Polish Reform Bothers Soviets

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Faced with rising discontent, Poland's communist leaders put the shattered economy on the back burner, took the road to reform and sparked stern criticism from the Kremlin Saturday.

Within three days and 30 miles, two events occurred that bolstered the reformist trend begun by striking shipyard workers in the Baltic port of Gdansk last summer.

The Communist Party sanctioned the first national meeting of Communist reformers Wednesday in Torun who demanded sweeping democratization of nearly every facet of party life.

Two days later in Bydgoszcz the government agreed to prepare the groundwork for registration of a private farmers union by May 10 after seven months of delays and over the objection of party leader Stanislaw Kania.

"Torun must have shown the party and the government what they are up against," said one Western observer. "Ageeing to register a (private) farmers union is a huge blow to both the party and the Soviets."

In Moscow, Kremlin spokesman Leonid Zamyatin charged in a nationally televised speech Saturday that counterrevolutionary forces were trying to "further destabilize" the situation in Poland.

He also said statements by Western leaders against a crackdown in Poland amounted to "direct inter-

Faithful Observe Easter As Holy Week Concludes

JERUSALEM (AP) — Christian faithful celebrate Christ's resurrection at the cave revered as his tomb Easter Sunday, capping a colorful Holy Week of devotions for the tens of thousands who made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

The Latin Patriarch of Jerusalem, Monsignor Giacomo Giuseppe Beltritti, celebrates a Pontifical High Mass at sunrise after a procession from the patriarchate to the centuries-old Church of the Holy Sepulchre in the heart of Jerusalem's Old City.

The Holy Week pilgrimage, beginning last week with a Palm Sunday procession from the Mount of Olives to the Old City gates, has been a rich religious awakening for some.

"I feel I can die now. I've seen everything. I'm satisfied," said Virginia Barger of New York City, one of an estimated 20,000 pilgrims who walked the Via Dolorosa, the Way of the Cross, on Good Friday.

"I did nothing but shed tears as long as I've been here — just picturing what our Lord went through, what he suffered and how they crucified him with all the blood running down his face from the thorns," Mrs. Barger said in a quavering voice.

Protestants, who cannot conduct their own services in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre because of a 100-year-old arrangement sharing the massive structure among the Latin and Eastern Orthodox churches, celebrate Easter Sunday outside the walls of the Old City at the Garden Tomb.

Some Protestants believe the skull-shaped

One-Day Surgery Proposed

DoctorsPlanCenter

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Eighteen Greenville physicians have proposed creation of a new medical center for one-day surgical procedures that would allow the patient to check in, have the operation and go home the same day.

Such a center could reduce the cost of many routine operations by half, according to Dr. John C. Hale, a board member for Surgical Properties Ltd. The company was formed to establish and operate the Eastern Carolina Surgical Center.

Hale emphasized that the proposed center, which is subject to approval by state health service officials and the state Department of Human Resources, would not be in competition with Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"We're not building a hospital," Hale said. "We're happy with the hospital we've got. This will be for out-patient surgergy. No one would stay overnight."

Hale said the project has the support of Blue Cross-Blue Shield, which has conducted experiments nationally that indicated such in-and-out surgery could result in savings of 49 percent to nearly 80 percent of the customary cost on some surgical procedures by eliminating the extended need for hospital space and services.

G. Henry Leslie, board chairman for Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said Saturday he did not foresee major opposition to the surgical center.

Planes Collide, Killing 15; Four Survive Crash

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — Fifteen people were killed and four skydivers parachuted 8,000 feet to safety Friday afternoon when a twin-engine commuter airplane and a smaller craft collided in clear, calm weather near the Loveland airport.

Four men on the smaller plane, which carried skydivers from a parachute center, bailed out after the collision and floated to the ground. Two skydivers were apparently killed when the planes hit, although their parachutes opened as they fell from the crippled aircraft, and all 13 aboard the commuter plane were killed, authorities said.

Robert Baxter, a duty officer with the Federal Aviation Administration in Denver, said the commuter plane was an Air U.S. twin-engine Handley-Page turboprop bound from Denver to Gillette, Wyo. He said the plane was carrying 10 passengers, a pilot, a co-pilot and a flight attendant when it crashed near Loveland-Fort Collins Municipal Airport, about 40 miles north of Denver, at about 4 p.m. MST.

Steve Kinnett, one of the four survivors who were aboard a Cessna 206 from the Skys West Parachute Center, said, "All of a sudden, it seemed the plane just exploded. I was sitting next to the pilot and when I looked back, I didn't see the back end of the plane. The two guys in the back were no longer there."

The plane was carrying five skydivers and a pilot, all equipped with parachutes. Kinnett, a medical student who lost a leg to cancer 10 years ago, said he opened his chute only after free-falling several thousand feet to avoid debris and other skydiver.

Air U.S. officials in Denver confirmed a collision involving their Flight 716, scheduled to leave Denver at 3:30 p.m. MST for Gillette, in northeastern Wyoming. Air U.S., which flies routes in Colorado and Wyoming, said the flight was due at the Campbell County Airport in Gillette at 5 p.m. and was then to continue to Sheridan, Wyo.

"I noticed that there were two planes that seemed to be coming together," said eyewitness David Pickett, who was at the parachute center. "First I thought it was an optical illusion until the smaller of the two planes ... just exploded when the wing of the twin engine plane hit it.

Chase By Police Ends In Fatality

By Tommy Forrest

A Sharpsburg man was killed early Saturday when a truck being pursued by a Greenville policeman smashed into a tree on Stantonsburg Road, Highway Patrol Trooper Fred Davis said.

Police and the Highway Patrol said the accident climaxed a series of events that included an assault on a female clerk at the Dodge Store on Memorial Drive and the theft of a truck from Tropigas Incorporated of North Carolina in Ayden.

Davis, who investigated the fatality, identified the dead man as Rufus Mikell Fail.

Greenville Police Capt. A.G. Whitaker said the chase and Fail's death was preceded by an incident at the Dodge Store, where clerk Marie Tripp Norris was struck on the jaw by one of two men, one identified as Fail, became unruly after one accused Ms. Norris of failing to return correct change after he made a purchase.

The two men threw the store's cash register to the floor and fled. Two women, who were not identified, saw part of the incident and called police.

Police Cpl. K.E. Thompson said the car used by the men later was seen in Ayden, where police stopped it only to have the

Space Program Awaits Reagan

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The extradaordinary success of America's space shuttle mission leaves only one question unanswered: Where do we go from here?

The federal space agency wants to use the shuttle's now-proven abilities to increase U.S. operations in the area of space near the Earth, first with longer stays in orbit and then with construction of a space station.

But NASA cannot proceed until it gets a green light — and the funding that goes with it — from the White House.

President Reagan gave full backing to development of the rocket plane because it is needed by the Air Force to launch military satellites. But there has been no indication that he favors a new space project to build on the capability offered by the space shuttle.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is being run by Dr. Alan Lovelace who retired in January as deputy administrator but agreed to stay on as acting administrator until the president appoints a new agency head.

There is no indication from the White House when some one will be named to succeed Dr. Robert Frosch who resigned before Reagan took office.

Without a new focus for its unparalleled engineering expertise, NASA will soon become little more than a trucking operation, using the shuttle to haul satellites into orbit for a variety of customers, ranging from the Department of Defense to a number of commercial communications companies.

The shuttle's first operational mission is scheduled for September 1982. The ship will orbit a communications satellite that will be used in part by NASA as a radio relay station for its own spacecraft, including the shuttle.

Three commercial communications satellites are scheduled to go up on the next mission, set for November 1982.

Eight launchings are set for 1983 and 27 are on the books for the next two years.

By the end of 1994, NASA estimates there will have been more than 400 flights of the Columbia and three more shuttles now under construction.

Right now, the shuttle is constrained by power and fuel limitations to flights lasting only a week or two in orbit. By carrying extra fuel for its fuel cell generators and control rockets, the shuttle will be able to stay up for four weeks.

NASA has been seeking funds from the White House and Congress to build a utilities module that would unfurl a large wing-like array of solar cells to convert sunshine into electricity. The shuttle could plug into this assembly and stay in orbit up to two months at a time.

Abuse: It's Not The 'Crazies'

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Violence among students in public schools virtually is an everyday occasion. But violence involving young people does not start with the first class bell, nor does it stop at the end of the school day.

Violence is a part of life to many young people. They may have grown up in homes where violence is routine, as common as eggs for breakfast. They may have seen their father use violence as a means of dominating the family; they may have seen their mother respond in kind to show her independence; they may have felt the pain of a swinging fist at the hands of each or both parents.

One psychologist paraphrases the Bible to explain the situation: "Violence begets violence." Or, "Like father, like son" and "Like mother, like daughter."

Regardless of the cause, violence within families or family-like relationships is not uncommon in Greenville and Pitt County. Child abuse is becoming more and more a recognizable problem. Spouse abuse — usually husband against wife but occasionally wife against husband — is common. And to a lesser degree, there is abuse of a parent by a child.

Nancy Barnhill, an assistant district attorney, said her office receives "three or four cases a week" involving attacks on women in "domestic-type relationships."

The Pitt County Department of Social Services, through February, had received complaints of abuse involving 53 children since July 1, 1980. In that same period, the agency received complaints involving alleged neglect of 112 children. The department substantiated 23 cases of physical abuse and 114 cases of child neglect.

"Children are getting hurt," said Dorlas Cayton, assistant social services department.

For fiscal 1979-80, the state Department of Human Resources listed complaints of neglect and abuse involving 401 children in Pitt County. The department said 174 cases were substantiated.

Who is the "typical" abuser of children. During fiscal 1979-80, there were 10,891 substantiated cases of child abuse-neglect in North Carolina. In the great majority of those cases, the abuser was a white mother, age 20-29, married and unemployed.

The number of reported child abuse cases has increased, but social service workers say the known incidents are greatly outdistanced by those that go unreported. The National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect has estimated that, for every case reported, five go unreported.

A similar situation exists in spouse — or mate — abuse. If the woman is the victim, she typically has refused to prosecute, kept it to herself or retaliated with more violence. When the man is the victim, he probably will keep the violence shrouded in darkness to avoid embarrassment or other threats to his manly characteristics.

Dr. June Wilkins, a psychologist with the Tideland Mental Health Center in Washington, says women really become trapped in violence. She portrays a family atmosphere in which the man, wanting to dominate, becomes overprotective to a degree of intense jealously, keeping the wife away from contact with non-family sources and causing her to revert to the life of a quasi-recluse.

"At that point they are trapped. They have no money, no friends, no belief in themselves," Dr. Wilkins said.

Historically, she said, "a high percentage of battered women come from a family with a history of abuse." Such women become conditioned to abuse and expect it.

But if they attempt "to break out, where do they go? They go to their mother, who was abused. She says, 'You made your bed, now lie in it,'" Dr. Wilkins said.

Dr. Wilkins is conducting a study of adult abuse in this area, especially from the man's view. Her subjects are volunteers, resulting from newspaper or word of mouth advertisements, or come through referrals from social service and law enforcement agencies.

She says research on spouse abuse indicates that, nationally, 30 percent to 50 percent of all marriages involve at least one incidence of violence between spouses during their family relationship. "That 30 percent is a good solid figure," she said.

Dr. Wilkins said violence within a family is contagious, almost to the degree of being passed on in the manner that an inheritance goes from parent to child.

"Once a cycle (of violence) is established, and permitted, it will continue," she said. "If it's happened severely twice, it will happen again."

"It's not a pathological thing. It's not the crazies out there. These people (who abuse) are not necessarily sick," she said.

"When an individual as a child is abused or sees a parent abused, they grow up with that in mind. It literally is passed on from generation to generation.

"They learn that when someone loves you, they hit you; when you love them, you hit them. They learn that powerful people hit less powerful people and get away with it."

But in many cases involving family abuse, she said, "The same people, who show (a child) it's all right to hit someone you love, are also teaching it's not all right to hit anyone else ... The person to worry about is someone you love."

As the child of a battered family grows older, he or she may choose sides. In some cases, especially those involving a male, the child may become violent toward a parent, particularly if it is the father who is the abuser.

Such abuse of parents is not unknown in Pitt County, but Beth Clark, social services supervisor for adult protective services, said most cases reported to her agency involve neglect — where the parent is alone, intentionally or because children are not willing to become involved.

Dr. Wilkins discounted widespread criticism of television as a causal agent for violence.

"TV pales in comparison to the family influence," she said. "People learn violence from the people they know best, and that's the family."

two occupants flee. Ayden police reported the truck theft a short while later.

"I heard the call on the radio, and proceeded to the N.C. 11 and 264 Bypass area," Thompson said. "As soon as I got there, I saw a truck go through the intersection, and pulled into a lot to turn around and caught the side of it with my headlights, and it was the truck reported stolen.

"I turned on my blue lights , and gave chase. I saw right then he wasn't going to stop.", Thompson said.

Thompson said he chased the truck down U.S. 264 Bypass and on to Allen Road. Thompson said when he approached the intersection of Allen Road and Stantonsburg Road he applied his brakes. About that time, he said, the lights on the truck went out as the vehicle hit the tree, uprooting the tree and rupturing a propane tank on the rear of the truck.

Stanley Warren Acrey, identified by officers as the other man involved in the Dodge Store incident, was taken into custody in Ayden. Davis said he was charged with assault on a female and damage to personal property.

No End Sighted In Coal Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly three months after the United Mine Workers and the soft coal industry opened contract negotiations, both vowing there would be no repetition of past labor-management strife, no settlement is in sight.

As the strike by some 160,000 miners entered its 24th day, no bargaining sessions were in the offing. The two sides are poles apart.

When talks broke off Friday at a Washington hotel, the three-member coal industry bargaining team, led by B.R. Brown of Consolidation Coal Co., rejected the UMW's latest contract proposals.

Union President Sam Church suggested the issue is now in the hands of the coal operators, saying he hoped the BCOA committee would reconsider the decision of its three bargainers to turn down the union's proposals.

The 11-member executive officers committee of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the chief industry negotiating strategy committee, will meet soon, possibly this week.

"They took our counterproposal and said to give them a call when we wanted to be realistic," Church said. "I think they should take our proposal and look at it rather than just (giving it) a flat rejection at first sight."

Church and his fellow negotiators are seeking a revised three-year contract that will win acceptance by the rank and file in Appalachian and midwestern coalfields. The UMW members voted down by an overwhelming margin an earlier tentative settlement.

Church is steadfastly refusing suggestions by industry representatives that the spurned contract be taken back to the coalfields for another vote.

But the industry is equally adamant, claiming the earlier contract settlement gave miners a host of improvements in wages and other working conditions and that it will not sanction new concessions.

It was unclear late last week which side had to make the next move to get talks resumed.

Church said the recess in bargaining "will at least give them time to see what's in our proposal."

Neither side will admit that bargaining has reached a stalemate. And they won't even consider talk of an impasse, which would invite government intervention.

The Reagan administration has shown no inclination to intervene, although Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan said recently he was "very disappointed" that the collective bargaining process had not succeeded.

One high administration official, asking not to be identified because of the administration's desire for a low profile, said "we're talking to people close to both sides, but we don't want to get into this thing yet."

Donovan has said he opposes government intervention in the early stages of collective bargaining.

High Winds Assure More Forest Fire Damage

By The Associated Press

As winds gusting to 30 mph assured the forest fires scorching Onslow County would burn into Sunday, firefighters planned a brief Easter morning sunrise prayer service to open their fifth day of battling three massive woods fires.

By dusk Saturday, the three fires at Sandy Run — dubbed Alpha, Bravo and Charlie — burned over 14,900 acres.

The Easter service at the Dixon Fire Tower south of Jacksonville at 6:15 a.m. Sunday was scheduled to last just 15 minutes before the firefighters were to eat fed breakfast. After that, they were to "hit the fire lines."

Tom Hegele of the North Carolina Forest Service said Saturday evening that Alpha and Charlie fires were contained, although they were still burning and firefighters still were scrambling to meet problems at each fire. Alpha covered 5,600 acres and Charlie covered 2,000 acres.

Bravo, the biggest blaze and covering 7,300 acres, still had "a lot of active fire" and was causing the most problems, Hegele said.

Some 150 firefighters supported by six helicopters including two from the National Guard were put up against the blaze, Hegele said, adding that two more helicopters from the National Guard would soon be added to the battle.

The biggest concern was the continuing gusty winds out of the southwest at 18 to 30 mph.

Firefighters not only had to contend with wind-whipped forest fires which have been burning since Wednesday, but also vandals struck Friday night and put a pumper truck out of service.

Hegele said the vandals cut up "a lot of fire hose" and moved a tractor away from its location near the fire.

Hegele said the service usually pulls its equipment to the nearest road at night, services it and leaves it.

"We've never had any problems before but we're going to have to keep a sharper eye on it down there," he

The B fire grew by several hundred acres Friday as the gusty winds caused it to jump containment lines twice.

Since the Sandy Run fires began Wednesday, Hegele said the C fire had been the coolest but the gusty winds began feeding it Friday and it began flaring up and growing from its 2,000 acre containment.

The largest of the other seven fires in Onslow County, at Piney Green east of Jacksonville, was being held at 3,700 acres, but Hegele feared the high winds might stir that one up also.

Another fire was reported in a very critical area of Pamlico County at 10 a.m. Saturday. Hegele said it had the potential to become a very large fire because the area contains the materials to fuel it, such as dry brush and rich peat.

Firefighters contained a 550 acre fire near Havelock Friday night after the residents of Havelock Manor subdivision were evacuated. Hegele said that and two other fires in Craven County had been deliberately set. He said all but one of the fires in Onslow County was suspected to be arson.

Hegele said the shifting wind is one of the reasons the fires have continued so long in Onslow County, entering the fifth day Sunday.

"Each time the wind shifts, we get pressure put on a new area of the fire," he said. "An area that had before been cold or had not been actively running, just flares up. It's just a constant battle to get ahead of the thing."

Hegele said help came into Onslow County Saturday by way of 40 Camp Lejeune Marines and three Marine Corps tractors.

Appalachians Lead Way In Churches Per Capita

BOONE, N.C. (UPI) — There are twice as many churches in the Southern Appalachian mountains per 1,000 people as there are in the nation, a study by an Appalachian State University professor shows.

Dr. Richard Humphrey, a philosophy and religion professor, said his study indicates worshipping in the "old ways" is what keeps churches alive and growing in the mountains.

During the study, Humphrey visited more than 400 churches and talked with hundreds of mountain residents.

Mountain residents have used the Bible and religion to keep their identity and sense of place in the midst of the onrush of mainstream America, mass communcations, federal and state programs, missionaries and tourism that have invaded the mountains, Humphrey said.

He said the two things separating the "old timey" mountain religion from most American churches are river baptisms and foot washing. Many American churches baptize members in tubs inside the churches or by sprinkling. Footwashing is the sacrament practiced during the Lord's Supper where members of the congregation wash each other's feet.

Flower services, veiling of women, praying for and annointing the sick, marriage and practicing the kiss of peace are other old standards in worship services in the Appalachian mountains.

Humphrey, who began studying Appalachian culture in 1972, said traditional mountain religion comes from the scriptures but it had its beginnings in the religious revival of 1787. Presbyterian clergyman James McGready was converted and at a sacramental meeting at Gasper River in Logan County, Ky., in 1798, McGready began a religious revival that spread through the mountains and the South.

The revival left an indelible on the religious tradition of Appalachia.

"Even today, Appalachia has not moved very far from the frontier religion of the Great Revival," Humphrey said.

Pentecostalism began in 1896 in Cherokee County, Humphrey said, when a congregation began speaking in tongues. In 1916, members of a Tennessee church began snake handling. Both ceremonies, offsprings of the traditional worship service, spread through 16 states but currently are not widely practiced.

During World War I, Appalachian residents began earning wages and pressure to pay preachers salaries began. Humphrey said mainstream churches, those located in or near the county seats, began raising funds for Sunday school programs and buildings.

But the traditional mountain churches don't belive in paying ministers, having planned worship services or planned sermons, Humphrey said. The belief the Spirit will move the minister and the congregation is one of the major differences between mainstream churches and traditional ones.

"Traditional mountain churches open up feelings that may embarass some mainstreamers," Humphrey said, "but both play a vital role."

Appalachian natives began leaving their homes in World War II and at that time, it was predicted traditional mountain religion would disappear.

"The mountain religion went through a great re-examination and evaluation," Humphrey said. "Other aspects of mountain society reflect mainstream America, but the churches stayed just as they were."

Traditional mountain churches won't hesitate to discipline members.

If a church member is caught drinking alcoholic beverages on a Saturday night, he is "churched" the next day when he walks into the church. When a person is "churched" he is either not allowed to return to church for several months until he has repented, or he may return, but can't take communion and must sit in a certain section.

In traditional mountain religion the church is the community, whereas in mainstream America it is an extension, Humphrey said.

Gypsy Troupe Charged

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — The FBI has charged eight Polish "gypsies" with interstate transportation of about $89,000 in jewlery and silver allegedly stolen from homes in Mississippi and Georgia.

The group, none of whom profess to speak English, are also being investigated in connection with robberies in Texas. Authorities said Friday they have been included in an investigation of a suspected nationwide burglary ring that employs aliens smuggled illegaly into the United States.

The eight, charged Friday, are Edward Dabrowski, 23, of Columbus, Ohio; Peter Langer, 30, Barbara Langer, 30, Maria Szczawinska, Danuta Lechowska, Kazimierz Malinowski, Tadeusz Wisniewski, and Maria Kochanowska, all of Shreveport, La.

Police have referred to the group as "gypsies," and Darl Fowler of Greensboro, one of two attorneys representing the group, said he was hired by a man identifying himself as a "Gypsy prince." The group's other attorney, Tom Manning of Raleigh, said he was hired by "New York people."

Sources told the Greensboro Daily News that some of the defendants had been in the country less than 30 days and had entered the country through New York.

Police have used a Polish-speaking professor at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro as an interpreter.

The eight, jailed in lieu of bonds ranging from $10,000 to $50,000, were arrested last Saturday when a motel clerk called police to quell a disturbance. When police arrived, three of the eight jumped into a late-model Chevrolet and fled through downtown Greensboro, tossing pillowcases full of silverware out the window.

Authorities said they seized 300 to 400 pieces of silver.

Police said a road map with several Texas cities circled was confiscated in the arrests.

Charlotte To Decide Bond Issue

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Charlotte voters will go to the polls April 28 to decide on a $53.9 million bond referendum backers say is vital for the city's future and opponents claim will lead to higher taxes.

On the ballot will be nine items, including $1.5 million to purchase land for a new sports arena, $14.2 million for a downtown transit mall, and $10 million for an addition to the Mint Museum of Art.

Those organized to promote the bonds say they face problems of voter apathy and misunderstanding.

Highway Employee Is Fired Despite Acquittal By Jurors

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — James Preston Allen, the North Carolina Department of Transportation official acquitted by a Wake County jury Friday on influence peddling charges, was fired after the verdict was announced, Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw said.

"We did terminate his employment based on his own testimony," Bradshaw said. Bradshaw said Allen violated two portions of the state personnel act: conduct unbecoming an employee and sharing confidential information.

Bradshaw said he tried to reach Allen without success but mailed notice of the firing to Allen.

However, late Friday night Allen said he had not heard from Bradshaw although he was aware of news reports that he had been dismissed. Allen has been suspended without pay since Jan. 20.

Allen has the right to appeal his firing, Bradshaw said.

Earlier Friday Bradshaw said he had been shocked by Allen's revelations during the influence-peddling trial and added that the acquittal was based "on a technicality."

Allen was acquitted after a jury of 10 women and two men deliberated nearly four hours over two days.

Tobacco Selling Job Is Constant

Sen. John East has learned quickly in Washington that there is a vast amount of misinformation circulated about the tobacco program.

In a recent press conference he said he and other senators and representatives from tobacco states spend a great deal of time "trying to dispel ignorance" about tobacco.

"I have worked hard to allay the misconceptions generated by the press and the enemies of tobacco as to the nature of the program, what it does and why it's so profoundly significant to North Carolina," Sen. East said. He noted the term "subsidy" is used, when we have a market-support program.

Sen. East said he had found senators who believed price support payments went to the major tobacco companies rather than to the small farmers.

He reminded that the program costs the taxpayers very little.

Noting the health arguments, the senator said it is not fair that tobacco is "singled out for tirades from officialdom in Washington."

It is a frustrating situation, indeed. It is difficult to get across to non-tobacco producing areas of the nation that the tobacco program has been successful in keeping small farms operating and at little cost to the taxpayers.

It is difficult to make others understand that American tobacco growers are trying to produce a high quality product, the only way they can be competitive in the world market. Without quotas we would only have more tobacco, not the quality product that keeps foreign buyers coming back.

America should be proud that here is one industry which is constantly emphasizing quality through a painstaking production and handling process.

Forest Fire Damage Heartbreaking

Forest fires are awesome and the damage they do in destroying nature and depriving civilization of its product is incalculable.

Major forest fires roared through Southeastern North Carolina this week, destroying 17,000 acres and threatening personal property. The evacuation of two schools occurred as the infernos consumed forests in Onslow and Pender counties.

The worst part of it is that arson is suspected in some of the fires.

Why would anyone want to burn beautiful woodsland and the wildlife it harbors? The answer must be locked in a twisted mind.

The rest of us, though, can at least avoid being careless around woodsland.

An untended camp fire or a carelessly thrown match or cigarette can do great damage to forests which took decades to grow.

THIS MORNING

SomeChildrenAreJailed

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Last year, more than 1,600 children were put in jail in North Carolina; some of them as young as 12 years old.

That worries leaders of Child Watch, an independent organization committed to pushing reforms in the ways children are treated.

Over the past 10 years, the state has taken action to stop jailing youngsters. The practice was common at one time. Instead, several counties and the state have developed and operated juvenile detention facilities where young people can be held pending court actions.

But now stumbling blocks are cropping up. The state law barring use of jails to hold juveniles has already been extended to 1983; and there is pressure now in the General Assembly to push that deadline to 1985.

Meanwhile, the extreme northeast and northwest sections of the state still do not have juvenile detention units to replace jails, and the million dollars needed to build them and get them into operation has beeen axed from the state budget.

Child Watch specialists fear that with further delay of construction the deadline on use of jails will have to be extended.

Action to keep juveniles out of jail resulted from evidence that even short exposure to the influences and conditions there was harmful, that children were physically harmed in some cases, and even an occasional suicide occurred. Jail personnel are not trained to handle juveniles, and lack the resources to do so.

Vocational School

Another concern of Child Watch is the high school dropout problem. One of three high school students leaves school before graduation.

Priority has been placed by Gov. Jim Hunt and the State Board of Education on reducing class size to combat this problem. But some education specialists and at least one school board member disagree on this approach.

Says Child Watch: "While slight reductions in class size are beneficial, first-class vocational education options would do far more to curb the continuing dropout epidemic in North Carolina and to increase many a young person's value to himself and to society."

Gasohol Spurt

Service stations pumped nearly 1.5 million gallons of gasohol in January this year; a 118 percent increase over January of 1980.

This dramatic increase in the 10 percent mixture of alcohol with gasoline results from a rapid spread of dealer participation following a reduction in the state tax. The four-cent reduction allows gasohol prices to be competitive. But the tax break will be phased out over the next three years on the theory that alcohol costs will remain stable while gas prices continue to escalate, so that by 1984 gasohol can be price competetive on its own.

Sinking

A graphic description of present budget-cutting efforts in Congress was offered during a recent discussion of the impact of Reagan Administration proposals on social programs.

More Jobs

Hiring for government jobs may have slowed some, but is far from reversing the upward trend despite comments from state and federal leaders to the contrary.

Based on February figures from the Employment Security Commission there are now 421,500 Tar Heels in government jobs, not counting the military. That is up from 414,700 just a year ago.

State government employment grew by only 800 in the year, now standing at 120,900. Local government took a sharp jump; up nearly 5,500 to a total of 253,000.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Brass Brought To Heel

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The hospitalized President Reagan did not wait for the tragic sinking April 10 of a Japanese trawler by a missile-firing Polaris submarine to bring the admirals to heel by ordering full speed ahead on a vital submarine communications system they wanted stopped.

From the White House last week, an undated memorandum ordered Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger to countermand the Navy's decision to cancel its extremely low frequency (ELF) communications system. The memo bore only Reagan's name, not his signature, but it had been orally approved from the hospital bed of the invalided commander in chief.

"... There shall be no funding reductions," Reagan said. "You should advise the Navy that I am not inclined to terminate this much-needed program without compelling evidence to do so."

That presumably scuttled the effort by the admirals to play the familiar old Navy game: Put aside currently needed projects at the expense of funding futuristic systems. Surprisingly, the Pentagon civilians did not bring the Navy brass up short; the decision on a piece of hardware had to go all the way to the president's hospital bed.

The Navy leaked the first news of this to the public via no champion of the Pentagon: Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan, a liberal Democrat and all-out environmentalist foe of ELF, a system destined for his home state. When Levin passed the word to the Detroit News, it exploded with the force of a Polaris missile among defense leaders on Capitol Hill.

For 20 years, the Navy and a few brave politicians willing to take on the environmentalist lobby had preached the soundness and safety of ELF. Without it, the president cannot communicate with submerged U.S. submarines; they must come close to the surface and trail their antennas.

That is probably what happened, Navy submariners told us, in the East China Sea tragedy April 10. The U.S.S. George Washington, a Polaris missile sub, was almost certainly surfacing to pick up new orders. That maneuver would be unnecessary with ELF.

In an international emergency, the president could not order U.S. strategic submarines to prepare for possible missile firings, or to rush to a new location, without risking their destruction by an enemy as they expose their surface antennas. ELF is "the critical linchpin" to wartime deployment of the subs, wrote Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, in an angry note to Weinberger when he first heard about the Navy's decision.

Why, then, did the Navy risk congressional wrath and the commander in chief's personal affront by cancelling ELF? The full reason is shrouded in Pentagon mists, but defense specialists — including many submariners — say the reason was simple greed for defense appropriations.

The Navy brass decided the $34 million earmarked for ELF in the coming fiscal year could be used to develop a futuristic aircraft for communicating with submarines called TACAMO. Then, in another year or two, it could return to ELF, knowing that growing congressional support of the ELF system would still guarantee delivery of the funds.

In so doing the Navy betrayed its friends who, on April 7, had won a referendum over the environmentalists in Ashland County, Wis., where the first part of ELF is being built. Supporting ELF in the name of national security, veterans groups have spent thousands of dollars to argue there is nothing to fear from the underground antenna. The VFW had wired Adm. Hayward, chief of naval operations, two weeks earlier that cancellation would destroy Navy credibility.

The decision reversing the admirals was made by the White House on two grounds: First, ELF is the only foreseeable system to give the president command-and-control access to missile-

Sunday Morning Notes

Easter Sunday is a time of peace to all Christians of the world. It is a time when we celebrate the resurrection of Christ, and the end of the pain and suffering and turmoil that surrounded His crucifixion.

In our part of the world the season fits the mood of Easter. It is spring; flowers are blooming and trees are budding. The grip of winter is broken and most of us enjoy a re-awakening of the spirit.

At this time the world is at peace, even if there are trouble spots, and most of us can rejoice.

It has not been that way every Easter. The Holy Day came on April 5 in 1942 and it was the very darkest time for our nation. We had been plunged into the greatest war the world had ever known on Dec. 7, 1941 and the war was not going well for the United States and its allies in April.

The day before Easter, headlines told us that a German spring drive might be near. Heavy attacks were reported raging on the Russian front. Gen. Douglas McArthur had sent a message to his church of baptism asking guidance.

On the Monday after Easter it was reported that the British had turned back an attack on Ceylon with Japan suffering heavy air losses.

The following days it was apparent that Bataan would fall. The Japanese forces were on the move there and American forces had taken up new positions. The next day it was announced that the Japanese had crushed the defenders of Bataan. The fate of 36,000 defenders was unknown. An American aircraft carrier was sunk by the enemy.

Then on April 14 the French government bowed to Nazi Germany and included collaborator Pierre Laval in the Petain government. It was a blow to the allies.

On April 18 there was some positive news from the allied standpoint. U. S. planes bombed Tokyo. It was seen as a daring daylight raid with incendiary and explosive bombs. It was a great lift for morale at home after months of dismal news on the war's progress.

On April 21 there was a belief reflected that Japan might want an early peace. It was totally wrong.

There were to be years of war ahead, but gradually the tide turned. The United States recaptured the Pacific islands, an invasion was launched at Normandy and France was freed. Eventually Hitler's Germany was crushed.

Japan fought on until the awesome atom bomb was dropped and it was all over.

Other Editors Say Experts Hurt Us

(Washington Daily News)

We are getting weary of the so-called experts who seem ever so willing to testify in some legal case, be it civil or criminal, provided a fee is available to them.

Today the so-called experts in the field of higher education are saying on the one hand that North Carolina is derelict in accepting its responsibilities to both races. These paid experts are saying that what is being done in the North Carolina University system actually thwarts racial integration and a more evenly racial makeup of campuses rather than improving the picture.

But on the other hand, other "experts" enter the story and say quite clearly that just the opposite is true. From the standpoint of educational credentials, the lineups of educators on both sides seem rather imposing. They have many credits to show, and in some field of education they often have made quite a reputation for themselves.

The same is true in a criminal trial. A team of psychiatrists can be hired to testify, it seems, in favor of the side paying the team. If a team is needed to say that a man is mentally incompetent, then for the price a team can be hired. If on the other hand a team is needed to say a man has good sense, then for the price another team can be hired. So often both teams appear in court with one team taking once side and the other team taking the other side.

When we can hire people to find what we ask them to find, government, business, idividuals — and Americans in general — stand to lose far more overall than anyone gains. If we wish to have some investigation and we tell a committee we want such and such a conclusion entered, then if that committee finds that exact conclusion, its findings are certainly suspect.

We are not talking about exceptions to the rule, either.

Experts paid to find what they are told to find hurt everybody and everything, we feel. And more and more it appears that use of paid experts in this manner is becoming an American trend.

Teach All To Think

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Luis Alberto Machado is Venezuela's Cabinet minister in charge of intelligence. Not spying. Brainpower.

After two years as Minister for the Development of Human Intelligence, Machado feels his I.Q.-boosting job, once the butt of cartoons and criticism, is gaining serious support.

"This is peaceful revolution, a deep revolution that will change social, political and economic structures in Venezuela and, eventually, around the world," Machado said in an interview.

"And I don't want them," said the 48-year-old, Harvard-educated Machado.

His ministry consists of himself and a couple of secretaries in a small office in an annex to the presidential palace. Stationery and other office supplies come from the presidential offices.

As for the budget, "Nothing. Zero," Machado said. "We use what is already there as part of the government's permanent structure. That includes the nation's educational system, the armed forces, hospital and the various ministries."

Machado's salary of around $40,000 a year and his expense allowance of $5,000 are part of the presidential office's budget, government sources say.

The minister for the Development of Intelligence says he has 14 projects under way which have "totally erased the wave of criticism and jokes" that accompanied establishment of the ministry

Interest Rates Can Undo Goal

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If interest rates rise to near the historic highs of last year many of the programs for revitalizing and rebuilding America, including those of the Reagan administration, could be undermined.

Indications of the impact stand out in bold relief from other findings in a survey of chief financial officers for major corporations, just completed by the 95,000-member National Association of Accountants.

More than half the respondents said they would simply cease borrowing to finance capital expenditures, vital to any rebuilding effort, if rates shot up again. Thirty-two percent said their borrowing would stop if rates reached 20 percent. Another 28 percent said they would not go further into debt if rates rose to the 21 percent to 25 percent level.

In the past week the prime interest rate, which had fallen from 21.5 percent in December to 17 percent in late March, reversed direction and rose to 17.5, rekindling fears of more to come. Companies with less than prime ratings already are paying an additional point or more.

The problem with high rates is that they prevent capital formation at a reasonable price, said Robert Shultis, executive director of the association and former vice president and controller of Technicon Inc.

"They won't risk investments if they don't pay off," he said of the chief financial officers. "The net effect is retrenchment."

The March survey of 1,000 industrial corporations drew a response of 349 replies, considered high for a project of its kind. According to Shultis, the chief financial officers expressed optimism about the future course of the economy while indicating restraint in borrowing.

Shultis said he personally expects rates to go up, so long as an inflatioary psychology persists. "I hope the President is right," he said, "but we must be realistic." High rates are "a function of deficit financing, inflation and the market," he observed.

With conditions as they are, he asked, where is the money coming from that will rebuild the country? Financial officers are hardnosed, he said. "They must protect the company," he said, and aren't likely to borrow unless they can double the "hurdle" (interest) rate.

Some respondents, however, indicated interest rates weren't the formidable blockade that others pictured them to be.

R.H. Mitchell of PGG Industries Inc., declared "Interest is just one factor. We must know the total scenario before deciding." Through planning, he said, "current interest rates can be unimportant."

Said S.P. Walsh of E.I. duPont: "As long as capital projects with internal rates of return comfortably above the company's weighted cost of capital were available, we would continue to finance capital projects."

And Leo J. Daley of Air Products and Chemicals Inc. observed that his firm would "perhaps delay projects rather than stop using debt. Theory tells us we should do all projects that exceed the hurdle rate."

Nevertheless, Shultis and other interpreters of the survey feel the consequences would be high, in terms of lowered capital investments, if rates headed back into the 20 percent to 25 percent range of last year.

Asked what the federal government should do to bring down rates, 77 percent said the single most important step would be to control inflation by reducing the federal deficit.

Prejudices In Decline

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The recent rash of anti-Semitic incidents in various parts of the nation does not appear to be symptomatic of increased prejudice toward Jews in the U.S.

On the contrary, positive attitudes toward Jews have shown a marked increase in recent years, according to a variety of Gallup Poll measurements.

Using a special 10-point scale to measure degree of liking or disliking, called the Stapel Scalometer, the Gallup Poll asked survey respondents to indicate where they would place Jews on this scale.

Following is the question:

"You will notice that the 10 boxes on this card (respondents were handed a card) go from the highest position of plus five — for someone or something you have a very Favorable opinion of — all the way down to the lowest position of minus five — for someone or something you have a very Unfavorable opinion of. How far up or how far down the scale would you rate Jews?"

The following table shows the nationwide trend in "highly favorable" opinion, with the results based on the top two positions (plus 5 , plus 4) on the 10-point scale:

'Highly Favorable' Opinion Of Jews

1976	34
1975	33

'Highly Unfavorable' Opinion Of Jews

1981	2%
1976	4
1975	3

1976	30

Unpleasant Experiences With Jews?

Further evidence of increased religious tolerance is seen from earlier Gallup Poll findings which show steady and marked declines in the proportions of persons who have feelings of animosity toward Jews.

For example, the percentage of both Catholics and Protestants who say they have an had unpleasant experiences that caused them to dislike Jews was on a steady downtrend between 195 2 and 1979, the last time the measurement was taken.

In addition, a decline was found in the percentage of both Catholics and Protestants who feel Jews are becoming too powerful in the U.S.

Following are the questions and findings:

"Have you or your family ever had any unpleasant personal experiences that might have made you dislike Jews?"

Growing Tolerance On Interfaith Marriages

Further evidence that American society is becoming more tolerant, or accepting, in recent decades can be seen in the trend in attitudes on interfaith marriages, based on earlier Gallup surveys.

Between 1968 and 1978 the proportion of Americans who said they approve of marriages between Jews and non-Jews rose from 5 9 percent to 69 percent.

Gallup surveys have also shown that the climate for Jews seeking political leadership roles has never been more favorable than it is at the present time. The percentage saying they would vote for a Jew for president, 46 percent in the first survey in 1937, was 82 percent in 1978.

Growth In Education Seen As Key Factor

One of the key factors in the growth of religious tolerance in U.S. society has been the increase in the proportion of the populace with college training. This proportion has more than tripled since the Gallup Poll was founded in 1935 . The college-educated segment in each survey has consistently been found to be more tolerant than those with less formal education.

Despite the cumulative survey evidence reported today, which shows an increase in goodwill toward Jews on a broad national basis, random anti-Semitic incidents (as well as acts directed against Christian churches and cemeteries) may be growing in numbers.

An annual national survey conducted by the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith revealed that there were 377 reported acts against Jewish institutions or private property nationwide in 1980. (The survey did not include acts of bodily assault, harassment, or threats by phone or mail, which were compiled separately.)

In The Town Of Oxford

Preparing Annual Earl Of Granville Festival

By WES YOUNG
The Henderson Daily Dispatch

Three-Day Festival Honors Granville Founder, Spring

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Those who travel Interstate 85 between Durham and Henderson know it — they can't help but notice the sign.

Everyone in Oxford knows it; that's for sure.

It's the Earl of Granville Festival, to be held soon in the town of Oxford for its third consecutive year.

The festival starts April 24, and for three days this city of some 7,500 inhabitants will see its population swelled by thousands of folks who are expected to come for the fun from both near and far away.

The theme of the festival this year will be a salute to the armed forces, but let that not be misleading. The festival will be much more than military bands and parachuting exhibitions, although there will be plenty of men in uniform on hand for the festival's activities.

And just what is the Earl of Granville Festival?

The festival, which was first held in 1979, was originally conceived as a dedication ceremony for a downtown park. A local group, the Men's Garden Club, wanted to hold a ceremony for the opening of the park which holds the club's name.

However, in the words of one of those present for the original planning session, that ceremony "just grew and grew."

The Men's Garden Club has been active for a number of years, helping to make Oxford undoubtedly one of the most beautiful cities in the state. A crowning achievement of the club was the park constructed downtown near the local library.

Club members wanted to take the occasion not only to dedicate this park, but to celebrate the beauty of Oxford.

So the idea of a dedcation ceremony quickly mushroomed into the concept of a three-day festival to usher in the springtime, a festival that would bring entertainment, beauty and just plain fun to the city's residents, with the focus of the celebration, naturally, to be the Men's Garden Club Park.

While out-of-town guests are certainly welcome, a festival organizer said that the main purpose of the celebration is to instill a sense of community pride among Oxford residents, to make them aware of the beauty of Oxford and to feel involved in the life of the city.

It was also decided at this original planning session to make the event a yearly occasion. While the emphasis might change from year to year, the original purpose of celebrating the arrival of spring beauty of Oxford would remain the same.

Of course, since Oxford is part of Granville County, the celebration is also designed to instill a sense of county pride. After all, in a sense, one might say that Granville County was once one of the largest counties in the nation.

The present limits of the county take in only a small portion of that immense tract of land that was granted by King Charles II to the man for whom the festival is named — the Earl of Granville, otherwise known as John Carteret.

The states of North Carolina and South Carolina were carved out of this enormous land grant, which extended from the present limits of these states all the way to the Pacific Ocean.

Carteret shared this grant with seven other of the English king's favorite lords, but when these others gave up their American holdings in 1728, Granville County was established and named after the English statesman.

From what can be determined about the earl himself, the festival organizers couldn't have picked a better namesake for the three-day celebration. Lord Macaulay, the famous English writer, said Carteret was a happy man, full of energy and highly intelligent.

"With all his learning," wrote Macaulay, "he was far from being a pedant. He was not one of those cold spirits, of which the fire is put out by the fuel. In council, in debate, in society, he was all life and energy."

Not only do these energetic terms applied to the earl himself describe well the spirit and happiness of the three-day festival, they also do quite well to describe the present situation of the City of Oxford, named, it is said, after the British university where the earl received his education.

