Those Who Owe Gain Unconditional Release

Bankruptcy: Some Say Debtors Are Abusing Law

(Part One Of A Two-Part Series)

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Bankruptcy. It grants the debtor an unconditional release from his obligations.

"We think of it as when a person's liabilities exceed their assets," Greenville attorney Mack Howard explained last week. And few people would argue with the statement that poor money management is behind almost every bankruptcy filing.

It's the United State's answer to the old English debtor's prison and whipping post; a constitutional right which most lending institutions feel is now too widely used.

Howard, who serves as a court-appointed trustee in Chapter 13 cases ("the wage earner plan," of bankruptcy as he describes it), suggested the 1978 Bankruptcy Act, the first major revision of the Federal law in 40 years and a "profound revision, if you will," has led to more bankruptcy filings because it is more lenient than the 1938 act that it replaced.

Explaining the three basic types of bankruptcy, Howard said that under Chapter 7, or, "straight bankruptcy," individual or business assets are liquidated and distributed to creditors according to certain priorities.

The major impact of the 1978 law on straight bankruptcy, according to Howard, was the, "liberalization of the exceptions."

The exemptions, he listed, include: $7,500 in value of real or personal property the debtor uses as a residence; $1,200 equity in one motor vehicle; $200 per article of household goods and personal effects; $500 in jewelry; $400 (plus any unused amount under the real or personal property exemption) in any property; $750 in any professional tools or books; any unmatured life insurance contract; $4,000 in cash surrender value of any unmatured life insurance contract owned by the debtor; Social Security, veterans' or disability benefits, alimony and stock bonus, pension and profit sharing plan benefits to the extent necessary for the support of the debtor and any dependents; and other items.

The exceptions, according to Howard, are, "per person," meaning that in the case of a husband and wife, the exemptions double in value. Under the 1938 act, the exemptions included $500 in personal property and a $1,000 homestead exemption.

"Potentially, 50 percent of the people in Pitt County could file bankruptcy and keep everything they've got," under Chapter 7 of the 1978 law, Howard said. "The real social issue is, are the laws too liberal now, particularly in the exeptions," Howard questioned.

"The complex one," is how Howard described, "the reorganization thing," or Chapter 11. "The large farming operation is typical," he suggested, "where a man is sitting on $1.5 million in land and owes $1 million."

Having a cash flow problem, Howard said the businessman or farmer, "files a Chapter 11, (which) stays any judgments or foreclosures," then files a plan to pay his creditors back.

"Big numbers...complicated law," are involved in Chapter 11 filings, Howard suggested, adding that the creditors must vote on the debtor's plan.

Chapter 13, "Adjustment of Debts of an Individual with Regular Income," or as he describes it, "'the wage earners' plan, is for the guy with four children, whose take-home pay is $700 a month," according to Howard.

"His rent or payment on his house trailer is $150, he needs $150 for food, $100 for gas, $50 for utilities...he needs $500 to exist. That leaves $200.

"His contractural payments...$75 for furniture, doctor's bills, $30 to Sears'...total $300." Filing bankruptcy under Chapter 13, "he keeps his $500 and then pays the other $200 in to a trustee, who in turn distributes the money to the creditors."

Howard noted that 1,704 Chapter 13 cases, 1,217 straights, and 49 Chapter 11s, were filed in North Carolina's Eastern District in 1980, the first full year after the 1978 act became effective. Nationwide, bankruptcy filings in 1980 increased 80.4 percent over 1979. "It's now reached a plateau...sort of leveled off."

"Why are so many being filed? It's a combination of things. The economy has put people in a heavier pinch than before...allowing lawyers to advertise," and, "a lot of education in the legal community as to the availability of bankruptcy," Howard suggested.

What does it cost to file bankruptcy? According to Howard, lawyers charge an average of $350 for a Chapter 7, $375 for a Chapter 13, and from $1,000 to $10,000 or more for a Chapter 11 case.

Claims To Be Ex-Monk

French Police Overcome Hijacker Of Irish Plane

LE TOUQUET, France (AP) — Police stormed a hijacked Irish jetliner with more than 100 people aboard Saturday night and overpowered a man claiming to be a defrocked Trappist monk and demanding publication of a religious manifesto. The freed captives, unharmed, flew back to London where the eight-hour drama began.

No shots were fired as police rushed the aircraft while the hijacker, identified as Laurence James Downey, a middle-aged Australian, was reading a telegram from Irish newspaper editors saying they would publish the manifesto.

Downey had said he would not free his hostages until the international press, and specifically Irish newspapers, agreed to print the nine-page statement handed to authorities earlier through a cockpit window.

The statement included a demand for release by the Vatican of "The Third Secret of Fatima," a message said to have been given by the Virgin Mary to three children in Portugal during apparitions 64 years ago.

Irish Transport Minister Albert Reynolds, who had flown here with 34 other Irish officials aboard a second plane an hour before the police moved in, told reporters Downey had been tricked by being told a door on the plane had to be opened to remove an ill woman.

"He agreed, showing he wasn't a very experienced hijacker," Reynolds said. He said Downey had lived in Dublin since 1978 and had run "an unsuccessful language school and written regularly to the newspapers."

Police in the anti-terrorist squad, who surrounded the aircraft as darkness fell, said they boarded the plane through emergency exits over the windows and the rear doors. They said they overpowered Downey without a fight.

Airport officials said Downey had doused himself with gasoline and threatened to set himself afire, and that moments before the assault he complained of feeling ill.

The freed passengers and crew were served food at the airport restaurant and then then reboarded the green and white Aer Lingus Boeing 737 for the flight to London.

Downey hijacked the craft as it approached London's Heathrow Airport on a regularly scheduled flight from Dublin.

The aircraft landed at this small airport near the English Channel and four hours later five women and six children were freed, leaving 97 passengers and five crew aboard.

Downey, a short, stocky man wearing a blue checked lumberjack shirt and gray trousers, was questioned at the airport for about 20 minutes before being driven away in a police van. He appeared calm and left smoking a cigarette and talking to police. It had been feared he was armed with a bomb.

Officials said he was being held at police headquarters in Le Touquet.

Along with publication of the manifesto, Downey demanded refueling of the aircraft here and a flight to Tehran, Iran, officials said. French authorities refused to refuel the plane and Iran said it would not allow the jet to land.

Green Beret Leader Encourages Scouts To Work For Freedom

By SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writer

"Freedom and individuality is something everybody's got to work for the rest of their life ... the price of freedom doesn't come cheap," Green Beret commandant Ola Mize told Boy Scouts attending a three-day camporee at Camp Herbert Bonner North near Washington Saturday.

According to retired Col. John H. Brookshire over 3,000 scouts attended the camporee. Brookshire is active in scouting in the Alpine District of Europe and introduced Mize to the Scouts.

Mize, who heads the Special Forces School at Fort Bragg, emphasized that he strongly believes in this country and the need to develop a honest, hard working group of persons to carry out defense and hopes that the Reagan administration will turn the country around.

Mize, who is retiring from 32 years service with the Special Forces later this month spoke on leadership, professionalism and integrity. Mize said he felt that integrity is something that is missing a lot in these times.

"It does not mean the same thing to the younger generation as it did when we were young," Mize said.

He also spoke on training offered to candidates for the Green Beret, including courses in scuba, qualifications, sniper shooting and military police.

During the camporee Scouts set up tents and worked on such skills as merit badges, field cooking, sanitation, map reading, knot tying and building fires without the aid of matches. Scouts reaching the highest honor in scouting, the Eagle Award, were presented the appropriate honors by Mize in ceremonies Saturday night.

Parents of the Scouts also attended the camporee, which was directed by Joe Goodson with the assistance of George Williams, director of stage set-up.

East Carolina To Award First Doctorates Friday

ECU News Bureau

Nearly 3,000 students, including the 28 members of the "milestone" charter class of the state's newest school of medicine, will be awarded degrees at East Carolina University's 72nd commencement next Friday.

Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. will be the commencement speaker at exercises scheduled Friday morning in Ficklen Stadium. Hunt was beginning his first term as governor when the first class of the four-year ECU School of Medicine was enrolled in August 1977 and has given his support to the school's development and growth.

The doctor of medicine degrees which are to be conferred will be the first doctoral degrees awarded in East Carolina's 74-year history. In addition to the M.D. degrees, several doctoral programs have now been established in the basic sciences disciplines within the ECU School of Medicine.

A total of 2,985 students, including 2,063 undergraduates and 894 receiving other graduate degrees, are expected to receive degrees.

A band concert beginning at 9 a.m. will open the commencement program, to which the public is invited. Following the traditional academic procession into the stadium and seating of the cap-and-gowned graduates, the national anthem and invocation, ECU Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer will introduce the governor.

Those to receive degrees will be presented by Dr. Robert H. Maier, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs, and Dr. William Laupus, dean of the School of Medicine. Brewer will confer degrees on behalf of the university and its board of trustees.

Riots Hit Four Cities

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Rioters battled police in Belfast, Londonderry, Dublin and Liverpool Saturday as jailed Irish Republican Army guerrilla Bobby Sands sank closer to death in the 63rd day of his hunger strike.

Young men hurled firebombs and acid at police in Roman Catholic sections of West Belfast and Londonderry, and security forces responded with plastic bullets.

Sands' supporters also clashed with officers of the mostly Protestant Royal Ulster Constabulary outside the Protestant cathedral in Belfast, where Protestants were holding a labor rally.

The constables tore down a banner supporting Sands and arrested several protesters — carrying one off by the arms and legs.

In the neighboring Irish Republic, 200 of Sands' sympathizers surged down the main thoroughfare of Dublin, O'Connell Street, and battled club-wielding police.

No 'Free Lunch' Provisions

Lunch Sales Questioned

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Fund-raising barbecue lunches sold once a year through Pitt County high schools border on being illegal and definitely "violate the intent" of the law providing free lunches to eligible students, a state child nutrition official says.

Barbecue sales last week at North Pitt and at Ayden-Grifton made no provision for students who have qualified for free lunches. In each case, students brought food, went home for lunch or purchased the barbecue. Milk was provided free.

Ann Smith, acting director of the child nutrition division of the state Department of Public Instruction, said such programs were "clearly in violation of the intent of the law" although they were not specifically prohibited by existing regulations.

"The regulations say lunches will be provided for those students qualifying for free lunches. I know of no exceptions," Mrs. Smith said.

"There should have been a meal available, not only for those who receive free lunches but those who pay for their lunches. There should have been an alternative (food) offered."

Ott Alford, superintendent of the county school system, said state officials were asked informally about the legality of the barbecue sales before they were begun in the late 1970s.

With an affirmative response in mind, Alford said, the county school board authorized schools to hold such sales once a year. Any money raised from the sales goes into the sponsoring school's activities, including academic and athletic programs.

The barbecue sale at Ayden-Grifton offered plates for $2, with beverages free if a certain number of plates were purchased by each classroom. No other food items were available at either Ayden-Grifton or North Pitt.

Similar sales are planned at other schools.

Alford defended the fund-raising efforts, saying they were not "an infringement upon the concept" of the free lunch program.

He also warned that proposed federal and state budget cuts could curtail the lunch program for all students, including those who pay.

Down the road, he said, "They are going to bring box lunches. That's what its coming to."

Atlanta Continues River Hunt, Buries Last Victim

ATLANTA (AP) — Volunteer searchers paddled along the Chattahoochee River and peered into inlets for clues that might lead to the killer Saturday as mourners buried a 21-year-old black man whose body was found in the river's murky waters.

The Jimmy Ray Payne, the latest victim in the string of 26 slayings of young blacks, was pulled from the Chattahoochee on Monday. Medical examiners said he had been asphyxiated.

Payne had "paid his dues" by serving time in prison, the Rev. Raleigh Rucker said in a eulogy.

"Life is designed where some folk don't even see anything good that we do," Rucker told 75 mourners at Mt. Patmos Baptist Church in suburban Decatur. "They'll go back 20 years and dig up all the things he ever did." Payne had an extensive criminal record.

Payne was buried in Kennedy Memorial Gardens, a small cemetery where seven other victims were buried.

Meanwhile, members of a local canoe club piloted five boats down a 28-mile section of the river Saturday, while 50 stick-toting searchers organized by the United Youth Adult Conference poked along the banks and surrounding roads.

Eight victims have been pulled from area rivers since the series of slayings began in July 1979, five from the Chattahoochee. Several of the victims were not reported missing until their bodies were found. A 10-year-old boy remains missing.

Search coordinator Roderick Smith told the volunteers Saturday to look for clothes and other clues, reminding them that many of the bodies were clad only in undershorts or were naked. Searchers were given lists of clothing worn by the Chattahoochee victims.

In four hours on the river, the canoeists found nothing but a black leather jacket. Timothy Hill, 13, whose body was found in the river March 30, was wearing a black leather jacket when last seen. Police officers at the scene said the jacket was turned over to the special task force formed to investigate the killings.

The search for suspects in the slayings is turning up many people who have a "morbid fascination" with the cases and are collecting newspaper stories about the crimes, an investigator said Saturday.

Southeastern police departments are frequently calling the task force to report that collections of newspaper articles about the crimes have been found during investigations of other cases, the investigator said.

Investigators were called to rural Catoosa County on Friday after two men were arrested with a cache of guns, disguises and "a stack of Atlanta Journals a foot-and-a-half thick. They all had a front page story on the discovery of one of the bodies in Atlanta," said Harold Groover, chief investigator of the Catoosa Sheriff's Department.

"We don't see any reason to connect these men to the Atlanta cases," Groover said after task force members investigated. "But they're still being looked at."

Groover said Georgia Bureau of Investigation agent Robbie Hamrick, a leader of the task force, told him similar reports are flooding in from all over the Southeast.

"Apparently they are saving the papers for whatever morbid reasons," Groover said. "They're beginning to find them all over the Southeast. A lot of them are racists."

Georgia Finishes Case

ATLANTA (AP) — The state of South Carolina will argue that disputed land along the Savannah River belongs to them, and not to the state of Georgia, when a lingering border war moves to a Columbia, S.C., courtroom next week.

Attorneys for Georgia concluded their case in federal court in Atlanta on Friday and Judge Walter B. Hoffman said the hearing would resume May 18 in Columbia, with South Carolina attorneys presenting their evidence.

Hoffman, of the U.S. District Court in Norfolk, Va., was appointed by the U.S. Supreme Court to preside over the case, which will decide exactly where the border between the states lies.

The dispute revolves around the course of the Savannah River, which was altered by dredging and damming by the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

Complaints End Phone Service

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. is ending its dial-a-story service in Nebraska because of public criticism and the low number of people using it.

People have complained to the state Public Service Commission that the dial-a-story and dial-Santa recordings attract calls from children with no concept of money.

In addition to the complaints, Doug Wiley, Bell's general manager for public services, said Friday that the children's story recordings, costing 20 cents a call, never became popular enough to be profitable.

Weather and sports recordings still will be available, he said.

Bankruptcy ...

What does it cost to file bankruptcy? According to Howard, lawyers charge an average of $350 for a Chapter 7, $375 for a Chapter 13, and from $1,000 to $10,000 or more for a Chapter 11 case.

What are the consequences of filing bankruptcy? "On the negative side," according to Howard, "there is the social stigma involved with bankruptcy...there is a certain stigma attached to it."

He noted that filing bankruptcy will be, "listed by the credit bureau and can stay there for seven years. Typically, a person who files has bad credit. It's (looked at as) a way of escaping obligations."

"On the positive said," Howard said, a Chapter 13 filing is, "rehabilitative," in that debtors generally spend three years (up to five years in some cases) under the plan, "can't create any other obligations without the premission of the trustee," and pay off most of their creditors.

Howard noted that under the wage earner plan, normally 100 percent of the secured creditors are paid in full, while more than 50 percent of the unsecured creditors receive their money. If a debtor successfully completes the plan outlined by the court, just as in Chapter 7 cases, debts not paid are discharged.

Howard noted that the Chapter 13 filing can also be used by small businesses, as well as individuals.

"What I find that happens," the attorney said, "a person will set up a business of some kind...start on a shoe string," and get in trouble through, "ineffective management."

The small businessman or individual, in filing for a Chapter 13, is saying, "I can't make it right now. I need help. They are the trying lot," Howard said, as opposed to those who file under Chapter 7. "Seventy-five to 80 percent of them (Chapter 13 cases) stick it through," Howard said.

Howard predicted that the filing of bankruptcy, will get worse before it gets better, because of the state of the economy.

As a trustee appointed by the court, Howard now has some 1,600 active Chapter 13 cases, and distributes over $2 million per year, with payments from debtors ranging from $70 to $1,000 per month. As trustee, Howared's job is to, "protect the debtor community and the business community," sort of, "a mini-judge."

Grifton Student Wins Scholarship

McDougald, the son of Mrs. Linda L. McDougald, will enter Mount Olive College in the fall as a freshman. He is a senior at Ayden-Grifton High School.

Students ranking in the top twenty percent of their graduating class qualify for faculty scholarships. The award is in an amount up to $750, payable $375 per academic year.

State House Schedules Vote On Revised Law

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After nearly two years, a compromise has been reached on a bill that would specify how much property people filing for bankruptcy can protect from creditors.

A bill approved by the state House Judiciary III Committee would remove North Carolina from what some critics have called the liberal protections of the federal bankruptcy code. The bill taking its place offers less protection than the federal code, but more than a measure proposed by the North Carolina Bar Association.

The bill is scheduled for a House vote Monday night.

Legal Services of North Carolina Inc., an organization that represents the poor, agreed to give up federal bankruptcy protection in exchange for increased state exemptions.

For example, if the state withdraws from the federal code, debtors no longer could protect up to $200 per household item, such as clothing and furniture — an open-ended feature of the federal law strongly opposed by creditors.

The state bill would protect up to $2,500 in household goods for the head of a family, plus $550 per dependent. And, like the federal code, it would let the debtor protect up to $7,500 in home equity.

However, where the federal code allows renters to add up to $7,500 to their personal property exemptions, this bill would allow only $2,500 additional to renters.

The bill would exempt $1,000 in automobile equity, compared with $1,200 in the federal code, and it would drop the federal protection of $750 in professional books and tools to $500.

The bill would not let a debtor exempt property bought within 90 days before declaring bankruptcy, a measure sought by businessmen to prevent people from buying items they don't intend to pay for. The federal code has no such provision.

"I don't think everyone is completely satisfied, because there are still people who want debtors' prisons and people who never want debts collected," said Rep. James F. Morgan, D-guilford. "This is somewhere in between, and I think it will pass."

Rose High's 'Li'l Abner' Is A Singing, Dancing Success

"Li'l Abner" opened at Rose High Friday night for three performances. The final performance is at 8 p.m. tonight. Tickets are available at the door prior to performance.

Every nation has one favorite fabled hero firmly entrenched in its kingdom of folklore. England has chivalrous Sir Lancelot; Spain, the bumbling wanderer Don Quixote; and China, a philosophical rogue, Tu Fu.

In the U.S., still a youth among the giants of nations, the matter of which larger-than-life character, fictional or real, will eventually inherit the crown of the prince of national heroes is yet to be decided. There's several likely candidates, legends such as Davy Crockett, Daniel Boone, Superman and Li'l Abner — covering the days of frontierhood right up to today's space age.

Of this quartet, the one surely out in front in terms of lovable innocence and puppy dog gentleness is Li'l Abner, a strapping mountain boy whose many manly virtues include an unquestioned love for his country, obedience to his strong-willed mammy, an appealing shyness when it comes to girls, and an abiding preference for leisure over work.

Some years ago playwrights Norman Panama and Melvin Frank, along with lyricist and composer Johnny Mercer and Gene de Paul, fashioned a lively bit of homespun Americana in a musical comedy, "Li'l Abner," based on cartoonist Al Capp's inhabitants of Dogpatch, U.S.A.

The Rose High School production of this invigorating musical is undeniably a big undertaking for an amateur group, but everybody involved has proved that the triple whammy challenge of words, music and dance is, to borrow a phrase from one of the songs in the play, "in the very best of hands" at Rose High School.

Director Betty Topper, choreographer Cheryl Mercer, and orchestral director Candace Dixon have performed feats of near magic in conjuring some exceptional performances from a large assemblage of about 75 mostly untrained, but obviously eager to learn-and-do young acting, singing, dancing and orchestral talent.

Despite a weak spot here and there, most notably in the speaking roles, Rose's "Li'l Abner" has abundant touches of professionalism that places it heads and shoulders above an average amateur production.

The Rose High "Li'l Abner" is strongest in the ensemble scenes, which, happily, constitute a big portion of the play.

Especially impresssive are the jubilant, intricate dance scenes, the rollicking foot stomping cadances of "Jubilation T. Cornpone" and "Rag Offen the Bush," and the leaping, vigorous, sometimes graceful chases interspersed with acrobatic sequences in the "Sadie Hawkins Day" Ballet.

Das Smith, a young dancer from East Carolina University joining the high school cast, gives a show stopping performance in his dazzling solo in "Cornpone."

Other principal dancers, each doing lots of inspiring legwork, are Karen Forehand, Jennifer Frink, Melody Hedges, Sarah Hester, Leanne Licko, Lori Little, Elizabeth Longino, and Wendy Walsh.

Ms. Mercer, proprietor of the Academy of Dance Arts in Greenville, deserves bouquets of gratitude for the vitality and precision of the show's dances, one of the play's chief pleasures.

Students assigned major roles in the large cast handle these assignments commendably. Stuart Ward, physically perfect as the super offspring of scrawny parents, is also effective as the shy bachelor who is nonethess aware of the stir his masculine charm creates among Dogpatch females.

Lovely Karen Wheeler as the beautous Daisy Mae gets across clearly the fact that she possesses brains in addition to her feminine curves; and Alison Keel, in the role of pipe-smoking, domineering Mammy Yokum, enchances her character's image with just the right touch of mountain nasal twang. (Alison would benefit from being made to look a little older).

Chip Little, as Marryin' Sam, the busiest man in town on Sadie Hawkins Day, got off to a breathless start but soon settled down to turn in a finely nuanced performance. Shaun Wallace is a happy choice for Pappy Yokum, the browbeaten little man who eventually glories in his chance to turn the tables and for once dominate Mammy Yokum, triumphantly shaking his finger and declaring "I has spoken."

All down the line in other major and minor roles, the "Li'l Abner" cast turns in capable performances — Tim Shank as the bullying General Bullmoose, particulary in his solo song, "Progress Is The Root of All Evil;" Jeff Jones as the conniving politician, Senator Jacks S. Phogbound; Ann Halevy as the sexy dumb chick, Appassionata von Climax; and Johnny Jackson, as Earthquake McGoon, Dogpatch's leading villian and rival for the hand of Daisy Mae.

Andrew Harris seemed at first a bit embarrassed by the brevity of his Lonesome Polecat costume and Eric Hause, Hairless Joe, was just about hidden by his luxurious beard, but they soon overcame these obstacles to add, along with Japser Dixon, Virgil Jones and Tom King as Romeo, Clem and Alf Scragg, fine vignettes of local color to the Dogpatch scene.

The orchestra ensemble under Candace Dixon's direction is another major factor in the strength of this production. Their playing is consistently crisp, upbeat and never once drowns out the singing.Winona Bakerman's costumes, the rag-tag ones for Dogpatch and the elegant dress for the Washington, D.C. scenes are aptly chosen.

One of the most remarkable things about the Rose High production of "Li'l Abner" is the excellence achieved despite some serious drawbacks. Due to woefully limited techical facilities at Rose High, it was necessary, for example, to have technicians crawl back and forth along the floor in front of performers, hand holding parabolic disks for sound. The light crew had to be placed among the audience in the bleachers, and the orchestra put off to the side with their backs to the audience.

These factors must certainly have taxed the patience and imagination of director Betty Topper and technical director Hubert Legget, but that they were able to triumph over these conditions is manifestly clear in the rousing cheers the audience gave everybody involved for another Rose High success story.

If anyone wants to know whether seeing "Li'l Abner" is worth enduring nearly three hours on hard, backless bleachers, the answer is a resounding "Yes."

FIVE OF THE PRINCIPALS . . . of the J. H. Rose High School production of "Li'l Abner" pose following Friday night's opening performance of the Dogpatch musical. At top is Karen Wheeler as Daisy Mae and Stuart Ward as Li'l Abner; at center are Shaun Wallace and Alison Keel as Pappy and Mammy Yokum, and seated front is Chip Little, Marryin' Sam. The tune and dance-filled comedy, based on Al Capp's cartoon characters, will have its final performance at 8 p.m. tonight in the Rose High gym, with tickets availble at the door.

May is a beautiful time of the year. It's a great time to enjoy the warm days and lovely colors of spring. It is also a good time to plant and care for your spring and summer garden.

After the blossoms have faded on your azaleas, you may want to brush away the faded blooms. This will give your azaleas a neater appearance. It is also a good time to do any necessary pruning on azaleas, before the buds are formed for next year flowers. Prune any dead or diseased branches, as well as the branches that have grown too leggy. Azaleas should not be shaped, but allowed to have a natural form.

With Mother's Day coming up, now is a good time to buy her a plant. One of the most popular Mother's Day gifts is a rose bush. We now have a good selection in many varieties. Remember that roses will need at least half a day of full sun in order to bloom and remain healthy. After you have chosen a location, decide whether you want a climbing rose or a tea rose. If you decide on a climber, you will need to install a trellis. When planting your rose bush, as with all plants, be sure to make the hole wider and deeper than the size of the container that it is in. Then mix plenty of peat moss into the backfill and fill in to the correct height. This will allow the roots plenty of room to spread out. After planting, be sure to water the plant in well.

Your rosebush will need fertilizing about once a month during the growing season. Since roses are susceptible to several diseases and insects, it is a good idea to start spraying them before the diseases and insects attack as a preventive measure. Funginex is one of the newer sprays on the market that will control most of the rose problems.

Nothing is more beautiful in a summer garden than roses. . Now is a good time to come to Belk Tyler Garden Shops and see our selections. We have everything you need for beautiful roses, including trellis, sprays, sprayers and fertilizer.

Tug Rescues Six People

MIAMI (AP) — Six people who took to a life raft after their 63-foot wood-hulled sportsfisherman began breaking up in high seas were rescued Saturday by a civilian tug that heard their distress call, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

The tug Ensign, bound for Philadelphia, was about three hours away when the captain of the Lucky L reported that his cabin cruiser was going down 115 miles east-northeast of Jacksonville, Fla., said spokesman Greg Robinson of Coast Guard district headquarters in Miami.

He said the Ensign planned to drop the people off in Charleston, S.C.

Robinson identified the owner-operator of the Lucky L as John E. Lind, of Fairfield, Conn., but said the vessel was home-ported in Wilmington, Del.

Robinson said the patrol plane reached the scene first, not long after the 9:30 a.m. EST distress call.

Democrats Start Climb Back

A party out of power has to marshal its forces to try to get back in control.

Now, it's the Democrats, though not totally out of power, who must begin rallying their forces in the face of stunning GOP advances in the 1980 elections.

Perhaps the climb back on the local level began here with a meeting of the Democratic Women of Pitt County last week.

Mrs. Betty McCain, an active Democrat, told the group that it should prepare for a "divine disturbance" in the 1982 elections. The party she said "may be a lame duck limping, but we're still squawking."

She commented on the financial war chest raised by the Republicans last year and cited Democratic efforts to improve its own finances. "Your own Betty Speir instituted the sustaining fund," she told the Pitt Democrats.

The Democrats are in full control of the State Legislature and the governor's office. However, the state's second U. S. Senate seat was lost in the 1980 election when Dr. John East defeated Robert Morgan. The state also went for President Reagan, including Pitt County.

It is a situation that the North Carolina Democrats have not faced since pre-depression days, and probably not in this century.

There are few Democrats, or Republicans for that matter, who won't extoll the virtues of the two-party system. Nevertheless being in power is considered far better than being out. North Carolina Democrats have lost a lot of ground in recent years. Now the first shots are being fired in the battle to turn things around.

Efforts From The Heart Are Needed

The Pitt County Community Schools Volunteer Appreciation Dinner was held last week.

"It is important that people share experiences and help one another instead of living on the 'me' concept," Charles Petty, executive director of the Governor's Office of Citizens Affairs, told the group. "You people will someday be thought of in high regard by those whose lives you have touched."

There's hardly an adult who doesn't recall the help he received as a youth from a Sunday School teacher, scout leader or other volunteer adult. Thus the volunteers of today are making a lasting impression on young people.

Too, if we have learned anything in the last two decades, it is that government can't hire enough people to do everything for the citizens.

Some efforts have to come from the heart.

VeteransDefendHoliday

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Organized Tar Heel veterans are fighting action in the General Action to revoke a mandatory Nov. 11 school holiday.

Until last year when the Veterans Day observance fell in midweek, citizens, and even some school administrators, were unaware of a recent state law requiring that the occasion be marked by a day off from school. Passed by the General Assembly in 1977, the holiday was put off one year because of calendar complications; then fell on weekends so no observance was required. In 1980, for the first time, schools closed to mark Veterans Day. Some schools remained open, but veteran organization leaders say they have notified officials in those districts that state law requires closing.

A proposal introduced by State Rep. Ralph Edwards of Guilford County would allow local schools to close any time during the week of November 11. Local and state school people like that, since they would prefer a holiday on Monday or Friday which would disrupt schedules less, save energy, and be easier to schedule.

But veterans don't like that idea. The Armistice Day rememberance is pegged to elevens: the 11th day of the 11th month at the 11th hour.

Says Steve Carver, a past commander of the American Legion and spokesman for a delegation lobbying for the hoiday, veterans want the event to be kept at that time, and not "just another long weekend".

Warning legislators that organized veterans represent not only hundreds of thousands of votes, but the memories of those who did not return from overseas battlefields, Carver insists the date be kept inflexible, and suggests that the Legislature might also consider passing a law requiring that the schools teach required courses in what Veterans Day means.

Another legislative proposal would make the observance voluntary, without requiring that it be held on a particular day or in a particular week.

Energy Costs

Besides lighting, heating, or cooling, there are many normal business operations which require considerable energy consumption. Some appliance manufacturers are now attaching labels to machinery which indicate how much power use is to be expected.

Specialized machinery such as copying machines, calculators, computers, printing presses and such are the topic of an energy audit recently completed by the North Carolina Department of Administration and published by the division of purchase and contract.

The "Formula Handbook for Energy Cost Evaluation" is now available so state and local government officials can best determine the most cost effective equipment.

Regional Jails

Faced with ever-rising construction, maintenance, and operating costs, a number of less populated counties are moving to regional jails rather than having one in every county.

The General Assembly authorized the first regional jail for Camden, Perquimans, and Pasquotank counties in 1971. Now, a measure allowing a regional jail for Bertie and Martin counties is near completion.

Some local officials now claim jail costs at $35 daily per prisoner when the cost of building a jail is included in operating costs; and the cost of a single jail cell has now skyrocketed to between $35,000 and $50,000.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Sec. Haig Courted Helms

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A hush-hush luncheon for two in the State Department's elegant dining room was quietly arranged for April 25 with Secretary of State Alexander Haig the host and Sen. Jesse Helms, his conservative watchdog, the only guest.

Haig has frequently talked on the phone with the Senate conservative leader, and occasionally in person. But the Saturday luncheon was the first chance Haig has had for an extended massaging of Helms to persuade him to accept the half-dozen appointments he has been opposing for almost three months.

Helms stresses repeatedly he is a strong Haig supporter, but his efforts to delay Senate confirmation of Haig's choices for top diplomatic jobs have converted that support into a declining asset. The luncheon was set up by Haig's congressional liaison chief, Richard Fairbank, in hopes that Haig might charm Helms into being more cooperative.

The Vice President's Brother

Vice President George Bush's older brother, Prescott Jr. shows signs of succumbing to pleas from Connecticut Republican leaders that he run against maverick liberal Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker in 1982, despite the desires of the vice president that he not make his first run for public office.

"I have neither discouraged him nor encouraged him," George, 56, said when we asked his opinion about 58-year-old Prescott's budding ambitions. But one of the vice president's key political agents has been passing the word that a run by Prescott would be embarrassing. Their father, the late Prescott Bush Sr., was a U.S. senator from Connecticut. Prescott Jr., a New York-based insurance executive, has lately become active in Connecticut Republican politics and is now the party's state finance chairman.

Connecticut Republican leaders fear that swashbuckling adventurer-journalist Robin Moore, author of "The Green Berets" and "The French Connection," will overwhelm the unpopular Weicker in the Republican primary but then lose in the general election. Consequently, they seek a credible conservative to take regular Republican votes from Moore. Their first choice: Pressie Bush.

Mondale Suits Up

Further strong indications that former Vice President Walter F. Mondale has started his 1984 campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination came on April 17 when Mondale hosted a very private breakfast in his office to lay out what his positions on the economy and foreign policy ought to be.

Although no great decisions were reached, the consensus of the former Carter administration officials was

YELLOW SPECKS

Some of us recall that when we were children we occasionally picked up pebbles containing little yellow specks which we thought were gold. We were very disappointed when we found out that they were not.

All through life we have our disillusioning experiences. But the worst of all is to seek for a whole lifetime after something which in the end we find is worthless. The derelict of Skid Row who lies motionless among the ash cans certainly never expected in the beginning that life would treat him this way. The girl who wanted to be popular and was willing to pay any price for popularity and who later found herself alone and unloved — she could never have believed in the beginning that afternoon and evening would be like this.

The world is full of children picking up pebbles. It takes almost a lifetime for some of them to learn that the yellow specks are not gold. — Elisha Douglass

Sunday Morning Notes

Ah, spring. In Greenville it means beauties soaking up the first-of-the-season sun rays to have that golden tan ready for the beaches.

Thge young ladies are everywhere . . . on the hill at Reade Circle, any available spot on campus, on the Town Common Park and on the lawns of most apartment complexes in the city.

It makes spring the most worthwhile season.

It wasn't always that way for coeds on campus, however. Some remember when female students were required to wear skirts for trips downtown. Even a walk to the tennis courts required a coat to cover the tennis shorts.

And there were those curfews . . . 10:30 on week nights and midnight on Saturdays.

There were even car checks at the campus gates to make certain some coed hadn't gone off riding without signing out.

There were demerits for rule violations, and a student could be "shipped" home for serious enough violation.

Sun bathing? It was allowed, but behind carefully fenced in areas around the women's dorms, safe from the prying eyes of males. Some of the fences are still there.

The rules were ludicrous, of course. The same carefully protected young ladies could head for the beaches on weekends, don their swim suits and do as they pleased.

If such stilted rules sound like the 1890s. . . well it wasn't that far back.

The time of "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley" would take you back to that era.

Unreasonable rules are made to be broken . . . and broken enough, they eventually disappear. If "Happy Days" seem that way, maybe the present days are even happier.

Other Editors Say The Metals Law

(Hickory Daily Record)

Evidence — burglary arrests and recovered stolen property — is piling up to vouch for the effectiveness of Hickory's ordinance regulating sales of secondhand precious metals.

While this evidence is not yet strong enough to be conclusive, there is reason for optimism that the ordinance regulating the sale of items containing gold, silver or platinum will put a permanent kink in the plans of burglars with designs on Hickory households.

Meanwhile the General Assembly continues to drag its collective feet on passage of legislation to provide a statewide law on secondhand metals sales similar to the ordinance in effect in Hickory. The Legislature needs to go ahead and pass such a law.

Some North Carolilna residents currently are not protected by a precious metals sales law because their municipal or county governing body decided not to enact one in deference to the General Assembly. In Catawba County, Conover is one municipality where city fathers decided to wait and see what the General Assembly will do rather than enact an ordinance that might not coincide with any state law. This is a noble gesture, but Conover residents lack protection of an ordinance in the hiatus.

If the legislators in Raleigh or city fathers in the various Unifour municipalities doubt the effectiveness of a metal sales law, they can take a look at some figures from the Hickory Police Department.

Since Hickory's ordinance took effect on January 5, city police have arrested six adults and four juveniles on breaking and entering and larceny charges. Additionally, $2,555 in property stolen from Hickory residences has been recovered.

"We are comfortable the ordinance is having some effect at least on recovery of some stolen property that's being sold to secondhand precious metals dealers and that has an effect on identifying and apprehending perpetrators of property crimes," Hickory Police Chief Floyd Lucas Jr. said.

The ordinance discourages disreputable dealers in secondhand metals from operating in the city, the chief explained, while it is conducive to cooperation between police and the reputable dealers.

A statewide regulation on the way business in secondhand precious metals is conducted can protect valuable articles that in some cases are priceless to their owners because they are heirlooms. The General Assembly should get busy and pass statewide regulations on the sale of precious metals.

A Diet In Lent Of Old

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — I have just discovered a new miracle diet: the old pre-Vatican II Lenten regulations.

It beats the Scarsdale diet, the Rockefeller diet with all that grapefruit and eggs and that new Beverly Hills regimen which is supposed to leave you sleeker than Egyptian salukis and faster than you can say polyunsaturated soybean oil.

The nicest thing about the old-fashioned Lent is that you don't have to eat granola, cottage cheese, yogurt or anything else tasting like wallpaper paste. No pills, no prescriptions, no jogging, no getting down on the living room floor and trying to put your foot behind your neck like a hashish-zonked health freak on the sidewalks of Katmandu.

On Ash Wednesday, behind locked bathroom doors, I grossed out at 192 pounds, my shameful most in over a decade. I could hardly see the scales for the suet.

Six and a half weeks later, on a glorious Easter Sunday morning, I tipped the scales at a feathery 178. I had rolled back a stone, as the British say: 14 pounds.

You may ask how I did it. No? Well, I'm going to tell you anyway.

Basically the old Lenten rules of fast and abstinence, as the nuns massaged them into our memory cells with blackboard erasers in my parochial school past, consisted of eating but one full meal on the weekdays of Lent, abstaining from meat on Wednesdays and Fridays and having a blast, an all-day banquet or whatever you pleased on Sunday, which was a day of rest from your mortifications.

Depending on when you took the big meal, you could have a modest breakfast of-

Deregulation Spurs Oil Search

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Oilmen have responded to the decontrol of oil prices with record drilling operations, but a Conoco executive says he worries there isn't enough determination, both in government and in the industry, to make deregulation stick.

"On the government side, there continues to be a plethora of laws, rules and regulations that regulators can invoke almost at will to short-circuit the intent of the decisions made at the top," says H.K. Bowden. "Particularly at some lower levels, there is the clear impression very little has changed."

On the industry side, he adds, there are a lot of people who have never known anything but controls during their careers.

"Controls have rewarded mediocrity and created vested interests," Bowden contends. "Our industry has lost some of its daring."

The return to free market competition will hit many of those people hard, says Bowden, who recently was selected as chairman of Conoco's marketing subsidiary in the United Kingddom.

"For some companies and some individuals, the impact will be painful. The inefficient will not survive," he says.

He notes a rash of refinery closings followed President Reagan's Jan. 28 executive order terminating oil price controls eight months ahead of schedule.

"They include not only small privately owned refineries which were offsprings of federal controls, but also older inefficient refineries of major companies," Bowden says. "But painful as it is, this rationalization of our industry needs to happen, needs to run its course, to ensure a strong, healthy industry to serve the need of the public efficiently."

However, he adds, he does not expect the inefficient to pass quietly.

"They will be working hard to protect themselves from competition while laying claims to the federal till," he says. "It is clear, therefore, decontrol will not be smooth sailing."

Obstacles will be many, he says.

"And I can just hear some government, industry, media and consuming sector talk about the 'good old days' of controls," Bowden says. "But those obstacles must be overcome because the free market environment is the only long-term hope to ensure the supplies of energy this nation needs to preserve its economic growth, its security and its position in the world."

Bowden says that although there is currently a surplus of gasoline and crude oil, the United States still has an energy crisis to solve.

"Our energy crisis is not one of ultimate availability, but one of lack of control of our national destiny," he says.

He says the United States has the energy resources to meet its requirements for many centuries, but the nation must "move ahead on a broad array of alternatives" and make every effort "to let all energy sources compete fully."

Cutting back on energy use also will help, Bowden says, and Americans, who use more energy per person than any other nation, have reduced demand over the last two years.

"But conservation is only a partial solution and if we are to unlock ourselves from foreign hand, we must look to more domestic production of oil and gas and to other fuels to quench our thirst for energy," Bowden says.

Turnaround InViewpoint

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Since July of last year there has been a major turnaround in the way the public perceives the two major political parties' relative ability to deal with the key issues of peace and prosperity.

The Democratic Party, which has virtually "owned" the prosperity issue since these Gallup measurements were initiated three decades ago, has relinquished the lead for the first time to the Republican Party, and, in fact, now trails by 13 percentage points, 41 percent for the Republicans to 28 percent for the Democrats.

The GOP, on the other hand, which has consistently been thought of by voters as the party of peace, has now fallen behind its Democratic rivals. The Democratic Party is considered by 39 percent of the public to be better for peace, with 26 percent naming the GOP.

Could Herald Realignment

The GOP's continued lead as the party of prosperity will depend in considerable measure upon the success of President Ronald Reagan's economic program in reducing inflation. (A recent Gallup analysis showed Reagan's handling of inflation to be far more important to the public than his perceived competence in other areas.)

If the Reagan administration's economic program proves effective the current GOP margin over the Democratic Party as the party of prosperity could be sustained. These gains, in fact, could lead to a major political realignment in this nation, which has been solidly Democratic since New Deal days. The extent of Democratic control in the U.S. over the last half century is seen in the fact that in only two years of this period have Republicans been in control of both the executive and legislative branches of government.

If the Republican gains on the economic issue are sustained, the current period could become a major political watershed ensure Republican domination of Congress. Between the Civil War and the Great Depression, the Republican Party was dominant in the minds of voters on key issues, including prosperity. Since the New Deal, however, the nation has been essentially Democratic.

Prosperity May Be Offset By Peace Issue

The Republican Party's strong showing as the party of prosperity, however, could be offset by the Democratic Party's almost as impressive gain as the party of peace.

The Democratic Party currently enjoys a wide margin over the GOP as the party seen by voters as better able to keep peace. In the previous survey, both parties were in a virtual tie, 32 percent for the Democrats and 30 percent for the Republicans. Throughout the 1950s and early 1960s the GOP held an advantage over the Democratic Party on this issue.

The Democrats took the lead in the mid-'60s but relinquished it later in the decade. The Democrats started to again challenge in the late 1970s.

The decline of the GOP as the party of peace may reflect public concern about the Reagan administration's "hawkish" stance. A recent Gallup survey showed as many as four voters in 10 expressing concern that Reagan "might get us into a shooting war."

Here are the questions, latest results and selected years from the trends:

"Which political party — the Republican Party or the Democratic Party — do you think will do a better job of keeping the country prosperous?"

"Which political party do you think would be more likely to keep the United States out of World War III — the Republican Party or the Democratic Party?"

that liberal-activist Fritz Mondale must move quickly from left to center. President Reagan's strong early leadership is clearly moving the country toward the right, Mondale's advisers told him, and there is no chance of returning to the old days when liberal Democrats ran on platforms proclaiming that bigger government is better government.

Among those present were former Treasury Assistant Secretary C. Fred Bergsten, former National Security Council economist Henry Owen, former White House aide Al Moses, former Mideast negotiator (and big businessman) Sol Linowitz and former Assistant Secretary of Commerce Frank Weil. All will play roles if, as expected, a Mondale campaign becomes a reality.

Not Sen. Stockman

Despite rumors circulating to the contrary, there is almost zero chance that budget director David Stockman will leave the Reagan administration next year to run against liberal Democratic Sen. Donald Riegle in Michigan.

Ex-Republican Riegle is considered highly vulnerable for re-election to a second term, and Michigan Republican leaders view Stockman as the strongest possible challenger. Accordingly, some have been spreading word that Stockman might run. In fact, however, he has no such intention (barring some wholly unexpected blowup inside the administration).

That sets the scene for a Republican primary struggle between conservative ex-Rep. Philip Ruppe and liberal William Ballenger, former state director of licensing and regulation. But insiders don't entirely discount a Senate race by the state's champion vote-getter: liberal Republican Gov. William Milliken.

Some experts said it wasn't needed, and shouldn't be built. Others said the University of North Carolina's four-year medical school and attendant teaching hospital should be located in a metropolitan center such as Greensboro or Charlotte. In fact, a Duke Endowment hospital expert appealed to legislators not to erect a big hospital in Chapel Hill. It never would be filled, he solemnly assured the salons.

The N.C. Memorial Hospital, medical school and other components of the UNC Division of Health Affairs is so huge and appears so permanent it's hard to realize that only 30 years ago very little of it existed. Up to then, the medical school at Chapel Hill had been a two-year affair, and there was no School of Dentistry nor School of Nursing. The first unit of the big hospital ws then under construction.

The decision to establish the vast health training center, centerpiece of the state's Good Health Program, at Chapel Hill came after a debate that had waged off and on for more than 10 years. As early as 1938, a study group appointed by Gov. Clyde R. Hoey had recommended the establishment of a four-year medical school at Chapel Hill. However, two members of the commission dissented. One of the two, Odus M. Mull of Shelby, wrote Hoey that persons he declined to identify had promised a "large donation" to help build the school in an unnamed city.

"At that time I didn't know who it was," said Joe W. Garrett of Raleigh, a surviving member of the study group. "But it turned out to be the Grays of Winston-Salem."

In his letter to Hoey, Mull said hd did not think the location of the expanded medical school at Chapel Hill was of such importance as to make "it necessary to refuse a large donation which was conditioned upon building the medical school elsewhere." He said the commission's insistence on Chapel Hill "makes it impossible for the state to build a medical college at this time."

The medical school issue languished until 1944 when Gov. J. Melville Broughton set up a 50-member commission headed by Dr. Clarence Poe of Raleigh to study the state's health needs. The commission found a dismal picture. It found North Carolina near the bottom among the states in the number of doctors and hospital beds and near the top in infant and maternal mortality. The state's rate of young men rejected for the draft was the worst in the country.

The Poe Commission proposed that the state embark on a five-year, $48 million program — in state, federal and local money — to provide 5,000 additional beds in hospitals and health centers throughout the state plus a complete health training center at Chapel Hill. This would be accomplished by expanding the UNC medical school to four years, by activating a teaching hospital and schools of dentistry and nursing and by expanding the schools of pharmacy and public health. Band leader Kay Kyser was enlisted to help trumpet throughout the state the commission's cry for "more hospitals, more doctors and more

Making 'Cush' Is Part Of A Southern Folklore

MONTEZUMA, Ga. — Eat you heart out, Julia Child. I know 239 ways to make cush.

What's cush? That's what I asked nearly a year ago when a friend who had undergone a tonsillectomy complained that the nurse brought him nothing to eat but cush.

It seems that in his boyhood home, his father had referred scornfully to any soft, mushy and rather tasteless food as cush.

But I suspected that the real, original cush had been one of those dishes so simple and basic that they had never been written down, yet demanding certain inherited skills to prepare. So I began asking and asking my friends to ask, just how to go about creating an authentic cush.

My queries reached folklorists, food scientists, cookbook authors, food page editors, farm and city folk, young and old, in five Southern states. I received, in response, more than 300 letters, a third of them from men. Many of the men wrote about cush-cush with nostalgia; lots of women said, "We cooked it but I never could stand the stuff." One young fellow said that cush-cush was slang for making light love.

It became evident early on that the making of cush, or cush-cush, as I was told was the proper term — began in Louisiana with the earliest importations of African slaves and worked its way across Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and down into Florida.

Most of my academic informants believed that cush-cush was a legitimate descendant of the African and Arabian cous-cous, a mixture of grains, vegtables and bits of meat. Any appetizing new way to use Indian corn was welcomed into the monotonous cuisine of the European settlers in and around New Orleans, and soon, cush-cush appeared almost daily on Louisana tables.

There seem to be two ways of making cush-cush — out of the raw meal, or from already baked and cooled cornbread. The first and foremost ancient method was originated by black cooks when the dry corn kernels were still being "ground" the Indian way: pounded in a hollowed stump-mortar with a wooden pestle.

You take cornmeal, salt it lightly, wet it down with just enough water to make a crumbly mixture, and fry it in bacon drippings, in a heavy, black iron frying pan. The meal soon forms a crust on the bottom. Then you must scrape and stir the cush until the browned bits are distributed throughout the uncooked portion, adding more drippings, continuing to break up and stir the mixture until it is fluffy and dry. Bowls of this "cereal" may be served with syrup, gravy or milk of "bonny-clabber" (thick, soured milk).

There were varieties on this basic theme. Once browned, the cush-cush might be moistened with boilng water or broth, and garnished with chopped green onions. Flanked by fried steak-o-lean or fish this was a hearty meal.

The second type of cush-cush was a catch-all for chunks of leftover cornbread. Fried in bacon drippings, the cornbread was moistened with broth or milk. According to my Georgia and Florida informants, great amounts of cush-cush were consumed during the Depression. Women marveled how their mothers and aunts had managed to save every scrap of corn or wheat bread, mix it with leftover bits of meat, gravy, milk, eggs, onions, salt, pepper and sage, to add bulk to meals that otherwise were often just wild greens and berries. This type of cush-cush was baked in the woodstove oven, the crust turned over with a spoon and basted with drippings so that it would brown throughout.

It is a far cry from the plainest of this type of cush-cush to the prized cornbread dressing that accompanies the Thanksgiving turkey in every Southern state. Rich with celery, eggs and oysters, custardy and buttery, it is yet cush-cush, through in a glorified edition.

And when, feelin' po'ly, I break up hot cornbread into a bowl of fresh, thick buttermilk -- that, too, is cush-cush.

The Generic Fad Soars To Even Further Peaks

As inflation rages, society has gone on a generic kick. Consumer advocates tout the efficacy of the cheaper generic drugs. Supermarkets now have sections devoted exclusively to generic products.

The only differences between these products and the ones with the trademarks are the black and white block-print labels and the taste of the peanut butter, which bears more resemblance to Turtle Wax than it does to Peter Pan.

In our household we've carried the generic craze a step further. Not only do our cans lack trademarks; they are without any identification whatsoever. Zachary's favorite sport when he isn't pouring syrup in the vegetable bin is pinching the labels off every can in the pantry.

This has made mealtime at our house a true adventure. Last night we had a fast supper of tuna fish, beef stew, and fruit cocktail.

"What kind of meal is this?" Phillip asked as he looked at his plate.

The answer was easy. "Generic."

An experience like this might make some people declare that our obsession with generics has gone far enough. I disagree. I'd like to see our disdain for fancy labels extend to clothes. Not since my high school days have clothing labels assumed such exaggerated importance. At my high school everybody who was anybody wore Villager and London Fog.

I was nobody. The only label I had was one that my sympathetic aunt cut out of her own raincoat and sewed in my discount store version.

My mother broke down and bought me a Villager the summer before I went to college. But at college the fad was jeans and t-shirts. By the time label-consciousness was back in style, my unsigned jeans and my Ayden Collard Festival t-shirt were too entrenched in my wardrobe for me to give them up.

I'm sure that I'm not the only one who has clung to this uniform, or vice versa. The allure of labels must have disappeared irrevocably for countless members of my generation. That's why the clothing manufacturers are concentrating so hard on the younger set.

And I do mean younger. Label-consciousness has filtered down to the preschoolers, with mere toddlers sporting labels on their behinds. I must admit that my iconoclastic heart is tempted by the prospect of letting Zachary wet on the revered name of Calvin Klein, but I wouldn't even consider buying these fancy rags just to satisfy the class consciousness of an older child.

Still, I feel sorry for Meg as she watches the alligators march single-file across the chests of her classmates. I remember how important that London Fog label was to me. So although I stood by my principles on our last shopping trip, I tried very hard to make her feel good about the clothes we chose for her.

