Crash Kills 14 Men On Carrier Nimitz

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A radar-jamming jet crashed during a night landing on the flight deck of the USS Nimitz, killing 14 people and injuring 45, Navy officials said today.

The EA-6B Prowler, an electronic warfare plane that was temporarily grounded last year because of its history of crashes, hit a number of other aircraft and touched off a fire on the carrier's deck shortly before midnight Tuesday about 60 miles off the Jacksonville coast, according to Lt. Cmdr. Ken Pease, a spokesman at the Navy's Norfolk, Va., Naval Station.

Although initial reports had said 10 crewmen had died, Pease confirmed that 14 perished in the accident and 45 suffered injuries.

The accident did not affect the 1,092-foot carrier's nuclear propulsion system or the navigational ability of the world's largest warship, said Nick Young, public affairs officer at the Jacksonville Naval Air Station.

Shipboard firefighters extinguished the blaze, Young said.

Shortly after 7 a.m. EDT, the Nimitz was still off the Jacksonville coast while the injured were being taken ashore, Pease said. He added that the carrier, accompanied by the destroyer USS Moosburgger, was to head back to its home port at Norfolk, and arrive sometime Thursday.

The names and conditions of the victims were withheld until relatives could be notified, but Lt. Cmdr. Dale Knee said 10 victims brought to the Naval Regional Medical Center here were in "very serious" and "very critical" condition.

Most suffered second- and third-degree burns, and some had lacerations, internal injuries and fractures, Knee said.

The injured crewman were treated first in the carrier's medical department and a number of them were transferred by helicopter to a medical station at the Navy's Jacksonville facility, Young added.

The Prowler is a four-seater, but the Navy could not say immediately how many fliers were aboard when the jet crashed.

Navy officials weren't sure how seriously the carrier was damaged, but Young said initial reports indicated the one EA-6B and four F-14 aircraft were destroyed and three A-7 aircraft and one SH-3 helicopter sustained major damage.

The Navy began an investigation to determine the cause of the crash, he said.

The Nimitz had been scheduled to visit Fort Lauderdale later this week, Young said.

The Nimitz, weighing in at 95,000 tons, returned to its Norfolk base a year ago Tuesday after a six-month deployment in the Mediterranean that stretched to nine months because of the seizure of hostages in Iran and the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

It was diverted to the Indian Ocean last spring, and it was from the deck of the Nimitz that eight helicopters took off in an effort to rescue the 52 Americans held captive in Tehran.

The mission was scrubbed in the predawn darkness of April 25, 1980 after three choppers developed malfunctions deep in the Iranian desert. After the operation was called off, the fiery collision between a helicopter and a C-130 transport plane left eight American servicemen dead. The 90 commandos and 90 air crewmen never got closer than 200 miles to Tehran.

Saudi Arabia Motorists' Friend In OPEC Failure

By FLOYD NORRIS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Motorists taking to the road for summer vacations won't have to worry about higher prices at gasoline pumps and might find some bargains, thanks to the failure of the OPEC cartel to eliminate a market glut of oil, U.S. analysts say.

Price wars already have broken out in some areas, with competition especially intense throughout the Midwest.

Saudi Arabia once again turned out to be the motorists' friend. The Saudis refused Tuesday to increase their oil prices and forced other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to accept a price freeze for at least six months. The Saudis also declined to join 10 of the 12 other oil ministers in deciding to cut petroleum output by at least 10 percent, starting June 1, in an attempt to relieve the global oversupply. The excess supply is calculated at 2 million to 3 million barrels a day.

Iran and Iraq, whose exports are growing as their war stagnates, joined the Saudis in not agreeing to the reduction.

The Saudis, whose average daily oil production is 10.3 million barrels, have taken credit publicly for flooding the market with oil as a means of attaining price stability and stemming inflation in the United States and other Western countries where they have substantial investments.

They also recognize their efforts to brake oil-price hikes could be appreciated by the U.S. Congress, which is considering a Saudi request to buy five sophisticated radar aircraft, known as AWACS.

The overall reduction in daily output by the 10 OPEC countries was not expected to exceed 1.5 million barrels — roughly equivalent to the amount the Saudis produce beyond their official target levels.

The price-freeze decision — the cartel's first since June 1978 — means OPEC oil will remain in the range of $32 a barrel — the Saudis' price — to $41 a barrel — Libya's price. U.S. analysts say the decision means pump prices will remain

Reagan Summons Habib Home; Efforts A Failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today summoned home his special Mideast ambassador, Philip Habib, as reports circulated in Israel that Habib had failed in efforts to persuade Syria to withdraw its anti-aircraft missiles from eastern Lebanon.

But Reagan told reporters he did not consider Habib's mission a failure. Indeed, the president called it "a remarkable job" in that open warfare did not break out between Syria and Israel during Habib's three week shuttle mission. Those two nations, he said, "were on the verge of war and that has not happened."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Habib would return Thursday and meet with Reagan that day or the next "about the progress and future of his mission in the Mideast."

An administration source, who asked not to be identified, said it is possible Habib would return to the Mideast in hopes of defusing the Lebanese crisis.

He said no timetable had been drawn for Habib's possible return to the Mideast, but he added, "we feel certain he will" return.

Reagan told reporters as he left for a speech to the graduating class at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point:

"This is kind of a pause, where everybody sees where they are. Right now, it's time for us to have a talk, and then maybe he'll go back."

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Radio, quoting a government source, said Habib, who had visited government leaders in Lebanon, Syria, Israel and Saudi Arabia, told Prime Minister Menachem Begin today that Saudi Arabia had failed in its efforts to persuade Syria to remove its missiles from the Bekaa valley in eastern Lebanon.

"The president believes this is an appropriate moment to receive first-hand Ambassador Habib's views and to discuss with him the future of his continuing mission," Speakes said in a statement.

The administration source said officials "are pleased that the ambassador has met with a measure of success in preventing the outbreak of hostilities in the Mideast.

"We believe good progress has been made and we are hopeful that the processes initiated will enable us to achieve the long-range solutions we are all seeking."

But the Israeli Radio report called the end of Habib's mission "an escalation whose end cannot be foreseen."

Habib's only comment to reporters after his meeting with Begin was that 'the diplomatic effort continues."

The administration source called the Israeli Radio report "hard line" and said American efforts "are definitely not at a dead end" in hopes of preventing an outbreak of open warfare over Israel's threats to use force to take out the Soviet-made ground-to-air missiles if they are not withdrawn by the Syrians.

It was understood that a Saudi delegation is still meeting with the Syrians over the missiles and the the Saudis felt Habib's presence at this time was not required.

The suggestion that he return was said to have been Habib's. "Things are going on there," the source said, adding that officials hope the "quiet diplomacy" will continue.

On Monday, Syrian missiles shot down a pilotless Israeli reconnaissance plane as it flew over Syrian territory.

Israeli officials said the remote-controlled aircraft had been directed to patrol Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, where the disputed Syrian missile batteries are located, and may have strayed into Syrian skies.

The Israeli military command called it the third such incident since current tensions began. Syrian officials say it is the fifth.

The missile crisis began when Israel shot down two Syrian helicopters helping in the seige of Zahle on April 27. Syria moved the SAM-6 missiles into Lebanon the next day.

Job Applicants In 13 Counties Are Over 4,000

RALEIGH — Based on the quarterly report compiled by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina for the first quarter of 1981 — January, February, and March — 13 of North Carolina's 100 counties had more than 4,000 active job applicants registered for work through Employment Security Commission offices.

Statewide, the total number of active job applicants registered in March at the 90 Job Service office numbered 214,217 — 112,140 males and 102,077 females. The commission points out the report serves as an indicator of available labor supply, and that all potential job seekers do not apply for work at Job Service offices. The report, therefore, is not inclusive of the total labor force seeking work.

Two of the heavily populated counties, Mecklenburg and Guilford, have over 11,000 each registered for work. In Mecklenburg County, the Job Service office in Charlotte had 11,739 active job applicants, with 5,794 males and 5,945 females registered. Of this number, 10,456 had substantial work experience; 283 had limited or no work experience; and 1,485 are high school graduates.

Pitt County is one of the state's 13 counties with more than 4,000 active job applicants on file. The March figure is 4,742 — 2,241 males and 2,501 females. (Pitt is one of several counties with a higher number of females than males on the job register).

Cumberland County, whose county seat is Fayetteville, had the third highest rate of job appicants in the state with a total of 9,196 — 4,135 males and 5,061 females. Cumberland's unemployment rate has not fallen below 10 percent since June of 1980.

Other counties with more than 4,000 active job applicants at the end of the first quarter of 1981 are:

Wake, (Raleigh) 7,792; Forsyth, (Winston-Salem) 7,273; Buncombe, (Asheville) 7,044; Gaston, (Gastonia) 5,872; Durham, (Durham) 5,190; New Hanover, (Wilmington) 4,550; Robeson, (Lumberton) 4,326; Catawba, (Newton) 4,300; and Craven, (New Bern) 4,196.

Asks Communists Join In New Italian Govm't

ROME (AP) — Communist Party leader Enrico Berlinguer met with President Sandro Pertini today and asked for Communist participation in NATO-member Italy's 41st government since World War II.

Berlinguer spent 45 minutes with Pertini, a Socialist who is sounding out heads of all parties before naming a premier-designate to replace Christian Democrat Arnaldo Forlani, whose four-party coalition collapsed Tuesday in a scandal involving a secret Masonic lodge allegedly plotting to set up an authoritarian regime in Italy.

Meanwhile, the Italian stock market, which plummeted after the government fell, recovered today thanks to heavy intervention by state banks and holding companies. Gains were widespread and averaged 2.5 percent by midday trading.

Forlani's government resigned Tuesday after three of his Cabinet ministers were linked to a secret Masonic lodge, Propaganda Due (P-2), which government prosecutors said was plotting to destroy "the constitutional order of the country."

His coalition included Socialists, Social Democrats and Republicans as well as Christian Democrats. No Communists have participated in Italian governments since 1947.

Berlinguer, whose party which received 30 percent of the vote in the last elections, said the scandal proved the need for a "moralization of public life," provided by a "democratic alternative government" including Communists.

"It is clear that that crisis cannot be resolved by reproducing the schemes, formulas and methods that have led to the current situation," he said.

Berlinguer said he was opposed to another premier from the Christian Democrats, who have dominated Italian government for 35 years. He said he would consider a premier from other parties — an indication he might support a Socialist.

Pertini, is expected to name Forlani, as a representative of Italy's largest party, to try to succeed himself as premier. But if Forlani fails, the 84-year-old president might turn to Socialist leader Bettino Craxi.

Craxi, who has long sought the premiership, said he did not raise the issue of candidates in his talks with Pertini. It was Craxi, however, who caused the government collapse Tuesday by refusing to go along with Forlani's proposal to replace the three Cabinet ministers implicated in the scandal.

The scandal broke open last week when Forlani, at the request of prosecutors, released a list of 953 alleged members of the lodge that included names of Cabinet ministers, politicians, journalists, businessmen and military officials.

NUCLEAR ATTACK PLAN?

I am interested in finding out about disaster plans in case of nuclear attack on the City of Greenville and the County of Pitt. A.M.

The County of Pitt is not considered a primary nuclear attack target area, County Preparedness Director Bobby Joyner said. Rather, the Emergency Medical Services Office of the state has designated it a host county for evacuees from the Seymour Johnson, Cherry Point, and LeJeune military base areas.

Schools throughout the county and certain buildings on the East Carolina University campus would serve as shelters, with the social services, sheriff, health department, hospital and county manager's office staffs each acting in specific areas of responsibility. The EMS office has made extensive surveys of Pitt County and its potential to shelter and feed these evacuees as well as its own people in case of nuclear disaster.

If you need more extensive information, call or visit Joyner in the Pitt County Fire Marshal's office, 119 S. Cotanche Street, 752-5137.

Virginia Craftsmen Visit Here Two Days

"The job is never the same — its different every minute," said Tom Marshall, a teacher-performer employed by Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

He has been employed by the foundation for about 10 years including summers while he was in college. The area he mainly studied at James Madison University and the University of Michigan was organ with related interests in harpsichord and piano-forte.

"As a costumed employee, I greet guests who visit the restored colonial capital and teach young students in the foundation's musical training program which includes fifth through 12th graders. They are taught both art and military music," Marshall said.

He is also involved in several weekly concerts at the various colonial buildings in Williamsburg demonstrating the music "so well loved by colonial Virginias during the 18th century."

"We try to make our performances as authentic as possible, using original and reproductive instruments. Another part of my job is maintaining the different keyboard instruments we have in our department of collections," he stated.

When his 40-hour a work week is over, Marshall spends leisure time in other musical pursuits including directing choirs and playing the organ at the Presbyterian Church there and he teaches piano and organ students. Until recently he was director of the Williamsburg Choral Guild which performs major choral works including the "Messiah" which has been performed in Williamsburg annually during the Christmas season since 1975.

Both Marshall and Roy Black, a basket maker, also employed by Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, were here Monday and Tuesday at Carolina East Mall for Belk's Williamsburg Days.

Black has been working for the foundation for almost 16 years in the capacity of basket maker. He is now learning to weave cloth. Black's expertise is also making shingles and candles. His career with the foundation started out working in the bakery.

Roy Black

"By viewing another foundation employee, W. C. Cook, a basket maker, pull white oak logs apart for making the baskets, I felt I could do it. Through this demonstrated interest, I was offered an appenticeship with Cook with whom I worked four years," he said.

After Cook's retirement as supervisor of the Basket Shop, located on the property of the George Wythe House, Black was made shop supervisor.

"I don't produce a lot of baskets — we mainly demonstrate the technique involved," he said

He also collects his materials and buys white oak from farmers in the Williamsburg area. He is doing some research on baskets and is experimenting using different materials. Black is also trying to develop some new ideas as he is "willing to try anything different."

Says Space Not For Weaponry

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Space shuttle astronaut Robert Crippen says that although space is infinite, there is no room there for weapons.

The United States is not planning to carry weapons into space on its shuttles because "we continue to think that space ... ought to be used for the benefit of all mankind in a positive way," Crippen said Tuesday. "I'd just as soon not see any weapons up there myself."

Crippen and Columbia pilot John Young, who are on a national speaking tour, addressed 1,000 people at the Commonwealth Club here.

"I'm certainly hopeful that with the success of the shuttle, the United States will see fit to put up a permanently inhabited space station," Young said.

Crippen revealed that the successful flight of the Columbia was not without errors — one of the few things to break down during the flight, he said, "was the potty. That's pretty significant. It sort of gave up the ghost, but luckily it didn't completely give it up until shortly before we got ready to re-enter."

Back To Basics For Mrs. Bush

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It was back to basics when Barbara Bush, the wife of Vice President George Bush, visited the Fitler Academics Plus School here where 450 inner-city students get old-style discipline and instruction.

Mrs. Bush found that at Fitler, homework must be signed by parents, minimum grades are required for promotion and jeans and T-shirts are banned under strict dress codes.

"If you can't read, you just can't go on," Mrs. Bush said during her tour Tuesday. "At this school, they're seeing (to it) that they are learning reading and math."

Mrs. Bush said her trip was not official, but said she hoped to use her position in the public eye to promote parental volunteerism in schools and try to eradicate illiteracy in the United States.

The school is so popular that 1,600 parents have added their names to a waiting list to enroll their children in grades 1-8, said Principal William Crumley Jr. Of 415 students taking an achievement test in February, just 62 scored lower than the national average, said Superintendent Lionel Lauer.

An Important Milestone

It was another long-awated day when the ECU School of Medicine received its full four-year accreditation from the Liaison Commmitte on Medical Education.

The accreditation was announced by Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer last week, who pointed out it is unusual for a new medical school to receive the four-year accreditation.

"The accreditation confirms the excellence of our medical education program, our faculty and our students," the chancellor said in making the announcement.

Dean William E. Laupus said, "Their approval shows their confidence in our faculty, students, facilities and the clinical services we sponsor in conjunction with Pitt County Memorial Hospital."

With the accreditation also came permission to enroll a freshman class of 52 students next fall. It will mean the Medical School will have a total enrollment of 174 students for the next academic year.

With the accreditation, the ECU Medical School takes its place as an equal with other medical schools of the nation.

"We are now looking ahead to a bright future of providing the state with well-trained physicians and increasing the availability of needed patient care services," Dean Laupus said.

The ECU School of Medicine is rapidly filling the role envisioned for it when it was funded by the State Legislature. Certainly this four-year accreditation is an important milestone.

He Was The First To Do It

Why did professional stunt man Dan Goodwin climb the Sears Tower, world's tallest building, on Memorial Day?

Well it wasn't quite like the mountain climbers answer — because it's there — but it was close.

Goodwin said he made the climb "because it's the world's tallest building."

He was the first to make it to the top.

Climbing buildings is not viewed by society quite like climbing mountains, however, and Goodwin found the Chicago police waiting when he reached the top.

No matter. He had done it. He was the first.

Uncertain Survey

By BILL NOBLITT
(Second of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — Reaching general agreement on what makes a good educator, and reducing that to writing in a clear and concise fashion on an evaluation form while satisfying numerous points of state and federal law and policy guidelines has proved to be an enormous task for top state education officials.

Nonetheless, a number of areas of agreement have been reached toward development of an appraisal plan for public school personnel; but not enough to let the program take effect in July as the General Assembly has ordered.

The first order of business was to conduct a statewide survey of the educational establishment, involving more than 6,000 individauls. While this process brought forth some important areas of agreement and disagreement, it produced a couple of major disappointments for state officials.

Teachers responded with overwhelming enthusiasm; 92 percent of them returned their questionaires. Principals also participated pretty well, with 84 percent responding.

Response

But local school superintendents were somewhat slower to respond with only 65 percent participating. And local school board members, the very ones who have been pressing hardest for some backup to their complaints that it is difficult to pinpoint weak teachers and take effective action, only returned 34 percent of the survey forms mailed out.

This response, say school officials, was "somewhat discouraging."

And while teachers responded with vigor, Department of Instruction personnel later discovered "Another potential limitation of the study centers around the action which was instigated by two officers in the North Carolina Association of Educators (NCAE)."

Instructions concerning how to respond to certain items in the survey were sent to participants by top officers of NCAE. Some insiders say this destroys validity of the survey. Others argue that with so many individuals participating and with individual interest varying so widely, the survey data would not be affected.

Officially, state officials report, "There is no way, statistically or otherwise, to determine the influence of these instructions on the teachers or principals," but a copy of the instructions as to recommended answers to specific questions on the survey was included in the report so readers may determine for themselves whether the results were thrown off by the NCAE action.

A number of areas of agreement emerged, among them that principals should visit classrooms a minimum of four times each year for a teacher, and should not try to evaluate more than 30 teachers.

The records should be kept confidential and kept in the superintendent's office, available to the individual teachers and supervisors.