Oxford can boast of its unemployment rate, far lower than that in surrounding counties and largely spurred on by a development commission that has succeeded in attracting new industry to an area once dependent solely on agriculture.

But at the same time, the city has not left behind its small-town atmosphere and its friendly informal ways. It has come into the 1980s untouched by the sort of urban blight that has turned downtown business sections into empty stores filled only with shadow shoppers.

The downtown area, along with the park, thus will be the location for the festival, which will feature so many activities that it is nearly impossible to list them. They will include crafts, games, a speech by the "earl" himself (portrayed by Aubrey Hardee — one of the festival organizers), strolling minstrels, singers, bands and a gigantic display of fireworks.

Perhaps many who pass by those banners on the interstate highway will get curious enough to check out the festival for themselves. In these busy times, most will find it good to stop for a moment and celebrate.

That Driving Lesson Not Soon Forgotten

By Gail Michaels

PALMYRA, N.C. — Papa, my beloved grandfather, bought his first car, a Maxwell, in 1914. It must have been a lemon. According to legend, he threatened to push it into the creek many times during the two years he had it.

In 1916, he bought a Ford touring car. It was delivered from Richmond, Virginia, to his home in southeastern North Crolina. The car had three pedals: a "go forward" pedal, a "back-up pedal", and a "stop" pedal. Papa tried to drive it twice, and then decided he could not drive that car and chew tobacco at the same time. Since he had no intention of giving up his tobacco-chewing, my grandmother took over the car reins. She managed the car as well as she did the horse, old Dobbin, and the buggy. Mother said that Grandma got along very well with the "back up" pedal. As the years passed, different cars came and went, but Grandma kept her job as driver.

The Great Depression came along and during those years the luxury of a car was forsaken. When things began to pick up, Papa was no longer living.

The first year after his death, my Aunt Ruth gave up her teaching job to stay at home with Grandma. She had her own car and did all the driving. But after a year of being at home, Aunt Ruth felt a need to get back to her teaching. A Mrs. Creekmore was hired as a companion for Grandma, but Mrs. Creekmore neither owned a car nor knew how to drive one. So Grandma decided to buy a new Chevrolet. And then she found that the Great Depression had changed more things than those down on the farm. This new breed of car was a stranger to her.

Undaunted, gramdna persuaded Aunt Ruth to re-teach her to drive. I was twelve years old at the time, and went along for the first lesson, contentedly drinking my Pepsi-Cola.

It was a very warm afternoon — the winding drive through the oak grove looked cool and inviting. With Aunt Ruth beside her, Grandma got started all right and we reached the first curve.

Aunt Ruth sat up straighter and I did too, for the trees on the right seemed to be getting alarmingly close. I clutched the Pepsi bottle with a death-defying grip.

"I am pulling to the left," replied Grandma, calmly tugging to the right.

"Stop, Mama, stop!" exclaimed Aunt Ruth, less calmly.

Grandma pulled back strongly on the steering wheel and I distinctly heard her say "Whoa". But the trees drew nearer as the car headed for a tall, sturdy-looking sapling. I could see the leaves quivering as the sapling bent beneath the hood, as though bowing to a queen. The car came to a stop about halfway to the top of the now-flattened little tree.

"Now, Mama, just be calm," said Aunt Ruth. "Change gears and back off the tree until you are in the lane."

Grandma's voice sounded faint as she said, "I can't find the back-up pedal".

Clutching my now-warm Pepsi, I got out of the car. Aunt Ruth drove the car back to the house. Miraculously there was not a dent in it and with the help of the sun, the sapling soon pulled itself straight.

Mrs. Creekmore proved to be a helpless little lady, rather than a helpful companion, and she soon moved away. Then the back of the house was converted into an apartment and rented to a couple who had one car, which the husband drove to his job in town. Being house-bound, the young wife was happy to drive the Chevrolet anywhere for Grandma. — LOVIE WHITE LEWIS, freelance, Palmyra, N.C.

Life After Sundown Is To Be Found, They Say

By GAIL MICHAELS

Rumor has it that there is no life in a small town after 6 p.m. on Friday. Of course, that's not true. There are plenty of things to do in a small town over the weekend. One can attend a play sponsored by the agricultural extension agency. Then again, if "Your Friend the Bean" isn't one's idea of true theater, one can catch the latest Hiram Chan flick, "Kung Fu Meets the Dragon," at the local movie house. Or one can sample the culinary splendor of Big Hank's, which derives its cosmopolitan atmosphere from the traffic it pulls in off the interstate.

Most Smithfield residents, however, spurn pleasures such as these for the lures of Raleigh or parties at the homes of friends. These get-togethers are probably the most attractive form of entertainment but, as anyone who has ever lived in a small town knows, it usually takes time for a new resident to break into the social scene.

Phillip and I have had a harder time than most because our children have been sick ever since we've been here. I don't deny that I've met plenty of interesting people during my visits to the doctor's office, but trying to quarantine one's own children in a sea of flowing noses is simply not the way lasting relationships are formed. Neither is sitting at home to make sure the children get their doses of antibiotics at the right time.

But several weeks ago things seemed to be looking up. Meg's nose returned to its normal color and size. Zachary's month-long ear infection seemed to be clearing up. And I actually convinced Phillip, a confirmed Goren-aphobe, to accept an invitation to a Saturday night couples' bridge party.

Naturally, on the Monday before the bridge party, Meg brought home a cold from school. By Wednesday Zachary was pulling at his ears again. On Thursday I took them both to the doctor. Meg had bronchitis. Zachary's ear infection had flared up again.

At least I had time to get them on their way to recovery by Saturday night, I thought. But on Saturday afternoon at about 3:30 Meg had a reaction to the antibiotics she was taking and broke out in hives. Then Zachary awoke from his nap screaming in pain.

The doctor couldn't meet us until 7:00. The party was at 8:00. It was obvious that we would have to cancel. Having kept Zachary and his ears company for the better part of three nights, I was too tired to conceal my frustration. As I got off the phone to the doctor, I burst into tears.

"Now, sweetheart," Phillip said, "don't worry about the kids. They'll be all right."

"I'm not worrying about them," I sobbed. "I'm worrying about me. I haven't had a sustained conversation with another adult in months. One morning soon I'm going to wake up as a turnip."

Because Phillip had not been looking forward to an evening of bridge, he didn't entirely see my point until Monday morning when he and a coworker were discussing their weekend activities.

"What did you do this weekend?" Phillip asked.

"Oh, the usual. My wife and I drove to Raleigh Saturday night for dinner and a movie. What did you do?"

Phillip thought for a moment. "Oh, the usual."

"Yeah? Where'd you go?"

firing submarines, which are a vital part of the strategic triad; second, credibility of the entire defense establishment, not just the Navy, was on the line at a time the new administration is trying to restore American defenses.

Pentagon civilians, in distinction to this White House posture, did little to bring the admirals to heel. Entirely exempted was Secretary of the Navy John Lehman, who pleaded conflict of interest stemming from his activities as a Washington-based defense consultant. Although Weinberger quietly informed White House aides of his own doubts about the Navy's decision, he did nothing publicly to force a reversal.

That left it up to the commander in chief. The display of a decisive president able to make a quick political decision from his hospital bed is the one dividend to emerge from the ELF affair. What Reagan should now do is transfer some of that spirit to the Pentagon.

Tuition Tax Credits: The Principle Is Sound

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — An old argument is revving up, one more time, on the familiar proposal to grant income tax credits to parents who have children in private schools. The idea is sound in principle. It is constitutionally acceptable. If the budget could afford this loss of revenue, there would be no good reason not to get on with the plan.

On Capitol Hill, we hear a number of variations on the theme. Back in 1977, and again in 1978, the fight was waged largely in behalf of parents who have sons or daughters in college. The general idea at the time was to grant such taxpayers a tax credit — not a deduction from gross income, but an actual credit — of up to $25 0 on their certification of a dependent's full-time enrollment in an institution of higher learning. Limited to college students only, the plan sailed through both the House and Senate, and then foundered on the issue of pupils in private elementary and secondary schools.

Now the idea is surfacing again, under the sponsorship of Democrat Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York and Republican Robert Packwood of Oregon. The two senators would grant credits covering half of tuition and fees, up to $5 00 a year, for pupils in private elementary and secondary schools and for students in colleges (either public or private) through the senior year. For low-income families whose total tax bill is less than $5 00, the plan would provide cash instead of credits. During his campaign last year, Mr. Reagan, without getting specific, pledged his support to the general proposition. Jimmy Carter in 1976 did the same thing, but later changed his mind.

The arguments against tuition tax credits go to this effect — that the plan would destroy public schools, that it would involve the federal government in an impermissible entanglement of church and state, and that it would impose an unbearable cost upon a budget already burdened by deficit spending. Only the last of these objections has arguable merit.

We lose sight of fundamentals. Why are we spending all this money anyhow? Our public purpose is not public education; our public purpose is education, period. The object of these vast expenditures is to raise our children to be responsible, literate, knowledgeable citizens, capable of making their way in an adult world. The mechanism by which this aim is achieved is immaterial.

In a free society, the people ought to have a right to buy any kind of schooling that will meet these goals. If the public schools serve the public purpose, fine. But to paraphrase the Founding Fathers, if the public school system is destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to abolish the existing system, and to institute a new system that seems to them more likely to effect their desires. Diversity is generally to be preferred to regimentation, and voluntarism is superior to compulsion. As long as we impose "compulsory education," wise public policies should encourage a variety of choices.

The "entanglement" argument is specious. Congress has plenary powers under the 16th Amendment to write the income tax laws in any way it pleases. If Congress can encourage home ownership through the deduction on mortgage interest, or promote oil production through a depletion allowance, or ease the burden of illness through the medical deduction, Congress surely can adapt the device of tax credits to assist parents in providing education for their children.

The policy question, in my own view, has little to do with church and state, Catholic schools or the survival of public education. The question is, can we afford it? At the moment, I doubt it. Mr. Reagan's program of tax reduction is a cohesive package. It will provide significant savings for middle and upper-middle income families, sufficient in many cases to ease tuition costs. Other avenues will remain available to those in lower income brackets. The Moynihan-Packwood bill would cost from $2 to $4 billion for starters. If our government were solvent, I'd buy the bill in a moment. But in the present parlous state of our finances, it strikes me as more than the budget can bear.

Reagan's Easter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will receive communion at a private Easter Sunday service in the White House where he is convalescing from the bullet that pierced his lung March 30.

The Easter service at the White House will be conducted by Dr. Louis Evans of the National Presbyterian Church of Washington, which Reagan has attended. The minister called the White House and offered to conduct a service for the president and his wife, Nancy, Speakes said.

Coastal Travel Shows Increase

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The thousands of people flocking to the beaches over the Easter holiday mark the beginning of the state's multi-million dollar summer tourist season in North Carolina.

And the motels along the coast are filling up sooner this year. Motel owners along the beaches in Carterest and Pender counties report fewer vacancies this year because tourists are making reservations earlier.

"It used to be Memorial Day weekend before we began getting our larger crowds," John Daniels of the Carteret County Chamber of Commerce said. "But Easter now seems to be the beginning of the season.

"We expect the population of the county to double this weekend with the addition of about 35,000 tourists."

Farther to the south on Topsail Island, similar large crowds are expected.

"An awful lot of people are here already," Louise Allen, a gift-shop operator at Surf City said Friday. "A lot of the people who own cottages have come to enjoy the weekend and maybe get in a little fishing."

No estimates of the size of the crowd expected at Topsail Island are available, but Mrs. Allen said the summer population grows from about 1,000 permanent residents to around 10,000 people when all the motels and cottages are booked.

"If it stays warm and sunny, we should do a lot of business," Mrs. Allen said.

Donna Long of Action Inc. in Surf City said all 35 of the firm's cottages are booked for the weekend.

"We have people coming from all over, from places such as Raleigh, Maryland and Ohio," she said.

Daniels said northern states also provide many of the tourists who will be in Carteret County this weekend.

"It might be a little chilly at the beach to some of us, but to someone from Michigan, it's just right," he said.

Daniels said a few rooms in motels were available Friday but he expected the vacancy signs to be down by Saturday.

"Our phone has been ringing off the hook all week with people inquiring about reservations," he said. "Some cancellations will occur, but we still advise people to check ahead before coming."

Daniels estimated that the cost of a motel room ranges from a low of about $20 a night on the mainland to a high of about $50 for accomodations with an ocean-front view.

Many people staying in condominiums and cottages will pay much more, with weekly rates ranging from $150 to more than $600.

Similar rates apply to Topsail Island, although the range may be a bit lower, according to a spot check with motel and cottage rental company operators.

"We're already filled and my latest information is that most places along the beach are booked up also," Robby Jordan of the Jolly Roger Motel in Topsail Beach said.

Pope Leads Easter Vigil

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II led the world's 760 million Roman Catholics Saturday in marking the Easter Vigil and celebrating the resurrection of Christ.

Thousands of pilgrims from around the world flocked to St. Peter's, the largest church in Christendom, for the services marked this year by one of the coldest and wettest Easters on record.

The pontiff was resting most of the day, recovering his energy following Friday's solemn "Way of the Cross" procession through the rain-swept streets of Rome and preparing for the Easter vigil at St. Peter's Basilica.

But he did impart his Easter blessing to 20 men and 25 boys of the Sistine chapel choir and to police motorcyclists who escort him on his trips outside the Vatican.

"Your singing is a liturgy, a prayer and is a participation in the divine sacrifice which Jesus Christ renews on the altar during every mass," John Paul told the choir." Your singing helps the faithful to elevate their souls to God."

Christians traditionally celebrate the resurrection after midnight. But the ceremonies at St. Peter's were starting 90 minutes earlier to allow the pope to have a full night's rest before his strenuous Easter Sunday schedule.

For Christians, Easter Sunday marks the day of Christ's resurrection, three days after he died on the cross. It carries a message of joy and hope for the whole Christian world.

Immediately after midnight, the bells of all of Rome's 500 churches ring out to spread the message.

The highlight of the colorful Easter vigil at St. Peter's is the blessing of a flaming taper carried round the basilica by an usher, which represents the divine light of Christ.

The floodlights in St. Peter's are turned off and the congregation sits in hushed, darkened silence. One by one they light their candles from the taper, transforming the basilica into a sea of flickering light.

Easter Pets; Sad Fate Awaits Bunnies, Ducks

POUND RIDGE, N.Y. (AP) — There is no denying the glee all those baby bunnies and ducks and chicks bring to children across the land on Easter morning. Every kid loves a lovable pet.

"That is what makes what comes later all the more sad," Caroline Thompson was saying.

"Starting about two weeks from now, animal shelters all across the land will be killing those little creatures by the tens of thousands. It's America's annual carnage and national shame."

Caroline Thompson is an energetic woman in her mid-30s who devotes her promotional skills, which are considerable, to, as she puts it, "helping give a voice to the voiceless." The Easter season is her busiest time of year.

It was she who, several years ago, toured the country with Harvey, the celebrated "attack rabbit." Harvey, a fluffy Easter gift, had been teased into meanness. He bit people. He was no fun anymore. His owner brought him to the shelter where Caroline worked to be destroyed.

She saw instead an opportunity to use the rabbit as a symbol of all she deplored. Harvey raised many a dollar for humane causes before he died a natural death last year, mean to the end.

"Ours is a throw-away society and those cute little Easter animals are the worst example of it," she said. "People regard them as toys. When they lose their appeal, or become a bother, they are thrown away.

"I have picked up stray ducks and chickens on the streets of New York city two weeks after Easter and taken them to the shelter myself, where they will be killed humanely. Can you imagine that? Dumping a pet chicken on the streets of New York?"

Two post-Easter throwaway ducks reside with Caroline at her home in the country, about an hour and a half's drive from New York.

"I picked them up two years ago, and I can tell you they are a pain in the neck," she said. "They can't fly, so I had to install an electric bubbler in the pond so it wouldn't freeze and they would have some protection in the winter. That cost $150.

"They also must eat, of course. I pay about $20 for 100 pounds of duck pellets. They'll go through that in a month and a half.

"At least," she said, "they are two creatures that will not be routinely killed."

When Caroline Thompson talks about putting animals to sleep — although she uses no euphemisms; she calls killing "killing" — her characteristically low-key voice takes on an edge.

"It is easy for Americans to get incensed over the killing of, say, 185 baby seals a year. I consider it a horror myself. Last year I went up to Canada to spray as many as I could with vegetable dye so their pelts would be worthless.

"But nobody passes out lapel buttons for the millions of dogs and cats and rabbits and ducks killed every year.

"I said millions. This country finds it necessary to support public shelters — shelters is a misnomer too — whose main function is to kill 16 million animals a year that people don't want and never should have had in the first place."

Too late, Caroline. The cute little ducks and chicks and bunnies are already there, right next to the Easter baskets.

"Rabbits do make good pets. If you want one, and can take care of it, wait about two weeks. The shelters will be full of them."

by President Luis Herrera when he took office two years ago. Herrera, according to Machado, told him that creating the ministry was "the most difficult presidential decision as the government was being organized."

Criticism was indeed strong — "an average of seven press articles and cartoons a day for several months," Machado said. And there were jokes. A newspaper printed an article under the headline "The Right To Be Stupid," a clear reference to Machado's book "The Right To Be Intelligent."

One reporter commented that the world's most culturally advanced societies "never had an office like this one. Greece certainly didn't."

Such sniping has faded as the ministry's programs take shape, Machado said. "Now, there is respect everywhere. Even abroad. Universities in Israel, Spain and Uruguay have established intelligence-teaching courses after we visited there. And the Chinese government has organized a Group for the Development of Intelligence."

The ministry's most ambitious program may be the "Learn To Think Project," which eventually will be a required course for all Venezuelan students. It consists of teaching school children "to think creatively, dialectically, to analyze and resolve problems," Machado said. The program emphasizes showing children to consider "a variety of possible answers to questions and problems. It encourages discussion and exchange of opinion and ideas."

Robinson School Observes Easter

Second grade students at W.h. Robinson School participated in an Easter observer last week that included a song-dance tour of the world and a parade.

The class taught by Sue Worthington presented a program entitled "Countries from Around the World," offering songs and dances from several countries, including Hawaii, Mexico, Ireland, and China.

Susan Moore's class led everyone in an Easter parade. The song, "Easter Parade," was sung by student teacher Linda Gould and principal Blaine Moye. Mrs. Moore's students modeled Easter hats and ties which they had made.

Also included in the Easter scenes were additional songs, dances and a program entitled the "Easter Surprise" all performed by students in Mrs. Worthington's class.

hill under the Garden Tomb is the original Calvary where Christ was nailed to the cross. But most scholars accept as authentic the traditional site of Golgotha under the roof of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, identified in 325 A.D. by the Roman Empress Helena.

Eastern churches celebrate Palm Sunday as the Catholic church concludes its Holy Week, and Jews mark the first day of the eight-day Passover holiday remembering the Exodus from Egypt by the ancient Israelites and symbolizing Jewish freedom.

In the Galilee city of Nazareth, where Jesus grew up, nearly 20,000 Christian Arabs say they are muting their festivities this year in solidarity with the mourning Arabs of a neighboring village, Kfar Yassif.

Two village Arabs were killed last week in a feud with another village resulting from a squabble at a soccer match. Nazareth Arabs said Israeli police could have prevented the violence.

A dawn candlelight mass, the Blessing of the Fire, at the marble mausoleum covering Christ's tomb attracted about 500 pilgrims Saturday. The ceremony celebrates the light Jesus shed on the world.

An unusual pilgrimage by a lay ministry from Brea, Calif., drew a wide following on Good Friday. The group brought their semi-professional Passion play to the Via Dolorosa, and claimed to have seen a miracle.

Moments before the group walked up the Street of Sorrows re-enacting Christ's Passion, an Arab boy with a badly cut hand left a trail of blood drops on the narrow footpath. Discovering the wet blood, the pilgrims cried tearfully that it was Christ's blood sent from heaven, whether or not it had come from a human hand.

"It was a miracle," said Tim Ballard, 19, who portrayed Jesus dressed only in a sheet around his waist and who shuddered with tears under his cross when he saw the fresh blood.

"It was just like then," he said of his agonizing walk. "Kids and people going on their way and not realizing it was for their sins."

ference" in the country's affairs. He said the warnings were made "against taking measures to introduce proper order."

Most Western observers feel the possibility of Soviet intervention has diminished in the two weeks since Warsaw Pact maneuvers ended. But they say communications gear the Soviets installed during the exercises is still here.

One analyst called registration of the farmers union "another big concession and probably the most important development since registration of industrial Solidarity last November."

Solidarity, the first labor union free of party control in the Soviet bloc, claims 10 million of Poland's 18 million industrial workers. The farmers' union claims 800,000 of Poland's 3.5 million private farmers.

Kania opposed the farmers' union on grounds it created a political force in the countryside. That analysis was bolstered by a Western observer who characterized the farmers union as the first legally recognized "free enterprise organization," since most of Poland''s farmers are self-employed.

The Polish Communist Party's Central Committee meets this week and a final decision is expected on proposed election reforms allowing an unlimited number of candiates to vie for seats at the party congress expected by mid-July.

If the proposals are adopted, many party members predict that delegates elected from the grassroots instead of imposed from above will replace the leadership and put a new face on the party. This will cap the reform drive that began with the strike wave last summer.

Leslie said the board was aware of the proposed surgical center but has not taken a stand on the project. "I doubt very much that the board would take any position against it," Leslie said.

Leslie said he personally believes that, "as far as the community is concerned and as to cost containment, it (the center) will benefit the comunity."

PCMH has conducted ambulatory surgical procedures for several years, he said.

Hale said the proposed center had been under discussion for more than a year but plans for it became serious within the last four months. The surgeons have made tentative application to the Eastern North Carolina Health Systems Agency for a certificate of need, which is required to operate such a medical facility.

Hale said a formal presentation in support of the application will be made to the health systems agency within the next two months. He expressed confidence it would be approved.

If approval is granted, the surgeons hope to begin construction of the facility in August or September at one of several sites under consideration near PCMH. Actual operation of the center would begin about one year later.

Hale said initial planning for the center called for four operating rooms.

Typical patients would include those requiring some types of surgery for eye or ear conditions, tonsilectomies, hernias of the groin, removal of breast lumps, plastic surgery and biopsies.

Hale said the center would be available to any surgeon who has access to facilities at PCMH.

Hostages Say Freedom Brought Tears, Guilt

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — Barry Rosen finds day-to-day decisions hard to make. Richard Morefield feels guilty about being a hero. Donald Hohman can't shake the hate for his Iranian captors.

One wife said she angrily kicked boxes of letters from well-wishers. Philip Ward was hospitalized for six weeks with mental and physical problems.

The hostages' first 90 days of freedom have been laced with tears and anger. But there have been triumphs, too.

Many have been uplifted by America's unabashed patriotism: the strangers who approach them just to say "thanks," the parades, the letters, the phone calls and the yellow ribbons.

"The resurgence of the patriotic spirit is something I marvel at," said ex-hostage Bill Keough Jr., a school administrator from Alexandria, Va.

Their ordeal also has cast new light on the sacrifices of the U.S. soldiers who fought in Vietnam, some said.

"One of the side benefits of what we went through was to focus again on these veterans and realize it was a difficult thing for them," said Morefield, consul-general of the embassy in Tehran when it was stormed by Iranian militants.

Donald Cooke, of Memphis, Tenn., the embassy vice consul, is leading many of his former colleagues in raising money for a scholarship fund for the 17 children of the eight servicemen who died in the failed attempt to rescue the hostages last April.

A few said they had mellowed. Bruce German, the former embassy budget officer from Rockville, Md., said he used to have a "rather quick temper." But 444 days in captivity changed that.

"I don't lean on the horn as much in traffic these days. I take things easier," he said.

Thirty-one of the former hostages gathered at the plush Greenbrier resort last week, attending closed-door workshops with government psychiatrists and comparing notes on their three months of freedom.

"It was lovely to come back and just visit with each other, but it also was reassuring to know that everything's OK," said Morefield's wife, Dorothea.

The State Department's medical team officially concluded that the former hostages are "functioning well within their family and peer groups and they are returning to work." There are no plans for another checkup.

Louisa Kennedy, wife of ex-hostage Moorhead Kennedy Jr., said the reunion marked a time for America to "pull a veil over it (the hostage crisis) and let it rest in peace."

Many are returning to work or planning to soon. But the scars of 444 days of captivity aren't easily erased.

The planters for use indoors are a popular item in the planterware market, says Dick Husby of Garden Scene.

—Wadie Winslow

"I like the idea of retiring among friends. That's most important. But there are added attractions, like its location. It's close enough that you can walk to the post office, and stores, and other parts of town, like the parks.

"It's important that people not confuse The Albemarle with a nursing home. It's an entirely different approach. At The Albemarle, everybody has their own complete apartment and total independence. But they also have a health care facility available right there where they live.

"The Albemarle is simply a good way to build a better future."

BOATLIFT SCENE ... Refugee ships such as this one were common in Florida ports during the flight from Cuba to the United States by Cuban refugees. Before the boatlift was shut off, more than 125,000 Cubans had fled — or had been sent — to the United States. (AP Laserphoto)

A Year Later, Refugees Still Face Problems In New Country

MIAMI (AP) — Narcisco Pedro stands behind a pillar and watches in silence as the aging Cuban men play dominoes in Little Havana's Antonio Maceo park.

He doesn't participate in the games or in the boisterous conversations. But he has nothing better to do.

He has no job. He doesn't have a car. He speaks no English. His wife and children are in Cuba. He knows only a handful of people here.

He survives on the $111 cash he receives each month from the U.S. government and periodic checks mailed by two sisters who live in New York.

"I am glad to be out of Cuba, but there have been bad things here," he says. "I thought I could come here, work, and bring my family.

"But it is very hard for a Mariel refugee to get a job. It is hard to get anything. How can I be happy with no job and my family in Cuba?" he asks.

Pedro, 27, arrived a year ago this week in one of the first boats in a rag-tag fleet ferrying Cubans across the Florida Straits from the port of Mariel to Key West, Fla., 90 miles away.

The boats, piloted or chartered by Cuban-Americans eager to rescue some 10,000 refugees jammed into the Peruvian Embassy in Havana and to pick up relatives, were dubbed the "Freedom Flotilla."

Enthusiastic Cuban exiles pledged thousands of dollars to aid the refugees and lined up to greet them as they arrived with food, clothing and cheers.

Before ordering the human tide shut off, then-President Carter said the United States "will continue to provide an open heart and open arms to refugees seeking freedom from communist domination."

The boatlift ended in September, leaving 125,000 Cubans to struggle for a place in their new country, and U.S. officials to struggle with its painful legacies:

—Cuban President Fidel Castro used the boatlift to deal his giant neighbor a lasting humiliation, a one-sided war in which he used "people like bullets" as Carter aide Jack Watson put it.

The boatlift made a shambles of the Refugee Act of 1980, which sought to place a cap of 20,000 immigrants per year from any country, and allowed Castro to turn the embarrassing April 4, 1980, Peruvian Embassy occupation into "the greatest clean-up in Cuban history."

Cuban soldiers forced flotilla captains to load their boats not only with relatives and Embassy refugees, but also thousands of men bused in from prisons.

On May 14, Carter ordered a halt to the boatlift and imposed a Coast Guard blockade against Cuba-bound boats. Cuba refused to cooperate. Captains returning with refugee-laden boats said they weren't permitted to leave Mariel without taking human cargo.

By sending nearly 125,000 refugees, including some 20,000 veterans of Cuban jails before abruptly closing Mariel in September, Castro gave U.S. officials headaches that continue to pound.

"This is probably the most hostile thing Cuba has ever done to us," says a top State Department official who asked not to be identified.

—Some 90,000 Mariel refugees settled here, joining 600,000 Cubans who earlier flocked to southern Florida after Castro's 1959 revolution.

While the earlier refugees, many from the upper crust of pre-communist Cuba, prospered and built this tourism-dependent area into a thriving business center for Latin America, typical Mariel refugees brought sixth-grade educations and blue-collar skills not needed by the local economy.

Government officials estimate unemployment among the men, who comprise about 60 percent of the refugees, at between 75 and 85 percent.

They entered a city with a housing vacancy rate of less than 1 percent, and most were forced to move in with relatives. Miami's Office of Refugee Affairs found 1,400 Mariel refugees roaming the streets. Hundreds more live in utility sheds in backyards, or in automobiles.

—Although drug smugglers and racial tensions must share the blame, the Mariel refugees are often cited for the crime boom that has made Miami the U.S. violent-crime capital.

Bay Notes Quake Anniversary

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The 75th anniversary of the Great San Francisco earthquake is being marked today and can only make Bay area residents more aware another one — just as bad — could be right around the corner.

As the science of seismology becomes more sophisticated so do predictions of temblors.

And scientists have been saying computerized studies of temblors show there is a 50-50 chance one as big as the 1906 shaker could occur somewhere in California within a decade.

To commemorate the 75th anniversary a handful of survivors gathered at Lotta's Fountain in downtown San Francisco at 5:13 a.m. for a brief ceremony. It was at that moment the quake hit, bringing down buildings, causing great casualties and starting fires that leveled block after block of homes and businesses.

The quake measured 8.3 on the Richter scale and killed 600 people.

At a party for survivors this week Alvin Greenberg said for him the earthquake was "fun."

Greenberg was only 8 at the time. From a hilltop he and his playmates wagered on which tall building in the path of the fire would be dynamited next and thought the trading of items obtained in the food lines to be a game.

MINE ENTRANCE ... Clarence Daniels (left), an inspector for the U.S. Mine Sfety and Health Administration, walks near the entrance of the Duke Creek Mine with John Reeves, president of Mid-Continent Resources, owners of the mine. Safety Official Says Miners Killed By Force Of Explosion

REDSTONE, Colo. (AP) — Concussion, not asphyxiation or fire, apparently killed the 15 miners trapped deep in a mine rocked by an explosion last week, a federal official said Saturday.

John Barton, district coal mine manager for the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration, told a news conference he was with a rescue team that found the first group of six bodies late Thursday in Dutch Creek No. 1 mine.

The bodies did not appear "badly charred, disfigured or dismembered in any way," he said. "They didn't seem to have moved anywhere so I doubt they were asphyxiated. I think the concussion killed them instantly."

Results of autopsies being conducted by the Pitkin County coroner's office were expected sometime this week.

The cause of Wednesday's explosion was still unknown, Barton said, but the most likely source was a pocket of methane gas. He said the explosion did not seem as powerful as those involving coal dust.

Public memorial sevices for the 15 miners were planned Easter Sunday in the high school auditorium at Glenwood Springs 30 miles north of here.

Barton also said the safety record of the coal mine was no better or worse on the whole than other mines of its kind.

The MSHA has cited the Dutch Creek No. 1 mine "many times" but only for relatively minor violations involving operations, he said.

Barton said the MSHA has investigated miners' claims of tampering with methane monitoring equipment at the No. 1 mine, but has found no evidence to substantiate them.

"We have found malfunctioning methane equipment but there has been no evidence of sabotage-type incidents," he said.

Robert Delaney, vice president of the Mid-Continent Resources Inc., said his company had investigated such complaints at all five mines it operates near Redstone but concluded they were "hearsay."

The No. 1 mine was shut down early Friday after rescue workers recovered the last of the victims.

Delaney said workers entered the mine Saturday to finish rebuilding a ventilation system and repair pumps to remove water that seeped into the mine after the explosion, which tore through about 2,000 feet of the main tunnel.

An investigative team headed by mining engineer Robert Elam of the MSHA was sent to Redstone on Saturday and was expected to begin an on-site probe Monday.

It was the second fatal explosion at the mine in the last 15 years. Nine miners were killed in a methane explosion Dec. 31, 1965.

Hijack Foiled

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Security forces in Soviet-occupied Afghanistan foiled an attempt by Afghan rebels to hijack an airliner on a domestic flight and take it to Pakistan, Radio Kabul reported Saturday.

The official radio said the attempt on Wednesday was made by a girl who carried a concealed bomb and two male companions carrying pistols and bombs.

Security forces on the plane noticed the girl was very nervous and told police, who then arrested the three, it said.

The radio made no mention of the type of plane or the number of passengers aboard the aircraft on a scheduled flight from the western city of Kandahar to Kabul.

Radio Kabul said that during questioning the three confessed that they had planned to divert the plane to Quetta, capital of Baluchistan province, just across the border in Pakistan.

Inmate Wins Privilege To Hang Nudes' Photos

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that a state prison inmate may hang pictures of nude women in his cell as long as they are not photographs of his wife.

Chief U.S. District Court Judge Wendell Miles upheld a Marquette Branch Prison rule Friday, saying the reasons for the regulation outweighed inmate Marion Riddle's claim that his civil rights were violated by officials who tried to seize two such photographs.

"The court is not unsympathetic with the plaintiff's desire to keep the two photographs," Miles wrote. "On the other hand, the prison policy banning such photographs is understandable."

The prison bans nude photographs of those "near and dear" to a prisoner because there could be fights if the photos were stolen, said Paul Maynard, an administrative aide to the warden at the maximum security prison.

"Problems start if someone gets hold of it and remarks are tossed out," he said.

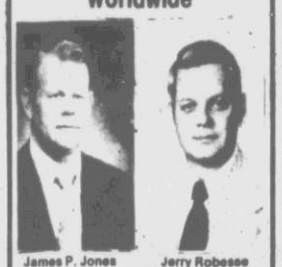

Photographs of nudes clipped from commericial magazines are allowed on cell walls, Maynard said, because those photos have fewer personal implications.

Riddle, sentenced in 1975 to two life terms for armed robbery, tried to smuggle the photos into his cell after visiting with his wife, according to the civil rights complaint filed in February.

The photos were found during a post-visit search, but Riddle ate them rather than give them up, Maynard said.

Miles also upheld a decision by prison officials to suspend the couple's visitation rights after the incident.

Job Service Could Lose Workers Under Cutbacks

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Employment Security Commission may have some of its own employees standing in line for jobs under proposed federal budget cuts.

Cutbacks already approved by the Senate would mean a loss of $5 million to the state ESC, said Commission Chairman J.B. Archer. And that could force closings of many state Job Service offices by 1982.

"If the cuts are sustained by Congress, it will mean a reduction of approximately 220 positions in the agency and the great possibility that we will have to close most of our branch offices and even some of our full-service offices," Archer said in a letter this week to all commission employees.

The North Carolina agency currently operates 90 Job Service offices and employs more than 2,600 people. It is funded entirely by the federal government, without state funding.

Archer said other budget cut proposals are in the works relating to the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act. He said those measures, if sustained, "could require ESC to eliminate approximately 200 CETA-funded positions by Sept. 30, 1981."

Archer said the cuts represent a 17.3 percent reduction in Employment Service Grants-to-States funding and a 3 percent reduction in funding for the unemployment insurance program.

Archer's staff is conducting a cost-effectiveness study on each of the 35 branch offices and the 55 local offices that the agency operates to determine which ones may be closed if the budget cuts are sustained.

"In some cases, it may cost us more to close a branch office than to leave it open," he said. "A number of factors will be taken into consideration before any final decisions are made about office closings."

Archer said the biggest impact of the proposed cuts to ESC will be in the field where employers, job seekers and the unemployed are serviced. He urged the ESC staff to cut corners on spending, save on energy, reduce long-distance telephone calls and avoid travel where possible.

He said he would be meeting with members of the North Carolina Congressional delegation during the next few weeks to spell out the severity of the impact of the proposed cuts on the state.

Archer said the budgetary cuts were inevitable because of the conservative mood of Congress.

Hunt May Seek Tax Bill Delay

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of a multi-million dollar tax break for industry appear headed for a vote Tuesday on the matter, but Gov. Jim Hunt's chief lobbyist says he would like to delay the vote.

Although the proposal has the strong support of House Speaker Liston Ramsey, it has caused concern for Hunt because of its timing. The bill comes less than two weeks before Hunt plans to propose a package of tax increases and revenue transfers aimed at bolstering the state's highway program.

The proposed $86-million tax break for industry won tentative approval of the House on a 90-11 vote after only one House member spoke against the measure.

Over a four-year period, the bill would phase in a 100 percent credit on state income taxes for local property taxes that manufacturers must pay on their inventories.

The bill also would require medium- and large-sized corporations to make quarterly prepayments of their estimated state tax bill, regardless of whether they would receive the credit.

"Whether we're for it or against it, I just wish it hadn't come up at this time," said Zeb Alley, Hunt's legislative lobbyist, in an interview. "It's got to be detrimental to the (governor's) tax package."

Alley said the governor's forces hoped to at least delay a Senate vote on the bill until after the highway issue is dealt with.

The bill would result in a one-time windfall to the state and actually produce a net $13 million increase in the upcoming budget year. But by fiscal 1984, the proposal would reduce tax revenues by $23 million, and the figure would rise to $86 million by fiscal 1986.

Supporters of the measure depicted it as a badly needed reform of the state's tax structure, saying the inventory tax was penalizing North Carolina industries and hurting efforts to locate new industry in the state.

"The state of North Carolina has an excellent business climate and the citizens expect the General Assembly to make it even better," said Rep. Tom Hunter, D-Richmond, head of a subcommittee that wrote the bill.

The only person to speak against the bill was Rep. Al Adams, D-Raleigh, a frequent consumer advocate and the House Base Budget Committee chairman.

Adams said it was "fiscally irresponsible" to link the corporate tax windfall, which is a one-time occurrance resulting from the payment speedup, to the recurring and growing expense of a tax cut.

"Nobody's saying, 'what is fair to the taxpayer. What is fair to the working people,'" Adams said. "Why should we exclude certain classes of property?"

In other legislative action:

Probation

The Senate gave tentative approval to a bill that would allow people charged with certain crimes to avoid prosecution and possible conviction by agreeing to serve a probationary term.

The measure would apply to anyone charged with a crime punishable by up to 10 years in prison. Swain said the category includes fraud, larceny, breaking and entering and forgery.

Before the defendant could be eligible for probation, the prosecutor would have to agree to such action and any victims of the crime would have to be notified and any of their objections heard.

The court also would have to determine the defendant had not been convicted of any felony or misdemeanor involving such things as rape, arson or murder, the defendant hadn't been placed on probation before and the defendant wasn't likely to commit another offense punishable by a prison term of more than 30 days.

The period of probation would be limited to no more than two years.

By serving probation, the defandant would be immune from prosecution or a criminal record. He could chose to be tried at any time while on probation.

Nurses

Allotments

The House approved a Senate-passed proposal that prohibits any county from taxing farm commodity allotments twice. The measure, enacted into law with House action, would allow counties to include the value of the tobacco or peanut allotment in the value of property for taxation, but prevent it from then assessing a separate tax on the acreage or poundage allotment itself.

Elections

The House enacted a Senate-passed bill raising the amount of money a person may legally contribute to a political campaign. The maximum contribution per election was raised from $3,000 to $4,000.

New Bills

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, filed a bill to prohibit automobile insurers from assigning points to or surcharging safe drivers.

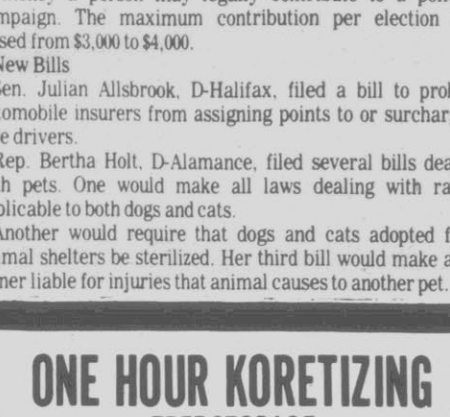

Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, filed several bills dealing with pets. One would make all laws dealing with rabies applicable to both dogs and cats.

Another would require that dogs and cats adopted from animal shelters be sterilized. Her third bill would make a pet owner liable for injuries that animal causes to another pet.

MYSTERY PILOT ... Jerry Stevenson of Cocoa, Fla., displays copy of flight pattern he used while flying his Cessna 150 on the morning the space shuttle lifted off. According to reports, he supposedly flew within one mile of the shuttle at 90 seconds until liftoff. (AP Laserphoto)

Pilot Says Got Bad Flight Data

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — The pilot who is under investigation by the Federal Aviation Administration for allegedly threatening the launch of the space shuttle says he was too close to the Columbia because he was given bad information by a flight center, the TODAY newspaper reported.

Jerry Ralph Stevenson, 22, of Cocoa, told the newspaper in a copyright story that controllers at Melbourne Flight Service failed to tell him that NASA extends the restricted airspace during launches.

FAA spokesman Roger Myers in Atlanta said the restricted area is clearly marked on pilot maps.

"There's no way in the world I would have gone where I did if I had known," said Stevenson, publicly identified for the first time on Friday. "During the first (canceled) launch, we were up there the whole time in the same area. Nobody was bothered then."

But Mark Hess, a Kennedy Space Center spokesman, said pilots flying into KSC at any time are supposed to communicate with air controllers at Patrick Air Force Base in Cape Canaveral. "I'm sure he just ignored all the controls and flew right in," Hess said.

Meanwhile, the FAA was awaiting confirmation from the U.S. Postal Service that the pilot received a proposed 180-day license suspension notice. If the pilot does not appeal the decision to the National Transportation Safety Board or the courts, the suspension stands, Myers said.

Stevenson, who said he obtained his pilot's license less than two weeks ago, told the newspaper that he and his brother Joel, a professional photographer, were in the plane at the time for aeriel shots of the blastoff.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Hugh Harris said the pilot's attempt to get close threatened a mid-air collision between the plane and the shuttle and could have cost the nation $10 billion and the astronauts their lives. NASA officials said the plane was chased out of the restricted area just 90 seconds before the Columbia blasted into space.

Mayor Completes Leadership Study

Mayor Don McGlohon has received a certificate for successful completion of the Mayors Leadership Institute, held recently in Philadelphia.

The institutes are a service of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the national organization of the country's larger cities with populations of 30,000 or more.

The agenda offers experts from business, government, universities, and from the ranks of mayors themselves. Economic development, budgetary and fiscal management, housing, community development, new federal legislation and programs, and coping with stress are among the topics covered.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—One of the first things I learned when I took up bridge was: "Cover an honor with an honor." I did so in a game the other night, but my partner still calls me up to bawl me out about the play. Has the game changed so radically since the time I started playing (about 20 years ago), that it is now wrong to cover an honor, or is my partner at fault for criticizing my play?—J. Katz, Brooklyn, N.Y.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—Actually, there are three questions here, and we will attempt to answer all. First, your partner was definitely wrong for his critical attitude. It is never right to bawl out your partner, either at the table or away from it. If you calmly point out partner's error away from the table and explain why it is wrong, you will create a far more productive partnership than you will by acrid fault-finding.

Second, yes, bridge has changed since the time you learned it. By and large, more people are playing better bridge than was the case 20 years ago.

Now we come to the problem that prompted your question. The trouble with many bridge cliches, of which "cover an honor with an honor" is one, is that they are far too generalized. They do apply to some situations, but not to all—and this was as applicable 20 years ago as it is today.

Let's assume that the honor is being led from dummy. If the honor is part of a sequence, then it is generally wrong to cover until the last card of the sequence is led. However, if the honor led is not supported by the next lower honor, then it is usually right to cover. Here are a couple of illustrations to show why that is so:

a) Dummy: Q J 9 8
Partner: 10 x x — You: K x x x
Declarer: A x x

b) Dummy: J x
Partner: 9 x x x — You: Q x x
Declarer: A K 10 8

In diagram a), if you cover the first honor led, declarer can make three tricks in the suit by next finessing your partner for the ten. To prevent this, duck the queen, but cover the jack if it is led next—that holds declarer to two tricks.

