High Court To Decide MacDonald's Fate

By KEVIN M. COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether former Army physician Jeffrey R. MacDonald must return to prison for the slayings of his wife and two young daughters.

The justices will review a ruling that overturned MacDonald's conviction for the 1970 killings at Fort Bragg, N.C., on grounds that MacDonald's right to a speedy trial was violated.

If the Supreme Court reinstates the convictions, MacDonald would have to return to prison under a life sentence.

MacDonald, 37, has been out on bail and working as head of the emergency medical section of St. Mary Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif.

He consistently has contended that four drug-crazed "hippies" invaded his on-base home the night of Feb. 17, 1970, and committed the murders. His pregnant wife, 24-year-old Collette, and their two children, Kimberly, 6, and Kristen, 3, were beaten and stabbed to death.

Police found MacDonald, who at the time was a captain in the Army Medical Corps assigned to the Green Berets, suffering from 20 stab wounds.

A federal grand jury in Raleigh, N.C., did not indict MacDonald until five years later. The charges were dismissed by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on grounds that MacDonald had been denied a speedy trial.

The Supreme Court in 1978, however, ruled that the 4th Circuit court was wrong to consider the speedy-trial issue before an actual trial.

After MacDonald's trial ended in his Aug. 29, 1979, conviction, he once again raised the speedy-trial challenge on appeal — and the 4th Circuit court again last July ruled that his constitutional "due process" right to a speedy trial had been violated.

The appeals court said the long delay between the October 1970 dismissal of military charges against MacDonald and his 1975 indictment violated his right to a speedy trial.

MacDonald spent nearly a year behind bars before the appeals court overturned his conviction the second time.

In urging the justices to reinstate MacDonald's conviction, government lawyers argued, "The ... inclusion in the speedy trial calculations of the period from October 1970 to January 1975, during which time (MacDonald) was not under arrest, indictment, or any other legal restraint seriously misconstrues (previous Supreme Court decisions)."

MacDonald's lawyers disagreed, stating, "The cause has now been reviewed at length in the court of appeals. It should not be further protracted."

His lawyers also claimed they were hurt because the long delay diminished the memory of a key witness whose remarks indicated she was one of the purported intruders in the MacDonalds' home.

In March 1979, the Supreme Court rejected MacDonald's contention that the government's prosecution of him after military charges were dismissed represented unconstitutional double jeopardy.

Must Reduce Spending: Jones

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Defending his vote for the revised Democratic version of Reagan's proposed budget, Congressman Walter Jones emphasized this morning that federal spending cuts must be mandatory.

"We must restrain government spending," he noted,"and at the same time we must increase productivity.

"Over-regulation of industry has reduced the quality of products, in turn reducing the value." Jones listed decreased productivity as a major source of the double-digit inflation plaguing the nation.

The congressman's remarks came at a Tuesday morning Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Pepsi Break held at the Willis Building in Greenville.

"We have to live within our means," Jones emphasized. "We have to limit how much we can spend and this entails tough choices." He added that the effects of Reagan's budget cuts have not been felt, but that they will be.

"There will be some changes in social security," he said. "I don't know whether it will be a reduction in early retirement benefits or an increase in eligibity age to 68."

Jones noted that he disagreed with the reduction in federal student aid money, referring to it as "something I don't understand."

"Education is certainly a top priority with me," commented the congressman, "and I regret that some student workers will lose their jobs."

Jones termed inflation the foremost problem in the nation, calling the double-digit inflation of the last several years "unprecedented."

"One of the biggest causes of this inflation," he explained, "has been investors diverting their money not into solid business projects but into pure speculative endeavors such as gold."

The congressman listed America's high trade deficit as another major source of inflation. "Except for agricultural products our trade deficit has been abominable.

"One big reason we have high inflation is the role government has played in the economy recently. We, the people have demanded more from our government in the last few years in the way of mandatory wages, environmental protections, etc," commented Jones.

"This has resulted in over-regulation of industry, reduced quality of products, and inflation."

Jones also backs an across-the-board tax cut. "The reductions in government spending should be accompanied by a reform of the existing tax structure," he said. "I support the bill that commits the government to a tax reduction by 30 percent in three years — the tax burdon will be reduced 10 percent over a period of three years."

Jones commended the chamber for its interest in government affairs. "This would be a better country if all chambers were as active and concerned in government as you," commented the congressman.

Chamber president Robert Griffin told chamber members and guests that the chmaber has tentatively negotiated an

OPEC Reported Near Agreement On Price Freeze

By ROBERT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is close to an agreement calling for a $2 price increase by leading producer Saudi Arabia in return for a price freeze by all other members, two oil ministers said today.

"The Saudis are ready to go to $34," Gabon's oil minister, Edouard Alexis M'Bouy-Boutzit told reporters. The Saudis currently have OPEC's lowest price of $32 a barrel and produce more that 40 percent of OPEC's output. A $2 Saudi increase would raise gasoline and heating oil prices in America about a half penny a gallon.

Another minister, who asked to remain anonymous, also said the Saudis would raise their price.

The two ministers also said that other members would freeze their prices in return for the Saudi increase. They did not say how long the price freeze would last but conference sources predicted it would be at least until fall.

The two ministers said the Saudis had refused to cut their record high production at this time but would consider doing it later.

The Gabon minister said most OPEC countries were considering across-the-board production cuts to help mop up a world oil glut that is depressing prices.

"I am freezing my price and cutting production by 18 percent," said Qatar' oil minister, Sheik Ali Khalifa al-Sabah.

Qatar, one of OPEC's smaller producers, has an output of 500,000 barrels a day. Like most OPEC producers its price is about $36 a barrel.

Kuwait and Nigeria have already reduced their output this year by between 17 and 20 percent.

OPEC President Subroto of Indonesia said the meeting would be finished by about 7 p.m. — 1 p.m. EDT.

The oil cartel's semiannual price-fixing meeting began Monday with predictions the Saudis would raise their price $2. But Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, told reporters his government would "never" go to $36, the base price charged by most of the other members of the 13-nation group.

Saudi Arabia was also enforcing a price freeze on the other governments by refusing to reduce its record production of 10.3 million barrels a day, more than 40 percent of OPEC's total output. This, coupled with increased exports from non-OPEC countries and conservation in the industrial nations, has resulted in a glut on the oil market that is keeping the price down.

The average OPEC price is now slightly more than $35 for a 42-gallon barrel. A Saudi increase of $2 would raise the average about 80 cents a barrel and add about half a penny a gallon to the price of oil consumed by the United States.

Libyan Oil Minister Abdessalam Zagaar told reporters the Saudis had given "a few hints" that they were willing to raise their price. Iranian Deputy Oil Minister Hassan Sadat said the Saudis had to raise their price because of pressure from other OPEC members.

Some sources predicted Saudi Arabia would also agree informally to lower production, but Yamani said he wouldn't even discuss production at the meeting.

A Saudi price hike would be a step toward the single OPEC price that the cartel has been unable to agree on since early 1979. That also might be a step toward adoption of a long-term price plan, supported by Saudi Arabia, which calls for regular small price hikes linked to inflation rates, currency fluctuations and economic growth rates.

Begin Offers Peace Talks With Lebanon; Would Involve Syria

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin has offered to open peace talks with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis in Beirut or Jerusalem, Israeli Radio reported.

The radio report said Begin extended the offer Monday during a campaign speech in northern Israel. There were no further details and no indication that the talks Begin was proposing would involve Syria, whose anti-aircraft missiles installed last month in eastern Lebanon have been the focus of the current Mideast crisis.

There was no official comment from Beirut on Begin's offer, but the newspaper al-Anwar quoted presidential palace sources as saying the proposal was a "maneuver not worthy of a reply."

Militia clashes between Lebanese supporters of Iran and Iraq, border shelling in southern Lebanon and artillery attacks on the Christian city of Zahle left at least 10 people dead and several wounded overnight, police reported today.

Pro-Iraqi and pro-Iranian Lebanese Moslems have been waging their own proxy war since the Persian Gulf war between the two oil-producing nations broke out last September.

Syria's Soviet-made missiles shot down another pilotless Israeli reconnaissance plane Monday. Israel said it was the third plane, all pilotless drones, lost to the Syrian batteries this month, while Syria claimed it was the fifth.

A Syrian communique said it was hit as it flew through Syrian air space and the wreckage landed near the village of Madaya, six miles east of the Lebanese-Syrian border. The Israeli military command said the remote-controlled plane was directed to fly over Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, where the Syrian missiles are in place, but could have strayed into Syria.

Begin insists that the Israeli air force will knock out the Syrian missiles unless they are withdrawn from Lebanon so that Israeli reconnaissance flights can proceed unhindered. Syrian President Hafez Assad says he will not bow to the Israeli demand.

U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib, trying to arrange a diplomatic solution to the crisis, was still awaiting a response from Saudi Arabia to a proposal concerning the Syrian missiles.

Search For Drug 'Mother Ship'

ARIPEKA, Fla. (AP) — Authorities were searching the Gulf of Mexico for a "mother ship" following the arrest of 21 people as they allegedly unloaded thousands of pounds of marijuna from three 32-foot boats.

Police from seven state and federal agencies surprised the unloading operation early Monday. They said they believe the marijuana was loaded on the three smaller boats from a larger ship offshore.

Found Carter 'Serene' Man

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Former President Jimmy Carter is a man at peace with himself, says a former White House advisor who spent Sunday with Carter.

Dr. Robert Maddox, now an assistant to the office of president at Pitt Community College, describes Carter as "serene, contented and relaxed."

Maddox accompanied three journalists — Stan Hasty of the Baptist Press, Al Shackleford of the Tennessee Reporter and Joe Thompson of the Georgia Baptist Christian Index — to Plains last Sunday to coordinate the second interview Carter has allowed since he left office.

"He is settled in Plains," said Maddox. "He's still getting up every morning and jogging, then spending eight or so hours at his typewriter working on his book." Carter is very committed to his book, added Maddox. "He considers it his prime objective right now."

Carter told his former religious aide that re-adjustment to life in the small town was "easy for both myself and Rosalyn, but difficult for Amy."

"He said Amy has moved several times since she was three years old, and he's afraid she thinks they're never going to stay in the same place," explained Maddox.

"Carter is in Plains to stay," he emphasized. "As far as future political plans, I'm sure he'll have something to say about things.

TEACHING ELEMENTARY STUDENTS TO "HABLA ESPANOL"... Nine Farmville Central High School students have spent time each Wednesday for the last month teaching Spanish to elementary students at Sam D. Bundy School. The program, implemented this year for the first time in Pitt County schools, utilizes students from instructor Jinnette Jackson's Spanish II class. These students spend around 30 minutes of each Wednesday as student teachers, instructing the younger students in basic Spanish. The program began April 22 and will continue through June 3. According to Jackson, the response from both students and student teachers has been excellent. Above, left, Mike Worthington queries a young student about "la lapiz." Technical Standards For TV Shopping Decided

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The day when an average American can sit down at his TV set and receive the news, do his banking or order theater tickets, all at an affordable price, is a step closer to reality.

After years of uncertainty over what type of so-called videotext technology would take root in America, the fledgling industry has drafted minimum technical standards that will allow different systems to "talk" to one another.

The compromise was unveiled last week at a special conference in Toronto, where French and Canadian officials, American Telephone & Telegraph and CBS embraced technical standards to ensure compatibility among different systems.

Removing the major technical roadblock was all it took for most of the participants in the latest telecommunications field to rally together and predict that Americans could turn videotext into a $12 billion market by 1985.

"Everybody has been milling around the race track and now they're in the starting gate," said Jonathan Miller, managing editor of Communications Daily, a newsletter that tracks the electronic communications industry.

"This potentially opens the door to an electronic revolution of which the public is only dimly aware," Miller said. "The industry is now ready to move into the phase of developing a product that consumers will be interested in."

Videotext is a generic term for an electronic delivery system by which all manner of printed and graphic material can be transmitted via telephone or cable TV lines and called up on a TV set or computer terminal.

Such systems are also "two-way" interactive, meaning a consumer could call up information from a store catalogue and then turn around and place an order without getting out of his chair.

Another technology known as teletext allows a consumer to call up such information on a TV set but does not include the two-way capability of videotext.

It was the development of videotext that spawned grand predictions of a coming electronic "Information Age." But the different, incompatable systems developed thus far have kept those predictions from moving toward reality.

There are three major types of videotext systems, each developed by agencies of foreign governments. The British have their Ceefax-Oracle system; the French their Antiope; and the Candaians their Telidon. None has made much headway in the American market.

Although videotext systems do not require any type of regulatory approval, teletext standards for TV transmission must be set by the Federal Communications Commission.

Manufacturers and programmers have been reluctant to embrace a single videotext system when the FCC — without any industry agreement to guide it — might pick a competing system for teletext and make it impossible for consumers to use the same equipment for both.

The situation was further clouded by CBS, which has been the most ardent advocate of teletext and developed a modified system of its own based on France's Antiope.

When AT&T announced last week that all the major players except the British had reached agreement on "commality standards," the prospects for commercial development brightened.

"There would probably be only limited market penetration if each system required its own unique terminal," said AT&T's Samual Berkman. "With that limited penetration, there would be insignificant revenues to support comprehensive and sophisticated data bases."

AT&T is looking to videotext as a major new market for its equipment and transmission facilities. The prospect of offering its own "data bases" such as an electronic Yellow Pages also is attractive to the Bell System.

The newspaper industry is challenging that latter idea, making it even more important to AT&T that other videotext providers at least follow standards that match its own for using the phone lines.

Most observers agree that consumers will be unlikely to pay even a relatively low price of $400 to $500 for videotext equipment unless they are offered a wide range of services.

"Now we can quit worrying about the problems of incompatibility and focus on the central issues that affect videotext's future — the creative, business and marketing aspects," said CBS' John S. Suhler.

High Schoolers Teach Basics Of Foreign Language: Spanish

FARMVILLE — Nine high school students are teaching elementary students the fundamentals of Spanish — teaching them the meaning of words like "azul," "ropas," and "diez."

In a new language learning program implemented for the first time this year in Pitt County schools, students from Jinnette Jackson's Spanish II class at Farmville Central High School are teaching students at Sam D. Bundy School the basics of a foreign language.

"The response to this program has been very good," noted Jackson. "In fact, it's been so good we hope to make it a permanent feature." Jackson said both students and student teachers have been enthusiastic about the program from the start.

"For those that are interested in teaching foreign language as a career it is valuable experience," she added, "and for those who won't pursue a career along these lines it is an opportunity to further their understanding of Spanish."

Students spend 30 minutes of their time each Wednesday with the elementary classes, teaching them colors, clothing, parts of the body, numbers, and the Spanish alphabet.

"Each student is teaching his or her own class," explained Jackson, "using flash cards, hand-outs and oral repetition." In addition, said the instructor, every student is responsible for a bulletin board depicting a Spanish theme for the classroom.

The instruction is a part of the teachers' regular credit for Spanish II in high school, and will continue through June 3.

"As far as I know," said Jackson, "this is the first time a program of this type has been tried in the county schools. A similar one was implemented in the Greenville City schools last year, and was also successful."

Student teachers participating in the program are Wanda Bynum, Scott Cannon, Melba Corbett, Charlene Foreman, Rose Lang, Pebbles May, Pat Patterson, Brenda Reid, and Mike Worthington.

Lessons On Stress For Third-Graders

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Third-graders suffer stress just as adults do — and a school guidance counselor and a psychologist are training one group of children to relax through biofeedback and other methods.

"There are situations where the parent inadvertently puts stress on the child," said counselor Cinda Lewis of the Sedge Garden Elementary School. "They think they are just being concerned parents, but they put high expectations on the children."

Other sources of stress include friends who move away and pressure to succeed academically, she said.

The symptoms of stress include headaches, stomache aches and other complaints resulting from no apparent physical cause, said Mrs. Lewis.

Richard Pinneau Jr., a psychologist with the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, agreed to teach the relaxation methods to the third-graders afer he did an informal survey to see how regularly they had headaches.

On the average, a class would have at least one child with a severe headache and four of five pupils with mild headaches every day, he said.

Breathing and body temperature control are the keys to relaxation, Pinneau said. He gives each child a small thermometer they can use to check their relaxation by measuring their finger temperature.

Students also take home a tape of his voice so they can listen to his 20-minute relaxation session together with their parents. And once a week, Pinneau visits the school for training sessions.

The sessions begin with Pinneau telling teh children to make themselves comfortable and close their eyes. Then, in a hypnotic voice, he tells them they feel beautiful, cool blue air, and can feel the warmth flowing out of their palms.

When they open their eyes, most children are smiling.

The rest of the sessions teach children to breathe correctly and ease tension by, for example, dropping hunched shoulders.

The goal of the sessions is to prevent stress later in life as well as to ease present anxiety, Mrs. Lewis said.

