Gas Kills Rescuers Trying To Save Boy

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — When the call first came, it sounded like a routine rescue. A young boy had fallen into an abandoned septic tank and needed help getting out. But no one knew that grass clippings tossed into the underground tank for years were giving off methane gas, making the tank a death chamber that would kill three rescue workers, injure three others and leave 8-year-old Benjamin Walker in critical condition.

It was after one paramedic went underground Saturday and didn't come out that the confusion began.

"At that point, we all assumed something was drastically wrong," said Joseph D. Giordano, chief of the Wheatland Volunteer Fire Company, one of 100 rescue workers at the scene.

Bruce Ditlow, 24, was the first medic to enter the 12-foot-deep tank to try to rescue the boy, who had slipped into the 14-inch opening to retrieve a lawn-mower bag he accidentally dropped in.

"He (Ditlow) said, 'It's a little stuffy in here.' And that's the last thing he ever said," recalled Ken Culton, a medic with the emergency crew at St. Joseph's Hospital, where the boy's father, John, is a doctor.

A second medic, Kevin Weatherlow, 22, was at the top.

"Weatherlow and Ditlow went to high school together, they co-captained the wrestling team, hunted and fished together. Bruce had served as Kevin's best man at his wedding," said Culton. "Kevin freaked out when he realized Bruce was down there unconscious."

Culton said Weatherlow took an air pack and wiggled down the chute leading to the circular tank, tied a rope around the boy and then apparently took off the mask to use it to revive his friend. He was overcome almost instantly. Rescuers found the mask a few feet from Ditlow's face.

The boy, who by then had been in the tank for about 25 minutes, was pulled to safety and rushed to St. Joe's. Two volunteer firemen next shimmied down the pipe.

Jeff Jones, 18, a member of the Bausman Fire Co., also collapsed and later died. His comrade, Mark Rhinier managed to scramble back out.

As rescue workers used sledgehammers to slam away at the foot-thick tank walls, compressed air was shot into the chamber.

Jones, Weatherlow and Ditlow were brought out, but efforts to revive them failed. Other rescue workers said they apparently fell into areas with the heaviest concentrations of methane.

The boy was in critical condition Sunday night, and hospital and rescue workers said there was a possibility of permanent disability from the effects of the gas.

Rhinier and two others rescue workers were in fair condition Sunday night, being treated for inhalation of fumes.

N.C. Peat Plant Backers Include Former CIA Head

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Central Intelligence Agency Director William J. Casey and four other former officials in the Gerald Ford administration are among investors backing a $250 million peat-to-methanol plant to be built in northeastern North Carolina. The plant, announced Wednesday by Gov. Jim Hunt and officials of Peat Methanol Associates, would be the world's first commercial facility designed to convert peat into methanol, a liquid fuel that can replace or stretch domestic gasoline supplies. It is to be built near Creswell in Washington County on land owned by First Colony Farms.

Also among the investors is former trucking magnate Malcolm P. McLean, now of New York City. He is the former owner of McLean Trucking Co. of Winston-Salem and Sea-Land Shipping Co., now a subsidiary of R.J. Reynolds. At one time, he was a major stockholder and director of Reynolds. But the driving force behind the venture is PMA, of Santa Fe, N.M. PMA is a partnership of N.C. Synfuels Corp. (a subsidiary of Koppers Co. of Pittsburgh), Energy Transition Corp. and Jack B. Sunderland, a New York City investor.

Sunderland, like McLean, once headed a company that was acquired by R.J.

Reynolds. His American Independent Oil was bought by Reynolds in 1970 and Sunderland became vice president of the renamed subsidiary, Aminoil Inc. He resigned in 1977 and is now an independent investor.

Sunderland helped combine those forces with Energy Transition Corp., formed two years ago by five Ford administration officials after they lost their jobs to the Carter Democrats.

'Lost' In Census—5,000 People

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Lost, 5,000 people in Pitt County, most of them in Ayden and Ayden Township.

In a report to County Commissioners at that board's meeting this morning, County Planner Craig Smith told commissioners that efforts are being carried out to get a correction and update on the federal census figures for Pitt County.

Pointing out that a November, 1980 count gave the county's population at 88,500, Smith said later figures in April this year dropped the county to 83,500, a substantial loss of 5,000 county citizens.

Comparison studies have revealed that the principal area of loss is Ayden, a town of some 4,000 carried on federal reports as having a population of 184 people, with Ayden Township, which has a population of some 6,000, shown on census rolls with 1,200 people.

Smith said continuing active contacts were being maintained with the regional office in Charlotte as well as with the federal office in Washington, D.C., and that Congressman Walter Jones and other concerned officials are aware of the census error and are helping to get the figure updated.

Census figures are particularly important as they have a direct bearing on state and federal fund distributions in several areas.

Dick Flye, district commercial manager for Carolina Telephone, presented a 30-day toll summary calling study for all the exchanges in Pitt County. Noting that a usage percentage of 2.0 percent was the criteria for the company's consideration of offering an Extended Area Service (EAS) component to exchanges, Flye's report shows that three exchanges — Grifton-Ayden, Fountain-Greenville, and Grifton-Greenville have call rates that would justify the inclusion of these exchanges under the current expansion criteria.

Flye's recommendation, if adopted, would (based on a one-party phone line) result in monthly rate increases of 70 cents for Greenville customers; $1.95 for Fountain; $1.45 for Grifton; and 50 cents for Ayden.

Questioned by the board about a mail survey of all exchange customers in the county, Flye commented such a venture would cost the phone company about $20,000 and that the system of determination of usage based on the 30 day survey presented was a clear indication of possible interest for the extended service without having to resort to an expensive mail survey.

The commissioners are taking the phone company's recommendation under advisement.

In other matters, the commissioners:

— Approved a revised plan for Huntingridge Subdivision. County planner Smith told commissioners the plan, for 25 lots instead of the originally proposed 18 lots, meets conditions for water supply, street grading, and adequate funds in escrow.