In sequence b), where the honor in dummy is not supported by a touching honor, it is correct to cover the jack. That holds declarer to three tricks in the suit. If you do not cover, declarer will repeat the finesse and make four tricks in the suit.

What if the position is reversed, and the honor gets led from the closed hand where you cannot see whether declarer has a touching honor or not? If you cannot tell from dummy's holding, it is usually correct to duck smoothly.

These rules apply when your honor is twice guarded. If you have a doubleton honor, it is usually correct to cover right away, lest declarer lead a low card at his second turn and your honor falls "on air."

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Charles Goren and Omar Sharif personally cannot undertake to answer all questions submitted.

Nazi Swept-Wing Jet Is Recalled

By THOMAS FERRARO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It was the summer of 1944 and the German war effort was crumbling when out of the ruins burst a Nazi combat plane that stunned the Allies.

It was the Messerschmitt Me 262 — the world's first operational jet fighter — and it could zoom circles around opposing aircraft which, up to this point, had dominated the skies.

The rise and role of this swept-wing plane is recounted in a new book, "Messerschmitt Me 262: Arrow to the Future," by Walter J. Boyne, assistant director for resource management at the National Air and Space Museum.

Published by Smithsonian Institution Press, it tells the aircraft's story — one that ushered in a new era in aerial warfare, but, because of the eroding Nazi position, was merely a last gasp before the fall of the Reich.

"It was the final challenge from Germany's proud professional engineers," writes Boyne. "It was a thorn in the Allies' side that said, 'We may be down but we're not out.'"

In a chilling historical footnote, Boyne cites the long-held belief by some experts that the outcome of World War II may have been reversed had the plane been brought on line a few years sooner.

But as it turned out, Allied forces managed to overcome the Me 262 by bombing factories where it was produced and by often striking the plane when it was most vulnerable — lined up on air strips.

The Me 262 was propelled by twin jet engines, Junker Jumo 004s. It had a wing span of 40 feet 11 inches, was 39 feet 11 inches long and a maximum gross weight of 9,742 pounds.

It carried four 30mm cannons and, at the insistance of Adolf Hitler, was equipped with bomb racks.

And it was fast. Very fast, with a maximum speed of 540 mph, about 100 mph swifter than any Allied plane when it came on line.

A few weeks after the Me 262 took off, the British unveiled their first jet fighter, the Gloster Meteor — a fine plane, but not as swift or as powerful as the Me 262.

The first Allied encounter with the Me 262 occurred July 25, 1944, over Germany. A British Mosquito, flown by Flight Lt. A.E. Wall, was circling at 30,000 feet taking photographs over Munich when an enemy aircraft was observed about 400 yards astern.

Wall applied full power, reaching a speed of 412 mph — more than enough to get away from any known German plane. But not the Me 262, which was fast catching up.

Wall managed to escape only by diving into a thick cloud cover. His report to Allied intelligence mentioned what came to be known as the German "wonder" aircraft.

Although 1,443 Me 262s were manufactured in the final months of the war, only an estimated 300 saw combat. The rest were destroyed in the shrinking Reich, which had become an Allied shooting gallery.

"The Me 262 proved the principle of the swept wing and it prompted a revision of the thinking of Boeing in its B-47 bomber and North American's F-86 (Sabrejet) fighter," said Boynes, who spent nine months researching the project and contacting a number of former Allied and German pilots and developers.

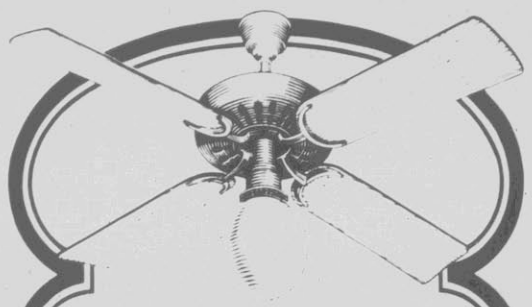

Development of the Me 262's turbojet engines began in 1937, with the first Me 262 prototype built in 1941. It was named after Willie Messerschmitt, who oversaw the project at his Messerschmitt's aeronautic industry.

From the outset, the Me 262 was pushed by enthusiastic engineers and hampered by shifting German orders and a dearth of supplies.

Force Seeks New Anti-Crime Plan

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — From psychological profiles of violent criminals to better protection for crime victims who appear as witnesses, a Justice Department task force will study ways in which the federal government might do more with its existing resources to combat violent crime.

Attorney General William French Smith's task force on violent crime, which ended a second day of hearings here Friday, will study 31 proposals for fighting crime.

The proposals cover the full-range of the criminal justice system, from detection of crime through parole. Jeffrey Harris, the panel's executive director, said the ideas were offered by federal officials who appeared before the panel, task force members and private citizens.

The proposed psychological profiles of violent criminals would be similar to those already developed for airplane hijackers. The purpose, Harris said, would be to see if courts would allow law enforcement personnel to stop and frisk people who matched the profile on that basis instead of the more stringent standards currently in effect for criminal searches.

He said the task force also would study whether crime victims would be more willing to testify as prosecution witnesses if they were given increased protection.

These and the 29 other ideas were put on the task force's agenda for future discussion.

With rare exception, the first two days of testimony before the group provided little concrete evidence that the particular proposals would be effective in reducing violent crime.

Robert F. Diegelman, who supervises the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, did report, however, that during the agency's 12-year history one of its experimental programs had reduced the rate of return to crime by offenders who abused drugs or alcohol. Another LEAA program had a 92.8 percent conviction rate for "career criminals," said Diegelman, acting director of the Office of Justice Assistance, Research and Statistics.

The task force, co-chaired by former Attorney General Griffin Bell and Illinois Gov. James Thompson, will report to Smith by mid-June on additional efforts the federal government might pursue with its existing resources. The panel will hold hearings in Atlanta, Los Angeles, Chicago and Detroit before it finishes that phase of its assignment.

In the second phase, the group will hold additional hearings in Miami, New York and Washington before recommending to Smith in mid-August whether any additional resources, money or legislation are needed.

At the close of Friday's hearing, Harris outlined the crime-fighting proposals that will be studied by the panel.

On detection, the ideas included wider sharing of criminal intelligence information, increased federal interagency cooperation in narcotics enforcement, higher priority for chasing interstate fugitives and use of military surveillance planes to track incoming drug-smuggling ships and planes.

In the prosecution of crime, the ideas included greater cooperation between federal, state and local prosecutors, stepped up federal prosecutions of firearms and narcotics violations and requiring U.S. attorneys to consult with crime victims before accepting plea bargains from defendants.

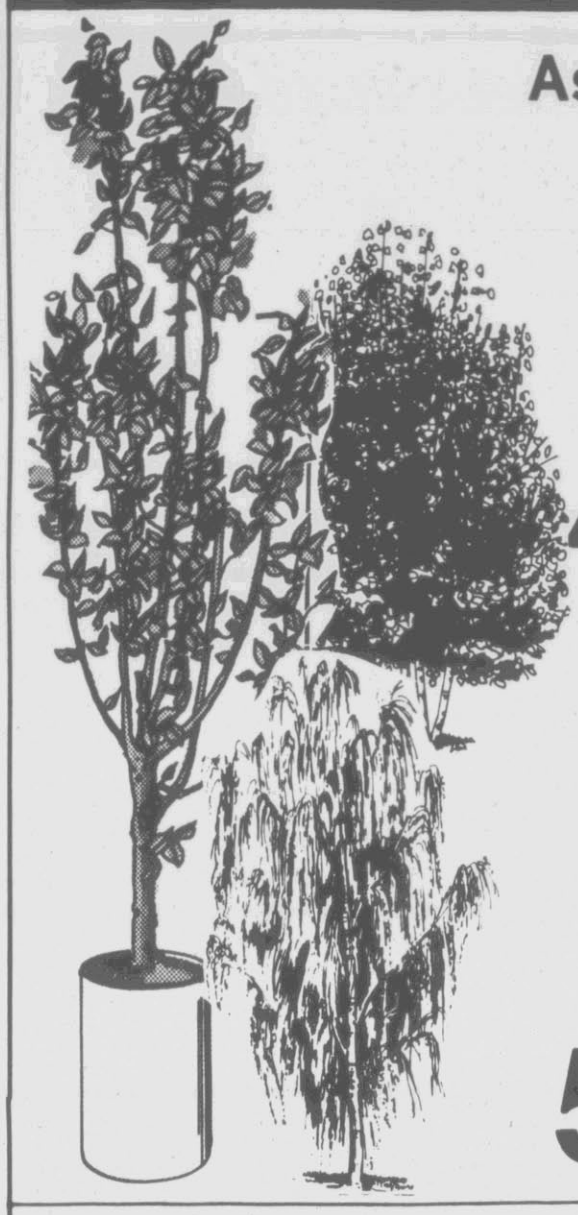

With regard to the penal system, the ideas to be studied include ways to reduce state prison population to provide more cells for violent offenders, proposals to make parole officials legally accountable for the release of dangerous offenders who return to crime and better technical support from the federal government to state and local corrections officials.

Already some ideas have emerged for the second phase, and Harris specifically listed among those the possibility of legislation to allow federal judges to consider the safety of the community in setting bail and to revise the so-called exclusionary rule under which illegally seized evidence is inadmissible in federal trials.

Pirates Down Baptist For Fifth Straight Victory

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

With the regular season quickly nearing its end, East Carolina coach Hal Baird is hoping for a string of victories from his Pirates. Since returning home last Thursday night, the Pirates have obliged, winning five straight.

ECU's latest addition to that string came Saturday afternoon. Spotting Baptist a 4-0 lead, East Carolina used an eight-run first, 8⅔ innings of relief pitching by Kirk Parsons and errorless play to defeat Baptist, 9-7, at Harrington Field.

The win gives ECU a sweep of its three-game series with the Bucs and pushed the Pirates' record to 23-9. Baptist falls to 18-11.

"Little Kirk Parson is 145 pound of guts," Baird said. "From the sixth inning on that was what he was going on — guts. But he stuck it out and did great."

No little task, considering that Parson relieved Rick Ramey in the first inning with only one out, a man on first and ECU down 3-0 following John Ownings' three-run homer.

The Bucs added one more run (charged to Ramey) to their total in the first. Parsons, now 5-2, scattered nine hits in his 8⅔ innings, struck out three and walked two and did not allow another score until the fifth, by which time the Pirates led, 9-4, thanks to an eight-run first.

"They scored four runs right off the bat like that but he came in and did the job for us," Baird said. "We've been playing inconsistent this year but I feel like maybe we're coming around."

Especially defensively. The Pirates played flawlessly in the field, led by shortstop Kelly Robinette, who at least twice robbed players of seeming sure base hits.

In the sixth, James Mimes sent a grounder up the middle that Parsons slowed but was unable to field. Robinette raced behind the mound, bare-handed the ball and, off-balance, threw Mimes out.

Three innings later, Robinette, a 5-foot-8 sophomore from Prince George, Va., was at it again. Owings appeared to have his fourth hit of the day when he sent a ground up the middle to lead off the ninth. But Robinette speared the ball behind second and threw Owings out.

"Kelly Robinette had a fantastic game today," Baird said. "He made three plays that are absolutely major league plays. The last time (in the ninth) that one was a game-time play. We had to have it."

The Pirates appeared to need that and more early in the game to perserve their modest win streak after the Bucs wasted little time in sending starter Rick Ramey back to the dugout.

"He just didn't have his good stuff," Baird said. "He made some mistakes early and he was hurt by the."

None hurt more than when Owings connected on a Ramey fast ball and sent it over the left field fence to score Rudy Long and Britt Limehouse, both of whom had singled earlier.

When Larry Ellisor walked, Baird did also — to the mound to remove Ramey for Parsons. Glen Pinter singled on a 3-2 pitch off Parsons to move Ellisor to third. After Pinter stole second, Pinter scored on Pete Fisher's ground out to second and the Bucs led, 4-0.

Not for long, however. The Pirates sent 14 men to the plate in the bottom of the first. When the inning was over, Baptist starter Joel Petty was long gone and the Pirates were also, leading 8-4.

With one gone in the first, Mike Sorrell walked, moved to second on Todd Evans' single and scored on Mike Sage's single through the right side of the infield.

John Hallow followed with a single over the second baseman to score Evans and Todd Hendley added another single — the fourth of seven singles in the inning — to score Sage.

After Charlie Smith struck out, Jay Carraway singled to score Hallow with the tying run. Robert Wells then walked to chase Petty before Robinette worked relief pitcher Derrick Hill for a walk to load the bases again.

Hendley then scored on a passed ball and Sorrell followed with a single to score Mark Shank, who was running for Carroway, and Wells. Evans' single brought home Robinette with the Pirates' final run of the inning and ECU led, 8-1.

The Pirates added another run to their lead in the second. Hallow sent a high, shallow fly to right field that fell in when shortstop Rudy Long fell down. Hallow went to third on a ground out and scored on an error. It was all the runs the Pirates would get, or need.

Baptist loaded the bases in the third with two gone, on a single and two walks, but Parson got Mims to ground into a force out to end the threat.

The Bucs finally broke through again in the fifth, when Owings doubled and later scored on a sacrifice fly by Pinter to make it 9-5.

Baptist closed to within two three innings later but that was as close as the Bucs could get.

Fisher and Mims opened the eight with singles. Fisher, who went to third on a fly out to right, scored on a wild pitch. Tommy Timmerman then singled to score Mims but Parson induced Long to ground out and Limehouse to pop out to end the inning.

Parsons set the Bucs down in order in the ninth to end the game and extend the Pirates' win streak to five.

"We've won five in a row now — our longest streak of the year. We've got some tough one's coming up, but I hope we can continue this streak," he added. "It'll be good for us to end the season at home with a winning streak like this."

ECU returns to action Monday at 1 p.m. when the Pirates play host to Campbell for a double header.

A's Defeat Mariners, Tie Record

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The players and the fans may be ecstatic about the Oakland A's record-tying 10-game winning streak, but Manager Billy Martin isn't jumping for joy — yet.

"It's nothing to do handstands about," Martin said after his A's shut out the Seattle Mariners 8-0 Saturday at the Oakland Coliseum for their 10th consecutive victory.

"Sure, every manager dreams of opening the season this way. But if we keep playing like this for the next three months, then I'll really give you something to write about," Martin said.

The A's victories tied a major league record held by three teams: the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers, the 1962 Pittsburgh Pirates and the 1966 Cleveland Indians.

The A's have a chance to set a new record Sunday as they finish the series with a doubleheader against the Mariners.

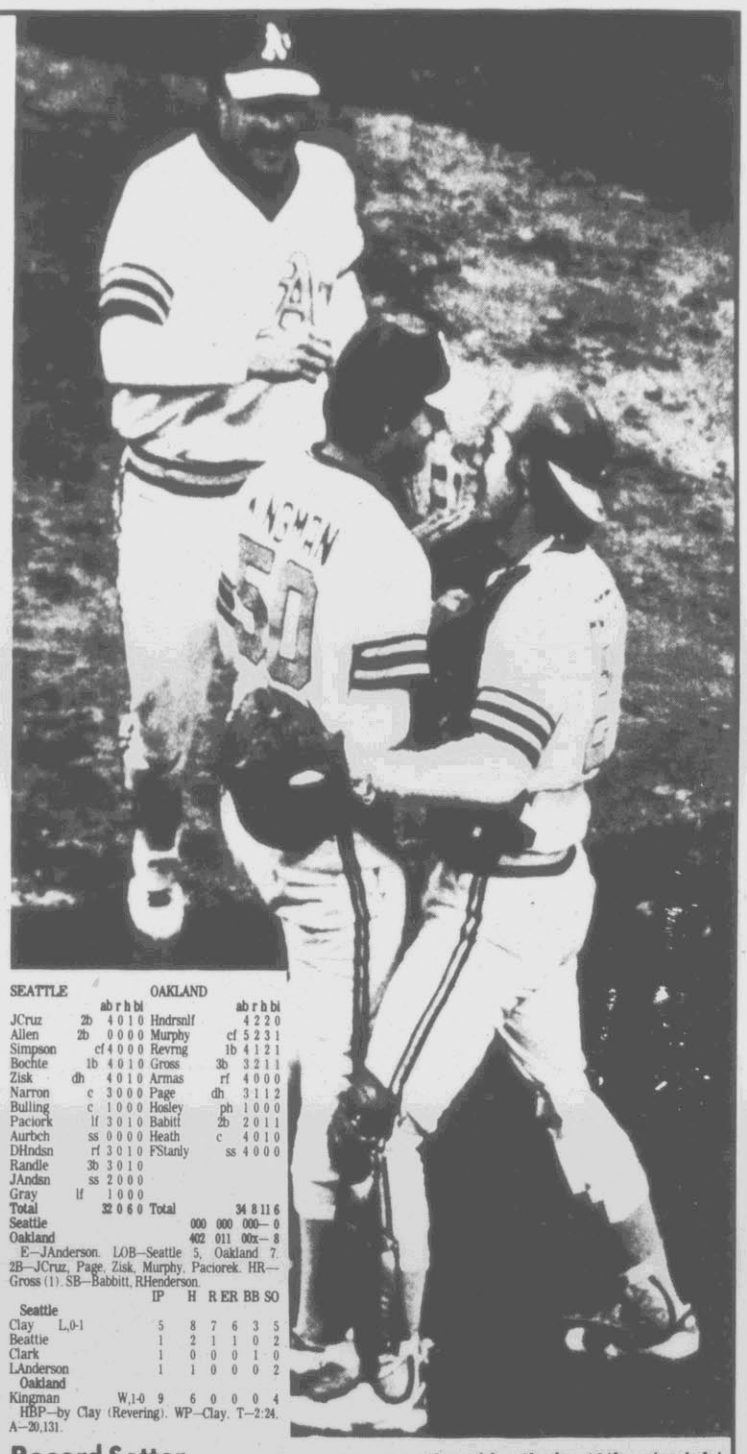

Seattle Manager Maury Wills was impressed by the A's performance, although he has not been satisfied with the play of his own club, which is now 2-6.

"They (the A's) seem to be doing everything right now," Wills said after Brian Kingman pitched a six-hitter and the ninth complete game of the season for Oakland.

"And what they're doing is good for Oakland, good for our league and good for baseball," he added. "We won't continue to play this badly for the rest of the year. We've just walked into something here."

The A's gave Kingman all the support he needed in the first inning, scoring four times. Mitchell Page's two-run double and rookie Shooty Babbitt's RBI single were the key hits of the inning.

The A's scored twice more in the second inning. Rickey Henderson singled with one out, stole second and scored on Dwayne Murphy's single. Murphy later scored on a throwing error by shortstop Jim Anderson.

Pirates Pointing Toward Purple And Gold Game

Special To The Reflector

East Carolina football coach Ed Emory likes the effort he's seen so far during spring drills.

Says Emory: "I think the biggest factor in our spring practice has been the positive mental attitude and dedication of our young men."

Emory believes that effort, attitude and dedication will show itself this coming Saturday in the annual Purple and Golf Game in Ficklen Stadium. The game is set for 7 p.m. with an hour photo session open to the public beginning at 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Defensive speed and improvement along the offense line are areas that bring a smile to Emory's face. The defensive unit will be one of the quickest, if not the quickest, in Pirate history. The much maligned offensive line has improved greatly, thanks in part to personnel shifts and maturity.

"This is the fastest football team I've ever been associated with," Emory said. "Our first team must average around 4.75 in the 40-yard dash and you're not going to find anyone that quick around here."

Standouts in drills have been cornerbacks Gerald Sykes and Freddie Jones. Jones has recovered well form knee surgery whic kept him out of all but the first two games in 1980. Jones made the shift from free safety to cornerback to make room for rising sophomore Clint Harris, the team's leading returning tackler with 76 as a freshman.

Converted offensive guard Fee Griffin has made a strong bid for noseguard and shifts have give the Pirates plenty of size at tackle and end.

The biggest hole to fill will be at linebacker. Jeffrey Warren, who had 186 tackles in 1980, and Chuck Jackson are gone. Emory has the twin brothers Ronald and Donald Reid, both sophomores, and veteran Glen Morris ready.

Junior college transfers from Chowan, Mike Grant and Amos Twitty, are also battling for the starting slots.

The offensive line caught the blame for ECU's decreased offensive output in 1980. With three pro prospects in the backfield, ECU averaged just 215.2 yards a game rushing. Emory knew something had to be done.

Wholesale position shifts were made and new offensive line coach Terry Lewis has been given some size and speed to work with up front.

Returning starters Tootie Robbins (6-5, 270), Oscar Tyson (6-1, 220) and Tony Hensley (6-0, 223) have been joined by a host of big men. Redshirt Tim Carnes (6-5, 256), converted noseguard Terry Long (6-0, 260) and sometime starter Nud LaCock (6-2, 243) are pushing for playing time.

"We were hurt badly by graduation and, later, by injures on the offensive line last season," Emory said. "We haven't had as many serious injuries this spring and the competition for starting spots on the offensive line has been just tremdendous."

Gone are running backs Anthony Collins, Theodore Sutton and Mike Hawkins, all three of whom could be drafted by the pros. ECU also lost Mike Hawkins, the Pirates' leading returning rusher. Hawkins was ruled ineligible.

However, the Pirates return sophomore Earnest Byner and veteran runners Roy Wiley, Harold Blue and Marvin Cobb.

"Our biggest sore spots are at quarterback and the kicking game," Emory said. "With Carlton Nelson out for spring rehabilitating his shoulder, no one has come forward to take charge.

"Right now, we've cut back to three quarterbacks (sophomores Greg Stewart, Larry Brobst and Jeff Neale). No one has come forward as a punter, either. That is really a serious concern for us now."

Graduation took four-year punter Rodney Allen and backup Bill Lamm.

"I expect our defense to control the Purple and Gold Game," Emory said. "You expect your defense to be stronger at this stage and, with the number of backs we have with little hurts, that's probably the way things go."

Fittingly, offensive coordinator Wright Anderson will have a strong offensive team and defensive coordinator Norm Parker will have a strong defensive team in the intersquad game.

Seniros drafted the team, coaching staffs and supporting personnell Thursday night. The draft split strengths well.

Anderson's Purple offense sports top-listed QB Greg Stewart, who closed out the 1980 season as the regular Pirate signalcaller. Joining him in the backfield will be fullback Roy Wiley and running backs Harold Blue and Earnest Byner.

Parker's Gold defense is loaded. Regular 1980 starters George Crump and Hal Stephens are at tackles, Mike Davis at an end and Marvin Elliot, Freddie Jones and Chuck Bishop are in the secondary.

The game will be played under standard college rules.

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Lee Trevino had the lead, but he insisted "Ray Floyd has the momentum" going into Sunday's final round of the $300,000 MONY-Tournament of Champions.

"I'm not going to fold up or give the tournament away or anything like that," Trevino said Saturday after his three-putt bogey on the final hole had let Floyd close to within a single shot of the lead.

"And I've got a one-stroke lead, but he's got the momentum going a little bit," said Trevino.

"Ray had a little trouble off the tee today, but he's hitting everthing else very well and putting very well. If he gets that driver straightened out tomorrow, he'll be one tough customer.

"And I can't see any chance of me hitting the ball any better than I have the last three days."

Trevino, however, has had some trouble with his short putts throughout the tournament. He missed four times from six feet or less in the third round and failed on another from about eight feet.

"I'm just got to figure out some way to get the ball in the hole," he said.

Trevino, who opened the day with a two-shot lead over Floyd, maintained that margin most of the day but dropped back with the bogey on the 18th.

Trevino, gunning for his first victory ever in California, shot a 70 in the cool, windy weather, and finished 54 holes with a 204 total, 12 strokes under par on the 6,911-yard La Costa Country Club course.

Floyd, winner of consecutive tournaments earlier this season, had a 69 despite some erratic play off the tee and finished three rounds at 205.

"As good as I drove it yesterday, I was just that bad today," said the veteran Floyd. "I hit only five fairways.

"And when you hit five fairways and get out with a 69, well, I feel like I just came off the battlefield without a flak jacket.

"I got away with murder."

Bruce Lietzke, the cross-handed putter who has finished second in his two previous appearances in the exclusive tournament that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour titles from the last 12 months, was four shots off the pace at 208 after 69. His college roommate, Bill Rogers, was another stroke behind at 209. Rogers also had a 69 on the course that was dampened by a morning rain.

Curtis Strange and Larry Nelson, tied at 210, were the only other players in the 29-man field within nine shots of Trevino. Strange had a third-round 71 and Nelson matched par 72.

Tom Watson, the Masters champion and winner of this title the last two years, shot a no-bogey 68 that left him at 214. Jack Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this event, holed a 25-foot putt on the 18th hole for his only birdie of the day. It finished off a 74 that left him out of title contention at 215.

Floyd, playing with Trevino in the last twosome, pulled even with the front-runner when he dropped a pair of 8-10 foot birdie putts on the second and third holes.

But Trevino pulled ahead again when he missed by two inches of holing out a pitch on the sixth hole and tapped in for birdie, and went back to a two-stroke margin after a bad drive by Floyd led to a bogey on the ninth.

There was a two-shot swing on the 10th. Trevino birdied from 15 feet and Floyd bogeyed, again after driving into the rough. That put Lee, a four-time runner-up in this tournament, ahead by four.

Floyd, playing the best golf of his life in his 19th tour season, came right back. He needed only a two-foot putt for birdie on the 11th and two-putted for birdie-4 on the 12th, again pulling to within two shots.

And the margin dwindled to one stroke when Trevino three-putted from 35 feet on the last hole, missing a 4-foot second putt.

Seaver Fifth Pitcher To Strike Out 3,000

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds right-hander Tom Seaver became the fifth pitcher in baseball history to each 3,000 career strikeouts Saturday.

The 36-year-old Seaver fanned St. Louis first baseman Keith Hernandez on a 1-2 pitch in the fourth inning to join Walter Johnson, Gaylord Perry, Bob Gibson and Nolan Ryan in the elite group.

Seaver, who stamped himself as one of the game's greatest pitchers in 10 seasons with the New York Mets, holds numerous major league strikeout records.

In anticipation of his 3,000th, Seaver said he was proud of the accomplishment because it displayed consistency.

"I think what I'm proudest of is consistency over a 15-year period and my earned run average," Seaver said. "You don't have to be a strikeout pitcher to be a winning pitcher."

Seaver won the National League Cy Young Award, the highest honor accorded a major league pitcher, in 1969, 1973 and 1975. His 2.60 career ERA at the start of the 1980 season ranked third behind Johnson and Grover Cleveland Alexander among pitchers who worked 3,000 or more innings.

Seaver achieved his 3,000th strikeout in Riverfront Stadium, the same park where Houston's Ryan fanned Cincinnati's Cesar Geronimo last year for his 3,000th strikeout.

Seaver recorded his first strikeout against Pittsburgh's Donn Clendenon in 1967. He reached the 1,000 mark in 1971 against Philadelphia's Willie Montanez and reached 2,000 by striking out current teammate Dan Driessen in 1975.

Seaver has fanned more than 200 batters in a season 10 times, a major league record. His nine consecutive 200-strikeout seasons between 1968-76 is another record.

Seaver's record-tying 19 strikeouts against San Diego April 22, 1970, is his most impressive single-game performance. Seaver, then with the Mets, retired the last 10 Padres' batters on strikes, a major league record.

Philadelphia's Steve Carlton and Ryan also have struck out 19 batters in a modern nine-inning game. Carlton, who was scheduled to pitch against Chicago Saturday night, has 2,990 career strikeouts.

Card Bats Melt Seaver's Glitter

CINCINNATI (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals' torrid bats melted the glitter off an historic moment in Tom Seaver's career Saturday.

The 36-year-old right-hander became the fifth pitcher to reach 3,000 career strikeouts, but he was the losing pitcher in the Cardinals' 10-4 pounding of the Cincinnati Reds.

"It's more memorable for the fans than for me," said Seaver, 1-1, who struck out Keith Hernandez in the fourth inning for No.3,000. "A number's a number. To me, it's arbitrary in that sense.

"It would be nice to get 3,000 and win. To me, it's much more memorable than 3,000 and a loss. When you couple it with a loss it doesn't have the same significance."

St. Louis starter Bob Shirley, Seaver's 2,999th victim, said the Cardinals were well aware of the significance of being the 3,000th victim.

"Everybody knew he was going for 3,000. In the first couple of innings I think that was the problem," Shirley said. "Nobody wants to be the one to go down in the record books. I was No.2,999. When it happened, I think it took a little edge off. We were able to go out there and start hitting."

Tony Scott drove in three runs with a pair of singles and a double to pace the Cardinals' attack. Shirley, 1-0, Jim Kaat and Joe Edelen held the Reds to eight hits.

Hernandez said he didn't realize he was Seaver's 3,000th victim until after he struck out on a high slider.

"He's struck me out before, and he'll strike me out again," Hernandez said. "He's one of the greatest pitchers of all time. My hat's off to him."

The Cardinals nicked Seaver for a run in the third inning on Scott's single and Hernandez' double,

The first of a pair of errors by Cincinnati shortstop Dave Concepcion opened the door for three unearned runs off Seaver in the fourth. Tom Herr's double, Garry Templeton's sacrifice fly and Scott's RBI single produced the runs.

Scott's two-run single capped the Cardinals' five-run seventh against Bruce Berenyi.

Shirley, who left the game in the sixth because of a cramp in his pitching hand, allowed just one hit until Ron Oester and Dave Collins slammed run-scoring doubles in the fifth. Collins also doubled home a run in the seventh.

Seaver, a 36-year-old right-hander, joins Walter Johnson, Gaylord Perry, Bob Gibson and Nolan Ryan in the elite group. Seaver has fanned more than 200 batters in a season 10 times, a major league record. His nine consecutive 200-strikeout seasons from 1968-76 is another record.

Pittsburgh 6
Houston 3

HOUSTON (AP) — Lee Lacy's tie-breaking double in the 11th inning sparked the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-3 triumph over the Houston Astros Saturday.

Tim Foli scored the lead run on Lacy's double after drawing a leadoff walk from reliever Dave Smith, 0-1. Smith then hit Dale Berra with a pitch and Jason Thompson's single for his third RBI of the game made it 5-3. Berra came home on Tony Pena's grounder.

Grant Jackson pitched the final two innings to get the victory after Houston tied the score in the bottom of the ninth on consecutive one-out home runs by Jose Cruz and Art Howe off reliever Enrique Romo. It was Howe's second homer.

The Pirates had taken a 3-1 lead with two runs in the top of the ninth. Thompson, who homered in the fifth inning, brought Foli home with a grounder. Foli opened the ninth with a single off Houston relief ace Joe Sambito. One out later, Lacy singled and Bill Madlock reached first on an error by third baseman Howe to load the bases.

As Houston tried to turn a double play on Thompson's grounder to shortstop Craig Reynolds, Madlock upended second baseman Dickie Thon, forcing a bad relay throw that enabled Lacy to score.

Thompson and Howe traded solo home runs in the fifth. Houston starter Vern Ruhle, lifted in the eighth for a pinch hitter, retired 13 of the first 14 batters he faced before Thompson's home run. Howe connected off Pittsburgh starter John Candelaria.

New York 3

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Carter and Andre Dawson slammed Montreal's first two home runs of the season Saturday, carrying the Expos to a 5-3 victory over the New York Mets.

Carter's two-run shot climaxed a three-run first inning for Montreal against loser Randy Jones, 0-1. All of the runs were unearned after an error by center fielder Lee Mazzilli.

Rookie Tim Raines opened the game with a walk and was sacrificed to second. Then Mazzilli dropped Dawson's fly ball for an error, moving Raines to third. Ellis Valentine's sacrifice fly scored Raines and Carter followed with his homer off the left field foul pole.

The Mets got a run off Bill Gullickson in the third on Mookie Wilson's infield hit and a double by Mazzilli. But Dawson hit his home run in the sixth and doubles by Warren Cromartie and Gullickson made it 5-1 and finished Jones in the seventh.

The Mets loaded the bases with none out against Gullickson, 1-0, in the bottom of the seventh but the right-hander escaped by striking out pinch hitter Mike Cubbage and Wilson and retiring Frank Taveras on a grounder.

The Mets got their second run in the eighth on Mazzilli's double and a single by Hubie Brooks. Gullickson scattered seven hits and fanned 10 before giving way to Stan Bahnsen in the ninth. Bahnsen was tagged for a pinch home run by Mike Jorgensen.

New York lost a run and a promising rally in the second inning because of an interference call by plate umpire Joe West. With Dave Kingman on third and Rusty Staub on first and none out, Brooks hit a soft infield bloop. First baseman Cromartie was unable to play the ball and Kingman crossed the plate but West sent him back to third, ruling Staub out for interference on the baseline.

Philadelphia 4
Chicago 3

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Manny Trillo's two-out home run in the bottom of the 10th inning gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs Saturday night.

It was the fifth straight victory for the Phillies, while the Cubs lost their fifth in a row.

Trillo connected off loser Lee Smith, 0-1, who had entered the game in the ninth inning. Steve Carlton recorded his second victory of the season without a loss, allowing eight hits and striking out nine to move within eight of the 3,000 career strikeout total.

The Phillies, who left 14 men on base, took a 1-0 lead in the first on a single by Trillo, Bake McBride's double and a sacrifice fly by Keith Moreland, who played third base in place of the ailing Mike Schmidt.

They made it 2-0 in the second off Chicago starter Mike Krukow, who threw 79 pitches in 32-3 innings, as Larry Bowa singled, moved to third on a single by Bob Boone and scored as Carlton grounded into a double play.

The Cubs, however, went ahead in the fourth with the help of a pair of sacrifice flies. Jerry Morales opened the inning with a single and moved to second when Steve Henderson walked. Hector Cruz lashed an RBI double, Henderson stopping at third. Ken Reitz and Barry Foote then hit sacrifice flies that sent the Cubs ahead 3-2.

The Phillies tied it in the sixth with an unearned run off reliever Randy Martz when Henderson let Pete Rose's line drive kick off his glove for an error. Trillo singled and McBride followed with a run-scoring double.

San Francisco 4
Atlanta 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Griffin hurled a four-hitter, recording his first complete game since 1976, and Joe Morgan belted a two-run homer as the San Fransisco Giants whipped the Atlanta Braves 4-1 Saturday night.

Griffin, 1-0, struck out nine and walked two, giving up Atlanta's only run in the eighth inning on a triple by Claudell Washington and groundout by Terry Harper.

Bill North got the first San Francisco run in the third when he beat out a bunt single, stole second and third and crossed the plate when Enos Cabell bounced a single against a drawn-in infield. Morgan followed Cabell's hit with a blast over the right field fence. It was his first homer of the season.

The Giants added a run in the seventh when North walked, stole second, went to third on Cabell's sacrifice and scored on Morgan's sacrifice fly.

Sixers, Bucks Ready To Resume NBA Wars

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Billy Cunningham says he expects more of the same when his Philadelphia 76ers face the Milwaukee Bucks Sunday with their National Basketball Association playoff series on the line.

"It's going to be a war out there," the Philadelphia coach predicted after the Bucks defeated his team 109-86 Friday night to even their best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series at 3-3.

The victory forced Sunday's showdown at Philadelphia, with the winner advancing to play Boston for the conference crown.

Cunningham said it was sometimes difficult to believe how his squad was dominated by the Bucks Friday night.

The Bucks, nearly counted out by some observers after a 116-99 loss to the 76ers at Philadelphia two nights earlier, got 22 points from forward Mickey Johnson and 20 from center Bob Lanier Friday night.

But a key statistic from the game showed the Bucks totaling 55 rebounds to the 76ers' 29.

The 6-foot-9 Mickey Johnson had 12 rebounds, 6-10 Lanier had 11 and 6-7 Marques Johnson 10 for Milwaukee.

For the 76ers, 6-6 Julius Erving had seven, 7-foot Caldwell Jones six and 6-11 center Darryl Dawkins five.

The Bucks, having led by as many as nine points in the second quarter, trailed 45-44 at halftime after a three-point play by the 76ers' Lionel Hollins.

As the second half began, Lanier hit a short hook shot and free throw to make it 47-45, an Erving tip-in tied it at 47-47 and Mickey Johnson's bank jumper put the Bucks ahead to stay at 49-47 with 10:24 left in the third quarter.

"We came in trailing at halftime and just couldn't let it bother us," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "I told them they played well the first half and I wanted them to do it again for the next 24 minutes."

Milwaukee built a 12-point lead, at 85-71, before Marques Johnson re-entered the game for the first time in the fourth quarter with 7:55 left.

Showing no sign of the back muscle spasms that plagued him Wednesday, he hit four consecutive Bucks' baskets to make the score 100-81.

Erving said he wasn't surprised about the rough, physical nature of the game.

"Sometimes you're allowed to crash the boards and go over other people. Other times there are whistles blowing," he said.

"The game (Sunday) is going to be a physical game. We have to go out there and exert ourselves."

Lanier said he still hopes his prediction about the series comes true.

"I said the first team to win two games in a row will win the series," Lanier said. "I said that way back at the first game."

Suns Out For 3rd Straight Vs. Kings

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Suns, on the brink of elimination from the National Basketball Association playoffs a few days ago, now can wrap up a Western Conference finals berth with a home-court victory over the Kansas City Kings on Sunday.

A Kansas City victory, of course, would eliminate the Suns. The best-of-seven semifinal series is tied 3-all.

But before the series opener, the Pacific Division-champion Suns, whose 57 victories were the most in the West during the regular season, had been expected to dump the Kings easily.

The Kings had a 40-42 record during the regular season, didn't clinch a playoff berth until the final game and scored their three playoff victories without their injured starting guards, Phil Ford and Otis Birdsong.

The Suns knocked off Kansas City 81-76 Friday night for their second straight victory over the Kings after being down 3-1.

"Our backs," said Kings center Sam Lacey, "are against the wall again."

Added forward Reggie King: "It seems our backs have been against the wall all season, but then everything's been hard."

"I'm looking for a good show from us Sunday, and I'm definitely looking for us to win," said Phoenix captain Len "Truck" Robinson. "I'm not looking for a two-point, three-point victory ... I'm looking for us to play really well."

The Suns led by as many as 10 points in the first half Friday night, but had to fight off a last-quarter Kansas City surge as Ernie Grunfeld's jumper tied the game 76-76 with 48 seconds left.

Both teams own road victories in the series, and three of Kansas City's five postseason triumphs have been on enemy courts. The Kings also won in Phoenix during the regular season.

"The home court advantage hasn't meant nothing yet," Phoenix guard Dennis Johnson said, "but we're going to try and change that."

Grunfeld said, "There's no such thing as momentum. You have to take it one game at a time and anybody can win. And we're going back to Phoenix with the attitude that we can win."

Warriors Pound Ram Nine By 7-1

WILSON — Jerry Jenkins struck out eight and scattered four hits to lead Wilson Hunt to a 7-1 victory over Greene Central Saturday night in an opening round game of the Breakfast Optimist Baseball Tournament.

Jenkins, now 2-2, retired the first eight men he faced before Donald Warren singled in the third. All four hits off Jenkins were singles.

The Rams only ran came in the sixth when Chris Suggs singled and raced to third when the rightfielder misplayed the ball. Suggs later scored on an error by the shortstop.

Hunt, now 9-4 this season, jumped out to a 3-0 lead after the first inning and pushed its lead to 4-0 with a run in the second. The Warriors added three more runs to their lead in the fifth for their total.

Christy Rodri led the Warriors with three hits in four at bats. Charlie Simpson was two for three with two RBIs for Hunt.

Greene Central was led at the plate bu Warren, who was two for two. Warren also went the distance on the mound, giving up nine hits. He is now 3-2 this season.

The Rams, now 7-8, return to action Monday at 2 p.m. when they continue play in the tournament against Southwest Edgecombe.

Detroit Nips Toronto For 5th Straight

TORONTO (AP) — It was not the sort of spot most pitchers would select in making their seasonal debut — especially when you're coming off an arm injury.

Dan Schatzeder of the Detroit Tigers entered Saturday's game against the Toronto Blue Jays in the first inning with the bases loaded, none out — starter Dan Petry walked the first three batters — and slugger John Mayberry at the plate.

"I almost hit big John with the second pitch," Schatzeder said. "The next pitch I threw right down the middle and he popped it up. It just takes something like that to get you back in it. I had the butterflies, but when a guy hits a pop-up like that it gets you going."

Schatzeder allowed just one run to score on a wild pitch and limited the Jays to one hit over 52-3 innings of sharp relief to earn the win in the Tigers' 4-3 victory.

Schatzeder, a left-hander, injured his arm prior to spring training and logged only six innings in Florida.

"I hurt it in the off-season, really," he said. "I was throwing in the cold weather and, like an idiot, I threw a slider and it stiffened up. Then, one day in spring training I blew it out pretty good and I've been nursing it along since.

"I had a real good test today and I think it's back. It was real nice to contribute like I did today. We're going good and it's nice to be a part of it. It's a real big win for me, as well as the team.

"I think the arm problems have helped me as far as my control. I'm not trying to overthrow the ball and that's helped my curve and slider."

The victory was the fifth straight and seventh in eight games this season for the Tigers, while the Blue Jays suffered their fourth consecutive defeat. Steve Kemp doubled home a key run in Detroit;s four-run sixth inning.

Schatzeder came into the game in the first inning after Dan Petry, making his initial start of the year, walked the first three batters. Schatzeder, 1-0, got out of the jam by getting John Mayberry and Willie Upshaw to pop up before Alfredo Griffin scored on a wild pitch. Al Woods' fly ball ended the threat.

Schatzeder was relieved by Aurelio Lopez in the sixth. Lopez was nicked for two runs in the bottom of the ninth on Griffin's single, Lloyd Moseby's double and a pop-fly double by Garth Iorg.

Some poor defensive play by Toronto right fielder Willie Upshaw helped the Tigers take the lead in the sixth.

Jim Clancy, 1-1, had limited Detroit to one hit over the first five innings but Rick Peters led off the sixth with a triple to right-center on which Upshaw got a late jump.

Alan Trammell singled Peters home and, after taking second on a wild pitch, scored on Steve Kemp's double to right as Upshaw, who was battling the sun, again got a late jump.

Champ Summers singled Kemp home for the Tigers' third run and, after Clancy loaded the bases on two walks, he was replaced by Jerry Garvin. Lou Whitaker greeted Garvin with a single to score Summers with what turned out to be the decisive run.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Buddy Bell rapped a run-scoring single and Jim Sundberg added an RBI double as the Texas Rangers broke a 4-4 tie in the seventh inning Saturday and defeated the New York Yankees 6-4 behind red three times in the fifth after heavy showers delayed the game for two hours with the Rangers batting in the fourth.

The Yankees chased Honeycutt after the rain delay when Lou Pinella walked, Nettles and Rick Cerone singled for one run and Dennis Werth was safe on a fielder's choice to load the bases. Nettles scored when third baseman Bell bobbled Bucky Dent's grounder and Willie Randolph walked to force Cerone home.

However, Comer got Jerry Mumphrey to hit into a double play and Dave Winfield fouled out.