Liz Taylor Is Back On Stage

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor, recovered from a week-long hospitalization for a respiratory infection, is back on the Broadway stage for the revival of Lillian Hellman's "Little Foxes."

The Monday night audience at the Martin Beck Theater welcomed her back with an ovation, and Fred Nathan, a spokesman for the play, said the actress was "in good spirits" and feeling "a lot better."

"She's back now until Sept. 5," the spokesman said, referring to the date the play ends.

The actress was released from Lenox Hill Hospital Saturday. She was admitted to the hospital May 16 suffering from the infection and from torn rib cartilage resulting from severe coughing.

Find Source Of Funny Money

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Secret Service agents have seized plates, negatives and other items officials said were used to print about $1.5 million in counterfeit money during the past six to eight months.

Authorities have not arrested anyone.

But Secret Service special agent John T. Cook said Monday that indictments were likely after the case is presented to a federal grand jury in Little Rock.

Cook said Secret Service officers raided a rural print shop Sunday. He refused to reveal any other details.

Cook said $21,400 in counterfeit $100 bills and $20 bills also were confiscated.

He said authorities believe $1.5 million in counterfeit money printed in the shop was distributed in Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee and Alabama.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

A TRUE CLASSIC. . .is this Fair Island cardigan made from sports-weight yarn.

A circular yoke in traditional Fair Isle styling highlights a classic cardigan to top off all of your favorite sportswear. It is knitted on circular needles with sleeves and body joined before working the yoke — with very little finishing needed. The sweater is designed to be made from sports-weight yarn with a gauge of five and a half stitches per inch.

Directions are written for small (30-32), medium (34-36), large (38-40) and extra large (42-44). The figures in parentheses refer to actual body measurements at chest or bustline.

To obtain directions for knitting the Fair Isle Cardigan, send your request for Leaflet No. 6719 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-6719, containing Brunswick Fore'n Aft Sports Yarn by sending check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. Send $14.25 for small; $16 for medium; $17.75 for large or $19.50 for extra large. Select from the following colors the one you prefer for the body of the sweater: mulberry, camel, slate gray, horizon blue or soft green. Price includes shipping charges.

Dear Reader: Frequently you are instructed to "pick up" or "pick up and knit" a certain number of stitches, usually at a neck edge.

The usual method for doing this involves inserting the needle from the right side of the work through to the wrong side, wrapping the yarn once around the needle and drawing it through to the right side.

Personally, I find that a crochet hook simplifies this task. Holding your yarn with your left hand and the crochet hook with the right hand, insert the hook into the second stitch from the edge and pull a loop of yarn through the knitting. Slip this loop onto your knitting needle forming one knit stitch.

Keep repeating this procedure until the required number of stitches are on the knitting needle. You may find it easier to let several stitches remain on the crochet hook, and then slip them all onto the knitting needle at one time.

You will first have to determine how to space the stitches to be picked up. You may have some stitches at the back and front being held on stitch holders.

Let's assume your pattern says "Pick up 78 stitches at neck edge, including stitches on holder." Then, if you have 32 stitches on the holder for the back and 26 stitches on the holder for the front, you can quickly figure that you need to pick up 20 additional stitches. Divide that figure by two and you then know that you will have to pick up 10 stitches on each side.

If, on the other hand, your directions simply tell you to pick up a certain number of stitches and none have been held on the stitch holders, a slightly different procedure is followed.

In that case, divide and mark the space into quarters. Divide the total number of stitches by four. Then plan to pick up this number of stitches in each quarter. For instance, if you are instructed to pick up 80 stitches, you will need to pick up 20 stitches between each set of markers.

We have all seen handmade sweaters with unsightly holes where stitches have been picked up at the neck edge. Picking up the stitches through the second stitch from the edge rather than through the edge stitch, usually eliminates this problem.

Many knitters find it particularly difficult to achieve a neat appearance when picking up stitches on a V-neck sweater. If this bothers you, try this little trick. First, work a row of single crochet around the neck edge, then pick up the stitches through the back loop of each crochet stitch.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE was both unkind and unhelpful. You advised this 18-year-old boy to see a psychiatrist or psychologist. Now the poor kid will not only worry about his bowlegs, but he'll think he's mentally disturbed, too!

Your blanket advice that people seek psychiatric help for minor problems is lazy, uncaring and potentially harmful to the spirit and the pocketbook. Next time someone like this boy writes, give him what he asks for — common-sense advice.

INDIGNANT IN MADISON

DEAR INDIGNANT: BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE got my best advice. A good-looking 18-year-old who perceives himself to be "deformed and inferior" (his words) and is afraid to ask a girl for a date because he's moderately bowlegged needs more than a list of "bowlegged yet attractive" people. He needs a more realistic perception of himself.

Furthermore, one need not be mentally disturbed to seek psychotherapy. A temporary emotional upset is sufficient reason. And as for psychotherapy being "harmful" to the spirit and pocketbook — poppycock! The spirit will be nourished, and there are mental health clinics everywhere that charge only what the patient can afford.

DEAR ABBY: This is not a request for advice, it's a message to BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE:

I grew up with one side of my face paralyzed, and although it set me apart from everyone else and caused people to remember my name, I yearned to be like everyone else. At times I begged God to make me look "normal." But having to accept my flaw has helped me become emotionally stronger than I would have been had I been able to "correct" my condition — which, of course, was impossible.

Now I have my own separate identity.

I saw a psychiatrist, as Abby suggested you do. A trained professional will let you lay your cards out, then the two of you will go over them together. In the end, however, it is you who will decide how your cards will be played. Try to be less preoccupied with your appearance, think positively, and keep a sharp eye out for that villain of all villains — self-pity.

Because I can accept myself as I am, I have made it. By the way, I am 26 and pulling for you.

COOKING IS FUN

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I have been serving your easily made Pears Helene for a long time and my guests always enjoy them. Have you any other simple but elegant dessert using canned pears that I could offer at parties? — PANTRYSHELF COOK.

DEAR PANTRYSHELF COOK: Yes, the recipe for a new pear dessert follows. I hope you and your guests will enjoy it. But first I'm passing along some information about the contents of the different size cans that Bartlett pears come in. You may find this information as useful as I have.

The 1-pound-and-13 ounce can of Bartlett pears may have 5 to 7, 7 to 9, or 9 to 11 pear halves in the can — depending on the size of the halves. Most canned Bartlett pear halves are bought in this size can.

The 1-pound can of Bartlett pears is also popular. Depending on the size of the pear halves, the 1-pound can usually contains from 5 to 7 or 7 to 9 pear halves. The pear halves in the 1-pound can are smaller than the pear halves of similar count in the 1-pound-and-13-ounce can.

The buffet size (8 ounces) can of Bartlett pear halves holds two servings — usually four small pear halves.

ORANGE PEARS

16-ounce can Bartlett pear halves
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon grated orange rind
¼ cup orange juice
⅛ teaspoon ground ginger
2 tablespoons orange liqueur
2 tablespoons heavy cream

Drain pears; reserve ¼ cup of the syrup. Heat butter in a large skillet. Add 6 to 8 pear halves (depending on how many there are in the can), cut side down, and heat; turn and heat other sides. Add the reserved pear syrup, orange rind, orange juice and ginger; bring to a boil; stir in the orange liqueur. With a slotted spoon, remove pear halves and arrange them in pairs in dessert dishes. Boil liquid in skillet until it is reduced to 2 or 3 tablespoonfuls; stir in the cream and heat thoroughly. Spoon over pears. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Every once in awhile, something happens in our lives to cause us to reshuffle our priorities.

Sometimes, it's a traumatic birthday or a friend facing a crisis. To me, it was the funeral of a good friend that left me vulnerable, confused, and doubtful as to what I am all about.

I wanted to draw all our savings out of the bank and go to Tahiti. I wanted to put the plastic dishes in the driveway and back over them with a car. I wanted to take ballet lessons. Throw away all the fake flowers and replace them with a jungle of vines and greenery. I wanted to take up all the throw rugs and let the dirt fall where it wanted to.

That very night, I took a look at my life, rearranged my cards into a whole new hand, and made a vow. I am not going to be like the woman on the Titanic who, as she climbed into the lifeboat facing an uncertain future, sobbed in anguish, "If I had known this was going to happen, I'd have had the chocolate mousse for dessert."

So get ready, world! Miss Practical is going to start living each day like it's her last.

You know that drawer full of pantyhose that I save? The ones that don't come up to my thighs and depress me every time I look at them? Well, I pitched them.

Remember that big candle in the hallway that's shaped like a rose and gathers dust and gets soft in the summer? I torched it yesterday.

And the car window ... the one on my side that has a two-inch crack in it that we said we'd have fixed when we sell the car? Well, it's fixed.

Guess who's coming to dinner Sunday? Evie and Jack, whom we have seen at 16 weddings and say the same thing to every time. "We've got to get together."

And that big can of tuna that I didn't want to open because I'm the only one who eats tuna and I couldn't bear to waste the rest of it? Well, so what!

As I washed my hands with a little sliver of pink soap shaped like a sea shell, my husband said, "I thought you were saving those. You got them wet and they don't look like a shell anymore."

I looked down at the handful of suds. A shell only holds life. I had just given it a chance to be something more.

Bus Solutions Difficult

School officials and patrons fight a constant battle over what to do about bad conduct on school buses.

The City School Board is working on the problem, but there are no easy answers.

Henry Groome, representing the city wide PTA, presented some suggestions this week.

They included:

— Hiring no drivers with criminal records.

— Requiring an extra half day training for bus drivers (to be paid for by city wide PTA).

— Recruiting parents as bus drivers.

— Assignment of seats to students.

— Enforcement of state rule that no passengers should stand on school buses.

The suggestions are positive, but there are problems.

Any extra training of drivers might be helpful, and certainly drivers — student or adult — should be of good character.

Recruiting parents as drivers might become a question of whether we will go to adult drivers as opposed to the student drivers North Carolina has relied on — something that would take considerable study before a change is made.

Seat assignment might be all right, but who is going to enforce the rules that riders are to sit in specified seats? The driver doesn't have the time.

And as Supt. Glenn Cox pointed out Greenville has an exemption to the no standing rule. A seat for each child would require three or four more buses or about $120,000 total. In many cases this would be for rides of only a few blocks for the last children on.

The citywide PTA suggestions deserve study, as do any other suggestions for improving school bus transportation. Some of the suggestions, however, require more money, either for more equipment or additional or higher trained personnel.

As anyone who has studied school financing is aware these days, the extra money is nearly impossible to find.

Less Money, Higher Costs

Organized opposition to the governor's proposed gas tax increase to finance highway maintenance and new road construction has been picking at bid rigging and other problems in the Department of Transportation.

Certainly the bid rigging scandal was embarrassing, but it was spread over several administrations and it now has been brought to light. Consequently we can expect more competitive bids in the future.

It certainly has nothing to do with whether we are going to have adequate roads. It is a fact that the gas tax is a fixed amount based on per gallon sales, and gas sales are declining. At the same time cost of building and maintaining highways is soaring because of increased energy and other costs. That is what North Carolinians have to face in determining their feelings on the increased gas tax. No side tracking of issues will alter the fact that we have less money to pay far higher costs of road maintenance and construction.

An Impossible Job

By BILL NOBLITT
(First of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — There is no way that a performance evaluation system for educators can be installed in North Carolina public schools beginning in July as mandated by the General Assembly.

Evaluation of teachers, principals, superintendents, and other professional personnel is the foundation of efforts by Gov. Jim Hunt and legislative leaders to upgrade the competency and abilities of public school people.

A variety of pieces fit into the puzzle, and at least four major research and study projects are underway which are supposed to mesh, eventually, into an updated system involving teacher training colleges, testing for certification as teachers, possible adjustments in the state's tenure law, and potential phasing-in of some form of merit pay system to reward the outstanding educator while keeping the mediocre ones on a standard pay scale, if not penalizing them.

But to make any of these approaches work, it is essential that reliable information about what makes a good teacher and how to determine that be collected.

Discipline

Additionally, such defendable evaluation records have become necessary any time disciplinary action is called for against a tenured educator. Even though such evaluations are currently required, there is no standard procedure and that requirement is regularly ignored in many school systems across the state.

So when the General Assembly set a deadline of July, 1981, for statewide implementation of a performance appraisal system in the schools, it was done with much political rhetoric devoted to the good which would flow from the action.

The State Board of Education and the Department of Public Instruction are now faced with the dilemma: what to do with a legal mandate at hand and no way to get the job done.

Some interests have suggested that legislators should simply be told that the deadline cannot be met, and a request lodged for extension. Others are

To the editor:

What guidelines help make good parents?

To me, the good parent is simply one who more than half the time does the right thing instead of the wrong, who know that many factors contribute to and shape the final personality of a growing human being; however, three basic needs are absolutely essential: love, discipline, independence.

Of the three fundamental requirements, the first — love — is the most important; in fact, the more the merrier. The uncritical kind of love that builds self-confidence, creates a strong self image, leads to a willingness to try without fear of the consequences of failing. Disapprove of what a child does, not of who he is; praise him more for being than for doing and communicate your love by tucking him in bed at night, praise him out loud to strangers and relatives; to your mate, in his presence.

Discipline is important because we live in an organized society where, if you have not learned life's requirements at an early age, you will be taught them later, not by those whoselove tempers the lesson but by strangers who couldn't care less about the harm they do to your personality. Establish authority, be consistent, criticize the act, not the child.

Independence, the third factor, cannot be forced, it should not be smothered, and in an area that would result in PERMANENT serious harm to the child, it must be prohibited.

Thus, the triad of requirements necessary for the development of emotional health. Give away your love to your children, and you'll receive back more love than you can encompass. Discipline your children to recognize reality, and in the doing you'll enrich your understanding. Welcome their evolving independence, and you'll be supported by the strength you have helped them attain.

To the editor:

My husband and I have had the opportunity to travel and live in many towns across the United States, but I am still happily surprised at how well kept and clean Greenville and her merchants keep the downtown mall. The latest congratulations should go to Coffman's for the beautification of the garbage bins in the parking lot behind the Minges Building and to Interstate Securities for the beautiful job they did in selecting their new office facade. Both are additions to an already beautiful location in Greenville.

COULD BECOME SUCH AN EXCITING PROJECT!

BY JOHN J. KILPATRICK

High Finance & Court

WASHINGTON — Members of the United States Supreme Court last week filed their annual statements of financial disclosure. The statements contain no hint of scandal, but they raise some troublesome questions of propriety and policy. Let me grapple uncertainly with them.

I say "uncertainly," because that is how I come down on the issue at hand: Should members of the high court be required to divest themselves absolutely of all personal investments in the stocks and bonds of public corporations? My uncomfortable inclination is to say, on the one hand, yes; and on the other hand, no.

These are the facts: Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. last year was buying or selling shares of common stock in such companies as Texas Instruments, Philip Morris and Northern Telecom. His statement discloses dividends from New England Nuclear Corp., Hewlett Packard and Johnson & Johnson. In his own name, or his wife's, he received interest on bonds of Caterpillar Tractor and Western Savings & Loan.

Justice Potter Stewart last year was trading directly or indirectly in such companies as Bucyrus-Erie, Reading & Bates, General Electric, Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing and William Wrigley Jr. He or his wife received dividends from Big Three Industries, Cowles Communications, Johnson & Johnson, A. C. Nielsen, Reynolds & Reynolds and Merck & Co. He had bond interest from Standard Oil of Indiana.

JAS. J. KILPATRICK

Chief Justice Warren Earl Burger reported holdings in Honeywell, Inc. and Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing. Justice Harry Blackmun had stock in Coca-Cola, IBM, J.C. Penney, the Kahler Corp. and Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing. Justice William H. Rehnquist last year made a small investment in El Paso Electric.

What about all this? The case against such investments has been made vehemently and persistently by Gilbert Cranberg, the fire-eating editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune. My brother Cranberg has no uncertainties whatever. He points to the Code of Judicial Conduct: "A judge should disqualify himself in a proceeding in which his impartiality might reasonably be questioned, including instances where he knows that he (or his family) has a financial interest in the subject matter in controversy or in a party to the proceeding..." The code defines "financial interest" as ownership of a legal or equitable interest "however small."

In his editorial series, Cranberg has cited chapter and verse. In one 1979 case, for example, Justices Powell and Stewart, who both held Johnson & Johnson stock at the time, failed to disqualify themselves in a matter involving a Johnson & Johnson subsidiary. My brother Cranberg insists that by playing the market, members of the court "are playing fast and loose with their responsibilities, their reputations and the reputation of the court. For everyone's sake, they should cut their business ties."

