Possible Tax Cut Seen In County Budget

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners have received, and will soon begin their review, of the proposed 1981-82 budget as recommended by County Manager Reginald Gray — a proposed list of expenditures that includes only $109,123 more in local ad valorum tax revenue than the budget for the current fiscal year.

As proposed by Gray, $10.94 million would be raised from local tax sources to fund 1981-82 budget as compared to the $10.83 million in local funds raised to fund this year's budget, which totaled some $25.42 million including local, state and federal money.

And if commissioners approve Gray's recommendations, the 1981 tax rate would be set at 55 cents per $100 valuation. a 46.6 percent drop from the present $1.03 per $100 valuation rate.

In his budget message to the board, Gray said the preparation of the proposed budget for the coming fiscal year, "has been a nightmare in light of the unknown effect the federal budget cuts will have on Social Services, Health, Mental Health and Schools."

Pointing out that North Carolina law requires that a balanced budget be adopted by July 1, Gray said, "I have no alternative but to prepare a budget for your consideration, using the limited available information ... therefore, I have prepared and recommended a very conservative budget based on the concerns of the citizens for economy and efficiency in government."

Gray's budget message said salary recommendations for county employees has been based on a $600 per year raise for each employee, based on what the General Assembly was expected to do for State workers. "However, it is hoped that you will consider a percentage raise and longevity pay comparable to the actions of the State, the hospital, City of Greenville, and other businesses in the area, and this information will be made available to you in your budget deliberations."

Gray also recommended a reorganization which would combine the county's planning department with the inspection effort that under North Carolina law must begin July 1. As for the building inspection program, the county manager recommended that fees for inspections be set to defray the cost of the program, and that three inspectors, in the building, plumbing and heating and air conditioning areas be hired.

In the budget message, Gray also recommended that one home economics agent position dropped by the State not be funded from county sources, and recommended the reduction of six persons from the Department of Social Services — employees now operating the Moyewood Day Care Center. (Pitt Community College will begin operating the center July 1.)

The budget message continued, "If federal cuts of 25 percent takes place as anticipated on October 1, there will be eight other staff positions affected," in the Social Services department.

As for the Health Department, Gray explained, "Due to revision back to the county by order of the North Carolina

Iraq Silent On Casualties

Israeli Cheer Reactor Bombing

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli newspapers rang with praise today for Prime Minister Menachem Begin's decision to bomb an Iraqi nuclear reactor, and the voters who will decide his political fate June 30 seemed pleased with the daring raid.

Israeli planes, flying a circuitous route over Saudi Arabia, bombed the reactor ouside the Iraqi capital of Bagdah on Sunday. A French technician was killed, but Iraq did not issue an immediate report on any Iraq casualties.

Begin defended the raid saying Iraq planned to use the reactor for manufacturing nuclear weapons to bomb Israel. Arab leaders condemned the attack as and an "act of terrorism" and the United States condemned the action.

The mission met with widespread approval in Israel.

"Israel acted according to an old rule, hit them before they hit you," the conservative daily Maariv said in an editorial. The newspaper said Israel had a "complete right to act before the threat to her existence was realized."

The liberal daily Haaretz editorialized, "There is no doubt that the danger that threatens us from the eastern front has been diminished."

Haaretz' military writer, Zeev Schiff, said in a commentary, "What the Israeli pilots did in this complex and dangerous operation was like entering a beehive, taking the queen and getting away without being stung."

Davar, the paper of the opposition Labor Party, praised the execution of the raid as an "exemplary act," but it and the pro-Labor Jerusalem Post said the attack only postpones a resolution of the problem of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East.

The attack also apparently complicated U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib's peace mission to the Mideast. Habib, who has been seeking a peaceful resolution to the Israeli-Syrian missile crisis in Lebanon, was reported on his way to Beirut.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Beirut, who declined to be named, said Habib was expected in the Lebanese capital today to begin another round of talks.

Begin dismissed widespread foreign condemnation of the Israeli bombing.

"We are not afraid of any reaction by the world," Begin said in a broadcast Monday night. "We had to act to safeguard the safety and well-being of the Israeli people."

The Israeli government, which refuses to confirm or deny persistent foreign reports that it has built a dozen or more nuclear bombs, said the research reactor French and Italian technicians were building on the outskirts of Baghdad was being readied to manufacture nuclear weapons to be used against Israel.

Iraq denied this and asked for a meeting of the U.N. Security Council. It charged Israel with a "grave act of aggression."

The United States, the Soviet Union, France, Britain, Italy, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and other Arab governments denounced the attack. The 21-nation Arab League called an emergency session to discuss "Israel's arrogant challenge."

The U.S. State Department said it had no advance warning of the raid. It said it was investigating whether Israel had violated agreements to use warplanes and other weapons bought from the United States for defensive purposes only. But observers in Washington said a retaliatory cutoff in U.S. arms sales to Israel was unlikely.

Begin said he had sent a written explanation of the attack to President Reagan.

French Premier Pierre Mauroy said there was no danger the reactor would produce bombs because Iraq signed the nuclear nonproliferation treaty and let experts of the International Atomic Energy Agency inspect the facility recently.

State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said the United States "had no evidence that Iraq has violated its commitments under the treaty."

Shimon Peres, the leader of the opposition Labor Party, declined to comment. Begin said Peres had been informed of plans for the attack months ago and wrote him three weeks ago that he considered it "undesirable."

Haim Herzog, a Labor Party spokesman, said in an interview today from Tel Aviv on NBC's "Today Show," "There is no argument (in Israel) as to the necessity for doing something about this nuclear development in Iraq."

However, he said his party had questions about the timing. Israel's national elections are scheduled June 30. Many other political leaders complained because they had not been consulted.

A random sampling of public opinion found Israelis elated, confused and worried, but generally in favor of the action.

"It's great, just great," said a 30-year-old economist who didn't want his name used.

Batia Hendelsman, a 28-year-old social worker, said: "We can't allow nuclear weapons in the area, and perhaps we've scared the Syrians a bit, shown them what we can do when we set our minds to it."

Israel's two chief rabbis, Shlomo Goren and Ovadiah Yosef, cabled congratulations to Begin for "saving the people in Zion from the conspiracy of the murderers in Iraq."

Thier message said "you have sanctified the name of Israel throughout the world."

Senior government officials said the raid also was designed to signal Israel's fighting mood to Syria, which is rejecting Israel's demand that it withdraw the antiaircraft missiles it moved into east central Lebanon recently.

Israel has been agitating for more than two years for suspension of work on the 75-megawatt, $275-million Osirak reactor which France was building on the Tigris River 12 miles east of the Iraqi capital. The United States also tried to get France to cancel the sale of the reactor because it could produce enriched uranium for atomic bombs.

The reactor was bombed but not destroyed last Sept. 30 early in the Iraq-Iran war.

HOTLINE

752-1336

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

FEAR CONSCIOUSNESS

In much of the black community, talk's been going on over a week now saying that the black funeral homes have got calls from Atlanta, Ga. stating that "the killer of killers" would start activity in northeastern North Carolina. People are afraid for their children. I think someone is playing a mean joke. If the funeral homes have got such calls, I know they've called police. J.E.

From what Hotline can learn, this talk is rampant throughout the county, with much unnecessary fear resulting. As far as we can learn, there is absolutely no truth to any connection with the activity in Atlanta. This same rumor or similar ones appear to be circulating in other communities, too — Lenoir and Duplin counties, to name two.

The most likely explanation seems that some person or persons is, as you say, playing a mean joke. Farmville Police Chief Ron Cooper and Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon do not see it as funny, however. Both of these law enforcement agencies have issued statements that local residents have received phone calls threatening their children and that, if at all possible, the perpetrator(s) will be taken into custody and prosecuted. Information from the public is requested.

Chief Cannon said the calls in Greenville seem not to have persisted past last Friday. The Farmville calls started Saturday, Chief Cooper said, with considerable panic in the schools there resulting yesterday.

Checks with four different funeral homes made by Hotline last week revealed no basis in fact concerning any threatening calls made to the funeral homes, though all four said they've received plenty of inquiries from worried parents.

Commission Acquires Tracts

Two parcels were acquired in May by the Redevelopment Commission's real estate staff during a light month for Community Development activity, it was reported Monday night.

Faye Brewington, project manager and staff real estate officer, reported that the two acquisitions took place in the South Evans CD area and involved a total of eight structures on W. 14th and W. 15th Streets.

Mrs. Brewington said that one individual was relocated from W. 14th Street in the South Evans section during the month.

Commissioners adopted a resolution reflecting a change in the designation of the commission's check signer, countersigner, and alternate, a move necessitated by the scheduled June 30 retirement of J. C. Lamm, assistant director. Lamm has served as alternate check signer for the agency.

The resolution named Joe Laney, assistant director, as check signer, David Gordon, commission chairman, as countersigner, and Martha Roberson, administrative assistant, as alternate.

Gordon, speaking on behalf of the commissioners, extended "a great debt of gratitude" to Lamm for his work and contributions during his nearly 18 years of service with the Redevelopment Commission.

The retiring official, who handled the board's financial matters, pointed out that the commission made nearly $1 million in investments during his tenure.

Commission Eyes Grant-Loss Effect

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of articles prepared by the city on the 1981-82 budget.)

In recent years, the public has requested a variety of recreational and cultural programs to enhance the livability of the community.

The city Recreation and Parks Department has two operating divisions, 36 full-time employees, and 84 part-time summer recreation positions to provide these services to the citizens.

The proposed Recreation and Parks budget does not include the addition of any personnel and requests only essential equipment items.

The department will be faced with a difficult task in 1981-82 of continuing to maintain the parks facilities when the Youth Adult Conservation Corps grant program terminates in October. The grant funds have been used to supplement the parks budget for the last several years. Termination of the YACC grant will result in the loss of some 20 maintenance employees.

Major equipment items requested in the new budget are two pick-up trucks, tractors, lawn mowers, outdoor scoreboards, bleachers, and picnic tables. Capital improvement funds have been requested to purchase park land, develop the River Park property, and construct a backboard and practice area at River Birch Tennis Center.

The proposed Recreation and Parks budget is $796,318, and the proposed capital outlay budget is $29,736.

Differences Submerged By Reagan And Portillo

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, publicly submerging any differences, are stressing trust and neighborly cooperation in their talks at Camp David and the White House.

Devoting extraordinary personal attention to his guest, Reagan spent more than 3½ hours Monday in discussions with Lopez Portillo, took him horseback riding and capped the day with a candlelight dinner on the terrace overlooking Reagan's pool at his mountaintop retreat in western Maryland.

"While we deal with you as a representative of a great nation, we can't help but think of you as brothers," Reagan said in a toast following the roast sirloin dinner.

He pledged that "any action we take will be consistent with the principles of sovereignty, good neighborliness and hospitality."

Lopez Portillo, who issued a stiff rebuke to then-President Carter in a toast at a 1979 state luncheon in Mexico, took the occasion Monday night to tell Reagan: "We wish to know and understand each other, but most important we trust each other."

He said there was "no tension and much understanding" between the two nations.

The two leaders met over breakfast at Camp David for nearly an hour. Then, at midmorning, they flew by helicopter through the rain to the White House, accompanied by Vice President George Bush, and resumed their talks in the Cabinet Room before attending a formal luncheon. Any agreements they make will be announced afterward.

Leaving their wives at home, Reagan and Lopez Portillo arrived here Monday morning with an entourage that filled five helicopters.

Wearing dark blue jackets bearing the presidential seal and the flags of the United States and Mexico, the two leaders and 12 aides ate lunch on a terrace outside Reagan's lodge overlooking a meadow and discussed his plan to spur economic development in the Caribbean basin. An interpreter sat between them.

A senior U.S. official, briefing reporters on the condition that he not be identified, glossed over the discussion of the two leaders' divergent policies toward the turmoil in Central America.

The U.S. official said the subject was broached, but "each side just described its own view of the situation as opposed to coming to any agreement or any more than a declaration of each side's point of view."

While the Reagan administration has provided military aid and advisers to the civilian-military junta in El Salvador to counter what it says is Cuban-led aggression, Mexico opposes that aid and has called for a political solution.

Emergency Service Grant OK'd

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

WASHINGTON — The Eastern Carolina Emergency Medical Services System (ECEMS) which covers a 29-county area of eastern North Carolina, has been notified that it will receive nearly one-half million dollars in federal grant matching funds from the Department of Health and Human Services, as well as a grant of $10,000 from the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust of Winston-Salem.

Jane M. Hartley, ECEMS Project Director, says that news of the approval of the grant appliation, made through the Mid-East Commission, has been received from the federal department as well as from the offices of U.S. congressmen and senators in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Jack Allison, director of the Emergency Department, Pitt Memorial Hospital, and chairman of the new Department of Emergency Medicine, ECU School of Medicine, is medical director of ECEMS.

"The purpose of the grant is to provide funds to be matched from the 29 counties for the development and improvement of emergency medical systems in eastern North Carolina," Ms. Hartley explained.

"This comprises the four planning regions, L, P, Q and R in the 29 county area. Within this area there are 23 hospitals, each of which has an emergency medical service."

This year, Ms. Hartley points out, is the first time in four years of making application for Department of Health and

A panel of silk Venise floral lace accentuated the front of the gown and skirt. She wore a fingertip length veil of illusion edged in miniature silk Venise lace attached to a bandeaux covered in the matching lace. Appliques of lace were scattered over the veil. She carried a bouquet of daisies and carnations.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

We were visiting with a couple the other night when the woman revealed that she and her husband were going to Europe for the first time.

"What luck," said my husband. "We've already been there and I'm sure we could enlighten you on what to see and what to miss. Erma even kept a diary. Why don't you get it out?" he said. "Even I've never seen what she's written in it and it might be nice to relive some of the places we've been and the things we've seen."

"Did you visit London?" asked our guest.

I thumbed through the pages. "London: The loos . . . that's what they call their restrooms . . . are generally clean. Rather primitive chain-like apparatus to flush. Take own tissue."

"That's it?" asked my husband. "What about Germany?"

"Let's see. Germany. I have three listings. The women's restroom facilities by the Rhine were adequate although the roller towel was quite soiled and looked like it hadn't been changed in days. The one in the department store in West Berlin, however . . ."

"Why don't you read us what you have about the Eiffel Towel . . . I mean tower."

"The Eiffel Tower restroom had soap and tissue, but the lines could throw you into kidney failure. Oh, and don't forget Amsterdam. That's an experience. This is important. Don't forget to take Dutch currency . . . and the exact change."

"Any country I shouldn't miss?" asked the woman, jotting down notes.

"Switzerland," I said, referring to my diary. "The mirrors were sparkling, there was no water standing on the floor, and the locks were secure on the doors."

The woman leaned in to whisper, "Is it true what they say about ITALY?"