Clear Direction

Teachers should complete an appraisal form like that used by the principal, and the two should compare their conclusions in reaching a final evaluation report. Guidance manuals, briefing sessions,. written job descriptions and a clear understanding of all the appraisal points should be regularly provided all participants.

A three-point scale is tentatively spelled out, rating each individual as exceeding standards, meeting standards, or not meeting stan-

Private Citizen Reagan

Michael Reagan is outraged because he has been accused of using his father's position as president to get defense business for a firm he was "vice president" of. He wrote a letter to military installations soliciting contracts, noting that "with my father's leadership at the White House, this countries (sic) Armed Forces are going to be rebuilt and strengthened."

Young Reagan was quoted after the flap as saying, "It's just so silly. Somebody else can write a letter to military bases or anybody else, and say my dad's a great president, and I have the press at my doorstep." He maintained that he was being penalized because his father was president, and he was being kept from making a living.

One can only sympathize with Michael Reagan. But at the same time it's not as easy for a general to ignore a letter from the president's son, as it is one from Arnold Doppledinger, who is trying to get the same contract.

Michael did not have a chance to make a follow-up telephone call to his letter, because he resigned after the news stories. But the conversation might have gone something like this:

"General, this is Michael Reagan, as in Ronald Reagan ... Dad is doing just fine. I talked to him the other day. What I'm calling about is that I understand you're in the market for grommets for our new missiles. As you know, if you got my letter, Dad is intent on getting the military back on its feet, and he told me he is going to insist our grommets are as good as, or better than, any the Soviets are making at this time.

"My company makes the best grommets in America, General, if I say so myself. But I don't want you to consider us just because my father is your Commander-in-Chief."

"At the same time I don't want you not to consider us for the contract, just because my dad happens to be President of the United States and somebody I love and admire very much.

"The decision of where you will buy your grommets rests solely with you. Dad told me on the phone the other day he is leaving the grommet problem to his generals because they know much more about them than he does.

"I want to make it perfectly clear that Dad does not know I'm calling you. If you see fit not to give us the contract, I will be personally disappointed but it will have no effect on your future promotion or procurement assignment. Dad doesn't operate that way. That's why I respect him and am proud to be his son.

Taking Turn To The Right

By ROWLAND EVANS & ROBT. NOVAK

WASHINGTON — After disappointing his conservative friends in the Washington establishment by opposing President Reagan's budget, House Budget Committee Chairma James R. Jones is trying to mend fences on the right by vowing to keep appropriations within the budget's limits.

Jones made the promise over breakfast May 18 to the budget control group, composed of Washington lobbyists and corporate representatives who are promoting the Reagan administration's economic program. The private session was requested by Jones, whose record as the new Budget Committee chairman has been an unpleasant surprise to the corporate reps. "A lot of the boys told their bosses back home they had Jimmy Jones in their pocket," one budget control group member told us, "and they are really mad that he turned out to be a real Democrat."

Jones' losing floor fight against the Reagan budget dramatically improved his standing with liberal Democrats, who were openly contemptuous of Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's performance. But that could change now that Jones is pledging to police appropriations. He could be on a collision course with O'Neill, who says Democrats comprise the "people's party" and therefore should fight for social welfare funds even if they surpass limits set by the congressionally-enacted budget.

Haig vs. The Navy

Despite insistent appeals from the State Department's Mideast experts that the U.S. mobilize maximum naval power in the Mediterranean to impress Moscow during the Israel-Syria crisis, the Navy dragged its heels over delaying the departure of the aircraft carrier America on routine rotation back to the Indian Ocean.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig finally did get a delay of several days keeping the America in the Mediterranean before it rejoined the Indian Ocean fleet. It was replaced by the carrier Independence, putting two carrier task forces in the Mediterranean. But there was a nine-day interval during which the Forrestal was the only carrier in the Med.

Haig's concept of strategic power brought together at the right time in the right place argued for maximum naval strength to coincide with the Israel-Syria crisis nearing the boiling point. The Navy argued that its rotation system, based on the need for crew shore leave after weeks on station, should only be broken by a major crisis directly involving the U.S.

Kemp's Gold Strikeout

Rep. Jack Kemp struck out in trying to use the annual Tidewater Republican conference to build interest in returning to the gold standard as the Reagan administration's chief anti-inflation tactic.

Kemp wanted gold to be a major discussion topic at the national meeting of Republican leaders held each spring at Easton, Md. But moderate Sen. Robert Packwood of Oregon, founder and guiding light of the Tidewater conference, would have no part of it. Nor could Kemp even get the conference to endorse the "monetary standard" plank adopted by last year's Republican National Convention. Moderates led by Gov. Richard Snelling of Vermont buried that effort.

But Kemp remains determined to push for gold, both publicly and inside the administration. He has the vigorous support of the Senate Republican right wing led by Sen. Jesse Helms and, more important, the ear of Ronald Reagan.

To the editor:

The following may be considered as addenda to the letter published in Sunday's paper from Mr. Bryce Tharpe of Greenville.

I concur that it would be unfair and actually a breach of contract for federal retirees who have contributed during the required period to the social security fund to be denied the usually small pension which, at present, is their legal right. I understand, however, that military persons may opt to contribute and it would be unfair to those who do so opt and whose contributions cover the necessary quarters to withold the pensions due them.

Most of the civil servants also eligible for social security put their time and money into the fund before going into civil service. If their government pensions were credited with the same time they would be drawing much larger amounts.

It is often assumed that government pensions cost civil servants nothing The fact is that, in my 26 years of government service, seven percent of every paycheck was withheld for the pension fund. That is more than future social security recipients pay even now and much more than when I began working for the government. It is also falsely believed by some that government pensions are not taxable. They are fully taxable. Social security pensions are not.

I hope this letter might clear up some misconceptions. One of them is that, having contributed ten years or more of our lives and money to the social security fund, we civil servants are going to allow an arbitrary exception to be made against us without a murmur.

Strength For Today

INFINITY

One concept which the human mind cannot grasp is infinity.

Few people, for example, can visualize the immense ocean of space in which the earth floats. And what is beyond that? Our minds simply cannot imagine something without a limiting boundary.

There are many subjects which the human mind cannot fully understand. One of these is God. Some people say they do not believe in God or in religion because they cannot understand such ideas. What folly! The universe is full of things that not even the wisest philosopher or scientist understands. We do not understand fully how we came to be alive in this little corner of the universe.

If we cannot even comprehend the infinity of space — how much less can we comprehend the infinity of God? This is where faith comes in. — Elisha Douglass

Federal Retirement Pensions

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — George Snyder watched the administration effort to cut Social Security early retirement benefits last week and wondered why so little was said about the cost of federal retirement-pension programs.

Now he feels he should say it, and in so doing he knows he will offend many dedicated government workers, some of them public servants who in order to contribute their skills have also sacrificed.

Still, says Snyder, president of the Washington based National Taxpayers Union, the federal retirement system is an outrage, even a ripoff of the public.

If we seek government savings, he said, we could cut $8 billion a year from federal pensions merely by lowering benefits to a level equal to those available in many private-sector pension plans.

"The average pension in the federal retirement system is $959.39 a month, triple that of Social Security," said Snyder, whose organization, begun 12 years ago, seeks curbs on government spending.

"Greed, extravagance, downright unfairness," he said. 'If so," he was asked, "why has it been permitted?" He gave his version:

Originally, federal employees weren't paid as much as private-sector workers, so there was support for giving them benefits. Eventually they achieved wage equality with the private sector, then exceeded it. As the number of federal workers grew to 9.3 million, so did voting power and lobbying efforts. They got what they wanted, and then wanted more.

Now, said Snyder, the worker under federal programs can retire early and incur no penalty of the sort the Reagan administration sought against Social Security beneficiaries. The retiree also gets two cost of living raises a year, rather than just one, as in Social Security.

Before retirement, a worker under the federal system contributes 7 percent of pay and the taxpayer-supported government matches it. And, since benefits exceed contributions, government picks up the shortfall.

No wonder the average retirement age is 58.6 years in federal plans, but 65 under Social Security, said Snyder. "Most federal workers can make more in 20 years of retirement than we can by working 30 years."

The consequences, he continued, constitute a "rape of the American people." In just 21 federal programs there is an accumulated debt of $1 trillion, he said, claiming the Veterans Pension-Compensation Fund alone has $370 billion "of obligations the public has to assure."

"Scandalous," said Snyder, who regularly tours the country seeking support for a constitutional amendment to prohibit deficit spending.

Federal pensions, he maintains, are a conscious ripoff. Federal workers, he argues, should be made to pay into Social Security rather than into separate plans in which government assistance is enormous.

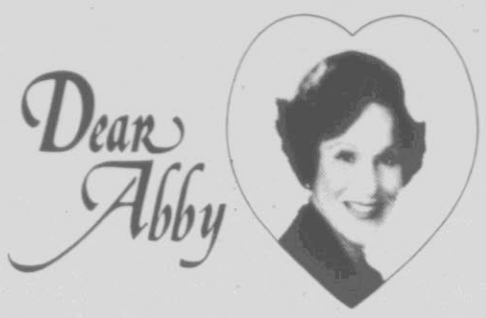
Instead, he says, they retire early without penalty, collect benefits under plans that aren't fully supported by their contributions, then take private-sector jobs and acquire separate Social Security pensions.

"It's conceivable," said Snyder, "that a person who retired at age 52 a decade ago on a $30,000 pension can now be making $50,000," and that he might even "become a millionaire in his mid-70s."

That might occur, he points out, because compounding accelerates the increases. It's time for a "small sacrifice," he says. To forgo the increases, says Snyder, would save $2 billion a year.

He seeks that. "My appeal," he said, "is that they do so for the next several years, at least."

We must "cool the greed," he said.



Family Storms Disturb Peaceful Beachfront

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a lovely, restful beachfront home. My husband (I'll call him Norton) has a divorced sister who thinks she is a writer. She's never had anything published, but she's been working on a novel for the last 10 years.

Well, the "novelist," who lives in a noisy apartment in the city, asked if she could stay with us for a few weeks while she finishes her book. We said yes, so she came.

The day after she arrived, my sister (I'll call her Mary) called, hysterical. Mary's husband came home drunk, got abusive and they had a fight, so Mary asked if she and her children (ages 3 and 5) could stay with us until she decides what to do about El Drunko. What could I say?

They are all here now — the "novelist," Mary and her kids. The novelist is complaining because it's too noisy to write. She says she was here first and Mary should leave.

Norton is staying out of it. What is fair?

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: Tell the "novelist" she can either stay and make the best of it — or leave. Mary's need for a refuge is more immediate than the novelist's need for peace and quiet.

DEAR ABBY: I work in an office where there is a high percentage of women. Every morning they come in with all these dirty jokes that would put a platoon of Marines to shame.

Is this normal? I was always told that it was the men who had the "dirty mouths."

I would like an answer as soon as possible because this is ruining my clean upbringing.

AN ADMIRING FAN

DEAR FAN: Dirty mouths are non-discriminating. A dirty mouth doesn't care which sex its owner is.

DEAR ABBY: I am a sophomore in college, living alone. My parents want me to major in business. I want to major in communications.

My parents chose my college for me and even took the application forms away from me and filled them out themselves for the business major.

When I come home from school, my mom grills me about my studies and my boyfriends. She wants to make sure I am still majoring in business and that I will date only business students.

I've never been allowed to do anything on my own, which is making me very nervous and insecure.

How do I break the news to my parents that I plan to change my major from business to communications?

NEW YORKER

DEAR NEW YORKER: The most effective means of communication is to get your message across clearly, emphatically and in the fewest number of words. (P.S. If you are paying for your own education, tell them. If they are paying for your education, ask them.)

DEAR ABBY: This is for MR. CROAKER, who because of throat surgery has difficulty being understood on the telephone.

The Bell Telephone system has many new devices to accommodate people with hearing, sight or motion impairment. An adjustable voice amplifier that fits on the telephone mouthpiece would help Mr. Croaker immensely.

Anyone requiring any kind of special attachment on his telephone may phone the local Bell Telephone business office to inquire about this special equipment.

I know this sounds like a commercial for Bell, but it would be a public service if more people knew about these communication aids.

ments from fellow Republicans.

Bill Roberts, a California Republican political operative who managed Ronald Reagan's campaigns for governor, was sent to Washington to make the Republican case. He contended San Francisco Bay area lawyer Dennis McQuaid, who nearly upset liberal Democratic Rep. John Burton last year, could not hope to win a 1982 second try if Watt drills. According to Roberts, veteran Republican Rep. Don Clausen also is endangered.

Watt does not disguise the fact that solidifying the Republican base in the West is one of his major concerns. Nevertheless, he is so committed to California offshore oil exploration that no arguments are likely to move him.

NCPAC Into Ohio

If Terry Dolan and his National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC) want to come into Ohio to rough up liberal Democratic Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, they will not be stopped by Republican Gov. James A. Rhodes.

Earlier reports had Rhodes, who wants to run against Metzenbaum, telling NCPAC to stay out of Ohio. In truth, his advisers say Rhoders would neither welcome nor protest a Dolan-engineered campaign against Metzenbaum. Oddly, Rep. John Ashbrook, Rhodes' more conservative rival for the Republican nomination, does say he wants to keep out NCPAC.

NCPAC help might well be needed to beat Metzenbaum, a major 1982 target for the Republicans. Private polls show high approval ratings for him and early leads over all Republicans, including the veteran governor. Key advisers to Rhodes believe a NCPAC campaign against Metzenbaum would help Rhodes more than it would hurt him.

Infant Victim Of Meningitis

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — An 8-month-old Raleigh infant died Tuesday from a bacterial strain of meningitis, a North Carolina Memorial Hospital spokesman said Tuesday.

Jeffrey A. Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael G. Morris of Raleigh, died of "H-flu" meningitis, the spokesman said.

The strain has caused at least four other meningitis deaths in other parts of North Carolina during the first four months of 1981, said Dr. J. Newton MacCormack, head of the state's communicable disease control branch.

Licensing Law Ended A Drive

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Jacksonville-based pro-abortion group apparently has stopped a fund-raising campaign after state officials pointed out that such activity requires a state license.

of firms bidding for your grommet contract and you have to study each one carefully before making your decision. All I'm asking is that you give us the same break you would give any other company when it comes to quality and price. Dad wants the biggest bang for the buck. When I told him at dinner at the White House the other night, about the new X 12 grommet we had developed, he became very excited and called Cap Weinberger, the secretary of Defense, to ask him what he knew about it. Cap told Dad he was sure you had heard about the X 12 because you were the best procurement general he had.

"I'm sending you over a sample of one of our grommets just in case Cap calls you and wants to know about it. Dad didn't tell Cap that I was in the grommet business, because he was afraid that my connection might tilt the military towards our grommet. So there is no pressure on you from anyone above to order the X 12 over our competitors. If you feel Dad is wrong about the X 12, based on what I told him, then he'll take your word for it.

"All I'm asking is that you don't turn us down because my name is Reagan. I'm trying to make a living as a private citizen, and the last thing I would do is cash in on my father's position as the greatest leader of the Western world.

"I'd be happy to fly out and have lunch with you, General, if you'd like. But I have to go now because I have Dad on hold."

Gas Tax Measure Begins Trip

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After being praised by its friends and condemned by its enemies in a public hearing, Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed gasoline tax increase begins its course through the Legislature today when a Senate committee begins its scrutiny.

The Senate Finance Committee, which joined with its House counterpart in holding the public hearing Tuesday, planned to begin debate on Hunt's highway tax package this morning.

Hunt administration officials said Tuesday that they hope the Senate committee will push for a vote today and expressed confidence that they had enough votes to move the tax package to the Senate floor.

"We look like we're in good shape, but you're always worried," said Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary.

Hunt's proposal for a 3-cent increase in the tax on gasoline, to 9¼ cents per gallon, has been filed in both the House and Senate in slightly different forms. In addition, Hunt's bill would raise highway related fees and transfer to the highway program sales taxes collected on auto parts.

The governor has also proposed a personal income tax rebate of up to $22.50 per driver to partially offset the impact of higher gasoline taxes. The tax package would raise more than $186 million in new money for the state's highway program.

The Senate's 40 Democrats held a private caucus late Tuesday afternoon at a Raleigh apartment complext, at which John A. Williams, Hunt's budget officer and senior adviser, and Joe Pell, Hunt's political adviser, answered questions on the tax package.

"We were just there to answer questions and then we left," Williams said.

A reporter was barred from attending the gathering, and Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, said beforehand that talk would be on the gasoline tax. "I always count heads," said Royall, one of the sponsors of the gasoline tax package.

Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, said afterwards that senators questioned Pell and Williams about reports of waste and questionable management decisions in the Department of Transportation. He said senators were not asked directly how they would vote, but that Democrats on the finance committee told the Hunt aides they were ready to vote.

Hunt and other administration officials have been privately lobbying legislators intensively for weeks on the tax.

Sen. Conrad Duncan, D-Rockingham, chairman of the finance committee and also a sponsor of the tax bill, said he wants to move the bill to the Senate floor soon.

"We're ready to vote. I think these people have made their minds up," he said.

To cover a $70 million drain on general tax collections caused by the rebate and the transfer, Hunt has also proposed a 50 percent increase in the taxes on beer, wine and liquor, and new taxes on mining and vacation home rentals. Those taxes are not included in the bills before the finance committees and will be introduced separately.

About 300 people, most appearing to oppose the tax package, showed up for the House and Senate committee's public hearing Tuesday.

Asheboro industrialist David Stedman, head of Concerned Citizens for No Tax Increase, said the issue is not whether the state wants good roads but whether it is willing to cut government expenses to pay for them.

"We believe we're not only economically right, we believe our position is ethically right," he said.

Defending Hunt's proposal was Williams. "The package is fair," he said. "A 3-cent increase in the tax on gasoline would not be a great hardship, particularly with the rebate."

Open House Being Planned At MH Center

Open House will be held at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, 306 Stantonsburg Road, Thursday from 4 to 6 p. m.

This event is being held in observance of Mental Health Month by the Pitt County Mental Health Association to help acquaint the community with the services available.

The Mental Health Clinic opened Feb. 1, 1956 and in July, 1958, ground-breaking for the original Pitt County Mental Health Center began. This was the first building in North Carolina built expressly to be a mental health outpatient clinic. The present building, located within the medical complex adjacent to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was completed and dedicated in 1976.

Major areas of programming are adult services, childhood and adolescent services, alcohol and drug abuse, mental retardation, and consultation and education. All residents of Pitt County are eligible to receive services provided by the center. Any individual can personally request services or be referred through various persons and institutions, including family, physician, school counselor, minister, teacher, and the courts. All information is confidential.

Office hours are from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. Monday through Friday. Cost of service can be provided through personal income, group health care insurance, and assistance programs such as Medicare and Medicaid. No person is denied service because of inability to pay.

Staff Appreciation Day was held at the Center Tuesday by the Pitt County Mental Health Association.

