GREENVILLE, N.C. WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 20, 1981

90 PAGES—6 SECTIONS PRICE 25 CENTS

Welcomed New School Supt. Here

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Delma C. Blinson, superintendent-elect of the Greenville City Schools, said this morning "the commitment the board has shown me for the future of education" was impressive.

Dr. Blinson and his wife, Nancy Blinson, came to Greenville to be presented to the public and the press. The event was held at the Regional Development Institute Building.

In addition to school board members, among those present to greet Dr. Blinson were Greenville Mayor Don McGlohan, Pitt County Commissioner Charles Gaskin, President of the Pitt County Chapter of the NAACP D.D. Garrett, and Dean of the ECU School of Education Dr. Richard Warner.

"I'm excited about coming to Greenville to work in the Greenville City School system," Dr. Blinson remarked after being presented by Jack Wall, chairman of the selection committee choosing a new superintendent. "I'm looking forward to finding an opportunity to work with people here who support public education."

Dr. Blinson said, "One of the things I've been most impressed with is the commitment the board has shown me for the future of education. I share that commitment and their commitment is one of the reasons I made a decision to come here. I have mixed emotions about leaving Garner; it's difficult for me to leave the place where I've spent my entire professional career."

He added that he feels "in a few years the Greenville City Schools will rank among the very best in North Carolina."

As superintendent, Dr. Blinson will receive a salary of approximately $38,000 annually. This figure includes basic salary paid from local funds and a state supplement.

Wall expressed appreciation for assistance in the selection process to members of the selection committee, Ernest Brown, Jerry Smith and Sue Zadeits, and to Superintendent Glenn Cox, "who has given me outstanding support. He is a true professional." Wall noted that the committee interviewed 37 applicants, including superintendents, principals, and consultants. "We feel we have selected the right person."

Blinson, 38, a native of Clayton, is now principal of Garner Senior High School. He has been principal there since 1971, and prior to that was a teacher and assistant principal at both Garner and Raleigh Enloe High Schools.

He is a graduate of Campbell University, received the masters degree in political science from UNC-Chapel Hill, and earned his doctorate in education from Duke University.

Dr. Blinson is married to Nancy Avery Blinson, and they are the parents of two young children, Michael and Lisa.

Active in civic affairs, Dr. Blinson is president-elect of the Exchange Club of Garner, a member of the Garner Chamber of Commerce, chairman of Drug Action of Garner and a member of the board of directors, Drug Action of Wake County, Inc.

He also holds membership in several professional organizations, and among honors awarded him have been Outstanding Young Educator of the Year and Outstanding Administrator of the Year in North Carolina.

Council Amends Promising Rain 1980-81 Budget On Area Crops

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council, in a special 7:30 a.m. call session today, adopted two ordinances amending the 1980-81 city budget.

Council members amended the budget ordinance to transfer $116,430 from the personnel and fringe benefits section to various departments to take care of expenditures previously authorized by the governing board.

The same ordinance amended the Public Transportation Fund by increasing the appropriation for personal services by $3,925 and decreasing the appropriation for operating expenses by the same amount. The federal and state energy conservation grant fund was amended to reflect a $1,700 increase.

The second ordinance amended the Youth Conservation Corps grant project fund by deleting $3,473. It was noted that the funds were included under anticipated revenues but, the city did not get as much grant money as it expected.

FAYE WIGGINS APPEAL

Gorham Swamp Church near Calico has asked Hotline to appeal for donations for the subsistence of Faye Wiggins.

The 39-year-old woman is a heart and kidney patient unable to work, yet not qualifying for Social Security disability aid at this time. Contributions may be sent in care of Mrs. Stella Anderson, 1211 Chestnut Street, Greenville.

A yard sale to benefit Mrs. Wiggins will be held Saturday beginning at 8 a.m. at Mrs. Anderson's home, 1211 Chestnut Street. Anyone wishing to donate items for the sale may take them there and the public is urged to patronize the sale. Inquiries may be directed to Mrs. Anderson, 758-4966.

Witnesses at the place where Charles Stevens lost two mattresses off the back of a truck told him that they were picked up by a man driving a red and white pickup truck. as usual because of the long dry spell.

"The corn is looking much better," he added, "which is good news as far as silage."

According to Regans, producers were on the brink of having dry ponds and lagoons before the early May rain. The 1.88 inches of precipitation, he noted, has replenished their water supplies.

The cool temperatures that accompanied the rain shouldn't present any serious threat to crops, say extension agents. "The cool weather will slow down growth of tobacco plants," commented Uzzell, "but the roots will continue to grow."

Temperatures Tuesday ranged from a high of 76 degrees Fahrenheit to a low of 53 degrees F. At 8 a.m. today it was 52 degrees and the Tar River stood at 3.5 feet on the National Weather Service Gauge.

Bone Marrow Transplants For 2 Pitt Boys

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

There are only 14 patients at any one time in the internationally-used Oncology Transplant Unit of Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md. Right now two of these 14 are Pitt County teenagers.

Both are North Pitt High School students. Harold Battle is a junior and Kevin Harrell is a freshman.

Kevin was diagnosed March 18, 1979 as having malignant histiocytosis, a rare cancer of the lymph system. Harold was diagnosed in February of this year as having acute undifferentiated leukemia.

Kevin and his mother went to Baltimore in mid-April and his father joined them there May 3.

Harold and his mother and brother, Darrell, have been there since Mother's Day, May 10.

Kevin's entire family was tested for candidacy as a bone marrow donor for him, but none of them were found to be good enough matches to ensure the likelihood of his body's accepting the new marrow. So he's had an autograft, his

Retreat Hinted On Social Security Cut

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, faced with a growing congressional uproar, appears to be stepping back from its call for major Social Security cuts starting next year. A White House spokesman says the proposals were just "ideas" that can be improved.

Senate Democrats, in a rare display of unity, vowed Tuesday to use every ounce of their minority strength to fight the changes, and one congressional source said the administration's proposal for stiffer penalties for early retirement "is two steps away from death row."

Under President Reagan's package, people retiring at age 62 after next Jan. 1 would receive 55 percent of full benefits, instead of the 80 percent they now get.

"If it had any chance at all, it would have to be phased in," said the congressional source, who asked not to be identified.

Reagan last week proposed cutting Social Security benefits by $53 billion over the next five years to save the system from bankruptcy, but Social Security Commissioner John Svahn said Tuesday that the administration always intended to seek a bipartisan approach.

"I don't think we're backing away from anything," Svahn said, but he added: "There's nobody set in concrete or wedded to any particular part of that package."

At the White House, meanwhile, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said he was "sure" the administration's proposals should be improved upon.

He said Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Tex., chairman of a House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, asked the administration to submit "our ideas and that's what we did. We think it's the best route to go ... but whatever Congress will do with them, you know, we'll certainly state our position as we go along if they want to make changes in our plan."

Speakes said it would be reasonable to conclude that the administration is more flexible about compromising on Social Security than it is on Reagan's call for tax cuts.

During a closed party caucus Tuesday, Senate Democrats unanimously adopted a resolution saying "no change in the Social Security benefit structure shall be made which would precipitously and unfairly deny those men and women approaching retirement ... benefits on which they have planned and to which they are entitled."

After the meeting, Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia called the Reagan proposals "precipitous, unfair, inhumane."

"We will stand against them," fighting "to the last ditch" and using "every rule at our disposal," Byrd said.

He said Reagan's advisers should not be fooled into believing that the president's popularity can be used to "unravel the Social Security system."

Referring to the presidential cufflinks and theater tickets that Reagan handed out during intense personal lobbying for his budget proposals, Byrd said "a new barrage of cufflinks and Kennedy Center tickets will not save this one."

However, the Senate Democrats declined to produce any single alternative for ensuring the future solvency of Social Security.

"There are many options," Byrd said. "It doesn't need to be said we have an answer today."

Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the assistant Democratic leader, noted that this was the first unanimous action taken by the Senate Democrats during this session of Congress.

"Democrats are united on this issue and will remain united on this," Cranston said.

Employee Pay Raises Are Voted By Hospital Board

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Seven percent across the board raises for Pitt County Memorial Hospital employees other than nurses were approved by the Hospital Board of Trustees last night.

Nurses' raises came last month.

This move, deemed necessary after a study of average salaries for hospitals in the state of comparable size, will cost the hospital an additional $84,336 from July 1 through September 30 and an additional $336,000 during the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. There are approximately 1,400 hospital employees.

Linwood I. Rouse of Winterville was welcomed as a new member of the board of trustees. He was appointed by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Joan Hooks, who has resigned. Appreciation to Mrs. Hooks for her months of service was made.

Chairman Henry Leslie asked the board members to rise for a moment of silent meditation in memory of W. W. Speight, county and hospital attorney, who has died since the previous meeting. A resolution of appreciation for Mr. Speight's years of service to the hospital was enacted. It was announced, too, that a gifts to the hospital given in memory of Speight will be used to furnish a room, which will be dedicated to him.

Approval was given for an emergency medicine residency program to be conducted at the hospital. This program will not get underway until at least July 1, 1982, possibly July 1, 1983.

It was decided that the board would have to seek a legal opinion as to whether it can accept a $23,295 low bid from Barrus Construction Company for the paving of a parking lot at the hospital, which is partially supported with state funds. This bid is approximately $10,000 under the next lowest, but it has been understood that Barrus, whose president and vice-president are serving prison sentences for highway bid-rigging, has been removed from the state bidders list.

An ad hoc committee to pick a new hospital attorney was appointed.

Unbudgeted capital expenditures approved by the board included a $520 anesthesia table and an $18,747 orthosurgical table.

A ruling has come from the N. C. Attorney General saying that Pitt Memorial cannot fund its considered chaplaincy program with public funds. Chaplaincy committee chairman Noel Lee Jr. was granted a 60-day extension on time to investigate whether such a program is possible for the hospital.

Building committee chairman Charles Gaskins predicted that the west bed tower will be ready for use prior to the Nov. 1 target date, the work on it is progressing so well. Changes in the administrative offices are almost complete, too, he said.

Health Systems Agency approval has been received for cafeteria, medical records, laboratory, and respiratory therapy areas of the hospital. Final go-ahead is expected around June 30.

Woman Located

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that investigators have located the woman who took Willie Ray Daniels of 1400 Myrtle Ave. to the hospital Monday night, but emphasized that investigation of the case is continuing.

Daniels, 35, died from a gunshot wound shortly after arriving at Pitt Memorial Hospital. He was taken there by a woman who left the scene after hospital employees removed Daniels from her car.

The chief, who declined to identify her, said she told investigators that Daniels was shot at the intersection of Ward and Ford Streets by a man threatening robbery.

Cannon quoted the woman as saying that after she picked Daniels up on Fifth Street, she drove along Ward Street, stopping at the Ford Street intersection. Before pulling away from the intersection, a man reached into the passenger window, grabbed Daniels, and demanded money.

She said Daniels told her to drive on, the chief explained. As the woman started to pull away from the intersection, Daniels was shot.

Cannon said the woman told investigators that she had intended to get some heroin from Daniels.

father, Tom Harrell, interviewed by telephone yesterday, said. Fourteen punctures were made in his hips the week of May 23 and some bone marrow plus three pints of his blood were harvested, frozen and treated. Then the bone marrow remaining was killed with chemotherapy. This past Friday, the treated marrow was returned to his hipbones and within two to three weeks, it should become apparent whether his body is going to accept the marrow back.

Harrell said he's been told by Dr. Herbert Kaiser, Kevin's Johns Hopkins physician, that Kevin is probably the first person in the nation to have the specific treatment he is receiving.

Mrs. Battle, also interviewed by telephone yesterday, said Harold's doctor has told her that Darrell is a marvelous marrow match for Harold. This is understandable, of course, she said, because the two are the identical members of a set of triplets and, thus, are as alike genetically as two humans can be.

Mrs. Battle said this knowledge makes her feel blessed that

Oil Shortage Date Set Back

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency, predicting the Soviet Union will meet its oil needs domestically through 1985, has scrapped its 1977 petroleum-shortage forecast that generated theories about Soviet expansionism in the Middle East.

The Soviet Union will produce between 10 million and 11 million barrels daily in 1985, the CIA said in a new forecast which has not been formally released but was discussed publicly by agency officials at two recent conferences.

The 1977 assessment said Soviet production would begin declining in 1980 and that by 1985 the Soviets would be importing as many as 3.5 million barrels daily.

The previous forecast predicted 1985 production would drop to between 8 million and 10 million barrels a day from the current level of 12 million, best among oil-producing nations.

That assessment was widely used to support theories that a need for imported oil would force the Soviets into an expansionist policy in the Middle East to meet oil needs.

The intervention in Afghanistan in December 1979 was explained by many as a move by the Soviets to bring troops closer to the Persian Gulf.

The Reagan administration has cited Soviet oil needs to justify efforts to increase American military presence in the Persian Gulf region.

"The Soviet Union will almost certainly become a net energy importer," Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said two months ago, adding this must be viewed along with the Soviets' "economic necessity for eventual access to (Persian) Gulf oil."

Michael Goldman, associate director of Harvard's Russian Research Center, praised the revised CIA assessment as a more accurate reflection of the world situation.

"This is a significant change," Goldman said. "Our whole foreign policy debate has been disoriented because of the belief that their economy will collapse unless they march into the Middle East."

James Noren, one of the CIA officials who made the higher prediction, was quoted as saying the revision was based on substantial increases in drilling in Western Siberia, where the number of feet drilled has more than doubled since 1977.

Half-Dollar Is Priced $9-$12

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is working on a new way to dent the national debt: selling 50-cent pieces to Americans for $9 to $12 apiece.

The coins, while only worth their half-dollar face value as legal tender, would be minted from silver — real silver, not the copper and copper-nickel alloy that makes up current "silver" coins.

If the Senate goes along with a bill approved by unanimous voice vote on Tuesday in the House, the Treasury would be authorized to produce up to 10 million of these new silver half-dollars.

The collectors-item coins would contain 90 percent silver and would be sold only in 1982 and 1983 to commemorate the 250th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, whose likeness they would bear.

The profit the government makes from selling the half-dollars at about 20 times their face value would be earmarked to help pay off the national debt now approaching the $1 trillion mark.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House consumer affairs and coinage subcommittee, said the bill constitutes an "opening shot in an all-out war on the national debt."

The legislation hands the government at least a 20 percent profit on sale of the coins. Thus, at present silver prices of around $11 an ounce, the half-dollars would sell for between $9 and $12, sponsors said.

"If all of the coins are sold, there should be a profit of from $10 million to $15 million," Annunzio said. "I realize that $10-$15 million is not a large amount when we are talking about such a huge national debt, but we have to start someplace."

He said the gesture was important symbolically because Washington, the nation's first president, "was a champion of fiscal responsibility."

The government stopped making coins out of silver almost two decades ago. Most coins consist of copper centers sandwiched between layers of a copper-nickel alloy.

The Washington silver half-dollar would be the first

Fishing Net Had Whale

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A fishing net snagged a 30-foot gray whale in San Francisco Bay, but the Coast Guard managed to free the giant mammal after about 4½ hours.

The whale, which apparently strayed during its migration from Baja California to the Bering Sea, went "swimming off into the sunset" out the Golden Gate Tuesday evening, said Petty Officer Jean Figueira.

After a boat spotted it splashing furiously beneath the Bay Bridge, which connects San Francisco and Oakland, she said crewmen in an inflatable raft followed the whale around the bay. They cut all but one of the lines holding the whale and decided the whale would be able to cut through that himself.

An expert on cetaceans from the University of California at Berkeley helped the Coast Guard set the whale free.

Each fall, an estimated 11,000 to 15,000 gray whales make the 6,000-mile journey from Alaska to Mexico. They return in the spring, usually swimming within two miles of the coast.

The gray whales, which actually are mottled brown and covered with barnacles, weigh about one ton per foot.

new coin authorized by Congress since the ill-fated Susan B. Anthony dollar, which was minted in 1979 but never won public acceptance and was all but removed from circulation.

"There's a demand for such a coin," said Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., the author of the bill. "It will have a lot of appeal to the millions of American collectors and investors. It will not be another costly error like the Susan B. Anthony coin."

Dear Abby

Mother's Swollen Ankles Caused By Her Pride

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We have a 68-year-old widowed mother who needs a doctor but refuses to go to one or let one come to her house. She told us that if we bring a doctor to the house, she will throw us and the doctor out. She is not a Christian Scientist; she has had doctors in the past but she doesn't want one now.

Abby, her feet and ankles are so swollen they look like elephant's feet! She can't wear shoes and isn't able to stand for more than five minutes. Her feet and legs are purplish, so it's obvious she has some kind of circulatory problem.

We have a brother living at home who does the laundry and cooking. He says Mother is so stubborn he can't cope with her. She's not senile; her mind is sharp as a razor. We feel so helpless. Every doctor we've spoken to says he can't treat Mother without her consent. We can't drag her to a doctor if she doesn't want to go. Or can we?

HELPLESS

DEAR HELPLESS: No, you can't drag her to a doctor. Assuming Mother is of sound mind, the responsibility of what happens to her body must be hers. Don't fight her. When her condition becomes unbearable to her, she will be forced to do something about it.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think an ex-priest would make a good husband? I'm going with one who wants to marry me.

CATHY IN DETROIT

DEAR CATHY: Ex-priests should make excellent husbands. They've already taken an oath of chastity, obedience and poverty.

DEAR ABBY: You stated that people who avoid shaking hands are "mysophobic" — they have a pathological fear of germ contamination. Not necessarily.

As a violinist, my sensitive hands are sometimes crushed to a pulp by bone-crushing handshakes from overly enthusiastic well-wishers. Crippling handshakes can also be expressions of conscious or unconscious hostility.

Furthermore, many physicians believe that handshakes are the most common culprit in transmitting cold germs.