I flipped over a few pages and gave it to her to read. "Every word is true. Read on until you get to the part about the woman who kept looking for the flush mechanism."

"I don't believe this," said my husband. "Do you mean to tell me you spent four weeks going through Europe seeing breathtaking cathedrals, exciting countryside, historic landmarks, and you don't have one word about the Louvre or the Sistine chapel?"

"Of course I have notes on the Louvre and the Sistine chapel. There was no paper in the Louvre and the Sistine chapel had a dirty Italian word on the inside of the booth. What do you think I am? A spoiled American tourist?"

Retail Tax Preferred

A robust tobacco industry is essential to the economic well-being of Eastern North Carolina. It is the cash crop for most counties of the east, and many in the Piedmont, and a good year of tobacco sales means the difference in whether or not merchants will have a profitable fall.

Consquently it is a matter of great concern in this area when anything comes along that might affect tobacco. A poor growing season gives farmers and merchants alike the blues, and any new adverse government health report sends shockwaves through the area. Any talk of ending the price support program is equally traumatic. So, too, is consideration in the State Legislature of any new taxes on cigarettes.

We may as well be prepared, however. The likelihood is stronger every day that there will be a tax increase on cigarettes by this year's Legislature, which is finding itself hard pressed to identify funds for the state's various needs.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham has prepared a bill establishing a tax on all cigarettes manufactured in the state. There are other bills calling for an increase on the tax levied on the retail sale of cigarettes.

What will pass no one knows, but Royall says, "The mood of the General Assembly is there will be a cigarette tax."

Sen. Vernon White warned at a recent Chamber of Commerce talk that a cigarette tax was coming. "I don't think we have the force to stop it at this time," he said.

The only question seems to be whether there will be an increase on the retail cigarette tax, or a tax on manufactured cigarettes. We feel that the manufactured tax would send a bad signal to industries considering locating in our state. If they believe that a similar tax could be applied to their product it could mean their locating in another state.

If we are to have additional tobacco tax, we prefer that it be an increase in the retail levy on cigarettes.

First Flight Vehicle Plates

North Carolina auto license plates are fairly dull . . . mostly a series of numbers.

Now there is a bill in the Legislature to produce a spiffier plate which would honor the Wright Brothers and their Kitty Hawk flight.

The plate would carry the slogan "First in Flight" and an engraved picture of the first heavier-than-air craft. There would be a background of coastal grass.

It doesn't sound bad to us. The Wright Brothers flight at Kitty Hawk opened an era that has now led to routine jet travel. Even our journeys into space can be traced back to the momentous event at Kitty Hawk in 1903. The new tag would remind everyone where the first flight took place. . . and it is something of which we can be proud.

THIS AFTERNOON

Assembly's Power

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The popular notion, once, was that North Carolina had the weakest governor in the nation; no veto power; and no option for a second term.

Gov. Jim Hunt, former governors, the General Assembly, and ultimately the voters of the state decided to change that and let a governor succeed himself. Gov. Hunt is now six months into his second term.

Is he a stronger governor? Whether the answer comes from circumstances, personalities, or the system, a number of analysts have concluded that he is not.

The General Assembly, instead, has become significantly more powerful. And especially notable is a mere handful of legislative leaders who have effectively captured the reins of power in this state; particularly on matters of importance.

Some observers worried at the time the succession matter was being debated that the net result would be a governor who became a lame duck shortly after taking office for the second time.

No Payoff

There would be no major jobs to fill or appointments to boards and commissions to offer. Those and other tradeoff items are essential to gaining legislative votes for programs and proposals. Neither would there be innovative and imaginative new approaches to old problems bolstered by campaign promises made and campaign workers still exuberant with the wine of success to back those up with support and hard work.

Gov. Hunt took office for his second term offering little more than continued implementation of what must be noted was an ambitious and exciting package of first-term proposals and legislative succcesses.

BILL NOBLITT

Tracking briefly down the list of actions since then: Hunt's top-priority in education is to trim classroom size; budget-cutting lawmakers have sidetracked that until fall. A $24 million microelectronics research facility touted as the state's entry into the high-tech world of the future is drawing legislative opposition as well as rejection in much of the established business and industrial community who see this as giving a great deal to some new boys on the block while ignoring the existing economic foundation in the state.

SLOWING DOWN---OR JUST A BREATHER?

Sees Voters BehindBegin

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

JERUSALEM — Arik Sharon, hero of the bloody 1973 war with Egypt, is convinced that Israel's voters are moving toward full acceptance of Prime Minister Menahem Begin's militant settlements policy on the West Bank, a key element in the national security issue that underlies the bitter Israeli political campaign.

If he is right, Begin will continue as prime minister in the June 30 election and set the stage for new confrontations with the U.S. Begin's aggressive settlements policy is anathema to Arab states now being courted by the U.S. for help in halting Soviet aggression in the Persian Gulf region. Thus, it undercuts President Reagan's policy with the Arab states. Many politicans here think the two policies are on a collision course.

To reinforce his conviction, retired Gen. Sharon has developed a unique campaign plan. By election day, he told us, some 400,000 voters — at least one quarter of the expected vote — will take the "Sharon trail" from Israel proper to view the new settlements across the green line that separated Israel from Jordan before the 1967 war. Voters ride in state-subsidized buses.

"When they see what we have done," Sharon told us, "they understand there is no other way. I campaign not by kissing babies or taking flowers but by showing the settlements."

Planting Jewish settlements on the West Bank has been the great passion of Begin's first four years as Israel's leader. In his speeches, Begin, who is dominating all aspects of this campaign, likes to recall how he bested Jimmy Carter on the settlements issue. At a rally last week, he told with relish how Carter tried and failed to stop the settlements.

Temporarily freed from American pressure while Reagan develops his Middle East policy, Begin is now rushing to complete housing, roads, electrical lines, water mains and other comforts and provide the generous financial subsidies needed to entice Israelis into the new settlements. His partner is Sharon, a serious man of large bulk who is perhaps the ablest and surely the most successful member of Begin's cabinet. Poring over maps that depict Arab towns surrounded and hedged in by Jewish settlements, Sharon told us his polls showed two-thirds of Israel'e voters now support Begin's plan — "up 17 percentage points."

But the nasty question left unanswered by Begin and Sharon, and largely ignored in the campaign debate because it is so lethal, is this: How can autonomy, much less self-determination, ever work for 1,300,000 Arabs in the West Bank and Gaza if Israeli Jews populate their land?

There is a wide gap between Begin's policy and the far milder settlements policy of the Labor Party headed by Shimon Peres. It makes a contradiction as great as that between Begin's settlements policy and Reagan's strategy to enlist anti-Soviet help from Arab states that insist on self-determination for Palestinian Arabs.

Peres and his high command warn that if populated parts of the West Bank are not returned to Jordan under the elusive "Jordan option" plan that Peres is pushing, the Palestinians eventually will have to be offered Israeli citizenship or Palestine will be converted into a garrison etate. But if the Palestinian Arabs ever do get the vote here, they will soon threaten the Jewish state with an Arab majority. Begin opposes any and all "Jordan options."

Old-line Labor leader Abba Eban, slated for foreign minister if Peres wins, told us: "Under Begin's settlements plan, we will either have to give the vote to the Arabs and we become a Jewish Lebanon (where the former Christian majority has been submerged by the faster-growing Moslem population) or we don't give them the vote and we are

Case Of Bertell Ollman

WASHINGTON — For a moment or two, brothers and sisters, let us pray together over the rights of men, and more specifically over the rights of professors, politicians and college presidents. Let us briefly examine such grand themes as democratic government and academic freedom. And let us contemplate the case of Bertell Ollman.

This is a splendid intellectual exercise. To begin at the beginning: In the fall of 1977, a search committee at the University of Maryland set out to find a new chairman for the Department of Politics and Government. Some months later the committee chose Professor Ollman of New York University. The university's provost provisionally offered him the job and recommended to the university's then-president, Dr. Wilson Homer Elkins, that Professor Ollman be hired.

Dr. Elkins, manifestly unhappy with the choice, bucked a final decision to his immediate successor, Dr. John S. Toll. A noisy row erupted. After a few weeks of review and consultation, Dr. Toll rejected the nomination. Whereupon Professor Ollman filed suit in U.S. District Court in Baltimore, demanding that he be hired. The suit has gone to trial before Judge Alexander Harvey II. We should have a decision soon.

Those are the bare bones of the story. To flesh them out: Professor Ollman is a dyed-in-the-denim Marxist. His academic credentials (Wisconsin and Oxford) are impeccable; he has taught not only at N.Y.U. but also at Chicago and Columbia. In an essay published in 1978, he candidly proclaimed his own view that socialist teachers should make "the most effective use of the classroom situation" to draw their pupils into the Marxist movement.

The professor is also an entrepreneur. In 1978 he copyrighted a board game, somewhat along the lines of Monopoly, called Class Struggle. The game perfectly reflects his view of a world in which capitalists, represented by top hats, attempt to grind down the workers, represented by hammers. The object of the game is for the workers to win their revolution, despite the unfair advantages of the bloated businessmen.

On to our discussion. In an editorial the other day, the Washington Post looked at the lawsuit: "If the court finds persuasive Mr. Ollman's contention that Mr. Toll rejected his candidacy only because his Marxist views had become the subject of Maryland political controversy, the university should act promptly to reinstate Mr. Ollman's appointment. Maryland politicians must not be allowed to intrude into the appointment of teachers and scholars at the university simply because of displeasure with their political opinions — period."

So sayeth the Washington Post. Horsefeathers, says I. Mr. Ollman has a right to teach Marxism, but where, pray tell, did he acquire a right to teach Marxism at the University of Maryland? And what is this about silencing "politicians"? The Maryland legislators who complained about the proposed Ollman appointment are the elected

To the editor:

The entire community should feel some pride in the testing results which appeared in recent issues of the Reflector for both the Greenville City and Pitt County Schools. These gains represent a measure of the success which results from the commitment and good work of our teachers and school administrators. It is also a measure of the parental and community support for public education in Greenville and Pitt County. I hope the county commissioners will note the achievement gains and remember that tax money spent on public education is a good investment in our community.

But, perhaps most of all, we should congratulate the young people who have applied themselves so diligently this year. Well done!

Other Editors Say Sequels Ahead

(The Raleigh Times)

The dedication of the stark and stunning new State Museum of Art was only a formal beginning whose sequels lie veiled in the future.

The building is empty. The distinguished and wide-ranging art collection that belongs to and enriches all Tar Heels will not appear on its neutral, waiting walls for another year. The paintings and objects are still in the old museum downtown, being prepared for the move.

But considering the travail already undergone in getting a proper museum building, the dedication is a milestone. The original controversy over downtown vs. suburban locations turned out to be nothing compared with the havoc wrought by years of inflation on the original dreams and designs of its backers.

Now there is, predictably, an esthetic controversy over the result, featuring NCSU emeritus design dean Henry Kamphoefner hurling his accustomed thunderbolts at the work of the late Edward Durell Stone, with Raleigh's Holloway-Reeves, Stone's esthetic heirs, hurling back, and Governor Hunt — also as usual — overworking superlatives in praise.

As architecture critics, we are not in the Kamphoefner-Stone-Reeves league, and we are not as superlative struck as Hunt.

Certainly the building has some forbidding elements. But most raw, naked, undecorated and untenanted buildings do. Its beauty will be clearer when its paintings — and its plantings — are in place.

For now, it is impressive, and some of the unavoidable compromises seem to have been gracefully made. The building permits and invites future expansion. The strength of the state's intent to follow through with that expansion is unknowable now, subject to whims of economics and politics.

But we wish the new museum a long and gracious future as the source of exposure to great art for hundreds of thousands of Tar Heel schoolchildren, born and yet unborn, and as a lasting garden of hyacinths for the souls of adult visitors.

Strength For Today

THE IMPORTANCE OF DECISION

Decision plays a primary part in the religious life. We are quick to realize the importance of decisions in a successful business career. Married happiness consists largely in the capacity of two people to make generous and loving decisions in regard to each other at the time they should be made.

But there are many people who are inclined to criticize outspoken Christians who insist that a clear-cut decision for Christ is necessary for the beginning, growth and triumph of the spiritual life. Critics, with an air of superiority, often call this fanaticism.

But these people should realize that Christ was always calling upon people to make decisive commitments. They were to sell and give to the poor. They were to abandon their occupations and follow him.

None of us likes to be disturbed. Jesus disturbed men at such profound depths that many could not be satisfied until they had done away with him. — Elisha Douglass

Devoting Time To Demography

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The word for today is "demographics."

Never mind that Webster's Third Unabridged lists no such noun. It's rolling off the tongues and memo pads of just about every business and economic planner these days.

As you may well already be aware, the term refers to the makeup of the population of a given society, the changes taking place in the size and shape of that population, and the effects those changes are likely to have.

In the marketing business, a magazine whose readers are all 32-year-old upscale achievers with a median income of $65,000 a year or so is said to have "great demographics" for advertisers selling wine, stereo systems and vacations in the Lesser Antilles.

On a broader scale, businessmen and economists seeking to predict the trends of the 1980s have been devoting a lot of time lately to demography (a word which does appear in the dictionary).

Their main reason for doing so is a development that is fast becoming, if it has not already become, a great American cliche — the maturing of the post-World War II "baby boom" generation.

The spree of family formation that occurred after the war created a huge bulge that shows up in any graph depicting the American population — a tidal wave by comparison with all the other ripples on the chart.

At first, its importance didn't seem to be fully understood. When the baby-boomers started reaching school age in the 1950s and 1960s, the education industry became a national boom town.

By the mid-1970s, as the supply of students dropped off sharply, it was belatedly discovered that far more teachers had been trained and school buildings built than the nation could possibly need.

Meanwhile, the baby-boom bulge pushed inexorably ahead. Among a generation that grew up on the rallying cry "don't trust anyone over 30!" there are now a lot of 30th birthday parties being held.

While the colleges and school systems they left behind are still retrenching, businesses of all types and sizes have scrambled to get into position to ride the wave to wealth without getting drowned in the backwash.

And economists and other social scientists are hard at work puzzling out its future effects. Their findings so far run the full range from euphoric to dire.

The optimists point out that the task of absorbing the baby boomers into the job market — a formidable one, especially since it turned out that vast numbers of baby-boom women, as well as men, sought careers — appears largely complete.

The experience helped give the economy fits in the 1970s. But now, it's suggested, those pressures might be easing, just maybe increasing the odds of success in the battle against inflation.

The smaller group of young people growing up behind the baby-boom generation may see it as a perpetual barrier to their hopes for success and prosperity.

Labor economists point out, however, that a scarcity of young people in the next few years may well mean that they are heavily in demand for many jobs where youthful energy, and fresh training, are prized.

