Another Israeli Drone Is Downed By Syrian SAM

JERUSALEM (AP) — Syrian missiles shot down an Israeli pilotless reconnaissance plane over Lebanon today, the third such downing since the Syrian-Israeli missile crisis began 27 days ago, the Israeli military command said.

A military communique said the drone was shot down over the Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon by a missile battery positioned in neighboring Syria.

The pattern of the downing followed that of previous such incidents, reported May 14 and May 22.

The communique said the drone, of undisclosed make, was on "a routine reconnaissance mission" over the Bekaa Valley, flashpoint of tensions between the 22,000-man Syrian force in Lebanon and the country's Israeli-backed Christian troops.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he had not revealed anything new in saying that Soviet advisers accompanied Syrian troops in Lebanon. Begin said it was an "old piece of news" that had been "blown up" by the media.

"With the bigger (Syrian) units, the Soviet experts march together wherever they go," Begin said.

The Israeli leader also told reporters as he left his office that U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib, who has been in the Middle East for 19 days trying to cool the Israel-Syria crisis, was waiting for word from Saudi Arabia on the Saudis' talks with Syria.

After Sunday's Cabinet decision to give Habib more time to attempt a diplomatic solution, Begin charged for the first time in public that Soviet advisers are working with Syria's 22,000-man army in Lebanon.

The Syrians have "3,600 tanks with their Soviet advisers who accompany the Syrian units in Lebanon," Begin said in a speech in Tel Aviv. He did not elaborate.

Begin's claim followed a charge earlier Sunday by the Israeli military command that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy's radical pro-Soviet government has several hundred military personnel in Lebanon and has given SAM-9 anti-aircraft missiles to Lebanese leftist Moslems.

Diplomats in Damascus, the Syrian capital, said Libyan officials promised last week to supply Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles to Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization. However, a Syrian official said Damascus "has so far not agreed" to such a move.

In Lebanon, Palestinian guerrillas fired a shoulder-mounted anti-aircraft missile Sunday at Israeli jets overhead, said Western reporters who witnessed the launch from the guerrillas' mountain stronghold at Damour, 14 miles south of Beirut. They said the missile exploded at about 5,000 feet, far below the Israeli planes flying at about 30,000 feet.

Begin denied Israeli press reports that his government had given Habib until the end of the week to ease the crisis over Syria's deployment of Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles in Lebanon.

"It is not true that Israel is losing patience," Begin said. "We didn't set any time limit."

Habib, a retired State Department veteran of Lebanese Christian ancestry, has been shuttling between Beirut, Damascus and Jerusalem since May 7. He was in the Israeli capital Sunday and has not announced future travel plans.

Begin said the American was waiting for a Saudi Arabian response to a proposal the envoy advanced in Beirut two days ago. Begin would not elaborate on the proposal, but said it "doesn't have any bearing" on Israel's demand that the Syrian missiles be withdrawn from the Bekaa Valley, in eastern Lebanon.

Syria rolled its missiles into the valley April 29, one day after Israeli jets shot down two Syrian helicopter gunships Israel claimed were attacking its rightist Christian allies near the Lebanese Christian city of Zahle, which the Syrians have under siege.

Begin's office released a statement Sunday saying Israel had given assurances to Lebanese Christian forces in 1978 that Israel would block Syrian air attacks on them.

In Damascus, the government newspaper Al Baath, official daily of the ruling Socialist Baath Party, said America's support for Israel made "explosion of the military situation unavoidable."

"When Philip Habib concentrates his mission on asking victimized Syria to pull out its defensive missiles so that aggressor Israel will hve free access to Lebanese air space, then we have to consider America's arrogance," the paper said.

Coming Home

MOSCOW (AP) — Cosmonauts Vladimir Kovalyonok and Viktor Savinykh will return to earth Tuesday after 76 days aboard the orbiting Salyut 6 space station, the Soviet news agency Tass reported today.

"They have fully carried out their program for research and experiements aboard the scientific station Salyut 6 and will return to earth tomorrow", Tass said.

Kovalynok and Savynykh rocketed into orbit March 12 in a space capsule and have hosted two visiting crews aboard the space lab.

The latest visitors, Romanian cosmonaut Dumitru Prunariu and his Soviet mission commander Leonid Popov, returned to earth last Friday after a week-long flight to the three-and-one-half year old space station.

Police Commandos Save Unhurt Bank Hostages

By MIGUEL FERNANDEZ
Associated Press Writer

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Police commandos rescued some 70 hostages unharmed from the Central Bank of Barcelona in a hail of gunfire, killing one of the 11 gunmen who had seized the building 37 hours earlier and capturing the rest, the government reported.

Officials denied earlier reports that the gunmen were rightist members of the Guardia Civil, the paramilitary national police, or of the army. Interior Minister Juan Jose Roson said they were professional gunmen with criminal records.

EFE, the government news agency, said sources close to Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo's cabinet told it: "The first details indicate ...an operation organized and financed by elements of the extreme right."

Police said they began a widespread investigation today and arrested three extreme right-wing civilians for questioning. They did not elaborate.

Wearing hoods, the gunmen took about 215 hostages when they seized the bank in the center of Barcelona at gunpoint Saturday morning and demanded release of four military officers indicted for the abortive coup in the Spanish Parliament three months ago.

They said the bank was mined with dynamite and threatened to begin killing the hostages. But by Sunday the front man for the Feb, 23 coup attempt, Lt. Col. Antonio Tejero, denounced them from his prison cell, and the gunmen had freed 145 of their captives and were asking for safe passage from Spain to Argentina.

Government negotiator Juan Rovira said the police and the gunmen had been in hourly contact throughout the day and the government said it would agree to nothing but unconditional surrender. And the Argentine Foreign Ministry said it would not accept them.

The rescue operation began at 8 p.m. Sunday and lasted two hours. Covered by more than 1,000 police, some of the 60-man assault team slipped into the bank and told the captives to run for freedom after police sighted a gunman jumping from a window with a hostage.

To the cheers of spectators standing some 500 yards away behind police lines, other commandos attacked from the roofs of nearby buildings and along the sidewalk. Bunches of hostages fled, most of them through a ground-floor gatebetween the six-story granite building and the Plaza Catalonia, one of the largest squares in Spain.

The gunmen smashed windows in the upper floors and fired on the police. One of the gunmen was fatally shot in the head, police said, but Roson said none of the hostages or commandos were injured.

Police said they captured eight gunmen who tried to flee with the hostages. Javier Colorado, a bank employee who was held hostage, told EFE several of the gunmen forced their captives to trade clothes with them.

"When we left for the street," he said, "some of the assailants changed clothes with us and said: 'We are also bank employees.' It could have been a genuine massacre."

National Police Chief Jose Luis Fernandez Dopico told reporters there were 11 gunmen, not 24 as reported throughout the siege. He said they were armed with one machine gun, 11 pistols and six knives.

The police chief said the leader of the band, called "Numero Uno" during the siege, was 25-year-old Jose Juan Martinez Gomez, a "robber and anarchist" from Almeria, in the southern Andalusia region.

He said the slain gunman was Jose Sanchez, 38, of Barcelona, but no other information on him was available.

Officials said Calvo Sotelo and his Cabinet kept a close watch on the situation from Madrid. King Juan Carlos, who rallied the military to the support of the civilian government in the February coup attempt, also was kept informed of developments, EFE reported. But he made no public comment, in contrast to his dramatic television speech in support of democracy after Tejero and several hundred other Guardia Civil seized the Parliament in Madrid in February.

Saudis Balk Over OPEC Price Hike

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries began their semiannual price-fixing meeting today with Saudi Arabia rejecting demands to cut production and raise its crude oil price $4 per barrel.

"We will discuss (price), but definitely not at $36," Saudi Arabian oil minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani told a throng of reporters who crowded around his seat at the conference hall just before the start of the talks.

Yamani said he would raise his price by a smaller amount, perhaps $2 a barrel, if other OPEC members reduced their prices. But other ministers immediately rejected his proposal.

"We are going to remain at $36. If our customers don't want to buy our crude at $36, then they can go elsewhere," Venezuelan oil minister Humberto Calderon Berti, a prominent OPEC moderate, told reporters.

Yamani also said he would refuse to consider requests to cut his country's record high production, claiming "there is no need for it."

The meeting opened solemnly with a 15-second silent tribute to Ecuador President Jaime Roldos, who died in an airplane crash Sunday night. The session was then adjourned so delegates could pay their respects at Ecuador's local U.N. mission.

Ecuador and Gabon are OPEC's smallest producers, with daily outputs of 200,000 barrels each.

Several ministers of the 13-nation oil cartel urged the Saudis to boost their price from $32 a barrel, OPEC's lowest, to $36. That would raise the average OPEC oil price about 4.5 percent and add a penny a gallon to the price of oil consumed by the United States.

In addition, all the other members of the organization wants the Saudis to cut their record-high production of 10.3 million barrels a day, OPEC's biggest, which has helped to cause the glut on the world oil market that is holding prices down. But several of the oil ministers predicted they might fail to agree on anything.

"The pricing issue might be left as it is for another meeting to come," said Mana Saeed Otaiba of the United Arab Emirates. "As ar as production is concerned, I'm expecting no agreement will be reached."

Tayeh Abdul Karim of Iraq and Subroto of Indonesia have urged the Saudis to raise their price $4 a barrel. Belkacem Nabi of Algeria called for a general price hike as protection against inflation, saying, "We intend to defend the purchasing power of a barrel of oil."

But Yamani said on Thursday that he would resist a price increase. And when reporters asked him Sunday if he still wanted a price freeze, he replied: "Yes, we have to, for a year and a half."

Under an agreement reached last December, the OPEC members can set a base price of between $32 and $36 a barrel and can add premiums for high-quality oil up to a ceiling of $41.

RENT CONTROL?

I'd like to know if there are legal guidelines as to how often and how much rent on an apartment can be increased. The rent where I live has been increased four or five times since I've been here and it's going up $15 this July. I know inflation is the cause, but my salary has not increased to keep up. L. H.

Jean Ann Wolhair of the Office of Renters' Affairs, N. C. Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division, said no. Your rent can only be increased in line with the lease agreement between you and the apartment owner, of course, she said, but if you rent month-to-month, it can be raised as often and as much as the owner wishes.

Some states do have rent control laws, she said, but North Carolina is not one of these.

Hostages Turn Against Captors

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Passengers aboard a hijacked Turkish airliner attacked their captors today and, despite a burst of gunfire, freed themselves after 30 hours of being held under threat of death, the Bulgarian news agency BTA said.

Five Americans were reported aboard and it was not known if they were among the passengers BTA reported wounded by a hijacker. No one was seriously injured.

BTA said Bulgarian officials had enticed two of the original four hijackers out of the plane on the pretense that they would meet with reporters. The pair was immediately arrested.

When passengers realized only two hijackers remained, they attacked them, BTA said, wresting a pistol away from one of the gunmen, who then jumped from the plane and was arrested.

The remaining air pirate opened fire "at random," wounding an unspecified number of passengers, BTA said. The casualties' identities were not immediately reported but BTA said they were not seriously hurt and included one of the hijackers.

"At first report, the lives of every one of the wounded is out of danger. One of the hijackers is seriously wounded," BTA said.

"The hijackers are seized and rendered harmless," the agency said. It had earlier reported the surrender of the hijackers.

The hijackers had been threatening to kill the Americans and blow up the DC-9 Turkish Airlines jetliner, hijacked Sunday and diverted to Burgas, a Black Sea coastal town.

Ninety-one people were reported aboard just before the ordeal ended.

Hours earlier, the hijackers had asked for 200 envelopes and sheets of paper to allow the passengers to start writing their farewell letters, the news agency said. Ninety-five had, BTA said, and the notes were delivered to authorities.

After that, a group of captives was released, bringing to 27 the total number of passengers allowed out or escaped before the hijacking ended today, the agency said.

The U.S. Embassy here said two of the 27 had escaped. No details, other than that one man was injured jumping from the plane Sunday, were available.

Godley-Allen Vows Exchanged Sunday

Becky Marie Allen and Obie Devon Godley, both of Greenville, were married Sunday at three o'clock in the afternoon at the Church of God in Greenville. The Rev. A.S. Yorkman conducted the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth E. Allen Sr. and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Obie Lee Godley, all of Greenville.

A program of nuptial music was provided by Gladys Corbett, organist, and Guyla Evans, soloist, who sang "There is Love," "More" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal white gown of sheerganza and Venise lace. The gown was fashioned with a modified Queen Anne neckline accented with sculptured Venise lace, a miniature ruffle and sheer bishop sleeves that ended in lace cuffs. The A-line skirt, bordered with a flounce, flowed into an attached chapel train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion bordered in lace, was attached to a capulet of matching lace. She carried a nosegay of white roses, miniature carnations and baby's breath.

Sheila Jernigan of Mt. Olive, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. She wore a formal length gown of peach tinaseta Italian silk designed with an open neckline. The empire bodice, overlaid with a front and back cowl gathered collars, was accentuated at the split sleeve with peach silk floral Venise lace and miniature bows. The skirt formed a sunburst of accordian pleats. She carried a nosegay of all white daisies with peach ribbon streamers.

Bridesmaids were the bride's sisters, Lisa and Debbie Allen, both of Greenville, Anna Tyson and Pam Carter, both of Ayden. Susan Stephenson of Suffolk, Va., niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. They wore gowns styled identically to the matron of honor in a complementary shade of apricot tinaseta and carried nosegays with white and peach ribbon streamers.

Kathy Allen of Winterville and Melinda Sawyer of Ayden, nieces of the bride, were flower girls. They wore formal dresses of apricot taffeta with a sheer flowered overlay and carried baskets of all white daisies. All attendants wore a white rose with baby's breath in their hair.

The mother of the bride was attired in a formal mauve knit gown. The gown featured a V-neckline and the empire waist was accented with a self-fabric applique. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal light pink polyester silesta chiffon gown was fashioned with a V-neckline, long flowing sunburst pleated capelet and skirt. They wore corsages of white carnations.

Grandmothers were remembered with white carnation corsages.

