning grand slam keyed a seven-run outburst that helped send Williamston to an easy 12-3 win over Plymouth Friday afternoon in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

The Tigers, now 2-5 overall and 1-3 in the league, trailed, 2-1, going into the bottom of the second, but not for long.

Greg Johnson walked, James Clemmons doubled and Victor Thomas was hit by a pitch to load the bases in the second. Hines then hit the ball over the centerfield fence for a grand slam and a 5-2 lead which shortly thereafter went to 8-2.

Plymouth's final run came in the fifth but the Tigers countered that with four runs in the sixth for the nine-run victory.

Williamston was led by Hines, Tony Rogers and Ed Pippin, all of whom had two hits in four at bats.

Williamston was to have played North Pitt Saturday afternoon.

Bulls Eliminate Knicks; Portland, Lakers Win

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers and the Portland Trail Blazers both kept their hopes alive in the National Basketball Association playoffs Friday night, but the New York Knicks will have to wait until next year.

The Lakers defeated the Houston Rockets 111-106 and Portland tripped the Kansas City Kings 124-119 in overtime to tie their best-of-three Western Conference playoff series at 1-1.

The Chicago Bulls, meanwhile, eliminated the Knicks 115-114 in overtime to sweep their first-round Eastern set 2-0 and headed for a second-round meeting with the Boston Celtics in Boston on Sunday.

In the start of another best-of-seven second-round Eastern series starting Sunday, Philadelphia will host Milwaukee.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 27 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson hauled down 18 rebounds to help the Lakers send the series back to Los Angeles Sunday for the deciding game.

The Lakers, who lost the first game of the best-of-three series 111-107, never trailed Friday night and held as much as a 20-point lead over the Rockets, who could only manage to pull to within two points after falling behind.

"That's the great thing about Earvin, he always gives us whatever we need," said Abdul-Jabbar. "Tonight he knew we needed a lot of help on the backboards and he gave it to us."

Houston Coach Del Harris was caught off guard by Johnson's rebounding.

"We didn't expect Magic to do that," he said. "We've beaten them on the boards the last seven times we played them and we knew going in we would have to repeat that. We didn't, and the figures speak for themselves."

Blazers 124, Kings 119

Calvin Natt and Kelvin Ransey combined for nine points in overtime and Mychal Thompson poured in a career-high 40 to lead Portland over Kansas City. The mini-series returns to Portland for the third game on Sunday.

Natt got the Blazers on top early in overtime on a three-point play. After Ernie Grunfeld scored for Kansas City, Natt responded with another field goal, then Ransey stretched Portland's lead to 121-116 with 1:22 left.

Bulls 115, Knicks 114

Reggie Theus scored 37 points and Artis Gilmore added 25, and the two combined for all nine of Chicago's points in overtime to lead the Bulls past New York.

ECU Softball Team Sweeps N.C. State

RALEIGH — East Carolina's women's softball team continued its roll to one of the Lady Pirates' finest seasons ever Friday afternoon as ECU swept a doubleheader from N.C. State.

ECU won the first game, 4-0, and whipped the Lady Wolfpack, 8-2, in the second game. ECU is now 23-2 this season. N.C. State is 14-6.

In the first game, Lydia Rountree collected three hits and Jo Landa Clayton and Mitzi Davis both were two of four.

In the second game Mitzi

Davis went four-for-four. Ginger Rothermel had a three-run homer and Kathy Riley had a three-run triple to lead ECU to the victory. Tammy Parham had three hits in the second win and Shirley Brown had two to lead the 13-hit attack.

ECU plays host to Campbell Wednesday in a doubleheader. Summary:

Charging Ayden-Grifton Nips Aycock

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton, picked to be in the middle of the league this season, continued to build its case for Eastern Carolina Conference supremacy Friday afternoon — at the expense of a team picked to be among the league leaders.

The Chargers rode the four-hit pitching of sophomore left-hander Tyrone Gay and quelled a sixth-inning rally to defeat Charles B. Aycock, 2-1, and solidify their hold on first place in the ECC.

The win leaves Ayden-Grifton at 6-0 in the league while second-place C.B. Aycock falls to 5-2 in the ECC and 7-4 overall as the conference nears the halfway mark of the season. A-G is 7-3 overall.

"This is a big win for us," Ayden-Grifton coach Allan Wilson said. "If we had lost we would have been tied for first but now were up by (a game and a half)."

That easily could have happened had it not been for two costly Aycock errors in the first inning and a sixth-inning rally that came up empty. The Chargers made the most of their first-inning opportunity and then made sure the Falcons made the least of theirs in the sixth.
After the Falcons failed to score in the bottom of the first, the Chargers used two errors and a wild pitch to push across two runs. Aycock cut the deficit to one with Andy Bunn's home run in the second and threatened twice more but came up empty.

With runners on first and second after a walk and an error by the catcher after a strike out, Strickland, the Charger shortstop, made a diving stab to his right and flipped the ball to Riccarelli at second for the force out. The play saved at least one run from scoring and perhaps two.

But the Falcons really had their chance to take the lead in the sixth. Pitcher Rusty Talton led off with a single but appeared out when Gay caught him leaning the wrong way off first. But he slid under the tag of Strickland at second.
Bunn then reached on an error by first baseman Brandt Allen. Mike Rose's sacrifice bunt gave the Falcons runners on second and third with just one out. But Greg Thomas, trying a squeeze bunt, popped out in foul ground and Mickey Burroughs then grounded out to end the inning, the threat and, for all practical purposes, the game.

"I knew the sixth was going to be a big inning," Wilson said. "They had their number four, five and six hitters up. Then they got two men on with no outs and runners at second and third with one out."
But I knew if we got out of the sixth we'd be all right. I didn't think two runs would win it but their pitching stopped us and we've been hitting the ball well and our pitching stopped them."
C.B. Aycock entered the game with the top four RBI men in the ECC and the top three scorers in the league. The Falcons also came to Littlefield with three hitters above the .400 mark.
But Gay, who came in sporting a 0.91 earned run average, held Aycock to four hits. Gay struck out nine and walked just one in winning his fourth game of the season against one loss. Gay leads the league in strike outs with 54.
"He kept 'em off the bases,"

Wilson said. "Aycock's a good hitting ballclub and I'm just glad it was Gay's turn to pitch today."
Gay's counterpart, Talton, was just as effective. The Aycock right-hander struck out nine and walked one and allowed only two hits but saw his record drop to 4-2 because of his teammates' errors in the first inning.
Chris Strickland led off the bottom of the first by reaching on a throwing error by shortstop Paul Thomas. When first baseman Andy Bunn failed to tag first following a throw from Thomas, the Falcons had their second error of the inning and the Chargers their second base runner in Bernard Riccarelli.
A wild pitch by Talton moved the runners up a base before Terry Lucust, the Chargers top hitter going into the game at .433, grounded to second to

Yank, Pirates Swap Called Off

NEW YORK (AP) — Who's on first? Well, Jason Thompson is for the Pittsburgh Pirates and Jim Spencer for the New York Yankees.
And, while the Pirates indicated they intended to keep Thompson, Yankee owner George Steinbrenner said it "would read like a great mystery novel" if the slugging first baseman were to wind up with the New York Mets since it was a former Mets' employee now in the baseball commissioner's office who quashed Wednesday's three-way deal.

missioner. But the thing that bothers me is that Bill Murray, who was a bookkeeper for the Mets, made the decision.
"Bill Murray is a fine young man and would be a good comptroller for baseball. But why not make him a comptroller and get a baseball man as baseball's administrator? The commissioner has every right to look at the deal. But why not have a baseball man making decisions on baseball talent?"
Murray was unavailable for comment. Kuhn, however, described himself as "unhappy" about Steinbrenner's remarks. "Obviously, George was extremely disappointed, and sometimes when you're disappointed people make remarks they don't mean," he said. "Bill is extremely capable. He worked very hard to bring the deal off. The comments made about him were extremely unfair."
Kuhn said he would "have a little talk with George after I see what all his comments were."

In an off-season deal, the Mets reportedly agreed to send catcher John Stearns to California for Thompson. But the Angels held up that trade to await the results of surgery on Stearns' finger.
Commissioner Bowie Kuhn approved the first part of Wednesday's deal in which the Pirates obtained Thompson from the Angels for catcher Ed Ott and pitcher Mickey Mahler.
But he objected to the amount of money — $850,000 — involved in the second part, in which the Pirates shipped Thompson to the Yankees for Spencer, minor-league pitchers Greg Cochran and Fred Toliver and cash. The breakdown was $400,000, the Kuhn-imposed limit, as part of the trade and $450,000 to help pay Spencer's $350,000-a-year salary in each of the next three seasons.

Steinbrenner said he was upset that "California got what they wanted and the Pirates did, too, while we're the only ones left out on a limb."
He pointed to last December's deal in which the Milwaukee Brewers paid catcher Ted Simmons $750,000 to agree to be traded to them from the St. Louis Cardinals. Steinbrenner said he wondered why a player could be paid such a sum as part of a trade while a team cannot.
Thompson was unreachable Friday but Peterson said the first baseman "told me he was kind of shocked by this and he had to think about it. He said he'd call me later. He said he didn't want to talk to any writers right now, and he told me he didn't want his phone number given out."

"We both thought the deal would go through because of the way it was structured," said Bill Bergesch, the Yankees' vice president for baseball operations. But the Pittsburgh-New York part fell through Friday despite lengthy attempts at restructuring it to Kuhn's liking.
General Manager Harding Peterson of the Pirates said the Yankees accused the Pirates of "not being above board" in the negotiations, but Steinbrenner praised the Pittsburgh club and blamed Bill Murray, the administrator in Kuhn's office. Murray joined the commissioner's office a year ago after serving as vice president and treasurer of the Mets.

Steinbrenner said the restructuring at one point had the Pirates sending Thompson, another major leaguer and six minor league players to the Yankees for Spencer, Cochran, Toliver and $750,000, with $350,000 as payment for the minor leaguers.
"Bill Murray informed us that five of the six minor leaguers were valued at zero, so we were still over the ($400,000) price guidelines," Steinbrenner said. The negotiations cooled, he said, when the Pirates started talking instead about some of the Yankees' prize minor-league pitchers — including Gene Nelson, who apparently has pitched his way from Class A to the majors this spring — instead of the cash, he said.

"It just got to the point where we had to do so much to satisfy the commissioner's office that we would have had to strip ourselves of our young pitching to make the deal," Steinbrenner said.
"I have no gripe with the commissioner on this one," he continued. "I don't feel in any way bitter at the commissioner. But the thing that bothers me is that Bill Murray, who was a bookkeeper for the Mets, made the decision.

Boys Home Coaches Named

Tony Oakes

Bob Paroli

A Staff Report

Head coaches and their assistants for the North and South teams in the 1981 Jaycee Boys Home Game were announced yesterday afternoon.

Tony Oakes of Henderson Vance High School will coach the North squad and Bob Paroli of Douglas Byrd Senior High will coach the South team.

The game, the 17th annual, is set for Saturday, June 27, in Ficklen Stadium.

Oakes, 33, has been at Vance for 11 years, nine as head coach. He was named Big Six coach of the year this past season as he led his team to the league championship with a 10-0 record. Vance advanced to the 4-A quarterfinals before losing to eventual state champs Greensboro Page.

Paroli, 49, in his first year at Douglas Byrd, led his club to a 6-4 mark. Paroli had previously coached at Burlington Cummings for three years and had a 25-16-1 combined record. His club was the Mid-state conference championship three straight seasons (1977-1979) and was league coach of the year all three seasons.

Before coming to Burlington, Paroli coached at Wilson Fike Senior High, New York Military Academy Cornwall-on-Hudson, Jacksonville (N.C.) Senior High and Benson. He was 35-11-7 at Fike and won the Division I championship in 1971 and co-champs in 1972. He had a 29-18 overall record at the New York Military Academy, a 5-5 mark at Jacksonville and a 35-22-2 record at Benson.

Paroli, who was a three-year letterman at N.C. State in football, was assistant coach in the 1979 Boys Home Game and was head coach in 1976 at the Shrine Bowl Game.

Oakes will be assisted by Harold Deters of Roanoke Rapids, Bob Sapp of Currituck County and Glenn Dixon of Clayton.

Deters, 37, has just completed his first season with the Yellow Jackets after having coached at Jacksonville, Sanderson, Oxford Webb and Garner where he led the school to its only unbeaten season in 1980.

Deters, who was a three-year letterman at N.C. State, was drafted by the Dallas Cowboys and played one season.

Sapp, 35, led his Currituck squad to the state crown this past season with an 11-3 mark. He is 21-14 in his three years at Currituck. Previously, he has coached in Georgia and also was an assistant at N.C. State in 1977.

Dixon, 45, lettered in both football and baseball at State and has coached at Clayton since 1959. His teams have been Capitol Area Conference champs in 1966-70 and 1977 and 1979 and Eastern Area 2-A champs 1966, 1977 and 1979.

Parolia will be assisted by Bob Marr of Bryson City, Larry Thomason of North Rowan and Jim Henderson of Chocowinity.

Marr, 33, coached at Cherokee High School for 13 years, the last three as head man. He had a combined mark of 28-7 those three seasons and was state runnerup in 1978.

Thomason, 35, has a head coaching record of 76-43-3 and has been head coach at North Rowan since 1969.

Henderson, 44, was a three-year letterman at East Carolina, and has coaches at Fraklinton High and Indian River (Va.), where he coached former North Carolina tailback Mike Voight. He became head coach at Chocowinity in 1976 and led the school to its first conference title. His overall record is 127-36-5.

RABIES CONTROL

VACCINATION CLINICS SCHEDULE

The Pitt County Community Health Department is again offering county wide vaccination clinics to the citizens of Pitt County as a convenience to them and in its effort to keep Pitt County free of rabies.

The General Statutes of North Carolina requires that all dogs be vaccinated and that they display the vaccination tag at all times. This tag can also be used to identify your dog if lost or strayed. Please take your dog to the clinic nearest your home for this vaccination. Again this year, all of the clinics will be held in the evening as an additional convenience.

All dogs four (4) months and over are to be vaccinated. Dogs receiving their first vaccination this year will need to be vaccinated again in 1982. For dogs that have been previously vaccinated, the vaccination is good for three (3) years.

Cat owners are urged to have their pets vaccinated since cats are also susceptible to rabies. Cats should be vaccinated annually.

The vaccine will be administered by licensed Doctors of Veterinary Medicine, using the latest advancement in vaccine development.

Rams Crush Panthers

BETHEL Greene Central's Ronnie Tyndall drove in four runs, three with a first-inning home run, as the Rams crushed North Pitt, 15-2, Friday afternoon in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

The Rams, now 6-4 overall and 4-2 in the league, took a 3-0 lead after the first half-inning when Tyndall slammed a home run with Al Speight and David Shirley on base. Both had walked earlier in the inning.

Greene Central then put the game away with a four-run second. Gary Bryant singled, Dana Harrell walked and Speight reached on a fielder's choice. When the throw to second on Speight's grounder was misplayed the Rams had the bases loaded and no outs.

Then, with one gone, three walks followed. Tyndall walked to force Bryant in and Jesse Freeman and Chris Suggs were both hit by pitches to force in two more runs. Tony Barrett followed with a sacrifice fly to score the fourth run of the inning.

Greene Central added two runs to its total in the third, single runs in the fourth and fifth and two runs each in the sixth and seventh.

North Pitt got single runs in the second and third but it was far from enough as the Panthers drop to 5-4 overall and 3-4 in the ECC.

Greene Central was led at the plate by Bryant, who was three for four. Speight, Tyndall and Mayo all had two hits. Mayo had a triple for one of his two hits.

North Pitt was paced by Ronnie House, who was two for three with a double and Ken Whitehurst was also two for three.

Greene Central righthander Donald Warren struck out eight and went the distance for his third victory of the season without a loss.

Greene Central plays host to Charles B. Aycock Tuesday and follows that with a home game against Ayden-Grifton Friday. As of Friday, the Chargers are atop the ECC with Aycock, which lost to A-G 2-1 Friday, a game and a half behind.

"Next week is going to either separate us from the top of put us right in the middle of it," Greene Central coach Jim Fulghum said.

North Pitt, following a Saturday night game with Williamston, is idle until Friday when it travels to Southwest Edgecombe.

Jamesville Rolls Over Chocowinity By 7-0

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville used three pitchers to limit Chocowinity to two hits as the Bullets blanked the Indians, 7-0, Friday afternoon in a Tobacco Belt Conference baseball game.

Clarence Thomas started on the mound for the Bullets and was relieved in the fourth by Carl Ange. Ange then left in the seventh for Greg Sullivan as the three hurlers combined for a two-hitter.

Jamesville, now 7-2 overall and 7-2 in the league, moved ahead, 1-0, after two innings and then pushed across two runs in the fourth, three in the fifth and one in the sixth for its total.

In the fourth with two outs Sullivan walked, stole second and third and scored on a wild pitch, which also sent Rex Bell, who walked earlier, to second.

Keith Waters then walked and when the ball got by the catcher he went to second and Bell to third. Chocowinity pitcher Kevin Tyree then threw the ball to second and when the ball got away Bell scored.

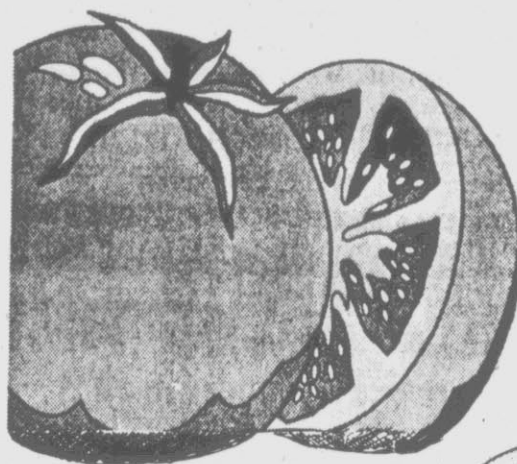

The Bullets added to their lead in the fifth with three runs. Jeff Rogers and Ricky Bell walked and Thomas doubled both home. Thomas then stole third and scored on Ange's single.

Sullivan led the Bullets with one hit in two at bats. He also stole four bases.

Jamesville travels to Columbia Tuesday.

Creek Bank Cowboys Head For The Shad Roundup

April 1-5 Marks Annual Grifton Celebration of The Shad's Return

Text and Photos By Mary Schulken

ART EXHIBITS DRAW CROWDS. The arts and crafts exhibits at the Grifton Historical Museum attracted many art-lovers. Above, out-of-towners admire a mixed media exhibit by Alex McLawhorn entitled "Spiderweb." The festival featured works of art as well as crafts like leatherwork and pottery. Crafts by local artisans were also for sale this year. The museum exhibits will be open throughout today, the last day of the 1981 Shad Festival.

N&O COLUMNIST ROGERS DONS HIS WESTERN GEAR. Rogers, grand marshal for the parade Saturday, dressed accordingly for this year's Shad Festival theme, "Headin' For the Shad Roundup," chosen to honor 1981 as the "Year of the Cowboy." Rogers had at least half his request for the day fulfilled. "If I can't have a horse," he said when asked to be grand marshal, "I want a car full of pretty girls and a lot of money." Rogers rode in a black cadillac adorned with girls. The money is anybody's guess.

THE MAYOR TELLS HIS TALL TALE. Winner of the senior tall tale division of the "Fishy Tales" contest held April 1, Grifton Mayor Dave Bosley dons his shad cap and tells the crowd about the "first person ever to wire a head for a reservation." All winners of the contest re-told their tales for the Saturday morning pre-parade crowd. Judges for the event were Dr. Carol Veitch of East Carolina, Ann Sullivan of Greenville City schools, and WNCT-TV sportscaster Jim Woods.

RENEE WATSON CROWNED "MISS SHAD 1981"...The Shad Festival Beauty Pageant held Friday night featured 14 area girls competing for the title of "Miss Shad 1981." Renee Watson, sponsored by H&H Drug Company, became the new queen. She is

Saturday Parade Pleases Participants, Thrills Spectators

AWARDS, BEAUTIES, BIG TRUCKS AND SMALL BOYS...were all found in the Shad Festival Parade Saturday morning. The parade is traditionally the biggest crowd-drawer of the five-day event, and the surprisingly sunny weather brought out the usual large number of people. At left, Judge Wheeler is presented with an "award" from the Plungers, a marching group from Grifton. At center, a large truck dwarfs what is in comparison a small bike and a smaller boy. The young man seems to be thinking "I'd better get moving — and fast!" To the right, the youngest beauty in the parade surveys the crowd from her car. The festival will end today with canoe races, the Spring Shad Run, and the climax of the golf and tennis tournaments.

Business Notes

FILED STATEMENT

Eaton Corp. announced that it filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission for $150 million of original issue discount debentures.

Eaton said it will use net proceeds estimated to be not more than $90 million from the sale of the debentures to refinance a portion of the company's indebtedness in the form of commercial paper and notes payable to banks under its revolving credit and term loan agreements.

The company reported total sales for 1980 of $3.2 billion, with net income amounting to $115.8 million.

DEALER FRANCHISE

W. C. (Billy) Herring, president of Herring Tractor & Truck Co. of Wilson, announced that the International Harvester Co. of Chicago has assigned Herring the IH dealer franchise for the Greenville trade area.

Herring, who said the new franchise will be known as Herring International-Greenville, added that the firm will have a temporary location at 602 W. Greenville Boulevard. He said the business will carry IH farm equipment and farm parts.

He said Herring Tractor & Truck Co. was formed in 1922 by the late Dr. L. J. Herring, a veterinarian familiar to eastern North Carolina farm families.

Herring said the new dealership will open Monday morning.

RECEIVED AWARD

Dean's Photography, 203 Evans Street, received a first place award recently for a wedding album entry at the annual convention of the North Carolina Professional Photographers in Fayetteville.

Dean James, owner of the firm, said that a plaque, blue ribbon and "gold corner" award were received for the winning entry, which was judged by a panel of professional photographers.

He said that three "gold corners" were also earned for portraits submitted by the firm, and a scenic entry received one "gold corner."

ANNUAL MEETING

Planters National Bank recently held its 81st annual meeting of shareholders in Rocky Mount with James B. Powers, chairman and president, presiding.

In reviewing the financial highlights of PNB during 1980, Powers said the bank showed continued growth and increased earnings. He said that for the second consecutive year, Planters return on assets was in excess of one percent, placing its performance above the national average of firms of similar size.

Powers noted that despite the nation's unstable economy, 1980 was the 14th consecutive year in which Planters has increased its annual dividend.

SPENDING PLANS

Eaton Corp. reported that despite a drop in sales to $3.2 billion in 1980 from $3.4 billion in 1979 and a 24 percent decrease in net earnings to $115.8 million from $153.3 million in 1979, the company continued significant capital spending plans. Eaton said a company record was set for capital investment of $141 million in one year.

Eaton reported that last year for the first time its shareholders equity rose to a billion dollars, up from $930 million in 1979. The net value of Eaton's property, plant and equipment grew to $821 million from $780 million.

The company's long-term debt shrank to $517 million from $608 million in 1979 and $661 million in 1978, it was noted. Its worldwide employment fell to 50,000 from 58,000 in 1979.

