School Bus Records Defended

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

School buses in Pitt County — the 198 that transport about 10,500 Greenville city and Pitt County students to and fron school each day — travel some 1.5 million miles a year on their rounds.

"As of March 1," according to transportation supervisor Rodney Bullock, "it cost $106.62 to transport a pupil for a year."

"Drivers keep their buses in pretty good shape" and "we have very little vandalism," Bullock explained.

There have been 10 minor accidents this year involving school buses. The bus driver was at fault in six of them, Bullock noted. This compares with 18 accidents last year.

"We have very little maintenance problem now," Bullock continued. The biggest problem — clutches — is being eliminated. "We're going from straight shift to automatics now. That's doing away with the clutch problems." The automatics, he said, "are holding up a lot better. We started in 1977 and have not had an automatic transmission to fail yet."

But accidents, vandalism, maintenance and cost of operation took a back seat to discipline last week when the city-wide PTA suggested that the Greenville City Board of Education adopt a set of written rules and regulations to govern the conduct of passengers, drivers, school administrators and parents.

Among the suggestions were: that drivers cannot have a criminal record; that an additional half-day training be given to drivers; that one-half to one high school credit be given to student drivers; that seats be assigned on buses; that an attempt be made to recruit parents as drivers, and that passengers not be allowed to stand on buses.

"I don't have any problem with the suggestions," Greenville school superintendent Glenn Cox said. "Most are in effect to some degree already."

Although "the rules and regulations set forth by the State Board of Education have been set out and fairly well understood," Cox said, "my reconmendation is going to be that we take their suggestions, tie them in with what we've already got and the new regulations being studied by the Legislature, and come up with new policies and regulations."

According to Cox, "Based on the number of miles traveled and the number of pupils, we've had an excellent safety record when you consider the total. Two-thirds of our drivers are students. Getting drivers is a problem, perhaps more so in town than in more rural areas because of job opportunities."

Saying the state is considering the adoption of a salary schedule — all drivers, regardless of experience or age, are now paid $3.50 per hour — with credit for experience, Cox noted that such a move would encourage adult drivers.

The requirement for any driver, student or adult, is the same, he noted. They must have at least six months driving experience, hold a valid operators license, not have any moving violation on their record for the past 12 months, and successfully complete the state training course and state school bus drivers test.

While discipline on the buses is not perfect, it's about as good as you could hope for, Cox suggested. "This is just like anything else. There are problems between students on buses just like in school. But I would say generally that discipline on buses is a concern, but not serious.

"That's one of the things that concerned me" about the PTA report, Cox said. "It came on almost totally negative. There was no comment about the 90

Director Says Still Has To Defend 'Great' After Five Years' Service

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Those buses with the word "Great" emblazoned across the side have become familiar sights in Greenville during the last five years, but public works director Mayo Allen says he still feels compelled to defend the transit system's existence.

Allen said in an interview he frequently is questioned about Great's cost to the city and the need for its existence. He readily acknowledges that the bus system "will never pay for itself."

"There's no way any transit system can pay for itself," he said.

Allen compares Great to "a public service," noting that taxpayers tend to forget that it also costs to pick up garbage, to clean streets and similar municipal services.

Great is showing mild signs of growth — jumping from 143,000 passengers for the year ending June 30, 1980, to a projected 160,000 for the current 12-month period — but Allen said there are no plans for major expansion.

A contributing factor to that increase was the special Good Friday bus service that was underwritten by area merchants. That Friday normally would be a city holiday, and the buses would not operate. However, with the merchants picking up the tab, about 1,300 people rode Great that day.

On an average day, the system serves 700 to 800 passengers.

Great began in 1976 with three routes and continues to operate with only three routes, completing the tour in an hour. Allen said proposals to put the buses on a 30-minute cycle have been rejected because of the increased costs.

Great has remained in existence with the help of federal grants. The system purchased three larger buses with a grant that covered 90 percent of the cost. It also has a grant that reimburses the city for half of the net operating cost of the system. And federal money has been approved for a new maintenance facility.

Allen said he expected Great to continue and to grow, although it does compete — at least indirectly — for passengers with several other transportation programs.

A two-route bus service provided for East Carolina students by the school's Student Government Association served "in excess of 130,000" passengers during the past year, according to student transportation manager Danny O'Connor of Fayetteville. Those routes include stops in residential areas and the Pitt Plaza-Greenville Square shopping area. A third route may be added next year, O'Connor said.

The ECU buses are financed by a $4 student fee collected by the university. Passengers ride free except for the fee.

Allen and O'Connor stressed that they do not consider the city and ECU programs to be in competition. Allen noted that one of the stipulations in the federal grant for the city requires coordination of Great's route schedule with ECU's schedule.

And, Allen noted, the city probably will take over maintenance of ECU buses when the new Great garage is built.

One of the largest bus systems based in the county is operated by the Sheltered Workshop, which operates an 11-vehicle fleet for transportation of handicapped children to and from work in Greenville and, under contract to the Pitt County Council on Aging, for transportation of senior citizens.

Jeff McAllister, director of the Council on Aging, said more than 29,000 senior citizens were transported in the county duing the 12-month period ending in April. The council has a contract with the Farmville Senior Citizens Club and the town of Ayden to provide transportation in those communities, and Sheltered Workshop buses are used in the rest of the county.

Free transportation also is provided by the Department of Social Services for Medicaid recipients requiring medical assistance.

Gunmen Seize Bank, Threaten Hourly Killings

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Some 20-25 gunmen seized more than 200 hostages in a crowded bank Saturday and threatened to kill them one-by-one unless the government released four military men jailed after February's coup attempt.

One bank employee was shot and wounded in the takeover.

Barcelona Police Chief Enrique Mosquera talked by telephone early Sunday with the gunmen inside Barcelona's Central Bank, but Mayor Narcis Serra said no substantial negotiations had begun.

The Interior Ministry issued a statement in Madrid saying the government would be "absolutely firm in the face of this criminal act."

The news agency Europa Press reported three men — Mosquera, a high Civil Guard officer and a civilian — had entered the bank to talk with the gunmen and then walked out at 6:50 p.m., nearly 10 hours after the bank was seized.

The Interior Ministry identified the 20-25 gunmen as right-wing extremists. There were other reports that at least some of the gunmen were members of the paramilitary Civil Guards.

Civil Guard rebels led by Col. Antonio Tejero occupied Parliament three months ago in the unsuccessful bid to overthrow the government.

Dr. Antonio Borras said a freed hostages he spoke with in a hospital told him one of the gunmen identified himself as a Civil Guard.

Maj. Gen Luis Saez, military governor of Barcelona, told reporters at the police command center near the bank that he was there because of reports military men could be involved.

Civil Guard Gen. Camilio Pajuelo was among those on the scene.

Authorities said the heavily armed men released 63 hostages during the day. They continued to hold 150-200 bank employees and customers.

David Nall, a U.S. State Department spokesman in Washington, said no Americans were believed held in the bank. He also said the United States strongly condemned "this act of terrorism."

One of the freed hostages was the man shot in the leg when the invaders stormed the bank shortly after it opened at 9 a.m. (3 a.m. EDT). Several other released hostages — mostly

Gunman Receives IRA Funeral

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The flag-draped coffin of Irish Republican Army gunman Raymond McCreesh, carried by four brothers and flanked by six hooded IRA men, was carried to a hometown grave in Camlough near the Irish Republic border Saturday. In Belfast and Londonderry, youths avenging the hunger striker's death attacked British troops and police.

An estimated 10,000 people were drawn by McCreesh's funeral to the tiny village of Camlough, deep in the heart of what the British army calls "bandit country."

Black flags hung from every building in the Republican stronghold as McCreesh's coffin, drapped in the orange, white and green Irish tricolor, was carried from his home to St. Malachy's Roman Catholic church on a hill overlooking the village.

The cortege was led by a kilted bagpiper playing a lament. Six hooded IRA men in combat gear flanked the coffin and 12 women in black IRA uniforms marched behind.

Father Thomas Wolsey said funeral Mass, and observed sadly, "Raymond would never have been involved in this type of situation, but for the historical circumstances in this land."

IRA gunmen emerged from the throng at the church gates to fire three volleys before quickly melting back into the crowd.

Several thousand troops and police moved into the Camlough area overnight to prevent trouble. But they kept a discreet distance, and the only visible military presence was a helicopter circling overhead.

The burial of McCreesh, 24, took place after two nights of violence in Catholic areas of Belfast and Londonderry in reaction to his death early Thursday and that 21 hours later of 24-year-old Patrick O'Hara Thursday night. O'Hara is to be buried in his native Londonderry Monday.

Youths in Londonderry pitched gasoline bombs and homemade grenades packed with nails at authorities, police said. In Belfast, police reported the rioters used two new — and lethal — weapons: crossbows and catapults, but reported no one was hit.

Veterans Stage VA Protest

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Vietnam veterans were in the second week of a hunger strike and a half dozen veterans held a sit-in in the lobby of a Veterans Administration hospital Saturday to protest treatment by the federal agency.

Two patients at the Wadsworth VA Hospital in the Brentwood district of Los Angeles disclosed they had not eaten for more than week and a third vet, an outpatient, joined them to protest treatment at the facility.

A spokeswoman for the hospital Saturday said, "There are six guys sitting in the lobby but I don't know anything about a hunger strike. There's no hunger strike here."

The actions were the latest in a series of protests by veterans unhappy with the federal government's alleged lack of concern for Vietnam-era vets.

The six men in the lobby were in their fourth day of a sit-in.

John Keaveney, 31, and Merlin Atkins, 35, said Friday they had not eaten anything for seven days to protest treatment at the hospital. Tom Bodensick, 32, later joined the fast.

"If the government doesn't admit we were wrong in Vietnam," Bodensick said, "this country is never going to pull itself out of it."

Keaveney said he had been a patient for two months and has seen a doctor only once. He said it was for only 10 minutres.

He said he suffers severe depression and nightmares and the only treatment he has received is "some medication that's supposed to make me forget."

He said he and other patients were treated as if they were "just crazy people. If I died today, they wouldn't care."

Keaveney added the American people in general to his complaint, citing the attitudes that greeted veterans when they returned home.

"We thought we were doing what America needed done," he said, "but when we came back, America didn't want anything to do with us."

Six veterans began their sit-in in the hospital lobby last Wednesday and said they would not leave until the White House responds to their demand to discuss grievances.

One of the protest organizers, Mike McCarthy, said he had contacted the White House and added, "they are supposed to get back to me."

Officials of the hospital told the demonstrators they would have to leave by Monday.

"Right now we are facing being ejected from here," Sam Davillier, one of the so-called "Inside Six," said.

"We've been given a deadline to get out by Monday," he said. "We're trying to see if we can stay past that, and if not, we're going to go through passive resistance."

He said they may force hospital officials to carry them out. He said they also had considered beginning a hunger strike but had not made a firm decision.

Eludes Rescue

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Donna the duck, a three-foot arrow in her breast, remained at large Saturday as Humane Society officials mapped out new ways to rescue her before the arrow does irreparable damage.

A mission to capture the elusive mallard hen ended in failure Friday night when the duck flew away from a small army of rescuers who invaded her home on the Sahara Country Club golf course.

It was the third unsuccessful rescue attempt since Donna's plight was noticed last week.

"We may have to try tranquilizers now even though we don't want to," said Dart Anthony of the Southern Nevada Humane Society."

No one has determined how the duck was shot with the arrow.

Guards Stop Prison Riots In Two States; 46 Injured In Michigan

By The Associated Press

Scores of officers shielded by clouds of bullets and tear gas swept through two prisons Saturday to end uprisings by youthful offenders in Michigan and high-risk criminals in Nevada.

Meanwhile, inmates of the world's largest walled prison, the Southern Michigan Prison in Jackson, were back in their cells after a day of rioting that officials called the worst in almost three decades.

Three guards taken hostage at the Maximum Security Prison near Carson City, Nev., were released unharmed, while 42 inmates and four prison guards were hurt before Michigan authorities regained control of the prison and the state reformatory in Ionia.

Nevada authorities immediately launched an investigation to determine how the inmate accused of taking the hostages at Carson City got a gun into his cell block.

In Michigan, prison officials began the laborious process of assessing damages and making plans for repairs.

A meeting between authorities and inmates was scheduled in Jackson so prisoners could air complaints that led to rioting by more than 800 convicts.

The Nevada uprising, which involved 23 inmates, some of them on Death Row, ended before dawn when guards spraying bullets from automatic weapons pushed the prisoners back into their cells.

The captive guards were freed after 10 hours when prison officials agreed to give inmate David "Bang Bang" Wayne a sedative and let him talk to his girlfriend.

Wayne, who was serving a 20-year term for escape and attempted murder, had been accused twice before of taking hostages. He had been cleared Friday of charges in one incident after another inmate testified that he had forced Wayne to participate.

The guards were seized Friday evening after a brief rampage in which an inmate was beaten and stabbed, another convict beaten and windows and furniture broken.

The two injured inmates were accused on Easter Sunday of taking nine gospel singers and a prison chaplain hostage. The 10 were released unharmed, but prison spokesman Steve Robinson said the attacks may have been "reprisals because the other inmates didn't like the hostage-taking of religious people."

In all, 43 people have been taken hostage at the Nevada prison in the past year. None was injured.

In Ionia, Dale Foltz, warden of the Michigan Reformatory, said his youthful charges would be responsible for cleaning up the mess left by their eight-hour rampage.

That melee ended Saturday when guards and state troopers herded the inmates back into their cells.

Pope Is Out Of Danger

ROME, Italy (UPI) — Doctors said Saturday that John Paul II was out of danger and should be "fully recovered" from his gunshot wounds within 60 days. They said he may return to the Vatican in as little as 10 days.

"All the parameters, the vital signs, are normal," said Dr. Francesco Crucitti, the surgeon who operated on John Paul after a would-be assassin shot the pope in the Vatican's St. Peter's Square May 13.

"There is no more danger to his life," the surgeon said after his morning visit with the pope on the 11th floor of Gemelli hospital. "It's now a question of convalescence.

The daily medical bulletin said the pope's doctors were "very satisfied" by the progress John Paul has made and that his temperature, heart beat and blood pressure were normal.

The pope's doctors said they were so confident about the pope's recovery that no new medical bulletin would be issued until Thursday.

The Vatican confirmed meanwhile that John Paul will make a taped broadcast over Vatican Radio Sunday just as he did last week.

During last week's prayer blessing, the pope said he forgave Mehmet Ali Agca, 23, the Turkish terrorist held for trying to kill him.

Agca, who police suspect is a member of a right-wing extremist organization operating in Europe, is being held in an isolation cell at Rome's high security Rebibbia prison. Police said that during a week of intense interrogation, Agca did not reveal his motive for attacking the pope.

Two American women also wounded in the attack — Rose Hall, 21, a resident of West Germany and Ann Odre, 58, of Buffalo, N.Y., have been recovering at Rome's Santo Spirito Hospital. Dr. Federico Meneghini said Mrs. Hall, whose elbow was shattered by a bullet, would be released Sunday.

Mount St. Helens Sends Up Steam

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens came out of the clouds and sent up two bursts of steam, but generally the volcano has remained quiet, officials said.

Steam billowed to 10,000 feet and to 12,000 feet Friday, said Susan Carlson at the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle. She described the plumes as commonplace. Each was accompanied by a flurry of weak earthquakes which subsided quickly.

The May 18, 1980 eruption of Mount St. Helens left 60 people dead or missing.

Ayden Paint Store Robbed

AYDEN — A small amount of money was stolen from the Mary Carter Paint Store, corner of West Avenue and 2nd Streets, Friday at 4:50 p.m.

Police Chief Tommy Burney said owner-operator Pearl Sutton was approached by a male who demanded money and drew a small caliber weapon. Mrs. Sutton was slightly injured in a scuffle, but no shots were fired, Burney said.

The robber escaped on foot with a small amount of money.

Atlanta Volunteers Seek Retarded Man

(AP) — Volunteers searching for a 22-year-old retarded black man knocked on doors in two Atlanta neighborhoods Saturday, seeking clues to the whereabouts of Ronald Crawford, who disappeared six days ago.

Crawford is said to match the profile of some of the 27 slain blacks whose cases are being probed by a special Atlanta police task force. However, his disappearance was not turned over to the task force and was being handled by the department's missing persons unit.

Crawford, last seen at his southeast Atlanta apartment on Monday, was reported missing by his mother Wednesday night.

The 65 searchers organized by the United Youth Adult Conference spent three hours in lower-income housing projects, houses and apartments in Crawford's neighborhood and another locale on the southwest fringes of the city.

Meanwhile, a lawyer for an unidentified New York man questioned in the slaying of 21-year-old Eddie Duncan said Douglas County authorities checked his client's work record in Rochester, N.Y., to confirm that he was not in Atlanta since before Duncan disappeared.

Douglas County Sheriff Earl Lee says he questioned a "person" Thursday in the slaying of Duncan, whose body was found in the Chattahoochee River in Douglas County March 31.

Lee said the man was not a suspect and finding him was not a breakthrough, but other county officials said the man was traced with a composite drawing of a black man seen with Duncan March 21, the night he disappeared.

Lawyer Stanley Nylen said an Atlanta-area kennel employee who saw the drawing recognized the New York man, formerly of Atlanta. Dog hairs reportedly have been found on some of the young victims.

Nylen said his client told Lee that he has worked at a Rochester firm since March 10 and had not visited Atlanta since late 1980. The sheriff told the man he would check out the alibi, Nylen added.

Lee could not be reached for comment Saturday. The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution quoted an unidentified Douglas County official in their Sunday editions, however, saying the New Yorker had been ruled out as a suspect.

Saturday's search was the 31st weekend hunt for clues in the cases. The volunteers' ranks were boosted by nine uniformed guards from a Gainesville, Fla., prison and a counselor from another Gainesville prison who joined in the hunt on the city's southwest side.

School Bus. . .

percent of the buses that run on time, the good safety record. I don't disagree with the need to improve. But the implication given was that we're not doing anything. If we were not doing anything, it would be chaos ... total chaos."

When problems among students do arise on the buses, Cox said, "the school principal and the driver talk to them." If that doesn't work, the students are then put off. "We have to work on it pretty much on an individual basis," Cox said.

But taking everything into consideration, Cox said the PTA report was "excellent."

"In working with children on anything, the more we can get that parent involved, the better off we're going to be. This is the real key," he said.

"It's skill," Pitt County school superintendent Ott Alford, suggested, that is the key to safe school bus driving — not age.

"The kind of adult you get for minimum wage ... you have to be very careful. I'd rather have a responsible 16- or 17-year-old ... that's a responsible person," Alford said.

Although fewer than a dozen adults drive buses going to and from county schools, "half of our drivers are girls," Alford noted. "We're finding, as a general rule, girl drivers are more responsible than boys.

"Our board, after an unfortunate accident — a fatality several years ago — adopted a very strong set of standards ... requirements for proper conduct" on buses, Alford said. He explained that the rules provide for such things as the removal of students from buses when the standards are violated, "special sessions on safety with all drivers, monthly meetings between drivers and Mr. Bullock," and a requirement that "each school instruct youngsters in proper procedures for loading, unloading, riding ..."

"In spite of all that, we still have difficulties with kids not sitting in their seats ... holding their arms out windows. They are dealt with. The kids are put off the buses.

"The big problem," according to Alford, "is the matter of enough space on the buses."

He explained that one of the problems is caused by "transporting youngsters who have no legal right to ride. If the school board would not provide rides for those who live within one and a half miles of the school, there is a possibility there would be enough seats for everybody to be seated."

However, the superintendent noted that "we are permitted to ride those kids as long as their presence doesn't cause a bus to be overloaded." But Alford emphasized that in many cases, "safety is such a factor ... having young kids walking," that it is better to let students ride buses than it is to make them walk.

The second basic problem affecting bus loading is state allotment of buses.

"The state allots seats on the basis of three persons to a seat. You can't even get three first graders with all of their books, coats, and so on, on one of those seats. That's the standard by which they go in allocating buses. It's not realistic in relation to the size of kids," Alford said.

As far as discipline on buses, Alford said the Pitt County Board of Education several years ago asked the state to place paid monitors on all buses. That would cost $26 million statewide, just for elementary buses, Alford noted.

"It's a problem area. There's no doubt about it. Our board policy was to require a monitor. We found parents" who would ride the buses, Alford said. "But in short order they quit ... because of what they found themselves getting into ... conflicts with other parents. Adult monitors were no better than student monitors, so that effort fell very shortly."

Alford noted that sometimes fights do break out on buses ... tussles, fights. Things like that happen at home, as well as at school.

"The average high school bus has 30 to 35, maybe 40 students. Elementary buses average 48 to 55 ... somewhere in there. With a seating capacity of 48, and a 25 percent standing (as allowed by the state), that gives a capacity of 60 students" allowed to ride one bus.

As far as school principals are concerned, according to Alford, more time is given to problems on buses that any other area of their work. "There is no one to supervise kids like they ought to be," he said.

Neighbors Say Reagan Plan Will Strap His Home County

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — While President Reagan went horseback riding Saturday on his remote mountain ranch, county officials and social workers here charged that his proposed budget cut would strap his home county financially and force cutbacks in services for the young, old, disabled and poor.

"We're President Reagan's neighbors," said Marty Klein, a sociologist who has studied the impact of the proposed Reagan budget on human services in Santa Barbara County and who called a news conference timed to attract members of the White House press corps who accompanied the president to the West Coast. A coalition of about three dozen social service agencies in the area has formed to fight the spending proposals.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes, meanwhile, told reporters Reagan and his wife Nancy rode their favorite horses around the ranch for an hour and five minutes as the president continued to enjoy a steady recovery from the gunshot wound he suffered March 30. Reagan to try his other favorite outdoor activity, chopping wood, in the afternnon.

Among the small party of staff and security people at the ranch in the Santa Ynez mountains about 20 miles north of here was Dr. Daniel Ruge, the White House physician, who Speakes said had lifted all restrictions on the president's activities.

Asked if that meant Reagan was now fully recovered from his bullet wound and subsequent surgery to repair his pierced left lung, Speakes cautioned that he did not consider the recovery complete.

Reagan "will work slowly up to a full day" of activity, Speakes said. "The doctor said he could do what he feels like — not jump tables or ride horses on a steeplechase. It's going to be a long period of recuperation."

Reagan's physical appearance is now substantially the same as it was before the shooting, although he occasionally seems to walk with some stiffness in his gait.

Speakes said the president did some paper work that he brought with him, including signing a number of personnel appointments and nominations, but his primary purpose was to enjoy the outdoors. Reagan arrived in California Friday afternoon to spend the long Memorial Day weekend at his beloved Rancho del Cielo, or "ranch in the sky."

Speakes said Reagan also is taking some time rewriting a draft of the commencement address he is to deliver at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., on Wednesday.

The presidential spokesman also described some work underway at the ranch to build temporary quarters for members of Reagan's staff and the communications and security personnel who accompany the president wherever he goes.

The president's personal aides and Secret Service agents now occupy a half-dozen recreational vehicles parked near the five-room adobe house Reagan calls home, but Speakes said those are to be replaced by seven portable 12-foot-by-40-foot buildings similar to house trailers.

The foundation has been laid for a helicopter hangar that will house the standby aircraft always on hand to fly Reagan off the mountain in an emergency, Speakes said.

A White House statement issued Saturday said, "the estimated cost of construction at Rancho Del Cielo to support the president in his role as commander-in-chief is approximately $750,000. Eighty percent of this is expected to be recoverable once the president leaves office and the remainder would be utilitized for security support when he becomes a former president."

Speakes said, "The president has decreed there be no change whatsoever" in his own modest quarters and has insisted that the facilities constructed to serve him as president be removed when he leaves office.

Gunmen Seize ...

women — were reportedly suffering from shock.

The six-story building at Catalan Square was cordoned off by hundreds of police reinforcements and members of a special 60-man anti-terrorist unit who took up positions with high-powered rifles and submachine guns. Spain's National Radio said 1,000 policemen were at the scene by nightfall.

According to notes purportedly from the gunmen and released to local newspapers, the gunmen are demanding the release of Tejero and three other coup figures. The notes said they also wanted a plane to fly the four officers and themselves to Argentina within 72 hours.

It was not known if the gunmen had been told Argentina's Foreign Ministry announced in Buenos Aires that it would not accept the group.

The gunmen said in the note they would wait 24 hours (or until 3 a.m. Sunday EDT) for the government's reply. If the deadline passes, the gunmen said they would kill 10 hostages and then one more every hour.

In Madrid, Tejero's lawyer, Angel Lopez-Montero, said the colonel renounced use of his name in the bank assault, wanted to stand trial and had no desire "to flee under any circumstances." It was not reported whether the gunmen were informed of Tejero's remarks.

One of the freed women said the gunmen wore hoods and referred to one another by numbers. Another said there were about 20 gunmen and they all treated the hostages well. Some freed hostages said the gunmen fired warning shots when they seized the bank.

Police said the gunmen ordered the remaining hostages inside to sit on the floor in front of all entrances, apparently to discourage police from storming the bank.

Witnesses reported the gunmen had automatic rifles, submachine guns and explosives.

Antonia Abolafio, 30, a bank employee released by the gunmen, told reporters the gunmen wore surgeon's gloves and shouted anti-government gslogans.

"The worst moment was when one of them told his mates to put their pistols against the temples of five employees and customers and pull the trigger if police did not retire from the scene," he said.

The government of Premier Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo, convened an emergency session in Madrid to discuss the hostage crisis.

Heavy Rains Pose Flood Threat To Montana City

The roiling waters of a rain-gorged creek demolished a small dam and crashed like a battering ram against a 35-foot dike outside Helena, Mont., Saturday, slopping over onto farmlands and threatening to unleash a deluge.

Thunderstorms that spread tornadoes and hail from Oklahoma to Minnesota Friday eased as they pushed eastward but put a damper on Memorial Day weekend outings in much of the Midwest. And record cold sent shivers through parts of Florida.

The heaviest rains in 20 years unleashed floods in parts of Montana — replacing a drought with floods. Six people were injured in flooding Friday but no one was seriously hurt.

The Sun, Smith and Blackfoot rivers and numerous lesser streams surged over their banks.

Floodwaters of rain-swollen Prickly Pear Creek gushed through hundreds of homes in East Helena, Mont. Authorities evacuated homes for six blocks on each side of the creek but no injuries were reported.

Downstream, a small dam behind a lead smelter crumbled and water also spilled over a 35-foot-high quarry dam above the smelter pond dam. Authorities feared the larger dam might burst and send its 175 acre-feet of water down the creek.

All but extreme eastern Montana was under an emergency declaration. A flash flood watch was in effect for central sections of the state.

Refugees End Strike

ATLANTA (AP) — Thirteen Cuban refugees who were on a hunger strike to protest their imprisonment at the U.S. Penitentiary here ended the fast Saturday after meeting with Warden Jack Hanberry, the warden announced.

The 13 refugees are among 1,746 ordered incarcerated by federal immigration officials since arriving in this country during the "Freedom Flotilla" boatlift from Cuba last year. They had not eaten since Monday.

"It's all over. I have been over there all morning, and I personally talked to each one of them. And they are all eating now," Hanberry said.

Another Cuban prisoner, Manuel de la Torre Rodriguez, broke his hunger strike on Friday after refusing to eat since May 1, officials said.

De la Torre, who had been under medical supervision in the prison hospital, drank a high-protein vitamin supplement after speaking more than an hour with Hanberry Friday afternoon.

Clay Kirkman Says . . .

This is a time of transition, as spring gives way to summer. It is also a busy time in the garden.

Often newly planted annuals are lost due to inadequate care. The early stages of these plants are important to their survival, during the long, hot days of summer. Here are a few tips to help you keep your plants healthy.

Your young plants will need to be watered frequently, especially right after they have been planted. Be sure to soak the soil thoroughly to encourage deeper roots. During the hot spells, they will probably need watering everyday.

When fertilizng, do so only lightly, but often. It is better to do this than to give them large applications. Too much fertilizer will cause heavy foliage growth and few flowers.

Be sure to mulch your plants. As with other plants, this helps to prevent water loss and helps cut down on weeds.

Many of your annuals will also be healthier if you pinch the growth back. This will result in a more compact growth habit, as well as more flowers.

Check your plants every few days for signs of insects, so you can discover any problem before it becomes too large. By following these few tips, you should have healthy and beautiful plants all summer. Remember Belk Tyler Garden Shops this summer for all your gardening needs.

School Challenges Can Be Met

Beginning with the new fiscal and academic year, Greenville City Schools will have a new superintendent in Dr. Delma C. Blinson, who has been principal of Garner High School.

Dr. Blinson was chosen from a number of applicants for the position and he was in Greenville last week to meet the people he will be working with in the years ahead.

Dr. Blinson said he was excited about coming to the Greenville school system. "I'm looking forward to finding an opportunity to work with people here who support public education," he said.

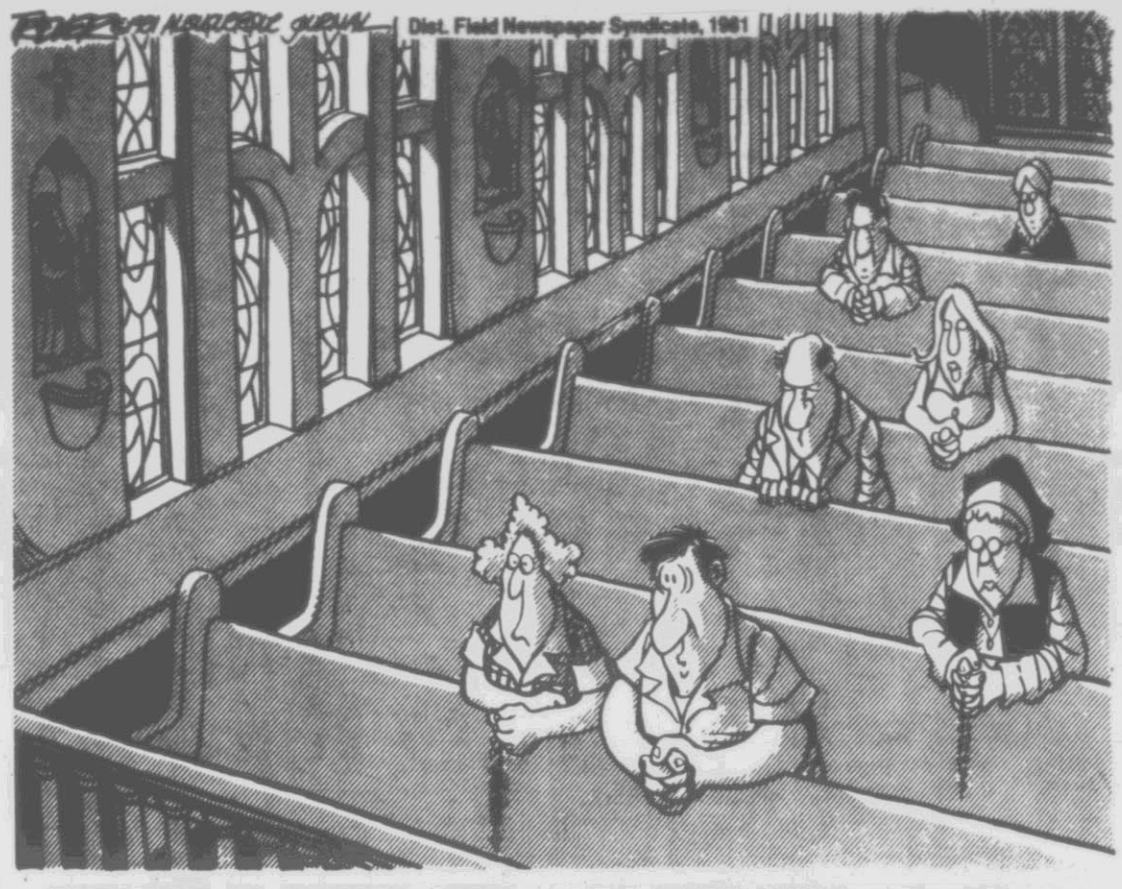

"One of the things I've been most impressed with is the committment the board has shown me for the future of education. I share that committment and their committment is one of the reasons I made a decision to come here."

The challenge will be large. The Greenville school system has a history of excelling among school systems of North Carolina. It has at times sent the largest percentage of graduates on to further education and some of its elementary schools have been recognized as innovative and trend-setters.

Our city schools are still good, but through no one's fault, problems have developed. The system, like all southern school systems, went through the agony of integration, a necessary development, but one which left the system with misplaced buildings. That has put an undue strain on the budget of the school system for many years.

But also the city schools found themselves locked in. The city limits and the greater Greenville area expanded well beyond the city school district limits into the county area. The children in the affluent areas were lost to the city district and became part of the county district. Since appropriations are based on student population the funding was also lost to the city system.

These are some of the problems Dr. Blinson faces. As with all problems, however, solutions can be found and we sincerely hope that within a few years, as Dr. Blinson predicts, "Greenville will rank among the very best in North Carolina."

"THEY USED TO ASSAULT POPES IN THE DARK AGES. YOU DON'T SUPPOSE THAT'S TELLING US SOMETHING...?"

Memories Are Part of Demolition

A Pitt County landmark goes with the demolition of the old Pitt General Hospital building on Johnston Street.

The building has been empty for several years and before that it housed various county offices.

It is best remembered by those who go back far enough as the hospital which served Pitt and other counties until 1948.

Some of us were born in Pitt General and others had tonsils or an appendex removed. There were bones set there and cuts sewn up. Our ancestors were cured and some died there.

If a modern generation wonders how a building of its size could serve the entire county's population, and more, it must be pointed out that this was an era before Medicare and Medicaid or company paid hospitalization. It was a time when one didn't simply have a life-saving operation. You had it only if the money could be found. Even at that, a good part of any physician's practice was charity work.

It was another time, of course, and the old hospital, and even its successor, has become outdated. For many, however, there are memories as every brick of the old structure tumbles into the rubble.

Comfort In Safety Gear...

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Pity the fellows working on the highways these hot days of spring and summer to come. They are required to wear orange safety gear — usually cumbersome vests which rub and chafe and are totally uncomfortable.

Now, garment-makers have developed a new "orange-glow" fabric which isn't rough and stiff, and can be sewn into a regular shirt.

A proposal is pending in the General Assembly to help highway workers get new shirts. The state purchases the vests, but is reluctant to make another substantial outlay for shirts which are not "permanent" investments — it would take several for each employee, and they would be wearing out and tearing up, unlike the vests.

So employees are asking for a state tax credit to offset the cost of renting the new shirts. The employees are pushing the measure from a comfort standpoint. That doesn't usually win legislative battles.

So a savvy adviser has come up with an argument almost guaranteed to win the backing not only of legislators, but of officials high up in the Department of Transportation.

If regular highway people all wear the new, orange shirts, then passing motorists will be able to tell the difference between prison labor wearing green fatigues; private contract workers wearing whatever they please; and state employees.

That should help answer some of the citizen complaints about how many men it takes to do a job; and how many are leaning on shovels or sitting in the shade. Or at least, it will help tell whether or not it is a state employee who is resting.

Milk Prices

Hold onto your hats in coming months as the North Carolina Milk Commission considers factors that control milk prices you must pay at the corner grocery.

The annual Cost of Production Data for 1980 has just been delivered by Geoff Benson, economist with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service at N.C. State University.

Dairymen lost $1.34 per 100 pounds produced in 1980 compared to a loss of only 34 cents per 100 pounds in 1979.

The cost of producing milk went up 18.6 percent while milk prices increased 11.2 percent. That, coupled with general inflation, "reduced the actual purchasing power of this income by more than 12 percent," Benson reported.

School Bonds

Without fanfare, the notion that a $600 million school construction bond election ought to be held soon has been buried.

Chief officials in the State Department of Public Instruction concede that with taxpayer attention on cutting government spending rather than increasing it, and with so much talk about the Highway Fund deficit and the likelihood of a higher gasoline tax and other tax changes to boost that effort, the school bonds would not get favorable attention either in the General Assembly or from the public.

Meanwhile, county government officials and leaders in the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development are agonizing over whether to seek voter approval for another Clean Water Bond issue. The 1977 bonds totalling $230 million went to help local governments build water and sewer treatment facilities, and are now almost exhausted.

Sunday Morning Notes

Jack Whichard and J. B. Smith were fishing for bass on the Pungo Creek on a recent Saturday.

The fishing was good that day and Jack, in a log he keeps, noted that the two fishermen pulled in 12 bass, one robin and threw back three. There was another notation. It was that he hooked and lost a bass which he and J. B. estimated weighed five pounds.

Jack told another avid fisherman, Joe Taft, about it and then forgot the incident.

Some days later Joe visited. He had what was left of a bass bug and he showed it to Jack.

The two examined it and found that the portion left was exactly like the bass bugs Jack uses. The knot used to tie the leader was an unusual one that Jack ties and the leader matched that which he uses.

There was no doubt the bass bug was the same one which had hooked the fish that Jack lost on the Pungo Creek.

Joe explained that an old friend, Pat Draughan of Dunn, and he had been fishing at Pungo Creek five days after Jack and J.B.

Draughan, too, hooked a bass, which incidentally weighed 5¼ pounds. When he landed the fish he found the bass bug hung in its mouth. Joe was in another boat and Draughan thought perhaps he had hooked and lost the fish. When Joe saw it he recalled Jack's story and he brought the bug back to Greenville.

There was no doubt, though, that Draughan had landed the same fish which Jack hooked five days before.

And what happened to the bass? "It got eaten," Joe says.

Tomorrow is Memorial Day . . . although you may recall it was once obsered on May 30.

That is the way our modern society moves things around to make long weekends.

So far, however, the Fourth of July still comes on the Fourth of July, Christmas still falls on Dec. 25 and who could ever move the New Years from Jan. 1?

A few states still observe Memorial Day on May 30, and if you want to be traditional you'll have to go to one of them for the May 30 observance.

To the editor:

I certainly disagree about your Social Security editorial on May 18 in which you attack "double dipping." If someone has paid into the system for a number of years, they should get a Social Security pension regardless of any other pension income. The only exception I can see to this is if they had paid into Social Security only two or three years.

What should be done to the Social Security program to to stop giving the minimum pensions of $122 to people who worked only two or three years under the system.

The only dependent to get survivors' benefits should be the spouse. Do you know that many young children go to college on Social Security? Children can even be eligible for benefits based on a grandparent's earnings!!

The trouble with Social Security is that it has been liberalized to the point of being ruined by too many dumb congressmen, usually of the liberal party.

Do you know that it is possible to work under Social Security for 35 years and not be able to get a disability pension? This is due to the unjust "five year rule." I have even had some Social Security officials agree with me on this? Here is a truly unjust feature for you to campaign on.

The only unjust part about "double-dipping" is in military people. They are covered by Social Security while in service, possibly only two or three years, and then they are covered for a Social Security pension.

So don't make a blanket statement that double-dipping should be stopped. Some people have paid in for close to 20 years. Anyne paying in for a respectable length of time should get a pension, regardless of any other pension income.

Do you know that a number of foreign countries have a retirement age of 60?

The hardest-hit group singled out in the proposed Social Security changes are people who will be 62 in 1982. Why should they be hit so hard and suddenly? Abolish all those unjust dependents and minimum pensions first.

Camel Mart Noisy

By MAGDA El-SANGA
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Whips cracking, herders hopping and grunts abounding, Cairo's camel market gets under way twice a week on a dusty five-acre lot west of the city, where buyers' and sellers' calls compete with the camels' groans in frantic bids for attention.

Over 1,000 of the one-humped dromedaries ramble around the Imbaba market, said to be the world's largest camel souk, on its buiest day, Monday.

"About 2,000 camels are sold here each week; it's like the world's camel stock exchange," said Sheikh Aly Abul-Qassim, a Sudanese camel merchant.

While a few camels can be seen carrying loads around the streets of Cairo and in the country, or giving rides at tourist attractions and posing for pictures, most of the camels at the Imbaba souk are headed for people's dinner tables and the carnivores' cages at the Cairo Zoo.

"About 90 percent of the meat used in Egypt is camel meat," Abul-Qassim asserts with a conspiratorial grin. "Any time you order hamburgers or meatballs in a restaurant in Cairo you can be sure it's camel meat."

The tough quality of the meat, the animal's basically mean nature and the widespread attitude of seeing camels as beasts of burden or tourist conveyances by the Pyramids, makes for the unpopularity or even abhorrence among most Egyptians of putting camel on their plates.

"Very often, if you don't know much about meat, that's what you're buying at the butcher's even if you

MX Racetrack : R.I.P.

By ROBERT NOVAK
and ROWLAND EVANS

WASHINGTON — President Reagan leans toward scrapping Jimmy Carter's MX mobile missle system even before agreement on a substitute, a failure of decision-making on new weapons systems that is causing defense-oriented politicians and the military to worry that the bad old days are here again.

The death knell of Carter's "racetrack" deployment proposal may have been struck by the Mormon Church May 5 when it attacked the Utah-and Nevada-based system as "a denial of...the gospel of peace." Quite apart from that blast, opposition to the futuristic Carter system by Nevada's Sen. Paul Laxalt and Utah's Sen. Jake Garn — key defense leaders — pointed to Reagan's course.

Laxalt is Reagan's most intimate Senate ally. Although he says privately he would support a decision to adopt Carter's plan, eveidence grows that he won't have to — and knows it. Reagan's own skepticism about hiding each of the 100 planned MX missles in "racetracks" of mostly empty silos will kill the plan.

Thus, the defense community is chilled by the strong prospect that the president will abort Carter's plan in July, soon after Reagan's MX "review group" of experts reports its findings. This is super-power America still unable to solve the riddle of a land-based system capable of surviving a Soviet attack. The MX missle, now in early stages of production, has eluded a government decision on how to use it for almost a decade.

Jimmy Carter's policies are recalled. In 1977, Carter cancelled the B-1 bomber and delayed the Trident submarine. In 1978, he astounded U.S. allies in Europe by cancelling the neutron warhead to defend against a Soviet ground attack.

Those bad old days were expected to end when Ronald Reagan took office. His single-minded determination to rebuild America's military arsenal supposedly would not be encumbered with scruples about environmentalism (which targeted the Carter MX system for extinction the instant it was announced) or parochial fears of Western-state politicians.

LOVE OUTLIVES MEMORY

When Longfellow was buried, Ralph Waldo Emerson stood at his grave. The poet and the philosopher had been life-long friends. Now the poet was dead. The philosopher, a tottering, somewhat senile old man leaning on his daughter's arm, looked questioningly at the mound of earth and said, "I can't recall his name, but he was one of the greatest souls that ever lived."

There are some things which outlast even memory. The kindnesses and acts of love which are life's sparkling jewels live on and give us joy after the power to enjoy other things has passed. All that the feeble Emerson could remember about Longfellow was that he was a glorious soul, a person who was universally admired for his kindness of heart and depth of affection.

What will we leave behind us when we die? Probably a lot of us think largely in terms of enough property to enable our loved ones to live in comfort. But there are things much more important — such as the heritage of Longfellow. — Elisha Douglass

Savings Not Always In A Bank

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Did you know that Thailand households in the 1970s saved at a rate much higher than that of U.S. families? And that the Swiss household savings rate more than quadrupled that of Americans?

It's true. The Thai rate was 9.2 percent, based on the amount of money available to people for spending, minus that spent on goods and services. Switzerland's rate was 31.4, the U.S. rate just 6.8 percent.

The low U.S. savings rate (now under 5 percent) is the basis for the widely held thesis that U.S. productivity gains are sluggish because savings are insufficient to finance more productive technology.

But does it indicate how much households really are saving, and is it an indicator of household stress? That's another matter, a matter you seldom see separated from the otherwise doleful tale the numbers tell.

But, yes, Americans are saving, albeit in some unusual ways. So unusual, it seems, that they fall beyond the definitional boundaries set for measuring "household savings."

First, they save through their houses. Few families are unaware that their houses are their banks. They have been using them that way for several years, and now the practice is becoming institutionalized.

As equity in the housing bank rises so do "savings," and those savings are often withdrawn to finance schooling, pay for rainy days, acquire automobiles, or provide the kids with down payments on houses.

In effect, that's exactly what they once did with conventional savings at conventional banks. Now those conventional banks make it easier than ever to tap funds by means of equity loans or second mortgages.

There's a price, of course, a very dear one, but many Americans are willing to pay the price. They have developed a philosophy that says the best way to save in these inflation afflicted days is to borrow.

The thinking goes this way: Savings accounts have a tendency to shrink because of inflation. Even high interest rates sometimes cannot offset this shrinkage because of high taxes. So, why have a savings account?

Instead, you save by borrowing. You take money that seems regularly to lose its value and you buy objects that seem to hold or rise in value. More than incidentally, you may enjoy the object, which might be a second home, a rare print or perhaps a diamond.

You do get burdened with repaying the loan, but you have some help. Internal Revenue Service regulations see to that; you may split the interest cost of those loans with Uncle Sam, who balances his books — or tries too — by taxing the interest of those who save conventionally.

And, of course, you repay with cheaper dollars. Those with 25-year mortgage loans know all about this sort of thing. They know, for example, that if inflation continues they will be repaying dollars with quarters. The resulting savings aren't theoretical; they are very real.

Yes, Americans are saving, but their unconventional techniques don't always show up in conventional statistics. The official household savings rate does not accurately show what Americans have been up to.

What the rate does show is that money for investing in capital improvements — in the reindustrialization of America, if you will — may not up to the levels required, and that a serious problem might exist.

But don't believe for a minute that families in India, where the household savings rate is higher than in the United States, find it easier than Americans to save. They're just more conventional.

"We're in for a season of suffering." These prophetic words of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. assess the current state of America and the world. Within the past months, we have experienced heat waves, droughts, sinkholes, earthquakes, volcanoes, hurricanes, tornadoes — all significant acts of God. In this same period, we have seen assassination attempts of an American President and of Pope John Paul II, and we are grieved with the families the unresolved murders of innocent Black children in Atlanta. The value of the dollar continues to shrink, the certainty of higher unemployment and rising bankruptcy cases increase substantially and the likelihood of war escalates on six continents of the world.

Naturally, concerned citizens of the world probe for answers to why these occurrences happen and what these events, taken in concert or analyzed singularly, mean. There appears one message that all mankind must respect: return to the principle of loving one another.

There exists a profound lack of love and compassion among the human race. The gap between those who have and those who have not continues to widen. It seems, therefore, that when we properly prioritize the needs of the peoples of the world and act responsibly to meet these needs, the condition of the human race will improve.

When a child starves in the desert heat of Africa, a mother dies in a street corner shootout in Belfast, a nun is brutally murdered in the civil strife in San Salvador, or an elderly parent succumbs in bed from lack of sufficient warmth, a portion of all of us dies, too. When enough of us care about each other to rectify the inequities in this life, we may be able to have a world at peace with itself.

The condition of this world can be corrected when the decisions of the head are practiced with and through the humble heart.

To the editor:

As I read about the controversy over abortion these days, I vividly recall other stories about abortion that I read as a youth. Those stories told of the terrible price paid by women who sought illegal abortions or who attempted to abort themselves. Those stories described in grisly detail the operations of the back-alley butcher shops that flourished in the 1950s and early '60s. I recall the grim statistics on death and illness resulting from the unsanitary conditions and improper, often simply dangerous methods of illegal or self-induced abortion.

The arguments over when life begins or a woman's right to choose abortion are emotional and complex. These questions deal with all of us in a sweeping way.

Let's ask this specific question: Will anti-abortion laws, whether state or federal, stop those women who are determined not to carry their fetuses to term? Personally I doubt it. Affluent women who simply go to a place where an abortion can be obtained; or they will find a private physician willing to perform the operation for an appropriate fee. Those women who can't afford this luxury will go back to looking for a "friend" who may "know someone who can help them with their problem." Once again, the grim toll of deaths and disease will begin to rise.

I honestly believe that, if the anti-abortion legislation now in Congress is made into law, thousands of poor and working-class women will be sent out of the clinics and back to the alleys and illegal butchers.

Regardless of how one feels about abortion itself, this should be considered before we go charging back to the good old days of yesteryear.

'The Man With No Fingerprints' Regretted Act

By NOEL YANCEY

To police and the news media in several states he was known as "the man with no fingerprints." But if the surgery Robert James Pitts had performed to erase the telltale whorls and ridges on the tips of his fingers was intended to fool the lawmen, it was a complete failure. Pitts' smudged prints were so well known that most fingerprint experts did not have to check their files to know to whom they belonged.

"It was the worst mistake I ever made," Pitts told a reporter in 1965. He said he wished he could undo that "hellish, agonizing operation. It will dog me the rest of my days."

Beginning at age 17, Pitts spent most of his life in prison, including stops at Alcatraz, the federal penitentiary in Atlanta and several others, and, like most convicts, he was, at least outwardly, repentant for his transgressions.

"If I had known then what I know now," he said in that 1965 interview, "things would have been a lot different."

"Despite what others may say," Pitts told the reporter, "I did not have the skin removed from my fingers so I could commit crimes without being detected. I did it because a New Jersey surgeon talked me into letting him experiment on such an operation. He wanted to see if the prints could be removed from a man's fingers."

