Rainfall Lack Causes Concern

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A monthly rainfall over two inches below the average has pushed Pitt County's field crops to an "almost critical" stage, according to farmers and county agricultural agents.

"In the fields the situation is almost critical," reported county extension agent Sam Uzzell, "and in some fields it is critical."

Over the past ten years, Pitt County has averaged 3.31 inches of rain in April, according to Greenville Utilities Water Plant records. This year, only .73 of an inch of precipitation has fallen.

"There is very little tobacco standing up in the county," noted Uzzell, "and we have had reports that people are having to replant tobacco." In addition, the farm agent explained that people are not setting out tobacco unless they have subsoil moisture.

"If we get some of the showers that are predicted for tomorrow the situation will improve considerably," he added.

Corn, according to Uzzell, is holding its own. "It's not growing much at this point but is not hurting too badly," he said.

This week is a critical period for small grains and wheat, he noted. "These do fairly well in dry conditions, but if they don't get rain this week the yield potential could be severely reduced."

"I think people are surprised that their gardens are growing as well as they are under the conditions," continued the farm agent, "although there's no point in putting seeds in the ground right now." Fruits, he said, are in good shape.

Cool nights haven't been a problem for crops but days have been. "What's really hurting them is the hot, dry, windy days," Uzzell explained. "The fertilizer is very close to roots of plants and should it touch them, it could hurt."

Reagan Backing Plane Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is going ahead with the sale of sophisticated radar reconnaissance planes to Saudi Arabia, but he's stalling in sending the plan to Congress in hopes of quelling strong opposition there and averting a threatened veto.

The White House formally announced the sale Tuesday — triggering criticism that it is a "dangerous action" and a "mistake" — but dropped plans to send the proposal to Congress next Monday.

"It may be a period of time before we send it up there," White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters Tuesday.

One congressional source, who asked not to be identified, said the White House was stalling because a majority of the Senate opposes it, with 51 members ready to vote against it and 38 members planning to support it.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker Jr., who talked to Reagan by telephone shortly before the announcement, believes the president should not send the proposal to Congress until after the Israeli elections June 30 in hopes that opposition will have abated by that time, Senate sources say.

Baker was to fly from Knoxville today to meet with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. about the sale and with Reagan on Thursday.

When the arms package is sent to Congress, it will include the five AWACS command planes that have drawn the greatest opposition, as well as gear to enhance 62 F-15 jet fighters the Saudis have on order, Speakes said.

Opponents say the sale would increase the Arab threat to Israel, and that secret equipment on the AWACS — Airborne Warning and Control Systems — planes might be compromised.

In Tel Aviv today, the Israeli government voiced "profound regret and unreserved opposition" to the sale of the AWACS planes and F-15 equipment. Prime Minister Menachem Begin summoned U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis to express the government's displeasure.

Calling the sale a "very, very unpleasant decision," Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori said Israel would fight it by appealing to the Reagan administration and the U.S. public, "explaining to them bhat this means."

Israeli defense experts say the AWACS planes could monitor every move of the Israeli air force, depriving it of its ability to launch a surprise first strike, the basis of Israeli defense doctrine.

Zippori said he was sure Israel would find ways to meet the AWACS threat but "it will place a heavy burden on our security forces and we are reaching a stage where that burden is becoming too heavy to bear."

Responding to the Israeli criticism, Speakes said today that the United States is committed to the security of Israel and "the Reagan administration considers Israel a friend and an ally."

He said the administration does not regard the arms deal as a threat to Israel's security, but as "a stabilizing influence in the Middle East" and a factor in countering "the Soviet threat in the Middle East."

"We would not do it if we didn't think it was the right thing to do," Speakes added.

Congress can block the sale with rejection by both the House and Senate, but the 30-day veto period does not start until the sale is formally presented.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said in a statement that he will try "to block this dangerous action."

He said the Saudis do not need the AWACS, which he called "offensive weapons that can easily be used to threaten the security of Israel, our closest ally in the Middle East."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said he will oppose the AWACS sale unless it is part of a U.S.-Saudi security arrangement, with the planes jointly commanded and controlled by Americans and Saudis.

Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Near East subcommittee, called the sale "a mistake" facing "certain defeat in the Senate."

But Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the package's fate in Congress depends on conditions the administration is trying to negotiate with the Saudis.

"It depends on what the package is and what understandings have been reached and what conditions are being laid down," Percy said.

He indicated that the negotiations deal with assurances that the AWACS and F-15s will not be used against Israel, and that secret electronics gear on the AWACS planes will not be compromised.

Plan's Effect On Hospital Seen Slight

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

A proposed one-day surgical center may have a slight impact on the overall cost structure at Pitt County Memorial Hospital but, in general, the hospital is supporting plans for the new facility, PCMH Director Jack Richardson said today.

"We have such a demand from surgical patients ... that over the long run we will continue to have all the surgical patients we can handle," Richardson said.

The Eastern Carolina Surgical Center proposed by 18 Greenville physicians would provide one-day service for ambulatory patients — those patients who could check in during the morning, undergo a surgical procedure and then go home that afternoon. No patients would remain overnight.

Such centers are being promoted across the country, with the support of health insurance carriers such as Blue Cross-Blue Shield, as a means of containing costs. An experimental project by Blue Cross-Blue Shield last year indicated that patient costs on some surgical procedures could be reduced by 50 percent or more.

Richardson agreed with the contention that costs would be reduced, noting that the proposed surgical center would not have the fixed overhead costs or the expenses related to 24-hour care that are incurred by the hospital.

Initially, Richardson said, the surgical center might have an impact on the hospital's overall cost structure — by shifting to other areas the burden of paying overhead expenses now covered by the easier surgical procedures. But he predicted the overall cost-expense structure would soon balance out and stabilize.

As a county hospital, PCMH would continue to receive patients who are unable to pay for the operations. Expenses for such treatment are spread over other areas of the hospital's program. As a private business venture, the surgical center presumably would require payment for services rendered.

Richardson expressed confidence, however, that normal growth would cover any loss experienced as a result of the surgical center. PCMH is now operating at 92 percent of its bed capacity, which he described as the maximum practical level.

The hospital performs about 10,000 surgical operations annually and has shown an 8 percent increase in the number of operations over the past year. Many of those operations — possibly a fourth — are for ambulatory patients who go home the same day, Richardson said.

PCMH has offered the one-day surgical service for seven years, Richardson said, making it the first hospital in eastern North Carolina to do so.

Coincidentally, the hospital and Blue Cross-Blue Shield are cosponsoring a regional conference May 14 at PCMH on ambulatory surgical service.

Sponsors of the proposed Greenville center say it will be open to any surgeon who has access to the hospital's facilities.

Radioactive Water Leaked

OYSTER CREEK, N.J. (AP) — Workers at the Oyster Creek nuclear generating plant today were digging up soil soaked with radioactive water and placing it in barrels to be buried at a nuclear waste dump in either South Carolina or Nevada.

Meanwhile, an inspector from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission was investigating why at least 10,000 gallons of slightly radioactive water seeped into the ground outside the plant Tuesday morning.

The water spilled into a catch basin, seeped through the walls of a building and into the ground, authorities said.

A nuclear engineer for Jersey Central Power & Light, operators of the plant, said radiation levels were measured at less than 1 millirem per hour at the site and no readings above normal background levels were found 10 feet from the spill.

Authorities reported no injuries.

Engineer Mark Budaj said the spill was blamed on "the failure of a valve packing device in the plant's condensate system."

The plant has been shut down since April 18 for multi-million dollar changes ordered by the NRC. The six-week shutdown should cost $400,000 per day, JCP&L spokesman George Metzgar said.

"It was a mechanical failure that was not in any way associated with the work going on at the plant now," Budaj said Tuesday afternoon.

Explode Weapon

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — The Soviet Union detonated a powerful underground nuclear explosion early today in Western Siberia, the seismological institute of Sweden's Uppsala University reported.

The explosion measured 6.9 on the Richter scale of the institute's seismograph. The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion. An earthquake measuring 6.9 would be capable of causing severe damage.

There was no immediate Soviet comment on the report.

Police Checking Report Two Dead Youths Knew Each Other

ATLANTA (AP) — County police say they're investigating reports that the 25th victim in a series of slayings of young blacks, Michael C. McIntosh, may have known Joseph Bell, the 24th victim.

A medical examiner said, meanwhile, that it WAS "reasonable" to assume that the attack on McIntosh was sexually motivated because his body was found nude.

McIntosh and Bell, whose bodies were pulled from suburban rivers within a day of each other earlier this week, were known to hang around the same southwest Atlanta fried-fish restaurant, Fulton County Police Chief Clinton Chafin said.

McIntosh, 23, whose body was found in the Chattahoochee River in southwest Fulton County on Monday, came frequently to Cap'n Peg's restaurant to look for odd jobs, authorities said.

Bell, 15, also a frequent visitor to the restaurant, was last seen there before his body was discovered in the South River in suburban DeKalb County on Sunday, said Chafin.

Many of the victims in the mysterious slayings have been south Atlanta "street kids," and some have been reported to have known each other.

Eddie Duncan, father of victim Eddie "Bubba" Duncan Jr., has said his 21-year-old son was a friend of Timothy Hill, 13. Both were found dead last month along rivers near Atlanta.

McIntosh's name was placed Tuesday on the list of cases being investigated by a special task force after medical examiners said he probably had died of asphyxiation, like at least 13 of the other victims.

Medical examiners have determined that five of the last six victims died of asphyxiation. In the sixth case, no cause of death could be established because of the decomposed condition of the body.

Dr. John Feegel, associate Fulton County medical examiner, said a lack of marks on McIntosh's body prevented a positive ruling on the cause of death. But he said it was "some type of asphyxial death, and we are going to classify it as an asphyxiation due to some type of suffocation."

Feegel said there were no signs of sexual mutilation on the body, but because it was nude when found, he said it would be "reasonable" to assume the death was sexually motivated.

He has said in previous cases that the finding of bodies clad only in underwear is suggestive of a sexual motive in the killings, but police have said that is only one of many possible motives they are considering in the deaths.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said McIntosh was added to the task force list because of "similarities in his profile and that of some of the other victims."

McIntosh is only the third adult on the list, which otherwise includes only black children between the ages of 7 and 16. Like the other two adults, McIntosh was of small stature, standing 5-foot-5 and weighing only 120 pounds.

McIntosh had a criminal record, but a neighbor said, "the only trouble he gave was to himself."

Ella H. Simmons, who lived next door to McIntosh's adopted mother, said the young man called her both his grandmother and godmother.

Mrs. Simmons said McIntosh's adopted mother died more than a year ago and he lived alone in the house until about two months ago, when it burned down. Since then, she said, he came by her house regularly to collect his mail, but never told her where he was living.

McIntosh, who was unemployed and apparently lived alone, was last seen about three weeks ago when he left his sister's home in southwest Atlanta, according to authorities who said he never was reported missing.

Authorities said from 1976 until his release from prison in 1979, McIntosh served sentences for drug convictions, criminal attempt to commit burglary, aggravated assault, burglary and theft by receiving stolen property.

His criminal record provided the fingerprints used to identify his body.

McIntosh is the sixth young black found slain since March 6, when the body of 13-year-old Curtis Walker was pulled out of the South River. Those six include all three adults on the task force list, and five of the seven victims who have been found in area rivers or along their banks.

The task force is also investigating the disappearance of 10-year-old Darron Glass, who has been missing since last September.

In other developments Tuesday:

—Mayor Maynard Jackson said Atlanta should hire at least 400 more police officers because the investigation of the murders of the young blacks has harmtd overall law enforcement in the city.

Jackson, who lost an earlier battle with City Council over the hiring of additional officers, said he would propose a property tax increase if no other way can be found to finance the hiring of additional officers.

—The Guardian Angels, a street patrol formzd in New York City, announced the formation of a chapter in Atlanta to combat crime.

Bomb Kills Two In Iran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A bomb hidden inside a mini-bus exploded today on the outskirts of Tehran, killing two people and wounding 10, the official Iranian news agency Pars reported.

There were rumors that there had been an attempt to assassinate Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of the Iranian revolution, but official sources reached by telephone in Tehran denied them.

They said the bomb explosion was the only unusual incident reported. They said the religious and political patriarch is confined by his age and health to his residence miles from the site of the explosion, which occurred near the late shah's Niabaran Palace.

Nurses Given Pay Raise

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pay for entry-level registered nurses at Pitt County Memorial Hospital will be raised to $7.25, effective July 1, the hospital board of trustees decided last night.

This measure was taken in an effort to give the nurse recruiters of the hospital better ammunition during the prime recruiting time — June, July and August, the trustees indicated. They said studies are underway of other hospital employees' pay scales. "We would like to something for all our employees," Associate Director Rick Gilstrap said.

Director of Nursing Betty Trought indicated delight that the increased nurse pay has been provided, especially in view of the expectation that the new bed tower could be ready for opening earlier than was previously predicted.

Building Committee Chairman Charles Gaskins said it's now anticipated that the bed tower could be finished by the builders a good 70 days earlier than is called for in the contract — possibly as early as Nov. 1. The 36-bed psychiatric unit will be ready for opening May 4, he said, and will be second to none in the whole country. The administrative office renovation should be completed by May 30.

Voting on whether to establish a chaplaincy program at PCMH was delayed until next month. The board is awaiting a decision by the N. C. attorney general on whether a state-supported institution can fund a chaplaincy program out of its operating budget. Noel Lee Jr., chairman of the chaplaincy committee, reported on the committee's findings. He said "We find the need for a full-time chaplain prevalent and desirable" and that the program, if approved by the full board, should get underway in October of this year, at the

At Wit's End

The local March of Dimes staged a gala gourmet cook-off recently, pitting one culinary artist against another. The audience was breathless as the mistress of ceremonies announced the winner of the second prize for marinated mushrooms — ERMA BOMBECK!

They were stunned for a moment. My heart stopped beating. Would they buy it? A kitchen outsider who had a reputation for living by the box? Who thought gourmet was married to Steve Lawrence, and who used a slotted spoon to mix paint?

Finally, the audience broke into applause. It was a moment to reflect on how I had gotten to this point of triumph.

Three months ago I was wandering through a supermarket picking out every box that read "JUST ADD WATER" and tossing it into my basket.

From out of the shadows stepped a man who introduced himself to me as Professor Higgins. He said he had made a wager to his friend that he could make a gourmet cook out of me in three months. "Do you know any French?" he asked.

"But of course. Meringue, bon appetit and Louis Jordan."

"Come to my house at 3 tomorrow," he said.

I was to learn more about gourmet cooking than I wanted to know. Unless you couldn't pronounce the recipe, have a pan for it or buy the ingredients, it wasn't gourmet.

Every day, Professor Higgins drilled me in the rudiments of cookery:

"Who was the greatest French cook who ever lived?" he shouted.

"Sara Lee!"

"No, no, no," he screamed. "What do you do with bechamel?"

"If you do it in public, you apologize or lay off the radishes."

"Wrong! How do you clean octopus?"

"Very carefully."

His friend said I was hopeless and he'd lose his bet, but Professor Higgins persevered. One day I repeated tiredly, "The sauce Bearnaise stays mainly on the range . . ."

"I think she's got it," he said, and proclaimed me ready for my big test — the cook-off.

As I walked to my seat clutching my honors, a woman asked, "What does your recipe mean when you say 'wash the mushrooms in acidulated water'?"

I smiled confidently. "That's in case something has wet on them that you don't want to think about."

I blew it! Pity. I could have cooked all night.

COOKING IS FUN

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

There's an old-fashioned cookie that each new generation of cooks seems delighted to discover.

Irma Rombauer in her "Joy of Cooking" called these cookies Jelly Tots. Old-time Shaker cooks in Hancock, Mass., called them Jelly Dots. Other cooks named them Thumbprints. But by whatever name they go, they're made from a simple, rich dough, shaped into balls and pressed with a thumb — then each imprint (indentation) is filled with jam, jelly or some other sweet concoction.

One difference among the versions: the Shaker cookies are made with brown sugar instead of the usual white, and they are rolled in nuts — variations our tasters appreciate. One change of our own: we like to fill some of the indentations with pretty red strawberry preserves, the rest with spicy bought ginger marmalade.

SHAKER-STYLE THUMBPRINT DOTS

½ cup (one ¼-pound stick) butter
¼ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1 egg yolk (from a large egg)
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
1-3rd cup (about) finely chopped (rice-grain size) unblanched or blanched almonds, filberts, pecans or walnuts
Thick homemade or commercial strawberry preserves or imported ginger marmalade

In a medium mixing bowl thoroughly beat together the butter, sugar, egg yolk and vanilla. With a spoon gradually stir in the flour until smooth. Cover tightly and chill until firm enough to handle. Work with half of the dough at a time, keeping remaining portion chilled.

Using 1 tablespoon for each, shape dough into balls; roll in nuts. Place about an inch apart on ungreased cookie sheets; gently press a thumb into the center of each ball to make a shallow indentation; fill indentations with preserves — about ½ teaspoon for each.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until lightly browned — about 12 to 15 minutes. With a wide metal spatula remove to wire racks to cool. Store in a tightly covered contgainer.

Makes about 1½ dozen.

Bowlegged Teen Wants Answer From Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've never seen my problem mentioned in your column. I'm bowlegged. I am 18 and not a bad-looking guy, but there's a separation of about five inches between my knees when I stand up straight.

I am so self-conscious about this that I'm afraid to ask a girl for a date. My parents tell me not to worry about it, but I can't help feeling inferior and deformed. I even went to a doctor and asked him if something could be done, and he just laughed at me.

Abby, do you know of any bone specialist who could break my legs and reset them? Or maybe put my legs in braces to straighten them out? Or am I too old for that? I would do just about anything to have straight legs like other guys.

Please don't tell me to thank God that I can walk. (Everybody tells me that.) I am praying that you won't let me down.

BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE

DEAR BOWLEGGED: You have a problem that is far more serious than bowed legs. It's the way you perceive yourself. Please see a psychologist or psychiatrist. He (or she) will not laugh at you. Your thinking, not your legs, needs straightening out. In the meantime, consider this "prayer":

"God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can, and the wisdom to know the difference."

DEAR ABBY: How does a person get a letter to you? Our newspaper never prints your address. Also, do I have to sign my name in order to be answered in your column?

WONDERING IN HONG KONG

DEAR WONDERING: Write to ABBY, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. And you need not sign your name. Because column space is limited, obviously every letter will not appear in print.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I loved your answer to the Minneapolis man who was embarrassed by the loud laughter of his ladyfriend whenever they went to a comedy. (You said, "Hearty explosive laughter is characteristic of an uninhibited, outgoing personality — a healthy plus.")

For 25 years, my sister-in-law told me to "hold it down" every time I laughed in public. Even when others around us were laughing more loudly than I, I was told to "tone down" or "be quiet." (Sometimes she wasn't that polite.) It put a damper on my spirits and spoiled my fun, so as much as I like this sister-in-law, I have quit going places with her.

I can't help how I laugh. People have told me I sound like Phyllis Diller. Well, I take that as a compliment, as she seems to be a lady who enjoys life to the fullest and isn't afraid to be herself.

Homemakers Haven

By Addie Gore

A slow cooker can offer you an energy-efficient way to prepare food. For even though it's on for six to 10 hours at a time, the slow cooker uses only about the same amount of electricity that a standard light bulb would use in that same amount of time.

A slow cooker is convenient to cook with, too. Once you get the food ready to put into it, you don't need to fuss with it again until you're ready to serve.

Another plus for the slow cooker is that it can help you make less expensive foods taste delicious.

How can food be safe if it's cooked at such low temperatures for such a long time? To test to see if your slow cooker is reaching a high enough temperature, pour refrigerated water into it. This water will be about 40 degrees. Then turn the cooker to the setting recommended for meat. After two hours, the water should be about 165 degrees. After eight hours, the temperature should be about 180 to 200 degrees. You can check these temperatures with a meat or candy thermometer.

There are two important factors that help determine the safeness of food prepared in a slow cooker. The food should be safe to eat if the proper temperatures have been reached and if the food isn't left in the slow cooker after the heat has been turned off.

One final food safety reminder: Don't overload your slow cooker. Overloading may lead to food safety problems.

Nurses Not Working

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — There is a wide gap between the number of students graduating from nursing schools and the number who go on to work as nurses, according to a survey by the North Carolina Area Health Education Centers Program.

The 1980 Nurse Manpower Survey shows that only 72 percent of the licensed registered nurses in North Carolina are working as nurses, despite a growing need for their services.

Data from the Health Services Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill indicates there are 35,030 licensed registered nurses in the state.

But the survey also shows that 1,353 budget nursing positions are vacant and an additional 2,965 nurses are needed although they are not budgeted for in hospitals, long-term care facilities and health departments across North Carolina.

More than 84 percent of the state's health care institutions responded to the survey.

The survey goes on to say that if about 27 percent of the inactive nurses in the state would return to nursing, all of the currently budgeted positions could be filled.

North Carolina's nursing shortage, the survey says, is caused by problems in education, recruiting and retaining nurses and are similar to problems nationwide.