Bevery Benton of Ayden resided at the guest register. Bruce and Judy Greene directed the wedding.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers were Ray Jernigan of Mt. Olive, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Kenneth E. Allen Jr. of Winterville, brother of the bride, Wayne and Franklin Tripp, both of Greenville. Eddie Little of Farmville, cousin of the bride, was junior usher.

A reception was given by the bride's parents following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Mrs. Joan Little, cousin of the bride, poured punch. Mrs. Brenda Davenport, cousin of the bridegroom, cut the wedding cake. Janet Lloyd and Angie Davenport distributed rice bags and scrolls during the reception.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and attended East Carolina University and Pitt Community College. She is employed by Eastern Orthopaedic Group, Inc. The bridegroom is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and Pitt Community College. He is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Winterville.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are forecast for today into early Tuesday over the lower Mississippi Valley into northern Appalachians and over the centrail Pacific coast states. Rain is expected from the northern Plains into the Great Lakes region. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Fine weather is expected to continue through most of Memorial Day, but there is a chance of thundershowers tonight and Tuesday, the National Weather Service reported today.

The high pressure system that has given excellent weather for outdoor activities this weekend was centered off the coast of the southeastern states this morning. This is resulting in warm southwest winds across North Carolina.

Sunny skies will be the rule across the state again today. However, scattered thundershowres are possible across the mountains by late today. The thundershowers will be triggered by a weak cold front that is moving slowly through Kentucky and Tennessee.

There is a 30 percent chance of thundershowers across the mountains by late today. The chance of thundershowers will increase to 50 percent across the mountains tonight and Tuesday and to 30 percent across the foothills and western piedmont.

High temperatures today will range in the upper 70s to mid-80s across the mountains and in the mid-80s to low 90s east of the mountains.

Lows tonight will range from the upper 50s across the mountains to near 70 along the outer banks. Highs Tuesday will be about the same as those of today.

Sunny skies prevailed across the state Sunday. Afternoon temperatures were hot, with highs ranging from the mid-70s to the mid-80s across the mountains.

East of the mountains highs ranged from the mid-80s to the low 90s. Warmest locations included Jacksonville and Fayetteville with 92 followed by Kinston and Rocky Mount with 91.

Skies were fair last night. Lows ranged from near 50 in the mountains to the 60s east of the mountains.

Employees Sharing $53 Million

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — Elder "Catfish" Daniels didn't know how rich he was until a bank teller started peeling off $100 bills and didn't stop until $11,600.

The 57-year-old heavy equipment operator also owns $94,000 in stock, even though he can't read or write.

Daniels is one of 87 workers at Delta Drilling Co. who came into a fortune as his share of a $53 million employee-participation bonanza.

Delta Drilling, after 50 years as a closely held private company, opened some of its stock to the public March 17. Under the employee-participation plan, worked out in the early 1970s, workers were promised stock in the company should it be merged, sold or taken public.

The "participation units" were increased if the employee stayed with the company or purchased by the company if the worker retired.

The average payoff was $612,000, with the allotment based on salary and time in service.

The plan was conceived in 1974 by several top-level officers at Delta, including its aging founder, Joseph Zeppa.

For years, Delta had been a struggling oil-rig operation. But in the early 1970s, after the Arab oil embargo and subsequent restructuring of oil prices, business started to boom.

The employee-participation program emerged as a way to protect Zeppa's most loyal employees — many of whom had little education — if the company were merged or sold and old-time workers found themselves without a job.

At least 13 employees became millionaires.

One of those millionaires was Jack Elkins, a trucking coordinator, who says he was at home when he heard the news.

"I told my wife to come on, and book us a flight to Las Vegas," Elkins said. "And for the first time in my life I could have a vacation where I didn't have to worry about how much money I was spending."

Day Care Operators Workshop Set

Child day care operators and prospective operators in Pitt County will have the opportunity to learn more about first aid at an area workshop Wednesday and Thursday, June 3-4, at Pitt Community College in Greenville.

Sponsored by the community college's continuing education program and the N.C. Office of Child Day Care Licensing, the workshop is scheduled from 6:00-10:00 p.m. both days and will meet in Room 203W. The course will feature first aid skills, filmed demonstrations and a self-teaching workbook.

Advance registration is not necessary for the course. A $5 fee and a $6.24 book charge is payable on the first day of the workshop. For more information or to register, contact Rita Roberts, Office of Child Day Care Licensing, 1919 Blue Ridge Road, Raleigh, N.C. 27607, telephone 733-4801.

The Office of Child Day Care Licensing in the N.C. Department of Administration works to insure the physical and health safety of children in day care arrangements throughout the state.

REVIVAL SERVICES

Revival services will be held at Ayden Deliverance Center from May 26-29 with speakers Rev. Ernest Dupree and his wife. The services begin at 7:30 p.m. and the public is invited to attend.

No End To Bills In N.C. Legislature

By SAM D. BUNDY
N. C. House
of Representatives

It appears that the introduction of bills will never stop. I have always contended that a deadline should be set, but apparently the leadership does not think so. House bills now total 1,086 and Senate bills, 596, for a grand total of 1,682. Bills are getting more controversial. Sessions are getting longer. Tempers are flaring up, particularly in committee meetings. Our session on Wednesday lasted from 1:30 to 6:30 p.m. The Redistricting Committee on Tuesday abruptly adjourned when tempers began to rise. Governor Hunt is calling in members of the General Assembly one at a time to plug his "Roads Tax Package."

Hot debates centered on the following: 1) Eminent domain and quick take. 2) Making workmen's compensation more lenient for accidents and injuries. 3) Forcing school librarians to act as registrars for voting purposes. 4) Raising interest on taxes past due. Disposition of these items was as follows: Item 1, recommitted to committee; Item 2, recommitted to committee and thence to a subcommittee; Item 3, watered down to be permissive; Item 4, defeated.

On Monday Representative Ed Warren and I joined a group of 40 from the Ayden-Grifton area and met with the Industrial Division of the Department of Commerce with respect to locating industry. Later at a luncheon, Representative Warren and I spoke to the group on issues now before the General Assembly and answered questions.

It was my privilege to have Jessica Perry of Greenville as my page for the week.

Cars Collide At Intersection

Lori Ann Cain of 201 North Library St. was charged with failing to stop for a stop light and driving without a license following investigation of a 2:21 a.m. collision Sunday at the intersection of Tenth and Charles Streets.

Police Department investigators said the Cain car collided with an auto driven by Donna Lynn Walker of Route 4, Washington, causing $150 damage to the Cain car and $200 damage to the Walker vehicle.

Political Risks Abound

The Reagan administration made public its proposals for paring the Social Security program — and promptly ran into a buzz saw of public opposition, most specifically to the plan which would cut benefits from 80 percent o 55 percent for retirement at age 62.

The stiff opposition quickly brought reassuring words from the administration.

"There's nobody set in concrete or wedded to any particular part of that package," Social Security Commissioner John Svahn said. He indicated the administration intended to seek a bipartisan approach.

For once, the Senate Democrats were united in saying that benefits which those approaching retirement had planned on should be maintained.

It is, of course, but another indication that there is no mandate to dismantle all that has been accomplished over the past 40 years in social legislation.

The public has long been indicating its desire to see government growth and instituting of new programs curbed. Many programs are popular, however, and undue tampering with them will be at great risk to the administration.

Blood Award Honors Alford

Ott Alford, Pitt County school superintendent, has served as the Pitt County Red Cross Blood program chairman since 1978. He will retire from the chairmanship this year.

How well he has done is indicated by this year's record. Pitt County has an annual goal of collecting 3,500 pints of blood. As the fiscal year ends June 30, the county has collected 4,410 pints or 126 percent of the goal.

That speaks well of the outgoing chairman, and an annual achievement award has been established in his honor with Alford as the first recipient. It will be presented annually to the individual or organization which contributes most to the blood program.

We can think of nothing that is more significant and less selfish than the giving of blood. The need is constant and the blood program is essential to the health of our community.

The program has been kept sound through Ott Alford's chairmanship and the achievement award named in his honor is fitting.

SCARY!--THEY'RE SO UNPREDICTABLE!

Republicans Still Silent

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When a legislative committee invited the public to advise it on redrawing the state Senate's districts last week, the silence from Republicans was striking.

When another panel redrawing the state House districts adjourned in a near-brawl, it was the Democrats who were yelling at each other and pounding the table.

And in the committees that will try again this week to agree on a plan for redrawing the state's 11 congressional districts, the four plans before it for all bear the names of Democratic authors.

In fact, watching the three-ring circus of redistricting that is now keeping legislators busy with maps, colored pencils and plastic overlays, one might get the idea that not much is being heard from the Republicans.

Even the House minority leader, Rep. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, was keeping quiet in the House redistricting fight, even as he eyed a Democrats' plan that would have submerged his own GOP district under two other, heavily Democratic counties.

Why the quiet, when the prospect of gerrymandering is on everyone's mind?

The answer, Brubaker says, is in the numbers. With only 20 percent membership in the House and Senate, legislative Republicans are trying right now to get the best deal they can out of each of the redistricting processes through quiet, behind the scenes efforts. And they are saving their only trump card, the threat of federal lawsuit, until the final hand is dealt.

"When you're only 20 percent of the membership and the other side has the votes to do anything it wants, caution is the best thing," Brubaker said.

"We want to see the final plans first. If it is blatant gerrymandering, that's fine. We'll take them to court," he added. "But we'll just keep quiet right now and try to make what inroads we can."

That is not to say the minority party isn't laying the groundwork now for a later battle, he said. The Republican National Committee is lending North Carolina Republican legislators the strategic and legal advice of four of its lawyers.

If the fight over redistricting does make it into court, the Republicans think the Democrats may have made a strategic blunder already in the Senate redistricting committee.

The chairman of the state Democratic Party, Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, has been appointed chairman of a subcommittee named to suggest redistricting plans. Having the chairman of the Democratic Party drawing the maps, some suggest, might raise a federal judge's eyebrows if it ever came to that.

"That stinks," said Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, the Senate minority leader.

But Walker, asked about the propriety of it, said the subject hadn't been raised. He was appointed by the full committee chairman, Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, without asking for it, he said.

"I hadn't thought of that," he said. "I think maybe that hasn't been addressed."

Rauch said he was surprised anyone would question the move. "If they had anything to say they could have said it at our public hearing," he said. "They are being politically picky."

Although the Senate districts may be the easiest to redraw, as only a handful of districts are seriously out of line, Kincaid said Republicans plan to introduce their own redistricting plan, probably as a separate bill. The reason, again, is in case of a lawsuit.

"We've been told it's important to have your own plan out there if you go to court," he said.

Of the three redistricting, drawing congressional lines may draw the most serious arguments. The GOP's main concern is protecting the 6th District of newly elected Republican Congressman Gene Johnston.

THIS AFTERNOON

Sees Shortcoming

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — At a time when money is tight, jobs are hard to come by, and North Carolina is aggressively seeking new industry is not the best time to trim vocational education efforts in the schools.

Instead, it is the best time to improve "paycheck education" says Charles Dunn, director of the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association and a leader in Child Watch, a volunteer organization dedicated to improving the lot of young people.

The lack of "paycheck education opportunities is a major shortcoming in North Carolina's public schools today. A sound, broad-based paycheck education program would have a great positive impact on young people seeking careers, on the economy, and on the future of this state," Dunn recently told the joint appropriations committee of the General Assembly.

He appeared on behalf of Child Watch to urge legislators to keep in the budget $5 million for expanded vocational education efforts in the schools.

Many Benefits

Some legislators in a budget-cutting mood are intent on eliminating or trimming back a host of programs. But Dunn argued that few state efforts can affect as many different problem areas as does vocational education — it would help in school dropouts, in unemployment, and in crime.

And it pays for itself. Dunn pointed out that statistics prove that 95 percent of graduates of vocational education programs are able to get jobs. The unemployment rate for teenagers typically runs 16 to 19 percent, so those with paycheck education beat the odds.

Besides, the benefits carry over into adulthood as those with vocational training continue to find jobs easier, and earn more.

"Last year about 29,000 students were in cooperative education programs which allows a student to attend school and work part-time.

"Those students earned

BILL NOBLITT

$56.2 million and paid about $11.2 million in taxes. That was about two-and-a-half times the amount of tax dollars invested in the programs," Dunn argued.

Paycheck education "does pay...in better wages as well as in productivity and taxes," Dunn said.

Such an education is the best hope for many young people...it improves their self-image, increases the relevence of school for them, and satisfies the need of many students to produce income.

"I believe that the future of North Carolina and certainly the future of many of our young people depends on what happens in the area of paycheck education," Dunn told legislators.

He praised present efforts, but noted that programs need to be expanded and "made more relevent to the needs of the students and business and industry. They need to be made more acceptable to students, parents, and educators — especially those who have a tendency to be more concerned about the college-bound students than they are about the work-bound student."

Dropouts

The school dropout problem, especially, would be

A Doctor In The House

When I saw Glover the other day, he looked sick.

"Why don't you go to your doctor?" I asked him.

"I did go. He wants me to see a specialist."

"So why don't you go see the specialist?"

"He's delivering a paper in Sydney, Australia, on his specialty. He won't be back until July."

"All right, then go to another specialist."

"I called another specialist and his secretary said he can't see me until September. I told her I might be dead by then. So she said she'd move me up to August."

"This is May — that seems like a long time to wait. Did you go back to your regular doctor?"

"Yeah. He called around and he finally found a guy who would see me right away."

"That's great," I said. "Why don't you go to see him?"

ART BUCHWALD

"Because I'm not sure how good a specialist he is."

"Why? Did you check him out?"

"No. But if he's such a hot doctor, how come he isn't delivering a paper in Vienna, instead of seeing patients?"

"Maybe he is in between lectures," I suggested.

"All right. But if he knows his stuff, why doesn't he have a two-month waiting list like everybody else?"

"That's a good question. He can't be a great medical man if he's willing to see you right away. Maybe he's just starting out in practice."

"I thought the same thing. So that means if I go see him, I'm going to have to get a second opinion."

"Wasn't your family doctor suspicious when the specialist said you could come over so soon?"

"It did make him nervous. He said he had never known a specialist who would see a patient right away. But he also said I didn't have any choice. It was either go to him or NOT see the best man in the field because he was in Australia."

