Shuttle Flight Scrubbed; Maybe 2 Days

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The long-awaited test flight of America's rocketship Columbia was scrubbed for at least two days this morning when a computer malfunction occurred as two astronauts waited in the cockpit for their release to fly.

It never came; 16 minutes before lift-off, problems began.

"We are stopping the clock," space agency spokesman Hugh Harris said at 9:59 a.m. — three hours after the scheduled launchtime.

"We're sending out a crew to open the hatch of the orbiter and take the astronauts out to their crew quarters," about six miles from the launch pad. He said the earliest time for launch now is Sunday morning at 6:50 a.m. EST.

The postponement had to be a severe disappointment to pilots John Young and Robert Crippen, and to the many other employees of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration who had labored through two years' delay in development of the shuttle.

The Columbia was to make America's first manned space flight in six years; the mission called for 36 orbits around the earth in a delta-winged rocketship that is the first designed for reusable use in space.

On a beautiful, sunny day along Florida's Space Coast, an estimated half-million viewers arrived before dawn to see the launch. They moved into long and dejected traffic jams when the order to scrub was announced.

A space agency computer expert, patched through to the spacecraft, told the astronauts: "the probability that it will clear up is not really that great. It might be that it will, but we're not overly confident."

For good reason. It couldn't be done.

Attempts to duplicate the problem in a shuttle simulator in Houston were unsuccessful. Meanwhile, the astronauts were seated, horizontal, in their cockpit seats for almost six hours — as much "horizontal time" as NASA doctors permit before flight.

"If you guys get to feeling like you're too tired, we sure want to talk about it," a launch official told the astronauts at one point.

While the astronauts worked and waited, one launch control official told them, "You have to excuse the delay, gentlemen; all the ducks weren't in a straight line." The reply, from commander Young, "That's okay."

Two and a half hours after the crew should have been in space, Crippen joked, "I've got this fantastic view out my window. I can watch the pelicans fly up and down the beach."

The crew awoke at 2:05 a.m. today, went into their craft at 4:20 a.m.

Columbia's countdown to launch was proceeding smoothly early this morning when Crippen and Young noticed a warning light aglow signifying trouble with fuel cell No. 3.

That was quickly resolved, and all of a sudden the back-up computer, fifth of five drains that actually control the spacecraft, went on the fritz.

"The backup computer is not communicating properly with the other four," NASA spokesman Hugh Harris reported from the control center.

While launch could come as early as Sunday, 6:50 a.m., lift-off could be put back further, if the computer problem is a serious one.

Countdown delays and postponements have always been a part of the U.S. man-in-space program — proof that no matter how precisely you plan, or how sophisticated your equipment, something can go wrong.

America's first astronaut, Alan B. Shepard, had his 1961 flight postponed three days when a rainstorm buffeted the launch area. John Glenn, the first to orbit, suffered 10 postponements over two months, because of a series of weather and technical problems.

A Saturday launch for Columbia is impossible because of the need to empty more than half a million gallons of volatile fuel from the ships tanks and to condition the liquid hydrogen tank before refilling — a 48-hour process.

Launch Control Center attempted to delay launch as late as 10:20 a.m. today but the computer could not be fixed in time. Engineers here and at the Johnson Space Center in Houston sought to resolve the problem, assisted by the astronauts.

Crippen reported the software program in a backup computer did not agree with the programs in the four main computers that control the flight of the spaceship.

Gov. Hunt Honors Business In Arts, Humanities

Gov. Jim Hunt presented the Governor's Business Awards in the Arts and Humanities for 1980, to six North Carolina companies — four of them for their efforts in Eastern counties — in a special ceremony at the Casablanca Restaurant here last night.

The winners included Burroughs Wellcome Co., Research Triangle Park and Greenville; First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Goldsboro; Weyerhaeuser Co., New Bern; First Union National Bank, Charlotte and Fayetteville; Dillard Paper Co., Greensboro; and R. J. Reynolds Industries, Winston-Salem.

The annual awards are given to recognize substantial support by businesses of the state's cultural resources on a community or statewide basis, and are administered by the Governor's Business Council on the Arts and Humanities and the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources.

The awards were presented in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Governor's Council on the Arts and Humanities and a conference exploring the relationship of sound business practices and the humanities, which were held here earlier in the day. Winners are chosen by a special committee.

Each award winner received a special limited-edition etching by Donald Sexauer of Greenville, a professor of printmaking at East Carolina University. R. J. Reynolds commissioned the prints, one of which will be donated to the North Carolina Museum of Art.

Burroughs Wellcome won for its support of a variety of cultural organizations in the Research Triangle area and in Greenville, including a pledge of $50,000 to fund the Burroughs Wellcome Gallery in the new N.C. Museum of Art building, support of the N.C. Symphony, the American Dance Festival, WUNC Radio, developing a permanent art collections for its headquarters buildings in the Research Triangle and in Greenville, and other projects.

City Planning Ordinances Amended

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Amendments to five sections of the city's Zoning Ordinance, which were recommended by the Joint City-County Planning & Zoning Commission, were approved last night by the City Council following a public hearing.

City Manager Ed Wyatt said that the amendments addressed areas in the ordinance where problems had surfaced in the past.

Section 32-15 was amended by adding exemptions to the section addressing street access. A residential exemption was added, stating that, "A single-family dwelling may be constructed on a lot that does not abut a street, provided that such lot is at least two acres in size, is provided with access to a public street by an easement at least 40 feet in width, and does not exceed 300 feet in length for the exclusive use of the...dwelling."

In addition, "A duplex or multi-family unit need not abut a street provided all portions of each dwelling unit shall be located within 600 feet of a public dedicated and accepted street. Provided further, that a private drive shall furnish direct access to the property...and that access to each dwelling unit shall be made available by a private drive."

The amendment stipulates that, "A designed shopping center in a commercial district and offices in an office and institutional, health care and medical arts zoning district, need not abut a street provided that all portions of each building shall be located within 600 feet of a public dedicated and accepted street."

An amendment approved regarding the measurement of lot widths states, "The minimum lot width shall be measured at the front yard setback line, nevertheless, on cul-de-sac lots, the width of the lot may vary at the minimum front setback line, provided however, a minimum distance of 40 feet measured along the right-of-way line shall be observed."

The Council approved the deletion of a provision in the ordinance (Section 32-89) addressing "Increase in Front Yard Setback Requirements."

Section 32-97B was added to the zoning document providing for the regulation of condominium (unit ownership) and townhouse development.

In addition, Section 32-141 was amended by deleting the registered mail return receipt requirement along with the filing date for rezoning petitions.

Bobby Roberson, the city's planning director, said part of the amendment action last night actually placed in ordinance form what has been practiced by the city in the past.

Council members, following a second public hearing, concurred in a recommendation of the joint planning board and amended Section 9-2.2 of the City Code relative to ex-officio membership. The amendment provides for two alternate members on the planning commission.

Under new rules of procedure, adopted last fall by the planning board, the city manager and mayor were removed as ex-officio members of the commission. The council last night concurred in that action.

The code amendment provides that an alternate member, who resides within the corporate limits, shall be appointed by the council, while a second member, a resident of the extrajurisdictional area, shall be appointed by the Pitt Board of County Commissioners.

Roberson pointed out at the February planning board meeting that the purpose of the alternate member provision is to serve as an educational process by which the alternates can learn the proceedings of the board and be better prepared to become full members when openings occur.

TOO MUCH CHLORINE

Several weeks ago I called Greenville Utilities and told a secretary that the chlorine is too strong in my water where I live (out in Hillsdale.) I was told they'd send someone out to check it but no one has been. I don't see what they could do out here, it seems to me it would have to be done at the plant. G.D.

According to a spokesman from the Greenville Utilities' Water Plant, there is no record of your complaint. After trying to get in touch with you Thursday, GUC discovered you had an unlisted phone number, and since they had no actual address in Hillsdale, they asked that you call them back at the water plant (call 752-7166 and ask for the water plant) and explain the problem. Then, explained the spokesman, the plant will be glad to remedy the situation.

U.S. Sub Rams And Sinks Ship; Fear Two Dead

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese freighter sank after colliding with an American nuclear-powered submarine, the U.S.S. George Washington, off the southern tip of Japan, the U.S. Navy said today.

The Japan Defense Agency said 13 of the freighter's 15 crew members were rescued.

The Pentagon in Washington said there were no injuries aboard the submarine, and Navy officials who asked not to be identified said there was no damage to the vessel's nuclear propulsion system or the weapons systems on its hull. There were no reports of damage to the hull.

A statement issued by the Pentagon said the submarine was on a routine training operation when it collided Thursday with a small merchant vessel, later identified as the Nissho Maru, in shallow waters about 110 miles southwest of Sasebo, Japan.

The submarine surfaced immediately after the collision to offer assistance, but the freighter was hidden from view by fog and rain, the Navy said.

The submarine was unable to observe personnel casualties or damage to the Japanese vessel before it disappeared. A U.S. aircraft operating with the U.S. submarine conducted a low-level search and sighted no vessel or persons in distress, said a Navy spokesman, adding that the Navy regrets the incident.

The Navy spokesman said a Japanese destroyer rescued most of the freighter's crew early today.

Expect President's Return To The White House On Saturday

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will return to the White House Saturday, barring unforeseen complications, White House sources said today.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said this morning that a decision had been made on when the president would be discharged from the George Washington University Hospital, but he refused to disclose it.

Other sources said, however, that Reagan would return Saturday morning. The president entered the hospital March 30, when he received a chest wound in an assassination attempt.

Doctors and aides said the president, itching to return to the fray over his economic program, "really can't wait to get home."

After a "very good, very restful" night, the president awoke at 6:35 a.m. EST today to watch the launching of the space shuttle on television, said David Prosper, an assistant White House press secretary. Reagan read newspapers, the White House news summary and other briefing materials while awaiting the shuttle's liftoff, Prosper said.

Reagan, making steady progress from the bullet that punctured his chest in an assassination attempt March 30, had his "best day yet" Thursday, said Dr. Dennis O'Leary, the hospital's dean of clinical affairs.

With his temperature normal for more than 36 hours, the president was taken off one of two antibiotics he had been receiving as a precaution against infection, O'Leary said Thursday.

The White House was being readied for him.

First lady Nancy Reagan had a roof-top solarium freshly bedecked with tulips and refurbished for the president's convalescence.

"Most of all what he misses is seeing the sky and trees and the lawn," said Helene von Damm, the president's personal secretary. "He's an outdoor person who thrives on all that beauty, so it's twice as hard on him."

The 70-year-old Reagan has lost some weight in the hospital, and it showed in a color picture taken Wednesday and released a day later by the White House. The president, dressed in a dark blue bathrobe, looked a little tired and drawn.

"You would, too, at this stage," O'Leary said.

He said a patient who underwent the same experience as Reagan could be expected to lose 8 percent to 10 percent of his body weight. For Reagan, who normally weighs 184 pounds, that would be 15 to 18 pounds, but O'Leary said, "He's lost significantly less than that." He said he did not know the president's exact weight loss.

Dear Abby

Celebration Stalls At Countdown

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married May 10, 1956. We were divorced in 1970 and stayed divorced for a year and a half. Then we were married again in November 1972.

We have always celebrated our anniversary on May 10, but now we have a question. Should we celebrate our 25th wedding anniversary on May 10, 1981, and forget about the year and a half we weren't married? Or should we wait until all the time is spent as man and wife actually totals 25 years? This is a small town and a lot of people here know that we were apart for a year and a half. What do we say if somebody mentions it?

We'd really like to have a nice 25th anniversary celebration in May.

TWO ANNIVERSARIES, ONE MAN

DEAR TWO: Have your 25th wedding anniversary in May 1981, and if somebody mentions it, tell 'em it's "new math."

DEAR ABBY: I am almost 15 and have a brother who is 11. We both have our own rooms, although we might as well have only one between us. My problem started last summer when my mother put a cot in my bedroom so my brother could sleep there. The reason was to save energy by running only one air-conditioner instead of two. I didn't put up much of a fuss, although I hated not having my privacy.

It's nearly a year later, and my brother is still sleeping in my room. He uses the excuse that he has nightmares about robbers and murderers. Maybe this is true, but I think he should face this problem and sleep in his own bedroom.

I've talked to my mother about it and get nowhere. She says she can't make him sleep in his own room if he says he has nightmares.

My brother thinks because he sleeps in my room, it's his, too, and he is in it during the daytime. Now I have absolutely no privacy. Don't you think I should have a room of my own?

BROTHER TROUBLE

DEAR TROUBLE: I'm all for conserving energy, but the nightmare excuse is a horse of a different color! Brother should sleep in his own room. Perhaps a night-light would eliminate his nightmares. If it doesn't, he should get professional help.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more "other woman" story? I became the other woman when I was a girl of 19. He was 43 at the time. I worked for him (but don't say doing what). He was married and had children (but don't say how many).

I wasn't particularly sexy-looking, but I was competent, always available and had nothing else in my life but him. He was a workaholic and we spent a lot of time together, in the office and out. If there was any gossip about us, I never heard it. I was like a piece of office equipment.

I never dated anyone else, but it was no sacrifice for me. I loved him. He told me he loved me, too, and when his kids were grown he'd leave his wife and marry me. I never pressured him, and I was content to let time take care of things.

Well, time did. I am 38 now and he is 62. His wife died four months ago and yesterday he married a 27-year-old girl he had known for only six weeks!

Now I know how Jean Harris (the woman who shot that diet doctor) felt.

WHY ARE EMERALDS GREEN?

Emeralds have been treasured since ancient man first discovered their appealing color and sparkle. The Roman Emperor Nero used an emerald to shade his eyes while viewing the games in the Colosseum. He claimed the color soothed his eyes while it diminished the sun's glare. Quite an impressive predecessor to sunglasses, wouldn't you say?

Did you know that the same element that makes rubies red makes emeralds green? It's true. The chemical chromium is the cause of the beautiful colors of each of these gemstones. How can the same chemical cause different colors? Well, it has to do with the effect of the chemical on the gem mineral's basic structure. It's just one of the many marvels of the gem kingdom.

The unique green of fine emerald is sometimes referred to as "grass green." There are very few other colored stones that even approach this well-loved color. As a matter of fact, color is the top consideration in evaluating an emerald, with clarity following in second place.

