House Demos Lean To Two-Year Tax Bill

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, pressured by the Reagan administration and conservatives in their own party, are moving reluctantly toward a two-year tax-cut plan but still insisting on extra relief for lower- and middle-income Americans.

"I hope we can fashion a program that can be enjoyed by all Democrats," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, told reporters Tuesday after a two-hour meeting of panel Democrats. "We're talking about the possibility of a multiyear tax bill."

However, Rostenkowski said, "There were no votes, no conclusions."

He added that Democrats "still are very concerned with working Americans and how we can target dollars" from a tax cut on those earning between $30,000 and $50,000 a year.

But apparently Democrats on the committee were close enough to a consensus that they scheduled another meeting this afternoon. That would follow a morning caucus of all House Democrats to discuss tax-cut legislation.

Rostenkowski and most other House Democrats have been cool to President Reagan's plans for a 10 percent reduction in tax rates for individuals in each of three consecutive years, with the cuts going to rich and poor alike regardless of income. Democrats have viewed a one-year tax reduction as holding less risk of worsening inflation and have urged proportionately more relief for those with incomes under $50,000 a year.

Deputy White House press secretary

Larry Speakes declined comment today on the Democratic search for a compromise.

"The president still thinks it should be a three-year proposal," Speakes said, but would be "willing to listen" to anything the Democrats might suggest.

Apparently not enough Democrats are committed to any plan to assure its passage in the House. There are at least three factions:

—Rostenkowski, the key figure in the House on tax matters, is trying to hammer out a compromise but not the three-year, 25 percent version endorsed by the White House. He met privately for lunch Tuesday with a varied group of Democrats and proposed — with no apparent success — a two-year, 15 percent cut.

"He came in here talking about a compromise for two years and he just got battered," said one liberal Democratic congressman.

But Rostenkowski apparently was more successful in the meeting with fellow Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee. Liberal Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., conceded something more than a one-year cut and less than Reagan's full three years is likely.

—Most House liberals oppose any multiyear tax cut. Many talk privately against any compromise, hoping that would force a direct vote on Reagan's original proposal. Such a vote, by most counts, would go against the president.

—A group of 47 conservatives, mainly Southerners, who gave Reagan the margin of victory in a crucial budget vote earlier this year, tried unsuccessfully Tuesday to reach a consensus on a tax-cut plan.

'Dramatic Improvement'

Best Test Scores Yet For Pitt Pupils

By MARY SCHULKEN

Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County students in grades 1-9 have shown "a dramatic improvement" in achievement test scores, Assistant Superintendent of Testing John McKnight told Board of Education members yesterday.

"The scores I am presenting to you today," said McKnight at the board's regular monthly meeting, "are the very best set of achievement test results Pitt County has ever had."

"In every area we are on or above grade level," he added. The results are as follows, with the first figure representing this year's average scores and the second representing the score of the same group last year:

— Reading — first grade, 1.9; second grade, 3.5, 1.8; third grade, 3.9, 3.2; fourth grade, 4.5, 3.7; fifth grade, 5.8, 4.5; sixth grade, 6.7, 5.7; seventh grade, 7.6, 6.4; eighth grade, 8.6, 7.3; ninth grade, 8.6, 8.0.

— Math — first grade, 2.5; second grade, 3.5, 2.3; third grade, 4.0, 3.3; fourth grade, 5.0, 3.9; fifth grade, 6.4, 4.8; sixth grade, 6.7, 5.7; seventh grade, 7.6, 6.4; eighth grade, 9.0, 7.5; ninth grade, 9.0, 8.4.

— Science — third grade, 4.2; fourth grade, 5.5, 4.2; fifth grade, 6.2, 4.9; sixth grade, 7.7, 5.9; seventh grade, 8.0, 6.9; eighth grade, 9.4, 7.5.

— Social Studies — third grade, 4.2; fourth grade, 5.2, 4.1; fifth grade, 6.2, 4.7; sixth grade, 7.6, 5.6; seventh grade, 8.2, 6.3; eighth grade, 9.5, 7.7.

— Total Language — third grade, 4.2; fourth grade, 5.5; fifth grade, 6.9, 4.7; sixth grade, 7.7, 6.4; seventh grade, 8.3; eighth grade, 9.5, 7.7; ninth grade, 9.6, 8.8.

"This set of figures shows, for example," explained McKnight, that over a period of four years, the same group has progressed from a math level of 2.2 in first grade to 3.3 in second grade, 3.9 in third grade and in fourth grade have attained a math level of 5.0."

According to McKnight, the Pitt County averages equal or exceed the regional, state and national averages. "I think we could take them anywhere in the United States and be proud of them," he noted.

The board also decided yesterday that funding for five vocational teaching positions is no longer available, and designated that positions will be terminated in two years based on course enrollment.

According to figures presented by Assistant Superintendent Carl Toot, based upon current course enrollment criteria, Farmville Central and North Pitt would lose one home economics teacher each, Bethel and G.R. Whitfield would both lose a vocational position, and one central office job placement position would be terminated. Three of these jobs could be absorbed elsewhere in the school system.

SIGN, TWO-TOILET DILEMMA

I planted my vegetable crops in the spring enthusiastic about another year's Farmers' Market. We'd been at Pitt Plaza last year and never had any trouble to speak of. This year the Farmers Market Association was urged to move its operation downtown and support those merchants. So we arranged to use the area adjacent to the Reade Circle-Dickinson Avenue intersection. At the last minute, we found out that there were going to be all kinds of restrictions, including the need to limit our number of sellers to 10 and provide a restroom for customers, though we weren't sure why since we had thought this was only for eating establishments. Now, to top it off, I have in hand a letter from Ronald R. Sewell, P. E., Director of Engineering/Inspections, saying, "You have two violations that must be corrected immediately upon receipt of this letter. The wooden sign that is located on the property is in violation of North Carolina State Building Code in that wooden signs are not allowed in the first fire district. This sign must be constructed of a noncombustible material. You are required to have a building permit to erect a sign within the City of Greenville."

"Also, per Table 922.2 of the North Carolina State Plumbing Code, you are required to have two toilets."

This is a fledgling cooperative venture. The rental toilet we're now providing is costing us $50 a month. Now they're asking us to rent two. And if our sign is such a fire hazard, what about all the real estate and other temporary signs I see in the downtown fire district that presumably is the same as ours? Whoever heard of a fire starting from a wooden sign out in the open, anyway!

I lived in Switzerland for some time and saw booming farmers' markets in every village. Why must American cities like Greenville keep on squelching free enterprise and human cooperative effort with such bureaucratic regulation and nonsense? If we make it till next year, we'll no doubt have to operate outside the city limits. Andy McLawhorn, Pres., Farmers' Market Association.

Ron Sewell said it's his opinion that the city has bent over backwards to allow the special use by the Farmers' Market, but must not allow itself to be accused of selective enforcement of codes and laws. Because of trying for fairness, the city went to the N. C. Department of Insurance for an opinion, he said. After getting this opinion, he said, it was decided that the rental toilets would be all right, but there must be two.

Asked the reason, he said every business place employing more than eight persons must provide

New 'Commitments'

Renew Lebanon Fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Heavy Syrian-Christian fighting erupted anew today in Zahle, 30 miles east of Beirut, and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said that Israeli warplanes were committed to help the Christians against the Syrian air force in Lebanon.

Israeli gunboats shelled a Palestinian base 48 miles north of Beirut, reportedly destroying a building used by guerrillas but causing no casualties, and pro-Soviet South Yemen decided to dispatch a token contingent of troops to Syria to bolster Syrian forces in the confrontation with Israel.

A police spokesman reported the renewed fighting in Zahle, and said the Syrians ringing the city and the Christian defenders each blamed the other for the fresh outbreak which shattered a nightlong cease-fire in the city of 200,000.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said the Syrians hammered Zahle with field artillery, multiple rocket launchers and tank cannons at a rate of 15 shells per minute, and claimed there were 20 casualties among the inhabitants in the first half-hour of the bombardment.

In Jerusalem, Begin told critics in Parliament that Israel committed its air force to help Lebanon's Christians Aug. 22, 1978 and again in April when the Christians in Zahle came under Syrian siege, and Syria moved surface-to-air missiles into Lebanon.

He said Israel sent an emissary to tell the Christian militiamen: "Stand fast. We will continue to aid you directly and indirectly...If the Christians are attacked by the Syrian air force, we will help you with our air force."

In Aden, the government of Marxist South Yemen said a token military force will be stationed permanently in Syria "to consolidate her steadfastness against the Israeli enemy." But the statement did not give the size of the force or the date of its departure.

The Israeli gunboat raid was the northernmost Israeli attack in Lebanon in two years. The Tel Aviv command said the boats returned safely after hitting a building used by the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine at the Naher el Bard River, about eight miles north of Tripoli.

One Rezoning Action Approved By Farmville's Commissioners

By CAROL TYER

Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Approval was given by the Farmville Commissioners last night for the rezoning of .86 of an acre of F.M. Davis Heirs property on the 264 Bypass from light industrial to highway business. But the board did not act on another Davis Heirs request for sewer service to the site which has been leased by a pizza company.

Action on the sewer service request was delayed till a call meeting to be held next Monday.

The rezoned land is located on the south side of U.S. 264 east of the McClung Ford building. W.A. Allen Jr. appeared before the board requesting that the town run sewer service approximately 1,335 feet from a serviceable sewer on U.S. 264. Board members indicated they might be more inclined to authorize running the service to the nearest property line of the site to the present end of the sewer service on the west side of McClung Ford. But no final decision was made. This matter has already been dealt with by the Utilities Committee, but it was submitted to the board without a recommendation. Town Administrator Bob Morgan said the board needs to set policy on such matters.

The board authorized town engineers to proceed with an N.C. Clean Water Grant application for funds to help extend a water main from its U.S. 258 well to Toddy, a community between Farmville and Fountain on 258. There was some discussion as to whether this action should be taken, since it will be expensive and, at first, will be serving only 11 households. But the town attorney told the board that the town has a legal and moral obligation to extend the service to these people, since the town well has lowered the water table in the area and affected individuals' wells.

A three-year contract was made for auditing services with Umphlett & Hatcher, CPA of Farmville. The decision to choose this firm over Vance B. Taylor, CPA, Inc., another local firm which has had the contract in the past few years, was made because Umphlett & Hatcher submitted all the information asked for in the bid request, while Taylor did not, committee members reported.

The board resolved that the town should join the North Carolina Interlocal Risk Management Agency Workers' Compensation Fund. Membership in this fund, organized by the N.C. League of Municipalities, will be a great improvement over the town's present self-insurance program, the board felt.

A resolution was adopted to accept a portion of Marlboro Forest subdivision for maintenance of Woodway Lane and the drainage ditches and the water and sewer lines serving it. The action was requested by Bill Clark Construction Company.

The board amended the Residential Improvement Policy of the Community Development Rehabilitation Program to reflect the current financial state of the residents. It is indicated that about 20 percent of the residents of the target area in need of housing rehab are able to participate financially to some extent. Guidelines are set up in the revised policy for participation based on income for both owner-occupied and rental units.

A request to amend the Farmville Thoroughfare Plan to make Acton Place rather than Perry Street a minor thoroughfare was referred to the Planning Board.

Action on a request by the town administrator to combine planning and Community Development duties into one director's position was delayed till a later meeting. This new position, if approved, would have three-fourths of the salary paid with CD funds and one-fourth with town funds. An intern working under the director would be paid half and half. Morgan said he foresees a $7,400 savings for the town by this action.

As permitted under G.S. 20-187, the board agreed to sell for $1 to Police Chief Ron Cooper the service gun used by Grover Bailey while he was on the police force. The chief says he will have the gun appropriately mounted and present it to Bailey in recognition of his years of service to the town.

A request by Rusty Duke to be reimbursed $1.90 extra for Highway Money Coffers Empty

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Department of Transportation is out of money, so there will be no bidding on state highway projects in June, highway officials said Tuesday.

Fifteen projects with an estimated cost of $5.4 million will be affected, officials said.

"We've run out of money for construction and don't have enough left for maintenance to justify awarding contracts," said Highway Administrator Billy Rose.

Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw ordered the move because the Highway Fund is declining under inflation and reduced motor fuel tax collections, he said. Bradshaw could not be reached for comment.

Rose said this was the first time in his memory that contract letting was canceled, although in July 1980 it was delayed for technical reasons.

Normally, DOT opens bids on contracts on the first Monday of the month, with awards coming on the second Friday of the succeeding month.

Even if Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed 3-cents-per-gallon gasoline tax is approved by the Legislature, Rose said, there would be enough funds only for maintenance and to match a reduced amount of federal construction aid during the 1981-83 biennium.

Hunt proposed the tax increase as part of an $187 million package designed to bail out the Highway Fund.

Senate Plans Final Vote On Gas Tax Increase

By WILLIAM M. WELCH

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Senate prepared to vote a final time today on Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed gasoline tax increase after giving the measure preliminary approval in a vote Hunt said showed "vision and courage."

Hunt supporters said they were confident of hanging on to most of the votes they held when 33 senators voted to give the measure tentative approval on Tuesday. Seventeen senators opposed the bill, with seven Democrats joining the Senate's 10 Republicans in dissenting.

If approved today, the bill will go on to the House.

"The members showed vision and courage in voting for a measure that will help North Carolina keep building our economy and attracting good jobs," Hunt said.

The bill would raise state gasoline taxes by 3 cents, to 12 1/2 cents per gallon. It also raises highway related fees and transfers auto-parts sales taxes to highway uses and is aimed at generating some $187 million in new revenue for the Department of Transportation.

Also included is a personal income tax rebate of up to $22.50 per driver to partially offset the higher tax burden.

The Senate vote came after lawmakers brushed aside a move to replace the gasoline tax increase with a new levy on tobacco.

The amendment was offered by Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, to levy a new 2-cent-per-pack tax on all cigarettes manufactured in North Carolina, producing an estimated $325 million.

The Senate voted 37-11 to table — or effectively kill — her amendment. The amendment was identical to a bill sponsored by Gray and before Senate Finance Committee, but Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green ruled as presiding officer of the Senate that the vote on the amendment has the effect of also tabling her bill.

Her amendment would have replaced North Carolina's lowest-in-the-nation sales tax on cigarette, 2 cents per pack, with the broader manufacturers' levy.

"It places a tax on a commodity where people have a choice," Mrs. Gray said.

But the sponsor of Hunt's tax bill, Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, made the motion to table Mrs. Gray's amendment, calling it "absolutely absurd."

While Republicans voted in a bloc against the bill, one GOP lawmaker suggested during long debate that involvement of the Congressional Club in the campaign against the gas tax increase may have hurt opponents' chances in the Senate. The club, a conservative political organization built around GOP Sen. Jesse Helms, has financed radio and television advertising against the tax.

"Some of you are going to use those Congressional Club ads as a reason to vote for this package when otherwise you would like to vote against it," said Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell. "I would hope you won't vote that way."

Sen. Jim Garrison, D-Stanley, told legislators not to worry about political fallout and said the predicted voter reaction did not materialize the last time the gas tax was increased, in 1969.

Trades Collards For Mousses

This feature is used with the express permission of the writer and the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

By NANCY FINCH
A Westhampton College senior, Joan Abernathy grew up in Ayden, N.C. knowing a lot more about barbecue and collards than she did about croissants, madeleines and Grand Marnier mousses.

At 20, in fact, she isn't even old enough to buy the Grand Marnier that she keeps stashed with her "cooking things" for her explorations in borrowed Richmond kitchens. But, her mother obliged and bought some of the elegant French orange liqueur and brandy for her daughter to pursue her passion — gourmet cooking.

Miss Abernathy, with an absolutely velvet smooth peaches and cream complexion and lively brown eyes, is not the ordinary pizza and tuna college cook.

She'll graduate from Westhampton with a bachelor of arts degree this summer and head straight for a kitchen because cooking is all she has ever wanted to do.

"I started cooking at about 10. I cooked dinner all through high school," she said. Her parents own a "sort of variety-department store" in Ayden. "It isn't a Woolworth's but it sure isn't any Miller & Rhodes. My granddaddy started it."

Since her mother worked at the store, Miss Abernathy started out by helping her older sisters cook ("I did the dirty work") and then she progressed to cooking. She started out with Southern Living, "but now I've graduated to Gourmet." She's been taking the fancy cooking magazine and cooking from it long enough to give herself quite an education in cooking.

"This boy I worked with last summer at the Hilton (in Williamsburg) who'd been to CIA (Culinary Institute of America) thought he knew so much. I knew more than he did."

Miss Abernathy has tried determinedly to learn as much about food as possible. She took a summer course in home economics at nearby East Carolina University in Greenville. She was bored to tears. "I finally went to the professor and asked her if there weren't something else I could do. She suggested I might want to be a dietitian. I didn't want to be a dietitian. I wanted to be a creative cook."

Next she tried to get a job cooking or in the kitchens, at least, in Colonial Williamsburg. She struggled through ups and downs as she'd first get some encouragement and then have her hopes dashed by someone else in Williamsburg.

Finally, she got a job as assistant hostess at the Williamsburg Hilton. "I hung around the kitchen as much as possible," she said. And, for one of her biggest thrills, she got to wear a chef's hat while she decorated some cakes for the hotel. She had studied cake decorating at a Richmond department store at night while at Westhampton.

She also hung around the kitchen long enough to sagely observe of chefs. "They really have egos, don't they?"

Next she went to see Chef Heinz Enggist of the Commonwealth Club and head of the Virginia Chefs Association's culinary apprentice program. "He was real nice," she said. Then she visited Chef Laslo Nyuli at the Country Club of Virginia and Chef Otto Bernet at Le Chef. "You have to be real nose if you want to get anything done," she said as she told her story rapid-fire, non-stop.

Last fall, when she read of classes to be held in Maryland under the authority of the LaVerne cooking school from France, she called her mother and posed the big question, could she go? And, yes, it would be expensive.

Her mom didn't mind the money so much, but sending her 20-year-old daughter off to the wilds of Washington for three days by herself? No way. Her daughter quickly remembered a friend in the Washington area whom she thought might put her up. It was arranged and she attended the school.

Joan Abernathy's biggest dream is "to give dinner parties." She thinks that sounds immensely elegant, charming, challenging and fun. "People don't give dinner parties in Ayden (population about 4,000)," she explained.

She has already taken on one dinner party for a Richmond widower who wanted to entertain with a dinner in his home. "I loved it. I dug out all his linens and things to set the table." Then she prepared a meal for the guests.

A visit to France, a high school graduation gift from her parents, just spurred her on. She says she spent most of her time eating.

After some encouragement from the chef of the Country Club of Virginia, but no firm offer, she has accepted a job as assistant of manager of the Engineers' Club. "In a way it is a real compromise (over going into a culinary apprentice program), but I think it may be better — if I ever have my own place or go into catering."

Baking and making sweets is her main interest and the reason she attended the LaVerne classes taught by Albert Jaurant. She learned to make puff pastry, brioche and croissants. "I'd made croissants before, except I tried to make them in the summer and that's really a mistake in Eastern North Carolina.

Meanwhile, she and a friend, Lisa Chandler are looking at apartments. Her friend, Miss Chandler, laughed and said, "I ask, 'Where's the pool?' and she asks, 'How big is the kitchen?'"

On a recent Saturday afternoon when the warm spring sun had college campuses covered with bare bodies getting rid of winter pallor, Joan Abernathy had the tempting aromas traveling on the light breezes from the open windows and doors of her borrowed kitchen.

She was happily whipping up her own version of a mousse she had mastered in Gourmet. She fashioned it into a Grand Marnier mousse. She had already made dainty madeleines the night before as well as candied peel. Tiny, fragile individual cheesecakes and a larger cheesecake were in the oven.

Candied orange and grapefruit peel is one of her favorite things to make because it is economical. "You're using something you'd ordinarily throw away."

And she likes the tart, refreshing taste of peel. Besides, she has found the colorful strips make excellent garnishes.

This is how Joan Abernathy makes peel, which she highly recommends during anytime of year. And she points out, it is much cheaper to make your own holiday baking. She says to forget making lime peel, however. "I tried it and it

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I am sick of hearing there are no more heroes or heroines left in this world.

They're here all right. We just never take the time to acknowledge and to appreciate them.

There isn't a day goes by that I don't kneel in my kitchen and give thanks to those courageous men and women of vision who have provided me with better living through push buttons.

Thank you, Marie Engle Pennington, who pioneered research that later contributed to frozen foods.

God bless you, Eleanor Roosevelt, who publicly stated that she never gave more than 15 minutes a day to keeping house.

To Inga Marshall goes our undying gratitude for being the first mother to discover that if you took the bean out of a whistle, the child could no longer blow it in your ear and make you sterile.

Our thanks to Ma Bell, who has brought families together through a common sharing of "Final Notice Of Payment Before Your Phone Is Disconnected."

Let us not overlook Letitia Armstrong, who torched a girdle factory in 1962 and is being considered for canonization.

Ah, how soon you forget the legends who brought us self-cleaning ovens, hair coloring, electric brooms, the overblouse and twin beds.

But the man I would like to honor today is Herman Goldstein, a chemist with Sun Chemical Company in South Carolina who, in 1962, made a breakthrough that was to change the lives of women everywhere ... when he discovered a formula for permanent press.

You all remember wrinkles. They were handed down from generation to generation like a recipe for Apple Brown Betty. Every Monday every woman in America washed and every Tuesday she ironed. And Wednesday. And Thursday. And Friday.

When we tired of pushing the iron back and forth, we resorted to strategy and cunning. "Are you going to take your coat off today?" Or "Give me a break. Roll up your sleeves just this once!"

Then came Mr. Goldstein and it was goodbye steam iron. Goodbye scorch marks. Goodbye pleated skirt blindness. Goodbye mildew and laundry stored in the refrigerator. Goodbye brown ironing cloths. We were free at last.

I think we should erect a giant ironing board memorial to Mr. Goldstein where every June 2, women would make a pilgrimage and place a cold iron on it, marking the day we really became liberated.

I have said this to only one man before in my life. I love you, Herman Goldstein.

Nine Congressmen On Anti-Abortion Hit List

WASHINGTON (AP) — An anti-abortion campaign committee said today it will double its budget for defeating pro-abortion candidates next year and released a list of the nine members of Congress it hopes to defeat.

Among those targeted by the National Pro-Life Political Action Committee is Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, even though he voted with the 52-43 majority in the May 15 Senate vote to deny Medicaid-financed abortions for low-income women who are the victims of rape or incest.

Others on the list are Sens. John Chafee, R-R.I., Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Harrison Williams D-N.J., and Reps. James Jones, D-Okla., Morris Udall, D-Ariz., Stephen Neal,

A spokesman for Chafee reacted with anger toward the announcement.

"The people of Rhode Island can make up their own mind without the help of these outside groups from Virginia," said Cleve Corlett, the senator's press secretary.

Peter Gemma, executive director of NPLPAC, headquartered in Falls Church, Va., said the organization intends to spend $250,000 this year getting ready for the 1982 election and up to $400,000 to defeat the candidates it opposes. In the 1980 election, the group spent $210,000.

"National Pro-Life PAC, by helping to defeat or elect highly visible leaders on this issue of abortion, frankly makes the lobbying and educational work with the politicians here in Washington a lot easier," Gemma said in a statement prepared for a news conference.

The Rev. Charles Fiore, a Roman Catholic priest from Chicago and chairman of the board of directors of the committee, said the anti-abortion movement is showing its muscle.

"The recent reversal of five senators on the federal funding for abortion vote on May 21 is highly significant to the pro-life movement," Fiore said. He said five Democratic senators — Minority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, Lloyd Benson of Texas, Howard Cannon of Nevada, Lawton Chiles of Florida and James Sasser of Tennessee — "voted for the most severe restrictions on abortion ever proposed," showing that "we're having a major impact nationwide."

The bidding:
 East South West North
 Pass Pass Pass 1♦
 Pass 1NT Pass 3NT
 Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Waste not, want not — but don't hold onto high cards unnecessarily. Consider this hand from the 1981 Israel Bridge Festival, reported by Britain's Martin Hoffman.

North's raise to three no trump was well reasoned, though somewhat aggressive with only 17 HCP. Since South could not bid a major suit over the one diamond opening, he surely held some length and strength in clubs. At most tables the jack of clubs was led and allowed to win the first trick. When West continued with the ten of clubs, declarer sluffed a diamond from the table, and won the king as East again played low. Next came four rounds of spades. East could afford to pitch a diamond on the third spade, but he was in trouble on the last round of the suit.

If East discarded a heart, declarer would win four heart tricks with the help of a finesse. But a club discard was no better. Declarer cashed the king of hearts, finessed the jack and took the ace. Now East was thrown on lead with the last heart. He could cash his remaining high club, but he was then forced to concede a trick to dummy's king of diamonds. That was the ninth trick for declarer.

When Israeli internationalist, Yeshayahu Levit, held the East cards, three no trump went down. On the second round of clubs Levit played the queen. Here, too, declarer won the king and reeled off four rounds of spades, but Levit had no discarding problems. He sluffed a low diamond and the ace of clubs! Now when he was thrown in with a heart he could exit with his low club to allow his partner to score two club tricks. The defenders still had a diamond trick to come for a one-trick set.

Pedestrian Deaths 'Low'

DETROIT (AP) — A University of Michigan study says the United States and Canada lead the world in having the lowest pedestrian death rates based on vehicle miles traveled.

Poland had the highest rate of all countries surveyed with 12.77 pedestrian deaths for every 100 million miles driven in 1977, according to the study, conducted for the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association by the university's Highway Safety Research Institute.

The study found there were 0.61 pedestrian deaths for every 100 million miles driven in the United States in 1977. In Canada, the rate was 0.79 per 100 million miles.

Road Tax Funds Needed

The governor's plan to produce additional highway funds to provide maintenance and improvements to the state's roads system has brought about a particularly unsavory opposition campaign.

Gov. Hunt has publically complained that the campaign is misleading. It certainly is.

There is nothing perfect about administration of the highways or the placement of them. We have complained as much as anyone over the years about heavy construction of highways, in sections where Republican opposition was strong, to the detriment of the East which was heavily supporting the controlling Democratic party.