"Now, every profession is competing for talented women," said Dr. Eloise Lewis, dean of the school of nursing at UNC-Greensboro, in an interview. "But those who invest in a nursing education often find that their returns on investment are not as attractive over a long period of time in nursing."

In 1980, the survey showed that beginning registered nurses in North Carolina earned an average of $5.35 an hour while a nurse with five to 10 years experience earned $6.32 an hour.

Students Give Workshops

ECU News Bureau

Several music therapy graduate students in the East Carolina University School of Music directed workshops at a program for professionals at N. C. State University's Jane McKimmon Center.

The workshops were designed to demonstrate the "significant role" of music in the "celebration of life" and to stimulate the crative use of music in settings where older adults and other special populations reside.

Each was followed by activities to promote music as an "important medium for healing and caring."

Thomas Hawley directed a session on "Integrating Music into Geriatric Activity Programs."

A second workshop, "Developing Interactions Between Older Adults and Children Through Music," was led by Adelaide Miller, Martha Agnew, Roy Kennedy, Regina Gober and Martha Knutson. The title of the program was "Music, Laughter and Tears."

New Jobs Developed

Farming is a strong part of Pitt County's economy and it will without doubt continue to be into the foreseeable future.

There is another part, however, which was virtually non-existant a couple of decades back.

That would be the rapidly growing industrial base of the county. Industrial jobs are new to most of our citizens but thousands of us have jobs in industry with salary and benefits which were not to be found in the past.

The climb in the county's manufacturing wages has been dramatic — from $26.2 million in 1970 to around $80 million. Even accounting for inflation, that is an indication of real additional dollars in circulation. In 1970 there were 4,850 employed in industry. Now there are more than 7,000.

The county's industrial wages now exceed income from tobacco, which was $66 million in 1980. The industrial wages have not yet reached the total farm income from the county of $129 million but obviously they are gaining.

Pitt industrial expansion couldn't have come at a better time. As farming became more mechanized that sector furnished less jobs, and the industrial positions were needed to replace those lost in farming.

We could not have a better balance than the varied industries which have located in Pitt County along with a continued strong farm economy. There will be need for additional jobs for our population and clearly the answer is further industrialization.

Private Collectors Worth Try

The federal government is going to be able to turn to private collection agencies for collection of money owed to the government.

An amendment ot the Federal Claims Collections Standards will allow this proceedure.

It is an idea that has appeal. From what we have seen of private collection agencies it would appear that they get what they go after. The method in some cases could be far superior to cranking up the federal bureaucracy to go after a government debtor.

It is possible that private collectors will bring in more return and at a lower cost that traditional government collection methods. The idea is going to get a trial.

Prison Labor

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Problems seem to dominate conversations in the General Assembly regarding expanded use of prison inmate labor to relieve the financial pressures on the state's highway system.

At first glance, it looks like using prisoners would be a good way to get the job done with less money. But the more study is given to the matter, the more complex it becomes.

Roads have changed a lot since the simple days of chaingang labor when much of the work was done by hand. Today, the work is largely mechanized and operating sophisticated equipment requires a lot of training and experience.

Then there is the matter of cost. Prisoners must be paid, even if the wages are low. And, they must be provided transportation to and from the work site, a procedure complicated by the fact that prison units are not always close to where the work is needed. And for prisoners requiring close custody, guards must be provided.

Even so, a lot of knowledgable people are convinced that use of inmate labor is a workable idea and should be expanded.

Infighting

It appears that some of the resistance is gererated by bureaucratic infighting involving the two state agencies concerned: Department of Correction and Department of Transportation.

Just five years ago the General Assembly insisted upon a return to the system of using inmate labor on the highways; a practice which had fallen into disrepute because of the cruel image of chaingangs. Even prisoners were asking for the job opportunities; a chance to get out in the fresh air and sunshine, make a few dollars, and occupy their time.

But no money was

appropriated. Legislators felt that the Department of Transportation should pay for the prisoners and would have the funds to do that by saving dollars which would otherwise have been spent for even more costly roadwork.

After a delay of more than a year, the General Assembly finally put up some cash in order to get the program moving, after neither agency would budge in its position. But another problem came along. The older highway supervisors who knew how to work with prisoners were retired, and younger people were reluctant to tackle the project. It took some months of training and convincing before think kinks disappeared.

Now, about 1,037 prisoners are regularly working on the roads. More than half are honor grade prisoners who wear the same clothes and do the same jobs as regular highway employees. Motorists can't tell which men are prisoners and which aren't. About 384 medium custory prisoners who have to be guarded perform less skilled tasks such as litter cleanup and weed cutting.

Money

Transportation officials say they are using all the inmate labor they can get at this time, and using it well. Indeed, they would like to have even more—if the money is available.

At this time, the project gets only about $500,000 from the General Assembly and that amount simply doesn't cover all the costs. Correction officials say they would like to provide more prisoners—but again, they argue that the money isn't enough to take care of expenses at the current rate, let alone expanded operations.

In urban areas particularly where unskilled labor can get jobs making far more than the going rate for highway work, use of prison labor is especially important. In some areas it is the only way to provide the men needed.

TOO-HANDY ANSWER TO TOO MANY PROBLEMS!

Sen. Helms Vs. Haig

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The shadow of Jesse Helms over President Reagan's arms control policy was privately revealed when a State Department cable sent to U.S. allies inserted this sentence in the version publicly released in the U.S.: "No decision has yet been taken on our adherence to existing SALT agreements."

The March 4 cable was dispatched to contradict Secretary of the Navy John Lehman, who had announced there was no legal basis for the U.S. to continue honoring SALT I or SALT II. It said the U.S. would not "undercut existing agreements" so long as the Soviet Union did not either.

That cable, representing Secretary of State Alexander Haig's policy, was designed to placate NATO members, especially touchy West Germany. The domestic version, with the "no decision" sentence, was designed to placate right-wing Republicans led by Sen. Helms, who worried that Reagan's SALT policy has not yet taken a decisive turn away from Jimmy Carter's. Which version will be Ronald Reagan's ultimate policy has triggered an intense power struggle in Washington.

That struggle is Helms vs. Haig, but its roots are buried all through the capital. Haig's State Department and the Central Intelligence Agency are in combat against top officials of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The ACDA officials, carryovers from the transition, are closely tied to Helms' conservative Republican bloc in the Senate but may soon be replaced by permanent arms control officials in tune with Haig.

Helms is plotting a counterattack position on sticking to SALT I and the unratified SALT II for now, with ramifications that will compound Haig's problems with the European allies. If he proves that the Soviets have systematically violated SALT agreements, Helms could force Reagan into a confrontation not only with Moscow but also with Bonn.

Helms opened early this month with a letter to the hardline acting director of ACDA, Michael Pillsbury, asking for a complete report on one of the most sensitive SALT issues; verification by the U.S. of Sovet compliance — or Soviet cheating.

Coincidentally, a Pillsbury deputy, ACDA counselor David Sullivan, is putting finishing touches on a study that documents 23 alleged SALT violations by the Russians. Although ex-CIA analyst Sullivan is known as a hard-line, anti-Soviet ideologue, no serious student of SALT doubts his competence. His study in the hands of Helms and other anti-SALT Republican senators could close off Reagan's SALT options.

In fact, Pillsbury laid out the argument for Soviet cheating in his April 14 reply to Helms: "We are unable to reassure you that these agreements are adequately verifiable at the present time." An amendment to the law that established ACDA asserts that "adequate" verification of compliance should be an indispensable part of any international arms control agreement." It orders the ACDA director to so "report" to Congress.

Even before Helms' request was sent to Pillsbury, the CIA was harassing Sullivan's study of Soviet violations. Reagan's appointed CIA director, William Casey, has not shown his hand. But at CIA's working-group level, staffed by holdovers from the Carter administration, the effort to silence Sullivan is intense. They reflect the CIA's habitual caution in dealing with the touchy violations issue.

The clock is running against the hard-liners. Reagan is ready to nominate an establishment conservative Democrat, law professor Eugene Rostow of Yale, to be permanent ACDA director. Pillsbury may not survive as deputy director. It is not even certain that he, Sullivan and other hard-liners will remain in the agency.

But nobody can make the clock run more slowly than Jesse Helms. He will put a

Have You Got A Minute?

WASHINGTON — Jason Robards was in his office gently snoozing, when Robert Redford, his assistant managing editor, came in to see him.

"Have you got a minute?" Redford said.

"What is it?" Robards asked in his gravelly voice.

"I've got good news and bad news," Redford told him.

"That's great," said Robards. "Put it on the front page. What's the bad news?"

"The bad news is the story she won it for isn't true."

"On second thought you'd better put it in the food section."

"I don't know what happened," Redford said. "She swore every fact was true."

"Why didn't you check it out with me first?" Robards said.

"We did. You were the one who OK'd the story. Don't you remember, we came to your house late at night, and you came out on the lawn in your bathrobe and read it under the street lamp."

"Oh, my God. It's coming back to me now. Isn't that the girl who graduated Magna Cum Laude from Vassar?"

Redford said, "Would you believe Magna Cum nothing laude from the University of Toledo."

"I need a drink," Robards said. "Who else knows about this?"

"Just myself and Dustin Hoffman," Redford said.

"Well, that gives us time anyway."

"I'm not so sure. Dustin now works for ABC and they're going to lead with it tonight on the evening news."

"OK, we blew it," said Robards. "But I don't want a coverup. I want us to play this story straight down the line. Put your best reporters on it, dig up all the facts, talk to everyone you can, get statements from everybody from the Pulitzer Committee to the Mayor of Washington D.C."

"I gotcha boss. If there's a smoking gun we'll find it," Redford said.

"Do you still see 'Deep Throat'?" Robards asked.

"All the time. He works in the garage where I park my car."

"Well, see what he knows about the Pulitzer gang. Find out where the money's coming from for the Prize. Talk to all the wives of the editors, and find out where they were the night the story was printed. One of them has to break."

"I just thought of something. I used to date a girl who worked in the city room. Maybe she knows how the article got in the paper."

"Good idea. Take her to dinner and whatever."

The secretary came in. "President Nixon's on the phone."

Robards picked it up. He listened for 30 seconds, and hung up.

Redford said, "What did he say?"

"Nothing. He just gave me a Bronx raspberry."

"At least you know who your friends are when you make a blooper," Redford said.

"People forget so soon, "Robards said. "OK, let's get back to business. I won't accept any facts on how we blew it, unless it's confirmed by two sources."

"Don't worry, boss. We won't rest until we get to the bottom of this. I have a friend at the FBI who owes me a favor. He might be willing to open his files for us."

"Good," Robards said. "If anyone asks you what you're doing, tell him you're work-

Other Editors Say Not Like It Was

Washington Daily News

Just a few days ago in the U.S. Senate Budget Committee Senator Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, a Democrat, a liberal, and a free spender, made a motion that government funding of tobacco price supports be stopped.

Senator Metzenbaum's motion was narrowly defeated by a nine to seven vote. Now those voting for the motion for the most part were Democrats, and those voting against it for the most part were Republicans.

If Democrats such as Mr. Metzenbaum continue their efforts to drive Southern Democrats out of the party, then a terrible toll is being exacted. Already Democrats are voting Republican in the tobacco growing areas of North Carolina. And certainly Mr. Metzenbaum knows that he is hanging by a slender thread in his native Ohio which hardly grows much tobacco.

But as a Democrat who sees what is happening to his own party, he ought to realize that slapping tobacco growers and tobacco growing states serves the Democrats tragically and the Republicans well.

It used to be that Democrats could depend on the blunders of Republicans to sustain them. It too often is appearing nowadays that yesterday's axiom has been reversed.

WORTHLESS GOLD

Gold is the world's most worthless metal.

Such a statement sounds absurd; yet it makes sense in a socially constructive context. Fewer useful things are made out of gold than out of any other metal. Our buildings, airplanes, ships and automobiles are made of steel, aluminum, copper, or mixtures of these metals.

Yet gold is the most sought-after metal in the world — uranium running a close second. The value of gold arises from the fact that it has throughout history been a standard of value. It is non-perishable and uniformly scarce in supply.

More murders have been committed over gold, more betrayals perpetrated, more wars fought, than over anything else. It is ironic that the metal which is least useful industrially and has caused the most trouble socially, is the thing which humanity prizes the most highly. This is symbolic of the indifference which we so often see to things of real value. — Elisha Douglass

Home Buying Can Be Pain In Neck

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Buying your first home shold be exciting, interesting and enjoyable, says the National Association of Realtors. "On the other hand" it concedes, "it can be a pain in the neck."

After reading the Realtors' list of possible sources of funds, some would-be buyers might also conclude that the pain can spread north into the cranium and south to the lower back area too.

Whatever, the recommendations do suggest how hard it is to buy a house these days, when taxes and inflation shrivel the paycheck, and the median purchase price paid by first-time home buyers exceeds $50,000.

The list begins with a reminder that the financial rule of thumb has been bent. Whereas 25 percent of monthly income once was considered the maximum a couple could afford for housing, the limit now is 33.

A 33 percent figure can be achieved, of course, only by cutting into other spending areas, and while the Realtors don't spell them out, those areas generally include entertainment and travel, and sometimes even family size. The pain in the neck is now spreading perceptibly.

Before you can even consider the discomfort, however, you must consider how tc raise the down payment. "Draining your savings account is the most obvious way," the Realtors report. "But if you come up short," they advise, "you may have to tap other sources."

What other sources? Well, you might borrow on your cash-value life insurance policy. The life insurance industry doesn't like that idea, as you might have heard, but they can do little about it: They must lend it, generally at a maximum of 8 percent, if you ask them for it.

Insurers warn, however, that borrowing from them can conceivably endanger you insurance policy. The possibility exists, for instance, that if you fail to meet loan payments your policy could cease. In your quest for a house, that is, you are moving into areas of risk, and risk have shown itself to be a major cause of stomach, neck and other pains.

"If your company has a profit sharing program, look into the possibility of withdrawing what you have in your account or borrowing against it," the Realtors advise. And if you are short only a few hundred dollars, "you could ask your employer for a pay advance."

The very ideas make you ache all over. The profit-sharing was to be used only in an emergency. To think that something as beautiful as your first house should be so categorized, and that you are forced to admit your wheeler-dealer, overspending, irresponsible ways to the boss.

Should you follow the next suggestion you'll know the pain is truly physical rather than psychosomatic. You are advised that "Buying a home that needs work is another way to economize," because "Sellers may be willing to lower their asking price if they don't have to make major repairs..." Those repairs, of course, would be made by you.

By you, and maybe others who seek to protect their investment, such as parents. Young people "may find it humiliating to ask parents ... for short-term loans, but keep in mind that parents often had to humble themselves when they were first starting, too," the Realtors say.

Humbling indeed, but there's more too. The homseeker is advised that "other avenues include holding a garage sale, freelancing a talent such as painting, carpentry or baby-sitting."

This advice is sound and necessary, but the pressures that make it necessary, and the painful consequences of it, are unfortunate.

Painful and unfortunate because they might deprive a couple of the very things they wanted the house for: security, a sense of privacy, freedom from rent increases, a place of their own, and comfort.

Security becomes insecurity because the budget is busted. Privacy is undermined by the realization that parental lenders are entitled to inspect their investment. Rent increases are replaced by rising taxes. And comfort is dispelled by the avalanche of bills and new duties.

Ah, but the aches and pains and stresses and sacrifices might be worth it. You are advised that "Once you're in, you'll be able to use the accumuated equity as downpayment on your second purchase."

You have won another chance. You have won the right to do it again.

Polish Paper Criticizes West Concern

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist Party newspaper Trybuna Ludu today strongly criticized recent Western concern over Warsaw Pact military exercises in an around Poland.

"Never before had we witnessed such a mighty slanderous campaign as the one launched in connection with the latest 'soyuz-81 (alliance-81)' Warsaw treaty maneuvers," the paper said in an article carried by the official PAP news agency's English language service.

"The institutions specializing in waging a psychological war against the socialist states resolved to intensify the state of social excitement by spreading false information about alleged preparations to trespass on the Polish borders by the armies of other socialist states concerned about developments in Poland," Trybuna Ludu wrote.

Western observers had feared that the month-long maneuvers, begun in early March, could provide a cover for Soviet military intervention to halt Polish reforms begun during last summer's labor revolt.

"Now we know that the fanning of an atmosphere of artificial anxiety around our country was also aimed at creating an appropriate climate of fear," the paper said.

It claimed this would be "convenient for breaking the resistance of West European communities protesting an intensification of armaments and the deployment of new American nuclear missiles on the European continent."

Meanwhile, the Soviet ambassador to Warsaw, Boris Aristov, expressed renewed Kremlin confidence that the Poles can solve their own problems.

"The Soviet people are convinced that the Polish People, Polish communists, will manage, under the leadership of the Communist Party, to solve their complicated tasks and ensure leading the country out of crisis, Aristov said, echoing a statement earlier this month by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. The ambassador spoke at a Warsaw convention called to celebrate the 36th anniversary of the Soviet-Polish friendship treaty.

Despite the latest expression of support, the Soviet media continued its campaign against the Polish reformers and what are called their Western backers.

The Soviet weekly newspaper Literary Gazette today accused "Zionist" organizations in the United States of increased involvement in "a masive campaign to undermine socialist foundations in Poland."

In its commentary, the paper added Zionists to a list of American trade unions, Western radio stations and other "CIA-supported groups" it said were behind efforts "to struggle against socialism (in Poland) by all means and methods."

The Literary Gazette also reprinted an article from the Polish army newspaper that warned of a "growing threat of counterrevolution" in Poland.

"In the present class struggle, we face an enemy which is ready to do anything" and which has "wide ties with imperialism and support of its saboteur organizations," the Gazette reprint said.

"The growing threat of counterrevolution is a result of interaction of subversive elements inside the country (Poland) with an anti-communist and anti-Polish front...," it added.

In Prague, the Czechoslovak Communist Party newspaper Rude Pravo published similar criticism, claiming that enemies of communism are trying to "snatch out the weakest link" in the Soviet bloc by attempting to undermine the Polish regime.

Soviet bloc unity "was and is the principal target of attacks by our enemies, who again and again try to drive a wedge into the united front of socialism, to snatch out the weakest link," Rude Pravo said.

No More Copper Pennies?

A penny can hardly buy anything any more. Soon, it many not even be able to buy the metal that goes into making it! U.S. officials say starting this fall the copper penny will be replaced by one made largely of zinc. Because of the rising cost of copper, pennies are becoming too expensive to make. Copper is in demand because it is one of the best conductors of electricity. It's widely used for electric motors and telephone wires. Copper also is used to improve soil, destroy insects, pests, and protect other metals from rusting. Even the "nickel" is made of 75 percent copper, and only 25 percent nickel. But zinc, not copper, may be the metal of the future for the penny.

DO YOU KNOW — In what year did the government make zinc-plated steel pennies?

Senior Group Held Meeting

At the recent meeting of the Town and Country Senior Citizens Club Lee Williams was appointed to represent the club at the April 21 City Hall meeting on the proposed use of Revenue Sharing Funds for fiscal year 1981-82.

One activity shared by members was that of addressing envelopes for the March of Dimes Follow Up Program on 1981 pledges. Also, tentative plans on the Foster Grandparents program were discussed.

A slide show on the 1980 Oberammergau Passion Play was shown by Mrs. Sarah J. Ashton. Mrs. Ashton explained that since taking pictures of the play are not permitted, the slides she showed were commercial ones she purchased. The program was arranged by Mrs. Batrice Weilenmann, program chairman.

Mrs. Ashton also expressed appreciation for assistance given by club members during the Heritage Tour of Homes.

An announcement was made that the 1981 Yearbooks are now available, and it was noted that 20 members attended the circus at Carolina East Mall.

The Pitt County branch NAACP Mother of the Year Legal Defense Fund is seeking items to be donated for a benefit yard sale.

The yard sale is to be held beginning at 9 a.m. on Saturday, April 25 at the corner of Fifth and Tyson Streets. The yard sale is sponsored by Mrs. Barbara Taft of York Memorial A.M.E. Zion Church.

People with items to donate can leave them with Mrs. Taft at 1919-B Norcott Court (phone 756-8875) or with D. D. Garrett, 1204 W. Fifth Street, (phone 752-4476).

Fund Use Suggestions Are Heard

The city, in conducting the annual public hearing on local revenue sharing appropriations, received several suggestions last night on possible uses of the 1981-82 federal funds in Greenville.

City Manager Ed Wyatt, who conducted the hearing, pointed out that as a participating city in the program, the city expects to receive $627,416 in revenue sharing funds in the 1981-82 fiscal year. The expected revenues, he said, include an allocation payment of $599,916, a fund balance of $25,000, and interest on investments amounting to $2,500.

The Parents Advisory Committee for Exceptional, Gifted and Talented Children suggested that more city buildings be made accessible to the handicapped, particularly the Little League park, Elm Street Gym, and Sheppard Memorial Library. The committee would also like to see more recreational programs for the physically handicapped.