Texas then chased John with a four-run outburst in the bottom of the inning. Pat Putnam led off with a single and Billy Sample was safe when center fielder Mumphrey dropped his fly ball as right fielder Piniella brushed him. Bump Wills then drilled his first home run of the season, cutting the lead to 4-3. Texas scored the tying run when Mickey Rivers, Al Oliver and Bell followed with singles.

CHICAGO (AP) — Carlton Fisk's two-run homer into a gusting wind backed the combined five-hit pitching of Steve Trout and Lamarr Hoyt Saturday and led the Chicago White Sox to a 2-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Fisk's homer was his third of the season and his second game-winning shot against his former teammates. It came in the fifth inning off loser Frank Tanana, 0-1, after Bill Almon led off with a single and was sacrificed to second.

Trout, 1-0, was making his season debut and was helped by three double plays.

He had a three-hit shutout going out got Carl Yastrzemski to hit into a forceout before yielding to Hoyt, who retired Jim Rice on a fly ball and struck out Tony Perez.

Before running into trouble in the eighth, Trout gave up a double to Yastrzemski in the first, an infield hit to Rice in the fourth and a bloop single to Evans in the sixth.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bert Blyleven tossed a four-hitter and Joe Charboneau sparked a four-run sixth inning with a two-run single, leading the Cleveland Indians to a 5-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

Blyleven, 1-1, did not walk a batter and struck out eight as he became the second consecutive Cleveland pitcher to blank Milwaukee. Wayne Garland stopped the Brewers on six hits in Milwaukee's home opener Thursday.

Cleveland scored its first run in the fifth inning when Jorge Orta led off with a double off Milwaukee starter Jim Slaton, 1-1. He took third on an infield out and scored on a sacrifice fly by Bo Diaz.

Vilas Advances To Monte Carlo Finals

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Argentina's Guillermo Vilas advanced to the final of the rain-delayed Monte Carlo Open tennis tournament with a workmanlike 6-2, 6-2 victory Saturday over unseeded Italian Adriano Panatta.

Tournament favorite Jimmy Connors of the United States led Hungary's Balazs Taroczy 6-1 in the other semifinal before the match was interrupted by rain. It will be resumed Sunday. The final will be played Monday.

Connors and Vilas, the No.2 and No.3 seeds respectively, were expected to meet for the $50,000 first prize after No.1 seed Bjorn Borg of Sweden was upset in the first round. Doctors later discovered an injury to Borg's shoulder and ordered him sidelined for at least 15 days.

Saturday's rain caused long delays and interruptions while the crowd huddled under umbrellas and plastic sheets at the seaside Monte Carlo Country Club, where the tournament is being held.

"The conditons were bad," said Vilas, the Monte Carlo champion in 1976. "There could have been a dangerous fall on those slippery lines."

"I'm feeling good," Connors said after his match was postponed. "I'm not upset about the delay. I'd rather wait and play in decent weather."

Ranked No. 3 in the world after holding the top spot for nearly five years, Connors came to Monte Carlo with three tournament victories this year.

Behind powerful serves, Vilas held service in the first game of the second set without allowing Panatta a point.

Shortly into the second game, the match was delayed for 1 hour, 23 minutes because of rain.

"It was a very slow court," said Panatta. "I can't play that slowly. It's difficult to win in conditions like that.

64 Gives Powers Tallahassee Lead

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Greg Powers fired in six birdies and an eagle for an 8-under-par 64 Saturday to take a one-stroke lead after three rounds of the $100,000 PGA Tallahassee Open.

Powers, who has never won a Professional Golfers' Association event, sank a 15-foot putt for an eagle-3 on the par-5, 506-yard 17th hole. He took a 16-under-par total of 200 into Sunday's final round.

The leader hit a 5-wood for his second shot, putting the ball about 15 feet from the cup, then sank the putt.

"It was fun to watch that eagle putt go in," he said. "And the crowd let me know about it. It was the loudest roar I've ever heard."

Second-round leader Dave Eichelberger had two bogies and five birdies for a 69, but it wasn't enough to catch Powers. He was at 201, while Bob Murphy's 68 put him at 202. Jerry Heard and Mark O'Meara were at 204, Heard with a third-round 67 and O'Meara with a 65.

Tied for fifth at 205 were Gary McCord, Jerry McGee and ChiChi Rodriguez. Mike Donald and Cesar Sanudo were at 206.

Powers birdied the 6th, 7th, 10th, 12th, 14th and 15th holes, making a 20-foot putt for the first. He missed a chance to tie the record for the 7,124-yard Killearn Golf and Country Club course when his seven-foot putt for birdie went to the right of the 18th hole.

"I hit a lot of real crisp irons on the back nine," he said. "The 64 was my best round by far this year — the best ever on the tour...

"I've been trying to stay on an even keel. Saturday is the day to put yourself in position to win. Now I can really go after it on Sunday."

Eichelberger said he was disappointed he hadn't toured the course with a 66 again, as he did Thursday and Friday.

"I felt I should have played a little better," he said. "The scoring conditions were excellent and I felt another 66 would have been appropriate. The driver cost me about three shots today. I just wasn't on target during the first nine."

Eichelberger said a total of 20-under par might be needed to win.

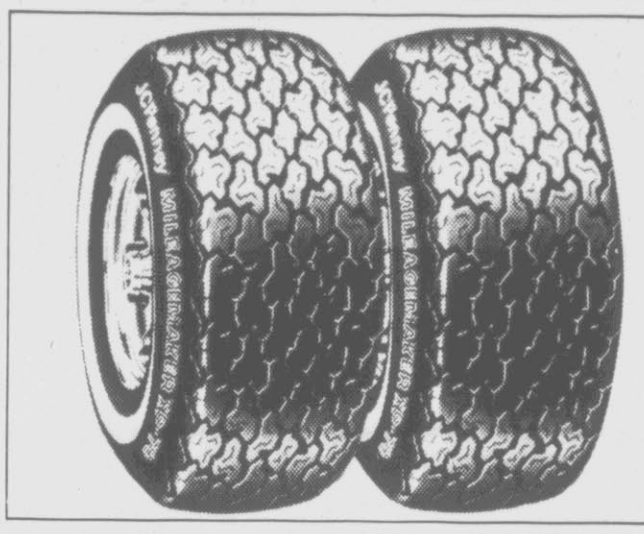

"I'll be playing my own game Sunday," he added. "The winner will need to shoot something pretty low."

NCSU's Williford Leads Golf

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's Billy Williford shot a 4-under par 68 under warm and windy conditions Saturday to take the individual lead after the second round of the Atlantic Coast Conference golf tournament.

The final round of the tournament is scheduled for Sunday on the 6,800-yard, par 72 Northgreen Country Club layout.

Williford's score put him at 142, two shots ahead of first-round leader Frank Fuhrer of North Carolina and Robert Wrenn of Wake Forest.

John Spelman of UNC and Bob Stanger of Duke share sixth place at 147.

In the team championship, the Tar Heels remained three strokes ahead of Wake Forest. The Demon Deacons will enter the final day without the services of No. 4 golfer Matt King, who was hospitalized with an intestinal virus.

North Carolina's second-round 292 gave the team a 581 total after 36 holes. Wake Forest posted its second straight 292 score for a two-day total of 584.

Duke holds third at 597 and North Carolina State is fourth at 601. Clemson is fifth at 606, Maryland sixth at 621 and Virginia is seventh at 622.

Georgia Tech trails the pack at 641.

Chargers Drop Fifth In Wilson Optimist Opener

WILSON — Chapel Hill scored all six of its runs in the first three innings and then held off Ayden-Grifton in the final four innings to take a 6-5 victory in an opening round game of the Breakfast Optimist Club Tournament.

The Chargers, now 10-5 overall, will play Beddingfield Monday at 11 a.m. in the second round of the tournament. Chapel Hill will play North Lenoir later in the day.

The Chargers jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first-half inning but Chapel Hill countered with three runs of its own in the bottom of the first to tie it up. Chapel Hill then went ahead with two runs in the second and one in the third and held on for the victory.

Chris Strickland and Bernard Ricciarelli led off the first with singles. Strickland, however, was forced out when Terry Locust reached on a fielder's choice.

Chuck Smithwick then singled home Ricciarelli and Locust scored when the throw home was wide. Tyrone Gay then ground out to third. On the play, Smithwick went to third and the throw back across the diamond to third was long by the first baseman, allowing Smithwick to score.

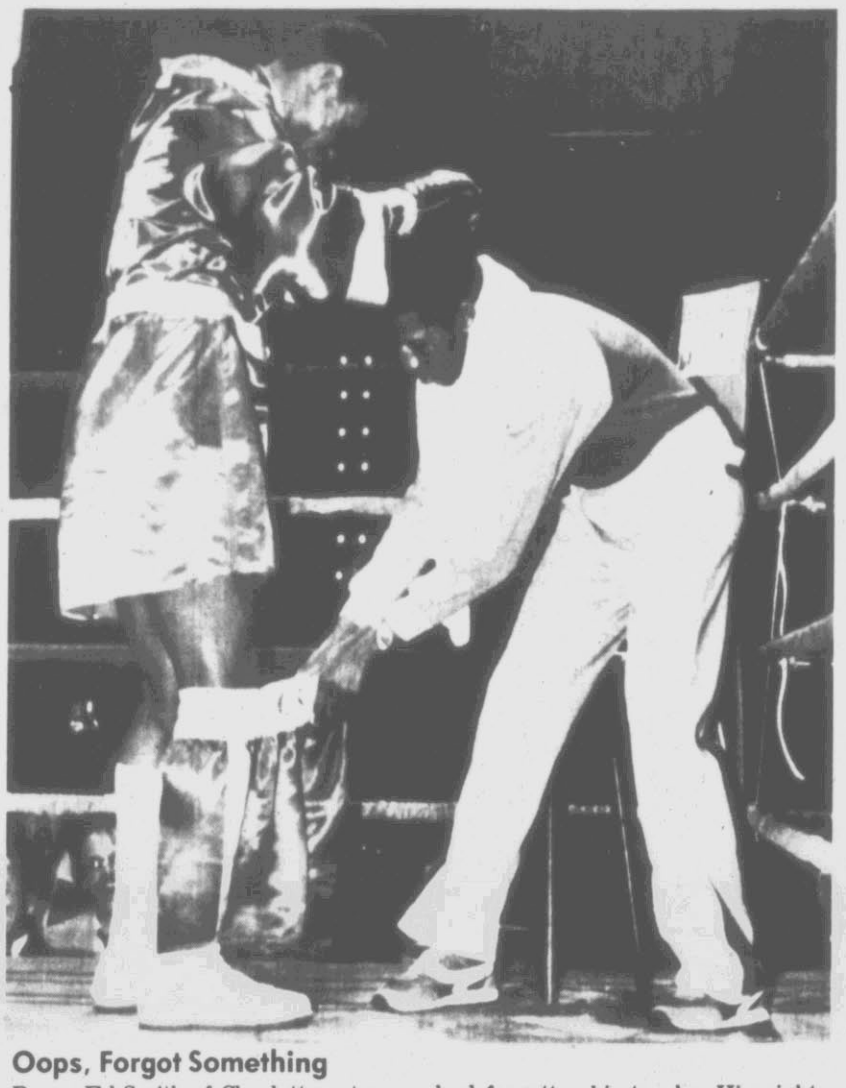

The lead was short-lived, however, as Chapel Hill went on top, 6-3 after three innings. Ayden-Grifton cut the deficit to two with a run in the sixth and to one with a run in the seventh, but could not get closer.

In the seventh, Doug Coley tripled and scored on a passed ball. Then, with two gone, Locust walked but Smithwick struck out to end the game.

Ayden-Grifton was led at the plate by Coley, who was two for three with a triple. Ricciarelli and Brandt Allen were both two for four for A-G. Allen had a double, his ninth of the season, for one of this hits.

Clyde Signed By Astros, To Report To Class AA

HOUSTON (AP) — It's almost as if the prodigal son has returned home.

David Clyde, who set out from Houston Westchester High School with a solid-gold fastball in 1973 to seek fame and fortune with the Texas Rangers, has been signed by the Houston Astros and will report Tuesday to their Class AA affiliate at Columbus, Ga.

It means a full-circle route for Clyde's star-crossed baseball career that has spanned the heights and depths in eight years.

Twenty days after his graduation from high school, Clyde dazzled a victory-hungry capacity crowd at Arlington Stadium with five innings of one hit baseball and a 4-3 victory over Minnesota.

They said it saved a franchise. It also tarnished a teen-ager's career.

From that storybook beginning, Clyde's career degenerated to a 4-8 finish and 5.03 earned run average that first year, to marriage and divorce from his high school sweetheart; to a 3-9 record in 1974; to the minor leagues; to shoulder surgery.

Back to the minor leagues; a trade to Cleveland in 1978; a trade back to the Rangers and his release in January 1980; and finally to a second shoulder surgery prior to the start of the 1980 season.

Now, at age 25, Clyde's getting possibly his final chance at stardom.

"I'm really happy about being back in baseball," Clyde said Saturday shortly after the Astros announced his signing. "I am in mid-season shape but not mid-season form. I haven't pitched for more than a year and it's made me forget some things about pitching."

Clyde said he had been working out since December in anticipation of signing with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"Whitey (Herzog) told me when I was ready to pitch they'd find a spot for me," Clyde said. "But when I called him, he said they didn't have an opening."

So Clyde winds up signing with his hometown team and Astros General Manager Al Rosen is delighted.

"We are sending David to Class AA in hopes that he will make a comeback like the one Vern Ruhle made in 1978," Rosen said.

Kush Trial Set To Go To Jury

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — They are six women and two men who will "decide the fate of college football" this coming week, according to attorneys involved in a $2.2 million damage suit against former Arizona State University football Coach Frank Kush.

The eight-member Maricopa County Superior Court jury will begin deliberating Monday morning after receiving final instructions in the case from Judge Thomas C. Kleinschmidt.

In closing arguments Friday, attorneys from both sides told the jury their decision in the second phase of the trial "either way will be of paramount importance in the world of college athletics."

Ex-Sun Devil punter-defensive back Kevin Rutledge is primarily suing Kush and former Arizona State assistant coach Bill Maskill — claiming they harassed him into quitting the team in 1979 and forfeiting his scholarship.

Rutledge, 21, and a student-athlete at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, has also included the university in his lawsuit, claiming it was negligent in its supervision of Kush.

The 51-year-old Kush, hired to coach the Canadian Football League's Hamilton Tiger-Cats last December, has denied the harassment charge in testimony. So has Maskill, who is currently an assistant coach at Tulane University.

The same jury cleared Kush in the trial's first phase on a charge of punching Rutledge in the mouth after a poor punt in a 1978 game. Yet most of the jurors are apparently unfamiliar with the basics of the sport.

Kleinschmidt took the jurors to an Arizona State spring football practice April 7 for the purpose "of taking a view." As they stood along the sidelines watching the intra-squad workout, there were questions among the jurors as to: "Which one is the home team?" "Who is ASU playing?" and "Which one is the punter?"

But in the courtroom, the attorneys have tried to appeal to the jurors' emotions.

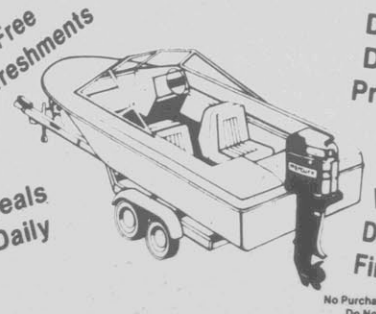

"Is there one of us who hasn't failed sometime in life?," Arizona Board of Regents' defense attorney Michael Gallagher asked Friday. "Kevin Rutledge went to college, reached for a star and came up empty-handed. He had a good freshman year (in 1978), his career went south his sophomore season and he and his embittered dad decided to get Kush for it.

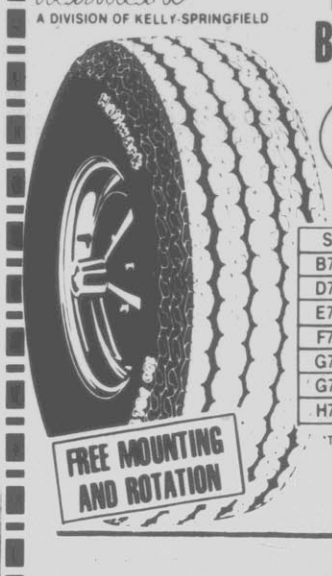

"Maybe if Kevin Rutledge stuck with the program, things might have turned out all right. We'll never know that," added Gallagher. "Kevin quit. That's not the university's fault. But this trial is a waste of three months of our lives."

But Rutledge's attorney, Robert Hing, said, "There is not an issue in this case as to whether Kevin should be on first team, second team, third team or scout team. The issue is whether he got a chance to perform, to show what he could do. But Maskill and Kush told him to 'get the hell out of here. You're not wanted.'

"Is that encouraging a player to stay or to leave?," Hing asked the jury. "Kevin was not allowed to practice with the rest of the team. You can only come to one conclusion — that Kevin Rutledge was not wanted and they conveyed that message to him with malicious means."

Bill Wilder and Bobby Patterson each turned in outstanding pitching performances as East Carolina University swept a doubleheader from Baptist College Friday night.

East Carolina took the first game, 3-2, scoring the winning run in the bottom of the seventh. They came back to win the second, 5-3.

Wilder went the distance in the first game, raising his record to 6-4. He gave up five hits, walked three and fanned 13. The total strikeouts brought his total to 182 for his career, third best among ECU pitchers.

Patterson wasn't far behind. He scattered four hits, walked two and struck out seven. He also ended Baptist hitter Tommy Timmerman's consecutive game hitting streak at 17.

"We got two great pitching efforts," coach Hal Baird said. "Both of them threw well and against a solid ball club."

Baird was pleased with the team's hitting. The Pirates got nine in the first game and six in the second.

"We played good defense too for the most part. But we had trouble behind the plate again," he added. Fran Fitzgerald, usually the better arm, had five steals against him, but Jay Carraway came on in the second game to throw out both of the Buccaneers who ran against him.

"I hope we can get a string going here now," Baird said of the four consecutive wins. The Pirates have 11 games left on their home schedule, between a third meeting with Baptist Saturday and Monday week.

East Carolina grabbed the lead in the second inning of the opening game. John Hallow led off with a single to right, and moved up on a sacrifice. He scored on Charlie Smith's single to center.

Baptist came right back to score twice in the third and take the lead. Tony Hoffeditz led off with a walk and Timmerman hit in his 16th game, driving the ball into center, scoring Hoffeditz, who had stolen second. Timmerman also stole up, moving to third on an error on the throwdown. He scored when Britt Limehouse singled to center.

But that was all Wilder allowed. While two more Buccaneers reached second, none got further.

East Carolina tied it up in the fourth. With one down, Todd Hendley walked and Smith singled. Robert Wells followed with a single to center, scoring Hendley.

It stayed that way until the seventh, when the Pirates scored the winning run. Earlier, in the fifth, the Pirates lost out on a chance after putting two on with none out.

In the seventh, after two were down, Evans doubled, his second of the game. Mike Sage's grounder to second was errored, and Hallow was intentionally walked to set up the force at any base.

Baptist again jumped out early in the second game, scoring a run in the first. With one down, Rudy Long walked and moved all the way to third when Limehouse reached on an error. Larry Ellisor grounded out, with Long scoring on the play.

The Pirates picked up two more in the third, making it 5-1. Again, it came after two were out. Sage doubled up the alley in left center and Hendley walked. Smith also walked, loading the bases. Pete Persico singled to left, driving in Sage, and Carraway reached on an error, allowing Hendley to score.

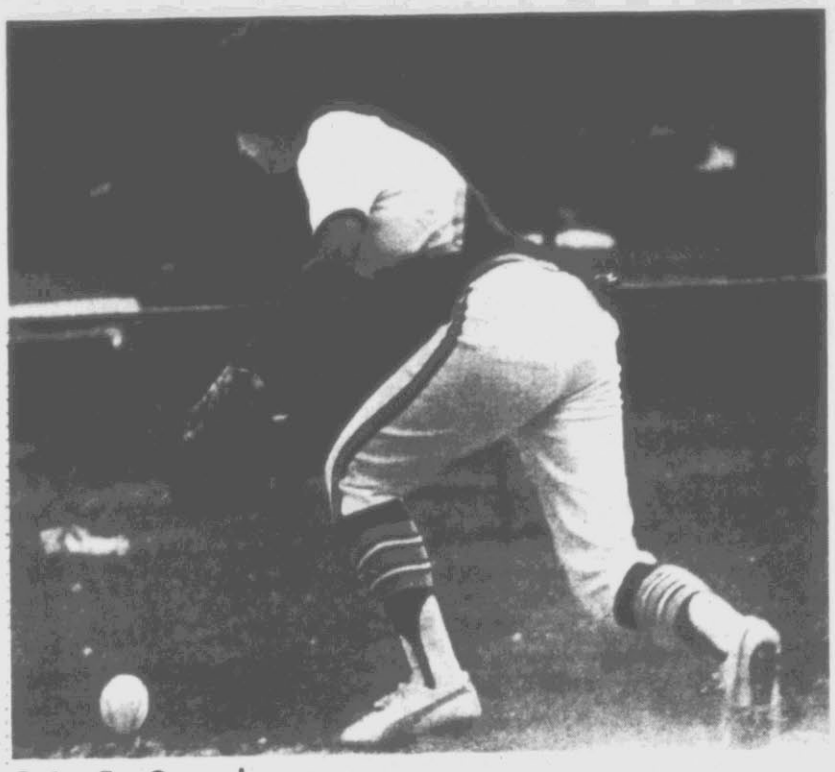

The only other scoring came in the Baptist half of the sixth. With two away, Long reached when his grounder took a bad hop over Sage at first. Then, Limehouse followed with a homer to right center, cutting the lead to 5-3.

Patterson shut Baptist down after that, as only one more base runner reached.

Evans led the ECU hitting in the first game, going three-for-three, while Smith was two-for-three. Carraway had two hits to lead the Pirates in the second game.

Long had two hits for Baptist in the second, while no one collected more than one in the first.

Following a Saturday meeting between the two schools, the Pirates continue their home slate, hosting Campbell in a doubleheader on Monday.

Top-Ranked Lady Bucs Swept Pair From NCSU

Wins Extend ECU Streak Over Lady Wolfpack To 14 Straight

The East Carolina women's softball team celebrated its #1 ranking Friday afternoon by sweeping a double-header from fourth-ranked N.C. State.

The Lady Pirates, sparked by Cynthia Shepard's three-run homer, won the opener, 4-3, and then used a hit by Shepard to capture the second game, 1-0, for ECU's 14 straight victory over the Lady Wolfpack during a three-year period.

In the opener, N.C. State led 3-1 going into the bottom of the sixth but the Lady Pirates rallied for three runs to take a lead they never gave up. ECU's Mary Powell and Mitzi Davis led off the inning with singles. Shepard followed with her drive to the left-field corner that went for a home run.

Powell led the Lady Pirates with three hits in three at bats. Davis was two for three.

In the second game, the Lady Bucs scored in the bottom of the first and then held on for the victory as NCSU managed just one hit off ECU pitcher Jeannette Roth.

With Maureen Buck on second, Sheppard singled down the left-field line to bring her home with what proved to be the only run of the game for either team.

East Carolina returns to action April 24-25 when the Lady Pirates travel to Graham for the NCAIAW qualifying tournament.

Lady Bucs After National Title

BY JOHN STALLINGS
Special To The Reflector

They're ranked #1 in the nation and finished the regular season with an incredible 34-3 record. But what will Alita Dillon's Lady Pirates do for an encore this softball season.

They might win the national title.

The Lady Pirates, the defending Region II softball champions, finished their regular season schedule with a doubleheader sweep of N.C. State Friday, winning 4-3 and 1-0.

The wins were the seventh and eighth of the season against the fourth-ranked Wolfpack, now 26-11 this season. The wins left ECU with 14 straight victories over NCSU stretching over three season.

On its way to the top, ECU has beaten #2 Florida State twice in four games. The two wins came in the championship finals of the N.C. State Invitational. ECU won that tournament over a field that included six of the nation's top 10 teams.

"I'm very pleased that we finished unbeaten in the state," said Dillon, the only coach in the Lady Pirates' four-year history. "At the beginning of the year, I thought it would be nearly impossible to equal last year's record (37-4), but I think we've done better. We've played most of the top teams in the country."

In 1980, the only thing that kept the Lady Pirates away from a shot a the national title was the fact no national tournament was held. This year a championship of slowpitch softball will be held in Raleigh at N.C. State. ECU is odds-on-favorite to make the 16-team field, barring a total collapse.

"We go into the state qualifying tournament this weekend," Dillon said. "The top two teams from the tournament will go to the regionals.

"Eight teams go to the regionals, with the top two going on to the nationals. There are only five regions in slowpitch softball and 16 teams will go to the national tournament. Since State is hosting it, if they qualify there will be six at large berths open. Even if we finish third in our region, with our record and the schedule we've played, we should make the national field."

But Dillon does not expect her talented team to back into the nationals. She expects them to storm in.

"The girls were a little sloppy fielding Friday. Defense has been our strong suit all season," she said. "We hae been consistent in the field. We have more depth and more speed than last yar. And our hitting has been fairly consistent, especially from Cynthia Shepard, Miztzi Davis and Kathy Riley."

Shepard has been the leader at the plate for ECU this season. Her three-run homer won the first game of Friday's doubleheader with State and her RBI single produced the only run of the second game. Davis and Riley, returning all-state selections, have also been expectional all-around performers.

The infield is bolstered by shortstop Mary Powell and second baseman Ginger Rothermel, also returning all-staters. Shirley Brown, yet another all-state returnee, provides a good target at first base and power at the plate.

But where the Pirates stand apart from the rest is in the dugout. Depth at every position has been a key factor this year. ECU has two quality pitchers in freshman regular Jeannette Roth and Angie Humphrey.

Fran Hooks, the regular catcher, could play shortstop for any other team in the state. Seniors Lillion Barnes and Lydia Rountree are gifted utility players who double as pinch runners.

Shortfielder Yvonne Williams is the fastest of the Lady Pirates, however, and roams the outfield well enough to be another in a long line of returning all-state players for ECU.

Not resting on a solid lineup, Dillon recruited some standout talent that will keep ECU competitive for three more years.

Third baseman Jo Landa Clayton, reserve first baseman Tammy Parham, utility fielder Leslie Bunn and left fielder and former Greene Central standout Melody Ham are waiting in the wings to carry the Pirate program. All have played well in limited action.

The Lady Pirates, obviously, are loaded and healthy. Dillon has given her team Easter weekend off for rest and relaxation.

Redskins Slip By Williamston, 8-7

ROBERSONVILLE — Jerry Bryant drove home two runs and Roanoke scored four runs in the sixth to edge Williamston, 8-7, Friday night in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

The Redskins, now 5-8 overall and 3-5 in the league, trailed 6-4 going into the sixth but a four-run rally gave them the lead for good. Williamston loaded the bases with two outs in the seventh and scored one run but could not tie the game.

With one gone in the sixth Angello Spruill walked and went to third on Edward Grimes' double. Bryant then doubled to score both Spruill and Grimes to tie the game. Joey Ross and Neal Cargile walked to load the bases. Then, after Bryant was forced out on Robert Smith's fielder's choice, Maurice Chance reached on an error which scored both Ross and Cargile.

The Tigers, now 5-7 overall and 3-5 in the league, appeared ready to tie the game in the top of the seventh. With two gone, Tony Rogers reached on an error and Greg Johnson singled and Durwood Taylor walked to load the bases. Ed Pippin then reached on an error by Smith, the Redskin third baseman, scoring Rogers. But James Clemmons flied out to end the threat and the game.

Williamston led, 1-0, after two innings and after both teams scored three runs in the third and one in the fourth it was 5-4, Williamston. The Tigers got another run in the sixth when Clemmons singled, moved to second on an error and scored on Gray Rogerson's single. But the Redskins rallied for four runs in the bottom of the inning and took the lead for good.

Bryant led the Redskins at the plate with three hits in three at bats. Ross was two for two and Grimes two for three, including a double and triple.

Williamston was led by Tim Hines, who was three for four with a double and two RBIs. Clemmons was two for five.

Roanoke returns to action Monday when the Redskins host their own Easter Tournament. Roanoke meets Tabor City at 8 p.m. Williamston travels to Greenville this week for the Rose-Pitt County Tournament. The Tigers meet Greenville Rose at 5 p.m. Wednesday at Guy Smith.

Clemson Out Looking For Another Foe

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson University has begun a search for an opponent to replace Villanova, which announced earlier this week that it was dropping its football program.

Clemson officials probably look first to the other 10 teams that were left one game short by Villanova's surprise decision to stop playing intercollegiate football after 87 years.

"There are 10 other teams in the same boat as us," said Clemson Sports Information Director Bob Bradley.

Villanova was scheduled to visit Clemson on Sept. 26, but another possibility for a make-up date would be Sept. 5, one week before the Tigers' scheduled season opener at Tulane.

Of the 10 other teams on Villanova's schedule, only Richmond and Rutgers have games scheduled on both dates. Temple University is the only school that has an open date on the 26th, while Massachusetts, Navy, Virginia Military Institute, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Boston College and Connecticut all would be possible opponents for Sept. 5.

"We're definitely looking to keep the (makeup) game at home," Bradley said. "We're processing the season ticket applications now and tickets have already been printed. It shouldn't be too hard to keep it at home because of the kind of crowd and (money) guarantee we can give."

Temple, with its open date on Sept. 26 would seem to be a natural choice, but a game at Clemson would give the Owls seven road games next fall.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John McEnroe breezed past Stan Smith 6-2, 6-3 to gain a semifinal berth in the $75,000 Jack Kramer Open tennis tournament.

Third-seeded Brian Teacher fell by the wayside during the quarterfinals, as he retired during his match with Sandy Mayer. After losing the opening set 6-1 and dropping the first game of the second, Teacher told the umpire that he had been sick with the flu and could not continue.

In the other quarter-final matches, Bill Scanlon eliminated unseeded Walter Redondo 6-4, 6-3, and Nick Saviano whipped John Lloyd of Great Britain, 6-3, 6-4.

Rockets Down Spurs, Win Series

By The Associated Press

It has been 14 years since a team with a losing record in the regular season reached the next-to-last round of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The Houston Rockets, 40-42 in 1980-81, ended that string Friday night by beating the Midwest champion San Antonio Spurs 105-100. If the Kansas City Kings, also 40-42 in the regular season, can beat the Phoenix Suns in their seventh and final game Sunday, a losing team in the NBA final series is guaranteed.

The 1958-59 Minneapolis Lakers were the only regular-season losing team ever to make the final series. They lost in four straight games to Boston.

Phoenix, which had trailed Kansas City 3-1 in their best-of-seven Western Conference set, forced a seventh game with an 81-76 triumph Friday night, while the Milwaukee Bucks tied their Eastern Conference semifinal at 3-3 with a 109-86 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers. The Boston Celtics, who swept the Chicago Bulls in their Eastern semifinal, await the winner of the Bucks-76ers series.

Calvin Murphy bombed the Spurs with 19 of 28 field-goal attempts and hit all four of his free throws for 42 points as the Rockets won for the third time in the series at San Antonio. Houston now has won five out of six games on the road in the playoffs.

"We were 40 and 42 this season, not as good as they (52-30 Spurs) were," Murphy said. "But when the playoffs came, we played championship basketball. We deserved to win this series."

"This series was unbelievable," San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck said after each team won just one game on its home floor. "The finish of it also was unbelievable. The home-court advantage in this series didn't mean a thing. (Forward) Paul Griffin said it best: 'If you lose three at home in a seven-game series, you don't deserve to advance.'"

Murphy, the oldest and shortest player on the court, carried the scoring burden for Houston because center Moses Malone was ill. But the 6-foot-10 dynamo still scored 21 points.

Suns 81, Kings 76

Phoenix scored the last five points of the game to avoid elimination against Kansas City.

"The momentum is certainly with us," said Suns center Alvan Adams, whose two free throws with 33 seconds left broke a 76-76 tie. "The pressure is back on them."

"Sunday's game will be tremendous," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "They have excellent coaching. They've competed like heck."

The Kings, down to just eight players because of injuries, managed to outrebound the quicker Suns, but were plagued by 16 turnovers and 38.3 percent shooting from the field.

"You got to give the Phoenix Suns credit," said Kansas City Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "They were playing defense, and their defense is one of the reasons that we're shooting the way we are. They're exploiting us, trying to two-time our good shooters and leaving the other people open."

Bucks 109, 76ers 86

Milwaukee forced a Sunday showdown by taking control of the game in the third quarter and pulling away in the final period against Philadelphia.

Mickey Johnson scored 22 points and center Bob Lanier added 20, including a layup early in the third quarter that put the Bucks ahead to stay, 49-47. The Bucks led 74-66 at the end of the period and outscored the 76ers 35-20 in the fourth quarter.

Marques Johnson, hobbled by a back injury all week, contributed 15 points. Julius Erving led all scorers with 25.

Baseball Fever Smoking Along Tobacco Road

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Baseball fever is really smoking along North Carolina's Tobacco Road. Forget the four corners; the four bases are catching on deep in the heart of ACC country.

Not far from where the Duke University Blue Devils bounce the round ball in the highly competitive and lucrative Atlantic Coast Conference, the Durham Bulls are writing a baseball success story.

The Bulls, an Atlanta Braves affiliate in the eight-team Class A Caroline League, are jingling cash registers, stirring up packed houses and fostering civic pride without cheerleaders, bass drums or Carolina basketball.

They're doing it on the baseball genius of Miles Wolff, 36, president and principal owner of the 2-year-old club. Last year, Wolff proved that owning a minor league baseball team could be fun and profitable, even in these difficult economic times when half the major league teams are experiencing losses.

The Bulls, for which he paid $2,500 in October, 1979, went on the field for the first time last April. With a little luck, an exciting ballclub and some hard work and business smarts, the Bulls grossed $400,000 in 1980 for a pre-tax profit of $80,000.

"There's money to be made in the minor leagues. They've become very attractive," said Wolff, whose love of the national pastime's small time was nurtured in his hometown of Greensboro, N.C.

Major league baseball, for all its accounting woes, is attracting record crowds. Wolff says the increased interest in the major leagues is filtering to the minors, where budgets and costs are more manageable.

"But our problems are similar to the major leagues in that we have investors who aren't baseball people. These are the people who answer ads in the Wall Street Journal," he said in a telephone interview. "If you don't know anything about baseball, you're gonna lose money.

"That's not to say it isn't a business; it is. But it's a special kind of business which requires professional people running it. The clubs making money know baseball and are running it correctly."

Wolff meets the requirements. He was general manager of several minor league teams during the 1970s, including Savannah, Ga., where he was the Southern League's Executive of the Year in 1971. In 1977, he did play-by-play broadcasting for the Richmond Braves.

All the time he was looking for his own club, one that could be a winner on and off the field and a focal point for the community. When Durham became available, he tapped his family and many friends in baseball, who purchased $30,000 in stock to capitalize the team.

He did not try to sell stock locally. "I didn't want to look like a carpetbagger," he said.

But by the beginning of the season, the Bulls were out of money. "The initial start-up costs are huge," he said. "We did $60-70,000 in pre-season advertising and ticket sales, but the money wasn't in hand. The advertisers were waiting to see the programs printed and the billboards posted (before paying the team). We didn't press them. We didn't want to give the impression we were hard up for money."

That's when Wolff got lucky. The team needed money quickly to keep afloat, and the first homestand got the ball rolling.

On opening night, a crowd of 4,000 — capacity is 5,000 — showed up. The Bulls stole 10 bases and won. The next night, temperatures were in the 40s. Attendance was 600, but the fans saw some show. "In the top of the 12th, we pulled off a triple play. And we won it on a home run in the bottom of the 12th," Wolff said.

Wolff expected to average 600 to 800 fans, and on the third night, a crowd of 800 saw the Durham pitcher take a no-hitter into the ninth inning. He lost the no-hitter, but the Bulls won and were on their way to 12 straight victories.

Word was spreading. On Friday night, the team drew 2,200. Saturday night was Jacket Night. "By 7:15 we were out of jackets and out of seats," Wolff said. "We had 5,800 people crammed in that night and had to send people away."

The Bulls won their division in both halves of the season, but lost in the playoff finals. Season attendance was 180,000. "I thought we could draw 70,000, 100,000 if we had a good year," Wolff said.

Wolff credits Durham's manager, "Dirty Al" Gallagher, with creating a team that the fans could support. "He's very colorful," Wolff said. "Some managers are very bland; they only want to develop players. But Al wanted to win and he made the team attractive. We stole 296 bases to set a Carolina record. The town really responded to us."

So did the advertisers, whose relationship with minor league clubs is generally more barter than greenbacks. "You're always looking to make a deal," said Wolff.

A billboard on a fence in Durham Athletic Park runs $900. A milk company got a right field sign for two old milk trucks, which Wolff turned into the ballpark's beer stands. The steel supporting the new scoreboard came from a local construction company, which received a box seat section.

Advertising money actually didn't make up that much of the Bulls' $400,000 in gross revenues, although everything helps on a shoestring budget. The bulk of the revenues came from ticket sales ($2.50 for general admission and $3 for reserved seats) and food and beverage concessions. Wolff gave away the team's radio rights last year and will receive a small payment for them this season. Four games will be on local television in 1981.

Last year, Wolff said he budgeted for expenses of $125,000 as the Bulls' break-even figure. The team's costs, however, turned out to be more than $200,000.

The major expense for any team is player salaries. The Atlanta Braves pay all Bulls player contracts and $8 of the $11-a-day meal money for overnight trips.

Durham pays for everything else — motel rooms and the bus for road trips, stadium rent and improvements, and equipment.

"The fans get to keep the balls that go into the stands," Wolff said. "But we have ball-chasers when they go over the fence. Every ball costs $3. It hurts when you see those things fly out." Wolff says it cost Durham $5,000 for balls and $4,000 for new uniforms last year. Wolff also bought washing machines and dryers for the clubhouse.

Wolff said he budgeted $25,000 last year for the salaries of his general manager, Peter Bock, who was the Carolina League Executive of the Year; a fulltime secretary, and himself.

"We had to spring for a fulltime secretary because we're in the ACC (area). This is the bigtime, so you've got to appear to run a classy operation, even if you don't have any money."

After expenses and taxes were deducted, the bottom line for 1980 showed that the Bulls made a profit of $40,000.

"For a gross of $400,000, that doesn't seem like a lot," said Wolff. "But we bought a bus, built a new concession area and did a lot of things that will benefit us in the years to come."

Wolff says he doesn't want to try the major leagues. He prefers the pace and life in the bushes. He's bought into the Asheville club in the South Atlantic League and is looking for another minor league investment for 1982. "But I won't pay an arm and a leg," he said.

"I love minor league baseball. It can give a city a sense of confidence and pride. Durham used to have an inferiority complex. We lost a team in 1962. But now we're proud that people come all the way from Raleigh and Chapel Hill to see us play.

"Since I was 12, all I've ever wanted to do was run a minor league club. It's my life. I love going into towns and selling baseball."

Former Brave Hurls Giants Past Atlanta

Alexander Returns To Haunt Braves

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves traded Doyle Alexander during the off-season because of contract problems.

Friday night, he made them pay for it.

The right-hander, now pitching for San Francisco, came back to haunt his old team, scattering five hits in seven innings as the Giants defeated the Braves 6-2.

"It was a typical Alexander game," said San Francisco Manager Frank Robinson. "He throws a lot of pitches because he tries to make you hit his pitch."

Alexander didn't tire after throwing 106 pitches, but came out with a blister on his finger.

"I gave them seven good innings and we have a good bullpen, so there wasn't any use in me staying out there any longer," he noted.

Alexander was dealt to the Giants in a controversial trade that he requested when Braves management refused to renegotiate his contract.

In other National League action, the San Diego Padres nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 in 10 innings; the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Houston Astros 4-3; the Philadelphia Phillies stopped the Chicago Cubs 6-2, and the St. Louis Cardinals outscored the Cincinnati Reds 9-5.

Along with Alexander, Larry Herndon and Enos Cabell were key elements of the Giants' victory. Herndon hit a two-run single in the first inning and Cabell collected three hits and scored three runs.

Alexander, 2-0, walked one and struck out two before yielding to reliever Greg Minton in the eighth inning.

Gaylord Perry, 0-1, the Braves' 42-year-old right-hander, was chased in the fourth after yielding eight hits and five runs.

Padres 3, Dodgers 2

Broderick Perkins, a late-inning replacement at first base for Randy Bass, lined a 10th-inning single to score Gene Richards from second as San Diego handed Los Angeles its first defeat of the season.

Richards reached first to open the 10th when Dodger shortstop Bill Russell bobbled his grounder for an error. Ozzie Smith sacrificed him to second and reliever Steve Howe walked Ruppert Jones to set the stage for Perkins. The Dodgers had won their first six games of the season.

Tim Lollar worked the 10th inning and set down all three batters to get the victory.

"I'm not bitter about Bass starting at first," said Perkins, who lost the job to Bass in spring training. "All I can do is go out and play and pull for Randy. I'll do my job when I get the chance and I want to thank the Padres for giving me that chance."

Pittsburgh's Tim Foli got three singles and scored two runs and the Pirates put down a ninth-inning Houston rally to defeat the Astros.

Pittsburgh starter Rick Rhoden, 2-0, scattered six hits but was chased in the ninth when Craig Reynolds doubled and Cesar Cedeno singled. Reliever Grant Jackson gave up Denny Walling's sacrifice fly before shutting off the Houston rally.

Mike Easler and Vance Law spoiled the home pitching debut for Don Sutton, 0-2, with sacrifice flies in the first and fourth innings and the Pirates never trailed.

Phillies 6, Cubs 2

Larry Christenson and Mike Proly combined on an eight-hitter to pitch Philadelphia over Chicago. Christenson, 1-1, struck out five and yielded four hits in seven innings as the Phillies won their fourth straight game. Proly pitched the final two innings against the Cubs, who were batting .195 as a team entering the game. The loss was the fourth straight for Chicago.

Cheers, Tears Among Tributes To 'The Champ'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — In the huge pavilion of glittering Caesars Palace, in the company of the rich and the famous, nearly 3,000 people cheered in tribute to the memory of Joe Louis, the man with the modest manner and mighty punch.

"Let's hear it for the champion," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said Friday at the close of his eulogy for the black former heavyweight boxing champion. "Let's hear it for the champ."

The crowd in the sports pavilion rose and erupted into applause for Louis, who died Sunday at 66 and will be buried Tuesday at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Jackson, a civil rights leader, eulogized Louis as "the blacks' treasure and the world's champion," an unassuming hero who lifted the spirits of a people beset by racism and of a nation faced with World War II.

"God sent Joe from the black race to represent the human race," Jackson said.

Prior to the service several hundred people viewed the open coffin, sitting on a bier in a boxing ring and flanked by an honor guard from nearby Nellis Air Force Base. On Thursday more than 10,000 people filed past during the day-long public viewing, according to mortuary officials.

Jackson shared the services with Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jr., who sang "Here's to the Winner," his voice breaking at one point. Davis closed with a quiet, "God bless you, Joe."

Sinatra called Louis the "champion of champions who introduced grace and dignity to the sporting square with the ropes around it.

"He never boasted in victory nor wept in defeat," said Sinatra. "He apologized not. He knew too well that life had 15 rounds and none of us can win them all."