Nevertheless the fact is that North Carolina has built an exceptional highway system over the years particularly tailored to the unique needs of our state. We have a good system of primary roads. Our secondary roads system has opened up, our rural areas, improving commerce and enhancing rural living.

Whatever warts there are on highway administration, we only have to look at our overall road system to see that somebody has been doing something right.

Furthermore it doesn't take a battery of accountants to recognize that cost of maintaining and building roads is soaring. This at the same time that gas tax revenues are showing distressing declines. To talk about a big percentage increase in the gas tax is misleading. The percentage of the cost of a gallon of gas is dramatically down, and the total dollars we are paying in gas taxes is down.

North Carolina taxpayers are noted for their common sense, and common sense tells us that, given that situation, there is no way we can continue to maintain the good roads which have played such an important part in making our state what it is, if we don't find additional revenues.

New Secretary Could Help

Howard N. Lee has announced he is leaving his post as secretary of natural resources and community development in the Hunt administration.

Lee's resignation is set for July 31.

Lee, who has been effective in politics, said that he is interested in the redrawing of the Congressional districts and what will be created.

While he would not say he intended to run for Congress, that is always a possibility.

Controversy has surrounded Lee's administration, and it is probably best of the administration of Gov. Hunt that he leave now. A new secretary will be appointed and the department will be reshaped early in this term.

The 'Quiet Diplomacy'

Among the words that are an anathema to the present administration are "human rights." They cause all sorts of unnecessary problems when we're dealing with the majority of our allies.

Ernest Lefever, who as of this writing, is still President Reagan's nominee for assistant secretary of State for human rights, has testified that the best way to approach the subject is through "quiet diplomacy." In other words, you don't want to make a big deal of political repression, torture, and government murders or you will embarrass a friendly power, and it will give its tear-gas business to somebody else.

This is how the new Reagan

"quiet diplomacy" could work:

"Your Excellency, can I speak to you in private?"

"Of course, Mr. Secretary. What can I do for you?"

"There is a nasty rumor go-

"The United States thinks you may have overreacted, particularly since the news of the destruction of the village has gotten into the American newspapers."

"That is because you don't have press censorship in your country as we do here. We know how the story got out and we have taken measures against the exiles in the United States who released it."

"Are you speaking about the assassination of the former editor of 'Corrida' in Washington last week?"

"Hush, Mr. Secretary, we may be bugged. I will (Please turn to Page 6)

The concept of congressional districts that split counties is gaining acceptance in the General Assembly. It is a disturbing trend.

North Carolina's 11 congressional districts may weave and meander, taking on all sorts of odd shapes, but they do follow county lines. That common rule has its advantages for all concerned.

Congressional districts that follow county lines are simpler for the voters to keep straight. Citizens know what county they live in (and pay taxes to), even if they don't know what township they live in. Local officials are able to work closely with their congressional representative on matters of national concern. Campaigning is simplified for candidates when districts follow county lines.

The splitting of counties between congressional districts has gained support from some well-intentioned supporters of 2nd District Congressman L.H. Fountain. The 2nd District is now short of the ideal population for a district (the state population divided 11 ways) by 4.86 percent or about 26,000 people.

Fountain's district seems destined to change, but some of the changes such as adding urban Durham County to the 2nd District are seen as politically hazardous to Fountain. Thus, it has been banded about that the rural eastern townships of Wake County be added to the 2nd District while the rest of the county remains in the 4th District.

That would maintain the 2nd District's rural characteristics, but it would not enhance political or governmental efficiency.

Other plans have been offered that would maintain the 2nd District's rural status while following county lines. One proposes dropping Orange County (mostly rural except around Chapel Hill) from the district while adding largely rural Alamance and Chatham counties. This plan also proposes a 4th District composed of Orange, Durham and Wake counties which would encompass the Research Triangle academic community into one district.

Some options exist that would maintain the character of the 2nd District while avoiding the crossing of county lines to attain an acceptable variation from the ideal number of citizens per district. These should be exhausted first before resorting to any split county plan.

Strength For Today

SIN IS BONDAGE

Cicero, the Roman statesman, in one of his writings warns men against giving themselves over to sensuality; for if they do, he says, they will be unable to think of anything else. But Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

Cicero advocated morality; Jesus set forth religion. The great Roman statesman told men what they should not do; Jesus told men what they should do. And he promised this reward — that if purity characterized their thoughts and acts, they would see God.

Sin has always been bondage. The people who sin think they are free, but they are slaves. No matter what the sin may be, once it gets into our lives it begins exercising over us a real and persistent domination.

And this process of gradually succumbing to sin may begin in lives as normal as our own. Morality is not strong enough to break that bondage. Only religion can do it. — Elisha Douglass

Chairman In Bad Position

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — In stubbornly battling against independent right-wing campaigns, Republican National Chairman Richard Richards is finding himself in a posture to be avoided by any leader of the party in power: at odds with the White House.

Under chief political aide Lyn Nofziger, the White House approves of hard-nosed campaigns conducted by the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC) and other right-wing groups. Their low-road campaigns assaulting Democratic candidates are viewed by Reagan aides as a way for Republican candidates to take the high road. Nevertheless, Richards blasted NCPAC and anybody else running campaigns independent of the party apparatus.

Nofziger tried to patch things up in a May 19 breakfast session between Richards and right-wing leaders. That only worsened relations when Richards refused to budge an inch, and an exasperated Nofziger had to adjourn the session with nothing accomplished. "I'm afraid Dick is just a little slow in getting the message," another White House aide told us.

Senate Feuding

A feud within the Senate Republican leadership burst into the open when Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, the majority whip, chewed out Sen. John Tower of Texas, the chairman of the GOP Policy Committee, in the Republican cloakroom.

Their encounter there was a spillover of the bitter debate on the supplemental appropriations bill. Stevens, as chairman of the defense appropriation subcommittee, was three times overridden as the Senate voted funds for nerve gas, for flight pay and for taking the battleship New Jersey out of mothballs. Leading the way in each case was Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Stevens, owner of one of Washington's worst tempers, stormed at Tower on the Senate floor and later raised the decibel level inside the cloakroom. Stevens shouted at Tower that since he had taken over defense appropriations, he might as well represent the Senate in the conference with the House. The incident signaled stormy days ahead in the Republican Senate on the defense debate.

Weicker's Revenge

Sen. Lowell Weicker, the liberal Republican maverick from Connecticut, is a pariah to many of his Senate colleagues and a probable primary loser for renomination next year, but is making Ronald Reagan pay while he is still in the Senate.

Weicker is keeping the Senate labor committee from approval of Reagan's block grant program for social welfare. Even if the administration coaxes support from another liberal Republican, Vermont's Sen. Robert Stafford, Weicker's "no" vote will keep the committee deadlocked at 8 to 8. The committee's Democrats, led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, are solidly arrayed against block grants.

A footnote: Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the committee's conservative chairman, has been trotting out all kinds of compromises designed to win over Stafford and Weicker. But that has only led to backstage criticism from conservative that Hatch is undercutting the president.

Anti-Gold Bug

"Gold bugs" eagerly awaiting President Reagan's appointment of public members to the congressionally mandated gold study commission will be devastated to learn that he intends to name as its chairman a dedicated enemy of the gold standard: Dr. Anna J. Schwartz.

Difficult Moments

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A proposed change in the law which would let adoptees and their biological mothers make contact is giving members of the North Carolina General Assembly some difficult moments. It is the most emotional item on the agenda for consideration, and is causing considerable soul-searching among concerned lawmakers.

There is no widespread public concern since most people aren't really involved. But thousands are. There is no pocketbook issue which would prompt overflow crowds demonstrating for or against.

It is, rather, an intensely personal matter which regardless of outcome will have profound impact on individuals.

Present law says that adoption records shall be forever sealed. That procedure protects the biological mother who gave up the child; protects the adoptive parents from an unwelcome intrusion; and the adoptee from possible traumatic findings and added rejection.

But times have changed. Many adoptees want to know their backgrounds, whatever the nature; not to establish a new family relationship, but to know. Given time, diligence, and money, the information can be found out even under the present law.

Change

So, requests to legislators for a change resulted in a study commission which is recommending that this procedure be established:

An adoptee having reached 21 years of age may place on file a signed form seeking information and possible contact. A biological mother may do the same. If both voluntarily do that, then state officials can arrange the exchange of information and open the way for contact.

Feelings are strong on both sides of this question. Indeed, there seem to be more legislators who truly don't know which way to vote than there are those who have their minds made up. Many say they won't really know until they have to push the button at the last minute.

ing around your capital that your troops wiped out an entire village, including men, women, and children."

"Not so loud, Mr. Secretary. Someone will hear you."

"I'll try to keep it down to a whisper."

"Good. Off the record, and not for attribution?"

"Of course. That's what quiet diplomacy is."

"The village was infested with Communist guerrillas, and we had to teach the people a lesson."

"Can I say something to you, that will not leave this room?"

"Of course, Mr. Secretary."

Inflation Picture Brightening

By CHET CURRIER

AP Business Writer NEW YORK (AP) — Day by day, the U.S. inflation outlook appears to be brightening.

The runaway rise in the price of oil has given way to spotty declines. Home prices, after years of double-digit increases, have levelled off in the past year and a half.

Late last week, the Department of Agriculture reported that farm prices declined in May for the fifth consecutive month. That news, while hardly cheering to farmers, did prompt USDA economists to lower their projections of the increase in retail food prices this year.

An index of commodity futures prices compiled by the Commodity Research Bureau Inc. has been in a steady decline since last November, falling about 14 percent in six months.

The dollar, meanwhile, has climbed in value against most leading foreign currencies. In theory at least, that means downward pressure on prices of goods from abroad.

The effects of all these developments have begun to show up in the consumer price index, which rose at single-digit annual rates in both March and April. A growing number of economists forecast more of the same in the months ahead.

Hopes have even begun to spring up that the decline of the inflation rate might gather momentum as it proceeds downhill. Whatever the faults of the consumer price index as a measure of inflation, analysts point out, it is important simply because it is so widely recognized.

Lower reported increases in the index, it is said, could well lead to a reduction of inflationary expectations, which are themselves an important contributor to the problem.

On a tangible level, smaller increases in the CPI would mean smaller cost-of-living increases in wages and benefits for many workers and pension recipients whose checks are pegged to the index.

The further one goes through the litany, the better and more persuasive it sounds. But a vocal group of skeptics cautions that it is a dubious, and maybe even dangerous, proposition to swallow whole just yet.

The roots of the inflation problem have had many years to grow, they point out. And even if this troublesome weed could be pulled up easily, the act of doing so might inflict a lot of damage on the surrounding garden.

One of Wall Street's most influential economists, Albert Wojnilower of First Boston Corp., argues that the nation must tackle a series of other basic problems successfully before lasting stability of prices can become a real possibility.

The revitalization of the military — one of the issues President Reagan campaigned hardest on — will require a heavy commitment of our resources. So will the much-discussed rebuilding of industrial America.

At the same time, the Federal Reserve is under great pressure to rein in the growth of the money supply to head off new surges in inflation.

Said Wojnilower in a recent speech to a management symposium in Switzerland: "Demand for real resources from the military and capital investment sectors will increase more than the public is willing to curtail its consumption and, even more importantly, more than can be financed under the monetary growth ceiling."

Thus, he argues, the conditions that lead to inflation — the desire to squeeze more benefits out of the economy than its real resources can supply — persist. The so-called "supply side" tactic of cutting taxes advocated by Reagan and his advisors, he contends, would not resolve that problem and could well make it worse.

Though Wojnilower is known as a pessimist, his view is not entirely bleak.

"If we can avoid simplistic but self-defeating 'solutions' to the various internal conflicts that have been mentioned," he concluded, "one may visualize a time not many years off when, to a significant extent, we will have rationalized government spending, will no longer be subject to blackmail through withholding of oil supplies or outrageous price increases, and might be approaching a crest in military outlay..."

"At that juncture, sizeable and sustained increases in our civilian living standard will become achievable. That will open opportunities for disinflation and financial stabilization that simply do not exist today."

CANDIED ORANGE OR GRAPEFRUIT PEEL

Remove peel from orange by quartering it, or removing fruit. Scrape as much white pulp off peel as possible. Then cut peel in slices, about 1/4-to-1/2- in width and whatever length you desire. Thick-skinned fruit works best.

Soak peel overnight in one tablespoon of salt and enough cold water to cover, and weight it down with a plate. Drain salt water the next day. Then cover peel with water and bring to a full boil. Drain. Cover with water again and bring to a boil. Do this three times.

Then add 2 cups sugar and 1/2 cup water and cook at a boil until the fruit is translucent, about one hour. In a small bowl, mix one teaspoon ground ginger and one cup granulated sugar. Lift the pieces of the peel from the pan and roll in the sugar-ginger mixture. Allow peel to dry on waxed paper. Then store in air-tight container. Will keep indefinitely.

Note: Cover in melted chocolate to make candies, if desired.

GRAND MARNIER-CHOCOLATE MOUSSE

9 ounces semi-sweet chocolate

1 cup butter
1/2 cup coffee or 1 tablespoon instant dissolved in 1/2 cup warm water
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
6 large egg yolks, lightly beaten
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup Grand Marnier
1 teaspoon (each) lemon and orange extract in 1/4 cup water
6 large egg whites
Pinch of salt
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar

Combine chocolate, butter, coffee and orange rind over low heat in double boiler. Stir until smooth and melted. Transfer to a large bowl and cool.

Combine egg yolks, sugar, Grand Marnier and extract mixture in top of double boiler. Beat with an electric mixer over simmering water until mixture falls in ribbons when lifted.

Beat egg whites with salt and cream of tartar until stiff peaks form. Fold egg yolk mixture into chocolate mixture. Gradually combine egg white mixture, folding gently, into chocolate mixture. Fill parfait glasses and chill. To serve, garnish with whipped cream and candied orange peel. Serves 12.

MADEINES

3/4 stick butter, clarified
2 large eggs
1/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon orange rind, finely grated

1 tablespoon orange juice
1/2 cup all purpose flour
Brush madeleine pan with butter and drain. (If you do not have molds, madeines may be made as drop cookies. Drop on sheet of foil and allow cookies to harden before removing from foil.) Combine eggs and sugar in small mixer bowl and beat with electric mixer until ribbons form (8 minutes or so). Sprinkle orange rind, juice and flour over the egg mixture, gradually, folding each in carefully. Pour the remaining butter over the mixture while folding it in, making sure no butter is left in the bottom of the bowl. Fill the buttered molds 2/3 full. Bake at 375 degrees in the lower part of the oven until they are light brown. Invert on a rack and cool. Dust with confectioners' sugar, if desired. Store in an air-tight container.

ic Research, Schwartz was co-author, with Milton Friedman, of "A Monetary History of the United States." Friedman is considered the most important anti-gold intellectual force affecting the administration, and long has sought to curb Reagan's pro-gold inclinations.

The Schwartz appointment is modified by the fact that another of Reagan's public appointments to the commission will be New York City businessman Lewis Lehrman, a major political and intellectual advocate of a return to the gold standard.

Senator vs. General
Gen. David Jones, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and a formidable Pentagon fighter, may have exercised those talents a little too vigorously in turning Sen. William Cohen of Maine into an enemy.

Jones, an Air Force officer, used an old Defense Department trick to counter Cohen's opposition to the proposed new CX transport plane: recruiting Maine Air National Guard officers to lobby Cohen. The senator's Washington office was inundated by telephone calls from the Maine airmen, who said they heard Cohen had been taken captive by the Navy.

That did not change Cohen's vote on the CX, but it did infuriate him. This could be bad news for Jones. A rising Republican force on the Senate Armed Services Committee, Cohen is chairman of the rapid deployment force subcommittee and a close adviser of Chairman John Tower.

whisper the answer into your ear ... Yes, that's the one." "Your Excellency, I'll say this as softly as I can, but the United States does not approve of foreign foul play on American soil. It violates our sovereignty and brings in the Justice Department. We were hoping you would not blow up any more of your opposition leaders in the U.S."

"We had no choice. The editor was giving our country a bad name."

"Please don't raise your voice, your Excellency. I would not want anyone to know we had this discussion. The only reason I brought up the assassination was that we want to modernize your army, and Congress might balk at military aid if your government was implicated in the killing. It's one thing to destroy a village in your own country, but it's another to carry your authoritarian policies to the United States."

"I don't understand you people. We are trying to fight communism and terrorism, and you make a big thing about blowing up a rotten editor in America. I thought your government's attitude towards human rights had changed."

"It has, Your Excellency. We don't care what you do as long as it's done quietly. All we ask is that you keep your atrocities under wraps, at least until we get your military aid approved by Congress."

"I suppose the next thing you'll be asking us to do is stop torturing nuns."

"We're not going to ask for the impossible. We don't want you to change your way of life. But we would prefer if you don't do it on television. There are still people in the United States who are trying to discredit our new human rights policy."

"I see your point. Can I tell my minister of interior about our conversation?"

floor for debate...they still have not decided which way to vote.

State Rep. Jim Hughes of Linville has wrestled with his concerns and is hoping to amend the proposal to satisfy a major concern — that while the new law would speak to rights of adoptees, and rights of biological mothers, it says nothing about adoptive parents who took a child, provided support and love, and raised the adoptee to adulthood. He would have the law require signed permission of the adoptive parents before information is exchanged, making this a three-way agreement. "I've looked and looked, and each time I find that I must come down on the side of the adoptive parents."

"We are breaking a contract made in good faith...we are making a law that breaks thousands of contracts," Hughes explains. He might add the potential for broken hearts.

Support

The fact that Hughes is a Republican and is getting solid support on his position from Democratic colleagues illustrates the absence of politics but presence of emotion in this matter.

As Martin Nesbitt of Asheville puts it: "The biological mother is not the one who took on the responsibility to raise the child...but we are saying she has more rights than parents who took the burden. I'm not sure we are doing the right thing...Period."

Harry Payne of Wrightsville Beach sums up the mood: "I'm gonna feel badly voting either way..." Supporters argue that these are not children, but adults, and that only those who can handle the situation would volunteer to seek contact.

Marvin Musselwhite of Raleigh, struggling with the issue, thinks a change now would violate thousands of past promises, and that letting the adoptive parents have a say relieves the pressure. Where there is a good relationship and no problems, the consent would be forthcoming, Musselwhite feels. Where trauma lurks in the past, consent would be held back. The solution, he believes, would be to require consent of adoptive parents on all past adoptions, but not require it in future ones in which those involved would understand that at age 21 the adoptee can initiate an opening of the records.

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — An armed band moved into a small town in northwestern Guatemala and mowed down dozens of villagers with submachine guns, killing 36 people and injuring at least six more, police report.

Authorities said just before the raid on San Mateo Ixtalan, 105 miles northwest of the capital on Monday, an armed group entered the town and painted anti-government slogans on the wall.

Police said it was not clear if the same band returned to do the shooting or if there were two different sets of men.

No group claimed responsibility for the killings. Rightist killer squads and leftist guerrillas have been responsible for hundreds of deaths each month in Guatemala. The leftists are trying to overthrow the military regime.

a 1:45 p.m. mishap on Dickinson Avenue, 30 feet west of the 14th Street intersection, involving a truck driven by Robert Lee Cox of Route 1, Vanceboro.

Investigators reported the truck jackknifed, causing the vehicle to collide with a utility pole. Damage was estimated at $2,000 to the truck and $500 to the pole.

Police reported a car driven by Charles Arrington of 118 Howard Cir., collided with a utility pole about 5:32 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth Street and Moye Boulevard, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to the car. No damage resulted to the pole.

A truck driven by William Monroe Stanley of Route 1,

Garner, and cars driven by Betty Pegram Sadler of Swan Quarter and Mona Lisa Clark of Route 5, Greenville, were involved in a 1:20 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 600 feet west of the Charles Street intersection.

Police, who said no damage resulted to the Clark car, set damage to the Stanley truck at $50 and estimated damage to the Sadler car at $1,000.

An estimated $400 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 6:36 p.m. collision on Charles Street, 15 feet west of the Forrest Hills Drive intersection.

Investigators, who identified the drivers involved as Connie Hodges Woolard of Branch's Estates, and Doris Tyndall Williams of 1607 East Wright Rd., charged Ms. Williams with failing to yield the right of way in connection with the mishap.

Varied N.C. Supreme Court Rulings

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A landlord must take a tenant who refuses to pay his rent to court before evicting him, the North Carolina Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

In other rulings Tuesday, the court declared that the state's annexation laws are constitutional, ruled in a negligence case and upheld a death sentence.

The court held that repossession for any reason against a tenant's will constitutes forcible entry, which is against state law.

Members of North Carolina Legal Services, which argued the case, joined the North Carolina Attorney General's Office in hailing the unanimous decision. The office had joined the suit as a "friend of the court" in support of the tenants' position.

Writing for the court, Chief Justice Joseph Branch said: "While a landlord is permitted (by common law) to use peaceful means to re-enter and take possession of leased premises subject to forfeiture, he may not do so against the will of the tenant."

"An objection by the tenant elevates the re-entry to a forcible one, and the landlord's sole lawful recourse at that time is to the courts," Branch wrote.

The ruling "offers a great deal of protection to a tenant as long as the tenant understands that if he objects, the landlord has to let him back in," said Leslie J. Winner, a staff attorney for Central Carolina Legal Services. "The problem is, it will be very difficult to educate tenants."

Annexation

Five Forsyth County couples had complained that Winston-Salem's Board of Aldermen had illegally moved to annex five sections of land in surrounding areas.

They charged that the annexation statute was "an unconstitutional delegation of authority to governing boards of municipalities without adequate standards and guidelines."

They also claimed that their rights to due process and equal protection had been violated because residents of annexed areas had no vote on the question of annexation.

But the court ruled that: "To suggest ... that inequality and injustice ... is inherent in the concept of forced annexation is to ignore reality. Annexation does not bring the burden of taxation without accompanying benefits."

"Fairness dictates that there comes a time when these residents must join in bearing the costs of those services," the justices wrote.

Negligence

The court also reversed a lower court decision that rejected charges of negligence against Lexington Memorial Hospital and five of its doctors.

Bobby Lee Easter died as the result of burns and other injuries suffered in a hotel fire in Lexington in November 1976.

Ruth W. Easter, the plaintiff in the case, argued that the hospital was negligent in its treatment and diagnosis. She also charged that Dr. James A. Cline was negligent in his diagnosis, treatment and failure to properly examine Easter.

A Davidson Superior Court judge ruled that neither the hospital nor the doctors were negligent. A Court of Appeals decision upheld the lower court decision, adding that evidence showed Cline never saw or treated Easter.

But testimony by hospital president Charles T. Frock contradicted evidence presented by Cline that he never saw Easter. It was eventually revealed that Cline assigned Dr. Lloyd D. Lohr, an obstetrician, to Easter.

Lohr testified that he had not had an occasion to treat any major burn patients.

"There is certainly an issue of fact as to whether ... defendant Cline exercised that degree of skill and knowledge ordinarily possessed by others of his profession and whether he used 'his best judgment in the treatment of the case,'" the court said.

The case was returned to the appeals court, which will then remand the case to Davidson County.

Death Penalty

The court upheld the death penalty in the case of Thurman Martin, convicted last year in the brutal slaying of his wife, Peggy, last July.

Martin allegedly shot his wife six times in the apartment of a neighbor. He was convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to die in the gas chamber.

Paramilitary Camps Banned

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — With the signature of Gov. William O'Neill, Connecticut has become the first state to outlaw paramilitary camps.

The measure, signed Tuesday and takes effect Oct. 1, is modeled on proposals by the Anti-Defamation League, an organization that fights anti-Semitism. It provides penalties of up to 10 years in prison and $5,000 in fines, and makes it a crime to "teach, train or take instruction in the use or manufacture of firearms, explosives or fire-producing devices for the purpose of carrying out violent public disturbances."

Says Air Force Bungled Cooke Charge

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Furious that the Air Force granted some kind of immunity, top Justice Department officials say it may take a judge to sort out whether they can prosecute a missile crewman accused of unauthorized contacts with the Soviet Embassy.

Justice Department sources said it would take a careful analysis of the Air Force's promises and might ultimately be up to a federal judge to decide whether the government can try 2nd Lt. Christopher M. Cooke in a civilian court.

Asked about the Air Force's unilateral decision to grant immunity, one Justice Department source said, "It was extremely ill-advised. Basically, they screwed up the case."

Capt. Virginia Pribyla, a spokeswoman for the Air Force, said military officials had no immediate comment on the Justice Department's criticism.

LT. C.M. COOKE

Cooke, 25, of Richmond, Va., has been in pretrial confinement at McConnell Air Force Base near Wichita, Kan., since being charged Friday with three counts of violating an Air Force regulation against unauthorized contact with representatives of a communist country. Specifically, Cooke is charged with visiting the Soviet Embassy here three times between December 1980 and May 1981.

The Justice Department has said it is investigating to see whether any civilian criminal charges, including espionage, should be brought against Cooke. If charged and convicted of espionage, Cooke could face up to life in prison.

Justice Department sources, who discussed the case on the condition they not be identified, gave this account:

The original evidence about Cooke's visits was developed by the FBI, which is known to maintain constant surveillance of the Soviet Embassy. The FBI referred the matter to the Air Force after it determined in March that it had evidence of an Air Force officer visiting the embassy.

From that point forward, the case was handled by the Air Force, including an interview with Cooke in May. Concerned about the security of its Titan intercontinental ballistic missiles, the Air Force at some point offered Cooke immunity in return for a full account of what he had done.

Department officials explained that federal law authorizes the attorney general to make grants of immunity. The attorney general can and has delegated that authority to the assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division.

However, the law provides that immunity can extend only to preventing the government from using any statements by a defendant against him or to develop a case against him. The defendant can be prosecuted on the basis of evidence obtained independently.

The department officials explained, however, that a prosecutor can make a promise of immunity without authorization and that such a promise may be enforceable in court. How a judge would view such a promise depends on the scope of the authority, the extent of the immunity promised, the cooperation of the defendant and other factors, they said.