The surgeon performed an operation on each hand. The skin was removed from the end of Pitts' fingers and an area of skin was peeled back on the side of his chest. His fingers were strapped to his sides so that the skin from those areas would be grafted onto his fingers. He had to hold his hands strapped to his sides for about three weeks before the stiches were clipped.

"It was like having your hand in a bed of hot coals," he related. "The pain was awful."

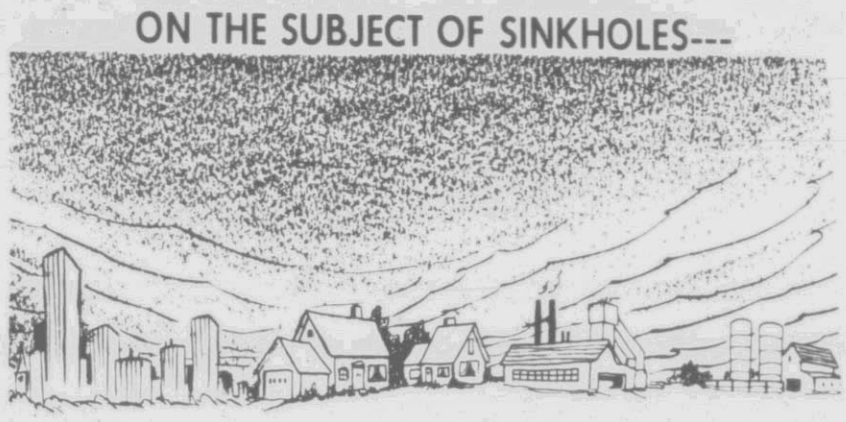

The science of fingerprinting is based on the fact that the patterns of whorls and ridges on the tips of a person's fingers are so distinctive that no two are ever alike. Pitts reportedly was the first ever to erase his fingerprints. His fingers left only smudges when he touched an object.

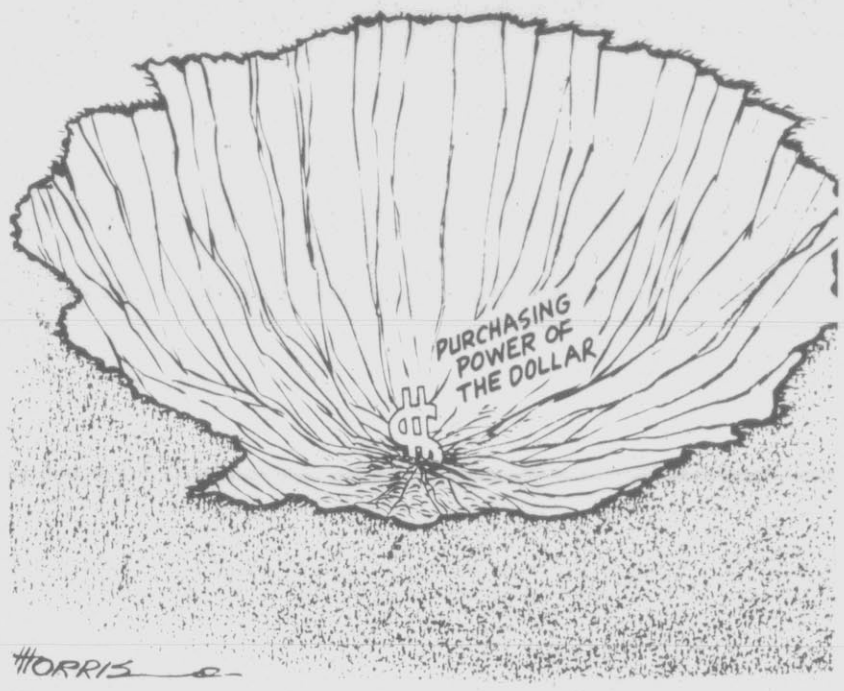

Pitts recalled he was "just a kid" in 1931 when he and a companion broke into a department store in Hickory, his home town, and was sentenced to 18 months in prison. He escaped four times while serving this sentence. While on escape, he stole cars, and got federal officers on his trail when he transported them to other states.

He wound up in the Atlanta penitentiary where he was classified as an incorrigible and transferred to Alcatraz. After three years, he was turned over to North Carolina authorities who still

Memory Of The Dead Kept Alive By Stones

NEW BERN — In Cedar Grove Cemetery in New Bern, life is abundant on, around and amid the slabs of marble and granite.

Goldfish swim in a lily-and-algae-covered pool. Squirrels whisk about and hornets dart in and out of ornate monuments. Mosquitos hum and bite the unwary visitor and lizards pursue their daily activities.

At one end of the spectrum, the plaintive mourning dove calls; at the other, chattering sparrows gossip.

Cicadas drown out crickets and the traffic noises just beyond the rock wall that surrounds one of North Carolina's oldest cemeteries.

But what about the dead in the midst of all this life? Someone must have loved one of them dearly. Her marker reads:

SUSAN J. SHERROD

I have laid her under the fresh green sod
With a heart almost broken, yet trusting in God.
The heart and the form which
I cherished here
I shall meet again in a happier sphere.

This sentiment carries with it a note of optimism:

GEORGE PULLEN
1831-1853

Shed not for him the bitter tear.
Nor give the heart to vain.
'Tis but the casket that lies
The gem that filled it sparkles yet.

IN MEMORY OF SARAH JONES
Consort of John J. Jones
1776-1831

But O the soul that never dies
At once it leaves the clay
Yet thoughts pursue it where it flies
And trace its wondrous ways.

Surely the most touching verses are those dedicated to young children:

SUSAN E.
Daughter of Wm. S. and J.M. Phillips
Born Feb. 22, 1872
Died April 11, 1881

In Cedar Grove under a little mound,
A flower is planted to bloom on nicer ground.
Thus flowers from earth by death are driven
To bloom more pure and chaste in heaven.
Tears will moisten this lonely sod
Sunshine comes alone from God.

Only half a headstone remains over this grave, so the identity of the dead is lost. Nevertheless, the sense of release remains vivid:

Her languishing head at rest
Its thinking and aching are o'er
Her quiet immovable breast
Is heaved by affliction no

The longest epitath in the cemetery is for 22-year-old William Capers Pearce. It is a poem written from the bereaved heart of his mother:

Within the dark coffin
They have laid you to rest.
The clods of earth lie
Cold upon thy breast.
But darker the home
Whose circle thou hast left,
And colder the heart of
Thy mother bereft.
I love thee my boy
Thou was fair as the dove.
Thy smile 'twas sunshine
Thy fond glance 'twas love.
Thy voice 'twas music
More sweet to my heart
Than the song of the night bird
Or the cry of the lark.
Thy heart was as pure
And thy life was as frail
As the flowers now clasped
In thy fingers so pale
Thy life was so short
As the flowerets bloom.
Yet thy memory will linger
Like the roses perfume.
Rest on a dearest one,
I cannot call thee back
To travel with me
O'er life's thorny track.
Thou art safe with thy Saviour
Thy warfare is done
But I must fight on 'til the victory is won.
Then when the trials of life are o'er
And sin and temptation beset me no more
I will meet thee my Capers on Canaan's bright plain
With thee and my Saviour forever to reign
Jan. 27, 1847-July 19, 1869

The markers march on and on in straggled disorder. The day draws toward its end, the tombstones casting ghost-like shadows across the grass and reflecting the fire of the setting sun.

The crepe myrtle nestles in its Spanish moss blanket and life goes on in the night, while the dead sleep.

Life Is Made Difficult By Generous Parents

I want all you generous parents to know how rough you're making it for the rest of us. Do you have any idea how deprived my child felt when her best friend got an Incredible Hulk Bubble machine for behaving in the grocery store? And I had almost succeeded in convincing Meg that a vanilla wafer was an adequate reward.

It's no wonder that her favorite game is "poor little orphan." I'm sure that's how she sees herself when the rest of her friends do flips on the playgound to show off their UnderRoos and all she is able to reveal is a bland white bottom.

I don't expect her to understand why my miser's heart becomes arrhythmic at the mere thought of spending $5 on a scrap of blue and white nylon. Nor do I expect her to realize why I insist on sending peanut butter crackers for her snack instead of Snickers, why I supplement her sandwich with carrot sticks instead of potato chips, or why I restrict her choice of cereals so severely. Slim Goodbody and I don't have a chance against peer pressure, her taste buds, and a steady diet of television commercials that tout the nutritional value of the latest brand of cavities in a box.

Still, I often find it extremely hard not to cave into the current craze in conspicuous consumption, especially when the Tooth Fairy visits. The Tooth Fairy used to bring me 10 cents a tooth, but times have changed. The first time Meg lost a tooth, Phillip wanted the fairy to leave her four quarters.

"Good grief, we're not buying dentures. We're only buying one tooth," I said. "Two dimes and a nickel will be plenty."

And for awhile it was. As long as Meg looked upoin her bounty as "three monies," she was satisfied. But she began to learn about the value of each of those "monies" in school this year, and she began to hear about what the Tooth Fairy was bringing to everyone else.

For instance, the fairy left a book for one child and a model car for another.

"I wouldn't want anything like that," I said when she came home with the news. "It would make my pillow too lumpy."

She looked wistful. "I wouldn't mind."

I had almost talked myself into asking the fairy to get a small treat (a very small treat) for Meg's next tooth, but Meg happened to lose it one night after the stores had closed. So the fairy left her two dimes and a nickel again.

At first she was excited. "Is that enough to buy a Snickers?" she asked.

I was feeling like a big spender. "If it's not, I'll pay the difference."

Unfortuately, the little girl who carpools with us had also lost a tooth the night before. "And do you know what the Tooth Fairy brought?" she crowed. "A dollar!"

Meg was amazed. "A whole dollar?"

"That's right. One tooth - one dollar. What did she bring you?"

Meg kicked the back of my seat in disgust. "Twenty-five cents."

It was her friend's turn to be amazed. "Is that all?"

"Yeah," Meg sniffed. "My tooth fairy is cheap.

Pentagon planners and the congressional defense bloc worry that U.S. allies and adversaries alike will read cancellation of the racetrack system as this country's inability to make tough weapons decisions stick. To avert that impression, the president ought to have an alternative plan ready to announce the moment he kills the Carter plan. As of now, however, that is unlikely.

Obtaining a new consensus out of the diverse views within Reagan's administration by mid-summer is no easier than it was for Carter himself to select the racetrack system after years of agonizing. The latest evidence of this difficulty is the Senate decision to hold new MX hearings, beginning next month, by a special subcommittee headed by Laxalt, with Garn a key member.

Pointing toward the early demise of the Carter plan, Laxalt and Garn are calling their new probe "a search for a military effective, rapidly-deployable and saleable compromise basing mode." This is but the latest of innumerable MX-basing studies by outside specialists, the Pentagon, defense think tanks and congressional committees. Predictably, the Laxalt study will not be the last.

In Reagan's defense, there is one new ingredient added to the mystery of how to deploy a survivable land-based deterrent. They would consider cancelling the MX missle itself, substituting a much smaller new missle capable of being airlifted on helicopters or VSTOL aircraft to remote areas (hence its nickname "grasshopper"). Or, they might use the MX missle as a replacement for the present land-based Minuteman force, scrapping the racetrack basing mode.

Both alternatives are under consideration by Reagan and will be studied in the new Laxalt-Garn hearings. That leaves a basic question unanswered: Can the Reagan administration pull together the competing doctrines of a survivable land-based system in time to announce the change simultaneously with cancellation of the racetrack option?

think you're getting beef," said a butcher's agent who would not give his name. "It's cheaper for him to buy camel than beef, and the profits are greater."

Meat prices, never low because of the costs of importing beef and lamb from as far away as Australia and New Zealand, rose rapidly last summer, reaching $6.40 a kilogram (2.2 pounds).

In angry reaction, President Anwar Sadat called for a month-long boycott of meat last September, and set a government ceiling of $4 per kilogram at the end of the ban. Butchers adhered to the fixed price briefly, but meat prices are again on the climb, touching $5 for a kilo.

At either price, the majority of Egyptians, with an average per capita income of $370 annually, can only afford meat as a luxury on special occasions.

"The government price for camel meat is $2.57 per kilo, at the butcher's, after slaughtering and deboning. But with the traders at Imbaba selling the best quality camel still alive at $2.20 per kilo, it follows that the butchers find the government ceiling unrealistic," Abul-Qassim said.

Sheikh Aly and his brother Ibrahim have their offices at the market, one of 14 principal agents who set up there to handle the lively trade. Most of the agents and sellers are Sudanese.

There are about 2 million or 3 million camels in the northern part of the Sudan, Abul-Qassim said. He and Ibrahim bring some 2,000 camels to Cairo each year, in 20 trips between the months of October and May, before the scorching summer heat sets in.

Egypt does not breed camels, in spite of and perhaps because of its high consumption of the animal as meat, and for its leather and fertilizer from its bones.

Common Sense And The Social Security Crisis

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Mr. Reagan overshot his target in last week's proposals to rescue the Social Security system, but his tactics were exactly right. The president may have shocked a complacent country into abrupt awareness of the mess we are in.

To say that the system is in deep trouble is to put the matter mildly. The system is going broke. Successive Congresses have overloaded Social Security with outlays beyond actuarial calculations; and though Social Security taxes have been increased to a point of rebellion, even these taxes are not enough.

The demographic considerations should alarm any person with eyes to read the statistics. When Social Security came into being in 1935, a child had a life expectancy of 61 years. Today's child has a life expectancy of 74 years. At one time "early retirement" at 62 and "full retirement" at 65 made sense; those prospects are no longer affordable. More persons are living longer, and relatively speaking, there are fewer productive workers to support them.

Given this grim state of affairs, it is imperative that some drastic changes be undertaken. Quick fixes won't suffice.

Congress has two options, or perhaps a combination of both. The first is to increase income; the second is to reduce benefits. Neither option is painless.

Social Security taxes, as such, cannot wisely be increased. Every covered worker now pays 6.65 percent of his wages up to $29,700 a year. His employer pays the same amount. Ten years hence the rate is to go to 7.65 percent. For more than half the families in the nation, Social Security taxes now are greater than income taxes. To be sure, the mounting costs could be financed by transferring part of the expense to the Treasury's general fund, but unless other taxes were raised to pay the bill, the effect would be merely to swell the federal deficit. Another effect would be to convert Social Security into just plain public welfare. Who wants that?

On the other side of the ledger, prospective benefits could be reduced. This is Mr. Reagan's choice, and he is catching a heavy bombardment for his courage in making that choice. Some of the administration's proposals, in my own view, are unduly harsh and abrupt. Under existing law, a covered worker may take early retirement at 62 and receive 80 percent of the benefits he would have received by waiting until age 65. Mr. Reagan would reduce that to 55 percent, starting in 1982. This is too much, too soon. If such a cutback were made applicable to workers now 50 or younger, a more reasonable time would be provided in which retirement plans could be revised.

A better approach, as I see it, might be to revise the skewed formula by which cost-of-living adjustments now are made in benefit payments. I think it also would make sense, as life expectancy continues to increase, to phase in full retirement at 68 instead of 65.

A still better approach, looking a long way down the road, would be to introduce new elements of voluntarism into the program. Precisely this idea is advocated by A. Haeworth Robertson in an important new book from Security Press. Mr. Robertson was chief actuary for Social Security, 1975-78. He writes with a bell-like ring of authority. His idea is to let persons under 45 purchase "Freedom Bonds" up to 10 percent of their annual taxable income. These bonds, indexed against inflation, would be redeemable at age 60. Persons now over 45 would remain in the present Social Security system. Twenty years hence, when the under-45 bond buyers reached retirement age, they would have their bonds plus a flat minimum monthly payment from a reduced Social Security program.

Mr. Robertson's proposal is the first of its kind I have seen from a responsible source. I am not qualified to examine his actuarial tables, but as a concept his plan is excellent. It would lower the tax burden upon low-income workers and it would give other workers greater freedom to develop their own retirement programs.

By asking for more drastic changes than it expects Congress to approve, the administration may be able to settle for other reforms that will accomplish the same end. The details can be worked out. What is necessary is that we agree that a critical problem exists, and that it must be resolved.

Five Senators Changed Vote On Abortion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The angels of the political right and the threat of tough election challenges may have helped force the hand of senators who last week helped approve the most restrictive ban on federally funded abortions ever.

Five Democrats who previously supported milder restrictions on abortions voted with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the conservative who brought the issue to an up-or-down vote. All five are up for re-election next year.

Except when pregnancy threatens the life of the woman, the senators voted not to allow Medicaid financing of abortions.

Helms made sure those who were uncomfortable with the volatile issue could not duck into the shelter of procedural votes or compromise language.

Just before the roll call began, Helms announced, "For those who traditionally have been pro-lifers, their vote will be attentively watched on this motion."

Three of the five Democrats — Robert Byrd of West Virginia, Lawton Chiles of Florida and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas — seem to be in good shape in 1982. But the anti-abortion lobby swept other supposedly secure former colleagues out of office in 1978.

The other two — James Sasser of Tennessee and Howard Cannon of Nevada — are considered to be facing tough re-election fights.

All five senators declined to vote with Helms last fall. Among the five who joined Helms this time, only Cannon acknowledges his position is changing.

Before the 52-43 vote, Senate policy had been to allow federal funding of abortions if the life of the woman was in danger, or in the case of rape or incest.

Chiles and Cannon, who voted for the rape and incest exemption last year, in effect voted against it last week by embracing the Helms position.

Bentsen, Byrd and Sasser, however, voted four years ago for the most liberal among the various proposals, allowing abortions when "medically necessary." Helms decried the language as tantamount to "abortion on demand."

Aides to most of the five senators say their bosses were forced to vote for the strict Helms language or no abortion restrictions at all.

If the Senate defeated Helms, to approve no language at all, a compromise would have had to have been worked out in a conference committee with the House, which passed the strict language.

Because most of the senators on the conference committee would have been strongly anti-abortion, there was little doubt as to the outcome, said Mark Hatfield, R-Ore. Hatfield, an opponent of abortion, pleaded with colleagues to keep the extraneous issue off the supplemental appropriations bill he was shepherding.

Hostess and Craft Artisans To Be In Our Williamsburg Shop

Williamsburg® Hostess

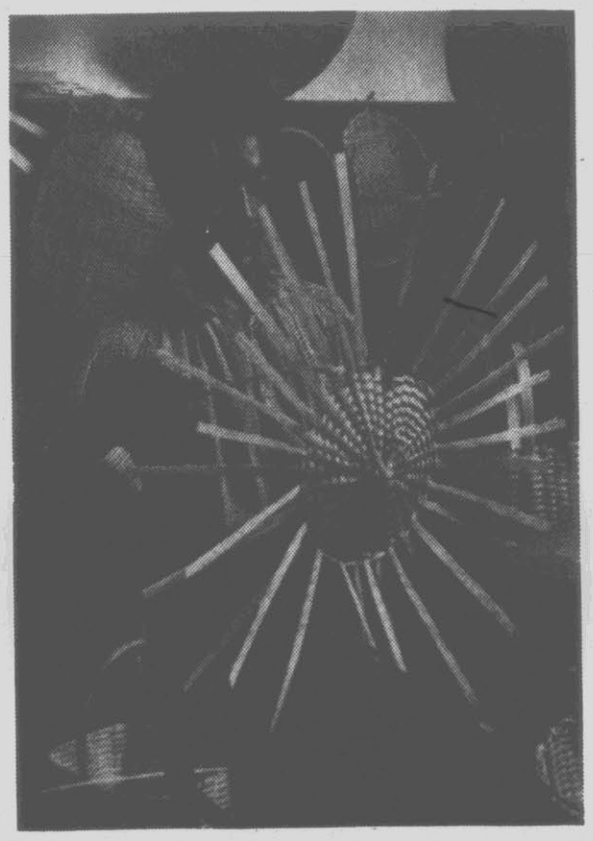

Mrs. Elizabeth Callis will be in our Williamsburg Shop Monday and Tuesday. She will interpret the Colonial way of life and will describe the beautifully preserved area in Virginia called 18th century Williamsburg®. During this period, she will explain how exquisite furniture and artisan styles emerged as first class hand-craftsmanship. She'll recreate the scene for you . . . 'Bustling down the brick streets to marketplace, you'll meet the cobbler, the baker and the candlestick maker. Near the Governor's Palace in a local tavern you'll join your friends — the silversmith, leather worker and carpenter for a round of ale . . .' Swishing about in her farthingales, Mrs. Callis will be answering questions as your official Williamsburg® hostess. Please join Mrs. Callis at tea on Monday the 25th or Tuesday the 26th.

Visit with our guests
Monday, May 25th until 9 p.m. and Tuesday, May 26th until 2 p.m.

The Colonial Musician

'Oh . . . the sweet raphsody of that glorious melody of old . . .' Colonial Williamsburg® Music Teacher, Tom Marshall plays more than just the fiddle and the drum. Being a resident Williamsburg® Music Teacher, well equipped with a master's degree in Music Education, he plays the field. That is, the entire field of instruments attuned to the 18th century sound. Among the many instruments you'll find he's mastered is the Banjar (later developed into the banjo), Spanish and English guitars, German and English flutes (now called recorders), a hautboy (oboe) and violin. Also notwithstanding, he particularly enjoys performing on the harpsichord. He will be in our Williamsburg Shop on Monday, May 25th and Tuesday, May 26th to tell us about the instruments as well as perform. Tom spends his days a little differently than a Colonial music teacher. The Colonial teacher, on one hand would give lessons only to the adult aristocratic class, traveling in a 50-mile radius. Tom spends his time teaching young children on a local basis. Tom Marshall says the 18th century music teacher's career also fulfills the needs of the 20th century man.

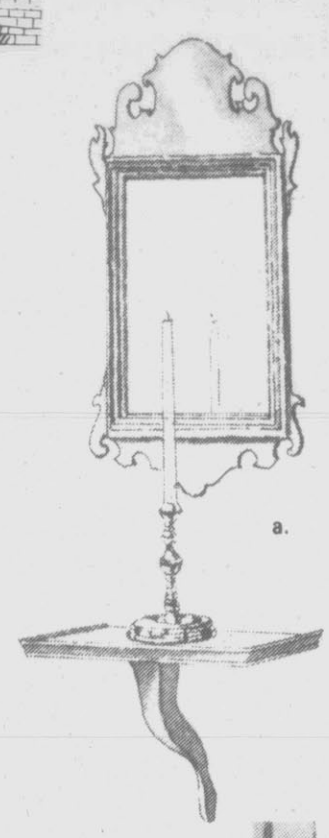

Ye Old Basket Maker

'A-Tisket, A-Tasket . . . he makes every kind of basket.' In a one-room shop spiced with the woodsy fragrance of fresh oak shavings, Roy Black, basket maker, weaves wood strips into baskets. Daily, he produces between 5 and 6 baskets all by himself. These baskets include all types designed to hold cut flowers, shopping purchases or clothes. In our Williamsburg Shop — he will demonstrate his Colonial basketry craft. Also, he will explain historically how baskets have been used as boats, houses, chairs, cradles, coffins and even as artillery shell containers. As an official basket maker in Williamsburg, Va., he admits that during his youth he never even whittled, but now he uses his knife with amazing speed and dexterity as he shaves splits to smoothness or slices protruding ribs from finished baskets. Inside his shop on the grounds of the George Wythe House, Roy not only makes baskets, sells them and explains how they were made, but he really enthusiastically enjoys his craft. It requires 3½ hours to fashion a simple peck basket. That includes time to burst billets, scrape splits, construct an 8-piece frame resembling a sunburst, complete weaving and add hoop and handles. Come and see Roy Black in our Williamsburg Shop, Monday, May 25th and Tuesday, May 26th.

Come join us on Monday, May 25th and Tuesday, May 26th for the First Anniversary of our officially accredited

d. 18th-Century Porringer

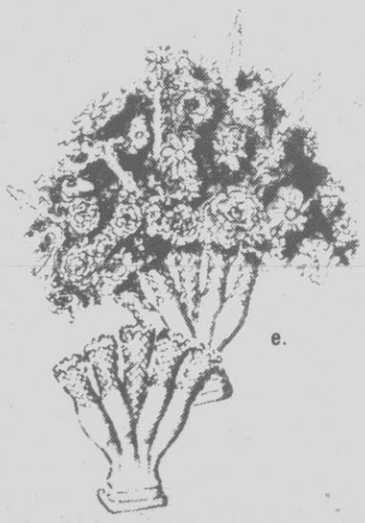

A porringer is an excellent small serving dish. Copied from an eighteenth century English antique, the porringer can be used for serving hors d'oeuvres, nuts, candies, puddings and small desserts. In pewter, 27.50.

e. Posy Holder Vase

Elegant posy holders are reproduced from an English Staffordshire 'finger vase'. A delight to any flower lover, it makes a fine accent piece. Posy holder, 85.00.

GLASS MAN — He stands 6-foot-8, weighs 250 pounds and is 32 inches wide at the shoulders — but he's as fragile as his name implies. Made almost entirely from scrap mirrors and glass, Glass Man welcomes customers to Charleston (S.C.) Glass Co. on Spruill Ave., and with scores of shiny surfaces to reflect his dozen or more pulsating lights, Glass Man does his job well. At right is company owner Harold Morgan. (AP Laserphoto) wanted him for escape.

"I was placed in hard solitary confinement at Central Prison in Raleigh for one year," Pitts recalled. "I almost starved to death. Then in June 1939 I was moved to Caledonia Prison Farm and put in stripes and chains. They kept me in a cage."

After his release in 1940, Pitts said he made his home in Charlotte. There he "got up with a man who wanted me to go on a safecracking job with him" at a wholesale store in North Wilkesboro. But the two thieves wound up with only three or four cases of cigarettes when the big safe proved too tough to crack. Pitts' companion subsequently was arrested in Charlotte and implicated him in the robbery.

But before officers could locate him, Pitts went to New Jersey where the operation on his finger tips was performed. After recovering from the surgery, Pitts went to San Diego and tried to get a job in an aircraft factory. But he found his smudged fingerprints a barrier to employment.

"I got a few odd jobs," he recalled, "and then started hitchhiking back to North Carolina." He was halted in El Paso, Texas, by two officers who demanded to see his draft card. He had none.

"They thought I was a spy who had slipped into the country from Mexico," said Pitts. He was taken to Austin, Texas, where he admitted his identity and told officers of his operation. They sent him back to North Carolina to stand trial for the North Wilkesboro burglary. He was sentenced to 16-20 years.

After he returned to Central Prison in 1941, a Charlotte girl, Hilda Shelby, began visiting Pitts, and a romance blossomed. Pitts and the girl were married in 1943. They set up housekeeping in Charlotte after Pitts' release from prison, and they had a daughter. He got a job as a pipe fitter in a Rock Hill, S.C., plant, commuting to work there daily until "the job gave out in 1948, and things got tight for me."

About a year later, Pitts and a companion robbed a country store at Salem Crossroads, near Winnsboro, S.C., tying up the 72-year-old storekeeper, Walsh Ladd, and fleeing with his life savings of $41,000. He was soon arrested and sentenced to 21 years in the South Carolina Penitentiary in Columbia. Upon his release late in 1964, Cabarrus County officers promptly arrested him for the robbery in August 1949 of Clarence Rollins. He was charged with breaking into the Rollins home at night — a capital offense — and was sentences to 15-20 years.

"I've done a lot of things," he said in the interview that followed his conviction, "but this is one crime I didn't commit. I swear I'm innocent."

Pitts' fingerprint operation accorded him a lot of notoriety, and a measure of immortality, for his case is written up by Andre A. Moenssens in a text book entitled "Fingerprint Techniques," along with other criminals, including the notorious gangster John Dillinger, who attempted to stave off identification by altering their fingerprints. Moenssens said Dillinger sought to destroy his fingerprints sometime in 1933-34 "apparently by applying corrosive acid to them." But he was identified by prints taken at the morgue after he was shot to death.

Moenssen said that after Pitts was arrested in Texas and told the story of his operation, "earlier fingerprints were discovered and Pitts was identified by ... (prints) on the second joints of his fingers.

"Pitts seemed to have gained nothing from his painful operation," Moenssen added. "If anything, because of the publicity given his case, Pitts was recognized far more readily by the strange, patternless skin on his fingertips than he might have been had he left his fingers intact."

"It was sort of like cutting off your nose," said Don Roberts, a fingerprint expert with the State Bureau of Investigation. "After you cut off your nose, everyone knows what you look like."

Mediator Says Effort To End Syrian-Israeli Dispute Will Continue

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.S. mediator Philip Habib brought his diplomatic effort in the Syrian-Israeli missile crisis to Jerusalem from Beirut Saturday after Syrian President Hafez Assad asserted a return to Damascus was pointless. Israeli government officials also showed impatience with the mission.

But late Saturday, Israel Television reported Habib would travel to Damascus Sunday. A U.S. Embassy official said he could neither confirm nor deny the report.

The veteran U.S. diplomat met with Prime Minister Menachem Begin after nightfall, the end of the Jewish sabbath.

"The diplomatic efforts continue," Habib said as he left Begin's residence after the 90-minute meeting. Habib is attempting to mediate between Israel, which is demanding removal of Syrian anti-aircraft missiles on both sides of the Syrian-Lebanese border, and Syria, which is refusing.

Both Israeli radio and television reports said Begin's Cabinet would decide Sunday on a date to set as the time limit for diplomatic efforts to gain a peaceful solution. They did not elaborate or give attribution for the reports, but the Israeli Cabinet's regular meeting day is Sunday.

Assad was quoted by the Syrian government newspaper Tishrin as saying, "We have nothing to offer, and the whole issue is bound on the other party."

Both Israeli and Lebanese government officials had expected Habib to see Assad next in his 2½-week-old shuttle mission.

In Tunisia, the 21-nation Arab League foreign ministers' conference pledged its full support of Syria — including miltary backing should war break out.

The Israeli military command charged that Libya had sent troops and arms to Syria and Lebanon.

A background paper issued by the command said a convoy that rolled from Syria into Lebanon Thursday night "apparently originated in Libya."

It said Libya sent anti-aircraft missiles and anti-aircraft guns to Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon in April, and also had armed Lebanese leftists with artillery, multiple rocket launchers and missiles. Several hundred Libyan military personnel are in Lebanon, the paper charged.

Habib flew out of Beirut Saturday morning as Lebanese President Elias Sarkis, forced into his palace's basement shelter because of shelling, was trying by telephone to arrange a new cease-fire between Syrian army and Christian militia units.

Starting at daybreak, fire from artillery, rockets and tanks roared across the Green Line, which divides the Lebanese capital into Christian and Moslem sectors. Lebanese police said at least two shells struck Sarkis' palace, one demolishing a second-floor bedroom, and at least one exploded in the gardens surrounding the nearby residence of U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean, where Habib had spent the night.

Police said eight Lebanese soldiers were wounded and sniper fire crackled throughout the day.

In Washington, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said there was hope as long as Habib remains in the Middle East. He rejected a Soviet call for an international conference on Lebanon.

Both sides in the missile standoff appeared to have hardened their positions in recent days.

Begin said Thursday that in addition to demanding withdawal of the missiles from eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, Israel wanted Syria to pull back missile batteries from either side of the Syrian-Lebanese border and promise not to shoot at Israeli planes over Lebanon.

The next day, Syria claimed its missiles had shot down two unmanned Israeli reconnaissance planes over Lebanon and Israel conceded one drone had been downed.

The latest Mideast storm began building in late April when Israel, seeking to help besieged Christians in the eastern Lebanon town of Zahle, shot down two Syrian helicopter gunships. Syria moved the missiles into Lebanon the next day, and Israel has threatened to bomb the batteries if Syria doesn't withdraw them.

Israel contends the weapons inhibit the freedom its pilots have had since 1976 to conduct aerial surveillance and stage strikes against Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

Haig said in Washington Friday that the objective of the U.S. mediation effort is to "permit the parties to return to the status quo ante."

As to the Soviet suggestion for an international conference on Lebanon, Haig said any international conferences involving the Soviets should first deal with their military intervention in Afghanistan.

The Soviets have a 20-year defense pact with Syria, and Moscow has been in contact with Damascus throughout the crisis. Haig said it was "too early to say whether they (the Soviets) have made a constructive or counterproductive contribution."

In Tunis, the Arab League's 21-member ministerial council called on the United States to cease supporting Israel or face "serious conflict with the entire Arab nation."

Satellite Launched

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The world's largest telecommunications satellite was launched Saturday on an Atlas Centaur rocket at Kennedy Space Center.

The launch at 6:42 p.m. EDT first had been scheduled for Thursday but was delayed because of problems detected in the two computers of the rocket's main safety control system.

The satellite, know as the INTELSAT V-B, is scheduled to reach a stationary orbit Monday about 22,300 miles above Earth.

The orbiter is capable of transmitting about 12,000 telephone calls simultaneously as well as two color TV channels. That is double the capacity of the INTELSAT IV-A satellites that now form the heart of the 105-nation International Telecommunications Satellite Organization.

The satellite is the second of a new series of nine international telecommunications satellites. The first was launched successfully in December and moved into position over the Atlantic, where it is still undergoing testing.

INTELSAT is an international organization formed in 1964 that now includes 106 member countries which jointly own and operate 12 satellites over the Atlantic, Indian and Pacific oceans. The global system is handling about two-thirds of the world's overseas telecommunications traffic, ranging from telegrams and phone calls to television and data.

Store Clerk Hit By Robber

Police said an attendant at Fast Fare No. 4, 2010 E. 10th St., was struck over the head with the butt of a shotgun early Saturday by a robber who fled with $40 to $50 in cash.

A police spokesman said the robber entered the store about 3 a.m., wearing a ski mask and armed with a pump shotgun. The man demanded that the attendant put money from the cash register into a paper bag, the officer said, and ordered the attendant, Gary Patrick McBennett, to walk toward the back of the store. McBennett was hit over the head and the robber fled through the store's front entrance.

The robbery is still under investigation by the Greenville Police Department.

Political Tightrope In Evidence On Tax Cut Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration and House Democrats are walking a tightrope on the tax cut issue, neither wanting to compromise too much but both wanting to avoid the bitterness that developed during the budget fight.

After a three-week stalemate that one congressional leader described as a game of political "chicken," Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., sat down last week to discuss their views on a tax cut.

The administration wants a 30 percent cut in tax rates during the next three years. Rostenkowski has proposed a one-year reduction in the maximum tax rate, from 70 percent to 50 percent.

The administration has remained firm on its proposal for a multi-year bill with marginal rate cuts, but has indicated the size, the effective date, and possibly the inclusion of some specific tax changes are negotiable.

No agreement was reached during their first meeting, but Rostenkowski said he would get back to Regan this week after he meets with Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan., and discusses the issue with his fellow Democrats.

Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Republican on the Ways and Means Committee, said the previous deadlock was a simple case of neither side wanting to go first.

The administration, in the wake of its stunning budget victory in Congress, did not want to compromise unnecessarily, although it appears there are not enough votes in the House to pass a "pure" version of the president's tax proposal.

Rostenkowski, in his first year as chairman of the House tax-writing committee, wanted to put together a package assured of passage. But some observers said he didn't want to be viewed as an obstructionist by making the first move to alter President Reagan's tax plan.

A Rostenkowski aide insisted the chairman was not playing games; he just did not feel the need to rush into discussions.

The catalysts for the Regan-Rostenkowski meeting were Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., and three of his conservative southern colleagues who had decided things were moving too slowly on the tax issue in Congress.

Most of the 44 members of the Conservative Democratic Forum oppose the president's 30 percent tax cut plan, but have said they could support a smaller, multi-year tax cut.

Repairs Begin On Leak In Nuclear Cooling Unit

ATHENS, Ala. (AP) — Technicians began repairs Saturday on a cooling system leak that sent 10,000 gallons of radioactive water into the nation's largest nuclear power plant and forced the shutdown of one reactor, said a spokesman for the Brown's Ferry plant operators.

Workers found the leak shortly after midnight around the stem of a discharge valve on one of two recirculation pumps in the drywell surrounding the reactor, one of three reactors at the huge plant, said Bob Boyer of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"We are looking at probably a day or so to finish the repairs," he said. "We are also going to do some other minor maintenance in there. If we don't have any other problems, we hope to have the unit back in service early this week."

The leak, which began Thursday, posed no threat to plant pesonnel or to the public, said Jim Hufham, director of TVA's emergency control center in Chattanooga, Tenn.

All the spilled cooling water was contained within the drywell and recirculated by a drainage system, and no radiation was released, TVA officials said.

The drywell, with steel-reinforced concrete walls several feet thick, is the primary containment structure surrounding the reactor. It is "the first line of protection for plant employees and the public from the radiation generated by the nuclear reactor when it is operating," Boyer said.

TVA declared a "site emergency" at the plant when drains in the drywell indicated water was leaking at the rate of 21 gallons per minute, Hufham said.

Accidents Investigated

An estimated $9,450 in property damages occured here Friday and Saturday as the result of traffic accidents, according to reports of the Greenville Police Department.

A car driven by Estelle Hudson Jomp of 102 N. Holly St. struck a parked police vehicle on South Cotanche Street Friday at 2:15 p.m. Estimated damages to the Jomp vehicle was $400 and $50 to the police car.

Cars driven by Ann Christine Martin of 321 Northfield Dr., Raleigh, and Barbara Harrington James of Route 10 collided on Dickerson Avenue Friday at 11:45 a.m. The Martin vehicle sustained no damages and an estimated $250 of damage was done to the James vehicle.

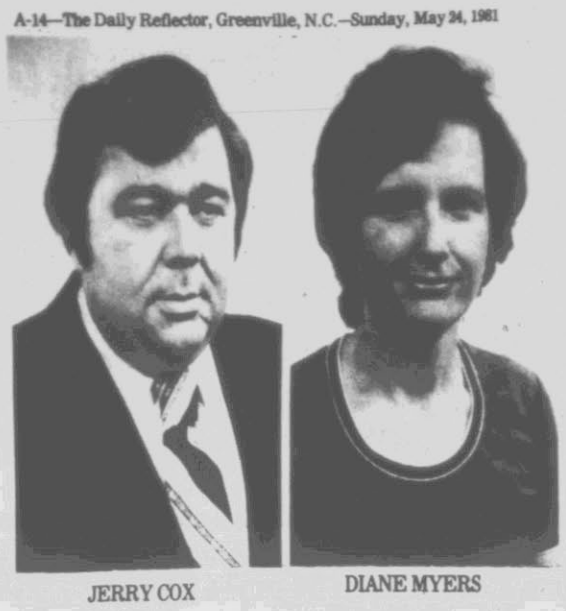

A Sanford driver, Anna Dell Watts, was treated and released at Pitt Memorial Hospital for injuries sustained following a two-car accident which occurred Friday at 2 p.m. at the corner of 10th and Cotanche streets. Cars operated by Timmie Ray Pittman of Route 1, Winterville, and Anna Dell Watts of 1104 Wilkins Drive, Sanford, collided. Estimated damage of the Watts vehicle was $1,500 and $5,000 damage to the Pittman vehicle. Pittman was charged with a safe movement violation.

Kristina Love Troutman of 302-C Eastbrook Apartments was charged with careless and reckless driving after running into a parked car on North Elm Street Saturday at 2:14 a.m. Estimated damage to the Troutman vehicle was $500 and $450 to the parked car.

Cars driven by Gerald Oliver Smith of Bethel and Lynwood Bryant Jones of Simpson collided on Dickinson Avenue Saturday at 2:45 p.m. An estimated $200 damage was done to the Smith vehicle and $800 to the Jones car.

A parked vehicle was struck by a hit and run driver Saturday at 7:47 a.m. on Bonner Lane. Estimated damage to the parked vehicle was $300.

JERRY COX DIANE MYERS

Leaders Installed

Annual installation activities for the Greenville Jaycees and Jay-C-Ettes were held Saturday night at the American Legion Building as the local service organizations welcomed new administrations for 1981-82.

The Jaycees installed Jerry Cox as the chapter's new president, while Diane Myers was sworn in as president of the Jay-C-Ettes.

Reich L. Welborn of Durham, who is running unopposed for president of the N.C. Jaycees, was the guest speaker and installed the new officers.

In addition to Cox, other officers taking their oaths included: Jack Myers, administrative assistant; Brad Walls, internal vice president; Mike Messick, external vice president; Brian Berkey, ways and means vice president; Preston Sisk, secretary; Kinny Powell, treasurer; Ricky Jackson, assistant treasurer; and Ken Smith, state director. Mike Joyner is past president of the chapter.

Appointed positions included Charles Asbell, chaplain; Mark Meltzer, parliamentarian; and Randy Doub, legal counsel.

Directors installed by Welborn were Kenneth Cherry, John White, Rufus Walston, Chip Smith, Waverly Barnes, Doug Bonds, Earl Wilson and Darrell Harrison. Greg Tripp continues as a member of the board.

New Jay-C-ette officers installed with Ms. Myers included: Mary Jane Sisk, external vice president; Laura Jackson, internal vice president; Faye Tripp, ways and means vice president; Ludie Smith, secretary; Vickie Hudson, treasurer; Linda Asbell, reporter; and Marilyn Danford, parliamentarian. Susie Clark is the outgoing president of the chapter.

Incoming directors this year are Patricia Barnes, Lois Hecker and Ross Walls.

A Jaycee International Senatorship, the highest award given by the Jaycees on an international level, was presented to John Jackson, who served as president in 1977-78. The honor also provides Jackson with lifetime membership in the organization.

Gene Stack was presented a Jaycee Ambassador Award, the highest honor on a national level given by the Jaycees.

Doug Hill and Joel Johnson were cited as Jaycee of the year and rookie of the year, respectively.

Cox, a Greenville native, graduated with a B.S. degree in 1969 from East Carolina University. He is employed by Carr Realty Management Sales Inc. of Charlottesville, Va. as property manager for Tar River Estates here.

The new president is married to the former Betty S. Williams of Greenville and they have two children. The family attends the Presbyterian Church here.

Ms. Myers, a 1972 graduate of ECU with a B.S. degree in intermediate education, teaches the fifth grade at Fort Barnwell Elementary School in Craven County.

During her association with the Jay-C-Ettes, she has served as secretary, parliamentarian and director.

She and her husband, Jack, have two children and reside on Circle Drive.

Califano Supports Private Insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joseph A. Califano Jr., who spent three years futilely trying to make national health insurance a reality under former President Carter, now believes it should be left to the private sector.

The former secretary of health, education and welfare still favors federalizing the state-run Medicaid program and expanding health protection for the poor, but he said in an interview, "I would go slow on (national) health insurance now. I'd go slow on the government determining all the health care that people get."

Califano, whom Carter fired as HEW chief in July 1979 during a Cabinet shake-up, explains his turnabout on a national health plan in a new book on his 30-month tenure at HEW entitled, "Governing America: An Insider's Report from the White House and the Cabinet."

He said that with the sway special interest groups have over Congress, "it's highly doubtful that we could get a national health bill without having to buy out every interest involved" from doctors to hospitals to drug companies to unions. "And that expense is staggering."

Califano relates in the book how he tried to mediate between the far more sweeping health plan pushed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy Jr. and the go-slow approach backed by Carter, who was worried about costs and insisted on a phased-in plan that initially would protect only against health catastrophes. Congress bought neither approach.

Mystery Continues Over Deaths

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Bodies have been dug up, a hospital shut down, and a doctor and nurse are under investigation in a medical mystery that started with the deaths of 25 patients at a small hospital and has spread to three Southern California counties.

The state Registered Nursing Board said Friday it is investigating nurse Robert Diaz, while the Board of Medical Quality Assurance confirmed Thursday that it is investigating Dr. Norbert Babiera.

The California Department of Health Services has temporarily closed the 36-bed Community Hospital of the Valleys in Perris, where the 25 deaths occurred in March and April. And the agency is preparing for a hearing that could permanently revoke the hospital's license.

Coroners in Riverside, Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties are examining a total of 32 deaths in studies that so far have included autopsies on at least 19 bodies, 12 of them exhumed from their graves. District attorneys in two counties are investigating.

A lawyer for Diaz has filed a $100 million defamation lawsuit against several doctors, hospitals and Riverside County officials.

Most of the Perris patients who died were elderly and all were treated in the intenstive care ward. Authorities said the cause of death in some cases did not match that listed on the death certificate.

Babiera was medical chief of staff at the hospital and Diaz worked there.

At least one investigation apparently grew primarily from news reports. "There is no specific evidence," said Margaret Saito of the nursing board. "Our source mainly was the media reports. We are investigating (Diaz) to see if there is any basis for substantiation."

Most investigators seem to agree with Riverside Coroner William Dykes, who said in an interview, "We haven't ruled it out ... but coincidence in all these cases seems very unlikely."

The University of Utah's Center for Human Toxicology is testing tissue samples from many of the victims. No one at the center will say much, except that the tests will probably take another month.

Lawyer Says Joan Little Wounded In Gun Attack

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joan Little, acquitted in 1975 of killing a white jailer in a North Carolina prison, was shot and wounded on a Brooklyn street last week, her lawyer said Saturday.

One month before the shooting, a threatening message was found in her apartment, he said.

Miss Little, a 27-year-old black woman, became a rallying point for feminists and jail reformers when she was charged with killing a prison guard she said tried to rape her.

Miss Little was acquitted of the charge, but later escaped prison and was recaptured in New York after a high speed car chase through Brooklyn.

The lawyer, William Kunstler, said Miss Little, who was released from prison two years ago, found "Death to Joan" scrawled in lipstick on a mirror in her apartment at 1187 Sterling St., Brooklyn, when she returned from a trip to Phoenix, Ariz. on April 9.

She had gone there to testify in a kidnapping trial, the lawyer said.

Kunstler said Miss Little was frightened and quickly moved to a new apartment. She was shot shortly after midnight last Sunday while walking home from a pizza parlor with her boyfriend, identified as Steve Tarrington, on Albany Avenue in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn.

Kunstler said Miss Little heard two shots and felt a pinch in her breast, but did not think she was shot. She later noticed blood and walked to nearby St. John's Hospital.

Kunstler said the bullet had pierced her left lung and lodged in her heart.

A spokesman for the hospital said Miss Little is listed in "fair" condition.

"I have no theory as to why she was shot," Kunstler said. "She says she doesn't know who was after her. She's been working steadily, and has had no brushes with the law that I know of."

After Miss Little was paroled in 1979, she worked as a clerical assistant for the National Conference of Black Lawyers. She is now a clerical worker for a Brooklyn auto company, Kunstler said.

Miss Little became a national figure when she was tried for killing a white jailer in the Beaufort County Jail, where she was being held awaiting an appeal of a prison sentence of seven to ten years for breaking and entering.

The prison guard, Clarence Alligood, was stabbed 11 times with an ice pick.

Miss Little, who claimed she killed Alligood to avoid being sexually assaulted, was found acquitted of murder. She escaped from a minimum security prison in 1977. In December of that year, she was recaptured in New York City after a 70 mph car chase through Brooklyn. She was returned the next year to North Carolina, where she served an additional year and came to New York after being paroled.

Helms' Plan Ousts Pair

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The ouster of two deputies to John H. Holdridge was the price exacted by Sen. Jesse Helms in a deal for dropping his objection to Holdridge's nomination as head of the State Department's East Asian and Pacific Bureau, high sources said Saturday.

It was another example of the considerable influence the conservative North Carolina Republican has on Secretary of State Alexander Haig's choices for top policy positions in the State Department.

This week Helms unexpectedly ended his opposition to the nomination of Holdridge as assistant secretary for East Asia and the Pacific. But in return, Helms demanded two assistants to Holdridge be eased out — deputy assistant secretaries Michael A. Armacost and Ginger Lew.

Armacost is a career Foreign Service officer who will be relocated. Lew is a political appointee, first hired during the Carter administration through a public advertisement seeking Americans interested in working in the government.

Helms, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, is a major supporter of the government of Taiwan and objected to Carter granting the People's Republic of China diplomatic recognition. With the new administration, Helms wants Washington to move closer to Taiwan.

Holdridge, Armacost and Lew did not favor his view.

A State Department source, declining to speak for attribution, said a deal was arranged with Helms this week to clear the way for Senate confirmation of Holdridge.

On Tuesday, Helms told Senate Republican leader Howard Baker the confirmation process on Holdridge should be completed. He was confirmed within minutes, without objection.

But the cost to the administration was the removal of Armacost and Lew.

A source said Armacost had wanted to remain in his position for at least one year before he was relocated in the Foreign Service. This process will be accelerated.

Lew, a Chinese-American, apparently will return to private employment.

Neither could be reached for comment.

Research Team Says New Chemicals May Ease Pain Of Arthritis

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — A group of chemical compounds developed recently is proving better in tests at easing the pain and inflammation of arthritis than any drugs now on the market, a team of scientists announced Saturday.

The researchers said the chemicals have not been tested in humans yet, but they have been found to eliminate arthritis induced in laboratory rats and to ease the rodents' pain by 88 percent.

Doses comparable to what humans could receive some day have not indicated any harmful side effects, such as the stomach problems that occur when humans use aspirin for arthritis pain, the researchers said.

The chemical compounds blocked the release of prostaglandins, a substance in the body that causes pain and swelling. Aspirin and cortisone work in much the same way.