"Maybe the guy who will see you had a cancellation?" I said, trying to cheer him up. "I once knew of a case where a top orthopedic man saw a friend of mine just four weeks after he called."

"What did the orthopedist tell him?"

"That there was nothing wrong with him. Whatever the problem was had cleared up."

"So you think if I wait for the specialist to come back from Sydney, I'll get better, too?"

Kids & Killers

(Greensboro Daily News)

What do you suppose is the biggest single killer of infants in the U.S.? If you guessed a disease, such as rubella or meningitis, you're off base. The number one enemy is automobile accidents.

That sobering fact could be gradually changed if a bill before the legislature becomes law. The bill would require all infants 1 year or younger to be secured in an approved child car seat. Children from 1 to 4 would, at a minimum, be required to wear seat belts, though car seats are still recommended.

Before the cry of "too much government regulation!" fogs the air, consider that the harshest penalty for disobeying the law would be a $10 fine. And the law would apply only when parents are transporting their own children.

Quite frankly, the law's purpose is not so much to punish as to educate. Buckling your child's seat belt is a good habit that the state public health officers, physicians and traffic safety experts would like parents to acquire.

The reason is simple: The statistics are appalling. A study conducted by the Highway Safety Research Center at Chapel Hill showed that 101 children aged 4 or younger were killed in auto accidents in North Carolina from 1976 through 1980. Records show that none of them was buckled up with seat belts or child restraint devices.

Studies indicate that properly used restraints prevent death or reduce serious accident from 70 to 95 percent of the time. Yet only about 5 percent of children who ride in cars are protected in this manner — even, in many cases, when the parents themselves use seat belts.

This bill ought to be a top priority even for people who don't have young children to worry about: Youngsters who aren't restrained in cars are a major cause of driver distraction.

The biggest obstacle to passage of the legislation is cost. Many struggling young parents just don't have the money to buy a car seat. But in Greensboro, for example, car seats can be rented through the Jaycees' office for a nominal fee. The program could provide a model for other communities. It's ironic that our society invests so much to protect children from disease, but so little to insure that they are transported safely on our highways. In this case, needless to say, the price would be well worth it.

Strength For Today

CONTENTMENT AND FAITH

Many people never enjoy the present because they worry so incessantly about the future. Among other fears, they may be afraid of losing their money or their health, or the love and affection of their children.

Once in awhile we come upon a person who doesn't have a great deal of this world's goods but seems to be perfectly happy with what little he has. This may sometimes be a matter of temperament, but more often it arises from the fact that this happy and contented person has a religious faith that really works.

Someone has said, "We do not know what the future holds, but we do know Who holds the future." And that, as a matter of fact, is all we need to know. If one really has that knowledge to such a degree that it gives the confidence to walk unafraid through life, it is a blessing of great value. Life's richest treasure is peace. And the most satisfying variety of peace is that which grows out of a strong religious faith. — Elisha Douglass

U.S. Taste For Wine Grows

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

America has developed a taste for wine.

In barely two decades, wine shipments in the United States have almost tripled and per-capita consumption has more than doubled.

Marvin R. Shanken, editor and publisher of "Impact," a newsletter on wine and distilled spirits, said the fastest-growing segment of the market is white wine.

"There are more occasions to drink white wine because it's also used as a cocktail beverage," he said. "It's refreshing. It's cold. It's light. People like the taste. And it's certainly fashionable."

Wine shipments in the United States in 1960 totaled 163 million gallons, the equivalent of less than one gallon per person. Last year, Shanken said, shipments totaled an estimated 475.8 million gallons, equal to just over two gallons per person.

Two decades ago, 74 percent of the table wine sold in the United States was red; 17 percent was white and 9 percent was rose. In 1980, white wine accounted for 54 percent of the market, compared to 26 percent for red and 20 percent for rose. In the last 10 years alone, white wine shipments have increased sixfold.

Table wines — generally dry and relatively low in calories and alcohol — have grown in popularity at the expense of sweet dessert wines. "In 1970, dessert wine held 28 percent of the market," Shanken said. "Last year, it held only 9.5 percent. This scenario reflects the changing American taste preference..."

Why the switch? "A more sophisticated palate appreciates a drier wine," Shanken said.

He said a recent study by National Family Opinion Inc. of Toledo, Ohio, that the biggest wine consumer is a woman aged 30 to 39, living in the West with a household income of $25,000 or more. She drinks wine mostly at home, with dinner.

Shanken said consumers do not have to spend a lot of money on wine. "You can find much-more-than-adequate everyday wines for $2 to $5 a bottle," he said.

Most of the wine sold in the United States is produced here, but imports have been growing. In 1960, for example, imports accounted for only 16 percent of the table wine sold across the country. Last year, the imports had a 25 percent share of the market.

Sales of Italian wines in particular have increased. From 1979 to 1980, Shanken said, the volume of Italian wine imported into the United States rose about 26 percent. French wines, in contrast, which have been getting much more expensive in recent years have been declining in popularity. The volume of French wine imported into the United States dropped by about 12 percent from 1979 to 1980.

The single biggest source of wine sold in the United States is California, although the state's share of the market has fluctuated slightly over the last 10 years. In 1970, California produced 71 percent of the table wine shipped in the United States. In 1978, however, only 67 percent of the table wine shipped in this country was Californian. Last year, the California market share was up again — to just under 70 percent.

Thousands of Americans not only are drinking the wine of California, they are visiting the wineries. Advertising Age, a trade publication, said tours of the wineries in the Napa Valley — California's prime wine-producing area — have "become big business — big enough to make the area second only to Disneyland among California tourist attractions..."

Advertising Age says there are more than 120 wineries in Napa Valley, up from only about a dozen 20 years ago. An estimated 2 million people a year visit the wineries, the publication says.

The wine makers have mixed opinions about the value of the tours, according to Advertising Age. Some wineries look on the visits as an important marketing and promotional tool; others worry that they could become a nuisance which would interfere with the wine making.

Noise Control

The city says it enacted a noise ordinance several years ago after local officials became aware of the need to regulate excessive noises.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon explained that there are many types of noises which are regulated by the ordinance, but the most frequent noise complaints received by his department involve loud music and parties at night.

He encouraged persons who are disturbed by loud music and parties to communicate directly with the people who are making the noise and ask them to turn down the volume. If this fails, the chief said, citizens should report the matter to the Police Department.

He said that citizens interested in obtaining more information on the noise ordinance should call the Police Department at 752-3342.

Chamber Plans Series Of Events

Bob Griffin, chairman of the board of directors of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, announced today a week of activites for the PGCC.

Congressman Walter Jones will be the guest speaker at the Pepsi Break Tuesday morning in room 732 of the Willis Building. Subject for the session will be "Our Economy".

Tuesday night the formation of the Bethel Council of the PGCC wil take place in the auditorium of the Bethel Elementary School. Businessman Bob Bowser, chairman of the Proposed Bethel Council Steering Committee, will chair the meeting. Chamber President Ed Walker will be present to help the interested citizens of the Bethel community organize and begin implementing their proposed program.

Griffin added that a saftey seminar has been planned by the Business and Industrial Relations Committee of the Chamber. The first session of the seminar will be held Wednesday from 1-5 p.m. The second session will be Thursday from 8 a.m.-12 noon. Both sessions will take place at the Willis Building. The objectives of the safety seminar are to give a review of new OSHA regulations, interpretations and pertinent regulatory changes. Also he added that the session will explain employer and employee rights and resources for dealing with OSHA and will review health hazards for small and large businesses.

Thursday at 12:30 p.m., the PGCC Board of Directors will hold its first board meeting at an out-of-town location. The Ayden Council will host the meeting at Bum's Restaurant in Ayden. The board agenda will include a vote on the proposed lease from the city of Greeenville that will enable the Chamber to use the Winstead-Fleming home as a chamber building, a retirement program for the chamber staff, and a recommendation from the Transportation Committee of the Chamber concerning funding for the N.C. Department of Transportation.

The Republicans are backing two Democratic-drawn maps that would add Davidson to Guilford and Alamance counties, dropping Rockingham and giving the district a Republican-voting county for a Democratic one.

But they are strongly opposed to one offered by Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, that would put Orange County, with liberal Chapel Hill, into the 6th.

"That's certainly gerrymandering," Brubaker said. "She's shooting down all the Republican congressmen."

In House and Senate redistricting all plans are still highly tentative and changing daily. But a plan that keeps cropping up among House Democrats would put Republican Randolph County, now a district on its own with two GOP House members, into a four-member district with Orange and Chatham counties.

In the southeastern corner of the state, a plan has emerged for a six-county "super district" with five House members. Republicans don't like that because they think one of them, Sampson County, is big enough to be its own district and could vote Republican by itself.

And Brubaker said Republicans are keeping an eye on what happens in the northeastern corner, where one of the Legislature's four black members, Rep. Melvin Creecy, D-Northampton, was angry with plans that split up his large district.

"If all those things fall into place, Randolph being put with Orange, the super district being formed and Creecy getting messed up," Brubaker said, "we could go into court arguing that they've formed too many large districts and gerrymandered minorities."

"I'm not a doctor. But I've heard of many cases where a patient has had to wait so long to see the top man in the field, that he's cured himself."

"But don't you look like a fool if you wait all that time and when you finally see the specialist, he can't find anything wrong?"

"Specialists don't care. They're so busy, it saves them spending a lot of time with you."

"I still wonder if I should cancel the appointment with the specialist who will see me, and try to get one with the one who can't."

"Well, the one who can't is probably the better man, and you'd be more confident with him. At the same time, if you kept your appointment with the doctor who will see you, you could be pleasantly surprised. He might be good at what he does, but doesn't like to deliver papers at medical meetings. You know, there are some doctors who are afraid to fly."

"Why can't the top specialists in their fields just practice medicine?" Glover asked. "Why do they have to keep going to Nairobi and Cairo and Stockholm all the time to read papers?"

"Because if they just took care of patients, no one would know they were the top men in their field. Look, I think you're hurting yourself wrestling with the problem. My suggestion is to go to the specialist who told you to come over right away. But before you let him examine you, ask him how many conventions he's been to this year. If he replies, 'None,' walk out of his office without taking your clothes off."

affected by added vocational education efforts, Dunn noted. Terming the dropout — or force-out — problem "epidemic in North Carolina," Dunn predicted that the 30,000 annual dropout rate "could be significantly reduced, if we had relevent paycheck education."

A study committee of the General Assembly has endorsed recommendations from the State Board of Education that a concerted effort be made on the dropout problem. But critics of that program contend that emphasis is on reduced classroom size and additional counseling services rather than the realistic approach of providing job training which students can use in the real world.

The appropriation request would add about 200 vocational education positions, plus equipment and supplies. "It definitely would not provide a totally adequate paycheck education program...but it would be a step in the right direction," Dunn commented.

Farm Scene

ByROGER COBB
Agri. Ext. Agent

Most growers have found that 60 to 80 pounds of nitrogen per acre will produce a tobacco crop that will cure and ripen properly. However, some growers are using much more nitrogen than this on their tobacco crop.

Excess nitrogen stimulates sucker growth and makes sucker control much more difficult. Maturity may also be delayed, making sucker control that much more difficult.

Late applied nitrogen often does not get wet enough to get into solution during the normal growing stage of the crop. This late-applied nitrogen becomes available during the period the crop is trying to ripen and delays harvest. When harvested green, these leaves are difficult and sometimes impossible to cure.

In addition to the 60-80 pounds of nitrogen it is only necessary to add more if leaching should occur. Leaching is more of a problem on sandy soils with a deep topsoil. Adjustments for leaching in fields with a shallow topsoil are needed only under extreme conditions.

The need to have a sucker growth that can be controlled without excess MH will be very important in 1981.

Two label changes have been made for MH (maleic Hydrazide) containing products. The first change will limit the applications to one unless a wash-off occurs within six-12 hours after application. A second change is to prohibit harvesting within seven days after application of MH.

The label change makes farmers accountable for their tobacco. It is against federal law to use a chemical other than the way it is specified on the label.

With these label changes a better job of sucker control with contact-type solutions may be necessary. A key factor with these is to make sure your concentration is correct. For contacts on the market this is two gallons of product added to 48 gallons of water.

Course Offered By Pitt CC

A two-day course on linking certification standards to child development associate competencies will be offered at Pitt Community College on May 28-29.

This course is designed for day care directors and staff who are interested in the CDA credential and developing child care competencies toward authorization and certification standards as required by state and federal agencies.

Registration will be at 9 a.m. on May 28 in room 201 of the Whichard Building on the PCC campus. Course cost will be $5. The public is invited.

For further information contact the Continuing Education Division of Pitt Community College, 756-3130, ext. 233.

REVIVAL

Revival services will be conducted at Cherry Lane Free Will Baptist Church from May 25 -29. Services begin at 7:00 p.m. nightly. Rev. Z.D. Harris of Durham will be rendering the services along with various choirs. Rev. C.R. Parker invites the public to attend.

Losing Effort At Censorship

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Conservatives and fundamentalists are having little success in trying to force schools to ban "immoral" books, North Carolina school officials say.

Other states have been affected by such groups as the Moral Majority, but while North Carolina is under pressure, there has been little effect from the conservative groups, said state Department of Public Instruction spokesman Tom Davis.

"We're constantly reviewing our materials, but we haven't taken any textbooks from the recommended list," Davis said.

"As far as the state's concerned, we haven't had any problem," Davis said. "We've had some people visit our materials center, and we've given them copies. And we sent a letter to school superintendents suggesting they review the guidelines for investigating book complaints.

"We knew this pressure from conservative groups was coming," he said.

School books and materials have come under attack in Mecklenburg, Cumberland and Iredell counties, and involve mostly state-approved publications used as teacher guides, Davis said.

But in a Charlotte elementary school, the children's book "The secret in Miranda's Closet" by Sheila Greewald was banned after complaints that it contained objectionable language.

School officials in Iredell County temporarily removed Aldous Huxley's "Brave New World" from library shelves after one parent complained that the classic satire about a totally controlled society of the future was anti-family and anti-Christian.

Parents in Cumberland County criticized two textbooks in the school system, but no action was taken.