My thought is that the issue is not quite so black or white. The situation of Justice Powell is illustrative. He came to the court in 1971 after a lifetime spent in the general practice of law. He had served as counsel to corporations across the whole spectrum of industrial life, and he had invested wisely and profitably in a wide variety of securities. If the Senate had demanded as a condition of confirmation that he dump every share in every company, Powell would have

New Vistas In Lobbying

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — New presidential lobbying methods being perfected by the Reagan White House were concentrated on Rep. Butler Derrick, a moderately conservative Democrat from South Carolina, two weeks before the budget vote.

"Derrick is still squishy," said an internal White House memo, but added: "...we'll get him in the end because a lot of the local big-money people are after him." Whether or not big bucks were responsible, the White House call proved accurate; Derrick backed the president.

The budget drive reflects new vistas in congressional lobbying opened by Ronald Reagan's operatives. Derrick was one of dozens of Democratic House members whose deisres, needs and weaknesses were scrutinized to put the president's budget over the top. Significantly, it was conducted not by regular White House lobbyists under Max Friedersdorf but by Lyn Nofziger's political office.

Nofziger's operation represents a drastic departure from President Eisenhower's quiet efforts a generation gap ago trying to coax Democratic votes out of Speaker Rayburn. Now, Reagan bypasses Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill while hard-nosed operatives hunt down individual Democratic congressmen.

The technique used by Nofziger's office, begun on the early debt ceiling and dairy price support votes, was perfected for the May 7 budget vote and will be expanded for the tax cut showdown. It combines pressure from individual campaign contributors with heat from national political action committees, carefully generated letter-writer campaigns and local media attention stirred by visiting Republican celebrities (codenamed the "Southern Blitz").

Add personal attention to the peculiarities of individual Democratic congressmen, and the president's men were confident of an easy victory long before they admitted it. On April 27, Nofziger received this forecast from his Southern lieutenant, Lee Atwater: "I now can predict with confidence that not only will Gramm-Latta pass, but it will win by a comfortable margin."

Atwater directed the concentration on local districts ("hitting them on the home front") as the third and final phase following White House leverage and lobbying from outside groups. The day before Reagan's celebrated April 28 speech to Congress, Atwater told Nofziger the president's effort "will be just icing on the cake because ... the local media did our job."

Behind media help, however, was member-by-member scrutiny. Based on confidential White House memos here are some cases of how the budget was won:

*Rep. Ronnie Flippo was regarded by Nofziger's office as the "toughest" Alabama Democrat before pro-Reagan Democratic Gov. Fob James came to the rescue. The governor's office informed the White House "James has 'persuaded' Flippo to vote for the president."

*Rep. Dan Mica, a second-term Democrat facing Florida congressional redistricting, was listed as "especially soft" by Nofziger's office. "Mica is concerned about redistricting, and he's said we can have his vote on both the budget and tax cut if we go along with the remap he's drawn for his district." (Mica, who backed the Reagan budget, told us he never discussed congressional remapping with Reagan aides.)

*The veteran conservative Democrat chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, Rep. Jamie Whitten of Mississippi, had a different desire, according to Nofziger's office: "Whitten will vote with us only if we agree to his timetable on Appropriations Committee legislation." The White House labelled those demands "outrageous," and Whitten was the only member of his state's delegation to oppose the Reagan budget.

*Rep. Bill Nelson of Florida, a conservative who voted against Reagan inside the Budget Committee, was counted by Nofziger's men on their side long before the May 7 vote: "Nelson totally caved in after we applied the pressure ... Nelson can't take pressure, and we should keep this in mind in the future."

How many times can personal and media pressure be mixed with political favors?

Strength For Today

DECISION'S ROLE

Decision plays an indispensable role in religious life. We are quick to realize the importance of decisions in a successful business career. Married happiness consists largely in the capacity of two people to make the correct decision that they were made for each other — and permanently so.

But more important than decisions of this kind is the clear-cut commitment for Christ which is necessary for the beginning, growth and triumph of the spiritual life.

Christ was always calling upon people to make firm and irrevocable decisions. They were to give up nets and fishing boats, they were to desert the receipt of customs — as did Matthew and Zacchaeus — and follow him. They were to sell all and give to the poor.

No wonder so many people hated Jesus in His day. He disturbed them at profound depths by demanding firm commitments to permanent new ways of life. — Elisha Douglass.

Inflation: Number One Enemy

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Responding to a survey of economic attitudes that has just been released, a California retailer wrote on the questionnaire: "Our three worst enemies: inflation, inflation, inflation."

Not especially eloquent, but the point is made. Of all economic issues affecting small-business people, inflation seems to be No. 1 in the survey, made for the National Association of Independent Business.

It probably is No. 2 and 3 as well, judging from responses studied by Purdue University's William C. Dunkelberg and Southern Methodist's Jonathan A. Scott. It is the disease; other big problems, such as painfully high and disruptive interest rates, are symptoms.

Consider this response from a California manufacturer and you have some notion of what inflation can do:

"Have not been able to expand as inflation simply destroyed capital set aside. Have only been able to get help (personnel) by taking in partner. To have hired him (and covered workman's comp., health insurance etc.) would have eliminated capital totally.

"We want to expand, but cannot bear burden of high interest on loans and high inflation as well. Will wait and see what Reagan, Congress, etc. accomplish."

But there is good news too. According to the professors, inflation will diminish substantially over the next six months. And, as if to confirm it, the April Consumer Price Index, almost simultaenously announced, fell to an annual average of 5.1 percent, a nine-month low.

Such good news from small business has been rather rare during the years of double-digit inflation, and the reasons why are obvious, as Dunkelberg and Scott indicate in their analysis.

"Costs increase faster than expected. This impairs the cash flow for busineses, forcing them to borrow at very high interest rates that reflect the inflation we are experiencing. Labor costs rise based on the expectation of more inflation and cost of living adjustments. Inventories become more excpensive and more costly to finance. The variably in the inflation rate makes planning very difficult ..."

Big business has these problems too, but big business has better control of the situation. It enjoys economies of volume; sometimes it can finance from within; when it borrows, it obtains lower rates than small business; and it can more easily pass on costs to its customers.

Dunkelberg and Scott found in the responses that many small-business people were forced to use non-business loans to provide money for their companies. Among them: loan on insurance policies; loans from friends, employees, relatives; and consumer loans whose rates are fixed by state statute and typically have been below the prime rate.

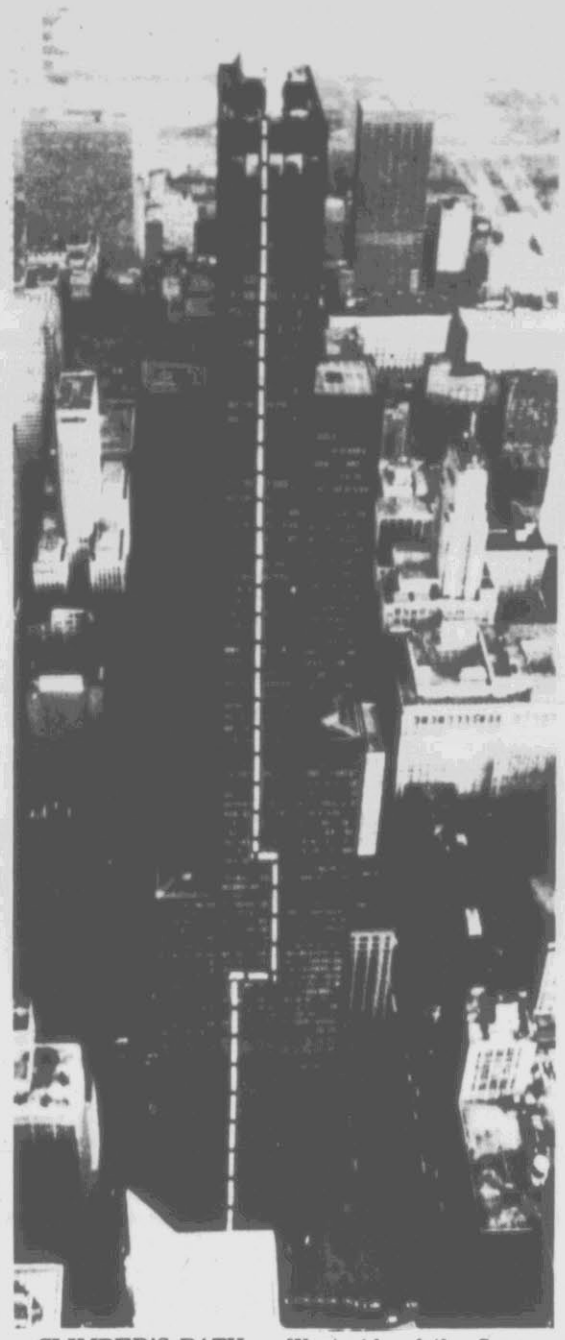

In this respect, some might say small business fares better than its larger competitors. Possibly, but consider the risks of being personally liable for repayment, and the threat of losing a life insurance policy or, perhaps as bad, a friend. More accurately, small businesses seem to be more desperate and more innovative.

Now, it appears, those innovative sources are threatened. "The decline in the number of low-rate loans suggest these sources are being exhausted," the professors report. Moreover, life insurers are seeking changes in state laws to permit considerably higher loan rates.

Still, the inflation outlook improved, and so did small business optimism.

And when you consider what small business has been able to do with bad times you begin to feel optimistic yourself about what it might do in better times.

Scaled World's Tallest Building; Reward Is Jail

CLIMBER'S PATH — West side of the Sears Tower building in Chicago ia shown with approximate path that Daniel Goodwin undertook in his scaling of the skyscraper Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

By SANDRA BALMER
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Still dressed as a comic-book hero, Daniel Goodwin was in jail today as he expected after becoming the only person ever to climb to the top of the world's tallest building — on the outside.

The 25-year-old professional acrobat and gymnast from Las Vegas, Nev., used suction cups and metal clips to climb up the metal-and-glass west side of the Sears tower on Monday, outwitting authorities who tried to stop him and bringing cheers from dozens of spectators 110 stories below. It took him 7½ hours, battling 40 mph winds.

"He agreed that this wasn't something everyone should do," said Jack Rimkus, the police officer who arrested Goodwin atop the 1,454-foot building. "He said he expected to spend a few days in jail."

Goodwin, still wearing his custom-made, red-and-blue "Spider-Man" outfit, was led away in handcuffs at the summit.

He was held for investigation of disorderly conduct, criminal trespass, and criminal damage to property, Cmdr. Robert Casey.

"He said he grew up where there's lots of trees and had always been impressed with tall buildings and cities," Rimkus said.

The 5-foot-7, 180-pound Goodwin, originally from Kennebunkport, Maine, "behaved like a perfect gentleman" while handcuffed and led away, Rimkus said. Goodwin suffered no ill effects from the climb, except for a sore hand, police said.

"He was very grateful to be on top," Rimkus said. "He held out his arms for the cuffs ... and thanked all of us."

The climb became a Memorial Day event downtown, where streets are usually deserted on holidays. Parents brought children, bicyclers stopped to crane their necks and a vendor hawked sunglasses at the tower.

Goodwin climbed a ladder and from there used 8-inch iron climbing hooks to attach himself to grooves used by window washers. He would twist a hook until tight, use it as a step, then remove one from below to make a new step higher up, Rimkus said.

Goodwin also attached ropes to window ledge clips to fashion himself a safety line and used suction cups to move sideways and avoid a window-washing scaffold authorities at first lowered to try to block his climb.

Authorities gave up trying to stop Goodwin when he reached the 55th floor. Afer 15 minutes of negotiation — while Goodwin dangled — they allowed him to climb unhindered while the scaffolding was pulled up behind him for safety.

"He was well-prepared and very well-equipped" with more than 50 pounds of equipment, Rimkus said.

Sears, Roebuck and Co. officials said they considered the stunt a crime and would try to see if the building was damaged.

"The Fire Department requested we allow him to go up in the interest of public safety," said Sears spokesman Ernest Arms. "The original intent was to stop him but he has suction equipment with him. He just moved too fast."

James Hackett, 31, of Chicago, a friend who held the ladder at the start of the ascent at 3 a.m., was held for investigation of disorderely conduct, pending investigation, Casey said.

"We had no inclination he would do something like this," said Dale Goodwin, Goodwin's 49-year-old father. The elder Goodwin, a painter and paperhanger from Kennebunkport, said he climbs "ladders and that's about it." He said his son had wanted to climb mountains but never mentioned skyscrapers.

He said his son, a skier and former track and cross-country star at Kennebunk High School, "is in excellent shape."

The younger Goodwin is married and the father of a 5-year-old son, his stepmother, Karen, said.

Officials considered removing windows to force Goodwin inside but refrained for fear the high winds would blow the glass into the street. Goodwin also moved too quickly.

There have been three other attempts to scale the building, but none of the climbers got even halfway up. On May 26, 1977, George Willig, a 27-year-old amateur mountaineer, climbed one of the two 110-story, 1,350-foot twin towers of the World Trade Center in New York City.

Richard Harris, 26, said he heard about the climb on the radio and brought his 5-year-old son, Michael, to watch because the boy is an avid fan of Spider-Man, a Marvel Comics character.

Looking through binoculars at the climber — clad in a bright suit with orange-red belt, hood and knee-length boots — Michael said, "Yep, he's the real thing."

pursuing a course designed to show progress toward designing an evaluation plan which at least begins to meet the requirements of the law.

No final decision has been made, but it seems likely that a step-by-step phasing in will be adopted in hopes of satisfying the law even though not complying with it.

At this point, a preliminary "Procedural Manual for Conducting Performance Appraisal" has been prepared. Careful reading of that voluminous document reveals that it is only a suggested outline, not a policy guide; that it affects only teachers and principals leaving superintendents and other professional people for later; that it contains page after page of research data which are supposed to show how those affected feel toward evaluation, but doesn't necessarily do so; and that considerable training, evaluation, and revision will be needed before a system emerges.

Impossible

The manual itself spells out problems: "The legislation that mandated the appraisal system allotted only one calendar year for development...If research standards and Federal guidelines are to be maintained, it is impossible...

"The first year of this project should have been devoted to planning, conducting job analyses, writing job descriptions, and formulating criteria and performance indicators for trial instruments.

"The second year should be devoted to a pilot effort during which time standardization and validation studies are conducted.

"During the third and subsequent years, evaluators should be trained and additional studies and refinements in the instruments should be made."

Nonetheless, the performance appraisal manual is being sent out for a trial run, at least in some pilot school districts, while top state officials try to figure out where to go from here.

Prospect For Gold In N.C.

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP) — There's still gold in the hills of North Carolina, geologists and prospectors say.

Stanly County hosted gold boomtowns about 150 years ago. It can happen again, says Mary Ellen Goforth, an Albemarle geologist and gold hunter.

"It's my secret ambition to have North Carolina a major gold-producing state again," she said. "There's still gold here."

Wayne Westbrook, a former jeweler from Maryland, says he is one of many people in the area who began gold prospecting as a hobby and eventually made it their occupation.

"I can make enough money from gold I get here to survive and make other mining trips," he said.

At least eight groups ranging from one or two people to 10 people have set up operations in the area, Miss Goforth said.

"But they won't tell you anything," she said. "I've heard one group has gotten out 7 pounds from a spot no bigger than a car."

The newly formed Universal Mining Corp. of Albemarle expects to have rights to old abandoned mines in the area before the end of the year. The company wants to tray a new process designed to extract 99 percent of the available gold.

Gold was found in the area as early as 1799, but news spread slowly.

The area became famous after Tice Barringer built the nation's first major deep-shaft mining operation near Misenheimer in 1823.

By the 1830s, a town called Gold Hill sprang up and became a boomtown of 24,000 with 27 saloons and gunfights in the streets. Foreigners poured in as farmers threw down their plows to pick up mining shovels and pans and dig in their streams.

The area provided almost all of America's gold for several years. The gold was minted in Charlotte.

But when the gold started running out, and when larger finds as far away as as California lured away the miners, mining operations in the area declined.

declined the nomination. He would have been subjected to heavy financial sacrifice and he would have had to disqualify himself in cases involving these companies in any event. The same situation obtains today. Total divestiture would hit Justice Powell with a million dollars in taxes on capital gains. In my own view, no such penalty reasonably can be asked.

To be sure, appearances and perceptions are important. The rule of Caesar's wife is a good rule. Supreme Court justices ought to provide a high example for lower court judges everywhere. But realities are important also, and this is the reality: Members of the court have in fact disqualified themselves in every proceeding "in which their impartiality might reasonably be questioned." To my knowledge, no litigant ever has complained that any present member of the court has acted unethically by sitting in a given case.

I don't know the answer, but I do know that the court would be much the poorer without the skill, experience and luminous minds of such justices as Powell and Stewart. Let me leave it at that.

Two Arrested By City Police

Greenville Police, early today, arrested two 22-year-old men on breaking, entering and larceny charges in connection with a break-in at the Paddock Club at 1008B Dickinson Ave.