There are more than 31,600,000 people in the United States with arthritis severe enough to require medical care, according to the Arthritis Foundation. Each year, the painful and sometimes crippling disease claims 1,000,000 new victims.

Rheumatoid arthritis, whose victims number 6,500,000, is generally the most serious form of the ailment because it can destroy joints and carries the risk of crippling. Last year, the Arthritis Foundation announced that researchers had identified an agent, the Epstein-Barr virus, as a possible cause of rheumatoid arthritis. Discovery of the possible link of the virus to arthritis opens to way for development of a vaccine against the disease, they said.

Dr. Bernard F. Spielvogel, an administrator with the U.S. Army's research office in Research Triangle Park, said scientists had formulated the compounds as a possible cancer cure.

Those experiments proved only mildly successful, he said. But Dr. Iris Hall, associate professor of pharmacy at the University of North Carolina, discovered some of the chemicals work the same as anti-inflammatory drugs.

"She then screened them as anti-arthritics and found that some of them block general inflammation, arthritis and the writhing reflex associated with inflammation in rats," he said.

The chemicals are called boron analogs, because they substitute the element boron for carbon in certain amino acids — the building blocks of proteins in human tissue.

Mrs. Hall tested the analogs on rats where painful swelling had been caused by injecting them with a mix of bacteria, oxygen and mineral oil. She examined how the compounds reduced the swelling and caused a drop in stomach muscle contractions — indicating the arthritis was causing less pain.

She found the analogs kept the rats' bodies from releasing prostaglandin. The compounds also prevented the release of certain enzymes that damage tissue.

Mrs. Hall said a pharmaceutical company plans to do more animal tests on the compounds and possibly try some tests on humans. Those human studies probably would take place in another country because American studies involve much paperwork.

Four Face Hearings

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Four of 10 mercenaries charged with planning to overthrow the government of a Caribbean island republic will appear in federal court Tuesday for a second arraignment, a prosecutor says.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Lindsay Larson refused Friday to indicate how the four would plead or if they had reached a plea bargain agreement with government officials.

The four, who earlier pleaded innocent to charges they violated federal firearms and neutrality statutes, are Robert William Prichard, 30, Raleigh, N.C.; Wolfgang Walter Droege, 31, Toronto, Canada; Larry Lloyd Jacklin, 22, Listowell, Canada; and Christopher Billy Anderson, 41, Oklahoma City.

A Houston man earlier this week admitted masterminding plans to overthrow the government of Prime Minister Mary Eugenia Charles on the tiny island of Dominica, 300 miles southeast of Puerto Rico.

In exchange for a guilty plea from Michael Perdue, 32, prosecutors said they would recommend six additional charges against him be dropped. Federal officials refused to detail the plea agreement and the formal bargaining letter was sealed at the request of Perdue's attorney.

The 10 soldiers of fortune, six with ties to the Ku Klux Klan or neo-Nazi groups — were arrested by federal undercover agents April 27 near Slidell, La., as they finalized plans for the coup attempt. Officers confiscated a cache of firerms and artillery during the arrests.

The men later were indicted by a federal grand jury for plotting to overthrow a nation friendly to the United States and related firearms violations.

Nine of the mercenaries remain jailed. Michael Norris, 24, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., was freed Thursday when his parents posted a $100,000 bond.

ECONOMIC TALKS

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski reviewed trade and economic issues here in a meeting with Swiss Economics Minister Fritz Honegger, the Polish news agency PAP reported Saturday.

Switzerland decided earlier this month to defer some $85 million in Polish debts that would have been due this year. Other Western creditors granted similar stays in the repayment schedule.

Hinckley Lawyers Offer Guilty Plea For Bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for John W. Hinckley Jr., who is charged with attempting to assassinate President Reagan, have offered a guilty plea in the case if the government would recommend he be sentenced as a juvenile, it was learned Saturday.

One Justice Department source, who declined to be identified, said that no such proposal had reached Attorney General William French Smith for a decision, but it was learned that it was virtually inconceivable that the Justice Department would accept the plea bargain or any one like it.

It also was learned Saturday that so far the proposal has been rejected by the U.S. attorney's office for the District of Columbia, which is presenting evidence to a federal grand jury in the case.

Under the proposed arrangement, Hinckley would plead guilty to some charge or charges in the case. In return, Hinckley's lawyers wanted the government to agree to recommend to the judge that Hinckley be sentenced under the federal Youth Corrections Act, which is designed to substitute rehabilitation for simple imprisonment.

Next Friday, Hinckley reaches his 26th birthday, after which he would no longer qualify for the special sentencing provisions of the act.

The law, which governs sentencing of defendants younger than 21, gives federal judges broad discretion in sentencing convicted adults between the ages of 21 and 26. Judges may grant probation or they may impose an indeterminate sentence of six years while the defendant receives treatment.

If an offender is not rehabilitated within six years, he or she could be ordered confined up to the maximum of the adult sentence. In Hinckley's case, that would be life if he were to plead guilty to attempting to assassinate Reagan.

Under the act, a convicted person can be released at any time if corrections authorities decide the defendant's anti-social tendencies have been corrected and he or she no longer poses a threat.

While imprisoned, a youthful offender is separated from adult prisoners. After his release his records are sealed from public access.

A defendant sentenced as an adult without benefit of the Youth Corrections Act usually must serve a third of the sentence before parole can be considered.

Hinckley is being defended by the firm of prominent Washington criminal lawyer Edward Bennett Williams. That firm has offered similar plea bargains in previous cases, said legal sources who declined to be identified by name.

Hinckley's principal attorney, Vincent Fuller, refused to accept a telephone call Saturday to discuss the case.

Thomas P. DeCair, chief Justice Department spokesman, said he would have no comment on the report.

Hinckley, from Colorado Springs, Colo., was arrested shortly after a gunman fired several .22-caliber gunshots outside the Washington Hilton Hotel on March 30, injuring Reagan, presidential press secretary James Brady and two law enforcement officers.

Since April, Hinckley has been held at the Federal Correctional Center in Butner, N.C., 25 miles northwest of Raleigh, for psychiatric tests by government and defense experts. A defense request for psychiatric tests apparently was based on the possibility of raising an insanity or mental impairment plea on Hinckley's behalf.

If convicted, Hinckley could be sentenced to life in prison for the attack on Reagan and to 10 years and $10,000 for the wounding of Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy.

He has not been charged by either federal or local District of Columbia authorities in the wounding of Brady and a Washington policeman during the same incident.

State Will Try For Damages

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina will file suit asking "several million dollars" in damages from Raleigh businessman Robert E. "Buck" Ward Jr. and others convicted of dumping PCB-laced oil along state roads, a state official said Saturday.

Ward was convicted in federal court Friday of aiding in the dumping of oil contaminated with the suspected cancer-causing agent on 210 miles of roadsides in 1978. He faces a maximum of one year in prison and a fine of $25,000 on each of eight misdemeanor counts. Sentencing has been delayed until June 22.

New York businessman Robert J. Burns and his two sons pleaded guilty in 1979 to the illegal dumping and were key witnesses in Ward's trial. They will also be sentenced June 22.

"We intend to bring a civil suit primiarly against Buck Ward and you're talking about several million dollars at least in damages," said Burley B. Mitchell Jr., secretary of crime control and public safety. "Now that he has been convicted, the road has been cleared for us to bring this action."

Mitchell said talks with Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten will begin on the lawsuit.

The clean-up of the PCBs has been mired in a number of legal battles. State officials have tried to take the contaminated soil to a dump site in Warren County, but local residents have obtained a court injunction blocking the transfer.

A proposal to treat the oil with granular charcoal was rejected by the federal Environmental Protection Agency in 1978. Mitchell said the state has sealed the PCBs with a thin layer of asphalt.

"We've purchased a site for the PCB and have been ready since 1979 to get rolling on building the site and putting materials in it," Mitchell said. "But we've met resistance from bureaucrats in Washington and local groups who want a perfect solution for the problem."

BLACK ASSEMBLY

The Pitt County Black Assembly Executive Committee will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Jean Darden, 100 Trent Circle. All newly elected officers are urged to be present.

Mitchell Says New Law Hurts Patrol

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A law enacted by the General Assembly last week should lay to rest the common complaint of the stung driver — that the only reason he got a speeding ticket was because the trooper had to meet his quota.

But state officials of the Highway Patrol don't like the bill passed into law banning arrest and citation quotas of any shape or description.

And Burley Mitchell, secretary of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, says the new law has crippled his agency's ability to properly manage and review the work of troopers.

"If we have a man that goes two months without writing a single ticket, we can't take any notice of that now," Mitchell said. "If we've got a man who writes 30 a day out on the interstate, we can't take notice of that, either."

Highway Patrol officials have complained loudly that the term "quota" was an unfair invention of newspapers, and that there has never been a rule requiring troopers to issue a certain number of tickets.

Instead, Mitchell said, the number of tickets written was one of 13 elements considered as part of an overall job-performance review system set up by the patrol last year. The system was established to comply with review requirements of the State Personnel Act.

But it was scrapped in mid-year following published reports of the "quota" — or, as Mitchell prefers to call it, the ticket "work unit measurement."

Since that time, Mitchell said, the patrol has not considered tickets written. But it also has not granted any promotions, either, and patrol officials said they needed to be able to look at the number of tickets written when they resume evaluations.

"Certainly what you do out here on the highway is one of many factors you're involved in," Col. J.T. Jenkins, commander of the patrol, said in an interview.

But with the new law, Mitchell says, the bulk of what a trooper does on the highways can't be considered. A crucial section of the bill, added in the Senate, says that not only can there be no quotas, but that the patrol cannot even consider the "volume of citations" written when making decisions on promotions or granting merit pay increases.

"If you've got a salesman out there who doesn't sell anything, what do you do with him? You get rid of him," said Jenkins. "Now I've never seen a trooper dismissed for not writing tickets....But suppose a patrolman just walks up and says, 'I'm not going to write any tickets.' Then you've got a problem."

But state legislators — who in earlier sessions made it illegal for the patrol to use airplanes to catch speeders because they considered it unsporting — didn't think so.

"I loath, abhor, detest and despise the very thought of a peace officer being paid or promoted on the basis of how many tickets they write," said Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Charlotte, who offered the amendment restricting any consideration of the number of tickets written.

Rampants Rally, Nip Knights By 6-4

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WILSON — There are all kinds of cliches about it. Things about "the tough get going," and "winners never quit."

But Saturday afternoon, Rose High School's Rampants found themselves with "their backs to the wall" against Northern Nash. "Everything was riding" on the outcome of the game — and Rose "was equal to the task."

Trailing 4-1 in the bottom of the fourth inning, the Rampants put on a rally that tied it up, then scored two more in the fifth to come away with a 6-4 victory.

The game, which pitted the two teams that had tied for the Division I championship, was to see which would advance into the first round of the State 4-A playoffs. And in a way, it was the second game of those playoffs for the Rampants.

Northern Nash, a 4-2 winner over Wilson Hunt on Thursday, was already assured of no worse than a tie when Rose still had a game to play Friday against Northeastern. In effect, the playoffs for Rose started then. Any defeat was the end.

But Rose won that one, 8-0, then rallied Saturday to come away with the playoff berth to go with its share of the conference championship.

Northern Nash was the benefit of a couple of lucky hits in the first inning that got things going, then came up with single runs in the second and third to take its 4-1 lead. Rose, after scoring once in the first, came back with three in the fourth and two in the fifth.

Even then, it took a deep breath in the seventh by the Rampant fans before it was finally over.

Roger Williams, who claimed his 12th win without a loss in the game, had some rough moments, and walked two batters after getting the first two out in the seventh. But Carl Richardson grounded back to shortstop Mark Douglas, who stepped on second base for the force to end the game.

Douglas' getting the final out was a final piece of justice for the Rampants. Earlier, he had committed an error that cost the Rampants a run, but had come back with two outstanding defensive plays in later innings.

"Those two plays were the turning point of the game," Coach Ronald Vincent said later. On the first, with a runner on first and one out, Douglas leaped high to perfectly time a line drive off the bat of Bruce Ellis, then double the runner off first. Then, in the sixth inning, he went behind second base to make a difficult play just getting pinchhitter Steve Smith at first.

"When you're down 4-1 in the fourth inning, your backbone has really got to show," Vincent said, relaxing over a drink and hamburger as the team celebrated in a Wilson drive-in. "We showed a lot of heart."

Vincent said that he felt the four-hour bus ride to and from Elizabeth City on Friday took a little out of the Rampants. "All the way home, too, all these guys thought about was Northern Nash.

"Those first three innings today were probably the worst we've played this year, but we were able to turn it around."

Vincent felt Williams' troubles on the mound were partially because of his only having two days rest. "Then, too, we didn't play too well behind him at the start, and that probably weighed on him. But once we really started playing well behind him, he got stronger and stronger."

Those first three innings, however, had the Rampant fans worried.

Thomas Mabry led off the first, hitting the first pitch back toward second baseman Tom Buie for what looked like an easy grounder. But the ball suddenly took a big hop over Buie's head into right center and by the time it was chased up, Mabry was standing on second. He was sacrificed to third, then scored when Richardson hit a deep fly to left. That ball appeared to be an easy out, but was apparently misjudged and fell in for another double.

However, Richardson was out when Ellis' grounder hit him, putting courtesy runner Wayne Melvin on first. He moved up on a wild pitch, then scored when Phillip Sikes reached on an error.

Rose came back with one run in the bottom of the first. Buie singled to right, moved up on an infield out, and scored when Mitch Brann's grounder to first was over thrown.

But the Rampants then saw the Knights score twice more for a 4-1 lead over the next two innings. In the second, Clint Carter outraced the ball to first on a grounder to short, then moved on when the ball was overthrown. He scored on Doug Hammitt's single.

In the third, Kevin Payne led off with a walk, moved up on an infield out, and scored on a single by Ellis.

But after that, the Rampants closed down, and only one other Knight got as far as second — that coming in the seventh inning on the two walks. Williams didn't allow another hit after the third inning.

Rose, held in check by Ellis, finally found the mark in the fourth. First Emmett Walsh beat out a hopper back to third, and Williams helped his own cause with a single. Kenny Barnes grounded back to the mound, and courtesy runner Mont Carter was thrown out at second.

Carter slammed into shortstop Payne, who made an off the mark throw to first, too late to get Barnes. Meanwhile, Sammy Hodges, running for Walsh, rounded third and slid in under the throw for the second Rose run.

Northern coach Doug Weaver argued that Hodges had interfered at second, but umpire Dixon Sauls ruled that Hodges did not leave the baseline, and is not required to slide into the base, but can come in upright. If the fielder remains in the baseline, contact is not interference, he ruled.

When play resumed, Crowell Pope drew a walk and Bill Kittrell bunted back to the mound, beating the throw to first. The ball was overthrown, however, and both Barnes and Pope raced around to score, tieing the game at 4-4.

Then, in the fifth, Rose got the final two that won it. Billy Dough doubled to left center with one away, and Walsh followed with another double to center, scoring Dough. After a second out, Barnes singled to center, scoring courtesy runner Kenny Kirkland with the insurance run.

Later Vincent got a little philosophical about this final week of the regular season as he munched on his hamburger. "You know, this has been a tough week for these kids. First we had the rain delay on Tuesday when we needed one more out for a regulation game. Then, we had Thursday's game rained out, and had to travel to Elizabeth City on Friday. Then, we had this one.

"But we got through it, and I think it will help us in the playoffs. We've already had two playoff games. There's been no tomorrow for two days now."

As the conference representative into the 4-A playoffs, Rose will host Wilmington Hoggard, runner-up in Division II. That game is tentatively scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Guy Smith Stadium.

The Knights finished the season with an 18-5 record, while Rose is now 22-2.

Chief Steward Warns Drivers To Be Cautious At Indy Start

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Binford, chief steward for the Indianapolis 500, Saturday gave the 33 race starters a last caution-filled talk about the ways to stay out of trouble during the dangerous first lap.

The calm, white-haired official spoke to the drivers, sitting before him on a three-tiered bleacher, as an estimated 10,000 spectators behind him listened to the amplified words.

"We've had meetings before, during the month, and I want to congratulate these men on the way they have handled themselves," Binford said. "But we can never overemphasize how critical it is to know the rules and what you have to do out there.

"There will be two parade laps and a pace lap. On the pace lap, (pole-sitter) Bobby Unser will be in charge of the field. He will come down toward the starting line gradually accelerating until the starter (Dwayne Sweeney) decides to give him the green flag or the yellow flag.

"Maintain your position and maintain the 100-foot interval between rows," Binford added. "That is the key. You're not to improve your position until you cross the starting line."

Those instructions were particularly valid this year because a half-dozen cars in the middle and rear of the field are among the fastest of those that qualified for the 65th Indy classic. If any of them jump the start and try to improve their positions too quickly, it could be hazardous.

"For those of you who haven't raced here before, I will say to you the words other people have said before: 'Think of (the start) as a survival situation, not a racing situation, until you get in the backstretch.'"

Binford also cautioned the drivers to be careful in the narrow pits, noting, "That is maybe the most dangerous place on the race track."

He also went over the rules for running under a caution light, with the pace car moving onto the track ahead of the leader.

The National Weather Service is calling for a 50 percent chance of rain Sunday.

"If we do have rain and have to red flag (stop) the race, we will, of course, try to get it restarted if we can," Binford said. "It is an official race if it goes 101 of the 200 laps, but if we go over 101 laps and it rains then, that's when we really put our feet to the fire.

Valenzuela's Error Costs Chance At 9th Victory But LA Still Wins

CINCINNATI (AP) — A bad throw to first base kept Los Angeles Dodgers rookie pitcher Fernando Valenzuela out of the victory column Saturday.

The sensational 20-year-old left-hander blamed himself for his errant peg in the fifth inning that let in three Cincinnati runs and spoiled his bid for his sixth shutout of the young season. The Dodgers fought back to win the game 9-6 in 10 innings, with Valenzuela going eight innings but failing to post a decision.

He yielded five runs, the most he has ever allowed, on eight hits while walking six. In fact, the Dodgers got him off the hook when pinch-hitter Jay Johnstone opened the ninth inning with a home run. They tallied four times in the 10th on a pair of bases-loaded walks and Ken Landreaux' two-run single.

Johnstone's blast was one of four Los Angeles homers and the four-run 10th made a winner of rookie reliever Dave Stewart, 3-0, for the second game in a row.

"It was a very even game for both teams," Valenzuela said through a translator. "It was a mistake on my part when I didn't throw to second base."

With Cincinnati runners on first and second in the fifth and the Dodgers leading 2-0, Valenzuela missed a sign for a pickoff attempt at second base.

Instead, he let Reds pitcher Mario Soto bunt the ball on a two-strike pitch. No one was covering first base when Valenzuela fielded the bunt and fired the ball into right field.

"Anybody can make an error, but an error like that is different," said Valenzuela, who has an 8-1 record. "I think I'd have felt better if they hit a home run on my best pitch."

The Reds couldn't do that, although Valenzuela failed for the first time in his major league career to post a decision in a game he started.

"I've had two games now when I've had problems with control," said Valenzuela, a 4-0 loser to Philadelphia in his previous start, his only major league setback. "I don't know why. I feel okay. Let's see what will happen in the future."

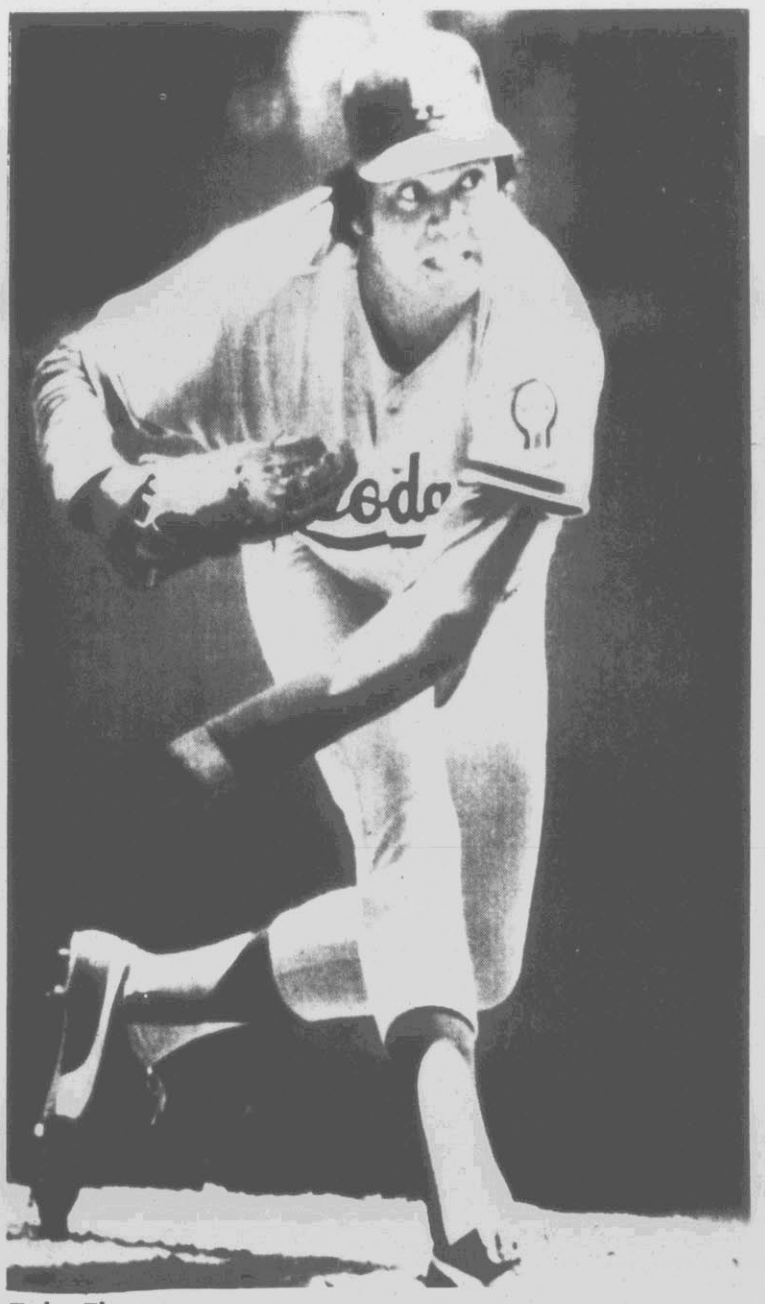

The most costly control problems, however, belonged to Reds reliever Paul Moskau, who walked in two runs in the 10th as the Dodgers opened a 6½-game lead, their largest of the season, over Cincinnati in te National League West.

"It happens," said Moskau, who had not allowed a run in his previous seven appearances. "There was no particular reason. I just couldn't get anything over the plate. I was rushing everything I threw."

Steve Garvey doubled in the sixth ahead of Ron Cey's ninth home run of the season and 200th of his career to give the Dodgers a 4-3 lead. The Reds tied it in the seventh on Ken Griffey's sacrifice fly.

Cincinnati had taken a 5-4 lead in the eighth. Johnny Bench hit a one-out double, Valenzuela intentionally walked Ray Knight and Ron Oester's bloop single off the glove of second baseman Derrel Thomas filled the bases.

Pinch-hitter Mike Vail slammed a one-hopper at Cey. The Los Angeles third baseman stepped on the bag for the forceout but his throw to first was late as Bench scored.

Take That

North Carolina Sails By Navy In NCAA Lacrosse Semifinals

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Nationally second-ranked North Carolina sailed past Navy, 17-8, in the semifinals of the NCAA Lacrosse Tournament Saturday.

The Tar Heels, 11-0, now advance to the finals against top-ranked Johns Hopkins next Saturday at 2 p.m. in Princeton, N.J.

Johns Hopkins beat Virginia Saturday, 10-6.

The Tar Heels opened up early, scoring in the first 30 seconds, but ran into trouble as the Midshipmen opened up and tied the score, 5-5, after two quarters.

North Carolina coach Willie Scroggs said the Tar Heels played "their worst game all season in the second quarter." UNC only scored one goal in the second period. But Scroggs said the team rallied in the second half to put the Midshipmen away.

Nine of UNC's goals came in the final quarter, three coming within 18 seconds of each other. Attackman Monte Hill led North Carolina with four goals, followed by Jeff Homire and Mike Burnett with three goals each.

Syd Abernethy led Navy with four goals.

UNC also led the match in penalties, piling up 11 for a total of nine minutes. Navy, 7-5, had five penalties for four and half minutes.

"We've been in four tournaments and this is the first time we've been to the finals," said Scroggs, who played and coached at Johns Hopkins.

Scroggs was asked if his experience with the school would help UNC in the finals.

"They are just a fine program and they've got a fine team," he said. "I don't think that will give us any edge."

Double Bogeys Keep Stadler In A Tie

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) - Craig Stadler was threatening to run away and hide from the field when consecutive double bogeys sent him reeling back into a three-way tie for the top and set up a multiple-man race in Sunday's final round of the Memorial golf tournament.

"I got what I deserved on those two holes," Stadler said Saturday after his trips into the water and the woods had stripped him of sole control of the top spot.

He shrugged his hefty shoulders and forced the hint of a smile through his moustache.

"It was just your basic disaster," he said after requiring 13 strokes to play the 14th and 15th holes.

And, instead of a Stadler rout, it set up a race involving some 20 men — that many are within four strokes of the lead — over the final 18 holes.

Stadler was only happy that he didn't have to play them immediately.

"If I'd stayed out there any longer, there's no telling what would have happened," he said.

"I've just got to get that out of my mind."

Stadler, still chunky but 40 pounds lighter than when he won two titles last season, finished with a one-under-par 71 and a 212 total, four strokes under par on Jack Nicklaus' grindingly difficult, 7,116-yard Muirfield Village Golf Club course.

He was tied for the lead with Tom Kite and 41-year-old former Masters champion George Archer. Kite, a winner in Florida earlier this season, and Archer each had a 69 in the warm, hazy weather.

Tom Watson, the British Open and Masters champion, pulled his game together for a string of three consecutive birdies that produced a 69 and left him one stroke back at 213.

"It was a sloppy round. I didn't hit the ball all that well. I wasn't consistent. That's the problem," said Watson, who has won Player of the Year honors the past four seasons.

But he's in position to make a challenge for the title he won in 1979.

"The key to tomorrow is getting off to a good start," he said. "If you get off to a bad start, this course is too difficult to make up much ground."

He was tied with second-round leader Keith Fergus, Ben Crenshaw and D.A. Weibring. Fergus slipped to a 74 while Weibring and Crenshaw had 70s.

Jack Renner, Mike Sullivan, Bob Murphy and Canadian Dan Halldorson were at 214, putting 11 golfers within two strokes of each other going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $63,000 first prize. Renner had a 69, Sullivan a 70, Murphy a 71 and Halldorson a 74.

Nicklaus, the host, tournament founder and course designer, was within striking distance before bogeying the 15th and 16th holes for a 74 that left him five shots back at 217.

. Stadler's misadventures coming home was the key to the whole tournament. He was cruising with a 3-shot lead, hadn't made a bogey, was five under par and appeared within reach of the course record.

Then, like lightning, it all came apart.

He ducked his head in disgust when he pushed his second shot into the water on the 14th. It led to a double bogey.

On the next hole, he drove into the woods on the left. He hit a tree and bounced further back into uncharted country on his next shot. By the time he'd finished extricating himself, he had a 7 and another double bogey.

Archer, playing in front of him, deftly converted a 10-foot birdie putt on the 16th and had the top spot alone.

But Archer, on the comeback from back surgery that threatened to end his career, found a bunker on the 18th then missed a 6-foot par-saving putt that set up the 3-way tie for the top.

"The putt had a flat tire. It just didn't get there," said the former California cowboy. "It was just a pathetic putt."

Chicago Slips Past Montreal, 6-4

CHICAGO (AP) — Pinch hitter Steve Dillard and Ivan DeJesus delivered the tying and lead runs with run-scoring singles in the seventh inning off reliever Woodie Fryman Saturday, leading the Chiacgo Cubs to a 6-4 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Expos had taken a 3-2 lead in the top of the seventh when rookie Tim Raines stole home for the first time in his career. It was his third steal of the game and 38th of the season. Raines beat out a bunt, stole second and went to third on a bunt single by Rodney Scott before they pulled a double steal.

But with one out in the bottom of the seventh, Jerry Morales singled and Ken Reitz was hit by a pitch from loser Ray Burris, 2-4. Fryman relieved and got pinch hitter Hector Cruz to pop out before giving up the RBI singles to Cruz and DeJesus.

The Cubs added two runs in the eighth, offsetting Raines' third homer of the season in the ninth. Leon Durham beat out a hit to deep short and Steve Henderson singled. Fryman was replaced by Stan Bahnsen, who gave up an infield hit to Morales but Durham was out when he overran third. Reitz then doubled, scoring Henderson and Morales.

Rick Reuschel, 2-5, was the winner, with Dick Tidrow pitching the last two innings and gaining his second save.

Burris walked the bases full in the first inning and Morales singled home two runs. The Cubs might have scored more but center fielder Andre Dawson threw out Henderson at third.

Dawson, who had three singles in running his hitting streak to 14 games, also threw a runner out at third in the second inning.

The Expos tied it with two runs in the third. Chris Speier doubled and went to third on a sacrifice by Burris, who was safe on Reuschel's throwing error. Speier scored on a single by Raines and Burris scored on Scott's grounder.

Only Agree On Meeting Site

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Kenneth Moffett, the federal mediator trying to bring the two sides together in the continuing baseball labor dispute, got one thing settled Saturday.

"Next week, we'll meet at a neutral site," said Moffett, following a 90-minute session between the negotiating teams in the Manhattan offices of the Major League Players Association.

Earlier in the week, sessions were held in the offices of the Player Relations Committee, bargaining arm of the 26 owners.

That was about the only progress reported from the 90-minute session Saturday. Both Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, and Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for management, declined comment on the talks.

Moffett said the meeting had been useful from the standpoint of exploring the issues.

"They really got into it as far as the nitty gritty is concerned," Moffett said. "They dealt with the philosophical questions, 'Will there be compensation? How much?' We talked about the fact that the players couldn't buy what stands as the owners' proposal and what limits the players can buy. And we talked about the philosophical reasons for both sides' positions."

Besides Grebey, the owners were represented by attorney Barry Rona, league presidents Lee MacPhail and Chub Feeney and league attorneys James Garner and Lewis Hoynes.

On Miller's side were attorneys Don Fehr, Peter Rose and Dick Moss and Cleveland Indian pitchers Bert Blyleven and Dan Spillner.

"I wasn't impressed by the owners' side," said Blyleven. "We have something we won and they want to take it away. They want us to make a proposal. Why should we?"

"The ball players want to leave things the way they are," said Moffett. "The question is will there be any conciliatory move before the deadline."

The players association has said that unless a settlement is reached, there will be no games after next Thursday, May 28.

A year ago, the two sides averted a strike at the last moment with a marathon bargaining session that settled all elements of the basic agreement except for the compensation issue.

The owners want teams signing top free agents to be required to surrender a professional player as compensation to the free agents' former team. The players say such a clause would restrict their bargaining power.

Kathy Hite Opens 3-Shot Lead

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Kathy Hite, changing her luck with an 80-foot birdie putt, fashioned her third straight under-par round Saturday to open a 3-stroke lead with a 6-under-par total of 210 in the $125,000 Corning Classic women's golf tournament.

Rookie Patty Sheehan, the first-day leader with a 66, fired an even-par 72 for second place with 213 in the Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

Cathy Morse, who shared the 36-hole lead with Sheehan and Hite, and Kyle O'Brien, another rookie, were third with 214 totals, while Jan Ferraris, Debbie Austin and Nancy Lopez-Melton were bunched five shots off the pace at 215.

Sandra Spuzich, JoAnne Carner and Shelley Hamlin, whose 4-under 68 was the best round of the afternoon, were at even-par 216.

Hite, 32, a seventh-year tour veteran, never hws won over $14,100 in a single year and has just $3,488 in 12 tournaments this season. But she shot herself into the driver's seat for the $18,750 first prize with a hot 69 on the 6,286-yard Corning Country Club course.

She picked up two strokes on Morse and Sheehan, her co-leaders at the tournament's midway point, with her long putt on No.13, a 420-yard par-4 with a two-tiered green.

"I was right at the bottom and couldn't see where it was going, but when it went in it really picked me up. I think that was the turning point. I picked up two strokes," Hite said.

Sheehan and Morse both bogeyed the 13th to rise to 2-under-par while Hite was dropping to 7-under.

A tour non-winner like her closest pursuers, Hite has improved by one stroke each day, going 71-70-69. But it appeared she would be left behind when Sheehan and Morse both started fast while she bogeyed the first hole.

While Hite was struggling to stay afloat on the front nine, Sheehan and Morse went head to head with matching birdies on Nos.2 and 5, dropping 5-under after the latter hole to lead Hite by a stroke.

The first break in the pattern occurred on the ninth hole, a 345-yard par-4 that Morse bogeyed while Hite floated an 8-iron shot to within 15 feet of the pin for the birdie that dropped her into a two-way tie with Sheehan.

On the next hole, another par-4, Hite parred out while Sheehan and Morse both made bogeys.

After Morse birdied No. 11 to pull even with Sheehan and within a stroke of Hite, Hite picked up two shots on back-to-back holes to end the suspense for the day. She birdied No. 12 to drop 6-under and followed with the climactic putt on the 13th hole.

Hite counted six birdies, three bogeys and nine pars in her round.

Officials said the crowd of 12,400 was a one-day record for the tournament, now in its third year.

Jr. Olympics Set Saturday

FARMVILLE — The preliminary TAC Junior Olympic Meet will be held on Saturday at Farmville Central High School. This meet is open to boys and girls who do not reach their 19th birthday during 1981.

Events are scheduled to get underway at 9 a.m. These include high jump, long jump, and pole vault for 13-14, 15-16, and 17-18 boys; shot put and triple jump for 11-12, 13-14, 15-16, 17-18 boys and girls; discus for 11-12, 13-14, 15-16, and 17-18 boys and girls; and javelin for 13-14, 15-16, and 17-18 boys and girls.

Running events begin at 10:30. These include 3 and 5-kilometer runs, the 800-meter, the short hurdles, the 400-meter, the 100-meter, the 4x100 relay, the 4x800 relay, the 1,500-meter, the long hurdles, the 4x400 relay, and race walks.

The top four qualify for the sectional meet to be held at New Bern on June 20. A $2 entry fee is charged, and official TAC/USA awards will be given to the first six finishers. Each qualifier must have A TAC card ($6) before participating in the New Bern meet.

Oakland Nips Toronto In 15 Innings

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mitchell Page raced home from third base on Rickey Henderson's shallow bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 15th inning Saturday, giving the Oakland A's a 3-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The A's loaded the bases with none out. Page drew a leadoff walk from Luis Leal, 2-5, Rob Picciolo singled and Shooty Babitt beat out a perfect bunt down the third base line.

With the outfield pulled in, Henderson hit a fly ball to center fielder Barry Bonnell and Page slid across the plate as the throw was up the third base line.

Jeff Jones, 3-1, who came in to get the last out as Toronto tied the score with two runs in the ninth, went the final 61-3 innings, the longest stint of his major league career.

The A's took a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Dwayne Murphy walked, went to second on a wild pitch, took third on a grounder and scored on Tony Armas' single.

Mike Heath gave the A's a 2-0 lead when he led off the second with his third homer of the season off Toronto starter Mark Bomback, who then blanked the A's until the eighth, when he was replaced by Mike Willis.

Oakland starter Matt Keough took a three-hit shutout into the ninth when Toronto rallied to tie the game. Al Woods led off the inning with an infield hit and Otto Velez ripped a line drive to left on which Henderson appeared to make a diving catch. However, it was ruled a trap by second base umpire Larry McCoy and A's Manager Billy Martin argued to no avail.

Bob Owchinko replaced Keough and was greeted with a single by John Mayberry, scoring Woods and sending Velez to third. Velez scored the tying run on the inning's second controversial play.

Rick Bosetti ran for Mayberry and when Lloyd Moseby hit a grounder to second, Bosetti went out of the baseline, knocking over shortstop Fred Stanley on the force at second. Moseby was called out at first on the interference, completing a double play, as Velez scored.

Baltimore 9
Detroit 2

DETROIT (AP) — Doug DeCinces credits Baltimore coach Cal Ripken with correcting some bad habits which had hindered his home run production until Saturday.

DeCinces broke out with a pair of two-run homers, his first of the season, and Eddie Murray had a solo shot as the Orioles romped to a 9-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers behind the nine-hit pitching of Mike Flanagan and Sammy Stewart.

"My back has been off and on," explained DeCinces, who for the past two seasons has been dogged by a condition described as by team physicians "the degeneration of the facets in the lower lumbar spine."

DeCinces said he fell into some bad batting habits early in the season after being out of the lineup for a fews days when his back acted up.

"I was opening my shoulders too much, which caused me to drag my bat," the Baltimore third baseman said. "Cal's been working with me on it and today it paid off."

DeCinces said the entire Baltimore club, which has won 10 of its last 11 games is starting to hit the ball better.

"I think we're going to be pretty hard to stop," he said. "We seem to have that 1979 confidence. We've won games when we haven't played well. We're a home run-hitting team and now we seem to be getting that groove back again."

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson, whose club has managed just four runs in the first two games of the scheduled four-game weekend series, agreed with DeCinces' evaluation.

"Baltimore is a good baseball team," the Detroit manager said. "They'll always get good pitching. Normally, they don't hit a whole lot, but ..."

John Lowenstein hit a two-out single in the Baltimore second and scored ahead of DeCinces' first homer, a shot into the left field seats on the first pitch from loser Dave Rozema, 2-4.

In the Baltimore fourth, Ken Singleton hit a leadoff triple and scored on Murray's grounder.

DeCinces singled to start the Baltimore fifth. He went to second on a wild pitch, took third on a grounder and came home on a single by Al Bumbry. Murray led off the Baltimore sixth with his fourth homer, chasing Rozema.

Rick Dempsey doubled in the Baltimore seventh and scored on a single by Rich Dauer, who went 4-for-5. Bumbry, who walked, went to third on the play and scored on a single by Singleton. DeCinces hit his second homer off Detroit reliever Aurelio Lopez in the eighth with Gary Roenicke aboard via a double.

The Tigers' first run came in the third when Al Cowens tripled and scored on Alan Trammell's grounder. Steve Kemp hit his third homer of the season leading off the Detroit eighth.

The Tigers loaded the bases with none out in the sixth but failed to score as Flanagan struck out Richie Hebner before giving way to Stewart, who got Lance Parrish on a called third strike and retired Champ Summers on a grounder.

Flanagan, 6-3, allowed five hits and struck out seven in the 51-3 innings he worked.

Boston 8
Milwaukee 1

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The surprising Boston Red Sox ran their winning streak to six games Saturday and Manager Ralph Houk sees no reason why they shouldn't stay hot.

"This is our type of club now. Our bullpen has been outstanding. We're hitting aggressively and the middle of our lineup has started to hit like the top and bottom," Houk said after the Red Sox defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 8-1.

Boston lashed out 15 hits and won for the 14th time in the last 17 games. Dave Schmidt lined a solo homer while Dave Stapleton drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and a single and Tony Perez hit a two-run single.

"I was just trying to meet the ball, but their pitcher (Randy Lerch) was throwing mostly fast balls up. I got a good fast ball to hit and I jumped on hit," Schmidt said.

"I don't know how we can play better," Perez said. "We're aggressive and we have a good attitude. We've got a darn good club. We're not a fifth-place club the way everybody picked us."

The Red Sox took a 1-0 first-inning lead on singles by Dwight Evans and Carney Lansford and an error by first baseman Cecil Cooper on a grounder by Perez.

They boosted the lead to 3-0 in the second. Schmidt led off with his second major league homer. A single by Reid Nichols, a bunt hit by Jerry Remy and a walk loaded the bases and Stapleton hit a sacrifice fly.

Remy's single extended his hitting streak to 16 consecutive games, tying Jerry Mumphrey of the New York Yankees for the American League high this season.

Boston made it 4-0 in the third inning as Perez singled, Schmidt walked and shortstop Robin Yount let Nichols' grounder skip past him for an error.

A single by Evans and a double by Jim Rice in the fourth chased loser Randy Lerch, 2-4. Perez slapped his two-run single off Rickey Keeton for a 6-0 lead.

Boston's Mike Torrez, 4-2, carried a three-hitter into the bottom of the sixth when rain delayed play for 56 minutes. When the game resumed, singles by Jim Gantner, Yount and Cooper filled the bases with one out. Mark Clear relieved and a run scored on Gorman Thomas' grounder.

The Red Sox scored their final two runs in the eighth on a single by Nichols, a double by Remy and a two-run single by Stapleton.

Steve Streater's Goal Is To Walk Once More

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Doctors say that former University of North Carolina football player Steve Streater probably will never walk again, but Streater isn't buying it.

In his first interview since the April 30 auto accident that left him paralyzed from the chest down, Streater acknowledged that it was not going to be easy.

"But I'm going to make it," he said from his hospital bed at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. "Instead of giving 100 percent like I did on the football field, I'm going to give 110 percent."

Streater was named All-Atlantic Coast Conference as a punter and defensive back, the first time a player has made it at two postions. And the day of the accident he had signed a free-agent contract with the Washington Redskins to try out as a punter.

But now Streater cannot move the legs that once boomed punts 74 yards and he can't make a fist out of the hands that terrorized quarterbacks. A reminder of what might have been hangs near the window in his hospital room — a maroon Redskin jersey given to him by the team.

"I'm going to wear it one day," Streater said, showing the same enthusiasm that made him a favorites among teammates and fans. "I have all the faith in the world that it will happen."

The jersey is only one of many reminders in his room. The walls are covered with get-well cards and letters, including one from New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

And he has had so many visitors that the hospital put up a sign limiting each visitor to 10 minutes.

"It's been a big help," Streater said of the visitors and gifts. "I've gotten flowers from people in Los Angeles and San Francisco, people I don't even know. My high school coach sent me a card signed by just about everyone in Jackson County. It's so big, I can't even open it.

"When you're down like I am, things like that give you an extra boost. I know I have a lot of people praying for me."

But Streater knows prayers are not enough. He knows a lot of hard work lies ahead of him if he is ever to walk again.

Twice a day he takes his wheelchair to the hospital's physical therapy section. There, helped by nurses, he lifts weights, works on his balance and learns the technique for getting in and out of the wheelchair.

Even the two-a-day football workouts in college weren't as tough.

"It seems like easy work but by the time we're done, I'm really exhausted," the 22-year-old Slyva native said. "It's hard to accept. After playing football all those years and getting knocked around all the time, now I can't even stand up. It just makes me more determined though. I don't care how long it takes, but I'm going to beat this thing."

Even though his legs are paralyzed, Streater has shown improvement since the accident. Spinal surgery fused the broken vertebrae in hius neck and increased the movement in his hands. Therapy is slowing strengthening his arms.

In the next month Streater will be transferred to a rehabilitation center in Charlotte, nearer his home."

Meanwhile he keeps dreaming of wearing that Redskin jersey someday.

"I can do it," he said. "I know I can do it."

Rose Tops Eagles, Ties For The Title

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

ELIZABETH CITY — Ho, hum. Just another Friday afternoon on the diamond for Greenville Rose. Or so it seemed. In reality, Rose had its first taste of sudden death and came away with a glutton's appetite for more.

The Rampants travelled to Northeastern Friday knowing a loss would give Northern Nash the Division I crown, the Knights having already completed their regular season Thursday with a come-from-behind win over Wilson Hunt.

However, a win by Rose would leave the two teams tied for first and force a one-game playoff. Which is exactly what happened.

Propelled by the three-hit pitching of Gordon Douglas and a six-run first inning, the Rampants whipped Northeastern, 8-0, to end the regular season tied for the league title.

Rose, now 21-2 overall and 12-2 in the league, was to have played Northern Nash Saturday afternoon in Wilson's Fleming Stadium for the right to represent the league in the state 4-A playoffs. The winner will face Wilmington Hoggard in the opening round of the playoffs.

Nearly a month ago the Rampants defeated Northeastern 4-0 behind two-hit pitching of Douglas. Friday afternoon the junior right-hander again had little trouble with the Eagles.

Douglas, who entered the game with a 0.55 earned run average, struck out nine, walked two and did not allow a runner past first all afternoon en route to his eighth win in nine starts. The shut out was Douglas' fifth this season and Rose's 13th in 23 games.

"We got an extemely good effort today by Gordon," Vincent said. "He pitched well today. In fact, the last two times he's been on the mound he's been very, very impressive."

Douglas gave up a two-out single to Hunter Williams in the first and two singles to Jerry Kelly, a leadoff single in the second and a one-out single in the seventh. None advanced past first base.

Williams was left stranded at first when Mike Sanders struck out. In the second, Kelly was doubled off first when Mark Douglas caught a line drive and threw to first to complete the DP. In the seventh, Kelly was forced at second for the final out.

"I didn't think I threw real hard out there today but I had good control," Douglas said. "I think we were up for Northeastern. We went to the Northern Nash-Hunt game Thursday night and that got us fired up."

Knowing they had to win, the Rampants wasted no time in greeting Northeastern pitcher Hunter Williams, who allowed the Rose just six hits in the teams' earlier game. Rose sent ten men to the plate in the first inning and came away with six runs.

With one gone, Mark Douglas walked and went to third on Mitch Brann's double to leftfield. Emmett Walsh, who was two for three with two RBIs, followed with a double to score both Douglas and Brann and Rose led, 2-0.

Sammy Hodges, running for Walsh, then stole second. Roger Williams, who was two for three with two RBIs, walked before Hodges raced home on Kenny Barnes' bunt. It was Barnes first of three hits in four at bats on the day. The senior rightfielder also drove in two runs.

Gordon Douglas followed Barnes' bunt with a triple to score both Williams and Barnes. Tom Buie, running for Douglas, later scored Rose's final run of the inning on a single by Crowell Pope, who was two for four on the day.

"We went at this one good," Vincent said. "We really swung the bats good today.

"We were a little keyed up today. It was a situation where we were really psyched up for Hunter Williams. He threw the ball well against us in Greenville and you could tell that after he left we let down a little bit."

But before he left after the end of the second inning, the Rampants tagged Hunter for two more runs.

With two gone in the second, Walsh walked. Hodges, running for Walsh, stole second, and then scored on Williams' double. Williams subsequently scored on Barnes' single to left and Rose led, 8-0.

Although Rose threatened in the third when Pope led off with a double, and the fourth when Williams and Barnes hit back-to-back singles with two outs, the Rampants did not score again.

"After you get an 8-0 lead its tough mentally to stay fired up," Vincent said.

It didn't matter, however, because the Eagles, who finish the season at 3-11 in the league and 8-14 overall, did not come close to threatening against Douglas and the Rose defense.

"We've won a lot of games this year and we've had some tough ones," Vincent said. "We knew the burden was on our back today."

Prep League

Elks 12
True Value 5

The Elks won their second game against two losses yesterday, downing True Value Hardware, 12-5, in Prep League action.

True Value is also 2-2.

The Elks scored first, getting four first inning runs, but True Value came back with three in its half of the inning. The Elks added a fifth run in the third, then scored twice in the fourth to sew it up. Chris Stokes reached on an error and Jim Pressley singled. Frankie Atkinson reached on an error, allowing both runners to score. That made it 6-3, a lead True Value never countered.

The Elks added two more in the fifth and three in the sixth. True Value got two more in the fourth.

Ricky Outlaw led the Elk hitting with three, while Pressley and Mitch Phillips each added two. Outlaw held True Value to only two hits.

Auto Specialty 17
1st State Bank 6

Auto Specialty boosted its Prep League record to 3-1 with a 17-6 romp over First State Bank Saturday. The Bankers are now 1-3.

Auto Specialty got one run in the first, then added another in the fourth.

It was the fifth, however, that did it, as the Mechanics scored six times. Hal Priestly walked, stole second and scored on a double by Sterling Edwards. Doug Brayn singled in Edwards and moved up on passed balls, scoring on a hit by Monty Atkinson. Atkinson also moved up on passed balls and Van Alston walked, stealing second. John Richard walked and Fletcher Phillips doubled in all three for an 8-0 lead.

Auto Specialty added two more in the fifth and seven in the seventh. The Bankers got two in the fifth and four more in the seventh.

Phillips led the Auto Specialty hitting with four, while Alston added three, and Atkinson and Curtis Perkins had two each. Matthews had two hits for the Bankers.

Little League

Kiwanis 6
Jaycees 2

The Kiwanis pushed over four fourth inning runs and went on to take a 6-2 victory over the Jaycees in the North State Little League Saturday.

The Jaycees scored first, getting a run in the first. The Kiwanis tied it up with one in the second, then scored four in the fourth to push ahead for good.

Scott Sharinger led off the fourth with a single and moved up on an error. He took third on an out and scored when Kraig Butler singled. Jason Galloway reached on an error, and Scott Davis also was safe on a misplay. Russell Williams doubled in two runs, and Jimmie Gillihan singled to score Davis with the fourth.

The Kiwanis got one more in the fifth, while the Jaycees also scored once in the sixth.

Williams and Gillihan each had three hits to lead the Kiwanis. Carl Wille had two hits to pace the Jaycees.