This was not an easy task. At the very least she wanted a denim skirt and a polo shirt. These are difficult to find at K-Mart. But after several hours of wrangling (that's spelled with a small "w"), I finally managed to satisfy her taste and my budget.

Just how well I had accomplished my objective became apparent the next morning when we picked up the carpool. "See my new shirt?" Meg said as she smoothed it with her hands.

Travesty Is Compounded In The United Nations

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

NEW YORK — The essential imbecility of the United Nations seldom has been demonstrated more convincingly than in these past few weeks. By its actions in the matter of South West Africa, the General Assembly has abandoned principle and embraced fatuity instead.

The U.N.'s sole purpose — the only reason that justifies its expensive existence — is to provide a forum in which all the nations of the world may talk over their problems. By refusing to let South Africa speak to a matter with which South Africa is intimately concerned, the assembly has reduced that noble purpose to a cheap travesty.

South Africa is a founding member of the U.N. Let us assume for purposes of discussion that South Africa's practices of apartheid constitute an odious denial of human rights. For the moment, let us overlook the odious denials of human rights in most of the Third World nations that are badgering South Africa. Let us remember that the U.N. never was intended to be a kind of gentlemen's club in which membership would be limited to the socially acceptable. On what grounds can the credentials of a member state be validly challenged?

Well, it is said, South Africa has refused the U.N.'s order to relinquish her protectorate over South West Africa. South Africa has been intransigent and obstructionist. South Africa has refused to cooperate. Thus South Africa has forfeited any right to be heard in U.N. halls.

But these contentions are nonsense. They echo the fatuous blab-blab-blab for which the General Assembly has become justly renowned. South Africa has not opposed independence for its protectorate. On the contrary, South Africa has used her influence to move South West Africa in precisely those directions the U.N. supposedly desires. It was with South Africa's approval that elections were held in South West Africa in December of 1978. Nearly 80 percent of the registered voters participated; international observers found the elections fair; the resulting Constituent Assembly has provided Namibia, as South West Africa provisionally is known, with a black government in which apartheid has been dismantled.

What is all this "intransigence" and "obstructionism"? South Africa understandably has refused to surrender the people of Namibia to the tender Marxist mercies of Sam Nujoma and his South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO). That is the sum and substance of the whole affair.

And what is SWAPO? The best that can be said of this outfit is that it probably represents the wishes of a majority of the Ovambo people, the largest of Namibia's ethnic groups. But at least 10 other defined ethnic groups inhabit Namibia. The notion that SWAPO is "the sole and authentic representative" of the whole country, as the General Assembly arrantly proclaims, is sheer fantasy. SWAPO is armed and supported by the Soviet Union. Nujoma is Moscow's puppet. What are we to say of a forum in which only the puppet may speak?

The General Assembly, we are told, is prepared to recommend the imposition of economic sanctions against South Africa. Any such vain resolution would encounter a certain veto in the Security Council, but that procedural fact of life is the least of the predictable consequences. By treating South Africa as a pariah, the U.N. will only harden Pretoria's determination to stand fast. If responsible members of the U.N. truly want to see self-determination in an independent Namibia, they will work with South Africa and not without her.

From time to time we ought to re-examine an old question: Why the U.N. anyhow? Why continue the dumbshow? Once the U.N. ceases to serve as a forum, it ceases to have meaning. And when the assembly's avowed purpose is to impose a pro-communist, one-party dictatorship upon half a million human beings in a harsh and barren land, it is hard to understand why respectable nations should remain any longer in a house of ill fame.

Location of the expanded medical school and the proposed 400-bed teaching hospital at Chapel Hill was the big issue at a hearing in the state Capitol on Feb. 13, 1947. The Hall of the House was thronged with leaders who gave their views pro and con to the Joint Appropriations Committee. James H. Clark of Elizabethtown, chairman of the Medical Care Commission, outlined ddtails of the Good Health Program and told the legislators a substantial majority of the commission was convinced of the need to expand the medical school and to locate it and the teaching hospital at Chapel Hill.

His views were endorsed by several spokesmen, including Josephus Daniels, Raleigh editor and former ambassador to Mexico; Dr. William Coppridge of Durham, president of the N. C. Medical Society, and Dr. I. G. Greer, president of the N.C. Good Health Association.

The opposition was marshalled by Don Elias, an Asheville publisher who signed the minority report by Medical Care Commission members who opposed the medical school expansion and the teaching hospital. He was joined by Dr. W.S. Rankin of Charlotte, director of the Hospital Division of the Duke Endowment, and Dr. C.W. Bailey of Rocky Mount who reported a secret poll showed a majority of North Carolina doctors opposed the expansion of the medical school. He accused the Good Health Association of waging a "high pressure campaign" designed to rally support for expanding the medical school and teaching hospital at Chapel Hill.

Dr. Paul F. Whitaker of Kinston, a former member of the Medical Care Commission, labeled the accusation "silly and vicious" and asserted it would "not stand up under the examination of the facts."

Both Elias and RAnkin contended another four-year medical school was not needed, and Rankin asserted North Carolina would then have three full length medical schools. He said this would be more than other states on the basis of population.

But the committee and later both houses of the General Assembly sided with the Chapel Hill faction. The vote was woefully one-sided after Gov. R. Gregg Cherry, who had been regarded as lukewarm on the issue, threw his entire support behind it. Before sending the bill on to the Senate, the House defeated an amendment by Rep. Burl Hardison of New Bern to postpone construction of the four-year medical school and teaching hospital until after all the local hospitals and health centers the program envisaged were built. It also rejected an amendment by Rep. Dan Tompkins of Sylva to move the medical school and hospital to Asheville. Tompkins said the state's western section should have at least one major hospital.

But Greensboro and Charlotte made a final effort to land the big health care training center. Greensboro asked that the expanded medical school be merged with Cone Memorial Hospital to be built at Greensboro with $15 million willed by the estate of industrialist Moses H. Cone. Charlotte then asked that its bid for the medical training complex be reopened.

The issue was settled finally on Dec. 10, 1947, when the executive committee of the UNC trustees agreed with a special UNC medical school committee and representatives of the Cone Hospital trustees that "no satisfactory plan for th merger of the two institutions can be made." They said the impasse resulted from the conflict of state policy and limitations imposed by the Cone trust.

Dr. Frank Graham, former UNC president who went on to the U.S. Senate and then became a special mediator for the United Nations, spoke at a dedication ceremony for the health training center on April 24, 1953. He asserted it was destined to be one of the world's great university medical centers.

It was a far cry from the day in 1878 when Dr. Thomas W. Harris opened a medical school at Chapel Hill. Although he was professor of anatomy and dean of the fledgling school, Dr. Harris agreed to serve without pay.

maybe a roll and coffee and a very light lunch. There were called collations and together could not add up to a full meal. No eating was allowed between meals, not even bubble gum or barroom hors d'oeuvres.

Everyone from the ages of 21 to 59 had the obligation to fast. Abstaining from meat twice a week began at age 14, but as kids we gave up candy bars, pizza slices and sodapop during Lent, putting the nickels and dimes saved in a cardboard "mite box" for the foreign missionaries to buy up unwanted Chinese babies, rescue maidens from the Sultan's seraglio (whatever that was) and rent an airplane or a dogsled for Father Hubbard, the parka-clad padre of the arctic tundra.

More mature penitents gave up booze, cigarettes and excessive profanity at the race track so they could become insufferable when someone asked what they were giving up for Lent.

Anyhow, I decided to go whole hog (or whatever is the opposite metaphor) into the spirit of the old-time Lent, even forsaking (except on Sunday) the twilight blast of 100 proof vodka that is my daily reward for quarrying another few nuggets of fools' gold from the basalt bedrock of my brain.

Father Nicholas Grieco, who minds the bishop's business in the chancery office of the Catholic Diocese of Bridgeport, sent me the extinct Lenten regulations, specifically Canons 1250 through 1254 of the Code of Cannon Law, which spell it all out in rigorous ecclesiastical detail.

Among strict theologians "absolute norms" were set for the two daily collations: "two ounces for breakfast and eight ounces for lunch or supper." Meat forbidden on days of abstinence was defined as "the flesh of mammals and birds, but not of fish, frogs, turtles, snails, mussels, clams, oysters, crabs, etc." Gravy and broth made from meat were out, and the way I read it, Father Hubbard had to abstain from walrus and whale blubber but he could broil himself an arctic char over some caribou chips.

On Fat Tuesday (English for Mardi Gras), the Day before Ash Wednesday, I fueled myself for the famine ahead with a half hip of steer, a couple of baked Idahos, a teroborm of California jug red and a giant wedge of strawberry cheese cake washed down with a few Irish coffees. I had myself a carnival, which means "farewell to flesh."

Then the long lean 40 days of Lent set in. The first day I dropped a pound and a half. By Sunday, I was down three pounds, and the first full week of Lent boiled away two more pounds of lard. Even the big Sunday breakfast of Italian sausages and the welcome cocktail hour (which found me ruminating and snorting like a camel crawling in on all fours from a salt caravan across the Sahara) added less than a pound.

There were other exceptions besides Sunday to my self-inflicted monastic rule, high holy days like St. Patrick's Day and my birthday when I granted myself a dispensation from drought and starvation.

St. Teresa of Avila, I understand, took the same liberties with the Carmelite rule when the local gamekeeper delivered a brace of partridges to her convent during Lent. To the shocked postulant who was ordered to cook them up for dinner, the great mystic explained "Penance is penance, but partridge is partridge."

By Palm Sunday, this all too solid flesh had melted three belt notches and in my cowled sailing windbreaker I had the pinched ascetic look of something that had fallen off the west face of a medieval cathedral.

Now when my doctor squeezes the old blood pressure-taker rubber ball and censoriously tells me that for my height (5 foot 11) I should weigh 175 pounds, I no longer have to jest:

"That's basically it, Doc: I got a height problem."

By the way, did you know a hard boiled egg weighs in at one and three-quarters ounces. Not counting the salt and pepper.

Leaf Support Plan Blocked

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Directors of the North Carolina Farm Bureau have apparently scuttled a proposal to reduce federal price supports for flue-cured tobacco.

The state bureau's board of directors voted Friday to reject a proposal by a parent group, the American Farm Bureau Federation, to cut back on planned increases in tobacco price supports.

A spokesman for the national organization in Chicago said the proposal has a slim chance of being approved in Congress without the support of the North Carolina organization.

The state vote reflected the view of Tar Heel tobacco growers, said John Sledge, president of the N.C. Farm Bureau.

"We are following the lead of our farmers," he said. Sledge said the South Carolina Farm Bureau may also oppose the plan.

General Motors Delays Project

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. will delay part of a $40 billion program to refurbish plants and redesign many of its products for 1985 because it is short of cash, says GM Chairman Roger Smith.

"We just don't have $40 billion right now," Smith said Friday. "Our new products have to come first."

GM will postpone, for at least a year, a plan to replace its plant at Fairfax, Kan., with one at Kansas City, Kan., he said.

Teachers Facing Layoffs

BOSTON (AP) — Nearly half the teachers in Boston's public schools have been told they may be out of a job next fall because of declining enrollments and tax cuts required by Proposition 2½.

Acting School Superintendent Joseph M. McDonough wrote to 2,259 tenured teachers — about 40 percent of all teachers — warning they could be laid off effective Aug. 1.

McDonough said Friday the number of layoff notices was high, saying it was "probably high overkill at this point." He estimated that under the worst possible circumstances, the actual number of layoffs could reach 2,000. Last month, 900 provisional teachers got layoff notices.

Under the contract with the Boston Teachers Union, teachers must be notified by May 1 if they are not going to be rehired. Normally, only untenured teachers with less than three years' service routinely receive such notice, regardless of whether or not they will be dismissed.

Edward Doherty, Boston Teachers Union vice president, said the union will "immediately take all legal actions necessary to protect our contract.

"We are planning to seek individual hearings for each teacher before the School Committee. The bottom line is that we have no intention of allowing our contract to be violated," Doherty said.

Under the teachers' three-year contract — signed last September — tenured teachers have a "no layoff" clause effective through June, 1982.

Also Friday, the state Supreme Court delayed a ruling on the city's request for a stay of the order by Superior Court Judge Thomas R. Morse Jr. that city schools be kept open the full academic year. City officials say the system is out of money.

Proposition 2½, a referendum approved by voters last November, requires communities to cut property taxes by 15 percent a year until they equal no more than 2½ percent of fair market value.

Mayor Kevin H. White has proposed $210 million in school spending for fiscal 1982 — the same amount budgeted this year.

Crippled Liner Restores Power, Limps Toward Port

MIAMI (UPI) — The trouble-plagued SS Norway limped homeward toward Miami with its 2,637 passengers and crewmen Saturday after engineers succeeded in restoring power aboard the vessel, largest cruise ship in the world.

The Norway had wallowed helplessly in the Atlantic for a full day and plans had been made for transferring the 1,787 passengers to other vessels.

It was the second time in nine months the luxury liner, once named the SS France when the French line used it in trans-Atlantic service, had lost power at sea during a Caribbean cruise.

An estimated 1,400 passengers from two sister ships, dropped off in the Bahamas after their vessels were summoned to assist the Norway, were scheduled to be flown back to the United States at the expense Norwegian Caribbean Lines, owners of the three ships.

Cruise line spokesman Art Kane said "full facilities have been restored" aboard the Norway, which he said was making about 12 knots — about two-thirds its normal speed. The ship was expected to reach the Port of Miami early Monday, 24 hours behind schedule.

Crewmen restored power to the 1,035-foot vessel at 4:10 a.m. Saturday. The ship was idled at 4 a.m. Friday, about 500 miles southeast of Miami, after leakage from two of the ship's four boilers triggered the power failure.

Kane said apparently a chemical in the water ate away at some boiler seals, causing them to leak. He said two of the four boilers were presently working.

Full electrical power was cut off for about 10 minutes, then partial power was restored, Kane said. The Norway's passengers and 850 crewmembers remained without air conditioning through Saturday morning.

The Starward and Sunward II, which had been diverted late Friday to assist in the removal of passengers from the Norway, were kept on stand-by Saturday, but a rendezvous was no longer scheduled, Kane said.

An estimated 800 passengers from the Starward were dropped off at Nassau and some 600 passengers aboard the Sunward II disembarked at Freeport in the Bahamas when it appeared the Norway's power failure could make a transfer at sea of passengers necessary.

Kane said passengers from the two ships were provided with hotel rooms and meals in the Bahamas, courtesy of Norwegian Caribbean Lines.

Last August, the Norway remained stranded for 30 hours northwest of Grand Caicos Island, at the end of the Bahamas chain, following an electrical failure that knocked out the ship's generators and engines.

Builder Shows New Telescope

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — An infrared telescope to be launched in August 1982 into an Earth orbit, where it will be 100 times more sensitive than Earth-bound instruments, has been unveiled here by its manufacturer.

The telescope, to be used to map stellar objects not visible to man, will be part of a $200 million joint venture involving the United States, Great Britain and Holland, said Ball Aerospace Systems of Boulder, which displayed the instrument Friday.

The telescope, expected to have a useful life of about one year, will be launched by rocket, instead of the space shuttle, because it is destined for an orbit above the shuttle's maximum range, said a spokeswoman for the firm.

ERA Supporters Rally At Capitol

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Almost 3,000 chanting and sign-carrying husbands, wives, children, grandparents and pets marched Saturday to the steps of the Capitol for a rally in support of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The "Shoulder to Shoulder" march and rally, sponsored by North Carolinians United for ERA, drew participants from Manteo to Murphy and from outside the state as well.

Participating in the 45-minute march were representatives from South Carolina, Washington state, national labor unions, local teachers' groups and state government.

Gov. Jim Hunt, speaking near the Capitol steps, drew repeated applause from the crowd as he promised not to quit fighting for the ERA.

"I will not give up working for the Equal Rights Amendment and other issues that assure equal rights for all our people," he said, adding that, "we need more women and men involved politically who believe in equality. We need more women running for public office in North Carolina.

"We cannot allow the clock to stop or turn back," Hunt continued. "It is the right and necessary time to stand up for equal rights for people."

Rally organizers said part of the motivation for the event was a written agreement, signed recently by several state senators, not to discuss the ERA during this session of the General Assembly.

ERA supporters generally acknowledge they lack enough support to make North Carolina one of three states needed to ratify the amendment to the U.S. Constitution. But they say the rally was an indication they are not willing to give up on ratification.

The rally included about six speeches and singing "We Shall Not Be Moved" and "Bread and Roses."

Florence Ryan, an 86-year-old Asheville woman, recounted her years of struggling for equality and told of the time when women were even discouraged from driving a car.

"This (the ERA) isn't going to go away although some people seem to have lost their push," she said.

A 7-year-old Chapel Hill schoolgirl, who said she wants to become a doctor when she grows up, urged that women be allowed to seek any career they want.

"ERA should pass because it is not right to have discrimination in this world," Rachel Cole said. "Punishing women is not right. They should be what they want to be."

Other speakers included state Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, Elizabeth Koontz, assistant superintendent of the state Department of Public Instruction and chairperson of the National Commission for Working Women, and Beth McAllister, president of NCUERA.

Ms. Gray was one of a handful of legislators attending the march. She said she was not surprised or disappointed by their turnout because she said it was a "political risk" for them to come.

The marching crowd wound through downtown Raleigh for several blocks. Many were carrying banners with the words to the constitutional amendment on them and most were carrying pennants with the words "ERA Yes" on them.

Some wore sashes and buttons collected in a number of marches or campaigns for passage of the amendment.

Iranian Trade

TOKYO (AP) — Iran has no intention of normalizing relations with the United States until America "stops flaunting its power," Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was quoted Saturday as saying.

In a dispatch from Tehran, the Japanese newspaper Asahi said Bani-Sadr had complained in an interview that Iran is still suffering from the effects of U.S. trade sanctions, lifted after the 52 American hostages were freed in January.

Survey Says Democrats Will Support President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan apparently has enough votes to assure a major victory for his economic program when the Democratic-controlled House votes on a 1982 blueprint this week, an Associated Press survey shows.

The survey, conducted by telephone as Congress returned from its two-week Easter recess, shows at least 29 Democrats will support Reagan's budget over an alternative being pushed by their party's leadership.

The 29 votes, coupled with GOP leadership claims that only one Republican will buck the administration's wishes on the vote, would enable the president to chalk up a narrow, two-vote victory for his economic recovery program.

But in addition to the 29, five more Democrats said they were leaning toward a vote for the president's package, and another 12 Democrats said they were undecided which way to cast their votes.

Administration supporters privately count some of the 12 as definite "yes" votes on the president's side.

The budget blueprint Reagan is endorsing is tailor-made for the deep spending cuts he is asking for, as well as for his plan for three-year across-the-board cuts in personal income taxes.

Decisions about the actual cuts and the precise shape of the tax bill will have to be made later. The budget plan itself merely sets guidelines for Congress to follow as it drafts spendings and tax legislation for the 1982 fiscal year.

The plan the White House is backing calls for spending of $688.8 billion and a deficit of $31 billion. It envisions a balanced budget in 1984.

The Democratic alternative calls for spending next year of $714.5 billion, but a lower deficit of $25.6 billion. The Democratic-backed bill calls for a smaller tax cut than Reagan wants for 1982, and does not guarantee tax cuts in 1983 and 1984, as the president's plan would.

In general, the Democratic-backed plan calls for more spending on social programs and slightly less on defense, although many Democratic leaders are supporting an amendment to bring the defense budget to the president's level.

Haig Says Soviet Union Has Choice Of Cold War, Dentente

ROME, Italy (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig discussed the Lebanese and Polish crises with Italian officials Saturday and said the Soviet Union faced a choice in its relations with the West — "cold war or detente."

Haig, who arrived in Rome at dawn for preparatory talks leading up to a NATO meeting Monday, spoke to reporters after a long working lunch with Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo.

Haig described the situation in Lebanon as "dangerous and serious" and said the United States and its allies were involved in intense diplomatic efforts to end the fighting there.

Haig said he and Colombo also discussed the Polish crisis and said, "The current situation urgently requires restraint by the Soviet Union."

He said that, in dealing with Poland in particular, the Soviets must realize their behavior will determine whether they get a "cold war or detente" with the West.

Monday's NATO meeting will be the first that he has attended as secretary of state.

To prepare for it, he and Colombo discussed a host of defense issues, including the timing of an approach to the Soviet Union on limiting modern, long-range theater nuclear forces in Europe.

Italian officials said there was a continuing disagreement on the matter of timing with the Europeans, who have come under domestic pressure from anti-nuclear groups to start the negotiations before NATO begins deploying its next generation of nuclear missiles.

Haig was meeting Pope John Paul II later in the day for a private audience at which no press coverage was permitted.

On Sunday, he was to attend Mass in St. Peter's Basilica — the Mass being celebrated by Cardinal William Baum, former archbishop of Washington, D.C.

In preparation for Monday, Haig has also lined up separate, private meetings with all 14 of the other NATO foreign ministers arriving in Rome over the weekend.

Others May Seek Auto Restraints

TOKYO (AP) — Common Market nations, fearing Japan's automakers will divert to Europe the cars they've promised not to ship to America, will seek a similar Japanese vow of export restraint, European diplomats here said Saturday.

The Brussels-based European Commission, which represents the 10 nations of the European Community, or Common Market, "will ask for comparable treatment," said one diplomatic source, who asked not to be identified.

The commission already is projecting a trade deficit with Japan of $10 billion this year, and there are predictions it could reach $15 billion next year. By comparison, the 1979 deficit was $8.2 billion.

Imports of Japanese cars are a key factor. In the first quarter of this year, they soared 18 percent. Shipments to the United States during the same period increased only marginally.

The European Commission has expressed "serious concern" over the flood of Japanese cars entering Europe and asked Japan to moderate its exports. Canadians, too, have expressed concern.

But until now, Tokyo has been occupied with the problem in its largest market, the United States.

The Japanese agreement to limit U.S. sales, announced Friday by International Trade Minister Rokusuke Tanaka, would cut 1981 shipments by 140,000, compared with the previous year.

Just hours after the announcement, the European Commission issued a statement in Brussels saying it would "consider the details and implications for world trade." There were reports that Canada would send a task force to Tokyo in the coming week.

One diplomatic source said the European Commission had decided to seek "overall restraint," rather than agreements covering individual countries. But a Japanese official was quoted Saturday as saying it would be "impossible for Japan to uniformly apply restraints to the entire EC area" because of varying trade regulations.

Published reports here suggest that Belgium feels strongest about Japanese exports, having seen an increase of 34 percent this year over 1980.

France already limits Japan's share of the domestic market to 3 percent and has adopted other measures to limit shipments — actions that Japan's carmakers say are a "violation of free trade principles." Italy, too, has import quotas.

The negotiations that led to the U.S. export agreement have been sharply criticized by Japanese auto executives, who complained the deal — though ostensibly voluntary — was made without their participation.

Takashi Ishihara, President of Nissan Motor Co. and of the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association, called it "deeply regrettable." The newspaper Asahi Shimbun said it was a "settlement without negotiations." Yomiuri Shimbun attacked the government's "clumsy technique."

Even Tanaka, who led the Japanese delegation, was reported to have "apologized" for an arrangement that was "not something that can be announced with pride."

But Ishihara, whose company makes Datsun automobiles, said the industry had no choice but to comply.

Japanese auto parts suppliers were reported Satuday to be considering whether to petition the government for compensation.

BICYCLE RODEO

Sheriff's Deputy Keith Knox led about 25 riders on a tour of the Simpson area last week as Simpson 4-H'ers held their annual bicycle rodea.

Knox also spoke to the group on bicycle safety.

Helping arrange and put on the event were members of the Pitt County 4-H office staff including Leroy James, Dale Panaro and Anne Suggs. Judges were Mrs. T.G. Taft and Joan G. Roundtree.

EIGHT INJURED IN WRECK — Eight people were injured in a wreck on rural paved road 1777 about .4 miles south of Grimesland at 10:55 a.m. Saturday. Three children were seriously injured, including 2-year-old Marcinia Jones, her brother Marcus D., 5, and sister Keshia, 6, children of Jack Herman and Callie Jones of Chicod Road, Grimesland. Trooper Douglas Britton said the Jones' vehicles and a tractor-trailor rig collided as the Jones were backing out of their yard. The truck was operated by Leon Mack Nixon of Mobile Manor Trailer Park in Washington. The car struck the fuel tank of the truck and the truck hooked over the bumper of the car, spinning the car into the side of the truck. Three of the children were thrown from the car. Estimated damage was $1,500 to the truck and $1,800 to the Jones vehicle. Three other children were treated and released. The parents suffered minor injuries. No charges have been made. Protestors Plan Marches On Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — What is billed as the first major demonstration against the Reagan administration's foreign and domestic policies is following a route familiar to veterans of the Vietnam era protests: a march on the Pentagon.

Two groups have permits to march and stage protests outside the Defense Department headquarters Sunday. Security officials were expecting 10,000 to 15,000 protesters, while organizers were predicting "at a minimum quite a few tens of thousands."

The main organizer of the march was a group called the People's Anti-War Mobilization, which grew out of a "Coalition to Stop General Haig" that unsuccessfully opposed Alexander Haig's nomination to become President Reagan's secretary of state.

It is protesting President Reagan's decision to increase the number of U.S. military advisers in strife-torn El Salvador from 34 to 54 and to provide $25 million in weapons to the ruling military junta.

But it is also decrying Reagan's plans to cut social welfare programs at home. Fred Goldstein, an organizer, said, "We're trying to relate the aggressive nature of Reagan's foreign policy to to his domestic policies."

He charged Reagan's economic proposals amount to "a vast income transfer from the poor people in this country to the Pentagon."

"The only thing that Reagan and the military will understand is massive numbers of people in the streets. That's the only way we got them to stop the Vietnam War," said Goldstein, who added the march would be "legal, orderly, disciplined but spirited."

A second group, the Spartacist League-Anti-Imperialist Contingent, will stage a separate rally in a parking area well removed from the Pentagon building.

Pentagon officials said this group, expected to number 500 people, is more likely to spawn any militant actions.

Security officials were planning to keep a low profile and deal with any efforts to stage sit-ins at entrances to the huge building or other acts of disobedience with a minimum of force.

Greenville Wreck Damage Reported

An estimated $3,600 in property damages occured here in traffic accidents Friday and Saturday, according to reports of the Greenville Police Department.

An estimated $800 damage was done to a parked vehicle owned by Harold LaMartin Noell III of G-2 Wilson Acres when his car was struck by a hit-and-run driver in the parking lot of Wilson Acres Friday at 11:30 a.m.

A vehicle driven by Edward Randall Monk of 330 Richlieu Rd., Wilmington, collided with a car driven by Glenda Stancil of 915 Leak St., Rockingham, causing $300 damage to the Stancil vehicle Friday at 1:05 p.m.

William Sidney Dawson of 1701 E. 14th St. was charged with failure to reduce speed after colliding with a vehicle driven by Amy Kathryn Martin of Route 13, P.O. Box 134, Friday at 6:18 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard. Estimated damage to the Martin vehicle was $100 and $400 to the Dawson vehicle.

A hit-and-run driver struck a parked vehicle owned by Reggie Earl Selby of 1304 Red Banks Rd. Saturday at 1:30 a.m. causing $2,000 damage. The incident occurred on Red Banks Road.

Georgia Approves Soldier's Return

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Gov. George Busbee signed extradition papers Saturday to return to New York a white Army private reportedly charged in the slayings of three black men in Buffalo, N.Y.

The papers were rushed to Muscogee County Sheriff Gene Hodge by a state trooper at the request of Erie County, N.Y., District Attorney Edward Cosgrove, who is trying to speed up the extradition of Pvt. Joseph G. Christopher, 25, of Buffalo, a spokesman for the governor said.

"There was some need, expressed by the district attorney in Buffalo, to expedite it," spokesman Duane Riner said.

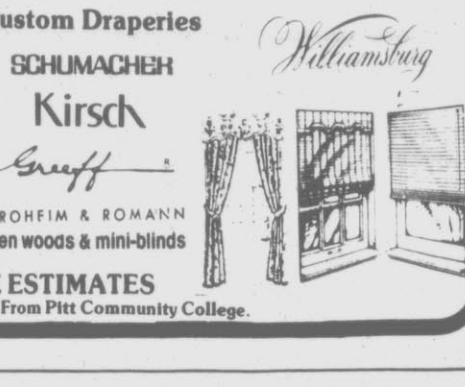

Cosgrove said he wants to speed up the extradition process, possibly arranging a hearing Monday. But Georgia prosecutors and a source close to the investigation said it is unlikely that Christopher's attorneys would agree to a change in a court hearing date, now scheduled for next Friday.

"It can be waived by the prisoner should he desire to leave, but I've received no indication of that," Muscogee County District Attorney William Smith said Saturday.

Christopher's attorneys, Kevin Dillon and Mark Mahoney, returned to Buffalo last Thursday and did not plan to return to Georgia until this coming Thursday, said a source close to the investigation, who asked not to be identified.

Superior Court Judge John Land ordered the May 8 hearing last Thursday after Christopher's attorneys told him in a closed hearing their client did not want to return to New York, Muscogee County Chief Deputy Jim McLendon said.

Columnist Osborne Dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Osborne, who wrote a widely read White House column for the New Republic magazine, died Saturday of emphysema. He was 74.

Osborne had been "greatly slowed" by emphysema and cancer in recent months, said Hendrik Hertzberg, editor of the weekly magazine.

Osborne entered Sibley Memorial Hospital, where he died, on Wednesday. Hertzberg said he did not know the form of cancer from which Osborne suffered, but he said emphysema was the cause of death.

A native of Corinth, Miss., Osborne was a reporter for the Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal and The Associated Press in Memphis before becoming a public relations officer for the National Recovery Administration and the Tennessee Valley Authority in the 1930s. He joined Newsweek magazine in 1936 and switched to Time magazine two years later, where he served as a writer, editor and foreign correspondent until 1961.

Europeans Hope Americans Will Begin Missile Talks

ROME (AP) — European officials preparing for this week's NATO foreign ministers' meeting hope the United States will agree to begin talks with the Soviet Union on cutting back nuclear missiles in Europe.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who began private meetings here Saturday before the conference opens Monday, declined comment on details of the Reagan administration's new thoughts on arms control talks.

Western European governments are being pressured by anti-nuclear demonstrators and political opponents to seek talks that would counterbalance a 1979 decision to deploy 572 American cruise and Pershing II missiles.

Some ministers were expected to urge Haig to announce a starting date for talks, going beyond his previous assurances of a U.S. commitment to negotiate.

The pressure is strongest in West Germany, where members of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's own party are against deployment, and in the Netherlands, where general elections come up this month. There also is strong opposition in Italy, Belgium and Britain, the other countries selected as bases for the weapons.

West German Foreign Minister Hans Deitrich Genscher and NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns said last week they hoped the United States would announce a starting date for talks.

Baldridge Tells Staff To Use Proper English

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldridge, the only Cabinet officer who knows how to rope a calf, is taking on a tougher challenge — getting his staff to use the English language correctly.

Outlawed, he has told those who write his letters and those of his top aides, are such Washington favorites as "prioritize, finalize, viable, orient, parameter, and ongoing."

Forbidden, he says, is the art of turning nouns or adjectives into verbs — "to interface, to impact, and to optimize."

Banished, he has decreed, are such bureaucratic crutches "bottom line, subject matter, prior to (use before), needless to say, it is my intention."

Secretaries, he cautions, are to use "I hope" instead of "hopefully;" and "pleased" in place of "delighted, glad or happy."

What he wants, Baldridge said, is language "halfway between Ernest Hemingway and Zane Grey with no bureaucratese."

The memo was written by Jean Jones, head of the department's executive secretariat who says "clarity and brevity are key factors." She says the secretary wants "short sentences and short words, with emphasis on plain English."

She titled the memo "Secretarial Stylistic Preferences."

Prince Visits Colonial Capitol As 'Redcoat'

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) — Britain's Prince Charles, calling himself a "genuine redcoat," was honored in the one-time colonial capital of Virginia Saturday before a White House farewell dinner with President and Mrs. Reagan.

In a busy day that saw the future British ruler tour a sprawling military base, the world's largest aircraft carrier and a college named for earlier British sovereigns, Charles was cheered and gawked at by students, tourists and residents alike.

Charles was to return to Britain Sunday morning after an evening at the White House.

In brief remarks on being made a fellow of the College of William and Mary, Charles noted that this year marked the 200th anniversary of the battle of Yorktown, fought nearby, in which British forces surrendered to Gen. George Washington.

"I thought you would like a genuine redcoat in your midst," Charles said.

He noted that Queen Mary — one of the namesakes of the college — was only 15 when she learned rather abruptly she was to wed a man 12 years her senior. She wept for two days, he added.

"There is also a 12-year gap between myself and Lady Diana, but there, ladies and gentlemen, the comparison comes to an abrupt end," he quipped.

Virginia Gov. John Dalton told Charles, "Be assured that nowhere in America could you be more welcome than here at a college named for British sovereigns in a city once the capital of a British governor, and in a state named for another queen."

After receiving the medallion and certificate the prince said he was "greatly honored ... to be elected as a fellow — whether or not the election was opposed I shall never know."

In a more serious vein, Charles said the emphasis on materialism in recent times has "produced an unrest in the western world and a loss of faith in values."

He noted that Great Britian was the first to question the demands on society of industrialization.

Charles said it was unfortunate that so much emphasis is put upon statistics now because there was no such thing as an average person.

He said he agreed with a thought he said was once expressed by Mahatma Gandhi, which he paraphrased as, "What is needed is not mass production, but production for the masses."

He was given a standing ovation that lasted several minutes at the end of his speech.

Charles had donned academic robes for the ceremony. Earlier he visited the sprawling military complex at Norfolk, Va., in the dress whites of a Royal naval commander and walked the decks of the USS Nimitz dressed in a bush jacket style uniform.

As he left the ship reporters asked if he saw much on the aircraft carrier.

"Not very much. I didn't have much time," he replied. "I saw the flight control and the main machinery."

Legislature Shows More Of 'Woman's Touch'

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The Legislature is beginning to show a woman's touch.

While the General Assembly's 22 female members report sexism still exists and "women's bills" often are considered second-rate, there are signs legislation by and about women is becoming much more common. Among the examples:

— In the House, a subcommittee of five women has been appointed to examine legislation that would make it much more difficult for women to use midwifes when having children at home.

The subcommittee members have had a total of 20 babies, experience that is likely to make it tougher for the medical society's male lobbyist to speak on the bill.

— The nearly all-female nursing profession won a big victory when the House approved legislation giving nurses more control over their profession. A female lobbyist led the campaign for the changes and Rep. Patricia S. Hunt, D-Orange, sponsored the bill.

— Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, teamed with Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, to push through a measure that lets judges divide a couple's property fairly upon divorce. Under North Carolina's centuries-old common law, some women are discovering their decades of work in the home give them no rights to the property they and their husbands acquired.

— Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, won passage of several bills revamping divorce laws. One of them lets a spouse who is collecting alimony file for divorce.

— Female House members lobbied heavily to defeat a bill requiring that women gete a second shot for syphillis during pregnancy.

"We saved every one of the (women) one additional syphillis test — and men would not have caught that" because they never get the shots, said Rep. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake.

For some of the women, those small victories helps ease the pain of the Equal Rights Amendment's defeat. In February, an all-male group of senators quashed a conservative attempt to bring up — and kill — the amendment by signing a statement vowing ERA will not be discussed again through 1983.

Ironically, that defeat may have helped other equality causes, some women say.

"Maybe because ERA failed so completely, I think the General Assembly — even the strong opponents of ERA — is willing to look at some inequities," said Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg.

She said many people against ERA maintained they were for equal rights in general, so the other bills gave them the opportunity to show their feelings.

Many of the female legislators say the awareness of women's needs and rights has grown in part because more women are in the General Assembly. The House had just five in 1963, for example, and by 1971 only two women were in that 120-member body. But in 1981 there are 19.

The women also are more powerful than ever. All three female senators are committee chairmen, while 10 House females head committees.

But several report that they still feel far from equal. A few noted that no women are in the inner circles of either the House or the Senate.

"If you want to get something passed, the best thing you can do is to get a white male legislator," said Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance.

Many of the women also reported they worried about becoming thought of as a shrieking feminist pushing solely for bills helping women. Mrs. Woodard said that in one case she purposely avoided mentioning how a bill affects women and instead praised its benefits to senior citizens.

Some of the legislators have even passed along their ideas to men to avoid getting tagged.

"If you push the legislation for women and get connected with it, you'll lose your effectiveness with your peers," Mrs. Holt said. "Plenty of times, if I were a male, I'd be up on my feet speaking."

Probe May Help Parachute Team Win Financial Support

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Military officials associated with the U.S. Army's elite parachute team, The Golden Knights, agree that a recently concluded probe of the squad will result in better financial support and supervision for the team.

The four-month probe by the Army's Criminal Investigation Division centered on allegations of corruption within the parachute team, based at Fort Bragg. The events that sparked the investigation and the probe itself have been cloaked in secrecy.

Since the probe ended, officials say The Golden Knights are getting better aircraft, headquarters command is getting closer supervision and funding is to be made available for things like practice jumps.

The Fayetteville Times, in a weekend edition, quotes an informed source as saying that since the team was formed in 1959 as the Strac Corps Parachute Club, the pressure to excel has not been backed with the money needed to excel.

The source said a philosophy for "wheeling and dealing" to benefit the team soon evolved, and as the team began to earn recognition as the Army's ambassadors, the pressure increased and the deals became more flamboyant.

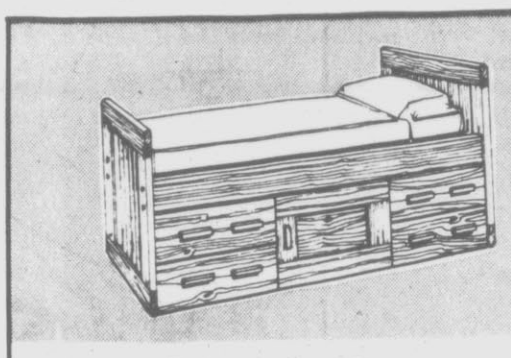

The investigation of the deals has resulted in a former team member, Master Sgt. Bruce McMurry, being allowed to begin retirement preparations rather than face court-martial. Records show that six other former team members were issued letters of reprisals. Such letters do not accompany the men to their next assignment and cannot be used against them when they are considered for such things as promotions.

A report from the Army CID recommended McMurry be charged with fraud, soliciting and accepting gratuities from subordinates.

Issued letters of reprisals for their temporary files for allegedly maintaining an illegal slush fund were Maj. Jerry Fry, former team commander; Maj. Martin Jeppeson, former team executive officer; and former team members Sgt. 1st Class Ray Brewer and Staff Sgts. Dwight Reynolds, Patrick Van Bibber and Edward Harrington.

Several of the former Golden Knights maintain they are innocent of wrongdoing and are taking administrative action in an effort to have the letters withdrawn.

Old Law Is Being Changed

Home Knitters Take On 'Feds'... And Win

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — A fight by several Vermont women for the right to knit ski hats at home has caught the ear of the U.S. labor secretary, who wants to lift a 39-year-old federal regulation against garment work in the home.

The women had their own reasons for wanting to work at home, selling their hats to a sportswear company. Marlene Walsh said she considered herself a craftsman. Kathy Hobart wanted to take care of her young children. Luella Breen did it solely for the extra money.

"During my 41-year marriage, my family came first and working outside the home came second," said Mrs. Breen, 60. "I feel the Department of Labor was not fair to me when it told me I could not carry on my knitting."

About a year ago the Labor Department filed suit aginst C.B. Sports, a ski-wear manufacturer in Bennington, Vt., alleging the company violated regulations issued under a 1942 anti-sweatshop law by allowing three women and several others in southern Vermont to work at home knitting ski hats.

The department claimed the women, as employees, were being paid less than the minimum wage, and didn't receive benefits or the protection of a safe workplace. The government stopped the women from selling their hats to the company.

The knitters and the company argued that the women were not employees and that their work was submitted on a piecework basis.

So began a David-versus-Goliath battle that at one point found the government seeking to keep the women from joining the fight.

There were hearings in Washington and Burlington, Vt. The women took on other work. Mrs. Breen started baby-sitting at half the money she had made knitting.

Then on Friday, word came from Washington that Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan wanted to overturn a regulation prohibiting apparel industry employees from working at home. The women involved in the case called Donovan's proposal "wonderful" or "perfect."

After the proposal is published in the Federal Register, there will be a comment period of 30 days. The secretary would then make the rule final unless dissuaded by the public comment.

"In proposing to withdraw the restrictions on home work, I hope to ease the regulatory burden on individuals who wish to work out of their homes," Donovan said.

Kathleen Briody of Bennington, a representative of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, said the current regulations keep employers from "turning living rooms, kitchens and bedrooms into factories."

Head Lice Invade Town, Set Off Chemical Scare

CHILLICOTHE, Texas (AP) — Pediculus capitis is a tiny, oblong insect that rivals the cockroach in evolutionary tenacity and poor public relations.

So when pediculus capitis — better known as the head louse — showed up in this small cattle and cotton town just south of the Oklahoma border, it caused an uproar. Its appearance also led to a chemical scare at the town's two public schools.

When the lice were first detected two months ago, some residents of Chillicothe reacted by going about their business with plastic bags on their heads, their hair smeared with petroleum jelly.

Parents washed their children's hair with insecticide-laden shampoos as many as 21 times a month, despite manufacturers' recommendations to use only once a week.

But the serious problems began when three members of the school board, including chairman Silas Boone, a cattle rancher, decided to spray the town's two public schools with Lindane and Toxaphene. The two insecticides are approved for use only on sheep and cattle — and banned for use in enclosed areas.

Four days later, after schoolchildren began suffering headaches, nausea and runny eyes in class, the two facilities — a grade school and a high school — were ordered closed indefinitely.

For almost a full month, children took their lessons in makeshift classrooms set up in three local churches and a Lion's Club building. Four of the school district's six school buses were also sprayed, so parents had to drive their children up to 30 miles a day round-trip.

The children joked about the "cooties" and the "cow poisons" that had drawn attention to their flatlands community, where agricultural chemicals have been a part of life for decades. One student, Lisa Freeman, 11, said, quite seriously, that city officials were considering changing the town's name to "Chilli-cootie."

But it was no joking matter for Texas Health Department officials, who spent weeks studying the results of tests conducted inside the schools.

Both buildings reopened this week after the tests showed that the concentrations of chemicals were below those permitted on edible fruit by the federal Food and Drug Administration. But several sections of the two schools, including lockers and the high school gymnasium, are still cordoned off because of high chemical levels.

"Quite frankly, I doubt whether they'll ever be able to completely eliminate the chemicals," said Dr. Phillip Zbylot, a physician with the Texas Health Department.

On March 30, scores of students and half a dozen teachers at the school came down with skin rashes, stomach cramps, nose and eye irritation and nausea when they arrived at the grade school three days after it was sprayed with a chemical relative of the banned insecticide DDT.

Zbylot said he thought some of the skin rashes were caused by the harsh shampoo parents used on the children.

Marie Haynes, a classroom aide at the grade school, suffered nose bleeds and developed ulcers around her mouth after spending several hours in the building.

The spraying by the school board members kicked up a storm of controversy when children started falling ill. Health officials say they believe the lice that had infested the children were already dead when the schools were sprayed — head lice need a human host to survive.

The label on the insecticide containers also warned against using the chemicals where humans might come in contact with them.

"It's not approved for use inside a building, not even a chicken coop," Zbylot said.

Boone has declined to comment, but the town's superintendant of schools, Monte Pannell, said the other board members and the school custodian who sprayed the chemicals told him they didn't read the label warning from the Environmental Protection Agency.

"They've been using these chemicals on their cattle for years without any problems," Pannell said. "We just weren't aware of the fine print on the label until after the spraying was over."

Dr. Roy Fisher, an osteopath who serves as the town's volunteer health officer, says he told the board that spraying was unnecessary.

"For one thing, the louse can't live without a human host. Spraying the school lockers and baseboards wasn't going to kill any lice," he said.

The three school board members "acted on impulse" because they were "pressured" by parents and teachers to do something about the head lice problem, said Pannell.

"The parents overreacted and the school board overreacted," he said.

Mrs. Haynes said the pressures brought to bear by parents cannot excuse the actions of the board.

"These are school board members who are entrusted with the safety of our children," she said. "All they had to do was read the label and all of this wouldn't have happened."

Zbylot said he plans to recommend a new book for the the grade school library, where some of the highest pesticide concentrations were found — "Silent Spring" by Rachel Carson, the tale of man's destruction of the environment through chemical pollution.

Tar Heel Democrats Feeling Pressure To Back Reagan Budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Several Democratic congressmen from North Carolina are being pressured to vote in favor of President Reagan's budget proposals, and at least one says he is the victim of a "smear campaign."

Rep. William Hefner said the Congressional Club distorted his record in several thousand letters sent this week to his constituents in the Eighth District.

Hefner tried to complain to Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, the honorary co-chairman, of the club, but was could not reach him.

"I'm sure Sen. Helms would not be part of half-truths or a smear campaign," Hefner said. "I hope a U.S. senator would not be part of a campaign like this."

The letters sent by the Congressional Club claimed Hefner voted for money to give away the Panama Canal, approved aid to Marxists in Nicaragua and is now about to vote against President Reagan.

The House will is scheduled to vote next week whether to adopt Reagan's $689 billion budget package or a $713.7 billion alternative proposed by Democratic leaders that contains more money for social programs and a smaller tax cut than Reagan has proposed.

North Carolina's four Republican congressmen are backing the Reagan plan, but the seven Democrats, including Hefner, are uncommitted despite increasing pressure to go with the president.

Reagan has personally telephoned Rep. L.H. Fountain and Rep. Stephen Neal to ask their support.

Neal said a national Republican organization has been calling his biggest campaign contributors and asking them to pressure him to vote for the Reagan budget.

Another group, the National Tax Limitation Committee has said it is targeting Rep. Ike Andrews. The group promised to generate thousands of letters and buy newspaper and radio ads in an effort to get Andrews to support the president.

Hefner, who said he turned down a White House offer of tickets to a Metropolitan Opera performance in Washington, was targeted by the Congressional Club. In its letter, the club enclosed post cards for Hefner's constituents to mail and seeks contributions for a media campaign to pressure him.

The allegations in the club's letter are "absolutely untrue," said Hefner, who said he voted against aid to Nicaragua last year.

The Panama Canal vote cited by the club was on funding to keep the canal operating and not on turning the facility over to the Panamanian government.

Boycott Absences Unexcused

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A boycott of the New Hanover County school system to protest a new course in human sexuality drew limited support Friday as about one-fourth of the students stayed out of class, school officials said.

Billy Mason, superintendent of schools, said 4,800 students of 19,700 enrolled in public schools were absent, or 24.7 percent. On a normal Friday, about 10 percent of the students are absent, he said.

He said there were no incidents at the schools and there are no plans to penalize students. However, Mason said any pupil using the boycott as an excuse for their absence would not be excused.

He said any pupil without a legitimate excuse would not be allowed to make up work missed.

The boycott was organized by a group called We The People for Quality Education. Ellen Williams, chairman of the group, said the boycott was ordered to protest a course in human sexuality scheduled for introduction to fifth graders next year.

She said the group does not oppose sex education in general, but was opposed to this particular course because it de-emphasized religion, family moral values and parental authority.

She said the course also was too explicit for lower grades.

School officials plan to evaluate the course after its introduction in the fifth grade and hope to introduce it in kindergarten through the 12th grade.

They said the boycott will not affect the school board's decision to start the course.

Police Seek Reason Slain Man In State

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Investigators are still trying to determine why a 23-year-old Tucson, Ariz., man, whose body was found in a ditch in Cabarrus County on Thursday, was doing in North Carolina.

Authorities identified the victim as Gregory Mayer. The Cabarrus County Sheriff's Department said Mayer apparently died sometime after midnight Thursday from gunshot wounds to the head and chest.

Lt. Detective Jerry Troutman and Sgt. Detective T.K. Bryant said Friday they have no suspects in the mysterious case. However, they have speculated that Mayer was a robbery victim. He was carrying about one dollar in change but had no wallet nor identification.

Investigators have pieced together information about Mayer's whereabouts since he left Tucson last Sunday morning in a pickup truck. He was headed for his parents home in Annandale, Va.

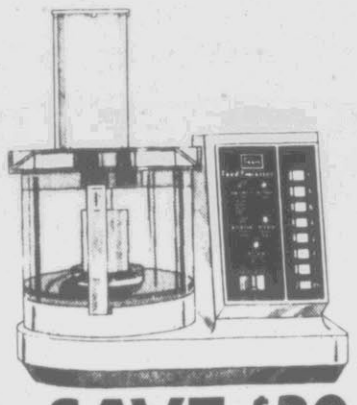

Mayer's father, John Falcone, and assistant general counsel with the National Labor Relations Board in Washington, could not be reached for comment.

Bryant, Troutman and Tom Miller, the NLRB's director of information, said Mayer had lived in Tucson for about two years and had worked for the Global Moving Co. He apparently left Arizona Sunday morning, but his truck broke down between Houston and San Antonio.

Mayer contacted NLRB regional director Louis Baldovin to let him know about the delay, but he said a couple with a tow truck had offered to tow him to Houston.

Per Capita Income Study Shows Money Flowing To South, West

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a graphic sign of growing Sun Belt strength, a new study of Americans' per capita income shows money flowing steadily south and west from the Northeast during the past decade.

The new Commerce Department study also indicates oil-rich Alaska has replaced Connecticut at the top of the per capita income list, while Mississippi remains at the bottom.

Northeastern citizens still rank high in per capita income, just behind Americans on the urbanized West Coast, but the biggest gains in the 1970s came in wide-open and warm-weather states.

The report, issued this weekend, is new evidence of surging economic development in the Southern and Western states, which have lured people and business from the Northeast with good climate, space to expand and relatively low-cost labor.

In the Southeast, North Carolina ranked fifth in per capita income behind Virginia, Florida, Louisiana and Georgia. The state's average per capita income in 1980 was $7,852 as compared to $3,200 in 1970, when North Carolina ranked fourth in per capita income.

The report noted "large increases in labor and proprietors' earnings in manufacturing, construction, state and local government and private service-type industries" in states that showed big income increases.

States which showed relatively small increases in per capita income — most of which were above average a decade earlier — were doing less well in such industries by 1980, it said.

The report also said:

—The nation's overall per person income rose 143 percent to $9,458 during the past decade. Every state showed income rising higher than the decade's 93.4 percent inflation increase as measured by the Commerce Department's personal consumer expenditure deflator.

—Alaska, averaging $12,406 for every man, woman and child, now ranks No. 1 in per capita income, followed by Connecticut, California, New Jersey and Wyoming. Mississippi, averaging $6,508, is No. 50, as it was in 1970; it now trails Arkansas, South Dakota and Alabama at the end of the list.

—The gap has narrowed between the richest and poorest regions, with 1970's below-average states increasing per capita income about 153 percent by 1980, while states which were above average in 1970 showed a 10-year increase of about 138 percent.

Most of the highest-ranking states are still in the highly developed Northeastern and West Coast parts of the nation, while the lowest-ranking generally are in the Southeast and Rocky Mountain regions.

But the trend during the 1970s was in the opposite direction.

Per capita income was rising about 129 percent in Mideastern states — ranging geographically from Maryland and Delaware up to New York — and 134 percent in New England states, the report said.

Meanwhile, per capita income was rising 167 percent in the Southwest and 150 percent or more in the Southeast, Rocky Mountain and Plains states.