One source said the Justice Department would have followed a procedure of soliciting the defendant's cooperation, testing his information against other sources and possibly with lie detectors, and promising only to let a judge know he had been cooperative.

One Justice Department source said, "The Air Force now wants to prosecute him because they claim he didn't tell the whole truth, but how can you tell that if you grant him immunity first?"

One Justice source said that the Air Force made its immunity decision without consulting anyone at the Justice Department. "If they've got a question about tanks, they ask the Army. If they've got a question about ships, they ask the Navy. Why, when they have a question about immunity, didn't they ask the Justice Department?"

The Justice Department sources said public disclosure of sensitive intelligence-gathering techniques would not have been a problem in prosecuting the case. "We could've protected their security and our security as well as the prosecutive interests," said one of the sources.

Cooke was second in command of a four-person missile crew which had access to the launching codes for Titan II intercontinental ballistic missiles in silos near McConnell Air Force Base.

Air Force officials said the launching codes were changed after Cooke's arrest, but added that they frequently are changed routinely.

Bethel Council Officially Opens Its Operations

Bob Griffin, chairman of the board of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce announced today that the Bethel Council of the county-wide Chamber has officially begun.

This week some interested citizens of Bethel met with staff members of the county Chamber to form their Council.

Bob Bowers, acting chairman for the Bethel Steering Committee of concerned businesses and citizens of Bethel, was in charge of the meeting that took place in the Bethel Elementary School.

The results of a Total Community Development meeting held on April 28 with representatives from the Bethel area were presented to those present at this called meeting. The new council was begun with over 20 firms and individuals making application to join the new council of the county Chamber.

The newly formed organization elected 12 of the members to be the initial board of directors. Those elected to serve are Bob Bowers, Ferrell L. Blount, Wayne Clark, James Dupree, Ramon Latham, Hal Manning, Tobie Timberlake, Glen White, William C. Whitehurst, William M. Whitehurst and Robert Young.

Griffin announced that the addition of the Bethel Council brings a total of three councils within the newly formed Chamber. The Greenville Council which last year voted to become a county-wide Chamber helped to form the Ayden Council in the early part of this year.

Griffin added that the ultimate goal of the county Chamber is to unify the business, professional and interested citizens of the county in promoting and protecting proper and orderly growth in each community and Pitt County.

The county Chamber staff will begin work immediately to help the Bethel Council implement its adopted Program of Work through volunteers from the Bethel Council membership.

For information concerning the Chamber's council's, contact Ed Walker at the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, 752-4101.

Shuttle Schedule Runs Into Budgetary Cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tight budgets and supply problems have forced the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to cut from 48 to 34 the number of space shuttle flights planned through 1985.

Dr. Stanley Weiss, associate administrator of NASA, said Tuesday that the "substantial decrease" in the shuttle program means that only 30 operational missions — plus three more test flights — will occur in the next four years.

Weiss said the rescheduling is necessary primarily for two reasons: budgets that keep the space agency from flying some of its scientific missions and delays in constructing and delivering a new, lightweight external fuel tank for the shuttle.

NASA officials said they had planned to use the new external fuel tank, which is 6,000 pounds lighter than the one flown on the Columbia, on 28 operational missions.

But these tanks, which contribute to better performance and payload, proved harder to make and assemble than anticipated, and eight will not be delivered on schedule, they said.

NASA officials met last week with private contractors and government agencies who have scheduled payloads on the shuttles and informed them of their revised flight times.

Weiss said some users are disturbed by the delays, but most were understanding and "pretty upbeat" about the shuttle program.

Users who have bought cargo space on the shuttle have been frustrated because of previous delays. Some have opted to contract for old, expendable rockets as a backup to launch satellites in case the shuttle wasn't ready to fly on time.

The successful, near-perfect flight of the shuttle Columbia in April has restored confidence in the program and showed that the space glider would perform as expected, Weiss said.

"At the meeting, there was much less talk about expendable vehicles," Weiss told a news briefing. "One concern has been dissipated — whether the vehicle will fly."

Even so, he said, some users may decide to cancel their shuttle reservations and fly earlier on another rocket.

Weiss said users whose payloads are "bumped" into 1986 or later will be guaranteed the original price they were quoted.

Bid-Rigging Said Rampant On Nationwide Basis

By STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press Writer

Federal investigators and highway contractors convicted of bid rigging on road projects in North Carolina have been at odds for months, but they agree on one thing — such conspiracies are common throughout the nation.

State and federal grand juries have indicted 228 people on charges of illegal collusion on highway bidding.

The U.S. Justice Department has investigations in progress in North Carolina, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia and several other states, said Robert Bloch, a trial attorney for the department.

Indictments have been returned in bid-rigging cases in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Illinois, Georgia and Kansas. Investigations are under way in Montana, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas.

Most bid rigging on highway projects involves complementary bids, said North Carolina Transportation Secretary Thomas Bradshaw. A contractor gets others to agree to submit higher bids on a project he wants. Later, the winning contractor will repay in kind.

Protesting that bid rigging is a gentlemen's agreement necessary to stay in business, indicted executives say they didn't hurt anyone. But state prosecutors say bid-rigging resulted in astronomical increases in the price of asphalt and overpayment of millions of dollars for paving projects.

No high-level officials have been indicted. But Gene Blanton, brother of former Tennessee Gov. Ray Blanton, is facing trial on federal charges and his uncle, Jake Blanton, has pleaded guilty.

In North Carolina, a paving company executive who recently finished a prison term for rigging bids alleged that his firm did $9,600 worth of work at no cost to Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green. Green denied any wrongdoing, and an investigation is under way.

North Carolina, which began investigating the paving industry last year, is ahead of other states. So far, at least 29 executives of paving companies that operate in the state have pleaded guilty to federal charges and several companies have been fined.

Charles Wuertenberger, convicted by a federal court jury on two counts of rigging bids, testified in his trial earlier this year of a road-paving industry in North Carolina that for many years accepted collusion on contracts as "a way of life."

Since the inquiry began, North Carolina has struck deals with paving companies allowing them to get back on the state's bidding list after paying restitution. So far, more than $3.6 million has been paid to the state.

In Georgia, three companies pleaded guilty to bid-rigging charges last year, said Robert Stubbs, executive assistant attorney general.

A Fulton County grand jury returned indictments in November against five companies. However, a judge ruled earlier that Georgia's bid-rigging statute is unconstitutional because it is vague and ambiguous. The state's appeal is before the Georgia Supreme Court.

A federal grand jury convened March 4 in Baton Rouge, La., to investigate alleged bid rigging and price fixing on paving contracts. U.S. Attorney Donald Beckner said that was part of a multistate investigation in the South into allegations of rigged bids for paving materials. So far, no indictments have been returned.

Thirteen indictments naming more than 30 people have charged bid rigging on highway contracts in Illinois since 1972. Six defendants were acquitted, but one company was fined $3.25 million. Tom Genovese, chief of the state's antitrust division, said he expects to collect almost $4 million when the remaining cases are completed.

In Tennessee, where indictments or government information have been returned against 70 companies or individuals, the state has recovered more than $3.5 million in fines and collected more than $7 million in restitution.

During a trial in Virginia, one paving firm executive described a conspiracy that went back to 1964.

Mark Sheehan, a spokesman for the Justice Department, defended his agency's role.

"The law has long recognized that antitrust conspiracies are extremely difficult to uncover by their very nature," he said. "The fact that state authorities did not uncover bid rigging or that the federal government did not before now is not surprising."

Grifton Native Is Academy Graduate

COMMISSIONED George P. Davis, Jr. of Grifton was commissioned an Ensign in the U.S. Navy on May 27. The 22-year old graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy is being assigned duty aboard the USS Hancock, homeported in Charleston, S.C. (Public Affairs Center Photo, Norfolk, Va.)

ANNAPOLIS, MD. — George P. Davis, Jr. of Grifton graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy on Wednesday, May 27, with a bachelor of science degree in chemistry and a commission as an ensign in the U.S. Navy.

Davis, son of Army Warrant Officer George and Rachel Davis, is being assigned duty to the destroyer USS John Hancock, which is homeported in Charleston, South Carolina. The Hancock is one of the Navy's newest destroyers. He will begin his active Navy career on this ship as a surface warfare officer.

During his four years at the Academy, the 22-year old Davis studied naval science, seamanship, tactics, navigation, leadership and law, in addition to standard military drills and duties and a wide range of academic subjects.

For his summer cruise following his first year at the Academy, Davis was assigned to the frigate USS Knox. On that cruise, he visited Taiwan, Japan and Alaska. His second cruise, made after completion of his third year at the Academy, was aboard the submarine tender USS Dixon. He also spent time on a submarine and flew in helicopters as part of his indoctrination training.

A former member of the Ayden-Grifton High School football and baseball teams, Davis played on the Naval Academy's volleyball team.

Big Faircloth Loan To Road Campaign

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A loan of $60,000 from state Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth is part of the $128,860 collected so far by the North Carolinians for Good Roads Committee, committee officials said Tuesday.

A joint statement by committee chairman Arthur Smith and vice chairman Hugh Morton said the money was collected "for maintaining North Carolina's superior system of highways and roads."

The committee organized earlier in the year to support Gov. Jim Hunt's efforts to improve the state highway system. But officials stress they support no particular solution, including Hunt's tax package.

Faircloth's contribution appears on the list with the notation "to be repaid."

Another loan of $9,900 from the Jim Hunt Committee has already been repaid, the list said. The money was left over from Hunt's re-election campaign.

Eleven corporations each contributed $3,000 to the committee: Jefferson Pilot, Akzona Inc., Wachovia Bank and Trust, First Union Corp., Carolina Power and Light, Barclays American, Petro Kolynch, Duke Power Co., Piedmont Aviation, Burroughs Wellcome Co. and North Carolina National Bank.

Contributing $1,500 were Mom 'n Pop's Ham House and Northwestern Bank.

Contributing $1,000 were: Grandfather Enterprises, Turnpike Properties, Wright Chemical Corp., The Biltmore Co., Pearsall Operating Co., Wake Stone Corp. and Colormatch Corp.

A gold medal was awarded the 440 Relay team of Jeffery Carmon, David Jones, Jessie Daniels and Tommy Moran.

Highlights of the weekend were the performance of the Statesville "Award Winning" Grenadier High School Band and fireworks display at the opening ceremonies, a professional soccer game between Carolina Lightin' and New York and a street disco dance.

Smokebomb To Lure Victim

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Two men who apparently set off a smoke bomb under a car to make passers-by think the car was on fire lured a trucker into the trap and robbed him, police said.

The trucker, Gary Zahn, was driving westbound on Interstate 24 about noon Tuesday when he spotted the car and pulled over his tractor-trailer to offer help, police said. Zahn, of Illinois, told police he thought the car was on fire.

Zahn said he approached and was met by a man brandishing a hunting knife. A second man emerged from the car and demanded Zahn's money. They robbed him, and fled in the car, which Zahn said also appeared to contain two women, according to police.

General Taking Over Command

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — Maj. Gen. Keith A. Smith was scheduled to take command of the 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing at Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station in a ceremony today.

Smith, who was deputy chief of staff for requirements and programs in Washington, replaces Maj. Gen. William R. Maloney, who is being transferred to Camp Smith, Hawaii, to serve as director of operations.

Climate Data

By ELISSA McCARRY
Associated Press Writer
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —
From its national headquarters in North Carolina's Blue Ridge Mountains, the National Climatic Center has an eye on the nation's weather from Alaska to Puerto Rico.

The weather center, a little-known branch of the U.S. Department of Commerce, has been located in downtown Asheville for 28 years. Yet few people in the area or the state know it exists, much less operates out of North Carolina.

"I think people are usually surprised to find out we're here," said meteorologist Ray Nybro. "And even if they do know we're here, they have no idea what we do."

As the custodian of all U.S. weather records, the center collects data generated by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the weather services of the U.S. Air Force, the Navy, the Coast Guard, the Federal Aviation Administration and observers from all over the country.

"If our shelves of information were stretched end-to-end, they would cover about 25 miles," Nybro said.

The climatic center was originally called the National Weather Records Center and was established in 1951. In 1952, five regional weather centers were consolidated and moved to Asheville.

The center is housed in the 50-year-old Arcade Building, which is listed on the National Historic Register. Its many divisions are spread throughout the four-story granite and marble building — built to house the country's first indoor shopping mall in the late 1920s.

Climatic information compiled by the center includes hourly observations from various land and ship stations, upper air readings, radar observations, satellite data, hourly and daily solar data and special projects.

Services include data and map reproduction, statistical summaries, supply of publication on weather patterns all over the country and certification of records for legal cases.

Nybro said the center handles thousands of requests for weather data every month.

"The price we charge for our services depends on the time and people involved in researching a job," he said. "For instance, most of our services cost less than 25 dollars."

The center employs about 330 people, including meteorologists, computer technicians, print shop workers and dozens of administrative and clerical personnel.

The center uses millions of dollars worth of sophisticated computer equipment to gather and print out weather data.

"Much of our work is done for or in cooperation with the military services," Nybro said. "But a lot of our work and our research benefits farmers and small-business men. For instance, a farmer in Hampton, Iowa, can get copies of our temperature and precipitation charts for that town and determine planting time."

The center gathers information on the nation's weather from more than 1,500 volunteer observers — "just people all over the country who volunteer their time. One individual sent us information for 70 years," Nybro said.

Despite the highly technical nature of its work, the center welcomes visitors and group tours.

"We're happy to show people what we do," Nybro said. "Some days you're getting a 10-year-old school kid information for a school project at the same time you're answering questions for a professor of meteorology who knows so much about the field that it makes you nervous."

Senate's Final Vote Due On Initiative

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Senate was scheduled to take a final vote today on whether North Carolinians should be able to indirectly propose laws and constitutional amendments dealing with taxation.

The initiative-and-referendum measure narrowly won tentative approval Tuesday. With a three-fifths margin of 30 votes needed for passage, the Senate approved the constitutional amendment 32-15.

If both the House and Senate approve the measure, it still would face a statewide referendum before it could be enacted.

Under the constitutional amendment, a law or amendment could be proposed if a petition calling for it was signed by 25 percent of the voters in the previous gubernatorial election. That would call for about 300,000 signatures.

The Senate did amend the bill Tuesday to tighten regulations on obtaining signatures. The amendment would prohibit more than a fourth of the signatures coming from one county.

After the signatures were obtained, the proposal would go to the General Assembly for action. Should legislators reject or fail to act on the proposal within 60 days, the matter would be put before the public in a referendum.

Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Orange, floor manager for the bill, said the bill is "very conservative and restrictive" because some states act on petitions carrying signatures of as few as 3 percent of the voters in the last election.

Several Republican legislators, led by Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, unsuccessfully tried to amend the bill to require 15 percent of the voters in the last election to sign the petition.

In other legislative action:

Burglars

A bill to provide a personal income tax deduction for installation of burglar alarms got tangled in debate and was returned to a House committee.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, would allow up to a $1,500 deduction for installing the devices. But Rep. Sam Bundy, D-Pitt, amended the bill to provide a tax credit for watchdogs too.

"A lot of people down my way are not fat cat enough to buy these protective devices," Bundy said.

After debate over whether Bundy's amendment was serious or not, the House voted 60-49 to return the bill to the Finance Committee.

Midwives

The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill regulating the practice of midwifery. The bill would require midwives to get a permit from the Department of Human Resources and practice under supervision of a licensed physician.

Gun Registration

A bill filed in the House by Rep. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, would tighten state requirements for obtaining a pistol permit.

Tison's bill would prohibit the issuance of a handgun permit to any person convicted in North Carolina or any other state of a crime punishable by imprisonment for six months or more.

The bill would continue to have permits issued by county sheriffs only after finding the applicant is of "good moral character." It would allow permits to be issued only for protection, target shooting, collecting or hunting.

The bill would allow sheriffs to refuse to issue permits and establish a procedure for appeal a denial to the courts.

Church Day-Care

Church affiliated day-care facilities would no longer be subject to licensing under a bill approved and sent to the Senate floor by the Senate Judiciary I Committee.

The panel approved a rewritten version of a bill introduced by Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, committee chairman, and two other members of the committee.

Under the measure, the state could only enforce laws regarding sanitation, fire safety, building codes and immunization of children in the church day-care centers. State officials could seek court action against facilities violating such standards.

Currently, facilities that violate similar standards may lose their operating license — effectively putting them out of business because without a license, the facility may not operate.

The bill is similar to a law that deregulated church-operated and private schools.

Several organizations, including social workers and the North Carolina Council of Churches, have promised to fight the day-care bill, which is being supported by the fundamentalist churches.

Parents

The House Judiciary I Committee continued work on a bill that might answer questions raised by a U.S. Supreme Court ruling Monday that poor people have no right to free legal counsel when the state tries to take away their children.

The high court's ruling dealt with Abby Gail Lassiter of Durham County. Ms. Lassiter was serving a second-degree murder conviction when the state tried to take her son.

The bill before the Judiciary I Committee, introduced by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, would guarantee that poor people be represented in such civil cases if they desire.

Several committee members questioned whether parents who are serving prison sentences would be allowed to appear in court for such civil cases. The bill was referred to a subcommittee to answer that question.

New Bills

Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, and Rep. Betsy Cochran, R-Davie, filed a bill to adopt the so-called Quality Assurance Program developed by the state Board of Education and the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

Among its provisions, the program would set college entrance requirements for prospective teachers.

Ms. Foster also filed a bill that would make it a felony not to return rented property worth more than $400.

Another House bill filed would set up a study of combining annual vehicle registration and vehicle inspection.

In the Senate, bills were filed to establish a study commission for looking at commercial fishing licenses and shellfish leases and to authorize charging an additional 1 percent sales and use tax in Mecklenburg County.

Ex-Hostage To Write A Book

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry Rosen, one of the Americans held hostage in Iran, and his wife, Barbara, have signed a contract with Doubleday to publish a joint account of Rosen's 444 days in captivity in Iran.

Rosen, press attache at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran at the time of the takeover Nov. 4, 1979, will write a first-person account of the assault and his life in captivity, alternating with the story of his wife's life in the meantime.

The book, due out in the spring of 1982, will be written with George Feifer, a Connecticut author.

Rosen, who lives with his wife and two children in New York, is fluent in Farsi and is working toward his doctorate in Iranian studies at Columbia University. He went to Iran during the late 1960s as a member of the Peace Corps and will include details about Iran's history, culture and religion in the book.

SERVICES

Elder Anderson and Noah's Ark will be in charge of services at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church tomorrow at 8 p.m. Pastor Hattie Mae Cobb invites the public.

Ready To Go Except For Tricycle

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Bud Bowman's child is hoping for a tricycle before it's too late, but otherwise the Bowman family and about 50 others here say they're ready to rise to heaven on June 28.

That's the day, according to spiritual leader Bill Maupin, when God will bodily lift up his followers and Jesus will be awaiting them at cloud-level. Members of the sect won't be gathering at any special place on the 28th; they believe they will rise from wherever they happen to be.

"Oooo, glory, I get bliss just thinking about it," Maupin said. "We're not just going to some mountain hideaway; we're leaving the earth."

"We're ready," said Bowman, a laborer who became a believer only in recent months. "My little one sort of wants a three-wheeler before it happens, but we're ready to go."

To prepare for their ascent, others have sold their homes and cars, quit their jobs and devoted their efforts to spreading the word that the time of "rapture" — the ascent into heaven — is almost at hand.

John Vickers, 32, quit his job as a glass worker and is living off some of the money from the sale of his home. He said he donated the remaining cash to the group to spread its message to the world.

"I've never known such peace, such joy," said James McCullough, a Nogales doctor who donated a classic Porsche automobile to help pay for the pamphlets the fellowship distributes.

Maupin says some of the money raised when group members have sold their belongings has gone to perpetuate the work of the group. But Maupin says he never asks the members for contributions.

Maupin, founder of the church-like "fellowship" called the Lighthouse Gospel Tract Foundation, and other members say their Bible studies have convinced them that the second coming of Christ will take place in 1988.

By then, however, the group will already be in heaven, they say.

Maupin said he began his Bible study in the early 1960s, but became dissatisfied with the answers he was getting from ministers and began his own study.

He said the Bible tells of a coming war in the Mideast to precede the "rapture." A multinational power headed by an American "anti-Christ" will dominate the world until Christ returns in May 1988, Maupin added.

But before then, believers — including those now dead and even those of the faithful who don't believe in the June 28 event — will be transported to heaven, according to Maupin.

Those who remain on earth after June 28 will have to decide between going into league with the devil — assuring their eternal damnation — or professing faith in Jesus, Maupin said.

He said the devil's forces will kill remaining believers but they will be resurrected later.

Asked what would happen if the group is still be on earth after June 28, Maupin replied: "I can't even answer a question like that. Come back and see us on June 29 and we'll talk about it."

At least one member of the fellowship — Jerry Walker of Tucson — is less convinced, although he attributed his doubts to his "inability to interpret the Bible."

Walker said, however, that his fellow members "are honest, sincere Christian people, and I pray that they are right."

"The only danger I see with setting a date is that if they have interpreted the Bible and misjudged it, people who are following them might say the Bible is a hoax," he said. "I do believe it's going to happen sometime — I just don't know when."

two rest rooms for its employees. Your argument that your sellers are not employees, but independent cooperators, does not meet with the city inspections department's approval, he said.

Asked why the wooden sign would be seen as a fire hazard, he said, "This is the law. There's nothing we can do about it. Asked about real estate and rental signs seen around the first fire district, he said, "Signs of less than two square feet do not come under the regulation."

The limitation to 10 sellers you mentioned in the first place was stated in the special use permit, he said, based on the need the city sees for a set number of available parking spaces for each seller.

He said he regrets your disillusionment and would like for you to see that he and his department are just doing the job of codes enforcement the law requires them to do in as impartial a manner as he sees possible.

School Board....

"When you start adding up points and start cutting people you can destroy a program quickly," said Superintendent Ott Alford. "I cannot see, however, that the board has any other choice in this situation."

"We have been confronted, unfortunately, for several years with situations in certain programs where enrollment has been marginal," said Assistant Superintendent Kathryn Lewis. "I don't think we can justify continuing them because they're not cost effective."

The board passed a motion initiated by Jack Edwards that would give schools two years to build enrollment in programs, then after two years, the five positions in question would be adjusted based on these course enrollment figures.

"Principals will be notified after two years and programs with less than the minimum enrollment will be trimmed," said Edwards. "This gives the principals and schools a chance to get their enrollment in shape."

Other board business included:

— Scheduling a bid opening for the Ayden Middle project for June 23 at 3 p.m.

— Beth Ward was appointed principal of Pactolus Elementary School, replacing retiring Bryant Tripp.

— A policy permitting seniors to take two English courses for graduation was approved.

— Carol Ann Davis, teacher of gifted and talented students at A.G. Cox, was named the 1980-81 winner of the Bonnie Langston Award. This award recognizes the best cultural arts position in support of the cultural arts program.

— A resolution of appreciation for the late W.W. (Bill) Speight was passed. The resolution recognizes his "long and distinguished career with the county and his dedication to education."

— Superintendent Alford assigned each board member a specialized area of board operation to concentrate on. The assignments were as follows: Bill McLawhorn, construction; Walter Gaskins, transportation; Anne McGaughey, curriculum; Jack Edwards, school law; William House, personnel; and James Black, finance.

Development Group Meets

"The Community College System: Hope for the Eighties," was the theme of the Eastern North Carolina Development Association annual meeting held here last week.

Community college presidents from throughout Eastern North Carolina made presentations on various aspects of industrial training at the meeting, which ended with the ENCDA membership adopting a resolution calling on Gov. Jim Hunt and members of the General Assembly to fund the Community College Division's request for $33.5 million in equipment for the coming biennium.

John Gurganus, executive director of the Duplin County Development Commission was elected president of the association's executive committee. Other officers named included vice-president George Harris, executive director of the Northampton County Economic Development Commission, and secretary-treasurer Ann McGaughey, executive director of the Farmville Economic Council.

Members of the Board of Directors chosen at the session included Paul Butler, Bill Cox, Wick Exum and Bill Abeyounis.

Report Calls To Police

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that a number of local residents have received anonymous telephone calls recently, threatening the lives of their children.

Cannon urged persons receiving such calls to report the incident to the Police Department.

"We will investigate and will prosecute," the chief emphasized, if the caller or callers can be identified.

Hail Damage

Hail, dropped from a thunder storm, caused some damage to tobacco and corn crops in Northern Pitt County yesterday afternoon.

Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service agent Sam Uzell said this morning that some damage occurred, but he did not know the extent of the damage. Hail he noted, "is never a good thing on tobacco."

Extension service chairman Leroy James said he saw no major damage yesterday afternoon, adding that an inspection of the area would be made later today to determine the extent of damage.

James noted that some small garden plots in the area were damaged by the ice. "I saw some corn," in gardens that was, "beat down to the ground."

The Greenville Utilities Commission weather station reported that rainfall yesterday totaled 1.23 inches.

Tax Relief Prepared For Two-Income Marriages

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress appears poised to take a vow for marriage and the family by changing a tax law that has driven some couples to divorce and persuaded others to live together without tying the knot.

Under pressure from swelling ranks of two-earner families, Congress is grappling with ways to eliminate or ease the "marriage penalty" it created 12 years ago when it revised the tax laws to reduce a sizable penalty imposed on single taxpayers.

The 1969 law produced a glaring inequity: The tax on the combined income of a husband and wife with comparable salaries is considerably higher than it would be if the pair were single and reported their incomes separately.

More than 15 million working couples pay the marriage penalty, according to congressional estimates.

For a couple making $20,000 a year, the penalty can be as much as $391. At $60,000 a year, the penalty can add up to $3,654.

To avoid the added tax, married couples have gotten divorced, singles live together out of wedlock, and those morally uncomfortable with cohabitation have postponed wedding plans.

In one celebrated case, an Ellicott City, Md., couple obtained foreign divorces three times so they could file as singles and then remarry.

