Lt. Gov. To Speak At Building Dedications

Lt. Governor Jimmy Green will be the speaker for Pitt Community College's dedication ceremony of the Kathryn Van Nortwick Whichard building and the Vernon E. White building to be held on the campus of May 17 from 3-5 p.m.

Lt. Governor Green has been a supporter of the community college system as well as of all the facets of the educational process in the state.

The White building was the first building completed on the PCC campus and has been occupied since 1964. Formerly known as the administration building, it houses offices, classrooms, the student center, laboratories and shops.

The Whichard building was completed in the spring of 1980 and is primarily a classroom, shop and laboratory facility.

White and Whichard are Pitt County residents and have distinguished themselves by their participating in political, educational, civic and religious affairs. Both have served on the PCC Board of Trustees since 1961.

The dedication ceremony will begin at 3 p.m. and will be followed by an open house until 5 p.m. This event will feature displays, exhibits and demonstrations conducted by the faculty, staff and student body. Refreshments will be served.

Dr. William E. Fulford Jr., president of PCC, described plans for the day, saying, "We sincerely hope that our many friends from Pitt County and eastern North Carolina will avail themselves the opportunity to visit PCC during these ceremonies May 17. During the open house, our guests will be afforded the opportunity to meet the PCC family and to observe first-hand some of the things taking place on our campus."

Speight Ill

County Attorney W. W. "Bill" Speight became ill during a County Commissioners' meeting here this morning and was rushed to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Hospital Director Jack W. Richardson said at noon today that Speight, who was given emergency first aid in the office of County Manager Reginald Gray after he left the meeting apparently feeling ill, was being treated in the hospital emergency department.

"His doctor is with him and we do not know the extent of his illness yet," Richardson said. "We're all just hoping for the best."

Exodus Date Theory

NEW YORK (AP) — A new interpretation of historical documents by a professor at Johns Hopkins University puts the Exodus of the Israelites from Egypt about 200 years earlier than previously was assumed, the New York Times reported today.

The hypothesis by Hans Goedicke, an Egyptologist at the university in Baltimore, also links the "parting of the waves," which swallowed the pursuing Egyptians, to a tidal wave generated by the same volcanic eruption that apparently wiped out the Minoan civilization.

In a lecture at Johns Hopkins last week, Goedicke said the documents he had studied for about 20 years provided the first "solid historical evidence for fixing the date of the Exodus."

He said the documents also "verify the Biblical account to an unexpected degree, which is significant, as there is a tendency to consider the Exodus account as fiction."

The new estimate is that the Exodus occurred in 1477 B.C. If the revised date is correct, it is possible to account for the waters that drowned the Egyptian forces as the consequence of the tidal wave.

Frank Cross, a professor of Hebrew at Harvard University, said the hypothesis was "highly controversial." He said the consensus among Biblical scholars was that the Israelites fled Egypt in the late 13th or 12th century B.C., and that there was no convincing archeological evidence of settlement of Palestine by Israelites before 1200 B.C.

Haig Says Soviet Parley On Missiles Is Planned

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told the NATO foreign ministers today that the United States intends to open talks with the Soviet Union before the end of the year to limit medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Haig reportedly linked progress in the negotiations to Soviet conduct around the world.

The secretary of state outlined the Reagan administration's first arms control initiative at the start of a two-day meeting of the North Atlantic Council, the highest policy-making body of the 15-member Western alliance.

Before the U.S. secretary spoke in a closed-door meeting of the council, he heard Italian and Belgian appeals at the public opening session for U.S.-Soviet negotiations to reduce the deployment of nuclear weapons in Europe.

Italian Premier Arnaldo Forlani noted that the superpowers held preliminary talks last fall. He said the Italian government "greatly hopes that they can be rapidly taken up again."

Belgian Foreign Minister C. F. Nothomb accused the Soviet Union of jeopardizing the East-West military balance by pursuing an "unparalleled armament effort" in the past decade. He said the 15 NATO countries must keep pace with the Soviets but "must also be ready and willing to engage in genuine discussions" with Moscow.

"Our alliance's attitude must be one of firmness and must be backed by a military effort, but this in no way means that we should break off the dialogue especially where arms control negotiations are concerned," Nothomb said.

At issue is the Western alliance's decision in December 1979 to deploy 572 medium-range cruise and Pershing II missiles armed with nuclear warheads in Western Europe starting in 1983 unless there is a Soviet-American arms control agreement before then.

In the past 18 months, nuclear disarmament groups have sprung up throughout Western Europe demanding that NATO reverse this decision. The opposition has been especially strong in the five countries where the warheads would be installed: Britain, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Belgium.

According to recent polls, half the voters of Britain and the Netherlands oppose the missiles. Italy's small left-wing Radical Party said it would demonstrate during the foreign ministers' meeting, and the government assigned hundreds of troops and police, some armed with submachine guns, to guard the two-day conference.

The strong anti-nuclear sentiment has led to increasing pressure by the European allies on the United States to set an early date for opening arms control talks with the Soviets.

The allies were said to have reacted with substantial relief to Haig's pledge to move ahead on negotiations with Moscow.

House Seen 'Certain' To Adopt Reagan Blueprint

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House appears certain to hand President Reagan the budget blueprint he wants this week, with enough Democrats lined up to help Republicans pass it.

An Associated Press survey found 29 House Democrats definitely supporting the president's plan instead of their own party's alternative and others leaning that way. One Democratic aide said more defections are possible as the vote nears.

The House, where the Reagan program had been expected to face its stiffest test, was resuming debate today and moving toward a likely vote Wednesday.

The outcome in the Senate, which may not vote until next week, is almost a foregone conclusion. Reagan's fellow Republicans are in the majority, and Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd announced over the weekend that he is resigned to supporting the president despite doubts his plan will work.

That was the main question in the House, where the debate was an almostdizzing volley of figures on the effects of Reagan's proposed tax and budget cuts.

Democrats and Republicans have been using different sets of revenue and expense projections, based on differing forecasts about the future course of the economy, to support their arguments and to compare the administration-backed plan with the Democratic alternative, which would spend more on social programs than Reagan wants.

It is, mused House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, much like the way former President Lyndon Johnson played golf: hitting eight balls for every stroke and counting only the best one.

"They (Republicans) are giving themselves the best shots for their strokes and giving us the worst shots for our strokes," the Oklahoma Democrat said at one point last week.

The AP telephone survey late last week indicated the Republicans were winning.

Besides the 29 Democrats already joining them behind Reagan's plan, five more said they were leaning that way. Twelve others said they were undecided, but administration supporters said privately many of those will back the president.

If Republicans stay solid, a switch of 26 Democrats would be necessary to give Reagan his biggest budget victory yet. GOP leaders say they expect only one Republican to vote against the president.

An aide to one key Democrat conceded the president is likely to score a victory, perhaps by a wide margin, if Democrats see Reagan will win and decide to support him.

The AP survey parallels private assessments made by Republican and Democratic leaders.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has emphasized that the budget vote is only "the first skirmish," noting the budget resolution under consideration merely sets guidelines for Congress to follow. The actual cuts in spending and taxes will be voted separately later in the year.

In the Senate, meanwhile, debate begins Thursday on an administration-backed plan endorsed by the Senate Budget Committee.

Byrd, the Senate minority leader from West Virginia, said Saturday he will vote for Reagan's budget plan even though he believes it is unrealistic.

"The people want to give the president a chance," Byrd said. "So I will give him a chance."

The administration, eager for a big initial victory, has worked hard. The plan's chief lobbyist, Reagan himself, courted Republicans and Democrats alike with telephone calls, Oval Office chats, presidential cufflinks and invitations to state dinners.

Bankruptcy Leaves A Stigma

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Many creditors feel debtors are using the bankruptcy law as a method of escaping their obligations.

Whether that is the case, or whether bankruptcy is the only alternative for an individual, few people will argue with the statement that there is a stigma attached, and persons who file bankruptcy are considered poor credit risks.

Attorney Dallas McPherson, who has represented both debtors and creditors in bankruptcy proceedings acknowledged that there is a stigma attached to filing bankruptcy. "It does hurt your credit," and is, "an indication of the inability to control finances," he said.

While some people are, "poor credit risks," whether they file bankruptcy or not, "some (who do file bankruptcy) are caught up in the economy," and want to pay their debts, but can't.

According to the attorney, many persons filing bankruptcy have secured loans for one thing or another, then have had their overtime cut out, had their hours cut from 48 to 32 hours per week, and simply are not able to meet their obligations now. "He would prefer not to file," but, "he can barely live..."

In McPherson's opinion, the determination of whether or not to extend credit to an individual, "should be done on a case-by-case basis." However, creditors tend to reject anyone with bankruptcy on their record. "Some financial institutions feel the only way to respond," to the problem, "is not extend credit to anyone who has filed any type of bankruptcy."

Creditors many times, "just throw bankruptcy petitions in

Big City Rentals: A Nightmare

By SCOTT KRAFT

Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Holly Entenman, bubbling with enthusiasm and optimism, jumped from college graduation ceremonies into an enviable public relations job in New York City.

But she wasn't armed for a scrappy 18-month apartment hunt in what may be the tightest, most expensive market in the nation — Manhattan.

After sleeping on a friend's floor for weeks, subletting an apartment for months more and renting a sixth-floor walkup with no water pressure, Miss Entenman finally found a gem.

She paid a real estate agent $1,100 to rent an $850-a-month two-bedroom apartment she now shares with her brother.

"It was such an upsetting experience," she said. "And even sharing the rent, I know I'll have to move out of the city eventually if I ever want to afford anything besides sitting in my apartment."

Bundles of money and luck — plenty of luck — are the best weapons for an apartment hunt most anywhere in the country these days.

In New York, middle-class rental housing has been at a premium for some years. But prices have never been the trash," and write off the debt, rather than take advantage of the law, which is designed to protect them as well as the debtor, McPherson suggested. "Creditors need to be aware of their rights. All is not lost. The bankruptcy law is designed to distribute money more evenly among creditors."

McPherson noted that there are bills now before the North Carolina General Assembly which would remove the State from the federal bankruptcy exemptions and replace them with a revised state schedule.

A survey of local area banks indicates that most banks do look at persons who have filed bankruptcy on a case-by-case basis.

For example, Jerry Powell of First State Bank said, "We look at the total record...how they are handling things now...their financial situation. It's hard to generalize. We just have to look at each case."

Suggesting that many times, people use Chapter 13 bankruptcy, "as a means to work out of a situation," Powell emphasized that, "had they come to the bank, we could work with them here," and accomplish the same goal. However, by filing bankruptcy, Powell said, "it costs everybody a lot more."

At Wachovia Bank, Reid Hooper said, "there are going to be times...when people have no choice. But there are alternatives to bankruptcy if people are interested."

"They can come to us. We can counsel them and help work out their problems and accomplish the same thing. We are always willing to work with people like that." By filing bankruptcy, Hooper said, it, "hurts their credit for years to come."

He noted, "I have a warm spot for those," who file bankruptcy, and, "although their debts have been legally forgiven, go back and pay their debts."

Realistically there may be some instances, where filing bankruptcy is warranted, Jim Hicks at North Carolina National Bank said. "However, we'd rather see a person go to his creditors and work out a plan with them. It would help the individual more...help creditors more."

"To me, that's a more common sense way to do things."

As for lending money to someone who has filed bankruptcy, Hicks said, "we'd have to look at the individual situation. We might, but in general...no."

Home loans for people who have filed bankruptcy? Savings and loan institutions take a case-by-case look.

Home Federal Savings and Loan seems to be typical. Fay Adams said, "Some people don't think about what they're doing. I feel that people don't think how it is going to affect their credit."

"Yes. If they had a track record over the past few years of good credit," then an individual would be able to secure a home loan. "No...if they are in bankruptcy at the present time," or their credit record is not good. "It depends on their qualifications," she said, suggesting that many who file bankruptcy can't qualify for a loan because they are poor money managers.

"If they filed bankruptcy five years ago, all their debts are paid and they've started over again," the fact that they had filed bankruptcy would, "not make any difference to me."

Mrs. Adams suggested, "any lender is looking for a track record. If they've paid off all their bills and come in the next month," for a loan, "that's not enough time to prove yourself." It's doubtful if that person would get a loan.

However, "if it's been two or three years...they've proven themselves, I'd have no problem extending credit," Mrs. Adams explained.

How about credit from other financing agencies?

"No," seems to be the answer.

For example, a spokesman for Great Southern Finance Co. on West Fourth Street said, "No...we won't be put in that position," while William Mills of Beneficial Finance Co. on Arlington Boulevard said company policy won't allow lending to persons who file bankruptcy. However, he added, "after seven years we may consider it."

"No, we will not," Jim Sox of Provident Finance Co. at West End Circle said.

He explained bankruptcy, "stays against their credit for seven years. If a customer paid out all their debts, then we would consider it."

$9 Million For A Quadraplegic

CHICAGO (AP) — A jury has awarded $9 million to a woman who complained that cosmetic surgery on her nose left her a speechless quadraplegic.

Eileen Tannebaum, 46, testified from a bed in the courtroom by making high-pitched sounds meaning "yes" or "no" as a therapist pointed to a board with 64 words. Doctors said Mrs. Tannebaum's brain was deprived of oxygen during surgery in 1975 at Northwest Hospital.

Mrs. Tannebaum and her husband filed suit against the hospital; Dr. Arthur Broder, 46, a plastic surgeon; Dr. Murray K. Rosenberg, 55, an anesthesiologist; and Norma Nicola, a nurse. A circuit court jury decided Saturday that the nurse was not liable for damages.

Amblyopia (lazy eye) in adults can occur from either toxic substances such as alcohol or tobacco or from lack of use. Lack of use makes up the majority of cases. When the eye begins to see with varying efficiency, conflicting information is relayed to the brain. The brain selectively chooses the correct information and disregards the rest. Rather than suffering double vision, or even the benefits of stereoscopic vision, the brain will ignore the less-efficient eye. Like a child who does not receive any attention, the eye will be alienated, turned-off or simply go to sleep.

Corrective eyewear serves to attend to many varied eye problems. Whatever your prescription calls for, you can be assured of professional attention, quality eyewear products and a sincere concern for your comfort and satisfaction. Tyer Winner Of Award For Writing

Daily Reflector Staff Writer Carol Tyer received an honorable mention in the series division of the North Carolina Press Women's writing contest.

The announcement was made Saturday evening during the spring meeting of the journalism professional group held in Chapel Hill.

The winning entry was a four-part series on agoraphobia, which earlier this year placed first in the North Carolina Women's Press Club contest and went on to national competition. The series included interviews with persons who have experienced the phobia against going out in public and with a psychiatrist and a psychologist, each of whom have developed new ways to treat it.

Mrs. Tyer is a Falkland area resident who has been a writer for "The Daily Reflector" since 1966.

Former Reflector staff writer Joyce Evans placed first in news writing for newspapers under 35,000 circulation. A Greenville native, she has just resigned from the Fayetteville Observer, the newspaper for which she won the award, and will soon become a staff member of a Fort Lauderdale, Fla. daily.

Heavy Booking At MGM Grand

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev., struck six months ago by a fire that killed 84 people, is scheduled to reopen in July and bookings are running 10 percent ahead of last year, company officials say.

"We're already booking conventions into 1987," said Alvin Benedict, president of MGM Grand Hotels Inc.

Elaborate fire alarm and sprinkler systems have been installed throughout the hotel, damaged by fire on Nov. 21, Benedict said. In a typical room, four sprinklers will be able to deliver 65 gallons of water a minute.

City Rents...

higher. And the rental problems in New York are appearing elsewhere in the country.

The number of rental apartments is declining, some of them abandoned and others converted to condominiums for the tax-conscious — and more affluent — middle class.

Still, growing numbers of young people, products of the post-war baby boom, are looking for rental apartments. And many of them are single men and women, wanting to live alone.

Nationwide, the vacancy rate for rental apartments is 5.2 percent. But in certain cities, it's even lower.

New York City's five boroughs, with nearly 2 million rental units, have a combined vacancy rate of under 3 percent. In Manhattan alone the vacancy rate is less than half of 1 percent and landlords who refuse to pay taxes or provide services to their tenants are abandoning apartments at the rate of 30,000 a year.

