Utilities Reject A Larger City Turnover

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission in a special session last night rejected a request from the City Council to increase the amount of turnover proposed in the commission's 1981-82 budget.

In rejecting the request, the commission said in effect that the council should "bite the bullet" and do what is necessary to get its fiscal house in order without draining off utility funds.

The special session was scheduled after Commission chairman Thomas Shea received a letter from Mayor Don McGlohon requesting additional funds.

As proposed in the 1981-82 budget — which must be approved by the City Council — the Utilities Commission would turn over some $1.15 million to the city.

Had the Commission approved the mayor's request, the turnover would have been increased by an estimated $335,000.

All but one of the seven-member board was present at the session and voted to leave the turnover amount as previously adopted and currently incorporated in the budget. City Manager Ed Wyatt, the seventh member of the commission, did not attend the session.

In a prepared statement during the discussion, commission member Gene Prescott said in a conversation with the mayor yesterday, "he expressed the City's urgent need for additional funds," and "indicated the amount the Council was requesting was an amount equal to a net six percent of the previously defined 'citizens equity' based on June 30, 1981 instead of June 30, 1980 figures."

"He (the mayor) defined the term 'net six percent' to mean six percent in excess of the City's utility costs," Prescott noted.

Prescott's statement continued, "The mayor suggested that we possibly were spending at a higher than absolutely necessary rate for capital improvements from current revenues — specifically for maintaining and replacing vehicles, equipment, poles, transformers, etc. He is of the opinion that we can spend less than $200,000 a year and still keep the utility's property in sound condition."

Prescott then presented figures which indicated that the commission should be spending an estimated $2.7 million to $2.8 million on annual replacement, based on the life (Please turn to Page 6)

Energy Study Is Presented At City Council Meet

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The energy plan developed by Greenville Utilities' Office of Energy Conservation and Management as part of a national experimental study program initiated in 1978 was presented last night to the City Council.

Reese Helms, manager of the Comprehensive Community Energy Management Program (CCEMP) here, and Daniel R. Koenigshofer, P.E., of Integrated Energy Systems Inc., program consultants, made the presentation and briefly discussed "Proposition E: A Plan for Greenville's Energy Future."

Greenville, it was pointed out, was one of 17 U.S. cities selected to participate in the CCEMP and became an "experimentation center" to study local energy planning and management.

Each community, according to the introductory segment in "Proposition E," was charged with developing "a comprehensive plan for increasing community energy efficiency and decreasing imports of dwindling conventional fuels."

Helms said the plan developed by his agency addressed five major areas: energy management in local government, energy supply alternatives, energy efficient land use practices, energy efficiency in the private sector, and energy efficiency preparedness.

The spokesman said four proposals were developed to meet the goal of reducing energy consumption in local government operations. The proposals involve the: adoption and implementation of a total management program; conducting of a detailed analysis of public buildings to identify energy savings opportunities; adoption of higher energy efficiency standards for new public facilities; and adoption of a procurement policy which considers energy efficiency as a key criteria.

"Proposition E," Helms stated in the report, "is a good starting point for a sustained community energy planning and management program" here.

Koenigshofer explained that his role here involved three functions: to act as a program consultant, compile reports and coordinate production, and evaluate energy sources available locally.

He said his primary objective is to encourage local government to look for and utilize energy sources available in the area. Greenville, he noted, has a "lot of energy opportunity" and the potential here for energy sources is "tremendous."

Koenigshofer mentioned peat, waste wood, "a lot of garbage for resource," the Tar River, ground water, and a "fair amount of solar energy" here as potential energy sources. He suggested the utilization of the local power plant site as an "ideal location" to generate electricity and heat by burning peat; the Tar River as a source for developing water source heat pumps; the potential for utilization of the diesel generators at Pitt Memorial Hospital during peak load hours; and development of a solar pond for heating purposes.

mission, told the Council that a plan is now available for the city's energy future. He said Greenville can move into the second phase of the program but it will take a commitment on the part of the city. Duffus suggested that the city "ought to make that commitment."

Councilman Dick McKee supported continued involvement in the program, saying that a contract offered by the federal government with Argonne National Laboratory "will give us a way of making decisions about alternate sources" of energy. McKee, who served as the council representative on the energy commission, said, "I think we should take a lead in this."

Mayor Don McGlohon said the city must take a leadership role in learning how to make decisions in meeting local energy needs. The mayor said the city does not have a choice on whether to look at energy alternatives.

In other business last night, the council conducted the first of two public hearings on the Small Cities Community Development program application. CD coordinator Ben Shivar pointed out that the Department of Housing and Urban Development has approved the city's pre-application funding for a three-year period. Small Cities funding will amount to roughly $3 million during the period or some $1 million per year.

Shivar mentioned that the program will involve home rehabilitation, some relocation, and some demolition of dilapidated structures. Many homes in the target areas can be rehabilitated, he said. Development of a housing assistance plan as part of the program will benefit not only the South Evans target area but the entire city, he said.

The Rev. Arlee Griffin, speaking on behalf of the South Evans Neighborhood Association, said the group met with the local CD and planning departments and it is felt a plan has (Please turn to Page 6)

Boy In Well Rescue Near

FRASCATI, Italy (AP) — Rescuers were within inches today of freeing a 6-year-old boy with heart trouble trapped more than 40 hours in a narrow well 118 feet underground. But they said they had to proceed slowly and with extra care to avoid a possible cave-in.

"I want water," the boy, Alfredo Rampi, was quoted as telling a fireman who was digging the last few inches with his hands.

"My arm is hurting...I want water," Alfredo said. "Alfredo is alert, he is ready to cooperate," Murizio Bonardi, the fireman, told his colleagues by radio.

The boy's parents, Fernando and Franca, took turns talking to their son by walkie-talkie. Thousands of onlookers surrounded the site, near the boy's grandparents' house about 15 miles from Rome.

Alfredo fell into the well about 7 p.m. — 1 p.m. EDT — Wednesday while playing. He was caught at a point where the well, 16 inches at the surface, narrowed to 10 inches. His head was up and his arms apparently were (Please turn to Page 12)

Hospitalized

Greenville Utilities Commission Director Charles Horne was hospitalized early today with "chest pains" and was scheduled to undergo a series of tests to determine his actual condition, according to Utilities Commission Chairman Tom Shea.

Horne, who had attended a special Commission meeting and a City Council session last night, "as near as we can understand," was at home when the pains developed about 1 a.m., according to Shea.

He was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital and admitted to the intensive care unit. He was reportedly in a coma.

Shea said commission members met with department heads this morning and indicated that the department heads, "are fully capable of handling," the operations of their respective departments.

He said the Commission would handle, "anything that's extraordinary," and would work out matters that Horne was directly involved in.

"We don't anticipate any particular problems at this time," Shea emphasized.

Late this morning, hospital officials said Horne was still unconscious and described his condition as "guarded."

House Floor Battle On Taxes Virtually Assured For Future

WASHINGTON (AP) — An all-out battle in the House of Representatives over tax cuts and who will get them is virtually assured later this year with President Reagan and opposing Democrats digging in their heels.

"I can't retreat from the 25 percent, across-the-board" cut in personal tax rates, Reagan told a group of labor leaders Thursday at the White House. "I've dug in my heels."

At the same time Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee were telling one of the president's chief tax advisers that the across-the-board concept — meaning the same rate cuts for rich and poor — is not acceptable.

Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said Reagan's bill fails to increase earned-income credits benefitting working families with incomes less than $10,000 or standard deductions which help those making less than $20,000.

As a result, Rostenkowski told Assistant Treasury Secretary John E. Chapoton, "people in those brackets will be paying more tax" even if Reagan's proposed cuts are approved.

Rep. Donald J. Pease,

D-Ohio, cited estimates by Treasury Department and congressional experts in an effort to prove that low-income families will lose under the president's plan.

If Reagan's bill is enacted, Pease said, inflation and higher Social Security taxes will force an average taxpayer earning between $5,000 and $10,000 to pay $42 more in federal taxes in 1982 than in 1981. A person at the $20,000 level would end up with a $103 tax cut; the $200,000-a-year person would get a $20,300 reduction.

Chapoton said people earning more than $30,000 a year, who would get about 62 percent of the Reagan program's tax cuts, are the most likely to invest their cuts in ways that would benefit the economy.

Meanwhile, the last of the House's 15 committees — all dominated by Democrats — was trying to meet today's deadline for recommending $35 billion in specific cuts to meet the bottom-line figure in Reagan's budget.

Though the committees are making the cuts, Democratic leaders are mounting a strategy to force a series of individual floor votes on the most popular programs, such as school lunches and student loans, in hopes of saving them.

That prompted House Republicans to renew their threats Thursday to draft their own package of individual cuts if the Democratic plan is not to their liking. "In the end, you know, you can't take chances," said Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

Polish Cabinet Shakeup Staged

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski today dropped five cabinet ministers, including one criticized for hampering the investigation into the beating of three union members. He proposed a major cabinet reshuffle aimed at avoiding Poland's economic "ruin."

Jaruzelski, in a speech to the Sejm, or Parliament, also said he was ready to discuss with Poland's trade unions, including the independent union Solidarity, ways to increase production of coal.

"It was said that it was our gold," Jaruzelski said of coal. "I call it oxygen. We can live without gold but without oxygen there is no life."

Coal is Poland's chief hard currency earner but has been produced in smaller quantities since miners began working five-day weeks instead of six-day weeks several months ago.

Jaruzelski also said Poles must halt declining productivity and growing absenteeism, inefficiency and waste of raw materials and power if Poland is to survive its economic crisis.

The ministers dropped included Deputy Premier Henryk Kisiel and Justice Minister Jerzy Bafia. Kisiel, a long-time economic official whose tenure in government pre-dates the decade when Edward Gierek was party leader, was planning commission chief and a former finance minister.

Revenue Key To City Service

(Editor's Note: This is the final in a series of articles prepared by the city on the 1981-82 budget.)

The basis for providing city services to Greenville citizens is directly related to its revenue.

Local, state and federal revenues make it possible for the city to support rising operational costs and added requests for various services. Property taxes are the backbone of the city's revenue.

An important state-shared revenue source has been the one-cent local option sales tax that is distributed by the state to the county. The city's distribution of the tax which went into effect in 1971 is based on population. Revenues from sales tax have continued to grow and city officials estimate that Greenville will receive $940,737 during 1981-82.

Utilities franchise tax revenues have also provided continued growth in additional funds for the city. It is anticipated that the city will receive $1,057,906 from this revenue. The franchise tax represents three percent of the gross receipts tax for private utility companies. Rising utility costs have resulted in increased franchise tax revenues for the city.

State beer and wine and intangible taxes will contribute over $254,000 to the city next year.

The present gasoline tax (Powell Bill) distribution is based one-fourth on the mileage of accepted streets and three-fourths on population. Greenville expects to receive $394,233 in 1981-82 or five percent less than the previous year. It is possible the city will receive more than expected if the gas tax increases. The governor's proposed bill calls for municipalities to share in one-eighth of the proposed three-cent gas tax increase.

Property taxes are the major source of local generated revenues, but the city does not know how much revenue will be received since the 1981 valuations from the county will not be available until some time in June.

Another major source of revenue is the Utilities turnover which is expected to be $1,157,379 in 1981-82. This represents the citizens' equity at a rate of return of six percent of the electric and gas systems.

The two major federal revenue sources are revenue sharing and transit operating subsidy. The city estimates that it will receive $599,916 in revenue sharing allocation payments in the new budget year, an increase of 3.5 percent. Some $75,000 is also expected next year from the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for operating expenses.

Local citizens are encouraged to attend the public hearing on the budget, set for 8 p.m. on Tuesday, June 16 in the council chambers at city hall.

MINIMUM WAGE FOR DOMESTICS

A lot of people don't realize they're supposed to pay a maid the minimum wage. I think domestic workers are being taken advantage of because many of them don't realize they are entitled to minimum wage. Those who do not pay domestics the required amount are violating the law. N.H.

Phillip Fields, compliance specialist with the Wage and Hour division of the U.S. Department of Labor, confirmed these statements. He said all domestics with a few exceptions have to be paid minimum wage.

Domestics were brought under the Minimum Wage Labor Act in 1974 which states that domestics working eight or more hours a week for one or more persons should be paid minimum wage of $3.35. However, Fields pointed out the following exemptions:

Casual baby sitting is not included, but someone who has been hired to come into the home to take care of children on a full-time basis while the parents are working are included under the minimum wage stipulations. Domestics providing care or acting as a companion for an elderly person do not have to be paid minimum wage.

Fields pointed out that domestics also must be paid overtime for more than 40 hours a week with time and a half, although live-in domestics do not get over-time.

KEVIN HARRELL FUND RAISING

A car wash will be held at Briley's Exxon on the corner of Memorial and 264 By-pass Saturday. Sponsoring the fund raising event are the young adults of Mt. Pleasant Christine Church.

All proceeds will be donated to the Harrell medical fund which goes to help pay expenses for Kevin's bone marrow transplant. A spokesman for Kevin said his surgery was a success.

Donna Kay Garris Is Married Sunday

Donna Kay Garris and Johnnie Mark Keel, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Sunday at three o'clock in the afternoon at Calvary Baptist Church. The Rev. Bobby G. Thomas performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Lee Garris and the bridegroom's parents are Mrs. Martha Keel and the late Mr. John Keel, all of Greenville.

A program of nuptial wedding music was provided by Brenda Baker, pianist and soloist Myra Moore, who both sang "The Wedding Song," "More" and "Each for the Other."

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and chantilly lace. The fitted chantilly lace bodice featured a high neckline outlined with seed pearls and sheer puffed sleeves cuffed at the waist. A pleated ruffled edged the bottom of the gown. Her cathedral length veil was trimmed with a motif of lace matching her gown. She carried a bouquet of blue and white carnations crocheted by her mother with blue ribbon.

Brenda Garris, the bride's sister-in-law, was maid of honor and Mary Banks was matron of honor. The matron of honor wore a long dress of blue dotted swiss with gathered long sleeves and a fitted band at the wrist. The dress featured a gathered waistline with a ruffle trimmed with lace on the bottom. She carried a bouquet of crocheted carnations of rainbow color with fern and white streamers. The maid of honor wore a pink dress styled identically to that of the matron of honor and carried a similar bouquet.

Bridesmaids were Teresa

Edward, Debora Corbett, cousin of the bride, and Elizabeth Wainright, all of Greenville. They wore dresses identical to that of the maid of honor with colors of lavender, green and yellow.

Shannon Williams, the bridegroom's niece, was flower girl and wore a white dotted swiss dress like that of the bridesmaids and carried a basket of daisies with white ribbons. J.F. Pierce of Grifton was ring bearer.

The bride's brother-in-law, Larry Roebuck of Greenville, was best man. Ushers were Ronnie Rogerson and Randy Garris, the bride's brother, both of Winterville. Jeff Baker of Greenville and Wayne Keel, the bridegroom's brother of Tarboro.

The bride's mother wore a pink formal dress of silk chiffon. The bridegroom's mother wore a mauve formal dress with sheer sleeves and pleated skirt. Each wore a corsage of white crocheted carnations.

Grandmothers of the bride and bridegroom wore formal dresses in pastel colors. They were each remembered with carnation corsages.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Maire McKinney. Mrs. Judy Shington presided at the guest register.

The wedding couple, friends and relatives were entertained at a cake cutting after the rehearsal Saturday night at the Winterville Community Building given by the bride's parents, Mrs. Carolyn Andrews, Mrs. Rachel Downs, Mrs. Fran Williams and Mrs. Bonnie Garver assisted in serving.

The bride is a 1981 graduate of Calvary Christian Academy. The bridegroom is a graduate of Roanoke High School and Calvary Baptist Institute, Greenville. He is employed by Buck's Gulf Station here.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Dear Abby Family Ties Tug And Pull

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Bill and I have been divorced for nine years and have three teen-aged children who live with me. Bill remarried five years ago, and he and his wife, Ella, live nearby with their 2-year-old daughter. (I am single.)

I have remained friendly with Bill's family and am invited to all their family get-togethers. When Bill married Ella, she made it clear that she would not attend any family gathering that included me.

Naturally, Bill refused to attend those family affairs without Ella, so they both stayed away. Bill's parents are very unhappy because Bill and Ella no longer attend the family Christmas Eve celebration. I feel that if I'm invited, I must be wanted.

There was a death in Bill's family recently, and Bill called and asked me to please stay away from the funeral because he and Ella were going to be there and Ella would feel uncomfortable if I was there. I stayed away.

Do you think I should decline any further invitations from Bill's family in order to allow Ella to attend? I don't like feeling that it's my fault because Bill and Ella miss his family gatherings.

Retirement Dinner Given Mrs. Gross

Tennala A. Gross, who is retiring from East Carolina University this month, was honored recently by the faculty and staff of the mathematics department.

The retirement dinner featured tributes to the honoree by her office mate, Virginia McGrath and by the departmental chairman, Robert Shock. She was presented an engraved oriental silver teapot.

During her 17 years with the university, Gross has served on numerous university and departmental committees. She was acting director of the ECU Computing Center from 1966-68. She headed the team which scored by computer the pre-olympic diving competition held at Minges Natatorium in the spring of 1968. She was one of the three person team which participated in a National Science Foundation funded project to investigate the use of the computer in the teaching of statistics to undergraduates. She has presented several papers concerning her research in the use of the computer as a teaching aid and in 1971, she began a study of the salary structure at the university and the results are now being used to help correct salary inequities.

