Record Number Of Grads Receive Degrees At ECU

By SUE FERNALD

"Today those of us who are natives of this region swell with pride," Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., told East Carolina University graduates and friends this morning. "Pride in the achievements of today's graduates and pride in the evolution of East Carolina University from a small school training teachers to a major institution of higher learning."

"The dream of Leo Jenkins and so many supporters of this university have been realized. As a consequence, generations unborn will enjoy healthier and happier lives," continued Hunt. "A state which ranks low in per capita income can, by diligence and dedication, work its way up the ladder but a state that ranks high in ignorance and in indifference invites disaster."

East Carolina University conferred degrees upon a record 2,958 graduates at 10 a.m. in Minges Coliseum during the 72nd commencement exercises highlighted by the presentation of the first doctoral degrees given at ECU. Governor James B. Hunt Jr. delivered the 1981 commencement address.

He advised graduates about the course of education. "Learning is a life long process. The explosive growth of technology forces professionals and tradesmen to return regularly to the lab and classroom. Adults whose education was interrupted are going back to school to fill a void in their lives and that is the power of this university — the power to broaden minds, to sharpen the skills of technology to train the hands of medicine. That is how this university will continue to mold the future of eastern N.C. and all the people who live here."

Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer commented on the accomplishments of the Medical School. "The struggle was intense, the odds overwhelming, but their skill and tenacity brought the ultimate victory."

Brewer told the graduates, "If you have meaning and dignity in your life, then the particular balance of success or failure is of less account. But as you leave East Carolina (Please turn to Page 6)

ECU Medical School Grads Are Honored At Gathering Last Night

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The 28 students who received their degrees today as the first graduates of the School of Medicine at East Carolina University were honored yesterday at a private convocation attended by several hundred ECU officials and medical school supporters, including former Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins.

Jenkins, in his keynote speech, told the soon-to-be physicians, "We have come here today for a very special and a very unique occasion — to recognize and to honor you, the first graduates of the East Carolina University School of Medicine. And in honoring you, we honor all of those who labored so long and so hard to bring us to this day."

"Today is a day that many said would never come."

According to Jenkins, 17 years ago, when he first voiced the concept of a medical school at ECU, "few dared to dream it would ever be implemented," and the concept, "became so much a joke." However, the supporters of the idea, "never gave up," and "gave a valiant struggle to keep this dream alive. And as the years passed, they and their successors prevailed."

The graduates enrollment in 1977 and their presence here today, "is evidence that our efforts were indeed very worthy and are now bearing fruit," Jenkins said.

"The 'gloom and doom' prophets that often surround a worthy new endeavor will, I hope, be enlightened to hear that you are graduating from a fully accredited medical school, that almost half of you have decided to pursue a career in family practice, and that all of you have been judged superior not only by your faculty here, but by faculty members in other medical schools where you spent some elective portion of your senior year."

Jenkins, who retired in 1978, scoffed at predictions of a surplus of physicians by a federal agency last year.

"I find that prediction almost laughable. Only a short time ago the same federal agency was describing a critical shortage of doctors."

While there might be too many doctors in metropolitan areas, "too many of our smaller cities, small towns and rural areas are crying for doctors. For anyone to begin thinking of a surplus is foolishness," Jenkins emphasized.

"You have my best wishes for a great career and, knowing of your education here, I would not hesitate to trust any member of my family, including myself, under your care."

ECU Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer told the graduating class, "This is, indeed, a momentous milestone in our history."

"Fired by a dedication and loyalty to the East and its people, these people...made the dream of a medical school a reality. The struggle was intense, the odds overwhelming. But their skill and tenacity brought the ultimate victory. The people of the East and, indeed, of the entire State of North Carolina, owe these men and women a debt which can be paid."

The debt will be repaid, Brewer suggested, "when their dream of a medical school, of the first class serving this region and state, is realized. Those of us who are charged with the ultimate fulfillment of this dream honor with humility the heritage we inherit and pledge to be good stewards of our obligation."

Dr. William Laupus, Dean of the School of Medicine, said, "this is a great day," for ECU and for the ECU School of Medicine. "It's been a long time in coming."

He introduced Dr. Edwin Monroe, former dean of the School of Allied Health and vice chancellor for health affairs at ECU, now an assistant to Laupus; Judge Horton Rountree, a member of the N.C. House of Representatives from 1967 until 1980; Dr. Wallace Woolees, medical school dean until 1974; and Dr. Harold Wiggers, a consultant to and acting dean of the medical school from 1975 to 1977, who gave their perspectives of the development of the medical program.

Rountree told the graduates that during seven legislative sessions he was a member of the House, more than $100 million was appropriated for the School of Medicine. "Many believed as we did... something had to be done. The critical session was in 1973. That was the key to our success, when we won the day when we carried enough votes — 48 to 14 — in committee."

"You're going to get a lot of congratulations. (Please turn to Page 6)

May Compromise On Tax Cut Plans

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, savoring a "resounding victory" in his first big budget battle in the House, now is hinting at compromise on the massive tax cuts he has pledged to deliver to the American people.

The $688.8 billion budget blueprint for fiscal 1982, matching Reagan's call for deep spending and tax cuts, was endorsed overwhelmingly by the House on Thursday, with scores of Democrats defecting to join a unanimous Republican minority.

On two votes, the margins were 253-176 and 270-154 for the Reagan-backed plan crafted by Reps. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, and Delbert L. Latta, R-Ohio.

Those far outstripped the 51-seat majority that Democratic leaders had hoped would be their check on what GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois trumpeted as a change of course for American government. And they left some of the president's opponents and supporters doubting that his less popular proposal for a three-year, 30 percent tax cut could be stopped.

Reagan, however, seemed to be relaxing his vow not to compromise on taxes.

"I happen to believe that what we have proposed is an integral part of the program and strive for all of that," he said when asked about a tax compromise, hours after the House vote as he prepared to welcome Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki to a formal White House dinner.

"But I don't know what other proposals might be made, just as Gramm-Latta came forth with a proposal with regard to the budget that, uh, even suggested more cuts," Reagan added.

House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla., whose budget proposal was scuttled in favor of the Reagan-backed plan, said after the vote that if president gives his tax-cutting recommendation "the same attention" as the budget plan, "I believe it will carry."

Reagan hailed his victory — just the first step on the congressional budget path — as a "historic moment of commitment to a government that can both serve the people and live within its means."

The next step is in the Senate, which is considering a $699.1 billion budget resolution that differs little from the measure endorsed by the House. The Senate's Republican majority was almost certain to deliver on its proposal — also embraced by Reagan — perhaps by Monday.

In initial action Thursday, the Senate soundly rejected moves to strip $100 million earmarked for legal aid for the poor and to add $100 million for the Veterans Administration.

The tide in the House had been shifting Reagan's way for the past two weeks, but the margins were stunning. The president prevailed by 77 votes on the most critical roll call, drawing support from all 190 Republicans and 63 of the 241 Democrats to substitute the Gramm-Latta version for a Democratic leadership plan that would have given Reagan 75 percent of his recommended spending cuts.

That done, the measure passed by 116 votes in what was little more than a formality and a chance for more Democrats to jump on the Reagan bandwagon.

Reagan, who had divided the Democrats and rallied the Republicans with private chats and presidential cufflinks, was pleased.

"When the people speak, Washington will now listen — and will act," he exclaimed in a White House statement. "For years, the American people have been asking that the federal government put its house in order."

Reagan said the House action was "a resounding victory, not only for our economy but for a spirit of bipartisanship that we can build upon in the months and years ahead."

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan declared that the "strong, bipartisan vote will increase the momentum for the adoption of the president's tax cuts."

It may not come quickly, however.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, called the budget vote "a blunt order to gouge deeper into social programs" and said: "To that end I have directed my subcommittee chairmen to return to work next week on spending cuts."

He said this "will unfortunately demand a delay in the markup of a tax bill."

Reagan's tax plan, which has stirred skepticism even among most Republicans, would start by cutting personal and business taxes about $54 billion across the board in 1982. A one-year plan favored by Rostenkowski would reduce taxes $35 billion to $45 billion.

Robert Dunn New Director Of Commission

Bruce Beasley Jr., chairman of the Pitt County Development Commission, announced that Robert Dunn has been named executive director of the commission, effective June 8.

Dunn, 24, a graduate of East Carolina University, has held the position of executive director of the Burke County Development Commission.

He replaces Reese Hart Jr., who left to assume duties as director of Marketing Services for Peirson & Whitman Inc. in Raleigh. Beasley said the commission's selection committee screened some two dozen candidates during a three-month search for a director.

Dunn, who received a B.S. degree in urban planning from ECU, has been in Morganton two years, Beasley said. Previously, Dunn served one year as

HOTLINE RESPONSE

In response to the appeal in Hotline a couple of weeks ago for cancer victim Kevin Harrell, the J.H. Rose Key Club is sponsoring a car wash May 9 beginning at 8 a.m. and continuing through 2:30 p.m. The location will be Carrow's Exxon, at Pitt Plaza, corner of Greenville and Arlington boulevards. The cost is $1.50 and proceeds will go entirely to the Kevin Harrell Fund.

SOUNDOFF

I am a fairly new resident of Greenville and have started using some of the recreational areas offered, one of which is Green Springs Park. The first time I went I spent nearly a half hour cleaning up someone else's garbage, not to mention the second and third times. I am appalled. No other place I've lived has had such flagrant disregard for public property. It is shameful that people who use this beautiful park don't have enough self respect to pick up their trash. It ruins it for the rest of us. Never mind that someone is supposed to be paid to do this. If the insensitive litterers would use some of the time picking up trash, then the park keepers would be able to spend their time planting bushes, fixing up the facilities, not picking up after SLOBS! Life As It's Lived

Easter Grass Doesn't Know When To Stop

By GAIL MICHAELS

In the spring Phillip and I both have trouble keeping the grass in check. While Phillip struggles with the lawn and garden variety, I struggle with the plastic kind that some dumb Bunny brings each year at Eastertide.

Of the two varieties, the Easter grass is by far the harder. All Phillip has to do with the Bermuda is harvest it two or three times a year with the lawnmower. His method doesn't overly delight our yard-proud neighbors, but if there's anything Phillip believes in, its conserving energy, both the lawnmower's and his own.

Unfortunately, I don't even have the option of mowing mine. I have seriously considered it, but since most of the grass is nesting in the carpet, mowing it might adversely affect the resale value of the house.

The less radical approach is to take it or vacuum it. Given the nature of Easter grass neither option is anything more than a stop-gap measure.

It's no accident that this stuff is associated with a rabbit. In the absence of oxygen Easter grass lies dormant, but once exposed to air, it triples in quantity every two to three hours. Those who doubt this have never observed as a 6-inch-by-9 inch package of grass opened on the night before Easter creeps over the sides of a 9-inch-by-12-inch basket by Easter morning and covers the floor of a 12-by-14 dining room before the week is out.

The enormity of this problem makes the usual post-Easter irritations like chocolate handprints on the livingroom wall, smushed marshmallow eggs under the sofa cushions, and jellybean dye on the heirloom lace tablecloth look minor by comparison. And the further from Easter we get, the more pronounced the problem becomes. Every time Meg searches through her basket for the increasingly elusive goodies, she sets off another growth spurt in our plastic plant life.

Now none of us can walk barefoot in our house without having a few strands insinuate themselves between our toes. Once carried to another room these strands begin to propagate.

"I've heard of decorating schemes that claim to bring the outdoors in, but this is ridiculous," Phillip grumbled as he stepped gingerly through the kitchen. "Can't you get rid of this junk?"

"I've tried, but nothing seems to work."

"How about sweeping the floor?"

I sighed. "I guess I'll have to. Its a shame that the cats don't eat this the way they eat everything else that hits this floor."

"And you might try vacuuming the rest of the house."

"I've done that already. But there are always two or three strands buried in the shag that manage to cross-pollinate."

"I don't believe that."

"Suit yourself. But I'm so convinced of the reproductive abilities of this grass that I'm considering seeding the front lawn with it. By the end of summer we could have a whole yard of bright green Astro-Turf that grows a foot a week without water."

A look of panic crossed his face. "Don't you dare!"

"I thought you didn't believe me."

He grabbed a large trashbag from under the sink and started stuffing it with grass. "I don't, but it never hurts to be sure."

Precipitation

Although it was welcomed, the Greenville area received only .27 of an inch of rain Thursday and early today, according to a spokesman at Greenville Utilities' weather station.

The spokesman reported that temperatures here dropped to a low of 48 degrees last night, following a chilly high of 68 degrees recorded during the day Thursday.

The Tar River level on the national weather gauge was 4.3 feet at 8 a.m. today, according to the GUCO spokesman, up from 4.1 feet recorded yesterday morning. He noted, however, that the rise in the river level was due more to wind influence than rainfall.

AS GOOD AS GOLD

With Father's Day and graduations coming up, you might be starting to think about gifts for men. We know a way you can tell your dad or grad that he's as good as gold — by giving him just that — gold.

Gold has been making the headlines for months. Even with its ups and downs, the value of gold has increased, which makes many people want to own it now more than ever.

This beautiful metal is fashioned into stunning men's jewelry, so it can be worn and enjoyed. Some of the most distinctive pieces contain diamonds or colored gemstones.

Among the most popular colored stones for men's jewelry are dark blue, gold-flecked lapis lazuli, the silky brown tiger's eye and rich translucent jade. Onyx, opal and sapphire are other favorites.

Men take pride in rings that bear the crest of their school, fraternal organization or lodge. Boldly shaped animal heads and monogram rings are perennial favorites.

Some men are escaping from merely practical time-keeping and are collecting a whole wardrobe of watches. This means they are happy to receive a gold watch to wear with dressy attire or to the office, even though they might require something less precious for rugged work and sports.

If your golden boy truly shines in your eyes, tell him so with a gift of fine gold jewelry. He'll always remember you for it.

Bradshaw Urges No Amtrak Cut

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Secretary of Transportation Tom Bradshaw has written a letter to the state's congressional delegation to protest cuts in Amtrak rail service in North Carolina.

The Reagan administration proposes to discontinue rail service outside the Washington-Boston corridor. Four trains serving North Carolina would be eliminated under the plan.

"Steadily increasing passenger demand... shows that the service is needed," Bradshaw said.

Sees No Faith In Compromise

NEW YORK (AP) — The Soviets do not believe in compromise, and nuclear disarmament talks with that nation have failed because Americans believe "the Russians would or could think like us," says President Reagan's new chief arms negotiator.

Lt. Gen. Edward L. Rowny, writing in the June issue of Reader's Digest, says the Soviets have tried to win a strategic game while the United States has slipped to strategic inferiority.

The United States must "negotiate with a new realism to match the Russians' toughness and patience," he said.

Planning Appeal Pot Conviction

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — Dr. M. Gordon Piland, the Dare County physician convicted in February of growing marijuana plants at his home, has hired new attorneys to appeal his case.

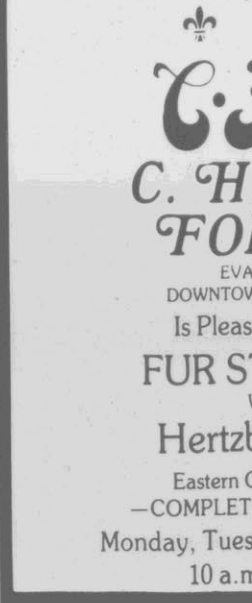

Piland, 34, was ordered this week to report to a probation officer because the April 29 appeal had passed without action.