BOARD MEMBERS

Jef Glenn, president of the Pitt County Florist Association, was recently elected to the board of directors of the North Carolina State Florist Association.

Mrs. Glenn is associated with Jefferson Florist Inc. in Greenville.

Grain, Soybeans Drop

By BOB HINDS

AP Business Writer

Grain and soybean futures prices closed lower Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade, influenced by liquidation from Thursday's higher prices and weather-growing conditions.

The daylong selling pressure was caused by a wave of speculative liquidation, according to analysts.

Unlike Thursday's continuing dry weather forecast, a weather service prediction Friday of fairly general rains and showers over much of the Midwest growing area over the weekend and into next week turned the market lower.

In minor support Friday, Mexico bought 172,000 metric tons of soybeans.

Wheat closed 4 to 6 cents lower, with the May contract at $4.30 1/4 a bushel; corn was 1 1/4 to 3 cents lower, May $3.61 1/2 a bushel; oats were 2 1/4 to 4 1/4 cents lower, May $2.17 a bushel; soybeans were 1 1/2 to 20 cents lower, May $7.78 a bushel.

Analysts said recent increased tensions in Poland dampened the possibility of any lifting of the Soviet grain embargo in the foreseeable future.

Futures prices on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange continued week-long featureless trading Friday.

One analyst said there was virtually no outside news to establish a trading trend, describing it as a "difficult" market.

He said good early commission house buying drove cattle futures prices up, but sales by local brokers drove prices down. Trading was relatively light in a narrow range.

Hog prices closed lower under heavy pressure of a larger-than-expected slaughter.

April live cattle prices closed at 63.07 cents a pound and feeders at 68.70 cents a pound.

Pork prices ended the session down .73 cents a pound at 41.57.

On the New York Commodity Exchange Inc. precious metals traded nervously in a narrow range.

A metals analyst said the only market feature was the continued unrest regarding the Polish-Russian situation which boosted early gold and platinum prices and kept the market firm throughout the session.

Some of the support spilled into the silver market, which continued weak relative to gold and platinum.

The June gold contract settled at $521.50 a troy ounce, up $4.00 from Thursday.

Silver closed up 6 cents at $12.18 for the April contract. Platinum closed at $507.70 per troy ounce, up $7.20.

Cotton futures closed at 87.21 cents a pound for the May contract, up 1.01 cents.

Congratulations, Barry C. Chesson

Plain Detergent Just As Good

LANCASTER, Pa. (UPI) — Ordinary detergent and water will do just as good a job on some no-wax floors as new maintenance products being promoted for the same use.

Robert D. Gates, assistant general manager of the floor division for Armstrong World Industries, says products containing floor polish or a polish-cleaner combination are neither necessary nor desirable on many no-wax floors. Gates says the choice of cleaner depends on the type of floor and how you want it to look.

Folk Music Festival

Pitt County's Beverly Cotten clogged to the accompaniment of John McCutchen and John Worthington during the 11th Annual Folk Music and Dance Festival last weekend

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

LOUISBURG — Franklin County's folk music country, as evidenced by the fiddling and heel-clicking that reverberate from the halls of the Louisburg College Auditorium the last Friday and Saturday night of March every year.

Many of my father's Franklin County cousins and their children and grandchildren that I never knew could even carry a tune beyond the doors of Mount Olivet Baptist Church, where we all used to sing together each Sunday while Daddy's cousin, Cora, played the piano, started about 15 years ago to hold a "Hootenanny" each weekend.

They'd all get together on appointed evenings, they and their friends from western Franklin and eastern Granville counties and they'd sing and pick and dance. They found they had talent, plus fun and fellowship. Several of the older ones said they remembered, when they were children and young adults, that the extended family and neighborhood used to do this very thing. Then the practice died away. Most had to buy new instruments, but found they'd retained some of what the old folks — my grandfather, Ollie Blackley, and Uncle Fannie Kearney — had taught them in the days of the Great Depression and before.

Eleven years ago the Franklin County and Louisburg College Folk Music and Dance Festival came into being. And it's been going strong ever since, drawing the Blackleys and the Kearneys and the Preddies and the Tolers from upper Franklin County (the Hootenanny crowd), but many others, too — fiddlers and whistlers and cloggers and students of folklife from all over the country. And those like me who go each year, not to perform, but to toetap and delight in the revelry.

One of the appealing qualities of the festival is its informality. It's held in an old public grade school building that is now part of the Louisburg College campus, and the audience is free to go backstage and watch the tune-ups and the practices and the jam sessions that go on there all the while the stage performances are underway.

The first night is initial competition. "That's how we all got started," Beverly Cotten, visiting artist at Pitt Community College, who performed at the festival this year and last year, said. "It lasts into the wee hours and you see a lot of unpolished performers, but you see many good ones, too, including a lot who are on their way, getting better and better. It's how people get used to being before an audience and it's an integral part of the festival, the preliminaries for the Saturday night show."

Beverly, who's from Morrisville near Chapel Hill, says this is one of her favorites among the many bluegrass events she participates in throughout the country, especially during summer months.

Saturday all day there are activities, including arts and crafts — shows on campus and downtown, a street square dance (Country music star George Jones stopped by and wowed the crowd this year), and the National Whistlers' Convention, now in its eighth year, which includes both competition and concert.

Maury York, a manuscript librarian at East Carolina University's Joyner Library and a Louisburg native, took part in the whistling competition last year and won in the classical music division. This year he went back as a performer in the concert part. "I'm still very much an amateur compared with some who were there," he said. "The best was Jason Serinus from San Francisco. He's the voice of Woodstock in 'Peanuts' television specials. He was great!"

Asked what he himself whistled, York said, "A piece by Mozart and one by an Englishman named John Stanly. I can't even tell you the names of them. I don't know anything about music. I just memorized these pieces from a record I have."

The overall grand champions of the festival were the Balsam Gap Boys string band of Sanford. The individual grand champion was Earl Link, the fiddling member of the Country Cousins string band of Timberlake.

The grand champion whistler was Toby Sherrill of Greensboro, a Louisburg College student. He won first place in the bird and animal sounds category and placed in both the contemporary music and volume categories.

The Ola Belle Reed Family Band from near Baltimore, Md. Ola Belle and her husband, Bud, and fiddling friend Jerry Lundy played hillbilly music. "That's what we've played for the past 40 years," Ola Belle says and I don't mind calling my

Ola Belle's A Tar Heel And A Hillbilly

World-famous folk music maker Ola Belle Reed told the audience of the Franklin County Folk Music and Dance Festival that she's a Tar Heel and a Hillbilly.

"And I'm proud of both," she said.

Ola Belle said hers was an Ashe County, North Carolina family who migrated to the Maryland-Pennsylvania line area in the years before World War II.

"During my girlhood in the mountains of North Carolina, we didn't think we'd ever leave," she said. "We loved it here and the mountains were good to us. A crowd of us would sometimes walk five miles to a country church just for the music and fellowship."

But hard times came on, and after a brother went to Maryland and found work, practically the whole family, including her mother and father, followed him there for jobs, she related.

"We took our music with us, though, and we didn't do like so many people I know up there. We weren't ashamed of our southern mountains culture and we didn't try to assume the culture of that area or any other. We ourselves called our music hillbilly while we were in the mountains and we didn't change its name up there. We came to know that some people used the word in a derogatory manner, but that's never bothered us."

Ola Belle began as early as 1934 to play "banjer" and sing and yodel with her brother, Alex Campbell's string band called the North Carolina Ridgerunners. "Back then our music was for some reason considered western, so we all wore fancy outfits made up by a Baltimore tailor who called himself Rodeo Ben. We played mostly for dances and on the radio," she said.

Ola Belle married Ralph "Bud" Reed 32 years ago. A jovial man, he says he's "retarded" — slowed down — from the insurance business now and sings and plays guitar in accompaniment of his wife and himself. He's partial to Jimmy Rogers songs.

The couple has two sons, Ralph Jr., a Pentecostal Holiness minister and music maker, and David, who's a gospel musician.

"Music has always been the biggest part of our family life," Ola Belle said. "We have people picking and singing at our house all the time, people from all over the world. We have for years done a radio show out of the back of the country store my family (the Campbells) operate in Oxford, Pa. There's a recording studio in the stock room."

Ola Belle now spend a large part of her time sharing with school children and university students her first-hand information and convictions about the southern mountain music and way of life. She's been awarded a doctorate from the University of Maryland, which the board stipulated is not honorary. It was given her for her tremendous contributions to people's awareness of the value of our native American culture, the university fathers said.

The Ola Belle Reed Family Band has a pumber of musical albums to its credit and they're official folk music recorders for the U. S. Library of Congress. One album was recorded in the Reed home in conjunction with Kevin Roth, a classical Jewish dulcimer artist. It's called "All in One Evening."

Ola Belle, who plays mostly banjo and sings in a throaty low-pitched voice, says she sees the last few years as the most enlightened age in her lifetime. "Young people are getting values back, finding out what's really important," she said. "They're learning that every culture, every music form has its place. They're not the snobs their parents were, and in the process, the parents have learned a little from the young'uns."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

When the history of guilt is written, parents who refuse their children money will be right up there in the top 10.

Most of us are sustaining members of the Sin by Indulgence Club. I serve — without pay — as its national president, having made every mistake in the book.

Nearly every child psychologist I read said you should set up an allowance system that would not only teach the basics of savings, but through work would give them a feeling of accomplishment and personal value.

I paid my kids to sleep, blow their noses, breathe in and out, clean out their cages, pick up their own towels, go out and play, get their bicycles out of the street, keep their feet on the floor, pass something, and one New Year's Day offered one of them a blank check if he would stop smacking his lips.

By the time the kids hit puberty, they were filthy rich! Through loans and heavy interest rates, we were able to borrow from them enough to make the payments on their overbites and send them to camps where we gave them a candy allowance to rot their overbites.

The one thing the psychology books never pointed out was how long it would take to give them the basics of saving and that feeling of accomplishment and personal value. My children's first words were, "Do I have to use my own money?"

I had to get rid of the guilt. Guilt because I got to go to the hospital for surgery and they never got to go anywhere. Guilt because I bought a new sweater and they traded theirs for a Bee Gees album.

was also remembered with a corsage of white carnations.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Ruby Whichard of Greenville and Mrs. Nancy Ruff of Landrum, S. C., aunt of the bride, presided at the register.

The couple will live here temporarily after a wedding trip to Sea Island, Ga.

The bride is a graduate of Western Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Appalachian State University and is employed by the W. P. Ferris Co., Charlotte, as a real estate appraiser.

A reception was held after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall.

The tables featured arrangements of assorted spring flowers. Mrs. Earl Smith, aunt of the bride, served cake and Mrs. William Clifton poured punch. Miss Karen Weisner, niece of the bridegroom, distributed rice at the reception.

The bridal couple was entertained by the bridegroom's family at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Three Steers Friday evening.

Byrd-Schultz Vows Said

NEW BERN — Centenary United Methodist Church here was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding of Linda Allen Schultz and Johnnie Pinkney Byrd Jr. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. E. Dale Schultz of New Bern and Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie P. Byrd of Kinston.

The Rev. Norman Jones performed the double ring ceremony at four o'clock. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Jerald J. Pierce, organist, and Sonny Barwick.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Jackie McGee of Greenville. The bride was maid of honor and bridesmaids included sisters of the bride, Jean and Betsy Schultz, both of New Bern, and Mrs. Les Grady of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom was best man while ushers included Bob Oettinger and Bill Stainback of Kinston and Randy Hignite of Greenville.

The bride chose a formal gown of white silken organza and Venise lace over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a colonial neckline, empire bodice accented with English net and Venise lace. The long fitted sleeves were embellished with English net and Venise lace. The A-line skirt, edged with flowerettes, fell into a chapel train. She wore a fingertip mantilla of imported silk illusion adorned with appliques of silk Venise lace and edged with Venise lace flowerettes. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink carnations and American beauty roses with gypsophila.

The attendants each wore a formal gown of blue polyester lustreglo styled with a bodice with spaghetti straps, A-line flared skirt and removable silk chiffon peplum jacket accented with silk Venise lace. They each carried pink roses with gypsophila and wore clusters of gypsophila in their hair.

The couple will be living in Kinston after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

MRS. JOHNNIE PINKNEY BYRD JR.

The bride graduated from New Bern High School and ECU. She now teaches at Tammy's. The bridegroom attended Kinston High School and Lenoir Community College. He is a member of the musical group Five Degrees South and manager of VIP Formal Wear, Kinston.

A reception was held in the Garden Room at the Palace Motel.

The refreshment table was decorated with a white organza cloth and centered with a miniature nosegay styled identical to those of the bridesmaids.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom and his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Maroules at Maroules Cafeteria, Kinston, Friday evening.

Daughter's Love Story Too Full of Facts

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was heartsick, but not terribly surprised, to find birth control pills in my daughter's bathroom. Rhonda (not her real name) just turned 18 and is a senior in high school. She's been going steady with a young man since last summer. Rhonda is an excellent student and plans to start college away from home next fall.

In today's world, what are a girl's chances of being harmed permanently by premarital sex? Rhonda is my only daughter. I love her dearly and never dreamed I would have this problem.

A MOTHER'S PROBLEM

DEAR MOTHER: A girl's chances of being harmed permanently by premarital sex would be infinitely greater were she not taking precautions to prevent an unwanted pregnancy. Many mothers whose daughters have had an abortion or a child out of wedlock would have welcomed your "problem." I am not condoning premarital sex, but when it's a fact, it should be dealt with intelligently and responsibly.

DEAR ABBY: Apparently neither you nor PERPLEXED IN N.Y. has ever been to a dance where there was a considerable number of unescorted women. I have, and believe me, the burden on the escort is nothing compared to that of the woman who must sit smiling while those parasites "borrow" her husband.

My husband and I both love to dance, and in the 40 years of our marriage we have attended many dances and exchanged dances with other couples during the evening. Now, however, there are increasing numbers of widows and divorcees to be waltzed around the floor, and if my husband danced with each one of them once, it would leave me without a partner all evening, so now we attend dances for "couples only."

While I sympathize with women who don't have husbands, it doesn't follow that I should give up mine.

ADAMANT IN N.Y.

DEAR ADAMANT: Read on for another view:

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow and I love to dance. When I go to a dance alone or with another woman and there aren't enough men to go around, it is torture for me to just sit and tap my toes while others are dancing, so I ask a woman to dance. It's not quite as much fun as dancing with a man, but it beats sitting.

Oh, I get a few funny looks, but that doesn't bother me. Do you see anything wrong with it?

LOVES TO DANCE IN HIBBING, MINN.

DEAR LOVES: No. But if two men started to dance together in public, they'd promptly be asked to dance out of the place. Unfair? Yes. But who ever said life was fair?

DEAR ABBY: I agree, the word "hopefully" is woefully overused — and incorrectly at that. It would be much simpler if "I hope" were used instead, because that is what is meant.

Another word that is overused is "very." I once knew an editor who told his reporters that he would fire any reporter who used the word "very" — they should substitute the word "damned" instead! But since it was a family newspaper, he blue-penciled all the "damned's" before the stories went to the composing room.

NOVELIST

DEAR NOVELIST: That's damned interesting — I hope!

Folk Music Festival . . .

Lundy, who's from Northeastern Maryland is a sawmill on weekdays and saws his fiddle on weekends alone or with various groups. He's from a fiddling family, which includes his grandfather, the late Emmet Lundy, who recorded authentic Mountains-of-Virginia music for the Library of Congress as early as 1926 when he was then 77 years old.

Mike Seeger played the mouthharp and dulcimer simultaneously and sang, sometimes without accompaniment, as people used to do. He is director of the Smithsonian American Folklife Company and travels all over the United States performing, studying and documenting folk music. He has more than 50 albums of folk music to his credit.

John Worthington of the Greenville area, a member of the Hometown Boys group here, played backup for Beverly Cotten's dancing.

The Sourwood Mountain Cloggers, Franklin County cousins of one another and of me, were a crowd favorite. They're the National Grange dance champions, a distinction won in competition in Pennsylvania a couple of years ago.

Also a local favorite were the Fort Creek String Band of Franklinton, more cousins. They placed second in the string band competition and won't be able ever again to compete. "That's how the festival judging works," someone in Festival Director Allen de Hart's office explained. "Once you've won, you cannot compete again, but can come back as a non-contestant. This keeps the competition more accessible to newcomers and fosters new talent."

Harry "Eyebrows" Pearce has been amusing festival audiences for the past eight or nine years with his mocking sidelong leering grinning and eyebrow bobbing as he plays the bass fiddle. He operates a country store in the community of Alert, which he says, in all seriousness, is halfway between Lick Skillet and Slosh near the Franklin-Warren County line.

Clifton Preddy of near Franklinton buckdanced alone on stage for the fourth year in a row + and he's not yet eight years old.

Scottish music and dance was represented by the North Carolina State University Scottish Pipe Band and the Scottish Country Dancers of Chapel Hill.

Paul Taylor of Altamahaw near Burlington played both guitar and washboard and sang funny songs he's written since his retirement from carpentry work several years ago. He was the runner-up vocal champion of the festival. He said he hopes his brother-in-law, Leon Singleton of Greenville, is willing to claim him.

After the Saturday night performance, which ended well past midnight, there was the Old Time Fiddlers' Retreat which was slated to last "as long as fiddlers wish to fiddle."

ASK OMAR

Q.—When is a trump suit agreed upon? I always thought that, if opener rebids his own suit, to all intents and purposes that should be treated as the agreed trump suit by both partners. But we got into a lot of trouble the other night when my partner and I got our wires crossed. He opened and rebid spades and I started cue-bidding. Unfortunately, he thought I was showing new suits and we ended up in a hopeless contract. Can you help?—L. Jeffries, New York City

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)
A.—The fact that opener has been forced to rebid his suit does not necessarily mean that it is good enough to be the trump suit. On occasion, opener might even have been forced to rebid a ragged five-card suit because responder has taken up most of the available bidding space.

By and large, a suit is not agreed upon until it has been bid by one player and raised by the other. However, there are certain exceptions.

Let us assume that the opening bid was three hearts. When partner has shown a seven-card suit, it is unlikely that he has support for any of your suits, and it does not make sense for you to bid a suit simply to try to improve the contract. Therefore, a new suit by you over partner's preempt is forcing and, for the moment, partner should assume that his suit is the agreed suit unless he has support for your suit, in which case he may raise.

Here's another case. Partner opens the bidding with one no trump and you jump to three hearts. Partner now bids a suit. Again, that is not an attempt to find a better spot to play the hand. It is a cue-bid, which shows support for your suit, a maximum no trump, first-round control in the bid suit and slam interest.

Or this. You respond at the one-level to partner's opening bid, and partner now jumps to the four-level in a new suit. That is an advance cue-bid agreeing partner's suit as trumps and showing control in that suit.

We admit that there are occasions where partner has opened and simply rebid this suit and your next action now sets his suit as trumps—for the moment anyway. For example:

North South

2 ♣ 4 NT

South's jump to four no trump is Blackwood, and surely is based on a spade fit. If South's club suit was self-sustaining, he would have jumped to three clubs at his first turn.

Lastly, there are also those situations where a suit has been jump rebid, which almost invariably sets that suit as trumps.

Gravestone Is Wrested From The Bureaucracy

By SUZANNE DEAN
OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — In early March of this year, Maria Brigham Adams, a determined woman in her 60s, placed a small marker on the grave of her murdered husband.

The event, says Lt. Col. Thomas L. Kirkham, an Air Force executive at the Ogden Defense Depot where Mrs. Adams is a barber, culminated a federal bureaucratic disaster. Or it may have been a bureaucratic miracle.

Two years ago, David A. Brigham accepted a ride home from an Ogden tavern from several young men. The men drove up a nearby canyon, robbed Brigham, threw him on the ground and ran over and killed him with their car.

Mrs. Adams (now remarried) had heard that every armed services veteran is entitled to a free gravestone from the Veteran's Administration. The woman, who has only a small income, asked her mortuary to apply. That was in December 1979. The gravestone didn't arrive.

Kirkham took a personal interest. He called the mortuary and was assured the application had been filed. The mortuary had the date but no copy of the document.

Kirkham called the local Veteran's Administration office. They said gravestones were all handled in Washington.

On his next business trip to Washington, Kirkham searched out the VA Monument Service. After going to two wrong buildings, the colonel found a cramped, 12-foot by 20-foot room dotted with 10-foot high stacks of uncomputerized gravestone applications.

The office had several employees, including a snowed-under, middle-aged woman in charge who was "working like crazy," said Kirkham.

Kirkham asked if the office had received an application from the Ogden mortuary. That would take weeks to determine, he was told.

The woman gently suggested the refile. Apparently conscious that gravestone applications often got waylaid, she told him to write on the envelope: "Do Not Open in Mail Room. Send Directly to (her name)."

Back in Utah, Kirkham and his secretary repeatedly checked with her by phone. It turned out more information was needed. Kirkham hand-delivered it to Washington on another business trip.

In February, a call came from the Defense Depot dock. "Colonel!" said an excited worker. "There's a tombstone here addressed to you."

In fact, the parcel was misaddressed to Tom "Kirkland." If the dock worker hadn't known about the stone, it might have been marked, "Not at this address" and sent back, Kirkham said.

Memphis Could Be A Gulf City

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The city of Memphis may some day be on the shore of the Gulf of Mexico, if the ice which now covers a 10th of the earth ever melts, according to studies by marine scientists.

They estimate that the ocean would rise by as much as 200 feet, completely flooding New York City, Washington, Miami, Houston, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

There's no need to panic, however, as the ice isn't expected to start melting for several thousand years, or longer.

'Burnout' Victims Come From All Walks Of Life

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Burnout!

"It's become a very popular disease these days," says Dr. Alfred Alschuler, a clinical psychologist and a professor of education at the University of Massachusetts who did extensive research on teacher burnout.

"Probably the easiest term for it is exhaustion. People are simply tired of what they're doing. They just can't put out anymore."

Its victims include business executives, human services workers, social workers, psychologists, teachers and policemen.

"It's a phenomenon that cuts across occupational lines," says Walter Gorski, chief psychologist for the National Association of Chiefs of Police.

"It occurs to anyone who is primarily involved in problems having to do with other people," says Alschuler, "primarily because human problems are simply not solvable in the same way that a problem with your car or television set is solvable."

Alschuler says the symptoms of burnout include distance from people, spending less time on the job, increased cynicism and negativity and emotional and physical fatigue.

Silvia Rodriguez, 35, suffered some of these symptoms and burned out after more than 10 years of teaching in the Connecticut school system.

By her own account, she had been dedicated to her students. She wrote her own class materials for her high school language courses to make them more interesting. She gave up her weekends for such causes as the March of Dimes walkathon and the Special Olympics for handicapped children. She gave the needy food and clothing.

She felt she wasn't appreciated by school administrators or the community itself.

Then in the spring of 1979 there was a fight between two students in her classroom. She was hurt.

"I went home and I began feeling very sick. I was out of school for three weeks. My body was in a lot of pain. I began looking at myself and I realized it was not worthwhile."

"I was increasingly tired, increasingly bored. The thought of having to go back to teach was very scary, very petrifying. I really had a tremendous fear when I went back to that classroom."

"When I realized I had lost the trust of my students and that I was not feeling comfortable in their company any longer, I decided they did not need me."