The Grosses moved to Greenville in 1960 when Mrs. Gross's husband, D. D. Gross became director of religious activities at ECU. He also served on the faculty of the philosophy department until his retirement in 1977.

During their 21 years in Greenville, the couple has participated in community and university affairs and has been active in the Democratic party on state and local levels.

They are now making their home in the Union Ridge community north of Burlington where they have bought a farm. Their son, John, is living in Ann Arbor, Mich., with his wife and two children. He is a student in the graduate school of economics at the University of Michigan.

Redeeming Value Seen In Church Nursery Duty

By GAIL MICHAELS

One of my favorite Bible verses is, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

This verse seems particularly applicable when I'm keeping the church nursery. Try as I might, I cannot think of a more apropos word than "suffer" to describe voluntarily subjecting oneself to a group of someone else's children.

I realize that it's my Christian duty and a very small one at that. But I've never been much good at ministering to the heathen. And believe me, there's always at least one in a group like that who could do with a little casting out of demons.

Last time Phillip and I kept nursery, we had two of that kind. The first one was an angelic-looking two-year-old with tremendous blue eyes and a halo of golden hair. She was dressed in white organdy with white socks, white shoes, and a tiny white handbag to match.

Looks do deceive. The minute her mother left the room, she said in a prim little voice, "I need to go potty."

I escorted her to the children's bathroom where she assiduously examined the tiles, the soap dispenser, and various other aspects of the decor. When she had satisfied her curiosity, we walked back to the classroom. Phillip was busy trying to reason with a young man in cowboy boots who was methodically throwing blocks at the window.

Phillip held the child firmly by the wrist. "Don't you want to hear a story?"

"Nope."

"Then why don't you build something with those blocks?"

The child struggled to get free. "Nope."

"What's your name?"

"Not gonna tell you."

Phillip did his charming daddy routine. "Gee, that's a funny name."

The child was not amused. I don't know what happened next because at that moment my own small charge announced that she needed to visit the bathroom again.

So I led her there. At the door she balked. "I used this already, go to another one."

That's not necessary sweetheart. These potties are a hundred percent reusable."

She was insistent. "I need another one."

I was getting tired. "No, dear. Use this one."

She looked up at me with those pretty blue eyes and smoothed the front of her dress demurely. "Then I wet my pantie."

When we got back from the Ladies Room, Phillip had taken the rest of the children to the playground. He was in the process of making Mr. Anonymous drop the handful of sand he had aimed at his playmate.

"I'm going to get my mama," the child said, and sprinting to the door, he pushed it just hard enough to close it. That locked us all out.

"Bless his little heart," Phillip said. "He seems to know I won't break his leg in a church."

The parents arrived to pick up their children almost immediately after Phillip found an open door at the other end of the building and came around to let us all back in. He was especially relieved when one mother managed to pull our young man's hands away from the gymset pole and drag him to her car. As Phillip watched them leave, he said, "This experience does have one redeeming value."

I was incredulous. "What?"

"It can really make you appreciate sitting through a dull sermon."

Services Countywide

As noted here previously we oppose the annexation of the industrial area north of the Tar River because we fear it would impede industrial development and thus cost us needed jobs.

The annexation, on the other hand, is an important part of the Greenville Advisory Committee's recommendations for financing needs of the city. If the annexation is not to be carried out, where, then, is the needed money to come from?

We can turn to another recommendation of the committee for the answer to that. There were recommendations that the county government assume some of the city services which are actually now county-wide services.

Specifically it recommended that the city's emergency medical services become a part of the county medical service, controlled and operated by the county. The service would be located near the Pitt County Memorial Hospital and it would be under the supervision of the director of the hospital emergency care unit.

The report also called for a county-wide emergency radio system for all emergency vehicles and fire-rescue calls be handled through this system.

Also called for was the county's paying a "proportional and equitable" share of the cost of Sheppard Memorial Library.

It should be remembered that all who contributed to the recommendations have just as much interest in the finances of county government as they do city, since all are county taxpayers, too.

Why should the county assume these city financed services? Well, the industrial area is not in the city and doesn't pay city taxes. It does, however pay county taxes, a considerable amount each year. Sharing some of this money with the city is the best way we know to forstall city annexation of the area. The county also will benefit heavily from mixed drinks taxes paid within the city.

Mainly, however, it should be done because some services have in fact become county services, even though the city is still paying for them.

Was A-Bomb Being Built?

The first reaction to the Israel bombing of an Iraqi nuclear reactor was one of worldwide outrage.

On the surface it appeared that an unprovoked bombing attack had been carried out by the Israeli Air Force on an Arab state some distance away. The outrage however assumes that the nuclear reactor was being built in Iraq for peaceful purposes.

Israel's intelligence, though, indicated that was not entirely the case; that the reactor could be used to perfect an atomic bomb at least as powerful as the one that devastated Hiroshima.

If that were the case the A-bomb could be used on Israel or any of its Arab neighbor countries with which Iraq happened to be feuding. It's use could have worldwide effects through fallout and precedent-setting in the further wartime use of atomic bombs.

As all this soaked in, the criticism, while continuing, became more muted and contained little in the way of threats of retaliation.

We have no doubt that even the Arab nations have no desire to see Iraq develop a nuclear bomb, and certainly it would not be in our best interest.

It is not yet appropriate to applaud the Israeli action. At the same time if Israeli intelligence was correct and another country was indeed preparing to develop nuclear bombs, then Israel may have done all of us — the United States, the Arab world and even the Soviets — a great service.

THIS AFTERNOON Program Surveyed

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Providing a lawyer to every child caught up in courtroom proceedings involving child abuse or neglect is turning out to be an expensive and not especially effective way to do what is best for the "battered child."

The effort was good intentioned. Most of those involved in pushing the new law into effect in the 1977 and 1979 sessions of the General Assembly viewed the "Guardian Ad Litem" protection as a way to make sure that the child's case was thoroughly investigated, all options for the future explored, the best arrangements made, and the case followed up to see to it that the court's orders were followed and the child was making good progress.

Problems have developed in the implementation of that law which requires that the substitute parent be a lawyer appointed by the court.

A Survey
Samuel M. Streit, a lawyer with experience in the juvenile courts, a staff consultant to Child Watch, and a faculty member of the Bush Institute for Child and Family Policy of the Frank Porter Graham focused on child abuse and neglect problems, and with

With public attention

Other Editors Say College Not For All

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)
Columnist William F. Buckley Jr. was in Raleigh over the weekend to deliver the commencement address at Ravenscroft School. His comments, in a press conference before graduation, and the commencement address contained as much common sense as any delivered in the Research Triangle area this year.

Buckley told the reporters that too many Americans attend college who have no interest in academics. "People are made to feel not worth anything if they don't go to college," Buckley explained. "These people are much worse off spending four years unproductively than learning and being productive." Let us add a hearty amen!

A college education for many students is an over-rated process that because of tradition some students must endure. If they had started out on their own, just out of high school, they would have had just as much opportunity for success as if they wasted four years in college. It is quite possible that spending four years in college can cause an active mind to become lazy.

Buckley went a little deeper. He said an IQ of 110 is needed to gain knowledge effectively from a college curriculum. He said only 25 percent of college-age Americans have an IQ of 110 or more, but 40 percent are attending college. Could it be true that at least 37 percent of all those students seeking a college education are wasting their time?

Buckley, as editor of the National Review magazine, as moderator for a very popular educational television roundtable and as a person who is seen and heard in all media on a regular basis, has a way of getting his point across. His comments in Raleigh are certainly worthy of cocktail conversation. It could even cause some parents to slow down on the theory that there is no chance for success without a college education. Even in a town like Chapel Hill, that's a bunch of hogwash.

ETERNAL VIGILANCE
A noted evangelist has pointed out that in the human conflict with evil sometimes the devil pricks us with pins and at other times with daggers.

Regardless of what one may feel about the reality of a personal devil, the fact remains that a force for evil works against our lives continuously. Sometimes the onslaught consists of pin pricks which push us into such shortcomings as bad temper, uncharitable attitudes, hasty and ill-advised talk. At other times the force of evil starts

BY ART BUCHWALD The War Story-Teller

You'd think the children would get tired of it by now, but they never do. We were all sitting in the living room, and I think it was one of the girls who brought it up.

"Tell us, Dad, how you used to just go in a bank and ask the man for a 30-year mortgage on a house and he'd give it to you."

I leaned back in my chair, took a puff on my cigar and said, "Well, it was maybe nine or 10 years ago — I'm not exactly sure. Every paper was running these big advertisements from the banks, and the savings and loan companies were urging you to come in and borrow as much as you wanted to buy a house."

My daughter Connie said to her husband, "You see, didn't I tell you it was so? Dad doesn't lie."

My son-in-law said, "Yeh, but what was the gimmick? Why would a bank or savings and loan company want to lend you money to buy a house?"

"That was their business then, Randy. They had money lying all over the place and they didn't know what to do with it. They practically came out on the sidewalks on their knees with fistfuls of dollars begging you to take it."

ART BUCHWALD

"Yeh, but how much interest were they asking?" my son-in-law wanted to know.

"Five and a half percent, maybe six if you got unlucky."

"Ah, come on Dad," my daughter said, "you're making this all up. No bank ever loaned people money at 5 1/2 percent."

"Ask your mother. She was there when I applied for the loan. She thought 5 1/2 percent was too high for 30 years, but I wasn't in the mood to shop around, so I took it."

"And how much did a house cost in those days, Dad?" my daughter asked.

"You could get a very nice one with three bedrooms and two baths, and a completely installed kitchen and recreation room on a fair-sized lot, for somewhere around $50,000."

"Now I know you're making fun of us," my son-in-law said. "There is no way anyone could ever buy a home for that."

"Oh yeh," I said. "Suppose I told you there used to be homes in very nice neighborhoods you could pick up for $35,000 and no down payment?"

I let that one sink in.

My other daughter said, "Didn't you and Mom almost buy a house for $40,000 in 1963 that recently sold for $450,000 right on the Potomac River?"

"Yup. I turned it down because the owner wouldn't paint it, and I was darned if I was doing to pay $500 to put on a new coat. You want to know something? When it sold for $450,000 it still hadn't been painted."

My son-in-law said, "Connie tells me you were offered a townhouse in Georgetown for $57,000 with a swimming pool in the back."

"I might have bought it but the savings and loan fellow got snooty, and said because the house was built in 1789 he could only give me a $50,000

A Pressure On Pakistan

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The brutal Soviet campaign to intimidate Pakistan escalated two weeks ago when a senior Soviet ministry official bluntly told the Pakistan ambassador in Moscow: "Tell your government that it is making undeclared war on the Soviet Union."

This bully-boy game, as the Russians mire themselves more deeply in their war against the brave Afghan resistance, is designed to force Pakistan to accept the Soviet-imposed Babrak Karmal regime in neighboring Afghanistan. If Pakistan winks, other Moslem states might follow and ratify Russia's absorption of Afghanistan.

Despite the intimidation and the low estate of Pakistan's military forces, President Zia has a different idea. He made that plain to us in an exclusive interview at the presidential mansion in Rawalpindi.

"We feel compromise is not the answer," Zia told us. "The Soviets have got to be made to believe that what they have done in Afghanistan is not right. They must rectify their position" — get out of Afghanistan.

The refusal to knuckle under is certain to intensify Soviet military action against Pakistan, however veiled in the guise of "hot pursuit" of Afghan freedom-fighters seeking respite in Pakistan. Soviet intervention in Pakistan, however, will force President Reagan to lead the West into making a stand at long last with something more than a brief and spineless grain embargo against Moscow's march through South Asia.

But having treated Pakistan as a Pariah for 15 years, amidst self-serving cries from liberals who managed to end all military aid, the U.S. finds Pakistan dangerously strapped. An immediate emergency shipment of new weapons is essential for this country to handle any Soviet thrust across the 1,400-mile Afghan border. Such a thrust is predictable as the opening Soviet move, perhaps to destabilize Zia.

Whatever the preliminary objective, Soviet troops on the march in Pakistan would be another humiliation for the U.S. with this implicit dare: What are you going to do about it?

We asked Zia if Soviet pressure on him in the end might force him to back down and make a deal with Moscow. "They have tried their best," he said. "There has been military pressure. They have knocked out some of our border posts. We have suffered some casualties. They know they can teach Pakistan a lesson. It is the freedom fighters in Afghanistan that are keeping the Russians engaged."

No, Zia said, Pakistan will not yield to the far greater pressures expected from the Soviets in the near future. He sees only two ways to stop the Soviet march: pressure of world opinion or arms.

"World opinion" includes both the will and power of the West, even though both lag behind the Soviets, and the Islamic world, which includes vast areas lying inside Russia itself — Azerbaijan to the West and Uzbekistan, Tadjikistan and other Soviet Moslem states along the Soviet-Afghan border.

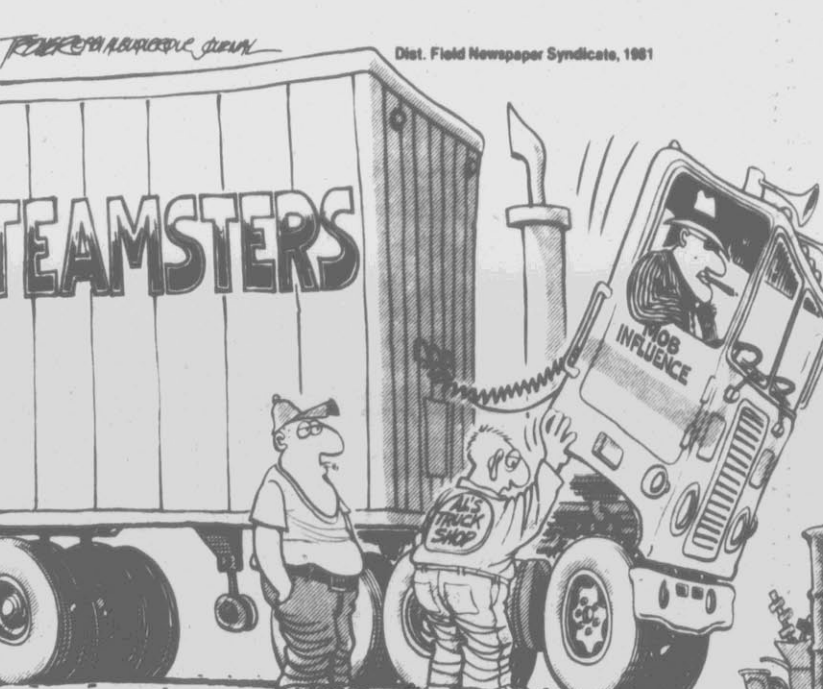

Deprived of U.S. military aid, Pakistan today is at the bottom of its military barrel. Zia does not want an alliance with the U.S., only credit to buy weapons. Earlier alliances, despite direct pledges from at least one president, did nothing for Pakistan during its two losing wars with India (the main Soviet ally in South Asia now acting aloof from Russian killings in Afghanistan).

But Zia must have the right to purchase quality American arms: modern aircraft, helicopters (vital if Soviet troops cross the Pak border), anti-aircraft missiles and radar.

"We are on a tightrope and we cannot stay there forever," Zia said. "When the Soviets start teaching Pakistan a lesson, Pakistan must have at least a fair chance." That argues a powerful case for emergency military supplies — fast.

Considering that Pakistan now houses, feeds and comforts one of the largest refugee movements in history — 2 million strong-willed nationalists driven out of Afghanistan by Soviet invaders — Zia may have a point.

Our Economic Grand Canyon

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Interest rate watchers have been studying the gap in recent days, and now they declare they've never seen anything to match it. Biggest gap we've ever seen, they say.

They suggest that if you want to guess where the economy is headed you too should view the Grand Canyon of the monetary world, the gap, or the difference between the inflation and interest rates.

Here is one measure of its vast breadth:

Inflation, averaged over the past 12 months or so, has been about 10 percent, but the current prime rate is around 20 percent. That makes the gap 10 points, versus an historical average of 3 points or so.

The gap is dramatized even more by comparing the prime interest rate and the 4.9 percent annual rate of consumer price inflation in April. Measured that way, the gap comes to about 15 percentage points.

Compare inflation and new issues of Aaa Bell Telephone bonds and you also come up with a big gap, in the single digits but still much, much larger than what might be expected in more normal times.

However measured, the gap is the "widest in memory," says Albert H. Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics Inc. "Something's got to give."

Which is to say, the gap is bound to grow narrower. But how? More inflation? Lower interest?

Fortunes are won and lost on such guesses, but Cox, for one, thinks interest rates will fall. And, in fact, there are indications the drop may have begun from the recent prime rate high of 20.5 percent.

"Interest rates are bound to give," he says, "and probably soon." He lists these reasons:

"Lower monetary growth is necessary and that prerequisite is likely to be met in the months ahead. Look also for the following relevant news items: a price freeze by OPEC, downward revisions of food price forecasts, a string of weak economic reports, and a tax cut compromise by the White House accompanied by lower prospective budget deficits."

And finally, "single-digit inflation is likely to be reported during most months of this year's second half."

Cox will get some arguments about his views which, of course, is par for the economics craft. There are some, for example, who feel the gap might be narrowed by higher prices, and they are prepared to defend their views. Inflation, they say, will again flow like the Colorado.

And there are some who agree with Cox that the gap will be narrowed by falling interest rates, but who feel that isn't very good news. Rates will fall, they say, because tight money is strangling businesses and, in general, ruining the economy. No way to close the gap, they say.