The North Carolina chapter of Moral Majority released last month a list of state-approved books used in public schools that the group considers objectionable. The list includes four novels, two social studies textbooks and a literature series.

Officials in South Carolina also reported that attempts at censorship have had no effect.

"We've had no significant problem with book burning and censorship," said South Carolina schools spokesman Mont Morton.

COLLISION

Tammie Ray Pittman of Route 1, Winterville, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets Friday.

Greenville Police investigators reported the Pittman car collided with an auto driven by Anna Dell Watts of Sanford, causing $5,000 damage to the Pittman car and $1,500 damage to the Watts auto.

Rate Increase Sought By N.C. Electric Companies

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Contending that North Carolina needs more power plants to serve Sun Belt growth, the state's three major power companies are asking for higher rates.

The power companies argue that they must improve their earnings through higher rates or they won't be able to raise construction money from investors.

Carolina Power & Light Co. cited these and other reasons May 15 when it asked the North Carolina Utilities Commission for a 16.4 percent rate hike.

Next month, the commission plans to begin hearings on a request made last December by Virginia Electric and Power Co. for a 17 percent increase in North Carolina. Later, it will consider a 19.7 percent rate increase proposal made in March by Duke Power Co.

Even with the higher rates expected to take effect late this year after commission hearings, the utilities are likely to return frequently throughout the decade to ask for more increases.

The commission's Public Staff, which represents consumers before the commission, and some utility officials estimate that rates will continue to climb at about the same rate as inflation during the 1980s.

Today's residential rates are about three to four times higher than they were 10 years ago.

"By the end of 1990, we will have to have generated approximately $5.9 billion in additional funds to support new construction," said Sherwood H. Smith Jr., board chairman, chief executive and president of Carolina Power & Light Co.

The net value of CP&L's facilities is about $3.8 billion, which means the company must raise considerably more than its present worth.

An indication of the region's growth, Smith told CP&L stockholders at the annual meeting Wednesday, is that 188 companies announced new construction or expansions within the utility's service area last year — growth expected to provide aboaut 10,000 new jobs.

CP&L's proposed $151.4 million annual increase would mean that a typical residential customer's bill for 1,000 kilowatt hours would increase from $56.36 this month to about $60.51 late this year.

The commission's Public Staff also expects a need for new power plants this decade, because the peak demand for power from Duke and CP&L is expected to increase about 4 percent a year.

"I wish it were avoidable, but they (higher rates and construction) are tied together, Public Staff director Robert Fischbach said.

Duke Power senior vice president Austin C. Thies said Duke's rates should increase at about the rate of inflation through the 1980s.

Duke's existing facilities are worth aboaut $6 billion. The utility needs to raise about $13 million over the next decade, he said.

Duke's $211 million rate increase proposal would raise the typical monthly bill from $44.33 to $54.85.

Vepco's $16.6 million rate increase request for its 22 northeastern North Carolina counties would raise the bill from $56.97 to $67.65.

Awards Made At Conley FBLA Banquet

Awards were presented and new officers were announced at the annual awards banquet of the D.H. Conley Chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America held recently at the Western Sizzlin' in Greenville.

Certificates were given to local officers for their leadership and to fellow members who had served as chairmen of FBLA's major projects.

James Black, Pitt County Board of Education member and special guest, presented the state champion parliamentary procedure team members with individual plaques for their accomplishments. Members were Tim Faulkner, Susan Dunn, David Adams, Penny Joyner and David Miller.

Conley FBLA advisor Mary Thompson was presented a gift for her service during the past year. In addition, a plaque was given to Suzanne Wilson, named to "Who's Who in FBLA."

Special guests at the banquet were Tina Drye, high school supervisor for Pitt County schools; Julia Smith, Farmville Central, state FBLA reporter; Jolinda Rouse, former D.H. Conley FBLA president.

Members of the business advisory board attending were James Black, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCaskill, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rouse, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wilson, Mrs. Betty Jones. Tina Drye and all members of the advisory board were presented certificates of appreciation. Faculty business advisors Barbara McLawhorn and Annie Chappell were given certificates of appreciation also.

During the banquet, David Adams, Denise Coward and Suzanne Wilson led a review of the year's progress.

Officers for next year are Tim Faulkner, president; Wanda Buck, secretary; Angela Martin, reporter; and Chris Stancil, historian.

Senior Citizens Have Luncheon

The Town and Country Senior Citizens Club held its spring luncheon Thursday. The luncheon was attended by 80 members and four guests.

The final follow-up for the March of Dimes was completed at the meeting. Also, members and friends planning to go to Asheville and Carowinds May 31-June 1 made reservations. There are still a few seats available for the trip, so members and friends should make their reservations immediately by calling 752-2912. Plans for the future include trips to the Dinner Theater in Raleigh and to the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn.

Members of the luncheon committee were Mr. and Mrs. James Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Roper, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Weilenmann, Mrs. Mary Jenkins, Mrs. Ripsy Baker, Mrs. Ruth Harris, Mrs. Ethel Allen, Mrs. Hilda Goldstein, Mrs. Mary Robinnette, Mrs. Lendle Bybel and Mrs. Sarah Ashton.

Meeting Dates Are Changed

The dates for two previously scheduled meetings of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency have been changed.

The regular governing body meeting will begin the next six-week schedule by changing its June 10 meeting to June 24 at 7:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn.

The Project Review Committee meeting scheduled for May 28 has been postponed, with the new time and date to be announced later.

SELLING COOKBOOKS

The Pitt County Humane Society is selling cookbooks to raise money to build dog pens for foster care purposes.

The price is $5. Supporters of animal welfare are asked to contact Barbara Haddock, 752-9922.

Gunmen Fire On Three Embassies In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Unidentified gunmen fired grenades at the American, Egyptian and Sudanese embassies today in what police described as coordinated attacks apparently protesting Sudan's break with the Arab boycott of Egypt.

There were no injuries in any of the attacks, which embassy spokesmen and police said occurred about 1 a.m. All three embassies are located in Moslem West Beirut.

Bulos Malik, a spokesman at the U.S. Embassy, said four rifle-fired grenades slammed into the east side of the building, shattering windows on the second, third and fourth floors.

It was the sixth attack on U.S. diplomatic buildings or personnel in Lebanon in nine months.

The U.S. Embassy was attacked twice by unidentified gunmen firing machine guns from passing cars in March, the same month a sniper fired on the motorcade of U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean.

Last September, the embassy was hit by three rockets fired by a pro-Iranian group. A month earlier, Dean escaped an assassination attempt by gunmen firing rockets and machine guns.

The Egyptian Embassy was hit by a rocket-propelled grenade that pierced a wall on the sixth floor, an embassy security guard said.

The rocket-propelled grenade fired at the building housing the Sudanese Embassy missed the embassy offices but hit a water tower on the roof. The embassy is on the seventh floor of the nine-story building.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, ostracized by the Arab world after signing the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace treaty with Israel, made his first move toward rejoining Arab ranks Sunday when he travelled to Khartoum for meetings with Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiry.

"We think the attacks are because of Numeiry's proposal of an Arab summit conference to return Egypt to the fold," a Beirut police spokesman said.

No groups claimed responsibility for the assaults.

Attacks on foreign embassies in Beirut are common. More than 40 private armies have sprung up in Lebanon since the 1975-76 civil war, and all are allied with foreign powers.

However, attacks on foreign embassies escalated after the outbreak of the Iran-Iraq War on Sept. 22, 1980, with supporters of the two warring nations in lebanon clashing in street battles that involved rocket attacks on the Iraqi and Iranian embassies.

A pro-Iranian group calling itself "Mojahedeen Saff" has claimed responsibility for at least two bomb and rocket attacks on the U.S. and French embassies, protesting alleged support for Irraq in the Persian Gulf war.

War Dead Remembered By Host Of Americans

By The Associated Press

Americans from Seattle to Boston honored the nation's war dead over Memorial Day weekend, but in Arlington, Va., and Los Angeles protesters complained about the treatment of living veterans.

At West Los Angeles' Wadsworth Veterans Administration Hospital, eight Vietnam vets on a 10-day hunger strike asked all veterans to fast as part of today's Memorial Day observances. The protesters are demanding an investigation into the chemical defoliant, Agent Orange, used in Vietnam.

In a separate protest at the hospital, six veterans continued a sit-in to demand an investigation of Agent Orange and health care for veterans.

The demonstrations were prompted by the death a week ago of James Hopkins, a veteran who was facing trial in federal court for allegedly driving a jeep through the window of the hospital and spraying the area with bullets. Hopkins said his problems were caused by exposure to Agent Orange.

At Arlington National Cemetery several dozen Vietnam veterans and their supporters were prevented from laying an orange wreath near the tomb of the unknown Vietnam soldier. They said they wanted to commemorate those who died from the effects of Agent Orange.

The Vietnam Veterans Against the War organization was denied a permit to place a wreath inside the cemetery on the grounds their ceremony was "partisan."

In Boston, an observance was marred by the city's fiscal problems.

City officials, struggling with a property tax limitation, refused to provide the American Legion with the $150 usually allocated to rent a microphone and chairs for a Memorial Day observance. One hundred veterans and supporters went ahead with the program anyway.

Traditional ceremonies were held in Seattle where residents flocked to cemeteries to follow the tradition of decorating graves started by Gen. John A. Logan in 1868. A 21-gun salute was planned today at Fort Logan National Cemetery in Denver.

Clear skies and 86-degree temperatures brought 125,000 Sunday to Jones Beach on New York's Long Island to celebrate the holiday weekend. More than 400,000 watched Bobby Unser claim a disputed victory in the Indianapolis 500.

Cool weather and clouds limited attendance at Los Angeles County beaches to 605,000, less than the normal holiday crowd of 1 million.

By 4 a.m. EDT, more than 230 had died in accidents on U.S. streets and highways.

Pavarotti Listens To The Hopefuls

By BEN WALKER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They came by plane, train and rented car from all over the world, all for the chance to sing just a few minutes for the world's greatest operatic tenor.

Sharing the hope that their vocal cords would strike some pleasing chord in the master, the 29 were finalists in the Opera Company of Philadelphia—Luciano Pavarotti contest, the largest international voice competition ever staged in the United States.

At stake Saturday night was a chance to join Pavarotti on stage next spring in the opera company's productions of "La Boheme" and "L'Elisir d'Amore."

"This will be the biggest thing to happen to me — if I win," said John Cimino of Troy, N.Y., nervously pacing backstage after leading off the 3½-hour competition. "I think I gave a good representation of myself."

The judges also thought so. They picked Cimino, a high school science teacher-turned-opera singer, as one of 19 winners.

Pavarotti merely shrugged at the large number of victors.

"Nineteen was the number that came out," he said, smiling. "They deserved it."

The winners survived worldwide contests that attracted more than 600 singers from 53 countries during the past year. Seventy-eight singers from 20 countries were invited to the week-long finals in Philadelphia.

At Saturday's climax, each contestant got to sing one aria for Pavarotti and four other judges from famous opera houses, including La Scala in Milan, Italy, and the Metropolitan Opera in New York.

Winners came from Italy, Hungary and the Philippines as well as Hoboken, N.J., and other U.S. cities.

Pavarotti, whose operatic career skyrocketed after winning a singing contest in Italy at age 25, was as fidgetey as any of the contestants.

"I am nervous for all of them," he said. "This is the maximum you can do for young singers. It's good when you can give something back to something that has given you so much."

Heat Downfall Illegal Aliens

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Twenty eight illegal aliens from El Salvador were taken into custody when they couldn't stand the heat in the back of a truck and got out at a truck stop, authorities said.

"The reason they were caught is that the driver left them in the back and it got too hot and they had to get out," Glenn Luckey, an investigator with the U.S. Border Patrol, said Sunday.

The Salvadorans, six Mexican nationals and three other persons identified as "transporters" were arrested Saturday afternoon at the 76 Truckstop on U.S. 77.

Breakfast Honors Glenn Cox

More than 80 people were in attendance this morning at a 7:30 a.m. breakfast held by staff and administrative personnel of the Greenville City Schools system to honor Glenn Cox, superintendent of the city schools who will be leaving this post at the end of June.

Mrs. Kay Whitehurst, director, secondary education, was mistress of ceremonies. Clarence Gray, principal, Eastern Elementary School, gave the invocation, and a poem of appreciation was read by Charles Ross, director, elementary education.

A number of mementoes were presented to Cox, and those making the presentations were F. R. Sanders, Paul Rasberry and Zulu Rouse.

Police Hit By Attack

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Guerrillas, lobbing hand grenades and firing automatic rifles, attacked a police station near the Indian Ocean port city of East London early today, but no casualties were reported, police said.

The brief attack on the small Fort Jackson station, about seven miles from East London, occurred at 1:30 a.m. — 7:30 p.m. EDT — almost an hour before guerrillas sabotaged a railroad line, cutting commuter service between Johannesburg and the satellite black township of Soweto, police said.

Both attacks were believed to have been carried out by black nationalists.

The attack on the Fort Jackson police station lasted several seconds and hit an unoccupied office, the South African Press Association reported from East London.

Brig. J.H. Du Plessis, divisional commissioner of police for the area, said he believes two or three guerrillas carried out the raid using Soviet-made weapons.

Police said a black guard posted outside the station had no chance to return the guerrillas' fire before they disappeared into the night.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for either the police station attack or the railway sabotage.

The outlawed African National Congress, which is fighting to topple South Africa's white-minority government, has claimed reponsibility for similar attacks in the past.

Police throughout the country have been on alert for possible trouble in connection with Republic Day festivities, May 31, which mark the 20th anniversary of South Africa becoming a republic.

Nevada Casino Tax Bite Upped

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A controversial measure to hike taxes paid by Nevada casinos by nearly $20 million has been signed into law by Gov. Bob List.

The gaming tax measure increases the gross revenue tax on casinos from 5½ percent to 5¾ percent. An extra $40 yearly would be collected on each slot machine in the state.

The increase in gaming taxes was sought in efforts to make up a $40 million shortfall in funds for Nevada schools. Lawmakers hope to find the rest of the needed money through budget cuts in other areas.

See Decline In Young Inmates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because of a decline of incarcerated girls, the number of youths held in privately operated juvenile custody facilities has dropped, according to the Justice Department.