She left teaching in June 1979 and now works happily at the National Institute of Education in Washington as an adviser on youth education and employment programs.

According to the National Education Association, the average length of teacher service has dropped from 20 years to 14 years in the past 20 years.

Alschuler says stress has been linked with almost every known human disease.

"The cause and relationship between stress and these diseases is not exactly clear but it does seem to be an aggravator of whatever tendency you have toward disease."

Some research, he says, indicates that people with high stress levels are far more likely to have an accident or illness within a significant period of time.

Gerald Arenberg, editor of Police Times, a magazine for members of the National Association of Chiefs of Police, quotes studies that show career police officers, both active and retired, die younger than most other occupational groups and suffer a high rate of health problems.

Gorski says burnout among police officers leads to psychosomatic illnesses, ulcers, backache and hypertension because "they have to deal with unpleasant situations over and over and over."

Among the primary causes of burnout are:

— Too much responsibility, at work or in your personal life.

— A lack of perspective on the stresses that do occur in your life.

— The inability to manage your body's reaction to stress.

— Poor time management and the inability to work effectively with other people.

— Singlemindedness, the lack of some important diversions in your life.

Moving, divorce, business problems create environmental stress, Alschuler says. The condition you are in and bad habits affect your ability to handle stresses. Too much caffeine, too much processed sugar only make things worse.

"If you don't have a positive addiction like jogging, or ceramics, or gardening, or even watching television, something you can do to take your mind off work completely, that's a major cause," says Alschuler.

He suggests talking about your problems with a friend, your spouse or your lover, reducing the amount of incoming stress in your personal life or professional life, qualifying your values to put into perspective what's really important and managing your body by eating the right foods and getting regular exercise.

"Learn biofeedback," he suggests.

Biofeedback machines that monitor bodily functions like pulse, heart rate and body temperature, are relatively inexpensive, he says, and can help manage the body's response to tension.

Alschuler, who says he is a little overweight, counterbalances his own work with karate workouts three times a week with his son, Alfie, 9, and his oldest daughter, Lisa, 14. He and his youngest daughter, Britt, 11, take care of the family horse. This makes for quality time with his family.

In the last 10 years, he has traveled across the country between college semester breaks as a consultant to more than 300 different organizations, most of them educational. He has written a dozen books dealing with the psychological and social problems in schools and has two more in the works. He has done radio and television programs.

At age 41, he avoids burnout by choosing his level of workload and pacing himself.

"When I go out consulting, I always stop to see friends in order to keep my values in proper balance...."

"I have learned how to say no to hundreds of attractive pieces of work. I hold certain times of the day and week as sacrosanct. For example, from Friday evening to Sunday evening, my children come before anything else."

"Often in the morning, I won't even answer the telephone until noon. I see the phone as an invitation to speak with somebody, not as a demand. I have an answering machine. That allows me to concentrate. In the afternoon, I concentrate on people mostly, after I've done my paper work."

There are a number of effective anti-burnout programs for teachers and police officers, emphasizing physical conditioning, good nutrition and working out tensions. Mostly, common sense helps.

When racial disturbances hit Opa-locka, Fla., last May, Police Chief Robert Ingram saw a potential for burnout among his officers because of the long shifts and the threat of attack. He called in Alschuler to give him a hand in stress reduction training.

"It worked very well as far as I was concerned," says Ingram, who picked up a few tips himself in time management.

"One of the stresses that I discovered," he says, "was the time management process. You schedule everything but time to yourself."

Dr. Jodi Kassover, a psychologist and business consultant in Colorado Springs, Colo., says burnout "is substantial among business executives and one of the symptoms is denial. I think some of the more humanistically orientated companies are just beginning to address the problem."

She has been conducting seminars for top level executives and their spouses. A large medical practice hired her for a series of workshops to make its 150 employees aware of stress symptoms so their stress would not affect the patients.

Some companies, she says, are doing fairly extensive research into stress and management and exploring a variety of moves to reduce it.

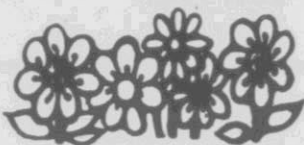

"They are looking at not moving executives as frequently. One hospital has a staff retreat every six weeks as a stress reduction technique."

'Julius Caesar' Next For Playhouse

ECU News Bureau
"Julius Caesar," one of William Shakespeare's most powerful and compelling dramas, will be presented by the East Carolina Playhouse on four dates — April 7, 9, 10 and 11 at 8:15 p.m. in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center.

Tickets are priced at $3.50 general admission; $2.50 per person in groups of 20 or more; and $1.00 each for secondary school students in groups of 20 or more.

Director Edgar Loessin has assembled a cast of 30 actors and as many technicians in a production that will depart from the traditional interpretation of the celebrated classic. In this version, considerable reliance will be given to techniques such as motion picture film, recorded music and bold lighting effects.

"We want to make the play live in the ambience of Hendrix Theater," Loessin said. "We hope to achieve a sense of the political cycle that is so evident in 'Julius Caesar.' This is a play that speaks directly to some of our recent politics in this country, a play that shows what happens when personal judgement tries to move exclusively on a political plane, where issues are simplified and distorted."

Playhouse General Manager Scott Parker commented that the "excitement the production has generated around eastern North Carolina has been wonderful. We will have nearly 2,000 high school students bused in from as far away as Raleigh and Elizabeth City."

Tickets are now on sale for all evening performances and are available at the ECU Central Ticket Office, telephone 757-6390.

Cast members include McCoy Baughman as Julius Caesar; Bill Roberson, Brutus; Sally Nell Clodfelter, Portia; Jason Weeks, Octavius Caesar; Eric van Baars, Casca; Gary Gareth, Cassius; and Gene McLendon, Lucilius.

Also, Raeford Nobles as Pindarius; Gregory Phillips as the poet Cinna and Shaun Holliday as a citizen; Frank Nixon, Popilius; Julia Anne Haskett, understudy to Calpurnia; Joseph White, Caius Ligarius; and Donna Lynn Cooper, a citizen and understudy for the role of Portia.

ECU Dance Theater On Tour

ECU News Bureau
The East Carolina Dance Theater is touring eastern North Carolina towns this month, with performances and lecture/demonstrations to audiences and dance students in Tarboro, New Bern and Morehead City.

A program of dances choreographed by ECU dance faculty members Patricia Pertalion, Paula Johnson, Petrus van Muyden and Patti Weeks will be performed in Tarboro on April 10, in New Bern on April 14 and in Morehead City on April 28.

The pieces to be danced represent modern, jazz and ballet idioms, and are highlighted with a special homage in dance to the late ballerina Anna Pavlova in her centenary birth year. The ballet of homage is a van Muyden reconstruction of Pavlova's famous solo, "The Dying Swan."

Choreographer van Muyden also served as guest choreographer for a Beaufort County Arts Council program held April 4 in Washington.

Today, van Muyden will conduct a master class for advanced ballet students of Melanie Galizia of Morehead City and Linda Huffman of Jacksonville, at Ms. Galizia's dance school, Melanie's Ballet and Stage Arts Centre.

Dance Scholarships To Two ECU Students

ECU News Bureau
Two outstanding student dancers have been awarded $300 scholarships for the fall semester at East Carolina University.

The two are Elizabeth Davis of Chapel Hill and Jenny Houtz of Elizabeth City.

The recipients were selected by the ECU dance faculty from a group of prospective students who auditioned at ECU during February.

ECU's dance program, part of the Department of Drama and Speech, includes a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in dance, with concentrations in choreography/teaching and dance performance. Students may also pursue minor programs in dance.

Course offerings consist of general and advanced studies in ballet, contemporary dance, jazz and dance history.

Fellowships Available

RALEIGH — Applications are now being accepted for the North Carolina Art Council's Artist Fellowship Program. Deadline for applications is June 1.

Four awards of up to $5,000 each will be presented this year to fiction writers, playwrights, composers and choreographers. In alternate years, similar awards go to visual artists.

These awards are designed to provide direct support to professionals to allow them to purchase supplies and materials to accomplish specific career goals and to give them the opportunity to devote full attention to their work.

The funds cannot be used for costs relating to formal study toward an academic degree or for academic research.

For details and application forms, contact: The N. C. Arts Council, 407 North Person Street, Raleigh, N. C., 27611, or telephone 733-7897.

"The idea is simple. People want to be independent and on their own. That's what The Albemarle does. It gives people independence and freedom from worry."

— Ruth Ballard

"To begin with, you've got security. That's the security of quality medical care right in your own home, from your own doctor, near your own hospital. And it's the security of knowing that the rescue squad, the fire department and police services are only moments away. It's simply the security of knowing that help, whenever you need it, is moments away.

"The Albemarle offers peaceful retirement living. You don't have to worry any more about the roof leaking, yard work, maintenance of your home, getting things down from the attic or finding someone to replace that bulb up there.

"One of the things that makes The Albemarle special is that you can continue going to your own church, clubs, golf games and other activities. You can continue the life you're living right now — except that you don't have to cook every meal, wash dishes or do spring cleaning.

And because your future is secure, you're free to travel, spend money and do the things you've always dreamed about.

"A lot of people have worked hard to build and preserve Tarboro's heritage. We know that folks will appreciate the efforts that have gone into making Tarboro an All-American City, and into making The Albemarle part of our future. Tarboro is a very special place. And The Albemarle is simply quality retirement living with the assurance of tender loving life-time care."

Seymour Johnson Open House Awards Banquet On Thursday

SEYMOUR JOHNSON AIR FORCE BASE, GOLDSBORO — A gala 25th Anniversary Open House on Saturday, April 11 will culminate activities celebrating the Silver Anniversary of the reactivation of this major Air Force installation.

Closed shortly after the end of World War II, the 4,000 square acre base was reactivated in April 1956 and has served as a base of the Tactical Air Command since.

A spectacular aerial demonstration by the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds will highlight the Open House activities. They have performed in every state in the union and in many foreign countries.

Gates to the base will open to the public at 10 a.m. and will remain open until 4 p.m. The Open House is free and there will be plenty of parking space, including special parking for buses. A wide variety of food concessions and drink stands will be open for the public.

"This is one special time each year when the public can come on base and get a first hand look at equipment and facilities," said Colonel Peter T. Kempf, commander of the 4th Tactical Fighter Wing, the host unit at Seymour Johnson. He added that on the part of nearly 6,000 men and women who work at the base, "it is my pleasure to invite every citizen to come and see some of the items their defense tax dollars are buying."

The latest Air Force aircraft from around the world will be on display, and the people who fly them will be on hand to talk to visitors.

Aircraft on display will include the F-16, F-15, F-4E, A-10, A-7, T-37, KC-135, B-52G and the C-5 Galaxy, the world's largest aircraft.

In addition, a wide variety of static displays and exhibits from all the military services will be featured. Other activities will include demonstrations of hand to hand combat, military working dogs, North Carolina clogging and a 13-piece jazz ensemble, the "Final Approach," from the Tactical Air Command at Langley AFB, Virginia.

RALEIGH — Governor Jim Hunt will present the third annual Governor's Business Awards in the Arts and Humanities at a banquet at the Casablanca Restaurant in Greenville at 8 p.m. on Thursday, April 9.

The awards will go to six companies which have taken part in or conducted projects designed to encourage excellence in arts, historical programs, preservation efforts, humanities studies and libraries in their own communities or in North Carolina during 1980.

The awards are sponsored by the Governor's Business Council on the Arts and Humanities and the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources. A. C. Monk and Company, Inc. of Farmville will host the presentation ceremony for invited guests.

Commenting on the program, Governor Hunt says "We all know that government at all levels can only do so much in times like these. I'm very pleased to see that many of our businesses, large and small, are aware of the tremendous role culture plays in the state's economy. Their continuing involvement is essential for maintaining the quality of life in our cities and towns."

Representatives of the winning companies will receive a limited edition etching by Greenville artist

Donald Sexauer. R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., commissioned Sexauer's work for this purpose.

Award winners are selected by a committee appointed by Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of Cultural Resources. Members are: Mollie Blankenship of Cherokee, realty officer with the Cherokee Indian Agency and a member of the N. C. Arts Council; Dr. Richard Laing, dean of the ECU School of Art; Dr. Harvey M. Wagner of Durham, professor of business administration at UNC; and Thomas H. Wright Jr. of Wilmington, chairman of Wright Chemical Corporation.

MERIT AWARD WINNER — "First Breath of Spring," a photograph by Larry D. Lean of Greenville, is a merit award winner in the North Carolina National Bank "People in Our Neighborhoods" photography competition. Lean's photograph, along with 27 other

Palace Flower Days

NEW BERN — About 30,000 tulips, more than ever planted before, will soon frame historic Tryon Palace, North Carolina's colonial capitol and royal governor's residence.

The 18th-century style gardens of the 13-acre palace complex, in the heart of historic New Bern, will also be bright with the color of anemones, Dutch iris, hyacinths, azaleas, daffodils, flowering cherry and dogwood.

The ninth annual Gardeners' Sunday will be observed Sunday, April 12, from 1:15 to 5 p.m. On this day, the public may enjoy the flowering spectacle without charge. (The regular admission fee of $2 for adults and $1 for children, however, will be charged for touring the palace and houses in the complex).

Following the close of the gardens at 5 p.m., Lorraine Robinson will present a concert by her advanced students on piano and harpsichord. The recital is free and will be held in the Tryon Palace Auditorium adjacent to the parterre gardens of the John Wright Stanly House.

Palace horticulturist Herb Rea reports that most of April will be the prime time for the spring flower viewing. He comments that "visitors should also take time to enjoy our latest garden, the perennial garden of the restored Commission House. We've designed it in late 19th century Victorian style to compliment that house, and a croquet green, typical of the period, is included."

To allow more visiting days, the Tryon Palace Complex, usually closed on Mondays, will be open Monday, April 6, and Monday, April 20, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Three Festival Readings For Writers

Three activities are being offered during Festival Days by members of the Greenville Writers Club — on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, April 10, 11, and 12.

Each will begin at 7 p.m. and will be held in the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department Administration Building, 2000 Cedar Lane.

The public is invited to attend, and there is no admission charged.

The first evening, Friday, will be devoted to reading and discussing short stories, articles and other brief works by members. Many of the works to be read deal with colorful eastern North Carolina characters and scenes. There will also be a couple of comic selections and an excerpt from a forthcoming biography of Sally Southall Cotton being written by Bill Stephenson.

Saturday evening's offering will be three one-act plays by the group's playwright, Christine Rusch. This is to be a workshop-reading type of presentation with minimal staging effects.

In addition to roles to be read by members of the club, ECU drama student-actress Paige Weaver will make a special guest appearance with the group. Also, two members who do not have work being read in the short story and poetry sessions will take part in the play readings — Bernelle Raynor and Shelia Turnage.

The two shorter of the trio of plays — "Paddy Song," about the conflict between an old wife and a new wife in rural Japan, and "The Tangled Thread," an encounter between two women in Wanamaker's Department Store in New York — will be read first.

The longer of the three, "Coffee Break," will be presented following a brief intermission. Because of the adult nature and dialogue of "Coffee Break," this play is not considered suitable for hearing by young listeners.

All other material in other sessions is of a general nature suitable for all audiences.

Sunday evening's program will be devoted to the reading of poetry — some new, some older poems by members which have previously been published in various magazines.

Members of the Greenville Writers Club who will have material being read in the short story and/or poetry evenings are Don Ball, Honey Ball, Gene Brunell, Bill Hadden, Maxine Harker, Taylor Koonce, LaRona Murray, Pat O'Leary, Helen Parks, Jerry Raynor, Nancy Patterson Shires, Ralph Steele, Bill Stephenson, Ida Wooten Tripp and Edith Walker.

FORTUNES TOLD HERE

A rich uncle will give you a big income tax deduction.

There's still time to open an Individual Retirement Account at Peoples Bank and deduct the contributions from your 1980 federal income tax.

If you're not already covered by a pension or profit-sharing plan where you work, open an Individual Retirement Account at Peoples Bank. You'll be saving for the future while Uncle Sam gives you a tax break. You can make deposits in any amount and contribute up to $1,500 a year to your personal pension plan. Then you can deduct these contributions from your federal income tax for that year. In fact, if you open a Peoples Bank IRA account before April 15, 1981, you can deduct it from your 1980 federal income tax.

Your IRA savings will earn high interest. And you won't have to pay any income tax on the interest until you withdraw the funds at retirement. This could mean extra savings for you because you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket by then.

Easy-to-fill-out IRA account forms are available at any office of Peoples Bank. And they've been pre-approved by the government to save time. So if you miss out on this important tax break, well, that's the way the cookie crumbles.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JUNE PARKER

The library has recently acquired three biographical sketches which should be of interest. The first, "An Ambassador's Wife In Iran" by Cynthia Helms tells of her life and interests as the wife of the U.S. Ambassador to Iran. She lived in Iran from 1972 until 1976 during the time that the country was putting its vast oil wealth into expensive development project but experiencing increasing social tension and political unrest.

She talks about her personal experiences in the country and her knowledge of Iranian culture as well as the political situation at the time. She views the Shah has having been committed to modernizing the country but unable to see the need for broad political support and an avenue for political expression for the people.

"The Sweetheart of the Silent Majority: The Biography of Phyllis Schlafly" by Carol Felsenthal is a journalistic account of the life and beliefs of Phyllis Schlafly, the Equal Rights Amendment's most vocal opponent. Although her conservative background is well-known, some often striking stories and seeming contradictions surface in this investigation of a woman who preaches that woman's greatest achievements are in the home and with the family but whose strong role outside her home seems to provide the opposite.

"Wouldn't Take Nothin' For My Journey Now" by Jack Lauterer is an oral history of the older people of Randolph County, N. C. Jack Lauterer, a local newspaper editor, spent ten years interviewing and photographing the millers, shoe repairmen, shop owners and farmers whose shared wisdom above all reflects the importance of keeping busy. Some work at skills which are becoming obsolete, such as Joe Millard, the blacksmith, or Carl Lawing, who still visits his mill which has been closed since 1935.

Others such as 89-year old Roscoe Gilbert, a cabinet-maker, still practice their craft with vigor. The importance of the family also shows in these sketches. John Bright, a 95-year old dirt farmer — the black, unschooled son of a slave tells of his personal sacrifices which helped put his five children through college and professional school. The wisdom and self-reliance of these older people is proved in their faith in work and the family.

Vocal Ensemble Debut April 16

The five-member Vocal Arts Ensemble of Greenville will be in concert at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, April 16 in the drawing room of the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 Evans Street. The concert is free and the public is invited to attend. However, due to the limited seating capacity at the museum, those holding reservations will have first choice of seats.

Compositions scheduled to be presented in the concert are by Orlando di Lasso, Robert Jones, J. S. Bach, Mozart, Bizet, and Rossini.

Formed in October, 1980, the Vocal Arts Ensemble was created to give performing opportunities to a flexible nucleus of singers who enjoy exploring vocal duets, trios and quartets in a repertoire covering the Renaissance, Baroque, Classic, and Romantic eras.

The five founding members of the Ensemble are:

— Patricia Hiss — Soloist for several years with the ECU Collegium Musicum, Mrs. Hiss has also appeared locally in recitals, oratorios and with the ECU Opera Theater. Currently she is director of choirs at J. H. Rose High School and costumer for the Opera Theater. She holds degrees from St. Olaf College, Minnesota and the University of Illinois.

— Susan Jones — A graduate of the ECU School of Music, as a student Ms. Jones took part in operas and in programs of operatic scenes. She has been soloist for the Greenville Choral Society, the Greenville Chamber Singers, and for churches in Farmville and Kinston.

— Jeffrey Krantz — A graduate of the ECU School of Music, Krantz has also studied in Vienna, Austria. He has been soloist with several area choral groups, with the Ayden Theater Workshop and the ECU Opera Theater. Now a resident of Winterville, Krantz is employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

— Alan Jones — A resident of Greenville since 1968, Jones has appeared with various organizations including the ECU Opera Theater, the Summer Theater, the Playhouse, and the Greenville Chamber Singers and Choral Society. He now works at ECU as a computer programmer.

— Barbara Caspar — Ms. Caspar has maintained a private piano studio for 13 years and takes part as a choral singer with the Chamber Singers and Greenville Choral Society. She holds degrees in music from Boston University and the University of Colorado.

The April 16 concert at the Museum, in conjunction with the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival, is to be the debut appearance for the Vocal Arts Ensemble. In May, they are scheduled to perform for the Farmville Arts Council.

Lesson On How To Lose Friends

KELSO, Wash. (AP) — George F. Allen has won a lot of publicity by announcing that he'd be happy to take middle-of-the-night phone calls from insomniacs. All of which was unfortunate for his neighbor, George W. Allen.

George F.'s appeal to insomniacs to give him a call to pass the time has resulted in several wrong numbers, most of them to George W., who says that until recently, he'd slept fine.

Old Turkish Bath Has Popularity In Jerusalem

By MARION KWARTLER
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Shiny porcelain tiles meet oriental arches in this modern city's century-old Turkish baths, a steam-filled relic of a bygone era with newfound popularity.

Today, oldtimers, young Israelis and tourists flock to the renovated baths as if to a health spa to spend a languorous day in the sauna and hot pools, or to sunbathe nude on the roof in the summer.

Built in 1890 in the Bukharian quarter, one of the first Jewish neighborhoods outside the Old City walls, the baths are a functioning antique and reminder of when Jerusalem's houses were built around central courtyards with communal kitchens and toilets, but without showers or baths.

Many old homes still lack modern plumbing and even homes with showers rarely have bathtubs.

Shimon Khoushy, a Yemenite Jew who remembers collecting firewood as a child for the baths' giant furnace, reopened the crumbling remains in 1967, and is now giving the entire building a modernizing facelift.

"I felt sick once and came to lie on the hot marble slabs, and that's when I decided to fix the place up," he said.

Khoushy, who takes pride in his historic neighborhood, swears by the baths' medicinal properties and claims they have kept him away from doctors for years.

When Khoushy bought the baths, they were in much the same condition as they had been for nearly 70 years. Giant cisterns collected rainwater and a few pennies bought a hot bucket.

During summer drought, the price went up and only the rich could afford to wash. Such was the shortage of water that even the used soapy bath water was recycled and sold to wash laundry.

Khoushy turned the furnace room into a wet sauna and the old cisterns into hot, warm and cold swimming pools. In a side room closed off from the baths, camel-hair Arab carpets cover divans and floor pillows where bathers bring baskets of food and fruit to picnic under a skylight partially covered by ivy tendrils.

The baths are similar to the originals in Turkey, but instead of muscled attendants who scrub bathers with young birch switches, the Jerusalem baths have a full staff of modern cosmeticians and masseurs for separate men's and women's days. A snack bar serves spicy oriental dishes.

The once-elegant Bukharian quarter is filled with one- and two-story stone buildings known for graceful arched windows and intricate wrought-iron work, but from the outside the bath is nondescript.

During the British Mandate period, Jewish underground fighters hid in the quarter's narrow alleyways and reputedly used the baths as a place to stash weapons and as a hideout for kidnapped British soldiers.

During renovation work, Khoushy said, builders discovered an untouched store of guns behind a double wall in the largest cistern.

"The soldiers must have had to stand in the water and pass the guns out one by one," he said. "But the British never found out."