As the baby-boomers age, the pessimists say, they will create new strains and stresses. What, for example, will happen to the housing market once they are past prime home-buying age? Will the country ever have the resources to support them all in retirement?

Today about one in every nine Americans is over 65. By the early 21st century, notes United Business Service, an investment and personal-finance newsletter, it could be as much as one in every five.

Whatever problems that creates, it will bring opportunities as well. For example, Money magazine suggested recently, even if there is an oversupply of doctors, more specialists in geriatrics will be needed than ever before.

No complete list is available, or even possibie for that matter. But as a starting point, United Business service suggests, "drugs, health care, cosmetics, leisure-time and the communications industries should all benefit from the 'graying of America.'"

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE FOR GREENVILLE FOOD SHOPPERS:

There's a new food store coming to Greenville that will make a lot of claims about having the "Lowest Food Prices In North Carolina" (LFPINC).

However, the North Carolina Attorney General's office did an independent survey that proved they didn't even have the lowest food prices in Charlotte, much less the rest of the State! As a matter of fact, they were the highest of all stores surveyed!

At Winn-Dixie, we don't make wild price claims that we can't back up. We believe you, the food shopper, are smart enough to determine for yourself who has the best food buys. We urge you to compare our "Super Saver" low shelf prices plus deep-cut specials with the new food store in town and make up your own mind.

As an added incentive, we'll match anything in their Grand Opening ad at either of our two stores. This includes Sale merchandise, buy 1 and get 1 free items, etc. (On identical merchandise if we carry it or on comparable merchandise of equal value if we don't.)

Unlike this new food store, Winn-Dixie is 100% American owned and operated and proud of it! Your dollars spent with us stay on American soil creating new jobs and paying our share of taxes to help keep our country strong and growing.

After you make your own price comparisons we are confident that you'll discover what hundreds of thousands of North Carolina (and Greenville) food shoppers already know.....

depended upon speedy trials and certain sentencing. Both measures have been delayed time and again, and much amended till impact is questionable.

The state's budget has long been almost beyond challenge the governor's prerogative; with legislators thrown a bone to gnaw on in the form of $50 million or so for pet projects while leaving unchallenged the bulk of the $5 billion in spending. Hard times, federal cutbacks, and public demand for governmental reductions in state taxing and spending has changed that.

Cutting

Not only are legislators cutting expansion programs; they're cutting wherever they can find excess in existing programs.

Then there's the Highway Fund. Some legislators complain that Hunt's philosophy on this one is "If you can't convince them, confuse them."

There is hardly any agreement on this matter among legislative leaders, within the General Assembly, in Hunt's administration, or among the general public.

Meanwhile, the governor has put all of his clout to work on what he terms his "Good Roads Package" and has been forced to let a number of pet projects fall to the budget cutters, or to be put in abeyance. He has also been forced to drop previously outspoken opposition to such matters as repeal of the inventory tax and tobacco tax increases.

As with any organization, there are in the General Assembly a corps of experienced, hard-working individuals who know the ropes and rules and how to use them, and who know what they want. For the first time in many years both houses of the Legislature fall under a unified group which has effectively captured working control of state government — and that is exactly what they have been after since the days of the Republican Gov. James Holshouser in the mid-1970s.

More and more, the governor's office is being bypassed by savvy people wanting something done. They go to Speaker Liston Ramsey, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, or senators Kenneth Royall, Craig Lawing, Harold Hardison, or Representative Billy Watkins.

Kilpatrick....

representatives of Maryland taxpayers whose hard-earned money supports the university. Who says these representatives must not "intrude" into controversy at a public institution?

In the end, the appointment of department chairmen is the responsibility of a university's president. How did Dr. Toll lose his rights in this regard? Neither the search committee nor the provost has any right to dictate a final decision. University presidents have to have spines of steel and the guts of billygoats. Their hard task is to fend off yahoos and rednecks at one extreme and doctrinaire super-libs at the other. They cannot afford to forget that they preside over public institutions financed by public funds.

There lies the crux of the problem, in the difference between personal rights and public policies. A pregnant woman, says the Supreme Court, has a right to an abortion; but she has no right, says the court, to an abortion at public expense. A high school English teacher has a right to introduce 10th graders to Aristotle, but his local school board has a superior right to order him not to go beyond approved course materials.

So it goes. In a free society, Professor Ollman can peddle his class struggle wherever he can sell suckers on his snake oil philosophy. But politicians, presidents and those who pay the taxes also have a right to be heard.

Applauding Court Ruling On Salaries

By KEVIN M. COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women's groups are applauding a Supreme Court decision that gives female workers a new right to seek wages equal to those of their male counterparts, but legal experts say many key questions remain open.

The high court, on a 5-4 vote, ruled Monday that women can use the sweeping provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to file wage-discrimination lawsuits without proving that they perform the same jobs as men who get paid more.

"The decision is an enormous victory for those fighting to end sex discrimination in employment," said Judith Lichtman, executive director of the Women's Legal Defense Fund.

Added Karen Nussbaum, executive director of Working Women, "For the first time, the 43 million women who work have hope that their jobs may be evaluated on an equal basis with men's."

Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, said the decision "brings women in pink-collar jobs (those held primarily by women) a lot closer to justice."

J. Clay Smith, acting director of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, said the decision "vindicates a position held by the EEOC since 1966."

The justices ruled that women who claim wage discrimination are not bound by a federal law requiring equal pay only for equal work.

In essence, the justices made it illegal for women to be paid less simply because they work in jobs held primarily by females. But certain limitations still remain.

"It raises many, many more questions than it answers," said Lawrence Z. Lorber, a Washington lawyer who handles employment cases.

Among those questions are the amount of evidence needed to prove illegal discrimination and the notion of "comparable worth."

The comparable worth doctrine, which the court noted it was not deciding, says that because of the worth or difficulty of certain jobs, women should be paid equally to men even though their work may be totally dissimilar.

"They (the justices) meant it to be an extremely limited decision. I think lower courts will take this decision and expand on it," Lorber continued.

"There's going to have to be a lot of interpretation done," said one lawyer who represents employers in employment cases.

The lawyer, who asked that his name not be used, noted that the high court did not set any specific standards to guide the whole new class of claims that are expected to reach the courts.

Another employment discrimination specialist, who also requested anonymity, noted that the decision will force many employers to settle women's wage-discrimination cases.

another South Africa."

Because security is always the underlying issue here and because the settlements question is a key to future security, Begin's policy should be the hottest debating point in the campaign.

In fact, however, Peres is loath to press a hard case against Begin's policy because to do so would run headlong into the pro-settlements militancy fired up by four years of Begin-Sharon success in planting new settlements.

This reluctance tends to reinforce the Begin-Sharon policy, creating conditions for a future clash with the U.S. if Reagan pursues his wider U.S.-Arab coalition against the Soviets.

Beyond that, Labor's failure to place the settlements issue front and center in the campaign illustrates the tragic dilemma of Israel unable or unwilling to come to grips with the central concern of its future security.

Atlanta Kids Share Start Of Program

ATLANTA (AP) — Thousands of running, squirming children poured into city recreation centers for the opening of "Safe Summer '81" — a multimillion-dollar program aimed at protecting youngsters from whomever has slain 28 young blacks.

The recreation program, which got under way Monday at 61 sites, was conceived during the winter as officials sought ways to keep children under close supervision once schools close for the summer.

All but five of the 28 young blacks found slain in the Atlanta area since July 1979 have been 17 or younger. A special police task force has been investigating, but no one has been charged in any of the cases.

Police are continuing their surveillance of a 23-year-old black man questioned for 12 hours last week in connection with the slayings, but authorities say they do not have sufficient evidence to make an arrest "at this time." His house is being watched by both police and journalists.

At the city's Thomasville recreation center, Mayor Maynard Jackson told 210 children, "You need to keep an eye out for each other."

The program, which will cost about $4 million, is being financed in part by about $800,000 in federal grants and about $300,000 in donations and proceeds from a spring concert, said Richard Monteilh, coordinator for the city program. The remaining money comes from city funds normally budgeted for summer recreation.

Jackson and Monteilh both estimated about 10,000 children attended the first day, and Jackson predicted that, by the end of the week, 47,000 would be enrolled in publicly and privately operated programs.

City officials have touted the tight supervision that will be exercised at the centers. Special T-shirts were ordered for the children to enhance security, and news reporters were allowed into the centers only if they first obtained special permits.

The shirts had not arrived by Monday afternoon.

"It's going to take a couple of weeks to work all the kinks out," said Parks and Recreation Commissioner Geri Elder, adding that the shirts will be distributed "after we get an accurate enrollment count."

The children will take part in volleyball, softball, basketball, swimming, dancing and arts and crafts.

Jackson said the program will continue through the summer even if the case is cracked, and another is planned for next year.

Similar programs in Fulton and DeKalb counties are scheduled to get under way after the counties' schools close Wednesday. Atlanta is situated almost entirely within Fulton County, and DeKalb is a suburban county lying east of the city.

Meanwhile, Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton met behind closed doors Monday with top police officials investigating the killings.

Afterwards, he said "an arrest is not imminent. We're looking toward discovering the truth, whatever it might be. At this point the evidence has not been shored up enough to where we can make an arrest."

The 23-year-old man, whose northwest Atlanta home has been staked out by police and journalists for the past five days, came to police attention on May 22 when, according to police sources, he was stopped on a bridge over the Chattahoochee River in the early morning hours.

Officers watching the river, where the bodies of six of the victims have been dumped, stopped the man after they heard a splash, the sources said.

Several days later, the body of the 28th victim — Nathaniel Cater, 27 — was found in the river.

Police Continue Surveillance On Atlantan, No Arrest Near

ATLANTA (AP) — Although police are continuing their surveillance of a young black man questioned for 12 hours last week in connection with the slayings of 28 young blacks, authorities say they do not have sufficient evidence to make an arrest "at this time."

Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton met behind closed doors Monday with top police officials investigating the killings, which date back to July 1979.

Afterwards, he told reporters that "an arrest is not imminent. We're looking toward discovering the truth, whatever it might be. At this point the evidence has not been shored up enough to where we can make an arrest."

The 23-year-old man whose northwest Atlanta home has been staked out by police and press for the past five days first came to police attention on May 22 when, according to police sources, he was stopped on a bridge over the Chattahoochee River in the early morning hours.

Sources said the river, where the bodies of six of the 28 victims have been dumped, was under surveillance by officers who heard a splash and moved toward the sound.

The man was questioned at the bridge and released, and two days later the body of 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater was found in the Chattahoochee downstream from the bridge when the man was stopped.

While the man was being questioned in the marathon session at FBI headquarters last week, authorities armed with a search warrant went through his home and confiscated fibrous materials to compare with fibers that have been found on the bodies of some of the victims.

While Slaton would not comment Monday on evidence authorities have gathered against the man, law enforcement sources have said that comparison of the fibers found in his home with those discovered on the bodies of the victims have been "promising."

The Atlanta Constitution, however, reported today that investigators are frustrated because the evidence they have against the man is largely circumstantial and is not centered on any one case. Any prosecution of the man, the newspaper said, probably would have to be based on only one case.

Slaton said that while "time has been of the essence" in the investigation of the slayings, authorities do not feel any urgency to clear or arrest the man despite the massive publicity surrounding him since last week.

The police surveillance of the man, Slaton said, is more for his own protection than because authorities believe he will flee.

The man's attorney, former Atlanta Solicitor Mary Welcome, said Monday night her client has no immediate plans to seek a court order to stop police from watching his movements.

"The temperature has changed since Friday and we hope it will continue to cool off," she said, referring to a news conference Friday at which she threatened to seek "judicial assistance" to keep the press and police from violating her client's constitutional rights.

Ms. Welcome said she expects that her client's legal status will be resolved by authorities "within the next 24 to 48 hours."

Lease Increased For Ayden Show

By SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The Ayden Town Board of Commissioners Monday night approved an agreement with Seaboard Coast Line Railroad to increase the lease with Marshall Destin's Wild West Show from $140 to $171.52. per year

Treasurer of the show, Bruce Jones assured the board that the extra sum would be paid by the end of this week. The tourist attraction is rented from the railroad through the town and is located on the site of the old court house.

The board also passed a recomendation to pay $30,000 assessments in annual installments at 7.23 percent interest to the Pitt County Drainage District No. 3. Swift Creek will be cleared of debris and drainage problems corrected with the money. The sum will be taken from general funds, according to William Ford, town clerk.

Ayden power cost payments over-ran $320,000 during fiscal year 1980-81. The board discussed and approved an amendment to collect the revenues from power users.

The board was approached to approve papers of the Ayden Fire Department releasing some members of the department from duty, for not meeting membership requirements. The board tabled the matter.

Town manager, Ron Russell, reported that the new roll-out garbage system is going well, "but it will take some getting used to." The town has recently inacted a new garbage system with two pick-ups a week. Each resident has been supplied with a 90-gallon container that they have been asked to roll out to their front lawns on pick-up days.

Steve Nobles who has served as chairman for four years of the Board of Elections, was re-appointed Tuesday night. Mrs. J.R. Lowry and Burt Tripp were also appointed. The polling place was also designated. The Community Building was selected where elections will be held November 3, 1981.

A Public Hearing was set to discuss a permit for day-care center operations for Mrs. Pat Carman. The hearing will be held July 13 and Mrs. Carman's petition to open a day care center at the Methodist Church of Ayden will be reviewed.

Two Ayden women were released from taxes on automobiles. Apparently there was a double listing charging both women taxes on the same car.

The board voted to observe July 6 as a holiday as July 4 falls on a Saturday this year.

The next public budget hearing is slated for Wednesday, June 24 at 7:30.

Reception Takes Note Of Publication

A reception honoring young people and other community citizens who participated in Pitt County's first "Oral History Project" was held Monday night at the county office building.

More than 120 people participated in the reception, which observed publications of "A Team of Mules and a One Room School: Memories of Pitt County." The book is primarily a collection of quotations from people who were interviewed throughout the county.

The project was sponsored by Sheppard Memorial Library and Pitt County Community Schools with a Youth Projects Grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Copies of the book are available for $3 at Sheppard Memorial Library or Pitt County Community Schools.

Drowning Death Cause

BLACK JACK — Medical Examiner Dr. Stan Harris said the death of Harvey Mills, 65, in a farm pond in this, his home community, can be attributed to drowning.

The Pitt County Sheriff Department said a call for the Winterville Rescue Squad went in at 8:37 a. m. The pond is located near Hopewell Pentecostal Holiness Church on State Road 1711.

A lifelong resident of this community, Mills had been employed for several years by Azalea Mobile Homes, Greenville.

Graham Urges Export Facility

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham has called for the construction of an export grain facility to be located at ports at Wilmington or Morehead City.

"There is significant North Carolina grain moving into overseas markets," he said. "Last year we exported grain worth over $300 million."