According to one theory, the custom of handshaking was originally intended to demonstrate that the hand concealed no weapon. How much more graceful is the Oriental greeting of bowing with upturned hands joined together as in prayer, demonstrating that neither hand conceals a weapon.

Could anything be more useful in today's gun-loving U.S.A.?

HENRY TEMIANKA, L.A., CALIF.

DEAR HENRY: Gun control might help.

Conference To Be June 3

RALEIGH — The problems of single-parent families, including an estimated one of every eight families in North Carolina, will be the subject of a daylong conference at North Carolina State University's McKimmon Center Wednesday, June 3.

The NCSU Center for Urban Affairs and Community Services will conduct the conference which is being supported with a grant from Title I of the Higher Education Act.

NCSU officials note that 90 percent of single-parent families in this state are women and that 353,000 children live in one-parent families.

Rising divorce rates are the major reason for the large number of single-parent families according to Dr. Yvonne Brannon and Karin Wolfe, project co-directors. But death of a parent, abandonment, adoption and out-of-wedlock births also are factors.

Speakers at the conference will include Ms. Wolfe, Dr. Brannon and Mrs. Rebecca Leonard of NCSU.

Workshop sessions, covering the problems faced by single parents, will include legal issues and other matters ranging from schools and children of families in transition to "emotional overload."

Speakers will include working single parents, an attorney, a representative from the N. C. Council on the Status of Women and other authorities on the problems facing single-parent families.

The conference will start with registration at 8:30 a.m. and continue until 4 p.m.

Additional information and registration forms may be secured from Karin Wolfe at the NCSU Center for Urban Affairs, Box 5125, Raleigh.

Teaching Children About Money

A home study course on "Teaching Children About Money" is available at no charge from the Agricultural Extension Service. The purpose of the course is to provide background information and learning activities which parents can use to teach basic skills in wise use of money to children in four age levels: toddlers through age 6, 7-8 years of age, 9-12 years of age, and teenagers (13-18 years of age).

This course is designed for parents who are interested in their children learning to manage money effectively, willing to take time to teach and guide children through the recommended activities, and willing to cooperate with the Agricultural Extension Service in evaluating the worth of the course and the progress made by children who participate.

It consists of a guide for parents or adults and workbooks for children aged 7 and 8, 9-12, and teenagers. Part I provides background information to help the parents prepare themselves to teach children about money. The information guides parents in thinking through and making decisions about: their feelings about money, the importance of money (family values and goals), money management skills children need to learn, and how to deal with specific situations and issues that emerge relative to children using money. Part II provides specific activities to use to teach each of the four age levels of children about using money wisely.

The workbooks are for the children's use. Each book presents a step-by-step procedure for managing money for one month. The procedure will help the child learn basic skills and a pattern to follow up managing money effectively. A workbook is available for each of the upper three age levels—ages 7 and 8, 9-12, and teenagers (13-18).

If interested in enrolling, call the Agricultural Extension Service (752-2934, Extension 370) and ask for the following: one copy of the parent's guide and one workbook for each child according to child's age. Each family enrolling in the course will be asked to evaluate it. A questionnaire will be mailed to you two or three months after you receive the course materials and to account for our program efforts and effectiveness.

Bridesmaids Entertained

A bridesmaids luncheon honoring Pamela Jane Cayton was given Saturday morning at the Three Steers. Hostesses were Mrs. Herman S. Tripp, Mrs. William E. Hudson and Mrs. Harry Mercer.

The honoree was given a corsage of white daisies.

The refreshment table was decorated with an arrangement of white daisies.

Special guests were Mrs. William A. Cayton, mother of the bride-elect, Mrs. Dorothy Dixon, mother of the bridegroom-elect, and Mrs. Henry G. Dunn Jr., maternal grandmother of the honoree.

A gift of china was given to the honoree by the hostesses. Miss Cayton remembered her bridesmaids with gifts.

Bridesmaids cutouts were given to guests and were then made into a scrapbook which was given to Miss Cayton.

Miss Cayton and Aubrey Scott Dixon will be married May 23.

Study Every Cost Item

The City Council is looking at a proposed budget for 1981-82 of $12,541,044.

The budget was presented to the Council by City Manager Ed Wyatt. The budget for the present fiscal year is $9.93 million.

The figures are for the city operations only and do not include the $49.4 million budget proposed by the Utilities Commission, although that budget will be consolidated with the city budget in its final form.

Wyatt told the Council the budget was developed "to provide the present level of city services which will be delivered in the most efficient manner."

Wyatt said the budget would allow the same number of city positions but would "provide a higher level of public-protection by re-allocating positions."

He explained that, while the total number of city positions would remain at 383, three city positions would be re-allocated to provide three more uniformed patrolmen. These positions, along with "temporary deployment" of other police personnel, would allow for extra patrolmen on each shift.

Through re-allocation of city personnel two additional Fire-Rescue positions would be created.

Public Works is reducing its personnel by five and with the addition of lifts on all refuse trucks there might be other positions eliminated.

Because the final figures on the recent property revaluation are not yet available the city manager had no estimate of the tax rate that would be needed to support the budget requests. Presently the tax rate is 77 cents per $100 valuation. This is expected to decrease because of the sharp rise in value of most property in the city.

The setting of the tax rate will be critical in this time of citizen concern over steadily increasing taxes. The City Council should study every item in the proposed budget for 1981-82 and attempt to cut out anything that is not needed for efficient operation of the city. The shifting of personnel to provide for additional police and fire protection is a step in the right direction, and that is the kind of thinking that will be necessary if we are to provide services with a tax rate that will be acceptable to the taxpayers.

CAN YOU BELIEVE IT---A BACKBONE IMPLANT!

Tax Package Compromise

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON

Boistered by the Treasury as well as budget director David Stockman, President Reagan is inclined against diluting his tax package to round up enough conservative Democratic congressmen for a winning coalition in the House.

The decision must be made quickly because backroom decisions are beginning on the pivotal tax question. One option presented to the president would satisfy the "boll weevils" or "Redneck Caucus" — the conservative southern Democrats — and appease the bond market by delaying individual tax rate cuts until Jan. 1, 1982. But the odds are against Reagan taking that way out, in the opinion of well-placed administration officials.

There is plenty of room for compromise between what the boll weevils want and Reagan's Kemp-Roth bill. That ushers in intriguing negotiations that will determine not only the thrust of economic policy the next two years but also redefine power relationships inside the House.

Actually, Reagan's tax proposal for annual, across-the-board 10 percent rate cuts for three years starting July 1, partisan Republican Kemp-Roth bill that not even the boll weevils will vote for it. Indeed, House Democratic leaders drool at the prospect of bringing it to a vote for the psychic and political joy of beating Reagan.

Reagan can escape this predicament in the Democratic-controlled House by making a deal with the Conservative Democratic Forum (CDF) — the Redneck Caucus. But Rep. Kent Hance of Texas, a CDF member on the House Ways and Means Committee who has been talking secretly to the Treasury, is insisting on no tax rate cuts at all in 1981 and only a 5 percent cut in 1982 (to be followed by 10 percent each in 1983 and 1984). Thanks to inflationary bracket creep, that means significantly higher tax rates through the 1982 election.

This would reduce Reagan's estimated budget deficit for the next fiscal year by some $30 billion. The immediate tax cuts would slash in "unearned" (dividends and interest) income that show little revenue loss. Like back-loaded spending programs enacted in the Lyndon B. Johnson era, they constitute a Fabian strategy of social revolution.

The CDF alternative entices senior Reaganites — but, contrary to fears of edgy Treasury officials, not Stockman. As budget director, Stockman naturally is interested in any deficit-reducing scheme. But as a supply-sider and Republican politician, he sees dangers in what Hance and Gramm propose.

The CDF alternative would permit only 5 percent before the 1982 election. That 5 percent compares with Reagan's campaign pledge of 20 percent and his actual proposal of 15 percent. While the CDF alternative would please the bond traders, it would do nothing for the blue-collar working man. That is not what Jack Kemp, David Stockman or Ronald Reagan intends.

Politics aside, the CDF alternative flunks the test political reasons.

Any number of compromises is possible — say, a 7.5 percent rate cut a year beginning Oct. 1, 1981. But the danger for the White House, if Reagan and the boll weevils cannot agree, is an all-Democratic coalition. Hance is under intense pressure from the Democratic leadership not to deal with the White House, and will confer this week with the ways and means chairman, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski.

It is not Rostenkowski, however, but one of his committee members — Rep. James R. Jones — who looms as the principal Democratic actor. Jones, regarded as a moderate conservative until this year, is licking his wounds from the budget fight and ready to challenge Reagan again. He is working closely with ways and means liberals on a bill that would be tilted toward investors and that would not cut individual taxes until Jan. 1, 1983 — a beautiful bill in the eyes of the bond boys, the boll weevils and maybe a good many Republican congressmen as well.

Grants Give Career Freedom

The work of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation is not quite like the old television show "The Millionaire", but it will do.

The foundation made awards of up to $300,000 to 21 people who did not even know they had been nominated.

Some of them are well known in their fields and some are not.

The purpose of the awards is to allow the recipients the financial freedom to devote time to their careers.

Some of the recipients are writers and some indicated they would use the money to provide time to continue their work.

At any rate it has been a nice feeling to come into totally unexpected funds. For those dedicated to their particular fields of endeavor, it must be close to the feeling those people got on the television show when they were handed their checks from the mythical benefactor.

"The vegetable garden is ready for your inspection, sir."

"Thank you, Sergeant. Now hear this. As commander of this spring garden, I want every plant to line up, in rows four abreast. Let's move it, on the double. You asparagus down there. I want your shoulders back, and your spears straight up. If you tomato plants don't stop sagging, I'm going to pull you up by your roots. Do you hear me? I SAID, DO YOU HEAR ME? That's better."

"This is the sorriest excuse for vegetable life I've ever seen. But let me tell you something: By the time I get finished, every last one of you is going to be fit to eat, or I'll know the reason why."

"You think all it takes is a little mulch and fertilizer to be a vegetable? Well, you're wrong, wrong, wrong. You've had an easy time of it, sacking out and slouching in your beds. Now you're going to start producing or I'll know the reason why."

"From this day on you're going to shape up or ship out."

Is that understood? And that goes for the rhubarb, too.

"Sergeant, why do these corn stalks look so sick?"

"I don't know, sir. I've tried to get them to straighten up, but they keep flopping over."

"Maybe they could use a little discipline. Perhaps if we tie them to a stick for a week, they'll know how to stand at attention."

"But that's cruel and unusual punishment."

"It's nothing compared to what they'll face when they go up against the corn borer. I'm trying to save these plants' lives, and we can't do that by coddling them. Tie 'em up, and that's an order."

"Yes, sir."

"Why do these new wax beans look so sallow?"

"I don't know, sir. I think they've been high on nitrogen."

Questions Raised

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Serious questions about North Carolina's wilderness camping program for misbehaving young people are created by an independent study performed for the Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth.

The independent study was performed by a consulting firm from Chicago, the John Howard Association.

Criticism was directed at excessive cost, lack of guidelines for length of stay at the camps, a low number of graduates compared to those who leave without completing the prescribed course, inadequate attention to basic education, and a small number of youngsters accepted at the camps as an alternative to training school as referrals from police or court.

The camping program is designed to help young people (average age is 12 or 13) learn to cope and survive in a primitive environment. Emphasis is on teamwork, group therapy, cooperation, trust and reinforcement of the rewards of positive behavior and the consequences of negative behavior.

Alternatives
The state contracts with the Eckerd Wilderness Educational System of Florida to operate the four camps located in four different regions of the state.

BILL NOBLITT

Official state policy describes the program as "an alternative treatment process for children who have behavioral problems and/or are in conflict with the law...who may be unusually aggressive and cannot function in a normal community, schools, or family setting."

Investigators found considerable conflict over who is supposed to be served in the camps and concluded that 65

Other Editors Say 'A' For Effort

(Henderson Dispatch)

Whether it will be promptly killed by a negative vote or simply tabled for a lingering death, we do not know. But one bill dropped in the hopper in the North Carolina House of Representatives will never see the light of day beyond the committee chamber.

A freshman Republican in the General Assembly sponsored a bill in the state House that would reduce legislators' salaries by six percent and proposes calling on other top state pay officials to accept a voluntary pay cut of the same size.

"By taking a pay cut we're doing no more than what's required of a leader in the time of an economic situation where the people of North Carolina are suffering," said the primary sponsor of the bill, Rep. Charles Hughes, Henderson County Republican.

His proposal would cut the salary of House and Senate members from $6,936 to $6,520.

It would also cut by six percent the salaries of Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.'s Cabinet secretaries and would call on the governor, the lieutenant governor and other members of the North Carolina Council of State to take voluntary pay cuts. Under the North Carolina Constitution, the General Assembly cannot cut the salaries of Council of State officers during their terms in office.

Rep. Hughes' bill, of course, has about as much chance of passage as a snowball in the proverbial hot place.

Still, we must give him an "A" for effort. The idea is a step in the right direction.

Something needs to be done to control the mushrooming cost of government. The cost of running the General Assembly alone was $692,000 as recently as 1970. The current budget for the legislature stands at $4.8 million.

Although the number of legislators remains constant, the army of secretaries, staffers, consultants, clerks and what have you grows larger every year.

What North Carolina needs is a healthy dose of Reaganomics.

Strength For Today

THE CHURCH AND MEETING HOUSE

Most Americans today use the word "church" to indicate a religious organization and the building which houses it. Perhaps this does not seem strange to us, but it would have seemed so to our forefathers. As 18th century records often show, in some areas at least there was a definite distinction observed between the terms "church" — the corporate body of Christians in communion with Christ — and "meeting house" — the building which houses the activities of the church.

Many people believe that their religious experience is complete when they contribute money, serve on committees, and participate in the activities of the church. These things are important and praiseworthy. But what about the spiritual lives of these people as members of Christ's community? They have done their duty by the "meeting house", but have they really been members of the church in the spiritual sense? Jesus said, "Thou art careful and troubled about many things: But one thing is needful." — Elisha Douglass

Everybody Has Explanations

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawyers say it is a medical problem; doctors say it is a legal and insurance problem; insurers say it is a social problem.

Others have a say too: Juries and judges, patients, hospital trustees, creators of "miracle" drugs that sometimes have unexpected effects, the media, and sociologists who seek to put it all in perspective.

"It" is the problem of malpractice suits and the associated costs of what has come to be called defensive medicine. Together, they cost $10 billion a year, say Carl Bakal, a Blue Cross-Blue Shield spokesman.

While that sum is barely comprehensible, even if calculated in dollars that shrink by the day, the horror story may still lie ahead. After a period of relative stability following a surge in malpractice awards in 1974-1975, some statistics are beginning to show ominous signs.

"In some areas, physician premiums have gone up by 35 percent in the past few years, and hospital liability rates are expected to rise 30 percent to 40 percent in just the next year," said Bakal.

By one estimate, he says, $1.60 out of $10 we pay to our physicians goes for malpractice premiums, while insurance costs add $2 to as much as $10 to hospital room rates and $100-$200 extra to a surgeon's bill.

In the past, critics have sometimes accused the two "big blues" of allowing medical costs to get out of hand while blaming others for the problem. But in this case they have support from other insurers.

Among long-established underwriters, there was a $150 million malpractice loss in 1979 versus a profit of $20 million the year before. Thomas Swain, executive vice president of St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance

Co., insurer of 45,000 physicians and surgeons, says the severity of malpractice claims "is jumping by quantum leaps."

Inflation, of course, is one reason — a reason well understood by judges and juries — in spite of the fact that laws exist in every state to counter frivolous suits.

But some insurers wonder if there isn't also a cycle to their business. Following the spate of suits in 1974-1975, the number and size of awards diminished for a couple of years, before rising again.

When the number and size of awards rises, these insurers say, so do the headlines and other publicity. And, almost as surely, you begin to hear warnings issued by Blue Cross, Blue Shield and other insurers.

To some extent, the current warnings reflect those fears, but they don't explain all. Societal changes and medical progress, it seems, are two major factors in medical malpractice.

With the growth of medical specialization, that is, many patients no longer maintain a close relationship with their physicians. The family doctor is not as common today, and neither is trust and confidence.

That same specialization, many patients complain, also seems to mean bigger bills, which in turn leads to resentment against the medical profession. If today's society is materialistic, patients say, you can see as much proof among doctors as among patients.

The case against progress is ironic. Says a Blue Cross-Blue Shield publication: "It brings machines that can malfunction, unexpected side effects from new drugs, and increased potential for human error."

And while practitioners of medicine, insurance and law work to cool the problems, inflation works insidiously to heat them up.

percent are being referred by welfare, mental health, or school people rather than police or courts. The consultants recommend that at least half the camping slots be earmarked for those who need an alternative to training school commitment.

From December, 1977 until the end of last February, the state had spent $6.2 million on the four camps. Only 91 had graduated, which translates into a cost per graduate of $68,500. Those figures naturally include higher than usual startup costs for the camps.

Still, investigators found that 108 youths have withdrawn while only 91 graduated and there is no sign of this disproportionate situation changing. Overall, costs are now running nearly $46 daily per camper; an annual cost of $16,771.53.

Over long stays of from 12 to 15 months with no concrete system of determining how long a young person must stay in the camps contributes to the high cost, consultants said. They suggest that a review panel determine the proper length of stay. Training school terms average just over 10 months.

The camps have added a transitional classroom to the program to ease the situation for campers near the end of their stay and preparing to return to regular school.

But the months in camp, consultants complain, represents some 20 or 25 percent of a youth's academic life and "more formal and regular involvement in the education process is needed."

Study determined that education is supposed to take place in the normal course of a camping day. "Basic reading, writing, and math skills are theoretically developed by having to use these processes in the everyday camping experience" such as menu planning, cooking, map-reading, construction of tents or shelters, etc.

But, consultants reported a "lack of consistency...from camp to camp and group to group and counselor to counselor."