FUNCTIONING ANTIQUE — Many tourists and Israelis flock to the Turkish bath in the Bukharian quarter of Jerusalem. The bath, built in 1890 and renovated in 1967, is used for relaxation by some and for its medicinal powers by others.

The budget is one of the most important considerations of the Council as it establishes the framework for City operations and the provision of City services. The City Council believes that citizen participation in the budget process is vital and that the comments and suggestions received from City residents will be most beneficial to them in reviewing the budget. Citizens of Greenville are encouraged to attend one of the neighborhood budget meetings.

Extent Of Fla. Citrus Loss To Frost Questioned

CITRUS GROVE — Some Florida citrusmen see indications that the damage from a freeze of more than two months ago may be surprisingly light. (UPI Photo)

By ORVAL JACKSON

LAKELAND, Fla. (UPI) — Florida citrusmen knew they had lost a good deal of their fresh fruit crop in a deep freeze old timers said was worse than the one of 1977 and possibly the worst since the 1940s.

What worried them more was how much damage the trees suffered? What would the effect be on next year's crop? And the one after that?

Now, more than two months after the freeze, citrusmen say it still is too early to tell for sure. But some are beginning to smile. They see indications the damage may be surprisingly light in view of the amount of time the groves were under sub-freezing temperatures.

"Since 1946, I've never seen this kind of defoliation without substantially more damaged wood than we have," said Dr. James Griffiths of Florida Citrus Mutual.

"I'm not seeing wood damage of major proportions you would have expected from the duration of the freezing temperatures," he said. "The citrus belt had had cold weather for a month before the freeze and the trees were as dormant as they are ever going to be."

New growth and blossoms have sprouted up throughout the belt, even on trees which were stripped bare of leaves.

Citrusmen said this is a good sign the trees were not severely damaged, but most still are hesitant to flatly predict what next year's crop will be.

"No one will know until October," said Mutual's Earl Wells. "There isn't a person, firm or agency in the state with the expertise to say. Anyone predicting next year's production on conjecture is taking an extreme risk."

Next year's crop will depend as much on future growing conditions as on the effects of the freeze. However, the crop is expected to be somewhat later in reaching maturity next season because of a delayed bloom.

While still uncertain as to the lasting effects of tree damage, citrusmen do know fresh fruit shippers took the biggest immediate loss from the freeze.

Frank Trovillion, manager of the Citrus Administrative Committee which sets fresh fruit standards, said the freeze kept about 7 million boxes off the market.

"There was a heavy loss on Temples and the Honey Tangerines got clobbered," he said.

The fresh fruit supply nationally was hurt further by the dumping of tons of navel oranges in California from fresh fruit channels into cattle feed operations because it was undersized.

The Navel Orange Administration in California predicted only 45 percent of the total California production would reach produce shelves.

Most of the early and mid-season fruit damaged by the freeze in Florida was salvaged for conversion into frozen concentrated orange juice, but navel oranges are not considered a good concentrate fruit. In fact, regulations in Florida limit the amount of navel juice in concentrate to only 10 percent.

To further tighten the fresh fruit supply, California citrusmen have been battling an infestation of the Mediterranean fruit fly, one of the most damaging of citrus pests.

Although Texas orange production this year is estimated at only 4.8 million boxes, growers there picked up some of the slack in the fresh fruit market during the 10-day embargo on shipments from Florida, but their hold was only temporary.

"We are putting more of our Texas citrus on the fresh market, when before a lot of what we grew went into juice," said Bill Weeks of the Texas Citrus Vegetable Growers Shippers Association in Harlingen, Texas.

"We had a lot of orders from eastern receivers right after the Florida freeze when there was an embargo on the fruit but we won't be able to hold onto that market because the Florida growers have an advantage over us in transportation," he said.

Damage which failed to show up two weeks after the freeze began showing up two weeks late confirming predictions immediately after the freeze of damage to the late season Valencia juice orange, which accounts for 66 million boxes of Florida's total 173 million box crop.

Test cutting of fruit on Feb. 1 showed no sign of damage at the center of 47 percent of the Valencias. But in cuttings made Feb. 15 only 30 percent showed no damage at the center.

"That's what happens in a freeze," Trovillion said. "You don't see the damage at first, but then it begins to show up. But it can still be salvaged (by processors)."

Based upon U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates of the production and juice yield, Mutual is anticipating a pack of frozen concentrated orange juice of 186.3 million gallons, a drop of about 55 million gallons from the pre-freeze expectations.

Brazilian concentrators, who have a surplus of FCOJ on hand after a record season, are standing in the wings ready to export their product into Florida to fill any void in supply.

Florida processors hiked the wholesale price after the freeze from $2.70 per dozen six-ounce cans to $3.25 and since have raised it to $4.45.

Brazilian processors followed suit, raising their prices to keep pace with the Florida pricing structure.

Florida growers, who tax themselves to advertise Florida fruit and product, have been trying to curtail Brazilian imports because they believe they are helping sell the Brazilian crop.

The Brazilian citrus concentrating industry got its start after a disastrous freeze in Florida in 1962. Citrus production in Brazil has increased more than 900 percent since then. Florida citrusmen view the Brazilian industry as their biggest threat in the marketplace.

Although Florida citrusmen say it is too early to get a long-range idea of the effects of the January freeze, a comparison of conditions with those before and after the 1977 freeze indicates the state's industry is just about where it was in 1975.

The state had 596,000 acres of bearing citrus trees in January 1976, and at the start of this season had 596,615 acres. The state's estimated production at the start of the 1976-77 season was 209 million boxes of round oranges, but the final pickout after the freeze was 189 million boxes.

The estimate of this season's crop started at 203 million boxes, but now is pegged at 173 million boxes.

The first crop after the 1977 freeze was down to 168.3 million boxes of oranges, followed by a drop to 164 million boxes the following year. But in the third year the state produced a record 206.9 million box crop.

Will the next three years produce a similar pattern for the Florida citrus industry?

"The only thing predictable about a freeze is the unpredictability," one citrusman said.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Cherrywood

By Jerry Bishop

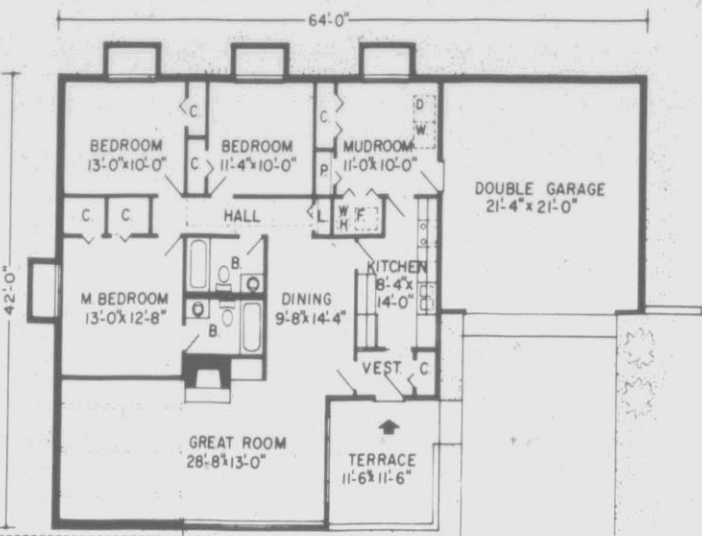

Designed to save energy summer and winter alike, the Cherrywood, a handsome three bedroom contemporary, is a semi-underground plan that calls for soil bermed up to the cornices on sides and back.

The plan takes advantage of the insulating value of soil and also features an airlock vestibule and a well-windowed facade, with southern exposure to capture plenty of sunlight. Rear and side window wells allow for emergency exits.

With all its energy efficiency, however, the plan primarily stresses livability: A 28-ft. great room merges with the dining area and corridor kitchen for an airy effect, and three large bedrooms share two full baths. The double garage opens into a functional mudroom.

Entry is via a terrace and into the vestibule, closeted and closed off to keep cold air from penetrating the interior. Directly ahead is the corridor kitchen, leading to the mudroom at rear. The layout of the plan allows groceries or parcels to be carried from garage to mudroom or kitchen conveniently and without letting heat escape through open doors. Also included in the mudroom is a utility closet, pantry, storage closet, and space for laundry equipment. At left of the kitchen, the impressive great room and dining area are warmed by a woodburning fireplace. The entire area is open, spacious, and well-windowed and is definitely set as the focus of family activity.

Bedrooms are behind living areas and include a 13-ft. master bedroom with two closets and private bath.

Design Swatch Library Is Filling A Surprising Need

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

When Susan Meller was 8 years old, she used to rip up old sheets into squares, paint a design on them with marking pens and put the squares together into a "swatch book."

"Then I would play store with them and the sample swatches my uncle, a robe manufacturer, would bring me," she recalls.

Later, as an art student, she began collecting old textiles as a hobby.

These pastimes proved prophetic. Today, with her husband, Susan Meller runs a design swatch library. It is a business that serves the needs of designers of fabric, wall coverings, apparel and packaging.

From a loft building at the edge of New York's garment district and a group of storehouses in West Pawlett, Vt., the Meller collection of 5 million swatches and designs on paper is available for sale or rent to designers seeking inspiration.

Like other unusual businesses, this one started by accident and grew because it met an unusual but nevertheless very real need.

"Some designers don't like to admit it and our designer customers usually refuse to let us use their names because they want the public to think they invented the designs on their wall coverings and clothing and furniture. But there is nothing new under the sun," said Herb Meller in an interview with the couple at their New York office.

The popular looks today — such as small figured prints and French provincial designs — are not new. They have been done before, he added.

From a realization that design motifs are ageless to a thriving business employing generally four fulltime salespersons and a number of support staff is, however, a very long series of steps.

The steps to the Design Library began haltingly.

"As a textile designer, I continued to collect fabric swatches and designs both out of interest and for my own reference," said Susan. "Occasionally I would show my swatches to others in the field."

To her surprise, a number of designers and firms expressed an interest in buying the samples. She sold a few and then more, as word-of-mouth knowledge of her collection grew.

Then Susan and Herb met and married and decided to move to Vermont. As collectors of antiques, they eventually opened an antique shop there, now closed.

However, to serve her growing number of customers, Susan would go through her collections in Vermont and each month bring a bag to New York of the designs she felt were most suitable to current market trends.

Enter her uncle — the one who brought her robe swatches when she was a little girl. "He was retired and bored and he suggested I leave the sample bag with him instead of bringing back the unsold things to Vermont each month. He began going around to designers and selling the rest of the samples," she says.

From these small beginnings the present business was constructed. Today, the Design Library both rents and sells outright the designs it has bought. The collection emphasizes swatches and painted designs for fabrics mainly from Europe and America dating from 1790 to 1950. The bulk of the business — 80 percent — is divided equally among home furnishings and apparel designers. The remaining 20 percent of customers include packagers and museums.

"We sell most of our designs outright," said Herb Meller. Prices range from $50 for a tiny shirting square to about $250 for the apparel fabric designs and from about $250 to $1,200 for home-furnishings designs. Home-furnishings designs are more costly since designers are usually seeking old, 18th-century fabrics which are rare and unique. Prices are set by scarcity and uniqueness of design.

If a design is rented for commercial purposes, it is withdrawn from the collection and may be bought only by a museum or private collector.

"Actually, a business such as ours should not exist," said Herb Meller. "Ideally, every textile company in the country should donate a sample of each of their designs to a central repository such as a museum. Then the designs would be available to students.

"I have suggested that to some textile firms. But there wasn't any interest. America is just not a history-oriented country," he said. In Europe, however, every municipality where textiles are important has such a museum, he continued.

The Mellers travel almost constantly, seeking and buying swatches of fabric and books with examples of old textile designs.

Susan Meller catalogs each design herself according to a classification system of about 700 possible categories she has devised.

"I love to classify fabrics. I do it for recreation in the same way that other people watch television. After you have been studying fabrics long enough, you can usually tell their approximate age just by looking at them. Each era had its characteristic designs," she said.

However, it is more difficult to guess in which country a fabric was created and manufactured because influences have always traveled so freely, she said.

Gardening Questions

Q. This is my first year of vegetable gardening, and I am not familiar with the proper way to apply fertilizer as a sidedressing. Will you please give me some pointers? (E.E., Snow Camp)

A. Sidedressing refers, of course, to extra fertilizer applied during the growing season. This is in contrast to fertilizer (preplant) which is applied just before the vegetables are sown or set. Sidedressing usually consists of just nitrogen, but can be in the form of a complete fertilizer such as 8-8-8. Crops such as beans, tomatoes, melons, cantaloupes, squash and leafy greens show the best response to nitrogen sidedressing. Apply nitrogen sidedressing to beans when the first pods form. Sidedress tomatoes, melons, and squash after the first fruit form. Continue at four-week intervals or more frequently if you have a lot of leaching rains. For beans, scatter the sidedressing on both sides of the row, six to eight inches from the plants. Use one cup of ammonium nitrate or two cups of sodium nitrate or the equivalent per 100 feet of row. For tomatoes, cucumbers, squash and other widely spaced crops, place the sidedressing in six-inch bands near the plants or in circles at least four inches from the plants. Use two tablespoons of nitrogen and one tablespoon of 8-8-8 for each plant. (Larry Bass, extension horticulturist)

Q. Please suggest a chemical that I can use in place of Nemagon to control nematodes around shrubs. (Mrs. W.L., Wilkesboro)

A. No substitute for Nemagon is presently available to help you control nematodes around established shrubs. Try to plant shrubs that are nematode free in adequately prepared and nematode-free sites. If a soil sample shows that a nematode problem exists, you can either use shrubs tolerant to nematodes or treat the soil before planting shrubs with methyl bromide or Vapam. Vapam is less toxic than methyl bromide and is a water soluble liquid that can be applied with a sprinkling can. Follow label directions. (Harry Duncan, extension plant pathology specialist)

Q. Where do aphids or lice come from? (J.P., Salisbury)

A. Aphids are found everywhere. They reproduce in a short time and often have large colonies by the time you first see them. To control aphids, spray plants that have aphids on them with malathion. (Ken Sorensen, extension entomology specialist)

MORE WHEAT

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

What distinguishes a passive solar energy house from an active solar energy house or any other dwelling referred to in solar energy terms?

The passive solar house utilizes solar energy naturally, with little or no mechanical equipment, thus requiring no energy itself. In some cases, it may not be as effective as an active solar energy house, but neither is it as expensive if included in the original building design.

We get a better picture of the difference between the active and passive solar systems if we think of it this way: In the active system, the reliance is on technology that is somewhat independent of the building and can be added on if it isn't there in the first place. In the passive method, the building itself becomes the system, which means that if the ingredients aren't there at the start, it is difficult to add them later on.

Such things as insulation, double glazing and weatherstripping are all part of conventional energy conservation, but a truly passive solar energy house incorporates passive design ideas in its planning, construction and use.

There is no employment of solar collectors in the ordinary sense or of fans, pumps, heat-exchange units, controls and sophisticated equipment.

Instead, the business of collecting and storing the heat from the sun's rays is left to parts of the building itself, including such things as windows, thermal storage walls and site orientation.

Site orientation simply means the placement of the structure to get the best results from what you are trying to achieve. In the case of solar energy, the general objective is to face the main living areas to the south while, at the same time, providing sufficient glass areas to allow the solar radiation a place to enter.

You cannot store heat if you do not first capture it. Site orientation can be tricky at times and should not be left to someone who hasn't had professional training in its mysteries, since the location of the house must be a compromise between the south-facing windows for heating in cold weather and capturing breezes for cooling in hot weather. To protect facades from cold winds, evergreens, fences and earth berms should be located on the north and west sides of the house.

While the expert at site orientation knows all the general rules for making appropriate decisions, he must know when to make exceptions. He must know, for instance, that near a body of water, breezes move from the water to the land during the day, but flow in reverse at night. And that, on a south-facing hill, breezes tend to move up the hill during the day, down the hill at night.

All the discussions about solar energy housing in recent years have included the matter of the placement and sizes of windows. Where they are in relation to the sun at different times of the day and how large or small they are can greatly affect the inside temperature of a house. Yet millions of houses have been built without the slightest consideration to this matter, an indication, perhaps, of the general lack of knowledge about windows and energy. Or, again perhaps, of the indifference, until recently, to the subject of wasted energy.

If you are in the fortunate position of being able to build a house with passive or active solar energy features, consult architects and builders on the many types of such designs available. You may have heard of some solar energy ideas that do

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I have a table made of wood with knots in it. I painted it about six months ago and it looked fine, but now there are yellowish stains where the knots used to be. While this is not an especially good table and appearance is not vital, I still would like to cover the stains. What must I do before repainting the table? I hope I do not have to take off all the paint.

A. — You undoubtedly painted the table before making an attempt to seal in the knots to prevent them from bleeding. You should have used a knot sealer or shellac prior to painting. No, you will not have to remove all the paint, but you will have to sand the stained areas thoroughly, then apply a sealer. Wait a couple of weeks. If some color comes through again, apply a second coat of sealer. After it has dried completely, you can go ahead with the painting.

Q. — There is only a single layer of wallpaper on our dining-room walls. We now want to remove it, but the trouble is that the wallpaper has been painted. What is the best way to get the paper off? We have had some conflicting advice on this matter and are puzzled what to do because we are not do-it-yourselfers.

A. — With only one layer of wallpaper, you should not have too much trouble getting it off. Before you start, though, make sure you don't have the kind of wall covering that strips off. If you do, just scrape up the corners a little, then pull off the paper by hand. For removing the non-strippable paper, wet it down with a brush or small sprayer. Do only a section at a time. The trick is to allow the water to soak in thoroughly but not so long that the paper gets dry. When the paper is still damp, scrape it off. Some authorities advocate wetting down the entire room at one time, but I have found from personal experience that much of the paper then gets too dry and you have to wet it all over again. How much water should you use? As much as you need to get off the paper. When there are three or four layers of paper on the wall, you might need a wallpaper remover and, in really difficult cases, steaming equipment.

not apply to your situation. Some make more sense in certain climates, some can be incorporated into existing homes, some are applicable only in new construction, and some may appeal to you more than others.

Do-it-yourselfers around the house will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

Applies 150-Year-Old Methods To Get International Clientele

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer
VIENNA (AP) — In a city where tradition reigns, Carl Scheer has applied 150-year-old methods to garner an international clientele and keep his foothold in the modern business world.

Scheer is the fifth-generation proprietor of R. Scheer and Sons, formerly royal shoemakers for the Hapsburg court and now footwear craftsmen for the finicky on three continents.

For about $475 Scheer can deliver — in roughly 10 months' time — a totally hand-made pair of shoes that he says "will never let you go back to machine-made shoes again."

By his own account, Scheer is among the last of a dying breed, the shoemaker who shuns machinery. According to the 63-year-old Scheer, John Lobb of London and Paris is the only other firm in the world where the customer can be assured of a totally hand-made, western-style, leather shoe. Other shoemakers, he explains, now resort to machine in one stage of the operation or another.

Simple Toys Said Best

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Water, sand and modeling clay make the best toys for young children, says a specialist in child development at Syracuse University.

Alice Honig, associate professor of child development in the College for Human Development, says children use play to test their ideas about how the world works.

"By acting on toys they find out what fulcrums are, what gravity is like, what materials they can squeeze, what materials can be pressed and squashed and what can be stretched," she says. "Children also learn, through play, how to get rid of things that are frightening them or have been scary or troubling."

Ms. Honig tells parents when they see their children "playing out" past scoldings or punishments it is part of the child's way of "working through their troubles."

In searching for gift ideas for children, Ms. Honig urges parents to choose safe toys appropriate to the child's age. "The simplest toys are often the best," she says.

To Discuss New South

ECU News Bureau
What is happening in the South today and what problems and opportunities the change presents will be studied at a conference on "The Changing South" at East Carolina University on April 13.

Directions and dimensions of the currents of change in the South will be discussed by the main speakers. The interested public is invited to the conference which opens at 10:30 a.m. at ECU's Willis Building.

Keynote speaker will be Dr. Merle Prunty, Distinguished Alumni Professor of Geography, University of Georgia, whose topic will be "Current and Pending Pressures on Southern Land Resources." "Demographic Trends and Urbanization" is the topic of an address by Ms. Pat Dusenbury, Associate Director of the Southern Growth Policies Board, Atlanta.

A concluding presentation will be "The Changing Employment Structure of the South" by Dr. Clyde Browning, professor of geography, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

The event is the third Land Conference sponsored by the ECU Department of Geography and Planning.

He works with his wife, Inge, his daughter and eight assistants. Together they produce about 300 pairs of shoes and boots a year. Despite that, the backlog keeps growing.

The shop is on the same site that R. Scheer and Sons first occupied about 130 years ago, not far from Vienna's landmark Hofburg Palace, the massive seat of the Hapsburgs.

Scheer's great-grandfather was appointed exclusive shoemaker to the Hapsburg Court and the empire's military academy approximately 150 years ago. The firm's clientele soon included many of Europe's royal families.

The Scheer shop is lined with bookcases holding boot-trees carved to fit the feet of such notables as Kaiser Franz Joseph, who ordered Austria into what became World War I and appears to have had extremely high arches, and Baron Alphonus Rothschild, the powerful French financier.

Greece's ousted monarchy is represented by boot-trees carved to fit King George, and Germany with those once belonging to Kaiser Wilhelm II. In the basement are 4,000 boot-trees awaiting repeat business from living customers. If no orders are received within 10 years, Scheer says, a customer's mold, or boot-tree, is discarded. The Scheer family's clientele now includes international politicians and show-business stars from three continents, but family tradition prohibits discussion of living customers.

"I'm not sure when the tradition started, but I grew up with it," Scheer said. "You'll have to wait a goodly number of years before we can speak of the people who come here now."

The potential customer must first come to Vienna for a foot-fitting, from which a wooden boot-tree mold is carved. After the first fitting, however, customers can order shoes by mail, describing the color and model they need.

"I suppose it is possible for someone to send me a plaster-cast mold of his feet if he is too busy to make the trip," Scheer said unenthusiastically. "But you can only be sure of perfection if you see the client in person."

According to Mrs. Scheer, who oversees the business records, virtually all customers, who she says represent "dozens of nationalities," return frequently over the decades.

But Scheer shoes, she adds, will last for 20 years, so customers "don't come back out of necessity."

Museum Has Famed N.C. Staircase

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The most famous staircase ever built in North Carolina is seen by thousands of people who visit the Henry Francis duPont Winterthur Museum in Delaware each year.

In fact, architecturally speaking, it may be the most important circular, free-standing, wooden stairway in America.

It is the Montmorenci staircase, removed from the splendid antebellum home by that name in Warren County, N.C.

Montmorenci was one of a remarkable concentration of fine homes built in Warren County in the first half of the 19th century. Not much is known of its original owner, William "Pretty Boy" Williams, who apparently enjoyed it only a few years before dying.

The imposing house, with its tall portico with slender, coupled columns, passed about 1845 to Mary K. Williams, whose daughter, Lucy, was married at Montmorenci to William H. Polk, younger brother of James K. Polk.

After Mary Williams died in 1885, the plantation was sold several times before being acquired by William Stanley of Pittsfield, Mass., for $30,000. In 1883, Stanley incorporated the Shocco Game Association and turned the property into a game reserve.