In Boston, Atlanta and Seattle, it's under 5 percent. In Chicago, it's about 2 percent. In Los Angeles, the rate is 1 percent. And Miami counts fewer than 1 percent vacancies.

Some cities are in better shape, but they are exceptions.

Overbuilding in Phoenix has created a 15 percent vacancy rate. Kansas City and Denver have 6 percent to 7 percent vacancy rates as many renters seek roommates because of the economy.

High interest rates — and in some cases rent control laws — have discouraged apartment construction. Fewer than 200,000 rental units were built in 1979 while more than 100,000 were converted to condominiums.

"There's a tremendous level of attrition" in rental apartments, said George Sternlieb, director of the Center for Urban Policy Research at Rutgers University.

"The country scraps 2 percent of its rental housing units a year. That's one out of every 50 rental units in the country that is burned out, plowed down or converted to condominiums every year."

Inflation has pushed many out of the rental market and into condominiums, which are effectively less expensive in many cases because of tax laws.

"With long-term inflation such as we've had, what you will eventually see is a rental housing industry that goes out of business," Sternlieb predicted.

Even with a rent stabilization law, studio apartments in Manhattan run from $500 to $700 a month, one bedrooms are $700 to $900 and two-bedrooms go from $800 to well over $1,500.

One-bedroom apartments start at about $625 in Chicago, $400 in Los Angeles and $325 in Phoenix. In Boston, they range from $350 to $450 and in Atlanta, $250 to $375.

Young professionals in Miami pay about $400 for one-bedroom apartment, if they can find them.

"It's not time to panic," said Miami housing consultant Lewis Goodin. "But a little genuine fear" would be appropriate, he added.

A booming economy in Dade and Broward counties in southern Florida is luring thousands of new residents, and a refugee influx that's brought about 100,000 Cubans and Haitians to the area over the past year has placed added pressure on the rental market.

In Manhattan, the apartment market is characterized by out-of-sight rents, exorbitant finders' fees and a dash for vacancies that makes the 5 o'clock rush hour look like a stroll through Central Park.

Apartment hunters line up at 3 a.m. on Sunday mornings for a head-start on the newspaper real estate advertisements or try to get the newspaper real estate sections before Sunday. They even scan the obituaries and divorce notices, hoping for an early hint of a vacancy and real estate agents pull in upwards of $1,000 — non-refundable — from every renter they place in an apartment.

A real estate attorney collects $50 a head for a one-day seminar in how to find an apartment. Superintendents' palms are greased — $20 now and another $200 or $300 for a bonafide vacancy tip.

"The feeling now is that in Manhattan it's impossible," says Roz Post, a spokeswoman for New York City's housing office. "Nobody can get an apartment and everybody is moving to the borough."

Stephen Raphael, a Manhattan real estate attorney, maintains there's no shortage of housing in Manhattan "if you can pay for it."

"The upward push on prices is a result of demand. New York City continues to act as a magnet for younger people to fulfill their career ambitions."

The catch-as-catch-can market has squeezed out many young professionals earning under $20,000 a year. And those who are younger — often college students — haven't a chance.

"We're finding that young people who used to leave home when they were 18, 19 or 20, are no longer able to do that," says Ms. Post. "There are no inexpensive apartments."

Ulster Peace Appeals

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Appeals for Northern Ireland's Roman Catholics to abstain from violence when Bobby Sands dies appeared to be making headway today as the IRA hunger striker lay in a coma on the 65th day of his fast.

Official sources said the 27-year-old convicted terrorist had been unconscious since early Sunday. His family, a priest and a team of medical specialists were with him in the hospital wing of the Maze Prison southwest of Belfast.

A prison source said Sands was skeletal, weighing less than 85 pounds and barely alive. He weighed 155 on March 1 when he began his fast demanding that imprisoned members of the Irish Republican Army be treated as political prisoners and not as common criminals.

Three other IRA men were also fasting in the Maze, and one of them, 25-year-old Francis Hughes, was reported close to death after 50 days without food. The other two, Raymond McCreesh and Patsy O'Hara, were in the 44th day of their hunger strike, but their lives were not considered in danger yet.

The belief was growing that IRA leaders had decided against the widespread violence they threatened earlier if the British government did not give in to Sands and let him die.

Pro-IRA sources said they did not think the guerrillas wanted to undermine the propaganda effect abroad of Sands' death by launching another round of terror bombings and attacks against British and Protestant security forces. Such bloody campaigns in the past have usually been followed by a drop in IRA prestige and financial support.

Recent statements from Sinn Fein, the legal political arm of the outlawed IRA, have been comparatively moderate. Sands' mother appealed Sunday for "everyone to stay calm and not to get involved in any fighting." Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, the fiery young fighter for Irish unity and Catholic rights, told 15,000 demonstrators they must "hold our tempers and act in a disciplined and organized fashion."

Pope John Paul II appealed for an end to the 11½ years of sectarian warfare in Northern Ireland.

Back To Class For Bostonites

BOSTON (AP) — It was back to the classroom and more day-to-day uncertainty today for about 64,500 students and 5,000 Boston public school teachers.

For a week, they've attended school unsure which day might be their last in class as they, the penniless school system and municipal officials have reeled daily from crisis to crisis.

Gov. Edward J. King has withheld action on a bill giving Mayor Kevin H. White $9.4 million in repayment from the state for past school construction. The bill has been on the governor's desk since Friday morning. He may act today, according to Gerald Morris, his press secretary.

The money is believed enough to keep open the school system — which officially ran out of money last week — at least another week to 10 days while White and the City Council bargain over a $75 million bond and tax package that would provide enough money to get the schools to the end of their term June 19.

But City Treasurer Lowell Richards says White won't approve the latest council proposal for a bailout of the nation's oldest public school system. "It's still unlikely he will proceed on the bill," said Richards at a City Hall meeting on Saturday.

The state Supreme Court also has yet to decide on the mayor's bid to overturn a lower court order requiring the schools to remain open. The mayor, who insists the city has no spare cash to shift to the broke School Department, is appealing the Superior Court order issued last week.

White has said he wanted to use some of the $9.4 million, voted Thursday night by the state Legislature, to return to the city payroll about 400 police officers and firefighters laid off because of budget cuts.

Their firing, in addition to the closings of police and fire stations, have fueled angry demonstrations. Residents of East and South Boston and Charlestown have jammed major arteries, tunnels and bridges during rush hours, and citizens' groups have occupied two vacant police station and a fire station.

Further complicating the picture is Boston's ability to float bonds because Moody's Investors Service Inc. of New York recently withdrew its rating of the city's municipal bonds. The city announced on Saturday it has hired Merrill Lynch White Weld Capital Markets Group to handle marketing of municipal bonds.

Wife Has Feet On The Ground

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am the wife of an airline pilot, and I used to worry myself half-sick wondering what my captain might be doing with some cute young airline hostess, until one night a highly respected, much-admired professional man knocked on my door while my pilot was gone. He certainly had some swinging plans for us. And to think for years I had envied this man's wife because she had an 8-to-5 husband!

That's all there is to my story, Abby. But the point is this: Occupation doesn't determine fidelity — or the lack of it — in a marriage. I know airline captains' wives who have more going for them while their husbands are away than their husbands have.

FEET ON THE GROUND

CONFIDENTIAL TO R. IN K.C.: It's not always better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. It all depends on what you have lost.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you wrote, "No healthy normal man (or woman) is supposed to be 'happy' in abstinence" (from an active sex life).

I hope you will rethink your position. You have been, over the years, a great friend of hetero-, homo-, and even bisexuals. How about a good word for those of us who are genuinely asexual? We are truly a forgotten minority.

I, for one, am quite happy without sex. Personally, I am repelled by sex, although I am heartily in favor of a happy, normal sex life for those who favor it. I do not want to be thought of as "unhealthy" or "abnormal." I am living in the way that is right for me. Unfortunately, because I am not married and do not have a lover, many people assume that I am a lesbian, which I definitely am not.

Some of history's most creative people have been celibate by choice. Please think about it, Abby, and give us a break.

AGE 42 AND STILL A VIRGIN

DEAR 42: To each his (or her) own. Meet another happy celibate:

DEAR ABBY: I must object to your comment to NO ACTION IN WASHINGTON STATE. You said: "No healthy normal man (or woman) is supposed to be 'happy' in abstinence."

I consider myself a happy, normal, healthy male, and abstinence is my choice. As a matter of fact, like thousands of others who have taken the vow of celibacy, I feel that for me, celibacy is an important part of my life. Sign me.

HAPPILY CELIBATE IN N.Y.

DEAR CELIBATE: NO ACTION complained that his wife had been depriving him of marital relations for 15 years. (He was 56.)

I agree, one who takes the vow of celibacy can indeed be happy, normal and healthy. But a man (or woman) who takes the marriage vows, then decides to become celibate, does his wife (or husband) a terrible disservice.

DEAR ABBY: We are a couple in our late 20s (call us George and Georgette) who have been married for six years. We both work, have no children and are very happy with our lives.

We need an outside opinion. We recently had a portrait painted of Georgette in which she is wearing only the bottoms of her French-cut bikini. It is a tasteful, accurate and beautiful painting. We are planning to hang it in our home but are concerned that some of our friends may be ill at ease knowing the model was Georgette. But we do want to share it with others.

What do you think?

GEORGE AND GEORGETTE

DEAR G. AND G.: When in doubt — don't!

Couple Speaks Vows Recently

Kathryn Anna Beavans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Clark Beavans of Enfield, and Phillips Thomas Dougherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Eugene Dougherty of Eden, were married Saturday, April 25.

The double ring ceremony was performed by W. Eugene Tisdale in St. James United Methodist Church here at 11 a.m. A program of wedding music was presented by Frances Cain, organist, and Clark Beavans, brother of the bride, guitarist.

The maid of honor was Martha Beavans of Fayetteville and the matron of honor was Elizabeth Collins of Cedar Grove. Both are sisters of the bride.

Sonny Sherrill of Eden was best man while ushers included Bob Cande of Fayetteville, Ark., Ed Crotts and Tom Haines of Greenville and Edward Wright of Hillsboro.

The bride received her undergraduate and Master's degrees from East Carolina University. The bridegroom received his B.A. from ECU. She is employed by Joyner Library and he is assistant manager of Sav-A-Ton, Inc.

A reception was held in the Phoenix Room immediately following the ceremony.

Bridal Shower Held Recently

Beverly Isley of Burlington, bride-elect of Church Odum, was entertained at a miscellaneous shower Sunday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alba Peede.

Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Nina Galloway, Mrs. Carol Holloman and Mrs. Sandra Peede.

The honoree was remembered with a corsage of white miniature carnations.

The house was decorated throughout with spring flowers and greenery with a centerpiece on the dining table of yellow and white daisy mums.

The couple will be married June 13.

Ruling Against Agnew

Spiro T. Agnew managed to resign as vice president of the United States and escape full prosecution when it was alleged he had accepted kickbacks while governor of Maryland.

Last week there was justice of a sort when a Maryland circuit judge ruled that Agnew violated his public trust in accepting bribes while he was governor and vice president.

Judge Bruce C. Williams ruled in the civil hearing that Agnew must pay $147,500 in kickbacks he allegedly received and $101,235 in interest on the money to the state of Maryland.

Agnew, when he resigned as vice president in 1973, was allowed to enter a plea of no contest to one count of U. S. income tax evasion.

The civil case was, in effect, the first full judicial hearing on the kickback allegations.

Agnew had no comment on the case, maintaining the low profile he has kept since his resignation. His attorneys said an appeal of the ruling would be forthcoming.

At this point, however, Judge Williams ruling on the kickbacks is the formal judicial word and unless a higher court upsets the ruling the funds will be owed to the state of Maryland.

Complete Interstates

The interstate highway system was envisioned as one which would tie the nation together with safe thoroughways when it was announced during the Eisenhower administration.

Despite delays and the crumbling of some segments of the system it has fulfilled its promise.

It is envisioned that the work could be done by 1990 at a cost of $31.5 billion, even though some corners may be cut.

It makes sense to complete the system, particularly since much of what remains to be done are links between already completed sections.

There is room for criticism of the interstate system but it has vastly improved long distance road travel in the United States.

Blast Usury Laws

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The popular foundation of the free enterprise system is the law of supply and demand. That law works for money itself just as it does for any other commodity.

That is why government ought to get out of the business of trying to regulate the cost of borrowing money. All it does is dry up the supply and force lenders to move their money to more lucrative markets.

That is the controversial suggestion put forward by a couple of economic experts at N.C. State University as the North Carolina General Assembly finds itself embroiled in the question of raising interest rate ceilings, or doing away with them entirely.

"Usury laws are a form of price control, and price controls in any form create substantial distortions and inefficiencies in the economy," say John S. Lapp and Michael L. Walden in a study published in the current issue of "North Carolina" magazine. The periodical is produced by the Citizens Association, a statewide organization of business and industrial interests.

Ceilings
It is commonly held that interest rate ceilings assure that everybody can borrow money at reasonable rates, and that lending institutions will not simply jack up their money prices to make outrageous profits.

Such an attitude ignores the fact that lending institutions have to borrow their money which they lend to others — either from other lending sources or directly from clients who deposit funds for interest. When interest rates soar for consumers, they soar for lending firms as well.

Interest rates, say Lapp and Walden, have no significant effect on bank profits.

BILL NOBLITT

"Usury laws reduce the efficiency, productivity, and equity of the loan market and of the economy generally."

What happens to lower income people and riskier customers who don't have the credit background and record to command a loan if there were no ceiling? As it is, loans become unavailable to such people anyway, and the economists believe that "usury laws are not an effective means of dealing with problems of distribution of income and economic opportunity. In fact, they limit the economic opportunities of disadvantaged groups."

The fact is that if the interest rate on a particular loan doesn't make the loan profitable, the bank will "reduce or eliminate lending in that market ... by a reduction in the institution's own borrowing ... or by allocating the funds to other, more profitable, uses," the report states.

Money flowing from this state to New York and European markets where higher interest is available is a demonstration of that. Another not mentioned by Lapp and Walden, but evident to other observers, is current investment by banks directly in building projects.

Building
Numerous office and apartment complexes, housing developments, condominium projects and other direct business activities are increasingly being built with direct involvement of lending institutions as owners rather than just financial backers.

Lapp and Walden point to another critical function of interest rates: to ration available money among wouldbe borrowers efficiently. Borrowers with the most productive uses will pay more for the money.

Interest ceilings make it impossible for lending firms to boost the charges but still

Crazy Charlie Rejoices

The beleaguered used-car dealers in America have finally gotten a break. A Federal Trade Commission proposal to prevent deceptive sales practices has been abandoned. The ruling, had it gone into effect, would have required used-car dealers to check the brakes, the transmissions, electrical systems and 11 other key automotive components and put a sticker on the windshield telling the buyer whether they worked or not. If the sticker said the components were in order, and it turned out they weren't, the used car dealer would be held responsible, and would have to either fix the car or take it back.

"Crazy Charlie," one of the largest used car dealers in the area, was jubilant when he heard the news and said, "It's about time the government got off our backs. The idea of guaranteeing a used car is against everything this country stands for."

"I guess the customer must now take your word for it that the car he's buying actually works," I said.

"That's the way it's always been. A used car dealer's word is worth 20 government stickers. A handshake from one of my salesmen means more than any warranty thought up by some government bureaucrat."

"I guess the FTC was just going overboard because of the few bad apples in your business."

"If there are any bad apples in this business, I've never met them," said Crazy Charlie. "I can personally guarantee you that when someone comes on this lot he's going to get value for his money."

"Even if the brakes don't work?"

"It's a used car," he said.

"It's not going to be perfect. The customer knows that. He doesn't have to have a sticker to tell him what he's getting into. The important thing is not what's wrong with a car, but how much it costs. Look at this beautiful 1976 four-door sedan. I'm selling it for $2,400, though the blue book says I should get $3,000 for it. That's why they call me 'Crazy Charlie.'"

"It's a lovely car," I admitted.

"Now if I had to put a sticker on it I would be obliged to tell you the transmission is shot. How would you feel about that?"

"I probably wouldn't want to buy it."

"Exactly. That sticker could break your heart. I have too much respect for my customers to hurt them by telling them every little thing that could go wrong with a car."