Whatever, something big is likely to happen in the gap over the next few weeks. History imposes itself on aberrations, and the gap, it is argued, is a mammoth one, double or triple the long-term norm.

state law now requiring those with knowledge of such cases to report them and local officials to follow up on such reports, the number of reported cases in North Carolina has soared to more than 10,000 per year. About one third of those reported are confirmed. In one year, North Carolina juvenile courts handled 2,710 abuse or neglect cases, many involving court intervention in the family to order certain steps or to remove the child from the home.

Streit determined that typically a young, white male lawyer is appointed to be the child's guardian in the proceedings and spends an average of four and one-half hours on the case.

Since much of that brief time is spent waiting in court, precious little time is devoted to pre-hearing investigation, preparation, conferring with the child, and exploring alternatives. Almost no time is spent following up the prescribed treatment.

Indeed, in almost every case, the lawyer-guardian simply went along with the recommendations made by social workers and court officials. Surprisingly, neither court officials nor the attorneys serving as guardians viewed the child's representatives as advocates and adversaries in the proceedings. Streit reported in summary of his findings prepared for Child Watch, a voluntary organization promoting children's welfare in the state.

Low Expectations

"How can we legitimately expect attorneys in a general private practice to leave their offices and get out in the community to conduct the type of detailed investigations required in these cases?" Streit proposed. "Can we legitimately expect attorneys in private practice to leave their offices one, three, or six months after the dispositional hearing to visit the home, school, or foster home and insure that their child-clients are receiving the benefits of a court-ordered treatment plan?"

Streit raised doubts and questions about the lack of experience and preparation of the guardians to handle complex cases; about the scant minutes spent on various phases of the required work; and about the cost which has risen to better than a quarter of a million dollars annually, yet pays for attorneys who "spend so little time for so little money doing things for which they are so poorly prepared..."

A better alternative, Streit thinks, would be a statewide agency with some central direction and administration in which trained and quali-loan at six percent for 25 years. I don't like anyone taking me for a fool, so I just told him what he could do with his loan. Your mother was there."

"I remember it well," my wife said. "I still think about it every time I drive by the house."

"Gosh," my daughter said. "They must have been wonderful days. To think, anybody who wanted to could just go in and buy a home."

I took another puff on my cigar. "Let's say they were different. You see we fellows, who came back from the second big war, knew how to talk to bankers and savings and loan people. They understood we weren't about to pay more than six percent for a loan, and so they didn't push us around. But the kids today don't have any backbone. They'll accept any amount of interest the bank asks for. Heck, if someone ever wanted me to pay 16 percent on a mortgage, I would pick up the papers and make him eat them."

"Now stop that kind of talk," my wife said. "You're just putting on a show for the kids."

"Let him talk, Mom," my daughter Jenny said. "Tell us the time Joe DiMaggio called you up Dad and asked you why you didn't want to borrow any more money from the Bowery Savings Bank in New York City."

Kitchen & Bath Firm Will Open

The grand opening of Kitchen & Bath Designs, located on Highway 11 south across from Pitt Community College, will be observed next week, according to Kenneth M. (Mike) Buck, owner.

Buck said the new firm, located in the Home Decorating Center, will offer a complete service package for remodeling existing baths and kitchens as well as for new facilities.

The owner pointed out that the firm will "take care of the entire operation," handling every phase of kitchen and bath installment, including electrical, painting, plumbing, tile, counter tops, and other necessary items. Customers will also be able to purchase items for their own installation, he said.

Buck said the service reflected a "new concept in kitchen and bath remodeling."

In addition to the complete installation services, Buck said the firm will market spas, hot tubs, steam baths, and saunas, and a variety of accessory items such as dishes, glassware, and cutting boards.

Grand opening activities will begin Monday, he said, and continue through Saturday. During the week, the firm will operate from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. Normal operating hours following the grand opening will be from 9 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Beer-Sipping Bill Advances

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The punishment for drinking beer in a car might soon be similar to the penalties for smoking marijuana in North Carolina, under a bill granted state Senate approval Thursday.

The Senate voted 43-4 to approve and send to the House a bill making it a misdemeanor to drink beer or wine while riding in a vehicle. Buses or other vehicles carrying more than five people are exempt.

The original bill, introduced by Sen. George Marion, D-Surry, would have made violation of the law punishable by a maximum $500 fine or 30 days in jail. It would have exempted vehicles carrying more than 10 people.

But at the recommendation of Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, the Senate voted 26-18 to lower the maximum fine to $100, the same maximum fine for possession of an ounce of marijuana, and lower the exemption to vehicles carrying more than five people.

"I think possession of an open beer can probably would not be worse than possession of marijuana," Swain said. "I don't see the consistency in your punishment."

But Marion charged that the $500 fine should be retained and the penalty for possession of marijuana increased.

Swain and others criticized the bill as being too vague and difficult to enforce. "This does not have anything at all to do with highway safety," Swain said. "All of us want highway safety."

The bill's supporters had promoted it as a way to reduce litter and drunk-driving accidents.

Watershed Tour Held In Pitt

The Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District was host for the 1981 Eastern Watershed tour held Thursday in Pitt County.

The tour of Chicod and Swift Creek Watershed Projects was sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts. Bill Greenlee, chairman of the State Association Watershed Committee, selected the Pitt County projects so officials from Drainage Districts and Conservation Districts in eastern North Carolina could see construction techniques now being used in small watershed projects.

Techniques shown included one-side construction, spoil placement and shaping, and trees left on the working side of channels. The trees provide shade for the creek wildlife.

After a brief program and history of the projects, the groups made two stops on Chicod Creek, one of which included an explanation of water quality monitoring being done by the U.S. Geological Survey. A stop on Indian Wells Canal, part of the Swift Creek project, demonstrated how new construction methods are being used in channel restoration.

These watershed projects represent a joint effort by Pitt County Drainage Districts 3, 7 and 9, the State of North Carolina, and the USDA-Soil Conservation Services to provide flood prevention and drainage benefits to rural Pitt County. The Chicod Creek project is near completion while the Swift Creek project is also underway.

Albert B. Coffey, district conservationist, reported that the cost of the Chicod Creek project was approximately $1.3 million and estimates that the Swift Creek project will surpass that mark, due to the more extensive work required. Some of the work on the Chicod Creek project involved clearing and snagging debris which turned out to be largely hand work, according to Coffey.

Eggsperiment

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — Nobody reinvented the chicken, but second grade "aerospace engineers" at Maplewood Heights Elementary School came up with some ingenious ideas for safeguarding eggs flying through space.

The students were asked to build a container capable of protecting a "delicate instrument" in a fall through space.

The "delicate instruments" in this case were eggs, a fact made painfully clear when less-successful packages hurled from the school roof Tuesday landed with a distinct "cr-a-a-c-k."

Among the winners was Kevin Karlberg, who recovered his egg from the middle of a shoebox stuffed with popcorn, grinned, held the egg triumphantly overhead — and then ate the packing.

Tim Lindberg stuffed his egg in the middle of a loaf of uncut bread.

Ryan Hardie floated his egg in a water-filled plastic container inside a cardboard shoebox filled with popcorn.

"Omelet time," was the teacher's response when Ryan's eggship landed.

LUCKENBACH, Texas (AP) — The ringmaster of the upcoming Great Fifth Sometimes Annual Luckenbach World's Fair is challenging the Russians to send a team to compete in the Texas High Country Olympics.

Guich Kooch, a television actor who has sponsored the sporadic mock world's fair off and on the past 10 years, released an invitation he said he sent to the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

The letter invited the Russians to compete in events of the Texas Decathlon during the festivities at a ranch near this well-known Texas town, population 3.

"We hope to have Soviet representation June 28 in the Texas Decathlon," Kooch wrote. "I realize this is short notice, but my friends from Afghanistan tell me you Russians can move quickly when you want to."

Kooch then listed the 10 events of the Decathlon: cow chip toss, beer chug-a-lug, egg toss, beer chug-a-lug, log throw, beer chug-a-lug, stick horse race, beer chug-a-lug, back door races and beer chug-a-lug.

been prepared that will "insure the quality of life in the neighborhood."

Griffin said the neighborhood association is pleased with the redevelopment plan for the area and he added that the proposal would promote a "good rational land-use program." He said the plan should help insure decent and suitable housing for the area and provide economic opportunities and advantages.

Mrs. Erma Carr, chairperson of the neighborhood group, also expressed approval of the plan for the South Evans area.

Shivar said the second hearing on the Small Cities application will be held on June 29.

The council approved an amendment to the 1979-80 CD budget, reflecting the allocation of $1,222,585, a portion of the urban renewal close-out surplus funds turned over to the city by the Redevelopment Commission. City Manager Ed Wyatt said that the widening of 14th Street from Seaboard Coast Line Railroad to Charles Boulevard is the most pressing area for funding.

Approval was given, following a public hearing, to a request by Phil Carroll for the rezoning of 5.1 acres at the intersection of 14th Street and Laura Lane from Shopping Center to Office and Institutional.

Council members approved the readvertising, due to a technical area, of a matter involving the adoption of new official zoning maps and an amendment to the Flood Plain zoning classification. The item will be considered at the July 9 meeting.

Applications for mobile home renewal permits were approved for: Burroughs Wellcome for a structure at the plant used as temporary office space; Mrs. P.O. Allen for the mobile structure at 107 Church Street; Mini Storage of Greenville Inc. for the mobile home on State Road 1534; and for Mrs. Almeta McCoy for the structure at 1306 S. Pitt Street.

The Council also adopted four Traffic Commission recommendations, including: prohibiting parking Monday through Friday from 1-8 a.m. on both sides of Ford Street from Ward to Sixth Street; the installation of a stop sign on Avon Lane at the intersection of Canterbury Road and Avon Lane; the removal of a "30-minute parking" sign on Dickinson Avenue between Ficklen and Clark Streets; and reversing the stop signs at the intersection of Spruce Street and Raleigh Avenue, due to the closing of a portion of Spruce.

Bids awarded by the Council included: a $27,200 proposal submitted by Truxmore Industries to furnish and install 16 new hydraulic garbage cart dumpers, a $484,187 bid submitted by L. A. Reynolds for Contract II of the 14th Street improvements; and a $68,849 bid submitted by Railroad Friction Products Corp. for railroad crossing materials on the 14th Street project.

Other action taken by the Council included:

— Approval of a request by the Greenville Jaycees for a fireworks display on July 4;

— Approval of a proposed water easement through the West Meadowbrook project;

— Adoption of a resolution authorizing the execution of a lease with the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce for the use of the Winstead-Fleming property at the corner of Greene and Third Streets;

— Adoption of a resolution authorizing the execution of a contract with the N.C. Department of Transportation for transit planning assistance;

— Adoption of an ordinance amending the City Code relative to parking penalties, making civil penalties the sole method of collecting for parking violations;

— Adoption of an ordinance adopting Supplement No. 1 to the City Code;

— Adoption of an ordinance relative to false burglar alarms and establishment of a charge in the Manual of Fees of $25 for a false burglar alarm;

— Adoption of an ordinance amending the Fire District by deleting a portion of the Twin Oaks property at the intersection of 14th Street and Laura Lane; and — Adoption of an ordinance amending the Personnel Ordinance.

Council members approved the appointment of Laurence S. Graham as city attorney to serve through the end of December when a newly elected city council takes office.

A resolution was adopted supporting and endorsing the inventory tax credits bill pending in the General Assembly.

Appointments made by the governing board included: Maurice Clifton York to a three-year term on the Environmental Advisory Commission; Mrs. Maureen Fox to a second one-year term on the Greenville Citizens Bikeway Committee; Wes Hankins to a second three-year term on the Planning and Zoning Commission and Ms. Rachel Croom, who filled an unexpired term, to her first full three-year term on the planning board; Ms. Elizabeth Proctor to her second three-year term on the Recreation Commission, and Ms. Sidney Womack to a first term on the Recreation Commission.

The council welcomed Lester Nail last night as the new Student Government Association representative from East Carolina University.

Utilities Meet...

expectancy and present replacement costs. "These numbers are reasonable guidelines," he added.

"We all know that the schedule of replacing these assets will not follow the pattern of a yearly basis," Prescott continued. "But our poles, lines, transformers, substations, vehicles, equipment and buildings begin deteriorating from the moment they are placed in service."

"If we expect to avoid major crises, additional large bond issues (not related to expansion or growth) and significantly higher costs, we must maintain an orderly and consistent program of updating exhausting assets."

"Based on my conversation with the mayor, the Council's failure to adequately address this very problem over an extended period of time is a major contributing cause of their current plight," Prescott emphasized.

"My understanding," of the commission's enabling legislation, "is that we are directed by law to: manage, operate, improve, maintain, extend and provide for future improvement and expansion before we are directed to turn over remaining revenues."

"Our current turnover policy is an extraordinarily liberal interpretation of that law."

Prescott's statement concluded by saying that based on the figures presented, "my experience as a commissioner, and my professional experience as a CPA (certified public accountant), it is my opinion that we have not exceeded necessary levels of updating assets, and in fact have been at less than minimum requirements for 1900-81 and are projecting less than minimum for 1981-82."

"The fact that we have already sacrificed heavily in order to accommodate the City's very real needs may have left us vulnerable as to whether we have complied with our legislative mandate."

"These factors, coupled with the potentially financially devastating position we are in with the proposed sewage treatment plant have convinced me that the commission should not and in fact cannot accommodate the Council's request."

Prescott said later, "they (the city council) are between a rock and a hard place," and in order to turnover more funds to the city, the commission would have to "delay some things," which would have to be caught up in a subsequent year. "I don't think we have the latitude that the Mayor thinks we have in maintaining our system."

"If we would agree and do the things they (the Council) would ask us to do, we'd be in the same position they are in," and "they haven't quit compounding the problem."

"That's what they are really asking us to do, delay improvements. When we delay it one year, we've got to pick it up another year."

Commission member Harry Hagerty, a former Greenville city manager, said of the city's position, "this is something that's been going on."

Citing the mayor's request, Shea said, "He's strapped for money. There's no question about it."

"We aren't anywhere close to budgeting to replace existing facilities," in the proposed 1981-82 budget because of the turnover to the city already proposed, GUC director Charles Horne suggested.

The director added that the city will receive some $2.24 million "from utility rate payers — electric, water, gas and sewer," in the coming fiscal year through turnover and the city's share of franchise taxes collected by the State.

Historically, according to Horne, municipally owned utilities have been considered a good source of income for cities. However, he said that the time has come when utilities can't be used as a "tax source" to fund municipal operations.

He suggested that when utilities are used as a prime source of income for city budgets citizens end up in a worse position. Utility bills are not deductible from state and federal income taxes while property taxes are.

Dr. Ray Minges, a member of the Utilities Commission for 20 years was one of two interested citizens at the meeting.

He reminded the commission, "we have been changing," the turnover formula, "and delaying capital improvements," to provide additional turnover to the city for years, "and getting so far behind."

He also suggested that the city council should look to other sources of income, rather than at the Utilities Commission, citing a statement in the report to the City Council from the Mayor's Advisory Committee which said in part, "that Greenville, typical of smaller cities, had maintained an artificially low tax rate for many years."

"Their (City Council's) problems are pale compared to our problems," Prescott concluded, "if we have to build the sewage treatment plant with local money."

Summer Work Being Planned

Pitt County Schools will sponsor a summer school program for students in the fourth through eighth grades. G. R. Whitfield and A.G. Cox will be the locations for the sessions.

The sessions will begin Monday and classes each day will be held from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Courses in math will be offered at G.R. Whitfield while courses in science, social studies, reading, language arts and math will be available at A.G. Cox.

Students interested in taking courses to gain credit for promotion must have permission from their present principal before they can attend the sessions. Students can take only one course. The fee for the school will be $50, which is payable upon registration and the deadline will be Tuesday, June 16, at noon. Closing date will be July 20 with July 3 as a holiday.

No Retreat On Neutron Bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is refusing to block development of the neutron warhead despite claims that the weapon could be a first step in bringing the world closer to nuclear destruction.

The House, in a 293-88 vote Thursday, rejected an attempt by Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., to bar use of federal money for production of the neutron weapon or its components.

The vote came after Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., attributed the controversy over neutron warheads to Soviet propaganda "convincing people that somehow this was somehow even a more horrendous form of weaponry than what they have. And they have done the job."

Without the neutron weapon, Stratton said, NATO forces defending Europe would be forced to use conventional nuclear weapons to defeat an attacking Soviet tank force.

"The devastation and the casualties ... would be infinitely greater," he argued.

The neutron warhead produces less blast and heat and more radiation than a conventional nuclear bomb, allowing enemy soldiers to be killed with a minimum amount of damage to land and buildings.

Its supporters argue that because it causes less destruction, the neutron warhead is a better tactical weapon than ordinary nuclear devices to defend Europe against massive Soviet tank attacks. The tank crews would be killed by radiation with the minimum physical destruction of European cities and towns.

But opponents argued vainly on the House floor that the very concept was 'dangerous because it makes it easier to fire the first nuclear weapon.'

See Coal Export Commitment By Administration

SIXTEEN STUDENTS...graduated in a commencement exercise held from Greenville Christian Academy June 5.

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, sometimes dubbed the Saudi Arabia of coal, is likely to commit itself to providing stable and adequate supplies of the fuel to foreign customers, an administration source says.

The Reagan administration's coal export policy statement, which is receiving finishing touches, also is likely to call for an interagency task force to examine federal regulations hindering the movement of coal to foreign users, the source said Thursday.