— Tabled until further study and reports from fire departments involved in the area a request from Edgecombe County for financial assistance to the Conetoe Volunteer Fire Department.

— Tabled a request from Joe Jolly for commissioners to have Pitt County exempt from state law GS 912 until details can be determined on the meaning and provisions of the law. Jolly operates a pawn shop outside city limits, has a state license, a federal fire arms license, and is currently operating under a restraining order issued by a judge to the Pitt County Sheriff.

— Approved an increase from $175 to $200 monthly for the rent of a Police Information Network (PIN) terminal unit by the Sheriff's Department. It was noted this is the first increase in rental rates in several years. Rental rates are determined by the N.C. Dept. of Justice through PIN.

— Heard a request from Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger that the county and city governments leave volunteer rescue departments alone — to let them do their own financing, and to permit them to operate on a volunteer basis rather than have regulations requiring the hiring of emergency medical technicians. Persinger said his remarks, he believes, are shared by departments other than the one in Ayden. He asked commissioners to consider seeking input from all rescue departments before taking any action to establish further regulatory and financial arrangements.

Ordered Held Without Bond

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Marcus

Simon Sarjeant, an unemployed 17-year-old in a black sweatshirt and blue jeans, was ordered held without bail today on a charge of firing a blank pistol near Queen Elizabeth II.

In a one-minute arraignment hearing at the Bow Street Magistrates' Court, the tall, lean youth who qualified as a marksman in his school's Air Training Corps said nothing.

He stood in the dock with bowed head, flanked by two plainclothesmen, and did not acknowledge the presence in the courtroom of his mother, Shirley, or 18-year-old sister, Veronica.

Magistrate Evelyn Charles Russell ordered him held for another hearing on June 24, the usual procedure when the police investigation is still going on.

Sarjeant is charged under the 1842 Treason Act with "wilfully discharging at the person of Her Majesty the Queen a blank cartridge pistol with intent to alarm her." He could get seven years in prison.

He was arrested Saturday after six blanks were fired as the queen rode horseback from Buckingham Palace along the crowd-lined Mall to a Trooping of the Color ceremony at the Horse Guards' Parade.

The queen, who was taking part in her official birthday celebration, looked startled and her horse shied at the noise of the firing 10 feet away. Thousands of stunned spectators feared an assassination attempt. The queen was unharmed, calmed her horse and carried on with the parade as police grabbed Sarjeant.

The royal family carried on its public appearances as usual today despite the scare.

The queen, her husband Prince Philip, Prince Charles and Queen Mother Elizabeth were attending a service for the Knights of the Garter at Windsor Castle today, and the castle grounds were open to the public as usual. Officials at Windsor said thousands were expected to watch the royal party walk to St. George's Chapel.

Commencing Tuesday, the queen and other members of her family will be at Royal Ascot, one of the highlights of the British horse racing calendar.

Biggest Item In Family Budget: Government

(Second of Three Part Series)

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

In one lifetime, the cost of all government in the United States has become the biggest single item in our family budgets, more than housing, food or health care. Before World War II, the average man worked a month a year to pay for it; now it takes four months. Now it consumes a third of our Gross National Product. In 1929, it took a tenth.

Our federal income tax began in 1913 but it didn't begin to bite until Pearl Harbor.

It is in the nature of government measures to achieve immortality. Few die. Governments expand in war and contract slightly in peace. They never go back to their previous size. Peacetime emergencies also have a way of becoming permanent. The Rural Electrification Program was set up in 1935 to bring electricity to American farms. Today more than 99 percent of farms are electrified but the REA goes on, 740 people spending $29 million a year.

When we were kids, the word trillion seemed a made-up word, like zillion. Now it's for real. Last year, the federal government owed $914.3 billion. Next year it will owe $1.06 trillion. It is owed $176 billion in direct loans. It has also guaranteed loans for $253 billion. If Chrysler and the others default, the government debt would rise to nearly $1.5 trillion. Like the man said, it all mounts up.

If you would begin to visualize the physical presence of the government, you must brace yourself for more statistics. The government of the United States now owns 413,042 buildings in the 50 states and abroad, excluding military installations abroad. That cost nearly $107 billion. It also leases 227,594,942 square feet of space at an annual rental near $870 million. It owns 775,895,133 acres of land, one-third the land mass of the United States. Uncle is big in real estate.

The government of the United States is so big it takes more than 5,000 people and $210 million a year just to check part of its books. The government is the nation's largest user of energy — enough energy to heat 11 million homes. It owns 449,591 vehicles. It leases others.

More than the size of bureaucracy, Americans who complain about government complain they are up to their esophagus in indecipherable forms, choking red tape, maddening detail and over-zealous bureaucrats.

In Janesville, Wis., an inspector from the U.S. Department of Agriculture cites a small meat packing plant for allowing the grass to grow too high outside the plant. What, one cries to the heavens, does that have to do with the meat inside?

In New York, the president of Columbia University says that among the sums he must raise is $1 million a year for government paper work.

In Sheldon, Iowa (population 4,500), the mayor has to fill out 27 feet of government forms, in quadruplicate, every year, most of them concerning minority employment. Sheldon has no minorities.

In Cambridge, Mass., the president of Harvard says that the federal government, with the strings it attaches to federal funds, tries to decide "who may teach, what may be taught, how it should be taught, and who may be admitted to study."

In Hanover, Wis. (population 200), three men operate a small junkyard called Hanover Auto Salvage. One man is the owner but all three work 60 hours a week and all three draw equal amounts of income from the business every week. The Department of Labor says the two non-owners should be paid overtime. They did not ask for the overtime. Why, they ask, should they be paid more than the owner for the same work?

In New York, Mayor Ed Koch is told that unless he installs elevators for the handicapped in subway stations, he risks losing federal funds for mass transit. The elevator system would be so expensive, says Koch, it would mean that each subway ride by each handicapped person would cost the city $50. It would be cheaper to transport them by limousine or cab.