Wellcome 9
Exchange 3

Wellcome remained unbeaten on the year in the Tar Heel Little League Saturday taking a 9-3 victory over Exchange.

Wellcome got one runs in the first, but Exchange matched that in the second. Wellcome regained the lead in the third with a run, then pushed over five in the fourth to wrap up the win.

Chris Brown walked to lead off the fourth, moving up on a wild pitch. Adam Teel walked and with two away, Greg Janscoy singled in Brown. Terry Warren then hit a three-run homer. Anthony Cobb kept it going with a triple, scoring when the ball was errored on the relay home.

Wellcome added two more in the sixth, while the Exchange scored single runs in the fifth and sixth.

Cobb led the Wellcome hitting with three, while Dallas McPherson added two. Axel Smith had two hits for Exchange.

Babe Ruth League

Planters Bank 7

Pepsi-Cola opened up the 1981 Babe Ruth League season with an 8-7 victory over Planters Bank yesterday.

Pepsi scored three times in the first inning to take the inital lead. Planters came back with one in the bottom of the first, and added two more in the second to tie it up. Pepsi got one in the fourth, but Planters tied it again with one in the fifth. Pepsi scored twice in the sixth, while Planters scored once. But in the seventh, Pepsi got one and Planters scored twice to tie it up.

Finally, in the eighth, Pepsi pushed over the winning run. Pat Rand reached on a walk and stole second. An error on the play allowed him to come the rest of the way with the run.

Bill Messick led Pepsi's hitting with two, while Gary Scott and Richard Pace each had two for Planters.

Aaction Movers 5
Home Builders 0

Bill Godley threw a three-hitter and shut out Home Builders for Aaction Movers yesterday in the first Babe Ruth League game of the year for the two teams. Aaction took a 5-0 win in the contest.

Aaction got all it needed in the first. Godley singled and moved up on an errored sacrifice. He scored when Jay Wynne reached on a fielder's choice.

Aaction added four more in the second.

Daryl Pettus had two hits to lead the Aaction hitting. No one had more than one for Home Builders.

Wachovia Bank 3
Coca-Cola 1

Wachovia Bank pushed over two runs in the fourth inning and recorded a 3-1 victory over Coca-Cola in the first Babe Ruth League game of the year for the two Saturday.

Wachovia broke the scoreless tie in the fourth. Jeff Howard got a one-out triple, scoring on a single by Marvin Barrett. Dwight Smith reached on a single, and an error on the play allowed Barrett to score.

The other run came in the sixth, while the lone Coke run scored in the fifth.

Mike Smith had two hits for Coke, while no one had more than one for the winners.

Girls' Softball

Rose 5
Northeastern 4

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School's girls closed out the Division I softball season with a 5-4 victory over Northeastern High School yesterday.

The win gave the Rampettes a 3-11 record against Division I competition this year.

Northeastern scored single runs in the first and fourth innings to take a 2-0 lead, but Rose tied it up with two in the fifth. Northeastern went back out with two in the sixth, but Rose tied it in the seventh with two more.

The Rampettes then got a homer from Frances Barnhill in the eighth inning to claim the victory.

Barnhill, Janet Mizelle, Shelly Evans and Neda Carawan each had two hits for the Rampettes.

Mattamuskeet 20
Bear Grass 11

SWAN QUARTER — Mattamuskeet High School rolled to a 20-11 softball victory over Bear Grass Friday as the Lady Bears finished off the Tobacco Belt Conference year.

Mattamuskeet gained the lead in the first inning with five runs, and they never lost it.

J. Whitaker, A. Graves and Laura Jones each had four hits to lead Mattamuskeet. Whitaker had a homer, Graves a double and a triple, and Jones, a double.

Angie Mizelle, Debra Gurganus and Mary Rawls each had two hits for the Bears. One of Mizelle's was a double.

Bullets Have Playoff Chance

JAMESVILLE — Clarence Thomas had three hits and Jamesville struck for two runs in the third, fifth and sixth innings to whip Columbia, 8-2, Friday night in a Tobacco Belt Conference game.

The win leaves the Bullets at 19-4 overall and 17-3 in the conference, one-half game ahead of Manteo. Manteo was to have played at Bath yesterday needing a win to tie the Bullets for second. A loss by Manteo would give the Bullets the #2 spot and a playoff berth.

If the Braves win they will play Jamesville in a one-game playoff Monday at 3:30 at Mattamuskeet and the winner will receive the league's second playoff berth. Bear Grass has already clinched the conference's top seed.

Jamesville scored single runs in the first and second inning to move on top, 2-0, after two innings. The Bullets then pushed home two runs in the third and fifth to put the game away.

In the third, Thomas tripled to lead off and scored on Tom Fortenberry's single. Fortenberry then stole second and subsequently scored on Carl Ange's single.

In the fifth, Fortenberry walked but was forced out at second on Ange's fielder's choice. Matthew Moore came in to run for Ange and promptly stole second and third and then scored when the throw to third bounced into the dugout.

Greg Sullivan then walked, stole second and scored on Jeff Rogers' single to give Jamesville a 6-1 lead. The Bullets added their final two runs in the sixth. Columbia scored once in the fourth and seventh.

Along with his three hits in four at bats, Thomas drove in one run and stole two bases, bring his season total to 35 stolen bases. Moore stole seven bases Friday to give him 30 for the year.

Man Dies After Run

HOLLAND, Mich. (AP) — A 57-year-old East Lansing man died Saturday after collapsing at the finish line of the 20-kilometer Peoples Bank Tulip Time race, race officials said.

John Bell collapsed moments after he crossed the finish line outside the Holland Civic Center and died about an hour later at Holland Community Hospital. A hospital spokesman said Bell suffered an apparent heart attack.

Medical personnel attending the race tried to revive Bell at the finish line. Officials said the temperature was 70 degrees at starting time and 75 degrees with high humidity by the time Bell finished 2 hours, 15 minutes later. He was 1,249th out of 1,262 finishers.

Lea Extends Scoreless Streak

By The Associated Press

You can call him "No-Hit" Charlie Lea or you can call him "No-Run" Charlie Lea. Opposing National League batters probably aren't calling him anything that kind these days.

Lea, who hurled a no-hitter and a four-hit shutout against the San Francisco Giants in his previous two outings, blanked Chicago on four hits over seven innings Friday, extending his stretch of scoreless innings to 28⅓ as the Montreal Expos defeated the Cubs 6-3.

The 24-year-old right-hander is 41-3 innings shy of the club record held by Woodie Fryman. He might have come even closer but was lifted after seven innings when he developed a blister on the middle finger of his pitching hand.

"I could have finished," Lea said, "but that might have caused me to miss my next start."

Lea's earned run average, which was 10.13 before he started his current scoreless streak, dipped to 2.25. He retired 14 consecutive batters over one stretch.

"I'm not doing anything different," he said. "Everybody asks me what has happened, and I say nothing. I was pitching good in relief before the streak started. I had only one bad outing, when I gave up six earned runs in 2⅓ innings, and that's why the ERA went so high.

"I'm pitching the same way I did last year in AA ball and also when I was with the Expos. I could have given up some runs today, but I had a great defense behind me."

Center fielder Andre Dawson made two fine plays to help preserve Lea's string of zeroes. Dawson also smashed his 11th homer and a pair of singles and Chris Speier delivered a three-run double in the second inning to put the Expos ahead 3-0.

"Name the great center fielders in baseball and put him (Dawson) right up there with them," said Montreal Manager Dick Williams.

Dodgers 4, Reds 2

Dusty Baker, who homered for Los Angeles' first run in the first inning, delivered a tie-breaking two-run single in the 12th to give the Dodgers a 5½-game lead over Cincinnati in the NL West. With Doug Bair pitching, Derrel Thomas drew a leadoff walk, advanced on a wild pitch and held second as Rick Monday beat out a bunt. Bill Russell sacrificed and Ken Landreaux was intentionally walked before Baker's game-winning single.

"It's just one game," said Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, "but you can expect that kind of match-up whenever the Reds and Dodgers meet." The game evened the all-time series between the two teams at 843 victories apiece.

Pirates 3, Phillies 1

Hot-hitting Mike Easler rapped a triple and a tie-breaking single and rookie Pascual Perez earned his first major league victory with a six-hitter. Easler tripled in the fifth inning and scored on Phil Garner's sacrifice fly. The Phillies tied it in the seventh on Manny Trillo's homer but the Pirates scored twice in the bottom of the inning. Bill Madlock singled and stole second, Jason Thompson walked and Easler and Omar Moreno delivered RBI singles.

"I feel good when I pitch against a big team like that. I go to the mound thinking about winning," said Perez, a tall, slender right-hander from the Dominican Republic.

"You tell him to throw a ball in on a guy like Mike Schmidt and he throws it right in on his chest," said Pittsburgh catcher Steve Nicosia. "He's not afraid to go after them. This kid's gonna be in the big leagues a long time."

Mets 9, Cardinals 3

Pat Zachry overcame a shaky start to snap a personal five-game losing streak and post his first triumph since April 19 on a five-hitter. Trailing 3-1 after three innings, New York scored four runs against loser Silvio Martinez and Jim Otten after Joel Youngblood doubled to start the third.

Stearns singled home the first run after Dave Kingman and Lee Mazzilli walked. Otten walked Hubie Brooks to force home the tying run, Mazzilli scored on Doug Flynn's double play grounder and Stearns came home on a wild pitch.

Giants 6, Astros 3

Darrell Evans delivered a tie-breaking two-run single with two out in the 15th inning and scored on Jerry Martin's single. The same twosome — Evans' triple and Martin's single — put the Giants in front 3-2 an inning earlier but Houston tied it in Alan Ashby's bases-loaded sacrifice fly.

Evans' game-winning hit came off Bobby Sprowl, the seventh Houston pitcher, after the Giants loaded the bases against Joaquin Andujar on a walk to Johnnie LeMaster, Enos Cabell's single, Larry Herndon's grounder and a walk to Jack Clark.

Padres 5, Braves 2

Terry Kennedy belted a two-run double as San Diego handed Atlanta its fifth straight setback. Kennedy's double came off Tommy Boggs, who lost for the seventh time in a row since winning on opening day, in the third inning following a walk to Gene Richards and the second double of the game by Broderick Perkins. The Padres also scored on RBI singles by Ozzie Smith and Tim Flannery and a sacrifice fly by Luis Salazar. Claudell Washington homered for Atlanta's two runs.

High Fives

Los Angeles' pitcher Dave Stewart, left, gets a high-five from teammate Bill Russell after retiring the Cincinnati Reds in the bottom of the 12th inning to help the Dodgers win, 4-2, in Friday's game in Cincinnati. Also congratulating each other are the Dodgers' Steve Garvery, foreground, and Darrel Thomas. (AP Laserphoto)

Clemson Is Defeated

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Favorite Wichita State and Mississippi State squared off today in the second-round, winners-bracket game of the NCAA Atlantic Region baseball playoffs.

The double-elimination series also pitted Clemson, 34-23, against East Tennessee, 40-14, to decide the first dropout.

The Shockers, 56-13, advanced to the second round with a 7-2 victory over Clemson as Don Heinkle, 14-4, hurled a two-hitter.

After the third inning, when Clemson scored its runs, Heinkle didn't see more than three Tigers an inning the rest of the game, although he only struck out three. Mike Mahoney was the only Clemson player to get on base, and he reached on an error.

Jeff Gilbert, 8-3, took the loss for the Tigers after also getting off to a good start with no-hit pitching in the first and second innings.

In the first game, Brad Winkler lashed a two-run double in the bottom of the seventh and scored the winning run for Mississippi State's 7-6 victory over East Tennessee as a passed ball got by catcher Tim Bailey.

The Bulldogs' victory snapped a three-game losing streak and improved to 42-13.

Garber Named Twin Manager

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Minnesota Twins, despite their unimpressive 12-25 record, have the ability to win, says new Manager Billy Gardner.

"We have the talent here," Gardner said Friday after becoming the Twins' third manager in the last year. "It's a matter of going out and getting the winning habit."

The Twins did just that Friday night, blanking the Kansas City Royals 7-0 in the opener of a three-game series.

Gardner, the Twins' 53-year-old third base coach, succeeded Johnny Goryl, who became manager of the Twins last August, but was fired following an eight-game losing streak.

"This week we've had several meetings about our situation," Howard T. Fox Jr., Twins executive vice president, said at a news conference Friday. "We decided this morning the time had come to make the move. I don't think Johnny knows what he wants to do at this time. He told me he was tired...tired of losing."

Fox said Goryl, who did not attend the news conference and returned to Minnesota Friday night, would be retained in another capacity by the Twins organization.

Goryl, 47, became the second major league manager to become unemployed this spring. On May 6, Maury Wills was fired by Seattle after the Mariners got off to a 6-18 start.

Morgan Shepard Takes Easy Win In Saturday's Sportsman Feature

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Reigning Late Model Sportsman champion Morgan Shepherd raced to an easy victory Saturday in the Mello Yello 300 before a crowd of 64,000 at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Trailing Shepherd to the finish line were Dale Earnhardt, Ricky Rudd, Geoff Bodine and Mark Martin.

Shepherd, a native of Conover, covered the 200 laps on the 1.5 mile oval at an average speed of 115.212 miles per hour, winning the preliminary to Sunday's World 600 for the second time. Shepherd won the inaugural event, then called the Sportsman 100, and is currently the leading rookie in the Winston Cup Grand National point standings.

The race was slowed by eight caution flags for a total of 45 laps. The most serious incident involved Tom Raley and John Settlemyer.

Raley, of Capitol Heights, Md., suffered a badly bruised left ankle, which track officials originally thought was broken, and body contusions when a part of the right front suspension of his Pontiac broke on the 39th lap, sending the car into the wall head-on.

Glenn Jarrett and Mike Potter managed to slide around Raley, but with no place to go, Settlemeyer hit him in the side.

That brought the caution flag out for 16 laps. Raley and Settlemeyer were taken to the track hospital. Settlemeyer was checked and released, but Raley was taken to Charlotte Memorial Hospital for further treatment.

Shepherd took a commanding lead with his Pontiac but he too had a close call. He was moving into position to pass Mike Riley on the 111th lap when Riley's car went into a spin. Shepherd alertly slowed and dropped to the track apron to avoid a collision.

Ten drivers led the race with Shepherd fronting the pack four times for a total of 150 laps. He finished by leading the final 22 laps, the last three under the yellow as the result of a spin by Harry Lee Hill.

Results of the Mello Yello Late Model Sportsman stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speeday Saturday:

1. Morgan Shepherd, Pontiac, 200 laps, 115.212 mph, $16,775.
2. Dale Earnhardt, Pontiac, 200, $5,995.
3. Ricky Rudd, Pontiac, 200, $7,180.
4. Geoff Bodine, Pontiac, 200, $5,710.

Waltrip Leads 2nd Day Qualifying

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip was a day late. Now, his main concern is that he doesn't come up a dollar — or $43,500 — short.

That's the winner's share of the $525,335 posted award for winning Sunday's World 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"I wish we could've qualified yesterday," said Waltrip, after qualifying Friday for the 16th spot in the starting lineup.

Waltrip, who said his car was running great before a flat tire erased his earlier qualifying attempt, had no such problem Friday.

"We ran good today," Waltripp said. "I'm just happy we qualified. I've started further back and won."

Waltrip was referring to the 1978 race when he landed in the 17th starting position and won.

His qualifying speed this year was 157.794 miles per hour, the second-fastest in the 42-car field behind pole-sitter Neil Bonnett, who was clocked at 158.115 Thursday.

At Bonnett's side in the lineup will be Cale Yarborough, who turned in a 157.512 qualifying effort, but will operate at less than 100 percent efficiency.

"I had a travel coffee pot on the towel rack while I shaved this morning," said Yarborough. "It was full of water and started to vibrate off and hit me."

He suffered second-degree burns on his right arm, right side of his chest and right leg.

"That's just rotten luck," he said. "It won't stop me from driving, though. Heck, I've already been out running some."

There were no major surprises in the final day of qualifying with such drivers as Lake Speed, Dave Marcis, Buddy Baker and Lennie Pond joining the lineup. Warmer temperatures helped hold down complaints about the hardness of the tires on the small wheel-based cars, and reduced the number of spins.

Stan Barrett, the 22nd fastest qualifier, spun into a wall late in practice, however. He reported the car was not severely damaged, adding that with two days to get it ready he would have no problem making the starting line.

Seven rookies qualified for the field with another, Tommy Houston, serving as first alternate. Morgan Shepherd, the reigning Late Model Sportsman champion, was fastest among the World 600 newcomers as he qualified 10th with a speed of 155.868.

The final field for Sunday's World 600 NASCAR Grand National stock car race after three qualifying rounds with driver, type of car and average speed:

1. Neil Bonnett, Thunderbird, 158.115 mph
2. Cale Yarborough, Buick, 157.512.

FC's Lang Is Fourth

RAEFORD — Farmville Central's Charlene Lang finished fourth in the shot put in the North Carolina Girls' Track and Field Championships held at Raeford Hoke High School Friday.

Lang, a senior, making her second trip to the state finals, got off a heave of 37 feet, 10 inches to capture fourth place in the meet.

"This was an outstanding meet," Farmville coach Hilda Worthington said. "The times and distances scored were just out of sight."

Herman Franks Given Reigns As GM For Embarrassed Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Describing himself as embarrassed and puzzled by his team's terrible start, Chicago Cubs owner William Wrigley has accepted the resignation of Bob Kennedy and named former manager Herman Franks as the team's interim general manager.

"The blame stops here," Franks said at a news conference Friday. "If anything goes wrong from now on, it's my fault."

"I'm giving up some of my authority," said Wrigley, a millionaire chewing gum magnate. "This is a change of direction for the club. I expect Herman to put us in a winning posture."

Franks, 67, left the Cubs as field manager in the final week of the 1979 season, saying he was fed up with the demands and sniping of his ballplayers. The group of players he inherits has a record of 6-28.

Announcing Kennedy's resignation as executive vice president (general manager), Wrigley said: "All of us are distressed at our current won-and-lost record. There is no question it is downright embarrassing. It is also mystifying because the players have much more talent than the record would indicate."

"With the possibility that I may be too close to the forest to see the trees, I have decided to bring in someone from the outside who is also familiar with the organization — a man with an unusual depth and baseball knowledge."

Wrigley said Franks will "represent ownership as interim general manager with complete authority to get us moving forward at both the major and minor league levels — to take a fresh look at things and, based on his experience, correct any weaknesses and deficiencies he turns up in any aspect of our operations."

Kennedy was named vice president of the Cubs after the 1976 season and his first act was to hire Franks as field manager. The Cubs finished fourth in 1977, third in 1978 and fifth in 1979.

Preston Gomez was hired to replace Franks last year, but was fired in mid-season and replaced by Joey Amalfitano. Franks said Amalfitano's "status is OK" as field manager.

Franks said Wrigley contacted him earlier this week for advice and then told him to come to Chicago from his home in Salt Lake City two days ago. Wrigley asked Franks if he would take the job and Franks said, "I told him 'yes, under certain conditions. I want complete control of the ballclub, the players and their agents.'

"We can do two things," said Franks, "get in the business and become competitive — or get out."

Of the label "interim," Franks said, "Titles mean nothing. Put it any way you want, I'm here to run the club."

Kennedy, 60, did not attend the news conference. He formerly managed the Cubs in the early 1960s and later managed the Oakland A's in 1968. He spent most of his playing career with the Chicago White Sox and the Cleveland Indians.

Franks spent six years in the major leagues as a catcher with St. Louis, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and the New York Giants. He managed the San Francisco Giants from 1965 through 1968.

Bear Grass Is Tobacco Champ

SWAN QUARTER — Bear Grass closed out the 1981 Tobacco Belt Conference season with a 12-1 victory over Mattamuskeet Friday.

The victory clinched the Tobacco Belt title and a playoff berth in the 1-A championship for the Bears.

Gamecocks In Opening Win

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Memphis State and host South Carolina advanced to tonight's second-round winners-bracket game in the double-elimination NCAA East Regional baseball tournament after each team paced Friday victories with four homeruns.

The losers' game at 2 p.m. today between James Madison, 40-17, and Temple, 27-12-1, decides the first elimination in the playoffs.

Two of South Carolina's four homers, each of which drove in two runs Friday, were by first baseman Jim Curl as the Gamecocks triumphed 15-6 over Temple in a contest marked by 13 hits by each team.

South Carolina, 42-13, established a team home record by upping its season homerun total to 70, including those by catcher Rob Lowery and second baseman Jamey Thaw.

Dennis Lubert, touched for five Temple hits and runs in the third but allowing only one more run through six additional innings, gained his 12th decision against one loss. Freshman lefthander Bill Mendek, the first of four Temple pitchers, took the loss, his third against five wins.

Memphis State's four homeruns were part of an 18-hit attack against James Madison for a 16-3 triumph and advancement to today's round. Back-to-back homers by Dave Anderson and Shane Young in the second and a repeat performance in the fifth inning by David Hernandez and Dale Logan helped improve the Tigers, an at-large entry from the Metro Confnerence, to 47-9-1.

Tim Corder worked the first five and two-thirds innings to pick up his ninth win of the season, as James Maadison starter Kip Yancey took the loss.

SPORT LINE

To The Editor:

This is not a complaint, on the contrary, I see what the average area sports fans like to see in the news for the last four or five days.

But one thing is still being somewhat overlooked. Are not a reasonable amount about Ayden having a World's Champion in the kick boxing.

Demitrius "Oaktree" Edwards, a Ayden youth, is this champion and your area readers I believe would like more on him. I don't remember any other world champion in our area and we in Ayden are very proud of him.

His championship bout will be telecast Sunday May 24 on NBC Sportsworld Channel 7.

Thanks again for listening.

Blyleven Hurls Indians By Yankees

By The Associated Press

Bert Blyleven feels right at home in the American League — and his pitching shows it.

"I'm back where I enjoy pitching and where Dave (Cleveland Manager Dave Garcia) gives you the opportunity to do your own thing," says the veteran right-hander.

Blyleven continues to show his gratitude with sharp performances, and Friday night pitched his sixth straight complete game with a 7-3 decision over the New York Yankees. The bearded hurler didn't allow a run after the third inning, yielding just seven hits and striking out eight, while gaining his 162nd lifetime victory.

"In Pittsburgh, I knew I was capable of being a fierce competitor," said Blyleven. "But it was taken away. I needed a challenge. I also needed to put the fun back in baseball. Last year wasn't any fun. In fact, for 10 days last season I considered myself retired."

Blyeven, who has one of the greatest curve balls in baseball, started his career with the Minnesota Twins and was acquired by Cleveland during the off-season in a trade with the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League.

Bo Diaz collected three RBI to pace the Indians' offense. He broke a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning with a sacrifice fly and singled home two more runs in the seventh.

Blyleven, 6-1, had only one shaky inning, the third, when he gave up three runs.

"I had confidence in Bert all the way," said Garcia, shrugging off Blyleven's rocky third inning. "He's a real top-flight pitcher. In fact he's one of the few pitchers that I'll play for one run with. In this game I had Thornton (Andre), my home run hitter and cleanup man, bunt. I can't remember the last time he did that — it must have been three years ago. But that's how strong I feel about Bert's pitching. I knew he would do come through."

A's 6, Blue Jays 2

Rickey Henderson singled, stole second and scored on a single by Dwayne Murphy in the eighth inning to trigger a four-run rally and lead Oakland over Toronto as the A's stopped an eight-game losing streak. Winner Rick Langford, 5-4, pitched an eight-hitter.

Henderson's two-out liner to right field in the eighth was just the third hit off Toronto starter Dave Stieb. After Murphy's base hit, Jim Spencer walked and Wayne Gross was hit by a pitch to load the bases, and Tony Armas followed with a two-run single.

Twins 7, Royals 0

John Castino knocked in three runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly and Jerry Koosman scattered six hits to lead Minnesota over Kansas City in Billy Gardner's debut as the Twins manager. The victory snapped an eight-game losing streak for Minnesota, which announced the firing of Manager Johnny Goryl at a news conference shortly before the game.

Koosman, 2-6, had lost five straight decisions, but he allowed only three Kansas City runners as far as second base and only two of the Royals' hits made it to the outfield.

Rangers 6, Mariners 2

Buddy Bell belted two homers and drove in four runs and Danny Darwin pitched a four-hitter as Texas defeated Seattle. Bell led off the second inning with a homer to give the Rangers a 1-0 lead. He then capped a four-run scoring burst with a three-run homer in the third.

The Mariners pulled off a triple play in the eighth inning. With runners on first and second, shortstop Rick Auerbach snagged a line drive by Mario Mendoza and then stepped on second and threw to first to complete the second triple play in the AL this year. The A's were the first AL team to do it this season.

Orioles 4, Tigers 2

Ken Singleton drove in two runs with a homer and a single as Baltimore defeated Detroit. Singleton's homer, his ninth of the season, was a two-out shot off Detroit starter Milt Wilcox, 5-4, that snapped a 2-2 tie in the eighth.

Winner Scott McGregor, 5-1, who now has won his last five starts, gave up seven hits in eight innings before getting relief help from Tippy Martinez.

Surprise, You're Out

Baltimore Oriole Ken Singleton is tagged out near first base by Detroit Tiger first baseman Richie Hebner after he tried to squeeze two bases out of his run-scoring single in the third inning of Friday night's game at Tiger Stadium. (AP Laserphoto)

Miriam Martin, with a 190, took the first flight, while Jinny Hill was second at 207, and Dorothy Wooles was third at 208.

The Most Improved Lady Golfer award went to Glo Clark, reducing a 26 handicap to a 17.

Ex-ECU Trainer Saves A Life

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — A former East Carolina University trainer has been credited with helping save the life of a 78-year-old man in Columbus, Ga., recently.

Tommy Craig, trainer for the Knoxville Blue Jays of the Southern League, joined Columbus Astro trainer Rex Jones in coming to the aid of the elderly fan on May 15 in the Columbus ball park.

After being notified of the man's distress by one of the Blue Jay ball players, Craig went into the stands and established an airway and monitored his vital signed until Jones joined in. The Columbus rescue squad arrived shortly thereafter and put the man on life support systems. Doctors said later that the man was on his way to recovery, but that preliminary action taken by Craig probably saved his life.

Craig, 25, is a native of Wilmington, N.C., and in his first year with the Knoxville club. He has been with the Blue Jay organization for several years, working last year with Kinston in the Carolina League.

Craig attended East Carolina from 1974-79, where he worked in the Sports Medicine Department under head sports medicine director Rod Compton.

Winterville League

Chicod 3
Red & White 2

CHICOD — Danny Boyd struck out eight and walked just two to lead Chicod to a 3-2 decision over Red & White of Grifton Friday afternoon in a Winterville Little League baseball game.

Boyd went the distance on the mound for the win, his first in two decisions. Chicod did not have anyone with more than one hit. A. Cannon was two for three for Red & White.

Chicod is now 2-1. Red & White is now 3-1.

Little League

Coca-Cola 6
Optimists 5

Coca-Cola captured its first North State Little League game of the year Friday, downing the Optimists, 6-5.

Coke scored first, getting a pair of runs in the first inning. But the Optimists tied it up with two in the second, then took the lead on a solo homer by David Tinglestad in the third frame. Coke came right back with two in the bottom of the third. Both teams scored single runs in the fourth, and the Optimists tied it once more with one in the fifth.

Then, in the bottom of the sixth, Coke got the winning run. Tony Evans led off the inning with a walk and moved up when Howard Collings reached on an error. Gil Gardner walked, loading the bases. Then, after two fly-outs, Earl Hines reached on an error, scoring Evans with the game-ending run.

Tracey Johnson led the Coke hitting with three, while Terrence Cherry had two for the Optimists.

Pepsi-Cola 11
Carroll & Assoc. 2

Pepsi-Cola added another Tar Heel Little League victory Friday with an 11-2 romp over Carroll & Associates.

Pepsi scored its first run in the opening inning, but Carroll matched that. It stayed tied at 1-1 until the third, when Pepsi scored three times, effectively putting the game out of reach.

Mike Kelly led off the third with a single and moved up on an error on the play. Bobby Sullivan singled and Clay Young singled, driving in both runners. Young moved up on an error and came around on two passed balls for a 4-1 lead.

Pepsi picked up two more in the fifth and added the final five in the sixth. The other Carroll run came in the fourth.

Sullivan led the Pepsi hitting with three, while Paul Kelly and Young each had two. No one had more than one for Carroll, which got only three off Young's pitching.

Race May Be Slow For One Driver

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — For Stan Barrett, driving in the World 600 stock car race is just a matter of slowing down and remembering to turn.

Barrett, driving for the Skoal Bandit Racing Team, holds the world land speed record after breaking the sound barrier in a jet-powered car. He reached Mach I, or 739.66 miles per hour, once at the Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah, and again at Edwards Air Force Base.

"I'd like to have gone faster today, but not that fast," Barrett said Friday after qualifying in 22nd place for Sunday's World 600.

Barrett, who averaged 155.903 miles per hour around the 1½-mile oval, is still learning how to drive the oval tracks from his teammate, Harry Gant.

"I've never raced on an oval track before this year," he said. "I've been in two rally sport races and that's my racing experience."

But so far he likes what he's seen.

"This is fun," he said. "There's nothing fun about driving a jet car. In fact, if I'd known what it was going to be like, I wouldn't have done it."

He said he would like to keep Mach I driving a thing of the past, and recounted some of the grueling work behind the record.

Preparations for Barrett's run at Edwards took a year. It took nearly two weeks, and 18 tries, before he reached Mach I.

"You don't know what it's going to be like because no one had ever been there before," he said. "That was 110 miles per hour faster than anyone else had ever gone."

Barrett said his car's engine at Edwards produced 60,000 horsepower.

"That's more horsepower than you would have if you took all the horsepower in the engines for the starting field at the Indy 500 and doubled that number," he said.

Barrett said the physical force at such speeds was overwhelming.

"It wasn't the acceleration that was a problem, it was the deceleration," he said. "We kept building up the speed gradually. We had to do it gradually.

"I'd never go through, or put my family through, that again. It was such high anxiety."

Instead, he will settle down to the slow-paced life of a stock car racer.

Davis Hot In Florida

Former East Carolina University baseball player Butch Davis of Williamston, is burning 'em up in the Florida State League this year.

Davis, in his second year of professional ball, leads the Kansas City Royal entry in the league (Ft. Myers) in hitting. His .366 average (according to The Sporting News), is third best in the league. He also leads the league in home runs with five and in runs batted in with 22.

Davis, who last year was one of the top players in his league, is a teammate at Ft. Myers of Billy Best, another former Pirate who played on the same ECU team with him.

Two other members of that ECU team are paired together in the Carolina League this year, playing for Salem, the San Diego entry into the league. They are Raymie Styons and Mickey Britt.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

When it comes to respect in this country, there's nothing to equal the American Headache.

It ranks right up there with penicillin, hot chicken soup and Mt. Rushmore.

You want to leave a party early? Announce you have a headache.

You want to cancel a meeting with the tax auditor? Phone in a headache.

You want to go to sleep on your honeymoon? Retire early with a headache.

The headache is one of the last great mystiques in the world. Why? Because no one ever questions them, or tries to cure them. There is absolutely no substitute for it.

If you can't go shopping because your stomach hurts, the reaction is, "Of course you can. You probably just need a laxative."

If you don't feel like going to Aunt May's funeral because you have a throbbing pain in your lower back, you're told, "You're just bored. Get your coat and you'll forget about it."

If you don't feel like going to bed because you are experiencing blinding spots before your eyes, you're assured, "Close your eyes and you'll never notice them."

But, if you can't possibly leave on a vacation because you have a headache, everyone advises, "Go lie down. We'll talk when you're feeling better."

Women everywhere are indebted to Winona Haslipp of London who invented the headache in 1813, quite by accident. Winona was the mother of eleven children. One night as she was blowing out the candles, she hit her head on a shelf holding pewter mugs. When her husband yelled, "Aren't you coming to bed?" she announced, "I have a headache." When she reached the top of the stairs, she was amazed to see that he had gone to sleep.

The story spread like wildfire. Within days, every woman in London was banging her head on a shelf holding pewter mugs and shouting, "I have a headache." The phrase not only earned Winona a page in history, but 136,000 write-in votes for Queen.

A widower was telling me a few weeks ago he broached a delicate subject to his 13-year-old daughter when he told her perhaps they should go shopping for a training bra. She turned on him and shouted hysterically, "Dad! Please! I have a headache!"

He said he understood.

They say it. But they don't. Not really.

Garwood's Friend Says Life Filled With Crisis

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Donna Long, the 38-year-old widow who stood by Marine Pfc. Robert R. Garwood throughout his marathon legal battles, says its hard to remember when life was not "one crisis after another."

Since welcoming him home from 14 years in Vietnam two years ago, Mrs. Long has been at Garwood's side through his military trial on charges of collaborating with the enemy and a civilian trial on charges of sexually molesting a 7-year-old girl.

"We've always just tried to take it one step at a time," Mrs. Long said in an interview after Garwood was cleared of sex charges. "Life has been just one crisis after another."

Mrs. Long was the star defense witness in the sex trial, testifying Garwood was out of town the day the incident allegedly occurred.

Garwood, a 35-year-old native of Adams, Ind., is appealing his conviction on charges of collaborating with the Viet Cong in a series of jungle POW camps.

Defense attorneys claim Garwood was driven insane by torture and deprivation and should not be held responsible for his actions.

Garwood and Mrs. Long plan to be married after Garwood completes psychotherapy at a Harrisonburg, Va., hospital for "post traumatic stress disorder," a mental illness that causes some Vietnam veterans to suffer extreme depression, flashbacks and nightmares.

Mrs. Long recalled how she and her late husband, Dale, befriended Garwood after he returned to active duty with the Marines nearly two years ago, and how Garwood was devastated by her husband's death in a motorcycle accident.

"I took him (Garwood) to the funeral home. I stayed outside and he knelt beside the casket and he was talking to Dale in Vietnamese," she said. "I had a feeling he was telling him 'Don't worry. I will take care of Donna and the kids.'"

Garwood, who is 6-foot-2 and slightly balding, related the story of his years behind enemy lines to the Longs during an all-night conversation the night they met, she said.

"It was a very long, drawn out, painful experience," she said. "He could not speak English very well. He kept saying over and over that he felt he had beaten the communists because he had survived. He could not understand this (the charges against him).

"I tried to explain to him that he was an embarrassment to the Vietnamese government because five months earlier they had said no Americans were left in Vietnam. I told him he was also an embarrassment to our government because it believed them (the Vietnamese)."

"I told him to keep fighting because, if he did give up, all those years would be for nothing.

She said Garwood, who was accused of carrying weapons for the communists and helping interrogate and indoctrinate his fellow prisoners, still does not understand what happened to him in Vietnam.

"He perceives what he did differently from the way the other POWs did," said Mrs. Long. "He didn't understand what he was doing."

Mrs. Long, who rides motorcycles for a hobby, lives in a town where nearly 40,000 Marines are stationed — some of them critical of Garwood's actions. She said she has received telephone threats and, one night, had a "verbal run-in" with a young Marine at a Jacksonville night spot.

Mrs. Long believes Garwood would have been acquitted of the military charges if the jury had been shown government documents that revealed much more serious collaboration and mutiny charges were dropped against POWs who returned in 1971.

In 1972, Mrs. Long became involved with POW-MIA families when she began selling the once-popular POW bracelets bearing the names of missing servicemen. She insists other servicemen are still being detained in Southeast Asia and continues to wear a bracelet with the name of Army Green Beret Sgt. Gary Labohn.

"Gary still has not been accounted for and I intend to continue wearing the bracelet until he is reasonably accounted for," she said.

FIVE BOSTON OPERAS

BOSTON (AP) — The 1982 season of the Opera Company of Boston will be expanded from four to five operas.

The American premiere of Bernd Aloys Zimmerman's "Die Soldaten" will open the season Jan. 22, with three repeat performances.

Verdi's "Aida," starring Shirley Verrett and James McCracken, will be followed by Puccini's "La Boheme," Weber's "Der Freischutz" and either a baroque opera or an operetta.

Laser Inventor Set Stage For Ever-Changing Life

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The day didn't impress him. It was either cloudy or bright, before lunch or after. He doesn't remember or was too excited to care.

Whenever it was, those 21 years ago, one can imagine Dr. Ted Maiman praying, "Let There Be Coherent Light," and throwing a switch, and, lo, there was coherent light.

So was the laser born, only a whisper of what it would be, but born nonetheless, a glowing ruby crystal, a bet against the odds, an invention that has transformed our lives and will for decades to come.

No one could foresee how many ways the laser would change the order of things, not even Theodore Harold Maiman, so high on the moment he forgot when the moment occurred. He had thought about it, of course. It was to him an extension of man's control over the nether regions of the electromagnetic spectrum, akin to but more far-reaching than control of microwaves or radio.

It would be useful, he knew, in the laboratory and would have foreseeable uses in biology, medicine, communications. But who could guess then that it would measure tire tread, record video pictures on a disc, cut diamonds and metal with super-precision, repair torn retinas, erase birthmarks, speed telephone conversations, aim artillery, make computers more efficient and unify in a few plastic cords that maze of wiring under the dashboard of your car?

What Maiman had wrought that May day in 1960 was invention. Putting the laser to work in useful ways was innovation, a neat distinction in this modern world.

He founded and later sold a company which produced industrial lasers and improved on laser performance, made lasers that were used for chemical and gas analysis, produced the laser that was the first to send a light signal that echoed back to earth from the moon. Now at 53, he guides TRW enterprises that use lasers to send light communication signals through fibers, replacing acres of copper from California to New York to London.

And he toys with the idea of laser TV, which would produce perfect color and perfect resolution in life-size pictures that could hang on your wall not much thicker than a framed oil painting.

But the negativism that stymies the inventor sometimes blocks the innovator as well. So when Maiman moved to innovation, he knew his enemy. The pursuit of the laser had introduced them.

"I was racing in a league with the top scientists of the world," he remembers now. Everyone was working on making a laser — IBM, Princeton, MIT, RCA, Bell, Columbia, the top labs in Europe.

A lot of people thought it would just not work. Even some of the people he worked for.

Maiman labored in "the only machine shop in the world with parquet floors," part of a research and think palace tucked discretely into the hills above Malibu by the Howard Hughes organization.

But all was not well in this Camelot setting. There was pressure on him not to throw the switch, because no one likes failure. There was pressure within the corporation to phase out his project, because it was using up valuable research and development funds.

They gave him something like $55,000 and nine months, make or break.

"They thought I was beating a dead horse."

After all, they reasoned, prestigious scientists working on other laser designs had studied the ruby crystal and found it wanting. Forget the ruby, they said. It won't work.

"I had the feeling I was going to pull it off. Whether it was daydreaming or whatever, there was a tremendous emotional load. I was excited."

Even after it worked, a number of scientists said it wouldn't work. A scientific journal turned down a paper on it. Maiman was criticized for reporting it to the press. To be sure, about half of his critics got on the bandwagon and acclaimed his success.

But the persistent negativists began to call it trivial. Some said it was an accident. Maiman was too happy to be angry. In the perspective he has now, he likes to quote another scientist whose discovery was called an accident.

"I always have these accidents when I'm working hard in the lab," the scientist used to say.

When he talks to young people, Maiman, now vice president of New Ventures and Technology for TRW, offers this advice:

"If you have an idea or concept different from what is being done, keep in mind the world has been built in such a way that resists change.... If it looks like it will work, go ahead and do it. My whole career has been doing something new and different. There is a natural resistance. If you're going to do something different, you're going to encounter negativism. The consensus is not indicative of the reality."

Soviets Assuming Larger Role As U.S. Virtually Writes Off Iran

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, chastened by vivid memories of the hostage ordeal, has all but written off Iran as a diplomatic or trading partner — while the Soviet Union assumes an ever-larger role in the Persian Gulf.

Four months after return of 52 American captives, there is no thaw in the diplomatic and commercial estrangement between the superpower United States and Iran, its once-devoted client.

Reagan administration officials eventually hope to normalize relations with Iran, but they are in no hurry. Iran, for now, seems disinterested.

Thus, relations are at a standstill.

No oil. Petroleum taps that poured half a million barrels a day to America are turned down. None of Iran's shrunken daily output of 1.7 million barrels is bought by American companies.

No alliance. The shades are drawn on the electronic listening posts in Iran's northern corners that gave the United States a window on Soviet missile launchings and troop movements.

No arms. Though Iran is fighting a war with Soviet-armed Iraq, it receives no aid from America. The United States, which supplied the late shah with billions of dollars of weaponry in search of a Persian Gulf "policeman," is now unwilling to even supply spare parts.

No trade. Commerce with Iran, no longer prohibited since the hostages were set free, is infinitestimal — $41 million in March compared with $3.7 billion in 1978. Some 600 American companies have called the Commerce Department since January for guidance. They are discouraged from making deals.

Virtually no travel. A few dozen Americans go to Iran, despite the advice of their government. Among them are Iran's Washington lawyer, Thomas Shack, and a handful of entrepreneurs who hope to cash in if-and-when trade resumes.

And finally, no diplomatic relations. Though the Carter administration hinted at restoring ties in the bargaining to free the hostages, mutual hostility has barred even inching in that direction.

"We've been summarily thrown out under the most humiliating circumstances," says Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., who sees little prospect for renewed relations. "I have trouble separating my own personal feelings on this subject from what I hope is a professional judgment."

"It's just not a live subject," a top State Department official said about restoring the diplomatic ties that were broken a year ago. Another, who also asked not to be identified, said of Iran's revolutionary regime: "They are just apparently disinterested."

For the record, from undersecretary for political affairs Walter J. Stoessel, the State Department line is this:

"We would like, over time, to be in a position to normalize relations with Iran, but this is likely to develop very slowly. It will depend on a number of factors, including the continuing level of Iran's cooperation in implementing the hostage-release agreements, and their willingness to abide by accepted standards of international behavior."

While the Reagan administration tries to ride out the radical tide in Tehran, the Soviet Union is perched on the brink of opportunity. The Red Army drive into Afghanistan 17 months ago could signal Russia's interest in forcibly replacing the United States as strategic and oil partner to Iran.

Bruce Laingen, highest ranking of the former hostages, hopes the United States will not slam the door on Iran.

"I hope the American people keep their perspective about the place," he says. "We should not lose sight of the fact that Iran remains important to us."

Some day, he predicted, the United States again will have relations with Iran. "But now is a time to cool it, to leave the initiative to Iran," he said.

Iran faces not only a long-feared threat from the Soviets, but the constant strain from its destructive but not decisive war with Iraq. Now in its eighth month, the conflict has cut into Iranian oil production and put a psychological burden on Iran's never stable central government.

Soviet weapons are fighting on both sides. Russia has long armed Iraq, and with no American aid going to Iran, Moscow has moved to supply Tehran as well with shipments through Libya, Syria and Algeria.

Iraqi forces control 6,000 to 8,000 miles of Iranian territory.

William Quandt, a Brookings Institution scholar who held top posts in the State Department and National Security Council, says policy planners should take Soviet activities in the Persian Gulf region seriously.

"I think the United States has a strong, long-term strategic interest in the integrity of Iran," he said. "Our interests would be badly affected by any disintegration of the state or a predominant Soviet influence."

So long as Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is on the scene, Quandt doubts U.S.-Iranian relations can be improved.

"Nevertheless," he said, "I think the United States should issue a strong statement that we support Iran's territorial integrity and that the Iran-Iraq conflict should be resolved without a forceful change of borders."

These moves, Quandt said, would provide a foundation on which to build in a post-Khomeini period.

Bijan Amini, a prominent Iranian exile, thinks the Soviets have already launched a campaign of opportunity by supporting Kurdish dissidents and Tudeh, the local Communist party, and by having communists infiltrate some religious groups.

"What they are trying to do, essentially, is to fragmentize the country so the Soviets can move in and pick off what they like," Amini said.

"They are playing with someone who could eat them," Amini said of Iran's flirtation with the Soviets through the purchase of food and consumer goods and the sale of natural gas to the Russians.

It seems apparent that at some point, impelled by superpower competition and a thirst for oil, the United States inevitably will reach out to Iran for at least a correct relationship.

RAILROAD BLOCKADE ... Pamela Logozzo stretches across railroad tracks near Index, Wash., last August as she and her friends stopped a railroad truck that had been spraying the side of the tracks with herbicide. Their blockade was part of a growing concern over the use of the herbicide 2,4-D, a chemical sprayed every year in the state of Washington to kill weeds and unwanted brush. (UPI Photo)

Zimbabwe Attempts To Supply Food For Its African Neighbors

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer

INYANGA, Zimbabwe (AP) — With a crude hoe, a few boxes of government-provided seeds and the promise of his first-ever income, 34-year-old Sampson Mutasa planted four acres of corn on a windswept hill not far from his mud-and-grass hut here.

Now his toil and that of 1.5 million other peasants and thousands of commercial farmers has spawned a record harvest that is enabling Zimbabwe to feed itself and several hungry neighboring states.

"The first revolution drove us off our land," Mutasa said of the seven-year guerrilla war for independence in which a million black peasants fled across the borders. "This green revolution brought us back to stay."

On a continent plagued by drought, flood and war, where the average 3.5 percent birth rate is fast outpacing the one-percent-a-year drop in food output, Zimbabwe is determined "to become the larder of independent Africa," according to President Canaan Banana.

Seventeen months after the last shots were fired in the war to end nine decades of white-minority dominance in what was formerly Rhodesia, Zimbabwe has become black Africa's biggest food exporter.

About 5,700 white farmers, who own two-fifths of the land, and more than 1.5 million peasant farmers who previously scratched a subsistence living from tribal reserves like this one at Inyanga in eastern Zimbabwe grew a total of almost 3.3 million tons of corn in the past year.

At least 1.1 million tons of the corn, a staple in east, central and southern Africa, is to be sold to food-poor countries such as Malawi, Mozambique, Zaire and Zambia. Zimbabwe is getting payment from international aid funds pledged to those nations.

Zimbabwe's bumper harvest — the fruits of a government-guaranteed 30-percent increase in the price of corn paid to growers this year — will go a long way toward averting starvation among millions of people in the region.

It will also loosen black African countries' dependence for food on South Africa, the last white-ruled country on the continent whose race-segregation policies they abhor.

South Africa has long been the economic powerhouse and granary of Africa and expects this year its own bumper corn crop of 14.3 million tons, according to the latest estimates.

Much of the exportable surplus — expected to be around seven million tons — will most likely be shipped to neighboring black states.

Although South African officials regularly point out that shipments of their grain have kept famine from the door of many a black African nation, South Africa's motives are not altogether altruistic.

Its former agriculture minister, Hendrik Schoeman, observed last year that "full grain silos will mean that we can talk and negotiate from a position of strength." The heavy reliance of black African nations on South African food also tends to weaken the argument for international economic sanctions against South Africa because of its race policies and its position on South-West Africa, also called Namibia.

Zimbabwe, which is producing 40 percent more corn this year than last year and will be harvesting it over the next six months, sees itself as an alternative to South Africa as the breadbasket of Africa.

"Many of the key technological solutions to the food problems of Africa have been fully researched in this country," commented Eddie Cross, chief agricultural economist for Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's year-old black socialist government. "Zimbabwe is ... a symbol of hope in a continent of hunger."

Cross maintains that Zimbabwe is determined to avoid the mistakes made by other independent African countries which are spending precious foreign currency reserves to import food although many of them were once food exporters.

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization and the World Bank, in separate reports, tell part of the story of Africa's decline as a continent that was self-sufficient in food at the end of World War II and has now become the world's biggest importer:

— African and other low-income countries will have to spend $7.7 billion on food this year, 17 percent of all their merchandise imports. By comparison, middle-income countries will spend 9 percent on food imports.

— Africa is the only region where per-capita food production has actually fallen over the past 20 years — mainly due to high population growth, wars and natural disasters, reluctance to abandon primitive environment-destructive and subsistence farming methods. Cereal output in 18 countries last year was down 12 percent from 1978.

— Eager to earn foreign currency from cash crops, Africa — notably the Sudan, Swaziland and Zambia — last year produced four times as much sugar as cereals, tying up such scarce resources as water, machinery and foreign investment that could have been used to grow food staples.

— At least 28 African countries — more than half — urgently need food aid. They will be forced to import 43 percent more food this year than in 1980.

— Ten percent of Africa's population of around 439 million faces starvation this year.

On "a continent starving itself to death, the success of the Zimbabwean experiment is all the more vital," says Cross. "Failure will commit further millions of people to a confrontation with hunger and the solutions must be found within the continent itself."

Cross' formula is to offer attractive incentives for local and foreign investment in food production, encourage or enforce conservation and curb the Africa-wide drift of people from the countryside to the cities and towns.

Last year, as part of a national food-security plan, Zimbabwe government agriculture experts distributed packets of seeds for corn, peanuts, sorghum or millet along with fertilizer to the peasant farmers, including Sampson Mutasa.

"They showed us how to grow things and they told us how much money we could make," Mutasa recalled. "It worked out at more than we would earn in town. With help from these people anybody can be a farmer."

Controversy Grows Over Herbicide Use

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Allen Erickson says his blood proved there was nothing dangerous about herbicides.