N. Pitt Teacher Is Selected

Gigi G. Walter, social studies teacher at North Pitt High School, has been selected to present a program at the North Carolina State Close-Up meeting.

The three-day event, scheduled for May 28-30, gives high school students the opportunity to view state government in action.

Mrs. Walter's program will introduce the Pitt County Close-Up program to students and teachers. Pitt County was the first county in the nation to hold such a program in connection with the state and national close-up.

In October, 1980, the four Pitt County high schools had a two-day program involving approximately one hundred students.

Accompanying Mrs. Walter will be four North Pitt students, Linda James, Tricia Tripp, Kent Briley and Ken Little.

Feels 'Miracle' To Have Impact

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If President Reagan's economic policies work, "most people probably will change their registration to Republican," says Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. "And they probably should, because it will be an economic miracle of unprecedented dimension."

Brown is a Democrat — an obviously skeptical one when it comes to Reagan's proposed tax and budget cuts.

Brown told the National Consumer Finance Association here Tuesday that when the administration realizes its economic policies have failed, it will display some of the "flexibility and pragmatism" it showed when Reagan was in Brown's shoes as governor of California.

"Even if some of the current economic recipes don't work, new recipes will be quickly developed during the next few years," he said.

Billy Carter In A New Business

HALEYVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Billy Carter's beer may have been a flop but that apparently won't keep him from brewing up another promotional career — this time in the mobile home business.

The brother of former President Jimmy Carter reportedly is considering a public relations job with a home manufacturer here.

"I understand he has been offered a job with Tidwell Industries, but I don't know that he has accepted yet," said Tidwell's public relations chief, Allen Moore. "I do understand he may be taking a job in the promotions-public relations area."

For several months Carter has worked for a company at Americus, Ga., near his home in Plains, that sells wood trim for mobile homes to Tidwell, Moore said.

KICKBACK CHARGES

Louisiana To Ask Court Reconsider Tax Ban

By KEVIN M. COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court will be asked to reconsider its decision to strike down a Louisiana natural gas tax, a move that could delay refunds of about $500 million to consumers in 30 states.

The high court ruled 7-1 Tuesday that Louisiana's 2-year-old tax on natural gas that passes through the state is unconstitutional.

Shortly after the decision was handed down, Louisiana Attorney General William J. Guste said the state will ask the Supreme Court for a rehearing.

The state has 25 days from Tuesday to ask for reconsideration, but the Supreme Court rarely agrees to rehear cases it already has decided.

In addition, the court, still facing a heavy schedule, is expected to recess for the summer in late June or early July.

Once the rehearing request is made, a Louisiana state court probably would not act on the gas pipeline companies' separate request for the refunds of the tax money, said Robert G. Pugh, a Shreveport lawyer who handled the case for the state.

Pugh noted, however, that there may be pressure on the state court to act if the Supreme Court recesses until October without deciding the rehearing question.

Once the pipeline companies get the money, they are expected to divide it among natural gas distributors who sell the fuel to consumers.

Although it may vary in different cases, the consumers are expected to receive an adjustment in their bills to reflect the refunds, said Frank J. Peragine, a lawyer who handled the case for the pipeline companies.

Peragine said the "great bulk, if not all" of the tax money is expected to be refunded to the distributors.

Pugh said the refunds to the pipeline companies could begin "within six weeks" absent a request for a rehearing, and he predicted "a scramble" among the 30 states to get the money back from the pipeline companies.

The Supreme Court decided in a challenge brought by eight states that the Louisiana tax violates federal energy regulations and hinders interstate commerce.

The tax was levied on natural gas brought into Louisiana and not previously subjected to taxes by another state or the federal government. Most of the gas comes from wells in the Gulf of Mexico and goes to the Eastern half of the country.

Fred W. Geldon, a Washington lawyer who assisted the states, said the amount to be refunded is expected to be "roughly $500 million," plus 6 percent interest.

Guste, Louisiana's attorney general, said the rehearing request would be made on the grounds that the case was decided without sufficient evidence.

"We believe this a violation of due process," he said of the Supreme Court ruling. "The fight is only just beginning."

In other action Tuesday, the Supreme Court:

—Said it will study for the third time the case of a former Green Beret physician, Dr. Jeffrey R. MacDonald, who is accused of killing his wife and two daughters. The high court will decide whether to reinstate MacDonald's three murder convictions, which were set aside by a lower court on the grounds that he was denied his right to a speedy trial.

—Ruled unanimously that a company sued for alleged civil antitrust violations may not force all violators to share in paying whatever money damages are awarded.

—Ruled unanimously that most church-affiliated schools are not required to pay taxes into state unemployment compensation programs.

Plunge By Protestor

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A student plunged to his death from the fifth floor of the Seoul National University library today during a demonstration against President Chun Doo-hwan and his government.

Witnesses said the student jumped from a window after shouting "Out With Chun Doo-hwan!" several times. School officials said he "fell from a window on the fifth floor and was found dead." He was identified as Kim Tae-hoon, 22, a senior in the school's economics department.

About 50 demonstrators swarmed around the library building, but police moved in and used tear gas to disperse them, witnesses reported.

The anti-government demonstration by about 500 students started around noon, student sources said, following indoor rallies in classrooms in remembrance of a bloody 10-day insurrection in the provincial capital of Kwangju. The uprising was crushed by government troops on May 27 last year.

The demonstrators, chanting anti-government slogans, moved around the campus on the southern outskirts of the South Korean capital until the student jumped.

Salvadoran Guards Linked To Death Of Women

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI's linking of a fingerprint and a bullet casing to two Salvadoran national guardsmen "bolsters" chances of a conviction in the killings of four American churchwomen in El Salvador last December, a State Department official says.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said the FBI has determined that a fingerprint found on the churchwomen's van belongs to one of six Salvadoran national guardsmen currently held on suspicion of the murders.

The official also said FBI ballistics tests have matched a bullet casing found at the scene of the killings with a gun registered to another of the guardsmen.

The findings are the first physical evidence implicating the men in the murders, the official said.

He said the arrests originally were made on the basis of hearsay statements by a single anonymous witness, who is not expected to be brought forward publicly until a trial is held.

"This (the FBI report) bolsters the case," the official said, adding that a trial of the suspects is now considered likely in the near future.

The bodies of the four women, three Catholic nuns and a lay worker, were found in a shallow grave along a dirt road outside San Salvador, the nation's capital, on Dec. 4. All four had been shot in the back of the head.

Their deaths led to a suspension of U.S. military aid to El Salvador's ruling military-civilian junta and strained relations between the two countries.

The military aid, however, was restored in January by then-President Carter during a general offensive by leftist guerrillas seeking to overthrow the junta. President Reagan, saying the guerrillas were supplied by Soviet-bloc nations, has since increased that aid.

The State Department official said the FBI completed its laboratory analysis a week ago and forwarded the results to the Salvadoran government.

FBI officials in Washington said they could neither confirm nor deny the State Department report about the tests.

After a week of government denials, Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia announced May 9 that six members of El Salvador's armed forces had been arrested April 29 in connection with the murders of the four women.

Since early in the investigation, the FBI has assisted the Salvadoran government in developing evidence from the murder scene.

The van in which the women had been riding was gutted by fire. Fingerprints were discovered burnt into the paint, investigators said. Bullet casings were also found in the vicinity.

The murders of the women, who worked with El Salvador's poor, has fueled opposition to Reagan's policy of helping the junta put down the leftist rebellion. Critics of that policy contend the government security forces were responsible for the vast majority of the 10,000 political murders committed in country last year.

Families of the slain women have demanded that the administration press the Salvadoran government to find the killers. And Robert White, the ousted U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, accused the U.S. and Salvadoran governments this month of participating in a coverup of the murder investigation.

Reagan relieved White of his post in January for criticizing increased U.S. aid to the junta.

The four victims were Sisters Dorothy Kazel and Ita Ford, both 40, Sister Maura Clarke, 46, and lay missionary Jean Donovan, 27. Sisters Ford and Clarke were Maryknoll nuns from New York. Sister Kazel, a member of the Ursuline order, and Miss Donovan were from Cleveland.

In-Laws Hope Conviction Will Stand

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The parents of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald's slain wife said they were pleased Tuesday with the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to review a lower-court ruling overturning his 1979 murder conviction.

Asked if he had any doubt about MacDonald's guilt in the slaying of Colette MacDonald, 24, and MacDonald's two daughter's Kimberly, 6, and Kristen, 3, MacDonald's father-in-law Alfred Kassab said: "Not one tiny shred. There's not a doubt at all in my mind."

The court will review a decision by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturning the conviction on the grounds that MacDonald did not get a speedy trial.

MacDonald maintains that four "drug-crazed hippies" killed his family at his Fort Bragg home on the night of Feb. 17, 1970.

MacDonald, now working as head of the emergency room at St. Mary Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., will have to return to prison to serve a life sentence if the Supreme Court reinstates his conviction.

"I think the evidence produced in MacDonald's 1979 trial certainly was in support of his conviction," said U.S. Attorney James Blackburn, who prosecuted the 37-year-old former Green Beret physician. "I believe the jury's decision was correct and proper. I have had no reason to change my mind since 1979.

Blackburn refused to speculate how the Supreme Court would rule. But Kassab predicted that the court will reinstate the conviction.

"Every other case that I know of that I read, the Supreme Court has ruled that the time between succeeding indictments did not count toward the speedy-trial issue because of the fact the person was not under indictment," he said.

Mildred Kassab agreed that MacDonald is guilty. "It's absolutely too conclusive," she said. "The jury didn't even want to bring in a guilty verdict but they were totally, 100 percent convinced."

But defense attorney Wade Smith said the time between the dismissal of military allegations and the civilian indictment was too long for MacDonald to wait for a trial.

"That period of time was so long that the efforts to defend him were damaged forever," he said.

The appeals court ruled that the long delay between the time the Army dropped its investigation of MacDonald in October 1970 and the 1975 indictment by a federal grand jury violated MacDonald's right to a speedy trial.

Test For Your Health Hazards

By The Associated Press

How long will you live?

No one can answer that question, of course. But a "Health Hazard Appraisal" test can help you find out whether the way you live is increasing or decreasing your risk of death.

Below is a simplified version of the test, prepared by H. Scott Sheedy, director of prospective medicine at Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis, for the Board of Global Ministries with the United Methodist Church.

Read each question and pick the answer that fits you best. Check the numerical score for your age group and write down your score for each question. Total the scores, subtracting the minuses, to get the number of years you are adding to or taking away from your life. A negative score means you are shortening your life; a score of minus 9.4, for example, means you are likely to live 9.4 years less than the average person your age. A positive score means you are lengthening your life; a score of plus 9.4, therefore, means you have a good chance of living 9.4 years more than average.

The appraisal was developed by doctors at Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis. It is a complicated test, usually scored with a computer, designed to tell you whether you have a greater or smaller chance of dying than someone else your age.

"Health Hazard Appraisals" are available from many doctors, hospitals and health programs. For information, write to: Methodist Hospital, Health Hazard Appraisal, 1604 North Capitol Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., 46102.

Here are the questions:

1. How much do you exercise on the average each day?

A. Walk less than five blocks or climb less than five flights of stairs. Have a desk job and never exercise vigorously or play sports.

B. Walk five to 15 blocks or climb five to 15 flights of stairs. Do housework or exercise vigorously or play sports once a week.

C. Walk 15 to 30 blocks or climb 15 to 20 flights of stairs. Do physical work or exercise vigorously or play sports two or three times a week.

Responds With Pie In The Face

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — A strawberry cream pie in the face of reporter Jill Blondin has done little to change her opinion of the Union County employees responsible for throwing it.

She filed an assault warrant against Robert MacLeod, a social worker for the county Health Department, after he shoved the pastry in her face Tuesday morning at the office of the Monroe Enquirer-Journal.

The pie was financed by "nickels and dimes" from about 150 of the county's 350 employees, who were protesting a newspaper column criticizing them for not working hard enough, MacLeod said after the incident.

But the pie had little effect on Miss Blondin.

"This not only reinforces my opinion that county employees are lazy," she said, "it proves to me that they are also lacking in class and intelligence."

In her column, Miss Blondin, 27, told of her experiences as a county employee in Michigan. She said some employees there padded expense records and took extended breaks and lunch periods to fill boring schedules.

Commenting on a proposal by county commissioners to extend Union County employees' hours from 35 hours and 37½ hours to 40 hours a week, she suggested that employees should not only work longer hours but also should work harder.

MacLeod said he took her comments "very personally," adding, "I do not like being called lazy and a thief."

Bob Charlton, director of the county health department, said MacLeod acted as an individual and will not be reprimanded. However, he was served with the warrant, and a court must now decide when to hear the civil complaint.

Bob Horne, managing editor of the Enquirer-Journal, said the newspaper encourages readers to express their views, but he prefers them to be expressed in letters to the editor.

"Mr. MacLeod could have had a rebuttal on the same page, with the same display, as the original article. We cannot allow responses to be made with pies," Horne said.

Life Expectancy

By The Associated Press

Here is a chart that tells you how many more years you can expect to live, based on 1978 U.S. government statistics showing mortality rates for the general public aged 18 to 70.

To figure out your life expectancy, find your age in the column on the left, then add the number of years you have left, from the column headed either "Men" or "Women."

Authorities Taunted By A Fugitive

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Preess Writer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — To some prisoners and police, Ronald Williams is a criminal of genius who taunts authorities with signed messages and evades their dragnets with masterful disguises.

To officials who have tried for 18 months to capture the prison escapee and get his picture off the FBI's most-wanted list, Williams is "a hoodlum" and a headache.

"Unfortunately, law enforcement officials also get caught up in the mystique," says Tom Cook, a West Virginia corrections official. "They tend to see him as a super genius, a man beyond mistakes."

The mystique began growing in November 1979, when Williams and 14 other men escaped from the West Virginia Penitentiary at Moundsville. A state trooper who was driving by the prison at the time was shot to death.

Thirteen of the inmates were recaptured. One was killed. Williams, a veteran of five jailbreaks, remains on the run.

Williams, 37, was serving a life sentence for killing a Beckley police officer in 1975. On the FBI's most-wanted list since April, Williams has taunted police by using his real name frequently and by sending friends at the penitentiary messages such as "wish you were here."

Police say they have evidence linking Williams to at least one killing since his escape and to other incidents in Arizona, Colorado and Pennsylvania.

Authorities frequently have announced they were hot on Williams' trail. Last month, squads of state and city police, alerted to his efforts at disguise, surrounded the Charleston bus station and said Williams would be arriving dressed as a woman.

The woman whom police searched turned out to be a woman. Police said later their information had been wrong.

Last year, state police Superintendent Harley Mooney said catching Williams was his "number one priority."

"I've got ... (his) picture on my desk," Mooney said. "The first thing I do in the morning is look at it and wonder where he is."

Mooney retired this year.

Corrections' officials say Williams is highly intelligent, with an IQ of 145.

As a prisoner at Moundsville, Williams took a Dale Carnegie course on "how to win friends and influence people." He also studied gold and silver commodity trading, and police say he may be speculating on the precious metals market.

When he escaped, Williams probably was carrying between $5,000 and $6,000 made on the prison's black market, officials said.

Cook is unhappy about the legend that surrounds Williams, a coal miner's son who got into trouble as a youth and has spent 18 years behind bars.

"Ronald Williams is a hoodlum. He is very petty. He mistreats people in his family and those close to him," Cook said.

"Ronnie is not a dumb crook. He can stand right here now and talk you into all kings of things, and you would never believe he could do some of the things he's done," his father, Eleck Williams, said after Williams escaped.

"When Ronnie was 15, he taught himself to play chess, then taught the rest of us," added his sister, Betty Shepard. "He's considered a master chess player now and beat 50 people consecutively to win a tournament in New Jersey."

Cook hopes Williams may be ready to give up after 1½ years on the run.

"I would be tickled to death to get a call from Williams saying he's ready to give himself up," Cook said. But for now all authorities can really do is hope.

"We're hoping for a break very shortly," Cook said.

'Sick-Out' By Firemen In Charlotte Is Ending

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A four-day "sick-out" by about 40 Charlotte firefighters apparently ended late Tuesday as many began returning to work.

By Tuesday evening, about 18 of the 40 who called in sick for the night shift reported to work, bringing the shift strength to 134 - about nine less than normal.

"As of right now, we are at normal strength," assistant fire chief R.L. Blackwelder said late Tuesday night.

The sick-out began Saturday as firefighters protested unequal pay with police officers and other alleged grievances.

"I expect 100 percent will report for duty" on Wednesday morning, said Fire Capt. Jim McLaughlin, president of the Local 660 of the International Association of Firefighters. But city officials said late Tuesday that operations may not return to normal.

City officials and representatives of Local 660 said the sick-out was an unorganized, grassroots action. The union didn't endorse the action.

McLaughlin said he told the union chapter's nine officers that they should resign if they participated in the "sick-out."

"I don't think it had any real organization to really coordinate it," McLaughlin said.

Although city officials had warned that firefighters who stayed away from work could be suspended or fired, about 50 firefighters — one-third of a normal 145-person shift — reported in sick for the Tuesday day shift. About 70 stayed out Monday night.

All sick leave was canceled, but officials said that a firefighter who is genuinely sick should not fear punishment.

The sick-out forced four of Charlotte's 23 fire stations to close down early Tuesday. But the four reopened by mid-morning when firemen were called in from other stations.

The only large fire reported in Charlotte Tuesday was a two-alarm blaze at a downtown manufacturing plant. About two dozen firemen responded to the alarm and had the fire under control in 15 minutes.

Blackwelder said the next shift of firemen was due on the job at 6 p.m. Tuesday. "We'll see what happens then," he said.

Firemen are protesting what they call inequities in proposed salary increases for city police and firemen in the Charlotte's $230 million budget. The proposed budget went to the city council for study last Thursday.

More than 150 firemen voted unanimously Monday to reject a fire union-backed proposal to stop the sickout.

More Guilty Pleas To Dominica Plot

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Four more of the 10 men arrested for allegedly plotting to overthrow the government of the tiny Caribbean island of Dominica have pleaded guilty to planning the assault in a plea-bargaining agreement with prosecutors.

The four acknowledged Tuesday they were involved in planning the invasion force, dubbed by federal investigators as the Bayou of Pigs in an allusion to Louisiana's marshy inlets where the invasion allegedly was to be launched.

Originally they had been charged with seven counts and had pleaded innocent at an earlier arraignment.

The plea-bargaining deals were similar to one made last week by the man named in federal indictments as the ringleader in the plot, Michael Perdue, 32, of Houston. Perdue pleaded guilty to the same charge — planning the invasion — which carries a maximum penalty of three years in prison and a $3,000 fine.

The four are Robert W. Prichard Jr., 30, of Raleigh, N.C.; Wolfgang W. Droege, 31, of Toronto; Larry L. Jacklin, 22, of Listowell, Canada, and Christopher B. Anderson, 41, of Oklahoma City.