The on-site inspection found the camps well organized and operated; the youngsters and staff generally enthusiastic about the program; and positive results in many cases.

The recommendations have been forwarded to the Department of Human Resources for consideration of changes in the program to make it more responsive to children in trouble with the law, to implement needed educational programs, to structure a system of review for admissions and departures, and study of the costs.

The easy way for Reagan to avert a Jones-led Democratic triumph is to buy the CDF alternative. But in so doing, he would be following the same path of pain travelled by Herbert Hoover and Jimmy Carter — seeking vainly to cut budget deficits by increasing taxes. The odds today are that Reagan will resist this, and as the great communicator, take on the bond traders, the boll weevils and some of his own Republicans to convince them that it is the road to ruin.

her leukemic son is a triplet. Harold and Darrell and their triplet sister, Sharon, are the youngest of her nine children. Sharon is staying home taking care of her dad, Mack Battle, who retired this past January from employment by the City of Greenville.

Kevin is also the youngest in his family. He has older brothers, Maurice and Ray, and a sister, Teresa.

The Harrells are staying with Al Saunders, father of a fellow church member of theirs, in Glen Burnie, Md. They spend every day from about 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. with Kevin. Harrell has taken a leave of absence from his job in the maintenance department of East Carolina University until this critical period is over.

The Battles are staying with Mrs. Battle's cousin, Ella Lee Watts, only about 15 blocks from the hospital.

Both families say they have been amazed at the cordial treatment they have received at "such a big hospital in such a big city."

"I'd never been away from home more than a very few days in my life before," Mrs. Battle said, "and thinking of having to be up here at least 100 days scared me. But it's not too bad. I miss home, but am glad I can be here with my boy."

According to their mother, Harold and Darrell have always been very much alike and very close in spirit. "They tell Darrell that taking the bone marrow from his hipbones is going to be very painful," she said, "but he says that's all right, that he's willing to get on with it to help Harold."

Darrell will be hospitalized next Monday and the marrow will be drawn Tuesday, the same day it's given to Harold.

Both Kevin and Harold spend their time watching television and doing some reading and writing. The Harrells play a card game called Uno with their son. Each boy has a private room with sterile environment. There's an air filtration system to constantly clean the air in each. Visitors to either room must wear masks and either of them must wear a mask when he goes out.

Outings for either are usually the 19 laps (one mile) around the Oncology unit halls that each is required to make each day, come what may, both are often accompanied by their families.

"When Kevin made his mile Saturday, the entire nursing staff of the unit set up a cheer," his father said. "They really let him know they care."

Tom Harrell was slated at noon yesterday to give his first pheresis donation. This donation, his wife said, is not necessarily platelets for Kevin, but will serve as replacement for the platelets he has and will receive. Mrs. Harrell said she, too, has agreed to be a pheresis donor, but has not yet been approved.

"When you see all these beautiful children here so sick," she said, you want to do any small thing you can to help them."

"Tell the people back there," she said, "that we're thankful for their prayers for Kevin and for Harold and we want them to keep on."

"Tell them the same for me," Mrs. Battle said. "Ask them to pray for us all to have the strength we need to see this thing through."

A Farmville native, Speight was chosen president-elect of the NABCA Monday, during the group's annual meeting in Miami Beach.

He will assume the duties as president at the association's annual convention in May 1982.

The NABCA is composed of officials from the 19 states in which state authorities control the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Speight was appointed state ABC Board chairman by Gov. Jim Hunt in January, 1977.

"Dead, sir."

"Dead! How the hell did they die?"

"The early frost got them, sir. It's all in my report."

"Oh, well, it's no great loss. I don't know too many people who like eggplants. We can always fill out the ranks with cucumbers. How are the potatoes doing?"

"They're a great young crop, sir. But then we never have had trouble with potatoes. It's a tough little vegetable and it doesn't mind wallowing in the dirt."

"What's wrong with this head of lettuce?"

"It was wounded by an army worm in the trenches and doesn't want to grow any more."

"It's not sick. It's malingering. I can't stand a yellow head of lettuce. Our vegetables are out there giving their all for America, and this little coward just sits in its bed faking illness. Well, I won't have it. DO YOU HEAR ME? I WON'T HAVE IT! Take that, you miserable excuse for a salad."

"Sir, you slapped it in the face."

"That's exactly what it needed. If we coddle these rotten shirkers, we won't have anything to eat this summer at all."

Eye More Cuts In Prison Population

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The growth of North Carolina's prison population may be reduced by 1,200 inmates over the next two years by an early release program and reductions in the length of sentences, Correction Department officials estimate.

Spokesmen for the department made the projections Tuesday before a legislative budget committee studying financial needs of the prison system.

The joint Appropriations Committee on Criminal Justice and Public Safety voted to recommend a budget increase of $5.8 million for fiscal 1981-82 and $6.5 million for 1982-83 to take care of the growth in the inmate population.

Even with the reductions projected by the department, the state's average prison population is expected to reach 17,000 — 2,300 above its capacity — during fiscal 1982-83.

When the department first submitted its budget requests last summer, officials estimated that the average prison population would be 15,600 for 1981-82 and 1982-83. But members of the appropriations committee learned in February that the population already had exceeded 16,000 and was growing.

The new estimates, presented to the committee Tuesday, showed a gross increase in population to 16,900 for the upcoming fiscal year that begins July 1 and 18,000 for 1982-83.

However, the Correction

Department subtracted 200 from those yearly figures to account for the early release of inmates. And they estimated that a series of amendments to the fixed-sentencing act to reduce the lengths of sentences judges may impose will reduce the population by 800 during the second year.

Cold Water Poured On Microelectronics Goal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The picture of the microelectronics industry presented to a legislative panel Tuesday was not as rosy as the picture being painted by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Jim Newlin, a fiscal analyst for the Legislature, told the Appropriations Subcommittee on General Government that most of the industry's workers are production line assemblers and maintenance personnel and are being paid relatively low wages.

Hunt is asking the General Assembly to spend about $3 million in 1981-82 and $21.5 million the next fiscal year for building and operating a microelectronics center in the Research Triangle Park. He has promoted the center as a way to bring better-paying jobs to the state.

The joint House-Senate Appropriations subcommittee on General Government now is considering Hunt's request.

Newlin told the panel that in 1977, semiconductor production workers in the South were earning $3.91 an hour while the average manufacturing wage in North Carolina was $4.18 an hour.

But George Herbert, chairman of the board of directors of the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, challenged Newlin's figures saying they were out of date.

The Microelectronics Center of North Carolina is a non-profit group coordinating related efforts by state government, private industry and the state's colleges and universities.

Herbert said that in 1981, production workers in the semiconductor industry were earning $7.22 an hour while North Carolina textile workers were earning $5.23 an hour.

He said General Electric, which is the first company to agree to help pay for and cooperate with the microelectronics center, would be hiring 70 percent professionals and highly trained technicians.

Newlin also noted that the microelectronics industry relies on chemicals which could be present dangers to the environment and workers. He said the microelectronics industry ranks fifth in the nation in occupational illnesses.

Herbert challenged Newlin's findings again, saying the illness figures include eye strain and skin rashes. The panel was scheduled to hear more testimony on the microelectronics center before voting on the appropriation.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Fifteen prisoners in North Carolina committed suicide last year — three times more than in 1979, a state official told 30 jailers at a Raleigh workshop on suicide prevention Tuesday.

Fourth Arrest Is Made In Break-In

A fourth person has been arrested by Pitt County deputies following the investigation of a May 6 break-in at a Rt. 6, Greenville home.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Alfonzo Mayo, 22, of Rt. 4, Box 561 Greenville, was charged with being an accessory after the fact of breaking, entering and larceny at the W. C. Cobb residence.

The sheriff said that bond for Mayo, who was arrested Monday, was set at $25,000.

Three persons were arrested last week on charges related to the break-in. One of the three was charged with breaking, entering and larceny, one was cited for receiving stolen property, and a third person was charged with being an accessory after the fact, Sheriff Tyson said.

In addition to the earlier recovery of a television set and three class rings allegedly taken in the break-in, Sheriff Tyson said that deputies have now recovered a .22 caliber rifle, a 12 gauge shotgun, camera, gold rings, two gold chains and an assortment of costume jewelry. Cobb reported the theft of personal property valued at some $1,700, Sheriff Tyson added.

Investigation is continuing, according to the sheriff.

Bill Would Allow Fast N.C. Action On Some Porn

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that opponents charge could remove "Playboy" and "Penthouse" magazines from bookstore shelves is headed to the state Senate floor.

Supporters of the bill, which rewrites part of North Carolina's obscenity laws, say the measure is needed to effectively prosecute pornography dealers.

The bill, which is a rewritten version of a measure introduced by Sen. John Cavanagh, R-Forsyth, would classify certain materials as obviously obscene and exempt them from adversary hearings. The court hearings now are used to determine whether or not certain materials are obscene.

Under present law, no one may be prosecuted for obscenity unless they continue to sell materials found during such a hearing to be obscene.

The bill approved by the committee would allow immediate prosecution of anyone selling materials showing the genitals during intercourse, masturbation or sodomy.

It also would waive hearings in cases involving material depicting sexual relations between humans and animals, flagellation in a sexual context, acts of sadism or masochism and sex acts with minors.

Robert Emanuel, a Raleigh attorney representing the Periodical Distributors of North Carolina, said the bill would effectively eliminate the adversary hearing.

"It is difficult for me to conceive of any situation that would require an adversary hearing," he said. "Magazine dealers and newsstands will be faced with the necessity of perusing every item (to see if it is exempt from a hearing)."

"You will be eliminating everything, including 'Playboy' and 'Penthouse,'" said Clay Evans, president of the trade association.

Riley acknowledged that "it is conceivable that somebody who is selling material of that sort ('Playboy') could be charged." But he argued that the bill does not change the definition of obscenity and not all people arrested will be convicted.

In other legislative action:

Redistricting
A subcommittee studying congressional redistricting agreed to send all four of its proposed maps to the full House and Senate committee. Each is a complete plan redrawing all 11 districts.

Three of the plans would switch Durham County from the 4th to the 2nd District, while the other would create a Research Triangle district of Wake, Orange and Durham counties.

In legislative redistricting, a subcommittee working on drawing districts for the eastern half of the state adjourned after several legislators expressed outrage at a map put forward by subcommittee chairman Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir.

Restraints
A bill requiring parents to transport young children in car restraining seats won tentative approval in the state House. The measure was scheduled for a final vote today.

With little debate against the measure, the House voted 92-15 for the bill, introduced by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham. The bill would require that any child up to 1 year old be secured in an approved infant restraining seat when transported in the passenger area of the parents' car.

It would require that children between the ages of 1 and 4 be secured at least by regular seat belts, with several exceptions. Parents could bed down their children in the back of station wagons or hold them on their laps to feed them.

Should the bill become law, warning tickets would be issued until June 30, 1983. After that date, violations would be a misdemeanor, punishable by a $10 fine. The law automatically would expire on June 30, 1985.

Miller's bill is not the first child-restraint proposal introduced in the General Assembly. A similar bill in 1979 was held off the House floor by its sponsors, who feared a large defeat.

Hazardous Wastes
A Senate panel rejected an amendment to a hazardous waste bill that would have made the governor's power to override local rules in locating a disposal site open to appeal in the state Supreme Court.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, would give the governor final authority in locating a site for the disposal of low-level radioactive and hazardous wastes. It also would give him power to override local zoning and ordinances in locating such a site.

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, introduced the amendment in a meeting of the Senate Human Resources Committee. He said there was a serious constitutional question whether final authority should rest with the governor.

But Sen. Gerry Hancock, D-Durham, said the governor had final authority only in locating a site. He said the public could attempt to block a site during the process of obtaining permits for a hazardous waste facility.

Other committee members expressed concern that the appeal could cause a lengthy delay in locating a disposal site.

Loans
With virtually no debate, the House approved one bill raising legal rates of interest on contract loans and another raising installment loans made by automobile dealers and other merchants. Both bills were returned to the Senate for concurrence in several amendments.

The contract loan bill covers loans such as 90-day notes, replacing the current limit of 12 percent with a new limit of 16 percent or, if higher, 6 percentage points above the current rate on six-month Treasury bills auctioned by the federal government. That formula would yield a 21 percent limit at current market levels.

The bill won approval three weeks ago after a three-day floor fight, but was returned to committee for technical amendments. Tuesday's vote was 99-4 in favor of the bill.

The second bill changes the state's retail installment act, raising by 2 percentage points the limits on interest rates for each category of installment loan. The act covers installment loans made by merchants.

Under the bill, the new rates would be raised to 18 percent on loans of $3,000 or greater. The rate would rise to as much as 24 percent on loans under $1,500.

In addition, the bill raises from 12 percent to 16 percent the limit on home improvement loans, and sets a higher scale of limits on used car loans.

New Generation
The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill renaming the controversial 1979 New Generation Act and making clear it is in no way connected with an even more controversial health plan for children, which the state published that same year.

The New Generation Act was pushed by Gov. Jim Hunt and set up state and local committees to oversee health care delivery for children. The measure drew strong opposition from conservatives, with particular objections raised to the health plan, or so-called "blue book."

Studies
The House, after tentatively approving three resolutions calling for special study commissions, agreed to send all three to the Appropriations Committee.

One of the bills, which drew fire on the floor Monday night, would set up a study of the feasibility of making the 12th grade optional for high school students.

The others call for studies of state campaign finance reporting laws and of school food services.

New Bills
Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, filed a bill that would prohibit government workers from striking. State government workers already are prohibited from bargaining collectively.

James and four other House members filed a bill encouraging the preservation of prime agricultural and forestry lands. The bill would require the state Department of Transportation, the state Utilities Commission and local governments to consider the importance of land before acquiring easements or rights to the land.

In the Senate, a bill was filed that would authorize the state attorney general to pay up to $600 in medical expenses for students who are injured or killed in school bus accidents.

The Jazz Singer

Al Jolson, the man who some called "the world's greatest entertainer" had his first big success through a lucky break. In 1909, he was asked to substitute for the star of the musical troupe he was in. He sang the song "Mammy" in blackface, an act that became the trademark of his long and successful career. In 1927 he made history as the star of The Jazz Singer, the first sound motion picture. Although Al Jolson died in 1950, the International Al Jolson Society has named this week Al Jolson Week, to honor him and keep his name and entertainment alive. Al Jolson would have been 95 years old this week.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the type of musical variety show, in which performers, some in blackface, sing, dance and tell jokes?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Havana is the capital of Cuba.

Self-Reliant Carrot Island Pony Herd Growing

By JIM SCHLOSSER
The Greensboro Record
BEAUFORT — The long, sandy strip called Carrot Island across the channel from this old seaport may be the most conservative community in the state, even though none of its 43 inhabitants has the slightest interest in politics.

They shun handouts. When a hose carrying fresh water was run from Beaufort to the island years ago, the islanders mostly ignored it and dug their own wells.

They were forced to come to America in the first place. Then, 27 years ago, the government uprooted them and sent them to start anew on uninhabited Carrot Island amidst sand dunes, myrtle woods and marsh grass — but no carrots.

They have never complained but, if they could speak, the words they would holler across the water would probably be, "No thanks, and please just leave us alone."

These true believers in self-reliance are wild ponies living side-by-side with civilization but acting as if they want no part of it.

They've never seen a veterinarian; they care for themselves. Three weeks ago, four foals were born.

Within days, they were scampering up the beach on wobbly legs and, with help from mom, learning to swim the deep channels that separate parts of the island, which is narrow and about four miles long.

All this is happening 150 to 200 yards from the main street of Beaufort, the county seat of Carteret County. Only Taylor's Creek, the harbor, separates ponies from townfolk.

While the animals stand hoof-deep in salty water grazing on marsh grass, expensive sailboats drift by. Giant freighters steam toward nearby Morehead City. Planes streak overhead. Street and dock noises from Beaufort carry across the water. The ponies are unperturbed.

Tourists at the boardwalk cafe at Beaufort's Dockhouse Restaurant no doubt think the docile animals across the way belong to someone.

In fact, they have been nobody's for 200 to 300 years — ever since the ships of their European owners wrecked off the Outer Banks.

While the owners sank to Davey Jones' locker, the horses bobbed their way to Shackleford Banks about a mile east of Carrot Island.

swam back to Shackleford, where they remain today with wild cows, goats and sheep.

Eight ponies decided they liked calling Carrot Island home. They weren't interested in human help from the mainland, but the mares did accept the services of a domesticated stallion sent over to make sure the herd didn't die out. The herd grew in number — and also in size.

"Amazingly, when they arrived they were the size of Shetland ponies. Now they are almost big as domestic horses," says Graden Paul, Beaufort historian and tour guide who watches the ponies from the porch of his waterside home.

The ponies have become part of his landscape, but Paul doesn't take them for granted. "If I go for two or There they became known as banker ponies and survived nicely. But, in 1954, Uncle Sam decided they were destroying Shackleford's sea oats, which protect the dunes from erosion. A roundup sent one group of ponies by barge to Carrot Island. As soon as they hit land, several plunged into the water and three days without seeing one, I wonder what's the matter and get worried," says the 81-year-old coastal veteran. From the original eight, there are now 43 ponies.

Although their lifespan is shorter than that of pampered domestic horses, they are healthy despite parasites, hurricanes and a salty diet. None died during the past 12 months, according to Rolf Hoffman, a young Duke University graduate student from Germany, who has visited Carrot Island almost daily since 1977.

For his master's thesis, Hoffman did a behavioral study of the ponies, and is expanding it for his Ph.D. dissertation.

Hoffman makes the short hop to the island in a small boat owned by the Duke University Marine Lab at Beaufort.

The other day he strapped on an orange knapsack, waded through marsh grass and came upon a rust-colored pony having a morning snack. He could have reached out and petted the animal, but instead jotted some notes. He then walked away in the direction of several other grazing ponies and a colt. The pony he left behind never looked up.