Lee Williams of Greenville, representing the American Association of Retired Persons, suggested that more shuffleboard courts for senior citizens be provided in the city. He also requested that Greenville continue to fund the recreation and library programs with revenue sharing money.

Jeff McAllister, who is in charge of the nutrition program for senior citizens at the city's Community Building, suggested that the city use revenue sharing as matching funds for the transportation segment of the nutrition program.

A spokesman for the Association of Retarded Citizens, Bill Martin, reiterated the requests and suggestions made relative to the handicapped. Martin suggested that more recreation be provided for the handicapped and more money designated for the programs.

Wyatt told the small gathering that revenue sharing, a federally administered program, was first enacted in 1972. The city, it was noted, has constructed three facilities using the funding: the Recreation-Library Center on Cedar Lane; the Fire-Rescue substation on Memorial Drive; and the swimming pool-bath house complex.

Revenue sharing appropriations, he reported, have been used mainly to operate the transit system, to fund Recreation and Parks Department programs, and for Sheppard Library operations. Funds are earmarked for the airport this year for the first time.

Under the program, federal funds are distributed to state and local governments and may be used, obligated, or appropriated for any purpose for which a recipient government may spend its own funds.

hold on Rostow's nomination just as he has on seven other presidential nominations (most of them Haig's recommendations) to State Department positions, paralyzing the department's operations. The source of all this is the unrequited expectations of Helms and other conservatives arising from the president's campaign oratory.

Helms' move against Haig's deliberately ambiguous, cautious policy not to undercut "existing agreements" with the Russians is based on Reagan's campaign description of SALT II as "fatally flawed." The Reaganauts who helped elect him have waited three months into his presidency for action to fit those words.

So far, Reagan has listened to Haig's advice: If the U.S. tells the allies prematurely what it really thinks about SALT I and SALT II, the alliance could be imperilled. Whether the president sticks with Haig's advice much longer is now in question, thanks to the formidable resources of Sen. Helms and his allies.

Prisoners are paid one dollar daily, with legislation pending to boost that amount slightly. Road crews would still be a bargain for the state, even at higher wages. But the problem for the General Assembly is going to be how to resolve the differences between two state agencies so that what legislators want done as a matter of policy will actually be done in practice.

Two Bills Gain Approval Of House

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tax credits on inventories and pollution-control devices — which would benefit mostly the textile industry — are headed for the state Senate.

Both measures won House victories by wide margins Tuesday.

The major bill would provide manufacturers with a 100 percent credit on state income taxes to offset property taxes paid to local governments on their inventories.

The credit, which carries an $86-million price tag, would be phased in over a four-year period. Also to be phased in would be a requirement that large- and medium-sized corporations make quarterly prepayments of their estimated state income taxes.

Opponents of the measure waged their first real floor fight Tuesday, criticizing the timing of the tax cut because of federal budget cuts and highway revenue deficits that have sparked serious budget cutting.

"We have been forced to cut programs many of us believed in," said Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake. "Who are we to take care of first — our citizens or industry that may or may not come in here."

Supporters rejected an amendment that would have extended the credit to wholesalers and retailers, a change that would have added about $118 million to the price of the proposal.

The second bill, which faces a final vote today, would exempt from local property taxes the equipment used to reduce air pollution inside factories. Such equipment includes devices used to reduce cotton-dust levels in textile mills.

Legislative analysts say they are unable to calculate how much the bill would cost the state, but representatives of the North Carolina County Commissioners Association estimate the total could be as high as $6 million statewide.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, sponsored both bills and said the textile industry would be their primary beneficiary.

Lilley and other supporters have pushed the bills as a way to attract additional industry to the state and put North Carolina on equal footing with South Carolina.

Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Rockingham, says the inventory tax bill may be delayed when it reaches the Senate. The bill probably would be sent to the Finance Committee, of which Duncan is the chairman.

Duncan says he would like to get a better idea of the state's budget outlook before voting on the bill.

In other legislative action:

Suspensions

A bill that would allow public school superintendents to suspend a teacher with pay for as long as 90 days was referred to a subcommittee of the House Judiciary I Committee.

The teacher could be suspended pending investigation of possible causes for dismissal or demotion.

Dr. Frank Yeager, superintendent of the Durham County schools, cited an example in which a teacher was arrested in a drug bust.

"A person is not guilty until they are convicted, but you have to deal with the teacher until the charges are processed," he said. Yeager said current laws provide only for the teacher to be dismissed without pay.

An attorney representing the North Carolina School Board Association charged that some parts of the bill would be costly and time consuming. Meanwhile, an attorney for the N.C. Federation of Teachers charged the bill would stiffen the punishments for minor wrongs.

Loans

The House Insurance Committee heard testimony but took no action on a bill that would allow life insurance companies to adjust interest rates on life insurance policy loans.

Currently there is an 8 percent ceiling on such loans. The bill, introduced by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, would allow companies to choose between the current ceiling or a maximum rate equal to Moody's Corporate Bond Yield Average.

Moody's average, which is published monthly, indicates the average yield on all corporate bonds sold in the United States. Insurance companies say the average is a relatively stable indicator that reflects rates available to them on new long-term investments.

The bill would require that interest rates rise and fall with the indicator and would allow companies to adjust the rate annually, semi-annually or quarterly. An insurance company representative said that under the bill, the current maximum would be 12.75 percent.

Charles Powell, president of the N.C. Association of Life Insurance Companies, said the bill is needed because the economy is forcing insurance companies to sacrifice long-term investments so they can make the loans.

As a result, Powell said, the companies are being forced to raise life insurance premiums or lower dividends.

The bill is based on a model drawn up by the National Association of Insurance Carriers.

Prosecution

The Senate delayed until Thursday the final vote on a bill that would allow people charged with certain crimes to serve a probationary term rather than face prosection and possible conviction.

Under the bill, anyone charged with a crime punishable by less than 10 years in prison — including forgery, fraud and breaking and entering — to serve up to two years probation and avoid a criminal record.

The Senate also delayed voting on a bill that would rewrite laws governing savings and loan associations.

New Bills

Sen. J.A. "Chip" Wright, R-New Hanover, filed a bill that would bar foreign students from receiving financial aid while attending the 16-campus University of North Carolina system. The bill would affect minority grants, work-study programs and student loans.

In the House, a bill was filed to provide an automatic pay raise for state workers who pass a certified professional secretary examination.

BUDDING ROMANCE — Eric Roper and his fiancee, Shila Orfi engage in a bit of extracurricular activity during a visit to Exposition Park in Los Angeles Tuesday. As temperatures reached into the 80s the spring weather forced the two USC students from the classroom and into the park's flower gardens for a quick lesson in the "buddy" system. (AP Laserphoto)

CBS Overwhelmed Foes In Year's Race

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Winner by a whisker over ABC a year ago, CBS overwhelmed the competition in the three-way race during the 1980-81 TV year, season-long figures from the networks show.

The A.C. Nielsen Co. says a point in the ratings for a prime-time program represents 778,000 homes, and CBS' lead at the end of the 1980-81 season was 1.6 — an average rating of 19.8 to 18.2 for ABC and 16.6 for NBC.

CBS said Tuesday the margin was its largest since the 1973-74 season, when the network defeated then-runnerup NBC by 2.4 points.

The networks say CBS' rating for the 25-week season means in an average prime-time minute during the period, 19.8 percent of the nation's homes with television were tuned to CBS.

CBS won the three-way race for the 1979-80 season by one-tenth of a point over three-time champion ABC.

NBC argued that the recently completed season began Sept. 15, but ABC and CBS held off new programming for more than a month, citing the 10-week actors' strike as the delaying factor. CBS was the No. 1 network in the longer NBC season, too.

CBS completed its season that began Oct. 27 by ending ABC's two-week run in first place with some muscle from a couple of the season's most-watched series and two promising newcomers.

CBS's "Dallas" was the week's No. 1 program, as it had been 17 times in the last six months, while "60 Minutes," last season's top-rated show, finished fourth in the week ending April 19.

In addition, CBS listed "Private Benjamin," introduced two weeks ago, in fifth place, and a companion sitcom, "The Two of Us," in 11th.

CBS' rating for the week was 17.3, to 15.8 for ABC, which won the weekly competition the two previous weeks, and 13.9 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 17.3 percent of the nation's homes with television were tuned to CBS.

NBC's average rating was the for any network since the week ending Sept. 16, 1980, when the same networ registered 12.7.

The rating for "Dallas" was 31.3. Nielsen says that means of all the country's TV-equipped homes, 31.3 percent saw at least part of the program.

ABC got a boost from "The Ten Commandments," an Easter perennial, which finished ninth.

NBC listed three of the week's five lowest-rated programs, a movie, "Family Plot" in the No. 66 position, followed by "Disney's Wonderful World," an ABC movie, "The Fifth Musketeer," "NBC Magazine" and ABC's "Omnibus."

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

"Dallas," with a rating of 31.3 representing 24.4 million homes, "M-A-S-H," 25.5 or 19.8 million, "Dukes of Hazzard," 25.2 or 19.6 million, and "60 Minutes," 24.9 or 19.4 million, all CBS; "Three's Company" 22.7 or 17.3 million, ABC; "Private Benjamin," 22 or 17.1 million, CBS; "Diff'rent Strokes," 21.5 or 16.7 million, NBC; "House Calls," 21:1 or 16.4 million, CBS; Movie-"The Ten Commandments," 20.8 or 16.2 million, and "Too Close for Comfort," 20.7 or 16.1 million, both ABC.

The next dozen programs:

"The Two of Us" and "Magnum, P.I.," both CBS; "Facts of Life," NBC; "Lou Grant" and "Alice," both CBS; "Love Boat," ABC; "Hart to Hart" and "Greatest American Hero," both ABC, tie; "The Jeffersons," CBS, and "Happy Days," ABC, "Bob Hope Special," NBC, and "That's Incredible," ABC, three-way tie.

Body That Of Singer

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Homicide detectives say they are investigating several possible motives in the killing of a 1950s rock 'n' roll star whose mutilated body was discovered almost a year ago but only now identified.

Nathaniel "Buster" Wilson, 45, had been bass singer with the Coasters since they shot off record charts in the late 1950s with hits like "Searchin' " "Yakety Yak" and "Charlie Brown."

He was identified through the use of dental charts, Stanislaus County sheriff's Sgt. Les Weidman said.

Wilson's hands and feet were cut off by his killer and the body was dumped in an isolated area of rugged Del Puerto Canyon about 22 miles from here, Weidman said. The body was wrapped in blankets and tied with wire.

The killer also attempted to decapitate Wilson but was unsuccessful, said Weidman.

The body was found by a motorist who had wandered into the canyon to stretch his legs.

Wilson vanished from his home in Las Vegas, Nev., last April while the group was performing in a lounge. The Tucson, Ariz., Police Department recewved an anonymous tip that Wilson had been killed, and Weidman said that tip led to the identification.

At the time of his disappearance, Wilson was sharing a home with the groups' manager, Patrick Cavanaugh. Cavanaugh, 43, is now in custody in the San Diego County jail at Vista, accused of masterminding a fraud that allegedly bilked businessmen in four states out of an estimated $450,000, investigators said.

Cavanaugh told detectives he knows nothing about Wilson's disappearance or death, they say.

Weidman said Wilson was shot several times in the head. It appeared Wilson died somewhere else and was taken to the canyon. He had been dead about four weeks when his body was found.

The grisly find was about a mile from where Mary Vincent was attacked by an ax-wielding rapist who hacked off her arms and left her for dead on Del Puerto Canyon Road on Sept. 30, 1978.

Lawrence Singleton, 52, was convicted March 23, 1979 in connection with the attack on Ms. Vincent and was serving a 14-year term at San Quentin Prison when Wilson was killed.

Modesto is about 70 miles southeast of San Francisco.

Two Wrecks Are Reported

An estimated $2,900 damage resulted from two traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

An estimated $1,200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 2:05 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Hooker Road and Arlington Boulevard.

Drivers of the cars involved were identified as Robert Benjamin Gray Jr. of Route 2, Vanceboro and Mary Jones Jones of Greenville.

Officers charged Gray with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the collision.

Cars driven by Thomas Earl Clark of 1901A Norcott Cir. and Doris Lyverne Edwards of Winterville, collided about 3:26 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Tyson Streets, causing $300 damage to the Clark car and $200 damage to the Edwards auto.

WE'RE GOING TO MAKE SURE!

A NEW WAY TO GROW FRUITS AND VEGETABLES — Method is being tried in Pitt County this year, with the hope of improving the quality and quantity of fresh vegetables and fruits available. "What we are doing is trying to diversify crops," explained county extension agent Sam Uzzell. "We hope to have more of these crops available at the Farmers Market and through pick-your-own operations." The new method involves preparing a bed covered with black plastic, then using a planting rig that punctures the plastic, allowing plants to be set in the rows, as shown above. The soil inside the plastic has been fumigated and trickle irrigation is enclosed. "The advantage to this," said Uzzell, "is that the plastic keeps weeds down and slows up evaporation. In addition," he continued, "the plastic warms the soil quicker, meaning that plants are ready for market earlier." Uzzell noted that early harvesting means an improved cash flow for those farmers utilizing the experimental method. "Farmers don't generally have a lot of income this time of year, and vegetables and fruits that are early can provide them with some," he said. This method, used sucessfully in Florida for some time, has only recently been tried in North Carolina. "I think there's a real place for it," commented Uzzell. "People are getting interested in alternative crops, and I hope we'll have an outlet for those." So far, tomatoes, strawberries and cantelopes are the crops being experimented with. Above, Lindsay Briley, left, and Abram Hardy, right, set out cantaloupes on the Briley farm. According to Uzzell, most of these crops will be sold at the Farmers Market, opening May 2 in Greenville on Reade Circle, or in pick-your-own quantities. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Political Decisions Hurt Funds

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The head of a legislative panel looking into the Department of Transportation says the state has spent more than $254 million on road construction in the past six years that could have come from federal sources.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said Tuesday that the spending was evidence that the state's highway decisions have been turning on political considerations rather than business judgments.

"This is another area where decisions were political decisions and not business decisions," he told members of the House and Senate Select Committee on the Department of Transportation.

"Certainly we did not need to spend all that state money without the federal funds," he added later.

The money was spent building or improving highways from 1975 through 1980 on projects that were built entirely from state appropriations and which were eligible for federal money, Rauch said.

He presented the figures to the 10-member panel after receiving the documentation from Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw. Rauch, who has been a sharp critic of Gov. Jim Hunt and the Transportation Department in recent weeks, said he had requested the figures weeks ago and received them Tuesday after making final demands to department officials.

Rauch said that the projects were built entirely with state money even though federal aid amounting to 75 percent to 95 percent of the projects could have been obtained had the department deferred the projects until later years.

The period covers a portion of Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser's administration and the first term of Democrat Hunt.

Bradshaw was out of town and could not be reached for comment. But in the memo to Rauch, Bradshaw defended the spending as representing highway improvements that would not have been made had the department decided to wait on federal money.

"Our department has fully utilized all available federal-aid funds," Bradshaw said.

"Quite frankly, senator, North Carolina would not enjoy the highway system we have today had previous General Assemblies limited the highway program to that level to match federal-aid apportionments," he said.

The figures were released as the panel rushed to prepare a report to the General Assembly with its findings. The panel is trying to prepare the report in time to release it before Hunt goes on statewide television Monday night to make his recommendations for raising taxes and fees and transferring revenue to shore up the highway program's finances.

Bradshaw has said $200 million to $250 million more is needed annually to continue the highway department's building and maintenance program at an acceptable level.

Rauch and several other committee members kept up their criticism of Hunt, as the senator said Hunt "did a beautiful job of stealing most of our thunder." He was referring to Hunt's announcement last week of reductions in highway and bridge design specificiations, many of which Rauch said the committee was planning to recommend.

"He thought we were children," Rauch said of the governor.

Hunt deputy press secretary Brent Hackney declined to comment on the highway spending, saying he was unfamiliar with the figures.

The memo listed the spending on each project, and Rauch pointed to a $7 million item for a Kings Mountain by-pass in his district. "I didn't know that was 100 percent state funds," he said. "We could have waited on that by-pass."

Fake Story Hurt Blacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The only black to participate in the decision to award a Pulitzer Prize to a black Washington Post reporter for a story that turned out to be fake says the reporter did her greatest injury "to blacks in newsrooms all over the country."

Roger Wilkins, an associate editor of the Washington Star, said in his Tuesday column: "The essence of journalism is to tell the clearest truths we can see to our readers. But we blacks are distrusted by many white editors who doubt our perceptions, our judgment and our ability to be fair and accurate.

"We struggle against this every day, and Janet Cooke and the editors who failed their readers made our burden of proof much heavier," he said. "That is a loss to journalism and to the American public because a variety of visions is required if our readers are to have their best chance to get at the truth."

Miss Cooke admitted that her story about an 8-year-old heroin addict was a fabrication, resigned from the newspaper and returned her prize for feature writing last week, two days after it was awarded. She has not been available for comment.

There are two blacks on the 14-member Pulitzer Board, which decides who gets the $1,000 prizes. The other black, Post columnist William Raspberry, left the room when Miss Cooke's article came up, according to the board's custom.

Wilkins gave this account of the board's deliberations after Miss Cooke's entry was shifted from the local reporting category to the feature category.

Historians Rebel Over Staff Exemption

By STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Saying they are "concerned and outraged" over politicizing of the state Department of Cultural Resources, a group of North Carolina historians has passed a resolution protesting the exemption of staff members from the state's personnel act.

The resolution, drafted by the Historical Society of North Carolina, asks department Secretary Sara Hodgkins to rescind her action and to restore protection under state personnel laws for the director, assistant director and section administrators of the Division of Archives and History.

The protest also was directed at Gov. Jim Hunt, who approved her decision to exempt the employees from the State Personnel Act.

Hodgkins said Monday night she does not intend to change her mind, and said that the group misunderstood her intentions.

Chancy Kapp, communications director for the state agency, said the employees affected by the change knew about it in advance, and that there was little protest.

"As far as she is concerned, the action will stand," Mrs. Kapp said.

William S. Price, acting director of the Division of Archives and History and also secretary of the society, said state employees did not take part in passing the resolution.

Price said the group consists of professional and academic historians.

Price said he objected to several portions of the resolution, including the objections the society raised over exempting the director and assistant director from the personnel act.

A state law enacted in 1977 allows department heads to seek exemptions every four years for any members of their staff who are involved in making policy, and also any of their assistants directly involved in making policy.

"I didn't feel it served the resolution to have the matter of the director and assistant director included with section chiefs," said Price. "I think they are policy makers.

"However, I disagreed when the secretary took action to include section chiefs. I know that section chiefs in other departments have been exempted. It's not unusual. It has occurred.

"But many people in the professional historical community, including the academic community, argue that the division of archives is somehow special.

"My feeling is that within the division, as small as it is, that the director and assistant director have review of the directives that section chiefs make. That's not truly a policy-making function," he said.

Mrs. Kapp said Mrs. Hodgkins recognized the group's concern.

"This caused natural concern arising from the professional community. You get the same concern in the educational field or any other field that has a defined professional level.

"Mrs. Hodgkins recognizes their concern, but she feels that her action is consistent with policies in other state departments and is an entirely administrative decision."

Mrs. Kapp said the decision was misinterpreted as being directed at people, and not at positions as it was intended.

"It was not her intention to politicize the office. The personnel statutes give her the power to declare policy making positions, which she did."

The resolution passed by the society said the members are "concerned and outraged that the professional standing of the state's historical agency has been politicized by virtue of action by the secretary of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources." It said the effect of the action was to remove top-level employees of the division from career status to that of political employees.

Price said he thinks part of that concern is justified.

"I have no objection to the director and assistant director being exempt. The secretary should have the opportunity to get a certain amount of responsiveness rather than dealing with a 100 percent bureaucrat, someone who hides behind regulations and his interpretation of regulations.

"The danger is not with Sara Hodgkins, the danger is what may happen when a new administration takes office.

"I don't think she took the action against certain section chiefs. The problem is not with her, but under a new administration, the potential now exists to clean house."

Gun Control Cuts Deaths

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Under tougher gun control laws, fewer people would die during violent crimes, but the number of assaults and robberies would probably be about the same, a Duke University professor says.

Dr. Philip Cook, a Duke Institute of Policy Sciences economist, has been studying gun control for about six years. While he opposes an outright ban on handguns, he is optimistic that states will enact more effective legislation.

"We are an extraordinarily violent nation and getting more so all the time," he said. "Guns increase the number of victims that die as a result of violent attacks."

Present gun regulations just treat the symptoms, Cook said.

"That doesn't mean we shouldn't do something," he said. "The symptoms are so lethal in this case."

But Cook does not endorse an outright ban on handguns, saying he is "very sympathetic to those who want to protect themselves in their home ... but most would be better off with a dog than a gun, particularly if they don't know how to handle a gun."

Cook said he supports laws to stop sales of highly concealable guns, to encourage police to search for illegal weapons and to increase penalties for carrying a concealed weapon.