Another re-arraignment was scheduled Friday for George T. Malvaney, 31, of Jackson, Miss.

The 10 were arrested April 27 as they allegedly prepared to embark from a Lake Pontchartrain marina near New Orleans on their 2,000-mile trip. Unknown to them, the man who owned the boat they'd chartered had told federal agents about the plan.

Guerrilla Fighter Seeks Presidency

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Alejo Santos, former Philippine defense secretary, says he will use his experience as a World War II guerrilla fighter to win 60 percent of the vote and topple Ferdinand E. Marcos from the presidency in the June 16 election.

He adds, however, it also will take some divine intervention.

Santos, 69, little-known chairman of the government's Veterans Bank, is the third-choice candidate — two others turned it down — of the once-powerful Nacionalista Party whose apparently meager following is badly split on whether even to participate in the election.

Santos has been touted by local news media and by Marcos, who calls him a worthy opponent, as the major challenger to the incument president's giant political machine which aims to match or exceed its 80 percent victory in the plebiscite that set up the Philippines first presidential election in 12 years.

Marcos carried the Nacionalista Party banner to victory in 1965 and 1969 presidential elections. He declared martial law in September 1972, and continued in power after what would have been his last legal term as president.

Santos calls the president his friend but says his opposition is real and accuses Marcos of using martial law to keep himself in power. Marcos lifted martial law last January and promised to guide this nation of 49 million people back to full democracy.

"I am running for president, not because I want to be president, but because I want the Filipino people to regain their democracy and freedom," Santos is saying at his rallies.

If elected, he says, he would serve only long enough to allow Filipinos to write a new constitution and hold elections for every national and local office. He is running for a six-year term.

"Either elect Mr. Marcos and elect a permanent dictator, or put your faith in me, and together let us end the dictatorship and bring back democracy and freedom to our people," Santos says.

Interviewed recently in the study of his plain but spacious Manila home, Santos said his Nacionalista Party loyalists were "itching for a fight with the private party of Mr. Marcos." Marcos formed the Kilusan Bagong Pipunan (New Society Movement) during the martial-law period, absorbing most members of the Nacionalista and other parties.

Major opposition leaders, including some Nacionalista leaders, have decided to boycott the election, saying it is designed only to perpetuate Marcos' regime.

"I am not a man easily discouraged," said Santos. "I fought in many political battles and I have not been defeated in any one." He is a former congressman and provincial governor.

"All efforts are now geared toward victory, with divine providence to help us," Santos said, alluding to the biblical battle between David and Goliath as the source of his faith.

Santos' campaign manager, Kit Tatad, former Marcos press secretary who is now an opposition assemblyman, estimated Marcos would spend as much as $26 million on his campaign. Marcos has said he will limit spending to about $1.3 million.

Santos would not say how much he might spend. Tatad described the campaign budget only as "shoestring."

Santos claims contributions from donors who he said asked not to be identified.

One opposition leader who refused to run, Assemblyman Ruben Canoy, said pro-Marcos elements had offered him money to join the race. Santos said his funding comes from genuine supporters.

Asked if he agreed with other oppositionists that any candidate might help Marcos legitimatize his rule, Santos said, "No, I am opposing him. I am going to beat him."

He said he thinks Marcos is sorry that he faces a fellow guerrilla fighter who knows underground tactics. Santos said some Marcos men were supporting him and would even wave Marcos banners while working for his candidacy. He said the guerrillas used the same strategy during the World War II Japanese occupation. "Let us not be identified by the enemy," he said.

Santos accused Marcos of using terrorism, the people's money and election fraud to stay in office.

He said if elected he would "throw the gates of Malacanang (the presidential palace) open to the people" and would invite all opposition leaders to come home, including those Marcos' government has charged with directing terrorism from exile in the United States.

Asked if his wife, Juanita, would play a role similar to that of politically powerful first lady Imelda Marcos if he is elected, Santos said she would not.

Proffers Trap For Gypsy Moth

NEW YORK, N.Y. (UPI) — A manufacturer of time-released pheromone dispensers for insects has introduced a gypsy moth trap.

It uses a synthesized version of male moths' sex lure to attract and kill them before they can locate non-flying female moths and fertilize their eggs. By lowering the mating incidence, the manufacturer says, the gypsy moth population can be reduced significantly by the following year.

The new consumer product was modified by its manufacturer, Healthy-Chem, of New York City, from a USDA design. It consists of a weather-resistant laminated box that looks like a bird house. It can be assembled in minutes without tools and hung from a tree limb about five feet above ground.

But the Dow Jones industrial average slipped .28 to 983.68 in the first half hour.

The upsurge in stock prices in the last hour of Tuesday's session was sparked by word that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had been unable to agree on a price increase.

OPEC concluded its meeting in Geneva with a statement that said prices would be frozen for the remainder of the year.

The news gave a big boost to hopes for a lasting decline in the U.S. inflation rate.

But analysts said the market still was weighed down by uncertainty over the future course of interest rates.

Mohawk Data Sciences led the active list in early trading, up ¼ at 26½. A 131,100-share block traded at that price.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 12.24 to 983.96.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 3-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 42.76 million shares, against 40.71 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .79 to 77.05.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.94 at 375.47.

YOUR SAVINGS AND INVESTMENTS

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE? AND WHAT IS IT WORTH?

Some privately insured institutions (non-government agencies) offer 6% interest on regular (passbook) savings.

At an FSLIC insured savings association like East Federal, you receive the imposed FSLIC limit of 5.5% interest.

On a $1,000 account, the difference is $5 a year. On a $5,000 account, the difference is $25 a year. And on a $10,000 account, it's a difference of $50 a year.

What is it worth to have the added protection of deposit insurance by a 48 year old government agency with reserves of over $6.5 billion? At East Federal, we believe it's worth a lot more!

On Money Market Savings Certificates, rates have been the same. The only difference has been FSLIC protection. For your savings, East Federal offers the highest rates available anywhere plus insured protection by a government agency.

Where you save does make a difference!

Greenville Rose's hopes for a state 4-A championship came to an abrupt and inglorious ending Tuesday night as the Rampants' vaunted hitting attack went limp.

Rose entered the contest against Wilmington Hoggard having averaging 10 hits and 10 runs a game during the regular season. The Rampants came nowhere close to those averages against Viking right-hander Bill Wolff.

Relying primarily on his fast ball, Wolff pitched six innings of no-hit baseball and weathered a seventh inning bases-loaded threat to lift the Vikings to a 3-0 victory over Rose at Guy Smith Stadium before an estimated crowd of 1,700.

The Vikings used a two-run home run by Bud Nixon in the first inning and a solo homer in the fourth by Joe Mahan to forge a 3-0 lead. Rose, meanwhile, did not come close to getting a hit off Wolff until the seventh.

With the crowd sreaming and stomping, the Rampants loaded the bases in the bottom of the seventh only to come away empty.

Roger Williams led off the inning with a twisting pop up that eluded Viking catcher Terry Jackson. Kenny Barnes then beat out a slow roller to the shortstop for a single — the Rampants' first hit of Wolff.

The Rampants loaded the bases when Gordon Douglas followed with a slicing line drive that rightfielder Ray Jernigan dived for and just missed.

Rose coach Ronald Vincent sent Billy Dough in to pinch-hit for third baseman Crowell Pope, Rose's #8 hitter. Dough promptly struck out on a 1-2 pitch.

Sammy Hodges was next, pinch hitting for centerfielder Paul MacMillan. With the count at 1-2, Hodges also struck out. Asked afterwards about the decision, Vincent said: "Dough and Hodges are two of our best fast ball hitters and that's what he was throwing."

Moments after the strike outs, Mont Carter popped out on a 1-2 pitch to Nixon at first for the final out and the Vikings, now 15-6, had won the right to advance to the second round of the playoffs.

"It looked like the boys nearly fell apart there in the seventh," Hoggard first-year coach George Hall said. "We shouldn't have let that happen, but that's what make the game exciting. It game me a heart attack, though."

On the other side of the field, Rose's Vincent was also suffering. "We're terribly disappointed, I tell you that," Vincent said after seeing his Rampants lose for only the third time this season in 25 outings. "But I still think we have the better ball club."

Not on this night. Wolff saw to that. The 6-foot-3, 200-pound senior threw 125 pitches, striking out 13 and walking three en route to his fifth win in six decisions this season. All three walks came in the first two innings.

Ironically, coming into the game it was Hoggard's pitching that was said to be the team's weakness. Some weakness.

Decision May Postpone Strike

NLRB Gives Players A Victory

By The Associated Press

While contract talks remain deadlocked, a federal labor official has given major league players a victory in their efforts to determine the financial impact of free agents on baseball.

And in the process, the first step has been taken toward a possible postponement of the sport's second strike in nine years — over the free agent compensation issue.

William Lubbers, general counsel for the National Labor Relations Board, said Tuesday night that he agreed with a charge filed by the Major League Baseball Players Association — that the clubowners have bargained in bad faith.

Lubbers, in a ruling issued in Washington, said he would ask the full NLRB to request that the owners turn over the information on their financial conditions.

If the owners fail to do so voluntarily, Lubbers added, he will ask the board to decide whether to seek a federal court injunction ordering them to act. This could serve to delay a strike without forcing the players to give up the right to strike.

In New York, negotiations were to resume today in efforts to avert the Friday strike deadline set by the players' association.

The two sides met Tuesday for 2½ hours, but afterward no one involved was optimistic that a settlement was near.

"No progress ... zero progress," said Kenneth E. Moffett, the federal mediator assigned to the negotiations.

"Nothing has progressed at all," said Rusty Staub, the New York rikets' first baseman who attended Tuesday's talks.

"My feeling hasn't changed," said Ray Grebey, head of baseball's s the owners change their proee and the owners' chief negotiator, who ble.

There is only one issueic about averting a strike. compensation for free agents.

The owners say clubs must have compensation wday before the NLRB ruling thayers through free agency. As allowed under the basic agreement reached a year ago, they have unilaterally implemented a compensation plan, in turn sparking the players' strike threat.

The owners have denied at the bargaining table that their compensation plan is tied to their clubs' financial security. But in his ruling, Lubbers said financial considerations have been brought into the negotiations through public statements by some owners, other club officials and baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Lubbers' complaint said the owners have failed to bargain in good faith by insisting that an increase in the level of player compensation for free agents is "essential to the economic survival of many major league clubs, while adamantly refusing to produce h.'ancial data to support that claim."

Don Fehr, general counsel to the players' group, said of the suffic n: "We are pleased that the Board has gone that far. The rief statement saying he had not seen ·Lubhave been bargaining in bad "we believe there is no merit to the complaint and that the players association is not entitled to the information it seeks."

Under the system in effect since the first re-entry draft in th saying he hadthe only compensation to a club losing a free agent has been an amateur draft choice.

But under the the owners' plan, a free agent's statistics would determine if his signing by another club should bring compensation in the form of a roster player to the team he leaves.

If the free agent ranks in the top third of the determining stats, the signing club could protect 15 players from compensation; if he ranks in the top half, it could protect 18 players.

The players' association argues that such compensation would s it would nr freedom of movement, won in previous court decisions tions.

Asons. he saw any way an interruptis equated the owners' program with that games could be averted unless the ue, where free agent movement is r offer, Miller replied: "I do ould negate previous gains won was any likelihood of the owners making a last-minute change, the players' negotiator responded: "Very little."

Unser: Snap Decision Gave Andretti Triumph

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mario Andretti's Indianapolis 500 victory was the result of "a snap decision" by race stewards who didn't want to risk the embarrassment of reversing their earlier finding, says Bobby Unser, confident he will be declared the winner on appeal.

The stewards awarded the victory to Andretti Monday after penalizing Unser one lap in Sunday's race. They said Unser passed at least a half-dozen cars and illegally improved his position as he emerged from the pits during a yellow caution period. The race officials turned down Unser's appeal of that ruling Monday afternoon.

Now, he has until midnight Thursday to make a formal appeal with the U.S. Auto Club, the race's sanctioning body. He said if that, too, is rejected, he would go to court.

"I honestly think it was a snap decision," Unser said Tuesday, referring to the rejection of his earlier protest of the official standings. "It was a snap judgment and a fear by them of reversing themselves again. To do it (declare a new winner) again was more than they could handle.

"So here I am, and it's a terrible place to be in," the two-time Indy winner said.

"If I had to guess, I'd guess that Mario and (Gordon) Johncock, when they started complaining (to race officials), were grasping. Everybody always grabs for everything they can get. If I had to blame one item, it wouldn't be for people having it in for me. When they went down and saw it (the incident) on TV tapes, they didn't look any further after they saw me."

In ohe earlier appeal, Unser and his car owner, Roger Penske, claimed what he did was not illegal, and that if it was wrong, Andretti and other drivers were equally guilty of similar infractions.

Unser said he thought his chances of winning another appeal before a special USAC panel are "extremely good," as long as USAC keeps politics out of the matter. His concern was possible ill feelings still floating about between USAC and the rival Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART), of which Unser is a member.

"We have no choice as to who they get (on the appeal board). Naturally, I have a little bit of concern who they pick," Unser said. "I'm not calling anybody a crook. All I'm saying is I hope they consider the fact there has been a very heavy war going on last couple of years (between CART and USAC) and I have been on the other side of the fence. I just hope they consider the good of auto racing rather than let the CART-USAC war get into that type of thing."

If the appeal is turned down by USAC, Unser said, he would go to civil court. "Our attorneys feel there are laws against things like that. In no other sport can you have something like that happen. You can't recall a race over a penalty that should have been assessed long before the race was over."

In the lengthy interview, Unser said he is "feeling better now. I'm getting the old fight attitude back. Yesterday (Monday) I was the most shocked I've ever been in my life, with the exception of a death in the family. I spent eight or 10 hours just staring at the walls through the course of the day and evening. I just wasn't even myself. I was so shocked it was like I was in another world. I couldn't believe it was happening."

He said he couldn't go to Monday night's Victory Banquet, at which Andretti was honored as the winner, because "I honestly couldn't think straight. There was such a drastic amount of shock. Going to the banquet would have been nothing. W."it would I do? Go to the banquet and accept second place when I won the race? I couldn't do it. It wouldn't be fair to anybody on the team. I physically won the race. I just think now (with the appeal) it's going to be determined I did win it.

"What I couldn't understand was why it is that I can be penalized for something that, number one, I don't think was wrong, and number two, Mario does exactly the same thing but they pass it by. It seems they thought it's okay as long as you don't pass so many (cars).

Unser said the race stewards "turned a 3½-hour tape into eight seconds, but that's all anybody looks at...Maybe all of this could have been avoided if they had said, 'Sure, what Bobby did wasn't right, but let's look at how many other guys did this.'

Unser said he doesn't blame Andretti for the mess.

"He's a competitor. He's supposed to do what he can to win. I know him well. We've been very good friends for years. He's a tough competitor and a good person.

Tekulve Stops Chicago; Expos Edge Cardinals

By The Associated Press

Two years ago, Kent Tekulve of the Pittsburgh Pirates was one of the hottest relief pitchers in baseball.

But something snapped near the end of the 1980 season, and he couldn't win for losing.

"There were times I was wondering if I would ever stop losing," he says.

Tekulve dropped seven games at the end of 1980 and three more at the start of this year. That all ended Tuesday when the skinny, bespectacled reliever pitched two scoreless innings in a 6-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"It's a good feeling," said Tekulve, who had 31 saves and 10 victories in 1979 and 21 saves and eight victories before going into his horrendous slump beginning last Aug. 8.

"The numbers were going bad this season, not the pitching," said Tekulve. "I've been throwing good, but there have been bad hops and tough breaks and so on.

"Last year near the end of the season, it was a different story. I was really messed up. I didn't have my timing, I had no rhythm and everything was mechanically wrong."

Tekulve came in with the Pirates trailing 4-2 Tuesday and allowed two hits in the seventh and eighth innings. The Pirates rallied for four runs in the top of the ninth and Enrique Romo nailed down the decision for Tekulve.

Mike Easler's leadoff double triggered Pittsburgh's four-run ninth and Omar Moreno singled across the lead run for the Pirates. Easler doubled and scored on a single by Phil Garner. An RBI single by Willie Stargell later tied the score before Moreno singled across the lead run with two out. Bill Madlock's single brought across an insurance run.

"It was a good pitch," said Moreno of the ninth-inning pitch from reliever Dick Tidrow that he slapped for the game-winning hit, "but I wasn't trying to hit the ball hard. I knew he wasn't going to give me anything good to hit. I know Tidrow and I know you have to be ready to hit the ball anywhere against him."

Phillies 7, Mets 5

Lonnie Smith slapped a tie-breaking RBI single in the ninth inning, and another run scored on first baseman Dave Kingman's third error of the game, boosting Philadelphia over New York.

Bob Boone got things staroed with a one-out single and took third on Greg Gross' single. Smith then singled to snap a 5-5 tie. Pete Rose later hit a one-hop grounder to Kingman and the first baseman let the ball glance off his glove for an error as Gross scored.

The winner was Ron Reed, 1-0, who pitched two perfect innings of relief, while Tug McGraw pitched the ninth for his fourth save. Neil Allen, 3-2, was the loser.

Expos 4, Cardinals 3

Warren Cromartie's RBI single capped a two-run rally in the seventh inning, leading Montreal over St. Louis. Jerry White started the seventh with a single, advanced to second on Chris Speier's sacrifice and scored one out later on an RBI single by Tim Raines off reliever Jim Kaat, 2-1.

Rodney Scott then pushed Raines to second with a single and Cromartie brought him home with a single.

Steve Rogers, who pitched the first seven innings, earned his fifth victory in eight decisions, with relief help from Woodie Fryman and Elias Sosa, who gained his third save.

"The competitiveness is coming back to the ballclub," said Cromartie. "We were missing discipline, dedication and desire more than anything on our recent road trip. But that's history. We've had a change of scenery. We're playing at home now and starting to get it all together."

The Expos had a 4-8 record on their recent road trip before winning two straight at home against the Cardinals.

Astros 1, Padres 0

Rookie third baseman Joe Pittman, getting his first major league start, clubbed three hits, including a run-scoring triple in the seventh inning, to lead Houston over San Diego.

Pittman got into the lineup because Art Howe, the NL's leading hitter, suffered a hamstring pull in Friday night's game. Pittman responded with singles in the third and fifth innings and a triple in the seventh, scoring Alan Ashby, who had singled.

Pittman's game-winning hit came off loser Juan Eichelberger, 4-3, who had yielded only three hits prior to the seventh. Houston starter Nolan Ryan, 4-2, pitched himself out of several jams to get the victory. Ryan was relieved after the seventh by Joe Sambit

Shoemaker After 8,000th

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Jockey Bill Shoemaker needs just one more win to put him at the 8,000-victory plateau but the goal has become elusive.