A survey released Sunday said that at the end of 1979 there were 28,678 juveniles in 1,558 private facilities, compared to 29,070 in 1,600 such facilities two years earlier.

Andretti Declared Indianapolis 500 Winner

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — In a move unprecedented in the 65 years of the Indianapolis 500, Bobby Unser was bumped from the winner's circle — penalized for illegally passing several cars — and Mario Andretti was declared today the official winner of Sunday's race.

Roger Penske, owner of Unser's car, immediately filed two official protests, one over the race stewards' decision to penalize Unser one lap and drop him to second, just ahead of third-place finisher Vern Schuppan, and the other alleging that Andretti had illegally passed one or more cars on the same 149th lap which appeared to have cost Unser the race. Both protests were to be heard within hours by U.S. Auto Club officials, said Art Meyers, chief referee for the race.

Even Andretti, whose only other victory had come in 1969 (when he beat Dan Gurney and Unser across the finish line), had believed when he went to bed Sunday night that he had little chance of overturning the outcome of Sunday's fiery, accident-marred race.

He had crossed the line 5.3 seconds — about 300 yards — behind the Penske PC-9B Cosworth that carried Unser to an apparent third Indy victory. And, when asked what he thought his chances of being awarded the victory, Andretti replied caustically: "Knowing this joint — nil!"

But he was awarded it after race stewards considered a petition filed by Andretti, teammate Gordon Johncock (he finished ninth) and A.J. Foyt (he was 13th). The petition was not an official protest — although it had the same effect — and was filed only by the drivers, not the car owners.

All three drivers said they saw Unser pass several cars illegally during a yellow-flagged caution period in the 149th lap. Unser, they said, made what was determined to be the illegal move as he came out of the pits.

Pat Patrick, the owner of Andretti's Wildcat Cosworth, seemed to be one of Penske's strongest allies in the attempt to reverse today's decision and restore the checkered flag to Unser.

When told his driver was named the winner, Patrick said, "I don't agree. I don't think that's right. I am going to talk to (Chief Steward) Tom Binford about it. They should have penalized him when the thing was reported, not after the damned race.

"We are pleased, but yet disappointed, with the manner in which Mario's victory was recognized ... If it (the penalty) had been imposed at that time, the final results would have been more fairly determined,. That failure deprived Mario, our team and our sponser, STP, from participating in the appropriate postrace functions."

Meyers said it took this long to decide that Unser had broken the rules because "we could not determine what happened until we checked after the race. We checked the scoring, (video) tapes and reports from (track) observers.

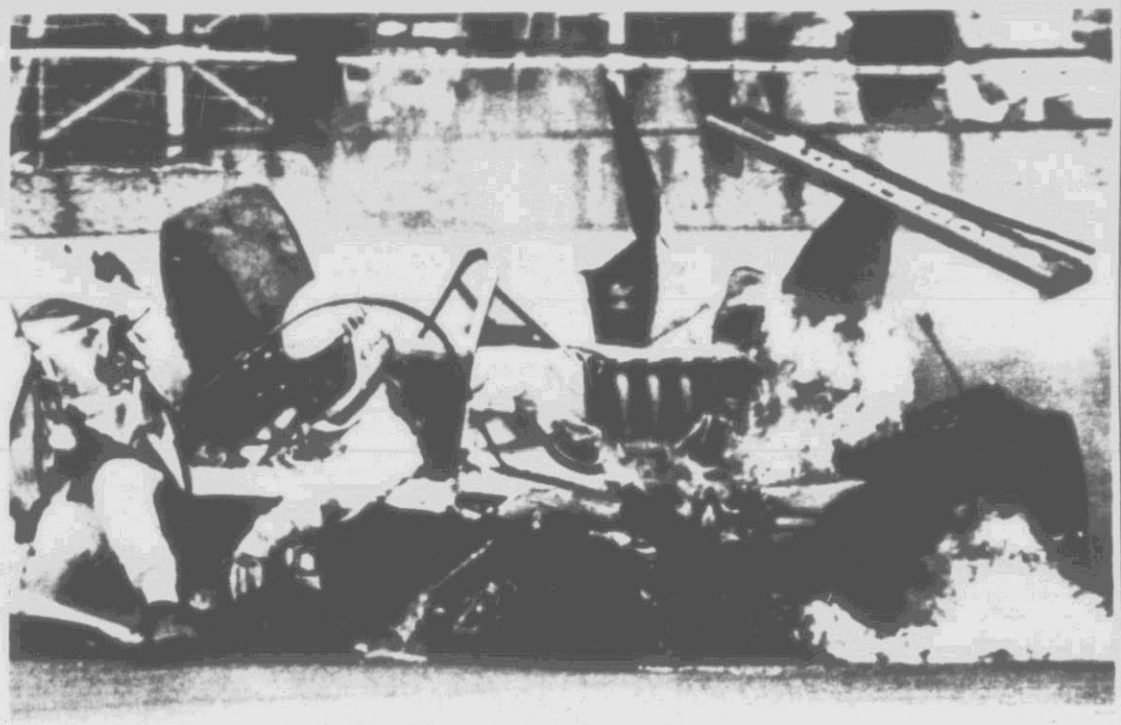

"We could count that he (Unser) passed seven cars while on the (track) apron. You can't do that."

In the past, changes in the final standings — moving drivers up or down one or more positions — have been routinely made. But never before had a driver finished first and wound up anywhere else.

If the Penske protest over the stewards' decision is upheld and Unser is restored to first place, Andretti will wind up second again. If the protest by Penske over Andretti's driving in lap No. 149 is upheld, Unser will finish first and Andretti, penalized a lap, will wind up third, behind Schuppan.

Binford, explaining the rationale behind the decision to bump Unser, said: "We discussed the 'blend-in' rule at some length at our meeting with the drivers last Thursday. When you leave the pits, there is an orange cone there that is the approximate position where you join the field — blend in with the other cars.

"Obviously, this is not an exact situation. You can pass one or two cars on the way in, depending on traffic. But when you set sail and pass eight or nine cars under that condition, that's not considered blending. This is not an optional penalty.

Bobby Allison Drives To 600 Triumph

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — It didn't take long for many drivers' fears to be realized during Sunday's World 600 stock car race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Throughout a week of practice and qualifying, turn four had been the most dangerous. Spinouts, scrapes, close calls and accidents seemed to be as predictable as the fact the drivers who passed that turn would pass it at full speed.

Standing almost ominously in turn four is the track hospital. During Saturday's Late Model Sportsman Mello Yello 300, it had plenty of business. Things were much the same Sunday.

A total of seven caution flags were waved Sunday, five because of accidents or spins in turn four. The most frightening, and damaging, was on the 152nd lap — in turn four.

Bobby Allison stood in the winner's circle after the race answering questions about his victory, but it was obvious his mind was somewhere else. His younger brother, Donnie, had been in that turn four accident, and he was still awaiting word on his condition.

The victorious Allison said he was powerless to help his injured brother, but also said he had to continue the chase for victory.

"I felt obligated to do my best job," Allison said. "He and I have raced side-by-side for 23 years. I know he'd be alarmed if he saw me sitting down there like that. I was alarmed when I saw him down there like that."

Allison also commented on an accident involving Neil Bonnett on the front straightaway at the same time another accident was occurring in turn four.

"I just hope Donnie and Neil Bonnett are OK," he said. "My heart's been in my throat all afternoon."

Bobby Allison's fears were well-founded. Donnie had been moved from the track hospital to Charlotte Memorial Hospital where he was admitted to the intensive care unit for tests and observations. His condition was listed as "guarded" early Monday morning.

Donnie Allison's injuries included a broken right shoulder blade, a brusied right lung, a concussion and fractured ribs.

Things appeared to be settled down until disaster struck — on lap 150.

Stan Barrett and Rusty Wallace got together to cause the fifth caution. Turn four had struck again. And on lap 211, Wallace and Jimmy Means had another meeting in turn four.

Under NASCAR rules, the drivers race to the start-finish line in a caution situation. In the process, Neil Bonnett ran into the back of Bobby Wawak.

Bonnett, the pole-sitter, was taken to the track hospital — in turn four. He was released to go see his own doctor, but he wasn't moving too quickly.

"They told me to beat Cale (Yarborough) back to the line," Bonnett said. "I had it wide open when a slow car (Wawak) turned right in front of me. I don't know how bad I'm hurt, but I'm fixin' to go get X-rayed."

Although turn four had already done a great deal of damage, it reared its ugly head one more time. Joe Ruttman spun out on the 260th lap.

"It (turn four) had a big left turn in it," said Bobby Allison afterwards when asked about the problem with that corner.

Rose Opens Playoffs Vs. Hoggard Tuesday

Rose High School's Rampants, co-champions of Division I and winners of a Saturday playoff game with Northern Nash for the right to move on, opens State 4-A Playoff action here Tuesday night at 8 p.m. against Wilmington Hoggard High School.

The Rampants bring an outstanding 22-2 record into the playoffs, having gone through the tough Division I race with just two losses. One of those came against co-champ Northern Nash, in the first league game of the year, 6-4. In that contest, Rose was ahead 4-2, only to see a last inning grand slam homer win the game. Rose later avenged that defeat with two wins against the Knights, the latest the 6-4 victory Saturday that gave Rose the playoff berth.

The other loss came against Rocky Mount in the Gryphon park, a place where victories for the Rampants have been very few, and far, far between over the years.

In contrast, Hoggard brings in a 14-6 record, having gone 11-5 in Division II play, where it finished second.

And while both of the Rose losses came on the road, five of the six Hoggard losses have also come away from home, a fact that must brighten the faces of the Rampant players.

Coach George Hall, in his first season with Hoggard, admits that his team has had their problems away from its home turf.

While official stats were not immediately available, Hoggard is led by first baseman Bud Nixon, who has slapped six homers. Alton Ross, the centerfielder, Berry Stephens, a pitcher/shortstop; third baseman Tom Glancy, and pitcher/outfielder Billy Wolff are also good batsmen.

Scott Lewis the workhorse on the mound for Hoggard, posting a 7-4 record, while Wolff is 3-1, and David Bednarczyk is the top reliever. All three are righties.

Rose's hitting is led by catcher Emmett Walsh, who is hitting at a fine .425 clip, having banged out seven extra base hits, including five doubles and two homers.

Rightfielder Kenny Barnes is next with a .390 average. He's picked up five doubles, three triples and two homers along the way.

Sammy Hodges, who has seen reserve action in the outfield and as a courtesy runner, sports a fine .375 mark, while another reserve, Billy Dough, has a .367 average.

Third baseman Crowell Pope, who leads the team in homers with four, has a .360 mark, followed by Mont Carter, who shares second

Texan Edges Renner By 1 Stroke In Tourney

Win First In 4½ Years For Fergus

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Keith Fergus, one week after a demoralizing experience, has learned how to play the last 10 holes of a PGA tournament.

It paid big dividends Sunday. He handled the pressure of a head-to-head contest with playing partner Jack Renner for his first victory in 4½ professional golf seasons, a $63,000 payday in the Memorial Tournament.

The 27-year-old Texan played Muirfield Village's last 10 holes in par. It helped him to a 1-under-par 71, a 72-hole total of 284 and a one-shot victory over Renner.

Seven days earlier, Fergus blew up in the Colonial National Invitation tournament. He was one shot off the lead before double-bogeying the ninth hole and playing the last 10 in 9 over par. His back nine of 42 gave him a tie for 21st place.

"That will demoralize you real quick," he said. "I was so down. You're away from you're family. You have all the travel. You wonder whether it's all worth it. Then something like this happens, and it's all worth it."

The swirling, gusting winds of Muirfield Village took their toll Sunday. Only three players among the first 17 finishers could solve par of 72. And Fuzzy Zoeller, Fergus and Renner managed that feat by a single shot with 71s.

The 7,116-yard monster course was especially hard on the 54-hole leaders. George Archer and Craig Stadler went for 75s. Tom Kite had 76.

Archer and Stadler fell into a third-place tie with Tom Purtzer and Tom Watson at 287. They were the only players besides Fergus and Renner to dip under par of 288 for four rounds. They earned $16,800 apiece.

Fergus assumed the sole lead for good when Renner 3-putted 14 for a bogey 5. Then Fergus parred the last four holes, climaxing his performance with a 4 on 18 after a shot from a fairway bunker dropped 30 feet from the cup.

Renner was in the same trap. He hit first and applied the pressure by dropping a four-iron shot to within 40 feet of the hole.

"It looked like he (Fergus) was worse off than me," Renner said. "Quite frankly, I thought he might make 6."

Fergus switched from a seven iron to a six iron and was forced to stand in a rough 6 inches above the ball, which was nestled close to the lip of the bunker.

"I hit the best shot I could hit," said Fergus. He then two-putted from 30 feet to push his lifetime earnings past $418,000 and this year's winnings to almost $117,000. Renner settled for a runner-up check of $37,800.

Ongais In Hospital With Fractures

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Ongais has had a lot of nicknames.

He's been called the "Flyin' Hawaiian," Danny "On the gas" and the less kind, but more direct, "Leadfoot."

Whatever, the nickname, the veteran road racer and one-time drag racing champion likes to go fast.

The 39-year-old racer, who lives in Santa Ana, Calif., is lying in a hospital bed today with multiple injuries suffered in a fiery and frightening crash during Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

He was going more than 180 mph and was running with the leaders when the bullet-like car suddenly veered right and slammed into the first turn wall.

The squat, copper-skinned driver was pried from the twisted remains of his battered black race car suffering from a compound fracture of his lower right leg, a broken left forearm an internal injuries.

After undergoing several hours of surgery at nearby Methodist Hospital Sunday afternoon to set the broken bones, Ongais was listed by the hospital in serious but stable condition.

The fact that he was alive after the gut-wrenching crash on the 64th lap of the race came as a surprise to many of those in the throng of more than 300,000 who watched the race.

"I thought he was dead," said Joe Roth Sr., of Cincinnati, who was sitting in the third turn with his son. "The whole front end of the car was gone. He was just hanging out of it."

Ongais, who usually keeps his thoughts to himself and generally fends off media and fan attention, was conscious and talking with the medical team while being taken by ambulance to Methodist.