He was sentenced to serve 111 hours in jail, pay a $1,110 fine and perform 111 hours of charity work after being found guilty of growing 111 marijuana plants.

David S. Rudolf, an assistant professor of law at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said he and Donald H. Beskind, assistant professor of law at Duke University, would file motions in Dare County Superior Court asking a stay of the sentence and additional time to prepare an appeal.

Piland maintained in his trial that he needed the marijuana to treat patients and that the only way to get it was to grow it himself.

Six Collisions Are Reported

An estimated $4,775 damage resulted from six traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 4:58 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 400 feet east of the Evans Street intersection, involving a car driven by Bonita Feleicia Bullock of Washington, D.C. and a truck operated by John William Doughtridge of Rocky Mount.

Police, who charged Ms. Bullock with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident, estimated damage at $700 to the car and $800 to the truck.

Cars driven by Lindsey Ray Griffin of 3110 Briarcliff Dr. and Nora Mae Washington of 1495C Fleming St. collided about 1:08 p.m. at the intersection of Farmville Boulevard and Line Avenue, causing $800 damage to the Griffin car and $100 damage to the Washington vehicle.

At 10:55 a.m. collision at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Tenth Street involved vehicles driven by Raymond Keith Whitley of Route 4, Washington, and Frank Edward Springle Jr. of Langston Park Apartments.

Investigators, who charged Springle with no operators license and no liability insurance, set damage to the Springle car at $800. No damage resulted to the vehicle operated by Whitley.

Carol Harless Haniotes of 108 North Ash St. was charged with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 5:24 p.m. collision on Evans Street, 100 feet south of the Deck Street intersection.

Officers said the Haniotes car collided with an auto operated by Dennis Michael Remm of Route 4, Henderson, causing $100 damage to the Remm car and $500 damage to the Haniotes vehicle.

Traci Elizabeth Allen of Route 1, Winterville, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 4:25 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greenville and Arlington Boulevards.

Police reported the Allen car collided with an auto driven by Edward Garner Demaree of Raleigh, resulting in $200 damage to the Allen car and $300 damage to the Demaree auto.

A 9:34 a.m. mishap on Charles Street, 52 feet south of the Red Banks Road intersection involved cars driven by Russell Harold McClain Jr. of 1407 Red Banks Rd. and Curtis Mack Ross of 2312 Deal Pl.

Police, who charged McClain with exceeding a safe speed, estimated damage at $350 to the McClain car and $125 to the Ross vehicle.

Dear Abby

Should She Dance Or Not?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Here's the picture: I took a date to a lovely dinner dance. Mary Jo sat at my left and to her left sat a gentleman named Bill who asked her to dance. Without any further ado, Mary Jo turned to me and said, "I'm going to dance with Bill."

On the way home, Mary Jo and I had a few words about what happened. I say either Bill should have asked me if he could dance with Mary Jo, or she should have asked my permission to dance with Bill.

I figure that she is my girl for the evening, and I don't like giving her free to entertain single men who are there. It just so happens that Bill's wife would not attend with him because she thought the modest amount for the evening was too much. (Incidentally, this couple is very well-heeled.)

But even if the evening cost me only a dollar, I still think my date should have shown more loyalty to her escort. What is your opinion, O Wise One?

RICHARD IN LANSDALE, PA.

DEAR RICHARD: You're right. Mary Jo should have asked you if you minded if she danced with Bill. And/or Bill should have asked you if he could dance with your date. However, Mary Jo is not your "property"; she is only your date, and as such she is not yours to "give free" or withhold.

DEAR ABBY: You've often recommended Alcoholics Anonymous. Gamblers Anonymous and Overeaters Anonymous for compulsive drinkers, gamblers and overeaters.

I wish there was an Adulterers Anonymous for compulsive adulterers. I am one, and there's nothing I can do about it.

Don't laugh, Abby. I have a wonderful husband and family, but I've gone from one adulterous affair to another until now I can't even count them. I'm not oversexed. In fact, I'm just the opposite. I get nothing out of these affairs. I can't for the life of me understand why I deliberately get myself into such miserable situations that offer no sexual fulfillment, knowing if I'm caught I'll lose my husband and children and everything that is dear to me.

I must be crazy. Can't something on the order of Alcoholics Anonymous be organized for compulsive adulterers?

WEAK IN ILLINOIS

DEAR WEAK: I can't imagine a compulsive adulterer phoning another compulsive adulterer and being talked out of it.

You need some form of psychotherapy. Only when you understand what motivates you to behave as you do will you be able to control your actions. Your community mental health clinic can provide you with confidential counseling at a price you can afford. Please give the clinic a call.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from No. 2, who was upset because her new mother-in-law called her by Wife No. 1's name, I would like to tell you how I solved that problem.

I, too, was a second wife, but it was my husband who called me by his first wife's name. They had been married for over 20 years when she died, so I realized it was just habit.

Every time this happened, I would just smile and say, "Yes, I know, Ed." He got the message. Ed was my first husband's name.

SALAD SANDWICHES

3 tablespoons olive oil

1 tablespoon red wine vinegar

1 teaspoon dried basil leaves

1 medium tomato, diced

1 small green pepper, seeded and cut into thin short strips

1-3rd cup finely chopped red onion

1/2 cup pimiento-stuffed green olives

4 round hard rolls (each 5 inches wide)

4 slices Swiss cheese, cut into thick short strips

ECU Fulfills Mission

Today is a milestone day at East Carolina University. It is the day that nearly 3,000 degrees were awarded to students who have completed their work at the university. Some 2,063 undergraduates received diplomas and 894 others received graduate degrees. It is an exciting day for all these graduates and their families.

There is another factor that adds excitement for all who love and support East Carolina University.

The first doctor of medicine degrees were awarded by the university. The class which entered the budding medical school four years ago has now completed its work and its members are prepared to fulfill the promise of the School of Medicine.

It is also significant that, although a number of doctorate programs have been established at ECU, these are the first doctorate degrees ever awarded by the institution. All this is important because now East Carolina is beginning to fulfill its mission as a university.

Difficult years preceded the establishment of the medical school. That all seems distant now as the first class graduates and the medical science building towers next to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

We wish the new physicians and all the graduates of East Carolina University the best in life.

Rain Offers Some Relief

It wasn't all that much, Thursday's rain, probably less than a quarter of an inch; nevertheless the precipitation offered a great deal of hope to farmers and gardeners alike.

Farm agent Leroy James said crops looked better Thursday morning after the rainfall of the night before, the first since April 24.

When the area has been gripped in a drought such as we have had any precipitation is welcomed. Much more rainfall will be needed to make a desirable crop year, but at least we have had some relief.

Truth In Taxation

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — We've had "truth in advertising," and "truth in lending" laws on the books for some time now, assuring citizens that what they are told is the truth, and is told in understandable terms.

But those measures are government telling private business to tell the truth.

Now comes a proposal which will test just how serious government is about telling the truth: "Truth in Taxation" could be the title of a legislative proposal now under debate in the North Carolina General Assembly.

If enacted, the law would stop the common practice of local governments actually raising the taxes you pay while telling you what they are cutting the local property tax rate.

It happens every year somewhere in North Carolina as the eight-year revaluation cycle moves forward. Property is appraised for local taxing purposes, and the tax rate which is set by local governing boards is applied to that valuation.

Big Jump

Obviously, property values escalate sharply over eight years both from actual value increases, and from inflation. Doubling or tripling of values is not uncommon.

If eight years ago your property was appraised for tax purposes at $30,000 and the tax rate is now $1.00 per $100, then you pay $300 in property taxes. If revaluation pushes the appraised value to $60,000 and your county commissioners cut the tax rate to 75 cents, you pay $450.

This oversimplified description of revaluation is what lies beneath the periodic taxpayer uproars heard from around the state at revaluation time.

The proposal now under study would require that local government officials figure out exactly what the tax rate would have to be to produce exactly the same amount of money produced the previous year before property values were increased. That way, taxpayers would know whether they were getting a reduction; holding their own; or being hit with a hidden tax hike. Insiders say flatly that revaluation always produces added income despite the lower rates which are adopted.

BILL NOBLITT

Also, the proposal would require that local boards of equalization and review remain in session longer during revaluation years so that appeals could be heard. Quite often, people don't decide to argue until they get their tax bills. Under normal procedure, the appeals process is closed before the tax bills are mailed out. Only those willing to do their own calculating can determine how much increased tax they will have to pay so they can decide to appeal before the deadline.

Progress

The proposals were first introduced as local legislation covering only Orange County where revaluation is now in process. But legal technicalities stymied the local measure, so sponsors have now introduced a statewide approach.

The question remains: will action be taken this year? With the property tax getting deeper and deeper into trouble and eight-year revaluation causing growth clamor from citizens, a move is now getting underway to dump the entire matter in the laps of a study commission to report back in 1983.

The ultimate goal of planners is to devise a system for feeding current real estate market activities into a computer in which each local property is described so that valuations for tax purposes are constantly updated. This would forestall lengthy delays which produce major jumps in values, and would provide local governments a regularly increasing tax base without the pain of sharp citizen response every eight years.

It Was Only Yesterday

It seems like only yesterday that we signed a peace treaty with the Japanese aboard the battleship Missouri, and told them they would never be allowed to make arms again.

"What should we do instead?" a defeated Japanese admiral asked.

"Why don't you make automobiles?" one of Gen. MacArthur's advisers suggested.

"Ah so. But Americans make automobiles. How can a poor defeated country like Japan hope to compete with your wonderful cars?"

"Well, of course you can't compete in the United States because Americans would never buy a Japanese automobile after what you did to Pearl Harbor. But perhaps you could make something that could be sold in Southeast Asia and other markets where people don't care about quality."

"Ah so. How do you build an automobile?"

"It sounds hard, but I'm sure you people can get the hang of it. Here's a book with the instructions. You see, you put the engine up here and then seats here, and wrap a body around it, paint it a nice color, and you have yourself a car."

"Can I keep the book?"

"Why not? Now that you are a poor defeated country we have no secrets."

"You are kind, sir."

A year later, the first Japanese car came off a jerry-built assembly line. The Japanese admiral, who was now in charge of Tojo Motors, showed it to the American aide.

The ex-admiral bowed. "Forgive us for this unworthy thing we call an automobile, but we do not have much to work with."

The aide slapped the ex-admiral on the back. "Don't apologize. You did right well with what you had available. I'll tell you what I'll do; I'll bring some of our boys over from Detroit, and they'll give you a list of things you'll need to build a decent vehicle. We'll also send over some of your designers and engineers to the U.S. so they can get the hang of American know-how."

"Ah so? You would do that for a poor little struggling Japanese automobile company?"

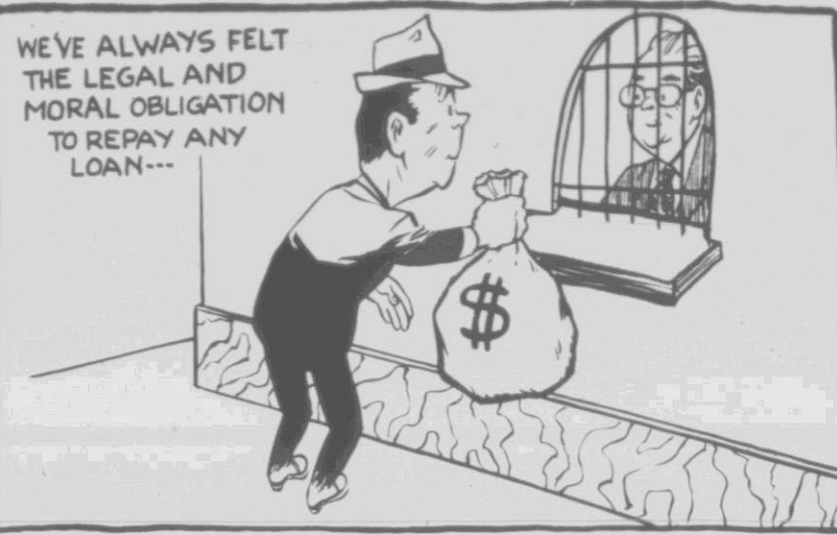

"Why not? It isn't as if you're ever going to be able to sell any of those rickshaws in the States."

Several years later, the MacArthur aide, who was now working for a large New York bank, bumped into the ex-admiral in the Waldorf Astoria. "What brings you to New York?" he asked jovially.

"I am arranging dealerships all over America for our 4-cylinder Kamikaze 3x2. It

WHY IS THAT SUCH A GLARING EXCEPTION?

Task Force For Castro

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The continued presence of a Soviet naval task force, including a missile-firing, Kara-class cruiser, in the Cuban navy base of Cienfuegos has raised this question at high administration levels: Is the Soviet purpose to challenge President Reagan or to prop up the falling political fortunes of Fidel Castro?

The last Soviet naval presence in the Caribbean was early 1980, but it bypassed Cuba and sailed away after Carter administration protests. Some Reagan officials believe the quick departure was to help Jimmy Carter's presidential campaign. Thus, the nearly three-week presence of the new task force at Cienfuegos could be calculated response to Reagan's anti-Soviet hard line, serving notice that what was given Carter is withheld from Reagan.

The contrary view here is that President Brezhnev sent his ships to Cuba merely as a symbol of Soviet support for Castro, who is alarmed about Reagan's hard line in the Caribbean. That conclusion is based on earlier indications that Brezhnev secretly informed Castro to expect no Soviet help in shipping communist arms to El Salvador. If that assessment is accurate, the Soviet task force is Brezhnev's token of affection for Castro — but not much more.

Adlai III Comeback

Former Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, out of public office only five months, is seriously considering a 1982 comeback attempt to oppose the reelection of the most popular politician in Illinois: Republican Gov. James Thompson.

Democratic politicians critical of Stevenson are chortling over the prospect that he will be chewed up by Thompson's third-term bid. However, the Stevenson name is still a respected one in Illinois (particularly downstate, in the predominantly Republican area outside metropolitan Chicago) and he may be the only Democrat able to oust the governor.

A footnote: Thompson has mended his fences with the Republican right. He impressed President Reagan's inner circle during last year's campaign with his pro-Reagan speeches. If he becomes the first governor of Illinois ever elected to three terms, Thompson would be a serious entry in the post-Reagan succession sweepstakes.

Reagan To Helms

President Reagan finally told Sen. Jesse Helms, the conservative leader, that he really did want Senate confirmation of half a dozen top State Department nominations that Helms had objected to the past three months.

The president's April 29 call followed a Helms White House talk with top Reagan staffers April 23 at which presidential counselor Edwin Meese III and staff chief James A. Baker III told him the president truly was committed to the State Department nominees. Helms listened politely, then said he would like to hear that word from Ronald Reagan himself.

In their 20-minute chat, Reagan promised Helms that the performance of the disputed diplomats would be closely monitored by the White House. In that case, said Helms, he would end his blocking operation (with the possible exception of Under Secretary of State-designate Myer Rashish and African affairs assistant secretary Chester Crocker). The nomination may be confirmed early this week.

A footnote: The luncheon arranged between Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Helms for April 25 turned instead into a long conversation on the telephone. Driving to the State Department from his home in Virginia, Helms was caught in a giant traffic jam resulting from the March of Dimes Walkathon and finally drove back home.

Justice As Usual

Conservatives inside and outside the Reagan administration are furious that Attorney General William French Smith is following the advice of Justice Department career lawyers in opposing bills to give Congress veto

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the Editor,

On November 4, the American people spoke loudly against the economy, defense and foreign policy of Mr. Carter. People recognized, we, as a nation, were at the brink of destruction.

