SCHOOL VOLUNTEERS HONORED ... Pitt County volunteers actively working in the schools during the past year were honored at a dinner held at Wellcome Middle School last night. Keynote speaker Dr. Charles Petty, executive director of the Governor's

Volunteers' Work Praised, Honored

Volunteers from across Pitt County who have been working actively in the schools over the past year were honored at the third annual Pitt County Community Schools' Volunteer Appreciation Dinner held at Wellcome Middle School Tuesday night.

"Volunteers and volunteering are major parts of everyone's daily routine," said Dr. Charles Petty, keynote speaker for the banquet and executive director of the Governor's Office of Citizen Affairs.

"It is important that people share experiences and help one another instead of living on the 'me' concept," he added. Petty also commended the volunteers for what he termed the "valuable contribution they are giving to the children of Pitt County."

"You people will someday be thought of in high regard by those whose lives you have touched," commented the speaker.

Other commendations to the volunteers came from Jackie Gardner, Community Schools advisory council chairman; Burney Tucker, vice chairman of the Pitt County Commissioners; and Mark Owens, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education.

"Showing our appreciation for the hard work and many hours these volunteers have contributed to our children is only a small way we can say thank you," said Carol Barwick, volunteer coordinator for the Community Schools program.

Israeli Warplanes Raid PLO Bases

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes blasted Palestinian guerrilla strongholds in southern Lebanon today, a day after shooting down two Syrian helicopter gunships near the Christian city of Zahle, 30 miles east of Beirut.

The Palestine Liberation Organization said one Israeli jet was hit by ground fire and crashed in flames inside Israeli territory, but Israel said all its planes returned safely from the mission.

The governor's office in the port of Sidon, provincial capital of southern Lebanon, said the Beaufort Castle, Jarmak Mountain and the town of Aishieh were the main targets of the midday air raid in the Green Valley area.

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv confirmed the planes attacked bases near the Beaufort Castle, about four miles north of the Israeli border.

Yorkshire Ripper Confessed

LONDON (AP) — Truck driver Peter Sutcliffe admitted today he was the Yorkshire Ripper who killed 13 women in the north of England between 1975 and 1980, but he pleaded innocent to charges of murder.

Instead, the 34-year-old Yorkshireman pleaded guilty to manslaughter on grounds of "diminished responsibility," or lack of full mental competence, at the opening of his trial in London's historic Old Bailey Criminal Court. Sutcliffe also pleaded guilty to the attempted murder of seven other women.

The prosecution requested that the guilty pleas for manslaughter be accepted. But the judge, Sir Leslie Boreham, ruled a jury must consider all the charges against Sutcliffe and said the trial would proceed.

The maximum penalty for each of three charges is life imprisonment, the death penalty having been abolished in 1965. In the case of a murder conviction, a life sentence is mandatory and the judge can recommend a minimum number of years to be served. The sentence for manslaughter and attempted murder is left to the discretion of the judge, and defendants seldom receive the maximum penalty.

Merit Scholarships Go To 2 Rose High Seniors

DOROTHY WANG

EVANSTON, ILL. — Two Rose High seniors, Jeri Walter and Dorothy Wang, have been named as winners of college-sponsored four-year Merit Scholarships.

The two are among 2,135 students nationally who have won scholarships in this division of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation program for 1981.

Jeri, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stanley M. Walter, is winner of an East Carolina University Merit Scholarship. She is active in music as a member of the Rose High pit orchestra for school musicals and as a member of the ECU Symphony. She was also an All-State Orchestra member in 1978 and 1980, and teaches violin. Jeri attended Governor's School in the summer of 1980, and is a competitor in math contests. She plans a career in business/computer science and plans to attend East Carolina University. Her interests include sewing and reading.

Dorothy, daughter of Drs. Alfred and Veronica Wang, is winner of a Duke University Merit Scholarship. She was a Greenville Community Ambassador, has been in the National Honor Society for two years, and is associate editor of the school newspaper. She belongs to several Rose High clubs including the Math, International and French Clubs, and the Health Career Club of which she is president. She also is a member of the Quiz Bowl Team and the competitive math teams. Her major interest is piano, which she has studied for nine years.

College-sponsored Merit Scholarships range in value from $1,000 to $8,000 over the four college years. The average annual stipend for college-sponsored scholarship winners is currently about $750, or $3,000 for the four undergraduate years.

Says Economies To Cost Lives

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Reagan administration's proposed cuts in auto safety standards will save money but cost lives, says a researcher at the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Donald Reinfurt says a recent study of car accidents and safety belt use in New York, Maryland, Colorado and North Carolina shows that passive restraints that would have been required on 1984 models would help save lives.

Republican Leaders Say Budget Fight Now Won

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, returning to action with a pronouncement that he is "much improved" but the economy is as sick as ever, is on the verge of getting Congress to fill his prescription for the nation's economic ills, Republican leaders say.

In his first public appearance since last month's assassination attempt, Reagan told a joint session of Congress on Tuesday night that it should move quickly on his proposed spending and tax cuts. Voters are getting impatient, he said.

Inactivity "will delay even longer — and more painfully — the cure which must come," he told lawmakers in the nationally broadcast, 20-minute address on the eve of his 100th day in office, the traditional time for the first assessment of a new president.

Congressional leaders said the speech helped put much of the president's program back on the right track.

Democrats and Republicans planned to meet today to assess what effect the speech will have on House floor action on the budget, which begins Thursday.

"If we didn't have the votes before, we sure ought to have them now," said House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois.

"We're in the seventh inning and three runs behind," House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas said of Democratic attempts to block or modify the Reagan program.

"I always said he would get most of it, and I still think that," said Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he believed Reagan did what he set out to do: "increase popular support for his economic program and reassure Americans that their president is back in full command."

Reagan told the House and Senate that they risk public wrath unless they act quickly on his economic program.

"The American people now want us to act and not in half measures," he said. "They demand — and they've earned a full and comprehensive effort to clean up our economic mess."

The president, greeted in the packed chamber by thunderous, sustained applause from Republicans and Democrats alike, compared his own recovery from a bullet in the lung to the health of the U.S. economy.

"Thanks to some very fine people, my health is much improved," he said, showing no signs of the gunshot wound inflicted by a would-be assassin 29 days ago. "I'd like to be able to say that with regard to the economy."

"Because of the extent of our economy's sickness, we know that the cure will not come quickly," he said. "That cure begins with the federal budget."

Reagan's speech was interrupted 13 times by applause, although when he got down to specifics of his program, much of it was restricted to the Republican side of the chamber.

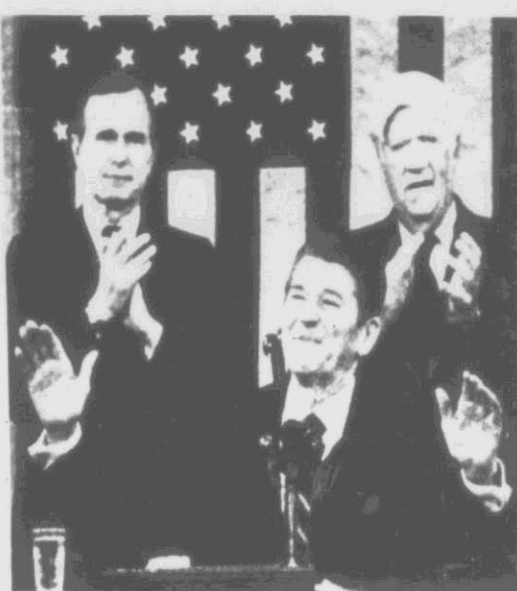

The president's economic plan appeared to be regaining momentum both in the House and the Senate even before his speech: Afterward, GOP leaders jubilantly predicted victory, at least for the budget-trimming part of the package.

"President Reagan drove a velvet steamroller through Congress tonight," claimed Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa.

But Michel said that while victory on the president's budget proposals seems near, the vote may "be a cakewalk" compared with other, tougher votes on his program further down the road, especially on Reagan's proposed three-year, across-the-board, 30 percent tax cut.

Many members of Congress fear the president's tax proposal runs too great a risk of worsening inflation. Thus, there is considerable support, especially among Democrats, for a one-year tax reduction, with further installments after spending is reduced and a balanced budget is assured.

Reagan said his tax-cut proposal is an "integral part" of his economic package, which he called the "only answer we have left."

Warren Is Dismissed

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Alton Warren, who was suspended March 2 from his duties as the city's chief building official, has been dismissed, the city confirmed Tuesday afternoon.

Jerry Cox, director of personnel here, said that Warren "was officially terminated as an employee, effective April 22."

Warren, contacted at his home, acknowledged that he had received notice of his termination by letter from the city but he referred questions regarding the matter to Tom Greer, his attorney. Greer could not be reached for comment.

Cox, questioned regarding Warren's termination, declined to "get into particulars," saying that general statutes allow him to give the date of the most recent change in employment status but prohibit him from discussing personnel matters.

Ron Sewell, director of engineering and inspections for the city and Warren's department head, also said he could not comment on the termination, noting only that the "matter has been turned over to personnel."

Ultimate approval or disapproval of a recommendation by a department head relative to termination rests with City Manager Ed Wyatt. Reached in Chapel Hill where he is attending a Government Executive's Institute, Wyatt confirmed that he had approved the recommendation of Sewell with respect to Warren's dismissal. He had no other comment.

Warren had remained on indefinite suspension following the early March action taken by Sewell. The building official contended that he was suspended by Sewell after Warren claimed he was being forced by his department head to violate state building codes in occupying the city-owned community building on Greene Street.

Warren claimed that the building, which has housed the city's Planning, Engineering and Inspections Departments since early February, was unsafe and hazardous at the time and was occupied before it should have been.

Subsequent inspections by both the N.C. Department of Insurance and OSHA Division of the N.C. Department of Labor revealed what were termed minor violations and conditions that Sewell said have since been corrected.

Later in March, a department level personnel advisory review board conducted a hearing on a grievance filed by Warren and he remained on suspension following that hearing.

Warren said at the time of his suspension that Sewell informed him in a letter that the building official had been derelict in his duties and the suspension was for Warren's failure to perform his duties.

Warren said that after receiving a "number of complaints" from contractors and citizens concerning building code violations in the community building, he wrote Sewell a letter and "told him he was forcing me to violate state building codes." He said the suspension letter arrived the next day.

Cox said that the city is now in the process of recruiting to refill the chief building official post.

A World To The Wise—
About The New Border Prints
With the summer season before us, it's easy to succumb to colorful border prints now in catalogues, magazines, and shop windows. But before buying study carefully how to use border prints for your figure! Here are some positive and negative thoughts to make the most of such pretty fabrics.

Who should wear skirts and sundresses with the bold wide bottom border designs? Only the tall and willowy figure! The strong horizontal scenes at our legs make us look shorter and wider. However, there are some wide border fabrics with muted or pastel designs that do not have an overwhelming horizontal feel to them which are fine for the average figure. Consider turning brilliant border prints and using them vertically ... with the border design running up and down on the body.

Beware of border prints for collars, cuffs, patch pockets and belts. They can appear 'spotty' on a completed garment if the print is not a subdued one.

Thousands of bolts of smocked instant sundress fabric with border prints as wide as 15" along the opposite edge from the machine-smocking will be sold this summer. Some of the borders include huge jungle or Hawaiian designs—ones that are 'in' for this year. Others have delightfully soft pastel border designs. The fabric might be right for you, but is the smocking right? These sundresses are meant for a small to average bust—and a figure with good shoulders and arms.

Avoid A-line or gored skirt patterns for horizontal border prints; it cannot be matched on bias-cut seams. Select a pattern with straight or nearly straight side seams to keep the border as even as possible. To be safe, choose a pattern that shows a border print view on the envelope.

When planning to feature the border along the hem, determine the exact length of the finished garment before you cut. Drape the fabric over your body to determine the exact length of the finished garment before you cut. Drape the fabric over your body to determine the most pleasing position of the border.

Heavily embroidered borders or large complicated motifs should be cut in a single layer to insure perfect matching of the side seams. Remember that you must have a right and a left side for each garment section. For sections that should be cut twice first cut each piece right side up, matching the seams as accurately as possible, and remove the tissue. Then flip over each newly cut piece, match the motif at stitching lines, and cut right sides together.

Dear Abby

Daughter Wants To Date: Mother Anxious To Wait

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have a very pretty and bright 11-year-old daughter who for the past several months has been asking for permission to "go with" boys. Many of Debby's friends (her age) are forming such attachments, however temporary and innocent, and Debby wants to follow suit.

I told her I thought she was much too young to be going with boys, and she was very disappointed and resentful. Abby, if you agree with me, please tell me how to handle this without alienating my daughter. It is so important that Debby and I be good friends during this very important time in her life.

DEBBY'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I'm not sure I know what "going with" means in this case, but don't panic. To some youngsters, a telephone conversation once a week means you're "going with" someone.

I agree, an 11-year-old girl is much too young to date boys, but as soon as children indicate that they want to socialize with the opposite sex, they should be allowed to do so in order to build healthy boy-girl relationships. Encourage well-chaperoned get-togethers, and make all Debby's friends welcome in your home. You will not alienate your daughter by refusing to let her go out with boys at her age. All youngsters need guidelines and rules. They feel more loved and secure when they know their limits.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, middle-aged, still fit and attractive. I have many friends, divorced or widowed — all women. In seeking male companionship we have tried the singles clubs and find them abhorrent. We don't want to go to singles bars. Everyone says, "Engage in activities that interest you and you will meet men who are interested in similar things."

OK, I'm doing that, but, Abby, how do you know who is single and who isn't in big, general gatherings?

I'm considering starting a trend of having single people wear a button — maybe with an "S" or "Single" — so we can identify each other on trains, planes, walking on the beach, at an art gallery, whatever.

Is this a sound idea, or would such a button look like a come-on, or worse yet, solicitation? I'm desperate, but not that desperate.

M.

DEAR M.: It wouldn't work. Married folks who want to pass as singles would wear the button.

DEAR ABBY: In CONFIDENTIAL TO THINKING IT OVER IN SALEM, N.J., you wisely pointed out that "money isn't everything."

That caused me to recall the words of B.C. Forbes, the founder of Forbes magazine: "The money or place of fame that our endeavors may bring when crowned with so-called success will not yield all the joy we anticipated; such things may charm, may tickle our vanity, may effervesce a hectic sort of happiness for a little while; but we soon find our teeth grating at the core. The consciousness of the worthwhileness of the achievement itself can alone produce in us a state of happiness. Riches are mental, not material."

New Role For Rye Bread

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Because our recipe for loaves of Jewish Rye Bread won many compliments, we decided to try developing a new recipe for such a bread — one that would take less time to make than the old one.

Since the indispensable part of a loaf of really good Jewish rye bread is its crusty exterior, we shaped the new rye dough two different ways: into small rolls and "party" loaves to provide lots of that satisfying crustiness.

Then came another idea. The friend who helped create the new recipe, tried making one of the party loaves into melba toast. She was inspired. The toast is wonderfully crisp and flavorful; it tempts one to munch on and on.

1 package dry yeast
1 cup warm (105 to 115 degrees) water
3 cups (about) all-purpose white flour
1 cup stone-ground rye flour
1½ tablespoons plus extra caraway seed
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
1-16th teaspoon ground black pepper
1 large egg
White or yellow cornmeal
Egg Wash (1 egg beaten with 1 tablespoon water until blended)

In the large bowl of an electric mixer sprinkle the yeast over the water; stir until dissolved. Add 1½ cups of the white flour, the rye flour, the 1½ tablespoons caraway seed, sugar, salt, pepper and the egg. At medium speed, beat until smooth — about 2 minutes. With a wooden spoon stir in enough more white flour to make a sticky, soft dough. Turn out on a prepared pastry cloth; knead until smooth and elastic, working in more white flour as necessary — about 10 minutes. Place in a lightly greased bowl; turn to grease top. Cover bowl with saran. Let rise in a draft-free warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled — about 1 hour. Punch down dough. Divide in half.

Divide one half of the dough into 15 equal pieces; shape each into a ball. Sprinkle a large buttered cookie sheet with cornmeal; place balls about 1 inch apart on the sheet. Place a sheet of saran over the top; set aside in a warm place.

Divide remaining dough in half. Shape each half, by rolling with your hands, into a 12-inch long "rope" and slightly taper the ends. Place the two ropes, well apart, on a small buttered cookie sheet. Place a sheet of saran over the top and let rise with the pan of rolls in a draft-free warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled — about 30 minutes. Brush rolls and loaves with Egg Wash; sprinkle with extra caraway seed. With a single-edge razor blade, slash a small "x" over the center of each roll, making sure slashes do not come to edges of rolls.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until browned and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 25 to 30 minutes for both rolls and loaves. (We baked the rolls in our large oven and the loaves in our small oven.) If you have only one oven, do not bake the rolls and the loaves at the same time. Remove to wire racks to cool. Serve while fresh and crusty.

Makes 15 rolls and 2 party loaves.

To make melba toast, cut a party loaf into about ¼-inch thick slices. Bake in a single layer on an ungreased cookie sheet in a preheated 350-degree oven until lightly browned and crisp — 10 minutes or so.

Hint Saudi Concession Over Sale Of AWACS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is hinting that Saudi Arabia will make concessions to U.S. interests in the Mideast to ensure that the sale of advanced radar planes to the oil-rich Arab country doesn't threaten Israel.

Haig refused to elaborate Tuesday on details, which he said are still to be worked out, but he urged the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations to wait for the final Saudi package before jumping to conclusions against the sale.

"I think that it would be prudent for all to wait until they see the precise character, nature and modality of this proposed sale before they describe it as the most dangerous threat facing the state of Israel," Haig said.

He assured the panel that President Reagan's "firm commitment to maintain Israel's qualitative advantage (over Arab military forces) will be met."

Haig's appearance kicked off what promises to be a summer-long battle in Congress. The White House announced last week that Reagan has decided to sell the Saudis five flying command posts known as AWACS — Airborne Warning and Control Systems — plus missiles and long-range fuel tanks for 62 U.S.-made F-15 fighters that the Saudis already have on order.

The administration is delaying the deal until at least mid-summer, however, to avoid interfering with the June 30 Israeli elections and to give Congress time to work with the White House on final details.

The chairman of the House subcommittee, Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., is a leading opponent of the sale, which he contends would threaten Israel's security.

Several members of the subcommittee told Haig on Tuesday that they cannot support the sale without Saudi concessions on oil and cooperation in seeking a Middle East peace settlement.

Haig hinted in reply that such concessions are being sought.

"With respect to Saudi Arabia and what we can expect from them," he said, "I wouldn't presume in a public forum to lay this out because it would put in jeopardy the very progress we have been seeking — and have been achieving."

But several subcommittee members, including Reps. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., and Matthew F. McHugh, D-N.Y., told Haig that he will have to give Congress more specific assurances to win approval of the sale.

"We have a lot of work to do," Haig agreed. "But that work has not been done and you have not been exposed to the consequences of it, so I hope you will reserve judgment."

EPA Ban?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency next month plans to order manufacturers to end production of one of the most widely-used tobacco chemicals, a scientist with the agency said Tuesday.

The chemical, known as maleic hydrazide, or MH, is essential in controlling the growth of "suckers" on tobacco plants in order to increase yield and quality. Suckers are growth buds of tobacco tissue between the stalk and the leaf.

The EPA suspension covers only older types of MH, or the diethanolamine salt marketed under such names as MH-30, Fair 30 and Sucker Stuff. The potassium salt marketed more recently as Royal MH-30, Fair Plus and Super Sucker Stuff would not be affected by the suspension.

Helms Sees Vote Defeat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., suffered a defeat Tuesday when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted unanimously to approve three State Department officials that Helms opposes.

Meanwhile, observers said that an anti-busing bill introduced by Helms on Monday would have a good chance of passing in the Republican-controlled Senate and a conservative-controlled Judiciary Committee.

