FBI Pardons Make Grateful U.S. Intelligence Community

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of two former FBI officials pardoned by President Reagan for authorizing illegal break-ins during a probe of anti-war radicals in the early 1970s says he owes one to the Gipper. And, he says, so does the entire U.S. intelligence community.

Reagan announced unconditional pardons Wednesday for

W. Mark Felt, 67, once the FBI's No. 2 official, and Edward S. Miller, 57, onetime head of the bureau's intelligence division. Both men said they felt vindicated.

Felt and Miller were convicted in U.S. District Court in Washington last November — two days after Reagan's election — of conspiring to violate individual civil rights by authorizing secret searches, without warrants, of homes of friends and relatives of radical Weather Underground fugitives in 1972 and 1973.

The pardons wipe out fines of $5,000 against Felt and $3,000 against Miller. Neither man was sentenced to prison.

"America was generous to those who refused to serve their country in the Vietnam War," Reagan said Wednesday. "We can be no less generous to two men who acted on high principle to bring an end to the terrorism that was threatening our nation."

A jubilant Miller told a news conference: "My first thought when I got the call was that I certainly owe the Gipper."

But Miller, who referred to Reagan's film portrayal of legendary Notre Dame football player George Gipp, said the pardons also give the intelligence community its "biggest shot in the arm... in a long time."

Miller said that after he and Felt were prosecuted, other FBI agents might have been reluctant "to do the job 100 percent." The pardon may change that, he said.

Felt, describing himself as relieved that a "heavy burden" had been lifted from his shoulders, said he could not understand why prosecutors referred to the victims of the break-ins as "friends and relatives" of Weather Underground fugitives.

With one exception, he said, "I refer to them as members and supporters." He did not explain why or specify the exception.

Reagan signed the pardons March 26, but presidential counsel Fred Fielding said public announcement was delayed when Reagan was shot March 30 in an assassination attempt.

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said there had been no request for a pardon from the two men through the department, which is the normal procedure. He said the action was one the president had wanted to take for a long time and White House officials had checked with the department on procedures for giving pardons.

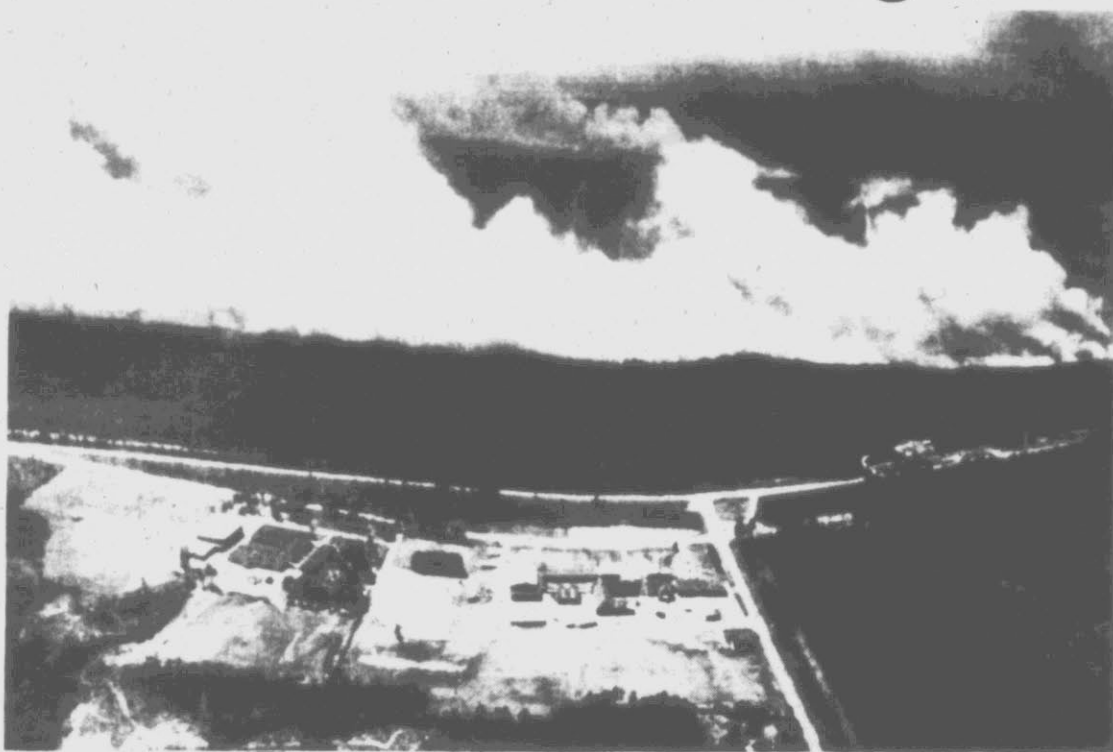

He quoted Attorney General William French Smith as saying, "I wholeheartedly agree" with the action.

On NBC's "Today" show, Smith said today that Reagan had determined there was no criminal intent. Smith said it had been a very close call whether or not to bring the case to trial during the Carter administration. "Had I been attorney general, I would not have initiated those prosecutions," he said.

Warren Asks Clarification

Pitt-Greene State Rep. Ed N. Warren has requested that Sen. Jesse Helms and Sen. John East provide appraisals of the future of the tobacco and peanut programs of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Sen. Helms was also asked by Rep. Warren to provide "clarification of Secretary Block's and Mr. Stockman's statements" concerning the tobacco program.

In a letter dated Apr. 9, Warren told Sen. East, "We are becoming more apprehensive as we see the potential erosion of the two most successful farm programs ever devised. We see a change of philosophy in the Department of Agriculture that could lead to a rapid deterioration of net farm income in eastern North Carolina. We are greatly concerned over Secretary Block's recommendations on the peanut program. His recommendations will virtually dismantle this program that means so much in our area."

He told Sen. Helms in a letter also dated Apr. 9, "During your campaign, and as recently as the Tobacco Associates meeting in Raleigh, you said you did not go to Washington to preside over the demise of the tobacco program. Yet the Office of Management and Budget and the Secretary of Agriculture appear to agree that funds for the grading service and loans through Commodity Credit Corporation must be deleted or altered, with farmers bearing the burden of increased costs."

He asked that both senators see that the tobacco program remain "intact and unaltered."

HOLLY RIDGE, N.C. (AP) — Forest fires left 17,000 acres in ashes Wednesday in what state officials said were the largest fires in southeastern North Carolina in several years — and the inferno is expected to continue today.

Four major fires in Onslow County injured a firefighter and forced evacuation of two schools as they spread smoke over large parts of Onslow and Pender counties, said North Carolina Forest Service spokesman M.B. "Tex" Kunselman.

At one point, officials reported nine fires in the county, but some of the fires joined. They said arson was suspected in some of the fires.

Weather conditions are still hindering efforts to put out the fires, said Forest Service fire prevention specialist Tom Hegele. The humidity was in the low 20s with winds gusting up to 25 miles per hour during the day and 14 miles per hour Wednesday night.

"The weather tomorrow looks like a carbon copy of today," he said Wednesday afternoon. "There is no rain in sight."

"It just looks terrible," said Joyce Carter, fire watcher at the Topsal Fire Tower south of Holly Ridge. "There's just smoke everywhere, thick smoke."

J.C. Calhoun, a Weyerhaeuser Co. employee operating a fireplow at Piney Green, was taken by helicopter to Onslow Memorial Hospital in Jacksonville. He was treated for burns on his hands and released.

Firemen evacuated about 1,000 Dixon elementary and high school students as a safety precaution because of propane gas tanks on school grounds, school officials said.

The fire swept past the school and did not burn the grounds, and school will reopen Thursday if the fires subside, an Onslow County school spokesman said.

Firefighters set up a helicopter pad at the vacated Dixon school campus near the intersection of highways 17 and 210.

Firefighters from as far west as Asheville were summoned to southern Onslow County to help contain blazes near Holly Ridge.

About 50 firefighters from across the state joined firemen from 25 Onslow County volunteer fire departments, Pender County volunteer departments and area timber companies to contain fires in various parts of the county.

International Paper Co. owns most of the land damaged by three major fires along Highway 17.

Israeli Raid PLO Bases

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) —

Israeli jets blasted Palestinian guerrilla strongholds in southern Lebanon today. Israeli frogmen blew up a cargo ship in the port of Sidon, and two Palestinian guerrillas were killed trying to balloon into Israel to take hostages, officials and radio broadcasts said.

Lebanese provincial officials said the Israeli jets hit guerrilla positions and supply routes in the Ras el-Ain and Taibet al-Arab areas near the southern port city of Tyre, 50 miles south of Beirut and 12 miles north of the Israeli border.

There was no immediate report of casualties. Israel confirmed its jets hit the guerrilla base at Ras el-Ein. It said the attack was aimed at pre-empting guerrilla raids on Israel and that all jets returned safely. There was no Israeli comment on the ship sinking.

Lebanon's state radio said the frogmen paddled into Sidon before dawn and set three explosive charges that ripped apart the hull of the 350-ton freighter and sank the vessel.

The broadcast said the cargo consisted of canned foodstuffs from the Cypriot port of Limassol.

The radio quoted a spokesman for the governor's office in Sidon, 25 miles south of here, as saying the ship's captain and crew were ashore when the explosions took place and there were no casualties.

The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon said that after the blasts, the frogmen were retrieved by an Israeli gunboat waiting at the edge of Lebanon's territorial waters.

In Tel Aviv, the military command said Israeli anti-aircraft gunners shot down a hot-air balloon carrying two Palestinian guerrillas on a cross-border raid.

It said the raiders survived a crash from several hundred feet and landed inside Lebanon, but Israeli ground troops pursued them and killed them in a firefight.

Free Bus Rides

Mayo Allen, director of the city's Public Works Department, reminded area citizens that the local transit system (GREAT) will operate on Friday free of charge to the public through the sponsorship of Greenville merchants.

Allen said GREAT will operate as usual on Saturday, but will not run on Easter Monday.

To Vote On Fired Judge

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Members of the state House will be asked to decide whether judges, unlike other state employees, must forfeit their retirement benefits as well as the opportunity to hold office in the future if they're removed from the bench.

The question was prompted by efforts to restore retirement benefits to ousted District Court Judge Linwood Peoples of Henderson, who supporters say now finds himself in ailing health.

Meanwhile, Gov. Jim Hunt criticized as "a good idea whose time hasn't come" a proposed $86 million tax break for industry. The bill is headed to the House floor with the support of Speaker Liston Ramsey.

Several weeks ago, the Senate approved a bill introduced by Sen. James Speed, D-Louisburg, that would have restored to Peoples $386.87 a month retirement and $155 a month survivors benefits for his wife when he dies.

But the House Pensions and Retirements Committee amended the bill Wednesday so it would restore benefits to all judges removed from office since Jan. 1, 1974, the effective date of the Judicial Retirement Act which restructured the retirement system.

The committee approved the bill as amended and sent it to the House.

A spokesman for the Judicial Standards Commission said the amended bill would apply to Peoples, who was removed from office in December 1978, and District Court Judge Bill Martin of Hickory, who was removed from office this past March.

The state Supreme Court, by recommendation of the state Judicial Standards Commission, removed Peoples for allegedly dismissing traffic cases outside of court and Martin for alleged sexual misconduct.

Martin stands to gain $330.10 a month retirement and $165.05 a month survivors benefits to his widow. He applied April 1 to withdraw $11,900 he had contributed to the retirement system, but he is not eligible to receive the money until June 1.

The House committee already had approved the original bill applying to Peoples, but the committee voted to reconsider the matter Wednesday as a result of a public hearing last week.

In other legislative action:

Industrial Taxes

The House also was scheduled to begin consideration of a tax bill combining a state income tax credit for manufacturers with a requirement that medium- and large-size corporations make quarterly estimated state income tax payments.

Current laws allow North Carolina corporations to defer their tax payments until the end of the taxable year.

The combination, in effect, would postpone the tax credit's impact on state revenues until after the coming biennium.

Dear Abby

Read Literature On The Subject

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in our early 20s and plan to have at least one child in the future. We are curious about "natural childbirth," where the mother is fully conscious and is given nothing for pain. Also, the father is present to coach her breathing and stays to witness the actual birth. Personally, I wouldn't care to be present in the delivery room, yet I've heard that the father who witnesses the birth of his child feels much closer to the child as well as to his wife.