President Reagan has not yet approved the statement, which is expected to be released in about a week, said the source, who asked not to be identified by name.

The United States has recoverable coal reserves of an estimated 400 billion tons and is expected to play a key role in meeting worldwide energy demands in the future.

U.S. coal exports reached an all-time high last year of 89.9 million tons, 25.1 million tons more than exported in 1979, said the National Coal Association. Contributing to that surge were increased demand and labor troubles in Poland and Australia.

Total U.S. coal production was 830 million tons in 1980, up from 776 million in 1979, according to figures from the coal association.

The lobbying group forecasts exports of 103 million tons in 1985 and 142 million by 1990.

The coal export policy statement is expected to contain language reaffirming the United States will remain a stable and reliable supplier of coal in future years, said the source.

Barring a national emergency, it is likely to say the United States will maintain coal trade under contractual commitments.

The interagency task force on coal exports probably will be asked to look at federal regulations with an eye toward eliminating disincentives to coal exporting, said the source. In particular, it will try to speed up improvements in port and harbor facilities and transportation systems, he said.

The major industrial nations, meeting at economic summits in 1979 and 1980, underscored the importance of coal in meeting future energy needs.

At last year's summit, the participants agreed to the goal of doubling coal production and use by the early 1990s. They also agreed to encourage the long-term commitments by coal users and suppliers and to make any domestic improvements needed to insure the supply and use of coal.

A report by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment earlier this year warned that U.S. coal trading partners were concerned about the lack of deep-draft harbors on the East Coast to accommodate larger and more competitive coal carriers. They also were concerned about the limitations on port and ship-handling capacity, loading facilities and transportation costs, it said.

"The United States simply does not have sufficient capacity in the federal navigation system to handle deep-draft coal colliers," said J. Ron Brinson, executive vice president of the American Association of Port Authorities.

The Office of Technology report said none of the major U.S. harbors can fully load the new generation of coal-carrying ships of 150,000 tons.

"None of the major U.S. coal ports can now fully load ships over 80,000 tons, and larger ships now entering these ports must depart with a partial load," said the report, prepared for Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md. "Newer ships are tending toward the larger sizes because most of the rest of the world's major coal ports are deep-draft."

Brinson blamed federal regulations for hindering the dredging of ports to deeper levels to accommodate the larger colliers. He estimated it takes 20 to 25 years to complete a major dredging project.

"We are not proposing we jeopardize" rules that protect the environment, he said. "It simply shouldn't take that long."

Also seen as hindering the expansion of coal exports is the limited capacity to store and load coal at ports. Because of that, ships are forced to wait for their tonnage.

Demurrage costs due to waiting are said to run as high as $10,000 a day per ship, adding an average of about $6 to $6.50 per ton to the cost of shipping coal abroad, according to a recent Commerce Department report.

Memorial For Forgotten War

By BRUCE BARTLEY
Associated Press Writer
ATTU ISLAND, Alaska (AP) — The Japanese have remembered the "forgotten war" and now perhaps more Americans will recall the World War II struggle for a 1,000-mile chain of islands known as the Aleutians.

About 30 people, most of them U.S. Coast Guard personnel, gathered Thursday on a wind-worn hill on Attu and paid homage to the hundreds of American servicemen who died in the 15-month Aleutian Campaign.

The crack of two vintage Springfield rifles was muffled in the fog and drizzle masking Massacre Bay as taps sounded for the men who died in the soggy musk of places like Fishhook Ridge and Terrible Mountain.

But many Americans have forgotten — or perhaps never knew — that when Japanese troops stormed ashore at Attu's Chichagof Bay on June 7, 1942, it was the first time foreign troops had occupied North American U.S. soil since the War of 1812.

The island was undefended, populated only by some 40 Aleut villagers and two representatives of the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs who operated the radio station. Charles F. Jones was gunned down in the attack. His wife and the villagers were carted off to Japan, where they spent the duration of the war.

Less than a year later, Operation Landcrab put thousands of American soldiers ashore in what was expected to be a relatively easy stepping-stone battle to prepare for an assault on a much larger Japanese garrison on nearby Kiska.

As happened so often in the Aleutian campaign, American commanders miscalculated enemy strength and underestimated the Aleutians — their weather and their geography.

The battle of Attu turned into what historians have called "19 days of hell." Some 550 Americans were killed and more than 3,000 others were put out of action. More than 2,600 Japanese died.

The Japanese have placed several memorials on these barren hills where thousands of their countrymen died or committed suicide in the final bitter battle here, but until Thursday there was no physical sign in recognition of the American effort.

Perhaps it is understandable. Attu is at the extreme western tip of the Aleutians, only 2,000 miles east of Tokyo and 720 miles north of Japan's Kurile Islands, while it is more than 6,000 miles west of Washington, D.C.

Brady Said Near Normal

WASHINGTON (AP) — He isn't giving any speeches yet, but when he's rested and comfortable, wounded White House press secretary James Brady can talk "at length and in depth in a perfectly normal conversation," a doctor says.

Brady suffered a bullet wound to the brain during the attempt on the life of President Reagan on March 30.

"Jim doesn't deliver speeches, but he can talk about any subject he wants to," Dr. Dennis O'Leary, clinical dean at George Washington University Hospital, said Thursday. "But he's obviously had surgery on his head. He still tires."

Brady lost one of two nerves for smelling, but has "good taste functions" and has "lost some weight," O'Leary said.

Academy Holds Graduation

Greenville Christian Academy held its commencement exercise on June 5 at 7:30 p.m. Sixteen students were presented their diplomas by President J.M. Bragg and Principal Della S. Dixon. Rev. Greg Huffman of Albany, Ga., delivered the commencement address.

The graduates are Melinda Peaden, Robin Chandler, Elizabeth Wainwright, Laurie O'Shea, Lisa Hedgepeth, Lisa James, Amber McDonald, Lori Brown, Bonita Hardee, Melanie Bunch, David Stocks, Ronnie Dail, Ben Haddock, James Laney, Bill Hurst and Bob Hurst.

Lisa James, valedictorian and Ben Haddock, salutatorian, were student speakers. Melanie Bunch extended the welcome and James Laney led the closing prayer. Melinda Peaden sang "My Tribute."

Special awards were presented to: Lisa James, Chairman's Award; Ben Haddock and Lisa James, Mr. and Miss G.C.A.; Lori Brown and James Laney, athletic awards; Melanie Bunch, President's Merit Award; Lisa Hedgepeth, Jimmy Alton Woodard Memorial Scholarship Award; and Valerie Laney, Academic Award.

Bid-Rigging Measure Heads For Action In Senate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It's sponsors call it the toughest bid-rigging legislation in the country, and it now heads for final approval in the state Senate after the House gave it the stamp of approval Thursday.

Meanwhile, the Senate on Thursday enacted a bill that will boost interest rates for small loan companies.

There was no debate on the final reading of the bid-rigging bill in the House as it passed unanimously, 101-0.

The bill, sought by Gov. Jim Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, would make it a felony for contractors to conspire or collude in bidding on state contracts.

The bill covers other types of contractors doing business in North Carolina, and also covers contracts between two parties — even if the state isn't one of them — in which there is a restraint of trade.

Violators could face a presumed sentence of three years and fines of up to $100,000 per person and $1 million per corporation.

Enactment of the interest rate bill in the Senate means people who borrow up to $3,000 from a small-loan company soon could be paying higher interest rates.

The bill was introduced by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, and was rewritten by the House Banking Committee to provide a smaller increase in interest rates than proposed by Harris. The state Senate voted Thursday to concur in the House changes, enacting the bill.

It sets interest rate limits of 36 percent on the first $600 and 15 percent on the remainder, up to $3,000. Current law allows 36 percent on the first $300 and 18 percent on the remainder up to $3,000.

Under the bill, the interest rate limit on a $1,500 loan financed over a 36-month period would average 27.04 percent. That compares with 33.29 percent under the Senate version and 23.56 percent under current laws.

In other legislative action:

Counsel

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill that would require courts to appoint attorneys for indigent persons involved in a termination of parental rights case.

The bill's sponsor Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, called it "one of the most important court proceedings I can think of." He also noted that the U.S. Supreme Court had recently ruled that attorneys should be appointed in such cases.

Employee Ceiling

The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would limit the growth of state personnel to population growth.

The bill was amended to exclude employees funded by a state grant.

Adoption

Rep. Mary Seymour, D-Guilford, had a tough time with an adoption bill, but finally got tentative approval on it.

Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, speaking in defense of the bill, said after the long debate that the issue had become confused with other bills and had become an emotional issue.

The bill would let local departments of social services release non-identifying information on adoption to adoptive parents. The Children's Home Society now gives out such information and Mrs. Seymour said the bill would only allow state agency to do the same.

The bill passed 64-33. The final House vote is schedule for Friday.

Workers Compensation

A move to kill a bill that would make a major change in the current workers compensation laws in North Carolina was held off when a legislative committee delayed action on the bill until next week.

A subcommittee of the House Manufacturing and Labor Committee recommended that the committee not approve the original bill or a committee substitute. Subcommittee chairman Rep. Ben Tison, D-Cumberland, said the bill was "too far-reaching" and more study was needed.

The original bill would have changed the wording of the current law to remove the phrase "by accident" which bill supporters say has prevented many workers from receiving benefits because they could not prove an accident. The substitute would address only hernias and back injuries which make up a majority of the problem cases.

A Senate committee has killed a bill similar to the original House bill introduced by Rep. Billy Clark, D-Cumberland.

Clark said he still hopes that the bill will come out of committee. The substitute bill, which he calls a "narrower version" of his original bill, is a fair compromise, Clark said.

New Generation

The Senate enacted a bill making minor changes in the 1979 New Generation Act, which established committees to ensure adequate health care services for children. The bill was strongly pushed by Gov. Jim Hunt two years ago, and later ran into criticism from conservatives.

The bill puts language into the law recognizing the family as the "primary provider" of health care. It also says the act is in no way related to a controversial health care plan — the "blue book" — published by the state two years ago.

Disagreement

The Senate refused to agree with House changes in a bill introduced by Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, extending the deadline for filing workers compensation claims for asbestosis and silicosis. The current limit is two years.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green appointed conferees to try to settle the differences between the two chambers.

New Bills

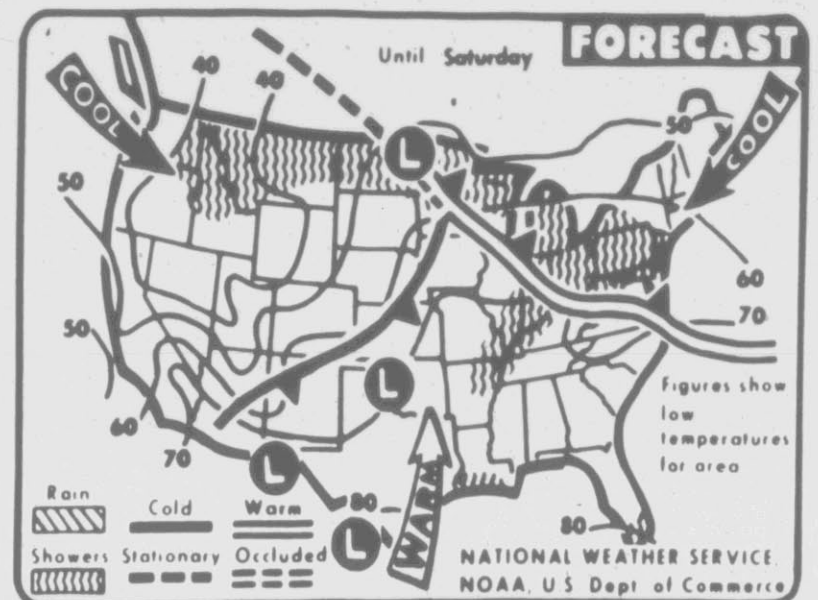

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, filed a bill calling for the Legislative Research Commission to study the economic, social and legal needs of North Carolina women. The commission would look specifically at the potential impact of federal budget cuts on women and their children and sex discrimination in state laws.

Rep. Ron Taylor, D-Bladen, filed a bill to transfer the Divisions of Forest Resources and Soil and Water Conservation from the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. Taylor's bill would place the two divisions under the Department of Agriculture.

A bill also was filed in the House to appropriate $250,000 for a regional farmers' market in Charlotte.

In the Senate, bills were filed to limit to $5 traffic fines for speeding over 55 mph in a 55 mph zone, but not exceeding 65 mph, and to appropriate $100,000 this year for the state Highway Patrol to buy rifles and related equipment.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the period until Saturday morning from the northern Rockies, across the northern Plains into the Midwest, upper Mississippi, Pennsylvania and Maryland. Cool weather is expected for most of the western half of the nation and the Northeast. Other areas will be warm. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A weak cold front is bringing relief from the heat experienced in North Carolina Wednesday, but with the cool air is a chance of thunderstorms.

The front pushed south across the state Thursday, stalling near the South Carolina border, where a low pressure area helped trigger storms in the mountains and foothills overnight.

Heavy rainfall and some hail was reported across the southern Piedmont and in western sections of the Sandhills this morning as the front advanced.

Temperatures dropped from the 90s experienced on Wednesday to the mid to upper 80s Thursday. Light northerly winds brought drier air into the state, along with some cloudiness, leaving only the extreme eastern part of the state clear this morning.

Recreational weather outlook: Scattered thunderstorms over the interior of the state will produce locally heavy rain and possibly some small hail early this morning. The warm, humid weather pattern will return as the front moves north today and Saturday.

Forecasters are calling for a return of more summerlike weather with mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms popping up around the state. The high temperatures today will be in the 80s, but with winds becoming more south Saturday, many places will see the mercury reach the 90 degree mark.

Along the coast, light southeast winds today will become more southerly tonight and southwest on Saturday. Temperatures will range from the mid 80s along the north coast to the upper 80s over the south portion today.

Over the week-end temperatures will be back into the low 90s along the southern shore and in the 80s along the Outer Banks.

California Police Crack Down On Heroin Junkies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 20 percent increase in burglaries has prompted police to crack down on junkies with the help of a law just upheld by the courts that allows officers to search for needle marks and mandates jail sentences for convicted addicts.

"We're going to spread the word," said police Sgt. Richard Cairns. "A junkie does heroin here, and he's going to do 90 days in the bucket."

"He gets out and does it again, and he's going to (go to jail) again. And then maybe he'll get the message — we don't want him here."

Police recorded 7,942 burglaries in the first five months of this year compared with 6,632 during the comparable period last year.

Police say that many of those burglaries were committed by addicts, though they don't know exactly how many. Officials could provide no estimate of how many addicts are in San Francisco.

"We're aiming at the addict, the junkie, who's stealing to support his habit," Cairns said Wednesday.

"We're going to put him in jail. That may not stop him from doing dope, but it's sure going to stop him from doing burglaries."

Police are planning to begin their crackdown next month using a statute that allows them to round up suspected addicts.

One hundred police officers attended a special two-day school given by the U.S. Justice Department designed to show police how to spot drug addicts and gather the evidence needed to convict them.

The crackdown is called the "11550 Program" after Section 11550 of the state Health and Safety Code, which says that any person convicted of being under the influence of an opiate such as heroin must be given 90 days in jail. It allows police to stop people they suspect are on drugs, look for needle marks and other tell-tale signs and force them to take a urine test for opiates.

"The law is explicit and quite direct," said Cairns. "If we can get a conviction, the addict is going to go to county jail for 90 days. The court has no choice. Conviction means jail, not probation."

The current form of the drug law was enacted in 1975. A pilot program was established in March 1979 to test the idea, and within six weeks a team of 12 officers had made 268 arrests — all of them on a three-block section of a street running through the city's seedy Tenderloin section.

The law was just upheld last month by the state Supreme Court, allowing officials to proceed with their crackdown. The court rejected a claim by the city's public defender, Jeff Brown, that Section 11550 was unconstitutional because its mandatory sentence took away the discretionary power of judges. Brown appealed the convictions stemming from the March 1979 crackdown.

Capt. D.J. Philpott said the department makes arrests "in the hundreds" each month for heroin dealing or possession with intent to sell. He said no increased enforcement against dealers is planned in conjunction with the crackdown.

Asteroid Game Record Claimed

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — What a way to spend a vacation — just sitting around and shooting asteroids, setting world records.

"It's quite a vacation for 12½ cents apiece," says Bruce Mackenzie-Low, who with friend Steve Roberts did just that for the past nine days, playing an electronic game called Asteroids.

It cost Mackenzie-Low, 21, and the 19-year-old Roberts 25 cents when they started June 3. They quit at 1:30 a.m. today after recording 100 million points. Even their meals were free.

They took aim on the 100 million mark, their original goal when they set out, late Thursday night.

"We quadrupled the old record," said Mackenzie-Low.

They originally had planned to keep playing until Saturday, but Roberts said, "we're kind of tired so we decided to kill it off."

The computerized game pits a contestant's skill at firing simulated laser beams from his spacecraft against asteroids and flying saucers bent on collision.

Two months ago, the two had set the old record of 20 million points, on a lark. But their total was topped soon afterward by someone in Florida.

The second time around, their assault was conceived with all the precision of generals launching a major war effort.

They outfitted themselves with two chairs with headrests, on wheels, and a stereo with dual headphones, playing rock and jazz music to enhance their concentration and diminish distracting noises from onlookers.

They had the use of a computer to keep track of their scoring, courtesy of a local store. They also brought along log books to verify their totals — ammunition in case questions should arise about their attempt to earn a niche in the "Guinness Book of World Records."