The economist said he opposes an outright ban on guns because "we shouldn't put that many people on the wrong side of the law. One-half of the households in America own some type of firearm, and that's been true for the last 25 years.

"What is going up is handgun ownership," Cook said. "It has doubled in the last 20 years. Now at least one-fourth of the households own at least one handgun. Prohibition is impractical."

The renewed push for gun control after the shooting of President Reagan in March and last winter's slaying of former Beatle John Lennon will wane soon, Cook said.

No Wrongdoing In Carter Affair

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department, writing the final chapter to Billy Carter's Libyan affair, concludes there was no wrongdoing in the White House or anywhere else in the Carter administration. But it still says the former president's brother lied to investigators.

Michael E. Shaheen, the Justice Department's chief internal investigator, turned over a final report Tuesday to Solicitor General Wadz H. McCree and the department's criminal division, which earlier had decided not to seek any charges in the case.

A statement issued by the criminal division saying it would examine the material Shaheen developed "and reach a conclusion whether it warrants further action" could provide the only epilogue to the story.

But the division earlier sought only a civil settlement with Billy Carter, who registered as a foreign agent for Libya and acknowledged receiving $220,000 from the radical Arab regime. A charge of lying to government agents is rarely filed in the absence of other criminal charges.

Shaheen's report specifically said former President Carter; his attorney general, Benjamin Civiletti; and former national security chief Zbigniew Brzezinski committed no illegal acts.

The 10-page report concluded a nine-month investigation in which more than 50 people — including the former president, Brzezinski and Civiletti — were interviewed.

Shaheen said President Carter was interviewed under oath at the White House last Dec. 19 and was asked about his advance knowledge of his brother's dealings with Libya and about his own directions to other government agencies as a result of those dealings.

"Our primary conclusion is that no government officials or employees have been shown to have engaged in illegal conduct," Shaheen wrote. "Nothing suggests that President Carter acted to frustrate or impede the Department of Justice's investigation of Billy Carter or that he sought to assist his brother in attempts to engage in business transactions with the Libyans."

The president's younger brother registered as a foreign agent after 18 months of prodding by the Justice Department but contended most of the money was in two installment payments on an unconditional $500,000 loan.

Shaheen repeated his conclusion, contained in an interim report last October, that Billy Carter had lied in first denying he received any money from Libya and then not telling the truth about the nature of the payments.

The final report also concluded that Civiletti acted within his legitimate discretion when he told President Carter at the White House on June 17, 1980 that his brother probably would not be prosecuted if he registered as a foreign agent. Two weeks later, Billy Carter registered.

Shaheen said Civiletti and Carter gave the same account of that conversation, declaring the attorney general had given no details of the investigation.

"In response to questioning, President Carter stated that he had no advance warning, and little direct knowledge, of Billy Carter's dealings with the Libyans," the report said.

The president acknowledged, "in retrospect," that using his brother as a go-between with Libyan diplomats during the Iranian hostage crisis in 1979 obviously would have enhanced Billy Carter's prestige with the Libyan government. But Jimmy Carter said he did not "focus" on that likelihood at the time

Shaheen reiterated his previous conclusion that Civiletti "dissembled" at a July 24 news conference at which he denied any White House contacts on the Billy Carter case.

The following day, Civiletti acknowledged the conversation with the president. The verb "dissemble" is defined in Webster's Third New International Dictionary as "to hide under a false appearance; conceal with intent to deceive; feign."

Of Civiletti, Shaheen concluded, "There is no evidence that he sought to obstruct or impede the criminal division's handling of the Billy Carter investigation."

Shaheen also concluded that "the Department of Justice pursued a thorough, competent investigation of Billy Carter's requirement to file as a foreign agent for the Libyan government." No one has been indicted on criminal charges under the Foreign Agents Registration Act since 1963.

Shaheen also reviewed the State Department's decision to release two Boeing 727 aircraft to Libya and State Department efforts to keep the White House apprised of Billy Carter's activities.

He concluded that the release of the planes was "based solely on foreign policy considerations" and that the information passed to the White House by the State Department was "consistent with its normal responsibilities."

The investigation also looked into Brzezinski's telephone call to Billy Carter in which the national security adviser, based on U.S. intelligence reports, confronted the president's brother with information about a deal he was negotiating to obtain Libyan oil for an American firm.

Shaheen concluded that "the evidence supports his (Brzezinski's) view that his actions were appropriate."

Shaheen said he also would forward a copy of his final report to the Senate Judiciary Committee, which had earlier investigated the Billy Carter case.

Satellite To Home TV Is Not Far Off

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission agreed today to proceed with the processing of applications for a new type of television service — direct satellite-to-home broadcasting.

The unanimous vote, which will come as a disappointment to established broadcasters, makes it possible for such a satellite-to-home system to begin operating as early as 1985.

The vote is particularly good news for the Communications Satellite Corp. (COMSAT), which has filed the first application to establish a so-called direct broadcast satellite system.

The FCC was told today, however, that at least one other firm — the Direct Broadcast Satellite Corp. of Washington — has announced it will file an application within six months.

After voting to formulate interim guidelines for authorizing experimental systems, the FCC then agreed to formally accept COMSAT's application and to allow 45 days for comments or competing applications to be filed.

The technology for providing TV programs directly from orbiting satellites to the home, while fairly new, already is undergoing tests in other nations such as Japan and Canada. The key to such a system is the use of special high-power satellites that can beam a signal to earth with sufficient intensity that it can be received by antennas as small as 2½ feet in diameter — antennas that can easily be mounted on the roof of a house.

COMSAT has said it is prepared to spend more than $600 million to launch such a service, offering three channels of pay TV programming.

What COMSAT is proposing, however, is nothing less than a dramatic change in the American system of distributing video programs. Instead of relying on local operators of TV stations or cable systems charged with the responsibility of serving their specific local audience, COMSAT would be directly serving a national audience.

The National Association of Broadcasters has argued that satellite-to-home television raises so many important policy questions that only Congress — and not the FCC — should address the issue.

The proposal is further clouded by the fact the United States cannot permanently authorize satellite-to-home television until a 1983 international conference completes the task of allocating new satellite frequencies.

Despite those problems and concerns, the FCC accepted its staff's recommendation today that experimental systems should be authorized so that construction could begin and a new service to the public would not be delayed foran unreasonable amount of time.

FCC Chairman Robert E. Lee predicted today that the long-range implications of direct broadcast satellites would "surely be of interest to Congress ... and we would welcome the congressional debate."

But Lee added he felt the commission should get the ball rolling and added: "Today we see the possible birth of space video."

Mosquito Tests Are Moved

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tests using a cannibal mosquito to kill the mosquitoes which bite people have been moved from a racially tense housing project because black residents thought mosquito control workers were undercover police, officials say.

The tests, in which breeding containers for the big, slow "tox" mosquito are set in yards and checked daily, were being conducted in and around the Fischer Housing Project in Algiers.

The area has been tense since four blacks were killed last year by police investigating the murder of Officer Gregory Neupert.

Dr. Dana Focks, research entomologist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said the move won't affect the experiment's progress.

Police, British Troops Alert For Trouble

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police and British troops were on the alert today for more rioting expected after the funerals in Londonderry of two Roman Catholic youths killed by a British army vehicle.

Sinn Fein, the legal political arm of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, ordered a day of mourning. This brought a post-midnight quiet to Londonderry, the province's second largest city and a Roman Catholic stronghold, after the seventh night of rioting. But mobs of youths were expected to renew their street attacks on the police and the army after the funerals.

The two 18-year-olds were killed Sunday by an army Land-Rover during a riot on the anniversary of the 1916 Easter Uprising in Dublin against British rule. The police called the deaths a road accident, but Catholic leaders charged that the Land-Rover drove into the crowd at high speed.

About 100 Londonderry youths attacked the police Tuesday night with bottles of acid, gasoline bombs and bricks. They also set two mail trucks afire. Seven policemen were treated for acid burns, and one of the young rioters required surgery after a rubber bullet fired by the police or the army hit him in the head.

It was the first use of acid bombs by rioters in Northern Ireland in several years.

Meanwhile, IRA guerrilla Bobby Sands was in the 53rd day of his hunger strike in the Maze Prison near Belfast, and the government said his condition "continued to deteriorate."

Sands, serving a 14-year sentence, is fasting in support of the IRA's demand that its imprisoned members be given the status of political prisoners. A delegation from the Irish Republic Parliament that visited him Monday reported prison doctors said he probably would die by the end of the week.

Prison sources said Sands probably would be transferred to a military hospital where he could be given intensive treatment if he abandoned his fast. But the three Irish legislators said he was determined to die unless the British government met his demand.

The government remained adamant despite the IRA's threat of widespread violence if Sands dies. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told a news conference in Saudi Arabia: "There can be no question of political status for someone serving a sentence for crime."

Mrs. Thatcher, who returns to London Saturday from visits to India and Persian Gulf nations, rejected the Irish parliamentary delegation's request to meet with her on Sands' behalf.

Her Cabinet minister for Northern Ireland, Humphrey Atkins, said in a television interview: "There is no such thing as a political motive for a crime which makes it better than any other crime." He said IRA hunger strikes are an attempt to "take over the running of the prisons."

Sands, 27, who was recently elected to the British Parliament from a Catholic district, was arrested after a gun battle with the police and was convicted in 1976 on a gun charge. Political prisoner status would allow him and the other guerrillas jailed during the IRA's 11-year war against British rule in Northern Ireland to wear their own clothes instead of prison uniforms, do no prison work, mingle freely with each other and receive more visitors.

It also would constitute an admission by the government that the IRA is a legitimate political movement instead of a criminal, terrorist organization as the government claims.

In New York, lawyer Ramsey Clark and the Rev. Daniel Berrigan announced they were flying to Belfast tonight to work for a compromise between Sands and the government.

Berrigan said he would address a rally of Sands' supporters on Sunday in Belfast.

Mild Tremors Shake Italy

IMPERIA, Italy (AP) — Two mild tremors shook the western Italian Riviera at dawn today sending dozens of area residents fleeing into the streets, police officials reported. The tremors also jolted the nearby Cote d'Azur, in France.

Authorities said residents in the Italian resorts of Imperia, San Remo, Bordighera and Ventimiglia were roused by the disturbances.

No major damage or casualties were reported, and there was no Richter scale reading on the intensity of the tremors.

The authorities said the epicenter of the quakes was in the mountains west of Imperia, a quake-prone area and the scene of a massive quake in 1887.

Several mild tremors struck the Umbria region in central Italy and Carnia, in northeast Italy in the past few days, without causing any casualties or major damage.

Eaton Contributes To Lung Association

A $5,000 check was presented to J. T. Snowden, board member of the American Lung Association of North Carolina, Eastern Region, and Connie C. Landen, regional director of the association by Tim Rosche, plant superintendent of the Eaton Corporation as part of their involvement in community service.

The funds will be used to implement a new program for asthmatic children and their parents called "Superstuff."

This self-help program is designed to educate the child and family to enable them to develop skills and techniques which teach self-reliance, self-awareness, and self-control of asthma. Materials include an 86-page workbook for the child and a parents' news magazine.

Asthma is a lung disease that constricts air passages and makes breathing very difficult. Many things can trigger an asthma attack. However, with proper knowlege and treatment, these attacks can be avoided and/or relieved. No program presently exists to provide children the self-help training they require. There are approximately 32,000 pediatric asthma cases in North Carolina and an estimated three percent of all children have asthma. Asthma is the most prevalent chronic respiratory disease among children under 15 years of age, and is the primary cause of school absenteeism due to chronic illness.

For parents, the 16-page news magazine serves as a forum for questions between parents and physicians and between parents and other parents. The magazine is desgined to relieve the feelings of isolation so often felt by parents of a sick child.

"Eaton Corporation enthusiastically joins and supports the goal of the American Lung Association of North Carolina to make copies of the Superstuff materials available to families with children who have asthma," Rosche said.

Oakland Says No To More Cops

By The Associated Press

Voters in Oakland, Calif., decided they didn't want to raise taxes to boost the police force, and citizens of Minot, N.D., agreed not to go into banking as voters cast ballots in four states.

Meanwhile, the GOP minority in the U.S. House of Representatives got a boost when a 29-year-old Republican state representative planning for a life in Washington was chosen to fill the 4th Dirtrict Congressional seat left vacant by federal budget director David Stockman, also a Republican.

Annapolis, Md., voters chose candidates for mayor, and Oakland's mayor was re-elected over opposition from three other candidates.

Mayor Lionel Wilson had supported Oakland's Measure A, which would have imposed more than $39 million in extra taxes on homes and businesses over the next four years so the city could hire 88 more police officers.

Oakland has the highest crime rate in California, up 7 percent from last year, at a time when the police force has declined 14 percent in four years, according to Wilson.

The proposal needed the approval of two-thirds of those voting, a requirement imposed by tax-cutting Proposition 13. But it didn't even get a majority.

"I'm very disappointed at this point, but I'm anxious to see what happens ultimately," Wilson said. "We need at least a demonstration that voters want better public services."

In Minot, voters turned out in large numbers for a single-issue election to defeat by a 5-1 margin a proposal that would have established the nation's first city-owned and operated bank.

"Free enterprise is still alive and well in America, especially in the Midwest part at Minot," said Ken Johnson, who chaired a task force of businessmen opposed to the idea.

Backers of the idea said the City Bank of Minot would have provided more revenues for city services and municipal wages without the need for more taxes.

In Michigan's 4to Congressional District, state Rep. Mark Siljander easily defeated his Democratic opponent in their race for Stockman's House seat. Siljander campaigned on a platform of Reagan-style tax cuts and budget cuts with the backing of the Moral Majority and anti-abortion groups.

"We've got a person that appears to be a rubber stamp," said his opponent, Cass County Commissioner Johnie Rodebush. "I hope his record in Washington will be a lot better than it was in Lansing."

In Cadillac, Mich., six of seven board members of the Cadillac Area Public Schools were voted out of office in a special recall election sparked by the board's elimination of bus service for the 3,000 students.

"We don't see it as a victory for glory," said Barbara Gregg, one of the organizers of the recall campaign. "It was something that was needed, and we need to get people to work together now to pull our town together."

The recall movement began five months ago when board members implemented threatened cuts in spending after residents turned down a millage increase for the fourth time in a year.

Mrs. Gregg said Concerned Citizens of Cadillac began circulating recall petitions because the board failed to provide bus service and extracurricular activities and charged students to use the schools after hours. Booster organizations later began to pay for extracurricular activites and the schools were opened after hours.

State officials have said that if a quorum of four board members did not remain after the election, the governor could appoint enough members to form a quorum until a new election could be held.

In Annapolis, Democrats picked a 38-year-old helicopter pilot as their candidate for mayor.

John C. Astle will face Republican Richard L. Hillman, a lawyer who was uncontested, and independent Irving Mager Jr., an engineer, in the general election.

Acting Mayor Gustav J. Akerland, who took over in March when the mayor resigned to move to Florida, shot himself in the head and died last week. Investigators found notes in his office indicating he was despondent over the city's fiscal woes.

Farm Bureau Nixes Support

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a move that may doom a proposal to cut yearly increases in tobacco price supports by up to 65 percent, the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation has refused to join other tobacco-state bureaus in supporting the plan.

Farm bureau representatives from 10 other tobacco-producing states — including the remaining four flue-cured tobacco states — approved the proposal in March at a meeting in Atlanta of the American Farm Bureau Federation's 22-member tobacco committee.

The proposal calls for cutting the yearly increase of the tobacco price supports by 50 percent to 65 percent beginning with the 1982 crop.

Proponents of the plan say lower price supports would reduce the price of U.S. tobacco and allow it to sell better on the world market.

But John W. Sledge, president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau, told the News and Observer of Raleigh that growers in the state want no part of any further cuts in the tobacco program. The state produces more than two-thirds of all flue-cured tobacco in the country.

"My observation on it now is (growers) are negative on doing anything now," said Sledge, who has been meeting with flue-cured growers throughout the state during the past two weeks. "I don't see anything else happening to us theis year."

The price support is a federally set price based on a formula adjusted to the cost of living and production prices during the last three years.

If a grower's tobacco fails to bring an auction bid of at least 1 cent above the price support, a grower-owned cooperative pays the farmer the support price.

This year's price support is $158.70 per hundred pounds, up from $141.5 last year.

Backers of the plan also say if growers offer their own reductions in federal spending, the administration would be less likely to impose further cuts in the tobacco program.

North Carolina's refusal to go along with the other flue-cured states could keep the proposal from being presented to Congress, which has the final say on price supports. Congress has rejected proposals of the federation in the past that were not unanimously supported.

The administration has said that tobacco growers now must start paying their own inspection fees.

Hearing Open Under Witch-Hunt Fears

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — With a wary film and television community fearing a McCarthy-style witch hunt, law enforcement officials were to testify here today in the first of a series of congressonal hearings on drug abuse.

Scheduled to appear at the Los Angeles Federal Building were Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, state Attorney General George Deukmejian and U.S. customs, drug enforcement and Coast Guard officials, said Phil Leshin, press secretary to the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control. The hearings, headed by Rep. Leo C. Zeferretti, D-N.Y., have been widely regarded as an investigation of Hollywood drug use — an assertion Leshin denies.

"Today's session covers law enforcement, what their problems are, what their perception is of drug use on the West Coast. So it's not only Hollywood, it's the West Coast," he said, noting that future hearings will be held around the country with sports figures, business leaders, "even aerospace workers in Miami."

"We're looking for a voluntary hearing where people from the (entertainment) industry would come forward and tell us what their perception of drug use in the industry is. We're looking for a fresh approach," said Leshin, a onetime Hollywood press agent who admitted that beginning thelhearings in Hollywood would result in maximum publicity.

"This is to attract attention ... and there is nothing wrong with that," he said. "We're going to the sports world next. It's not a McCarthy witch hunt. There are no subpoenaes."

Sen. Joseph McCarthy, R.-Wis., led anti-communist investigations in the 1950s, although the House Un-American Activities Committee was more closely identified with Hollywood blacklisting.

Leshin said part of his focus would be on the way movies and television shows portray drug use.

"Maybe there is a problem with the way they (Hollywood producers) do not portray it. It has become a very chic and acceptable thing," Leshin noted, saying a congressional solution to the problem could be to ask producers "to have a conscious, to try to deglamorize something that has become chic. ... To say, 'Hey, Hollywood, we've got a problem?'"

Witnesses scheduled for Thursday include Alan Horn, president of T.A.T. Productions ("Archie Bunker's Place"), actors Dennis Weaver, Greg Morris and Michael Roberts, along with George French of Listen, America! a privately funded anti-drug, anti-alcohol organization based in Atlanta that has actress Carol Lawrence on its board.

Leshin said he also hoped for an appearance Thursday by U.S. skating champion Tai Babalonia and other U.S. Olympic athletes. But he noted that the star turnout was less than expected because of what he termed "media distortion" of the committee's purpose, plus the recent series of articles in TV Guide on alleged Hollywood drug use.

Schools Get Wrong Message

ATLANTA (AP) — Principals of about 500 Catholic grade schools got a tough sales talk Easter week from an Atlanta-based maker of office equipment, thanks to Western Union.

The telegraph company mistakenly sent the school principals a mass-printed mailgram that was intended for salesmen of Lanier Business Products.

"I am counting on your tails being out in the field selling for the rest of this month and all of May. I don't want to hear nothing but that you are producing. Don't hire — don't do nothing else. Don't fiddle with papers. Don't talk on the phone to your grandmother. Get the h— busy for the rest of the fiscal year," the mailgram said.

It was sent by Gene Milner, chairman of Lanier Business Products, and intended for 130 of his company's regional, division and district sales managers.

But, through a computer glitch, Western Union also sent the message to the Catholic school principals.

Some of the principals responded indignantly to the wording and tone of the sales message.

"I think in a sense we may have lucked out," said Western Union spokesman Vincent Vinci. Many of the principals were on Easter recess and did not immediately receive the memo, he said.

When they return, Vinci said, the principals should find two messages waiting for them. Along with the sales memo will be an apology from Western Union explaining the foul-up.

Two Get 10 Years For Aiding Friend's Suicide

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Two men accused of helping a crippled friend commit suicide face up to 10 years in prison after changing their pleas and pleading guilty to a charge of second-degree manslaughter.

Brian W. Taylor, 25, of North Stonington, and William R. King, 26, of Ledyard, said Tuesday they were changing their pleas because they were convinced prosecutors had enough evidence to win a conviction.

The two also said through their attorneys that they hoped to receive lenient sentences in return for the pleas.

According to prosecutors, the two aided the Sept. 27 suicide of Kenneth B. Wright, 24, of Ledyard, who didn't want to live with the paralysis he suffered in an informal wrestling match in 1979.

Satti said Wright once had told Taylor "he'd rather be dead than live in the condition in which he was living."

Taylor and King pushed and carried Wright, who was incapacitated and bound to a wheelchair, into a wood where they left him with a sawed-off 12-gauge shotgun, State's Attorney C. Robert Satti said Tuesday.