Abby, my parents and my wife's had a total of 11 children between them. Neither her father nor mine was present when any of their children were born, and none of us seems to have suffered any deprivation of love.

Our friends who have experienced natural childbirth praise it highly. The whole idea of natural childbirth — the mother's being conscious without taking anything for pain, and the father's witnessing the entire procedure — seems repugnant to both my wife and me. Although my wife has a fairly high tolerance for pain, she would prefer to have some type of anesthetic, and I really don't think I would love my child less if I sat in the waiting room during the delivery.

Our friends can't believe that we still prefer the old-fashioned private-type delivery. Is there something wrong with our thinking?

CURIOUS IN N.H.

DEAR CURIOUS: There is nothing "wrong" with your thinking, but since you are curious about natural childbirth, you should learn more about it. Your doctor, or friends who have praised it, can provide you with some illuminating literature on the subject.

DEAR ABBY: A couple with whom my husband and I had been very close recently separated. (They weren't married, just living together.) The four of us had spent many wonderful times together. To make a long story short, Lisa has been using my husband's shoulder to cry on. Doug (my husband) has taken Lisa's side of it, and he is no longer friendly to Lisa's former boyfriend.

I always had the feeling that Doug had more than just a brotherly feeling about Lisa, although in the 10 years we have been married, he hasn't given me any reason to be jealous.

Doug visits Lisa frequently at her apartment and she calls him on the phone at home and at work, but she always includes both of us when she entertains. Should I be worried?

M.A. FROM MASS.

DEAR M.A.: Worrying is non-productive. But do keep your eyes open. It may not be your husband's shoulder Lisa is after.

DEAR ABBY: RICHARD, a divorced U.S. Army officer, said he was shocked at the number of women who expect sex on the first date in repayment for a lovely evening. It's true. And these women spoil it for the rest of us.

Many men expect women to "put out" or get out on the first date. I'm talking about professionals — doctors, lawyers, college students, etc. — who come from good families.

There are a lot of men who refuse to date a woman unless they get to know her sexually. Who needs this kind of garbage and abuse? Sex devoid of love is a form of prostitution; women are using their bodies for trade and in the process they're degrading themselves.

Don't worry, RICHARD, there are still plenty of women out there who believe in romantic love and are real ladies. I'm happy to see that real gentlemen exist, too.

Stories about children who are geniuses absolutely intrigue me. I read about a little girl recently who, at the age of seven months, was reading off the diaper box. At age three, she read an instruction booklet out loud covering the 1040 tax forms, and one night when she was two, she met her Daddy at the door by reciting Shakespeare with a childish lisp. "Is thy name Robert a fair name? I'll have no father if you be not him."

That's putting it on the line. I read of another child who was 2 1/2 years old, spoke five languages, played the guitar and built his own computer out of the telephone in his mother's kitchen.

I think I got a Christmas newsletter from them last year.

In fact, there are 2.5 million youngsters in this country who are certifiably gifted. Thirty-five of them lived on our block.

It was very intimidating and I played the game as long as I could. Whenever all the mothers got together, the first liar didn't stand a chance.

If I said my child had "slept dry" for three nights, another mother said her child had not only stayed dry, but had sat up with two bedwetters who needed help to get through the night.

If my child played "Theme From Dr. Zhivago" on his nose, the next mother informed the group that her toddler was guest conductor for the Cincinnati Symphony next season.

After awhile, I just couldn't keep up. They discovered my child couldn't speed-read when he was busily tracing his finger back and forth across six or seven books a minute — and the books were upside down.

They discovered he had indeed mixed his own formula for his bottle — but he was seven years old at the time.

Things really came to a head one day when I was in the supermarket and asked my child to put a loaf of bread in my basket. He said he couldn't remember which one was mine and a mother of a genius said, "You can't miss it. It's the one with your brother in it."

Did you know that Einstein failed his entrance exams at Polytechnic Institute in Zurich? At times like that, it's nice to think about.

Mother Loses First Lady Role

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — President Jean-Claude Duvalier's mother has lost the title of "First Lady of the Republic" to her new daughter-in-law.

The move announced by government proclamation Tuesday could be a major victory for the mulatto bride in the power struggle with her mother-in-law, a member of Haiti's black majority and widow of dictator Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier.

Duvalier's mother, Simone Duvalier, was given the new title, "First Lady of the Revolution," for life.

A fight for influence in the palace has raged between the two women in recent months. In the last two months, Michelle Bennett Duvalier, 30, appeared to have gained the upper hand against her mother-in-law, who is in her mid 60s.

Several weeks ago, dozens of friends and relatives of the president's mother were reported arrested and deported after allegedly criticizing the president's wife of 11 months.

— Lloyd Flanagan, a D. H. Conley student, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Flanagan. He will be attending the Winston-Salem West School, and his field is natural science. Lloyd is a member of the Science and Literary Clubs, and has appeared in a school play and a school musical. is a member of the Science and MAF Clubs, and plays football. He is president of a church youth group, and is a member of an Explorers Scout group. Judson has served both as governor's page and senate page. Judson enjoys hunting, fur trapping and swimming.

— Pamela Joyner is another D. H. Conley student who will be attending the Governor's School East. Her field of interest is natural sciences, and she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Joyner of Rt. 2, Greenville. Pamela is secretary of the Science Club, and holds memberships in the National Honor Society, Mu Alpha Theta, the math team, Bi-Chem-Phy and RECAST. She is also a Girl Scout and likes arts, crafts, baseball, soccer and reading.

Retrenchment Is Ahead

As with almost every governmental agency the city Recreation and Parks Department is feeling the impending cuts in federal funds.

Boyd Lee, director, reported to the commission last week that the department will lose the Young Adult Conservation Corps program. That is a loss of $300,695 in funds and 20 to 25 fulltime positions in maintenance. That means the Recreation and Parks Department will have to operate with one third of the maintenance positions it now has. Lee says there are no funds in the budget to pick up the positions.

There has also been a $20,000 budget item for Youth Conservation Corps summer workers who have been cleaning up the park areas north of the river.

"As gloomy as it may seem, we are approaching these difficult times with positive ideas and attitudes," Lee said. "Our program started without federal funds and it will continue without them." He said it was the department's philosophy to provide a first class program regardless.

Retrenchment is a sign of the times, and the Recreation and Parks Department appears ready to make the best of it. Recreational programs will be continued insofar as money available allows. And the city should do everything it can to maintain the buildings and parks that the department is currently responsible for. Maintenance that isn't done regularly becomes far more expensive later.

Park Is Affected by Cuts

Federal budget cuts will affect us all in many ways, and one will be a reduction in time that the campgrounds in the Cape Hatteras National Seashore will be open.

One of the campgrounds won't open at all and the others will open six weeks later than planned because of budget cuts by both the Carter and Reagan administration.

The cuts are not, of course, the end of the world, but it does mean the national park area will be a little less usable by its millions of visitors every year.

THIS AFTERNOON

Sales Tax Boost?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — While tax-nervous Tar Heels have been keeping close watch on an increased gasoline tax for an ailing Highway Fund, momentum has been quietly gaining for another tax measure destined to cost just as much — another local penny sales tax.

Local governments are now getting one penny while the state keeps three cents. It is a local option matter which either a local vote or action by county commissioners approves. All counties except Burke now have the extra penny, splitting the $205.5 million annual income on the basis either of retail sales volume or per capita income.

Meanwhile, a second local sales tax measure is in the works in the General Assembly which would also boost income slightly, and cut administrative costs so that local governments would receive more from the source.

Local government officials have been quietly pushing the added sales tax as a source of increased revenue at a time when resistance to property tax increases is at a peak.

Endorsed

Both Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green take a positive stance on the question; conceding that local governments do need added income, and that action at the state level would be only that of allowing those which want to collect the extra penny to exercise that option.

But an element of uncertainty in that optional choice is apparent when the two proposals are looked at together — one for another penny, and one for a new way of collecting and distributing.

State Rep. Douglas A. Clark of Kenansville is sponsor of the collection proposal which, essentially would cause the tax to be levied statewide in every county — including Burke which so far has opted not to do so. Then, a simple formula for splitting the money back to the local governments based on local per capita income and population and only partially on sales tax volume would be put into operation.

This change alone would produce nearly $10 million more yearly for local governments. Burke County residents would start paying the penny; a Mecklenburg County tax cap of $10 would be eliminated; and the tax would be collected regardless of place of sale or place of residence of the buyer. Each of those revisions would produce about $3.3 million.

Additionally, a significant savings would be found in administrative overhead costs in Raleigh where collecting, auditing, splitting, and remitting the money now costs $1.6 million per year. That high cost results from the different methods of rebating, and from an especially confusing element in the tax: if you do business in one county and the merchandise is delivered to a resident of another county, the local penny tax is not paid.

Confusion

If the resident from another county comes in the store to make the purchase, the tax is due in the county where you are doing business. If it's a mail or telephone order, and delivery is made across the county line, no tax is due even though both counties have the local option tax in effect. This situation causes not only a significant tax loss, but considerable confusion; and the opportunity for collection of taxes which are not turned in. State auditing of sales tax collections is also complicated enormously.

But the problem in all of this motion is that if the proposal becomes law that the penny is collected statewide and redistributed

Social Security Move

WASHINGTON — A House subcommittee last week took a deep breath, mumbled a prayer for political survival, and made the first intelligent move in many years toward rescuing our Social Security system from the mess it is in. The subcommittee voted gradually to increase the age at which full retirement benefits are paid from 65 to 68.

It was not a final vote. Before a bill is sent along to the full Ways and Means Committee, a dozen different formulas may be run through the computers. Tentatively, at least, the subcommittee also is thinking of removing the earnings limitation for all retirees over the age of 68. Under present law the limitation applies to persons over 72.

In any event, the hopeful signal is that such influential congressmen as J. J. Pickle of Texas, the subcommittee chairman, are prepared to think the unthinkable. They are thinking of a major change in the system by which millions of Americans enter retirement.

And high time. It has been bad enough, all these years, to suffer the soft euphemisms and plain sham that have be paid to persons already born.

The factors that produce this melancholy picture contain no mysteries. Quite simply, people are living longer. If they retire at 65, the period in which benefits must be paid becomes a longer and more costly period. A complicating factor is that many workers aren't waiting for 65 to retire. They're retiring at 62 or 63. Forty-five years ago, when Social Security began, half of all males over 65 were working. Now only one-fifth of all males over 65 are working, and their retirement periods have increased by one-third.

In a study just released by the National Federation of Independent Business, Dr. Michael J. Boskin states the characterized Social Security. The system is known formally as Old Age and Survivors Insurance, but the system never has constituted "insurance" as the term is generally used. The delicate word is that we make "contributions" to the program. There are no trust funds. Current benefits are paid from current taxes.

The realities are worse than the make-believe. The stunning tax increases voted in 1977 were supposed to make the system "solvent" or "actuarially sound," but those easy assurances already have proved hollow. When prospective benefits under present law are ranged against prospective revenues, we find an unfunded liability approaching $1 trillion. That is for benefits to

President's Work Light

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The timing was so right that even the White House spokesman had to smile.

When deputy press secretary Larry Speakes let out the word that the recuperating president was working two hours a day, the wags in the press room shot back: "Oh, business as usual."

While Ronald Reagan was hospitalized, recovering from the gunshot wound inflicted in the March 30 assassination attempt, his senior aides took pains to convey an image of a functioning president, meeting with advisers, signing papers, working on the telephone.

They dutifully made an early morning trip to his hospital room each day and then kept a slow but steady stream of important visitors flowing over there.

But now that Reagan is back in the White House — if not the Oval Office — that effort seems to have relaxed.

"Enough has gotten out, even to Peoria, that the president is feeling good, getting things done, signing papers," said one presidential assistant, who asked not to be identified.

Questions about how much work the president has been doing present his aides with a dilemma. On the one hand, they have been saying that business is being conducted as usual, that the work of the White House is moving forward.

But on the other hand, they have acknowledged that progress is being made even though the president's work time is only a few hours a day. This has invited questions about how much difference it makes when the president is incapacitated.

When healthy, Reagan has operated at a much-reduced pace than his predecessor. Jimmy Carter was often in the Oval Office before sunrise, worked most of the day and returned there after dinner.

But the fact that Carter spent those long hours at work never seemed to make much of an impression with the voters, and the Reagan staff made no effort before the shooting to disguise this president's penchant for taking a Wednesday afternoon off when he could.