Per capita income figures for states for 1980 and 1970 included:

SOUTHEAST — Alabama $7,484 and $2,892; Arkansas $7,180 and $2,791; Florida $8,987 and $3,698; Georgia $8,000 and $3,300; Kentucky $7,718 and $3,076; Louisiana $8,282 and $3,023; Mississippi $6,508 and $2,547; North Carolina $7,852 and $3,200; South Carolina $7,519 and $2,951; Tennessee $7,786 and $3,079; Virginia $9,435 and $3,677; West Virginia $7,831 and $3,038.

Union Agent Draws Fine

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — A Durham union official has been fined $5,000 and given a two-year suspended sentence after pleading guilty to charges of embezzling and mail fraud.

David Norwood, business agent and secretary-treasurer for Local 636 of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, was sentenced last week in U.S. District Court in Greensboro.

He could have received a 5-year sentence and an $11,000 fine.

Norwood entered a guilty plea last month to two counts of an 18-count federal indictments. The remaining counts against him were dropped in a plea bargaining arrangement.

He was accused of defrauding out-of-state workers almost $5,000 between 1976 and 1979 by charging $100 to $150 above the normal cost for union memberships and pocketing the difference.

The indictment also charged Norwood with soliciting contributions from applicants for a bogus building fund and altering financial records to hide his dealings.

Prison Escapee Flights Return

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In unusual hearing, the governor's legal affairs secretary has heard the testimony of friends, relatives and co-workers of a prison escapee who is fighting extradition.

Ray Samuel Brown, 35, is married in North Carolina where he escaped from a prison road gang 10 years ago. He had been serving a 5-year sentence for burglarizing a small grocery store and authorities in that state have asked Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. to extradite him.

In a three-hour closed session Friday, Ray Brown's supporters told legal affairs secretary Allen Sumner that Brown had rehabilitated himself in California, learned to become an auto mechanic, obtained the first jobs he ever had and married a woman whose two children he helped raise.

Sumner said the governor will review the case and decide whether to grant extradition in about two weeks. He said it is very rare for such hearings — only about six were held on 850 extradition requests last year. In only one out of 100 cases does the governor deny extradition requests, he said.

REJECT EVICTION

Analyst Calls Plan 'Phantom'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One element of Gov. Jim Hunt's highway tax and money-transfer proposal has been termed a "phantom" by a legislative staff analyst and was included, highway officials acknowledge, as a way to boost the package to a level recommended by the governor's Blue Ribbon Study Commission.

Hunt's eight-point highway proposal was unveiled earlier this week as a way to generate more than $207 million next year, and even more in the following year, to bail out the state's beleaguered highway fund.

The key proposal is a 3 cents per gallon increase in the tax on gasoline, but also included in the total figure is $20 million a year to be generated through cost savings by the Department of Transportation.

Hunt, in his statewide television address, said the money could be saved through administrative changes by department officials. In a news conference the following day, Hunt was pressed by reporters on where the savings would come from, and he said it could be documented.

"I just directed the department to get me 20 million dollars worth of savings, and they came up with it and they can show you where it's going to come from," Hunt said.

The department did not produce an itemized accounting of that savings, however, and Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw said in an interview Friday that the $20 million savings was a "goal" that he was confident of meeting or exceeding.

Bradshaw said some of the savings would come from the reduction of 500 to 600 employees over the next year, reductions in the use of employee autos and energy savings. But more than half of the money would come from reductions in design specifications of new roads and bridges, and department officials say those cannot be pinpointed until the money is available and projects begun.

"Until we know what the makeup of the program is, we can't really identify the savings," said Billy Rose, state highway administrator. "...We couldn't say whether it is $20 million or $25 million or $35 milllion."

Hunt unveiled a series of reductions in the design specifications for roads and bridges two weeks ago, and he told reporters at the time that he did know how much savings would be yielded.

The inclusion of the savings in the announcement of the total tax package also raised some eyebrows in the Legislative Building. Jim Newlin, senior analyst for the Legislature's fiscal research staff, said the savings would not generate new money to be counted in the size of the Hunt package.

"How do you add savings to a tax package?" he said in an interview. "It's a phantom thing."

An administration official familiar with the plan said the savings was only an "approximation."

"After the fact I don't even see how you could say how much was saved," he said, asking not to be named.

Bradshaw, in an interview, said that Hunt's package — if passed by the General Assembly exactly as it is proposed — would not provide the department with the full $207 million.

Instead, the department is counting on Hunt's package to provide $186.1 million in the upcoming fiscal year and $190.3 million in fiscal 1983, for a total package of $376.4 million.

The first figure represents the total one-year package minus the $20 million savings figure. The extra $1 million, Bradshaw said, came from a rounding upwards of fractions of a million dollars by the department.

FIRE DAMAGE

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A fire early Saturday destroyed the Yugoslav national tourist office and five rooms of the downtown hotel in which it is located, police reported. No injuries were reported.

Authorities said they were investigating the blaze and were not ruling out arson.

Vacationers Leave Bermuda As Strikes Worsen

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Planeloads of American vacationers streamed off this strike-bound island in the sun Saturday as the white-dominated government and the overwhelmingly black labor movement dug in for a potentially explosive showdown.

More than a dozen major hotels, hobbled by staff walkouts, are expected to be shut down by mid-week. This is normally the start of the peak tourist season on Bermuda, a speck of green in the Atlantwc 600 miles east of North Carolina.

Occupancy at the lavish resort hotels strung among the island's sandy coves fell below 50 percent by Saturday, and it was expected to dip to near zero by late Sunday, said Lyndon Clay, executive vice president of the Bermuda Hotel Association.

As the strikes spread from the taxis to the hotels to the telephone system, the estimated 12,000 American tourists who were here last week tried to adapt cheerfully, some hiring horse-and-buggy drivers to take them out on the town, others trying to navigate Bermuda's narrow, drive-on-the-left lanes on motorbikes.

But on Friday hotel executives said their supervisory staffs alone could not keep the hotels functioning indefinitely, and they would be closing down.

The damage to the tourism industry has Bermuda's leadership deeply worried. Tourism accounts for 70 percent of the economy of the Manhattan-sized island, a self-governing British colony.

"Our whole future is at stake," Premier David Gibbons told fellow Bermudans on local radio Thursday as he announced the call-up of the the Bermuda Regiment, a 220-man reserve unit, to guard against violence.

Many Bermudans fear a repetition of black rioting that scorched this tiny capital in December 1977.

At least 5,000 people, more than one-sixth the island work force, are believed to be on strike, but the labor dispute directly involves only 1,200 of them — hospital employees, bus drivers, ferry and tugboat crews, postal workers and other government employees. The hotel workers and others have walked off the job in sympathy strikes aimed at pressuring the conservative United Bermuda Party government into meeting its employees' wage demands.

The public service workers want a 38 percent pay hike over two years of a new contract, but the government has offered 29 percent.

The root of the discontent can be found in some simple statistics:

— Bermuda is one of the wealthiest spots in the world. Its per-capita gross national product was $9,400 in 1979, putting it among the top 20 countries in that category.

— Prices are equally lofty. A pound of coffee costs $5, a regular loaf of bread $1.65, a 1-bedroom apartment in a black district $450 and often more. Consumer prices are rising at a 13-percent-a-year clip.

"When you look at the cost of living, $200 is nothing," striking bus driver Beresford Wade complained to a reporter at a Hamilton harbor picket line.

"There is just too great a disparity between the haves and the have-nots in Bermuda," said Ottiwell Simmons, president of the powerful Bermuda Industrial Union.

The 10,000-member BIU represents almost all of the workers on strike, and almost all of them are black.

Bermuda is unique among the English-speaking islands of the Caribbean and western Atlantic in that its population of 57,000 is closely balanced between the two races — 40 percent white and 60 percent black. Such other islands as Jamaica and the Bahamas are heavily black.

Although there are important black businessmen, old white families have a tight hold on economic life here. Premier Gibbons himself is a millionaire merchant, and poorer blacks regard his UBP as a tool of the business establishment, although some blacks are in party leadership positions.

Course Offers Gambling Tips

NEW YORK (AP) — Odds are you have not met Professor Harold Shane.

He is a small man, compact, in his 40s, with a high, academic forehead, steel-rimmed glasses, an authoritative grip. If you are one who views life as a roll of the dice, you would like very much to meet him, odds are.

He is a mathematician. Some years ago he began putting that science to a most humane use. He taught gambling.

"I did not teach people how to win at gambling," he says, shaking his finger like a windshield wiper. "No way. I taught them that if they were determined to get sheared, they might as well get sheared slowly, make the inevitable take more time.

"Mathematics is not an exact science. But the laws of probability are dreadfully accurate. Don't mess with them."

Professor Shane is really hooked on math — in the way some people, you might say, are hooked on playing the ponies. "In this country," he says, "the average person's background in math is absolutely feeble." As head of the math department at Baruch College, and in every other way that presents itself, he tries to correct that.

So when casino gambling became legal in Atlantic City, just a short drive from here (the odds of finding a room on a weekend are short, too), he started a course in his college's continuing studies program on Casino Gambling.

Students flocked to his classroom, eager to brush up on math.

"I tried teaching a simplified course on the probability theory. I find it terribly interesting," he says.

"Well, they didn't. I finally boiled out all the math theory and just taught them how to play the games. That's what they wanted. You know, like in blackjack always split eights, never split fives, double down on 11 unless the dealer is showing an ace, things like that." Got it, math students?

"I taught how to play roulette. That was easy. I taught craps; much more interesting, from a mathematical standpoint. I taught how slot machines work. I taught keno, parimutuels, the works.

"I taught various betting systems for all these games, but always stressed that no betting system can make an unfair game fair and that all the games are unfair or the casino wouldn't make money."

Professor Shane, himself, does not gamble. Oh, he likes a good bridge game, or gin, or poker, but that's different.

"The fun of card games is pitting your skill against another person's" he says. "Betting money is a way of keeping score." And how has the professor done in the scorekeeping department? "Over the years, ahead." You tend not to doubt him.

"Casino gambling is different. I have no moral scruples about it. I just find other ways of spending my money to be more entertaining and less expensive.

"If someone would rather spend $50 at a dice table than on a dinner and a show, I have no quarrel. Trouble is, the casino's lure is such that it is hard to stop at your allotted $50. People who try to chase their losses will never catch them. Not in the long run.

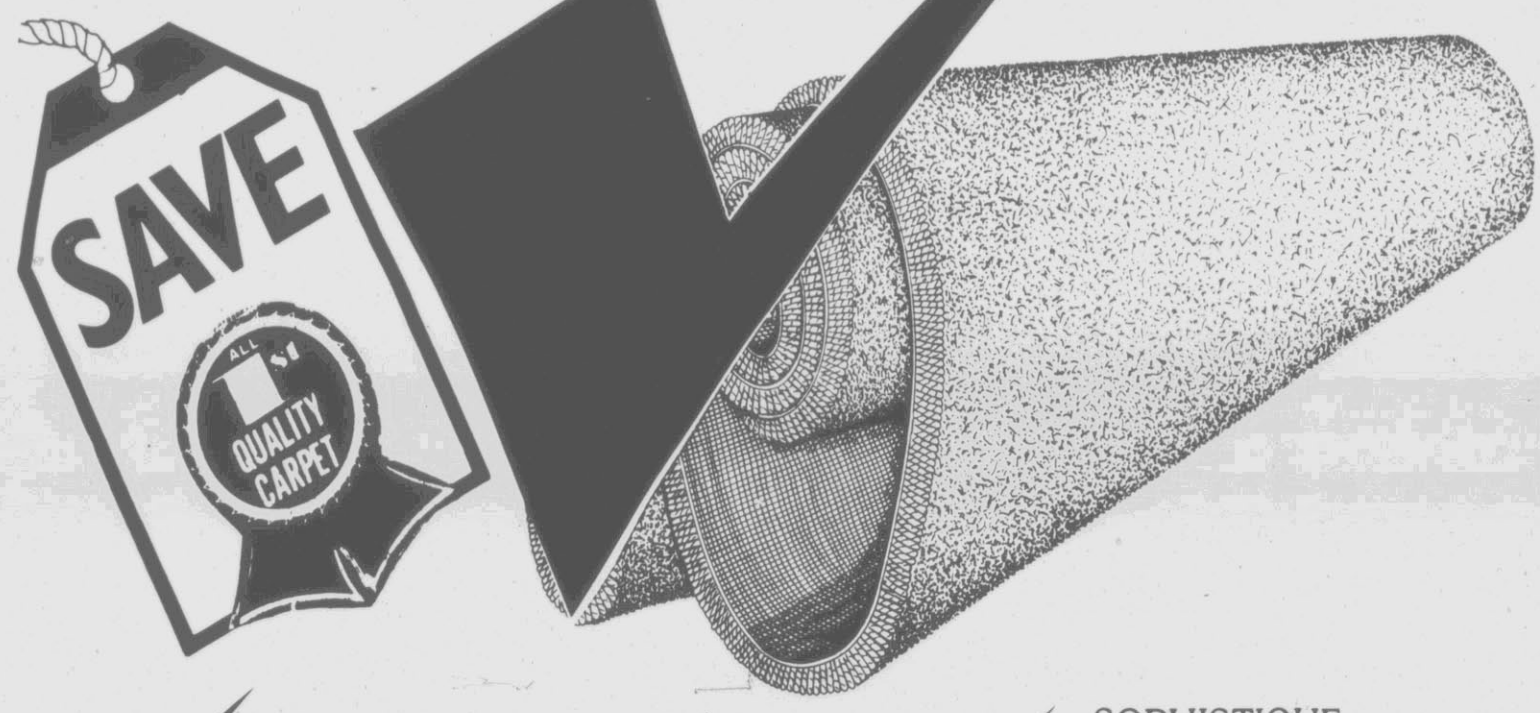

"I know this. I know there is no way around the laws of probability. My only aim was to give these people the best chance to make the process take a little longer."

Professor Shane dropped his gambling course a couple of semesters ago. Frankly, he admits, he had grown a bit tired of it. But now the debate over legalized casino gambling in New York state is back in the papers and he is pondering suggestions that he start the course again.

"I guess," he said thoughtfully, weighing the odds, "there is always a chance I shall."

Pleasant Colony Wins Kentucky Derby

The Finish
This is how the field looked as Kentucky Derby winner Pleasant Colony crossed the finish line at Churchill Downs Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — John Campo says he's the world's greatest handicapper, and Saturday, Pleasant Colony made him that — at least for the Kentucky Derby. The colt made Campo look like a pretty good trainer, too.

The 107th Kentucky Derby, which will be remembered as a court case as well as a horse race, ended 2:02 after it started with Pleasant Colony three-quarters of a length ahead of Woodchopper, and Partez another three lengths back.

A couple of days before the race Campo said, "You gotta be a little lucky ... and touchdown."

Pleasant Colony triumphed over 20 other 3-year-olds, including Flying Nashua and Mythical Ruler, who got into the race through legal action taken by their owners. They had been eliminated after being entered Thursday by Churchill Downs' 20-horse-limit rule for the Derby, based on earnings of the entrants. Their owners scored victories in court, but the colts didn't fare so well on the track.

Flying Nashua finished eighth and Mythical Ruler 17th.

The reinstatement of the two colts pushed the field to 22, but the filly Wayward Lass ran Friday in the Kentucky Oaks, finishing third, and was scratched from the Derby Saturday morning.

Besides making Campo, a 5-foot-7, 250-pound wisecracker off the streets of New York, a big winner, Pleasant Colony carried Jorge Velasquez, the winner of more than 4,000 races, into the winner's circle of a Triple Crown race for the first time.

"Velasquez is probably the greatest rider in the world, but crazy as I am, I could take him off tomorrow," said Campo. He was joking.

Velasquez was under suspension when Pleasant Colony, flying the colors of Thomas Mellon Evans' Buckland Farm, charged into the Derby picture with a victory in the 1⅛-mile Wood Memorial April 18 at Aqueduct. Jeff Fell rode.

But Saturday Fell was on his regular mount, Proud Appeal, who was coupled in the betting with Golden Derby as the 2-1 favorite, and with the final quarter of the 1¼-mile race he found himself fourth while Velasquez was eighth. But 26 seconds later Velasquez had the roses, and Fell found himself on the 18th finisher.

Fell offered no excuses while Velasquez said, "I'm just tickled to death. I'm so nervous and so happy at the same time."

Pleasant Colony's victory was worth a record $317,200 from the richest purse of $404,200 to his owner and worth $9, $5.50 and $4.40.

Woodchopper, owned by Greentree Stable and ridden by Eddie Delahoussaye, paid $23.40 amd $13. Partez, a member of the mutuel field, owned by Mrs. and Mrs. Henry Green and Elizabeth Davis and ridden by Sandy Hawley, returned $4.

Hawley admitted a mistake.

"Yes, I did misjudge the wire and stood up at the sixteenth pole," he said. "About that time I was getting dirt in my face and I thought I saw the wire and I started easing up. You get used to the finish line at certain tracks. I know it didn't cost us second money."

Campo, saying instructions to "break good," were given to Velasquez, added, "But he took him way back. I'm surprised at that, but I'm not the jockey, I'm the trainer."

Velasquez might have not followed instructions exactly, but he got the sought-after results.

Completing the order of finish were Television Studio, Pass the Tab, Splendid Spruce, Flying Nashua, Noble Nashua, Bold Ego, Double Sonic, Hoedown's Day, Beau Rit, Tap Shoes, Cure the Blues, Well Decorated, Mythical Ruler, Proud Appeal, Top Avenger, Mexican-bred Habano and Golden Derby.

It was a good day for horses who, many observers felt, shouldn't be in the Derby. Television Studio's fifth-place finish made it three consecutive placings for field horses, following Pleasant Colony and Woodchopper.

There can only be 12 betting interests, so nine horses were coupled in the wagering as the mutuel field.

And, on the other hand, it was a disastrous day for some top equine and human personalities. Less than two weeks ago, a half interest in Proud Appeal was sold for $5 million, but the colt didn't run worth a nickle in the Derby. Tap Shoes, who went into the Derby on workouts, not having raced since he won the Flamingo March 28, also was a disappointment for 80-year-old trainer Horatio Luro, who was trying for his third Derby victory.

Saturday morning, the irrepressible Campo said, "If Luro wins this race, I'll personally shake his hand."

Another dismal performance was that turned in by Cure the Blues, who had won the first six starts of his career but now has lost three in a row. After a third-place finish in the Wood, jockey Jacinto Vasquez was taken off and replaced by Bill Shoemaker. On this colt, the Shoe didn't fit. It was the 21st Derby start for the 49-year-old Shoemaker, tying Eddie Arcaro, and it was the 18th time he has lost.

Delahoussaye said he was hurt by racing luck. "I got in trouble at the five-sixteenths pole ... there were too many horses in front of me. I just had to wait at the quarter pole. When it gets down to running, and he wants to run ... we were down to the eighth pole before he could run."

Hawley, on Partez, thought he was the winner at the top of the stretch. "He is a big, strong horse, but he got to looking around a little bit. I thought he might be able to show a little more speed than he did, but we didn't get shut off or anything."

Chancellor Says Sanctions 'Inconceivable'

Illini Put On 3-Year Probation

URBANA, Ill. (AP) - The Big Ten placed Illinois on three years probation Saturday for its handling of the controversial eligibility case of quarterback Dave Wilson.

University officials said they had done nothing to deserve such harsh punishment, and would meet Monday with the leaders of other conference schools, apparently to discuss Illinois' options.

The penalty includes two years without postseason play for all Illinois teams, and no conference revenue — a loss estimated at $800,000 a year.

"It is inconceivable ... that the conference would impose sanctions of this magnitude," said Chancellor John Cribbet. "The Wilson case does not involve illegal aid to athletes, forged transcripts or other violations which have plagued intercollegiate athletics in recent years."

Wilson sued the conference and the university when he was declared academically ineligible in 1980. He played under a court order last year and hopes a judge will allow him to play again this year.

Cribbet and university President Stanley Ikenberry, in a joint statement, conceded that Illinois made minor administrative errors, but did not lie, cheat or deceive the Big Ten.

"The university unequivocally denies that any of its actions were based on bad faith, concealment, misrepresentation or intentional withholding of information from the Big Ten faculty representatives," said Cribbet.

The faculty representatives — one from each school — govern the conference. Commissioner Wayne Duke said a six-month investigation by nine of them concluded that Illinois broke Big Ten rules.

"We question ... the severity and appropriateness of the sanctions, and to an even greater degree, take offense at the tone of the faculty representatives' findings," said Cribbet.

Ikenberry and Cribbet, who declined to answer questions, did not indicate whether Illinois might consider leaving the conference if the penalty is not reduced. They said they hoped the university and the Big Ten could work to resolve misunderstandings in the Wilson case.

"Yet, before this can be accomplished, a spirit of cooperation must displace the deep-seated antagonism and mistrust which now prevails," said Cribbet.

Neither he nor Ikenberry would answer reporters' questions at the Saturday news conference.

Duke said it was "totally unthinkable" that Illinois would leave the conference.

"It is only fair to point out that the actions which have given rise to these penalties have grown out of a unique situation which has, at least momentarily obscured the fact that the University of Illinois has been an important member of the conference," said Duke.

Duke said if Illinois took remedial action, the penalty could be reduced by one year, but he declined to say what action the school would have to take.

Duke said a six-month examination by nine of the conference's faculty representatives had determined that the university "violated conference rules and principles in connection with the submission of a petition to waive rules on behalf of one of its student-athletes; its actions in court proceedings that student-athlete's eligibility; and in its failure to adhere to conference rules ..."

In a lengthy report released Saturday, the conference charged that Illinois committed at least seven infractions.

These include:

•Filing a petition for waiver of conference rules in Wilson's behalf that was "materially and inexcusably innaccurate."

•Failing "to deal in good faith with the conference by withholding information that was relevant to the league's decision whether to grant the aforementioned petition."

Streater Has Little Chance Of Walking Again, Says Doctor

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina football player Steve Streater stands little, if any, chance of ever walking again, his attending physician at N.C. Memorial Hospital said Saturday.

Dr. Timothy Taft, an orthopedic surgeon who works with UNC athletes, said Streater suffered what amounts to a broken neck.

Streater, 22, was injured Thursday night when the car he was driving hit a wet spot, skidded into an embankment and overturned. He was leaving Raleigh-Durham Airport at the time of the accident after returning from Washington where he had signed a free-agent contract with the Washington Redskins.

Taft said Streater suffered a fractured dislocation of the seventh cervical vertebra, which is located at the base of the neck. He said his experience, and that of other physicians, gives little hope of Streater being able to recover from his paralysis. Taft said he is paralyzed from the upper chest down, but did retain the movement of his arms.

"If the paralysis is immediate and complete, as it was in his case, it has been our experience that the person does not recover," Taft said in a telephone interview. He added that while there may be some accounts of recovery from a similar injury, there is not much hope based on past experience.

Taft said the injury usually occurs when a person receives a blow on the head that cause an inflection of the neck. Paralysis occurs if the spinal cord is severed or crushed beyond the point it can recover, Taft added.

"It is our feeling that he received the injury when the car rolled over," Taft said.

Streater, who is in the intensive care unit at the hospital, had his condition downgraded from fair to poor Saturday. But Taft said his condition is "essentially the same." He said he did know why the hospital administration had changed the condition.

Saturday afternoon, UNC officials said surgery would be performed Sunday morning to fuse Streater's spinal column. Taft said the operation would stabilize the bones in Streater's neck. He said earlier that the surgery would not affect the paralysis.

Taft said Streater is now in traction and would remain in intensive care for about a week.

"Then we'll talk to the family about where he will go for rehabilitation," Taft said, adding that Streater will have to undergo intensive rehabilitation to "learn how to live with is disability."

Taft said Streater was "a bit depressed" Saturday.

Streater was a defensive star on the Tar Heels team this season, starting at defensive back and handling the punting chores on the squad that finished 11-1. He was the first Atlantic Coast Conference player to be named to the all-conference team at two positions in the same year.

Also "Steve Streater Day," which was planned for Sunday in Streater's hometown of Sylva, has been postponed.

"All I can say is that Steve Streater Day has been postponed indefinitely as of right now," said Lionel Brooks, a coach at Sylva-Webster High School, where Streater attended school and starred in four sports.

"It's been a shock to everyone here," Brooks said, adding that Streater was a hero in the small town. "You have to realize he played four sports...and he was national high school baseball player of the year in 1977. He was real well-known and admired."

Also in the accident was Streater's roommate Tyress Bratton. Bratton escaped the crash with minor cuts and bruises. Bratton remembered that after the accident Streater kept saying, "I can't believe this happened."

Streater's parents are in Chapel Hill to be close to their son.

"We're just beginning to settle down so we can get some rest," his mother said. "All that I can tell you is that he is resting fine."

Record 62 Has Streck Atop Open

HOUSTON (AP) — Ron Streck, who fired a record-setting 62 to take a three-shot lead in the third round of the $350,000 Michelob-Houston Open Golf Tournament Saturday, has been in this position before.

And the only other time he was in this position, Streck won.

That was in his rookie year in the 1978 San Antonio-Texas Open. He had closing rounds of 63-62 to score his only PGA Tour victory. And his 125 total for the last two rounds in that tournament stands as an all-time Tour record.

"I'd like to break it," he said.

"I'm certainly not afraid to win," Streck said, "and I'm certainly going to be trying to win.

"I've been out here long enough, and I've looked at the way other players win, to know that Saturday is position day. You want to get yourself in position to be able to win on Sunday."

And the baby-faced Streck did that.

He one-putted 13 times in his remarkable effort that broke the course record on the 7,071-yard Woodlands Country Club layout. The score matched the lowest 18 hole total of the year on the PGA Tour.

It sent him into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $63,000 first prize with a 54-hole total of 198, 15 shots under par.

"The greens were putting very well. I got it going and everything seemed to go in," he said.

A pair of former U.S. Open champions, Hale Irwin and Jerry Pate, shared second at 201. Pate had a 66 in the warm, windy weather and Irwin shot a 67 that included bogeys on the first and last holes.

"I'm still expriencing erratic play," said Irwin, twice a winner of the American national championship and usually one of the game's steadier players.

"I'm getting birdies in bunches," he said. "For the third day in a row, I made four birdies in a row. And then I play some holes badly. I guess it's just lack of concentration."

Irwin and Pate were followed by Jay Haas and Ben Crenshaw at 202. Crenshaw bogeyed the last hole for a 67 and Haas shot a 68.

The group at 203, five shots back and very much within striking distance, included Bruce Lietzke, second-round leader Bob Gilder and Tom Kite. Lietzke had a 67, Kite 70 and Gilder matched par 71.

76ers-Celtics Set For Dream Matchup Today

BOSTON (AP) — It's a dream game, the Philadelphia 76ers and the Boston Celtics — the best in basketball — going head-to-head for 48 minutes Sunday on the unique parquet floor of Boston Garden, where banners hang from the rafters to remind one and all of the National Basketball Association's greatest dynasty.

The question is, will the amazing comeback Celtics, who have made a playoff habit of digging themselves early graves only to claw their way out, be rudely awakened by the explosive but erratic 76ers, or will Philadelphia's dream of an NBA title, so real only a week ago, turn into a nightmare of disappointment and defeat?

To be sure, the NBA champion will not be crowned Sunday. It's the Eastern Conference title that's at stake, and a berth in the finals against the Houston Rockets, who were only 40-42 during the regular season but blasted their way through the West playoffs.

But forward Cedric Maxwell of the Celtics put in words what every player who has taken part in this emotion-charged renewal of the Philly-Boston rivalry feels in his heart.

"There's no doubt that these two teams are the cream of the crop," said Maxwell. "We had the best records during the regular season and we've been the best in the playoffs. The winner of this series will win the championship, I don't think there's any doubt about that."

A week ago Philadelphia led the best-of-seven series 3-1 and seemed certain to fulfill its playoff promise of 1977, when after losing to Portland in the finals, the 76ers told their fans, "We owe you one." A loss Sunday and that debt would be up to five.

The Celtics stayed alive by winning 111-109 here Wednesday night, scoring the last eight points of the game as Philadelphia blew a six-point lead — with possession of the ball, no less — in the final 90 seconds. And Friday night, in what Celtics guard M.L. Carr described as "the most intense game of basketball I've ever been involved in," Boston rallied from deficits of 17 points in the second quarter and 15 in the third to win 100-98, ending an 11-game losing streak in Philadelphia and evening the series at 3-3.

But while the series may be even, but it's the 76ers who are struggling and the Celtics who are surging.

"Our backs are to the wall," admitted Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "We have one of two choices. Either we go up to Boston and hang our heads, or we take it to them. We'll see what happens."

"We still control our own destiny," reminded Caldwell Jones, the 76ers' defensive mainstay. "We can be heroes or goats. We had the opportunity to put them away twice now and couldn't do it. But we have to keep thinking positive. It all boils down to a one-game series now, and in a one-game series anything can happen."

"Nobody's in the driver's seat till this thing is over," cautioned Boston Coach Bill Fitch. "But we feel confident we can beat any team if we play our ball game, and playing at home won't hurt us any."

Boston earned the chance to play at home by the slimmest of margins, which is an accurate estimate of the difference between these two teams. Although both finished with 62-20 records, the Celtics beat Philadelphia 98-94 in their regular-season finale to win the Atlantic Division title and the home-court advantage through the playoffs.

"The Garden will be rocking on Sunday," promised Kevin McHale, the shot-blocking rookie who has emerged as the key player off the Boston bench. "The golf clubs will have to stay in the shop a little longer, and that's fine with me."

"Everyone fell off our wagon in Boston when we were down 3-1," said Larry Bird, who has had a brilliant series and topped the Celtics with 25 points and 16 rebounds Friday night. "But we never quit and our fans never quit on us and it would be great to win it at home."

But Darryl Dawkins, who has has two straight solid games at center, promised the 76ers won't just go through the motions.

"It's not a matter of who plays where, it's who wants it more," he said. "They'll be just as tight as we are. We can't let ourselves become intimidated. We must play to win. We won't just throw our sneakers on the court. I'm still loose, I still have confidence and I still want that (championship) ring."

For the Celtics, who have erased halftime deficits of 15, 17, 10 and 9 points in the last four games, losing Games 3 and 4 after rallying, then winning Games 5 and 6, thay can make things easier for themselves by getting off the a faster start Sunday.

And for the 76ers, a key — besides not blowing a big lead if and when they get it — could be getting a big game from Julius Erving. The all-star forward managed just 16 points on 5-for-17 shooting Friday, when he was under intense defensive pressure from Maxwell.

"He's the greatest player I've ever played against," said Maxwell. "In a game like this, they'll want to go to him and use him. But I'll be ready. We'll all be ready. There are a lot of winners on this team and we've shown that by coming back. We've played the brand of basketball that made us No. 1 and we'll play it again Sunday."

If they do, they just might earn a chance to play for a 14th championship banner — and somebody might have to make some room up in the rafters.

Boston Drops Sixth Straight As Red Sox Fall To Twins, 11-2

Armas Hits 8th HR As A's Whip Yankees For 20th

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Tony Armas, with his eighth home run of the season, opened a four-homer Oakland A's barrage which beat the New York Yankees 6-3 Saturday.

Baseball's hottest team is off to a 20-3 start, best in the major leagues since 1955 when the Brooklyn Dodgers were 20-2. The A's 27 homers have helped them open a seven-game lead in the American League West.

Another reason the A's are doing so well, Yankees Manager Gene Michael charged, is that all the Oakland pitchers are throwing spitballs.

Matt Keough, who made his record 5-0 with last-out relief help from Bob Owchinko Saturday, is the worst offender, according to Michael.

"It was obvious he was throwing a spitter and after we complained Keough wanted to show everybody he can throw a spitter any time he wants to," said Michael. "If they can get away with it, I recommend it for every pitcher in baseball."

The first time Reggie Jackson came to bat, he asked home plate umpire Jim McKean to check the ball several times. After drawing a walk, Jackson gestured from first base, indicating that Keough was "loading up" on subsequent pitches.

"They can check the ball as many times as they want. Reggie was just playing around. He laughed about it later," said Keough, who has lived with spitball accusations and denied them since finding success last year (16-13) after a horrid 2-17 record in 1979.

Rob Picciolo, Rickey Henderson and Cliff Johnson also homered in Saturday's victory.

The crowd of 48,179 put the A's attendance for 11 games at 319,099 — greater than their entire 1979 season at home.

Armas took the major league home-run lead with his leadoff blast in the second inning off Ron Guidry, 2-2. The Oakland right fielder also had a single and a triple.

The Yankees tied it in the third on an RBI single by Dave Winfield, but the A's went ahead with three runs in the bottom of the third.

Picciolo lined a one-out homer over the left field fence on an 0-2 pitch from Guidry and Henderson followed with a homer deep into the left field bleachers. With two outs, Johnson walked and came around on singles by Armas and Tim Hosley.

Barry Foote made it 4-2 in the fourth with his third homer in four games with the Yankees, but after Dwayne Murphy singled in the seventh, Johnson wrapped up the Oakland scoring with a two-run homer in the seventh off reliever Doug Bird.

The Yankees got an unearned run in the eighth. Oscar Gamble and Graig Nettles singled and, when Bob Watson flied to short center field, Gamble tagged up at third but was trapped in a rundown. He scored after third baseman Dave McKay let catcher Mike Heath's throw get past him.

BOSTON (AP) — The Minnesota Twins bombed Mike Torrez and Bob Stanley for nine runs in the first two innings Saturday and breezed to a 15-hit 11-2 victory over Boston, extending the Red Sox's losing streak to six games.

Al Williams, who had lost his first three decisions, scattered seven hits over eight innings, walking two and striking out out three for his first victory.

The Red Sox, who have managed only seven runs in their worst slump since 1977, scored in the first inning on Jim Rice's sacrifice fly and in the eighth on Dwight Evans' fourth homer of the year.

Torrez, 1-2, lasted only two-thirds of an inning as Minnesota scored six runs in the first.

Hosken Powell led off with a triple to center and scored on a double by John Castino, the first of his three hits. Mickey Hatcher bunted and was safe when Torrez's throw to third was too late to get Castino. Roy Smalley walked, loading the bases, and Glenn Adams blooped a double to left, scoring Castino and Hatcher.

Rob Wilfong then walked before Rick Sofield hit into a double play, scoring Smalley. Ron Jackson followed with a single and Torrez was replaced by Stanley. Singles by Sal Butera and Castino around a walk to Powell brought in the sixth run.

Sofield drove in two runs with a double in a three-run second while Ron Jackson collected a two-run double off Bill Campbell, the fourth Boston pitcher, in the eighth. It was Jackson's third hit of the game.

BALTIMORE (AP) — A two-out single by Eddie Murray following three bases-loaded walks by Toronto pitchers capped a five-run Baltimore sixth inning as the Orioles defeated the Blue Jays 8-3 for a sweep of Saturday's twi-night double header.

The Orioles, who have won 19 straight games against Toronto at home, took the opener 4-3 when pinch-hitter Jose Morales rapped a second-chance ninth-inning double after an apparent strikeout.

Baltimore, which has won four in a row, stranded 10 runners in the first game and was following the same pattern in the nightcap until wildness finally caught up with the Toronto pitchers.

Starter Luis Leal, 2-3, was lifted after the Orioles loaded the bases with two out in the sixth on two walks and a single by Rick Dempsey.

Reliever Jerry Garvin walked Al Bumbry, giving Baltimore a 2-1 lead. Roy Lee Jackson issued two more walks and gave up the single to Murray, who had stranded 10 previous runners in the doubleheader.

Scott McGregor, 2-1, allowed six Toronto hits, including a fourth-inning home run by Jorge Bell and RBI singles by Rick Bosetti and Barry Bonnell.

In the opener, Lenn Sakata drew one of Baltimore's 11 walks to open the bottom of the ninth and was sacrificed to second by Ken Singleton.

Murray was walked intentionally and Morales apparently fanned when plate umpire Mike Reilly called him out on a foul tip. But the Orioles appealed and second base umpire Larry Barnett overruled Reilly, saying the ball had been trapped by catcher Ernie Whitt. Whitt was ejected for arguing the decision.

Morales hit the next pitch from Mike Willis, 0-2, into the left-field corner for a double, his 96th career pinch hit.

Jim Palmer, 1-0, retired 17 consecutive batters after yielding RBI doubles in the first inning by John Mayberry and Al Woods. A two-out homer in the eighth by Lloyd Moseby, Toronto's fifth and last hit, tied it 3-3.

Kansas City.....7
Texas.....2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Willie Aikens crashed two doubles off the outfield wall and scored three times Saturday night to lead the Kansas City Royals past the Texas Rangers 7-2.

The Royals were 4-10 and off to their worst start ever after a Thursday night shutout at the hands of the Rangers but the defending American League champions have now won two games in a row for the first time this season.

Dennis Leonard, 2-3, shackled Texas on five hits and retired 10 batters in a row over one stretch. Amos Otis, Jamie Quirk and Cesar Geronimo each had two runs batted in for the Royals.

Loser Doc Medich, 2-2, allowed 10 hits before being lifted in the seventh inning.

Aikens doubled and scored on Geronimo's single in the second inning. He doubled again in the fourth, Otis singled him to third and White brought him home with a single. Otis took third on the hit and scored on a grounder by Geronimo.

Texas scored single runs in the fifth and sixth innings. Mario Mendoza brought home one with a sacrifice fly and John Grubb hit a solo homer, his second of the season.

Kansas City then wrapped it up with three runs in the seventh when Otis singled to score John Wathan, who had doubled, and, after an intentional walk to Aikens, Quirk doubled both runners across.

Cleveland.....3
Chicago.....1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Len Barker pitched a seven-hitter and Duane Kuiper, in his first game since last June 1, slapped two key singles to spark the Cleveland Indians to a 3-1 triumph over the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

The victory was the Indians' fourth in a row and ninth in their last 10 games.

Barker, 2-1, struck out eight and walked two as he outdueled White Sox Francisco Barrios, 1-2. Barrios went the distance, limiting the Indians to five hits.

Kuiper was making his first appearance after suffering torn knee ligaments and undergoing surgery last June 6.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the third inning. Kuiper and Tom Veryzer singled, Kuiper came aroubd on grounders by Miguel Dilone and Rick Manning. Bo Diaz opened the Indians fifth inning with a single, moved to third on Kuiper's second hit and scored when Veryzer grounded into a double play.

The Indians added a run in the sixth.

Ayden-Grifton Downs Firebirds, 4-0

Chargers Clinch ECC Tie

LITTLEFIELD — Tyrone Gay struck out 13 and held Southern Nash to two hits as Ayden-Grifton beat the Firebirds, 4-0, Saturday night to clinch at least a tie for the Eastern Carolina Confernece crown.

The Chargers are now 12-1 in the ECC and have a three-game bulge over Southern Nash and Charles B. Aycock with three games left. Both the Firebirds and the Falcons are 8-4.

"We played real well tonight," Ayden-Grifton coach Allan Wilson said. "We didn't get many hits but that two-run homer in the sixth really picked us up."

That "two-run homer" was Brandt Allen's shot over the right-field fence with one gone in the sixth and Gay on first with a walk. The two-run shot gave the Chargers a 3-0 lead.

Ayden-Grifton had taken a 1-0 lead i the third when Bernard Ricciarelli singled and Terry Locust, Chuck Smithwick and Allen walked.

Ayden-Grifton's final run came in the sixth. Chris Strickland was hit by a pitch and then moved to second on Riccarelli's single. Both runners moved up a base on a balk. Strickland subsequently scored on a passed ball.

Ricciarelli led the Charger's at the plate with four hits in four at bats. Allen was one for two with three RBIs.

Gay went the distance for the win, his ninth of the season against two defeats. Gay gave up a third-inning single and a sixth-inning infield hit for the only two hits of the eveing.

"Tyrone threw the ball real well tonight, especially his fastball," Wilson said.

The victory came one night after the Chargers edged North Pitt, 3-1, on a two-run single by Allen in the bottom of the sixth.

Asked if he was concerned about playing again so soon, Wilson said: "Not really. I thought they'd be emotionally ready for them, especially since they had beaten us earlier and we had a chance to tie for the title."

A win Tuesday at North Lenoir would give Ayden-Grifton its first league crown under Wilson. The Chargers last won the ECC crown in 1976.

San Francisco Sweeps Pair From Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Doyle Alexander earned his 100th major league victory as the San Francisco Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-2 in the first game of Saturday's twi-night doubleheader, which featured home runs by Jack Clark and Darrell Evans.

In the nightcap, Marty Bystrom, who has yet to lose a major league game — he's 7-0 — pitched a three-hitter and Keith Moreland slammed two homers as the Phillies won 3-1.

Bystrom won five games when he came up last September and helped the Phillies win the National League pennant. The rookie right-hander is 2-0 this season.

In the opener, Clark's two-run, second-inning homer and Evans' fourth-inning solo smash and two-run single in the seventh triggered the Giants' offense.

In the second game, Mike Schmidt socked his sixth home run of the season to give the Phillies a 1-0 lead in the fourth off loser Ed Whitson, 0-3. The Giants tied it in the fifth when Evans led off with a homer on a 3-1 pitch.

Moreland provided Bystrom with the lead again by leading off the sixth with a first-pitch home run — his first of the season — to help celebrate the catcher's 27th birthday. Moreland put another candle in his cake in the eighth with another homer, this one off Fred Breining, to make it 3-1.

Bystrom struck out nine and did not allow a walk while Whitson went seven innings and gave up just three hits.

Alexander, 4-1, pitched six scoreless innings of four-hit ball in the opener. He left the game after his arm stiffened slightly in the cold weather and Greg Minton hurled the final three innings, allowing two runs in the eighth on Pete Rose's double, a walk and Gary Matthews' double.

The Giants took a 2-0 lead in the second inning off Nino Espinosa, 1-1, when Evans opened with a walk and scored in front of Clark's third home run of the season. Evans led off the fourth with his second homer of the season to make it 3-0.

In the seventh, Johnnie LeMaster and pinch hitter Chili Davis singled and Bill North walked to load the bases. LeMaster scored on a sacrifice fly by Enos Cabell and, after Joe Morgan walked to load them again, Evans socked a two-run single.

MONTREAL (AP) — Ron Cey's three-run homer in the fourth inning and Ken Landreaux's solo shot in the fifth backed a seven-hitter by Jerry Reuss as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Montreal Expos 4-0 Saturday.

Reuss, 2-1, who was 2-0 with a 0.50 earned-run average against the Expos last season and is 14-5 against them in his career, was helped by three double plays as the Dodgers handed Montreal its first loss at home in 10 games this season.

Landreaux started the decisive fourth inning with a single off Scott Sanderson, 3-1, then Steve Garvey walked before Cey hit his first homer of the season, into the left field bleachers. The homer was the 192nd of Cey's career, tying him with Carl Furillo for fourth place on the Dodgers' all-time list.

Montreal rookie Tim Raines stole the 27th consecutive base of his major league career — his 20th this season — in the first inning. But the streak ended moments later when catcher Mike Scioscia nailed him attempting to steal third.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John Milner raced home with one out in the 12th inning on Mike Easler's grounder which was bobbled by Houston second baseman Kiko Garcia, giving the Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-4 victory that ended the Astros' five-game winning streak.

Milner drew a one-out walk off loser Dave Smith, 0-3, and took third on Bill Madlock's single. With the infield drawn in, Milner broke for the plate on Easler's grounder, which Garcia bobbled and then threw home too late to get Milner.

The victory went to Eddie Solomon, 1-1, the fifth Pittsburgh pitcher, who worked the 12th inning.

The Pirates had tied the score with a run in the bottom of the 10th on Tim Foli's double, Milner's pinch infield hit and a grounder by Madlock which forced Milner. The relay to first was too late to get Madlock as the tying run came home.

CHICAGO (AP) — Pitcher Randy Martz drove in two runs with a fourth-inning single Saturday as the Chicago Cubs clipped the Atlanta Braves 5-2 for just their third victory of the year.

Leon Durham ripped a one-out single off loer Phil Niekro, 1-1, and Tim Blackwell walked one out later. Ivan DeJesus then doubled down the left field line to score Durham and Martz lined a 3-2 pitch off shortstop Rafael Ramierez's glove and into short left field for a 3-2 Chicago edge.

The Cubs added two runs in the fifth on singles by Bill Buckner and Steve Henderson, a passed ball by catcher Bruce Benedict and an opposite-field triple by Durham.

Martz worked five innings, yielding five hits, two walks and striking out two. Dick Tidrow then took over and retired all 12 batters he faced in relief to record his first save of the season.

Atlanta reached Martz, 1-0, for a run in the first inning when Ed Miller beat out an infield hit, stole second, was bunted to third by Claudell Washington and came home on Dale Murphy's fly ball. Atlanta made it 2-0 in the second on doubles by Glenn Hubbard and Ramirez.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Kingman's two-run homer in the first inning and Doug Flynn's two-run single in the third keyed a pair of three-run bursts Saturday which gave the New York Mets a 6-2 victory over San Diego and snapped their seven-game losing streak.

Pete Falcone, 1-0, pitched 4 1-3 innings of hitless, five-strikeout ball in relief of Ed Lynch for the victory. It also broke the Padres' nine-game string of victories over the Mets, eight of them last year. The game was delayed by rain for 23 minutes with the Mets batting in the sixth inning.

Bob Bailor drew a walk from Chris Welsh, 1-1, in the first inning and scored on John Stearns' triple before Kingman slugged his fifth homer of the season, a shot into the Padres'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ken Oberkfell drilled three hits and drove in three runs to back the six-hit pitching of Bob Shirley and lead St. Louis past Cincinnati 7-3 Saturday, the Cardinals' 10th victory in 11 games.

Shirley, 3-0, who struck out three and walked one, beat the Reds for the second time in two weeks. The 26-year-old left-hander, whose major league career record is 42-57, owns a 12-7 mark against Cincinnati.

St. Louis scored three runs in the fourth against Bruce Berenyi, 2-1. Singles by Keith Hernandez, George Hendrick and Dane Iorg produced the first run. Iorg took second on the throw home, moved to third on Oberkfell's RBI grounder and came home on Tommy Herr's sacrifice fly.

Shirley took a one-hit shutout into the sixth inning, then Ken Griffey tripled with one out and scored on Dave Concepcion's fly ball. In the eighth, Griffey and George Foster doubled to put men on second and third. Dave Collins hit an RBI single and Concepcion's grounder scored Foster.

Shirley was given four more runs in the seventh when Hernandez delivered an RBI double, Darrell Porter walked with the bases loaded and Oberkfell punched a two-run single.

Isiah Hoping Mavs, Pistons 'Eye' Others

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Dallas and Detroit have the first two picks in the National Basketball Association draft next month, but Isiah Thomas is hoping they'll cast their eyes in some other player's direction.

"I'd like to play anywhere except Dallas and Detroit. Dallas won the coin flip (for the No.1 pick), but I don't think I'd really like to play there. I really don't get into all that cowboy stuff," said the Indiana University sophomore who declared his availability for the June 9 NBA college draft.

"Things have really been hectic since I declared hardship," the 6-foot-1 All-American guard said. "The phone hasn't stopped ringing, with reporters and friends calling me. One writer came from as far away as New York City just to interview me.

"I'm going to New York this weekend to do an interview with CBS sports. Magic (Johnson) and I are going to be on one of the halftime shows of an upcoming NBA (playoff) game. I don't know which one yet, though."

Dallas, he said, "needs help up front. Detroit, they need a player like Mark Aguirre. He would help them more than me. I just don't think I would fit in there."

Thomas said his hometown Chicago Bulls "or New Jersey are still my first choices, but I really don't have a lot of say. Maybe the Bulls can make a trade (to get me)."

Practice Runs Begin At Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Larry "Boom Boom" Cannon, the first driver to drop out of last year's Indianapolis 500, was the first driver on the track Saturday as practice opened at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Lengthy opening ceremonies before practice began included speeches by defending Indy champion Johnny Rutherford, Gov. Robert Orr, former driver Duke Nalon — who will pilot the pace car starting this year's race — and Mary Hulman George, daughter of the late Speedway owner Tony Hulman.

Practice opened at 1 p.m. EST with Cannon at his usual spot at the head of the pits to be first on the race track. Following Cannon onto the track were rookies Tom Frantz, Bill Tempero and Scott Brayton. Also among the first to practice were rookies Geoff Brabham, 29-year-old son of former world champion Jack Brabham, and Josele Garza, a 22-year-old Mexican.

Cannon, Frantz and Tempero were all out on the track within seconds of its opening and activity on the track was steady for most of the 5-hour practice session. By the time the track closed, 24 cars had been out as the drivers took advantage of ideal weather conditions of sunny skies with temperatures in the 60s.

The day's top speed was recorded by Pancho Carter, a veteran of seven races here. The 30-year-old from Brownsburg, Ind., recorded a speed of 181.125 mph to earn opening day honors.

Garza, who completed his rookie test, was the only other driver clocked at more than 180 mph — 180.9. Brabham, who also completed his rookie test, was timed at more than 179.

The rookie test, which must be passed before a driver can attempt to qualify for the 33-car field, consists of completion of 20 laps at a speed of approximately 160 mph and 20 more around the 170 mark. In addition, a panel of veteran drivers must give approval to the rookie's ability for participation in the race.

The 24 cars that went out were the most to appear on opening day since 27 came out on May 6, 1974.

Bob Lazier, a 42-year-old rookie who was the fastest driver in a special orientation program for first-year Indy drivers last month, also began the mandatory rookie driving tests.

Cannon, knocked out of last year's race after two laps with a broken connecting rod, said there is a "simple reason" he tries to be first on the track each year — publicity for his car sponsor. "I love the sport of it and the competition, but public relations is also a part of racing."

The best finish for Cannon, 44, Danville, Ill., in three previous races here was 17th in 1976. He relieved driver John Mahler for eight laps in the 1977 race, then missed Indy in 1978 and 1979 before picking up Kraco Car Stereo as the sponsor of his car last year.

He has two entries this year, the Offenhauser-powered racer he drove last year and a Cosworth-powered machine recently bought from the Roger Penske team.

"They realized the Offies have been legislated out of competition, and the Cosworth is the stronger at the present rules setup," Cannon said. "They bought a 1979 Penske car, it's the one Bobby Unser had. It came to us with a Cosworth engine, and right now they're the engine with the most horsepower and the way to go."

He said there was "not a great margin" between the Offy and Cosworth, "but it makes a difference. A little bit here really does make a difference. The (stock block) Chevies are in between the Offy and the Cosworth."

Taylor Keeps Vigil As Minicamp Starts

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Thirteen rookies and 23 free agents are winding up a three-day minicamp at Giants Stadium without No. 1 draft choice Lawrence Taylor, who was keeping vigil over a paralyzed University of North Carolina teammate.

Taylor was distraught over a Thursday night crash involving best friend Steve Streater, a safety and punter whose car ran into an embankment on a rain-swept highway. Streater, recovering at a Chapel Hill, N.C. hospital, dislocated a cervical vertebra and remains paralyzed from the waist down.

The 6-foot-3, 245-pound linebacker earlier said he was eagerly awaiting the minicamp, despite warnings from his agent not to participate in any dangerous drills. Taylor was the second player selected overall in the 1981 National Football League college draft.

Taylor was the only rookie who did not attend the camp. Dave Young, the Giants second-round pick, said he ran pass patterns, the long jump and other drills despite admonitions by agent Mike Trope, who also represents Taylor.

"It's all right as long as I don't try anything where I might get hurt," Young said.

The Western Illinois senior said he spent the first day of Tuesday's draft in his apartment, watching reruns on television to keep his mind off the proceedings in New York.