The area was already noted for its good hunting — rich in deer, foxes, turkeys and partridges. R.W. Alston, a county commissioner, remembered that his uncle killed 600 wild turkeys in 12 seasons, and his brother, W.F. Alston, took as many as 48 deer in one season. Al Davis claimed to have shot 35 deer and 45 foxes in one year.

New light on the Shocco Game Association, with headquarters in Baltimore, Md., has been shed by a rare pamphlet found recently by Mrs. Paul Smith as she closed the popular Old Book Corner in Chapel Hill. This illustrated prospectus is now in the North Carolina Collection at the University of North Carolina Library.

The association was made up of 30 wealthy sportsmen who paid $1,000 per share plus dues of $25 per year. Montmorenci, which served as the clubhouse, was described as the handsomest mansion in the South, with beautifully carved interiors and broad piazzas.

The association also bought 1,000 acres of the adjoining Alston plantation and leased 17,000 more acres between Fishing and Shocco creeks.

Because a two-foot snow in 1892 had killed many partridges, the association purchased and turned loose on the preserve about 1,500 new birds the following year. It also brought in bantam hens to hatch the eggs of English pheasants and grouse, and by 1894 there were more than 1,000 of these new birds in the area.

Kennels were provided for dogs of the members.

Visitors to Montmorenci did not spend all their time hunting. One of their favorite pastimes involved games for local children. Barrel, foot and sack races were popular.

Another game involved a barrel with both ends knocked out. Beyond one end, the boys place their shoes. Then they backed up 25 feet from the opposite end, and, upon signal, they all ran toward the barrel. The one who managed to get through the barrel and retrieve his shoes — won the prize — usually a nickel or a dime.

In the early years of the 20th century, L.V. LeMoine of Baltimore built a cottage near the clubhouse and served as caretaker. Later, the mansion and 20 acres were bought by H.C. Beamis of Pennsylvania. Next, the property came into possession of Nathan Palmer of Warrenton, who died before completing payment.

That set the stage in 1925 for the final ignominy of Montmorenci. The famed mansion, by then showing its neglect, was sold at auction to satisfy the mortgage. It brought a paltry $850.

No one came forward to restore Montmorenci to its former grandeur. Consequently, it was dismantled.

Few With Valid Complaints Bother To Speak Up

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

On the average only about one-third of the people with complaints about goods or services actually speak up, says lawyer Arthur Best.

Even some who do complain don't recognize valid grounds for complaint.

Many people say complaining is not worthwhile in terms of time, money and emotion, Best says.

"They talk of the emotional wear and tear, of feelings of embarrassment. They are reluctant to have what they thought a fair request rejected."

Many say it's not worth taking time off from work to make complaints in person or by telephone or to write letters, Best added in an interview.

"It's a sort of negative pressure to suppress complaints," he said.

Best's comments are based on a project he directed for Ralph Nader's Center for Study of Responsive Law and wrote about in "When Consumers Complain," recently published by Columbia University Press ($16.95).

He cites the case of a Buffalo, N.Y., housewife who complained about being charged for a plumber's three-hour lunch break during a seven-hour period he spent repairing a leaky faucet. The plumber also had to telephone his office for instructions, Best writes, but "she had no thought that the worker's level of competence was itself grounds for complaint."

"Certain products and problems tend to invite more action than others," Best said.

People with denture and hearing aid problems speak up a high percentage of the time, he said, "probably because they're such vital products and their flaws are close to impossible to live with."

The Nader project included a 34-city telephone survey in 1975 in which 2,400 persons were interviewed about experiences they had had in the past year with 34 products and services.

Best said the researchers tried to select representative items from the Consumer Price Index, everything from film developing to car repair. "We tried to have both high and low cost products and services."

The project provided a lot of insights into peoples' failure to complain.

"Some are afraid they won't get anything out of it," he said.

"Some know it is hard to complain. Some stores make it hard to know whom to complain to. There's the fear of looking crazy."

Best said one case study involved a woman who kept complaining about an unsightly joint in new kitchen flooring. "She returned to the store many times. She felt foolish each time a repairman or an inspector or a salesman came. It was a different person each time. She felt they wouldn't take her seriously."

Best, an associate professor at New York Law School, said people are more apt to speak up when the complaint or problem is concrete instead of judgmental — a radio that doesn't play, as opposed to one whose treble sounds tinny.

Many problems could be avoided if people shopped more carefully, he said.

"Don't buy on impulse," he said. "Get recommendations by word of mouth. Listen to your friends' experiences."

Best is a strong proponent of Consumer Reports, the Consumers Union magazine, but critical of its annual buying guide because articles on which the guide is based are more than a year old and not all the models evaluated in the guides are still available by publication time.

"Still, it's the best we have," he said.

"Picking a store can be as important as picking a brand. Local reputation is very important in choosing any consumer goods or services — especially in the repair field."

If, despite all this, you have a problem or complaint, Best said the most important rule is willingness to speak up once something's gone wrong.

"A lot of people are embarrassed to notice that they have bought a lemon. It's almost a reflection on themselves."

Best, who has been a lawyer for the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Communications Commission and the New York City Department of Consumer Affairs, said mail to government agencies does not accurately reflect the troubles people have.

He said the survey showed many people either didn't realize they had more problems than other people "or they were reluctant to admit being a victim or unfortunate or a carper."

"The poorer they were the less likely they were to say they had problems — and I don't think that's because they were buying poorer quality."

"I think people who expect more for their money are quicker to notice something that doesn't meet their standards."

"The richer and better educated are more willing to assert their rights."

As for getting satisfaction, Best said, "We found no real differences among those who had complained. They were all treated about the same."

Many spouses told researchers consumer complaints put stress on their marriages, Best said.

He told of one couple who remained dissatisfied after an arbitration hearing involving a housing remodeling problem. The husband told researchers he and his wife still argue about the problem. It bothers her and then she bothers me, he said.

Best's book also reports on 100 case studies involving people who did complain to such groups as the Nader center, the Better Business Bureau of Western New York, Cleveland's Consumer Action Movement, the FTC, the FDA, the Consumer Product Safety Commission, a Washington, D.C., newspaper's Action Line, two Cleveland radio stations' action line programs, the Consumer Federation of America and the U.S. Postal Service.

"Mediation groups such as the Better Business Bureaus don't really have much power," Best said, "but some businesses think they do."

If one mediation group doesn't help solve the problem, he said, it's unlikely that a second or a third will be better.

Best said research showed complaining to a retail store "leads to satisfactory results about 55 percent of the time."

"Embarrassing a recalcitrant store owner or sales person can sometimes do the trick," he said. "Some people have picketed dental offices or appliance stores."

If these things don't work, he said, "Your alternatives are limited."

You can write to the manufacturer or, in the case of a car problem, the manufacturer's home office.

"If that doesn't work, you have to get coercive power behind you. That is available only through government — such as city consumer affairs agencies, state attorney general offices, the FTC in Washington and its 10 regional offices and small claims courts if they are available."

He thinks small claims courts are the most cost-effective means available to cities to help consumers.

Even there he sees a need for change.

New York's small claims court now has only night sessions, Best said, and some complainants are afraid to come then because of crime in the streets and because courts tend to be in lonely, downtown areas.

Such courts usually allow plaintiffs to plead their own cases without a lawyer.

The New York City bar association has proposed establishment of neighborhood consumer courts and an experimental court of that type has been operating in San Jose, Calif., since 1977, he said.

Winning your case in small claims court is only the first step.

Only about half who win are able to collect the money for which they settled and which was awarded by the judge.

Contacting a television consumer affairs reporter is another alternative, Best said. "The odds are small," he added, "but the potential for payoff is high."

He said consumers' most common response to problems is to do nothing. The second most common, to return the unsatisfactory merchandise to the seller. The rarest, use of a third party such as the BBB, a government agency or small claims court.

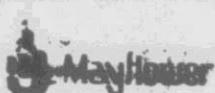

"There's an inflationary aspect," Best added. "If people don't complain, they are acquiescing in business sloppiness at best and business fraud at worst."

'Masada' Is The Story Of Heroism

The story of Masada began almost 2,000 years ago, when a determined band of 960 men, women and children made a final stand against tyranny by holding their camp atop the 1,300-foot rock against the invading Roman Army of 10-15,000 soldiers for four years. The story ended tragically in the year 75 A.D., but history has turned the tragedy into an inspiration.

This is your classic study of heroism: the stand of few against many; the weak against the strong. In fact, the saga is so compelling that Israel's Defense Force swears in new recruits of its Armor Corps at Masada. The anvil-shaped rock is also a place of pilgrimage on Hanukkah, and "Masada shall not fall again!" is a familiar Israeli slogan.

The details regarding Masada can be told briefly, tersely, in numbers. But the human story is not so simple, because it involves two extraordinary men. Both were leaders, both compassionate men, understanding, brave and proud, set against one another in an epic standoff that would write an unparalleled tale of human valor in the pages of history.

Peter O'Toole and Peter Strauss portray these leaders in ABC-TV's "Masada," airing in four parts, Sunday-Wednesday, Apr. 5-8 (9-11 p.m. each night). Barbara Carrera, Nigel Davenport, Alan Feinstein, Anthony Quayle and Giulia Pagano are among the actors who bring life to the men and women who stood behind — or plotted against — them.

"Masada" was shot on location in Israel, and director Boris Sagal is proud of the film's look of authenticity. "That enormous ruggedness, the barrenness is all there," he says. "If we had done the show on the desert in Arizona, it would never have looked the same. We shot on the actual approaches to Masada," he explained. "We couldn't shoot on the top of Masada because that's a national shrine and big tourist center. A half a mile away we found a similar mountain top and we duplicated what existed on the real site."

Sagal points out that the entire country of Israel isn't as large as Los Angeles County. "You can drive from one end of Israel to the other in a couple of hours, and when you're standing on the West Bank you can see Tel Aviv," he says. "I got to like the Israelis a great deal. I'd like very much to go again and make another picture there."

PETER STRAUSS (l) and Peter O'Toole are honorable men forced to be antagonists in a bitter war to the death in "Masada," airing over a four night period beginning Sunday, Apr. 5 on ABC-TV.

Actor Takes Cue From Cur

What better place for Jesse James than a western called "The Sacketts"? Except that Jesse James, in this case, is a large, floppy, long-haired dog who figures in one of the key scenes of movie, returning to NBC-TV Sunday and Monday, April 5-6 (9-11 p.m. both nights).

Among those starring in this dramatization of two of Louis L'Amour's bestselling novels are Glenn Ford, Sam Elliott, Tom Selleck, Jeff Osterhage, Ben Johnson and Gilbert Roland.

Jesse James (age indeterminate) never had an acting lesson in his nonprofessional life. Owned by an elderly cowboy, known on the Canon City, Colo., location as 'Antler Bill,' the dog gave an authentic touch to the frontier town, as he shambled down the dusty main street.

Unfortunately, Jesse didn't realize they were shooting a television movie. He thought all those nice, dirty, tobacco-chewing cowboys were for real. In fact, he nearly caused the show's major 'shootout scene' to come to a halt.

THAT SHAGGY dog is Jesse James, amateur actor and hero on the set of "The Sacketts," airing Sunday, Apr. 5 and Monday, Apr. 6 (9-11 p.m. both nights) on NBC-TV. Shown are actors Tom Selleck (l) and Lee deBroux.

According to the plot, Oscar-winner Ben Johnson plays a veteran cowboy who has been wounded by the bad guys in the Bigelow gang. He has to hobble down the stairs of a wooden house on an improvised crutch, just in time to sit down on a crude chair and take a shot at the guys trying to wipe out the three Sackett brothers — Tell, Orrin and Tye (Sam Elliott, Tom Selleck and Jeff Osterhage).

Nobody bothered to tell old Jesse that the fierce looking cowboy with the crutch and the rifle, was playing a big scene. When Jesse saw him, he began to growl and the hair stood up along his spine. All this was being filmed.

Never missing a beat, Johnson said, "Shut up, dog, and lay down" and took up his post so he could take aim at the villains.

Michelle Will Tell

Q: Back in the 1920s, an actor named Otto Kruger was frequently in movies, nearly always playing the part of a suave gentleman. Is he still alive? D. LEHTI, HENDERSONVILLE, N.C.

A: Kruger, who appeared in about 80 motion pictures, died in 1974 at the age of 89. He suffered a severe stroke 10 years prior to his death, which forced his retirement because he could no longer remember his lines.

Q: What is Farrah Fawcett doing now? Will she be back on TV anytime soon? J. BOLES, WILSON, N.C.

A: There are no TV dates in Farrah's little black book at this time because she's in Houston filming a movie. It's doubtful that she'll ever return to episodic TV, however, because she's repeatedly said that the weekly grind of a series is a bit too much.

Q: Is Cathy Lee Crosby related in any way to the late Bing Crosby? M. BROWN, MT. OLIVE, N.C.

A: No, but Cathy Lee is from a show business family. Her mom is a former RKO contract player and her dad hosted an early Los Angeles TV program titled "The Crosbys Calling." His three daughters were frequently on the show.

Q: Who starred with Claude Akins in "Movin' On," a series that aired a few years ago? M. WOODS, DREXEL, N.C.

A: Frank Converse was the other star of the show that evolved around two gypsy truckers who came from radically different backgrounds. Frank's character, Will Chandler, was a law school graduate who turned to trucking as a means of learning more about himself. Sonny Pruitt (Akins) was a burly veteran of the highways who was prone to settling arguments with his fists.

Q: The Saturday A.M. "Cosby Kids" program is thought-provoking and stimulating. Who writes the scripts? R.R., GOLDSBORO, N.C.

A: The series is an outgrowth of actor/comedian Bill Cosby's all-out personal commitment to the use of TV as a medium of instruction, better learning and better living — especially for children. An 11-member panel of experts assist him with the scripts.

Different 'Passion'

While Christopher Bernau isn't appearing as "The Guiding Light's" "passionate" villain Alan Spaulding, he can be seen by cable viewers playing a slightly different kind of villain. Last year, Bernau played the title role in a hit Off-Broadway play, "The Passion of Dracula." A few months ago, the production was taped by Showtime, and it's been airing since Mar. 1.

'Hardhat' Likes Those Legs!

"Hardhat and Legs," written by Garson Kanin and Ruth Gordon, returns to the small screen on the CBS Wednesday Night Movie, Apr. 8 (9-11 p.m.).

Kevin Dobson and Sharon Gless star in the comedy/drama, and others in the cast are Ray Serra, Charlie Aiken, Elva Josephson, Jacqueline Brookes, W.T. Martin and Bobby Short, the inimitable New York cafe pianist.

Sal Pacheco (Dobson) is a New York City construction worker with a double passion — beautiful legs and gambling. From his construction perch, Sal's been ogling the legs belonging to a lovely young woman who works in the neighborhood. She's Dr.

Patricia Botsford (Gless), and she is not at all bowled over by Sal's boisterous attention. One day, she confronts the hardhat, but the encounter backfires. Intrigued by Patricia's spunk and beauty, Sal decides he wants to know more about the lady with the lovely legs.

Following Patricia, Sal learns that she is a Ph.D. teaching a course in modern sexuality in an institute. Although Sal needs sex education the way New York needs more traffic, he enrolls in the course. In a couple of weeks, Patricia, a divorcee, is won over by her persistently adoring student. But next, Sal must win over Patricia's delightful, if somewhat precocious children (Aiken and Josephson). Sal throws a picnic on the 22nd floor of a partially constructed building and the kids are in his pocket.

Sal readily admits that he's a gambler — it's a habit with him. But, because of his gambling debts, he can't ask Patricia to marry him. His debts, in fact, are getting steeper and steeper. And when Sal loses his job, his loan shark turns nasty. It'll be all he can do not to fall further under the loan shark's thumb. And somehow he'll have to eventually rid himself of the gambling fever.

Manhattan street musicians, an ever-growing band of pavement troubadours who serenade New Yorkers throughout the island, comprise the unique musical background for the film.

Popular Governor

James Noble, who plays the less than brilliant Gov. Gatling on "Benson," says he often meets fans who say they wish he was governor of their state.

"They don't really mean it," he explains. "But they do mean that they're disappointed with politicians and see Gatling as a man with a good heart who's a bungler. What saves him is the fact that at least he's bungling in the direction of the common good rather than a Swiss bank account."

Dream Came True

"If my career bombs, I'll get a small car, pack a few cook books, a couple of cooking knives and hit the road," says handsome Michael Pare, who portrays Harry, a young man growing up in the middle '50s in "Crazy Times." Others cast in key roles in the film, airing as ABC's Friday Night Movie, Apr. 10 (9-11 p.m.), are Ray Liotta and Howard Mann.

Pare, a graduate of the Culinary Institute in New York City, was cooking up a storm one year ago when Joyce Selznick, ABC's casting dynamo, happened to meet him when he was at a restaurant visiting a friend.

"Joyce talked with me for awhile, and suggested that I contact her for a screen test. I was surprised, but not astounded enough to forget to call her," Pare said.

Since Michael arrived in Southern California, he's made a television pilot, "The Greatest American Hero," which eventually sold and is now airing, as well as "Crazy Times."

"I still can't believe all that's happened to me. I'm still in a state of shock," Pare said. "My first night in Hollywood sounds like something that would appear in a Hollywood fan magazine. I checked into my hotel, opened up the draperies, and what was staring straight at me? The Hollywood sign. I never thought I would have a small role in a television series, much less a starring role in a telefilm. I thought it was strictly Dreamland."

Pare, who comes from a family of ten, acted on the side while attending culinary school. "I thought cooking was a good field to get into. It's a job for life, because everybody's got to eat. Right?"

Coming from such a large family, Pare can closely identify with his role in "Crazy Times." "I like my character a lot," he said. "He's similar to me. Harry doesn't answer to anybody, and neither do I. Just myself, and occasionally my mother. He has an increasingly strong front, so nobody knows if that's really him. Probably he has great sensitivity inside, but no one ever sees it."

Right now, Michael is tasting the show business life, but he also has another dream. "My goal is to eventually have a restaurant and work in it six months of the year. Then I'll go back to the Culinary Institute and hire some people to work for me."

Pare has thought out everything about his future endeavor and even has a logo drawn.

Series Snares $$$

PBS' "Over Easy" series has been given a $26,000 grant from the Luke B. Hancock Foundation, which supports projects established by agencies and institutions that involve older people. The grant to "Over Easy" is for research and development of projects designed to answer the needs of older people.

A study of the series' viewers was precipitated by last year's grant of $30,000 from the Hancock Foundation. Letters received from viewers will be submitted to the 1981 White House Conference on aging, scheduled for later this year.

HOLLYWOOD — BILL BIXBY's legion of fans are saddened by the sudden death of his only son, six-year-old SEAN CHRISTOPHER, the victim of a severe throat infection. The child's mom, actress BRENDA BENET, has asked that trees and flowers be planted in his memory.

Unlike many performers whose roles in TV series make them overnight stars, MELISSA GILBERT has no plans to leave "LITTLE HOUSE ON THE PRAIRIE". In fact, she says she'll continue playing Laura Ingalls Wilder as long as MICHAEL LANDON wants her to. Once the show ends its long run, however, Missy would like to pursue a medical career and plans to study obstetrics at UCLA. "I can't think of anything nicer than bringing babies into the world," she says.