President Reagan is not trying to hurt the poor, but the truly needy will hurt most if we do not stop inflation. Much has been said and written about the "horrible Reagan budget." Government spending for 1981 will be greater than 1980. The spending in 1982 will be $41 billion greater than 1981. The increase includes $26 billion for defense. Spending for 1982 will be three times the 1972 budget ($696 billion versus $232 billion).

Many people are saying "Let's return to the days of President Kennedy," when the poor were not shortchanged. In 1962, 44 percent of federal spending was on national defense, compared to 24 percent today. Twenty-five percent of that went for functions which included welfare and social programs, compared to 37 percent today.

Governor Hunt and the legislature have not believed the message to "cut the budget now." Hunt's proposal on gasoline taxes will hurt the poor and middle class nationally. His alcohol tax will be an invitation to reopen illegal bootlegging.

Does it make sense that our gasoline tax will be seventh highest in the nation, and our cigarette tax is the lowest? Where are the facts to prove our economy will be hurt by taxes on cigarettes? New York raised taxes on cigarettes from 10 to 12 cents in 1968 and to 15 cents per pack in 1972. This has resulted in a 40 percent increase in revenue and a 7 percent increase in volume of cigarette sales. A tax of 3 to 5 cents per pack would help materially.

Please urge your legislators to cut cost and property taxes.

Strength For Today

DISBELIEF IS UNREASONABLE

"Since everything about us shows a progression of power, where is the difficulty in believing that at the summit of all things is a Being in whom an infinity of power unites with the infinity of the will? When this simple idea presents itself to our minds, we have the concept of the perfect Being that man calls God."

This statement would recommend itself to the most orthodox Christians today, yet strangely enough it was written by the great pamphleteer of the Revolution, Thomas Paine, who has always been considered an atheist.

The fact that Paine could write these words shows that there are few real atheists in the world. Atheism is so logically indefensible that no one can hold to it without doing violence to every process of reason. The order of things naturally suggests a creator and a sustainer.

Only when men defy reason can they become atheists. The mind left to itself believes in God. — Elisha Douglass

Americans And Depletephobia

By CHET CURRIER

AP Business Writer NEW YORK (AP) — Today's Americans live in an age of depletephobia — the fear of running out of things.

As we sat in long lines at gasoline stations during the 1970s, we came face to face with the idea that supplies of oil were not infinite. Every drop consumed theoretically brought us closer to the day when there would be none left to burn.

When drought hit many areas of the country this year, a news magazine posed the ominous question, "Are we running out of water?"

Many a family budgeter has to cope with the problem of running out of money, even though recent Federal Reserve figures show the overall money supply growing too fast.

And all the while another precious commodity — time — is steadily running out for everyone.

The "shortage mentality" that develops from all this is well known. A facetious remark on television about a shortage of toilet paper, and the next day the stores are mobbed with panic buyers.

Comedians, with their sensitive antennae, have picked up the mood. Thus, Bob Orben's recent suggestion that a crisis is approaching for the proliferating television and radio talk shows, with the pool of guests said to be down to a five-year supply.

Financial advisers have been quick to capitalize on the situation with best-selling books, newsletters and lectures urging people to stock up on canned goods and other essentials in preparation for the day when the economy comes undone.

Lately, one diehard optimist, stock market analyst Raymond F. DeVoe Jr. at the Wall Street firm of Bruns, Nordeman, Rea & Co., claims to have seen signs of another developing shortage. We appear, he says, to be running low on crises themselves.

Thanks in part to conservation, worldwide supplies of oil are now described as ample at least. For once, the question of what to do about oil seems to be more a problem for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries than for the industrialized nations.

The hostages are home from Iran. The space shuttle mission, despite computer problems at the outset, was an impressive success.

The state of the economy may still be very troubled, as demonstrated by the recent surge in interest rates. But there are a few hints at least that it is improving.

The slide of the dollar against most foreign currencies, which experts were so upset about just a few years ago, has been dramatically reversed. The other day, for example, it reached a 10-year high against the French franc.

Inflation is still very much with us, but some think it is starting to lose its momentum. From a peak annual rate of about 15 percent in early 1980, the rise of the consumer price index gradually slowed to an annual rate of less than 8 percent in March.

The price of gold, regarded as a thermometer of international anxieties, is hovering roughly 40 percent below the record high of $875 an ounce it reached a little more than 15 months ago. Some leading advocates of investing in gold have simply lost interest in it, and gone looking elsewhere for profit opportunities.

Depletephobia is sometimes justified, as when the reservoirs run low and there's no rain in sight. Other times, as in the toilet-paper fiasco, it plainly is not.

At the moment, it's too soon to tell whether DeVoe's vision of a "crisis shortage" will be realized. It flies in the face of the time-tested precept known as Murphy's Law ("Whatever can go wrong will go wrong").

Still, it's nice to contemplate the prospect with him when he points out, "An old Chinese curse goes, 'May you live in interesting times.' 'We've had that for most of the last two decades. Now it looks like they might be a lot less interesting — even dull!'"

Study the hand closely and then tell us which of the defender's cards took the crucial trick against South's six heart contract. Would you believe it was West's six of hearts?

North dove to slam even though he knew that the hand was a partial misfit. From his point of view, South could easily have held another key card, which would have made the slam laydown. Even then, it took sterling defense by East to sink the contract.

The auction suggested that declarer might need ruffs to make his contract, so West would have been well advised to lead a trump and put his key card to use right away. When he selected a spade, he gave declarer a crucial tempo. South could count four quick tricks in the side suits. If he could score his combined eight trumps separately, he could be home.

Declarer won the ace of spades in dummy, cashed the top diamonds for a spade discard, and started on his crossruff. He noted that West followed to the second diamond with the jack, so he chose to ruff spades in his hand. A spade ruff with a low trump was followed by the ace of clubs, on which a diamond was sluffed from dummy. A club was ruffed on the table, and a spade was led.

Had East either ruffed low or discarded on this trick, declarer would have had an easy passage. He would have scored his remaining low trump, and then finished out the hand with a high crossruff. But East was equal to the occasion. He ruffed with the eight of trumps, thus forcing declarer to overruff with the queen.

Declarer ruffed a club in dummy and led the last spade. East ruffed with the nine and declarer overruffed with the ace. Another club ruff left declarer in dummy with nothing to lead from the table but a diamond. Declarer ruffed with his last trump, the five, but West was able to overruff with the six. East scored the last trick with a trump for down one.

Inmate Data Is Weighed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Prison officials are beginning a long process of looking at inmate records to decide how many can be released early, state Correction Secretary James Woodard said Thursday.

Gov. Jim Hunt has approved a plan to release up to 1,600 inmates in North Carolina's prison system in an effort to save space and money.

"The effort is a careful scrutiny on a case-by-case basis and primary consideration will be given to the impact on public safety by any action, contemplated," Woodard said in a prepared statement.

He said his department is reviewing files of those approaching parole eligibility or the end of their sentences to determine if their releases can be approved.

No quota has been set for the number to be paroled or released, and there is no schedule for when the releases may become effective, Woodard said.

Under the proposal, the commission will give inmates who are good risks more credits to apply toward parole. Inmates could get credits for good behavior or by working in the prison system, for example, as truck drivers and kitchen workers.

"We are, for example, looking at all committed youthful offenders," he said. "We are reviewing all those within 60 days of their release date. We are reviewing those who have been convicted of non-violent crimes."

Legislators have criticized the Department of Correction for underestimating the prison population in its budget requests. The department projected a 1983 population of 15,600; the current population stands at more than 16,000.

power over executive branch regulations as a brake against runaway government.

That is the focus of the conservative complaint that Smith has permitted business as usual at Justice, making few changes in Carter administration policy. In his first weeks on the job (the first government post he has ever held), Smith bought the career-lawyer argument that the legislative veto is unconstitutional.

That puts Smith in conflict with Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa (principal sponsor of the legislative veto), budget director David Stockman and even presidential counselor Edwin Meese III. The question now is whether President Reagan, who endorsed the legislative veto during the campaign, will support his personal-lawyer-turned-attorney-general.

Allen At ACDA

President Reagan sent Richard V. Allen, his top national security assistant, to play the role of acting head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) for two days last week for one purpose: to fire acting Deputy Director Michael Pillsbury and counselor David Sullivan.

Pillsbury and Sullivan are hard-headed, hard-lining anti-Soviet specialists on arms control. Their efforts to put more muscle into U.S. handling of alleged Soviet violations of SALT and their repeated run-ins with the arms control bureaucracy in the State Department had made them hairshirts to the White House.

Political allies on Capitol Hill, however, intervened with the White House after the ouster orders were issued. As a result, both will keep their offices, security clearances and building passes at least until incoming ACDA Director Eugene Debs Rostow takes over in the next few weeks. Conceivably, he may want to keep one or both in his agency — but probably at different jobs.

The American looked at it and shook his head. "You're wasting your time, admiral. Americans will never buy a small car, particularly one with front-wheel drive."

"Ah so, but we only hope to take one percent of the market among the teen-agers and college students."

"It won't work. We have a love affair in this country with gas guzzlers and big fenders. As a friend, I'm telling you to save your money, and try to sell your product to the Third World. They will drive anything they can get their hands on."

The ex-admiral bowed and said, "Perhaps you are right. But as long as I am here maybe I will find someone who is interested."

It was 1981 and both the American ex-aid, and the Japanese ex-admiral had aged considerably. When the American walked into the luxurious offices of the ex-admiral, the Japanese stood up slowly and bowed.

"Ah so. And what brings you to Tokyo, my good friend?"

"I've been sent by the president of the United States," the American said. "He knows we go way back, and felt I should bring his message personally."

"What message?"

"He wants you to stop making so many damn Japanese cars."

Japanese Dissatisfied By Submarine Report

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Maritime Safety Agency said today it has asked the U.S. Navy for an explanation of "discrepancies" between its report on the collision of a Japanese freighter and a U.S. nuclear submarine and accounts of the accident by the freighter's crew.

Two Japanese crewmen died in the April 9 collision between the USS George Washington and the 2,340-ton Nissho Maru, which sank in 15 minutes. There were no American casualties and no damage to the 6,800-ton sub's reactor or nuclear weapons system, the Navy said.

Takashi Noro, director of coast guard and rescue operations for the MSA, said statements by the 13 Japanese survivors differ "markedly" from the U.S. Navy report on several points, and key questions remain unanswered.

The MSA is conducting its own investigation, and has asked U.S. authorities to what else can we make?"

"He wants you to start making arms."

"But we don't know how to make arms."

"The president told me to give you this."

"What is it?"

"A book of instructions."

ficer in charge prior to the incident, Noro said.

In response to a Japanese inquiry on April 10, the day after the accident, U.S. Naval authorities said no U.S. submarine had been in the vicinity of the accident. The report states, however, the U.S. Navy knew of the accident April 9. The MSA wants to know the reason for this discrepancy, Noro said.

It also wants an explanation of why the Navy's report placed the incident 3.5 Nautical miles away from the site given by the 13 Japanese survivors.

The survivors claim they made a distress signal to a U.S. P-3C patrol plane before the freighter sank. Noro said the MSA wants to know whether the plane's crew saw the distress signal.

Med School Grads.....

I wish you mine," Woole said, pointing out that, "the group of faculty that came with me in 1976 are especially proud. This group...prepared the plan that has resulted in what you have now."

He urged the graduates to remember the "special debt," they owe to those who made the School of Medicine a reality. "Give back to this school a small part of what it's given you."

Monroe, a practicing physician in Greenville before joining the ECU staff, said, "Not only are you now a promising young physician, but in a very real sense you are a symbol. Your success crowns the effort of countless thousands of people who worked long and hard to make this day a reality. They all had one goal in common these past 17 years — to develop this medical school and to improve medical care in rural North Carolina."

Wiggers, who for 21 years headed the Albany Medical College, said the graduation of the charter medical school class marks, for him, "one of the most rewarding chapters," of his career, "an occasion of fulfillment."

A number of awards were presented to members of the graduating class. Eugene Davis Day Jr. of Durham received the Edgar T. Beddingfield Jr. Memorial Award, (honoring the late Dr. Beddingfield of Stantonsburg), the Jacob Furth Memorial Award from the Department of Internal Medicine, The Department of Pathology Award, and the Department of Pediatrics Award, while Linda

M. Robertson of Rural Hall was given the Sandoza Pharmaceutical Co. Award, the John Hunter Award from the Department of Surgery, and the American Medical Women's Association Award (given to women in the top 10 percent of the class).

Other awards included: The Department of Anatomy Award to Thomas Beatty Jr. of Charlotte; the Family Practice Award to Michael David Tripp of Ash in Brunswick County; the Department of Pathology Award to Thomas Beatty and Kenneth Stuart Lee of Smithfield; the Phillip G. Nelson Award, given by the Department of Psychiatry in honor of Dr. Nelson of Greenville, to Bonnie A. Caulkins of Murefreesboro; the Department of Radiology Award to Tony P. Smith of Conover; and American Medical Women's Association Awards to Bonnie Caulkins and Mary Beth Foll of Chapel Hill.

David Ray Faber III of Charlotte, president of the Class of 1981, presented a number of awards to faculty members. They included: Resident Award to Dr. David Pearsall; Basic Science Award to Dr. Hubert Burden; Clinical Faculty Award to Dr. W. Ray Walker; Community Physician Award to Dr. Jack Welch, and the Seymour Bakerman Scholarship, a class scholarship fund named after Bakerman, to Dr. Seymour Bakerman.

Of the 28 graduates, 12 will enter residency programs in North Carolina, half of them in Greenville. A total of 12 will specialize in family medicine.

City Officials Dislike Rent Control Prospect

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer

Congress is considering a measure that would place the federal government right in the middle of one of the nation's hottest local controversies — rent control.

And officials in several cities that have controls are saying bluntly they think Washington is way out of line.

Backed by conservatives in both houses, the proposal would force cities with rent control to decontrol forever each housing unit as it became vacant, or else lose some federal housing aid.

The measure, an amendment to President Reagan's housing bill, passed the Senate Banking Committee on Tuesday but was defeated Wednesday in the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Subcommittee on Housing and Community Development.

Still, congressional sources believe it stands a fairly good chance of final passage.

Rent controls have been a hot local issue for years in some 200 communities that have them. Most of those municipalities are in New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts and California.

Political conservatives and landlord groups have insisted the controls have contributed to housing shortages by discouraging new construction.

Supporters of controls, on the other hand, argue that they have nothing to do with housing shortages, and that without controls, landlords all too often rent-gauge or arbitrarily evict tenants.

George Sternlieb of Rutgers University, a foe of controls who has advised Reagan on urban matters, says, "I think it's very clear the federal government is outside its limits. I am very much for decontrol. But rent control has become a symbol to conservatives of all that's wrong with inner cities. It's too simplistic."

Officials in some cities with rent controls like Boston, San Francisco, San Jose or Oakland, Calif., believe the proposed measure would have little

"As chairman of the selection committee," Beasley said, "we were very impressed with Robert's enthusiasm, his background and his potential. Having lived in Greenville and being a graduate of ECU we felt Robert could make an immediate contribution to the commission's program."

He added, "We feel Robert, his wife, Lisa, and his young family will be important additions to the local community. He is a professional and our commission has pledged to him our unanimous support and assistance."

Investigators Uncover Drugs In Nurse's Home

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Investigators looking into a string of 27 mysterious deaths at two hospitals questioned a male nurse, searched his house and seized small amounts of two controlled drugs, according to San Bernardino County authorities.

One of the drugs, Lidocaine, which is used to control irregular heartbeats, showed up in high levels in the bodies of some patients whose deaths are being investigated, the Los Angeles Times reported.