The 7-Eleven store where they pursued the record even made room for a backup Asteroids machine, if needed.

Their meals were brought in by a restaurant. Sleep has been no problem. The two alternated in six-hour shifts, each going to his home nearby.

Preservation Seminar Set

A canning and freezing seminar will be held Thursday, June 18, at the Agricultural Extension Office, 1717 W. Fifth Street, Room 210, from 2:00-4:00 p.m. and again from 7:00-9:00 p.m.

The program will include canning and freezing methods, equipment, terminology and demonstrations. Pre-register for the seminar by calling 752-2934 or 758-1196 by June 15.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WE DO IT EVERY NIGHT OF OUR LIVES, WITHOUT EVEN THINKING ABOUT IT—BUT, IN BIBLICAL TIMES, IT COULD HAVE A VERY SERIOUS CONNOTATION!

THE TAKING OFF OF A SHOE IN BIBLICAL TIMES WAS THE SIGN A MAN USED TO SHOW THAT HE WAS NOT WILLING TO MAKE A DEAD BROTHER'S WIDOW HIS WIFE—THIS WAS A LEVIRATE DUTY WHICH ENABLED THE DEAD MAN'S NAME TO BE KEPT ALIVE IN ISRAEL, FOR THE FIRST SON OF THIS UNION WOULD BE COUNTED AS THE DEAD MAN'S SON AND WOULD RECEIVE HIS INHERITANCE. BOAZ, A NEAR-KINSMAN OF THE WIDOW RUTH (RUTH 4:1-14) WISHED TO MARRY HER BUT THERE WAS A NEARER KINSMAN TO WHOM THE PRIVILEGE BELONGED. HOWEVER, THIS MAN WAS UNWILLING AND, IN THE PRESENCE OF TEN ELDERS AS WITNESSES, HE TOOK OFF HIS SHOE AND GAVE IT TO BOAZ, SHOWING HE DIDN'T WISH TO "STAND IN THE SHOES OF THE DEAD MAN" THUS BOAZ WAS FREE TO MARRY RUTH AS NEXT OF KIN, WHICH RESOLVED THE MATTER HAPPILY—HOWEVER

...IT DIDN'T ALWAYS WORK OUT AS EASILY AS THAT! THE LAW, AS STATED IN DEUT. 25:5-10, HELD THAT A BROTHER OR NEAREST OF KIN WAS DUTY-BOUND TO TAKE HIS BROTHER'S WIDOW TO WIFE IF THE BROTHER DIED CHILDLESS (IF THE WIDOW HAD CHILDREN, THEY HAD TO CARE FOR HER IN HER OLD AGE). NOW, IF A MAN REFUSE TO TAKE HIS BROTHER'S CHILDLESS WIDOW AS A WIFE, THEN, BEFORE THE ASSEMBLY OF THE TRIBE SHE WOULD "LOOSE HIS SHOE FROM OFF HIS FOOT, AND SPIT IN HIS FACE", BECAUSE THE CULPRIT WOULDN'T DO HIS DUTY TO HIS DEAD BROTHER BY GIVING HIM A LIVING SON! HIS NAME WOULD THEN BE KNOWN THROUGHOUT ISRAEL AS "THE HOUSE OF HIM THAT HATH HIS SHOE LOOSED". SO TO REFUSE THIS DUTY WAS A MARK OF SHAME TO THESE ANCIENT PEOPLE—BEFORE A MAN DID THAT, HE'D BE BETTER TO—in the JARGON OF TODAY'S YOUNG PEOPLE—"COOL IT WITH THAT SHOE, MAN!"

NEXT WEEK: "LET'S GO HUNTING!"

Claim A Mandate From Bible

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Religious groups have no right to impose their ideas of Christianity on America through politics, but political activity by individual Christians is mandated by the Bible, a national convention of Southern Baptists says.

"Baptist church-state experts are agreed on two major increasing tendencies today — that of the government to interfere in religious affairs and the growing movement of church leaders to dictate to government," said delegate W.W. Finlator of North Carolina, who introduced a resolution rejecting "the right of any group to ... seek through political means to impose this faith on the American people."

"My resolution has to do with encroachments by the church on the state," Finlator said as the nation's largest Protestant denomination ended its 124th national convention Thursday.

The Moral Majority, the best known of the new conservative religious groups to declare their right to engage in politics, was mentioned only once, by Keith Arledge of Mulvane, Kan.

In urging the convention to stress individual participation in its statement approving of political activity by Christians, he said, "I don't want to be associated with the Moral Majority, and I don't want people to misunderstand our resolution as being a kind of affirmation of that kind of activity in our nation."

After objections from several men, and support from women, the delegates adopted a resolution condemning the proposed Equal Rights Amendment and reaffirmed "the biblical role which stresses the equal worth, but not always the sameness of function of women."

Other resolutions at the conclusion of the four-day gathering condemned distribution of birth control devices and information by anyone but parents, affirmed that "religion flourishes best without government's interference or tax support," and criticized pornography, anti-Semitism and television's portrayal of "an unacceptable lifestyle."

Several women, including Joyce Rogers, of Memphis, Tenn., warned of "great inherent dangers in the ERA."

"Good women have been used on the forefront, but the very core of the ERA are radical feminists who believe in secular humanism, abortion on demand, acceptance of homosexual lifestyle (and) forcing women into the armed services, which would be detrimental to our Christian lifestyle," she said.

The resolution deploring anti-Semitism said that Baptists and Jews have "a common heritage of persecution and suffering for conscience sake."

The Rev. Bailey Smith's public comments during his first term that "God Almighty does not hear the prayer of a Jew," and "they have funny-looking noses," were not mentioned. Smith refused to discuss the statements at a news conference following his re-election as president of the Southern Baptists.

Smith has said he was only joking when he made the remark about noses, but has not disavowed the comment on prayers.

The resolutions are not binding on the denominations 13.6 million members. About 13,500 delegates attended the conference.

Rock Records On A Bonfire

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — About 30 young people took turns throwing their rock albums into a bonfire at the Ben Avenue Free Will Baptist Church Wednesday night, singing "I Surrender All" as more than 100 youths and adults looked on.

The Rev. James Pauley told the assembled people before the burning that rock music "is a drug which affects you without you being aware of it." He said the burning was the church's effort to "try and save some kids from going to hell."

The record burning was the second such incident to take place in North Carolina in recent months.

In Gastonia last month, a book and record burning was staged at the Temple Christian School, in which copies of "The Living Bible" were incinerated for misrepresenting the King James version.

Some parents said they would remove their children from that school following the event.

Pauley tied rock music to the destruction of America's ruggedness and the reworking of America's culture.

"The overwhelming majority of rock music is neurotic, sadistic, suggestive and profane," he said.

Pauley cited scientific tests, without naming the scientists or studies, which purportedly showed plants suffered stunted growth and rats became aggressive when exposed to rock music.

Congregation members nodded in agreement as Pauley attacked rock songs dealing with sex and drugs.

"I came up with 'American Bandstand,' and today they do things on the dance floor that should be confined to the marital bond and matrimony," he said.

He recommended that parents "try to save some kids from going to hell," by breaking every record, picture and magazine involving rock stars that their children own.

So far there has been little outcry stemming from the burning.

Cabarrus County fire marshal Jim Pharr, however, said the church did not get a burning permit for the bonfire. He added that because plastics were burned, any complaints about the burning would be directed to the health department.

Peat Deposits Could Help Provide Energy

"The peat deposits in the eastern part of our state could literally be an ace in the hole for North Carolina's energy future," Gov. Jim Hunt said in announcing the opening of a peat plant by Peat Methanol Associates (PMA) at First Colony Farms near Creswell in a press conference Wednesday.

In its natural condition peat looks a lot like axle grease and is about eight percent water. It occurs in larger amounts in less than a dozen states. While N.C. peat is only about three percent of total U.S. peat reserves there are 875 million tons of pure grade peat in N.C.

Methanol is a clear odorless liquid that can be extracted from peat and is sometimes known as wood alcohol. It is used as a feedstop for producing chemicals such as formaldehyde, also as an industrial solvent and is fuel for gas or steam two-generators used by electric utilities. Racing cars at Indianapolis have been using it for years as fuel.

"Methanol is becoming increasingly popular as an automotive fuel and could play a major role in breaking our nation's dependence on expensive foreign oil," Hunt said.

He added that "the high quality of our peat reserves and the length of the harvesting season here make our peat particularly attractive and the extensive work that's already been done in cataloging our peat resources has made it possible for companies like PMA and First Colony to get a head start in the development of peat as a fuel."

"It is a perfect example of what we must do if we are going to build a secure energy future for North Carolina," said Sam Taylor, spokesman for the state energy division. PMA has committed $1.3 million for final design and permit application work which is expected to be completed in early 1982. Pending permit approval and final financial arrangements construction of the estimated $250 million production facility is expected to begin in early 1982. Employment at the plant will be 200 with the construction force ranging from 200 to 500. The facility will be capable of producing 51.3 million gallons of methanol a year from 633 thousand tons of 30 percent moisture peat.

The plant will be the first commercial peat-to-methanol facility in the world. PMA expects to market the methanol as an automotive fuel and a chemical feed stock. Peat for the facility will be provided by First Colony Farms on its 15,000 acre tract where state mining permits to remove the peat have already been granted. If economic factors are favorable the facility could be expanded to produce 513 million gallons of methanol annually, according to Taylor.

PMA, based in Santa Fe, New Mexico, is a partnership formed by energy transition corporation hereafter known as (Eto), North Carolina Synfuels Corporation (a wholly owned subsidiary of Koppers Company) and Jack B. Sunderland, president of Coroll Inc. in New York.

Hot and humid Sunday through Tuesday with widely scattered afternoon and evening showers. Highs in 90s, lows in 70s.

Opposition To Tax Forms

Jim McIntyre, former chairman of the Pitt County Republican Party, announced today the formation of the Pitt County Committee Against the Gas Tax.

According to McIntyre, "Jim Hunt's 33 percent gas tax increase is inflationary," and "the people of Pitt County have already had enough inflation. It's time to cut wasteful spending and hold the line on taxes."

According to McIntyre, other members of the committee include Fenner L. Allen Jr., Mrs. John L. Howard, Jack Barnes, Charley White Jr., and Robert Browning.

"Ronald Reagan is working in Washington to cut the cost of government," McIntyre said. "But Jim Hunt's 33 percent gas tax increase means more government and more inflation in North Carolina. We can't afford more waste and political cronyism."

Men's Day Speaker

Wade Johnson Jr. will be the Men's Day speaker for the youth department at Mount Olive Missionary Baptist Church, South West Ave. in Ayden, Sunday at 11 a.m.

Johnson is a native of Pitt County and resides in Greenville. He is a drug and alcohol educator with Pitt County Schools. Johnson also holds membership in the professional teacher organizations and has served as PTA president and Boy Scout Master.

AFTERNOON WORSHIP

An afternoon worship service will be held at Sweet Hope F.W.B. Church, Galloways Crossroads, Sunday at 4:30 p.m. The guest minister will be Elder Kenny Council, accompanied by the Allen Chapel Church Junior Choir of Greenville. All friends and members of Sweet Hope are urged to attend.

Russia Warned Respect Poland

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a fresh warning to Moscow, the State Department says Kremlin pressure on Poland's leadership to quash the country's trade union movement represents interference in Polish internal affairs and a violation of the Helsinki accords.

Department spokesman David Passage said Thursday that the United States regrets the "apparently threatening tone" of a letter sent by the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee to the Warsaw leadership.

"From what we have seen, the Polish people and government are in the process of resolving their differences in calm and in dignity without help from outside," Passage said.

On Capitol Hill, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Europe, said he believes the Kremlin will have to decide soon how to respond to Polish party leader Stanislaw Kania's reassertion of his leadership over the opposition of Soviet-backed hardliners. "I think that Moscow was embarrassed — if not defeated — by their failure to get rid of Kania," Hamilton said. He said that in advance of a special party congress scheduled for mid-July, the Polish situation now appears headed for a "critical period."

Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., said he was concerned that the United States and its allies may, in effect, be increasing the chances of Soviet military intervention in Poland because of their preoccupation with Israel's raid on an Iraqi nuclear reactor and other Mideast problems.

Talks Continue, But Players Call Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — There was still some talking being done but the chances of any major league baseball being played today were practically nonexistent.

The Major League Players Association went on strike early this morning following a breakdown of negotiations between the union and the owners' Player Relations Committee. At least, that's what Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association, said following a fruitless 4½-hour bargaining session with management.

"As you know, we have met most of the day, and nothing has been accomplished," said Miller. "The strike is on."

"Reports we've been getting indicate a substantial number of players have left for home and as soon as everybody knows, the remainder will go home."

Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the club owners, said he did not consider the players on strike because the deadline was at 2 p.m. EDT today and another negotiating session was scheduled for 10:15 a.m. EDT. But Grebey added he was not optimistic that a settlement of the sticky free-agent compensation issue could be reached at the morning meeting.

"We have a bargaining session at 10 in the morning," said a weary-looking Grebey. "We don't take bargaining sessions lightly. If someone calls a strike before a bargaining session, I guess they're trying to tell us something."

"This issue can only be solved at the bargaining table and we have two years invested in this. We will be here to continue negotiating even if there is a strike."

The first midseason player strike in baseball history centers around whether a team losing a free agent is entitled to another major league player as compensation. The only compensation awarded previously has been a first-round selection in the amateur draft.

But last February the owners, with a right given them in an agreement reached hours before a threatened strike last May, unilaterally implemented their compensation plan. That plan would require that teams losing a "ranking" free agent in the re-entry draft get a roster player from the team signing him.

The players, under the same agreement of last May, were given the right to strike over the free-agent compensation issue but would have to do so by June 1 or lose their right to walk out over compensation for the remainder of the agreement.

That deadline was extended in a mutual agreement between management and the union read into a court record late last month, just before a May 29 strike date set before the season began by the players.

The National Labor Relations Board, at the request of the players, then sought an injunction to delay implementation of the owners' plan for one year.

William Lubbers, general counsel to the NLRB, had found validity in a players association claim that the owners were guilty of bargaining in bad faith by refusing to make their financial records available to the players.

But U.S. District Court Judge Henry Werker dismissed the petition Wednesday and said the matter of compensation should be settled at the negotiating table. The agreement delaying the June 1 strike deadline contained a provision that if the injunction was denied, the players would strike between 24 and 48 hours after the decision.

Don Fehr and Peter Rose, counsel and associate counsel, to the players association, when told that Grebey did not consider a strike to be on until shortly before the first scheduled game — San Diego at the Chicago Cubs — said that the union and not the clubowners determined whether or not there was a strike.

Thursday's negotiating session centered around the creation of a compensation pool of players. But neither side could agree on the quality of or just how many players would be in the pool.

Grebey said the union insisted that all teams, regardless of whether they drafted a free agent in the re-entry draft, must contribute to the pool. When asked if there was any way the owners would accept such a pool, he emphatically said "No."

"We made another proposal today, the fifth we've made," said Miller, who also looked haggard following the evening's talks. "The owners' committee said they considered it and rejected it. We invited them to amend it or make a series of counter-proposals."

"We asked if they expected to have new proposals. If they did, we would stay. But they said no."

Miller said he wouldn't be at this morning's bargaining session.

"We will have an appropriate committee to meet with them," he said, adding that Joe Niekro and Don Sutton, pitchers for the Houston Astros; Rusty Staub, a New York Mets' first baseman, and Bob Boone, catcher for the Philadelphia Phillies and the National League player representative, were expected to be on that committee.

"We have no reluctance to meet with the players without Mr. Miller," added Grebey.

Miller made mention of "a clique" of owners and said he thought that not all team owners were "informed of what's going on."

"The final proof was that I was sitting in the (negotiating) room listening to (Yankees owner) George Steinbrenner saying he believed there would be no strike," said Miller, referring to Steinbrenner's being interviewed by ABC-TV's "Nightline."

"We're sitting there and we know there's no way we'll reach agreement and Steinbrenner is saying the opposite."

Sutton emphasized that the players were just "exercising a right."

"One thing people don't understand or disregard," he said, "is our right. Strike is a part of the negotiating settlement of last May. Either we accept their (the owners) proposal or we go out."

"Most definitely, a select group of fans will be hostile over it. It's difficult accurately convey to a third party the entire situation."

Niekro said he wasn't all that surprised that the negotiations broke down. Asked if he thought the owners seemed willing to force the players to go out, Niekro replied, "It tends to look that way to me."

But Grebey wasn't having any of that. "We made several efforts to try and resolve this and avoid a strike," he said. "Unfortunately, the differences are very significant."

Foster Feels Any Strike Will Be Short

By The Associated Press
"The strike is on," said Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association.

But George Foster, the slugging outfielder for the Cincinnati Reds, feels a baseball strike will either not occur or be of short duration.

"My gut feeling is that I don't think there will be a strike," said Foster, the Reds' player representative. "From a reliable source I hear there will not be a strike — and if there is, it will just be a couple of days."

Despite Foster's feelings, Miller said early today that "a substantial number of players have left for home, and as soon as everybody knows, the remainder will go home."

All across the country, and in Toronto and Montreal, baseball players and teams played a waiting game — waiting for the 2 p.m., EDT, deadline that was set early today by Ray Grebey, the chief negotiator for the owners.

"We are going on the assumption that the team will continue playing," said Fred Claire, Los Angeles Dodgers vice president of public relations and promotion. "But we have taken some steps to meet contingencies that could result from a strike."