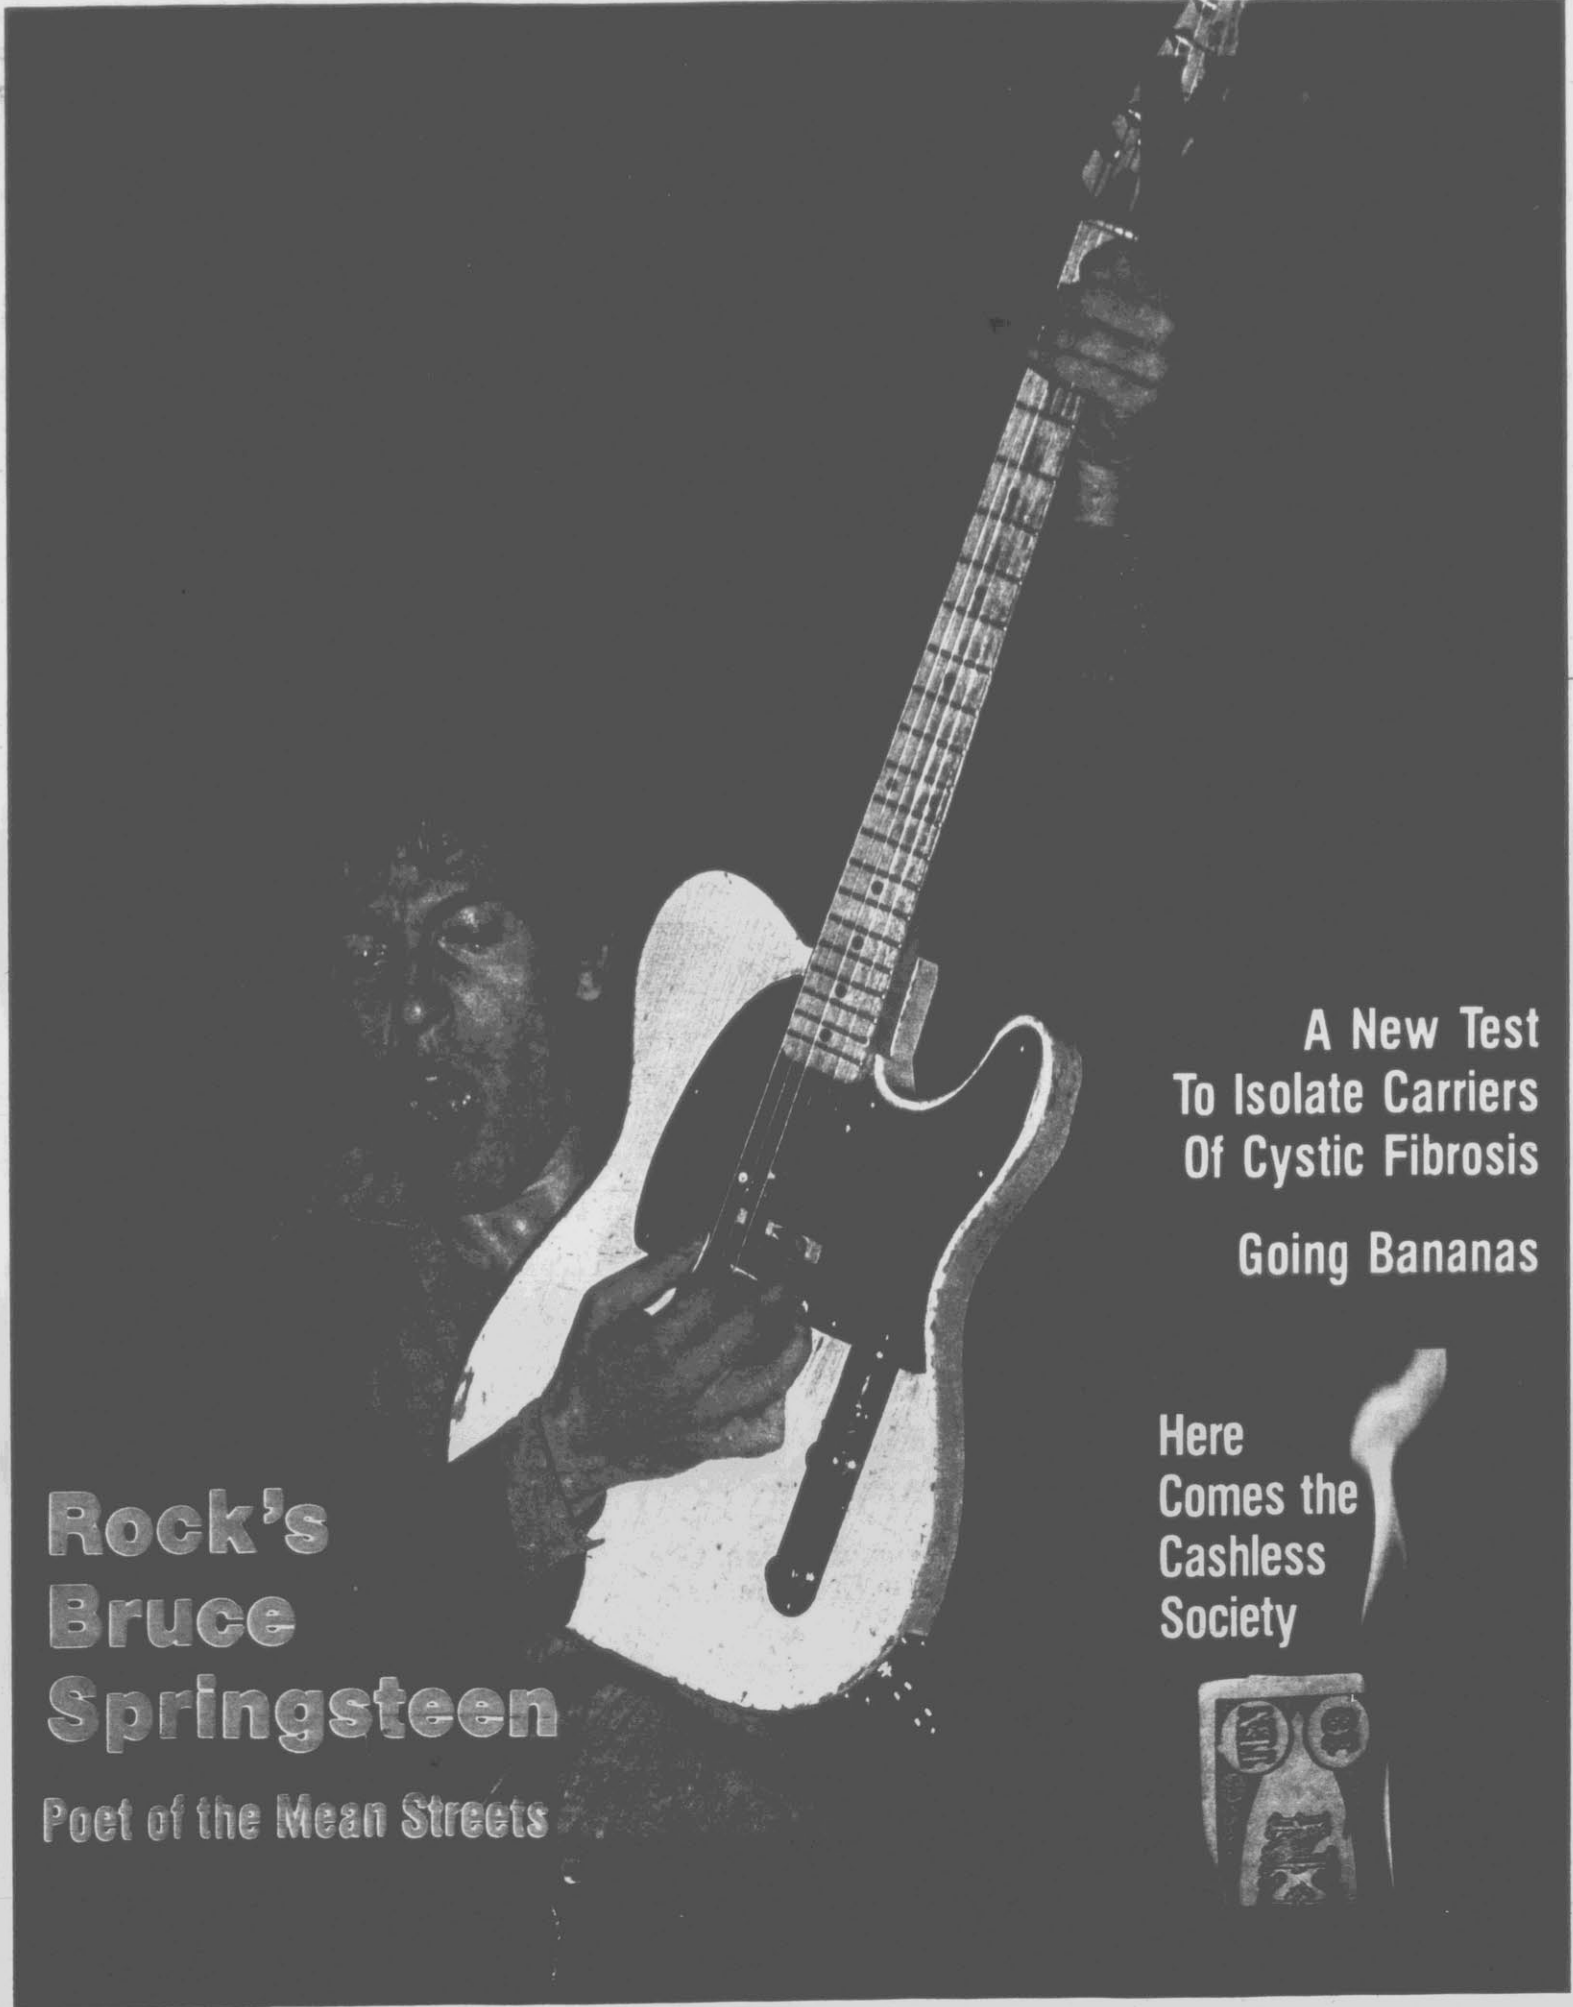

RITA WALTER, who plays Carol Andropoulos on "AS THE WORLD TURNS", will be special guest at this year's SHENANDOAH APPLE BLOSSOM FESTIVAL, to be held Apr. 3-May 3 in Winchester, Va. She and her hubby, the REV. NORMAN WALTER, will spend three days at the festival.

Everybody's suing — SUZANNE SOMERS and ALAN HAMEL are talking about suing the producers of "THREE'S COMPANY" so she can get out of her contract and go on to other projects. But the producers are now planning to take the Hamels to court because of 'derogatory remarks' both have made about them on talk shows. Meanwhile — even without Suzanne — the series continues happily in the top ratings.

FOR ANDREW KAPLAN, author of Hour of the Assassins

How did you happen to meet Albert Einstein when you were young? —E.B., Little Rock, Ark.

● For a science class report in junior high, I described how the A- and H-bombs worked. This was during the height of the McCarthy era, and the next thing I knew I was being investigated by the F.B.I. They were concerned with the threat a 12-year-old kid from Brooklyn could pose to national security, instead of realizing that if I could figure it out, so could any decent physics student. The incident brought me brief local notoriety, and when my teacher learned that Einstein was my hero, he asked me if I'd like to meet him, and with my parents we drove to his Princeton house. I remember him as a small man with a thick German accent, kindly but distant.

FOR JUDY WOODRUFF, NBC-TV correspondent

In what ways does the present Administration differ from its predecessor in accessibility? —S.G., Oshkosh, Wis.

● In a superficial sense, information is just as easy to obtain, but there is still confusion about what office should be distributing facts and where to go for certain information. My early impression is that Reagan staff members are more conscious of the harmful role the press can have, and, therefore, more cautious about releasing information.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Why has Irving Wallace become so obsessed with the thought of fire that he has transferred his irreplaceable belongings to vaults? —N.M., Terre Haute, Ind.

● This is because he is anxious to protect the reference materials of his next book — out next month — The Intimate Lives of Famous People, since he is dealing with famous persons who are no longer around (Nelson Rockefeller, Queen Victoria, Gandhi, Martin Luther, Marilyn Monroe and others).

FOR CAROLE SHELLEY, star of Broadway's The Elephant Man

Why do you feel that "only children" are more likely to end up as actors than those from large families? —E. Jonsen, Asbury Park, N.J.

● Because we have to make our own amusement. Only children have fantasies. I had "Peter," a fantasy brother for years. Children from big families don't have this need; they're not lonely. We get so used to play-acting that it ultimately becomes the real thing.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is it true that Barbra Streisand is so plain and homely in real life that no one recognizes her? —P.I., York, Pa.

● Greg Mullavey, who auditioned for a role in her recent movie, The Main Event (but did not get it), sums her up as looking like "a little girl" with a low speaking voice, casually dressed and not the overpowering personality he expected her to be. Kari Page (now in NBC-TV's Drawing Power and who was featured in the movie The Eyes of Laura Mars, produced by Jon Peters, Streisand's beau) reports that she didn't recognize the actress on their first meeting because "she looked so insignificant and tiny." Kari reports that it's customary for makeup and wardrobe staff to check over the actors. On this occasion, Streisand did it, and many of the actors did not realize it was Barbra

FOR RICKY SCHRODER, star of The Earthling

Is there any actor you want to be like when you grow up? Do you want to be a superstar? —L.S., Tyler, Texas

● I really don't want to copy anyone. If every actor copied other actors, all actors would be alike. So I think I'd rather stay the way I am. I really don't know what superstar means, unless you mean to be nice and well-known like John Wayne. He gave me good advice. He said, "Ricky, the critics never liked me, but the people did. That's all that counts. Be Yourself."

FOR PEGGY GLENN, author of How to Start and Run a Successful Home-Typing Business

Are stay-at-home typists exploited? —P.S., Wilmington, N.C.

● Yes. People will pay a home typist poorly if she lets them. The trick is to start off considering yourself a professional and giving your clients this impression; then solicit only professional work. Be the boss, determine hourly charge and control the working terms and conditions. Then no one can take advantage of you.

FOR LIEUT. NEIL RUENZEL, public-relations officer, United States Coast Guard

When a woman enrolls in the Coast Guard, does she give up all claims to vanity? —E.B., Monterey, Calif.

● There are grooming standards for the women as well as the men. They include relatively short hair and limits on the use of makeup and jewelry. The object of these standards is not to detract from personal appearance. Personal appearance is important here, and hair stylists handle the cutting and styling of women's hair.

PRO Senator Malcolm Wallap (R.-Wyo.), Energy and Natural Resources Committee

Natural gas prices are controlled well below the price of most other energy sources. There's no incentive to conserve and, until prices are allowed to rise, no incentive to find and develop new sources. This leads to shortages — often even more painful to consumers — and ultimately guarantees higher prices. We cannot immediately decontrol gas prices because of complexities created in the market by controls and by government prohibitions on industrial use. It requires a reasoned careful examination. Still, a free market has always provided more plentiful and cheaper energy.

PRO AND CON

Should Natural Gas Be Decontrolled?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Senator Howard M. Metzenbaum (D.-Ohio), Energy and Natural Resources Committee

This country cannot afford the $100-billion cost of decontrolling natural gas. People already are having trouble paying their heating bills. With decontrol, heating costs could double by next winter. That will mean severe hardship for many American families. For some, it will mean having to choose between heating the house and putting food on the table. But it will mean a bonanza for the oil and gas industry and a disastrous dose of inflation for our economy. The President wants to control inflation. Decontrolling natural gas will make that effort very difficult.

ROCK'S BRUCE SPRINGSTEEN

POET OF THE MEAN STREETS

With a hot album and an intensely loyal legion of fans, rock's street-tough minstrel has survived the hype — and done it his way.

By Bruce Pollock

Lynn Goldsmith / LGI © 1981

To his fans Bruce Springsteen is nothing less than the messiah. But despite being heaped with accolades during his eight-year career, Bruce, at 31, remains unaffected, a driven innocent, still playing with the same energy and passion he exhibited at 16.

Backstage not long ago, in Hartford, Conn., after yet another pit-stop on his grueling 1980-81 tour, Springsteen reflected on that particular road he's traveled, from youth to maturity, through rock 'n' roll.

"It's funny," he said, flopping exhaustedly on the dressing-room couch, still clad in his concert sweat-shirt and dungarees, "I go back a certain amount of time with most of the guys in the band, and we can think of nights when we were all 16 and playing in this teen club in Jersey. And we get into all the stuff that's happened in between. It doesn't feel that much different now. What happens inside you is very much the same.

"At the time I was doing what I wanted to do, and I think people judge their lives by the amount of freedom that they have, more so than the amount of money that they make. I always felt free when I was young because I was playing in a band with people I liked. I'd get up when I wanted to get up in the daytime and then I'd go out and play at night. The other night I went to a nice little bar in Seattle. There were only about 20 people in the place. At first nobody knew who I was. I just got up and played a couple of songs, got the place rocking a little bit. It felt the same. It felt good."

His legion of fans has always realized Springsteen's inborn rapport with a crowd. Long before his records took off — his latest, The River, a double album featuring the smash single "Hungry Heart," is by far his biggest seller — it was his concerts that made Springsteen a cult figure. His disciples would sleep outside ticket arenas to assure getting seats. (Springsteen's new fame has only made things worse. For a series of four concerts — 80,000 total seats available — New York's Madison Square Garden got over a million individual mail-order requests.)

any new material.

More than most rock performers, Springsteen is at one with his audience, rather than above them. He'll pull an ecstatic teen-age girl from the audience to "bump" with him during a rendition of "Tenth Avenue Freeze-Out." Or he'll fall into the crowd while singing his mythical "Spirits in the Night." Or maybe stop singing and simply hold the microphone out for the masses to complete for him a verse of "Thunder Road" or his inevitable earth shaker, "Rosalita." "There's a certain entertainment factor happening in the audience," he acknowledges, "and if you look past it you're gonna miss it."

When his third album, Born to Run, was finally released in 1975, its coiled momentum shot it straight toward the top of the charts, hurling Bruce, face up, onto the covers of Time and Newsweek in the same week. Such hype was uncharacteristic, but Bruce was earnest enough to overcome it: "You try not to get caught up in it. Once you get some success it can go two ways; it can confine you, or hopefully, it can give you more room. The idea is to maintain that freedom because you can lose it easily."

A desire for freedom has pervaded Springsteen's life ever since his youth. In fact, the predominant images of his songs — cars, factories, the beach, hanging out, youthful yearning — can all be traced to his background. Born September 23, 1949, in Freehold, N.J. — 15 miles inland from the shore town of Asbury Park that he's made so famous — Bruce was the first child of Adele and Douglas Springsteen. (He has two younger sisters, Ginny and Pam.) The name Springsteen is Dutch, but Bruce's father is mostly Irish, his mother Italian.

It was in this small town that the seeds of rebellion began to churn in him. In Dave Marsh's 1979 biography Born to Run: The Bruce Springsteen Story, the singer remarks, "I lived half of my first 13 years in a trance. People thought I was weird because I always went around with this look on my face. I was thinking of things, but I was always on the outside looking in."

Springsteen's father held a variety of jobs, from factory worker to prison guard. Mostly though, he drove a bus. And as Bruce notes, again in Marsh's book, "My father was a driver. He liked to get in the car and just drive. He got everybody else in the car, too, and he made us drive."

Even today, Bruce's most enduring romance remains with the road: "I guess from the beginning I was always excited by the idea of going on the road," he says. "I never had a real interest in staying home. Part of the idea of rock 'n' roll is to go on the road, to bring it where the people are, to go to all those little places in the Midwest, say, really out there, where there may be nothing else for miles and miles and just go in there and play."

"I lived in many different places and I got used to that feeling and I enjoyed it. All the while I made Greetings From Asbury Park [his first album], I was staying on this friend's living-room floor. I used to enjoy the feeling of not having a place. Right now I have a house that I rent, but I never really set it up as a home. Consequently, I feel more like an area is home — the bars or the town — rather than where I'm living at the time."

So complete is his identification with rock 'n' roll's rambling life that the usually verbose Springsteen is literally at a loss when asked to describe what it's like coming off the road. "It's a little disorienting at first, I guess," he tries. "It's actually hard to remember. Once you get back on the road it feels like you've been out forever. After five shows you cannot recollect what it was like being home."

Home, of course, is where he labors on his powerful and emotional songs. Rumors of a live album have been circulating for years, and Springsteen promises one is coming soon. The only criterion the perfectionist Springsteen has for any of his work is excellence. "Nobody could demand more of me than I would demand of myself," he says. "Nobody has higher expectations... The most challenging thing is to do what you want to do, play the kind of music you want to play and do the kind of show you want to do and win an audience. Win people who will listen to you, win people's ears, all kinds of people, and then sustain that relationship by being responsible about it."

The meager social life permitted by his hectic touring schedule — four hours of manic musicianship perhaps 200 nights a year — consists of hanging out with old friends from his Jersey days, fellow band members and his steady girl, aspiring actress Joyce Heisker. Occasionally he even returns to his Jersey roots, and he jokes that every time he does, he continues searching for the secret, forbidden girl who inspired his famed "Rosalita." "I'll drive by her house at night and look in the window," he says. "I always think I'm going to meet her on the street somewhere, but it never happens."

Bruce Springsteen, like a character in one of his songs, is an eternal teen-ager, a romantic cowboy loner, riding from town to town astride his six-string electric guitar. "That's the funny thing, when you ride into town and see all the houses," he comments dreamily. "Like when we played Pittsburgh; it was dynamite there. That city, when the sun's out it looks like it's cloudy. It's great because all the people in their gray little houses come down to the show and it's wild for a few hours. Then you go back to your room and you see that gray skyline and you feel like you whipped it, just for a night. For a little while you feel like you won something."

Sensation Seekers—Are They Ever Good Mates?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Sensation seekers are frivolous and are lacking in dedication to practical goals and serious purposes.
2. It's easy to tell the extent to which your outlook and lifestyle are characterized by sensation-seeking.
3. There are other interesting differences between sensation seekers and those who tend not to be.
4. Tall people are more likely to score high as sensation seekers than those of medium or short stature.
5. The more you and your mate have in common as sensation seekers, the happier your relationship is likely to be.

ANSWERS

1. False. Some of the most successful and distinguished men and women in the country are sensation seekers — defined by psychologists as "those who experience the need for a broad variety of inner experience." National Institute of Mental Health studies of sensation-seeking and its correlates show this is achieved through various means: the arts; travel; meeting new people; responding to diverse situations and a mode of life that may resist conformity and verge on the unconventional.
2. True. A team of Adelphi College behavioral specialists developed a "sensation-seeking" scale, pretested on men and women undergraduates, which shows that "a sensation-seeking tendency is not a measure of impulsivity but a measure of sensitivity to internal sensations" (or gut-feelings). For example, the scale indicates that persons who score high in the sensation-seeking characteristic tend to feel that the most important goal in life is to live it to the fullest and experience as much of it as possible; while the low scorer is inclined to feel that the most important goal in life is to find peace and happiness. The high scorer dislikes routine kinds of work, while his opposite number takes a pleasure in it.
3. True. The National Institute of Mental Health study (cited above) finds that, in addition to a dislike for routine activities, sensation seekers have an aversion for dull and boring people and experience a restlessness in an unchanging environment. Low-sensation seekers tend to show phobic reactions to mildly threatening situations or stimuli.
4. True. Studies of the effects of body build on personality traits and attitudes, conducted at Utah State University, showed that "taller adults were more likely than their shorter-statured peers to view themselves as sensation-seeking, likable and self-directed (as opposed to being influenced by others)." It is concluded from the findings that perhaps because of their high-sensation-seeking needs, self-perceived likableness and general enjoyment in social exchange, tall people may develop an almost insatiable need for more and new friends.

5. True. University of Wisconsin studies on the significance of the sensation-seeking motive in marriage indicate that marital-partner similarity in sensation-seeking plays a very important part in contributing to a compatible marriage.

The International BANANA Takes a Bow

By Marilyn Hansen

From the steamy tropics to neat, creamy slices on your breakfast cornflakes, bananas have come a long way. Welcomed in households around the world, they prove their versatility in appetizing dishes to tempt you and your family.

BANANA BACKGROUNDER

The banana plant is one of the most productive of food plants, even though it produces food only once. The plant is actually a giant herb which may reach a height of 25 feet. Each plant produces a stem with 10 or more bunches, known as "hands"; each hand has 10 to 20 "fingers," or bananas.

RIPENING BANANAS

At the store they should be partly yellow because they will not ripen properly at home if they are too green. A fully mature banana is plump; thin fruit was cut too early and may not ripen properly.

"Ripe" bananas can be yellow with a green tip, or they may be yellow with brown spots; the stage of ripeness is a matter of taste. For cooking, however, a firm banana still tinged with green is recommended. Bananas may be ripened at room temperature; if they are ripening too fast, they may be refrigerated. Refrigeration will turn the skin brown, but the flesh keeps well for two or more days after the fruit is fully ripe.

CHICKEN TAHITIAN

- 1 large, whole chicken breast
- ¼ teaspoon garlic powder
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 large firm banana
- 2 thin slices fully cooked ham
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple in pineapple juice
- ½ cup water, divided
- ¼ teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch

1. Skin and bone chicken breast; cut in half. Place each half between two sheets of waxed paper and flatten by pounding with a rolling pin or the flat side of a heavy cleaver.

2. Combine garlic powder and pepper; sprinkle over chicken breasts. Cut banana in half crosswise; wrap with a ham slice, then with chicken; secure with food picks.

3. Melt butter in skillet; brown chicken on all sides. Add pineapple with juice to skillet; stir in ¼ cup water and ginger. Cover skillet; simmer 10 minutes, until chicken is tender.

4. Remove chicken to serving platter. Mix cornstarch with remaining ¼ cup water; stir into skillet. Cook, stirring constantly, until sauce is thickend and comes to boiling, pour sauce over chicken.

Makes 2 servings

BANANA DAIQUIRI SOUFFLÉ

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 1 cup sugar, divided
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 6 eggs, separated
- 1¼ cups water
- 1 teaspoon grated lime rind
- ¼ cup lime juice
- ¼ cup rum
- 2 tablespoons banana liqueur, optional
- 5 medium-size, ripe bananas
- 1½ cups heavy cream

1. In small saucepan, combine gelatin, ½ cup sugar and salt. Beat together egg yolks and water; stir into gelatin mixture. Place over low heat; stir constantly until gelatin dissolves and mixture thickens slightly, about 5 minutes.

2. Remove from heat; stir in lime rind, lime juice, rum and banana liqueur. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon.

3. Beat egg whites in large bowl until soft peaks form. Gradually beat in remaining ½ cup sugar; continue beating until stiff peaks form. Fold into gelatin mixture.

4. Dice 4 bananas; fold into gelatin. Whip 1 cup heavy cream and fold in. Turn into 1½-quart soufflé dish with a 3-inch collar. Chill until set, about 4 hours.

5. To serve, remove collar, garnish with remaining ½ cup heavy cream, whipped, and remaining banana, sliced.

Makes 8 to 10 servings

* To make a collar for a soufflé dish, tear off a piece of wax paper or foil 4 inches longer than the circumference of the dish. Fold it in thirds lengthwise. Place it around the top of the dish and tape, clip or staple it together so that it fits snugly.