Emerald is known as the May birthstone which makes it a fine choice for birthdays in that month. If you have a May birthday on your calendar, you might consider a gift of emerald jewelry.

Appreciation Award Given Miss Taylor

Miss Alya Ray Taylor was recently honored by the Greenville Chapter No. 149, Order of Eastern Star. She was given an appreciation plaque for 31 years of service as the group's secretary.

A native of Pitt County, she attended schools here and graduated from East Carolina Teachers College. She taught home economics in the county for 39 years.

Miss Taylor is an avid reader and enjoys playing bridge. She is a charter member of St. James United Methodist Church, a member of the N. C. Retired School Personnel, National Retired Teachers Association and past president of the Business and Professional Women's Club and was their outstanding member in 1965.

She also holds membership in the American Association of Retired Persons, Greenville Woman's Club, Pitt County Historical Society as well as being a charter member and past president of the Alpha Delta Kappa Sorority.

Miss Taylor joined the Eastern Star in 1945 and served as its Worthy Matron in 1949-50. She was District Deputy Grand Matron of the Seventh District in 1955-56 and also served as Grand Representative, Registration Committee of the Grand Chapter for several years. A life membership was given to her in 1980.

Officers Are Selected

Officers for the coming year were named at the recent meeting of Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held at the home of Mrs. Carol Bishton. Mrs. Ann Simo was co-hostess.

Named were Mrs. Linda McGehee, president, Mrs. Lana Hill, vice president, Mrs. Ann Phiefer, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Evelyn Barousse, recording secretary, and Mrs. Fran Rostar, treasurer.

The group discussed plans for forming an Exemplar Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi here.

Mrs. Simo gave the program on Easter crafts and techniques for decorating.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

An off-season version of a blueberry delight.

2 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup butter

1/4 cup sugar
1 large egg
1/2 cup milk

2 cups frozen blueberries, rinsed in cold water but not thawed

Streusel recipe follows

Stir together the flour, baking powder and salt. Cream butter and sugar; beat in egg; add flour mixture and milk; stir just until dry ingredients are moistened. Fold in berries.

Turn into a greased and floured 9-inch springform pan. Sprinkle with Streusel. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 45 to 50 minutes. (If Streusel browns too much toward end of baking, cover loosely with foil.) Cool on wire rack for 5 minutes; remove springform band. Serve warm.

Streusel: Stir together 1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar, 3 tablespoons flour and 2 teaspoons cinnamon. Cut in 3 tablespoons flour and 2 teaspoons cinnamon. Cut in 3 tablespoons butter until particles are fine; mix in 1/2 cup finely chopped pecans or walnuts.

Scholars Weekend Planned For ECU

ECU News Bureau
About 120 high school juniors are expected to attend Scholars Weekend April 11-13, at East Carolina University.

The purpose for the special weekend program is to acquaint selected high school students with ECU and campus activities. Those invited to attend achieved high scores on Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT) and were recommended by their principals and guidance counselors.

Activities on Sunday include: registration, a luncheon, discussions on scholarships, financial aid, and campus life, academic interest group meetings and a banquet Sunday evening featuring an address by Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, ECU Chancellor.

On Monday, the students will visit classes and attend a luncheon where ECU Honors programs and Honor societies will be discussed. Various recreational activities will also be available.

Scholars Weekend is directed by an ad hoc committee comprised of ECU faculty and staff. Dr. Charles R. Coble, an ECU professor of Science Education, is chairman.

Pitt Schools Represented

The Pitt County school system was represented at Public Education Day at the Civic Center in Raleigh by Ott Alford, Donna Ware, Jane Parker, Margaret Barnhill, Mary Blow, Jackie Gardner, Barbara Tempenny, Curtis Worthington, Edith Parker, and Pam Bacon.

They joined 1500 other parents, school board members, teachers, administrators, legislators and educational office personnel for this event sponsored by the N.C. Alliance for Public Education.

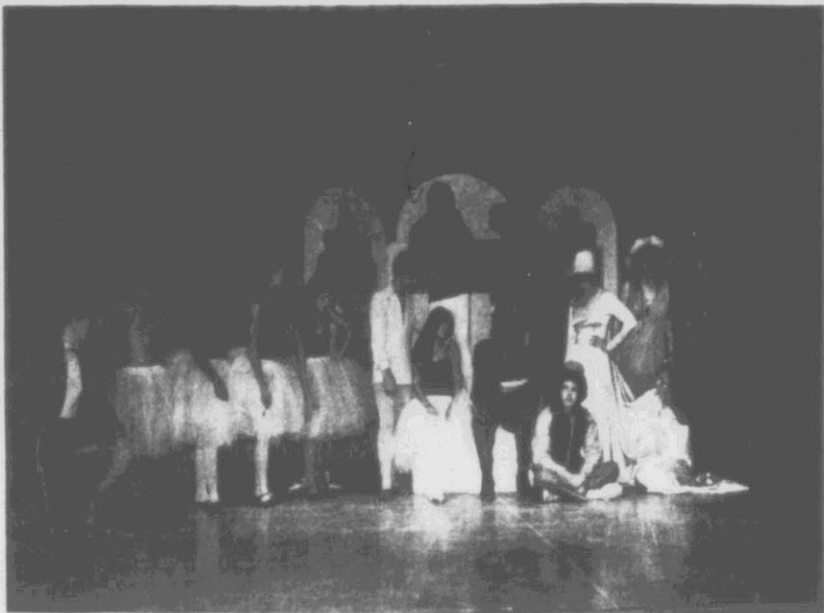

Gov. James B. Hunt was the keynote speaker in the morning session. Lt. Gov. James Green, also gave a luncheon speech.

Conley Cadets In Competition

Cadets in the Junior ROTC at D.H. Conley High School participated in statewide competition at Campbell College recently.

The day-long competition, for boys and girls, included drills with and without arms and fancy drills. Supervisors for the Conley team were Lt. Col. Emory Vines, Capt. Reginald Johnson and 2nd Lt. Mary Mitchell.

The Conley JROTC also sent a group of cadets to the East Carolina University campus this week to help in the annual ECU Special Olympics. It was the third year the Conley cadets have assisted in the program.

School Choices Difficult

The Pitt Board of Education has submitted a budget exceeding $7 million to the county commissioners.

It includes $5,151,350.18 for current expense and $2,228,000 for capital outlay.

Included in the capital outlay would be funds for completion of the Ayden Middle School, truck replacement, media furniture at Grifton School, sewage system and land at G. R. Whitfield, lunchroom at Chicod, lunchroom fund at Pachtolus and new classrooms at Belvoir and A. G. Cox.

In the current expense funds is an item of $17,000 for teacher supplements and $1,917,160 for food service. The supplement money was requested because the fixed supplements have run over the budget for several years. The increase food service budget was requested because of anticipated cuts in the federal funding of lunchrooms.

The proposed budget doesn't appear to include any luxuries; yet it is likely the overall appropriation will be pared some by the county commissioners.

Ultimately some choices will have to be made between desirable needs and what is most essential. The choices will be difficult, but the times make them necessary.

Tobacco Takes A Shot

Tobacco took another shot in the House of Representatives when Rep. Bobbi Fiedler, R-Calif., introduced a bill to stop federal funding for the tobacco program.

The bill went to the House Budget Committee, where it took some hard overnight work to get it killed Wednesday.

The 18-11 vote followed party lines with only two Democrats voting for it, and two Republicans — James G. Martin and W. Eugene Johnson, both of North Carolina — voting against.

The day was saved for tobacco by some shrewd lobbying, but it again demonstrates that the tobacco program faces constant danger in today's Washington.

THIS AFTERNOON

Ft. Bragg Lesson

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Insight as to what demands the North Carolina Association of Educators would put forth should unionization of public school teachers take place can be gained from a review of contract demands now on the table at Fort Bragg.

Teachers in the school system on that military reservation have elected the NCAE to represent them as a union. The contract proposals, until now kept in close confidence by the negotiators, were prepared by state and federal representatives of the National Education Association and the NCAE.

Despite a preamble which describes the proposals as a commitment "to provide the best available free public education to the children..." the chief concern of the lengthy document is job protection for teachers.

Those close to the situation say the contract ingredients represent a number of items high on the list of priorities for the NCAE at schools all across North Carolina. Thus, there is more than casual interest in the contents.

30-Day Tenure

The most startling request is that teachers be given tenure just 30 days after employment. State law now requires three years on the job for tenure-status in which dismissal without complicated records keeping and administrative or legal proceedings is ruled out.

Union leaders would also be involved in designing the school calendar, and in determining school opening and closing times.

Teachers could not be required to report for duty earlier than 15 minutes before class time; nor remain more than 15 minutes at the close of classes. Each NCAE member would have a 30-minute duty-free lunch in a given month. If an individual were assigned extra duty beyond this limit, payment of $20 per hour or portion of an hour would be required.

Working when the weather acts up is a major concern, and NCAE representatives want to be involved in cancellation of classes, and scheduling of makeup days.

But without administrative complications, the contract would allow teachers to dismiss class and go home if the temperature in the classroom rises above 85 degrees or drops below 60 degrees.

A strict seniority system would govern changes in job status as a result of enrollment declines or other administrative changes. All holidays would be observed, and in addition members would be given 20 days sick leave with unlimited accumulation; five days personal leave; five days bereavement leave; and three days religious leave. That's a possible 33 of 180 work days.

Salaries

Also, classes will be cancelled so members may attend the NCAE convention, and with seniority, members would qualify for a paid one semester sabbatical periodically.

The organization wants to have a word in curriculum and testing policies, and it is especially pointed out that student test scores can not be used in evaluating a teacher's performance.

Other Editors Say Industry-Hunters

(Winston-Salem Sentinel)

Which is more important in attracting high-technology industry to North Carolina: the performance of high school students on national achievement tests; or building a multimillion-dollar microelectronic research center?

Gov. Jim Hunt didn't get the right answer to that question — student performance — although he is certainly to be commended for his efforts to attract industry.

Hunt lead a party of aides, industry-hunting specialists and politicians on a mission to California last November. Evidently he stirred some interest in North Carolina among officials of more than one of that state's microelectronic firms — enough, at least, to cause Gov. Edmund G. Brown to sit up and take notice.

Hunt claims to have piqued their interest with his plan to build a $24.4 million electronic research center in the Research Triangle Park area. The center would help train scientists and engineers the industry must have to sustain its rapid growth. "You've got to show them you have an educated workforce," Hunt explains.

No doubt that is a factor. But Solomon J. Buchsbaum, an executive vice president of Bell Laboratories in Murray Hill, N.J., says professional people will be more concerned about the quality of education their children would receive than research facilities, in deciding whether to relocate or expand into North Carolina.

Public school quality is "probably more important than housing", Buchsbaum said in a recent interview.

Housing is Hunt's ace in the high stakes industry-hunting game.

"I've got room", he tells the captains of California's microelectronics industries. "I've got a $300,000 house (at California prices) available for $100,000."

North Carolina does, indeed, have room — room for new industry and housing, nd room for improvement of its public school systems. That's a fact Hunt should remind the budget-makers in Raleigh as legislators consider cuts which have been proposed in education appropriations.

Also, the governor had best not neglect his volunteer service — tutoring in one of Raleigh's public schools.

COLLIDING WITH ROMANCE

A couple recently married had been brought together in a quite violent fashion. Their cars collided. After the crash the man in the case offered to drive the lady to traffic court where together they might report the accident. The lady's acceptance of the lift started the romance on its way. They went to Mexico on their honeymoon, and this time no car. They went by plane.

Most of us at some time have had the experience of being ushered into some happy future by a

TRANQUILIZERS TAKE EFFECT SLOWLY!

BY ART BUCHWALD

They All Sniff Mace

Don't believe what you read about Hollywood. From the recent stories in the newspapers and magazines, everybody in show business is into cocaine. It's not true. They're into Mace. For those who don't follow self-defense, Mace is a gas that can paralyze an attacker for as long as three hours.

To hear people out in Los Angeles tell it, Southern California is now more dangerous than El Salvador, and no one knows when he or she is going to be assaulted.

On my visit there last week, all the table conversation had to do with burglar alarm systems, private police services, but mostly Mace. There are hundreds of classes being held all over town in the use of the gas, and you have to go to school for 2 1/2 hours before you can be licensed to carry a Mace can in your handbag or your pants pocket.

I didn't realize how nervous everyone was until I went to visit a producer friend of mine named Alain Bernheim at MGM Studios.

His secretary asked suspiciously, "Do you have an appointment?"

I said, "No," and she took a can out of her desk and gave me two squirts in the face. I hit the floor for an hour and a half. When Bernheim finally revived me, he apologized. "I'm sorry," he said. "She's new on the job. She is supposed to use a karate blow to your neck first."

He took me to lunch in the studio commissary.

The head waiter asked us if we had a reservation and Bernheim said, "No, I forgot to call."

The head waiter whistled twice, and two Doberman pinschers leaped out of the kitchen and went for our throats. Fortunately, Billy Wilder, the director, who speaks German, called them off and let us sit at his table.

"Things are really tough out here," I said.

"You have to be on your toes," Walter Matthau said. "Last week they let in a guy without a reservation and he mugged two stunt men right in front of the salad bar."

Jack Lemmon came over to the table and I got up to shake hands with him. Two private security guards jumped me from behind and wrestled me to the floor.

"It's OK, boys, he's a friend," Jack said. "But nice work anyway."

Bernheim excused himself to call his house to find out if everything was safe, and then came back to the table. "Marge Mace the grocery delivery boy by mistake and had to take him to the hospital."

"How many squirts?" Matthau asked.

"Two."

"We always give our grocery boy three," he said. "Everyone in the neighborhood squirts him when he comes to the back door, and now two shots from the can doesn't even faze him."

After lunch, I decided to go shopping in Beverly Hills. I went to a very fancy store on Rodeo Drive.

"Can I help you?" a salesman asked.

"I'm just looking," I said.

He took out his can of Mace and was about to let me have it.

"Wait," I cried. "I have a credit card."

He took the card and said, "It better be good or you're a

Democrats Strike Back

By DONALD ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — After weeks of licking their political wounds and agonizing over how best to combat a skilled salesman in the White House and a Republican resurgence around the country, Democrats are on the offensive.