One of the contingencies would be to strand the players in St. Louis where the Dodgers just finished a series with the Cardinals.

The Dodgers' private plane was to remain in St. Louis until noon, EDT, according to Claire. If the strike is on, Claire said the plane would head to Los Angeles carrying only "non-playing personnel and media people." He said the players would be left in St. Louis to "shift for themselves."

The Cleveland Indians are in Oakland, where a four-game weekend series against the A's was to begin tonight.

"If there is a strike, the players will have to pay their own way home from Oakland," said Gabe Paul, Indians president. "The clubhouse will be locked and the players can't work out with any equipment owned by the team. They will be given the time to get their personal belongings."

The possibility opened up a humorous side.

"Well, it costs $118.50 for a bus ticket from Oakland to Cleveland," said reserve infielder Jerry Dybzinski. "Maybe we can get a group rate if we have to go home."

"At least I'll hit .200 this year," said light-hitting center fielder Rick Manning. "I suppose I'll go home and finish painting my house," said Cleveland infielder Toby Harrah, who missed three weeks of spring training after falling off a ladder the last time he tried painting his house.

The New York Yankees also were in a joking mood.

Pitcher Ron Davis said he would go to work at a New York restaurant, while infielder Bucky Dent said he do "absolutely nothing except stand on the unemployment line."

"I'll call up the probation office and see if I'm clean, then go on welfare and try to collect food stamps," laughed outfielder Bobby Brown when asked what his plans were.

"I'm from Minnesota," said outfielder Dave Winfield, who signed a 10-year, $22 million contract. "We're going to Minnesota, so I'll stay in Minnesota."

For Yankee catcher Rick Cerone, a strike would mean he would "go to the Jersey Shore, go to Florida and maybe go to Hollywood and try to make a movie."

In Toronto, Garth Iorg of the Blue Jays said: "I got to apartment paid up to the end of the month so I'll probably stay there until then. If it looks like I have to get my family home (Eureka, Calif.)."

But the strike affects not only the players and the owners.

Jimmy Saenger of New York, a high school student who works at a concession stand at Shea Stadium where the Mets play, said if there was a strike, "I just get a little vacation."

And Armand Damiani (Brooklyn) said: "They ought to have a committee and let the fans sit in on the negotiation because they pay the freight."

State Gains Its 1st Summer Win

BUIES CREEK, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State scored single runs in the fifth and seventh innings Thursday night to break a 2-2 tie and gain a 4-2 victory over Campbell in North State College baseball.

Jim Toman and Ronnie Lee were the stars for the Wolfpack, each collecting two hits. Lee had a home run and a single, while Toman collected a single and a double. Both men knocked in one run.

Wayne Dale blasted a two-run homer in the fourth inning to tie the game before N.C. State rallied for its first summer league victory of the year in three starts.

KC Rally Hands Jays 11th Loss In Row

By The Associated Press
It's the kind of situation that would have some players talking to themselves.
Jamie Quirk listened.
"Going up to the plate with the bases loaded and then getting a 3-2 count is a situation you just dream of," he said.
"But when you're at the plate you've got to try and keep it all in perspective and say to yourself, 'Just hit the ball.'"
He did — barely 150 feet down the third base line.
But Quirk's eighth-inning pinch-double off Roy Lee Jackson went far enough to allow two runners to score, wiping out Toronto's 5-4 lead and starting the Kansas City Royals on their way to a 10-5 romp. It was the Blue Jays' 11th consecutive loss, tying a club record.
That game — and all others — were played under the threat of the first-midseason strike in major league history.

"I tried not to strike out," said Quirk, who was batting for Dave Chalk. "Jackson threw it right where he wanted it. I'm sure if you ask him he's pretty mad right now."
George Brett led off the eighth with a triple off winless Mike Willis. After a walk to Willie Aikens, Brett was caught in a rundown but stayed in it long enough to let Aikens reach third and batter Amos Otis get to second. After an intentional walk to McRae loaded the bases, Quirk got his decisive hit.
Hal McRae and Rance Mulliniks drove in two runs apiece for the Royals. "Tonight we just got a bit lucky with the bloop hits and scored a few runs," said Royals Manager Jim Frey. "Things like that don't show up in the stats."

Earlier in the year we'd go into the late innings losing, get two on and hit a one-hopper to the shortstop or a line drive to left and walk off losing a one-run game."

Brewers 6, Rangers 3
Like Quirk, Roy Howell of Milwaukee was just trying to get the job done. Like Quirk, he did — but far more emphatically.

Howell pounded a hard slider by Texas' wily Ferguson Jenkins deep into the right-center field bullpen to break a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning and Milwaukee went on to snap a four-game losing streak.

"You can't look for anything against Fergie," Howell said. "I played with him in Texas and I know how he pitches. He's always a half-inch on the inside or outside corner, changes speeds and stays ahead of the hitters. He can make you take a very comfortable 0-for-4."

"He got ahead of me, so I couldn't stand in and look for anything in particular," Howell added. "I saw the ball great off Fergie my first three times up, but I hit a little dribbler here and a weak one there. This time he tried to throw a hard slider by me, and I just reacted."

Mariners 8, Orioles 2
Julio Cruz's 32nd consecutive stolen base, tied Willie Wilson's American League record (Davey Lopes of Los Angeles owns the major league record of 38) and opened the door to a four-run first inning which propelled the Mariners past Baltimore.

Jeff Burroughs had bases-loaded singles in the first and seventh innings.
White Sox 3, Yankees 2
Steve Trout has not had the best of luck against the Yanks. Last year they beat him 3-1. And barely a week ago they beat him again, 2-0. "Every time I face them it's gone like that," he said — so the victory by the White Sox starter was particularly sweet.
"It's really nice to beat them. They're a great team... awesome from both sides of the plate. When you play good competition, it brings out the best in you."

For once, Doug Bird wasn't at his best. He lost his first major league game since Aug. 16, 1978. He'd won 12 in a row in that span.

Angels 8, Red Sox 2
Like the Mariners, the Angels locked up their game against Baltimore with a four-run first inning. Fred Lynn and Ed Ott hit run-scoring singles in the burst which made it easy for Ken Forsch to match Detroit's Jack Morris, Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela and Philadelphia's Steve Carlton as a nine-game winner, tops in the majors.

Forsch pitched an eight-hitter with his fourth straight complete game and eighth of the season.

Tigers 7, Twins 2
Tom Brookens' three-run homer in the sixth inning obliterated Minnesota's 2-1 lead and helped the Tigers win for the 10th time in 12 games.
"We hate to see things stop because we're on a little bit of a roll right now," he said of the strike threat. "We'll just have to sit back, wait and hope they settle."
"It couldn't come at a worse time for us because we're playing so well," added Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson. "But I don't worry about it because it's out of my hands. I don't run nothing."

WINTERVILLE — Sherwood Wilder tossed a four-hitter at Sunshine Garden Center last night for Edwards Auto, as the latter gained a 7-3 Winterville League victory.
Wilder walked just one and struck out ten on the way to the victory. He also helped lead the hitting, getting two, one of them a triple. Kyle Loveless also had two, one a triple, while Paul Hollingsworth, Mitchell Phillips and Brian Bullock each had two singles.
Derrick Credle had a triple to highlight the Sunshine hitting.
Edwards is now 8-1 on the year, while Sunshine is 5-7.

WINTERVILLE — Bronswell Patrick of Pizza Inn hurled a no-hitter at Aldridge and Southerland in the Winterville League yesterday, 16-0.
Patrick, in getting the gem, walked seven and struck out 11. He also batted out two hits, one of them a triple. Arnie Anderson also had two, one a triple, while Tim O'Shea had two, one a double, and Tommy Jones added a double for Pizza Inn.
Pizza Inn remains unbeaten at 9-0, while Aldridge & Southerland is now 2-7.

Sr. Babe Ruth
Greene Central 8
Kiwanis 4
Greene Central picked up an 8-4 victory over the University Kiwanis in the Senior Babe Ruth League last night.
Greene Central scored three times in the first inning and added a fourth run in the second. The Kiwanis rallied for two runs in the third, but Greene Central clinched it with two more in the fifth.
In the fifth, John Mayo led off with a walk, stole second and took third on an error on the play. He scored on a passed ball. Richie Chase then reached, stole second and scored on a hit by Chip Barnes.
Greene added one more in the sixth, while the Kiwanis picked up two more in the seventh.

Winterville 14
Ayden-Grifton 4
AYDEN — Roy Lassiter

scattered four hits as he hurled Winterville to a 14-4 Senior Babe Ruth League victory last night.
Lassiter struck out six and walked an equal number in gaining the win.
Jeff Cox led the Winterville hitting with three in as many trips, while Dixon Page was two-for-two, with a double, and Sammy Tucker was two-for-three. No one had more than one hit for Ayden-Grifton.
Winterville is now 1-4 while Ayden-Grifton is 1-1.

Prep League
True Value 16
1st State Bank 12
True Value outlasted First State Bank and claimed a 16-12 victory in the Greenville Prep League last night.
True Value scored its first run in the first, but the Bankers matched that in their half of the inning. First State then scored two more in the second. True Value came back with four in the third, only to see the Bankers rally for five in their half of the frame, taking an 8-5 lead. True Value got one in the fourth, then scored seven in the fifth to take the lead for good.
Erving Best led off the fifth for True Value with a triple, scoring on a passed ball. Tyrone Jones singled and stole second, scoring when Robby Erhman reached on an error. Erhman was then thrown out moving up. Paul Sullivan walked and Jim Hall cracked a two-run homer. Steve Iaboni and Robert Joyner reached on fielder's choices and George Saad walked, loading the bases. Best, back up, tripled again, scoring all three runners.
True Value added three more in the seventh, while First State Bank picked up one in the bottom of the fifth and three in the sixth.
Best led the True Value hitting with three, while Jones had two. James Matthews led the Bankers with three, while Robert Evans and Robert Formville each had two.

Heavy-Duty Weigh-In

Holmes Puts Title On The Line Against Spinks In Detroit Battle

DETROIT (AP) — Three years and three days after he won the title, Larry Holmes defends his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship against Leon Spinks tonight.
Holmes will carry a 12-pound weight advantage, 212½ to 200½, for ex-champ Spinks, into the ring at Joe Louis Arena when he makes his 10th defense of boxing's most glamorous crown.
Also on the card are a WBC super lightweight defense by Saoul Mamby against Jo Kimpuani, and a pair of heavyweight bouts with undefeated Michael Dokes facing Briton John L. Gardner, the European champion, and Greg Page, also unbeaten, going against Alfredo Evangelista of Spain.

The Dokes-Gardner fight and the main event between Holmes and Spinks will be shown by ABC-TV, beginning at 9 p.m. EDT.
Holmes, 31, has won all 37 of his career fights, 27 of them by knockouts. Eight of those KOs came in successive title defenses after he outpointed Ken Norton for the crown June 9, 1978. His ninth and most recent defense was a 15-round decision over Trevor Berbick last April 11 at Las Vegas.

Before the Berbick fight, Holmes stopped Muhammad Ali, the same man Spinks beat in a stunning upset to win the universal heavyweight crown Feb. 15, 1978. Spinks, 27, was stripped of the WBC share of the crown because he refused to fight Norton, choosing instead to give Ali a rematch.
Norton was awarded the WBC crown and then lost it to Holmes in his first defense. Meanwhile, exactly seven months after he had beaten Ali, Spinks returned the World Boxing Association version of the crown to Ali on a 15-round decision that greased the skids for the ex-Olympic champion.

Spinks fought only once in 1979, suffering an embarrassing first round knockout against Gerrie Coetzee in Monte Carlo. But in 1980, he knocked out Evangelista, fought a 10-round draw with Eddie "Animal" Lopez, and stopped Kevin Isaac and Bernardo Mercado. The ninth-round knockout of Mercado came on the undercard of the Holmes-Ali fight in Las Vegas, Nev., and positioned Spinks for another shot at the crown.

"My head is on straight," said Spinks, who has had his share of ups and downs since the glory of the 1976 Montreal Olympics, where he won the light-heavyweight gold medal. "I am ready for my best fight."

So is Holmes. The champion seems in superb condition under the firm training hand of Eddie Futch, who handled ex-champ Joe Frazier. Futch replaced Richie Giachetti as Holmes' trainer before the Berbick bout, a fight which ended the champion's string of knockouts.

"I didn't think the man (Berbick) was as tough as he turned out to be," Holmes said. "He gave me a great fight."

Holmes brings a healthy respect for Spinks into the ring tonight. "I've had no trouble getting up for this one," he said. "Leon is a lot better than a lot of other opponents I've had."

That list would include people like Evangelista, Osvaldo Ocasio, Lorenzo Zanon, Leroy Jones and Scott LeDoux, all title challengers who were kayoed in eight rounds or less by the champion.

Spinks says his strategy will be to stick close to Holmes, "like a wet T-shirt."
"If I stay away from him, I'm gonna get hurt," Spinks said. "He's a boxer and I'm a puncher."

Holmes will try to keep off the ropes, preferring to fight in the middle of the ring, where he can utilize his advantage in size and reach.

Mamby, who celebrated his 34th birthday eight days ago, will be defending his 140-pound title for the third time. He won the crown from Kim Sang-Hyon Feb. 23, 1980 and defended against Ezeban De-Jesus and Termitte Watkins last year. He carries a 29-12-5 lifetime record into the ring against the 31-year-old Kimpuani, a native of Zaire, who is 56-2 for his career.

The undercard includes important fights for a pair of unbeaten young heavyweights. Dokes, 20-0-1 with 10 knockouts, faces Gardner, 33-2 with 28 knockouts, and Page, 15-0 with 14 knockouts, takes on Evangelista, 40-5-3.

Gardner had been prominently mentioned as a possible opponent for Ali after last year's Holmes fight. But the would-be promoter for that comeback attempt was Harold Smith, or Ross Fields, who saw his boxing empire fall apart amid charges of a massive bank fraud in California.

Gardner will be making his American debut.

Evangelista has fought most of the best-known heavyweights including Ali and both of tonight's title opponents, Holmes and Spinks.

Also on the program is a 10-round middleweight fight between Dwight Davison of Detroit and Mel Dennis of Houston.

Mets Fans Still Cheer For Tom Terrific

By The Associated Press

It's been four years since Tom Seaver pitched for the New York Mets — but Shea Stadium fans still rolled out the red carpet for the Cincinnati pitcher.

"They pull for their own ballclub, as they should," said Seaver, "but it's nice to hear them welcome me back."

Many of the New York fans stood and chanted "Seaver, Seaver, Seaver," and gave him even more of an ovation when they felt the Mets' cause was lost Thursday night.

As it turned out, it was. They dropped a 5-2 decision behind Seaver's masterful six-hitter.

"The fans realized the Mets were not going to win, so they cheered for the second best thing," Seaver said.

Seaver's victory was his sixth straight this year and gave him a 7-1 record, his only loss coming April 18 against St. Louis. He struck out seven, and with the victory passed Bob Gibson for 30th on the all-time victory list with his 252nd triumph.

Seaver was perhaps the Mets' most beloved player when traded to the Reds on June 15, 1977 in a multiple-player trade involving Pat Zachry, ironically the Mets' losing pitcher Thursday night.

George Foster provided the offensive punch for Cincinnati with a three-run homer in the sixth inning that snapped a 2-2 tie. The homer, his 14th, followed three strikeouts, and Foster joked afterward that perhaps he had jumped the gun on Marvin Miller, head of the Major League Players Association, which was ready to strike against the owners today.

"I think maybe I was striking too soon, even before Marvin gave us notice," Foster said.

Cardinals 2, Dodgers 1
George Hendrick circled the bases for an inside-the-park home run with a teammate aboard in the first inning, giving St. Louis a close victory over Los Angeles and rookie pitching sensation Fernando Valenzuela.

Valenzuela, 24, suffered his fourth setback in his last six starts, despite yielding only three St. Louis hits, before departing for a pinch-hitter in the eighth.

The 20-year-old Dodgers hurler fanned nine and served up one of his three walks to Keith Hernandez with two out in the Cardinals' first.

Hendrick then dropped a hit in front of Los Angeles right fielder Pedro Guerrero on a 1-1 count. When Guerrero tried for a shoestring catch, the ball skipped past him and rolled to the wall.

Expos 7, Braves 0
Gary Carter, Warren Cromartie and Andre Dawson

each drove in two runs to back the seven-hit pitching of Steve Rogers as Montreal beat Atlanta.

Rogers, 24, who has won five straight games against the Braves dating back to August 1977, walked two and struck out one. It was his third complete game and first shutout of the season.

Atlanta starter Tommy Boggs, 1-10, who has been the victim of six shutouts this season, lost his ninth straight game.

"After the hassles of the last two or three weeks it was a relief just to go out and pitch," said Rogers, referring to the recent battle between the players' association and baseball management.

Cubs 6, Giants 1

Ken Reitz' two-run double capped a four-run first inning and Jody Davis hit his first major league homer to lead Chicago past San Francisco and provide the suddenly-alive Cubs with a three-game sweep of their series.

The triumph was the fifth in the last six games for the Cubs, who knocked loser Tom Griffin, 4-5, from the game in the first inning. Randy Martinez, 3-5, was the winner, allowing five hits in the seven innings he worked.

Davis, drafted out of the St. Louis Cardinal system last winter, said he "was mad" when he hit his first major league homer. "I had made two outs and decided to be aggressive."