He said a new grain facility would speed expansion of the industry by providing added markets, generating healthy competition and reducing transportation costs. Presently North Carolina grain must be moved to other states for export.

"One of the first actions which I took upon becoming commissioner in 1964 was to authorize a study of the grain export needs of North Carolina," Graham said. "The facility was not deemed necessary at that time, but our grain industry has done a lot of growing since then and I think the time is now right."

Local Man Is Participant

Bill Byrd of Greenville recently participated in presenting an exhibit at the state's first North Carolina Family Practice Residents' Opportunity Fair at Camp Caraway near Asheboro.

Participating with him were Dianne Elliot and Randy Horton, both of Tarboro.

The purpose of the fair, organized by the N.C. Association of Family Practice Residents, was to provide a setting for communities in need of a doctor to contact a family practice physician looking for a place to establish a practice. The 29 physicians who attended soon will complete their training in the family practice residency training programs in Greenville, Chapel Hill, Durham, Greensboro, Fayetteville, and Winston-Salem. Twenty-one communities from across the state came to "sell" their communities to the doctors.

The event, which will be repeated in the spring of 1982, was the brainchild of threee residents, Dr. Robert Scott of Bowman Gray in Winston-Salem, Dr. Marla Tobin of Duke-Watts in Durham, annd Dr. Sharon Hamil of Moses Cone in Greensboro. Assistance was given them by the N.C. Academy of Family Physicians and the Office of Rural Health Service.

Kelley Jones Wins Medal

The Susanna Coutanch Evans Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution presented a Good Citizenship Medal to Kelly Jones during an awards ceremony at Greenville Middle School on Monday, June 8. The medal was presented by Mrs. Ballangee and Mrs. Sparrow from the D.A.R.

Students who fulfilled the requirements of honor, service, courage, leadership, and patriotism were nominated by the teachers and staff at the school.

Students other than Kelly nominated were: Nancy Douglas, Mike Herrin, Katrina Moore, Jill Whitehurst, Carl Wille, Tammy Newton, Catherine Spencer, Laura Wallace, Terry Daniels, Amy Moore, Sherri Whittington, Melvin Taylor, Sherrie Mayo, Nancy VanNortwick, Nancy Johnson, and Michael Ramsdell.

Each nominee received a trophy for having been nominated. Glenn Cox, superintendent of the Greenville City Schools, presented trophies to the nominees.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned lower today, following two straight days of gains, amid concern over heightened tensions in the Middle East.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which gained 8.90 points over the previous two sessions, slipped 1.76 to 993.88 at noon.

Stocks falling in price held a 7-6 lead over gainers in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the stock market was skittish because of the uncertainty that followed a weekend attack by Israeli planes which destroyed a nuclear reactor under construction near the Iraqi capital of Baghdad.

The attack was not disclosed until Monday, and analyst Robert Stovall at Dean Witter Reynolds attributed today's stock market retreat "to a delayed reaction to the latest unsettling news in the Middle East."

Analysts also said that investors remain concerned with the continued high level of interest rates.

Girard Bank, which on Friday raised its prime lending rate to 21 percent, today joined the rest of the industry by lowering the rate to 20 percent. Citibank, the nation's second largest commercial bank, announced it would leave its prime lending rate unchanged at 20 percent.

The NYSE's composite index of all of its listed common stocks fell .22 to 76.54. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 2.20 at 365.70.

Volume on the Big Board reached 18.79 million shares over the first two hours of trading today, down from 19.01 million in the comparable period Monday.

Central & South West topped the NYSE active list at noon, up ½ at 14⅜, in trading that included a block of 300,000 shares changing hands at 14⅜.

UAL fell 1 to 29½, McDonnell Douglas was off ¼ at 40⅞, American Airlines slid ⅜ to 20⅜, General Motors dropped ⅜ to 55⅞ and ASA was off ⅝ at 47¾.

Energy issues were mixed, including Texaco, up ¼ at 34¾; Exxon, which cut prices of heavy fuel oil, down ¼ at 66⅛; Mobil, unchanged at 55⅝; Getty, up ⅞ at 61¼; Kerr-McGee, down 1 at 66½; and Halliburton, down ⅛ at 58⅞.

Pitt Budget.....

Legislature," two public health nurses, one licensed practical nurse, a secretary, a health aid, and three sanitarians, "are not included in the 1981-82 budget."

"I recommend that no program which is being eliminated by the Federal or State Government be financed with local funds," Gray emphasized.

In the area of county schools, the county manager said, "there has been considerable discussion that there are too many assistant superintendents and supervisors in the Central Office, therefore, I am recommending that you not fund at least one assistant superintendent and one supervisor, and the support secretarial staff necessary to support these people.

"Furthermore, you requested that supplements be frozen three years ago, but this did not occur for the Central Office Professional staff; therefore, I recommend that you continue to fund the same amount in these areas as you did three years ago."

In the area of county school capital outlay, Gray said, "I do not feel the people of the county are willing to finance the amount of capital outlay requests; therefore, I have recommended approximately the same funding as last year.

"If the board desires to finance more than recommended, I suggest two areas: the use of fund balances in current expense, and issuance of bonds under the two-thirds net debt reduction rule (approximately $540,000 in bonds could be issued under this provision of the Constitution)."

For the city schools, Gray said, "A reasonable budget was presented for consideration. However, I am not recommending the pick-up of the teachers lost due to State and Federal cuts, or salary increases of the amount requested."

The request in the capital outlay area, Gray said, "Again was reasonable; therefore I have recommended they receive a pro-rata share of funds appropriated."

The largest request from Pitt Community College, Gray's budget message said, "came in capital outlay. However, I cannot see that the county has sufficient funds to finance their requests for capital outlay."

In conclusion, Gray said, "I know you will want to make adjustments to make this budget reflect what you as an elected official feel will be supported by the taxpayers. Therefore, I recommend that you scrutinize the proposed budget carefully and make any changes you feel are necessary for the best government we can justify to the taxpayers of Pitt County."

Service Grant.....

Human Services funds for this service that has resulted in success.

"Funds for the personnel, administration and printing of the documents necessary to support the application were provided by 25 firms and businesses in the four regions," Ms. Hartley said. "Together, they provided about $30,000, and they did so with the realization that no funds at all might be granted by the Department of Health and Human Services. East Carolina University also provided a loan of $12,000."

Firms providing substantial contributions for the application costs included $5,000 each from Weyerhaeuser of Plymouth and Abbott Lab of Rocky Mount, and $1,000 each from Pepsi-Cola, Texasgulf at Aurora, and National Spinning, Washington.

The matching funds requirement of nearly half a million have essentially been met, Ms. Hartley explained. This includes cash for hospital equipment requested in the application, for rescue equipment, and for training equipment. Additionally, counties have agreed to meet matching funds for communications systems needed within each of the 29 counties.

The Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust fund, provider of the $10,000 second grant to be received by ECEMS, was created in 1946 through provisions in the will of Mrs. William N. Reynolds for the purpose of improving health care to the people of North Carolina. The trust each year awards about $1.5 million in grants throughout the state.

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — A 42-year-old Long Shoals woman lost both legs and an arm after the lawn mower she was riding in the yard of her residence was struck by a pickup truck, police said.

Patrolman David Jarrett said Mrs. Peggy Dyke was in serious condition Monday at Charlotte Memorial Hospital where she underwent amputation surgery following the collision on Friday.

PCC Energy Program Cited

The energy education program at Pitt Community College is one of three programs in the eight southeastern states cited for excellence in vocational education by the U. S. Department of Education.

The PCC program was selected from more than 20 nominees for the regional honor, and as one of the three regional winners, PCC will be considered for the national "Award of Recognition" for vocational education to be presented by the U.S. Secretary of Education Terrell Bell later this summer.

Pitt Community College president Dr. W. E. Fulford Jr. called the recognition "a distinct honor for the college and the community. This is one tangible indicator of the quality of educational programing and the capabilities of faculty and staff that characterize our desire for excellence at PCC," he added.

Dr. James Young, director of Institutional Development at PCC, said the award was based on the "comprehensive nature of the College's approach to energy education and the extensive interaction between the college, the community, local employees, and advisory committee personnel in both planning and operating energy related programs and projects.

The component parts of the PCC energy education efforts include one of the first degree-granting energy technology curricula in the nation, a model project in alcohol fuels, a "live" project involving the actual design and construction of a passive solar home, and integration of current energy research findings into numerous courses and curricula already offered at the school.

Dr. Larry Blake, president of the N.C. Community College System applauded PCC's recognition as a distinct honor for the state system. In a letter to PCC, Blake said, "This selection is further confirmation of Pitt Community College's reputation as an outstanding educational institution. It is the philosophy that Pitt Community College espouses of active and continuing industry and community involvement in planning and evaluation that has contributed to this reputation."

Pitt County Edges Rocky Mt. In 9th

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Mitch Brann said he was looking for a slow curve, inside and low. What he got was a fastball, inside and low. What he did with it was merely win a game that Pitt County seemed destined to lose.

Brann's one-out single in the bottom of the ninth scored Marshall Rand with the winning run as Pitt County came from behind to edge Rocky Mount, 3-2, Monday night in an American Legion baseball game at Harrington Field.

"I knew it was a hit as soon as I hit it," Brann said afterwards. "I hit it pretty hard so I knew it wasn't gonna be a cheap hit."

The hit came only one-half inning after Rocky Mount seemed poised to retake the lead. Richard Maude led off the inning by reaching on an error by Pitt County's Mark Douglas, his third of the game. Barry Butler, running for Maude, then went to second on Bruce Ellis' sacrific and to third on a wild pitch.

Pitt County escaped the inning tied because Gordon Douglas, Mark's brother, struck out the next two hitters. Douglas had come on in relief of starter Doug McRoy in the fifth.

Pitt County did not waste its ninth-inning chance. To set the scene: With one gone in the ninth, Rand singled. Mark Douglas followed with a single to give Pitt County runners on first and second. Enter Brann.

After settling into the batter's box, Brann, a left-hander, hit the first pitch from Rocky Mount hurler Bill Wilkes into the right-centerfield gap. Rand scored easily to give Post 39 its second win in three outings this season.

"Anytime you win one like this it helps your confidence," Pitt County coach Pat Smith said. "And when you do it after being down 2-0 against a pitcher like that, it has to be a confidence and morale builder."

It was Rocky Mount, now 4-3 overall and 2-2 in the league, which got the early morale boost. After a scoreless first inning, Rocky Mount used a double and the third of five Pitt County errors to take the lead.

With one gone in the second, Eddie Coats doubled to rightfield when Roger Williams misplayed the ball. Ben Harris followed with a walk.

Mitch Driver then hit a grounder to Douglas at short. Douglas flipped to second baseman Sammy Hodges for the force out but Hodges threw the ball past first base, an error which allowed Coats to score. The inning ended seconds later when first baseman Billy Kittrell retrieved the ball and threw to second to get Driver.

The lead stood at 1-0 until the fifth when Ben Harris led off the inning by hitting the first pitch from starter Doug McRoy over the right-centerfield fence for his first home run of the season.

Pitt County, which had runners on first and third in the third but failed to score, finally broke through in the bottom of the fifth.

With one gone, Rand, who scored all three Pitt County runs, went in to pinch hit for McRoy. He promptly singled and raced to third when Wilkes' attempted pickoff throw went into rightfield. Rand scored on Mark Douglas' sacrifice fly to center.

It stayed that way until the seventh, thanks mainly to Gordon Douglas. Douglas, on in relief of McRoy, struck out five and held Rocky Mount to one hit in four innings of work.

"Doug hadn't pitched since the middle of May and said he was a little tired tonight. He wasn't as sharp like he's capable of being," Smith said. "We hadn't used Gordon yet because he had a little sore arm. But he looked good tonight."

After entering the game down 2-0, Douglas saw his teammates tie the game in the seventh. With two gone, Rand reached on an error by Coats, Post 58's shortstop. Mark Douglas then drove Rand home with the tying run with a double over the rightfielder's head. Two innings later Post 39 completed its prolonged rally with Brann's single.

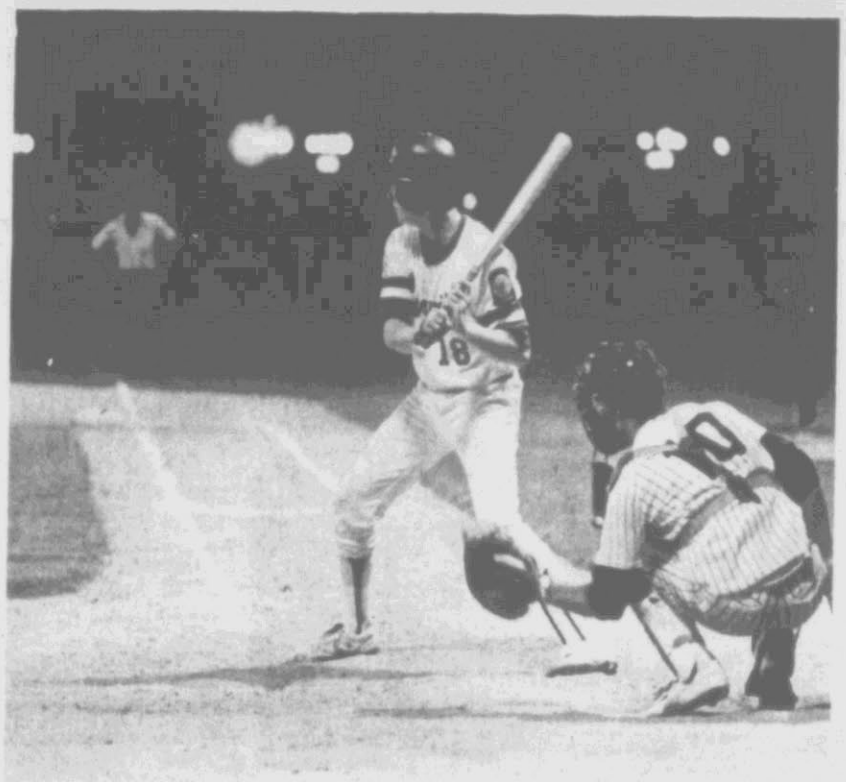

"This was a good ball game," Pitt County coach Pat Smith said. "I was worried. We were down 2-0 and then 2-1. But anytime you beat Rocky Mount it makes these guys happy."

Smith couldn't have been smiling in the early innings. While he watched, his club made two errors in the first inning and another in the second. In all, Post 39 made five errors, bring its three-game total to 14.

Among all those errors, however, was a jem of a play. It occurred in the third inning. Rocky Mount's Rodney Morton had singled to lead off the inning and Chuck Davis had walked on four straight pitches.

Post 39 looked in trouble. But Wilkes then hit a soft liner to Mark Douglas for one out. Douglas then touched second to force Morton and threw to first to get Davis and complete the triple play.