The men who created our government were suspicious of government. They feared any restrictions of individual liberty. They were more interested in preventing the accumulation of power than in promoting its efficient use.

Thus, they gave us a government of checks and balances and separation of powers in a design that built in tension, competition, even mutual suspicion between branches of government. It was not a blueprint for a smoothly coordinated team.

The federal government grew slowly in its first 150 years. The first federal regulation of the private sector came in 1863 with the creation of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency as part of the national banking system. In the next 40 years, only two regulatory agencies were added — the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Generally, the federal government remained aloof from most domestic affairs. Generally, it was a quiet time and presidents were not overworked.

If it were possible to chart the American dream, you would have a steadily climbing line from 1776 to 1860, a sharp drop for the Civil War and then again a rising line with minor dips, rising, rising, rising to a pinnacle in 1929. Then the wheels fell off.

Suddenly, 12 million Americans, one out of four of the country's breadwinners, were looking for jobs that didn't exist. More than 5,000 banks failed and 86,000 businesses went out of business and, in 1932 alone, 273,000 families were evicted from their homes.

Only the federal government had the resources to help and under Franklin Roosevelt it did. This was the watershed, the great turn in history in which laissez-faire died and the basic philosophy of American government was profoundly altered. The cartoons showed men leaning on shovels but it was the Work Progress Administration, or a form of it, that built 10 percent of the roads and bridges that connect it to the Florida mainland.

WPA built the Lincoln Tunnel between New York and New Jersey, the Camarillo Mental Hospital in California, the canals of San Antonio, the Fort Knox gold depository in Kentucky, Dealey Plaza in Dallas and Boulder Dam in the Colorado River.

EVANS STREET GARBAGE

I am concerned that some of the residents of Hopkins Park are putting out trash and garbage near Evans Street. Is there a plan to provide that apartment complex with dumpsters or could some restriction be placed on disposal?

Greenville Sanitation Supt. James Anderson said he would check the matter out. He said there is a city ordinance that forbids raw garbage being placed on the street or curb area; however, trash in the form of limbs, leaves and such debris can legally be left on road sides for pick-up. Garbage must be kept behind homes. In the event the department of sanitation receives a complaint Supt. Anderson said a warrant is issued and if the problem is not corrected after three warrants have been issued the offending party is taken to court.

The Department of Sanitation responded immediately to the complaint and checked the Hopkins Park area. Anderson said there was no evidence of a major problem, just general litter lying around. He suggested that perhaps the garbage problem was related to a clean-up residents of the area had held a while back. It may have been the garbage they collected.

LONELY HEARTS CLUB?

Is there a lonely hearts club in this area?

No, not by name; however Rev. Carol Goehring of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church has suggested a few alternatives for those who are lonely, single or just want some company and to have a pleasant time.

Jarvis offers two singles groups. One is for single parents and is just getting off the ground. Safari (single or alone for any reason included) is another alternative offered. The group is primarily an activities club and includes all ages and people from all walks of life. Cost is kept to a minimum. Rev. Goehring also suggested that Sunday school classes at any church are an excellent source of fellowship as well as church services. One need not be alone. For Jarvis activities information call 752-3101.

Other than church activities if someone wants something to do or is lonely they may contact Pitt Community College about continuing education classes (756-3130). Classes offered include music, art, weaving, and loads of other opportunities to have a fun educational time at low cost. Civic clubs are also excellent for communication.

Tobacco Study

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Tobacco Institute, citing what it calls a mathematical mistake, is taking issue with a study which concludes that wives of smokers are more likely to contract lung disease than wives of non-smokers.

The institute, a lobbying arm for the American tobacco industry, said Sunday that the biostatistician whose test was used in developing the study's conclusions had confirmed the mistake.

Dr. Takeshi Hirayama, the Japanese scientist who wrote the original study using the statistician's figures, was reported by his secretary to be traveling in Greece and unavailable for comment.

Hirayama, chief epidemiologist of the National Cancer Center Research Institute in Tokyo, studied 143,000 women and 122,000 men over a 14-year period beginning in 1965. The results were published last January in the British Medical Journal.

The report stated non-smoking women whose husbands smoked more than 20 cigarettes a day were found to have a 2.08 times as much risk of lung cancer as women whose husbands did not smoke.

Variables other than smoking — including alcohol consumption, occupation and marital status — and the ways they affect a person's health were factored into the study.

The Tobacco Institute said the error was found in an examination of the data by three statisticians. Among them was Nathan Mantel, a George Washington University biostatistician who developed the statistical test on which Hirayama based his conclusions.

Mantel said in a memo that, because of the error, it was not possible to draw the conclusion that wives of smoking husbands had a greater chance of developing lung cancer than the wives of nonsmokers.

The two other statisticians were Dr. Alan R. Feinstein of Yale University and Dr. Chris P. Tsokos of the University of South Florida.

Mantel, with whom the institute talked first, was paid a consultant's fee. But the two other statisticians were not, said William Kloepper Jr., spokesman for the institute.

Horace Kornegay, the Tobacco Institute's chairman, notified the Japanese cancer institute and the British Journal of the new calculations.

"Many persons have been unfortunately misled and unduly alarmed by the Hirayama study, and it has been used to support unnecessary limitations on individual liberties," Kornegay said in a telegram.

GREENVILLE ATHLETIC CLUB . . . will be housed in a new 20,544 square foot facility at 140 Oakmont Drive. Features will include racquetball, aerobex/free exercise, running track, Nautilus weight training room, nursery, restaurant, pro shop, and hot tubs-steamrooms-saunas.

Varied Facilities At Athletic Club

Greenville Athletic Club, a health-athletic-entertainment facility aimed at promoting and preserving fitness and physical well-being, will be opening at 140 Oakmont Drive, the owners announced.

The local facility, owned by John M. Kane and H. William Hull Jr., will be a membership organization, open seven days a week, for individuals and families interested in a variety of activities, it was pointed out.