With a well-orchestrated campaign designed to hold public attention throughout the week, the Democrats came up with their alternative budget on Monday, some political rhetoric on Tuesday and a major tax-cut bill on Thursday.

The clearest theme that emerged from all the activity was a portrayal of Ronald Reagan and the Republican Party as the president and party of the wealthy.

It's a political tactic Democrats have used in the past with varying success. No one can predict whether it will work this time, but to a lot of Democrats, it beats doing nothing.

Since Nov. 4, the Democrats have been staggering around like a badly defeated army, many of their troops looking shellshocked, others sounding like they were ready to surrender or desert.

Given the results of the 1980 elections, that wasn't too surprising. Not only did the party lose the White House to Reagan, but it ended up as a minority in the Senate for the first time in 26 years.

Then Reagan hit town and started displaying the kind of skill that served him so well during the campaign. Although a political force in the country for more than a decade, Reagan was an outsider to Washington, but he quickly showed he had a keen sense of how to operate in the nation's capital.

The new president stroked the power centers, including those still occupied by Democrats, and he played skilfully on the general acceptance that people wanted something done about inflation and if that meant less government, so be it.

The Democrats listened and they waited for the specifics to emerge.

Reagan put his program out in stages. He told the nation on Feb. 5 that the federal budget was out of control, that the nation had "stalled the judgment day" but now was "out of time."

Those were strong words, and Reagan followed two weeks later with a speech to Congress announcing more than $40 billion in cuts from the budget submitted weeks earlier by Jimmy Carter.

The next day he correctly forecast that the fight was more likely to center on his tax-cut plan than on the budget cuts.

Despite predictions from some congressional Democrats that Reagan would have to settle for far less than he wanted in budget cuts, it now looks like he'll get pretty close to the total he requested, even if there is some shift in priorities.

The alternative budget being pushed by the Democratic majority in the House would restore some of the social program cuts proposed by Reagan and would be less generous to the Pentagon.

On taxes, the Democrats have come up with a one-year plan they say is tilted more toward lower- and middle-income Americans.

It was left to Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt in a speech Tuesday to sound the theme underlying those alternative proposals.

Manatt focused on the area where he and other Democrats have decided Reagan is most vulnerable.

He said the new administration is using the economic crisis "to roll back 50 years of progressive tax and social policy" and then added:

"They want more for the wealthy and less for the average American family."

To the editor:

I read the article in Sunday's "Daily Reflector" pertaining to discipline in the schools.

I don't think the teachers have enough to say over discipline. If they are capable enough to teach, they are to discipline. Part of the problem is the parents. Let the teacher send for the parents or wish a child's parent would show up. Do you think they do? No.

In the article, it said a girl cut two boys on the arm. I think if each homeroom teacher would have a free-for-all shake-down twice a month, and check these students to see what they are carrying, it would help.

I can feel for the parent from Greenville that was telling about personal items being taken from her children. I get so tired of sending towels out to Conley (D. H. Conley High School). You know if your child comes home with something that doesn't belong to him, I would be right on the phone calling the school.

Some might think that a towel doesn't cost much. When they take two at a time it will.

I think discipline in the school should be there and at home, too.

Economic Unpredictabilities

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A good example of the unpredictability of economic matters is offered by the latest opinions about interest rates. Take your pick: They're going to rise or they're going to fall.

The split seems to be somewhere near midfield, and those on either side are convinced that the direction over the next few months will be in their favor. They advise you to make plans accordingly.

They are deadly serious, these forecasters, and they have spent many millions of dollars and hours of effort on research, on supplying data to the econometric models, and on writing learned papers.

Their conclusions are offered in bales of stock advisories, $250-a-year investment letters, Congressional testimony, seminars, columns, academic papers, broker recommendations, and warnings or promises from various parties with a vested interest in one direction or the other.

But it seems that no amount of effort, or theories, econometric models, electronic computers, "inside" information, hope or direct revelation can produce a consensus on where interest rates are going.

What these things do prove, and quite conclusively, is that the future of interest rates is unpredictable, and that given the same data two humans almost certainly will arrive at different conclusions.

And when forecasts are based on different data and assumptions, the conclusions can range all over the universe in the same manner as conclusions reached with absolutely no research at all.

For millions of people, one of the most meaningful rates these days is that for home mortgages. With rates stuck at about 15.5 percent, according to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, homebuyers are waiting for declines before committing themselves, homebuilders are cutting back starts, and homeowners are biding their time before selling.

In other words, the whole industry is sluggish, looking to the future for better times. That, of course, makes forecasting the direction of interest rates more than a mere passtime. The eyes of millions examine those forecasts, and then try to base their future action on them.

Alas, if you believe the people who lend, such as the U.S. League of Savings Associations, or the people who help sell, such as the National Association of Realtors, you'll expect rates to fall to 13 percent.

The mortgage rate follows the prime, said one lender a couple of months ago. But the mortgage rate hasn't followed the prime; it has dropped barely at all since then, while the prime has fallen 2 points.

You may turn then to some stock market analysts with a tendency to think that too much money is "tied up" in housing, and read their forecasts of even higher mortgage rates later this year.

Some of them are Fed watchers, meaning they study the behavior of the Federal Reserve Board for clues to the future. Often they miss clues, but at any rate one of their latest readings is that the Fed is more concerned than ever about inflation, and that it will therefore adhere to a policy of high interest rates to combat it.

What few will say is that the future is always in the process of being made, and so is all but unpredictable over the short term, and that what makes the forecast of interest rates even more difficult is the suspicion that even the Fed isn't always certain of what it is doing.

Add the imponderables, such as wars, natural catastrophes and other factors beyond the expertise of economic forecasters, and you realize that nobody knows much more than you know about the next few weeks.

It's an uncertain world we live in, and to adapt to it means to assume more risk than usual, even in making plans to buy a house.

I left the store as fast as I could and went back to the Beverly Wilshire Hotel. They were holding a Mace class in the ballroom and I signed up for the course. In 2 1/2 hours I had my own Mace can. I went upstairs and waited patiently. At five the knock came on the door.

"Who is it?" I said.

"It's me, honey," my wife said.

I put the chain on the door and opened it two inches and went, "Squirt, Squirt, Squirt."

When she finally woke up and asked me why I did it, I told her, "In L.A., it's every man for himself."

Accountants Will Have Meeting

The April meeting of the Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Association of Accountants will be held at the Beef Barn on St. Andrews Drive April 15 at 6:15 p.m.

The monthly meetings serve as technical training dinners with professional speakers as guests. Topics cover a range of subjects pertaining to the accounting and business fields.

The speaker for this month is Mike Keavy of the IBM General Systems Division in Atlanta, Ga. He will speak on "New Developments in Computer Technology."

The Eastern Carolina Chapter, headquartered in Greenville, is a rapidly growing segment of the national association. The association offers educational and professional development with services such as the Certificate in Management Accounting (CMA). The program requires the applicant to pass a five-part examination and complete specific educational and professional experience. The financial manager and management account acquires professional recognition from this program. Membership is offered to any person interested in the services and objectives of the association. Life As It's Lived

Parental Standards Do Lower With 2nd Child

By GAIL MICHAELS

I'm always intrigued by studies on the psychological effect of birth order. According to these studies, the oldest child is more compulsive and achievement-oriented. In contrast, the youngest child is more gregarious and easy-going.

If my family is any example, the reasons for this aren't hard to fathom. There is a tremendous difference in the way we treated Meg as a baby and the way we treat Zachary.

I really felt that my parenting abilities were on trial every time Meg appeared in public. Whenever we went out, I dressed her like a Madame Alexander doll.

I wasn't much better at home. As an avowed feminist, I knew that I had to let her explore and get dirty. But I didn't have to let her stay that way. A spot of oatmeal or a grass stain on a romper leg necessitated a complete change of clothes. I spent more on detergent than I did on food.

UTILITIES TO MEET

The Board of Commissioners of the Greenville Utilities Commission will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the utilities building board room at the intersection of Fifth and Washington Streets.

My standards aren't quite as high with Zachary. He's lucky if he gets his face washed more than once a day. When he spits up, I wipe him off with a paper towel. When his diapers prove inadequate, I use the soak test. If he leaves a ring where he sits, he gets clean creepers. Otherwise, I leave well enough alone.

The drop in my standard of cleanliness isn't confined to the children's clothes. Everything that touched Meg's lips had to be sterilized. If her pacifier touched the rug, I washed it in hot water before she could have it back. I try to make a habit of washing Zachary's pacifier once every two or three weeks.

Zachary also chews on keys. Meg never did. And Meg's nursery was scrubbed regularly with Lysol. Zachary's nursery is covered with a film of indeterminate origin.

In fact, the list of differences seems endless. Meg never slept in the bed with us. We were afraid we'd roll over on her. Zachary gets thrown in between us anytime he's awake for more than 10 minutes between the hours of midnight and 6 a.m.

Meg was rarely allowed into the kitchen. And when she was, cabinet locks prevented her from leaving things in too much disarray. Zachary spends half his time in the kitchen. When he isn't bowling with the onions and potatoes, he's helping me unload the dishwasher. The dishes may have gone through the wash cycle, then again, they probably haven't.

The other night as I finished a leisurely supper while Zachary methodically rolled cans off the pantry shelves, Phillip couldn't keep from commenting, "We are certainly more relaxed with Zachary. Do you think it's because we're more experienced?"

I don't know whether it's that or whether we're just too tired to care.

award for outstanding support of art and artists in eastern North Carolina, and for support of the Goldsboro Art Center, while the Weyerhaeuser Company won for its contributions to several groups, including the Craven County Art Gallery, the Washington High School Band, and the Charlotte Nature Museum. In addition, the company's fundation has agreed to fund, at $10,000 a year, a "Weyerhaeuser Series" of concerts by the N.C. Symphony in Beaufort, Craven, Martin, Onslow and Washington Counties.

First Union won its award for continuing support of visual arts and artists across North Carolina, support of the Arts and Science Council of Charlotte, and for designing a new office in Fayetteville around a permanent collection of 50 original works by North Carolina artists, and Dillard Paper Co. for its support of the Weatherspoon Art Gallery at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, and for sponsorship of the annual "Art on Paper" exhibition.

R. J. Reynolds was cited for its sustained commitment to the arts and humanities of the entire state. In 1980 alone, the company pledged $1.5 million to Wake Forest University for a music wing at the school's fine arts center and $750,000 to Salem College for a student life center, as well as funds for the N.C. School of the Arts, the Winston-Salem Arts Council, the N.C. Symphony, the N.C. Museum of Art and many other projects.

Hunt told the 200 persons from across the state who gathered for the awards program, "If we have this dinner here again in three or four years, you'll be traveling on a nice four-lane highway from Wilson to Greenville."

The Governor said, "Those of us here tonight are alike in at least one respect — we each place a great amount of value on the arts and humanities. More importantly, we are each seeking ways to ensure the continued vitality and growth of our state's cultural resources."

Saying the firms being honored, "have each given of their time and resources to enhance the cultural well-being of their communities and state," Hunt emphasized, "they care about their communities," and, "do not wait to be asked for a donation to a non-profit cause. Instead, they make themselves available to a host of worthwhile causes."

According to the governor, "These businesses are aware that support of the arts and humanities is more than charity. The cultural environment of our state — the livability of North Carolina's many fine cities and towns — is an important aspect of our economic development goals and our industrial recruitment efforts." And because of the state's cultural heritage, "our communities are exciting, vital places to work, learn and raise a family."

Saying the 1980s may bring new and greater challenges, and see reductions in federal support for humanities and the arts, Hunt pledged that, "we will maintain our strong support for the arts in this state... with your help."

"Our collective energies must be focused on maintaining and improving the quality of life and at providing better jobs and opportunities so that all our citizens can enjoy the arts and humanities," Hunt continued.

East Carolina University chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer said, "it is fitting" for the awards program to be here, "when the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival is taking place."

Brewer pointed out that the university's School of Art is the only accredited school in North Carolina and, "the largest in the South," while the School of Music is, "the best in the Southeast." Theater arts, at ECU, he added, are, "absolutely superb."

With 1650 students majoring in arts and humanities, ECU, Brewer emphasized, "is committed to ever-improving excellence." He added that, "we are indeed especially delighted about this award," going to First Federal Savings and Loan, because the president of that firm, Troy Pate, is chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees.

Hunt was assisted in the awards presentations by Sara W. Hodgkins, Secretary of the Department of Cultural Resources, while J. Tylee Wilson, president of R. J. Reynolds, and a member of the Governor's Business Council on the Arts and Humanities, acted as master of ceremonies.

A. C. Monk and Co. of Farmville, sponsored the awards ceremony and banquet.

Guests attending the awards program were honored at a reception at Chancellor Brewer's home prior to the banquet.

Hunt was honored this morning at a breakfast sponsored by the Greenville Art Museum.

Recess Puts Reagan Budget In 'Limbo'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress headed for a two-week recess today, leaving President Reagan's economic package in limbo: rejected for its deficits by a Republican-dominated committee in the Senate and spurned for a Democratic alternative by budget writers in the House.

"We'll just let everybody see how they feel in two weeks," a disappointed Senate Budget Committee Chairman Peter V. Domenici, R-N.M., said late Thursday after the panel voted 12-9 to reject an economic blueprint drawn to the administration's specifications.

Congress was to begin its Easter recess today and return April 27.

The defeat in the Senate committee was a stunning setback for Reagan. Until then, Republicans had stuck with the president as the panel endorsed various parts of the plan.

Once the package was put together, however, it fell apart. Three Republicans declared the budget deficits too large and joined nine Democrats who didn't like Reagan's three-year tax cut in rejecting it.

Jarvis Church Program Set

A program on the life of Christ will begin Holy Week at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church Monday at 10 a.m.

Mary Ann Mayo of Foursquare Church near here will speak on prayer and self-denial.

A Greenville native and former sociology student at East Carolina University, she has spoken widely on Christian topics, including at the Interhealing Counseling Center in Chapel Hill. She and her husband, Luther Mayo, are the parents of 10 children.