H. David and Angela Boyter have remained divorced since 1977, when the Internal Revenue Service — and later a federal judge — ruled against their effort to avoid the marriage penalty, which IRS estimated at $3,134.

A minister in Maryland went as far as to advise his parishioners against wedlock "with moral twinges of conscience."

"I know my parishioners could make ends meet more easily as single persons than as married couples," the minister wrote last year to Sen. Charles Mathias Jr., R-Md., who is sponsoring legislation to eliminate the marriage penalty. "There was no way that I, as a pastor, could advise them to become man and wife under the present tax structure."

A flood of letters similar to this one has descended on Congress, convincing lawmakers to act quickly.

While the debate over the shape of a general tax cut for 1981 continues, the measure is almost certain to deal with the marriage penalty, says Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., a sponsor of bills to erase the penalty since 1975.

However, Congress doesn't want to repeat its mistake of creating a penalty for one group while providing relief for 51 percent of American families in which both the husband and wife work.

The proposal with the best chances of passage would allow the lower-paid spouse to deduct 10 percent of his or her earnings up to $30,000. Thus the maximum deduction would be $3,000.

This plan, approved last year by the Senate Finance Committee, would not reduce the marriage penalty altogether, but it would cut it in half or more. It also is less costly to the U.S. Treasury than the other proposals — the revenue drain in 1982 is estimated at $2.7 billion.

The second-income deduction route would create a new inequity, however, in that a two-earner family would pay less taxes than a one-earner family of the same size and total income.

"There ought to be some reward for a second person working and to offset the expenses connected with working," Rep. Fenwick says. "This won't penalize one-earner families. It keeps them where they are."

The congresswoman is pushing another bill which would give married couples the option of filing separately and paying the single person's rate, an approach that would cost the Treasury up to $9 billion this year.

"My bill would be more expensive, but it has the beauty of simplicity," she contends.

However, tax-bill writers would have to set up complicated guidelines for allocating investment income and deductions between spouses.

Although Rep. Fenwick has 260 co-sponsors for her bill, she says she is not wedded to her idea. "I'll support anything that provides some relief to two-earner couples. I just can't stand what is going on now."

She cited the case of a grandmother of six and a grandfather of seven living out of wedlock in Texas because of the marriage penalty.

"Another woman says her husband keeps nagging her day and night to get divorced," she said.

The problem stems from the difficulty of designing a tax code that avoids penalizing married couples, maintains equal taxation of couples with equal incomes and continues a progressive system — all at the same time.

A progressive system means that as a person's income increases, the percentage taken out in federal taxes also rises. That is why the tax bill for a person earning $20,000 a year is higher than the combined bills of two people earning $10,000 apiece.

Until 1969, married couples could split their income, even if only one person was paid. There was only one rate schedule, so a single person with the same income as a married couple paid a higher rate — as much as 42 percent.

Congress created a new rate for single people and designed it so a single's tax bill would be no more than 20 percent higher than a married worker with the same income.

The rate schedules still favor the married couple until a second earner starts to make 20 percent or more of total family income. At that point, the marriage penalty comes into play.

Rep. Fenwick says that while the dollar amount of the penalty is highest for affluent couples, low-income couples suffer most on a percentage basis.

She notes that the tax burden for a couple making $3,750 apiece is $294, which is 133 percent more than the $126 they would pay if they were single.

For a couple earning

$50,000 each, the tax burden is $38,678, but that is only 13 percent more if they were single, the congresswoman said.

Synthetic Cocaine Plot In N.C. Seen

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Five people face drug charges after undercover state and federal agents uncovered an alleged plot to produce more than $25 million of synthetic cocaine.

Officials said a laboratory underneath a Beech Mountain house contained enough chemicals to produce about 175 kilos, equivalent to 385 pounds, of artificial cocaine, worth about $65,000 per kilo.

Agents of the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration and the State Bureau of Investigation conducted the investigation.

Paul Santos Array of Del Ray Beach, Fla., Joel Preston Lineberger of Long Island, N.C., and Kimberly Vaughan of Long Island, N.C., are each charged with conspiracy to manufacture, distribute and possess with the intent to distribute cocaine.

Timothy Vaughan of Davie, Fla., and Danny Carl Brannon of Newville, Ala., face the same charges plus additional charges of attempting to manufacture cocaine and manufacturing cocaine.

So-called "coke labs" are relatively rare, said DEA agent Samuel F. Wolfe of Greensboro. "I'm sure that it's the first case of its kind in North Carolina, and there aren't more than seven other cases in the entire country over the last four or five years," he said.

"Synthetic cocaine has the same chemical structure as the organically derived substance from coca leaves," said Wolfe.

The five defendants face $25,000 in fines and 15 years in prison if convicted of the first charge. Timothy Vaughan and Brannon face the same penalty again for each of the other two charges.

Senator Helms To Be Speaker

MANTEO — Senator Jesse Helms will be guest speaker at the opening night of "The Lost Colony," Friday, June 12.

Helms will present the Roanoke Island Historical Association's Distinguished Service Award to a person to be named in the ceremonies prior to the opening of the drama.

A special tribute will be paid to playwright Paul Green, author of "The Lost Colony" who died May 4 at the age of 87.

People interested in ticket reservations for opening night or any other performance are to call 473-3414 (after June 8).

Special Meet Of Council Set

A special call meeting of the City Council has been scheduled for Thursday, June 4, at 8 p.m. in the council chambers at city hall.

The only scheduled agenda item involves presentation of the report from the Mayor's Advisory Committee.

Agents seized 210 pieces of laboratory equipment, 45 chemicals in 120 containers, hundreds of pounds of chemicals and a tablet-making machine.

The government contends Array set up a dummy corporation to receive the chemicals.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued its broad retreat today, with energy issues continuing to suffer from the world oil glut.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which began its slide Monday afternoon, fell 5.01 points to 982.47 in the early going, with losers holding a 2-1 edge over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Mixed signals on the course of interest rates and concern over the tax-cut impasse between the president and House Democrats stalled a rally that had sent the Dow Jones industrials up 26.24 points in the five sessions prior to Tuesday's slide, when the blue-chip average tumbled 10.48 points to 987.48.

Although banks nationwide have cut their prime lending rates to 20 percent from 20.5 percent, other interest rates have increased in the nation's money markets.

Today's early prices included AMF, up 1/4 at 25 1/2, in trading that included a block of 102,200 shares changing hands at 25 1/2; Norton Simon, down 1/4 at 15 1/2; American Telephone & Telegraph, unchanged at 56; and Kennecott, down 1/4 at 61 1/2.

Oil prices have fallen as a result of a world oversupply of petroleum, with Mexico cutting its crude-oil price $4 a barrel and Standard Oil (Ohio) reducing its price for Alaskan oil by $2 a 42-gallon barrel.

Energy issues turned lower, including Gulf, down 1/4 at 30 1/2; Union Oil of California, down 1/4 at 28 1/2; Conoco, down 1/4 at 52 1/2; Kerr-McGee, down 1/4 at 65; Mobil, down 1/4 at 54 1/2; and Standard Oil of California, down 1/4 at 36 1/2.

On Tuesday, declines outnumbered advances by a 5-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 53.93 million shares, against 62.17 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks fell 1.02 to 75.89.

Valuable Educations

The millions of young people graduating from high school this month have already accomplished something very important. Now they must decide whether or not to go on to college. According to recent studies, a high-school graduate can expect to earn at least $100,000 more in his or her working years than can someone who only graduated from elementary school. In turn, a college graduate can expect to out-earn someone whose education ended at high school by more than $160,000 over the years, on the average. With inflation, the totals will probably be much higher by the time this June's graduates retire. Incidentally, there are now slightly more than 10 million college students in the U.S. having purchased a roll-out refuse collection cart at a price of $49.40, rather than the $47.50 reimbursement price set by the town was denied.

A request by Police Chief Cooper for $100 to finance a recognition banquet for Farmville Police Department Explorer Post 580 was denied, also, but the board members assured the chief that the money would be forthcoming from private sources.

The low bid of Barnhill Contracting of Tarboro was approved for the paving of portions of Church Street, Davis Drive and Mandarin Drive and for resurfacing on May and Walnut streets. Barnhill's low bid was $55,447; Barrus Construction's was $55,450.65; and L.A. Reynolds' was $55,912.50. A curbing project in Hollywood Cemetery was deleted from the project. Alternate bids were also taken for Blalock and Baldree streets. If the board authorizes and appropriates funds for these streets, it may be possible to add these to the contract later, a report from the town administrator indicated.

Retainer agreements with McDavid Associates for engineering services and Lewis, Lewis and Lewis for legal services were extended unchanged through the fiscal year 1981-82.

Morgan reported that he has authorized the transfer of $1,250 to sanitation funds for 25 additional roll-out carts and $350 to the cemeteries fund for a gasoline-powered edger.

A question as to whether the town will continue to provide free utilities to the adult education center of Pitt Community College, which is anticipating a move, was referred to the utilities committee.

A public hearing was set for July 7 at 7:30 p.m. for reviewing second-year Community Development funds. A three-year project here is planned and hoped for.

Grand Jury True Bills

Are Returned

Greenville Police yesterday arrested Hal Askew Byrum, 44 of 116 Ravenwood Dr. after the Pitt County Grand Jury returned three true bills of indictment charging him with taking indecent liberties with a minor.

The offenses allegedly occurred within the past year and involved 8- and 10-year-old girls.

The incidents were reported to police several days ago after the children told their parents they did not want to go to a party because Byrum would be there.

Byrum, plant manager for Prepshirt Manufacturing Corp. on North Greene Street, was placed under a $3,000 bond pending a first appearance hearing in court, scheduled for tomorrow.

Spring Banquet Set By Bankers

The Greenville chapter of the American Institute of Banking (AIB) will hold its annual spring banquet Thursday from 8 to 10 p.m. in the party room of Tar River Estates here.

Vicki Parrott: History Maker In Local LL

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Sports Writer

In Greenville, Little League baseball is considered a boys' sport, but that does not bother 12-year-old Vicki Parrott. Vicki, a seventh grader at Greenville Middle School, is first basegirl for Burroughs Wellcome of the Tar Heel League. Monday, when Wellcome played Moose at Guy Smith Stadium, Vicki made Greenville Little League history by being the first female to pitch a complete game.

Vicki is only the second girl to play in the Greenville Little League. But the guys on her team, as well as the boys she competes against, respect her as a good baseball player. Monday's game, in which Vicki had three hits, stole a base and scored, proves that she is just as good as a boy. Her pitching debut was an obvious success, as Vicki struck out six and walked five on her way to a 17-3 victory. Not a bad day for a baseball player, whether male or female.

Wellcome coaches Bill Brown and Lee Mills do not feel that they took a risk when they picked Vicki for the team three years ago. Brown said, "Vicki was chosen for her physical talent. It doesn't matter that she's a girl. She is as competitive as the guys and she has started every year at first base."

Vicki's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Parrott of Glasgow Lane, are extremely proud of their daughter, who they say has always been athletic. Vicki also excels in tennis and water skiing.

Even though Vicki is a good athlete, Mrs. Parrott admits that she did not want her daughter to play Little League baseball at first. Now she feels differently. "I realize that it's been a good experience to let Vicki compete with males," Mrs. Parrott said. "That's the way the world is for women today."

Parrott is also glad that his daughter plays baseball. The father of four girls jokingly said, "Of course I pushed her to play. It's the only way I could see Little League."

Vicki is not playing Little League in support of women's liberation; she claims that she "just likes playing baseball." And her Wellcome teammates don't mind having a girl on the team. "It doesn't matter that she's a girl," one player said. "She's good."

Judging from Vicki's first starting assignment on the mound, she is definitely good. But more than that, Vicki Parrott exemplifies the closing lines of the Little League pledge: "I will play fair and strive to win. But win or lose, I will always do my best."

Pitt Co. Opens Play Tonight

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Pitt County, on the prowl for its fourth straight American Legion regular season title, opens its 1981 season tonight when Post 39 entertains Wayne County at Harrington Field (8 p.m.).

Greenville Rose star Roger Williams will be on the mound for Pitt County coach Pat Smith's club. Williams, a right-hander, was 12-0 this past season for Rose and had an earned run average of 0.49.

"I feel like right now that pitching and defense are going to be our strong points, based on what they did last year and what they this past high school season," Smith said. "But we're going into the season with the idea of playing everybody and letting them win the job."

Excluding pitching, where Smith is six-deep, at least five positions remain to be won. The only sure starters going into tonight's game are Emmett Walsh at catcher, Mark Douglas at shortstop and Kenny Barnes in rightfield.

Fighting it out at first are Jeff Wilson and Bill Kittrell, at second Sammy Hodges and Greg Briley, at third Gordon Douglas and Marshall Rand, in leftfield Troy Hudson and Mitch Brann and in centerfield Paul MacMillan and Randy Warren.

Asked how his team might do this year, Smith said: "I wouldn't want to say. Of course, we've got some pitching back and they've matured but we don't have the power we've had in the past."

However, power at the bat may be replaced this season by power on the mound. Pitt County has five pitchers who started for their high school teams this past season.

Joining Williams from Rose is right-hander Gordon Douglas (8-2, 0.75). Doug McRoy of D.H. Conley and Tyrone Gay (9-5, 1.19) and Brandt Allen (4-4, 3.07) of Ayden-Grifton fill out the list of prospective starters. Barnes may see some relief duty.

"We had good practices Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Mainly we reviewed fundamentals," Smith said. "All the guys from Rose are in fairly good shape because they just quit playing. The others are getting there."

Following Wednesday's game, Pitt County travels to Wilson Thursday before returning home Friday for an 8 p.m. return engagement with Wilson. Pitt Co. then plays host to Rocky Mount Monday.

As for the league race, Smith said: "I think it's going to be as balanced as it's ever been. Washington has been one of the weak teams in the league and with it dropping out and Williamson not having a team this year it should be a real balanced league this season."

"I look for Snow Hill to be strong. (Coach James Fulghum) has (Kevin) Korpi and his son back. And we always have a tough time with Rocky Mount and Goldsboro should be good, too."

Lady Tigers Fall To Pender, 5-1

Defeat Ends Williamston's Chances At State Crown

DEEP RUN — With rain falling from start to finish, Williamston's quest for a state softball title came to an end Tuesday afternoon.

Sparked by a four-run sixth inning, Pender defeated the Lady Tigers, 5-1, in the quarterfinals of the state 3-A/4-A softball playoffs.

The game, originally scheduled for Monday but moved to Tuesday because of rain, was scoreless until the fourth when Pender scored a run to take a 1-0 lead.

Two innings later, Pender was back for more. Getting five of their eight hits and two Williamston errors in the sixth, Pender scored four times to go ahead, 5-0.

The Lady Tigers never recovered. They did managed one run in the top of the seventh, on a double by Gail Smith, but it wasn't enough.

Williamston, which ends the season with a 13-6 record, was led at the plate by Ginger Edwards who had two singles. Pender was led by B. Lefler with two singles.

Braves Outlast Los Angeles, 3-1

Perry Captures 294th Victory

By The Associated Press

Pete Rose and Gaylord Perry are really getting up there — and not only in age, by the way.

Two of baseball's geriatric giants in their forties, Rose and Perry are both zeroing in on euphoric landmarks in their fine careers.

On the verge of erasing Stan Musial's National League mark of 3,630 career hits, Rose moved within nine of that figure by collecting three safeties Tuesday night in the Philadelphia Phillies' 9-7 victory over the New York Mets.

Reaching for the golden 300-victory level, Perry recorded his 294th in Atlanta's 3-1, 10-inning triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"It's fun going after the record," said Rose. "I don't feel any pressure whatsoever. I'd like to do it tomorrow if I could, but it would be a long game."

Rose had two triples and a single, and drove in three runs as the Phillies battered five Mets pitchers for 12 hits and drew eight walks. Rose's fielder's-choice grounder in the fifth inning proved to be the game-winning RBI.

"I want to be contributing in all offensive ways," Rose said, "scoring runs, moving runners, and getting on base — period. That's where I am right now. I'm right where I want to be."

Perry, 5-3, gave up one run and five hits over nine innings, extending his winning streak over Los Angeles to four games. He has not lost to the Dodgers in three years. Rick Camp pitched the bottom of the 10th to preserve the victory with his sixth save.

"They expect me to keep them in the game for seven or eight innings," said Perry. "Any starting pitcher should be able to do that."

With Rose raising his career hit total to 3,621, the Phillies won their fourth straight game. They broke away from a 6-6 tie with a run in the fifth on Rose's RBI grounder and never were headed.

Mike Proty, 2-0, gained the victory in relief of starter Nino Espinosa, while Ron Reed gained his third save of the season. Ed Lynch, 1-2, the second of five Met pitchers, was the loser.

Pinch-hitter Bill

Nahorodny's run-scoring double in the top of the 10th inning broke a 1-1 tie and sent Atlanta past Los Angeles. Bruce Benedict started the Braves' winning rally with an infield single off loser Dave Stewart, 3-1. Rafael Ramirez sacrificed and Steve Howe replaced Stewart to pitch to Nahorodny.

Nahorodny doubled to score Benedict and Jerry Royster followed with another double to score pinch-runner Bob Porter. "Gaylord pitched a great game. I'm glad I was able to help out," said Nahorodny. "I was trying to hit a home run. I went up there swinging as hard as I could."

Giants 15, Reds 7

Jerry Martin hit a grand slam homer in a nine-run fourth inning which gave San Francisco an 11-0 lead and triggered the Giants to a run-away victory over Cincinnati.

Ron Oester had a bases-loaded blast for the Reds in the fifth inning, when Cincinnati scored five runs off Giants starter Ed Whitson, 2-5.

Whitson lasted only five innings, and reliever Al Holland completed the game for his fourth save.

"You don't take anything for granted in this ballpark," said Martin, referring to windy Candlestick Park in San Francisco.

Candlestick was at its windiest, or close to it, for the game.

"I had a feeling before the game we would have some kind of fiasco, the way the wind was blowing," said Martin.

Expos 8, Cardinals 1

Tim Lincecum's bases-loaded triple keyed a six-run Montreal third inning as the Expos rolled past St. Louis behind Ray Burris' four-hitter.

Cardinal starter Bob Shirley, 4-2, and reliever Mark Littell gave up four walks in the decisive third inning as the Expos scored all their runs after two were out.

Burris, 3-4, walked one and struck out three.

Astros 2, Padres 1

Craig Reynolds lined a two-out, run-scoring triple to cap a two-run ninth inning, leading Houston over San Diego.

Loser Chris Welsh, 2-4, was working on a 1-0, one-hit shut-out going into the ninth when he gave up a leadoff infield single to Luis Pujols. Pinch-runner Rafael Landestoy took second on Joe Pittman's sacrifice, and, after pinch-hitter Dave Roberts flied out, Terry Puhl lined a run-scoring single to tie the game. Puhl stole second and came home with the game-winning on Reynolds' triple.

Reliever Frank LaCorte, 3-1, was the winner.

Pirates 16, Cubs 3

Steve Nicosia drove in a career-high four runs and Dave Para 19-hit assault that paced Pittsburgh over Chicago.

While six Chicago pitchers were taking a pounding, Eddie Solomon, 4-3, earned the victory with a six-hitter in a contest played despite a strike by ushers, ticket takers and maintenance workers at Three Rivers Stadium.

It was the 34th defeat in 44 games for the Cubs, whose .227 winning percentage is the worst in the major leagues.

#1-Ranked ASU Nips Miss. St.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arizona State Coach Jim Brock admitted Tuesday night that star reliever Kevin Dukes was "pumped up" but he didn't realize just how much.

The senior left-hander was blazing a 92 mph fastball to put out the Mississippi State offensive fireworks and help No. 1 ranked Arizona State into the Friday winner's bracket finals with a 4-3 victory. In a Tuesday afternoon game, South Carolina ousted Maine 12-7 in the elimination round.

Arizona State takes its 52-12 record into Friday night's game against the winner of today's Oklahoma State-Miami, Fla., game South Carolina, 45-14, meets Mississippi State, 46-16, Thursday.

Mississippi State Coach Ron Polk credited Brock with pulling the right strings at the right time in Tuesday's decision.

"I think Jim made the right move at the right time," said Polk. "I think to do what he (Dukes) did was just an awesome display of pitching. We've got a good hitting club and he shut us down."

Dukes, who threw 3 1-3 innings of hitless relief in Saturday night's 11-2 victory over Texas, came on with the Sun Devils down 3-1 in the third. He allowed only two base runners, both on walks, in the next 6 1-3 innings.

"I felt real good. The first couple of innings I didn't feel real loose but after that I felt I was getting stronger every inning," said Dukes, now 7-2 on the season.

Arizona State's Mike Soddors blasted his 22nd home run of the year in the second inning and the team picked up the go-ahead three runs on four hits and an error in the fourth.

Mississippi State's Steve Susce then slammed the door on the tournament's best hitting team. He retired 10 in a row during one stretch while striking out 10 for the game.

Mississippi State scored all of its runs in the third as Steve D'Ercole singled, went to second on a single by Pete White and scored on a Mark Gillaspie single. The Bulldogs then loaded the bases when Arizona State catcher Ric Wilson interfered with the swing of MSU's cleanup hitter Bruce Castoria. White and Gillaspie then scored on a two-out, two-strike single by Terry Loe.

Castoria, who is one home run away from tying the NCAA single season record of 29, threatened to turn the game around in the eighth. Gillaspie walked and the Bulldog slugger caught a Dukes curve ball.

"When that home run went foul, that was the turning point of the game, no doubt about it," said Dukes. "That's the only pressure I felt all night."

In the afternoon game, Rob Lowery hit a pair of two-run homers to lift South Carolina over Maine. The Gamecock catcher became only the sixth player in the 35-year CWS history and the first player in 25 years to hit two home runs in a single game.

Reno Native Wins Opener

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — David Nelson, a bank worker from Reno, Nev., gambled on getting value for money from his trip to the British Amateur golf championship.

Nelson, 25, saved for his first visit to Britain and decided it was worthwhile Tuesday when he scored a surprise victory over Charles Harrison of Atlanta in the opening round of the match-play tournament over the historic Old Course here.

"I wish my wife Alveda had been able to come here with me, but we really couldn't afford it," said Nelson. "I'm delighted to be here playing this famous course and anything else is just icing on the cake."

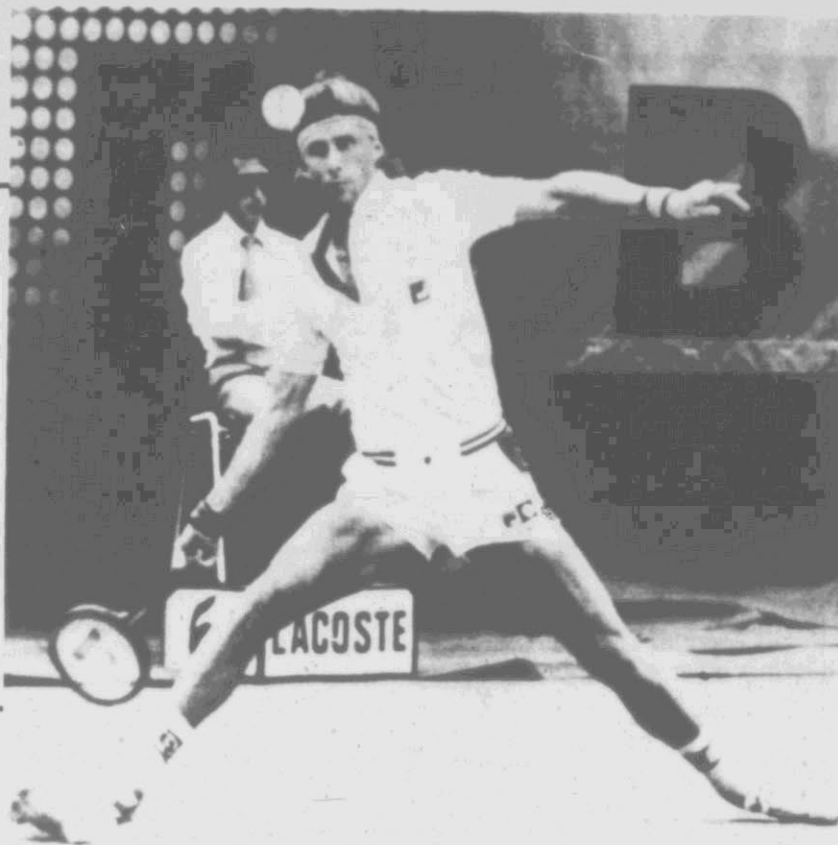

Harrison, the last American survivor when he reached the final eight of the British Amateur at Royal Portcawl last year, was beaten at the 20th hole after an exciting see-saw struggle.

Nelson faced a second round match Wednesday against Scott George Dunsire.

Heavy rain Tuesday morning put the schedule for the 256-entry tournament back by three hours and the organizers hoped to finish 52 second-round matches Wednesday morning followed by 32 third-round contests in the afternoon.

The 'Baron' After The 'Fat Man'

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Fat Man" is puffed up like a balloon so confident that he'll be saddling horse racing's 12th Triple Crown winner in the Belmont Stakes Saturday, but he better beware of the "Baron."

"Johnny Campo — he brags too much," warned Horatio Luro in his Spanish accent. "I don't think he is Superman. I don't think he can make miracles."

"You can tell the Fat Man we will be coming after him Saturday."

The brassy, loquacious Campo is trainer of Pleasant Colony, the pock-skinned speedster who won both the Kentucky Derby and Preakness and is favored to complete the magic sweep in the testing 1 1/2-mile final classic.

Luro, an 80-year-old Argentine aristocrat whose father was a cattle baron, is readying Tap Shoes, a strong, handsome bay, for a possible upset.

You can't discount Horatio. Horses have been in his blood since he was a tyke growing up among the gauchos of the family's five sprawling ranches and a 5,000-acre private island outside Buenos Aires.

"My father — he wanted me to be a cattleman as he was, go to Paris and sell meat to all of Europe but that life bored me," Luro said. "I always wanted only to be near horses."

Campo and Luro try their trade this week a few barns apart in the stable area at Belmont Park. They are a study in contrast.