The men had helped cut eight inches off the shotgun's barrel so Wright could point it at his stomach and still pull the trigger, the prosecutor said.

The victim's mother, Phyllis Wright, had told the prosecutor she did not want Taylor and King sent to prison, Satti said. He said the mother told him if she had her way the two men, who were her son's close friends, never would have been prosecuted.

"He couldn't cope. He was an athlete," Wright's mother said last fall after her son's death.

In return for the guilty pleas, Satti said he would not recommend that Taylor and King serve any specific sentence.

When the men return to court May 18, their lawyers are expected to ask Judge Seymour Hendel to suspend their sentences. The maximum sentence for second-degree manslaughter is 10 years.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a slight loss today, continuing the decline that set in on Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .45 to 1,005.49 in the first half hour.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 4-3 margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market has been jumping around erratically since the start of the month, unable to establish any trend that lasts for more than a day or two.

Analysts noted that signs of weakness in oil prices lately have fanned hopes for some progress in the fight against inflation.

But that same development has brought further downward pressure on oil stocks, a major segment of the market.

In today's activity, oils were mixed. Exxon dropped ⅛ to 66⅞ and Atlantic Richfield lost ⅛ to 45⅞, but Mobil held steady at 60½.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 10.00 to 1,005.94.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 3-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 60.28 million shares, against 51.02 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell .71 to 77.46.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 4.39 at 361.47.

Jordan Asks Budget Truce

NEW YORK (AP) — Urban League President Vernon Jordan says civil rights groups should observe a "truce" in their battle against proposed budget cuts in social programs.

But Jordan, in an inteview in the current issue of People magazine, warns the administration to beware — he says the "truce" is just temporary until President Reagan mends from last month's assassination attempt.

"The coming months will find blacks circling the wagons to protect programs essential to our communities," says Jordan, who himself survived a gunshout wound in an attack by a would-be assassin last May.

An Associated Press survey last week found that 45 senators, nearly half the Senate, are leaning or committed against the sale and another 20 are concerned about it.

In announcing the proposed sale, Speakes told reporters "the president believes this step is essential to protect our interests in the region."

"Over the course of the last several weeks we have been reviewing the situation regarding the serious deterioration of security conditions in the Middle East and Persian Gulf region and the growing threat to our friends there from the Soviets and other pressures."

Egypt is pushing strongly for new shipments of sophisticated U.S. arms for itself as well as the Saudis.

Egypt's defense minister, Gen. Mohamed Abdel Halimabu Ghazala, is in Washington this week for meetings with top U.S. officials. He is expected to press for early delivery of Hawkeye radar planes to Egypt.

Israel has the Hawkeye planes, less sophisticated than the AWACS.

The AWACS planes are flying command posts with radar that can pinpoint enemy planes 250 miles away. The rest of the sale includes Sidewinder missiles, long-range fuel tanks and midair refueling tankers for Saudi F-15 fighters.

Pirates' Bill Wilder Wows'em

Righty Strikes Out 18 As ECU Wins On 2-Out Single By Fitzgerald In 9th

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Wow!

It was that kind of game. Two outstanding college pitchers going head-to-head, and the battle didn't come to an end until the very last out.

East Carolina's Bill Wilder went up against Davis & Elkins' Ron Kaufman in a classic.

It ended up 1-0, with the Pirates winning on a two-out, two-on single by catcher Fran Fitzgerald.

But that wasn't the story.

Wilder, who allowed seven hits, walked just two and struck out an amazing 18 batters. Every one of the Senators went down on strikes before him at least once. Lloyd Day, who proved the most difficult, finally fanned in the ninth inning after getting two hits and a walk in his earlier appearances.

Paul Teeter was at the opposite end of the scale, striking out each of his four times at the plate.

Kaufman, meanwhile, was almost as successful, but with nowhere near the strikeouts Wilder recorded. He gave up only six hits, four of them coming in the final two innings. No one reached on a walk, and he fanned eight.

"This was a fine, fine game," Coach Hal Baird said with Senator coach Dave Barb nodding in assent. "It was the kind of game everybody hates to lose," Barb added.

Baird had plenty of praise for his opponent. "They are a class ball club. Nobody around here has heard of them (from Elkins, W.Va.). But they play excellent ball. They have to to have a record like they do." The Senators were dropping only their second game in 21 starts, having one tie.

"This was the best pitching job I've seen both ways since I've been at East Carolina," Baird said. And he should know. He's the only Pirate with more strikeouts in a single game to his credit, having 21 in a playoff game against George Washington.

"I really thought there in the eighth inning (when the Senators loaded the bases) that we might take the collar for the second straight time.

"Bill really was tough there, though. He came back and got them when he really had to. He got some big strikeouts."

Wilder, who struck out 13 in his last outing, has raised his career total to an even 200. Mickey Britt holds the career record of 201, and Wilder passed the number two strikeout man in the game, moving his coach — Baird — down to third. Baird had 189 in his career (but played only two years).

Wilder's 105 for the year ties Baird for second place in the single season record book. Bill Holland, with 153 in 1937, holds the record.

Davis & Elkins offered its first threat in the third when Day tripled with two away. Ironically, Fitzgerald had just thrown out Mark Sullivan a pitch before on an attempted steal.

Lonnie Fansler led off the fourth with a single and stole up, but died there as Wilder fanned the next three batters. In the fifth, with two away, Rusty Brown reached on an infield hit and Day walked before another strikeout ended that threat.

Finally, in the eighth, the Senators came closest to scoring. Day reached, beating out a roller down the first base line. He was sacrificed up, and took third on Fansler's blooper into short left. With two away, Mark Goddard walked, but Wilder handed Teeter his fourth strikeout, ending the threat.

East Carolina lost a big chance in the first. Kelly Robinette singled on a high chopper to third, and two others reached on errors, loading the bases with two away.

In the third, with one down, Todd Evans singled and moved to third on an error on a pickoff attempt, but died there.

No other Pirate reached base until the eighth, when Mike Sorrell singled, but stayed at first.

In the ninth, however, Mike Sage beat out an infield hit behind second base. With one away, Hendley singled into left, moving Sage to second. Then, with two down, Fitzgerald drove one through the middle, and Sage raced home just ahead of the throw to score the game-ending run.

The victory raised the Pirate record to 25-10 on the year. The Bucs play Atlantic Christian tonight at 6 p.m. in a doubleheader, then host Davis & Elkins again on Thursday in a 7 p.m. single game.

76ers Edge Celtics....

BOSTON (AP) — The first battle is over. With cool Andrew Toney's final salvo, the Philadelphia 76ers captured their thrill-filled opening confrontation with the Boston Celtics.

Certainly, the second engagement here tonight can't be as intense.

"I think it will be more so," said Philadelphia's Caldwell Jones following the 76ers 105-104 victory in the opening game of their National Basketball Association playoff series.

"It will be all-out war, like the war of the worlds. Everything's on the line. We can't afford to let them get their confidence back," Jones added.

Confidence may not be as important a weapon for the Celtics to restore to their arsenal as good foul shooting, a productive running game, or crisp ball movement.

All were in short supply Tuesday night when Toney calmly canned two free throws with two seconds left.

Though the Celtics weren't sharp entering the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final after a nine-day layoff, Boston Coach Bill Fitch said, "No one should get much momentum from tonight. They still have to win three more times. No one should feel inferior or superior after tonight's game."

The setback cost Boston the home-court advantage it gained on the last day of the regular season by beating the 76ers here, 98-94. That triumph had given them the Atlantic Division crown over Philadelphia.

However, 76er Coach Billy

...As Rockets Wallop Kings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Never in their long history of National Basketball Association playoff games have the Houston Rockets met an opponent as generous with turnovers as Kansas City was Tuesday night.

Twenty-five times the Kings turned the ball over. Kansas City's sloppy ways, plus Moses Malone's 29 points, triggered a 97-78 victory that gives the Rockets a 1-0 advantage in the best-of-seven Western Conference finals between the only two sub-.500 teams to make this season's playoffs.

"I didn't think our club was as prepared as it could have been," said Kings Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "I think they were a little better prepared than we were. They were aggressive, and caused many of the turnovers. But we made a lot of mistakes. We'll play better next game."

Malone, held to just 10 points in the first half, unleashed a 19-point effort after intermission and triggered a third-quarter surge to put the Rockets in control. Houston took

Arrants Quits ECU Posts

Laure Arrants, assistant athletic director for student life and AIAW track coach, has resigned both positions as East Carolina, it was announced today.

Arrants will enter Lousiana State University this fall to pursue a doctorate degree in physiology and nutrition. The 30-year-old Columbia, S.C., native has been granted a graduate research and teaching assistantship at LSU.

"This was a very difficult decision for me," Arrants said. "But I have elected to return to my first love of exercise and teaching. Had I elected to stay in athletics for the future, it would have been here under Dr. Ken Karr."

Arrants came to ECU in 1975 as AIAW field hockey and track and field coach. She was named coordinator of women's athletics in 1978 and then to an assistant athletic director's position in October 1980.

Bullets Pound Rosewood, 11-1

Jamesville To Face Edenton Tonight In Tournament Finals

JAMESVILLE — Carl Ange, Greg Sullivan and Clarence Thomas all drove in two runs and Jamesville took advantage of eight Rosewood errors Tuesday afternoon to advance to the finals tonight in the Jamesville Invitational Baseball tournament.

The Bullets defeated Rosewood, 11-1, yesterday and will meet Edenton, an 8-0 winner over Currituck yesterday, in tonight's finals at 7:30. North Hampton, which defeated Princeton, 8-3, Tuesday, will play Currituck at 5 p.m.

Jamesville wasted little time in establishing its dominance Tuesday evening. The Bullets pushed across two runs in the first when Greg Sullivan singled home Rex Bell and Carl Ange. Bell was hit by a pitch and Ange reached on an error earlier.

The Bullets then put the game away with a four-run second. Marty Swinson and Ricky Bell singled and both scored on Thomas' triple. Rex Bell then grounded out to score Thomas.

Ange singled and after an out Matthew Moore, running for Ange, scored when Keith Waters reached on an error by the second baseman.

Jamesville added five runs in the third for its total. Rosewood's only run came in the third and the game was called after five innings.

Ricky Bell was two for two to lead the Bullets. Ange was two for three.

Griffin — A Can't-Miss Prospect That Missed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Former Wake Forest star Rod Griffin was deemed a can't-miss prospect for the National Basketball Association. Somehow, he did.

There are those who cannot see how the NBA would pass up his talents. Griffin is certainly one of them. But despite the problems, the 6-foot-7 Fairmont native will not turn his back on his opportunities.

"I haven't given up," said Griffin before one of the recent Atlantic Coast Conference All-Star basketball games. "I really don't know what's going to happen, though."

Outside of a few local clippings, Griffin went through high school virtually unnoticed. But Wake Forest and Carl Tacy found him and things started to happen.

Griffin made all-ACC second team in 1975 and first team the next two seasons. In 1977, he was player of the year in the league, averaging 20.5 points and shooting .621 from the field. In 1978, he led the ACC in scoring and rebounding, the first player to have that double honor since Billy Cunningham.

As a pro prospect, he had that can't-miss look about him. He was strong and could shoot remarkably well for a man of his build. His defense was adequate and his temperament was good.

But on the final day of pre-season practice as a rookie with the Denver Nuggets, Griffin was cut. Although he had reported to the Nugget camp out of shape and his training was interrupted by illness, it was thought the Nuggets would keep him on until his game rounded into shape.

He went to Italy and played for a town named Forli. Denver called on him one more time to try out.

"I was mentally and physically prepared this time and I played well in practice," Griffin said. "But I didn't get many chances to play in the preseason games for some reason."

Griffin was cut again and he returned to Forli.

"The Nuggets said the guy playing the same position I was wasn't a better player but fit in better because of his height," said Griffin. "They said it was my height and quickness but then they said if the roster limit ever went up to 12, they'd like to have me. I'm still not sure why they let me go."

Now, Griffin finds himself in a Catch-22 situation.

"I have a secure situation in Europe," he said. "They want me as long as I want to play over there. If I come back here, I'm putting myself in line for another disappointment.

"If I try for a team here and I get hurt or cut from the team, then I lose my status overseas and have nothing here. My future's bright in Europe. Over here, I have no idea."

Former Marquette coach and current television commentator Al McGuire believes the NBA missed out on Griffin.

"A lot of things enter into these decisions — injuries, agents, style of play, lots of things — any one of them can keep you out. But they missed on you," McGuire told Griffin.

"You should be there. Don't give up," he added.

A-G Ends Losing Streak, Stings Edgecombe, 8-2

WILSON — Ayden-Grifton ended only its second two-game losing streak of the season Tuesday afternoon as the Chargers, bouyed by an 11-hit attack, stung Southwest Edgecombe, 8-2, in the final round of the Breakfast Optimist Baseball Tournament.

The Chargers, who had lost the opening two games of the tournament, scored four runs inthe first inning and never looked back as they won their 11th game of the season in 17 outings.

Chris Strickland got the Chargers started in the first with a walk. He moved to second on Bernard Ricciarelli's sacrifice bunt and scored on Terry Locust's triple.

Chuck Smithwick, who was two for four on the day with a triple and one RBI, then singled home Locust. Tyrone Gay followed with a double to move Smithwick to third. SMithwick later scored on a passed ball. Gay came home moments later on Art Rouse's fielder's choice and Ayden-Grifton led, 4-0.

The Cougars cut it to 4-1 with a run in the bottom of the second but the Chargers countered with two runs in the third. Gay walked and moved to second when Brandt Allen reached on an error. Gay and Timmy Edwards, running for Allen, then moved up a base on a double steal and both came home on Joey Kennedy's single and A-G led, 6-1. Kennedy led the Chargers at the plate with three hits in three at bats and two RBIs.

Southwest got its final run of the game in the bottom of the third and Ayden-Grifton scored one run in the fouirth and seventh for its total.

Allen went the distance for the Chargers to capture his fourth win in seven decisions. He struck out four and walked two — doubling his season total of walks in one game. Coming into the game, Allen had walked just one batter.

Ayden-Grifton returns to action Tuesday when it travels to D.H. Conley in an important Eastern Carolina Conference battle.

Beddingfield Bops G. Central, 14-4

WILSON — Twice this season Greene Central had beaten Wilson Beddingfield. But Tuesday was another day and the Bruins took full advantage of the situation.

Scoring eight runs in the second on just two hits, the Bruins routed Greene Central, 14-4, yesterday in the final round of the Breakfast Optimist Baseball Tournament.

Beddingfield jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first but it was the Bruins' eight-run second that proved the Rams' downfall. In that inning, Beddingfield managed just two hits, but the Rams gave out five walks and two errors and also hit two batters.

Down 9-0, Greene Central attempted to battle back. Tony Barrow, Jeff Suggs, Al Speight and David Shirley had consecutive singles in the third to drive home two runs. But the Bruins countered with a five-run fourth to put the game away.

Greene Central's other two runs came in the sixth when Chris Suggs, Marlowe Gilmore and Barrow each had singles to drive home two runs. But it was far from enough as the Rams' record fell to 8-9 this season.

Barrow led Greene Central at the plate with two hits in three at bats. Al Hardison was two for four for the Bruins.

Greene Central plays host to Southern Nash Tuesday.

Redskins Beaten, 12-10

ROBERSONVILLE — Northeastern pushed across five runs in the first inning and scored a run in all but the fourth to defeat Roanoke, 12-10, Tuesday night in the second round of the Roanoke Baseball Tournament.

The Redskins, now 6-9, were down 7-2 after two innings but tied the game at 9-9 with three runs in the fifth and went ahead, 10-9, with a run in the top of the sixth. A three-run bottom of the sixth by Northeastern, however, sealed the victory.

Trailing 7-2, Roanoke scored three runs in the third. Neal Cargile singled and went to third on Mutt Smith's double. Angello Spruill walked to load the bases before Cargile scored on Robert Smith's fielder's choice.

Maurice Chance's sacrifice fly brought home Smith and Spruill later scored on Lee Briley's fielder's choice to cut the Northeastern lead to 7-5.

In the fifth, Smith singled and moved to second when Briley walked. Edward Grimes then singled to left and when the leftfielder misplayed the ball Smith, Briley and Grimes all scored to tie the game.

Roanoke then took the lead with a run in the top of the sixth but Northeastern countered with three runs in the bottom of the inning to take the lead and, one inning later, the victory.

Roanoke was led at the plate by Grimes, Ross and Cargile, all of whom were two for four.

Roanoke plays host to Edenton Tuesday night.

Louis Hailed As A Hero

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joe Louis, boxing's Brown Bomber, is being hailed in life as in death as an American hero and patriot who was available "when the country needed that lift."

Louis, a sharecropper's son who shouldered the spirit of black Americans and wore boxing's heavyweight crown a record 12 years, was buried Tuesday in Arlington National Cemetery among the nation's war heroes.

"He will be at rest here in Arlington, a fitting resting place for a man whose instinctive patriotism and extraordinary accomplishments made him one of the most unforgetable Americans of our time," President Reagan said in a statement read by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

Reagan, who is convalescing from a gunshot wound to the chest, waived regulations to allow Louis to be buried in Arlington. The former champion rose to the rank of sergeant during World War II, when he gave boxing exhibitions for servicemen.

Louis, who would have been 67 next month, died of a heart attack April 12.

He was accorded a 21-gun salute and taps were played before his golden casket was lowered into the ground on a grassy hillside near the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

At the gravesite were his family, including his widow, Martha, and son Joe Louis Barrow Jr., three former heavyweight champions — Jersey Joe Walcott, Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali — and several thousand fans.

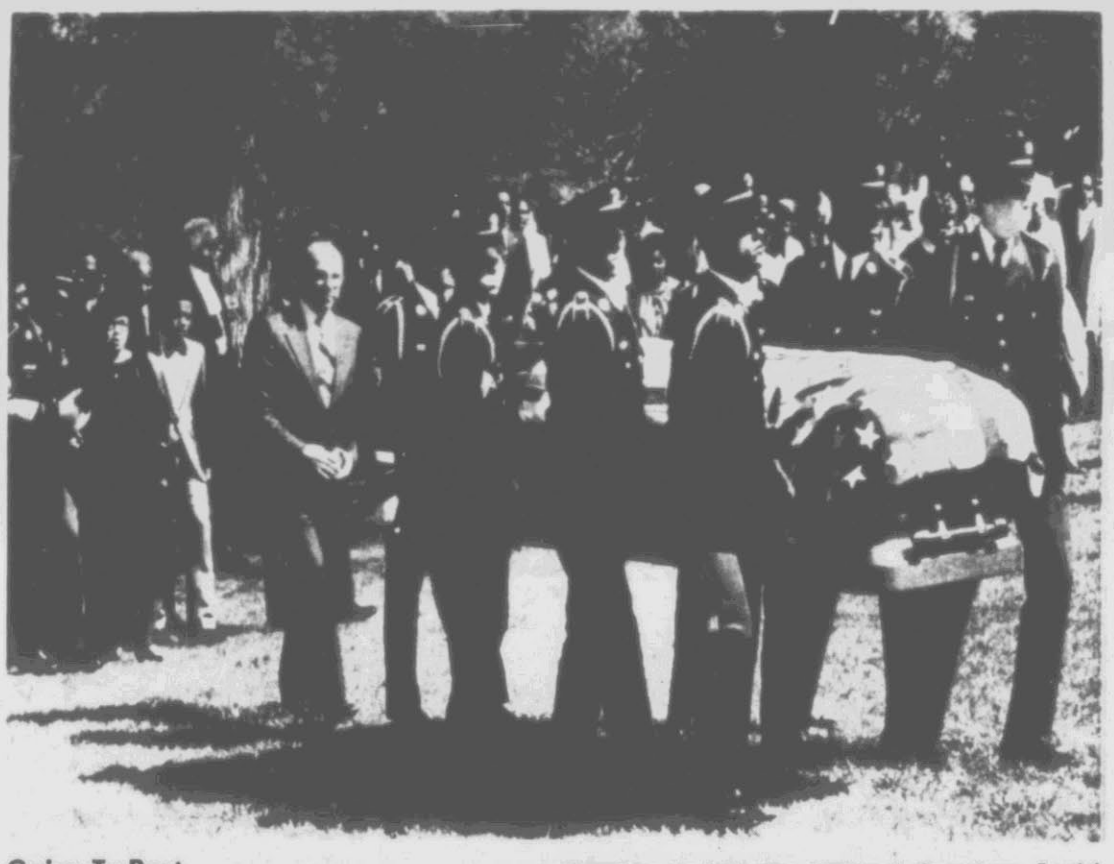

"You were a patriot, you served your country well," Barrow said of his father. "You were available when the country needed that lift. A lot of cities wanted you, Detroit, Chicago, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, New York. They all want to claim you, but it is most fitting you stay here in Arlingon Cemetery."

Louis, one of 11 children, shortened his name when he started fighting so that his mother would not learn of his undertaking. He won the heavyweight title on June 22, 1937, when he knocked out James J. Braddock in eight rounds at Chicago's Comiskey Park.