Features of the new club, which will be housed in a 20,544 square foot structure, will include racquetball, eight courts with one "challenge" court on a reservation basis, aerobex, free exercise with classes offered day and night, Nautilus Fitness Center, weight training room, a health spa, offering hot tub, saunas and steam rooms with separate men's and women's facilities featuring locker space, carpeting, hair drying, vanities and individual showers for the ladies; a one-twelfth of a mile running track, nursery, restaurant, open daily from 5-7:30 p.m.; and pro shop, offering popular accessories.

Revival Set At Area Church

A revival will be held this week at Sycamore Chapel Church, Rt. 5, Greenville. Rev. W.H. Joyner will be the speaker of the week. Services will begin each night at 7:30.

Monday night, the Deacons and Trustees will be in charge of the service, and guests will be the Elm Grove Choir and congregation.

Tuesday night, the Mothers will be in charge, and St. Matthew's Choir and congregation will be attending.

The Senior Ushers will be in charge Wednesday night. St. John Traveling Choir and congregation will be the guests.

Thursday night, the Senior Choir will be in charge. Sugg Traveling Choir and Cedar Grove congregation will be present.

Friday night the Young Adults will be in charge of the service.

At 2:00 p.m. Sunday, Rev. W.J. Best and congregation from Sweet Hope will close out the quarterly meeting. Dinner will be served after the evening service. Rev. Walston, pastor, invites the public to attend the revival.

Jay-C-Ettes Have Meeting

The Greenville Jay-C-Ettes held their first meeting under their newly elected officers on June 10 at the Tar River Estates Club House. Cathy Brown was welcomed as a new member. Diane Myers presided at the meeting.

Susie Clark, former president, and Ludie Smith, former treasurer, gave their year-end reports. B.J. Cutrell was recognized at the Jay-C-Ette of the Year for 1980-81.

Committees and their members for the coming year were approved. Community service committees include: Boys Home, Christmas charity, Flynn home, hospital pledge, Jaycee building, Jaycee Co-op, pediatrics, R.E.A.P., and other Jaycee-assistance committees.

Plans for the Jaycee's Fourth of July celebration were discussed.

The club made plans to begin working on items to sell at the Fall bazaar which will help to raise money for several Christmas charities and other causes.

PTL's Jim Bakker At Odds With FCC

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—An investigation into PTL, a Charlotte-based evangelical TV ministry, by the Federal Communications Commission has escalated into an expensive and time-consuming clash between the FCC and PTL president Jim Bakker, the Charlotte Observer reported Sunday.

The newspaper quoted sources close to the investigation as saying that the probe has amassed evidence that PTL diverted or delayed spending hundreds of thousands of dollars contributed by viewers for foreign religious projects.

Bakker denies improperly using the money at issue and has accused the FCC of harassment. He contends that the investigation constitutes a violation of the separation of church and state guaranteed by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

FCC attorney Larry Bernstein said the commission has jurisdiction over PTL only because the ministry holds a federal license for TV station WJAN in Canton, Ohio.

But he said, "There is a federal statute that says nobody can fraudulently solicit funds over the air. It says nobody can do it. We want to make sure there has been no fraud. This is not a First Amendment question at all." The Observer said investigations revealed a discrepancy between sworn testimony by Bakker and other PTL officials concerning at least $337,000 raised for the overseas projects.

Church Plans A Revival

Holy revival services will be held this week at New Hope Fellowship Tabernacle Holiness Church in Parmele. The minister in charge of the revival is Elder Franklin Smith, pastor of Neighborhood Tabernacle Holiness Church, Chocowinity.

There will be a different choir each night. Monday the choir will be from Pcatolus Church on the Rock. Tuesday's choir will be New Hope Youth from Parmele. Wednesday the choir is from Rock Bottom Holiness Church, Winterville. The United House of Prayer, Bethel will provide the choir Thursday night. Friday's choir will be from the Neighborhood Tabernacle, Chocowinity.

Sunday School will be held Sunday at 10:30 and worship will begin at noon. Holy Communion will take place at 6:00 p.m. Pastor Elder B.R. Barnhill invites the public to attend.

Cars Collide At Intersection

Cars driven by James Earl Watson Jr. of Atlantic Beach, and Jeffery Leon Holloway of 1300 Battle St., collided about 2:10 a.m. Sunday at the intersection of Third and Tyson Streets.

Investigating officers estimated damage from the collision at $4,000 to the Watson car and $2,000 to the Holloway car.

Bakker has refused requests for interviews, his only comment about the investigation being, "The charges against me are trumped up. I am not a crook."

Chinese Diplomacy

One delicate diplomatic situation Secretary of State Haig faces during his current visit to China is the continuing rivalry between China and Taiwan for U.S. favors and recognition. President Reagan has worried Chinese leaders with his repeated pledges of support for Taiwan. Most recently, a White House aide declared that the Administration is committed to providing defensive arms supplies to Taiwan. Last March the Dutch government sold the Taiwanese $500 million worth of military supplies. Peking responded by expelling the Dutch ambassador. One Chinese official remarked, "If the U.S. is thinking of selling arms to Taiwan, American officials should consider the Dutch example."

Lost Feet Again

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Johnny Ward, the Savannah longshoreman whose feet were surgically reattached after they were torn off in a dockside accident, now has lost his feet a second time because of complications that set in after the surgery.

Doctors at Talmadge Memorial Hospital at the Medical College of Georgia amputated the 32-year-old Ward's infected and blood-starved right foot on Saturday, six days after similar problems had forced the amputation of his left foot.

"There just wasn't enough good tissue there to work with after they had done all they had to do," hospital spokesman Alex Vaughn said.

Dr. Terry Holdredge, a plastic surgeon involved in the case, said a low-grade infection in the right foot contributed to the decision to amputate the foot.

"It was a combination of blood supply and low-grade local infection that slowly did it in," Holdredge said. "What happens is when you have dead tissue it automatically and almost instantaneously gets a low-grade infection. The dead tissue is a good culture medium for bacteria. It wasn't out of control but it played a role."