The vote to approve President Reagan's State Department nominees came after GOP committee members met privately and agreed to push them through, despite Helms' insistence that he had a list of 300 questions to ask the officials.

"We all stood together to see that the Reagan team is put together expeditiously," said committee chairman Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill.

Helms missed the foreign relations meeting because he was presiding over the drafting of the 1981 farm bill as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Helms said Percy had told him Monday night about the Republican's decision to override his objections to the nominees and that he had concurred. But he said he might oppose some of the nominations when they go to the Senate floor next week.

The committee approved 11 nominees, including Robert D. Hormats for assistant secretary of state for economic and business affairs, Myer Rashish for undersecretary of state for economic affairs and Chester A. Crocker for assistant secretary of state for African affairs.

All Favor Spending Cut But Not In Own Agency

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — State officials all over the nation want to cut government spending — but not if it affects their own agencies, a study by a University of North Carolina political science professor shows.

Deil S. Wright joined professor F. Ted Herbert of the University of Oklahoma to analyze the policy views of state agency chiefs beginning in the 1960s.

During the 1960s and early 1970s, about two-thirds of the state administrators wanted increases in state programs and spending, the study found.

But while fewer than 50 percent favored overall expansion in state programs in 1978, 77 percent favored increases in their own programs, Wright said.

"A clear decline occurred in state agency heads' desire for expansion following passage in 1978 of tax reduction measures in California and elsewhere," Wright said. "But this change does not carry over to the administrators' desires for expansion in their own agencies."

"This is reminiscent of the proverbial politician who is for economy as long as it does not affect his home district," Wright said.

Wright and Herbert divided administrative agencies into categories to see which types tend to favor or oppose increases.

Staff agencies such as budget and personnel offices are generally opposed to spending increases, while criminal justice and human resource agencies favor expanding programs.

Concerning the administrators' views on federal aid to state agencies, most chiefs want the money with no strings attached, while 70 percent said they would spend federal aid for purposes other than those specified by the government if they could, Wright said.

Administrators are in favor of block grants and general revenue sharing funds because they give state and local governments greater flexibility in spending the money, Wright said. But administrators do not agree with each other on President Reagan's proposed spending cuts, Wright said.

Support will come from administrators who want more discretion and relief from what they consider over-regulation and federal obtrusiveness," he said. "Opposition will come from those who, contrary to Reagan's budget-cutting push, want their agency outlays expanded. It's not clear which will prevail."

It's Time To Move

The mechanics of Gov. Hunt's program for increasing highway fund revenues were unveiled in a talk Monday night.

At the heart of it was a 3 cents per gallon tax increase for gas.

The plan is far more complicated, however.

It also includes an income tax credit for personal driving which would amount to a maximum of $22.50 for an individual or household.

Design changes for new roads and bridges are to save $20 million annually.

There would be increases in truck registration fees, driver's license fees, fees of the License and Theft Division and other fees.

Sales tax collection on vehicle parts and accessories would be shifted to the highway fund, while liquor taxes would be increased to make up the difference in the general fund.

There were also plans for using more convict labor in maintenance of highways and cutting other highway costs.

It would seem simpler to us to increase the gas tax enough to cover needed maintenance and new construction, while carrying out the program of cutting costs, using prison labor and developing more cost saving highway designs.

The $22.50 income tax credit is not going to mean much to anybody and will certainly result in some more paper work.

It is also not clear just how much of general fund revenues will wind up in the highway fund, which should be fully supported by users of the highways.

Nevertheless, the governor has made some forthright proposals for solving the highway financing problems. It is clear that more money is going to be needed and the State Legislature should move forward with this plan, or come up with one of its own.

Limit On Appeals?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — When defense lawyers across North Carolina get a close look at several measures now pending in the General Assembly which would severely limit court appeals, a sharp conflict is likely to result.

As things now stand, a convicted defendant can appeal up for practically any reason on practically any offense. The result is a lot of court manpower and paperwork devoted to reviewing old cases over and over, while new trials languish.

Court officials at all levels have told legislators that one of the biggest bottlenecks there is comes from the open-ended appeals process, and that if there is any hope that speedy trials can be implemented with a 90-day limit, and if presumptive sentencing requiring the judge to enter in writing his reasons for departing from prescribed sentences in specific cases is to be effective, then some relief from paperwork is essential.

What was written into law with good intentions of protecting individuals from capricious or ill-trained court personnel, prejudice, incompetence, or whatever cause no longer serves a necessary purpose, those favoring a change in the appeals procedure argue.

Close Doors

There are entirely too many loopholes and complications, say court specialists. One especially nettlesome situation has come to light in the Court of Appeals where a single dissent on a three-judge review panel throws the case up to the Supreme Court. A review of the record shows that one appellate judge can never seem to agree with his colleagues, and time after time enters a dissent on the record without backing that up with legal or procedural findings of fact. That individual alone is causing almost a double load of appeals, insiders are telling members of the General Assembly.

Defense lawyers will disagree with the developing tightening of appeals, for it will mean causes cannot be dragged out so long, and the numerous avenues for keeping a case alive and shopping for another judge who might rule in their favor will at full Supreme Court review.

When a case before the State Utilities Commission is appealed, it now goes first to the Appeals Court and then the Supreme Court. Records show almost all end up in Supreme Court, so the measure in the Legislature would simply bypass the Appeals Court in the process.

Some discussion continues in whether legislation will be sought this year to limit appeals when the defendant pleads guilty, or plea bargains in the lower courts. Numerous cases are appealed despite the apparent willingness of the defendant to agree to the disposition, but later under-going a change of mind.

The proposals come from the N.C. Courts Commission chaired by State Rep. Park Helms of Charlotte, that study group continues to debate ways to improve jury least be partially blocked.

Close observers also predict that arguments will take on some racial overtones since complaints of racial prejudice from a judge, a prosecutor, or in the jury have long formed the basis of appeals for black defendant and other minorities.

The major changes in the appeals route are these:

Automatic appeals would be ended, and a complaint filed asking for appeals review, for misdemeanors with no jail sentences, revocations of probation or parole, child custody and support cases, juvenile cases, and involuntary commitment to mental or alcohol abuse institutions. As it is, almost any case can be appealed automatically.

Options

Rather than such a full appeals review automatically, the upper courts would, upon request, review the record and either reject an appeal or order a full review of the case.

When there is dissent on the Appeals Court, automatic appeal to the Supreme Court would not be allowed, but defendant may ask for an upper court hearing which, if denied, would end the case; if approved, would lead to a

I used to think that good ole Greenville was a nice little college town. After all, I went to ECU from 1971-76 and most of the town folk seemed pretty friendly. Last Saturday night changed my mind!

A friend of mine and I were in Greenville that eventful night when I locked my keys in my car. After trying unsuccessfully to open the car myself, my friend called the Greenville police who were little help, but did give us the phone number of a locksmith who was supposedly on call. It was 10:30 p.m. and I called the locksmith who was no help and could not tell me of anyone who could help me. So here my friend and I are in Greenville, 40 miles from our homes in Wilson.

Thank God for my friends in Wilson, or I still might be in Greenville.

After a number of long distance phone calls to Wilson, my friends and I managed to get back to Wilson about 12:30 a.m. We turned back around, borrowed a friend's car, went back to Greenville and picked my car up. The entire ordeal ended about 3:30 a.m.

I hope that if anyone of you ever have a similar situation arise out of town that you will receive more help than my friend and I received in your town last week.

Which means that many people today pay little attention to previous experience, in the political, economic, intellectual, or religious sphere. We want what we want right now, with no arguments.

Guns Need Protection

Rumor has it that the military is asking to go ahead with the ABM system, which had been scrubbed as too expensive and not practical by two U.S. presidents and Congress.

The Pentagon says it needs the anti-ballistic missile system to protect its MX missile system, which is now being built.

It wouldn't surprise me if the next step would be a request to build a new system to protect the ABM system, so it could protect the MX system.

The military should not be criticized for wanting to build all the new systems. It is charged with guaranteeing our security, and it's very difficult for a civilian to say the military doesn't need what it's asking for.

Let me give you an example of how it works.

As part of our strategic defense, it was decided to build a 50-caliber machine gun emplacement in Utah manned by two soldiers, a PFC and a corporal.

Then someone in planning suggested that they put in an anti-aircraft gun to protect the machine gun. This was OK'd. But the Army officer pointed out that you couldn't have an anti-aircraft gun without infantry protection, and a battalion of GIs was ordered to build a perimeter around the anti-aircraft gun.

Air Force said you can't have a bunch of soldiers guarding a large gun without air protection, so the Army engineers were called in to build a fighter strip, and a squadron of F-16 planes was assigned to the area to give the GIs fighter cover.

As soon as the squadron was in place, strategic planners recommended an armored division to protect the planes against ground attack. But everyone knows an armored division is vulnerable without tactical nuclear weapons. So a top-secret tactical nuclear force was assigned to protect the tanks.

There was some nervousness in the Pentagon that the tactical nuclear weapons

No Escaping 'Comedians'

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
DALLAS (AP) — You would think out there in outer space, 132 miles above Bermuda or wherever, they'd let a guy log a couple of extra Z's, even if he is on the payroll.

Nope. There's no way of getting away from early morning comedians, even aboard the space shuttle. You might just as well be in a hospital where they wake you up for your sleeping pill.

The first morning beyond the wild blue yonder they woke up astronauts John Young and Bob Crippen with a guitar plucker named Roy McCall chortling that atrocious country and western song about Columbia, that mean machine: "You oughta see that sucker fly."

"Thar she goes, now wave by bye..."

They say it was written by one of the insulation technicians at Cape Canaveral, probably the same one who had charge of pasting on those roof tiles.

The next morning it was a real Spike Jones concoction of sirens and whistles, a bugle blowing reveille and a weird voice cooing, "Wake up, John; wake up Creepy... you both need a shower."

All this just proves my contention and gripe of a lifetime: there is no such thing as a humane wake-up call. The Army was right all along in getting it over fast with a cannon blast and the blare of a bugle.

The late Bill Vaughan, the master humorist for the Kansas City Star, wrote that he never could abide radio alarms or soft wake-up chimes because he couldn't take hypocrisy at that time in the morning.

Quite right. Former Navy man John Young had the only valid response to CapCom's (capsule communicator's) second day wake-up call when he intoned on cue, "Now hear this, all hands hit the deck."

As W.C. Fields noted, before noon even the fizz of an Alka-Seltzer can be jarring.

All this hit me like a cattle prod at 5 a.m. today because some practical joker had set the alarm on the clock radio in my room and turned the volume up full blast. That happens often these days in motels that I frequent.

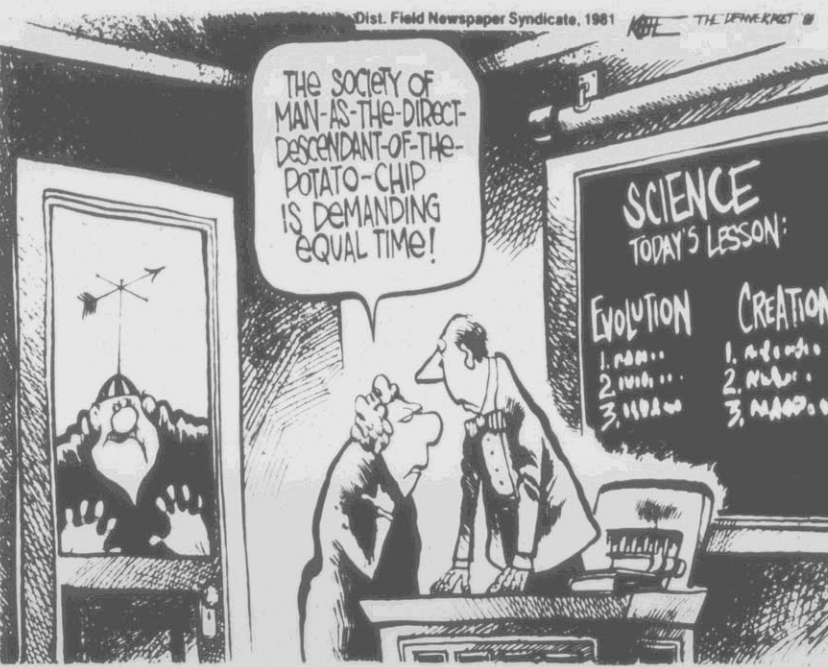

It even happened in Tokyo last summer, except Japanese technology has built a snooze alarm into the room radio that allows you to sleep another half-hour before the same thing happens again.

Then, of course, there are the jokers who prow the hotel corridors after midnight switching the breakfast orders hanging on the doorknobs, so somewhere around dawn a room service waiter rolls up to your door with champagne and eggs Benedict for two and a copy of the Wall Street Journal.

American know-how can put a man on the moon, bring a space buggy back to a dry lake bed in California and come up with an illegal golf ball that slices even further into the woods, but it has yet to devise a soothing, non-traumatic, willingly accepted wake-up call. A tape recording of my mother's voice would not solve the problem, since my fondness for her does not include recollections of the way she used to wake me up for serving 6 o'clock Mass at our local parish church. Being shot with your own water pistol can leave scars.

Only in Ireland have I encountered some sensitivity on the subject of how to rouse someone delicately from slumber. I recall picking up the phone one morning in a Dublin hotel and hearing a cheerful confident brogue: "Sir, was your wakeup call for 8 or 9, because it's half 10 now? Will that be all right?"

Doubt Workmanship, Workers

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
American workmanship and the American worker are under attack.

Imports are taking a bigger chunk of the U.S. consumer's dollar. Justifiably or not, foreign-made products have the reputation of being better.

When the Ford Motor Co. announced a year ago that it was closing its largest assembly plant, the one at Mahwah, N.J., it said the reason was the poor quality of the cars coming off the line. Harold A. Poling, executive vice president for North American automotive operations, said the failures were caused by a "combination of management and employee shortcomings."

Management and union officials in the automobile and other industries admit there are instances of sloppiness and even outright sabotage. But they insist that these are rare. They say the problem with quality is a problem with management and they are trying new techniques, some borrowed from the Japanese, to improve workmanship.

"Workers make mistakes because management didn't do a very good job of planning," said Jay W. Leek, president of the Society for Quality Control, an organization of professionals in the field of quality.

Leek said blue-collar workers "share" the responsibility, but he added: "There's just been too much blamed on them... Nobody goes to work to make a mistake."

Leek said concern with quality must start at the top. "Attitudes are caught, not taught," he said. "It's become part of our culture to settle for something less than perfection."

American managers frequently look, with envy, at the Japanese. They see a picture of employees who are totally committed to their jobs and their companies. Their lives are centered on their work.

John Nevin, chairman of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., said people mistakenly assume the commitment of Japanese workers is due to the Japanese ethnic background. "Nonsense," he said.

The "Made in Japan" label was not automatically associated with high quality in the days before World War II. Nevin said, and the Japanese ethnic background has not changed since then. "What changed was the managerial quality," he said.

The Public Agenda Foundation, a non-profit organization founded by pollster Daniel Yankelovich and former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, is trying to find out what makes people work and, more importantly, what makes them work harder and better.

The first part of the study, just completed, involved in-depth interviews with blue and white-collar workers, 18 to 70, in Seattle.

"We found that people cared enormously about their jobs," said Carol Greenwald, one of the researchers in charge of the study. "But they want more personal rewards, more sense of involvement. They want to be appreciated. They feel that their caring about their jobs is not rewarded."

Ms. Greenwald said attitudes toward work have changed. Money alone is not enough. There is more to life than a job.

Surveys conducted by Yankelovich during the 1970s support these conclusions. Between 1970 and 1976, for example, the proportion of people who agreed with the statement "Hard work always pays off," dropped from 58 percent to 43 percent. The number agreeing that "work is at the center of my life," dropped from about 35 percent to about 15 percent.

Part of the change in attitudes, Ms. Greenwald said, is due to "the whole economic safety net" of public and private benefits. "If you are out of work, you don't suddenly starve."

The change also reflects "the values that came up in the '60s and '70s — self-fulfillment," Ms. Greenwald said.

And it reflects the increase in the number of women working outside the home. In the days following World War II, men were the primary wage earners. The man "got his dignity from being the breadwinner," Ms. Greenwald said. "The workplace was just a thing." Today's workers — men and women — do not get their sense of worth from the mere fact that they are earning money. They want more. And, in many families, they know that with two incomes there is less necessity to work overtime, to make the extra effort.

Ms. Greenwald said the foundation's interviews have shown that people want "a sense of fairness, a sense of respect, clear lines of communication between management and workers... a sense of autonomy and responsibility in controlling their own work... "Treat me like a grown-up," they say." Ms. Greenwald said poor workmanship, particularly the deliberate mistake, comes "from employees who are turned off and angry."

Ray Calore, president of United Auto Workers Local 664, which represents the more than 4,000 hourly employees at the General Motors assembly plant in Tarrytown, N.Y., agreed. "If you like what you're doing, then you perform better," said Calore. "There are frustrations built into any job." You can't take out those frustrations by hitting your supervisor, he said, so you strike back at the product. "Retaliation is human nature," added Calore.

Calore said most of those problems have been eliminated at the Tarrytown plant, thanks to the "Quality of Work Life" program started there by General Motors in the early 1970s. The program has since been expanded to other General Motors plants and similar efforts are under way in a variety of industries.

The program is designed to give workers the sense of fairness and responsibility which Ms. Greenwald said today's employees want. When new procedures are introduced, workers are asked their opinions. They are not told how long it will take to perform a particular job; they are asked.

"The operator is the pro," said Tom Pilkington, personnel director at the plant. "Ninety-nine-point-eight percent of the people want to do the job and do it right."

Workers at the Tarrytown plant spend three days in training sessions related to the "Quality of Work Life" program. "They're subjected to the union and management organizations, to the process of decisions, to exercises on how to get involved," Pilkington said.

Pilkington and Calore said the program is working. The number of outstanding worker grievances had dropped from several thousand to about 50. Casual absenteeism is down.

Calore, who has been president of the local since 1955, said both management and union ideas have changed. "In the old days, we maintained an antagonistic attitude toward management," he said, adding that antagonism was the only way to get a point across. Today, he said, "if there's a problem, we resolve it." An employee knows that "if he does good work, he gets recognition."

There is some resemblance between the General Motors program and Japanese stress on quality. Japanese workers often are organized into "quality circles," teams of men and women who are given direct responsibility for what they produce.

But Calore said there is a difference. "Japanese industry is into quality control. They're not into quality of work life."

He admitted that Japanese workers have a total sense of commitment that is lacking in many American workers. "But that doesn't say they can build a better automobile," Calore said. "The American worker is better. He's allowed to think for himself."

were subject to a surprise attack by the Russians, since they were only capable of firing ground-to-ground missiles. So the Air Force was assigned the job of digging silos for ground-to-air missiles with the role of knocking down the Soviet missiles before they could wipe out a large part of Utah.

Pentagon intelligence got word that the Russians had the area pinpointed and told their bosses that, in a first-strike raid, they found the missiles could knock out the ground-to-air missiles, endangering the armored division, the fighter strip, the anti-aircraft gun and the machine gun emplacement.

A meeting of the Joint Chiefs of Staff was called, and it was recommended that a SAC bomber base be placed in the area as a warning to the Russians that we intended to protect our 50-caliber machine gun at any cost.

But there were those in the Pentagon who felt this would not be a strong enough deterrent. They recommended we build a MX missile system in Utah, making it possible to move our missiles around underground, so the Soviets would not know where they were. The cost was estimated at $30 billion, but because of inflation and delays, the true price placed on it was $60 billion.

To really do it right, they would need 25-percent of Utah and Nevada for the construction site.

The president was all for it and said he wanted the project to proceed right away.