Champion jockey on thoroughbred horse races won, money won and major handicaps won, the 49-year-old Shoemaker could have trouble reaching 8,000. He only had one triumph in nine mounts during the Memorial Day weekend. His victory aboard the favored Native Prospector in the fifth at Hollywood Park moved him to 7,999.

No racing was scheduled at Hollywood on Tuesday but Shoemaker will have four mounts on Wednesday but only one will be a favorite.

He just missed with a second place with Fort McCloud on Monday yet the Shoe isn't worried, saying, "It will come and I think I'll be happy about it."

Farmville Winners

Farmville Country Club held its Club Championship this past weekend. Ed Holsenback (right) shot a 151 to win the championship. Joe Jenkins (center) won the championship in a playoff with Eddie Evans. Both shot 153 to tie for second and force the playoff.

Rozelle Ready With Answers At Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle was prepared when asked in U.S. District Court what harm would come to the National Football League if the Oakland Raiders were allowed to move to Los Angeles.

And Rozelle acknowledged Tuesday during questioning by attorney Joseph Alioto that the league might have been sued no matter what its posture on the matter had been.

"Mr. Rozelle, give me one good reason why the Raiders' moving would hurt the league?" asked Alioto, attorney for the team, during the lawyer's third day of questioning the commissioner.

"I think the Raiders leaving a city that had given them 12 years of sellouts would have had an adverse effect on the league's good will and might have led to federal and state legislation," Rozelle told the jury.

The commissioner said the Raiders might have risked being called carpetbaggers for leaving the Oakland Coliseum with unpaid bonds which had financed the stadium.

"They would have just been saying arrivederci to Oakland," Rozelle said. "It's highly likely if the Raiders had moved down here, the city of Oakland would have filed an antitrust suit against us.

"We were damned if we did and damned if we didn't."

Instead, the Los Angeles Coliseum filed suit along with the Raiders, and it is that trial which brought Rozelle's testimony. The Coliseum Commission's suit stems from the Los Angeles Rams' move to nearby Anaheim last year, leaving the Coliseum without an NFL team.

After Rozelle's reply, Alioto asked, "Well, weren't all of those reasons present when Carroll Rosenbloom said arrivederci to the Los Angeles Coliseum and moved the Rams to Anaheim?"

"Carroll Rosenbloom didn't leave his territory," the commissioner replied. "He didn't move 400 miles.

"The main followers of the Rams, before they moved and after, are people who watched them on television...the fans in Oakland would have to fly down 400 miles to see a game. They can't watch them on TV."

Rozelle's comments, which appeared to score a major point in the NFL's favor, came as U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson urged Alioto to wind up his lengthy questioning.

But when court recessed for the day, Alioto had not concluded and Rozelle was to return to the stand today.

Rozelle conceded during questioning that a franchise in Los Angeles would be one of the most valuable in the league.

Lady Bullets Rally Past Currituck

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville softball coach Jerry Godley was pulling his hair out after three innings of his club's game with Currituck. The Lady Bullets committed 10 errors in the first three innings, including six in the first when Currituck scored six runs.

But the Lady Bullets settled down after that and used an 11-run fourth to carry them to a 17-10 victory over Currituck in the opening round of the 2-A/1-A state softball playoffs.

Jamesville, now 18-2, will play host to Bath Friday. The game is tentatively set for 8 p.m.

After Currituck jumped out to a six-run lead in the first inning, the Lady Bullets began to creep back. Jamesville scored three runs in the second only sparked by Kim Floyd's two-run home, but Currituck countered that with a three-run fourth of its own.

But then Jamesville unleashed an 11-run fourth that carried it to a 14-9 advantage and the Lady Bullets never trailed again.

Currituck scored its final run of the game in the fourth while Jamesville's final three runs came in the fifth.

The Lady Bullets were led in hitting by Floyd Tammy Williams and Selita Cross, all of whom had three hits in four at bats. Along with her homer, Floyd had two doubles. Cross had a two-run homer in the 11-run fourth.

Deanne Spence was two for four for the Lady Bullets.

2-Run Seventh Lifts Tigers By Rocky Mt.

ROCKY MOUNT — Williamston struck for two runs in the seventh inning to edge Rocky Mount, 5-3, Tuesday afternoon in the opening round of the state 4-A/3-A softball playoffs.

Williamston, now 12-5, will play Northern Nash Thursday at 3:30 at Tarboro in the second round of the tournament.

The game was tied at 3-3 going into the seventh inning yesterday when Celestine Perkins singled and the ball got by the rightfielder to score both Perkins and Brenda Kelly and give Williamston a 5-3 the lead for good. Kelly had reached earlier with a single.

The Lady Tigers trailed 2-0 going into the top of the third inning but rallied for two runs to tie the game. Rocky Mount regained the lead in the bottom of the third with a run but Williamston countered with a run in the fourth to tie the game at 3-3.

Wanda Price and Perkins both had two hits for Williamston. Price had a double for one of her hits. Rocky Mount did not have anyone with two hits.

Watson, Floyd, Kite Head Kemper Field

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Tom Watson, Ray Floyd and Tom Kite, the three most consistent players in golf this season, top the field for the $400,000 Kemper Open.

There's no assurance one of the three will take the $72,000 first prize, but their records insist that they'll be among the prime contenders in the 72-hole chase that begins Thursday on the hilly, 7,054-yard, par-70 Congressional Country Club course.

Floyd, winner of consecutive titles in Florida earlier this season, hasn't finished lower than 12th since late January. Kite was seventh last week in the Memorial, and that was his worst in a month and a half. Watson won the Masters and seems to be in the hunt in every event he enters.

The three, all of whom play their best on the more difficult courses, have won five tournaments this season and have combined money-winnings of $631,000.

Floyd, enjoying the best season of his 19-year career, has finished in the top 10 in nine of 13 starts. Kite is nine of 14 and Watson, tied for third last week in the Memorial, is eight of 13.

They face an international field of 156 that lost a little quality to a wedding in Pensacola, Fla. Bruce Lietzke, the leading money-winner this year, was married Tuesday night to Rose Nelson, Jerry Pate's sister-in-law, and will not be here. Pate, Ben Crenshaw and Bill Rogers all were members of the wedding party and also are skipping this event.

Ron Streck, winner of the Houston Open, withdrew from the field Wednesday. Lee Trevino and Keith Fergus, the Memorial champion, also are absentees.

John Mahaffey is the defending title-holder.

Other standouts include two-time U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin, Tom Weiskopf, Lanny Wadkins and Johnny Miller, winner of two titles this season.

Australian David Graham tops the foreign field that also includes South African Gary Player and Isao Aoki of Japan.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Mt. Olive Signs Rams' Phillip Hill

MOUNT OLIVE — Mount Olive Junior College has announced the signing of Phillip Hill of Greene Central to a grant-in-aid for basketball.

Hill, a 6-4 forward, is one of five recruits signed by the Trojans this spring.

The Snow Hill senior averaged 11 points and 11 rebounds for the Rams, and was named to the Eastern Carolina Conference's all-star team.

The other recruits include Curtis Ashford of Southern Wayne; Bobby Bollinger of Charleston, S.C.; Scott Denton of Bunn High School and Joe Jones Jr. of Pender County High School.

Crowley's HRs Lift O's By Yanks

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver keeps designating Terry Crowley as the Orioles' designated hitter, so Crowley decided he'd better start hitting.

"I was surprised I was in the lineup. I've been struggling and I give credit to Earl for sticking with me," Crowley said after snapping an 0-for-10 slump with a solo homer and a three-run shot that powered the Orioles to a 6-4 victory over the New York Yankees Tuesday night.

"Sometimes a hitter has a tendency to think a little too much," said Crowley, who went hitless over the weekend in Detroit. "In Detroit, I was probably thinking too much about that short porch in right field."

Crowley's homers were his first of the season. His first triggered a three-run fourth inning that erased a 2-0 deficit and his second wiped out a 4-3 New York lead in the fifth. Both came off rookie Gene Nelson.

"We checked many reports before the game," Weaver said, "and decided that Nelson was not a power pitcher. Terry is one of the best breaking ball hitters in baseball."

"Hitting is my business," said Crowley. "I'm not around here for anything else. When we lost a doubleheader on Sunday I felt it was my responsibility. It's the designated hitter's responsibility to hit some home runs and drive some people in. I haven't been doing a good job until this point."

It was the 12th triumph in 15 games for the Orioles, who have beaten the Yankees in nine of their last 11 meetings dating back to last season. Sammy Stewart yielded one hit over the final 41-3 innings to pick up the win in relief of Scott McGregor.

White Sox 4, A's 1

Britt Burns pitched a seven-hitter, working his way out of trouble often, to end the A's five-game winning streak. He lost his shutout bid when Dave McKay homered in the ninth inning but by that time the White Sox had a 4-0 lead on Tony Bernazard's three-run double and Carlton Fisk's RBI single.

Oakland reliever Bo McLaughlin was knocked unconscious when hit in the face by a line drive off the bat of Harold Baines in the eighth inning and was removed from the field on a stretcher. A hospital report said McLaughlin was struck below the left eye and there did not appear to be any damage to the eye, although his face was badly swollen.

Rangers 2, Twins 1

Pat Putnam crashed a solo home run in the second inning, Mario Mendoza singled home a run in the fourth and Ferguson Jenkins pitched out of a seventh-inning jam as Texas won its fourth game in a row. The decisive run came when Leon Roberts walked, went to third on Jim Sundberg's single and scored on Mendoza's single. It was the 15th RBI for the Rangers' shortstop, one more than he had all last season with Seattle.

Minnesota scored in the seventh on singles by John Castino, Danny Goodwin and Pete Mackanin but Jenkins struck out pinch hitter Hosken Powell, catcher Sundberg threw out Mackanin, who was running on the pitch, for a double play and Sal Butera fanned.

Indians 5, Red Sox 2

Mike Hargrove keyed a five-run third inning with one of his three singles as Cleveland jumped on Dennis Eckersley for six hits and all its runs, one unearned, before the Boston right-hander settled down.

Duane Kuiper started the inning with a single. One out later, Rick Manning and Jorge Orta singled for the first run. Hargrove lined an RBI single, Andre Thornton doubled and Ron Hassey singled for three more runs. The fifth run scored on a throwing error by second baseman Jerry Remy.

Blue Jays 8, Angels 4

Barry Bonnell rapped out four hits and drove in four runs with a double and a three-run homer while Otto Velez had a two-run homer and Ken Macha added a two-run single. Bonnell doubled a run home in the first inning and slammed his homer in the third.

Brewers 7, Tigers 3

Jim Gantner touched off a seven-run first inning with a single and capped it with a two-run double while Pete Vuckovich notched his fifth consecutive victory.

Gantner's single and a double by Charlie Moore ignited the big first inning and a bloop single by Cecil Cooper scored the first run. After a walk to Gorman Thomas loaded the bases, Ben Oglivie hit a sacrifice fly and Roy Howell lined an RBI single. Robin Yount's sacrifice fly, Mark Brouhard's single and Gantner's double produced the other runs.

Royals 5, Mariners 4

Lee May's two-out pinch single in the eighth capped a two-run Kansas City rally. Shane Rawley replaced Seattle starter Glenn Abbott to open the eighth with the Mariners on top 3-2 and gave up a leadoff single to George Brett, who had four hits and raised his batting average to .309. Brett raced all the way to third on a wild pitch and scored the tying run on Frank White's single. After John Wathan singled, May singled White home with the lead run.

Ongais May Take 4-6 Months To Heal

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It may take four to six months for veteran race car driver Danny Ongais' fractured right leg to heal, a spokesman for Methodist Hospital says.

Asked if the injuries would keep Ongais out of a race car for the duration of the healing process, spokesman Fred Price said, "I can't say for sure, but that's a pretty good guess."

Price also said Tuesday that additional surgery may not be required for Ongais, 39, injured seriously when his Interscope racer slammed into the third-turn wall during Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

"It's a day-by-day evaluation," Price said of Ongais, who was listed in serious but stable condition Tuesday following his third round of surgery.

"Right now, we say no, but we said no Monday," Price said. "We have to wait and see how the leg heals. There's no definite answer to that question right now."

Ongais, the former drag racing champion from Hawaii, underwent four hours of additional surgery Monday night to repair veins in the leg. The additional surgery was needed, Price said, because "physicians noticed circulation in his right leg was not good

Allison Still Unsatisfactory

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — NASCAR driver Donnie Allison, who suffered multiple injuries in last weekend's World 600 stock car race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway, is still in unsatisfactory but stable condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokesman said Tuesday.

Wanda Helms said doctors ran a brain scan during several tests performed on the Allison, 41, of Hueytown, Ala., native. The tests revealed no further medical complications.

Donnie Allison was injured when his car slammed off the wall in turn No. 4 and rolled across the track into the path of Dick Brooks' car. He suffered a broken shoulder blade, broken knee, concussion, broken ribs and a bruised lung as a result of the collision.

Is Reggie Jackson Headed To New York Mets?

By The Associated Press

Reggie Jackson — ol' No. 44 — in a Mets uniform?

Don't bet against it. The idea is not as implausible as it might sound and the prospect grows in believability every time Yankees owner George Steinbrenner unleashes one of his public tirades, as he did earlier this week.

George's latest shot of pep-up serum may backfire. It may turn to vinegar and prove as unpalatable to Yankee fans as was the dismissal of Billy Martin as manager.

Boss Steinbrenner blew his stack after the Yankees got creamed 12-5 by the Cleveland Indians Sunday, with the heaviest blast leveled at Reggie, the "straw who stirs the drink."

"(Dave) Winfield has done all I could ask of him," George said, referring to the multimillion dollar free agent signed over the winter. "I don't know if that's bothering Reggie or what. Reggie has killed us. Today he twice could have broken the game open and didn't."

Thus Steinbrenner put himself in the position of playing one of his superstars off against the other. Good stretegy? Should it get Reggie so fired up that he'll start tearing down fences in his rage?

It might work with college kids, but not the pros. Psychiatrists would question it.

"I can't say that's George's purpose," Reggie said by telephone from Baltimore where he and the Yankees are trying to cool off the hot Orioles, "but if it is, it can't happen.

"Dave and I get along fine. We have a mutual respect for each other. He is a bright guy and a good player. Besides, the fact we both are black makes it all the more unlikely that we can be drawn into a personal, divisive feud."

Winfield has been hitting around the .330 mark and leading the team in hits and runs batted in, thus temporarily justifying his $15 million to $20 million contract. Jackson, called "Mr. October" because of his clutch hitting down the stretch and in five World Series (.360 avg., nine home runs and 23 RBI), is struggling around the .200 level.

It's not exactly vintage Reggie, and no one is more aware of it than No. 44 himself.

"I haven't started to hit — and that's obvious," said Reggie, although he poled home run No. 5 and had two other good shots against the Orioles Monday night in getting his 21st RBI. "It isn't easy for a guy to be trying to prove himself in his option year.

"There is pressure. I have an image to uphold. I put great demands on myself. You don't want another battle — you have had so many in the past — but if it's there, you have to face it."

Much of Reggie's frustration stems from the spat he had with his ship tycoon boss at spring training in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

In a poolside conference prior to the opening of camp, Steinbrenner and Jackson appeared to have agreed on Reggie's future with the Yankees. Steinbrenner said the two would firm it up on March 1, opening day of training.

Reggie showed up two days late. He explained Steinbrenner had given him permission to clean up some business on the West Coast. "No one man is bigger than the Yankees," fumed George. "If Reggie wants to talk contract, he'll have to find me."

Thus, Reggie, who this year plays out his five-year, $3 million contract, has been placed on hold. It's as if Steinbrenner elected to let his slugging outfielder stew in his own juice. It's a game of one-upsmanship. Reggie has played it before.

Some believe this slight has had an adverse effect on Reggie, who turned 35 May 18 and who is inclined to produce more when he is appreciated and enjoys a sense of security.

While Winfield has basked in the limelight of a $20 million ballplayer doing his thing, Jackson has secreted himself in his corner cubby-hole at the Stadium and brooded in silence.

It isn't like Reggie. He's an up-front, outspoken guy.

"When you're in a slump like this, it's embarrassing," he said. "It's depressing. I prefer to get out of the way and hide.

Players See NLRB Decision As A Victory

By The Associated Press

Reaction was mixed among the baseball fraternity to the decision Tuesday of the National Labor Relations Board's general counsel upholding the players' claim that the club owners have bargained unfairly.

Most of the players saw the decision of William G. Lubbers as a victory. Lubbers said he would ask the full board to request that team owners turn over to the Players Association all requested financial data, something the owners have refused to do. He also said he would ask the board to decide whether to seek an injunction to turn over the financial data, which almost certainly would postpone a strike, currently set for Friday.

"It's encouraging to hear that we weren't amiss in what we were stating," said George Foster, player representative of the Cincinnati Reds. "They've been saying that they're having financial difficulties. We just wanted to see their records to confirm this.

"It (the ruling) is a plus in our corner."

Gary Lavelle, player rep of the San Francisco Giants, agreed.

"If the injunction comes through," said Lavelle, "it will almost for sure delay the strike."

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, would be in charge of examining the financial data, a job that could take weeks.

"If Marvin is going to have a chance to check the books," said the Reds' Dave Collins, "that will take time and maybe it will postpone a strike. It's an important ruling. If it had favored the owners, there would have been a strike for sure. Now this changes things...this may drag on and on and, if it does, in the meantime, we are going to play baseball."

Bob Boone, the National League player rep who is a catcher with the Phillies, added:

"I don't want to speculate because I don't know all the ramifications of what happened today. But with this, there is a light of hope. I don't think you could say I'm optimistic, though. There is a basic disagreement in philosophy. They're asking us to take a step backward."

Philadelphia's Pete Rose is one major leaguer who thinks compensation isn't such a bad thing.

"I still believe," he said, "that there should be some sort of compensation for a player (free agent). Cincinnati should have gotten something for me, but they just didn't want me. And San Diego should get something for Dave Winfield."

About the possibility of an injunction, Rose said, "Anything will please me that will keep us playing baseball."

Putt-Putt Results

Hopewell Pentecostal, led by Danny Pollard's 66, became the early leader as the Putt-Putt Church League began its 1981 season last night.

Pentecostal finished with a 295, six strokes better than Salem Methodist, the 1980 champions. Salem was led by Jeff Taft's 62 and William Paramore's 67.

Farmville Presbyterian and Bell Arthur Christian both had 319 totals for the two-round match. Mel Williams led Farmville with a 69 and Lanny Morris led Bell Arthur with a 74.

Faith Pentecostal was last in the five-team match with a 336. Lynn Cherry led Faith with a 69.

Judge Urges Big 10, Illini To Settle Out Of Court

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — A federal judge is urging the Big Ten Conference and University of Illinois quarterback Dave Wilson to settle their differences out of court.