Vaughn said that Ward took the second amputation well. "He's doing fine and his family's with him," Vaughn said. "They're discouraging visitors. I know they're disappointed. Everyone else is, too. Everyone was hoping the foot could be saved."

The accident that cost Ward his feet occurred May 26 when he was helping unload a ship at the Georgia Ports Authority dock in Savannah. A cable attached to a crane snapped and whipped towards him, witnesses said, and although he jumped to avoid the cable, it lashed around his legs, severing his feet just above the ankles.

The feet were rushed to the hospital in a salt solution and were reattached during a 12-hour operation involving four surgical teams.

Miss Nancy Barnhill Marries On Sunday

ROBERSONVILLE — Nancy Gertrude Barnhill and Edwin Burtis Aycock Jr. were united in marriage Sunday at three-thirty in the afternoon in the First Christian Church here. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. David Cox, pastor of the bride.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. James Elliott Barnhill and the late Mr. Barnhill. The bridegroom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Edwin Burtis Aycock of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was provided by Michael Regan, church organist.

The bride was escorted by her brother, James Elliott Barnhill. She wore a formal ivory floor length gown with a chapel length train of chiffonette and alencon lace etched with seed pearls. The fitted alencon lace bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline outlined with scalloped alencon lace etched with seed pearls and full length tapered sleeves adorned with alencon lace motif. Clusters of seed pearls encrusted the bodice. Alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls applied the skirt in a pyramid design ending with a scalloped lace hemline. The train was bordered with scalloped alencon lace. She chose an ivory waltz length veil of bridal illusion bordered with scalloped alencon lace flowing from a lace caplet.

Jeanne Roebuck of Chapel Hill, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Dr. Catherine Everett of New Bern and Mrs. John Liles of Swansboro. The attendants wore riveria blue silesta and chiffon full length gowns. The silesta tee-strapped bodice was topped with a chiffon coverlet accented with a peplum waist. Silk Venise lace outlined the jewel neckline and cap sleeves. The gathered silesta skirt was floor length. They carried nosegays of silk rose colored azaleas, daisies and freesia enhanced with ivory streamers. The maid of honor carried a nosegay spiked with royal blue daisies.

Susan Aycock, daughter of the bridegroom, carried a miniature silk nosegay matching the attendants with a matching headpiece.

The mother of the bride wore a coral formal dress of silk maricane knit over peau taffeta. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of mint green luster glo designed with an open split neckline. They each wore a silk rose corsage with gypsophilia.

The bridegroom's uncle, Howard Hodges, served as best man. Groomsmen were his brothers, Howard Aycock of Charlotte, Gordon Aycock of Winter Park, Fla. and William Brinson and Daniel McNally of Greenville.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Robersonville Country Club with Mrs. Wiley B. Rogerson and Mrs. Wilbur Ray Matthews as hostess and director. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Jim Roebuck and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Roberson, who directed guests to the refreshment table. Charles O. Jenkins served as director of the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pope, Mrs. Ellen Etheridge and Charles Campbell greeted guests at the register.

The couple was honored at several pre-bridal showers and parties prior to their wedding day.

The bride is employed as an assistant district attorney in the Third Judicial District. She received her undergraduate degree from Meredith College, Raleigh and her Juris Doctor degree from Wake Forest University School of Law, Winston-Salem, in 1977. The bridegroom has presided as a district court judge in the Third Judicial District since December, 1976. He attended

Dear Abby

Wedding Ushers In Monster

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Johnny and I have gone together for a year and four months and we are very much in love. I'm 20 and Johnny is 21. My problem is that Johnny's brother is getting married next month, and Johnny is in the wedding party and I'm not. I am really upset to think that Johnny is going to escort another girl to the wedding, walk her down the aisle, and be her date for the whole time. (He's an usher.)

I went to Johnny's brother and asked him to tell me every detail about what Johnny has to do with the bridesmaid he was assigned to — how long he has to be with her, etc. — and I was told not to worry. I'm invited to the wedding, but I don't even feel like going if I can't be with Johnny. My mother says I'm being foolish for making such a big deal out of it — that maybe Johnny's being in the wedding will make him want to get married.

Abby, I'm afraid I will bust out crying when I see Johnny with that other girl. Is it evil to be jealous? I can't help how I feel.

JEALOUS HEART

DEAR JEALOUS: Jealousy is a human emotion and we can't help how we feel, but we can help how we handle our feelings. Look at it this way:

Johnny agreed to be an usher at his brother's wedding. The duty of an usher is to escort a bridesmaid. Think of Johnny as an actor who is playing a role in a musical production. It's possible that the bridesmaid assigned to Johnny has a boyfriend who is as jealous as you are. If so, perhaps you two can sit together and console each other.

DEAR ABBY: I work in a small three-woman office and one of the women talks constantly. Every morning she gives us a play-by-play account of everything she, her husband, her son, her neighbors, etc., have done since the accounting given the day before.

According to her, her son is the best-looking, smartest, best-behaved, most accomplished kid in the world. Frankly, I could not care less. I also have children who are pretty special, but I don't talk about them all the time.

This is a small town and jobs are hard to come by, so I can't quit. Neither can I tell her to knock off the constant bragging without causing hard feelings. Please print this. Maybe she'll see it, and let up a little.

FED UP

DEAR FED UP: All right, here's your letter. And if she doesn't let up, send me her initials.

DEAR ABBY: I am 29 and a divorcee. I have a good figure and spend a lot of time at the beach in the summer. Last year I wore a bikini for the first time and got lots of compliments, but it also gave me a complex because several people asked me what was wrong with my navel.

I never paid much attention to navels before — mine or anybody else's, but now I am very self-conscious about mine. You see, it's not round like other people's, it's more square. And it doesn't go in like a dimple — it pops out! I keep a dime stuck in it to make it look "round" and to keep it from popping out.

Is there anything I can do about getting it fixed at my age? I'd like to have a navel I wouldn't have to be ashamed of.