Robert R. Diaz, 43, a registered nurse, was questioned at his home last weekend and his house was searched by authorities investigating the deaths, according to San Bernardino County Sheriff's Detective Leroy Morgan. No charges have been filed and the county district attorney's office said it had not determined whether any wrongdoing was involved in the deaths.

A sheriff's spokesman would not comment on whether Diaz is a suspect in the case.

Diaz, in an interview with the Los Angeles Times, published today, said authorities recovered small amounts of morphine and Lidocaine.

He said he had the Lidocaine because he accidentally left some in his coat pocket at work and brought it home with him. He said that he had found a half-empty vial of morphine and meant to report it, but by then was no longer working at the hospital.

Everett Martin, administrator of San Geronio Pass Memorial Hospital at Banning, one of the two hospitals involved, said that while Lidocaine is used in treatment, "There is absolutely no reason for a nurse to have (personal) possession of Lidocaine. It is a controlled substance."

Diaz has been a licensed nurse in California since Feb. 28, 1979, according to the state Board of Registered Nurses.

The 27 deaths have occurred at Community Hospital of the Valleys in Perris and San Geronio.

Diaz, who worked at both hospitals on temporary assignment from a nursing registry, told The Times his first night on duty at the Perris hospital was March 29, when two patients died on his shift.

Diaz told The Times he was trying to persuade officials at the hospital to see if their supplies of Lidocaine were contaminated. He said he was "scared" at the high number of deaths that occurred during the 11 days he worked there.

"I started getting scared after the fifth one or sixth one," he said.

The nurse said he also worked for one night, April 23, at San Geronio Pass Memorial Hospital in Banning and two patients died on his shift. He said he didn't administer care to one of the patients and said a physician was present at the bedside of the other.

The disclosure of the search warrant and the questioning came Thursday as authorities exhumed the body of John Rainwater, the first of as many as 13 bodies to be exhumed. Rainwater died April 11 at Community Hospital of the Valleys.

Deputy Coroner Dan Cupido said six bodies would be exhumed in Perris Valley Cemetery today.

Riverside County Coroner William Dykes said the bodies were being taken to a mortuary in Riverside where autopsies will be performed this weekend.

The crowd stood for a moment of remembrance. Chancellor Brewer and department deans conferred undergraduate degrees recognizing each school of the university. Leo Jenkins and Gov. Hunt then put the traditional hoods on the 28 graduates of ECU's School of Medicine while Brewer presented the charter class with their M.D. degrees (doctor of medicine).

Syria Declares SAMs Will Remain In Lebanon

Hunt's Tax Package Is Ready To Go

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria said today its surface-to-air missile batteries will stay in Lebanon as long as Syrian forces remain in this war-torn nation. Israel has demanded Syria remove the missiles and has threatened military action if it doesn't.

"Air defenses, including missiles, are part of Syria's armed forces. They exist now and so they will in the future, anywhere Syrian troops are, to be ready for use whenever the need arises," the Syrian Defense Ministry said.

The announcement followed the departure from Damascus of the Soviet Union's first deputy foreign minister, Georgy M. Korniyenko, who held three days of talks with Syrian government leaders.

It also came as President Reagan's special envoy, Philip C. Habib, met for 90 minutes in Beirut with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis on the missile crisis. He told reporters afterwards the situation was "dangerous."

The sound of artillery fire was heard in the suburban presidential palace as Syrian troops traded fire with Lebanese Christian militiamen at three central city locations.

A police spokesman said four mortar shells exploded near the downtown Prime Ministry 15 minutes before Habib's motorcade arrived from the palace for his meeting with Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan.

In Damascus, Syrian President Hafez Assad said his armed forces were "poised to answer adequately any Israeli aggressive action" as a result of Syria's deployment of heat-seeking SAM-6 and SAM-2 surface-to-air missiles in eastern Lebanon.

Syria moved in the missiles on April 28, a day after Israel shot down two Syrian helicopter gunships north of the Zaharani River. Israel claimed the helicopters were attacking its Christian militia allies around the Christian city of Zahle.

The Syrians police a 4½-year-old civil war armistice between right-wing Christians and leftist Lebanese Moslems and Palestinians. Originally billed as peacekeeping forces, the Christians maintain the Syrian troops have become an occupation army.

Habib, a retired career diplomat, arrived in Damascus Thursday with Morris Draper, the deputy assistant secretary of state for Middle Eastern affairs. They drove to Beirut, crossing the Bekaa Valley, where they had an opportunity to see at least two of the SAM-6 batteries on either side of the Damascus-Beirut highway.

Habib and Draper met with U.S. Ambassador to Lebanon John Gunther Dean on Thursday. They plan to return to Damascus on Saturday to see the Syrians and reach Jerusalem on Sunday for talks with Israeli leaders.

In Tel Aviv, Israel reacted cautiously today to reports from Beirut that Syria has moved about 4,000 troops south of the "red line" Israel set as the southern limit for Syrian expansion into southern Lebanon.

Remind Further Rain Is Needed

By The Associated Press
Thursday's rains were a welcome sight in most sections of North Carolina, but agriculture experts agree that more rain is needed more often if the state is to escape the clutches of a year-long drought.

"It was slow and steady, so it all soaked in," said Granville County extension agent Frank Baker Thursday. "The weather also turned cool, which might stop the moisture from evaporating. From that standpoint, it certainly helped."

But, Baker added that with no water in the ground, it would take an inch and a half within 24 hours, plus an additional inch and a half a week for the rest of the summer to replenish the parched soil.

Union County extension chairman M.C. Howell called it "a million-dollar rain," but added, "That's contingent on another one coming real soon."

Amounts ranged from 21 inches in the Triangle area to .55 inches in Charlotte and .73 inches in Asheville. But Raleigh remains more than 50 percent below its normal rainfall totals for this time of year. Charlotte is also at half the rainfall amount it has normally received for the period.

Asheville has had 11.30 inches of rain since Jan. 1, compared with a normal level of 15.73.

Bobby Gentry of the state Department of Agriculture said Thursday that tobacco and other crops have not been affected by the lack of rain—so far.

"But we're at the critical point where, if we don't have some rain soon, we'll be in real trouble," Gentry said. "The rain we had was not a saving factor because it was not enough to make up the water deficit."

He also said if there is not enough water in the ground, the tobacco crop will have smaller leaves and have a lower quality at harvest.

"As for the rest, there wasn't enough rain to save the whole (summer's) crop, but it was enough to help temporarily," Gentry said.

The lack of rain has also been a burden on cattle producers because farmers need a good growing season for their pastures.

"If it works the way it did last summer, it's going to depress the cattle market because grain prices are going to be high, so producers will have to carry lighter cattle to market," said Chatham County assistant extension agent Kirby Parrish. "That means the producers will get less money for their cattle."

Parrish said not only does North Carolina need a good growing season, but so does the Midwest because a lot of grain for cattle feed comes from that region of the country.

"But right now the growing season looks kind of bleak and that's not encouraging at all," Parrish said.

"It seems to me that these are only rumors," Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori told Israel Radio. "It's true that the Syrians have some sort of intention of strengthening themselves in Lebanon, but certainly not beyond the Zaharani River."

Zippori, who has administered the Defense Ministry since defense chief Ezer Weizman quit last May, said the Syrians appeared to be showing caution by not moving more anti-aircraft missiles into Lebanon.

He predicted U.S. and Soviet diplomatic efforts to defuse the latest Mideast crisis "will bear fruit."

Lebanese government sources who have proved accurate in the past said Thursday that Syrian troops and armor pushed through the narrow mountain tracks as far south as Kfar Tibnit, a Lebanese village about eight miles south of the Zaharani River "red line" and eight miles north of the Israeli border.

Unharmd In Shoot-Out

CLEVELAND (AP) — There were "bullet holes above, bullet holes down and bullet holes all over the hallway" after two old men, each armed with an antique pistol, shot it out at point-blank range in an apartment building and emerged without injury, police said.

Each fired six shots at the other Tuesday in an effort to settle an old grudge, but all bullets missed though the men were five feet apart. Police speculated the bullets went wild because one man had to prop himself up with a cane, while the other had glaucoma.

The men, aged 76 and 77, were released after saying they did not wish to press charges.

Israeli troops frequently strike into southern Lebanon south of the Litani in pursuit of Palestinian guerrilla forces dug in north and west of the Israeli border.

Syria has denied it made any agreement with Israel governing its forces in Lebanon, but has not commented on the reported advance south of the Zaharani.

"We're following the situation closely," said Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in response to questions in Washington. Haig did not confirm the Syrian troop movement, telling reporters, "I've seen the same reports you have."

Sentenced To Become Literate

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A 28-year-old man who told his hostages in a 1½-hour siege that illiteracy made him unable to support his family has been sentenced by a judge to learn reading and writing.

Richard L. Gates Jr. was sentenced Tuesday to 10 years probation on condition that he takes courses, seeks psychiatric treatment and gets financial counseling.

He pleaded guilty to charges of burglary, attempted robbery, theft and recklessly endangering another person in connection with the November incident, in which he held seven people hostage in a home.

Europe Seeing More Than 200 On Hunger Strikes

By CAROLYN LESH
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — More than 200 young men and women, some encouraged by the fast-to-death of IRA guerrilla Bobby Sands, are on hunger strikes throughout Europe to press campaigns for a wide variety of causes.

In cathedrals, in hospital rooms, in prison cells, they are starving themselves to bring about changes in prison life, to complain about immigration policies or to forward battles for secession by ethnic minorities.

Hunger strikes are reported in France, Spain, Italy and Turkey, in addition to Northern Ireland. They pose serious moral questions for governments and physicians and severe medical risks for the fasters.

A month ago in West Germany, an imprisoned member of the terrorist Red Army Faction died after a two-month hunger strike despite medical intervention shortly before his death.

Many of the seven current European hunger strikes began in the final days of Bobby Sands, who died Tuesday on the 68th day of his fast. Several of the strikers have said Sands' death gave them courage to continue.

There are three hunger strikes in France over issues that have long haunted the conscience of the nation.

In the central city of Bourges, four men and two women are in the 29th day of a fast demanding amnesty for all alleged political prisoners in France and the abolition of the State Security Court, the legal branch that deals with terrorists.

The six, all from the Basque region of Spain and France, started their action in the cathedral in the center of Bourges, the city's chief tourist attraction. All had been transferred to a hospital by Monday.

"A few days before one of them was hospitalized, we were sitting together in the cathedral," said Laurent Pierret, one of about 30 persons in a group formed to support the hunger strikers. "She asked me, 'Could you read to me. I can no longer see to read.'"

Pierret said the strikers have lost 26 to 33 pounds and have refused intravenous feeding. He said they often spoke of the possibility of Sands' death and said his hunger strike had "given them moral courage."

"They are all in weak condition," a physician at the Bourges Hospital said. "We are in a difficult position. Under French law, if a person refuses medical help, we are powerless. We cannot even feed them intravenously if they fall into comas and have previously stated they want no medical assistance."

The six received a letter this week from French Socialist leader Francois Mitterrand, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's Socialist opponent in the presidential election Sunday. Mitterrand said if elected, he would support efforts to abolish the State Security Court.

In the Paris suburb of Massy, 21 Tunisian immigrant workers have been on a hunger strike since April 22 at the Church of St. Paul. They are protesting orders for their expulsion from France.

In the Basque country of southwest France, 22 suspected Basque terrorists have been on a hunger strike since April 27 at the prison in Bayonne, near the Spanish border. Like Sands, they are demanding to be classified as political prisoners.

Earlier this year, six Corsican nationalists staged a two-month hunger strike in an unsuccessful attempt to win bail before their trial in the State Security Court. They abandoned the strike when their condition became critical. Later they were given stiff sentences for involvement in a demonstration in which three people were killed.

In Ireland, three Irish Republican Army men at the Maze prison outside Belfast are on hunger strikes in an effort to win the political-prisoner status Sands had sought. Francis Hughes, 25, is in his 55th day without food and reported in serious condition. The other two are in their 48th day of fasting.

In Italy, about 100 prisoners at the San Domenico

Prison in L'Aquila, 90 miles east of Rome in Italy, began a hunger strike the day Sands died. Prison officials said they wanted their demands broadcast on television but have not said what the demands are.

In Spain, 75 alleged members of the Basque separatist organization ETA began a hunger strike in Madrid's Carabanchel prison on the day Sands died. Prison officials said they were protesting the Spanish government's request for the extradition of alleged Basque terrorists from France.

Hunger strikes are not a fashion among Turkey's violent political, religious and ethnic dissidents. On Monday, however, jailed leftist terrorists said they were fasting to protest prison conditions and alleged torture of political prisoners.

Again Lose In Tapes Battle

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Washington state couple is a step closer to obtaining 58 secret computer tapes used by the Internal Revenue Service to audit taxpayers.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals denied without comment on Thursday a government request that it reconsider its decision giving Phillip and Susan Long of Bellevue, Wash., possession of the sensitive tapes under the U.S. Freedom of Information Act.

The appeals court decision, in effect, reinstated an order by the court on Monday for immediate surrender of the tapes.

Government lawyers prepared to ask U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist today to stay the appellate court decision.

documents in such a way that IRS computers could not detect understated returns.

And, in Seattle, government lawyers asked U.S. District Judge Walter McGovern to quash his original order that U.S. marshals help the Longs obtain possession of the tapes from the IRS. McGovern took the request under advisement.

The Longs have been trying to obtain the tapes since 1975. Long said earlier this week that the information on the tapes will show that IRS tax collectors scrutinize tax returns in an arbitrary and unfair manner to taxpayers.

According to government lawyers, the tapes contain secret information the IRS uses to audit taxpayers most likely to understate amounts owed on tax returns. The government says the information could undermine the IRS' ability to collect taxes because taxpayers, armed with inside knowledge, could prepare their

Broke With Party Chiefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Representatives Ike F. Andrews and L.H. Fountain of North Carolina joined 63 Democrats on Thursday to break with Democratic leadership and vote for President Reagan's budget proposal in the House.

The $689 billion Reagan budget eventually won, 253-176.

The state's nine other congressmen — five Democrats and four Republicans — voted along party lines in supporting either the Reagan or Democratic alternative budgets.

"I am convinced beyond any reasonable doubt that the overwhelming majority of the people I represent strongly desire that I do so," Andrews said after the vote.

Fountain told House colleagues that he backed the Reagan plan only after "painful and extremely careful consideration."

"People are sick and tired of paying through the nose for more and more programs, for more and more government, and more and more regulations," Fountain said.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

Senator Assessing Conviction

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Sen. Harrison A. Williams
Jr. is back in Washington, reassessing his standing in Congress following his conviction in the Abscam bribery probe.
The 61-year-old, fourthterm New Jersey Democrat returned in unobtrusive fashion Thursday, operating for much of the day from an out-of-the-way, unmarked office which he maintains in the Capitol.

cooperate as we have over the months" with the ethics committee inquiry into whether he broke any Senate rules.

broken its rules on financial disclosure and conflict of interest. It voted to begin hearings.