On the program with Mrs. Mayo are Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, who will introduce her; Mrs. Ed Clement, United Methodist Women's president; and Christian personhood committee members, Mrs. Joseph M. Taft Jr., Mrs. James W. Brewer, Mrs. W. H. Brown, Mrs. Orren E. Dowd Sr., Mrs. Karl Faser, Mrs. Sally Klingenschmitt, Mrs. Phoebe Owens, Mrs. H. Lyman Ormond Jr., Mrs. Jay Pratt, Mrs. Thomas Seagrave, Mrs. H. Ted Smith, Mrs. Sam B. Underwood Jr. and Mrs. Kelly Wallace. Music will be rendered by Mrs. Billy Stinson, soloist, and Mrs. Hope Anderson, organist.

YOUTH DAY
Eldress Shirley Braxton will hold youth day services at St. Matthew Church Sunday at 11 a.m. At 3 p.m. Fannie Gatlin will be in concert. Janice Shepard will be her sponsor. Eldress Phillis Thomas will be in charge of 7:30 services. The pastor, Hattie M. Cobb invites the public.

REVIVAL
A revival will be held at Elm Grove F.W.B. Church near Ayden beginning April 13 through 17 with the pastor, Rev. Elmer Jackson Jr. The public is invited.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said today the administration regarded the vote "as a bump in the road" toward passage of Reagan's economic program that should not be perceived as a long-term defeat.

"It merely involves a tactical dispute among Republicans about the timing of the budget savings proposed," Speakes said.

Ed Dale, a spokesman for the White House Office of Management and Budget, said, "There is concern about the vote, but it's not irretrievable. We plan to continue to work with the Senate leadership on this."

In the House Budget Committee, meanwhile, majority Democrats pushed their own economic plan, including a one-year tax cut instead of Reagan's three-year package, a balanced budget in 1983 instead of 1984 and more spending on social programs than the administration recommends.

The vote was a virtually party-line 17-13 on the $714.5 billion budget for next year with a $25.6 billion deficit.

All 12 committee Republicans and Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, voted against it, but Republicans insisted they would have enough support from conservative Democrats on the House floor to pass a revised administration package.

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, ranking Republican on the committee, and Gramm, a conservative Democrat, offered a fresh budget proposal that both said was constructed with the blessing of David A. Stockman, the president's budget director.

Democrats only have a 51-vote majority in the House and significant defections by the 44 members of the Conservative Democratic Forum could give Republicans the upper hand.

The substitute drawn up by House Republicans calls for spending $689.2 billion next year with a $38.9 billion deficit. It predicts a modest surplus in 1984, Reagan's target year for balancing the budget.

The Senate panel endorsed Reagan's call for a three-year, 30 percent cut in individual taxes and a host of reductions throughout government, but the committee staff concluded that there still would be a budget deficit of $53.8 billion next year and $44.7 billion in 1984.

The Reagan administration had forecast only a $45 billion deficit in 1982.

Sen. William L. Armstrong of Colorado, one of the Republicans who joined all nine committee Democrats, in voting against the Reagan program, said, "What the Republicans who voted against this said is, 'We want to come up with more savings.'" He said the message from Democrats was that they "don't approve of the economic assumptions and the tax cut."

City Council.....

In other business, the council adopted an ordinance permitting the placement of a 12-foot combination parking/bikeway lane on both sides of Red Banks Road from 14th Street to Charles Boulevard.

Ron Sewell, director of engineering, said that the shared parking/bikeway lane involves a pilot project and he noted that the state has recognized the provision of seven feet for parking vehicles and five feet for the bike lane as an acceptable method. Greenville is probably the first city in the state to try the method, he said.

Albert Smith, resident manager of Oakmont Square Apartments, objected to the parking/bikeway lane provision, saying that he did not feel motor vehicle traffic along Red Banks Road should be impeded by bikes. He cited a heavy traffic flow, especially during school hours.

Sewell said it is felt the street could handle up to 6,000 cars a day and if traffic flow reaches the corridor's potential, the city would take a close look at the bike lane situation.

The Council approved a request by the Engineering Department to remove parking on 14th Street from Broad Street to Beatty Street and approved a request to erect four-way stop signs at the intersection of Pitt and Howell streets on a 30-day temporary basis. Sewell said that after the 30-day period is up, permanent stop signs will be placed on Pitt Street at the Pitt-Howell intersection.

Other council action included:

— Reappointment of Wilson McDowell and Ms. Grace Smith to second three-year terms on the Beautification, Clean-Up, and Litter Control Committee, and naming of Ms. Sylvia Wheelless, who filled an unexpired term, to her first full term;

— Reappointment of Phil Dickerson, who was serving an unexpired term on the Environmental Advisory Commission, to a full three-year term;

— Reappointment of James P. Hagans to a second five-year term on the Parking Authority;

— Scheduling of public hearings for the May meeting on two amendments to the Zoning Ordinance and on three requests for property rezoning action;

— Approval of applications by Russell Whichard and Ms. Geneva Harrison for renewal of permits for mobile homes at 101 S. Summit Street and 152 W. Gum Road, respectively;

— Adoption of a resolution authorizing the execution of an agreement with the N.C. Department of Justice, Police Information Network for continued use of the network terminal;

— Adoption of a resolution approving the sale by the Redevelopment Commission of a 23,482 square foot parcel in Southside to Reynolds May for $4,000;

— Adoption of a resolution declaring two Mercedes Benz and two GMC buses as surplus to the city's needs and authorizing the sale of the vehicles;

— Approval of an ordinance amending the budget to provide $3,300 for a Public Works pilot project to install lifts on two refuse trucks so that the residential routes may be reduced from a four-man to a three-man crew;

— Approval of a right-of-way encroachment agreement between the Department of Transportation and the city for Contract II of the 14th Street improvement project;

— Approval of a request by the Rathskeller for permission to construct a cement block wall and roof over the rear service door and steps of the business, covering some seven by nine feet of an alley dedicated to the city;

— Scheduling of a public hearing for May on a request by Greenville Cable TV for approval of "bulk rate" and "stand alone" converter rental fees; and — Adoption of a resolution acknowledging and agreeing to comply with revised effluent limits for the proposed wastewater treatment plant.

Research Paper Is Presented

Lloyd Flanagan is presenting an original research paper today at the state meeting of the North Carolina Student Academy of Science at St. Andrews Presbyterian College, Lenoir.

The paper's title is "The Effects of Various Culture Media on the Growth of Protozoa." He won first place in the Senior Biological Division at the District VII meeting at East Carolina University last month.

A sophomore at D. H. Conley High School, Flanagan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Flanagan.

Arts Funding Method Urged

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Cultural institutions will have to apply their creative powers to fund raising in the face of proposed federal budget cuts, the new chairman of the North Carolina Business Council on the Arts and Humanities said Thursday.
J. Tylee Wilson said, "I suspect that in the real world, the continued well-being of the arts is less dependent on decisions being made in Washington than on actions taken in cities all over the nation where cultural activities are a way of life."
Wilson, president of R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc., was appointed chairman of the arts panel earlier Thursday by Gov. Jim Hunt.
Cooperation is needed especially "when the federal government and the people who pay taxes to support it have come to an apparent conclusion that government financial resources are — or should be — finite," he said.
Art institutions and patrons must realize that dwindling finances need better investment and more effective use, Wilson said.
Wilson said that as an alternative to federal support of the arts, cultural institutions could:
—Set up matching grant funds.
—Seek legislation for government insurance of traveling museum exhibits.
—Solicit more corporate contributions.
—Improve management of existing cultural institutions.
Corporate contributions to the arts have increased from $22 million in 1966 to $436 million in 1979, Wilson said. But nearly 50 percent of that money comes from less than 1 percent of the nation's corporations, he added.
Wilson's company was one of six North Carolina businesses to win Governor's Business Awards in the Arts and Humanities Thursday night. Others were the Burroughs Wellcome Co. of the Research Triangle Park, Dillard Paper Co. of Greensboro, First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Goldsboro, First Union National Bank of Charlotte and Weyerhaeuser Co. of New Bern.

The annual awards recognize substantial support by businesses of the state's cultural resources in the community or statewide. R.J. Reynolds was among the recipients for the third year in a row.

Ayden Students View Opera

AYDEN — Students at the Ayden Elementary and Ayden Grammar schools viewed "The Toy Shop," as performed by the North Carolina Opera, in a special program Thursday as part of the Eastern Area Arts Festival.
The children's opera tells the story of dolls that come to life, the lonely toymaker who treats the dolls like children and a magician who wants to steal the dolls. It was written by Seymour Barab.
The performance was sponsored by Pitt County Community Schools in cooperation with the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.
CHURCH SERVICE

Advocate Highway Funds From Taxes On Alcohol

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With Gov. Jim Hunt preparing to unveil his plan for raising more highway money, legislators heard Thursday from ministers and other religious leaders who want to extract it from higher taxes on beer and liquor.

Supporters of higher alcohol taxes squared off against representatives of the beverage industries in a public hearing, while Hunt — who stayed away from the event — told reporters he still hasn't finally decided what he will recommend to legislators when he goes on statewide television April 27.

Debate over the higher taxes came on a busy legislative day, as the House got into a parliamentary squabble over the status of a bill that would drop the state minimum wage for the elderly and the young.

Meanwhile, the House Banking Committee, wrestling with higher usury limits, saw a new proposal brought forward that would rewrite most state lending laws.

About a dozen people appeared before the Senate Finance Committee to urge lawmakers raise the tax on alcohol rather than raising the tax on gasoline to pay for highway construction and maintenance.

"Do we tax items needed to make a livelihood or do we tax items of luxury and personal indulgence?" asked Alfred Ayscue of Mount Airy. "It's time the alcoholic beverage industry return to the citizens of North Carolina their fair share."

But an almost equal number of industry representatives charged that higher alcohol taxes would increase bootlegging and unfairly punish the beer, wine and liquor consumers.

Tom Elford, president of the wholesalers group, said the bill would send people scrambling across the state line to buy beer.

"I can tell you, we profit from South Carolina every day," he said. "Raising this tax would be a disaster for this state."

The comments came in response to a bill introduced by Sen. George Marion, D-Dobson, that would double the tax on alcohol. The money would be turned over to the state Highway Fund.

Marion has estimated the bill would generate $115 million a year and would cost consumers about a nickel more for a can of beer beginning July 1. But opponents have challenged those figures, saying higher prices would cut into sales and encourage drinkers to go into neighboring states to make their purchases.

Hunt, at a news conference, told reporters he still plans to recommend a package of changes aimed at answering what his Department of Transportation officials say is a need for $200 million to $250 million a year in more highway money.

In other legislative action:

Budget

Legislative budgetmakers spared McCain Hospital in Hoke County, at least for the next two years, when they reversed a subcommittee's recommendation to close the last state tuberculosis hospital still operating.

The joint base budget committee didn't completely clear the hospital, however. It decided to cut $392,874 from the budget next year and cut 54 jobs. The move will begin a gradual phase-out of the hospital, and schedules a new legislative evaluation of the hospital's need in two years.

The panel of House and Senate members voted to eliminate state support two orphanages that fail to comply with civil rights laws — the Oxford Orphanage in Oxford and the Freewill Baptist Children's Home near Middlesex.

Loans

The House Banking Committee held up action on two bills raising usury limits for most types of consumer loans, after Rep. Al Adams, D-Raleigh, offered a substitute plan. His bill would rewrite most lending laws and cut out some loans offered by small loan companies, often called consumer finance companies.

Adams attacked the consumer finance industry, saying his bill would "correct the abuse they were perpetrating on the people of North Carolina." Later, in an interview, Chuck Barbour, lobbyist for the N.C. Consumer Finance Association, blasted Adams as "anti-business."

The panel adjourned without taking a vote on the Senate-passed legislation, but it did so among indications that the banking industry had the votes to send the usury-law bills to the House floor without changes.

The Senate-passed bills would set new legal limits on interest rates on installment loans, such as for new cars, and contract loans, such as a 90-day notes, below $25,000. There is no limit above that amount.

The legal rate, now between 12 percent and 15 percent, depending on the amount loaned, would rise to at least 16 percent or, if greater, 6 percentage points over the rate on 26-week treasury bills auctioned by the federal government, rounded to the next highest half-percentage point. That rate is 14.08 percent this week, setting a 20 1/2 percent usury ceiling.

Adams' proposal would lower that formula for amounts between $3,000 and $25,000 to 4 percent to 5 percent above the treasury bill rate. And he said his proposal would be expanded to include small-loan companies, setting a limits that would effectively prevent those companies from offering first mortgages.

Meanwhile, the Senate Banking Committee approved a bill that would raise interest rate limits on loans of less than $3,000 offered by small loan companies.

Insurance

Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Canton, filed a bill that would continue the 6 percent annual ceiling on auto liability insurance rate increases for two more years. That 6 percent limit is due to expire July 1.

Other Action

Among other legislative actions: — A House judiciary panel sent to subcommittee a bill that would make it a misdemeanor to use, sale or possess drug-related paraphernalia.

— A freshman Republican representative filed two bills, one of them aimed at making drug laws stricter. The bill would establish a mandatory minimum sentence of at least one-year without benefit of parole, probation or suspended sentence for the manufacture, sell or delivery of a controlled substance.

Rep. Robert Brawley, R-Mooresville, also filed a bill that would require doctors notify the parents of minors about the youth's medical treatments. Brawley said the bill is aimed at "strengthening the relationship between parent and child" and would involve such things as abortions or treatment for venereal disease.

— Identical resolutions were filed in the House and Senate to commemorate the anniversary of the signing of the Halifax Resolves. The resolves were signed April 12, 1776, and supported declaring independence from Britain.

— Senate Minority Leader Don Kincaid, R-Lenoir, filed a resolution pledging support for President Reagan's economic proposals.

Referendum On Terms Pondered

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Many legislators will admit they've heard no public outcry for increasing General Assembly terms from two to four years.

But some contend longer terms would be to the public's advantage and say they want to put the question before voters in a statewide referendum.

Such a vote moved a step closer to reality Thursday as the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee approved and sent to the full Senate a bill authorizing such a vote.

Although similar bills have been proposed in the past, none have obtained approval by both the House and Senate.

"There are a lot of people out there who can't run (for the Legislature) because it's such a sacrifice," Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Goldsboro, the bill's sponsor, told the committee.