According to Chief Glenn Cannon, officers were called to the club when a burglar alarm was tripped by the intruders, who broke a lock from a door to gain entrance.

Cannon said Ronnie Faircloth of Cary and Gary Leonard Walston of Pikeville were arrested as they fled the scene.

Law Outlawing Drug-Related Paraphernalia Near

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill outlawing the possession, sale, manufacture and advertisement of drug-related paraphernalia neared enactment in the General Assembly after supporters easily pushed aside a final amendment Monday night.

The bill, approved on a final 111-3 House vote, was returned to the Senate where concurrence in House amendments would make the measure law.

The final House fight came on an amendment that would have reduced the penalties for mere possession of drug accessories — and eliminate the likelihood that a person arrested for having a marijuana cigarette would face a stiffer penalty for the cigarette's rolling papers than for the marijuana inside it.

The amendment, offered by Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, was defeated on an 84-29 vote.

The action came during a busy Monday night session, as the Senate gave tentative approval to a bill that aimed at outlawing weapons training counts, which reportedly have been operated in North Carolinan by the Ku Klux Klan and Nazis.

And the Senate gave a present to the savings and loan industry, enacting a bill to give the S&L's a break of $6 million to $7 million a year on their state taxes.

The drug paraphernalia bill is the result of a recommendation by Gov. Jim Hunt, the Governor's Crime Commission and attempts by legislators to pattern a state law after a model proposal drafted by the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

It would outlaw items such as cigarette rolling papers, pipes, plastic bags, sifters and other items often used with marijuana and other illegal substances. Prosecutors would have to show that the pipes, papers or other accessories were intended to be used with an illegal drug.

The bill would take effect Oct. 1, and possession of those accessories would be made a misdemeanor carrying a maximum penalty of up to one year in jail and a $500 fine.

By comparison, possession of less than one ounce of marijuana in North Carolina carries a $100 fine, and Hackney and other supporters of his amendment argued that it was unreasonable to have the paraphernalia penalty higher than the one for the drug itself.

"I can't see going out and ruining the life of some 16-year-old kid," Rep. William Harrison, D-Martin, said in supporting the amendment. He said it would reduce the "temptation" for police to spend time arresting small drug users rather than going after large-scale drug sellers.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, one of three who voted against the bill, called it "the height of hypocrisy" to try to crack down on drugs through laws on the paraphernalia, not the drug laws themselves.

But the sponsor of the bill, Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, opposed the amendment.

"It does not bother me that there is this discrepancy," Evans said. "If we should be moving any way in this General Assembly, we should be tightening up on our marijuana laws."

"Unless you can dangle a big stick over the heads of this boy or girl," said Rep. Chris Barker, D-Craven, "that boy or girl will not walk a straight line. A misdemeanor is not a big stick. A $100 fine is not a big stick."

The bill sets a penalty of up to $1,000 fine and two years in prison for those convicted of selling or manufacturing drug paraphernalia.

The House version also makes it illegal to advertise drug paraphernalia. The provision was not in the bill approved by the Senate, and that amendment will be before the Senate for concurrence as well as other amendments dealing with the sale of paraphernalia to minors.

In other legislative action:

Terrorists

The Senate overwhelmingly gave tentative approval to a bill that would make it illegal to train others in the use of firearms when the intent is to use the weapons to create a civil disorder. The vote was 41-2, with final Senate action delayed until Tuesday.

The bill is sponsored by Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, who said it was aimed at Klan and Nazi military-type training camps reportedly set up in the state.

"It will close a terrorist camp," Barnes ssaid.

The bill would make it a felony, punishable by up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Voting against the measure was Sens. Cary Allred, D-Alamance, and Walter Cockerham, R-Guilford. Cockerham said the bill amounted to "a foot in the door to gun control."

S&L's

The savings and loan industry won its tax break when the Senate voted 38-1 to give final approval to the House-passed tax-cut measure.

The bill provides savings-and-loan associations a tax break by changing the way the associations are taxed, bringing them into line with the way banks pay state taxes.

Energy Credits

The House approved and sent to the Senate a package of four bills that would provide corporate and personal income tax credits for installation of alternate energy sources. The bills would provide credits for installing solar equipment in a business, constructing a methane gas facility, installing a hydroelectric generator and installing aa wind-energy device.

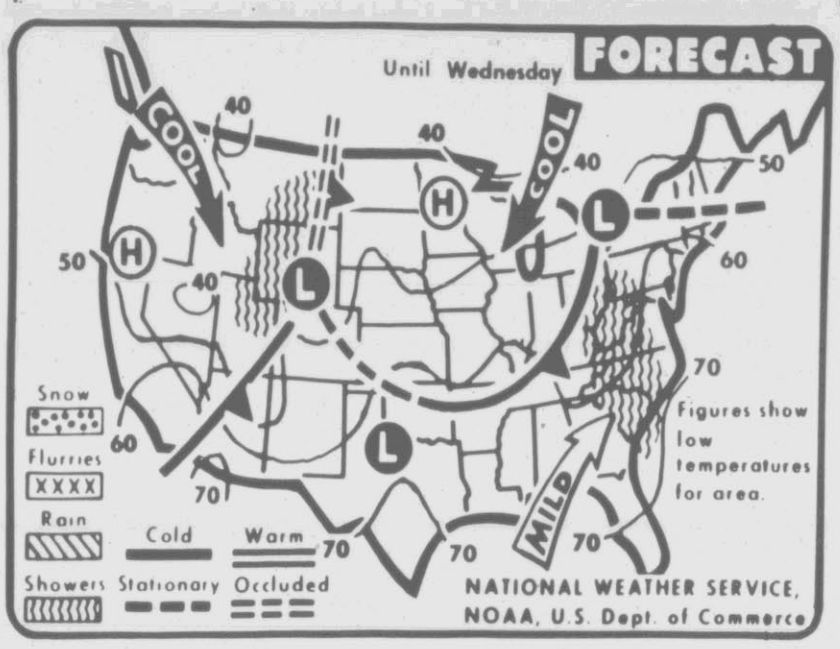

Courts

Legislation was enacted that will permit the recall of retired judges to serve on the bench temporarily in cases of vacancies. Also enacted with final Senate approval was a bill establishing that photographs may be used as substantive evidence in North Carolina courts.

Wildlife

The House gave final approval to a bill that would establish a state wildlife endowment fund through the sale of lifetime hunting and fishing licenses. The bill goes back to the Senate for concurrence in House amendments.

State, Federal Laws Squeeze Hazardous Waste Generators

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Senate plans a final vote today on a bill that would strengthen North Carolina's hazardous-waste handling laws — but some businessmen say the pressure of existing state and federal laws is already too strong.

Hoke S. Duke, president of Duke Refining Corp., says the new regulations may force him to move about 2,500 55-gallon drums of residue from his three-acre lot near Interstate 85 in High Point.

Beginning in 1970, federal open-air burning regulations prevented businesses like Duke's from taking such chemicals to a landfill and burning them. So he simply kept much of the residue.

But his business is also under the tightening reins of the federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. The act provides continuous monitoring of hazardous wastes from the time they are produced until the time they are acceptably destroyed, recycled or burned.

State officials began enforcing the federal act last January. Duke says the state is pressuring him to pump out the drums and move their contents to a federally approved disposal site faster than he can afford to.

And the new bill, which would encourage the development of central waste treatment and disposal facilities, would increase that pressure.

"They're going to give me all the time it takes to move 'em out," Duke vows. "If they give me less time, they can put me in prison."

North Carolina is estimated to be the nation's 11th largest generator of hazardous chemical wastes — a category encompassing substances considered ignitable, corrosive, explosive or potentially toxic.

The state is also fourth in the production of low-level radioactive wastes. These items, which include slightly contaminated mops, clothing and laboratory glassware, are considered less dangerous than highly radioactive substances like spent nuclear fuel.

Gov. Jim Hunt and other state officials say the new state regulations are necessary to relieve a pending waste crunch. The bill has not been considered by the House.

While state officials would like to see wastes like Duke's removed faster, they are philosophical.

"As long as we do not have an imminent hazard, we will work with the man to take care of the problem," said O.W. Strickland of the state Division of Health Services. "If we put him in jail or make him go bankrupt, then the state will just inherit the problem."

Cleaning up Duke's site would cost the state as much as $300,000, officials said.

The need for disposal facilities to handle all the hazardous wastes that will be forced off company lots by the stricter federal standards could produce the state's next "crisis situation," Strickland said.

Fund-Raiser To Aid Rep. Rose

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democrats from the 7th Congressional District, concerned about the political future of U.S. Rep. Charles Rose, are planning a two-day fund-raiser to boost Rose's 1982 campaign.

Democratic activist Herbert McKim of Wilmington said most of the funds raised at the July 17-18 event will go to Rose, with a small portion set aside for the state Democratic Party.

"We think (Rose) is going to have formidable opposition," McKim said. No specific Republican challenger has emerged so far.

N.C. Growers Plan 'Organize'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A group of North Carolina tobacco growers plans to meet Friday in Raleigh to create an organization to protect their interests.

"We think we need an organization that looks out strictly for North Carolina tobacco," said group chairman Donnie Taylor of Pink Hill. There is currently no organization solely for North Carolina tobacco growers.

Sen. John East, R-N.C., is expected to speak at the first meeting, to be held in the Scott Building at the state fairgrounds.

Memorial Day Program Had Large Turn-Out

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Wrtier

"We were very pleased with the turn out on Memorial Day," Seth Jones, currently post chaplain and incoming president of American Legon Post N. 39 commented. "About 200 people attended, one of the best turnouts in several years. This included veterans, their spouses, families and friends."

The annual Memorial Day Service is the highlight event each year of the Legion Post, with programs planned to honor in words and music Americans who have served their nation from founding days to the present.

Prior to the official 3 p.m. opening of the program, members of the J. H. Rose High School Band gave a concert under the direction of Johnny Wooten. The invocation was given by Jones, and the pledge of allegiance was led by Commander James W. Langley, Sr.

The national hymn, "America" was sung by the audience, accompanied by the Rose High Band. Phil L. Goodson, Jr., the post's Sergeant-at-Arms, introduced the speaker, Captain (U.S. Navy retired) Harold J. Streeper.

The flag ceremoney was conducted by Sgt. Johnny Harrison of the 514th Military Police Company, National Guard, and lowering of the colors ceremony was performed by members of the D. H. Conley Junior ROTC Department, Lt. Colonel Carl R. Grantham, Commander. Taps was played by James Ormond, a member of the D. H. Conley Band.

Captain Streeper spoke about the sacrifices Amerians have paid for freedom and liberty. He mentioned that since our first war for independence, more than two million men and women have given their lives in battle over the years, including World War I, World War II, the Korean conflict and in Vietnam.

"He also exhorted young people to be loyal, to serve God and their country, to look upon service to country as an honor."

Jones explained that one of the major programs carried out by members of the American Legion on Memorial Day is the placement of flags on the known graves of veterans in public cemeteries. "We had a team of more than 30, including members of the Conley ROTC, visiting cemeteries beginning at 7 a.m. Sunday morning. They placed flags on veterans graves in Cherry Hill, Greenwood and Pine Lawn Cemeteries."

Special Measures

Special measures may be needed to protect ornamental plants and turfgrasses during a period of dry weather, say specialists with the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

Rainfall in the state has been below normal each month since last July, although recent showers have helped in many areas.

Teams of extension specialists at N.C. State University have drawn up recommendations to help Tar Heel families and farmers to cope with the drought.

A committee on ornamentals and turf, headed by Dr. Leon T. Lucas of plant pathology, offered these suggestions:

— When irrigation is needed on ornamentals and turfgrasses, irrigate infrequently — possibly once a week — long enough to wet the soil six inches deep rather than using frequent and shallow irrigations.

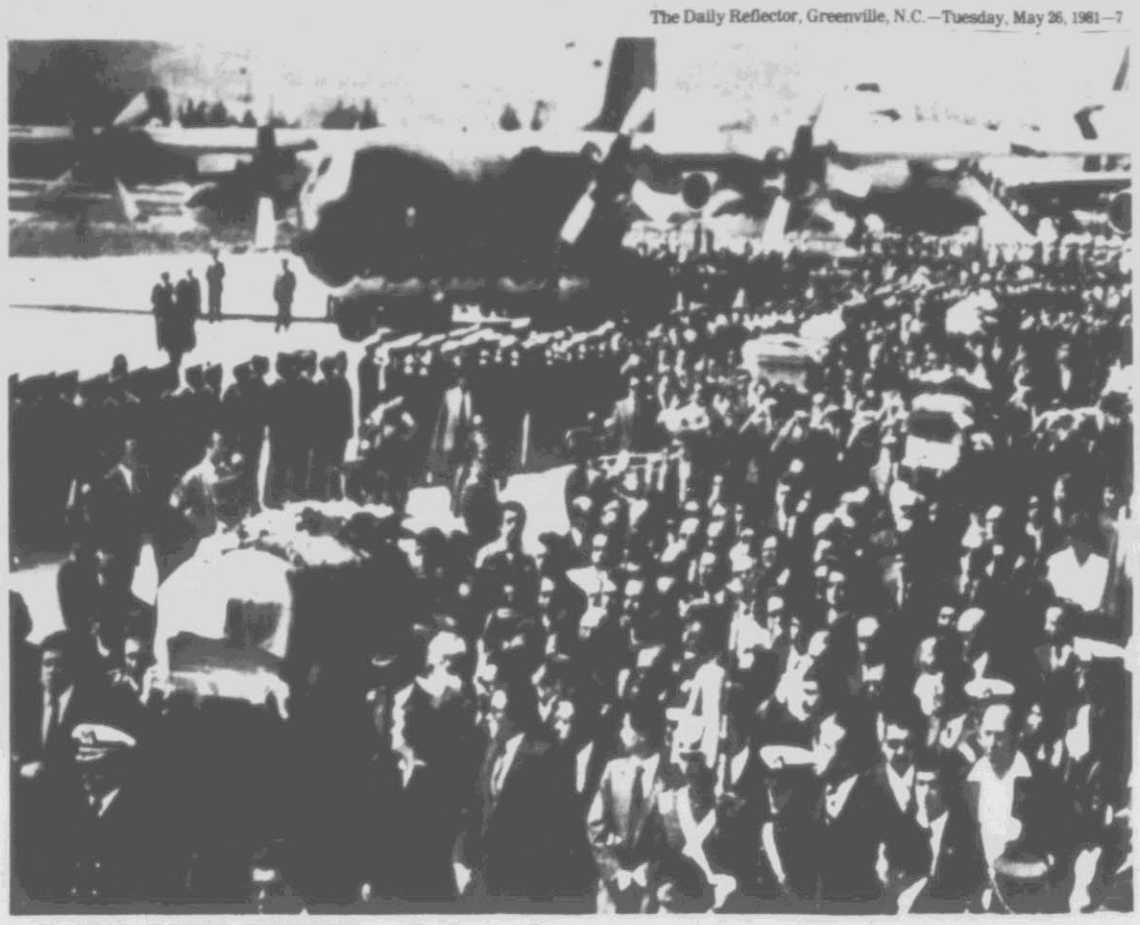

— Use a good thick mulch around ornamental plants.

— Do not fertilize ornamentals and warm season turfgrasses as heavily as usual unless plenty of irrigation water is available.

— Use very little, if any, fertilizer on cool-season grasses during summer and none during very hot and dry weather.

— Mow turfgrasses slightly higher than normal to reduce drought stress.

— Some insect and disease problems are likely to occur that are more severe in dry weather and differ from ones that occur in wet weather.

Sick-Leaves Are Cancelled

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — City officials today canceled all sick leave for firefighters to combat a growing "sickout" by employees of the fire department protesting a wage proposal.

Fire Chief Jack Lee said firefighters could face suspension or dismissal for two unexcused absences.

The three-day-old sickout, which has forced the shutdown of three of the city's 23 fire stations, is in protest of what firefighters say is a disparity in the pay of police officers and firefighters in the proposed city bud;et.

For the 14-hour Monday night shift that began at 6 p.m., 76 firefighters had reported in sick by 10 p.m. The work force for the shift normally is 145.

"We are at what we call bare bones" said Assistant Fire Chief R.L. Blackwelder. He said if thre were several serious fires at once, the city might seek help from some 5f Mecklenburg County's approximately 20 volunteer fire departments.

Fire officials said today there are scattered reports of firemen who have called in sick but no official figures were available.

Officials said since the sickout began there have been no serious fires in the Charlotte area. "But if this continues, we're in trouble," said District Chief Leo Black. "We're doing the best we can with limited resources."

In a show of hands Monday night, more than 150 firemen voted unanimously to reject a fire union-backed proposal to stop the sickout. The vote came in a packed union hall in a special meeting called by Local 660 of the International Association of Firefighters, which is not supporting the sickout.