Huffman's daily routine is not too different from that of the horses. He stands and watches for hours; they stand and eat. "They graze 80 percent of the time, rest 10 percent of the time and spend the remainder of the time watering," he says. "They don't sleep at any certain period and when they do they rest standing up. Only the young lie down."

The ponies never run as a herd, and are divided into social groups, including "harems" presided over by a stallion. Six in all, each harem has its turf. Hoffman seems a welcome visitor.

Car Collides With Wall

Zita Marie Roberts of Cherryville, was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of a 1:41 a.m. collision this morning on Evans Street at the 11th Street intersection.

Police Department investigators said the Roberts car collided with a brick wall at the front of Rudy's House of Photography causing $5,000 damage to the car. No damage resulted to the building officers said.

Get Prison For Statements

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Wilmington man and his estranged wife of Winston-Salem were each sentenced to three years in prison Tuesday after pleading guilty to four counts of making false statements on income tax returns and housing assistance request forms.

Robert S. Bryant and Patricia P. Bryant were also ordered to pay costs of prosecution and all taxes, penalties and interest owed the government.

The Internal Revenue Service said the Bryants failed to report over $143,426 in additional receipts from Mr. Bryant's painting business and Mrs. Bryant's housing business from 1974 through 1976.

To move heavy furniture, slip roller skates underneath.

THREE GRADUATE WINSTON-SALEM — Three area students received degrees from Winston-Salem State University this weekend.

Denise Chapman and Vanessa Teel from Greenville and Cynthia Haddock of Grifton all graduated during commencement exercises.

Vincent Grows As Rampants Continue Winning

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School baseball coach Ronald Vincent was like a caged lion. He paced the dugout steps, back and forth, back and forth, his anger building.

A pouring rain had forced a halt in last night's game between Rose and Hunt High School just one out away from being an official game, with the Rampants up, 5-1.

"This just can't be happening," he roared. "This could mean the state championship for us. We've got to finish it now," he kept telling head umpire Mike Van Landingham. Finally, the ump said okay, and the half inning was over — and the rains let up as Rose went on to claim a 5-3 win over the Warriors.

It all turned out to be a double scare for the Rampants. First, they were scared by Mother Nature, and then by the Bruins, who threatened an upset.

But with the result of the game, Rose boosted its record to 20-2 overall and 11-2 in the conference with but one game left to play.

Meanwhile, Northern Nash kept pace with the Rampants in the league race, downing Fike of Wilson, 4-1. The two remain tied for the league lead.

Had the weather not relented and the game been washed out, it would have had to be replayed at the earliest possible time. That would have been either today, weather permitting, or Friday. With Rose still knotted with Northern Nash for first place, the possibility of a playoff for the championship and the lone state playoff berth also looms, and that would have to be Friday or Saturday.

"It could have meant that we would have had to play three straight days to get this all decided," Vincent said. "That would have really put a heavy burden on us."

Vincent had just recalled — before the rain halt — an earlier situation in which the outcome of a game would decide the league championship and a playoff berth, and the game had been halted by rain, awarding the title to another team when the tying and winning runs were on base with no one out. Only minutes later Van Landingham waved the teams off the field.

"Come on, ump," Vincent argued. "This game means too much to halt right now. We could be one pitch away from making it official."

"Coach, I can't even see the ball," the umpire countered.

Vincent's growling then became even more frantic. After about ten minutes, however, Van Landingham decided to get on with it. "I probably wore two inches off the bottom of my shoes with that pacing," Vincent later said, "and wore a rut in the concrete."

The mud on the mound gave Rose pitcher Roger Williams some troubles after that, as he gave up two sixth inning runs and had the tying runs on base before an outstanding defensive play by Kenny Barnes help get them out of the jam.

It was the second stellar play by Barnes during the night. In the fourth inning, when Hunt scored its first run, the Warriors had two on, via a walk and a single. Chris Bradberry then hit a liner into right center. Barnes raced over and made the catch on the dead run. On the play, the runner at second held to make sure the ball fell in, and was passed by the runner at first for an automatic out and an unassisted two-man double play.

Then, in the sixth, after two runs had scored and two were out, a single put a man at first and Andy Jones followed with a single to right. Barnes, however, alertly fired to Mark Douglas covering second, who tagged out Bradberry, who had taken a turn at the base before heading back to the sack.

"Kenny made two fine plays out there that really helped us," Vincent said.

Williams, who recorded his 11th win against no losses, was tagged for six hits, walked two and struck out nine, but seemed to battle a little harder against the rain and mound conditions.

"Roger went out there throwing well," Vincent said. "But this weather really affected him. Still I'm awfully glad to get this one in. I was really worried."

That was an understatement.

Rose did all of its scoring in the first three innings. In the opening frame, the Rampants pushed over their first run. Mont Carter led off with a walk and moved up on Douglas' single. Mitch Brann reached on an error, allowing Carter to score.

In the second, the Rampants scored three more times for a 4-0 lead. Carter walked with two away and stole second. He scored when Douglas singled to right. Brann followed with a double down the left field line, bringing Douglas around. Emmett Walsh finished it off with a single, scoring Brann.

Ayden-Grifton Vs. Roanoke Rapids

3-A Playoff Opener Features Two Outstanding Pitchers

A-G's Tyrone Gay

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The playoff preliminaries are nearly complete for what may well be a stirring confrontation between two outstanding high school pitchers.

Come Thursday night at 7:30 Ayden-Grifton will take the field at Roanoke Rapids to do battle with the Yellow Jackets in the opening round of the state 3-A high school playoffs and runs should be at a premium.

The Yellow Jackets will start senior right-hander Chubby Butler, who was 12-3 this past season and averaged eight-to-10 strike outs and had an earned run average of under 1.50.

Opposing Butler on the mound for the Chargers will be sophomore left-hander Tyrone Gay. Gay, 9-4 this past season, struck out 142 batters in 87 2/3 innings pitched and had a 0.71 ERA.

Both pitchers are also rested, Butler having last pitched Friday night and Gay having not pitched for nearly two weeks.

"These are two real good pitchers," Ayden-Grifton coach Allan Wilson said. "Butler is a top notch pitcher. He's one of the top, if not the top, pitcher we've faced this year."

"And Tyrone has had a good year. The only thing I'm worried about is that he hasn't pitched in a while. He threw batting practice Thursday and threw off the sidemound (Monday). He was throwing the ball hard and he should be rested.

"The key for him is to keep runners off base. He has a tendency to walk batters and that gets him in trouble. But even when he's not been good this year he's thrown the ball decent."

"You can tell early how he's going to do. If he gets the first few batters out Thursday that could be the key."

Gay is getting a long look from East Carolina while Butler has already signed a letter-of-intent with the Pirates. Assistant coach Gary Overton has seen both players this season and is impressed.

"(Butler) has a good, strong, live arm. He's a strongly built kid, about 6-1, 185 and is more of a power pitcher," Overton said. "He isn't as smooth as Gay but I think he throws a little harder and his curve ball is a little better. He's probably a little craftier than Gay, but that's more due to his maturity and Gay being only a sophomore."

Wilson likens Butler to Charles B. Aycock pitcher Rusty Talton. Talton pitched a two-hitter against Ayden-Grifton in the teams' first meeting, won by the Chargers 2-1. Later in the season, however, he gave up nine hits but was the winning pitcher as the Falcons beat A-G, 4-3.

"(Butler) resembles Talton some. The reason I say that is they both throw the ball real hard. Butler has a better breaking ball, though."

Butler went the distance last Friday night in the Yellow Jackets' 6-5 win over Edenton, a win that clinched the Northeastern Conference title for Roanoke Rapids. Wilson was on hand for the game and left impressed with both Butler and the Yellow Jackets.

"They played well defensively and they have the kind of pitcher who can dominate a game," Wilson said. "He's pitched 15 games this season, so you know they rely on him heavily. And the fans really get excited with him pitching."

Wilson also noticed something else, however. "They didn't get to Butler until the fifth, but once they started getting runners on base he seemed to get a little wild. That could be a key to the game, if we can get runners on."

Toward that end, Wilson has had his team taking extra bunting practice. Says Wilson:

"If we can't hit him we're at least gonna bunt a few and try to make them field the ball."

Asked what the key to the game might be, Wilson said: "Right now, I just hope we can keep it close. They're the type of team that can score some runs. If Gay has a good night, we'll have a chance. But if Gay has trouble or struggles, we could be in for a long night."

Notes...
Roanoke Rapids' field is the biggest the Chargers will have seen this year. Centerfield is some 374-to-400 feet away. The field itself is well-worn and has a number of bad patches in the infield. The mound is also lower than the one at Ayden-Grifton, which could make a difference because Wilson says Gay likes a high mound.

North Stars Stay Alive In Cup Chase

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Over and over Glen Sonmor drilled it into them.

"Not tonight," he kept saying. "Not tonight." He told them in practice. He wrote it on the locker room blackboard. He reminded them between periods.

"They have to beat us once. But not tonight." "No team of Glen Sonmor's is ever going to let down, whatever the odds," said Bobby Smith, following the Minnesota North Stars' 4-2 National Hockey League Stanley Cup victory over the New York Islanders Tuesday night. "A great deal of leadership came from the coach. It gives you a good feeling."

The triumph, before 15,784 screaming fans at the Met Center, forced a fifth game in the best-of-seven series. The defending champion Islanders, who now lead the series 3-1, can wrap up their second Stanley Cup title Thursday night at the Nassau County Coliseum, but that goal is getting tougher.

"They played 60 minutes tonight like they played 20 in the last game," said New York's Bob Bourne, referring to a 7-5 win by the Islanders in Game 3 last Sunday. "It's going to be tough the rest of the way."

The North Stars, playing tenaciously in both ends of the rink, eliminated the mistakes which had cost them dearly in the first three games of the series. They beat the Islanders to loose pucks and didn't let people like Mike Bossy and Bryan Trottier have the run of the ice.

"We showed an awful lot of determination," said Sonmor, the North Stars' feisty coach. "We didn't get careless like we did in the other games. We've always had some lapses in our own end that they took advantage of. This time we didn't."

The tight-checking game was the complete opposite of Sunday's 7-5 shootout. Gord Lane, who rarely scores for the Islanders, gave them a 1-0 lead at 3:48 of the first period, but Minnesota countered on a power play goal by Craig Hartsburg at 11:34.

"He's not exactly Bossy's imitation," said Sonmor of Lane, who scored his first goal of the playoffs. "When that happened I said, 'What now?'"

The two teams also traded goals in the second period, Al

MacAdam scoring for the North Stars at 5:15 and Mike McEwen connecting on a powerplay at 7:37.

Then came the intense third period. Both teams were flying yet still cautious, perhaps waiting for that one break which would put them ahead.

Steve Payne, Minnesota's third-year winger, planted himself in the slot and waited for an opportunity. It came in the form of a Brad Maxwell slapshot from the point. Payne, left unattended by the normally attentive Islanders, deflected the puck past Billy Smith, giving the North Stars a 3-2 lead.

"Last year this team might have folded if it got down 3-0," said Payne, whose 17th goal of the playoffs tied Bossy for the lead. "Last year we upset Montreal and we made a big deal of it, like our job was finished."

"We don't have anything like that this year; nobody is satisfied and we won't be satisfied by losing in the finals. We're not the type of group to say, 'Well, we've got our one win.' We learned our lesson against Philadelphia last year."

But the tough part was just beginning. The Islanders, the North Stars knew, thrived on challenges and would come at them full-bore. Still, a 19-year old goalie stood his ground.

"As soon as we scored that third goal I knew it was up to me," said Don Beaupre, who allowed six goals in Game 2 back on Long Island. "We've always scored enough to beat them; this time we had to stop them."

Beaupre, a rookie who is now 4-1 in five playoff games, stopped 33 shots by the Islanders and kept the North Stars in control until Smith scored on a power play with just 1:48 remaining to seal the victory.

"As a team we proved we could beat them," said Beaupre, whom Sonmor said afterward would start on Thursday night. "For me personally, I proved I could stop them. And that's not easy."

Bossy and Trottier assisted on Lane's first-period goal, extending their own playoff records. Bossy now has 34 playoff points, while Trottier has scored in 17 consecutive playoff games. Payne, who assisted on MacAdam's goal, has 29 points in Stanley Cup play, which would have been good enough to tie Trottier's 1980 record had it not been for Bossy.

Look! Up In The Air

Dust Flies As Yankees Rally By Kansas City

By The Associated Press

Barry Foote and Gene Michael have added dirt and jackets to the list of things to throw during a baseball argument.

Bats, balls, gloves and hats have been used many times to register displeasure on the field, but the dust was literally flying in the midst of the New York Yankees comeback from a 5-0 deficit to a 6-5 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

All the runs were scored in the first five innings, with the Royals taking the lead as John Wathan drove in three runs with a double and a single.

Then the Yankees scored a run in the bottom of the third. Oscar Gamble triggered a three-run fourth with a homer and .115 hitter Jim Spencer slugged a towering two-run shot off the facade of the upper deck in right field for the tying and winning runs in the fifth.

Doug Bird, 3-0, and Ron Davis kept the Royals scoreless the rest of the way, but all the early run production didn't match the last four innings for fireworks.

First, Dale Ford thumbed Jim Frey, the Kansas City manager, for contesting a strike call in the top of the sixth. Frey stormed from the dugout, fired his cap to the ground, kicked it several times and repeatedly kicked dirt over Ford's trousers and home plate.

This was a standard baseball temper tantrum, but some of the dirt went into Yankee catcher Foote's eyes, so he grabbed a handful and flung it back at Frey. The dust storm even forced Willie Wilson to move away from the plate.

Ford said he chased Frey for charging to the top step of the dugout after he was told to cease his griping.

"If you can't argue a call, how can you fight for your team?" Frey asked.

That argument was mild compared to the one that erupted in the eighth. With Wathan on first, Frank White bunted and what resulted was reminiscent of the Houston-Philadelphia playoff argument last fall.

First, the Yankees thought they had doubled Wathan off first on a diving stab of the bunt by first baseman Dennis Werth, only to see the Royals wind up with runners at first and second when third base umpire Joe Brinkman ruled Werth trapped the ball.

"Foote was between me and the play," Ford explained. "The first thing I saw was Werth lying there with the ball in his glove."

When Brinkman overruled Ford's call, Michael erupted. He sailed his cap 60 feet down the third base line and took off his jacket, tossing it in the air.

"I thought Stick (Michael) was going for a knockout," Foote said.

"When they told me two guys were on base I didn't want to listen any more," said Michael, who played the game under protest because of Ford's original out call and also because he claimed Frey remained in the runway behind the Royals' dugout after being ejected.

Davis ultimately had the bases full with no outs but he fanned Wilson, retired U.L. Washington on a shallow fly ball and Willie Aikens on a grounder to end the threat. In the ninth, Davis struck out the side.

Red Sox 4, Mariners 0

Frank Tanana, returning to the power pitching style he used to feature, won his first game in five decisions for Boston with a five-hitter, while Carl Yastrzemski doubled home two runs and Tony Perez hit a two-run homer against Seattle.

Tanana, acquired from California last winter, struck out nine and walked only two for his 25th career shutout.

Tigers 14, Rangers 1

Dan Schatzeder pitched a four-hitter and got plenty of hitting support as Detroit romped over Texas.

Tom Brookens slugged a three-run homer, Richie Hebner hit a two-run triple, Al Cowens and Champ Summers both had two run-scoring singles and Lance Parrish singled home two runs to highlight the Tigers' 16-hit attack.

Indians 7, Angels 3

Bo Diaz walloped a three-run homer and Dan Spillner scattered six hits over eight innings in Cleveland's victory over California.

Brewers 4, Twins 3

Cecil Cooper and Ted Simmons homered and slump-plagued Ed Romero delivered a key double as Milwaukee held off Minnesota despite being out 13-8.

Cooper's two-run homer in the third gave Minnesota a 3-1 lead and Romero's two-out double gave the Brewers an insurance run they needed when John Castino hit a two-run homer in the ninth.

Orioles 6, A's 5

Eddie Murray triggered a two-run rally with a leadoff homer in the seventh inning as Baltimore won for the seventh straight time and sent Oakland to its sixth consecutive defeat.

Following Murray's homer, John Lowenstein singled and later scored on Doug DeCinces' single that gave the Orioles a 6-4 lead. A homer by Wayne Gross in the eighth cut the final deficit to one.

Blue Jays 9, White Sox 5

Otto Velez had a run-scoring triple and a solo homer to pace Toronto's 11-hit attack that snapped its three-game losing streak and Chicago's three-game winning streak.

Kevin Loughery, former New Jersey Nets coach, was named head coach of the Atlanta Hawks yesterday.

Baird Signs 4 Players

East Carolina University has announced the signing of four baseball players to grants-in-aid.

Two of the incoming player are pitchers. They are 6-1, 185-pound righthander Chubby Butler of Roanoke Rapids, and 6-0, 175-pound righthander Bobby Davidson from Fayetteville's E.E. Smith High School.

The other two include Johnny Banks, a 5-11, 165-pound infielder from Garner High School and Craig Brown, a 6-2, 185-pound outfielder from Goldsboro. Brown will also be a member of the ECU football team.

Bullets Just Miss Perfection In Romp

CHOCOWINITY — Carl Ange and Clarence Thomas combined to come just one batter away from a perfect game and Jamesville erupted for eight runs in the second inning to whip Chocowinity, 14-0, Tuesday night in a Tobacco Belt Conference game.

Chocowinity's one runner came in the fourth inning on a bloop single off Ange that landed between the centerfielder and second baseman.

Ange, who struck out nine and did not walk a batter, was relieved after the fourth inning by Thomas. Thomas struck out the three batters he faced in the fifth before the game was called.

The win leaves Jamesville at 16-3, one game behind Bear Grass, which defeated Manteo, 8-1, Tuesday night, and one-half game ahead of Manteo. The Bullets have one game remaining, against Columbia Thursday night.