It was only after work started on the MX missile system, that a Pentagon task force came up with a report that the system had a weakness. Rather than pinpoint the target, the Soviets would now have to devastate two states for insurance.

The only answer was for the U.S. military to bring back the anti-ballistic-missile system, and place it in the surrounding states as a means of stopping the Russian missiles from doing their jobs.

The probability of Congress buying this now is much greater than it was during detente, and the Pentagon feels if it doesn't get the ABM during this administration it never will.

As for the machine gun which started the entire ball rolling, it's been sold to El Salvador where it is now guarding the presidential palace.

Waste Disposal Is Built To Multi-Million Firm

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Thomas Viola thought he'd washed his hands of the garbage business when he sold his New Jersey waste disposal firm to SCA Services in 1972. He was planning to run a family sand and gravel business.

"But the opposite happened," he says. "I got out of the sand and gravel business and stayed in the garbage business with SCA."

And within three years he battled his way to the top of the corporation and guided SCA's transition from a diversified, service-related company to one specializing in solid and hazardous waste.

The Boston-headquartered firm says it now operates in 32 states and grossed $230 million last year.

Viola, 53, is a blunt speaker, a product of the rough-and-tumble garbage wars in New Jersey. He was a scrappy member of Rutgers University's 150-pound football team, then after graduation in 1949 joined his father in running Industrial Waste Haulage Corp. of Lyndhurst.

The family firm was small, but "We were the first ones to see the future of containerized waste services, using mechanical means rather than labor," Viola explained in a recent telephone interview.

Viola had a run-in with the law in 1959 when he and five others were indicted on charges they met in Viola's Nutley, N.J., office and conspired to rig bids for a garbage contract in Belleville.

One of the men was John V. Serratelli, business agent of Teamsters Local 945, whom state officials charged was using union muscle to control municipal garbage contracts.

Serratelli disappeared one day before he was to enter a plea. The remaining defendants were acquitted in 1962.

Viola refused to talk about that incident or any of SCA's legal problems, including a current Congressional investigation into an FBI informant's allegations that the firm has underworld ties.

In 1972 Viola sold his garbage company to SCA. After his plans for a sand and gravel business fell through, Viola decided to accept SCA's offer to help it specialize in waste disposal.

Three years later, the Securities and Exchange Commission charged SCA president Christopher Recklitis and company founder Berton Steir participated in a scheme to misuse about $4 million in corporate funds. Recklitis later faced criminal charges; Steir did not.

The two men were ousted from SCA and in 1976 Viola became its president and chief executive officer.

"They were tough times...It was very exciting for a different reason five

Latest Atlanta Victim Had Criminal Record

ATLANTA (AP) — Jimmy Ray Payne, the 26th victim in Atlanta's string of slayings of young blacks, had a criminal record and tried to change his identity shortly before he disappeared, perhaps to elude police, a newspaper reported today.

The Atlanta Constitution quoted sources close to the investigation of the killing as saying that Payne apparently tried to get an identity card under another name several days before his disappearance. The newspaper reported today that police believe Payne was trying to elude authorities by assuming a new identity.

Payne, an unemployed 21-year-old, was found in the Chattahoochee River Monday. Medical examiners ruled Tuesday that he probably died of asphyxiation, the same as 14 other young victims since July 1979.

In another development Tuesday, an attorney for Larry Marshall, who police want to question in connection with the killings, said one of the victims — 13-year-old Timothy Hill — showed two threatening letters to Marshall before Hill was killed.

The attorney, Sharman Meade, said Marshall was told the letters came from the killer, who feared Marshall knew something about the string of slayings. Meade said Marshall does not have the letters.

Marshall, jailed here on an armed robbery charge, has refused to talk to a special task force investigating the slayings until he is promised immunity from prosecution on the robbery charge. Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton has refused to meet the demands.

Authorities have repeatedly said Marshall is not a suspect in the slayings.

Pactolus School Notes Week

PACTOLUS — The Tar Heels of Pactolus Elementary have planned many ways to celebrate N.C. Heritage Week, including guest speakers, old movies and library exhibits.

Mrs. Millie Tripp, community resident, will present a program of music and dance to the fourth and fifth graders. Her daughter, Robin Tripp, will show an old-time 8 mm film she made.

On Friday the school chorus will present a music program to the student body. Students and faculty are invited to dress as Tar Heels of the past and present for the assembly.

A special display of North Carolina books will be exhibited in the library along with a North Carolina quilt made by Mrs. Briley's fourth grade class.

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Two Romanian sailors have asked for political asylum after jumping off a freighter sailing through the Bosphorus and swimming to shore, local newspapers report.

Identity Of Baby Sought

DUNCAN, S.C. (AP) — Spartanburg County lawmen today are circulating a footprint from a badly decomposed body of a baby that was found Monday night by a Duncan man mowing his lawn.

The print is being circulated in local hospital maternity wards to try to identify the infant, tentatively identified as a boy, and his mother.

Investigators also are pursuing several leads into the death, and they may arrest a suspect soon, said Capt. Bob Carroll of the sheriff's department.

The body of the Caucasian baby was discovered about 8:15 p.m. Monday night by a 27-year-old John Morgan, who lives in a rural farmhouse on Robinson Road.

Morgan told police he initially thought the infant's body was a doll, but then he realized it was a baby. Shaken, he called police, his wife said.

Animals apparently dragged the baby's body into Morgan's yard, County Coroner Steve Lanford said.

Lawmen have named the body "Baby X."

Pathologists at Spartanburg General Hospital performed an autopsy on "Baby X" Tuesday afternoon, but the procedure shed little light on how the baby died or whether he was born alive.

The examination did reveal that the child apparently was male and probably no more than two weeks old.

Reagan Sees No 'Sick Society'

WASHINGTON (AP) — From adults to children, President Reagan says, the outpouring of friendship and love following the assassination attempt 29 days ago shows America is not a sick society.

Pausing Tuesday night in his televised speech to Congress on the economy, Reagan thanked those who had expressed sympathy, sent messages and flowers and other signs of support as he recuperated from a bullet in the lung.

"The warmth of your words, the expression of friendship and, yes, love, meant more to us than you can ever know," Reagan said. "You have given us a memory we'll treasure forever."

And you've provided the answer to those few voices that were raised saying that ours is a sick society.

"The society we heard from is made up of millions of compassionate Americans and their children, from college age to kindergarten," the president said.

As evidence, he held up a letter from second-grader Peter Sweeney of Long Island, N.Y.

"I hope you get well quick or you'll have to make a speech in your pajamas," the letter said. "P.S. If you have to make a speech in your pajamas, I warned you."

Price Tag On Harassment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Merit Systems Protection Board has put a price tag on sexual harassment of federal employees: $95 million a year in lost productivity, medical bills, sick leave and replacement of workers who quit because of it.

The board said Tuesday that a survey of 20,000 federal workers showed that 30 percent of the women and 9 percent of the men reported severe instances of harassment ranging from rape to pressure for sexual favors.

The board, which estimated that at least 18,000 women quit federal jobs because of harassment in the last two years, recommended strong enforcement of anti-harassment rules, creation of complaint channels and informing employees and unions about remedies.

And Reagan had high praise for Americans in general.

"Sick societies don't produce men like the two who recently returned from outer space," he said. "Sick societies don't produce young men like Secret Service agent Tim McCarthy, who placed his body between mine and the man with the gun simply because he felt that's what his duty called for him to do."

"Sick societies don't produce dedicated police officers like Tom Delahanty or able and devoted public servants like Jim Brady," Reagan said.

"Sick societies don't make people like us so proud to be Americans and so very proud of all of our citizens."

McCarthy, Delahanty and Brady, the White House press secretary, were wounded in the same shooting in which Reagan was hit by pistol fire outside a Washington hotel on March 30.

EXPULSION RECOMMENDED — The House ethics committee Tuesday recommended that the House expel Rep. Raymond Lederer, the last congressman convicted in Abscam and still holding office. The vote was 10-to-2 to expel. (AP Laserphoto)

Bill Seeks To End Power Play In Insurance Field

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state House will consider a bill to remove rate-regulating power from the state insurance commissioner and give it to a new three-member board.

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, a former House Insurance Committee chairman, filed the bill Tuesday. He said the proposal is designed to revamp North Carolina's system of regulating insurance rates.

"For the past six or eight years we've been coming down here and have a biennial power play between the commissioner and the industry, with members of the Legislature reduced to the role of performing monkeys — trying to reconcile the irreconcilable," Huskins said in an interview.

"A group of us decided it's time to try a new approach," he said.

The bill would set up a

North Carolina Risk and Rate Equity Board but it would keep the position of state insurance commissioner as provided for in the state Constitution.

The measure would assign the commissioner the duty of serving as public advocate before the rate-setting board, rather than allowing him to consider rate requests.

The board would have 90 days to rule on rate petitions and insurance companies could appeal denials of their requests to the courts, as they now appeal denials by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

Ingram said in an interview Tuesday that he had not read the bill and declined to comment on the idea of establishing a rate-regulating commission.

"I'm not familiar with the bill," he said. "I'll comment on it when I see what's in the bill."

Under Huskins' bill, the governor would appoint one board member to a six-year term. The lieutenant governor would appoint a member to an initial four-year term, and the speaker of the House would appoint a member to an initial term of two years. After the first round of appointments, all appointees would serve six-year terms, with a vacancy occurring every two years.

In other legislative action:

Board

The House and Senate unanimously approved Gov. Jim Hunt's nominees to the state Board of Education. They are P.R. Robinson, president of St. Augustine's College in Raleigh; Barbara M. Tapscott, of the Burlington City Schools; and James B. Chavis, a vice chancellor at Pembroke State University in Lumberton.

Obscenity

The Senate Judiciary I Committee heard testimony on a bill that would eliminate adversary hearings in obscenity cases. During the hearings, both sides present evidence before a judge, who determines if the books or films involved are obscene.

Under current laws, a person may only be prosecuted if he continues to sell books or materials found to be obscene in an adversary hearing.

By removing the requirement for the hearings, owners of adult bookstores or moviehouses would be prosecuted immediately, without a hearing to determine whether the material actually fit the definition of obscenity.

The panel is scheduled to consider hearing testimony in a special two-hour session Thursday.

Tax Credit

A group of legislators, led by House Finance Chairman Rep. Dwight Quinn, filed a bill that would provide an individual income tax credit for child care and other employment-related expenses.

The credit for child care would amount to $2,000 per individual, up to $4,000 per household. The maximum credit for other employment-related expenses would be $4,000.

New Bills

Bills were filed in the House to make it a felony to break the speed limit while being chased by the police, reduce the retirement allowance of judges appointed to federal judgeships, provide an individual income tax credit not to exceed $25 for political contributions and to require political parties nominate someone to fill a General Assembly vacancy within 60 days after the vacancy occurs.

Cigarette Tax Boost Offered As Alternative

By MARY ANNE RHYNE Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's proposal for a higher tax on alcoholic beverages is getting a cool reception from legislators, some of whom are suggesting an increase in the cigarette tax as an alternative.

The governor, who Tuesday presented to the General Assembly his package for raising money to build and maintain highways, has avoided the cigarette tax — a political hot potato.

"We might be raising the price (on alcohol) to the point we're making bootlegging interesting," said Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, co-chairman of the Legislature's Select Committee on the Department of Transportation.

The proposed 50 percent increase in alcoholic beverage taxes would push North Carolina taxes above those of its neighbors. Rauch said he's worried that residents of the 41 counties bordering other states might cross state lines to buy cheaper alcoholic beverages.

"The people I represent are incensed he would not consider a cigarette tax," Rauch said.

"Several legislators from the Piedmont said they would seek an increase in the cigarette tax, which currently is 2 cents per pack, the lowest in nation."

"A 3-cent gas tax and a 3-cent tobacco tax — that's the only way I'm going to vote for it," Sen. Jim McDuffie, D-Mecklenburg, said.

Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, said the ideal solution would be a 5-cent per pack tax on cigarettes.

"Others acknowledged the idea of taxing tobacco is an unpopular one."

"Some people are relieved this is a program they can support," said Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, chairman of the Finance Committee, which would consider any tax increases. He referred to the proposed combination of a gasoline tax increase and a $22.50 rebate.

"But a lot feel like we should have an additional tax on cigarettes. There is no way that would pass this General Assembly. I think the governor was aware of that," Quinn said.

Despite their feelings about cigarette taxes, many legislators said they believe a 50 percent increase in taxes on alcoholic beverages is too high.

Another point of concern was administration of the proposed rebate on gasoline taxes. Some legislators expressed concern that people on fixed incomes — the old and the poor — do not file income taxes and would not receive the rebate.

Rep. Howard Chapin, D-Beaufort, said he was shocked by Hunt's proposed mining severance tax. Chapin's district includes the large TexasGulf phosphate mine at Aurora.

"It just came as a big surprise," he said. "I am opposed to it.... Look what it's going to do to the building industry — that's a tax on sand and rock, which is mined."

Meanwhile, a group of Republicans are scheduled to appear on public television tonight to present their own plan for highway financing.

"I see no need to increase taxes on anything," Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, said. "If I knew the money was truly needed I wouldn't mind. I can't see raising taxes to give to a bureaucracy that's been so wasteful."

Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, said Hunt's package "is a great way to solve the problem for two years." But he said there would have to be another package for raising money in 1983.

Ballenger said the Republicans will propose cutting government spending by 6 percent across-the-board.

WRAL-TV in Raleigh reported Tuesday that the station's random telephone survey of 300 people in 21 North Carolina counties shows that most people disagree with the 3-cent gas tax increase proposal.

The station said 55 percent of those surveyed disagree with the gas tax increase, but 74 percent favor the proposed tax on alcoholic beverages.

The study showed a general agreement with the package as a whole, with 45 percent indicating agreement, 30 percent disagreeing and 25 percent saying they don't know.

Sixty-five percent of those surveyed agreed with the proposed truck fee increases, and 46 percent agreed with increases in drivers license fees.

The survey indicated that only 34 percent of those questioned had seen Hunt's televised speech Monday on the proposed measures, but the proposals were explained in detail to those that did not see it before the questions were asked.

A Bachelor Book Finds Big Demand

By SALLY CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Ever since their names appeared in "The Greatest Little Bachelor Book in Texas," they've been besieged by phone calls and letters and visits from would-be dates.

Some of those 200 eligible young men have married, are thinking of new careers and/or have discovered long-lost relatives because their names appeared in the little black book.

A park ranger from Whitney even says he's gotten so many letters and calls — 261, to be exact — that he assigns each woman a number and keeps track of them in a ledger.

"They have enjoyed an experience unlike anything that they have ever had in their life," said Sue Goldstein, the 39-year-old entrepreneur who created the book. "The kinds of responses from women have been extraordinary."

Her company, SusAnn Publications, gets about 100 letters every day, some of them "status reports" from the bachelors, many of them pleas from women looking for men.

Ms. Goldstein, who began her publishing career by printing "The Underground Shopper" in 12 cities across the nation, said she thought of the book after being rejected by a computer dating service "because I was over 30 and highly educated and probably made more money than most men."

Each bachelor who volunteered to appear in the book or who was recommended in questionnaires sent to a variety of women and organizations described his work, hobbies, his opinion of the Equal Rights Amendment, his fantasy on an island and the qualities he looked for in women.

Eighteen of the bachelors have married, most to women they met as a result of the book, which was published last summer. Ms. Goldstein said.

Richard Aptekar, a Houston bachelor who owns an advertising and public relations firm, said in an interview that he has received about 250 letters from 14 states as a result of the book.

One of the letters was from June Smith, editor of the Living Section of the Beaumont (Texas) Enterprise-Journal. A co-worker had spotted his biography in the book, and she wrote to say her maiden name was Aptekar and she, too, had been born in Detroit.

They met over brunch, compared family albums and discovered they indeed were cousins, he said. The branches of their families, out of touch for 46 years, plan a reunion in Beaumont next month.

"So this was all a result of the book kind of resurrecting ties that had been lost," Aptekar said.

Francis O. Moore Jr., who owns the Phidippides Running Store in Dallas, said he is considering a career in television after appearing on several talk shows to promote the book.

"I never qualified as a playboy and probably never want to, but an awful lot of women have come into the store and written and sent pictures," Moore said in an interview. "Never in my life have I dreamed of knowing so many attractive women."

"You might think a lot of dogs, or desperate or unattractive women or what not would respond, but that has not been the case," he added.

One woman who has not been offering the bachelors dates is Ms. Goldstein herself. Even though she's divorced, she says she doesn't dip into the book for prospects.

A NEW ACQUISITION
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A bust of Grand Duke Cosimo I de' Medici by the Florentine portrait sculptor Giovanni Bandini (1540-1599) has been acquired by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

The over life-size bust is the first 16th-century sculptured portrait in the museum's collection.

It was acquired with funds donated by Anna Bing Arnold, a museum trustee.

Rebuilding Devastated Quake Town

By CARMEN BADER
Associated Press Writer
AL ASNAM, Algeria (AP)

Much of the city remains deserted. Rubble and damaged buildings are still much in evidence. Signs of hope are everywhere, however, as thousands work to put Al Asnam back on the map after the devastating earthquake here last Oct. 10.

It was late afternoon when this lively western Algerian city of 125,000 began to shake from the earthquake that was measured at 7.5 on the Richter Scale — in between a "major" earthquake and a "great" one like the San Francisco disaster in 1906. Minutes later, 75 percent of the buildings here were destroyed or damaged.

Official death and injury figures never have been released, but more than 3,000 bodies were pulled from the rubble at Al Asnam. Unofficial reports put the death toll as high as 10,000.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands more, died in isolated mountain villages. The authorities estimate 437,000 people suffered loss throughout the province and they are near completion of a list of the victims on which to base compensation and housing plans.

Today, bulldozers rumble from dawn to dark in El Asnam and more than 5,000 workers are clearing the rubble and putting up 20,000 prefabricated homes for the 44,000 people still living in tents.

Sixteen Algerian companies and more than 30 foreign enterprises are involved, along with 12,000 Algerian soldiers.

The inhabitants of the tent cities have lived through an unusually harsh winter under canvas, and they now face the scorching North African summer.

Others are still living in a shantytown because of the lack of tents.

Current plans call for the main prefabricated housing project to be completed by 1982.

"The work of readying the ground is going much faster than some of the foreign companies expected," said a construction chief. "As a result, 20 sites are already ready and waiting for houses."

The first stage of reconstruction planning is to clear 3,750 acres for building.

A construction official said 1,350 houses already have been put up and by 1982, "each family will have a roof over its head."

The main house-building effort gets underway in May.

Another rush project is to finish schools in time for the opening of the next scholastic year, but no less important is completion of three hospitals and about 15 clinics and health centers as well as mosques, Moslem houses of worship.

Life, nonetheless, has resumed in Al Asnam. A multitude of freshly painted shacks have opened and merchants are again selling food, clothing, books and newspapers, giving haircuts and carrying on business.

In spite of the disaster, prices have remained stable.

"Al Asnam is undoubtedly the most (government) controlled city in Algeria," said one official, adding that businessmen have been given provisional, renewable licenses to operate.

New state-run stores are also doing a booming business, and seem better supplied than in other Algerian cities, with no lines or crowds.

With the solution to the immediate problems in sight, the government already is talking about the future.

Plans to construct an earthquake-proof Al Asnam by 1985 are already in the works.

Baha'is Report Members Slain

WILMETTE, Ill. (UPI) — Officials of the U.S. branch of the Baha'i religion have reported that Iran has executed two more members of the group.

The two slain Baha'is were charged with spying for the United States and Israel, charges U.S. Baha'i officials said were false.