"There's a big hue and cry about nothing, as far as I'm concerned," said Erickson, a chemical specialist for the state of Washington Department of Natural Resources, who rarely sees a week go by without handling the substances used to kill unwanted brush and trees in state forests.

A few years ago, Erickson sent a bottle of blood over to the state laboratory for analysis. He said there wasn't a trace of the chemicals he's been heavily exposed to for more than a decade.

"That's one of the reasons I don't believe there's a problem," he said.

Erickson is one of those on the "humbug" side of the growing controversy over the herbicide 2,4-D — a chemical sprayed every year in Washington state on more than a million acres of grain fields, about 50,000 acres of forest and along hundreds of miles of roadsides and power line rights-of-way.

Every spring, the herbicide is used to kill weeds in the wheat fields, unwanted alder and vine maple in young Douglas fir forests and undesirable roadside brush.

Other officials say Erickson's relief about the lack of 2,4-D traces in his blood is misplaced. Unlike substances such as DDT, the herbicide does not accumulate in the human body. That makes testing for its health effects especially difficult.

Defenders of 2,4-D contend it is a valuable and safe tool for providing abundant crops and maximum timber yields. They say there is no evidence the herbicide may be hazardous to human or animal health.

Others believe 2,4-D should be banned as a potentially toxic chemical that may be an agent in causing cancer, birth defects or miscarriages.

"I don't consider that it's safe to expose any unwilling person to that chemical, because there are so many adverse effects," said Dr. Ruth Shearer, an Issaquah, Wash., biochemist and geneticist.

Last year, Dr. Shearer reviewed all the available scientific data on 2,4-D for Seattle Metro, which is responsible for water quality in Lake Washington and considered using the herbicide to control aquatic weeds.

Her conclusion was that more careful, undisputable tests are needed. She believes studies in Sweden, the Soviet Union and elsewhere suggest a possible cancer connection.

She said there are clear ties between the herbicide and temporary or long-term numbness in the extremities, respiratory impairments, hypersensitivity to all petrochemicals and bleeding and hemorrhaging.

Dr. Shearer believes this bleeding connection could be related in some way to the incident that has sparked arguments over 2,4-D: the unusual number of miscarriages reported last year in the tiny town of Ashford, Wash.

Out of 10 conceptions between July and December 1979, women in the logging town near Mount Rainier reported seven miscarriages, one stillbirth and one infant death.

Some residents also raised concerns about reproductive problems in farm and domestic animals.

State health experts were called to investigate suggestions the problems might be the result of 2,4-D spraying in nearby forests. The result was a study by Dr. Sam Milham, an epidemiologist for the Department of Social and Health Services.

Milham concluded last December that there was no connection between the problems and herbicide spraying. He said recent reports of two more miscarriages this year don't change his mind.

He said the nearest herbicide spraying was eight miles away from the town and was no different than the spraying that had been going on for 20 years. The temporary high rate of miscarriages, he said, was a coincidence.

Milham interviewed the women, drew their blood, checked the water supply and melted ice that was frozen at the time of the miscarriages. He found no traces of herbicides.

In Milham's opinion, 2,4-D is "an exceedingly safe agent."

"I'd hate to see it go. We can't raise wheat or rice in this country without 2,4-D," he said.

Goose Creek Park Plans Series On Bird-Watching

Bird life and the growing sport of bird watching will be the subject of a series of programs at Goose Creek State Park beginning Saturday, June 13, at 3 p.m. at the park office.

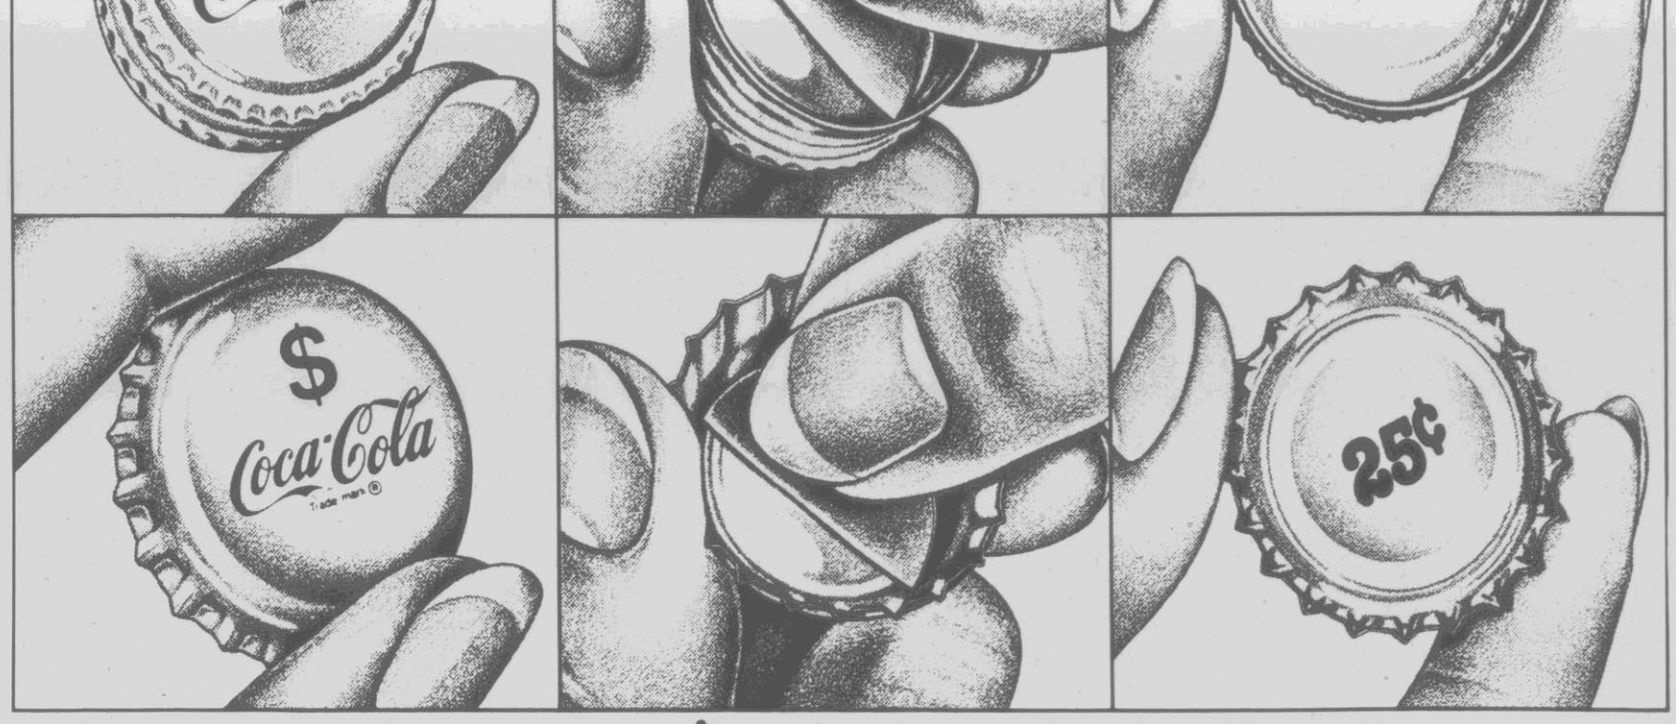

David Burney, a district naturalist with the state Division of Parks and Recreation, will conduct an introductory session entitled "Know Your Feathered Friends." The free program includes a slide talk on various aspects of birds, how birds fly, their economic and ecological significance and the sport of bird watching.

Burney will demonstrate some of the equipment used by birdwatchers, including binoculars, telescopes, cameras and portable tape recorders. The various field-guides available will be shown and discussed, along with tips on how to find and identify birds.

Following the indoor program, Burney will lead a bird-watching excursion in the park from 5 until 6:30 p.m. Anyone interested in attending this program is requested to phone the park office, 923-2191, prior to the day of the program.

The park will hold morning bird-walks periodically throughout the rest of the summer, to be announced at a later date. These walks will be conducted by Susan Corda, seasonal park naturalist at Goose Creek. She also will be available to conduct nature hikes and slide programs for organized groups on request.

Goose Creek State Park is located between Washington and Bath (turn off U.S. 264 about 9 miles east of Washington onto S.R. 1334 at the park sign, then follow the signs to the park entrance). The park is open every day of the year, and offers picnicking, swimming, primitive camping and boat-launching facilities.

Prof Teaches 'How To Fire'

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The young candidates for masters' degrees in business administration at Babson College are full of confidence, ready to climb the ladder, ascend the heights, knock 'em dead in big business.

Then the professor tells them what to do when — not if — they get fired.

They laugh. Uneasily.

The professor is Laurence Stybel, a psychologist and business consultant who teaches general business and management to master's candidates at Babson and is an expert on firing and being fired (he's experienced both). To the young men and women sitting there so sure of coming success, he suggests things like:

— In negotiating severance pay, make sure you get neither too little nor too much. Three months is perfect. It will allow you time to find a new job without overdoing it, like the man who was given three years pay. He spent the first sailing, the second writing a novel and the third looking for a job from prospective employers who wanted to know what he'd been doing for two years.

— Make sure to work out a good cover story with your (ex-) boss. To colleagues, friends, neighbors and future employers, you are never fired. You simply "resign to look for new opportunities."

— Use your contacts. You'd be surprised how many people you've met casually during your career who can help you find a new job.

Their egos a bit deflated, the students react much like soldiers in battle and others who must contemplate death.

"Me, get fired (killed)? It'll happen to the next guy."

"Me, get fired? I'll be doing the firing."

Which is why Stybel brings up the name of Elisabeth Kubler-Ross, author of pioneer studies of death and dying.

"Dismissal is analagous to death," Stybel says. "Even the terminology's the same. Getting the ax, walking the plank, it's the ultimate corporate punishment."

And it happens a lot, particularly in a contracting economy. A Gallup-Wall Street Journal survey last November showed that managers of large and medium-sized firms are nearly twice as likely to fire an incompetent worker now as two years ago.

Stybel and his wife, Maryanne Peabody, also run their own firm. They play a dual role, first counseling companies how to fire the executives they want to fire, then counseling the fired executive on how to find a new job.

'Jailhouse Lawyer' Goes To Court... And Wins

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. (AP) — The client was a convicted murderer suing the police who had arrested him. The jury was a dozen fair, square Hoosiers from the heart of Indiana. The odds the convict would win were maybe a million to one.

"Lawyers don't win cases like that," said Indianapolis attorney Niles Stanton.

But Richard Lee Owen took the case. And the jury ruled against the police and for his convict-client.

Owen is a blond, bespectacled 34-year-old high school graduate and former bank robber serving time for attempted murder. He's not a lawyer, but he knows the law.

A fellow inmate at Indiana State Prison complained that his arresting officers had kept him 10 days in jail without a hearing. That's illegal, Owen told the prisoner. Then he filed suit, persuaded a federal judge to let him argue the case and gave the jury an impassioned, law-and-order argument.

"When those sworn to uphold the law break the law, then we have no law," Owen argued, enlisting in his clarion call the Constitution, the Founding Fathers, freedom, justice and the sanctity of law.

The jury awarded his client $11,250 in damages.

Outside lawyers were surprised, but not the cons back at Indiana State Prison where Owen is considered one of the premier "jailhouse lawyers" in the country.

From his cell, Owen publishes a bimonthly law review, teaches, writes, does paid research for outside attorneys, handles an average of 35 inmate cases at a time and oversees an impressive 1,500-volume law library, purchased in part with money from one of his heists.

Owen, like other jailhouse lawyers, learned his law behind bars.

Last year, 23,287 federal civil suits were filed by prisoners — twice the number of a decade ago, according to the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts. And the number is growing.

One reason for the increase in jailhouse lawsuits is two decades of U.S. Supreme Court decisions gradually giving inmates greater access to the courts.

Most jailhouse lawsuits are imprecise, ill-conceived and illegible, according to prosecutors and judges, who say they are clogging dockets and costing courts money to handle.

"It's a problem, it's growing and it's costing taxpayers a ton of money," says Kenneth Meyers, a federal magistrate in Benton. Ill.

"I spend 75 to 80 percent of my time on prisoner litigation and a good portion of that just dealing with frivolous petitions," Meyers says. "Prisoners have gotten the idea that every time they are denied any little thing, any privilege, they can file a complaint."

For instance:

— One inmate sued when he ordered a tube of "pale" yellow paint from the commissary, but got "light" yellow paint.

— A woman inmate demanded that prison officials pay for a sex-change operation.

— A homosexual filed suit following the transfer of a cellmate.

— When a guard allegedly took money from a prisoner to buy marijuana and spent the money instead on an evening at a motel with a friend, the inmate filed suit demanding that the state of Illinois buy him his marijuana or return his money.

Adopt-A-Pet

The Adopt-a-Pets of the Week are these five black and brown (mostly black) puppies. They were rescued from the middle of the road where they'd been put out. A home for each of them is desperately needed. About 7 weeks old, two male, three female. 752-3495.

Also being sought homes by the Pitt County Humane Society are the following:

— Four male kittens, 6 weeks old. Three orange, one gray with white boots. 756-6346 after 6 p. m.

— A small-built part-German shepherd female dog. Desperately in need of loving home. May be seen at Bateman's Animal Hospital. 752-3148.

— One white neutered male cat and one calico spayed female cat. May be seen at Greenville Animal Shelter. Also, found in Evans Street Extension area and placed in Animal Shelter, a three-legged German shepherd. Claim by calling or visiting Animal Shelter, 752-3342, Ext. 322.

— A tri-colored kitten, 756-1268.

— Five kittens. 752-0226.

— Five 6-week-old kittens, one yellow tabby, two black and white, two calico. Box trained. 756-7943.

— A 6-week-old tan and white male mixed breed dog. 756-1637.

— Four 7-week-old kittens, two black and white, two yellow and white. 756–0902.

— A 5-year-old white and tan neutered wire-haired terrier. Housedog. Owner asks only that he be kept well-groomed. Call Monday 758-6333.

— Two 3-month-old female mixed breed puppies that will be medium-sized dogs. Also a very smart female brown, black and white mixed breed dog. 756-9399.

— Three 7-week-old kittens, two yellow, one black with yellow and white. Litter-trained. 756-0981.

School Offers Class For Oil Field Work

By JOHN BRONSON
Associated Press Writer

BRADFORD, Pa. (AP) — Dave Faller stands in yellow mud up to his ankles, his workboots squishing in the muck as he and several other high school students wrestle with a three-foot-long oil rig wrench.

As a diesel-powered winch sputters, then roars in the background, the students unscrew a grease-slicked pipe and lay it with a hollow thud on a pile of other tubing taken out of the well.

"This is just like working in a regular oil field," the 17-year-old senior says. "When the wells don't pump, we pull 'em up to see what's wrong."

Faller is one of 40 students enrolled in Bradford Area High School's unusual petroleum production course — one of two such high school programs in the United States. The other is in Wayne County, Ohio.

Bradford's students get on-the-job training for half the school day. The rest of the school day is spent in regular classes. At graduation, the students are qualified as "knowledgeable learners" for oil field jobs that start at $17,000 a year, says Myron Crumrine, supervisor of vocational education.

So far, about two-thirds of those who entered the five-year-old program have become "roustabouts," as oil field workers are called.

Bradford High School has oil, gas and mineral rights on 25 acres of land, where the training takes place, and owns eight acres outright.

Ten pumping jacks, resembling giant metal insects, peck at the ground on the wooded hillside behind the football stadium. Last year they sucked out 440 barrels of crude from sandstone formations about 1,300 feet below the ground. The school sold the oil for $16,000.

"Not too many school programs bring in that kind of money," says Crumrine.

The program was launched in 1976 after Crumrine surveyed the job market for oil field workers at the request of the Pennsylvania Oil, Gas and Mineral Association.

"The oil industry has existed here for over 100 years, but the skills involved are passed on by word-of-mouth. There has never been a formal training program," he says.

Crumrine found a big shortage of trained workers.

"They lost a generation of workers," he says, explaining that the labor force waned during the years when crude oil prices were depressed.

The Arab oil embargo changed all that, and petroleum producers found themselves lacking a skilled labor pool.

"Companies told us all kinds of horror stories," says Bradford Director of Curriculum Ed Goulding, who was high school principal when the petroleum course was created.

"Some workers couldn't find the wells they were supposed to pump. Others didn't know one end of a wrench from another. And the older guys who could pass the knowledge along were retiring," he says.

To close that gap, Crumrine and an advisory group developed the curriculum for the petroleum production course.

With funds from the Pennsylvania Bureau of Vocational Education Department, the school was able to purchase the land and mineral rights for about $40,000.

A federal Appalachia grant was received to drill new oil wells and local oil companies — Quaker State, Pennzoil and Kendall — supplied pipe, rods, tanks and other equipment.

Goulding says the initial outlay for land and mineral rights is now worth an estimated $400,000 with the improvements that have been made.

And the course has hit the mark as far as producers are concerned.

"It's very effective. We're just tickled with it," says E. James Bryner, president of the Pennsylvania Oil, Gas and Mineral Association. The association represents 1,000 companies, primarily small oil and gas producers.

"We are not only supplying our own local industry, but we're having calls from as far away as Louisiana for workers on offshore oil rigs," he says.

The students say the course can be physically as well as intellectually demanding.

Among the skills taught are tool recognition and usage, oil well servicing and plugging, pumping jack maintenance, bulldozer operations, welding, carpentry and oil field mechanics.

New Funds Checking pays interest based on money market rates!

If you're looking for an interest bearing checking account, our new Funds Checking bears a lot more interest. Funds Checking pays interest based on the money market rates. So, compare Funds Checking interest rates to other accounts. You'll find Funds Checking pays double, even triple the interest!

Travelers Checks are free whenever you need to go out of town. If you need a Mastercard, you'll be eligible to apply through you Funds Checking account too.

Suddenly your checking account becomes a good investment.

Unlimited checkwriting privileges.

With Funds Checking, you can write as many checks as you want for any amount you want. As long as you retain at least $3,000 in your account, you'll earn big money market interest. And, even if your balance falls below $3,000, you'll earn the 6% interest of our regular NOW account.

15.5%

Your Funds Checking Account would have paid at an annual rate of 15.5% during this past month. What did your present checking account pay?

*This interest rate is the annualized average yield for the period of 4/30/81 through 5/14/81. The yield you can expect will vary daily as money market rates and expenses vary. So, don't consider this rate to be a representation of future rates.

In fact, Funds Checking is very similar in mechanics to NOW accounts at other financial institutions. Except Funds Checking pays much more interest.

Other interest-bearing checking accounts pay interest but that interest is too low to make them a good investment. But, when you double or even triple the interest with Funds Checking, your checking account becomes a valuable investment tool. In fact, Funds Checking is a good place to keep your money, even if you never write a single check.

Plus, you can withdraw your money at any time you want. Interest is paid for each month on the 3rd of the following month. Therefore, in order to receive full interest benefits you must close on the 3rd. If you close prematurely you will earn 6% for that month.

Insurance on your balance to $100,000. Plus, special services.

Your Funds Checking balance is safe too. Your balance is insured up to $100,000 by the North Carolina Savings Guaranty Corporation. That means you can earn big interest without having to worry about risk.

Funds Checking means special services too. A small monthly service charge of $3 provides you with an itemized monthly statement detailing all transactions. Plus, there are no "extra" charges for checking, no matter what your balance. And American Express

Come in and ask about Funds Checking.

Just come by North State Savings & Loan Corporation and ask one of our people about Funds Checking. They'll be glad to tell you about high interest on checking and all the other services that come along with a Funds Checking account.

Business Notes

RECEIVED PLAQUE

Fred N. Davis Jr. of Greenville, a N.C. Department of Transportation employee, received his senior member plaque of the International Right of Way Association at the spring seminar of the Carolinas Chapter 31 in Greensboro.

The association reported that senior membership registration under its professional program results from screening and examination in the areas of negotiation, appraisal, law and engineering.

CASH DIVIDEND

The board of directors of Family Dollar Stores Inc. declared a regular quarterly cash dividend on its common stock of 11 cents per share, payable July 15 to holders of record at the close of business on June 15.

The company operates 440 stores in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Florida. The Greenville store is located on Memorial Drive.

STATE FIGURES

Leon Smith of Greenville, representative of Investors Diversified Services, said the nationwide financial services firm and its associated companies have invested over $49,272,000 in state based corporations and municipalities.

Smith said the Investors Group of 12 mutual funds, advised and distributed by IDS, has 10,587 customer accounts in the state, with total holdings valued at $83,714,000.

He added that mutual fund accumulation plan accounts total 2,623 and call for installment payments totalling $15,624,000 at completion, and investment certificate accounts held by state residents number 5,613, with a guaranteed minimum value of over $52,973,000 at maturity.

NAMED MANAGER

Raymond L. Bowers of Atlanta, Ga., has been employed as manager of marketing services at Hackney & Sons Inc., Washington, N.C., based manufacturer of beverage delivery truck bodies and trailers.

The company said that Bowers, who will be based at the Washington corporate headquarters, joins the firm from the American National Co. where he served as general manager of the National Bulk Transport Inc. division in Atlanta.

MERGER AGREEMENT

Jack Eckerd Corp. and American Home Video Corp. announced the signing of a definitive agreement for the merger of the two companies.

The Florida based Jack Eckerd Corp. operates 1,128 Eckerd Drug Stores in 15 states, a chain of 39 JByrons Department Stores in Florida, and other retail companies. AHVC, based in Denver, Colo., operates a chain of 71 video specialty stores in 24 states under the name "VideoConcepts."

COMPANY PURCHASES

The Kroger Co., in its annual report of state purchases, announced that the company spent $98.8 million for North Carolina products and services in 1980.

Kroger's product purchases in the state, according to Richard Schill, vice president of the Carolinas marketing area, included $9,270,300 spent for dairy products and eggs, $35,370,300 for canned and packaged foods, $4,362,900 for fresh fruits and vegetables, and $21,058,300 for meat and poultry.

Schill said the report also listed $19 million in wages paid to the company's 2,028 employees in the state.

PLANS APPROVED

Shareholders of The Bank of Belmont in Gaston County and Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. have approved an agreement and plan or reorganization under which The Bank of Belmont would be merged into Wachovia, it was announced.

Under terms of the proposed merger, one share of Bank of Belmont stock would be exchanged for 1.5 shares of Wachovia Corp. common stock. A total of 240,000 shares of The Bank of Belmont would be exchanged for 360,000 Wachovia shares.

JOINS STAFF

Mavis Butts, owner and principal broker of Mavis Butts Realty, announced the addition of Ms. Susan Lassiter to the firm's sales force.

A Pitt County native and Greenville resident, Ms. Lassiter completed the Fundamentals of Real Estate-Brokers Course at Pitt Community College in preparation for the state licensing examination.

She will specialize in residential sales, it was noted.

MDRT QUALIFIER

William H. Fleming, C.L.U., district agent for Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. here, has qualified for the 1981 Million Dollar Round Table.

Fleming was awarded the Charter Life Underwriter (C.L.U.) designation by the American College of Bryn Mawr, Pa.

He entered the life insurance business in 1975 and was named district agent in 1978. He and his wife, Kelly, reside in Greenville.

Central America's Unrest May Point To Long Period Of Instability

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The five independent nations and 22 million people of Central America appear headed for a long period of instability because of guerrilla conflicts, political disarray and economic setbacks.

Unrest and uncertainty have reduced tourism, disrupted trade, discouraged investment and prompted an exodus of capital at a time when coffee, banana and cotton exporting economies are being squeezed by high petroleum prices.

All five countries — El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala, Costa Rica and Nicaragua — had substantial trade deficits in 1980 and all are looking to the United States for assistance.

Marxist-led guerrillas, whom the United States claims are Cuban armed and trained, are fighting in the two republics with the largest populations, Guatemala and El Salvador.

The United States is supplying military aid to El Salvador and Honduras and the Reagan administration has said it might resume arms sales to Guatemala.

By most counts, about 16,000 people have been killed in El Salvador in the last 18 months, while right-wing death squads and leftist guerrilla strikes have sent body counts climbing in Guatemala.

Many of the victims were apolitical, hungry peasants, to whom the violence was just one more affliction in a miserable life.

Right-wing insurgents are active against Nicaragua's left-wing government which toppled the authoritarian Somoza dynasty in 1979.

Honduras is the poorest nation on the continent with a per-capita income of $480 per year.

The guerrilla war in El Salvador has seriously disrupted the nation's economy and officials there talk about the need for 5 or 10 years of U.S. economic assistance.

Democratic Costa Rica, the only Central American nation without a standing army, is seeking to increase its $10 million assistance package from the United States while asking the Washington-based International Monetary Fund for a three-year, $300 million loan.

A capital flight conservatively estimated at $250 million in 1980 prompted Guatemalan authorities to impose exchange controls. This will make it more difficult for foreign businesses to export profits and for wealthy Guatemalans to finance shopping trips to Miami, Fla.

One recent victim was the 4-year-old, English-language Guatemala News, which published its last edition April 24. Editor Pat McNair wrote that the closure was due to "the political and economic climate in Central America, world-wide inflation and the departure of a large segment of the foreign community."

The leftist Sandinista guerrilla victory in Nicaragua, Sandinista ties with Cuba and other socialist countries and allegations that they are supporting leftist rebels in Guatemala and El Salvador have driven a wedge into the region.

Nicaragua also has proven the most serious setback to U.S. foreign policy in the area since Marxist Jacobo Arbenz was elected president of Guatemala in 1950 and began breaking up massive holdings of the United Fruit Co.

Arbenz was routed in a U.S.-encouraged invasion from Honduras in 1954.

Girding for a possible rerun of events that toppled Arbenz, Nicaragua has quietly amassed the largest standing army in the region — some 40,000 personnel plus a militia said to number around 200,000.

Nicaraguans contend the army is needed for protection against an invasion and against supporters of President Anastasio Somoza, who was ousted in July, 1979, then assassinated in Asuncion, Paraguay, last year.

There have been clashes along the border with Honduras, which announced April 30 it had killed nine Nicaraguan soldiers in a 30-minute firefight that was the third shooting scrape between the two countries in five days.

Nicaragua claimed that Somoza forces — known as "Somocistas" — are operating from camps in Honduras with the consent of that nation's army officers and had launched six raids into its territory in about the same period.

Honduras, which borders on Nicaragua, Guatemala and El Salvador, has given residency status to at least 3,000 Somocistas.

The more vocal exiles make no secret of their desire to see a U.S.-backed axis of Guatemala, El Salvador and Honduras crush the Sandinistas and restore them to power in Nicaragua.

Nicaraguan officials have charged that "Somocistas and sectors of the Honduran army" are working together in hopes of provoking a war. Foreign analysts claim that more conservative Honduran army officers are unhappy over plans to hold presidential elections in Honduras next November after 10 years of military rule. According to the analysts, these officers believe a war would keep them in power while eliminating what they see as a Communist threat in Nicaragua.

Retired Col. Mario Marldonado, who recently was ousted from the inner circle of Honduras' ruling military council, said he doubts there will be a war.

"It would be insane for us to go to war, especially without U.S. support," he said.

He predicted the elections would be held as scheduled but that "Honduras will face new problems when the new administration shows that it is unable to resolve Honduras' financial difficulties."

Honduran newspapers are giving widespread play to the border incidents and to stories proclaiming that Honduras is ready for war.

The Reagan administration focused its immediate attention on El Salvador, sending military assistance along with 55 military advisers.

The U.S. administration has proposed doubling to $10 million its military-assistance credits to Honduras, while announcing that it is considering favorably Guatemalan requests for helicopters and the sale of $2.5 million worth of non-lethal military equipment.

To human rights activists, church groups and those who oppose military aid to Central American countries, this alignment has put the United States in the position of supporting the two most repressive regimes in the region in the name of halting the spread of communism.

A senior U.S. official interviewed in another country in the region said the Reagan administration hasn't forgotten about human rights but that it is adopting an entirely different approach from the Carter administration.

"Mentioning human rights to these people was like waving a red flag at them. But if you tell them that the violence can be self-defeating, they are more understanding," the official said.

There are few bright spots to the Central American picture for the United States.

The worst-case scenario has the Central American republics falling like dominos under the heel of Cuban-style regimes until eventually the vast oilfields of Mexico and even the United States itself are threatened by leftist insurgents.

Traded Beer & Barbecue For Yoga, Natural Foods, Vitamins & Health

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Daniel Clifton says he discovered beer and barbecue when he moved to Eastern North Carolina and indulgence in the two nearly destroyed his health.

Suddenly, he said, he was faced with a choice of continuing his lifestyle as "one of the best of the good ole boys" or of returning to more prudent eating and exercise patterns he knew had once served him well.

So late last year he returned to the practice of yoga and began to follow a 1200-calorie per day natural eating plan, plus vitamin supplements, that has enabled him to come back to within 10 pounds of his high school weight.

"I'd studied yoga under Richard Hittleman in California back in the '60s," he said, "and practicing it daily did wonders for me physically, mentally and spiritually. When I met my wife, Jennifer, here about seven years ago, I taught it to her and she's been practicing it ever since and has the energy and the figure to prove it. But I was the foolish one who drifted away from it over the years."

When he took up yoga again, Clifton decided to force himself to keep in shape by teaching classes in the discipline. He advertised free yoga classes in the classified section of "The Daily Reflector" shortly after Christmas. He formed two classes of those who answered the ad.

These classes meet at 6 p. m. Mondays and Wednesdays at the Life Force Center that the Cliftons operate at 620 S. Pitt St. here.

The Cliftons have within the center a family hair-care center, a hot tub, a sauna, a tanning booth and a sales office for a line of food supplement, cosmetic and cleaning products. Clifton asserts, however, that his yoga classes will continue and will always be free.

"I would never feel right to charge to share what I know about yoga and meditation," he said, "and I never will."

Clifton is a Raleigh native who spent about 10 years in Hollywood studying acting and pursuing an acting career. After having come back from Air Force service in West Germany and having worked for a while in the drywall construction business — he learned the business by working for an uncle as a teenager, he pulled up stakes and went to California. There he attended the famed star-maker acting school, Pasadena Playhouse College of Theatre Arts, and later studied privately with the widely known acting teacher, Estelle Harmon. To support himself he operated parking lot concessions.

He performed in many stage plays and tour companies during this time and did some television work. In 1971, he and a friend, Michael Greene, produced a full-length feature film which could have served to get him into the big-time. He was a co-writer and also starred in it.

"But it was about this time," he said, "that films began going downhill real fast. I started to lose interest and to realize that, even if I 'made it,' I wouldn't be happy in that fast-paced life.

"I packed my film and soundtrack in my Winnebago and set out home. I was ready to get back to the relatively rural life of North Carolina.

"But Raleigh had grown too much to suit me and for a reason I didn't fully understand at the time I was drawn to Greenville, a place I thought would have some cultural opportunity and also be a good place to ply my trade as a drywall specialist. I lived for a long while right at construction sites in my Winnebago and often went out to Contentnea Campground to visit. I became friends with the James R. Joneses, who run the campground, and had known them for some time when I met their daughter, Jennifer. Within a few months, she and I were engaged and I knew for sure what had brought me to Greenville.

"I believe with all my heart that God guides us through a voice within, if we'll listen, to the places and situations we need to be for our best opportunity and growth. And Jennifer's the best thing that ever happened to me.

"It was while I was in Germany in service that I began to search for a philosophy that would satisfy me and help me understand myself and my fellow human beings. I read the Bible, Shakespeare, Meister Eckhart, William James, and the I Ching, to name a few. I gleaned what I could from all of these, always keeping my roots as a Christian. I believe God makes himself known to everyone on earth and in many different ways, so I respect and seek to understand the religions of people everywhere, but cling to what I was taught as a child."

Clifton sees his new health-related endeavor as "a way to help people, what I've always wanted to do. I have been blessed in that I've always been able to make a good living with the skills I've learned, but before I've always lost interest in whatever it was when the challenge was gone."

He says he believes helping people "feel good naturally" will be for him a challenge that will not fade.

Clifton (left) learned yoga in California, shared it first with his wife, Jennifer (right), and now with free classes he offers to the general public.

The Merchant of Venice was one of the plays Clifton appeared in while studying at the Pasadena Playhouse.

N. C. Architect First Woman To Get Architectural Patent

By Peggy Howe
N.C. Dept. Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — Long before equal rights for women became a popular issue, a North Carolina architect was the first woman to obtain a United States patent for an architectural design.

In 1869 Harriet Morrison Irwin of Charlotte received U.S. Patent Number 94,116 for her hexagonal "Improvement in the Construction of Houses," which in her own words "proposed an entire revolution in the method of building houses."

Her story is a feature of the 1981 spring issue of the "N.C. Historical Review," now available. In her article, author Beverly Heisner, associate professor of art history at the University of South Carolina, offers insight into the story of Mrs. Irwin's life and little-known architectural designs.

Harriet, daughter of prominent Presbyterian minister Robert Hall Morrison and Mary Graham Morrison, came from a distinguished family. Her father became the first president of Davidson College when it opened in 1837 and her five sisters made distinguished marriages — all to Confederate military figures, among them Stonewall Jackson.

Born in 1828 near Sugaw Creek Church in Mecklenburg County, Harriet attended Salem Female Academy, receiving, along with her sisters, an outstanding education for women of her time.

She married James Patton Irwin, a wealthy planter and merchant. Following their marriage, the couple lived in Mobile, Ala., where Irwin was working, but returned to Charlotte three years later. Irwin, along with his brother, was publisher of the first bona fide magazine published in Charlotte — a collection of pieces on agriculture, poems and stories, with a large portion devoted to Southern military history.

Mrs. Irwin, also a writer and publisher, enjoyed a wide range of reading and cultural activites.

She was very proud of Charlotte, her home town, but in her writing, she criticized its "lack of progress."

Her hexagonal house was an expression of Harriet Irwin's desire to remedy and improve upon older building designs. Within the six walls, it had three principal rooms and three smaller rooms to be entered from any of three entrances. Many windows aided air currents. The house was designed to include a basement and one or two upper floors. A bow window, veranda or porch could be added to any of the sides.

Mrs. Irwin's own hexagonal house, built as their home in Charlotte at 912 W. Fifth St., was still standing in 1962.

Mrs. Irwin and her design were mentioned in the Feb. 3, 1870, issue of "The Revolution," a weekly magazine owned by Susan B. Anthony and edited by Elizabeth Cady Stanton. Entitled "Woman as Architect," the story began by justifying the right of women to work in the field of domestic architecture.

"Who knows so well as she how a house should be constructed? Men may build many barns and bridges; but women know best — how to plan a dwelling in which they live, move and have their being," the article declares.

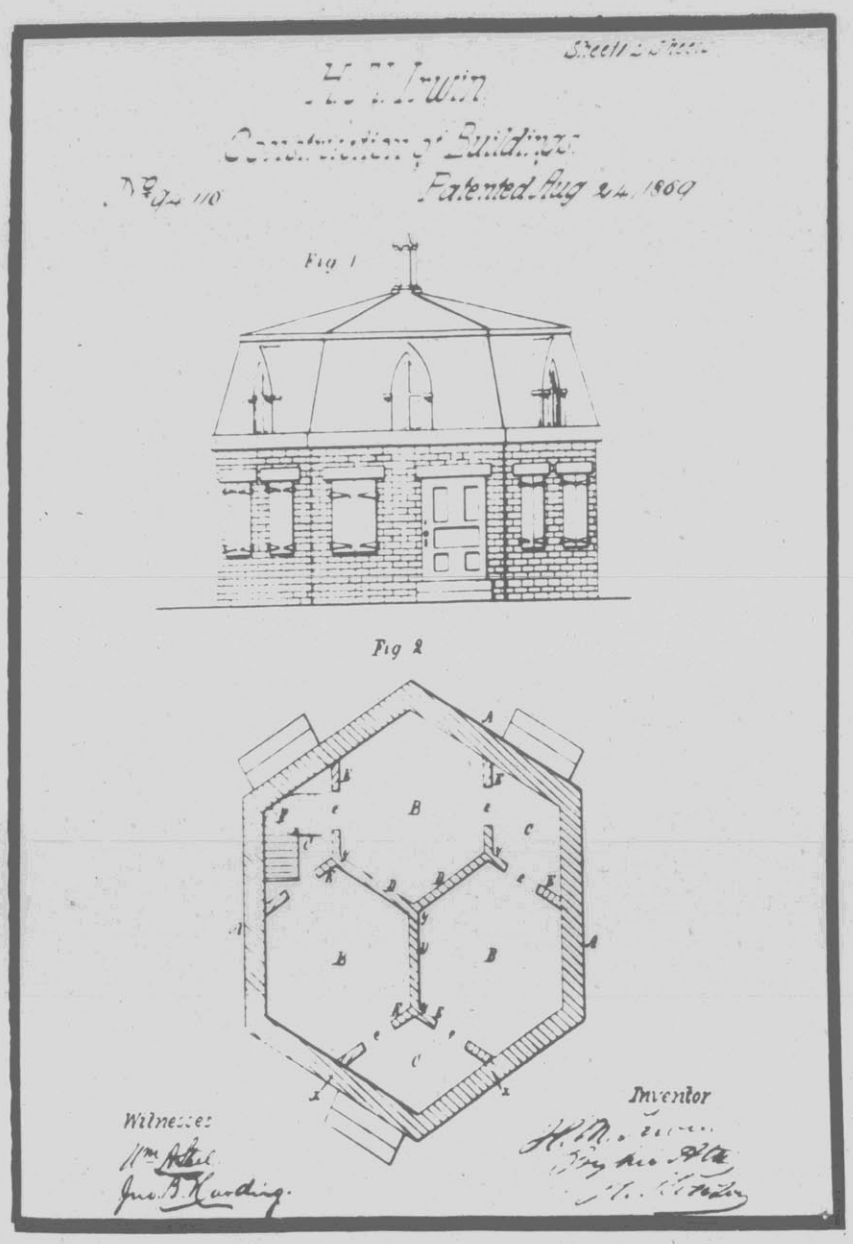

The story continues with a discussion of Mrs. Irwin's hexagonal house. "She believes they are cheaper, handsomer, will give more space, and are capable of greater artistic beauty than the square houses."

Another article in "Southern Home," a weekly Charlotte newspaper, reported that Mrs. Irwin's patent claims the design "will create a new era in architecture."

Despite this and Mrs. Irwin's faith, there is no evidence that others embarked with equal enthusiasm into the "new era in architecture." An earlier octagonal house had created much more of a stir.

Mrs. Irwin's belief that her design was more healthful very likely stemmed from her lifelong history of health problems. Her short novel, "The Hermit of Petraea," published in 1871, reflected a concern for nature and healthful living. Her story's

Flanagan-Everett Vows Said

FARMVILLE — Tammy Jane Everett and Jerry Harold Flanagan, both of Farmville, were united in marriage Saturday at six o'clock at the First Christian Church. The Rev. Lee Parker and the Rev.Robert Parvin conducted the single ring ceremony.

MRS. JERRY HAROLD FLANAGAN

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Everett and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Flanagan, all of Farmville.

A program of nuptial weddding music was provided by Mrs. Grady Bailey, organist and Martha W. Bennett, soloist.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory silk-faced peau de soie with English net and re-embroidered alencon lace designed by Priscilla of Boston. The gown was fashioned with an empire bodice, scooped neckline and long fitted sleeves of re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls over English net. Bridal buttons closed the sleeves and back of the gown. The front of the A-line skirt was adorned with a panel of English net appliqued with motifs of lace and clusters of pearls. A watteau train flowed from the shoulders. Her waltz length mantilla bordered with matching lace was attached to a Juliet cap of lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses, orchids and ivy.

Shirley E. Morgan, sister of the bride of Farmville, was honor attendant. She wore a formal gown of maize silesta knit fashioned with an empire waist, sunburst pleated skirt and a chiffon cape trimmed with satin ribbon. She carried a nosegay of white daisies and baby's breath accented with white ribbon streamers.

The maid of honor was Tiena M. Everett, sister of the bride, and Gayle Flanagan, sister of the bridegroom, Terry Richardson and Lilly Andrews, all of Farmville and Mrs. Hal Chesson of Lumberton were bridesmaids. They wore dresses and carried nosegays identical to that of the maid of honor. Heather Everett of Greensboro, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. She wore a formal gown of maize dotted swiss over taffeta with a bertha collar edged in lace. She carried a nosegay of white daisies and baby's breath accented with white ribbon streamers.

Harold M. Flanagan, father of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were James H. Everett Jr., brother of the bride of Greensboro, Scott Flanagan, brother of the bridegroom and Dale Miller, all of Farmville and Gordon A. Hodges of Yanceyville. James H. Everett III, nephew of the bride of Greensboro, was ring bearer and the junior usher was Mark Flanagan of Farmville, brother of the bridegroom.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Mrs. James H. Everett Jr., Mrs. Jay Flanagan, Clara Belle Flanagan, Mrs. Jackie Hart, Mrs. Louis Willoughby Sr., Mrs. James Blalock, Mrs. Bill Allen and Lilly Andrews assisted in serving refreshments.

A rehearsal dinner was given on Friday evening at the home of the bridegroom's parents.

The bride is a graduate of the UNC School of Pharmacy. The bridegroom attended North Carolina State University and is presently engaged in farming.

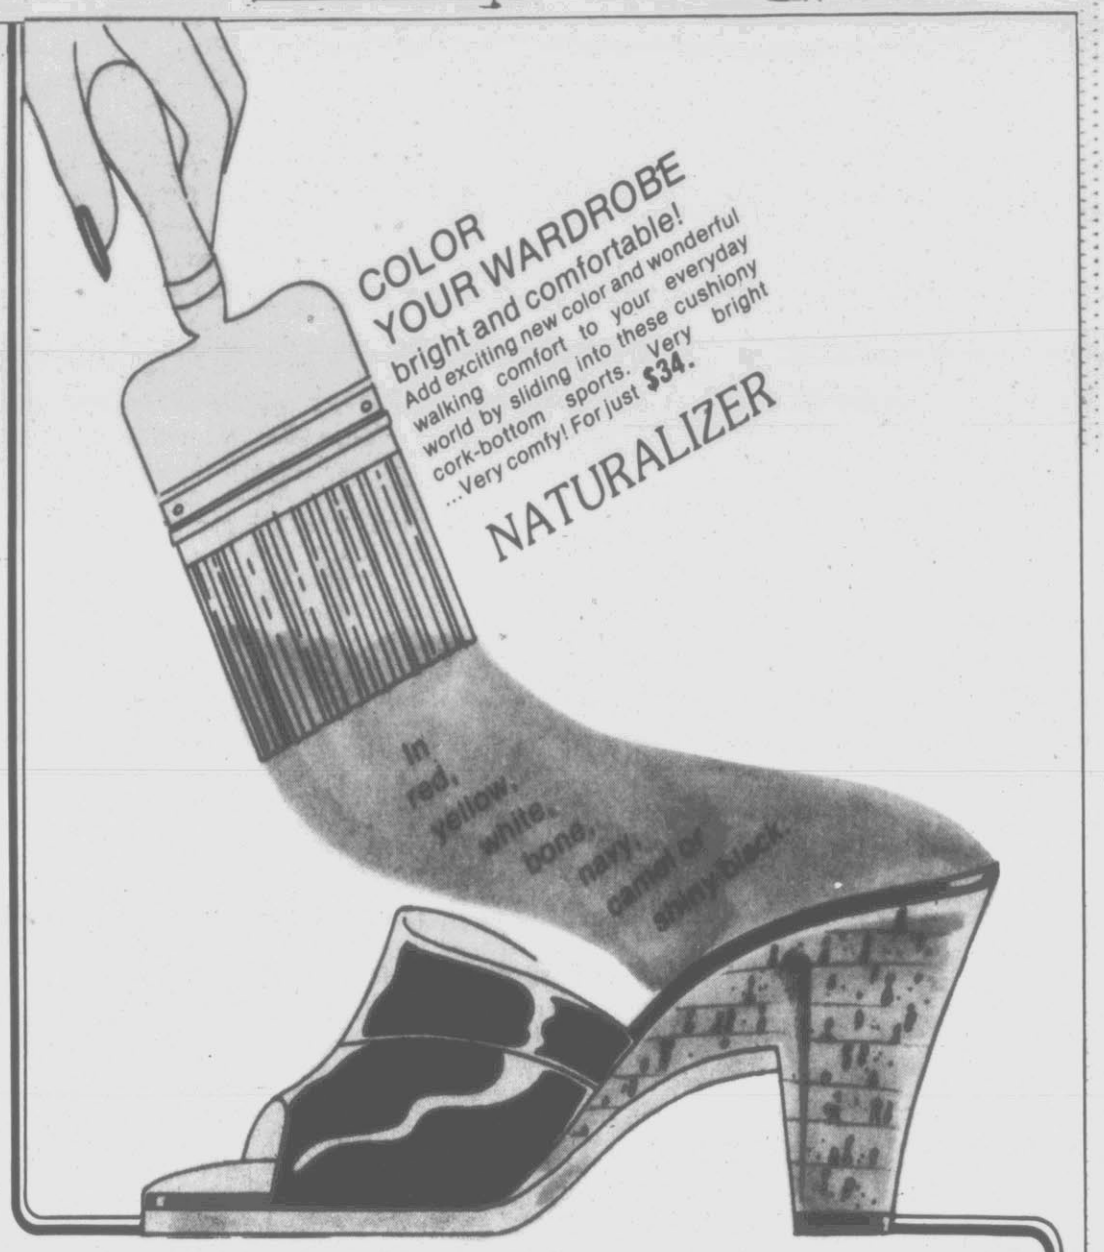

After a wedding trip to Kiawah Island, S.C., the couple will reside in Farmville.

Wedding Vows Said

Margaret Sherrill Cheatham of Greenville and David Schuyler Holt of Richmond, Va. were united in marriage Saturday evening at six o'clock at Saint Paul's Episcopal Church. The Rev. John Randolph Price conducted the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Theodore Cheatham III of Greenville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bryce Roswell Holt Jr. of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Thomas Earl Hawley Jr., organist, provided the program of nuptial wedding music.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of alencon lace and silk faced satin. The bodice was designed with beaded alencon lace with a high neck, sheer yoke and long sleeves. The skirt was designed of silk faced satin with a chapel train. She chose a mantilla veil of alencon lace. She carried Eucharis lilies and stephanotis.

MRS. DAVID SCHUYLER HOLT

Brenning Marie Cheatham of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore an ivory moire taffeta formal gown with an emerald green satin sash. She carried a bouquet of yellow tulips.

Bridesmaids were Mary Eccles Cheatham of Greenville, sister of the bride, Mrs. Francis Thorton Strang Jr. and Linda Catherine Holt, both of Chattanooga, Tenn., sisters of the bridegroom, Elizabeth Caroline Pate of Laurinburg, Claire Elizabeth Barr of Charlotte, Mrs. Braxton Bragg Dawson Rascoe of Raleigh, Mittie Denise Landi of Mebane, Catherine Wise Galbraith of Maitland, Fla., Mrs. Robert Cowen Johnson of Rose Hill and Margaret Brown Barber of Durham. Susan Jolly Young of Raleigh was flower girl. They wore dresses and carried flowers identical to that of the maid of honor.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Groomsmen were Francis Thorton Strang Jr., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Martin Colton Boyd, John Patterson Corey and Louis Winfield Davis, all of Chattanooga, Tenn., David Blair Hagan and Mack Rimmer Leath Jr., both of Greensboro, Milton Selby Brown III of Washington, James Edwin Mitchel Jr. and Braxton Bragg Dawson Rascoe, both of Raleigh, John Wesley Roach of Durham and John Oswald Hall Toledano Jr. of Asheboro. Dempsey Wood Hodges III was junior groomsman. Fred Bunch Jordan of Winston-Salem and Stephen Lee Johnson of Raleigh, cousins of the bride, were torch bearers. James Theodore Johnson of Raleigh, cousin of the bride, was acolyte.

The bride is a graduate of Saint Mary's High School and attended St. Mary's Junior College. She served as assistant leader of the N. C. Debutante Ball in 1978. The bridegroom is a graduate of North Carolina State University. He is employed by Allied Chemical Co.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Richmond, Va.

Couple Marries Saturday

GOLDSBORO — Susan Freeland Paparazo of Greenville and Frederick John Pearson of Goldsboro were united in marriage Saturday at four o'clock at Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church here. The Rev. Peter C. Robinson performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Leon Paparazo and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Robert Pearson, all of Goldsboro.

Nuptial wedding music was provided by Eugene Mauney, organist.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal white gown of satin Venise featuring a Queen Anne neckline and long slender sleeves. Her chapel length veil of alencon lace was attached to a mantilla cap of lace and pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white spring flowers. She wore a pearl necklace given to her by her grandmother.

Cathy Marie Paparazo, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of yellow chiffon. She carried a basket of cascading white and yellow flowers and wore a matching band of flowers in her hair.