"I don't want a Legislature made up of retired people and rich people," he said, arguing that four-year terms would require less time and money for campaigning.

"An effective legislator is one who stays down here more than two years," said Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Chapel Hill, a committee member who strongly supported the bill.

Vickery said longer terms also would give people more time to get to know their legislator and give lawmakers more time to learn what their constituents want.

Sen. Henry Frye, D-Greensboro, said the longer terms might make running for office more attractive to blacks.

Medicare Funds For Social Security Is Proposed

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas Democrat is proposing legislation that would transfer funds from Medicare into the hard-pressed Social Security retirement fund.

"It is controversial," Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, told a news conference Thursday. "But I ask the members, if they do not wish to take funds from HI (Hospital Insurance), what is their alternative?"

Under Pickle's bill, revenue lost by Medicare in the transfer would be restored with general revenue funds generated by the income tax. Republicans on the House Social Security Committee have voiced strong opposition to any transfer of general revenue funds into the beleaguered Social Security retirement program.

Asked if his fund transfer proposal would, in effect, add $22 billion to the fiscal 1983 budget, Pickle replied: "I'm not going to pass judgment on that."

Under current projections, the Social Security retirement fund will run out of money sometime in 1982 unless Congress acts this year to provide it with more money. "Our immediate problem is to find some $20 billion for each of the next five years to keep the Social Security fund solvent," Pickle said.

"The obvious answer is you either raise taxes, you cut benefits or you take appropriations from general revenue."

Pickle, who is chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, also proposed raising the regular retirement age for Social Security beneficiaries from 65 to 68. Under the Pickle plan, a person still could retire as early as 62 with reduced benefits.

His bill also would phase out benefits to students aged 18 to 22, eliminate the minimum benefit and lower the age of an earnings limitation to 71 in 1982.

Pickle's proposal would round out monthly Social Security benefits to the next-lower dollar rather than the next-higher 10 cents, as under present law.

And it would move cost-of-living increases to a fiscal year basis by providing for a two-step benefit increase in calendar year 1982, and subsequently giving annual benefit increases in October, the first month of the fiscal year, instead of in July as at present.

All those provisions have been agreed to in principle by Pickle's subcommittee, which has been working for several weeks at fashioning a major Social Security bill.

Pickle said Social Security legislation should address the long-term shortages that are expected to confront the program in the next century. "We can pass a Band-aid approach for next year, hope that all goes perfectly with the economy and hope that we will need to do nothing further," he said.

"Or we can take more decisive action. Our answer here will determine whether the people have a Social Security plan — or a Social Insecurity program — two, three and four years from now."

President Reagan has sent Congress recommendations for $2.4 billion in cuts in Social Security's budget.

Farmville Entry Wins Contest

BILL FARRIOR

KINSTON — Bill Farrior of Farmville won the Steer Fitting and Showmanship Contest at the 41st Annual Coastal Plain Junior Livestock Show and Sale held April 6-7 at the Lenoir County Livestock Development Association Arena.

Farrior, awarded a trophy and cash prize, sold his steer, weighing 1180 pounds, to the Country Square Ranch in an auction sale following the show.

Chris Powell of Farmville also exhibited a 968-pound steer and Robert Burt and Jason Stewart of Coxville showed market hogs. Powell's steer placed second in the medium lightweight class and Farrior's steer placed third in the heavyweight class. Thirty-eight steers were entered in the steer show.

Robert Burt placed second in the Junior Pork Production Contest and was awarded a cash prize. The first place trophy, sponsored by the Pitt County Livestock Association, was presented to Dawn Smith of Lenoir County by association president Charles Gaskins.

Both Stewart and Burt, each with nine hogs, participated in the individual and pen of three classes of the swine show, which featured over 200 hogs.

Powell's steer was bought by Farrior and Sons of Farmville, Stewart's hog was bought by Nutrena Feed Company and Burt's hog was bought by Kinston Stockyards.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

... HOWEVER, ON THE NIGHT OF HIS BIRTHDAY FEAST, HERODIAS' DAUGHTER DID SUCH A SPECTACULAR DANCE IN HIS HONOR THAT KING HEROD VOWED WITH AN OATH TO GIVE HER WHATEVER SHE ASKED AS A REWARD. AT THE INSTIGATION OF HERODIAS, THE DAUGHTER ASKED FOR JOHN THE BAPTIST'S HEAD! HEROD COULD NOT GO BACK ON HIS KINGLY VOW, SO....

JOHN THE BAPTIST WAS IMPRISONED BY KING HEROD FOR PREACHING THAT THE MARRIAGE OF HEROD TO HERODIAS, HIS BROTHER'S WIDOW, WAS UNLAWFUL. HE WAS AFRAID TO KILL JOHN, A HOLY MAN AND PROPHET, BECAUSE THE PEOPLE MIGHT RISE AGAINST HIM...

... HE GENT A DECREE TO THE PRISON AND ORDERED JOHN'S BEHEADING. THE DECREE WAS CARRIED OUT AND THIS GOOD MAN'S HEAD WAS THEN PRESENTED TO HERODIAS' DAUGHTER!

NEXT WEEK: A PROPHET WHO WOULDN'T FORGIVE THE PEOPLE, THOUGH GOD DID!

Found Religion 'Most Pervasive U.S. Trait'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL, AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If a Martian landed in the United States and wanted to know in a nutshell the one, key, most pervasive trait of Americans, it would be, according to a new study, religion.

The illustration was given by researcher John C. Pollock in summing up the gist of the findings of a major, probing inquiry into the values that sway American attitudes and actions.

"The moral dimension is so important throughout the country, as if it's the axis around which everything else revolves," he says.

The study, involving detailed data from 3,780 persons — 2,018 of the general public and 1,762 leaders in nine professional fields — was made by Research and Forecasts, Inc., under commission by the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co.

"We weren't hunting for religion," says Pollock, the project's research director, but it surfaced predominantly as more influential than any other factor such as age, education, sex, economic status, race or whether liberal or conservative.

The study, results of which were released last week, was described as the most comprehensive, scientific examination yet made of the impact of religion on American thought and behavior.

The main conclusion was that religion is the central "core" guiding most people's approach to life.

A similar assessment of the American character was made in the nation's youth — 140 years ago — by touring French political historian Alexis de Toqueville, who concluded its heartbeat was in its churches.

This still is the case, the new study finds, with the religious element affecting "virtually every dimension of American experience" and "rapidly becoming a more powerful factor."

It wasn't created by Moral Majority or other religious groups active in last fall's national elections, but was already there for them to draw on, a pent-up, growing phenomenon seeking expression, the report says.

Incongruously, however, leaders in various professional fields were found drastically out of step with the general public, being less religious and much less concerned about moral conduct.

Pollock says "there is obviously a substantial gap, perhaps a chasm" between the public and leaders in government, education, the news media, the military, law, science and community affairs.

Closest to the people in attitudes were religious leaders, who also were the most admired. Somewhat surprisingly, business leaders were found second in similarity to public views, but among the least admired.

Leaders in the other fields were found radically different from the public, far less religiously involved in eight tabulated ways, such as Bible reading and prayer. The leaders also were much less likely than the public to see 10 types of questionable behavior as immoral.

For example, the findings were that 65 percent of the public regard abortion as immoral, but only 36 percent of leaders; 71 percent of the public regard homosexuality as immoral, but only 42 percent of the leaders; 57 percent of the public considers smoking marijuana immoral, but only 33 percent of leaders; 71 percent of the public regards sex before 16 as immoral, but only 55 percent of leaders.

Regarding religious attitudes, 74 percent of the public consider themselves religious; 66 percent of leaders do so. The differences are even sharper when it comes to specific religious measurements. For example, 73 percent of the public frequently feel God loves them, but only 54 percent of leaders do so.

The cultural shift toward religion, Pollock says, "has created a gap of values and expectations between Americans and their leaders, most of whom have neither been part of this trend, nor have even recognized it."

East Carolina Rips Wesleyan, 19-6

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ROCKY MOUNT — It wasn't what N.C. Wesleyan Coach Tony Guzzo expected. It wasn't even what East Carolina coach Hal Baird looked for. Both coaches expected a fairly close game last night when the two teams met in Rocky Mount's Municipal Stadium.

"We know we're not in the same class with East Carolina," Guzzo said. "But we've given them good games in the past, and I thought maybe, with a little luck, we could tonight. We went with our ace, and we felt that if he could hold 'em to two or three runs, we might be able to scrap and get two or three ourselves."

Wesleyan actually ended up scoring six times — all in the seventh inning. But East Carolina jumped on four Bishop pitchers to score 19 runs, holding a 19-0 lead before Wesleyan rallied against reliever Mike Williams to finally cut it to 19-6.

Bobby Patterson started the game for East Carolina, going the first six innings to claim his third win in as many decisions. He allowed only two hits during the six scoreless frames. He struck out seven, but walked five.

Williams, who was tagged for the six runs in the first of two innings he worked, gave up only two hits, but walked four while striking out one. Mike Lloyd came on for the final inning, allowing no hits, walking two and fanning one.

East Carolina jumped on Wesleyan for a run in the first. With one down, Todd Evans reached on a fielder's choice that resulted in a second out. Mike Sage, who went four for six, singled and John Hallow got a hit, scoring Evans for a 1-0 lead.

Another run crossed in the second.

With two down, Robert Wells doubled to right center, moving to third on Kelly Robinette's infield hit. A double steal brought Wells across.

Two more scored in the third, making it 4-0. Sage singled with one down and Hallow walked. Todd Hendley singled in Sage, and Charlie Smith walked, loading the bases. Fran Fitzgerald, who also had a good night at the plate, going three for five, hit into a fielder's choice that got Hallow at home. Wells was then hit by a pitch, forcing over Hendley.

East Carolina then iced the game away in the fourth, scoring seven times as 11 batters went to the plate. Mike Sorrell opened up with a double to left and with one down, Sage walked. Hallow grounded back to first, but fielder Dan Hilling elected to try for Sorrell at the plate. His throw as late, and bounced away from the plate, moving both Sage and Hallow up a base. Both of them scored on a single by Hendley.

Smith greeted relief pitcher Jimmy Mays with a single and Fitzgerald singled, scoring Hendley. Wells walked, loading the bases, and a walk to Kelly Robinette scored Smith. Sorrell grounded into a fielder's choice, with the seventh run scoring on the play.

The Pirates added three more in the fifth. After a double play left the bases empty, Hendley and Smith both walked. Fitzgerald singled in Hendley and an error when Wells reached scored both Smith and courtesy runner Mark Shank.

The final five Pirate runs came in the sixth, helped along by a two-run double by Pete Persico, a two-run triple by Fitzgerald and a ground-out by Shank.

Wesleyan, held in check for the first six innings by Patterson, greeted Williams with a Mike DeSola double. W.J. Long then singled, putting two on. Willie Arrington grounded to short, but the ball was errored at second, scoring DeSola and moving up the other two runners. Greg Clark walked, loading the bases, and a walk to Earl Roberson brought in courtesy runner Kenny Long.

A wild pitch brought in Arrington, and Carson Aycock reached on an error, allowing Clark and Roberson to score. Aycock, who moved up on the play, scored on two ground outs.

East Carolina pounded out 16 hits during the night, four of them for extra bases, led by Sage's four and Fitzgerald's three. Hendley and Robinette both had two hits.

The Pirates are now 18-7 and travel to Wilmington for games against UNC-Wilmington on Saturday and Sunday. Saturday's game, originally scheduled for 7:30 p.m. has been moved to 2 p.m. Sunday's game will be at 1:30 p.m.

N.C. Wesleyan drops to 17-10 with the loss.

Rampants Crush Bertie In 12-0 Romp

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

WINDSOR — Greenville Rose entered yesterday's Division I Conference battle with Bertie having soundly beaten every team it had faced this season except league opponents.

"I had thought about that," Greenville Rose coach Ronald Vincent admitted. Well, the Rampant head man will have to find something else to think about now.

Thanks to Roger Williams' two-hitter and home runs by Mark and Gordon Douglas, the Rampants easily whipped Bertie, 12-0, for their ninth victory in 10 outings this season. Rose is 3-1 in the league. Bertie falls to 5-4 and 1-3.

"We hit the ball well today," Vincent said. "But the thing I like about the team so far this season is that we're hitting the ball well throughout the lineup."

"We hit the ball well, but I think our defense and pitching may be even better than our hitting."

Thus far this season the Rampant pitching has been superb. In all, the Rampant pitchers have recorded six shutouts, including four in a row.

Yesterday amid a steady drizzle, it was Williams' turn on the mound. The right-hander made the most of it, striking out seven, walking two en route to his fifth victory of the season without a loss.

Not only that, Williams has now not allowed an earned run in 30 innings pitched this season. Thursday, he did not allow a runner past second.

"The weather was a problem today for Roger," Vincent said. "It bothered him early. The rain made his clothes stick to him and the mud on the mound made it tough."

"The rain makes the ball heavy and he went more with his curve ball today once he got his rhythm down in the third and fourth innings."

While Williams was finding his rhythm, the Rampant defense continued in its well-oiled groove. Rose committed only its 11th error of the season yesterday and also picked up its fourth double play. But it was the defensive effort of catcher Emmett Walsh that particularly pleased Vincent.

Twice Walsh's strong-armed throws to first resulted in outs. In the second with runners on first and second, Walsh caught James Walton leaning too far off the bag and threw to first baseman Bill Kittrell. When the rundown was over Walton was safely back on first but third baseman Gordon Douglas had tagged out the lead runner, Kenny Perry.

In the fifth, Walsh again later. Leading off the fifth, Gordon hit the first pitch he saw — a fast ball — to the deepest part of the park, over 355 feet away. Gordon, a junior, had two hits for Rose and drove in three runs. Kenny Barnes also had two hits for Rose, including a triple. In all, nine Rampants raised their team batting average to .375 (124 hits in 330 at bats).

Leading 1-0 after Mark Douglas' first-inning homer, the Rampants pushed across four runs in the second to take command.

Barnes singled and went to third on the hit when Walton, who had four errors, failed to field the ball in center. Barnes scored on Gordon Douglas' infield single. Douglas later scored on Paul MacMillan's single.

Mont Carter and Mark Douglas then walked to load the bases and when Mitch Brann's slashing grounder got through the infield Douglas and MacMillan scored to give Rose a 5-0 lead.