James A. Baker III, the White House chief of staff, said a strong effort was made during the first months of the administration to overcome the perception that Reagan's overall style of working was less than energetic, "because it wasn't reality."

Will that perception reappear as the president recuperates in the glass-enclosed solarium atop the White House?

"We hope not," Baker said in an interview.

By his and others' portrayals of the way Reagan works, little time is taken up poring over lengthy documents or memoranda submitted by staff members.

In the hospital, Reagan missed the hour-long discussions of top aides and government officials in the Cabinet Room — meetings that took up his time during the first two months in office.

So three- and four-page memoranda, outlining various policy options, were sent to him, although this is not how he likes to operate.

"He likes to hear the options orally," said Baker, adding that Reagan prefers live discussions to picking through "a great, big, thick memorandum."

Reagan's doctors were insistent that he work up slowly to his earlier pace. One person, more than any other, is in charge of making sure he does that — Nancy Reagan.

"The resident boss of the East Wing," was how one senior staff member described her. "She's very effective" at limiting the president's schedule, he said.

So, when the pilots of the space shuttle Columbia were circling the globe Monday and it came time for the White House to call them and offer best wishes, the job fell to Vice President George Bush.

The vice president told a private audience later that

To the editor:

Once again the Rose High Drama Department is preparing to present a spring musical, and once again the performers and other volunteers will spend much of their time constructing and putting up a set to perform with. As a participant in the musical and a member of the drama club, I know that we in the drama department are willing to work, but it is not fair that the performers of the arts in schools are required to furnish their facilities when athletes' facilities are provided for them. Just as athletes need a place to compete, performers of the arts need a place to perform. Is this too much to ask for?

To the editor:

Easter is just around the corner. All the little children are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the Easter Bunny and the Easter hunts with the beautifully colored eggs hidden among the lovely green grass and behind the barn on the banks of the pond under the lily pads. At least, this is what is practiced among the younger generation of Americans today. There isn't anything wrong with this legendary version of Easter and its involvements. But I sincerely believe that children should be taught the true meaning of Easter and what it really represents.

Strength For Today

A road sign carried the ironic but sound words, "Be smart; cooperate with the inevitable."

Most people storm at the inevitable or tend to become bitter. Some people try to evade it. Perhaps the worst thing we can do with regard to the inevitable is succumb to it.

Most circumstances in life can be changed by our efforts, but there are some which very decidedly cannot be. There is nothing we can do about them except face them with courage, calmness, and determination to make the best of it.

Failure to cooperate with the inevitable brings nothing but frustration. But often, if we take a cooperative attitude we find that the inevitable is not such a disaster as we thought it was. In fact, the inevitable can sometimes become very friendly. Many people have found out that untoward circumstances have opened many favorable new opportunities. — Elisha Douglass

Reappointed To Head Guard

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt announced Wednesday that Maj. Gen. William E. Ingram has been reappointed Adjutant General of North Carolina, head of the state's National Guard division.
"Probably the greatest tribute to Gen. Ingram's tenure as adjutant general is that the guard has for the first time exceeded 100 percent of authorized strength," Hunt said.

Hunt first appointed Ingram as adjutant general in 1977.

case bluntly. A vast part of Social Security is plainly and simply a transfer of income from the young and productive to the old and no longer productive. The implicit understanding that has kept the system from political collapse is that today's workers, who are now supporting their parents and grandparents, eventually will ride on the backs of their own children and grandchildren, and so ad infinitum.

That prospect is bound to hold diminishing appeal for new generations. At present three workers support one recipient. When those born in the postwar baby boom begin to retire, about 2010, the ratio will drop to 2-to-1. At some point both employees and employers may rise in political rebellion against an intolerable burden.

In some fashion, as Pickle's subcommittee is acknowledging, that enormous burden will have to be relieved. Dr. Boskin's chief proposal is to separate those benefits to which a retiree is entitled by reason of his own tax payments from those benefits that are financed out of current taxes. This would shift about two-thirds of the cost to the Treasury's general fund, but this would have the virtue of honesty. We would be treating welfare for what it is, to wit, welfare. He too recommends phasing in an extended retirement age, so that by 2000 or 2010, full benefits would not be paid until age 68.

Such an extension, by Dr. Boskin's estimate, would produce an extra $170 billion in taxes, but more to the point, it would save about $620 billion in benefits. If it's necessary to save a system that means so much to so many — and it is necessary — it will do us no harm to work a year or so longer.

under a new formula, and another penny local sales tax is allowed on a local option basis, then the General Assembly will only have recreated the same present problems on that new penny tax and will, in effect, be operating two different systems.

With momentum growing from all sections of the state for the higher sales tax, some insiders think the end result will be both the new penny tax and the statewide collection and redistribution system — but without the optional element.

Hinckley Said In Dayton During Visit By Carter

Realtors Plan Property Week Activities

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors announced that it has planned a number of activities for the public to celebrate national Private Property Week, April 19-25.

David Nichols, president, said the celebration of Americans' right to own property includes a seminar on how to buy a home, a "trash and treasure" sale, and festivities at Carolina East Mall—clowns, music, photo displays and an information booth.

Featured at Thursday's home buying seminar, set for 7:30 p.m. at the downtown Planters National Bank office, will be information on new financing techniques such as adjustable-rate mortgages and shared-appreciation mortgages, Nichols said. Other financing methods will be discussed, as well as the mechanics of home buying, legal aspects, affordability and what to look for in energy efficiency.

The "trash and treasure" sale, to benefit the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center, will be held Saturday, 7:30 a.m. until 3 p.m., at Elm Street Park. The public is invited to donate unwanted household items and baked goods, it was noted. Donations may be given to any Realtor, or arrangements may be made to have items picked up by calling 756-5395.

Realtors will be at Carolina East Mall all week, where they will distribute information. Winners of the photo and essay contests will be announced and awarded prizes on Monday, April 20 at 7:30 p.m. Clown Alley will have clowns there to entertain.

Private Property Week is celebrated annually by the National Association of Realtors and its state and local boards.

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., charged in the assassination attempt on President Reagan, was in this southwest Ohio town last year the same time as former President Jimmy Carter, according to the Dayton Daily News.

The 25-year-old Hinckley, from Evergreen, Colo., is accused of firing shots at Reagan on March 30 in Washington, injuring the president and three others.

In a copyright story Wednesday, the Daily News reported that Hinckley was in Dayton on Oct. 2, the same day Carter appeared at a town hall-style meeting.

Unidentified sources were quoted as saying Hinckley was registered at the Sheraton-Dayton Hotel, a block from the Dayton Convention Center where Carter spoke.

Hinckley was arrested for allegedly trying to carry firearms onto a plane in Nashville, Tenn., on Oct. 9, 1980, while Carter was stumping there. Other reports have placed him in Chicago on Oct. 6 during another Carter campaign appearance.

Daily News sources said a Sheraton worker identified Hinckley from a photo shown by FBI agents. He allegedly registered at the hotel Sept. 30 and checked out Oct. 2, the sources said.

Daily News sources said Hinckley registered under his own name. Federal agents traced him to Dayton since he allegedly cashed several $20 traveler's checks there, including at least two at the hotel, the sources said.

Al Heffernan, senior resident agent of the FBI office in Dayton, said he could not comment on the report. But he said it was safe to assume authorities were checking cities visited by the president and presidential candidates to see if Hinckley may have been there.

Carter's visit in Dayton was brief. He arrived late in the morning at Wright Patterson Air Force Base, motored to the convention center for the noon town hall session and left soon after the meeting.

When Carter arrived at the center, he entered through the front door, greeting some of the crowd gathered in front. He left through a back door.

Secret Service agents said everyone who entered the center was checked visually and by a metal detector.

Urge Boycott Of Riot Probe

LONDON (AP) — Although black leaders in the violence-torn Brixton area have called off a scheduled weekend protest rally, they continue to urge a boycott of a government probe into the clashes between black youths and police.

Both decisions were announced Wednesday following a 90-minute meeting of 300 blacks sponsored by the Brixton Defense Committee. Whites and reporters were excluded.

The committee was formed in the wake of last weekend's riots in the South London district in which 200 persons were arrested and 150 policemen were injured. The rally was announced Monday to protest the arrests.

Rudy Narayan, a black lawyer who chairs the committee, said later that Brixton's predominantly black community wanted to avoid further violence and did not want to act against the public interest.

Whites were excluded from the meeting as a "security measure" and the press was barred allegedly because young blacks refused to talk freely with reporters present, Narayan said.

He declined to explain why the proposed rally was cancelled and why the group decided to boycott the government investigation.

There was almost unanimous agreement, Narayan said, not to give "support of any kind" to the inquiry, which is headed by appeal judge Lord Scarman.

Earlier in the day, other black leaders said that without blacks or local municipal officials on the inquiry team, the probe would become a charade.

The rioting, which began Friday, was the worst racial eruption in Britain since large-scale non-white immigration began in 1948. Tensions in Brixton eased Tuesday after a meeting between black leaders and police resulted in the withdrawal of many of the 1,000 officers sent in to quell the disturbance.

Motorcycle Rodeo Is Held

Motorcycle enthusiasts of all ages got together last Saturday at Evans Park for the first annual 4-H Motorcycle Rodeo.

Numerous maneuvering events, including the serpentine weave, the "s" brake drill and the figure eight, drew participants to the competition. Prizes were presented in nine categories, and the winners were as follows:

— First place, overall senior division, Scott Ewell; second place, Stephen Fredericks; third, place,

Tony King

— First place, overall junior, Willie Gay Jr.; niftiest rodeo rider, Willie Gay Jr.

— Event winners, stop-n-go, Stephen Fredericks; serpentine, Scott Ewell; figure eight, Stephen Fredericks; curb ride, Scott Ewell; slow race, Scott Ewell.

"We feel as though the rodeo was a tremendous success," said 4-H leader Jean Kivette, "but it could not have been as successful without the cooperation of the motorcycle clubs and the Greenville police.

"Through their combined efforts we had an educational, fun event," she added.

The morning activities included a discussion and demonstration of motorcycle safety tips, road laws and basic skills, as well as bike care and maintenance by members of motorcycle clubs.

The rodeo was dedicated to the memory of David Dixon, the 14 year-old son of Jesse and Dorothy Dixon of Clark's Neck who was killed in a motorcycle accident in 1979.

Adult advisors and participants included Hugh Benson, Greenville police, rodeo advisor; Johnny Benson, free rider, rodeo coordinator; members of the Frog Level Motorcycle Club and the Unaffiliated Free Riders, who acted as judges and officiates for the rodeo. Assistance was also provided by numerous local businesses and organizations.

A LOOK OF DETERMINATION...is on the face of Scott Ewell of Greenville as he puts his bike through the paces at the 1981 4-H Motorcycle Rodeo held last Saturday. Ewell was the first place winner in the overall senior division and winner of the serpentine, slow race and curb ride events. This was the first year for the rodeo and according to 4-H leaders, the event will be back in 1982. (4-H Photo)

Canal Losses

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The Panama Canal has lost $5 million this year and will probably lose $24 million more during the rest of 1981, canal administrator Denis McAuliffe says.

He blamed higher operating costs and repairs to the locks which reduce the number of ships that can pass through the waterway.

Deputy administrator Fernando Manfredo said use of the canal could drop further with completion of an oil pipeline across the isthmus, and a Mexican "land bridge" that is to start soon across the Tehuantepec Isthmus.

deputy press secretary, quoting Hunt as saying the legislation would "shake up the tax base extensively at a time when the revenue picture is very, very uncertain."

Hunt, who plans to announce a package of tax increases for the state Highway Fund in 10 days, is "philosophically sympathetic to the idea of reducing the inventory tax" but says now is not the time to do it, Hackney said.

But Ramsey said he supports the idea. "In my opinion it's a pretty good bill," he said. "I feel the manufacturer's inventory tax has been a deterrent to new industry."

Terms

The state Senate approved and sent to the House a bill calling for a statewide referendum on a constitutional amendment doubling legislators' terms to four years.

There was relatively little debate on the bill introduced by Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Goldsboro. Barnes and others expressed frustration during a long debate Tuesday over the amount of political campaigning required for two-year legislative terms.

The final vote Wednesday was 35-12 in favor of Barnes' proposal. The measure now goes before the House, where it is expected to face more opposition.