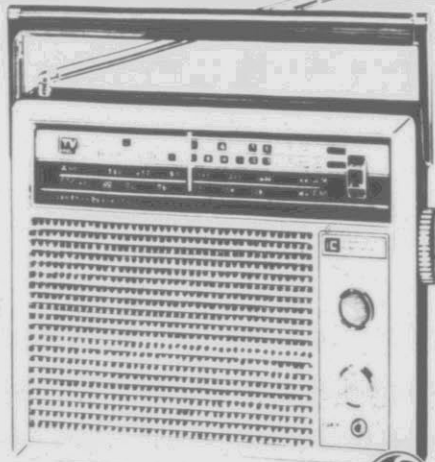

The Baha'i faith, which has its origins in Iran, has been severely persecuted since the Islamic revolution which ousted the late Shah of Iran.

On Record, In Congress

How Tar Heels Cast Votes

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Senators and House members were recorded on recent floor votes.

SENATE
EXPORT TRADING COMPANIES — The Senate prevented, 68 for and 25 against, the spending of $2 million over three years in Commerce Department grants to help small companies hire specialists to spur their overseas sales. A company would have used the federal grant to pay one-half (up to $40,000) the first-year cost of hiring an export manager.

The vote occurred during debate on a bill (S 734) enabling small firms to establish "export trading companies" for tapping world markets they now ignore for lack of capital and expertise. The bill, later sent to the House on an uncontested vote, eases anti-trust laws and allows banks to become partners in export trading companies.

Sponsor William Armstrong, R-Colo., said the hiring of export managers by companies "is a proper business function, not a proper function of government."

Opponent Donald Riegle, D-Mich., called the $2 million "an absolutely modest amount" having high leverage "in terms of opening up export markets, reducing our balance-of-payments deficit, and creating jobs in the U.S."

Senators voting "nay" wanted to spend federal grants to help small companies hire export managers.

Sens. John East, R., and Jesse Helms, R., voted "yea." SUBSIDIZING EXPORT COMPANIES — By a vote of 55 for and 38 against, the Senate tabled an attempt to authorize $25 million over five years to help newly-formed export trading companies sell their products in foreign markets. The vote came during debate on S 734 (see preceding vote).

Tabling of the $25 million outlay (a compromise figure down from the originally proposed $50 million) means that the export trading companies will be on their own financially and not subsidized by federal agencies such as the Economic Development Administration and Small Business Administration.

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., a supporter of eliminating the $25 million authorization, said the money was "welfare for exporters" and that "as one who has voted ... to curb the growth of welfare in this country, I personally am not about to vote to pay for this kind of program."

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., disagreed, saying that while he acknowledges "that budget priorities are changing" the $25 million expenditure should be approved "in the spirit of compromise."

Senators voting "nay" favored spending the $25 million to help newly-formed export trading companies get into operation.

East and Helms voted "yea."

NATURAL GAS — The Senate tabled, 66 for and 27 against, an amendment stating Senate support of phased-in rather than immediate lifting of federal controls on natural gas prices. The Administration signals it may ask Congress to enact legislation immediately decontrolling natural gas prices.

The amendment was superfluous because it asked senators to reaffirm what already is law — gradual removal of gas controls through 1985. And it was not germane to the export legislation under debate (S 734, see preceding votes). Still, supporters saw it as a way of dampening Administration enthusiasm for immediate decontrol.

A sponsor of tabling the amendment, John Heinz, R-Pa., said it had no place in the ongoing debate and that "as a practical matter (it) does nothing that is not already the law of the land."

Opponent J.J. Exon, R-Neb., said the American Gas Association has "concluded that immediate decontrol would double residential heating bills from an average of $494 per home in 1981 to $897 in 1982."

Senators voting "nay" wanted to re-state opposition to immediate decontrol even while conceding their votes were legislatively toothless.

East and Helms voted "yea."

EASTER RECESS — The House voted, 241 for and 73 against, to take an 18-day Easter recess ending Apr. 27. There was no debate on the resolution (S Con Res 17).

Members voting "nay" went on record against the recess, but few if any opponents stayed in Washington during the time off.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Charles Rose, D-7, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "yea."

Reps. Stephen Neal, D-5, Eugene Johnston, R-6, W.C. Hefner, D-8, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "nay."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Ike Andrews, D-4, and James Martin, R-9, did not vote.

American In Somalia Is Well-Digger

By BOB DIETZ
Associated Press Writer
JALLALQSI, Somalia (AP) — In cowboy boots with spakeskin toes and a yellow baseball cap, Elmer Ring of Grand Junction, Colo., spends his days here getting the rigs rumbling on a well-drilling program to bring water to more than a million desert refugees by early next year.

"This is good work, if you can learn to stay calm when the problems come up," said the 60-year-old Ring, sweating in 95-degree heat, adjusting machinery, changing drill bits and shouting at a worker who had lost his tools.

Ring has been drilling for 34 years — for water, oil, minerals, "you name it." He drilled a hole on Eniwetok Island to hold sensing devices during a post-World War II nuclear test. He's worked in Libya, Vietnam, Afghanistan, Gabon, India and Pakistan.

The project here in Somalia is one of Ring's biggest. Some 150 new wells are to be drilled at a cost of $6 million to supply water to all 33 of Somalia's refugee camps within 11 months.

The first five wells were started March 29 at Jallalqsi, 65 miles north of Mogadishu, the Somali capital, in a plan paid for by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to help victims who have fled drought and war in the Ogaden desert of eastern Ethiopia. Ethiopians and Somalis who claim the Ogaden have been skirmishing in the desert for several years.

Ring is training 85 Somalis, most of them inexperienced, in the art of well-drilling. They are learning to operate five British-made drilling rigs worth $150,000 each, 14 heavy trucks and 19 smaller vehicles.

"We figure that every 10 days each rig should do a well, because we're training the crews now. But after a while, we should get it down to a week for a complete well — that's capped and with a pump installed," Ring said.

"The problem is that it seems like every Somali who knew something about well-drilling has gone to Saudi Arabia, where the money is a lot better."

Ring, working for the United Nations Children's Fund as project boss, started ordering and importing the equipment in October.

At Jallalqsi, workers start at 7 a.m. and stop at 2 p.m. to escape the sun. Several hundred of the 40,000 refugees here at Refugee Camp No. 2 watch the rigs, pausing on their way to draw water from the Shebelle River nearby.

Heavy rain recently broke a prolonged drought and water is plentiful in the area for the first time in two years. The river has flooded.

Ring made a final tour of the drilling sites and prepared to drive 25 minutes back to a camp house where he stays. He visits Mrs. Ring in Mogadishu when he can.

"I've been working for UNICEF for the last 10 years," he said. "I was working in Afghanistan for eight years on their rural water-supply system."

"I left when the Russians came in. The people wanted me to stay on but the (U.S.) Embassy warned me to leave. I finally decided to go because if I stayed, it would seem like I was working for the Russians."

He had been in Somalia in 1969, working for a private company that installed the Mogadishu water system.

Propose Church Energy Audits

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) Division of Homeland Ministries has recommended energy audits for all church buildings of the denomination as the first of many "creative responses" the church should undertake as part of "responsible ecological stewardship."

The Division's recommendation, which must be voted at the denomination's General Assembly, said that inexpensive energy for heating and travel "will not be available in this generation" and therefore churches must begin to implement energy conserving measures.

Oddball Bills Go Before Legislatures

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

State lawmakers are scanning the lakes, forests and flatlands of America, trying to slap their state seal on everything from fish and fossils to games and booze.

Legislatures are considering making catfish the state fish of Kansas and Iowa. Paul Revere's favorite rum the state rum of Massachusetts, the armadillo the state mammal of Texas, milk the state beverage of New York, and bocce, an Italian bowling game, the state game of New Jersey.

The bulldog should be the state dog of Georgia, one lawmaker says. Another in Colorado is proposing that Blue Grama be the state grass. A Massachusetts bill would make "Massachusetts," a tune by Arlo Guthrie, the state song.

A bill in New Jersey would make the knobbed whelk the state shell. And two South Carolina senators have introduced a resolution to make the square dance the state dance.

Of course, legislation concerning taxation and spending occupies most state lawmakers' time, but offbeat legislation adds a bit of comic relief.

Colorado's Senate has approved a bill designating the stegosaurus, a dinosaur, as the state fossil. Fossils have appeared on other statehouse floors as well. Mississippi lawmakers are considering a bill to make a prehistoric whale the state fossil. The whale roamed the warm seas that covered Mississippi about 60 billion years ago, and the bones of such a beast were found in Yazoo County.

In New Mexico, a 50-pound dinosaur named coelophysis edged out a 77-year-old lawmaker to become the state's first official fossil. During a light-hearted debate, the oldest member of the Legislature, Rep. William O'Donnell, said he was "honored and overwhelmed" by his nomination. The dinosaur won anyway.

While not necessarily frivolous, some other bills pending in state legislatures are definitely unusual.

Fourteen representatives in South Carolina are co-sponsoring a bill to make it illegal to interfere with a bloodhound "in hot pursuit" of a criminal.

South Dakota lawmakers killed a bill that would have outlawed pay toilets in all public buildings after learning it would pertain to only one toilet in an airport terminal in Sioux Falls.

California Assemblyman Dick Floyd has introduced a bill to require people convicted of drunken driving to perform 20 hours of community service while wearing bright orange T-shirts that say: "Drunk Driver Community Service."

Not only would the offenders be embarrassed, but they'd also have to pay for the T-shirts.

In New York state, some legislators with long memories want the state to spend $200,000 to study bringing big league baseball back to Brooklyn. The Dodgers fled to Los Angeles almost 25 years ago. Pundits are calling it the "Bring Back Dem Bums" bill.

Nevada is considering legislation to make it a crime to wheel grocery carts home. Another bill would help ranchers avoid lawsuits from encroaching suburbanites who don't like the odor of cow manure.

Stiffer penalties for criminals are in the works in many states. In Oklahoma, two novel ideas for dealing with criminals were suggested. One would allow rapists to shorten their prison terms by volunteering to be castrated. Another would allow convicted murderers the option of being executed by lethal drug injection, now the prescribed way in Oklahoma, or dying the same way their victims died.

The traditional "till death do us part" nuptial promise would be revised by a bill being considered in Alaska. Under the proposal, the man and woman sign a piece of paper, detailing how long the marriage will last. If either partner decides not to renew the marriage, it is dissolved automatically.

Lawmakers in Michigan are considering a bill that would require all official documents referring to state residents to call them "Michiganians." That, of course, has raised the ire of people who prefer "Michigander." Michiganian supporters say Michigander is sexist.

A legislative committee in Minnesota has approved a bill prohibiting coed wrestling teams. Under pressure to allow sports opportunities for girls, one school had a team of both girl and boy wrestlers, but other schools refused to wrestle them.

A bill that would make it a misdemeanor to harm a police dog or horse never made it out of an Indiana legislative committee. And a measure requiring car lights to be on whenever windshield wipers are on died on the House calendar.

The Hawaii Senate already has passed a bill requiring all pets to be owned by an adult. Supporters say it is aimed at curbing cases of neglect by making an adult legally responsible for the pet. But state Sen. Dennis O'Connor said it flew in the face of "the American tradition of boy owning dog."

Atlantic City Adopts 'Respect And Obey' Rule For Employees

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — City Commissioner Edmund Colanizi wasn't getting enough respect from municipal workers, so now an official resolution says workers must "respect and obey" their elected superiors.

Colanizi, commissioner of parks and public property, drew up a resolution last week that requires all city workers to respect, follow and obey all direct orders and instructions by the city commissioners.

The commission unanimously adopted the resolution last week, although at least one commissioner claimed he hadn't read it closely.

City Hall workers are "all hysterical about it," one City Hall employee told The Press of Atlantic City. "They all think it's a big joke."

The newspaper reported the resolution was born late April 18, when Colanizi tried to renege his city-owned 1980

Chrysler New Yorker at the city Public Works Yard, where most employees with access to city gasoline fill up.

The city pumps were closed, so Colanizi drove to the Police Garage, where the city's police cars are refueled, according to the newspaper.

But the attendant there refused to fill Colanizi's tank because that pump is only for police and other emergency vehicles, the newspaper said.

Colanizi drew up his resolution two days later, the newspaper said.

"It is implicit," the resolution says, "that all municipal employees should respect and obey those chosen by the Atlantic City citizens to guide their municipal government."

Colanizi refused comment on the resolution. Commissioner Michael Matthews called it unnecessary and Commissioner Joseph Pasquale called it "stupid."

"You can't legislate respect. You have to earn it," said Pasquale, who admitted he didn't read the resolution closely before he voted to adopt it.

Said Signal Of Limited Future

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — Getting passed over for promotion is a warning signal that you should begin to consider the status of your current job and whether the time has come to look elsewhere, says Charles A. Durakis, manager of the Westport office of Richards Consultants Ltd., an executive recruiting firm.

Other signs that your future may be limited, according to Durakis, include: Having to wait longer than a reasonable period to get a raise; not being given additional responsibility; having most of your suggestions rejected, and not being given the opportunity to display your creativity.

GIRLS FOR SALE
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A girl can be purchased for half the price of a water buffalo in a flesh market in central India that supplies brothels, the Indian Express reports.

REBELS PULL BACK
QUETTA, Pakistan (AP) — An Afghan rebel who crossed the border into Pakistan says about 1,500 Moslem rebels have pulled back from Kandahar, Afghanistan's second-largest city in the face of a strong show of force by Soviet and government troops.

Jobs Abound, Housing Scarce In New Boom Town

By TIM BOVEE
Associated Press Writer
ELK CITY, Okla. (AP) — In this second-time boom town perched on the rim of the high plains, there's a place for anyone who wants to work — but not everyone who comes to work can find a place to live.

The natural gas boom in Elk City is largely hidden from motorists passing through on Interstate 40, the old Route 66. The forest of derricks that marked earlier boomtimes is gone due to an Oklahoma law limiting drillers to one deep gas well per 640 acres.

But the figures still add up to "boom town."

February's sales tax collections were 24 percent higher than February 1980, and the town's three banks and three savings and loans have estimated assets of more than $200 million — about $20,000 for each man, woman and child in this town of 10,000.

The 1980 census shows a 29.7 percent growth rate in the 1970s. Townspeople think it was more. Nearly a quarter of the 182 telephone directory Yellow Pages is listings for companies in the oil and gas business.

Elk City first struck it rich on oil in the 1940s and '50s. Five years ago another wave of prosperity rolled over the town, located 110 miles from Oklahoma City, when oilmen began drilling for gas locked deep in the Greater Anadarko Basin.

Experts estimate the entire basin holds about 88 trillion cubic feet of recoverable gas in deep zones below 15,000 feet. Shallow zones may contain an additional 30 trillion cubic feet or more. The boom has brought money and people to Elk City, but it has also brought trouble, as growth threatens to outstrip the town's capacity to provide essential services like housing.

Drilling foreman Jerry Grace, 31, supervises two rigs 15 miles north of town. If a man gets off the bus in Elk City, dead broke and unskilled, Grace says he'll put him to work that afternoon, at $10 an hour. With an annual 50 percent turnover in roughnecks, Grace's operation is hungry for men.

But some who come to work must turn around and leave for want of shelter.

Garry Dickson, 29, and his wife, Shirley, 27, drove into Elk City one recent rainy day from Grenada, Miss., their worldly goods piled in the back of a pickup truck.

Dickson, a welder helper who has been out of work for four months, had been offered a job building a nearby pipeline.

The Dicksons had been on the road three days, searching the highways of western Oklahoma for a place to stay.

"We found some little motels, one room, no phones, no ice buckets — just a bed, a bathroom and a TV. And they wanted $20 a night. That's the cheapest we could find," the travel-weary Dickson said.

"If I don't get something here I'm going home. We've got three more days and we'll be broke. The only thing I can do is go home."

Houses are for sale in Elk City and low-rent apartments are available for those below the income ceiling. But for people like Dickson — too poor to buy and too rich for subsidized housing — settling in Elk City can be a nightmare.

Growth "has put pressure on us to work harder at planning," said Mayor Larry Wade, who doubles as publisher of the local newspaper.

Wade believes the town is coping with growth. "This area was undercapitalized coming out of the 1930s," he said. But the oil boom of the '40s and '50s the Elk City Field "helped produce some capital over and above that which agriculture produced," Wade said.

And the present gas boom "is giving us a pretty good run," he added.

But Wade denied that Elk City is a boom town, at least in the rough-and-tumble sense of the 1920s.

"The oil and gas industry is so much more sophisticated. ... People have to know what they're doing more than in the shallow drilling days," he said. "You're dealing with people who are professionals."

Elk City's appearance supports Wade's view. It's a neat place, stuck in the middle of wheat fields turning green for spring, watered by creeks marked by lines of small trees.

Save for the traffic, the new construction and the oil-services companies lining the local highways, little distinguishes Elk City from the other farming communities in western Oklahoma.

But the locals know what makes it different.

"I sold my first royalty when I was 18," said Martha Ann Kelly, now 51 and a millionaire and senior vice president at the Bank of Western Oklahoma. She keeps a small jar of petroleum on her lease-crowded desk and documents the drilling — day by day — on a map in the bank.

"This is the wishing wall," Mrs. Kelly said with a laugh.

Creating An Electronic Editor

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Needless to say, from the point of view of good, crisp, concise writing, a clumsy sentence like this one would hopefully never slip past a good editor's eye.

Neither would it escape the Writer's Workbench, a sharp-eyed new electronic editor being developed here at Bell Laboratories.

The Writer's Workbench is a collection of computer programs that scan and analyze English language prose. It looks for the things that make writing bad and suggests ways to change them.

Like a newspaper copy desk veteran, Writer's Workbench weeds out spelling errors, flags misspellings and snares split infinitives.

It balks at cliches or frequently misused phrases and words such as "needless to say," "from the point of view of" or "hopefully."

On command, the program lowers its green eyeshade and gets down to subtleties. Are the sentences short and varied? Are the verbs active? Is the writer overusing big words?

Writer's Workbench isn't intended to replace the human editor, the Bell scientists say.

"What we can do is take some of the burden of copy editing off editors and free them to concentrate on more important things, like the ideas, structure and logical development," said psychologist Patricia Gingrich, 30.

Bell executives are interested in Writer's Workbench as a way to improve their technical documents. But the program is not limited to writing about switches and wiring. Students at Drew University in Madison, N.J., used it last semester to analyze their Shakespeare papers.

Transplanted to a business office, Writer's Workbench might speed secretarial chores or defog the executive memo, its authors believe.

Newspapers and magazines could use it to cut typographical errors and discourage lazy writing.

"We were worried at first that people might object to having their work analyzed by a computer," 30-year-old psycholinguist Nina Macdonald said. "But we find a lot of people like it. Instead of having a boss write all over your paper with red ink, it's just between you and the computer."

The Bell scientists have consolidated and improved earlier programs that checked spelling or computed a standard "readability" score for a text.

Borrowing from writing authorities like William Strunk Jr. and E.B. White, who wrote the classic "Elements of Style," the scientists created a program that examines a piece of writing in detail.

The program "prose," for example, may compliment a writer on having varied sentence structure but chide him for overusing the colorless verb "to be."

The program "proof" looks for spelling, punctuation and diction errors. Another program, "sexist," even flags sexist appellations like "career girl" and "office boy" and suggests changes.

"It's an attempt to put to use the kinds of things writing books tell you to do," computer scientist Lorinda Cherry, who wrote many of the programs, said.

"What we don't want to see the suggestions taken as hard and fast laws," said Lawrence Frase, 45, an educational psychologist. Instead, he explained, the suggestions are supposed to make writers think about what they've written and consider whether it can be improved.

The program doesn't make changes, it only suggests them. That's because the computer can make mistakes. A word considered a blatant error by the spelling program may be only a proper noun that doesn't happen to be in its 50,000-word electronic dictionary.

Two groups of Bell technical writers are now testing Writer's Workbench. Bell may even market the program as an addition to its popular Unix operating system, used by many colleges and companies.