Rose pushed its lead to 6-0 in the third when Gordon Douglas' ground out scored Barnes, who had tripled earlier.

The Rampants then put it away in the fourth with two runs. Carter singled and moved to second when Walton misplayed the ball. Mark Douglas then walked and Brann reached on an error to load the bases and chase Lee.

Bertie reliever Steve Perry promptly walked Walsh to force home Carter and Roger Williams' followed with a fielder's choice to score Douglas and give Rose a 8-0 lead.

Gordon Douglas' solo homer gave Rose a 9-0 lead one inning later and the Rampants brought home their final three runs in the seventh for their 12-run total.

Rose plays host to Wilson Fike Tuesday.

Rose captured its first league victory of the season Thursday as the Rampettes defeated Bertie, 7-5, in a Division I Conference softball game.

The Rampettes, now 5-5 overall and 1-3 in the league, trailed 4-2 after two innings but rallied for three runs in the fourth and two in the sixth for the victory.

Rose was led by Linda Winstead, Toni Streeter, Suzie Kinley and Kim McRoy, all of whom had two hits. McRoy had a triple and Kinley a double.

Rose plays host to Wilson Fike Tuesday.

Boys Track Roundup

Rose Thinclads In Easy Victory

It was supposed to be a test for the strong Rose High School track team. Fike of Wilson was supposed to bring in a strong challenge for the Rampants. But it didn't turn out that way.

But the time the meet was over, the Rampants had romped to another victory, leaving Fike and Rocky Mount in their dust. Rose finished with 118 points, while Fike was far back with 41½ and Rocky Mount had 18½.

The Rampants won all but two events, the 400-meter dash and the shot put. The Rampants had four double winners, or at least a pair. Robert Brown won the discus and triple jump, while Erskine Evans won the 100 and 200.

Kenny Smith and Harry Williams tied for the 1600 and 3200-meter runs, crossing the line together in both races.

Rose travels to the Apex Relays on Saturday.

Miller Shares Masters Lead With Trio

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Johnny Miller parlayed an 11th-hour gamble and a new, relaxed attitude into a share of the first-round Masters golf lead.

"I changed my putting grip overnight. I'm crazy to do that right before this tournament," said Miller, trying to regain the talent that once made him the world's foremost player.

His 3-under-par 69 in the baffling winds of Augusta National Golf Club Thursday tied Miller with Australian Greg Norman, Lon Hinkle and Curtis Strange.

"For some reason, I wasn't nervous. Playing with Fuzzy Zoeller helped. He's a nice, easy-going fellow. I usually get antsy at Augusta."

Miller's fresh approach reaped dividends — his best ever first Masters round by two shots.

Seventeen players in the select, international field of 82 broke Augusta National's par of 72 despite severe pin placements, soft fairways and the unpredictable wind.

Three shots separated 27 challengers. Some of the sport's most feared golfers — Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Hubert Green and Bruce Lietzke — were lurking behind the leaders.

Nicklaus was in a logjam at 70 with Jim Simons, Japan's Isao Aoki, David Graham, John Cook, low amateur Jim Holtgrieve and Green.

Another shot back at 71 came Watson, joined by Ben Crenshaw, Jerry Pate, Gibby Gilbert, Don Pooley and Peter Jacobsen.

Lietzke, a two-time winner earlier this year, was among 10 players at 72.

South African Gary Player, seeking a fourth Masters championship, was another shot back at 73.

The warm, partly sunny day, however, was cruel to defending champion Seve Ballesteros, leading 1981 money-winner Ray Floyd, Lee Trevino, Sam Snead and Keith Fergus.

Ballesteros ran afoul of a double bogey and six bogeys amidst a 78. "It wasn't my day. Everything went wrong," he said.

Trevino, needing a Masters victory to join four others with titles in all four majors, took a 77. So did Snead, the 68-year-old wonder from another era.

Floyd settled for a 75, but the most disappointed likely would be Fergus.

He went from 3 under to 4 over at 17, assessed six penalty shots for lifting his ball twice from the white-lined gallery fairway crossways.

Fergus says he thought the crossways were considered ground under repair, entitling him to free drops at 8 and 17. However, that is contrary to Masters rules.

Miller returned to a putter he bought as a 12-year-old to handle the new, slick, bent grass greens. And he tried a new putting grip, too. He bent his thumb, forcing his thumbnail into the grip. "It keeps the blade straight. I tend to take the putter back on the outside," he explained.

"I make changes all the time, even during a round, looking for the perfect swing. Nicklaus does it. And Watson is really a piddler."

Miller, twice a winner this year, took another stride from his mysterious slump after his glory seasons of the mid-1970s. "The players may not like me, but they respect me. I sucked in my gut after all those 74s and 75s. I accepted them. I could have quit," he said.

"I'm playing good, but not great. I don't think I'll ever be at the top again. I don't play enough. I don't really care about winning tournaments now," said Miller, 33, of his devil-may-care approach.

Hinkle, also enjoying his best Masters start, is trying to shake a slump that has kept him winless since the 1979 World Series of Golf.

"Things haven't been going very smooth. Somebody stole my putter two months ago. And I'm trying to learn to wear soft contact lenses."

"My little girl (3-year-old Monique) used to say when I left in the morning, 'Daddy, no bogeys, just birdies today.' Now she says, 'Daddy, no bogeys or double bogeys today.'"

Hinkle, 33, reached both par 5's on the front side in two, two-putting each for birds.

Strange's aggressive approach on the greens of these flowered, 6,905 yards led to just 11 putts on the frontside.

"That's pretty much the way I play all courses," said the 26-year-old Strange, a two-time victor last year. "But I don't play wild, stupid golf."

Norman, buoyed by the confidence of 17 worldwide titles and earnings of $250,000 last year, believes he can win the first 1981 major in his opening bid.

"I was saying to myself before I teed off today that I could win this tournament. If you don't feel that way, you put yourself behind the eight ball," said Norman, 26. The sole lead belonged to the 1980 Australian Open champion until he bogeyed the last hole. "I was pumped up," said Norman of his 5-iron, 200-yard approach shot at 18.

Nicklaus called his 70 his best round ever, that from a man who has won the Masters an unprecedented five times.

"If I had anybody putting for me, I'd be leading by five or six shots. But I'm pleased with the way I'm playing. Hopefully, I'll get some putts in."

Watson, the winner of 20 tournaments the last four years, but none in 1981, said his round easily could have been up to three shots lower.

"I made two mistakes at 12 and 13," he said. The errors cost him back-to-back bogeys and a piece of the lead.

Still, that old confidence that made him golf's Player of the Year the last four seasons is creeping back.

"My game is on the upswing," said the 1977 Masters winner. "I'm making a better pass at the ball."

The field will be trimmed to the low 44 golfers and ties or anyone within 10 shots of the lead after today's second round. Portions of the last two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be carried by CBS-TV.

Rookie Shuts Down Houston, As Dodgers Capture Opening Win

By The Associated Press

In their 24 years in Los Angeles, the Dodgers never had started a rookie pitcher on opening day — until, that is, a chubby 20-year-old named Fernando Valenzuela strode to the mound.

Valenzuela, a left-hander from Sonora, Mexico, still hasn't learned to speak English, but he had no trouble understanding Houston's batters. He tossed a five-hit shut-out and led Dodgers to a 2-0 victory Thursday over the Astros, last season's nemesis.

Valenzuela, the youngest player in the major leagues, was pressed into service when Jerry Reuss pulled a muscle in his calf on Wednesday. He now has pitched 262-3 major league innings without yielding an earned run since being called up by the Dodgers last Sept. 10.

"He pitched like a man with 10 years' experience," said former Dodgers pitcher Don Sutton, now with the Astros.

Valenzuela said through an interpreter that he didn't expect to extend his string of scoreless innings much farther. "I'm not superman," he said. He did add later, though, that he felt no trepidation in filling the historic role.

"When I go to the mound, I don't know what it is to be afraid," Valenzuela said.

Joe Niekro, who pitched Houston to a 7-1 victory over

Los Angeles in a one-game playoff for the National League West title last season, was the victim this time. Niekro worked seven innings, yielding a run in the fourth on Ron Cey's sacrifice fly and another in the sixth on a double by Pedro Guerrero, who also had two singles.

Valenzuela struck out five Astros and walked two, using a wicked screwball that left Houston's right-handed hitters gawking.

"He would throw that screwball on a 3-2 pitch, and that is unusual," said Astros center fielder Cesar Cedeno. "But we will come to expect it."

A crowd of 50,511 pleasantly surprised spectators packed Dodger Stadium and cheered Valenzuela all the way. "It's nice to have a big cheer going for you," the pitcher said.

Expos 6, Pirates 5

Gary Carter's run-scoring single off Pirates reliever Kent Tekulve snapped a 5-5 tie in the top of the ninth and boosted Montreal over Pittsburgh before 40,332 Pirates fans. Andre Dawson led off the Montreal ninth with a single off Tekulve and stole second. He went to third on a groundout by Ellis Valentine and scored when Carter lashed a single up the middle.

Montreal tied it in the eighth on a pinch single by Jerry White.

Woody Fryman, 40-year-old Expos reliever, held the Pirates hitless over the final two innings for the victory. Montreal starter Steve Rogers yielded four runs in the first, capped by Bill Madlock's two-run double, and gave up all five Pirates runs in five innings' work.

Mets 2, Cubs 0

Lee Mazzilli and Rusty Staub each homered, and Pat Zachry combined with two New York relievers to shut out Chicago on seven hits.

Zachry checked Chicago on six hits through 52-3 innings. Tom Hausman got the final out of the sixth, and Neil Allen got the save with three innings of relief. The only hit off Allen was a ninth-inning double by Ken Reitz, his second of the game to go along with a triple.

Mazzilli's homer led off the fourth, and after Dave Kingman struck out, Staub homered in the same inning. Kingman, acquired from Chicago during the offseason, went 0-for-3, striking out twice, and was booed loudly by the crowd of 37,030 Cubs fans each time he came to bat.

Padres 4, Giants 1

Juan Bonilla drove in one run with a bases-loaded single, and Gene Richards added a two-run hit in the 12th inning as San Diego made Frank Howard a winner in his debut as a major league manager.

Frank Robinson, meanwhile, got off on a losing note in his first game as manager of the Giants before 55,420 spectators at Candlestick Park.

Giants reliever Al Holland loaded the bases in the 12th on a single by Luis Salazar and two walks. Bonilla's opposite-field single to right snapped a 1-1 tie, and Richards' bloop single to left drove in the final two San Diego runs.

Jags Top Warriors

NEW HOPE — Gary Hobgood and Alan Wooten shot 38's to lead Farmville Central to a rain-shortened 160-173 victory over Eastern Wayne Thursday in a high school golf match.

The match was played in a steady rain and called after nine holes because of the weather.

Robbie Langston had a 40 and Bert Warren a 44 for the Jaguars, now 15-2-2 this season.

Eastern Wayne was led by Damon Libby and Bryan Jones, both of whom shot 41s. Scott Robson had a 45 and Randy Justice a 46.

Farmville Central travels to Southern Nash Tuesday.

Mercer Sparks Yanks To 10-3 Victory

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a baseball fairy tale acted out in front of 55,123 fans — the largest opening day crowd in the 58-year history of Yankee Stadium — and Bobby Murcer turned out to be Cinderella.

Hanging onto his roster spot by the narrowest of threads, Murcer responded to a standing ovation from the record stadium crowd Thursday by walloping a pinch-hit, grand slam homer in the New York Yankees 10-3 rout of the Texas Rangers.

The fans are aware of Murcer's shaky status with the club. He will be 35 next month and there are a glut of outfielders already on the roster. So, they saluted the veteran with a roar for old times sake when he came up to bat in the seventh.

"The anticipation started when I got to the batting circle," Murcer said. "They cared that I was here. I didn't expect that. It was pretty hair-raising. It sent some chills through my body."

The count went to 3-2 — just like in the fairy tales — and Murcer connected for the sixth grand slam of his career and fourth as a Yankee. The roar of the fans was a factor, he said.

"Fan reaction plays a big part for a player, I think. It built me up a little extra. When you have their support you give it that little extra. It really got me going. It showed me the people are behind me all the way. It was very gratifying at this time."

Murcer has been on the trading block all spring, but the Yankees have had no takers. With Reggie Jackson on the disabled list, there still was roster room for him, but whether there will be space when Jackson returns a week from today is questionable. Manager Gene Michael wouldn't say whether the slam saved Murcer's job, but it certainly didn't hurt his chances.

Until Murcer connected, the Yankees were hanging onto a 5-3 lead, built on a three-run homer by Bucky Dent and a two-run double by Rick Cerone. Don Zimmer, new manager of the Rangers, remembered another three-run shot by Dent — the one that beat Zimmer and the Boston Red Sox in the 1978 pennant playoff.

"Tell Bucky Dent I've got to eat too," said Zimmer. "He keeps beating me with three-run homers. I'll go to Japan, and he'll probably hit a three-run homer off me there, too."

A's, Twins 1

Mike Norris, ace of the Oakland staff, tossed a six-hitter to get the A's season off to a winning start before another record opening-day crowd, 42,658 at Metropolitan Stadium in Bloomington, Minn.

Norris, who posted a 22-9 record last year, no-hit the Twins until Mickey Hatcher beat out an infield single in the fifth inning. Norris walked four and struck out three.

Tony Armas drove in the first run off Twins lefty Jerry Koonsman in the fourth, and Armas scored later on a double by Jeff Newman. Mike Heath and Armas also homered for Oakland.

Tigers 6, Blue Jays 2

Richie Hebner's three-run homer off reliever Mike Willis snapped a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning and powered Detroit over Toronto. Lou Whitaker led off the rally with a double off Joey McLaughlin, and Willis walked Steve Kemp to set the table for Hebner.

Jack Morris tossed a five-hitter, walking five and striking out three.

Angels 6, Mariners 2

Brian Downing hit a grand slam homer in the first inning, and Dan Ford homered in the eighth to pace California to an easy victory over Seattle.

Geoff Zahn pitched seven innings for the Angels, giving up four hits, including Jeff Burroughs' two-run homer.