Campo, a self-styled "Fat Man" is 5-foot-7 and 250 pounds of bombast and braggadocio. He came off the New York streets to become a leading trainer but never before this year was he able to win one of the Triple Crown events.

He relishes the limelight. His non-stop tongue has resounded from Louisville to Baltimore to New York, the man overshadowing the horse.

Non-Stakes Winner Out For Belmont

NEW YORK (AP) — "We're hot right now," says trainer Bill Boniface, whose stable will try for its third straight stakes victory in the feature Saturday at Belmont.

If it happens, his father, Bill, turf editor for the Baltimore Sun papers, really will have something to write about. The Belmont feature will be the 1 1/2-mile Belmont Stakes, and the 35-year-old Boniface will be trying to win it with Escambia Bay, a non-stakes winner who was seventh in the Preakness.

The gelding, owned by Annette Eubanks, earned his shot in the Preakness by winning a 116-mile allowance race at Pimlico on the Tuesday before the Preakness, in which Kentucky Derby winner Pleasant Colony took a second step toward the Triple Crown. "He ran a really big race," Boniface said Tuesday of the one-length win over Michael's Lad, who had finished second to Thirty Eight Paces in a division of Pimlico's Woodlawn.

Escambia Bay's Preakness performance satisfied Boniface to the point that he's will to take a shot at the Belmont.

"Escambia Bay lost a lot of ground in the Preakness," said Boniface, who was jockey for two years before growing too heavy and turning to training in 1962 after four years in the Marine Corps. "I think the post position really killed him. He broke out of No. 13 and stayed 13 all the way."

In Barn 35, Luro stands out above his animal — a sleek, good-looking colt, who, like Pleasant Colony is bred for distance as well as speed. Tap Shoes, starting from the 19th post in a 21-horse field, got caught up in traffic in Louisville and finished 14th. He sat out the Preakness.

"You can throw out the Derby," Luro said. "It was a disaster. My horse got caught up and needed a break. Now he is fit and ready. We can win." A few days ago, Tap Shoes won the Peter Pan Stakes over 1 1/4-miles, finishing strongly.

"Tap Shoes is the only horse in the field that has won a race on this track," Luro said. "Check the form sheet. A couple may have won on grass, but not on this dirt."

For a man of four-score years, Luro is a phenomenon

— a robust, active six-footer who drives to the stable in a foreign sports car, wears a rakish world cap and cashmere jacket and can't remember when he didn't get up before daylight.

Reared on a South American version of Scarlett O'Hara's Tara, he reeks of the landed gentry, poised and polished, who is equally at home with hot walkers and stable boys as with dukes and earls.

He came to the United States more than 40 years ago, became a friend of Bing Crosby, did the Hollywood scene with such stars as Loretta Young, Wendy Barrie and Madeline Carroll, finally starting a thoroughbred stable of his own with a $3,500 stake and a couple of bargain basement horses. Clearing $100,000 the first year, he never looked back.

He once sold a horse to actor Joe E. Brown for $25,500. He has trained with the best. He won the Kentucky Derby with Decidedly in 1962 and Northern Dancer in 1964. He even once won a duel, which has become a legend around the tracks.

"It wasn't over a woman," Luro explained, a twinkle in his eye. "It was an argument with a Frenchman over the price of some polo ponies. He grabbed me by the lapels. This was an insult. I slapped him across the face."

"Fourteen hours later, a representative of the Frenchman — he was a Marquis — came to my office and handed me a card, saying the Marquis wanted satisfaction."

"It was never decided who provoked the incident, so we flipped a coin for choice of weapons. I won. I chose swords, although I never handled a sword in my life."

"Desperate, I went to an instructor at the Jockey Club and told him I had this angry, hot Frenchman who had challenged me. He asked, 'Is he tall?' I replied, 'No, he is small.' 'You have long arms,' the instructor said. 'Take a foil and just keep it stuck out in front of you.'"

"I did. This crazy Frenchman came at me swinging blades like a wildman chopping down a tree. But he couldn't get beyond my foil. Finally, I nicked him on the arm bringing blood."

"By tradition that ended it. I won and was happy to be alive."

Borg Yet To Drop A Set In French Open Tourney

PARIS (AP) — The odds are with Bjorn Borg to accomplish yet another first in the history of tennis.

The Swedish superstar is the only player to reach the semi-finals of the $611,000 French Open tennis tournament without losing a set. He posted his fifth straight-sets victory Tuesday in ousting No. 15 seeded Balasz Taroczy of Hungary, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2, in the quarterfinals.

Borg, a millionaire who turns 25 Saturday, is favored to win the prestigious tournament for a record sixth time.

Two of his most dangerous rivals — Americans Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe — play their quarterfinal matches today. Connors, the No. 2 seed, faces seventh-seeded Jose Luis Clerc, an Argentinian whom he has defeated in their three previous matches. McEnroe, the No. 3 seed, plays Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, seeded fifth. The 21-year-old New Yorker holds a 3-0 career edge over Lendl.

Connors has lost two sets in the four matches that brought him to the quarterfinals. Playing with an increasing amount of patience, the 28-year-old American has won 83 of his 130 games for a 64 percent win record.

McEnroe has done slightly better. In his four matches, he has lost only one set and has won 74 of his 106 games, or 70 percent.

But the incredible Borg has the best record. He has won 91 of 118 games in five matches for a 77 percent record.

Borg comes up against towering Victor Pecci of Paraguay Friday in his semifinal contest.

The 6-foot-4 Pecci, an unseeded player ranked 21st in the world, upset 11th-seeded Yannick Noah of France 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 in a quarterfinal match Tuesday.

"I went four sets today and I'm not tired, so I think I'm in great shape to play Borg," Pecci said.

Borg, whose cool court performances have earned him the nickname "Iceberg," was more cautious in his predictions.

"I had to really fight for the match," he said after his sixth career victory over Taroczy. "And it's going to get tougher out there. But I'm satisfied with the way I'm playing."

In women's quarterfinals, Chris Evert-Lloyd beat back an attack by No. 5 seed Virginia Ruzici of Romania to chalk up her fifth straight-sets victory by a 6-4, 6-4 score.

At The Open

Chris Evert, the #1 seed at the French Open, grips the handle of her racket with both hands as she returns a shot during her 6-4, 6-4 victory over Virginia Ruzici Tuesday in the quarterfinals. (AP Laserphoto)

Evert-Lloyd, the top seed chasing a fifth French Open title, next meets Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia in the semifinals.

The 19-year-old Czech defeated American upstart Kathy Rinaldi, 6-1, 6-3. Rinaldi, who at 14 is the youngest person to ever play in a grand slam tournament, came from virtual obscurity and topped two seeded players in reaching the quarterfinals.

NBA Calls Halt To 'Ralph Sampson Auctions'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The Ralph Sampson auctions are over.

The National Basketball Association has adopted a rule prohibiting teams from contacting undergraduates before they declare their intention to turn pro, and barring teams from discussing financial terms with any collegians prior to the draft.

"We don't want to appear to be the villains in this thing," declared Joe Axelson, the NBA's Director of Operations. "Colleges claim our teams are trying to entice players out. This is an indication of our sincerity that such a decision should be made only by the players themselves."

The rule will prevent repeats of the wooing of Sampson, Virginia's 7-foot-4 All-American center, by Boston two years ago and by Dallas and Detroit this spring. Both times, Sampson turned down multimillion dollar offers to remain in school.

The penalty for violations will be a fine of up to $25,000 and prevention of drafting the player contacted.

The move came at the annual summer meeting of the NBA's Board of Governors here Tuesday. The Board also approved the sale of the San Diego Clippers to Donald T. Sterling; elected Portland owner Larry Weinberg as its new chairman, and approved a series of minor rules changes as recommended by the Rules and Competition Committee.

It was also announced that Deputy Commissioner Simon Gourdine, the highest ranking black executive in any major sports league, would be resigning when his contract expires in January, 1982.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien emphasized that while a court ruling requires the NBA to give undergraduates the option of turning pro early, "We do not, in any way, wish to encourage undergraduates to leave college in order to play in the NBA. By passage of this amendment, the undergraduate's decision to turn pro will be independent of any promises or commitments made by NBA teams."

"It may be difficult to enforce, but we think it's a necessary step," said Jerry Colangelo, general manager of the Phoenix Suns and chairman of the rules committee. "The culprits in this whole thing are the agents who are inducing players to come out. The NCAA must enforce its rule regarding players losing their eligibility after having contact with agents."

"It's really important that we are not considered the bad guys. It's in the best interest of the NBA to maintain a good relationship with the NCAA. The colleges are our lifeblood. That's where these kids mature and develop."

Sterling, a 47-year-old Los Angeles attorney, bought the Clippers from Irv Levin and Harold Lipton on May 8 for a reported $13 million, including assumption of the team's debts.

Sterling called his acquisition of the Clippers "the realization of a lifelong dream. I'm a super-fan. I love the sport. I view it as a ballet. I never see enough of it."

He said he was not bothered by the high salaries of the NBA.

"I think this is the greatest time in history to own a team," he said. "From China to Italy, basketball is experiencing an explosion, and it's very important what role the NBA will play."

The rules changes were all minor ones, including new guidelines to prevent the use of zone defenses and elimination of the 3-for-2 and 2-for-1 free throw situations.

"These changes are designed to speed up our game, clean up our game and reduce the number of free throws that will be attempted during the course of a game," Colangelo said.

Gourdine, who has been with the NBA for nearly 12 years, said his future plans were uncertain. A lawyer who also has experience in government, he said he would pursue opportunities in law, business or government.

"When you make a move like this," said Gourdine, "it's always with mixed feelings — anticipation about what's ahead and sadness about what you're leaving behind."

Softball Tourney Planned In Kinston

KINSTON — The West End Softball team will sponsor a softball tournament June 13-14 at Bill Faye Park in Kinston.

Entry fee for the tournament is $55 per team and the home team must furnish a new USSSA-approved softball for each game. Team rosters must be turned in before the first game is played.

Each team is allowed 15 players and must have at least 10 to start a game. No Class A or B players are allowed. All USSSA rules will apply.

Checks should be made payable to West End Softball Team, Woodrow Holloman, 405 W. Blount St., Kinston, N.C. 28501. For more information, call Woodrow Holloman at 523-4752 (office) or 523-4996 (home) or J.W. Holloman at 523-1485.

Trophies will be given to the first and second place teams. The winning team will also get individual trophies.

Brooks Takes Job As Ranger Coach

Former Olympic Coach

Man New York GM Wanted

NEW YORK (AP) — Do you believe in miracles? The New York Rangers obviously do and that's why Herb Brooks is returning to the Empire State.

Brooks, who guided the United States hockey team to a stunning gold medal triumph in the Olympics last year in Lake Placid, N.Y., signed a contract to coach the Rangers Monday, Craig Patrick, the team's director of operations and the man Brooks will replace, said Tuesday night.

"I got the man I wanted," said Patrick, who served as Brooks' assistant during the Lake Placid triumph, which has been described as a "Miracle on Ice." "If I couldn't get him, I would have coached. I think he's the best coach available."

Brooks, who guided the University of Minnesota to three NCAA titles in seven years, took a group of American amateurs and defeated Europe's finest national teams in the Olympics. He may face an even tougher task with the Rangers, a team that has seen 41 years slip by since its last National Hockey League championship.

Patrick would not disclose the terms of the contract and Brooks, reached at his home in St. Paul, Minn., would not even talk about his new job.

"I don't want to make a statement until Thursday," said Brooks in reference to his 11:30 a.m., EDT introduction to the New York media. "Then I'll talk for the next three days."

The hiring of Brooks, who becomes the third Rangers coach in less than a year — Fred Shero resigned on Nov. 22 — was applauded by former Ranger Rod Gilbert.

"I'm not surprised Herb got the job," said Gilbert, who coaches the Rangers' New Haven farm team in the American Hockey League. "Now I think they've got somebody that can make them win the Stanley Cup."

It's also someone who can make life a little easier for Patrick, who felt the dual role of coach-general manager was tiring.

"I really enjoyed it, but I feel it was an awful lot of work to do both jobs," said Patrick. "I'm very satisfied to have the man I have as coach now."

Critics say not all Rangers players will be satisfied with Brooks, who is described as a strict disciplinarian. But Gilbert discounted that theory.

"I think all hockey players are the same, they want the discipline and when they don't get it, they feel like they're not getting enough attention," said Gilbert. "But when they have confidence in the man and Herb Brooks shows his abilities, they'll be the greatest."

Former Ranger captain Phil Esposito also praised the selection of Brooks.

"I think it's a good choice. I'm glad that he got the job and I think he and Craig will make a real good team, a real good team," said Esposito who retired midway through last season.

Esposito added a word of caution though, saying the hardest thing Brooks may have to adjust to is having Patrick as his boss, rather than his aide.

Patrick was hired by the Rangers as director of operations last summer. He took over as interim coach of the team on Nov. 22, 1980 when Shero resigned following the Rangers' slow start.

Patrick was interested in signing Brooks to coach the Rangers almost from the time he took over from Shero. Brooks was under contract to coach an amateur club in Davos, Switzerland and could not obtain his release and Patrick was named coach for the rest of the season in December.

Under Patrick, the Rangers wound up 13th overall but made a surprising run into the Stanley Cup semifinals. Patrick resumed negotiations with Brooks after the Rangers were swept by the New York Islanders in the semifinals.

Patrick reportedly earned less than $100,000 with the Rangers last season. Brooks' salary most likely would be at least equal to Patrick's.

Frost's Last Two Wins Exactly One Year Apart

By The Associated Press

If California and Toronto are scheduled to play each other on June 2 next season, don't be surprised if the forecast calls for Frost.

Dave Frost is a sore-armed California Angels right-hander whose last two major-league victories have come on that date against the Blue Jays and pitcher Luis Leal, including a 3-0 decision Tuesday night.

Frost surprised even himself with his 61-3 innings of four-hit pitching.

"It just doesn't make any sense to me but I'll take it any day," said Frost. "I just wanted to go out and pitch better here than I did in Triple-A, where I was just hideous."

Frost was making his first major-league start in 1981 since being recalled from Salt Lake City of the Pacific Coast League on May 24.

"I just don't understand it. I was down there with (former Angels) Chris Knapp and Fred Martinez and all of us had two or three starts and looked bad," said Frost, who was 1-2 with a lofty 8.60 earned run average in the PCL.

Frost lasted until the seventh inning, when Andy Hassler relieved after Barry Bonnell collected an infield single with one out. Hassler allowed no hits the rest of the game to pick up his fourth save.

"There wasn't any big reason why I pulled him," said Manager Gene Mauch. "He had thrown right around 80 pitches (79) and 80 was as far as he had gone in Salt Lake at any time."

Frost, coming back from elbow surgery performed Sept. 17, wasn't nearly ready for the major leagues during spring training.

"I hardly threw at all after the operation until I got to spring training because of arm and back problems," Frost said. "When I got to spring training, I found out I was way behind everybody else. But now my arm feels strong."

"We sent him down to Salt Lake to get him physically sound," said Mauch. "He had already proved he was a big-league pitcher."

Just as he did on June 2, 1980, Frost outdueled Leal, 3-6, who limited the Angels to five hits.

The Angels took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Don Baylor walked, stole second and scored on a single by Bobby Grich. Ed Ott hit his first homer of the season after Grich singled in the ninth.

Yankees 5, Orioles 3

Dave Revering hit a 400-foot homer, his first in a New York uniform, to give the Yankees their extra-inning victory over Baltimore.

The blast by Revering, who hit two homers for Oakland before the Yankees acquired him two weeks ago, made a winner of Rich Gossage, 2-1, who pitched the final 3½ innings and worked out of a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the top of the 11th.

Dave Winfield also homered for New York, and Eddie Murray had a two-run homer for Baltimore in the seventh inning after Ron Guidry pitched a perfect game for six innings.

Brewers 5, Tigers 2

Gorman Thomas hit two homers to give him the AL lead with 14 and Mike Caldwell and Rolie Fingers combined on a five-hitter as Milwaukee beat Detroit.

Thomas hit a three-run homer during Milwaukee's four-run first inning and connected again for a solo shot in the ninth. Caldwell, 6-4, was relieved in the eighth by Fingers, who retired all six batters he faced.

When Detroit reliever George Cappuzzello hit Ben Oglivie on the batting helmet in the third inning, both benches cleared, but the only casualty was Cappuzzello, who was cut near his left ear.

A's 6, White Sox 2

Shoety Babitt hit a two-run triple to highlight Oakland's five-run first inning that saw Chicago commit three errors. Steve McCatty, 6-4, turned in his seventh complete game and Oakland's 32nd in 52 games. Billy Martin, reprieved from his seven-day suspension and $1,000 fine because of his appeal of the penalty for bumping an umpire last week, returned to manage the A's.

Red Sox 4, Indians 0

Dwight Evans hit his 13th homer and added a run-scoring double to back Dennis Eckersley's four-hit pitching for Boston.

Eckersley, 5-4, who retired 19 of the last 21 batters, outdueled Bert Blyleven, who pitched a complete game while losing his third game in nine decisions.

Rangers 5, Twins 3

Texas' Al Oliver and Buddy Bell stroked run-scoring singles in the eighth inning to snap a 3-3 tie.

Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner decided to intentionally walk hot-hitting Bill Stein, who had his 18-game hitting streak broken, to face Oliver after Mark Wagner opened the eighth with a triple. The strategy backfired, however, as Oliver and Bell delivered.

Mariners 4, Royals 3

Jim Anderson had three hits and drove in two runs and Tom Paciorek hit a two-run triple to pace Seattle over Kansas City.

Floyd Bannister evened his record at 5-5 with relief help from Shane Rawley and Dick Drago, who registered his third save.

Martin Case Set For A Long Limbo?

CHICAGO (AP) — The case involving Billy Martin, manager of the Oakland A's, could remain in limbo for quite some time pending a hearing on Martin's appeal of a seven-day suspension and fine of $1,000 by American League President Lee MacPhail.

Martin had a run-in with umpire Terry Cooney in Toronto Friday night and was set down shortly afterward by MacPhail, who Monday, after reviewing films of the incident, announced the length of the suspension and the amount of the fine.

Martin's attorney, Ed Sapir, filed the appeal which the league received Tuesday, requiring the need of a hearing and thereby enabling Martin to return to the A's helm in time for an important three-game series beginning Tuesday night against the Chicago White Sox.

Martin said he didn't expect immediate action in the case "because we're both on different coasts. I'm sure it will take a while."

Bob Fishel, assistant to MacPhail in New York, said a hearing date will be set but it will not be in the near future because MacPhail is involved in efforts to solve the free-agent compensation issue.

"Other things take precedent," said Fishel. "Everything is on hold."

The A's will not be in New York again until the end of July and it might take that long before the appeal is heard.

Martin said he had no quarrel with MacPhail and added, "I don't fault Lee. He did what he had to do and that was to take an immediate step."

Martin was angered over the remarks made by Cooney that being bumped by Martin was like being hit by "a freight train" and that Richie Phillips, head of the umpires association, had stepped into the matter.

"He (Cooney) must think I weigh 440 pounds," said Martin, who actually weighs about 155.

"Phillips said he 'is contemplating a suit,'" said Martin. "I'm not contemplating anything. I know what I'm going to do and Mr. Phillips better get himself a pretty good lawyer."

Baseball 'Mess' Moves To Court

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Baseball's lingering labor mess moved into U.S. District Court today, with Judge Henry Werker scheduled to begin hearings on the National Labor Relations Board's request for an preliminary injunction against the sport.

If granted in the language requested, the injunction would force management to rescind its controversial free-agent compensation plan for one year, an action that would delay any player strike at least that long.

Should Werker deny the NLRB petition, the players would be free to walk out within 48 hours of the decision.

So, by arguing against the NLRB in court, the owners are in effect forcing the issue and inviting an immediate strike over the compensation question. That would be the result if attorneys for management win the case. If they lose, then the matter is placed on hold and baseball faces another re-entry draft this November without compensation for ranking free agents signing with new teams.

It is the demand by the owners for professional player compensation to replace top free agents that has brought the baseball negotiations to this crossroads. The two sides have been battling over this issue since November 1979 and, depending on Werker's schedule, they may even hold some more negotiations in between the hearings here.

The judge, on temporary assignment to hear criminal cases here, has assured both sides that he would have a decision within 48 hours after the end of hearings. But he also said that the baseball matter would have to be fit into his calendar around any criminal cases which may be assigned to him.

Among the witnesses expected to testify before Werker were Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the owners, and Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association.

It was the union's unfair-labor practice charge that management had failed to bargain in good faith which brought the NLRB into the baseball case. The players association has asked that the owners be ordered to open their books to support various public claims, including one by Kuhn, that many teams are losing money because of expensive free agent contracts. That case will be heard by an administrative law judge in New York City June 15.

Baseball has twice gone to the brink of a player strike over the compensation issue. The players nearly walked out May 22, 1980 before a marathon negotiating session settled all parts of the collective bargaining agreement except for the compensation question. A new strike was scheduled for May 29 of this year until the NLRB and subsequent court appearances stopped the clock on that deadline.

"We've avoided one strike," said Mark Belanger, player representative of the Baltimore Orioles. "We'd like to avoid another if we can."

Manager Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers made three wild pitches in one inning for the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1955.

Driesell Says He's Not Leaving Terps

BALTIMORE (AP) — Lefty Driesell hasn't changed his philosophy about changing jobs if the price is right, but the Maryland basketball coach insists he's not about to leave the Terps.

"I'm flattered, and I'll listen," Driesell said Tuesday of a feeler over his availability to become athletic director at Davidson College. "But it's the furthest thing in my mind to leave Maryland."

Driesell coached basketball at Davidson for 10 years, compiling a 176-65 record as the Wildcats finished three times among the Top Ten teams.

"I haven't been offered the job and I haven't applied for it," Driesell said. "I haven't talked with anybody in an official capacity. It was just some of my friends calling to ask if I'd be willing to come back."

"If they make the right offer, maybe I'll go," Driesell said. "But I've always said that for the right money, I'd go anywhere. That's still true, but it doesn't mean I want to get out of coaching or leave Maryland."

The Washington Post reported in Tuesday's editions that Davidson was looking to replace Gene Bingham, who resigned two weeks ago, by July 1.

"We're in the very early stages of putting together a list of candidates," the Post quoted Dr. J.B. Stout, the head of Davidson's search committee. "But a lot of people have fond memories of what Lefty did here as basketball coach, and we would certainly be interested in talking to him."

Driesell has compiled a 244-102 record in 12 seasons at Maryland. The Terps have been ranked in the Top Ten four times during his regime, twice finished first in the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season and five times lost in the finals of the ACC playoffs.

The Terps have lost their top four scorers from the 1980-81 season, including center Buck Williams who decided to forego his final season and become eligible for next week's National Basketball Association draft.

"Right now, I'm worried about Maryland. 24 hours a day," Driesell said. "But we'll be all right."

Watson, Jack Set For Classic

ATLANTA (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, one of the last men to enter, and Tom Watson will use this week's $300,000 Atlanta Classic as their last competitive tune-up for the U.S. Open golf championship.

"There's a lot of work to be done before the Open," Watson said before a practice round over the 6,945 yards of hills that make up the Atlanta Country Club course, site of the tournament that begins Thursday.

Although he has regained his customary position atop the season's money-winning list with $278,000, Watson is considerably less than pleased with his play.

He took over the No.1 position last week with a second-place finish in the Kemper Open.

In his last seven starts, he has won two, including the Masters, and has been ninth or better in four others. In his last two starts he's come from well off the pace to finish third and second.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip - RIDER LOST SADDLE; STUCK IT OUT; RODE BAREBACK.
Today's Cryptiquip clue: A equals S

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There is a strong tendency for success as a result of policies which you are eager to put in motion. There could be some difficulty in attaining desired goals if delays are permitted.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Stick to those good ideas you have even though it seems difficult to put in motion at this time. Cooperate more with others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are expected to accept new conditions, but study them well before you do so. Strive for increased harmony with loved one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can handle financial affairs intelligently today, so get an early start. Follow the fine suggestions of an expert.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A day to take a more active role in career activities. Don't criticize others now and avoid trouble.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) It's all right to plan ways now to add to present income, but not a good time for putting them in operation. Relax at home tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A personal affair needs more study before you start working on it. Think kindly of one who has done you favors in the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take time for analyzing the path ahead where your career is concerned so you will know where to make possible changes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't rely too much on others at this time. Get busy handling an important affair yourself for best result. Avoid a group affair.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan new ways to handle a personal affair for desired results. Sidestep an opponent who could give you trouble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A new contact could give you the wrong information, so be alert. Make plans to have greater income in the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study a new system so that you can handle daily routines more efficiently. Be more thoughtful of loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Avoid long talks with associates since they wouldn't help matters at this time. Don't overlook promises you have made.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will want to do things in a precise manner, but teach to give more attention to the overall objectives for best results. Direct education along lines of research. A fine scientific mind in this chart.

Madame Sun Eulogized By China Leader

By PHIL BROWN
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — Chinese officials paid a last tribute today to Soong Ching-ling, widow of modern China's founding father Sun Yat-sen, in a lavish state funeral attended by 10,000 people. The nation's current leader eulogized her as a great patriot who "kept pace with history."

"Starting as a great revolutionary democrat, she became a great communist," said Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping.

Before him was a box containing Madame Sun's ashes, draped with a Communist Party flag. A huge funeral portrait hung over the stage in the auditorium of the Great Hall of the People, which was decorated for the occasion with evergreens and funeral wreaths.

The man expected to be named Communist Party Chairman later this month, party general secretary Hu Yaobang, presided at the ceremonies for Madame Sun, who died Friday of leukemia at age 88.

Standing by Hu's side in a show of unity was current party chairman Hua Guofeng, the late Mao Tse-tung's chosen successor, now reported on his way out of what is nominally the top office in China.

Absent, however, were Madame Sun's relatives now living on Taiwan — including Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek, her brother-in-law, and sided with the communists, who seized power in 1949 and drove Chiang and the Nationalists to Taiwan.