A member of the somber Intescope Team crew, for which Ongais drives, talked a bit about his friend, although he said, "Danny doesn't want us us talking about him without his OK."

A woman standing nearby, with another member of the team, chimed in, "He's really a sweetheart; a real nice guy."

Ongais started his racing career on motorcycles in his native Hawaii in 1967. He began driving sports cars and drag racers in 1960 and made his first of four previous Indy appearances in 1977, when he finished 20th.

Ongais crashed at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway prior to time trials for the 1979 race, but was able to come back and make the field. He went on to finish fourth, his best showing at Indianapolis.

Hurley Haywood, another sports car driver who has tried his hand at Indy, once said of Ongais: "Danny drives on the ragged edge a lot. But he also gets more out of a car sometimes than should be mathematically possible."

Sunday, he led laps 61 through 63, pitted briefly for fuel and, while trying to catch the flying frontrunners, something in the car apparently let him down before he came around again.

"It looked like something just broke," said one track safety worker. "The car just veered right into the wall. It was a bad one."

Rookies Among Top Indy Finishers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The 1981 Indianapolis 500 was only Josele Garza's second champ car race, but he qualified sixth, led for several laps and passed all of the favored former champions.

Last month, race officials, for the first time, sponsored a special orientation session for rookie drivers. Kevin Cogan passed the rookie session up and had the best finish of all this year's first-timers at Indy.

Once again, the Indianaapolis 500 proved to be a surprising mixture of contradictions where veteran drivers are considered rookies and even the most inexperienced driver has a shot at winning.

Cogan, 25, Redondo Beach, Calif., finished fourth. Another rookie, Geoff Braham, 29, San Clemente, Calif., was right behind him in 5th place.

"I think it's the greatest race in the world," said Garza, 22, a slim, handsome Mexican. "Now, I'm hooked on Indianapolis. I'm going to win it one of these years."

Garza, who had run in just one Indy style race before Sunday's race, led twice for a total of 11 laps, passing even the legendary four-time Indy winner A.J. Foyt. "It didn't even click in my mind that it was Foyt."

Garza was forced out of the race by mechanical failure, after 138 laps something went wrong with his rear wheels and he crashed into the wall, but was not injured.

"I climbed out of the car and everyone was applauding. That meant a lot to me," Garza said.

A failed gearbox took Tom Klausler out of the race. For Don Lazier, the end came when his engine blew. Accidents also ended hope of victory for Pete Halsmer and Scott Brayton.

Like Cogan and Brabham, Tony Bettenhausen, Bill Asup and Mike Chandler still were running at the checkered flag.

This year's crop of rookies was a mixed bag of old hands like Lazier and Alsup and wide-eyed newcomers like Garza.

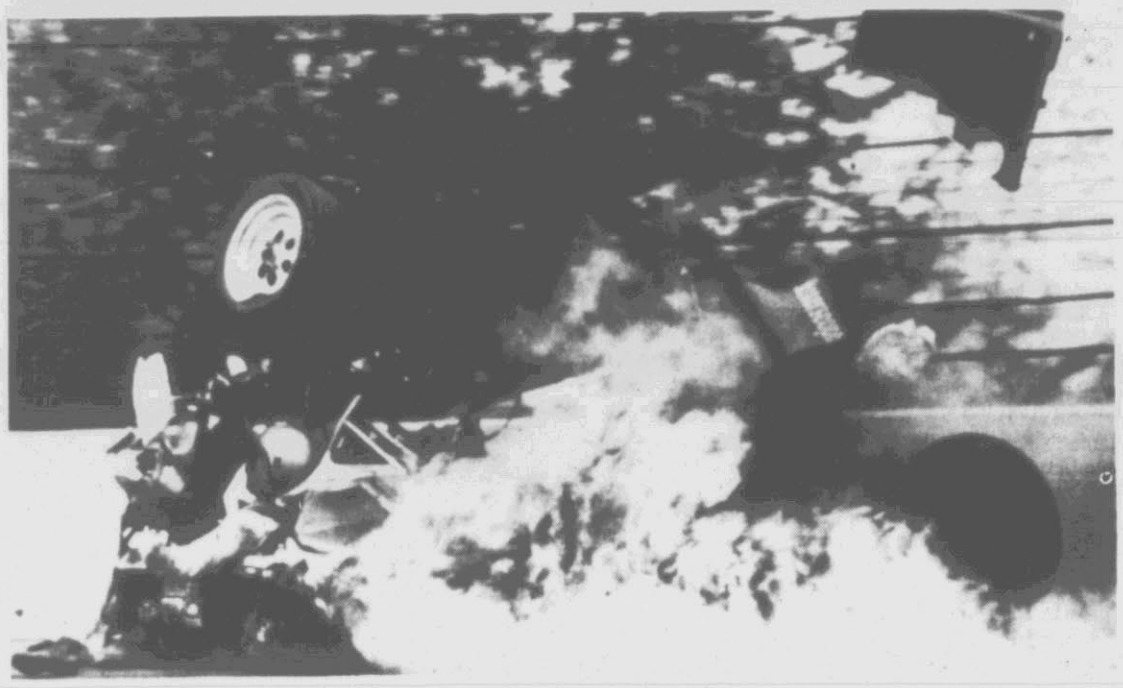

Some like Brayton, 23, Coldwater, Mich., were fiercely proud of making the starting lineup at Indy "It was a hell of an experience. I'm glad we got through the race the way we did."

Other drivers like Klausler, were relieved they had broken the ice and no longer were rookies.

"I was pretty happy once it was all over. It was very difficult breaking into this race.

One of the ironies of Indy is that even the most experienced driver is considered a rookie if he never has run at the Speedway in May.

"I think it's an accurate description of anyone entering the ace for the first time," said Lazier, 42, a veteran of more than 12 years in racing. "I talked to as many drivers as I could this month and they told me a lot, but you need to get out there and see for yourself what it's like."

Hite Wins Classic For First LPGA Title

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — It was a long, frustrating wait for her first Ladies Professional Golf Association title, but Kathy Hite never stopped believing her turn would come.

She achieved it Sunday with a ragged, but efficient, round of even-par 72 and a one-shot victory over JoAnne Carner in the $125,000 Corning Classic.

"I couldn't help thinking it was meant to be," the 32-year-old Florence, S.C., native said. "It seemed like I got so many great breaks. Even when I'd hit it into the trees, I'd find that I had a shot.

"It got so that I decided that God was on my side. He wants me to win this thing."

To collect the $18,750 winner's check — more money than she had ever won in a season — Hite needed more than breaks. It took the stamina to withstand a brilliant charge by the veteran Carner, 42, who shot 5-under-par 67, and the nerves to wait for Sheehan, a remarkably collected rookie, to make a mistake.

Sheehan and tour money leader Nancy Lopez-Melton, both 24, tied for third at 3-under-par 285.

Lopez-Melton's $102,143 after the tournament made her the first woman golfer over the six-figure plateau this season.

Cathy Morse, who started the day one shot behind Sheehan and four behind Hite at 2-under, was the fifth performer to better par with 286.

Joan Joyce and Dot Germain, whose respective scores of 69 and 70 were two of 28 sub-par rounds on the final day, were paired at 1-over 289, while five golfers were clustered at 290.

Among them was Barbara Mizrahie, whose 66 tied a course record held by four others, including Sheehan.

The four-day total of 48 eagles set an tour record, said LPGA spokesman Michael Reisman. The old mark was 42 in several events.

Baseball Talks Resume Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — With a Friday strike deadline staring them in the face, negotiators for major league baseball club owners and players will return to the bargaining table Tuesday.

Kenneth E. Moffett, the federal mediator involved in the negotiations, said after Saturday's session: "It doesn't look good.

"I don't feel as good this year as last," said Moffett, referring to a last-minute agreement last May that avoided a player walkout.

The sole issue is compensation for the signing of ranking free agents. The owners have implemented a plan that would require more meaningful compensation — a major league roster player rather than picks in the amateur draft — when a team loses a ranking free agent to another team through the re-entry draft. The players are concerned that owners, required to part with players, would be less apt to sign free agents and their mobility as free agents would be restricted. They are set to strike following the completion of games next Thursday night.

The executive board of the Players Association, which is headed by Marvin Miller, is scheduled to meet here Thursday.

"I wasn't impressed by the owners' side," Cleveland pitcher Bert Blyleven said after Saturday's meeting. "We have something we won and they want to take it away. They want us to make a proposal. Why should we?"

Instead, the players are hoping for a favorable decision from the National Labor Relations Board after charging the owners with unfair labor practices. William Lubbers, the NLRB general counsel, is expected to disclose his decision on the charges on Tuesday.

Lubbers could dismiss the charges or issue a complaint. If he does the latter, the NLRB also could seek an injunction in federal court to postpone the strike deadline.

Last year, the negotiations involved many subjects, all of which were settled with the exception of the free agent clause. It was put off for further study, and then the owners, excercising a right provided in last year's contract agreement, unilaterally implemented their plan. The agreement which prevented a strike last May also gave the players the right to strike over the compensation issue providing they do so prior to June 1.

UNC-Johns Hopkins In Lacrosse Finals

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Nationally second-ranked North Carolina takes on top-ranked Johns Hopkins in the finals of the NCAA Lacrosse tournament next Saturday, thanks to a 17-8 Tar Heel romp over Navy this past Saturday.

Johns Hopkins beat Virginia 10-6 in the semifinals Saturday.

North Carolina, 11-0, played "their worst game all season in the second quarter," said Tar Heel coach Willie Scroggs. The Tar Heels ended two quarters tied 5-5 with the Midshipmen after scoring only one goal in the second period.

But North Carolina rallied in the final quarter with nine goals — three within 18 seconds of each other. Attackman Monte Hill led the Heels with four goals, followed by Jeff Homire and Mike Burnett with three goals each.

Syd Abernethy led Navy with four goals.

"We've been in four tournaments and this is the first time we've been to the finals," said Scroggs, who played and coached at Johns Hopkins.

Scroggs said his experience with Johns Hopkins won't give North Carolina an edge in the finals.

In the Johns Hopkins game in Baltimore on Saturday, all-American attackman Brendan Schneck slammed in three goals and chalked up one assist to lead the top-ranked Blue Jays to the victory over the Cavaliers.

The championship game takes place Saturday at 2 p.m. in Palmer Stadium in Princeton, N.J.

Bibby's Bat Helps Pirates Batter Phils

By The Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Pirates pay Jim Bibby to pitch, and he has been doing that well enough these days.

Sunday he gave them a bonus with his bat.

Bibby not only combined on an eight-hitter with Victor Cruz, but also smashed a two-run homer to lead the Pirates to a 7-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Phil Garner walked to open the Pittsburgh fifth and stole second, one of five Pirate steals in the game. When Bibby stepped to the plate with two out, Philadelphia catcher Bob Boone cautioned right-hander Marty Bystrom that the Pirate pitcher was no soft touch. Bystrom's first pitch was a curve that wound up in the left field seats in Three Rivers Stadium.

The Phillies had taken a 1-0 lead in the third on an RBI double by Pete Rose, but that was soon wiped out with one swing of Bibby's bat. The Pirates added five runs in the eighth on an RBI single by Dale Berra, a two-run single by Omar Moreno and a two-run double by Bill Madlock.

Bibby, 3-2, was coming off a victory over Atlanta in which he allowed a leadoff single and then retired 27 straight batters. He retired the first five Phillies in order Sunday, before hitting Garry Maddox with a pitch, and his string of 32 consecutive batters retired was six short of the Pirate record held by Harvey Haddix.

Cubs 6, Expos 2

Bill Buckner drove in three runs with a double and a triple before leaving the game with a pulled hamstring as Chicago defeated Montreal and won two games in a row for the first time this season.

The Cubs took the lead in the first inning with a run on successive doubles by Joe Strain and Buckner, and Buckner tripled in a pair in the third following a walk and a single by Ivan DeJesus.

Sensational Tim Raines stole two bases for the Expos, giving him 40 in the 38 games he has appeared.

Mets 3, Cardinals 1

Lee Mazzilli homered in the fifth inning and scored the winning run after tripling in the 10th to lead New York over St. Louis.

Mazzilli led off the Mets 10th with his triple past Cardinal center fielder Tony Scott, then scored on John Stearns' double to give the Mets a 2-1 lead. Stearns went to third on Hubie Brooks' single and scored when the throw from right field got past shortstop Mike Ramsey.

The Cards had sent the game into extra innings on Keith Hernandez's leadoff homer in the ninth against Mets starter Mike Scott.

Padres 7, Braves 5

Randy Bass drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the eighth inning to lead San Diego over Atlanta. Gene Richards, who hit a three-run homer earlier, opened the eighth with a single and was safe at second on a fielder's choice. After Terry Kennedy sacrificed and Joe Lefebvre was walked intentionally, Bass drilled a shot to score Richards and Broderick Perkins, breaking a 5-5 tie.

The hit chased Phil Niekro, 2-3, and made a winner of San Diego reliever John Curtis, 1-2.

"I hit two home runs off him last year, and they both were knuckleballs," Bass said of Niekro. "But I definitely was expecting one today. He surprised me with the fastball, and I was lucky enough to make contact. It's the first time I've helped my team during the month of May, and it feels good."

Safe On An Error

Los Angeles Dodger Jay Johnstone slides safely into second base as Cincinnati Red shortstop Dave Concepcion takes the throw from catcher Joe Nolan. Johnson reached first on a hit to Reds first baseman Dan Driessen and went to second when Dreissen's throw to pitcher Doug Bair went wide. L.A. won, 10-3. (AP Laserphoto)

Reds 3-3, Dodgers 2-10

Ken Griffey and Johnny Bench belted RBI doubles to lead Cincinnati over Los Angeles in the first game of their doubleheader. Tom Seaver, Paul Moskau, 2-1, Tom Hume and Joe Price combined on a six-hitter that included solo homers by Rick Monday in the seventh inning and Jay Johnstone's second consecutive pinch-hit homer in the eighth.

Derrel Thomas knocked in four runs and the Dodgers took advantage of 13 walks, five in the fourth inning, to beat the Reds in the nightcap. Bobby Castillo, 1-4, making his second appearance of the day, earned the decision in the second game with 11-3 innings of relief behind starter Dave Goltz.