Young said he found out he was drafted when he got a call from the Giants, and immediately phoned his family in Akron, Ohio.

"I called up my father and he knew before I knew," Young said. "The Giants called him first to get my phone number."

Young was the first tight end ever to lead the nation in receptions but the 245-pounder said his blocking skills still need polishing.

"The more I work on it the better I'll get," said Young. "The first two years in school I was strictly a pass catcher because I didn't have the weight to do blocking. I was 203 pounds," Young said.

"Besides, in my freshman and sophomore years they had a blocker, and I had all the quickness and ability to catch," Young said.

More Athletes Graduating Than Non-Athletes — Study

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — A greater percentage of athletes are graduating from college than non-athletes, according to a five-year study commissioned by the NCAA.

The study shows that among male students who entered college the fall of 1975, 52 percent of the athletes had graduated by the spring of 1980 while the graduation rate for non-athletes was 41.5 percent.

The American College Testing Program (ACT) conducted the study of 46 NCAA member schools, mostly Division I, for the NCAA. Academic records of 32,300 non-athletes and 4,065 athletes were studied.

"I think, since this was the most inclusive study of its type ever done, it perhaps puts to rest the perception some people have that athletes do not do as well in the classroom as non-athletes," said Ted Tow, an assistant executive director of the NCAA.

"A number of institutions and some conferences have done similar studies, obviously involving their own students. And I believe in every instance I've ever run across, the results have been comparable to these," Tow said.

The ACT report also measured graduation rates among various sports. Each sport showed a higher graduation percentage than non-athletes, with track the highest at 50.8. Baseball showed 48.6 percent, wrestling 47.5, basketball 41.9, football 42.9 and all other sports 57.7.

"It's always good to be able to document things you have believed, to have something to point to in support of those beliefs," Tow said. "Perhaps the most important thing that it shows is that there should be concern about the fact that of all male students entering college in the fall of 1975, nearly 60 percent had not graduated by the spring of 1980.

Third Round Leader

Stacy Takes Lead With Birdie On 18th

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Defending champion Hollis Stacy sank a four-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole Saturday to take sole possession of the lead in the $125,000 CPC International women's golf tournament.

Stacy took only nine putts on the final nine holes, two of them 10-footers, for a par 72 to give her a three-day total of 214.

Stacy had been tied at 2-under with Sandra Haynie and Debbie Austin after Friday's second round on the 6,290-yard course at Moss Creek Plantation.

Austin moved into second place, one shot back, with a 73 for a three-day total 215. Kathy Whitworth was in third place with a 71 and a 216 total.

Stacy, like the other leaders, complained about dry greens that hampered play.

"It was extremely tough because the greens were very hard from the winds drying them out. I kept hitting the ball over the green," she said.

Stacy said she felt good about 9-putting the final half of the round.

"It's just wonderful because I've been putting like a dog," she said.

Moving into contention for the first time was 1980 Ladies Professional Golfers Association champion Sally Little, who shot a 73 for a three-day 217 score and fourth place.

Beth Daniel, who was in second place after Friday's round, dropped out of contention with a 78.

Whitworth, who has 80 tour wins and is the leading all-time LPGA money winner, said, "The Moss Creek course is one of the toughest on the tour and players cannot afford to make mistakes.

"This is not a golf course you can attack," she said. "The greens are so small. You can't afford to let up on any hole — you live in fear of making a mistake."

Illinois Put On Probation...

•Violating a conference agreement to enforce all league rules by contesting the right of faculty representatives to review any unanimous and unappealed decision of the conference's Academic Progress and Eligibility Committee.

•Concealing from the conference "until the eve of the football season the fact that it would not support conference eligibility rules."

•Failing "to deal in good faith and in a timely fashion with the conference by withholding possible knowledge that Wilson would go to the courts in his attempt to be declared eligible."

•Deciding "to play no role in attempting to resolve the problem internally, instructing its faculty representative not to work with the other nine faculty respresetatives."

•Breaching a conference agreement that decisions on eligibility are to be made by the faculty representatives.

Duke denied that the actions taken against Illinois happened becasue Wilson was permitted by a court injunction to play for the university during the 1980 season. He further denied that the penalties hiinge on whether Wilson is allowed to play for Illinois in 1981.

Duke said it was "tragic" that Illinois athletes outside the football team would be affected by the sanctions but said, "Any time you take disciplinary action, there are others involved."

Edwards Still PKA Champ

NEW YORK — Demetrius "Oaktree" Edwards retained his PKA World Heavyweight Full-Contact Karate Championship Friday night with an eighth-round knockout of former champ Ross Scott.

Edwards, an Ayden native, won the championship from Ross last year in a seven-round knockout. This time, it took the champ one more round but the result was the same.

The bout was held in Madison Square Garden and was sanctioned by the PKA.

Combs Races To 300 Win

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Four-time international sedan series champion Dean Combs roared away from the rest of the field to grab an easy victory Saturday in the $40,900 Talladega 300.

Combs, from North Wilkesboro, N.C., drove his Datsun to a half-lap victory over Larry Hoopaugh's Oldsmobile Starfire in the 300-mile race at Alabama International Motor Speedway.

The winner averaged 121.651 mph as he led 100 of the 113 laps in the first international sedan race on the high-banked 2.66-mile track.

Jerry Whittington and Larry Pearson finished third and fourth, respectively, both one lap down, followed by Mickey York in fifth. All three were driving Mercury Capris.

Allen Sparks Chargers Over Pitt

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — When a freshman at Ayden-Grifton, Brandt Allen weighed 180 pounds and was cut from the baseball team. As a sophomore, Allen made the roster but coach Allan Wilson does not remember playing him, ever.

Not until his junior year did Allen make the starting lineup. And now, in his senior year, Allen is helping the Chargers in their chase for an Eastern Carolina Conference championship — with his arm and his bat.

The 5-11 senior pitched 5⅓ innings against North Pitt Friday night, allowing six hits, striking out six and walking none, before being relieved by staff ace Tyrone Gay.

It was Allen's bat, however, that won the game. With none out in the sixth and men on second and third and the score tied at 1-1, Allen lashed a single up the middle to drive home two runs and lift the Chargers to a 3-1 victory over North Pitt.

The victory leaves Ayden-Grifton at 11-1 in the ECC, two and a half games ahead of Southern Nash (8-3, 106) with four conference games left. Charles B. Aycock is third in the ECC with a 8-4 mark. The Chargers were to have played the Firebirds last night.

"Brandt pitched real well," Wilson said. "They got those two hits off him in the sixth and I had to bring in Tyrone because he's our ace.

"But I wanted Brandt to hit. He helped us with his hitting but it we needed him to get a hit. We had our seven, eight and nine hitters coming up."

The Panthers, now 5-8 in the league and 8-11 overall, tied the game on Jerry Simpson's two-out triple in the top of the sixth, but immediately got into trouble in the bottom half of the inning when North Pitt right-hander Bob Hemingway walked Chuck Smithwick and Gay to lead off the inning.

Allen then hit a 2-1 pitch up the middle for a single to score both Smithwick and Gay and the Chargers led, 3-1. Ayden-Grifton later loaded the bases with one gone on an error and a walk but failed to score because of a unique double play.

Chris Strickland hit a pop fly in back of third that Richard Heller, back turned to the plate, dropped. But shortstop Gregory Briley whipped the ball to Hemingway who tagged pinch runner Larry Edwards out at third and then tagged third base for the force out to end the inning.

Gay, now 8-2 after getting the win Friday in relief, struck out Mike Brown to leadoff the seventh. Then, after walking Greg Briley, struck out Ken Whitehurst and Gregory Briley to end the game.

"They just outplayed us," North Pitt coach Pat Smith said. "We just got beat. Other than that, I don't have any comment."

After the Panthers wasted a leadoff double by Gregory Briley in the first, Ayden-Grifton went ahead with a run in the second. Gay singled to leadoff the inning, was sacrificed to second by Allen and then scored on Doug Coley's double.

The Panthers appeared poised to at least tie the game one inning later. With two gone and Whitehurst on third and Quintin Dove on first with singles, Ronnie House sent a sinking drive to short centerfield. A-G centerfielder Art Rouse made a diving catch on the ball to end the inning and save at least one run from scoring.

North Pitt finally ended its scoring drought in the sixth. With one gone, House and Hemingway singled to chase Allen. With Gay in, Simpson missed a squeeze bunt and House was tagged out at the plate.

Simpson, however, atoned for his mistake when he tripled in the right-centerfield gap to score Hemingway. But Elwood Ayers grounded out to first to end the threat.

Ayden-Grifton answered the Panther challenge with a two-run sixth and then held on in the seventh behind Gay to win.

"We're lucky to win this one," Wilson said. "They played well. But like I said, we're not pretty, we're not big but we scrap and fight back and I just hope we can be rewarded in the end."

Mike Ivie Sparks Astros; Perry Wins His Second

By The Associated Press

For Mike Ivie, leaping tall buildings at a single bound isn't necessary. Driving in some runs for Houston will do just fine, thank you.

Ten days after switching from a San Francisco uniform to the rainbow colors of the Astros, he did just that, drilling a two-run double in the ninth inning Friday night to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3.

"I was pressing after coming to a new team," he said. "The team was losing when I got here and I felt like I was in a 'Here comes Superman' type of thing. I felt like I had to get out there and knock some home runs.

"But I've learned that this club here is a 25-man unit, and that's something I've never enjoyed before. It's enjoyable to play on a team with no big egos."

Jose Cruz, who drove in Houston's three earlier runs with a third-inning homer and a seventh-inning double, reached base with two outs in the ninth when third baseman Bill Madlock threw away his grounder. Art Howe singled, then Ivie ripped his game-winner off the left field wall to give the Astros ther fifth consecutive victory.

"This has to be one of the most memorable hits I've gotten in a long time," he said.

Added Manager Bill Virdon: "We were really struggling for a while. We're getting a few hits when they count and that's the big thing."

Expos 9, Dodgers 8

Tim Raines stole three bases earlier in the game, then got four more bases with one big swing in the 13th inning, slamming his first major league homer.

Raines has 26 career stolen bases in the major leagues — he's never been thrown out — with 19 of them this year. That puts him 10 games ahead of Lou Brock's record-setting pace of 118 thefts in 1974.

"It's too early in the season for me to say whether I can break the record," Raines said. "I may be ahead of it right now, but I've always said you can't steal first, so I'm going to have to keep getting on base."

Ken Landreaux of the Dodgers and Warren Cromartie of the Expos drove in three runs apiece.

Cardinals 7, Reds 6

Sixto Lezcano, with a double, and Ken Oberkfell, with a single, drove in two runs apiece in the third inning as the Cardinals chalked up their ninth victory in 10 games.

Bob Forsch, Joe Edelen and Bruce Sutter teamed for a 10-hitter, Sutter picking up his fifth save despite giving up Larry Biittner's two-run double and Dave Collins' sacrifice fly in the seventh inning and George Foster's RBI single in the ninth. Foster also hit a solo homer in the fourth.

Padres 4, Mets 2

Terry Kennedy hit an RBI single in a three-run sixth inning that halted the Padres' five-game losing streak and extended the Mets' tailspin to seven games.

John Urrea replaced Juan Eichelberger when the San Diego starter complained of a tight shoulder in the fourth inning. Urrea blanked the Mets on three hits and Gary Lucas came on with one out the ninth and posted his third save. Rusty Staub homered for New York.

Braves 2, Cubs 1

Gaylord Perry scattered nine Chicago hits — seven of them in the first three innings — and Chris Chambliss drew a bases-loaded walk from Bill Caudill in a two-run sixth to force home Atlanta's winning run.

It snapped the Braves' five-game losing streak and dropped the Cubs' record to 2-14, the worst in the majors.

Tigerettes Down Pack

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School stayed in the race for the Northeastern Conference softball championship Friday by gaining a 12-3 victory over Washington.

Both teams came into the game one game off the pace with two losses on the season.

Williamston put the game away in the second inning, scoring eight times. The inning was sparked by Wanda Price, who hit a three-run homer. Later, in the fifth, Price added a two-run homer.

Price led the Williamston hitting with three, while Theresa Duffy and Brenda Kelly each had two hits. Washington was led by Theresa Hodges, Jane McCall, Tammy Peele and Nan Guilford, with two each.

Williamston is now 9-3 overall and 8-2 in Northeastern Conference play. Washington falls to 6-3 in the league.

Lady Pirates Second, Get National Bid

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. — East Carolina errors provided North Carolina with all the edge it needed to win the AIAW Region II Slow-Pitch Softball Championship.

The Lady Tar Heels took advantage of eight ECU errors and banged out 18 hits to defeat the Lady Pirates, 14-11, Friday to win the Region II softball championship.

North Carolina, now 43-20, and East Carolina, now 42-6, both now advance to the National AIAW Slow-Pitch Softball Tournament set for Raleigh the weekend of May 15-17. N.C. State, the tournament's host, will also be in the 16-team tournament.

UNC's victory Friday, which came one game after ECU had beaten Carolina, 14-4, to force a final game in the double-elimination tournament, overshadowed a superb performance by ECU's Jo Landa Clayton.

Clayton, a freshman from Roxboro, went four-for-four and had seven RBIs in the loss. In ECU's earlier victory over UNC, Clayton was also four-for-four, with two home runs and four RBIs. Despite the performances, Clayton did not make the all-tournament team.

In Friday's championship game, UNC broke a 3-3 tie with a seven-run second inning and never trailed again. The Lady Tar Heels led, 10-6, after three innings and each team scored three runs in the next two innings.

UNC's final run came in the seventh. ECU scored its last two runs in the bottom of the seventh.

Although Clayton was the hitting star in the loss, ECU also had two other players with more than two hits. Cythnia Shepard, a sophomore from Snead's Ferry, was three for three and Maureen Buck, a freshman from Norwood, was three for four.

UNC was led by Michele Shriver, who was two for four with a double, a home run and three RBIs. Lisa Perry was three for five for UNC.

The Lady Pirates forced the final game earlier in the day by defeating UNC, 14-4, to give each team one loss in the tournament.

ECU led, 5-4, after the first inning and used single runs in the second and third and three runs in the fourth and sixth to clinch the victory.

Along with Clayton, ECU was led by Shirley Brown, who was three for four with a triple, Buck, who was three for five and Kathy Riley, who was two for four with a triple.

Shriver was two for three for UNC.

East Carolina started the day with a 5-3 loss, the Lady Pirates' first tournament loss. But ECU came back to eliminate Western Carolina, 16-1, later in the day to move in to the championship bracket with UNC.

In the first game, ECU led 3-1 going into the bottom of the third but the Lady Tar Heels rallied for three runs in the third and added another run in the fourth to win.

Rampants Rush To Track Victory

Rose High School closed out the regular season in track Friday afternoon, dumping Bertie, 112-28.

The Rampants took all but one event, the discus, on the way to the victory.

Rose had four double winners during the day. They included Curtis Spell, winning the shot and high jump; Chris McLawhorn, taking the long jump and the 400-meter dash; Marty Barnes, winning both the hurdle events; and Kenny Smith, victorious in the 1,600 and 800-meter runs.

Rose will return to action on Thursday, seeking to capture the Division I title in the conference track and field championships at Wilson Fike.

Summary:

Roanoke In 5-1 Defeat

AHOSKIE — Ahoskie scored two runs in the second and two in the sixth en route to a 5-1 victory over Roanoke Friday night in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

The Cougars broke the scoreless tie in the second with two runs only to have the Redskins cut the deficit in half with a run in the third.

With one gone, Jerry Bryant walked and Joey Ross singled him to third. Neal Cargile then followed with a single to score Bryant and Roanoke trailed, 2-1.

Ahoskie regained its two-run lead in the fifth with a run and sealed the victory in the sixth with two runs.

Roanoke, now 6-10 overall and 3-7 in the league, did not have anyone with more than one hit. Ahoskie was led by Donnie Wilder, Tim Riddick, Marshall Tucker and Ronnie Harrison, all of whom were two of three.

Roanoke plays host to Roanoke Rapids Tuesday.

Pam Pack Nips Tigers

WILLIAMSTON — Washington High School rallied for two runs in the top of the seventh and nipped Williamston, 10-9, in a Northeastern Conference baseball game Friday night.

Washington grabbed off the initial lead in the top of the first, scoring twice, but Williamston came back to score five times in the bottom of the frame. The Tigers got four walks, and followed that with singles by Ed Pippen and Tony Rogers to account for the runs.

The Tigers upped the lead to 7-2 in the third, but then saw Washington rally for five in the fourth to tie it up, 7-7. The Pam Pack took the lead with one in the sixth, only to see Williamston come back with two in the bottom of the inning for a 9-8 lead.

In the seventh, however, Seth Edwards reached on an error and later scored on a wild pitch. Van Parker was hit by a pitch, coming around to score the winning run when Jim Lander grounded out.

Billy Jean Admits Affair With Former Companion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Saying she loved her husband and had "made a mistake," tennis star Billie Jean King has admitted having a homosexual affair with a former secretary.

But she says she never promised a thing to the paraplegic former secretary, who has filed a "palimony" suit seeking lifetime support from Mrs. King.

"First, you have to live with yourself," Mrs. King said Friday during a surprise news conference. "That's why I'm here today."

Sitting next to her husband, Larry King, and her tearful parents, Mrs. King said she called the news conference against the advice of family, friends and lawyers to admit the affair with Marilyn Barnett.

Miss Barnett, 33, now a paraplegic, filed suit earlier in the week claiming the tennis star had been her lover and owed her lifetime support and title to a Malibu beach house.

"I felt very strongly that I've always been above board with the press, and you've always been fair to me," she said. "So, I've decided to talk with you as I've always talked — from my heart.

"I'm very disappointed and shocked that Marilyn has done this, not only to herself — a very self-destructive thing — but to other people who care for her," Mrs. King said.

She described Miss Barnett, a former hairdresser, as "unstable" and said of their love affair: "I made a mistake. I will assume that responsibility."

Then, turning to her husband who sat beside her, she said, "It's very important to me to thank Larry. I love him. He's my husband, my lover and best friend. He's been that for 19 years."

She also thanked her parents, Betty and Bill Moffit, who sat nearby with tears in their eyes

"I now know who my friends are," she said.

"I discussed it with Larry," she added. "In some ways, I think we're much closer than we've ever been, and our marriage is stronger."

King, a sports promoter, introduced his wife to reporters as "the person I love dearly" and expressed his support before she spoke.

Mrs. King said the love affair with Ms. Barnett ended "several years ago" but declined to go into detail about dates.

Mrs. King's attorney, Dennis Wasser, said the suit was prompted by the Kings' decision to sell the Malibu house and their request that Ms. Barnett move out. They still are trying to evict her, he said.

Knights Close With A Win

HOOKERTON — Greenville Christian closed out the 1981 baseball season with a 14-9 victory over Mt. Calvary Friday.

The Knights jumped out to a big lead in the first inning, scoring eight times. David Hollingsworth led off with a walk and moved to third on Joseph Sasser's single. Sasser stole up, and John Parnell walked, loading the bases.

All three runners then scored when Troy Hudson tripled. Dwayne Roesner reached on an error, and Joel Mason's single scored Hudson. Billy Stancil doubled in Roesner and Mason, and Danny Roesner walked. Sasser, back up, singled to drive in the final two runs.

Mt. Calvary scored once in the bottom of the inning, and both teams got single runs in the second.

The Knights then got two more in the third, and that proved to be the difference. Danny Rosener walked and stole both second and third. Sasser then brought him in with a single. Sasser stole up and scored when Parnell singled.

That made it 11-2, a margin Mt. Calvary never overcame.

Sasser led the Greenville hitting with three in five trips, while Hudson had two in four appearances. Chris Taylor, who had a solo homer in the third, was three for four for Mt. Calvary, as was Jim Pittman.

Greenville Christian finished with a 4-5 overall mark and a 4-3 conference record.

Celtics Rally, Tie Series At Three Each

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Robert Parish called it poise. Cedric Maxwell said it was a combination of drive, determination and character. M.L. Carr talked about intensity. Larry Bird spoke about not knowing when to quit.

Whatever it is, these Boston Celtics are clearly something special, and they showed it again Friday night by storming back in the second half to beat the Philadelphia 76ers 100-98 and send their emotion-charged National Basketball Association playoff showdown back to Boston Garden for a deciding seventh game on Sunday.

"The Garden is going to be rocking," promised Celtics rookie Kevin McHale, whose block of an Andrew Toney shot with 14 seconds left helped preserve Boston's victory. "We stuck it out and we didn't quit. I've never been involved in a more joyous occasion."

As they have in each of the last four games of this best-of-seven Eastern Conference final, the 76ers raced out to a big early lead only to see the gritty Celtics claw their way back. Philadelphia led by 17 in the second quarter and 15 early in the third, but Bird scored 11 points as Boston outscored the 76ers 28-14 to climb back to 71-70 late in the third period.

After that it was tight all the way. The lead changed hands nine times in the final 7:34, Nate Archibald finally putting the Celtics ahead to stay 96-95 by sinking two free throws with 2:16 left. Lionel Hollins and Darryl Dawkins missed shots for Philadelphia before Bird hit an 18-footer for a three-point lead.

Toney came back with a 21-footer to make it 98-97, then brought the raucous, capacity crowd of 18,276 to its feet by stealing the ball from Bird with 30 seconds to play. But when he tried to drive the left side, the 6-foot-10 McHale got a piece of his shot and then smothered the rebound.

"Toney beat his man and I saw Doc (Julius Erving) was free in the lane," recalled McHale. "I knew I had to make him commit himself, and I was happy when he went up for the shot. I just tipped it up, it ticked the backboard and came right back down to me. The rest is history."

It wasn't quite that simple. Maxwell was fouled with two seconds left and made both free throws for a 100-97 lead, but the 76ers still had a shot at a tie with a three-point goal. But before Erving could get a shot off he was fouled by Archibald.

"My intention was to make the first try and then miss the second so we could go for the rebound," said Erving, who finished with 16 points on miserable 5-for-17 shooting. But he missed the first attempt, foiling that strategy, then made the second. Boston inbounded the ball after a timeout, then raced off the court in jubilation.

Bird, brilliant as ever, led the Celtics with 25 points and 16 rebounds after a slow start. Parish, the 7-foot center who was coming off three bad games, contributed 21 points and 10 rebounds.

Archibald, who missed six minutes of the second half after his left foot was stepped on by Dawkins, had 19 points and Maxwell, who went charging into the stands after a fan during the third quarter, an incident that saw both benches empty before order was restored, scored 17. Dawkins was high man for Philadelphia with 24 points, the second straight productive game for the foul-prone center.

There was an electric atmosphere in the Spectrum and the players quickly picked up on it. "This was the most intense basketball game I've ever been involved in," said Carr.

"It was a pressure-packed game, but we didn't let falling 17 points behind scare us," said Celtics Coach Bill Fitch. "It was just fun to watch these guys enjoy something they haven't been able to enjoy for two years."

It was the Celtics' first victory here since Jan. 20, 1979, ending an 11-game streak. And coming on the heels of Wednesday night's dramatic 111-109 win in Boston, when they scored the last eight points of the game and held Philadelphia scoreless for the final 1:51, it had the Celtics going home sky high.

Meanwhile, in the Philadelphia lockerroom, the mood was somber.

"They beat us on the boards terribly," said 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham, who pegged Boston's 16 offensive rebounds as the key statistic. "They wanted it more. If you can't do it on the boards you're going to be in trouble, and obviously we are."

Then he took a swipe at referees Jack Madden and Paul Mihalak, who called 64 fouls and easily could have called another 64 in the physical match.

"It was one of the poorest officiated games I've seen in the playoffs," said Cunningham. "I hope when we go up to Boston we get some of the calls they got here."

Caldwell Jones, Philadelphia's defensive mainstay, was asked about the team's recent habit of blowing leads.

"When we have a big lead, we seem to get sloppy," he said. "We make a turnover, we don't run our plays, we let them get an offensive rebound and suddenly they're back in the game. But we still control our own destiny. We can be heroes or goats."

Pileup
Boston Celtics' Larry Bird (33) falls on a pile of players including Nate Archibald (7) and Sixers' Clint Richardson (right) Friday night in NBA Eastern Division playoff game at Philadelphia. Bird had just missed a shot and a foul was called on Richardson. The Celtics won, 100-98, to even the best of seven series at three games each. (AP Laserphoto)

Preakness Will Divide Field If It Is Too Large

BALTIMORE (AP) — For the second time in history, the Preakness Stakes, the middle jewel in the Triple Crown of thoroughbred racing, may be run in two divisions.

Larry Abbundi, racing secretary of Pimlico Race Course said Friday that if there are more than 16 horses entered in the competition, the race would be split.

"We could start 15 comfortably, and squeeze in a limit of 16," Abbundi said. "...If we had 17 or more entries, it looks like we'd have a split."

The Preakness was split once before, when War Cloud and Jack Hare Jr. were the division winners in 1918. There were 26 entries that year, but five scratches in each race left only 10 strarters in the first division and six in the second.

A Preakness record 18 starters went to the post in 1928. The largest field in the last 10 years was 1974, when Little Current defeated 12 rivals. The field has ranged between five and nine starters over the past five years.

Noting that Churchill Downs had encountered legal action while trying to limit the size of Saturday's Kentucky Derby to 20 starters, Abbundi offered some suggestions to head off future problems in the Triple Crown series involving the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes.

"We could raise the nomination fees," he said, "or move the closing back from Feb. 15 to a later date when the wheat would be separated from the chaff. With a Feb. 15 closing, we're confronted with a lot of maiden nominations.

"Maybe the $100 nomination fee is too cheap these days," Abbundi said. "Everything else is inflated. Almost any owner is willing to put up $100, even for horses that haven't run yet. Maybe it ought to be $1,000."

"Churchill Downs, Pimlico and Belmont Park would have to agree to such a change, I guess," he said, "but that could be the answer."

North Stars, Flames Resume

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The Calgary Flames and Minnesota North Stars resume their National Hockey League semifinal playoff series tonight at the Met Center, with most members of the North Stars content in splitting the first two games in Calgary.

"We're happy with a split on the road," said Minnesota center Tim Young. "Now, it's up to them to win in our building."

During the regular season, the Flames won twice in Calgary and Minnesota won twice at home. The 3-2 loss to Calgary Thursday night was Minnesota's first road loss of the playoffs following six straight victories.

"We went to Calgary and got a split against them; there's no reason to feel shabby about that," said Kevin Maxwell.

"It's now a best-of-five series," noted North Stars' General Manager Lou Nanne. "We have the talent to reach the finals and I think we've outplayed Calgary. But we'll have to see what takes place now."

Minnesota fell behind 2-0 in the first period Thursday night and also trailed 3-1, but battled back and had Calgary on the ropes near the end of the game. The North Stars obviously hope that momentum will carry over Sunday night and also in Tuesday's fourth game.

"We took the plays to them at the end — an encouraging sign," Maxwell said. "They were just hanging on at the end."

"We showed some pretty good life early in the game before we tailed off," said Flames' Coach Al MacNeil. "Lucky for us, the early life was enough to carry the win for us."

"We made a hell of an effort to salvage the game, but once you're down 2-0 by the eight-minute mark in the other guy's rink, you've got yourself into quite a hole," said Minnesota Coach Glen Sonmor. "You can't always expect to recover and we didn't."

But it looks as though Young will. The 26-year old center locked skates with Calgary's Pekka Rautakallio early in the third period and crashed to the ice with a twisted knee.

He was taken to a hospital when the Stars arrived back in the Twin Cities but is expected to be back in the lineup Sunday night.

"I don't know how it happened," said Young. "All I know is my right knee locked. I hurt it nine years ago playing junior hockey and there's a fragment in the knee which got into the joint."

The winner of the series advances to the Stanley Cup finals. In the other semifinal series, the defending champion New York Islanders lead the New York Rangers 2-0.

Lady Pirates...

Against Western Carolina, which finished third in the tournament and has an outside chance of getting an at-large bid to the national tournament in Raleigh, the Lady Pirates used a seven-run third to race past the Lady Catamounts.

In the UNC loss, ECU was led by Riley, who was two for two, and Shepard, who was two for three. Mitzi Davis had a home run, the only earned run of the game for either team.

UNC was led by Laurie Bailey, who three for three. Marsha Brown was two for three with two triples.

In the Western Carolina victory, Lydia Rountree was three for five, Riley two for three with four RBIs and Yvonne Williams was two for four with a double, a home run and three RBIs. Ginger Rothermel and Tammy Parham were both two for four for ECU.

UNC Captures Lacrosse Title; Ties For Cup

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina defeated North Carolina State 19-17 Saturday to take the Atlantic Coast Conference lacrosse title and tie the Wolfpack for the Carmichael Cup, symbolic of overall sports excellence in the ACC.

It is the first tie in the 20-year history of the Carmichael Cup, awarded annually to the ACC school with the best overall record in the conference's 11 varsity sports.

The second-ranked Tar Heels, down 17-15, scored the last four goals of the game Saturday to edge ninth-ranked N.C. State for the title in lacrosse.

It Was One Dandy Party

Infield Has Everything But A Good Derby Seat

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — America loves a party and that's a dandy shindig they throw in the infield at Churchill Downs the first Saturday in May.

Forget the Kentucky Derby. If it's the race you want to see, you won't fork over the 10 bucks it costs for squatting privileges on the bluegrass. The horses are all but invisible from that location. But who needs horses for a party?

Access to the infield is through a long tunnel and when you emerge, you're greeted by a sea of people, most of them smiling and jovial. It is, after all, a party, and you don't need an invitation to join it. Just $10.

Trying to weave through the mass of humanity gathered for this annual rite, you can imagine what a colt wrestling with the logjam of a 21-horse Derby field must feel like. There are some 80,000 fans here and it's easy to get hemmed in and tough to get through the crowd.

Security had been tightened this year in an effort to cut down the amount of liquor imported to the infield by the college kids who follow this ritual every year. Uniformed officers emptied bottles at the entrance points, leaving a few eyes moist long before the Univerity of Louisville band sounded the first notes of "My Old Kentucky Home."

They poured bourbon on the entrance roads and even sniffed jugs of orange juice, suspecting they had been fouled by vodka to create ... shhh ... screwdrivers. It took a highly tuned sense of smell to uncover that disguise and the guards worked hard at it.

But no security is perfect and as one infield guest unfolded his lounge chair, he exclaimed in joy, "Well, look what we have here! A bottle of whiskey!"

Infield guests whose liquid refreshment was confiscated at the gate could buy beer on the infield at $1.50 a pop. Or, if they needed something stronger, there were mint juleps going for $3.25. But what's the Kentucky Derby without a mint julep? And the price did, after all, include the souvenir glass.

Each time the track bugler sounded his horn to announce the arrival of horses on the track for a preliminary race, the infield crowd roared. Never mind that the thoroughbreds were, for the most part, out of sight and out of mind. And scant attention was paid to track announcer Mike Battaglia's call of the race. Those were details, just details.

The standard outfit on the infield was shorts and a T-shirt although some visitors wore more daring attire, including an occasional bikini. Every shirt had a different message, including one which proclaimed its wearer to be "Loose as a Moose."

Frisbees flew about and a few fans even lined up at the mutuel windows, which Churchill Downs cheerfully provided for their betting convenience. Pup tents dotted the area and ice chests were everywhere.

And what could you get — besides a cold — if you posed for him?

"You'll be in Sports Illustrated," he promised. "Guaranteed."

Betting Favorite Finishes 18th

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jockey Jeff Fell offered no excuses for Proud Appeal's dismal peformance Saturday in the 107th Kentucky Derby.

The simple fact of the matter, he said, was that Proud Appeal just didn't produce.

"This is the first race he hasn't given me everything he has," said Fell, whose mount limped home 18th after leaving the gate as the 2-1 betting favorite.

Never mind that 21 3-year-olds, the second largest field in Derby history, started Saturday's race, Fell said.

"If he was in any type of traffic problem, that would be one thing, but he just didn't fire," Fell said.

"I'm disappointed, certainly, to come into the race as the favorite and finish way back."

But if Fell was disappointed, Proud Appeal's trainer, Stanley Hough, seemed crushed.

Minutes after the race, Hough stood in the shadow of a stable, watching glumly as Proud Appeal was washed and cooled.

He led all the way in that 11-8 mile effort, winning by a leisurely three lengths.

Proud Appeal was so highly regarded, in fact, that John Gaines, a noted Lexington horseman, and Robert Entenmann, a Long Island, N.Y., bakery magnate, paid $5 million for a half-interest in the colt shortly before the Blue Grass.

But Hough, who also is a part owner of Proud Appeal, said the colt "just didn't try" in the Derby.

"Jeff said he didn't fire," Hough said. "He never got up to a gallop."

The 21-horse field "didn't have anything to do with it," Hough said.

Asked about his plans for Proud Appeal, Hough said, "I just don't want to comment. We'll just play it by ear."

Velasquez Wins First Derby In Six Attempts

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "The dirt was hitting him so hard in the face he was jumping up and down. But I tapped him on the shoulder and let him relax."

Jockey Jorge Velasquez was describing the early running in Saturday's Kentucky Derby when Pleasant Colony was far back in the field of 21. When it was all over the 35-year-old Panamanian had his first Derby victory in six tries.

Velasquez said Pleasant Colony, the second choice, was brushed coming out of the gate, causing him to take a strong hold of the colt.

Saying his mount wasn't troubled by the traffic — only the clods of dirt flying back, Velasquez said, "I saw Tap Shoes and followed him. But he disappeared. I saw Flying Nashua and I followed him.

"At five-sixteenth pole, three or four horses backed out and I went in. I was just waiting to move and let him go."

The jockey said he wasn't worried about second-place finisher Woodchopper's late charge. Pleasant Colony beat Woodchopper by three-quarters of a length.

"I had plenty of horse left," he said. "I don't want to kill the horse. I want to win the next one and the next one."

It was a reference to the second and third legs the Triple Crown — the Preakness at Pimlico in two weeks and the Belmont Stakes three weeks after that.

When Pleasant Colony won the Wood Memorial at Aqueduct April 18, Jeff Fell was the jockey while Velasquez was under suspension for a riding infraction..

But trainer Johnny Campo promised Velasquez, who has more than 4,000 career victories, the mount on Plesant Colony in the Derby.

"Velasquez is probably the best rider in world, bar none," said Campo. "He has learned a lot in the last four, five years. He used to be a hoop-dee-do rider. He's come a long way. I used Velasquez when he first came to New York when nobody else would."

Velasquez had been the rider for Lord Avie, the winter book favorite for the Derby, but lost that mount when the colt was injured.

He had the hard luck of riding Alydar in the 1978 Triple Crown classics when the Calumet colt ran a close second to Affirmed in each event.

As Velasquez stood next to him in the Churchill Downs press box, Campo said with a smile, "I'd fire him tomorrow as crazy as I am."

Texas Shoots Blanks, Not Goose Eggs

By The Associated Press

The Texas Rangers went after an American League record Friday night ...and came away with nothing.

Texas pitchers had hurled four consecutive shutouts, a club record and one short of the AL mark. Instead, the Rangers were given a taste of their own medicine by Kansas City's Larry Gura, who spun a six-hitter in pitching the Royals to a 4-0 triumph.

"I was not thinking about a record. I just wanted the win," said Texas Manager Don Zimmer.

When the Royals scored in the fourth it broke a string of 39 scoreless innings by Texas pitchers. Amos Otis scored the only run Gura needed. He walked, went to third on a single by John Wathan and scored on a sacrifice fly by Frank White. Kansas City added a run in the fifth when Hal McRae doubled and scored on a single by Otis.

The Royals made it 3-0 in the seventh when a single by McRae, a double by George Brett — who also had three singles — and an intentional walk to Willie Aikens loaded the bases and Otis walked to force McRae home. Aikens singled home Kansas City's final run in the ninth.

"This is my first complete game here (Arlington Stadium)," Gura said. "Every pitch I have was working. My fast ball was moving good, my curve was breaking off nicely. That's the advantage of having four or five pitches — when you have good stuff they all work."

Brett, who came into the game hitting just .208, said he "didn't do anything different. Maybe I just relaxed a little more, that's all."

A's 8, Yankees 6

Dave McKay sent Oakland ahead with a two-run single in the sixth inning and Cliff Johnson slammed a two-run homer in the seventh as the streaking A's recorded their 19th victory in 22 games. Rick Langford got the victory but needed help from Jeff Jones, who recorded his second save by getting out of a bases-loaded, none-out situation in the eighth inning, although he yielded three runs in the ninth on Dave Winfield's RBI single and the second of two homers by Oscar Gamble.

The Yankees took a 2-0 lead in the third inning when Reggie Jackson walked and Gamble, who grounded into a bases-loaded double play to end the first inning, followed with his fourth homer of the year. Oakland's first run came in the fourth on Mike Heath's double play grounder. Heath singled home the tying run in the sixth before McKay put the A's in front to stay. The A's added two runs, which proved to be decisive, in the eighth off Bill Castro on a walk, Rickey Henderson's triple and a single by Murphy.

Indians 10, White Sox 2

John Denny fired a seven-hitter and Andre Thornton drove in four runs with a bases-loaded double and a single to lift Cleveland to its third consecutive victory and eighth in its last nine outings. The White Sox have dropped three in a row after an 11-4 start.

The Indians scored five runs in the third off Britt Burns, three on Thornton's double and two on a double by Bo Diaz. They added five more in the eighth, two on a double by Mike Hargrove and the last on a single by Thornton.

Angels 8, Brewers 4

Fred Lynn hit two home runs and drove in five runs and rookie pitcher Mike Witt survived a four-run Milwaukee first inning. Lynn hit a three-run homer in the first inning, led off the fifth with a solo shot and walked with the bases loaded in the eighth.

Witt was tagged for a three-run homer by Ben Oglivie in the first inning but allowed only two hits after the third. Witt, who attended high school in Anaheim, won his first game at Anaheim Stadium.

Tigers 7, Mariners 3

Alan Trammell led a barrage of seven doubles with a pair of two-base hits and the Tigers handed Mike Parrott his 18th consecutive setback. Parrott, who dropped 16 games in a row in 1980 after winning his first decision, is one loss shy of the American League record for consecutive defeats.

"I just have to make it tougher next time. I don't want to have my name in the record books," said Parrott, who was tagged for five doubles and five runs in 6 1-3 innings.

Twins 6, Red Sox 1

Roy Smalley drove in three runs with a single and a sacrifice fly as Minnesota handed Boston its fifth consecutive defeat behind the seven-hit pitching of Fernando Arroyo and Doug Corbett. Smalley drove in two runs with a first-inning single off Dennis Eckersley and added a sacrifice fly in the eighth. Arroyo allowed five hits, including Dave Stapleton's first-inning homer, before giving way to Corbett in the eighth.

Marcis Unspectacular, But He Nails Down 40th Starting Spot

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Dave Marcis was a little uncomfortable about it, but he had just done exactly what he set out to do — nail down the 40th and final qualifying spot for Sunday's Winston 500 Grand National stock car race.

Marcis, a veteran of 14 years of stock car racing and almost always running the leaders, was clocked at an unspectacular 172.840 mph during Friday's time trials.

That was more than 5 mph slower than Rick Newsome, the 39th fastest qualifier. And it was light years behind Bobby Allison, who won Thursday the pole position for the $346,600 race with a top lap of 195.864 mph.

"We've been building a Buick that we hoped to have ready for this race," Marcis explained. "But we couldn't get it done in time, and that meant we had to get the (Chevrolet) Malibu ready at the last minute.

"NASCAR said I had to paint it and we just had time to go through the chassis. And we stil couldn't get here until today.

"Since we couldn't start up front anyway, and the car wasn't running very fast, since it's our short track car, I figured why not go for the $5,000."

Marcis was referring to the cash award, peculiar to this race, that is given to the driver who makes the biggest jump in position during Sunday's race.

"I held it down a little because I figured there was nothing to lose. What's the difference, really, if you start 34th or 40th in a 500-mile race?

"This car isn't streamlined enough for Talladega," the 40-year-old driver added. "The wheel openings are too big and we don't have the horsepower some of those other guys have.

"But, if I can stay in the draft, I think we can do pretty well in the race."

Drafting, groups of cars driving bumper-to-bumper for an aerodynamic boost, is a key to the superfast speeds on the 2.66-mile high-banked tri-oval at Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Although the smaller cars in use this season on the Grand National circuit have had stability problems and have been generally slower than the older, bigger models of previous seasons, speeds climbed steadily during Friday's practice sessions.

The fast single lap clocked during the day was a 200.054 turned in late in the afternoon when polesitter Allison, defending NASCAR champion Dale Earnhardt, Terry Labonte and Ricky Rudd got together in a four-car draft for several turns around the track.

Earnhardt said, "Buddy (Baker) and I hooked up and ran 200, then I got together with Bobby and those other guys. If you want to run fast on Sunday, you'd better hook up with the 'B Team,' Buddy, Bobby or (Neil) Bonnett. But you had better be ready to run 200 miles an hour, because they are going to do it."

The top 20 spots for the race were filled on Thursday, with the rest of the field decided Friday.

The fastest qualifier of the second day was seven-time NASCAR champion Richard Petty. Petty, who had some minor engine problems the first day and failed to reach 190 mph, turned in a fast lap of 191.864 mph to gain the 21st qualifying spot.

He was followed by two rookies, Ron Bouchard at 190.719 and Tim Richmond at 189.895. Also among the second-day qualifiers was rookie Morgan Shephard, who won last week's Virginia 500. He placed his car 30th on he grid at 187.894.

The starting lineup for Sunday's Winston 500 Grand National stock car race, with type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Bobby Allison, Buick Regal, 195.864 mph
2. Buddy Baker, Buick Regal, 195.209

Raiders Suffer Setback In Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Oakland Raiders have suffered a major setback in their anti-trust suit against the National Football League, with a federal judge ruling that allegations of Super Bowl ticket scalping will not be allowed in the upcoming trial.

U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson ruled Friday that attempts to show that Los Angeles Rams owner Georgia Frontiere conspired with NFL Commissoner Pete Rozelle to scalp tickets would be highly prejudicial if presented before a jury.

"The court makes this observation," Pregerson said. "No hard evidence has been presented to support the ticket scalping charges. The possible prohibitive value of that evidence is outweighed by the danger of prejudice."

The judge ordered all parties in the suit to instruct witnesses not to mention ticket scalping in their testimony.

Patrick Lynch, attorney for the NFL, said the judge's ruling would help to create a trial atmosphere "which is not dominated by extraneous and sensational issues."

Attorney Joseph Alioto, representing the Raiders, told reporters after the judge's ruling: "We didn't create the prejudice; they did."

However, he said he believed the Raiders could still prove that Mrs. Frontiere and Rozelle conspired to keep the Raiders from moving to Los Angeles in an attempt to protect the Rams' lucrative market in Southern California. He said he would introduce evidence that TV sales and gate receipts were sufficient motivation for such a conspiracy.

The profits from ticket-scalping, he said, would have shown an additional economic motivation.

Attorneys for both sides said they now expect to go forward with the long-awaited trial May 11, but neither side would rule out the chance of a last-minute settlement out of court.

"We are always amenable to negotiations that the judge wants us to have," said Alioto. "But there are no current negotiations."

"The idea is simple. People want to be independent and on their own. That's what The Albemarle does. It gives people independence and freedom from worry."
— Ruth Ballard

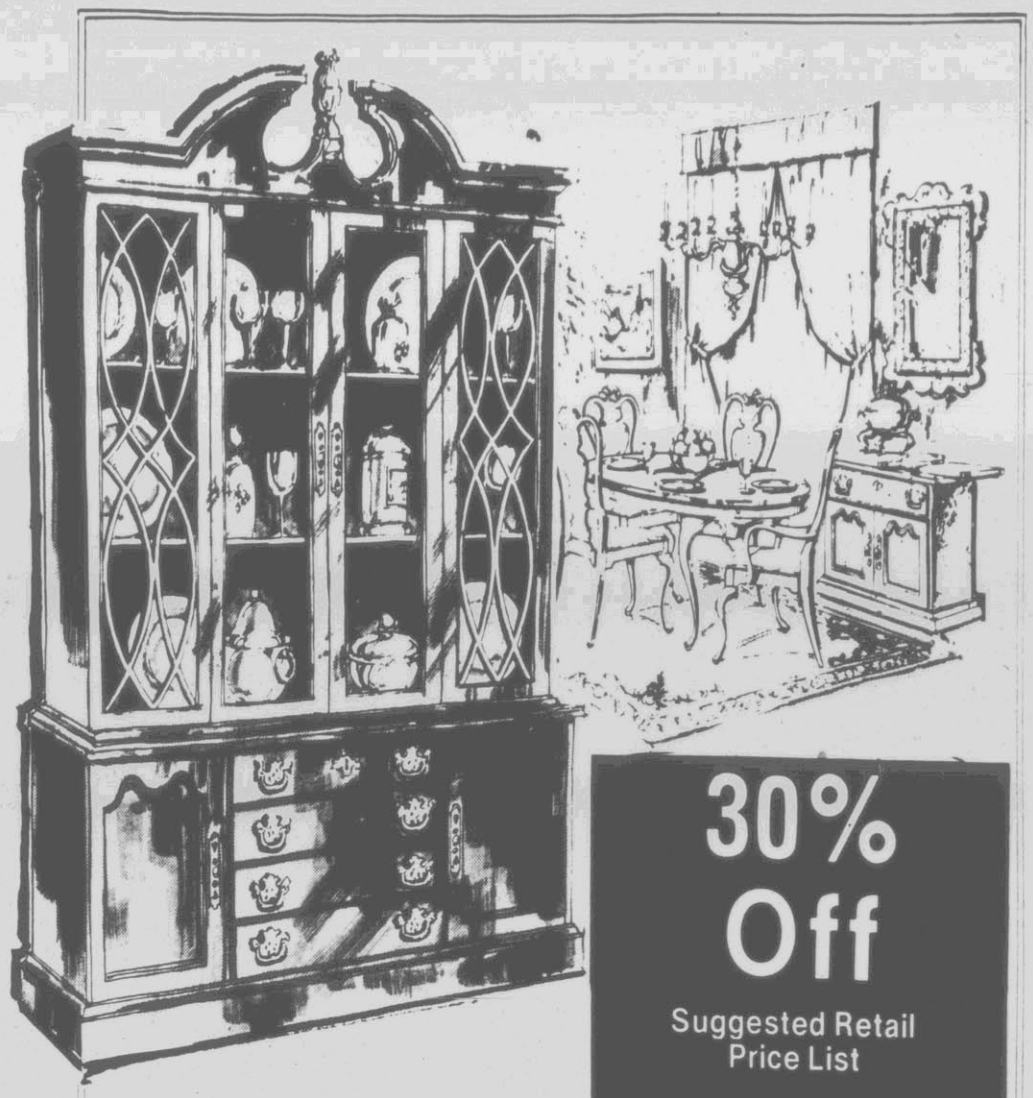

"To begin with, you've got security. That's the security of quality medical care right in your own home, from your own doctor, near your own hospital. And it's the security of knowing that the rescue squad, the fire department and police services are only moments away. It's simply the security of knowing that help, whenever you need it, is moments away.

"The Albemarle offers peaceful retirement living. You don't have to worry any more about the roof leaking, yard work, maintenance of your home, getting things down from the attic or finding someone to replace that bulb up there.

"One of the things that makes The Albemarle special is that you can continue going to your own church, clubs, golf games and other activities. You can continue the life you're living right now — except that you don't have to cook every meal, wash dishes or do spring cleaning. And because your future is secure, you're free to travel, spend money and do the things you've always dreamed about.

"A lot of people have worked hard to build and preserve Tarboro's heritage. We know that folks will appreciate the efforts that have gone into making Tarboro an All-American City, and into making The Albemarle part of our future. Tarboro is a very special place. And The Albemarle is simply quality retirement living with the assurance of tender loving life-time care."

In the second flight, top prize went to Ralph Broughton and J. Gilbert who had a 74-71—145. Taking second were Paul Andrews and Ed Murphrey with 146, winning a playoff from five other teams. J. Holliday and Pat Holliday finished third and Jimmy Walls and Bobby Jones took fourth in the playoff results.

The third flight was won by Emmett Koonce and Oren Babcock, who shot a 76-70—146. H. Garrett and B. Haden took second place with a 147.

In the fourth flight, D. Wheeler and B. Bright (80-72) tied with C. Riggs and C. Tart (79-73) for first, and split the prizes.

Bud Flanner and H. Hill took the fifth flight with a 82-71—153. Second place went to Ken Barnes and George Adams with a 156.

Brook Valley Country Club

Two holes in one were recently scored at the Brook Valley Country Club. Joe Lamotte scored one of them on the 12th hole, a 139-yarder. The other came on the 5th hole, a 179-yarder, with Willie Hawley making that shot.

Billy Morton scored an eagle recently on the par-5 13th hole. He hit a driver, a three wood and an eight iron on the hole.

Mike Moye made an eagle two on the ninth hole, hitting a driver and a nine iron.

The Jack and Jill tournaments will get underway Wednesday at 5:15 p.m.

The club championship will be held Saturday and Sunday, May 15 and 16, and signups may be done through May 14. There is no charge for this tournament. A men's and women's divisions will be held, with seniors in each.

Joe Jenkins recently scored a hole-in-one at Willow Spring Country Club in Wilson. The ace came on the 165-yard tenth hole. Jenkins was playing with Mack Dupree and Mike Hicks. It was Jenkins' first ace. He fired a 72 for the round.

Theodore Sutton Signs With Dallas

East Carolina University fullback Theodore Sutton, who earlier in the week turned down a contract with the Dallas Cowboys, signed with that club Friday night.

Sutton joins backfield mates Anthony Collins and Mike Hawkins in signing professional contracts. Collins was the second round draft choice of the New England Patriots, while Hawkins signed a free-agent pact with the Atlanta Falcons.

The Kinston native, originally a walk-on at East Carolina, became the second leading career rusher at East Carolina last fall, just missing out on passing leader Carlester Crumpler as he finished with over 2,500 yards.

Sutton's contract with the Cowboys is for three years, and he is to report to rookie camp on May 13.

BRINGING A SNOWMAN TO LIFE — Glassblower Owen Kingsberry of Greenville demonstrated his technique for students at North Pitt High School recently during the school's celebration of North Carolina Heritage Week. Coinciding with Kingsberry's presentation was a visit by Sara Hodgkins, secretary of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources. "You as citizens of the future are responsible for the arts and the preservation of our heritage," she told the students, "and from what I see here today, you are very concerned with this responsibility." Students from schools throughout the county planned projects, activities and special displays last week commemorating their cultural heritage as North Carolinians. At North Pitt, other projects included a main entrance display featuring the state theme and map, an "I Love North Carolina Day," an exhibit focusing on North Carolina books, and a cookbook, "Colonial Recipes For Modern Living. Agency Opposes Annexation

Pitt County's Development Commission has again gone on record opposing any attempt by Greenville to annex the industrial area north of the city.

Commission chairman Bruce Beasley Jr. said the agency, in a special meeting Thursday, adopted a resolution expressing its opposition to "current industrial annexation discussions being formulated by officials of the city of Greenville."

Beasley observed, "In spring 1978, the city ... began an effort to determine if it was possible to annex the industrial area north of the community. At that time the Development Commission went on record unanimously in opposition to such a plan, in whole or in part."

He continued, "It is now 1981 and once again the officials of Greenville are initiating discussions on this subject. In an effort to discourage such considerations as early as possible, the members of the ... commission are prepared to send their message of unanimous disagreement to such a plan to officials of the city.