"Perhaps this matter does not really belong in court. Perhaps it's not really a sound subject for litigation," U.S. District Judge Robert Morgan said Tuesday after a hearing on the case.

Morgan indicated that he believes an athlete's eligibility is a matter best left to the judgment of athletic conferences and their member schools.

At the hearing, Wilson's attorney won a minor legal skirmish but later hinted his client may not want to play another season under a cloud of Big Ten sanctions.

"We walked on water once and I don't know if we want to do it again," said Robert Auler, referring to legal maneuvering which enabled Wilson to play the 1980 season for Illinois.

Wilson filed suit against the Big Ten because the conference wants to prevent him from playing football next season.

On Tuesday, Morgan ruled in favor of a request by Auler that the Big Ten narrow what conference lawyer Byron Gregory admitted was "a stack three or four feet high" of rules and legal precedents on which it will rely in its effort to block Wilson from playing.

Commenting on the judge's recommendation that the two sides try to settle the case out of court, Auler said he would discuss the status of the case with his client to see if Wilson wanted to pursue the suit against the Big Ten. But Auler set a July 1 deadline, in time for the professional football supplementary draft.

Also Tuesday, Gregory filed a motion for summary judgment, a legal move which would enable the judge to rule on the legal merits of the case without holding a full trial.

The dispute between Wilson and the Big Ten stems from the quarterback's days at Fullerton Junior College in California.

Wilson was injured on his first play of 1977 at the junior college and dropped out of school without playing another game. He returned for the 1978 and 1979 seasons, then transferred to Illinois.

The Big Ten contends 1977 represented his freshman year and an entire season of eligibility.

But Wilson contended 1980 was actually his junior year and that he had enough credits to qualify academically as a junior player.

Rose Defeated...

"This was a pretty good night for Billy. He usually throws around 130 to 150 pitches," Hall said. "Tonight, he was the big story. His curve wasn't breaking at all but his fast ball was real good."

Vincent, although saying his Rampants should have hit Wolff better, agreed.

"He was wild early and we didn't take advantage of that," Vincent said. "I don't know why we couldn't hit him. I felt like we should have and the players kept coming back to the dugout saying they could hit him.

"He's as good a pitcher as we've faced all year. I can believe the no-hit part but I can't believe all the strike outs. We're a fast ball hitting team."

So, too, is Hoggard. And the Vikings, who traveled to Greenville sporting a .331 team batting average, wasted little time in displaying that ability.

With two gone in the first and Wolff on first with a walk, Nixon sent a 1-0 fast ball from Gordon Douglas over the left-centerfield fence, some 340 feet away, for his ninth homer of the season and the first of the year off Douglas this season.

In the next two innings, the Rampants appeared primed to counter the Viking outburst. It wasn't to be.

With two gone and runners on first and second in the second, MacMillan chased a bad pitch to strike out and end the inning.

In the third with one out, Mark Douglas reached second when third baseman Tom Glancy threw the ball into rightfield. Douglas then went to third on a wild pitch. But Mitch Brann popped out to first and Emmett Walsh, the Rampants' leading RBI producer with 26 this season, struck out to end the threat.

The Rampants threatened only once more, in the seventh, as Wolff set down 11 straight. The Vikings, meanwhile, added another run to its lead in the fourth inning.

With one gone, Mahan hit the first pitch he saw, a curve, to nearly the exact same place as Nixon did four innings earlier for his first home run of the season and a 3-0 Viking lead and the last of three hits by the visitors off Douglas.

In any other game, Douglas' effort would have been enough. He struck out eight and walked three while throwing 105 pitches. But the two home runs, and Wolff's effort, were too much for the junior right-hander, who ends the season with an 8-2 record.

Afterwards, as he excepted congratulations, Hall offered this observation: "Greenville looked a little tired out there tonight to me. We've had 10 to 12 days of rest and that did us good. I think their playing three games in the last few days hurt them a little bit."

Vincent agreed. "I'd say so. We played Friday and Saturday and this was junior-senior weekend. That might have had something to do with the loss."

But then, so did Wolff.

IRA Hunger Striker Is Being Treated

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA hunger striker Brendan McLaughlin, warned by prison doctors that he was close to death, is accepting medical treatment for a bleeding ulcer but continuing his 14-day fast.

Sinn Fein, the Irish Republican Army's legal political front, said Tuesday the medical care "does not compromise McLaughlin's fast." A spokesman for the Northern Ireland Office, which administers the province, said the acceptance of treatment was "very limited in extent."

The 29-year-old prisoner is the first of eight Irish nationalist hunger strikers — four of whom have died this month — to allow doctors to treat him.

Neither Sinn Fein nor the government would say what treatment McLaughlin would receive, but the government spokesman said it was "very limited in extent."

Police on Tuesday raided the East Belfast headquarters of the Protestant paramilitary Ulster Defense Association and seized arms and ammunition including six home-built Sterling submachine guns. The UDA is a legal organization but its 15,000 active members are not allowed to bear arms.

Police would not say if any arrests were made during the raid. They said the arms would be tested to determine if any was used in the killing of a Catholic butcher in the Ardoyne district of Belfast two weeks ago.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary police, most of whose officers are Protestant, has come under sharp criticism from Roman Catholics for directing most of its attention toward the Catholic community. Critics have called for a more even-handed policy in combatting Ulster's violence.

The UDA raid followed police seizure of what they said was the last Soviet-made RPG-7 rocket launcher in the hands of the IRA Provisional wing guerrillas battling British rule in Northern Ireland.

"This could be an extremely significant seizure," a senior police source said. "If, as we think, this is the last of the shipment, we have taken from the Provisional IRA one of their major weapons."

The rocket launcher with a charged warhead, several guns and 100 armor-piercing rounds of rifle ammunition were found in a stolen car driven by two IRA members, a police spokesman said. He said the two men were captured and one was shot twice in the back when he tried to escape. His condition was not disclosed.

The Provos have used the RPG-7 twice in the past two weeks, killing a police officer in an attack on a security vehicle and injuring two soldiers in a similar attack Friday night.

McLaughlin, serving 12 years for illegal possession of firearms, began to refuse meals May 13 at the Maze prison as a replacement for hunger striker Francis Hughes, who died the day before.

He was transferred Thursday to the military wing of Belfast's Musgrave Park Hospital because of a perforated ulcer. Doctors said he could die within days if he did not receive a blood transfusion.

Three other IRA men are also on hunger strike in the Maze to drum up foreign support for the IRA's demands that its members be given the privileges of political prisoners.

On the British mainland, two of the five soldiers killed last week when IRA guerrillas blew up an armored personnel carrier near Newry, Northern Ireland, were buried Tuesday in military funerals.

Police in the Irish republic said they found 1,000 pounds of IRA explosives in barrels in County Cavan near the border with Northern Ireland. Other bombs were found near the border over the weekend.

OPEC Failed....

stable or decline.

"Saudi Arabia will have to cut back in order to cure the so-called glut," said Constantine Fliakos, an analyst with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. in New York. Without such a cut, he said, "You basically will see flat prices, but there may be some declines."

John Lichtblau, executive director of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, said some countries might base their cutbacks on sales levels before the glut, meaning the real reduction might be well below the 1.5 million barrels-a-day estimate. Lichtblau, however, did not foresee price reductions at the pump.

"The market won't permit price increases, politics won't permit price decreases, so you end up freezing the price where it is," Lichtblau said.

The OPEC countries produced about 25.2 million barrels a day in March, the latest month for which figures were available. Saudi Arabia provided 9.85 million of that.

Already in the United States, price wars have flared up, with prices down to $1.10 a gallon in some places, compared with highs of $1.50 a gallon in others.

Lee Lauer, head of a gasoline dealer group in Missouri and Kansas, says wholesale prices have dropped 5 cents to discount stations and 1 to 3 cents to major-brand stations in the last 30 days.

Shell Oil Co. last week ordered a penny-a-gallon cut on all grades in Ohio.

Shell, Texaco and Mobil all have incentive programs that discount wholesale prices to dealers selling 70 to 80 percent of last year's volume. Those discounts encourage price-cutting by stations.

Hussein For Peace Talks

MOSCOW (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan joined President Leonid I. Brezhnev today in a new call for a Middle East peace conference that would include the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

"The king of Jordan reiterated support for this approach and for resolving in this way the problem of achieving a just and lasting peace in the region," Tass said.

The report added, in discussing the crisis in Lebanon, that "the U.S.S.R. will continue firmly supporting Syria in its opposition to Israeli aggression."

Moscow "also intends to continue giving support to the legitimate Lebanese authorities and the pan-Arab peacekeeping forces in Lebanon, and to work for achieving national concord in that country," it said.

Both sides in the talks, Tass said, expressed opposition to the establishment of foreign military bases in the Persian Gulf region.

Hussein arrived in the Soviet Union Tuesday for a three-day visit, which is also to include meetings and sightseeing in the Ukrainian capital of Kiev.

Tentative Senate Approval For Porn Shop Curbs

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill supporters say would remove some of the barriers to closing down pornography shops cleared another hurdle Tuesday, winning tentative approval in the state Senate.

The Senate approved the bill 44-3, and a final vote was scheduled for today.

Also Tuesday, the Senate approved legislation regulating hazardous and low-level radioactive wastes in the state.

Sen. John Cavanagh, R-Forsyth, introduced the pornography bill, which would repeal the requirement for an adversary hearing in certain obscenity cases.

In the court hearing, a judge determines whether or not certain materials are obscene. Under current laws, no one may be prosecuted unless they continue to sell materials after they are found to be obscene in an adversary hearing.

The bill originally repealed the requirement for adversary hearings in all cases. It was amended in the Senate Judiciary I Committee to allow immediate arrest of a person selling or displaying movies, pictures or books depicting sex acts with minors or animals; acts of flagellation, sadism or masochism; and male or female genitals during intercourse, masturbation or sodomy.

By arguing that North Carolina is the smut capital of the nation, supporters of the bill tried to portray their critics as advocates of pornography.

"This bill is going to put you on record as being against pornography," said Sen. James McDuffie, D-Mecklenburg, who helped drum up support for the bill.

Some district attorneys have supported the bill, saying the hearing is a stumbling block to prosecuting pornography dealers. But many librarians and magazine dealers say they fear the bill will open the way for overzealous people to close down legitimate businesses.

Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, attempted to delay a vote on the bill Tuesday by referring it to a second committee. That motion failed 16-32.

In other legislative action:

Hazardous Waste

The hazardous waste bill, approved 42-7 by the Senate, came amid concern that North Carolina could become a dumping ground for wastes from other states.

The bill, strongly backed by Gov. Jim Hunt, sets up a 15-member board to oversee disposal operations and imposes fees on operators of waste disposal facilities to finance monitoring of closed sites.

It also permits the governor, after receiving the board's recommendations, to override local ordinances that might prevent the establishment of hazardous waste sites.

Guns

A bill prohibiting the sale of pistols to convicted criminals, banning the sale of "Saturday Night Specials" and establishing standard gun permit requirements won the approval of a Senate panel.

The Judiciary II Committee voted 3-2 to approve the gun control measure sponsored by Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Orange. The bill goes to the Senate floor, where a vote is expected next week.

The bill would ban the sale of cheap pistols known as Saturday Night Specials, would ban the sale of handguns to anyone convicted of a crime other than a traffic violation and would limit the sale of other handguns to one purchase per month per person.

Vickery's bill also would set up the first standard information forms that people who apply for gun permits must fill out.

"It's not a gun registration. It's not gun prohibition. It's not gun control," Vickery said. "This bill is a gun permit bill, and it bans Saturday Night Specials."

Second Mortgages

The Senate, in a surprising move, voted to table — or effectively kill — a bill that opponents said would have lifted usury limits on some types of second mortgages.

The bill was sponsored by Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, who worked in the banking industry until this year. It dealt with so-called wraparound mortgages — second mortgages in which the lender takes over the first mortgage, usually at a lower interest rate.

The bill ran into trouble and was postponed last week, but won tentative Senate approval Monday night.

In debate Tuesday, Vickery maintained that wraparound loans are permitted now, and that the only thing Johnson's bill did was lift the limit on interest rates lenders could charge.

Vickery offered an amendment to place a ceiling on interest rates, but after long debate, the Senate voted 29-18 to table both the amendment and the bill.

Weapons

With no debate, the Senate voted unanimously to give final approval to a bill making it illegal to train others in the use of firearms or explosives with the intent of ultimately using them in civil disorders. The bill now goes to the House.

Sponsors said it is aimed at banning terrorist training camps reportedly operated in North Carolina by the Ku Klux Klna, Nazis and other groups.

Equitable Distribution

The House version of a bill requiring marital property be divided equally at the time of divorce ran into difficulties in the Senate Judiciary III Committee.

The original bill was approved by the Senate several months ago, but the measure was rewritten in the House and returned to the Senate for concurrence.

In general, both bills would require property be divided equally by husband and wife when they divorce. The bills list certain factors — like income and health — that might mean one spouse would be entitled to more property than the other.

Several changes surfaced in the committee meeting as possible barriers to Senate approval. They involved what to do with gifts from one spouse to the other or gifts and inheritances to a spouse from someone outside the marriage. The Senate panel also questioned whether the House version opens the way for jury trials.

Abortion

Republican members of the House Judiciary III Committee moved quickly to adjourn when it appeared the panel was going to reject a bill requiring physicians notify the parents of a minor before performing an abortion.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, was approved in the Senate after being heavily amended to give physicians discretion whether or not to notify parents. The bill would apply to unmarried minors who are living with or are otherwise dependent on their parents for a living.

Doctors also would be required to tell the young woman about adoption services and possible complications from an abortion. Violators could get a maximum of six months in jail and a $500 fine.

At the committee meeting, the Christian Action League and Right to Life members urge' legislators to support the bill. But Dr. Louis Wilkerson, a Raleigh member of the North Carolina Medical Society, asked the representatives not to interfere in the doctor-patient relationship.

It was the first time the medical group has taken a stand on the bill.

Redistricting

Although the joint House-Senate Congressional Redistricting Committee cancelled its meeting Tuesday, some action was taken toward reaching agreement on drawing new lines.

Sen. Dallas Alford(D-Nash, filed a bill that would authorize the General Assembly to cross county lines in drawing new congressional districts. He noted that it is not against the state Constitution or laws to cut up counties and place them in different districts.

Alford, the head of a redistricting subcommittee, noted the authorization is needed because the session is drawing to a close and no agreement has been reached about what county should be in what district.

New Bills

Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, an outspoken women's rights advocate, filed a resolution expressing concern at the lack of representation of women on official committees, boards and commissions.

In the House, 14 legislators filed a bill to set out the rights of people living in homes for the elderly or disabled. The rights would include privacy, freedom to participate in community activities and confidential medical records.

3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

We have frequently been accused of inventing hands that we feature in this column. Not so! Most of the hands were dealt and played at the table. For example, here's a fine safety play from a recent European Championship match.

South's one no trump free rebid showed better than a minimum opening bid. Therefore, North was correct to invite game with his 9 points, five-card suit and key card in his partner's suit. South accepted on the basis of his sixth club.

Sitting South was Swedish star Per Olov Sundelin. He captured East's king of spades with the ace, and could count seven fast tricks, so he needed only two more tricks from the club suit to bring home his game. That would be no problem if clubs broke no worse than 4-1. But what if the suit divided 5-0?

If East held all the missing clubs, declarer could easily neutralize the evil split. West would show out on the lead of a club to the king, and a club from dummy would force East to split his honors to prevent declarer from winning the trick with a low club. Declarer could then force out the other honor, thus establishing the suit for one loser. But what if West held all the clubs?

At trick two Sundelin led the seven of clubs from his hand. West played low and so did dummy! That was a perfect safety play. If East won the trick, declarer's ace-queen in the suit would draw the outstanding clubs and the contract would coast home. When East showed out, declarer continued with a club to the king, re-entered his hand with the queen of spades and conceded a club trick to East. He was now assured of nine tricks, for if West still had a spade, the defenders could collect only three more spade tricks before declarer regained the lead.

Production Of A BBC Show Begun In Virginia

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A production team from the British Broadcasting Corp. is at work in Virginia on a project that might be described as "Masterpiece Theater"-in-reverse.

Shooting began in Charlottesville today on exterior scenes for "Nancy," a BBC-Time-Life Television co-production on the life of Nancy Astor, the audacious American who became the first woman member of Britain's Parliament.

"Nancy" will be broadcast first in England, perhaps as early as next spring, and in this country later in 1982 as a Mobil Showcase Network presentation. Filming began in England about a month ago, and the entire production will take about a year.

A British actress, Lisa Harrow, whose most notable recent appearance in this country was in a public TV broadcast of "Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde," plays Nancy Astor.

BBC productions have been a staple of public TV's "Masterpiece Theater" for a decade now, and invariably the filming has been done in England or on the Continent.

"I think this is only the second time the BBC has done it this way, filming the exterior scenes in this country," said Tony Virgo, the production supervisor for "Nancy." Virgo spoke by telephone from Richmond.

"I believe they did some filming for 'Oppenheimer' in Colorado," he said, referring to a seven-part dramatized documentary scheduled to be a part of public television's upcoming "Playhouse" series.

Virgo recently completed work on another BBC-Time-Life co-production for the Showcase Network, "The Borgias," which involved considerable location filming in Italy. "That was incredibly complex compared with this," he said. "They have been so cooperative here."

"The Borgias" also is scheduled for broadcast here in 1982.

The groundwork laid by Virgo and his assistants for the filming in Virginia is a case study in television production. Virgo said the nine-part miniseries is being shot first on film, and eventually will be transferred to tape.

"The biggest thing in Charlottesville," he said, "is Mirador, the family home, which still exists. The problem is, we can't use it. It's not quite right architecturally — it's had things done to it — and it's near a freeway.

"The problem with the freeway," he said, "is one I don't think Americans have. We shoot the dialogue as we go, rather than dub it in later as they do here, and it's just impossible to unscramble the sound from the freeway."

The production will move next to Montpelier Station, near Orange, Va., for railroad station scenes — a period engine and cars are being shipped from Covington and Huntington, W.Va. — and then on to Lynchburg.

The major American exterior will be shot June 10 in Richmond, a Confederate Day parade down the city's East Grace Street, set about 1890. Virgo said about 140 extras have been hired for that scene.

"We've got the same problem with sound in Richmond, but we'll have police on hand to keep the traffic away, so it shouldn't be a major difficulty," Virgo said.

Virgo said the parade in Richmond will complete the American phase of the project — American interiors were staged in a studio in England.

The Astor home in England, Clivedon, stands today, but Virgo said the problem with shooting there is similar to the one faced at the Charlottesville home, Mirador.

"Clivedon is on the flight path for Heathrow," the primary London airport, he said. "It's where the planes stack for landing.

"The trouble is, the place is so well known in England, it has one of the nicest views of the Thames there is, we've got to use it. We'll do as little as possible there, then go into a studio."