"Walks definitely killed us," said Reds Manager John McNamara. "They hurt us yesterday and today. We just didn't get the strikes, that's all."

Giants 2, Astros 1

Vida Blue scattered five hits in 7⅓ innings and Larry Herndon drove in one run and scored another to help San Francisco beat Houston. Blue, 4-3, struck out six and walked two before Greg Minton came on in the eighth to earn his ninth save.

Milt May's single in the first inning brought home Herndon from second with the Giants' first run. Joe Morgan doubled to lead off the San Francisco fifth, advanced to third on a fly ball apd scored on Herndon's sacrifice fly for a 2-0 lead and the Giants' eventual winning run.

Correction

Tigers Sweep Orioles; Brewers Capture Pair

By The Associated Press

Martinez and Stanley were double losers Sunday, but while the Baltimore Orioles had Dennis and Tippy Martinez to share the setbacks, Bob Stanley of the Boston Red Sox had to suffer alone.

The Orioles dropped a twin bill to the Detroit Tigers, who beat starter D.Martinez 8-2 in the opener and reliever T.Martinez 5-3 in the nightcap. Meanwhile, the Red Sox and Stanley were swept by the Milwaukee Brewers, 2-1 in 14 innings and 10-7.

Steve Kemp and Lance Parrish did most of the slugging as the Tigers cooled off Baltimore. Kemp drove in four runs in the opener, two with his fourth homer, while Parrish hit his fifth and sixth homers in the nightcap, a solo shot in the fourth inning and a tie-breaking two-run blast in the eighth.

"This takes some of the pressure off both me and the rest of the ballclub," said Parrish, who started the day batting .242 and heard boos from Detroit fans a day earlier. "Maybe unconsciously I've been pressing at the plate. I've been trying to modify my swing and now I'm seeing the ball better."

Parrish jumped for joy and thrust a fist into the air when his second homer cleared the fence.

"I just kept talking and talking to that ball," he explained. "I knew I hit it good and I wanted to tell it to get out."

Brewers 2-10, Red Sox 1-7

Cecil Cooper's two-run homer capped a four-run Milwaukee counter-rally in the bottom of the eighth inning of the nightcap after the Red Sox scored six runs in their half to take a 7-6 lead. The Brewers took the first game on Ted Simmons' sacrifice fly in the 14th inning, snapping the Red Sox' six-game winning streak.

"Our hitters came back and got our bullpen off the hook in the second game," Manager Buck Rodgers said of the nightcap. "Our bullpen has done a super job, but they can't do it all the time. To lose a 6-1 lead and come back and win makes it doubly big."

An error by Boston shortstop Dave Stapleton on Charlie Moore's grounder started the Brewers' rally. Robin Yount's pinch single delivered the tying run and Roy Howell doubled home the winner before Cooper homered for some insurance. The Brewers took a 4-0 lead in the third inning on Cooper's RBI single and Gorman Thomas' three-run homer.

A's 6-5, Blue Jays 5-0

Mike Norris pitched a four-hitter for his first victory since May 5 in the nightcap while Cliff Johnson hit a three-run homer and Tony Armas followed with a solo shot in Oakland's five-run third inning. Rickey Henderson's RBI single in the 12th inning, his fourth hit, gave the A's the victory in the opener after Armas tied the score with a homer in the 11th.

White Sox 10, Angels 2

Ron LeFlore's single with the bases loaded and two out in the second inning skipped by California left fielder Brian Downing for a bases-clearing four-run play to highlight a five-run Chicago inning. Meanwhile, Steve Trout scattered seven hits and blanked the Angels until Bobby Clark's two-run homer in the ninth.

Indians 12, Yankees 5

Cleveland chased Rudy May with six runs in the first inning, two on Rick Manning's bases-loaded single. May began his own downfall with a leadoff walk to Alan Bannister, who stole second and scored on Mike Hargrove's single. A walk to Andre Thornton and Toby Harrah's single loaded the bases. Bo Diaz was hit by a pitch, forcing in the second run. Second baseman Larry Milbourne booted Joe Charboneau's grounder for another run and Manning's single chased May.

Royals 6, Twins 4

Willie Aikens singled home the tying and lead runs to key a five-run seventh inning for Kansas City. The Twins, who have lost 10 of their last 11 games, opened a 4-1 lead in the top of the seventh on Pete Mackanin's two-run homer. But John Wathan and Frank White got the Royals started with singles off Pete Redfern and Cesar Geronimo walked to load the bases. Pinch hitter Lee May then greeted Jack O'Connor with an infield hit that scored Wathan. Hal McRae singled a run home before Aikens delivered two more runs for a 5-4 lead.

Rangers 5, Mariners 3

Jim Sundberg, whose wife lost a baby in premature labor earlier in the day, collected three hits and drove in two runs for Texas. The Rangers broke a 3-3 tie with two unearned runs in the seventh inning. Mickey Rivers singled and second baseman Lenny Randle misplayed Al Oliver's grounder for an error.

"I didn't care what I did today. I just wanted to play to keep my mind off other things," said Sundberg.

base duties with Tom Buie. Carter is at .351, while Buie is at .244.

Centerfielder Paul MacMillan has a .340 average, while first baseman Billy Kittrell is a .244 and left fielder Mitch Brann is a .238.

Shortstop Mark Douglas is hitting .329, and leads the team in stolen bases with 15.

Pitcher Roger Williams has a .333 aveare, while Gordon Douglas sports a .327 average. On the mound, Williams had a fine 0.72 earned run average, having given up 34 hits, walked 26 and struck out 97 in 78 innings. Douglas, at 0.49 ERA, has walked 25, fanned 70 and allowed 28 hits. Only 20 of the 33 runs against Rose are earned.

As a team, the Rampants are batting .335 as a team, while allowing opponents only a .152 batting average.

"Gordon (Douglas) will get the nod on the mound for the first game," coach Ronald Vincent said after Saturday's playoff game with Northern Nash in which Williams pitched.

"I really can't see a lot of difference in who we start, anyway. They're both outstanding pitchers," he added.

"Maybe we've got a little advantage, too. The way the season came down to an end, we've already played two playoff games. We had to win Friday (against Northeastern) to get into a tie for the title, then we had to win Saturday to get into the playoffs. It's been sudden death for two games now for us."

Vincent is glad too to have the home field advantage. It will be the only home game in the first three rounds. The winners travel for the next two contests, then the Eastern champ is the host for the best-of-three game final series.

"It sure would be nice to have that here, wouldn't it?" Vincent said.

If Williams and Douglas can keep hurlin' 'em, and the rest can keep hittin' 'em, it just could come to that.

Little League Luncheon Set

The annual Little League Luncheon Supper will be held Wednesday at Elm Street Park. The event is the only fund-raising project of the Little League. Lynda Hickman is serving as project chairman.

Lunch hours will be from 11:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. Supper hours will be from 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Plates may be picked up from the trucks at Elm Street Park and will be guaranteed until 6 p.m. Plates will be available at $2.50 each from the trucks for those without previously purchased tickets.

A doubleheader will be played that day at Elm Street Little League field with Wellcome meeting Pepsi at 4 p.m. and Kiwanis meeting Optimists at 6 p.m.

Winfield: Players Are United

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

"There ain't going to be no baseball strike," said the strap-hanger on the "D" train rumbling through the Bronx toward Yankee Stadium. "Them guys make so much dough, they're not going give up any of it."

"Yeah, the players — millionaires, you think they're going on a strike?" agreed a companion. "No way, no way."

Winfield managed a bemused smile.

"They have to be kidding," said the 6-foot-6, 220-pound outfielder, whose 10-year contract with George Steinbrenner is variously put at between $15 and $20 million, base pay $1.5 million a year.

"Like everybody else, I hope there isn't a strike," he said. "But if there is, sure, I go out like everybody else. I stick with the whole group.

"If it hadn't been for the group (the Players' Association of which Marvin Miller is executive director,) I wouldn't be where I am today. None of us would be. We are all united in defending the gains we have made over the years."

A visitor pulled out a calculator and with a few punches came to the conclusion that, at $1.5 million a year for 162 games, Winfield would be forfeiting $9,259.26 for every game missed, more than $1,000 for each of nine innings.

"That's conservative," Dave said. "You know, it's funny. I was figuring the other day. If we're out for two weeks I would lose as much money as my mother would make in 4½ to 5 years on her job."

Winfield's mother's job isn't menial. For 26 years she has been in audio-visual education for the city of St. Paul, Minn., where Dave was born and where he continues to carry on most of his outside operations.

On a perennial championship contending team that has been suffering from a batting slump through the first month and a half of the season, Winfield has been one player who has measured up to expectations.

His batting average has stayed around the .325 to .330 mark. Through Sunday's games, he had driven in 27 runs, hit four home runs and played both leftfield and centerfield faultlessly although his normal spot is rightfield, on which Reggie Jackson has the current lease.

Winfield said, after playing eight years with a chronic second division team, he had found new contentment is his new surroundings.

"I couldn't do there the things I can do here," he said, referring to his frustrating years with the San Diego Padres. "There I was captain and team leader. I was expected to carry the team on my shoulders. I always was pressing.

"Here, they have to worry about everybody else. They can't get cute with Reggie (Jackson) and Oscar (Gamble). I am left free to do my thing. It's changed my whole style of playing.

"Yankee Stadium is not a home run park. In any other park, I might have hit 10 home runs by now. And I've hit enough hard line shots that with a little luck I could be hitting .380 or .390.

"I am concentrating now on just getting my hits and not trying for any heroics. Those heroics will come. Be patient."

Winfield is not a braggart, quite the contrary. He is low-key, non-controversial yet supremely confident in his ability as a player and, at 29, his potential for greatness.

Lone Ranger Is Worth Cheering

"The Legend of the Lone Ranger" on opening night at the Buccaneer Movie House Friday turned out to be a happy audience-participant movie, with cheers and applause whenever The Lone Ranger and Tonto pulled off daring escapades.

For all of us who recall the old smaller screen black and white Lone Ranger movies, it is rewarding to have old friends given the scope of wide spaces and color to ride in. Klinton Spilsbury as The Lone Ranger and Michael Horse as Tonto are handsome, athletic and quite good actors to boot.

As the title of the Universal film implies, "The Legend of the Lone Ranger" is more than just another episode in the Lone Ranger series. In a sense, the first half of the film is semi-documentary in nature. The film, which opens in the year 1854, begins with villains chasing an Indian boy who is rescued by young John Reed. The same villains then raid young John's home, killing his parents.

The grief-stricken white lad is taken by the rescued Indian lad to his village, where he becomes a young tribal brother, learning Indian lore and philosophy. In time John's older brother, Dan, finds his kid brother and sends him back east, where he grows into manhood and is educated to be an attorney.

Time passes, and John Reid returns West, longing to see his brother, the open spaces, his remembered Indian blood brother.

As the stagecoach on which he is returning nears Reid's destination, Del Rio, Texas, the young attorney becomes enamored of a beautiful young maiden, Amy (Juanina Clay), also going to Del Rio to be with her uncle, the town's newspaper editor. Villains enter the scene again, with a classic posse chase bearing down on the stagecoach. A few lives are lost, but the day is saved, not alone by the future Lone Ranger, but mostly through the quick thinking and action of a silent Chinese passenger.

From this point on, the action quickens. We discover that a man named Cavendish, a former Union Army officer, is building a powerful army of hoodlums from riff-raff, with the aim of making Texas his own republic.

During a festive affair in Del Rio — which boasts a spectacular parade of colorful skeletons and some pulsating Latin music, the newspaper editor is hanged in his office. John's older brother Dan, who at this point heads a contingent of Texas Rangers, reluctantly lets younger brother come along to help hunt down the culprits. One of the rangers betrays the group to the Cavendish faction, and only young Reid, badly wounded, survives the slaughter.

He is rescued, nourished to health by his boyhood Indian friend who recognizes him by the silver necklace he gave him in the ceremony in which they became blood brothers. The recuperation period provides a pastoral interlude in which Reid learns the fine art of accurate marksmanship and the acquisition of Silver. This film's Silver is certainly one of the finest horses ever to appear in a movie. The slow motion scene in which Reid finally captures the wild stallion and breaks him in to the saddle is a magnificant horse and man ballet.

Fully recovered, possessing a powerful horse, endowed with near superhuman accuracy in shooting, and allied with his boyhood Indian friend, Tonto, the time arrives for the birth of "The Legend of the Lone Ranger." From this point on, it's all pure Lone Ranger — with the audience cheering the two on as they ride from one to another hero assignment to the familiar fanfare of Rossini music long associated with the masked one and his Indian sidekick.

The most spectacular rescue is an all-out confrontation against innumerable odds when the two go to the rescue of visiting President Grant (played by Jason Robard), who has been kidnapped by Cavendish and is being held hostage in the villain's bid to blackmail the American public into giving him Texas in return for the releases of the president.

"The Legend of the Lone Ranger" is a full blend of background story, rip roaring action, the struggle of good hearted men to survive against the forces of frontier evil, the indignity suffered by Indians, a blighted romance, all framed within some of the most breathtaking landscape ever put on film. Despite an occasional word or phrase that would not in the past have been in a Lone Ranger movie, this PG film is entertainment fare of the first order for all ages.

George Jessel Dies Of Heart Attack

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer George Jessel, whose show business career spanned more than seven decades and who became known as the "toastmaster general of the USA" on the dinner circuit, has died at age 83, a hospital reported.

The popular comedian died of cardio-pulmonary arrest at 8:54 p.m. PDT Sunday in the UCLA Medical Center where he was admitted several days ago, said hospital spokeswoman Jane Marks.

Stanley Cowan, Jessel's longtime publicist, said the actor, author, producer, comedian and composer was admitted to the hospital last week for "a few days of medical tests."

Cowan said a nurse found Jessel in a coma Sunday night, and he was was put into the intensive care unit, where he suffered the fatal heart attack a short time later.

Cowan said Jessel had not been ill recently, although four or five weeks ago he "took a slight fall" at his home in Reseda, Calif.

Funeral services were pending for the comedian, who was survived by two daughters.