Sinatra, World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes, former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, fight promoter Don King and Caesars Palace President Harry Wald were among the pallbearers.

Boston Police Won't Disrupt Race

BOSTON (AP) — Saying they didn't want to embarrass the city, members of Boston's police union voted overwhelmingly Saturday against disrupting the Boston Marathon as a means of protesting the layoff of hundreds of officers.

Chester Broderick, chairman of the 1,700-hundred member Boston Police Patrolmen's Association, said the rank and file took "the best interests of the laid-off officers" into consideration when they decided not to blockade the route of the prestigious running event Monday.

Broderick said 90 percent of the 860 officers who voted decided not to disrupt "or even attend" the marathon.

However, he said city police would refuse to work overtime during the event.

"We felt very strongly the mayor of this city has embarrassed the city enough, and we will do no more to embarrass the city," Broderick told the hastily assembled news conference after the vote.

The police meeting took place in the same building where hotel officials said 150 marathoners were staying. Several of the runners said they could not even comprehend a disruption of the race for which they had trained so hard.

"It took a real lot to get here," said Ed Epperson of Austin, Texas, who said he trained three years for the 26-mile, 385-yard classic. "One way or another, I'm sure the race will be held — I hope."

After the first of two scheduled meetings, one in the afternoon and another in the evening, Broderick said the 560 officers at the meeting were upset. But he declined to indicate which way the vote was going, saying only that an announcement would come later in the evening.

"It was a very angry and frustrated group of police officers," said Broderick.

Although he would not characterize Monday's planned protest as a blockade, Broderick acknowledged the gathering of laid-off police officers and their families on the marathon course would disturb the race.

"You throw another few thousand people in the crowd and it would be disruptive," he said.

None of the officers attending the meeting would indicate how the vote went, but several said they were opposed to the idea of a marathon blockade.

"I'm sympathetic to the laid-off officers, but as far as I'm concerned it's a criminal act," said one patrolman, who declined to give his name.

"Only a minority is in favor of it. I don't know where the idea came from," the officer said.

The protest was scheduled to take place at Cleveland Circle, about seven miles from the end of the 26-mile, 385-yard classic.

The blockade originally was approved Wednesday night by the union's House of District Represenatives. Reaction was swift from race officials, Gov. Edward J. King and other state leaders — all urging that the plan be abandoned.

Unions representing police supervisors and laid-off firefighters also were quick to add their condemnation of the plans.

"We don't think it's right to interfere with the thousands of runners from all over the world who have trained for years for this. Our fight is with (Mayor) Kevin White," said Edward O'Reilly, president of the firefighters' union.

Proposition 2½, passed by voters in statewide referendum last November, requires cities and towns to reduce property taxes by at least 15 percent a year until they equal 2½ percent of fair market value.

Boston and many other communities have made sweeping cuts in municipal services to balance the loss of millions of dollars in tax revenues. Two hundred police officers and 200 firefighters were laid off this month, and another 400 layoffs of public safety officers layoffs are expected in May.

Race Director Will Cloney has said he expects the 85th marathon will be run, no matter what. And he appealed to the "good judgment" of the police officers.

"We hope that on second thought the police, who have always been very good to us, will realize that we have nothing to do with the controversy," he said.

There were indications the officers would concentrate instead on a planned "March for Public Safety" April 27. The patrolmen's association applied to the city Friday for a permit to stage the march. According to a pamphlet announcing the rally, the firefighters union is a co-sponsor.

The marathon begins at noon in suburban Hopkinton and the first runners are expected to cross the finish line about 2:15 p.m.

"All I can say is that men of good will usually come to sensible conclusions," Cloney said.

A's Rout Mariners For 9th Straight

By The Associated Press

The Oakland A's apparently can do no wrong.

"The guys who were supposed to get on base got on base, the guys who were supposed to hit the ball out of the park hit the ball out of the park and some of the guys who weren't supposed to hit the ball out of the park hit the ball out of the park," Cliff Johnson said in recapping the unbeaten A's 16-1 rout of the Seattle Mariners Friday night.

With red-hot Tony Armas leading the way with two homers, a double and five runs batted in, the A's thrilled a franchise-record crowd of 50,255 by pounding out 18 hits, five of them home runs, in running their record to 9-0. That tied the club mark for consecutive victories and moved the A's within one of the major-league record for consecutive victories at the start of a season.

Elsewhere in the American League, the California Angels blanked the Minnesota Twins 4-0 behind Ken Forsch's six-hit pitching; the Detroit Tigers downed the Toronto Blue Jays 8-5; the New York Yankees nipped the Texas Rangers 2-1; the Boston Red Sox turned back the Chicago White Sox 8-5, and the Baltimore Orioles edged the Kansas City Royals 3-2. Cleveland and Milwaukee were not scheduled.

Armas and Johnson have been known to hit the ball out of the park before. Rickey Henderson and Dwayne Murphy, who also homered, are known more for their speed.

The A's treated the crowd to some early fireworks, sending 10 men to the plate in a five-run first inning against Floyd Bannister. Henderson singled to lead off and Murphy and Johnson followed with home runs.

Almost lost in the rout was the four-hit pitching of Steve McCatty, who conceded that "it's easy to pitch when you are 15 runs ahead" and said that after the first inning he knew that "we were off to the races."

Armas belted his fifth home run of the season in the fourth with one man aboard and hit his sixth with two on to cap a six-run seventh inning. The five RBI gave him 16 for the season to go with a .405 batting average.

"I've never had a start like this — I can't believe it," he said.

Angels 4, Twins 0

Dan Ford and Tom Brunansky hit solo home runs off Al Williams in the first two innings to help Forsch record his first AL victory as California snapped a four-game losing streak. "I had real good command of my pitches and felt great after the second or third inning," said the veteran of 11 National League seasons. "I was a little nervous at the beginning, I guess. I walked the leadoff hitter on four pitches, all fastballs."

Tigers 8, Blue Jays 5

Kirk Gibson cracked a two-run homer to help rookie left-hander Howard Bailey pick up his first major-league victory. Gibson's homer capped a four-run first inning against Luis Leal. Detroit added four runs in the sixth inning on six hits, triggered by a Gibson single.

Gibson, who was 4-for-4 Thursday night against Toronto, went 2-for-2 Friday, raising his average to .466. "I feel good at the plate," he said. "I feel when I go up there that I'll get a hit. When there are guys on base I feel like I'm going to drive them in."

Yankees 2, Rangers 1

Reggie Jackson, making his 1981 debut, doubled across the two runs Ron Guidry needed in the first inning. Jackson, who had been nursing a torn tendon in his right leg and was on the disabled list for the first five games of the season, drove a 1-2 pitch from Danny Darwin into the left-center field gap to score Willie Randolph and Jerry Mumphrey, who reached on an error and a walk.

"I felt completely comfortable out there tonight because I saw some live pitching yesterday (Thursday) against our Double A team (Nashville)," said Jackson. "I was more nervous against them than I was tonight. I'm not swinging the bat like I want to. I'm not thinking home run up there; I'm just trying to hit the ball hard."

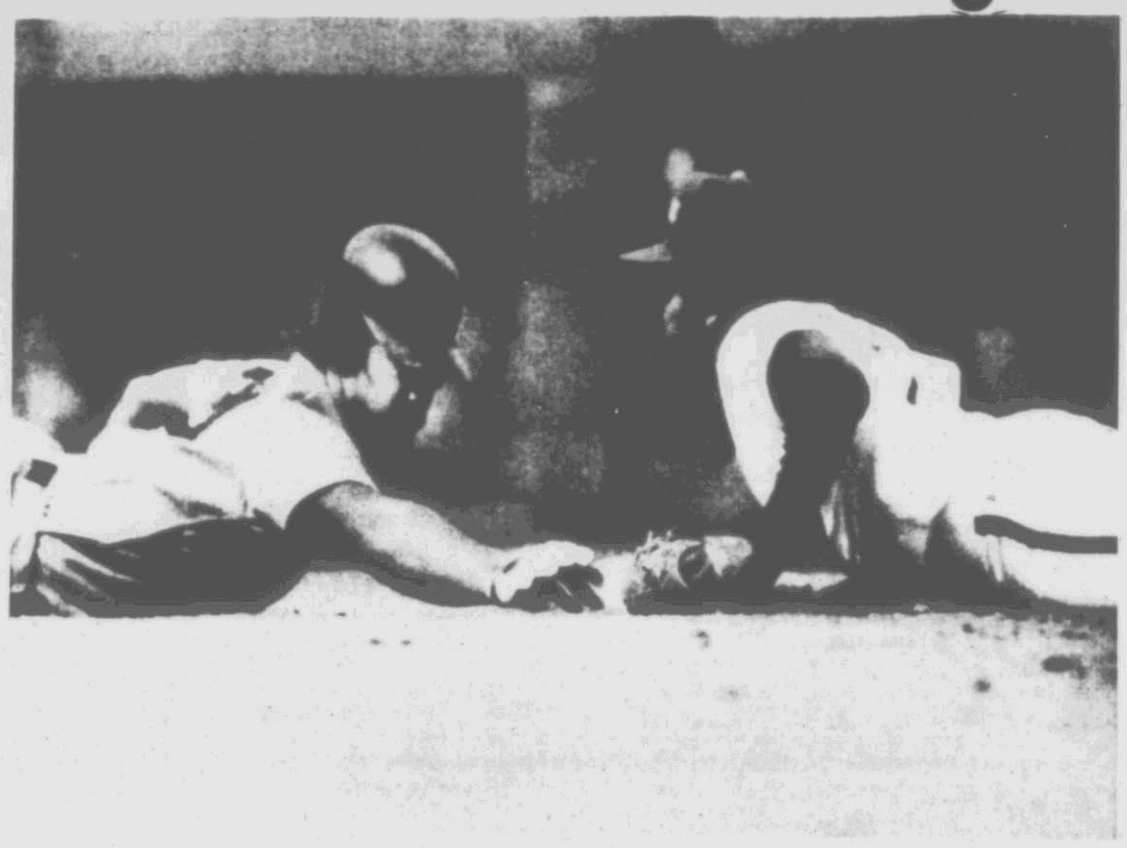

Red Sox 8, White Sox 5

Carney Lansford and Rick Miller, both acquired from California in winter trades, combined for five RBI. Lansford collected four hits, including a two-run homer, and Miller rapped three singles and drove in three runs. Tony Bernazard, Greg Luzinski and Harold Baines homered for the White Sox.

Lansford's first homer of the season followed a walk to Tony Perez and launched a three-run second inning. Gary Allenson doubled and scored on a single by Miller.

Orioles 3, Royals 2

Rich Dauer's bases-loaded double triggered a three-run rally in the eighth inning that sent AL champ Kansas City to its third setback in as many home games. Loser Dennis Leonard, who retired 16 straight batters in one stretch, gave up singles to Gary Roenicke and Terry Crowley to start the eighth. After Al Bumbry's attempted sacrifice bunt turned into a single and loaded the bases, Dauer doubled home two runs to tie the score and Eddie Murray greeted Dan Quisenberry with a sacrifice fly.

Greene Central Nips Hawks, 4-3

SNOW HILL — Chris Suggs' sharp line drive to second in the seventh inning scored Ronnie Tyndall with the winning run as Greene Central nipped North Lenoir, 4-3, Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

The Rams trailed, 3-2, going into the bottom of the seventh but rallied for two runs to capture the victory.

David Shirley started the inning off by reaching on an error. Shirley went to second on Tyndall's single and scored on Jesse Freeman's single.

A passed ball moved both runners up a base and then Suggs sent a sharp line drive to the right side of the infield. The second baseman knocked the ball down but could not make a play as Tyndall came home with the winning run.

North Lenoir led 2-1 after one inning but the Rams tied the game with a run in the bottom of the second. North Lenoir went ahead with a run in the seventh but Greene Central then rallied to win.

Tyndall and Freeman led the Rams at the plate. Both were two for three.

Halfback Walter Payton Top Individual

Survey Says QBs Highest Paid

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quarterbacks made more money than players at other positions in the National Football League last season, but the highest paid individual was running back Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears, an NFL survey shows.

Payton, a six-year veteran, made $475,000 in 1980, which is $74,975 more than the next highest paid player, Miami quarterback Bob Griese, according to figures from a copy of the survey obtained by The San Diego Union and published in Saturday's editions.

The study, which was compiled by the NFL Management Council for the NFL Players Association, does not list names, but ranks salaries according to position and years of experience. Yet some salaries can be matched with players.

The highest paid receiver is known to be New York Jets rookie Johnny "Lam" Jones, who received $264,236. The highest paid defensive lineman figures to be one of the NFL's two 14-year veterans, Alan Page of the Chicago Bears, who made $233,333.

The player with most years of experience, 16-year Denver quarterback Craig Morton, can be singled out as drawing $231,667 last season. The next most seasoned quarterback, Jim Hart of St. Louis, was paid $250,000 in 1980.

There was one 14-year running back, according to the survey — Preston Pearson of Dallas, who was paid $101,250.

The average salary for an NFL player last season was $78,657, the survey indicated, with quarterbacks generally at the upper end of the pay scale and kickers at the bottom rungs.

The survey shows that the average pay for 87 NFL quarterbacks, $131,206, tops by more than 50 percent the next highest paid position, defensive lineman. The 213 defensive lineman earn an average of $85,683.

Running backs were next highest salaried, according to the survey, with 191 ball carriers averaging $83,683. The 229 receivers were paid an average of $75,968, the 281 offensive linemen $74,596, and the 233 linebackers $70,753.

The survey found the lowest paid players on average were defensive backs and kickers. The league's 242 defensive backs earned an average of $68,753, and 56 kickers earned an average of $60,861.

The lowest paid individual players are at least one rookie receiver and one rookie defensive back at the minimum scale of $22,000, the survey shows.

By The Associated Press

One of the most exciting — and rare — plays in hockey climaxed a most exciting Stanley Cup quarterfinal playoff game between the St. Louis Blues and New York Rangers Friday night.

The penalty shot, in which an attacker skates in one-on-one against a goaltender as the rest of the players stand aside, is so special that it nearly always raises the crowd noise to a fevered pitch. And it is so rare that when referee Dave Newell awarded one to the Rangers' Anders Hedberg at 8:29 of the third period, it was only the seventh time it had happened in National Hockey League playoff history.

"You're kidding me," said Hedberg, a speedy right wing and one of hockey's most deadly shots on the breakaway, when told it was the first penalty shot in Stanley Cup action since May 7, 1975.

"I think that's an indication that the referee is very reluctant to call penalty shots," Hedberg said. "But it definitely was the right call. I give him credit for it."

Hedberg's successful shot broke a 3-3 tie and catapulted the Rangers to a 6-4 triumph and a split of the first two games of the series in St. Louis. The teams head to New York for Games 3 and 4 on Sunday and Monday nights, respectively.

Hedberg had gotten behind the Blues' defense and was headed in alone on St. Louis goalie Mike Liut when he was tripped by Jack Brownschidle of the Blues. Newell's arm shot up immediately and he pointed to center ice to signify the first postseason penalty shot since Philadelphia's Bill Barber was stopped by Glenn Resch of the Islanders. The only successful effort was by Wayne Connolly of Minnesota against Los Angeles' Terry Sawchuk on April 9, 1968.

"I faked to the right, then I put a forehand shot between his legs," Hedberg said.

The New York Islanders journey to Edmonton Sunday and Monday, leading the Oilers two games to none after a 6-3 victory Friday; Calgary and Philadelphia are knotted at a game apiece after the Flames won on the Flyers' ice 5-4, and Minnesota won its second straight on Buffalo ice, taking the Sabres 5-2.

The Rangers overcame a 3-1 Blues lead built on first-period goals by Jorgen Pettersson, Larry Patey and Brian Sutter. Barry Beck scored for New York in the stanza.

Dean Talafous got the only goal of the second period, then Jere Gillis pulled New York even just 59 seconds before Hedberg's tally.

Mike Allison pushed the Rangers ahead 5-3 less than 2 minutes later and, after Sutter got his second goal of the game, Ron Duguay beat Liut with 47 seconds remaining.

"I think it's the fatigue more than anything," said Blues Coach Red Berenson. "Last week (a five-game preliminary round series with Pittsburgh) finally caught up with us."

Islanders 6, Oilers 3

The defending champions used a dynamic power play — three goals by Denis Potvin and one by Butch Goring, giving the Islanders 13 power-play tallies in five games and seven against the Oilers — to down Edmonton. It was the first time the Islanders played a close game in these playoffs.

"Our character came out after the second period," said Potvin, noting that the score was 3-3 after 40 minutes. "This was our first real test and we said to ourselves, 'It's a 0-0 game with 20 minutes to go.'"

They went right out and continued their domination of the Oilers' penalty killers, with Potvin scoring the game-winner at 3:47.

"Denis is shooting like a demon," said Goring, who had the team's other power-play goal. "And we're moving the puck around so well that they can't key on one guy."

Flames 5, Flyers 4

Calgary built a 5-2 lead through two periods, then survived a third-period blitz by the Flyers, who scored twice and sent 19 shots at Flames goalie Pat Riggin.

"I'm a lot more confident going home with that win," said Flames Coach Al MacNeil. "But I'm not overconfident. We're not kidding ourselves. This will be a tough series."

Guy Chouinard had three assists for Calgary, while Behn Wilson scored once and set up two goals for the Flyers.

Oil Companies See Lower Sales

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The latest government measure of personal income shows Americans are still being squeezed by rising prices, but are now passing along some of the pain to the oil companies.

The Commerce Department reported Friday the personal income of Americans went up 0.8 percent in March, a tenth of a percent improvement over February. Even by compounding it annually, the rate still would fall a couple of points short of the increase in consumer prices, last measured at 12.1 percent.

But within the latest figures was an interesting revision, as government analysts had to subtract a lot of February's spending on gasoline, oil, food and clothing.

Although total expenditures rose at about the same rate as income, billions of dollars more than first reported were left over to be put into savings. The new savings rate for February was found to be more than $16 billion higher than first reported, reaching $92.3 billion. March estimates had savings increasing by another $100 million, based on estimates.

The oil industry confirmed Americans cut back gasoline purchases, once thought to be relatively "inelastic," through March. The American Petroleum Institute said March gasoline purchases were the lowest for the month in 10 years. The API said in only two of the past 12 years have March purchases been lower than January and February, a sign higher prices are indeed encouraging increased conservation.

In another report Friday, the Commerce Department revised upward slightly its measure of corporate profits for 1980's fourth quarter. The increase over the previous quarter was, before tax, 5 percent, and 3 percent after tax.

Compared to the same quarter a year earlier, before and after tax profits dropped by 2.3 percent.

Dividend payments to stockholders increased by 1.8 percent despite the year-to-year drop in total profits.

Farm Bill May Depend On Soviet Grain Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration could improve the chances of getting its 1981 farm bill through Congress by easing the embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union, a congressional source says.

A well-placed source on the Senate Agriculture Committee said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the committee chairman, told the White House it should make up its mind on the embargo by April 27, the deadline for preparing the farm bill.

"We have explained to the administration what we perceive to be the chances for an administration bill and what it could do to improve its chances," he said. "The central feature is easing of the embargo."

The administration's farm bill, among other things, would give Agriculture Secretary John R. Block more authority in setting price supports, a prerogative Congress has reserved for itself in recent years.

U.S. officials say President Reagan is likely to signal within two weeks his intention of lifting the embargo if the Soviet threat to Poland continues to ease.

"The defusing of tensions in Poland makes it easier to negotiate" with the Soviets on all issues, a State Department official said Friday.

Officials also suggest the administration will disclose its willingness to begin talks with the Soviets aimed at limiting deployment of nuclear weapons in Europe, though actual talks might not begin for some time.

Several senior officials, who asked not to be identified, said in the past week they think the embargo will be lifted soon. This was reinforced in background interviews with both State Department and congressional sources Thursday and Friday.

During the presidential campaign, Reagan pledged to lift the embargo once in office. Now, a high State Department official says April 27, the deadline for the farm bill, is a key date for the administration.

"I assume that's the time when pressures will really be building," the official said.

Rather than lifting the embargo outright, Reagan may only indicate that the United States is willing to talk to the Soviets about their grain needs, the official said.

Since the existing five-year grain sales agreement with the Soviets expires in September, the focus of the administration's action likely is to be on negotiations for a new one.

Secretary of Agriculture John Block has said he is "very confident that prospects are improving" for lifting the embargo. Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, a member of the agriculture committee, said this week he thinks the embargo will be lifted within three weeks.

President Carter imposed the grain embargo on Jan. 4, 1980 in response to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. The embargo blocked shipment of 17 million tons of U.S. grains to the Soviet Union, although the Russians were allowed to buy 8 million tons provided under the five-year agreement that expires in September.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has argued the embargo should not be lifted as long as there was still a threat of Soviet intervention in Poland. U.S. military sources have reported a reduced readiness of Soviet troops around Poland and Haig has said the situation is "considerably improved."

Soviet troops still are "in a high state of readiness" around Poland, the official said.

Due to technical difficulties, a few items normally carried on the business pages are not available today. They will return to their customary position next Sunday.

Patrons May Not Get Vepco Rebates

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — A Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ruling is expected to take the heat off about 20 municipal wholesale customers of the Virginia Electric and Power Company, but rebates may not find their way to consumers.

Rebates were ordered in an April 10 ruling in which the FERC said a 1978 wholesale rate increase by Vepco was too high.

The FERC ruled that a 17.8 percent rate increase the utility put into effect Sept. 1, 1978, was out of line. The agency ordered VEPCO to submit a cost of service study on rate criteria and enter a lower rate request.

But details on how — or if — refunds will be passed on to residential and commercial customers are not clear. Officials said it would depend in part on decisions by individual municipalities.

Many cities and towns in VEPCO's service area have been hard hit by wholesale price increases, absorbing them instead of passing them on to individual customers.

Jack Aulis of ElectriCities, a group representing municipalities in rate cases, said his group's engineers have not had a chance to fully explore the FERC ruling.

"This is only a guess at this point," he said, "but it will mean a refund to our member cities of about $7 million plus interest."

However, Paul Beigbeder, director of resale services for Vepco in Richmond, had reservations. He said Vepco will not know how much the refund will be until the cost of services study is completed.

In Elizabeth City a financially-pressed electric utility fund which nearly buckled under recurring rate increases will get a breather. But city customers probably will get no relief.

East Draws Critical Jab Over Abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, has withdrawn his subcommittee from next week's Senate abortion hearings because he disagrees with the way Sen. John East, R-N.C., plans to conduct the hearings.

Hatch complained that East wanted to give only "superficial" treatment to the anti-abortion bill sponsored by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., according to a Capitol Hill source.

East and Hatch, both abortion opponents, had announced plans to hold hearings Thursday and Friday on the bill. The hearings were to be held jointly by East's Separation of Powers Subcommittee and Hatch's Constitutional Amendments Subcommittee.

Hatch withdrew, saying the hearings were too narrowly focused, the witness list was stacked with anti-abortionists, and constitutional questions were glossed over.

But East maintains that the disagreements were minor and typical of the difficulties inherent in two subcommittees working together.

The Helms bill would legally define life as beginning at conception and would require states to end abortions, except where there is a compelling state interest in taking an unborn life.

When hearings begin next week, they will focus only on the scientific question of when life begins, not the global issue of abortion.

Biographer Gives New Facts About Montgomery

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — Nigel Hamilton is writing the book that thousands of old soldiers around the world will want to read. It's the life of Field Marshal Viscount Bernard Law Montgomery.

Britons, Americans, Canadians, Indians, Australians, New Zealanders, South Africans, Greeks, Poles and Rhodesians fought in World War II under the leader dubbed the greatest British commander since Wellington. Montgomery died in 1976, aged 88.

"Controversy still rumbles around the man," Hamilton, 37, says.

The Cambridge University-educated historian, 9 years old when he first met the field marshal, is the only Montgomery biographer to have full access to his secret papers.

Hamilton's first volume, "Monty: the Making of a General 1887-1942," is being published June 8 in England at $27 and will appear later in the United States.

The 358-page book follows Montgomery through the trenches of World War I to his Alamein victory in Egypt in World War II, the 1942 turning point of the struggle against Hitler in the West.

"Montgomery argued bitterly over strategy with the Americans after the invasion of France in 1944, but I won't say in advance what my findings on that will be. You will have to wait for the second volume," Hamilton says.

The historian's father, Sir Denis Hamilton, chairman of Times Newspapers, was one of Montgomery's young officers.

Once when Montgomery was ill, he summoned Hamilton Sr. to his bedside and asked him to quietly take charge of his papers and appoint a biographer after his death.

"When Monty died, my father asked me if I would like to do the biography," the historian says. "I studied history at Cambridge and wrote the lives of the brothers Heinrich and Thomas Mann. At first I said no, but then my father sounded out people and everyone agreed the biographer shouldn't be one of the old guard, but someone young who could take a fresh look.

"I started looking at the papers, and they are of tremendous interest."

Hamilton says, "Monty wrote to the guardian of his son every three days in World War II, for instance. There are in excess of 20,000 documents, thousands of letters, an operational diary throughout World War II and 44 volumes of diaries for 1945-58."

Montgomery was widely regarded as crusty and vain, a keep-fit fanatic who treated his troops like schoolboys.

Hamilton says the most important clues to his character are in a leather-bound case containing about 60 letters he wrote to his mother from August 1914 to the occupation of Cologne in 1919.

Says Hamilton: "We knew he was a brave young subaltern, that he was badly wounded and posted to the general staff. The letters tell a great deal more at a personal level."

Montgomery is often thought of as an inflexible character but Hamilton says the archives show that he could think things out.

After commanding troops in Ireland in the conflict leading to the establishment of the Irish Free State in 1921, Montgomery — son of an Anglo-Irishman who owned 1,000 Irish acres — wrote to a colleague that there was no way of permanent repression there.

"He didn't believe a national movement which had the support of the people could be put down."

Couple Weds Saturday Evening

FARMVILLE — In a candlelight ceremony performed in Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church here, Dietra Levetta Cobb became the bride of George Andrew Wells III Saturday at 8:30 p.m.

Dr. Joseph R. Person performed the double ring ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by Benjamin Johnson of Goldsboro, organist, and Ms. Regina Taylor of New Haven, Conn., vocalist.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cobb Sr. of Farmville and Mr. George Wells Jr. of Opelika, Ala., and the late Mrs. Wells.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white chiffon over peau de soie. The empire bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline, keyhole back with sculptured chantilly lace and embellished with bridal pearls. Chantilly lace enhanced the bishop sleeves with cuffs of matching lace. The flowing skirt was bordered at the hemline with motifs of lace. Her fingertip mantilla of silk illusion was attached to a Camelot cap accented with chantilly lace and bridal pearls. She carried a bouquet of carnations, daisies and an orchid interspersed with baby's breath.

Marilyn Williams of Hillcrest Heights, Md., was maid of honor and matrons of honor were Dr. Alma C. Hobbs of Nashville, Tenn. and Marie C. Gay of New Haven, Conn., sisters of the bride, and Jennifer S. Cobb of Farmville, sister-in-law of the bride. Bridesmaids included Gail Cowan of Knoxville, Tenn., Renee Gay of New Haven, Conn., niece of the bride, Dr. Thomasine Hardy of Washington, D. C., Selma Prestwidge of Jamacia, N. Y., cousin of the bride, Francine Smith of Norwalk, Conn., Hilda Smith of Farmville, Dorothy Wooten of Greenville, cousin of the bride, and Nancy Wooten of Goldsboro.

Flower girls included Jolali Prestwidge and Jabaria Allen of Jamacia, N. Y., cousins of the bride. Train bearer was Tarka Wooten of Greenville, cousin of the bride.

The honor attendants were each dressed in a formal gown of green chiffon over green crepe styled with narrow straps on the underdress, long sleeves, rounded neckline and a tie sash accented the gathered skirt.

They wore baby's breath in their hair and carried a long-stemmed mum tied with ribbon matching their gowns. Other attendants were dressed like the honor attendants in pink gowns and also wore baby's breath in their hair. The flower girls wore formal white dresses trimmed in lace and the train bearer wore a formal pink dress. The flower girls carried a white lace baskets filled with pastel green and pink flower petals.

Mrs. Ernestine Wooten directed the wedding.

The mother of the bride wore a formal pink dress and an orchid corsage while the aunt of the bridegroom selected a pastel green formal gown and an orchid corsage.

The couple will live in New Haven, Conn., after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

The bride graduated from North Carolina Central University, Durham, with a B.S. degree and has a M.S. from Southern Connecticut State University. He also has a six-year administrative and supervisor degree. Both are employed by the New Haven Board of Education.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Someone did a survey on singles and found out they don't "swing" as much as marrieds.

Is that supposed to give me something to live for? Besides, I don't for a minute buy it. You think I'm naive?

I've seen all those Jill Clayburgh movies where she's breaking away and starting all over again. That girl never has to do so much as carry her own matches. She goes into a bar, takes out a cigarette and is illuminated like a shrine.

She gets propositioned as she jogs and she can't eat a solitary meal without the phone ringing off the hook. As someone who had to write a check to get to the prom, I'm impressed.

I'm not saying marriage is without its drama, but a few weeks ago, I was waiting for a plane when I heard a woman talking about her late husband. She said the house is so quiet. There is no one to talk to . . . no one to fix things . . . no one whose presence you feel as you sleep . . . no one at the table to share your food or your day and no one who moves or makes you feel alive.

She had just described my husband watching the bowl games on New Year's Day.

I don't care what the survey says. I find myself living vicariously through Jill Clayburgh as she fights off unwanted suitors and struggles to find out who she really is.

I've done a lot of thinking about it and the "swinging single" lifestyle is not the downer they want us to believe. I base this on an observation I made on what time marrieds get into their night clothes in the evening.

In the early years of marriage, you were out so late a bathrobe was something you hung on the bathroom door.

Five or six years of marriage and eventually you both appeared in your jammies and scuffies around 10 or 11 when you were sure no one was going to drop by unexpectedly.

After 30 years of marriage, my husband and I are out of confining waistbands right after dinner, sitting around in pajamas and robes in front of the TV set so that when we fall asleep we don't have to risk waking up by getting dressed for bed.

Jill Clayburgh doesn't own a pair of pajamas.

I rest my case.

HAM NOTES

Why cook "fully cooked" ham?

This step is advised because it seems to enhance the flavor of the ham, says Rachel Kinlaw, extension food specialist, North Carolina State University.

If you're planning to glaze a ham, remove the rind first, if there is any. Glaze it during the last half hour of cooking.

Dear Abby

She Says No To Request

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are to be married soon, but we have one large problem. Religion!

I love my church and my religion. He never goes to his church and doesn't really care about it. When we get married, he wants me to change religions because he doesn't like what mine is. He says he will give up his religion for any other if I will also give up mine. Abby, for him to give up his religion is nothing big, but for me to give up mine would be like giving up a very important part of my life.

I told him, "No, I will not change, and I am not asking you to." I don't care if he stays what he is, but I want to stay what I am.

ALMOST MARRIED

DEAR ALMOST: Yes. Unless you want to be married to a man who is selfish, unfair and insensitive to your spiritual needs.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for five months and I'm just about all in. I think my husband is trying to set a record. You never saw a guy with so much pep!

I said to him last night, "I do believe you married me just to have somebody to sleep with regularly." He said, "Sure, dummy. What else would a man get married for?"

I took it as a put-down. He said it was a compliment. What would you call it?

LUCILLE

DEAR LUCILLE: Stupidity.

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a man who is charming, attractive, intelligent and holds a responsible position at a bank. We've dated several times and relate to each other very well, but he has one strange idiosyncrasy that bothers me. He will not shake hands with anyone. It's very awkward when someone extends a hand to greet him and he keeps his arms folded. He compensates with an enthusiastic greeting and a very warm smile, but he will not shake hands!

He has held my hand (in a movie) and doesn't seem afraid to touch me, but his refusal to shake hands with people puzzles me. Is there something seriously wrong with him? I am very much interested in this man, and he seems equally interested in me.

CONCERNED IN SYRACUSE

DEAR CONCERNED: The man is clearly a mysophobiac — one who has an abnormal fear of contamination. He needs to shake hands with a competent therapist.

INFORMAL BUFFET
Glazed Ham Spinach Noodles
Brown Betty Coffee

SPINACH NOODLES

Our version is lower in calories than the recipe originally given for this dish.

- 8 ounce cream cheese
- 2 large eggs
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 8 ounces (about 1 cup) whole milk ricotta cheese
- 3 cups cooked broad egg noodles (2½ cups or 5 ounces uncooked)
- 10 ounce package frozen chopped spinach, cooked according to directions and well drained
- 3 tablespoons butter, melted and mixed with 2 tablespoons fine dry bread crumbs

In a large bowl of electric mixer at medium speed, beat together the cream cheese with the eggs, sugar and salt until blended. With a spoon, stir in ricotta, noodles and spinach. Turn into a buttered glass 9-inch square baking dish. Sprinkle with the buttered crumb mixture. Bake in a preheated 375 degree oven until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean — about 30 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

Replace Cloths With Placemats

Placemats offer an alternative to tablecloths in setting a mood for dining.

There is such a variety of easy-care fabrics available that a collection of mats for different occasions can range from the very casual to the most formal, says Linda McCutcheon, extension house furnishings specialist, NCSU.

When buying placemats, check the label for specific laundering instructions. Fabric mats should be treated the same as tablecloths — remove spots and stains as soon as possible and launder frequently. Vinyl placemats should be sponged and dried before storing.

Keep Kitchen Fan Clean

A dirty kitchen fan doesn't operate at peak performance and may even be a safety hazard says Charlotte Womble, extension housing specialist, NCSU.

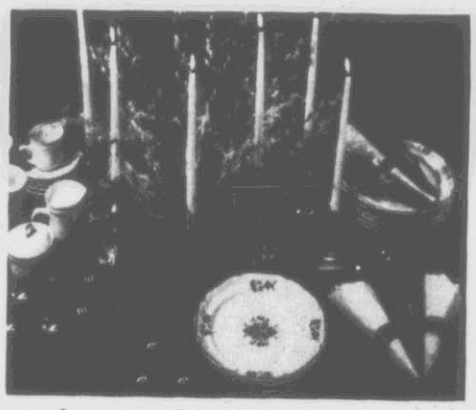

Outer surfaces of the hood can be kept clean as part of regular kitchen care but other parts should be cleaned regularly before grease and dirt buildup becomes hard to remove.

Be sure the fan is off and cool before cleaning. Remove the screen or filter and wash in detergent or soap suds. Clean the fan and duct work with a suds-dampened sponge or cloth and rinse with a clean, damp sponge or cloth. Polish dry with a soft, clean cloth.

Daters Use New 'Cupid'

By CHRIS CHRYSTAL

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Single people combing the big city crowds for a desirable date often discover they are difficult to find.

Trolling the bars for attractive, interesting men and women to go out with is expensive, time consuming, and usually futile, according to Jay Ullman, who has built a business of getting people together.

Ullman, 32, created Great Expectations, an aptly named method of finding a date, which he insists is not a dating service, computerized dating or matchmaking. It is video dating that makes the old "blind" date obsolete.

Its creator likes to refer to the selection process as an "electronic cupid."

He got the idea, he says, from his frustrated friends.

"We are programmed to look for 10s," Ullman said of singles in America. "My friends were not losers, they were busy, active people, professionals who were tired of looking in all the wrong places for the right person."

At Great Expectations, he said, "you see more singles in an hour than you could meet in a year."

There, clients find their own dates in a system that one young woman said was "like going into a candy store."

It's spreading, Ullman said. Franchised branches have opened under other names in San Jose, San Diego, and Denver.

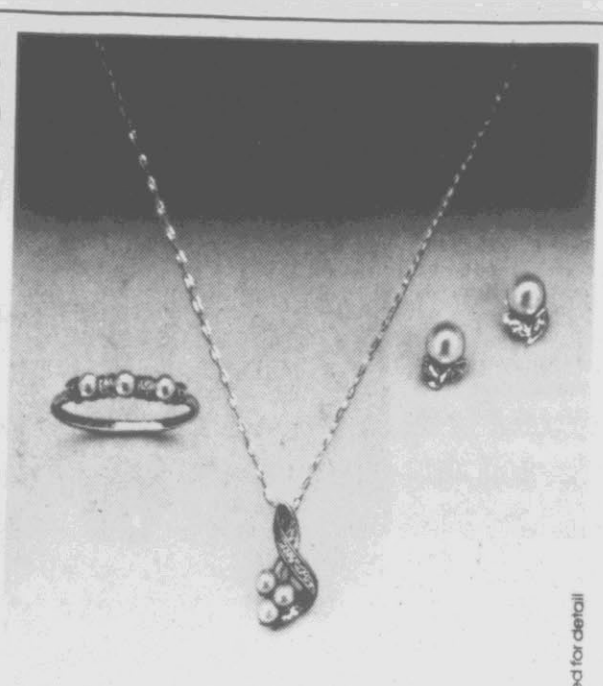

Single men and women pay nearly $400 to join Great Expections, and annual $200 renewal fees to entitle them to continue making date selections. The fee offers members the chance to peruse photo albums containing snapshots and personal information on a first-name-only basis about all other members of the opposite sex.

When they find someone interesting, they enter a private booth in the firm's offices and watch a videotape of their prospective date being interviewed by Ullman.

Members meet only by mutual consent.

Fund Raising Changes Politics

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

FALLS CHURCH, Va. (AP) — In a standard blue-and-white computer room here, Richard Viguerie squirrels away his bread and butter and his obsession: names.

Twenty-five million in all, with addresses, are here, organized by congressional district and willingness to give money to conservative candidates or causes, painstakingly collected over 16 years and stored on 4,200 computer tapes.

"I used to say this was the most important room in America to conservatives," Viguerie says. "That was before Ronald Reagan moved into the Oval Office."

This is the nerve center of what is called the New Right. To the faithful on these tapes, Viguerie plans to mail 100 million letters this year, asking them for money, urging them to sign a petition, pressing them to send a postcard to a congressman. But this room is more — it is a spawning ground of innovation in American politicking.

Direct mail has long been part of the electoral process, but when Viguerie came along in the mid '60s he infused new life into what had often been a small-scale, stuff-lick-and-stamp activity for volunteers. He was among the first political activists to replace 3-by-5 note cards in shoeboxes with high-speed computers. He adapted to politics the marketing techniques of commercial direct mailers. He envisioned the letter as a tool to inform people and to induce them to take action, as well as to tap their pocketbooks. And he methodically stockpiled names in the long winter of his political discontent.

Along with television, direct mail has pre-empted courthouse step oratory as the medium of politics.

Century-Old Tradition Gives 'Spirit' To Kansas Community

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

LINDSBORG, Kan. (AP) — In that frozen winter of 1881, the newcomers found themselves battling loneliness as fierce as the prairie wind that howled through the cracks in their sod houses.

Sweden — its comforts and camaraderie — was thousands of miles behind them. For a small band of immigrants trying to make a future with their own hands, the past was done. A new life was unfolding like a transplanted garden flower bursting into bloom in the wilderness.

The Rev. Carl and Alma Swensson knew there was no money for luxuries and little time for frivolity. But they and their neighbors were hungry for food for the spirit. From that craving, the Swedes nurtured a dream and brought forth music for the soul.

This Holy Week, the descendants of those dreamers will again reap the annual reward of their ancestors' vision. Thousands will pour into this central Kansas agricultural community of 7,500 to hear an amateur choir give the 100th anniversary performance of George Frederick Handel's magnificent "Messiah" oratorio.

Millions more will tune in Easter Sunday to see it on the Public Broadcasting System.

The Swensson's small seeds of hope, sown a century ago, have taken root to become one of the most remarkable homegrown festivals of music in the world.

Every spring since 1882, a choir composed of farmers, store owners, housewives, doctors, lawyers, mechanics, sales clerks — men and women from every walk of life — have stood together after months of rehearsals to present the "Messiah" in Lindsborg, or one of the surrounding small towns.

The moment Carl Swensson heard Handel's classic at commencement at Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill., in 1881, he decided his friends and fellow parishioners should lift up their own voices in song.

His wife, a gifted musician, enthusiastically undertook to bring his goal to fruition. She overcame such obstacles as trying to teach the English words to immigrants who spoke only Swedish. She devised a numbering system above the notes to help singers who couldn't read music. She needed musicians but didn't have any locally, so she imported the orchestra from Augustana College.

Her first choir, about 75 farmers and their wives, came by horseback or lumber wagon over unmarked trails to gather in a little stone Lutheran church or each other's homes to practice the masterpiece.

The concerts were planned to provide financial support for fledgling Bethany Academy, founded in October 1881.

Spring activities at Rose this week included cheerleading try-outs, more math contests and club elections.

Try-outs for junior varsity cheerleading were held Monday after school. A panel of judges rated the girls on coordination, voice, appearance, pep and originality. Members of the j.v. squad include Camille Cox, Michelle Darden, Erma Billander, Amanda Manning, Grayson Morris, Sheryl Nadeau, Kathy Nobles, Karie Seykora, Daphne Swayze, Nan Thompson, Tiffany Vaughn, Lisa Whichard, Elizabeth White and Carolyn Williams.

The following afternoon the varsity squad consisting of upcoming juniors and seniors was chosen. New members are Wanda Daughtry, Hih Song Kim, Gena Heath, Lori Little, Lisa Kittrell, Caroline Lee, Jenny Frink, Harriet Morris, Beverly Tedder, Elizabeth Longino, Wendi Terrell, Kim McGlohon, Eegee White, Katherine White and Virginia White.

A team of Rose students attended a regional math contest held April 9 at ECU. Additionally, Michael Tucker received fifth place in the comprehensive division, which tests students currently taking Algebra III and higher math courses. Rose's comprehensive team took third place overall with Mark Shannon winning third place in the individual competition.

Another math contest was held at Elizabeth City State University Tuesday. Rose students captured the top five places in comprehensive. Winners included Jeri Walter, first place, Beth Carlton, second, Amy Winchester, third, Daniel Scharf, fourth, and Alayna Keller, fifth. Walter and Carlton qualified for the state finals with Winchester serving as alternate.

Key Club members at a meeting Wednesday night elected officers for next year. Keith Stocks will serve as president with John Ormond, vice president, John Little, secretary, Jonathan McGee, treasurer and Scott Wilson, sergeant-at-arms. Members also finalized plans for their move-a-thon for the American Diabetes Association to be held April 25.

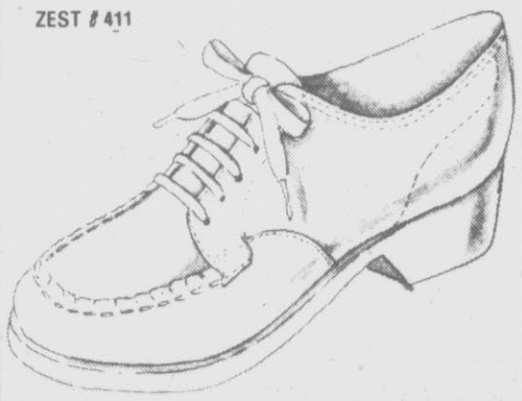

The Health Occupations Students of America sponsored an "Evening with Desert Fire" at Wahl-Coates Elementary School April 11. Desert Fire is a middle eastern dance troupe whose performance included their famous candle and sword dances. All proceeds from the event went to the March of Dimes.