FUNNY NAVEL

DEAR FUNNY: Take the dime out of your navel and call a plastic surgeon. He will round out a solution in no time.

...

CONFIDENTIAL TO NATHAN L. MALLISON: Thank you for "The Public Record" page — a publication that confused me with my twin sister. May I please know the name and address of this publication in order to set the record straight? And your address as well?

Knox-Croom Vows Said

FAYETTEVILLE — Elizabeth Dell Croom of Fayetteville and James Keith Knox of Greenville were united in marriage Sunday, June 7, at three-thirty in the afternoon at Peace Presbyterian Church here. The Rev. Thomas K. Spence officiated with the Rev. Leon E. Harris assisting.

The bride is the daughter of Lucille M. Croom of Fayetteville and the late William P. Croom. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Devenwood Knox of Robersonville.

Escorted to the altar by her brother, William Penn Croom of Wilmington and given in marriage by her mother, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train. The fitted bodice featured an illusion yoke with alencon lace detailed with seed pearls. The bishop sleeves and bodice were adorned with matching lace while chantilly lace bordered the hemline of the gown. The bride chose a layered chapel length veil edged chantilly lace matching the gown and was held in place by a coronet of white slipper satin. The bride wore an heirloom diamond and garnet necklace which had belonged to her paternal great aunt. She chose a colonial bouquet of white daisies with pale yellow pixie carnations and baby's breath laid on miniature magnolia leaves and graced with white lace streamers.

Diane Croom of Fayetteville, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Nelda Cartner Croom of Wilmington, sister of the bridegroom, Beverly Carde and Becky Dobrin Gilbert, both of Fayetteville.

Karen Joan Knox of Tarboro was flower girl. Stephen Randall Knox of Tarboro was ring bearer.

James Devenwood Knox was his son's best man. Hoke R. Knox of Tarboro, brother of the bridegroom, Grover McGlohon, Gary M. Best and James Woodward, all of Greenville, were ushers.

Mrs. Phyllis Melton, sister of the bridegroom presided at the guest register. The wedding was directed by Mrs. Brenda Spence.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride's mother entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. The guests were greeted by William Penn Croom, the bride's mother, the bride and bridegroom and his mother and father.

After the bridal couple had cut the first piece of cake, Mrs. Charles Rittenbury completed the serving. Punch was poured by Mrs. Daniel J. Dudley. Others assisting with the serving were Mrs. Lawrence Croom, aunt of the bride, who served at the children's reception table. Mrs. Emily Driggers and Mrs. Robert Miller assisted.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. Jean T. Hulon of Winterville and Mr. Woodrow Hulon of Tarboro announce the engagement of their daughter, Karen Kay, to Karl Gregory McDuffie, son of Mr. and Mrs. McDuffie of Rockwell. A June 28 wedding is planned.

Mrs. James Keith Knox

A rehearsal dinner was held for the bridal couple at the Rainbow Restaurant given by Mr. and Mrs. James D. Knox.

The mother of the bride entertained at a brunch on Sunday for the bridal party and out-of-town guests at her home in Fayetteville.

The bride attended Fayetteville City Schools and received her nursing degree at ECU. She is employed with Pitt Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom graduated from Robersonville High School and Pitt Community College. He is head of crime prevention for the Department of the Sheriff of Pitt County.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C. and Daytona Beach, Fla., the couple will live in Greenville.

Club Has Guest Speaker

Mrs. Betty Grosnickle of the Kitchen Cupboard spoke on home canning and freezing as she addressed the Wednesday luncheon meeting of the Welcome Wagon Club.

Several methods of canning were discussed, but Mrs. Grosnickle recommended pressure canning as the safest and most desirable.

"Pressure canners are expensive," said Mrs. Grosnickle. She suggested that as people pool their resources in other things, the cost of a pressure canner could be shared. She stressed the importance of care and sterilization. Various tips were given in regard to fruits and vegetables such as strawberries and pickles. "For good pickles, use only pickling cucumbers and fresh dill."

Other club business included the introduction of prospective members, Nancy B. Cobb, Pat Stewart and Shari Jenkins. Members contributed favorite recipes to be included in the club's forthcoming cookbook.

Next month's program will deal with gardening.

Talk On Flag Given

Lillian Earle Bradshaw gave the program at Withla Council No. 42, Degree of Pocahontas meeting Tuesday.

She gave the meaning of the flag and its origin and explained Flag Day proclaimed for June 14. The dates and president's displaying the flag as practiced by the states on occasions was part of the program.

Members participated in discussions of the flag. The members discussed a project in which Withla Council was involved in presenting certificates to Greenville residents for displaying the state flag on holidays as a goodwill project for members in the past years. The proper way to dispose of the flag by burial ceremony when the flag becomes soiled or damaged was discussed in the meeting.

Margaret Register recognized Pocahontas Pennie Dunn for being selected as "Mother-of-the-Year" for Carolina Today.

Estelle Tucker and Maycie Culbreth were meeting hostesses. Margaret Parker will present the program for the June 23 meeting. Marie Stocks will serve as hostess and will be assisted by Pocahontas Pennie Dunn and Marga Ross.

Demonstrate Needs

The Mayor's Advisory Committee's report demonstrated that the city has some crying needs that are simply going to have to be met in the next few years.

The committee recommended, for instance, that police vehicles should be increased to a level consistent with proper police protection. It was recommended that a new headquarters fire station be built within five years and the Brownlea Drive station be replaced within ten years. Additional space was recommended for the police department, an increase in the staff of Sheppard Library, increases in staff of the Recreation and Parks Departments, increases in the allocation to the Art Museum were all recommended. The present garbage collection system was seen as "very popular" and it was recommended that it not be changed. The door-to-door pick-up could involve soaring costs in the years ahead.

These and other things will range from essential to desirable for the city in the years ahead. Some of them will have to be done if we are not to crumble as a city — the only real question will be how to finance them.

The report was almost scathing on the property tax rate.