"The many factors which influence the location of new industry and the expansion of existing industry sometimes often comes down to an item such as the climate for growth in a certain community. It would be a very serious matter if this climate were disturbed right now or in the immediate future, especially since the commission staff worked so hard during the past year to locate a tenant to the J. H. Hudson shell building."

The chairman said the commission "is very aware of the undeveloped property north of Greenville which would be affected by annexation and which would become more difficult to promote to potential clients."

He said the commission urged "the city leadership to once again put this question aside before it becomes a matter of statewide interest."

Since 1975, according to Beasley, five plants with investments in excess of $60 million and manufacturing employment totaling more than 2,500 have either located to or expanded in the area.

East Carolina Alumni Expand Budget, Add 25 Scholarships

ECU News Bureau

The Alumni Association of East Carolina University voted approval Saturday of a record, expanded budget of more than $100,000 to advance and enrich ECU's programs of excellence.

Included is the addition of 25 alumni honor scholarships which will bring to a total of 65 the number of full tuition and fees stipends to students with records of superior academic achievement.

Honors scholarships are awarded to 25 incoming freshmen each year. The students chosen have average SAT scores of 1,250, rank in the top 5 percent of their high school graduating class and generally are valedictorians or salutatorians. The ECU Alumni Association has a goal of 100 such scholarships in force by 1983.

Other 1981-82 budget highlights include:

— $50,000 in specified (restricted) scholarships and departmental support programs.

— $1,000 for annual teaching excellence awards.

— $1,000 for academic and professional society programs.

— $2,000 for the ECU Ambassadors, a student volunteer service organization.

— $9,500 for the ECU Report, alumni magazine and newspaper.

Donald L. Lemish, vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement and Planning, said the 1981-82 budget was based on record anticipated alumni gift support for the calendar year 1981 and actual gifts received in calendar year 1980. In 1980, Lemish said, alumni contributed a total of $104,359 in unrestricted funds, monies not earmarked for specific purposes, and an additional $84,290 in restricted gifts.

He said 5,641 individual alumni made contributions to the 1980 Alumni Association fund-raising efforts. All of these figures are new records for ECU alumni giving, Lemish said.

Phillip Ray Dixon, Greenville attorney and a 1971 graduate of ECU, was elected president of the Alumni Association for 1981-82 at a business session during Saturday's Alumni Day activities. Dixon has served on the association's board of directors and as vice president for the past year.

Other officers elected were John Lennon of Raleigh, vice president; Jim Hicks of Greenville, secretary, and Marvin Slaughter of Virginia Beach, Va., treasurer.

During the Alumni Weekend the classes of 1911, 1916, 1921, 1926, 1931, 1936, 1941, 1946, 1951, and 1956 were honored. Special activities were held on Friday evening for the Silver and Golden Anniversary classes as well as those who graduated prior to the Golden Anniversary class. A reception was held at the chancellor's home and later in the evening a reunion dinner was held in Mendenhall Student Center followed by reunion sessions.

PHIL DIXON

Members of the Board of Directors elected were: Junius H. Rose Jr., Kinston; Samuel J. Wornom, Sanford; Jeanette M. Wright, Tabor City; and Gene T. Aman, Raleigh.

An amendment to the charter of the Alumni Association which would provide for the inclusion of professional societies was adopted.

Golden K Holds Birthday Dinner

The Kiwanis Club of Golden K held its sixth annual birthday dinner and ladies night April 28 at the Greenville Golf and Country Club, with several past presidents as speakers.

Highlights of previous administrations were made after dinner by the following past presidents: Walter Glenn Garner 1975-76; Dr. Charles G. DeShaw, 1976-77; Merrill H. Bynum, 1977-78; Henry C. Oglesby, 1978-79, and Claude J. Goodman, 1979-80. Robert L. Martin, incumbent president, reviewed the major accomplishments of his term in office.

Vice president Sam Winchester Sr. presented the president's award to Robert Martin and the distinguished service award for 1980-81 to Dr. Richard C. Todd.

The committee on arrangements included Sam Winchester Sr., chairman; W.S. (Studie) Bost, and Dr. Richard C. Todd.

Dr. Richard C. Todd led the group singing and the Rev. Adrian E. Brown gave the invocation.

Southern Pines Editor Receives Society Award

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The editor of The Southern Pines Pilot, Sam Ragan, has been presented the North Carolina Society Award in recognition of "his public service and his promotion, enhancement, production and preservation of the literature of his native state."

Ragan, the first secretary of the North Carolina Department of Art, Culture and History, is former executive news editor of the News and Observer Publishing Co. and past president of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association.

In 1972, he was named by former Gov. Robert Scott to head the culture department, which was the first of its kind in the nation.

He is the author of several books and is noted for his poetry, for which he received the Tercentenary Poetry Award in 1963.

In remarks prepared for Friday night's banquet, Neil Morgan, editor of the San Diego Evening Tribune, praised Ragan as a man who used his typewriter "to prod this state into cultural leadership in the Sunbelt bonanza."

He said Ragan wanted every issue of his newspaper to be a work of art.

"Like any country editor, Sam does it all. For hours each week, he is at his telephone talking with his people."

Morgan, who worked with Ragan at the News and Observer of Raleigh, said his mentor often was a source of inspiration to him.

"There is some extraordinary genius that creates an editor who makes writers better. And in these times it seems to grow rare because editors become administrators and writers become pawns.

"The proudness I sense in Ragan is a private thing, never spilling over into self-adulation. It is a proudness in the goodness of man and in our capacity, despite the cacaphonies of each day's chaoses, to be better."

Previous winners of the award include playwright Paul Green, founder Albert Coates of the N.C. Institute of Government and Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. It is presented by the North Caroliniana Society, a non-profit organization that promotes the state's history, literature and culture.

Virginia Jury Returns Five Convictions For Bid Rigging

NORFOLK (AP) — Five convictions and two acquittals in a federal antitrust trial wind up the government's case against six Tidewater road building companies accused of running a 16-year bid-rigging conspiracy.

"Justice was served," prosecutor Hays Gorey said after the jury on Friday found three asphalt paving company executives and their two corporations guilty and declared two co-defendants innocent.

Three of the other six firms — Rea Construction Co., Ashland-Warren Inc. and Asphalt Roads & Materials Co. Inc. — had pleaded guilty to bid-rigging conspiracy charges before the trial started.

A fourth, Ames & Webb Inc. and its president, Harold N. Webb, pleaded no contest.

Contractors Paving Co. Inc., its president Clinton M. Teets and vice president Ralph H. Breakfield, and Portsmouth Paving Corp. and its president, R. Curtis Saunders Jr., were convicted Friday.

Leighton S. Gaddy, a vice president of Ames & Webb, and Wilbert B. Siviter, a former Rea vice president, were acquitted.

A sentencing date will be set Monday. Lawyers for those convicted said they are considering appeals.

The case was one of many stemming from a federal investigation into bid-rigging on government highway contracts that has covered six southeastern states.

It was the first to come to trial in Virginia, and the charges were far broader than in many of the others, where bid-rigging was alleged in one locality or on specific jobs.

The defendants here were charged with a single, 16-year conspiracy to allocate illegally local, state and federal road paving contacts in four southeastern Virginia cities by submitting non-competitive bids or by not bidding at all.

It actually took two trials to obtain a verdict.

The jury the first time around deliberated nearly 10 hours before returning deadlocked.

Both cases lasted 10 days. But Round 2 saw a more orderly and chronological presentation from the government and swifter attacks from the defense attorneys, who had already shown their hands in the first trial. The jury came back in less than five hours.

The prosecution's case relied on four colleagues of the defendants who had pleaded guilty to bid-rigging conspiracy charges. The witnesses said they had participated in the conspiracy and testified the defendants had, too.

Siviter had left the industry just eight months into the statute of limitations on the charge. The testimony of his specific participation during the statuatory period was discredited.

"These are people I've known all my life. These are not bad guys," Siviter said of his convicted associates. "I want to cry. I think I will."

No Early Decision Expected In UNC Case

By JEFF MAYERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1969, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare ordered 10 southern and border states to desegregate their colleges and universities.

Twelve years later, the dispute still has not been settled. And one case — that of the 16-campus University of North Carolina system — has developed into a classic confrontation between state higher-education officials and the federal government.

North Carolina, which has long prided itself in a progressive image and a strong higher-education program, is fighting a move by the U.S. Department of Education to make it the only state to lose federal funding for its colleges because of the issue of segregation.

After years of legal maneuvering and negotiations between HEW officials and state education and political leaders, the case wound up before an administrative law judge last year for a lengthy hearing that is expected to come to a close later this month.

But even that does not mean an end is in sight.

If Judge John J. Mathias orders about $100 million a year in federal funding to the state colleges cut off, the decision could be appealed to Education Secretary T.H. Bell and then to the courts.

Federal officials suggested that UNC, which has five mostly black campuses and 11 mostly white institutions, eliminate vestiges of segregation by moving some programs from the predominantly white colleges to the black institutions.

The government said this would attract more white students to the black colleges, ending the "racial identifiability" of the schools.

The hearing before Mathias has produced more than 500 exhibits and 15,000 pages of testimony from 60 witnesses since it began last July.

Although testimony is expected to end on Wednesday, officials say it likely will be winter before Mathias hands down a decision because of the complicated issues involved and the mountains of evidence he must consider.

There is still the possibility of an out-of-court settlement. In late March, one of the lawyers for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which filed suit in 1970 to force HEW to take action against the 10 states, said the government and university were close to a settlement.

There was reason for optimism. In a parallel case, the agency, reorganized as the Department of Education, announced it had reached agreement with Florida over its desegregation plan.

In announcing the agreement, Bell said, "In the past, the federal policy has been to investigate, find noncompliance and negotiate from a threatening legal stance. Now we are going to listen to what an institution is doing to resolve discrimination and take that into account."

However, UNC officials have made it clear from the beginning that they consider the main issue to be their ability to control the university system. They have maintained that there are no legal barriers to integration and that they have taken adequate steps to bring about desegregation of the 16 campuses.

A string of UNC officials and prominent educators from other states has denounced program consolidation as "educationally unsound" and said that it would seriously disrupt the university system.

Educators testified tht closing programs at one school to open up similar programs at other schools solely for the purpose of desegregation is unworkable.

Those who have testified said they cannot conceive of faculty and students simply following an educational program wherever it goes.

The government, on the other hand, funded an $80,000 study to prove the plan was workable. That study has been the focus of most of the testimony throughout the hearings.

Eight of the 10 states ordered by HEW in 1969 to desegregate agreed to negotiate with federal officials, and all but two reached agreement on moves to promote integration of campuses.

Florida, Georgia, Virginia, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Pennsylvania agreed to adopt policies recommended by the government — forestalling a confrontation with Washington. But two states, Louisiana and Mississippi, refused to negotiate, and their cases are in the hands of the U.S. Justice Department.

The Louisiana case is still in the pretrial stages. The Justice Department says the state has a racially dual system. But some of the black schools in the state, including Grambling and Southern University, maintain they don't want the policies adopted because they don't want to lose their racial identity.

So far, North Carolina is the only state threatened with the cutoff of federal funds, although Maryland officials are still in the negotiating stages.

However, U.S. District Judge John Pratt, who drew up guidelines which North Carolina rejected, ordered the Department of Education in December to begin investigating the racial policies of several states.

CITY OF GREENVILLE NEIGHBORHOOD BUDGET MEETINGS

The City of Greenville has scheduled the following neighborhood meetings on the City Budget for 1981-82.

Date and Time	Location	Neighborhoods
Monday, May 4, 1981 7:30 p.m.	People's Baptist Temple U.S. 264 Bypass West	Red Oak, Oakdale, Edgewood Mobile Home Park, Baker Heights
Tuesday, May 5, 1981 7:30 p.m.	South Greenville Recreation Center Howell	Hillsdale, Carolina Heights, Lakeview Terrace, Kearney Park Newtown, Hopkins Park, South Evans, Glendale Court, Lake Ellsworth Westwood
Monday, May 11, 1981 7:30 p.m.	National Guard Armory South Memorial Drive	Greenfield Terrace, North River Estates, East Meadowbrook, West Meadowbrook,

The budget is one of the most important considerations of the Council as it establishes the framework for City operations and the provision of City services. The City Council believes that citizen participation in the budget process is vital and that the comments and suggestions received from City residents will be most beneficial to them in reviewing the budget. Citizens of Greenville are encouraged to attend one of the neighborhood budget meetings.

Frances Young

Leader Set For Drive

Frances Young of Bethel has been named chairman of the 1981 membership drive for the Mental Health Association in Pitt County, according to association president Theresa Shank.

Mrs. Young, the former Frances Rowlette, is a Bethel native and has served as county chairman for Operation Santa Cluas and as a board member and membership chairman for the mental health group.

She and her husband, Robert C. Young Jr., are the parents of two sons, Rob and Cameron.

Other members of the new membership committee are Annie Laurie Askey, Lucille Sledge and Melba Stallings; Nora Lee Craft of Ayden; Daisy Lee Latham of Bethel; Mrs. Frank Christopher and Sandra Hardison of Grifton; and Arvella Dilda of Fountain. Phyllis Townsend will represent the Pitt Community College Mental Health Chapter.

May has been proclaimed Mental Health Month in North Carolina by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Activities for May include spot announcements on radio, several television appearances, a post contest for fifth grade students in the city and county school (both public and private), a visit by mental health speaker Bill Thomas; a phon-o-thon for new members, and staff appreciation day at the Mental Health Center.

For more information, call the office of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County, 752-7448, Mrs. Young said.

Bar Plans Law Day Ceremony

Annual Law Day ceremonies will be held Monday at 9 a.m. in the Superior Courtroom of the Pitt County Courthouse.

Judge S. Gerald Arnold of the North Carolina Court of Appeals will be the principal speaker and remarks will be made by Superior Court Judge Frank R. Brown and Robert R. Browning, vice president of the Pitt County Bar Association.

A reception hosted by the Pitt County Bar Auxiliary will follow the ceremonies. Vernon Snyder III, Law Day chairman, said the general public is invited to attend.

Law Day is recognized nationally as a day to reflect upon the importance of the law in the lives of Americans. Law Day 1981, the 24th annual observance, is celebrated throughout the nation by bar associations, civic groups, churches and businesses.

The event is sponsored by the Young Lawyers Division of the N.C. Bar Association, with over 50 local bar associations planning activities. This year's theme is "Law—The Language of Liberty," a focus on our charters of freedom: the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and the Bill of Rights.

HOUSING MEET

The Greenville Housing Authority will hold its regular meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the 1103 Broad St. central offices.

Prior to the regular session, the annual meeting for the election of officers will be held at 7:15 p.m. Commissioners will consider routine reports during the regular meeting concerning finance and occupancy, and status reports on the various projects in development.

MASONIC NOTICE

Greenville Lodge No. 284 AF & AM will hold a stated communication at 7:30 p.m. Monday. The Fellow Craft degree will be confirmed. Supper will be served at 6:45 p.m. All Master Masons are invited to attend.

Analysts Say Use Caution

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street analysts who like to track seasonal patterns in stock prices caution that the market is heading into a potentially perilous period.

"Warning: the next month or two might be hazardous to your wealth," declares investment adviser Yale Hirsch in his annual "Stock Trader's Almanac."

After studying the market's behavior the past decade and a half, Hirsch dubbed the fifth and six months of the year "the May-June disaster area."

From 1965 through 1980, he calculated, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials averaged a 1.9 percent decline in May and a 0.8 percent drop in June.

"In most years, if one month didn't get you the other did," he observes.

As with most any generalization about the market, Hirsch acknowledges, this one has not held true in every case. In 1975, as a bull market was gathering momentum, the Dow Jones industrials posted a 1.3 percent gain in May and jumped 5.6 percent in June.

Again in 1980 — another bull-market year — the "jinx" was broken with a 4.1 percent rise in May and a further 2 percent gain in June.

That has not been enough, however, to erase the poor long-term record for stock prices in this particular two-month period.

A good many analysts, of course, put little credence in trying to link investment decisions to the calendar. Any patterns that appear, they contend, are most likely sheer coincidence.

And anyway, they say, if history alone were a reliable guide to the market's performance, making money in stocks would be a lot easier than it is.

Hirsch acknowledges there is no one compelling, rational explanation why May and June should be bad for the market, just as there is no guarantee that every year will produce a traditional "summer rally."

He notes there has been a series of unsettling news developments in past Mays. In May 1973, for example, news was breaking rapidly about the Watergate scandal in Washington.

"The most logical reason for weak Mays in our opinion," he concludes, "is that the market tends to rise sharply in bull years through the first quarter and into April, becoming overextended in May.

"In bear years, declines start slowly and pick up steam in May and June."

After a little more than four months of 1981, the jury is still out on just what kind of a year this one is for the market.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 24.76, to 995.59, in the past week, now stands 31.60 points above its close at New Year's.

The American Stock Exchange market value index, at its 356.24 close on Friday, shows a 7.25 gain since the start of the year. But the New York Stock Exchange composite index has slipped 1.11 to 76.75.

Business Notes

GROWTH NOTED

Hampton Industries Inc. reported that sales rose to $101,511,000 in 1980 from $95,771,384 the previous year, while 1980 earnings increased from $3,076,226 to $3,199,000. The new totals represent record levels, the firm said.

The company reported that for the second year in a row, the board of directors declared a 10 percent common stock dividend.

Prepshirt is a division of Hampton Industries.

INCOME GAINED

Branch Corp., parent holding company of Branch Banking & Trust Co., reported consolidated net income for the first quarter of $2,333,228 compared to $1,912,552 for the same period last year, an increase of 22 percent.

Consolidated income before securities transactions was $2,559,521 compared to $1,909,464 the previous year.

Total deposits rose 20.1 percent to $644.3 million from $536.4 million last year, and total loans were $462.1 million, up from $381.9 million in 1980.

ACTIVITY DECLINED

The level of business activity in the state declined in March, registering 155.6, down 0.3 percent from the revised February level, according to the Wachovia Business Index.

The decline, it was noted, reflects a less than usual seasonal advance in the level of economic activity in March, following strong gains in January and February.

Seasonally adjusted decreases in the manufacturing workweek, non-manufacturing employment and price-adjusted average hourly earnings all contributed to the March decline, the Index showed. Manufacturing employment remained stable.

DIRECTORS NAMED

Bancshares of North Carolina Inc. held its 1981 annual meeting of shareholders recently, according to Charles Merrill, president and chief executive officer.

Merrill said Chester Don Worthington Jr., John F. Kabas, C. D Spangler Jr., and Marshall T. Spears Jr. were re-elected to serve as directors until 1984.

AVERAGE LOWER

Virginia Electric and Power Co. reported that the average price of electricity to its retail customers in Virginia, North Carolina and West Virginia during the first quarter was 7.8 percent lower than it was during last year's first quarter.

Vepco said the reduction in its charges contrasts with continuing increases in the general inflation rate.

Vepco reported it is seeking rate increases in both North Carolina and Virginia, but said if the requests are approved in full, price increases to electric customers will still fall below the inflation rate for the 1980-81 period. North Carolina customers received a rate reduction in April that is not reflected in first quarter results, it was noted.

SAFETY AWARDS

The Raleigh Division of Winn-Dixie Stores Inc. announced that it presented safe driving awards to 79 of its truck drivers recently who drove a total of 4,750,000 miles without a chargeable accident during 1980.

C. V. Evans was cited for 22 consecutve years of safe driving, while M. I. Allen and N. B. Daniels received awards for 20 years of safe driving. Garage personnel B. J. Creech and W. F. Smith were honored for nine-year records of excellence in preventive maintenance.

DEPUTY AUDITOR

Bill Langley has been promoted to deputy auditor of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. here, the bank announced.

A Fayetteville native, Langley joined Wachovia in 1972 as an audit trainee in the Greenville office. He has served as regional auditor since September of 1978.

A 1972 graduate of East Carolina University, he is married to the former Doris M. Teel of Farmville and they have one daughter.

Reduced Marketings Help Lift Prices On Hog, Cattle Futures

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Hogs closed as much as 1.35 cents higher and ended the day at 49.70 cents a pound for delivery in June, partly because slaughter figures show producers took fewer animals to mar-ket during the week, said Bob Kuhn, an analyst in Chicago with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. He said slaughters were 8 percent lower than the same year ago period, confirming last month's U.S. Agriculture Department report which foreshadowed tighter pork supplies by summer.

He also cited the season's slack in demand.

"The sun is out here — it gives people the idea that farmers are going to be in the field next week planting corn" in-stead of taking their hogs to market, Kuhn said.

The advances in the prices of hogs and grains, used for animal feed, contributed to the higher cattle prices, he said. Cattle were as much as .58 cent higher and settled at 70.07 cents a pound for delivery in June.

Pork bellies, which closed mixed, were said to be under pressure from lower prices for bellies in the cash market and heavy supplies in warehouses freezers.

Grain and soybean futures prices closed mostly higher in a day of rather light activity on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was as much as 4 cent higher and closed at $4.27¾ for delivery in May and corn rose by as much as 2 cents and closed at $3.61½ a bushel for May delivery.

Analysts said anticipation of some news about Soviet purchases now that the embargo is lifted continued to provide underlying support for the market.

Pricing by commercial inter-ests also was cited. And light sales of grain by farmers at country elevators were said to be keeping hedge-selling by commercial interests at a minimum.

The lighter than normal volume on the board of trade was attributed partly to the fact that markets were quiet overseas, where some countries celebrate May Day.

In other closing prices, oats were 5 cents lower to 2½ cents higher, with May at 2.07 a bushel; and soybeans were 1¼ cents lower to 3½ cents higher, with May at $7.77¼ a bushel.

Gold prices remained unchanged through much of the trading session then plunged just before the close on news that the broker loan rate had soared to 20.5 percent from 18 percent at Irving Trust Co., the nation's 14th largest commercial bank, said Robert House, an analyst in New York for Merrill Lynch.

The broker rate is considered a leading indicator of movements in the prime lending rate. Other analysts said gold prices rebounded in the last minutes to close at $490.40 a troy ounce on the Commodity Exchange Inc. in New York as a few large firms took advatange of temporarily sagging prices.

Silver and platinum prices were mostly unchanged in extremely light trading, with overseas activity also light because of the holiday. Silver rose as much as 7.9 cents with the May-delivery contract, settling at $11.11 an ounce on the Comex.

Copper closed mixed in light trading. Analysts said the fact that federal funds were over 19 percent all day exacerbated traders' worries of getting cheap money and held copper prices down. The May-delivery contract settled at 81.15 cents a pound.

Cotton prices rose as much as .60 cent on buying influenced by a USDA report showing sub-stantial export sales for the week ended April 23, said Ernest Simon, a specialist in New York with Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc.

Continuing fears of possible drought damage in Florida and buying by speculators who wanted to cover commitments for delivery pushed orange juice prices as much as 2.10 cents higher, said Ron Kimmel, who also is with Bache in New York.

Undertaker Seeks Plain Talk In Job

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Gennaro J. Capobianco, president of the Greater Hartford Funeral Services and Chapels Ltd., says it's time for plain talk in his business. The latest euphemism, in a manner of speaking, laid him low.

"I know the word 'mortician' has lost its glow, and the term 'funeral director' is a bit dated, but 'Grief Therapist?'

"Granted an undertaker can be many people. He can be a minister, a lawyer, a social worker. Many things in one. But just how far are you going to take the public?

"I know what I am and I'm proud of it. I'm Jerry the Undertaker. I have a job to do. I'm a dedicated person. I'm sincere. And I call 'em the way I see 'em," he said.

He sees cremation and inexpensive funerals as the practical way to go for many people. If he has his way, television viewers may see him in commercials saying, "Is inflation killing you? Don't let the high cost of dying get you down. Cremation, the simple and dignified choice."

He may be winning friends and influencing people, but most are not in the funeral line.

"I have visited more than 30 countries in the past 10 years — visited undertakers — call them what you will, and I said, 'My God, America is making a circus out of funerals.' To me the American way of death is a joke. Outside of the oil companies, it's the big American ripoff.

"Most undertakers will not agree. They're going to rationalize. And it's not for me to say what a family wants or doesn't want. I will continue to promote cremation though I have a full-service funeral home. I have caskets that are costly only because people demand them."

Capobianco is 32 and customarily wears a worsted cutaway of his own design with a velvet collar, a diamond stickpin in his cravat, a gold chain anchoring an antique pocket watch, and striped trousers. A white handkerchief with a monogram peeping out of his breast pocket completes the ensemble.

He sometimes uses his 1980 Ford station wagon in funeral processions because it's cheaper for the bereaved. "You don't need a limousine when you die," Jerry, the undertaker, says.

Economist Cautious On Reagan's Plans

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — It remains to be seen whether the economic programs set forth by President Reagan will revitalize a sluggish national economy, a First Union National Bank economist said Friday.

"The economy has been basically flat for the past two years, and I see continued 'stagflation' and a sluggish economy for the rest of this year," said G.G. "Bud" Carrier Jr., First Union senior vice president.

"The only way to break out of the pattern is to make substantial and sustained progress against inflation," he said.

"Reagan's plan is based on experimental theories that haven't been tried, so no one knows if it will work," he added. "It will be a drastic departure from what we've done for the past 15 years but I says let's give it a fair try. It may work."

In his quarterly economic briefing, Carrier said the inflation rate for the first quarter of 1981 year was 7.8 percent, down almost 3 percent from the 10.8 percent rate for the last quarter of 1980. Meanwhile, the gross national product increased 14.9 percent in the first quarter of this year to $2.8 billion, matching the increase for the final period of 1980.

Carrier said after inflation was figured in, the GNP for the first period of 1981 was up 6.5 percent compared to a growth rate of 3.8 percent in the last quarter of last year.

"Here you can see what the higher inflation rate during the last quarter of 1980 meant in terms of gross national product growth," Carrier said. "But actually, looking at a two year picture, the figures show that the gross national product has only increased by 2 percent during that period. That's a very slow rate of increase, due to a very sluggish economy."

National unemployment decreased slightly for the first quarter of this year to about 7.1 percent, he said, continuing a slight downward trend since the middle of 1980. The total employment rate went up slightly after a drop during the last quarter of 1980.

While personal income increased at an annual rate of about 10 percent, average workers' real spendable earnings, after inflation, taxes and social security, dropped slightly during the first half of the first quarter of 1981. But a slight increase at the end put a stop to a two-year pattern of declining spendable income.

Retail sales climbed to more than $90 billion in the first quarter, and Carrier cited new car sales as the main contributor. New-car sales were up sharply during the first quarter after a marked decline during the last period of 1980.

Housing-starts fell in the first part of the quarter but made a slight recovery during the last part. Carrier said high interest rates and tight loan money contributed to the slow housing market.

Pitt Board To Meet

The Pitt County Board of Education will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the county office building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Items on the agenda include:

— Recognition of outstanding students, teachers and administrators.

— Consideration of the request for senior exemption from exams discussed at the last meeting.

— The Farmville Advisory Council will make a presentation on redistricting the Farmville attendance area.

— Superintendent Ott Alford will report on the federal court case James Bradley Hines vs. the Pitt County Board of Education and the North Carolina Stet Board of Education.

— Further consideration of the proposed RIF (Reduction in Force) policy will be made.

Budget Meeting Planned Monday

A City Council neighborhood budget meeting will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. at People's Baptist Temple on U.S. 264 Bypass West.

Mayor Don McGlohon said the meeting will be held for residents of Red Oak, Oakdale, Edgewood Mobile Home Park and Baker Heights.

The mayor encouraged citizens of these neighborhoods to attend the meeting and let city officials know their views on the city budget.

James and Pat Dunn

Their Love Story Began In Nursing Home

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

James and Pat Dunn met as patients in Greenville Villa Nursing Home here. They went their separate ways, not seeing each other for several years. They remet and acknowledged their love for each other. They went their ways again. And then they decided to buck the odds — they got married.

The minister who heard the vows told James' sister, "I hope it works, but I don't see how it can."

Yet today, seven and a half years after their wedding, the Dunns are enjoying their lives together as much as in the beginning. Their home on Route 2, Farmville, is a place of peace and happiness.

Pat is legally blind and James is a quadriplegic confined to a wheelchair.

Besides her greatly impaired vision (at times she can see forms and half images, but cannot make out details; at other times, she can discern only light), Pat, a Moore County native, has another possibly more serious problem. She has little or no sense of equilibrium.

Asked what her illness is, she said, "That's the problem. They never knew. In a horse, they'd call it the 'blind staggers.' It has to do with the nervous system. It came on suddenly during the summer after my sophomore year at Campbell College. They didn't think I'd live for a while. I was unconscious for weeks. Then I woke up blind and almost totally helpless because of the equilibrium problem."

James, a Falkland area native, was an 18-year-old in 1953, working for White (now Barrus) Construction Co., when the car in which he was riding ran off the edge of the newly built-up pavement on N.C. 43 in Falkland and the driver lost control.

"We'd just built up that section," he said, "and the state had not had time to built up the shoulder corresponding."

The car rolled. James' brother-in-law, Jack Casey, was killed and he knew as he lay pinned under the car in the yard of what is now Charles Harris' service station that his back was broken. He had no feeling from the lower chest down.

"I'm a quadriplegic," he said, "but it's low quad injury (C-6 and 7). I have no use of my lower body, but I do have some, though not total, use of my hands and arms."

At the time James and Pat met in 1966, Pat had only recently come out of a comatose state and James was in the nursing home recuperating from severe urinary tract problems associated with his paralyzed condition. "We liked each other very much even then," they said, "but neither of us were real sure about how we could cope taking care of our own needs, much less those of someone else. There was no serious consideration of marriage. It seemed impossible."

James went to the Concord area to live with a brother and to work for nearly five years as a taxi company dispatcher. Pat went on to Butner Hospital and other rehabilitation facilities.

Then, in 1970, something happened that Pat terms, "Incredible!" She said she was in the hall of Fisherville Rehabilitation Center in Fisherville, Va., when she heard James' voice. She said she knew instantly it was he, but said nothing because she just couldn't fathom that it could be true.

Later the same morning, James said he was traveling the same hall and peered into the occupational therapy room to see if he saw some of his friends. There, he said, was Pat. He wheeled himself in and said, "Pat Frye!"

By the time the two left Fisherville, they knew they were in love, but she said she still had a long-held dream to return to college and felt it would be unfair to herself and to James not to try. So she went home to Moore County and soon entered the Early Bird college program for the blind at Western Carolina University at Cullowhee. In the meantime, James, who has driven his own specially equipped car for years, visited her and her family in Moore County.

After not too long at Cullowhee, Pat said she made what has proved to be the best decision of her life. "I decided more than anything else in the world," she said, "I wanted to be married to James."

She let him know her feelings and she came to Pitt County for a visit in the home he shared with his sister, Martina Casey.

"We went to Tarboro and got the license and the blood tests and everything," James said, "because my residence was in Edgecombe County. But then we went over to the Pitt County Courthouse to get married. The magistrate was all set to perform the ceremony right there in our car when he learned we'd got the license in Edgecombe. He said he couldn't go ahead.

"We didn't feel like waiting, though, so we went home and called the Rev. L. B. Manning, who said he'd be glad to marry us, but had a full weekend. The only time he could fit us in was 8 o'clock Saturday morning.

"So, that's when we were married. Shortly after 8 o'clock on Saturday, Nov. 24, 1972.

"We lived in the house with my sister for a while and then got a house near Falkland. Then only recently, we got a chance at this duplex apartment. This is the nicest place we've lived, but the others haven't been bad, either. The place is what you make it."

Pat says she feels their marriage was made in heaven, intended to be. "Why else would we have remet like we did in Virginia?

"Well, maybe two-thirds of a person," her husband teased.

Teasing, laughing, joking is a large part of the Dunns' relationship. "When you have as many mishaps in a day as we do, you have to have a sense of humor," James said. "Take Pat out shopping and a policeman's likely to think she's drunk, the way her equilibrium is.

"Let me start down the ramp from the front door to the car on the way to the laundromat and I'm liable to drop a good part of the clothes underneath and have to wait all day for someone to come along who can pick them up.

"Let either one of us knock over a bowl of jelly beans and picking them up can take an hour or so and result in a whole lot of them being smashed by the wheels of my chair."

"Yes, our lifestyle is an exercise in patience," Pat agreed, "and laughing at ourselves is a big help."

Pat is an avid user of the tape-recorded books for the blind provided by the State Services for the Blind. And James often listens with her, though, he says he has to move around some and cannot make himself sit and listen for hours like she sometimes does. He has a little garden —"a few tomato plants" — that he tends and he practices the trade he learned at Fisherville some — mechanical drafting. Kitchen duties are clearly delineated — James is the cook; Pat the dishwasher. Both do light housework and James' sister does the heavy jobs once in a while.

Both are enthusiastic members of King's Crossroad Free Will Baptist Church and enjoy visiting with family, fellow church members and friends in the neighborhood.

A number of their friends are also "handicapped" people. "There's a natural cameraderie among the physically disabled," James said. "We just naturally know how the other feels and we flow together. We have a lot of fun, too. We call each other amazing — Amazing Pat, Amazing James, Amazing Mike. It's an inside joke, because when handicapped people function well at all, people think we're amazing. And we just know we're going ahead with life, doing what we have to do like everybody else."

"The amazing thing about James and me, if there is an amazing part," Pat said, "is that we had the good sense to realize we could go ahead and make a life of our own together when Jesus brought us together. And that we've stayed so close and enjoy each other so much.

"I heard the silly question on television the other day, 'Who would you pick to be stranded on a desert island with you?' The people answered with one celebrity name or another, but I didn't even hesitate with my answer — James,'I said, 'I'd want him on my desert island and then I'd be happy — just as I am every day that we're together here."

Paschal-Klein Vows Solemnized Saturday

CHARLOTTE — Miss Jeanne Elizabeth Klein and Douglas Clyde Paschal of Greenville were married Saturday at 3:30 p.m. in a single ceremony at St. John Neumann Catholic Church by Father Joseph Kelleher of the church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Klein of Charlotte. The bridegroom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Paschal of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of alencon lace and seed pearls over ivory bridal satin. The sheer bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline. From the empire waistline a full skirt with lace appliques extended to a full length cathedral train. The bride wore a fingertip length veil trimmed with alencon lace and carried a bouquet of white silk and natural pink sweetheart roses accented with baby's breath and foliage.

Kathy Klein, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Carole Fincher of Chapel Hill, Maureen McClintock and Sherry Winchester of Charlotte, Carol McMurry of San Diego, Calif., Patricia Ann Paschal of Greenville and Annis Paschal Westmoreland of Atlanta, Ga.

They wore formal gowns of powder blue qiana with a matching sheer jacket. Each was designed with a square neckline and spaghetti straps. A tie sash encircled the waistline from which fell the A-line skirt. They carried a single pink rose with baby's breath, foliage and blue satin ribbon.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen were John Miller of Charlotte, Mike Chatham, Buddy Curry, Phil Farris and Steve Taylor, all of Chapel Hill, Herbert Paschal III, Max Joyner, Michael Murad, Harry Pair and Henry Trevathan, all of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a formal pink chiffon gown. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of slate blue with a bodice of Nottingham lace. The mothers and grandmothers were remembered with miniature white carnation corsages.

A program of wedding music was presented by vocalist Pam Engel of Bowie, Md. accompanied by Thomas Jennings of Harrisonburg, Va.

A reception was held in the church reception hall. Presiding at the guest register was Jill Gardner of Atlanta, Ga. The wedding cake was served by Cindy Fink of Greensboro and punch was poured by Mrs. Elton Shoemaker.

The bridegroom's parents gave a rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Idlewild Country Club preceded by a cocktail hour given by Greenville friends of the bridal couple. The bride was honored at a bridesmaids luncheon Friday.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of the School of Business of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The bride is doing postgraduate work at the university and the bridegroom is a running back with the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League.

The couple will live in Chapel Hill and Minneapolis following a wedding trip to the Virgin Islands, San Francisco and Las Vegas.

MRS. DOUGLAS CLYDE PASCHAL

Engagement Announced

Mrs. H. M. Watkins of Valdosta, Ga. announces the engagement of her daughter, Rebecca Watkins Kaenzig, to Dr. Glen Alan Holm, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Holm of Ellenburg, Wash. The wedding is planned for May 23.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

It's a myth in this country that anyone can make garbage.

I'm not talking about the frozen/quick-serve/packaged/just-add-water/three-minutes-in-the-microwave garbage. I'm talking your made-from scratch-leftover garbage for which American women are famous.

Garbage, if it's made right, takes a full week. Most men don't understand the process. They think you can take a leftover straight from the table, scrape it right from the plate and dump it into the can.

That is not the way American garbage is made.

For the purpose of example, let us walk through a week in the life of two tablespoons of leftover peas and a piece of leftover pot roast the size of a coaster.

Day I: The leftover goes from the table to the refrigerator in an elaborate ritual of joy. In an eagerness to display her frugality, the woman transfers the peas and beef to a smaller dish with a haunting chant, "Don't touch this. I'm saving it for vegetable soup." Everyone believes her ... or pretends they do.

Day II: The leftover enjoys a place of prominence in the refrigerator and is seen every time the door opens. A few times it is reexamined, but from the distance comes the familiar chant, "Don't touch it. I'm saving it for vegetable soup."

Day III: The leftover is moved to a less prominent shelf and is occasionally patted and reassured it will be the makings of vegetable soup.

Day IV: A traumatic time in the life of future garbage. It is either tossed prematurely or is shoved to rear of refrigerator on shelf next to a bowl containing three tablespoons of peach juice and a pit.

Day V: Traditionally on the fifth day, a leftover is opened, exposed to air and passed around to see if anyone can identify it. If it is recognizable, it is shoved in dark corner and allowed to "ripen" for another day.

Day VI: This is a crucial day in which the peas and beef curdle, turn green, harden and grow fuzz.

Day VII: Excited cries resound through the kitchen as the children dance around the refrigerator chanting, "Is it garbage yet?" Mother removes the leftovers, folds back the foil and pronounces the peas and beef dead! In no other country in the world do women prepare their garbage for burial like they do here. First, they wrap it in newspaper, then put it in a brown bag, then a plastic one and finally put it to rest in the garbage can in the garage.

A time-honored tradition of American women who for years have vowed, "I will bury no garbage before its time."

Couple Marries Saturday

Katherine Charlene Edwards and James Ludlow Goes Jr. were married Saturday afternoon at one o'clock in a double ring ceremony. The ceremony was conducted by David Thomas Hill in Hooker Memorial Christian Church.

Daughter of Mrs. Edward A. Scharding and Mr. Charles B. Edwards of New Bern, the bride was given in marriage by her father.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Kathy D. Mattox and Mrs. Diane S. Posta, both of New Bern, who sang "The Wedding Song," "Whither Thou Goest" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ludlow Goes Jr. of Greenville.

The honor attendant was Lynne E. Sawyer of New Bern, sister of the bride and the best man was Jean-Paul Roy of Ayden, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

Ushers included Victor Miguel Diaz of Raleigh and Curtis Garris of New Bern.

MRS. JAMES LUDLOW GOES JR.

The bride wore a formal length gown of white matte jersey designed with an open neckline, criss-crossed bodice in front and cowl drape in back. The gown also had a full flared skirt. In her hair she wore a silk arrangement of daisies, yellow rosebuds and gypsophila. She carried a bouquet of daisies, yellow roses and gypsophila with white satin streamers.

The matron of honor selected a formal length gown of maize matte jersey designed with an open neckline, blouson bodice and an empire waist from which fell a full flared skirt. In her hair she wore a silk arrangement of daisies and gypsophila and carried a nosegay of yellow and white daisies and gypsophila with yellow satin streamers.

The couple will be living in Farmville after a wedding trip to the coast.

The bride graduated from New Bern High School and is employed by Sunnyside Eggs, Inc. as a receptionist and secretary. The bridegroom attended Rose High School and Pitt Community College. He is director of buildings and grounds and horticulturist for the Town of Farmville.

Secretary Has Message For Two

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Will you please do thousands of secretaries a favor and print this? Whenever my boss and his wife receive a personal gift or have been entertained, or if there is any other matter that requires a personal "thank-you" note, my boss asks me to write it. Of course, he signs it. I always thought the wife was supposed to write those notes.

I have a heavier work load than I can carry without all this extra stuff. I have worked overtime, for which I am not paid, to get their Christmas cards out. I really wouldn't mind so much if either he or his wife ever thanked me for it, but it's never mentioned.

His wife has even called and asked me to remind him to send so-and-so a thank-you note. Who does she think she is? Tell him for me, will you please?

NO GUTS

DEAR NO: After this hits print, I may not have to.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from BLISSFUL IN BALTIMORE left me in a fog of confusion. I am a male, past 50, experiencing declining virility. Five of my male friends, all about my age, seemed as confused as I when we discussed BLISSFUL'S letter.

She said: "Your column is filled with letters from women who complain that they are married to cold sex machines who don't know the first thing about how to satisfy a woman. For heaven's sake, who knows better than the woman herself what it takes to satisfy her? Just ask her to be honest. And when she tells you, believe her."

My friends and I asked our wives and received the following responses:

My wife: "You know everything I know."
Wife No. 2: "We're too old for that nonsense."
Wife No. 3: "How should I know?"
Wife No. 4: "Sex is all you ever think about!"
Wife No. 5: "You aren't planning on starting that foolishness again, are you?"
Wife No. 6: "Go read a book, and don't bother me."

Regards,

CHARLES

Taylor-James Vows Spoken On Saturday

Miss Linda Gayle James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin N. James of Rt. 1, Bethel, and Cyrus R. Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Ray Taylor of Vanceboro, were united in marriage in a double ring ceremony.

The Saturday afternoon wedding took place in the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Alice M. James, also of Rt. 1, Bethel. The Rev. W. H. Willis performed the ceremony at five o'clock.

The living room was decorated with two seven branch candelabra with white tapers entwined with ivy. A basket of white mums flanked by white tapers was used in the hall. The stairway was decorated with greenery, white satin bows and wedding bells.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Mayo J. Rogers, aunt of the bride. Mrs. Fred Lomax of Goldsboro sang "We've Only Just Begun" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a white formal gown of organza over taffeta. The empire waist was designed with dropped shoulders with an accordian pleated skirt. She wore a white picture hat and carried an original silk flower cascading bouquet of white cattleya orchids, tea roses, stephanotis, white forget me knots accented with variegated ivy and Boston fern.

The sister of the bridegroom, Cynthia Taylor was honor attendant and wore a formal gown of baby blue qiana with an empire waistline with a V-neckline with a matching chiffon shawl. She carried an original silk flower colonial nosegay of yellow roses, blue shasta daisies accented with ivy and blue bow and streamers.

The father of bridegroom served as best man.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of shrimp and the mother of the bridegroom selected a light blue street length dress. The mothers of the couple were given white silk cattleya orchids and the grandmothers were remembered with corsages of silk flowers.

The bride graduated from North Pitt High School and attended ECU. The bridegroom graduated from D. H. Conley High School. Both are employed as supervisors at Sunshine Garden Center.

An after-rehearsal party was held at the home of Mrs. Mayo J. Rogers Friday evening. The dining room was decorated with spring flowers. The table was covered with an Italian cutwork embroidered cloth and centered with an arrangement of yellow burning tapers entwined with ivy.

Mrs. Rogers poured punch and Mrs. Alice J. Teel served cake squares.

The couple will live in Winterville.

Couple Speaks Vows In High Point Church

HIGH POINT — The wedding ceremony of Joyce Lee Black, daughter of Mrs. Alvin Edison Black of High Point, and Christopher Harry Jarvis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jeffrey Jarvis of Rt. 3, Ayden, was solemnized in the Emmanuel Lutheran Church here Saturday afternoon.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Harry D. Hawthorne, D.D. of Snyder, N. Y. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. W. Harold Hearne, organist, Hal Shoemaker of Charlotte, soloist, and Gregg Peele, trumpeter.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her cousin, Charles E. Ritchie Jr. Her honor attendant was Mrs. Robert P. Harper of Ayden and bridesmaids included Mrs. Bob W. Wilson of Ayden, Mrs. James Hayes of High Point, Mary Lai Jarvis of Greenville and Harriet E. Jarvis of Ayden, sisters of the bridegroom, and D. Lynn Rountree of Greenville.

Honorary bridesmaids included Sharon Bright of Raleigh and Mrs. John Henderson of Trinity. The flower girl was J. J. McGalliard of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, and the junior bridesmaid was Andrea Stutts of High Point, cousin of the bride. Jeffrey Ritchie of High Point, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man while ushers included Robert J. Griffin III of Raleigh, Rodney VanScoy and Jeffrey Jarvis, brother of the bridegroom, both of Ayden, Randy Turner and Nelson Jarvis, brother of the bridegroom, both of Greenville. The junior usher was Mark Richie of High Point, cousin of the bride.

The bride wore a gown of white silk organza designed with a Queen Anne neckline and long lace sleeves. The empire bodice had an overlay of silk Venise lace embellished with seed pearls. The skirt extended into a semi cathedral train and was enhanced with rows of schiffli lace and a crystal pleated flounce at the hemline. Her veil of silk illusion was encircled with lace edging and attached to a lace cap. The bride carried a cascade of white roses, stephanotis, baby's breath, eucalyptus and springerii fern.

The attendants each wore a gown of suede rose qiana knit with a V-neckline, draped back and pleated skirt. They carried pink roses, minute roses, red roses, purple statice and orchid daisies tied with multi colored streamers. The flower girl carried a white wicker basket filled with rose petals and wore a long multi colored dress.

Jeffrey and Nelson Jarvis, brothers of the bridegroom, were acolytes.

The couple will live in Ayden after a wedding trip to the Bahamas and the Virgin Islands.

The bride graduated from High Point Central High School and ECU with a B.S. degree. The bridegroom graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School and attended Lenoir Community College and ECU. He is now self-employed.

After the ceremony, the bride's mother gave a reception at her home. Assisting were Mrs. C. E. Ritchie Jr. and Mrs. Michael Stutts, who poured punch and Mrs. M.A. Daugherty and Mrs. Elbert Bryant, who served cake. Mrs. Morgan Hale presided at the guest register. Guests were greeted by Mrs. R. G. Beck and Mrs. C. E. Ritchie Sr.

A brunch was held Saturday morning for the bridal couple, wedding party and out-of-town guests. Hostesses were Mrs. Michael Stutts, Mrs. R. G. Beck, Mrs. C. E. Ritchie Jr. and Mrs. C. E. Ritchie Sr.

Coed Prison Offers Tentative Proof New System Is Working

By TAD BARTIMUS
Assoated Press Writer

LANSING, Kan. (AP) — The three men and pretty woman in the flower-arranging class joked easily with each other as they fluffed silk roses and pushed decorative weeds into Styrofoam.

Smoking cigarettes and drinking coffee, the students went about their daily routine like millions of other Americans on that sunny winter's day.

But there was an important difference. The four modishly dressed young people in the wood-panelled room were convicted criminals.

Traditionally, prisoners in this country have been segregated in all-male and all-female penal institutions. But in recent years a few facilities, including federal prisons at Lexington, Ky., Fort Worth, Texas, and Pleasanton, Calif., as well as the Caddo Parish (County) Jail in Shreveport, La., and a state penitentiary at Framingham, Mass., have placed male and female inmates behind the same high fence.

Last September, Kansas joined the fledgling ranks of coed prison sites in the United States. About 47 male minimum-security prisoners from the Kansas State Prison have moved a mile south of the overcrowded "Big House" to join 59 women on the grounds of the Kansas State Women's Correctional Institute.

It is not a trend, certainly, although Sally Halford, prison director, would like to see it become so.

The mix was initiated at the beginning of a four-year remodelling job at KSP. Officially, prison authorities say establishment of a coed correctional facility is only temporary. But privately, many express hope the move will become permanent when KSP's renovated wing is completed.

Some penal experts believe that putting men and women offenders together creates a beneficial environment for both groups. They claim it reduces tension and stress, stimulates improved personal hygiene and grooming, and cuts down on the abnormal atmosphere of segregated prison life. They also believe it enhances the rehabilitation process and eases the parolees' transition back into the real world.

"The co-correctional experience has been very good for us," says Mrs. Halford. "I think it's an excellent program, healthy and normal."

But Mrs. Halford and other corrections officials worry about how the coed program will be perceived by the public and state lawmakers who control prison funding. That caution has been transmitted into strict rules governing the behavior of both male and female inmates. Any infraction by the men means an automatic bus ride back to the all-male KSP. So far only two men have taken that trip, officials say.

At first glance, the grounds of KSWCI resemble a pastoral Midwestern college campus. Located high on a bluff above the Missouri River, the prison's rolling lawns are neatly pruned and its mellow red brick buildings trimmed in white are in good repair.

Tidy concrete walkways connect two major living areas — one for men, one for women, a greenhouse, administration building, gymnasium and small outdoor swimming pool.

The prison has a 69-member staff and watchful unarmed guards patrol constantly, unmistakable symbols of authority in their brown uniforms. There are high steel fences and a centralized security control building with a 24-hour guard who monitors the comings and goings of everyone on the grounds.

A prison by any other name is still a prison.

But Larry Griffin, a 30-year-old transfer inmate from KSP, says the switch from the nearby institution to the women's facility has been like a miracle for him.

"The food is better, the general atmosphere is great, and the privacy has been wonderful," says Griffin, who now has a private room after sharing a four-man cellblock at KSP.

Griffin is one of the inmates enrolled in the flower-arranging course. The class spends seven hours a day, five days a week learning the florist business, making arrangements for sale in Leavenworth and Kansas City flower shops, and preparing for a possible profession once they leave prison.

Gilbert Mason, a 29-year-old prisoner convicted of kidnapping and robbery, also is in the class. He says the transfer to KSWCI "has made me optimistic about life again. They treat you like human beings here, even the guards. They respect your privacy."

Ahmad Abdul Hasan, 40, convicted of robbery, says coming to KSWCI "totally reshaped my personality. I haven't acted like a fool since I've been here."

Scientists Hope To Salvage Energy Conversion Studies

HONOLULU (AP) — The Reagan administration has scuttled a key element in a project to convert the difference in ocean temperatures into electricity, but scientists say they will continue the program in hopes of easing Hawaii's heavy dependence on oil.

"We are looking at ways to salvage as much of the OTEC program as possible," says Dr. John W. Shupe, energy research coordinator at the University of Hawaii.

OTEC stands for "ocean thermal energy conversion," a process of generating electricity by using the temperature difference between warm surface water and cold water from the ocean depths. It is one of several alternate energy projects being developed in Hawaii, which depends almost entirely on imported oil for fuel for production of electricity.

For the past three months, the program had centered around OTEC-1, a 500-foot-long, converted tanker being used for full-scale testing of equipment off Hawaii Island's Keahole Point.

But despite reports that experiments had been successful, the Reagan administration eliminated federal funds for the project.

"I am disappointed that the opportunity that is 'here is not being grasped by the federal leadership,' says Hideto Kono, the state's planning and economic development director.

"We all agree there is a need for cutbacks in spending, but we must be selective. The government must look at this as an investment rather than an expense," he says.

C. Dudley Pratt, president of Hawaiian Electric Co., agrees.

"OTEC is not a government handout," he argues.

He contends the pilot program would have technical and economic benefits that would lead to private investment without federal assistance.

Pratt says the utility plans to buy electricity from any OTEC plants.

Hawaiian Electric, the only electric utility serving the main island of Oahu, now uses fuel oil to generate 97 percent of the electrical power needed on Oahu. The island consumes 82 percent of the state's electricity.

Natural energy experts have estimated that OTEC plants could provide as much as 660 megawatts to Oahu. That would be 70 percent of the island's peak electric consumption last year,. the utility says.