Pitt County was to travel to Edenton today.

Aguirre Expected To Be #1 NBA Pick

NEW YORK (AP) — Isiah Thomas says he's taking advantage of "a once in a lifetime opportunity" by turning pro after his sophomore year at Indiana, but the decision still hasn't been an easy one to make.

"Emotionally I would have liked to stay at Indiana," said Thomas, the 6-foot-1 guard who led the Hoosiers to the NCAA title in March. "But I couldn't make the decision with my heart. I had to make it with my head. I'll still have a lot of problems, but I'd rather be rich with the problems than poor.

"Basketball is my hobby, and not everybody has a chance to get paid for his hobby."

Thomas figures to be paid handsomely after he is selected in today's National Basketball Association draft of college players. Mark Aguirre of DePaul was expected to be the first player chosen, by the Dallas Mavericks, then the Detroit Pistons were ready to take Thomas with the No. 2 pick.

The draft, which was scheduled to begin at 12:15 p.m., EDT, was to last 10 rounds. But the focus of attention was on the opening round, in which New Jersey had three picks and Dallas, Detroit and Portland two apiece.

Besides Aguirre and Thomas, other players who were expected to go early in the draft were center Steve Johnson of Oregon State, forwards Buck Williams of Maryland, Kelly Tripucka and Orlando Woolridge of Notre Dame, Al Wood of North Carolina, Al King of Maryland and Danny Vranes and Tom Chambers of Utah, and guards Frank Johnson of Wake Forest and Rolando Blackman of Kansas State.

The 20-year-old Thomas could become a millionaire when he signs his first NBA contract. But although he admits the money was the biggest reason he elected to go pro, he promises it's not going to change him.

"I don't want to have to adjust to money, I want money to adjust to me," he said. "I'll be the same person tomorrow I am today. I may dress better and I may live better, but I'll be the same person because I like myself the way I am. I'm content, and I don't want that to change."

Thomas grew up in the West Side ghetto of Chicago, the youngest of 10 children. He maintains close ties with his family, including his mother, Mary Thomas, who has been the head of the family since Isiah's father left them when he was 3.

"My mom can't work anymore and she deserves to enjoy life," said Isiah. "She's taken care of me for all these years, it's the least I can do to take care of her now. If I can do that for her, why shouldn't I?

"I owe my life to my family. Whatever goals I achieve won't make up for what they missed. Whatever happens, my family comes first."

Thomas says he learned from the mistakes of his brothers and thus managed to avoid the drugs, the crime and the violence of the ghetto.

"All my brothers played basketball," he said. "They could have been just as good as me, but they never had the opportunity. My oldest brother, Lord Henry Thomas, was the greatest basketball player I've ever seen. But he got into trouble and there was nobody there to say he was making a mistake. He did that for me. All my brothers did.

"I learned from them and their mistakes. I was never in a situation where I had to fight and scuffle. I'm not saying I had an easy life, Lord knows it was hard. But my brothers made it easier for me. They always protected me."

Thomas grew up with a basketball in his hands. At the age of 3 he had a dribbling act and performed at halftime of grade school games. He also excelled academically and earned a scholarship to St. Joseph's High School in the Chicago suburb of Westchester, where he came under the tutelage of a coach named Gene Pingatore.

While his basketball game flourished, Thomas neglected his studies as a high school freshman and nearly flunked out of school. But between his brothers and Pingatore, the message got through that if Thomas wanted to get a basketball scholarship to college, he needed to maintain at least passing grades. He did better than that: For the next three years he made the honor roll.

School remains important in Thomas' life. Even though he's turning pro, he intends to pursue his goal of becoming a lawyer.

"My mother wanted me to stay in school and get my degree," he said. "But when I told her that just because I wouldn't be playing college basketball didn't mean I wouldn't be going to college, she went along. I plan to keep going to school in the summer, maybe take extension courses.

Rose Ready To Crash Record Books Again

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Pete Rose is about to crash the record book again — this time with what is perhaps his most prestigious mark of all. A day or so from now, he will eclipse Stan Musial's National League record for hits.

In 22 glorious seasons, Stan Musial, coiled in a batting stance that looked like a spring ready to snap, rattled 3,630 hits around National League ball parks. Pete Rose, in his 19th season, is a just couple of swings away from No.3,631.

Roll that number over your tongue ever so gently. Three thousand hits is an achievement all by itself. Six hundred thirty one extra means better than three more 200-hit seasons. Or, as Musial breaks it down, 3,631 hits is 18 seasons worth of tattooing about 202 hits a year. That is a model of consistency that borders on awesome.

As a tribute to Rose's remarkable achievement, Howken Industries of Cincinnati has commissioned sculptor Ken Bradford to create a likeness of Rose at the plate. There are 500 copies, scaled to one-sixth life size and, autographed by both Rose and Bradford, they carry a price tag of $1,575. That comes to about 43 cents per hit, a bargain in anybody's league.

But a sculpture of Rose at the plate, swinging a bat, just doesn't capture him properly for the keeper of this corner. A hundred years from now, no matter how many hits this remarkable player finally accumulates, the memory of Pete Rose will have him flying through the air, heading for a base with both and legs flying, about to return to earth, face first.

Pete Rose is a belly-whop slide looking for some place to land. He gets his uniforms dirty. He is a throwback to another time, another age in baseball when players approached this game with zest and enthusiasm, hell bent for leather. John McGraw would have loved Pete Rose and his style.

The irony of Rose breaking the Musial record is that Stan the Man's last two career hits came on the final day of the 1963 season with the St. Louis Cardinals playing a so-what game against the Cincinnati Reds. Musial whizzed one past the left side of the Cincinnati second baseman and another zipped past his right side.

Stationed at second for the Reds that day was a crew-cut rookie who was the best first-year player in the National League that season.

"If I had any range then," Pete Rose is fond of saying, "I'd only need 72 hits this season."

What Rose doesn't say is that in that game, he had three hits. Musial has the box score to prove it.

Rose finished his first year with 170 hits and managed just 139 in his second season. Since then, though, he's had only six seasons in which he failed to crack 200 hits, and in two of those seasons, he missed by just two hits. He has led the league in hits four times and tied for the league lead two other times. His top hit production came in 1973 when he drilled 230 of them.

That was the same year that Rose nearly started a riot during the NL playoffs when he went to war with New York Mets shortstop Bud Harrelson. Rose had come barreling into second base, intent on breaking up a double play and prepared to drive Harrelson, who was covering the bag, into left field if it became necessary.

The collision and subsequent words turned into a full scale brawl and some New Yorkers with long memories still boo Rose over the affair. That's a mistake. Pete was just playing the game his way — tough. Collisions are part of his game plan.

The night before the 1970 All Star Game at Cincinnati, Rose hosted Cleveland catcher Ray Fosse for dinner. The next night, with Fosse blocking home plate and Rose carrying the winning run, Pete crashed into the catcher, knee first. The National League won the game and Fosse suffered a separated shoulder and was never quite the same player.

Ten years later, in the NL playoffs, Rose came barreling around third base again, carrying Philadelphia's winning run in Game Four. Waiting at the plate was Houston catcher Bruce Bochy.

Waiting Continues In Baseball Strike Talks

NEW YORK (AP) — The waiting game continues in baseball's threatened player strike.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, is waiting for management's counter proposal to a player pool idea he thinks can settle the free agent compensation question.

Ray Grebey, director of management's Player Relations Committee, is waiting for another union proposal,

And both sides are waiting for Judge Henry Werker's decision on a National Labor Relations Board petition for an injunction against the major leagues.

A spokesman for Judge Werker said Monday a decision would be made "later in the week," on the NLRB petition. Then the management and the union met with federal mediator Kenneth Moffett for two hours with no progress reported.

Grebey said it had been a lengthy meeting but with no progress and that another negotiating session was set for today.

Miller agreed that the no progress assessment was fair but said the joint meetings lasted no more than 15 or 20 minutes. "Most of that time was spent discussing logistics of our next meeting," he said.

Miller was asked if the owners had talked any more about the pool idea which the union placed on the bargaining table Saturday.

"Their one comment that goes to the heart of the pool proposal...without going into detail...basically they object to the pool proposal," Miller said. "We've said, 'If you have a counter proposal, make it. We can't read your minds.'"

But management has made no counter proposals after rejecting the pool idea which would have each major league team contribute an unspecified number of players to a compensation pool. The pool would then be used to provide professional replacements for quality players lost to free agency through the re-entry draft.

Miller said Grebey's response remains consistent.

"He keeps saying, 'You must have a bottom line,'" Miller said, quoting the management representative. "I'm not sure what he means but if I read that correctly, what he'd like is for us to make more and more proposals until we get to bingo."

Bingo in this game would be union acceptance of the compensation plan forcing teams signing free agents to provide the replacement players.

Werker's role is to decide whether the NLRB request for an injunction should be honored. If the judge grants the injunction, it would delay the owners' compensation program and any player strike for one yearr. If he does not grant it, the players have said they would strike within 48 hours of the decision.

Mariner Hurlers Blank Bosox

By The Associated Press

Neither Roger Erickson nor Dennis Lamp stuck around for the finish. Floyd Bannister did. All three got what they wanted.

Erickson and Lamp pitched masterfully until late in the game and each wound up victorious after relief help Monday night. Bannister didn't bother the bullpen, however, in mowing down the Boston Red Sox on two hits.

Bannister's stellar effort gave the Seattle Mariners a 2-0 triumph over Boston, while Minnesota's Erickson and Doug Corbett combined on a four-hit, 1-0 victory over Milwaukee, and Lamp teamed with Kevin Hickey to throw a six-hit, 6-2 triumph over Toronto.

Elsewhere in the American League, the New York Yankees bombed Kansas City 8-3; California demolished Cleveland 10-2, and Texas smashed Detroit 8-1.

Mariners 2, Red Sox 0

Bannister surrendered a first-inning single to Dwight Evans and a double to Carney Lansford in the ninth. He struck out seven.

"I'll take a two-hitter anytime," said Bannister, 6-5. "Particularly against a team like Boston and in a park like this."

The left-hander said he was concerned with Boston's heavy hitters because the Seattle Kingdome is a hitter's haven.

"I was kind of on pins and needles because of the ballpark. You can't give up any hits. All it takes is a flyball."

Bannister gave credit to catcher Terry Bulling for his brilliant effort.

"Terry called a great game," he said. "I was mixing speeds well. I knew I had to keep the ball low. The Red Sox have a lot of good right-handed hitters in their lineup."

The Mariners had a pretty good right-handed hitter in their lineup in Gary Gray, who blasted his 13th homer of the season for all the Seattle runs. Prior to Gray's shot, Tom Paciorek had been hit with a pitch by Red Sox starter John Tudor, who threw a four-hitter.

Boston Manager Ralph Houk said Bannister's fastball "was running. He didn't give us anything to hit.

"John Tudor matched him pitch for pitch except for that one home run pitch."

Twins 1, Brewers 0

Erickson was aided by pitching coach Johnny Podres as well as by Corbett, who pitched the final 12-3 innings to allow Erickson to break a four-game losing string.

"When I was in the bullpen (four starts ago)," said Erickson, "our pitching coach watched me throw. He said, 'what the heck was that.' I told him it was a breaking pitch. He said, 'for crying out loud, use it.'"

Erickson did and gave up the Brewers' four hits. But his hurling might have gone for naught if Ron Jackson hadn't singled home Butch Wynegar in the seventh inning with the only run of the game.

White Sox 6, Blue Jays 2

Lamp carried a two-hitter into the ninth inning before giving up four singles and two runs. But he was ahead 6-0 when Toronto came alive. Hickey wrapped it up with his first major league save.

The White Sox built a 4-0 lead in the second. Bill Almon and Greg Luzinski each had two-run singles. Chet Lemon added a homer for the White Sox.

"I've been ready since they told me I'd get this start," said Lamp, who relieved 12 times this season after being acquired from the Cubs. "I felt I was going to win. Every pitch I threw was with a purpose. But I just couldn't get that last strike or that last out."

Yankees 8, Royals 3

Unbeaten rookie Dave Righetti won his third game and got offensive support from Lou Piniella, Dave Winfield and Jerry Mumphrey, each with two RBI. Mumphrey connected for his fourth homer as the Yankees won their eighth straight game.

"I didn't go over the hitters. I didn't want to," said Righetti. "When you do that, you just go over their good points and you make them all look like .300 hitters. I didn't go through all that. I just tried to relax."

Kansas City's Lee May had two hits, with his sixth-inning single giving him 2,000 hits for his career, making him the 10th active player to reach that number.

Rangers 8, Tigers 1

Mickey Rivers had three hits, scored twice, knocked in a run and stole a base as Texas moved into first place, one percentage point ahead of idle Oakland, in the AL West. It was the Rangers' fourth straight victory and 14th in 17 games.

"We're up to the point now where we can compete with the top teams," said Rivers. "The way we have been struggling and battling, we deserve to be in first place."

The Rangers sent 16 men to the plate in the first two innings, scoring six runs. Al Oliver extended his hitting streak to 15 games with a first-inning single.

Rick Honeycutt, 6-1, scattered five hits before yielding to Jim Kern in the ninth.

Angels 10, Indians 2

Butch Hobson drove in four runs, three with a bases-loaded double in the second, and Geoff Zahn turned in his sixth complete game, a five-hitter. The Angels put the game away with a six-run eighth.

Spaniard Returns To United States For Open

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The young golfing gold prospector from the village of Santander in northern Spain is back in the United States, grubbing for the mother lode.

"I play one tournament in the last four weeks — the French Open, where I finish third," said 24-year-old Severiano Ballesteros, who flew in Sunday for the $400,000 Westchester Classic this weekend.

"That is much money. My mind it is no longer tired. I feel good. Maybe this week I get sharp for the U.S. Open."

It's the Open next week over the historic Merion course in Pennsylvania that is the center of Ballesteros' eye.

He won the British Open in 1979, the youngest player in this century to do so, and came to America the following spring to grab the Masters at age 23, the youngest winner ever.

Then, with two major titles dangling from his golf bag, he flew to Baltusrol in Springfield, N.J., amid great fanfare to take on Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson and other American giants in the U.S. Open.

But oops! The young Spaniard showed up seven minutes late for his second round teeoff and was disqualified.

It was embarrassing for everyone — a rarity which left the blame unplaced. Ballesteros went into immediate seclusion, explaining through friends that he had misread his starting time. Some said he simply overslept. The club and tournamennt officials were red-faced, feeling that somewhere they may have derelict in not being more alert in getting so important a guest to the tee.

Ballesteros, sensitive on the matter, prefers to forget it.

"It is over," he replies crisply when the subject is raised. "This is a new tournament. I want very much to win the Open. Give me the title and I give you all the prize money. Money means nothing. The Open — it means everything."