BANANA-COCONUT FUDGE

- 1 cup mashed ripe bananas (3 medium)
- 1 cup light cream
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 3 tablespoons light corn syrup
- ¾ cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon vanilla extract
- ½ cup flaked coconut

Baby-Sitting Becomes A Big Business

By Helen K. Hawkins

Children at play in Kinder-Care center in Clearwater, Fla.: part of a $10-billion-a-year business.

In 1980, 46.6 percent of all American mothers with children under age 6 were either employed or looking for work, according to the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Labor Department. And that meant that some 7.5 million preschool children were in need of day care.

Baby-sitting and child care are not new concerns for parents, but because of the surge in the number of working mothers the approach is all new. Baby-sitting has become big business. Parents in the United States currently spend about $10 billion annually on a variety of child-care arrangements, including church nurseries, industrial-sponsored centers, private centers and chains and Federally funded facilities.

Though day care is a major concern in the United States, America lags behind many European nations. Switzerland began operating day nurseries in 1767. Government-sponsored facilities are now an accepted part of life in Europe.

One man who has confronted the problem in the U.S. is Perry Mendel. In 1968, when his daughter wanted to continue in her career after having a child, Mendel became aware of the lack of quality child care. And so he did something about it. In 1969 Mendel founded the nation's biggest chain of "early learning centers" — Kinder-Care Learning Centers, Inc.

Kinder-Care has almost 700 centers licensed at city, state and Federal levels, and each can enroll 100 or more children at a time. Some of Kinder-Care's "acquisition centers" in California are licensed to handle 300 children simultaneously, and their goal is for 2,000 by 1987.

Another chain, La Petite Academy, has been operating for 10 years. Its 264 centers can accommodate up to 120 children each, and the firm expects to expand to at least 290 units in 1982. Children's World of Arvada, Colo., has 80 centers now, with plans for another 10 or 15 soon.

Today there is a total of seven such chains nationwide. They operate over 1,000 of the 19,000 existing child-care centers, earning $100,000,000 annually. The chains reportedly make up the fastest-growing segment of the market, and according to Business Week, "steady increase in the number of working mothers almost ensures even greater future prosperity."

The chains have a very businesslike approach to child care. The children get appropriate meals and nourishing snacks, health care, transportation if needed, field trips, instruction in social behavior and a planned curriculum that includes basic approaches to numbers and reading, physical development, science, music, arts and crafts.

Very few child-care centers accept infants or small children and all prefer not to be called baby sitters.

There are some chains that do care for infants and toddlers, though. Creative World, based in Kansas City, is one. They lease space in churches throughout the Midwest and Florida and offer professional management to the staffs.

Day care isn't cheap. The fee at Kinder-Care is between $35 and $40 per week, and at other private centers it can go as high as $50 a week. Some day-care centers are Federally subsidized if they meet Federal standards. In these cases, low-income parents usually pay on a sliding scale.

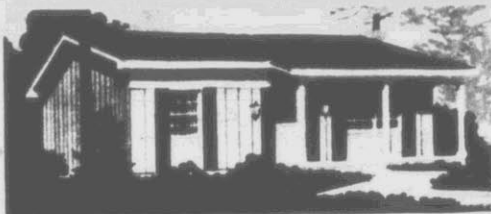

Because more and more parents want and need satisfactory care for their children, interest in setting up day-care facilities has spread to labor unions, private corporations, universities, colleges and hospitals.

Some employers have become involved because of the need to recruit workers and then keep them on the job. The Kaiser Shipyards, pioneers in this field, operated a center during World War II, with marked improvements in employee morale.

For now, the trend in America is toward more professional care for preschool children in conveniently located centers. But despite the boom in the child-care business, there is still a shortage of facilities in many areas, and the high cost of care isn't feasible for many parents. At present, the Federal Government, women's groups and industry are exploring how to make good, economical day care accessible to any family who needs it. FW

"Million Dollar" Zoysia Lawn! Water Once! Never Needs Watering Again!

PLUGS!

Lakeland's Famous 30-Below-Zero Zoysia Takes Wear, Tear, Cookouts, Children's Games... After 30 Below Zero Winters, It Bounces Back Green, Thick, And Beautiful! Closest Thing To An Indestructible Lawn You Have Ever Seen!

Zoysia Lawn Wasn't Mowed For A Month! Not A Weed In Sight!

By Mike Senkiw, Agronomist, Lakeland Nurseries

If your family is like mine, you're squeezing every dollar to make sure you have enough to go around. And it looks like things are going to stay that way.

One way to cut expenses is to cut the costs, and work, of lawn care. For example, a woman wrote about her zoysia lawn that she had mowed it only twice ALL SUMMER. She hadn't spent a cent on weed-killers. Not one cent for fertilizers. Yet her lawn was as green and weed-free as a pile carpet.

ZOYSIA LAWNS STAY GREEN THROUGH HEAT AND DROUGHTS

Let the scorching sun burn lawns around you into hay—your zoysia stays fresh and green, an emerald isle of beauty. I have yet to water my own zoysia lawn. One day I saw that my sprinkler had gotten clogged! In Iowa, a zoysia lawn was declared the area's "Top Lawn—nearly perfect." Yet this lawn had been watered only once that entire summer!

CUT YOUR WATER BILLS. SAVE THE WORK OF LAWN SPRINKLING. START A FAMOUS ZOYSIA GRASS LAWN NOW.

Weed-killing chemicals are NOT NEEDED for a weed-free Famous Zoysia Lawn

How is it possible that Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia stays weed-free without using expensive, risky chemicals? It grows so thick that crabgrass (weed) seeds don't get enough light to germinate!

Has Cut Mowing To Once A Month

Zoysia grows sideways, not just up like ordinary grass. It forms a thick, interwoven carpet of turf that keeps its well-groomed look weeks longer. It cuts your mowing by half, 2/3 or more!

No-Re-seeding—Not Ever!—With Lakeland's Famous Zoysia

Plug in Lakeland Zoysia and never buy grass seed again. Zoysia lawns don't grow old; they just grow better. They sparkle under 100° heat... stay green through droughts. They resist diseases and insects which ruin ordinary grasses. After sharp frosts, they only give up their green color, then green up better than ever each following Spring. Famous Zoysia gives you the closest thing to an indestructible lawn you have ever seen.

Ends Washouts on Steep Slopes Perfect Where Other Grasses Do Poorly Deep-rooted zoysia holds soil in place, stops it from washing away from slopes. It's your perfect answer for worn out or weedy areas, too.

In a typical newspaper article I read (quote):

NO NEED TO DIG UP YOUR LAWN
PLUG IN Z 52 ZOYSIA

"upgrading your current lawn" requires the right selection of grass seed plus "regular applications of fertilizer (and lime where needed)." This article also said you need, "weed, insect and disease control." Sound familiar? Of course!

Why not forget all that work and expense, and plug in Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia? To upgrade your lawn with zoysia, don't dig it up. Just set plugs into holes in the soil a foot apart or less. Let those plugs spread toward each other to form a carpet of solid turf. Growth is so vigorous it chokes out old growth you want to get rid of. WEEDS INCLUDED.

From Coast to Coast People Write to Mike Senkiw

From Hudson, N.Y., E. LaRoche writes how he planted plugs "in the worst possible place—clay with weeds and gravel... It formed a 4" thick carpet of grass. Not children, dogs, cats, rabbits, extremely hot sun or drought could kill it."

From Sacramento, Calif., Jack Morse writes how he bought our Zoysia "for a weed infested spot—it took care of the problem."

From Indiana, M.A. Low, Sr. writes how he visited a physician friend in Albert Lea, Minn. where he saw a "whole back yard was entirely in zoysia and it was beautiful... a deep green."

The success of many thousand of delighted Famous Zoysia owners awaits you. Prove it to yourself today.

"Same Day Fresh"

The day we cut your plugs is the day they are on their way to you. Because freshness counts, Lakeland has 2 shipping points, one in the Midwest and one in the East. Your plugs go out from the nearest point "Same Day Fresh" and ready to grow, shipping charge collection the most economical way. On credit card orders, the shipping cost will be prepaid by us and billed to your account.

Poor Soil? No Problem!

Our Famous Zoysia-plugs are so vigorous we guarantee them to grow whatever your soil—from heavy clays to sandy sub-soils. You cannot lose.

Lakeland's Total Guarantee

- Drought Won't Kill It
- Heat Won't Kill It

We replace them FREE. That guarantee clearly means that Famous Zoysia has to do everything we say—and more! Otherwise there's no way we could give you such unique protection.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by the U.S. Govt. and released in co-operation with the U.S. Golf Association.

IT'S SO EASY AND INEXPENSIVE TO START A MAGNIFICENT ZOYSIA LAWN

Start your own magnificent, perennial zoysia lawn with as few as 100 plugs. Just let your plugs establish solid turf. Then take up transplants and plug in other places to your heart's desire. Plugged areas grow right back into solid turf. Your supply of plugs is endless.

Prices and Bargains

If you plant more grass that sits there and struggles—or dies on you—you may not miss your work and money. It's the time you cannot recover! So please don't confuse Lakeland's 30-Below-Zero Zoysia with any ordinary turf offered as a "bargain." If our plugs cost a little more in the beginning, they remain, in the long run, the only true bargain for your lawn.

Debunking the Myth Of the Big Bad Wolf

By Betty Polisar Reigot

It seems that ever since the story of "Little Red Ridinghood," the wolf has had a bad reputation. But today wolves are finally getting more enlightened coverage.

Scientists have been studying wolves seriously for the last 40 years, and today they do so with highly sophisticated methods. After injecting wolves with a tranquilizer, they place radio collars around their necks, which emit telemetric signals. With these signals the scientists are able to follow the wolves in planes and observe how they live. They've learned stare from the alpha wolf is tantamount to a rebuff.

A wolf's howl, often described as eerie, is just another message. Wolves may howl to locate or greet another pack or simply because they enjoy a howling session. Before traveling, a pack often huddles in a circle with each wolf pointing its muzzle skyward for a community howl.

Wolves mate during winter. Before giving birth in early spring, a wolf mother prepares a den, and everything is done to keep the pups alive and well fed.

How did the wolf get such a bad reputation? Two reasons, mainly:

First, wolves need meat to live, and this means they must find, chase and kill another animal to survive.

Secondly, wolves and humans evolved into competitors for both land and food. As agriculture developed, the wilderness was pushed back, and so, too, were the wolves' natural prey. Further, humans often hunted the same prey. Starving wolves began to attack domestic farm animals; exaggerated tales of wolf destruction spread. Traps, poisons, guns, as well as laws favoring bounties on wolves, were used to destroy them. Between the years 1500 and 1800 there were roughly 100,000 wolves in the United States, but today there are only about 11,000.

In 1973 the U.S. passed the Endangered Species Act, which protects wolves in the lower 48 states. However, Alaska is not presently covered under the act so wolves are still being killed there, and in certain parts of Canada, bounties are still permitted.

As Erik Zimen, author of The Wolf: A Species in Danger, points out, "...the best laws would be of no avail unless the wolf was accepted by the local population." Enforcing such laws requires educating people who live near wolves so they will cooperate. His position is shared by L. David Mech, an expert on wolves in the U.S. Farmers, ranchers and herders need protective legislation. At the same time, wilderness preserves can be set aside to protect wolves. Left alone, without threat of a lethal attack from humans, wolves help maintain an ecological balance between predator and prey.

Wolves at play: Little Red Ridinghood gave them a bum rap that they've had a hard time getting away from.

that this creature, feared for thousands of years, is, among other things, shy, gentle, intelligent and devoted to its family.

Most wolves belong to a pack, which is a basic family unit: a mating pair, its surviving offspring and often several relatives. Most packs have no more than seven members, and pack-mates travel, hunt, eat, rest and play together.

The leader of the pack, or alpha wolf — usually the strongest, largest male — makes most decisions for the pack when to travel and hunt, which trail to take. There is a second in command — and so on, down to the least important member frequently picked on by all the others. This wolf "pecking order" ensures harmony. A fight between pack members is usually resolved by one wolf acknowledging the other's superiority.

Communication is necessary and wolves have a rather large vocabulary. Besides vocal messages — barks, growls, whines, whimpers and, of course, howls — wolves use body language. A tail raised high means "I'm the boss." Ears leaning backward indicate fear or submissiveness. A Betty Reigot, a science writer for children, is the author of Wolves and A Book About Planets (Scholastic Books).

A New Test To Isolate Carriers Of Cystic Fibrosis

By Kate Jordan

Cystic fibrosis is a hereditary disorder affecting children, adolescents and young adults. It involves an impairment of the sweat, salivary and mucous-producing glands, which eventually causes problems in eating, digesting and respiration. Almost always fatal, it claims between 500 and 1,000 lives a year and is the number-one genetic killer of Caucasian children in the United States.

But the tragedy of families of children affected with cystic fibrosis doesn't stop with the victims. Any healthy children in the family must one day make the difficult decision of whether or not to risk having families of their own because there is a strong chance that they carry the trait. In fact, one in 20 adults harbor the recessive cystic gene. And if two of these "silent" carriers marry, there is a one-in-four chance that they will produce a cystic child.

"We don't yet understand the basic genetic defect underlying cystic fibrosis," says Muriel Gluckson, a research associate in genetics and pediatrics at St. Vincent's Hospital in New York City.

But now, there is hope at least for siblings of cystic children who are caught in a genetic game of Russian roulette. Three doctors at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston have developed a laboratory test that has had a high rate of detection of "silent carriers" during its research phase.

Under local anesthesia, a small snip of skin is taken from the patient's forearm and sent to the lab. In five weeks, the skin cells will have grown to a point where doctors can measure the amount of radioactive sodium they absorb. "Normal" cells absorb at a higher rate than the cells of persons with a recessive cystic gene.

"Pending the completion of a further validation study, we hope to be able to offer it on a limited basis to cystic families within six to eight months," says Dr. James Epstein, who developed the test with Drs. Jan Breslow and Joseph McPherson.

Early press accounts about the research in Boston gave an overly optimistic impression about the current availability of the test. The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation in Rockville, Md., therefore, stresses the experimental nature of the test at the moment. "We hope that it will one day be widely available," says a spokesman for the foundation. "We emphasize that it isn't available now."

Cystic families remain hopeful, though. One mother, who has lost three children to the disease, says, "We have been very interested in watching the developments. We have a son who is married and he and his wife want so much to start a family. This is the sort of test that could make a difference for us all."

There is still no cure for the disease itself. The average life expectancy has risen from 10 to 21 in the last decade because of special treatments, but irreversible lung and heart problems inevitably develop.

Because Children's Hospital Medical Center will be able to offer the test on only a limited basis initially, the first to have the skin biopsies will be high-risk individuals. "Since there is such a strong chance that the actual relatives of cystic children do carry the gene," explains Dr. Epstein, "the spouses of such individuals will be the ones to be examined for the recessive gene." If their spouses do not carry the gene, it does not matter if the sibling does or does not, for it takes two recessives to produce the defect in their offspring.

Despite the still experimental nature of the cystic fibrosis carrier screening test, Dr. Breslow states emphatically, "We are very excited about it," Dr. Epstein adds, "The research going on here is funded largely by the public — through the March of Dimes, the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and the National Institutes of Health. I think people should be encouraged to know that with their help, some progress is being made."

Seed for thought. Beef for the burger, grain for the bun...and petroleum for both. Not to eat, of course. But producing a pound of hamburger requires the energy equivalent of a gallon of gasoline. And every loaf of bread requires energy to fuel seeders, spreaders, and harvesters—not to mention natural gas for use in fertilizers. Energy is also the "secret ingredient" in every box of cereal, every TV dinner, and just about everything else we eat. So now, when American farmers are putting seed and fertilizer into the ground, is a good time to consider what first has to come out of the ground—more oil and more natural gas.

Jack and the cornstalk. Farming, in fact, requires more petroleum products than almost any other industry. A gallon of gasoline to produce a single bushel of corn, for example, and a gallon for every five loaves of bread. Yet chew on this: Because of all that energy, each American farmer grows enough to feed 67 people—nearly 10 times as many as his great-grandfather could feed in 1910, and six times more than his Russian counterpart feeds now. As fairy-tale Jack might have said if he'd seen today's real cornstalk giants, "That's a-maizing!"

"Then I got the idea to switch from regular to premium...."

Magic beans. The secret, in a kernel, is "scientific agriculture." Super fertilizers derived from natural gas make the American farmer almost like Jack and his magical beans. Corn yields alone soared 240 percent between 1945 and 1970. Diesel fuels for farm machinery, and petrochemicals to kill weeds and pests, have increased the yields of all crops. Sure beats the era of the horse, and natural fertilizers. Scientists say it would require 50 tons of manure per acre of corn to supply the same amount of energy-rich nitrogen that's contained in less than half a ton of ammonia fertilizer. How's that for reducing air pollution?

Plenty of Jack. Thanks to the energy-wise U.S. farmer, each American has more food and better food, every day, than almost anyone else in the world. While feeding all 226 million of us, the 3.8 million American farmers also produce enough to feed 144 million people overseas. The agricultural products that farmers exported last year helped our balance of payments to the whopping tune of $40 billion. That ain't hay.

It's a fact: In 1980, American farmers used the equivalent of 95 gallons of gasoline on each of the over 65 million acres of corn under cultivation.

When the "No's" Have It

One of the most difficult problems in child-raising is when to say "no" to a youngster. According to child psychologist Dr. Lonnie Carton, a firm "no" issued at the right time can provide the security and love a young person needs to feel a sense of structure in life. In her newest book, Raise Your Kids Right, Dr. Carton differentiates between positive and negative "no's." The four positive "no's" include:

- The lifesaving "no," accompanied by a calm and reasoned explanation of the result of dangerous acts. Scaring a child may inhibit his or her willingness to explore the world.
- The challenge "no," which is used when a child attempts a task beyond his or her abilities; yet it should always be accompanied by "but you can try it," so that a youngster's ambition and creativity aren't stifled.

- The character-building "no" offers guidelines to help children be less selfish, more willing to share.

- The convenience "no," which tells a youngster that his or her own desires cannot always be put ahead of a parent's priorities. "Children must learn that there is a right time and place for everything," says Dr. Carton.

The psychologist also identifies three negative "no's": "You are not capable"; "I won't listen to you"; and "I don't love you."

Premarital Counseling: Does It Help?

For many years experts have declared that the causes of marital breakdown could best be dealt with by preventive measures, such as counseling before marriage. But most young, engaged couples were reluctant to become involved. Caught up in romantic feelings, they were "sure" their relationship would not be touched by the problems that beset others.

Recently, however, there have been renewed efforts to encourage couples to learn about the pitfalls of marriage and to evaluate their own relationship — before the wedding. Some states now require premarital counseling of couples who are under 18. Statistics for California show, as a result, that nearly one out of five of such couples have either withdrawn or been denied their application for a marriage license.

In Toronto, 19 churches and several hundred couples participated in a project to test the effectiveness of marriage-preparation programs. The results: Partners who took part in the programs had fewer marital conflicts in their first year of marriage than those who had not; when they did have problems, these couples were better able to resolve them; and those who had premarital counseling were more likely to seek professional counseling promptly for conflicts they could not deal with themselves.

Happy the Second-Time Around

More than 1,500,000 men and women will be remarried in 1981 — accounting for almost half of all Americans who will wed this year. Three out of every four divorced women remarry, as do five of every six divorced men. By middle age, says family sociologist Frank Furstenburg Jr., "it seems likely that no less than a fourth of all adults will have wed more than once."

Those figures make it important to know what the effect of remarriage is. A report in the Journal of Family Issues indicates that the remarried feel as "well adjusted" and as "happy" as those in first marriages. They experience equally high feelings, says researcher Helen Weingarten, of "self-acceptance, self-esteem, feelings of zest" and no higher levels of worry or anxiety than first-marrieds.

Nevertheless, the ending of a first marriage can leave certain emotional scars. Remarrieds tend to use more alcohol, more frequently report having felt "overwhelmed" by events and inadequate in their previous marital and parental relationships. But Weingarten concludes: "This sample of remarried Americans do remarkably well.... They experience strain, and they are able to admit it. They feel overwhelmed at times and have used professional help to cope with this difficulty. They acknowledge having had hard times in the past, but they feel good about today and look forward to their future."

HERE COMES THE CASHLESS SOCIETY

For two decades, the road to the good life was paved with credit cards. But today's technology is ushering in an electronic era of computerized buying and banking that may reduce the value of greenbacks to mere curiosity.

By Michael D'Antonio

experts predict the cashless society many economists envisaged in the 1950's will mature and thrive in the 1980's as new kinds of credit cards, electronic banking, telephone bill-paying and other creative credit options revolutionize the marketplace.

Consumers can say goodbye to their traditional-style bank cards, the all-purpose plates such as VISA and Mastercard. These big-bank cards pioneered worldwide credit systems that allow card holders to charge purchases in shops, eateries and hotels around the world. But while the universal-use feature of the cards will remain, in the coming decade services will be expanded.

Inventive bankers in the Midwest have turned some of their credit cards into "debit cards." Instead of building an account filled with charges he must pay at the end of the month, a debit card holder builds a savings or checking account and draws on that account whenever he makes a purchase. His unused balance earns interest, and instead of a bill, he gets a periodic statement that shows transactions, how much his money earned and how much is left.

"It's like a plastic check. We've not only eliminated cash, we've eliminated technology and the gradual easing of Government regulations on banking and credit, have all set the economic stage for a rapid competition among banks and credit card companies in the 80's. Cash, checks and coins are expected to be victims of the credit war and consumers who discover free checking, the convenience of telephone bill-paying and electronic transfers will be the ultimate winners of the financial war.

Convenience for the customer and the financial institutions will be the most significant contributor to the growth of the cashless society. Paper is cumbersome, perishable and costly to handle. Today's bankers, who talk as much about computers as they do about interest rates, prefer their customers to use telephone bill-paying systems, automatic computer transactions that deposit paychecks and pay regular monthly bills. Computer and telephone banking require fewer bank employees, take up less space because files are kept inside computers, and are less prone to human error.

Introduced in the early 1970's,

"We've not only eliminated cash, we've eliminated paper altogether. The customer doesn't even have to write a check."

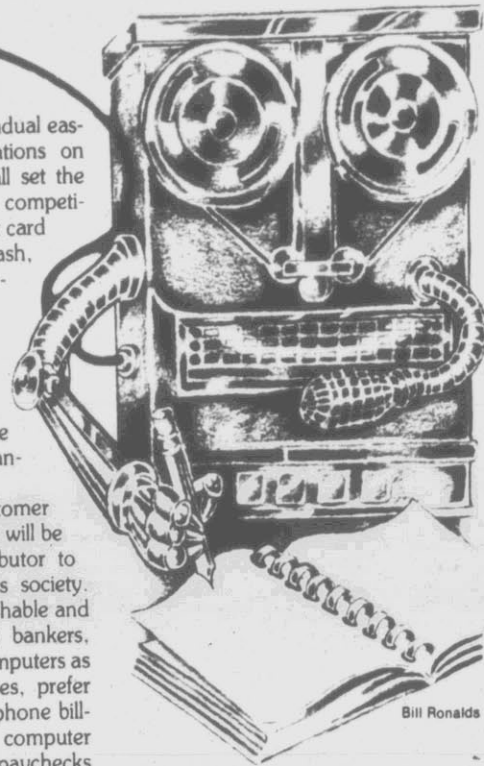

nated paper altogether," explains Lawrence Gordon, spokesman for First and Merchants National Bank (F&M) of Richmond, Va. "The customer doesn't even have to write a check. He just shows his card and the cost of the purchase is deducted from his account."