California loaded the bases with two out in the first on a single by Fred Lynn and walks to Don Baylor and Ford from Glenn Abbott. Downing chose a 3-2 Abbott delivery for his first career grand slam.

The game drew 33,317 to Seattle's Kingdome, well below the capacity of 59,438.

Two openers are scheduled for today — Kansas City at Baltimore and Chicago White Sox at Boston.

Biblical Account Is Well Done

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When I was a kid, I won a Bible in Sunday school for memorizing the first chapter of Luke. My Mama was so proud she turned her head for the next couple of Sundays when I skipped church to play baseball. "Vengeance is mine," sayeth the Lord. Indeed, and it comes in the form of a four-hour CBS movie, "Peter and Paul."

"Peter and Paul" is a straightforward account of the birth of Christianity, from the early enmity between the two founding saints to Paul's zealous proselytizing before the very court of Nero. I can't think of anything much they skipped, here — not Saul of Tarsus' conversion to Paul the Apostle, nor the theological differences between the two saints, nor the angels' freeing of Peter from prison, nor Paul's journey to Antioch, et cetera.

It is so straightforward, in fact, that those not especially keen on television Bible lessons may get a bit antsy after the first hour. The action is limited — appropriately, perhaps — to rather frequent stonings, which can grow a bit wearisome after a few rounds.

Robert Foxworth renders a nice, fiery-but-solid Peter. Anthony Hopkins pulls all stops as Paul, rendering to the sainted Apostle all the fluttery, head-bobbing eccentricity he gave Adolf Hitler in CBS' recent movie, "The Bunker." Somehow, the routine seemed a better fit on Hitler.

Anyway, CBS is safe from the criticism leveled at other television treatments of biblical themes, as this intelligently written script sticks closely to biblical text and spirit. Other TV renderings of the Bible ran into trouble when they took it upon themselves to flesh out sketchy biblical accounts, as when NBC's "Mary and Joseph" suggested that Jesus was born out of wedlock and that Joseph was some sort of guerrilla warrior. No such problem here. But after the grand-scale spectacle of "Masada," this ponderous holiday special might seem to some viewers to suffer from another problem: tedium.

From sanctity to sins of the flesh... "Masterpiece Theatre," finally finished with "Danger UXB," gets back to the good stuff — tormented tales of souls in conflict — on Sunday with the first episode of Emile Zola's "Therese Raquin."

This is a fetching version of Zola's crime-of-passion yarn, involving a ineffectual Mama's boy, his vapid, uninterested wife and her lover (hubby's good pal).

Kate Nelligan is Therese, whose simmering subliminal passion is brought to full boil when Brian Cox, as Laurent, enters her life. Miss Nelligan's Therese has all the sensual heat needed to prompt a fellow to do what Laurent does to Kenneth Cranham's poor, sappy Raquin.

"Therese Raquin" runs for three weeks. Don't miss it — it's the hottest thing 'til summer.

Astaire Tribute Slated April 18

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fred Astaire will be paid tribute by the American Film Institute in a special program on CBS on Saturday, April 18.

Among those participating will be Mikhail Baryshnikov, Cyd Charisse, Barrie Chase, Bob Fosse, Audrey Hepburn, Charlton Heston, Gene Kelly, Eleanor Powell and James Stewart. David Niven will be host.

Another Role For 'Tess' Star

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Nastassia Kinski, Malcolm McDowell, John Heard and Annette O'Toole star in Universal's "Cat People," a romantic fantasy based on the 1942 movie.

Miss Kinski is the star of "Tess" and has just completed a role in "One From the Heart."

Visiting Artist Gives Program

Beverly Cotton, visiting artist at Pitt Community College, presented a program of ballads, clogging and banjo playing for the April meeting of Alpha Nu chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa sorority for professional women educators.

President Barbara Parker welcomed Jane McDougal as a new member of the chapter and two teachers at Ayden Elementary School, Henrieta Rowe and Letha Jones, were presented as pledges. The pledge ceremony was conducted by Ms. Parker, Brenda Little and Linda Whitehurst.

The chapter will hold its next meeting May 7.

Plays Role Of Mike Hammer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Armand Assante stars as hard-boiled private eye Mike Hammer in Larry Cohen's $8 million production of "I, The Jury."

Assante starred in "Private Benjamin," "Little Darlings" and the TV movie "Sophia Loren, Her Own Story."

The movie is based on Mickey Spillane's popular crime novel, which sold more than 7 million copies.

Says GOP Hurting Tobacco Farmer

Minority Admissions Director Defends UNC

WASHINGTON (AP) — A University of North Carolina official was wrong in stating that qualified black applicants are rejected by the school, the current director of minority admissions at UNC-Chapel Hill testified Thursday in desegregation proceedings against the UNC system.

Every black student who meets the minimum standard of a 1.6 grade point average and a score of 800 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test is admitted automatically, said Colin Rustin, minority admissions director since 1975 and a student at UNC-Chapel Hill from 1970 to 1974.

Rustin denied allegations by former minority admissions director Hayden Renwick, now associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Chapel Hill.

About 800 black students were refused admission from 1975 to 1978, Renwick charged in a Chapel Hill newspaper article.

The U.S. Department of Education is trying to cut off nearly $100 million a year in aid to UNC, alleging that segregation persists among UNC's 16 campuses. Five of the campuses are still mostly black.

After Renwick's charges came out, a faculty committee issued the 1979 Long report. Rustin cited that report Thursday.

He said the report showed that only 36 blacks had been denied admission from 1975 to 1979.

Rustin also denied charges by Renwick that he admitted making 17 mistakes in rejecting black applicants. "I never said that, and I never will," he said.

Renwick's article charged that admissions officials were inconsistent in their definition of a "qualified" student.

Rustin responded that special consideration is given to athletes and children of Chapel Hill alumni. And because the law stopped blacks from attending Chapel Hill for several decades, he said, blacks who attended any of the black UNC campuses were considered alumni.

Rustin said minority applications and enrollments has increased during his tenure as director because of his office's efforts, fewer unqualified applicants and less attrition among minority freshmen.

Senior Citizens Hold Meeting

Town and Country Senior Citizens Club met recently at St. Paul's Episcopal Church and received a report on its participation in the "Spring Happy" at Carolina East Mall.

The club was awarded a $50 check for first place in the contest for having the prettiest booth with a spring theme. The club will purchase a camera for Dobbs School in Kinston.

Members of the club received their 1981 yearbooks and were reminded that followup work for the March of Dimes will be carried out at their April 16 meeting. Twenty-five members of the club signed up as host and hostesses for the Heritage Tour of homes.

CONCERT

Mrs. Fannie Gatlin will be in concert at St. Matthews Church at 3 p.m.

The program sponsor is Mrs. Janice Shepard. Everyone is welcome.

But Brent E. Simmons of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund read sections of the Long report that criticized minority recruiting practices at Chapel Hill.

In earlier testimony Thursday, Dr. Roben Fleming lashed out at suggestions by government consultants that UNC consolidate duplicated programs to achieve racial integration among its 16 campuses.

Fleming, now president of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and former president of the University of Michigan, said such moves would "erode the educational programs of the university.... I think you may be pursuing an impossible dream by simultaneously desegregating black and white institutions."

Meanwhile, Administrative Law Judge John J. Mathias criticized the government's strategy of trying to discredit university witnesses by comparing deposition statements with their actual testimony.

"I find this type of impeachment very ineffective on these subjective questions," he said. "It isn't impressing me very much."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Congressional threats against the federal tobacco price-support program show the Reagan administration is no friend of the farmer, a state Democratic leader charged Thursday.

State Sen. Russell Walker, D-Asheboro, chairman of the state Democratic Party, termed "outrageous" an unsuccessful attempt Tuesday by Rep. Bobbi Fielder, R-Calif., to cut off $200 million from the federal budget for the programs.

"Yesterday's efforts by Rep. Fielder to end funding for the tobacco program are typical of the hardships farmers face in a Republican administration," Walker said in a prepared statement.

The amendment proposed by the freshman representative from Los Angeles would have ended funding for tobacco loans, the federal-state Tobacco Market News Service and a tobacco research center at Oxford.

"There is some self-serving irresponsibility in Mrs. Fielder's efforts to eliminate continued research. She has jumped on the budget-cutting bandwagon without any understanding of our tobacco economy or of the federal support programs," he said.

"The tobacco research center at Oxford and the marketing news service are both vital parts of the tobacco program," Walker said, "and I am heartened that Democrats fought to preserve them."

The House Budget Committee rejected Mrs. Fielder's amendment and voted instead to require repayment of government loans each year in an amendment by Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo.

Wirth's amendment would not change the price-support program because government loans are handled in a revolving fund, tobacco state representatives said.

The committee voted nearly along party lines, with all but two Republicans favoring the Fielder amendment and all Democrats voting against it.

The two Republicans opposing the proposal were North Carolina Reps. James G. Martin and W. Eugene Johnston.

Mrs. Fielder said she lost the vote because tobacco supporters applied a lot of political "arm twisting" even after she surprised them with the proposal.

Dr. Muller Gets Appointment

URBANA, ILL. — The National Council of Teachers of English (NCTE) has announced the appointment of Dr. Al Muller, English Department, East Carolina University, as state coordinator for North Carolina in the 1981 NCTE program, Achievement Awards in Writing.

The nationally recognized competition, now in its 24th year, cites high school seniors for excellence in writing and recommends them to colleges and universities for admission and for financial assistance, if needed.

Two Collisions Are Reported

An estimated $3,900 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 5:45 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 175 feet west of the Bismark Street intersection, involving cars driven by Jessie Ray Anderson of 307 Paris Ave. and Stanley Reid Gaskins of 101 Gainevere Ln.

Damage was estimated at $500 to the Anderson car and $2,000 to the Gaskins vehicle by officers who charged Anderson with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Leigh Anda Summerfield of 209 Leon Dr. was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 3:39 p.m. mishap on Elm Street, 157 feet south of the Brookgreen Avenue intersection.

Police said the Summerfield car collided with an auto operated by Hazel Hardison Harrington of 113 Alexander Cir., resulting in an estimated $500 damage to the Summerfield car and $900 damage to the Harrington vehicle.

Fact or Fiction?

Someday soon space colonies could be more science fact than fiction. Scientists say the space shuttle, scheduled to go into orbit today, could play an essential part in building such colonies. The shuttle is designed to carry up to seven people, and deliver and retrieve cargo that weighs as much as 65,000 pounds. This means that shuttle crews could take materials from Earth into space, where they could be used to assemble large platforms or stations in orbit around our planet. Because each shuttle may be able to make at least 100 trips into Earth-orbit, large structures in space may be financially possible.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the first space shuttle scheduled to go into orbit?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Rutgers University is the state university of New Jersey.

Tobacco Meet

The North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation has scheduled a public meeting next Wednesday to discuss changes in the flue-cured tobacco program for 1981.

The meeting will be held at the Farm Bureau office, 402 Greenville Blvd., starting at 7:30 p.m.

Subjects to be discussed include pending changes in the tobacco inspection program, proposed amendments to the price support program for 1982 and the use of maleic hydrazide, commonly known as MH.

The meeting is one of several being held throughout the flue-cured tobacco production area by Farm Bureau.

To Speak On
'Japan Day'

ECU News Bureau

A leading historian on the Japanese experience in America will come to East Carolina University next week to participate in a department of history observance of Japan Day.

Dr. Roger Daniels, head and professor of history, University of Cincinnati, will present a paper, "The Japanese-American Experience: Scapegoats or Model Minority," in a formal lecture at 3:30 p.m. Monday. Much of the presentation will focus on anti-Asian racism in America, according to the coordinator, Dr. Robert E. Gowen.

Daniels will conduct a question-and-answer session from noon to 1 p.m., in Gowen's class on Modern Japanese History, in D-201, Brewster Bldg. All sessions are open to the interested public.

In addition to Daniels' visit to ECU, the observance will feature a nine-hour long feature film from Japan, "The Human Condition," which will be shown in three segments Monday evening, Tuesday afternoon and Tuesday evening at Hendrix Theatre in Mendenhall Student Center, to which admission is free.

Third Graders
In Contest

Third graders of Greenville City Schools, Carolina Country Day, and Greenville Christian Academy participated in the Great Easter Egg Contest sponsored by Carolina East Mall.

The grand prize winner was Stephen Relford, Greenville Christian Academy; 2nd place, Ashley Andrews, Eastern Elementary School; and 3rd place, Chris Braxton, Greenville Christian Academy.

The eggs were judged by Ms. Lucille Sumrell, class supervisor of Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, and Ms. Patsy Denson, recreation assistant of the Arts & Crafts Dept.

Each student will receive a Carolina East Mall certificate of participation. The 1st place winner is awarded a $25 Mall Gift Certificate, 2nd place receives a $15 gift certificate and 3rd place receives a $10 certificate.

The 18 by 24 inch cardboard eggs are suspended from the ceiling at Carolina East Mall for display through April 18.

CLUB TO MEET

The 20th Century Club will meet Sunday at 5:30 p.m. in the home of Filmore Bell.

Weather permitting, it will be a lawn meeting. All members are urged to attend.

U.S. Seeks To Absolve
El Salvador Military

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is trying to absolve the U.S.-backed armed forces in El Salvador of the slaying of 30 people earlier this week in a low-income suburb of San Salvador.

State Department spokesman William Dyess and White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes issued separate statements Thursday saying the identity of those who carried out the killings is not known.

State Department sources, who asked not to be identified, said the 30 men, women and teen-agers were killed Tuesday after police forces were fired on during a post-midnight patrol in the San Salvador suburb of Soyopango.

Salvadoran officials and other State Department sources said Salvadoran Treasury Police were involved. They called the U.S. statements an attempt to draw a distinction between the regular armed forces, which receive U.S. aid, and the Treasury Police, which do not.

Meanwhile, Robert E. White, the former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, disputed suggestions that four American churchwomen were slain last December because they were perceived as running a roadblock.

Appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Thursday, White termed "inexplicable" earlier testimony by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. that the roadblock theory is a leading one among investigators.

White, who was withdrawn from El Salvador for publicly disagreeing with President Reagan's policy, said investigators know the three nuns and one laywoman were not killed at the roadblock late last year but rather several hours later, after being detained by local security forces.