The senator said he had not had time to focus on whether he would continue to vote and participate in Senate proceedings.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MAY 9, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you would be wise to draw up new plans that could give you more security in the future. Devise a course in which you and associates can gain benefits.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Conferring with close ties and planning the future wisely is important today. Attend a worthwhile group meeting.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to be more cooperative with associates in the future and get better results. Relax and express happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your environment and make plans for improvement. You can easily make a fine impression on others today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Use this day for improving conditions at home by adding more comfort. Put your talents to work.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Communicate with associates early in the day and plan how to improve production in the future. Think constructively.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A fine day to study how to improve your financial status and in a most ethical fashion. Make repairs to property.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your appearance well and know how to improve it to your own satisfaction.
Take time to engage in favorite hobby.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can obtain the data you need that was difficult to get during regular workweek. Strive for increased happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A fine day to cultivate new acquaintances. Take steps to make your surroundings more comfortable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Show more interest in civic affairs and gain added prestige. Take health treatments and improve your appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Delve into some new outlet that is appealing and could be profitable in the future. Express your talents.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study all the promises you have made and keep them to the best of your ability. Take no risks with money at this time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those clever young people who can understand the motives of others very well, so be sure to give a fine education that includes social science. One here who will have a great interest in religion.

of your life is largely up to you!

Police Hunting Store Poisoner

LONDON (AP) — The hunt is on for an extortionist who slipped deadly weedkiller into jars in three Safeway supermarkets and demanded
$1 million to stop doing it.

The unidentified poisoner sent a ransom note to the American-owned grocery chain Wednesday, triggering an exhaustive search of the company's 91 stores in Britain.

Three glass jars poisoned with Paraquat were found in Birmingham, in central England, and at Formby and Southport, in the northwest.
The jars contained small pickles, spaghetti sauce and tomato juice.

There is no known antidote to Paraquat, a common weedkiller that is easily obtained.

Safeway employees have worked night and day checking goods on sale, and a company spokesman said,
"We are confident that we have done everything to safeguard our customers."
But Detective Supt. Kenneth Tappenden warned: "There is every possibility that the writer of the ransom letter may strike again."

A similar attack was made last year on the Safeway company in California. Paul Balleaux, 62, was sentenced to 20 years in prison for lacing bottles of sauce and dill pickles with cyanide and demanding a quantity of loose diamonds in exchange for identifying the poisoned goods.

Medals Given Two Rescuers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two West Jefferson men got the Governor's Award for Bravery and Heroism on Thursday for plunging into a freezing creek last March to free a trapped motorist from her overturned car.

Gov. Jim Hunt presented the award to John Thomas Shumate and James Paul White.

The men walked into a creek and pulled open the doors of a wrecked car to rescue Mary Campbell of Sparta, highway trooper
Howard Hall said.

Aid Rebuilding Of Old Church

NEW YORK (AP) — In a show of brotherhood, Jews as well as Christians are contributing to the rebuilding of the Church of St. Luke in the Fields, a 160-year-old Greenwich Village landmark gutted by fire.

The congregation of Temple Emanu-El sent a $5,000 gift to express "brotherly concern." Several other Jewish groups also sent contributions.

SUNDAY SERVICES

Mother's Day services will be observed at Wynns Chapel, R.F.D. Robersonville, Sunday at 11 a.m. Rev. A.L. Day will deliver the sermon — Sunday School at 9:45. The public is invited.

Pay-TV Piracy Is Banned, Says Court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pay TV stations are legally protected from decoding devices used by non-paying members to unscramble the signals, an appeals court has ruled.

The U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeal said Thursday that the sale of such devices could put subscription television out of business.

The case was brought to court by National Subscription Television, which operates ON-TV. The company brought suit last year in Los Angeles federal court, asking that various individuals and firms be prevented from selling decoding devices that could be used to unscramble ON-TV signals.

The suit, however, was dismissed by U.S. District Judge Lawrence Lydick, who concluded that a certain section of the Federal Communications Act did not apply to ON-TV because it included a proviso that broadcasts transmitted "for the use of the general public" were unprotected.

Reversing that dismissal, the appellate court found that ON-TV's signals are protected from piracy by that same section of the act.

In an opinion by Circuit Judge Ozell M. Trask, the appeals panel said a recent 6th Circuit Court decision based on identical facts held that subscription television "is not broadcast for the use of the general public" as that language was meant to be understood.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today despite a sign of moderation in the inflation rate and a budget victory for President Reagan in the Democratic-controlled House.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped 90 point to 977.49 at noon.

The blue-chip average gained 5.95 points over the past two sessions after halting a six-day slide in which it topped 51.61 points from an eight-year high.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a margin of almost 2-1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Inflation at the wholesale level rose 0.8 percent in April, or an annual rate of 9.9 percent, down sharply from March, the Labor Department reported today.

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks rose 14 to 76.22. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.43 at 362.42.

Volume on the Big Board reached 20.86 million shares over the first two hours, up from 18.59 million in the comparable period Thursday.

Public Service Electric & Gas topped the active list, up 1/4 at 17 1/2 in trading that included a block of 450,000 shares changing hands at 17 1/2.

Rockets Win, Even Series

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics, having lost the battle against overconfidence, are a step closer to losing the war against the Houston Rockets.

The dominant feeling among observers was that the contest for the National Basketball Association title would be no contest. Rarely has there been such a disparity in the records of the final combatants.

The Celtics were 40-20 in the regular season. The Rockets were 40-42. Going into Thursday night's second game of the championship series, Houston had lost its last 14 games against the Celtics and was 3-31 in Boston.

Like many others, the Celtics apparently expected the series to be brief — until Thursday night.

Showing strong defense in the last half of the fourth quarter and capitalizing on sloppy Celtic play, the Rockets rallied from a seven-point deficit in the final 7:09 and won 92-90 to even the best-of-seven series at one game apiece.

"We just played a very poor basketball game. It's a demonstration of what guys do when they get a big head," said Boston forward Cedric Maxwell.

Before the loss, the Celtics maintained that they were not taking the Rockets lightly. Maxwell disagreed.

"We're playing with the idea that all we have to do is walk out on the court and Houston will drop dead," he said. "We're just playing overconfident and I think this is a good game for us to lose because it brought us down to earth. You beat a team 14 straight and it's hard to think they're much of a challenge."

The Rockets didn't win their eighth post-season road game, a playoff record, simply because Boston played poorly. The brilliance of Houston center Moses Malone, coming off a mediocre opening performance, had a lot to do with the victory.

"We got contributions from everyone. The bench was great and Moses came back to being the king of the mountain," said Houston reserve guard Calvin Murphy.

Murphy.

Malone had 13 points and 15 rebounds in the Celtics' 98-95 victory Tuesday night but came back with 31 points and 15 rebounds Thursday night. After Boston took an 82-75 lead with 7:09 to go, Malone scored seven points, blocked two shots and stole a pass.

"Moses passed the ball extremely well," said Maxwell. "He hit a couple of cutters and we weren't able to double on him as much as we wanted to."

"They weren't as aggressive coming to the boards as they were in the first game," Malone said of the Celtics. "I was determined they weren't going to push me around like they did in the first game."

"In game one we took what they gave us," said Rockets Coach Del Harris. "Tonight, we decided to challenge their defense more."

Larry Bird led Boston with 19 points and, for the second straight game, grabbed 21 rebounds. He also had five of Boston's 22 turnovers. The Celtics had 19 in the first game.

"They played good defense. We had a three-second call late in the game. We turned the ball over a few times. But they played well," Bird said.

"Until Thursday night, Boston had won all 29 games this season in which it had held its opponent below 100 points."

The Celtics had trailed at halftime in their previous six playoff games but won the last four. On Thursday night, they led at halftime.

That 49-45 edge dissolved into a 68-68 tie after three quarters. And, in the final 7:08 of the game, Houston outscored Boston 17-8. The Rockets took the lead for good, 89-88, on Bill Willoughby's jumper with 2:10 left.

"In the last game we played 46 great minutes and two bad minutes at the end and lost," Murphy said. "Tonight we played 46 so-so minutes and two great minutes at the end and won."

"It looked like they wanted it more than we did," said Boston forward Kevin McHale.

The usually reliable Bird was stymied twice in the final minute.

His shot from near the foul line missed with 38 seconds left.

"The Celtics set a great pick," said Robert Reid, who was guarding Bird. "Bird did a curl and I ran after him. It wasn't any tough defense. I'm just thankful he missed."

On Boston's final play, Bird did the same thing but was covered. He passed to a wide open Nate Archibald, who missed a shot from 20 feet with two seconds remaining.

"We just wanted to stop Bird because he's the guy they've gone to down the stretch in the playoffs," said Reid. "Allen (Leavell) came over to help out. We had to sacrifice and left someone open. Tiny (Archibald) had been making that open shot all night and he just missed."

Bird has led the Celtics in scoring 11 times and rebounding 12 times in the 13 playoff games.

"We have to get other people involved," said Maxwell, who had 10 points in the first game and six in the second. Center Robert Parish also had a subpar game with nine points in 14 minutes before fouling out.

Houston outscored Boston 22-8 from the foul line and hit 33 percent of its first-half field goal attempts before finishing at 40 percent. Boston's 62 percent halftime average fell to 50 percent for the game.

The next two games are in Houston Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

"We never believed all that stuff about how they were going to sweep us in four," said Murphy.

Watson Going After His Fourth Nelson Classic

DALLAS (AP) — When it comes to being the boss of the course, Tom Watson has no peers at the Preston Trail Golf Club and the Byron Nelson Classic.

Watson, the game's current kingpin, assumed his usual role today atop the leader board of the $300,000 tournament but he had to share it with an unknown.

He is seeking an unprecedented fourth straight Nelson championship and a place in the history books beside legendary Walter Hagen, who won four successive PGA championships. No other player has won a tournament four times in a row.

Dipping 3-under-par after four holes, Watson breezed home Thursday with a 4-under-par 66 and a share of the first round lead with young Tim Norris.

Tim Norris? Don't feel bad if you've never heard of Norris. Watson wasn't sure he had either.

"Honestly, I don't know him," Watson confessed after learning he was tied for the lead with the 24-year-old rookie, a product of Fresno State in California.

"Is he just a rookie?" wondered Watson, the reigning Masters champion who won his last time out at New Orleans.

"Where is he from?" he asked.

Told of the Fresno connection, Watson, whose $193,000 this year eclipses Norris' earnings by almost 200 to 1, smiled and said:

"Wait a minute, now. He's from California. Yes, I met him at San Diego. He's a big strong kid — looks like a middle linebacker. But he plays better than a middle linebacker."

For his own part, Norris seemed singularly unimpressed by a round that included six birdies and two bogeys over the 6,993-yard par 70 Preston Trail course.

"I know if you shoot the scores out here, everything else would take care of itself," he said. As for Watson, he added:

"I don't worry about Tom Watson. I have enough to worry about with myself."

The prince and the pauper took a two-shot lead over a quintet that included Ray Floyd, Mark McCumber, Lennie Clements, Beau Baugh and stormy Bruce Lietzke.

Knepper Gains Third Shutout For Houston

By The Associated Press
It's been the kind of a year for Bob Knepper that even when his fastball isn't working, it won't slow him down.

"I didn't have a good enough fastball so I had to concentrate on keeping the ball down," the Houston Astro left-hander said Thursday after posting his third shutout of the young season with a 6-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Knepper, who earlier pitched 1-0 shutouts against Los Angeles and Cincinnati, scattered six hits this time, allowing the Cubs to hit only two outfield flies.

"I'm not aware of doing anything different," said Knepper, who was acquired by the Astros in an off-season deal with San Francisco. "I'm relaxed. All I'm trying to do is throw strikes and let the defense do the work."

He does notice a difference in teams, though.

"The defense certainly helps a pitcher," said Knepper in assessing his new teammates. "And the overall attitude of the team is positive. It's contagious. You might fall behind, but the team never quits. They're always battling."

Knepper's pitching, incidentally, has been a big factor toward the Astros' recent surge. The defending National League West champions have won nine of their last 11 games after a dismal 3-12 start.

Knepper, 3-0, was in danger of losing his shutout in the sixth when pinch-hitter Steve Dillard singled and took third on a single by Ivan DeJesus with none out. But the left-hander struck out Scot Thompson and got Bill Buckner to hit into a double play.

Along with his fine pitching performance, Knepper triggered a two-run rally in the second with a single. He eventually scored on a sacrifice fly by Jose Cruz, who knocked in two runs for the Astros.

Knepper wound up striking out five and walking two.

Dodgers 2, Phillies 1

Steve Garvey's RBI single in the eighth lifted Los Angeles over Philadelphia and handed right-hander Marty Bystrom his first major league defeat after seven victories.

Bystrom was brought up last September and won five games in the Phillies' drive to the National League East championship and started Thursday night's game with a 2-0 record.

Jerry Reuss, last year's NL comeback player of the year, pitched a six-hitter for his third victory in four decisions. He struck out four and walked none.

Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda said that Reuss' successes over the past two seasons are a result of learning to get the ball down.

"He's so much more effective that way," Lasorda said. "His fastball is as tough to hit as any in the league. He's devastating."

Mets 3, Giants 2

Ed Lynch gave up six hits in 7-3 innings while Doug Flynn and Mike Jorgensen belted home runs to lead New York over San Francisco. Lynch left the game in favor of Neil Allen, who earned his fourth save after the Giants scored their second run in the eighth when Dave Bergman singled and came home on Milt May's single and an error by right fielder Joel Youngblood.

Doyle Alexander got by the first 21-3 innings, but Flynn belted a homer to tie the score at 1-1 in the third. With one out in the sixth, Bob Bailor singled. After Youngblood popped out, Jorgensen hit his third homer of the year.

Expos 2, Padres 1

Ellis Valentine delivered the tie-breaking run with a two-out double in the eighth, leading Montreal over San Diego behind Scott Sanderson's four-hitter.

Rodney Scott began the Expos' eighth with a walk off starter Chris Welsh with one out. Scott then stole second and advanced to third on a fly ball. He coasted home as Valentine drilled a pitch to left field.

Sanderson walked one and struck out four while improving his record to 4-1.

"When Ellis got that hit it was a big lift for all of us," said Sanderson. "Even though we needed three outs. We went out there with confidence in the ninth."

Braves 4, Cardinals 3

Reliever Bruce Sutter walked Brian Asseltine on a full count with the bases loaded in the eighth to give Atlanta its winning run over St. Louis.

Sutter issued the walk, forcing in Jerry Royster, after St. Louis starter Silvio Martinez yielded a one-out single to Bob Horner and walked Dale Murphy. After pinch-runner Royster and Murphy executed a double steal, Sutter intentionally walked Glenn Hubbard and struck out Bruce Benedict before walking pinch-hitter Asseltine.

Right-hander Rick Camp picked up his third victory in four decisions after allowing one unearned run in the final three innings.

Pirates 3-7, Reds 1-1

Tony Pena drove home the winurth straight game with relief help from Enrique Romo as Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati in the first game of their doubleheader.

Player Strike Deadline Nears

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a strike deadline just three weeks away, the Major League Players Association has charged the club owners with refusing to provide information necessary to conduct collective bargaining.

The players' union made its charge in papers filed Thursday with the National Labor Relations Board.

The sole issue in the current bargaining, the association noted, is over the clause which governs the movement of free agents through the re-entry draft.

The union contends in the charges that the club owners have demanded the association surrender rights it had previously won and agree to a proposal which would "substantially reduce the bargaining power and mobility" of free agents.

The association contended that the club owners have justified their free-agency proposal on the grounds they no longer can afford player salary increases, they have refused repeated requests, to open their financial ledgers to the union.

Specifically, the players association charged the club owners with violating the National Labor Relations Act by refusing requests for financial information it said it needed to assess the owners' claim of financial hardship. Also, it charged the owners with falsely denying — as a pretext to avoid the clubs' obligation to provide financial information — that their financial conditions have relevance to their newly-implemented free agent compensation plan.