The debit card is a blue, white and yellow VISA card that is part of a package that F&M calls its "Best Account." The Best Account pays a customer interest on his checking account, offers him electronic transfers of funds from account to account and includes use of a VISA debit card.

Rising interest rates, astounding advances in computer and communica-

telephone bill-paying allows a customer to dial the bank, read a special code to an operator and have money transferred to pay utilities, monthly mortgage and other bills. More sophisticated services allow customers with touch-tone phones to simply push a series of buttons to activate a computer and a few more buttons to pay bills.

In its infancy, telephone bill-paying was often confusing and intimidating for consumers. Toni Raiten, a shop cashier whose Maryland bank offers such a telephone service, says writing a check is still easier. "You have to register your accounts with the bank, and the directions for it are so complicated that I don't feel confident that the bills are really being paid. I know people who have used telephone bill-paying and gotten notices from creditors because the bills weren't actually paid," she says.

More recent telephone-payment programs are simpler and more reliable, according to the American Bankers Association. "Telephone bill-paying is continuing to grow," says ABA's Barbara Harrelson. "Younger people are more used to using computers and they trust them more. Plus the banks' capabilities are increasing as communications and computer technology get better and better."

The rising cost of doing business by mail also may be moving people over to computers. Some banks offer telephone bill-paying free of charge while others charge a fee that is less than the cost of a postage stamp for each transaction. And telephone/computer transactions are cheaper for banks because they don't have to handle incoming checks and send them back to customers with their monthly statements.

When telephone bill-paying was first introduced, its pioneers expected

At White Flint, a shopping mall in a wealthy Washington suburb, a well-dressed middle-aged woman hands her $8 purchase to the cashier at a kitchenware shop. As she digs into her purse for a credit card, the cashier recites the store policy: "No charges under $10." Frustrated, the customer reaches for one of the $2 items stacked on the counter and thrusts her charge card forward.

The incident is not an isolated one. Every day dozens of shoppers buy more than they set out to buy, just so they can meet a store's $10 credit card minimum. Most do it without complaining. They have the money, but they don't carry cash. Credit cards are much easier.

The boom of the 1960's and 70's is over for the credit card industry, perhaps, some bankers say, because everyone who wants them now has them. But while the rising tide of conventional credit card customers seems to have crested, business sources report continued growth in the number of charge cards, and the 1980's promise an explosion in credit card and bill-paying options. IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS...the new EASY speed method for figure beauty

What is SYNOMETRICS? You've probably heard about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics for years. Each method has its own believers and supporters. I used BOTH methods in my daily training. Finally, I developed a special exercise unit that employed BOTH methods AT THE SAME TIME in one device. The effect was simply amazing. I was able to keep in trim, slim shape in only a fraction of the time I previously needed!

The Science of SYNOMETRICS

I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is... a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours! Now... build yourself a "fantastic looking body" with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISO-METRIC.

What is the SPEED SHAPER?

Ingeniously designed, in an amazingly compact slimming & shaping discovery.
• No doorknobs needed • Adjust tension to your own needs, for any age • Slip into pocket or purse (5 oz.)—fits anywhere!

"I'm over 50 and I thought my fat and flab was with me for life... SYNOMETRICS 'burned' it off in only 7 days. In fact results came so fast I had to cut my daily 7 minute workout to 5 minutes to slow down the slimming process. It's the most amazing method I've ever tried... and I've tried just about every gadget and gimmick I've seen in magazines and TV."

CASHLESS SOCIETY

a boom. The convenience of dialing a computer and paying bills in half the time it takes to write checks and get them in the mail seems irresistible. But banks that offer the service report fewer than half their customers use it regularly.

"We're bucking 50 years of history of banking," says a spokesman for Perpetual American, a Washington bank offering telephone bill-paying. "People have been using cash and checking accounts for a very long time. Personal finance habits are a lot harder to change than the kind of toothpaste people use."

"I can't say that in the future we're going to have a completely cashless or checkless society," adds Perpetual's spokesman. "But with electronic banking and the likelihood that home-computer terminals will one day be widely used, I think we're going to have a less-cash and less-check society."

When Perpetual first offered its telephone bill-paying service, Bert Allen was one of the bank's first customers to sign up. A business executive, Allen works with computers and feels confident about electronic

Using a special phone, customers can

banking. "It takes about one-third of the time to use telephone bill-paying than it does to write checks, address envelopes, find stamps," he explains.

Allen's bank uses the same kind of system most banks use for telephone accounts. Customers use special codes to get access to the computer that pays the bills. Using a push-button, touch-tone phone, the customers can "talk" with the computer by pressing buttons. Each step of each transaction is directed by the computer's electronic voice. And after each entry is made, the computer announces it, so the customer can be sure things are going smoothly.

"Initially, people have apprehensions," admits Perpetual's public-affairs officer. "But once they use it a few times, their confidence grows. All kinds of people use it; it's especially good for elderly people who can't get out. But probably younger people who are more used to computers, to trusting them, are the biggest group."

Add automatic check-deposit service, a computer plan that transfers paychecks and other periodic payment checks directly into a bank account, bypassing paper, and automatic bill-paying, which pays predictable bills by computer, and the American consumer faces a growing array of cash-free choices.

The new computer-banking services and the growth of the cashless society will be overseen by agencies such as the Federal Reserve Board. A spokesman for the Fed observes, "There is a whole raft of new ideas out there that may come into operation because of increased competition." He adds, "Banking is going to be completely revolutionized because of computers. Your home phone may one day act like a computer terminal connected with your bank. Everything—deposits, payments, transfers of funds—may be done right on the phone. Things are going to be a lot different, and we're trying to adjust to that fact."

When credit cards became widely used in the 1960's, nearly every comic that took the stage made some joke about how many credit cards his wife or friend had and how they were used. Walter Cavanagh of California even earned a place in the Guinness Book of World Records with a 900-card, 28-pound wallet full of charge cards.

Things will be quite different for most of us in the 80's. We'll probably carry just one card, a card that will give us access to automatic electronic bank tellers, to pay-by-phone systems, to credit when we need it and payments made directly from our accounts when we want them. Our paychecks will be deposited directly into our accounts, and installment loans and other monthly bills may be paid automatically by a computer.

The 1980's will bring a strange, increasingly cashless society that might have baffled earlier generations with its many options and its technology. But Americans who grew up with computer-programming courses in school, computer terminals at work and video games at home should take on electronic banking and all its convenience with ease and confidence.

Go Western for Fun and Fancy

A touch of the old West: Pants suit from Miller Western Wear. Embroidered shirt by Karman Western Apparel. Shirts of Kodel polyester-cotton.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Ride 'em cowboy! The legacy of the old West is upon us — not only in our love of jeans, but in the flurry of cowboy regalia available just about everywhere.

According to Sandra Kauffman, author of The Cowboy Catalog (Clarkson N. Potter), a source book of the best in western clothing and gear, "Western clothes are a direct link with our past. They were born and bred here, played an important role in our history and are uniquely American."

"Best of all," adds Kauffman, "western wear is ideally suited to today's life style. It can be worn as work or leisure clothes or dressed up at night with touches of silver, exotic leathers or silk and satin fabrics."

If you're game to put a little of "the range" in your wardrobe, it's fascinating to remember that the original cowboy had a dangerous job. His clothes were designed for protection, and every detail on his garments had a specific purpose.

Western shirts and jackets had yokes and broad shoulders to absorb the stress of riding and roping. The wide cuffs and snaps insured a snug fit so that the sleeves did not interfere with his roping.

Western pants were designed to take the saddle. The deep vertical pockets were set high on the hip so that nothing could fall out of them, and hems flared to fit over boots.

If you're looking to add some dash to your existing wardrobe, the smart fashion approach is to wear the western style in small doses.

Bandannas. Besides the traditional red and blue, they now come in a dozen colors. A bandanna can complete a western look or add color to your nonwestern clothes.

Bolo Ties. Made of braided leather with metal tips and fastened with a decorative slide, these ties can create a very individual look when worn on a shirt with a blazer and skirt.

Collar Tips. These are available in inexpensive metal, silver or gold. They are usually embossed or engraved with western designs.

Tooled Leather Belts. Usually carved with traditional western floral motifs. Can set off a sweater and skirt or add a little fun to a classic suit.

Hat Pins. Adapt these, in the shapes of saddles, horses, cowboys, the Texas Lone Star, to wear on a suit lapel or on a blouse. FW

OH, BOY! BABIES

In September 1978, The Collegiate School, a New York elementary school for boys, announced an unusual elective course for fifth- and sixth-graders — infant care. Silently, 10 boys signed up.

With photographer Katrina Thomas, writers Alison Cragin Herzig and Jane Lawrence Mali followed the class, and the result is the charming book Oh, Boy! Babies. Says Herzig, "From the first day, the boys were wild with excitement — but highly suspicious. They never thought real babies would be brought in, and even if they were, the boys were sure the babies wouldn't be handed over."

But sure enough, in came the real babies. And soon the boys were holding, feeding and diapering with amazing care, warmth and delight.

"The boys acted as if it was the chance of a lifetime," reports Herzig. "They felt a sense of nostalgia for their own childhood — it was something they remember loving and wanted to pass on."

As one boy said afterward, "I'm going to beg them to let me take the class again. I just love babies. I mean, I'm going to get down on my knees and beg them."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

While at Harvard in the late 1940's, John Train was reading Collier's magazine one day and came across a Mr. Katz Meow of Hoquiam, Wash. Bemused, he jotted the name in a notebook. For 30 years, he's collected such mirthful misnomers, and he's put them into a book (now in paperback) — Remarkable Names of Real People.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

A purr-fect name: Katz Meow.

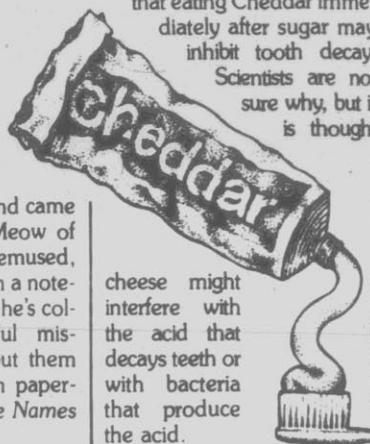

Here's a sample: Doctor Doctor; Bathsheba Finkelstein; Cardinal Sin (Archbishop of Manila); Baroness Gaby von Bagge of Boo; John Senior Jr.; Lettice Goedebed; July August September; Groaner Digger (undertaker); F.G. Vereneseneckock-krockoff; Mary Louise Pantzaroff; Dr. Zoltan Ovary (gynecologist); Lawless and Lynch (attorneys); T. Hee; Mr. Vroom (motorcycle dealer); Ima and Ura Hogg; I.C. Shivers (ice-man); Wyre and Tapping (detectives); Virginia May Sweatt Strong; Nita Bath; Preserved Fish Jr.; O.Hell.

Train, by the way, has three teen-age daughters, none named choo-choo.

CAVITIES, CHEESE IT!

Smile and say cheese. Cheddar cheese that is. Research on rats indicates that eating Cheddar immediately after sugar may inhibit tooth decay. Scientists are not sure why, but it is thought cheese might interfere with the acid that decays teeth or with bacteria that produce the acid.

SUPERPOWERS FACE OFF

The Cold War comes to TV live this week on the season premier of Bill Moyers' Journal. Entitled "Alternative to Disaster," the PBS show will feature a sure-to-be fascinating two-hour debate among journalists, historians and political scientists from the U.S. and Russia. Check local listings for day and time.

HOW TO KEEP ROLLING

Last year more than 176,000 roller skaters ended up in hospital emergency rooms — about two-thirds for serious sprains and fractures. Not all injuries are preventable, but learning to fall correctly can help. Here are a few tips from Dr. Alton Thygerson, health science professor at Brigham Young. If you are losing your balance, crouch down on the skates to help break the fall. Try to land on fleshy parts of your body (i.e. buttocks, thighs) rather than the bones or joints. Try to roll rather than absorb the force with outstretched arms. And though it may be difficult while falling, relax the body instead of becoming stiff.

Thygerson adds that protective gear like helmets, gloves and elbow and knee pads may not prevent fractures but can reduce the severity of cuts and scrapes.

FORT APACHE FIGHTS BACK

The hit film Fort Apache, The Bronx depicts life in New York City's South Bronx section, perhaps the most frightening example of urban decay in history. Starring Paul Newman as a caring but hardened cop, the movie has been lauded by many. But several minority groups have protested the chial school.

"Many blacks and Puerto Ricans saw the film and told me that, if anything, it was too tame. Believe me, I saw the area; it's all there — the hookers, the boozers, the junkies stoned out of their skulls. I took some shots of the real South Bronx that I planned to run with the credits. They would curl your hair. But I didn't want to rub the audience's nose in it, so I cut them."

Some critics have charged that the movie paints no minority character in a positive light, and Petrie admits the temptation existed to "cover all the bases. I joke now that next time," he laughs, "instead of casting Ed Asner as the police captain, maybe I'd use Ossie Davis."

Life Insurance...

Life Insurance...

Should you 'rent' it or
'own' it?

Deciding what type of life insurance you need can be compared to deciding whether to rent an apartment or own a home. Term insurance is like renting. And whole life is like owning. This comparison can help you understand the different benefits the two basic types of insurance can provide.

Just as both an apartment and a home provide physical shelter, both term and whole life insurance provide financial protection. But there are key differences between the two types of insurance such as: how long the coverage lasts, what the yearly premiums are, and whether the policy has cash values.

Term Insurance: Renting vs. Whole Life Insurance: Owning

vs.

An apartment lease gives you shelter for a fixed period. Similarly, term insurance gives you protection for a fixed period such as 1 year or 5 years. Term policies however, usually permit renewal until a certain age, or can be converted to permanent insurance.

Low initial payments

vs.

Initially, term insurance can provide much more coverage per premium dollar than whole life. Why? Because term provides protection for a temporary period and the risk of death is lower than if the coverage were for a lifetime.

But just as your rent can increase each time you renew your lease, so will term premiums increase at each renewal. Why? Because the risk of death obviously increases with age.

Permanent

Having whole life insurance, on the other hand, is more like owning your home. Whole life protects you for as long as you keep it—for your entire life if you want.

Fixed payments

Whole life insurance eliminates this problem of rising premiums by spreading the cost of protection over an entire lifetime. So just as a home-owner makes the same payment each month on a conventional mortgage, the owner of a whole life policy pays the same premium each year.

The larger premiums on whole life create a cash reserve to cover claims in later years. This reserve also provides the whole life policy with cash value.

No cash value

vs.

The apartment renter doesn't build up any equity even though paying rent each month. The same is true for a person with term insurance: the policy doesn't build up any cash value. Basically, the premiums for term insurance are intended to cover the claims filed and the life insurance company's costs during the coverage period.

Which type of life insurance is for you?

There really is no hard and fast answer—it comes down to a matter of individual needs and preferences.

If your insurance needs are high but your budget is very limited, a lot of term insurance may be the answer for you.

On the other hand, you may prefer the permanence, fixed premiums and cash value of

Cash value benefits

The cash value buildup in a whole life policy is similar to the home-owner's buildup of equity in the home from making the mortgage payments. The cash value can be used by the policy-owner to meet various alternative needs: retirement, children's education, emergency loans, etc. However, using the cash value decreases the insurance protection.

whole life, but feel you really can't afford this type of protection.

Is there an answer to this dilemma?

Yes—one answer is Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's new whole life policy that emphasizes getting the most permanent protection for your premium dollar. It can be a good foundation for your life insurance program...

Introducing Metropolitan's Whole

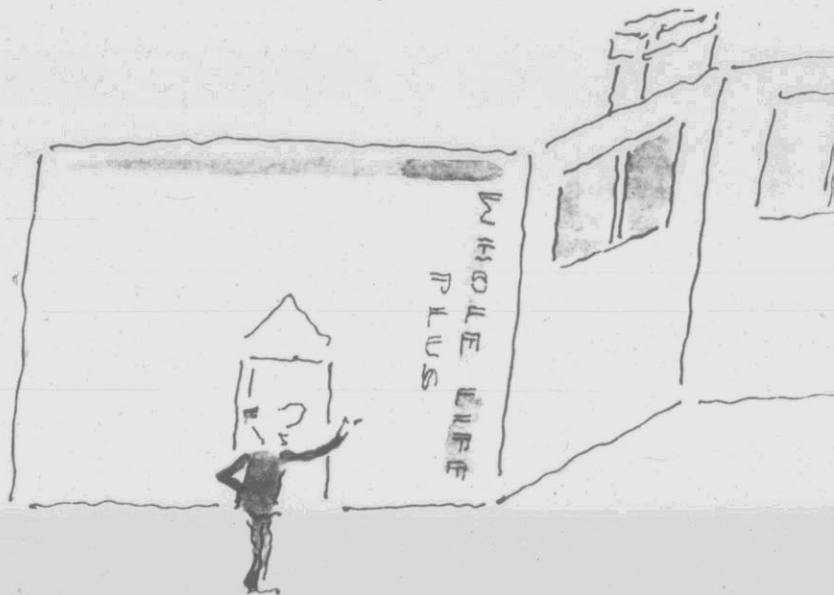

Now you can have more of the whole life coverage you need—at a surprisingly low premium.

Depending on your age, Metropolitan's new Whole Life Plus Policy lets you buy up to one-third more whole life coverage than we offered before for the same premium payment. It's like building a sizeable addition on the cozy traditional whole life house—with no extra payment!

In these inflationary times, this extra coverage is important. Metropolitan is offering the Whole Life Plus Policy for coverage amounts of $25,000 or more and you'll probably be surprised at how much coverage you can now afford.

Just compare Metropolitan's premiums.

Metropolitan encourages you to compare our Whole Life Plus Policy with similar policies. Look at some examples of the premiums and the 20-year "interest-adjusted surrender cost index" for a Metropolitan $25,000 Whole Life Plus Policy.

Males

Age	Preferred Annual Premium	Surrender Cost Index (per $1,000)
25	$ 247.75	$ 1.70
35	365.25	2.82
45	593.50	5.82

Females

25	225.25	1.56
35	321.00	2.31
45	511.00	4.61

The Metropolitan representative in your community will be happy to explain the Surrender Cost Index and to provide you with specific information about the premiums that apply to you.

Calculating how much life insurance

"Metropolitan's Whole Life Plus Policy sounds good, but exactly how much protection do I need?"

While an exact answer depends on your precise situation, it would probably take about 75% of your monthly take-home pay to maintain your family's standard of living. To provide each $100 of that monthly income for 10 years will require about $8,500 of life insurance or other assets.

So, for example, if your monthly take-home pay is $1,200, $75\% \times $1,200$ is $900, and $9 \times $8,500$ is $76,500—roughly the amount of life insurance you would need to maintain your family's standard of living for 10 years.

Of course, there are other factors that can increase or reduce the amount of insurance you need:

- Final expenses—any unpaid medical expenses as well as funeral, estate tax and probate costs.

- Repaying debts—mortgage, car loan, credit cards, business debts, personal loans, etc.

- Homemaking expenses—cost of replacing services for child care, house-cleaning, cooking, laundry, etc.

- Children's education—amount you want for helping to put your children through college.

- Disabled relatives—a spouse, child or other relative who is likely to need support for a long time.

- Retirement fund—extra income for your surviving spouse on top of Social Security and any pension; or building up cash value to supplement your own retirement income.

- Current resources—assets you have, including Social Security benefits and current life insurance, that could meet those needs.

- Inflation—the least predictable factor, but Metropolitan does offer some imaginative ideas to help you combat this problem!

What about inflation?

The Whole Life Plus Policy is one way Metropolitan can help you stretch the dollars you spend for life insurance: Your premium can now buy substantially more coverage.

Besides fighting inflation today, Metropolitan can help you maintain your policy's value against inflation tomorrow. How? With two special features that can be added to your policy for only a small initial increase in the annual premium.

Cost of Living Rider. This feature can automatically increase your policy's coverage—up to 300%! For example, the coverage under a $50,000 policy can reach $150,000.

How does it work? You will receive term insurance each year up to age 65 to increase your policy's coverage by a percentage equal to the rise in the Consumer Price Index.

Return of Cash Value Rider. This is another feature that can automatically increase your policy's coverage over the years through annual term insurance. It can guarantee your beneficiary would receive not only the policy's full face value, but also the policy's accumulated cash value.

With both these riders, you won't have to complete any more applications or prove your health still qualifies you for obtaining the additional coverage provided.

Is Whole Life Plus the answer?

ARCHIEKINS, ARE YOU BUSY ON SUNDAY?

I'M AFRAID SO, RONNIE, BETTY AND I ARE GOING TO WORK ON MY CAR!

EVER SINCE BETTY ENROLLED IN THAT AUTO-REPAIR COURSE, I NEVER SEE ARCHIE ANYMORE!

WELL, I CAN SIGN UP FOR THAT COURSE, TOO! HOW DIFFICULT CAN IT BE?

HELLO, MR. GASKET! HOW DO YOU LIKE MY CUSTOM TOOLBOX WITH MATCHING DESIGNER OVERALLS?

YECCH! DON'T YOU HAVE ANY CARBURETORS THAT ARE LESS GREASY?

GRRR! THIS IS THE PITS! GREASE PITS, THAT IS!

THE ONLY REASON I SIGNED UP FOR THAT AUTO-REPAIR COURSE IS BECAUSE BETTY DID!

SHE AND ARCHIE HAVE BEEN SPENDING EVERY SUNDAY TOGETHER SINCE, WORKING ON HIS DUMB CAR!

I SUPPOSE THE "ODD TRIPLE" WILL BE SPENDING THIS SUNDAY TOGETHER TOO!

YEAH-- THEY'RE SUPPOSED TO RUN A ROAD TEST ON RESERVOIR HILL!

BUT I DON'T THINK HIS CAR CAN MAKE IT TO THE TOP WITHOUT BOILING OVER!

JUGGIE, YOU'RE A GENIUS! THAT'S THE ANSWER!

SUNDAY! HI, ARCHIEKINS! BOY! IT SURE IS LUCKY I JUST HAPPENED TO BE DRIVING BY, ISN'T IT?

The PHANTOM
by LEE FALK

FOR THOSE WHO CAME IN LATE... THE CHUTE!

HE'S DOWN THERE. STILL ALIVE... SHOOT!

BANG

I THINK I GOT HIM... IF YOU DIDN'T... THE CATS WILL... AS USUAL.

WHEW! QUITE A SLIDE! "CROOKS" HAVEN'T SO THIS IS HOW IT WORKS. CRIMINALS COME HERE FOR REFUGE, LOADED WITH MONEY...

"THEY'RE GIVEN A HIGH TIME...UNTIL ALL THE MONEY'S SQUEEZED OUT OF THEM..."

THEN...DOWN THE CHUTE... WHERE MANY DIE. THEY LAND HERE... IF STILL ALIVE... THE SOLDIERS SHOOT...

IF THE SOLDIERS MISS... THEN THE JUNGLE FINISHES THEM.