Bridesmaids were Frieda Burch of Grifton, Linda Montague, Pat Walston, Nan Pearson, all of Goldsboro and Jill Paparazo, cousin of the bride, of Pennsylvania. The wore light yellow chiffon dresses with matching picture hats. They carried baskets of white and yellow sunshine carnations, French rosebuds, mini lilies, sprinkled with stardust gypsophilia with yellow ribbon touched with lace.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers were James Andrew Bell, brother of the bridegroom of Chapel Hill, Mark Morgan and Dion Ousley, both of Goldsboro, Van Tucker of Grifton and David Ricker of Richmond, Tex.

MRS. FREDERICK JOHN PEARSON

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church parish hall. Guests were greeted by the parents of the bridal couple, the bride and bridegroom and bridesmaids. After the couple cut the traditional first slice of the wedding cake, the serving was completed by Mrs. Robert Tucker and Jane Tucker. Punch was poured by Cynthia Roberts and Mary Siler. Rice bags were distributed by Mrs. Rufus Frost. Mrs. Marian Rose attended the guest register. Mr. and Mrs. Art Hawkinson greeted guests and farewells were said by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sproul and Mrs. and Mrs. Demming Smith.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at a rehearsal dinner at the Goldsboro Country Club Friday evening. Saturday morning a brunch was held for the wedding party and out-of-town guests hosted by neighbors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Demming Smith.

The bride is a nursing student at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of N.C. State University and is employed as a chemist at Imperial Chemical, Inc.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Goldsboro.

TIN PAN ALLEY GOLD

NEW YORK (AP) — Where is Tin Pan Alley?

Originally, it was a section of East 14th Street, where ricky-ticky piano music trickled out of publishers' open windows. Later it was distributed all over town, said song writer Irving Caesar, citing Seventh Avenue, Union Square, 28th Street.

The Brill Building, still standing on Broadway at 49th Street, in the '30s and '40s was known as the headquarters of Tin Pan Alley.

narrator, a sickly young man whose father died of consumption, is sent to a wild region of Arabia to live out-of-doors.

Harriet Irwin was little appreciated beyond her own circles, Ms. Heisner said. She did not achieve the celebrity of some other 19th century female designers of houses, among them Catherine Beecher who wrote with her sister, Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Despite her poor health, Harriet Irwin reared a family of five children, patented a house design, supervised the building of houses of her own design, wrote newspaper articles and a novel, and promoted her own efforts.

In 1897 Harriet Irwin's obituary called her a "good and talented woman" but lamented that "she was too fond of reading to be known and appreciated as she should have been, for she spent her hours with the characters of history rather than with those of the living present."

The "N.C. Historical Review" is available from the Historical Publications Section, Department of Cultural Resources, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, 27611, for $2.50 a copy plus 50¢ postage.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

MRS. JOHN GAYLORD POWELL II

Couple Weds Saturday

Sherri Lynn Cash and John Gaylord Powell II, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday at ten o'clock in the morning at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church. Pastor Graham Nahouse performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Cash of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Powell of Washington.

Lois Parker, organist, provided the program of nuptial wedding music. The church was decorated with South American palms and candelabra together with arrangements of mixed white and yellow flowers.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown designed and made by her mother. The white satin gown featured a tulle overlay. The bodice was defined with rose patterned lace highlighting the hemline, sleeves and veil. Rose patterned hand-sewn lace accented the tulle veil and cap. The bride carried a cascade of white orchids, white pom pons, miniature carnations, mixed greenery and baby's breath.

Syrissa Seymour of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a yellow gown of crepe with a sheer capelet to match. She carried a nosegay of mixed yellow and white spring flowers with bridal streamers.

Bridesmaids were Jody Faust, Debbie Plueddemann

Dixon-Cayton Vows Said

MRS. AUBREY SCOTT DIXON

Pamela Jane Cayton and Aubrey Scott Dixon were united in marriage Saturday at seven o'clock Saturday evening at Saint Paul's Pentecostal Holiness Church. The Rev. Maurice Phelps performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Alvy Cayton of Greenville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Scott Dixon of Grimesland.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Nancy Lancaster, organist. Randy Sawyer sang "The Wedding Prayer" and the Rev. Phelps sang "Time For Joy."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk chiffon over peau de soie. The gown was designed with a Queen Anne neckline, empire bodice fashioned with silk Venise lace and pearls and long sheer bishop sleeves accented with rows of silk Venise flowerettes and a cuff with matching lace. The A-line skirt flowed into a cathedral train trimmed with rows of silk Venise lace that swept from the waist to the hem. Silk Venise flowerettes bordered the hemline. The bride chose a chapel length mantilla of imported silk illusion attached to a Camelot cap and edged with silk Venice flowerettes. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses, white daisies, light and dark pink miniature carnations, accented with lavender statice.

Debbie Haddock was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Kathy Cayton, sister-in-law of the bride of Seven Springs, Mrs. Cathy Autry of Winterville, Lee Ellen Jenkins, Sandra Hudson, cousin of the bride and Mrs. Robin Conway, sister of the bridegroom, all of Greenville. Michele Cayton, niece of the bride, served as junior bridesmaid.

The attendants wore formal gowns of buttercup silesta with each gown designed with an open squared neckline featuring miniature rolled shoulder straps. The bodice was designed with a natural waistline and gathered skirt. The gown was complimented by a sheer chiffon overblouse. They wore imported braid buttercup garden hats with the brim edged in chantilly pleated lace and encircled in illusion with a silk rose at the side and a pouf of illusion on the turned up back brim. They carried yellow and white clusters of daisies, miniature pink carnations and lavender statice accented with baby's breath and greenery.

Kimberly Cayton, niece of the bride, was flower girl and wore a formal gown similar to that of the bridemaids. She carried a fireside basket of mixed flowers identical to that of the bridesmaids and wore white and yellow daisies in her hair. Keith Phelps was ring bearer.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were Steve Cayton of Seven Springs and Russell Cayton, brothers of the bride, Mark Conway, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Robbie Tugwell, Mickey McGrath, all of Greenville and Chuck Autry of Winterville.

The mother of the bride wore a formal blue polyester knit dress with a matching chiffon cape. The bridegroom's mother wore a formal green floral sheer gowrf. Both wore a cymbidium corsage.

Mrs. Henry Gray Dunn, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Scott Dixon Sr., grandmother of the bridegroom, were remembered with white daisy corsages.

Mrs. Helen Cayton, sister-in-law of of the bride, presided at the guest register. Christy Mills distributed scrolls. Mrs. Catherine Vinson directed the wedding.

The bride's parents held a reception in the Rotary Building. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mercer, aunt and uncle of the bride, received guests while April Whittington passed out rice bags.

Mrs. Eva Lee Hudson, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Peggy Haddock, Mrs. Marie McLawhorn, Mrs. Gladys Mills, aunts of the bridegroom, Mrs. Judith Phelp and Diane Roberson, cousin of the bride, assisted in serving. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Tripp, uncle and aunt of the bride, said good-byes.

The bridegroom's parents entertained with a dinner at the Cinnamon Tree Restaurant following the rehearsal Friday night. A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the

OPENING WINE

NEW YORK (AP) — How soon should one open wine before serving it?

A food and wine center here suggests red wine should be opened one hour before serving to let the wine breathe, releasing its full aroma and flavor.

White or rose wine should be opened at the time of serving, the experts said.

Couple Weds On Saturday

Cynthia Jane Anderson of Greenville and Dr. Kenneth Stuart Lee of Smithfield exchanged wedding vows Saturday at six o'clock at Trinity Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Sam Truett of Smithfield conducted the single ring candelight ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynden Elwyn Anderson of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lloyd Lee of Smithfield.

A program of nuptial music was given by Mrs. Eloise Jackson of Winterville, organist and Dr. David Ray Faber II of Charlotte, soloist.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white chiffon enhanced with a Queen Anne neckline accented with Venise lace and seed pearls. The long sheer shepherdess sleeves ended in a cuff of lace. The full skirt, accented with motifs of Venise and chantilly lace, flowed to a hemline of lace and crystal pleats ending in a chapel length train. Her waltz-length veil of white bridal illusion fell from a caplet of re-embroidered lace and seed pearls. The veil's border was edged with seed pearls and motifs of chantilly lace. She carried a slender cascade of stephanotis, pink sweetheart roses and an orchid cluster.

Mrs. Ruth Alder Anderson of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a formal gown of tinaseta Italian silk with an open neckline featuring miniature rolled shoulder straps, criss-crossed bodice and full flared skirt. The sleeveless gown was complemented by a sheer chiffon overblouse accentuated with pink Venise trim at neck and sleeves. The waistline was encircled by a double rolled tie sash from which fell the peplum flounce. She carried a bridal light in a circlet of yellow daisies, pink comestock, purple violets and white baby's breath, all fashioned with silk. She wore a halo of mixed spring flowers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Cynthia Maygarden Phelps of Roanoke, Va., Darlene Civils of Kinston, Brenda Mae Ceruzzi and Frankye Lynn Boyles, both of Richmond, Va. They wore gowns identical to the matron of honor and carried a bridal hurricane lantern in a circlet of flowers.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of orchid chiffon with an empire waist and V-neck. The gown featured floating sleeves of chiffon and a long straight skirt with a kerchief panel effect. The mother of the bridegroom chose a formal gown of blue chiffon. The bodice featured a bertha crystal pleated collar attached to a crystal pleated skirt.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers were Dale Pullen Seley of Tifton, Ga., cousin of the bridegroom, Elwyn Lyn Anderson of Greenville, brother of the bride, Dr. Ned Wilson Holland of Tampa, Fla., Dr. Tony Preston Smith of Conover and Dr. John Henry Lowder Jr. of Marion.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall immediately following the ceremony. Mrs. Barbara Hackney, cousin of the bridegroom, cut the wedding cake while Mrs. Dorothy Seley, aunt of the bridegroom, poured punch. Mrs. Faye Barefoot was director of the wedding.

MRS. KENNETH STUART LEE

The bridegroom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Ramada Inn in Greenville following the wedding rehearsal Friday evening.

The bride and bridegroom were honored with several showers and a cook-out given by friends and family prior

ORIENTAL SALAD

Recommended highly by my friend, Christy Pines.

½ to ¾ pound fresh snow peas, trimmed and strung
3 heads Bibb lettuce
3-ounce package enoki mushrooms, ends trimmed
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
1¼ teaspoons light soy sauce
¼ cup peanut oil
¼ teaspoon Oriental sesame oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Blanch snow peas in a large saucepan of boiling water until no longer raw tasting but still crisp-tender — about 3 minutes; rinse immediately under cold running water and pat dry. Core lettuce and separate into leaves; rinse and pat dry. Gently rinse mushrooms in cold water and pat dry. To make Dressing, whisk together the vinegar, soy sauce, peanut oil, sesame oil, salt and pepper. Arrange lettuce on individual salad plates; top with snow peas and mushrooms; drizzle with Dressing. Serve at room temperature. Makes 4 servings. Adapted from the April 1981 issue of Cuisine magazine.

Helen Scheller Weds

MRS. SETH AUSTIN WILLIS

Helen Marie Scheller of Greenville and Seth Austin Willis of Grantsboro were united in marriage Saturday at three o'clock at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church here. The Rev. R. Graham Nahouse performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Hans Scheller of Greenville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lionel E. Willis Sr. of Grantsboro.

A program of nuptial music featuring songs "The Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer" was provided by Karen M. Hause, organist of Greenville, Sonia M. Moore, soloist and cousin of the bride of Raleigh, and Bill Wilson, guitarist.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of white chiffon over taffeta. The Queen Anne neckline was accented with chantilly lace. The long sheer sleeves ended in cuffs of lace. The full skirt fell to tiers of chantilly lace that extended into a chapel length train. The fingertip veil of bridal illusion was trimmed in encircling lace attached to a Juliet caplet of chantilly lace with seed pearls. The bride carried a colonial nosegay of mixed spring flowers and baby's breath with bridal streamers.

Patricia S. Cannon, sister of the bride of Greenville, was matron of honor. She wore a formal gown of blue organza over satin fashioned with a ruffled front and a back V-neckline and bow trim. The gown had caplet sleeves and a center back waist flower and the flared skirt had a flounced hem. She carried a long-stemmed pink rose with mixed greenery and streamers.

Donna N. Briley of Ayden was bridesmaid. She wore a dress and carried flowers identical to that of the matron of honor.

The mother of the bride wore a cotillion blue knit formal gown and the bridegroom's mother chose a gown of mint green knit. They were remembered with white orchid corsages. Grandmothers were remembered with corsages of white carnations, stems of baby's breath and mixed greenery.

The bridegroom's father, Mr. Lionel E. Willis Sr. was best man. Ushers were Lionel E. and Shannon Willis, brothers of the bridegroom of Gransboro and William D. Cannon Jr., brother-in-law of the bride of Greenville.

Directors of the wedding were Mrs. Margaret Landen and Mrs. Wayne Vernelson. Mrs. Grady Lupton presided at the guest register.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the church. The bridal table was covered with a white lace cloth over blue and centered with a mixed arrangement of spring flowers. Mrs. John Taft, Mrs. J.B. Joyner, Mrs. Eugene Daniels, all aunts of the bride, and Mrs. Marvin Hill, cousin of the bride, assisted in serving.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside near Arapahoe.

Rose-Privott Vows Said

MRS. RONNIE EDWARD ROSE

CHESAPEAKE, Va. Lisa Gayle Privott of Chesapeake, Va. and Ronnie Edward Rose of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. were married Saturday at high noon at Oak Grove Methodist Church here. Larry Adams performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mr. William Privott of Chesapeake, Va. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ennis E. Rose Jr. of Moyock.

A program of nuptial wedding music was provided by Gina Rhodes, flutist, Marjorie Bunton, vocalist, and Elmer Sawyer, organist.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of taffeta and organza with a Victorian neck and empire waist dominating the lines of a bodice cape of Brussels lace extending into elbow length sleeves. The headpiece of the veil was accentuated with Brussels lace and the floor length veil of illusion was designed with a Brussels pattern at the bottom highlighting and adding detail to the chapel length train of the dress.

Lynn Stegall and Teresa Akers, both of Raleigh, were maids of honor. They wore sleeveless dresses of apricot qiana and laurels of silk flowers in their hair. They carried bouquets of daisies.

Bridesmaids were Mary Rose, sister of the bridegroom of Chesapeake, Va., Mary Setzer of Greensboro, Rhonda Brooks of Boone, Rebecca Baker and Constance Futrell, both of Winston-Salem and Starr Hill of Charlotte. The wore dresses and carried bouquets identical to that of the honor attendants.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers were William and Paul Rose, the bridegroom's brothers of Moyock, Elvin Baker, the bridegroom's uncle of Yorktown, Va., Randy Doub of Greenville, Hal Sharpe of Lumberton, Chip Showfety of Greensboro and Norman Osborn of Wilmington.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the Hickory Ruritan Club with music provided by the Drifters.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents Friday. Out-of-town guests, family and the wedding party were given an outdoor dinner on the shores of the Currituck Sound.

The bride received her B.S. and M.S.H.E. from East Carolina University and is currently a doctoral candidate at UNC-G. The bridegroom also received his B.S.B.A. and M.B.A. from East Carolina University. He is currently employed by Sonoco Products Co.

After a cruise to the Bahamas, St. Croix and San Juan, the couple will reside in Ft. Lauderdale.

CHAMPAGNE ICE

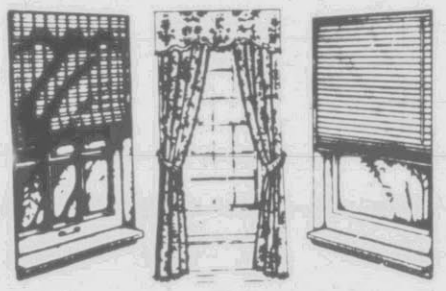

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Champagne ice" was invented in 1965 by Lewis Bassett. It uses real champagne, eight full bottles in a 50-gallon batch. Champagne ice is an ice similar to sherbet, but contains no dairy products.

"The recipe has sugar, water and champagne," Bassett, now 75, said. "You'll find it on very fancy menus in better restaurants."

RAISIN WALNUT "PIE"

Ann Lardner Waswo of Princeton, N.J., uses the "stick" type of pie mix to achieve the results she likes.

¼ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
3 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 stick pie mix
1½ to 1¾ cup raisins
½ to ¾ cup chopped walnuts
Whipped cream

Beat together the butter and sugar until creamy. Beat in eggs and vanilla (mixture may look slightly curdled, but that's all right). Crumble in pie mix stick, stirring until well distributed. Stir in the raisins and walnuts. Turn into a greased 9-inch pie plate. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until set — 35 minutes. Cool before cutting. Garnish with whipped cream.

SUPPER FOR FOUR

Fish Steaks — Potatoes
Oriental Salad — Rolls
Bar Cookies — Beverage

ORIENTAL SALAD

Recommended highly by my friend, Christy Pines.

½ to ¾ pound fresh snow peas, trimmed and strung
3 heads Bibb lettuce
3-ounce package enoki mushrooms, ends trimmed
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
1¼ teaspoons light soy sauce
¼ cup peanut oil
¼ teaspoon Oriental sesame oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Blanch snow peas in a large saucepan of boiling water until no longer raw tasting but still crisp-tender — about 3 minutes; rinse immediately under cold running water and pat dry. Core lettuce and separate into leaves; rinse and pat dry. Gently rinse mushrooms in cold water and pat dry. To make Dressing, whisk together the vinegar, soy sauce, peanut oil, sesame oil, salt and pepper. Arrange lettuce on individual salad plates; top with snow peas and mushrooms; drizzle with Dressing. Serve at room temperature. Makes 4 servings. Adapted from the April 1981 issue of Cuisine magazine.

41st Season Of 'The Lost Colony' Scheduled To Open June 12

LOST COLONY PROP MASTER . . . Jim Fineman checks out some of the props used in the annual presentation of Paul Green's famed outdoor drama. As property master, Fineman is in charge of all props except scenery and costumes. A native of Fall River, Mass., he has a degree in theater arts and worked at Cherokee and Lizard Lick before coming to the Outer Banks. Fineman has been the drama's property master since 1973. The 1981 season opens on June 12, with performances nightly at 8:30 except on Sundays. The number to call for reservations is 473-3414.

The 41st production of Paul Green's "The Lost Colony," America's oldest and best known outdoor drama, opens June 12 at historic Fort Raleigh near Manteo on Roanoke Island. The 1981 season ends Aug. 29.

Performances are held nightly except on Sundays with curtain time at 8:30 p.m. Admission is $5.75 and $5.25 for adults, and $2.50 for children under 12.

The number to call for reservations (from June 8 until Aug. 29) is 473-3414.

The June 12 opening night is also the occasion for presentation of a distinguisherd service award.

This season will be the first without the presence of playwright Green, who died at age 87 early in May.

A Pulitzer Prize winner, Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" was first performed in 1937 as part of the 350th anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, the first child born of English parents in the New World of America.

The play dramatizes Sir Walter Raleigh's attempts to establish the first permanent English colonoies on the North American continent in the late 1500s, and the eventual disappearance of one of those colonies from Roanoke Island into the mists of history nearly four centuries ago, shortly after 1587.

This year's production marks the 18th consecutive staging of "The Lost Colony" under the direction and choreography of Joe Layton. A star name in theater, Layton has a long and memorable string of theatrical achievements. He was director of the original Broadway production of "Sound of Music;" directed Joel Gray in the musical "George M;" and directed the Broadway musicals "Platinum," "I Love My Wife," and the currently running "Barnum."

His television credits include the repeated Christmas special "The Littlest Angel" as well as specials for Cher, Raquel Welch, Hal Linden, Dolly Parton and many others. His wide range of talents cover the choreography of original works for the London Royal Ballet and the the Robert Joffrey Ballet Company. Layton is producer of the movie version of "Annie," which is now being filmed.

Layton has earned three Tony awards and an Emmy for his work in various entertainment media.

"The Lost Colony" is presented by The Roanoke Island Historical Association, Mrs. J. Emmett Winslow, chairman. In addition to "The Lost Colony," the company also sponsors other activities during the summer season. These include a series of Children's Theater plays and concerts by the choir.

The Professional Theater Workshop of "The Lost Colony" holds classes in dance, music and acting, and the company produces a series of workshop productions under its supervision. Guest artists and lecturers are a part of the Professional Workshop, with lectures given by agents, actors, casting directors and other professionals in their fields.

Academic credit may be earned through the extension division of the University of North Carolina for juniors, seniors and graduate students taking part in the Professional Theater Workshop.

In additon to Layton, others on "The Lost Colony" production staff are: producer, Mrs. Fred W. Morrison; scene and costume designer, Fred Voelpel; lighting designer, Nananne Porcher; associate producer/general manager, Robert Knowles; associate choreographer, Johnny Walker; music director/arranger, Rosalind MacEnulty; production stae manager, A. Lynn Lockrow; costumer, Michael Hunter; associate costumer, Irene Rains; public relations director, Paul Phillips; office manager, Deloris Utley, and box office manager, Mabel Basnight.

LICHTENSTEIN SHOW

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The first major museum exhibition in more than a decade of the works of Roy Lichtenstein is on view at the St. Louis Art Museum through June 28.

"Roy Lichtenstein 1970-1980" is a survey of this contemporary American artist's work of the past 11 years. It consists of 50 paintings, nine sculptures and 53 drawings.

After its showing in St. Louis, the exhibition will go on tour. It will be at the Seattle Art Museum from July 16-Sept. 6; at the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York City from Sept. 22-Nov. 29; and at the Fort Worth, Texas, Art Museum from Dec. 16-Feb. 7, 1982.

The exhibition is also scheduled to be shown in Cologne, Florence, Paris, Madrid and Tokyo.

NC Dance Showcase To Be Held In Charlotte

RALEIGH — The third annual North Carolina Dance Showcase will perform in Charlotte on Thursday and Friday, May 28 and 29. Performances will be in Dana Auditorium at Queens College.

The event is part of the celebration of Dance Week in North Carolina, proclaimed by Gov. Jim Hunt for the period May 25-31.

The showcase opens at 4 p.m. Thrusday, with an evening performance scheduled at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for the evening performance are priced at $5 for adults and $4 for students under 18. Tickets are available at the Spirit Square Box Office in Charlotte.

The five top dance companies of North Carolina are to be on hand for the evening's performance. These are the N. C. Dance Theater of Winston-Salem, the Frank Holder Dance Company of Greensboro, the Easy Moving Company of Raleigh, New Reflections Dance Theater of Charlotte, and the New Performing Dance Company of Durham.

On Friday, the day will be devoted to conducting classes for dance teachers at all levels.

New Nags Head Center

NAGS HEAD — "The Shell," Nags Head's new entertainment center, will feature musical revues and also original programming for children beginning June 13.

"The Shell" is housed in a Portomod dome in Galleon Esplanade. Three seafaring or star-striped shows will be staged six days a week through Sept. 7. Also, old films with a swashbuckling flair will be shown in between live performances.

The seven different shows scheduled for presentation are written and choreographed by Janie Musten. Ms. Musten has had extensive experiece in television and stage work, nationally and regionally. She has also directed, choreographed and produced a USO tour and an American Revue at the Kennedy Center. Emily Hyatt is the venture's managing producer.

To Conduct At Brevard Center

RALEIGH — Jackson Parkhurst, North Carolina Symphony assistant conductor and director of education, will spend the summer conducting Brevard Music Center's Transylvania Orchestra and serving as the summer music festival's dean of instruction.

Parkhurst's recent conducting engagements include the Sioux City, Iowa, Symphony and the Greensboro Symphony. He was also a guest conductor of the Bronx Opera Company in New York City and in 1976 took part in Boris Goldovsky's Opera Institute In North Dartmouth, Mass.

YEAR OF THE DISABLED — The British Post Office has issued four stamps in conjunction with 1981 as the International Year of the Disabled, proclaimed by the United Nations General Assembly. John Gibbs, a freelance graphic designer, is the designer of the stamps, his first special set for the British Post Office. Denominations are 14, 18, 22 and 25 pence. Collectors interested in these and other British stamps are to write to: Strangib Limited 1325, Franklin Avenue, Garden City, N.Y., 11530. (Photo courtesy British Post Office)

Last Call For New Bern Art Show

NEW BERN — The last call is going out for a chance to enter the art compeition to be held in New Bern on Saturday, May 30, in conjunction with Spring Arts '81 and Colonial Living Day.

Prize money and purchase awards will be given in the professional artists division, and ribbons will be awarded in the amateur division.

Interested artists can obtain an entry form and additional information by contacting Pat Sanchez, telephone 637-4190 or by writing to her at: 408 Avenue A, New Bern, N.C., 28560.

Holder To Choreograph Work In Puerto Rico

GREENSBORO — North Carolina choreographer Frank Holder has accepted a commission to choreograph a new work for the Ballet Isleno de Folklorico of Puerto Rico. Holder will spend four weeks this summer in Puerto Rico working with this company, which appeared in Macy's parade in New York City last fall.

The Ballet Isleno de Folklorico is made up of 150 high school students who have been selected by audition from throughout the island. Those selected to be in this company are then transported each weekend during the school year to Aguadilla, the site of the company's rehearsal facilities, for extensive training.

The students return in the summer for six weeks of study and dance. The invitation to choreograph for this group was extended to Holder by the Puerto Rican government after he conducted a workshop with the Ballet Isleno in January.

He was in Puerto Rico with his professional company — the Frank Holder Dance Company — which has spent six weeks in Puerto Rico during the last three years as part of a yearly Caribbean tour which has also taken the company to St. Thomas and St. Croix.

The Frank Holder Dance Company is the South's only major modern dance company with performances scheduled throughout the United States. Highlighting the current season were a New York City debut in April, and a performance at the Piccolo Spoleto Festival in Charleston, S.C., in May.

OPEN SESAME

LANGHORNE, Pa. (AP) — Sesame Place has opened for the 1981 season.

A new concept in family entertainment, Sesame Place combines science exhibits, 60 educational computer games, 40 outdoor play elements and 24 do-it-yourself exhibits.

Wahl-Coates Sixth Graders Stage Their Own Space Theme Play

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

It was happy horseplay, a child's variation on the unlikely combination of science fiction and the supernatural, and the audience of youngsters at Wahl-Coates roared their delight.

"Journey to the Unknown," a one-act joint effort play, was given two performances at Wahl-Coates Lobarotory School on Thursday, May 21.

The cast was members of Mrs. Linda Shuping's class. The hit production is a synthesis of their individual efforts guided by the professional hand of Steve Myott of Westfield, Vt.

For a sixth grade production, "Journey to the Unknown" has to be termed an elaborate venture. Action takes place on two stages at opposite ends of the Wahl-Coates Auditorium. A lighted aisle between the two sections of the audience represents infinite space between the earth and the planet called unknown. Musicians and actors whose voices appeared in off-stage parts were placed behind the audience on each side of the auditorium.

The story line is suitably simple for an audience of young people in the 10-12 year old age group. A pompous general, with a hilariously comic red helmet sporting a white crest, arrogantly issues orders to scientists, doctors and soldiers in preparation for the journey by two astronauts and a robot to the unknown planet. After much fiddling with an impressive stage panel that lights up and makes entertaining noises, the flight is underway. The three involved walked the spaceship to the second stage.

There, they are confronted by an assortment of oddly dressed creatures, including an earth-type Shakespearean witch diligently stirring a steaming cauldron. She scolds two hungry cats who add sinister suspense by sniffing and me-owing hungrily around the astronauts and the robot.

Just in the nick of time, an off-stage voice lets the seemingly doomed trio know that help is on the way. Enter a white-robed priestess and two assistants who in hypnotic incantations and swaying movements immobolize the bad witch and her crew to allow the threatened trio to escape for a return to earth.

In a Gilber-Sullivan touch, the leanest, meanest of the cats stows away on the space ship, and on earth, frightens the assembled crew of doctors, scientists and soldiers. The blustering general, distressed that the cat sends him into bouts of violent sneezing, orders the cat returned immediately to her planet. At this point mutiny enters the plot, with the earth crowd seizing the general and placing him in the spaceship with the cat; however, a soft-hearted soldier releases him just in time.

Meanwhile, the cat casts her own enchantment by a seductive rendition on a violin, but her visit on earth is cut short by the arrival of the bad witch — not by spaceship, but more conventionally, on broom, demanding the release of her kitty cat.

All ends well, with the witch, the cat, and one infatuted earthling riding away to the unknown planet on the sturdy, three-passenger broom.

A New Approach

After the performance, Steve Myott talked about his Center Theater in Vermont, which specializes in helping young people create their own theatrical experiences.

"I started this work about a year ago," Myott explained. "Mostly, my partner and I work with elementary age children." He said their approach is to "give the students a general theme to work on. It's a brainstorming experience, with each child contributing ideas. Essentially, they write the play, and I serve in the role of guiding them."

Myott observed his method "is first to get to know the children, and to find out what each one involved can do well. With that to work on, I guide them to create parts that suit a student's personality, rather than present a ready-made role for the child to fit to."

At this point, Myott and his partner are not working outside the Vermont schools. "The reason I've worked with the children here at Wahl-Coates," he said, "is because I'm visiting friends in Greenville and decided to see if one of the schools would be interested in this type of experimental production where the students are the primary contributors for the story as well as for props and staging."

Myott also took a role as one of the two astronauts. "I think my being in the action gave them a bit more confidence."

In the case of the Wahl-Coates production, the young enthusiastic audience gave overwhelming confirmation that they do indeed respond to the efforts of their peers in bringing them original entertainment conceived and shaped through the innovative approach used by Steve Myott.

THE CAST . . . of the Wahl/Coates original production, "Journey to the Unknown" are shown assembled on one of two stages used in the play. Two presentations were given at the school's auditorium on Thursday. Steve Myott of the Center Theater, Westfield, Vermont, who assisted the students, is behind the T-shirt bearing the play's name.

Rowan Shows Listed

Four exhibitions will open soon at the Rowan Art Guild Art Gallery in Salisbury. From May 31-June 4, student art work will be on display in Gallery I, and in Gallery II recent work by local artist Mark Brown will be exhibited. The opening reception for the public will be held Sunday, May 31, from 2-5 p.m.

The North Carolina National Bank Art Collection Traveling Show will be on exhibit in Gallery I and art work by Caroline Beckett of Oregon, Wis., will be displayed in Gallery II from June 7-June 30. An opening reception will be held Sunday, June 7, from 2-5 p.m. at the Gallery. The traveling exhibition includes over 2,200 paintings, sculptures and other art work. Emphasis is on work by North Carolina and Southeastern artists.

The Rowan Art Gallery is located at 310 West Kerr St., Salisbury and is open, without charg to the public Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sundays, 2-5 p.m. For further information on exhibitions and programs, call the gallery office (704) 636-1882.

Two ECU Students Win Awards

NEW YORK — Two students in the School of Art, East Carolina University, have been named winners in the first annual Creative Advertising Challenge, a competition sponsored by McCaffrey and McCall Inc., a New York City advertising agency.

Mike Godfrey of Fayetteville and Andrea Nicholas Stuart of Southern Pines both received honorable mention for art in the program which asked students to create an advertising campaign promoting their own college. Twenty-four awards were given. A total of 232 students representing 81 colleges in the eastern United States took part in the competition.

A Summer Art Exhibit

ANNISTON, ALA. — The Anniston Museum of Natural History is featuring a special summer art exhibit, "Our Environment," from July 2 through Aug. 14. Among artists whose work is being shown are Thkomas Hart Benton, Ansel Adams, Roy Lichtenstein, Walker Evans, Rockwell Kent and Christo.

Admission is $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for those under 18. Hours are 9-5 Tuesdays through Thursdays, 10-5 Saturdays, and 1-5 Sundays. Closed Mondays.

ART A GOOD BUY

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Corporate art is a good investment, Emhart Corp. here has discovered.

Since the company started brightening the walls of its world headquarters here with original art, company executives calculate that the collection has appreciated substantially. The paintings by local and nationlly-known artists have been valued at more than $150,000 — yet little more than one-third of this was invested in acquiring the works.

It should not be surprising that New England and outdoor scenes predominate in this Yankee enclave.

GERMAN ART

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition of 19th-century German art is being shown at the Metropolitan Museum of Art through July 5.

NCMA Events Today

RALEIGH — N.C. Museum of Art docent Lois Wilson will discuss Goya's "The Topers" and other selected works from the collections in a tour of the museum which will take place at 2:15 p.m. today.

At 3 p.m. today, "An Afternoon of Performances" will feature three diverse performance pieces — "Guilt by Association," a conceptual piece dealing with objects in an institution, a production by David R. Sedaris and Veronica Ruedrich, both of Raleigh; "Walking Ridges," a performance by Craig Pleasants, which explores the boundaries between visual, musical and literary expression; and a performance piece by Henry Stindt, faculty member of the School of Art, East Carolina University.

The N.C. Museum of Art is located at 107 East Morgan St. in Raleigh.

On Thursday, May 28, at 4:30 p.m. the new N.C. Museum of Art building at 2110 Blue Ridge Road (just north of I-40 at Raleigh's western edge) will be dedicated. Though the art collections are yet to be installed, the building is now in its final stages of construction.

GUGLIELMI AT WHITNEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Eighteen paintings by O. Louis Guiglielmi are on view at the Whitney Museum of American Art through July 5.

The exhibit offers selected examples of the achivement of this American surrealist, who died in 1956. He is known for his distinctively personal and poetic style.

A Review

The 1981 Issue Of 'Crucible' Is Short On Prose, Long On Poetry

Crucible. Literary and Art Magazine. Wilson, Atlantic Christian College. Spring 1981, Volume 17. James B. Hemby, literary editor; Thomas E. Marshall, art and production editor. Paper, 51 pages, illustrated. $2.00.

This year's "Crucible" is, if memory serves me right, more heavily laden with poems than any previous issue. No quarrel on this, except to note it seems a little one-sided to have 39 poems with prose represented only by two pieces, the first and second place prize winners, plus a tribute to the late Thad Stem.

This imbalance could, of course, be an indication that Tar Heel writers are considerably more active in writing poetry than in penning short stories.

Despite this quibble, the Atlantic Christian College literary-art annual again provides a fine sampling of some of the best efforts of North Carolina writers, young and not so young, from all parts of the state.

Jean Leland's first prize fiction, "Nanny," is a sympathetic, compact study of the final physical and mental disintegration of a lady of 82. Nanny is the type of admirable woman we all have known, a person who has lived long and actively, who is loved and cherished, and even in the defeat of old age still struggles to maintain the integrity of herself as a self-reliant woman.

What Ms. Leland, a freelance writer who formerly was a reporter for the "Charlotte Observer" has achieved in a few hundred words is an inspiration to other writers and a shining example of the tremendous impact possible in brevity.

"K.465," the second place prize fiction by Thomas Blackburn, a teacher at St. Andrews College, comes off splendidly as a music critique rich in poetic insights and moods generated by a composition by Mozart. Blackburn writes of "shining chariot of sound," ... "Klaus' cello is sun-warmed cedar lying across a granite outcrop in the heat and murmur of insects," and ... the question "For how to explain as love the building of structures out of sawtooth waveforms bowed onto steel and aluminum strings?" Blackburn's structure of words about music is refreshing, and compensates for the rather mundane story thread of the emotional configuration of the four performers of K.465.

Gill Holland's first prize poem, "Darwin Doubts/The Miami Riots" is a densely textured work that begins to yield its meaning only after a second or third careful reading. Analogies and sybmols employed in this poem require a willingness to indulge in some challenging mental footwork. Holland teaches English at Davidson College.

Of more immediate appeal is Claire Cooperstein's "Creative Moment: Upper Paleolithic," the second place winner in poetry. A poem of early cave man art strong in visual values, the poem connects the interaction of intuitive art and instinctive reliance on magic that a higher order of being is perhaps capable of at a primitive level. "His brother has speared a bison this afternoon .../tracked the dying animal 'til sundown./ Now he has promised to 'Tie it up' with a drawing,/ so it cannot escape in the dark, can be found/ and killed the next morning ..."

Ms. Cooperstein's profession as a sculptor and painter is discernible in this poem.

Fans of the writings of the late Thad Stem Jr. will find pleasure in the tribute to Stem by former newspaperman Charles Blackburn. Stem, who died last year at age 64, is fondly remembered as a Tar Heel who made his native Oxford and the town's colorful characters vivid symbols of mankind universal.

Blackburn says of Stem that he was ". . . a fire-spitting, capital 'D' Democrat, he was a living, breathing anathema to Jesse Helms, et al. His wasn't a sugar-coated, dewy-eyed view of the past, but rather a celebration of small town life at its best ..."

Of all the poems in this issue of "Crucible," I find Salvatore Salerno's "Parable of the Broken Moon" the most satisfying as a story-telling piece. The three men in the poem, a farmer, a hermit and a fishermen, "converged by moonlight/ on The Inn of the Broken Moon." There, the farmer praised the bounty of his rich acres of fertile mountain land, and the fisherman the yield of his fluid fields of water. The hermit acknowledges that in the desert "Life is spare,/ steals when it seems to give. A man needs little to live — / I get along . . ." After they leave, the innkeeper ". . . went to bed/ and dreamed them down their way: ..." — for the farmer a full moon, the fisherman his half-moon, and the hermit his crescent.

Three Greenville poets are published in this issue — Don Ball with two poems, "New Flight" and "Defendant;" Claire Pittman, "A Riddle of Birds and Dreams;" and Jerry Raynor with "Desert Song — Las Cruces."

This year's winner of the Sam Ragan Prize in poetry is Agnes McDonald, a member of the English Department, North Carolina State University. Her poem is entitled "Starling Sequential," which concludes with these impressive lines — "dying shreds of sky, the ragged park/ cresting at the cemetery's hill:/ constellations of starlings."

For $2, "Crucible" is an excellent reading investment. In addition to the poems and stories, the magazine contains more than two dozen black and white illustrations, some drawings, some photographs.

Copies are available by mail from: The English Department, Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, N.C., 27893.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By HANSY JONES

From among the multitude of children's books published in the United States each year, two are chosen annually as "most distinguished." In such a crowd, to be chosen is truly a distinction. The recipient of the 1981 Newberry Award for the most distinguished contribution to American literature for children is Katherine Patterson for her book "Jacob I have Loved." The Caldecott Medal, presented for the most distinguished picture book for children, was awarded to Arnold Lobel, author/illustrator of "Fables."

Taste in books is so personal that it can seldom be said with confidence, "...You're sure to love these books." However, that is the prediction for these. Each has something very special to recommend it. Anyone (child or adult) who has an interest in children's literature should give them a try.

"Jacob I have Loved" (from the Biblical passage "Jacob I Have Loved, but Esau have I hated...") is the story of twin sisters growing up in a tiny Chesapeake Bay island in the early 1940s. The story is told in the first person by Louise who feels that, like the Biblical Esau, that she is the despised elder twin, while Caroline, her selfish sister is loved by everyone. Angry Louise reveals how Caroline robbed her of everything: her hopes for schooling, her friends, her mother — all that she thought she wanted. Louise's defense is to bury herself in a consuming love for the ways of the watermen and the secrets of the island. This, however, proves insufficient to satisfy the woman she is becoming. In her search for self-knowledge and her place in the world, she begins to find her way to a mountain top that her sister could not reach. This is a self-searching and often touching novel that will be enjoyed by thoughful readers in the middle grades and up. Readers who wuld like to savor more of Miss Patterson's works will enjoy her other award-winning books "Bridge to Terabithia (a 1978 Newberry Winner), "The Great Gilly Hopkins," and "The Master Puppeteer."

Arnold Lobel's "Fables" is a book for all ages — one that belongs in everbody's library. Beautiful pastel shaded illustrations accompany each of twenty original fables in which eccentric animal characters exhibit some all-to-familiar human foibles. The Hippopotamus in "The Hippopotamus at Dinner," after over-eating to the point of being unable to remove himself from the table, finds that "too much of anything leaves one with a feeling of regret." In "The Elephant and His Son," Father elephant refuses to divert his attention from the newspaper to his son long enough to be told that his shoe has caught fire from cigar ashes. The obvious moral: "Knowledge will not always take the place of observation." This book is fun — and a healthy exercise in the often-neglected art of laughing at ourselves. Fans of Frog and Toad will find that Lobel has put his same lovable talents to work in "Fables."

You're sure to love these books.

Sees Look-Alike Of Rhett Butler

CHICAGO — The search is on for a man who looks like a famous actor in one of his movie roles, and the grand prize is a choice of $1,000 in today's American money, or $10,000 in Confederate money.

The Edwin M. Knowles China Co. in conjunction with The Bradford Exchange, a trading center in limited-edition collector's plates, is staging a look-alike competition for the American man who most nearly resembles Clark Gable as he appeared in his Rhett Butler role in the 1939 movie, "Gone With The Wind."

Entrants are to send two recent photographs — one full-length, the other a head-and-shoulders photo, with name, address and telephone number on the reverse of each photo. All entries must be postmarked not later than June 19, 1981, and be received by June 22. Entries are to be addressed to: The Edwin M. Knowles China Co., "Look-Alike Contest," P.O. Box 390, Chicago, Ill., 60648.

In addition to the choice of American or Confederate money, the winner will also receive a trip for two to Butler's hometown of Charleston, S.C.

"I've been sold on The Albemarle since the beginning."
— Nina Fountain

"I haven't given retirement any sort of thought whatsoever. I'm just thinking about everyday living.
"The Albemarle will be a good second home for me — one where I won't have to worry about $400 oil bills and driving into town from seven miles out in the country.
"The lifetime care that it offers is important too. If you get sick you know that somebody is going to look after you — for the rest of your life if you need it.
"Convenience and security. Those are the reasons why I'm planning to live at The Albemarle.
"I don't see why everybody wouldn't be terribly excited about it."

AUCTION CENTER

NEW YORK (AP) — Sotheby's, the auction house, has opened a third auction center in New York City.

Its 84th Street Galleries for Books, Stamps and Coins is believed to be the first separate auction center ever established to be devoted entirely to these three popular collecting areas.

This past fall, Sotheby's opened its block-long York Avenue Galleries to house all of its decorative arts department, while its Madison Avenue Galleries continue to handle sales of fine arts and jewelry.

The firm has now divided all of its facilities by collecting category, rather than by price, extending the concept of more specialized auction services introduced last fall.

Army Offers Doubts About Preparation For War

By ALISON SMALE

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (UPI) — "The Third World War" is popular reading among GIs in West Germany.

Set in the uncomfortably close future of 1985, after eerily familiar unrest has rippled through Poland and Yugoslavia, the book sketches what might happen if the GIs really had to defend West Germany against a Warsaw Pact invasion.

In the book, they get by with a little help from their friends — the NATO allies, even China and Japan.

But if the Third World War became reality, there's no way to tell what might happen.

In 1917 and in the 1940s, Americans went to Europe and Asia and beat the enemy. In 1981, by contrast, they are in Europe, in Korea and Japan, ready to confront any foes.

There are plans to spread the U.S. military presence to the Middle East, maybe elsewhere. President Reagan looks set to get some $136 billion appropriated by Congress for new weapons.

But is there enough man-and woman-power to service the glittering new systems, patrol the desert, even to fulfill present defense commitments? How willing or able are those people to fight — and win?

Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen, commander-in-chief of the 200,000 troops in the U.S. Army in Europe (USAREUR), believes he has enough soldiers to fight off a Warsaw Pact strike at West Germany.

But the general from Burlington, N.J., said in an interview with UPI here he would need reinforcements "immediately." The U.S. military regularly practices airlifting soldiers from the United States to NATO maneuvers in Europe each fall. In 1980, it got an entire division from Fort Hood, Texas, in 13 days.

Kroesen said he has faith in this system. But he is not so confident the reinforcements would have enough trucks to ferry them to the battlefield, or weapons to use when they got there.

MORNING FORMATION ... by men and women of B. Co., 440th Signal Battalion, out;side their barracks at Darmstadt, West Germany. The Army in Europe has 66,000 blacks and 20,000 Hispanics among its 200,000 troops. (UPI Photo)

Morale question

Kroesen said morale among his troops is high. But, "in order to maintain the continuing adequate morale of this force," Kroesen said the living and working conditions of the American soldier in Europe must improve.

Touring American bases in West Germany, it's easy to agree.

In Hanau, stores are housed in peeling, whitewashed huts, the concrete of the shopping mall is cracked. The stores used to be German cavalry stables.

In the small Bavarian town of Kattebach, one company has 6 showers for 57 men and 2 women. Three are in a latrine with mildew all over the walls and ceiling. It's been that way for a year, when the shocked soldiers arrived from the clean comfort of Fort Lewis, Wash. It will be at least this summer before improvements are made.

In the Bavarian base town of Schwabach, and at scores of the 700 U.S. bases in Europe, the motor pool is a sea of mud for most of the year. That just makes it more difficult and more unpleasant to maintain the armored vehicles, trucks and tanks — often 20 years old — supposed to take soldiers to war.

Kaiser era barracks

If you're single and live in the barracks, you may be crammed in with five, even seven, others. Home for many GIs is a 6-by-6-foot section of a room in a barracks built for Adolf Hitler's Nazis or even Kaiser Wilhelm's troops and barely renovated since.

The single officer probably will fare better, with at least a private shower and his own one or two rooms.

If things don't change, Kroesen wonders how much longer troops will stick it out in Germany.

"If after 35 years over here we have not provided better living and working conditions than we have, it becomes quite obvious to a soldier that he's living in a second-class situation," Kroesen said, repeating the complaints voiced by dozens of GIs interviewed across Europe.

"He (the soldier) needs to think the American people care enough to do something about this."

But putting things right would swallow many billions of the dollars Reagan is so keen on spending for weapons. The manager at the base in Darmstadt estimated he'd need $29 million for repairs in his community alone.

The mere fact of Reagan's election has done something for the military in Germany, though. The dollar has zoomed from 1.7 to nearly 2.2 marks. That slices McKnight's rent, for example, from $353 to $279. But 10 years ago the dollar bought 4 marks.

Dollar poor GIs

This has reversed the positions of the dollar-rich liberating GI Joes and the trampled, defeated Germans of 1945. As Frankfurt journalist Guenther Gillessen, who writes extensively on the U.S. Army, put it, "Americans are not 3 meters (10 feet) tall any more."

Or, as a German taxi driver from the base town of Bitburg said, "When I grew up, American women had German cleaning ladies. Now, the Americans clean for the Germans."

Despite all this, officers like Lt. Col. Tony Brinkley of Florence, Ala., maintain morale is higher than the gloomy welfare atmosphere on many bases suggests.

Brinkley is with the 3,900 men of the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment who patrol 385 miles of West Germany's border with the Soviet bloc and are ready to fight to defend it.

"We know we can do the mission that's been assigned to us," the crew-cut colonel said. Seated in his Nuremberg office, he outlined at length the regiment's strategy. Tireless training and testing against other American and NATO troops on maneuvers proved, Brinkley said, "it flat worked."

But he was the first to admit his "elite unit" trains harder than many, and gains a constant sense of mission from daily observation of the grim barbed wire, minefields and watchtowers of the border with the potential communist enemy.

This sentiment is echoed by officers in Korea. A rotation program within the Army's Second Division there ensures every infantryman will serve in the demilitarized zone bordering the communist North.

"This helps create a very personal awareness of the threat and an appreciation of the need for realistic, arduous training," a ranking officer said.

Training space shortage

But, in West Germany, however much you want to train, there may not be room. Time in large training areas such as Grafenwoehr and Hohenfels in Bavaria is at a premium, and in any case isn't quite the real thing. Training elsewhere means compensating Germans for tearing up roads and fields. Brinkley said maneuver damage payments totaled $30 million in USAREUR last year, every cent necessary.

"Maneuver is the essence of the active defense," he said. "It's very important to get the dollars to do that."

Maneuvers may also increase the Americans' unpopularity with West Germans. "The people who are old enough to remember World War II understand," Brinkley said.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1981 by Chicago Tribune

Q.—Somehow or other, I don't understand how to evaluate a hand. I don't mean the basic point count. But when I pick up a good hand, all too often I end up in an unmakable contract. And at other times, I will hold a near yarborough and drop the bidding like a hot potato, only to find that we could make game or even slam. Even at nominal stakes, my losses add up over the year, but it is my pride that takes most of the beating. Help!—R. Thomas, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—Your failure is the inability to recognize what is known in the trade as "plastic valuation". That is a complex term to describe a fairly simple phenomenon. As the bidding progresses, the value of the hand increases and decreases, depending on whether your side locates a fit, whether there is duplication of values, etc.

Let's look at a couple of examples. Suppose you hold:

♠AQ10xx ♡AKJx ◇AQ ♣AQ

You have a very fine hand. You open with a demand bid of two spades. Partner responds two no trump and you rebid three hearts. Partner rebids three spades. Should you look for slam?

Not only is the answer an emphatic "no," but if you go on to game (and you certainly should), you should try three no trump. Partner's first bid was a negative, showing fewer than 7 points. His second bid was a simple preference, again denying anything of value. If partner's hand is a near bust, you could end up losing a multitude of tricks in your suit, but the no trump game might be impregnable if partner holds a decent minor.

Here's another example:

♠AQxxx ♡x ◇KQJx ♣xxx

You open the bidding with one spade and partner responds four clubs. That is a splinter bid showing a singleton club and the values for a raise to three spades. How do you like your hand now?