Comedian Is Suing National Enquirer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Richard Pryor has filed a $10 million lawsuit against the National Enquirer, claiming the tabloid libeled him by alleging that he burned himself in an accident last year while making cocaine.

The Enquirer, a weekly, lost a libel judgment in March to comedian Carol Burnett. A court awarded her $800,000 after she challenged an article that described her as being boisterous in a Washington, D.C., restaurant.

Pryor's suit, filed Tuesday in Los Angeles Superior Court, is based on a Sept. 9, 1980, article published following an accident he had three months before.

The suit charges that the Enquirer's article accused the comedian "of blowing himself up while engaging in the making of cocaine and also inferred and suggested that he had friends sneaking cocaine into him while he was in the hospital recovering from burns he suffered," according to Pryor's attorney, Terry Giles.

Pryor spent two months in the Sherman Oaks Community Hospital Burn Center last summer after a June 9 accident that left him with severe burns on the upper half of his body.

Pryor insisted the accident occurred when he was drinking rum and smoking. He said the cigarette lighter or cigarette ignited some rum that had spilled on his polyester shirt.

Los Angeles police investigators reported soon after the accident that Pryor had told doctors the fire started when he was free-basing, or making a highly flammable mixture of ether and cocaine.

The police never backed off from that statement.

"If the police had any information or any evidence that there was some kind of free-basing going on, charges would certainly have been brought against Mr. Pryor," said Giles. "For whatever reason, there was a flurry of rumors after the accident, and everyone presumed Mr. Pryor was involved in some kind of illicit drug activity which caused him to be burned."

Giles said Pryor had phoned an editor of the National Enquirer at the publication's headquarters in Lantana, Fla., and asked for a retraction, but a retraction wasn't printed.

The article quotes unidentified sources as a basis for its information, Giles said.

Giles said the principal reason in bringing suit was to "clarify the situation concerning Mr. Pryor; secondly, we hope to hit them with enough punitive damages to the point that they'll stop doing this kind of thing."

Several other celebrities, including Shirley Jones, Marty Ingels, Jeff Wald and Ed McMahon, have filed libel suits against the Enquirer.

Nuke Plant Green Light

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Duke Power Co.'s McGuire nuclear plant should get a full-power operating license, the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board has decided.

Duke officials said Tuesday the board recommended that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission grant the license for the $1.8 billion plant.

The full NRC is scheduled to take the request under final review, which could take up to 30 days. When Duke gets license, it could bring McGuire's Unit One up to 100 percent power this summer.

Austin C. Thies, a Duke senior vice president, said putting McGuire into operation would increase the company's summer power reserve to about 14 percent.

The McGuire plant, located about 17 miles northwest of Charlotte on Lake Norman, has two nuclear reactors — each housed in a separate containment building. The second unit, currently under construction and about 87 percent complete, is expected to be ready for operation in 1983.

Fight For Freedom

Today is Sovereignty Day in Afghanistan, marking that country's independence in 1921. But for rebels, like this Afghan, freedom will only come when 85,000 Soviet soldiers withdraw from that country. In 1979, the Soviet Union sent troops there to support the communist government. Since then, nearly one million Afghans have fled. Others, often using ancient weapons, are still battling against Soviet tanks. Throughout history many nations have invaded Afghanistan. But none has found conquest easy. One reason may be the legendary fighting spirit of the Afghans — a trait reflected in an old Hindu prayer asking protection from "the venom of the cobra ... and the vengeance of the Afghan."

DO YOU KNOW — What is the dominant religion of Afghanistan?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Americans eat more potatoes than any other vegetable.

Wins Award In Biology

ECU News Bureau

E. Duke Whedbee Jr. of Ahoskie, graduate student in the East Carolilna University Department of Biology, is the first recipient of the James S. McDaniel Award for Excellence in Graduate Work in Biology.

The award was established earlier this academic year in recognition of the late Dr. McDaniel, who was chairperson of the biology department from 1974 until his death in 1978.

Whedbee's graduate research concerns behavior dynamics of winter blackbird roosts. He presented results of his studies at the annual meeting of the Association of Southeastern Biologists in Knoxville, Tenn. in April.

A graduate of Atlantic Christian College, Whedbee has done post-graduate study at N.C. State University and Queens College of the University of Melbourne, Australia. His studies in Australia were sponsored by a Rotary International fellowship.

The McDaniel award was presented by Dr. Susan J. McDaniel, widow of the late Dr. McDaniel, who is ECU's Associate Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs.

Wastewater Exams Planned

Examinations will be administered Thursday in four North Carolina cities to approximately 300 applicants seeking to become certified wastewater treatment plant operators.

Tests will be given at community or technical colleges in Greenville, Durham, Salisbury and Asheville, according to Robert Helms, director of the N.C. Division of Environmental Management.

In preparation for the examination, 220 indivjduals attended a week-long annual training school for plant operators in Chapel Hill last week. The school and tests are sponsored by the Wastewater Treatment Plant Operator Certification Commission.

Whitfield PTA Elects Officers

Members of the G.R. Whitfield School PTA have elected William Handley to serve as their president for the 1981-82 school year.

Other officers elected at the last meeting of this school year were Betsy Wendling, vice president; Joyce McRoy, secretary, and Brenda Hawkins, treasurer.

Outgoing president Nora Gatlin presided at the meeting last week. Principal Raymond Reddrick reported that redocoration of the school's media center and installation of 10 new air conditioners should be completed before the new school year begins. Both projects are being paid for from PTA funds.

Lynn Moore's String Concert provided entertainment, with students Whitfield and A.G. Cox Elementary School participating.

El Paso, Juarez, An Economic Pairing

BUSTLING DOWNTOWN — In a period when many downtown areas nationwide are dying, El Paso's central business district is thriving because of business from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico. (AP Laserphoto)

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — To outsiders, Juarez still evokes thoughts of quick divorces, gambling, drinking and scantily clad women at wild nightclubs. But to people in neighboring El Paso, Juarez is a partner in economic stability — the source of pesos that are welcome north of the border.

With no other major cities for nearly 300 miles, El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico have learned to depend on each other for commerce, creating an economic climate that is virtually oblivious to changes in the rest of the United States and Mexico.

"We're pretty isolated here," said Mark Miles, director of the El Paso Chamber of Commerce. "The nearest city is too far for much trade to go on. There is relatively little monetary connection between Juarez and Mexico. Very little comes into Juarez from the balance of Mexico."

The cities, with a combined population of about 1.5 million, form the second largest metropolitan area along the border. Juarez is larger, with nearly 1 million residents, and both cities are growing rapidly.

"We're really one big community separated by a stretch of water and some bridges," said Don Shuffstall of State National Bank, referring to the Rio Grande. "There are 70 million to 80 million bodies crossing the bridges here every year. More than 70 percent of the businesses in El Paso accept pesos. It's big business here."

A survey by business consultants Thomas F. Lee and Associates indicated Juarez residents spent nearly $90 million in El Paso in 1978. The survey said the average Juarez family made less than $270 a month then, and spent an average of nearly $30 in El Paso every week.

The retail industry gets most of those peso-dollars. Signs and most salesclerks are bilingual, and many pricetags are in both dollars and pesos. While downtown areas in other cities are decaying, El Paso bustles at all hours.

Sid Rosen, president of the Downtown Development Association Inc. and owner of two men's stores, said about 70 percent of the downtown customers are from Juarez. "Our salvation certainly has been the border," he added.

"Some of it has to do with price," said Juarez business leader Guillermo Ochoa. "Some of it has to do with availability and some of it has to do with variety."

To a lesser degree, dollars also flow into Juarez from El Paso.

A Chamber of Commerce survey this year showed more than 35 percent of El Paso residents visit Juarez regularly, spending a median amount of $17 per visit, mostly on food and liquor.

"Juarez has pretty well always been a net profit to El Paso," Miles said. "It's tended to be a bedroom community. They do their business in El Paso and live and sleep in Juarez..."

For U.S. citizens, crossing the border is generally merely a matter of waving at customs agents. Mexicans officially need documents to allow entry into Texas, but thousands cross illegally every day.

Retailers monitor government policies to keep the traffic and money flowing. Rosen said he and others fought for retention of temporary bridge crossing permits, which the government planned to discontinue. They convinced officials to keep issuing the permits, protecting El Paso's cheap labor pool.

Tourism once was the main business in Juarez, and visitors could buy cheap liquor, gamble, go to nightclubs or get a quick divorce. In an effort to change that image, Mexico banned rapid divorces and cleaned up much of the other activity.

Now, Juarez and El Paso jointly vie for convention trade and the new tourism pours millions of dollars into the area, said Bob Knight of the El Paso Convention Bureau. He said tourism in El Paso was up 19 percent last year.

Many U.S. companies have discovered labor-intensive work can be done as cheaply in Mexico as in Hong Kong or Taiwan, and in the past several years, 112 American companies have located plants in Juarez. The plants have had a big impact on Juarez' economy, Ochoa said.

Miles agreed, saying, "Before we had those plants, their best income was in the tourist business. They wiped out quickie divorces about the time they opened those manufacturing plants."

"In dollars, $2.7 million is dumped into the economy of Juarez each week via payroll," Ochoa said. "It's been estimated that 40 to 50 percent of that is going to the El Paso side for the purchase of goods and services. That's a million a week."

Shuffstall said the minimum wage in Mexico is about $8 a day, making it much cheaper to produce items like electronic parts south of the border. And U.S. companies can take raw materials and goods in and out of Mexico duty-free.

Robert Head, executive director of the El Paso Industrial Development Corp., said El Paso also is favored because of its Sun Belt location and large workforce. He agrees Juarez also is important.

"You can't be this close together without it having some effect," he said. "The more jobs there are in Juarez, the more pesos are put into El Paso. Anything that increases the attractiveness of either city will help both sides."

Some Perils Of Fashion Shoes

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Fashion shoes can lead to everything from back pain and leg cramps to muscle spasms and migraine headaches, say two industrial engineers at the University of Louisville's Speed Scientific School.

Susan Reed and Veronica Cline say their research indicates most fashion shoes don't accommodate the feet at all.

A good fitting shoe should have four charactistics, the engineers say:

—Heels no higher than 1½ inches;

—Broad, rounded toes that allow toes to remain in a natural position, prevent cramping and reduce the possibility of corns and bunions;

—Soles flexible enough to allow the foot to roll naturally from heel to toe;

—Materials that allow the foot to breathe, eliminating perspiration and odor.

Ms. Cline suggests buying shoes late in the day. "Since feet spread during the day, you'll be more likely to buy a shoe with the proper width."

"The idea is simple. People want to be independent and on their own. That's what The Albemarle does. It gives people independence and freedom from worry."
— Ruth Ballard

"To begin with, you've got security. That's the security of quality medical care right in your own home, from your own doctor, near your own hospital. And it's the security of knowing that the rescue squad, the fire department and police services are only moments away. It's simply the security of knowing that help, whenever you need it, is moments away.
"The Albemarle offers peaceful retirement living. You don't have to worry any more about the roof leaking, yard work, maintenance of your home, getting things down from the attic or finding someone to replace that bulb up there.
"One of the things that makes The Albemarle special is that you can continue going to your own church, clubs, golf games and other activities. You can continue the life you're living right now — except that you don't have to cook every meal, wash dishes or do spring cleaning. And because your future is secure, you're free to travel, spend money and do the things you've always dreamed about.
"A lot of people have worked hard to build and preserve Tarboro's heritage. We know that folks will appreciate the efforts that have gone into making Tarboro an All-American City, and into making The Albemarle part of our future. Tarboro is a very special place. And The Albemarle is simply quality retirement living with the assurance of tender loving life-time care."

Long-Time Pilot Remembers 41,000 Hours Flying Blimps

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI SHORES, Fla. (AP) — Confined to a wheelchair, Capt. Vernon Smith looks eastward to the horizon on the Atlantic, his blue eyes glistening as he remembers the many years he flew lighter-than-air ships.

"He still misses his blimps terribly," said his wife, Helene, who travelled with him during the 38 years he piloted airships for Goodyear, Tire & Rubber Co. and the U.S. Navy.

Smith, now 82, had amassed 41,000 hours in blimps when he retired in 1962 — more time than any other lighter-than-air pilot in the history of aviation.

Jack Barker, a Federal Aviation Administration official in Atlanta, recalls it was Smith who gave him his first blimp ride back in the early '50s.

"He is probably the best known blimp pilot in the world," said Barker.

Blimps have been an important part of his life since 1924 when he joined Goodyear's engineering school in Akron, Ohio, as part of the company's first blimp pilot class.

"In those days, Goodyear was the only one who had blimps," the Vincennes, Ind., native recalls. So little was known about them at that time that he flew with a temporary license issued by the then Bureau of Aeronautics. A couple years later, a federal airplane inspector, who knew nothing about blimps, was sent to Ohio to give him a flight test.

He's proud of his original license which is prominently displayed in a corner near the living room of his waterfront condominium. It's signed by Orville Wright.

His first ship was called the "Pilgrim" — a single-motor blimp which today holds a place of honor in the Smithsonian Institution.

Smith left Goodyear in 1939 to help the U.S. Navy train lighter-than-air pilots at Lakehurst, N.J. During his 10 years of active duty, Smith trained 2,780 blimp pilots and, over the years prepared 40 more for Goodyear.

He returned to Goodyear in 1949 while he remained in the Navy reserve for another 10 years to retire as a full captain.

For Goodyear, blimps are still being used in the company's advertising and public relations programs. They are also moved around the United States to provide the public with short rides for a modest fee.

The Smiths had no children, so Mrs. Smith accompanied her husband during the years of promotional tours driving the family car from city to city.

When Smith retired, his love affair with the skies did not wane, so he learned to fly fixed-wing aircraft at 64.

"He bought a small seaplane and he used to worry the daylights out of me by flying past the apartment to wave at me," Mrs. Smith said.

All flying came to an end for Smith when he reached 67. He developed Parkinson's disease and in 1976 broke his hip. The two ailments confine him to a wheelchair much of the time.

VETERAN PILOT — Capt. Vernon Smith, 82, confined to a wheelchair by Parkinson's disease and a broken hip, logged 41,000 hours in blimps during the 38 years he piloted airships for Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and the U.S. Navy.

Gamblers' Bus In Fatal Crash

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A "gambler's special" tour bus that was taking Los Angeles-area tourists between casinos apparently lost its brakes before it struck an automobile, killing three people and injuring about 30 others, police said.

Bus driver G.D. Spence told police his brakes went out as he was driving Monday on U.S. 50. Spence said he honked his horn repeatedly to warn drivers in his path, but he said he struck the car broadside when the bus rode through a red light.

Exhibit To Go On Road

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Phillips Collection of impressionist master works has announced plans to place 75 of its most important paintings in a traveling exhibition that will be seen in four major American museums during the next 18 months.

The exhibition, entitled "Impressionism and the Modern Vision", will open July 4 at the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco and remain there through Nov. 1. It will then move to the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts, Nov. 22, 1981-Feb. 16, 1982; the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, March 14-May 30, 1982; and the High Museum of Art, Atlanta, June 24-Sept. 6, 1982.

The paintings to be exhibited will be on view in their Washington museum until late May. The most famous painting in the group is Renoir's "The Luncheon of the Boating Party", considered by many experts to be the most important impressionist painting now in North America and perhaps Renoir's finest work.

Other masters whose works will be shown include Degas, Bonnard, El Greco, Goya, Cezanne, Daumier, Manet, Gauguin, Braque and Picasso, and post-impressionist Americans Dove, Marin, O'Keeffe, Motherwell, Pollock, and Diebenkorn.

Exploring A New Lead In Bank Heist

CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — It looked like the perfect crime: $1 million in cash smuggled so skillfully from the underground maximum-security vault of the First National Bank of Chicago that it was days before officials knew it was missing.

No solid leads materialized after the Columbus Day weekend robbery in 1977. No arrests ever were made. None of the money turned up — until 23 $100 bills confiscated during a Georgia cocaine bust early this month were traced to the 3½-year-old heist.

Now the FBI hopes the lead will help crack the case. "It is the only basic thing we've had to work on since the robbery," said Anthony DeLorenzo, an FBI spokesman in Chicago.

The bank was closed and employees worked storing cash deliveries for the opening of business over that Columbus Day weekend when precisely $1 million in $50 and $100 bills was removed from a locked money cart near the vault. How the 80 pounds of currency was smuggled out has remained a matter of speculation, and where it went, a mystery.

When the loss was discovered, bank officials thought it was a bookkeeping error. By the time it was reported missing to police and federal agents four days later, the trail was stale.

But early in May, authorities who seized $15,000 in a drug raid discovered that slightly more than a score of $100 bills was part of the stolen money.

Five men, including three Peruvian nationals, were arrested in Savannah, Ga. on drug charges. The bank bills were found on one of those arrested, Fred O. Brooks, 41, who once lived in the Chicago suburb of Justice, DeLorenzo said.

Now a resident of Hallandale, Fla., Brooks never worked for the bank and has refused to tell authorities where he got the money, DeLorenzo said. He has not been charged in connection with the bank robbery.

"The main thrust of our investigation now is what trail the bills took, and, frankly, it may produce nothing," he said. "But it is the only basic thing we've had to work on since the robbery. Conceivably, the bills could have been gotten legitimately, like from cashing a check at a bank. We don't know if we are in a blind alley or not at this time."

Authorities are working against time. The statute of limitations expires in October 1982. After that, no criminal charges can be lodged and the thief will be home free.

The FBI, as part of its investigation, is "playing cat-and-mouse" with a former bank employee who is still being kept under part-time surveillance, DeLorenzo said.

The man, who has no criminal record, lives with his wife and children outside Chicago, he said. He had access to the money, according to the FBI. He was fired when he refused to take a lie detector test that more than 50 other employees took and passed.

William Baldwin, spokesman for the Chicago bank, among the nation's largest, said no comment can be made as the investigation proceeds. The money has been written off as lost, he said.

"Our insurance covered thefts of any amount over $1 million, and precisely $1 million was taken," he said.

"A reward of $100,000 still stands for information leading to an arrest and conviction. And there is an additional reward equaling 10 percent of any money recovered," Baldwin said.

Investigators hope an informer will appear, but there is no sign of one.

CHEAP ASIAN LABOR

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — British scientists have recruited cheap Asian labor to help them salvage a 16th century warship in the English Channel, London newspapers report. The "workers" are 20 Japanese carp who will eat organisms that might breed in the water and attack the timbers.

How Tar Heel Senators, Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes May 14-20.

HOUSE

A FEDERAL COMMISSION — By a vote of 165 for and 231 against, the House defeated a bill (HR 2979) keeping the National Historical Publications and Records Commission alive for the next two fiscal years on a budget of $3 million annually. The 37-year-old panel makes grants to state and local agencies and non-profit groups for preserving records and issuing historical publications.