Both Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' union, and Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the owners' Player Relations Committee, refused comment on the charges.

The players have voted to strike on May 29 if the new plan on free agent compensation, unilaterally implemented by the owners, remains in effect.

The plan requires that teams losing certain players in the free agent re-entry draft be compensated in the form of roster players from the teams which sign the free agents.

Jags Close With Wins

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central closed out the 1981 regular golf season yesterday, downing Eastern Wayne and Manteo. The match was played at the Farmville Golf and Country Club.

Farmville wound up with a 313 total, while Eastern Wayne finished with 339 and Manteo had 372.

Gary Hobgood led the Jaguar scoring with a 75, while Jeff Cutler added a 77 and Mel Williams had a 79. Robbie Joyner rounded out the team with an 81.

Damon Libby led Eastern Wayne with a 79, while Matt Reams had an 80, and Bryan Jones and Randy Justice each had 90.

Brian Sullivan led Manteo with an 81, followed by Mike Everett at 89, Tom Barrett at 94 and Anthony Wescott at 108.

The Jaguars are idle until Monday, May 18, when they travel to Jacksonville for the sectional tournament.

Bullpen Gives A's Help

By The Associated Press
Who are Bob Owchinko, Jeff Jones, Craig Minetto and Bo McLaughlin and what are these imposters doing on the mound for the Oakland A's?

What's that, you say they pitch for the A's? Don't be silly, everyone knows only Mike Norris, Rick Langford, Matt Keough, Steve McCatty and Brian Kingman pitch for the A's. Don't they always finish what they start?

Not always. Thursday was one of those rare occasions — only the ninth time in 28 games — when Oakland's starting pitcher wasn't around at the finish.

In fact, Keough departed with one out in the third inning, allowing three runs on eight hits. And Manager Billy Martin not only went to his bullpen, he trotted out everyone who resides there before the A's nailed down a 5-3 triumph over the Detroit Tigers.

"The bullpen was super, especially Bob Owchinko," said Martin, who has claimed all along the A's have an underrated relief crew.

"The biggest reason we've been unnoticed is that our starters are so good," said Jones, the winner as the A's upped their record to 22-6.

In other American League action, the Seattle Mariners made it two in a row under Manager Rene Lachemann by defeating the Milwaukee Brewers 4-1, the California Angels nipped the New York Yankees 2-1, the Toronto Blue Jays downed the Cleveland Indians 6-2 and the Texas Rangers whipped the Chicago White Sox 9-4. Baltimore, Boston, Kansas City and Minnesota were not scheduled.

While Oakland's relievers were stifling the Tigers on one hit over the final 6-3 innings — a two-out single in the ninth — the A's batters went to work to erase a 3-1 deficit. Cliff Johnson homered in the fifth inning, pinch hitter Mitchell Page connected in the sixth to tie the score and Tony Armas and Jeff Newman added solo shots in the seventh. Armas' was his ninth of the season, tops in the majors.

Owchinko pitched four scoreless innings and Jones went two more, giving way to Minetto after walking Alan Trammell with one out in the ninth. Minetto retired Steve Kemp on a line drive to right, then surrendered a single to Richie Hebner. McLaughlin took over and went to a full count on Lance Parrish before the Detroit catcher fouled out to end the game.

"From my point of view, this was a super victory," said Keough, who brought a league-leading 1.21 earned run average into the contest. "We've gained a lot of confidence in our bullpen and, offensively, we got home runs from two guys we need."

Page hadn't played in more than a week because of a severe slump while Newman's homer was his first of the year. "We're getting different guys helping and that's what makes a good ballclub," said Martin.

Mariners 4, Brewers 1

Rookie Dave Henderson belted a two-run homer in the second inning and Floyd Banister scattered eight hits as Seattle won for the second night in a row under Lachemann's direction. Henderson connected off Moose Haas following Bruce Bochte's single while Tom Paciorek drove in the other two runs with sacrifice flies.

Henderson was hitting just .156 going into the game but Lachemann told the rookie he would be the team's regular center fielder.

Angels 2, Yankees 1

Ken Forsch scattered eight hits, Don Baylor's sixth-inning single broke a 1-1 tie and Don Aase put down a bases-loaded threat in the eighth inning. Forsch won over Tommy John, who limited California to six hits. The Angels were held hitless until Rick Burleson led off the fourth inning with a single. Dan Ford followed with another single and Fred Lynn sacrificed before Burleson scored on a wild pitch.

The Yankees tied it in the top of the sixth on singles by Willie Randolph, Jerry Mumphrey and Reggie Jackson. Ford opened the bottom of the sixth with a double and was sacrificed to third by pinch hitter Bert Campaneris before Baylor dribbled a single into left field.

Blue Jays 6, Indians 2

Otto Velez ignited a four-run rally in the fourth inning with a homer, Rick Bosetti drove in two runs and Dave Stieb hurled a five-hitter to pace Toronto. Velez, who hit seven home runs against Cleveland last year, collected Toronto's first hit when he led off the fourth inning with a home run just inside the right-field foul pole off Rick Waits. Jorge Bell followed with a single and, after John Mayberry walked, Bosetti singled to score Bell. Danny Ainge singled Mayberry home and Ernie Whitt followed with a perfect suicide squeeze bunt that scored Bosetti. Mayberry homered in the eighth.

Rangers 9, White Sox 4

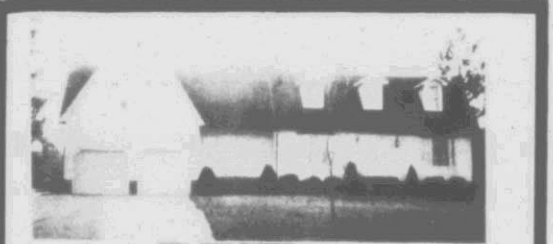

Errors by Chicago pitcher Ed Farmer and outfielder Harold Baines allowed the tying and lead runs to score on the same play, opening the door for a seven-run Texas outburst in the eighth inning. With Texas trailing 3-2, Leon Roberts singled to open the eighth and John Grubb sacrificed. Farmer fielded the bunt but threw wildly past first. Roberts scored as Baines chased the ball down in right field and Grubb also scored when Baines' throw sailed past catcher Carlton Fisk into the Chicago dugout.

Jim Sundberg singled, Mark Wagner doubled and Bump Wills greeted Lamarr Hoyt with a single that scored both runners. Wills stole second and one out later Al Oliver was walked intentionally. After Buddy Bell grounded out, Bill Stein singled Wills and Oliver home. Roberts, batting for the second time in the inning, was safe on a throwing error by third baseman Jim Morrison as Oliver scored.

Moose 9

Carroll & Associates held off a late Moose rally and gained a 12-9 victory yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League.

The win left Carroll at 1-1 while the Moose fall to 0-2.

The Moose scored first, getting a run in the first, but Carroll came back with two, on a Travis King homer, to take the lead. Carroll added three in the second, with King again homering for a 5-1 lead.

Six runs crossed in the third. Lee Rogers reached on a two-base error and Bill Carmichael walked. Jamie Marshall singled in Rogers, and Travis Williamson walked. Eric Jarman then hit a grand-slam homer. King followed with a double, scoring when James Lawler reached on an error.

Carroll added one in the fourth, while the Moose scored once in the fourth and picked up seven in the fifth.

Jarman and King led the Carroll hitting with three each, while Wesley Jackson had three and Neil Bullock had two for the Moose.

Lions 17
Coca-Cola 4

The Lions picked up their second North State Little League win of the year yesterday with a 17-4 romp over Coca-Cola. Coke is now 0-2.

The Lions got things started with a run in the first, but Coke came back to score twice in the bottom of the inning. The Lions tied it up in the third on a solo homer by Junior Taft. They added another run in the fourth for a 3-2 lead, but Coke scored twice in the bottom of the fourth to regain the lead, 4-3.

Then, in the fifth, the Lions exploded for four runs to take a 7-4 lead. Taft reached on a fielder's choice and Ralph Harper walked. Burt Aycock singled in Taft, and Mike Duncan singled to score Harper. Carlos Harris walked, and Bobby Williams walked, forcing in Aycock. Duncan then scored when Donald Perkins reached on a fielder's choice.

The Lions then added ten more runs in the sixth to lock it up.

Tommy Moye, Taft and Aycock each had three hits to lead the Lions, while Harper had two. Teacey Johnson had two hits to lead the Coke hitting.

Unexpected Payoff For Trip

NEW YORK (AP) — Three years ago, Mike Brito, a scout for the Los Angeles Dodgers, was sent to Mexico to check out a hot shortstop prospect. Instead, he came home with a pitcher — Fernando Valenzuela — who now is the hottest prospect in the major leagues.

On the day that Brito went to scout shortstop Lazaro Usgamga, Valenzuela was the opposing pitcher.

"By the fifth inning, I forgot about the shortstop," Brito recalled Thursday during a news conference at Shea Stadium where the remarkable Valenzuela was introduced to the New York media prior to his pitching appearance against the Mets tonight. "I went behind the plate and watched him (Valenzuela) pitch."

"I noticed that his ball sunk, that he could hit the corners with his pitches, that he had good rotation on the ball — and that he was so cool. Twice, he had the bases loaded and both times he struck out on the side. He finished with 12 strikeouts."

"The next day, I told (Al) Campanis (the Dodgers' vice president and director of player personnel) that we had found the Mexican pitcher we had been looking for."

By the following year, 1979, the Dodgers had purchased the portly left-hander for $120,000 from his Mexican team (in Yucatan,) outbidding the Mets, the New York Yankees and the Chicago Cubs for his services. It was one of the best deals they ever made.

In 10 games, all in relief, with the Dodgers last season and six games this year, all starts, Valenzuela has paid enormous dividends.

He has eight decisions, including six in 1981, all victories. He has allowed only two earned runs in 712-3 innings, an incredible 0.25 earned run average. He has struck out 66 batters, walked only 16, allowed just 41 hits and has pitched five complete games, with four shutouts this year.

In every city he has pitched this season — Los Angeles, Houston, San Francisco, San Diego and Montreal — attendance has been far above normal to watch the marvelous youngster with the baffling screwball.

And in the Dodgers' last three stops — Philadelphia, Montreal and New York — the club has scheduled special news conferences to prevent a slew of individual interviews with Valenzuela.

Despite the raft of attention being thrust upon Valenzuela, the 20-year-old has remained unflustered.

"I don't feel any pressure," he said through an interpreter. "I feel very comfortable. I like to see the way the people and the press are reacting to me."

While the fans and the media have been flocking around him, recording his every move, Valenzuela's parents and family — he is the youngest of 12 children, seven boys — have yet to see him play in the United States.

The Dodgers, however, are planning to bring his parents and part of the family to Los Angeles during the team's next home stand, May 12-21.

Meanwhile, Valenzuela is fast becoming a national hero in Mexico, and is extremely popular in such areas as Venezuela, the Dominican Republic, Colombia, Puerto Rico and all the baseball-loving countries in Latin America and the Caribbean.

Despite all the hullabaloo, the soft-spoken, introverted Valenzuela likes to be by himself.

"He likes to room (on the road) by himself," said Antonio DeMarco, his agent. "He watches TV a lot. It's a good way for him to learn English."

DeMarco said that Valenzuela is under only a one-year contract to the Dodgers, for close to $50,000 — not that much above the major league minimum of $32,000 but far below the salaries paid to other players of his calibre.

DeMarco said he would not ask the Dodgers to renegotiate the contract, but promised that "next year's contract would bring him every dollar he deserves."

And what ever became of that shortstop Brito went to scout?

"He's still playing in the Mexican League," said Brito. "I see him whenever I go down there."

Different Game On Clay Courts

NEW YORK (AP) — Take it from a loser: "It's an altogether different game on clay."

South African Johan Kriek made that point before he was eliminated in the $592,000 Tournament of Champions being played on the Har-Tru courts at Forest Hills. And now that the tourney at the famed West Side Tennis Club has reached the quarterfinals, the clay players are still around.

"I think playing on clay is a war of the minds," Kriek said. "The guy who lasts the longest is going to win the match."

Today's quarterfinals sent Carlos Kirmayr of Brazil against Hungary's Balazs Taroczy, Victor Pecci of Paraguay against Mel Purcell, Eddie Dibbs against Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina and Eliot Teltscher against Wojtek Fibak of Poland.

Who's favored now that top-seeded John McEnroe and third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis, the defending champion, are sitting on the sidelines?

"I think five or six guys have a chance now," said Taroczy, Hungary's only professional athlete. "I think I'm one of them."

"Everybody's tough," said Fibak.

"I'm real fired up to play Pecci," said Purcell, who advanced with a 6-1, 6-0 blowout of Fritz Buehning on Thursday. "We've never played, but he's a great player. Anyone who has the wins that he does on clay has to be."

In Thursday's other matches, Kirmayr outlasted Angel Gimenez of Spain 3-6, 7-6, 6-2; Clerc stopped Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland 6-1, 6-0; Dibbs eliminated Kriek 6-3, 6-0, and Teltscher got by Mario

Whitworth Is Nearing Record

ROSSELL, Ga. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, who dominated women's golf for four consecutive years beginning in 1970, is on a comeback course in 1981 that should make her the game's first $1-million winner.

The 41-year-old veteran also is only two victories shy of the all-time record of 82 Ladies Professional Golf Association victories held by Mickey Wright.

Whitworth, who hasn't won a tournament since 1978, will try to draw one step nearer Wright's mark in the $125,000 Lady Michelob which began today. The 54-hole event is being played at the demanding 6,270-yard, par 73 Brookfield West Golf and Country Club course.

Whitworth, who has career earnings of $955,825, is No. 9 on this year's money list with $48,972, which is more than she earned in 1979 and 1980. She has competed in 11 events this year, tying for second twice. She had four other top 10 finishes.

Whitworth narrowly missed her 81st career title last week when she tied Sally Little and Hollis Stacy for first place in the CPC Women's International at Hilton Head before Little won on the first hole of a sudden death playoff.

Whitworth shrugs off the possibility of hitting the $1 million mark.

"Oh, it is not all that special," she said. "The only reason it is special is that I would be disappointed if I didn't get it because I am so close."

Whitworth ranks among the favorites on the hilly Brookfield West terrain, where Pam Higgins is attempting to defend the title she claimed by three shots last year, leading from start to the finish.

The field of 86 includes eight of the top nine money winners this year, with Nancy Lopez-Melton missing. Lopez-Melton, who has never played the event, ranks No. 1 in earnings with $93,666 this season.

Other top money winners who will compete include Donna Caponi, Little, Pat Bradley, JoAnne Carner, Jane Blalock, Beth Daniel, Amy Alcott and Whitworth.

Little is the only three-time winner of the season and Caponi has two titles going into the 15th tournament of the year.

Three others also are chasing the $1 million mark — Caponi, Blalock and Carner — but each trails Whitworth by more than $50,000.

HELLMAN REVIVAL — Playwright Lillian Hellman, left, joins actress Elizabeth Taylor for curtain call at New York's Martin Beck

Theatre following opening of a revival of Hellman's "The Little Foxes". (AP Laserphoto)

No Broadway Triumph For Liz

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic
NEW YORK (AP) — She triumphed over a bad cold that caused cancellation of a Wednesday matinee preview. But sadly, Elizabeth Taylor isn't triumphant in her much-ballyhooed Broadway debut as the star of "The Little Foxes."

She opened Thursday night in this revival of Lillian Hellman's 1939 tale of the hateful, rapacious Hubbard family, playing Regina Giddens, the most ruthless of them all.