Their Job :To Give Away $40 Million Each Year

By DAVID SMOTHERS
UPI Senior Editor

CHICAGO (UPI) — There are 13 men in Chicago who have $800 million or so kicking around and are obliged to give away $40 million of it every year.

They could give some of it to you. But not very likely.

Their trouble is they have all this money and the law compels them to get rid of it at stated intervals. The money came to them so quickly that they hardly know what to do with it.

The money's source is, or was, an irascible, profane ex-police reporter who ran his business from a table in the coffee shop of the Colonnades Beach Hotel in Palm Beach Shores, Fla.

He owned the hotel, of course — even carried bags there. He owned much of the town.

He was John D. MacArthur, sole owner of Bankers Life and Casualty Co. of Chicago and, until the moment of his death on Jan. 6, 1978, at the age of 80, one of the two billionaires left in America.

He was a generous man, by all repute. Once he threw away $25,000 to ransom and rescue a ruby stolen from the American Museum of Natural History. But he was not really a great philanthropist.

Yet, before he died, he stipulated that, after his family was taken care of, the rest of his fortune should be given away.

"I'll do what I know best and make it," he once said. "You fellows will have to learn how to spend it."

There is speculation whether MacArthur had any compelling wish to benefit mankind with his millions. It appears as likely that he just did not want the government to get hold of his money.

John E. Corbally never met MacArthur. But he has met a lot of men who did. Corbally is past president of the Universities of Illinois and Syracuse and the man in charge, as president of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, of giving away MacArthur's money.

He is a fair, well groomed, slicked back kind of man of precise speech.

"From what I've heard of John MacArthur, he was not a great admirer of the way in which people of great wealth were taxed in this country," Corbally said.

"One would have to be very honest and say that creation of a foundation was one way that he hoped that his funds might be used other than by government. My feeling ... was that he did not want this very large estate to be confiscated through taxation.

"He therefore selected a group of his close associates, and his widow and his son, and indicated that instead of letting this estate go the tax route it was going to the foundation and he hoped they would do good with it.

"... It's almost as simple as that. He didn't have a great philanthropic goal. He didn't have a great ideal that he wanted to accomplish. He simply wanted his associates, his colleagues, to still be able to distribute his money."

That leaves the 13 men to rid themselves of MacArthur's millions. They must be quick about it. Federal law requires that they give away $40 million of it — or 5 percent — every year, whether or not they are certain where it should go.

There is another worry, because the foundation owns Bankers Life and Casualty outright, just as did MacArthur.

The law says a foundation cannot own more than 20 percent of a corporation. That means the foundation must succeed in clearing its skirts of 80 percent of its holdings by Nov. 30, 1983.

While the money, as represented in stocks, sits there, it accrues more money. The extra money is basically what the foundation is giving away. If it did otherwise, the foundation would eventually go broke.

As it stands, the foundation ranks as the fourth largest of the great American giveaway establishments. But it is not always easy to throw away $40 million a year.

The board has, Corbally said, a few basic ideas on how to go about it.

One of them: Don't scatter the money around.

If MacArthur's $800 million were split up between everybody in the country, it would come to about $3 a person.

The only proper function of a foundation, according to general belief, is to make an impact for the common good. Even $40 million a year, Corbally said, "if you just pass it around to 500 things, you don't make any impact.

"We keep trying to find things that we're interested in so we can put fairly large amounts of money into fairly well defined programs and hope to make a real difference in a few things rather than kind of toss the money out on the winds."

He noted Henry Ford quit the board of the Ford Foundation he had founded because he said it was spending the money in too many places and, besides, he did not always like where it was going.

For now, the MacArthur board has come up with two big spending ideas.

One is a Prize Fellows Program to "honor a small number of exceptionally talented individuals who have given evidence of originality and dedication to creative pursuits."

The other is a broad-gauged study of what to do about one of nation's greatest mental health problems: depression.

"(Depression) is like having a cold instead of the flu, I guess," Corbally said. "It's something that affects almost all of us ... something not very popular, not very appealing."

While these ideas are getting off the drawing boards, the foundation still has to give away money.

Even though MacArthur never told his foundation what to do, the custodians of his wealth think it right to act more or less as they think he would have wished.

ATW Is Presenting 'Camelot'

"Camelot," Alan Jay Lerner's and Frederick Loewe's hit musical, is the next offering of the Ayden Theater Workshop (ATW). Doug Mitchell is director.

Three performances of "Camelot" are scheduled at Ayden-Grifton High School — at 8 p.m. on Thursday and Saturday, April 23 and April 25, and at 3 p.m. on Sunday, April 26.

Admission is $2 per person, and tickets will be available at the door prior to the performance hour.

Members of the cast are Allen Trader, as King Arthur, England's chivalrous and idealistic king. This is Trader's debut performance with the Ayden Theater Workshop. Among his acting credits are several roles in Kinston-Lenoir Community Theater productions and appearnces with the ECU Summer Theater.

Heidi Anderson Lane, who has been seen in several previous Workshop plays as well as in ECU Playhouse productions and in commercial television, has the role of Guenevere, the lass who is King Arthur's future queen.

Jeffrey Krantz portrays the romantic role of Lancelot, the perfect and invincible knight. Krantz, a graduate of ECU with a voice major, played Matt in the recent ATW production of "Fantasticks." He has also appeared in ECU Opera Theater presentations, and studied voice in Europe.

The role of Pellinore, the comic old knight in rusty armor, is assigned to Marcus Carraway. Carraway was Colonel Pickering in ATW's "My Fair Lady" and Senator Rawkins in "Finian's Rainbow."

Taking the parts of the Three Knights, strongest in the realm, are Chris Phillips as Sir Dinadan, John Williams as Sir Lionel and Joey Pollock as Sir Sagramore. Phillips is a veteran player with ATW. Williams, a guitarist, singer, magician and clown, is making his acting debut with ATW in "Camelot." Pollock is also a veteran ATW actor and was director of "The Fantasticks."

Others in the cast are Don Watson as Merlyn, Arthur's magician and teacher; Ken Seufert as Mordred, the evil son of Arthur; and Christie Braswell in the role of Morgan Le Fey, an enchantress.

Several new faces are included in the cast and chorus. An orchestra, directed by Ron Payne, director of the Ayden-Grifton High School Band, will accompany the production. Doug Mitchell designed the set, which was built and painted by members of the Ayden-Grifton Set Design Class.

GUENEVERE AND LANCELOT . . . two of the two romantic interests in "Camelot," are being played by Heidi Anderson Lane and Jeffrey Krantz. The musical opens Thursday, April 23 at 8 p.m. at Ayden-Grifton High School, and will be presented also at 8 p.m. on Saturday, April 25 and at 3 p.m. on Sunday, April 26. Tickets, priced at $2 per person, will be available at the door prior to curtain time. (Photo by Meg Hill)

L'il Abner Next At Rose High

Al Capp's brawny, lovable child-like character, L'il Abner, his parents, Mammy and Pappy Yokum, his girl Daisy Mae and an assortment of original oddball characters form the hills were put into a rollicking play by Norman Panama and Melvin Frank some years ago. The musical score is by Joynny Mercer and Gene de Paul.

Now, this fast-paced, foot tapping show with lilting songs and cornball humor is to be presented by members of the Rose High Drama Club for three performances, May 1, 2 and 3, as its spring 1981 offering.

The play deals with efforts of Dogpatch to keep their twon from being used as an "A-Tom" bomb testing site. In order to be successful, the citizens of this rustic hideaway must find something in their home town that's "necessary." If this cannot be done, the townspeople must be evacuated — which they feel would be a tragedy, mainly because it would interrupt Sadie Hawkins Day, that one time each year when girls can chase down boys and claim them for their own (as husbands).

The "necessary" item turns out to be Mammy Yokum's Yokumberry Tonic (a body building formula) — but even when this is decided, there's still lots of complications in store for Dogpatchers, with no assurance of the town being spared. It is only with the discovery of a document from Abraham Lincoln in the accidentally knocked down statue of Jubilation T. Cornpone, declaring the statue a national shrine, that Dogpotch's salvation is assured.

Cast members at Rose taking part in this happy-ending play are Stuart Ward as L'il Abner; Karen Wheeler as Daisy Mae; Alison Kee and Shaun Wallace in the roles of Mammy and Pappy Yokum; and Johnny Jackson as Earthquake McGoon.

Other cast members are Chip Little as Marryin' Sam; Mike Thurber in the role of Mayor Daugmeat; Jeff Jones, Seantor Jack S. Phogbound; Brian Berryman as Dr. Rassmussen T. Finsdale; Anne Halevy, Appassionata Von Climax; and Tim Shank as General Bullmoose.

There Is No Way To Eliminate Home Fires

It's your business to protect yourself from fire!

All of the above articles pertain to fires that have occured here in Eastern North Carolina in just the past few months! If you analyze these fires you will see that they have four things in common.

1. If they involve injury or death, they usually occur at night.
2. They generally seem to involve women and children.
3. They are accidental fires; carelessness has little to do with them.
4. THEY ARE ALL UNEXPECTED. Let's face it—no one believes they are going to have a fire.

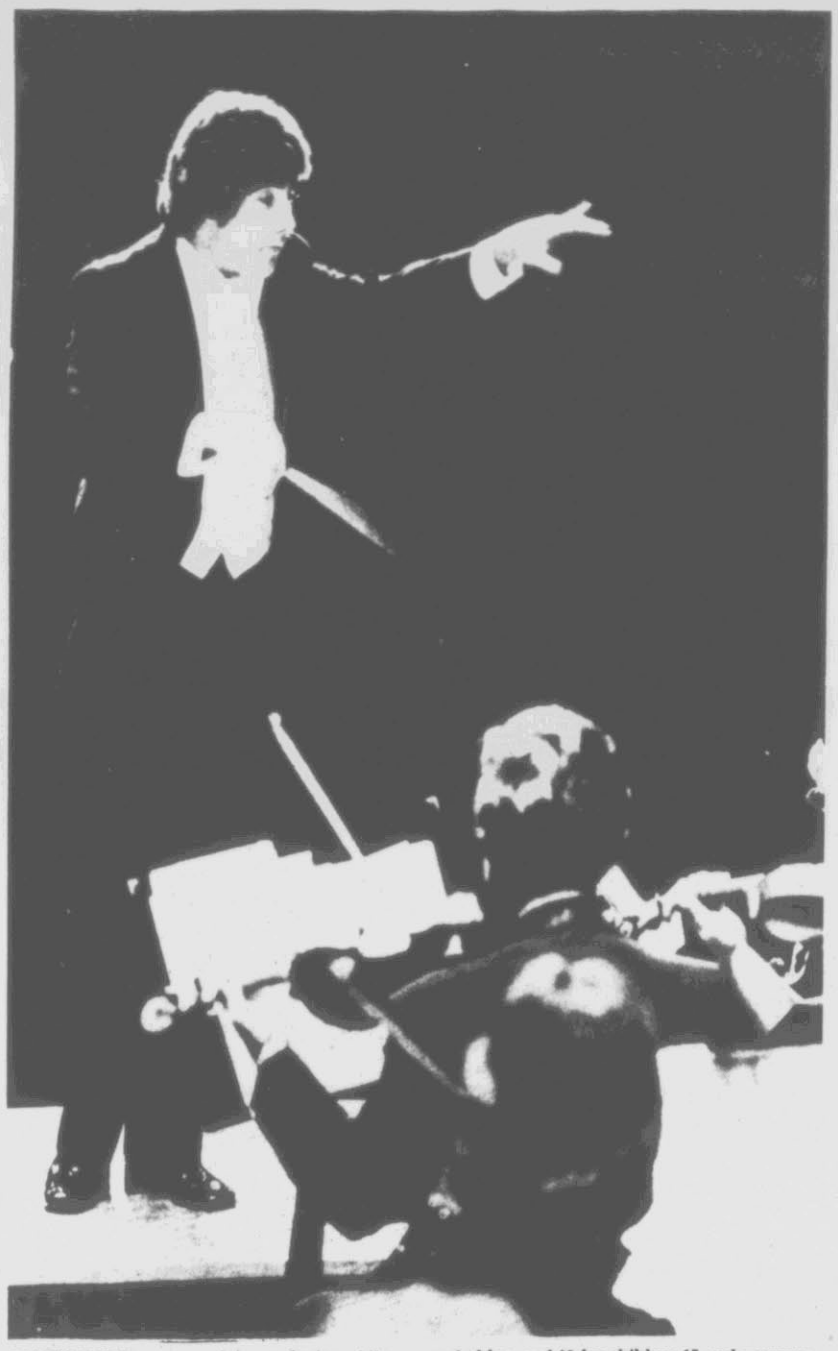

The National Commission on Fire Prevention and Control states "One American family in ten will experience some form of fire this year."

Save The Cigar Bands

NEW YORK (AP) — Empty the nails, nuts and bolts from your cigar boxes and dust off those old makeshift storage bins. And, while you're at it, save your cigar bands.

Both cigar by-products are becoming collectibles — and they may be worth something some day.

They may even be worth something today although the value is difficult to establish, says the Cigar Association of America.

Part of the reason for this difficulty is that cigar-item collectors are what auctioneers call "esoteric." In the World Almanac's "Book of Buffs," cigar-band collector Myron Freedman is quoted as calling cigar-band enthusiasts, "secret collectors. They don't let other people know about what they collect."

Several collections are known to exceed 100,000 cigar bands. Cigar boxes, particularly those of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, are also found in collections around the country.

Auction galleries have sold cigar band and box collections, but — at the request of participants — they won't disclose the prices.

Unusual Employee

By PATRICIA H. WALSH

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — The city of Phoenix has a ventriloquist on its payroll.

Dan Horn, 22, who is under contract with the city and paid with federal funds, will earn up to $18,000 this year by teaching children traffic safety rules through ventriloquism.

Writing most of his own material and using mostly homemade cloth puppets, Horn can entrance 200 fidgety kids.

He fell into part-time work for the city after performing at a 1979 city summer festival. By September he was under contract with the city's traffic safety program.

He has his own teaching method.

"I horse around with the audience. I want them to have fun."

He tells the children, "We're going to have a giant math test."

Since no one has paper or a pencil, he agrees on a show instead.

"Today we're going to talk about... traffic safety!"

The crowd groans.

"Okay," he says, "everybody say 'unnnh' like you've got a stomach ache."

He tells them to make that sound when he talks about getting hurt in a traffic accident.

With 91-year-old Orson, one of his homemade puppets, Horn asks the audience to yell "Orson" to awaken the puppet when he falls asleep, which is often.

As a result, deafening shouts of "Orson!" interrupt Horn's narrative as the puppet slowly slumps forward and begins to snore.

Some teachers get upset because he allows the children to shout. But Horn said it keeps the children's attention.

"They know any second Orson may fall asleep again. Every eye is up there."

Flowers, Music For Outdoor Garden Event

LOUISBURG — Franklin County's eighth outdoor Botanical Garden Concert is to be held Sunday, April 26, from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Greencroft Gardens near Royal Crossroads on highway 401 six miles south of Louisburg.

The afternoon event is a combination of music, wildflower garden tours, wilderness tours, and refreshments. There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

Concert performers are Cindy Hall, flutist from Roanake Rapids; Jon Snyder, French horn player from Chicago, Illinois; Rebecca Gaskin, harpist, Raleigh; and guitarist Alicia Butler from Louisburg. These performers and others, including a children's choir, are to be spaced along the trails to provide music as a complement to the natural environments.

Special tours on the Wilderness Trail begin at 3 p.m. These provide areas for bird habitats, rock outcroppings, a flood plain, a natural waterfall, and pristine beechnut groves. The distance covered is about two miles.

The annual Botanical Garden Concert is sponsored by Allen de Hart, owner and designer of Greencroft Gardens; local garden clubs; and the Biology Department of Louisburg College.

Greencroft has the largest variety of wild flowers in any private garden in eastern North Carolina. More than 1,000 species have been identified and half of that number have been labeled.

ADT Establishes New Dance Award

DURHAM — American Dance Festival (ADF) president Charles Reinhart has announced establishment of a $25,000 annual award for choreographers who have made a significant life-time contribution to the field of American modern dance.

The award, the result of a gift from Samuel H. Scripps, marks the first of its kind in the history of American modern dance, and the largest sum ever to be awrded annually to a dance artist.

Founder and former president of the American Society for Eastern Arts, Scripps has been involved in the performing arts thoughout his career. He first became involved with the American Dance Festival in 1977 when he and his wife Louise worked with Reinhart in establishing a summer residency at the ADF for Balasaraswati.

The award will be presented annually at the discretion of a specially appointed panel. The first panel will be appointed within a short time, and the name of the 1981 winner of the award will be announced in June.

NCSA Schedules Dance Program

WINSTON-SALEM — Three ballets and a modern dance work will be presented by the School of Dance, North Carolina School of the Arts beginning Tuesday, April 21 through Sunday, April 16.

Performances will be nightly at 8:15 p.m. with an additional performance as a Sunday matinee at 2 p.m., with all performances to be held in the Agnes de Mille Theater.

Tickets are priced at $5 for adults, and $3 for senior citizens and students.

Works being presented are "Prodigal Son," staged by Roman Jasinski from choreogrphy by David Lichine with music by Sergei Prokofiev; the "Graduation Ball," with choreography by David Lichine, restaged by Enrique Martinez, to the music of Johann Strauss; and "Une Nuit A Lisbonne," with music by Camille Saint-Saens. Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Louise Perry

Whether they are teachers, parents or grandparents, all people concerned with the raising and educating of children will be interested in Sheppard's recent acquisitions on this subject.

"Teaching School: Points Picked Up" by Eric W. Johnsonis isa book for anyone who is teaching, wants to teach or knows a teacher. In contrast to the scholarly research materials available on teaching, this book is a practical book of suggestions of "new ways to teach better."

For teachers new to the job, it provides ideas for combining eagerness, subject knowledge and enjoyment of kids into good teaching. For the experienced, tired or discouraged teacher, it suggests fresh ideas, new perspectives and examples on how to improve or enrich their teaching.

The book deals with all aspects of teaching from establishing order and routine on the very first day, to making and grading tests, setting up the classroom, making lesson plans in the shortest possible time, and many more useful topics. In addition, there are helpful chapters on planning a year's work, a unit and special projects and assignments.

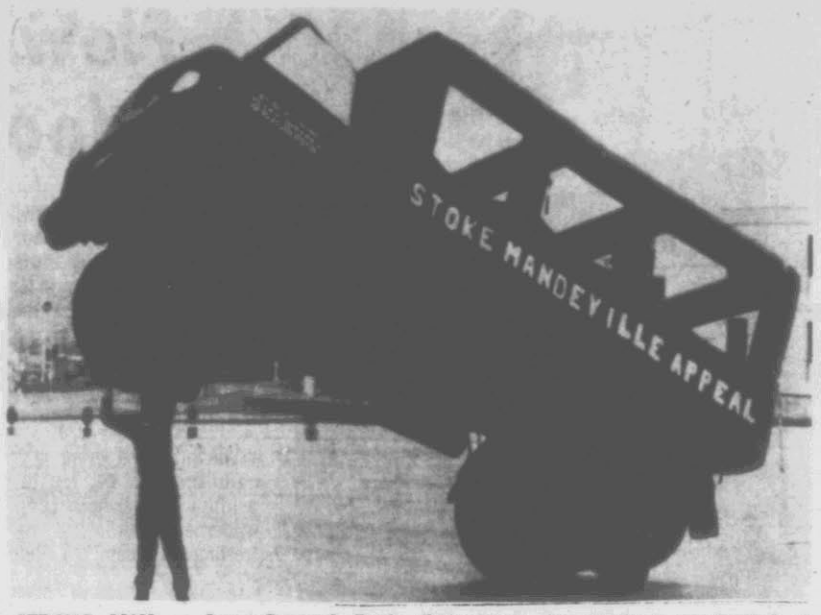

Also an invaluable aid to teachers and parents alike, "Helping the Fearful Child" by Dr. Jonathan Kellerman is a guide to both everyday and problem anxieties.

Dr. Kellerman has been in private practice as a pediatric psychologist and at the Children's Hospital of Los Angeles. After treating numerous young patients with problematic anxiety, he saw how quickly such difficulties could be resolved if certain principals of human learning could be applied.

Though reference is made to adolescents, the focus of the book is on the child from toddler through the pre-teen years. Clear distinction is made between fears that are normal, when it may be best to do nothing and those fears that could lead to long-term emotional difficulties. One chapter deals with the effects of television, while another provides information about professional help for children with serious disorders.

"How To Grandparent" is a marvelous book filled with fun and educational ways to enjoy being a grandparent. Author Dr. Fitzhugh Dodson stresses the loss resulting from the old extended family and the deficiences of the nuclear family consisting of only parents and children.

He urges parents, grandparents and children to form a new "extended family" where grandparents may take an equal interest and responsibility for their grandchildren. Included is a grandparents' guide to toys and play equipment, children's books and records.

STRONG MAN — Lance-Corporal Devin Wynne, 22, of the Royal Corps of Transport, appears to be in line for the world's strongest man title as he lifts this army "truck" aloft with one hand at the Buller Barracks at Aldershot, England, But Kevin is not really that strong, the vehicle is constructed of inflatable rubber and its real use is to deceive enemy reconnaissance. The inflatable was used this week to raise funds for television personality Jimmy Savile's Stoke Mandeville Hospital appeal.(AP Laserphoto)

Are 'Soaps' Better Than Nighttime TV?

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Erwin "Nick" Nicholson probably is fighting a losing battle. The term "soap opera," after all, is as historic as the radio days echo of "Oxydol's Own Maw Perkins," but he does hate to see his beloved "Edge of Night" smeared with suds.

"'Soap opera,' to me, sometimes conjures up the worst in drama," he said last week on the eve of his show's 25th birthday. "But I've got to tell you — we're better than nighttime shows. Daytime in general does more challenging stuff. We have better actors and better writing.

"If you want to call us anything, call us a daytime serial."

Whatever the label, in television it spells "phenomenon."

The millions who watch what Nicholson produces couldn't care less. For them, "Edge of Night" and the competing "As the World Turns," which also turned 25 on April 2, smack of holy ritual. They immerse themselves in the story line, year in and year out, and they, or many of them, believe.

Few in the prime time audience believe there really is an Archie Bunker, but plenty of afternoon afficianados of the tube believe there really is a Nancy Carr.

"Now Nancy Carr is really Anne Flood Granath," said Nicholson. "But if she's out in Des Moines or someplace like that, she's Nancy Carr, which is the character. People recognize her and they call her by that name. It's marvelous.

"There is a small city in New York state called Monticello, and our mythical city since the show went on the air 25 years ago has been Monticello. No state is mentioned — just Monticello, U.S.A. — but for years, the chief of police in Monticello, N.Y., kept getting letters about the plot. People would write to him saying, 'Now I know who really killed so-and-so, why don't you go after him?'" What is it about the daytime drama that so absorbs its audience as to make its fiction their reality?

Sheer longevity has to be a factor. High-rolling prime time sitcoms have life cycles like mayflies. They swarm amid the Nielsen ratings, glitter for a season, then die, while the daytime dramas go on and on.

Nicholson knows how to keep them going.

"It all starts with story," he said. "If the story is compelling, it will bring the audience back day after day ... we put together a good company of players, we get good directors to stage each of these players and we can bring that audience in day after day, week after week, year after year. That's the secret of daytime television.

"Our actors go into people's living rooms every afternoon. They almost become guests who've come to tea."

Nicholson's story teller — "our Sheherazad" — is Henry Slesar. He has written the show for 13 years, working in "long-term" blocks of 26 weeks and, at the same time, building a constant source of "back burner material."

"When the front burner material starts to finish, we just move the back burner stuff up," said Nicholson. "It's a continuing process."

As a result, Slesar has the final say in casting any of the characters initially chosen by casting director Whitney Burnett. Burnett's screening method is a prime example of the meticulous fashion in which daytime drama is crafted. Some of the characters, after all, may play their roles for years.

From an initial casting call of 120 to 150 candidates for a role, she draws about 15. The 15 then are introduced to Nicholson, Slesar and other production members and half a dozen are picked to be videotaped in scenes with regular cast members.

From the six finalists, one is selected — always with Slesar's approval.

"It really has to be up to the head writer," said Nicholson. "He's going to write for that person and he has to have a very strong feeling for that person."

Certainly veteran cast members develop strong feelings about their characters — some nearly to the point of schizophrenia.

"I have had a few wonderful people on the show whose characters started to get in the way," said Nicholson. "With a few, there's a crossover. They start responding in real life, off camera, the way the character would respond. They confuse the character and their real person.

"We'll find ourselves calling the actors sometimes by their real names and sometimes by their character names and they respond to either one."

Daytime serial actors never wind up in the multi-million-dollar big leagues of those who land roles on "Dallas" or "Dukes of Hazzard," but there are compensations.

"They enjoy it. They love it. It's a steady home. It's a place to be. They enjoy their work and they're paid for it."

Pioneers' Past Lives In Papers

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Theoline Plummer, a young doctor's wife in the Kansas frontier town of Muscotah, was a little surprised when a tall, "ungainly-looking woman" showed up at her door asking for lodging one night in the late 1800s.

Mrs. Plummer and her husband noticed that the woman slept with her heavy satchel near her head, within easy reach. They thought her "a queer duck," but probably all right. When they awoke in the morning, she had vanished.

It was not until later that they learned the visitor had been the notorious outlaw, Jesse James.

That anecdote about life on the frontier is a rare glimpse at a lighter moment in the struggles of pioneers to expand the United States westward.

Sixty years ago, Kansas feminist Lilla Day Monroe, an attorney and fighter for women's suffrage, began soliciting and collecting memoirs of women's lives as pioneers. Some 800 stories were indexed and filed, but they gathered dust in a filing cabinet until her great-granddaughter, Joanna Stratton, found them in her grandmother's Topeka, Kan., attic in 1975.

Ms. Stratton, 26, has edited the women's recollections into a montage of frontier glimpses entitled, "Pioneer Women: Voices from the Kansas Frontier," published last month by Simon and Schuster. The manuscripts are to be donated to the Kansas Historical Society.

"When people think of the pioneers, they think of women totally confined to the home, bound by a stereotype," Ms. Stratton said in a recent interview. "But in reading these manuscripts, I was surprised how really spirited and independent many of them were. Living on the frontier required a certain tenacity and independence."

Those qualities won the pioneer wife a respect and equality not accorded her Eastern sisters, Ms. Stratton said. She said the first woman mayor of an American town was Susannah Salter, in Argonia, Kan., in 1887. Women also won the vote earlier in the frontier states than they did in the East, she notes.

The stories tell of plagues of grasshoppers descending on a settlement, the insects so thick they blacked out the sun, their weight breaking branches of trees where they clustered to devour anything edible.

There were prairie fires that glowed on the horizons and threatened to wipe out a family's progress with a single change of the fickle winds. Blizzards, floods and tornadoes added to the perils. And loneliness made it all more difficult.

"It makes our troubles and problems seem so minimal," Ms. Stratton said. "Yet these women were very modest. They didn't look upon themselves as being particularly courageous."

One of the most dramatic stories Ms. Stratton discovered was that of Anna Brewster Morgan, who was captured by Sioux Indians in 1868 in north-central Kansas.

During a long captivity, Mrs. Morgan adjusted to life in an Indian village and eventually accepted a chief's proposal of marriage, "never expecting to see a white person again," recounted a neighbor who heard the story in a rare moment of reminiscing by Mrs. Morgan.

But the woman was shocked one day when her brother walked into her tent and saw her sitting there in Indian garb. Her brother, who was with the forces of Gen. George Custer, freed Mrs. Morgan in exchange for captured Indian warriors. But, she later confided to the neighbor, "I often wished they never had found me."

A few months later, Anna Morgan gave birth to a child fathered by her Indian husband. The child died at the age of 2, and the mother was believed to have died eventually in an asylum.

Restored Locomotives Go On Display

By CLARK McKINLEY

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The $14-million California State Railroad Museum opens next month with a display of restored locomotives and cars in what planners tout as the nation's finest railroad collection.

"Railfair Sacramento 1981," the first major U.S. rail fair since 1949 in Chicago, will run for nine days beginning with the museum's May 2 opening.

As many as 100,000 train buffs are expected to attend the fair in Old Sacramento on the east bank of the Sacramento River, a reconstruction of the city as it was in Pony Express days.

"Rail buffs are among some of the most enthusiastic people in the world," says Gary Quinliven of the California Department of Parks and Recreation, which oversees the historic 11-acre railroad complex.

"There's something about being next to one of these iron horses that makes you want to see them move, to think of the power, what they're able to do."

Inquiries have come from as far away as The Netherlands. Prospective visitors include a retired train engineer from Florida and a family that plans to trail one of the fair's big visiting locomotives from Montana.

Visitors entering the museum's cavernous three-story History Building will walk through displays of historic scenes featuring 21 locomotives and cars and more than 40 exhibits of western railroading.

The first of these features the Gov. Stanford, a 40-ton wood-burning steam locomotive built in 1862 as the pioneer engine of the Central Pacific Railroad. Against a mockup of a high Sierra scene near Donner Summit, the machine will steam from a tunnel and into a snowshed.

Elsewhere inside the museum, train lovers will board a Canadian National Railways sleeper car for a nighttime ride simulated with car rockers, the clickety-clack of a moving train, and passing window scenes.

They also can sort mail on a Post Office car, peer under the engine of a powerful steam locomotive, and watch the icing of a wooden refrigerator car. Visitors will see surveying tools used in laying the transcontinental train route, movie posters with railroad themes and hear old records of rail songs. The total number of railroad artifacts exceeds 5,000, officials said.

Outside the museum, during the nine fair days train buffs will be able to see loaned engines and cars in what project officials call "the finest collection of locomotives and rolling stock ever assembled for a single event."

A week before the fair, an Air Force C-141 cargo plane will fly in the world's oldest active steam locomotive, the 1831 "John Bull", from the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. Another plane will bring a replica of the famous 1829 "Stephenson Rocket" engine from York, England, and the B & O Museum in Baltimore will loan the "Tom Thumb," an operating copy of America's first locomotive.

Museum coordinator Stephen Drew said restoring the museum's own collection cost up to $150,000 a car, including installation of authentic walnut wood, square nails and gold leafing.

Rose High Tutors Teaching Learning

IS YOURS FINISHED?...tutor Jospeh Simonowich asks a student. The 18 tutors report to Elmhurst at 8:45 a.m. and remain there until 9:50 a.m. Rose High counselor Jean Creech and Beth Richardson are coordinating the tutor program with Leslie Washburn, principal at Elmhurst. Tutors were trained during the first semester by Richardson in a study skills course.

Eighteen J.H. Rose High School students are spending part of their mornings each day helping students at Elmhurst Elementary School find learning easier.

The students are participants in the Rose High Tutoring Program, a unique learning experience that allows older kids to give young children guidance in how to learn.

This program, implemented for the first time this semester, had its beginning last fall. "The 18 tutors took a study skills course that was taught by Beth Richardson," explained Rose counselor Jean Creech, who with Richardson and Elmhurst principal Leslie Washburn coordinates the program.

"This course taught the students items like notetaking, using a book, listening skills, reading skills, organizing strategies, test taking, personal development and long-term study skills," continued Creech. "Then this semester they have been imparting these skills to the children they tutor."

Response, both from the tutors, the supervising teachers, and the students has been excellent, reports Elmhurst principal Washburn. "We have been just so pleased with the results so far," she commented. "The teachers involved have experienced an increase in interest from their students and have felt like they had more time for individualized attention in the classrooms because of the tutors.

"We are hoping this program will turn into a permanent one," she added, "It has done an immeasurable amount of good in the classrooms here."

Washburn assigned the tutors to teachers and the teachers in turn directed them on a one-to-one basis with students who needed additional help. Washburn, who already has parents working in the school, noted "This is just like getting 18 new volunteers, and we can surely use all the volunteer help we can get."

According to Creech, the students are equally as enthusiastic about their duties. "They get along with the children very well and are having a learning experience doing this work," she said.

The students will earn credit for both the study skills course and the tutoring. "They are required to keep a log of what they do each day and record their observations," exlplained Creech. "Their grades are based on this and on the supervising teachers' observations."

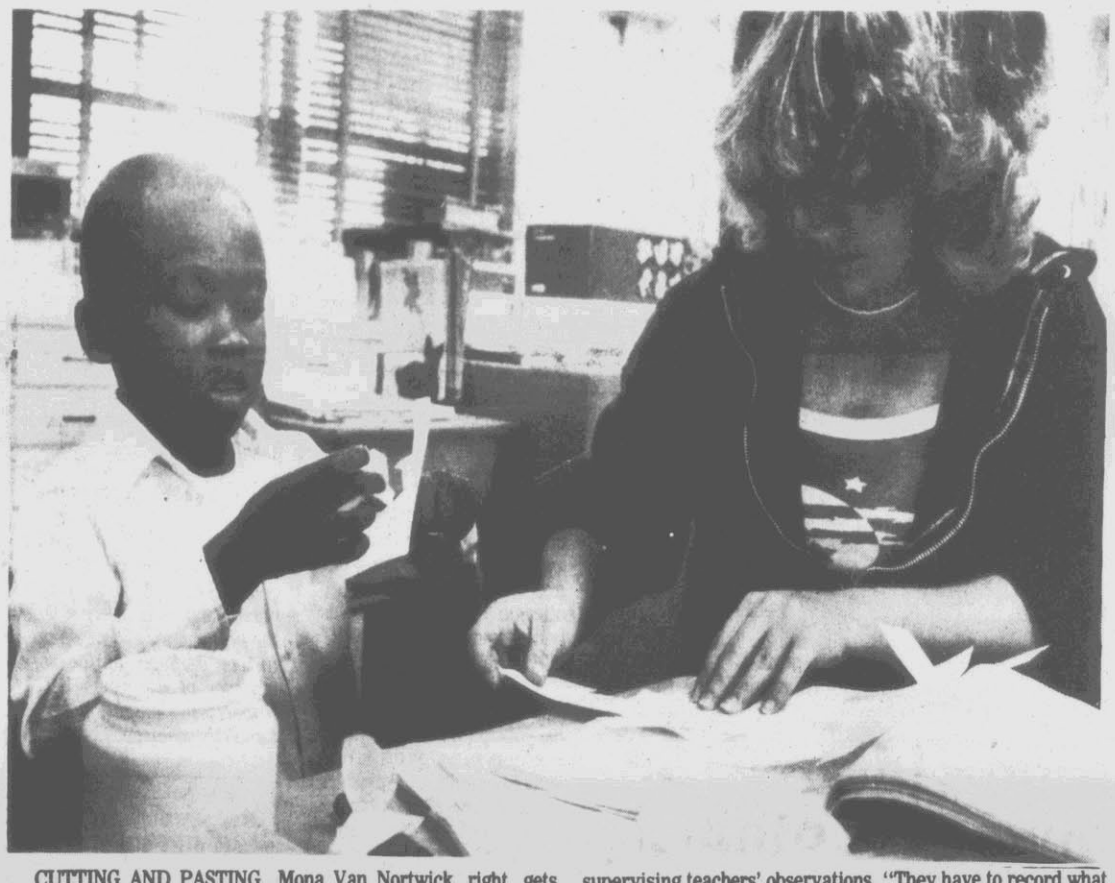

Creech hopes also that the program will be a permanent one. "We want to continue it next year," she noted, "because we feel it has been so beneficial for the tutors, the students, and the teachers — it's been beneficial to everyone involved."

HELPING STUDENTS READ...is one of the responsibilities of the tutors. Above, Edwin Hall and a student find a quiet spot in the school hall to go over a book together. In the skills course, students are instructed on such items as notetaking, using a book, listening skills, personal development and long-term study skills. "Then this second semester," explained Jean Creech, "they have been imparting these skills to the children they tutor."

The high school students receive credit for this tutoring time and are graded according to their log, their attendance and the supervising teachers' observations. "They have to record what they do each day," said Jean Creech, as well as their observations from their experience."

STUDENT-MADE MATERIALS...are shown above. The tutors spent much time making their own teaching materials for the kids, and the response to these materials, according to Creech, is "excellent." PCC's Training Safe, Effective Fire Fighters

By EARL AIKEN
PCC Public
Information Officer

Fire service training for the volunteer firemen of Pitt County has been an ongoing program at Pitt Community College's Continuing Education Department since 1960.

According to William C. Stokes, PCC's director of occupational extension, at least 26 courses in Fire Service Training will be offered during the 1980-81 period.

"We are constantly training not only firemen, but many people from business and industry who are desirous of upgrading their efficiency in this field," stated Stokes.

The 1980 Pitt County Fire Marshall's report shows that 56,329 hours of training were logged by the county's 19 fire departments through PCC during the past two years — July 1, 1978 through June 30, 1980.

Pitt County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner explained that the working relationship between Pitt Community College and his department is providing the 675 volunteer firemen in the county with what he terms "excellent training."

"We are proud of this affiliation and are impressed with the certified instructors, visual aids and the curriculum available through PCC," stated Joyner. "The training of firefighters is never-ending and our people are constantly upgrading themselves through this program."

Joyner added, "New methods and new equipment are being introducd constantly, and since the fighting of fires is a modern science, it is necessary that firemen keep their skills current and sharp."

The fire marshall explained that a fireman must have 36 hours of formal training annually to qualify for the $25,000 insurance benefits from the state of North Carolina and $50,000 insurance policy sponsored by the federal government.

Instructors in the Fire Service Training Program are required to have special certification through a 36-hour teaching/training course and must pass a two-hour examination in order to qualify as an instructor.

To remain certified, they must take an upgrading course every two years and must be well-acquainted with the training manuals, books and audio-visual materials available through the Department of Community Colleges and PCC.

Ninteen fire chiefs from the county's volunteer fire departments were recently surveyed by PCC, and comments were favorable. Chiefs commented that instructors in the program were "high calibre" and the content of the materials for the course was "excellent."

Fire Service Instructor Tony Smart explained that firefighting procedures are the organizing and coordinating of patterns through which all the various fire service methods are deployed. Procedures and plans make teamwork out of individual efforts, he added, and a coordinated attack from the various isolated firefighter technique.

"While these procedures may not be identical for every department or every situation," said Smart, "they are similar enough in principle that it behooves every firefighter and fire officer to become familiar with them.

"In addition," he stated, "because fire prevention and inspection practices are an essential part of the fire department's pre-planning and procedures, selected topics are included in every phase of the fireman's training."

Instructor Harvey Case pointed out that a careful study of the characteristics and purposes of the different types of water streams from fire hoses is important to every firefighter since this is the most versatile weapon of attack against a fire. "Often the skillful, tactful and technical utilization of water streams against a fire is the deciding factor in the saving of lives and protection of property."

Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner stressed the importance of continual fire hose practice. Its application and use is always included in the continuous training of firemen.

Instructor Charles Dew explained that one of the fundamental rules in fire fighting is that no one, unless equipped with protective breathing apparatus, be allowed to enter a building heavily charged with smoke and gas. "Many fire fighters who are overcome by smoke or other gases," he said, "stagger out or have to be carried out frequently."

Dew stated that due to new processes and materials, fire fighters are now coming into contact with many gases not formerly encountered.

"A knowledge of the operation of protective breathing equipment through proper training and the recommended method of wearing it will increase the efficiency of fire department operations," said Dew.

Instructor Carl Vaughn noted that fire service apparatus practices involves safe driving of the various vehicles, deployment of vehicles at the scene of an emergency (a manuever called spotting), operating pumps, aerial ladders and platforms in various situations and the fire departments' responsibility in training and testing vehicles and equipment.

Vaughn noted, "Fire fighting equipment is constantly being updated; therefore it is important that firemen be informed of these new devices and their proper maintenance through regular training."

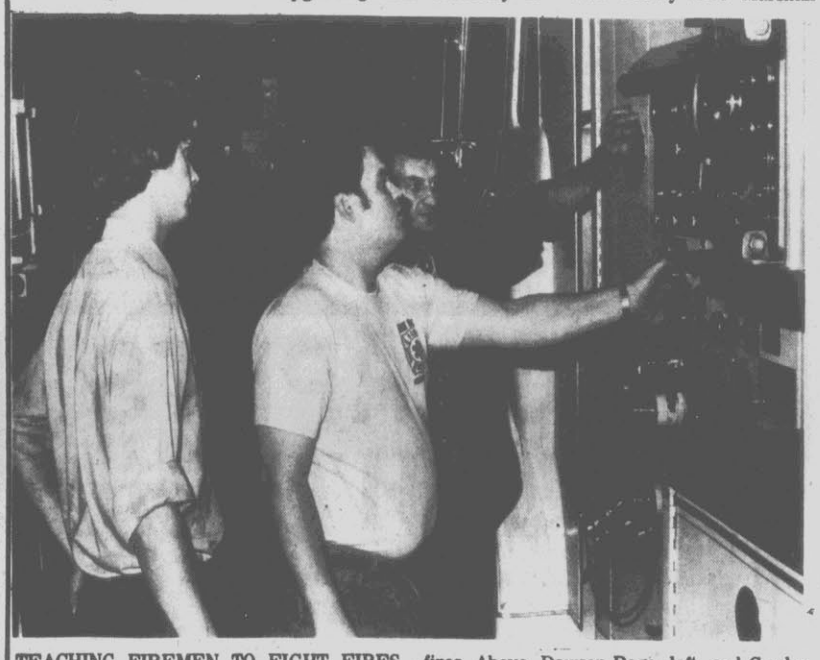

"In most instances," reported Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner, "a fire may be extinguished by the proper application of the appropriate extinguishing agent. Training is necessary in this field because today's portable extinguishers have been designed for various hazards and have a very high fire killing potential. In order for fire fighters to select and carefully use the appropriate extinguisher, they must know the requiremewnts for fire, types of fires and types of extinguishers and their operations."

Instructor Elmer Galloway explained that many times before rescue or fire extinguishment can be performed, a forcible entry must be made to gain access to areas where normal openings are locked or blocked, or where openings are not provided.

Galloway remarked, "It is easily understood how some firemen, in their eagerness to protect life and property, may resort to methods that have not been proved through practice, thus needlessly destroying property in their efforts. In order to prevent this, firemen must be properly instructed in forcible entry techniques as well as building trade names and construction characteristics.

Area Coordinator for Fire Services Training Doug Batts explained that training includes many areas for fire fighting such as salvage and overhaul practices, ladder practice, rescue practices, rope practices and ventilation.

Batts added, "The volunteer firemen of the 19 Pitt County companies are really taking advantage of the Fire Services Training offered by Pitt Community College. This results in more lives and property being saved in the fighting of fires."