Union local president James McLaughlin said he called the meeting to ask firefighters to go back to work and let union leaders meet with city officials to press for pay hikes and resolve other grievances.

Fire Capt. Mack Baucom, a 24-year veteran firefighter, said firefighters are upset because they feel the city will not respond to their concerns.

"These men don't trust anything that comes from downtown," he said. "They are just not going to believe anything until it happens."

Suicides Amid Polish Unrest

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Two Cabinet ministers have committed suicide and two former premiers appeared before a Communist Party review panel in a far-reaching investigation of the roots of Poland's economic crisis, the Polish news agency reported.

Meanwhile, 15,000 people marched in Warsaw on Monday to demand freedom for alleged political prisoners. The action organized by students and a prisoners' rights group defied appeals by the independent union Solidarity, church and academic leaders.

Sympathy marches took place in Lublin, Opole, Lodz Torun, Bialystok, Wroclaw and other cities, a student spokesman said.

Edward Barxzcz, former minister of construction and building materials, killed himself Monday, and former Minister of Foreign Trade Jerzy Olszewski committed suicide Sunday night, PAP news agency said.

The ex-premiers questioned by the panel were Piotr Jaroszewicz, who served from 1970 to February 1980, and his successor, Edward Babiuch.

Babiuch was suspended from the Communist Party last week. He lost his post Aug. 24 after months of nationwide labor unrest triggered by his decision to raise meat prices. The strikes led to the creation of Poland's independent trade unions and a series of government reshuffles that included the ouster of party leader Edward Gierek.

agreement with the city of Greenville to procure the Winsted-Fleming house as a permanent location.

"This will be finalized at our next meeting," he said, "and if we can get the house, work will begin immediately to restore it."

Griffin also announced plans for a Chamber Spring Roundup, an activity culminating all the spring programs, to be held sometime in June.

"I am also pleased to tell you that the Ayden Council now has over 60 firms in their membership and that the Bethel Council has it's 'inaugural' meeting tonight," added Griffin.

Found Carter....

"About his presidency and his past political career, Carter says he is very convinced that the broad directions he began will continue," continued Maddox. "He told me he is confident he was on the right track."

The former president reviewed for the editors what he considered his "signal achievements" while in office.

"He felt the Camp David agreement was a prime accomplishment and listed peace in the Middle East as a major objective of his adminstration," noted the former advisor. "He said he still feels the Panama Canal treaty exemplifies the right way to handle the situation.

"And," added Maddox, "he said Inauguration Day was the happiest day of his life — not because of the inauguration, of course — but because the hostages were freed without what he termed 'dishonor on our country.'

"All in all," the former advisor said, "Carter continues to adhere to the ideals he held as a world leader."

Carter told the group he feels the new religious right was a factor in the 1980 election. "He thinks that as they become more in the public eye, though, they'll have to moderate their extremes to survive. Carter said he's sure the collective wisdom of the American people will moderate the moral majority," explained Maddox.

"He agrees with their basics approach, attending church as a family, more music in services, and community fellowship, but disagrees with the extremism." Maddox said, to him, Carter still seemed a "Sunday dinner on the grounds Christian."

"I attended his Sunday school class when we visited and he was a very good teacher," commented the former advisor. "He asked me if I had studied my lesson and I had to tell him I had not — he might have asked me to teach if I'd said yes."

"During the interview Carter told the editors one thing that has really stuck with me, though," Maddox noted. "He said, 'Faith has given me the inner security to take a chance,' and I was moved by that."

Peace Network Stages Witness

GOLDSBORO — The North Carolina Peace Network gathered at Seymour-Johnson Air Force Base here Memorial Day to honor the war dead and to stage a peaceful public witness against the use of nuclear weapons.

According to spokesperson Edith Webber of Greenville, approximately 35 people attended the vigil Monday afternoon to "recall the patriotism of those who died in past wars." Another objective for the Peace Network was to "make a non-violent, public witness against the use of nuclear weapons so that the death and destruction of future war will not happen."

The Peace Network met at the gates of Seymour-Johnson AFB to petition the citizens and government of the United States concerning reevaluation of the government's financial ability to keep up military bases all over the world; negotiation for a complete ban and a cessation of production of nuclear weapons; and a dependence on "neighborly methods" of resolving disputes.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned mixed today as investors remained preoccupied with the course of interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which fell more than 14 points last week, rose slightly at today's opening. At noon, however, the blue-chip average was down 1.67 points at 970.05.

But advances outnumbered declines by a 7-6 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts say investors remain wary that interest rates may continue to climb, despite an encouraging Federal Reserve Board report Friday of a larger-than-expected decline in the nation's money supply.

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks rose .05 to 76.31. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.32 at 375.85.

Volume on the big board reached 18.56 million shares over the first two hours, down from 19.11 million in the comparable period Friday.

Declines Debate About Gas Tax

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Congressional Club responded Monday to Democratic attacks on its campaign against the gas tax by challenging Gov. Jim Hunt to a televised debate.

But Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce threw back the gauntlet, saying he had not discussed it with the governor but was sure Hunt would not agree to a debate.

"The governor doesn't have time to debate with every Jim and Tom who wants to get some publicity," Pearce said. "It's just a publicity stunt, a diversionary tactic."

The challenge came from Jim Cain, assistant director of the Congressional Club, who was responding to charges from state Democratic chairman Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph.

Walker said Monday that the opposition of the Congressional Club and Asheboro industrialist David Stedman to the gas tax proposal was "politically motivated, misinformed and misleading."

Cain, in his challenge to Hunt, said that if the governor wants to educate the people about his proposed 33 percent gas-tax increase, he should debate a spokesman for the other side.

"Governor Hunt and his spokesmen seem to be concerned about how their gas tax is being perceived by the public," Cain said. "What better way can there be to present their views directly to the people than by an open and public debate between Governor Hunt and opponents of the gas tax?"

The gas tax is part of a package Hunt proposed to raise $207.7 million a year for the state's dwindling Highway Fund.

Pearce said the House and Senate finance committees were scheduled to meet today at 11 a.m. in the auditorium of the Legislative Building. "They (the gas tax-opponents) can appear at the hearing tomorrow if they want to," Pearce said Monday.

Walker's charges came during a press conference Monday. He said Democrats could not let charges made by groups opposed to the gas tax go unanswered.

The Congressional Club's Committee Against the Gas Tax has sponsored radio spots attacking the gas tax proposal. Some radio ads charge that favoritism, corruption and mismanagment in the Department of Transportation have led to the Highway Fund crisis.

Walker said one Congressional Club-backed ad in the campaign of Sen. John East, R-N.C., showed an aircraft carrier going through the Panama Canal, which is not designed to hold ships of that size.

"I think that shows they can sell just about anything," Walker said. "We know that they can make things seen like they're not."

Italy's Govm't Resigns

ROME (AP) — Christian Democrat Premier Arnaldo Forlani's four-party coalition government collapsed today and resigned because three Cabinet members were linked to a Masonic lodge under investigation as a possible criminal association.

Forlani submitted his 7-month-old government's resignation to President Sandro Pertini, who asked the premier to stay on as a caretaker until a new government — the 41st since World War II — could be formed.

Pertini said consultations on forming the new government would begin immediately.

The premier gave up after the Socialist Party, a member of the coalition, refused to agree to replacement of the ministers involved in the deepening scandal.

After a 45-minute Cabinet meeting called to announce the government's resignation, State Industry Minister Gianni De Michelis, a Socialist, said, "I believe that we can strongly make the case for a Socialist premier."

The collapse of the government sent stock prices tumbling on the Milan stock exchange until state banks intervened. The dollar hit a new high of 1,156 lire, but dealers said the rise was caused mainly by the strength of the U.S. currency.

Justice Minister Adolfo Sarti resigned Saturday after his name was linked to the lodge, Propaganda Due (P-2), that prosecutors are investigating as a possible criminal association.

The scandal, which has led to the arrest of a former colonel in the Italian secret service, broke open Thursday when Forlani made public a list of 953 names of reported members of the lodge. The list included top politicians, businessmen, publishers, diplomats and military officers.

Sarti, a Christian Democrat, was not named on the list but was reported to have been listed as a candidate for P-2 membership in documents found in the home of Licio Gelli, the lodge's "grand master." However, Foreign Commerce Minister Enrico Manca, a Socialist, and Labor Minister Franco Foschi, a Christian Democrat, were on the list.

Gelli, who has vanished, was indicted in absentia Friday on charges of spying for Argentina. He reportedly is a citizen of both Argentina and Italy.

Sarti in a letter to Forlani denied he had made any effort to join the lodge, but said he was forced to leave the government because his name had been mentioned in a "slanderous campaign."

A parliamentary committee investigating the case has alleged that the lodge was involved in a variety of scandals including bribe payments and tax evasion in the oil industry and a far-reaching plot to set up an authoritarian regime in Italy.

Prosecutors have said they suspect the lodge helped stage the fake kidnapping of financier Michele Sindona in New York in 1979. He is now serving a 25-year prison term in the United States for fraud.

"Lodge P-2 is a secret sect that has combined business and politics with the intention of destroying the constitutional order of the country and of transforming the parliamentary system into a presidential system," a prosecutors' report to the government said.

Remove Arrow In Little Duck

By PATRICK ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Groggy from bites of drug-soaked bread, a duck that eluded rescue workers for more than a month despite a three-foot-long arrow in her breast has been grabbed, airlifted to an operating room and had the arrow removed.

But the tough little mallard made life rough on her rescuers to the very end.

The duck, named Donna by Humane Society of Southern Nevada volunteers, was captured by Tom Harper of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service after a tussle in the middle of a small pond at the Sahara Country Club golf course.

"I'm glad that's over," said the dripping Harper, who had been after the duck for several weeks.

The duck, groggy from the sodium amytal in the bread, was flown by helicopter to a veterinary hospital shortly after her capture Monday, and the target arrow was removed.

"The duck has been operated on," said a spokswoman for Dr. Gary Weddle. "The arrow is out, and she's doing fine."

Donna was shot at least a month ago by an unknown person, and residents of homes near the golf course had tried unsuccessfully to capture her.

Humane Society Chairman Dart Anthony said the arrow had to be removed or the duck would die, so efforts to capture her intensified last week. But numerous attempts to catch or net her proved unsuccessful, so on Monday morning, cracked corn soaked in vodka was put out, and the duck ate a few pieces.

"She got a little tipsy, but not enough," Harper said.

At that point, the decision was made to drug the duck.

Harper and Anthony tossed her pieces of bread soaked with the barbiturate, then settled down to wait.

Donna went to sleep for a brief period, then woke and flew to another pond. Anthony and Harper plunged in after her, but she escaped again and flew back to the first pond, where she was captured.

Anthony said the doctor cut the arrow and pulled it from Donna's body. He said the shaft had nicked her crop, the first part of her stomach, and that she had been unable to eat normally.

"There was less damage than was anticipated, thank goodness for her," Anthony said. "Right now the main thing is to make sure no infection sets in."

Earlier, Weddle said he felt Donna would suffer no lasting ill effects from the wound.

"Mother Nature's been taking care of these animals for hundreds of thousands of years before we came along," he said.

Anthony said the duck would remain in the hospital for two or three days before being returned to her mate and ducklings.

"Tom Harper and I are going to crack a bottle of champagne when we let her go," Anthony said.

Rampants Get First State Test Tonight

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

In only his first year, Wilmington Hoggard baseball coach George Hall has the Vikings in the state 4-A playoffs. The stay, however, may be short, at least if records are an indication.

The Vikings enter tonight's (8 o'clock) contest in Guy Smith Stadium with a 14-6 record and have lost their last two games during the regular season. Hoggard was 11-5 in the Division II Conference, three games back of Wilmington New Hanover.

Rose, on the other hand, sports a 22-2 record which includes a 6-4 defeat of Northern Nash Saturday in a one-game playoff to determine the Division I Conference playoff representative.

The Rampants' last defeat came on May 5, a 4-1 loss at Rocky Mount. Since then Rose has won six straight.

Because of the difference in the records, and because of what he's heard about the Rampants, Hall concedes his club is the underdog.

"Anybody that's 22-2 has got to have something," Hall said. "I'd say we're the underdogs but we're just going to go up there and try to hit the ball and hope for the best."

If the Vikings can match the Rampants anywhere, it is with their bats. Hoggard hit .331 as a team during the regular season compared to Rose's .335.

Leading the way for the visitors is centerfielder Alton Ross. Ross is hitting .442 and has stolen over 12 bases this season. Rightfielder Joe Mahan is hitting .430 followed by first baseman Bud Nixon at .356. Nixon is the team's home run leader with eight.

Shortstop Barry Stephens is at .375, catcher Terry Jackson at .355 and third baseman Tommy Glancy at .339.

It will be Gordon Douglas' job to stop the Hoggard hitting attack. Douglas, a junior right-hander, enters the game with an 8-1 record and a 0.49 earned run average. He has struck out 70 and walked 25 in 53⅓ innings pitched this season.

Hoggard will counter with right-hander Billy Wolff. Wolff, a senior, was 3-1 during the regular season and had an earned run average of 1.75. He struck out 45 in 30 innings this season. Right-hander Scott Lewis, 7-4 this season, will be ready if Wolff has trouble.

"Our pitching has not been too good this season," Hall said. "Our hitting has carried us much of the season. We've won a lot of games 15-5, 10-4, where the pitcher has gotten a big lead and could relax a little."

Unless a season-long trend is trampled on, the Vikings will not do that tonight. The Rampants have given up only 33 runs all season, an average of 1.3 a game, and 86 hits, an average of just over 3.5 a game.

The most runs scored this season against Rose is six in a 6-5 loss to Northern Nash earlier this season.

While the opposition has had its trouble scoring on the Rampants, the converse is not true. Rose runners have crossed home plate 235 times this season, an average of just under 10 runs a game. Rose has also accumulated 248 hits, an average of just over 10 an outing.

Rampant ramblings...Scott Galloway is no longer with the team. The left-hander was not at either Friday's game at Northeastern or Saturday's game against Northern Nash and will not return this season...

Hoggard has 10 seniors on the team...all eight starters are seniors...Both of Rose's losses this season were on the road...Of Hoggard's six losses, five were on the road...

If Rose wins tonight the Rampants will play again Friday night away...

It Was Record Night In The American

By The Associated Press

Bill Stein is a good man in a pinch and Jim Palmer is outstanding against the New York Yankees, in particular, but Carl Yastrzemski is something else just about every time out.

Stein, signed as a free agent during the off-season, set an American League record with his seventh consecutive pinch hit in the bottom of the ninth inning Monday night, singling home the winning run to give the Texas Rangers a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Meanwhile, Palmer, who said two weeks ago he might have to become a reliever because he was having trouble pitching more than a few innings at a time, hurled his second consecutive complete game, a five-hit 10-1 rout for the Baltimore Orioles over the Yankees. It was his 26th career triumph over New York, most of any active pitcher, and matched Palmer's 26 victories over his other pigeons, the Cleveland Indians.

And the 41-year-old Yastrzemski, appearing in his 3,000th major league game, delivered a key two-run single as Boston wiped out a 6-2 deficit with four runs in the seventh inning and walked and scored the winning run in the ninth as the Red Sox edged the Cleveland Indians 8-7.

"The old man did a pretty good job in his 3,000th game," Manager Ralph Houk said. "He had one heck of a night. The man is almost unbelievable. He made a couple of great plays in the field, sparked our comeback in the seventh and wound up by scoring the winning run. He'll beat you any and every way possible."

Yastrzemski's heroics helped the Red Sox overcome home runs by Cleveland's Joe Charboneau, Andre Thornton and Toby Harrah. Leading off the ninth, Yastrzemski worked a walk and went to third as Jim Rice doubled. Then, after Garry Hancock was walked intentionally, Yaz sprinted home on Carney Lansford's chopper to third, easily beating the throw from Harrah. His two-run single cut Cleveland's lead to 6-5 in the seventh.

"I was just trying to get on base with the score tied and Rice and the other guys coming up after me," Yastrzemski said. "I really didn't think much of playing in my 3,000th game. After losing that doubleheader in Milwaukee Sunday I was thinking only of winning."

Rangers 4, Twins 3

Stein set his pinch hit record with a bases-loaded single after Texas tied the score on singles by Mickey Rivers, Al Oliver and Buddy Bell, his third RBI. Stein broke the mark of six consecutive pinch hits by Bob Johnson of Baltimore in 1964. The major league record for consecutive pinch hits in a season is eight by Dave Philley of the Philadelphia Phillies in 1958. Philley added a ninth in 1959 before his string was broken.

"I didn't feel they would use me for a pinch hitter since they had John Ellis, but I got that first one early in the year and they just kept sending me up there," Stein said. "It is an amazing streak. In fact, I was amazed after the third one. I was never a very good pinch hitter. That just shows you how crazy this game can be."