Beacham In Putting Win

The rough was up and there was the wind. It made it difficult to play really well," Cadle said.

And he didn't really expect to play well himself.

"I was just trying to make some pars," he said. "It surprised me. It could have been 80 just as easy."

"I had it two over after seven holes and I figured it was going to be another 74 or 75 day. Then I started making some putts on the back. That's the difference."

He played his back in 5-under-par 31, dropped a couple of 15-footers, had two more birdies from the 6-8 foot range and stroked a 7-iron to within tap-in distance.

Robert Beacham shot an 11-under-par 61 to capture the Thursday Night Amateur Tournament at the local Putt-Putt golf course.

After the opening round, six players were within two strokes of the lead but Beacham was able to pull away in for a two-stroke victory over Jock Squires, who finished with a 63.

Smoky Norris was third birdies from the 6-8 foot range and stroked a 7-iron to within tap-in distance.

Rose Wants Hit, But He Backs Players Strike

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pete Rose, who needs only one more hit to break Stan Musial's National League career hit record of 3,630, is continuing his positive thinking in the face of a possible baseball strike.

The 40-year-old Rose tied Musial's mark with a first-inning single Wednesday night against the Houston Astros. Then he struck out the next three times at bat.

The Major League Players Association and the major league club owners are embroiled in a labor dispute over compensation for the loss of a free agent.

The players actually went on strike early today, but the walkout was expected to have little effect until game time this afternoon. And, with more negotiations scheduled today, there was still a possibility of a settlement.

The Phillies were off Thursday, and were scheduled to open a three-game series tonight against the Atlanta Braves.

Although the strike threat caught him at a bad time, Rose makes it clear he's 100 percent behind the players' association.

"I can't put myself ahead of 650 guys, including myself," he explained. "But I have to believe there will be baseball some time this summer."

Rose said that as far as the record is concerned, "I'm not on any timetable. I'll get one more hit, won't I?"

Rose, who traveled to the Atlantic City, N.J., area Thursday to promote a bank and autograph copies of a book on the 1980 world champion Phillies, insisted he didn't believe the strike would materialize.

"Hell, I've known this could happen for a week and a half," Rose said. "I just don't think there's going to be one. I'm optimistic. I've always been an

Threatens Valenzuela

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Authorities have confirmed the presence of extra security at Busch Stadium following a threat on the life of star Los Angeles Dodgers rookie pitcher Fernando Valenzuela.

Notification of the threat was received Thursday by police from the FBI, authorities said. The threat, according to a reporter accompanying the National League team, was received Wednesday.

Valenzuela, who earlier this year tied a major league mark for most victories by a rookie at the start of a season, pitched Thursday night against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Following the contest, he was questioned during an interview session by Mark Heiser, a Los Angeles Times reporter. "It is not true," Valenzuela told Heiser. "I don't know where you are getting your information."

Despite Valenzuela's denial, stadium usher John Stanton confirmed the presence of two FBI agents in the pressbox both Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Supervisory special FBI agent John J. Heidtke said he could "neither confirm or deny the veracity of the story that appeared in the West Coast (Times) newspaper. I am aware of the thing that appeared," Heidtke said.

A Dodgers spokesman, Toby Zwickel of the team's publicity staff, said, "The policy of the ballclub at this time is we have no comment."

Illini Back In Meet With Duke

CHICAGO (AP) — University of Illinois quarterback Dave Wilson said he asked for a "last-ditch" meeting with the commissioner of the Big Ten Conference because he was "tired of all this court stuff" and wanted to persuade the league to allow him to play football at Illinois this fall.

Wilson and commissioner Wayne Duke met last week at the O'Hare Hilton Hotel.

"We just talked about the possibility of my playing next year," said Wilson, whose lawsuit against the conference seeking eligibility for the 1981 season is

Pay-TV Offer Made Writers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Negotiators are making progress on writers' compensation for pay-television, the central issue in a two-month strike by the Writers Guild against television and film producers, a union spokesman says.

Negotiations between the Writers Guild and producers producers were to resume today.

When the talks broke off late Thursday night, Melville Shavelson, president of the West Coast unit of the Writers Guild, indicated progress had been made on the pay-television question, which has become the central issue of the strike.

Two other issues, however, also must be worked out before ending the strike, which began April 11. Negotiators must settle the question of minimum compensation for scripts and the effective date of the new contract. The writers want it to be retroactive to last February, when the old contract expired.

Both sides have refused to comment on details of the producers' pay-TV offer, which was made Thursday. But the Los Angeles Times today quoted sources close to the negotiators as saying the offer was similar to the concept previously proposed by the screenwriters.

The writers have asked for 4.5 percent of the sales after producers recoup certain costs, amounting to $1 million per hour of broadcasting. The producers previously had insisted that a made-for-pay-TV program be broadcast 10 days within a year on each pay-TV system before payments to writers were triggered.

Said Interview Very Difficult

NEW YORK (AP) — Interviewing convicted mass murderer Charles Manson was "terribly difficult," says Tom Snyder, host of NBC's "Tomorrow Coast to Coast." Snyder said he had to keep steering Manson back to the subject of the killings he was convicted of ordering.

In the interview, to be broadcast early Saturday, Snyder asked Manson whether he had ordered the killings, and Manson repeatedly wandered from the subject, finally dismissing the question by saying that asking anybody killed is "like asking Jesse James, 'Did you shoot somebody?'"

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS devotes an extraordinary five hours of prime time, an hour at a clip on consecutive nights, to a documentary project called "The Defense of the United States."

The series, nine months in production, considers the prospect of survival in the nuclear age — a question made even more timely by the raid by Israeli jets this week on the nuclear facility under construction in Iraq.

Dan Rather anchors the series, 10-11 EDT each night, Sunday through Thursday, with Walter Cronkite, Bob Schieffer, Harry Reasoner, Ed Bradley and Richard Threlkeld the principal reporters.

Howard Stringer, executive producer of "CBS Reports" who coordinated the series, credits his boss, Bill Leonard, CBS News' president, with the idea for the project.

"Any time you try to cover something like defense in an hour or two," Stringer says, "it might look good in script form, but once it's on film, the audience can't figure out what it's all about."

"It's such a complex subject," he says, "you're constantly jumping from one spokesman to another, and it all becomes meaningless after a while."

"I think the series will demonstrate," Stringer says, "that there's no substitute for good, sound journalism. We haven't cut interviews to eight seconds, and we've done nothing to dazzle it up."

"It may be interesting, but it's serious, first and foremost."

Says Leonard: "Since we began this project, the issue has become even more critical. The arms limitation talks have broken down, and the new Reagan administration has pledged to spend $1.3 trillion on defense over the next five years."

The premiere segment, "Ground Zero," considers, among other things, Soviet nuclear capability, and depicts, in rather graphic detail, what would happen if a 15-megaton bomb hit Strategic Air Command headquarters near Omaha, Neb.

"It's very serious," Stringer says of "Ground Zero." "I don't know if people will want to sit through the necessary information to get to that dramatic conclusion. We could have put the bomb at the beginning, but it belongs at the end of the hour."

"We haven't done what another well-known network might do, say, 'Stay tuned — in a minute, the bomb."

The series continues Monday night with "The Nuclear Battlefield," on the possibility of nuclear war in Europe. Part III is "Call to Arms," an examination of the strength of America's conventional forces, and Part IV, "The War Machine," considers the military-industrial complex and its role in the country's defense.

The series concludes Thursday night with "The Russians," a segment on the Soviet military — Cronkite's first major report since stepping down in March as "Evening News" anchorman.

Stringer says the producers of the individual segments sought in each instance to speak with the players in the nuclear game.

"We decided at the start not to go to the think-tanks," he says. "Most of the people in this are the participants."

There may be another, more far-reaching significance in the five-hour series.

"It's been a liberating experience," says Stringer of the project. "When Bill Leonard commits five hours to something like this, you know damn well the commitment is to produce something of quality."

The project was particularly important to Stringer, in light of a trend in TV news not long ago away from the long-form documentary.

"I think it's clear," he says, "that there's a new value on non-fiction television, there's a pendulum swing back toward journalism."

"We did the magazine stuff," Stringer says, "but we also had things like 'Boat People' and 'Teddy' that did very well to keep us in the longer form. If this means it's turned around now, I think we'll all be very happy."

"Last year was my worst in this business," he says. "There was the election — we lost time there — and unless you really keep a documentary unit busy, everybody tends to get lethargic."

He says there are documentaries in the works on teen-agers and guns and on the Texas Legislature, "and an investigative piece I can't talk about. It's going to tear the lid off of one aspect of our society."

American Dancers Vie In Soviet Ballet Event

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Thirteen Americans are vying against the Soviet Union's best dancers at the prestigious Moscow International Ballet Competition, which opens today.

Soviet ballerina Nina Ananiashvili, a Bolshoi Ballet trainee, and Andris Liepa, 19-year-old son of famed Bolshoi dancer Maris Liepa, have already been tipped as the favorites to win gold medals in the two-week competition.

There are 103 competitors from 23 nations, and 23 other dancers who are not in the running for medals. The Russians with 16 entries have the largest team, followed by the 13 Americans.

The U.S. dancers are hoping to take home at least one medal in the classical ballet event, which is being staged for the fourth time since 1969 at the famed Bolshoi Theater.

"Americans have failed to win any top awards in the previous three Moscow competitions, but we have hopes of doing well this time," said U.S. team chief Randolph Swartz of Philadelphia, Pa.

Most of the 34 jury members are from Soviet-bloc nations, including 10 from the host country, and this could give Russian dancers an advantage, Swartz said.

"There is only one American on the judging panel, so we have to be realistic about our chances," he said. The U.S. judge is ballet impresario Robert Joffrey.

Seven of the U.S. dancers are getting full or partial expenses for the Moscow event after being rated the top prospects among 60 hopefuls who auditioned in six American cities last spring.

Four other Americans paid their own expenses to come to Moscow for the June 12-26 competition.

Joanna Berman, a young soloist from San Rafael, Calif., duet dancer Amanda McKerrrow of Washington, D.C., and male soloist Nicholas Pacana of Boston are considered top U.S. entrants on the basis of the auditions.

Miss McKerrrow's partner, Simon Dow of Washington, D.C., is not dancing for a competition award.

Miss Berman, a 15-year-old, is one of the youngest entrants in the competition. She is dancing in the "young group," for entrants aged up to 19, as is the McKerrrow-Dow duo.

Sec. Haig Rests In Hong Kong Before Planned Trip To China

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
HONG KONG (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. arrived in Hong Kong today for two days of rest and preparation for his visit to China.

Peking greeted Haig's arrival in Asia with escalation of its propaganda campaign against U.S. arms sales to the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan. Senior State Department officials sought to defuse the Chinese objections by signaling that they were prepared to talk about arms sales to the People's Republic of China also, but without any advance commitment to sell.

However, these officials do not believe China is in the market for any significant quantities of U.S. arms, especially since the government has just cut its defense spending 20 percent.

While the Chinese chafe over U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, they also complain they are being denied U.S. technology they need for their economic modernization program.

One official told reporters traveling with Haig it is a "national disgrace" that the U.S. government has failed to approved China's request for a group of computers to use in its 1982 census.

The sale is subject to government approval because the computers might have military applications. The Reagan administration announced last week it was relaxing restraints on exports of such "dual use" technology to China, but the sale of the census computers is still delayed.

The official, who did not want to be identified, said China's complaint that it is being treated like the Soviet Union for trade purposes is legitimate. He said bureaucratic bottlenecks were chiefly to blame.

The U.S. government is obligated by the Taiwan Relations Act of 1979 to sell the Nationalists the weapons necessary "to maintain a sufficient self-defense capability."

Sales of U.S. arms to Taiwan totaled between $700 million and $800 million a year during the past two years. However, officials have pointed to a recent slowing in these sales and hinted that the reduction could continue because lower tensions between China and Taiwan has reduced Taiwan's need for weapons.

"There's been some slowup, I think starting last August, on this subject," a senior official told reporters last week. "We're making assessments now on what the future will bring."

Taiwan's request for FX high-performance jet aircraft still is under review even though it was made a year ago to the Carter administration. Several State Department officials say the review may continue indefinitely, adding that such a sale would be "totally unacceptable" to China.

Haig flies to Peking on Sunday, spends three days there, then goes to the Philippines and New Zealand before returning to Washington on June 26.

Emerson Talks To Chapter

Chet Emerson, executive director of the Pitt County Boys' Club, was the speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Greenville Chapter of AARP Monday.

Emerson described the work and program of the Boys' Club and told some success stories among the boys. He stated there are 1,400 Boys' Clubs in the United States serving over a million boys. There are eight clubs in North Carolina. The Pitt County Club in Greenville has approximately 500 members. Donations for the Boys' Club were given by chapter members.

Lee Williams, president, welcomed visitors, Marie Jackson and Vance Perkins, and a new member, Anna Fernandez.

Certificates of appreciation for work in the Tax-Aide program which were awarded by the National NRTA-AARP Program Department, were presented to Lee Williams, Ropsy Baker, Polly Dail, Mary Robinette and Elizabeth Deal.

The next meeting will be at Abram's Restaurant at noon on July 13.

Petition Drive Planned Sat.

Members of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia will conduct a petition drive Saturday at the Carolina East Mall.

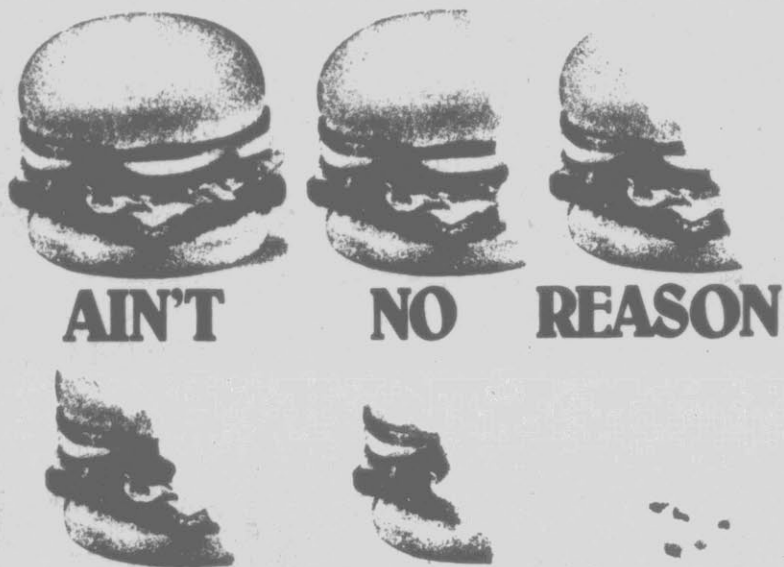

The organization is circulating petitions calling on the U.S. government to step up its efforts to account for nearly 1,400 American servicemen listed as missing in action in Southeast Asia and the 1,100 reported killed-body not recovered.

The petitions are to be presented to the Reagan administration July 17.

A booth will be set up at the community service desk in the mall. It will be open from 10 a.m. until 7 p.m.

Soviet Spy Ship Standing By For Trident's Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the first huge U.S. Trident missile-firing submarine begins its sea trials next week off the coast of New England, a Soviet spy ship will be nearby.

Meanwhile, the Russians have begun testing the first of their own new class of missile-firing submarines in the far north, according to U.S. intelligence sources.

The U.S. officials refused to say how they obtained their information on the Typhoon or the appearance of the Soviet AGI intelligence-gathering ship in the Atlantic off Groton, Conn., where the Trident subs are being built.

But both developments underscore the closeness with which the superpowers watch each other's progress toward a new generation of sea-based strategic weapons critical to the arms balance for the next quarter of a century.

The Trident class, the biggest U.S. submarines ever built, displace 18,700 tons submerged and will carry 24 deep-striking nuclear missiles with multiple warheads in their launch tubes.

The Soviet Typhoon-class is even bigger, described by Navy intelligence as displacing 25,000 tons underwater. Each Typhoon sub, it is expected, will be able to launch at least 20 advanced missiles with powerful multiple nuclear warheads.

The Navy has not yet announced the beginning of sea trials of the Ohio, the lead ship of the Trident class. The Russians, however, obviously had means of learning about this from sources available to them.

Officials said the Soviet intelligence-gathering ships could determine a variety of important performance information on the Trident after it leaves its berth at Groton, probably next Wednesday. Among other things, such a spy ship could determine the Trident's speed, underwater sound characteristics and other key data, sources said.

The Ohio is more than two years behind schedule and Navy officials hope it can be ready for use by the end of October, although some officials are concerned it may be later than that. Seven other Tridents are being built at the Groton yard of the General Dynamics Corp.'s Electric Boat Division.

The Soviets customarily station AGI intelligence-gathering ships off bases from which U.S. missile-firing submarines operate, such as Guam, Charleston, S.C., and Holy Loch, Scotland.

Naval intelligence has reported an expansion of Soviet spy ship operations in recent years. More than 50 AGIs are now operating worldwide. Although some masquerade as fishing trawlers, Navy intelligence officials said they are easily identified by their unusual electronic antennas.

Within the past two years, the Russians have sent to sea two new and larger types of intelligence-gathering ships, the 4,000-ton Primorye and the 5,000-ton Balzam.

The Primorye and Balzam are described by U.S. Navy officials as "intelligence factories," incorporating the most modern devices for collecting and processing data at sea.

Congressional District Reshuffle Begun Anew

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — House and Senate Congressional Redistricting committees scrapped their maps Thursday and started considering new ways to divide the districts.