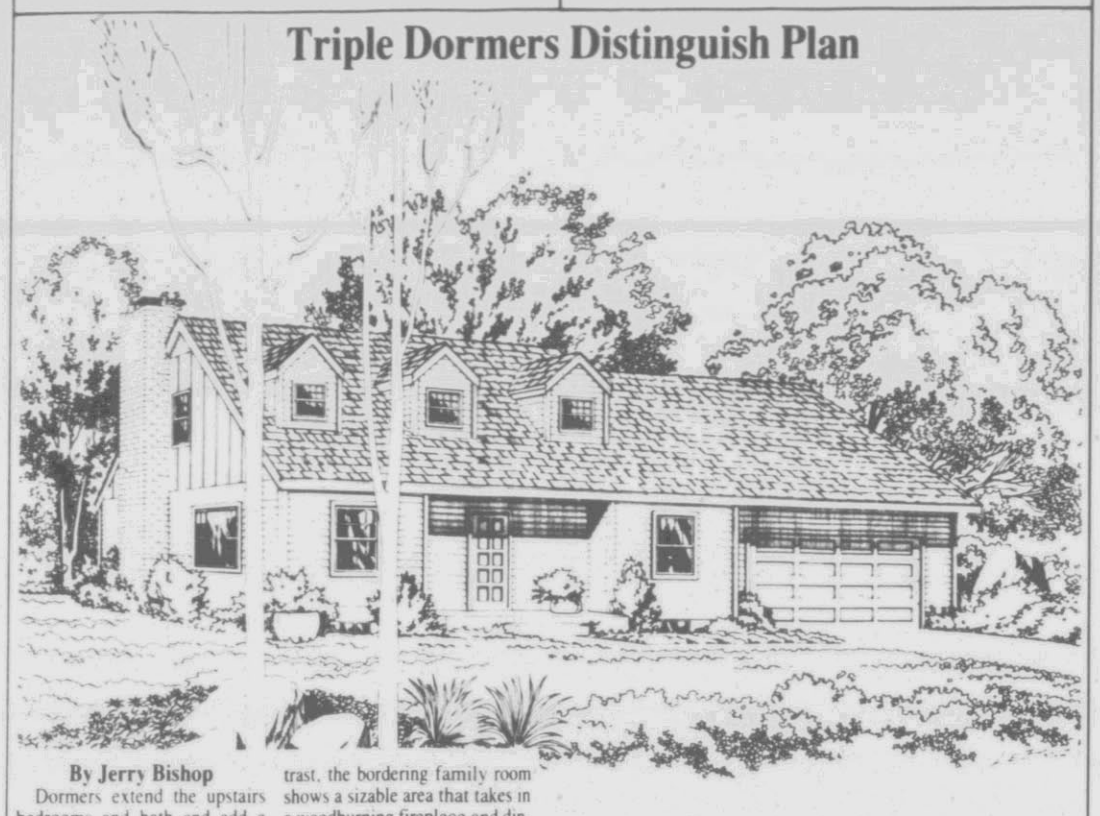

TEACHING FIREMEN TO FIGHT FIRES SAFELY AND EFFECTIVELY...Since 1960 the Fire Service Training program at Pitt Community College has been teaching the volunteer firemen of Pitt County the most effective and least hazardous ways to combat fires. Triple Dormers Distinguish Plan

By Jerry Bishop

Dormers extend the upstairs bedrooms and bath and add a touch of the past to the Downsview, a two story traditional.

In meeting contemporary needs, the floor plan also manages to preserve some charming touches, such as the functional screened porch, accessible from the kitchen, and the central playroom set between bedrooms on the upper level. Also included in the plan are the 24-ft. family room, first floor master bedroom, and completely private living room.

Since the living room can be closed off at both ends, it functions as a formal, quiet area for reading or entertaining. By contrast, the bordering family room shows a sizable area that takes in a woodburning fireplace and dining area as well as sliding glass doors to the deck. Family room and kitchen enjoy open planning, with snack bar providing the link, and a laundry niche is tucked in the kitchen. Direct entry from the garage and access to the screened porch are bonuses.

Modern Design Priorities Lean Toward Comfort, Spacious Look

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Whether they are watching pennies or able to splurge, Americans are seeking comfortable and practical living quarters today.

This was the consensus among several designers who received Hexter Awards in New York recently for their interior designs. The awards program has been sponsored by the fabric and accessories firm for 23 years.

At a luncheon to introduce the winners and their designs in residential and commercial projects, the question of the design priorities of American consumers came up.

Karen Rosen, whose studio apartment in New York took first place in the residential category, zeroed in on the reduction in living space that afflicts many of us.

Georg Andersen, honorable mention for a luxurious suburban home, talked about a new unpretentiousness in design.

Charles Falls, cited for an art gallery in a recycled gas station in Santa Fe, N.M., mentioned the need to integrate the past with the present.

And Robert DiLeonardo, whose cheerful restaurant project in Providence, R. I., was given an honorable mention in non-residential design, described the new interest of Americans in conducting their affairs in esthetically pleasing spaces.

Ms. Rosen's remarks seemed well directed toward city dwellers. "Living in a one-room city apartment can be very confining. But people can't afford larger apartments because of the rents." So, she noted, design must create the illusion of more space than is really there.

"In this project, I increased storage 60 percent by using platforms, different levels and built-ins." Instead of sofas, she selected mattresses and had them custom covered.

A floor-to-ceiling, mirrored cabinet was installed to divide the space and to hold clothing, games, stereo equipment, television and video recording equipment. And in the sleeping alcove, a bed is disguised as a lounge that seats six.

The apartment was designed to accommodate one or two comfortably or to hold a party of 50, remarked Ms. Rosen.

"It's more expensive to design this way; everything is custom-made. But if you can make a studio apartment seem like a place with four or five rooms, it's worth it," she said.

Not everyone has to live in a small apartment. But even in more spacious suburban settings, she finds a new concern with practicality.

"People aren't building and decorating for show anymore. They want to get the most out of their space, so they make a formal dining room into a den-dining room, and they convert a bedroom into a daytime office," she said.

Clients are more knowledgeable today and are more selective about their furniture. They seek timeless designs, not fads, she added, because it is too expensive to redo a room very often.

A similar point of view but from a different vantage point was offered by Andersen, whose career has included stints at some of the most famous design studios in America. Today, he is in charge of interior design at a Little Rock, Ark., architecture firm, and his assignments take him all over the country.

His award-winning dining room features a blend of English architecture, French furnishings and pre-Columbian artworks.

"This was one of the few times I've had a client who refused to set a budget. They gave me carte blanche, and they really meant it," he said.

Once, show might have been more important than comfort among moneyed clients, but no longer. Andersen was impressed with the fact that the family wanted to be comfortable with their antiques. They wanted their three sons to have the run of the house without worrying about possible breakage of overly-fragile furnishings.

Antiques are too remote for some Americans and built-in modern architecture too severe for others. Robert J. Di Leonardo, whose Cranston, R.I., design firm handles both residential and commercial design, enumerated some of the elements in currently popular eclectic interiors.

"It's a crisp look with bright colors, lots of light, plenty of plants and tile floors," he noted. In modern interiors, function and practicality are very important. But Americans have a new appreciation of esthetics that is a departure from the past, he said. "Products are too expensive to be made cheaply," he concluded.

Also cited in the awards program was Kenneth Walker, a New York architect whose design of an airlines ticket office was selected by the judges for its "use of beautiful materials and colors in creating functional space."

DAVID ZEVENBERGEN, 19, spent 15 months, $15 and 15,000 toothpicks building this working,4-foot-tall grandfather clock.

Teen's Ideas Trend Toward Toothpicks

CHICAGO (AP) — When David Zevenbergen picks up a toothpick, it's not to spear an hors d'oeuvre. The Sibley, Iowa, teen has more timely ideas for his toothpicks.

Zevenbergen just spent 15 months, $15 and 15,000 toothpicks building a 4-foot-tall grandfather clock that keeps perfect time.

One of the top teens nationally recognized by the publishers of Who's Who Among American High School Students, Zevenbergen first got involved in his unusual hobby when he was in the eighth grade. Given a simple art assignment, he built a Liberty Bell, crack and all, constructed with 750 toothpicks divided in half.

"I really was fascinated by all the things you could do with toothpicks," he explained. His fascination turned into motivation after a replica he made of the Eiffel Tower won him blue ribbon honors at the Osceola (Iowa) County Fair when he was a freshman in high school.

Once his new-found skill was established, he sought something "more challenging," like building a working grandfather clock.

"I copied a grandfather clock from a picture and worked out all my own dimensions to reproduce it with toothpicks," the teen related. He began with 20 boxes of picks and some glue in April 1979.

His first setback came during that summer. The warm weather and accompanying humidity forced him out of his basement workshop when a panel warped and had to be redone.

"I really got tired of it at that point," Zevenbergen recalls, "and I stopped working on it for three months.

"As proud as I was of the clock," Zevenbergen now says, "I was pretty relieved when it was done." He said he isn't ready to begin any new toothpick projects in the immediate future. But his family and friends may think twice about offering him a toothpick after dinner.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Wind, rain, hail and snow all play a part in shortening the life of a roof, but the biggest enemy is the sun, which causes it to become dried out, brittle and faded.

How can you tell when a roof needs replacing? Sometimes it isn't too easy to tell, especially when everything appears to be intact, but there are some general signs home owners should be alert for rather than waiting for leaks. These include excessive loss of protective mineral granules, which can be determined at the base of downspouts or in the gutters; cracked and blistered shingles; and curled or missing shingles.

If a roof is relatively new and has suffered limited damage from a storm or falling objects — or has developed a small leak — the chances are that it can be repaired easily. Shingles that are damaged or have blown away can be replaced. Loose shingles can be renailed and leaks around flashing points can be patched. But when a roof of standard shingles is 15 years old or older and then develops trouble symptoms, it is a prime candidate for reroofing. Most of today's asphalt shingles, for instance, are designed to last from 15 to 25 years, depending on the type.

A roof can be inspected from the ground with the use of field glasses, a recommended procedure for the home owner, although an on-the-roof inspection by a roofer is necessary before proceeding with actual reroofing.

He can determine whether the old shingles can be recovered or must be removed and whether the roof deck and supports will hold additional weight. Most of the time, new asphalt shingles can be applied over old ones as well as over wood shingles, but there are exceptions which make a professional opinion necessary.

Sometimes, a recovering is possible once the old roof has been repaired a bit, such as the renailing of loose shingles and the removal of loose or protruding nails.

Before you choose a roofer, find out whether he is well recommended, whether he has a reputation for getting the work done on time, whether he delivers what he promises, whether he is insured for on-the-job accidents and whether he will furnish references.

Obtain estimates for comparison, but be sure everybody is estimating on the same kind of work. They must be bidding on the same materials (the same, not almost the same) and the same details of workmanship.

If you have to finance the job, you can get financing at a lending institution, preferably one where you have a savings or checking account. Before signing a contract for the roofing work, be sure it includes the method of payment, especially when the final payment is due. The final payment should not be due until all the work is completed. A reliable contractor will not argue the point.

(For a guide to the selection of quality roofing, including an asphalt shingle color chart, get a copy of Andy Lang's Roofing Guide, available by sending 50 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I want to use a drywall material for the ceiling in our garage. I worked with the same kind of material a few years ago, but that was for a wall. I remember that I finished the joints with tape and a kind of compound. Can I do the same thing with the ceiling joints or won't that work?

A. — Yes, you can finish the joints the same way with the same kind of tape and compound. Whatever kind of drywall material you use, be sure that it is solidly attached, even more so than to a wall. If it isn't, the weight of the material may pull it downward after a few months or a year or two.

Q. — I read somewhere, perhaps in your column, that you can get a very smooth finish on a varnished surface by using pumice. I recently did a varnishing job on a table and went out to buy pumice. It comes in blocks like the barbers used to sharpen straight razors on. I can't see how to use that on varnish, so I didn't buy one. Can you advise me how the pumice is used?

A. — No matter where you read about the use of pumice, it most certainly said pumice powder. It comes in packages and looks something like flour. When sprinkled on a varnished surface with oil or water and then rubbed with a soft, clean cloth, it takes out all irregularities and makes the wood as smooth as glass. If you feel that the surface is a little too dull, repeat the operation — this time with rottenstone powder.

Q. — In removing paint by using a paint remover, should the surface of the wood be washed with water after it has been scraped?

A. — It depends on the type of remover. Every can of paint remover has a label that tells exactly what to use to rinse off the remover residue.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, bleach, stain, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

One 'Feast' No Problem

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Overeating on special, infrequent occasions isn't apt to cause serious health problems for the average person, says nutritionist David Levitsky of Cornell University.

Unless you have a gastrointestinal illness such as ulcers, Levitsky says, an occasional feast isn't apt to produce anything more serious than a few extra pounds.

People have a biological precedent for gorging. Man evolved from animals that had to endure long periods of famine, so they alternated with feasts when food was available.

The feast and famine routine leads to faster weight gain than sticking to a steady diet of a set number of calories, the nutritionist says — but the psychological benefits of a celebration with foods you love can outweigh the disadvantages of going on a lower calorie diet for a few weeks afterwards.

Levitsky says it's safer to maintain a few extra pounds — or no more than 10-20 percent of your normal body weight, all the time than to see-saw regularly.

In days gone by, welcome guests were served delicious, piping hot roasts. But if they began to overstay their welcome, the menu fare would change to cold shoulder and other non-heated leftovers.

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE

N.C. Agr. Ext. Serv. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. How does one select a good tomato transplant? Also, will I have earlier tomatoes if I select plants already in bloom? (G.J., Claremont)

A. Select a medium size, stocky plant that has good green color and plenty of roots. Avoid those that show evidence of insects and diseases. Plants already in bloom are not likely to fruit earlier. They may fruit later because of the stress created by the blooms while they are trying to become established in the garden. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. I know that pollen comes from trees, that it is yellow, it settles on my car and that a lot of people are allergic to it. Just what is pollen and what good is it? (T.W. Clayton)

A. Pollen consists of many micro-spores which are released by male flowers of seed-producing plants. Trees such as oak and pine produce astronomical amounts of pollen grains. The dry, wind-blown pollen unites with the ovary of the female flowers on trees of the same species to begin the development of seed. Generally, a day or two after pollen is shed it is worthless for fertilizing ovaries. (William M. Stanton, extension forestry specialist.)

Q. For the past two years my radish crop has been pithy and hot. What am I doing wrong? (J.B., Rolesville)

A. Probably planting your radishes too late in the growing season. Radishes like the cool weather of February and March. Slow growth due to hot weather, drought, or poor fertility can lead to pithy, hot roots. Plant earlier and provide adequate moisture and see if you don't get better results. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. I have a problem with Easter Tent Caterpillars. How can I control them? (G.B., Laurinburg)

A. If you have only a few nests, try tearing them down with a brush or pole, then crush the surviving caterpillars. Several insecticides are available if you have many nests. Included are Thuricide, Seven, Diazinon and Malathion. Follow label directions. Eastern Tent Caterpillars, not to be confused with Fall Webworms, produce only one generation each year. They pupate about six weeks after the nests apper and cause no further damage for the remainder of the year. (R.L. Robertson, extension entomology specialist.)

How can you use a classified ad to help with the family budget?

1. Sell that tuba that hasn't sounded a note the last three years. Any musical instrument will do if you don't have a tuba.

2. Take a good look in your garage. If there's a bike, moped, or motorcycle that hasn't had a rider in a long time, now's the time to exchange it for cash.

3. Grown-ups also let still-good items go unused! Got a sewing machine, typewriter or knitting machine you haven't mastered? Find a cash buyer for it.

4. Don't forget sound equipment . . . radio, TV, stereo, tape recorder, CB, walkie-talkie . . . people are always looking for things to listen to.

5. And the workshop . . . wherever it is . . . is the place to spot tools which still have a lot of good use in them. Let someone else put them to work while you fatten your budget.

That's how!

Just take inventory of the many good items in your home some family would like to have. Then give us a call to place your ad. Classified ads have been helping families stretch their budgets for years . . . and they can help you, too

EFIRD'S PEST CONTROL

Many people who think they have termites, call the first company's name that comes to mind. Most of the time, because of fear or lack of knowledge people will have their home treated without a second opinion. This is very sad. Not only could the customer possibly save money, but most important he or she could be satisfied that they actually did see termites. It doesn't cost anything for a second opinion, but it could cost hundreds without one.

PRIDE OF BALTIMORE — The topsail schooner, the "Pride of Baltimore", is an authentic recreation of an 1812 Baltimore Clipper. The vessel has proven itself to be quite seaworthy. (AP Laserphoto)

Clipper Calls Attention To Pride Of Baltimore

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Armin Elsaesser breezed in the other day, looking smug. No wonder. Name another so lucky as to pursue, not the study of history, but the practice of it.

Elsaesser is captain of a sailing ship, the Pride of Baltimore, a topsail schooner right out of the 19th century.

"Wait," Elsaesser said. "The Pride is not some museum relic. This ship was launched just four years ago. But it is authentic. It is as authentic a Baltimore clipper as any launched in the early 1800s, the heyday of those beauties."

True. It was built by shipwrights using the same tools used back then, planes and adzes and metal parts forged by a blacksmith at the site, which was the recently face-lifted port of Baltimore.

And "beauty" is the correct word: jet black hull 90 feet long, twin masts raked back jauntily, supporting 10 white sails of honest canvas, bowsprit pointing the way like an uptilted lance.

Knifing through a friendly sea, the Pride of Baltimore appears on the verge of taking flight.

"She feels that way, too," Elsaesser said.

She did not, however, feel that way last Sunday morning. But then the sea was anything but friendly.

After leaving the port of Mobile, bound for Key West, Fla., the Pride ran into gale force headwinds and 12-foot seas. Its jib boom dipped into a swell and snapped. The foretopmast tumbled backward into the rigging. All hands on deck.

Capt. Elsaesser, a seafaring man, brought his ship into Key West anyhow, describing the damage as moderate, then sailed to Miami. He now is on his way to a repair yard at St. Michael's on Chesapeake Bay.

Once before, off Bermuda, the Pride encountered a storm and weathered it bravely for 36 hours.

"It's a strong and seakindly ship," the captain said. "The ultimate schooner. I have every confidence in the Pride no matter what conditions I meet. She'll come through."

The Pride's purpose is to sail the waters of North America calling attention to itself, which it does as effortlessly as any shapely lady in black, and thereby call attention to the rightful pride of every Baltimorean, the new look of their harbor and dockside.

"The Pride," its captain said proudly, "is a symbolic link between an energetic present and a rich nautical past."

So, in a sense, is Armin Elsaesser.

He is a taciturn man; the calm during the storm. He is 36. His eyes are the color of the sky sailors pray for, cobalt blue. Sun and spray have bleached his sandy beard and bronzed his sinewy arms.

"I have no notions that what I do, which is sail ships, is the most important thing in the world," he said, "but it surely is the most satisfying.

"I am just not taken by modern life ashore: cars, TV, movies, a life that involves being entertained all the time.

"Sailing involves what I call primary experiences, situations that demand something of a person. When you sail a ship you have a feeling of accomplishment. I like the feeling."

For that reason, Elsaesser 10 years ago gave up a business (building wooden boats) to be a full-time sailor — oceanographic ships, charter schooners, anything with sails.

"After this voyage I will sit for my license as Master of Ocean Sail. Not many sailors have that rating, which is the highest." He shrugged. "Of course, there aren't many large sailing vessels left, either."

A SECOND FLIGHT

PEKING (AP) — China's national airline will add a second weekly flight to the China-U.S. service strarting May 2, the official Xinhua news agency reports.

'Wide World' Takes A Look Back

"ABC's Wide World of Sports 20th Anniversary Special," to be aired Saturday, Apr. 25 (8-9:30 p.m.), looks back at the memorable moments and extraordinary personalities associated with the program's two decades on the small screen.

Jim McKay, who's hosted the series since its first telecast in 1961, will assume his customary role for the prime time special.

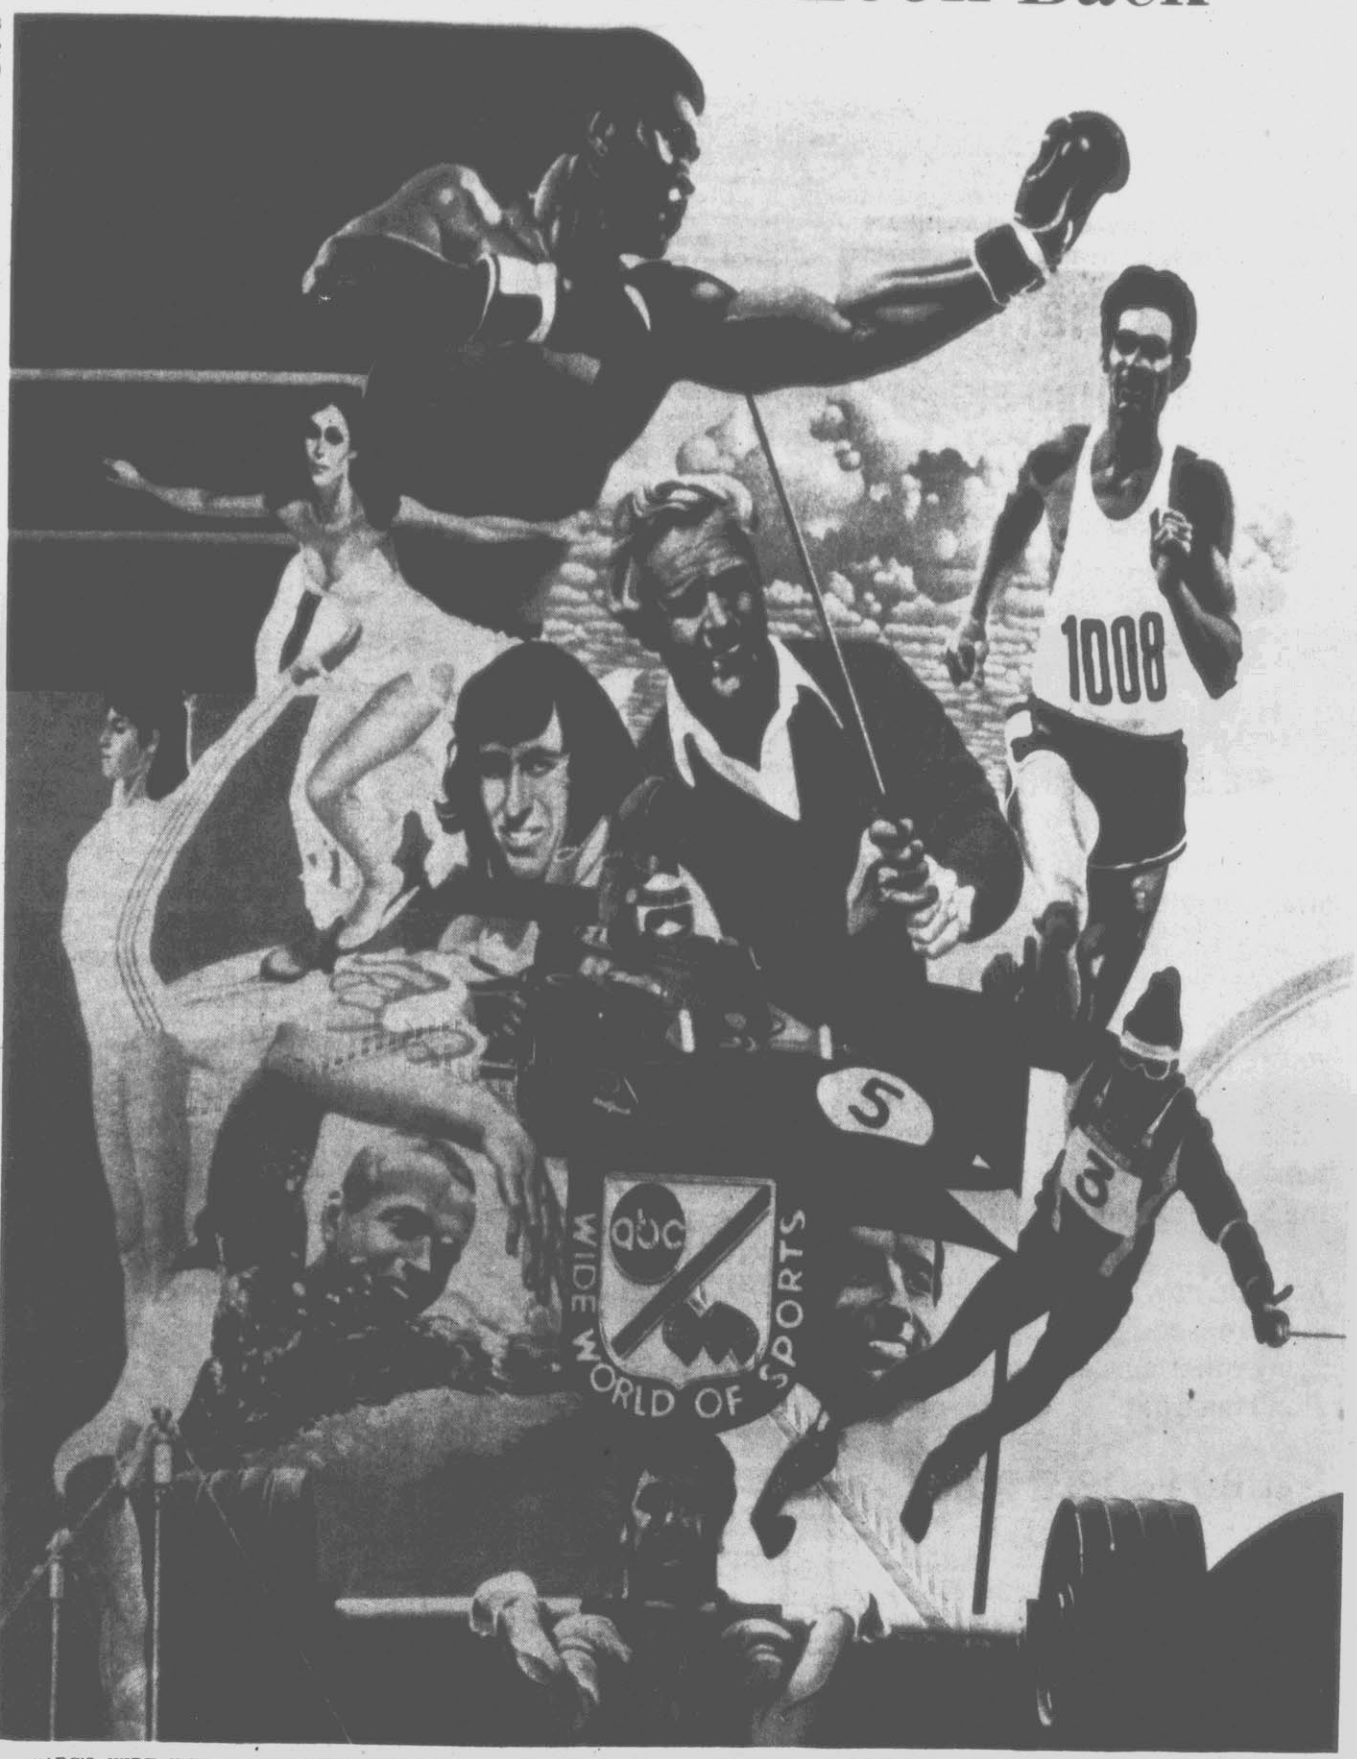

A nostalgic look back at many of the outstanding athletes whose careers have been chronicled by 'Wide World' will play a significant part in the anniversary salute. These include such greats as Olga Korbut, Arnold Palmer, Jackie Stewart, Wilma Rudolph and Jean-Claude Killy. Many of them, along with the winners of the series' Athlete of the Year Award since 1962, have been invited to a 20th Anniversary Gala at New York's Waldorf-Astoria, which will be a backdrop for the special.

Through the years, 'Wide World' has served as a history book of the world of sports, and a fascinating review of the many 'firsts' which have occurred will occupy a prominent place on this telecast.

Among the 'firsts' to be spotlighted are: The first sub-four minute indoor mile by Jim Beatty in 1962; Don Jackson's completion of the first triple-lutz in figure skating that same year, and A.J. Foyt becoming the first man to win the Indy '500' and the LeMans 24-hour Grand Prix (1967).

You'll also relive the excitement generated by Kurt Thomas when he became the first American ever to win a gold medal at the World Gymnastics Championships (1968), and Cathy Rigby's exuberance when she won a silver medal at the 1970 World Championships. This was particularly exciting because no American gymnast had won a medal of any kind in the event until then.

Muhammad Ali and 'Wide World' grew up together in the 1960s, with the series televising virtually all of his fights. It is only natural, then, that the special should focus on his career. This retrospective ranges from the young Ali (then Cassius Clay) defeating Sonny Liston for the heavyweight title, through his problems with the draft and ultimately to his comeback in the '70s, including the classic duels with Joe Frazier.

"ABC'S WIDE WORLD OF SPORTS" 20th Anniversary Special, airing Saturday, Apr. 25 (8-9:30 p.m.) will look back at the great events and outstanding personalities of the series' two decades. Shown here are some of the most prominent athletes who have performed on "Wide World of Sports."

Phillips Is Busy

John Phillips is in the process of forming a new Mammas and the Pappas recording group. Singing with him will be his daughter, Mackenzie, original group member Denny Dougherty and Spanky McFarlane, formerly of Spanky and Our Gang.

"Our sound will be exactly the same as when we were big," says John. "We already have 30 to 40 songs written and we've been in rehearsal for a few months."

Meet A Real Cinderella!

Not every collegiate gymnastics champion gets to star in a television special. Then again, not every collegiate gymnastics champion can perform with only one arm.

The true-life Cinderella story of one-armed gymnast Carol Johnston is presented in "Lefty," returning to Disney's Wonderful World, Sunday, Apr. 19 (7 p.m. on NBC-TV).

Producers James Thompson and Gina Rester first conceived the idea for a film about three years ago when they saw her in a sports program on NBC. They were impressed by an interview in which Carol was asked if there was anything she couldn't do. "No," she answered, "but if I ever find anything, I'll just work at it until I can do it."

"Lefty" was filmed intermittently during a six-month period. Carol admitted she had a difficult time getting accustomed to the cameras.

"It's not easy to act normal when a film crew is all around you," she said. "Lights, cameras and microphones followed me everywhere: into the gym, around school, even on dates — my boyfriend just loved that! One day the crew stood around my bathtub while I brushed my teeth. The director kept saying 'Just pretend we're not here.'"

Carol is often asked how she learned to do the complex gymnastics routines. "I watch how other gymnasts do the trick with two arms and then I figure out how to do it with one," she explains. "It takes me a lot longer, but I just work on it until I get it right."

While covering an import competition, the film crew w nessed a tragedy. Carol fell fr the uneven bars during a diffic dismount and tore two ligame in her knee.

Even during the tears, disappointment and the shoc her injury, Carol allowed filming to continue. "It was h to go through all that in front camera," Carol recalls. "Bu guess it's important for peopl know the failures as well as successes."

Carol never dreamed she'd starring in a movie, but producers of "Lefty" say she 'natural.' Actually, I've had a of practice," Carol says wit twinkle in her eyes. "Bein gymnast is a lot like being actress. You concentrate on ing your audience your very l performance!"

Michelle Will Tell

Q: I enjoyed the remake of "Madame X" that aired recently. Now I can't remember who starred in the original film. Can you help me? A.M., HICKORY, N.C.

A: The recent TV version of the classic 'soaper' was actually the seventh movie adaptation of "Madame X," which began as a play in France at the turn of the century. The first theatrical release was a silent movie in 1909, but the best-remembered one came out in 1966. Lana Turner starred in the title role, ably backed by a superb cast that included John Forsythe, Ricardo Montalban, Burgess Meredith and Constance Bennett.

Q: "The Virginian" was one of my favorite series. What happend to James Drury after the show went off the air.? J. GOUVEIA, FT. BRAGG, N.C.

A: A few years after "The Virginian" ended its run on NBC (1962-71), Drury tried another series, "Firehouse," but it was shot down after about four months. He's since concentrated on stage productions and motion pictures. Incidentally, 'Virginian' was spawned by a drama that was part of an anthology series called "Decision" that was telecast during the summer of 1958. Drury starred in it, too.

Q: I'm crazy about "The White Shadow" and I'd like to know more about one of the teams's newest members. He's played by Wolfe Perry. A READER IN STAUNTONSBURG, N.C.

A: The personable young actor was born in New Orleans, La., grew up in California and is a graduate of Stanford, where he was also an All-American basketball player. Now in his early 20s, Perry is single and enjoys movies and dancing.

Q: Is Audrey Landers, who plays Afton on "Dallas," related to Judy Landers, 'Stacks' on "BJ and the Bear"? D. HOWARD, WASHINGTON, N.C.

A: The good-looking gals are sisters.

Peter Fonda Stars

Peter Fonda stars as a singer-songwriter on the run from the law in "Outlaw Blues," returning to TV on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Apr. 22 (9-11 p.m.). Susan Saint James co-stars as the woman who exploits his situation to make him a star.

Bobby Ogden (Fonda) is an ex-con who learns that country-western singer Garland Dupree (James Callahan has stolen one of his songs and made it a hit. As soon as he's released from prison, Ogden sets out to find Dupree and reclaim his song.

But Ogden is quick to get back into trouble again. During his confrontation with Dupree, the singer is accidentally shot and Ogden finds himself on the lam.

But while Ogden may be on the wrong side of the law, he has savvy Tina Waters (Saint James) on his side. Tina, quick to recognize all the angles, makes Ogden a star, relying on what she feels will be his popular appeal as a fugitive — an artist fugitive — an artist fleeing from the law. Tina arranges numerous personal appearances for Ogden, performances that take on a unique and strange quality as his hasty exits are in reality escapes. This 'quality' merely enhances Odgen's popularity with his audience.

Classical Artist Guests On Show

There will be plenty of strings attached, and all coming through with a harmonious sound, when "John Denver — Music and the Mountains" airs Friday, Apr. 24 (9-10 p.m., on ABC-TV). Special guests will be classical violinist Itzak Perlman and opera star Beverly Sills.

Denver, the singer/composer/guitar player who writes and sings about things Pat Benatar and other rock artists have largely ignored, has hosted numerous other TV specials. All have scored high in the ratings.

"These specials are the easiest things I've ever done, which kind of surprises me," he says. "At first, I expected them to be more difficult.

"I really don't notice any difference between singing on TV and singing in concerts, except you're playing to a live audience," he added. "The camera penetrates a lot more and it doesn't miss anything. That's a lot different than when people are sitting 30 or 40 yards away or even farther away in a concert hall."

John Denver's career is one of the entertainment industry's great success stories. For nearly a decade, he has been one of America's best-loved performers.

This career began in earnest when John replaced Chad Mitchell as lead singer in the Chad Mitchell Trio. After two-and-a-half years he went solo with his own composition, "Leaving On a Jet Plane." His first million-seller was "Take Me Home, Country Roads."

His album, "Rocky Mountain High," released in 1972, has sold nearly three million copies, and for four years "John Denver's Greatest Hits" has been high on the charts as one of the best-selling albums in American history.

Most of Denver's compostions evolve around the beauties of nature, and he's quick to say he's happiest when he is in his home near Aspen, Colo., high in the mountains.

"When I'm home, nothing in the world looks any better. I really enjoy being there," he adds.

"I don't hunt," he continues, "but I do love to fish, and I love the outdoor life."

John Denver sings about the joys of rural living, and, rest assured, he's certainly proven to be a qualified spokesman who speaks straight from the heart.

BEVERLY SILLS, free of her duties at the Metropolitan Opera, is bubbling over as John Denver escorts her through the outdoor life in "John Denver — Music and the Mountains," airing Friday, Apr. 24, (9-10 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Bee Gees To Host

A segment of NBC-TV's "The Midnight Special" that the Bee Gees hosted back in 1973 has been taken off the shelf and will be presented Friday, Apr. 24 (12:30-2 a.m.).

Others appearing on the show include Jerry Lee Lewis, Gladys Knight & the Pips, comedian Frank Welker, Johnny Nash, Jim Weatherly and Skeeter Davis. Wolfman Jack is the announcer.

Numbers the Bee Gees will be singing include "To Love Somebody," "Lonely Days," "I Saw a New Morning," "A New York Mining Disaster, 1941," "I Started a Joke," "Massachusetts" and "How Can You Mend a Broken Heart?"

Other highlights are:

Lewis: "Whole Lota Shakin' Goin' On," "Good Golly Miss Molly," "Tall Long Sally," "Jenny, Jenny" and "Tuitti Fruitti."

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — Odds are running two-to-one around town that as soon as LINDA EVANS' divorce from realtor STAN HERMAN is final, the "DYNASTY" star will tie the knot with actor GEORGE PIETRO. It looks like wedding bell are ringing everywhere . . . SUSAN SAINT JAMES is waltzing down the aisle with fellow thesp BRUCE LEWIS, and VALERIE BERTINELLI is about to become the bride of rock star EDDIE VAN HALEN.

Meanwhile, down on the ranch in "DALLAS" country . . . ANDY GIBB is so spaced-out over VICTORIA PRINCIPAL that he refuses to leave her side. This, incidentally, is driving the rock singer's agent in L.A. out of his ever-loving mind, too. He desperately needs to huddle with Andy regarding several important concert dates and recording sessions.

Another guy who's found the charms of an older woman to his liking is New York photog CHUCK CANNIZARO. He and BRENDA VACCARO will exchange wedding vows next month. He's 14 years younger, but who cares?? As the old saying goes, 'Love conquers all' — including age.

After 15 years of marriage, MICHELE LEE, one of the stars of "KNOTS LANDING," and JAMES FARENTINO have opted for a separation. Friends are hoping it's strictly a temporary arrangement.

DINO MARTIN, who's now a second lieutennant in the Air National Guard, soloed for the first time recently in a T-37 jet at an Air Force base in Mississippi. He celebrated the event by hopping aboard a commercial airliner the following weekend and flying to California to see DOROTHY HAMILL.

Two stars of NBC's epic "SHOGUN" are up for the roles that will send them running to the bank with yet another fortune in earnings. RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN's about to come aboard "THE THORNBIRDS," and CBS wants YUKI SHIMODA to star as Anna Chennault in their upcoming bio-pic, "CHENNAULT: THE FLYING TIGER."

THE GATLIN BROTHERS — STEVE, LARRY AND RUDY — will be introducing their own line of clothing for men and women within the next few month.

Wide World

A man of the soil.

FOR JOHN R. BLOCK, Secretary of Agriculture

In view of the fact that increasing numbers of young people are leaving family farms to live in cities, don't you think your department should organize a campaign to have them stay, or woo them into farming careers? Incidentally, what is our biggest agricultural export? —C.B., Odessa, Texas

● I regularly encourage young people to return to the farm (a life that I myself love so much). And, in fact, record numbers of college graduates are now returning to family farms. Although farm incomes have been very low in recent years, land and machinery assets place many farmers in management positions. Forecasts show that corn will be our biggest agricultural export in fiscal year 1981 ($11 billion), with Japan being the largest market (20 percent).

First clue: Cherchez la femme!

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What did Richard Hatch (who stars in Battlestar Gallactica) mean when he said his career is helping him with women? —S.E., Wenatchee, Wash.

● Hatch said before he went into the TV series and his current film Charlie Chan and the Curse of the Dragon Queen, he was very demanding. "But now I'm less critical and judgmental. I grew up on the beaches of California, and to me the perfect girl meant one who was blond and blue-eyed. Now I like dark-haired girls, too, also those who are intelligent, take chances and are honest. I'm not into casual relationships any more; it's hard to deal with because rejection makes all of us angry. Now I know that when the time is right for something romantic to happen, it will." What Hatch hasn't changed his mind about is "women who push themselves on you."

FOR IAN McKELLEN, star of Broadway's Amadeus

Please explain your remark that there is a connection between acting and politics. —B.H., Burlington, Vt.

● Because we both need "communication" in order to survive. Communication is especially important for English actors in this country — very often there is the complaint that it's hard to understand us. I, personally, am aiming for a Walter Cronkite-type accent. He's a superb communicator in both senses of the word. There is no chance of anyone misunderstanding him.

FOR LYNN REDGRAVE, star of Sunday Lovers

What household chores do you enjoy the most and dislike the most, and does your husband help you? —N.M., Bangor, Maine

● I like polishing silver because it's kind of relaxing and you see immediate results. I hate ironing because I'm not the best ironer. My pile always ends up looking worse than before I started. John does not help me, and I don't expect him to. I don't give him a hand in his office, and there's no need for him to help me.

FOR FRANCESCO SCAVULLO, portrait photographer

● Dogs. They don't wear makeup and couldn't care less about how their hair looks. Next come models. They know exactly what to do and how to do it, which makes the photographer's life so much easier. From our point of view, they earn every dollar of the high fees they get. Then there is Brooke Shields. It is impossible for her to take a bad picture.

FOR LORRAINE BRODEK, needlepoint expert and founder of "Fingerprints" kits

What tips do you have for a beginner? —V. Allen, Westchester, N.N.

● Keep your stitch and tension consistent. Never knot. When you are finished with a row, don't knot. Run the thread through other threads and cut off. Keep your materials away from pets. I recently had a call from a woman who wailed that her St. Bernard ate her kit. I suggested she either get a smaller dog or use bigger kits.

FOR GEORGETTE KLINGER, skin-care expert

What's the biggest mistake women make in terms of taking care of their faces? —E.P., Reno, Nev.

● By not becoming familiar with what type of skin they have and how to manage it. For instance, if they have an oily spot around the nose area, they treat their whole face as if it were oily — even though their skin toward the hairline might be dry. They also neglect their scalps, which causes problems, by either over- or under-conditioning, both of which are bad.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Does comedienne Goldie Hawn want to play serious roles now? —A.K., Monterey, Calif.

● She has said, "I would love to get my teeth into something that's not comedy," but feels when audiences go to see her films they want to laugh, not cry. "What I'd like to do and what I have to do are usually two different things." She feels that it's not possible to become a big star without sex appeal and adds that sexuality doesn't blend easily with comedy.

PRO AND CON

Should Federal Lands Be Further Opened to Oil Exploration?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Senator James A. McClure (R.-Idaho), chairman, Energy and Natural Resources Committee

Yes. The more oil produced here, the less we must import from OPEC. In order to achieve energy independence we should increase development of our own natural resources. The Federal Government is America's largest landowner, yet less than half that land is open to oil and gas exploration. The American people own that land, yet we are being gouged by foreign oil-producing countries because our Government has restricted oil exploration on much of our public lands. Think of that the next time you pay high prices at the gas pump.

CON Representative Jim Weaver (D.-Ore.), Interior Subcommitte on Public Lands

More than 25 percent of all Federal lands in the continental U.S. are already under lease for oil exploration. A recent General Accounting Office report found that more than three-fourths of all leases expire without even a preliminary drilling plan ever having been submitted. These leases, purchased for the paltry sum of $1 an acre per year, have been grabbed by speculators who hope the price of oil will continue to skyrocket. Let's get serious about developing the Federal lands already under lease before we put millions of new acres up for bid.

The I.R.S. Muscles The Middle Class

It's audit time, and I.R.S. agents have decided to get tough with middle-class taxpayers. Remember what they did to Al Capone.

By Ernest Volkman

The first clue that the Internal Revenue Service was about to have trouble with the normally obedient taxpayers of Michigan came early this year when the Detroit office of the I.R.S. began to receive a small flood of paper.

The papers were W-4 forms, those little forms on which employees declare their dependents so that employers can figure out how much withholding tax to take out of weekly salaries. But these forms were different than usual: Thousands of workers were suddenly claiming up to 99 dependents, meaning that, in effect, they were claiming no tax liability at all.

Even cautionary letters by the I.R.S., warning anybody who filled out the form this way that they faced prosecution, failed to stem the tide; and at the moment, nearly 4,000 Michigan taxpayers are telling the I.R.S. to go to hell.

What is happening in Michigan is only the tip of an iceberg: a growing middle-class revolt against the world's most voluntary tax system. And that, in turn, has fueled an escalating war between the I.R.S. and the middle class, the backbone of the entire tax system.