Afterward, she held a number of important posts in the People's Republic, though until three weeks ago, she had not been admitted to full membership in the Communist Party.

The symbolic value of her conversion was underscored by Deng's 20-minute speech at her funeral.

"She always showed great solicitude for old friends and acquaintances who had been followers of Dr. Sun Yat-sen in their early years, and deep concern for the future of Taiwan," he said.

"She ardently hoped that peace talks between the Kuomintang (Nationalists) and the Communist Party would be conducted at an early date so as to accomplish the reunification of the motherland, to which she made invaluable contributions."

"What we treasure most is the fact that Soong Ching-ling kept pace with history," Deng said.

The communists have long sought to bring Taiwan back under China's control. The island's government, headed by Chiang's son, Chiang Ching-kuo, has resisted, and instead claims it is the lawful government of all China.

Madame Sun was "a leader whom the people of all nationalities in China, including Taiwan compatriots and overseas Chinese, love and respect from the bottom of their hearts," Deng said.

Soong Ching-ling's body lay in state for three days in the Great Hall. The official Xinhua news agency said more than 120,000 people, from kindergarten pupils to the leaders of the nation, paid last respects.

Tuesday evening, a hearse carried her remains to the Babaoshan crematorium. Xinhua said nearly a million people — one-seventh of Peking's population — lined Chang An Avenue to see the hearse pass, and it took more than an hour for the vehicles to travel the six-mile route.

BACK TO BASICS
PEKING (AP) — The Chinese government has postponed plans to launch more satellites and to build a proton accelerator, so as to devote more effort to improvements in manufacturing and agriculture, officials say.

A Welcome For Carrier Being Urged

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writers
TOKYO (AP). — Japan's ruling political party is calling on supporters to join in welcoming the USS Midway to its home port, hoping the gesture will counter protests from opposition groups who contend the aircraft carrier may be carrying nuclear weapons, officials said today.

A spokesman for Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's Liberal Democratic Party said local government and civic leaders had been asked to send messages or be present at the U.S.-run Yokosuka Naval Base, 35 miles south of Tokyo, when the 51,000-ton flattop arrives home Friday from a 103-day patrol cruise in Southeast Asia and the Indian Ocean.

The carrier has become the focus of an angry dispute unleashed last month when former U.S. Ambassador Edwin O. Reischauer asserted that U.S. warships often carry nuclear weapons into Japanese waters and ports. Such weapons are prohibited here, and Reischauer's comments brought protests from opposition politicians.

The government insists the United States has always abided by the ban. U.S. officials refuse to comment, citing a policy of never discussing the location or movement of nuclear arms.

Anti-nuclear groups, labor unions and leftists seized on the Midway's arrival as a symbol, and they have promised demonstrations — including the dispatch of a flotilla of small boats into Tokyo Bay.

Leaders predicted 10,000 people would join in the protests. Police said 3,000 riot-equipped police would keep order.

Concerned city officials appealed to the Navy for a postponement of the carrier's return to Yokosuka — in vain.

Residents, however, appeared to be taking it all in stride.

"I have no objection to American nuclear-armed ships making port calls as long as there are safety guarantees. I'm sure the Americans will take sufficient precautions," said Tsuneo Suzuki, 29, who works at his father's gas station in the city of 424,000 on the southwest shore of Tokyo Bay just south of Yokohama.

"People say Yokosuka will be attacked in a war because the U.S. ships are here. But if war starts, all of Japan is going to be attacked anyway," said Koichi Suzuki, 60, who runs a pharmacy facing the docks. "Wars happen when there is a gap in military strength. They're less likely while America is strong."

Many residents were skeptical of the government's insistence that American vessels do not carry nuclear weapons into Japan, and never have.

"I think they're all carrying nuclear weapons," said a bus tour employee, a former soldier in Japan's Self-Defense Force.

"What is wrong is for the government to tell us no nuclear weapons are on board," said Kiyoshi Ichikawa, 61, a taxi company owner.

Susumu Kaneko, 61, who owns a grocery store, said, "It's best to bring the truth out in the open." But he added that Japan "needs to rely on the U.S. nuclear umbrella."

Special Edition On Highways

CHAPEL HILL — Governor James Hunt's controversial proposal to finance the state's highways is the subject of a special edition of Stataline.

"Stataline Special: The Highway Fund Debate," airs at 7 p.m. Friday, June 5 on the UNC Center for Public Television, Channel 25, Greenville.

The hour long program includes a debate and question answer session between the debate participants and a panel of journalists. Stataline's managing editor, Richard W. Hatch, will moderate the debate.

Bob Hope Again Winner Of Week's Rating Race

NEW YORK (AP) — "Bob Hope's Birthday Party" on NBC won the week's ratings race, but CBS listed seven of the 10 highest-rated programs to win the networks' competition, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

CBS' average rating was 15.1, compared to 14.3 for ABC and 13.8 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 15.1 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the country were watching CBS.

CBS, No. 1 in the recently completed 1980-81 TV season, now has won the three-way race two weeks running.

The rating for "Bob Hope's Birthday Party" was 21.3. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the nation with television, 21.3 percent saw at least part of the program.

The first-place finish for Hope's special was no real surprise; the comedian regularly scores ratings points for the network. NBC may have been cheered more by the No. 19 finish in the week ending May 31 for "Hill Street Blues."

The series was introduced last season to critical acclaim but low ratings. NBC has renewed the series for next season, and is making a determined effort to build an audience.

Most programs broadcast during the week were repeats. The few original movies and specials broadcast in the period week were only moderately successful. "Don't Look Back," a made-for-TV film on ABC on the life of baseball legend Leroy "Satchel" Paige, tied for 24th place, with the "National Cheerleading Championship" on CBS No. 31. An NBC movie, "Almost Summer," finished 44th.

NBC had five of the week's six lowest-rated programs, starting with "Sanford" in 57th place and followed by "NBC Reports," "Robert Klein Special," "B.J. and the Bear" and "Steve Allen Comedy Hour." The first episode in a repeat of ABC's "Roots: The Next Generations" was No. 62.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

"Bob Hope's Birthday Party," with a rating of 21.3 representing 17 million homes; NBC, "The Jeffersons," 20.1 or 16.1 million, "Dukes of Hazzard," 19.7 or 15.7 million, and "60 Minutes," 19.3 or 15.4 million, all CBS; "20-20," 18.7 or 14.9 million, and "Love Boat," 18.5 or 14.8 million, both ABC, and "Alice," 18.4 or 14.7 million, "Dallas," 18.2 or 14.5 million, "M-A-S-H," 17.9 or 14.3 million, and "Trapper John, M.D.," 17.6 or 14.1 million, all CBS.

The next 11 programs: "Women Who Rate a 10," NBC, and "Barney Miller" and "Hart to Hart," both ABC, three-way tie; "Love Boat" and "Taxi," both ABC, tie; "Fantasy Island," ABC; "CHiPs" and "Facts of Life," both NBC, tie; "Hill Street Blues," NBC, and "Magnum, P.I." and "House Calls," both CBS, tie.

the Jedi," the next chapter in the "Star Wars" saga.

The movie, third in the series, will be filmed in England and on location in North Africa, Germany and the United Kingdom. Executive producer George Lucas wrote the original story.

Dick Clark Entering New Phase In His Long Career

By CHARLIE REINA
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For Dick Clark, network broadcasting is nothing new. The seemingly ageless radio and TV personality has been seen and heard by millions of music-conscious Americans, week after week, for more than a quarter-century.

Clark has entered a new phase of his career with a weekly, nationwide radio show, "The Dick Clark National Music Survey."

"If you were able to publish a music magazine and put it on radio," says Clark, "this would be as close as you could get to it."

The framework of each three-hour show is a rundown of the Top 30 singles listed in "Cashbox" magazine, with a variety of other features mixed in.

"It won't be an 'oldies-but-goodies' show, but there are aspects of it that are non-current," he explains.

The features will draw from Clark's well-nurtured ties with the music industry. And the Mutual Radio Network, which will distribute the program, is so confident that it's building — in effect — a "Dick Clark Network."

When Clark was interviewed several weeks ago, he was hoping for an eventual sign-up of 300 stations. Mutual said later that more than 450 stations had bought the show before the first broadcast May 30.

The 51-year-old Clark is best known as host of "American Bandstand," an ABC television mainstay since 1957. But few people know that Clark's very first job was as a network radio announcer.

It was the "Rural Radio Network," which provided weather forecasts for the farm communities in upstate New York. At the time, in 1947, the teen-aged Clark was handling a few on-air duties for WRUN in Utica.

Now, 34 years later, he reflects: "I've always loved radio; I've never been away from it."

All the better for Clark's music survey. Although it's based on contemporary music, each show features at least one "flashback" segment. And there, says Clark, his 25-year-old library of tapes and other retrospective material will come in handy.

"Fortunately," he adds, "I've never thrown anything away."

Clark became a disc jockey at radio station WOLF in Syracuse while attending Syracuse University. After graduation, he served briefly as a local television news anchor, at WKTV in Utica, then headed for Philadelphia.

It was there, at WFIL, that he became host — first on radio, then television — of the station's most popular show, "Bandstand." Two years later, in 1957, Clark sold ABC on the concept. And the rest, as they say, is history.

If anything bothers Clark about this latest venture, it's that the show is likely to compete with "American Top 40." That weekly syndicated show, with Casey Kasem as host, is perhaps the most popular music survey currently broadcast nationwide.

Says Clark, "It's a difficult personal thing for me," adding that he and Kasem are "very close friends."

Still, Clark admits he's "very excited" about the music survey. Although it will go out to the stations on disc initially, Mutual has plans to make it part of the "radio space age." Clark recalls that when he was approached about the show, Mutual said, "We've got this satellite..."

And that, says Clark, was "the magic word."

Lawyer Says Rita Failing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Screen siren Rita Hayworth, the popular World War II pin-up girl whose marriages scandalized Hollywood, is suffering from a fast-developing form of senility, according to her lawyer.

Attorney Leonard Monroe, who also is Miss Hayworth's business manager, said in a court petition filed Monday that the 62-year-old actress is suffering from Alzheimer's disease and cannot care for herself. The petition asks that Monroe be named conservator over her medical and personal care as well as her property.

The petition says Miss Hayworth does not wish to appear in court but doesn't oppose Monroe's appointment.

The sultry star was married five times. All the marriages ended in divorce. Among her former husbands were actor and director Orson Welles, singer Dick Haymes and Aly Khan, a Moslem prince.

Miss Hayworth's most famous films included "Gilda," "Only Angels Have Wings," "Separate Tables," "The Lady In Question," "Pal Joey," and "You'll Never Get Rich."

Failed Appear In Divorce Case

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A warrant has been issued for the arrest of actor Timothy Bottoms, who portrayed a law student in the film "The Paper Chase," on charges he failed to appear at a court hearing in his divorce case.

Superior Court Judge Charles Stevens issued the bench warrant Tuesday after finding Bottoms in contempt of court for failing to obey a previous order to return a 1973 Mercedes-Benz to his estranged wife, Alicia.

Mrs. Bottoms, 34, told the judge that when she and two sheriff's deputies went to Bottoms' Monterey County ranch recently, she saw the car but couldn't get it because the actor's father, James Bottoms, was armed with a rifle and refused to give it up.

The younger Bottoms, 29, was found in contempt last year for harassing his estranged wife, but the citation was dismissed after he promised to stop bothering her.

The couple were married in 1975 and had a son in 1977. A date for the divorce trial is expected to be set at a July 7 hearing.

Kate Jackson With Pavarotti

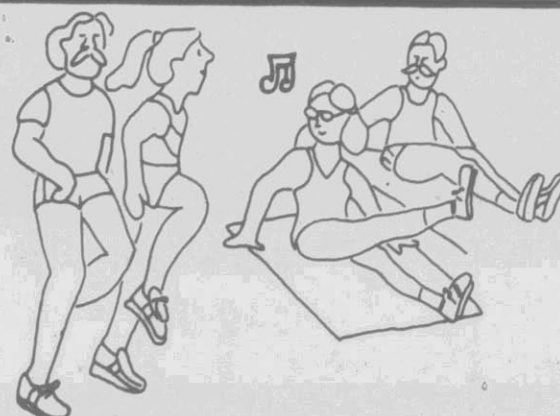

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Kate Jackson will star with operatic superstar Luciano Pavarotti in MGM's musical comedy "Yes, Giorgio."

Franklin J. Schaffner will direct from an original screenplay by Norman Steinberg.

Miss Jackson, formerly of "Charlie's Angels," will play an American physician pitted against her reluctant patient, an Italian opera star, in a cultural clash that sparks romance.

Expect Lower Interest Rates

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Although interest rates in the nation's money markets have risen this week, many economists are holding to their predictions of lower rates this summer.

"The trend ought to be downward," said Belinda Pearson, chief economist at Seattle First National Bank. She believes the economy is weakening, leading to less demand for credit and a lower rate of inflation.

"I still think rates are going to go down," said Rachel Balbach, an economist at First National Bank in St. Louis. "But that doesn't mean they won't bounce around. Heaven knows they will."

More banks joined the move to a lower prime lending rate Tuesday, cutting their rates by one-half percentage point to 20 percent. Some banks had lowered their rates earlier in the week.

Interest rates in the money markets, however, rose for the second day in a row. Changes in those rates are significant because many banks acquire funds in the money markets. When money-market rates go up, banks' cost of funds go up, too.

Some economists believe the Federal Reserve will not allow money-market rates to fall very much in the weeks ahead. As a result, say those economists, most interest rates are not likely to fall from their current high range.

Among the banks lowering their prime rates from 20.5 percent were Bank of America, which is the nation's largest, and Citibank, which is second-largest. Others included No. 4 Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., No. 11 Wells Fargo Bank and No. 16 Mellon Bank.

Some smaller, regional banks also joined the move to a lower prime, including Mercantile Trust in St. Louis, First Wisconsin National Bank in Milwaukee and First National Bank of Atlanta.

The prime rate is what banks quote as the lowest rate charged on loans, usually of between 90 days and one year, to their best-risk corporate customers.

Often banks will charge a lower rate, however, on very short-term loans to top customers.

Smaller businesses generally are charged one or more percentage points above the stated prime rate.

The banks that cut their prime rates to 20 percent said they did so because their cost of funds had declined in recent days and because the demand for business loans had slackened.

Late last week most Wall Street analysts and many bank economists were predicting that interest rates would slide quite a lot this week because of signs that the Federal Reserve was ready to ease its grip on credit. The Fed had kept a tight rein on the supply of credit in recent months in hopes of curbing inflation.

The predictions of a downtrend were altered somewhat on Monday, however, after some interest rates rose unexpectedly. Despite that upswing, many economists said they believed rates would resume their downward trend.

Solved With A 'Cold One'

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — If they won't lend you an ear, or give you a cheer, hand them a beer.

That was Republican Gov. James Thompson's solution after he took the podium at a statehouse AFL-CIO rally Tuesday and was greeted with loud boos for his allegedly anti-labor bias.

Thompson cooled down the opposition by inviting the throng to the governor's mansion for a cold one.

James Skilbeck, a Thompson press aide, said calls were placed to Thompson's wife, Jayne, asking permission to invite "a few thousand close friends over for a party on the lawn."

Permission granted, the governor's re-election committee placed a rush order for 82 16-gallon kegs at $26.25 per keg. One-thousand pairs of elbows showed up, ready to be bent.

They spent most of the time chatting about work, asking Thompson for his autograph and trying to stay cool. The only problem was the mansion's plumbing, which couldn't handle the crowd. After an hour, more than a dozen portable toilets were trucked in.

Asked if lawn parties would become a regular feature, Mrs. Thompson said: "I don't think so. We don't usually have a crowd this size."

Law Revised By Legislature

RALEIGH — During the current session of the N.C. General Assembly, a revision of the Employment Security Commission (ESC) law was passed.

In addition to numerous technical changes, the revision affects eligibility for unemployment benefits, the amount of benefits payable and the duration of benefits.

One major legislative shift eliminated the deduction of certain types of pension incomes from unemployment benefits payable to eligible claimants. Prior to this change, all pensions or other periodic payments based on previous employment were deducted from the weekly benefit amount.

Effective July 1, 1981, only those payments received under the Social Security Act, the Railroad Retirement Act or payments contributed to by "base period" employers will be deducted.

For more information on the impact of these legislative changes, Pitt County residents can contact the Job Service Office at 3101 Bismark Street, Greenville.

REVIVAL

Revival services will be held June 3-7 at Lifegate Baptist Church, Cicod, beginning at 7:30 each evening. Evangelist John H. Long will be the guest speaker. Homecoming will be held Sunday at noon. Pastor Travis Smith invites the public to attend.

Taiwan, Mainland China Reveal Sharp Contrasts

BY JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent
TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Separated by time, space and ideology from the Chinese mainland, Taiwan's 18 million people retain a lively interest in political and domestic events there.

The Nationalist Chinese government here, calling itself the Republic of China, steadfastly refuses to talk with the mainland communists, but newspapers, magazines and radio and television — all subject to careful official scrutiny — regularly report on mainland developments. A half dozen scholarly research organizations supplement this with analyses and commentaries that are deemed by outside experts as being remarkably objective, given the political gulf between Taiwan's Nationalists and Peking's Communists.

Dispatches from Peking by international news agencies are widely published, but always with quotation marks around official titles, implying that they are not legitimate.

"Peiping" (Northern Peace) — the old Nationalist spelling for the mainland capital — is used instead of "Peking" (Northern Capital). The word "Red" is inserted before China.

By contrast, Peking's tightly controlled press provides relatively little information about Taiwan, and rarely ventures beyond tourism and other innocuous subjects.

After 32 years, there are other, indirect ties between mainland China and Taiwan, a principal one being millions of dollars in trade — some estimates put it at $120 million — that moves every year through Hong Kong and Macao, the tiny Portuguese colony at the mouth of China's Canton River.

In addition, many mainland natives now living here — no number has been published — have visited China by way of the United States and other countries. Most return here, apparently satisfied that Taiwan is the better choice.

Though the mainland's grinding poverty has eased somewhat in recent years, they find friends and relatives there still living a life of austerity, and cannot help but be struck by the especially dramatic contrasts between Peking and Taipei, the rival capitals.

Though 8.5 million Chinese surge through its great avenues, Peking's atmosphere is one of drab uniformity. A trickle of automobiles, none privately owned, set against several million bicycles, emphasizes its backwardness. Nighttime deepens the mood. While activity flickers in a dozen theaters and a few restaurants and hotels, Peking's nightlife is mostly hidden along dimly lit streets and behind high walls.

Against this drabness, Taipei, a city of 2.2 million, is a blaze of light, movement and noise. By day, its entire population seems to be on the move, on foot, by private car and motorcycle. Bicyclists dart in and out of the rushing traffic.

Available to the Taiwanese are hundreds of restaurants, coffee shops and sidewalk food stalls, a seemingly endless number of shops stocked with a profusion of goods, from carpets to electronics, golf clubs to textiles.

Living standards not only are higher here — the per-capita gross national product for 1980 was $2,278 compared to around $470 on the mainland — but life styles are markedly different.

Taiwan is a material-minded civilization, geared to the electronic age, bent on making money and intent on the pleasures that come with it. There are few restrictions on how to make money or how to spend it.

At least part of Taiwan's economic success can be attributed to the aid it received from the United States after the communist victory on the mainland in 1949. But formal U.S.-Taiwan diplomatic links were severed Jan. 1, 1979, when the United States established relations with Peking.

Since official travel restrictions were lifted two years ago, hundreds of thousands of ordinary Chinese here have gone abroad as tourists, a freedom still denied their mainland compatriots.

Five years after the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung in China and the end of the repressive era he represented, most mainland Chinese continue to dress in the blue, gray or green uniforms which have been standard wear since 1949, when the communists took over. Life for 900 million of China's estimated one billion people revolves around farm communes — highly controlled units whose annual per-capita income in 1980 was slightly more than $50. For these people, life is much work and little play.

Post-Mao moderates, led by Communist Party Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping, have introduced reforms, including limited freedoms of speech, press and voting, which have whetted mainland appetites for more. Not surprisingly, the mainlanders are increasingly desirous of acquiring the sophisticated products already enjoyed by the Taiwanese.

The Chinese share at least one thing in common — governments with an almost paranoid fear of subversion. Each maintains a profusion of security services intent on rooting out dissidence, either native or of foreign origin.

In almost every respect, this small island has in the past 32 years outdone the mainland. It has more trade — $39.5 billion last year to Peking's $36.6 billion — more foreign investment, and less unemployment, only 70,000 last year compared to the mainland's 10 million or so.

Like most capitalist economies, however, Taiwan suffered from galloping inflation. Wholesale prices rose 12.6 percent and consumer prices 18.5 percent. Inflation, once almost unknown in the mainland's planned economy, hit 7 percent last year.

The civil war which brought the communists to power and sent the Nationalists into exile here in 1949 left both sides exhausted. Their economies had been crippled by the savage struggle and by World War II which preceded it.

Each approached the problem in a similar way, introducing land reform and concentrating on agriculture and light industry.

The Nationalists made a success of land reform, bought heavy machinery with their exports and devoted inventiveness and energy to economic advance. Spared the factionalism of the mainland, they drew on their best brains for the long, hard pull.

They could not have succeeded without massive economic, financial and military help from the United States, backed by American expertise and advice.

The U.S. assistance built up an ally during the critical days of the Vietnam War, when Taiwan was sometimes compared to a vast stationary aircraft carrier waiting to be used, and benefitted the U.S. economy as well.

As Taiwan grew stronger the aid decreased. Military grants ended in 1965, economic aid was cut off in 1973. The island now buys what it wants from the United States (around $500 million in military hardware in 1980) and manufactures some of its own.

On the mainland, the communists were plagued by the urge to experiment with economic laws. In 1958 they embarked on an ill-fated crash program called "the Great Leap Forward," aimed at boosting China into the first rank of industrial nations almost overnight.

China was still recovering from the failure of the leap forward when Chairman Mao plunged it into the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, the massive purge that left China a third-rate power run by dazed survivors.

The handful of talented men who survived the mainland purges proved insufficient for the ambitious 20-year modernization plan that Peking now dreams of achieving.

Seeing Renewed Commitment

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Baptist student ministry leaders have reported seeing a renewed spiritual commitment among college students and point to a sharp increase in baptisms and missions involvement as evidence.

Reports from denominational officials show a 55.8 increase in student baptisms last year while student giving to missions — $804,959 — set a record.

Alaskan Roads Just Melt Away

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska (AP) — Fifty miles of ice roads were built on frozen tundra, rivers and the Beaufort Sea last winter at a cost of $3.5 million, oil-company builders reported.

The 150-foot wide roads were meant to last only four months before melting.

Roads were needed to transport materials and equipment for new exploration sites. Metal stakes with reflector tips line the sides of the roads.

LEPROSY INCREASING
CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors at Cook County Hospital are noting a sharp increase in the number of leprosy cases this year, with at least 30 being treated in recent weeks, doctors said.

Dr. Sidney Barsky, chairman of the dermatology department, said, "Before, we might see 8 to 10 cases a year. We are now treating about 30 patients."

Mount McKinley: One Of Most Dangerous Walks

DANGEROUS WALK — Powdered snow swirls around the summit of Mt. McKinley in Alaska where, in 1980, eight persons lost their lives attempting to scale the 20,320-foot peak. One climber has already died on the mountain this year and another is missing since the climbing season began in April. (AP Laserphoto) climbers are Americans, but others come from nearly every European country, Japan, Taiwan, Korea and many communist-bloc nations, Gerhard said.

Over the years, requirements imposed on climbers have varied — expeditions once needed certification by park officials and mountaineering clubs. This year climbers merely must register, which helps the National Park Service keep track of them.

"I figure the average smart climber will continue to carry a radio," Gerhard said of the decision to drop a rule that climbers carry radios. "Those who climb without a radio are basically choosing the option that if they get in trouble they may be there forever."

In any case, Mount McKinley is not the stuff of a Sunday stroll. Climbers need gear which would be used only in winter in other parts of the United States, and the altitude and weather are formidable foes.

Climbers unaccustomed to high altitudes must beware of the low atmospheric pressure and reduced oxygen. The low pressure can cause altitude sickness, in which body nitrogen is released as gas bubbles that block veins and arteries and collect in the tissues, causing vomiting, pain and paralysis.

The mountain is always covered with snow and ice, temperatures can drop to 30 below even in summer, and high winds — and accompanying wind chill — pose a significant threat. Last year, 27 climbers were hospitalized for frostbite.

"If anything, it (the wind) is worse than the cold. You can't hide from it," said Denkwalter.

Gerhard said even experienced climbers get into trouble on the peak, which was first scaled in 1913. "Some of the best are dying on Mount McKinley," he said, adding that short of closing the mountain, he doesn't know how to make it safer.

Most climbers leave from Talkeetna, 60 miles from the peak, where two rangers run a station for climbers. Most climbers are flown to Kahiltna Glacier, just outside the park boundary at 7,000 feet. That's the start of the West Buttress route, where Gerhard says "you may see 100 other climbers along the way."

Other routes, like Cassin Ridge on the southeast face, and the South Face, are more rarely attempted.

Most expeditions take 2½ to 3 weeks, although two veteran climbers went from 10,000 feet to the top in 19 hours in 1979. The size and cost of expeditions vary.

In Europe, Gerhard notes, most climbers carry insurance to pay for rescues and there are more and better-equipped rescue units.

"A rescue on McKinley, there's nothing certain about it," he said. "We don't go out and initiate rescues. We don't have a rescue team or rescue organization as such."

Most rescues — there were 16 in 1980 — are done by climbers or private or military helicopters. But the use of helicopters is limited because only special choppers can operate close to the mountain at higher elevations.

DENALI NATIONAL PARK, Alaska (AP) — The ascent of Mount McKinley, a looming, snow-covered giant that is North America's highest peak, is "basically a walk," depending on the route to the summit.

"Of course it may be one of the most dangerous walks in the world," adds Bob Gerhard, chief mountaineering ranger for Denali National Park, just south of the 20,320-foot mountain.