Seve, as the guys call him, burst upon the international golf scene like a lightning flash when he finished second in the British Open in 1976 at the age of 19. Little known in his native Spain, where the passion is soccer, he became the darling of British and European galleries.

They adopted him as their favorite son. He became their rooting interest in the one-sided war against the dominating and filthy rich Yanks from across the Atlantic.

Tall, thin, with boyish good looks and an exciting game which is a throwback to a younger Arnold Palmer — power plus a gambling, scrambling, go-for-broke philosophy — he radiates charm and charisma.

In the 1979 British Open at Royal Lytham, loyal fans had to follow their hero through jungle and sand — he was on only 14 of 72 fairways — before watching him hit off a parking lot for a birdie on the 70th to clinch the crown.

Ballesteros repeated his jungle safari when he won the Masters, exploring pines and flower beds never before visited by man, but he survived, and the fans loved it.

"It doesn't matter where you hit the drive if you sink the putt," he said.

Bunch's Two HRs Down Snow Hill

SNOW HILL — Al Bunch hit two two-run home runs and Donald Jordan drove in three runs to lead Edenton to a 10-6 decision over Snow Hill Monday night in an American Legion baseball game.

Snow Hill jumped out to a 4-0 lead after two innings. In the first, David Shirley singled, went to second when Kevin Battle reached on a fielder's choice and to third on Frank Milkovits' walk.

Jabo Fulghum then doubled home Shirley and Battle and David Kester singled home Milkovits to give Snow Hill a 3-0 lead. Post 94 added another run to its lead in the second to go up 4-0 before Edenton rallied.

Bunch's first two-run shot came in the third and sparked a three-run uprising. Two innings later, Edenton took a 6-4 lead with a three-run fifth. Snow Hill cut the deficit to one with a run in the bottom of the fifth but Post 94 did not get any closer.

Edenton scored twice in the sixth and twice more in the eighth, thanks to Bunch's second two-run homer, to take a lead it never lost. Snow Hill's final run came in the bottom of the eighth.

Snow Hill, now 3-2 overall, was led by Maurice Thorbes, who was three for five. Wade Corbett was two for four and Fulghum two for five. Thorbes, Fulghum, Battle and Greg Hardison all had doubles for Snow Hill.

Bunch was three for four and Jordan two for four for Edenton.

Snow Hill returns to action Saturday night when it entertains Pitt County.

Pizza Inn 4
Edward's Auto 1

Edward's Auto committed only one official error but made a number of mental mistakes to negate a fine one-hit pitching performance by Mitchell Phillips and give Pizza Inn a 4-1 victory Monday in a Winterville Little League game.

Phillips struck out 15 and walked seven while giving up only a first-inning single to Bronswell Patrick. But it wasn't enough as Pizza Inn won its eighth game of the season without a defeat.

Edward's Auto, now 6-1, was led at the plate by Sherwood Wilder, who had three hits.

In another Winterville Little League game, Dr. Cohen defeated Sunshine Garden Center, 10-9. Further details were not available.

First Federal 6
Moose 2

Rodney Harris hit a grand slam to spark a six-run fifth inning and lift First Federal to a 6-2 victory over Moose Monday afternoon in a Tar Heel Little League baseball game.

Moose broke a scoreless tie in the second inning when Tripp Andrews sacrificed home one run and Jay Mattox singled home another to take a 2-0 lead.

It stayed that way until the fifth when First Federal sent 10 men to the plate and came away with six runs.

Frankie Pugh singled to open the inning and scored when Billy Anderson reached on an error. Richard Lewis then reached on an error and Chris Meeks singled to load the bases. Harris then unleashed his home run to drive home all four runs and give First Federal a 5-0 lead.

Mark Holloman walked, stole second, moved to third on a passed ball and scored on a balk for the final run of the inning.

Harris led FF with two hits in three at bats. Moose managed just three hits off the First Federal pitching duo of Mark Holloman and Harris.

Lions 4
Union Carbide 1

Junior Taft hit a solo homer and Tom Moye pitched a three-hitter to lead the Lions to a 4-1 triumph over Union Carbide Monday in a North State Little League baseball game.

Taft's home run in the first inning gave the Lions a 1-0 lead, a lead they never lost. Burt Aycock doubled in the second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Carlos Harris's single to give the Lions a 2-0 lead.

The Lions scored another run in the fourth and one in the sixth for their total. Union Carbide's only run came in the fifth.

No one for either team had more than one hit.

Babe Ruth

Bill Clifton 3
Winterville 1

WINTERVILLE — Bill Clifton scored three runs in the sixth inning without aid of a hit to defeat Winterville, 3-1, Monday in a Senior Babe Ruth baseball game.

Trailing 1-0 after five innings, Bill Clifton scored three times in the sixth thanks to two errors, a walk and a hit batsman.

Bill Kirkland was the winner on the mound, striking out four and walking five while allowing four hits. Sammy Tucker took the loss. He struck out nine and walked four while allowing four hits also.

No one for either team had more than one hit.

Aaction Movers 7
Planter's 0

Bill Godley pitched a one-hitter and Aaction Movers scored three runs in the fourth en route to a 7-0 victory over Planter's National Bank Monday in a Babe Ruth baseball game.

Godley struck out eight and walked one while pitching four innings of no-hit ball. Planter's only hit came in the fifth on a Carlton Wilson single.

Aaction Movers took a 1-0 lead in the first inning and never trailed afterwards. Godley singled to open the inning, moved to second on a passed ball and to third on Toby Fischer's sacrifice. He scored on Daryl Pettis' single.

AM went up, 2-0, and pushed its lead to 5-0 with a three-run fourth, an inning sparked by singles by Fischer and Jay Wynn. AM's final tworuns cmae in the sixth.

AM was led by Wynn and Godley, both of whom had two hits.

Planter's Bank 8
Pepsi Cola 7

Planter's Bank scored two unearned runs in the fifth inning and then held off Pepsi Cola to capture an 8-7 decision Monday in a Babe Ruth baseball game.

With one gone in the fifth, John Jordan walked, stole second and scored when Carlton Wilson reached on an error. Wilson later scored after a passed ball and Pepsi's second error of the inning.

Pepsi came up with one run in the bottom of the fifth but it wasn't enought. Bill Messick and Bobby Buie walked to start the inning. Then, with two outs, Patrick Rand singled home Messick.

Planter's led, 3-0, after the first inning on singles by Richard Pace and Smith and a double by Bradley. After Planters moved ahead 4-0 with a run in the third, Pepsi scored four times in the bottom of the inning to tie the game. Three singles — by Rand, Cyrus Blackwell and Tim Norris — highlighted the inning.

Both teams scored twice in the fourth but Planter's scored twice more in the fifth compared to Pepsi's one run in the fifth to take the victory.

Rand, Norris and Casey all had two hits for Pepsi. Turner had a double for Pepsi.

Pace and Bradley had two hits for Planter's. Both of Bradley's hits were doubles. Scott had a triple for Planter's.

The National Basketball Association, as a league, shot at a percentage of .253 in three-point attempts in the 1980-81 season, making 936 of 3,697 tries.

Foyt May Be Called In Hearing

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The testimony of A.J. Foyt, one of three drivers who initiated the complaint against Bobby Unser that led to Mario Andretti being awarded the victory in the Indianapolis 500, may be sought in Unser's appeal to the U.S. Auto Club.

The hearing at USAC headquarters was recessed over the weekend so both Unser and Andretti could compete in the Rex Mays 150 at Milwaukee. Testimony resumed at 9 a.m. (EST) today.

Foyt, who reported to Indy 500 chief steward Tom Binford that Unser had illegally passed a line of cars as he left the pits during a caution period in the May 24 race, has become a central figure in Unser's contention that Andretti also violated the no-passing rule during the race.

Unser, 47, a previous two-time Indy champion, crossed the finish line five seconds ahead of Andretti but was penalized one lap for his infraction and was dropped to second place when the official standings were posted the morning after the race.

During the hearing on the appeal of that ruling, which began last Thursday, an attorney for Unser and car owner Roger Penske has tried to establish that the USAC rule against passing during the yellow is vague and that if Unser was guilty of a violation, Andretti was similarly guilty.

Binford, who was the first witness called by USAC, conceded that had a violation by Andretti been detected, he, too, would have been subject to a one-lap penalty that would have restored the victory to Unser.

Unser attorney James Binns introduced an ABC-TV video tape that showed Andretti going around Foyt during the yellow period on the 150th lap, the same lap that Unser passed eight cars as he exited the pits.

Binford testified that Foyt had told him after the race that his car was having some trouble and that he voluntarily waved Andretti ahead of him. But Binford said it was his recollection that Foyt wasn't sure which lap that occurred.

Andretti, who testified on Friday, also said Foyt motioned him to go by — but Andretti said Foyt had confirmed it happened on the crucial lap in question and that Foyt had told Andretti's crew chief after the race that he would back him up.

During a recess in Friday's hearing, USAC attorney Henry Ryder and Andretti telephoned Foyt in Houston. That sparked an angry exchange between Ryder and Binns when the hearing resumed.

Binns said it was improper for a witness currently being heard (Andretti) to speak with a potential witness (Foyt) during the hearing. He demanded to be told what Foyt told Andretti.

ASU Captures World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arizona State's tournament tradition and big bats carried the No. 1 Sun Devils into the NCAA College World Series baseball championship game but the left arm of reliever Kevin Dukes reached out to grab the trophy.

Dukes picked up his second tournament victory in holding hot-hitting Oklahoma State to just two hits through 8 2-3 innings as ASU captured its fifth collegiate baseball title 7-4 Monday night in Rosenblatt Stadium.

A crowd of 13,239 saw Dukes end OSU's first-inning rally, yield a run without giving up a hit in the third and another single run in the ninth on a double by Glenn Edwards. He also picked two runners off first base.

"Arizona State is an excellent team with Dukes," said Oklahoma State Coach Gary Ward, whose team chased ASU starter Kendall Carter after facing just the first four batters in the two-run first inning.

"We created some early momentum but Dukes took it away. He has major league stuff with great placement of his pitches," said Ward.

The third-ranked Cowboys had touched Dukes for the only hits he has given up in his four tournament appearances. OSU knocked the senior standout out of the game in Friday night's winners bracket final with four singles in one inning.

"They didn't hit him hard then," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock. "He was tired. He'd gone 6 1-3 innings earlier but I had no doubt he'd do the job tonight."

Rose Moves 1 Hit Closer To Record

Phillies Defeat Astros, 5-4

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Larry Bowa collected three hits and drove in three runs as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Houston Astros 4-3, but the spotlight was on Pete Rose who moved a hit closer to breaking Stan Musial's all-time National League hit record of 3,630.

The fans appreciated Bowa's contribution in the Phillies' third straight triumph Monday night, but the cheers resounded when Rose came to the plate in the only NL game of the night.

Rose picked up a single in the third inning, his only hit in three at-bats. It left him four short of passing Musial's career record.

Musial, incidentally, was in town, but won't start coming to the ball park to see Rose's record-smashing hit until tonight. He'll stick around until it happens so he can congratulate Rose.

Rose continues to low key the fast approaching milestone.

"Anytime you are about to accomplish what I'm about to do it's fun," the Phillies first baseman said.

Rose said he told Houston pitcher Don Sutton (4-7) it was a pretty good pitch, and Sutton replied, "'Yeh, they pay you to hit pretty good pitches.'"

Rose said he was trying not to get carried away by the emotion of the situation, adding, "I don't want to forget what I'm out there for — to win."

Bowa said he was lucky to get his hits and knock in the key runs, and noted that he had to remind fans that he had a pretty good final half of the 1980 season, a good playoff and World Series.

The Phillies' shortstop thinks the fans recall only that he had a poor first half last year.

The Phillies took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on a single by Dick Davis, Garry Maddox' double, and Bowa's two-run single.

In the fourth, Jose Cruz hit his 10th home run of the season to make it 2-1. The Phillies came back in the bottom of the inning for two more runs and a 4-1 lead.

Hayes Goes To Houston; Kings Trade Birdsong

By The Associated Press

Elvin Hayes had a wish fulfilled, the Kansas City Kings cut their losses and the Atlanta Hawks and Chicago Bulls played musical chairs in eleventh-hour wheeling and dealing prior to Monday night's National Basketball Association trading deadline.

Hayes, who helped the Washington Bullets to an NBA championship in 1978, is returning to Houston, the city he loves and the place where he skyrocketed to stardom almost two decades ago. In return, for the 13-year veteran, the Bullets get two second-round draft choices, one in today's draft collegiate basketball draft and the other in 1983.

"It's a move that will work itself out for both teams," said the 35-year-old Hayes in a telephone interview from his home Columbia, Md. home.

"It's a tremendous move for the Bullets. They are rebuilding...and need the draft choices.

"The Rockets got to the finals last year, and they just need one player to get over the threshhold. I don't see why I can't be that player...I was for the Bullets," Hayes added.

The Kings unloaded All-Pro guard Otis Birdsong and forward Scott Wedman — two players who already had signed free-agent contracts — for forward Cliff Robinson and a No.1 draft pick.

Birdsong and Wedman had signed "offer sheets" with the Cleveland Cavaliers that would have assured them contracts in excess of $700,000. Under the NBA's right of refusal the Kings had 15 days to match Cleveland's offers or else lose Birdsong and Wedman without compensation.

Rather than be left with nothing, the Kings compromised. They matched Cleveland's offer for Birdsong and then dealt last season's sixth-leading scorer in the league and a second-round choice in today's college deaft (the 44th overall) to the New Jersey Nets for the 6-foot-9½ Cliff Robinson.

In Wedman's case, Kansas City agreed to accept the Cavaliers' No.1 draft selection (No.17 overall) as payment for Wedman and pledged not to exercise their right of first refusal in his signing. The Kings, who also own the No.7 pick overall, also gave Cleveland a second-round draft (the No.36 pick overall) in the draft.

The Nets later sent the second-round draft pick they received from the Kings to Washington to complete a deal conducted last winter.

Birdsong, 25, is a four-year veteran. He is an outstanding long-range shooter who was an all-NBA second team selection this season.

In a deal involving draft choices, Atlanta Hawks sent its first-round (No.6 overall) and its first-round pick and one of its two secopd-round draft choices in the 1982 to Chicago. In return, the Hawks got the Bulls first-round selection this year (No.4 overall), the Bulls' No.2 choice, (38th overall) this year, and next year's first-round choice.

Baywood Slips Past GTC, 5-4

Baywood, now 2-1, trailed 4-2 after the singles matches but won all three doubles matches to capture the victory. Greenville is now 1-1.

State Senate Defers Action On Redistricting Bill

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would make bid-rigging a state felony headed to the House floor while the Senate, faced with two plans for redrawing North Carolina's 11 congressional districts, stalled Monday for more time.

The House was expected to take up the tough bid-rigging bill on Wednesday, after a committee voted unanimously to approve it in a special Monday night meeting.