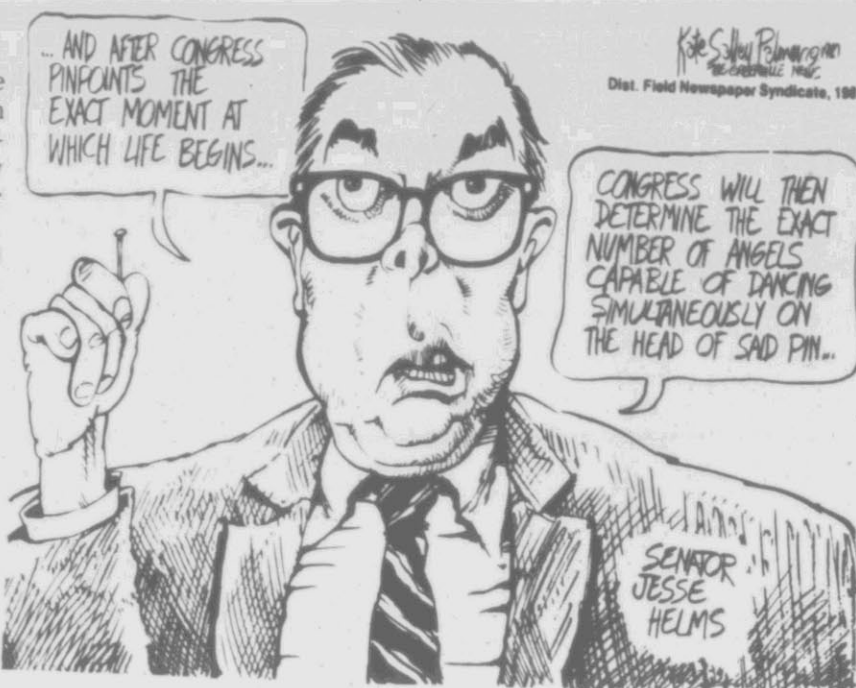

"The most generalized problem that the committee discovered in its investigation was that Greenville, typical of smaller cities, has maintained an artificially low tax rate for many years. This has been accomplished by occasionally reducing the number of city employees, by either delaying or abandoning capital improvements, by not replacing equipment... and by postponing projects that meet immediate and future civic requirements."

There is not much doubt that we have been cutting too close... too few policemen, too few firemen, depending too much on temporary federal programs for parks and recreation maintenance, putting off capital improvements. Unfortunately putting off our needs doesn't mean the problem will go away. We are in an era now where we, as citizens of the city of Greenville, for the most part, will have to pay our own way.

Nobody likes a tax increase, especially in this time of tax rebellion throughout the country. Nevertheless, it has been our observation that citizens will pay for the things they are convinced the community actually needs.

A strong conservative once commented to us that local taxes provide more direct benefits to the taxpayers than any other. We firmly believe that and, while we don't endorse a soaring tax rate, we believe reasonable increases will be accepted when the need for continuing services is clearly demonstrated.

Book With Everything

I attended the American Book fair in Atlanta recently. This is the main booksellers' event of the year, where publishers display their wares of the upcoming fall and spring season. As with the clothing industry, there are certain fashions in the book business that publishers tend to follow.

You can tell a lot about where the country is at just by reading the titles of the books that are on display at a publishers' convention.

There seemed to be an awful lot of titles on how to make money in the coming recession, how to grab power and keep it, as well as books on miracle diets, occult self-help medical tomes, and of course countless novels on sex and Armageddon.

As I walked down the aisles, the thought occurred to me that if I could combine the themes of all the books the publishers had bet on, I might produce a best-seller. My working title is, "How I Made a Million Dollars in Pork Bellies With No Scruples By Going on the Grosse Pointe Diet After World War III."

The story would have the best of fiction and non-fiction plots, for mass appeal.

It would open in Gorky Park in Moscow, where a beautiful Beverly Hills widow, one of the richest women in the world, would be ice skating with a PLO terrorist whom she has fallen madly in love with when they met in her exclusive jeans store on Rodeo Drive.

The widow's late husband, besides leaving her $500 million, also left her the secret of how to make a hydrogen bomb from a can of wrinkles under her eyes and, in searching for a cure to eliminate them, she discovers soy bean paste mixed with vitamin C and turkey giblets which will make her look young again.

Now she is ready to meet men once more. But first she develops a new aerobic exercise program which guarantees to take three inches off her waist.

Returning to Beverly Hills, she finds her house is haunted by a dead movie star from silent pictures, and when she wakes up in the morning she finds a severed horse's head on the front of her bed.

It turns out it was put there by a demented child whose body has been taken over by the Devil. She calls the FBI and three PLO terrorists show up in a blimp. She is saved just in time by the head of the Israeli secret police, who happens to be in Los Angeles at the time promoting a book of recipes taken from the Dead Sea Scrolls.

The last chapter tells how the widow learns to probate her own will, and avoid paying Uncle Sam any taxes.

If a book that includes everything that the publishers are pushing this year doesn't become a best-seller, then I must be in the wrong business.

baby formula. Naturally the terrorist wants the formula as do the Russians, the Americans, the Israelis, the South Africans, and a group of ex-Nazis who live in Argentina.

The terrorist is shot in the park and the grief-stricken, frightened woman goes to a health spa in Grosse Pointe where she decides to lose 10 pounds in one week by going on a diet of hominy grits and honey, and taking three Gatorade baths a day. The miracle diet makes her a new woman and now rather than love she wants power.

She finds out the secret of power in America. And that is to overtip. Wherever she goes, she hands out $5 bills. In restaurants she adds 22 percent to the bill, thus attracting attention and respect that no one gave her before. Airport porters, bellboys and chambermaids pay attention to every word she utters.

At cocktail parties she tips the waiters every time they bring her a drink. When dining in private homes, she hands the hostess a $100 bill so she will get a good seat at the table. The widow has found the secret of power in America and how to keep it.