If the House approves the measure, Barnes said the referendum could go before voters this fall and four-year terms could apply to those elected in 1982.

CWIP

A bill that would require public utilities issue stock to customers whose bills help pay for construction of new plants was rejected by a legislative committee as too costly.

Rep. William Harrison, D-Williamston, the bill's sponsor, argued that consumers are paying for facilities from which they'll never benefit.

But opponents of the measure say it would be too costly to issue stock in return for payments under an existing provision that allows utility companies to charge its customers for construction work in progress, or CWIP.

The provision, approved by the 1977 General Assembly, allows utilities to pass along costs of financing new plants, such as nuclear power plants, to ratepayers.

Robert Fischbach, head of the state Utilities Commission's Public Staff, told the committee that CWIP charges for Carolina Power & Light Co. now amount to about 5 percent of the customer's monthly bill while Duke Power's CWIP charge amounts to about 3 percent.

Veto

A legislative committee adopted a substitute for a bill that would give the General Assembly what has been called the power of "legislative veto."

The bill would give the

Space Telescope To Be Orbited In 1985 Mission

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — On a space shuttle cargo manifest for 1985 is the Space Telescope, eagerly awaited by scientists as one of their most promising missions ever.

Above the obscuring atmosphere, the 45-foot-long device will detect objects 50 times fainter than those seen by the best earthbound instruments. Astronomers will be able to see seven times deeper into space, and gaze at up to 350 times the volume of the universe now visible.

The telescope will be carried aloft by Columbia, which performed near-flawlessly on its first space test this week, or by one of three other shuttle craft expected to be flying routinely into orbit by then. Shuttle crews will rocket up periodically to service the telescope, changing lenses, retrieving film, adding the latest in technology.

Science eagerly awaits the age of the shuttle, though it is not getting all it wants. Budget cuts have forced the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to curtail some projects it had hoped to carry on the shuttle, including a Venus mapping device and a probe to Halley's Comet.

Columbia's potential as a military machine and a cargo carrier for industry — communications satellites, metals experiments and the like — have received most of the attention. But science will have its opportunity.

"The engineer and scientist are going to be the astronauts of tomorrow," says Christopher C. Kraft Jr., director of the Johnson Space Center here. "The real payoff out there is going to come from the people who can use that unique environment to produce things, to learn things."

Shuttles also will take up instruments to study dense dust regions trillions of miles away, where new suns may be forming. Other devices will collect X-ray emissions from black holes, quasars, pulsars and white dwarfs as scientists seek to learn more about these puzzling celestial objects.

On some flights, the chief occupant of a shuttle's 60-foot-long cargo bay will be Spacelab, designed to function as a spacecraft within a spacecraft. It is basically a cylinder about 13 feet in diameter, and either 9 or 18 feet long, depending on whether a single or a double laboratory unit is used.

As many as four biochemists, astronomers, doctors or other professionals can work there in a shirt-sleeve environment.

Spacelab was built by a consortium of companies in the 10-member countries of the European Space Agency. A German, a Dutch and a Swiss scientist are training to serve on board, with one of them to share the first mission with an American scientist-astronaut.

Though Spacelab will not be hauled into orbit until the 10th shuttle flight, probably in 1983, plans are under way to use it and its successors for unprecedented scientific studies and space manufacturing demonstrations in the microgravity of space.

There are plans to host large arrays of scientific equipment aboard Spacelab to study earth resources, the sun and deep space.

Fourth Grade Student Wins Bee

AYDEN — Fourth grader Cameron Coburn of Ayden Elementary has won the grand championship in a county-wide spelling bee for students in grades four through eight. In 13 years of competition, he is the first fourth grade student to win the title.

Young Coburn also took the championship for fourth graders, with Tami Tetterton finishing as runner-up.

Other winners and runners-up were: fifth grade, Lisa Pitteway and Kethesa Clemons; sixth grade, Robin Irwin and Bridgette Daniels; seventh grade, Peggy Jenkins and Angie Hardee; and eighth grade, Cynthia Hicks and Dan Barnes.

Other participants in the competition, by grade, were:

Fourth — Tonny Flynn, Tamila Vines, Felicia Johnson, Kimberly Ennis, Susan Harris, Sherri Daughtridge, Daphne McLawhorn and Monique Bembrey; Fifth — Garrett Stanfield, Robert Williams, Ginger Davis, Melissa Gaskins, Bernice Lindsey, Suzette Haddock, Pam Worsley and Harold Worthington; and

Sixth — Sandy Dixon, Lisa Smith, Anthony Cannon, Kenny Grimes, Kim Moore and Vincent Lee; Seventh — Frank Mills, Tammy Reeves, Chris Stewart, Sandi Beaty, Tammy Williams and Chineta Williams; eighth — Olisa Stokes, Michael Richardson, Anita G. Lloyd, Hope Clark, Linwood Harris and Kevin Oakes.

Lillian Bradley and Patsy Jones were co-chairmen of the competition and Nancy Hemink and Miriam Harris served as callers. Charles Dickens of Pitt Community College was the judge.

By JOANNE D'ALCOMO Associated Press Writer BOSTON (AP) — A Harvard professor working on the finances of the Boston school system has figured out a way to avoid closing classes for the year after the Easter break, which begins today, school officials said.

Law Professor Charles Haar, acting as a court-appointed special master, was to give his report today to Superior Court Judge Thomas Morse Jr.

City officials say they cannot provide more funds and classes must close for the year when the schools have spent their $210 million budget. It was feared that classes would not resume after the six-school-day spring vacation.

The state Board of Education has filed suit to keep the schools open.

School Committee lawyer Marshall Simonds said Haar has determined that the deficit for this school year is likely to be $30 million instead of the $38 million that was feared.

The financing plan proposed by Haar would require the city to borrow new money to free $18 million set aside in the treasury for court-ordered tax rebates. It also would require speedy action by the state Legislature on a bill giving Boston $9.4 million in overdue compensation for past school construction projects.

School and city officials then would have to find a way to remedy the remaining deficit of about $2.6 million, Simonds said.

"If you're talking about a deficit of $30 million, then you might feel like throwing up your hands. But if you're only a few million dollars away, then a solution is in your grasp," Simonds said.

Simonds also said Haar has decided against recommending further cuts in the school department, which already has laid off several employees and planned to close 28 of 146 schools.

Mayor Kevin H. White, who refused to increase this year's school budget over last year's spending level, has accused the school committee of reckless spending practices.

White said the resolution of the school crisis rests with the city council.

Renewals Sent

The Pitt County Tax Collector's office said today that renewal notices for beer and wine licenses and Schedule B licenses will be mailed in the near future.

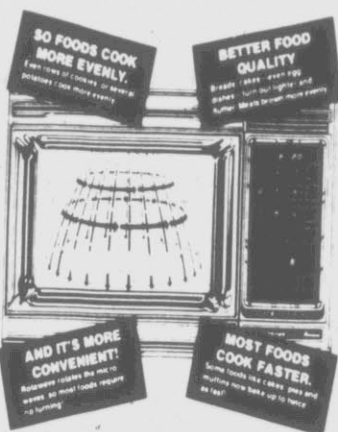

Beer and wine licenses will expire on April 30, while Schedule B licenses will expire on May 31. Along with the renewal notice, officials said, there will be a list of licenses purchased last year and instructions on how to obtain a new license.

Spokesmen said persons applying for new licenses should bring the renewal notice with them.

Officials emphasized that firms not receiving a renewal notice should contact the Tax Collector's office.

Pulitzer Juror Says Process Questionable

By The Associated Press
A Massachusetts publisher who sat on a Pulitzer jury says the award of the feature story prize to a Washington Post reporter who later admitted her story was fabricated has raised "some questions about the integrity of the whole process."

questioned as far back as 1963, when a jury nominated Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" for the drama prize. The board decided to give no drama award that year.

In 1978 it was revealed the Advisory Board to the Pulitzer Prizes had overruled the top recommendations of half of the 10 juries. Columbia's response to the furor was to change the rules so that juries submitted four choices to the board in alphabetical order, without showing their preference, and to drop the word "advisory" from the board's name.

Stephen D. Isaacs, editor of the Minneapolis Star and chairman of this year's international reporting jury, said jurors are invited to give their comments on a second sheet sent to the board, and frequently their comments include their preferences. "I think the Post did the right thing in not accepting the prize," said Bill Hilliard, assistant managing editor of

The Oregonian in Portland and a member of another Pulitzer jury. "Maybe there is a lesson to other staff people around the country who let prizes go to their heads," he said.

Pulitzer Prize Board, which makes the ultimate decisions on the awards, defended the system that gives the board the right to ignore the recommendations of the juries in each category, as it did Monday.

The Post reporter, Janet Cooke, gave up her prize Wednesday and resigned. Her editor, Benjamin Bradlee, said she had confessed to fabricating parts of her account of an 8-year-old heroin addict.

The Pulitzer board then gave the $1,000 prize to Teresa Carpenter of the Village Voice, a New York weekly, for her feature on a man who killed his wife while on leave from a mental hospital.

Jurors said Ms. Carpenter's story was the first choice of the feature-writing jury. They said they had never seen Ms. Cooke's story, which was originally entered in the spot news competition. The Longview (Wash.) Daily News won the spot news award.

Edward K. Shanahan, editor of the Daily Hampshire Gazette in Northampton, Mass., who served on the feature-writing jury, said he was "stunned" by the disclosures.

"It certainly raised some questions about the integrity of the whole process," he said.

"We worked very hard," said Joel Dryfuss, a member of the feature jury and executive editor of Black Enterprise of New York City. "We had more than 150 entries. We spent three full days on our recommendations. ... What's the point of having a jury if they're just going to overturn the recommendations and give the award to someone they've never seen?"

But the system was defended by board members Richard Leonard, editor of the Milwaukee Journal, and Clayton Kirkpatrick, president and chief executive officer of the Chicago Tribune.

Leonard called it "the best system in the world," adding that "other people advise but the board decides."

And Kirkpatrick saw nothing "to be gained by having an inflexible system" by which a story must be judged in the category in which it is entered.

A spokesman for Columbia University, which administers the prizes endowed by Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the old New York World, said he did not know of a previous case where a prize was "refused on the basis of fraudulent data."

According to Long Island's Newsday, between 1971 and 1975, the Pulitzer Prize Advisory Board overturned the selections of 16 juries.

Sunday To Be Day Of Prayer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Easter Sunday will be a day of prayer in North Carolina to honor the missing and slain children in Atlanta, Gov. Jim Hunt announced Wednesday.

Hunt issued a proclamation declaring the day "Pray for the Children Sunday." He asked that citizens "unite in prayer for the children of Atlanta, their families and all those who have suffered."

Participating ministers will ask congregations to observe three minutes of silent prayer at noon.

Two Musicians To Be In Concert

Vocalist Thomas Mercer and organist Joseph Goodwin will be featured in a Good Friday Concert in Memorial Baptist Church at 8 p.m. Friday, April 17.

The two are offering a program of Easter and seasonal music by Handel, Frank, Allitsen, Hines and Boelmann, as well as hymns, traditional songs and spirituals.

The program opens with four songs to be sung by bass-baritone Mercer. These are Frances Allitsen's "The Lord Is My Light," "Largo," from Handel's opera, "Xerxes;" Cesar Frank's "O Lord Most Holy;" and "The Lord's Prayer," composed by noted Metropolitan Opera basso Jerome Hines.

Other selections to be sung by Mercer include three spirituals — W. L. Dawson's "Jesus Walked This Lonesome Valley;" John Wilson's arrangement of "Lord, I Want To Be A Christian;" and "Yes, He Did." Also to be sung by Mercer are Robert MacGimsey's "Sweet Little Jesus Boy;" the P. P. Bliss hymn, "It Is Well With My Soul;" Stuart Hamblen's "Until Then;" P. M.

IN GOOD FRIDAY CONCERT . . . Bass-baritone singer Thomas Mercer, left, and organist Joseph Goodwin, right, will appear in a Good Friday concert at 8 p.m. Friday, April 17 in Memorial Baptist Church. There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

Lehman's "The Love of God;" and Carl Boberg's noted Swedish melody, "How Great Thou Art," transcribed by Stuart K. Hine.

Organ solos to be played by Goodwin are Louis

Boelmann's "Suite Gothique," in four parts; J.S. Bach's "O Lamb of God, Pure;" and the familiar spiritual, "Were You There?," arranged by Goodwin.