The scientists who designed it think Writer's Workbench may also be able to help researchers pinpoint why people react to language the way they do. They have discovered, for example, that prose which human readers label as "florid" usually has a high adjective-to-noun ratio.

ORBITING SPACEPORT — Boeing Aerospace Company has completed the first phase of a NASA study of an orbiting spaceport. This designer's conception of a Space Operations Center features some of the modules that would be the backbone of the system. Each module could be launched by the Space Shuttle for assembly of the center in space. Two habitat modules in the middle of the artwork would serve as living quarters, each about the size of a large mobile home. A space shuttle orbiter, shown with top open, is in the lower right corner of the artwork. (AP Laserphoto)

King Kong's Perch Celebrating Its 50th Birthday

By HARRY DEDERICHS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — King Kong swung from it. An errant B-25 bomber smashed into the side of it. Sixty million people have savored the view from the top of it, and 17 have jumped from it to their deaths.

The Empire State Building begins celebrating the 50th anniversary of its opening Thursday, no longer the world's tallest building but still the most famous tower in the Manhattan skyline.

Although Kong was only Hollywood illusion, and Fay Wray was never in-peril high above 34th Street and Fifth Avenue, the great ape's exploits symbolized the skyscraper's siren call: Get to the top.

The Michelin guide to New York gives the building three stars, its highest rating, and recommends two visits: during the day for the view, which is 80 miles in clear weather, and at night for the city's spectacular lights.

Derisively called the "Empty State Building" when it opened in the midst of the Depression, it is said the Empire State Building relied on visitors for several years to help pay its taxes. Last year, almost 2 million people — a record for the building — took the trip to the top.

John Raskob, the Empire State Building's millionaire principal developer, posed one question to architect William Lamb:

"Bill, how high can you make it so that it won't fall down?"

Lamb's answer was 1,050 feet, or four feet higher than the spire on the new Chrysler Building eight blocks up-town. But Raskob was said to fear a trick — perhaps a pole popping out of the Chrysler Building's spire — so he added a 200-foot mooring mast for dirigibles, envisioning his building as the debarkation point for airship passengers from Europe.

Only one small dirigible ever moored there. Another managed to drop a bundle of newspapers while almost yanking assembled celebrities to eternity in a test in 1931. The top of the mast, 1,250 feet, is the building's official height, although a television transmitter added another 222 feet in 1950.

In 1970, the World Trade Center became the world's tallest building at 1,350 feet. Soon afterward, the Sears Tower in Chicago reached 1,450 feet.

Lamb's restrained Art Deco essay in Indiana limestone, granite and chrome-nickel steel was admired by Frank Lloyd Wright and Le Corbusier, the great French architect.

But it is sheer height, not taste, which lures the sightseers and helps sell the souvenirs.

Some people have been married at the top, and a few have had their ashes committed to the winds there. In 1938, the Congo's Shogola Olaba dancers chose the observatory as an auspicious site for dispelling the evil spirits thought to be cursing their New York engagement.

Since 1978, a race up 1,575 steps to the 86th floor has been an annual event. The best time for a man is 12 minutes, 19 seconds; for a

May Increase Charity Gifts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Reagan's proposed budget cuts may mean bigger donations to charitable organizations, the chairman of the United Way predicted in reporting record contributions last year.

United Way organizations collected $1.53 billion in 1980, C.C. Garvin Jr. said Monday, a 7.5 percent increase over the $1.42 billion raised in 1979.

Garvin, who also is chief executive of Exxon Corp., said federal cutbacks in health and service programs may prompt corporations to provide more financial aid to community-based organizations.

woman, 14:03.

Even before it opened, the Empire State Building also attracted desperate people. One discharged worker hurled himself down an elevator shaft. Eighteen months after the opening, a man jumped from the dirigible platform at the 103rd floor; 15 other people have jumped from the 86th floor.

One woman got over the fence in December 1979, but a gust of wind blew her back to the building. She landed on a ledge at the 85th floor, fracturing her hip.

The building's darkest day was July 28, 1945, when Lt. Col. William Smith, a veteran of 500 hours of combat flying in Europe, got lost in a morning mist and crashed his B-25 bomber into the north side at the 79th floor.

The building rocked. The B-25's fuel tanks ruptured in the 200 mph impact, and flame spewed as high as the 86th floor. Thirteen people were killed, 26 seriously injured. It cost $1 million to repair the damage.

The building has changed hands only three times. In 1961, when the building, 2½ acres of land and the operating lease sold for $65 million, the closing took four hours and 3,600 signatures. When the ink dried, Prudential Insurance Co. was the owner and real estate investors Harry Helmsley and George Wein held the lease.

It is generally agreed that even a limitless amount of money could not duplicate the building's craftsmanship or quality of raw materials. Robert Tinker, the building manager, suggests it would cost 10 times more to tear down today than it cost to build. It would be no easy job.

"Back in the '30s when they built this baby," said William Stassen, chief engineer, there were no precedents for building anything so big, so it was over-engineered. Where a one-inch piece of steel would do, "they used 10 inches," he said admiringly.

Since the New York World Fair in 1964, the top 30 floors of the building have been lighted at night. For the 1976 bicentennial, it was red, white and blue. For Christmas, it's red and green; for Valentine's Day, red and white; green for St. Patrick's Day.

At dusk on April 30, red and turquoise laser lights will flash from the summit in a light show which should be visible for 10 miles. Other lasers will be beamed to flash across the building's surface — like birthday candles.

Next Budget Meeting

Mayor Don McGlohn reminded citizens that the next neighborhood budget meeting will be held on Thursday, April 30 at 7:30 p.m. at the Recreation-Library Center on Cedar Lane.

McGlohn said the meeting will be held for residents of Eastwood, Eastbrook Apartments, Cherry Court Apartments, Colonial Heights, College Court, Riverview Estates, River Bluff, Bryton Hill, and Green Spring Park area.

He encouraged citizens of these neighborhoods to attend the meeting and let city officials know their views on the city budget.

Find Astronaut For Countdown

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When officials of the 1982 World's Fair decided they needed someone to help mark the start of the one-year countdown, they went to a man who knows plenty about countdowns.

Robert L. Crippen, co-pilot of the space shuttle Columbia, will attend Friday's ceremonies here, Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said Monday.

Crippen and pilot John Young rode the Columbia into space April 12 and landed it safely at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., two days later.

The fair, scheduled to open May 1, 1982, will emphasize an energy theme in the exhibits and pavilions run by foreign nations and the United States.

Tax Reduction Is Questioned

East Carolina University economics professor Dr. Unesh Gulati has written North Carolina's 11 Congressmen, taking issue with Pres. Ronald Reagan's individual income tax cut proposal.

Saying, "inflation is our nation's number one problem today," and that, "Pres. Reagan needs all the support that is necessary in his efforts to control inflation," Gulati suggested in his letter that, "the justification for any policy undertaken...will rest on its overall effects of controlling inflation."

Agreeing that the president's proposals to cut spending, cut corporate income taxes, and deregulate business and industry, "will indeed have the effect of reducing inflation," Gulati emphasized that the president's proposal, "to cut the individual income tax rates does not meet the criterion..."

"To say the least," the letter continued, "a cut in personal income tax rates at this stage of our economy will have a doubtful effect on controlling inflation, and therefore, cannot be accepted in its present form."

"The immediate short-run effect of a tax cut program will be to increase demand, and thereby to cancel and to offset the effect of cuts in spending."

An individual income tax cut will be used to purchase various items, rather than to stimulate savings, Gulati suggested. "If the objective is to stimulate savings, then why not use a more direct method, say of excluding interest income to some maximum...from any tax?"

Gulati said, "One might argue that a tax cut is necessary to compensate people for the inconveniences or loss of incomes due to spending cuts. If that is the case, then I believe that it is the lower and middle income people who are going to be hurt the most. Therefore, if the tax relief is to be granted, then concentrate that relief on the lower and middle income people," rather than an across-the-board cut which includes high-income tax payers.

Concluding, Gulati said, "I urge you, in the larger interest of the country, to help revise the President's tax proposals both in their depth and scope," keeping in mind that, "all the adverse effects of the personal income tax cut program will surface in the next year or so, while any favorable effect on savings or work effort will only accrue in the long-run."

"If inflation needs to be licked, then statesmanship requires that you stand up for principle and let people bite the bullet. Nature has made no short cuts to a problem..."

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks was down .68 to 77.55. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 4.12 at 357.15.

Pendergraft Is New ECU Aide

East Carolina University head basketball coach Dave Odom announced today that David Pendergraft will fill one of the two assistant coaching vacancies on the Pirate staff.

Pendergraft has been with Odom for two years as a graduate assistant coach and will begin his duties as fulltime assistant immediately.

"Because Coach Pendergraft knows our system, our scheme of recruiting, is familiar with our players, is familiar with our goals for our program and our plan to achieve our goals, I am pleased to announce that he will be stepping into one of our vacancies as assistant basketball coach," Odom said. "Pendergraft has been a loyal worker for two years and it is obvious to everyone involved in our program that he has gained the knowledge and insight to become a fulltime assistant. Coach Pendergraft's duties will be primarily in the areas of recruiting and floor coaching."

Pendergraft joined the Pirate staff upon graduation from Catawba College in 1979. The 25-year-old Pendergraft received his B.A. degree in physical education at Catawba while serving as captain of his basketball team.

The Cary native originally attended Brevard Junior College in Coca, Fla., receiving all-state and all-conference honors while serving as captain and starting guard there. In high school at Cary, Pendergraft was all-conference, all-metro and captain of his team.

"The past two years here have been a learning experience for me," Pendergraft said. "I feel George (Felton) and Eddie (Payne) were both excellent examples as assistant coaches. I just hope that I can continue to serve East Carolina University and coach Odom as well as they did."

"I'm pleased that coach Odom thought enough of what I have done here to move me into this position. I look forward to continuing my work with the returning players and the new recruits in what I think is a very bright future for East Carolina basketball."

Fateful Matchup Is Thursday

By RICK SCOPPE

Since March 31, Greenville Rose has been waiting for its rematch with Northern Nash. The wait is over. Come Thursday night at 7:30 in Guy Smith Stadium, the Rampants will have a chance to avenge their only loss of the season.

Nearly a month ago, Rose traveled to Northern Nash and returned home beaten, 6-5, on a seventh-inning grand slam by Carl Richardson.

The loss has not been forgotten. It has been as much a part of the Rampants' season as their 20-run victories. Perhaps even more.

"They've thought about Northern Nash ever since March 28," Greenville Rose coach Ronald Vincent said after his club's 4-0 win over Northeastern Tuesday afternoon. "We've tried not to dwell on it, but (thoughts of it) occur constantly."

"Yes, the loss shook us up. We talk about it at practice, mainly about the fact that you can't take anything for granted," he added. "That, regardless of the stats, or who you play, the most important game is the one coming up."

Few games this season have been as important as tomorrow's. Northern Nash comes in fresh off a 4-3 win over Wilson Hunt, one of three teams that entered the Tuesday tied for the league lead at 5-1.

The other two were Northern Nash and Greenville Rose. Both are now 6-1 and the winner Thursday will be all alone atop the conference standings. A loss will severely dampen either team's chances of winning the conference crown and thus a berth in the state playoffs.

And if the Rampants need any more incentive, it was provided by Northern Nash pitcher Bruce Ellis, who went the distance for the victory in the teams' earlier game.

Ellis entered that March 31 game having pitched two one-hitters and one two-hitter. But against Rose he gave up eight hits, four earned runs while striking out six and walking four. Afterwards, he had a comment or two to make.

"He told (Coach Vincent) that you got me today but they'll be another day," Rose shortstop Mark Douglas said. "He said it half kidding but he also meant it."

Ellis is 9-0 this season after going the distance in Tuesday night's 4-3 win over Wilson Hunt. Ellis will not start Thursday. Instead, right-hander Jerry Winstead will be on the mound.

The Rampants, 15-1 overall, will counter with staff ace Roger Williams. Williams goes into the game with a 7-0, a record that includes six shutouts and a .48 ERA.

Impressive statistics. And there's more. Since that March loss to Northern

Rose Tops Northeastern, 4-0

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Greenville Rose coach Ronald Vincent spent a restless Monday night in bed, so worried was he about the Rampants upcoming game with Northeastern. The concern was not wasted.

While Vincent looked on,

Northeastern gave Rose all it could handle before the Rampants, with two runs in the fourth and fifth, managed to come away with a hard-fought 4-0 victory over the Eagles Tuesday afternoon in Guy Smith Stadium.

"I was really concerned about this one," Vincent said.

"I usually sleep well before games but I hardly slept at all last night."

The Eagles entered the game with a mediocre 6-7 record (2-4 in the league), but remained in the game thanks to the pitching of right-hander Harry Williams. Williams held the Rampants, who are averaging over 12 hits and 11 runs a game, to just six hits. He struck out two and walked none.

"Their guy pitched well," Vincent said. "He kept us off-balance. We hit some good shots off him, shots that would have been a factor in the game but we kept hitting 'em right at them."

One of those shots came in the second. With no outs and Roger Williams on third, Kenny Barnes hit a ball straight up the middle that sent Williams' glove flying off his hand. Williams, however, was able to recover the ball and get Barnes at first.

At least the Rampants were getting wood on the ball. The Eagles were having trouble doing even that much of the afternoon against Rose starter Gordon Douglas.

Northeastern managed just two hits off the Rose right-hander. Michael Sanders ended Douglas' no-hit bid in the fourth with an infield single and one inning later Melvin Whitehurst singled to right.

Douglas struck out 10 and walked three en route to his sixth victory in as many decisions. And while not at his best on this hot afternoon, the junior was able to stop the Eagles when it counted.

After not allowing a runner past second the first five innings, Douglas got in trouble in the sixth. He walked Danny Brite to lead off the inning and then gave up his second and last hit of the afternoon to Whitehurst, who replaced Jerry McGee. McGee was thrown out for arguing with the home plate umpire following a called strike.

Both runners advanced a base when left fielder Mitch Brann failed to come up with the ball following Whitehurst's single. But Douglas induced the next three batters hit three pop ups, two to the infield, to end the threat.

"Gordon didn't have his good stuff today but I really thought he pitched well in the sixth," Vincent said. "He made them

Gay Does It Again As Chargers Top Conley

HOLLYWOOD — Ayden-Grifton's Tyrone Gay struck out 10 while holding D.H. Conley to two hits as the Chargers ripped the Vikings, 9-0, Tuesday afternoon in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

The Chargers, now 12-6 overall and 10-1 in the league, all but eliminated the Vikings from the ECC title hunt with the loss. Conley is now 8-9 overall and 6-5 in the conference.

The victory left Gay 7-2 overall, with both losses coming to nonleague foes. The Vikings two hits came in the second, an infield single by Todd Rouse, and in the third, a single by Emory Vines.

The Chargers wasted little time in staking their ace to a lead. With two gone in the first, Terry Locust, Chuck Smithwick and Gay hit consecutive singles to give A-G a 1-0 lead.

After a scoreless second, the Chargers were back for two more in the third. Chris Strickland walked, Bernard Ricciarelli singled and Locust had an infield single to load the bases. Strickland then scored on a passed ball and Gay the singled to bring home Ricciarelli and the Chargers led, 3-0.

The A-G lead went to 5-0 one inning later. Art Rouse reached on an error and Doug Coley singled before both scored on Joey Kennedy's double.

The Chargers added another run in the fifth and three in the sixth, sparked by a two-run homer by Smithwick, for their final tally.

Ayden-Grifton was led at the plate by Locust and Smithwick, both of whom were three of four. Ricciarelli and Coley were both two for four. Both Smithwick and Coley had two RBIs for A-G.

Ayden-Grifton plays host to North Pitt Friday night and then entertains Southern Nash Saturday night. Both games are a 8 p.m.

Hardison Sparks Jags To 12-5 Win Over SWE

PINETOPS — Farmville Central's Greg Hardison went four for four and the Jaguars struck for six runs in the first inning en route to a 12-5 victory over Southwest Edgecombe Tuesday afternoon in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

The Jaguars, now 8-9 overall and 5-7 in the ECC, used an Eddie Jones double in the first inning to spark the six-run outburst.

With one gone and Bobby Avery on first, Wade Corbett walked and Jeff Moore singled to load the bases. Mike Tugwell then walked to force home

Avery before Jones unloaded his double to drive home all three of his teammates and give Farmville a 4-0 lead.

David Cherry then walked and Alvin Baker reached on an error to score Jones and Cherry.

The Cougars cut the deficit to 6-2 with a two-run first but the Jaguars countered with two runs of their own in the second. Hardison doubled and Avery walked. Moore then doubled home Hardison and Joey Stepe reached on a fielder's choice to score Avery.

The Cougars scored once in the bottom of the inning and twice more in the third but Farmville added another run to its total in the third and led 9-5 and was never headed.

Avery went the distance on the mound for the victory, his seventh in 11 decisions.

Farmville had seven doubles among its 13 hits, including one by Hardison, who also had a triple among his four hits. Corbett and Moore were both two for four for Farmville.

Bob Wooten was two for three for Southwest.

hit the balls he wanted them to hit."

For the first three innings much the same could be said of Williams. But in the fourth the Rampants finally broke their scoring drought.

With one gone, Barnes was hit by a pitch but was forced at second on Gordon Douglas' fielder's choice. Sammy Hodges came in to run for Douglas and promptly stole second and moved to third when the throw skipped into centerfield.

Crowell Pope the lined a single to right, just over a leaping Brite at second base, to score Hodges. Paul MacMillan followed with a single up the middle to give Rose runners at the corners. Vincent then called a double steal and the Rampants worked it to perfection.

MacMillan raced off second to draw the throw from Williams to Brite. While MacMillan was keeping the rundown going, Pope raced home. MacMillan was tagged out moments later, but the run counted and Rose led, 2-0.

Rose was back for two more in the fifth. Leadoff hitter Mont Carter reached on an error by McGee in left and scored on Mark Douglas' double. On the play, Douglas squared as if to bunt but brought his bat back and ripped the ball in the left-centerfield gap for a two-base hit.

Douglas, the only Rampant with two hits on the day, later stole third standing up before scroign on Emmett Walsh's sacrifice fly to rightfield to give Rose a 4-0 lead.

Mark's brother Gordon, after escaping the sixth inning, struck out the side in the seventh to seal the victory and give the Rampants their long awaited return match with Northern Nash.

The Knights, the only team to defeat Rose this season, travel to Greenville Thursday for a 7:30 p.m. battle with the Rampants at Guy Smith Stadium.

Nash, Rose has won 10 straight games, including eight by shutouts.

On offense, the Rampants are averaging 11.5 runs and just over 12 hits a game and are hitting .378 (199 hits in 526 at bats) as a team. Defensively, the Rampants have committed only 15 errors and have given up 16 runs (10 earned) in their 16 games this season.

But for all the statistics, impressive as they may be, Northern Nash has remained upper most in the minds of the Rampants.

"Since they beat us we've thought of them," Douglas said. "They beat us in a cheap way. We had 'em beat until the last couple of outs and they beat us the only way they could beat us - with a grand slam.

"The grand slam hasn't been in our minds, but the loss has. We've just been waiting for Northern Nash. Even today we were talking about them before the game, but we knew we had to go out and beat (Northeastern) before we could play them."

"The loss did some good, but, to tell the truth, I wish the loss had come later in the season. We're kind of slacking off now. Say we were unbeaten now, if we lost that would wake us up."

But the Rampants aren't unbeaten. They have Northern Nash to thank for that. And come tomorrow night the Rampants hope they can return the favor, and take over sole possession of first place in the process.

Now A Patriot

East Carolina's Anthony Collins became the highest ever NFL draft choice for the school yesterday, going in the second round to the New England Patriots. Collins, one of East Carolina's all-time rushing leaders, said going in the second was "the answer to his prayers." He reports to his first session with the Patriots in early May for orientation. Aycock Romps Past North Pitt By 23-5

BETHEL — Charles B. Aycock struck for seven runs in the second and five in the fifth and took advantage of eight North Pitt errors to demolish the Panthers, 23-5, Tuesday afternoon in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

The Falcons wasted little time in establishing the trend for the afternoon, scoring four times in their first at bat.