Bear Grass also has one game left, at Mattamuskeet Friday. Manteo has two games remaining, against Chocowinity and Bath.

In games between the trio, Bear Grass has won three of four, Jamesville two of four and Manteo one of four.

In last night's game, Jamesville took a 1-0 lead after the first inning and then jumped on Chocowinity for eight runs in the second inning to put the game away.

Tom Fortenberry led off the inning with a walk. Then, with one gone, Kevin Waters walked and both runners moved up a base on steals. Ricky Bell then ripped a single to drive home Fortenberry and Waters.

After another out, Ange was hit by a pitch. A double steal left Bell at third and Ange at second before Greg Sullivan reached on an error to score Bell. Keith Waters then walked and was lifted for pinch runner Carlton Rodgers, who immediately stole second.

Jeff Rogers then singled home two runs, Fortenberry followed with a single to drive home another run and Rex Bell ended the scoring with a two-RBI double and Jamesville led, 9-0.

The Bullets added another run to their lead in the third and scored twice in the fourth and three times in the fifth before the game was called on the 10-run rule.

Ricky Bell was two for two for the Bullets and Rogers was two for three. Both had two RBIs.

Bibby One Hit From Perfect Game

By The Associated Press
He retired 27 straight batters, but Jim Bibby's name will not be entered in the record book among those of men like Cy Young, Jim Bunning or Catfish Hunter, who threw perfect games.

Terry Harper of the Atlanta Braves saw to that.

Bibby, the big Pittsburgh Pirates right-hander, yielded an opposite-field single off the end of Harper's bat to lead off the game. Then, he retired the next 27 men in order with 93 pitches, an average of only 3.32 pitches for each of the 28 men he faced.

He struck out three in the 1-hour 57-minute game and ended a three-game Pittsburgh losing streak with a 5-0 victory over the Braves Tuesday night.

"His control was incredible," Pirates catcher Steve Nicosia said. "I just sat outside, and he hit the mitt 95 percent of the time."

The 36-year-old Bibby has one other one-hitter in his career, in 1973 as a Texas Ranger. It came about a month before he threw the only no-hitter of his career, but Bibby said he was better on Tuesday.

"I think I was a little more in command tonight than the time I threw the no-hitter. I walked two batters in that game," said Bibby, who won his first game since shutting out the New York Mets 10-0 on April 29. After an 0-2 start, Bibby is 2-2.

Only 5,514 attended at Three Rivers Stadium, but they cheered Bibby loudly after his near-perfect performance, and the 6-foot-5, 250-pounder was swarmed by his teammates.

"I knew it was a one-hitter," Bibby said. "I knew guys hadn't been getting on base, but my main purpose was to win the ballgame."

Bibby got all the support he needed from Nicosia, who rapped a two-run double in the sixth inning off Braves knuckleballer Phil Niekro, 2-2. A third run in the sixth scored on an error when Bibby's ground ball went between the legs of third baseman Biff Pocoroba.

Omar Moreno also drove in a run with a second-inning single, and Lee Lacy singled home another in the fifth.

Reds 5, Cubs 0
Tom Seaver claimed the 250th pitching victory of his career, going five innings while allowing no runs on two hits as the Reds won their seventh in a row. Seaver now has won five of his six decisions.

Cincinnati scored all five of its runs in the sixth, two on a bases-loaded single by Ray Knight and two more on a double by Harry Spilman, who pinch hit for Seaver.

The loss was the Cubs' seventh consecutively. Chicago now has won just five of 31 ballgames this year. Rick Reuschel, the victim of all five Cincinnati runs, took his fifth loss in six decisions.

Cardinals 15, Astros 12
Garry Templeton and Tony Scott each drove in four runs, and St. Louis twice scored five times in one inning to outlast the Astros.

George Hendrick's third hit of the game, a run-scoring single, capped a three-run rally in the sixth inning snapped a 9-9 tie and put St. Louis ahead for good.

The Cardinals scored five more runs in the seventh, equalling their run production of the fourth inning, to salt the game away and make a winner of 42-year-old Jim Kaat, 2-0, the third Cardinals' pitcher.

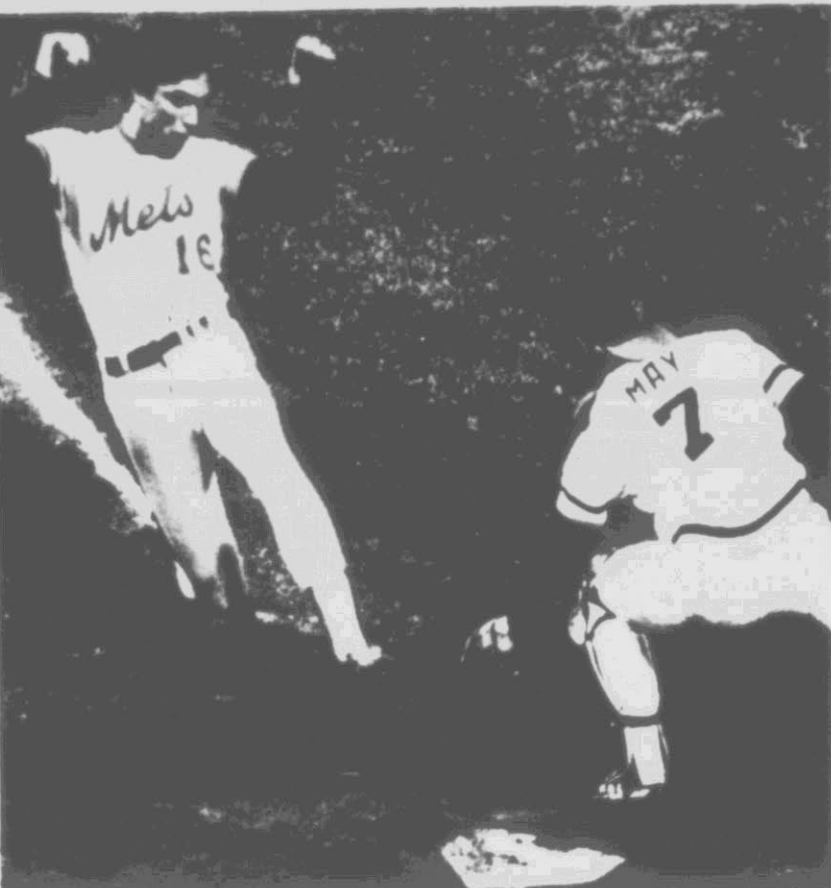

Don Sutton started for Houston but lasted just 32-3 innings after allowing seven runs on eight hits.

Padres 3, Expos 1
Rick Wise, sidelined since May 3 with a sore elbow, limited Montreal to one run on four hits through seven innings, and Ruppert Jones slugged a two-run single in the fifth inning to power San Diego over the Expos. Montreal now has lost nine of its past 11 games.

Wise, 2-3, walked one batter and struck out two before leaving for a pinch hitter in the seventh. Gary Lucas finished up for San Diego and earned his sixth save.

The Padres trailed 1-0 after Gary Carter's second-inning homer, but San Diego scored all three of its runs in the fifth on Jones' double following an RBI single by Ozzie Smith off loser Bill Gullickson, 1-4.

Phillies 3, Dodgers 2
Garry Maddox slapped a bases-loaded double in the third inning to snap a 1-1 tie and give the Phillies their second straight victory over the Dodgers.

Ball Beats The Met

Kingman. Waiting for the ball is San Francisco catcher Milt May. (AP Laserphoto)

Dick Ruthven, 6-1, tossed a seven-hitter, striking out four and walking three as Philadelphia beat Los Angeles' Bob Welch, 2-2, who lasted seven innings.

Dusty Baker homered for the Dodgers in the third. Giants 4, Mets 1
Darrell Evans' run-scoring single with two out in the sixth inning broke a 1-1 tie and helped San Francisco hand the Mets their ninth straight loss.

Boston Not Place To Be — Russell, Larry Bird Agree

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Larry Bird borrowed an old W.C. Fields line while he and his Celtics teammates were being honored at a Boston civic reception Monday as the new National Basketball Association champions.

"I'd rather be back home in French Lick, Ind.," the youthful star from Indiana State told a shocked gathering of some 100,000 officials and fans on Boston's City Hall Plaza.

He found a sympathizer in Bill Russell, a Celtics' legend. "I haven't read the story in the paper yet," Russell said, "but I can understand it."

"Boston is the most insensitive, discourteous city I have ever seen. I have no regrets over the years I played and coached there. I played for the Celtics. I didn't play for Boston."

"I felt I was surrounded by a wall of unkindness. I like people, so I could not adapt to that kind of unkindness. I isolated myself from the city."

Last year the 6-foot-10 center was named the greatest player in the history of the NBA. In his 13 years with the Celtics, he helped win 11 NBA championships. Later he served as coach, then moved to the Seattle SuperSonics, where he coached and became general manager.

He now lives in Seattle, from where he directs a variety of enterprises. He is widely sought for TV commercials. He is a pro basketball commentator for CBS-TV. Recently, an abstract painting he did by bouncing a basketball on a large canvas on the floor sold for $44,000 as an aid to the U.S. Olympic Fund.

Involved in many charities, Russell was lured to New York Tuesday to help kickoff a "Fitness 3" program designed to educate America on the benefits of good health through proper exercise and diet.

Newsman preferred to talk to the frank, outspoken former basketball star on other subjects — the flap over Rick Barry's so-called racist remark on a CBS telecast a week ago, for instance, and Larry Bird's putdown of the city of Boston.

Russell and Barry were color commentators and Gary Bender the play-by-play announcer for the fifth game of the NBA final playoffs last Tuesday in Boston. The Celtics had a 26-point lead with about a quarter to go when the network decided to show some old film to spark up the program.

A faded film of Russell as a member of the gold medal U.S. Olympic team in Melbourne, Australia, in 1956 was flashed on the screen.

"Who do you think that fellow is?" Bender asked, referring to the beapole figure of a younger Bill Russell.

"I don't know," replied Barry impishly. "It looks like some fool over there with a big watermelon mouth."

If somebody giggled, it wasn't Bill Russell. He was fairly dour the rest of the way. When another 1956 shot went on the screen, Barry said, "That's Russell." "No, it isn't," Bill snapped. "I don't drink beer." It was teammate K.C. Jones.

Russell refused to make an issue of the incident but Barry, realizing the possible offense, later phoned to apologize. "I didn't appreciate the remark at all," Bill said.

Now back to Monday when Boston's citizenry turned out in masses to pay tribute to its new champions. Bird was picked by the players to respond to the tribute of a city which has been beset by fiscal and labor problems.

Bird dispensed with the formal flowery rhetoric.

"I spent 10 minutes in the mayor's office with all those people going around getting autographs," he said, "and now I know why Boston is going bankrupt."

It was then Bird that Bird added that he'd rather be home in French Lick.

Reports said there was a mixed chorus of cheers and boos. "The trouble with Boston goes beyond its money problems and its racial attitudes," Russell said. "Did you ever drive a car in Boston? They're the most inconsiderate drivers in the world."

"Boston is a city of tribalism. There are all these tribes — people, many coming from overseas, who were poor and struggling at first but who now have made their stake. They want to hold on to what they've got."

"It's hard to explain, but this may give you an idea. When Carl Yastrzemski (a Polish American) broke in with the Red Sox, somebody wrote in the paper. 'That Yaz is good. Too bad he's not one of us.'"

Third Bettenhausen Set To Start At Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Twenty years after his father was killed while practicing for the Indianapolis 500 and 13 years after his older brother made his debut here, Tony Bettenhausen is making his first start at Indy.

His father's name was Melvin, but in racing circles he was known by his nickname, Tony.

The youngest son of the two-time national driving champion says being named after his father has been a problem.

"I think it put some pressure on me," he said Tuesday. "It's a matter that you have a famous father that ran here 14 times, was a national champion twice and that you've got two brothers that are very good race drivers. It means people expect a little bit more from you, I think."

Bettenhausen, 29, qualified his McLaren-Cosworth at an average speed of 187.013 mph last weekend, good for the sixth row of the 11-row, 33-car field.

"I knew I was going to qualify this year from the moment we ran the first day or two in practice," Bettenhausen said. "I knew we had a good car, a good crew. And I felt pretty confident that if the driver didn't mess up we'd be in pretty good shape."

Being in the race here is something Bettenhausen has been aiming at ever since he began driving stock cars in 1969.

"I watched my father run here for the first time in 1957. Since then I guess I've been here for 18 to 20 races. The big break was when I was driving stock cars down South. The last few years I've been watching my brother (Gary) race here, and last year I worked on the pit crew of my father-in-law (Jim McElreath).

"All the waiting was worth it after the way I felt when I qualified," he said.

When he qualified, two of the first people to congratulate him were Gary and their other brother, Merle, who drove Indy-style cars as well as sprint and midgets before losing an arm in a racing accident.

"Gary and Merle were both on the pit walls, rooting me on during my qualification run. They wanted me to do a good job. That helped a lot. There's a lot of pressure on you at this place, especially when you're trying to do your best," said Bettenhausen.

Gary, 39, last year's U.S. Auto Club's dirt car champion, also will be in Sunday's race. He'll be starting his 13th Indy 500 and hoping to improve on last year's finish when he began the race in the 32nd position and finished third. That was his best finish since he began driving at the Speedway.

"I feel very, very fortunate to be in the situation I'm in," Tony said. "There are a lot of race drivers all over the world, and since this race began only 535 have made it into the race. And that goes back 70 years. I'm very pleased to be a part of the group that has competed here."

As all the other drivers, the Bettenhausens have had a break from driving this week. The track is closed except for Thursday's final pre-race practice.

Tony speaks like a veteran when he discusses those tense moments after the drivers are told to start their engines for the race which had a record purse of more than $1.5 million last year.

"You've got many things to concentrate on as the race begins," he said. "You think about not making a mistake in front of the cars behind you. You've also got to be careful not to overrun the engine on a shift at the start. There are a lot of things to remember, but we hope to put it all together."

Bettenhausen tried to make the field here last year but his car was bumped from the starting lineup by a faster car.

Vincent Growls, Rose Wins.....

The final Rampant run came over in the third. Barnes led off with a single, stole second, and raced on home when the ball, overthrown at second, got past the centerfielder.

Rose offered another threat in the fifth, leaving runners on second and third, and left a man at second in the sixth.

Hunt, meanwhile, was fairly quiet until the fourth when he broke the ice. The Warriors left a man on second in the first and on third in the third.

Charles Simpson led off the fourth with a single and moved up on an out and a passed ball. Scott Barnes then singled Simpson over to cut the lead to 5-1.

After two were out and the rain delayed the game in the fifth, Hunt got to Williams for two more in the sixth. Simpson led off with a double to center, and Randy Deans reached on an error, scoring Simpson. Pinchrunner Tim Skinner was sacrificed to third, scoring on a two-out single by Bradberry.

But Barnes followed that up by throwing out Bradberry at second on the next play and the final threat of the Warriors was over.

Douglas and Barnes led the Rose hitting with two each, while Simpson had two for Hunt. The Warriors fell to 13-9 overall and 7-6 in the conference with the defeat.

Rose is scheduled to complete the regular season on Thursday at Elizabeth City, taking on Northeastern in a 4 p.m. game. Northern Nash will travel to Hunt for its season ender.

Campo Says Colony To Win Belmont

NEW YORK (AP) — Trainer Johnny Campo is no expert on diets. But "The Fat Man" says the Belmont Stakes is going to be Pleasant Colony's "cup of tea."

Campo, a 5-foot-7, 250-pound New Yorker, made another of his famous predictions Tuesday, all but guaranteeing that the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner would become the 12th winner of the Triple Crown once the Belmont Stakes was made official on June 6.

"He's a cinch," Campo said at a New York restaurant Tuesday where he was receiving a silver replica of the Kentucky Derby Trophy from Churchill Downs resident manager Bill Rudy. "He's gonna be one-to-five ... This is his cup of tea, a mile and a half. He's gonna play with them."

Campo shocked the racing world by predicting that Pleasant Colony would win the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, the first two jewels of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown. The colt then made good on his trainer's boasts.

The rotund conditioner admits he already is looking beyond Pleasant Colony's run in the Belmont.

"This horse is gonna get better by the fall," Campo said of the late-foaled His Majesty offspring. "He ain't good yet, wait till he learns how to run. He doesn't know how to run yet."

The horse has been tagged as an "Ugly Duckling" by the media, a remark that seems to irritate Campo.

"He's a beautiful horse," the trainer insisted. "He has a great head and he can run like hell. You have to remember he was foaled on May 4, so in thoroughbred terms, he is like a teen-ager, not filled out fully all over his bones."

But the Ugly Duckling definitely runs like a beauty, especially with jockey Jorge Velasquez aboard. That's a fact of which the veteran trainer likes to remind everyone.

"You know what's remarkable about the Preakness," Campo said. "Jorge put his stick away and he started to run. How many jockeys have that much confidence. What makes a great rider is the last eighth of a mile."

Campo said that Velasquez could have gone to the whip a lot more than he did in the Preakness, but the Panamanian rider choose not to. And it paid off.

"He could have beat that horse, beat him 20 times," Campo said in reference to Pleasant Colony's stretch duel with pacesetter Bold Ego. "But as soon as he put the stick away, he (Pleasant Colony) was like a fresh horse coming out of the gate."

"What makes a great rider is the last eighth of a mile, and knowing what to do then," Campo said.

And if Pleasant Colony does what Velasquez wants in the last eighth of a mile of the 1½-mile Belmont, he'll be exactly what Campo has been calling him all along, "a great horse."

As Deadline Nears, New Proposal Offered

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal mediator, looking for signs of peace while baseball drifts dangerously toward a May 29 players' strike deadline, sees progress in the latest talks that culminated in a new proposal by the owners.

"I'm always pleasantly surprised when there's any kind of movement. It beats treading water," said Kenneth E. Moffett, who scheduled Tuesday's meeting and plans another one for Thursday morning.