Stein has now hit in 15 consecutive games, seven of those with only one at-bat, and his hitting .538 with 21 hits in 39 trips to the plate.

Orioles 10, Yankees 1

Despite DeCinces' slugging and Palmer's pitching, the home run by Belanger, the Orioles' perennial Gold Glove shortstop, was the blow that thrilled the Baltimore crowd of 42,949. "I knew when I hit it that they were getting the books out to find out when I hit my last one," Belanger said after his 20th career homer and his first in 949 at-bats.

Palmer's complete game helped an overworked pitching staff. "Jimmy has saved the bullpen many times since I've been here," said Manager Earl Weaver. "He gets complete games at the right time."

A's 5, White Sox 2

Rickey Henderson tripled, singled and scored twice and Tony Armas belted a game-breaking three-run double in leading Oakland to its fifth consecutive triumph behind Steve McCatty's six-hit pitching. Armas, the AL leader with 35 RBIs, capped a four-run burst in the bottom of the fifth with his bases-loaded double after Henderson's RBI single broke a 1-1 tie.

Tigers 12, Brewers 3

Jack Morris won his fifth game in a row with a six-hitter to run his career record to 6-1 against Milwaukee while his teammates backed him with a 16-hit attack. John Wockenfuss and Richie Hebner drove in three runs apiece and Lynn Jones, who had been hitting .198, had four hits and two RBIs. Wockenfuss slammed a three-run double in the fourth while Hebner hit a solo homer in the fifth and a two-run double in the ninth. Cecil Cooper and Ben Oglivie homered for the Brewers.

Mariners 7-5, Royals 1-2

Lenny Randle and Rick Auerbach homered to lead Seattle in the nightcap. Randle tied the score 1-1 with a fourth-inning homer and Auerbach provided some insurance with a two-run shot in the seventh. In the first game, Gary Gray drove in four runs with his third two-homer game in 10 days and rookie Brian Allard checked Kansas City on six hits.

Angels 2, Blue Jays 1

Mike Witt, a 6-foot-7 rookie right-hander, blanked Toronto on two singles for eight innings before needing help in the ninth. RBI singles by Bobby Grich and Butch Hobson gave the Angels a 2-0 lead. Toronto scored in the ninth on a pair of walks and Lloyd Moseby's single but Andy Hassler retired John Mayberry and Garth Iorg, stranding runners at second and third and handing the Blue Jays their sixth consecutive setback.

3,000th Game Is 'No Big Deal'

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski figures he's been under pressure ever since he joined the Boston Red Sox as Ted Williams' successor 20 years ago, so playing in his 3,000th major league game was no big deal.

"The standing ovation before the game felt good, but only for a fleeting moment as I turned my thoughts back to the game," Yastrzemski said Monday night after sparking the Red Sox to an 8-7 comeback victory over the Cleveland Indians.

"Scoring the winning run makes this game that much more enjoyable, but winning is what it's all about," Yastrzemski said. "The thing is what I do in a game today, not what I did in the other 3,000."

Joining Hank Aaron (3,298), Ty Cobb (3,033) and Stan Musial (3,026) as the only major league players in history to play in 3,000 games, Yastrzemski reached another career milestone in outstanding fashion.

He walked and scored a run in the sixth, lined a two-run single in the seventh and walked and scored the winning run in the ninth. He also turned in two spectacular fielding plays at first base.

"The old man did a pretty good job in his 3,000th game," said Boston Manager Ralph Houk. "He had one heck of a night. The man is almost unbelievable. He'll beat you any and every way possible. If you didn't know he was 41, you'd pass him off for a guy in his early 30s."

Yastrzemski, who will be 42 in August, continues to defy Father Time, insisting, "I can still play this game, that's why I'm here."

In 21 years with the Red Sox, Yaz has established himself as one of baseball's all-time greats, ranking with the leaders in virtually every offensive category.

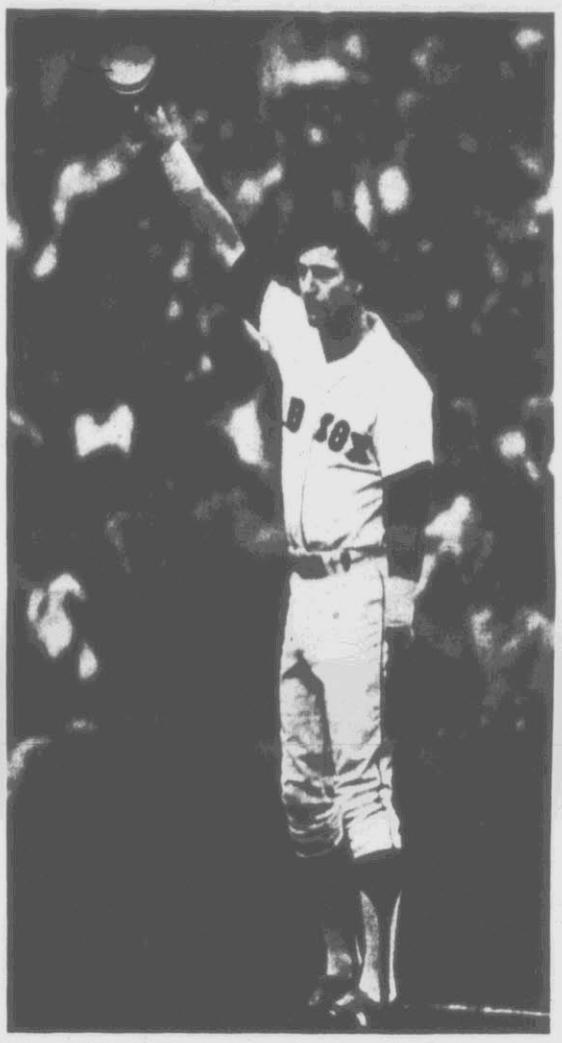

He is the only American League player ever to achieve 3,000 hits and 400 homers. And last year he became the first AL player to get 100 or more hits in 20 consecutive seasons.

"I've worked hard, but I've been very fortunate," he said. "I've managed to escape serious injury and I've been able to play often with nagging aches and pains. But 3,000 games — that's an awful lot of games. I don't think I'll make 4,000."

Asked how much longer he will continue to play, Yastrzemski laughed and said:

"As long as the old body holds out. After the season, though, I'll take a couple of weeks off, do some thinking and make a decision."

Then he'll probably return to his training program to get ready for 1982.

Another Milestone
Boston Red Sox great Carl Yastrzemski raises his hat to the applause of the Fenway fans Monday as the became the fourth player in history to play in 3,000 games. In Yaz's 21 seasons, he has been on the disabled list only once. Boston was playing the Cleveland Indians. (AP Laserphoto)

Bullets Make 1-A Playoffs

JAMESVILLE — Greg Sullivan drove in two runs and Carl Ange scattered four hits to lift Jamesville to a 3-1 victory over Manteo Monday night in a one-game playoff for the Tobacco Belt Conference's second playoff berth.

The Bullets tied for second with Manteo during the regular season, forcing the one-game playoff. The Bullets, state 1-A champs the last two seasons, now travel to Rosewood Friday at 4 p.m. for an opening-round game in the state 1-A playoffs.

After two scoreless innings last night, the Bullets took a lead they never lost with a three-run third inning.

Matthew Moore and Clarence Thomas walked to lead off the third and Carl Ange followed with a single to load the bases. Sullivan then singled to score both Moore and Thomas and give the Bullets a 2-0 lead.

Sullivan then stole second before Keith Waters grounded out to second to score Tom Fortenberry, who was running for Ange, to give the Bullets a 3-0 lead.

Manteo, which split with Jamesville during the regular season, scored its only run of the night off Ange in the sixth when Carl Daniels hit a solo home run. Daniels was three for four on the night.

In going the distance on the mound for the victory, Ange struck out six.

"He pitched a good ballgame," Jamesville coach Ron Davenport said. "He was ahead of most of the hitters and they had a lot of pop ups. The #1 hitter had three pop ups, the #2 hitter had two and the #4 hitter had two."

Jamesville, now 20-4 overall, was led in hitting by Ange and Sullivan, both of whom were two for three.

The winner will then meet Bear Grass at a time and site to be decided.

Six Play In Tourney

CHAPEL HILL — Six area golfers will be shooting for the team and individual titles at the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's championship tournament, which opens at Finley Golf Course in Chapel Hill on Wednesday.

Golfers are playing practice rounds today.

Rose High School's golf team of Jack Mann, Tom Brewer, Brian Hill and Kelly Kee won the Eastern Sectional Tournament to qualify as one of the two teams from that sectional. They will be competing both in the team and individual categories.

Farmville Central's Gary Hobgood won the individual title at the sectionals, while Ayden-Grifton's Wareen Agee finished second. Both of them, along with Southern Nash's Jay Lynn qualified in the individual competition.

The tournament, a 36-hole event, concludes on Thursday.

Eastern Wayne Ousts Conley

GOLDSBORO — Eastern Wayne, out hit 12 to 9, scored four runs in the third inning to defeat D.H. Conley, 5-2, Monday afternoon in the opening round of the state 3A/4A softball tournament.

The Valkyries, who end the season at 15-4, trailed 1-0 after the first inning but tied the game with a run in the second. Eastern Wayne, however, then pushed across four runs in the third to take a 5-1 lead.

Conley scored just once more, in the seventh, and it was not enough. Eastern Wayne was aided by five DHC errors. EW did not make an error.

The Valkyries were led at the plate by Karen Barrett, Irish Barnhill and Darlene Cannon, all of whom were two for three. Cynthia Barnes was two for four.

Diane Robinson led Eastern Wayne in hitting with three singles in three at bats. Robin Grant was two for three for the winners.

Two other teams will join in the softball playoff action today.

Williamston's girls, who finished the regular season with an 11-5 overall mark and a 10-4 Northeastern Conference mark, gained a runner-up spot in the tournament and will travel to Rocky Mount for a 3:30 p.m. game today. That contest too, is in the 4-A/3-A playoffs.

Meanwhile, in the 2-A/1-A playoffs, Jamesville, the Tobacco Belt Conference champion, plays host to Currituck in a 7:30 p.m. game in Jamesville.

Winners will advance in their respective divisions.

Cavs Grab Off James Edwards

CLEVELAND (AP) — Ted Stepien, the primary owner of the Cleveland Cavaliers of the National Basketball Association, has again opened his wallet, this time to free-agent center James Edwards of the Indiana Pacers.

Stepien revealed on Memorial Day that Edwards has signed a conditional agreement to play for Cleveland in the 1981-82 season, in the first year of a four-year pact calling for $800,000 a year in salary and incentive bonuses.

On Saturday, Stepien revealed a similar agreement with free-agent guard Otis Birdsong of the Kansas City Kings.

In both cases, the free-agent's team has 15 days to match the Cleveland offer or make a trade to a team that will match the offer. The 15-day period for Birdsong and Edwards begins today and concludes June 9, the day the NBA drafts college players.

The free-agent rules are new to the NBA, and the Cavaliers are the first organization to try to lure any established star away from his team. With the Edwards signing, the Cavaliers have acted twice.

Mario's Win May Always Seem Tainted

New 500 Winner
Mario Andretti poses for photographers in his car with the Borg-Warner trophy after being declared winner of the 65th Indianapolis 500 on Monday. Andretti's second win at the Indy was awarded when Bobby Unser was penalized for passing during a caution period. (AP Laserphoto)

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Two years ago, a chaotic feud within auto racing threatened to halt the Indianapolis 500 even before the green starting flag had dropped. This time, a more startling controversy didn't begin until the checkered victory flag was waved.

Barring an even more surprising turnabout, the 1981 Indianapolis 500 will always be remembered as the one that saw the apparent winner, the one who triumphantly took the checkered flag and drove into Victory Lane, banished to second place.

For Bobby Unser, the man whose moment of glory vanished under the scrutiny of a board of race stewards, second place is no better than last place. For Mario Andretti, the man whose second Indianapolis 500 victory may forever be tainted by his own mixed feelings, first place may hold little more joy than second.

In 1979, the auto racing world was torn apart by the feud between the U.S. Auto Club, the longtime race sanctioning body, and the dissident Championship Auto Racing Teams. CART's members included the biggest names in racing who felt they did not have enough control of the sport under USAC.

CART at first threatened to boycott the Indy 500, then had to go to federal court to get in the race when the Indianapolis Motor Speedway rejected their entries.

Both CART and USAC now maintain separate racing schedules — except at Indy, where they operate under an uneasy truce. Ironically, the last hope for Unser — whose car owner, Roger Penske, was an organizer of CART — is an appeal to USAC.

Penske said he will ask a special USAC appeals board to overturn the one-lap penalty the race stewards assessed Unser on Monday for passing several cars as he came out of the pits during a yellow caution period. The formal appeal must be filed by midnight Thursday.

Unless the penalty is reversed, Andretti will be the official winner of the 65th Indianapolis 500. At Monday night's victory banquet, Andretti said, "I don't know how to feel. Very honestly, when I got the news this morning I didn't know whether to jump for joy or what. Since there is a little doubt in my mind, when in doubt I'll just try to feel happy.

"I just hope and pray we can come back again and win without any controversy at all," Andretti said.

Unser, who at age 47 would have been the oldest Indy winner in history, did not attend the banquet. He said earlier, "I have a very empty feeling. I can't feel worse. I don't think I did anything wrong. If I did, a lot of other people did too."

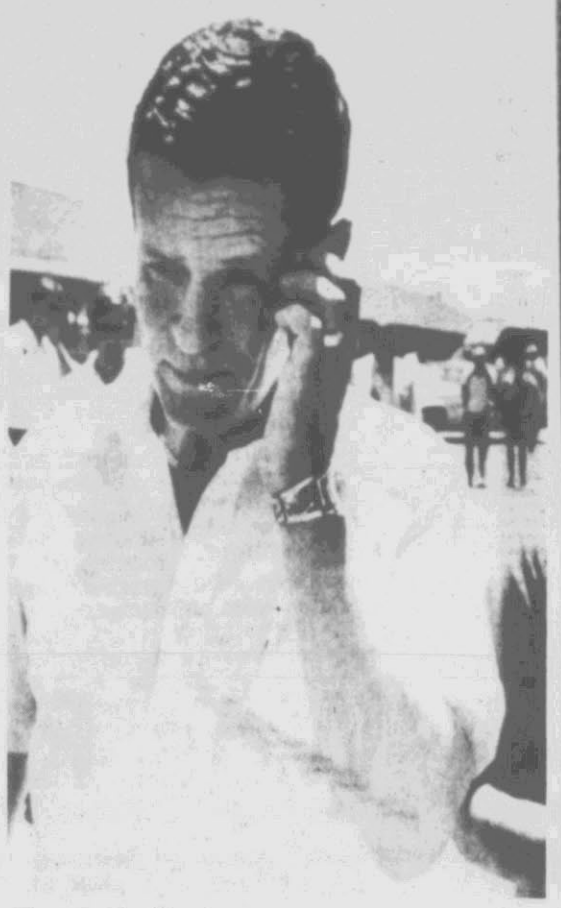

Unser led 88 of the 200 laps on Sunday, but the controversial lap was the 149th circuit of the 2½-mile track. He had come into the pits on that lap — during one of 11 yellow caution periods — but Andretti and others claimed he improved his position by illegally passing a line of cars as he emerged.

The rest of the race was a scramble for first place byn Unser, Andretti and Gordon Johncock. Unser regained the lead for good on the 181st lap, and when Johncock — who was running second at the time — lost power with six laps to go, Unser cruised the rest of the way to what he was sure was his third triumph in the world's richest automobile race.

When he crossed the finish line, he was 5.3 seconds ahead of Andretti. Vern Schuppan, a former Indy Rookie of the Year who had driven in just one race since his initial appearance in 1976, wound up third, followed by rookies Kevin Cogan and Geoff Brabham, veteran Sheldon Kinser, rookie Tony Bettenhausen and veterans Steve Krisiloff, Johncock and Dennis Firestone.

Because of the numerous yellow periods, Andretti finished the race at an average speed of 139.029 mph for the 500 miles — the slowest for a winner since Jim Rathmann averaged just over 138 mph in 1960.

The most serious mishap was a fiery crash that virtually disintegrated Danny Ongais' race car and sent the 39-year-old veteran driver to Methodist Hospital with multiple leg, arm and internal injuries.

'Empty Feeling'
Bobby Unser scratches his head as he walks through Gasoline Alley at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Monday after officials named Mario Andretti the winner of the 65th Indianapolis 500. "I have an empty feeling," Unser said of the decision. (AP Laserphoto)

Carroll & Assoc. 6
Moose 5

Carroll & Associates eased past the Moose yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League, claiming a 6-5 victory.