After North Pitt countered with a two-run first, the Falcons pushed home seven runs in the second, one run in both the third and fourth, five in the fifth, two in the sixth and three in the seventh for their total.

Paul Thomas had three hits in six at bats to lead C.B. Aycock. J.C. Gurley and Vernell Grantham were both two for five with doubles while Todd Gurganus was two for six.

Jerry Simpson was two for four for North Pitt.

In the first, Gregory Briley, Quintin Dove and Ronnie House all walked to load the bases. Bob Hemingway then hit a sacrifice fly to centerfield to score Briley. Dove subsequently scored on a ground out by Simpson and the Panthers trailed, 4-2.

It was as close as North Pitt would get.

North Pitt travels to Ayden-Grifton Friday night (7:30 p.m.).

Bernazard Becoming Birds' Superman

By The Associated Press
Tony Bernazard stands just 5-foot-9 and weighs only 160 pounds, but he's beginning to look like Superman to the Baltimore Orioles.

The Chicago White Sox second baseman pounded out two doubles and a single Tuesday night in leading a 15-hit attack that carried the hot White Sox to an 8-6 victory over the Orioles.

Bernazard's three hits gave him a total of 14 in 24 trips to the plate against Baltimore this season. That's a .583 batting average.

And that's just the tip of the iceberg, since Bernazard and his teammates have combined to bat a lousy .373 against the Orioles, while winning four of five games from them this season.

In other American league action Tuesday, California tripped Oakland 3-1, Texas ripped Boston 9-0, New York stopped Detroit 4-1, Toronto topped Milwaukee 6-2, Minnesota dumped Seattle 4-1 and Kansas City was rained out at Cleveland.

The White Sox came up with six runs in a second-inning explosion that included run-scoring doubles by Bill Almon and Bernazard among seven straight hits. The victory, combined with Oakland's second straight loss, moved the White Sox within 3½ games of the A's, the leaders in the AL West.

Bernazard said, "There's no secrets to it. I'm just making contact. They still have a good pitching staff."

Bernazard, who came to the White Sox in an off-season trade with Montreal, also made two diving stops of Baltimore grounders and turned them into force plays to halt a pair of Oriole rallies.

"Bernazard is hitting every-

Jackets Rip Tigers

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Roanoke Rapids ripped out 16 hits and pushed home seven runs in the third inning to rout Williamston, 15-10, Tuesday afternoon in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

Williamston, now 6-10 overall, trailed 4-0 after the first inning before cutting the deficit to 4-2 in the top of the second. Greg Thomas walked, moved to second on Tony Rogers' single and both runners then scored on Greg Johnson's triple.

The Tigers would get no closer. Roanoke Rapids countered with a run in the bottom of the second and seven in the third to take a 12-3 lead. The Yellow Jackets' final three runs came in the fourth.

Williamston scored four times in the fifth and added one run in the fifth and two in the sixth but it wasn't enough.

Rogers and James Clemmons were both two for three for Williamston and Tim Hines was two for four for the Tigers.

Bears Win In 12th, 3-2

BATH — It took 12 innings, but Bear Grass finally shook off stubborn Bath to take a 3-2 Tobacco Belt baseball victory yesterday.

Bear Grass got the initial lead in the second inning, scoring once. Jody Peaks singled and moved up on a fielder's choice. He scored on Edward Rogers single.

Bath scored twice in the third to take a 2-1 lead. Swain walked and Tyler reached on an error. Chitmon walked, and walks to C. Woolard and R. Woolard brought in Swain and Tyler.

The Bears came back with one in the sixth to tie it up. William Roberson walked and scored on Clay Gardner's double.

It stayed 2-2 until the 12th inning, when the Bears finally broke the impasse. Gary Harrison reached on a fielder's choice and Craig Gardner walked. Rogers also walked, loading the bases. Tony Leggett then laid down a perfect squeeze bunt to score Harrison with what proved to be the winning run.

No one on either team had more than one hit.

Bear Grass, now 11-2, plays host to Creswell on Thursday.

thing we throw up there," said Baltimore pitching Coach Ray Miller, who managed the 24-year-old in winter league ball in his native Puerto Rico.

"He's hitting curveballs, fastballs, sliders and changes," Miller said. "And everything he hits falls in. He's hot, like our guy."

Miller was referring to Ken Singleton of the Orioles, who ripped 10 straight hits against Chicago in the last three games before being stopped in his third at-bat Tuesday night. Singleton is 12 for 19 for a sizzling .632 against the White Sox this season.

Those 10 hits in a row are just two shy of the major league record shared by Walt Dropo and Mike "Pinky" Higgins.

Angels 3, A's 1

Steve Renko picked up a victory with relief help from Don Aase and Luis Sanchez as California beat the suddenly punchless A's. Renko gave up only a pair of infield singles in six innings.

Aase allowed four more hits, three of them in the ninth inning before giving way to Sanchez with two outs and two men on base. Sanchez then picked up his second save of the season by striking out Shooty Babbitt to end the game.

The California runs came on a single by Fred Lynn in the third inning, Bobby Grich's third homer of the season in the fourth and a run-scoring single by Rod Carew in the top of the ninth.

The only Oakland run came in the ninth on Dwayne Murphy's leadoff homer. Wayne Gross bunted for a hit and Tony Armas' two-out single chased Aase, but Sanchez put out the fire.

Oakland Pitcher Brian Kingman, 2-1, took the loss, giving up two runs on seven hits and three walks in 51-3 innings.

Rangers 9, Red Sox 0

Pat Putnam's three-run homer to dead center field keyed the offense and three Texas pitchers combined to stop Boston on five hits.

Texas starter Ferguson Jenkins took himself out of the game after three innings with what was later described as a sinus attack from a cold. Jenkins caught last week in Cleveland.

Steve Comer, 2-0, who preceded Bob Babcock, got the victory in relief.

Putnam's homer was the big blow in a four-run Texas fourth inning. Mickey Rivers led off with a single, Al Oliver was hit by Boston starter Steve Crawford, 0-2, and Buddy Bell beat out an infield roller to load the bases. Rivers scored on John Grubb's sacrifice fly, then Putnam made it 4-0 by clearing the bases with his powerful blast against the wind.

Yankees 4, Tigers 1

Tommy John's six-hitter, backed by home runs from Barry Foote and Willie Randolph, sent Detroit reeling to its ninth straight loss.

John Wockenfuss hit a homer off John leading off the Detroit second, but the New York left-hander, 3-1, was in charge the rest of the way. John was 0-2 against Detroit last season.

Foote, making his first appearance at the plate since being obtained by the Yankees Monday in a trade with the Chicago Cubs, hit a leadoff homer in the third to tie the game 1-1. He was 0-for-22 for the Cubs.

Detroit starter Dan Schatzeder, 1-1, walked Graig Nettles and Bucky Dent before giving up a three-run shot by Randolph in the fifth. The two-out homer, into the lower left-field seats, ended an 0-for-10 streak for Randolph.

The Tigers' losing skein is their longest since 1975 when they dropped 19 in a row.

Blue Jays 6, Brewers 2

Ken Macha's two-run double ignited a four-run sixth inning, and Lloyd Moseby and Otto Velez added solo homers for the Blue Jays.

Mark Bombardieri, 2-1, allowed two runs on eight hits in seven innings and Joey McLaughlin stopped the Brewers on three hits the rest of the way. Milwaukee starter Mike Caldwell, 2-2, took the loss.

The Blue Jays broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth when Damaso Garcia led off with a triple and scored on a single by Barry Bonnell. After a walk to Velez, Macha belted his double to left-center, scoring Bonnell and Velez. Macha then scored on a double by Alfredo Griffin.

Twins 4, Mariners 1

Richie Zisk set a Seattle record by hitting his fifth home run in five games, but Minnesota's Pete Redfern, 2-1, held the rest of the Mariners in check, finishing with a five-hitter.

Zisk's major league-leading seventh homer of the season gave him one homer in each of the last five games, moving him within one of the American league record. It has been done six times, the last by Reggie Jackson with Baltimore in 1976.

First Victory Is Sweet For Don Sutton

By The Associated Press
Don Sutton won 230 games with the Los Angeles Dodgers, but few were sweeter than the one he won for the Houston Astros Tuesday night.

"It feels a lot better to win my first after those first three losses, although I thought it would come earlier," said Sutton after a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves. "I wanted to get off to a fast start being with a new team."

Sutton, a 36-year-old free agent who signed with the Astros this year after 15 seasons with the Dodgers, lost two tough one-run games — including a 1-0 decision to his former teammates — earlier this month.

Lifted for a pinch hitter in the ninth, Sutton allowed only two hits in eight innings, one a home run by Bob Horner. Houston reliever Dave Smith yielded a single before retiring the Braves in the ninth.

"Leaving the game was my idea," said Sutton. "I wasn't going out to the mound in the ninth no matter what. I had had it. I wasn't going to jeopardize our chances and go out and pitch the last inning. It would have been stupid with the bullpen we've got."

In other National League action, it was Montreal 6, Philadelphia 3; Cincinnati 11, San Diego 2; Pittsburgh 8, New York 0 and San Francisco 6, Los Angeles 1. The St. Louis-Chicago game was postponed by rain.

Sutton got all the runs he needed from Jose Cruz, who doubled and scored on Alan Ashby's single in the second and homered in the fourth off Atlanta loser John Montefusco.

The Astros, who have not been hitting well since the season began, won for only the third time in 13 games and are 5-12 overall after winning the National League West title a year ago.

Expos 6, Phillies 3
Chris Speier's first of three hits drove home a sixth-inning run, triggering Montreal over Philadelphia. The Expos trailed 3-2 when Andre Dawson opened the sixth by reaching first on shortstop Larry Bowa's first error of the season. Dawson moved to second when losing pitcher Larry Christenson threw wild for an error on a pickoff attempt.

Ellis Valentine singled to score Dawson and tie the game. Speier later singled to send home Valentine with the lead run.

Speier said he came out early Tuesday and took extra batting practice to work on his mechanics, and said that may have helped with his 3-for-4 game, which included a single, double and triple.

Reds 11, Padres 2
Tom Seaver scattered eight hits and Cincinnati scored eight times in the fifth inning to rout San Diego. Seaver was the only Reds player who did not score in the fifth when Cincinnati sent 13 batters to the plate against three San Diego pitchers.

The Reds put the game away as Dan Driessen, Ron Oester and Ken Griffey delivered RBI hits, Joe Nolan was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded, Dave Concepcion hit a sacrifice fly, reliever John Urrea uncorked a run-scoring wild pitch and the Reds scored two more runs on an error.

"He looked like he wasn't throwing real well, but you can't spot Tom Seaver a two-, three-, or four-run lead. He'll eat you alive," said San Diego

Manager Frank Howard.

Pirates 8, Mets 0
Rick Rhoden scattered nine hits and Dave Parker collected four hits, leading Pittsburgh over New York. Rhoden, 3-0, extended his record of never losing a game in April during his major league career. He has a 13-0 April record since entering the majors with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1974.

The Pirates tagged losing pitcher Mike Scott for five runs in the third inning with Bill Madlock's homer the big wallop. Rhoden helped his own cause with a single leading off the inning.

Rhoden attributed his victory to spiking the big guns of the Mets. "Dave Kingman always manages to tag me for a homer or two every season," he said. "But I fed Dave breaking stuff and held him to a single."

Giants 6, Dodgers 1
Alan Ripley fired a three-hitter and Jack Clark slugged a three-run homer to lead San Francisco over Los Angeles. Joe Morgan also hit a solo homer as the Giants snapped the Dodgers' three-game winning streak.

The only hits off Ripley were Dusty Baker's one-out single in the seventh, Pedro Guerrero's single in the eighth and Ken Landreaux's homer in the ninth.

Ripley, who had only three complete games in the majors prior to Tuesday night walked two and struck out eight. One of his two losses this season was to Los Angeles two weeks ago in San Francisco when he gave up four runs on six hits in a 4-3 defeat.

Edenton Rally Nips Roanoke

ROBERTSONVILLE — Edenton pushed across two runs in the sixth and seventh to rally from a three-run deficit and edge Roanoke, 6-5, Tuesday night in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

Roanoke, now 6-9 overall and 3-6 in the league, trailed 1-0 after the first inning but scored two runs in the second and three in the fifth to lead 5-2 going into the sixth.

But the Aces rallied for two runs in the sixth, thanks in part to two of Roanoke's eight errors on the night, and then took the lead in the seventh with a two-run surge.

In the seventh, Jordan singled, Ed Small walked and Bunch was intentionally walked to load the bases. After an out, Jordan scored on a sacrifice fly and Jeff Harrell singled to score Small with the go-ahead run.

Only two innings earlier, the Redskins had had a three-run lead, thanks to a three-run fifth. Davis Harris walked, moved to second on Edward Grimes' sacrifice bunt and then scored on Jerry Bryant's double.

Joey Ross then doubled home Bryant and later scored himself on a Mutt Smith single and the Redskins led, 5-1. It was a lead short-lived, however, as the Aces rallied for four runs in the final two innings to win.

No one for Roanoke had more than one hit. Joran was two for four for Edenton.

Roanoke travels to Ahsokie Friday.

Faith Outlasts Knights To Take 11-10 Decision

Faith Christian outlasted Greenville Christian Academy in a baseball game yesterday, 11-10.

Faith pushed over its first run in the opening frame. Ron Cool singled and Mike Mooring got a hit. Alan Floors then singled to drive in Cool for a 1-0 lead.

Greenville came right back to tie it up in the bottom of the first. Phil Bird singled and stole both second and third. He scored on a hit by John Parnell.

Faith and Greenville both scored four times in the second inning, but Faith moved ahead with three in the third, while the Knights scored but one. Greenville then moved ahead for the only time in the game in the fifth, scoring three times for a 9-8 lead.

But Faith rallied for three in the sixth to take the lead for good. Mike Jones reached on an error and Mike Gurley singled him in. Cool single and Mooring walked. Mike Smith then singled in Gurley and Cool.

Greenville tried to rally, scoring a run in the bottom of the seventh, but fell one short to catching up.

Gurley led the Faith hitting with four, while Bird, Parnell and Chris Stox each had three hits for Greenville.

The Knights, now 3-6 overall and 3-4 in conference play, close out their season on Friday at Mt. Calvary.

Firebirds Whip Rams

SNOW HILL — Southern Nash's Mike Bryant shut out Greene Central last night and hurled a 3-0 victory for the Firebirds in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

Bryant, who struck out six and walked three, allowed just two hits, first inning singles by Tony Baron and Jesse Freeman, to spoil the evening for the Firebirds.

Southern got its first run in the third. Terry Best walked and was sacrificed up. He scored on Durwood Williams' single.

The other two came in the fourth. George Harrison singled and Best reached on an error. After both were sacrificed up, Williams again did the job, getting a single to score both runners.

In addition to Williams' two hits, Gordon Rudd added two for the Firebirds.

Greene Central is now 5-6 in league play and 8-10 overall. The Rams travel to Conley today.

Bullets Down Mattamuskeet

JAMESVILLE — Greg Sullivan struck out eight and walked just two while limiting Mattamuskeet to two singles as Jamesville defeated the Lakers, 3-0, Tuesday night in a Tobacco Belt Conference baseball game.

Sullivan, now 3-1, did not give up a hit until the third when Ray Tooley singled. Tooley also got the Lakers' other hit off Sullivan, a sixth-inning single.

The Bullets, now 13-3 overall and 11-2 in the league, got all the runs they needed in the second.

Keith Waters singled and Ricky Bell came in to run for him. Bell, who stole four bases on the night, stole second and went to third on Kevin Waters' single. The Bullets then pulled a delayed steal and when the throw went to second Bell scored, giving Jamesville a 1-0 lead.

The Bullets scored again in the third. Clarence Thomas was hit by a pitch, stole second and third and then scored on a ground out by Carl Ange. Thomas, like Bell, had four stolen bases.

Jamesville's final run of the day came in the fifth. Thomas walked, stole second and third and then scored on Ange's sacrifice fly to left, which the left-fielder dropped.

No one had more than one hit for Jamesville but Bell did have a double for the Bullets.

Jamesville plays host to Pantego Wednesday at 4 p.m.

Draft Enters 'Who's He' Phase Today

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League draft entered the "who's he?" phase today as teams sought a diamond-in-the-rough to go along with the gems they picked up 24 hours earlier.

There were no George Rogerses, no Lawrence Taylors, no Kenny Easleys up for grabs — at least not visibly so. More than a few low-round selections stick in the NFL each year. Guard Tyrone McGriff, the last pick a year ago (No. 333), not only stuck with the Pittsburgh Steelers but thanks to injuries to his teammates he was starting by season's end.

But the bottom-round rookies, the free-agent catch-ons, they are the rarities.

The seventh-through-12th-rounders show up in training camp with high hopes and high odds against them. Often they are cut early and, as they tour the training camps, cut more than once.

Not so the blue-chippers, the instant millionaires, the college kids with agents in tow. They are all but guaranteed not only to make the roster but to start, and to be paid handsomely for doing so.

Rogers, for example, is as sure a thing as you can find in the NFL this year. Bum Phillips turned Houston into a year-to-year winner when the Oilers drafted Earl Campbell three years ago. If he could happen once, why not again?

So, after being fired by the Oilers because they couldn't win playoff games, and after being hired to coach New Orleans, he went to the Heisman well again this year and picked Rogers with the Saints' No. 1 selection Tuesday.

The 6-foot-2, 220-pound Heisman Trophy winner says he's not a "franchise" the way Campbell has become (three rushing titles in three seasons in Houston), but he's as close to one you'll find in the draft.

"I don't think I'm an Earl Campbell," Rogers said. "I can't turn it around by myself. I'm not a one-man team. I play with a team. As an individual, I can't do it. It has to be the team that'll do it."

He was one of six running backs picked in the first round and one of 20 to go among the 166 players chosen in Tuesday's six rounds. Defensive backs led the first-day ranks with 27 being picked, followed by linebackers with 23. The first linebacker to go was Taylor, rated by many as the "best athlete available." The New York Giants got the North Carolina star with their No. 2 pick.

The first quarterback to go was Rich Campbell of California, selected by Green Bay, which has been looking for a really good one since Bart Starr, now its embattled coach, retired after the Packers' halcyon days of the 1960s.

choice in the second round came up, the other blue-chip quarterback, Portland State's Neil Lomax, was still available. They took him.

A third "name" quarterback, Purdue's Mark Herrmann, didn't go until the fourth round, when Denver selected him. His mobility is highly suspect — which makes the Broncos' pick even than more interesting since their No. 1 quarterback, Craig Morton, also can't get anywhere very fast.

Easley, the UCLA safety far and away the star of the defensive backs, was picked by the defense-poor Seattle Seahawks. Hugh Green, the Pitt defensive end projected as a linebacker in the pros, was the favorite of man of the New York Jets' fans crowded into the draft headquarters at the Sheraton Hotel. But it was Tampa Bay which got him, four picks after the Jets had used their No. 3 selection to claim Freeman McNeil, the UCLA running back.

Wills Benched For Rigging Box

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — It's not that Cananea Reyes isn't enjoying his stint as major league manager, he just wants Maury Wills back at the helm.

AL found him guilty of extending the batter's box an extra foot in front of home plate. The batter's box should be three feet from home plate in each direction, or six feet. The batter's box in the Kingdome was measured to be four feet in front of home plate. The extension was discovered by Oakland Manager Billy Martin as the two were exchanging lineups cards with the umpires.