Mercer, now living in Greenville, has had a varied singing career. While in the U.S. Marine Corps, he sang in chapel choirs, and then traveled in North and South Carolina as a member of an evangelistic team. He has appeared on television in several states and for seven years was bass soloist at the Central Baptist Church in Miami, Florida. He has performed in concerts, oratorios and on opera stages with Jerome Hines, and sung the title role in Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Elijah."

Goodwin, a native of Wenatchee, Washington, grew up in Charlotte. He graduated with a major in Spanish from East Carolina University and also studied at the Universidad Internacional, Mexico. Goodwin has been involved extensively in local public and private education, and has been organist of Memorial Baptist Church since 1970.

Shuttle Columbia Hopefully Seen As A 100-Mission Craft

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The Columbia, resting today alongside its desert landing strip in excellent shape after opening a new chapter of the space age, can soon be ready for the next of a potential 100 trips into space, say NASA officials.

The condition of the world's first reusable space ship "is excellent," launch director George Page said Wednesday. "It probably surpassed what most of us thought it would be like."

"Everything we see now," he said, "we can have corrected well before we have to go out there again."

He told a news briefing at NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center here that the historic ship will probably be ready to tackle space again, with astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly at the controls, in about six months. "give or take a month or two."

But the shuttle's next journey will be far more leisurely and much less dramatic. The big space truck is to begin a two-day piggy-back ride to Kennedy Space Center in Florida next week, Page said.

It will be bolted to brackets on the back of a Boeing 747 jumbo jet for the trip to Kennedy, where the space odyssey began last Sunday. A one-night stopover is planned enroute at Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma City, said shuttle test flight manager Donald "Deke" Slayton.

Slayton said inspections so far indicated no more heat-shield tiles came off the ship beyond the dozen or so that were damaged during Sunday's launch. The 31,000 tiles attached to the shuttle's aluminum skin like pieces of a jigsaw puzzle "look very good," he said.

"We did have some minor damage to some tiles, both at liftoff and during rollout on landing," he said. "But all the damage looks like it's repairable."

He said some of the tiles may have been harmed by rocks kicked up from the desert lake bed where the shuttle cut deep ruts when it landed Tuesday to the cheers of a crowd estimated at up to 170,000.

Preliminary examinations here, Slayton said, show the Columbia to be a space-worthy craft, fully capable of meeting the design criterion of 100 round trips.

"I'd say we're going to have a 100-mission machine," Slayton said.

He said some subsystems are not designed to last that long — the main engines for example are to withstand about 50 trips — but the ship itself, "I think ... is good for at least 100 (flights) and probably more than that."

The Columbia, meanwhile, is inside an open red and gray steel superstructure, that includes a hoist to raise it 60 feet so the ferry jet can be rolled underneath.

Ground crews were checking and cleansing its systems and making other preparations for the trip to Florida.

The preparations were to take about six days, but Page said Wednesday. "We are running about 12 hours behind schedule due to a lot of start-up problems that you might expect on the first time around out here."

He said the flight might begin Tuesday or Wednesday.

At Kennedy, the Columbia will be re-outfitted for its second space flight. Though this first "turn-around" should take about six months NASA has said it hopes ultimately to shorten that to as little as 14 working days.

Page was clearly skeptical — "Right now I'd say that's very, very optimistic."

Hookerton Man Injured In Accident

FOUNTAIN — A Hookerton man was seriously injured Saturday afternoon when he lost control of a motorcycle he was riding near here.

Trooper C. E. Williams, the investigating officer, said Bruce Dunn, 33, originally of the Fountain community, sustained spinal cord injuries when the motorcycle he was riding overturned in a ditch off Rural Paved Road 1529 about two miles east of Fountain in Wilson County and he was thrown from it.

Trooper Williams said Dunn, a former Pinetops policeman, was released from the intensive care unit of Pitt County Memorial Hospital today, but will be a patient there for some time. Dunn was transported to Pitt Memorial by the Fountain Rescue Squad.

The motorcycle Dunn was operating belonged to Edward Carson Dilda of Fountain, Williams said. He estimated the damage at $2,000. No charges were filed. Dunn told the officer that the motorcycle was much larger than the one he was used to operating.

Workshop Held On PCC Campus

"Teaching Language to Students With Learning Disabilities" was the topic of a workshop held today at Pitt Community College sponsored by PCC and the North Carolina English Teachers Association.

The workshop, attended by over 100 English teachers, sought to identify the learning disabilities students, to increase knowledge of models, techniques, programs and methods for teaching and to give teachers a better awareness of how language programs can be adapted to LD students in secondary and post secondary English classes. Teachers were also taught applications for instructing language to LD students that might transfer to other students.

Leading the workshop were Arlene Lundquist, coordinator of students of the Appalachian State University Learning Disabilities Study; Dr. Betty Levy, professor of special education, East Carolina University; Sue Wilson, coordinator of learning disabilities, J.H. Rose High School; and Candy Kea, instructional resources consultant, Northeast Education Center.

Ms. Lundquist discussed the accepted definition of an LD student while showing learning models developed for these students. She also pointed out when remediation can become ineffective and when the student should learn compensatory skills. She stressed what to emphasize in teaching secondary and post secondary students.

Dr. Betty Levy explained the types of remediation settings and how the teacher may be most effective in a restrictive environment. She told the teachers how they might make use of programs, methods, ideas and machines.

Sue Wilson identified the way students benefit from developing learning strategies and how instructors may use this technique.

Cathy Kea showed ways to approach the writing task of an LD student. The latter part of her discussion brought out how the essay section on the competency test affects English instruction.

The workshop introduction was presented by Carolyn Means of the human services technology department of PCC, and Dr. Carolyn Lauffer of the PCC English and social science department was in charge of the social hour and registration. Linda Sundwall of the PCC English and social science departments was workshop coordinator and hostess.

Nursing School Loses Its Dean

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)

— The A&T State University board of trustees approved Wednesday the retirement of the dean of the university's troubled nursing school and several other high-ranking school officials.

A vote by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors is required before the retirements of Dean Naomi Wynn and others are official.

The UNC board says it may close the nursing school unless its seniors perform substantially better than their predecessors on the national licensing exam for nurses.

"I don't think that anybody should get the idea that I'm retiring because of the problem here," Ms. Wynn said.

Who Cares?

A Hot Bat Would Have Been Welcome At Cold Expo Opening

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

All baseball players dream of swinging a hot bat. On Wednesday in Montreal, even that didn't help them make it through the frosty day.

The record books will show that the Montreal Expos beat the Chicago Cubs 5-4 in their home opener, but the chill in the players' bones will be remembered long after the score is forgotten.

"I prayed we weren't going to play 13 or 14 innings out there," said Gary Carter, whose eighth-inning single capped a two-run rally that won the game for Montreal.

"I couldn't feel my hands, I couldn't feel my ears and my nose was running," Carter said. "I can't wait to get into the sauna. It was the coldest game I ever played in."

The game-time temperature was announced as 39 degrees.

but third baseman Larry Parrish said the chewing tobacco in his back pocket froze and he found ice patches on the field. A biting wind made it feel 20 degrees colder.

Some of the players tried to warm up their bats in the sauna room, but said it didn't help because they got cold again immediately after going outside again. Pitchers usually try to save all their energy for when they are on the mound, but Expos starter Steve Rogers tried to keep warm by riding a stationary bicycle between innings.

"It was so cold that you'd get to the plate and wouldn't be able to feel the bat in your hand," said Andre Dawson, who singled home the tying run in the eighth and scored the winner on Carter's hit.

In other National League action, the New York Mets defeated St. Louis 5-3, Houston blanked Atlanta 2-0, Philadelphia edged Pittsburgh 4-3 in 11 innings, Cincinnati bombed San Diego 10-1 and Los Angeles took San Francisco 4-2 to remain unbeaten.

Chicago had a 4-3 lead going into the eighth inning and Cubs reliever Bill Caudill had retired 10 batters in a row before walking Rodney Scott with one out.

Scott stole second and Dawson then singled off reliever Dick Tidrow, 1-1, to score Scott and tie the game 4-4. An error on an attempted pickoff throw by Tidrow sent Dawson to third before Carter blooped a single to right-center field.

"I was choking up on the bat, just hoping to make contact," he said. "I ended up breaking the bat, but the end result was good anyway."

Stan Bahnsen, 1-0, was the winner in relief of Rogers, pitching the last two innings.

Mets 5, Cardinals 3
New York also won its home opener, getting a two-run single from Doug Flynn and a two-run triple from rookie Mookie Wilson, both in the second inning.

Right-hander Pat Zachry went 51-3 innings for his second straight victory. He was bailed out of a jam in the sixth when reliever Tom Hausman threw one pitch and coaxed a double-play grounder.

Neil Allen, who has two saves and a victory in New York's three wins, pitched hitless ball the last three innings.

Astros 2, Braves 0
Nolan Ryan struck out nine to pass Bob Gibson for third place on the all-time strikeout list and gave up only three hits in seven innings to outlast hard-luck Atlanta pitcher Tommy Boggs.

Boggs had a no-hitter for six innings, but he gave up a hit to Craig Reynolds in the seventh and surrendered two runs with a throwing error and a wild pitch.

Frank LaCorte pitched the last two innings, allowing only one hit for his first save.

Ryan now has 3,118 strikeouts, one more than Gibson.

Phillies 4, Pirates 3
Newly acquired Gary Matthews opened the 11th inning with a home run to cap Philadelphia's victory over Pittsburgh.

Matthews, obtained late in spring training from the Atlanta Braves for Bob Walk, smacked a 2-0 pitch from Enrique Romo deep over the left-center field fence for his first homer of the year.

Reds 10, Padres 1
Dan Driessen knocked in four runs and George Foster and Dave Concepcion each brought in three to back the three-hit, nine-strikeout pitching of Mario Soto.

Driessen slammed a three-run homer in the sixth and Foster added a two-run shot in the seventh. Dave Collins scored three times for Cincinnati, which won its ninth straight game in San Diego Stadium.

Dodgers 4, Giants 2
Burt Hooton continued his mastery of San Francisco, upping his record against the Giants to 16-6. Hooton, 2-0, got relief help from Bobby Castillo to win for the 10th straight time at Candlestick Park.

Ayden-Grifton's First Winner In Five Years Could Take It All

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Not since 1976 has Ayden-Grifton's baseball team come home with the Eastern Carolina Conference championship in tow. Now, five years later, the Chargers are out to duplicate that performance.

It won't be easy. Winning never is, especially for the Chargers, who have not had a winning campaign since that conference championship in 1976. But Ayden-Grifton coach Allan Wilson believes his club is ready for the challenge.

"This is the first year we've had a chance to win (the ECC title) in a while," Wilson said. "The players feel like, and so do I, that if anybody has a good chance of winning it we do."

"I think that for the first time they realize what it takes to be a winner. I think the kids are really beginning to think, 'Hey, we can beat these people.' I think they realize we aren't a fluke team."

The Chargers are no fluke. A fluke doesn't trail Roanoke, 10-0, early and come back to win, 23-15. A fluke doesn't enter the seventh inning against Southwest Edgecombe behind 7-5 and score five runs to capture a crucial victory.

"The guys didn't give up like they did in the past," Wilson said. "It was just like Saturday against Southwest. We were behind going into the seventh but I made the comment that winners always come back. And we came back."

Ayden-Grifton has been doing its share of winning and then some in 1981. The Chargers, who play host to ECC foe Farmville Central tonight (8 p.m.), won six straight games at one point this season and are now 8-1 in the league, a game and a half ahead of Charles B. Aycock, following the Falcons 5-4 loss to D.H. Conley Tuesday afternoon. Conley is tied with Southern Nash for third in the ECC at 6-3.

Ayden-Grifton's only league loss came last week, a week that saw the Chargers play three ECC foes on the road and emerge with two victories. Ayden-Grifton opened the week with a 4-2 loss to Southern Nash but then defeated Greene Central and Southwest Edgecombe to maintain its hold on first.

"I think the guys realized after the loss to Southern Nash that we can be beat by anyone," Wilson said. "I think at that point they had gotten to a place where they thought they couldn't be beaten."

"But we were up emotionally for Greene Central and that showed me we're beginning to realize what it takes to win."