Special-Interest PACs Take Over 'Fat Cats' Clout

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The political clout once enjoyed by wealthy "fat cat" contributors in smoke-filled rooms now is being wielded in board rooms, club houses and union halls around the nation.

The reform laws enacted after the Watergate scandal to cure campaign spending abuses have created what critics such as Common Cause call a new and dangerous political monster — the political action committee, or "PAC."

The millions of dollars individual contributors used to give to candidates — sometimes in return for ambassadorships or a favorable antitrust decision — were outlawed. Individual contributions were limited to $1,000.

But at the same time a new political animal was created, allowing the unions, big business, trade associations, and ideological groups like the National Rifle Association and anti-abortion groups to get into the action in a major way.

Numbering more than 2,500, PACs raised and spent more than $130 million in the 1980 election. The Federal Election Commission has not yet compiled final spending figures from last fall's election, but it is widely believed that for the first time PACs gave more to congressional candidates than individual contributors.

PACs were also active in the presidential race, giving nearly $2 million to candidates in the primaries. But their prime focus in 1980 was congressional races, in part because the general election presidential campaign was entirely financed with federal funds.

The Republican and Democratic National Committees have PACs. Ronald Reagan used one to keep his political activities going between the 1976 and 1980 elections. Sen. Edward Kennedy and former Vice President Walter Mondale recently organized PACs, some say in anticipation of 1984 presidential bids.

But there is a major difference between the new PACs and the old fat cats. Contributions by PACs are legal and are all reported on the public record. The fat cats did not have to report their contributions, which were legal except when they used corporate funds.

PAC money does not come from corporate funds or union dues, but from contributions by individual members to the corporate or union PACs, which give the money — up to $5,000 — to candidates.

And while $5,000 from any one PAC may not seem like much, 20 or 30 different PACs can all give their money to one candidate.

Common Cause and other reform groups have been highly critical of PACs, charging that these contributions are a subtle form of buying influence in Congress. Defenders maintain PACs are just a constitutional exercise of free speech.

—Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, now chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, received contributions to his 1978 campaign from PACs of Grumman Corp., General Dynamics, Hughes Aircraft, Lockheed Aircraft, McDonnell Douglas, Northrop, Rockwell International and United Technologies — all major defense contractors.

—Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, got contributions from the American Bankers Association, Chase Manhattan, Citicorp, First America Bank, and Household Finance.

These examples were picked at random. A pattern of similar contributions can be found in almost all the other House and Senate committee chairmen and ranking minority members. And to a lesser extent, members of these committees get contributions from the interests they legislate.

The exceptions, of course, are people like ultra-conservative Sen. Orin Hatch, R-Utah, the new chairman of the Labor Committee, who got very little support from unions, but did get money from PACs supporting anti-labor interests, such as the right to work movement.

In Senate races, PAC contributions generally make up a small percentage of the candidate's war chest — because so much is needed to run in a statewide race. But increasingly in House contests the PAC contribution runs well over 50 percent.

Common Cause is outspoken in its criticism of PACs, which it wants abolished in favor of public financing of congressional elections.

"Our representative government is rapidly becoming a government of the PACs, by the PACs and for the PACs," said David Cohen, president of Common Cause. He says PAC contributions to members of Congress buys access and enables special interest groups to influence legislation.

"The power they gain fuels inflation, squeezes subsidies out of tight budgets, and continues a tax system based on narrow favors rather than equities," he said.

"This destructive system cripples political parties, undermines political leadership, weakens political competition and fosters a politics of favoritism and selfishness. It's a system that benefits special interest and buries solutions to our most pressing public problems — inflation, energy and health care."

A lot of the controversy surrounding PACs has arisen simply because they have changed the way America does its political business.

Before Watergate, labor unions were politically active, but business and trade associations did not give money to political campaigns. Then the election reform act resulted in the creation of PACs, opening the door for business to compete with labor in the contribution business.

By the end of 1974 there were less than 600 PACs. Labor still dominated. But by 1980 there were more than 2,500 PACs, 1,250 of them tied to corporations, 635 more tied to trade associations and health groups, 439 to non-connected organizations, including the one issue groups like the gun owners. And there were only 332 connected with labor.

Of the $140 million raised by PACs, labor accounted for only $27 million in a field it once had almost to itself.

The result was that labor's once major contribution to liberal candidates was overwhelmed by the millions that business, trade associations and ideological groups were pouring into Republican, often conservative campaigns.

But most of all, the PAC phenomena was a question of Republicans and big business learning to play the game that the unions and liberals had used for years.

After the defeat of six liberal senators in the 1980 elections, ultra-conservative PACs like the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress, Gun Owners of America and the political wings of the Moral Majority and the anti-abortion movement said it was their money that did the job.

"PACs really ought to be called 'Purchase the American Congress' because that's what they're going to be doing in a few years," says Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., who for several years has sponsored legislation to curb the power of these committees.

"It is critical to the integrity of the democratic process that a limit be put on the amount of PAC contributions," he said. "While not corrupting either the recipient or the giver, they produce an awful smell."

Obey estimates that when the final figures are in, total PAC spending in the 1980 congressional elections will be between $60 million and $65 million — up from $35.6 million just two years before in 1978.

Obey uses himself as an example of how PACs operate. He said that although he has been a sponsor of every major education money bill in recent years, the National Education Association cut its contribution to his campaign by 75 percent when he voted against its pet project, creation of a Department of Education.

"I don't think people ... contribute to me because I'm such a hot statesman," says Obey. "He wants to know what I'm going to do for the widget industry or the widget workers. Do you really think when a congressman sees that lobbyist in his office he doesn't see the gleam of PAC dollars in his eyes?"

On the other side of the PAC fight in Congress is Rep. William Frenzel, R-Minn., who said it has been a positive force in politics because it has been employed heaviest by the political parties in rebuilding their strength.

One of the biggest PACs, for instance, is the GOP-backed House Republican Campaign Committee, which has 500,000 individual contributors who gave an average of $20 each last year.

In addition, he said it gets more people involved in the political process.

"Every group in the world now has a PAC and that takes the sting out of the charges that certain groups are running the country," Frenzel said.

HANDLE THE HASSLES — For seven cents a day, $35 annually, Humiliation Elimination Inc., owned by Lincoln Bouve (right) and his partner Jacqueline Polland, will take care of the hassles of having your car towed. A simple phone call brings a limousine to the stranded driver while runners take care of the paper work necessary to get the car back. (UPI Photo)

Capital Firm Offers Painless Service To Towed-Car Victims

By ELAINE S. POVICH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If there's one thing worse than returning to your (illegal) parking spot and finding your car has been towed away, it's having to spend hours getting it back.

Now there's "Humiliation Elimination Inc." to ease the pain, slice the red tape and soothe a frazzled carless driver — all for a $35 yearly fee.

"Humiliation Elimination" was spawned by free-lance writer Lincoln Bouve while standing in line — for the fourth time in 19 months — waiting to begin wading through regulations and triplicate forms to get his car back from the District of Columbia Department of Transportation.

"At one point I just blurted out 'humiliation elimination.' The first few people I bounced it off of thought I was crazy," Bouve said.

Humiliation Elimination Inc. works like this:

The towing victim calls HEI immediately upon losing his car, giving the service his HEI card number and a credit card number. HEI contacts the city Department of Transportation to determine where the car has been taken and how many tickets it has accumulated. A runner goes to DOT headquarters to begin the paperwork. A limousine arrives to rescue the stranded driver.

Jacqueline Polland, Bouve's partner in HEI, said two or three Washington restaurants have agreed to provide a complimentary drink as part of the plan.

When the paperwork has been processed, the limo takes the victim to one of the outlying impoundment lots to pick up the car. The car owner must pick up the car in person and must pay the fines, including the $50 towing charge. Humiliation Elimination can't do that.

"Assuming you say 'I took my shot, I parked illegally, I was fined.' Fifty dollars is enough himiliation," Bouve said. "You become a serf for a period of a few hours. We are offering alternatives. We are giving you, for seven cents a day, a chance to cover your posterior. Would that this was possible in other ways of our life."

Bouve said that a few weeks after the service started it had signed up 600 members. He said it could make a profit with about 2,500 members.

Few cities could provide a better towing ground for Bouve's service. The District of Columbia recently was cited by the U.S. Department of Transportation as having the best parking enforcement program in the country.

Bouve says each day more than 100 cars are hoisted aboard the city's tow trucks and hauled away. He says the average waiting time from the point of the tow to retrieval of the vehicle is three hours and four minutes. His service, by knowing the process and filing several claims at once, can get the time down to less than an hour.

First IRS Audit Brings Anger, Fear

By CY RYAN

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — My first reaction to the letter from the Internal Revenue Service was anger and fear.

After paying income taxes for 30 years, I was finally going to be audited. For years, Linda, my wife and family bookkeeper, had warned me the sloppy expense records I occasionally keep would get us both in trouble.

I had heard numerous stories from friends who complained about being harassed by hard-nosed IRS examiners.

In 1979, IRS audited 2.2 million individuals and businesses nationally and about 75 percent of them had to cough up more money for Uncle Sam. Five percent got an extra dividend. The remaining 20 percent came out even.

Armed with a shopping bag full of receipts and records, we headed for the IRS office in Reno.

At 20 seconds past the appointment time, tax examiner Mae Wheeler appeared and escorted us to a cubicle. She was firm but polite.

Linda rummaged through the records trying to justify business lunches, medical expenses and other deductions. Mrs. Wheeler kept her adding machine busy as she was shown each check or voucher.

After a few minutes, our records were strewn across the desk and on the floor as we searched for certain files. A bemused Mrs. Wheeler looked up and said, "This must be your first audit." We agreed.

At one point she told us we had inserted the wrong figure in the wrong place on the income tax return. But her stern attitude softened during the examination as she tried to help us.

The audit focused first on my wife. Although it took several minutes on occasion to find a record, I knew I would be in hot water when my turn came.

Mrs. Wheeler stressed several times the importance of keeping records to back up expenses and expenditures. The end result of the examination on my wife's records was she could not back up a $7 lunch expense.

Mrs. Wheeler said however since this was the first audit, IRS could allow the deduction. If we were examined a second time, the agency would not be so lenient. I was starting to sweat.

Then a mystery developed. The IRS wanted to know about a $600 payment made by a company to a Linda Ryan, who had my social security number, but lived in Minnesota. We had never been in Minnesota and were at a loss to explain how that could have gotten on our tax record.

Mrs. Wheeler said she would check further. She then looked up and said she had no further questions of either my wife or me. I slumped in my chair relieved. We had fought the IRS to a draw in the 57-minute examination.

The IRS is said to be one of the most hated federal agencies in Nevada. But if my experience is any judge, I can say the treatment was fair.

On parting, Mrs. Wheeler said, "We try not to be too hard on the persons making efforts to pay taxes and keep records."

Jenkins To Keynote Medical School Convocation

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, chancellor emeritus of East Carolina University, will be the keynote speaker at the ECU School of Medicine convocation honoring the university's first graduating class of physicians.

The private ceremony, scheduled for Thursday, May 7, will also feature remarks by ECU Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer, medical school Dean William E. Laupus, Judge Horton Rountree, Associate Dean Edwin W. Monroe and former medical school Deans Wallace R. Wooles and Harold C. Wiggers.

Jenkins, who as chancellor led the drive for a medical school during the 1960s and early 1970s, was assisted in his efforts by Monroe, who directed the development of ECU's allied health and medical programs and initiated the Eastern Area Health Education Center for the region.

The General Assembly first authorized a medical education program at East Carolina in 1965. Wooles served as dean of the university's one-year medical school that between 1972 and 1974 prepared 60 students for transfer to the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, where they received their medical degrees.

In 1975 the legislators, including Rountree who served in the House, voted to appropriate funds for the development of a four-year medical school at ECU. Wiggers, the dean of Albany Medical College, became acting dean at ECU and assumed responsibility for the development of the expanded program and the selection of a dean for the four-year school.

Laupus, then chairman of the pediatrics department at the Medical College of Virginia, was selected in 1975 to fill the position for ECU's degree-granting medical school.

The charter class of 28 students, all of whom are from North Carolina, began their studies in August 1977, just four months after the medical school received provisional accreditation from the Liaison Committee on Medical Education. The accrediting agency awarded the program full accreditation last month.

After receiving their medical degrees, ECU's first physicians will begin residency training at 16 medical centers throughout the country. Five of the students will remain in Greenville to receive postgraduate training in family medicine and surgery at ECU and Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Nearly half the class selected family medicine as a specialty.

The medical school's convocation will begin at 3:30 p.m. in Hendrix Theatre on the ECU campus.

Following is a list of graduating medical students, their specialities, where they will do their residency training, their parents' names and addresses, and their spouses:

DREAM COME TRUE . . . For Snow Hill's Brant Mewborn, right, it was a dream come true when he received an assignment to do an interview with Ringo Starr in Beverly Hills a couple of months ago. This was the first interview granted by the ex-Beatle musician since the death of John Lennon. Mewborn's talk with Starr is featured as the cover story in the April 30 issue of "Rolling Stones." Commenting on the assignment, Mewborn said "the interview was a dream come true for me, since the Beatles have been my idols since I was 12 years old." In addition to writing personality stories for several national magazines, Mewborn has also been performing in New York clubs with a fellow journalist, Michael Musto, in a pop-soul group, The Must. John Pertalion Receives A Youthgrant

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

John Pertalion, a senior at Rose High School, has achieved a "first" for the school. He has been awarded a grant from the Youthgrants division of the Humanities Program of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

JOHN PERTALION . . . a senior at J. H. Rose High School, is the recipient of a Youthgrant grant of the National Endowment for the Humanities. He will live on the Outer Banks for a three-month period beginning in September and will carry out research in dialects of residents there. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

For a period of a little more than three months beginning in September 1981, John will be living in various localities on the Outer Banks, engaged in research.

"I'll be studying dialects of the Outer Banks," John explained. "In my research I'll be looking into different accents in each of the islands and areas. To some extent, I will also study customs and traditions of the Outer Islanders.

"Some of the things I'll be seeking to establish are ways today's Outer Banks dialects relate to Elizabethan language, and also how the dialects have been affected in recent years by the infiltration of people moving in from the outside."

At the completion of time spent in research, John says the next step will be "to prepare a slide presentation and master tapes. I think I'll probably focus part of the program on a family, on on indidivual, or a group such as the fishing crew of a vessel."

At this time, John said he still had to formulate a specific approach, but he has the basic plan worked out "in the proposal I submitted when I applied for the grant. My supervisor on this project has been Marie O'Callaghan, an English teacher, who's been helpful in the research and independent study I've done to date."

Sometime in early 1982, when the project is completed, John expects to give presentations of his findings locally. "I'll also be sending a copy of the slides and tapes to the Humanities people," he said.

John was one of the 90 young people from a field of 490 who were granted Youthgrants for humanities programs. "They are giving me a stipend to help take care of living expenses and are furnishing most of the supplies, such as film, that I will need," he explained.

John is the son of Pat Pertalion, a faculty member of the ECU Dance Theater of the Department of Speech and Drama.

Grads Nites Scheduled

DOSWELL, VA. — The Outlaws and The Spinners will headline Kings Dominion's 1981 Grad Nites program on two Fridays, May 8 and 15. The programs will be from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. for school groups only with advance reservations. For more information, interested people are to call (804) 876-5561.

The Ashburton-Webster Treaty was signed in 1842 at Washington to settle outstanding differences between Canada and the United States. The treaty was negotiated by Lord Ashburton and Daniel Webster and resolved, among other things, disputes on boundaries between the two neighbors. Although not popular in Canada, the United States or Britain, the treaty nonetheless served as an effective compromise.

NCSA To Give Play

WINSTON-SALEM — A production of Tom Stoppards' "Rosencrantz & Guildenstern Are Dead" will be presented at the North Carolina School of the Arts, opening on Friday, May 8, to continue through Saturday, May 16, with performances nightly at 8:15 p.m.

The play was first produced in London in 1966, and deals with existential questions of human identify and purpose in the modern world.

Rae Allen is directing this production. Ms. Allen, whose theatrical career began in 1948, has appeared in five episodes of the television program, "Soap," and was winner of a Tony Award in 1971 for her supporting role in "And Miss Reardon Drinks A Little."

Two NCSA juniors play the roles of the title characters — Hal Cline as Rosencrantz, and Marc Silvia as Guildenstern. Lance Lewman and Molly McVay portray Hamlet and Ophelia, respectively, and Howard Mungo and Roxanne Aalam play Claudius and Gertrude.

The play will be staged in the Agnes deMille Theater. Tickets are $5, $3 for senior citizens and students. Reservations can be made by calling the N.C. School of the Arts box office at 784-7843.

The first atomic bomb was dropped Aug. 6, 1945, by the United States on Hiroshima. When Japan refused President Truman's demand that it surrender, a second bomb was dropped two days later on the city of Nagasaki. This time Japan conceded defeat.

The Battle of Britain began Aug. 8, 1940, with the German Luftwaffe making a huge effort to smash Britain's defenses and to render the country vulnerable for an invasion. Although heavily outnumbered, the Royal Air Force mounted a defense that downed 1,733 German raiders by the end of October. This brought an end to Germany's daylight raids.

East Mall Arts, Crafts Show

A Mother's Day Show and Sale of arts and crafts will be held at Carolina East Mall on three days, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 7-9.

From 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. on these days, artists and craftsmen will display work that will include paintings and watercolors; sculpture in glass and wood, wood-carving; pottery, jewelry, textiles and other arts and crafts.

Among craftsmen whose work is being featured are Ronnie Huges of western North Carolina, whose specialty is plants and flowers native to North Carolina created in glass, and woodwork and small furniture by Mike Mena.

Many of the exhibitors also will demonstrate techniques they use in their crafts.

The public is invited to attend this show and to browse among the stalls of crafts.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MARGARET CLARK

Well-written novels filled with suspense, romance and high drama make for some very exciting summer reading.

"The Officers' Wives," by Thomas Fleming, is a global drama involving three women wed on a June day to men of the class of 1950 at West Point. Even as the new second lieutenants and their wives drink champagne, tanks and artillery are being positioned on an Asian peninsula named Korea. War explodes before their honeymoons are over.

As officers' wives, the women become extensions of their husbands, responsible to the corps and its women's clubs, required to give allegiance to "duty, honor and country." While their husbands become successful, the wives become "walking wounded," coping with breakdowns, rape, suicide, adultery and death.

Fleming spans decades and continents, interweaving his characters' lives from Korea to Vietnam, from Pentagon to post. Dishing up moral issues along with military soap opera, his novel is a sure winner.

Another winner is Doris Grumback's "The Missing Person." It is a series of interlocking stories that together document the travails of Franny Fuller, a Hollywood movie queen of the 1930s, and her effect on those with whom she becomes involved.

The author seems to have the tragic life of Marilyn Monroe in mind (Franny's husbands include a football player and a noted poet), but her book does far more than cover familiar territory. Various points of views are presented concerning Franny's character by her husbands, her stand-in and a gossip columnist. At the same time, these characters emerge as complex personalities in their own right. The result is a story that is astonishingly moving and utterly persuasive.

An intriguing and suspenseful tale that weighs guilt, justice and the law is "The Last Innocent Man," by Philip Margolin. When lawyer David Nash, guilt-ridden over his successful defense of a murderer, eagerly accepts the case of Larry Stafford, he's sure that his client is innocent of a policewoman's murder. But as Nash falls in love with his client's wife, he begins to suspect both her honesty and Stafford's innocence, especially when the police produce a surprise witness.

"The Last Innocent Man" is a deviously clever mystery thriller and also an authentic work of relentless courtroom drama. Many of the tightly wound emotions and experiences have been encountered by author and lawyer Philip Margolin in his practice of criminal law.

Adjudicator Named

Karen Hause of Greenville, district chairman for the National Guild of Piano Teachers, has announced that Anne H. Edwards of Portsmouth, Va., has been named adjudicator of this year's auditions.

Anne H. Edwards

Area teachers with students to be participating are Susan Merritt, Carlene Ragan, Frances Cain, Jane Rose, Alisa Weatherington, Annemarie Lalik, Lynn Cox, Charles Bath and Karen Hause.

Ms. Edwards received a degree in music from Sweet Briar College and continued her studies with the late Arthur Hice and with Mary Landon Russell. She is a veteran of 35 years of teaching piano, class piano and music appreciation on the college level, and now maintains her private studio in Portsmouth.

She is vice president and program chairman of the Tidewater Music Teachers Forum, on the program committee of the Norfolk Society of Arts, and has served for many years as an adjudicator in Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Virginia and North Carolina.

Seven Artists Exhibiting In Thesis Show At Gray Gallery

A RUGGED PORTRAIT . . . of two outdoor types of America's past, a cowboy and an Indian brave, depicted in Jeffrey Mages large painting, "Metaphor," are viewed by ECU student Ross Rhudy. Mages is one of seven artists whose graduate thesis work is currently being exhibited at Gray Gallery — through May 10.

It will undoubtedly raise a few hackles to say that more than any exhibition I can recall seeing in a long time, the "Lucky Seven" thesis show now on view at Gray Gallery very clearly defines the "feminine" and the "masculine" elements in conception and execution of art by male and female artists.

That this is so does not in the least disturb me. On the contrary, I find it refreshing and reassuring that in 1981 seven talented young artists, three women and four men, are doing what comes naturally without sideline homage to ERA, male chauvisim or any other contemporary ism or image.

Charlotte Purrington, already well known for her magnificant textile art creations, reveals in the pieces she has chosen for this thesis show the magic that can be achieved in art on cloth. She has an instinctive eye for color and texture. Her larger pieces are vibrant landscape gardens of brilliant flowers, bold and daring in conception.

Smaller pieces, such as the Icon shown on this page, are meticulously crafted and detailed, and convey an aura of ordered magic and beauty that is today's equivalent to the small scale glory of Persian and Indian miniatures.

Ms. Purrington's textile art has won for her awards in numerous regional and national exhibitions, including the best-of-show for two years at the Marion (S.C.) Art Center Summer Festival; as a finalist in the Good Housekeeping National Quilt Contest; and an invitation to show in the Paul Sargent Art Gallery's "Wearable Art — A National Experience." Her work has also been included in a slide collection of Surface Design for 1979.

Another of the three female artists, Laura Eugenia Jackson, also concentrates on textile art. In this exhibition, Ms. Jackson shows a series of octagonal shaped mixed media and quilted pieces. She employs bands of cupid like hands as the major motif in several of the individual pieces, contrasting these against other pieces that are predominately single colored quilted octagonals.

Like Ms. Purrington, Ms. Jackson has garnered a number of awards in the past for her work, in textiles and in other media. She received second place in design from the 1981 "Rebel" Art Show, had work in the E.C.U. Graduate Traveling Show, and was a participant in a portfolio, "Multitudes of Emptiness" commissioned by the Orange Presbytery.

Judith March, the third in the trio of female artists, is showing more than a dozen pieces of exquisite porcelains. Utilizing basically simple designs, the slightly bluish-white tint which each piece has in common are enriched by designs of dark blues, browns, and the merest touches of black. These are elegant pieces, sophisticated and yet with a fundamental simplicity that make them suitable equally for individual decorative items, as accessories that can fit well into a variety of decors, or as part of a collection of fine porcelains.

Ms. March has exhibited in leading crafts and ceramics shows such as the Baltimore Crafts Expo; the Pennsylvania Guild Craft Fair; the 29th Annual North Carolina Artists Exhibition; the Richmond Craft Fair; and the Carolina Designer Craftsman Fair.

With the exception of the larger textile pieces by Charlotte Purrington, the works being shown by the three female artists are oriented to smaller sizes and delicacy of patterning and details.

In contrast, the works shown by the four male artists are by any count, large, masculine, assertive. In addition to the clay works and cotton sculptures being shown by John Barkand (covered in last week's paper), the three men whose work is on view in the thesis show are Robert Earl Daniel, Jeffrey Mages and Jan Jackson Welborn.

Mages, like Barkand, astonishes with the scope of what he has creted for this show. Working in canvas and cloth, he has fashioned larger-than-life people and animals. Two large scale canvases feature robust nudes, shaped and projecting from the canvas in a bas relief technique. One features a male and a female nude, posed in a classical stance, surrounded by wedding attire in the traditional doll clothes cut-out manner. Another, in misty hues of purples, harks back to classical statuary groupings with a back view of a cluster of females.

Daniel's canvases too are large scale. Of all the artists in this show, his is the only work that is in an abstracted mode. His subjects, for the most part, are suggestive of landscapes, of trees and entwined foliage. A couple of his works are full of brilliant, tropical like colors — others are in more subdued colors.

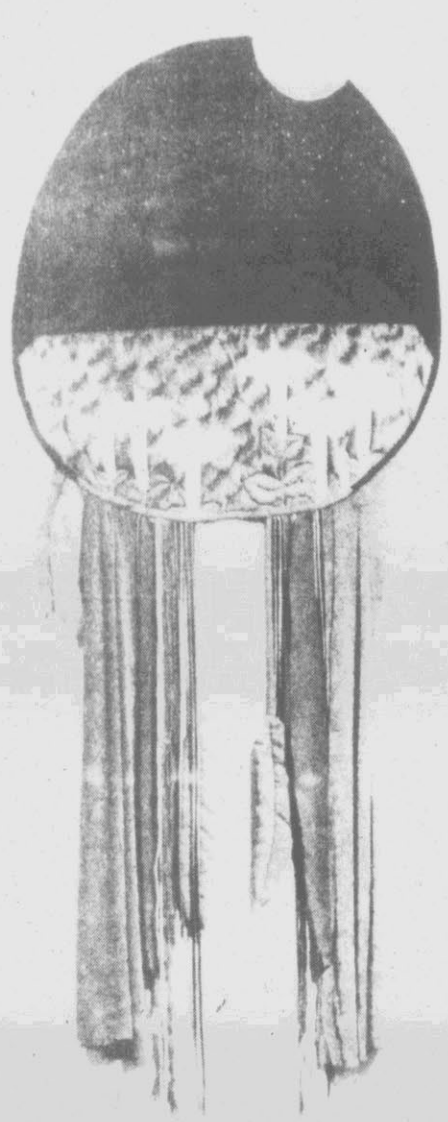

Daniel has to his credit a number of painting and drawing awards — first place in the 1981 "Illumina Competition;" a first place in the 26th Annual Sidewalk Art Show of the Greenville Musuem of Art; a purchase award from the Rocky Mount Arts Center Show; and first places for painting and ceramics in Rebel Art Shows."

Painter Jan Welborn, the seventh of the artists, is an artists whose work has been seen in a number of local and regional shows during the years he was an undergraduate student at ECU.

For his part of this thesis show, Welborn exhibits several large paintings, on conventional and on shaped canvases. Clearly defined color in the hard-edge tradition is the approach Welborn has chosen for his thesis. There is an atmosphere of serenity achieved in the carefully controlled color fields accented by smaller bands and triangles of color.

Welborn, currently an instructor of painting and drawing at the College of Charleston, S.C., was also Assistant to the Visual Arts Coordinator for the Spoleto U.S.A. International Arts Festival in Charleston in 1978, 79 and 80. He is the recipient of several painting awards, including a First Union Bank Purchase Award.

Stamps In The News

By SID KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

A new 12-cent regular postage stamp has been issued in the Americana Series dedicated to "Freedom of Conscience." The 12-cent denomination meets the new rate for domestic post cards.

Featured on the stamp is the famous torch in the upraised arm of the Statue of Liberty. Across the bottom of the design and continuing up the right side is the inscription "Freedom of Conscience — an American Right." At the lower left, above the word "Freedom" is "USA 12 cents."

This stamp is the fourth in the Americana Series to highlight the freedoms guaranteed in the Bill of Rights. Previous stamps in the series were based on freedom of the press, the right of people peaceably to assemble, and the right of people to petition the government for redress of grievances.

Here's how to order first-day cancellations direct from the U.S. Postal Service:

You can purchase the stamp at your local post office and affix it to our own envelope. But remember to add another 6-cent stamp to meet the first-class mailing rate. Peelable return labels are recommended, placed on the right edge near the bottom. Send to "Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Postmaster, Dallas, Texas 75260." No remittance is required and the postmark deadline has been extended to May 23.

Women Artists In Virginia Show

DANVILLE, VA. — Seven women artists from Greenville are having an exhibition of their work at the Danville Museum of Fine Arts and History. A reception to honor the artists was to be held from 2 to 5 p.m. today.

The seven whose work is being exhibited under the title "A Group of Women Artists" are: Sara Edmiston, batik and enameling; Penelope Laing, fiber; Myra Sexauer, weaving; Betsy Markowski, metal works; Dorothy Satterfield, weaving; Ann Riggs, pottery; and Janet Fisher, jewelry.

NCMA Events Today

RALEIGH — Public events scheduled at the N.C. Museum of Art today include a 2:15 p.m. gallery talk, "Paintings to Celebrate May," by docent Marilyn Stevens. Among works to be discussed is "Peasants at a Roadside Inn" by Pieter Brueghel the Younger.

At 3 p.m. a piano recital by Richard Reid will be given in the first-floor Kress Galleries. Winner of several prizes, including the International Piano Recording Competition, Reid is currently visiting artist at Sandhills Community College, Southern Pines.

Both events are without charge and the public is invited to attend. The museum is located at 107 E. Morgan St.

Oriental Art At Museum May 6

A special exhibition and sale of original Oriental art will be presented at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans St., between 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. on Wednesday, May 6.

Marson Ltd. of Baltimore is the agency presenting the exhibition. The firm specializes in exhibiting, for sale, a collection of original Oriental art totaling approximately 800 pieces from Japan, China, India, Tibet and Thailand. The oldest prints date back to the 18th and 19th centuries and include Japanese woodcuts by masters such as Hiroshige, Kuniyoshi and Kunisada, and Indian miniature paintings and manuscripts.

Modern pieces consist of a large group of original work by contemporary artists such as Saito, Azechi, Mori, Katsuda and Maki, as well as a varied selection of contemporary Chinese works.

The prints, in a wide price range, are being shown in open portfolios. A representative will be present to answer questions about the art, the artists and the techniques employed.

Proceeds realized from works sold will go to the operating fund of the museum.

The westernmost of Indonesia's 3,000 habitable islands, Sumatra is about the size of California. Its natural phenomena include 29 volcanoes — 13 of them active — as well as a 1,000-mile-long tidal swamp and mountain range.

Win Grants

ECU News Bureau

Tony Arnett of Fairmont and Brooklyn, N.Y., and Audrey Robinson of Harrells, sophomore students in the East Carolina University Department of Sociology and Anthropology, have been awarded $450 grants, plus travel expenses, to work on a research project involving North Carolina's fishing.

The students, both sociology majors, are supervised by Dr. John Maiolo, chairman of the ECU sociology department. The project is designed not only to collect maritime social science data but also to develop research skills in minority students.

Arnett and Ms. Robinson will work with Maiolo on two projects previously funded: a study of scallop fishermen and processors and a study of shrimp fishermen and dealers.

Tony Arnett is the son of O'Neal and Eddie McGill of Brooklyn, N.Y. and the grandson of C.B. and Alaine Arnett of Fairmont. He is a graduate of Fairmont High School.

Actor Al Freeman Finds Starring Role In 'Soaps,' Theater

By GAIL COLLINS

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's been a rotton year for Ed Hall, what with having to resign as lieutenant governor and having his best friend murdered by a poison ring.

"Oh my, yes, he's had an AWFUL time," says Al Freeman Jr.

Freeman, who has been playing Ed Hall on ABC-TV's "One Life to Live" for a decade, has been having rather a better time of things off-screen.

His performance in an all-black production of Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into the Night" has won raves from the critics, who compared his "dynamic" interpretation favorably to that of Jason Robards in the same role. The New York Times bemoaned the fact that Freeman is not seen more frequently on the stage.

"He makes Eugene O'Neill look good," says one of the soap opera's crew proudly.

The actors who spend their days fighting adultery, amnesia and murder trials on the New York-based soap operas dream of the day such reviews will come to them and allow them to leave behind Landview, U.S.A., for the stage and cinema.

Freeman, however, has been getting the reviews and roles for years. One of the country's most prominent black actors, he portrayed Malcolm X in the "Roots" saga, and was nominated for an Emmy for his work in "My Sweet Charlie."

But every day, in the ABC studios on the upper West Side, he is back being good old Ed Hall, fighter against crime and corruption in Landview, Pa., the only suburb in America that boasts its own television station and major metropolitan newspaper.

AL FREEMAN, Jr. (right) is seen here with Michael Storm of "One Life to Live". Freeman, one of the country's most prominent black actors, says "The soap has allowed me to stay in New York, which is where the whole theater thing is." — (UPI Photo)

Ed Hall has financed Freeman's stage career — not enough, in itself, to support an actor whose apartment near Central Park is about to go co-op.

"The soap has allowed me to stay in New York, which is where the whole theater thing is. Every now and then a 'Long Day's Journey' comes along. It would certainly not have happened if I hadn't had the financial cushion of the soap. Couldn't do it."

Freeman, who won an Emmy in 1979 for outstanding actor in a daytime drama series, sits bleary-eyed in a studio near Lincoln Center where the soap opera is shot every week day, his voice a little hoarse from a night of heavy-duty emoting as O'Neill's Jamie Tyrone.

"The schedule is KILLING," he says. If "Long Day's Journey" does indeed move to Broadway, he mused, "We'll have a mobile intensive care unit right outside the door."

The soap studio appears to be nothing but a long line of living rooms — Larry's living room, Asa's living room, Dorian's living room. Ed Hall does not have a living room these days, or even an office.

Freeman's character, who he refers to affectionately as "my man," has been having something of an identity crisis in recent months. He seems to spend most of his time wandering into other people's living rooms to deliver messages that further complicate the plot.

"He doesn't seem to be the person he was," Freeman says unhappily.

Ed Hall was a policeman when Freeman created the part in 1971. Ed Hall, Freeman decided, was going to be "a listener — that's the kind of cop my man was. He tried to make sure everybody got a fair shake."

His character is repressed and calm, a rare commodity in a town where the entire population seems to be teetering on hysteria.

"I like him because he underplays," says Rita Gleason, a Cincinnati housewife and soap fan. "Some days he seems to be the only one who isn't crying."

When Freeman joined "One Life to Live," the soap opera had already become one of the first to develop ongoing black characters. Ed Hall recently appeared to be about to embark on an interracial romance with the program's heroine, Karen, "but that seems to have cooled off," Freeman said.

"Every now and then the writers get a little worried the males don't have any sex life," he said wryly. "They put you out on a date every now and then. Otherwise Landview would start to talk."

Ed Hall was elected lieutenant governor last fall — the entire gubernatorial ticket apparently came from the suburb of Landview — but resigned when he discovered "dirty money" behind the campaign.

Now the writers have made Freeman's "man" a private detective. "I'd like to know how I conduct this private investigating business," he said. "They haven't dealt with it yet — they're really concerned about another story line. You have to sort of vamp around on one foot till it's your turn."

Freeman still gets letters from fans, addressed to "Ed Hall, Chief of Police." One regular from Canada has just informed him who killed Vinnie the cop with the poison ring. As a postscript, the correspondent admonishes: "Don't let the murderer know my address."

"She's been around for years," Freeman says of the Canadian. "Someone in San Diego wrote me the same kind of letter and wound up by saying. 'Why don't you get a television set so you'll know what's going on?'"

The networks, Freeman feels, make little use of soap actors' popularity with the public.

"There are about 150 soap opera actors on contract to ABC," he noted, "a lot of them really terrific actors.

Freeman is proud of his portrayals of black radicals and civil rights leaders, including Bobby Seale, Malcolm X, Paul Robeson and — soon — Web DuBois. "A play should shoot bullets," he said. "It's a forum for ideas."

"One Life to Live," he laughs, "well, we know what it is — it isn't a play shooting bullets."

HOME IS WHERE THE OFFICE IS . . . Bill Noblitt types his columns in an office in his home where his wife, Rachel, also produces copies for mailing to member newspapers.

WITH HOUSE SPEAKER . . . Raleigh columnist Bill Noblitt has no difficulty gaining audience with the powerhouses of state politics. Here he interviews speaker of the N.C. House of Representatives Liston B. Ramsey.

He Doesn't Follow The Herd

Bill Noblitt : Your Extra Representative In Raleigh

"He's consistently the best interpretive reporter on state government . . ."
— Gov. Jim Hunt

GOVERNOR MAKES A POINT . . . Gov. Jim Hunt pauses to discuss state governmewnt with Noblitt on the State Capitol steps. He calls Noblitt the "best in-depth reporter" on Capitol Hill.

Subscribers of 37 newspapers across North Carolina have an extra representative in the state's capital.

He is unaffected by special interest groups, and immume to bloc-vote pressures. He answers only to his conscience and his assignemnt: To be the best in-depth reporter covering state government.

His name is Bill Noblitt. His daily column is circulated to the widest combined newspaper audience in North Carolina — more than three-quarters of a million subscribers.

Among those are readers of The Daily Reflector.

The Daily Reflector and 36 other publications constitute the N. C. Association of Afternoon Newspapers. Few of them could afford to assign a reporter full time to state government.

But they decided years ago they collectively could afford the very best. Many of the publishers and editors feel that Bill Noblitt epitomizes that standard of excellence.

They aren't alone.

"Bill Noblitt is consistently the best interpretive reporter on state government. I read his column every day and many times find out first from it things that I haven't yet heard from my own people . . ."

Gov. Jim Hunt made that obsrvation recently to the editor of an afternoon newspaper.

It wasn't a compliment to replay Noblitt for some favorble comment in recent columns.

In the days before the governor's observation, Bill Noblitt had written columns which Jim Hunt could not have found comforable or flattering.

Burden is executive secretary of the N. C. Employees Association, and one of the more effective lobbyists on Capitol Hill.

"No, Emmett probably doesn't like me at all," admitted Noblitt.

Noblitt explains:

"State employees and teachers get hot under the collar because I regularly remind readers how salaries and fringe benefits in government have gotten out of line with the private sector; most noticeably in the middle and upper echelon jobs where planners and supervisors and other paper shufflers proliferate.

"I keep hitting this subject because I see government becoming an inverted pyramid. On the shoulders of every classroom teacher or pothole patcher there are engineers and lawyers and clerks and planners and supervisors by the numbers. Generally, salaries in such jobs range from the low to mid-20s (thousands) and up. That's where the administrative fat is, and that is where cuts must come before federal and state governments get spending back under control.

"Government doesn't make a product or sell anything. It only hires people. To control spending means controlling that process. Nearly 80 percent of all state government money is spent on direct personnel costs."

Noblitt is only the fourth columnist to serve the Association of Afternoon Newspapers. He brought to the position experience ranging from covering beats of smalltown dailies to serving as city editor of a metropolitan newspaper.

He also brought to the position his own style of covering the news.

"In daily routine, I avoid the 'herding instinct' which dominates the Capitol Press Corps. This is not a chosen way of doing things by many of the good reporters. It is just a fact of life. If one wire service or major newspaper is getting a story, they all must get it. If one television or radio report is covering, they all must cover. So they all end up with the same stories and you see the same stories in almost every report every day. . ."

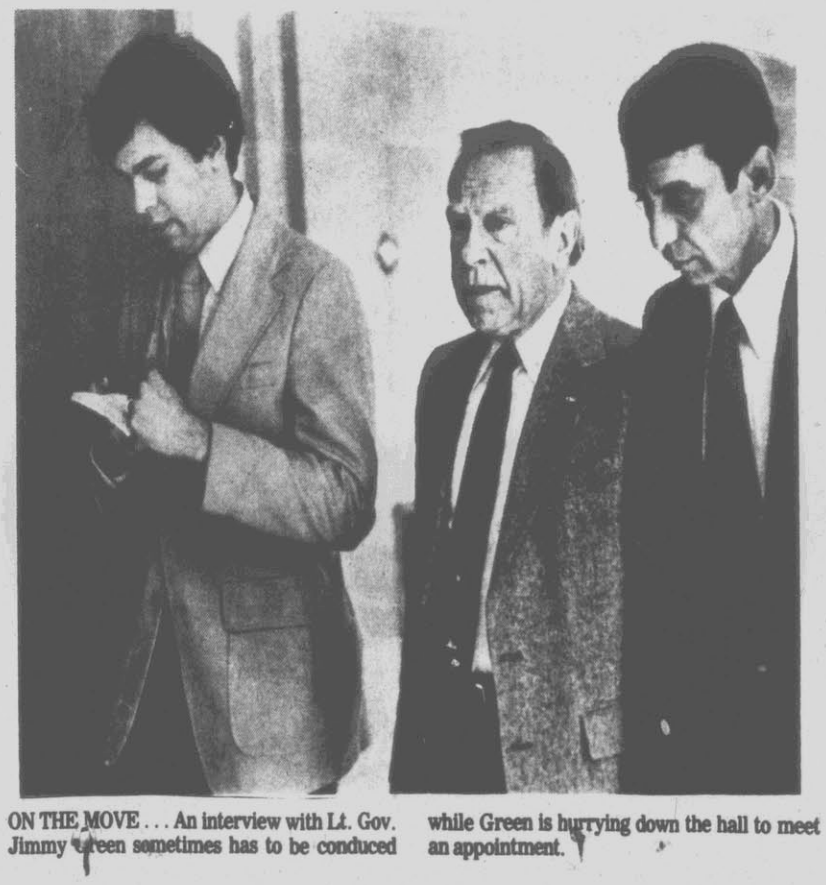

Noblitt is likely to strike out on his own, developing stories that are not necessarily fast-breaking news. He is the digger and backgrounder.

"I choose to concentrate on what I believe to be serious and significant information. It would be simple — and readership of my column would no doubt improve tremendously — to write a steady diet of muckraking stuff: personality clashes, political backbiting, minor misdeeds of officialdom, gossip . . . There are plenty of self-serving people promoting their own interests without regard to the total picture. The public doesn't have a lobby and isn't organized to participate in the process in the most effective manner.

"Actually, there is a way available in the established order of things, and that's the political process. The public can be most effective in shaping decisions by getting actively involved in political party activities at the local and state levels. That is precisely what has been happening in this state and nation in the last couple of years as conservatives moved into the system and mounted a major offensive and have begun forcing fundamental change.

"The trouble is that so many people see politics as something dirty, to be avoided. That attitude has played a big part in creating a vacuum which has allowed government to get out of control. Politics is our system of government, and means simply the involvement of an informed and educated people in the conduct of their own affairs."

Keeping the public informed is the goal of Bill Noblitt as he reports to the 37 afternoon newspapers that carry his column daily to more than 750,000 subscribers across North Carolina.

ON THE MOVE . . . An interview with Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green sometimes has to be conduced while Green is hurrying down the hall to meet an appointment.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CHICKEN IN A BASKET IS A DELECTABLE DISH.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: T equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

'Miracle Child' Has Life Measured In Needles

By CYNTHIA ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Frankie Lutes' life has been measured out in needles. His thin arms and tender feet have been jabbed, stabbed, prodded, poked and punctured until he could take no more.

It's a tough life for a 5-year-old. But 20 years ago, Frankie's doctors say, he wouldn't have had a life at all.

Born with a rare blood disease akin to hemophilia, Frankie has survived a cancerous brain tumor and a cerebral hemorrhage, making medical history by the time he reached kindergarten.

He is the "miracle child" of Albert Einstein Medical Center, and a living testament to the bonds of love and determination that have shielded him from death so many times.

Frankie was born Oct. 2, 1975, by Caesarean section after Nancy Lutes struggled for 14 hours attempting to give birth to her first child. The infant was in fetal distress, nearly strangled by the umbilical cord.

Just hours later, a routine "heelstick" to draw blood samples revealed that Frankie's troubles had only begun.

"Once you see that the bleeding doesn't stop, it isn't hard to make a diagnosis. His level of fibrinogen was almost nil," recalls Dr. Jeong Ok Lee, a pediatric hematologist-oncologist at Einstein.

Frankie has afibrogenemia, a lack of fibrinogen that is essential to the clotting process. At the time of diagnosis, doctors knew of only 18 such cases.

Unlike the "classic" hemophiliac who lacks a minor factor in the blood clotting process, those with afibrogenemia are missing a major link in the blood's chemical chain.

There is no cure for Frankie, but he finds care at Einstein, the first comprehensive health center for hemophiliacs in the East. Established in 1967, the program is dedicated to treating a multitude of problems that plague the hemophiliac. A Hemophilia Treatment Team, including an orthopedist, pediatrician, dentist — even a psychologist — staffs the program.

Like other children with bleeding disorders, Frankie's head is constantly protected — although this baseball fan has chosen a Philadelphia Phillies plastic batting helmet instead of more conventional headgear.

"He's a boy and he's going to get into things, but he knows what the consequences are," says Frankie's mother.

"The other day, while I was upstairs, he tried to peel a carrot and cut his finger. He wrapped it up, came upstairs and said, 'Mommy, you have to take me to the hospital,'" she recalls.

At Einstein, Frankie is treated with injections of cryoprecipitate, which aids in clotting and allows healing to begin.

Complications from his disease forced Frankie to wear a leg brace briefly, and he has been placed in a school for orthopedically handicapped children across the street from the hospital.

He'll outgrow the special school, his mother says. "He's going to have to use his mind more than his body."

The first 18 months of Frankie's life were quiet ones. The bleeding disorder caused problems only when he cut his first teeth.

But suddenly, his personality changed.

Doctors could find nothing. He has the flu, they'd say. A virus; or maybe growing pains. Then he began grazing objects when he walked and Mrs. Lutes scraped up some bile after Frankie vomited and took it to the hospital.

"I want to show you this. There is something wrong with Frankie," she pleaded. An examination showed a bulge in the baby's forehead. He had a brain tumor.

Surgeons couldn't completely excise the tumor, but removed as much as possible and began extensive radiation treatments on the base of the skull and the spine.

Frankie's weight dropped from 30 to 19 pounds. "He wouldn't eat or drink. He couldn't suck. It took three people to force feed him," Mrs. Lutes recalls.

"He would push me away. He didn't want anyone. He was getting stuck (with needles) day and night," she says.

Afraid that her son would feel abandoned, Mrs. Lutes refused to leave his side. The days were filled with encouragement for Frankie, and the nights were blackened by despair. "People say that I don't cry. But I cried. I cried at nighttime," she says, fighting back tears at the memory of those months.

With the cancer in remission, Frankie entered Einstein last May for a routine scan to determine whether the tumor had changed. Because the test requires a patient to keep absolutely still, children are routinely anesthetized.

But this time, Frankie didn't wake up.

"He didn't come out of it like he should. Everyone thought it was just the anesthesia, but it went on into the night. Actually, he was dying slowly. By 3 a.m., he had curled up into a fetal position," Mrs. Lutes recalls.

Frankie had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. Ninety minutes later, he was on the operating table and, with the help of artificial coagulants, doctors once again saved his life.

But they could take no more chances. The child needed strength and time to recover, and his only guarantee against another hemorrhage was cryoprecipitate.

To Frankie, it meant a needle, every day, for six months.

Common Cause Leader Resigns

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nothing illustrates the corruption of power better than leaders who can't give it up. It is a rare sight in Washington to find someone giving up power willingly, let alone joyfully.

Meet David Cohen.

After 10 years as an official of Common Cause — the last six as president — Cohen, 44, is resigning to begin a new career in teaching, writing and working in the field of alternative energy.

"I feel I have lots of energy and I want to leave at a time when my energy is high, and when people have not tired of me," Cohen said in an interview conducted across a kitchen table in the room where Common Cause staffers and volunteers sip coffee and soft drinks.

"The organization is in good shape. It has depth and skill and versatility and is in good shape financially. In that sense, I think I've done my job."

Cohen makes $49,000 as the chief operating officer of the 222,000-member citizens group and probably could have looked forward to a long tenure in the job. But he decided last fall to get out and in May, Common Cause will choose a new president.

His wish to try something new is only one of his reasons for leaving. Another is precedent: both John Gardner, founder and chairman of Common Cause, and Jack Conway, Cohen's predecessor as president, stepped down from office without being pushed, or even nudged.

"I had two mentors and they both provided good examples," Cohen said. "In 'movement' organizations, holding office really should not be a lifetime peerage."

Stocky, with a shock of untamed, wiry, graying hair and furry pitch black eyebrows, Cohen is a familiar figure on Capitol Hill, where he has been one of Common Cause's most effective lobbyists for political and governmental reform.

Cohen is a former labor union and liberal organization (Americans for Democratic Action) lobbyist. He has been around Washington for 18 years and been in the center of plenty of controversy.

But at least one highly-regarded Washington observer, Washington Post columnist David Broder, in his book "Changing of the Guard," listed Cohen as one of the likely leaders of the future in the public interest field.

If that is so, Cohen will not be joining the ranks of liberals seeking to reinvent the New Deal. He will be looking for new ways to balance what he calls the "equity-efficiency tradeoff" in government and, as he has in the past, he probably will be telling people things they don't want to hear.

As a leader of Common Cause, Cohen has had ample opportunity to hear the laments of the politically-moderate whites who form the group's core membership. He believes the election of Ronald Reagan was in part the fault of liberals' failure to control inflation and run government efficiently.

"There were some real problems that people were reacting to (in 1980)," Cohen said. "Lots of moderate people voted for Reagan."

"There is nothing monolithic about the middle class," Cohen said. "Part of it will change, part of it will insist on status quo politics, but other parts will accept change and want a fair society.

"These are the people who revolted (in 1980). They are not extreme, but the problem of inflation had a very damaging effect, especially when you have a kind of contracting economy. It reinforces selfishness, makes people much more protective."

Student Leaders Now Work Inside System For Changes

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — When student protest turned bloody at Kent State in 1970, shouts of frustration from a college campus here echoed off the foothills of western Massachusetts.

Student leaders marched. They led sit-ins. They took over buildings.

A decade has passed. University of Massachusetts student leaders still are commited to changes. But they work from inside — rather than outside — the system. Inside the chancellor's office. And inside the statehouse.

The student body president today is a partner in the education business. He rarely need march to be seen or shout to be heard.

"Where it's available, and where it works, you have to work through the system," says Richard LaVoice, co-president of the UMass student body.

Instead of picketing, LaVoice and his counterparts across the country are filing lawsuits. Instead of criticizing big business, they run multimillion-dollar, student-owned corporations. Instead of looking askance at the profit motive, they talk incessantly of the need to have a "marketable" degree.

Instead of staging a sit-in at the Board of Trustees meeting, LaVoice sits inside — on the board and with a vote. And instead of sitting in silent protest in the chancellor's waiting room, LaVoice is ushered in — without an appointment — for frank discussions.

The people who ascend to the student soapbox also have changed. Student presidents are older, as is the average student. And they are likely to be studying business or science, rather than the traditional political science.

Like his predecessors, LaVoice still arranges concerts and fights the administration bitterly when he spots an injustice, using rallies, lawsuits and boycotts.

But the 21-year-old senior also travels to Boston and Washington to lobby for more state aid for the school and its 24,000 students. And he oversees an operation that includes a student federal loan bank, a health food restaurant, sporting goods store, bicycle shop, photo service, staff of attorneys and 30-bus transit fleet that carries 17,000 people a day across the campus.

All that, and a daily newspaper and yearbook, is run from a $3.5 million kitty fed by student fees and state and federal money.

The Larmode

Contemporary In Style, Aim

By Jerry Bishop

From its sleek, low lines to its lifestyled interior, the Larmode is a unique design that revolves around relaxed contemporary living.

The three bedroom offer ample sleeping space, kitchen and dining nook are functional, and the activity center is the expansive family room, augmented by the gameroom. For entertaining, the dining room should suffice, but the main thrust of the design is toward informal use of space.