Reyes, a native of Mexico and the Seattle Mariners third base coach, was forced into action as the head man Tuesday when the American League suspended Wills for "doctoring the batter's box" last Saturday prior to the Mariners game with the Oakland A's.

Wills was suspended for two games and fined $500 when the AL found him guilty of extending the batter's box an extra foot in front of home plate. The batter's box should be three feet from home plate in each direction, or six feet. The batter's box in the Kingdome was measured to be four feet in front of home plate. Crowded Kentucky Derby Limited To Twenty Top Money-Winners

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Trainer LeRoy Jolley stood in the barn area at Churchill Downs, looking at the Wall Street Journal.

"Up a half," he said to horse owner Bert Firestone, who nodded.

On Saturday they hope Cure the Blues will be a blue-chip investment when the colt runs in the 107th Kentucky Derby.

After Lord Avie, the Derby winter book favorite, was sidelined earlier this year, Cure the Blues emerged as the Derby favorite. But his disappointing third-place performance in the April 18 Wood Memorial has raised questions about the colt's ability to go the 1 1/4-mile Derby distance.

So much so that this first leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown has more 3-year-old hopefuls on the grounds than officials will allow to go postward. The field will be limited to 20 based on earnings.

"I think we'll find out Saturday that this horse can really run," said Jolley Tuesday after the son of Stop the Music galloped 2 miles. With earnings of $178,106 and the winner of six of eight career starts, Cure the Blues ranks No. 8 among Derby challengers.

What did Jolley think after Cure the Blues "stopped" after a mile of the 1 1/4-mile Wood and was passed by Pleasant Colony, the winner, and the runnerup, Highland Blade?

"It was scary," he said. "I wondered what happened. Such a good horse with great ability. It was totally not him."

The blistering early pace and several cuts the colt suffered on his left hind hock were among the factors, Jolley added. Cure the Blues also was coming off a narrow loss to Proud Appeal, now the Derby favorite, in the Gotham.

After the Wood, Firestone and Jolley decided to bring in Bill Shoemaker to replace Jacinto Vasquez as the colt's rider.

"The situation (with Vasquez aboard) was not working out," Jolley said. "Finishing second in the Derby is not good enough. Shoemaker is a great rider and he'll know what to do. He has almost 8,000 victories. I'd like to see him win (at least) one more time."

Jolley is seeking to join Ben Jones, Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, Max Hirsch and H.J. Thompson as the only trainers ever to win three or more Derbies.

He previously saddled Derby winners Foolish Pleasure (1975) and Genuine Risk, who last year became the first filly to win this classic in 65 years and only the second in history.

Cure the Blues was homebred at Firestone's Virginia farm. Genuine Risk runs in the colors of Firestone's wife, Diana.

"There's pretty much the same feeling as last year," said Jolley. "Genuine Risk ran third in the Wood, but came back to win the Derby."

There will be no filly running in this year's Derby since Heavenly Cause, the top money-earner among 3-year-olds, will run Friday instead in the Kentucky Oaks for fillies.

But there will be plenty of others passing through the entry box Thursday.

"They've come from everywhere," said the 43-year-old Jolley. "There's about 10 of them I've haven't seen, on TV or anywhere."

Like Cure the Blues, there will be some speed horses. Among them will be Proud Appeal, whom Jolley describes as "a very tough horse."

Also, there will be stretch runners Pleasant Colony, Santa Anita Derby victor Splendid Spruce and Flamingo winner Tap Shoes.

The usual Derby turnout of 130,000 figures to have a tough time deciding Saturday's winner.

Exhibition Set In Wilson

WILSON — Tom Gorman, Brian Gottfried, Marty Riessen and Dick Stockton will appear at Atlantic Christian College on Monday, May 4, for a tennis exhibition.

The exhibition is being sponsored by Jessup Distributing Co. of Wilson, Anheuser-Busch distributor, in conjunction with the Wilson Tennis Foundation.

These four professionals will be busy during their Wilson visit. They are scheduled for a 12 noon news conference at the Rib Room, a 1 p.m. Rotary Club luncheon at the Western Sizzlin' Steak House, and a youth clinic at 3:45 p.m. on the Atlantic Christian tennis courts.

At 6 p.m., the players will go to the Southern National Bank for a "Meet the Players" reception. This will be an opportunity for the families of patron ticket holders to meet the players.

The exhibition will then get underway at 7 p.m. in the ACC gym, and will feature both singles and doubles competition.

Patron tickets are $30, and general admission tickets are $3.

Tickets are available in Greenville from Bond's Sporting Goods.

Glasswork Provides A 'Sanctuary'

By GEORGE ESPEY
Associated Press Writer
JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — When the Rev. George Hilsdorf goes on retreat, it isn't always to the monastery.

His sanctuary often is a world of glass menageries, swizzle sticks and goblets that he makes as a hobby.

For nearly half of his 69 years, Hilsdorf has been teaching chemistry at St. Peter's College and, when he gets tense, working with glass.

"When you get uptight, when the pressure is on, when you can't sit down and study or correct papers, you do something else," he says. "Some people do this or that. Some people do go to a show. But I like to go up and work with glass."

"You have to be a teacher to understand that there are times when you have too many things to do for the time available. At least you feel that way."

"You're worried about something that's going to come up a month from now. It's kind of silly but it's human. And maybe if you have failed to meet deadlines ... you'd be amazed how many deadlines teachers have to meet."

Semi-retired and teaching chemistry only part time, Hilsdorf was asked this semester to share his knowledge of glass in a non-credit workshop, "Artistic and Scientific Glass Blowing," which was open to the public but limited to eight students.

Hilsdorf also has studied the history of glass as a pastime.

"I'm no great scholar but I've read a lot about it," he says.

Six people enrolled in his class, including an electrician whose father had been a glass blower, a woman grammar school teacher, a retired plumber and a priest.

"We got six," he says. "I was amazed. I didn't expect to get one. Ask yourself who would be interested in this kind of thing. You have to reach these people. The people who signed up heard about it only because of the extraordinary publicity in the newspapers. They had been looking to find some course like this. Few are available."

Hilsdorf says glass blowing can be done at home.

"The equipment they would need is not that much."

The Jesuit priest also visits high schools to give demonstrations to students.

"I show them that you can blow glass just like a balloon. The last stronghold of hand blown glass is scientific apparatus. Certain operations are done by machinery but the complicated glassware is still done by hand, a lot of it down in South Jersey."

Hilsdorf became interested in glass while he was doing graduate work at Canisius College in Buffalo, N.Y., in the early 1940s. His professor had worked as a glass blower in Rochester to put himself through college.

Hilsdorf had to use glass for vacuum experiments. Since the college didn't have a glass blower, he had to make his own. He developed the hobby out of necessity.

"Once you start working with a medium like that and you develop a little bit of skill, you enjoy doing it and you want to make things," he says.

Hilsdorf will turn 70 next November and will retire permanently in June 1982.

What will he do?
"I may continue fooling around with this kind of thing," he says.

Bible Society's Library Grows

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Bible Society's library, the world's largest collection of Bibles and related biblical documents, now consists of more than 39,500 volumes in 1,615 languages, including such exotic tongues as Mixteco, Silacayoapan, Pangutaran and Samo-Kubo, officials have reported.

But they said there are still more than 80 million representing 2,000 languages and dialects who still do not have at least one portion of Scripture available in their own language.

Scholar Is Real Champ In Scrabble

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — If Scrabble were played for money rather than glory, Kyle Corbin probably would be a millionaire.

The 19-year-old sophomore at North Carolina State University is one of America's foremost word-game players.

And he has been known to put more than 100 hours of research into entries for Games magazine contests — word games like Kibitzers, Golden Chain and Four Letter Words.

He has been competing nationally since he was 16. "It all started with a magazine drive," Corbin said. "I subscribed to Games magazine, saw their monthly contest, and entered."

In 11 of 13 subsequent contests, Corbin either won the games outright or tied for first place.

A letter to the editor in the magazine's May-June issue asks, "Who is this modern wonder, Kyle Corbin, who wins all your contests? Maybe he could give some of us mere mortals some advice."

Corbin is a straight-A student who's never skipped a class, a member of his university's Varsity Men's Glee Club, a handbell ringer for two church choirs, a limbo roller-skater, a tennis player and an eager collector of comic books.

Why does he compete for prizes as splendid as T-shirts and pinball machines? He's likes words — so much that his idea of a good time is to leaf through dictionaries. And he says he's a born competitor.

"I tied for first in the first contest I entered, then lost it in a random drawing," he said. "That did it. I was hooked and made up my mind right then that I wouldn't quit until I'd won one outright."

Corbin may also have set a world's record by limbo-roller-skating under a 12-inch high stick. But his proudest moment may have come from winning a Games magazine contest called Four Letter Words.

The object was to put 16 different letters into a four-by-four grid and make as many three- and four-letter words as possible.

Corbin dived into the dictionary with his usual aplomb, and emerged 150 hours later with 11 four-letter words and 28 three-letter words. He finished first, second and third in the contest and was the first outright winner in Games magazine's history.

The dictionary work is part of the price of winning, Corbin said, but is fun in itself.

"Hey, this is neat," he said one day while leafing through the H's. "Humuhumunukunupuaa — a small Hawaiian triggerfish. This one holds the record for the most U's (nine). And if you'll notice, the word is actually longer than the definition."

Recently, Corbin has been concentrating on Scrabble. "I've just completed an article for Word Ways magazine on what I believe to be the world record point score for a single turn of Scrabble (using an English dictionary)."

The score? Corbins says it's a new record: 1,737 points. You get 10 for a Z.

Cockroaches On Treasure Ships

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A Texas archaeologist says the treasure ships that sailed between Spain and Mexico in the 1550s carried coins, jewelry, precious stones — and cockroaches.

Dr. Don Hamilton, an expert on artifact preservation who has studied objects from the famous 1554 Spanish treasure fleet that sank off Texas' Padre Island, said remains of roaches were found in concrete-like encrustations that formed around cannon, anchors, coins and tools.

Remains of both New World and Old World varieties of the insect have been found in 16th century wrecks, proving the ships were taking part in an unwitting cargo exchange of pests, Hamilton said.

Hanging Garden Can Grow Crop

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — People who live in town houses, mobile homes or apartments can grow some of their vegetables if they have a porch, trellis or arbor that is sunny most of the day. Hanging gardens are both attractive and productive under such conditions, says horticulturist Jeannette

Lowe. Miss Lowe says varieties that do well in hanging baskets and pots include bush-type cucumbers, cherry-type tomatoes, loosehead lettuce, Malabar and New Zealand spinach and nasturtiums. Young nasturtium leaves add a peppery, watercress-like flavor to salads. Herbs suited to basket culture include lemon balm, chives, sweet marjoram, parsley and thyme.

Brazil Plans Big Bible Issue

NEW YORK (UPI) — Brazil, the fifth largest nation in the world, plans to distribute a record-breaking 70 million Scriptures this year, the American Bible Society has announced. Society officials said the Brazil Bible Society will spend nearly $5.5 million in its ambitious Scripture distribution plan. Brazil has a population of more than 120,000 million, 89 percent of whom are Roman Catholic.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

The man in the street is finally learning what bridge players have known for years—a lifestyle built on waste is doomed!

Light action by both West and East almost kept North-South out of the auction. However, South took the bold course by venturing three hearts and, when North raised to game, West should have considered a sacrifice, since the vulnerability was in his favor and his hand was not impressive defensively. Indeed, East-West can actually make four spades if declarer guesses to drop the singleton king of trumps.

West led the ace of spades, felling the king, and East signaled vigorously for a continuation. He wanted to force dummy to ruff so that the trump suit would not provide entries to dummy's long diamonds. West obliged by continuing with a high spade and declarer ruffed.

A diamond to the queen won and the diamond continuation went to East's ace. Declarer rose with the ace and cashed the ace-king of hearts. West's failure to follow to the second round was a grievous blow. Declarer now had to hope that the third round of diamonds would live so that he could get rid of a club loser. Unfortunately, that was not to be, so declarer had to go down one trick.

Despite the nimble performance by the defense, declarer should have made his contract. Had he realized that what was good for the defenders was probably bad for him, he might have found the right line. If East thought it was right to force dummy, South's best counter was to refuse to cooperate. Instead of ruffing the second spade, declarer should have sluffed one of dummy's clubs. Dummy's trump holding would then have been impervious to assault because declarer could ruff the next spade in his hand. Declarer would then have time to force out the ace of diamonds and draw three rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, and then use the good diamonds to take care of his club losers.

HARMONIZING — Song writers Carol Bayer Sager and Burt Bacharach harmonize at the piano in a Manhattan record store. The pair are promoting their new album "Sometimes Late at Night". The stunt was to recreate the 40's tradition of performers promoting their records by performing in record stores. (AP Laserphoto)

ELECTED TREASURER
RALEIGH — Donna Lynne Tripp, a Meredith College junior and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Reid Tripp of 127 Greenwood Drive, Greenville, has been elected treasurer of next year's senior class during elections held recently.

Tripp is majoring in business administration. She attended J.H. Rose High School.

Heaven's Gate Failing Draw Large Audience

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — United Artists is keeping its new, trimmed-down version of Michael Cimino's "Heaven's Gate" on release for another week, but at least one studio executive says the results of the film's premiere weekend were less than encouraging.

The second version of the film apparently is faring no better with the public than it did with critics.

Jerry Esbin, senior vice president in charge of sales and advertising for United Artists, said receipts for the $36 million film's first weekend in about 800 theaters nationwide totaled only about $1.3 million. He said he had been hoping for $5 million.

"It did extremely bad," Esbin said in a telephone interview from UA's New York headquarters. "I haven't seen numbers this low on a major motion picture in my life."

Despite poor reviews and public response, Esbin said United Artists would keep the picture in release for at least another week but was scaling down its promotional campaign to newspapers only.

"I'm not supporting it (with ads and promotion) the way I would have if it did what I asked it to do the first week, but I am supporting it with newsprint so people know where it's playing," Esbin said.

Esbin is hoping there is a "group out there that didn't get to it the first week."

"The picture is not a classic," he said. "It won't go down in the annals as being 'Godfather.' It won't go down in the annals of being an Ingmar Bergman picture. It won't be a 'Deer Hunter,' another one of Cimino's pictures. But whatever it won't go down for, I don't think it's that bad a picture for the reception it's getting.... But I guess that's what makes horse racing."

The original 219-minute film was edited into a 153-minute version of an epic of cattlemen-farmer warfare in 1892 Wyoming. The new version opened last Friday after five months of re-editing.

The first version opened in New York last October to brutal reviews. United Artists immediately withdrew the film, and director Cimino made more than 300 cuts.

But critics Friday found the film to be little improved: The Herald Examiner called it "a child's idea of a great movie;" the Los Angeles Times said the movie had the "same resonance as a salad oil commercial;" Daily Variety called it "still too far from Paradise," and The Associated Press said, "Rarely has a major film been so badly acted."

Pioneer Hollywood Talent Agent Dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Funeral services were set for Saturday for talent agent William Meiklejohn, who discovered such Hollywood stars as Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland and a young Iowa radio announcer named Ronald Reagan.

Meiklejohn, 78, died Sunday at St. Joseph Medical Center in Burbank, said Beebe Kline, a spokeswoman for the family.

He had been hospitalized for treatment of a perforated ulcer.

One of Hollywood's original talent scouts, Meiklejohn began his show business career in 1921 as a booking agent for a string of 80 vaudeville theaters. It was from the small-time obscurity of the dying vaudeville circuit that Meiklejohn boosted young Rooney, Miss Garland and Betty Grable to stardom.

In the late 1920s, Meiklejohn switched exclusively to representation of motion picture performers.

In the 1930's, Meiklejohn joined the Music Corporation of America, where he helped establish MCA's film division, cultivating two young performers named Jackie Cooper and Jackie Coogan.

In 1940, he was loaned out to Paramount Pictures for two weeks to get the company out of the red. He remained there for 20 years as the studio's talent chief.

It was at Paramount that Meiklejohn became known as "The Star-Maker," discovering Lucille Ball, Alan Ladd and Reagan, who he brought to Hollywood from a radio station in Des Moines, Iowa.

LAPSES.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: R equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Jane Doe Is 'Back Home'

ROSELLE, Ill. (AP) — Jane Doe, who remembers no life other than that of a hospitalized amnesia victim, says she's at peace and happy with an Illinois couple that identified her as their long-lost daughter.

The 34-year-old woman, found nude and near death last year in a Florida state park, arrived here Tuesday to live with Andrew and Irene Tomiczek, at least for a while.

Miss Doe, who wants to keep that name, doesn't remember the couple, but thinks they're "nice people." "I'm happy and relaxed, the best I've felt in a long time," Miss Doe said Tuesday after flying from Florida to Chicago with the Tomiczeks. "I'm at peace, and I'm happy."

Asked what she planned to do first, she replied, "I don't know, but I'll just enjoy it. I don't remember the city ... It's just pleasant to be here."

Mrs. Tomiczek said, "The first thing we're going to do is let her rest and get used to being comfortable around the house."

After being found by a park ranger, Miss Doe spent several months at South Florida State Hospital, recovering her strength and trying to reconstruct her past.

Her search for an identity intrigued the nation, and after Miss Doe appeared on a television news show, the Tomiczeks identified her as their daughter, Cheryl Ann, from whom they had not heard in seven years.

Last week, she spent six days with the couple and decided Monday to return with them to Illinois.

"She just made the decision to be with them," the parents' Florida attorney, H. Gordon Brown, said. "We don't know how long."

Brown said a psychiatrist who has been treating her believes Miss Doe will regain her memory.

Elections in South Africa

One of the world's richest nations in natural resources is holding elections today. But it is hardly an exercise in democracy. Of the 27 million people who live in South Africa, 23 million will not even be permitted to vote. Pieter Botha has been Prime Minister since 1979. He has talked about bringing more racial equality to his segregated country, but so far little has happened to change the apartheid policies that keep the races apart. Blacks cannot even move to major cities without special government permits. Mr. Botha is the head of the National Party that started apartheid. Ironically they have become the "moderates" in this election — as their main opposition has called for even more segregation.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of South-West Africa, which is seeking independence?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Nine percent of the U.S. population is black.

Police Picked Up Cornelia Wallace

OPP, Ala. (AP) — Cornelia Wallace, the ex-wife of former Alabama Gov. George Wallace, was handcuffed but not charged after police found her driving a pickup truck that had been reported stolen, authorities said.

Police Chief Jerry Brannon said Tuesday night his officers found a "highly nervous" Mrs. Wallace driving "what was actually a borrowed truck" on a rural road about 1 p.m. Saturday.

Mrs. Wallace was handcuffed and held at the Opp city jail until Coffee County authorities took responsibility for her Saturday afternoon, Brannon said. No charges were filed against her.

Mrs. Wallace was treated "no different from anyone else," Brannon said.

Coffee County sheriff's deputies returned Mrs. Wallace to her family's home town of Elba, 15 miles northeast of Opp in south Alabama. Upon Mrs. Wallace return, she was admitted to Elba General Hospital, said her uncle, former Gov. James E. "Big Jim" Folsom.

"All I know is she was in the hospital and she's out now," Folsom said in a telephone interview from his home in Cullman.

"She's just high strung, like a lot of folks, a lot of politicians. She had a nervous spell, that's all. She's all right now," he said.

Family members declined to say where Mrs. Wallace is staying, but a relative said she may have gone to Winter Haven, Fla. Mrs. Wallace, who divides her time between Montgomery and Winter Haven, could not be reached for comment.

Charles Pearce of Elba, who reported his pickup truck stolen about noon Saturday, declined comment on the episode.

Life In Cambodia Easier But Dissent Is Evident

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Not long ago, the weeping, starving child symbolized Cambodia. Now Cambodia boasts a baby boom, an outburst of village festivals and some of the best French bread east of Paris.