Education For Al Haig

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — In a cozy Oval Office chat shortly before President Reagan's superlative speech to Congress April 29, Alexander Haig squarely addressed the problem of guerrilla warfare being waged against the secretary of state in part by Reagan's White House staff.

That discussion between the president and his first Cabinet officer comes none too soon. It was delayed by the president's convalescence and the administration's sharp focus on Reagan's economic recovery program.

The result of the Reagan-Haig tete-a-tete may be a welcome period of quiescence in the staccato underground campaign against Al Haig that has come close to destabilizing his stewardship of the nation's foreign policy. Reagan professes to intimates not only that he has been unaware of the oblique thrusts against Haig but that Haig enjoys his total confidence.

"Our problem has never been with the president," one Haig colleague told us. "The problem is with the clones" — that is, White House chief of staff James A. Baker III. Now that Reagan himself has been informed firsthand about the way the "clones" are waging guerrilla warfare against Haig, continuation might imply Reagan's consent, foretelling the early end of Haig's tenure at State.

But not necessarily. The major reason for anti-Haig activity by the "clones" is to educate the former NATO commander to the way Ronald Reagan prefers to have the business of government conducted in his administration.

For Haig, being force-fed that lesson has not come easy. Two months into the administration, to cite a conspicuous example, Haig was notified about a meeting of the Cabinet council on trade to discuss a matter crossing lines between foreign policy and trade policy (not Japanese auto imports). Haig notified Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige, the chairman of that Cabinet council, that the issue was under State Department jurisdiction. He failed to show up for the meeting.

Several days later, a session of another Cabinet council at which State was wanted was similarly boycotted. Baker was given the assignment of changing that pattern and he went at it with his customary vigor.

To get a handle on national security policy and more control over the preeminent role Haig expected to play, Baker and presidential counselor Edwin Meese III moved into the heart of the policy-making machinery of Richard Allen's National Security Council staff. Middle-level arms control officials of the State and Defense Departments were surprised when Maj. Gen. Robert Schweitzer, Allen's deputy, recently said he would need four copies of a secret decision memorandum agreed to when the meeting ended. Asked why he needed four copies, he said one for himself, one for Allen, one for Meese and one for Baker.

Thus, the education of Al Haig to Reagan's style of governing has implanted the president's White House staff in the center of policy-making to monitor even ground-level decisions. This intrusion by essentially political staff men goes far beyond the Carter, Ford or Nixon administrations. At the same time, Allen's NSC role remains murky if not invisible.

How much success Baker has had in the education of Al Haig is debatable. Haig, who fought hard against the president's decision to end the grain embargo, immediately sought to ease its drastic impact among U.S. allies. In an interview April 25 with the Associated Press he warned that if the Soviets intervene in Poland Reagan would impose an "across-the-board" trade cutoff. On April 28 the New York Times headlined White House "exception to view of Haig." It quoted an anonymous staffer as saying that Haig had gotten "somewhat out front" of Reagan.

One senior White House staffer told us privately, without criticism or commendation, that Baker is the sole source of Haig's unceasing troubles with the White Countless North Carolinians yet unborn no doubt will join with the throngs who have already learned about North Carolina from Dr. Hugh Lefler, whose recent passing recalls the 50 years he devoted to teaching history about the state.

"The truth is one of the hardest things in the world to come by," Dr. Lefler once observed and the truth was what he sought and upheld in his long career.

Lefler's textbook, "The Growth of North Carolina" was written in 1942 and was the state's officially adopted text for public schools until it was replaced in 1959 by another of his books, "North Carolina: History, Geography, Government."

Never one to shrink from what he considered his almost sacred duty in teaching North Carolina history, Dr. Lefler frequently was in conflict with popular theories.

In fact, he once noted that in North Carolina history "the truth will get you in trouble" because "there are certain things in the history of this state which people like to believe but which you just can't prove."

For instance, one of the "myths" exploded by the professor was the claim that the Battle of Alamance was not the first battle of the Revolution because the people of Alamance were not fighting for independence but for honest local government.

He also questioned the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, maintaining it was fought "a long time after 1775" if ever.

That kind of thinking is heresy to the good citizens from Mecklenburg. Yet, Lefler had the courage to question "facts" when it wasn't popular to do so.

One of those traps of history is that so many myths and so much folklore have crept into our past that often it is difficult to distinguish these from real facts.

Yet Lefler felt it a duty to do just that, and he often found himself embroiled in controversies about our state's past in order to get at the truth.

But one didn't need to become involved in theories in order to enjoy and benefit from the Lefler history books, which he wrote in such interesting fashion that they could be read like a novel even while the reader was digesting tons of factual North Carolina history.

North Carolina owes a huge debt of gratitude to this native son who loved history, knew history and placed his thoughts into words that will continue to cheer those who read them.

Strength For Today

WE CAN BE SURE
Is there any limit to God's forgiveness?

No; provided, of course, that our repentance is without limit and our petition for His mercies completely sincere. Jesus declared that there is only one unforgivable sin, namely, the sin against the Holy Spirit; and this is unforgivable only because those who commit it have come to the place where they call good evil and evil good. Under such conditions there can be no repentance, and without repentance there is no forgiveness.

But if we truly repent, we can be sure that there is no sin in our lives which God will not forgive. Millions of people torture themselves continually by declaring that they have sinned beyond the possibility of God's forgiveness. No one ever sins to that extent. Though iniquity pile up to the height of the mountains, God's love and mercy will take hold of that mountain and cast it into the sea. — Elisha Douglass

Simply Cannot Afford Homes

By QUANE KENYON
Associated Press Writer
BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Last year was a disaster for the housing industry, and few observers expect this year to be much better.

Some people are urging the government to loosen up on the money supply to boost demand for homes, but a leading executive in the lumber industry argues that such an approach would do more harm than good.

John B. Fery, chairman of Boise Cascade Corp., the nation's fourth largest lumber producer, says the problem is not with demand for housing, the problem is that our economic troubles have left most people unable to afford homes.

"The American dream of owning a home is still a powerful social and economic force," Fery says. "Today's low level of home building is creating pent-up demand that will have to be met eventually."

While conceding the home-building industry will remain slow the rest of this year, Fery says loosening restrictions on the money supply to make more money available for home construction and mortgages would only increase inflation and weaken the economy.

Controlling inflation, building a strong economy and dropping interest rates to 13 percent or 14 percent will give Americans plenty of incentive to buy homes again, he contends.

"The difference between a good year and a not-so-good year for us is the economy," Fery says, noting his company's earnings were down 22 percent last year although sales broke the $3 billion level for the first time.

Although Boise Cascade expects new housing construction to remain slack the rest of the year, "We don't think the bloom is off the rose in housing at all," he says.

He expects housing construction to pick up next year and boom through the rest of the decade before slackening.

In the 1990s, there will be "a large inventory of older homes," he says. "We are going to see growth in the repair and remodeling market."

Fery points to Boise Cascade's plans to continue expanding its holdings in building material distribution centers. In 1975, it had 11 wholesale building centers and 32 distribution outlets. Now it has 15 wholesale outlets and 101 building material centers, with expansion mainly in the Sun Belt states and the Pacific Northwest.

"We see these distribution centers meeting increased demand for housing in the 1980s and for remodeling and repairs in the 1990s," he says.

Fery says the sluggish housing market has not been as hard on forest products firms as on home builders because North American lumber companies have modern and efficient plants that allow them to compete on the world market.

He predicts exports will rise through the decade, because much of the rest of the world does not have the plants, mills or forests to keep up with demand for building materials. Boise Cascade, for instance, exported almost no plywood in 1974; today it sends about 10 percent of its production abroad.

But the American housing market is still the bread and butter of the lumber industry, and for that Fery recommends a little more patience.

Once inflation and high interest rates are curbed, the home-building industry will not need help from the government to boom again, he says.

"If we have a strong economy, we will build a lot of houses," Fery says.

Ethics Committee Weighing Senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate ethics committee plans to meet early this week to map its next step in the investigation of New Jersey Democrat Harrison A. Williams Jr., the first incumbent U.S. senator convicted of a crime in 75 years.

The panel agreed last fall to defer its usual investigative procedure until the Williams trial was over. Its staff continued reviewing the tapes which the Justice Department made of Williams and monitored the trial closely.

The FBI used undercover agents posing as representatives of an Arab sheik willing to pay for favors from public officials. Williams was the seventh and final member of Congress convicted in the case. The other six, all House members, no longer are in office.

The 61-year-old Williams was charged with promising to use his influence to steer government contracts to a titanium mine in which he had a concealed interest.

He also was accused of trying to persuade a phony Arab to invest $100 million in the venture and was said to have promised to "do everything" in his power to help the Arab immigrate to the United States.

During the weekend, Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said he expects the ethics committee to deal with the matter promptly, even though Williams plans to appeal.

Asked if he thought Williams should resign, Byrd said: "Senator Williams will have to make that decision."

He added, however, that Williams will have to consider whether he can "effectively carry out his duties as a senator to his constituents and to the nation under the circumstances."

New Jersey law allows the governor to fill a Senate vacancy with a temporary appointee to serve until either after a special election or the next general election.

Williams' press secretary, Michael McCurry, said Sunday that Williams doesn't plan to return to Washington until Tuesday or Wednesday.

"He has an extremely full schedule because of things that have backed up" during the four-week trial, McCurry said, adding that Williams was in the New Jersey area and had received a number of phone calls from friends and supporters.

In addition to the investigation of the senator, the ethics committee has a preliminary inquiry under way into his wife, Jeanette, a former Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee staffer.

It involves her work as a consultant to a company which had considered building a casino in Atlantic City, N.J. The panel has not disclosed the status of the inquiry.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said the verdict was "a great personal tragedy for Senator Williams and his family."

"But it is more," Bradley added. "It is a sad day for the people of New Jersey who have chosen him to represent them in Congress for more than 25 years, for his colleagues who have worked closely with him and for all other Americans who have benefited from his legislative contributions."

SEN. WILLIAMS

Williams, found guilty Friday by a federal jury in Brooklyn, N.Y., of nine counts of bribery and conspiracy in the FBI's Abscam probe, says he plans to appeal and will not resign the seat he has held for 22 years.

Anne Miskovsky, a spokeswoman for the ethics committee, said the panel could meet today or Tuesday "to consider steps necessary and appropriate to the discharge of its constitutional responsibility to determine the fitness of a member of the Senate to hold an office of public trust."

The committee began an inquiry into Williams, who faces maximum sentence of 15 years in prison, shortly after reports published in February 1980 linked him to the Abscam investigation.

Reunion For Lady Di, Prince

LONDON (AP) — After a month's separation, Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer are back together, friends say.

The heir to the British throne, who in recent weeks has toured Australia, New Zealand and the United States, arrived in Scotland on Sunday and took off for Balmoral Castle.

His fiancée flew to Aberdeen, Scotland, and left there by car. Her plane had been hit by lightning shortly after takeoff from London, but no damage was reported.

Buckingham Palace declined to say if the two were meeting, but friends said the couple planned to spend five days together.

During Charles' visit to the United States, he visited President Reagan at the White House, inspected Navy and NATO facilities in Virginia and was heckled Saturday night by demonstrators supporting Irish hunger striker Bobby Sands.

sooner or later that the transmission has to be replaced?"

"It depends on how much the person cares about the transmission. Most people don't even know what it does. If we have to check out every car that comes on the lot, we're going to have to pass on the cost to the consumer. The government doesn't think of that when it comes up with its silly rules. Customers don't want us to put stickers on windshields; it takes all the fun out of buying a used car."

"I must say your lobby did a good job in killing the sticker regulation."

"The only reason we were against it was because it was totally unnecessary. If a person can't trust a used-car dealer in this country, who can he trust?"

"The most desirable course of action," write Lapp and Walden, "is to eliminate maximum ceilings on interest rates. Short of this, a rigid ceiling should be discarded in favor of a ceiling that rises with the cost of funds to lending institutions ... reducing the damage caused by usury laws because some incentive to make loans would remain."

Now that the president himself has discussed the most critical personnel problem in his young administration with Haig, a new chapter unfolds. How it ends depends on Haig as much as the president.

PARKVIEW COMMON — Hollowell's Inc., owner of the new facility across from Doctor's Park, held ribbon cutting ceremonies today highlighting the formal opening of the company's third drug store in Greenville. Cinnamon Tree restaurant and Clear-View Opticians also occupy the complex.

Shopping Area Has Opening

Ribbon cutting ceremonies marking the formal opening of Hollowell's third drug store in Greenville, located at Parkview Common on Stantonsburg Road, were held today.

Mayor Don McGlohn was invited to take part in the noon ceremonies.

Hollowell's Inc. owns the Parkview Common facility, which presently houses the Cinnamon Tree restaurant and Clear-View Opticians, a spokesman said, with space for future enlargement.

Jack Tyler, a Hollowell's pharmacist, said that the firm has been in the drug store business in Greenville for some 50 years. He noted that Hollowell's is a full service drug company that now offers computerized prescription service.

Tyler mentioned that Hollowell's employs over 50 persons in its Greenville facilities. Clarence Johnson is company president.

Parkview Common, located across from the entrance to Doctor's Park, features an architectural theme prominent in the low country of South Carolina, with the design of the facility inspired by a shopping center at Hilton Head Island, S.C.

Some 90 parking spaces are provided for customers on a landscaped lot, according to Tyler, who said that the facility includes some 9,000 square feet.

Michael F. Moye of Greenville is the developer for Parkview Common. Wimco of Washington handled the general construction.

Admits Acid Rain 'Insult' To Canada

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan acknowledged at a weekend conference on acid rain that the United States was delivering an "environmental insult" to Canada.

Moynihan warned that reaching a solution would take time — for more scientific research and for development of greater awareness in this country of the problem.

"We are just waking up to the problem in the United States," he said. "It takes a conscious thing, a discovery that there are lakes in the Adirondacks where fish are disappearing."

The New York Democrat spoke Saturday before a meeting of the Acid Rain and Clean Air Policy Implementation Conference at Buffalo State University's Amherst campus.

Acid precipitation occurs when sulfur dioxide or nitrogen dioxide, largely from fossil-fuel-burning industries and automobiles, is caught in high-level winds and fall as rain and snow.

New York officials say one result has been that 212 of 2,800 Adirondack lakes now have no animal life, with another 256 lakes approaching critical levels of acidity.

The problem exists throughout the Northeast and in much of Canada. In the province of Ontario, there are about 140 dead lakes.

"It is one of the first three or four issues with the United States," said Dr. Mark MacGuigan, who, as secretary of state for external affairs of Canada, holds a post equivalent to that of U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

At the conference, fossil-fuel-burning American industries, especially those in the Midwest, were blamed by various environmental leaders as prime culprits for the problem.

Wreck Occurs At Intersection

Cars driven by Curtis Glenn Nichols of Route 4, Tarboro and Stephen Allen Stox of Route 2, Ayden, collided about 9:13 p.m. Saturday at the intersection of Cotanche and Reade Streets.

Police, who charged Stox with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage from the mishap at $1,700 to the Nichols car and $1,000 to the Stox vehicle.

More Than A Third Of N.C. Politicians Possess Handgun

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — More than one-third of the politicians who responded to a Greensboro Daily News poll say they own at least one handgun.

Amid the debate over handgun control that followed the attempt on President Reagan's life, reporters contacted 125 elected representatives from Washington to Troy to get their views on guns — and to see if they owned them.

Of the 118 who agreed to talk, 43 — or 36.4 percent — said they have at least one handgun in their home.

The total number of handguns among these officials came to more than 50, not including the double-digit arsenal belonging to Moore County Commissioner A.E. Parker, who owns a hardware store.

Most said they either inherited their weapons or bought them at licensed gun shops. And most said they use their guns for target practice or self-defense.

None has ever fired at a person, and only 10 said they knew people who have defended themselves with handguns.

Some of the officials are gun collectors, while others said they use their pistols to hunt rabbits and squirrels, to shoot mice and snakes and to slaughter hogs.

Whatever the reason, 1979 FBI figures suggest that the rate of armed politicians in the area is high compared to the national handgun ownership rate of 25 percent.

But one expert says that doesn't mean area politicians are unusually prone to gunslinging.

"I don't think you have much to explain about that difference," said John S. Reed, a sociologist and student of Southern culture at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "That national (FBI) figure hides a big regional difference."