Carroll scored first, getting two runs in the first inning, one a lead-off homer by Eric Jarman. Carroll added a third run in the third, before the Moose finally came up with one in the bottom of the frame. Jarman added another homer for a 4-1 Carroll lead in the top of the fourth, but that lead was short-lived. The Moose came back with four in the bottom of the frame, all on a grand-slam homer by Simon Moye.

But Carroll pushed over the winning run in the fifth. Billy Carr singled and moved up on a passed ball and a wild pitch. He scored when Lee Rogers singled.

Jarman led the Carroll hitting with two, while Moye and Neil Bullock each had two for the Moose.

Lions 21
Coca-Cola 9

The Lions romped to a 21-9 victory over Coca-Cola in the North State Little League yesterday. The Lions are unbeaten on the season.

Coke scored first, getting a run in the top of the first inning. The Lions, however, came back to score four times in their half of the inning, then added four more in the second.

The Lions got what eventually proved the clincher in the third, as they scored twice for a 10-1 lead. Ralph Harper singled and Mike Duncan reached on a fielder's choice. Burt Aycock also reached on a fielder's choice, loading the bases, and a passed ball let Harper score. Donald Perkins then singled in Duncan.

The Lions went on to add six more in the fourth, and finished it up with five in the fifth.

Coke came up with one in the fourth, three in the fifth and four more in the sixth.

Harper, Tom Moye, Aycock and Perkins each had two hits to lead the Lions. No one had more than one for the Coke nine.

Home Builders 13
Planters Bank 10

Home Builders evened its record at 1-1 in the Babe Ruth League last night, gaining a 13-10 victory over Planters Bank.

The Builders scored first, getting three runs in the first inning. Planters came back with two in its half of the frame. The Builders added three more in the second, and one in the fourth. Planters then came up with four in the bottom of the fourth, only to see the Builders score three in the fifth for a 10-6 lead.

Then, in the sixth, the Builders pushed over two runs to insure the victory. David Jester walked and moved up on a wild pitch, coming around to score on an error. Nathan Green also walked, moved up on a wild pitch, stole third and scored on an error.

The other Builder run came in the seventh. Planters scored three times in the sixth and once in the seventh.

John Ravaris led Home Builders with three hits, while Jerry Mayo and Green each had two. Gary Scott had two hits to pace Planters.

'Guardedly Optimistic' About Allison Condition

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Allison family's jubilation over Bobby Allison's victory Sunday in the World 600 has been tempered by brother Donnie's injury in the same race.

Bobby Allison took the checkered flag 8.2 seconds ahead of Harry Gant to win $60,500 in the stock car race — the nation's longest — before a record crowd of more than 135,000.

But family members spent most of Sunday at Charlotte Memorial Hospital visting Donnie Allison after his Oldsmobile spun in the fourth turn on lap 152 of the 400-lap race, careening off the side of a Buick driven by Dave Brooks.

Both drivers were trapped in their cars several minutes before they could be freed. Brooks was treated for a dislocated right shoulder and released. But Allison, 41, suffered a concussion, fractured ribs, a bruised right lung, a broken left knee and a broken right shoulder blade, doctors said.

A hospital spokesman said Monday that Donnie was listed in unsatisfactory but stable condition, and would have to remain in the intensive care unit for at least another day.

The spokesman said doctors were "guardedly optimistic" in their prognosis and were closely monitoring Allison's head injuries.

The spokesman said Allison was conscious Monday morning but was "extremely groggy and lethargic." But he was able to speak to the nurses, his wife and brother Bobby.

Doctors earlier feared the crash might have injured Allison's aorta, the main blood vessel leading from the heart to most parts of the body.

But later tests found no internal bleeding. Dr. Jim Evans, senior resident in emergency medicine, said Allison could be released in three or four days. If a knee operation is required, he could be in a week to 10 days.

Bobby Allison, 43, said he saw the accident, wanted to stop, but knew his brother would want him to go on after 23 years of racing together.

"I saw the car was torn up the first time by," he said. "I saw Donnie slumped over and it was taking quite awhile to get him out. At that point, all I could do was guess. What could I have done? What could I have changed?"

Then the third member of the Alabama Gang — polesitter Neil Bonnett — crashed at the midway point of the race but suffered only minor bumps and bruises. But Bobby didn't know that.

"Under the green, I didn't think about them," he said. "But it would all come back when the cautions came out."

Strike Deadline Only Three Days Away Now

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball, which has enjoyed a perfect game, a no-hitter and some strong attendance on the Memorial Day weekend, returns to the the bargaining table today with the players' strike deadline just three days away.

Negotiators for the owners and players scheduled a meeting here this afternoon after a two-day recess. In their last session on Saturday, they appeared far apart on the only issue before them — free-agent compensation.

"I don't feel as good this year as last," said federal mediator Kenneth E. Moffett, referring to an 11th-hour settlement that avoided a strike. All-night bargaining May 22, 1980 resulted in agreement on all issues except for compensation.

The owners, by virtue of that agreement, have unilaterally instituted their compensation plan into the labor contract. The players, in turn, have responded with their strike deadline, which would stop the season after Thursday's five games are completed.

Even if there is no negotiated settlement, a strike could be avoided by a decision of the National Labor Relations Board in Washington, which was expected to rule today or Wednesday on unfair labor practice charges filed by the players.

"The NLRB complaint is separate and apart from the negotiations," Moffett said last week. "But both sides are aware of it."

If William Lubbers, the NLRB's general counsel, finds merit in the players' position that the owners have not bargained in good faith, he could then seek an injunction in federal court preventing the owners from implementing their compensation plan.

The owners' plan calls for 50 percent of the major league players to be classified as "ranking" free agents in the re-entry draft. Signing those players would require a major leaguer in return as compensation for teams losing them. If the courts erase the owners' compensation formula from the contract, there would seem to be no reason for the players to strike.

However, there is no guarantee that Lubbers would agree with the players, nor is there any certainty that a federal court would issue an injunction against the owners. That means baseball would be on the precipice of its first regular-season work stoppage since 1972.

The Players Association's executive board is scheduled to meet Thursday and confirm its resolution setting a May 29 strike date. Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, said the union was able to find space for the player representatives in the New York Sheraton, even though all rooms Thursday night were booked.

He explained to the hotel that if there is a strike, the Chicago Cubs, scheduled to open a series with the New York Mets Friday night, wouldn't be around to claim their rooms.

And the baseball season, which has celebrated Len Barker's perfect game, Charlie Lea's no-hitter and 380,000 fans in 13 stadiums Sunday, wouldn't be around either.

Garza Is Named Top Indy Rookie

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — When Josele Garza, a 22-year-old rookie, glanced toward his pit midway through the Indianapolis 500, he was told he was leading the race. But the implication was so improbable, it didn't register.

"I saw my pit board. It said 'Position One.' That didn't really tick," said Garza, named Indy Rookie of the Year for 1981 at the annual Victory Awards Banquet Monday night.

"Then the yellow (caution light) came out and the pace car came on the track, and all the cars were lined up behind me. That's when I knew I was in first place."

Garza, the fastest qualifier among 10 rookie drivers, started Sunday's race from the sixth position. After 100 of the 200 laps, he was in first place.

"I tried to push that out of my mind," he said. "You can't let emotions take over."

Yet his emotions almost overwhelmed him 38 laps later when he stepped uninjured from his wrecked race car to a standing ovation and thunderous applause from the nearby spectators.

"It was a thrill," he said. "I was feeling all kinds of emotions. One side of me was sad I couldn't finish the race, but the other side was excited because of the crowd."

He wound up 23rd but took home $40,282, the biggest paycheck of his still-young career, including $5,000 that went with his selection as the year's top rookie driver.

"I'm choking up. This is a great honor," he said when his awards were presented.

Garza, the youngest entrant in the race and the first Mexican ever to drive in the 500, said, "This is a great moment for me. I never expected this. When I first got here I thought I had a really good shot at qualifying and just running in the race.

"I never expected to qualify or run as high as I did. I thought I was two or three years down the road. I'm going to be back here next year, and I'm going to win it one of these days.. .if not next year, then the one after, or the one after that."

Garza said the controversy that put Mario Andretti ahead of apparent winner Bobby Unser in no way diminshed his own feeling of accomplishment.

"Those are things that happen once in awhile. When you're on the track there's always going to be some controversy or other. That's why we have officials," he said.

Expos Bounce Back On Own Home Turf

By The Associated Press

The Montreal Expos were at home for the first time since May 10, and the nagging memory of a 4-8 road trip needed to be erased.

It started in Los Angeles, where the Expos lost three straight. They stretched that to four losses in a row in San Francisco, then stumbled through San Diego and Chicago, where they lost two of three.

They were beginning to look very little like the team that had finished one game behind Philadelphia in the National League East Division last year.

Then, St. Louis came to town, leading the division by 3½ games, and, suddenly, the Expos were cooking. Bill Gullickson snapped a personal four-game losing streak with 81-3 strong innings, and light-hitting Chris Speier drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a run-scoring single that powered Montreal to a 5-3 victory over the Cards.

The victory left Montreal 2½ games back of St. Louis and a half game in arrears of the Philadelphia Phillies, who lost 13-3 to the New York Mets Monday.

"Any game we can gain on the Cardinals is a bonus. It's sure better being only 2½ games back than it is being 4½," said Speier, who came into the game hitting only .250 but belted a two-run homer in the fourth to give the Expos a 3-0 lead. "It's an especially big win for us considering the way we played on our West Coast road trip."

Gullickson, 2-4, took a four-hitter into the eighth inning, but he yielded a double to Keith Hernandez, three singles and a run before there were two out in the ninth. Left-hander Bill Lee doused the fire, allowing a run-scoring ground out by pinch hitter Tito Landrum and inducing Tom Herr to fly out, to gain his third save.

"I wouldn't call it a must win because if you got out there thinking like that, you might put too much pressure on yourself," Gullickson said. "But it's good to beat the Cardinals because they're in our division and they're ahead of us."

St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog was far from including his team out of the East Division race.

"They (the Expos) are tough to beat at home, but we gave them a scare," Herzog said. "These types of games are tough on a manager. I still see it as a four-team race between ourselves, the Phillies, Montreal and Pittsburgh."

Lary Sorensen, 4-3, was the loser, giving up 10 hits and five runs in 62-3 innings.

Mets 13, Phillies 3

Dave Kingman smashed the 10th grand slam home run of his career and Hubie Brooks drove in three more runs to help New York humble the defending World Series champion Phillies.

Greg Harris got his first major league victory with 52-3 innings' work. He scattered six hits and struck out six before Jeff Reardon relieved, earning his second save.

Kingman's homer came in the second off losing starter Dick Ruthven, 6-2, and gave the Mets an 8-0 lead.

Cubs 10, Pirates 9

Scot Thompson lofted a bases-loaded single over Pittsburgh's pulled-in outfield with none out in the 11th inning to boost Chicago over the Pirates and give the Cubs their third straight victory.

Steve Henderson homered twice for the Cubs, leading off a four-run eighth inning and again to tie the score 9-9 in the ninth. They were the second and third homers for him this year.

Trailing 8-0 after 3½ innings, Chicago started its comeback with four runs in the fourth, two unearned, off Pirates starter Rick Rhoden.

In the 11th, Chicago loaded the bases against reliever Victor Cruz with a single by Leon Durham, who stole second, a single by Henderson and a walk to Jerry Morales.

Dodgers 7, Braves 1

Los Angeles veteran Burt Hooton won his seventh game without a lossing, working 51-3 innings, and Steve Garvey drove in three runs with a single and a two-run homer in the fifth inning.

The Dodgers scored three runs in the first inning off Atlanta right-hander Bob Walk, 1-4, with the help of a pair of Braves errors. Dusty Baker singled home one run, and Garvey drove in another with an infield hit. The third run scored on Ron Cey's grounder.

Walk left after the first inning with a pulled muscle in his rib cage.

Reds 6, Giants 3

Larry Biittner knocked in two runs with a double and Johnny Bench singled home a run in Cincinnati's three-run eighth inning, snapping a 3-3 tie and sending the Reds over San Francisco.

Ken Griffey started the inning with a single and stole second. After two were out, George Foster, who had homered in the fourth, scratched out an infield single. Bench followed with a single to left, and Biittner then doubled.

Geoff Combe worked the last two innings for Cincinnati, picking up his first major league victory in relief of Frank Pastore.

Astros 6, Padres 3

Craig Reynolds slugged a two-run triple in Houston's three-run fourth inning, and Joe Niekro upped his record to 6-3 with seventh-inning relief help from Joe Sambito.

Leading by just one run, 3-2, Reynolds' fourth-inning triple scored Rafael Landestoy and Terry Puhl, both of whom had walked. Reynolds scored on a sacrifice fly by Cesar Cedeno.

Art Howe drove in a run in the first inning, when Houston scored three runs, with a sacrifice bunt, but he saw his 23-game hitting streak snapped. After the bunt, he grounded out twice to shortstop and flew out to right field.

San Diego Padres Ozzie Smith is called safe at the plate by home plate umpire John McSherry as he slides past the tag from Houston Astros catcher Alan Ashby (14). Ongais Has Further Surgery; Looking Forward To Solid Food

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — While most participants in the 1981 Indianapolis 500 looked ahead to their next race, Danny Ongais was looking forward to his first solid food since he crashed his car during Sunday's race.

Ongais underwent two hours of surgery Monday to repair a six-inch tear in his diaphragm. The tear was one of the injuries he received in a fiery crash on his 64th lap in Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

Fred Price, a spokesman for Methodist Hospital, said doctors for the 39-year-old Hawaii native, had discovered "no other internal injuries" and that they observed "no internal bleeding."

Ongais was returned to the intensive care unit after his latest operation and continued to be listed in serious condition, Price said.

Before Monday's operation, Ongais had been visited by Dr. Thomas Hanna, the medical director for the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

"His biggest disappointment seemed to be that he wasn't going to be able to have solid food," said Hanna. "I definitely noticed disappointment when he was told he was unable to eat."

On Sunday, Ongais underwent more than four hours of artery bypass surgery in his right leg, which received multiple injuries in the accident, officials said.

"Sunday's surgery on the lower right leg of Ongais was successful," said Price, adding that doctors were pleased the driver was able to move his toes on his own.

Hanna described Ongais condition as good, but added that the extent of injury to the leg still was unknown. He said doctors were hearing a pulse in the leg and that was considered a step toward normal recovery.

"All things considered, Danny was in good spirits during the visit," Hanna said. "He grabbed my hand and was quite alert."

The other driver injured in Sunday's race, 1979 winner Rick Mears, was released from the hospital Monday but said he might have to undergo plastic surgery on his nose. Mears was burned along with several other persons in his crew when a fuel fire broke out during a pit stop.

Mears, a 29-year-old from Bakersfield, Calif., visited the Speedway after he was released, his salve-covered nose and cheeks providing vivid evidence of his close call.

"The protective equipment worked," Mears said. "The only place I was burned was where the helmet provides no protection... It's dead right now. There's no feeling on the tip. We're going to have to wait a few days to see what happens, but they might have to do some plastic surgery.

"That's no problem, I can always spare a little of my nose," added Mears, with a grin on his face.

The driver had a recommendation for Speedway officials as they plan for next year's race.

"I think they could really work on getting experienced firemen," Mears said, adding that one of the firemen in his pit had sprayed him briefly and then fled for his own safety, leaving the driver in flames with a fire extinguisher lying at his side.

"They have a lot of older guys that don't respond as quickly as they should," said Mears, referring to the fire crews here. "They need to get serious, they need to put the pit crew firemen in protective clothing just like the drivers. I can't fault the man for running. He didn't have the right protection."

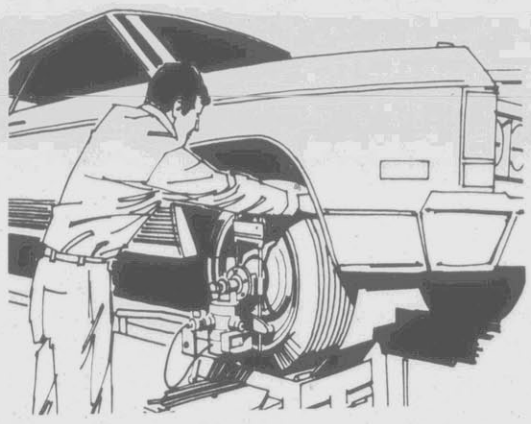

Three members of Mears' crew were still hospitalized early today. They were identified as Bill Murphy, 28, Philadelphia, who was listed in good condition with second and third-degree burns on the face. Crew chief Derrick Walker, 36, Reading, Pa., had second and third-degree burns over the lower half of his body and was listed in satisfactory condition.

George Reader, 57, Winchester, Ill., another crew member, was listed in fair condition with second and third-degree burns on his right side, officials said.