That danger was highlighted last week with the report of the death of a Columbia University graduate student in a glacial crevasse and the rescue of a fellow climber at the 8,400-foot level.

Another climber is missing on the mountain, and there have been two other rescues since the climbing season began in April with nearly two dozen people challenging the peak.

In 1980, eight people died on Mount McKinley. At least 659 tried for the summit, and Gerhard said "it looks like there'll be at least that many" before this season ends in August.

There have been a few successful winter ascents, but most climbers try for the top in summer — if one can use the word summer in connection with temperatures hovering around zero at the summit, snow and winds that often vary between 70 and 100 mph.

"It's always winter up there. I was on the summit on the Fourth of July one year and it was below zero," said Paul Denkwalter, who runs a mountaineering equipment store in Anchorage. To those in Anchorage, 135 miles south of the mountain, McKinley appears as a soft pyramid on the horizon.

Denkwalter, who ascended McKinley in 1971, said the 15-mile West Buttress route — which requires no rock or rope skills — is considered the "tourist" climb, adding, "It's a lot of work too."

Speaking of Your Health... Lester L. Coleman, M.D. Safety Precautions for the Elderly

A neighbor, Mrs. L.B. of New York City, fractured her hip last year when she slipped on wet pavement. This year she fractured her other hip in an almost identical way. It is sad that such a dreadful injury should occur even once. It is catastrophic that it should occur twice. Even sadder is the likelihood that both fractures might have been avoided.

Fractured hips and fractured bones cause the elderly long months of pain and inactivity. And all because of carelessness. As we become older, our bones become more brittle, more fragile, and more easily broken by simple falls and accidents.

Repeated studies show that haste in moving from one place to another is the greatest single cause of these accidents.

Dr. Carter Rowe, of the Harvard Medical School, repeatedly calls attention to the fact that the elderly are simply unable to give up the habit of hurrying. So convinced of this was he that he wrote the following pledge, which he insisted should be signed by every elderly adult: "I hereby promise my children and my grandchildren to stop hurrying. I will not rush to the door or telephone. I will pause a moment when I stand up. I will be sure of my footing. I will think before I act."

This pledge should be read and reread, calling attention to the fact that accidents occur in the "safety of the home." The following rules can spare people the disaster

1. Good lighting is good precaution. Keep light cords off the floor. A night light that shows the way to the bathroom is imperative. Sleepiness increases the hazard of injury.
 2. Highly-waxed kitchen and bathroom floors become less attractive if you're lying in bed with a fractured hip.
 3. Throw rugs on polished or unpolished floors are hazards.
 4. Stairwells are a constant threat. An added outside rail — in addition to the inner rail — is an excellent investment in safety.
 5. Toys scattered on any floor add to the possibility of a fall and injury.
 6. Slippery streets and broken pavements are a threat to hip joints and bones.
- Many overnight visitors awake to find themselves somewhat confused amid the new surroundings of a hotel or a friend's house. It is important that people do not hurry out of bed until they are completely oriented to the new surroundings.
- I've often made the suggestion that the elderly who are less surefooted use a cane or an umbrella to support themselves. Many accidents could thus be avoided. Extra care and precaution is the only way to prevent these unhappy incidents.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Motorists, get your pencils ready. If you see someone in a Maricopa County car committing a no-no, call 262-1116.

If you can't remember the number, just glance up — it's painted in big, black letters on the trunk of all county-owned vehicles as part of the message: "If I Break the Law Call 262-1116."

One group of people already got the message and they aren't happy about it.

"They felt we did not trust them, but they are county employees paid by the taxpayers," said Sam Reynolds, the county risk manager who is in charge of safety and insurance claims.

"They should drive carefully," he said.

"The strategy is not to punish people, but to make them aware of what they are doing. The object is to reduce accidents."

Reynolds said nine employees have been reported in the past month. One caller said an employee tossed a lighted cigarette out the car window. Other callers told of workers speeding or making improper turns. Reynolds said no call involved accidents or extremely poor driving.

By the way, the phone number rings Reynolds himself.

Little Policy Change Despite Reagan Rhetoric

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Barring an unexpected shift during Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.'s visit to China next month, the Reagan administration's Asia policy is moving quietly along a familiar track.

U.S. relationships with Peking and with Taiwan have not changed, despite President Reagan's past criticism of the agreement to normalize relations with the People's Republic and his long friendship with the Nationalists.

Whatever inclination Reagan may have had to back away from mainland China seems to have yielded to a higher priority: deterring the Soviet Union. Despite years of staunch support for Taiwan, he has chosen not to risk jostling the relatively recent strategic triangle that links Washington, Peking and Tokyo by improving relations with the Nationalists.

"We recognize that the 1 billion people of China play a very important role in the maintenance of global peace and stability," Walter J. Stoessel Jr., undersecretary of state for political affairs, said in a late April policy speech.

"Our many interests intersect many points along the way. Our policies toward Soviet expansion and hegemonism run on parallel tracks."

Yet there are snags in U.S.-Asia relations. Japan, with a strong pacifist tradition, is resisting a boost in defense spending above the $11 billion budgeted for this year. So sensitive is the security issue, Masayoshi Ito resigned as foreign minister after a communique summing up Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's talks here with Reagan referred to an American-Japanese "alliance."

Claims by former U.S. Ambassador Edwin O. Reischauer that U.S. nuclear-armed warships had entered Japanese waters, despite a 21-year-old verbal agreement, caused a furor. Suzuki denied the agreement allowed such violations of the anti-nuclear principles of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

"Haig is skipping Tokyo because of the flap" over U.S. ties, Ray S. Cline, former CIA intelligence chief, said in an interview. Although he said he did not mean to be critical of U.S. policy toward Asia, Cline called for a more visible commitment to Taiwan. Otherwise, he said, China would be led to expect "too much deference and it will be detrimental to our ability to operate freely and have a good working relationship in the whole region."

China's contribution to joint security is limited. The defense budget was recently cut 20 per cent. Chinese leaders are not seeking U.S.

weapons now. Still, Haig's visit might lead to sales of American computers for civilian purposes, electronics and machine tools.

The purpose of the Haig visit is not to break major new ground, but to restore momentum to the U.S. relationship with China.

China's value in the anti-Soviet strategy is to rally support in the Third World against the Russian intervention in Afghanistan and other extensions of Soviet power, to provide arms to Egypt, Pakistan, Thailand and other friendly countries and to modernize Chinese industry and science.

U.S.-Chinese economic ties are growing stronger. This year, China moved up to seventh place as an export market and is now the third largest buyer of American agricultural products. The Chinese are expected to buy $4.5 billion to $5 billion in U.S. goods, overall, in 1981.

Haig, who according to some reports argued vigorously against any dilution of former President Carter's normalization agreement of December 1978, is scheduled to visit Peking June 14-16. It's the first trip to Peking by a secretary of state in four years and provides the first extensive discussion between a Reagan administration official and Chinese leaders.

Coincidentally, the Communist Party's Central Committee will be holding an important meeting at which Hu Yaobang, the general secretary, is expected to succeed Hua Guofeng as chairman. A wide range of Chinese policies will be reviewed, mostly economic.

During the campaign, Reagan suggested meetings between U.S. and Taiwan representatives in official offices, permission for Taiwan to open more quasi-official branches in the United States and resumption of training of Taiwanese military officers in this country.

But when Edwin Meese III, his closest adviser, said last month that the administration would sell arms to

Production Up In Same Space

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A new plant for making polyethylene plastics here will have a 50 percent higher production capacity than similar plants, yet will occupy the same size land area.

In mid-1981, the new Phillips Chemical facility will be able to produce 450 million pounds per year of plastic resin, bringing the total capacity of the complex to 1.45 billion pounds per year, said John N. Scott, a vice president.

Each of the two loop reactors in the new plant will provide 50 percent greater capacity than the largest previous reactor of this type.

Taiwan, the White House and State Department disavowed the remarks. The Taiwanese request for jets and other weapons remains on hold.

Meanwhile, on the mainland, China is carrying on the important job of forcing the Russians to keep about 35 percent of their ground troops on the Chinese border. That's an arrangement that seems to fit in nicely with Reagan's anti-Soviet strategy. At the same time, though, the administration is not contemplating arming China — a contingency Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, considered a trump card in trying to restrain the Russians from intervening in Poland.

Cline says the Reagan administration is "certainly more cautious than the last administration was about a military alliance or a major military relationship of any kind."

He questioned that Asia is a priority concern to American policy planners. "Certainly most of the people in the White House aren't keenly interested in China or Southeast Asia," he said. "As an administration there is a tendency just to defer and postpone any hard decision in this part of the world."

In any event, a CIA study completed under the Carter administration estimated it would take about 10 years for China's armed forces to benefit from advanced Western technology.

The American and Chinese foreign policies are especially close in regards to Indochina, where both nations want to reverse Vietnam's growing influence in the region. Vietnam is considered a surrogate of the Soviet Union and was invaded briefly by Chinese troops in early 1979.

The United States and China are backing a United Nations resolution calling for free elections and the immediate withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia. The issue is at the top of the agenda for the Association of Southeast Asian Nations meeting at Manila on June 19-20, which Haig will attend after going to China.

Behind the scenes, the United States, China and the Southeast Asian allies are believed to have a tacit agreement to support a coalition of non-Communist, anti-Vietnamese forces headed by Son Sann and the Khmer Rouge movement led by the ousted Pol Pot.

The Chinese were reported last month to be transporting arms across Thailand, a close U.S. ally, to opponents of the Heng Samrin government in Cambodia. Last October, troops from Vietnam crossed the border in hot pursuit of rebels.

So far, though, despite Thailand's front-line status, there is no indication the administration is considering trying to convert ASEAN into a military alliance. It remains primarily an economic association of Thailand, the Philippines, Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore.

Haig will be the first high-level U.S. visitor to Manila since former Vice President Walter F. Mondale in 1978. His going to the

Dry Holes Are Quite Common

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP) — A "dry" well is one without oil or gas and often millions of dollars are lost.

In 1980, the year's deepest dry well was drilled in Washita County to a depth of 26,500 feet, a distance of 5.02 miles.

The industry's record was a 1974 Oklahoma dry well drilled to 31,441 feet, a distance of 5.95 miles, said Richard L. Clappitt of Drilling Specialties.

"Dry holes are quite common in the industry," Clappitt said. "In fact, it is estimated that in 1980 four of every five exploratory wells drilled were dry."

Philippines likely will be taken as a sign of American friendship for President Ferdinand Marcos, whose government was criticized by human rights advocates in the Carter administration.

U.S. air and naval facilities at Clark Air Base and Subic Bay, while scaled down in deference to Philippine nationalists, are important in carrying out defense ties with the country and to project U.S. power into the Pacific and Indian Oceans.

South Korea, meanwhile, remains a central element in U.S. strategy. To stress the point, President Chun Doo-hwan was one of the first foreign leaders invited to Washington to meet with Reagan. The visit, in February, may have put a formal end to frictions over human rights. It may also have buried any idea of withdrawing the 39,000 U.S. forces stationed in South Korea.

Relations also appear to be good with Australia and New Zealand, which are linked with the United States in the ANZUS treaty. Haig will meet with the U.S. partners in Wellington June 21 and 22.

Justice Is Complicated

By JOE FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer
SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Eight Salvadorans arrested in connection with the slayings of four American women missionaries and two U.S. agrarian reform experts face a complex series of trials, hearings and appeals that could take years.

Six Salvadoran soldiers are being held in connection with murders last Dec. 3 of four American women Roman Catholic missionaries. Two civilians have also been arrested in connection with the Jan. 4 assassination of two American men working with the government's land-reform program.

"We also have hundreds of Salvadorans murdered, but we are investigating the deaths of foreigners because we need foreign help," said Attorney General Arturo Argumedo. "Morally speaking, (the murders of the Americans) are not more severe."

Argumedo said the judges assigned to the cases live under a constant threat of death from the left and the right and that, in the past, judges have fled the country rather than handle an overly sensitive case.

More than 21,000 people, mostly civilians, have been killed in El Salvador in the past 19 months as a result of rightist-leftist violence and a guerrilla war against the military-civilian government.

Argumedo described El Salvador's legal process this way:

A suspect is arrested and immediately taken before a magistrate who decides on the spot whether to place him under provisional arrest or set him free.

If he is set free, he can be arrested again later on the same charge.

The case then goes to a judge, who acts much like an American grand jury. He compiles all the evidence he can until the preponderance of it convinces him the accused should or should not be handed over for a jury trial.

He can also set the subject free or rule that it is a political crime — in other words, the crime has a political motive. In that case, he can send the case to a military court.

The military, in turn, can disclaim jurisdiction, and send it back to the civil courts. If there is further conflict, the Supreme Court decides who has jurisdiction.

However, during all this time, a decision to drop the case or prosecute can be appealed to by either side to another judge who rules on the issue but seldom hears additional testimony.

Argumedo said the law provides 90 days for this, but these cases commonly run for six months or more "and we have had cases where this stage lasted four years."

Witnesses are intensely questioned at this stage because, as a rule, there is no cross-examination of witnesses during jury trials here.

The jury's verdict can be appealed back to a one-judge court of appeals and, again, to the Supreme Court, which is the last resort.

El Salvador has a death penalty but it is not imposed, Argumedo said. The next maximum sentence, 30 years in prison, also is rarely given.

Argumedo cited the case of Jose Rodolfo Viera, the Salvadoran director of the country's Agrarian Reform Institute, who was shot to death with the two American land-reform experts, Michael Hammer and David Pearlman, in the Sheraton Hotel coffee-shop.

"If Viera were killed because he headed the institute, that implies a political motive," because it was aimed at disrupting the government, Argumedo said. If he were killed in a dispute over a personal matter, it would be a common crime.

He said the Supreme Court's arbitration is to prevent the two jurisdictions from trying to "pingpong" a sensitive case neither wants to decide.

Hammer and Pearlman were working with the government's program to break up large landholdings and distribute them among peasants, which is unpopular with rightists and wealthy landowners here.

Two wealthy Salvadorans, Hans Christ, 30, and his brother-in-law, Ricardo Sol Mesa, are in custody in connection with the killings.

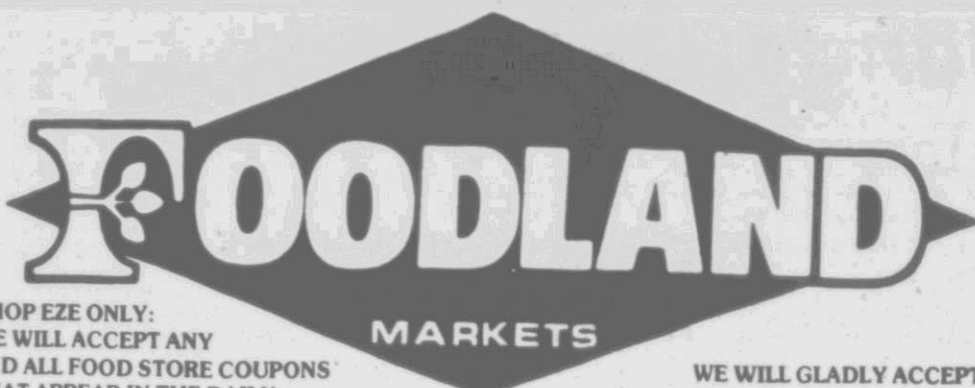

Christ was arrested in Miami, Fla., at El Salvador's request and is awaiting extradition. Sol Mesa was arrested here.

Their case and the case of the soldiers suspected of killing the American women is at "stage two" of the judicial process, with a judge gathering evidence to determine whether a jury trial is called for.

The government has not identified the soldiers.

There is a witness in the Christ-Sol Mesa case but the government says it has none so far in the cases of the soldiers.

The missionaries, three nuns and a lay social worker, were killed execution-style along the highway to the airport, south of the capital.

Spirituals For Europe

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer
COPENHAGEN, Denmark
(AP) — Sometimes Jester Hairston succeeds in getting the emotion of black American slaves out of white European choirs. More often, he just comes close.

Hairston has devoted his adult life, now in its 80th year, to interpreting the songs of the old American South's cottonfields for choirs on three continents.

American high school, college and church choirs — black, white or both — are the best, he said, because they draw on shared experiences that led to the creation of the Negro spiritual.

About the spiritual "We're Going to that Ball," for instance, Hairston said:

"The lyrics are poor white, Tobacco Road, you know, the whites that eat turnip greens and everything down there... lyrics are poor white, but the music is black, with rhythm, so you put 'em together."

Africa isn't much of a problem, either, as infused as the spiritual is with the rhythms of that continent. A choir in Mali, 20 Moslem men and women, "sounded like Southern Baptists" singing "Amen," a song Hairston wrote and later sang for Sidney Poitier in his 1963 movie "Lilies of the Field."

But in Europe? The town of Odense, Hans Christian Andersen's birthplace, brought Hairston to Denmark to make him an honorary citizen. His seventh visit here, he used it to conduct concerts in Odense and Copenhagen and on Jutland, Peninsular Denmark.

"These people here, they're getting so that very few people go to church in Denmark nowadays," Hairston said, relaxing in his hotel room during a break in his Copenhagen schedule.

"Last night, we were singing a song called 'I Can Tell the World What Jesus Has Done for Me.' You know, so many of the people sang it, but they were singing notes. You could look at their faces and tell they didn't believe in it, or else it was immaterial to them."

The fatigue and faith of the slave who wrote the song nowhere entered the picture, he said.

But that's not to say that all Europeans are unable to sing Jester Hairston songs and arrangements as they should be sung.

He once directed a choir in Finland of 85 voices, only one of whom could make do in English. The song was his difficult "God's A'gonna Trouble the Water," depicting the frenzied flight of slaves from Kentucky into Ohio, the water of the Ohio River claiming some of them in the process.

"This day I was trying to get some pathos out of this song," Hairston said. "She (his interpreter, a soprano) said 'We can give you any feeling you want, especially suffering. We have been trod on by other people.'"

"I wish you could have heard them. Oh, they were something. Ah, they were just great."

An interview with Jester Hairston is a trip through one man's experiences:

JESTER HAIRSTON

lina Negro pretending in pidgin French that he was a foreigner to get served in a Los Angeles cafe.

—The aging black choral director leading a choir of black and white high-school pupils in the South Carolina legislature, amazed at the social change that put him there.

—The actor portraying "Leroy," a slow-thinking caricature of a black brother-in-law in radio's "Amos 'n' Andy" serial.

—The arranger of some of the most popular music of his time, in the movies, "Green Pastures" and "Lost Horizons"; on the stage, "Run Little Chillun" and "The Mikado in Swing"; and on the radio with humorist Irving S. Cobb and the choirs of Hall Johnson and Walter Schumann.

Balding with wispy gray sideburns, Hairston shuns controversy but expresses strong opinions about controversial subjects.

His portrayal of "Leroy" was the type of black exploitation that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and other civil rights groups campaigned against in the 1960s. Hairston is not ashamed of it.

"If you're gonna say I was wrong for playing on the 'Amos 'n' Andy' story, then you'd have to take 'The Jeffersons' off and all of them. Strictly minstrels, strictly minstrels."

Hairston complained that too many white Americans still regard the black entertainer as a song-and-dance man. He blames the creators of the minstrel show in the 1830s.

Many of Hairston's compositions have been recorded.

"I don't have hatred," he said. "I can't harbor hatred in my heart for all white people because of some fool that I had run into."

"Because I don't believe that I could write ... music that white young people in colleges and high schools and white churches ... would love if I had hatred in my heart."

They Set Fires For Science

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — While arson has become a burning issue for this country's law enforcement agencies, a group of men here start fires and watch them burn purely for scientific reasons.

By using lasers and mass spectrometers, infrared devices and the computer, scientists, engineers and technicians at the United Technologies Research Center are mapping the structure of flames and tracking the chemical reactions involved. They are identifying when and how pollutants such as soot and nitric oxide are created, while also examining the burning characteristics of various synthetic fuels.

This new interest in fire is important, according to Dr. Arthur S. Kesten, energy-research manager, in enabling man to burn anything and burn it cleanly.

CANCEL DISCUSSION
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A public discussion on detained and "disappeared" persons organized by a human rights organization, has been canceled by the government.

Seeking Strong Minority Role

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The future recruitment of ethnic minority ministers, especially for the local church, will determine whether or not the United Methodist Church continues to be one of the most racially diverse Protestant bodies, church leaders have been told.

"There is no church body in these United States that would be worse off if we fail to build a strong ethnic minority presence," Bishop James Thomas of Canton, Ohio, told a meeting of ethnic minority leaders.

Thomas said that the 9.7 million member denomination, the nation's second largest Protestant body, even without any white members, would be the seventh largest black denomination, the largest Native American and Asian-origin denomination and the second largest Spanish-speaking church in the U.S.

Aliens Using A Back Door

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

While border agents try to curb a tide of aliens crossing the Mexican border, the Canadian frontier is a convenient back door for tens of thousands of other "illegals" sneaking into the United States.

Haitians, Jamaicans and other aliens using Canada as a stepping stone head south hidden in automobile trunks or secret compartments of trucks. They scamper through the border's piney woodlands, or cruise across the lakes and rivers strung along the frontier.

Others, more confident of their "documents," openly drive through crossing points or fly to U.S. airports.

But, unlike the flood from Mexico, it is more of a seepage from Canada.

In 1980, a total of 92,896 undocumented aliens were turned back at the U.S.-Canadian border or were caught trying to sneak across, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service reports. The figure for the Mexican frontier was, approximately 1.6 million.

However, U.S. officials concede privately that thousands must be getting across the northern border, making it a significant second source of the United States' underground population of illegal aliens, which some estimates put as high as 10 million people.

The Canadian border is not yet a major problem, said Vern Jervis, an INS spokesman in Washington.

"But it's logical that there might be an increase" in illegal traffic from the north, he said. "More and more people are anxious to enter the country."

"We have a steady stream of people coming through illegally," said George Lara, district director for the INS in St. Albans, Vt.

In the East, the "illegals" generally are from Haiti and other poor Caribbean islands. In the West, they include many people from India or Pakistan, and the Philippine Islands.

George Tranberg, a deputy chief patrol agent in the border town of Blaine, Wash., said the flow from British Columbia of fraudulently documented people from India is "steadily on the increase."

The advantage of the northern route is that it can be far easier to enter Canada than the United States, and the lightly patrolled U.S.-Canadian frontier is one of the world's most open borders.

The route is well-known around the world. Haitian officials say it is openly advertised in that country. At her 1978 trial for entering Vermont from Canada, suspected West German terrorist Kristina Berster said she learned of the route from Latin American refugees in Paris.

U.S. authorities say professional smugglers in Canada charge $1,000 or more to sneak an alien into the United States.

Often the smuggler drops off his clients in an isolated woods on the Canadian side, drives through the border crossing alone, then picks them up after they have walked to a remote spot on the U.S. side, agents say.

"Sometimes we detect it by the fact that the driver has extra clothes in the car," said James Harrigan, INS chief at Champlain, N.Y., on the border 30 miles south of Montreal.

Immigration officials said others come by boat across Lake Champlain, the Detroit River and waterways. Many simply head south down the highways.

"Last month we stopped a tractor-trailer hauling wood," Harrigan recalled. "The trailer had a space below it that would accommodate 15 to 20 people. We found a Haitian in there."

"Once they get into the United States, they go live with relatives or friends, get work and settle down."

The "back door" clearly is more attractive than the perilous sea voyage thousands of Haitian "boat people" have risked to reach Florida.

For a $544 round-trip ticket — the two-way air fare "proves" to Canadian immigration officers he is not staying — a Haitian can fly to Montreal and put himself in the hands of a smuggler or of friends who can arrange his illegal passage to America.

Many caught at border posts have been supplied fraudulent documents — passports with visas allowing U.S. entry but doctored with substitute photographs, or papers supposedly proving permanent residence in Canada. Canadian residents generally can cross freely into the United States.

American officials say a recent six-month Canadian "amnesty" for undocumented Haitians in Quebec province — granting them immigrant status — apparently helped stem the flow of Haitian "illegals" from Montreal. Almost 4,000 Haitians came forward under the amnesty, but it has ended and the southbound Haitian tide could rise again.

U.S. officials do not blame Canada for the situation.

"We could help ourselves with more men," concludes Donald Russell, deputy INS director for the Seattle district. Three hundred Border Patrol agents cover those areas of the U.S.-Canadian border between highway crossing points. More than eight times that number — 2,500 — patrol the U.S.-Mexican frontier, which is half as long.

The Reagan administration is considering a national commission's recommendations that the border force be expanded. Bills in Congress call for doubling its size. But those standing watch in the north say they expect any boost in manpower to go south.

Low Morale In Clergy Cited

NEW YORK (UPI) — Large numbers of clergy suffer from morale problems and generally cannot talk about the problem with members of their congregations, according to a United Church of Christ study.

The number one cause of low morale, according to the study, is friction between clergy and their parishioners.

According to the study, done in the denomination's Pennsylvania Central Conference, over three-quarters of the pastors said they have suffered at one time or another from low morale.

What's In A Name? You Ask About Quaaludes

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer
SELLERSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — The trademark Quaalude, like the illegal drug that masquerades under its name, has been widely abused — on the streets, in the newspapers and by the police.

It's all a case of mistaken identity. But still, some doctors are afraid to prescribe it and some patients worry about taking it. There's a twin sister — same stuff, different name — for them.

Sanka became "Sanka brand" to fight off generic use of its trademark. Xerox reminds journalists that not every photocopy is a "Xerox copy."

But few companies have the trademark woes of the Lemmon Co., a Sellersville-based concern that makes the hypnotic-sedative methaqualone, available by prescription under the name Quaalude.

For more than a decade, Quaalude has been wrongly associated with overdoses of illegally made methaqualone, wild drug parties, wary drug dealers and underground laboratories.

"There's no doubt we've lost a considerable amount of business because of" the substitution of the trade name for the generic name, said Elliot Fisher, lawyer for Lemmon.

He writes 25 to 50 letters a week to newspapers and police agencies, complaining that they have said "Quaaludes" when they meant "illegally manufactured methaqualone" or "counterfeit Quaaludes." Some respond with apologies, and many are surprised to learn that Quaalude is a trademark, Fisher says.