What set off the sudden tax revolt in Michigan? I.R.S. officials like to blame it on the widening influence of a number of tax-resistance groups, many of whom claim large numbers of dependents or exempt tax filing status to balk Uncle Sam's tax collectors. That's only partially true because the fact is that there are two root causes of the middle-class tax revolt, neither of them having much to do with tax-resistance groups.

First, the middle class is being crushed by taxes, assuming a bigger and bigger burden of a tax system that seems increasingly complicated and arbitrary.

Secondly, and even more importantly, the I.R.S. for some time has been abandoning its pursuit of big-time tax cheats in favor of a war against the ordinary middle-class taxpayers of this country. While the I.R.S. has been moving against the middle class, consider some of the big fish they've let get away:

- In New York, a major drug trafficker named Nicky Barnes, one of the biggest narcotics pushers in the United States, brazenly listed $250,000 in profits from narcotics sales on his 1979 income-tax return. I.R.S. agents never bothered informing other Federal crime fighters of that fact, nor did they show any interest in prosecuting Barnes.
- In Miami, crossroads for most of the estimated $40 billion annual illegal narcotics business in this country, police and Federal agents have received virtually no cooperation from the I.R.S. in nailing crooked bankers, lawyers and accountants who work with narcotics kingpins to hide all those illegal billions.
- In San Francisco, I.R.S. agents recently received a list from Federal agents indicating major criminals and how many millions of dollars they had concealed. When the Federal investigators tried to get the list back from the I.R.S., the agency said it had become a "confidential tax matter" and could not be returned.

Instead, the I.R.S. has been zealously pursuing the most defenseless targets in America, the small taxpayers. The targets range from independent truckers to hotel chambermaids to owners of mom and pop stores. Even some agents of the I.R.S.'s criminal investigation division concede privately that the agency has badly skewered its priorities by virtually ignoring major tax cheaters in favor of making "easy" cases against middle-class taxpayers.

The I.R.S.'s shift in targets is especially ironic in view of the fact that the agency's tremendous powers were once the scourge of narcotics kingpins, organized crime leaders and major white-collar criminals. Beginning with Al Capone, the I.R.S. ran up an impressive list of scalps, but those days seem to be long gone. "Right now," says Robert Rust, a former U.S. attorney noted for his prosecution of tax cases during his tenure in Florida a few years ago (he's now in private practice), "the I.R.S. is not putting forth the major effort it should be with regard to those individuals involved in the trafficking of money and narcotics, cases which other police agencies have great difficulty in making. The I.R.S. is involved in rinky-dink cases."

Some former and present I.R.S. agents are even more blunt. "They've shot all the tigers and put the rabbits in charge," says Richard Jaffe, a former I.R.S. field supervisor for the agency's intelligence division (now called the criminal investigation division). "It's a joke."

But it's no joke to the middle-class taxpayers caught in the squeeze. Increasingly, some of them simply overlook paying taxes on either all or some of their income as a means of quiet protest against the system. More popular is another form of tax evasion: the underground economy. Now conservatively estimated at somewhere between $40 billion and $70 billion a year — not counting criminal profits that escape the tax collector — that vast economy is composed of millions of middle-class taxpayers who have second jobs "off the books" or use a form of a no-cash barter system in some of their transactions.

Soaring tax rates are only part of the reason why so many individuals are defecting from the system. Taxpayer confidence has also been eroded by the sight of the I.R.S. expending its resources against small fry while the targets they should be moving against remain undisturbed.

Ironically, the I.R.S. is uniquely armed to get the big fish. Normally, if taxpayers have any face-to-face dealings with the I.R.S., they will almost always be dealing with the I.R.S. audit division.

Much more rarely, some taxpayers get involved with a little-publicized arm of the I.R.S. machinery, the criminal investigation division. Basically, that division is supposed to handle the cases of outright tax evaders.

At one time, the division was one of the most powerful, awe-inspiring agencies in the entire Federal Government. For one thing, the I.R.S. has an unparalleled source of intelligence information: your tax return. Among other details, your tax return can reveal how much money you earn, how you spent it, your religion, what illnesses you and your family have had and your political affiliations. The information is fed into a vast data bank on 80 million American taxpayers. The data lie in giant computers, retrievable in seconds by linked computer terminals at I.R.S. offices throughout the country.

The computers are the heart of a system that collects hundreds of billions of dollars in taxes each year on an estimated trillion-dollar-plus national income. That represents about 92 percent of all income — illegal and legal — earned annually in this country.

The beginning of the I.R.S. problem with the middle-class taxpayers began with those computers. By the time of the early years of the Nixon Administration, information from those taxpayer data banks was about as freely available throughout the Federal Government as a newspaper. The famous Nixon "enemies list" — a lengthy compilation of enemies of the White House who were to be subjected to tax harassment — marked something of a low point in a series of scandals that struck the I.R.S. during that period. All of them indicated clearly that the I.R.S. had been perverted into a political secret police that carried out political dirty work for the White House.

In the wake of those scandals, new regulations were promulgated to tighten up controls over the I.R.S. intelligence division. The new regulations, which include strict rules on dissemination of taxpayer data, have had an unfortunate side effect, making it much more difficult for the criminal division to get involved in major tax cases. And without major targets, the I.R.S. then shifted its sights to easier targets — the middle-class taxpayers. FW

Next week, FAMILY WEEKLY reports on the tactics the I.R.S. employs to collect its due.

CATCHING UP WITH THE MARATHON MAN

Who is America's greatest athlete? It might just be a 5-foot 9-inch, 128-pound blond who likes to run 140 miles a week and eat pizza with mayonnaise.

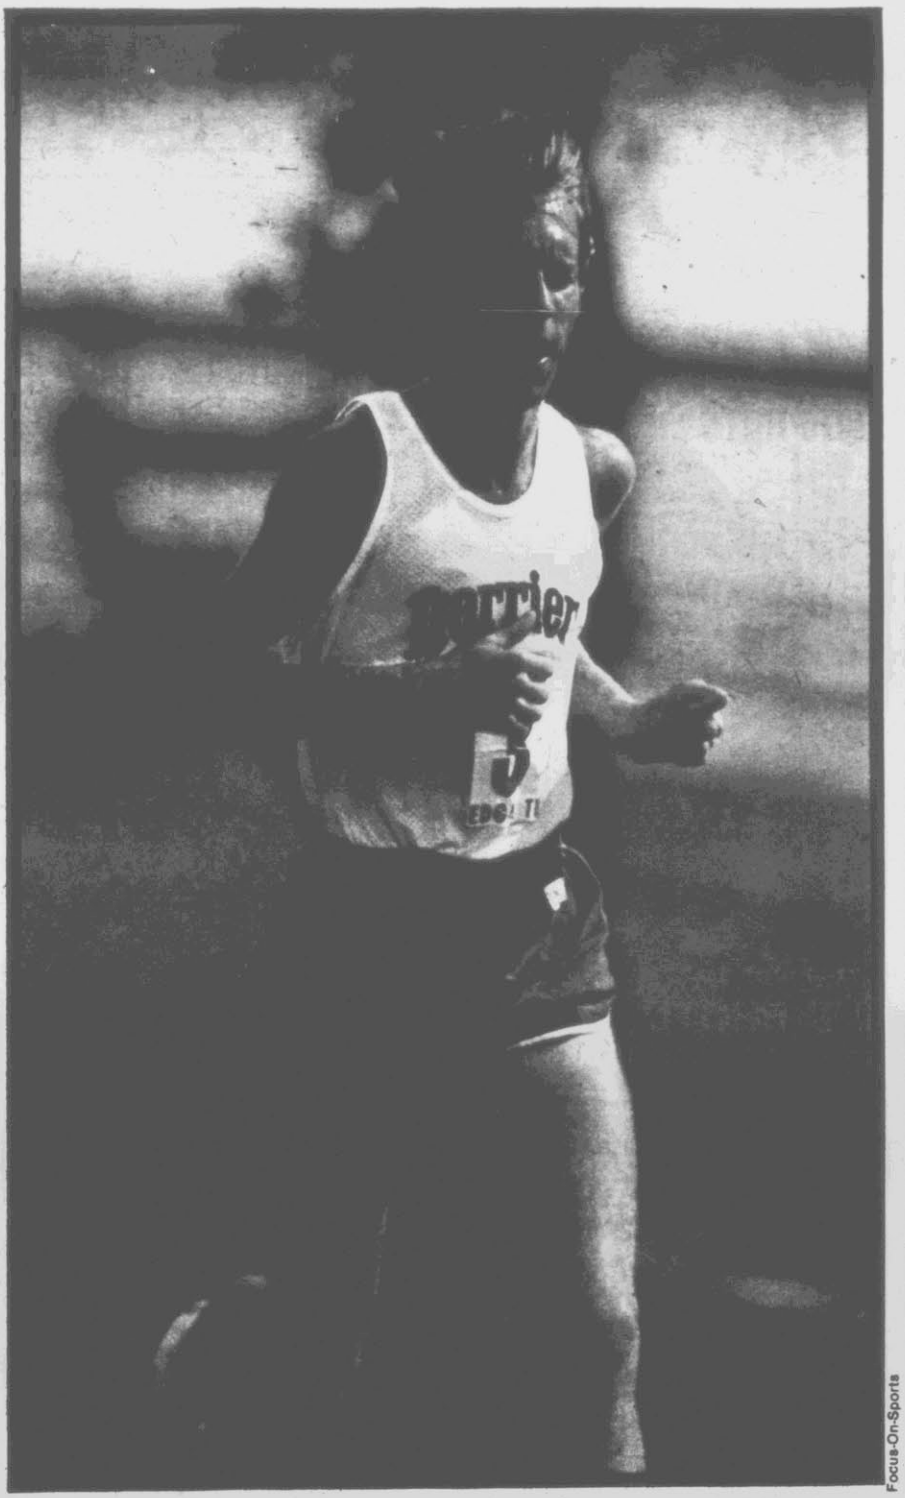

By Connie Paige

Bill Rodgers enters the kitchen barely panting after a 13-mile practice run — a mere tune-up for Monday's 85th running of his hometown Boston Marathon. At 33, Rodgers is America's finest long-distance runner, one of the world's great athletes and the man who, along with 1972 Olympic gold medalist Frank Shorter and writer Jim Fixx, has inspired millions of Americans to take to the road for exercise.

But here at home in suburban Boston, Rodgers, slight of frame and soaking wet from the chilly drizzle, seems almost a throwback to a small-town past: open, optimistic, honest, modest, a sort of Tom Sawyer of American sports. As youths in rural Newington, Conn., he and his brother, Charlie — in a fittingly symbolic act — used to run through the woods chasing butterflies.

There is one elusive butterfly that Rodgers continues to chase today: the Olympic gold medal. Despite covering the 26-mile-385-yard marathon stretch in record time, despite winning the last three Boston Marathons and despite taking four consecutive New York Marathons (his streak was stopped last October), he has been unable to run down that Olympic butterfly.

Injuries forced a disappointing showing in the 1976 Games — Rodgers finished 40th. But as 1980 approached, Rodgers became the favorite to win the gold. The Olympic boycott quickly shattered that hope, however, and the U.S. action is one toward which he still feels ambivalence. "I was bitter in the sense that so many people had no understanding of how hard we train as so-called amateurs," he comments. "They kept saying to me, 'Why don't you sacrifice?' For years, all we ever did was sacrifice. And then I saw all the inconsistencies, about the grain and tractor sales to the Soviet Union. I think they just buckled under to some politicians who suckered them along."

Focus-On-Sports

The finishing kick: "If I think I can win," he admits, "ho, am I tough." Says one opponent, "He's ridiculous. He comes out, destroys people and just goes home like nothing happened."

Rodgers feels that many Americans didn't appreciate the hardship the boycott imposed on the athletes because of excessive attention paid to pro rather than amateur sports, one of his pet gripes. "The belief that certain other types of athletes are superior is just bunk," says the 5-foot 9-inch, 128-pound blond. "I can't be overwhelmed by a guy who's 7 feet 4 inches and wears a size 15 shoe."

As youngsters in rural Connecticut, he and his brother—in a fittingly symbolic act—used to run through the woods chasing butterflies.

Rodgers says that right now, he plans to try again for Olympic gold in 1984. As he's written in his 1980 autobiography, Marathoning, "I'd rather have an Olympic medal than a million dollars."

The son of a mechanical-engineering professor and a nurse's aide, Rodgers says that as youths, both he and brother Charlie were "juvenile delinquents," by which he means they often went fishing in someone else's private pond.

It was in high school that Rodgers began to stand out from the pack. He and Charlie went out for track, a sport which then was all but ignored. For uniforms, they had sweatsuits with holes in them, hand-me-downs from the high-school football team. "It was easy to tell Bill was a good runner," reminisces Charlie dryly. "He's cruising around the track; you're gagging. He was much better than the rest of us at distance, had a better feeling for it. He also did more work. Bill's always wanted to run."

Being a long-distance runner isn't always so lonely. From somewhere out of this throng, Rodgers emerged to win last year's Boston Marathon.

In 1966 Rodgers won his first important meet, the Connecticut cross-country championship. The victory, plus consistently good grades, gave him an enviably wide choice of colleges to attend. He spent the next four years at Wesleyan University. Although he continued to run, Rodgers did not especially distinguish himself. But he did meet Amby Berfoot, winner of the 1968 Boston Marathon. Berfoot soon became Rodgers's roommate, training partner, his running mentor. "I was always in awe of Amby," Rodgers has said. "I still am."

After graduation, like many of his generation, Rodgers had to deal with Vietnam — specifically with the draft. "I believe you have to defend yourself," he says now. "But I didn't believe that was a defensive war by the United States." Granted conscientious objector status, he was assigned to do alternative service as an orderly at a hospital in Boston.

His tenure there was chaotic. The low wages prompted him to form a union, for which he was summarily fired. When he visited a week later, he found handbills posted around the hospital with his description and a warning to employees who saw him on the premises to call the police and have him arrested.

(One employee who was not deterred was a secretary named Ellen Lalone, whom Rodgers married in 1975. They have since separated.)

Rodgers had trouble finding another job, but his unemployment proved to be fortuitous because he resumed running after a two-year layoff. His first attempt at the Boston Marathon — in 1973 — was a disaster. He drank too much water during the early stretches, developed cramps and dropped out after 21 miles. Trying again in 1974, he finished at least but in 14th place. It wasn't until a shorter race later that year in Falmouth, Mass., a sleepy Cape Cod town, that Rodgers finally emerged as a formidable athlete, winning ahead of top miler Marty Liquori. The classic dark horse, Bill was confused with the famed humorist and the newspapers referred to him as "Will Rogers."

He was such an unknown, the newspapers referred to him as "Will Rogers."

But in the 1975 Boston Marathon, Rodgers finally caught the public's eye. His time of 2 hours, 9 minutes, 55 seconds set a marathon record (that's under five minutes per mile!) and, coming in a town that treats its homegrown athletes like royalty, he became an instant folk hero. Not only had he achieved a world-class time, but he had done so in a race traditionally won by foreigners. (He has since broken his own record.)

Around this time, Rodgers was also working at Fernald School, a home for the retarded in Waltham, Mass. He had sole responsibility for eight men and boys, teaching them how to use a spoon, brush their teeth and speak. The experience was to influence him profoundly. "There was a great feeling of sadness," he remembers, "but also so much that could be done, if only they had enough money to hire enough staff. But of course states don't do that. It's the old routine." So even now, remembering those days, he supports sports programs for the handicapped.

The end of the decade was marked by triumphs, with many awards abroad and the victories in four consecutive New York and three consecutive Boston Marathons. During the 1977-78 season alone, he won the two United States marathons and a third highly prestigious one in Fukuoka, Japan. After Boston 1979, Tom Fleming, also a world-class runner, was moved to say of Rodgers: "This guy has to be the best marathoner ever. He's ridiculous. He comes out, destroys people and just goes home like nothing happened."

None of it, however, has been that easy. Before the 1980 Boston Marathon, Rodgers was so nervous about his nemesis, the heat, that he woke up at 4:30 A.M. (He's a much better cold-weather performer, running best when he can don his garden gloves and knit cap.) He got cramps in the last six miles and finally hit what is called the "runner's wall," a sense of exhaustion that left him on the verge of tears. He won, but only by allowing what he calls "irrational animal consciousness" to take over. As he has said in the past, "If I think I can win, ho, am I tough."

If Rodgers performed such Herculean feats in the N.F.L. or the N.B.A., he would surely now be a millionaire several times over. But since he remains an amateur, he receives no financial compensation for his efforts — at least technically. While amateur athletes are government-supported in many nations, in the U.S. a labyrinthian system of under-the-table payments shabbily tries to pick up the slack.

A prime example of so-called "sham-ateurism" came to light after the 1980 New York Marathon, when it was claimed that marathon organizers had paid out a total of $57,000 to Rodgers and others. Rodgers says he returned his

$10,000 share but admits to having accepted that much again in "expenses." (Corporations often pay athletes' air fare, hotels, meals, etc.; in return the athlete may agree to exclusively use the company's product.)

Many amateur athletes, including Rodgers, explain that without some kind of financial support from sponsors, they simply could not afford to compete. Rodgers points out that while he was mowing grass at $1.65 an hour to support his sports habit, Joe Namath was signing a pro contract worth millions.

"There should be some kind of program by the Government," Rodgers suggests. "A dollar could be volunteered by Americans on their tax returns to sends athletes to international competitions. Also I think it would be financially feasible for the corporations to sponsor more amateur sports."

Currently, Rodgers owns three sporting goods stores called, what else, Bill Rodgers Running Centers. There he advises runners young and old, proselytizes for the sport and sells a multitude of warmup suits and running shoes. Complex amateur rules limit his profits, though, and he is forced to fly around the country, competing in many more marathons than his European, Asian and African counterparts. "It's very tiring, he admits, "but running is my business."

Breakfast of champions: Rodgers enjoys junk foods, but also pops vitamins, minerals, even bee pollen.

So far, this hasn't been a top year on the track circuit for Rodgers. Runners World magazine currently ranks him fifth among American marathoners, and he is not favored in his attempt to win a fourth straight Boston Marathon Monday. Rodgers foresees difficult competition from the Japanese, who are sending their best runners in an apparent all-out effort to import the crown. "It's a post-Olympic year," he muses, "which means it'll be tougher than last year."

Rodgers has been training for Monday's marathon in his usual fashion, running twice a day — 10 to 13 miles in the morning; six to nine more at a quicker pace in the evening. Two months before a race, he'll increase the evening runs to 10-mile sprints. And as the mileage goes up, so does his food intake. Unlike many runners, though, he stays away from loading up on carbohydrates for quick energy the week before a race. And surely unique among runners, Rodgers's training table includes such verboten goodies as cupcakes, chocolate chip cookies, candy, potato chips and pizza with mayonnaise. He explains his mysterious culinary strategy thusly, "I just like those foods. If you're really fit, you can get away with it."

He says he feels "fairly good," about Monday's race, but win or lose, marathoning brings him incredible satisfaction. Rodgers has always maintained that he runs mostly out of love, for the sheer physical joy of it and for the nostalgia of recapturing a flicker of childhood experience.

PAUL TIERNEY

Home on the Range With a Rodeo Champ

By George Wright

When Paul Tierney peels off his business suit and dons western boots and a 10-gallon hat, he isn't going dancing at honky-tonks or socializing at a backyard barbecue. That's for trendy urban cowboys.

Sally Scholz/The Plate Telegraph

Git down, little dogie: Tierney has lassoed, wrestled and tied a calf in under seven seconds.

America's No. 1 gen-u-ine cowboy, Tierney makes a living wrestling 800-pound steers and roping calves in rodeos from the Astrodome in Houston to the Wild West Arena in North Platte, Neb. But the nation's 1980 All-Around Cowboy would hardly fit the image of the leather-tough cowboys of yesteryear.

"Today's cowboy is a serious professional," he says, flashing a boyish grin beneath a white hat and glasses. "There's no place for drinkin' and smokin' and hell-raising cowboys. Oh, there are a few of the old-timers around, but for the professional cowboy in the money today, there's no place for all of that.

"Rodeo is a full-time job, 12 months of the year," the 29-year-old Rapid City, S.D., resident explains.

And the grueling schedule can be as tough on cowboys as a stiff-necked steer. Tierney will log 80,000 miles this year, riding in 140 rodeos from Arizona to Montana.

But the rewards now for a hard day in the saddle are a lot more than a tin cup of black coffee and a plate of beans. Tierney earned a record $105,000 during the 1980 pro rodeo season, winning more than $50,000 in calf-roping events and nearly $40,000 in steer-wrestling purses.

At the end of each year, the top 15 money winners in each rodeo event — saddle bronc-riding, bareback-riding, bull-riding, calf-roping, steer-wrestling, steer-roping and team-roping — as well as the all-round top money earners, go on to the National Finals Rodeo in Oklahoma City.

Tierney was the leader going into the national finals last December and emerged on top of this rodeo Super Bowl, earning a championship jeweled belt buckle and trophy saddle — plus $48,200 in prize money. (Tierney also lassoed more loot for endorsing western wear, saddles and ropes.)

Calf-roping is Tierney's specialty, and the Broken Bow, Neb., native holds the national record in the event — 6.9 seconds. But he's still practicing. "I'm always trying new things to improve my speed," he says. "There's only so much a horse can do for you. But once you leave the saddle you look for a faster way to tie a calf, a quicker way to handle a steer. You're working with animals and against them."

So far, animals haven't worked against Tierney too much. He's suffered only one serious injury in his pro career — a dislocated wrist in 1978 when he caught his hand in a rope coil while trying to rope a calf. It cost him six weeks from the rodeo circuit.

Tierney says he doesn't mind the bumps and bruises or all the miles that go with the job. Kelli, his wife of six years, travels with him on the circuit and helps drive their overhead camper during the hectic summer months when they may hop to two or three rodeos a day. Kelli herself competes in the barrel-racing competition, a timed event that involves riding a horse between standing barrels.

"She's 100-percent behind me. She knows I love to rodeo," says Paul. "Rodeo, especially last year, gives me a feeling of self-satisfaction. For the last 15 years I wanted to be the top cowboy. Now, I've reached my goal."

Tierney says he doesn't plan to remain tall in the saddle too much longer. In two or three years he says he'll just settle down on his ranch, admire his trophies and let the other fellows toss the steer, or the bull, whichever the case may be. FW

Observations

Blessed are the energetic. Some Pennsylvania nuns have an inspiring idea for a nation worried about energy: invest. Faced with a shrinking treasury and a $23,000 heating bill, the sisters prayed...and consulted a geologist. And then, with their "last red cent," they hired a local contractor to drill for gas on the convent's land. Their earthly reward was just half a mile down—gas enough to save the convent about $20,000 this year. The nuns' well should produce for 25 to 30 years. But, like the rest of America, they're also looking beyond that time for their next sources of energy, considering even exotic ideas like wind power.

Small miracles. Even as the search for more energy goes on, so does the quest to stretch existing supplies. New York's giant Saint Patrick's Cathedral, for example, used clock thermostats and more care with electric lights to trim 33 percent from last year's fuel bill. And, fittingly enough in this Easter-Passover season, some 350 synagogues across the U.S. have organized to slash their energy use by doing everything from installing storm windows to rescheduling services. But just using less isn't enough—especially for the needy; America needs more energy for economic growth, jobs, and social progress.

"Admirable faith and hope, Brother Michael, but would not geology also be a virtue?"

Multitude of savings. Like the energy-wise nuns, we've invested in energy security—to find and develop gas and oil...and coal, nuclear, solar, and other alternatives. And we're spending money so we can use our energy more efficiently. At Mobil's Torrance, Calif., refinery, for instance, we've improved insulation, maintenance, equipment and operations—investing $28 million in conservation since 1972. Last year alone, that saved enough energy over 1972's level to meet the gas and electric needs of the whole city of Torrance for two years.

Amen! Hand in hand with such improvements, we're also spending a record $4 billion this year to develop more energy resources worldwide—almost $2 billion of this in the U.S. Our total energy spending is well above what we earned last year...and 28 percent more than the huge investment on energy projects we made in 1980. It takes all kinds of investments—like ours, like the nuns' in Pennsylvania, like yours for better insulation or an engine tune-up—to brighten tomorrow's energy picture.

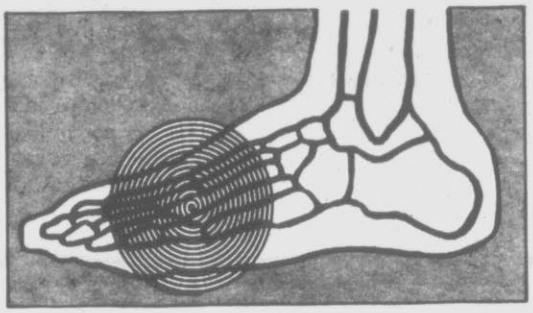

It's a fact: American oil companies drilled a record 60,000 wells in 1980, sinking enough pipe to bore through the earth's diameter nearly seven times.

My Feet Were Killing Me ...Until I Found Relief in Germany!

It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted — see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them — even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right than I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Germany with my own countrymen.

In the last nine years over a quarter million Americans of all ages—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom formed and made for *your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, pain in the balls of your feet, burning nerve ends, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet, Flexible Featherspring will bring you relief with every step you take or your money back.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Germany can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. No salesman will call.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE MIRACLE:

"Received my wife's Featherspring two days ago. They are super—neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years; already no pain. Incidentally, her sore knee is much better . . . As a retired physician, this result is amazing."

Dr. C.O.C./Tucson, Arizona.

"My husband felt a great relief and no more pain. They are truly an answer to our prayers. Only wish that he had heard of them twenty years ago."

Mrs. F.S./Metairie, Louisiana.

"I have checked your corporation with (A Consumer Protection Agency), and received an excellent report."

H.S.H./Louisville, Kentucky.

"I have been wearing your Featherspring Foot Supports for over a year now, and I just want to let you know the great comfort I am experiencing. Prior to wearing them, the pain and swelling in both feet and legs, especially the right, made me feel so drained. I too, say a million thanks for my Featherspring Foot Supports. Feel free to use my name. I have recommended them to many of our Sisters suffering from foot trouble."

Morgan Fairchild: TV's Wicked Witch Of the South

By Mark Goodman

The former Patsy McClenny lives with her sister in a modest apartment in the Westwood section of Los Angeles. She does needlepoint on work breaks, studies kung fu and takes an evening course in anthropology at U.C.L.A. She's interested in medicine, since her childhood idol was Louis Pasteur. And if all that isn't enough heresy, for sure, in trendy California, the lady reads Yeats.

The next line, of course is: That's why the lady is a tramp. She clearly is that — on the screen. Her name is Morgan Fairchild, and she is blond, gorgeous, intelligent and talented. She has made a name for herself in the past few years playing some of the most gloriously duplicitious screen witches since the early days of Barbara Stanwyck and now slinks and slithers in prime time on NBC's florid offering, Flamingo Road.

In this entertaining remake of the old Joan Crawford/Sidney Greenstreet potboiler, Morgan, 31, plays Constance Carlyle, the spoiled and vagrant daughter of the town's wealthiest citizen (Kevin McCarthy). It is plain that NBC has been touting Morgan as the feminine J.R. of this volatile southern town, though Morgan admits to being a little tired of playing bad girls. "I guess it's the blond hair and pointy nose," she says. "And unfortunately, in this business, if you do something well, you're stuck in it for the rest of your life. If you ask producers for other roles, they say, 'We can get an ingenue any time, but a good bitch is hard to find.'"

In fact, Morgan badly wanted the Joan Crawford role of the wronged good girl (Christina Raines). No soap. "Besides everything else," Morgan says, "I thought my character was one-dimensional, and I didn't want to sign my soul away for seven years. But," she adds, "there is the challenge to bring something else to the role. If you're playing a bad character, you have to try to look at it from the character's viewpoint; she doesn't think she's so bad."

from the former Patsy ("Patsy's a name that's only good till you're about 8 years old," she says) McClenny, who was so painfully shy at age 10 that her worried mother made her take elocution lessons on Saturdays, an activity that made her literally ill. "I was a teacher's dream," Morgan recalls. "I always got straight A's, and never said a word."

She grew up in Dallas, where her father is an engineer and her mother a middle-school English teacher. Young Patsy and her sister (now Catherine Hart and a graduate of The Juilliard School of Music) auditioned at a children's theater and landed roles as wood nymphs. Later Patsy got involved in community theater where, she says, "I worked with props, as a script girl, everything. I learned a great respect for the whole craft. It's not just a matter of getting out on stage and being brilliant."

At 17 Patsy married a man who managed rock bands and she started her career in dinner theaters and summer stock. In 1971 she came to New York City but found that most available work still lay on the road.

Around that time she divorced and changed her name to Morgan Fairchild. It sounds rather like a new-model car from Detroit, but she actually took her first name from the movie Morgan and its title character, played by her film idol, David Warner, who leaped about in an ape costume. "I consider myself a creation of my own fantasies," she once said. "And I sympathize with anyone who has fantasies they want to come true. Everybody thought Morgan was crazy, except me. I thought he was wonderful."

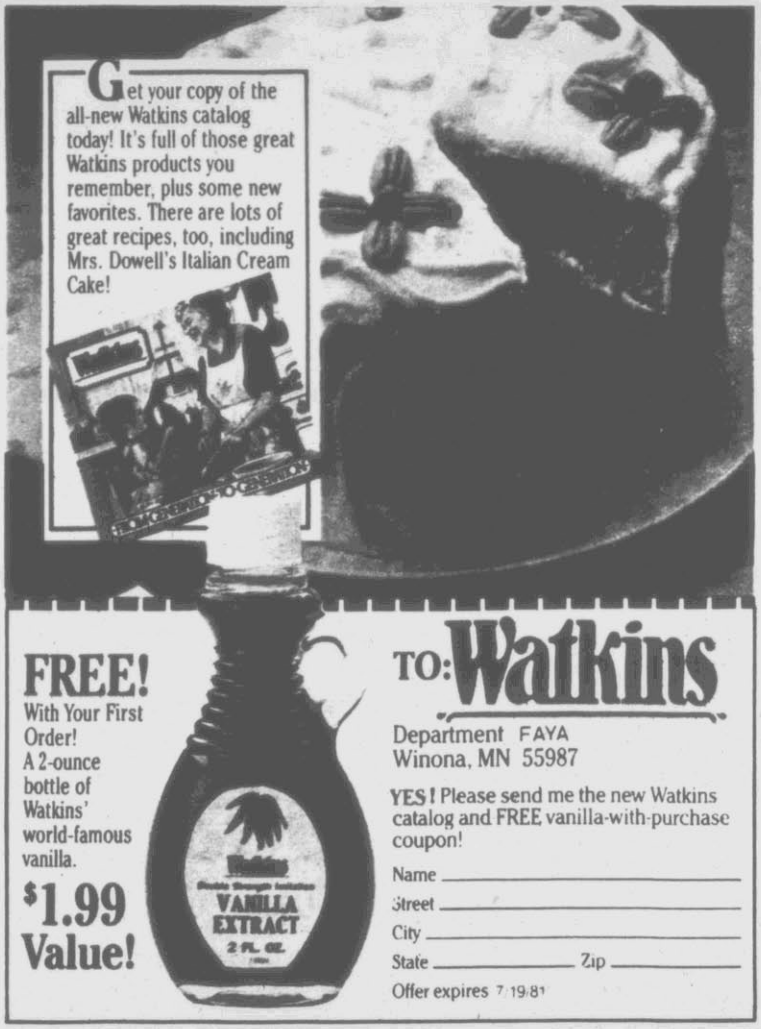

Instead of gorilla suits, however, she was soon donning her first she-wolf's clothes as the conniving Jennifer in television's oldest soap opera, Search for Tomorrow. In 1977, after a three-and-a-half-year run, Morgan decided to pack it in and give Hollywood a try.

She gained an immediate broomhold, and over the last three years has plied her beguiling brand of witchcraft on everything from Happy Days and Dallas to the TV movie Initiation of Sarah and the miniseries The Dream Merchants. Her screen roles began to affect her personal reputation. "I used to sit on location and do needlepoint," she says, "and people would shy away from me because they expected me to come on like a witch. When I didn't, they finally started saying, 'God, you're actually nice.'"

That in itself bothered her. "I began to get tired of trying to overcompensate when I met people," she says. "I was trying to gainsay my image, but I'm basically shy and have to reach out to get past that image. That meant taking the initiative, and that's hard for me."

Neither does she like the elaborately documented Hollywood life style involving men, clothes and stardom. "I hate being fawned over and all that goes with it," she says. "...I just want to be taken for what I am. Why can't you be a sexy lady and be taken seriously, too?"

In an upcoming film for TV syndication, The Girl, the Gold Watch and Everything, Morgan will play another rich and beautiful lady, but she's hoping to break out of this kind of role in the future: "I'm praying to God, that He will smile on some producer and a light bulb will go off in the producer's head and he will say to himself, Hey, she could play a nice girl." Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass

NEW LOW PRICE

Amazoy withstands active kids and cookouts. Gives you time to relax since it needs little water and cuts mowing two-thirds

GRASS SEED WILL NEVER GROW A LAWN LIKE THIS—DROUGHT & WEAR RESISTANT!

FREE! UP TO 600 AMAZOY PLUGS DURING SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER

By Jack T. Johnson, Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow...until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn "...is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in...Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

LAWN WATERED ONLY ONCE

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn —nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious, established Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long.

FOR SLOPES, PLAY AREAS, BARE SPOTS

End erosion of slopes with Amazoy. Perfect answer for hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas.

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS—PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds—from part shade to full sun. Goes off its green color after killing frosts. Begins regaining its green color at the time when the temperature in the spring is consistently warm. This, of course, varies with climate. Easy planting instructions with order.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed: like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills. Save time, work, money. Plug in Amazoy.

TWO GROWN MEN CAN'T PULL IT APART

So deep-rooted is Amazoy . . . it grows into practically indestructible turf. Amazoy thrives in porous, sandy soil, "builder's soil"—even salty beach areas! Beauty is but one advantage of Zoysia Grass. It's also so vigorous and rich it thrives in soils where lesser grasses have failed you repeatedly. Start your Amazoy lawn this Spring, and never re-seed your lawn again!

WEAR RESISTANT

When America's largest University tested 13 leading grasses for wear resistance, such as foot scuffling, the Zoysia (matrella and japonica Meyer Z-52) led all others.

Your Amazoy lawn takes such wear as cookouts, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it—or themselves.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 300 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

CUTS YOUR WORK, SAVES YOU MONEY

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement...ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by ⅔.

YOUR OWN SUPPLY OF PLUG TRANSPLANTS

¼ cup chopped dill or 1 tablespoon dry dill weed

1. Cut calves liver in ½-inch-wide strips. Toss with flour.
2. Heat butter and vegetable oil in large skillet or Dutch oven. Lightly brown liver a little at a time; do not cook all the way through. Remove from pan to serving platter when browned.
3. Add onion and garlic to pan and sauté until wilted, about 5 minutes. Drain off pan drippings. Add chicken broth and heat to boiling; deglaze pan, stirring up all browned particles with onion and garlic.
4. Add red wine; heat to boiling and boil 3 minutes. Add mushrooms, salt and pepper; cook 2 minutes, stirring.
5. Add liver to onion-wine mixture. Stir in sour cream and dill. Heat gently just until heated throughout. Makes 4 servings

WHAT IN THE WORLD

PATIENCE, DOCTORS

"When it comes to medical treatment, you, as a patient, have rights and you have options," stresses Dr. Isadore Rosenfeld. "Ask for them. And if the doctor doesn't like it, well, let the chips fall where they may."

Rosenfeld is the author of Second Opinion, an interesting, informative new book outlining the latest alternative treatments for numerous common ailments

Tracy Garner

— from heart disease to hemorrhoids, arthritis to hepatitis, ulcers to impotence.

"Many doctors don't mention your options," he says. "They often take the path of least resistance. And most patients are afraid to ask for a second opinion, fearful of antagonizing their doctor....But actually, most doctors would rather deal with a well-informed patient, because he will comply with the treatment better."

Rosenfeld isn't suggesting every sick person seek a second opinion. But he notes that "when a diagnosis will materially change your life or when you follow the doctor's instructions but still aren't getting better, then it's time to ask around."

OPEN-DOOR POLICY

Would you rather work for a man or woman? Before you answer, consider this: A recent study says female bosses are twice as accessible to their staffs. Psychology Today reports.

While teaching at the University of New Hampshire, management professor Natasha Josefowitz (now at San Diego State) observed 68 male and 102 female managers and found that women are more likely than men to keep their office doors open, to encourage interruptions from their staffs and to urge calls at home during nights and weekends. They are also less likely to have staff requests to see them screened out.

Josefowitz speculates that female execs may be more open because they're a minority in business and are thus less secure and more anxious to please. Male bosses, conversely, may allow less access because they fear that by showing concern, male colleagues will think they are not "tough-minded."

"HONEY, IS MY CAMEL STILL IN THE SHOP?"

Drivers whose cars break down on the 140-kilometer route between the Kuwait capital of Jahra, and Salmi, a crossing point into Saudi Arabia, are no longer deserted. Telephones have been installed to summon help. But don't hold your breath waiting for a tow truck.

Siemens Corp.

FUTURE JOCK

Within baseball's next decade, some young fireballer will probably throw a pitch 110 miles per hour, and at least one enterprising slugger will negotiate a salary higher than the gross national product of most Latin American nations. And chances are gizmos like electronic foul lines and strike zone sensors will pop up on the diamond.

Bob Nuebecker

Mizuno Corp. of Osaka, Japan, a sporting goods company fast making inroads into the U.S. major leagues, unveiled plans for such futuristic baseball items in New York recently. And the Phillies' Pete Rose, for one, expressed his awe of such Japanese ingenuity. "They are really smart guys," he said at the presentation. "...They've got brains that are hard to believe. I don't understand how they lost the war."

FAT CATS (AND DOGS)

Does your pet need a trip to the sauna? There's a good chance it might. Of the 45 million or so dogs in the U.S., 30 to 60 percent are significantly overweight, as are about 10 percent of this country's 24 million cats, Animals magazine reported recently.

Interestingly, unlike dogs, cats instinctively regulate their food intake. So why so many tubby tabbies? Quite simply, we're overfeeding them. And continually giving your pet rich treats and table food literally may be killing it with kindness. The mortality rate for a pet 20-percent overweight is 50-percent higher than normal.

RICHARD BENNETT

CLIPPING COLDS IN THE BUD

Norman Lake remembers how it all began. One evening back in 1953, the now 88-year-old engineer/inventor was working at his drawing board and felt a cold coming on. He started sneezing, and his nose began running. In desperation, Lake snapped a clothespin on his nose to keep the drips off his drawing board. It worked — the dripping stopped and, miraculously, the cold went away. Now almost 30 years later, Lake has modernized his clothespin treatment by inventing the Cold Clip, a U-shaped, three-inch piece of thin wire made of nickel-plated steel. On either end is an adustable plastic nub the size of a shirt button.

Mary Beatty

Lake, from Lancaster, Pa., says medical research supports his claim that the patented device wards off colds. Just slip on the Cold Clip when you feel one approaching. It can even be adjusted for hay fever sufferers, he adds.

● WHO HE? On Easter Sunday 1513, a certain Spanish explorer—shipmate of Columbus in 1493—discovered Florida, landing in the vicinity of what is now St. Augustine. His name? Hint: He was searching for the fountain of youth.

Ponce de Leon.

● Egg Yoke! Let's say 25 small chocolate eggs cost $3. If some are 10 cents each and the rest are 15 cents each, how many of each are purchased?

Fifteen 10¢-centers and ten fifteen-centers.

● Word Zoo! Add the name of a creature to complete each phrase: 1. A _____ in a poke. 2. A _____ in a manger. 3. A _____ in a china shop.

1. Pig. 2. Dog. 3. Bull.

● Tongue Tests! Say fast and repeat: Six spunky spacemen sat sipping sarsaparilla. Sharp shears sure speed shearing sheep. Imagine Marjorie managing a menagerie.

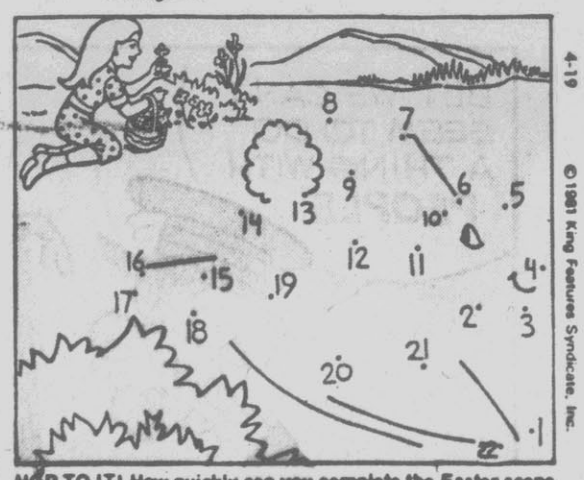

HELP PLANT THE TREES

Farmer Brown wants to plant 12 trees in six rows of four trees each. He has worked out a scheme for such an arrangement above. But there is at least one other entirely different arrangement that will produce the same result — six rows of four trees each. Can you find it?

It may prove helpful to experiment with 12 coins, after you have studied the scheme depicted above.

One way: Plant two vertical rows of four trees each. Then plant one tree on each side, top and bottom, to form an I.

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: AS VIKINGSHOLM SMOLDERS, MORDRED ENTERS THULE IN TRIUMPH. HE HAS PAID THE RABBLE FOR ITS WINK OF APPROVAL. THE PUPPET DALGRIND RIDES IN FRONT, BUT IT IS MORDRED WHO GIVES THE ORDER TO SACK THE CHURCHES, AND MORDRED WHO MEETS AT MIDNIGHT WITH THE GENERALS.

"CAMELOT IS NEXT," HE EXPLAINS. "DALGRIND WILL REMAIN BEHIND AS KING UNTIL OUR VICTORY IS COMPLETE. I EXPECT HIS REIGN TO BE SHORT."

ALREADY MORDRED'S MEN ARE FELLING TREES AND BUILDING GREAT WARSHIPS, AS THERE SEEM TO BE FEW BOATS LEFT IN THULE. THE WORK GOES SMOOTHLY, FOR MORDRED IS A COMPETENT COMMANDER. A MISSPENT LIFE BREEDS MANY TALENTS.

IS IT FATE OR THE PREVAILING WINDS THAT STEER AGUAR TO THE SAME BLEAK FENS IN BRITAIN THAT SHELTERED HIM THIRTY YEARS BEFORE? "REBUILD THE OLD LODGE," HE DECLARES. "THERE IS FISH AND GAME APLENTY. I WILL NOT HAVE ARTHUR'S CHARITY."

BUT PRINCE VALIANT IS STRANGELY QUIET, FOR HE WAS A BOY WHEN HIS FATHER WAS DRIVEN FROM THULE, AND HE HAS NEVER FORGOTTEN THE SHAME AND THE FEAR. HE SLIPS AWAY FROM THE BUSTLE AND CLIMBS A DISTANT KNOLL, COLLECTING WILDFLOWERS ALONG THE WAY. HIS MOTHER WAS BURIED HERE.

ONLY LATER DOES HE RECRUIT A YOUNG SQUIRE FROM AGUAR'S RETINUE: "TAKE THIS MESSAGE TO CAMELOT. STOP ONLY TO CHANGE YOUR MOUNT."