Southerners, Reed said, historically have owned more guns per capita than citizens elsewhere in the nation.

"So I don't think your legislators are particularly paranoid or under the influence of the NRA (National Rifle Association)," Reed said. "I think they're just reflecting their constituency."

Heading the list of handgun-owning politicians are 5th District Rep. Steve Neal, Senate President Pro Tempore Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, and state House President Pro Tempore Allen Barbee of Spring Hope.

Absent from the list are Gov. Jim Hunt, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

But state Sen. Henry Frye, D-Guilford, and U.S. Reps. Charles Whitley, Jim Martin and Eugene Johnston refused to answer the question.

Judy Mendenhall of the High Point City Council said she "never even held one. I'm scared to death of them. I don't even want one around me."

On the other side is U.S. Rep. Billy Hendon, R-11th District. "I know some people who aren't around anyone who should have" carried a gun, he said. "In Washington, he said, "they shoot them like clockwork."

Hendon's Washington office is decorated with a sign declaring, "A Smith & Wesson Beats Four Aces."

Desperate Need To Find Donor

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The parents of 3-year-old Matt Van Geest, faced with a one-in-a-million chance of finding a bone marrow donor to save their son from a rare blood disease, are hoping that government researchers can keep him alive as the search continues.

The National Institutes of Health bought Matt and his mother tickets for a flight today from Portland to Bethesda, Md.

Thirty relatives tested as donors were unsatisfactory. Doctors say that only one person in a million outside the family is likely to have tissue that will match Matt's.

Matt has Gaucher's disease, which he inherited from both parents and which occurs in about one of every 100,000 people. The disease prevents the bone marrow from sending into the red blood cells an enzyme that carries away fat.

Matt's stomach is bloated. His liver and spleen are infected. He has to take pain-killing drugs for sore joints.

He can't run around because jarring might rupture his spleen. He can't eat difficult-to-chew foods and doesn't have much of an appetite.

Matt's doctors say he may die within 10 years unless a donor can be found.

The trip to Maryland was arranged after a New York couple read an Associated Press story about the Van Geests' search for a tissue match, Mrs. Van Geest said.

The couple had lost two relatives to the disease and recommended a doctor who told the Van Geests about research by Dr. Roscoe Brady of the National Institutes of Health.

He has isolated the necessary enzyme in bone marrow of cadavers and has injected it into blood of Gaucher's disease victims. The process does not require a tissue match and does involve only bone-marrow surgery, but gives only temporary help.

The boy's 33-year-old father, Terry, is taking time off from his job in a lumber mill and is paying his $600 to $800 in expenses to accompany his wife and son to Maryland.

As explained by Dr. Neil Buist, professor of genetics and pediatrics at the University of Oregon Health Sciences Center, the enzyme protein obtained from somewhere other than the boy's bone marrow will last for only a few days.

It would have to be administered repeatedly.

Buist, like the Van Geests, has received hundreds of calls from potential bone-marrow donors and from medical laboratories offering help. Some people have offered money.

A bone-marrow transplant would cost $100,000. "But we're not even thinking about that yet," Mrs. Van Geest said.

There is no uniform, national databank of tissue type records, Buist said.

A person's tissue type wouldn't be on record unless that person had been tested, in most cases as a potential donor for an ill relative, he said.

University of Oregon Health Sciences Center officials said they had only enough chemicals to do about 300 tissue-type tests. The four-step process costs $260. Some doctors charge less to check the first two characteristics.

Van Geest said Dr. Kelly Bradford of San Rafael, Calif., who is interested in setting up a national registry of tissue types, planned to meet the Van Geests in Bethesda.

Fears Forming Of 'Underclass'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Rep. William R. Gray, D-Pa., told the graduating class of A&T State University on Sunday that federal budget cuts could create a permanent underclass in American society.

"We are seeing people espouse lofty goals, but what they are actually doing is creating this underclass," Gray said. "These people can only find fraud, waste and abuse in programs which assist the young, the elderly, the ill-housed and college students. They can't find one dollar of fraud in the defense budget of the United States."

Gray told the 1,000 graduates that the country needs compassionate people and a foreign policy that recognizes the interdependence of the nations of the world.

FLIPPED LID — Seventy-six year old Olive Fugh of Pottsville, Pa. views the results of a simple act Friday outside a Pottsville shopping center. All she did was slam the lid of the trunk of her car. That was enough to set the vehicle rolling slowly down a mall entrance ramp picking up speed as it crossed a busy highway without incident and coming to a stop upsidedown after hitting an embankment. No one was hurt. The trunk lid stayed closed throughout the whole affair. (AP Laserphoto)

Dry Weather Through May

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Severely dry, hot weather is expected to continue through May, whipping up forest fires and withering crops, state and federal officials say.

"It looks like we're headed for a very serious drought, and we're very concerned about it," said Allan J. Diekmann, water supply assistance chief in the state office of the U.S. Forest Service.

Even if normal rainfall began soon, the drought still will have damaged crops, water supplies, water quality and forest resources, officials said.

"It's like calling for summer to begin early," said Donald L. Gilman, chief long range forecaster for the National Weather Service.

Over the past year, only two-thirds of the normal rainfall has fallen over most of the state — 28.77 inches at Raleigh-Durham airport, compared with the normal 42.51 inches.

and the effect is even worse than the figures indicate in southeastern North Carolina because nearly all the rain has come in showers too brief to do any good, officials say.

While much of the other drought-plagued areas of the nation have had recent spells of plentiful rain, North Carolina, eastern Virginia and South Carolina remain dry.

"There is moisture in the atmosphere, but it's just not reaching us," said chief weather forecaster John R. McClain at the Raleigh-Durham airport. "To get the really good soaking rains we need, we need a good, slow moving, low-pressure system that comes in either off the Gulf of Mexico or off the Atlantic Ocean."

During May, a strong fair-weather system will block the westerlies that normally bring moisture east this time of year, said Roland G. Lofredo, a hydrologist at the Silver Spring, Md., weather facility.

He said North Carolina's low stream and groundwater levels almost certainly will not rise again before cool weather returns in autumn, and less water means there is less water to dilute pollutants.

The dryness is expected to damage 440,000 acres of winter wheat in the state — the largest planting since 1961 — by hampering pollination, said Dr. Guy L. Jones, professor in charge of crop science for the state Extension Service.

And farmers without irrigation systems may lose their entire crops of flue-cured tobacco, he said. Some corn and cotton seeds are not germinating in the dry earth, and weeds are increasing because herbicides triggered by moisture are not working. Peanut seeds may die without water.

Trees planted in the past two years will suffer in the drought, and older pines will be more vulnerable to the Southern pine beetle, said state Forest Service spokesman Tom Heggle.

But fires are the worst threat to forests, he said.

"Our veteran staffers, who have been around a long time, shake their heads and say this is as bad as 1963 — maybe worse," Heggle said. Fires took 277,496 acres in the state that year — compared with 99,000 acres so far this year and an average of 16,600 acres per year.

Bloodhound Pack Is Ready For Search

By CYNTHIA BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
EAST GREENBUSH, N.Y. (AP) — No one has ever called David Onderdonk's dogs cute, and he doesn't recommend their kind as pets. For one thing, they slobber a lot.

As trackers, though, bloodhounds like Boozer, Jigger and Brandy are so good they're the only animals recognized as witnesses in a court of law.

"I'm a hound man," Onderdonk proclaimed, producing a business card for Rensselaer County Search and Rescue Inc. that reads, "Have Bloodhounds — Will Search."

"I'll take my dogs anywhere — for free — that there is a missing person who wants our help. This is my contribution to mankind," he said.

Even as Onderdonk, 59, and his wife, Hilda, 54, extolled the big dogs' virtues, he noted that great patience and dedication is required to work with them. While bloodhounds are affectionate and fond of children, he cautioned, "If you don't do something like we're doing, you'll think the hound's a big slob of a dog."

Since 1971, Onderdonk, an East Greenbush police officer, and his three dogs have tallied more than 100 finds, nosing out competition ranging from other dogs like German shepherds, coonhounds and beagles to state police and Civil Air Patrol helicopters.

"The bloodhounds have the God-given ability of a nose that can trail a person on a scent 10 days old," he said. "Everyone has different fingerprints, we all know that. To a bloodhound, everyone has different scents."

Onderdonk said bloodhounds have been unjustly slandered as savage and ugly dogs in legend and literature, such as the famous phosphorescent beast in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and this line from the poet, Lord Byron:

"To have set the bloodhound mob on their patrician prey..."

Onderdonk recalled having "one mother tell us she was afraid of having our dogs trace her child because of what she had seen in the movies. But when we brought the dogs over, they began licking and playing with her other child so she was reassured."

The bloodhound's characteristic bleary eyes, drooping mouth, oversized floppy ears and folds of wrinkled skin under the chin haven't done much for its image, either. While some find the features noble and endearing, others view the dog as one of nature's bizarre tricks.

Actually, Onderdonk said, each feature has a purpose. The floppy ears and great jowls — called "fews" — work together by dragging on the ground and stirring up the scent. The drooping produces moisture, which intensifies the scent. The bleary eyes are caused by a second, inside eyelid that drops protectively over the dog's eye when it tracks in underbrush or wooded areas.

Onderdonk conceded that German shepherds are by far the better bomb detectors, narcotics dogs or guard dogs. But when it comes to finding lost people, Onderdonk said, bloodhounds have it all over the more excitable shepherds.

On Boozer's first assignment, at 18 months, she sniffed an 18-hour-old track left by an amnesia victim, then walked past the volunteers and a host of rescue squads to find her man alive, unharmed.

Ten years later, one of Mrs. Onderdonk's most prized possessions is a letter of appreciation from that man's wife.

"In my heart, you Boozer will always have first place along with my family," the grateful woman wrote. "Because of her, my family is whole again."

The searches have not always ended so happily. Sometimes, the trail ends in a bog in the Adirondack Mountains of upstate New York or at the edge of a pond.

Once, during a search for an escaped convict, the searching bloodhounds stopped beside a railroad track and refused to go farther, Mrs. Onderdonk recalled. Authorities were asked to stop and search the train at the next station. The convict was apprehended in the boxcar, just as Jigger had sensed he would be.

In addition to search and rescue work, Onderdonk is on call to help solve crimes throughout the county. Recently, Jigger trailed a suspect from a broken soft drink machine over a highway, across a parking lot behind a shopping center, around a bank, through a woods and back to the garage housing the soft drink machine — and the suspect.

Criminal searches are tough on the dogs, Onderdonk said, because the criminal is rarely so thoughtful as to leave behind a shoe, a hat or a handkerchief for the dog to smell.

But bloodhounds can surprise you, he added with a smile. Take the time his dogs tracked down a man on a 10-day-old scent long after other searchers had given up and gone away.

And the same day that one woman called the dogs "majestic," Mrs. Onderdonk said, she overheard a man tell his wife that "those are the ugliest dogs I've ever seen in my life."

The next winter, Jigger rescued that man after he lost his way while deer hunting. Then, Mrs. Onderdonk recalled, he told her, "Those are the most beautiful dogs I've ever seen in my life."

Plan Mental Health Speaker

Bill Thomas, subject of the movie, "The Other Side of Hell," and of the book, "The Shoe Leather Treatment," will speak here Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Thomas spent nine years as a patient in Pennsylvania's Farview State Hospital for the Criminally Insane. "As well as being an enormously exciting adventure, Bill Thomas's story is also an extraordinary testament to the man's courage and ability to heal himself," Alan Arkin, the actor who played Thomas in "The Other Side of Hell," said. Thomas will talk here with candor about his illness and the hope that exists for the mentally ill. He will emphasize the hope there is for humane treatment and better understanding.

Now a California resident, Thomas was recently elected president of the Mental Health Association in Los Angeles County. He serves as a mental health advisor to a California assemblywoman and on the editorial review board of Advocacy Now, a nationally circulated mental health journal. He is also a member of Advocates for the Mentally Ill in Los Angeles.

They asked about the availability of loans through Community Development and other government funded programs for housing rehabilitation. It was agreed that city officials will conduct a special meeting with the residents at a later date to explain the CD program and the availability of housing loans.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast until early Tuesday predicts showers for Wisconsin and parts of Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa and Illinois.

By The Associated Press
Rain will remain conspicuous by its absence in North Carolina at least until Thursday, the National Weather Service reported today.

A persistent high pressure area covering the eastern United States will keep warm and dry weather in North Carolina today and tomorrow.

The next threat of rain will be from a slow moving cold front that is now splashing some showers on the Great Plains.

This weather system will approach the state Thursday, bringing a chance of thunderstorms to the mountains. The rest of North Carolina may get some rain by Saturday.

Today will feature plenty of sunshine and highs mostly in the 70s, and Tuesday will be a bit warmer, with highs close to 80 in much of the state.

Skies will stay mainly sunny in eastern North Carolina Tuesday, with some cloudiness moving into western parts of the state.

On the beach mostly sunny weather is forecast for today with highs in the 70s. Small craft advisories are in effect for the coastal waters north of Point Lookout.

Beaches will be mostly sunny again Tuesday, with highs from the low 70s at the northern beaches to the low 80s at the southern beaches.

Early this morning a giant storm was churning up the Atlantic a few hundred miles east of the coast. But the storm is drifting slowly east and away from us. So its only effects on the state will be some gusty winds along the outer banks today.

Last night, skies were mostly clear. Low temperatures were mainly in the mid-30s to mid-40s.

Marchers Explain Their Goals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mae Gautier is against war. "Feather" is against nuclear power. Karen Vigneux is against abortion.

Together, with thousands upon thousands of others from all walks of the American left, they marched on the Pentagon Sunday against U.S. military involvement in El Salvador and the shift from social concern that organizers said it represents.

"I have to come believe war cannot be justified any more," said Ms. Gautier, 50, an old hand at Washington demonstrations and a part-time staff member for Presbyterians for Peace.

"I feel the United States is very wrong to try to tell other people how to live. I want to be counted." Was she doing any good here? "I don't know." Did she do any good here before? "Yes, we did good. I think they (the demonstrations) ended the war."

Presbyterians for Peace is backed by 112 Presbyterian churches in New York City, said Ms. Gautier, who has been demonstrating in Washington since 1963.

Paul McNeil, 39, of Providence, R.I., "laid off from my job in the Department of Employment Security because of a funding crisis," is carrying a sign that reads "U.S. Out of El Salvador, Britain Out of Ireland."

What is the connection? "You're looking at two vestiges of empire," he said. "If either of those countries went socialist — I mean economically independent, a lot of capitalists would be upset," said a companion who begged "don't use my name. I work for the governor and he doesn't know I'm here."

U.S. capitalists? What is their involvement in El Salvador?

"Well, Bell Helicopters — that's a division of Textron, a Rhode Island company — are being sold to El Salvador, and General Motors has a plant there, I understand," he said.

Indeed, Bell helicopters have been sent to El Salvador, but General Motors Corp. in fact has no plants there.

"My name is Feather," said the woman wearing a yellow T-shirt proclaiming "Convert Rocky Flats" and a button saying "Mutants for Nuclear Power."

Feather what? "Just Feather."

Feather, 26, is a comparative novice at these things, having attended only one Washington demonstration before, a rally against nuclear power last year. Rocky Flats, a nuclear weapons plant, is near her home in Colorado in a town she declined to name.

What connection does nuclear power have with El Salvador? "Power plant waste can be made into bombs — bombs mean war — El Salvador could mean war."

Roz Udow of Great Neck, N.Y., marched behind a banner for "Mothers and Others Against the War." She said she was offended by one chant, by a very small group, that went, "Red, white and blue, we spit on you."

But Mrs. Udow, a former executive of Planned Parenthood of New York, said she thinks there may be more demonstrations even uglier.

"I think certainly if (Secretary of State Alexander M.) Haig has his way and if (President) Reagan doesn't take account of the enormous movement in the country for peace and for people being able to have their social and health needs addressed, and for a non-militaristic attitude, (the president) is going to see civil strife in the streets," she said.

Ten people gathered under an incongruous banner: "Stop Abortion, the Arms Race (and) Aid to El Salvador — Ban Weapons,

Not Children." Karen Vigneux, 22, of New York City said her band of Pro-Lifers for Survival were "trying to bridge the gap between the whole pro-life movement and the peace movement."