In the Senate, today's scheduled action on redistricting was put off until at least Wednesday after Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, told the Senate it should wait until the House Congressional Redistricting Committee gives some indication of what it wants to do.

The Senate committee has approved one redistricting plan drawn by Rep. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth. But the plan has stirred strong opposition from those who don't want to see Durham County moved into the 2nd District, and an alternative map drawn by Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, is expected to be offered on the floor as an amendment.

The House redistricting panel hasn't met since its members walked out on a joint meeting with the Senate committee nearly two weeks ago. The chairman, Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, who has been hospitalized for that period, returned Monday night and said he would try to hold a meeting later today.

The bid-rigging bill was approved by the House Judicary I Committee. Its sponsor, Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, said it was in a tougher form than when sent to the General Assembly by Gov. Jim Hunt.

"It's tough," he said. "I'm confident it will pass. The people are looking for this."

The bill was originally aimed at collusion by paving contractors whose bids on state road paving contracts have been the object of a long federal investigation, resulting in convictions on federal anti-trust charges. Current state law provided only misdemeanor sanctions against bid rigging.

The bill was also expanded to include any state contracts, and also covers contracts between any two parties — even if the state isn't one of them — in which there is a restraint of trade.

The bill makes it a Class H felony, carrying a maximum 10 year senetence and a presumed three-year sentence, for persons convicted of restraint of trade in state contracts. Individuals could also face a $100,000 fine, and corporations a $1 million fine.

In addition, courts may suspend a contractor's license for up to three years. "When you do that," Miller said, "you've put him of business."

In other legislative action:

Vacation Tax

A new tax on vacation home rentals, proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt more than a month ago, was finally filed as a bill by Rep. Ben Tison, D-Charlotte. The bill would levy the 3 percent state sales tax on rentals of homes owned by individuals and rented for periods of less than 90 days.

The administration estimates the tax would generate $4 million a year. Hunt proposed it as part of a package of taxes that would replenish the state's general fund for the loss of money to the highway program under another bill proposed by Hunt.

Tison said he introduced the bill at the request of Hunt aides and House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

Tuition

The Senate unanimously approved a bill that would allow local school systems to charge tuition for the children of military personnel. The bill is sought by counties with large military bases, such as Fort Bragg in Cumberland County, which are faced with the threatened loss of federal impact aid.

That money, amounting to millions of dollars a year, is paid by the federal government in lieu of local property taxes.

The bill was sent to the House for concurrence in amendments.

Speedy Trials

The House voted not to concur with Senate changes in a bill making changes in the state's speedy trials act and delaying its 90-day provisions for two years. The bill was sent to a conference committee.

The most significant change is the delay until October of 1983 in the requirement that a defendant be brought to trial within 90 days of indictment. The current requirement is 120 days, and the timetable was scheduled by law to be reduced to 90 days this fall unless the General Assembly acts to delay it.

New Generation

The House voted 98-4 to tentatively approve a bill making minor changes in the 1979 New Generation Act, which established committees to ensure adequate health care services for children. The bill was strongly pushed by Gov. Jim Hunt two years ago, and later ran into strong criticism from conservatives.

The latest bill says the state recognizes that the family is the "primary provider" of health care. It also states that the act is in no way related to a controversial health care plan, called the "blue book" and published by the state two years ago, which opponents said was tied to the act.

Peanuts

The Senate voted 95-5 to approve and send the Senate a resolution calling on Congress to oppose the deregulation of the peanut growing industry. It was sponsored by Rep. John Gillam, D-Bertie, a freshman legislator and peanut grower.

There was no debate as he told the House that deregulation would hurt small peanut farmers.

New Bills

A bill introduced by Rep. Chris Barker, D-Craven, would levy a tax on tea and coffee. The tax would be 8 cents per ounce of dry tea and six cents per ounce of dry coffee.

One-Fourth Of N.C. Counties Planning Property Tax Boost

By W.A. WERONKA JR.
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Many counties in the process of preparing their budgets for 1982 are having to face a harsh reality — higher taxes may be necessary.

The federal and state governments are mulling over proposed cuts in their own budgets, and that will force money and job cutbacks on the counties. And if a county wants to keep a program at its present level or retain a job, it will have to pick up the cost itself.

Since property taxes are most counties' main source of revenue, it follows that they will have to go up in order for more money to come in. And an Associated Press survey shows that 25 of the state's 100 counties propose doing just that.

Seventy-one of the state's 100 counties were surveyed, and 25 said property tax increases averaging about 8 cents per $100 evaluation have either been approved or proposed. Six counties planned decreases of about 2 cents per $100, while the remaining 40 counties plan no change or are going through re-evaluation of property values, which must be done every eight years.

Many of the counties say the increases are necessary because of a number of reasons. But the main reason given are cutbacks at the state and federal levels in such items as Medicaid, the school lunch program and education.

Johnston and Clay counties have proposed the largest increases — about 30 percent.

Johnston County has proposed raising the current 60 cents per $100 tax by 19 cents. A spokesman in the county manager's office said that will probably not hold, however. "It's not going over real well," she said.

In Clay County, tax supervisor Bill Green said the first proposal was for a 50 percent increase, but county commissioners have now whittled that down to 30 percent.

"To me that is still too much of an increase for any one year," he said.

Green said the county needs an additional $120,000. He said the county's population has gone up in the last few years, mostly in older citizens. That increase has resulted in the county's Medicaid and social services budget jumping drastically.

Moreover, he said the county school system's food service division stands to lose $57,000 because of federal cutbacks. And there are teacher's aides that will be lost and may have to be picked up by the county.

Green said it is a real "dilemma." But he added that a bill pending in the state Legislature could help solve the county's monetary problems. That bill would allow counties to levy an addition 1 percent sales tax.

"That would eliminate most of the need for an increase in property taxes," he said. "And it is much fairer because everyone pays it."

In Rutherford County, outraged citizens made their feeling known when it was announced that the county planned an 11 cent increase in the current 79 cents per $100 evaluation.

An overflow crowd showed up last week for a public hearing and loudly protested the increase. The next day the county commissioners cut the increase to 6 cents.

County administrator Bob Irwin said it was "almost a mandate of the people." But the county must still cope with the impact of the cuts, such as the loss of 54 teacher's aides and about 15 teachers.

"I've never known cuts like this before," said county school superintendent Doug Pearson.

Burke County is not raising property taxes, but it is still dealing with the problem in a different manner.

The county has proposed cutting its budget by 2 percent, a loss of about $200,000. Officials say that will result in major cuts, including most of the county recreation department programs. Sheriff Jerry Richards said he may have to cut out patrols and most other business except serving civil warrants because of cutbacks in gasoline allotments for his department.

Counties are dealing with the problems now, but with so much still unknown, many feel like Clay County's Green.

"We may be all right, but we don't know what the future will bring," he said.

Tournament For Heart Fund

The District Heart Fund Tennis Tournament will take place on Saturday and Sunday at the River Birch Tennis Center in Greenville. Players from tournaments in Greene, Hyde, Pitt and Wayne Counties will compete. The winner of each district event advances to the event's championship flight, to be played in Chapel Hill July 24-26. Greenville participants should check the bulletin board at River Birch for play times. Further information can be obtained from District Director Tom Sayetta at 756-7576.

Tar Heel Senior Population Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's senior citizen population is growing so fast that "we'll be a lot like Florida if this keeps up," a state official says.

Nathan J. Yelton, assistant secretary in charge of the Division of Aging of the State Department of Human Resources, said North Carolina will have an additional 300,000 elderly by the year 2000.

Figures from the 1980 census show that senior citizens in the state grew faster that all but one other age category, the 30-34 age group. The categories are broken into five-year spans.

The number of people 30 to 34 jumped 54.97 percent in the 1970s, compared with a 2.96 percent decline in the 1960s. Those in the 65-and-over category increased by 45.43 percent in the 1970s, up from a rate of 32.66 percent in the 1960s.

Only Florida and South Carolina have a faster elderly population growth rate than North Carolina, the figures show.

The new North Carolina 2000 Commission will project that increase in the senior citizen population into state development plans, said Gov. Jim Hunt in announcing the commisison.

North Carolina probably won't overtake Florida as the senior citizen center of the nation, Yelton said. But the state will become increasingly popular as a retirement area.

Not only are North Carolina residents staying in their home state, but a greater number of older people are moving in, Yelton said.

"I get a couple of hundred requests per day from Northerners looking at the state for a place to retire," he said.

But Yelton said the increasing elderly population means more medical facilities are needed, along with more part-time jobs to help them augment fixed incomes.

The state wants to develop in-house services to keep the elderly out of nursing homes, he said. To meet that goal, a bill prohibiting foreclosure for failure to pay taxes on a home owned by someone 65 or older has been introduced in the General Assembly.

Yelton said the bill, which would pay the taxes from the person's estate when he or she dies, will pass.

Bible School Is Planned

A community Vacation Bible School will be conducted by the Sabbath School department of the Greenville Seventh-Day Adventist Church, E. 10th Street, June 15-19.

Bible stories, songs, nature lore, and crafts will be featured at the school for children ages 3-14. There will be no charge for children attending.

Certificates of achievement will be awarded to those completing the course. Registration will be held between 5:45 and 6 p.m. June 15. An adult should accompany the child for registration and first session.

Toastmasters To Meet Wednesday

The Greenville Toastmasters Club will meet for dinner at 6:15 p.m. Wednesday, June 10 at the Western Sizzlin' Restaurant on Greenville Boulevard. The business and educational portions of the meeting will begin at 7:15 p.m.

The club meets regularly the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month at the restaurant. Reservations are not necessary. For more information on the club, call Pat or Charlene Flanagan at 756-7192.

New Digit Zip Said Voluntary

According to Greenville Postmaster, H. Lloyd Mills, use of the new digit zip code will be voluntary. The purpose of the new longer zip code is to help the mails be delivered more efficiently, he said.

"Automation — the use of optical-character and bar-code readers — will let the Postal Service use optical scanners to automatically sort the mail to the proper carrier route, eliminating the slower and more costly manual and mechanical sorting," Mills said. Therefore, the new nine digit zip code will result in a smaller cost for the taxpayer and the postal rate payer.

Mills also stressed that there will be no penalty for not using the new zip code, and that letter-writers should not worry about memorizing the expanded code. The Postmaster said the Postal Service will be able to give the public the new zip code listings through a toll-free national telephone system.

Service Pins Are Presented

On June 4, the U.S. Postal Service presented ten employees with service award pins and letters of appreciation.

Thirty-five year service pins were presented to Elvy K. Forrest and D.R. House, Jr., both rural route carriers.

Twenty-five year service pins were presented to A.D. Adams, W.T. Meeks, J.T. Forrest, J.A. Little and J.B. Jordan, all rural route carriers.

Twenty-five year pins were also awarded to A.R. Boles, distribution clerk, and D.L. Carson and L.W. Strawn, city letter carriers.

The program is sponsored by the ECU School of Medicine Center for Student Opportunities and is supported by the Department of Health and Human Services and the National Institutes for Health.

The four students to be in the eight-week program which runs from June 11 to August 6, and the departments of the School of Medicine in which they will be assigned are:

— Caroletta Metcalf, Department of Physiology;
— Sonya Morris, Department of Pathology; and
— Susan Spell, Department of Anatomy.

Alternate candidates are Tonya Lewis, Veda Smith, Pamela Laughinghouse and Katherine Justice.

The program is under the direction of Dr. Zubie W. Metcalf, Jr., in cooperation with the departments of anatomy, physiology, pathology, and microbiology, each of which is sponsoring a research apprenticeship.

The purpose of the Minority High School Student Research Apprentice Progam is to provide experiences in various aspects of health-related research in the expectation that some of the apprentices will decide to pursue careers in research related to health.

Apprentices were selected on the level of academic performance and interest in science. This criteria was the basis of selection by Rose High science teachers and David Barnhill, counselor at Rose. Candidates were also interviewed by faculty representatives of the ECU School of Medicine.

Longer Wait In Divorce Action

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women opted for divorce in 1979 at twice the rate they did 12 years earlier, according to a new government study.

But the National Center for Health Statistics says couples destined for divorce courts are waiting longer to make the split and are leaving fewer children behind from each broken marriage.

The number of divorces granted in the United States tripled in the last 20 years to reach 1.181 million in 1979. Nearly a third, 439,000, occurred in the 17 states counted as the South, the center said in its report released Monday.

The 1979 national total is the largest ever recorded in the United States. It compares with 1.13 million divorces granted in 1978 and 395,000 granted in 1959.

The divorce rate also has climbed significantly over the past two decades. Some 5.4 divorces per 1,000 population were granted in 1979, nearly 2½ times the rate for 1959.

There were 22.8 divorces for every 1,000 married women (15 years and older) in the population in 1979, more than double the 11.2 divorces per thousand married women in 1967, the report said.

The median length of marriages dissolved in 1979 was 6.8 years compared to 6.6 years in 1977 and in 1978 and a range of between 6.5 and 6.7 years during 1970 to 1976.

While the report showed that more children were involved in broken marriages — 1.18 million chidren in 1979 compared with 562,000 in 1963 — the average number of children per divorcing couple has declined steadily from the all-time high of 1.36 in 1964. In 1979, it amounted to one per couple.

The center's statistics are based on sample data from 30 states which comprise a divorce registration area. Besides the 439,000 divorces in the South there were 293,000 in the north central states, 272,000 in the West and 177,000 in the Northeast.

The West had the highest divorce rate with 6.6 per 1,000 population. It compared with 6.1 per 1,000 in the South, 5 per 1,000 in the north central states and 3.6 per 1,000 in the Northeast.

The states granting the largest numbers of divorces were California 137,683; Texas 92,399; Florida 69,707; New York 64,420; and Ohio 59,548. North Dakota, a state with one of the smallest populations, had the fewest divorces, 2,094, in 1979.

Mandrell Sisters Sweep Country Music Awards

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Barbara Mandrell and her sisters, who won or shared a host of awards, turned the 15th Music City News Cover Awards into a family bonanza.

The irrepressible Miss Mandrell was voted female vocalist of the year for the second time in the past three years Monday night and also was chosen top musician. Her NBC television show, "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters," was voted country music TV show of the year, and she and her captivating sisters, Louise and Irlene, were chosen as the top comedy act.

The winners, picked by readers of the Music City News, a Nashville-based music publication, were announced at the Grand Ole Opry House during a syndicated television special.

"I'm numb. I'm just numb," Barbara Mandrell told a reporter moments after the show. "I especially wanted to win top television show. It showed what the fans thought of the show."

Louise Mandrell won or shared three awards, earning most promising female vocalist along with sharing honors for No. 1 comedy act and top television show.

"I'd first like to say that Barbara is a great opening act," she quipped during her acceptance speech.