Hers was a Hollywood-style premiere with all the trimmings — celebrities galore inside and two spotlights, a crowd of about 200 and some 16 crowd-control cops outside the packed Martin Beck Theatre.

12:30 Power Game

Solid tribute to her drawing power as a star, a legend. All the more sad, then, that here she seems more a vaguely comic figure of wickedness than a truly evil, power-hungry, money-mad Southern belle.

The real star here is Maureen Stapleton, who as her sweet, ill-treated sister-in-law, Birdie, offers a brilliant, wholly believable display of sweetness, innocence and pathos that just about steals the show.

Of course, it doesn't help Miss Taylor that "Foxes," set in 1900 in the Deep South and once considered a stinging attack on capitalism, doesn't wear its years well, at least in this production.

Sure, Regina and her rotten, hard-drinking brother, Benjamin (Anthony Zerbe) still do mighty battle over a family fortune that would markedly improve should a business deal with a Northern industrialist go through in their hometown.

And their weak but equally predatory brother, Oscar (Joe Ponzacek) again sides with his brother in the tribal war, as does his spineless, wayward and crooked banker son, Leo (Dennis Christopher).

Again, she's willing to marry off her pure, honest 17-year-old daughter, Alexandra (Ann Talman) to Leo — much to the daughter's disgust — to keep the family fortune within this terrible clan.

And again she coolly drives her invalid husband (Tom Talmadge) to his death by calmly refusing him medicine he needs to save his life — after he discovers fiscal perfidy on the part of her brothers.

Oh yes, she still blackmails the brothers to again emerge triumphant, guil-ridden and deserted by her daughter. It's tribal corruption and family feuding in the grand Southern style, to be sure.

But this proceeding, directed by Austin Pendleton, who has done much better, isn't powerful drama. It seems more the kind of melodrama where you boo the villainess and cheer the heroes (in this case Regina's feisty, dying husband and her daughter).

This isn't to say there's not solid acting afoot. There's the stunning supporting performance of Miss Stapleton and Talmadge's crisp excellence as the strong-willed husband Regina hates and fears.

Zerbe is superbly Southern and sinister throughout, with Novella Nelson and Joe Seneca first-rate in small, key supporting roles as the beloved — by Regina's father and daughter — family retainers.

Alas, the other supporting players don't convince, particularly Miss Talman, whose Southern accent seems to start at the Mason-Dixon line, head North and occasionally return to visit.

And as the main event,

Miss Taylor just isn't memorable. Her Southern accent almost seems a put-on. And instead of coming across as a powerfully evil presence, she seems to work at reduced power, with an unconvincing cornpone purr that sporadically erupts, predictably, in roars of Southern-belle rage.

Indeed, at one point, as she angrily pursues her poor husband up the stairs of Andrew Jackness' richly-detailed living room set, there's a ripple of audience laughter, as if she's playing it for laughs.

Too bad. Miss Taylor, still a great beauty, albeit a slightly plump one, has done superb film acting, as her two Oscar awards attest. But this Regina, first done by an authentic Southerner, the late Tallulah Bankhead, just doesn't seem her kind of stage role.

She shows guts in tackling it and her name alone has built a heavy box-office advance. But after all the buildup, Elizabeth Taylor' Broadway debut in "The Little Foxes" is a letdown.

Creation, Then Tedium Sets In

DALLAS (AP) — First there is inspiration, then there is the "justful" time of creation — and then there is tedium, says filmmaker Ingmar Bergman.

The 62-year-old Swedish director of such movies as "Cries and Whispers" made his first public appearance in the United States on Thursday to describe his art to students at Southern Methodist University.

Bergman admitted he is "very, very lazy," but said he sometimes gets visions while seated in his easy chair. After such a vision comes the creative process, when the artist feels "that this is going to be the best scene ever made and you want to protect it from others."

Then comes the writing: "Writing is boring, very boring, and it takes so much patience."

Bergman is spending four days at SMU, which Saturday will present him with a $25,000 award for artistic excellence.

Three Beattles' Record Release

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — The recorded reunion of Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr is now hitting the nation's airwaves. The surviving Beatles didn't get together to record the Harrison song — they recorded their contributions separately — but the release of "All Those Years Ago" marks the first time three Beatles have performed on the same song since the legendary group broke up a decade ago.

The Harrison composition is a tribute to John Lennon, who was shot to death outside his New York City apartment Dec. 8.

Warner Bros. Records spokesman Bob Merlis said Thursday the song was released to radio stations Wednesday and Thursday and will be available in some record stores this weekend.

Richardson plays the last sorcerer on earth at an early time when flying, fire-breathing creatures known as dragons still lived.

Dan Rather Admits He Has Ups And Downs

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Rather has been the subject of intense scrutiny since he took over from Walter Cronkite two months ago as CBS' "Evening News" anchorman, but all of the pressure, he says, has been from the outside — the media and the competing networks.

"If it has worked so far, and I believe it has," Rather said in an interview as he began his ninth week on the job, "it's because we've got an awful lot of good work out of an awful lot of good people."

"I knew there would be ups and downs," he said, "but I might have underestimated the depth of commitment here. These people are determined to make it work."

Rather said that very little of the commentary on his performance as Cronkite's successor has been negative, but added:

"I do worry some because so much attention is given to the superficial aspects of broadcasting — who's up and who's down. All that counts, but is far less important maintaining a standard of good, solid journalism."

The "Evening News" attracted 26 percent of the audience in Rather's first week, March 9-13, compared with 23 percent for NBC and 22 for ABC. By the eighth week — through May 1 — the "Evening News" share was 24 percent, to ABC's 23 and NBC's 22.

The perceptible erosion has been heralded by the opposition as a sign that CBS' frontrunning status in the evening news field is in jeopardy.

But Paul Isacsson, a vice president for sales for CBS, said the shift in audience may be more a factor of transition than of any dissatisfaction with the anchorman.

"It appears Rather is changing viewing habits," Isacsson said, "and what I think you're seeing is viewers looking around, and most of them coming back to CBS." In fact, he said, CBS' share of one segment of the audience, women 18-34, has increased by 17 percent in the last year, while ABC's proportion has declined by 7 percent.

Further, Isacsson said, commercial time for the "Evening News" "sold faster than ever" for Rather's first full quarter as anchorman, reportedly at a rate of $50,000 for a 30-second spot. "That's a great source of encouragement," he said.

The competing networks have, in the meantime, waged extraordinary promotional campaigns touting their own evening newscasts — ABC's "World News Tonight" and "Nightly News" on NBC.

"We were under no illusion that it would be easy," Rather said. "We knew we'd be in for a tough fight."

"It's really very early to talk about losing viewers to the other networks," he added. "A lot has happened in the last two months that could affect the ratings in the short run. I think it's going to be a year or a year and a half before we can really say anything definite."

In attempting to establish himself as Cronkite's successor, Rather may have been helped by two unforeseen events, the attempted assassination of President Reagan on March 30, and the space shuttle flight in mid-April.

Rather said he expected Cronkite, still a correspondent for CBS News, to handle the shuttle, as he had done with all previous space flights. When Reagan was shot outside the Hilton Hotel in Washington, Rather was on the air within minutes, and national ratings showed CBS with 33 percent of the audience between 2:53 p.m. EDT and 9 p.m., to 30 percent of ABC.

"Sure, I've felt the pressure," Rather said of his two months in the highly visible position. "I wish I hadn't. There's no sympathy called for, though. What I do believe is that in the long pull, what counts is coverage, and I'll put ours up against theirs any time."

Panel Rejects Food Stamps Cut For Free Lunches

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee appears certain to meet President Reagan's 1982 spending target for food stamps despite its rejection of an administration proposal to reduce benefits for families whose children receive free school lunches.

"I don't believe we have to rubber stamp any administration ... if there are legitimate budget savings elsewhere," said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Reagan wanted to reduce food stamps to families in the school lunch program to save at least $500 million a year. Although vigorously backed by the committee chairman, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the proposal was defeated by a 14-3 vote.

But the committee went along Thursday with other changes Reagan proposed for the food stamp program, including a "workfare" plan that states can adopt at their own option.

If "workfare" is used by all states, as many as 2 million of the 23 million recipients of food stamps could be required to work for them, the administration says. The panel already had endorsed Reagan's proposed tighter eligibility requirements, which will eliminate 1 million higher-income people from the program and cut benefits for millions more with incomes above the poverty line.

With cost-saving measures of its own, the committee seems certain to adopt a food stamp bill which next year will save at least $1.6 billion, a figure the Congressional Budget Office says is needed to meet likely spending targets.

Among the cost-trimming actions taken Thursday were postponement of various benefit adjustments due to inflation and pro rating the value of food stamps for the first month they are issued. The committee also made substantial cuts in benefits for Puerto Rico, where 58 percent of the population receives food stamps.

"This is a tough issue, food stamps," Dole said. He said the committee's action "is a recognition that you can't cut the heart out of the program. There are other federal programs."

After successfully leading the attack against the school lunch proposal, Dole turned won an even closer 10-7 vote against reinstating a requirement that food stamp recipients pay some part of their income for benefits. It was repealed four years ago, and the administration declined to take sides Thursday.

Helms, who pushed the "workfare" proposal, said he hopes it will be mandatory in the future.

"Out there with all welfare programs, there's a sophistication for beating the game," Helms said. "It's a question of whether we're going to tighten this program up."

Under "workfare," people age 18 to 60 would be required to work without pay in public service jobs to earn their food stamps. They would have to work how many hours it took at the minimum wage to earn the value of the stamps but no one would work more than 40 hours a week in any combination of jobs.

Incapacitated people and those caring for children under 6 years old would be exempt from the program. States also would have the authority to expand exemptions.

Based on results from seven pilot "workfare" projects around the country, John Bode of the Agriculture Department said, "We're finding workfare to be marginally cost effective."

"It is not viewed by the administration as a budget savings item," Bode said. "But it is viewed as an improvement to the program image."

He said results from some studies show that those required to work "are more apt to find better employment and more apt to go off the program for other reasons."

The proposed benefit reduction for free school lunches would have cut food stamp allotments by about $89 a year per child, with some 45 percent of the more than 7 million food stamp households affected, Bode said.

"This injects almost a spirit of meanness into nutritional programs most valuable to the young," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said in arguing against the plan. "The two categories that need help nutritionally are the elderly and the young. This certainly slashes at the young."

The administration, backed up by the General Accounting Office, argued that not making the adjustment amounted to subsidizing four meals a day for some recipients and only three for others.

"With food stamp benefits averaging only 44 cents per person per meal, I don't see how it is possible to argue that there is any real overlap between the food stamp and school lunch programs," Dole said.

Many Trained For Wrong Job

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's unemployment rate is higher than it might be because many workers have been trained for the wrong jobs, the chairman of the Employment Security Commission said Thursday.

"Lack of appropriate training of our work force has created a mismatch between worker skills and job opportunities," said J.B. Archer. "Because of this, our labor force has been underutilized since employers are unable to find sufficiently trained workers to meet their immediate critical needs."

But the ESC study also found that many high-technology industries moving to North Carolina have been able to find enough highly-trained workers.

The ESC says the 10 most difficult-to-fill jobs are registered nurse; electronics technician; maintenance mechanic; machinist; mechanical or electrical assembler; electrician; sewing machine operator; license practical nurse; refrigerator, heating and air conditioner mechanic; and carpenter.

Also Thursday, Archer announced that the federal government has granted $19.6 million to the state to provide summer jobs for young people.

But Archer said the youth unemployment this summer is likely to reach 11 percent even with the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds.

"The funding will certainly help, but it will not begin to provide enough job opportunities for nearly 700,000 16- to 24-year-olds who will compose 24 percent of the total estimated labor force in North Carolina in 1981," he said.

The funds will go to 13 sponsors to support jobs for economically disadvantaged youth between the ages of 14 and 21, Archer said.

He said the CETA grants are $12.8 million to the state, $365,569 to Alamance County; $557,128 to Buncombe County, $977,046 to

Workshop Is Attended

A placement workshop for area trade and industrial high school seniors was held on May 4-6 at the Willis Building in Greenville.

The workshop, jointly sponsored by the Pitt County Education Work Council, Pitt County Schools Placement Office, and Rose High School Placement Office, was designed to provide the students with information on local employers, job hunting, applying for a job, and interviewing.

Representatives of 18 local employers worked with small groups of students, providing both information and answering questions.

Approximately 120 students, representing Ayden-Gritton, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central, North Pitt, Rose and Angas Fullilove attended the event.

Radcliffe Named Officer

Robert Ratcliffe, M. D., of Greenville has been installed as secretary of the North Carolina Neuropsychiatric Association.

The installation was held during the group's meeting in Pinehurst yesterday.

Dr. Ratcliffe is clinical director of the Pitt County Mental Health Center here and is clinical assistant professor in psychiatry at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Hazardous Waste Disposal Speeds Through Senate

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A hazardous-waste disposal bill sailed through a state Senate panel Thursday and headed to a second committee for approval before a possible vote by the full Senate.

Gov. Jim Hunt recommended the bill, which, with his permission, would allow the state to ignore local ordinances and zoning in locating a disposal or treatment site if need for the site could be shown and the facility had the proper permits.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, also would allow the state to condemn private land for building disposal facilities.

The Senate Human Resources Committee approved a slightly rewritten version of the bill. Walker said most of the changes were technical and served only to clarify the bill.

Because of licensing fee schedules included in the bill, it must go through the Finance Committee before the full Senate can vote on it.

Under the bill, facilities would pay licensing fees to cover costs for monitoring the disposal site and possible damages to people or property when the facility operator's liability ends. The operator is liable for any damage during a 30-year period after the facility closes.

The measure also would set up a 15-member board to regulate hazardous and low-level radioactive wastes in North Carolina, the 11th largest generator of hazardous wastes in the nation.

A subcommittee spent three weeks examining the bill.

which was based on a proposal by Hunt's Task Force on Waste Management.

In other legislative action:

Pornography

A bill praised by supporters as a better way to prosecute adult bookstore owners and criticized by opponents as a threat to legitimate businessmen was approved by a Senate committee.

The bill would do away with adversary hearings — court hearings in which a judge determines if certain books, materials or films are pornographic.

Under current laws, no one can be prosecuted unless they continue to sell material found to be obscene during such a hearing.

Sen. John Cavanagh, R-Forsyth, who introduced the bill, said the hearings have brought arrests for dealing in pornography to a standstill. But opponents of the bill charge the definition of pornography is vague and without the hearings, innocent businessmen may be arrested.

Open Meetings

The House Judiciary III Committee approved a bill extending a provision of the state's open meetings law. The bill, backed by the N.C. Press Association, would require public boards and commissions to provide the public with a seven-day notice of all candidates being considered for appointments to fill vacancies.

Hugh Stevens, lobbyist for the press association, said the bill would extend the notice requirement to cover appointments by commissions to fill vacancies in their own membership. The open meetings law currently requires that notice for appointments of other positions named by the board, but not on the board itself.

Minimum Wage

The Senate Manufacturing and Labor Committee approved a bill raising the state minimum wage. But the committee approved a different version from that already approved by the House.

The Senate version would raise the wage, now $2.90 an hour, to $3.10 this July 1 and to $3.35 next July 1. That is a schedule six months ahead of the House version.

The state minimum wage covers most businesses with four or more employees and with annual gross receipts of less than $325,000.

The Senate bill would also reduce from four to three the number of employees a business must have to be covered by the state minimum wage.

Succession

The Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee made a major change in a proposal to repeal the 1977 constitutional amendment allowing the governor to serve a second consecutive four-year term.

With the change, the bill would amend the state constitution to have the governor serve a single 6-year term.