U.S. Taking Lead To Form Force For Sinai

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military officers from the United States, Israel and Egypt are meeting in Washington this week to discuss details of establishing a multinational peacekeeping force for the Sinai outside United Nations auspices.

The meetings through Wednesday were begun after the United States concluded the United Nations would be unable to create the force, called for under the Camp David peace treaty between Egypt and Israel, Anita Stockman, a State Department spokeswoman, said Sunday night.

She said Soviet opposition to U.N. sponsorship of the peacekeeping force requires the United States to take the lead in creating it.

Among the questions to be considered by the military officials is the composition of the Sinai contingent, Miss Stockman said. As many as half of the 2,500-man force could be American, according to previous reports of administration thinking on the subject.

The three-day conference will pave the way for "political meetings" between the three nations later this month in the Egyptian city of Giza, Miss Stockman said.

"Soundings have been taken over the past six weeks at the United Nations, and we have reached the conclusion that the Security Council will not be able to create a United Nations force envisioned in the treaty," she said.

The U.S.-sponsored Camp

David accord gave Israel until April 1982 to complete its withdrawal from the mountainous Sinai desert area it occupied during the 1967 Mideast war.

The accord envisioned a U.N. peacekeeping force, but the Soviet Union has said it would veto any proposed Security Council action creating it.

"We have been planning for this contingency for some time and will now proceed with our preparations to carry out the United States commitment to take those steps necessary to insure the establishment and maintenance of an alternative multinational force," Miss Stockman said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices plummeted along a broad front today amid heightened concern over rising interest rates as the prime rate leaped a full percentage point to 19 percent at several major banks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had lost 28.46 points over the past four sessions, plunged 16.30 points to 979.29 by noon.

Just a week ago, the blue-chip average stood at an eight-year high of 1,024.05. But it started falling Tuesday as interest rates rose. Losers led a 9-1 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Leslie Pollack, an analyst at the investment house of Shearson Loeb Rhoades, said the sudden jump in interest rates caught investors by surprise, but added, "I don't look for a major break to develop from here."

This morning, Morgan Guaranty Trust, the nation's fifth-largest commercial bank, increased its prime lending rate from the industrywide 18 percent level that had prevailed since the middle of last week.

No. 3 Chase Manhattan Bank, No. 4 Manufacturers Hanover Trust, No. 7 Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust and No. 9 First National Bank of Chicago were among banks that quickly followed the move.

A Federal Reserve Board report of an unexpected $4.2 billion surge in a closely watched measure of the nation's money supply led to predictions of further interest rate increases in the near term.

The Fed report was released following the Friday close of the NYSE, but sent bond prices falling to all-time lows and bond yields soaring to record highs. The bond market's decline continued this morning.

Investors are concerned that too rapid growth of the money supply would lead to further tightening of Fed monetary policy, pushing interest rates higher.

But George Ball, president of the investment house of E.F. Hutton & Co., told reporters in West Germany today that he expects interest rates to decline by July. He predicted that the prime rate at major banks will fall as low as 12 percent by the start of the third quarter.

Volume on the Big Board reached 20.95 million shares over the first two hours against 20.72 million in the comparable period Friday.

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks was off 1.16 at 75.59. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 6.00 to 350.24.

Tenneco topped the active list, down 1/4 at 40%, including a block of 162,900 shares changing hands at 40%.

Other active issues included International Business Machines, down 7/8 at 58 1/4; General Motors, off 1/2 at 34 1/4; Sony, down 3/4 at 19 1/4; and General Motors, down 1 at 53.

Car Rolls In River

Robert Parker of Route 1, Stokes ran into a problem when he visited the Town Commons between 11 p.m. and midnight Saturday.

Police Department investigators reported Parker parked his car on a steep grade at the boat launching area and went for a walk along the river. When he returned, his car had rolled down the hill and into the river.

Officers said Parker was able to drive his car away after a wrecker pulled the vehicle back onto a firm footing.

Suspect Prince Charles Bugged

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Officials were looking into charges an Australian telephone worker tapped Prince Charles' calls to his fiancée, Lady Diana Spencer, during a visit here last month, Communications Minister Ian Sinclair said today. Tapes of the calls reportedly contain disparaging remarks about Australians and Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser.

Several British newspapers said five calls, which also included one to Queen Elizabeth, were tapped during the prince's stay at the private home of a friend, Sinclair Hills, in Moree, 350 miles northwest of Sydney.

The London Daily Express reported the tape recordings had been obtained by an unidentified West German magazine and British journalist and author Simon Regan said they were being kept in a Sydney bank vault.

"If it's true, and we really don't know if it is at this point, it would be utterly despicable and contemptible behavior," said a spokeswoman at Buckingham Palace.

Sinclair said he had received a preliminary report on the allegations from Telecom Australia, the nation's phone company. The minister said it covered the physical arrangements made for installing phones at the Hills estate, Terlings, and the exchanges through which the Charles' calls to Britain would have passed.

Sinclair declined to provide further details and said the investigation was continuing.

If the bugging allegations prove accurate, they would represent "a very serious breach of privacy," he said. "We have very tight laws which are designed to protect the privacy of individuals."

Charles wound up his overseas trip in Washington Sunday night and returned to Britain. Friends said he joined his fiancée today at Balmoral Castle in Scotland.

Mauled By Park Bear

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A 36-year-old woman who had scrambled up a tree in Yellowstone National Park to avoid a grizzly bear was pulled from her perch and mauled before the bear and her cub ran into the woods, authorities said.

Martie Lunn, of Bozeman, Mont., suffered minor injuries in the encounter Saturday on a trail near the Old Faithful geyser, park officials said.

The incident occurred when Mrs. Lunn, her husband Dr. Judd Lunn and their 7-year-old and 5-year-old sons came upon a female grizzly bear with her cub, said park spokeswoman Joan Anzelmo.

The children and Mrs. Lunn scaled trees while Lunn distracted the bear. But when the bear began following him, Mrs. Lunn screamed her husband's name and the bear charged for her, Ms. Anzelmo said.

"The bear pulled Mrs. Lunn out of the tree and started biting her," she said. Then a cub came out of the woods, and the bear ran after her offspring, Ms. Anzelmo said.

The family hiked about a mile to the head of the Mystic Falls Trail and then drove the 120 miles to Bozeman's Deaconess Hospital, where Mrs. Lunn was treated for a fractured finger and bites on her left hand, forearm and hip.

The trail, heavily used later in the season, will be closed "for a few days" while rangers monitor the area until the bear leaves and "it's safe again for the bear and the visitors," Ms. Anzelmo said.

Bears roam throughout the park but they usually stay away from heavily traveled roads and trails, she said.

Refuse Hear CIA Plaint

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to hear a former Brooklyn College professor's claim that he was denied tenure because of several encounters he had with CIA officials.

The high court without comment let stand a federal appeals court ruling that overturned a $580,000 award won by Michael I. Selzer against the New York City Board of Higher Education and six former colleagues.

In a separate request from the same dispute, the justices refused to consider whether Selzer's dealings with the spy agency were protected by the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of expression and association.

The case now goes back to a federal trial court for a new trial.

Selzer claimed his colleagues on faculty committees recommended against his tenure and promotion in the fall of 1977 because they were troubled by his CIA contacts.

The contacts included Selzer's unsuccessful attempts to obtain CIA data on terrorists in connection with his studies of "psychopolitics."

Selzer also said that he been asked by the CIA to provide the agency with whatever military, scientific and other relevant information he obtained on a trip to Europe. He said he had been "debriefed" by a CIA representative on his return in August 1976.

Selzer said he did not specifically agree to provide the CIA with any information, adding that he had given "no information of value" to the agency during the debriefing.

Pirates Fall To UNC In Season Finale, 4-3

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina's Pirates suffered their fourth straight loss Sunday afternoon, but it was a performance that made Coach Hal Baird happy nonetheless.

"I'm proud of the way we played," Baird said after the Bucs had bowed to the University of North Carolina, 4-3.

The Pirates played flawless ball in the field, and banged out eight hits, three of them doubles. Carolina also had eight hits, also with three doubles.

The real difference, however, was probably another extra base hit, a two-run homer in the second inning by Mitch McCleney, the ninth man in the batting order.

"It's odd," Baird said. "Usually left-handed batters give Bill (Wilder) trouble. Today it was the right-handers."

"Bill pitched well enough to win. We played well as a team and lost, but we could have won some games we did lose playing this well earlier," the coach added.

"I'm proud of the way we finished up, even though it was a loss."

The defeat closed out the year for the Pirates, 28-15. North Carolina, which still has some hopes of a post-season at large bid from the NCAA, is now 38-15, pending that further play in the NCAA.

Carolina scored what proved to be the winning run in the sixth. Barney Spooner was hit by a pitch and Schuler beat out a chopper between the mound and third. Both runners moved up on an infield out, and McCleney laid down a sacrifice bunt to score Spooner.

The final ECU run came in the seventh. Persico led off with a single to center and was sacrificed up. Kelly Robinette doubled to left, scoring Persico time to center, and was sacrificed up. He scored when Charlie Smith reached on an error.

to pull back within one.

The Pirates were unable to get anything else going, however, leaving the potential tying run on second twice more in the final three frames.

Hendley and Persico each had two hits to lead the Pirates at the plate, while Roberts and J.D. Henderson each had two for the Tar Heels.

"I don't think that losing four in a row at the end of this season will have any effect on us next spring," Baird said. "If something like that carried over, then we would have won 20 in a row to start this year, since we won our last 12 in regular season.

"I think we'll have a much better season next year, though. We have nearly everyone back, and with those we're expecting to join us, plus maybe a few more, we could be much stronger."

And Baird noted that this was supposed to be a rebuilding year, anyway. "We lost our whole outfield, our first baseman and catcher. To finish 13 games over .500 in a rebuilding year isn't too bad, is it?"

Allison 'Spins' To 500 Victory Over Baker

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — It was one of those days when a less experienced driver than Bobby Allison might have become discouraged.

At one time during the early minutes of Sunday's Winston 500 Grand National stock car race, Allison's car was hit from the rear when another car spun in front of him, abruptly slowing traffic.

Later, the 43-year-old driver found himself a full lap behind the leaders because of a tire problem.

But, when the long race came down to the ultimate moment, it was Allison's silver and black Buick Regal crossing the finish line a mere 28 feet ahead of second-place Buddy Baker to win his second Winston 500 and third race on the superfast Alabama International Motor Speedway track.

Twenty-eight feet is about one-tenth second at 196 mph, which is what the leaders were clocked at during the last lap.

Baker, who was going for an unprecedented fourth Winston Cup triumph, lost the lead to Allison for the final time on the backstretch of the last of 188 laps. Then, he barely held off Darrell Waltrip for second place by about one foot, while still chasing Allison.

Ricky Rudd was less than a car length behind Waltrip in fourth and Donnie Allison, Bobby's younger brother, was a distant fifth.

"It was a tough day, there's no question about that," said Allison, who won for the first time since his season-opening triumph at Riverside, Calif.

"Buddy was pretty aggressive all day long, and Ricky was running strong, but I knew I had a lot of horsepower. That engine thunders along, and the car was working just about perfect all day."

Allison picked up the winner's share of $41,700, plus another $10,000 for leading the first leg of the Winston Cup point race, which is divided into three parts.

He averaged a relatively slow 149.376 mph in a race punctuated by three accidents in the first 25 laps, the first of which eliminated eight cars and damaged several others, and a total of seven yellow flags.

That crash came on the second lap when Harry Gant apparently got bumped between two other cars and wound up spinning into the wall in turn three. That started a wild chain reaction.

Allison's car suffered damage to the rear end on lap when Rick Wilson's car spun as he led the leaders through the first turn at the end of the third caution period.

"On that restart, somebody spun and Bobby and I slowed down," explained rookie Morgan Shepherd. "Then somebody hit me in the rear and drove me into Bobby."

Some quick work in the pits and Allison's car was right back fighting for the lead, which he held 16 times for a total of 69 laps.

However, on lap 135, he suddenly ducked into the pits under the green for a tire change, falling a lap behind Baker, who led at the time.

"One of my tires equalized (went out of balance) and the car was vibrating," Allison explained. "I had no choice."

With the help of one quick caution flag, brought out by debris on the track, Allison managed to grab onto the rear

'The Fat Man & Legs'

Duo Combines To Win 107th Kentucky Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — There in the Kentucky Derby winner's circle with the roses were "The Fat Man" and "Legs."

And that's just where trainer John Campo, known in the world of backstretch as The Fat Man, had continuously told people he and Pleasant Colony would be.

They are a winning team — the 5-foot-7 Campo and skinny-looking colt, of whom Campo says, "There's no body to this horse. He's all legs."

They joined forces when owner Thomas Mellon Evans switched the colt to the 43-year-old Campo from trainer P. O'Donnell Lee, who handled Pleasant Colony in Florida. In his first start under Campo, Pleasant Colony won the 1 1/2-mile Wood Memorial April 18 at Aqueduct.

Saturday, Pleasant Colony, Campo and jockey Jorge Velasquez became the heroes of the 107th Derby — a Derby in which the jockey on the third-place finisher misjudged the finish line; a Derby in which the third-place finisher misjudged the finish line; a Derby in which most of the top contenders finished far back and a couple of mutual-field horses had a field day; a Derby which was a court case as well as a horse race.

Pleasant Colony's victory before the second largest Derby crowd of 139,195 was worth a winning mutual payoff of $9 and a Derby record winner's share of $317,200 from a record purse of $404,700.

Before the 21 3-year-olds went to the post in the richest Derby, Campo said he told Velasquez, who was riding Pleasant Colony for the first time to "break good. But he took him way back. I'm surprised at that, but I'm not the jockey. I'm the trainer."

Velasquez had Pleasant Colony 16th after the first half mile which Top Avenger carved out in 45-5, fastest first half in Derby history, after the fastest Derby first quarter of 21-4-5.

Pleasant Colony was 15th with a half mile remaining, began to move into contention on the turn and was eighth with a quarter-mile to go. At this point, Proud Appeal who was part of the favored 2-1 entry with Golden Derby, was fourth. The three leaders were Bold Ego, Partez and Pass the Tab. Woodchopper was 11th.

With an eighth pole, Pleasant Colony was 1 1/2-lengths ahead of Partez, with Woodchopper fifth and moving. Pleasant Colony completed the 1 1/4 miles in 2:02 for a three-quarter length margin over Woodchopper, who, jockey Eddie Delahoussaye thought, could have won if he had not been blocked at the five-eighths pole.

Velasquez said he found racing room at the quarter pole. "I'm just tickled to death," said the Panamanian who won (Please turn to page 13)

Celtic Comeback Fells Philadelphia

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics staggered on the brink of elimination for three games. But it was the Philadelphia 76ers who took the fatal plunge.

"Some team had to fall and I'm just happy it wasn't us," Boston forward Cedric Maxwell said.

Boston, very often down but never out in its Eastern Conference championship series, mustered a comeback for the fifth straight game Sunday to fudge the 76ers, 91-90, in the seventh and deciding contest.

The Celtics host the first two games of the National Basketball Association title series Tuesday and Thursday against Houston, who they beat in four straight games in last year's playoffs.

"People said we couldn't do it and counted us out but none of the players counted us out," said Boston rookie Kevin McHale. "We may miss ourselves into a corner but we come out fighting."

"We led the whole game, then we had a letdown," said Philadelphia guard Maurice Cheeks. "We couldn't seem to build on our lead when we had the chances and they were always able to come back."

Boston is only the fourth team of the 69 who have trailed NBA playoff series three games to one to come back and win. In the previous two games, the Celtics rallied from halftime deficits of 10 and 9 points to win by 2.

They trailed 53-48 after two periods Sunday and 87-80 when Julius Erving, who led the 76ers with 23 points, capped a 12-1 Philadelphia run with a fallaway jumper with 6:25 left in the game. After that, the 76ers made just one field goal, committed five turnovers, four of them steals, and had two shots blocked.

"We played good defense going down the stretch," said

Boston playmaker Nate Archibald. "We didn't hit that many shots. The defense did the job for us."

Boston's shooting was horrendous. Its 38.2 percent field goal shooting was lower than its worst regular season showing and topped only its 37.8 mark in the second game against the 76ers.

"They have more physical talent than we do and their transition game is better than ours," Maxwell said of the 76ers. "We just executed a little better down the stretch."