Jessel grew to professional maturity as a comic, singer and actor in the era of such popular entertainers as Al Jolson and Eddie Cantor. He made his name on Broadway and later performed on radio and in movies and television.

The public came to know him for his seemingly endless travels to address fund-raising dinners of every description and the headlines he made as a suitor to a succession of starlets.

The first activity earned him the unofficial title of toastmaster general, bestowed at a Washington Dinner in 1949 by former President Harry S. Truman. Jessel worked hard to keep the title, speaking in as many as 90 cities in 100 days.

His thousands of speeches helped to raise millions of dollars for organizations ranging from the United Jewish Appeal to a women's sewing circle in Milford, Conn.

"I'm a showman, a songwriter, a producer, a dramatist," Jessel said once. "You might say I'm a comedian by necessity."

Jessel's three marriages ended in divorce. He was married to singer Florence Courtney; actress Norma Talmadge, and a 16-year-old showgirl, Lois Andrews.

Though he spent later years living in Los Angeles suburbs, his career was formed in New York, where he was born on April 3, 1898.

Jessel's voice never lost the accent and hard edge that identified him as a New Yorker.

In 1909 Jessel worked in a movie theater in New York as one-third of the Imperial Singing trio (another of the boy singers was columnist Walter Winchell). Then he toured the country in an act called "Kid Cabaret," billed with Eddie Cantor.

By 1918 Jessel was a star comedian with the Shubert Gaities.

In 1925 he starred in a serious play on Broadway, "The Jazz Singer." But Jessel missed becoming the first star of talking pictures when his contract with Warner Brothers Pictures dissolved in bickering. His colleague, Al Jolson, stepped in to make the film.

In 1944, he became a movie producer, turning out such money-makers as "Nightmare Alley" and "When My Baby Smiles at Me."

In 1963 at age 65, Jessel admitted he was the father of a daughter born to a 29-year-old actress Joan Tyler. When a paternity suit was filed, he remarked: "At my time of life this is a compliment."

Jessel was active in the Friars Club, and organized the club's west coast branch. He was a member of the famed Comedians' Round Table at Los Angeles' Hillcrest Country Club, along with Jack Benny, George Burns, Groucho Marx and Jolson and Cantor.

In recent years the entertainer occasionally played nightclubs and theaters. He was the author of books, "So Help Me" and "Elegy in Manhattan."

Interpretation To Be Provided

ECU News Bureau

NEW BERN — Sign language interpretation for the deaf will be provided at the May 27 performance of the Woody Allen comedy, "Don't Drink the Water," produced by the New Bern Civic Theater.

Interpreters Michael Ernest, Ron Gill and Treva Haynes of the East Carolina University Program for Hearing-Impaired Students and Gena Glass, teacher of deaf preschool children, will interpret the play's spoken dialogue.

The production is set for the Saax Bradbury Playhouse at 413 Pollock St. Tickets, priced at $3 each, are available at the door or in advance at Box 1532, New Bern, N.C. 28560.

While the May performance is designed for persons with hearing impairment, others interested in sign language interpreting are invited.

"Don't Drink the Water" is presented by teen-aged members of the New Bern Civic Theater and is directed by Buddy Davis, Joshua Morgan and Athene Bunn.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — MANY MYOPIC PEDESTRIANS DON'T DARE TO CROSS CITY STREETS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

In Memory

Today people will pause to remember the 1.2 million Americans who have died fighting in this nation's wars. Since the Revolutionary War these wars have cost our country more than $500 billion, as well as immeasurable suffering. Since 1970, more Americans have died in auto accidents than were killed in World War Two, and the Korean and Vietnam Wars combined. But, in the minds of many, the purposeful slaughter of war is the most horrible of tragedies. President Reagan like every U.S. President since 1948, has declared today, Memorial Day, a day of prayer for permanent peace.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the U.S. Secretary of Defense?

Creationism Suit Looms In Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Civil rights attorneys are threatening to file suit challenging an Arkansas law that requires schools teaching evolution to tell students that some scientists believe the world was created by a supernatural force.

Ira Glasser, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, said Sunday the organization will file suit in U.S. District Court this week, alleging that the scientific creationism statute violates separation of church and state guaranteed by the First Amendment.

Critics of the new law say it is a disguise to teach the biblical account of creation in the public schools.

In a telephone interview from his New York City home, Glasser said, "We think it's an establishment of religion, and it ... involves the state promoting religion in the public schools."

Glasser said the ACLU would represent about 19 plaintiffs. He said news conferences would be conducted in Little Rock and New York City on the day the suit is filed.

Philip Kaplan, the attorney for ACLU, declined to release the names of the plaintiffs Saturday. Glasser said he could not recall their names.

Teen Mothers Receiving Assistance

More than six percent of North Carolina's families receiving monthly public assistance under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program are teenage mothers and their children.

A special study of the state's AFDC caseload in October, 1980, by the Division of Social Services of the N. C. Department of Human Resources, showed there were 4,658 such families receiving financial assistance under the program. These families included a total of 10,800 recipients or 5.3 percent of the total AFDC recipients in the state.

"In any given year, about one out of 10 teenager girls in North Carolina will become pregnant. The overall problem of teenage pregnancy has become a matter of great public concern across our state and nation," N. C. Secretary of Human Resources Dr. Sarah T. Morrow said.

She indicated statistics were not yet available for 1980, but that in 1979, teenagers gave birth to 16,715 babies or 20 percent of all births in the state. Half of these were born out-of-wedlock.

"Certainly not all teenage mothers are having to turn to public assistance for support of themselves and their babies, but many are," Dr. Morrow added.

"How she will be able to support herself and her baby is just one of several vital problems that face a pregnant teenager. Her baby stands a much greater chance of dying as an infant or being born with a developmental disability. If she has not finished high school before the baby is born, chances are slim that she will ever finish. One-half of the high school dropouts in North Carolina are caused by pregnancy."

IRS Error Cleared Up

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Though it's said nothing is certain but death and taxes, car wash worker Gary Hanson is certain of one other thing: He's not going to ask the IRS to figure his taxes next year. This year they charged him about 60 times more than his yearly wages.

Hanson had been waiting for the $318 tax refund the Internal Revenue Service said he was due on the less than $3,000 he earned last year.

Then he got a bill for $189,424 in taxes.

Hanson went to the local IRS office, which had figured his taxes and the refund, to try to straighten it all out on Wednesday.

The clerk in the Problem Resolution Program office told him it was an error on the part of the person who put his tax return into the computer, and he was indeed due his refund.

PARALYZED TRAFFIC

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Heavy weekend rains viturally paralyzed rush hour traffic today in this sprawling capital city and Thai officials are concerned the situation may worsen.

GOREN BRIDGE

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A ♡AK752 ◇872 ♣10732
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—It sounds as if partner has six good diamonds and only four clubs, so a bad break in trumps might sink a five club contract. We won't fault you if you elected to cue-bid four spades, but that seems a trifle over-optimistic without a high card in either minor suit. We would simply raise to five diamonds.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J7 ♡Q853 ◇AKQ54 ♣92
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—You have an exceptionally good hand for partner, which cannot be shown by a simple raise to four hearts. However, you have nothing to cue-bid to show partner that you have slam interest. Therefore, jump to five hearts. Your bid over game tells partner that you think there might be twelve tricks for the taking, but alerts him to the fact that you have at least two fast losers in each of the unbid suits.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q10943 ♡J762 ◇QJ83
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—While you do not have much in the way of high cards, your hand can take a lot of tricks on offense, but not many on defense. Also, your length in spades detracts from partner's defensive potential. Jump to four spades. That's a two-way action—you might make four spades, or you might be raising the level too high for the opponents to locate a makable contract for their side.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ ♡AJ1073 ◇6 ♣K976
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—The temptation to raise partner's suit is great, but it should be resisted. Your hand is too strong for a simple raise to two spades, and you don't want to jump to three spades with only three trumps, even as strong as yours, if you have any good alternative. The best way to describe your hand to partner is to bid out your shape. Start with two clubs, and then raise spades at your next turn. If partner passes two clubs, there is very little chance that you will have missed a game.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K7 ♡854 ◇A10985 ♣Q52
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 NT	Pass	Pass
Dble	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Although partner couldn't open the bidding, his balancing double at this point shows a hand that is close to an opening bid. Thus, East will be greeted with a dummy that is virtually barren of high cards, and will be forced to operate almost solely out of his own hand. Since you have a tailor-made opening lead from a good five-card suit, pass.

Q.6—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ87 ♡95 ◇Q954 ♣872
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 NT	Pass	2 ♡	2 ♠
Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Partner must have a pretty good hand to enter the auction at the two-level, vulnerable, against an opposing no trump opening. However, even if East is at the bottom of his opening and West is practically bust, game would be a doubtful venture. Don't punish partner for his competitive action or risk a valuable partscore. Pass

Fear Town Under Siege

NASHVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A plague of burglaries and the slaying of a retired school teacher have led Nashville residents to demand more locks and handguns and to hunt the killer in hopes of getting a reward.

"People are scared to death," said James L. Hinton, part owner of Hinton Brothers Builders. "They tell me they're sleeping with shotguns beside the bed and pistols under the pillow and everything else."

Residents fear the town is under siege, said city Manager Michael Ruffin. Hardware stores cannot keep enough deadbolt locks in stock and gun permits are moving almost as fast.

Bounty hunters armed with shotguns searched barns and vacant houses on Friday hoping to find the person responsible for the slaying of Jessie Corbett and cash in on a $5,000 reward.

Mrs. Corbett, who taught high school and elementary school in Nashville for 39 years before retiring, was stabbed twice in the back and once in the chest with a hunting knife May 16.

Authorities said she apparently struggled with her attacker, who she apparently surprised as he broke through her bedroom window.

Police said a week before the slaying residents reported more than 20 burglaries and burglary attempts. On the night of the slaying, 13 burglaries and break-in attempts were reported.

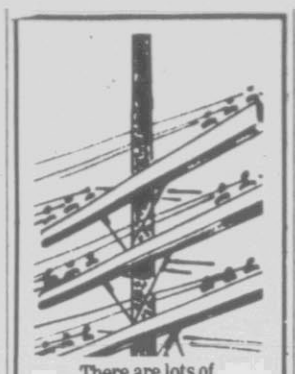

Wives of Jaycees agreed for safety reasons to meet at the home of one of the members while their husbands went to the monthly meeting.

Jerry Creekmore said he plans to buy a gun "just as quick as I can."

Mayor Rex Parramore said city residents have shown restraint and expressed confidence in Nashville police, who have logged many overtime hours investigating the crimes.

A RISK OF WAR

SALONIKA, Greece, (AP) — A Greek court has charged an amateur pilot who threatened to crash his airplane into the Turkish consulate here with exposing the country to the risk of war. The charge carries a possible sentence of up to 20 years imprisonment.

WHY THE 1981 U.S. GOV'T. REPORT ON CIGARETTES IS BEHIND THE TIMES!

On May 5, 1981, the Federal Trade Commission released its "new" 1981 report on cigarette tar levels.

Unfortunately, the new FTC report is really quite old.

Old because it is based on 1979 cigarette brands.

Old because much has happened in cigarette development during the year and a half that it took to complete the study.

Old because it doesn't tell tar-conscious smokers what they want to know today.

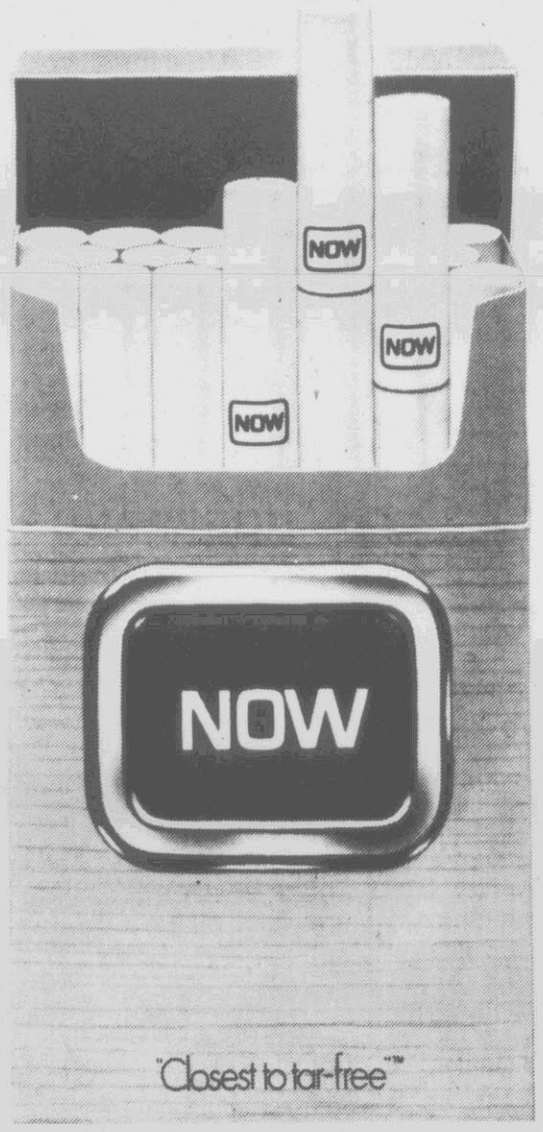

Even the FTC concedes that its report is out of date. And the fact is consumers do not have the latest statistics on comparative tar levels in ultra low tar cigarettes.

If you're a smoker, what does all this mean to you?

Now cigarettes are the Ultra Lowest Tar™ cigarettes available. No matter what the style, there is no cigarette lower in tar than today's Now.

These are the facts.

NUMBERS DON'T LIE. NO CIGARETTE, IN ANY SIZE, IS LOWER IN TAR THAN NOW.

	80's box	85's soft pack	100's box	100's soft pack
NOW	Less than 0.01mg	1mg†	Less than 0.01mg	2mg
CARLTON	Less than 0.01mg	1mg*	1mg	5mg
CAMBRIDGE	0.1mg	1mg	—	4mg
BARCLAY	1mg	1mg	—	3mg

All tar numbers are av. per cigarette by FTC method, except the one asterisked (*) which is av. per cigarette by FTC Report May '81.