Supporter Jack Brooks, D-Tex., said "they lose this kind of money through the cracks in the Pentagon every day."

Opponent John Rousselot, R-Calif., said private sources should be able to fund the commission's work. He asked: "Why is it necessary to take this out of the federal Treasury?"

Members voting "yea" wanted public funding to keep the commission in existence during fiscal years 1982 and 1983.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, and W.G. Hefner, D-8, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Charles Whitley, D-3, Eugene Johnston, R-6, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "nay."

JUNKYARD DOGS — The House passed, 334 for and 65 against, and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 2098) creating the office of inspector general at Defense, Justice and Treasury and the Agency for International Development. This would bring to 20 the number of inspectors general, whose job is to probe fraud and waste within their agencies.

The bill was passed under a short-cut parliamentary rule and some opponents objected to this procedure rather than the substance of the measure.

Supporter Jack Brooks, D.-Tex., said of the Pentagon: "With a budget estimated at $1.65 trillion over the next five years, it has no one person with clear responsibility for coordinating the work of the 18,000 auditors and investigators functioning in scattered offices throughout the department."

Opponent Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., said the bill was opposed by the Pentagon because the Secretary of Defense "cannot direct or control (the inspector general) within his department or even keep him out of highly classified contingency planning matters."

Members voting "yea" wanted four more inspectors general in the executive branch.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Johnston voted "nay."

FY 82 BUDGET — By a vote of 244 for and 155 against, the House gave final congressional approval to the conference report on the fiscal 1982 budget resolution. The measure (S Con Res 115) will guide the House and Senate in votes on spending bills. It limits outlays at $695.45 billion, anticipates revenues of $657.8 billion, and projects a deficit of $37.65 billion.

Supporter Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, said "I urge this body to approve this ... then get on with the next important job ... namely that of bringing federal spending under control."

Opponent Ron Paul, R-Tex., said the budget plan is too extravagant because his arithmetic shows that after 1982 the national debt will be pushed "to the astronomical figure" of about $1.1 trillion.

Members voting "yea" favored the fiscal 1982 budget blueprint, which is supported by the Reagan Administration.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhilll and Hendon voted "yea."

SENATE

DEFENSE CUT — By a vote of 66 for and 29 against, the Senate killed an amendment cutting $200 million from the Pentagon's fiscal 1982 allocation for operations and maintenance. Proponents of the amendment said the money could be trimmed from operations such as janitorial services, photography and record-keeping, but opponents said the military would have to reduce combat readiness.

The amendment was offered to a defense procurement bill (S 815) later passed and sent to the House.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who favored killing the amendment, said "these are the very innards, the very wheels, the nuts and bolts that make the program move."

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., sponsor of the amendment, said that were it adopted "we would not be hurting our military preparedness one iota."

Senators voting "yea" opposed the spending cut.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

FOREST CHIEF — The Senate confirmed, 72 for and 25 against, President Reagan's nomination of John B. Crowell Jr. of Oregon as assistant secretary of Agriculture for Natural Resources and Environment.

The nomination drew more "nay" votes than any Reagan appointment thus far, primarily because some senators alleged conflict between Crowell's new responsibility managing national forests and his previous job as general counsel for a major purchaser of federal timber. There were also suggestions that Crowell was implicated in an Alaska anti-trust case concerning logging in a national forest.

Supporter Jesse Helms, R-N.C., called Crowell's opponents "a very small but very vocal group of self-styled, so-called preservationists" who oppose multiple-use management of national forests.

Opponent Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said that at least seven times Crowell "was significantly involved in occurrences, negotiations and contracts found by the court to be violations of anti-trust laws."

Senators voting "yea" favored Crowell's appointment.

East and Helms voted "yea."

SOCIAL SECURITY — In essentially a party-line vote, the Senate killed 49 for and 48 against, an amendment expressing opposition to the Reagan Administration's proposed cuts in Social Security benefits. Later, the Senate unanimously adopted a milder resolution implying opposition to the president's plan to reduce some benefits to early retirees. The amendment was offered to a fiscal 1981 appropriations bill (HR 3512) later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., who favored killing the amendment, accused Democrats of seeking to embarrass the Administration and warned, "that is not going to save the Social Security System."

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who supported the amendment, said: "The president's election was not a mandate to tear up the government's solemn commitment to those about to retire."

Senators voting "yea" opposed the stronger language condemning the Administration plan.

East and Helms voted "yea."

Monastery Built, But Need Monks

By OLE DUUS
Associated Press Writer

RINGKOEBING, Denmark (AP) — For 10 years, the monastery that was the dream and the handiwork of the Rev. Haakon Rabjerg has been standing virtually empty on a windswept hillside, waiting for monks.

None have answered Rabjerg's invitation for Christian men prepared for a life of "piety, frugality and diligence" to join him at the Monastery of the Holy Cross.

But the retired Lutheran vicar, who built the monastery mostly with his own hands — including the refectory, the chapel and the 40 cells — still has faith that one day the monks will come.

"God called me to build this monastery, and God will also send me monks," the 72-year-old clergyman said.

They would become the first cloistered monks in Denmark since the 16th century Protestant reformation signaled the closing of Roman Catholic monasteries in the country.

The Monastery of the Holy Cross, not far from the chilly surf of the North Sea in western Jutland, is a rather bleak place in winter. But it is beautiful in summer, when the skylark alone disturbs the serenity of the 30 acres of heather and evergreens.

Yet, Rabjerg and his wife remain the sole permanent residents of the monastery built on land bought cheaply in 1957 with the savings out of a vicar's modest pay.

Many local residents shook their heads at Rabjerg's idea. But many also offered money and their labor as the vicar set out to follow what he perceived as God's calling, salvaging bricks from demolished houses and gathering boulders.

Scornful of modern ecclesiastic architecture, he erected a chapel in quasi-Gothic style and a one-story monastery with 40 cells ringing a quadrangular courtyard and strongly reminiscent of a traditional Danish farm.

Local tax authorities recently assessed the real estate value of Denmark's only privately owned church and monastery at about $100,000. Although he feels no worldly standards should be applied, Rabjerg thinks his creation is worth at least 10 times that.

The absence of monks does not give him cause for undue worry.

"They'll come," he said. "Otherwise I would have been given a meaningless task, and God does not do that."

Indignantly denying rumors that he recently turned to newspaper ads here and abroad in efforts to recruit monks, Rabjerg said he relies on God, word-of-mouth, and the free publicity offered by newsmen "including those who tend to write me up as a crackpot."

But the former vicar, who spent some time in a Benedictine monastery in Belgium, admits there are problems in launching a monastery from scratch, with no ties to any established religious order.

Pondering monastic rules in his dusty, book-lined attic study, with four goldfish in a bowl for his only company, the prospective prior came to the conclusion that the Monastery of the Holy Cross should be Evangelic-Lutheran.

Yet, as an ardent ecumenist who expects the Protestant and Catholic churches to soon come together, he is prepared to accept brothers of various denominations and nationalities "as long as they are not fanatics."

A man of tolerance and compromise, Rabjerg would not insist that a brother take the vows for life, but would accept a kind of "contract monks," signing up for a number of years, "because everyone is entitled to a change of mind."

He is flexible on celibacy, too, but insists this has nothing to do with his own marriage.

"At my age, celibacy is no great problem," he said.

But he would still recommend celibacy as the most practical thing for monks, "what with all the distraction and expense in providing for a wife or somehow accommodating her here."

Society Has A Dream Of Space Life

By ANDREW ZIPSER
The Phoenix Gazette

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The lacework of girders, struts and cables twisted in the solar wind, a fragile spider's web waiting for its cosmic prey.

Reflected sunlight glinted from the massive array, here where night is eternal, where there is no air to tarnish metal. The only sign of life to mar the cold and gleaming symmetry was an occasional workman drifting by in studied silence.

The first sign of what was about to happen could be seen out beyond imperial Jupiter, where the stars began to wink out of existence. One by one the flecks of light disappeared, a blackness swelling to the size of a mountain, to a small world. Bearing down on the space station like an iceberg on a collision course with the Titanic, the asteroid suddenly blossomed into flame.

Fingers of fire licked out at space. First one and then another torch stabbed at the stars with a dazzling brilliance. The massive rock slowed, wavered, became a moon for the small colony drifting above the earth's surface.

The web had snared its first victim. For this day and for months to come the asteroid would be drilled, blasted and carved into manageable chunks of ore. As the Old World had once sent Spanish galleons to the New for its treasures of gold and silver, so a metal-hungry world was about to enrich itself with the bounty of the heavens.

The final frontier had been breached.

For the 4,100 members of the L-5 Society headquartered in Tucson, the above scenario is not only possible but inevitable.

Space is the final frontier, they say.

"In the long run — I'm talking 50 or 60 years or more — that's where everyone's going to live because we'll be able to build in space cheaper than we can build here," Keith Henson says. "There are a whole lot of things going on in space that are potential moneymakers — the solar system is just chock full of resources."

Henson and his wife, Carolyn, are among the dozen or so visionaries who founded the L-5 Society in 1975, following the first Princeton Conference on Space Settlements. The U.S. space effort was then at an ebb, the flush of success brought on by the moon landings only a warm memory. For the conference participants, however, such setbacks were only temporary detours in the conquest of space.

From that meager beginning, the society has spread to more than 60 chapters throughout the United States, drawing its members from all walks of life. Its board of directors includes such diverse notables as Sen. Barry Goldwater, science fiction authors Robert Heinlein and Jerry Pournelle and former NASA Administrator Dr. Thomas O. Paine, a direct descendant of the revolutionary leader.

Coordinating its efforts from a converted, cinder-block apartment not far from the University of Arizona, the society seeks to educate the public "to the benefits of exploring space," Henson says.

Among its efforts are a slick monthly magazine, L-5 News, a lobbyist in Washington, D.C., and a nationwide phone tree for mobilizing grass-roots support for space exploration. Local chapters hold regular meetings, sponsor seminars for the public and show NASA films. Some publish newsletters of their own.

Paperware Is A Big Business

NEW YORK (AP) — Paperware is a $600 million business, although 40 percent of U.S. consumers never, or only occasionally, use paper plates and cups, according to studies by St. Regis Consumer Products, a paperware manufacturer.

Novelty King Of Prison Is In Business

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A year has gone by since the state pinned the tag of "novelty king" on Aaron "Jack the Griz" Harrelson, bringing him instant notoriety as an inmate boss at Maine State Prison.

Now free and running his own business, Harrelson is using that title as he picks up where he left off behind bars — manufacturing and selling handcrafted wood furniture and novelties.

Business cards and letterheads for his Nautical Crafts Inc. of Waldoboro identify him as "Maine's novelty king," recalling last year's controversial "lockdown" at the maximum security prison in Thomaston.

Like any good businessman, "Jack the Griz" knows the value of name recognition.

"I'm using that. They gave me $21 million worth of free publicity," he said, a figure he derived from his latest lawsuit against the state.

Harrelson was in Portland not long ago, exhibiting his products at the four-day spring show put on by United Maine Craftsmen, which attracts dealers from throughout the Northeast.

The items, ranging from coat hooks retailing for $2 to custom-made coffee tables selling for $900, were displayed in Harrelson's motel room, where wholesale business was brisk.

"I got $50,000 worth of orders yesterday. I sold one dealer 200 of those," he said, pointing to one of his original designs, a ship's wheel and anchor mirror. "That's my pride and joy — It sells itself."

The novelties, many of them with a nautical flavor, are similar to the ones which Harrelson and his fellow prisoners used to manufacture for sale at the prison store.

The 51-year-old Harrelson, who completed his five-year sentence for aggravated assault last October, now has gone into competition with the state-run prison industries program, vowing to drive it out of business.

"I'm surrounding them like the Indians did Custer. But it isn't an ambush, because I'm telling them about it ahead of time," he said.

Located about 10 miles west of the prison, Nautical Crafts Inc. operates out of a leased two-story home that Harrelson converted into a workshop. As the business expands, he hopes to either put up a new building or redesign an existing one.

Harrelson, a born salesman with a speedy Carolina drawl, has eight people working for him, plus several outside subcontractors. He foresees a workforce of 50 to 60 and gross sales of at least $1 million by the end of his first year.

"There is no limit," he said. "I can sell as much as I can make."

But there's more to the business than just profits. Harrelson is giving top priority to training and hiring former prisoners, in much the same manner he did at Thomaston when he had more than 100 inmates turning out crafts for him.

When the state carried out its lockdown last spring, it cited the need to wrest control of the prison from powerful novelty kings like Harrelson, who was subsequently transferred to a federal penitentiary in Indiana to complete his sentence.

As Harrelson saw it, the corrections bureaucracy devised the lockdown as a way to pry more money out of a budget-minded Legislature and win support for a separate Department of Corrections.

A year earlier, Harrelson had joined three fellow prisoners in a class action suit against the state, alleging substandard conditions. The case is now being heard in U.S. District Court.

Following his transfer to federal prison, he filed his second suit, a $21 million damage claim against the state. He claimed he was transferred without due process and that prison administrators illegally confiscated his property, including woodworking supplies and 14 television sets he used as rentals.

Vienna Will Put Subway Heat To Use

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA (AP) — By year's end Vienna is slated to become the world's first city to heat buildings solely with the hot air from its subway system.

Vienna is scheduled to open this fall a 250-square-meter police precinct that officials say will get all its heat and hot water from a nearby tunnel and save the city eight tons of oil a year in the process.

"This is a unique project, and it may just be a touch of the future," says city engineer Hans Smetena, who is in charge of climate control for the city's three-year-old subway system.

If the experiment works well enough, the city will begin offering the subway systems as a secondary source of heating for private housing projects next year, municipal officials say. A 250-apartment housing project, scheduled to open next summer, could save its owners $7,900 a year through using subway-supplied supplementary heat, the engineers say.

At the current $1.60 per gallon price of heating oil here, the supplementary heating system would pay for itself in less than five years, according to municipal projections.

"The technology is there, it's just a matter of getting the attention of builders," Smetena says. "We'll have to prove to them that this is feasible for the future."

The system, Smetena explains, takes air from the warmest points in the subway tunnels and passes it through a compressor pump that further heats both the air and water flowing into the pump. The warm water is then passed in pipes and used as a heating source.

According to Smetena's calculations, the pumps can increase water temperatures enough for average private use.

"This subway heat is a source of energy that should please everyone," the engineer said. "It's cheap, renewable, locally supplied and safe for the environment."

City engineers say the heating project is not yet feasible elsewhere because in other cities temperatures in the subway tunnels vary too much with the seasons.

Vienna, with one of the newest subway systems among the world's major cities, keeps the temperature in its subway tunnels hovering around 65 degrees Fahrenheit with a complicated network of airshafts between tunnels, and leading from tunnels above ground.

Many of the shafts include large fans which keep the underground air circulating throughout the system.

Plans to use subway-supplied heat to warm two municipal swimming pools and two other housing projects in the near future are apparently already on the drawing boards.

The 14-mile Vienna subway system is scheduled to expand by 50 percent within the next few years, officials say. Construction for two extra subway lines is to start in 1982.

The compressor pumps, extra airshafts and other facilities needed for providing heat to homes will be built into the subway system as it expands during the next few years, engineers say.

Auto Crash Toll Tops Others

NEW YORK (UPI) — Auto crash deaths and injuries cost over $20 billion a year, or more than the total costs of either coronary heart disease or stroke. These costs include physicians' and hospital services, emergency assistance, drugs and rehabilitation and the indirect costs of lost productivity resulting from premature death or disability. This information is from a new study sponsored by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety and published by Lexington Books. The study compares the cost of four major killers: cancer, motor vehicle injuries, coronary heart disease and stroke.

Secrets Of Picasso Are Exhibited

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer

VENICE, Italy (AP) — A century after his birth, Pablo Picasso is outdrawing some of the major tourist sites of this lagoon city with 350 "secret" paintings and sculptures released by his granddaughter for a major exhibit.

The Spanish-born artist never visited Venice in his life. But the arrival of his works on the Grand Canal, sealed in vans aboard two barges and escorted by six launches packed by machine-gun toting police, has set off an art-lovers' controversy. Some of the thousands filing in to see the exhibit say they feel cheated and that the works are second-rate.

"While the Venice Exhibit does not intend to rival the posthumous Picasso shows at New York's Museum of Modern Art and in Paris, which more than one million persons lined up to see, we felt that the public had not seen all there was to see," said Giovanni Carandente, a leading Italian art historian who put the show together. "We wanted to show a different artist from the one we used to know, reveal the secrets of his workshop."

Until his death in 1973 at the age of 92, Picasso frequently scribbled on his works "ni faire voir, ni faire vendre" (French for "neither to see nor to sell"), confining many of them to the storeroom of his castle in Mougins, France, or with relatives.

Thus, hundreds of paintings, sketches, ceramics and sculptures accumulated dust for seven years while Picasso's descendants wrangled over the inheritance because the artist had not left a formal will.

Carandente, with the help of art dealer Jan Krugier, was able to convince Marina Ruiz, daughter of Picasso's late son Paulo to allow the exhibition of some of the 1,000 works she had in her possession. Two-thirds have never gone on view before.

After 86 days in Venice's renovated Palazzo Grassi, the exhibit will move in July to Munich, Cologne and Frankfurt in West Germany and to Zurich, Switzerland, before returning to Picasso's granddaughter.

Carandente has hinged much of the "Picasso 1895-1971" show around a heretofore neglected period in Picasso's career — his 1917-1918 trip to Italy with the famous Diaghilev Russian ballet, during which he fell in love with Olga Kokhlova, the ballerina daughter of a czarist general. Picasso later married her and she gave birth to his only son Paulo.

Italian painter Renato Guttuso, a long-time friend of Picasso's, recalls how Picasso was mesmerized by the Renaissance paintings of Raffaello at the Vatican, and deeply affected by a trip to the classical frescoes of the Roman city of Pompeii, near Naples.

Posting prints of Picasso's Renaissance-style paintings on nearby walls, Carandente has attempted to lay to rest Picasso's provocative 1935 comment that he would trade the entire body of Italian painting for the Dutch artist Vermeer from Delft.

Several Picasso prints show colors similar to Renaissance painter Fra Angelico. An anonymous 15th-century painting hanging in Palermo, Sicily, "The Triumph of Death" is shown as the probable inspiration for Picasso's "Guernica," hanging in New York's Museum of Modern Art which commemorates a Spanish civil war bombing.

Thousands have trooped to Venice to see the show since it opened more than three weeks ago, flooding through the gates at the rate of 70 per minute, or more than 20,000 a week, forming long lines around the palace. That rate is higher than visitors to the belltower of St. Marks's Square or the Doges' Palace.

But some art critics and visitors complain they have been taken for ride. They say there no major known works in the show, they find the many abstract portraits hard to understand and the cost of entrance — the equivalent of $4 — is high by local standards.

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered.