Exterior lines are privacy-protecting, with front wndows at a minimum. Hip roof and courtyard help soften the lines and add individuality to the design.

A small roofed porch leads to the closeted entry, with immediate access to the dining room at left or family room ahead. Dining room, kitchen, and breakfast nook form a functional complex that overlooks the courtyard and suits both everyday use as well as entertaining.

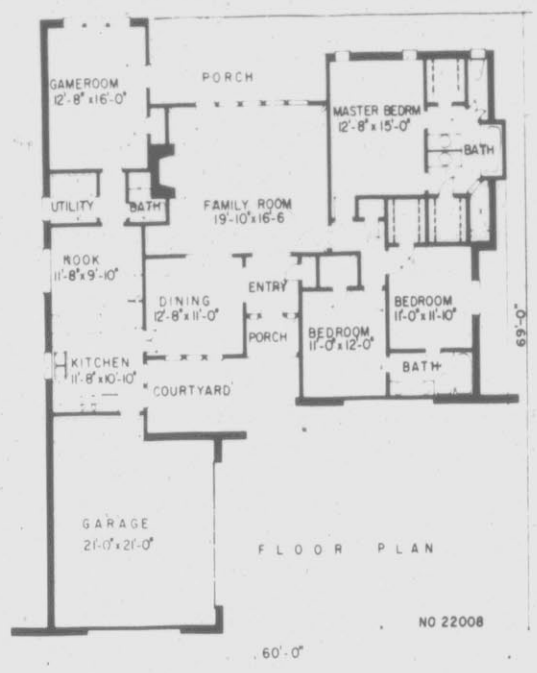

Between dining nook and gameroom, a half bath and utility room are well-located. The gameroom is a sizable area with built-in storage closet and access to the patio.

Central to the floor plan is the substantial family room. Beamed ceiling and wood-burning fireplace add atmosphere to the area, which overlooks and opens to the porch.

Bedrooms take over the right half of the plan, dominated by the master bedroom with its oversized bath, double vanities, and his and hers walk-in closets. Two front bedrooms also enjoy walk-in closets.

A side entry double garage is provided.

Furniture Makers Try To Lead Retail Sales Out Of Doldrums

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — American furniture makers were not out to scale the heights with bold, new designs at the recently-concluded, semiannual furniture market here.

They just wanted to lead retailers up a gentle slope out of the sales decline that has plagued the industry lately. Their method was to introduce diverse furniture items to appeal to every market segment. However, furniture categorized by function rather than by room of use continued to increase.

Armoires and wall systems suited for any room, as well as seating that turns into a bed were shown by more manufacturers.

Also brightening the market were numerous cheerful, simple-lined, contemporary pieces scaled for smaller rooms and apartment living. The industry refers to this type of furniture as "lifestyle" furniture.

Consumers who have shopped for furniture and accessories recently will find few surprises when most of the new styles appear on retail sales floors in the fall. The mix of contemporary, authentic and nostalgic American traditional and period furniture will continue in about the same proportion as at present.

But consumers may be surprised by the variety and cleverness of multipurpose and space-saving furniture for an informal style of life. Tables that fold or change height, beds in coffee tables and ottomans, and carry-home wall systems that you put together yourself and that can be made as tall and as long as necessary are being manufactured in greater numbers and styles.

As always in this market which serves the entire United States and is attended each year by more retailers from foreign countries, the variety of offerings was almost overwhelming.

"Since the early 1970s, it has become apparent there are many trends and that no one style has existed to the exclusion of others," explained Charles Millender, vice president of White Furniture Co. Millender added that the multiplicity of styles and price ranges will continue and grow in the 1980s.

Nevertheless, it seemed apparent that several trends are likely to become stronger. Besides the greater quantity of furniture for small spaces, combining more than one function, expect to see more manmade materials and high-technology processes employed in furniture manufacturing.

At this market, a brilliantly-colored, durable material was used for tables and cabinets in modern furniture introduced by Directional Industries. A finish resembling stucco, said to be durable for outdoor use, was shown on tables and etageres by Design Industries America.

An improvement on leaded glass and a method of embellishing wood furniture with what looked like costly carving were new processes used by a number of manufacturers of medium-priced furniture.

While those who seek the recognizable styles of the past will be sure to find them when they go shopping, they will also see a greater variety of furniture that mixes elements from a number of periods.

What was called "nostalgia" several seasons ago is still available. But it has been broadened in style and is now being called "country" furniture. The furniture is comfortable, owes no allegiance to a single period and is usually enhanced by the use of colorful print fabrics and country antiques and reproduction accessories.

Not new at the market, but certainly in greater evidence, was bright light wood, plastic and metal lifestyle furniture. Designed to be inexpensive, carried home immediately and assembled by the buyer, lifestyle furniture has caught the fancy of young city-dwelling Americans and today is said to represent between 15 and 20 percent of total furniture volume.

Although wood furniture ran the gamut in styles, the new upholstered pieces tended to take one of two clear directions. Either it was bulky with many pillows and soft, rounded arms, or it was modular with crisp lines. A few makers designed modular seating that was, nevertheless, rounded. The modified camelback sofa was seen in almost every showroom.

Preferred colors tend to vary, depending on the market. Costly seating was often shown in pastel solid tones such as peach, seafoam green or blue. Deep tones given such names as "raisin" or "aubergine" were also popular among high-priced sofas.

For country furniture, provincial prints and plaids and checks were popular. In popular-priced furniture, earth-tones continued to dominate.

Q. I set two apple trees in February. As of this date I can't see any green leaves. The trees came from a good nursery and I stored them in a grocery vegetable and fruit cold room for two weeks before setting. Did the 38-degree temperature kill the buds? (W.H., Eden)

A. No. The problem was probably caused by ethylene gas in the cooler. This is a substance given off by apples and other ripening fruit. Ethylene can also be added to coolers to speed up the ripening process. Therefore, never store fruit trees where apples have been held without first airing the storage room. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. Last year my tomatoes had flowers, but the flowers would drop without setting fruit. What was the problem? (K.P., Siler City)

A. Temperatures too high or too low will interfere with fruit set on tomatoes. The tomato plant is likely to set very little fruit if night temperatures fall below 60 degrees and day temperatures rise above 90 degrees. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. What is the nutrient make-up of organic fertilizers? Do you recommend this type of fertilizer? (C.G., Chapel Hill)

A. The analysis of three popular organic fertilizers are dried blood (13-1-.5), bone meal (4-22-0) and stable manure (.5-.5-.5). This means, for example, that stable manure has a half pound each of nitrogen, phorphorus and potash per 100 pounds, a very low analysis. The major advantage of organic fertilizer is its slow release capability, thus reducing the possibility of plant injury. Many of our native soils can benefit from the incorporation of sawdust, manure, decayed bark and other organic materials, and I highly recommend mulchilng round plants. If organic materials are applied over a period of years, the soil will become "rich" enough to supply nutrients needed by plants. Meanwhile, I rely on commercial fertilizers to supply these needs. (Kim Powell, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. Can you tell me what causes ears of sweet corn not to fill properly? (L.S., Zebulon)

A. One of the most common reasons is poor pollination during hot, dry weather. Another is heavy rains at pollen shedding. Planting a very small patch or single rows may lead to poor filling of the ears. Other reasons may be nutrient imbalances, particularly high nitrogen, and insects feeding on silks. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Here's the Answer

Q. — What causes cement to come up between the seams of floor tiles? A few years ago I put down some asphalt tiles. I used that black cement that has to be a little dry before tiles are put on it. It wasn't too long before the cement began to ooze out between some of the tiles. It took a lot of work, week after week, to get rid of the excess. I have a similar job to do now and want to avoid the same trouble. This time I am using vinyl asbestos tiles. Will the same thing happen and is there any way I can avoid it?

A. — One of the common errors in the installation of resilient floor tiles is the application of too much cement. Follow the manufacturer's recommendations to the letter on the amount of cement to be applied. Also, do not slide each tile into place. Place one edge against the edge of a tile on the floor and lay it down carefully. Take your time. Use a notched spreader to apply the cement. This will help prevent the application of too much cement.

Q. — My grandfather once showed me how to make new screening taut by bending the wooden frame, but I have forgotten the details. Can you help?

A. — Place the frame on a flat surface with a board under each end. Clamp the frame to the center of the flat surface on each side. This will make the frame buckle. Attach the screening to the frame while it is in this position, using staples if possible. When the attachment is completed, remove the clamps. The frame now will spring back into place, which will automatically tighten the screening. It's an old-fashioned procedure, but it works.

Q. — The only place in my house where I can do varnishing is in my basement workshop, but I am always plagued by dust that settles on the varnish while it is drying. Is there some accepted way to prevent the dust from getting on the varnished surface?

A. — Only by getting rid of the dust. That means you must wear clothes that haven't previously been worn while working around dust; be sure they have just been washed. Vacuum the entire area. Avoid excessive walking in the workshop just before varnishing. Be sure that nobody else in the house goes into the workshop while the varnish is drying — and stay out of it yourself. If the basement has a concrete floor, wet it down ahead of time to keep dust from rising. If dust is likely to come down from the ceiling while you are working, make a homemade canopy or other cover to catch the dust before it settles on your project. And be sure the surface of the wood you are finishing is dust-free before you start.

(The technique of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 50 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Fuel-Saving Projects Can Make Drastic Cuts In Energy Costs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In Northampton, Mass., the Goldstein family reduced its energy bills by about 20 percent, thanks to a host of conservation measures, including a time-controlled furnace.

Senior citizens in Jackson County, Ill., can spend more on food and less on heat, now that their doors have been weather stripped and their windows sealed.

And in Valley City, N.D., where winter-like weather prevails seven months of the year, many folks armed with plastic sheets and caulk guns have staged an energy revolt.

These reduced bills, improved diets and acts of independence are the result of a 2-year-old federal conservation program that has helped communities rise up against soaring fuel costs.

"What we really do is to help them help themselves," said Frances Luzzatto, director of the Community Energy Project, a component of the 11-year-old volunteer ACTION program.

"This is a unique type of federal program," Luzzato said in an interview from his Washington office. "Instead of just going out and handing out big grants, we primarily give out ideas and encouragement and let them go from there. We present to them simple conservation methods they can do themselves."

Weatherizing a home can cost from as little as $25 to as much as several hundred dollars, depending on whether the project involves simple weatherstripping or total insulation.

Regardless, homeowners can often realize a savings before it is time to buy a new calendar.

Northampton, Jackson County and Valley City were among 20 communities that participated last year in ACTION's do-it-yourself energy program. This year, another 30 will be selected.

Communities receive federal grants of no more than $5,000. The money is used to supplement local funds, which, together, finance home-tailored conservation drives.

The key to the program is drumming up citizen participation. So, handbills and brochures are distributed door to door, self-help workshops are held and volunteers, when needed, give elderly residents a hand in tightening drafty homes.

"Almost anyone can be trained in an hour to take simple, inexpensive steps to reduce fuel costs in the home and the automobile," Luzzatto said, "from buttoning up drafts with a little caulk to ride sharing."

Caulking the outside of your house is a necessary part of preparing it for painting, but it is just as important that this be done even when no paint project is in the offing.

Caulking is a form of weatherproofing. If it is neglected, air and water can enter the house, causing a loss of energy and damaging the structure and its contents. Because the loss of energy is not always apparent and the leak not visible until it is too late, periodic inspections of the house are required to prevent future trouble.

It is not enough to glance at the outside of the house looking for openings in the walls, since many of the gaps cannot be seen from the ground, even in a one-story building. You need a ladder and a flashlight to uncover gaps of an inch or so around windows and door frames.

When making the inspection, carry a piece of chalk or some other marking material with you. When you spot a place that requires caulking, mark it immediately. Don't rely on your memory for determining later where the trouble areas are located.

The places that usually need caulking are where dissimilar materials meet. That's where contraction and expansion occur at different times, producing the separations which need attention. It might be where plumbing and electrical services protrude, at vents, around joints, etc.

Caulking compounds are formulated to handle contractions and expansions. They never really harden, contracting and expanding with the materials to a degree.

It is when they lose their ability to do this, sometimes in a year or two, sometimes after many years, that replacement of the compound is necessary.

So that the new compound takes hold thoroughly, all loose pieces of the old material must be removed. Because the old material may appear to be sound but really isn't, use an old screwdriver to poke around when making your inspection.

Recaulking should not be done when the temperature is below 50 degrees Fahrenheit. For most house purposes, a so-called caulking gun is best. Load it with a cartridge made especially for the gun, which is merely a gadget with a large trigger on it. When the cartridge is placed in the gun and the trigger squeezed, the compound comes out of a special tip that helps to keep the material flowing properly.

If there is a large gap that must be filled, first fill part or most of it with oakum, a ropelike product, then go ahead with the compound.

Sometimes it is more economical to buy the compound in bulk, especially when a large amount must be used, but the cartridge-gun arrangement is a more convenient way of applying the material. You can also buy a type of caulking gun which permits the insertion of compound sold in bulk.

There are various kinds of caulking compounds. Once, the most widely sold was that with an oil base. It still is the cheapest, but it is a little more difficult to apply than most others and it has a shorter life. Among other kinds are vinyl latex, acrylic latex and butyl, with the silicones exceptionally good but more costly.

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that one should always read the labels before purchasing to determine which product best meets your needs. In the case of caulking materials, be especially careful to get a caulk that can be painted if it is your intention to paint it.

When you complete your caulking and find that it isn't as smooth as you wanted it to be, you will find that dipping a finger in water and then running it over the compound will do wonders.

Farm Co-ops Are Finding More Clout In Numbers

By RICK VAN SANT

CINCINNATTI (UPI) — They are as old as the Mayflower Compact.

They are as big as Sunkist.

They are so popular that five out of every six farmers belong.

"They" are farm cooperatives.

The co-ops are growing in numbers and in clout.

"Farmers have a saying about their cooperative," says Bill Swank, executive vice president of the Ohio Farm Bureau. "'We've paid for a lot of companies, but we own this one.'"

Many farmers used to think that both ends of their stick were short — overcharged for supplies they had to buy, underpaid for the produce they sold.

"Simply put," says Swank, "a lot of farmers felt they were being ripped off. So, they formed cooperatives to survive. I suppose farmers today could exist without cooperatives, but I'm not sure they would."

In America, farm cooperatives date back to the pilgrims. Their Mayflower Compact — sharing the labor and its fruits — probably helped them survive.

Today, there are more than 7,500 farm cooperatives in the country. Many are a whole lot more than a dusty silo where a few dirt farmers stash their corn.

When you buy a Sunkist orange, you're helping a cooperative's product.

Spread some Land O' Lakes butter and you're spreading money through that Minnesota-based cooperative.

Those well-advertised Ocean Spray cranberries? Another cooperative venture.

Most cooperatives, of course, are not as big as Sunkist. But, the trend is to make cooperatives as large as possible. And sometimes, as encompassing as possible.

The Ohio Farm Bureau's cooperative (Landmark), for example, not only sells the farmer seeds and fertilizer and buys back his grain, it also sells him gasoline, oil, tires and batteries.

All this to give the farmer a choice from the goods and prices offered by private companies.

"The main value of a cooperative is that it provides this competitive factor and is a bellwether for good, competitive business," says Swank. "Without a cooperative, a farmer tends to feel there is collusion among other business people — that their profits are unduly high and that the prices they pay to farmers are unduly low.

"But when farmers have their own cooperative, they have a pretty strong feeling about just what it costs to, say, deliver a sack of fertilizer or a bushel of grain, because their own outfit is also doing it."

With the growth of cooperatives, however, has come the fear that co-ops may have become their own enemy — perhaps filling with bureaucratic softness and making them similar to the big businesses they were trying to circumvent.

"Some critics feel farmers ought not to be in this kind of business," Swank said. "But we think of it as just an extension of the job of farming. What's the difference between farmers having their own fertilizer made and Sears, Roebuck having their own products made?

"I don't think a cooperative can get too big. It would be too big if it forgot its purpose — to help the farmer."

Farm Exports Face Uncertain Future

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's push to continue the huge U.S. farm export momentum of recent years is getting under way but is not expected to glide forward without some disturbing difficulties.

Administration officials say there is another rising tide of protectionism and a renewed effort by some other countries to expand their farm export business, among other problems.

David R. MacDonald, deputy U.S. trade representative, cited soybeans as an example. Currently the European Community has a "zero duty" on U.S. soybeans entering that important market.

But now it looks like soybeans will "be a target for some protection" in the future, MacDonald told the Newspaper Farm Editors of America meeting here last week.

The levy of import duties on U.S. soybeans would be part of a strategy to reduce or slow down the rise in European dairy surpluses.

According to MacDonald's analysis, factions within the European Community think that if U.S. soybeans and soybean meal — a high-protein ingredient used in livestock and poultry feed — are made to be more expensive, European farmers will buy less for dairy cows, thus reducing milk production.

A related problem involves an expected rise in olive oil surpluses, which will be generated when Spain formally enters the community, he said. This situation is quiet now but "new battles probably are on the horizon," MacDonald said.

Also, he said, corn gluten feed — a protein-rich byproduct of making alcohol from corn — has been gaining popularity in Europe and may trigger community import levies.

London Plans Transformation Of River Thames

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — Picture Paris with rotting warehouses lining the Seine's Left Bank, or Chicago with Lake Shore Drive covered by stockyards.

Imagine New York's Central Park as an industrial slum, or San Francisco's Bay hillsides cloaked in factories.

That's London's riverside today.

But perhaps not tomorrow.

This great but schizophrenic city is on the brink of its biggest transformation since the Great Fire of 1666. Its focus is London's most neglected asset, the River Thames.

On five miles of the river's South Bank in the heart of London, nearly 50 major development projects have passed the design stage.

Public hearings are just getting under way for discussion of three of the biggest schemes. Some are enormous.

One calls for a great "snake" of glazed buildings and glassed-in walkways three-quarters of a mile long. Another covers 22 acres of river frontage opposite the Tower of London. Most unusual is American actor-director Sam Wanamaker's dream of re-creating Shakespeare's Globe theater only yards from its original site. After a decade of struggle, Wanamaker finally has begun to raise money to start building. Much of the money will be American: a campaign was kicked off recently with an all-star concert in New York.

Another proposal includes a new footbridge across the Thames. Still others call for homes and hotels, restaurants, and offices by the millions of square feet. Total cost of the projects: more than $2.25 billion.

At the same time, years of debate are reaching the action stage for another area downstream — the vast desolation of obsolete docks.

London was once the world's greatest port. But now docks which could easily swallow the biggest ship and enough storehouses for a fleet's cargo are a collective wasteland as big as a fair-sized city.

So big, in fact, it is hard to visualize. The new Docklands Urban Development Corporation, expecting parliamentary authority by summer, will be responsible for 8 square miles of mud and rubble — the largest derelict site in western Europe.

"In three years time," says corporation chairman Nigel Broackes, "this huge and beautiful space will have changed out of all recognition."

"Dockland" is so vast that in just one section a completed design includes a village of 1,000 people, a chain of lakes, a shopping center, hotel and conference center, towering office buildings and an industrial park.

In the city's center, the south shore of the Thames has been "the other side of the tracks" since the Romans built their city on the north bank. Virtually every historic landmark or tourist site, from Big Ben to St. Paul's Cathedral, is on the north side of the river. So is every "smart" residential district.

When shipping deserted London in favor of newer container ports, these gaunt, Dickensian warehouses mostly were left to rot.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—You have often written about what to do after partner makes a takeout double. But I am still perplexed about what action I should take after partner opens the bidding and my right-hand opponent makes a takeout double. Can you stop me from being—Muddled in Minneapolis, Minn.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—I cannot understand why you are confused—this is one of the easiest positions to be in. There are really only three simple rules to remember: 1) All good hands, whether or not they contain support for partner's suit, start off with a redouble. 2) With a really bad hand, pass. 3) With support in partner's suit, jump raise if your hand is weak defensively and you have distributional values, but make a normal raise if you have the strength for a simple response.

Bearing this in mind, see what action you would take on the following examples. Assume that partner opens the bidding with one heart and the next hand doubles. You hold:

a)	b)
♠ A Q 10 x	♠ x x
♡ x	♡ A Q x x
◇ K J x x	◇ K x x
♣ A 10 x x	♣ Q x x x
c)	d)
♠ K 10 x x x	♠ A x x
♡ x	♡ J x x x x
◇ K x x x	◇ Q x
♣ x x x	♣ x x x
e)	f)
♠ J x x	♠ J x x x
♡ Q J x x x	♡ x x
◇ x	◇ Q x x x
♣ x x x x	♣ x x x

Hand a) is strong, so you start off with a redouble. That requests partner to give you the courtesy of the road. No matter where the opponents run, you intend doubling for penalties. And if they allow you to play one heart redoubled, your outside strength should make the contract a near certainty even if partner has a weak trump suit.

Since hand b) is also strong, you again start off with a redouble. This time, however, you intend raising hearts over any action by the opponents.

Hand c) is of intermediate strength. With this type of hand, it is usually better to bid at your first opportunity, especially since hearts is unlikely to be your best spot. Make your natural bid of one spade—the same action you would have taken had there been no intervening double.

Hand d) has some defensive values and excellent support for partner's suit. Make your normal raise to two hearts. This serves two purposes. First, if partner has a really good hand, you might be able to get to game despite the takeout double. Secondly, if partner is relatively weak, it makes it that much harder for the opponents to get into the auction.

Hand e) is not only weak defensively, but your length in hearts will diminish partner's defensive power. Jump to three hearts. Over a takeout double, that is a preemptive action.

Hand f) is just a bad hand, period. The only way to tell partner that you have a bad hand is to pass.

What constitutes a good responding hand? The minimum for a redouble should be about 10 points in high cards. With fewer than that, treat the hand as intermediate and choose some other action, such as a raise of partner's suit, a bid of a new suit or a response of one no trump.

Medieval Scholar Publishes Sci-Fi

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — David G. Hartwell traveled from the Middle Ages to 2001 A.D. in record time.

Hartwell holds a doctorate in medieval literature. He also holds the job of director of science fiction and fantasy for Pocket Books.

His travel through time began when, fresh out of graduate school, he took a look at the academic world, was not taken by what he saw, and decided not to teach as originally planned. Instead, he went into publishing.

"Frankly, there were no good teaching jobs available at the time and in publishing you got paid better — so I set aside medieval literature," the 40-year-old Hartwell says.

"My move was not an illogical one. The medieval period was the last period in which fantasy was the dominant mode in much of the literature and much of the rest contained, at least, outrageous and fantastic elements. Dante's 'Inferno,' for example, is fantasy if looked at from a certain angle."

Fantasy, he says, "using a rule-of-thumb definition, is that which includes all manner of impossibilities. You pick it up and say, 'OK, this is not real,' and then go on and read and perhaps enjoy it. Science fiction is a special case of fantasy which deals with things that are not true but could — under certain circumstances — be true, no matter how improbable. You pick up SF and say, 'OK, this is not real but there is something here that could be real."

Hartwell's first publishing job was as a consultant in science fiction to a paperback house, then he moved on to another as SF editor and came to his current position about 1½ years ago. He and his staff are responsible for publishing five science fiction and fantasy titles a month in paperback and between six and eight a year in hardcover.

Some of the paperbacks are reprints, others are reissues, and still others are new issues. All of the hardcovers are new, says Hartwell.

Where do all the titles come from? Hartwell gestures at the heaps of manuscripts and books stacked about his office.

"We try to recycle this stuff quickly," he says. "The bad does not hang around for very long."

An omnivorous reader of SF and fantasy since "I was in the third grade," Hartwell says he looks at about 30 books and manuscripts a week. "I read some of each and I read fully at least four or five manuscripts and a couple of books.

"Most of these things come from agents, but a lot also comes in over the transom — unsolicited. The SF and fantasy departments are the last bastions of the publishing world in which the stuff in the slush pile is read. And I do find publishable books in the slush pile — 15 to 20 percent of the books I buy come in over the transom. There's a lot of talent around these days."

Open Air Sculpture Adorns Philadelphia

By CAROLYN ROESSEL

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The taxi careened around the corner and there it was, looming rust-colored 53 feet above the bustle of downtown Philadelphia.

A clothespin.

"Gee, look at that big clothespin thing," the driver said with disgust.

His passenger, prominent American sculptor Claes Oldenburg, immediately confessed that he had fashioned Philadelphia's most notorious piece of art.

"You did that?" said the driver, slightly more impressed. "Well, at least it ain't a horse and rider."

The Oldenburg clothespin is one of more than 850 pieces of outdoor sculpture scattered throughout Philadelphia, the first city to pass legislation requiring some builders to pledge one percent of construction costs to public art.

The city's open air sculpture is not only abundant, but much of it is original work by the great masters.

Philadelphia has the first bronze cast of Auguste Rodin's tumultuous "Gates of Hell" (the second went to the Rodin Museum in Paris); Frederic Remington's "The Cowboy," the only large bronze piece ever made by the illustrator of the Old West; and Emmanuel Fremiet's stoic "Joan of Arc," now gilded in gold.

"It's astonishing and it's something that nobody really knows about," said Richard Boyle, chairman of the Redevelopment Authority's Fine Arts Committee.

Forty cities across the country have adopted one-percent legislation pioneered in Philadelphia in 1959, but the city's unsung collection got its start 87 years earlier with the Fairmount Park Art Association, a group which used private donations to buy the 250 statues that dot the world's largest city park.

"Even in Central Park there is not the collection of sculpture we have in Fairmount Park," said Janet Kardon, director of the University of Pennsylvania's Institute of Contemporary Art.

"If you take a bus tour through the park you could see the history of American sculpture in living color."

The same year the Fairmount Park Art Association began its work, Alexander Milne Calder, the first of three generations of the famous Philadelphia sculpting family, began his 22-year task of transforming City Hall into what one art expert called a "bas relief sculpture."

Calder carved more than 250 figures ranging from symbolic images of the elements and the four continents, to playful scenes from daily life — children playing marbles and a cat chasing a mouse.

The finishing touch, Calder's 37-foot statue of William Penn, weighing 26 tons, was hoisted to the top of the building in 1894.

"To grandfather's everlasting disappointment," wrote Margaret Calder Hayes, "as he watched helplessly from the ground his statue of Penn, the crowning piece of more than 20 years of labor, was mounted on the dome of City Hall facing the wrong way."

Across from the ornate City Hall, in striking contrast, is a lumpy, twisted bronze mass of legs, arms, torsos and heads — Jacques Lipchitz's sculpture "Government of the People."

The piece was erected in 1976 beside the city's Municipal Services Building under the city council's one-percent law covering public building projects. Outspoken former Mayor Frank L. Rizzo said the sculpture "looked like some plasterers dropped a pile of plaster."

Oldenburg's clothespin and the enormous cracked button, 15 feet in diameter, which he plans to deliver to the University of Pennsylvania campus this spring, were commissioned under the one-percent regulation for all buildings constructed on land cleared by the city's Redevelopment Authority.

Proponents of public sculpture say it enriches urban life by meshing art with the daily scene.

"I like the idea that the passer-by is surprised," Ms. Kardon said. "So many of the passers-by have never entered an art museum before. Public sculpture is bringing art museum contents out into the street."

Four purple, red and green aluminum letters, L-O-V-E, proved that Philadelphians who stream by the outdoor art actually notice it. Sculptor Robert Indiana loaned his LOVE rendition to the city during the bicentennial.

"When that was removed there was a fantastic public outcry. It was amazing. Ordinary people had come to like it, to accept it there," Boyle said.

Philadelphia 76ers owner F. Eugene Dixon finally stepped in with $35,000 to purchase the sculpture for the city.

Since the one percent law was instituted, several private developers not subject to either of the city's public art regulations have voluntarily purchased public sculpture.

But Jack McDermott, senior vice president of the Radnor Corp., said he was surprised by the response the firm received when it asked the city Art Commission to critique a $125,000 bronze statue voluntarily proposed for a large downtown office building.

The 17½-foot sculpture, entitled "The Family," depicted a couple and two small children, all nude.

"I was surprised to hear one of the Art Commission members saying he didn't want to be responsible for introducing nudity in art to Philadelphia," McDermott said. "There's nudity all over Philadelphia as far as art is concerned."

Pope John Paul II celebrated mass from a platform built over one such sculpture, the Fountains of Rivers by second generation Alexander Stirling Calder.

Laws requiring that a certain percent of building costs be spent on public art are naturally a vital support to sculptors.

"If you remove that kind of incentive it would be very hard to get sculpture up," Oldenburg said. "Philadelphia has so much sculpture because it has that incentive.

Book Outlines Medical Odds

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Heard around hospital corridors:

—The operation was a success but the patient died.

—The penicillin worked fine until the reaction set in.

These two examples of treatment-linked complications were cited by Dr. Harold Bursztajn, a psychiatrist who teamed up with other medical experts to fill a book about facts of medical practice not often mentioned to patients: uncertainties.

It is titled "Medical Choices, Medical Chances — How Patients, Families, and Physicians Can Cope with Uncertainty" (Delacorte Press, $14.95).

Bursztain and co-authors from the Harvard University medical establishment claim patients and doctors should level together about every medical decision involving some element of gambling.

The "untoward effects" of an operation or drug or diagnostic procedure — life-threatening reaction or death — sometimes are part of the uncertainties as doctor and patient gamble together, Bursztajn said.

GE'S BEST air conditioner costs less in the long run.

Our GE Executive II air conditioner uses less energy because it's extra efficient.

It's cheaper to use than less efficient models. The secret's in the two-speed compressor. It uses an energy-saving low speed most of the time. Then, it automatically changes to high speed for quick relief when the weather's extra hot.

Make it a Perfect GE Day with the TN-B (TS) series 34,200-53,500 BTUH

The compressor helps you two ways.

Our famous Climatuff™ compressor

Since a compressor uses more energy than any part of an air conditioning system, the GE 2-speed compressor can make a difference in your electric bill. Running most of the time at low speed saves energy . . . And the more continuous operation adds to your comfort, too.

$150 CASH REFUND NOW!

There's one more great advantage to buying General Electric's best . . . If you buy now, before our crews are busy, GE will send you a $150 cash refund. (To qualify, installation must be in a current residence, between now and May 1, 1981.) So you'll save now, as well as later.

We're reducing heating/cooling bills all over town!

Make it a Perfect GE Day with the WR series. 17-58,000 BTUH

How does it work? Simple. A heat pump doesn't make heat. It moves heat! In summer, it works just like an air conditioner, pulling heat out of your home. In winter, it reverses, and pulls heat from outdoor air into your home (even at cold winter temperatures). With this GE high-efficiency model the same unit keeps you cool all summer, warm all winter, and can save energy dollars, too.

Use it by itself, or add it to your present furnace. Whichever saves more.

Naturally, when the weather's extra-cold, you'll need some extra heat. That's why you can buy this GE heat pump two ways — With supplemental electric heaters built-in . . . or save money, by attaching the heat pump to your present forced air furnace. It doesn't matter what fuel your furnace uses — gas, oil, propane or electric.

$50 CASH REFUND NOW!

There are lots of ways you can save with a General Electric Executive Weathertron® heat pump . . . But the easiest way is to buy NOW! If you install this new GE heat pump before our crews are busy, GE will send you a $50 cash refund. (To qualify, installation must be in a current residence, between now and May 1, 1981) . . . A great way to start the year off . . . saving.

and related clearing, demolition, and earthwork.

Proposals must be enclosed in a sealed envelope addressed to the Mayor and City Council, City of Greenville, Post Office Box 1905, Greenville, North Carolina, 27834, and the outside of the envelope must be marked "Proposal for West Greenville Thoroughfare Improvements: South Evans Project, Fourteenth Street Improvements, Project No. BN 78 HN 27-0005". The name, address and North Carolina license number of the Bidder, the date and time of bid opening, and the Contract or Contracts bid upon shall be clearly indicated on the outside of the envelope. One (1) unbound copy of the proposal form is furnished in the specifications which must be executed and submitted.

Each proposal must be accompanied by cash or a certified check, drawn on a bank or trust company authorized to do business in North Carolina, payable to the City of Greenville, in an amount at least equal to five percent (5%) of the total amount of the bid, as a guarantee that a contract will be entered into and that a satisfactory performance bond will be executed. In lieu of cash or a certified check, the Bidder may submit a bid bond in the form prescribed by G.S. 143-129, as amended by Chapter 1104 of the Public Laws of 1951. Contractors are notified that legislative acts relating to the licensing of contractors will be observed in receiving bids and awarding contracts.

Plans and specifications are on file and may be examined at the offices of the Engineer in Greenville and at the office of the City Engineer, City of Greenville. They will also be on file at the Associated General Contractors offices in Raleigh, and at the Dodge Plan Room in Raleigh. Contractors and others may obtain one or more sets of Contract Documents upon application to the Engineer accompanied by a deposit check made payable to the Engineer of $50.00 per set. This deposit is refundable in accordance with the following policy:

1. All prime contractors who bid will receive a refund in full of their deposit upon return of the Contract Documents in good condition to the office of the Engineer within fifteen (15) days after receipt of bids.

2. Others who return the documents in good condition to the office of the Engineer within fifteen (15) days after receipt of bids will receive a refund of one half of their deposit.

Attention of Bidders is particularly called to the requirements as to conditions of employment to be observed and minimum wage rates to be paid under the contract.

Bidders on this work will be required to comply with Executive Order 11246, entitled "Equal Employment Opportunity", as amended by Executive Order 11375, and as supplemented in Department of Labor regulations (41 CFR Part 60) which prohibit discrimination in employment regarding race, creed, color, sex or national origin, and with all applicable standards, orders, or requirements issued under Section 306 Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 1857 (h)), Section 508 of the Clean Water Act (33 U.S.C. 1368), Executive Order 11738, and Environmental Protection agency regulations (40 CRF Part 15), which prohibit the use under non-exempt Federal contracts, grants or loans of facilities included on the EPA List of Violating Facilities. The requirements are explained in the specification.

This Contract is subject to the requirements of Section 3 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (12 U.S.C. 1701u) as amended, the HUD regulations issued pursuant thereto at 24 CFR Part 135, and any applicable rules and orders of HUD issued thereunder prior to the execution of the Contract. Section 3 requires that to the greatest extent feasible opportunities for training and employment be given lower income residents of the project area and contracts for work in connection with the project to be awarded to business concerns which are located in, or owned in substantial part by persons residing in the area of the project. Section 3 requirements are explained in the specifications.

The City of Greenville reserves the right to reject any or all bids; to waive any informalities, and to award contract or contracts which appear to be in its best interest. The right is reserved to hold any or all proposals for a period of forty-five days from the opening thereof.

WITH GM'S STICKER PRICE INCREASE

MARK VI BEATS SEVILLE BY $3781.

Lincoln-Mercury hasn't raised prices. That's why you'll find quite a difference when you compare sticker prices on Cadillac Seville and a comparably equipped 1981 Continental Mark VI. Among its many features are a computer message display center as well as electronic fuel injection and Automatic Overdrive Transmission.

And right now, factory-to-Dealer incentives enable your Dealer to save you hundreds on the 1981 Continental Mark VI. See him today.

Comparison does not include taxes and license fees.

Long Live Hollywood Sex Symbols

"Sixty Years of Seduction," to be telecast Monday, May 4 (9 p.m. on ABC), is a nostalgic, romantic, thought-provoking, funny and sexy insight into the history of romance in Amercian movies. James Garner, Angie Dickinson, Robert Urich and Victoria Principal are the hosts of this provocative look at the men and women who've been the objects of our fascination and affection since the flickering birth of the silver screen.

Through film clips, the program explores the attractive qualities unique to many of Hollywood's most romantic stars. They range from the voluptuous beauty of sex goddesses like Marilyn Monroe and Rita Hayworth to the high-spirited independent qualities of women like Jane Fonda and Barbara Stanwyck. The magnetic appeal of swashbucklers like Errol Flynn contrasts with shy James Stewart and Gary Cooper or the romantic allure of Robert Redford. Through scenes from their films, we'll see Hollywoods ever-changing portrayal of love, romance and relationships.

More than 400 motion pictures representing every major Hollywood studio were screened for the selection of the scenes for the special. Although the primary focus is on films of the 1920-1980 era, the oldest one utilized is "The Kiss," filmed by Thomas Edison in 1896.

The obvious question is: how were all these films screened?

Assuming the average movie length is 90 minutes, that totals out to 600 hours of flickering shadows or 75 eight-hour working days of watching movies — truly, a film buff's paradise.

But producers have much more work to do when putting together a two-hour TV special than to sit and watch movies for that length of time.

Producers Scott Garen and John Brice, along with Joie Garen, Bill Cartwright and Howard Brock, used a special device which allowed them to see pictures at four times normal speed. The resultant squeaky dialogue was reduced to a lower pitch which permitted them to understand what the film actors were saying.

Despite the feeling they were being served a banquet at a fast food franchise, screening the films very quickly was their goal because of limited time. Even though the 400 features were divided among the five, it still took weeks to see all of them.

ROBERT URICH, Victoria Principal, left, and Angie Dickinson host the two- hour special, "Sixty Years of Seduction," airing Monday, May 4 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Betty Thomas, who co-stars as Officer Lucy Bates on "Hill Street Blues," is also a professional comedienne or comic-actress as she prefers who believes boys are encouraged to be funny more than girls.

"Feedback is more acceptable for boys," she said. "I can remember I was a wildmouth who talked too much. Maybe boys could get away with sitting out in the hall. But for girls, it looked stupid and embarrassing."

Senator Has Problem!

To his many constituents, Senator Joe Tynan is beyond reproach, but his private life is an absolute nightmare because he's torn between the love of two beautiful women. That's the way the ball bounces in "The Seduction of Joe Tynan," coming to television as The ABC Sunday Night Movie, May 3 (9-11:15 p.m.).

Alan Alda portrays the popular young public servant in the drama that is a fascinating mixture of politics and strained bedfellows. Others in key roles include Barbara Harris, Meryl Streep, Melvyn Douglas and Rip Torn.

Around Washington, New York Senator Joe Tynan is considered to be a real hotshot, and he's pushing through a bill for the unemployed against formidable odds.

His future in the nation's capital looks bright indeed.

At home, however, things are not quite so bright. While Tynan accepts the political importance of high visibility, his wife (Harris) and children are becoming a little fed up with life in a goldfish bowl.

Soon, even his upward-mobile career is infected by doubt and pressure when his old friend and mentor — a Southern Senator who has to have a pro-segregationist appointed to the Supreme Court to assure his own reelection — appeals to him for support.

Torn between his beliefs and his understanding of practical politics, Tynan finds himself turning for comfort to a friend who can only increase his confusion. This is due to the fact that the friend, Karen Traynor (Streep), happens to be a married woman who is interested in something a little more personal than his political clout.

As his strength in the coming Supreme Court conflict grows, and his wife discovers his increasing involvement with Karen, Tynan realizes that it may not be lonely at the top . . . but it definitely isn't simple, either!

Special To Air

Beatrice Straight and Bradford Dillman have been signed to starring roles in "King's Crossing," a 90-minute TV special to air later this season on ABC. Marily Jones, Caniel Zippi, Mary Frann, Linda Hamilton, Doran Clark and Dorothy Meyer are also in the cast.

The story tells how a secret pact made between three young girls affects their lives as teenagers.

"Sweet Sixteen"

Production will begin next month on "Sweet Sixteen," a suspense thriller that centers around a series of murders in a small town in New Mexico.

Diet facts & fallacies

by Linda Tripp

These nutritional tips brought to you by DIET CENTER

For every pound of fat you add to your body, you add somewhere between 200 and 1,000 miles of additional capillaries just to feed the cells in the body. If you take the minimum, 200 miles for each pound, that means that fifteen pounds of excess weight adds an extra 3,000 miles to the distance that blood must be pumped each day. That is equal to the distance from one coast of the United States to the other. That is a tremendous amount of extra, unnecessary work to impose upon your heart.

If you are carrying around an extra ten or fifteen pounds, consider what effect this has on your body and energy level. Diet Center can help you develop a proper diet to keep you at a slim, healthy weight for the rest of your life.

JACLYN SMITH stars as a small-town girl with big-time ideas in "The Users," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, May 5 (12 a.m.) on ABC-TV.

Michelle Will Tell

Q: I am an ardent fan of "General Hospital" and would like to know what's happened to the actor who played Scotty Baldwin? B. WALTERS, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Kin Shriner, who was cast as Scotty, is now co-starring on NBC's "Texas." His character is Jeb Hampton.

Q: Why doesn't the producer of "The Greatest American Hero" let Ralph Hinkley find the instructions to his superhero suit? W. CUMMINGS, FAIRMONT, N.C.

A: Would you watch the show if he did??

Q: I'd like some information about Tom Hanks, one of the stars of "Bosom Buddies." M. RICHARDS, HOPE MILL, N.C.

A: As a self-proclaimed "product of the television generation and a master of TV and movie trivia," it's only natural that Tom Hanks would choose a theatrical career. He's been on stage since his high school days in Oakland, Calif., and has done everything from "lighting to sweeping theater floors" to stay involved with drama. Married to actress Susan Dillingham, Tom has a two-year-old son, Colin, and his main hobby is spending all the time he can with the toddler. He's also a "mean Charade player."

Q: Since Goldie Hawn played the lead in the film version of "Private Benjamin," why isn't she in the series? V. COOPER, FT. BRAGG, N.C.

A: The series' producers would be extremely happy to have Goldie toplining the show, but the talented actress' film career is cooking on the front burner at this time. Naturally, films are considerably more lucrative than TV.

Q: Will "Flamingo Road" be coming back on television? I hope so, because it didn't end right. D. WATKINS, BURGAW, N.C.

A: "Flamingo Road" has gone on hiatus, and whether or not it will return is unknown at this time. It's up to the NBC executives, who should be making a firm decision any day now.

Q: Please tell me something about Kevin Hooks, one of the stars of "The White Shadow." M. HIGH, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Kevin, son of the noted actor Robert Hooks, excelled in a variety of sports while attending high school, but has concentrated on his career since graduation. Although he's appeared in several films and guested on numerous other TV shows, this is his first regular role on a series. He's married and lives a low-profile life in Sherman Oaks, Calif.

New Horizons

World-famed opera star Luciano Pavarotti will be broadcasting his career horizons in the very near future. In June, he's to begin filming his first motion picture, "Yes Giorgio," and he's also been signed to topline a one-hour TV special for ABC, slated to air during the 1982-83 season.

Waite Portrays Priest

Ralph Waite stars in "The Gentleman Bandit," coming to TV on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, May 6 (9-11 p.m.). The drama is based on the true-life experience of Father Bernard Pagano, a socially concerned and occasionally controversial priest, who suddenly finds himself under arrest for a series of stickups of small stores in Delaware.

Waite stars as the priest, and others in the cast are Julie Bovasso, Jerry Zaks, Estelle Parsons and Tom Aldredge.

Father Pagano and his sister, Doris (Bovasso), are astounded by the apparent police mix-up, but their concern soon grows when they learn that a number of the victims are willing to identify the priest as the culprit. Despite the assistance of a razor-sharp lawyer (Zaks) and the moral support of his friends, Pagano's chances in court look bleak. The picture darkens considerably when the press latches on to the sensational headline-making story, and the court insists on grouping all of the cases together. Finally, the diocese turns down Father Pagano's request for assistance.

Waite is himself a former minister. He was ordained in the Presbyterian Church and served with United Church of Christ congregations in Garden City and Fisher's Island in New York.

"Playing some of my scenes in a church, wearing a clerical collar and speaking to parishoners did remind me of my past," Waite said. "I even found myself slipping into ways I had of speaking when I was a minister."

Although Waite shares a clerical background with Father Pagano, he finds a number of differences between himself and the the priest.

"On the most obvious levels, Father Pagano has completely different gestures, movements and way of speaking," said Waite. "I decided not to try to imitate him but to suggest some of these mannerisms."

While Waite has specialized in recent years in playing the ordinary, good man battling against a less-than-perfect system, he has played many other kinds of roles.

23 Celebration

A GALAXY OF STARS from the three networks will be in tough competition when ABC presents "Battle of the Network Stars," Friday, May 8 (9-11 p.m.).

PBS Series Set

Public TV stations have committed $28.2 million, which will be matched by an additional $22.6 million from various underwriters to buy 26 new series and programs.

Stars Compete

Twenty-four major celebrities from television's most popular shows meet in exciting head-to-head athletic competition when ABC presents the tie-breaking tenth edition of "Battle of the Network Stars," Friday, May 8 (9-11 p.m.).

Howard Cosell and Erin Gray will be reporting the action that's to take place at the beautiful Pepperdine University campus, which overlooks the picturesque coastline in Malibu, Calif. John Madden, former coach of the Oakland Raiders, serves as commissioner.

Stars from ABC, CBS and NBC shows have each won three of the nine previous competitions since the series began in 1976. In "Battle X," the teams — consisting of celebrity-athletes from shows on the three networks — compete in eight events: kayak racing, swimming, football, baseball dunk, obstacle course, tandem bicycle race, running relay and tug of war.

Stars of CBS shows: Tom Selleck (captain), Danielle Brisbois, Gregory Harrison, Michele Lee, Leigh McCloskey, Tim Reid, Judy Norton Taylor and Charlene Tilton.

'Splendor' Stars

Eva Marie Saint, Melissa Gilbert and Ned Beatty will star in "Splendor in the Grass," that focuses on life in a small midwestern town in the 1920s. The drama will air on NBC-TV during the upcoming season.

Parallels

Parallels to ponder: Both President Reagan and John Forsythe, star of "Dynasty," began their careers as sportscasters. Both made successful transitions from films to television, and both served as president of the Screen Actors Guild. Maybe it's not too early to stamp out some Forsythe for President buttons.

Silla - Twiki

Felix Silla, a cast member of "Buck Rogers," says the people in his hometown in Italy were very protective of him. At 3'10", Felix is the right size to portray Twiki, the robot, but he has also faced teasing and taunting all his life as a little person.

"Where I grew up, every one was always looking out for me because it was a very small town," said Silla. "I always rode the buses for free."

Strange Is Strange No More

Curtis Strange is one of the tour's younger players, but the 1981 PGA tour has seen him come into his own. He is currently eighth on the PGA money list, and if he keeps going, he will be headed higher.

NBC TV will be carrying the final round of The Houston Open Sunday, May 3 beginning at 2:30 p.m. Don Criqui will be the head announcer.

Last year at the Houston Open, Strange, then 25 shot an overall 266, the best total ever recorded at the Open. It was two strokes better than Wayne Levi's 268 in 1979 and Bob Charles 268 in 1963.

Strange is a product of the golf factory at Wake Forest University. He was an ACC and NCAA champion before he turned professional in 1976. 1980 proved to be his first year as a force on the tour.

In 1980 he took home $271,888 and finished third in the rankings. That was a jump of 18 positions from number 21 in 1979, his previous best year in professional golf.

Strange left Wake Forest in the spring of 1977, and he was marked for pro greatness by everyone who had ever heard of Wake Forest or golf for that matter.

Before Wake Forest, Strange was winning junior tournaments in his native Virginia. Before he applied for the PGA card, he had the Western Amateur and the National Collegiate tournament under his belt.

The Houston Open is a $300,000 tournament being played at the Woodlands Country Club in Woodlands, Tex.

His victory in last year's Open was almost spoiled by one of the hottest players on the tour in 1980 and again in 1981, Lee Trevino. Trevino forced Strange into an extra hole which Strange birdied to pull himself out of a jam.

Strange will be battling a lot of top pros for this year's Houston Open Crown. In addition to Trevino who is on a hot streak, Ray Floyd, Jack Nicklaus, and Tom Watson will all be there, ready to gather in all the laurels.

Winning on the PGA tour is becoming exceedingly tough for everybody, and it is one of the major reasons that it is getting so hard to win consecutive tournaments. The big names of golf are never allowed to have an off day because there will be someone there who is on the top of his game, ready to put him out of the running on the first or second day.

Strange is one of those golfers, one of the young lions. He has had a taste of success and the taste had made him a little hungier. His rise to the top has been fast by most standards, and there is a good chance that once he gets there it will be awhile before he relinquishes his hold.

Mello Yello 300

Defending NASCAR Winston Cup Champion Dale Earnhardt has filed the first entry for the May Mello Yello 300 U.S. Open Sportsman Championship race at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Earnhardt, a veteran of the NASCAR L.M.S. circuit before establishing himself on the Winston Cup Tour, will drive a Pontiac fielded by veteran car builder Robert Gee, of Harrisburg, N.C.

ABC To Telecast

The Hambletonian is a one-mile race for three-year-old fillies, colts and geldings. It is run in heats with a trotter needing victories in two heats to be declared the winner.

HOLLYWOOD — Look for CHRIS ROBINSON's character on "GENERAL HOSPITAL," Dr. Rick Webber, to be eased out of the storyline. Chris has so many film offers that he's asked to be released from the 'soaper' — happily, if possible.

Another daytime fave who's already made his exit is WESLEY EURE, a regular of "DAYS OF OUR LIVES" for the past eight years. Wes wants to try his hand at roles on stage as well as in movies and other TV projects, and is now negotiating with NBC about several possibilities.

Since VICTORIA PRINCIPAL and ANDY GIBB are seriously considering buying a 20-acre spread near Santa Barbara, can a trek down the aisle be far behind???

No sooner did NBC NEWS anchorgal JESSICA SAVITCH divorce her first husband than she tied the knot with hubby No. 2. This one's a physician.

One of Hollywood's most beautiful couples, CONNIE SELLECCA and GIL GERARD, just found out they'll have a visit from the stork before the end of the year. Meanwhile, SUSAN and JEFF BRIDGES are readying their nursery for a mid-June date with the long-legged bird.

JENILEE HARRISON, the newest member of the "THREE'S COMPANY" trio, is spending her hiatus from the series filming a two-hour segment of "THE LOVE BOAT."

Ups And Downs

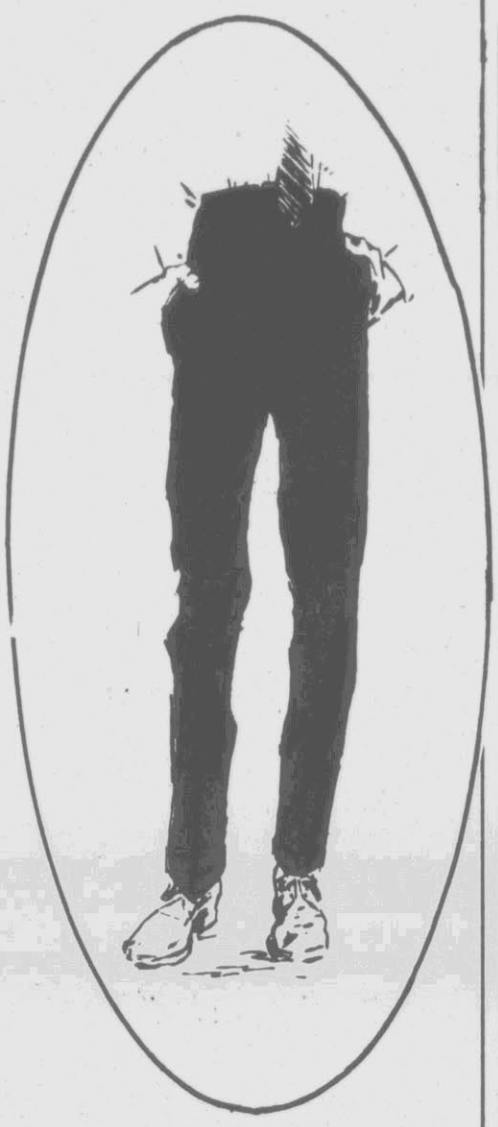

The overall ratings picture for sports-oriented programs on TV is an interesting one. All of ABC's "Superstars" shows are down 25% from a year ago, while "Wide World of Sports" (Saturday and Sunday) is off 12%. CBS' "Sports Spectacular" has dropped 10%.