The sponsor, Sen. William Redman, R-Iredell, sought the change in his own proposal. The committee then sent the proposed amendment to a subcommittee.

Pay Cuts

A freshman Republican sponsored a bill in the state House Thursday that would reduce legislators' salaries by 6 percent and call on other top state officials to accept a voluntary pay cut of the same size.

"By taking a pay cut we're doing no more than what's required of a leader in the time of an economic situation where the people of North Carolina are suffering," said the primary sponsor, Rep. Charles Hughes, R-Henderson.

His bill would cut the salary of House and Senate members from $6,936 to $6,520.

It would also cut by 6 percent the salaries of Gov. Jim Hunt's Cabinet secretaries and call on the governor, the lieutenant governor and other members of the council of state to voluntarily take a pay cut. Under the state constitution, the General Assembly cannot cut the salaries of council of state officers during their terms in office.

For the governor, the cut would reduce his salary from $55,104 to $51,798.

Exemptions

The Senate Finance Committee sent to subcommittee a bill that would provide a tax credit for installing insulation or storm windows or doors and a bill providing a personal income tax credit for a spouse who is a full-time student.

New Bills

A state senator filed a resolution urging Attorney General Rufus Edmisten to file a class-action suit on behalf of North Carolinians to recover any overcharges to paving contractors who rigged bids. Sen. Cary Allred, R-Alamance, filed the resolution.

In a related bill filed Thursday, Rep. Robert Brawley, R-Iredell, is urging state supervisors be held liable for the loss to the state caused by employees' conduct if the supervisor does not report illegal or unethical acts. Brawley referred to the bid-rigging problem in a prepared statement on the bill.

A bill was filed in the House to tie state employees' disability benefits to the Consumer Price Index. And a bill was filed in the Senate to provide for registration of uninsured automobiles.

Higher Interest Rates Moving Nearer Enactment In Assembly

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dramatic increases in the interest rates that lenders can charge consumers for loans in North Carolina are nearing enactment in the General Assembly.

Supporters of banking industry bills overcame opponents Thursday after three days of debate, beating back last-minute amendments and winning final House approval on one of the two bills by a 97-11 vote.

The first bill, which would allow higher rates on installment loans, such as are commonly made for new car purchases, was sent back to the Senate for concurrence in other amendments.

A companion bill setting higher rates on contract loans, such as 90-day notes, won tentative approval by a similarly large margin.

"These bills should be titled, 'food stamp bills for the banking industry,'" argued one opponent, Rep. George Miller, D-Durham.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, a leader of consumer forces who succeeded in stalling the first bill for three days, held up final action on the second bill until next week.

"Well, I've got until Tuesday to think of something else," Adams joked to reporters after his defeat.

The bills are the key pieces in a series of proposals working their way through the Legislature that would raise or remove remaining North Carolina usury laws.

Supporters, led by Rep. Roger Bone, D-Nash, argued that without higher rates banks would be unable even to make loans available.

The bills would lift fixed limits of 12 to 15 percent, depending on the size of the loans, and set new limits that could rise in the future if national money rates go even higher.

On installment and contract loans, the bills apply on loans under $25,000. Larger amounts have no limit.

The bills use a formula setting the limit at 6 percent above the auction rate on 26-week U.S. Treasury bills. Those bills sold for 15.1 percent this week, yielding a 21 percent legal limit under the formula.

The bills contain another feature setting a minimum limit of 16 percent, meaning that lenders will be able to charge at least that much interest on loans no matter how low market rates might fall.

After failing earlier in the week in efforts to take out the 16 percent floor, opponents sought Thursday to add an amendment lowering it to 12 percent. The floor, they argued, would mean banks would never let their loan rates drop below that amount.

Another provision of the bill sets a higher floor limit of 18 percent for second-mortgage companies, which are usually subsidiaries of small loan companies.

Adams, contending that those finance companies have charged exorbitant rates from unsophisticated borrowers, offered an amendment that would have put the second-mortgage companies on the same footing as second mortgage loans made by banks and savings and loan associations. Adams' amendment failed 67-38.

Interview Of Girls Barred

BURGAU, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge denied a motion Thursday by Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood's attorneys to require prosecutors to arrange interviews with two young girls who may testify against Garwood in his upcoming trial on charges of sexually molesting a 7-year-old girl.

Garwood, a 35-year-old Indiana man who is the first soldier of the Vietnam War to be convicted on collaboration charges, appeared in court for the first time Thursday in connection with the molestation trial.

Judge Robert Rouse, who denied the motion, will preside over Garwood's trial when it begins Monday in Onslow County. Rouse held court this week in Pender County.

Garwood was indicted by a grand jury in February on four counts in connection with the alleged sexual molestation. The grand jury charged him with two counts of sexually molesting the 7-year-old girl. He was arrested on two other counts in August 1980, before the grand jury convened.

Garwood has pleaded innocent to all charges.

Garwood, who spent 14 years as a prisoner of the Vietcong, could be sentenced to life in prison on the sex charges.

SHOOTING AFTERMATH — Four people were killed and at least 20 wounded last night after a man allegedly fired an automatic pistol into a crowded rock 'n' roll tavern in Salem Oregon. Police said the gunman, tackled by four patrons, did not resist as one man hit him on the head with a pool cue while another grabbed for his 9 mm weapon. Lawrence W. Moore, 25, of Lyons, Ore. was booked on charges of first degree murder. Several of the wounded patrons were said to be in critical condition. Moore is scheduled for arraignment today. Photo copyright by Ted Burney, Statesman-Journal. (AP Laserphoto)

Missing Boy Found, Held

ATLANTA (AP) — A black youth who had been the subject of an intense police search since he was reported missing Wednesday has been located and turned over to juvenile authorities.

Eric Thompson, 14, whom police said fit the profile of many of the 26 young blacks found slain here since July 1979, was found Thursday night and placed in the custody of suburban Cobb County authorities, Atlanta Police spokesman Roger Harris said.

But Harris said neither Cobb officials nor members of the special police task force investigating the 26 slayings would discuss where Thompson was found or why he was placed in a juvenile detention center.

A spokesman at the Youth Development Center in Marietta, about 10 miles northwest of Atlanta, confirmed that Thompson was in the center Thursday night, but refused to say why he was there or where he had been found.

Thompson was reported missing Wednesday by Brandon Southern Jr., director of the Challenge School, a special state-run facility attended by at least two of the 26 slain blacks.

Southern said he became alarmed when Thompson failed to show up for classes

Wednesday. Although the boy had run away before and had missed classes in the past, Southern said he always had called to notify him he would be absent.

Before he was located Thursday, Thompson last was seen Tuesday afternoon boarding a bus in downtown Atlanta.

Meanwhile, authorities in DeKalb County confirmed that they have subpoenaed a list of Boys Club employees in the Atlanta area. DeKalb authorities are investigating the slayings of four of the 26 youths whose bodies were found in that suburban county.

DeKalb Public Safety Director Dick Hand said police are conducting a "general background check" to determine who may have known or come into contact with the victims.

Bob Jackson, associate executive director of Metro Atlanta Boys Clubs, said the 13 Boys Clubs in the Atlanta area employ a total of 125 staff members.

"I can see why they asked for it (the staff list)," Jackson said. "Most of the victims must have visited a Boys Club at some time."

In another development, an Atlanta man, Larry Marshall, 34, was sentenced to three years in prison on misdemeanor charges after officials dropped an attempted robbery charge following his decision to cooperate with the task force investigating the slayings. Marshall, who was extradited from Hartford, Conn., in April to face the attempted robbery charge, had been mentioned frequently in connection with the slayings after police acknowledged that they wanted to question him about his relationship with one of the victims.

But after the session last week with the task force, Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton said Marshall provided no new information. He said the attempted robbery charge would be dropped because of Marshall's cooperation and because his alleged victim had told police conflicting stories. Marshall was sentenced Thursday for convictions on two charges of theft by taking and one count of defacing the mail.

Assistant Chief Charged In Case

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — A Lenoir County grand jury indicted the assistant police chief of LaGrange on second-degree murder charges Thursday in the April 26 shooting death of a 72-year-old black man.

Chris Milton Basden Jr., a white man, was charged in the death of Link Carl Graham.

In police reports, Basden said he shot Graham as the elderly man threatened him with a four-foot board. Basden said Graham was standing naked in a field near his mobile home and resisted arrest.

About 1,000 Kinston residents held a rally Sunday to demand Basden's dismissal.

Elections In Nepal

Nestled among the highest mountains on Earth is the kingdom the world forgot. Nepal — nuh-PAWL — which is holding its first general elections in 22 years today, borders on India to the south and Chinese-ruled Tibet. It is larger than Arkansas, with nearly as many people as Israel, Lebanon and Saudi Arabia combined. The mountains that give Nepal its story-book scenery have also long isolated it from most great-power struggles. But, though it looks like Shangri-la, it isn't as heavenly. It is a backward agricultural land, and the average Nepalese earns 1/80th as much as the average American, and only about one Nepalese in 11 can read and write.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the world's tallest mountain, that stands on the northeastern border of Nepal?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Truman's aid plan for Western Europe was the Marshall Plan.

Abortion Bill May Face Senate Today

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of the abortion notification bill maneuvered Thursday to reverse a state Senate vote that weakened the bill, and the bill is expected to go before the Senate today.

The original bill would require doctors to notify parents when their daughter under the age of 18 wants an abortion. The doctor also would have to provide the names of two state-approved adoption agencies.

The Senate voted 24-23 on Wednesday to let the doctor decide whether to notify the parents.

But on Thursday, Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, tried parliamentary maneuvering to overturn that amendment and restore the bill to its original form.

Harris asked Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green to rule the amendment out of order because the same amendment had been defeated on a previous day.

But a major opponent of the bill, Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Orange, then began maneuvers of his own aimed at drawing a vote which he believed would lead to a defeat of the entire bill.

A final decision on the status of the bill was left up to Green, who is the presiding officer of the Senate. Green made no ruling, leaving the bill temporarily in limbo.

The bill had been scheduled for a final vote next week. But the Senate, acting on a motion by Vickery, voted 25-19 to reconsider their earlier decision postponing final action, and the bill was expected to come up again today.

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, Senate Rules Committee chairman, said the supporters of the bill were maneuvering out of desperation.

Church Council Avoids Strike

Michigan's Motor City Is Running Out Of Magic

By JOHN GUSTAVSEN
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — It had shaken its reputation as "Murder City, U.S.A.," overcome the ugly memory of 1967 rioting that killed 43 people, and was learning to live with the loss of nearly a third of its population.

Despite troubles in the auto industry, the Motor City was clawing its way back to respectability. It even had a gleaming steel and glass symbol of its rebirth, the $337 million Renaissance Center on the Detroit River.

Republicans met last July to nominate Ronald Reagan, bringing 20,000 delegates and 8,000 journalists to town to sample the new Detroit. And despite pre-convention skepticism, delegates left praising the struggling urban giant.

Yet nearly a year later, Detroit finds itself staring bankruptcy in the eye for the second time in nearly 50 years. City workers have been asked to accept pay cuts — and even then more layoffs may be necessary.

At the RenCen, the privately financed brainchild of former Ford Motor Co. chairman Henry Ford II, some stores are closing because they can't compete with flourishing suburban malls; 65 percent of the available retail outlets have never been filled.

Detroit's dream of rebirth for the nation's sixth-largest city has turned into a nightmare of urban and economic reality.

—An auto industry plumb- ing the depths of depression.

U.S. automakers lost $600 million in the first quarter of 1981, the most ever.

—13 percent unemployment, nearly double the national rate. For every auto assembly job lost, state labor analysts say, five auto industry supply workers are idled.

—60 percent of the city's 1.2 million residents dependent on some form of government assistance, from social security and unemployment benefits to welfare.

—Per capita retail spending totaling $2,523 in 1979, the most recent year for figures. Nationally, the average is $4,005.

—City revenues up just 18 percent in the past three years, while expenses — keeping pace with inflation — grew 40.6 percent. The gap between income and expenses is five times the national average.

Detroit Mayor Coleman A. Young has put the city's workers and residents on notice: If proposed tax increases and municipal pay cuts aren't in place by June 30, the city will go broke as it did in 1933.

Young proposes to double the city income tax, already one of Michigan's highest, to 4 percent. That would bring in $94 million. And he wants to cut employees' pay 5 percent to 7 percent, saving another $76 million.

He is also asking the Legislature to permit the sale of a deficit bond to cover $132.5 million in accumulated debt. Local banks and municipal employee pensior funds will be asked to buy the bonds; Detroit's bond rating is below investor grade.

"There are no hats with rabbits in them, and no magician is waiting in the wings," Young said in unveiling a $1.6 billion budget. "We are fresh out of magic and miracles."

For emphasis, he adds: "If we go bankrupt, it could force the state into bankruptcy."

Could Detroit have avoided this crisis? Probably not, say municipal finance experts. But it might have taken steps to soften the blows of inflation, unemployment and the auto industry depression.

For example, David Littmann, senior economist at Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit, says city administrators had evidence as early as 1968 that the city faced trouble because spending was outstripping an eroding tax base.

The city's population stood at 1.67 million in 1960 and had fallen to 1.43 million by the time of the 1970 census. The exodus began with slum-clearing projects, but picked up as taxes and crime increased.

Meanwhile, the residential tax base had been declining since the 1950s. State Rep. William Ryan blames real estate speculators who exploited federal mortgage subsidies to sell homes to people who couldn't afford to keep them up.

"Maintenance slacked, and when they left the homes were vandalized and fit only for the bulldozer," he said.

Property tax revenues — the city's single largest source of income — have fallen since 1970.

In the four years since the RenCen opened, 90 projects have added $760 million to the value of downtown Detroit. Some $367 million in building is under way. And $790 million in construction is "committed."

But critics say this progress has been at the expense of neighborhoods.

Finally, despite the 1973 Arab oil embargo, U.S. automakers — protected by price controls on gasoline — continued to build large cars while foreigners developed small fuel-efficient automobiles.

In a city where 25 percent of American cars are built, the signal was not fully appreciated. Now U.S. automakers face a difficult $80 billion capital rebuilding effort made more difficult by the popularity of foreign autos.

Still, Young gets high marks for his efforts. Since 1973, he's cut the payroll 20 percent — to 20,500 workers. Walter Strecher, the city budget director, notes Young has been an outspoken advocate for big cities.

And even critics acknowledge that many things were beyond his control.

A 1977 arbitration ruling gave police higher salaries that Young says cost $58 million a year. He's laid off 2,000 patrolmen to compensate. But police and firefighters in Detroit are the nation's highest paid.

Some $34.5 million in state funds for this fiscal year was withdrawn when economically depressed Michigan had to cut its state budget by $1 billion.

And now, Young says, it's possible that state and federal aid for 1981-82 may be $300 million less than hoped.

"It's important to understand that no one special event is going to wipe out Detroit's problem," said Robert Geier, vice president for municipal bonding at Standard and Poor's bond rating service in New York.

"A lot depends on things that aren't under their control."

Local People Are On Board

Two Greenville residents were recently elected to the board of directors of the North Carolina Conservative Union.

The NCCU said that Senator John East and Jim McIntyre were among the board members elected during the organization's annual meeting in Chapel Hill.

Bill Evans of Guilford County was elected as the new NCCU chairman.

A key function of the non-partisan organization is the preparation and publication of voting records of members of the N.C. General Assembly. The purpose of the publication, the NCCU said, is to enlighten the public as to the general political philosophy of state senators and representatives, based on a conservative to liberal scale.