Ray Grebey, chief bargaining agent for the 26 major league clubs, said the new proposal was not a compromise but an alternative. "If they agree, it will be included in the contract. If not, then the contract stands as written. We think the responses are meaningful to the concerns raised by the Players Association."

Dan Quisenberry, player representative for the Kansas City Royals who sat in on Tuesday's bargaining session, characterized the offer as "semi-different. Essentially, it's the same proposal as before."

But he did see a ray of hope in the owners' movement. "It's nice to see that there's such a thing as negotiations," he said, although he added that "they did say it was a 'take it or leave it offer.'"

After negotiators met for 80 minutes Tuesday, Moffett told waiting reporters in the hallway outside the Players Association office: "The owners made a proposal and the union is taking a day to examine it."

Moffett said the written proposal was a good sign. "The fact that we're still meeting is a good sign," he said.

In a press release issued a couple of hours after the meeting, Grebey detailed the new proposal:

- Ranking free agents would have the right to negotiate with more than 13 clubs if selected by them in the stipulated number of rounds.

- There was a change in the performance criteria used to classify ranking free agents, the ones who would require player compensation.

For batters, it would go beyond plate appearances and include batting average, on-base percentage, home runs and runs batted in. For pitchers, it would include innings pitched, victories, won-lost percentage, saves, earned run average and strikeouts. Fielding figures also would be used for catchers and infielders.

Stone On 21-Day Disabled List

BALTIMORE (AP) — Steve Stone was prepared for the decision, so he was ready with a wisecrack to ease the pain.

"It's going to be hard to win 30 now," the Baltimore right-hander said after it was officially announced Tuesday night that he had been placed on the 21-day disabled list, retroactive to May 16.

Stone, 33, had talked about the possibility of winning 30 games after a remarkable 25-7 record in 1980 earned him the American League's Cy Young Award.

But he has struggled most of the season with an ailment that has been diagnosed as tendinitis in the right forearm. He has a 2-3 record, with a 4.72 earned run average and no complete games.

"I've only felt 50 percent of myself all year," Stone said. "Going out there really hurts the club because they have to bring in a long reliever every time I start."

"You don't think about injuries until they happen," he said, "and then you realize how easily you can be injured. I wouldn't want this to linger all year. It's best to take care of it now and get it over with. There's still a long way to go."

Stone will not be permitted to throw for 10 days, and his recovery period is expected to last more than three weeks.

His therapy will include whirlpool treatments, an application of cortizone cream with an ultra-sound machine, and the use of an electronic muscle stimulator which will give his elbow "a workout without throwing."

"I've had tendinitis off and on," Stone said. "It's an occupational hazard, but you usually can throw through it. I've never had it in this spot before, which so affects the curveball. In the last two games, it started to affect all my pitches."

To replace Stone on the roster, the Orioles recalled pitcher Steve Luebber from their Rochester affiliate in the International League. Luebber, 31, with previous major league experience at Minnesota and Toronto, has a 2-3 record with a 2.11 ERA and four saves as a long reliever.

"Well, we now have four starters," said Manager Earl Weaver, who has been using five while trying to decide which one would be dropped from the rotation.

Either Dave Ford or Sammy

Stewart is expected to be pressed into service as a spot starter because of a doubleheader in Detroit on Sunday. A similar situation won't arise again until the Orioles face another doubleheader in Oakland on June 9.

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) —

The World 600 practice trials began Tuesday at Charlotte

Motor Speedway as Winston started working for Wednes-

Sunday's big race.

More than half the field of

Wednesday's Caesar's World for the money was at the speedway Tuesday to shake down the car and test suspension settings for the 1.5-mile tri-oval.

Fastest times of the day went to Neil Bonnett, Hueytown, Ala., with the Wood Brothers' Ford. Darrell Waltrip, Franklin, Tenn., driving Junior Johnson's Buick was close behind, and Dale Earnhardt of Kannapolis, N.C. put his Pontiac through its paces for the third best time of the day.

Bonnett was clocked at 158.916 miles per hour around the oval, while Waltrip hit 158.823 and Earnhardt put on a 158.544 performance.

Closely following in times were Harry Gant, Taylorsville, N.C. driving a Pontiac, and Bobby Allison, in a Buick.

How Tar Heels Voted In U.S. House And Senate

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes May 7-13.

HOUSE
CREDIT TO CORPORATIONS — The House voted, 231 for and 166 against, to cut spending for the Export-Import Bank. In part, the bank provides taxpayer-subsidized credit to U.S. corporations doing business abroad. This vote lowered by $826 million the Treasury's FY 1981 obligation for loans and loan guarantees. It came during debate on an appropriations bill (HR 3512) later sent to the Senate.

Supporter David Obey, D-Wisc., said that when budget cuts are hurting the poor "there is no reason for us to not ask Boeing, GE and the other privileged characters in our society to share the load."

Opponent Norman Dicks, D-Wash., said the bank spurs the U.S. economy and noted that "the British, the French, the Germans, and the Japanese all subsidize the exports from their countries."

Members voting "yea" wanted to cut funding of the Eximbank.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Eugene Johnston, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Rep. Stephen Neal, D-5, voted "nay."

Rep. James Martin, R-9, did not vote.

FOREIGN AID — By a vote of 272 for and 126 against, the House reduced from $540 million to $534.6 million the FY 1981 U.S. contribution to the International Development Association, the window of the World Bank that makes interest-free loans to the poorest countries. The vote came during debate on HR 3512 (see preceding vote).

Supporter John Rousselot, R-Calif., said he did not like the U.S. making interest-free loans to the Third World when "our people at home are carrying mortgages that have interest charges of 12, 14, and 15 percent."

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said of Rousselot: "The gentleman from California is a brave guy. Anybody can cut this particular area. It has no constituency. He knows it. If you want to demagogue it, go ahead, demagogue it."

Members voting "yea" favored a $6 million cut in U.S. funding of World Bank loans to poor countries.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea." Martin did not vote.

SENATE
TOBACCO — By a vote of 56 for and 42 against, the Senate killed an amendment to cut budget authority for tobacco price supports. The amendment sought to eliminate $79 million, the projected outlay for federal purchases of tobacco crops, according to senators opposed to the subsidy. The amendment was offered to the FY 1982 budget resolution (S Con Res 116) later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who voted to block the cut, said, "The federal government gets three times as much from this program as the tobacco farmers earn from it themselves."

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who sponsored the cut, said, "The U.S. government has no business being in the tobacco business... David Stockman agrees with me that we do subsidize tobacco and that it ought to stop."

Senators voting "yea" opposed cutting price supports for tobacco farmers.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

SOCIAL SECURITY — The Senate rejected, 42 for and 49 against, an amendment to S Con Res 116 (see preceding vote) restoring a projected $7.9 billion cut in FY 1982 budget authority for Social Security and other federal retirement programs. The measure sought to continue giving Social Security recipients and federal retirees annual cost-of-living hikes based on the Consumer Price Index (CPI). Its rejection left intact a plan to base hikes on the wage index or CPI, whichever is lower. In recent years wages rose at a slower rate than prices. Last year the wage index was 9.9 percent and the CPI 11.2 percent.

Sponsor David Riegle, D-Mich., said, "The president made a solemn pledge that the Reagan budget cutting would not cut any money from...safety net programs including Social Security."

Opponent Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said using the Consumer Price Index to compute Social Security hikes is unfair to taxpayers because "it overstates inflation and it overcompensates."

Senators voting "nay" supported cuts in FY 1982 budget authority that would translate into lower cost-of-living hikes for those receiving Social Security and federal pensions.

REVIVAL

A revival will be conducted by Rev. Roy Ennis at Ayden Deliverance Center, Lee and Venters Streets, May 21-24. A prayer for the sick will be offered at each of these services. Services begin at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

East and Helms voted "nay."

BUDGET PRIORITIES — The Senate rejected, 30 for and 55 against, an amendment cutting $200 million in FY 1982 budget authority for water resources projects and adding that amount to mass transit and education programs. The vote occurred during debate on S Con Res 116 (see preceding votes).

Sponsor Daniel Moynihan, D-NY, complained that current budget priorities hurt people programs at the same time spending "on water resources in the western part of the nation continues unabated."

Opponent Peter Domenici, R-N.M., said that after needed reform of federal water policies is accomplished "there will be a need for more rather than less funding to meet the water crisis we face."

wanted less budget authority for water projects and more for education and mass transits.

East and Helms voted "nay."

War Declared On Gypsy Moth

GYPSY MOTH — Worried homeowners from Maine to Maryland are declaring war this month on the gypsy moth, shown here, a voracious pest that munched more than 5 million acres of foliage in the Northeast last year. (AP Laserphoto)

By MIKE STANTON
Associated Press Writer
BOURNE, Mass. (AP) — Worried homeowners from Maine to Maryland are declaring war this month on the gypsy moth, a voracious pest that munched more than 5 million acres of foliage in the Northeast last year.

"Many states recorded all-time highs last year and most are predicting the infestation will be as bad or worse this year," says Dr. Charles Schwalbe, director of a U.S. Department of Agriculture center here that studies gypsy moths.

Gypsy moth eggs begin hatching into caterpillars in late April. The caterpillars do their destruction through late June, stripping forests of leaves, weakening and sometimes killing trees.

Then they turn into moths, laying eggs in July and August to set the stage for the next year's onslaught.

"I'm afraid we're some ways away from being able to manage them in the Northeast," said Schwalbe. "One of the major problems in dealing with gypsy moths is their unpredictability."

Last year, caterpillars feasted on 5.1 million acres, almost double the area defoliated in any year since government record-keeping began in 1924.

Scientists are at a loss to fully explain the sudden increase — or do much about it.

"There are more than 100 natural controls that all interact to determine the gypsy moth population," said Dr. Michael Birmingham, a state forester in New York, where 2.4 million acres were defoliated last year.

The most important control, says Birmingham, is a virus that strikes when the caterpillars run out of food and begin to starve.

"There are a number of effective controls, but unfortunately man is not one of them," he added.

The moths have infested the six New England states plus New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and small parts of Delaware and Maryland.

Carried by the wind, Schwalbe says they are spreading gradually toward Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio.

And carried unwittingly by people moving to other parts of the country, gypsy moths have been detected in eight other states: California, Illinois, Michigan, Nebraska, North Carolina, Oregon, Washington and Wisconsin.

By using special traps to detect gypsy moths in the early stage of infestation, Schwalbe said the USDA has successfully eradicated every infestation outside the Northeast except one in central Michigan.

The government's strategy is to contain gypsy moths in the Northeast until the means to exterminate such large numbers are developed, probably within another decade or two, Schwalbe said.

The most effective weapons against large infestations are chemical and biological pesticides. But authorities concerned about the environmental impact of chemical spraying are directing long-range efforts toward natural control.

At his Cape Cod laboratory, Schwalbe and a staff of 60 produce more than 60,000 caterpillars a day for various experiments.

One popular method of natural control involves unleashing parasites such as wasps and flies to prey on eggs or caterpillars. Another focuses on disrupting the mating of moths to reduce the following year's population.

To detect and measure moth populations, USDA researchers set out thousands of triangular cardboard traps baited with the female moth's sex lure, pheromone. Pheromone can be used to confuse male moths so they cannot find the female, which cannot fly. But the technique is not effective in fighting a large-scale infestation, Schwalbe said.

Schwalbe also is experimenting with sterilizing male moths with gamma rays and then releasing them to compete with fertile males.

Developing natural ways to fight the pests requires time and patience, and waiting is difficult for a homeowner whose yard is overrun.

"People will use 100 times more pesticide on a tree than we would in our aerial spraying," says Frank Pagliaro, a New Jersey state entomologist in Trenton.

Worried about widespread spraying on reservoirs and other creatures, such as the honey bee, states are moving toward what the government calls "integrated pest management." IPM is a combination of spray and natural controls suited to an area's environment, magnitude of infestation and what local residents want.

Pagliaro said officials must run a gauntlet of public opinion when determining how to treat a specific area. "A mother will complain that the caterpillars are all over her house and giving her children a rash and ask why we aren't spraying," he said. "But then a woman who is pregnant calls and says she doesn't want her neighborhood sprayed because she's worried about the effect on her baby."

The increase in the gypsy moth problem in recent years can be traced in part to man, says Birmingham. Moths lay eggs on such things as camping vehicles and lawn furniture that are subsequently moved from the Northeast, Schwalbe says.

The gypsy moth also has man to thank for its introduction to this country. In 1868, French naturalist Leopold Trouvelot brought several egg clusters from southern France to his home in Medford, Mass., near Boston, and tried to crossbreed them with silkworm moths to produce a better silkworm. Instead, some gypsy moths escaped when a specimen jar fell from an open window and, over the next century, grew into an annual springtime nuisance.

Season For Car Rusting

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Rust action on cars is 20-30 times greater in spring than winter, says a Cornell University expert.

Rust and corrosion, due partly to road salt, speed up as the temperature rises, says Lynne Irwin, leader of the university's Local Roads Program.

Cold air actually delays the oxidation process. People who keep their cars in heated garages in winter compound the situation, Irwin says, "especially if road salt is not washed away completely."

To prevent damage, he recommends washing of a car's underside thoroughly — especially behind wheel wells and other enclosed areas such as doors.

He says car durability is affected greatly by the amount and timing of washing and maintenance. He recommends aiming a garden hose or powerful car wash spray at the underbody of cars regularly.

If you use a commercial car wash instead, he says, ask if it uses fresh or recycled water — as recycled water may contain significant amounts of road salt.

If surface rust is too deep, the auto's body should be sanded down to bare metal, primed and repainted to retard further corrosion.

The 30-year-old program Irwin heads conducts research and provides technical help and training to local highway officials.

Mural Causes Controversy In China

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — China's censors have boarded up part of a controversial avant-garde mural because two of its 100 figures are nude — an unmistakable warning in the latest campaign to restrict artistic and intellectual freedom.

The exotic mural, called "Song of Life," has been a barometer of creative expression in China ever since it was unveiled with great fanfare at Peking's new airport in January 1980.

"With vivid colors and sensual lines it depicts the traditional water-splashing festival of the Dai people in Yunnan Province near Burma.

The two graceful, bathing nudes immediately caused an uproar, although the mural was acclaimed by art critics and the official government news agency said it was "a celebration of freedom and happiness," reminiscent of the work of Gauguin.

China's top leader, Deng Xiaoping, saw the mural and had no objections, according to sources in art circles.

The opposition gathered momentum among prudish bureaucrats and some offended Dai leaders. The artist, Yuan Yunsheng, was asked by a high party official if he would paint panties on the nudes. He refused.

Last spring a curtain was dropped over the 20-foot panel containing the nudes.

Last fall the curtain was lifted during a brief period of artistic laissez faire. In October China's leading newspaper quoted the late great actor Zhao Dan as saying, "Literature and art is the business of writers and artists. If the party controls literature and art too tightly, there will be no hope for literature and art. It is finished."

The political wind has again shifted and China is now experiencing tighter controls on individual expression, including art, literature, music and politics. Strict discipline and obedience to the party is demanded, individualism and dissent are not tolerated.

Early in March workmen covered the offending panel with sheets of plywood and painted it white.

Artist Yuan Yunsheng, 43, has been through this before. Years ago he was banished to the countryside for his bourgeois, apolitical art. Today he shrugs philosophically.

"After more than a year of this controversy," he says, "I really can't be too concerned. I just want to paint."

He says, however, that his artist friends and students are saddened by the decisive boarding up and consider it a bad omen.

Yuan says he can still paint whatever he wants in his studio, including abstracts and nudes, "but no one will hang them in public."

Artists today, he said, are answerable to many low-level bureaucrats who know nothing about art but want to safeguard their jobs and follow the party directives to the letter.

When in doubt, he says, they would shrink from controversy and insist on an innocuous landscape.

For his part, Yuan and his students are heading off to remote Gansu province to study ancient Buddhist cave murals renowned for their nudes "and draw nourishment and inspiration from my ancestors."

Field Day Held At Conley

The Pitt County JROTC Field Day was held last week at D.H. Conley High School.

Cadets from North Pitt and Conley competed in events such as regulation drill, color guard, ranger P.T. test and individual fancy drill.

The Conley cadets won six of the seven events and took the Sparky McGaskill trophy, which is based on total points.

'Congressional Club' Joins Fight Against Gas Tax

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — As wealthy industrialist David Stedman unleashed another group opposed to Gov. Jim Hunt's gas tax increase proposal Tuesday, Democratic legislators lashed out against the entrance of the conservative Congressional Club into the battle.

House Budget Chairman Al Adams, D-Wake, said the Congressional Club will use "the same distortions, half-truths and outright misrepresentations we saw in the last campaign" against Hunt's proposal to increase the state gas tax by 3 cents a gallon in an effort to beef up the state's dwindling Highway Fund.

Stedman said his Concerned Citizens for No Tax Increase Inc. is independent of other groups, including the Congressional Club, which was organized to pursue the political objectives of U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

"The issue before us is not good roads at all. Everybody wants good roads. Good roads are a high priority with our group," said Stedman, a conservative Democrat who has sponsored radio spots against the tax increase.

"The real issue is taxation," he said. "The question is, 'Do we want to raise taxes to pay for good roads or do we want to reduce expenses to pay for them?'"

Stedman said $215 million could be generated for the state's highway program next year by transferring an anticipated $131 million general tax surplus, postponing new road construction and making other savings within the Department of Transportation.

Democratic state chairman Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, told reporters that the Congressional Club has "misled the public." And he said the gas-tax proposal has "become a partisan issue."

"They have no workable plan, no alternative," he said. "The governor's plan is fair and workable."

Plan Cutting 394 Jobs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Department of Transportation officials say 394 jobs will be cut when the new fiscal year begins July 1, displacing about 196 state employees.