Meanwhile, CBS' pro basketball is unchanged, NBC's "Sportsworld" is up 15% and that same network's college basketball coverage (on the national level) jumped 17%.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask Them Yourself," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Wide World

For news stories short and pert.

FOR RUPERT MURDOCH, newspaper publisher

In what ways does American journalism differ from that in other parts of the world where you own newspapers; what was the biggest adjustment you had to make in launching into the American newspaper business? —N.R., Odessa, Texas

● Because of the sheer size of American newspapers, American journalists have an opportunity to write at much greater length and detail than in other parts of the world. This sometimes leads to more leisurely and self-indulgent writing. I tried not to adjust. I believed there was a market for a shorter, sharper presentation of the news, and I think the success of the New York Post and my papers in San Antonio have gone some way in proving that there is in fact such a market.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What is the major shortcoming of the press in covering our foreign policy? —D.B., Clearwater, Fla.

● We asked Hodding Carter, former Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs. This is what he had to say: "The chief defect in virtually all coverage is a dearth of perspective and continuity. Each day's events are presented in ways designed to magnify impact and minimize comprehension. We are assaulted by facts and events which are presented as though they had no real connection to the facts and events of yesterday and the day before. Stories are surfaced one day to loud trumpeting of press attention and dropped the next day. The result, too often, is that the reader or viewer is swamped in sensation and slighted on comprehension. Continuity is the name of the foreign-policy game."

How we explain foreign policy

FOR KATHRYN HARROLD, star of Modern Romance

Since this is your first comedy role, did you have trouble making people laugh? —P.G., Redondo, Calif.

● No. My feeling is that most situations do have some element of humor. Even when I play serious parts I try to inject faint comedy into my work. Frankly, I don't think anyone is devoid of humor, even at the worst of times. If you look hard enough, you can find something to smile at in most unpleasant or unhappy experiences. Of course, there are rare exceptions.

FOR REP. MARY ROSE OAKAR (D.-Ohio)

Will we ever see a woman President of the United States? —G.A., Saginaw, Mich.

● Yes — we've failed to elect a woman President partially because our political infrastructures are vastly different from those in India, Norway and Britain where there are women leaders. In any event, there is no question that in today's political arena there are many women in public life who possess capabilities equal to any male political contender.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is Barry Manilow building a music school for poor children? —E.J., Lake Charles, La.

● Some time ago there was a rumor that Barry was about to take possession of an $11-million, 22-room, 11-bathroom Beverly Hills mansion that was used in the Gable and Lombard film. The rumor was groundless, and Barry said, "I'm from Brooklyn. I'd feel uncomfortable there. However, if I ever bought a place that huge, I'd turn it into a music school for kids."

FOR LETITIA BALDRIDGE, etiquette expert

Who are the rudest people you know? —Tom Rich, Denver, Colo.

● The people sitting next to one in a nice restaurant, who speak loudly and pepper their talk with vulgarities and four-letter words. Also people in a position of authority who answer harshly and rudely a question politely asked. People who bump into you without apologizing, and the person who dials your number, realizes it's the wrong one, then hangs up abruptly.

FOR SONIA PETROVNA of TV's The Edge of Night

What nationality are you, and does your "foreign" background make it easier or harder for you to find acting work? —E.S., Evansdale, Iowa

● Although my name is Russian, I'm French. My agent thought I was crazy to come here without being fluent in English. To pay for English lessons, I "waitressed." Because I understood so little, I must have held and lost 20 jobs. Then being "foreign" did not help; now I'm told my accent is charming.

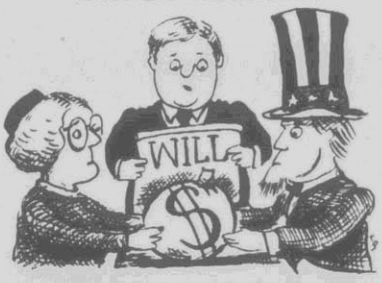

FOR HOWARD B. MARSHALL, D.D.S., author of How to Save Your Teeth

What can parents do to prevent future dental problems in their teen-age children? —M.J., Woodbury, N.J.

● Substitute fruit, vegetables, salad or hamburgers for candy and ice cream. If they crave sweets, urge them to eat them at home, so they can brush and floss after eating. Children should start off by going to a dental office that is prevention-oriented, where they can be taught proper flossing, brushing and good dietary habits.

PRO AND CON

Should the Federal Inheritance Tax Be Reduced?

Question submitted by Jewel DeSoto, Pleasant Hill, CA.

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Senator David L. Boren (D.-Okla.), Finance Committee

Yes. The Federal inheritance tax should be reduced. Ironically, this unfair tax is causing the concentration of economic power which it was supposed to prevent. The small business or farm often has to be sold to a large business to pay the inheritance tax when the head of the family dies. Widows are having to pay tax on what they helped their husbands to accumulate. Americans are already heavily taxed on earnings. Why not let citizens provide for their loved ones without this additional burden?

CON Donald C. Lubick, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for tax policy

No. The function of the Federal Estate Tax in our overall tax system is to assure that those best able to pay their share do so. Income tax does not apply to unrealized property appreciation held until death. Nor does income tax apply to inherited wealth, unlike wealth derived from earnings, dividends and interest. The Federal Estate Tax applies only to the wealthiest 4 to 5 percent of all Americans who die, after generous exemptions, and gives overall balance to the whole system of taxation on the basis of ability to pay.

SILENT DEATH

The Controversy Over Poison Gas Warfare

Bettmann Archive

In only a few hours during World War I, Germans unleashed 168 tons of poison gas, creating 15,000 casualties.

UPI

Soldiers training today: But sometimes there is no defense.

By Ernest Volkman

It was a warm early evening in the mud and trenches of the Ypres salient on April 22, 1915, when the guns suddenly fell silent on the German side. The British, Canadian and French manning the Allied trenches on the other side of the bloody battleground peered curiously over the top.

Then it began.

There was a light, hissing noise from the direction of the German trenches, and a low, greenish mist began to move slowly toward the Allied side. The men who were hit first by the mist were convulsed in agony as chlorine gas tore their lungs apart. Panic-stricken, thousands of soldiers threw down their weapons and fled to the rear, trying to escape the choking gas.

In several hours of horror, unsurpassed in the history of warfare, 168 tons of chlorine were released by the Germans, tearing a four-mile-wide gap in the Allied lines. Over 5,000 men were killed outright, and another 10,000 were blinded or injured.

Poison gas was used for another three years in World War I, but worldwide revulsion over such horrors as that scene in Ypres led to international agreements prohibiting the use of poison gas ever again in warfare. Except for several isolated instances, and despite another world war, the genie of poison gas war has remained capped inside its terrible bottle.

But almost precisely 66 years after that horrible evening in Ypres, a major controversy is now shaping up over whether the United States should fully prepare for chemical and biological warfare, now known as C.B.W. On one side of the argument are those who claim that the Soviet Union has been building a massive C.B.W. capability, far outstripping our country's. But others argue that to begin a C.B.W. race with the Russians is the height of folly and would lead inevitably to the temptation to use such weapons in a war, with incalculable consequences for the human race.

Both sides agree, however, that scientific advances in the past several decades make the events of World War I seem like a Sunday school picnic. For one thing, science has perfected an entire Pandora's box of biological weapons — fatal diseases that can be bred and spread artificially — unheard of during that time. Here is a brief overview of some of the more deadly chemical and biological weapons now in the American arsenal (the Soviets have similar weapons stockpiled):

Gases

The chlorine gas that caused such panic in April, 1915, is crude compared to some of the really frightening gases developed since then.

Nerve Gases: The deadliest of all, nerve gases first affect the eyes, tighten the chest, then cause nausea and uncontrollable twitching — and, finally, death within 30 minutes. The most virulent nerve gas is a type called VX, an odorless and tasteless gas that affects victims in a matter of seconds. Gas masks and other defensive measures (such as rubber decontamination suits) can be effective, but there's no margin for error: Only a few drops of nerve gas on the skin are fatal. Nerve gases can be spread over hundreds of square miles in droplet form.

Blister Gases: First developed during World War I, these gases initially attack the eyes, then the skin, causing huge painful blisters; if inhaled, the gases are lethal. The most virulent blister agent is known as HN3; it has the misleading odor of geranium flowers. Again, gas masks and other protection will help, but if blister gases hit any exposed part of the body, the effects are horribly painful.

Harassing Gases: Anyone who has ever gotten a whiff of tear gas — considered a mild harassing gas — knows how nasty these gases can be. While they are not designed to kill, their effects — coughing, sneezing and nausea — leave victims incapacitated. The most horrible of such gases is a type called CS, for which there is no known defense, since it attacks a human's mucous membranes. Spread in large clouds, harassing gases can incapacitate the most powerful army in minutes.

Incapacitant Gases: These are the most modern gases, and they seem like something out of Buck Rogers. In effect, they are massive doses of hallucinatory drugs. The most virulent such agent, for example, is called BZ. Capable of being sprayed over thousands of miles in mist form, it slows all mental activity, then induces disorientation and hallucinations. Its victims can literally be driven insane. There is no known defense against such gases, which are odorless and invisible.

Germ Warfare

Even more dangerous than the above gases are the assorted "biological agents," as they are known in Pentagonese. Actually, they are germ warfare weapons, virulent diseases that can be produced in prodigious amounts and then spread over thousands of square miles by virtually any means.

Pasteurella Pestis: The most lethal bacterium known to man, it causes pneumonic plague — known as the Black Death during the Middle Ages. It kills 100 percent of its untreated victims and strikes with such extraordinary speed that doctors often get their first clue of its presence when the patient dies.

Rickettsias: These are tiny microorganisms that, among other diseases, cause typhus, a dreaded fever that once infected and exterminated an entire Spanish army of 17,000 men in 1489. Spread by infected body lice, typhus is prevented only by killing the microorganisms.

Pulmonary Anthrax: Known also as woolsorter's disease, pulmonary anthrax infects the lungs and is not detectable until after a raging fever has begun. Resistant to all known modern antibiotics, victims face certain death in less than 24 hours.

Clostridium Botulinum: An anaerobic bacterium, it is the most powerful poison ever known to man — just an ounce will exterminate the entire population of France or a similar-sized area in a matter of a few hours. Over 300-million times more powerful than cyanide, clostridium botulinum takes its poisonous form as botulism toxin, which causes botulism, one of mankind's ancient enemies. Once spread, there is no defense against the disease, even with mass inoculations.

These gases and germs and their nearly incalculable effects form an astounding series of horrors undreamed of even by the most imaginative science-fiction writer. They underscore why a debate just now beginning in Congress has aroused strong feelings on both sides of the issue.

Simply, as part of President Reagan's record defense-budget increases, the Army wants about $20 million to begin construction of a plant in Arkansas for the building of something called the binary munitions system. But as everybody connected with the debate understands, the Army request has far more significance than a simple request for money to build a new artillery shell system.

In fact, the binary system represents one of the most ominous scientific developments in the decades-long scientific search for bigger and better C.B.W. weapons.

The binary is deceptively simple: A 155-millimeter artillery shell warhead is divided into two chambers. In one design, the first chamber contains a chemical called methyl phosphonyl flouride, the second another chemical called sopropanol, plus a chemical "promoter." In that state, the chemicals are relatively harmless. But after the shell is fired, the wall separating the two chambers ruptures, and the chemicals unite — forming GB/Sarin, a deadly nerve gas.

The advantage of this deceptively simple development is that it eliminates the major problem of current C.B.W. warfare: stockpile deterioration. Even when encased in steel, these substances, especially the gases, begin to deteriorate, and many of their casings are prone to leakage. Binary shells, then, can be produced in large quantities and be stored for much longer periods. At the same time, it is clear that binaries make it that much more tempting to use C.B.W. in the event of war.

It is precisely that fear which has led a coalition of Congressional opponents to the binary request to demand that the whole plan be scrapped and that the U.S. pursue arms-control agreements with the Russians on C.B.W. weapons, rather than begin a full-scale C.B.W. arms race. Among other things, they argue, the Russians, confronted with an American binary system, will simply build one of their own, setting off a reaction-counterreaction cycle to develop stockpiles and weapons even more dangerous than nuclear weapons.

Senator David Pryor, the Arkansas Democrat, a leading opponent of the Reagan Administration's plan to build up America's C.B.W. arsenal, notes that former Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, while both were in office, strongly opposed plans to start building binary C.B.W. weapons. Moreover, argues Pryor, such a buildup would reverse at least a decade of official U.S. Government unwillingness to get into the C.B.W. business in a big way. "We've stored over 150,000 tons of C.B.W. weapons," Pryor says. "We have no space even to store what we now have, much less all the new stockpiles they're proposing; our allies will not allow us to store it on their territory. We're committing ourselves to a $4-billion program down the road."

Supporters of the binary plan concede that it is only a down payment on a multibillion-dollar program for a C.B.W. buildup but claim that such a buildup is long overdue. Democratic Congressman Richard Ichord of Missouri, a leading Congressional proponent of the binary, says that Pryor's figures are misleading.

"The facts are these," Ichord argues. "Our allegedly 'enormous' stockpile comprises 730,000 rounds of unusable chemical munitions that are either obsolete or deteriorating, cannot be repaired and are in storage awaiting destruction. We now have only 25 percent of our [C.B.W.] needs, according to the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

However, the real spur to the Pentagon's drive for a C.B.W. buildup has little to do with the wish to replace aging stockpiles. In fact, it has much more to do with what they perceive as a growing "C.B.W. gap" between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

One biological weapon stockpiled in both the United States and Russia contains the bacteria for pneumonic plague. It kills 100 percent of its untreated victims.

According to the Pentagon, the Russians have 35 times as many personnel (100,000 men) trained in the use of chemical weapons, eight times as great a chemical munitions inventory, five times as many ground chemical (and bacteriological) delivery systems — vapor dispensers and the like — and 14 more C.B.W. production facilities. In the past 10 years, the Pentagon says, the Soviets have deployed two new artillery pieces and a rocket launcher specifically designed to fire C.B.W. weapons. Moreover, Russian troops, in Europe especially, have stepped up their training in C.B.W. warfare. Combined with reports of the Soviet use of poison gas in Afghanistan — U.S. intelligence officials say the reports are incorrect — there is something of a minor panic inside the Pentagon on the subject of C.B.W.

Actually, for nearly 12 years, American C.B.W. has been in limbo. In 1969 President Nixon unilaterally renounced first use of biologic weapons and ordered all such existing stockpiles destroyed (but he permitted research and stockpiling of "defensive" C.B.W. weapons, a sometimes slippery definition). Nixon also ordered sharp reductions in U.S. chemical munition stockpiles.

To a certain extent, Nixon was reacting to growing public disquiet over the stockpiling of C.B.W. weapons — and, more significantly, the continuing testing of such weapons. Public concern came to a peak on March 13, 1968, when a plane dropping liquid forms of VX nerve gas during a test at the Army's Dugway Proving Grounds in Utah made a mistake and sprayed an area outside the facility. In an episode that sent nearly the entire state of Utah into mass hysteria, almost 7,000 sheep on ranches up to 45 miles away suddenly died of a strange ailment caused by the gas. Miraculously, no humans died, but Utah officials began to ask pointed questions.

Worse, the Army since then has admitted to carrying out at least 200 secret tests throughout the country on various biological weapons during the years 1949 to 1968. These tests included one in San Francisco that killed a hospital patient and another in Alabama that caused an outbreak of pneumonia.

While the American C.B.W. program stayed in limbo, intermittent arms-limitation talks with the Soviet Union began in Geneva, Switzerland, to work out an agreement restricting the size of both countries' stockpiles and stop the development of even more horrible weapons. Thus far, the talks have failed, mainly over the sticky points over which gases to include (the Russians want such things as tear gas and CS gas included), and the question of on-site inspection (the Russians are violently opposed to that).

Therefore, Russian laboratories and chemical plants continue to churn out bigger and bigger stockpiles, and now six C.B.W. centers in this country are poised to begin their own buildup.

Whether the projected buildup of the American C.B.W. arsenal will, as its proponents claim, act as a deterrent to any Soviet plan to unleash such horrors against this country remains to be seen. One thing is clear: The effects of such a war are so horrible as to be clearly unthinkable.

Interestingly, history's most prominent victims of C.B.W. warfare were native Americans: During the French and Indian War, the British, angered at Indian support of the French side, decided to eliminate that problem in one swoop. They arranged to give the Indians blankets — each one of which was infected with smallpox germs. The Indians, to whom smallpox was unknown, had no immunity and died by the hundreds.

Innocent victims: In 1968 an Army plane accidentally sprayed nerve gas over ranches in Utah, killing 7,000 sheep.

Observations

Trumpet fan fare. Thousands of letters–that's what you've sent us in the 10 years of "Masterpiece Theatre." And the one thing you've asked most is, "What's that distinctive theme music, and who wrote it?" It's an 18th century fanfare, a "rondeau" by the French composer Jean-Joseph Mouret. Now, a question for you: What has been the most popular program? You guessed it: Upstairs, Downstairs. In response to your "fan" fare, we're bringing back some of Upstairs, Downstairs and three other tempting dishes in Festival of Favorites–a sample of the best of "Masterpiece Theatre." You'll find them served up (naturally!) on the Public Broadcasting Service (check local listings).

Recipe for love. The feast begins tonight, May 3, with The Golden Bowl, a delicious treat from master storyteller Henry James. Take a billionaire who buys his daughter a penniless prince for a husband, then himself marries the former lover of his new son-in-law. Season it with suspicion, add a dash of suspense, and you've got romantic smorgasbord à la James, expertly concocted for TV.

Tangy tale. Next: lecherous old men and greedy young mistresses, viciousness and comedy, manners and morals...all in a bawdy Gallic stew called Cousin Bette, which begins June 14. Adapted from a novel by "the Dickens of France," Honoré de Balzac, it's the story of a bitter spinster who plots to destroy her relatives. But see who ends up getting cooked.

Tea and company. What's London's most famous address? The Prime Minister's at 10 Downing Street? The bachelor digs of Sherlock Holmes at 221-B Baker Street? Rivaling these is 165 Eaton Place, the elegant townhouse known to millions around the world as the home of the aristocratic Bellamys upstairs and their servants Hudson, Mrs. Bridges, and Rose downstairs. And for five weeks, beginning July 19, you're invited to drop in for tea–and good company–with the entire Upstairs, Downstairs household, whose wit and charm won seven Emmy Awards and prompted one critic to hail the series simply as "too good to miss."

Scotch broth. Then north to the Scottish Highlands...and high drama. The show is a clannish brew called Sunset Song, a love story suffused with the bitter taste of World War I. You'll find it starting August 23. But watch the calendar for all of Festival of Favorites. We guarantee you'll enjoy them, from "bon appétit" to the final "bonny good time!"

It's a fact: Danger UXB is the new hit of "Masterpiece Theatre" –enjoyed by seven million people in a single week.

THE PRESS

The Changing

Newspapers in the year 2000 may be technologically more sophisticated, but commitment to community will still be their main strength.

By Katharine Graham

In May of 1732, Benjamin Franklin was just closing an edition of his newspaper, the Pennsylvania Gazette, when a friend returned from a trip into the Allegheny Mountains. "Pick up any news?" asked Franklin. The friend related how he had seen Indians go to a high hill, build a fire from wet pine and, using a blanket, send smoke signals to Indians on the other side of the valley. "What on earth were they doing?" asked Franklin. The friend told him they were using the smoke signals to send news to each other. "News!" exclaimed Franklin. "Why this is going to kill newspapers."

That apocryphal story, related years ago by J. Montgomery Curtis, the long-time executive director of the American Press Institute, has been matched over the past two centuries by any number of serious predictions that the end is near for newspapers. Newsreels, radio and television were all supposed to render the newspaper extinct, and similar predictions are now accompanying the arrival of the new electronic media.

Yet despite the proliferation of communications technologies in recent decades, more copies of morning newspapers were sold each day in America last year than ever before. The number of copies of Sunday newspapers being read is also at an all-time high.

One explanation may lie in the fact that newspapers in America provide more information today than ever before. Last year, daily newspapers averaged a record 70 pages for morning editions and 207 pages on Sundays — a far cry from the thin newspapers of the 1920's and 1930's. Some backbreakers like Sunday editions of The Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times are twice that size.

But what about the "electronic newspapers" that are being predicted? Is it true that when you sit down at the breakfast table in 1990, you will read about the previous night's baseball games on a video screen rather than on the printed page? Experiments already underway in a growing number of cities enable people armed with computer keyboards to call up news, sports results, airline schedules and advertising on their television screens. Some experts predict that as many as one-quarter of all American homes will be hooked up with electronic terminals by 1990. Will this render printed newspapers obsolete?

All the available information to date indicates otherwise. Most of us are not used to paying a rather stiff price for small bits of information. Are we going to be eager to pay $4 or $5 an hour — about the going rate — to read information on a screen that is available in printed form for 25 cents daily, or, at most, $1 on Sunday?

The price level of home terminals is another obstacle. The basic terminal that connects to your television set presently sells for $400. Obviously, the price is likely to come down sharply in the years ahead. But it will still be necessary to buy a piece of electronic equipment to receive information this way. And unlike today's newspaper — which lets you parcel out the sports section, the metropolitan news section, the comics, and magazines like FAMILY WEEKLY to various members of the family — the electronic newspaper can serve only one person at a time. It cannot easily be carried to the bathroom or be taken along to be read on the bus.

The great strength of newspapers, moreover, is their ability to organize and present large amounts of information that help the readers understand — and come to grips with — the increasingly complex issues facing our society. The current economic problems of our nation do not lend themselves to 45-second or 200-word explanations. That is why newspapers continue to flourish in the face of competition from radio and television.

Financier Felix Rohatyn, in a recent television interview, went so far as to credit newspapers with making it possible for New York City to extricate itself from the financial crisis it faced in the late 1970's.

"I think television is a very difficult medium for a politician to explain a very complicated problem to lots of

American Newspaper

The electronic newspaper of the future may be a lot of fun, but how does everyone get the section he wants when he wants it?

people," Rohatyn said. "Without the written press, I think New York City would have gone bankrupt. Because every day, people in the city could read and understand what was happening to them. And they supported the politicians in the difficult decisions that had to be made."

But if newspapers are to be as vital to Americans in the year 2000 as they are today, they are going to have to keep changing with the times. Already, newspapers are taking advantage of the many technologies — computer composition, laser plate-making, satellite transmission — to produce more attractive papers containing later news and photos.

Not all of the changes happening today are technological. Newspaper reporters and editors — the men and women who gather and explain the news — are better educated today than ever before, and this trend will certainly accelerate. A growing number of reporters working for newspapers are highly trained specialists — doctors, lawyers, economists — who are better equipped than their predecessors to understand complex subjects and explain them clearly and lucidly.

In an increasingly interdependent world, newspapers also must do a better job of explaining and interpreting other societies and cultures. Newspapers that two decades ago relied almost entirely for international coverage on the two major wire services, the Associated Press and United Press International, today have access to the reports of foreign correspondents of a number of major newspapers. If we are to live together in peace, it is imperative that we understand the problems, hopes and concerns of the people of the developing world, as well as hear about their coups, earthquakes and tidal waves.

Even as newspapers improve their coverage of complex national and international issues, however, they will — both by inclination and because technology makes it increasingly possible — strengthen their coverage of their communities. Computers and more sophisticated pressroom equipment are giving newspapers an ability to "zone" their coverage as never before, tailoring pages or sections to the specific information needs of neighborhoods and communities.

The small weekly newspaper in the tiny town of Wink, Texas, The Wink Bulletin, proudly proclaims itself atop page one: "The only newspaper in the world that cares anything about Wink." I view this as the underlying source of strength of all newspapers. The men and women who work for newspapers care about their communities in a unique and personal way.

That commitment — a desire not just to inform readers about what is going on in their community, the nation and the world, but also to help them understand so that they can make the kind of decisions required of the citizenry — is and will remain the unique strength of newspapers. Newspapers truly are, as one of Ben Franklin's contemporaries, Thomas Jefferson, actually said of the press in 1823, "the best instrument for enlightening the mind of man." FW

PEOPLE QUIZ

Anxiety – Can You Make It Work for You?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Whether everyday living and striving keep you anxious or whether you roll with the punches is likely to depend on how your life style corresponds with what you truly believe.

2. Many men feel anxiety when meeting women for the first time. The best way to reduce this tension is to reduce the desire to create a good impression.

3. Short-time sleepers tend to be tense about daily affairs.

4. Anxiety can be beneficial.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies conducted by Middle Tennessee State University investigators indicate that the person who lives his beliefs — his religion or philosophy of life — is more secure, more self-sufficient and less anxious than the individual whose life does not match his deepest convictions.

2. True. A team of University of Missouri behavioral scientists tested ways and means of reducing this form of anxiety which afflicts many men to such an extent that they are not at their best when they would very much like to be (they try too hard). Male undergraduates were asked to indicate how tense they were when interacting with attractive females they might like to date. Each subject had a series of interactions with an attractive female. Prior to each occasion, subjects were given different instructions on how to best handle themselves or what to think of during the interaction. By far, the most effective formula to reduce tension and make the encounter the most enjoyable, was the instruction to relax and "treat a female as you would a close friend."

3. True. A San Jose State University (Calif.) study in which long- and short-sleeping college students were tested by using a battery of anxiety tests examined the validity of this belief. Results: "Short-sleepers showed significantly higher levels of test anxiety." Consensus of the findings suggests that the short-sleepers use their high activity as a defense against their problems, particularly those related to their jobs. It was found that any event which posed a threat to the stability of their work situation provoked anxiety.

4. True. Johns Hopkins University studies show that anxiety heightens a person's alertness and increasingly focuses attention on a particular task and that anxiety plays an important role in forming social relationships. FW

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

STRINGING ALONG

I started on a shoestring,
I very often say,
In fact an old, not new string,
Back in that early day.

And now, as I've been faring
To slightly higher places,
The shoes that I am wearing
Slip on, and have no laces.

Indeed, shoes cost so much now,
Still higher each new shipment,
A lace would be, if such now,

"Million Dollar" Zoysia Lawn! Water Once! Never Needs Watering Again!

FREE UP TO 900 PLUGS!

Lakeland's Famous 30-Below-Zero Zoysia Takes Wear, Tear, Cookouts, Children's Games . . . After 30 Below Zero Winters, It Bounces Back Green, Thick, And Beautiful! Closest Thing To An Indestructible Lawn You Have Ever Seen!

Zoysia Lawn Wasn't Mowed For A Month! Not A Weed In Sight!

By Mike Senkiw, Agronomist, Lakeland Nurseries

If your family is like mine, you're squeezing every dollar to make sure you have enough to go around. And it looks like things are going to stay that way.

One way to cut expenses is to cut the costs, and work, of lawn care. For example, a woman wrote about her zoysia lawn that she had mowed it only twice ALL SUMMER. She hadn't spent a cent on weed-killers. Not one cent for fertilizers. Yet her lawn was as green and weed-free as a pile carpet.

ZOSYIA LAWNS STAY GREEN THROUGH HEAT AND DROUGHTS

Let the scorching sun burn lawns around you into hay—your zoysia stays fresh and green, an emerald isle of beauty. I have yet to water my own zoysia lawn. One day I saw that my sprinkler had gotten cobwebs! In Iowa, a zoysia lawn was declared the area's "Top Lawn—nearly perfect." Yet this lawn had been watered only once that entire summer!

CUT YOUR WATER BILLS. SAVE THE WORK OF LAWN SPRINKLING. START A FAMOUS ZOYSIA GRASS LAWN NOW.

Weed-killing chemicals are NOT NEEDED for a weed-free Famous® Zoysia Lawn

How is it possible that Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia stays weed-free without using expensive, risky chemicals? It grows so thick that crabgrass (weed) seeds don't get enough light to germinate!

Has Cut Mowing To Once A Month

Zoysia grows sideways, not just up like ordinary grass. It forms a thick, interwoven carpet of turf that keeps its well-groomed look weeks longer. It cuts your mowing by half, 2/3 or more!

No-Reseeding—Not Ever!—With Lakeland's Famous® Zoysia

Plug in Lakeland Zoysia and never buy grass seed again. Zoysia lawns don't grow old; they just grow better. They sparkle under 100° heat . . . stay green through droughts. They resist diseases and insects which ruin ordinary grasses. After sharp frosts, they only give up their green color, then green up better than ever each following Spring. Famous Zoysia gives you the closest thing to an indestructible lawn you have ever seen.

Ends Washouts on Steep Slopes Perfect Where Other Grasses Do Poorly

Deep-rooted zoysia holds soil in place, stops it from washing away from slopes. It's your perfect answer for worn out or weedy areas, too.

In a typical newspaper article I read (quote):

NO NEED TO DIG UP YOUR LAWN
PLUG IN Z 52 ZOYSIA

"upgrading your current lawn" requires the right selection of grass seed plus "regular applications of fertilizer (and lime where needed)." This article also said you need, "weed, insect and disease control." Sound familiar? Of course!

Why not forget all that work and expense, and plug in Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia? To upgrade your lawn with zoysia, don't dig it up. Just set plugs into holes in the soil a foot apart or less. Let those plugs spread toward each other ao form a carpet of solid turf. Growth is so vigorous it chokes out old growth you want to get rid of, WEEDS INCLUDED.

From Coast to Coast People Write to Mike Senkiw

From Hudson, N.Y., E. LaRoche writes how he planted plugs "in the worst possible place—clay with weeds and gravel . . . It formed a 4" thick carpet of grass. Not children, dogs, cats, rabbits, extremely hot sun or drought could kill it."

From Sacramento, Calif., Jack Morse writes how he bought our Zoysia "for a weed infested spot—it took care of the problem."

From Indiana, M.A. Low, Sr. writes how he visited a physician friend in Albert Lea, Minn. where he saw a "whole back yard was entirely in zoysia and it was beautiful...a deep green."

The success of many thousands of delighted Famous® Zoysia owners awaits you. Prove it to yourself today.

"Same Day Fresh"

The day we cut your plugs is the day they are on their way to you. Because freshness counts, Lakeland has 2 shipping points, one in the Midwest and one in the East. Your plugs go out form the nearest point "Same Day Fresh" and ready to grow, shipping charge collection the most economical way. On credit card orders, the shipping cost will be prepaid by us and billed to your account.

Poor Soil? No Problem!

Our Famous Zoysia plugs are so vigorous we guarantee them to grow whatever your soil—from heavy clays to sandy sub-soils. You cannot lose.

Lakeland's Total Guarantee

- Drought Won't Kill It
- Heat Won't Kill It
- Cold Won't Kill It
- Disease Won't Kill It

Even though we don't know your soil, we guarantee EVERY plug of Famous Z-52 Zoysia to live and grow in it. No ifs. No buts. Should any plugs fail to grow, just let us know within 60 days. We replace them FREE. That guarantee clearly means that Famous Zoysia has to do everything we say — and more! Otherwise there's no way we could give you such unique protection.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by the U.S. Govt. and released in cooperation with the U.S. Golf Association.

IT'S SO EASY AND INEXPENSIVE TO START A MAGNIFICENT ZOYSIA LAWN

Start your own magnificent, perennial zoysia lawn with as few as 100 plugs. Just let your plugs establish solid turf. Then take up transplants and plug in other places to your heart's desire. Plugged areas grow right back into solid turf. Your supply of plugs is endless.

Prices and Bargains

If you plant more grass that sits there and struggles—or dies on you—you may not miss your work and money. It's the time you cannot recover! So please don't confuse Lakeland's 30-Below-Zero Zoysia with any ordinary turf offered as a "bargain." If our plugs cost a little more in the beginning, they remain, in the long run, the only true bargain for your lawn.

Order guaranteed Famous®

zoysia plugs now, for delivery from our nearest shipping point. Your order will be sent at the earliest proper time to plant in your area.

HOPE COOKE

An Ex-Queen Searches for Solitude

By Jane Howard

SHE MISSES CHEESE, MEAT, THE TIMES AND THE SEA", said the headline of an article I wrote about Hope Cooke for Life magazine in 1966. Hope, then 25, was gyalmo or queen of the tiny Himalayan realm of Sikkim, just north of India and south of China.

Alice Kandell; Inset: Sigrid Estrada

Queen for a decade: Hope Cooke (above) at the coronation of her husband as ruler of Sikkim in 1965 and today, on her own.

A lot has changed, to put it mildly, in the intervening 16 years. Sikkim is no longer a country: India annexed it, after a bitter struggle, in 1975. Hope, who turned 40 last June, is no longer a wife or an expatriate, let alone a queen. She and her two teen-age children can look at the East River (if not quite the sea) from their New York City apartment, which is an easy walk to several sources of cheeseburgers and this morning's New York Times.

What happened in those intervening years is described in Hope's recently published book, Time Change: An Autobiography (Simon and Schuster).

Its author first met Sikkim's widowed Crown Prince, Palden Thondup Namgyal, in Darjeeling, India, on a vacation from Sarah Lawrence College. Their romance, famously glamorous though it was, was not her life's first drama. Her parents were divorced by the time she was 2. Her mother was killed soon afterward in an apparently suicidal plane crash. Her aristocratic grandparents left Hope in the care of a succession of governesses, one of whom beat her with coat hangers. When the grandparents died, Hope became the ward of a diplomat uncle, and she spent most of her adolescence in the United States Embassy in Teheran, acquiring a taste for the East.

"She and her husband exchange frequent fond looks and are obviously a happily matched pair," I wrote in Life. Now Time Change tells another story. They were happy sometimes, of course. Recalls Hope: "There was a great sense of community life. Everyone was striving for the same thing: Sikkim's development."

But there were problems, too. Other women fancied handsome Palden — and not always in vain. Hope had to put up with his ill-concealed philandering, his large, complicated family and increasing public attack. "I felt so isolated," she says today.

Hope diverted herself with projects involving crafts, fashions and local schools, but things grew worse. When Indian troops amassed in Sikkim's capital in 1973, squelching all visions of national independence, she decided her children should be put in school in New York...and she would take them there. Before they departed, she prayed that the family would always be together — but that prayer was not answered.

Hope decided to stay in New York, and her children now see their father only periodically. She was "tremendously torn" at first between New York and Sikkim, but finally she decided that "it would be too horrible to leave them here and go back without them to all that suspicion and violence."

Instead, she established a new — though somewhat reclusive — routine, going faithfully to the neighborhood library to work on Time Change.

Divorced now, on "wonderful" terms with her ex-husband, Hope has been getting less regal all the time, and also less reclusive. She and her children like to visit street fairs and go on picnics. "We also like to travel together," Hope says, "especially when it's on an overnight train."

Hope is also at work on her next book. As readers of Time Change are finding, she is a writer of promise and grace. FW

FOOD

BOOKS AND COOKS

By Marilyn Hansen

There is a sassy 'n' smart new cookbook at the bookstores around the country that is making sales headlines. It's Betty Crocker's International Cookbook (Random House).

This book is the first major all-new cookbook from the Betty Crocker Kitchens since 1950, when the first edition of the now famed and familiar red Betty Crocker Cookbook appeared.

CUBAN BLACK BEANS

Braised black beans are a staple food in the country cooking of Cuba and other islands of the Caribbean. Often they are served over rice and accompanied by a tossed green salad for a simple meatless main dish.

2 cups water
6 ozs. dry black beans (about 1 cup)
1 small green pepper, chopped
1 small onion, sliced
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
1 tablespoon olive or vegetable oil
1 bay leaf
¾ teaspoon crushed dried oregano leaves
½ teaspoon ground cumin
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
2 cups hot cooked rice

1. Heat water and beans to boiling in 3-quart saucepan; boil 2 minutes. Remove from heat; cover and let stand 1 hour.

2. Cook and stir green pepper, onion and garlic in oil until onion is tender; stir into beans. Add enough water to cover beans if necessary. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Stir in bay leaf, oregano, cumin, salt and pepper. Cover and simmer until beans are tender and most of the liquid is absorbed, 1½ to 2 hours. Remove bay leaf. Serve over rice.

Makes 4 servings

YUGOSLAVIAN COFFEECAKE

These snail-shaped coffeecakes are easy to make and can be filled with a variety of tasty mixtures. The Walnut Filling included in our recipe is especially pleasing to the palate.

1 pkg. active dry yeast
¼ cup warm water (105°F. to 115°F.)
¾ cup lukewarm milk (scalded, then cooled)
½ cup margarine or butter, softened
3 eggs
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
4½ to 5 cups all-purpose flour
Walnut Filling (recipe follows)
Glaze*

1. Dissolve yeast in warm water in large bowl. Stir in milk, margarine, eggs, sugar, salt and 3 cups of the flour. Beat until smooth. Stir in enough remaining flour to make dough easy to handle.

2. Turn dough into lightly floured surface; knead until smooth and elastic, about 5 minutes. Place in greased bowl; turn greased side up. Cover; let rise in warm place until double, 1 to 1½ hours. (Dough is ready if indentation remains when touched.)

3. Punch down dough; divide into halves. Roll each half into rectangle, 15 × 12 inches, on lightly floured surface. Spread half the filling over each rectangle. Roll up tightly, beginning at 15-inch side. Pinch edge of dough into roll to seal well. Stretch roll to make even.

4. With sealed edges down, coil into snail shapes on lightly greased cookie sheets. Cover; let rise until double, about 1 hour. Heat oven to 350°F. Bake until golden brown, 35 to 45 minutes. Brush with margarine if desired; spread with Glaze. Makes 2 coffeecakes

Walnut Filling

2½ cups finely chopped walnuts
1 cup packed brown sugar
½ cup margarine or butter, softened
1 egg
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon

1. Mix all ingredients.

Glaze

Mix 1 cup powdered sugar and 1 to 2 tablespoons water until smooth and of desired consistency.

Ex-Quarterback Jack Kemp: Scrambling for Power

UPI

Upwardly mobile: Does Kemp's political game plan chart a campaign for governor of New York or the U.S. Senate in 1982?

By Jane Nevins

Seated on the leather sofa in his office, Congressman Jack Kemp of New York is restless, crossing one leg then the other, shifting, throwing his arms back. Abruptly, he leans forward, toying with the tape recorder, unconsciously scratching a fingernail across the face of the microphone.

His words come in a hard flood. He drills ideas home like the football he once hurled as quarterback, leading the Buffalo Bills to championship twice in the 1960's. Now competitive excitement infuses a political monologue, and he exudes a controlled energy, a mixture of discipline and aggression, reflection and daring.

In his sixth term in Congress, Kemp is at the heart of a fierce scramble in a different kind of championship: a playoff of ideas on a churned-up political field, under a scoreboard labeled "economic recovery." For quarterbacking his side to victory, his fans hope his reward may some day be the Presidency.

The handsome Congressman's reputation has spread far and wide among grass-roots conservatives, who lit a small Kemp-fire to make him the Vice Presidential choice in the 1980 Republican convention. He has written a book, An American Renaissance, setting out his economic theories and has been elected chairman of the House Republican Conference, a major leadership office. He is President Reagan's closest collaborator in the House on tax policy.

At 45, Kemp is a heady distance from his native California, where he began a 13-year career in the American Football League following graduation from Occidental College in Los Angeles.

In the early 60's he was traded to Buffalo, and then in 1970, when his career with the Bills was "on the sunset side," Kemp heeded the urgings of upstate New York Republicans and ran for Congress.

His wife, Joanne, the attractive, blond mother of his four children, is amazed at the glare of publicity. "It's remarkable how the power of a right idea catches on," she says. "Jack is advocating a common-sense economics that somehow has not been articulated before."

Despite the intoxicating excitement, Kemp carefully shields his home life from the disruptions of Washington's political activity. He avoids the capital's cocktail circuit, prefering to bring colleagues and advisers home to talk issues at leisure. He tries to keep outside demands to a minimum in the evenings and on weekends.

"Our socializing revolves around the home because I like to eat with my children," Kemp says, adding, "I really need children."

Two of the Kemps's children, Judith, 15, and James, 9, live at home with them in their Bethesda, Md., residence. Jeffrey, 20, is a senior (and quarterback on the football team) at Dartmouth, while Jennifer, 18, is a freshman at Miami University of Ohio.

Congressman Henson Moore of Louisiana, a close friend and neighbor, says an evening with the Kemps is "stimulating in a relaxed atmosphere. Joanne is a wonderful hostess,

Remarks Kemp, "Without trying to ound like I'm wearing it on my leeve, I think there is a time for pri-rities." The dinner table talk is likely o be about the economy, and young-sters visiting Kemp's children may go ome instructed on productivity. Kemp also makes certain he attends James' soccer matches and last year managed to see every Dartmouth football game to cheer for Jeffrey.

The ideas that have brought Kemp prominence reached him in 1974, when a young academic and former Wall Street Journal editorial writer named Jude Wanniski introduced Kemp to Arthur Laffer, a conservative economist. The message they wanted him to hear was a modern version of an old theory that Laffer called "supply-side economics."

Wide World

Kemp had been convinced for some time that the American economy was falling through cracks in obsolete New Deal policies, and he immersed himself in the supply-side idea. It is, greatly simplified, that taxes discourage people from working, and deep cuts in tax rates will lift individual expectations and cause an expansion of production. More productivity helps restore the money the Government loses in the tax cut, and, with deregulation and a stable money supply, will reduce inflation, the theory holds.

In 1978 Kemp honed those ideas into a three-year, 30-percent tax-cut bill, co-sponsored by Delaware Senator William Roth. The Kemp-Roth bill failed narrowly in Congress, but the work that went into it was not lost. Kemp had spoken on its behalf in hundreds of cities, and Kemp-Roth had become the official Republican Party policy on taxation. Most important, it won the heart of Ronald Reagan, who was no stranger to the concept — he had studied it in college in the 1920's.

When the President submitted his tax proposals to Congress this past winter, they included the comeback of Kemp-Roth. Now its very progress is the source of a dilemma for Kemp. Explains Congressman Moore: "It's become so identified with Jack and Republicans, [that] Democrats can't or won't bring themselves to decide, and the problem is the bill finding itself in law as though it was discovered by the Democrats."

At first it seemed enough to erase the Kemp-Roth label and refer exclusively to the "Reagan tax plan," which Kemp unhesitatingly does, in hope that Democrats will be cautious of flouting the President's public support.

But the Democrats have gone back to calling the tax cut "Kemp-Roth" and are making public predictions that it will never pass. At the same time, they have proposed a rival bill — also based on supply-side economics.

Kemp is amused and worried by turns. The Democrats, he expects, will try to cut taxes selectively for business and investment, rather than across-the-board. He says he will urge the President to veto the bill if it emerges from Congress with only a one-year tax cut because "you can't get America back to work by being cautious or timid."

Kemp talks in great passionate runs, a product of his obsessive study of economics. He adds with a punch of the fist, "It's a fascinating time to be at the center of action!"

The pressure, though, is showing on Kemp. In March, he blew up on public broadcasting's MacNeil/Lehrer Report, lambasting a startled reporter from the staidly neutral Congressional Quarterly during a discussion of the cuts. Later, he apologized profusely and publicly, explaining that he'd been "feeling kind of beleaguered."

"Jack is in the eye of the storm — right at the red-hot point — and he's stretched out," Wanniski says.

The talk of his personal future increases Kemp's edginess. He knows it can inflame the atmosphere as the tax-writing committee gets down to work.

Turning aside the question of higher office, he says, "If we don't change the economy and we end up like Margaret Thatcher, bringing more pain and austerity, I don't think I'll have a future, so why worry about what race I'll be interested in in 1982 or '84."

But Washington handicappers are already happily running off tout sheets pointing to a strategy that has Kemp running for New York governor in 1982 or for the Senate seat of New York's Daniel Patrick Moynihan, whom some consider "beatable." Either job, the reasoning goes, could give Kemp solid national structure — and make him hard to stop in a Presidential bid. FW

EDUCATION

How to Do Your Best on a Test

By Melanie C. Stevens

Whether the test you're facing is a college history exam or the last hurdle in a business course that will help you get ahead on your job, you want to do your very best. And if you've ever flubbed a test when you knew the material, you know that there's more to taking a test than meets the eye. Here's how to bring home an "A."

Studying — The Right Way: The best possible preparation, of course, is to keep up with the reading as the class progresses, and review your notes all along. If you haven't done so, feeling guilty now will only increase your sense of panic. Instead, ask yourself what you need to do in the remaining time in order to study most effectively.

Be selective. Read all your notes again, but underline only the key points. If you try to memorize every detail, you may get bogged down and feel overwhelmed. The same goes for reading material. Rather than trying to read an entire book before the test, read the table of contents. Then page through the chapters, reading the headings and paraphrasing the main points in your notebook. Go back to read more only if you have the time.

If you've backed yourself into a last-minute cram session, avoid pulling an "all-nighter." Plan to study, then get some sleep. Research shows that sleep helps to "seal in" information, so you retain more of what you've learned.

Mental Preparation: Feeling a little nervous about the test is perfectly normal. In fact, a low level of tension will probably improve your performance because you feel alert and eager to show what you've learned. But many people become so anxious that they can't make themselves sit down to study — or they experience sweaty palms, a pounding heart, even dizziness during a test.

Dr. James Papsdorf, a psychologist at the University of Michigan, conducts programs to help students overcome test anxiety. Papsdorf has developed a technique to combat the negative thinking that can cause anxiety and interfere with effective test-taking. As he explains it, the left hemisphere of the brain processes information and the right side handles emotions. "Most information on tests will be in the left brain," says Papsdorf. "When you feel anxious, either while studying or during the exam, the right brain takes over and you block access to the information in the left brain."

How do you get around this? First, try to become aware of the impossibly high standards or self-defeating messages you may have set up for yourself. Faced with a test, many people start thinking, 'I've just got to do well on this test. If I don't, I'm a failure.' If you find yourself in the grip of similar thoughts, stop. Replace them with supportive, coping messages. You might tell yourself, 'Wait a minute. It would be nice to do well on the test, but if I don't, it's not the end of the world.' Follow this strategy as you study, and during the test itself.

When the day of the test arrives, get to the testing place a little early, and use the time to relax. Take several deep, slow breaths, close your eyes and picture yourself in a pleasant setting.

Taking the Test: When the test is handed out, take a minute to look it over. Read the directions carefully — this alone can make a big difference in your score. Then set up a schedule for yourself, giving each question the amount of time it's worth. For example, if a question is worth 40 percent of your grade, plan to spend 40 percent of your time on it. Allow a few minutes for review.

When you come up against a difficult or complex question, resist your impulse to skip it. Instead, try to break it down into smaller, more manageable, questions, and solve these one by one. If you've given it a good try and you're still stuck, move on. This will help you stay on schedule and avoid a panicky, rushed feeling. When you finish the exam, go back to the problem question. You may find that it looks easier now because your mind has been working on it in the meantime.

Should You Guess on a Test?: Yes, when there is no penalty (read instructions), when you have more to gain than lose, when you can eliminate enough options to put the odds in your favor. On a multiple-choice test, you're probably better off guessing B, C or D rather than A or E, since studies by Stuart Hoffman, a researcher in testing and education, show that the test maker unconsciously tries to "bury" the correct answer.

Remember, too, that keeping a positive attitude about yourself will help make test-taking less traumatic. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

A LESSON FOR PARENTS

"Mom, Dad, I can't figure this out," is a common cry when kids tackle homework. But how much should you help your child with his assignments? "Absolutely don't do the work for him. This only makes an intellectual cripple of your child," says Sara Davis, professor of elementary education at the University of Alabama and formerly a teacher for 22 years. "Instead, ask questions that will draw out the answers from him."

Trudi Smith

Parents should also provide a well-lit, quiet work area, keep materials handy and be available for help if needed. And, decide on a homework time. "Before dinner is often best," says Davis. "This allows some playtime right after school, which relaxes the child."

Check the youngster's work periodically, adds Davis, who warns not to be too negative in your criticism: "Use encouraging phrases like, 'I know you're much better than this. Are you satisfied with your work?' Otherwise you could destroy the child's self-confidence."

LUCKY LUCIANO

The life of a classical musician need not always be a struggling lot. Published reports claim artists like tenor Luciano Pavarotti can now command to the tune of $40,000 per performance. Of course, this still pales in comparison to the estimated per-concert take of such pop performers as Kenny Rogers ($150,000) or Bruce Springsteen ($175,000).

Wide World

TONGUE TEACHER

His name is Robert Easton, but in show-biz circles, they call him "The Henry Higgins of Hollywood," or simply "The Dialect Doctor." "Accents Cured — Dialects Strengthened," his shingle reads, and for 17 years, he's coached some 2,000 actors on their p's and q's. He taught Ann-Margret a Texas twang for Middle-Age Crazy, a Transylvanian tongue for The Cheap Detective. He smoothed out Kate Jackson's Southern accent before she took on Charlie's Angels. And for the thriller Magic, Easton gave Anthony Hopkins voices for both the ventriloquist and the dummy.

© 1980 Curt Gunther/Camera 5

Shy as a boy and burdened with a stammer, Easton, now 50, used to read voraciously, collecting details on the world's dialects. His personal library now, contains over 26,000 volumes, and any new contact with an accent brings notes scribbled on envelopes, index cards, even toilet paper. He can now teach 100 dialects, from Chicago to Chicano.

Occasionally, Easton, who's also a veteran actor of radio, TV and films, does his job too well: "The producers of Dallas told Linda Gray to tone down the accent I taught her because the rest of the cast couldn't match it."

Able to pinpoint any slight accent, Easton is the life of the party. Hosts introduce him: "This man can tell you what block you're from." And Easton tells this story on himself. One day, a traveling salesman came by his Pasadena, Calif., home. The man said a few words; Easton paused a moment and asked, "Do you get homesick for Pittsburgh?" "It blew him away," he laughs.

Rx FOR V.D.

Last year, over one million cases of gonorrhea were reported in the U.S., making it the second-most prevalent disease after the common cold. Gonorrhea can be treated with antibiotics, but a penicillin-resistant strain of the disease emerged in 1976 and has been increasing steadily.

Good news, though. Doctors at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C., report preliminary success in producing an antigonorrhea vaccine. After two or three vaccine doses, volunteers developed immunizing antibodies. The doctors stress, however, that the vaccine is still in the early stages of testing.

OVER THIS IS MADE SUCH A FUSS?

Joanne Kaplan

You're steaming. You think you've been ripped off but don't know how to go about complaining or are too lazy to try. Try calling "Rent A Kvetch." New York's fledgling Rent A Kvetch (from the Yiddish word for complainer) is the brainchild of B.L. Ochman, and for a fee (a simple complaint requiring one letter costs $25) Ochman will hassle the phone company, the gas company, anyone you have a legitimate gripe against.

"One woman asked me to write a letter to her husband telling him he's a lazy slob," says Ochman, laughing.

At the risk of rendering herself obsolete, Ochman shared her two top kvetching tips with us: "Document all the facts surrounding your complaint. And go straight to the top. Things have a way of filtering down to the appropriate person."

Interestingly, only about 10 percent of those who contact Ochman eventually follow through. Still, she says, "I never realized how many people are disgruntled. The only problem is it's just me here. I need more kvetches."

THE BOYS ON THE BUS

Next time the press criticizes the Federal Government for continually expanding, perhaps it should look homeward first. Government statistics show that Federal employees in the Washington, D.C., area increased 15.8 percent in the past 10 years. Meanwhile, Hudson's Directory lists 1,896 media correspondents (newspapers, magazines, TV, radio, etc.) in Washington a decade ago. Today there are 3,153 — a jump of 66 percent.