Lemmon has taken out advertisements in medical journals urging physicians not to permit the abuses of illegal users to deprive a legitimate patient of the drug," Fisher adds.

Lemmon's market research indicates doctors are skittish about prescribing Quaaludes because of the adverse publicity, and patients worry about taking a drug whose name is associated with arrests and death on the street. In 1980, 117 people died after taking illegally purchased methaqualone, federal officials say. That's up from 87 deaths in 1979.

In 1978 Lemmon introduced Mequin, identical to Quaalude except for the name, "for physicians who are sensitive to improper newspaper publicity, identifying phony pills as Quaaludes," Fisher said. One of 10 methaqualone tablets the company makes is marketed as Mequin.

Taken under a doctor's supervision, the methaqualone tablets made by Lemmon are a daytime sedative or, in larger doses, an aid to sleep.

The illegal drug wrongly called "Quaaludes" usually contains methaqualone in varying quantities. When users fight sleep, it makes them feel euphoric or "high," drug officials say.

The illicit drug is being used more widely than ever before, the Drug Enforcement Administration says. Some 40 million illegally made methaqualone tablets are expected to hit the streets this year, up from 20 million in 1980, according to the DEA's "conservative estimate." Others have estimated the figure at as high as 1 billion.

The tablets, most smuggled in from Colombia and many made to look like Lemmon's product, go for $2 to $5 each on the street, the DEA says.

At pharmacies, where a Quaalude tablet runs about 50 cents, sales have dropped off in recent years, the company says. Although Lemmon, a privately held company, declines to discuss sales figures, it says it made 30 million Quaalude tablets in 1978 and "definitely less" than that last year.

William H. Rorer Inc. made Quaalude until 1978, when it sold the rights to Lemmon. "Quaalude accounted for less than 2 percent of our sales but created 98 percent of our headaches," said John Eckman, Rorer chairman, in a 1978 report to stockholders. "Continued publicity about the abuse of this product was hurting the reputation of the company."

Lemmon was aware of the illegal methaqualone market when it bought the rights to Quaalude, but "we considered it an excellent sleeping pill and it still is today," Fisher said. A Rorer spokesman agrees Quaalude is "a darn good drug."

But the counterfeiting of Quaaludes continued, and the number of newspaper stories about seizures of the drug did, too.

"The first six months of 1980 it seemed to be in the newspapers constantly," Fisher says, adding he believes the company's letter writing efforts have been successful.

"Our campaign isn't going to stop the street sale of illegal methaqualone, but when drug dealers are caught we are hopeful news stores about the drugs seized will not mention the name of Quaaludes if it's not the product that was seized," Fisher said.

David Hoover, a DEA spokesman in Washington, says Lemmon's "sensitivity is well taken here. We always try to refer to methaqualone as methaqualone.... Quaaludes have a legitimate medical purpose."

Several times a week, Lemmon fields calls from drug agencies or does laboratory work to verify that a confiscated drug is not Quaalude. The DEA says 95 percent to 99 percent of the methaqualone it confiscates is not Quaalude.

Methaqualone first was produced in India as an antimalarial drug, and its effects as a sedative soon were discovered. Illicit use of the drug grew in the United States in the 1960s and 1970s, and it became known as a "love drug," "Vitamin Q" or simply "Q."

There are many dangers in illicit methaqualone. The lethal dose of methaqualone is eight grams, about 30 times what a Quaalude tablet contains, the company says. When used with alcohol, the lethal dose is much smaller and two grams of methaqualone can induce a coma.

Peanut Butter Storage Tips

TIFFON, Ga. (UPI) — Consumers who stocked up on peanut butter when prices began rising a few months ago may lose their investment unless they store the extra spread properly.

The Peanut Advisory Board, a growers association, says moisture and temperatures higher than 70 degrees F cause rancidity.

An unopened jar of peanut butter will keep two years if stored properly. After it's opened, eat it up within three months, before quality deterioration begins.

A tightly closed jar keeps almost indefinitely in the refrigerator, and even longer in a freezer, although the board doesn't recommend freezing because of oil separation and texture differences.

See Parochial School Growth

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod parochial schools are continuing to experience rising enrollments, church officials have announced.

According to church statistics, enrollment in church-sponsored elementary schools stood at 166,845 children in 1980, a 4.3 percent increase while another 15,839 students are enrolled in Lutheran high schools.

Missouri Synod congregations operate the nation's largest system of Protestant parochial schools.

Say Christmas 'Sweetest Day'

HACKETTSTOWN, N.J. (AP) — What day is the sweetest day on the calendar?

If candy consumption is the indicator, Christmas is, according to a confectionery manufacturer.

Following Christmas, M&M-MARS says, the top holidays for candy consumption in the United States are Halloween, Easter, Valentine's Day and Mother's Day.

Businessman On Easy Street

EL MONTE, Calif. (AP) — Here is one businessman who is literally on easy street.

M.C. Gill Corp. here is located on Easy Street, but it was a battle to keep it that way.

The town wanted to change the name of the street to "Rose" but the company owner, M.C. Gill, fought the city council and retained his address.

"All these good looking meats are in my Kahn's wieners!"

Karen Jones

Great meat makes great wieners - Depend on Kahn's

We showed some shoppers the cuts of meat that go into Kahn's Jumbo Franks. We received some rather surprised reactions.

"I would feel more confident in buying Kahn's hot dogs after seeing the cuts of meat that they're made of."

Sharon Baker

"A lot of fresh meat is what goes into Kahn's Franks."

Jeri Weingartner

Shoppers agreed the meat used to make Kahn's Wieners and Franks is first quality. They were also pleased to learn that no fillers and no meat by-products are ever used in Kahn's Jumbo Franks.

No Jobless, But Labor Dislocations

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — On March 13, 1980, an unemployed Moscow plumber, Mikhail Shkunov, finally got a job. He was the last person registered with the Soviet capital's central unemployment office, and after he went to work, the office closed for good.

Shkunov, who is now retired, is officially recognized here as the last unemployed man in Moscow and in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic.

The official media often refer to him when they make the claim that there is no unemployment in the Soviet Union.

Soviet officialdom considers the abolition of joblessness as one of the greatest accomplishments of Soviet communism.

But the elimination of mass unemployment has not solved all the nation's manpower difficulties. Some analysts, in fact, say the threat of limited joblessness persists in part of the country. And authorities freely acknowledge other problems with the labor force that are cutting into Soviet economic efficiency.

In such major cities as Moscow, the labor market seems at first glance to be in robust shape. No one worries about being jobless, and factories and offices are busy.

"I don't even bother to tell my grandchildren about how I was the last unemployed person," said Shkunov, now 75 years old.

"Young people these days aren't interested in hearing about it," he added in an interview with The Associated Press in his two-room Moscow apartment. "They don't even believe that unemployment really existed."

The Soviet Union got rid of unemployment by massive manpower-training programs, huge construction projects and state control of all major industries. Inefficiencies and planning problems have left many workers worse off materially than their Western counterparts, but mass unemployment is gone.

Moscow and other major cities, in fact, now face unemployment in reverse: up to 100,000 jobs are said by officials to be vacant on any day in the Soviet capital, jobs that could add to national productivity if filled. Nationally, two million jobs are said to be vacant.

Many of the jobs are low-level jobs that school and university students don't want.

"The job of a store clerk is an interesting and honorable one," says a poster designed to attract students to a Moscow retail-trade vocational school.

At the same time that some parts of the economy beg for workers, others are overstaffed. The Soviet press complains that factory managers, worried about fulfilling high output quotas, keep surplus workers on as "insurance."

But many Soviet citizens seem convinced that it is better to give people a job, even if their work is unnecessary, than to make them feel useless by keeping them at home on unemployment compensation.

"The way the Soviet Union is set up, paying unemployment compensation is impossible," said one young Moscow worker.

"Unemployment is the worst thing," said Shkunov. "I remember how I used to sell my own clothing for money. I remember the lines at the unemployment office."

There are some signs that low-level unemployment is appearing again in the Soviet Union.

Soviet press reports speak of "surplus labor" areas in the southern Caucasus Mountains region and Soviet Central Asia, where the birth rate is high. Although these reports avoid the word "unemployment," they acknowledge that more labor-intensive industries are needed to soak up workers.

Citizens from these areas are encouraged by high salaries and fringe benefits to emigrate to other parts of the nation, including Siberia, where many natural resources are located and a labor shortage is holding back economic development.

Nuke Plant Has Tours, Not Power

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer
VIENNA, Austria (AP) —
It cost $620 million and took eight years to build, but Austria's first nuclear-power plant has yet to produce a kilowatt of electricity and may be the world's most expensive visitors' center.
People call it a "nuclear museum."

Since its completion in 1978, the Zwentendorf nuclear installation has received an average of 100 visitors a day. It hasn't been put into operation because of a spate of public fears about nuclear power and resulting political conflict.

Industry studies have shown it would cost more than $300 million to convert Zwentendorf from a nuclear to a fossil-fuel plant, and an undetermined amount to dismantle the nuclear elements.

As a result, parliamentary investigations recently reopened to determine what should be done with the plant that is costing the Austrian government nearly $70 million a year to maintain.

"By any criteria in the world this plant would have been opened long ago," says Alfred Nentwich, Zwentendorf's director. "But political questions are different from all other questions in life."

nuclear-power plants, the Austrian government held a public referendum on the licensing of the plant in 1978.

Political parties differed on the question, and despite public opinion polls showing overwhelming support for Zwentendorf the licensing request was defeated by nearly 130,000 votes.

As opposition to nuclear power continued to grow throughout Austria and Western Europe, the governing Socialist Party backed off from its pro-nuclear stance and decided to mothball the plant.

If the Socialists could get the support of two-thirds of Parliament they could license Zwentendorf.

But opposition leaders, reportedly uncertain about the strength of opinion on the matter within their own parties, do not appear inclined to let the Socialists out of what is an embarrassing political situation.

Occasional petitions to have Parliament reopen the licensing question have fallen short of the required signatures.

"The politics of the whole issue can be very frustrating for us here," says Zwentendorf's technical director,
Walter Nistler.

He leads a staff of 130 who are employed in maintaining the plant until Parliament decides what to do.

Inside the concrete complex, 50 miles west of Vienna, industrial-sized dehumidifiers keep the air as dry as possible and equipment is frequently checked.

But it is mostly quiet in the operations areas and business offices, the stillness broken only by tour groups and test runs.

In the meantime, political controversy swirls around the plant.

In recent weeks Anton
Benya, chief of the Trade Union Federation, renewed his support for opening Zwentendorf, while Guenther Wiesinger, an official of the opposition Peoples Party, said it was already in need of millions of dollars in repairs.

Nentwich rejects the Peoples Party criticism, claiming the plant is ready to go into production, and could reach its full 600-megawatt capacity in two years.

Originally Zwentendorf
was scheduled to produce 11 percent of the electricity used in Austria by 1980.

Nentwich holds out hope, however, that the plant will some day start production.

"As imported energy becomes more expensive and harder to get, more and more people will be turning to nuclear power," he says.
"Then they'll start noticing what a ridiculous situation (Zwentendorf) is in."

The scientific study of meteors began 148 years ago in 1833 when more than 200,000 shooting stars were sighted over eastern North America.
The spectacle prompted many people to believe that the end of the world had come.

Both Claim Hong Kong Slum Area

By KHARK SINGH
Associated Press Writer
HONG KONG (AP) — An insignificant piece of no-man's land known for its filth, poverty and crime.

This is Hong Kong's Walled City — less than a quarter square mile of slum claimed both by Britain and China.

A haven for drug addicts, a stronghold of Mafia-style gangs and a refuge for those fleeing government control, it is a collection of ramshackle buildings.

Its 40,000 residents live in a world without running water, social services or even a sewage system.

Although claiming ownership, the colonial government refrains from administering it directly.

An attempt by the authorities to clean it up in 1963 fizzled out following a vehement "hands off" protest by Peking.

The loudest to join the protest were the area's pimps and gangs who controlled the brothels, the smoke-filled mahjong parlors and the opium divans.

The jurisdiction dispute stems from the fact that when the Chinese signed the Convention of Nanking in 1898 leasing a part of Hong Kong to Britain for 99 years, they excluded the Walled City from British rule — except so far as the colony's military security was concerned.

But one year later, Queen Victoria issued an order-in-council — never ratified by Peking — that declared such a system was inconsistent with the colony's military requirements and decreed the city as part of Hong Kong.

Nowadays, the opium divans are not visible to the visitor and the notorious sex-shows have disappeared.

The police make cursory patrols, though local leaders continue to administer their own laws.

The Walled City is honeycombed with narrow, stinking alleyways lined with small factories, shops and the ubiquitous dental office.

Dentists from China who do not possess the qualifications required by the Hong Kong government set up their practice there.

Tourists would have a hard time finding the area. The famous wall surrounding the city no longer exists. It was demolished by the imperial Japanese army during World War II.

Entry to the city is through a number of half-concealed holes in the walls of the outer ring of multi-story buildings not far from Hong Kong's Kaitak International Airport, located in Kowloon peninsula, across the harbor from the colony's main island of Victoria.

Adams Turned To Gardening

NEW YORK (AP) — Halfway through his term as president, John Quincy Adams discovered that he had plenty of time for gardening.

Mocked by the American people, his dreams shattered by a recalcitrant Congress, Adams awaited an inevitable defeat in 1828.

He turned, as people often do in time of personal tragedy, to gardening.

According to Jack Shepherd, author of "Cannibals of the Heart: A Personal Biography of Louisa and John Quincy Adams," Adams spent two years planting the barren White House grounds.

He put in with his own hands 300 oaks grown from acorns gathered in Washington, shagbark hickory, persimmon, tulip trees, black and English walnut, apples, pears, peaches, plums, wild and red cherries, chestnut, honey locusts, "and some which I do not yet know."

When Andrew Jackson took office in 1828, however, Adams's plants were neglected, and none survived.

"FIRM SUPPORT"
ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — China will "firmly support" Pakistan's "struggle to oppose foreign aggression", Foreign Minister Zhao Zi-yang said in a speech here.

Killing Felt By Children

KAREN COSTELLO, a popular music teacher in Marlboro Elementary School in New Jersey was killed during a robbery. Students still feel the impact of the slaying (AP Laserphoto)

By MICHAEL BEZDEK
Associated Press Writer
MARLBORO TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Karen A. Costello is well-remembered at Marlboro Elementary School, where some children call her their "music angel." Some youngsters also routinely mutilate pictures of the man accused of killing the 23-year-old teacher in a $3 robbery-abduction.

The 500 children at Marlboro share a common grief with 27 third graders in Pleasantville and 40 pupils at Piscataway's Wee People Pre-School. Their teachers were slain. And psychologists say the children are among the often overlooked victims of violent crime.

Ms. Costello was a popular singing teacher who was known to nearly all the students at Marlboro. In hundreds of letters to her parents and in interviews, the first through fifth graders revealed poetic recollections of the young woman and anger toward her alleged killer.

"When a friend called me and told me she was shot, I made my Dad get me a paper. I couldn't believe it. I couldn't get to sleep that night," said 9-year-old Elise Labott. "I still feel like shooting him (the suspect)."

Fifth grader Kim Kaufman said she felt "nauseous" after her teacher was slain Feb. 21, and Rachel Werlin wrote that she had visions of Ms. Costello as "an angel watching us cry."

In a common reaction, Cindy Redmin said she told her parents: "You don't expect it to happen to you where you live, maybe in New York, but not somebody you know."

Dr. Arnold Lazarus, a Rutgers University professor and founder of the Multimodal Therapy Institutes in New York and Princeton, said the impact of a teacher's slaying would vary, "but, clearly, it has an impact on most children; some can switch it off, others will carry scars for a long time."

Educators at the three schools said they were surprised at how quickly word spread of the killings — and their grisly details.

Barbara Zitomer, director of the Wee People Pre-school, said all the 4- and 5-year-olds in 26-year-old Deborah Friedman's class knew she had been killed Jan. 4 when they arrived at school the next day. Prosecutors called her slaying a "Looking For Mr. Goodbar" case. A man has pleaded guilty in the killing.

In Pleasantville, Rose Quarles' third graders came to Main Street School with tears in their eyes April 16, aware their 47-year-old teacher had been slain the night before and that her son was charged with her shotgun murder.

"She used to look like Wonder Woman sometimes," lamented 9-year-old Lamont Richardson. "I tell you, she made us learn. I couldn't believe she was shot in the head."

Trudie Humley, who took over Mrs. Quarles' class, said she tried to talk to the children about the killing. At the Wee People school, a developmental psychologist was called in to speak to parents. And at Marlboro, there were memorial services and many discussions.

"I think talking about it is necessary," said Dr. Edward Docherty, another Rutgers psychologist. "Kids spend a good deal of their time in school and teachers are like parent figures to them."

"Many of our children already have a sense of pervasive fear because of what is happening in Atlanta. For these children (in New Jersey), there are some who can dismiss the deaths with what we call the magical thinking of children. But the death of a teacher forces them to deal at least with the reality that death brings absence, loss," said Docherty.

He said the children's reactions could include fear of being alone, an increased sense of vulnerability and anger.

"This is an area we need to talk more about," Docherty said. "But I think it is very important that we do not, as we often do, deny the children an opportunity for an outpouring of grief."

Some of the children's reactions were still apparent months after the deaths.

A friend of mine brings in pictures (of the suspect) and puts it on the floor and jumps on it, and then cuts it up," said Elise. "I know that's not right, but it hurts so much."

Or, as fourth grader Rajaharan Nagarja wrote to Ms. Costello's parents: "Sometimes I wonder why it happened. From time to time I feel so sad, I feel like breaking something."

Not all educators feel frank discussion is necessarily the best thing for children. Barbara Zitomer, the pre-school director, said she was content that "simple terms, such as it was an absence that would be final," was sufficient explanation for most children.

But, said Lazarus: "You have to keep in mind that even adults have difficulty coping with these things. For children, who do not have as much experience, it can leave a variety of scars. Death is all around us, and those who don't talk about it are asking for trouble."

Nat'l Schools Volunteer Program Sees 25 Years

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An airline flight attendant firmly ignores the flirtations of a teen-ager with the persistence of Don Juan minus the style.

In a quiet corner, a woman with a lilting German accent tries to teach conversational English to a Puerto Rican girl with purple fingernails.

The perturbed businessman in the front row glances at his watch for the fourth time, awaiting an appointment long since canceled without notice.

And Marnie Steyer puts her yellow sneakers in idle for the first time all morning and drapes an arm around a hulking boy. They are an odd couple, yet a perfect pair, this hyperactive grandma and city-toughened teen-ager.

Robert Lee Long hunkers down over the too-small desk, pencil locked in a death grip over a worksheet grimy with eraser smears.

"I can't pass math and I want to graduate," Robert, 19, explains. "Don't know what my problem is, I always good in math but I don't take it no more and now I got to get out and can't flunk again."

Again would be the third time.

The people in this room are here to see that again never arrives. They offer the individual attention so difficult to find elsewhere at Park West High School, a gray vocational school Robert Lee Long and 3,000 other youngsters attend in a rundown New York City neighborhood known as Hell's Kitchen.

There are an estimated 2 million volunteers in the nation's public school system today, and about 4 million students are reaping the benefits of this unsung work force.

Established 25 years ago in New York City, the National School Volunteer Program has grown into a vast network of learning.

The volunteers give thousands of hours and thousands of skills which schools could never afford on their own, says Elizabeth Purcell, a Northern California teacher who spent two years helping direct the NSVP from its modest headquarters in Alexandria, Va.

"It's important to realize that volunteers don't replace teachers, they reinforce them," Ms. Purcell stresses. But no one denies that the program is becoming more vital with the Reagan administration's call on the private sector to ease the burden on government.

The NSVP estimates it costs less than $1 a student for 5,000 volunteers to contribute more than 200,000 hours a year to a prototypical school district of 50,000 students found in cities such as Columbus, Ohio, Milwaukee and Topeka, Kan.

At Park West High, Principal Edward Morris is grateful for the 60 volunteers backing up his 160-teacher faculty.

"They really do a mammoth job," he said. "I wish I had seven times as many. Many of our youngsters are substantially below the national average in reading, writing and math. They need the relationship of one-on-one. They've never had that, and it does as much as actual instruction."

About 150 students are tutored at Park West.

Three years ago, when Park West first opened and the NSVP there was launched, 90 percent of the students were at least two grade levels below the national average in basic skills, Morris says. Now, only 60 percent are below.

Teachers don't feel threatened by the unpaid help, Morris says, "because if a youngster can read and understand what's going on in class, he's less of a discipline problem."

Discipline has been a big problem at Park West; the place was referred to as Dodge City within weeks of opening.

But the spacious room where Marnie Steyer and Robert Lee Long struggle together over a tough math problem is a calm oasis. Concentration is deep enough to drown out the thunder of stampeding feet in the gymnasium above.

The faces in this room are as varied as the NSVP itself. Across the country, eighth graders are tutoring first-graders, while executives offer career counseling to high school seniors and retired artists share their talent with children of all ages.

In Houston, reth gifted youngsters on a project called "Alternative Energy Sources" at the High School for Engineering Professions.

At East Bradford Elementary School in West Chester, Pa., volunteers spend an hour a week with a child, simply being an adult friend — an understanding ear for a child torn by his parents' divorce or excluded from a classmate's birthday party.

Third- and fourth-graders in Antrim, N.H., learned to use a saw, hammer, triangle and rule in a woodworking class taught by an 84-year-old man.

Elsewhere, corporations give employees work-release time to tutor school children in the community. Some companies even provide free transportation.

Children in Oakland, Calif., are entertained by a singing policeman who tells them "cops are people, too," and similar appearances across America have introduced children to astronauts, puppeteers, bankers, musicians and scores of other professionals.

Mothers volunteer for a variety of tasks — refereeing playground warfare, screening kindergartners for hearing problems, helping slow learners overcome reading difficulties.

"When a teacher needs three arms to hug three children and only has two, a volunteer could be that third arm," says Marty Woodard of the National Education Association.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt campaigned on a "reading platform" to boost the below-average basic skills of the state's high school students. Now he leaves the governor's mansion every Monday morning to spend an hour at a nearby high school tutoring a refugee child in reading and math.

"It's not a new concept," Hunt said in a recent interview. "It's a very old one — people relying on each other instead of the government. I think that God expects us to do this kind of work, with our hearts and with our hands."

Hunt says additional individual attention has reduced the failure rate for the state competency exam to 2 percent — from up to 15 percent — and also cut the dropout rate.

Volunteers receive as well. High school social studies teacher Harry Groner was frustrated when he had to retire two years ago due to his age. Now he spends six hours a week tutoring Park West High students in reading.

Still, volunteerism is not for everyone, says Ms. Purcell. The dropout rate can go as high as 25 percent. But she quickly points to volunteers who came for a semester and stayed 15 years. And that kind of enthusiasm recruits additional volunteers, coordinators say.

"We're like the Red Cross of education," she says.

Gerbils' Teeth Keep Growing

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Although gerbils grow to be about only eight inches long, including their tails, their teeth never stop growing. To wear their teeth down gerbils chew on hard things such as wood or cardboard. Gerbils are in the rodent family, which includes mice, rats and hamsters. In the wild they live in the desert.

Votes Cast By Senators From N.C.

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Senators were recorded on major roll call votes before adjourning for the Memorial Day recess.

NERVE GAS By a vote of 48 for and 50 against, the Senate refused to kill an amendment in support of equipping the Pine Bluff, Ark., arsenal for nerve gas production. This left intact $20 million for the program in an appropriations bill for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30. The bill (HR 3512) was sent to conference with the House, which also has approved $20 million to gear up the arsenal for possible manufacture of nerve gas.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who supported killing the expenditure, asked, "My God, is there no limit to the voracious appetite of the military machine that wants to suck up every dollar that we have here and to launch a chemical weapons system with no public hearings, no public input, no commitment from our allies where this must be stored?"

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., who favored the outlay, said that while the Soviets are upgrading "their capability to wage and win chemical war, the U.S. has allowed its deterrent to such a war to degrade significantly."

Senators voting "nay" supported the appropriation that could lead to nerve gas production.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

ABORTION The Senate adopted, 52 for and 43 against, a rider to a FY 1981 appropriations bill permitting federal funding of Medicaid abortions only to save the woman's life. Since the House has approved the same language in its version of the bill, the toughest-ever anti-abortion measure appears certain to become law at least for the remainder of FY 1981, which ends Sept. 30. Under present law, abortions can be federally funded in cases of incest or rape or when the mother's life is at stake. The appropriations bill (HR 3512) was sent to conference with the House. Senators voting "yea" favored the tougher anti-abortion language. East and Helms voted "yea."

FOOD STAMPS By a vote of 50 for and 45 against, the Senate approved supplemental appropriations to carry the food stamp and child nutrition programs through the current fiscal year. About $338 million was added for food stamps and $110 million for child nutrition. The FY 1981 money was included in HR 3512 (see preceding votes).

Supporter Robert Dole, R-Kans., said that beginning in FY 1982 sweeping reforms and economies will be made in both programs, but that promised benefits should not be cut his year.

Opponent William Proxmire, Wis., called food stamps "an enormously expensive and much abused program" that has been "exploded in costs, going from less than $1 billion in 1965 to $11 billion today."

Senators voting "yea" favored supplemental FY 1981 money for food stamps and child nutrition programs.

East and Helms voted "nay."

REFUGEE AID The Senate rejected, 39 for and 57 against, an amendment to rescind $30 million in previously approved FY 1981 funding to help certain foreign nations accommodate refugees. The vote, occurring during debate on HR 3512 (see preceding votes), left intact the $30 million.

Supporter Thad Cochran, R-Miss., said that without the $30 million the State Department still has $100 million to spend on refugee assistance.

Opponent Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said the $30 million would go mainly to help Pakistan care for the 150,000 refugees it receives each month from Afghanistan.

Senators voting "nay" wanted full fiscal 1981 funding of the refugee program.

East and Helms voted "yea."