The job cutbacks are designed to save about $5.5 million in the upcoming fiscal year, said DOT personnel officer Banks Clark.

Clark said 130 of the 196 employees losing their jobs have found jobs elsewhere. He said 120 of those have been given other jobs within the department, five have gone to other state departments and five have found work outside state government.

Clark said some remaining in the department have been promoted to higher-paying jobs, while others have taken lateral transfers and some have accepted lower-paying jobs. He said no breakdown is yet available on how many are in higher-paying jobs.

He said 263 of the jobs being eliminated are field jobs in construction and pre-construction work. The remaining 131 are administrative jobs, including clerks, accountants and other positions, Clark said.

DOT officials said the cuts will leave the department with 13,328 positions, compared to 13,722 positions in the department in February of this year.

Excited By Garbage To Heat Houses

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer
COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Burning garbage to heat houses, which is widely done in Europe, has caught the attention of a group from the U.S. Conference of Mayors on a recent visit.

"I have to say I'm excited about this," said James Ferguson of Provo, Utah, one of three mayors the conference sent on a three-nation swing to study district heating. "It's a solution to part of a very large problem."

The conference is so enthralled with the energy-saving and job-producing possibilities of district heating that it is lobbying the U.S. Congress to support and help finance district heating development.

It already has prompted the Reagan administration to pay for surveys in 28 U.S. cities to determine whether such systems are feasible.

District-heating systems convert otherwise wasted heat, like that from trash and garbage incinerators or steel mills, into hot water or steam, which is then coursed through pipes under a city's streets.

A homeowner who taps in, using the water to heat water in his house's closed piping system, stays warm or cools himself for 60 cents on the dollar of what he would pay for oil.

One house in 10 uses district heating in Denmark, the second stop on the mayors' tour. The Danish government has set a target of 35-40 percent usage within this decade.

"The Danes are ahead of us in problems and in solving them," said Mayor Winfield Moses of Fort Wayne, Ind., who headed the Danish leg of the tour.

"We're running out of landfill space, and they've run out years ago. The scarce energy in Europe gives us an idea of what's to come in the United States."

Moses, Ferguson, Mayor Francis H. Duehay of Cambridge, Mass., and urban officials with them visited waste-disposal district-heating plants in suburban Copenhagen and in Roskilde, 30 miles away.

Before coming to Denmark, they visited plants in West Germany, the West's most advanced district-heating exploiter, and they went from here to Sweden.

On all three stops, they heard presentations on ways to pay for the huge capital outlays required for district heating and technological methods adaptable to the United States.

"They are as excited as we are about increasing district heating in the United States," Moses said. "They want to go over there and cash in."

There was a time when the United States had a monopoly on district heating.

American Birdsill Holly invented the process in Lockport, N.Y., in 1877, and, using steam, it thrived in several cities until the 1930s. But cheap oil and natural gas made it obsolete, and the Americans had lost interest by the 1950s.

Limited municipal systems still in use in the United States — in New York City, Philadelphia, Detroit and a few other cities — generally rely on steam, which the Europeans consider much inferior to hot water.

Steam can be forced through pipes only about five miles, but European systems can cover 40-50 miles.

Ohio State University and New York University use hot-water district heating, and a few American cities are beginning to work with it.

But the United States continues to lag far behind Eastern and Western Europe. The Soviet Union is the world leader, with 20 times the heating capacity of West Germany and 70 times that of the United States.

In Essen, West Germany, the mayors' group visited a plant owned by STEAG, a leading district-heating company.

"There's money to be made in district heating," Moses said. "STEAG is using cheap energy sources — waste and sludge — and it's a multi-billion deutschmark company."

"The STEAG people say their technology could handle population densities six to seven times what they're dealing with now and making money on."

New Device A Promise To Voiceless

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —
Tower Snow held his forefinger over a hole in his neck and wheezed a string of raspy words.

"Do you have any trouble understanding me?" the 72-year-old man asked a visitor at his Walnut Creek home east of here.

Snow's voice was a whisper. A few words were lost in a hiss of air. But most of his sentence came across.

A few months before, Snow "spoke" with an electronic gadget pressed to his throat. The retired insurance man is a laryngectomee, one of some 9,000 Americans each year whose larynx — or voice box — is surgically removed, usually because of cancer.

Snow now speaks with a feather-light, silicon tube, just over an inch long and rounded at one end into a one-way duckbill valve. The Blom-Singer device, named for its developers, stays in place in a surgically-made opening in his neck.

Snow is "absolutely delighted" with it. Doctors who treat such patients also are impressed with the device, now used by about 500 Americans.

"At the moment it's the best thing we have if you can't master esophageal speech," said Dr. Herbert Dedo, professor of otolaryngology at the University of California, San Francisco.

Doctors estimate that at least 50 percent of laryngectomees can't learn esophageal speech. It involves gulping air, forcing it down the esophagus instead of the windpipe and burping it into the pharynx, a cavity where a sound resembling a voice is made.

Lack of motivation, a poorly-trained speech therapist and the amount of tissue that was surgically removed usually figure in the failure, doctors say.

Before development of the Blom-Singer device, unsuccessful students of esophageal speech carried an awkward instrument, as Snow did, to communicate. Forgetting the device left one literally speechless.

The outlook for laryngectomees began to brighten considerably about three years ago when Dr. Mark Singer of Indianapolis began inserting a tube into a small opening between the trachea (windpipe) and esophagus — a hole created in a simple surgical procedure.

The device extends from a hole in the neck to just inside the esophagus. The small "wings" of the device are usually taped to the skin on the neck to hold it in place.

When the speaker blocks the opening in the neck with a finger, air passes from the lungs up the trachea and into the device through an opening in the bottom of the tube near the hole. A slit-like, one-way valve in the inner end of the tube lets air into the esophagus for speech. When the person isn't speaking, the valve stays closed.

The valve has disadvantages. The patient must remove the tube once a day to clean it. If the tube isn't quickly reinserted, the hole begins to close and sometimes must be reopened surgically.

Singer says about 90 percent of the 150 procedures he has done were successful. Dedo and other doctors who have done fewer such surgeries report a slightly lower rate of success. Success means giving patients a voice that's as good or better than esophageal speech.

Oddly enough, Singer said in a telephone interview, his procedure doesn't differ much from a technique used in what may have been the first laryngectomy, in 1873.

That operation probably succeeded, Singer said. But when patients survived laryngectomies back then, they often succumbed to infection.

But doctors are concerned that patients will become overly optimistic when they hear of the Blom-Singer device.

"I don't think it's the final word," said Dr. George Sisson of Northwestern University. He recalls publicity surrounding a Midwestern doctor who fashioned tissue from tendons and other body parts to work as vocal cords.

Opening lead: Ten of ♡.

So you're a frustrated writer of bridge columns! The first requisite is to be a good analyst. Are you? Study all four hands and then decide whether, after a heart lead, you would rather play or defend a contract of four spades.

The contract is a bit "iffy" only because North has a doubleton club and wasted values in diamonds. However, West has not led a trump, so . . .

Assume you choose to defend. Declarer wins the heart in dummy and leads a low club. East wins the jack and shifts to a trump. Declarer rises with the king and leads a second club to your ace. Since it seems that leading a trump gives up your trump trick, you exit with a heart. South wins the jack and leads a club. Ruffing in front of dummy gains you nothing, so you sluff. Declarer ruffs in dummy, returns to his hand with the ace of hearts and leads another club. You sluff again, but declarer ruffs to set up a long club, and your side scores only two club tricks and a trump.

Note that, if you return a low trump after winning the second club, declarer wins in dummy, crosses to his hand with a heart to ruff a club, then gets back to draw trumps. This time he loses three club tricks, but he doesn't lose a trump, so he still makes the hand.

However, that does not mean that you should elect to be declarer. With correct defense, the hand must go down. See what happens if, after winning the ace of clubs, you exit with the queen of spades!

You have, for the moment, given up your trump trick, but it will return with interest. If declarer chooses to draw your last trump, he will end up losing two more club tricks—a total of four tricks in that suit, for down one.

Declarer can ruff one club in dummy to hold his losers in that suit to three, but only at a price. When declarer ruffs a club in dummy with a trump honor, he promotes your nine of trumps to the setting trick!

Somewhere, Big Money For Basic TV

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There's got to be big money somewhere down the line for the basic-cable TV programmers, but Kay Koplovitz says that so far, her USA Network "is the only one that has shown a profit."

"And that's a few pennies," she says, though it's been that way for some time now.

"Will we make real money? I would say yes," says the first woman president of a national TV network. "I don't think we're far away. The next couple of years will not show a dramatic profit, but after that, I think we will begin to climb."

Kay Koplovitz, at 34, has overseen the transformation of USA Network from a satellite-to-cable program service founded on a full menu of big league sports to a diverse system with entertainment aimed at the entire family.

She broke new ground in cable-TV programming in February when the Bristol-Myers Co. agreed to spend a reported $40 million over the next decade to provide USA Network with a daily, two-hour health and beauty magazine. The weekday program, to be called "Alive and Well," will premiere in October.

USA Network, which reaches about 7.5 million viewers through 1,350 local systems, is unique among the so-called "basic" networks that provide programs for local cable systems, generally at no extra charge to subscribers. There are about two-dozen in business to date, most of them at least partially advertiser-supported.

Others — Cable News Network, Christian Broadcasting Network, ABC's Alpha Repertory Program Service, the National Spanish TV Network, the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network are among the best-known — deal primarily in specific types of programs.

USA Network began that way, in September 1977, as the Madison Square Garden Sports Network. And though USA still concentrates heavily on live sports programming, Mrs. Koplovitz is convinced the future is in diversity.

"We're building a family viewing service," she says, "with different kinds of programs for different members of the family."

Much of the network's income is from the fee — 11 cents per subscriber per month — charged local cable systems. It was the conviction that cable operators, and then advertisers, would pay for exclusive sports programs, broadcast live, that led to the creation of MSG Sports Network.

"Everybody talks about advertiser-supported networks," Mrs. Koplovitz says. "There's one thing to remember: Selling advertising for cable TV is a hard business. There are enough opportunities in cable TV for advertisers that they want to know from you, 'What is the value for me?'"

"USA could never have gotten off the ground without the sports base," she says, "because it's a very desirable product for advertisers — top-of-the-line sports events. There is a value in it for them."

The network's 1980-81 schedule included more than 400 sporting events, about 90 percent of them live, including major league baseball, professional hockey, pro and college basketball, indoor and outdoor soccer, horse racing, tennis, wrestling and boxing, track and field and more.

Though advertisers have been receptive to the sports programming, Mrs. Koplovitz says advertising still amounts to less than 50 percent of the network's income.

In fact, USA Network introduced "Calliope," a six-day-a-week children's program, three years ago, and only within the last two months has sold commercial time for the program.

"We have been careful about our commercials," says Mrs. Koplovitz, who formerly ran her own communications management and public relations firm. "We have been very selective. Crayola was the first we accepted for 'Calliope.' We felt it fit in very well with the tone of the program."

In addition to "Calliope," USA Network introduced a video fashion magazine called "You!" earlier this month. The network also carries "The English Channel," documentaries, music, drama and variety from Britain, as well as movies from the Black Entertainment Television network.

"We are not just taking things that are available," Mrs. Koplovitz says. "We are developing specific types of programs for specific audiences.

"We've always felt original programming for cable TV is the best course, instead of what I call 'off-syndication' stuff. We do some, but it's an exception to our original programming."

Played Hobo For Senior Thesis

By MIKE STANTON
Associated Press Writer
AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Ted Conover's classroom was a rolling boxcar, his first big test a fight with a drunken hobo. He fell off a train, foraged through garbage cans for food and got lice in his hair.

The Amherst College student rode the rails for 3½ months, living the life of a railroad tramp, to research his senior thesis.

He found that it wasn't all bad.

"There's something about jumping on a freight train that just feels right," said Conover, a 23-year-old anthropology major from Denver.

"It's the feeling of the wind in your face and the train pulling you along. I think there's some truth to the saying that every red-blooded American boy should hop a train."

Conover rode the rails for 10,000 miles last fall, crisscrossing the American West to study what author John Steinbeck called "the last free men."

Conover said he didn't want to "suffer in the library" researching his thesis, so he spent a semester observing or interviewing 460 tramps. He estimates there are at least 10,000 hobos living in the United States today.

"They're invisible to most of us," he noted. "But there's a romance about tramps. They've found something valuable that the rest of us have missed."

But Conover also discovered some unpleasant realities about the life of a tramp.

"I went 2½ weeks without a shower once," he said. "My friends thought it sounded romantic to get really dirty. But when I got lice it took away a lot of the romance."

Conover has concluded that tramps play an important role in society.

"They define our society," he explained. "A person can't be great unless there's someone who isn't great. Tramps are our (grade) Fs. They know that in society's eyes, they've blown it."

Most tramps, he found, are middle-aged or elderly men who either can't or won't work. They are loners without friends or family, bound together by a strange mix of failure, camaraderie and mutual distrust.

They wander across the West and South, avoiding the other areas of the country where cold weather and unfriendly "city hobos" lurk. Recently, Conover says, they have been joined by a large influx of Vietnam veterans and migrant farm workers.

Although the transistor radio has replaced the lonely strains of a harmonica, a tramp's life is pretty much the same today as it was 100 years ago, Conover said.

They survive on food stamps, scraps scavenged from trash bins, missions and, an occasional odd job. They spend their time drinking and sitting around campfires in sprawling "hobo jungles" built of cardboard and discarded tires.

Among the obstacles Conover faced were his youth and his ignorance of the hobo's unwritten code of conduct.

"You never ask a tramp where's he's from," he said. "But you can ask where he's going. Each man's past is his own business."

He also learned firsthand about the perils of life on the road.

"The tramp's greatest enemy is a tramp," Conover noted. "Fistfights are common and most tramps carry knives. In Nevada, a tramp got drunk and threatened to kill me. He lunged at me, so I punched him. I would drink with them, but I was always careful not to get so drunk that I couldn't outrun them."

"The worst fear is having to go to sleep," he continued. "You miss the security of a house. I slept under bridges, on a beach, under a loading dock, in a pipe."

Conover also found in his travels that even his companions couldn't be trusted.

"I traveled with a couple of tramps for 12 days, and they kept warning me not to trust anybody," Conover recalled. "I didn't take them seriously until they stole my gear."

Another enemy of the tramp is the "bull" or railroad detective. The bulls once pulled guns on Conover and a band of tramps to chase them out of a railroad yard.

Conover learned he needed courage as well as finesse to avoid the detectives while hopping a moving freight train.

"Once I hopped into an open boxcar as it passed me and then the train suddenly stopped," he recalled. "I thought I'd been caught, but it turned out the car I was in had been pulled onto a siding and detached from the locomotive."

Tramps take certain precautions when boarding a train.

"You never hop a train that's moving faster than you can run — that's suicide," Conover said. "I was riding on a train going through these huge marijuana fields in Nebraska. We were going about 20 mph when three mean-looking guys with duffle bags full of pot tried to jump on board. Only two made it."

Snob Appeal Cars Just Take Money

SNOB CAR — Armando Fuksman, sales manager for Bradford Motor Cars Inc., stands with the motor car "Golden Spirit", a limited edition with many special items. Armando says the car is a "steal" at $55,000. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
DANIA, Fla. (AP) — If you're looking for something with snob appeal, there's a place in this South Florida town where you can find exactly what you want.

All you need is money and a driver's license — the latter if you don't have a chauffeur.

For those who haven't quite made the social register, the item is called a "car" or an "automobile." But, for those who can afford to make a purchase at Bradford Motor Cars, Inc., the product generally is described as "a limited edition motor car."

"These are not for the one-car family," smiled Armando Fuksman, sales manager for Bradford. "These are usually purchased by those with at least three or four automobiles at home."

Bradford's is the only showroom of its kind in the country, said Fuksman, because it represents over a dozen manufacturers who design a vehicle and then produce a limited number only — usually around 250 — and then retire the model forever.

There are basically two types of vehicles sold through Bradford — made-to-order limousines and "exotic cars." The former is made by a Bradford-related company in Laredo, Texas.

The price range? That can run up to $190,000 "give or take a few thou" depending on what you want built on top of four wheels, Fuksman said.

If you're in the market for a distinctive limousine, you start off with a basic Rolls Royce, Lincoln or Cadillac engine and drivetrain. From there up, "You're buying quality and craftsmanship," Fuksman explained.

Certainly there will be a motorized glass partition to separate the passenger from the hired help up front. However, there's an intercom linking the two compartments.

The customer gets to select the leather used for upholstery as well as the imported carpeting for the floors. Where wood is needed, Fuksman recommends rosewood or walnut.

Don't be plebeian and ask whether your vehicle will have a telephone. That's as basic to your "limo" as having separate air conditioning units for the chauffeur's compartment and the "master" section. And, if you're among the "nouveau riche," don't use the word "accessories" when talking about the extras that are available. At this level of motoring, they're called "appointments."

You may choose the brand and size of the color television set that will be installed as well as the recorder which the chauffeur will use to preserve those programs you miss during teas, parties or business meetings.

Fuksman will give the customer directions on how the computerized bar works, and he'll make certain the glassware is of the finest crystal. The sink with hot and cold running water may be disarming at first, but he vows once you get accustomed to it, you'll never have another limousine without one.

What else can you have? "I could go on and on," Fuksman said.

In the "exotic car" department, these four-wheeled works of art guarantee attention wherever one goes.

"But it's not strictly flash," Fuksman said. "These are the finest cars in the world."

The lowest-priced is "The Grand Duchess" at $19,000. The tiny two-seater resembles the MG-TD from the 1950s, but provides more extras and a better ride than most mass-produced cars on the road today.

Then there's the Clenet — the Series II model is now available at $83,500. Like most limited edition cars, these vehicles appreciate in value. Series I began in 1976 (250 of them) and sold for $27,500. Used, those originals are now going for as high as $100,000, said Fuksman.