Several other crewmen were released Monday.

CBS-TV News May Be Stronger Than Year Ago

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It might have been a tough 18 months for CBS News, dominant in the field since the mid-1970s. There was Walter Cronkite's departure after nearly two decades as "Evening News" anchorman, and ABC stole the show at one point with "Nightline," network TV's first late-night newscast.

CBS News may, in fact, be stronger today than it was a year ago.

The transition from Cronkite to Dan Rather as "Evening News" anchor was smooth, despite considerable pressure from the outside.

Expansion of the network's "Morning" news program and the addition of a midafternoon newscast are imminent, and there is a serious effort under way to expand the "Evening News" beyond its current half-hour.

Then there was the announcement, last week, that Bill Moyers, creator of public TV's Emmy-winning "Bill Moyers' Journal," will return in the fall with an assignment "ranging over the entire panorama of CBS News activities."

There has been a good deal of behind-the-scenes manuevering, too, notably the promotion of Robert Chandler to senior vice president for administration, Edward Fouhy to vice president and director of news, and Edward Coloff to vice president and director of public affairs programming — young men all..

"I told you we wouldn't stand still," William A. Leonard, CBS News' president, said the other day, recalling a conversation several months ago. Anyone who imagined Leonard a caretaker president couldn't have been further from reality.

Still facing Cronkite's departure, CBS in September broke long-standing corporate retirement policy and extended Leonard's contract for at least a year. Leonard was 65 on April 9, and would have been forced to retire May 1.

Leonard succeeded Richard S. Salant, who was required to step down at 65, as president of the news division in April 1979, and one of his first major decisions may have been the most difficult. He chose Rather, a former White House reporter and current correspondent for the network's "60 Minutes" newsmagazine, over Roger Mudd, once considered Cronkite's heir apparent.

Mudd shortly thereafter left CBS for an assignment in Washington with NBC News.

The selection of Rather was a sound one. The "Evening News" audience may have changed some in the two months since Rather took the job, but commercial time, an important guage for the network, sold faster than ever for Rather's first full quarter as anchorman.

The return of Moyers, a correspondent for the network's "CBS Reports" documentary unit for just under three years in the mid-'70s, may be as significant a development in the long term. If Moyers is not the pre-eminent broadcast journalist, he certainly is among the most-respected.

Leonard said Moyers' work at CBS would include development of a continuing news program, perhaps one similar to the "Journal" he created for public TV in 1972. "I wouldn't rule out the title or the concept," he said.

The new program might be offered as competition for ABC's "Nightline," or as part of an expanded "Evening News."

It appears fairly certain right now that Leonard will retire next April, though he hasn't said so.

The list of candidates for the job would have to include Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS Sports, Ed Joyce, general manager at CBS' owned station in New York, WCBS, and Fouhy, recently elevated from his position as vice president for CBS News in Washington.

How about Moyers, a former White House press secretary and publisher of Newsday, the Long Island newspaper?

"No," said Moyers in response to a direct question, and there was no further discussion of the point.

Famed American Sporano Found By Enrico Caruso, Dead At 84

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rosa Ponselle, the Metropolitan Opera's famed dramatic soprano discovered on an American vaudeville stage by Enrico Caruso and once hailed as a "Caruso in petticoats," is dead at 84.

Miss Ponselle died Monday of a heart attack at Villa Pace, her mansion outside Baltimore, according to Elayne Duke, a spokeswoman for the opera singer.

She said Miss Ponselle will lie in the music room of Villa Pace tonight through Thursday, and a funeral Mass will be sung Friday at St. Charles Church in Pikesville, Md. Miss Ponselle is to be buried at Druid Ridge Cemetery.

Miss Ponselle, who debuted with the Metropolitan Opera in 1918, suffered several strokes in recent years and was confined to a wheelchair.

She was the first U.S.-born singer to join the Metropolitan without European training or experience and is credited with opening the way for American-trained vocalists.

Born Rosa Ponzillo on Jan. 22, 1897, in Meriden, Conn., the daughter of a Neopolitan emigre baker and grocery store proprietor, Miss Ponselle began her career in music by studying piano.

Miss Ponselle entered vaudeville at age 16 with her elder sister Carmela in an act called the Ponzillo Sisters. It was on the vaudeville stage at New York's Palace Theatre that Caruso first heard her sing.

The legendary Italian tenor arranged an audition at the Metropolitan Opera. Miss Ponselle made her debut opposite Caruso in Giuseppe Verdi's "La Forza del Destino" on Nov. 15, 1918.

During preparations for her Metropolitan debut, the company's general manager, Gatti-Cazazza, changed her name from Ponzillo to Ponselle.

After 19 seasons with the opera, she retired to marry Carle A. Jackson of Baltimore in 1936. The marriage ended in divorce in 1946, Miss Duke said. Jackson still lives in Baltimore.

Among the honors Miss Ponselle received was the Commendatore Award from the government of Italy and honorary doctor of arts degrees from the Peabody Conservatory of Music and the University of Maryland.

Miss Ponselle's proteges since her retirement included Beverly Sills, Sherrill Milnes, James Morris, Spiro Malas, Placido Domingo, Leontyne Price and Lili Chookasian, Miss Duke said.

Jessel Rites Scheduled Wednesday Afternoon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope, saddened by the death of his friend and fellow laughmaker George Jessel, nevertheless was able to remember the jokes Jessel figured in over the years. Hope summed up his feelings by saying simply, "He was one of a kind."

The 83-year-old Jessel, whose long show business career and endless stints on the speaking circuit earned him the nickname "Toastmaster General of the USA" from President Harry Truman, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack.

He died in the UCLA Medical Center where he was admitted last week, according to his friend and publicist, Stanley Cowan.

"You know," said the 78-year-old Hope, "he once said he toured 8,500 miles a week, 40 weeks a year, to address 200 gatherings. He introduced the concept of the celebrity roast. He really was a 'Toastmaster General.'

"They say he even officiated at the Last Supper."

Another of Jessel's old cronies, Milton Berle, recalled he and Jessel were "brought up together" in New York's Harlem, where Jessel was born April 3, 1898, on the same street as Berle. Berle called Jessel "one of the wittiest and cleverest" men he had known.

"He once introduced me as 'the man who has sold more TV sets than anyone else,'" Berle reminisced. "He said 'I know because after Berle appeared on TV my mother sold her TV set, my uncle sold his TV set, my aunt sold her TV set...'"

Funeral services were scheduled for 1 p.m. Wednesday at Hillside Memorial Park and Mortuary for the comedian, actor, singer and producer whose career spanned more than 70 years, and whose omnipresence as a popular after-dinner host won him his unofficial title from Truman in 1949.

Rabbi Edgar Magnum is to officiate, while Berle is to deliver the eulogy, Cowan said.

Jessel started out as one of the Imperial Singing Trio, with columnist Walter Winchell, and from there he went into vaudeville.

By 1918 Jessel had launched his career as a comedian with the Shubert Gaities, and he later toured with Eddie Cantor in an act called "Kid Cabaret." Silent films followed. He wrote a book and soon was dividing his time between Broadway, the musical stage, radio and nightclubs.

In 1944, he became a film producer at 20th Century-Fox.

He also gained notoriety after three marriages, one to a 16-year-old showgirl. In 1961, when he was 63, he was the object of a paternity suit brought by actress Joan Taylor.

Cowan said Jessel had taken "a slight fall" at his Reseda home several weeks ago but had seemed to have no lingering ill effects. "He had been in good health, and going to the hospital was just to make sure everything was all right," Cowan said.

Jessel is survived by two daughters, Jerrilyn Jacobson of Kansas and Chrissie Jessel of California.

Dance Festival Awaits Blow

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The American Dance Festival may lose $111,000 of its 1981 funding in a last-minute recommendation by the Office of Management and Budget, said ADF president Charles Reinhart.

Funding for this season by the National Endowment for the Arts was approved by Congress last year, he said. But OMB's recommendation requires that all remaining funds from the 1981 NEA budget remain frozen pending a decision by President Ronald Reagan.

"Unfortunately, we open in three weeks, so these cutbacks came as a huge blow to us," Reinhart said. "Had we known sooner, we might have been able to change some of our programming, but we have already commissioned artists to make new works and so feel a moral obligation to fulfill our contracts."

Musicians In Benefit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A varied assortment of musicians helped colleagues in need Monday at a benefit Memorial Day festival for North Carolina Symphony musicians.

About 1,000 people flocked to the Raleigh Little Theater for the celebration, featuring classical music, jazz, rock and everything in between.

The Fabulous Knobs, the Brass Quintet, Arrogance, the String Quartet and Group Sax were among the groups donating their services to the benefit, held to raise money for symphony musicans who have been without regular paychecks since the orchestra cut its season short in April.

Michael E. Cyzewski, a symphony clarinetist who helped organize the show, said he was pleased with the turnout.

"I can't say enough for all these bands," he said. "They're all proven bands that are capable of making good money every time they play, but they're playing for nothing today to help their fellow musicians."

A reception was held under a large tent at Beard's home nearby.

Apples of Love

Ninety-five percent of home gardeners are planting tomatoes this month. For hundreds of years after they were introduced in Europe, tomatoes were called "the apples of love." Today though they may not inspire such poetic imagery, they are nonetheless the most popular choice of home gardeners. Each year Americans consume about 116 tomatoes per person, on the average. Yet until the early 19th century raw tomatoes were considered poisonous. It wasn't until 1830 that a New Jersey man became the first person on record to dare to eat a raw tomato. By 1860 most people came to accept the "apples of love" as delicious, nutritious and — safe.

DO YOU KNOW — What vegetable do Americans eat more of than any other?

Boater Complains Party Not Rescued

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ralph Mooring of Wilson says the Coast Guard left him and five companions on a deserted island for several hours Saturday without rescuing them after their boat swamped.

Mooring said the 30- to 40-foot Coast Guard boat that arrived at Shackleford Banks near Morehead City failed to retrieve his boat and left the survivors — including four young people and his fiancee — without food, water or shelter.

"I didn't know whether we would have to spend the night out there," he said in a telephone interview from his home in Wilson.

Mooring said the misadventure began as he and his party were trolling behind the breakers about 10:30 a.m. Saturday in his 19-foot boat. The boat stalled and was swamped by a "freak" wave at a point corresponding to the middle of the 8-mile-long island.

He said another boater in the area signaled the Coast Guard to help Mooring. When the Coast Guard boat arrived, it remained about 150 feet offshore for more than an hour as crew members talked through a loudspeaker, he said.

But he and his party on the island could not hear over the roar or the surf, he said.

The Coast Guard did not put out a towline to his disabled boat or send anyone to pick up the women, but the women got off the island about 8 p.m. on other boats, Mooring said.

Mooring arrived on the mainland after righting his boat about 2 a.m. Sunday with the aide of other boaters, he said.

Everyone was sunburned and bruised but there were no serious injuries, Mooring said.

A Coast Guard spokesman referred questions on the incident to a vacationing officer. But he said the Coast Guard vessel may have stayed offshore because of possible hazards in coming near the shoreline.

The spokesman said it is normal policy to reach people thorugh another method or to make sure they are assisted by private individuals.

Acid Level Of Rain Found High

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Rain in 47 storms tested in central North Carolina had acid levels 10 times the normal amount, state officials say.

The water that fell during 24 of those storms had acid levels 15 times above normal, said state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development spokesman Del Williams.

"We have verified that we share the same situation of acid rain as the rest of the eastern part of the United States," Williams said. "We want to look at the data further to see if it's detrimental here.

"It's not like something you can ignore, because we don't know what it's doing to us," she said.

Acid rain has been linked to fish kills in streams and lakes. Studies in other states show that acid rain can also affect plant life and damage masonry.

The NRCD study gathered rain from monitors in downtown Winston-Salem to determine how atmospheric pollution affects the city's water.

Normal rainfall is slightly acidic, with a pH value of 5.6, Mrs. Williams said. Neutral water would read 7 on the pH scale, which assigns 0 to the most acidic and and 14 to the most alkaline.

The normal acidity of rainfall is created when carbonic acid forms from carbon dioxide in the atmosphere. Acid rain is caused when the rain passes through an atmosphere polluted with sulfur and nitrogen oxides prkduced by burning fossil fuels, converting it into sulfuric acid and nitric acid.

The rain measured in Winston-Salem from Aug. 21 to March 4 ranged in pH levels from 3.42 to 4.47. Each drop of one point on the pH scale equals a 10-fold increase in acidity.

But there is more to consider than mere numbers, said Dr. Ellis Cowling, coordinator of a nationwide study of acid rain at North Carolina State University's School of Forestry.

Ellis urged that future studies include rural areas.

"I believe that there's value for the state of North Carolina and other southeastern states to know what (acid rain) is liike on one of our cities, based on what it's like in our surrounding countryside," he said.

Police Department investigators reported the Fambrough car collided with an auto driven by Dallas Chris Mobley of Route 2, Williamston, causing $900 damage to the Mobley car and $100 damage to the Fambrough vehicle.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

South, declarer at six spades, thought he recognized this hand from a number of columns. He was correct in a sense, but his play involved guesswork, which could have been avoided.

South visualized a slam as soon as North opened one no trump. When North showed a spade fit, South cue-bid in the hope of reaching a grand slam, but that possibility was abandoned when North could not cue-bid the ace of diamonds in return.

West led the queen of hearts, and declarer thought he knew how to manipulate the diamond suit to assure his contract. He played low from dummy and ruffed the opening lead. He drew both outstanding trumps by leading to dummy's king, then he led a low diamond.

If East had held the ace of diamonds, declarer would have been home. If East won the ace, declarer would get two club discards on the queen of diamonds and ace of hearts. If East played low, the king would win and declarer's diamond loser would disappear on the ace of hearts.

Unfortunately, West captured the king of diamonds with the ace and exited with a heart. Now declarer tried to guess the location of the queen of clubs for his contract. When he failed to do so, he ended up down one.

Declarer overlooked a line that would have guaranteed the slam if East held the ace of diamonds and would still have left him with excellent play if that card were with West. At trick one, declarer should win the ace of hearts, discarding a diamond from his hand. He ruffs a heart, draws trumps by leading to the king, and ruffs another heart. Now he exits with the king of diamonds.

If East has the ace, he wins, but is end played and the contract is guaranteed. As it is, when West wins the ace, declarer has two finesses for his contract instead of just one. West cannot return a club, for that will eliminate declarer's loser in that suit. So will a heart. Therefore, West is forced to play a diamond. Declarer finesses the ten. If that holds, two of his low clubs disappear. If it loses, declarer can still fall back on guessing who holds the queen of clubs for his contract.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON THE ADOPTION OF A REVISED ZONING MAP FOR THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, N.C.

Notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, N.C. will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers, third floor of the Municipal Building, Greenville, N.C. on Thursday, June 11, 1981 at 8:00 P.M. for the purpose of considering adoption of a revised Zoning Map reflecting the following changes:

In 1969, an official zoning map was adopted by the City of Greenville depicting zoning districts within the City. On June 26, 1972, the zoning jurisdiction of the City of Greenville was extended in to what is now called the extraterritorial area. Consequently, two zoning maps were created. Since that time, interpretations from these maps have been difficult, thereby creating a need for one comprehensive zoning map for the City and its extraterritorial area. The proposed changes are:

1) To combine the extraterritorial zoning map at a scale of 1" equals 1,000' and the City zoning map at a scale of 1" equals 600' into a zoning index at a scale of 1" equals 200', which will be the new official zoning map of the City of Greenville.

2) An unofficial, informational zoning map at a scale of 1" equals 1,000' is incorporated with the index to depict general zoning districts withiin the City and the extraterritorial area.

3) The only change which will be made in the new official zoning map is the change of designation from FP (Floodplain) to FW (Floodway). On the original map (1969), the purpose of the FP (Floodplain) district was to encourage utilization of the floodplain by uses which would not be damaged or destroyed by high waters, and to insure proper watershed management procedures. Since that time, this feature has been delineated more accurately by the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Corps of Engineers, resulting in the establishment of the Floodway and Floodway Fringe Areas.

4) In affected areas, property previously zoned FP (Floodplain) will be rezoned to FW (Floodway). In cases where adjacent zoning districts border the FP (Floodplain) zone, and the change to FW (Floodway) results in the decrease of the flood prone area, the adjacent zoning will be extended to the property.

5) Persons who may think they are affected by these changes are encouraged to be present at the hearing to be held at the time and place aforesaid, when they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

Please note that Section 32-72 entitled "FP Floodplain - Purpose" be deleted in its entirety and substitute, therefore a new section 32-72 entitled "FW Floodway".

The proposed Zoning Map is available for public inspection in the office of the City Clerk, City Planner and City Engineer during regular office hours from 8:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. Monday through Friday.