By no means are the Chargers assured of the league crown, but the second-half schedule appears to be in their favor. Four of Ayden-Grifton's six remaining ECC games are at home. But the two most important games — against C.B. Aycock and D.H. Conley — are both on the road. Aycock and Conley figure to be the Chargers' main challenge in the second half of the season.

"Every game is important. We know Farmville Central can beat us and I just hope the boys don't overlook anybody," Wilson said. "We really believe that we're going to have to go 8-0 in the second time around in the league to win it."

How well the Chargers do the second half of the 1981 season may well rest on the left arm of a quiet, competitive sophomore named Tyrone Gay.

To read his statistics is to wonder why not one college coach has yet to contact Wilson about the young left-hander. Gay, who may be the best pitcher the league has this year, leads the ECC with a sparkling 0.71 earned run average.

Going into tonight's game with Farmville, he is 5-1 and has yet to lose to an ECC opponent in five outings. He has struck out 78 in 48²/₃ innings pitched and has now struck out 182 in 135 innings pitched in his still short high school career.

"Right now he is the key to our team," Wilson said. "He's a competitive person and anytime he's on the mound he feels he's suppose to win. The team has confidence that we will. Right now it looks like he'll be able to pitch in five of our last seven conference games."

When Gay isn't pitching either senior Brandt Allen or freshman Doug Coley is. Allen, who has walked just one batter in 28¹/₃ innings pitched, is 3-2 this season with an ERA of 4.09 while Coley is 1-1 with a 5.50 ERA.

Allen, the only senior who starts for the Chargers, also is one of Ayden-Grifton's leading hitters. Thus far this season he is hitting at a .349 clip with a league-leading eight doubles. He also has one home run and has driven in 14 runs.

Leading Ayden-Grifton at the plate, however, is second baseman Bernard Ricciarelli, who is hitting .385. Terry Locust is at .368 followed by Gay (.366) and Chris Strickland and Chuck Smithwick, both at .333.

"Most of these fellows are juniors and have been with me awhile," Wilson said. "I remember when they were freshman. I told them that maybe before they got out of here they'd be on a winner."

"They've taken their lumps. They've been beaten by 20 runs and then come back and beat that same team later in the season. Heck, this season is the first time I've ever beaten D.H. Conley and Greene Central since I've been here."

Now, the Chargers are not only beating those teams but may bring Wilson, in his fourth season as A-G's head coach, his first league championship.

ECU Signs 6-10 Cage Prospect

East Carolina University head basketball coach Dave Odom announced the signing today of a third player to the national letter.

David E. Reicheneker, 6-10, 220-pound center, from Niceville High School in Niceville, Fla., becomes the third player to sign with the Pirates this year.

Reicheneker was named all-conference, all-Okalosa County and honorable mention all-state while playing center at Niceville, an area near Pensacola.

"David is the epitome of an interscholastic student athlete whose best play days are in front of him," said Odom. "David has a wealth of untapped ability and is a very conscientious young man that craves hard work. It is a good situation for us, in that David is eager to learn and we at East Carolina are eager to teach. He has exceptionally good hands, and in time, will be a real factor."

Reicheneker averaged 13.2 points per game and 9.2 rebounds per game while playing at Niceville.

The 17-year-old high school senior is the first player to sign with East Carolina to enter as a freshman next season. The two previous signees are junior college transfers, Charles Green of Catonsville Community College in Baltimore, Md., and Al Mack of Hibert College in Hamburg, N.Y. Green is 6-7 and Mack, 6-9.

Oakland Wins Seventh Straight Game

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Oakland A's pitchers are starting this season where they left off last year. And so are the Oakland hitters, particularly Tony Armas.

The A's, who set a major-league record last year for complete games with 94, got another complete game out of a starter when Rick Langford went the distance Wednesday night in a 5-3 victory over the California Angels. That's the sixth time in seven games this year that a starter has completed a game for the undefeated A's.

Meanwhile, Armas, hoping to match last season's home-run total of 35, slugged his fourth of the season.

"If 7-0 isn't rolling, nothing is," said Manager Billy Martin. "It's just great. The kids are excited and we're going home Friday to a sold-out crowd. I'd take 7-0 any time of the year."

Armas obviously has been one of the catalysts of the best-ever start in Oakland history.

"He threw me a fastball down the middle and I just was swinging hard," said Armas of his three-run shot off Andy Hassler in the eighth inning that capped a four-run rally after the A's had been down 3-0. "I couldn't believe he would pitch to me so late in the game with a right-hander up in the bullpen. Actually, I haven't had much luck against him before. He usually gets me out with his sinker."

Armas had a poor spring training, but Martin never lost confidence in the native Venezuelan.

"I wasn't concerned at all," said Martin. "I had him in the No. 4 spot in my opening day lineup, didn't I? He's just been doing great, but so has everyone. It's been a team effort. I don't want to put any added pressure on him."

In other AL action, the Seattle Mariners edged the Minnesota Twins 6-5; the Boston Red Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles 7-2; the Chicago White Sox stopped the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4; the Texas Rangers rocked the Cleveland Indians 8-0; the New York Yankees beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-3 and the Detroit Tigers blanked the Kansas City Royals 4-0.

Armas' towering drive to center field at Anaheim Stadium came after three walks and a ground ball broke up a shutout bid by Angel starter Jesse Jefferson.

Rick Burleson had four hits for California. He singled home the first run of the game in the third and tripled to lead off the sixth, scoring on a sacrifice fly by Fred Lynn. Singles by Tom Brunansky and Butch Hobson and a groundout extended the Angels' lead to 3-0 in the seventh.

Mariners 6, Twins 5

Richie Zisk and Joe Simpson each knocked in two runs and Jerry Don Gleaton pitched four-hit ball for seven innings as Seattle beat Minnesota, trailing 2-0 in the third inning, the Mariners scored four times to take the lead for good as Zisk's RBI double keyed the rally.

Red Sox 7, Orioles 2

Carl Yastrzemski drove in three runs in his 1981 debut and Tony Perez hit a two-run homer to lead Boston over Baltimore. Yastrzemski, who missed his first season opener in 21 years because of back-muscle spasms last week, drove in Boston's first run with a groundout in the first inning, then lined a two-run single in the fourth for his 3,110th major league hit.

Perez hit his first homer of the season in a four-run first inning.

"I felt all right but I felt lost up there," said Yastrzemski. "My first time at the plate I almost felt I had never swung the bat. My timing was off, almost as if I didn't have spring training."

White Sox 5, Brewers 4

Bob Molinaro's pinch sacrifice fly in the eighth scored Harold Baines to carry Chicago over Milwaukee. Baines opened the eighth with his third single of the game, went to second on a sacrifice by Jim Morrison and took third on Tony Bernazard's bunt single.

Before his sacrifice fly, Molinaro thought he had worked Rolie Fingers for a walk on a 3-0 pitch, but it was called a strike. "I thought it was ball four," said Molinaro. "But I also knew the next pitch would be a fastball, because he couldn't fool around with a breaking pitch at that point. I was ready and hot enough to bat on it to get it to the outfield."

Rangers 8, Indians 0

Al Oliver knocked in three runs with a homer, a double and a fielder's choice grounder to back the solid pitching of Doc Medich and help Texas beat Cleveland. Medich, making his first start of the year, scattered five hits in 71-3 innings before he tired in the eighth inning and yielded to reliever John Henry Johnson.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 3

Oscar Gamble's solo homer and Dave Winfield's two-run single keyed a five-run fourth inning that carried New York over Toronto.

Rudy May recorded his second victory in as many starts for the Yankees this season and 10th regular-season triumph in a row since July 22, 1980, when he lost to the Milwaukee Brewers. The big left-hander pitched seven innings, striking out four and allowing no walks.

Tigers 4, Royals 0

Dave Rozema fired a six-hitter in his 1981 debut and Al Cowens tripled home a run and scored another to lead Detroit over Kansas City. Larry Gura gave up only seven hits as the defending American League champions suffered a two-game sweep by the Tigers.

Management Must Improve

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Good management in baseball means a lot more than turning 25 players into a winning unit. With inflation, the rising costs of salaries, transportation and ballpark maintenance, baseball's bottom line is not found only in the standings. It's also the profit-loss picture.

Some of the owners say free agency without significant compensation could ruin them. Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, warns that the free agent system will place a greater premium on effective, intelligent management in baseball. "Teams will have to be more conscientious about doing their homework," he said. "Mistakes will be more costly."

Two of the biggest free-agent spenders in baseball have been San Diego and California. Each finished sixth in its division last year. Meanwhile, the New York Yankees have spent millions on free agents who helped them to four division titles in the past five years.

Miller was talking specifically about teams acquiring the right free agents. His call for business savvy applies off the field as well.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn is saying that about half the 26 clubs lost money last year, while several longtime owners, including the respected Carpenter family in Philadelphia, are trying to leave the game because of the financial direction it's taking.

The financial publication Barrons surveyed the average annual increase of team expenses and revenues from 1970-78. According to the study, gate revenues were up 7.7 percent; broadcast revenues up 7.5 percent; attendance up 4.4 percent, and ticket prices up 4.3 percent.

Meanwhile, inflation has soared, and Barrons also found significant increases in expenses over the same period. Salaries, the major team expense, were up 20 percent, player development was up 8 percent and stadium expenses up 14 percent.

For the eight-year period, expenses rose at a faster rate than revenues, forcing teams to find new and better ways of making money. The trends continued through 1980. "You have to keep digging for all sorts of new income centers," says Peter Bavasi, president of the Toronto Blue Jays, one of baseball's biggest success stories.

Bavasi, 36, grew up in the Dodger organization. When the expansion Blue Jays tapped Bavasi as president, he tried to follow the lessons learned at the knee of his father, Buzzie, and the visionary Dodger owner, Walter O'Malley.

The Blue Jays, who have finished in last place all four years of their existence, made a "reasonable profit last year," said Bavasi, who believes a ballclub should be run like a small corporation.

Under the influence of O'Malley and now his son Peter, the Dodgers operate on a cash basis. They own Dodger Stadium, its concession facilities and parking. They also own their luxurious spring training complex in Vero Beach, Fla., and their own jet. They have averaged a record 3 million fans the past three seasons, yet still raised ticket prices by a dollar twice in the past five years in order to maintain the same profit margin. The team does not say what that profit is, but it is believed to be the healthiest in baseball.

The Milwaukee Brewers don't have the benefits of the Los Angeles market, second largest in the nation, nor do they have the capital of the Dodgers. But the Brewers are writing a success story nonetheless.

The Braves left Milwaukee for Atlanta in 1965, and the city was written off as a bad baseball town. "They were wrong and I knew it," said Bud Selig, who spearheaded a local syndicate that bought a floundering Seattle club and moved it to Milwaukee.

Selig runs his ballclub like the successful car dealership he owns in Milwaukee. Selig will not say whether his team has made a profit, but other baseball sources say that it did well financially last year. The Brewers' attendance has risen from 1 million in 1976 to 1.6 million in 1978 and 1.8 million in 1980. Apart from better promotion, part of the reason for the increased attendance is a better team.

Selig gives Harry Dalton credit for the on-the-field improvement.

One Brewer advantage is that Selig negotiated a favorable stadium lease before buying the franchise. He also makes money from in-stadium beer sales in the city that made the beverage famous.

The conservative city of Toronto is another matter entirely. Beer sales are forbidden in Exhibition Stadium, even though Labatt's Breweries is one of the owners of the Blue Jays. Toronto, in fact, is the only suds-free ballpark. Bavasi estimates that the no-beer local law deprives the ballclub of $1.5 million in gross revenues.

But Toronto has made up for the lack of beer with a plethora of money-making Blue Jay products. "We're in the food licensing business, our own chain store," Bavasi said.

As Canadian teams, the Blue Jays and Expos do not operate under baseball's promotional arm, the Major League Baseball Corp. This means the Blue Jays don't have to split their licensing revenue with the 24 American clubs. In the Blue Jays' first two years, some $13 million in team-labeled retail items were sold across Canada.

The Blue Jays split licensing revenues with a distributor and the local merchant.

Bavasi estimates that 70 percent of the team's revenues come from gate receipts. The Blue Jays drew 1.4 million fans last year and Toronto's four-year attendance is better than the first four years for any other expansion team.

And in those four years, the Blue Jays' record was 233-413. Bavasi, however, insists that "the fact the club has not performed well has not hindered our ability to sell tickets. The fans in Canada have a history of expansion in hockey, and they know how long it took the Expos (the Montreal baseball team) to build a winner."