Although he made millions in the ring, Louis suffered financial difficulties. As a result, after retiring in 1949 he tried to regain his title in 1950 but was beaten on a decision by Ezzard Charles in 15 rounds at Yankee Stadium. He was later matched against Rocky Marciano, who beat the former champ in eight rounds.

Louis' professional career spanned 17 years and 71 fights, of which he won 68 times. He defended his title a record 25 times.

His most-remembered fight occurred in 1938 when he knocked out Germany's Max Schmeling with less than one minute to go in the first round before 70,000 fans in Yankee Stadium.

Piston GM: Sampson Yet To Make Decision

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia basketball All American Ralph Sampson "is very outspoken about the fact that he has not made a decision yet" whether to turn professional and enter the National Basketball Association draft this year, says Detroit Pistons General Manager Jack McCloskey.

McCloskey, who met here Tuesday with the 7-foot-4 sophomore and Cavalier Coach Terry Holland, heads one of two teams trying to get Sampson to enter the NBA draft in June.

Sampson met last week with Donald Carter, owner of the Dallas Mavericks, the other team vying for the Harrisonburg, Va., native's basketball talents. Detroit and Dallas will flip a coin April 30, five days after Sampson's decision deadline Saturday, for the No.1 draft pick.

Sampson has indicated "he'll have his decision Saturday afternoon," said Virginia sports publicist Doug Elgin.

What that decision will be is anyone's guess, but Holland has said he thinks he'll be able to keep his star center for another year.

"I don't think there's any 100 percent right solution," he said. "That's the tough part.

"I think he sees the advantage of staying in college. If all things were equal, I think he'd stay in college. But let's face it, there is a large financial consideration to be made."

Both Dallas and Detroit have promised to make Sampson the wealthiest No.1 draft pick ever.

Holland said talk about money at the Tuesday meeting with McCloskey was "very general. It was along the lines of, 'You know what our first offer was — more than what any rookie has ever gotten. We're willing to start there and negotiate up.'"

McCloskey said he didn't press Sampson for an answer during the 30-to 45-minute meeting in Holland's office, but "it would be very surprising to me if he does come out."

Asked why, he said, "It's what wasn't there. There was no attorney there."

No direct comment was available from Sampson, but in a tape released by Virginia's sports information office he said: "I'm in the process of evaluating my stay here at the University of Virginia and what benefits I will have if I do turn pro this year."

He said Dallas was "really not pushing the issue" because of future first-round draft picks, but "Detroit is saying, 'We've got to have you; we need you.' It's two different types of situations."

Illinois QB Faces Court Battle To Play In 1981

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Illinois quarterback David Wilson faces a court battle to win eligibility for the 1981 football season after faculty representatives of the Big Ten Conference rejected a request that would have allowed him to play.

Wilson's attorney, Robert Auler, said the Big Ten's eligibility committee decided Tuesday against a waiver of the junior college red-shirt rule. The committee met Friday with Auler and Wilson.

Announcing the decision, the Big Ten issued a statement saying: "The faculty representatives of the Big Ten Conference affirmed the decision of its academic progress and eligibility committee and thus it denied the appeal by the University of Illinois on behalf of David C. Wilson to permit him to compete during the 1981 football season."

Wilson filed suit last year and obtained an injunction that allowed him to play the entire 1980 season. The case is still before the courts, and Wilson could be allowed to play in 1981 if he wins.

Wilson had asked that the Big Ten waive that rule and agree that he had played only two years of football at Fullerton (Calif.) Junior College.

Astros' Knepper Cools Off L.A.

By The Associated Press

Those modern-day hitless wonders, alias the Houston Astros, came up with a new way to record a much-needed victory.

"It was outstanding pitching by the pitcher and outstanding hitting by the pitcher," Manager Bill Virdon said Tuesday night after Bob Knepper fired a three-hitter and doubled and scored the only run as the slow-starting Astros cooled off the Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0. "It doesn't matter how; we just needed to win."

The Astros, defending champions in the National League West, not only ended a four-game losing streak but beat the Dodgers for the first time in five meetings and handed them just their second loss in 11 games.

"This was an important game for us to establish that we can beat Los Angeles and that we are not psyched out by them," said Knepper, who was obtained in an off-season trade with San Francisco. "Numerically, this was an important victory. You don't want to go 2-20."

Elsewhere, the Montreal Expos trounced the Philadelphia Phillies 10-3, the Atlanta Braves hammered the Cincinnati Reds 10-1, the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Chicago Cubs 8-0 and the San Diego Padres shaded the San Francisco Giants 3-1. New York and Pittsburgh had the day off.

The Astros, who have won only three of their 11 games, pinned the loss on Jerry Reuss when Knepper doubled to the right field wall and scored on Cesar Cedeno's third-inning single.

Knepper yielded singles to Pedro Guerrero in the second and fifth innings and Dusty Baker in the seventh. He didn't walk a batter and struck out three.

"In San Francisco after three or four losses the throats would tighten up and everybody would be drinking a lot of water," Knepper said of his years with the Giants. "Here, you'd have thought we were 8-2. I've never been nervous with this team. The whole atmosphere is so relaxed.

Reuss, making his first start of the season after missing two outings with a pulled leg muscle, said he was "satisfied with my game. How could I not be? He outpitched me and he outhit me, too."

Expos 10, Phillies 3

Rookie Tim Raines rapped out four hits, including a two-run single, and tied a club record by stealing four bases while Scott Sanderson scattered 10 hits. Raines broke a 2-2 tie against loser Dick Ruthven in the fifth when he scored on Rodney Scott's single and the Expos poured five runs across in the sixth, including two-run singles by Raines and Ellis Valentine. Gary Carter homered for Montreal's first two runs.

The Expos are counting on Raines to replace Ron LeFlore, last year's NL stolen base leader, who left the club as a free agent. The 21-year-old left fielder boosted his average to .444.

"I just want to play 162 games as hard as I can," Raines said. "Then at least I'll know that I've done my best. I don't look at it as replacing Ron LeFlore. I'm just going out each day and playing the game the way I'm capable of playing."

Braves 10, Reds 1

Tommy Boggs pitched eight scoreless inning and drove in two runs and slugger Bob Horner, without a run batted in this season, drove in four, three with a homer in the Braves' seven-run ninth. Claudell Washington, who had three hits, got Atlanta's first one off Mario Soto, a single in the fourth. He stole second and continued to third on catcher Johnny Bench's throwing error. Horner followed with a sacrifice fly. The Braves made it 2-0 in the sixth when Ed Miller singled, stole second and scored on Washington's single.

The loss was the Reds' third in four meetings with Atlanta, a team Cincinnati dominated last year by winning 16 of 18 games.

"It certainly helps when you score runs," said Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox. "We just haven't been able to get many in this year. With our run production as it is, I'm grateful that we are 5-5. With the kind of pitching we've been getting we should only have one loss."

Cardinals 8, Cubs 0

Gene Tenace and Tom Herr drove in two runs apiece in St. Louis' six-run third inning to back the five-hit pitching of rookie Andy Rincon. George Hendrick also had two RBIs with a double and triple. Rincon retired 17 of the last 18 batters as the Cubs suffered their eighth consecutive loss and ninth in 10 games. The Cardinals have won five in a row.

"It can't get any better than it is right now," said Herr, who had a two-run triple and singled home another run. "When we first came here, the team kind of thought the media and the fans believed we weren't going to be any good. I think it kind of pulled us all together. We've got a lineup that can compete with anybody in our league."

Padres 3, Giants 1

Chris Welsh posted his first major league victory by allowing an unearned run and three hits in seven innings. It was the second start for the 26-year-old left-hander, obtained in a trade last month with the New York Yankees. The Padres snapped a string of 21 scoreless innings in the fifth when Ozzie Smith dlivered a two-out, two-run double off Doyle Alexander.

Toronto's Stieb In Need Of Runs From Friends

By The Associated Press

But it's leaving a bitter taste.

Stieb has started three games for the Toronto Blue Jays this season. He has also lost three games this season.

In the 21 innings he has pitched, the Blue Jays have given him no runs. None. Zero. Zilch.

He pitched seven against Milwaukee Tuesday night. Toronto scored one run in the eighth. And one in the ninth. Not enough. The Brewers beat the Blue Jays 6-2.

In other American League games, Seattle silenced California 3-0, Boston blasted Texas 10-4, New York defeated Detroit 2-0, Chicago beat Baltimore 2-1, Cleveland clipped Kansas City 4-1 and, in 10 innings, Oakland edged Minnesota 4-3.

Stieb understandably didn't hang around the Toronto locker room any more than he had to after his latest loss — not only his third of this year but his eighth in a row dating back to 1980.

"I wish we could give him a run or two and give him something to work with," said Toronto Manager Bobby Mattick. "With his lack of experience, he just bears down all the time.

"But we're going to have a long talk with Dave tomorrow. I think he's getting his ball up too much. Last year he used to have a hard sinker. Now it's not as consistent and isn't sinking as much.

"But he still pitched a good ball game for us."

But not good enough.

He threw only one fatal pitch — a gopher ball to Ben Oglivie with two runners aboard in the sixth inning. The home run changed a 1-0 deficit into what turned out to be a 4-0 insurmountable lead. By the time Alfredo Griffin singled for Toronto's first run in the eighth, it was far too late.

"You're always thinking shutout when you go that far into the game," said Moose Haas, who chalked up the first complete game of the season for the Brewers' pitching staff. "But now I'm kind of glad they scored that run in the eighth. I sure think it would have hurt more to have lost it by giving up the homer to Mayberry in the ninth."

Mariners 3, Angels 0

Floyd Bannister's two-hitter and RBI singles by Richie Zisk, Jim Anderson and Bruce Bochte enabled the Mariners to beat California. It was a remarkable turnaround for Bannister, whose last start ended in a 16-1 pounding by Oakland. This time he retired the final 20 batters he faced.

"We all know he has the stuff," said pitching coach Wes Stock. "It isn't that he doesn't know he can pitch up here. But he thinks he has to do more things than are humanly possible. He's got to believe in himself."

Red Sox 10, Rangers 4

John Tudor, a left-hander, is unique. He finds Fenway Park a fun place to pitch. In his career the Boston southpaw is 7-1 in the bandbox and 3-6 away from it. Against Texas, he scattered nine hits and, of the Rangers' runs, one was unearned and two others came by way of walks.

"In this ball park, a left-hander has to be either a ground ball pitcher or a strikeout pitcher," Red Sox Manager Ralph Houk said. "Tudor is a low-ball pitcher. He moves the ball around and it's hard to get it up in the air for distance when he hits his spots."

"He had good stuff and his fast ball moved pretty good," added Boston catcher Gary Allenson. "When he gets it in on right-handers, it's real tough. And the way he kind of slings the ball, it's real tough on lefties."

Yankees 2, Tigers 0

Doug Bird isn't really a starter but he's the only right-hander the Yanks can use in that role for now. He's a stranger among the lefties — Ron Guidry, Tommy John, Rudy May and Tom Underwood.

"In my opinion," Bird said after his six shutout innings against Detroit, "a righty starter isn't that important. Not if the lefties keep pitching as good as they have been, and with a bullpen as strong and as deep as ours. As a matter of fact, you might not even need a lefty in the bullpen as long as Rich Gossage is out there." The Yanks got two unearned runs off Milt Wilcox in the first inning and Bird, Bill Castro and Goosage made them stand up.

Half The Story

Rich Dauer of Baltimore, already forced out, slides into second as Chicago White Sox shortstop Bill Almon fires to first for a double play. Ken Singleton had grounded to second baseman Tony Bernazard to start the double play. (AP Laserphoto)

White Sox 2, Orioles 1

"Just a plain ol' bad throw," shortstop Mark Belanger moaned after his two-base error on Wayne Nordhagen's ninth-inning grounder opened the gates to Chicago's victory over the Orioles.

Indians 4, Royals 1

Rick Waits pitched a seven-hitter against Kansas City and doubles by Bo Diaz, Alan Bannister and Jorge Orta drove in ninth-inning runs for the Indians.

A's 4, Twins 3

Tony Armas, the major league leader in runs batted in, got his 18th with a bases-loaded single in the 10th to give Oakland it's 13th victory in 14 games.

Steve McCatty, with a six-hitter, pitched his third compete game of the season and Oakland's 12th of the year. He'd still be pitching if Manager Billy Martin wanted him to. "I would have kept going until Billy pulled me out of there," he said. "I would never quit in a ballgame unless I was really hurt."

Hearns Looking Ahead To 'Sugar'

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — World Boxing Association welterweight champion Thomas Hearns will never be accused of not being able to "talk a good fight." But his nationally televised title defense Saturday afternoon against fifth-ranked Randy Shields is not foremost in his mind right now.

"My plans are to fight (World Boxing Council champion) Sugar Ray Leonard sometime this fall. That way the two crowns will be on one head — mine," Hearns said. "I think I can beat Ray. I really do.

"Nothing about Ray will be tough for me. It won't be any contest," added Hearns. "I think I can basically outbox him. After the fight, I'll just say to him, 'Nice try.'"

Leonard will be at ringside Saturday.

Hearns takes a 30-0 record into the ring with 28 of the wins by knockouts and is guaranteed $250,000 for his title defense. Shields is 39-6 with 21 KOs and will get $100,000.

But Shields' father and trainer, Sonny, said the purses should be reversed because his son should be the reigning WBA champ. A 15-round loss to Pipino Cuevas on July 30, 1979, in Chicago "robbed Randy of the title," according to the elder Shields.

Hearns said he "destroyed Cuevas in no time" a year later.

"Randy will be the strongest, tallest and best counterpuncher Hearns has fought so far," the elder Shields said. "He (Hearns) has fought nobody that can fight."

Shields cited Hearns' nickname of the "Detroit Hit Man" and said, "he's going to be 'Hit Man Hearns' all right. He's going to be hit by Randy."

Emanuel Steward, who manages and trains Hearns, said "we had to go through hell just to get Shields to fight Thomas.

"It took us two years to get him. He was very reluctant," Steward added. "It's the first time I've ever known no one wanted to fight the champion. They had everything to gain and nothing to lose."

Steward said he tried to get Roberto Duran to take on Hearns for the title "but Duran said he couldn't lose enough weight."

But Hearns said Shields, who went 10 rounds with Leonard in 1978, should prove a formidable foe.

"He's a very good fighter. I've seen him fight on two occasions and he showed me quite a bit of skill," said Hearns."He's a smart fighter, a good boxer. I might have a little trouble on my hands. But I don't think he can go the distance with me."

But Steward said "no little 147-pound guy (Shields) can stand up to Thomas a full 15 rounds. Right now, I think Thomas is the best, pound-for-pound, all-around boxer in the world."

Steward said his plan for the 22-year-old Hearns is to have him win titles on five different levels — welterweight, junior middleweight, middleweight, light heavyweight "and maybe cruiserweight" — and "then see Thomas retire at age 25 or 26."

76ers Nip Celtics...

Cunningham said, "I just don't think the home court is going to make a big difference. The reason I say that is, you look at the way these teams played all year. We both were 62-20. You don't do that by not doing well on the road."

One of Toney's favorite road stops has been Boston. The 6-foot-3 guard from Southwestern Louisiana averaged 12.9 points per game this season, but averaged 15 against the Celtics. In the season finale he poured in 35 points and Tuesday night he led the 76ers with 26.

"It's nothing personal against them, but anytime you feel your shot going you have to go with it," the confident rookie said.

With four seconds left and Boston ahead 104-103, Toney, Philadelphia's first choice to get the ball, took the inbounds pass. He was fouled by Cedric Maxwell.

"When I got the ball I took my time and looked over the floor and the baseline was wide open so I took that route," said Toney.

"I tried to block him and stuck out my leg. It was a good call and a very dumb foul," said Maxwell.

Cunningham said he went to Toney because the rookie was shooting well and isn't afraid to put the ball up under pressure.

"There's no sense in worrying about the effect (shots have) because that will throw you a fraction off," Toney said. "You just have to do the right thing at the right time."

Rockets Win...

charge for good with a 16-8 run at the start of the fourth period that turned a 70-63 lead into an 86-71 bulge.

"I got more aggressive with the ball in the second half," said Malone. "I started going to the offensive boards and that opened up a lot of opportunities for me."

Game two of the series is tonight in Kansas City.

"It was a very important win," said Malone. "It's up to them to win tomorrow (tonight). We're going to come back here and play the same way."

The Kings pulled a surprise move by starting point guard Phil Ford, who had not played since he suffered an eye injury Feb. 22. But although the Rockets admitted they were caught offguard, Ford was obviously rusty, winding up with only five points and committing five of the turnovers.

"I was hoping we'd get some cheap buckets early in the game, and then walk it down," said Fitzsimmons. "It really came down to some carelessness on our part," said Fitzsimmons.

Forward Robert Reid, who scored 19 points for the Rockets, credited Houston's pressure defense with throwing the Kings out of rhythm.

"We never did let up on the pressure," he said. "Phoenix let Ernie (Grunfeld), Sam (Lacey) and Scotty (Wedman) shoot the ball and those guys can flat-out shoot. We pressured the ball and made them use the clock."

Grunfeld wound up with 20 points while Wedman had 19 and Lacey six.

Flyers Down 3-1 As Playoffs Resume Tonight

Calgary Out To End Series

By The Associated Press

Aggressive, pressure hockey always has been the trademark of the Philadelphia Flyers. They won games and championships by outhitting opponents and outhustling them in the corners.

Suddenly, however, the Flyers are getting a taste of their own medicine — and they don't like it.

Whether the Flyers can do anything tonight about the way the Calgary Flames have outplayed them in winning the last three games of their best-of-seven quarterfinal series will determine if Philadelphia is eliminated from the National Hockey League playoffs. The Flames, who had never won a postseason series prior to sweeping Chicago in the opening round this year, lead three games to one.

All three other NHL playoff series stand at 3-1, with the New York Islanders attempting to knock out the Edmonton Oilers, the New York Rangers looking to eliminate the St. Louis Blues, and the Minnesota North Stars hoping to end Buffalo's season. Only the defending champion Islanders will be at home.

"It's often 4aid that games are won and lost along the boards," noted Flames defenseman Brad Marsh. "That has been Philly's success. They've got big forwards who can go in and dig the puck out. But we've got some big guys too. We've got to keep going after them."

Added Calgary forward Jim Peplinski concerning the Flyers bad-guy reputation, "If they want to get chippy, they've got to understand that they'll just get twice as much back. We can play it any way they want."

In all three of their one-goal wins, the Flames were outshot by Philadelphia. But goalie Pat Riggin has been outstanding, especially in the second and third games, when he made 42 and 47 saves respectively. Riggin did not play in the first game, a 4-0 Philadelphia triumph against Rejean Lemelin.

"I'm sure they're frustrated," added Marsh, the Flames captain. "They played two pretty good games in Calgary but we're getting the goaltending."

And the Flyers are making uncustomary mistakes, the kind they rarely committed in reaching the Stanley Cup finals last year.

"We work, work and work," said Philadelphia center Bobby Clarke, "we get there, louse it up and give it right back."

"We have a challenge to respond to," added Flyers Coach Pat Quinn, whose team was sixth in the overall NHL standings to Calgary's seventh this season. "There has been a challenge all the way. But it's certainly a lot bigger right now."

The Oilers, Blues and Sabres could say the same thing. Each must rise to the occasion or go on vacation.

Edmonton, which wound up 14th during the season but surprised Montreal in three games in the opening round, can't afford to make many mistakes against the first-place Islanders.

"They capitalize on every mistake we make," said Oilers Coach Glen Sather. "We'll need a perfect game back there to beat them."

The Islanders will be without stalwart defenseman Stefan Persson, who suffered a broken jaw Monday night. Still, the Islanders are solid favorites to clinch the series.

"The greatest thing a team can have is playoff experience," said New York's Bob Nystrom, who scored the Cup-winning goal last spring against Philadelphia. "They've (the Oilers) got it all, including exceptional talent. And a year in the playoffs is certainly not going to hurt them."

The Blues' main hurt is to their pride. After finishing an impressive second in league standings, they've been dominated by the Rangers' forecheckers and speedy skaters.

The Rangers have gotten numerous breakaways and clear shots at Blues goalie Mike Liut, an All-Star who has appeared tired in this round after playing every minute of an exhausting five-game preliminary series with Pittsburgh. The Blues defense has not been effective.

"I think maybe we have them frustrated," said New York's Ulf Nilsson. "They've been down and have had to open up. That's given us even more chances."

Steinbrenner Picture Ends Program Sale

NEW YORK (AP) — George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the New York Yankees, reportedly expressed his displeasure over a picture of him in the Yankee yearbook and several outdated facts in the book by ordering 50,000 copies removed from concession stands Tuesday night.

The $2.50 yearbook has been on sale at Yankee Stadium and through the mail since Opening Day.

"I don't think that George liked his picture. Sure, there are errors in the book," one stadium official said. "There is no price on the cover, they have pictures of guys who have been traded away — but take a look at George's picture."