Larry Bird, who led Boston with 23 points and 11 rebounds, got a defensive rebound and hit a fastbreak bank shot with 1:03 to go to put Boston on top 91-89. With 29 seconds left, Cheeks was fouled by Gerald Henderson. He missed the first shot and made the second.

The 76ers got the ball back after an M.L. Carr miss and called timeout with one second remaining. But Bobby Jones' inbound pass hit the top of the backboard, the ball was touched, and time ran out.

"I'm just relieved that it's over," Bird said. "I don't need a rest. We're ready for Houston now."

Of the other three teams to win playoff series after falling behind 3-1, only the 1968 Celtics, who did it against the 76ers, went on to win the NBA title. That was their 10th crown. They are gunning for their 14th, the most in NBA history.

"It was a great series," said 76er Coach Billy Cunningham. "One thing that disappointed me was the contact at the end and the inconsistencies of the officials." Darrell Garretson and Jake O'Donnell.

"There should have been some calls at the end," said Jones. "There was a lot of contact out there, a lot of heavy contact."

Boston was called for 18 fouls to 27 for Philadelphia. While the 76ers outshot the Celtics from the foul line, 80 percent to 62.9 percent, Boston had 20 more shots and made 10 more.

Blue Jays Down Orioles—Finally

By The Associated Press

The Toronto Blue Jays were better to feast on in Baltimore than crab cakes as far as the Orioles were concerned, but the taste turned somewhat sour Sunday.

After dropping their last 19 games in Crabbtown dating back to July 6, 1978, the Blue Jays finally ended the embarrassment with a 4-2 victory just three short of the consecutive-game record by one club at home over another. The Boston Red Sox won 22 in a row from the Philadelphia A's in 1949-50.

"It shows that if you keep showing up you've got a chance to win," said Toronto Manager Bobby Mattick.

Toronto's Mark Bombardier retired the first 16 Baltimore batters before Gary Roenicke doubled. Al Bumbry then cracked a two-out homer to give the Orioles a 2-1 lead. The Blue Jays tied it in the seventh on singles by Garth Iorg and Alfredo Griffin, a force play and a passed ball by Dan Graham.

Willie Upshaw hit a tiebreaking leadoff homer in the eighth off Steve Stone, and the Blue Jays added another run on a walk, sacrifice, wild pitch and Jorge Bell's single.

"We definitely talked about it (the streak) when we came to Baltimore, but out on the field it's just us against them — one game at a time," said Upshaw.

"It had to happen, sooner or later," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "You just don't win them all. But all during the streak, you don't think about it. You just come to the ballpark to win that particular day."

Yankees 3-2, A's 2-0

Jim Spencer, who drove in his first run of the season with a double in the opener, broke up a scoreless nightcap with a seventh-inning homer, his first, off Brian Kingman as the Yankees slowed down the red-hot A's. New York won the opener on Jerry Mumphrey's 10th-inning leadoff homer off Steve McCatty while reliever Ron Davis, the winner, struck out all five Oakland batters he faced to end the game.

In the first game, Rudy May and Davis combined for 14 strikeouts. Tommy John went eight innings-plus in the nightcap, allowing five hits. He was relieved after walking the leadoff batter in the ninth, and Rich Gossage posted his sixth save, allowing one hit and striking out the side.

White Sox 6, Indians 0

Richard Dotson tossed a five-hitter and Chicago collected 15 hits as the White Sox snapped a four-game losing streak and handed the Indians only their second loss in 11 games. Dotson walked two, struck out three and allowed only two runners to reach scoring position.

Brewers 4, Angels 3

Larry Hise doubled with two out in the sixth inning to drive in a run and then scored the eventual winning run on Don Money's single. Hise's double off loser Steve Renko scored Robin Yount, who led off with a single and advanced to second on Ben Oglivie's fly ball. Hise moved to third on Gorman Thomas' infield hit and scored on a single by Money for a 4-1 lead.

Rangers 9, Royals 8

Pat Putnam clubbed a 10th-inning leadoff home run off Juan Berenguer to cap a Texas comeback. The Rangers, who led 3-0 early in the game against Kansas City starter Paul Splittorff, trailed 8-5 but erupted for three runs to tie the game in the eighth inning, the runs coming on a double by Putnam and singles by Bill Stein and Bump Wills. Texas starter Ferguson Jenkins was cruising along with a 3-0 lead until the sixth, when Kansas City batted around, scoring seven times, capped by Cesar Geronimo's two-run homer.

Twins 3, Red Sox 1

Pete Redfern and Doug Corbett combined on a four-hitter as Minnesota completed a four-game sweep, nailing down the victory with two unearned runs off rookie Steve Crawford in the third inning. Sal Butera led off with the first of his three walks. He took second as John Castino grounded to first for the second out.

Mickey Hatcher singled over second and Butera was trapped after rounding third but catcher Gary Allenson dropped the ball in the rundown and Butera got back to third, with Hatcher reaching second. After Roy Smalley walked, Adams poked a single to shallow right-center, extending Boston's losing streak since 1977 to seven games.

Tigers 8, Mariners 5

Detroit came from behind with five unearned runs in the seventh inning after Seattle had taken a 5-3 lead in the bottom of the sixth on a three-run pinch homer by Gary Gray. The Tigers scored seven unearned runs all told as Seattle committed three errors and two passed balls. Al Cowens tied the score with a single. Kirk Gibson walked with the bases loaded to force in the winning run and Stan Papi's singled home two insurance runs.

Rookie Wins—Again

Dodger's Valenzuela Captures Sixth Decision

Thanks To Some Friendly Extra-Inning Help

By The Associated Press

Fernando Valenzuela has been doing it all for the Los Angeles Dodgers this season...well, practically everything.

On Sunday, the Dodgers' rookie pitching sensation needed some extra-inning help from his teammates to bag yet another victory, a 6-1, 10-inning triumph over the Montreal Expos.

"This one was a little tougher than the rest of them," said Valenzuela after winning his sixth straight game. "It may look easy out there, but it's very difficult."

It was the first time that Valenzuela failed to finish a game this season. In five previous starts, the left-hander from Mexico pitched four shutouts and allowed but one run in the other game.

Against the Expos, the 20-year-old pitcher gave up only five hits and one run and left after nine innings with the game tied 1-1. The Dodgers then salvaged the victory for him with a five-run 10th keyed by Reggie Smith's tie-breaking single and a spotless inning of relief pitching by Steve Howe.

"All of my teammates have been great," said Valenzuela. "They've helped me both on and off the field. They played great behind me, and my wins are their wins."

The Expos were generally impressed with their first look at the chunky southpaw. "Every time he wanted to throw a strike today, he could do it," said Montreal Manager Dick Williams.

Catcher Gary Carter: "He's not afraid to throw breaking pitches when he's behind. Our scouting reports said he was like Randy Jones of the Mets, but Jones doesn't have Valenzuela's fastball."

his first Derby in six tries.
As Woodchopper passed Partez with 70 yards to go, Sandy Hawley stood briefly in the irons.
"Yes, I did misjudge the wire and stood up at the sixteen pole," said Hawley. "About that time I was getting dirt in my face and I thought I saw the wire and I started easing up. You get used to the finish line at certain tracks. I know it didn't cost us second money."

Proud Appeal, who had won his five previous races this year, finished 18th to the bafflement of trainer Stanley Hough. Tap Shoes, another top contender, came in 14th, and 80-year-old trainer Horatio Luro said, "I'm very, very disappointed." Cure the Blues, the third betting favorite behind Proud Appeal and Pleasant Colony, finished 15th under Bill Shoemaker who was riding in his 21st Derby and looking for his fourth win.

Cure the Blues was walking sorely after the race and Sunday morning a pus pocket was discovered in his left hind hoof. Dr. Robert Copeland, a veterinarian, said the pocket could have been there as long as three weeks, but trainer LeRoy Jolley said there had been no outward indications of its presence before the Derby.

Turning in excellent races to finish fourth and fifth, respectively, were Classic Go Go and and Television Studio, who were members of the nine-horse mutuel field.

Eighth and 17th, respectively, were Flying Nashua and Mythical, the two colts who got into the race through legal action. They were eliminated by Churchill Downs' 20-horse-limit rule, based on career earnings, after being entered Thursday. When the filly Wayward Lass was entered as entrymate with Noble Nashua, Flying Nashua was bumped from the No. 20 spot.

Flying Nashua's owners went to court and got back in the race when a circuit-court judge cited a Kentucky racing rule which says two horses with common ties cannot exclude a single entry from a race. After Churchill Downs's appeal failed, Mythical Ruler also was permitted back into the race.

Wayward Lass ran third in Friday's Kentucky Oaks and was scratched from Derby. But trainer Jose Martin was still angry Sunday about the possibility that he might have been forced to scratch half his entry to allow another horse into the Derby. Noble Nashua finished ninth.

"Well, I got it all," Campo said Sunday morning to reporters to whom he had been predicting victory in the week before the Derby. "You guys gotta come up with some horses to beat him in the Preakness."

14 Horses May Enter Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — Kentucky Derby winner Pleasant Colony could face as many as 13 other colts in the 106th running of the Preakness Stakes, the middle jewel of racing's Triple Crown, according to Pimlico Race Course officials.

Track officials said Sunday they expected at least 10 and as many as 14 horses to enter the Preakness. Among the missing, however, will be pre-Derby favorites Proud Appeal and Cure the Blues.

Eight of the 14 colts thought to be possible entrants in the May 16 Preakness finished behind Pleasant Colony in Saturday's Derby.

John Campo, trainer of Pleasant Colony, predicted Sunday that the Buckland Farms colt would win the Triple Crown.

"We're going to take them all one by one. He came out of the race perfect," Campo said.

Pleasant Colony was loaded on a van for a lengthy trip to New York where he will remain for some eight or nine days before arriving at Pimlico several days before the Preakness.

Campo said.

Seeking a rematch with the Derby winner are Greentree Stable's Woodchopper, who placed second; Davis & Greene's third-place finisher Partez and Verne Winchell's fourth-place finisher Classic Go Go.

Also expected to race in the Preakness are Louis Villareal's Pass the Tab, who finished sixth in the Derby; eighth-place finisher Flying Nashua, owned by a syndicate of four; and 11th place finisher Double Sonic, owned by Fred and Lou Elias.

Flying Zee Stable's Noble Nashua, who finished ninth in the Derby, and Double B Ranch and Kid's Bold Ego, who finished 10th, are rated as possibles.

The new horses pointing for the Preakness are Pen-Y-Bryn Farm's Highland Blade, runnerup to Pleasant Colony in the Wood Memorial; Double Paces Stable's Thirty Eight Paces, winner of a division of Pimlico's Woodlawn Stakes; and Sidney Baer's Double Leader, a lightly raced colt.

Andruzzi Signs Four Women To Scholarships

East Carolina has signed four players to grants-in-aid to play women's basketball, ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi announced today.

The Lady Pirate head coach has signed 6-2 forward/center Darlene Chaney, 5-8 guard/forward Loraine Foster, 5-8 forward Loletha Harris and 6-0 forward Laurie Regal.

Chaney averaged 28.0 points and 11.0 rebounds a game for Jefferson-Huguenot-Wythe's High School in Richmond, Va. Chaney chose ECU over Old Dominion and South Carolina.

Chaney, twice named to the All-Colonial District team and once to the All-Capital District team, helped lead her team to a 21-0 season and a Central Region championship. She was also a member for the Converse All-America team.

Foster averaged 22.5 points, 7.0 rebounds and 4.0 assists a game for her Spartanburg, S.C., high school. She narrowed her choices to Clemson and ECU before deciding to play for Andruzzi.

Foster, as did Chaney, scored over 1,000 points in her high school career. She holds school records in points scored in a season and a career and steals and assists for a career. She is also a member of the Converse All-America team.

Her team was 20-7 this season and won the Region II 4-A tournament before being eliminated in the state playoffs.

Harris, a junior transfer from Louisburg College, averaged 10.0 and 9.0 rebounds a game this past season. Named her team's MVP, Harris helped Louisburg win the Junior College National championship. She was named the tournament's outstanding defensive player and was also a member of the All-Division Region 10 first team.

In her two years at Louisburg, Harris' teams combined for a 64-6 record and were in the nationals both seasons.

Regal, from Granger, Ind., averaged 15.0 points a game this past season at Clay High School and was one of the most sought after forwards in the state.

Having lost five seniors to graduation, Andruzzi realizes she needs a good recruiting year and believes these four women will go along way toward that goal.

"They're all very good student-athletes, no question about it," Andruzzi said. "We're extremely pleased about signing these four girls."

"We needed a good recruiting year to keep our upward movement going and I think these four girls can really help us. Three of the four have had championship experience, especially Loletha, whose been to two nationals."

Streck Wins Houston As Rains Fall

HOUSTON (AP) — The storm-delayed final round of the Michelob-Houston Open golf tournament was canceled Monday and Ron Streck was named the winner of the rain-shortened 54-hole event.

Streck, who took the lead with a record-setting 9-under-par 62 in Saturday's third round, received $47,250 from the total purse.

The prize money of $350,000 was reduced to 75 percent because only three rounds were completed.

Sunday's scheduled final round was washed out by steady, heavy rains.

Continued showers, which dumped more than 6 inches of rain on the 7,071-yard Woodlands Country Club Course, caused flooding conditions and made the suburban layout unplayable.

"The creek at 16 is out of its banks. We can't get players across it even with vans," said Clyde Mangum, PGA tour deputy commissioner, who announced the cancellation early Monday morning.

"The course was unplayable today and we were juggling a lot of factors, the forecast was not good for tomorrow," he said.

Streck took a 3-stroke lead Saturday. His only previous victory came in his rookie season in San Antonio in 1978, when he had a 54-hole total of 198, 15 shots under par.

Hale Irwin and Jerry Pate, each a former U.S. Open champion, completed 54 holes at 201. Jay Haas and Ben Crenshaw, who won a 54-hole, rain-shortened tournament in Phoenix in 1979, were another stroke back at 202 with Tom Kite, Bruce Lietzke and Bob Gilder at 203.

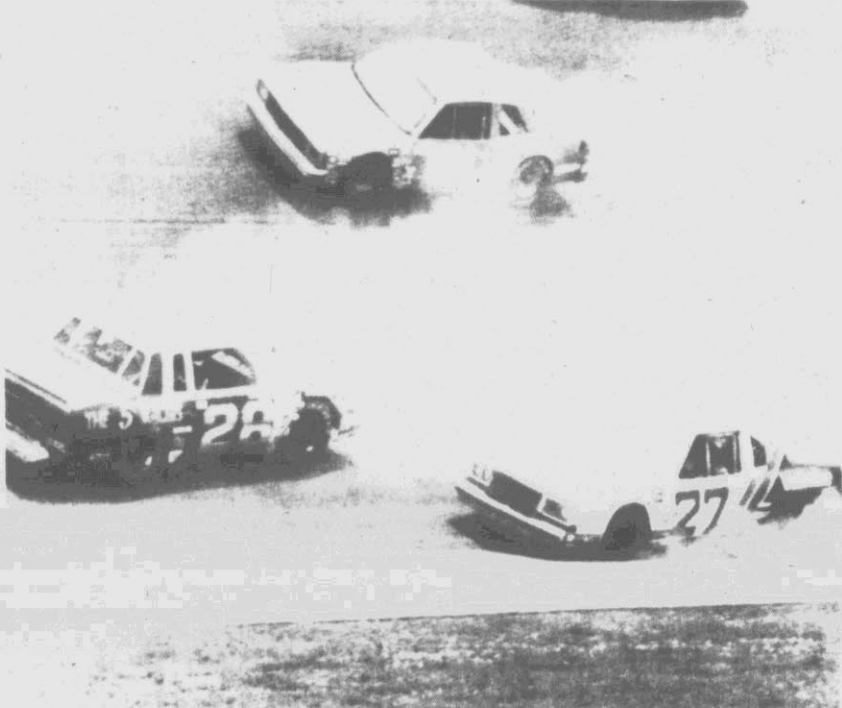

The first starting time for today was set for 9:32 a.m., CDT, with Streck, Irwin and Pate to be the last starters at 11:08 a.m.

"There will be no live telecast," Mangum said. NBC had provided live coverage of Saturday's play.