But being in Canada has forced Blue Jay management to be a little sharper to overcome the negative currency exchange. With the U.S. dollar sagging, it takes $1.20 Canadian to buy a U.S. dollar.

If the club has operational costs of $8 million this year, Bavasi said the Blue Jays would have to generate an additional $1.6 million (for total revenues of $9.6 million in Canadian dollars) to break even.

Mayo Sparkles In Track Win

Tammy Mayo set two school records yesterday to highlight a victory by the Rose High School girls' track team over Bertie and Rocky Mount yesterday.

Rose finished the day with 81 points, while Bertie had 64 and Rocky Mount had 22.

Mayo's marks came in the triple jump (34 feet, 11 inches), and in the 400-meter run (1:01.4). Mayo won both events.

In addition, Lou Taft set a new school mark in the 3,200-meter run, finishing fourth in 13:42.3. Angie Atkinson tied the record for the 200-meter dash, winning that event in 26.6 seconds.

Atkinson also won the 100 and the long jump to be a triple winner. Along with Mayo, Bernestine Haselrig, who won the shot and the discus, was a double winner.

Overall, the Rampettes won nine individual events, while Bertie and Rocky Mount each took two. Susie Ess won both of the Gryphon victories, taking the 3,200 and the 1,600-meter events.

Watson Has Game Moving

By BOB GREEN

AP Golf Writer

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson, by his own assessment, didn't even have his game at a peak when he won the Masters last week.

But — bad news for the other 28 players assembled for the elite, $300,000 MONY-Tournament of Champions — he's got it moving in the right direction.

"That's the first time I've won a major when I wasn't playing at my best," Watson said before teeing off today in the first round of the unique, winners-only event that many players consider golf's fifth major, less than a half-step below the recognized Big Four, the Masters, PGA, U.S. and British Opens.

"It's a cyclical thing," Watson said of the golf swing, "and right now I'd say I'm more than halfway up the curve."

Watson, who acquired his second Masters and fifth major title last week, anticipates no letdown from his triumph in Augusta, Ga. "When you get it going, you try to keep it going as long as you can," he said.

And he has a history of playing well the week immediately following the Masters. Watson, golf's Player of the Year for the past four seasons, has won the title in this event the last two years. And he's a solid favorite for the $54,000 first prize this time.

But Watson, who currently holds the Masters, British Open and four other titles, faces plenty of opposition in golf's most exclusive field.

Leading the pack are Jack Nicklaus, the current U.S. Open and PGA champ, and Johnny Miller, twice a winner this year. They chased Watson to the Masters title and each has won here before. Lee Trevino, not a factor at Augusta, but a frequent challenger here, said he's fully recovered from a back ailment that plagued him in the Masters and brings to this event a better, more positive attitude than he had last week.

The other men who have won more than once over the past 12 months are Bruce Lietzke, Curtis Strange, Larry Nelson, Ray Floyd and Australian David Graham.

Strange is one of 10 men making their first appearance in the T of C.

Louis Burial In Arlington

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Joe Louis will be buried at Arlington National Cemetery — an honor limited in recent years to a relative few — by order of President Reagan.

Before his body was to be flown to Washington following a memorial service Friday, fans and friends paid their last respects to the former heavyweight boxing champion today. His body lay in repose in the sports pavilion at Caesars Palace where he had watched so many prize fights.

"He would have wanted it this way," his widow Martha said. "He would have wanted to be in a sports arena. It seems appropriate."

Original plans called for

Louis to be buried here Friday, but it was not known when the funeral at Arlington would take place.

Louis, 66, died Sunday morning of cardiac arrest.

The announcement of Arlington as the burial site was made Wednesday by Army officials who said the order had come from Reagan. The president, they said, had waived restrictions which normally would have barred Louis from being buried in the nation's most historic national cemetery.

There have been limited burials there in recent years because of many requests from families of deceased servicemen. Although the former champion did serve in the army, his service normally would not have met requirements for Arlington burial.

Rev. Jesse Jackson will deliver the eulogy at Friday's memorial service, and a number of current and former boxing champions was expected to attend, including Larry Holmes, Muhammad Ali, Ken Norton, Sugar Ray Robinson and Floyd Patterson.

In the boys' baseball game, Ayden gained a 16-3 decision. Eddie Brown and Wesley Hardee each had two Ayden hits, with Hardee having a homer. Scott Rawls had two hits for Bethel, both triples.

Ayden is now 3-0 on the year.

Hosts Gracious In Texas

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

In Texas, the visitin' folks still feel right at home.

Wednesday night, for the fourth time in six National Basketball Association playoff games between Houston and San Antonio, the hosts were most gracious. This time it was the Rockets, who allowed the Spurs to win 101-96.

That sends their Western Division semifinal series back to San Antonio for Friday night's decisive seventh game — and the Spurs hope the home-court hex will finally vanish.

"We've had such a strong home record all season, and now I hope it comes back to us," said George Gervin, who led the Spurs with 26 points. "It's time now for us to take advantage of our fans screaming at us to put it away."

Moses Malone, who had 36 points and 10 rebounds for the Rockets, saw the game as "an opportunity to jump and strut and celebrate tonight. Things just didn't go our way. It seems like we've just got to do things the hard way."

That's the way it's been all year for the Rockets, trying to become the first team in 13 years to reach an NBA conference final with a losing record (40-42) in the regular season.

Calvin Murphy, who had 20 points, put Houston ahead 90-87 with 7 minutes to play, but Gervin, Paul Griffin and Mark Olberding hit successive baskets to put San Antonio in front to stay. Griffin and Olberding finished with 12 points apiece.

Suns 101, Kings 89
Truck Robinson scored 15 points and grabbed 20 rebounds to keep Phoenix's hopes alive. "We had to have that type of effort," he said. "There was no other alternative."

Walter Davis scored 16 of his 20 points in the first half, including six in a 19-2 Suns burst that gave them a 47-31 lead with 3:42 remaining in the second period. Kansas City cut the margin to 10 points in the fourth period before Robinson led a late charge that widened it to 20 with barely three minutes to play.

Bears No-Hit Pantego, 16-1

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass hurlers Mark Taylor and Tony Leggett combined for a no-hitter against Pantego last night in a make-up baseball game in the Tobacco Belt Conference.

The game was delayed from last Friday because of weather conditions.

Taylor went the first three innings, striking out seven and walking three. He gave up the only run of the game to Pantego. Leggett, who finished the contest, walked one and struck out four.

Bear Grass got all it needed in the first inning, scoring twice. Walter Bullock singled and Craig Gardner walked. Three more walks followed, to William Roberson, Ricky Harrison and Greg Harrison, scoring the first two runners.

The Bears then added nine in the second frame and got five more in the fourth.

Bullock led the Bear hitting with two.

The victory raised the Bear Grass record to 9-2. The Bears play host to Aurora tonight.

Telephone Rates Are Increased

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In-state long-distance calls by Southern Bell customers cost more as of today, said R.G. Stamey, Southern Bell district manager.

Moreover, local telephone rates approved by the North Carolina Utilities Commission on Wednesday will go into effect Friday, Stamey said.

The commission granted the telephone company a 7.8 percent increase in intrastate revenue on April 3, telling Southern Bell to submit revised rates that would produce the allowed revenue increases.

Under the long-distance intrastate increase, the initial time period for billing on operator-assisted station and person calls is reduced from three minutes to one minute.

Charges for the first minute and additional minutes are now the same for any type of calls, whether an operator assists or not, Stamey said.

In addition, Southern Bell also instituted new charges on other specific types of long distance calls. Customer-dialed credit card calls will be billed an extra 30 cents, all other operator-assisted station calls will be billed an extra 70 cents and person calls will be billed an extra $1.70.

In local service, monthly residential one-party rates will increase on Friday from $8.95 to $10.15, Stamey said.

Monthly business one-party rates will increase from $22.60 to $25.85, he said.

Service connection charges for residential phones will go up to $42.35 in cases where all basic major work functions are needed, said Stamey. In houses that already have a telephone jack, customers can reduce their service connection charge by buying their own phone, he said.

Basic one-line business service connection charges rose to $61, Stamey said.

The phone company will begin charging 35 cents for requests for operators to verify that a phone is in use and to check on line status, he said. Each request to interrupt a conversation will cost an additional 40 cents.

"The greatly increasing number of requests to verify that a particular telephone is in use and the greatly increasing requests to notify customers using their phones that an emergency caller is attempting to get through is

dramatically increasing operator time and expense in handling such requests," said Stamey.

TO SPEAK — The Rev. Ollie Williams Jr., assistant minister in Cleveland, Ohio, will speak Sunday at 4 p.m. at St. John Missionary Baptist Church, Falkland. He is the son of Mrs. Christine Gorham Williams and Ollie Williams of Falkland and King Crossroads communities. The public is invited to attend, according to the Rev. Anton T. Wesley, pastor.

NAMED ADVISOR

Michael Brohawn of Greenville has been named an upperclass adviser for freshmen at North Carolina State University for 1981-82. As an adviser, he will participate in a special program for freshmen aimed at easing their transition from high school to college.

Safe Driving Being Urged Over Holiday

Highway Patrol Troop A commander Capt. Carl Gilchrist today urged drivers to be especially careful over the Easter holiday period in an effort to prevent traffic mishaps.

According to the officer, who said the number of highway deaths in the troop is up considerably over last year, the Patrol's presence on the highways will be greater than normal over the holiday period in an effort to prevent mishaps.

The troopers, Gilchrist noted, will be focusing attention on the drinking driver, speeders and persons driving in a careless and reckless manner.

Gilchrist urged motorists to be courteous, and obey all traffic laws and regulations.

He suggested that persons traveling over the weekend should allow plenty of time to reach their destination. If taking a long trip, he said, drivers should allow time to stop and rest for a few minutes every hour or so to prevent fatigue.

During the early morning and late afternoon, when driving into the sun, Gilchrist said, drivers should slow down and increase the following distance between the car ahead because the glare from the sun reduces visibility.

He said too, that headlights, rather than parking lights, should be used at dawn and dusk to increase the cars visibility to other drivers. Parking lights, Gilchrist said, should be used only when parking.

In an effort to prevent break-downs along the highway, the officer suggested that oil, tires, cooling system and battery should be checked before starting on a trip. He said too, that car windows, especially the windshield, should be cleaned to provide better visibility.

Gilchrist emphasized that law enforcement officers can do only so much toward helping reduce the number of wrecks on the State's roadways. "We need the cooperation of the motoring public...their commitment to safe driving practices," in order to prevent injury and death.

Postal Service Delays Union Contract Bargaining

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The Postal Service is postponing bargaining on a new contract because of "increasing rivalry and dissension" among the unions, Postmaster General William F. Bolger says.

Four unions represent postal workers, but the larger two are trying to draw additional members from the two smaller unions. All told, there are about 550,000 unionized postal workers.

Bolger said Wednesday that he has "concluded the proposed union bargaining structure is unworkable" and said he would ask the National Labor Relations Board to decide which union represents which workers.

The negotiations were to have begun next week. Bolger said the "increasing rivalry and dissension" among the unions reduces the chances of reaching sound agreements.

"Bargaining for multiple contracts in an atmosphere of inter-union bitterness is an almost sure way to defeat the process before it even begins, and administering the multiple contracts that might emerge would lead to chaos on the workroom floor," Bolger said in a letter to all postal employees.

He said the Postal Service would be "unable to engage in collective bargaining for a new contract until an appropriate bargaining unit or units has been finally determined."

He said he would propose to the NLRB that the current three-year labor agreement, which is due to expire July 20, be extended if the board has not decided the issue by then.

The labor talks were scheduled to begin Wednesday with the American Postal Workers Union, National Association of Letter Carriers, mail handlers' division of the Laborers International Union and National Rural Letter Carriers Association. The first two, which are the largest groups, are circulating cards among members of the other two unions that call for a representation election. If the larger unions win such an election they would then represent the workers now in smaller unions. "The bargaining structure has grown so complicated that it threatens to undermine successful contract negotiations before these negotiations have begun," Bolger said.