Steinbrenner's picture on page 3 is half the page, a profile shot. But the imbalance in the proportion of red makes it look as though the volatile owner is wearing lipstick.

Although nobody connected with Canteen Corp., which operates the concession stands, or the Yankees' front office would comment on the removal of the yearbook. One vendor, however, said that the books, which were on sale when the stadium opened Tuesday night, were ordered taken off at 7:30 p.m., one-half hour before the start of the game against Detroit.

The yearbook, printed during spring training, is usually revised after the June 15th trading deadline. This book had originally been held up when the Jason Thompson-Jim Spencer trade was made, but later called off by the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Other players traded away since the book was printed and ready for sale on April 9, when the Yanks opened at the Stadium, included Ruppert Jones, Tim Lollar, Joe Lefebvre and Chris Welsh, all traded to the San Diego Padres for center fielder Jerry Mumphrey.

Lottery Fix Try Doomed

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — It was a simple scheme: rig the Pennsylvania Lottery drawing so a few people could get rich quick and nobody would be the wiser. It was a little too simple.

No one got rich, and eight people found themselves facing an array of criminal charges. The fatal flaws, investigators say, were ignorance of the lottery system's intricacies — and greed.

After several months' investigation, a state grand jury accused the eight of rigging the April 24, 1980, Daily Number drawing at WTAE-TV in Pittsburgh.

Now, six of them plan to testify for the state. The other two, former television emcee Nick Perry and Edward Plevel, the suspended Lottery Bureau district manager, face a Common Pleas Court trial next month.

The grand jury concluded that Perry, who was host of the nightly drawing, was the mastermind, Plevel the inside man, in a scheme which resulted in a record $3.5 million payout when the number 6-6-6 popped up on pingpong balls used in the drawing.

They are charged with theft by deception, rigging a publicly exhibited contest, criminal mischief, criminal conspiracy and perjury. Plevel also is charged with unsworn falsification.

Investigators say if betting had been limited to about $100,000 every six months, the scheme might have gone undetected. But somewhere along the line, the grand jury says, Perry issued the order to "bet heavy."

The grand jury said Peter Maragos, his brother, James, and James' wife, Jean, bought more than 10,000 Lottery tickets of various combinations of "4" and "6" at at least a dozen locations. Another brother, Jack Maragos, also bought winning tickets, the panel said.

So many tickets were bought, the grand jury said, that people were paid to cash partial lots of the $1.2 million in winning tickets.

During one court appearance, Peter Maragos testified he borrowed $32,000 from a bank to buy tickets. Peter and Jack Maragos and Perry were business partners in a food vending business.

Peter Maragos also testified that he and Perry discussed the scheme over the telephone and at the church they both attend. He said after the drawing, he delivered a total of $35,000 to Perry at two meetings — one at a cemetery and the other behind a shopping center.

Investigators say the accused were apparently unaware the Lottery Bureau's computer system recorded the sales for that day — revealing unusually heavy betting patterns on the numbers "4" and "6" in the Philadelphia area.

As the evidence mounted, the four Maragos family members agreed in December to be state witnesses — giving the prosecution its first inside look at the alleged conspiracy.

In return for their testimony, Peter and Jack Maragos pleaded guilty to reduced charges in the hope of gaining five-year probationary sentences. Under a similar agreement, charges against James and Jean Maragos would be dropped after they testify for the state.

Part of the agreement involved the Maragos family making restitution, and officials say they have recovered more than $700,000 in cash and unredeemed winning tickets.

In addition, Joseph Bock and Frederick Luman, two former television stagehands implicated by the grand jury, decided in March to join the Maragos family as state witnesses in an effort to get lighter sentences.

At his January preliminary hearing, Bock testified he weighted the bogus pingpong balls, except those numbered "4" and "6", by injecting them with white latex paint. He said he affixed store-bought numbers and letters to make them look like the official balls.

Bock testified he brought the bogus balls to the television station in a brown paper bag and minutes after the drawing burned them in an old paint can in his shop.

Hospitals Are Leaving Black Urban Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Urban black neighborhoods are somewhat more likely than white communities to lose their local hospitals, even when both are in low-income areas, according to a new analysis of hospital trends.

The findings add a fresh dimension to continuing policy debates over health care needs and costs. Many health planners have attributed the trend of hospital closings in black neighborhoods to the poverty of those areas, discounting racial influences.

The research, conducted by Dr. Alan Sager, assistant professor of urban and health planning at Brandeis University, was designed to develop a system for accurately predicting which hospitals are vulnerable to financial and social pressures to close or move from the city.

"Once you identify those hospitals, then you have more time to evaluate the impact on the community," Sager said in a telephone interview. "In some cases, closing the hospital might be desirable. In other cases, it would not and there would be time to consider alternatives."

Sager studied hospital closings and relocations in 31 U.S. cities from 1937 through 1979, and his report was delivered recently to the Office for Civil Rights of the Department of Health and Human Services, which had commissioned the study.

The study dealt only with non-profit voluntary hospitals, which "provide the great bulk of care for residents of most U.S. central cities" and are operated by religious or civic organizations or universities, Sager noted.

Sager found that 14, or 3.8 percent, of the 369 hospitals open in 1937 had closed or moved by 1950. But 59, or 13.3 percent, of the 443 hospitals open in 1970 had closed or moved a decade later.

During the 42-year period, 175 new hospitals were built in the cities and others were expanded, resulting in a net gain of nearly 76,000 hospital beds in the 31 areas. The population rose by 5 million during the same period.

In the 1970s, the hospitals that were closed or moved were in census tracts with black populations averaging 46 percent, while the hospitals that remained open were in tracts averaging 27 percent black, he reported.

The black neighborhoods which lost hospitals were, on the whole, no worse off financially than the primarily white neighborhoods which kept hospitals.

In the 1970s, the median income in the closed-hospital communities was about 65 percent of the figure for the metropolitan area as a whole; in the communities keeping their hospitals, it was 67 percent.

"A surprising finding was that the size of residents' income did not seem to matter" in determining a hospital's future, Sager wrote.

He also expressed surprise that "a hospital's 1937 policy on admitting blacks proved significant during the decade of the 1970s," though the correlation was weaker than for other factors.

Of the hospitals that had been in business in 1937 and closed or moved during the '70s, about 16 percent adhered to "a formal policy restricting admission of blacks in 1937," Sager said. Of those remaining open, 13 percent had such policies.

Among other findings, the report said the closed hospitals were relatively small, averaging 160 beds, and were less likely to offer specialized treatments or to be affiliated with medical schools.

The closed or relocated hospitals also were less expensive, the report continued. At the hospitals closed or relocated in the '70s, the average cost per patient per day was $80, compared to $85.60 at the other hospitals.

If the trend persists, Sager said, "we are likely to be left with large hospitals and expensive hospitals."

Rocky Marciano, the only heavyweight boxing champion to retire without being defeated in his professional career, was killed in 1969 in a plane crash near Newton, Iowa.

CRYPTOQUIP 4-22

RXCIUY OGDWRPY DRKOWUI FRD YCYU XGCPK WGFIU

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — ANGRY HARPIST HITS ALL STRINGS SHARPLY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: G equals O

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

If you have a friend who boasts that he is an excellent bridge player, give him this hand. Any declarer worth his salt should breeze home with the contract.

After South received heart support from his partner, he made a game try in diamonds. With a maximum for his original raise, North happily accepted by leaping to four hearts. This was a sound contract, but declarer failed to make full use of his powerful trump holding.

West led the king of clubs, and South was happy with the dummy that came down. It seemed that he needed no more than to pick up the queen of trumps for his contract, and he was odds-on to fell the lady. He won the ace of clubs and cashed the ace-king of hearts, but this time the favorite did not come in.

All was not yet lost. Declarer could still make the hand if West held both high spades and something good developed in the minor suits, such as the queen of diamonds being onside or guarded only twice. But that was not to be. Declarer ended up losing three spade tricks and a trump.

Observe what would have happened had declarer taken a simple precaution at trick two. Instead of drawing trumps right away, declarer should first ruff a club in his hand. Now when he cashes the high trumps and the queen does not drop, declarer is a tempo ahead in the game.

Declarer continues by cashing the ace-king of diamonds and ruffing a diamond in dummy. He returns to his hand with a club ruff and leads his remaining diamond. If West ruffs in front of dummy, one of dummy's losing spades will go away, so West must sluff. Declarer ruffs in dummy and then scores his own last trump by ruffing a club as West has to follow suit. In all, declarer makes seven tricks in trumps (five via ruffs), plus three minor-suit winners, and in the process he telescopes his four losers into three.

McLean Back With New Hit

BEAR MOUNTAIN, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. music world bid goodbye to Don McLean after his pop epic "American Pie" topped the charts nearly a decade ago. But the music hasn't died for McLean after all.

McLean went eight years without a hit in the United States. And then this spring he reached the top five on the charts with his recycling of Roy Orbison's 1961 "Crying," spurring sales of his album "Chain Lightning" to 1.5 million worldwide.

Now he's resting at his estate near here before launching an 18-city U.S. comeback tour, People magazine reports in April 27 editions. And he's already planning his next album.

Controls Switched

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy is spending $30 million to replace sophisticated computer systems on five new assault ships with simpler propulsion control equipment that sailors can operate without special training, officials say.

A Navy spokesman confirmed last week that $6 million already has been spent to replace the complex system aboard the assault ship Nassau with a standard pneumatic automatic system to run the ship's engines and boilers. Similar work was planned aboard the Nassau's four sister ships.

The complicated system would have required a special training program for sailors, according to Navy officials.

ABC Dispensing More Sugar Pills In The Form Of Television Shows

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC is dispensing some more placebo television, airy TV fill that carries a title and has stars and occupies a spot on the schedule but really doesn't exist at all.

The idea behind placebo television, which has become a specialty at ABC, is to fool the viewer into believing he's getting a real TV program when in fact there's nothing coming across the tube but a gelatin capsule that dissolves away under the slightest scrutiny.

You might have seen ABC's newest sugar pill, "Aloha Paradise." Then again, you probably wouldn't remember. This show, a spring tryout program, wouldn't register an image if held next to a mirror.

If "Love Boat" is Muzak you can see, "Aloha Paradise" is but the illusion of Muzak you can see. It comes from Aaron Spelling, who is ABC's placebo pusher. He also makes "Love Boat," "Fantasy Island" and "Hart to Hart," which together weigh less than a butterfly jockey.

"Aloha Paradise's" non-stories flit about the edges of sitcom and drama without ever quite taking the plunge into either. Debbie Reynolds does the Ricardo Montalban-Gavin MacLeod number, playing chipper Hawaiian resort hostess to a relentless group of vacationing zombies, bloodless standard-issue TV guest stars who come equipped with problems that can be resolved painlessly in an hour.

Ray Bolger and Phil Harris appeared one week as a couple of old pals who try to snooker each other in pursuit of a dame (Harriet Nelson). The routine was much better accomplished by Spanky and Alfalfa in a 1936 "Little Rascals" short.

As in "Love Boat," the lead character is supplied with assistants, who seem to roam around the set sheepishly wondering whether they really get paid for this. One of them is Bill Daly, the hilarious, classic goof from the old "Bob Newhart Show." His act is reduced to imbecility here.

One of the little vignettes involved Daly's visiting nephew, a 24-year-old millionaire whose success inspired this line from envious Uncle Curtis:

"I'm 41 and all I own is five shirts and a toaster."

Such gems routinely send the laughtrack machine into convulsions. They may do the same for Daly's career.

"You're a sophisticated lady."

Even Debbie doesn't escape the dialogue blight. She responds:

"Where'd you learn suave stuff like that?"

From Uncle Curtis, no doubt.

"Aloha Paradise" is as harmless as any sugar pill, and as empty. Why bother with it?

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Work Is a Real Pain in the Neck

For the past few months I have been getting severe pains in the back of my neck. My wife thinks I am kidding when I tell her that I don't have it on weekends, but only during the week when I work as a television cameraman. Sometimes the pain is so bad that I have to stop work. — Mr. O.L., N.M.

Dear Mr. L.:

You may very well have spotted the cause of your problem, for in many instances such pain may be related to one's occupation. I've known a great many people who complain of pain in the neck after "cradling" a telephone between the shoulder and neck. Many cases of persistent pain in the neck have been reported by people who wear bifocal glasses. While doing desk work they may distort the position of their head, thus putting strain and tension on the muscles of the neck.

Sometimes, even at a relatively young middle age, slight changes in the bone structure of the spinal column of the neck occur — due to osteoarthritic deposits.

It should not be difficult to track down the reason for your discomfort. If indeed you are holding your head in an unusual position while looking through the TV camera, you might get relief from using a supporting collar. This would take the pressure off your neck and relieve the tension of the muscles.

Undoubtedly the reason why you feel better over the weekends is that you are resting your neck and are spared the pressures made by the unusual positions you must take while at work.

My sister believes in dreams. Before she makes any decision, she consults her "dream books." She is always interpreting dreams and sometimes scares people to death. Isn't this all nonsense? — Miss H.N., Nev.

Dear Miss N.:

Scaring people is quite bad enough without scaring them "to death." Your sister is playing a game that really can induce unnecessary fears. Your sister's friends are aiding and abetting her by falling into the trap of recounting their dreams to her.

The interpretation of dreams is a very complicated process. It is one that has occupied the attention of psychiatrists and experts in the field of psychology. Dreams should only be interpreted by those who are trained in this complicated process.

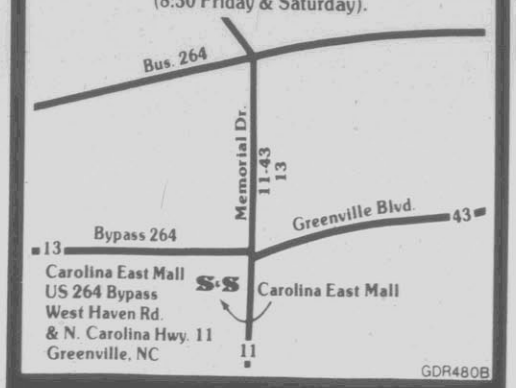

The interpretation of dreams is not a parlor game to be used by amateurs for the purpose of toying with highly sensitive emotions and inflicting high degrees of anxiety on gullible people.

EFIRD'S PEST CONTROL
Many people who think they have termites, call the first company's name that comes to mind. Most of the time, because of fear or lack of knowledge people will have their home treated without a second opinion. This is very sad. Not only could the customer possibly save money, but most important he or she could be satisfied that they actually did see termites. It doesn't cost anything for a second opinion, but it could cost hundreds without one.

Make America Better

Inventor On Verge Of Big Success

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Raleigh inventor may be on the verge of providing the nation and the world with a better and cheaper way of handling municipal sewage and industrial wastes, based on his multiple patents.

Current treatment systems often depend on maintaining healthy, working colonies of harmless bacteria, which devour the substances that sewage are prone to decay.

However, Richard N. Edwards' patented method avoids bacteria, relying instead on high-pressure injections of oxygen and biodegradable materials into water and carbon dioxide.

Unlike the messy sludge that settles out in the more conventional processes, the Edwards' system's final waste-like product is flat, sterile fiber-board like material that he says could be burned for fuel.

Edwards also says his process would cost only about half as much to build, use less than half the energy, take up far less space and operate much faster than a typical conventional plant.

While a current municipal system might require six acres of land to treat the sewage and spread out the sludge, Edwards says his process requires a much smaller area.

"I can put my tanks on an acre of land and (treat) in 30 minutes (the same sewage) that would take eight hours to 48 hours to weeks," he said recently.

"What goes on in there I haven't been able to tell. But it works," Edwards added.

Engineers familiar with Edwards' ideas have said that a lot of questions have gone unanswered, such as whether the process will work with larger volumes of sewage and whether the solid byproduct can be burned without violating pollution laws. Nonetheless, the process has drawn widespread interest.

Edwards, 65, is a landscape architect. But for the past 10 years he has been tinkering with what has come to be called the "oxyozosynthesis" process.

Edwards has acquired backers and formed a corporation called International Waste Water Reclamation Technologies Inc. with offices in Raleigh and Scranton, Pa. The firm has put up more than $600,000 to construct the first full-scale system in West New York, N.J., a town across the Hudson River from New York City.

While the system has sprung some dedication day leaks, town officials are giving its subsequent performance good marks.

"So far, it's functioning very well," said West New York Mayor Anthony M. DeFino. However, the system is far from being accepted by the entire scientific community.

"There are a lot of applications for it," said William L. Meyer, an environmental engineer with the N.C. Division of Health Services solid and hazardous waste management branch. "But it is not a cure-all in any sense of the word."

Epilepsy Group To Meet

WILLIAMSTON — The Pitt County Epilepsy Association will hold its meeting at Martin County Community College here Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The speaker will be Ms. Penny Taylor, R.N.

She is coordinator of policy, procedures and material management of nursing services at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. She will be speaking on "Coping With Epilepsy."

The meeting will be held in Building Four, Room Six.

Greenville and Pitt County members will carpool from the parking lot of the Willis Building, Greenville, at 6:30 p.m.

The whooping crane, peregrine falcon, northern bald eagle, Attwater's greater prairie chicken, brown pelican, and the alligator are among the endangered species that live in the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge on the Texas coast.

Superliners Provide Super Train Trip

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It may not be possible for long if the proposed cutbacks of rail service go through, but right now you can still see America, from sea to shining sea, through a train window.

Why would anyone want to spend three days and three nights traveling from coast to coast by train when you can make the trip in six hours by plane?

Passengers on a recent Amtrak run between New York and Los Angeles might answer that question with another one: Why would anyone want to make the trip in six hours by plane when you can spend three days and three nights traveling from coast to coast by train?

Our enthusiasm stemmed from a trip that started in New York City's Penn Station on a Thursday afternoon aboard the Broadway Limited and, after a seven-hour stopover in Chicago on Friday, ended Sunday morning when the Southwest Limited pulled into Los Angeles.

Those whose last experience with train travel was aboard a troop train during World War II would find things vastly different today, especially on the brand-new Superliners that have just started rolling along routes west of Chicago.

The bi-level cars, which cannot be used in the East because they are too high for some tunnels, are the first all-new, long-distance passenger cars to be manufactured in this country in more than 20 years.

From coach to dining cars to sleepers to the lounge-cafe car with windows extending from near the floor into the roof, they provide luxury travel with dramatic views of the scenic West.

While most of those going all the way across the country had sleeping accommodations, Roz Eth was returning to her Los Angeles home by coach, having made the trip east to New York the same way.

"I came equipped with a radio and a crossword puzzle book, some mystery paperbacks and some note paper, but I haven't written any letters," said Ms. Eth, who had spent her Chicago layover at the Art Institute.

"The coaches are comfortable," she said, pointing to the leg rests which stretch out the reclining seats into almost bed-like proportions.

Frank Miller, headed from his home in Arlington Heights, Ill., to Los Angeles on a combined business and pleasure trip, was taking a train for the first time in 18 years.

"I looked at the itinerary," he explained of his decision to take to the rails rather than to the air, "and saw we'd be going through 12 states, eight of which I'd never been in before.

"And for the size I am, I like the 6-foot-9-inch bed," added the 6-foot-2 Miller, who planned to make the return trip on the Desert Wind, connecting in Ogden, Utah, with the San Francisco Zephyr.

He was in an economy bedroom, with two facing seats which form the lower berth. There is also an upper berth which folds down from the wall, a closet, a folding table, a mirror and storage space for two suitcases.

But the real luxury is in the deluxe bedrooms which have a long sofa, swivel chair, vanity with sink and triple mirror, pull-down table, enclosed toilet, closet, full-length mirror, carpets, and drapes across the wide picture windows. The sofa becomes a 41-inch-wide bed at night and there is also an upper berth.

Each Superliner sleeping car has five deluxe bedrooms and 14 economy rooms, 10 of them on the upper level and four on the lower level, which also has a larger economy family room, a bedroom for handicapped travelers and a series of restrooms, each with toilet, sink, and pull-down diaper-changing table.

In the dining car, with soft seats upholstered in bright colors and linen cloths and fresh flowers on every table, the menu prices read like something out of the '60s. A dinner that includes appetizer, salad, rolls and drink runs from $4.95 for roast turkey breast and "all the fixin's" to $9.95 for a New York strip steak.

For the youngsters there are choices such as the Gandy Dancer at $2.35 — spaghetti and meat balls, roll and butter, milk and ice cream.

By the last night out, the long-distance travelers had become chummy, sharing drinks, confidences and exclamations over the magnificent mountain scenery. Many were train buffs, just enjoying the ride.

Shawn Darby, a 33-year-old aerospace engineer from Los Angeles, was having dinner with new friends in one of the deluxe bedrooms, relaxing after a month of touring the country by Amtrak, traveling in coaches and economy rooms.

"I went from Oakland to Salt Lake to Denver to Chicago to Washington, D.C., to Orlando, Jacksonville, back to D.C., Chicago, Albuquerque and now I'm on my way back to Los Angeles," she said, ticking off her travels with one suitcase of clothing, another of shoes and a backpack with necessities.