The revival of a people some feared were headed for extinction is due largely to one of the biggest international aid operations ever mounted, backbreaking work by the country's farmers and Cambodia's fertile countryside.

But beneath these improvements, the society is still deeply scarred. Violence continues, and the potential for serious internal dissent appears to exist.

The central government, backed by the Vietnamese army, is battling the guerrillas of the ousted Khmer Rouge Communist regime and several small anti-Communist rebel groups. Many Cambodians say they fear the new regime, like the Khmer Rouge, is also bent on imposing a Marxist-Leninist system and that repression will return.

"Post crisis but still fragile," is a frequent description of Cambodia today by international aid agencies which in 1979 rushed in to deal with famine and disease in a population drastically reduced by war and the Khmer Rouge's executions.

Phnom Penh, a ghostly city under the Khmer Rouge who seized it in 1975 and lost it to Vietnamese invaders in early 1979, is today a bustling capital of some half a million people. It is also a filthy place where water is short and the antiquated electricity plant fails, bringing havoc to factories and hospital operating rooms. Health Ministry officials say they fear a cholera outbreak if something is not done about sanitation.

Some repair and construction is beginning in the provinces, but the countryside remains a tragic panorama of razed villages, gutted temples, shell-scarred buildings and barely passable roads.

The Health Ministry says malnutrition is substantially down among children, but a Red Cross official says that in many provincial areas the lack of medical care and transportation means certain death for the seriously ill or wounded. The eastern province of Prey Veng has only one doctor and one ambulance for 662,000 people.

People talk about the horrors of the Khmer Rouge, recite the names of relatives killed and often complain of "not being the same in the head as before." The current Communist government claims that 3 million to 4 million people perished during 1975-78. Some observers believe that number is exaggerated, but they agree that the population is sharply reduced, especially among males.

However, a baby boom is under way. The International Red Cross estimates that Cambodia's birth rate is now up to 5 percent, one of the highest in the world. And as soon as people scrape together enough money, they seem to throw a party or hold a festival, things denied them in the past.

The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization estimates there will be a food deficit of 222,500 tons this year which will have to be met by outside aid, but it is hoped that by 1982 the country will be well on its way to food self-sufficiency.

The U.N. Children's Fund, commonly known as UNICEF and the leading U.N. agency in Cambodia, expects to wind down its large-scale operations by the end of the year, and the International Red Cross will be pulling out by the middle of the year. This will end what they describe as the largest international relief effort since those that followed World War II.

"The donors are perfectly willing to save lives, but they don't want to consolidate the Phnom Penh regime politically," explains UNICEF's chief in Phnom Penh, John Kelly, echoing a mood among many non-Communist donors. The government of President Heng Samrin is recognized chiefly by Soviet-bloc countries.

After four years of the tightest control, the economy has been given a very long leash by the new Communist regime. Farmers are free to sell their produce on the open market. Phnom Penh abounds with small restaurants, tailor shops, bakeries producing excellent French bread and even English-language tutoring services. Middlemen sell produce from the provinces. Black market traders haul everything from beer to motorcycles from neighboring Thailand and Vietnam.

Although the regime says its aims eventually at some form of socialism, it has been unable or unwilling so far to organize a centrally planned economy.

The government pays its employees an average of 90 to 105 riels ($22 to $26) a month; a pair of trousers on the free market costs 120 riels ($30) and a kilo (2.2 pounds) of pork costs 19 riels ($4.75). One civil servant who is paid 100 riels a month said her sister can take in that much in three days by buying chickens in the suburbs and selling them in Phnom Penh.

In contrast to this economic laissez faire, the influence of the still semi-secret Communist Party is being felt as it penetrates to the grass roots.

The makeup of the party is to be unveiled after national legislative elections scheduled for June. Some foreign aid officials say the building of the party has been accompanied by a tougher political line, more indoctrination and sterner directives to the people to minimize contacts with non-Communist foreigners.

There is no evidence of a revival of the mass arrests, widespread terror and wholesale killing carried out by the Khmer Rouge regime. However, some Cambodians and foreign officials tell of individuals arrested for political reasons and not returning from detention.

Despite the apparent unpopularity of Heng Samrin's regime among some segments of the population and the traditional animosity of Cambodians toward the Vietnamese, it is unlikely that many people are ready to support the Khmer Rouge guerrillas.

The guerrillas are concentrated in northwestern Cambodia and along the Thai border, continuing their war against the Phnom Penh government and the estimated 200,000 Vietnamese troops propping it up. Reports from international aid agencies, refugees in Thailand and other sources indicate they have made some gains.

But Cambodians who vehemently criticize the current government and denounce the Vietnamese also say they want Hanoi's troops to remain for a time to shield them from the Khmer Rouge.

TALES OF THE RATS — Fuo Ye Xia, an itinerant rat killer, sells packets of home-brewed poison in a free market in the capital of Hebei Province. Satisfied customers return the tails of rats, and Fuo proudly displays a mountain of them said to contain 60,000 rodent tails. (AP Laserphoto)

Thousands Hear Tree 'Weeping'

NEEDHAM, Ala. (AP) — A weeping willow it's not, but thousands of people have been flocking to a rural site near Butler in southwest Alabama to listen to a crying tree.

Choctaw County deputy Kenneth Crenshaw says the narrow dirt road leading to the Linnie Jenkins home has been jammed with cars ever since the family first heard the noise — reportedly similar to a whimpering puppy — emanating from the huge pecan tree on April 12.

There's no official explanation for the crying noise as yet, although Jenkins says a forester told him it could be gases seeping from inside the tree.

A hole has been dug at the base of the tree and, for a 50-cent fee, the curious can put an ear to a pipe to listen to the tree do its stuff.

Village Has Its Shelling Every Night

By KATHY WILLENS
Associated Press Writer
CINQUERA, El Salvador
(AP) — The Cruz Verde ambulance rolled into Cinquera at dusk. Women and dirty-faced barefoot children surrounded it.

It was a 15-year-old Chevrolet station wagon, well worn and with a green cross painted on the sides. The villagers knew it well and rushed to greet the teen-age volunteers, clad in jump suits, as they got out.

The paramedics of the Green Cross, or Cruz Verde, a social service group, are the only regular visitors to Cinquera, where for four months leftist guerrillas have been battling government soldiers in the civil war wracking the little Central American country.

The Green Cross boys bring food as well as medicine — bags of cornmeal for tortillas, sugar and a few 20-pound sacks of frijole beans. It isn't much, but it's enough to feed the villagers until the next Cruz Verde ambulance comes a week later.

Getting to Cinquera, in the mountains 40 miles northeast of San Salvador, is an ordeal. The first 36 miles are easy. The last four can be deadly.

The guerrillas have been holding positions since December on the scenic mountains that form a natural bowl around the village. The villagers call them the Fuerzas Subversivas, or Subversive Forces. The U.S.-backed government and the military call them that, too.

As the road nears the village, there are more and more obstacles due to the war: barricades made out of rocks, felled trees and downed electric poles, trenches 6 feet deep and 15 feet wide, even a minefield.

Peasants tilling the fields fled into the village when the fighting started, swelling the population from 200 to more than 1,000. Some have been taken in by Cinquera's 30 families. Others sleep on the steps of the church.

In the early evening, the Cinquerenos prepare for the nightly gun battle. At the Green Cross clinic, the eight paramedics lie down around the room to get a little sleep, some on counters, others on the doctor's table.

At 9 p.m., the candle — the clinic's only light — is blown out.

Minutes later, the firing begins. The first shots are loud, penetrating, from World War II German Mauser rifles, fired by local vigilantes manning barricades at the entrance to the village.

The shots are answered by automatic weapons from afar, the G-3's made in West Germany for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and other assault rifles, the guerrillas' favorite weapon.

The G-3 is the Salvadoran army's standard weapon. The guerrillas capture them, buy them, or, as the U.S. government claims, get them from Cuba via Nicaragua.

The old Mausers boom again, closer and much louder. The clinic's brick walls shake a little. The automatic weapons answer immediately, and the stray shooting explodes into a firefight.

People dive to the hard-earth floor of the clinic. The bullets seem to be whizzing overhead.

"Silencio!" a woman shouts in the dark. She is obeyed instantly. But outside, the dogs continue barking and howling. In the distance, a cow moos.

The shooting stops, and tension eases in the clinic. There are muffled, nervous laughs and sighs. People lying on the dirt floor with their hands clasped to their ears slowly unclasp them.

No one in the village has been wounded. There is no word whether any of the guerrillas have been hit.

The shooting starts up again later and continues sporadically all night. A typical evening, it seems.

Partial U.S. Refunds Set

NEW YORK (AP) — The more than 9,000 Americans who decided before March 1, 1980, to cancel their tours to the boycotted 1980 Moscow Olympics will get back about 85 percent of their money.

A federal judge has approved a settlement that provides initial refunds, less $195 and attorneys' fees, or about 85 percent for Americans who canceled their trips before March 1. Those who canceled after March 1, 1980, will get initial refunds of about 63 percent, less $195 and attorneys' fees.

The money is to be distributed from a fund set up with the court by the Russian Travel Bureau Inc. (RTB), which had exclusive rights to book the tours. RTB originally turned over $9.1 million in tour deposits but the amount grew to almost $10.4 million with interest and an additional $500,000 realized from 963 other Americans who chose to attend the Games.

Although the Soviet Union will keep about $7.2 million forwarded by the travel agency, that nation has agreed to set aside $1.8 million of the amount as "credits" to the American agency over five years.

U.S. District Judge Lawrence W. Pierce, who approved the settlements, also approved payment of about $475,000 for attorneys' fees, expenses and distribution costs.

The United States boycotted the Games after Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan at the end of 1979.

SHEPHERD — Bill McCullough holds a lamb on the Rutherford County farm where he and his wife Nancy are raising sheep. (AP Laserphoto)

Small Farmer Claims Sheep A Good Crop

FOREST CITY, N.C. (AP) — The scene, as old as recorded history, arouses some peaceful, primeval part of the spirit. A flock of sheep grazes on the side of a gentle green slope, the musical sound of the bells they wear drifting across the quiet spring morning.

A scene from a distant state or some foreign land or perhaps from yesteryear? No. A scene from the Golden Valley farm of Bill and Nancy McCullough.

The McCulloughs are the only serious sheep farmers in Rutherford County (there are a few others in Cleveland County), but they believe sheep may be making a comeback as a farm animal in these parts.

"They fit so well into a small farmer homestead situation — even a backyard farm," says Bill. "An acre of land can support four to five units (a unit is a mother and her offspring) if you rotate properly.... The sheep business in Virginia is just booming, but it hasn't caught on anything like that in North Carolina yet."

Bill became interested in sheep farming while he was a student at Washington and Lee University. One of his professors, disgusted with academia, bought a farm and began raising sheep.

"I talked to him about what he was doing and he seemed pretty positive about it. Since then he's become one of the premier breeders in Virginia."

"The other thing that made us decide on sheep was this land. We have 28 acres, eight of it in pasture. It's hilly and no good for crops and it was badly eroded so it was no good for cattle. Sheep are definitely the most efficient utilizers of forage. They will eat anything."

The McCulloughs say they have found that their pastures have actually improved during the three years they have had sheep. They have used proper fertilization with soil testing, proper rotation and adequate supplements, but also point out that sheep manure is very rich and they "don't leave big piles in one place — it's pelleted so it is spread more evenly."

Bill admits that sheep take more management than cattle, but notes that you can also turn your money over faster with them than with cattle.

"You can have lambs to market before a calf is born if you breed them at the same time. I think the average is a cow on an acre of land. You can put five sheep on an acre."

McCullough also pointed out that half or more of the sheep will have twins and that the lambs will be ready for market in four months.

"Then you have the wool to sell later in the year," he said.

McCullough calculates that the gross return a small commercial sheep farmer can expect per acre per year, figuring four sheep and six lambs an acre, is $480 for the lambs and $40 for the wool.

The McCulloughs already owned their land in Rutherford County when they were married. They moved here immediately afterward. Their dream, says Nancy, was "to make the farm pay for itself and bring in some money for us."

"We see ourselves as small family farmers. My interest is in being productive, putting more into the food chain than we use," said Bill.

They kept bees and gardenized for the first four years.

"It took us that long to make up our minds, get our pastures developed and get the capital together" to introduce the sheep, Nancy explained.

Three years ago they bought their first 10 sheep, which had to be shipped by rail from Texas.

"They arrived a month early and we didn't even have our fence up yet. I had to go to Graham to pick them up, and they were nothing but a bag of bones. I thought, 'What have I done?'"

"And they were just wild. They had been out on the open range in Texas and probably the first time they had seen people was when they were sold," Bill laughed.

They're no longer wild. The sheep crowd around McCullough now when he enters the pasture to feed them. Since the arrival of those first 10 animals the McCulloughs have been learning how to manage a sheep farm and constantly improving their herd.

They now have pure-bred Columbias, pure-bred Suffolks, and a western cross-breed that is three-fourths Suffolk and one-fourth Rambouillet. Eventually they hope to produce nothing but breeding stock.

"The hardest thing has been learning what's involved in good management," said Bill. "There are so many things involved — pre-vaccinations for lambs, how to deal with foot problems, increasing the level of nutrition just before breeding, developing an eye for the sheep — Nancy has gotten real good at that."

Population Control Not For Africa

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Population control has become a controversial issue in Africa, the world's fastest growing continent.

It is particularly acute in Kenya, which has achieved the distinction of having the world's highest population growth rate — just over 4 percent. By comparison, the U.S. growth rate is 0.7 percent.

While the trend in developed Western countries is to have very small families, African women are among the world's most prolific. In 1980, the average Kenyan mother had eight children and a recent survey found that 68 percent wanted even bigger families.

Throughout Africa, family-planning experts said similar surveys of ideal family size have also favored large families — with 61 to 100 percent of the women questioned saying they wanted five or more children. Finding out why African women want such big families and then figuring out what to do about it "is the challenge for all of us in family planning," said Freeman Pollard, Africa regional director of Family Planning International Assistance.

"The feeling that a woman's value is related to her fertility is still very, very important, especially in rural areas," said Pollard. "Death rates are dropping, but mothers still see their children die from malaria and other diseases. What message do you tell her? And how viable is the argument that women need children to support them in their old age?"

The International Planned Parenthood Federation recently concluded that because of the world's highest birth rates, falling death rates and the lowest use of contraceptives, "Africa is likely to remain the world's fastest growing continent for several decades to come."

The London-based voluntary organization also predicted that Nigeria — the most populous country in Africa — Malawi and Botswana may soon follow Kenya in passing the 3.5 percent growth rate per year.

Pollard, whose organization is the international division of Planned Parenthood Federation of America, said Kenya's growth rate might be the highest simply because of better statistics.

"Most African countries don't have demographers," he explained. "Nigeria guesses. In some cases, it's not politically wise to publicize such figures because of tribal reasons. The Kikuyus want more Luos and so on, and such figures could be seen as an attempt to wipe out one tribe. Zimbabwe did conduct a better census and found it's growth rate was higher than it had estimated."

Recently, the U.N. Food and Agricultural Organization estimated that one out of three African children dies of hunger before he reaches school age. It also said 60 percent of Africa's population isn't getting enough to eat now. Yet, the latest U.N. projections say the population of sub-Saharan Africa will rise from 362 million in 1980 to 646 million by the end of the century.

Justin Odulana, who has surveyed family-welfare laws in Africa for the Planned Parenthood Federation, said abortion is illegal everywhere on the continent except Zambia, Tunisia and Liberia.

Despite the high incidence of teen-age pregnancy, he added, many countries such as Madagascar and Tanzania make family planning services available only to married couples — or like Sierra Leone require consent from husbands or parents.

In some French-speaking countries such as Chad or Equatorial Guinea, promotion of family planning is illegal, Odulana said.

Still, some experts say they believe the concept of planning a family and spacing children is beginning to catch on.

The Talking Elevator Is A Beginning

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Talking elevators guide office workers through the ups and downs of life in the Westinghouse Electric Corp. headquarters.

But the designers of the smooth-voiced marvels say the elevators actually are opening doors on a quickly approaching age when computers and machines will talk with the people who operate them.

"This is one of the first commercial applications of voice synthesis on the market," says Alan Mandel, one of the engineers who helped create the bank of elevators with courteous electronic voices.

"There are a number of messages, like, 'Please let the doors close,' if you hold them open too long," he says. "The system is smart enough that if someone walks on and doesn't push a button for a floor, it says, 'Please select your floor,' and after you do it says, 'Thank you.'"

Although Westinghouse believes its MicroPhonic-60 system will assist the blind and the absent-minded, Mandel doesn't pretend the world has been eagerly awaiting the talking elevator.

Instead, he says the invention is important for another reason.

"This whole speech technology is about to take off," Mandel says in a burst of enthusiasm. "Whatever you can dream in a few years will become a reality."

"One day a voice from the dashboard of your car is going to tell you when your oil is low or when your alternator is going bad. Your oven is going to tell you when dinner is done, when to baste the turkey and how to make your grandmother's favorite recipe," he says. "And it's all possible because of the microprocessor."

Microprocessors, the mint-sized wafers of silicon compounds, coolly perform the electronic functions that once required a roomful of hot vacuum tubes.

Capable of replacing tens of thousands of transistors, microprocessors already have helped reduce the size and price of calculators and computers, boost the fuel efficiency of some auto engines, and more recently, re-create sound.

For now, though, commercial products featuring voice synthesizers are limited to a few items — the Westinghouse elevator, a talking box that helps children learn to spell, and a talking alarm clock that gets more insistent the longer its master sleeps.

Voice synthesizers are not to be confused with recordings, which for years have provided entertainment and added a touch of sophistication to dolls, robots, amusement hall games and even elevators.

"We've had a talking elevator for years, but they're taped systems," says Jim Davis, spokesman for Schindler-Haughton, one of several companies tied as the third-leading elevator-makers behind industry leaders Otis and Westinghouse.

"In department stores, the tape would tell you what's on that floor, and there'd be music and a little advertising thrown in," he says.

Conventional voice recordings store sound as a groove in a vinyl disk or as a magnetic pattern on plastic tape. The sound is reproduced mechanically by spinning the disk under a phonograph needle or pulling the tape past electronic tape heads.

But electronic voice reproduction involves no moving parts and, perhaps more importantly, holds the promise of one day enabling computers to construct sentences after being "taught" a vocabulary. That is something record or tape collections will never do.

"People will see ever-more-friendly computers," Mandel predicts.

"When it was first put in, people used to talk back to it," Mandel says of the Westinghouse system.

"Some of the men here said they'd prefer a soft, sexy voice. But our human services people said people would pay more attention to the emergency messages if it's a male's voice talking," he says.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE for BREAKFAST?

Every schoolchild knows that when the Pilgrims arrived in the New World, the Indians gave them corn to survive. But not many people know that they also provided strawberries, and that the strawberries meant survival, too. Many colonists suffered from Scurvy (vitamin C deficiency) after the long voyage. Strawberries, with a full day's vitamin C to a cup, quickly dealt with this deadly disease. Today, strawberries remain a good-nutrition sweet. Found at KROGER stores now, the bright, plump berries are examples of the good taste of good nutrition. Roger Williams, the pious founder of Rhode Island, wrote in 1643 that, "This berry is the wonder of all fruits... in these parts." And indeed, the strawberry is richer in nutrients than most fruits—for we eat the tiny seeds as we eat the fruit. The seeds help make the berries good sources of such hard-to-get nutrients as iron and folic acid (a B vitamin), along with much fiber—about as much as a third of a cup of pure bran. Strawberry nutrition can give variety to family nutrition. Make breakfast shortcake—with French toast or waffle, with berries (far fewer calories than syrup, even if you add whipped topping). Make a nutritious gelatin salad, or get good nutrition from dessert, by dipping berries in chocolate and nuts. KROGER shows you how, with tips and recipes, available free at our store.