FOCUS

Growing Up In Fear

Experts believe the brutal killings in Atlanta are creating a major problem for many children who are not the primary victims. Some surviving children in the community have lost their ability to love, trust, and be independent. Many show symptoms of stress: fighting in school, lowered test scores, and abnormal clinging to parents. Some have been arming themselves with clubs, knives, and other weapons. A number of behavioral scientists fear that the children will be psychologically scarred for life. Dr. Alfred Messer, an Atlanta psychiatrist, said: "If this goes on much longer, we are breeding a whole generation of children who grow up choosing dependency as a primary tool for coping with life stresses. This is a disaster, for the child and for society."

Two Wrecks Investigated

An estimated $3,150 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 9:20 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Dickinson Avenue, involving a truck driven by Matthew Lee Atken of Wilmington and a car operated by Virgene Fagan Risher of Hubert.

Police, who charged Ms. Risher with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $400 to the truck and $2,000 to the car.

Cars driven by Lee Ellen Fleming of 2304 Jefferson Dr. and Rita Marie Edge of Havertown, Pa., collided about 4:04 p.m. at the intersection of Tenth Street and College Hill Drive, causing $150 damage to the Fleming car and $700 damage to the Edge auto.

Refund Order Opinion Asked

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Central Piedmont Community College board of trustees plans to ask its attorneys for advice before deciding whether to appeal a state order to pay back almost $500,000 in aid.

The state wants the college to pay back $497,451 for what it found to be incorrect reporting of student hours and class time to get state reimbursement.

The college must come up with the money by May 9, the state said.

Opening lead: Three of ♥.

It is not enough to know how to play a suit combination properly. Sometimes the overall considerations of the hand must take preference.

East had intended reversing into spades. However, when North decided to jump raise clubs to show his fine supporting hand, East was effectively silenced. South's push to game can be charitably described as "optimistic."

West led a heart, and declarer was not particularly thrilled with his prospects. Since East was likely to have the ace of spades for his opening bid, there was the danger of losing two spade tricks and two diamonds.

Declarer knew that the best way to play the diamond suit for only one loser was to hope that East held the ten and one high honor. Therefore, he won the heart ace at trick one, followed by two rounds of trumps, ending on the table. Now declarer led a diamond to the nine. West grabbed the ten and was quick to shift to a spade. East took his spade tricks, and the defenders still had to come to a diamond trick for down two.

Declarer's technical play in the diamond suit was above reproach. Nevertheless, it couldn't possibly succeed! In light of West's pass, it was not possible for him to hold both a diamond honor and the ace of spades. Therefore, declarer had to keep West off lead to prevent the spade shift, so the only chance for the contract was that East held both high diamond honors.

After drawing trumps, declarer should lead a diamond from dummy and, if East follows with a low card, insert the jack. When that wins, declarer continues with the ace of diamonds and another. That sets up a long diamond in declarer's hand and saddles East with the lead. The king of spades is safe from attack and declarer will be able to discard one of dummy's spades on the thirteenth diamond. The fortunate lie of the cards prevents the defenders from making more than one spade trick and one diamond.

Taxes Still Owed By Sophia

ROME (AP) — Sophia Loren, who still hasn't served the 30-day jail sentence she drew last summer on tax-related charges, still owes Italy $685,000 in back taxes, the finance ministry contends.

The ministry made the disclosure Wednesday as part of its campaign against tax evasion.

5th Spinoff From Show

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — You know what they say about inbreeding? It's true. Meet "Checking In," the idiot grandchild of "All in the Family."

This unfortunate CBS homonym comes to prime time out of "The Jeffersons," which came to prime time out of "All in the Family." "Checking In" is at least the fifth show with roots in "All in the Family" ("Maude," "The Jeffersons," "Good Times" and "Mr. Dooley" were the others.) "All in the Family" was drawn from the British comedy, "Til Death Do Us Part."

The bad genes had to surface eventually. The spinning off here is much the same as it was for "The Jeffersons," who moved uptown to a better life (and lesser gags) when they left Archie's Houser Street for their own show. A sassy maid came with the Jeffersons' new life, and it turned out that Maria Gibbs' Florence was the best thing about "The Jeffersons," which continues to be a ratings hit for CBS after seven years.

Thus, "Checking In," Florence's move to a better life (and lesser gags). She has found a job as maid supervisor in a ritzy hotel. Instead of trading insults with George Jefferson, who at least had the routine down, she goes at it with Larry Linville, the "M-A-S-H" drip who's now a mean hotel manager. Some samples of their clever word-duels:

Florence: "You'd love it if I quit, wouldn't you?"

Linville: "I'd love it so much I think I'd die!"

Florence: "Oooh, that sounds so temptin'!"

One of Florence's maids, Betty, I think her name is, offers a special treat for viewers who long for minstrel shows. When Florence tells the frightened maid there is no such thing as ghosts, the offensive thing rolls her eyes and replies, "Well, now, ah ain' sayin' they is, and ah ain' sayin' they ain'."

they ain'."

Lawdy, where's Stepinfetichit? This is bargain-basement comedy here, created in the arrogant belief that viewers will buy anything that is in some way familiar. The spinoff technique may be a proven CBS method, but the workmanship has never been this sloppy. The jokes are obvious, the characters superficial.

Maria Gibbs has a nice comic manner, but she's no faith healer. And this show needs a miracle.

"Nurse," another relative newcomer to the CBS Thursday lineup, is a sort of "Medical Center" in starched whites. Instead of doctors leading us down the standard paths of TV hospital drama, we get Michael Learned, who hauls us down the same old paths but offers a nurse's perspective.

It's not bad TV, really, but outside of Miss Learned's presence, there's nothing special about it, either. A lot of personal tragedy passes through this show, but it's of the homogenized, pre-fab television brand, drama shed of its grit.

With a touch of subtlety, a dash of humor that comes from the gut, "Nurse" could be something memorable. As it is, it's pretty well-done prime time drama. Actually, that's saying a lot.

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Ill. (AP) — They disappeared sometime after daybreak, leaving a stack of love letters and their last chance behind them.

He was a doctor, a one-time honor student and Air Force flight surgeon with impeccable credentials. She once taught Sunday school.

Roger and Sharon Ihrig were young, bright and full of promise. And they were on the run, again.

"The technical term is folie a deux, a French phrase that means 'madness of two,'" said psychologist Rip O'Keefe, director of the drug rehabilitation retreat the Ihrigs fled March 18. "You have two people who individually are marginal at best and who together bring out the worst in each other."

The Ihrigs' road to self-destruction began about 1979 — failed marriages, failed jobs, alcohol, drugs and finally "a string of motel rooms with bloody sheets and used syringes left behind," police said.

The road led to Galva, a little farm town where, last November, police arrested Sharon in a dime store for shoplifting some chocolate bars and a black blouse. In the car, police discovered a rainbow of capsules and bottles of prescription drugs, including injectable Valium.

When Roger learned his wife had been arrested, he filled a disposable syringe with Banadryl, stuck the needle in his arm and walked to the police station. "He was dressed in a sports coat, white shirt and tie that looked like they had been slept in for days," according to a police report.

When he slipped off his jacket, everyone in the station saw that Dr. Roger Ihrig's right shirt sleeve was soaked with fresh, bright red arterial blood.

"I look at all the potential he had," said his lawyer, Dale Haake of Rock Island. "In med school and in the Air Force, he was living up to all the talents that he had and the result was quite remarkable. Somewhere, something happened."

Exactly what happened is not clear. But from police and military records and reports from officials and former colleagues there emerges a picture of an attractive, gifted young man who had everything, and lost it all.

Ihrig was born 31 years ago, the son of a wheat farmer in Goodland, Kan., where the earth lies as flat as a billiard table. He was an honor student through high school and college, earning his medical degree from Kansas University in 1974 and served his internship in the Air Force at Alamogordo, N.M.

"I've seen his Air Force records, 120 pages," Haake said. "He was on various safety boards, he stepped into responsible positions that in the past had three or four physicians, and he would do the job all by himself. And at the same time he would improve efficiency, improve patient relations and get nothing but outstanding comments."

Six feet tall, with sandy-colored hair, he jogged for health and read mysteries for fun. He joined the Elks and the Masons.

But about 1979, it all began to fall apart. His seven-year marriage soured and by Christmas, his occasional injection of Benadryls, an antihistamine with sedative side effects, on sleepless nights had become a twice-a-day habit, police say he told them.

He tried to start a private practice. He failed. He went to San Diego and joined the Navy. He was divorced. His wife got custody of their two sons. Shortly after that, he married Sharon Espinosa, 22, twice-married and someone who "gives me strength," he told police.

When he injected Benadryl, she injected Valium or a hypnotic pain killer, Stadol. They loved each other, fed off each other and were destroying each other.

"This is a very tragic situation where a couple of clearly dependent sick people are using each other to stay ill," O'Keefe said. Ihrig ended his Navy career with five weeks at a military drug treatment center in Long Beach, Calif.

After his discharge last August, he and Sharon searched for a practice. In Vaughn, N.M., a bank refused a loan. In Hoisington, Kan., he closed his office after one week. In Flagstaff, Ariz., police found blood-stained pillows and used syringes scattered about a motel room, blood smeared on the television screen.

The year before, Ihrig had made a good impression on visits to clinics in Illinois. But nobody wanted to hire him now.

"Very frankly, I would have had no way to recognize him on the basis of our first meeting a few months before," said Cottage Hospital vice president David Fleming said of his encounter with Ihrig Nov. 6. "His complexion was blotchy. He was bloated. He had a strange look in his eye and was perspiring profusely."

The next day, they were in Galva, charged with violating drug laws, which carries a penalty of one to three years. Authorities released them on bond. They ran. Canadian border guards returned them to Illinois where they pleaded guilty and were locked up in the squat, red brick Henry County Jail for a reduced sentence of four months.

From his cell, Ihrig wrote a letter to Judge Jay Hanson, acknowledging he needed treatment, saying he wanted to straighten his life, suggesting he might enter a seminary. Last month, Hanson released them in the custody of Riverside retreat, a drug rehabilitation center in Rock Island.

Sometime after daybreak, they were gone.

Left behind were love letters, written daily from their separate cells, filled with innocent expressions. "High school stuff," State's Attorney Jeff O'Connor said. "Adolescent."

They profess undying love with arrows drawn through the letter "o." They have hearts and kisses and the assurance — each to the other — that everything was bright and wonderful and would be all right once they were together again.

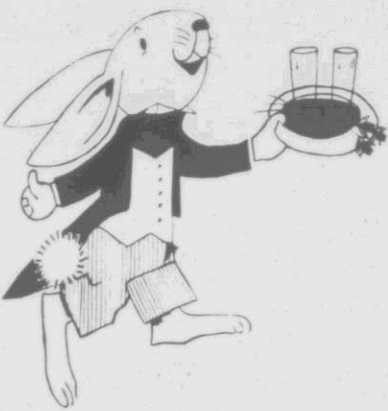

On March 30, police arrested Roger and Sharon Ihrig in New Mexico for probation violation. They are being held in separate cells as they fight extradition to

Illinois, where this time they will likely serve the full sentence for the original drug convictions.

The miracle on Jarvis Street.

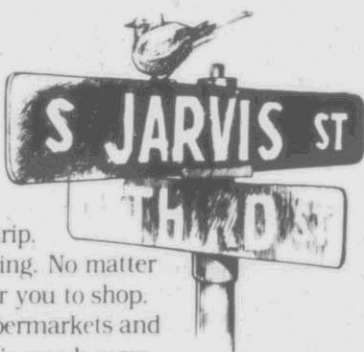

Once, before the advent of pre-packaged cheese slices and fancy french bottled sparkling water, patrons of local markets rightly expected to be able to fill their entire grocery list with a single shopping trip. The old supermarkets had everything. No matter which day was more convenient for you to shop.

But then came the "modern" supermarkets and special "stocking days". You see, it's much more efficient for these big modern markets to let their stocks dwindle until the days they decide to restock. If they are out of bread, then you may eat cake.

People forgot. They forgot that truly super supermarkets are supposed to have what you need, when you need it.

But, at Overton's, we didn't forget. We still stock our shelves every single night. So if you want Del Monte stewed tomatoes, you get Del Monte stewed tomatoes. If you want Ivory soap, we'll have all you need. And, if you prefer bread, ours just arrived. All at low "super" market prices.

Some big grocery people say it's a miracle that we can still stock our shelves every day and stay in business. It's no miracle. It's just the way we've stayed in business here on Jarvis Street for the past 35 years. Come see us.