Your minimum opening bid has suddenly grown in stature. Bid Blackwood and, if partner shows two aces, contract for slam. He probably has the king of trumps, which makes six spades a virtual laydown, but, at worst, the hand should depend on a finesse.

However, let's assume that partner responds four diamonds instead, showing a singleton diamond. Now all your diamond values represent duplication, and even four spades could be defeated off the top.

The great English writer S.J. Simon posed an interesting problem. Sitting South, the auction proceeded something like:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♠	2 ◇	Pass
3 ◇	4 ◇	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	6 ◇	Pass	?

You hold:

♠Kxx ♡xxxx ◇xxx ♣xxx

What do you bid now?

Simon maintained that the only right bid was seven hearts. Partner forced you to choose between the major suits at the six-level despite the fact that he was missing the king of spades. Obviously, he expected to make twelve tricks without the king of spades. Therefore, with it you should be able to make thirteen tricks.

Brazil Tests Palm Oil As Substitute Diesel Fuel

BELEM, Brazil (AP) — Cars are zipping along in Brazil with locally produced sugar-cane alcohol in their fuel tanks. Now the government holds out hope that its diesel-powered buses and trucks will be running on palm oil, normally used for cooking here.

Palm oil burns well in a diesel engine and the tree it comes from thrives in the poor soil of Brazil's vast Amazon jungle.

Palm oil could be, in the decades ahead, the most important crop of the Amazon region, according to research experts in Belem.

Brazil was hit hard by the sharp rise in the petroleum costs and is spending almost half its essential hard-currency earnings — $9.8 billion last year — on imported oil. That drains much-needed development resources, and Brazilian planners are working on substitutes for imported energy.

Brazil still has vast tracts of undeveloped land, much of it bathed in tropical sun and rain, and the nation is trying to turn these resources into energy.

The first step came in the mid-1970s when the government opted for pure alcohol from abundant sugar-cane crops as a substitute for gasoline. About 600,000 alcohol cars are expected be on the road by the end of this year.

Now the government is looking for diesel-oil alternatives. Research shows that vegetable oils, such soybean and peanut oils, make workable diesel fuels. West Germany's Mercedes Benz branch plant in Brazil has found its trucks and buses run well on vegetable oils, although consumption increases about 10 percent.

The oils, however, leave heavy carbon deposits in the engine, requiring extra maintenance.

But the highest hopes right now are held out for palm oil because of the potential for future abundance.

"Palm oil is probably the best substitute we have for diesel," says Gastao Carvalho Filho, assistant director of DENPASA, the palm oil company here in Belem, a city of a million people in the Amazon Delta.

The French Research Institute for Oils and Oleaginous Plants reports that soybeans yield a fifth of a ton of oil per acre and peanuts yield half a ton. But palm oil yields 4.5 tons an acre.

And the "dende" palm does this on poor soil that is not much suited to normal agriculture.

"This palm is ideal for the Amazon," says Pieter Schoenmaker, plantation manager for DENPASA's 7,400-acre plantation just outside Belem.

"It likes to have lots of rain and lots of sun, but it does not need good soil. That's important in the Amazon because most of the soil is very poor."

The palm has other advantages in that the crop is harvested year-round by hand, Schoenmaker adds.

"That means it provides a lot of steady work, one man for every 12 acres. That's much higher than other crops, like soybeans or cattle ranching."

That could help solve some of the labor problems in Brazil where millions are either underemployed or have no work at all.

The palm trees protect the soil and keep it productive.

"When you put a palm-oil plantation in the place of the jungle, you don't alter the ecological conditions," Schoenmaker says.

Taxpayer Prepares List Of Delinquents

CLAYTON, N.J. (UPI) — Michael Tantonio is angry with 229 of his neighbors and they are going to hear about it.

Tantonio, 55, has spent several weeks poring over this community's tax records to see who failed to pay taxes in 1980. He plans to make public his "list of 229" in an attempt to shame the delinquents into settling up with the municipality.

"It's already working," Tantonio said. "Some of these people heard I was working on this list and they went in and paid their bills.

"Isn't that the way it should be?" he asked. "I mean, am I wrong to expect everybody to pay their fair share? I don't think so."

Tantonio is a part-time municipal building inspector who also works full-time at a local water treatment firm. He said he began his crusade after learning the borough's 6,000 residents faced the prospect of a 40 percent tax hike in 1981.

Municipal officials blamed the proposed increase on a $215,000 budget deficit, which Tantonio believes was created by tax delinquents and poor management.

"For a small town like this, you better believe that's a lot of money," he said. "They wanted to raise the budget cap (limit), which was defeated; they wanted to raise the sewage rate, the water rate and raise taxes."

"After a while, I realized that if everybody would comply with their taxes, we wouldn't have this problem," he said.

He got angry when he studied the tax records.

"There is one company, a housing developer, that is $94,000 in arrears," he said. "They owe back taxes from eight and 10 years ago. And nobody (from the tax collector's office) has gone after them."

Tantonio gathered the information slowly, "making sure I wasn't wrong about anybody," then asked a local newspaper to consider publishing the list, a practice local officials employ every two years.

Tantonio has also had offers of free duplicating facilities from local residents to help distribute the list.

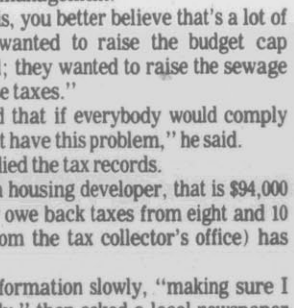

"Most people are behind me on this," he said. "Hey, nobody likes to pay taxes."

A Honey Of A Hobby

MMMM GOOD . . .Jerry Waite watches as his wife Joan tastes honey just gathered from a hive in a wall of their house they are remodeling.

BUSY BEES. . .A macroscopic photo of the bees shows the comb and cells in which the honey is made.

Story and Pictures by Tommy Forrest

Bees — For many people, even thinking about bees brings shivers to the body.

However, beekeeping has become an interesting science and hobby for those close to nature and insects. Beekeeper Don Dancy of Winterville finds it a great way to relax after his work as professor of community health at East Carolina University. Dancy has about 16 hives located behind his home which house constantly buzzing colonies of honey bees busy making honey and larvae.

Dancy explains that a bee hive consists of one or more brood chambers which are the bottom portion of the hive, a queen excluder, a shallow super, and the outer cover.

The brood chamber, Dancy said, is the large bottom part of the hive where the queen lays thousands of eggs per day. The center, which is optional, is a queen excluder. This area prevents the queen from reaching the super or top section of the hive where the worker bees make the honey.

Each hive has one queen that lays eggs and maintains the population. A queen can be produced in the hive or purchased from a supplier if a hive is totally without a queen.

"The worker bees, upon deciding to make another queen, build a larger queen cell in which the queen lays an egg and feeds it royal jelly." Dancy says.

A colony of bees is very organized, according to the beekeeper.

There are the workers called drones (male bees), guard bees for the queen and hive, worker bees for cleaning the hive and protecting the queen, and fanners "to keep the hive cool on hot days so the wax that contains the honey will not melt," Dancy explained.

On occasion the queen will leave the hive when a new queen arrives and other bees will follow, creating a swarm, probably on a tree or other item.

Dancy also has obtained the colonies from older houses and barns. Using a special vaccuum to retrieve the bees, Dancy can move the insects from one location to another under control.

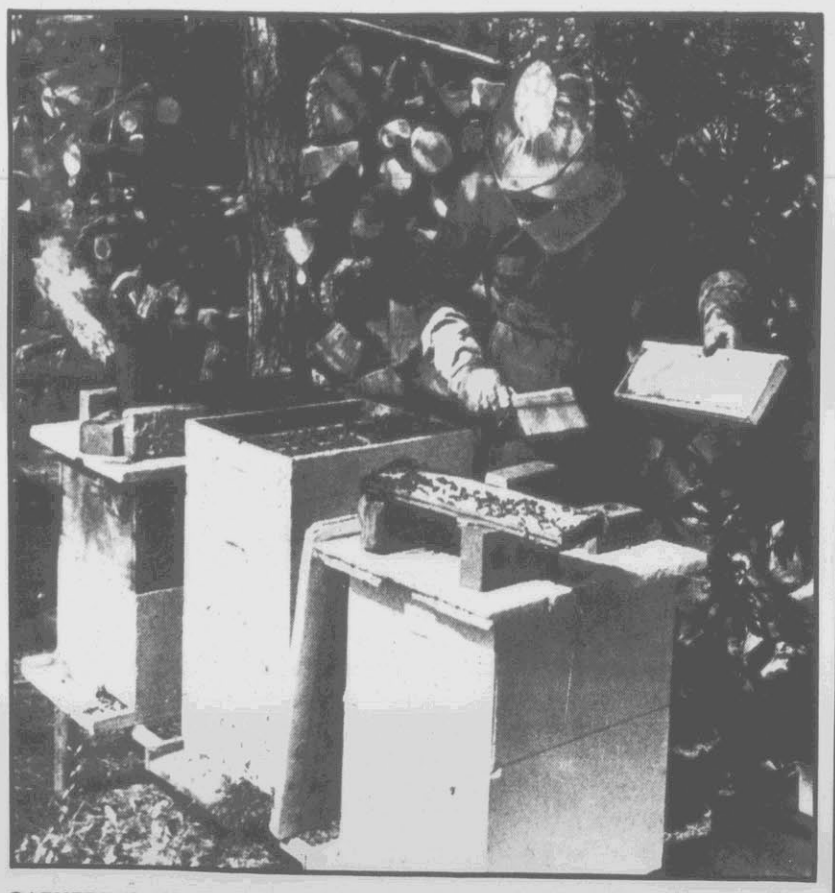

Stabilized hives are checked occasionally and the super frames, or racks, are removed when they are filled with honey. Some racks, Dancy said, can weigh up to 10 pounds. The honey is taken from the super's comb with a honey extractor. The super is placed back into the hive to be refilled.

Dancy warns that extreme caution sould be taken while handling bees.

He suggests proper beekeeper's protective clothing be worn at all times. Dancy also said, that if a bee lands on a person, do not slap.

"Slapping a bee is about 90 percent cause for all stings. All you have to do is brush the bee off gently and he won't sting. The only reason a bee normally stings to begin with is for self protection. A bee will usually eat right out of your hand without harm to you or the bee," Dancy added.

"It's a lot of fun and I don't see why anyone would want to kill bees. Bees help pollinate most of our crops and flowers," Dancy concluded.

HIVE IN WALL OF HOUSE. . .Jerry Waite helps Dancy gather bees from the wall of his house. The honey combs can be easily seen hanging.

EXTRACTING HONEY. . .Wilbur Worthington, of Rt. 2, Ayden, cuts the capped honey in preparation for separating it from the comb. This extractor is in the background.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MAY 24, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An especially good day and evening to extend your knowledge beyond present boundaries. You may be eager to make changes now but this is not the right time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contacting progressive and clever individuals can result in your own advancement at this time. Strive for happiness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Follow your intuitive hunches now since they can be helpful in your dealings with others. Flash that winning smile more.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Contacting influential persons today can be the best means through which you can advance in career matters.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Your intuitive perception is keen now, so put it to good use and gain your objectives. Plan the coming week's activity.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study contracts you have made and if any revisions are necessary, get at them early. An expert can give excellent advice.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study new ways to cut down on expenses. Listen carefully to what a family member has to say and follow the advice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Engage in recreational activities with congenials. Carry through with ideas of a creative nature in your spare time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study your surroundings and make improvements where needed. Make plans to have more abundance in the days ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A good day to visit places where you can gain a better appreciation of life. Think kindly of others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to make your possessions more valuable. Ideal day for meditating and searching for the truth.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Visit good friends and show that you value the relationship. A day when you can easily make a good impression on others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Engage in confidential work that could make the future loom brighter for you. Express happiness with close ties.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be interested in the latest trends and inventions. Be sure to give the right spiritual and ethical training to keep this mind working along constructive channels. Give the finest education you can afford.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MAY 25, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are eager to receive praise and encouragement but you need to display more creative skills before this happens. The acclaim of others will spur you on to greater efforts.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure to handle important business matters as early as possible today. Take time to please the one you love.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't neglect to take care of a delicate condition at home that is upsetting the usual harmony there. Stop wasting time.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Choose your words wisely with others today, or there could be trouble. Try to be encouraging to a co-worker who is depressed.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you are more objective you can handle monetary matters most intelligently now, and gain the respect of others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You can accomplish a great deal today if you apply yourself properly. Take health treatments that can lift your spirit.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you are not happy with your environment, this is a good day to improve it. Try to be more generous with loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be sure to steer clear of a social affair where arguments could easily start. Find recreation elsewhere and be happy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show others you are a fine citizen and at the same time make a good impression on higher-ups. Improve your credit standing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You could be eager to start on a new project today, but this is not the right time for such. Be wary of outsiders.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study whatever you have in mind that could lead to greater abundance in the future. Strive for happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Think more of those who mean much to you. Try to please them more and gain their goodwill. Think constructively.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take the right steps to become a more dynamic person. Plan time for improving your health through right treatments.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can solve problems easily and should have good practical training early in life. Give the encouragement needed to bring out the fine talents in this chart. Governmental work could be fine here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

HATED MONEY

Andrew Carnegie, one of America's wealthiest men, grew to hate money as he continued to get richer and older. He said he was offended just by seeing or touching it, and he never carried money with him. He was once put off a train in London because he had no money to pay his fare. In his boyhood, Andrew Carnegie had worked as a millhand for $1.20 a week. Just 50 years later he sold his steel company for $500 million. He donated about $330 million to libraries, research projects and world peace endeavors.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Sandlewood

Courtyard Integral Part of Plan

By Jerry Bishop

In tune with nature, the Sandalwood, a refreshing four bedroom contemporary, uses a skylight, high-perched windows, and a private courtyard to capture the outdoors.

The facade of the Sandalwood features angular roof lines and windows placed to ensnare light while maintaining privacy. Rustic yet contemporary on the outside, the deisgn's interior aims for functional livability, with a touch of luxury.

In all, four sizable bedrooms and two and one half baths make up the plan, which calls for an open kitchen/dining nook arrangement supplemented by a large dining room and a 30-ft. family room that is clearly the focus of the plan. For convenience, a powder room and utility/laundry room adjoin the kitchen.

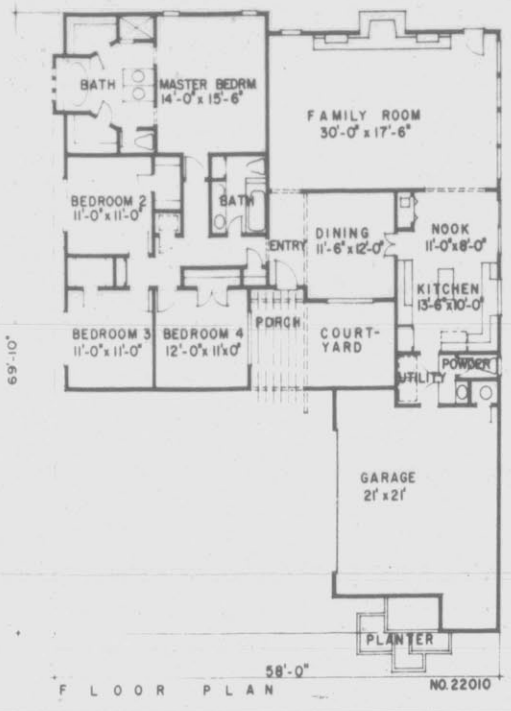

Guests enter via the porched, edged by the courtyard at right. Besides adding a decorative touch, the courtyard, visible from the dining room, offers a quiet, private spot for reading or sunbathing.

The foyer ushers guests to dining room at right or family room ahead. Impressively large, the family room highlights a wood-burning fireplace and is open to the island kitchen for an extended sense of space.

Bedrooms are grouped in the left wing of the home, with master bedroom at rear meriting a luxurious private bath and dressing area almost as large as the bedroom itself.

The side entry double garage is edged by a multi-level planter.

At Age 85, Rockefeller Center's Architect Still Designs Building

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The old architect works alone in a small office that looks out at the great skyscraper complex he and his partners shaped into a vision of modernity 50 years ago.

For Wallace K. Harrison, Rockefeller Center was only a start. Over five decades, he signed blueprints for more than $2 billion worth of American buildings, including the United Nations headquarters, the Albany Mall, Lincoln Center and the symbol of the 1939 World's Fair.

But in 1979, at 83, the last surviving member of the team that designed Rockefeller Center left his giant firm and its armies of draftsmen to begin solo practice.

These days he works on a few small projects, listens to Gershwin, collects and copies modern art and enjoys "an old age of comparative peace."

Large photos of his buildings rest against the walls, and references to the great men he knew and the great projects on which he worked dot his conversation.

Wallace Harrison, however, is not satisfied; there is a melancholy side to his career, and he returns to it as regularly as the skaters circle before Prometheus on the Center's ice rink 30 stories below.

For even though he was the Rockefeller family's court architect, even though he was a leader of his profession, even though everyone liked him, he never was a favorite of architectural purists.

"Wally holds the unbroken record for length and size of practice coupled with most dismal taste," the New York Times once quoted an unidentified critic.

How does it feel to work for 10 years on a building and read that?

"I hate it," he admits. "I've worked hard all my life ... we're not all geniuses. We all do what we can do."

Harrison consoles himself with the reminder that, in the end, "an architect is nothing more than a designer with a client." And few architects ever had clients as ready and willing to build as the Rockefellers.

Harrison's reputation was made in the place where buildings are born — the board room. "He has many satisfied clients because he gave them what they asked for," says Carol Krimsky, a New York University architecture professor.

Even if the purists are right, that does not deny his importance. His work is sure to endure if only because there is so much of it.

The more popular favorites include an Albany Mall theater shaped like an egg, a Stamford, Conn., church shaped like a fish (dubbed "the holy mackerel") and a ship-shaped glass office building in Hartford, Conn.

Hundreds of millions of Americans have been delighted by his Radio City Music Hall and Metropolitan Opera House; similarly appreciative are the comparative few who have seen some of his smaller buildings, such as his own house on Long Island.

Born and raised in Worcester, Mass., Harrison came to New York in 1916 after working as an apprentice for a contractor and an architect back home.

Every single problem caused by too much humidity in the home can be matched — with a few left over — by the troublesome results of too little humidity in the place where you live.

Relative humidity is the expression of the amount of moisture actually in the air compared to the amount of moisture which air at that temperature can hold. Change the temperature and you change the relative humidity, since warm air can hold much more moisture than cold air.

When the relative humidity is too high, we get condensation, which shows itself in the form of sweating windows and cold water pipes. That's a very visible sign of the problem. Often, the effects of low humidity in a home which is heated are not as directly observable, even though this condition usually is more potent than that of excessive humidity.

The relative humidity in a heated building may be from 10 to 15 percent or even lower. That — as humidifier authorities often point out — is drier than the Sahara Desert or Death Valley. What should be done is to bring the relative humidity up to between 35 and 40 percent, although some experts believe an even higher humidity is preferable.

When the air in your house has little moisture in it, some of the results are loose furniture joints, extra rug wear, cracked walls, creaking floors, rattling doors and clinging nylon. But doctors say the worst problem is the danger to health. As the relative humidity of air is lowered, it does everything it can to replace the missing moisture. And one of the places where it gets this moisture is from your body. Dry nasal passages permit inhaled bacteria to incubate, causing persistent infections of one sort or another. The super-dried air also results in a dry skin condition that causes itching. And variations in humidity are often responsible for a drafty feeling that keeps many people forever adjusting their thermostats.

The plants in your home also are victims of too-low humidity. As the relative humidity in the house decreases, evaporation from the leaves of plants increases until the plant's roots cannot take up water from the soil as rapidly as it is being evaporated. Under these conditions, plants sometimes wilt and dry.

What do you do about air that is too dry? You have to add moisture to the air. That's what your grandmother was doing when she placed pans of water on the radiators. She was helping the water to move into the air and raise the relative humidity.

Robots Invading U.S. Factories

NEW YORK (AP) — Robots are invading American factories in increasing numbers, according to an expert in the production of automatons.

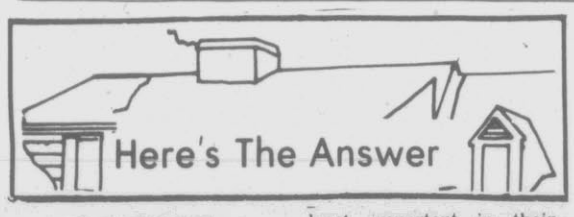

Industrial robots, electronically controlled, usually have an arm with two to six joints, and can weld, paint, drill, position or perform other repetitive tasks.

Some 3,200 such robots now work in this country's factories, while in Japan, the number is already up to 10,000, reports RCA executive vice president Irving Kessler. Soon to come, he predicts, are robots with a sense of vision and touch.

Kessler estimates the robot industry will grow from a 1980 volume of $90 million to $2.2 billion in 1990.

"Robots can help raise living standards and national productivity. They cost under $5 an hour to operate, have a low absenteeism rate, and demand no fringe benefits to speak of," he concludes.

What are your answers to these questions?

A—Do most prospective home owners want two, three or four bedrooms?

B—Which are the least important rooms in the house to these people?

C—Which is the favorite house feature these days?

D—Are shoppers looking for houses with one, two or three bathrooms?

E—What is the average acceptable commuting time from house to work?

F—Is the average do-it-yourselfer a white-collar or a blue-collar worker?

G—Conceding that the biggest motivation to doing it yourself is the savings in money, what are the other reasons people give for doing their own fixing and improving?

H—Are most do-it-yourselfers single or married?

I—Which quality in a sales person is considered most important by do-it-yourselfers?

The replies to questions A through E were contained in a survey in Housing magazine, those to questions F through I in a study in Home Center magazine.

Most want three bedrooms. Most of those who want four often don't need that many, but intend to use the spare as a den or guest room.

Most prospective home owners are willing to make concessions as to size and location of the living room and dining room. These rooms, they feel, are the least important in their overall scheme of things, but there are some exceptions; in Washington, D. C., for example, where formal areas of the house get a high ranking.

Probably because everyone is energy conscious, the favorite feature in a new house is the fireplace. Oddly, other highly rated features are high ceilings and garages with electric door openers, both of which hardly cut energy costs.

Two-bathroom houses are the most popular, preferably one for the master bedroom, one for the rest of the house.

Although today's home buyers want to live closer to work than those two years ago, they are willing to commute an average of 25 minutes.

The average do-it-yourselfer is well-educated. White-collar workers make up a 10 percent larger share of the home-center market than blue-collar workers.

Aside from money, the other big incentives for do-it-yourselfers are that they claim to be able to do the jobs better, and simply because they enjoy the work.

About 85 percent of all do-it-yourselfers are married, but there is an interesting statistic: 50 percent of the female do-it-yourselfers are single.

And, finally, 80 percent of the do-it-yourselfers consider courteous sales people extremely important in choosing where they shop. Second in importance are sales people who are able to assist customers with specific project information.

Testing Wind For Irrigation

MANHATTAN, Kans. (UPI) — Wind energy could replace more than half of the fossil fuels used for irrigation pumping on the Great Plains and thus save in excess of 18 billion kilowatt hours of energy annually, according to Energy User News, an energy industry journal.

The journal said tests at Bushland, Texas, and Garden City, Kans., demonstrated that wind turbines, late 20th century versions of the windmill, proved promising alternatives to conventional irrigation pumping systems.

The publication estimates wind turbines could supply 60 to 70 percent of surface irrigation energy demands on the Great Plains and 30 to 45 percent of the energy used for sprinkler irrigation, depending upon drop and location. There are almost 20 million acres on the Great Plains irrigated with pumped water.

RETAIL BANKRUPTCIES

NEW YORK (AP) — Changing neighborhoods are becoming more and more a factor in retail bankruptcies, says a marketing consulting firm which represents more than 180 men's stores throughout the country.

According to Marvin A. Blumenfeld, president of April-Marcus, Inc. of New York, other factors that contribute to retail failures include: rising operating costs; changing traffic patterns; the failure of key personnel to carry their weight; selling inappropriate merchandise, and inability of the owner to delegate responsibility.

Answers Timely
Gardening Questions

Q. Do you recommend watering the vegetable garden at night to keep the sun from scalding the leaves? (S.R., Knightdale)

A. No. Watering vegetables during the day does not scald the leaves on the plants, but watering in the late afternoon or at night will promote the development of some diseases. The best time to water vegetables is early morning. Late afternoon is fine, too, if the leaves have time to dry before dark. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. When my bell peppers are about the size of tennis balls they begin to rot at the blossom end. What can I do? (M.R., Goldsboro)

A. The disease is probably blossom end rot, caused by a shortage of calcium. The shortage can be caused by either low pH or an uneven water supply. Little can be done about the current crop except to remove unhealthy fruit as it appears. This will cause the healthy fruit to be larger. For next year, take a soil test so you can correct the pH. Irrigation or mulching will help insure an even moisture supply. Tomatoes are also affected by blossom end rot, and the control measures are the same. (Harry E. Duncan, extension plant pathology specialist)

QIs there any way to eliminate slugs without using a poison? (Mrs. E.G., Charlotte)

A. Leave boards or other flat objects around the area you wish to protect. Slugs will hide under them during the day to avoid the light, making it possible for you to crush them. A less messy way is to bury cans or saucers up to the rim and then fill these containers with beer. The slugs will crawl in the beer and drown. (Jim Baker, extension entomology specialist.

Q. We are not sure of our water supply this summer, but we don't want to lose our grass and shrubs. Any suggestions? (Mrs. R.W., Huntersville)

A. If you must irrigate, it is better to wet the soil thoroughly to a depth of six inches about once a week than it is to irrigate frequently and shallowly. Use a good thick mulch around your ornamentals. Do not fertilize ornamentals and warm season turfgrasses as heavily as usual unless plenty of irrigation water is available. Use very little, if any, fertilizer on cool season grasses during summer, and use no fertilizer during hot, dry weather. Mow turfgrasses slightly higher than normal to reduce drought stress. (Leon Lucas, extension plant pathology specialist)

Varied topics will be featured on "Hospitality House," Channel 7, today from 12 to 1 p.m. with hostess Kay Currie.

Musician Tom Tyson, director of the Aqueduct Conference Center in Chapel Hill, will perform an original song.

The New World Singers, a group which travels nationwide, will perform several selections.

Food and vacation adviser Anna Atkins, from Richmond, Va., will discuss favorite vacation ideas and prepare an old-fashioned recipe for lemon butter sauce.

Vietnam veteran Robert Best from Goldsboro will be on hand to discuss his book, "My Fight with God."

And representatives from the New Bern Civic Theater will talk about their teen-age production of "Don't Drink the Water," which will be presented May 27-31. Guests will be Athene Bunn, adviser and acting coach; Joshua Morgan, teen-age director; and Lee Hoff, female lead.

NZQB NBXHFR HWVWJDPFZQJ VXQ'D VZPW RPXJJ RFDB JDPWWDJ

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — KINDERGARTEN KIDS ARE GREAT KIDDERS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals P

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Dear Abby

Wife's Lover a Skyrocket; Her Husband's a Dud

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have been married (in name only) for five years. I was a lonely divorcee (age 47) and John was a well-to-do widower (60) when we were married.

The first night we were married I found out he was impotent. I know it's not his fault, but he should have told me. (He later said he was afraid he'd lose me.)

We had everything a happily married couple could want — a lovely home, friends, trips. I can't say I wasn't living a good life, although I missed the physical side of marriage some.

Now I have met a wonderful man. He is my age (52) and it was skyrockets and Roman candles the first time we were alone together. We're in love and want to get married, but hate to hurt John.

Would it be wrong to leave John and grab what little happiness is left in life?

IN LOVE

DEAR IN: If you want to justify leaving John, the fact that he failed to tell you about his impotence is sufficient. (That's probably grounds for an annulment.) Trying to keep an affair a secret will be like trying to smuggle dawn past a rooster. You'd better tell John before he tells you.

DEAR ABBY: Everybody starts out by saying they have a problem, and that's the way I am starting out, but don't throw this away yet because I get better as I go along. (Ha ha!)

I am a married man with three kids, 9, 12 and 13. I always wanted to be a writer but I can't seem to break into the field. I bet I sent 100 short stories to different magazines, but I never heard back from nobody. A person would like to be told what is wrong with their stuff, wouldn't you think?

You must know a lot of big shots in the publishing business, Abby. Can't you put in a good word for me? I don't expeck you to say I am any good unless you see some of my stuff, so I am sending you 26 stories I've wrote. If you are too busy to write and tell me what you think of them, you can call me up. I'm sending you my phone number, and if the line is busy, keep calling because my kids are on the phone a lot. In the meantime, have you got any suggestions?

LOVES TO WRITE

DEAR LOVES: Please don't send me anything, because my lawyer advises against reading unpublished material. And in the meantime, don't help your kids with their English.

Open House Celebration!

Discounts Continue!

Even though the number of import cars has been restricted, Toyota East feels that doing volume business is the best way for us to make our dealership work. In order to sell more cars than our competitors, we are continuing to offer great prices on all our Toyota models. We can save you money!

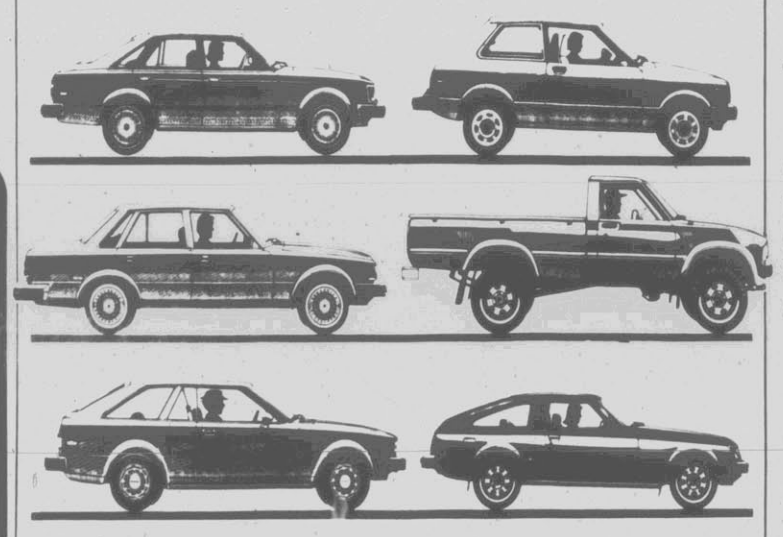

And that's just the beginning of a great money saving relationship between you and Toyota East. Our service department will keep your car in the kind of condition that saves you money on gas, doing planned preventative maintenance check-ups that keep costly major problems from happening.

The Best Deals of the Year.

Right now, during our Open House Celebration, we're offering you the best deals that we possibly can on trade-ins, providing you with monthly payments that you can afford, and arranging financing that fits your needs.

Lots of Cars to Choose From.

We have a super selection of all Toyota models in stock, including Tercels and Starlets. Whatever style, color or model you want, we probably have it. But hurry, the selection won't be this good for long.

Free Refreshments

Exotic Cars.

Just as an added incentive to get you to come see our showroom, and because we love cars of all kinds, we'll have a Clenet, Rolls Royce and a custom built Toyota Sunchaser for you to look at. If you've never seen these cars before, now is the time.

This Month Only.

This celebration is for the month of May only. And even with our dedication to low prices, we can't guarantee the manufacturer's cost in months to come. So come in and take advantage of these great prices and deals today!

RNs NOW YOU CAN CHOOSE YOUR HOURS

Sounds almost too good to be true, but in Pitt Memorial Hospital's supplemental staff pool, you cannot only choose your working hours but also name your work days and service. You'll spend all your nursing time in direct patient care. Our extensive clinical orientation lets you get back into nursing at your own pace, if you've been out of the field for a while, and effective July 1, we'll pay you $7.25 an hour or more to start, depending on your experience. Licensed RNs only, please.

For more information on how we can fit into your life, please call Helen Abbott, Director of Nursing Recruitment at 757-4470.

USO Special Honors Hope's Birthday

Bob Hope and the USO are celebrating 40 years of friendship this year, and he is also serving as honorary campaign chairman of the organization's $10 million fund-raising drive to build a new world headquarters. Now the USO is presenting a two-hour musical and comedy special from West Point to honor the comedian on his 78th birthday. The salute, "Bob Hope's All-Star Comedy Birthday Party from West Point," will be telecast Monday, May 25 (8-10 p.m. on NBC).

Hope was first asked to bring his weekly radio show to the enlisted personnel of March Air Force Base in Riverside, Calif., on March 6, 1941. He loved the reaction from the audience of over 1,000 enlisted personnel, and for the next five years broadcast his show from military bases every week.

It was the start of a successful association, which has provided a lot of laughter to troops stationed all over the world, as evidenced by some of these chronological highlights:

1942: Hope makes his first trip to Alaska with Frances Langford, Tony Romano and Jerry Colonna. "We played all the glamour spots," says Hope. "Cold Bay, Anchorage, Annette, Cordova, Nome and White Horse."

1944: In Biak, New Guinea, the troops in the audience were armed in case of attack. "Hello, everybody," Hope opened the show. "Thank you very much. Thank you for the applause and point your guns the other way, please."

1948: Hope makes his first overseas Christmas tour at the request of Stuart Symington, then Secretary of the Air Force. "We had a nice trip from America," Hope told his audience in Berlin. "Irving Berlin was along, but he didn't help our morale any. All the way across he kept singing 'How Deep Is the Ocean.'"

1957: Hope performed on the heavy cruiser USS Los Angeles. "My grandfather was a naval hero," he told the sailors. "He once shouted, 'I have not yet begun to fight.' And you know, he never did. You probably remember him — Admiral Tuna, the Chicken of the Sea."

1962: While performing in Korea at Collier Fieldhouse, something new was tried — the show was telecast by closed circuit TV to remote outposts. "Once I'm in a country, there's no place to hide from me," said Hope.

BOB HOPE and the USO have been working together for 40 years, and the organization salutes the comedian on his 78th birthday with a two-hour music and comedy special, "Bob Hope's All-Star Comedy Birthday Party from West Point," to be telecast Monday, May 25 (8-10 p.m. on NBC).

Host Honored

David Hartman, host of "Good Morning America," is the recipient of the 1981 Hall of Fame Emmy Award from the Boston/New England Chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

The award is presented annually to a recipient whose roots are in New England and who has established a distinguished career in national television. Hartman, a native of Pawtucket, Rhode Island, has been host of the morning program since 1975, when it first went on the air. In its five year history, it has become the number-one early news-and-information program in the country.

In addition to his work on "Good Morning America," Hartman has produced and hosted several network specials, including his original "David Hartman: Birth and Babies" and "David Hartman ... The Shooters."

HAYLEY MILLS stars as a young girl whose optimistic philosophy changes an entire community in "Pollyanna," airing on "Disney's Wonderful World," Sunday, May 24 (7-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Sinatra Signs

Frank Sinatra, a showbusiness legend and a super star in every medium since his career began with big bands in the 1940s, has signed a multi-year contract with NBC, beginning with the 1981-82 season.

"Frank Sinatra's popularity as a singer, musical innovator, motion picture star and producer has no parallel," NBC's Brandon Tartikoff said. "We are extremely pleased to have this great charismatic entertainer with us.

Other entertainers who've been signed to contracts that begin with the upcoming season include James Arness, Rock Hudson, Tony Randall, Mickey Rooney, Gabe Kaplan, Nell Carter and Merlin Olson.

MICHAEL CONRAD, co-stars as the towering yet humane Sgt. Phil Esterhaus on "Hill Street Blues" airing Tuesdays (9-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Michelle Will Tell

Q: Where is the actor who plays Coolidge on "The White Shadow" from? R. SHIELDS, GRANITE FALLS, N.C.

A: Byron Stewart was born in Baxter Springs, Kan., but grew up in California's Marin County, near San Francisco. A towering 6'8" tall, he excelled in basketball and track while attending high school.

Q: Who plays Alex Marshall and Marlena Craig on "Days of Our Lives"? Are they married in real life? C. ENNIS, JR., HICKORY, N.C.

A: Quinn Redeker and Deidre Hall portray the lovers, and they are quite an 'item' around Hollywood. But, although they obviously enjoy the pleasure of each other's company, neither has any desire to make that trek down the aisle at this time.

Q: Who co-starred as Liverpool on "Orphan Train"? I've never seen him before. S. RUSSELL, GREENVILLE, N.C.

A: He's 16-year-old Graham Fletcher-Cook, an English actor, whose portrayal of an English orphan in the telefilm marked his debut on American television. Prior to this, Graham had a key role in "A Little Romance," a motion picture that starred Laurence Olivier.

Q: I enjoy "Dukes of Hazzard" and would like to know if there really is a Hazzard County. O.L.O., KITTRELL, N.C.

A: The fictional setting for 'Dukes' is a county in Georgia, but the series is actually filmed on the outskirts of Los Angeles.

Q: Who portrayed William Taft, Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding, Calvin Coolidge, Herbert Hoover, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman and Dwight Eisenhower in "Back Stairs at the White House"? J. HEATH, GREENVILLE, N.C.

A: Here goes: Victor Buono (Taft); Robert Vaughan (Wilson); George Kennedy (Harding); Ed Flanders (Coolidge); Larry Gates (Hoover); John Anderson (Roosevelt); Harry Morgan (Truman); and Andrew Duggan (Eisenhower). Of these eight actors, four — Vaughn, Anderson, Flanders and Gates — had portrayed Chief Executives before being cast in 'Backstairs.'

Q: Please tell me something about Al Corley, who co-stars on "Dynasty." C. PATE, LAURINBURG, N.C.

A: Al, who plays the troubled Steven Carrington, has none of his character's 'hang-ups' in real life. In fact, he even went through college on a basketball scholarship. Still single, the handsome guy's interests include fast cars, ballooning, rafting, painting, playing guitar and songwriting.

(FOR ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TV SHOWS AND PERSONALITIES, WRITE TO 'MICHELE,' GREENVILLE DAILY REFLECTOR, P.O. BOX 1451, HOPEWELL, VA. 23860.)

Brian-Watchers

Brian Kerwin, one of the 'regulars' on "Lobo," has been mobbed by young women since the show went on hiatus several weeks ago. Kerwin takes all the attention philosophically, trying to get through his daily chores of shopping, running errands and working out.

Boothe Overcame Odds

For an actor just beginning to establish a reputation, playing a real-life character as notorious as the Reverend Jim Jones presents both an opportunity and a danger.

Powers Boothe, then relatively unknown to the public, decided to take the risk to star in "Guyana Tragedy: The Story of Jim Jones." The result was an Emmy. The dramatic special will be broadcast Wednesday, May 27 (8 to 11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Up until the special, Boothe's previous credits included some work in the New York and regional theater, an acclaimed debut on Broadway, and supporting roles in a new TV show.

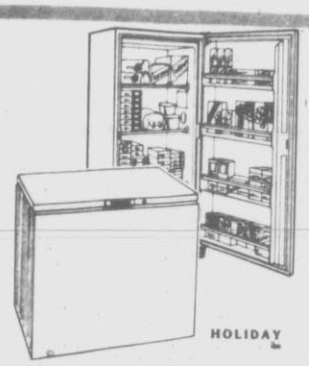

Boothe has managed to avoid forever being associated with the Jim Jones role by following up Guyana Tragedy. With a telefilm "Cry For Love," and a forthcoming motion picture, "Southern Comfort."

Boothe believes that the complexity of the Jones role helped him overcome the possible pitfalls.

"Jones had many facets," Boothe said. "This is not only the man who led hundreds of his followers into mass suicide, but also the man who helped integrate Indianapolis at a time when the city was a Ku Klux Klan stronghold."

Boothe found that, as an actor, he had to face complicated questions about Jones, a man who could produce both social good and overwhelming tragedy, before he could portray him.

"I think that somewhere along the line Jones began to base his life on lies," said Boothe, like a self-centered child, he may not have admitted even to himself that they were dangerous lies. When he realized that he was about to be found out, I think he refused to allow himself to be brought down by what he interpreted as vicious personal persecution, even though escaping his fate meant ending the lives of hundreds who had believed in him. He wanted a place in history, not end up a disgraced, forgotten man."

Call Him Steverino!

Steve Allen wears well with TV viewers and reviewers, and he received kudos from TV critics when he co-hosted last year's Emmy Awards telecast, which striking actors boycotted.

"Allen's opening dialogue was brilliant, though not unusual for the man who, after all these years, is still the finest host on television," wrote Frank Torrez of The Los Angeles Herald Examiner. "Allen delivered a steady, consistent parade of one-liners thoughout the night, each one seemingly funnier than its predecessor. Expect to see Steverino on network television more often in the future."

Now Steverino returns to the tube with "The Steve Allen Comedy Hour," Friday, May 29 (9-10 p.m. on NBC-TV).

Asked whether the speed with which a show is taped for television bothers him, Allen stated: "I do everything fast. It doesn't matter to me personally but it does make things a bit more difficult for the others involved with the show."

Allen enjoys working on many things at once. In addition to this show, he has numerous projects in the works, from books to music:

— He is now in the fourth season of his award-winning PBS series, "Meeting of Minds."

— He is writing a feature screenplay, "The Last Gig."

— His 22nd book, "Explaining China," was published a few months ago.

— He has several other books in progress, including "Telethon," "The Talk Shows," "The Funny People," "Meeting of Minds" (Vol. III), and "The Talk Show Murders" (a mystery thriller).

Allen literally never stops working, night or day.

"I will wake up with an idea in the middle of the night and dictate it into a machine by my bed," he said. "I will dictate some material during breakfast and when I'm doing my exercises. I get to the office around 10 and stay till 5, dictating or writing. I don't take a lunch hour. I do this seven days a week, night and day. Fortunately it's all fun."

It would seem that he is highly organized; not so. Quipped Allen: "I'm half organized, and half chaotic."

HUMORIST-COMPOSER Steve Allen is back in the television spotlight as star of "The Steve Allen Comedy Hour," airing Friday, May 29 (9-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'Needles' Is Taut Drama

Joe Don Baker and Elizabeth Ashley star in "Golden Needles," a suspense-filled drama that's The CBS Late Movie, airing Friday, May 29, at 11:30 p.m. Also appearing are Ann Southern and Burgess Meredith.

The focus is on a priceless, ancient Chinese statue that promises the owner health and incredible vigor — but it can also deliver painful death. Several people are in desperate pursuit of the statue, and their search takes them halfway across the globe.

The work of art holds the secret locations of seven acupuncture points that stimulate a man to the point of being irresistible. But the misplacement of a single needle can result in an agonizing death.

Drawing Power

Actor Martin Landau has a special hobby for his spare time.

"I like to draw — sketches of people and places really settle me down after a hard day's work on the set," said Landau, who worked as a cartoonist for some New York newspapers before entering acting in his early 20s.

'Flamingo' Renewed

Fans of NBC-TV's "Flamingo Road" can relax. The series has been given the 'go-ahead' for 22 new episodes that will air during the 1981-82 season.

JOHNNY RUTHERFORD is the defending champion of the Indy 500. ABC-TV will telecast same day coverage of the race Sunday, May 24 at 9 p.m.

Indy: More Than Meets The Eye

There is a lot more to the Indianapolis 500 than just the race. There are events surrounding the Indy 500 that really make the actual race what it is.

ABC-TV sports will present the Indy 500 on a same-day, prime time basis this year at 9 p.m. Sunday, May 24. ABC's Jim McKay will anchor the 65th running of the race. Reporting the race will be Jackie Stewart, Chris Economaki, Bill Flemming, Sam Posey and Dave Diles. Posey and Stewart are past competitors at the '500.'

Johnny Rutherford is the defending champion of the race. He also won the race in 1974 and 1976. Also competing will be past winners A.J. Foyt, Al and Bobby Unser, Gordon Johncock, and Rick Mears.

Prior to the race in Indianapolis on the 24th, there is a "500" Festival Parade on the 23rd. According to observers it is a one of a kind attraction. Paula Jayne Peelen, the 1981 "500" Festival Queen will be there as will many of the drivers.

Miss Peelen will be doing the honors in victory lane after the race, presenting the Borg-Warner trophy to the winner. Prize money for the race is not given out until the night following the race when a victory dinner is celebrated at the Indianapolis Convention Center.

Indianapolis gears up for the "500" a long time before the command, "Gentlemen Start Your Engines." Time trials have been going on since May 6 on the weekends, even though this year they have been plagued by rains.

It's a festival mood, and a great boon to the Indianapolis economy.

Of course, the focal point of the whole thing is the race. It is 500 grueling miles where men and machines are tested to the limit. The weak do not survive at the "500" and neither do the ill-prepared and fainthearted.

The "500" has seen a lot of changes. In recent years, the amount of fuel a driver may use has been reduced to 280 gallons. This, theoretically will give you enough to finish the race, but will not take you a lot further. The standard Indy car gets a whopping 1.8 miles to the gallon.

Of course with reduced fuel allowance there has also been a change in the size and power of the engines. These rules were designed to lower speeds for safety and economy. Each car has a 40 gallon fuel capacity and it is up to the crew chief after the first pit stop to figure out how many laps per tankful the car will get. The average number of pit stops for a race is eight.

Other factors enter into fuel consumption and speed. Caution flags cut down on consumption. This allows the cars to forsake a little fuel efficiency for greater speeds.

Strategy is the name of the game, and winning is the bottom line. The race is worth over a million dollars and the winner certainly has a great time at the victory dinner after the race.

New Sports Series

ABC Sports will introduce a 30-minute magazine series this summer, beginning Sunday, Aug. 16. It will examine many of the issues and developments in the world of sports, profile the famous and not-so-famous athletes creating news, and include coverage and analysis of late-breaking stories.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — Every year about this time, series' regulars' decide to leave the security of a popular show and strike out on their own, and 1981 is no exception. One of the first to announce her defection is ALISON ARNGRIM, who says she'll definitely not return to "LITTLE HOUSE ON THE PRAIRIE."

Another one who's 'iffy' at the moment is HERVE VILLECHAIZE — but for a different reason. Herve's gripes about "FANTASY ISLAND" center around the fact that he feels he's performing under conditions detrimental to his health. He's also stated that there has been a total disregard for safety requirements for a person of his size. The diminutive actor has said, however, that if certain changes are made, he'll be back on the set when production begins for another season.

There'll be about 200,000 life-size posters of JACKLYN AEMAN circulating around the country soon. The "GENERAL HOSPITAL" star has also agreed to pose for a revealing layout for PLAYBOY. But you won't see too much — Jackie's been assured by the mag's publisher, HUGH HEFNER, that she won't have to reveal too much of her gorgeous body!

MORGAN FAIRCHILD's newest love interest is none other than Tinseltown's most daring stuntman, DAR ROBINSON, who first saw the actress in a segment of "FLAMINGO ROAD," then arranged an introduction.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask Them Yourself," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Beware the high cost of working less.

FOR RAYMOND J. DONOVAN, Secretary of Labor

Are shorter working hours becoming prevalent? Would cutting the average workweek cause more harm than good? — F.L., Rapid City, S.D.

● There has been a long-term trend toward shorter hours. A fairly large number of Americans now work fewer than 40 hours each week. Also, there are more and more part-time job opportunities; many people take these jobs from choice, rather than working full time. The desire of workers for more control over their hours has resulted in flexitime and other flexible work schedules. About 12 percent of all full-time nonfarm workers were on flexible work schedules in May 1980. Shortening the work week by law, without reducing weekly pay, obviously would result in increased costs and lower productivity.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is the romance between Princess Caroline of Monaco and the son of Ingrid Bergman fact or fiction? — O.V., Casper, Wyo.

● The last bulletin on the blossoming friendship of the daughter of Princess Grace and Prince Rainier is that actress Ingrid Bergman flew to Monte Carlo to have a tête-à-tête with her son, Robertino Rossellini, 30, a film producer, and Princess Caroline. She is said to have had a three-hour talk with the couple, then reportedly dropped in on Caroline's parents. After Caroline's marriage to Philippe Junot terminated last fall, she was comforted by Robertino, and they have been practically inseparable ever since. In short, the outcome of this romance could end in wedding bells; at least that's what they're saying in Monaco.

UPI

Caroline: Love is many-splendored.

FOR GUNTHER GEBEL-WILLIAMS, animal trainer with Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus

Seeing your son, Buffy, follow your footsteps in the ring made me wonder how you train a 10-year old to train animals. — F.N., Evansdale, Iowa

● His first "lesson" was in not being fearless. I taught him to be wary around the big cats and not to do anything foolhardy. I think he has enough apprehension to keep him safe. Horses and elephants are different, and that's where Buffy is starting.

FOR GRETE WAITZ, Norwegian runner and world record holder for 10,000 meters (6.2 miles)

What changes have you seen in women's competitive running recently? — R.D., Little Rock, Ark.

● When I was training for the '72 Norwegian Olympic team, it was unusual to see another woman on the road. Now women-only races are popular. Next Saturday's L'eggs Mini Marathon in New York will draw 6,000 women, and, for the first time, women will compete in the 1984 Olympics marathon.

FOR JESSICA JAMES, star of Broadway's Gemini

I heard that you just finished making a film (So Fine) with Ryan O'Neal and wondered how he behaves to those who aren't in his top-star category? — E.M., Burlington, Vt.