Haig's testimony and other administration statements are "misinterpretations, whether deliberately or not, to find excuses for one of the most brutal forces in the world, that is the security force," White said.

White also told the committee that while he doubts U.S. involvement in El Salvador will escalate into another Vietnam-type entanglement, it "could become our Afghanistan."

There now are 56 American military advisers in El Salvador, and White said said a large U.S. force — like the Soviet divisions in Afghanistan — might be needed to keep the ruling civilian-military junta in power.

He also said publication of what he called "a hit list" by the Salvadoran military press council "means the military has taken the law into its own hands. And we are implicated because it is our equipment that is going to be used."

The military press council on Monday released a list of 138 names of people it accused of being subversives and "directly responsible for 15,000 deaths."

Some press accounts held "government troops" accountable for Tuesday's killings near San Salvador, saying thousands of non-combatant civilians had lost their lives in similar operations over the past 18 months.

U.S. officials have said privately that the record of Salvadoran armed forces in avoiding excessive force is improving but that terrorist acts by the Treasury Police and right-wing death squads continue to be a major problem.

Calling it a hypothetical situation, Speakes declined to say if the United States would cut off military aid to El Salvador if the government were responsible for Tuesday's deaths.

"We regard this as part of the continuing tragedy of that country," he said. "Violence from the left or right threatens all the hopes for reform. The goal of our policy in El Salvador is to help break this vicious pattern."

Dyess said the killings "reinforce our determination to support the centrist government of the country, a government that is beset by extremist forces on the far right and far left who oppose the government's policies of political, social and economic reform."

Road Run
Is Planned

WELDON — The Great Weldon/Halifax Road Run will take place beginning at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, April 12.

The eight mile run will have runners leaving Weldon High School for the run into historic Halifax.

Also, within Halifax, beginning at 2 p.m., there is to be a one mile and a two mile Fun Run.

Runners are to be classified in the following age groups — 12 and under, 13-18, 19-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-59, and 60 and over.

Details on registration can be obtained by calling Bill Bounds, 536-4684.

Learn-By-Doing
Is Underway

The Pitt County 4-H office is now looking for young people between the ages of 6 and 8 years old for a learn-by-doing Pre-4-H program. Parents and volunteer leaders also are needed.

Pre-4-H, open to boys and girls, offers young people a chance to learn a variety of skills and to explore several topics from sewing to leaf collecting.

Those interested in such a program should call the county 4-H office at 758-1196 or 752-2934, Ext. 362.

Anniversary

The Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist Youth Training Club will observe its anniversary Sunday.

Dinner will be served at 2 p.m. At 3 p.m. the Rev. Robert Phillips and his congregation of Crisp Chapel F.W.B. Church, Fountain, will be in charge of the anniversary service. The club invites the public.

CARS COLLIDE

An estimated $150 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 1:25 a.m. collision today at the intersection of Fourth and Library Streets.

Police Department investigators identified the drivers of the cars involved as Sharon Lynn Sanders of Asheboro and Joel Spencer Hargett of 110 Avon Ln.

"Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's," Matthew tells us in the New Testament. Today's declarer was reluctant to do so, so he learned the hard way that the sages had a point.

North had an awkward rebid. We approve of his rise to three hearts with only two-card support—a better doubleton opposite a rebid suit does not exist. South's decision to go on to game was based on his distributional features rather than extra high cards.

West led a low spade, declarer played the nine from dummy and captured East's queen with the ace. After cashing dummy's high trumps, declarer returned to his hand with the ace of diamonds to draw the remaining trumps in one round. All that remained was to resolve the club position.

Declarer ran the jack of clubs, and was delighted with his acumen. Next came a low club. West rose to the occasion by rising with the ace and, in anticipation of bringing in the suit, declarer carelessly played low from dummy. When East showed out, the contract was doomed.

The ten of spades was covered by the jack and king, and the spade return was ruffed in the closed hand. A club to the king left declarer on the table with no way to get back to his hand, unless he ruffed with his last trump while West still had a club stopper. He ended up with only nine tricks.

Once he discovered the friendly 3-3 heart division, declarer should have paused for reflection. He could afford to lose two club tricks and a spade. By giving up the chance for an overtrick, the contract could have been guaranteed.

Declarer can simply concede two club tricks. However, on the actual play, when West puts up the ace of clubs on the second round, declarer should jettison dummy's king! When South regains the lead, he leads high clubs from his hand, forcing out the queen, and will lose only the three obvious tricks.

ATTEND CONVENTION WINSTON-SALEM — Eight members of the Alpha Nu chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa attended the organization's state convention in Winston-Salem early this month. Approximately 400 educators from throughout the state attended the convention.

Those attending from the Alpha Nu chapter were Edith Barnhill, Ann Byrd, Faye Dempsey, Brenda Little, Margaret Norville, Barbara Parker, Sarah Perkins and Linda Whitehurst.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Talk over with allies what you expect of them and vice versa, and come to a finer understanding. Something good can result.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study what your true financial status is and make plans for improvement. The evening is fine for social pleasures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Go after your most cherished personal wishes since there is a good opportunity to gain them now. Sidestep a foe.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good day to do some investigative work and come up with the right answers to a problem. Think constructively.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Exchange ideas with good friends for mutual gain. Show appreciation to those who have helped you in the past.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Delve into whatever will give you more prestige in the community. Take time for recreation in the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study a new outlet that could bring you added income in the future. You can now gain a long-time longing.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are now able to engage in interesting activities with friends and have a most delightful time. Be happy.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will know exactly how to get rid of tensions that arise and can be objective in solving difficult problems, so give an education dealing with arts and sciences for best results. Teach to work with hands.

THE ONE PART OF A NEW HOME AD YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO MISS.

The HOW symbol won't be the biggest thing in a new home advertisement.

But when you know what it stands for, it just might be the most important.

Because HOW, the Home Owners Warranty Program, is a unique plan that actually protects that new home against major structural defects.

And HOW's 10 years of protection is included in the cost of the home.

You're protected against workmanship and material defects the first year. Defective wiring, ductwork, and piping in the second. And your home is protected against major structural defects that vitally affect the use of the home for the full 10 years. Your builder can give you all the details, including the reasonable exclusions.

So look for the HOW symbol when you're looking for new homes.

It's the fine print that's working in your favor for 10 full years.

Home Owners Warranty Corporation of N.C.

Warranty and insurance coverage applies only if the builder properly enrolls the home and is in good standing with HOW at the time of settlement.

A Talking Box Devised To Aid Blind Students

ECU News Bureau

The functions of a talking laboratory instrument being developed at East Carolina University to aid blind chemistry students were discussed and demonstrated at the national meeting of the American Chemical Society.

March 29-April 3 in Atlanta. Alger Salt of Cove City, N.C., a research associate in the ECU Department of Chemistry and Richard Hartness of Rocky Mount, a student, were among five ECU representatives who presented papers about the new microcomputer instrument that enables a blind student to work alone in a laboratory. The instrument system, a Universal Laboratory Training and Research Aid (ULTRA) is being developed under the direction of Drs. David Lunney and Robert Morrison of the ECU chemistry faculty.

Salt's presentation on the device was delivered at a Chemical Education Division symposium on teaching the physically handicapped. Hartness, who serves as a consultant for the project, demonstrated how a blind student might use the instrument.

The demonstration was made with a smaller compact system referred to as the "dumb talking box". Salt said the DTB is the forerunner to the more powerful ULTRA system but unlike ULTRA it contains no microcomputer, hence the name "dumb".

Presentations on other aspects of the talking microcomputer were delivered by Ron Terry of Greenville, a chemistry graduate student; by David Sowell of Greenville, a computer science student; and by Margaret M. Cetera of Greenville, a graduate student in chemistry.

Gary Locklair of Greensboro, a technician on the project, attended as did Lunney and Morrison.

Alger is the son of Mr. Albert A. Salt of Cove City. Hartness is the son of Dr. John D. Hartness and Mrs. Louise V. Hartness of Rocky Mount. Sowell is the son of Dr. Katye O. Sowell of Greenville.

AP Urban Affairs Writer
The Internal Revenue Service says it received more than 13,000 "protest" tax returns in 1980, and it expects even more this year. An unknown number of others don't file at all — as their own kind of silent protest.

What tactics do these tax rebels use to try to penetrate the legal armor of the IRS? Do they ever get away with it? What can happen to you if you try to protest paying income tax, or refuse to pay at all?

Here, in question-and-answer form, is what usually happens when the IRS does battle with a tax protester:

Q. Many tax protesters argue you don't have to file federal income tax returns because you sign an oath on your return swearing that you are telling the truth — and false statements can send you to jail. Aren't they right when they say this violates the Fifth Amendment guarantee against self-incrimination?

A. The federal courts have repeatedly said no. In landmark cases in the past decade, federal appeals courts have said there is no Fifth Amendment privilege allowing you to refuse to file an income tax return.

Q. Some argue that the Constitution, as framed nearly 200 years ago by the Founding Fathers, expressly forbade a direct tax on individuals. Specifically, Article I, Sections 2 and 9 seem only to allow Congress to pass such a tax if it is apportioned among the states based on the census. Is that true?

A. That has not been true since 1913, when the 16th Amendment cleared the way for a direct federal income tax on individuals. The amendment said such a tax could be levied "without apportionment among the several states, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

The courts have since consistently held that the federal government has the right to collect an income tax.

Q. What happens to protesters who still refuse to file income tax at all on the belief the tax is unconstitutional? What are the chances of getting away with it?

A. Not good, according to IRS investigators. Even if you try to hide your income and your spending from the IRS, it is almost impossible not to leave some kind of clue, a paper trail — things you buy, interest from your bank account, perhaps an insurance claim — that might raise IRS suspicions.

Anyone who willingly and knowingly refuses to file a return can be jailed for a year and fined $10,000, plus a penalty of 50 percent of the taxes due. Some 539 income tax protesters have been jailed in the last four years.

If the protester still refuses to pay, the IRS can sell his property, seize his bank account, or do virtually whatever it takes to get the taxes.

Q. What about protesters who take numerous additional exemptions on W-4 forms so that no tax is withheld?

A. The IRS recently announced new rules to tighten up on this form of protest. Since March 1980, all employers were required to send all W-4 forms claiming 10 or more exemptions to the IRS. IRS investigators then give them an "eyeball exam." Many people who claim 10, 20 or more exemptions are perfectly within their rights — if they can show they expect a high amount of deductions for, say, property taxes and expenses.

But if the number of exemptions seems excessive compared with the previous year's return, the IRS will send a registered letter to the taxpayer asking for an explanation. The taxpayer has 30 days to respond.

If that letter is ignored, the IRS will notify the employer to disregard the exemption claim. The employer is then instructed to withhold at a lower level, usually the level of the previous W-4 form, or at "single-0," the highest withholding possible.

If the employer fails to comply, new regulations announced last month make him potentially liable for the employee's taxes.

The penalty for claiming false numbers of exemptions is $500 and up to a year in prison, or both.

Q. What happens if someone files a "protest return," with written objections, or one that claims affiliation with a church associated with the tax revolt movement?

A. IRS computers are programmed to "kick out" tax forms that display certain kinds of discrepancies. For instance, if a person claims he has taken a "vow of poverty" as a church minister, but files a withholding that states he has personal income, the computer will question such a return.

Thus, say IRS inspectors, a bona fide clergyman who does outside work like teaching and claims religious exemptions on the income might be just as likely to be "kicked out" by the computer as a tax protester.

A special team of investigators at each of 10 IRS service centers around the country then will examine the return, and determine if it is an "ITP," the jargon for an illegal tax protest.

The suspected protest return is sent to the appropriate district office, with a note identifying the tax laws the return appears to violate.

From that point on, the return is handled like any other facing an IRS audit. A tax examiner contacts the protester by letter, asking him to produce documentation for his claims. If the protester fails to appear, the IRS can take whatever steps are necessary to collect the tax.

Protesters occasionally band together and hire a lawyer to take the IRS to court, either to argue the IRS is persecuting their "church" in violation of the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of religion, or on grounds the income tax itself is unconstitutional.

The government has yet to lose such a case, according to the IRS.

The penalty for filing a fraudulent protest return is one year in jail, or a $10,000 fine, or both. Anyone convicted of encouraging others to file false returns faces a three-year prison sentence, and $5,000 fine, or both.

Some 2,781 Americans — including protesters and non-protesters — have been jailed for tax fraud in the last four years.

Conservatism For Furniture

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

Associated Press Writer
HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A national mood shift away from faddism and toward conservatism is good news for furniture makers, industry leaders said at the opening of the Spring Southern Furniture Market on Thursday.

"The informal lifestyles definitely dominate the scene," said William L. Hairston III, president of Trend Line Furniture of Hickory. "But there's something different happening. The mood of our country is more positive, more conservative, less faddish and our health is becoming more important."

Hairston says that means consumers see "better quality, more comfort, durability and confidence in merchants and manufacturers with a history of credibility and stability."

Another furniture executive said economic woes are leading people to buy more conservative furniture.

"There's a great feeling of frustration with an insensitive bureaucracy," said Charles Millender II, vice president of White Furniture Co. of Mebane. "People feel helpless. They feel like they're being cheated by inflation without anything they can do about it."

The result, he said, is that people are turning to old-fashioned and traditional furniture rather than contemporary items.

The popularity of such furnishings is enhanced in cases where they are visually receptive but make enough of a statement to meet ego needs," he said.

Buying according to fads is "no longer affordable" as purchases of older and more reliable pieces gain in the marketplace, Millender said.

The "throw away" culture is on the way out and this engenders a feeling of quality," he said.

Millender predicted that the interaction of old and new promises a "bright interesting future" for furniture.

One furniture executive said his company will steer clear of waterbeds and other trends, despite indications that waterbed sales are on the rise.

"We plan to produce furniture that's timeless in value," said William P. Kemp, president of Kemp Furniture Industries in Goldsboro.

Kemp blamed lack of employee participation for much of the furniture industry's sluggish sales and called for a relaxation of government regulations. He said this would allow industry to create more for its workers.

Disputing predictions that it could take as long as a year for the furniture industry to pull out of its slump, Kemp said, "I think we're headed into the brightest period of the furniture business. People are finally realizing that their homes are the most inflationary-proof places there are."