Oldest Peace Corps Volunteer On 5th Assignment

"I've got quite a few-productive hours left," says Odilon "Odi" Long, 79, the oldest Peace Corps volunteer now in service, as he starts his fifth assignment in Africa.

With 12 and a half years in the Peace Corps under his belt, Long, from McHenry, Ill., has logged more years in service than any other volunteer in the 20-year history of the Peace Corps, according to existing records.

Now en route to Upper Volta, where he expect to serve on a school construction project, Long joined the Peace Corps on March 1, 1967, the very day he retired after 41 years with American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and Illinois Bell. As a volunteer, he served in Gabon, Togo and Sierra Leone, helping villagers, chiefs and country officials design and construct schools, bridges, roofs and a football pavilion.

"I've rubbed elbows with the lowly and the high," notes Long, who had a proud moment in West Africa on New Year's Day, 1978. Then-President of Sierra Leone, Siaka Stevens, presented him with a medal, the country's highest civilian award, as an officer in the Order of Rokel for his faithful and dedicated work in the field of construction. Long, who carries the medal around in his pocket, is the only foreigner ever to receive this honor.

Long served six and a half years in Sierra Leone before returning to the United States last August on home leave. His biggest project in the country was the design and construction of 147 primary school classrooms upcountry in Bunumbu. His design, maximizing light and fresh air in the building, while withstanding the heat and rain of the tropics, was adopted by Sierra Leone's Ministry of Education for construction throughout the country.

"You might say I hit the jackpot. It was the ultimate in ventilation," says Long, whose previous experience in ventilation design was for his own home and a church belfry in McHenry.

The United National Development Fund provided $850,000 to finance the construction of 185 classrooms, all using Long's design. Catholic Relief Services implemented the project locally, although much of the actual construction work was done by villagers whose children are benefiting from the schools.

"Due to inflation and all that," recalls Long, "we were able to complete only 147 classroom which were distributed in 20 schools, all within 15 miles of the Bunumbu Teachers College. We finished that project in mid-August."

On his way to the airport headed home to visit relatives, he stepped in a hole and twisted a knee that had been injured and operated on some years back. A physical examination revealed some problems in the knee and the doctor suggested inserting a new one. "He said I had a crack in the cement," Long, who was home visiting his son, Jerry, in Ripon, Calif., said. "Well, I told him that the Leaning Tower of Pisa has had a crack in its foundation for years and it's still standing."

Upon further examination, the doctor changed his diagnosis and last month gave Long a clean bill of health to return to Peace Corps service. "That's the longest time I've ever loafed in all my life," he said of his six months of idleness.

"When you have idle moments when your mind is not occupied, you start feeling your age," he observes. "If you don't keep your mind active, you just start going downward. I don't have idle moments."

Long was born in Fort Kent in northern Maine on March 10, 1902. The Canadian border town had been settled largely by French-speaking immigrants and when he was a boy, French was his first language. Thus, it wasn't too difficult for him to relearn the language for his first Peace Corps assignment in French-speaking Gabon.

His early life also prepared him for any hardships he might endure in developing countries. "As soon as we got out of the cradle, our dad would give us an ax," quipped Long, who had 10 brothers and sisters. He was a lumberjack at age 15, cutting and hauling logs on a horse-drawn sled. Three years, later, he joined the Army and served four years, first with a field artillery unit at Camp Pike, Ark. and then in coast defense in the Panama Canal Zone.

"I'm accustomed to inconveniences. Believe me, nothing was harder than the storm-break days in the telephone company. We'd have to climb slippery poles in the wind and break the ice on the wires," recalls Long, who started as a lineman with AT&T in Detroit, Mich. in 1926 after two years of splitting logs and harvesting winter wheat in Maine and western Canada.

"A lot of wire went off the reels," he says, commenting on his 41-year career with AT&T. Known as "Shorty" because of his five-feet, two-inch height, he spent the first 14 years building and repairing lines in the field throughout 23 states in the East and Midwest, which, he maintains, accustomed him to adapt to new places. From 1941 to 1967, he worked in equipment maintenance for the Long Lines Group-Illinois Bell.

Long started thinking about Peace Corps a couple of years before his retirement from AT&T. "I'd been a lumberjack, did farm work, some chicken-raising and construction, and had a flair for designing and remodeling old houses. I also had a green thumb and went into landscaping a little bit on the side to capitalize on that. "The Peace Corps for me was something to do. I knew I could help and I went over there (to Africa) to render a service," he said. "Sure, you have to sacrifice, but work was what I was looking for and I got it."

Following two months of intensive training at St. Helena Island, S. C., Long was assigned as a technical advisor for a school construction project in Gabon. After about six months, the Peace Corps programs there were phased out and he was transferred to Sierra Leone. He spent the next two and a half years supervising the construction of two bridges and a school in Gloucester, a suburb of Freetown, the capital city.

He finished his projects in the June, 1970 and went to Togo on July 4 as a Peace Corps volunteer advisor for the construction of primary schools and dispensaries. While there, he helped to build 21 classrooms and a large school in Lome, the capital city. "I really did like Togo," says Long, who maintains friendships with people in the West African country. "It is French-speaking and, well — there's just something special about it."

On Jan. 1, 1974 he accepted another Peace Corps assignment in Sierra Leone. First he went to the mountain town of Kabala to deal with a roof problem plaguing a new hospital extension.

"It took two months to get the building ready to put the roof on," reports Long. "And while I was there, they took advantage of me and had me design and help build a football pavilion."

Following a major storm that hit the Lungi area near the Freetown airport in 1975, Long became involved with the Catholic Relief Services school restoration and construction project and introduced his new school design.

Now Pa Long, as he was often called in Sierra Leone, is eagerly looking forward to his next Peace Corps assignment. When asked the secret of his boundless energy and stamina at his age, he replies that he always enjoyed good health. "I did have a strep throat once in 1941," he admitted. Would he advise other older Americans to think about Peace Corps service? "Definitely," he exclaimed. "They need people with experience and some of the knowledge we have that the young volunteers don't have. And you know, he adds, with a twinkle in his eye, "We are looked up to." The Peace Corps is celebrating its 20th anniversary this year.

Off-Color Vanity Tags

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — When motorists try to take poetic license in Maine, Jane Webber is there to keep it clean.

Her duties as initial plate clerk for the Department of Transportation include weeding out the shocking, disgusting or downright obscene requests for vanity license plates.

In the last several weeks, Mrs. Webber has approved DEADLY, PUTRID, BIG PIG and STINK. She's also approved SLOTH, GUZZLER, FAT CAT and SO UGLY. Now is the busiest time of the year, with about 200 requests every week, she says.

"I've had some dirty ones I couldn't believe people sent in," she said. Some people also try to sneak combinations of letters and words forming obscenities past her. Y GO 55 was approved, but the secretary of state "wasn't too happy when he saw that one. He called it back," she said.

Other unmentionables have slipped through and had to be recalled, Mrs. Webber said.

Linwood F. Ross, deputy secretary of state, said he is considering getting a computer printout of all the vanity plates to double-check for off-color messages. But he says there have seldom been complaints.

Felt 'Presence' In Lunar Flight

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — American astronaut James Irwin, who commanded Apollo 15 on its trip to the moon, says his life has been different ever since because of his keen feeling of the Lord's presence there.

Irwin, who afterward founded an evangelistic association, High Flight in Colorado Springs, Colo., to encourage faith in Christ, told a prayer breakfast, "God walking on earth is much more important than man walking on the moon."

GET THE MESSAGE?? — Beaded trails of light represent flight paths of male fireflies, who, according to Prof. James Lloyd of the University of Florida, often speak in a visual Morse code. The male flies around flashing his message and looks toward the ground until he spots a correctly coded female response. A short "flash" dialogue follows before the lights go out for mating. This composite photo from the National Geographic Society shows a firefly silhouetted on the ground with representative flight path drawings superimposed above. (AP Laserphoto)

Scorn Subway System As 'Tunnels To Nowhere'

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Beneath the sidewalks of East 63rd Street in Manhattan's silk stocking district they have already spent $778 million digging a subway system scorned as tunnels to nowhere.

"Boondoggle, how's that?" suggested Alan Stillman, a restaurateur in the rich neighborhood whose residents for years have tried to block the project, largely because of the noise, the dirt and the bother. The construction sometimes rattles their chandeliers.

It was a typical complaint when fashion designer Halston groused that choreographer Martha Graham "nearly broke her hip" in a fall on construction planking as she crossed the street from her dance studio to his townhouse.

Plagued by construction problems, labor disputes, the city's economic crisis, inflation and community opposition, the project is years behind schedule. Though the cost overrun already amounts to tens of millions of dollars, the subway extension will carry only one-tenth of the passengers it was supposed to move between Manhattan and Queens.

"You will find documentation that this is the most expensive subway project ever done anywhere," said Dr. David Levy, a neurological researcher who lives on 63rd Street.

Some of the tunnels are being sealed off as soon as they are excavated because the tracks they were supposed to connect with were never built. They are literally tunnels to nowhere, and no one has a guess as to when, if ever, they will be used.

The project started in 1969 with the construction of four tunnels — two for subways and two for the Long Island Rail Road's suburban commuter line — under the East River, at a cost of $70 million.

The tunnels were to be the critical middle link in $600 million worth of Manhattan and Queens track extensions that open 40 new miles of rapid mass transit and carry 28,000 passengers each rush hour.

Now, when the line opens in 1984, it will have only 10 miles of track. Nearly four miles of that track — in parts of two subway tunnels under Manhattan and both Long Island Rail Road tunnels under the river — will not be used.

The track expansions that were supposed to be built to meet them on either side of the river were abandoned amid New York's fiscal crisis in the mid-1970s. They connect to nothing, dead at both ends.

The cost of $778 million so far, including about half a billion federal dollars, figures out to about $15,000 per foot of track.

"If someone outside New York would see all of their money that has gone into this, they'd be ripping mad," said Terry LeRoy, owner of an antique shop on 63rd Street.

Walter Dockerty, the federal Transportation Department's subway specialist, said the delays inevitable in any long-term project nowadays are particularly costly because of inflation.

Joe Marshall, a Transportation Department policy spokesman, said that is one of the reasons the Reagan administration wants to withhold federal funding for all future subway projects throughout the United States.

Carol Bellamy, New York's city council president, predicted that from now on subway funds will be spent for improving existing service rather than in opening new routes.

Critics ask why the tunnels under the East River, the middle section of the proposed line, were built first and left sitting by themselves, connecting to nothing at either end. Wouldn't it have made more sense to begin building the extensions from where existing service ended?

Yes, city engineers concede privately. But they said the river tunnels were built first because that was the "sexiest" part of the project from a public relations standpoint.

Another question is why the limited part of the subway line was completed after the other 30 miles of track were doomed when the city went broke. Why not just scrap the whole project?

John Tremko, the engineer in charge of subway construction in New York, said the tunnels were completed for structural reasons. Once the work started, the streets above could have caved in if it was not completed.

And, in one of those bureaucratic nonsequiturs, it would cost $33 million more to stop construction than to complete it, mostly for new contracts to shore up and secure partial excavations.

The tunnels under the river were completed on schedule in 1973, but little else has gone on since.

Union strikes upheld delivery of tunnel boring equipment. New federal guidelines required amended environmental impact statements and additional public hearings. A noise pollution consultant had to be hired.

A $45 million bid for one piece of work was rejected as too expensive. A few months later the contract was let for $9 million more. Spots of unexpectedly soft bedrock had to be shored up; spots of unexpectedly hard bedrock broke tunneling equipment that had to be replaced.

Community opposition held up construction on one part of the line under Central Park for a year. Another round of protests delayed work on a ventilation shaft for two years.

Area residents still complain about the noise, the dirt, the traffic jams, the construction lights at night and the blasting that cracked plaster and shook chandeliers day and night.

"We had some complaints that the blasting shook the liquor right out of cocktails," said Maurice Levin, a longtime 63rd Street resident.

However, Levin said, the residents of 63rd Street have learned to live with the subway project, however useless it is.

"It's a little like war," said Levin, a retired Army colonel. "As time goes by, you get used to it."

Rain Season A Hardship To Refugees

By JOE FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer
BERLIN, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's rainy season is adding sickness to the misery of the 11,000 refugees who have poured into this coffee growing town on a mountain-top.

City officials say disease has killed about 500 refugees here since they started arriving a year ago to escape fighting between leftist guerrillas and forces of the civilian-military junta.

"Most of the dead are small children and older people," said Oscar Rene Guevara, assistant to the mayor. "It's bronchitis, chickenpox, diarrhea, malnutrition and other things."

He said there is virtually no medicine in the town and the two doctors the government sent in recently to help have only limited supplies.

Two other doctors from the International Red Cross visit from time to time to help.

"We expect to see a big increase in respiratory and gastro-intestinal sickness in the next few weeks," said one of the doctors, who asked that his name not be used.

"We have been here three days. We usually don't come here but they sent us because it is an emergency."

Berlin, founded a century ago by German immigrants, was once a prosperous town with a population of 39,000 in and around it. But many of the coffee plantations have closed for lack of financing or from fear of guerrilla attacks, and these days there is little work.

One person in five is a refugee, fleeing a civil war that has taken an estimated 18,000 lives in the past year and a half.

Some of them live in cardboard lean-tos, propped against buildings on the main square. Others have hung up hammocks where they can find shelter, in archways around the square, or huddle under plastic sheets for protection against the rains.

Some stay with friends. Others live in hastily built government shacks or in a school converted into a refugee center.

The school-camp's elected leader, Juan Francisco Mercado, 45, said the estimated 300 refugees staying there fled the leftists, although people in some other camps say they had fled the rightists.

Mercado, a farm worker from the nearby village of Santa Cruz, came here in December when city officials opened the school to refugees and double-shifted another school across the muddy street to accommodate displaced students.

Refugees said they get beans, flour, oil, corn and other staples from the government but that they had received only three visits from the doctors in the past two months.

"There is sickness everywhere, especially the children," said Francisco Mercado.

Poor shelter brings coughs and colds that get worse and don't go away. Torrential rains flood primitive sewage systems and contaminate drinking water and there is little that the refugees here and uncounted thousands in other camps across El Salvador can do.

Recently, both government doctors headed a delegation to the nearby town of San Miguel to plead with district health officials for more medicines to help offset the dangers of the rainy season for the homeless who had come to Berlin.

A few hundred refugees have returned home to plant their fields after the government promised them protection.

Town officials say about 500 have gone back in recent weeks, strongly encouraged by the military.

A block off the main square, a portly grocer and his wife sat among bags of corn and cans of meat and acknowledged this, but the grocer shrugged passively and said, "They'll be back."

MYSTERY DISEASE
MADRID, Spain (AP) — Officials said two more people died from an unidentified strain of pneumonia as the mystery disease spread across Spain, hospitalizing almost 500.

Heller's Gas Is Nearly $4 Per Gallon

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — A furor erupted two years back when Glenn Heller's tiny Gulf station, nestled among the affluent dwellings of Beacon Hill, started charging $1.42 a gallon for gasoline — then about 55 cents above the going rate.

Some motorists called him a "capitalistic pig." Others took him to court. But business still is booming, even though Heller's price now is up to $3.59 a gallon for unleaded gasoline at some hours of the day, apparently among the highest in the nation.

"You can call me a 'capitalist pig' only if there is no alternative," says Heller. "I'm not a monopoly. I don't force people to come here."

"There's a guy just 200 feet away selling gasoline 20 hours a day until 3 a.m. at $1.49 a gallon. But I'm always here, and people are willing to pay for that reliability. I'm a capitalist, yes. But a free market capitalist."

During the gasoline crunch of 1979, Heller attracted national attention when his Beacon Hill Gulf started charging the then-unheard-of price of $1.42 a gallon.

The move prompted several court challenges, but Heller says his new "variable pricing" is clearly legal.

"After President Reagan decontrolled gasoline prices," he said in a recent interview, "I immediately sent him a telegram saying, 'Thank you very much, Mr. President. Now I can use my profits to pay the government higher taxes instead of using them to pay legal fees.'"

Those legal fees have been mounting since the day two years ago when Heller rejected a federal ceiling on gasoline prices and charged what he thought the market would bear.

Federal officials said at the time the price appeared to be the highest in the nation. Gulf Oil Corp. said it "deplored" Heller's prices. Motorists picketed his station, and several truckers blockaded the entrance. The U.S. Department of Energy and the Boston Consumer Council took Heller to court, complaining he was charging more than the 17.7 cent markup then allowed.

A federal judge made him lower his prices temporarily, and Heller later was convicted of overcharging. But a federal appeals court overturned the verdict and ordered a new trial. A pre-trial hearing is set for later this month, and federal officials said they planned to prosecute.

Meanwhile, gasoline prices were decontrolled, making the federal gas price ceiling obsolete. So Heller, 31, decided in March it was time for "variable pricing."

He began by raising his price from $1.55 per gallon to $1.79 from midnight to 8 a.m. Business did not fall off much, so he slowly raised it to $2.59. Then $2.94. Not until he reached $3.94 a gallon did his profit margin begin to decline.

His current daytime price, between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m., is $1.69 for unleaded — about 25 cents higher than most of his downtown competitors. From 7 p.m. to midnight it's $2.59; during the early morning hours the price has leveled off to $3.59.

James Vandenberg, a spokesman for the Department of Energy in Washington, said an informal DOE survey this month showed no other service station was "anywhere close" to Heller's early-morning gasoline prices. He also said he knew of no other station using variable pricing for gasoline.

Despite the stiff prices, Heller says he sells about 2,800 gallons a week — 700 gallons during the expensive overnight hours.

"Reagan's move allowed me to use my little laboratory, whose sole purpose is to generate income for me at the highest rate possible," said Heller, who bought the station in 1976.

Pointing across the Charles River to Harvard University, Heller added, "I'm just doing what the Harvard Business School preaches: maximizing return on investment."