"Originally it was because I got tired of flying, but once I started with the train it's got to be the most exciting thing I've ever done. I met all sorts of people, especially in the dining car."

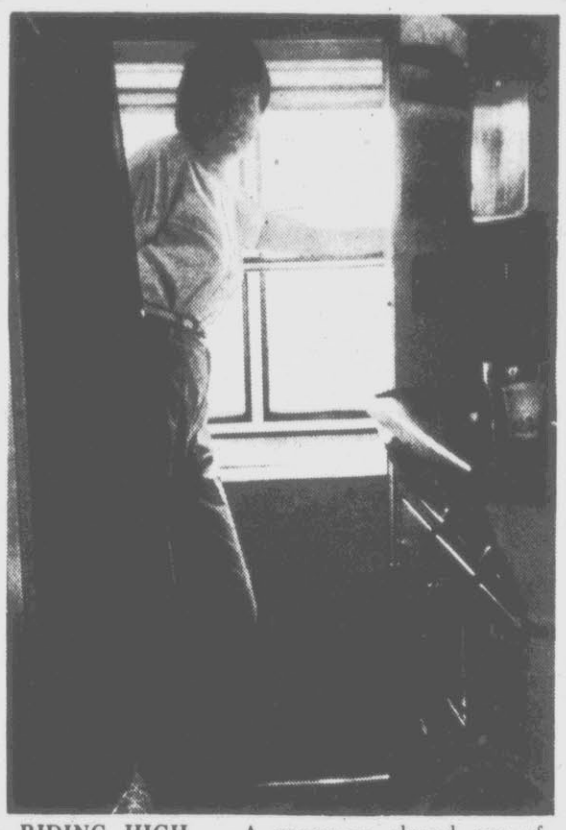

As the train reached its Los Angeles terminus the passengers scattered, some looking forward to a homeward train trip. For us it was on the Zephyr leaving San Francisco at 12:35 p.m. on a Friday. It began with the coaches and lounge car jammed with people headed for Reno, keeping two bartenders busy and getting an early start on their weekend fun.

After their departure about 8 p.m. the lounge car was quiet again, but soon the passengers began providing entertainment of their own.

In addition to a snack and beverage area with tables for eating or playing cards, the downstairs level has an electric piano. There's sure to be a piano-player aboard, often augmented by someone with a guitar, and the passengers gather around for a singalong.

The Zephyr arrived in Chicago at 1:05 p.m. Sunday and we left on the last leg of our journey at 7:30 p.m. on the Broadway Limited, though an earlier train, the Lake Shore Limited, leaves Chicago for New York at 3:25 p.m. In addition to the regular crew a train manager, Sherman Jennings, was along to make sure all went well and to announce the sights along the way.

The train arrived at Penn Station Monday at 4:07 p.m., 13 minutes ahead of schedule. We considered the $1,400 for fare and accommodations for two for about 7,000 miles of rail travel well spent, but were sorry the trip had ended so soon.

RIDING HIGH — A passenger aboard one of Amtrak's new bi-level Superliners stands at entrance to deluxe bedroom which, in addition to vanity with sink and triple mirror, right, has long sofa that becomes three-quarter bed, upper berth, swivel chair, enclosed toilet, closet, full-length mirror, pull-down table and picture windows.

COFFEE BREAK

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1981, office workers will drink more than 9 billion cups of coffee, predicts the National Coffee Service Association.

According to Hatton Smith, president of NCSA, which supplies coffee services to more than 1.2 million office locations across the country, Americans now consume more coffee than any other nation in the world.

New York Melting Pot Simmers A Tasty Stew

NEW YORK (AP) — Take a melting pot and stir in waves of refugees. Simmer over a more global outlook until xenophobia evaporates. Sprinkle with hordes of foreign tourists attracted by a cheap dollar.

Voila: a culinary capital that can please any palate from Afghani to Zambian.

At Little Afghanistan, near the the theater district, former mujahedeen swap imprecations against the Soviet occupiers over aushak and boolaunee — dumplings and turnovers stuffed with scallions, meat and yogurt.

Zia Jaghori says Afghans account for about a third of the patrons of his family-run restaurant, which also serves as an ersatz community center for newly arrived exiles and refugees.

U.S. veterans who fought in Vietnam can reminisce about their soldier days at Le Saigon Pavilion, which opened four months ago. The lone Vietnamese restaurant in New York, it serves such classics as Cha gic (spring roll) and Pho Ga (Hanoi chicken soup).

Owner Tran Q Thinh says most of his customers are American. "Vietnamese don't have a tradition of eating out. Each one is proud of the way he cooks. Most are too critical of restaurants."

Thinh, who arrived in New York with $13 in his pocket after the fall of Saigon in 1975, says he was an officer in Vietnam's force but refuses to elaborate on his past life. "It's a new country, you've got to start all over. I started from the bottom."

And after several years at the bottom, as a busboy and waiter, he saved $8,000 and borrowed the rest from friends to begin his new life as a restaurateur. He says he puts in 14 hours of work a day at his restaurant and also attends graduate school where he hopes to earn a business degree.

Andree Abramoff, a French Jew who owns a restaurant named after herself specializing in Mediterranean cuisine, fled Egypt during the 1956 Suez War. Penniless, she landed first in France, then emigrated to New York.

She attributes the growing interest in foreign food to the preoccupation with fresh ingredients among younger people.

"It's the canned, frozen and prepared stuff that's given American food a bad name," says Andree.

"When I first came to this country, people didn't know what an artichoke was. A woman once explained to me it was part of an engine."

Her restaurant specializes in dishes that she says appear with slight variations throughout the Mediterranean — Spain, the French Provinces, Greece and Turkey, Egypt, Syria and Lebanon.

Popular with New York's Latin community is La Victoria China, which serves up Cuban-Chinese-Dominican food, an increasingly common hybrid here.

The partnership began in 1962, when Tommy Tong and Chop Fung met in Santo Domingo and found they had both left China and emigrated first to Hong Kong and then to the Dominican Republic at roughly the same time.

Their restaurant in the capital of Santo Domingo prospered for three years until 1965 when civil violence swept the small Caribbean nation. Tong says he took the occasion to fly to the United States on a visitors' visa with no intention of returning, and Fung took refuge from the street fighting in the U.S. ambassador's residence and was airlifted to the United States.

Once in New York, the pair became friends with two Chinese whose route differed only in that their next-to-last stop was Cuba, from where they escaped via the "Freedom Airlift" that operated during the mid-60s.

Votes Cast On Roll Calls

Roll Call Report Service

WASHINGTON — Before beginning its current Easter recess, the Senate passed and sent to the House legislation setting the framework for the massive federal spending cuts advocated by the Reagan Administration and its supporters in Congress.

In recent weeks, "The Daily Reflector" reported the yeas and nays cast by state senators on final passage of the measure and on some of the amendments voted on during the lengthy debate. Altogether, there were votes on 35 amendments, offered mostly by Democrats challenging the Administration's radical budget surgery. The following covers other important votes that occurred during debate on the measure (S Con Res 9).

'WASTEFUL SPENDING' — The Senate rejected 35 for and 65 against, an amendment directing the Appropriations Committee to find ways to cut $2 billion in fiscal 1982 spending by agencies for consultants, office supplies and other items coming under the broad heading of procurement. The fiscal 1982 procurement budget is about $100 billion.

Sponsor David Pryor, D-Ark., said "a long, hard look" is needed at expenditures for "consultants, furniture purchases, fancy audio visual materials and any unnecessary luxuries that the taxpayers of this country can no longer afford."

Opponent Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., sympathized with the objective but said the amendment burdened the committee with a vague task that in some respects exceeded the committee's jurisdiction.

Senators voting "yea" favored a $2 billion across-the-board cut in federal procurement spending in fiscal 1982.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

Sen. John East, R, voted "nay."

HOME HEATING AID — By a vote of 37 for and 61 against, the Senate rejected an amendment adding $400 million in fiscal 1982 to the federal program that helps the poor and needy elderly pay home heating bills.

Supporter Joseph Biden, D-Del., said heating costs will soar as a result of the Administration's decontrol of oil prices and planned decontrol of natural gas. He said "I do not think this president really understands" the importance of the federal program to help the poor cope with rising energy costs the Administration is contributing to.

Opponent John Tower, R-Tex., praised the Administration's plan to let the states assume much of the federal program. This "will help assure that the states target the available money to people that have serious problems, instead of spreading it around to a great many people who are not in such great need," he said.

Helms and East voted "nay."

SCHOOL LUNCHES — The Senate rejected, 35 for and 54 against, an amendment to increase fiscal 1982 and 1983 budget outlays for the school lunch program by $450 million.

Sponsor Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., said "let us not cut to the bone on the school lunch program or we will find (it) going out of existence ... and all children — poor, middle and upper income — may be without a hot lunch program..."

Opponent Robert Dole, R-Kans., said "parents are also concerned about inflation, high interest rates, unemployment, over-regulation, the economy in general, and high taxes."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to lessen the Administration's planned cuts in spending for school lunches.

Helms and East voted "nay."

FOREIGN AID — By a vote of 70 for and 26 against, the Senate cut $200 million from fiscal 1982 foreign aid outlays. This was coupled with a separate vote adding $200 million to child nutrition programs.

Sponsor Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said his amendment "is taking some money which otherwise would go to foreign countries and applying a small part of it for school lunches for American children."

Opponent Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said he is "all for school lunch programs" but that the Helms amendment "sends the wrong signal around the world as to what our priorities are" in foreign aid.

Senators voting "yea" supported transferring $200 million from foreign aid to child nutrition programs.

Helms and East voted "yea."

EDUCATION SPENDING — The Senate rejected, 33 for and 65 against, an amendment to restore $435 million in fiscal 1982 outlays for the part of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (Title I) directed at educating poor children.

Supporter Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the Administration's "enormous cut" in Title I funding will "deny important educational services to millions of low income school children."

Opponent Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, noted that the Administration plan is to consolidate some 45 federal education programs having 108 pages of regulations and requiring state and local officials to spend 137,000 hours each year filling out federal forms. He said the Moynihan amendment "would do nothing to help control the inflationary impact of present government spending levels."

Senators voting "yea" favored restoring $435 million in planned cuts in spending for poor elementary and secondary school pupils.

Helms and East voted "nay."

Group Honors Lost Causes

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — To all of those who tried and failed, the Society For Lost Causes says "Nice try."

"We realized that almost everything that ever succeeded in the world began at one time as a lost cause for someone, whether it was the automobile or the rocket ship or the bicycle," says founder Joel Shreck.

Schreck's group has a three-fold purpose: to recognize lost causes that should be saved, to recognize successes that should be lost and to encourage those who gave their best and fell flat on their faces.

Shreck is making a list of nominees for each category and his 35-member group plans to give awards named for former President Millard Fillmore.

Among the nominees for lost causes that shouldn't be lost are those working to preserve the environment.

"With the way we seem to be heading," Shreck notes, "the environment may well be lost already."

Among the successes that should have failed are what Shreck calls "the isms."

"There's chauvinism, nationalism, militarism ... all kinds of isms that could, and probably should, be lost," he says.

And then there is the category sure to draw the most nominations: the projects that failed before they really got started.

The early favorite is a local entry, the Hygenic Dog Food Co. of Berkeley, a corporation that tried to sell health food for dogs. Nice try.

Another group, Useful Idiots for the CIA, may well be in the running, but it's so obscure that Shreck hasn't been able to find out much about it.

All he knows about the anti-CIA group is that it apparently consists of short, dark men who wear porkpie hats and carry placards outside New York movie theaters.

Shreck emphasizes that his organization should not be confused with the Society for the Unification of Lost Causes (SULC), which apparently folded before Shreck learned what they did.

"We sent them a certificate of consolation," he recalls.

Voices Raised Against Support

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Troubled by what they see and hear in Washington, the disparate voices of black Africa are sounding one note in near-unison these days: the Reagan administration must not encourage white-ruled South Africa in its pugnacious standoff with the rest of the continent.

President Reagan is "preaching too late" a policy of cooperation and patient diplomacy with South Africa, said one key black African diplomat in New York.

A test of the American attitude is fast approaching.

The U.N. Security Council is scheduled to meet April 21 to discuss taking action against South Africa because it has balked at a U.N. plan for giving independence and black-majority rule to South-West Africa, the territory also called Namibia.

The black Africans are expected to call for a world economic boycott against South Africa. If they do, the United States, with more than $2 billion in investments in that country, will probably veto the proposal.

At the same time that much of black Africa looks to the United States to help reshape political life in the south, at the northern end of the continent some are urging the Reagan administration to take a stronger role in blunting what they describe as a Soviet-Libyan offensive.

But the more widespread feeling among Africans appears to be that, though Libya poses a threat, the Soviets do not, and Africa must not become involved in the big-power scramble.

Black Africans' concerns were first aroused by the election of Ronald Reagan. They knew he had no black American constituency to answer to, as Jimmy Carter did, and they feared he would yield to pressure from pro-South African business interests in the United States. Those concerns have since been heightened by a series of U.S. statements and actions.

First, the leaders of these impoverished countries were dismayed by Reagan's cutbacks in foreign aid.

Then Reagan himself said the United States must not "abandon" South Africa, and looks forward to a "continued friendship" with that country, a closeness he says the United States could use to eventually help end South Africa's apartheid policies of racial segregation.

The Africans were further disturbed when South African military officials slipped quietly into Washington for talks with U.S. officials, when the Reagan administration proposed repeal of U.S. legislation barring aid to rebels in Angola, and when South African forces stepped up raids against their enemies in nearby black states.

"She (South Africa) feels the Western powers support her," said Prime Minister Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe. "The West should condemn her." But Washington was silent.

Ambassador Oumarou Youssoufou, executive secretary in New York for the 50-nation Organization of African Unity, said in an interview that Reagan's policy of "friendliness" and "constructive help" toward South Africa is futile.

"I think what he's preaching now is too late," said Youssoufou, who is from Niger. He said the United States has long been close to South Africa but had little effect on its racial and inter-African policies.

"Forty percent of all foreign investment in that country comes from the United States. Now, how friendly can you get?"

Youssoufou said black Africa believes the South Africans scuttled U.N.-sponsored negotiations on Namibia last January, perpetuating white control there, "because they hoped they would get some support from the new administration in Washington."

South Africa and Namibia's white minority have resisted all U.N. efforts to turn the territory over to the black majority, saying the major black nationalist group will turn it into a Marxist state.

The Reagan administration will try to dispel the growing black African antipathy by sending a diplomatic mission to southern Africa later this month to explore the possibilities for new Namibia negotiations. But Reagan has put some new ingredients into the mix, suggesting changes in the U.N. independence plan that are favored by Namibia's white minority.

If it does not prolong the impasse, this would at least require lengthy new talks. And the Security Council meeting is only a short ways off.

"I do not see anything now that would make us tackle the Namibia problem differently," Uganda's U.N. ambassador, Olara Otunnu, said in an interview. As current head of the U.N. African Group, Otunnu will spearhead the expected push for anti-South African economic sanctions.

"What the United States must do is make clear to South Africa in no uncertain terms that the present situation cannot continue ... and bring maximum pressure to bear on South Africa," he said.

Farther north on the troubled continent, Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy's intervention and "merger" with the central African nation of Chad has stirred fears of further Libyan expansionism.

Fast Tongue, Quick Wit Are Needed

By MIKE STANTON
Associated Press Writer

SOUTH DEERFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Merle Straw Jr. has had his work interrupted by near fistfights, drunks and a dead man. But he tells his students to ignore such distractions and keep on selling, no matter what.

Straw, an auctioneer for 30 years and a teacher at the International Auction School, says anyone can learn to be an auctioneer. All you need is a fast tongue, a quick wit and a flair for showmanship.

"You're going to buy it all," Straw tells students acting as mock bidders at what is billed as the only school for auctioneers in the Northeast.

The school is located in the rambling Douglas Galleries in this western Massachusetts town. People from across the country have paid $350 each to take the intensive two-week course since Douglas Bilodeau bought the school and moved it here from Kentucky a year ago.

"This is the boot camp of the auction business," says Bilodeau.

The thought of running a school to train auctioneers would have been unheard of a generation ago, when Straw says auctioneers were crude, country folk.

"The auctioneer used to be the person who could yell the loudest, like a square dance caller," Straw recalls. "They were tobacco chewin' and spittin' guys who liked to warm up their audience with dirty jokes.

"But there's a new breed of people today and a higher degree of professionalism among auctioneers," says Straw, a past president of the National Auctioneers Association. "People have come to realize that this is a multibillion dollar business."

Most people attracted to the school are frequent auctiongoers. Others are antique dealers and amateur auctioneers who want to polish their skills.

Students take about 125 hours of classes dealing with everything from business and legal aspects of auctioneering to lore and tricks of the trade. Their final exam consists of stepping up to the podium and selling at a real auction.

Pointing to an imaginary antique dressing table, Straw opens the bidding among his class at $50 and then shifts his vocal cords into high gear, rattling off higher and higher bids in a rapid-fire delivery known among auctioneers as the "chant."

"Speed isn't necessarily the sign of a good auctioneer, but I like the flair," Straw says after watching his students stumble through a session practicing their chants. "It adds something to the sale. You can move a lot of merchandise if you get the crowd swinging with you."

To succeed, Straw says, an auctioneer must establish a rapport with his audience. His theory: If you grease the wheels with charm, the bidders' money will flow more freely.

"You're a showman, and if you don't put on a good show you'll have a bad sale," he says. "When you step up to that podium, you have to be in complete charge. I put everything I have into a sale and afterwards I always feel like I left a pint of blood behind."

An auctioneer must maintain composure no matter what happens, like the time a man bidding at one of Straw's auctions keeled over and died.

"The sale was really moving along, when I looked over to a longtime customer of mine who was bidding on a piece of primitive pine," Straw recalls. "He was just kind of sitting there, staring. A woman rocked him and he fell out of his chair."

After the man was taken away, Straw made a brief speech explaining that the dead man probably would have wanted the auction to continue, but that anyone who thought that in poor taste could leave. Some customers left. But some stayed and the auction went on.

Despite the wheeling and dealing of auctioneers, Straw says it's an honest trade.

"Don't ever let your integrity be for sale," he tells his students. "An auctioneer would make a great con man, but a con man wouldn't make a great auctioneer."

Celebrating 50 Years Of Being Nudists

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) — Ray and Helen Perkins are celebrating their Golden Anniversary. Not of marriage; they passed that milestone two years ago. What they're more excited about is the 50 years they have lived in the nude.

The Perkins are sunbathers "au naturel" who endure the nuisance of wearing clothes only when the temperature is uncomfortably low or when they join that other world where people masquerade in under and outer garments.

"I recommend it for everyone," said Mrs. Perkins, a robust redhead of 75. "The sun makes your body stronger and healthier."

At 81, Perkins is a busy handyman at the private nudist camp where the couple lives west of here in Broward County. His handshake is strong and he could easily pass for a man decades younger. He shows few symptoms of old age.

"People think lying in the sun for a day or so does them a lot of good," he laughed. "All they do is fry themselves."

The couple became nudists in their native Brooklyn, N.Y., when the practice first became known in this country.

"I saw a nudist magazine and thought it would be interesting," recalled the white-haired Perkins. "Helen told me to see what it was like, so I did."

"He talked me into it," giggled Helen, who admitted she was embarrased the first time she shed her clothing in public. "But I got over that right away."

The Perkins have one daughter, aged 50, who was a nudist as a youngster, but gave up the practice when she married.

For the Perkins and the 800 members of the Seminole Health Club, nudism is a sincere way of life — not a vent for kinky fantasies.

Jan Youngman makes sure of that. She and her husband, Charles, started the private trailer park and resort eight years ago on 10 secluded acres of tropical-like land.

"If people have any funny ideas, they might as well go somewhere else," explained Mrs. Youngman, 46. The camp's rules are explicit — no physical contact in the swimming pool, no liquor or foul language on the premises, and when a social dance is held, clothing is required.

One of the reasons is the Youngmans' philosophy that nudism is strictly for health. Another is the children who either live at the camp or vacation here with their parents.

"Nudism isn't for everyone," said Mrs. Youngman, whose camp is the fourth largest in the United States. She said nudist colonies can be divided into three categories — liberal, moderate and conservative.

"This one is conservative," she said with emphasis.

The residents and visitors at Seminole are a friendly lot. They cluster by the outdoor pool or play games in the recreation room like at any other resort. There are volleyball and tennis, too.

For the uninitiated, the first visit to Seminole can be a bit disconcerting, particularly when one has lunch in the camp's dining room and a statuesque brunette — without so much as a pair of sandals — is having a hamburger at the next table.

But nudists attest that awkwardness or embarrassment quickly disappear after one sheds their clothing.

"Try it; you might like it," is the friendly welcome from the Perkins.

HAIR CUTICLE

When that layer is flat and smooth, it reflects light and gives hair luster. When it becomes worn by too much brushing or too much heat during blow drying, hair tends to become dull and to split at the ends.