George Jones, a country music legend who has battled back from alcoholism, was voted male vocalist of the year and his throbbing song, "He Stopped Loving Her Today," was picked single record of the year.

Ex-wife Tammy Wynette accepted the awards for him, saying "it's been a great year for him."

The Statler Brothers were double winners, earning top group for the 10th straight year and No. 1 album for "Tenth Anniversary."

"We sign autographs every night until everyone leaves the building," said Don Reid of the veteran quartet. "This is to show you what we think of you. If this is what you think of us, we appreciate it."

Other winners were Boxcar Willie, most promising male vocalist; the eight-piece Marty Robbins Band, band of the year; the legendary Bill Monroe and the Bluegrass Boys, bluegrass group of the year; the "Hee Haw" Gospel Quartet, gospel act of the year, and Loretta Lynn and Conway Twitty, duo of the year.

It turned out to be a luckless day for Robbins, who has resumed his career after suffering a heart attack earlier this year. He missed a rehearsal, left his cufflinks at home and won no individual awards despite being the leading finalist with seven nominations.

Hosts for the show were Roy Clark, the Statler Brothers and Miss Wynette.

The show will be televised later this week on a few stations.

Two other nationally televised country music awards shows, the Country Music Association show and the Academy of Country Music show, differ from this presentation in that award winners on those shows are picked by their peers and not by fans.

Elegant Party Celebrates The Birthday Of Late Cole Porter

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An elegant party was held into the early morning hours today to celebrate the 90th anniversary of the birth of the late Cole Porter. Porter died in 1964.

Donald Smith, known in New York as a classy party-giver, gives a birthday party for the composer-lyricist every year. Monday night at a black-tie supper in the Algonquin Hotel's Oak Room, he said, "Nobody dies unless you let them. Everybody in this room has enormous feeling about a man who left an imperishable, extraordinary legacy of music with us."

Singers, all accompanied by pianist Steve Ross, generally chose lesser known and naughty songs by Porter. Anne Francine started, with "Most Gentlemen Don't Like Love; They Just Like To Kick It Around" and "A Little Skipper from Heaven Above," from "Red, Hot and Blue" of 1936.

Taina Elg, who was in Porter's last movie, "Les Girls," sang "Night and Day" in Finnish. Portia Nelson sang "After You" and "A Picture of You Without Me," from the 1935 show, "Jubilee."

Paula Laurence sang the most obscure tune to turn up at the party, "I Collect Pets." And she and Ross sang a duet, "By the Mississinewah." She sang it with Ethel Merman in 1943 on Broadway in "Something for the Boys." Millicent Martin, now in pre-Broadway performances of "Noel," sang "Anything Goes."

A newcomer jazz singer, with astounding control, Ann Hampton Callaway sang Porter standards, "It's All Right with Me" and "I Concentrate on You." Carole Shelley, from Broadway's "The Elephant Man," sang "He Never Said He Loved Me" and "But in the Morning, No," from "DuBarry Was a Lady." Celeste Holm, in the 1956 film "High Society," sang its best-known number as the finale, "True Love."

Ross is performing Porter music Wednesday and Thursday evenings at the Algonquin through June. Macy's is having Porter music played at lunchtime every weekday this week. Outside New York, Robert Goulet is in a summer tour of "Kiss Me Kate" and "Some Like It Cole; the Sassy Songs of Cole Porter" has just opened in Chicago.

Local Girl Will Compete

Melanie Charlene Rogers, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rogers of Greenville, has been selected to compete in the 1981 Miss T.E.E.N. of North Carolina pageant, scheduled to be held in Winston-Salem.

The pageant is the official state-wide finals for the Miss T.E.E.N. pageant to be held in Albuquerque, N.M. in December.

Miss Rogers' hobbies include snow skiing, swimming, dancing, basketball and track.

She is sponsored in the pageant by Century 21 Bass Realty.

Fonda Planning Continue Rest

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Henry Fonda will "continue his recuperation for awhile anyway" after being released from a hospital where he underwent diagnostic heart surgery, the actor's publicist, Ray Strickland, says.

Fonda was discharged from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in satisfactory condition, a hospital spokesman said Monday.

Fonda, who had a heart pacemaker implanted in 1974, was admitted May 4 and celebrated his 76th birthday in the hospital May 15.

Social Security To Be Discussed

A special segment on social security will be aired on WNCT-TV's "Carolina Today" on Wednesday morning, June 10.

For an hour's period, beginning at 6:10 a.m. and continuing until 7:10 a.m., viewers will be invited to call the station to ask questions, to express concerns or to make comments about the costliest program in the federal government.

Following this hour time block, beginning at 7:15 a.m., social security representatives will respond to the questions received.

WNCT officials say the program is being presented in response to the national concern about the future of social security, and is designed to provide an opportuniy to people in the WNCT viewing area to ask about problems with financing, continued tax increases, the value of social security as an investment, etc.

Telephone receptionists will be available at the station from 6:10 a.m. to 7:10 a.m. to receive calls from viewers. The number to call on this program is 756-3180.

Grease Fire Is Reported

Greenville firemen were called to a city Housing Authority-owned dwelling at 811B West 14th Street about noon yesterday when a pan of grease on a stove caught fire.

Investigators said the blaze spread to a wall behind the stove, causing light fire damage and heavy smoke damage to the dwelling.

FOCUS

Tough Odds

Of the nearly 19,000 basketball players attending four-year colleges, a maximum of 230 will be chosen in the 1981 National Basketball Association Draft which begins today. Fewer than 30 of those players will actually become professionals with one of the NBA's 23 teams. The average pro plays about four seasons with the NBA and earns about $186,000 per year, although annual salaries range from $35,000 to more than $1 million. For basketball players who've worked their way from neighborhood games to starting positions on high school and college teams, today's draft marks the most critical point yet on the highly competitive road to the NBA.

DO YOU KNOW — Which team won the NBA championship this season?

Trump Coup Tommy was finding it increasingly difficult to get people to play with him. While they appreciated the skill with which he handled the cards when the trump suit broke badly, they did not feel that this peculiar talent made up for the way he butchered run-of-the-mill hands. Tommy was in his milieu when this hand was dealt at the club.

In modern style, Tommy opened one no trump, despite the fact that he had a five-card major suit and a weak doubleton. North used the Stayman Convention to probe for a major fit. When Tommy showed a spade suit, his partner launched into Blackwood and then bid six spades when he found out that his side had at least an adequate number of aces.

West led the king of diamonds, and when dummy came down it looked as if the slam would be laydown—declarer would have to lose only a diamond trick. Tommy won the ace, and it seemed that the only interest in the hand would be how Tommy managed to botch it. But when he led a trump to the ace and West showed out, the whole complexion of the hand, and of Tommy, changed.

No longer was he the bumbling amateur—in his place sat the assured master. Declarer realized that there were two possible distributions that would allow him to land his contract. The obvious one was to find hearts 3-3, enabling declarer to shed his diamond loser.

Tommy cashed three rounds of hearts to end in dummy. When East showed out on the third heart, one arrow in declarer's quiver was gone, but he had another. He ruffed a heart in his hand, cashed three rounds of clubs and then exited with a diamond.

West was forced to win with the queen of diamonds, and now had nothing left but trumps. He did the best he could by exiting with the jack of trumps, but it was a simple matter for Tommy to win with the king of trumps and then finesse the nine to score the last two tricks and wrap up the slam. West's trump trick had vanished!

More Victims?

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The passenger train that plunged into the Bagmati River three days ago was so crowded that the death toll could run as high as 3,000, an Indian news agency reported today.

The United News of India said 215 bodies had been recovered from the flooded river in northeast India. Railway officials said there were 83 survivors.

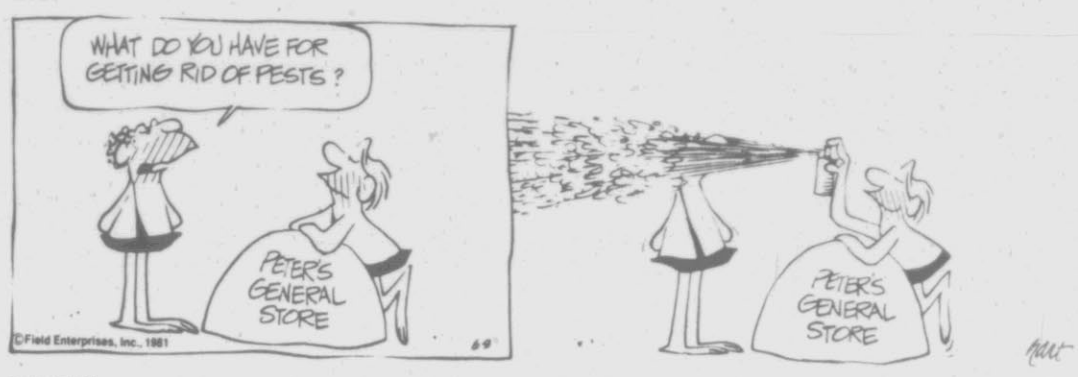

The 10-car train jumped the tracks Saturday and plunged off a bridge.

Parachute-Use Is Withdrawn

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The deaths of two parachutists have led Ft. Bragg authorities to cancel use of a parachute used to train beginning free-fall parachuters.

The modified MC1 parachute, used at the U.S. Army Institute for Military Assistance, has been withdrawn from service, a post spokesman confirmed Monday.

The Fayetteville Times reported that the deaths of 1st Lt. Frank A. Hardy on March 25, 1981, and Staff Sgt. Meade J. Gilmore Jr. on July 16, 1979, led to investigations about equipment that beginning jumpers must use.

The Army was beginning to respond to a flurry of protests about equipment used by Gilmore, 31, when Hardy, 25, was killed, the paper said.

In a media release Monday, Bragg authorities stated: "A board of officers investigating the death of Hardy has concluded equipment failure was a major contributing factor.

"The pilot parachute on Lt. Hardy's main parachute apparently did not properly deploy, and contributed to the subsequent entanglement of his main canopy."

Sgt. 1st Class James Semmler, who trained Hardy as a jumper at West Point, said the pilot parachute in question is 36 inches in diameter. A free-fall jumper falls away from an aircraft until he reaches an altitude where he wants to open his parachute.

When he pulls the ripcord to open the parachute, it releases the spring-loaded pilot parachute, which in turn pulls the main canopy from the backpack, Semmler said.

"The problem is that the spring in the pilot parachute is not always strong enough to jump far enough off the man's back to get it out of what we call the vortex," Semmler said. The vortex is a vacuum created behind the falling body.

"It's not uncommon to see a student pull (his ripcord) and see the parachute just lay on his back," Semmler said. It has been recognized as a problem for some time, he added.

Tree Farm Program Noted

DURHAM — TV star Andy Griffith will help the nation celebrate the 40th anniversary of the Tree Farm Program on Friday, June 12.

The T. O. Perry Tree Farm near Durham hosts the observance which will also include participation by Governor James B. Hunt, Jr. and George Weyerhaeuser of Tacoma, Washington.

Perry was North Carolina's "Tree Farmer of the Year" in 1979. Griffith owns a tree farm in Dare County. Governor Hunt was raised in a tree farm family; and Weyerhaeuser heads the company on whose property the first tree farm was established on June 12, 1941.

Sixty-four percent of North Carolina's land area is in forests which total 20 million acres, according to Daniel H. Gelbert of Durham, president of the N.C. Forestry Association, sponsor of the June 12 observance along with the American Forest Institute.

City Is Ninth In Construction

Greenville ranked ninth among 44 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population in the value of building permits issued in February, according to a report released by State Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

The commissioner said that permits valued at $2,012,114 were issued here during February, ranking the city behind Cary ($3,519,844), Charlotte ($17,859,453), Durham ($6,386,792), Greensboro ($6,597,913), High Point ($3,740,728), Raleigh ($12,134,162), Wilson ($4,506,511) and Winston-Salem ($4,708,880).

Building totals for Greenville in the first two months of the year amounted to $4,143,832, the commissioner reported.

Totals for several neighboring cities for February, and for the first two months of this year, included: Elizabeth City, $241,500, $593,300; Goldsboro, $167,491, $691,891; Jacksonville, $1,267,699, $1,824,937; Kinston, $318,050, $484,950;

New Bern, $291,300, $2,160,800; Roanoke Rapids, $461,248, $869,658; Rocky Mount, $1,386,208, $2,647,162; Tarboro, $288,350, $340,350; and Wilson, $4,506,511, $5,134,393.

No Easy Life As Mrs. Billy Graham

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Ruth Bell Graham says if she'd known what her life as Mrs. Billy Graham would be like, "I would have been scared to death."

Life with Graham has meant marriage to a frequently absent husband whose life revolves, not around home, but around worldwide evangelical ministry, she says. It also has meant surrendering privacy to tourists and the media, she says.

"They're both very strong personalities with strong opinions," Jeanie Ford said of her sister and brother-in-law. Mrs. Ford is the wife of Leighton Ford, vice president of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, based in Minneapolis.

"Often," Mrs. Ford said, "if you find two great people together, there's competitiveness. But she is so in love with him, I think she'd rather see him get the attention."

Mrs. Graham raised five children, has 15 grandchildren and runs her own ministry, which includes visits to Michigan's Jackson State Prison to visit inmates.

"I might not have gone into fulltime evangelism if it hadn't been for her," Graham said of his wife, whom he married in 1943. He said he listened to her when she told him in 1949 that evangelism was his calling.

"It's not been an easy life for Ruth ... to have your privacy intruded upon constantly, to answer the phone hundreds of times a week, to be interviewed and photographed, which she dreads."

But he says when he enters the rough-hewn front door at their mountaintop Montreat, N.C., home, "it's a honeymoon all over again."

Two Wrecks Cause Damage

An estimated $1,005 property damage resulted from two traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers said an estimated $300 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 6:30 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 350 north of the Trade Street intersection. Drivers of the vehicles were identified as Delois Floyd Brown of 1508B West Fifth St., and Ada Jones Wiggins of Highland Trailer Pk.

Police charged Ms. Wiggnis with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety in connection with the collision.

Cars driven by Susan Bartlett Wynne of 1410 North Overlook Dr. and Jeanette Marie Taylor of Route 5, Greenville, collided about 4:10 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard, causing an estimated $5 damage to the Wynne car and $400 damage to the Taylor auto.

Investigators charged Ms. Wynne with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

The Fastest Growing Food Chain in America Comes to Greenville

Food Town Stores, Inc. is the fastest growing food chain in America today. Ten years ago we had 15 stores and sales were $37 million. This year we will have more than 120 stores and sales will be more than $600 million! The reason for this rapid growth is LFPINC (Lowest Food Prices In North Carolina). Now, the residents of Greenville have an opportunity to experience first hand the satisfaction of shopping where they know they will always get the lowest prices on thousands of items every day of the week.