● To tell you the truth, on the day I was to meet him for the first time, I was shaking from fear because I'd heard all kinds of uncomplimentary things about him. In fact, I kept out of his way. When we finally did meet, I was bowled over because he was patient, helpful, and he smiles a lot.

FOR RONALD K. SIEGEL, Ph.D., psychopharmacologist, UCLA

I read that you doubt the experiences related by people who have been "clinically dead." True? — T.O., Savannah, Ga.

● Many people who suffer near-death accidents or are resuscitated report vivid experiences of an "afterlife." The experiences are real, but they occur in one's mind much as dreams do. They represent a special class of hallucinations caused by stress.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Why is Fred Astaire annoyed with singer Jack Jones? — G.V., Norwich, Conn.

● He isn't annoyed; rather, he is quite amused. Jack tells it this way: "I went up to Astaire at a party and said how thrilled I was to meet him, how much I admired him. Fred reminded me, with great amusement, that we had worked together on Hollywood Palace only two years past. My faux pas embarrassed me, but Astaire just grinned. He's a very good sport."

FOR BEL KAUFMAN, author of Love, etc.

Do you think some married couples rush too quickly into divorce? — T.K., Jamestown, N.Y.

● It should be resorted to when there is no alternative. When staying together becomes impossible because the marriage has deteriorated, people have no other choice. Divorce may appear to some as a panacea, but that isn't the way it is. In reality, they exchange one set of problems with which they cannot cope for another with which they hope they can.

PRO AND CON

Should the Tenure of a President Be Limited to One Six-Year Term?

Question submitted by George Mocol, Mankato, Minn.

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Representative John Conyers Jr., (D.-Mich.) senior member, House Judiciary Committee

Yes. It would free the President from the overwhelming electoral and political pressures that too often force the incumbent to compromise on major policy directions, lay aside long-range policy considerations or equivocate in the implementation of stable foreign-policy goals. It would enable the President to decide the tough issues of governing without the fear of burning a reelection bridge. It would limit the role that money and the media play in the election process. A six-year term has been advocated by all recent Presidents, Democrats and Republicans, from Eisenhower to Carter.

CON Senator Orrin G. Hatch (R.-Utah), chairman, subcommittee on the Constitution

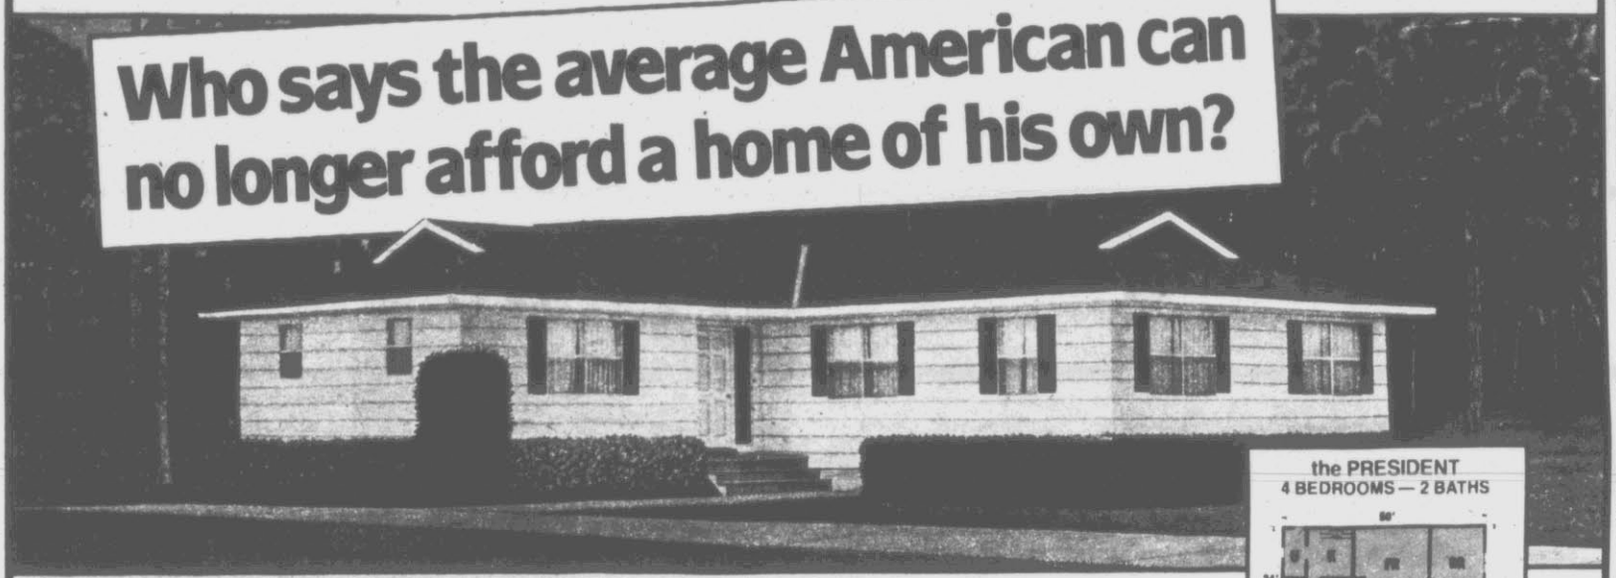

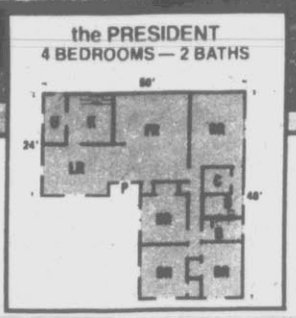

A single six-year Presidential term is too long for a poor President and too short for a good President. The present system has worked tolerably well for two centuries. I don't agree that only politicians who don't have to face reelection can act as "statesmen." One man's "statesmanship" is another's demagoguery. It is equally important that Presidents be held accountable to the electorate. There is no evidence that second-term Presidents, who are unable to succeed themselves, have acted in any more "statesmanlike" a manner than first-term Presidents.

YOU CAN CUT COSTS $15,000 OR MORE

Who says the average American can no longer afford a home of his own?

You've read it in the newspapers, heard it on the radio, you've seen it on television ... everywhere. The experts are trying to convince us that we can no longer afford to build a new home. But don't you believe it ... at least not until you have checked with Jim Walter Homes!

If you own property on which you would like to build, Jim Walter will offer cost-cutting advantages on the cash price of the house he builds for you and with ...

10% annual percentage rate FINANCING!

NO MONEY DOWN!

TO QUALIFIED PROPERTY OWNERS

What does 10% annual percentage rate financing mean to you? Does 3% or 4% more make any difference? You bet it does! On 20-year, $30,000 financing at only 13% ... just 3% more than Jim Walter's annual percentage rate ... you will pay $14,872 MORE! Your monthly payment will be approximately $62.00 MORE. Think of that ... and we're talking of financing only $30,000 over a 20-year period. On a 20-year, $40,000 mortgage at 13% you'll pay back $19,855 MORE than you would pay Jim Walter. That's nearly $20,000 of your money. And with Jim Walter there are NO "POINTS" OR "CLOSING COSTS". The chart gives typical examples:

EXAMPLE 20 YEAR FINANCING WITH NO DOWN PAYMENT

CASH PRICE	JIM WALTER'S ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE	240 MONTHLY PAYMENTS OF	BORROWED ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE	240 MONTHLY PAYMENTS OF APPROX.	DIFFERENCE 20 YEARS APPROX.
$25,000	10%	$241.20	13%	$292	$12,407
$30,000	10%	$289.50	13%	$351	$14,872
$35,000	10%	$337.70	13%	$410	$17,365
$40,000	10%	$385.90	13%	$468	$19,855

Choose from more than 20 models ... Built on your property to almost any stage from the shell to 90% complete!

A low financing rate is not the only cost-saving advantage offered by Jim Walter. We will build to almost any stage, from the shell home (unfinished inside) to one that is 90% complete. This means you can cut your costs to the very bone by doing some or all of the inside finishing. The more you do, the more money you'll save. Just tell us where you want Jim Walter to stop building, then you take over and finish the rest.

So if your goal is to get a good solid value, but to keep your costs to a bare minimum, be sure to check with Jim Walter before deciding on a builder. Call, stop by or send the coupon to our nearest display park today.

COVER STORY

BOBBY AND AL UNSER
Fear and Brotherly Love In the Fast Lane

The brothers Unser have won five Indys—and have also seen an uncle and an older brother die in fiery crashes. Fear may be their copilot, but they shrug it off as "just a way of life."

By Mark Goodman

Sibling rivalry sure ain't what it used to be. For instance, we no longer have royal pretenders locking their ambitious brethren away in remote dungeons. Yet healthy fraternal combat is very much alive in American sports. Walter and Eddie Payton regularly run through one another's teammates when the Chicago Bears and Minnesota Vikings square off, and Joe and Phil Niekro are the most famous mound rivals since the Perry brothers.

If only because big-time auto racing is the fierce, one-on-one competition that it is, the keenest such rivalry must be that between Bobby Unser, 47, and his kid brother, Al, who turns 42 this week — right after the pair take to the road once again on Sunday in the granddaddy of racing, the Indianapolis 500. They are part of the traditional field of 33 of the world's fastest racing machines which will line up in 11 tight rows to await the command, "Gentlemen, start your engines!" Two hundred laps later, a winner will emerge from what remains of the howling field and take the checkered flag for the most coveted trophy and richest purse (over $300,000 to the winner) in U.S. auto racing.

Will it be one of the Unsers?

Bobby & son Robby: "How can Al get scared when he keeps his eyes closed?"

Ed Zweizig

Chances are at least fair, since between them they have won five of the last 13 Indys, as well as a slew of other driving championships over the past two decades. Bobby won Indy first, in 1968, when he threaded his way through a spectacular nine-car collision to win in the rain. Al came on to post back-to-back victories in 1970-71. Bobby won in another rain-lashed finish in 1975, but Al topped that in 1978 with his third victory en route to winning auto racing's Triple Crown — Pocono, Indianapolis and Ontario (Calif.).

In those years, the brothers — who hail from Albuquerque, N.M. — clashed with furious regularity. For instance, there was the Kent Oil 150 at Watkins Glen, N.Y., in 1979, when Bobby swept to victory by pressuring his kid brother into mechanical difficulty. "I saw fluid coming out of Al's car," remembers Bobby. "There was no use passing him, but I pushed him hard enough that he had to run real hard. If the car had a weakness, I had to make it come to life." Sure enough, Al's gear box jammed, and Bobby took the checkered flag.

If that sounds as savage as throwing baby brother into said dungeon, remember that auto racing is a game in which no quarter is asked, no prisoners taken. "We're grown-up people," Bobby says. "If I can't win, I would like to see Al win. But this is a professional business. I hate to see him have a problem. But I'd be a liar if I said I was not happy to see him having a problem when I was running second."

Al adds: "Remember, there's no feeling better than competing against your own brother, to see if he's better. Besides, if I fall off, I can go root for somebody else when I get to the infield."

Of course, competition does not mean blood lust, and Al and Bobby are two of the safest and sanest drivers in their perilous trade. When one drops off, the first thing he does is signal the other that he is all right. And, as both are popular and notorious track cut-ups, they tend to ride each other just as hard off the track. "Bobby can go faster," says Al, "because he can hold his breath longer than anyone else I know." "And Al," responds Bobby, "never gets scared in a race car. How can a guy get scared when he keeps his eyes closed?"

Wide World

Says three-time winner Al: "Bobby can go faster because he can hold his breath longer than anyone else I know."

Beyond the wisecracks, there is a deep fraternal affection and professional respect. They talk cars very little because they drive for different teams (Al for Bobby Hillin's Longhorn racing team, Bobby for Roger Pensky's). Says Bobby: "Every decision he makes, outside of what he does to his car, we discuss." On the track, says Bobby, the more dramatic of the two drivers: "Al doesn't do anything real splashy. But he knows how to pick his spots, and he keeps the car together. Some people say that kind of racing is dull, but the checks all cash the same." Adds Al: "Bobby is probably a harder charger than I am, but we both drive the devil out of every race we're in. This isn't a sport where you can take anything easy."

No, it isn't. It's the most dangerous sport yet created by post-Industrial Revolution man, and there is a hard core of truth in Bobby's gallows humor. Before his last Indy victory in 1978, Al had wiped out his car in a crash at the Texas International Speedway. (He won Indy with a back-up car.) Bobby's opening rounds at Indy found him smashed up against the dreaded wall in 1963 and caught one year later in the second-lap disaster that claimed the lives of drivers Eddie Sachs and Dave MacDonald. Still, they both stick to the racer's code of looking fear in the eye and not worrying about it. Says Al: "I think all of us have fear at times. I don't want to get hurt — no way. But they wouldn't pay me the money they do if racing was 100-percent safe." Bobby adds: "It's just a way of life. You don't say a fish is brave to swim or a bird is brave to fly."

Well, fish gotta swim and birds gotta fly. But nature has not dictated that the Unsers gotta love those screaming machines till they die. Still, if racing can be said to be in anybody's blood, it's in the Unsers. Their father and two uncles were drivers, as was their older brother Jerry. One uncle was killed on a track, and Jerry died at Indy in a practice run in 1959. By that time, however, both of the younger Unser brothers had already charted their dirt-flying, oil-spraying course.

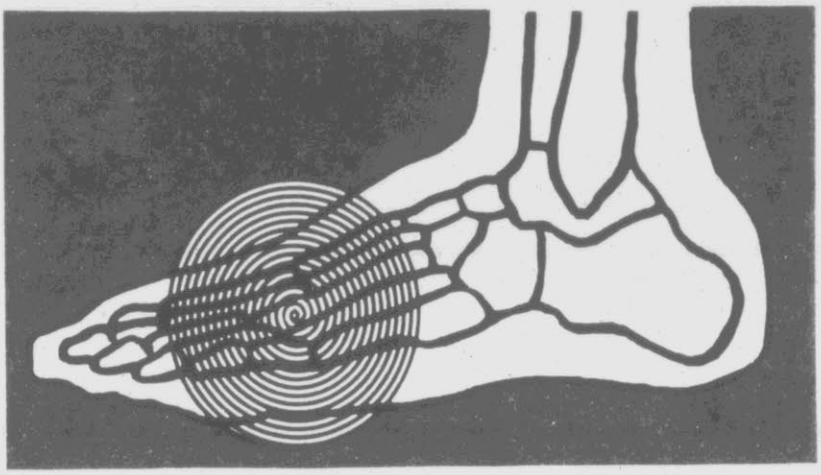

Bobby began at 15, racing stock cars on New Mexico dirt tracks. He also determined early that he would conquer fear in his own way. Terrified of heights, he began entering the Pikes Peak hill climb and won it nine times. As he puts it: "I never got to the edge and looked down." When the 1974 Phoenix crash left him with a broken foot, a smashed hand and several cracked ribs, he simply said: "I know why I crashed, and because I know, I have no reason to fear it."

When Bobby fell on some lean times, going three straight years without a victory, Al started his climb to the top. But even he had a rocky start — he broke his leg in a motorcycle accident on the eve of the 1969 Indy race and had to drop out.

Both men are perfectionists and fiercely independent, and both have changed driving teams in the last several years. Both have divorced and remarried, and each has three children — including a pair of boys named Robby and Al who are already beginning to burn up dirt and sprint tracks.

Insiders say that Bobby has a better chance than Al at Indy this year because Al has had problems with his English-built Longhorn, qualifying only 11th at Phoenix earlier in the spring. Oh, but Indy breeds no special rivalry, the two maintain. As Al puts it: "We just feel it's important to keep it in the family." Adds Bobby: "Just be sure to spell the name right." FW

My Feet Were Killing Me...Until I Found Relief in Germany!

IT was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted —see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Germany with my own countrymen.

In the last nine years over a quarter million Americans of all ages—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

MADE FOR YOUR FEET ALONE

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom formed and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

NO RISK OFFER

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, pain in the balls of your feet, burning nerve ends, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet. Flexible Featherspring will bring you relief with every step you take or your money back.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Germany can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. No salesman will call. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE MIRACLE:

Received my wife's Featherspring two days ago. They are super–neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years; already no pain. Incidentally, her sore knee is much better . . . As a retired physician, this result is amazing. Dr.-C.O.C./Tucson, Arizona

"Since I've been wearing Featherspring I have been able to wear shoes I wasn't able to wear before. Mainly because of my corns and calluses. Thanks a hundred times over."
A.H./East Orange, New Jersey

"My husband felt a great relief and no more pain. They are truly an answer to our prayers. Only wish that he had heard of them twenty years ago."
Mrs. F.J.S./Metairie, Louisiana

"I have been wearing your Featherspring Foot Supports for over a year now, and I just want to let you know the great comfort I am experiencing. I have recommended them to many of our Sisters suffering from foot trouble."
Sister Mary Patrona C.S.J.

HEALTH

Protecting Your Family Against Eye Injuries

By Paula Dranov

Each year approximately two million Americans suffer eye injuries. Of these, some 300,000 are severe enough to require medical treatment. In fact, eye mishaps are among the injuries treated most frequently in hospital emergency rooms.

Nearly one million Americans have lost some or all of their sight due to injuries, and this year, another 40,000 will be added to the toll.

Most of these injuries need never have happened. In fact, authorities estimate that 90 percent of those that occur can be prevented.

About 45 percent of all eye injuries occur in and around the home. Some are inflicted by products used in workshops or in making household repairs. Others are caused by detergents or caustic chemicals. Still others are brought on by items used in or near the eyes — contact lenses, hair brushes, combs and sunlamps.

The biggest troublemakers are slivers of metal, nails, tacks and screws. These are responsible for more than 100,000 eye injuries a year, most of them affecting men. In general, men are far more vulnerable to eye injuries suffered in and around the house than women, particularly when the injury is due to bits of metal, construction materials or workshop tools. In fact, men are the victims in 64 percent of all household eye accidents. Such mishaps can be prevented, however, by wearing protective goggles (which can be ordered at your optical shop).

"Women are somewhat luckier than men as far as eye injuries are concerned," explains California ophthalmologist Dr. Byron H. Demorest, speaking for the American Association of Ophthalmology. But, he adds, "they are prone to other problems such as scratches from long fingernails and irritation from cosmetics."

Mishaps with contact lenses are the second-ranking cause of home eye injuries — and most of these affect women. Women are also injured more often than men by accidental splashes of ammonia, bleach and oven cleaners — these are responsible for more than 18,000 painful and dangerous burns to the eye each year. To protect yourself from these accidents it's important to read the directions on package labels carefully and to make sure that spray nozzles are directed away from the face.

Some 160,000 school-age children suffer eye injuries each year and an estimated 71,000 youngsters under age 15 are treated in hospital emergency rooms for product-related accidents. The objects most hazardous to youngsters in this age group include baseballs, pencils and pieces of metal and glass. Most of the injuries occur when children are playing unsupervised.

Surprisingly, relatively few eye injuries can be attributed to automobile accidents — car accidents account for only 8 percent of all injuries serious enough to result in vision impairment. Far more mishaps are related to sports, particularly baseball, tennis, squash, racquetball and basketball. In fact, the growing popularity of racquetball (it's estimated that some seven million Americans now play) has been boosting the toll of injuries due to racquet sports. Dr. Frank J. Weinstock of Canton, Ohio, warns that an injury resulting from being hit in the eye by a ball should never be ignored.

Even a simple black eye can be a sign of underlying damage, Dr. Weinstock explains. Other danger signals are cuts around the eyelids and pupils that are dilated or otherwise irregular. These injuries are among the easiest to prevent via safety glasses or eyeguards for players

First Aid for Eye Emergencies

Chemical Burns

- Flood the eye with water, keeping it open as wide as possible. Continue for at least 15 minutes.

Specks in the Eye

- Lift upper eyelid outward and down over the lower lid.
- Let tears wash out speck.
- If speck doesn't wash out, bandage eye lightly and see a doctor.
- Do NOT rub the eye.

Blows to the Eye

- Apply cold compresses for 15 minutes and then hourly as needed to reduce pain and swelling.
- See a doctor for a black eye or any discoloration — this can mean internal damage.

Cuts and Punctures of Eye or Eyelid

- Bandage lightly and see a doctor at once.
- Do NOT wash out eye.
- Do NOT try to remove an object stuck in eye.

Although racquet sports are the fastest-growing cause of sports-related eye injuries, far more occur during baseball and basketball games. Youngsters, particularly those between the ages of 5 and 14, are most vulnerable to baseball injuries, while the 15- to 24-year-old age group is at greater risk in basketball games. Basketball accidents most commonly occur under the net when arms, elbows and fingers are flying. Los Angeles Laker center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar suffered two eye injuries under these circumstances and has been wearing protective goggles ever since, a precaution doctors advise all players to take.

Still another frequent cause of serious eye damage are the thousands of battery explosions that occur every year in the course of jump-starting cars. The National Society to Prevent Blindness reports that two-thirds of the injuries suffered in these explosions involve the eyes and recommends that anyone working with batteries wear protective goggles to keep flying fragments and chemicals out of the eyes. From the big sky country of Montana, Elaine Kettner sends a quick, after-work supper dish.

BACON SPAGHETTI

1 pkg. (1 lb.) spaghetti
1 lb. bacon
3 eggs
½ teaspoon garlic salt
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
Few twists freshly ground black pepper

1. Cook spaghetti according to package directions; drain.
2. While spaghetti cooks, cook bacon until crisp. Drain bacon and crumble; save 2 tablespoons bacon drippings.
3. Beat eggs, add garlic salt, Parmesan cheese and pepper; beat again.
4. Quickly toss hot, drained spaghetti with reserve bacon drippings. Add egg-cheese mixture and toss. Sprinkle with crumbled bacon. Serve promptly.

Makes 4 generous servings

Approximate cost: $2.75
Approximate cost per serving: 65¢

The Kettners read FAMILY WEEKLY in the Gazette, Billings, Mont. Elaine writes, "This meal, with a salad, dessert and beverage figured in is well under $5."

The family recipe file of Donna Phillipo from Framingham, Mass., provides a hearty meal-in-a-bowl chowder.

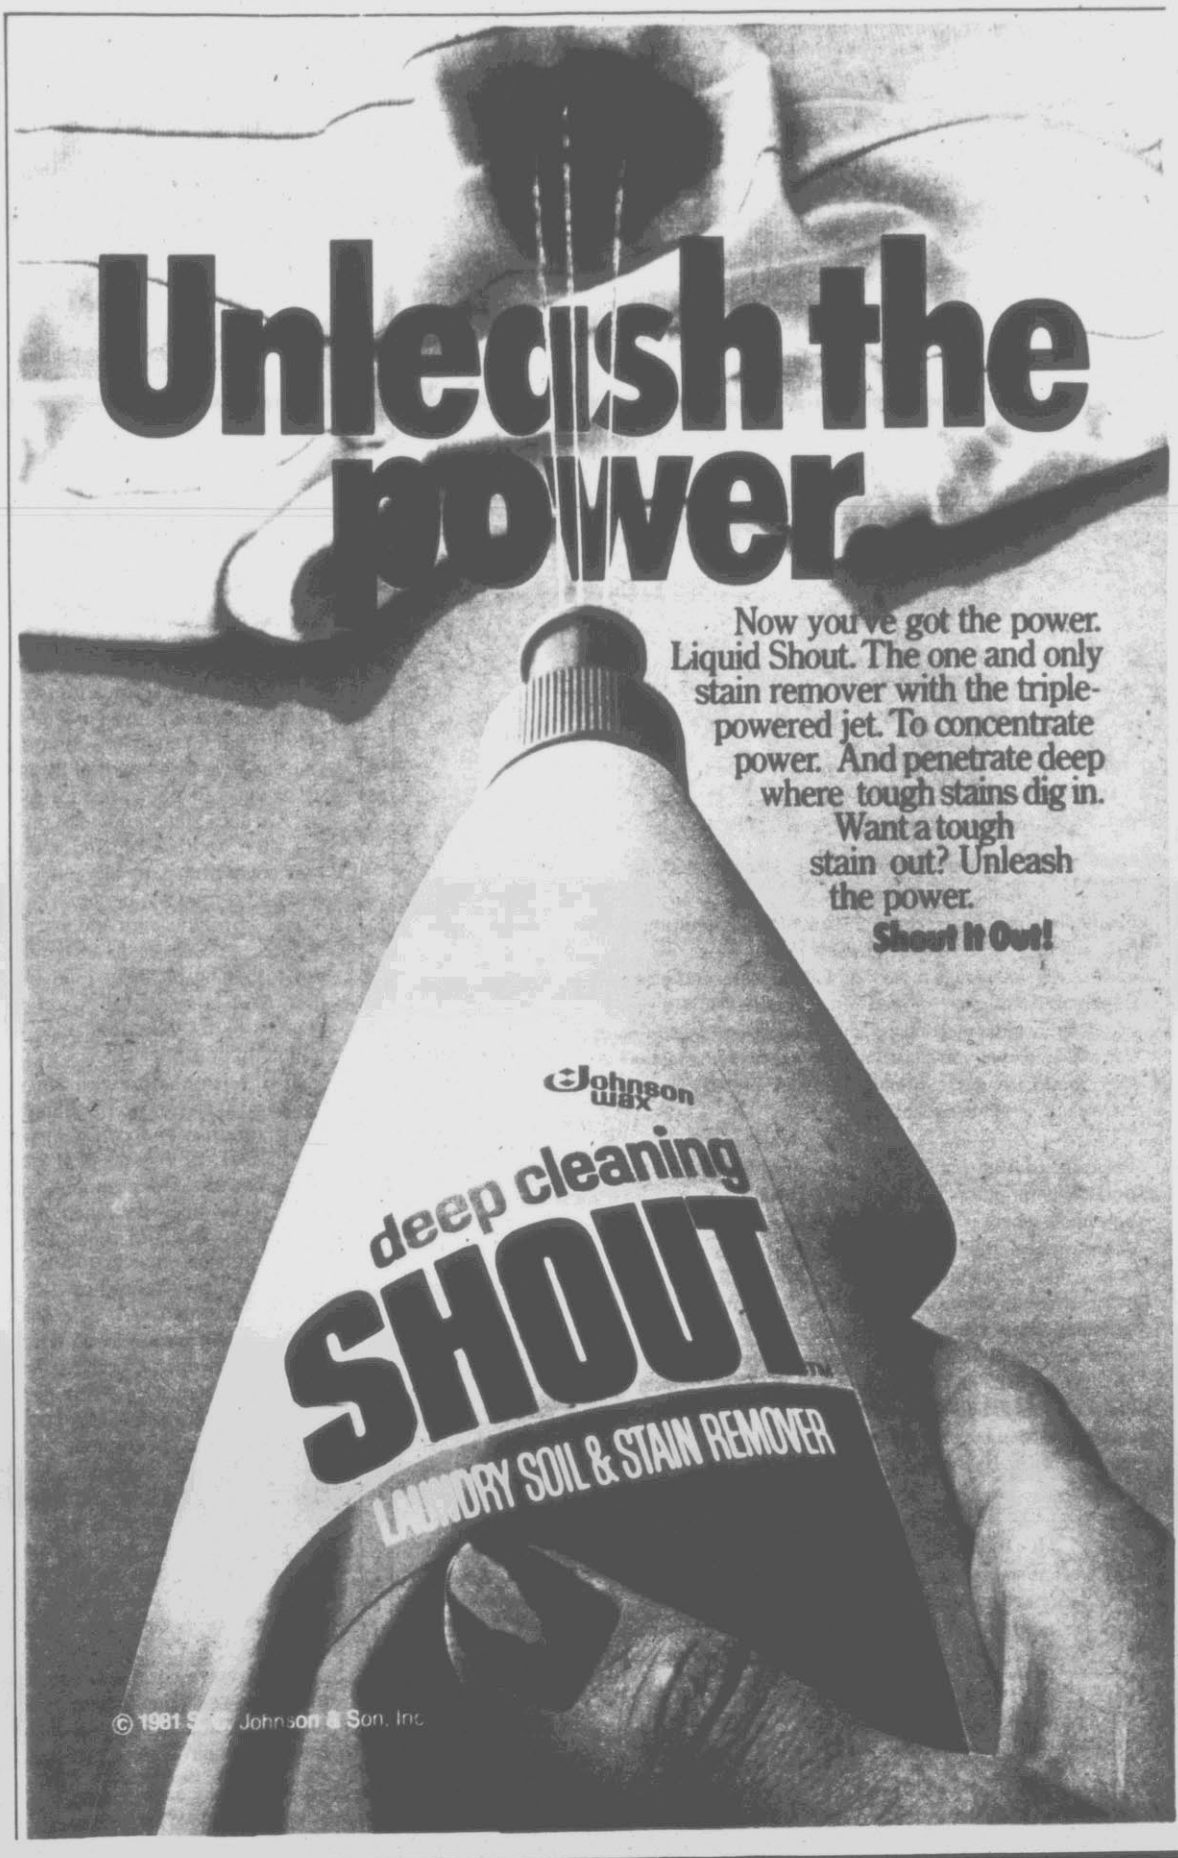

HOT DOG CHOWDER

2 lbs. all-purpose potatoes, peeled and cut into 1-inch chunks
1 lb. carrots, peeled and sliced
1 onion, cut lengthwise
1 teaspoon celery salt
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
2 tablespoons dry basil leaves or ¼ cup chopped basil
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 qts. water
2 cans (10¾-oz. size) tomato soup
1 lb. frankfurters, sliced

1. Place potatoes, carrots and onion in 1-quart Dutch oven or stock pot. Add celery salt, salt, sugar, pepper, basil, parsley and water. Heat to boiling; reduce heat and simmer for 20 minutes or until vegetables are tender.
2. Add soup and frankfurters, stir, return to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes. Makes about 4 quarts

Approximate cost: $3.75
Approximate cost per serving: 90¢

Donna writes, "This recipe — we call it 'hot dog stew' — was handed down in my family from my great grandmother. Enjoy!" The Phillipos read FAMILY WEEKLY in the Middlesex News, Framingham, Mass.

MONEY

How to Get Your Money's Worth

By Susan Gordon

Shopping for major purchases today often seems like a major gamble. Yet it is possible to hedge your bets in the marketplace, says Robert Tuttle, director of information and systems development for the Council of Better Business Bureaus in Washington, D.C. By taking a planned approach to buying, you can greatly improve your chances of being satisfied with a purchase.

1) Comparison shop. Quality, not price, should be your primary concern. How can you determine quality? Ask friends for personal endorsements, an invaluable guide to quality, and don't overlook advertising as a tool for comparing the claims that companies make about their products. Also, take advantage of sales people's expertise. Ask them to explain what makes their product better than the competition's.

Then, examine the product carefully. Is it well made and durable, or does it seem poorly constructed?

Ask about a guarantee (or warranty — the terms are used interchangeably). Read it carefully — and understand it — before you buy. It may be worthwhile to pay more for a comparable item that comes with one. On the other hand, a "limited warranty" may cover only parts that rarely break down and may not be worth much.

Also check delivery and installation charges as well as finance rates, if you're buying on time. Find out the cost of a service call. Add these charges to the purchase price when you comparison-shop.

2) Choose a store with an established procedure for handling consumer queries and complaints. "My family looks for stores that have a consumer affairs department," Tuttle says. Most long-established and reliable ones do. And make sure the store's refund policy meets your needs. Will they refund cash or give store credit only?

3) Use the phone to do your preliminary legwork — you'll save time and gas money. You can find out whether an item is in stock, whether it comes with a guarantee, whether credit cards are accepted.

4) Take advantage of sales but only if you've already done your homework. Unless you've comparison-shopped, you're better off passing up the sale. The sale price at one store could be the regular price at another.

5) Be extra-cautious about any purchase requiring payment in advance. In the home-improvements area, a small contractor frequently needs money up front to buy materials. Fine, says Tuttle, but never pay the full amount in advance. He suggests paying a third of the amount when you enter into the contract, a third midway through and the final third after completion of the job.

If you're asked to make a deposit, know what the terms of the agreement are. It may be nonrefundable.

6) Complain effectively when your expectations aren't met. Follow these guidelines:

- Find the right person to complain to. Start with the person who sold you the item. If he or she can't help you, ask to speak to the supervisor or consumer affairs representative if the store has one. Your chances of being helped are better if you stay calm and avoid any hostility.
- Show proof of purchase — a receipt or canceled check. Tuttle's family tapes an envelope to the wall for all receipts.
- Voice your expectations of the product and the reasons why it failed to meet them.
- State what redress you want: a refund, exchange or credit.
- If you meet opposition, try "broken record," an assertiveness training technique. For instance, if the store manager says he can only credit your account — not give you a cash refund — say, "I understand the store policy, but I want my money back." Then if he says, "I'm sorry, I can only give you credit," you say, "I know that, but I want my money back." Keep at it. It does work.
- Take your problem all the way to the top, if need be, in a letter to the president or owner of the firm or manufacturing company.

Unless you've comparison-shopped, you're better off passing up a sale.

State your case, as above, enclosing copies (never originals) of receipts and explaining how you would like the matter resolved. Include your address and phone number.

- If you get no response to your letters, call the nearest Better Business Bureau office or write to the Council of Better Business Bureaus in Washington, D.C.

Most B.B.B.'s provide an arbitration service: Both parties involved agree to an arbiter who makes a binding decision in the case.

Don't give up. You and your family are consumers all your lives; adopting good buying habits now will always pay off. FW

HERE ARE 133 SURPRISE WAYS TO GET MONEY FROM WASHINGTON D.C.

The Amazing Lost Money— Secret Of The U.S. Government

Does Uncle Sam Owe You Money You Don't Even Know About?

DATELINE WASHINGTON — There is a very good chance you have some money coming from the U.S. Government. There is an even better chance you don't know why the government owes you this money or exactly how much you will get.

The amount may surprise you. It could easily be a lot more than you would ever imagine. There is an honest chance you may have enough coming to retire on for the rest of your life.

Actually, the U.S. Government gives away so much money every year it can't even keep track of it all. Much of this money gets lost in the shuffle. For example, last year alone, 135 million dollars went unclaimed because the people who had that money coming simply didn't know how to get it. And this is what happened in just one U.S. Payment Program. Just imagine how much money goes unclaimed in all the different programs.

The amount is astronomical!

Some of this money probably belongs to you. It doesn't matter if you are young or old, male or female, employed or unemployed, black or white, rich or poor, married or single or whatever. To make a long story short, the chances are very good you have tax-free cash coming from the government that is just sitting there waiting for you.

But don't worry. Before you finish reading this page you'll know exactly how to find out for sure. In the meantime, please keep an open mind. At least don't disqualify yourself before you know the facts.

The first thing you need to know is that there are at least 133 perfectly legal ways to get a check out of Uncle Sam. Some of these U.S. Payment Programs are common knowledge but many of them are almost unknown to the average American. Not one person in 1000 knows about all of them. Here are some examples:

- Did you or any member of your family earn less than $8,000.00 last year? If so, you may have a surprise $1,000.00 check just waiting for you.
- Are you retired? If you know how, you may be able to get $587.00 extra every month over and above your Social Security check. (Nearly 2 million people are doing this right now but most other people don't know about it.)
- Are you on Social Security? With the right information, you may be able to jack up your payments to $848.80 every month just by filling out a simple form.
- Are you under 65? Even if you are, you may be able to start getting Social Security right away without any more waiting.
- Would you like to move? If you know how, you may be able to get a $22,000 government loan to buy a new house.
- Do you want to stay put? There's a good chance you can get a $3,500 check to fix up the place you have now.
- Would you like to get a $25,000 start-your-own-business loan with 15 years to pay it back? It is quite possible if you know how.
- Are you a renter? You can get 25% to 75% of your rent paid by Uncle Sam if you qualify and if you know how to apply.
- Do you want to write a play or paint a picture or make a film? Maybe you can get a check for $11,000 to help you out.
- Do you want to go back to school? If so, there is a good chance the government will send you $352 every month to help you do just that.

It goes on and on. The above examples are just for openers. There are many, many other ways (all legal) to get a check out of the government. Some of these checks are for as little as $35.00 per month. But some of them are for as much as $15,000.00 or $50,000.00. The average, however, is about $220.00 per family per month.

This is not welfare or charity. The government owes you this money. This is what you rightfully have coming to you for being a good citizen and paying your taxes. If you do not get your share of this money, you are only cheating yourself.

It's rather easy to get this money but you must know what you are doing. You need to know exactly what to do and how to do it.

Most people are in the dark about all this. That's why so much of the money goes unclaimed. In fact, most people don't have any idea how to get everything they have coming from even the very well known payment programs.

Take Social Security for instance: did you know the odds are 2 to 1 in your favor you have a check coming from Social Security right now — even though you may be years and years away from age 65?

Here's why. Statistics show that two out of three people overpay their Social Security taxes. This means that all these people can get a refund immediately if they only know how to apply.

There's more. Do you know how students between the ages of 18 and 22 can get Social Security cash benefits? Do you know how to make your whole family eligible for Social Security — even your youngest children? Do you know how to cash in on Social Security even if you've never paid a penny into it? Do you know how to get the special Social Security benefits that are only for veterans? Do you know how to increase the amount of your payment if you are already on Social Security? As you've already read, with the right information you may be able to jack up your payments to $848.80 every month just by filling out a simple form!

It goes on and on. It would be easy to use up this entire page just on Social Security. But let's move on. There are many other payment programs you should know about.

Are you a veteran? Did you know you might be able to get as much as $264.00 every single month for "bad luck" that happened to you after you left the service? Don't laugh. One and a half million men are already cashing in on this little-known bonus.

You know, information about tax-free government cash is especially important if you are retired or planning to retire. As you know, prices keep going up and up. There seems to be no end in sight.

This is especially bad if you are on a fixed income. However, if you learn how to get all this bonus cash from the government it can help a lot. In some cases where medical expenses are concerned, it could make the difference between life and death. At the very least, some of this extra government cash could make your retirement a lot more pleasant.

And please don't forget – if you have the right information and you are already retired, you may be able to get $587.00 extra every month over and above your Social Security check just like 2 million other people are doing right now!

All this is just the tip of the iceberg. The U.S. Government handles so much money it probably misplaces or loses more cash every year than most other countries are worth altogether. This is easy to understand when you realize just how much is involved. Here are a few more facts for your consideration:

- In just one U.S. Payment Program 31 million Americans get a check every month.
- In another, 19 million more get monthly money.
- In yet another, 11 million get money in the mail just like clockwork.
- And, of course, there are those 5 million Americans who get tax-free cash every time they tear off another page from their calendar.

There are many more examples just like these. Please remember — there are at least 133 legal ways to get a check from the government and you deserve to know about every one of them.

Guess who pays for all this? The answer, of course, is you. You have paid for every one of these programs with your taxes all these years. You deserve this money coming back to you so don't be bashful about going after what is rightfully yours.

As you know, inflation is now a serious problem. There is a real danger of higher and higher unemployment. Some people believe we are headed for a depression. Who knows? But one thing is sure: the U.S. Government is never going to stop spending money and part of this money belongs to you. Please don't cheat yourself. It is really quite simple to get your fair share. You'll learn how in a moment. But above all, don't make the mistake of guessing you do not qualify for some of this money. No matter who or what you are (as long as you are a U.S. citizen) you can probably get a surprise amount of government cash immediately.

Unfortunately, the average citizen has been kept in the dark about all this. Up till now there was simply no practical way he could find out about all these little-known cash benefits.

Now there is a way. Now there is a brand new book that tells all about 133 perfectly legal ways to get a check out of Uncle Sam!

It is simple and easy to read. It tells you exactly how to get these checks that you have coming. It gives you all the necessary addresses and government telephone numbers you will need. It tells you how to qualify, who to contact and what to say.

Will this book help you? Will it help you make sure that you are one of the taxpayers that does not get cheated? Here is how you can find out without any risk at all.

Go ahead and order the book by mail. Start reading as soon as you get it. In the first 5 minutes if you don't find out a way to get a surprise government check for at least $500, you can send the book back and the publisher will return your payment to you quietly and without question!

If you are extra skeptical, you can postdate your check or money order by 30 days. If you do this, the publisher promises and guarantees not to deposit it for at least that amount of time. Then, if you decide to return the book, the publisher will send back your uncashed check or money order with no questions asked.

To order, write your name and address and the words "Government Cash" on a piece of paper and send it with $9.95 to:

Dept. US724 P.O. Box 1004
343 Millburn Avenue
Millburn, New Jersey 07041

Your book will be sent promptly by return mail. If you have any questions, you can call (201) 744-3777. Checks and money orders should be made payable to The Millburn Book Corp. (It is not a good idea to mail cash.)

COMING ATTRACTIONS

Jiggle may be out, macho in, for the new TV season, says a survey of 85 pilot episodes the three major networks are considering. Only a handful will show up come September, but some trends are emerging, notes Phil Burrell, who did the survey for advertising's Dancer Fitzgerald Sample, Inc. For one, there's the absence of risqué comedy, à la Three's Company. "Ratings for comedies revolving around cleavage and coy naughtiness have been steadily slipping," says Burrell.

A few other developments to watch for: Action shows with macho appeal in the form of motorcyclists, firemen and spys; series inspired by movies — besides the already-aired Private Benjamin, pilots have been done based on Fame and Norma Rae; the return of star performers such as James Garner, Angie Dickinson and Dick Van Dyke, and finally, NBC is looking at three shows all dealing with men of the cloth, including Bungle Abbey, the story of seven offbeat monks.

RAGING BULL

Are you listening, John Travolta, and the thousands of others out there hooked on riding mechanical bulls. Be careful, you could wind up with a bad case of "Urban Cowboy Myoglobinuria."

In a recent letter to the Journal of the American Medical Association, two California doctors coined the term to describe the case of a 30-year-old man with myoglobinuria — blood in the urine after vigorous, prolonged exercise. It seems his problem resulted from spending an evening guzzling beer at a local country and western bar and then taking three 10-second spins on a mechanical bull set at "professional" speed.

HAIRY WORK

Now that you've read our cover story on the racing Unser brothers, you may wonder what Indy 500 drivers do when they're not risking fiery death at 160 miles an hour. Well, Larry "Boom Boom" Cannon spends his off-hours cutting, shampooing and teasing hair.

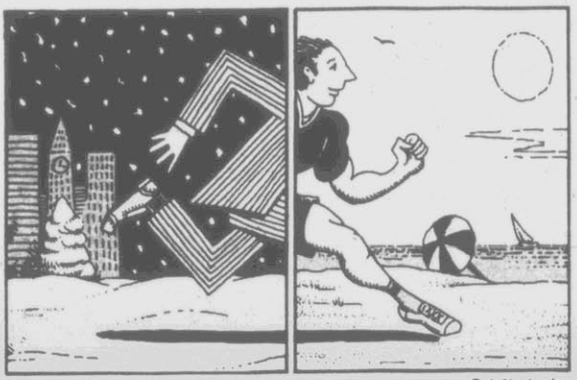

Cannon, 44, has been racing for 23 years (Sunday will be his fifth try at Indy) and also operates his own unisex hairstyling salon in Danville, Ill. And the burly father of two sees nothing unusual about his dichotomous careers. "Back in high school, I said that one day I would be a barber and also race in the Indy 500," he notes. "And at my 25th reunion recently, everybody said I was the only one who was doing what he had predicted."

WARM-UP WRAP-UP

Memorial Day weekend traditionally brings the start of warm-weather activities. But before you jump right in, some precautions are in order. For openers, expose your skin to the sun gradually, especially if you're fair-skinned. Secondly, to reduce the risk of heat cramps, drink plenty of liquids and increase your salt intake.

Exercising too much after a long layoff can surely bring on the summertime blues if it causes torn or pulled muscles. The best prevention is simply to warm up first by stretching all your muscles through various exercises such as toe-touches, explains Pat Lamboni, head athletic trainer at Catholic University. And start your fitness program slowly, building up gradually to tougher workouts.

"Muscles can be compared to a piece of plastic," says Lamboni. "If the plastic is cold, it's much harder to bend without snapping. But when warm, it's flexible and bends easily without breaking."

SEX AND THE SINGLE BOY

Today's college man seems a bit confused in his attitude toward women and sex: In a survey of 300 men from the class of '81 done for Nancy Friday, author of Men in Love, a large proportion of men seem to enjoy the thought of sexually aggressive women. For example, 82 percent said they would be "excited" if a woman took the initiative during sex, and 66 percent said they would be "excited" if a woman made a sexual overture toward them. However, well over half of the young men expressed a preference for marrying a woman with little sexual experience: Twenty-six percent want to marry virgins, and 30 percent say they prefer their wives to have had only one lover or "a few."

ROUGH WAVES

Increasingly, microwaves are entering our environment from sources like TV towers and radar equipment and, thus far, no maximum safety level has been determined. But now, a new study finds that low, presumably safe levels of microwaves cause rats to become lethargic and reluctant to engage in exploratory activities, such as searching out food.

Dr. Robert Lebovitz, associate professor of physiology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School, explains that even low radiation levels can cause slight body-temperature changes — a physiological factor known to affect behavior. (Lebovitz compares it to turning off the air-conditioning on a steamy day. You simply would not work as well.) But since microwaves heat from the inside, Lebovitz theorizes that perhaps the body does not perceive the microwave heat and thus does not react accordingly, causing the lethargy.

It's no trick to have money disappear, but here is a way to harness its elusive qualities for the amusement of friends:

Ask someone to place a small coin on a flat surface. Place a tumbler filled with water over the coin. Remove the tumbler once or twice to show that the coin is still there.

Now, place your hand over the tumbler, as shown above, and ask guests to look through the glass for the coin. To all outward appearances the coin will have disappeared.

FINAL TOUCH! To top off this graduation scene, draw connecting lines from dot 1 to dot 2 to dot 3 and so on.

Our Story: CAMELOT IS BESIEGED BY MORDRED, KING ARTHUR'S HALF BROTHER. THE STORY OF THE NEXT THREE MONTHS IS ONE OF COURAGE AND COWARDICE, OF TREACHERY AND SELF-SACRIFICE. THE DETAILS WE WILL NEVER KNOW, FOR THE ARCHIVES WERE DESTROYED DURING THE 'GREAT SACK.'

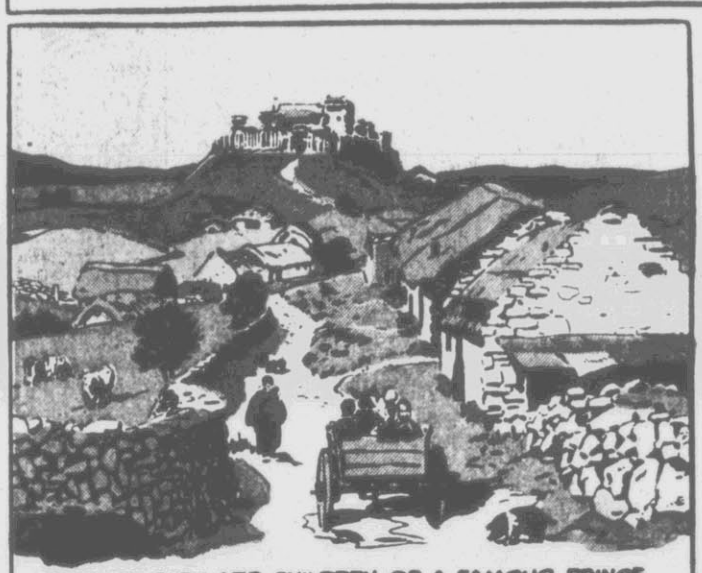

BUT IT IS RECORDED IN ONE OF THE EPICS THAT GALAN AND HIS TWIN SISTERS, KAREN AND VALETA, ARRIVED SAFELY IN IRELAND WITH THE OTHER CHILDREN OF CAMELOT.

WHAT A STRANGE LAND IT IS, WITH ITS SEVEN KINGDOMS AND GREAT ELK AND HILL FORTS CROWNING EVERY KNOLL. NO GOTH OR HUN EVER VENTURED HERE. INSTEAD, THE NATIVES FIGHT HAPPILY AMONG THEMSELVES, BURYING THEIR FALLEN WARRIORS STANDING UP TO FACE THE 'ENEMY.'

BECAUSE THEY ARE CHILDREN OF A FAMOUS PRINCE, GALAN AND THE TWINS LODGE WITH RORY MOR, HIGH KING OF ALL IRELAND. THE TWINS ARE NOT IMPRESSED WITH THE ROYAL CITADEL OF TARA. "IF THIS IS ONE OF THEIR PALACES," KAREN WHISPERS, "I WOULD HATE TO LIVE IN A HOUSE."

RORY MOR IS A BEAR OF A MAN. "UNDER MY ROOF YOU WILL LIVE AS WE LIVE," HE EXPLAINS. "YOU WILL WEAR OUR CLOTHING AND LEARN YOUR LESSONS FROM DAWN UNTIL MIDDAY. AFTER THAT WE WILL HUNT, ALL OF US. IN IRELAND, WOMEN EVEN FIGHT WARS. AFTER SUPPER YOU WILL SLEEP." THE TWINS ARE SUDDENLY HOMESICK.

BUT GALAN EXPLORES THE BUILDINGS OF TARA. AND IN ONE OF THEM HE RECEIVES A GREAT FRIGHT. "HELP ME," CRIES THE VOICE FROM BELOW.