More than two inches of rain were dumped on the course by the Sunday storms "which precluded our being able to play," Mangum said.

of the lead lap, in seventh place.

He then went wheel-to-wheel with Baker in an effort to stay ahead of him, hoping for another caution flag, which would allow him to come back around and regain the lead draft.

"I knew I had to stay up there," Allison said. "Then we came around and there was an entire grill from somebody's car out there on the track for three or four laps. Finally, I guess they figured nobody was going to run out between cars to get it and they gave us a yellow."

From there to the end, it was a spectacular race, with the lead draft — as many as seven cars — running at speeds near 200 mph. There were 11 lead chances just in the last 28 laps.

Baker, who finished second for the fourth time in this race, was angry when it was over.

"Darrell stuck his nose under me (in the final turn), even though it was all he could do to hang on," Baker explained. "When he did that, I had to go racing Darrell. I knew it was over then. It was all I could do to hang on for second."

"I knew Darrell couldn't win, but I had a good shot."

Waltrip shrugged off the criticism, saying, "On the last lap, I was watching Rudd more than I was watching Baker or Allison because Rudd was faster than I was and I didn't want him getting around me."

"The next thing I knew, we were right on top of Bobby and Buddy."

"Buddy was high and Bobby was low, and I thought I might be able to get between them."

"It was a heckuva race, wasn't it? If the fans didn't like that one, they'll never see one they like."

The fans, a record Talladega crowd of more than 100,000 liked it. Most of them stood and cheered through the last 15 or 20 laps.

Highway Package Concerns Some N.C. Lawmakers

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Jim Garrison, D-Stanly, has long been one of Gov. Jim Hunt's most loyal legislators, but when he headed home for the weekend Garrison was afraid the governor had given him a little problem.

"My country-clubbers are going to be raising Cain with me when I get home," Garrison told a gathering of other lawmakers outside his office.

"They're not going to like this liquor tax."

Garrison was not alone in his concern after the governor finally unveiled the full extent of his tax-increase package, designed to bail out the state's financially troubled highway system. Like Garrison, some had already staked themselves out as reluctantly supporting a higher gas tax but then found they had more tax increases and interest groups to deal with.

After Hunt's address to a joint session of the General Assembly and more details emerged through the week, it became clear that what Hunt had proposed was actually not one money package but two packages.

The first is the proposal designed to make available $186 million for highway needs, with the 3-cents-per-gallon increase in the tax on gasoline as the centerpiece but also with transfers of nearly $60 million from the state's general tax fund to its highway fund.

The second package is distinct, as its purpose is to replenish the general tax fund — from which education and most government services are financed — for the drain caused on it by the first package.

The total drain on the general fund is to be at least $70 million, and perhaps more depending on just how large Hunt's proposed personal income tax credit turns out to be. It is to be made up, at least partially, by the 50 percent increase in liquor and beer taxes, a new mining tax and a sales tax on vacation home rentals.

Almost unanimously, the leadership of the House and Senate has fallen in line supporting Hunt's first package. The inclusion of the tax credit, proposed by the leaders, has given them a politically safe way of supporting the higher tax on gasoline and telling their constituents the increase wouldn't be as bad as it seemed.

No one was predicting easy passage — with Republicans certain to oppose it as a bloc, Hunt's gas tax increase needs the support of two-thirds of the majority Democrats in both chambers, and in the House that could prove to be a close vote.

But legislative leaders were decidedly more confident about the first package than they were about the second.

"It could easily happen," said House Appropriations Chairman William Watkins, D-Granville, "that the gas tax could pass and the other package not. It's possible for that to happen."

The separate design of the tax proposals was no accident. Hunt's senior advisor and budget officer, John A. Williams, said the governor wants to push the gas-tax increase proposal through both chambers first.

The administration's strategy, Williams said, is to put its full effort behind the gasoline tax package. With its passage complete, the burden would then be on legislators themselves to act on the second package or come up with a plan of their own. After all, it is the legislators themselves who must balance the state budget and find the money to finance the pet projects each wants to see added to it.

Opposition to the alcohol tax came from legislators such as Watkins, who represents counties along the Virginia border. Hunt's proposal would put North Carolina's liquor prices too far out of line with Virginia's, Watkins said, making the North Carolina price as much as $1 a pint higher on some liquors.

"The counties I represent, they're going to lose money," he said, noting that counties get a share of the current tax on alcohol but would get none of the increase.

"They'll lose liquor sales and liquor taxes to Virginia, and they'll have to make it up with property taxes," Watkins said.

That prospect has spawned new concerns among some legislators — the fear that a battle over the alcohol tax increase would create a political climate in which a higher tobacco tax would emerge as a compromise.

"I am terribly concerned that if we have a liquor tax hike, we'll have cigarette tax as well," Watkins said.

Hunt steered clear of an increase in North Carolina's lowest-in-the-country cigarette tax when he put most of the general-fund burden on alcohol. And Williams said Hunt would clearly oppose the suggestion if it should emerge.

But it was clearly on legislators' minds following Hunt's speech, and powerful Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, the former finance chairman, was considering introducing a tobacco tax bill.

Find One Of Seven N.C. Homes Substandard, Assert Officials

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Fifteen percent of North Carolina's housing is below acceptable standards, according to the state Department of Human Resources.

The department defines a dwelling as substandard if it lacks at least two amenities, such as a toilet and electricity, or it has at least two structural problems, such as a leaking roof or broken windows.

The problem is especially acute in eastern North Carolina's rural counties. In Warren County 29 percent of the housing is substandard, in Northampton 28 percent, in Halifax and Robeson 24 percent.

And federal budget cuts proposed by the Reagan administration are likely to worsen the problem, experts say.

"From the standpoint of the new budget, there's a substantial reduction in the amount of housing assistance, compared to where we were," said Michael A. Stegman, professor of city planning at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Stegman, a former official of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, said the cuts include money for rehabilitation programs, public housing and rent subsidy plans.

President Reagan wants to reduce the Carter administration's increases in the Section 8 rent subsidy program by 6.7 percent this year and 26 percent in 1982, he said.

The Section 8 program pays the difference between a tenant's actual rent and 25 percent of his monthly income.

Public housing is also on the Reagan chopping block. For 1982, Carter had proposed 40,000 new units; Reagan wants 20,000.

"Overall, it's going to be a lot tighter for cities," Stegman said. "In North Carolina, it will be increasingly difficult for communities with a lot of substandard housing to get assistance."

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development says about 290,000 housing units in North Carolina — 18 percent — are substandard, based on 1970 U.S. Census data. That's about double the national average of 9.5 percent.

"At the rate at which resources are available, it would take 20 years to fully meet the current need," the HUD analysis concludes.

Public and private agencies have tackled the problem. The state Housing Finance Agency financed 1,482 rental housing units and helped another 2,899 buyers by making mortgage loans at interest rates below market level. Churches have sponsored housing for the poor and elderly.

But the soaring cost of new housing may be making the housing squeeze for the poor even worse, because they traditionally occupy housing units left to them when others move on to better housing.

Moreover, trends toward the revival of old neighborhoods by the middle class and competition with students in university areas also reduces the number of units available to low-income people.

Public housing residents in many cities say they are being squeezed out of projects. Since HUD limits rents to 25 percent of a resident's income, the higher the income, the higher the rent.

Twelve Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
Highway accidents in North Carolina killed 12 people this weekend, the North Carolina Highway Patrol reported today.

Troopers said 428 people have died in North Carolina traffic accidents so far this year, compared to 452 at the same time last year.

The latest reported death occurred Sunday morning on U.S. 74 south of Asheville. Jerry Wallace Grant, 27, of Fairview, died when he drove his motorcycle at a high speed off the road and hit a fence.

Pedestrian Hilton Gray Kent, 49, died Saturday from a hit-and-run driver struck him while he was walking along the side of U.S. 301 south of Four Oaks.

The patrol said Blanche Harris Newell, 76, of Elizabeth City, was killed when her car ran a stop sign and entered the path of a second vehicle Saturday evening. The accident occurred one-tenth mile south of Elizabeth City.

Earlier Saturday Sidney M. Lynch, 25, of Roanoke Rapids, was killed in a single-vehicle accident on U.S. 158 three miles south of Roanoke Rapids. The patrol reported Lynch was lying in the roadway when he was struck by a car.

Pedestrian Moyer Golden, 59, of Reidsville, was struck and killed by a car on N.C. 14 near Eden on Friday evening. Early Saturday, 26-year-old Robert Junior Wilson of Jackson was struck by a car and killed on N.C. 186 in Northampton County.

Eden Conrad Barefoot, 65, of Salter Path, died Friday evening when his car ran off a rural road near Newport and struck a tree.

Rhonda Eric Beard, 24, of Hudson, died early Saturday morning when his vehicle ran off U.S. 321 near Granite Falls and struck an embankment.

The patrol said Jimmie Leon D. Payne, 31, of Trinity, was killed Saturday when he lost control of his vehicle in a curve in the town of Archdale.

A passenger - Marcus Dale Snider, 18, of Greensboro — was killed when the vehicle ran off a rural road near Greensboro early Saturday.

William Pinkney Moose, 46, of Salisbury, died Friday night in a head-on collision on N.C. 152.

The patrol said another head-on collision claimed the life of Mark Ernest Gilliland, 19, of Charlotte. The accident occurred on Interstate 77.

Franklin H. Miranda, 19, of Wilmington, died Saturday night from injuries sustained in an April 23 accident five miles north of Wilmington. That evening, his motorcycle struck another vehicle making a left turn.

Gas Suppliers' Profits Soared

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A full supply of natural gas last summer from the Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. officially ended North Carolina's 10-year gas shortage and left several suppliers with record profits, suppliers say.

Piedmont Natural Gas Co. of Charlotte reported a 56 percent rise in income during the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, mainly because gas sales rose by one-fifth.

"Available gas supplies allowed the company to meet its total market requirements for all classes of customers during the year," said president John Maxheim in the firm's annual report.

But Public Service Co. of North Carolina Inc. of Gastonia reported a drop in net income of 20 percent.

Senior vice president E.L. Flanagan blamed the drop on inadequate rates, an out-dated pricing formula and high interest rates on its construction program.

"We just did not file that rate case soon enough to pick up those new rates," he said.

Public Service applied for a $7.5 million rate increase in June 1980 and the North Carolina Utilities Commission granted a $4.7 million increase in January.

Other major energy suppliers in North Carolina reported the following:

—North Carolina Natural Gas Co. of Fayetteville said the largest gas sales since 1973 helped boost profits by 20 percent.

—Duke Power Co. of Charlotte led electric utilities with a 13.7 percent return on stockholders' money. Duke said it needs a 17.5 percent return to attract investors and to continue building new power plants. The utility spent $853 million last year on construction and nuclear fuel.

Light Co. reported lower profits, blaming the prolonged shutdowns of its Brunswick nuclear plant. By the end of the year, the Raleigh-based utility had $44 million in unrecovered replacement power costs. The expenses shaved 48 cents off earnings of $2.73 per share.

—Virginia Electric and Power Co. of Richmond, Va., which sells electricity in 22 northeastern North Carolina counties, increased its net income by 23 percent to $241 million.

N.C. Prison Releases Set

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials in Gov. Jim Hunt's office and in the state Department of Correction are planning the possible release of between 1,000 and 2,000 state prison inmates over the next few months, the Durham Morning Herald reports.

Unidentified sources told the newspaper that the plan includes early release for some inmates through the restoration of time that had been subtracted from sentences for good behavior, but then later withheld because of subsequent infractions.

One source said the plan has been worked out over the past few weeks. Another said an announcement about it may come this week.

The Senate passed a resolution last week asking the Department of Correction to find a way to reduce the number of inmates held in state prisons.

Legislators have criticized the department for underestimating the prison population in its budget requests. The department projected a 15,600 prison population for 1983. Recent figures put the present population at well over 16,000.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
©1981 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠1052 ♥A763 ♦952 ♣874

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♥ Dble ?

What action do you take?
A.—After an opposing takeout double, we are inclined to raise partner's suit on the smell of an oil rag. However, there are limits to our daring. Our balanced hand detracts from both our side's offensive and defensive potential, so we feel that a raise to two hearts would serve only to alert the opponents to definite heart shortage in one of their hands, which may enable them to bid a game that they would not otherwise reach.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ64 ♥K1083 ♦9 ♣A87

The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♦ Dble Pass 1 ♥ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Introducing your spade suit can serve no useful purpose—you can play in only one major suit and you have already found a fit. Your hand is worth one move, and that should be a raise of partner's suit. Bid two hearts.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A1083 ♥A954 ♠AKQ107

The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♦ Dble Pass 1 ♥ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have a very powerful supporting hand and we would not fault you greatly if you leaped to four hearts. However, since you have forced partner to bid, there is the possibility that he has a very bad hand with only three hearts. We recommend a cue-bid of two diamonds followed by a raise in hearts. That will describe your tremendous strength and, should partner have a solid one heart response, prepare the ground for a possible slam.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q87 ♥63 ♦AK93 ♠AK82

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have an awkward hand. Your heart weakness and the fact that almost all your strength is concentrated in two suits made your hand unsuitable for a one no trump opening bid. Now, a rebid of one no trump would be an underbid while a leap to two no trump would greatly overstate your values. The only solution is to rebid two clubs and hope that that action will elicit something positive from partner.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ10963 ♥Q ♦K986 ♠94

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have to do something to tell partner that you have a reasonable hand. While a bid of two spades would show a six-card suit, partner might think that you are simply competing for the partial. A jump to three spades describes your holding much better.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK85 ♥93 ♦AQ76 ♠KQ6

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Another difficult hand. You have the values for a jump to two no trump, but that risks losing the spade suit. Yet you are not strong enough, nor unbalanced enough, for a jump to two spades. We suggest a simple rebid of one spade. If partner passes, it is doubtful whether you have the values for game. But you will be well placed over any bid that partner might make at his second turn.

CINEMA 3—"EXCALIBUR"

By PETER J. BOYER

AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The networks have issued their annual springtime warnings, otherwise known as the fall schedule announcements, and it appears that CBS has once again taken a long-term lease at the top of the heap.

Half-hour comedies are as abundant as ever — there will be 29 of them among the three networks in the 1981-82 season — but their themes are tending away from the adolescent hijinks so popular in the recent past.

Network series leaving the air are CBS' "Flo," "Enos," "White Shadow," "The Incredible Hulk," and "The Waltons"; ABC's "Those Amazing Animals," "Charlie's Angels," "Aloha Paradise," "Soap," "Vegas," and "I'm a Big Girl Now"; and NBC's "Lobo," "Disney," "Nero Wolfe," "Buck Rogers," "The Gangster Chronicles," "The Brad Brides" and "Walking Tall."

The turnover rate is indicative of each network's performance this season, with leader CBS adding only six new series, runner-up ABC adding eight and NBC 10 new series.

Here's how the fall season competition looks from here, bearing in mind the mossy network proviso, "Nothing's etched in granite."

Sunday — CBS is unrelenting here again, with daytime football leading into "60 Minutes," "Archie Bunker," "One Day at a Time," "Alice," "The Jeffersons" and "Trapper John." Archie and the three sitcoms following it are getting a little bit old, but they're still potent, and the competition is of the limpwristed variety.

ABC is trying its millionth Sunday night starter, "Code Red," which sounds like "Emergency" with flames; "Today's FBI," a reworking of yesterday's "FBI"; and a movie. NBC is trying a boy-with-superpowers number called "Star Prince" where Disney used to be, followed by "CHiPS" and a movie.

Monday — CBS has a slight edge here, going against "Monday Night Football" with the inexplicably popular "Pvt. Benjamin," followed by the promising "Two of Us," "M-A-S-H," "House Calls" and "Lou Grant." Flip-flopping with football, depending upon your time zone, will be "That's Incredible" on ABC.

NBC is sticking with "Little House" and a movie on Mondays, meaning that NBC will be an off-and-on challenge, depending upon the flick.

Tuesday — ABC may well be able to milk its old Tuesday sitcom tandem, "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley," for one more season. The shows have been given new life by changes in character and situation, and they're on the schedule with "Three's Company," "To Close for Comfort" and "Hart to Hart," shows that are strong as a crowd.