In the House, a committee plan and a plan offered by Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, got no further than the discussion stage as Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Nash, moved that any action be delayed until Monday so he and Huskins could try and combine the two plans into one. The motion passed unanimously.

Meanwhile Senate Congressional Redistricting Committee Chairman Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, handed out blank maps and told the 11 legislators to draw up a plan by next Tuesday.

She said the panel will eliminate maps with the least support and appoint a subcommittee to prepare three final maps for consideration by the full committee.

The committee had submitted a map to the Senate, but legislators voted to return that map to committee for more work.

The Senate panel also reviewed the House subcommittee's proposed redistricting map, but many members said they did not like the plan.

"I am very much opposed to the House map," Sen. Bob Wynne, D-Wake, said. "It would take 45,000 people out of Wake. I think that would be very confusing. You get all kinds of confusion when you start crossing county lines."

Sen. Melvin Daniels, D-Pasquotank, called the House map "ridiculous" and said, "I hope no one takes a serious look at it."

Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, said he might have supported the House plan if it only divided two or three counties. But he said splitting up eight counties would be confusing and build opposition from voters in those areas.

Redistricting For N.C. Legislature Is Moving

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State House and Senate committees agreed Thursday on maps redrawing the state's legislative districts.

A map approved by the Senate panel would add two districts to the existing 27, while slightly revising several existing districts.

Meanwhile, the House panel approved a map that would take one representative from the Fifth District in the Northeast and give Mecklenburg County a ninth representative.

Little debate was generated by either plan, with the first map to be voted on by the House panel receiving immediate approval.

Democratic and Republican leaders said they were pleased with the Senate plan.

"I think it's a fair map," said Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham.

"It looks like a well-done effort to be fair to everybody involved," agreed Sen. Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, Senate minority leader.

Federal laws require that electoral districts be redrawn every 10 years. Federal standards also say a state senator should represent an average of 117,489 people each. The map approved by the Senate panel Thursday deviates almost 23 percent from that mark.

Redistricting experts have told legislators they could use discretion in reapportioning the districts, saying variances as high as 20 percent not uncommon in other states.

The proposed Senate map would split the Sixth District in half, pairing Edgecombe and Halifax as one district and Martin and Pitt as a second. Each new district would be given one senator rather than sharing two.

The Senate panel also voted to split the 15th District, now comprised of Ashe, Alleghany, Stokes, Surry, Rockingham and Caswell counties. Under the revised plan, Rockingham and Stokes would be paired while Surry, Alleghany and Ashe would join with Watauga to form another district. Both of those districts would have one senator each.

There would be few changes in the other districts.

In the House, Halifax County was moved from the Sixth District, which it shares with Martin County, and set off by itself.

Under the plan, Martin County would join the Fifth District — consisting now of Bertie, Gates, Hertford and Northampton counties. That district would lose one representative.

Mecklenburg County, which is alone in the 36th District, would pick up the extra representative.

The state has 44 House districts. Under federal law, there is to be one representative for each 48,954 residents. The map approved Thursday deviates from that goal by more than 23 percent.

The House plan would combine the 42nd and 43rd Districts, meaning Henderson County will join Buncombe and Transylvania counties in the 43rd District, with the combined representatives remaining the same.

Another change would come in the 21st District, now consisting of Hoke, Robeson and Scotland counties. Robeson County would become a separate district, receiving two of the 21st District's three representatives.

The plan would move Duplin County from the 10th District into the 11th District, joining Brunswick and Pender counties for a combined total of two representatives.

No vote is expected on House or Senate plans until next week.

Employment Is Concepts Topic

ECU News Bureau

Careers that offer the best opportunities for employment and pay is the topic for this week's "ECU Concepts" being aired Saturday, June 13 at 9:15 a.m. over WOOW radio.

Hosted by ECU Chancellor Thomas Brewer, the program features a discussion with Furney James, director of the East Carolina University Office of Career Planning and Placement. James' office maintains information about the job market and counsels students on how to obtain employment in their career fields.

"ECU Concepts" is a 15 minute weekly series for radio providing information on a wide range of subjects. Guests for the program include campus and community personalities and visiting celebrities.

Pioneer Leaving His Farm In Australia For Arizona Home

JOHN L. HAY, has just sold his farm in Australia's remote north west and is heading for home in Arizona after 18 years battling monsoon rains, heat and pink bollworm. (AP Laserphoto)

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer
KUNUNURRA, Australia (AP) — After 18 years battling heat, monsoon rains, the pink bollworm and the taxman, John L. Hay 3rd is leaving his farm in this outback frontier of Australia and heading home to Phoenix, Ariz.

"Hell, I'm not beaten. I made money. I've just retired," said Hay, who just turned 65 and sold his farm this week.

"We were the first generation of pioneers in this part of the world. It's the first generation of pioneers in any area that sets the stage for the second generation," he said.

Pioneer is a word they like in the Kimberleys, an area three times the size of England set in the northwest corner of Australia where salt water crocodiles infest the rivers, 30 species of snake inhabit the grasslands and the locals call it paradise.

"When I came here in 1963 the pub was in a quonset hut and there were 20 houses in Kununurra," Hay said. "Thirteen of us lived in one house built on stilts. My wife Carolyn used to cook the breakfast. Hell, we used to eat three pounds of bacon for breakfast."

Hay was one of six Americans and an equal number of Australians who took up irrigated government land at $3 an acre after the construction of the Ord River Dam, considered by many to be Australia's great white elephant.

The Ord River Dam created a huge 800 square-mile lake in the Kimberleys, 135 miles north of Perth. It was supposed to encourage settlement and irrigated farms in Australia's empty north.

Although only 435 miles south of the Indonesian island of Timor, the Kimberleys has remained a sparsely-populated, cattle-growing area since it was first settled by Europeans in 1882.

"It reminded me a lot of Arizona," said Hay, who had cotton farms there before deciding to move to the Australian frontier.

"When I first came here in 1963, it was your typical frontier. The town had a population of 300. Before I die — and that'll be 10 years — it'll be 3,000."

Hay got preference in the ballot for irrigated land because he had served as a pilot officer in the Royal Air Force in World War II.

"I flew Mitchell bombers for the RAF and when America came into the war I transferred to the U.S. Army Air Corps. I'd have preferred to have stayed with the RAF," he said.

"I came here because I'd heard it was very like the frontier America had been 100 years ago.

"It was bare land then. Only trees and the irrigation channel. Six of us cleared all 3,500 acres."

"In the late 1960s we were getting more cotton to the acre than we were in Arizona, and they were getting the highest yields in the United States," he said.

"But the aphids and the pink bollworm hit us. We sprayed 29 times in 30 days and still lost 20 percent of the crop."

What Hay didn't say was that the Ord had turned into an ecological disaster area. A friend of his, Henry Lyons who heads the Ord River project, described it this way:

"The cotton farmers were being eaten out by the pink bollworm. They learned that the only way to control the larvae was to spray it within two days of it hatching. So they sprayed every two days. This killed the larvae, but it also killed the wasp that ate the local caterpillar.

"The caterpillar was resistant to the spray, thrived without the wasp and ate the cotton. They also found that the bollworm was indigenous to the area because of native cotton trees. There was no

"Then they found that the deildrin spray had contaminated the town water and the deildrin count in the cattle going to the meat works was so high the government banned the slaughter of meat. It was a disaster."

But the Ord is getting back on its feet again, although the original pioneers like Hay are selling.

"In the past two years 80 percent of the farms have been sold to financially viable people who have the money and confidence to make the Ord a success," Hay said.

These include at least one Saudi Arabian.

"I'd say the Ord has long-range possibilities. You can't look for immediate profits next year. It's still cheap land at $200 an acre cleared with irrigation.

"I don't regret a year of it. If I had it to do over again, I'd do it."

The Ord is 185 miles south of Darwin, and 37 miles from Australia's Indian Ocean coast, has 500,000 acres below the Ord Dam available for cultivation. Only 24,000 acres are being cultivated at the moment.

The crops are now rice, sugar cane, sorghum, and sunflower instead of cotton, and the yields are extraordinary.

"The future here will be in sugar for ethanol or crystal," Hay predicted.

However, the future of the area, where monsoon rains flood the country for three months of the year, may not be in agriculture.

Camels Her Companions

By GENE SCHROEDER
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) —
What's a 27-year-old woman to do when she's bored with her life?

For Robyn Davidson, the answer was to take four camels and a dog on a 1,700-mile trek across the parched desert and aboriginal territory of her native Australia.

The journey, which took six months to complete, was undertaken partly as a gesture of independence. Ms.
Davidson says, adding she was wearied by "half-hearted and half-finished attempts at different jobs and various studies."

The one-time Queensland University student recently won the $3,000 Thomas Cook Travel Book Award for "Tracks," her earthy account of the 1977 adventure.

Why, of all things, did she choose to cross the outback wilderness, where awaiting her were such hazards as poisonous snakes, millipedes, scorpions, wild bull camels and camera-toting tourists?

As she explains it, she had a subconscious fascination with the desert and its symbols — "purity, fire, air, hot wind, space, sun" — plus a desire to get to know the aborigines directly rather than just through books.

Ms. Davidson is an outspoken feminist. But she denies her adventure was undertaken to prove anything about women.

Settling down for an interview, the "Camel Lady" pulled out a pouch of tobacco and rolled a cigarette. Occasionally, she sipped on a cup of tea.

The petite, soft-spoken woman says she had never seen a camel before she arrived in the small outback town of Alice Springs, where for two years she learned to train, saddle, feed, doctor and ride the long-necked animals that outweighed her by several hundred pounds.

"I'm addicted to them now," she confides, adding that with the exception of dogs "they are the most intelligent creatures I know — affectionate, hard-working, playful and witty."

Camels were first brought to Australia in the 1850s, according to Ms. Davidson, to carry supplies to remote railroad construction sites.
But most were turned loose
after the work was done.

10,000 roam wild through the countryside.

During her journey, Ms.
Davidson relates, she was forced to shoot and kill several wild bull camels which threatened to attack her and abduct her small entourage.
It was mating season.

Her staple diet for most of the trek, she says, was brown rice, lentils, pancakes made with various cereals, dried eggs, assorted root vegetables and an occasional rabbit cooked by campfire. Every so often she would open a can of sardines or a tin of fruit.

Vitamin pills also were on the menu.

In her book, Ms. Davidson recalls that before she got to Alice Springs she had "never held a hammer, never changed a light bulb, sewn a dress, mended a sock or used a screwdriver."

But with the help of friends she learned all that and much more, especially the care and feeding of aristocratic camels.

When she finally was ready to start the trip, Ms.
Davidson found herself short on funds for food and supplies. So she reluctantly agreed to write a story for National Geographic magazine for $4,000, with a photographer meeting her at sev-

Pilot Club Proffers Safety Tips

Margaret Register,
chairman of the Safety Committee of the Pilot Club of Greenville offers these safety tips for outdoor summer activities.

The quickest relief from the itching of poison ivy is a cool, wet compress or a paste of baking soda and water.
The affected area should be washed several times a day and calamine lotion should be applied.

According to Mrs. Register, sprinkling monosodium glutamate on a bee sting will relieve the swelling.

An injured swimmer should be kept afloat in the water until medical help can arrive; the water is a good splint. Mouth to mouth resuscitation can be administered while the victim is in the water. If a swimmer dives and strikes his head, he should be quickly removed from the water. Instead of dragging the injured swimmer, he should be placed on something rigid, such as a plank or a sur-fboard, in order to keep his head level with his body.

When there is lightning, stay away from electrical appliances, telephones, chimneys, the tops of hills, and isolated trees or other lone standing objects. Lightning victims should be given mouth to mouth resuscitation if breathing has stopped.

Additional tips for hot weather safety include: slow down in summer so the body will not overheat; wear clothing that is light in weight and color to reflect sunlight and help the body maintain its normal temperature; drink plenty of liquids; use suntan lotion and limit exposure to the sun at 30 minutes the first day, gradually building up to more time in the sun; and allow ten minutes of rest for every hour of hot weather activity.

Corporation Award Given

Lea Layne Hinson of Farmville Central High School has received a national scholastic award of merit for excellence in the social sciences.

Sponsored by Collins & Aikman Corporation, the award is presented to the graduating senior with the highest academic standing in the most number of social sciences courses. The award, which includes a certificate and $100 U.S. savings bond, was established in 1978 by the corporation at high schools serving its plant communities.

According to Donald F.
McCullough, C & A chief executive officer, they chose a student from the social sciences — economics, American history, political science, civics, and sociology, because "they are foundation stones for our American economic and social systems."

"Today's political and economic climate puts additional emphasis on the need for informed citizens — people who understand our system, how and why it operates and who are interested in keeping America a world leader," McCullough said.

WCLA FT H GCMHIA GHT IAM
MC KA ATLFHKWA

Yesterday's Cryptquip — GLAMOROUS GAL BID GRAND SLAM CONTRACT IN CLUBS.

Today's Cryptquip clue: H equals A

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 NT Pass 3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Ten of ♦.

There is much to be said for delaying a crucial decision as long as possible.
Not because it may go away—it won't. But you may, in the interim, learn something from the opponents' discards.

North-South arrived at three no trump in quick time.
North simply added his 10 points to his partner's announced 16 minimum, came up with the magic number of 26 and bid the game he thought his side could make.

West led the ten of clubs and declarer properly called for dummy's jack. West could have been leading from a combination that included the A-Q-10-9. East won the ace and returned the suit, and declarer wisely decided not to hold up—he felt he might need his low club later.
There were eight tricks on top. The ninth could be developed either through a 3-2 diamond break or a spade finesse, or an end play.

South cashed the ace and queen of diamonds and was disappointed when East failed to follow to the second round. Next came the king queen of hearts, and West had no difficulty in discarding a spade. Declarer was tempted to take the spade finesse, but he saw no harm in first cashing the ace of hearts. West was in obvious agony about finding a discard, and after much squirming he parted with a club.

The contract now became a laydown. Declarer cashed the king of diamonds and threw West in with a diamond. That defender still had two clubs to cash, but he was then forced to lead a spade away from the king into declarer's major tenace.

West should have foreseen this development. On the third heart he should have discarded the ten of spades as if he didn't have a care in the world. Declarer might have read the situation and dropped the now bare king of spades, but it is more likely that he would have finessed East, who was marked with spade length, for the king, or tried the same end play. In either case, he would have been defeated one trick.

Rural Fire Report Given

During May the rural fire departments in Pitt County answered 56 alarms with only 48 fires, according to Pitt County Fire Marshall
Bobby Joyner.

Fires calls involved the following: 17 houses, one house trailer, two buildings, 12 automobiles, five grass or wood fires, two false alarms, nine other and eight mutual aids.

There was $189,500 of property involved in fires.
Exposed to fire was $461,500 and $24,800 lost in fires.
Rural fire departments saved $626,200 in property while fighting fires.

The Bell Arthur, Simpson, Staton House and Winterville fire departments had the most fires with six.

FOCUS

The Second Man

Vice President George Bush celebrates his 57th birthday today. The Vice President's job is something of a paradox in American politics. It has often been scorned because it has so few official duties (the only official job under the Constitution is to preside over the Senate.) John Nance Garner, who held the office for two terms under Franklin Roosevelt, later said the job of Vice President "isn't worth a pitcher of warm spit." But few have ever turned the job down. Perhaps that's because of the 39 different men who have been President, 13 first served as Vice President. According to recent polls, Mr. Bush has an 80% approval rating among the American people. At the moment, that's higher than the President's rating.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the most recent Vice President to become President?

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An excellent day for you to accept an invitation to be with persons you feel comfortable with. You have much insight now so listen carefully to what they have to suggest.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A new acquaintance can be helpful to you now, so cultivate this relationship. Take better care of your health.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Listen to the voice of your intuition since it can be helpful in solving problems you may have. Relax at home tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Contact those with whom you want to reach a better accord and get the right results. Use your Gemini charm.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be sure of the motives behind any activities you engage in today. Make plans for improving your surroundings.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study new ways that could give you added income in the days ahead. Show increased devotion to family members.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to discuss mutual aims with close ties. Use more diplomacy and increase harmony at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day to visit persons who can give you ideas to become more successful. Allow time to engage in favorite hobby.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good day to make long-range plans that could give you more abundance in the future. Follow the advice of an expert.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go to friends who can give you ideas on how to acquire more of the world's goods. And you can help them with their aims.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Analyze your present position and make sure you know how to progress in the future. Study details of a new venture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Being your own gregarious self is wise today. Attend a group meeting and, have a delightful time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Show your talents to influential persons and gain their backing. Avoid one who is jealous of you and could do you harm.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY — he or she will have a strong desire to get ahead from the earliest age, so be sure to provide with a good education. You could easily have a famous person here. Any bluntness should be curbed early. A fine person in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Brady Named Body President

Don Brady of Wendell, formerly of Greenville, was recently elected president of the Jaycee International Senators of North Carolina.

Brady is a former president of the Greenville Jaycees and past recipient of the local chapter's Distinguished Service Award.

Hal Smith of Greenville was elected as a director of the state organization, composed of Jaycees who have received J.C.I. Senatorships, the highest award given by the Jaycees.

Other officers elected included Harold Garner of Garner, vice president; Jim Shackelford, Archdale, treasurer; Randy Croft, Brunswick County, secretary; and Lamar Willis, Dallas, director.

There are some 450 J.C.I. Senators in the state; it was pointed out, with only one out of every 1,000 Jaycees earning the award.