CBS tries to edge in with a movie and a new detective show, "Simon and Simon," but NBC has the best chance of moving up on this night. Merlin Olsen tries a "Little House"-type family program with "Father Murphy," about a gold prospector who opens a frontier schoolhouse. Olsen's new show is followed by two strong entries, "Quincy" and "Flamingo Road."

Wednesday — NBC has fooled around with this night, its only winning night on the schedule, but it still looks pretty strong for NBC with "Real People," "Facts of Life," the new Tony Randall show, "Love, Sidney" and Rock Hudson's new show. ABC hopes its promising "Greatest American Hero" will fly, because if it doesn't, the new "Fal Guy" and the returning "Dynasty" won't be able to hold off NBC.

CBS is going the already-tiring sorcerer route with something called "Mr. Merlin," which figures to hurt "WKRP" (in yet another time slot), "Nurse" and "Shannon," another detective series.

Thursday — CBS will win Thursdays if the lineups stay as presented here. That network came up with a big winner this past season in

Actor Narrowly Missed Mishap

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Richard Harris says he was in the wrong place when the lights went out during a performance of "Camelot" and narrowly missed being crushed beneath a one-ton set that was being lowered to the stage.

Harris, who took over the part of King Arthur when Richard Burton was ailing, said he was nearly hurt Saturday when the set was lowered after one scene in preparation for the next.

"There was a luminous mark, which you can't go beyond, and I seemed to have missed it in the action of the play," said Harris, who played King Arthur in the movie version of the musical.

The set "would have hit me in the head," said the Irish actor. "The wife of the stage manager, Carol Adler, screamed across from the wings. I think the whole theater must have heard it."

Burton had been injured during a performance of "Camelot" in Toronto, and was replaced by Harris in March when his neck and back pains became severe enough to require surgery.

"Magnum P.I.," which, with "Knots Landing" more than allows for the loss of "The Waltons." A newspaperwoman yarn, "Jessica Novak," takes the closing spot. ABC's lineup of "Mork," the new Western comedy "Best of the West," "Barney Miller," "Taxi" and "20-20" is strong, but not strong enough to win Thursday.

NBC will flail away with "Harper Valley PTA," a new Gabe Kaplan sitcom called "Gabe and Guich," the transplanted "Diff'rent Strokes," another new sitcom, "Gimme a Break" and the luckless "Hill Street Blues," which should have been allowed to tail-end Wednesday.

Friday — This is the night when ABC and NBC offer sacrifice to CBS. "Dukes of Hazzard" has been moved to 8 o'clock, which is where the noisy kids' show should have been from the beginning, and "Dallas" sweeps up at 9. CBS' new entry, "Vintage Years," won't have to bother with being good — it'll be a hit on residue alone.

The sacrificial lambs from ABC are "Benson," a new show called "Open All Night" (which is about how long it will last), "Maggie," another new show, "Living it Up" (the renamed "It's a Living") and "Strike Force," a cop show. NBC's "Dallas" bait consists of a new "Mickey Rooney Show," an innovative 90-minute cops and doctors urban drama called "Chicago Story" and James Arness's new series.

Saturday — This night has belonged to ABC for some time now, and "Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island," being made of thin air anyway, show no signs of age. They'll be preceded by a new family soap, "King's Crossing."

NBC seems likely to make the strongest bid here, with "Barbara Mandrell" starting the night followed by James Garner's new "Maverick" and David Brinkley's much abused "NBC Magazine," which should have stayed on Thursdays.

CBS gives its new acquisition, "Disney," a Saturday try, followed by movies.

If there is a TV season next fall, which is far from a certainty anymore, CBS figures to plow on to another relatively easy victory. ABC seems likely to continue its fall from grace, while NBC will gain from ABC's decline, if nothing else.

Best programming move: CBS' elimination of "Hulk," the moving forward of "Dukes" and "Dallas," which keeps the night theirs and provides instant hit status for the new "Vintage Years."

Worst programming move: NBC's breakup of Wednesday night, trying to get more mileage from "Diff'rent Strokes" and "Facts of Life" separately than they're good for.

Guitarist Is Found Safe

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — A rock musician kidnapped three nights ago as he was about to play at a local nightclub was found on a Dublin street today, bound and gagged but unharmed, police said.

Police said they could not establish a motive for the abduction Friday night or the return of guitarist Pat McManus, 22, from British-ruled Northern Ireland. But they said it did not appear to be related to the tension there resulting from the hunger strike of Bobby Sands and three other Irish Republican Army guerrillas in the Maze Prison outside Belfast.

Witnesses said McManus was dumped from a car that raced away early in the morning.

McManus, a member of the Mama's Boys from County Fermanagh, in Northern Ireland, was taken to Dublin's St. Vincent Hospital for observation after he was found.

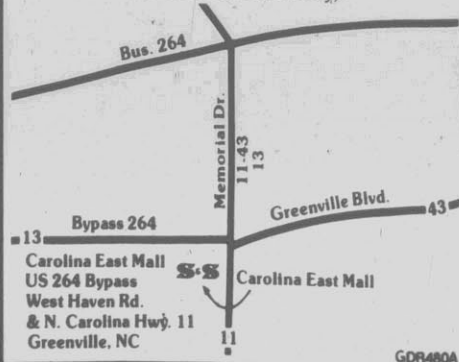

"When we interviewed Mr. McManus he was not able to give us any explanation for what had happened," a police spokesman said. "It is a most unusual case and we do not think there was any question of ransom or subversive activity involved."

Fujita likes April, May, and June because they are the peak months for tornadoes, which he admits have "become a passion" for him. For over 20 years, the University of Chicago professor has interpreted the pattern of destruction caused by tornadoes. As a result of studying the damage left by approximately 250 tornadoes, the so-called "Mr. Tornado" theorized that tornadoes in the East greatly differ in character from those in the West. He has also developed the "six-point Fujita scale," which rates a tornado's harshness from F-0 (mild) to F-6 (severe) on the basis of its estimated wind speed, and the width and length of its path.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the scale that rates the severity of an earthquake?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The World Trade Center Towers are taller than the Empire State Building.

Subpoena Kluxers In Attempted Coup

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Members of a Ku Klux Klan "special forces team" in Alabama have been subpoenaed in connection with last week's aborted coup attempt against Dominica, a newspaper reported today.

In a copyright story, The Tennessean reports that a federal grand jury in Birmingham, Ala., wants to find out what some members of a Klan team trained commando-style at a base near Cullman, Ala., know of the aborted coup.

Federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents questioned the commandos last Monday, the day federal officials say a coup against the tiny Commonwealth of Dominica was to be launched, the newspaper reported.

Dominica is a Caribbean island that became independent of Great Britain more than two years ago.

Ku Klux Klan leader Don Black and nine other persons were arrested by federal agents later that Monday at Slidell, La., near New Orleans. They were found with two vehicles loaded with explosives and weapons.

However, the "special forces" commandos reportedly subpoenaed are affiliated with Bill Wilkinson's Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, the newspaper says.

Wilkinson's group — reportedly the strongest Klan group in the nation — rivals Black's Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Black remains in Orleans Parish Jail under $500,000 bond.

Nashville's morning newspaper reported that Wilkinson will be questioned by federal agents about the coup attempt, but the newspaper reported that it was not known whether he had been subpoenaed too.

Wilkinson told the newspaper he was unaware of plans for the coup. "I was surprised when I heard about it," he said.

Schooners To Join Weekend

MYSTIC, Conn. (UPI) — Nineteen commercial passenger schooners, ranging from 61 to 160 feet in overall length, are expected to take part in Windjammer Weekend, June 27-28, the Mystic Seaport Museum announced. While at the docks, each vessel will open its deck and, in some cases, a passenger cabin below to the public.

An illustrated brochure, containing photographs, cruising itineraries and schedules of participating sailing vessels will be on sale to the public.

Income Flow To Sunbelt Faster Than Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's per capita income flowed steadily to the Sun Belt in the last decade, but income rose faster in every state than the 93.4 percent national increase in inflation, according to a new Commerce Department study. The report issued this weekend offered fresh evidence of soaring economic development in Southern and Western states which have lured people and business from the Northeast with good climates, space to expand and relatively low-cost labor. Nevertheless, a frigid but oil-rich state, Alaska, had the nation's highest per capita income with an average of $12,406 for each resident, dropping the 1970 leader, Connecticut, into second place.

A Sun Belt state, Mississippi, was No. 50 — unchanged since 1970 — with an average per capita income of $6,508.

The study was requested by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, in 1978 after New York City succeeded in getting federally guaranteed loans at a time when New York state had a $2 billion revenue surplus.

Bentsen said the continued flow of income to the Sun Belt means that other Northeastern and Midwestern cities will be looking for federal bailouts.

"You're going to see more of a conflict develop between the Sun Belt and the Snow Belt as you see that kind of approach, and the government ought to develop a consistent policy for it," added Bentsen, who said cities should look first to their states for aid.

The report said the nation's overall per capita income rose 143 percent to $9,458 during the decade. Every state showed income rising higher than the decade's 93.4 percent inflation increase as measured by the Commerce Department's personal consumer expenditure deflator. The study also said the gap has narrowed between the richest and poorest regions, with 1970's below-average states increasing per capita income about 153 percent by 1980, while states which were above average in 1970 showed a 10-year increase of about 138 percent.

Most of the highest-ranking states still are in the highly developed Northeastern and West Coast parts of the nation, while the lowest-ranking generally are in the Southeast and Rocky Mountain regions.

But the trend during the 1970s was in the opposite direction. Following are per capita income figures for each of the states and the District of Columbia, by region, for 1980 and 1970:

NEW ENGLAND — Connecticut $11,445 in 1980, up from $4,871 in 1970; Maine $7,734 and $3,250; Massachusetts $9,992 and $4,272; New Hampshire $8,890 and $3,720; Rhode Island $9,250 and $3,878, and Vermont $7,839 and $3,712.

MIDWEST — Delaware $10,195 and $4,468; District of Columbia $11,883 and $4,644; Maryland $10,332 and $4,267; New Jersey $10,755 and $4,684; New York $10,143 and $4,605, and Pennsylvania $9,294 and $3,879.

GREAT LAKES — Illinois $10,658 and $4,446; Indiana $8,978 and $3,709; Michigan $9,847 and $4,041; Ohio $9,398 and $3,949, and Wisconsin $9,254 and $3,712.

PLAINS — Iowa $9,178 and $3,643; Kansas $9,958 and $3,725; Minnesota $9,519 and $3,819; Missouri $8,556 and $3,077, and South Dakota $7,452 and $3,108.

SOUTHEAST — Alabama $7,484 and $2,892; Arkansas $7,180 and $2,791; Florida $8,987 and $3,698; Georgia $8,000 and $3,300; Kentucky $7,718 and $3,076; Louisiana $8,282 and $3,023; Mississippi $6,508 and $2,547; North Carolina $7,852 and $3,200; South Carolina $7,519 and $2,951; Tennessee $7,786 and $3,079; Virginia $9,435 and $3,677, and West Virginia $7,831 and $3,038.

SOUTHWEST — Arizona $8,649 and $3,614; New Mexico $7,956 and $3,045; Oklahoma $9,081 and $3,341, and Texas $9,513 and $3,507.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN — Colorado $9,964 and $3,838; Idaho $8,126 and $3,243; Montana $8,445 and $3,395; Utah $7,485 and $3,169, and Wyoming $10,692 and $3,672.

FAR WEST — California, $10,856 and $4,423; Nevada $10,458 and $4,583; Oregon $9,400 and $3,677, and Washington $10,363 and $3,997.

Califano Saw Carter As Insecure President

ATLANTA (AP) — "Hell hath no fury like a fat-cat Washington lawyer scorned," says ex-White House press secretary Jody Powell.

That was his response to a former Cabinet officer's characterization of Jimmy Carter as an insecure president whose cabinet had "no clear sense of where the president was leading them."

The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution said in their combined Sunday editions that Joseph Califano's description of the Carter presidency is included in a book written by the former health, education and welfare secretary and scheduled for publication May 29.

The newspapers said Califano, fired in 1979, also depicts his former boss as having been caught in a crossfire between his staff and Cabinet and as a man obsessed by news leaks.

Califano's book, "Governing America: An Insider's Report From the White House and the Cabinet," covers the first 30 months of Carter's presidency.

Powell, who served as Carter's press secretary and who remains close to the former president, said

Carter would have no comment on the 454-page memoir.

But Powell said Califano's account demonstrates that "whatever lingering doubts I had that we had judged Joe too harshly have been substantially relieved. Hell hath no fury like a fat-cat Washington lawyer scorned."

Reports at the time Califano was fired indicated the White House staff felt the HEW chief was trying to take control of too many issues and too much territory. The newspapers quote Califano's memoir as saying:

"Carter ordered HEW agency chiefs a few days before Califano's firing 'to get rid of all those who are incompetent, except minorities and women.' The status of those workers was to be discussed with the White House."

Carter told U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young: "You have repeatedly embarrassed the administration ... you have caused embarrassment to me by calling Britain the most racist country in history ... saying Cuban troops in Angola were a stabilizing influence ... saying there are hundreds of political prisoners in the United States."

Young, forced from that job and now running for mayor of Atlanta, could not be reached for comment on the report. A spokesman said Saturday that Young "does not recall any such occasion."

At a top-level meeting at Camp David in 1978, Carter said: "Some leaks from the White House are inexcusable — derogatory remarks about (certain Cabinet officials). If I could find out who did it, I would kick his ass out of the White House."

SEARCHING THE CHATTAHOOCHEE — Joe Gainer holds aloft a shoe he found over the weekend as part of a civilian search effort along the Chattahoochee River. The weekend search, 29th in a row, was for clues to the murders of 26 young blacks in Atlanta. (AP Laserphoto)

EXPERIENCE * RELIABILITY * QUALITY SERVICES

Snow Hill Plumbing, Heating and Air Conditioning Co., Inc. (SNOPHAC) is celebrating its 22nd birthday. SNOPHAC is proud to have served you and we take this opportunity to let you know we appreciate your business. We are equipped to handle any size residential or commercial plumbing, heating or air conditioning job. We have been a General Electric Monogram Distinguished Dealer since 1975. This is a national award given to a few dealers by GE for outstanding contributions to the development, growth and maturity of the industry.

GE'S BEST air conditioner costs less in the long run.

Our GE Executive II air conditioner uses less energy because it's extra efficient.

It's cheaper to use than less efficient models. The secret's in the two-speed compressor. It uses an energy-saving low speed most of the time. Then, it automatically changes to high speed for quick relief when the weather's extra hot.

Make it a Perfect GE Day with the TN-B (TS) series. 34,200-53,500 BTUH.

The compressor helps you two ways.

Since a compressor uses more energy than any part of an air conditioning system, the GE 2-speed compressor can make a difference in your electric bill. Running most of the time at low speed saves energy ... And the more continuous operation adds to your comfort, too.

$150 CASH REFUND NOW!

There's one more great advantage to buying General Electric's best ... If you buy now, before our crews are busy, GE will send you a $150 cash refund. (To qualify, installation must be in a current residence, between now and May 1, 1981.) So you'll save now, as well as later.

We're reducing heating/cooling bills all over town!

Chances are, our GE Executive Weathertron® heat pump/air conditioner can save energy dollars for you.

Make it a Perfect GE Day with the WR series. 17-58,000 BTUH.

How does it work? Simple. A heat pump doesn't make heat. It moves heat! In summer, it works just like an air conditioner, pulling heat out of your home. In winter, it reverses, and pulls heat from outdoor air into your home (even at cold winter temperatures).

With this GE high-efficiency model the same unit keeps you cool all summer, warm all winter, and can save energy dollars, too.

Use it by itself, or add it to your present furnace. Whichever saves more.

Naturally, when the weather's extra-cold, you'll need some extra heat. That's why you can buy this GE heat pump two ways — With supplemental electric heaters built-in ... or save money, by attaching the heat pump to your present forced air furnace. It doesn't matter what fuel your furnace uses — gas, oil, propane or electric.

$50 CASH REFUND NOW!

There are lots of ways you can save with a General Electric Executive Weathertron® heat pump ... But the easiest way is to buy NOW! If you install this new GE heat pump before our crews are busy, GE will send you a $50 cash refund. (To qualify, installation must be in a current residence, between now and May 1, 1981.) ... A great way to start the year off ... saving.