Now her thoughts turn to World War III and how to invest wisely after it is over. She decides after reading about the neutron bomb that there will be a big boom in real estate. But she also doesn't turn her back on gold or diamonds, which history has shown maintain their value no matter how large the damage.

Once she is sure her money will be safe, she finds

Other Editors Say Plugging The Hole

(The Raleigh Times)

If North Carolina's school children are lucky, the state's roads will be saved without robbing the General Fund of un-replaced money that now helps pay public school teachers and fund school services. The chances for that have improved.

The chief danger in Governor Hunt's highway-rescue bill has been that it authorizes, along with the fair and acceptable three-cent gas tax hike, transferring $59 million from auto-accessory sales taxes to the Highway Fund from the General Fund without filling the resulting big hole in the latter.

Hunt has from the beginning advocated a sharp boost in alcohol taxes to plug the hole, and later added support for new taxes on mining and on vacation-property rents. But these changes would come in separate legislation. A cigarette tax for the same purpose, probably at the manufacturing level, has little hope of passage at this point.

Now, thanks to a little bargain struck between anti-liquor Sen. George Marion and Hunt forces, an alcohol-tax hike bill Marion had already introduced will specify that the $55 or $60 million it would raise will go to the General Fund.

That doesn't negate the need for the mining and resort-rental taxes — measures not yet introduced. Both are overdue for enactment, the first because phosphate and other raw materials being carted out of North Carolina by the shipload are not replaceable, and the second because tourism, though a big and welcome business here, needs to pay its fair share of the costs of keeping the state a nice place to visit.

Neither does the Hunt-Marion deal avert North Carolina's need to bolster its new-found courage on the subject of a manufacturers' cigarette tax. One such measure was actually introduced by a legislator from Tobacco City itself, Durham's Sen. Kenneth Royall, who heads the Ways and Means Committee. This shows how times change, and they should.

But the alcohol tax agreement is the first essential. It protects General Fund-nourished public education, most crucial of state government services, from becoming the involuntary donor of the transfusion the highways must have.

Strength For Today

BUZZING AROUND

Some years ago a man invented a mechanical bee. It was fitted with an ingenious device which enabled it to buzz around as if it were alive. When released, no one could tell it from a live bee. But if a drop of honey was put on a table, the real bee would take it, but the mechanical bee would not.

If, figuratively speaking, we think of that drop of honey as the opportunities given to everyone to live a full and satisfying life, we note that some people seize this honey while others, like the mechanical bee, just buzz around. The latter seek to evade work, to enjoy every possible thrill, to indulge every appetite. They never get down to the real joys of life which come from commitment and service, not acquisition and indulgence.

Artificial bees and artificial people are not appealing to by the things in life which are real. Mere mechanisms, they never really know life, but just buzz around. — Elisha Douglass

Carter Chill With Party

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

AP Political Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — What Jimmy Carter said was that the Democratic presidential primaries and the national convention had become an "albatross" in his unsuccessful bid for re-election to the White House.

What he meant, according to the party chairman, was that the process "impacted in an unfavorable way on his ability to broaden his base."

The former president's remark and the translation offered by Democratic Chairman Charles T. Manatt are symptoms of the chill between Carter and the party he never could quite call his own.

Manatt went to Carter to ask for an explanation of the "albatross" statement.

Carter made the remark on March 18 during a private session with Princeton University students.

After a student quoted Carter as characterizing the party as an albatross, several members of the Democratic National Committee called the former president to ask for an explanation.

Manatt brought it up when he and Carter met in Atlanta about a week after the Princeton incident.

The Democratic chairman has enough problems without an open squabble with Carter, and he described their conversation in his customary lawyer's manner: "Some of the processes and some of the convention requirements and some of the different delegate selection requirements and rules and regulations he felt definitely impacted in a negative way on his ability to broaden his base."

The chairman said Carter did not use the word "albatross" in their discussion.

Carter survived a bitter challenge to his renomination by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who carried his fight to the convention even after Carter seemed to capture a majority of the delegates in the primaries.

Kennedy didn't drop out of the race until the convention rejected his bid to release delegates from their primary commitments.

Carter also was forced to spend uncomfortable hours in New York dealing with demands that he declare in writing whether he would abide by the provisions of a platform, parts of which seemed better suited to Kennedy than Carter.

Tom Donilon, a Carter aide who was at the Princeton meeting, said the "albatross" remark was part of a long Carter commentary on the political process and party reform after he was asked about suggestions that presidents be elected for a single six-year term.

The aide quoted Carter as saying the convention and primaries "can be an albatross around a candidate's neck."

He said Carter felt that he was expressing a view held by many Democrats who now are calling for changes in the system to give office-holders and party officials a greater role in the nominating convention.

Donilon said Carter received several calls from party officials wanting an explanation. He refused to identify any of them.

In an interview during the Democratic National Committee meeting in Denver late last week, Manatt was asked if Carter indicated he thought the nomination fight was the reason he lost to President Reagan. "No, I can't say he thought that was the biggest reason or one of the strongest reasons," Manatt said.

It was a minor tempest, the sort of family misunderstanding that becomes meaningful only when the marriage is shaky. No one could claim the marriage between Jimmy Carter and the Democratic Party was ever a love match.

During the Democratic committee meeting, none of the speakers mentioned Carter. A further indication of the strained relations between the former president and his party was a poll of 324 committee members by CBS News.

Twenty-five percent of those questioned blamed Carter for the party's 1980 election losses.

When Democrats were asked which national party figure they would most like to have campaign in their state during the 1982 elections, 29 percent named former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and 13 percent named Kennedy.

The only member of the Democratic National Committee who named Carter was the delegate from Guam.

Other Editors Say Alcohol A Problem

Apparently, one of the gravest problems our nation faces has gone largely unnoticed; and, it is a problem whose future implications are staggering.

A recently released nationwide study of alcohol use by adolescents indicates most high school students drink alcoholic beverages and three out of 10 are "problem drinkers"...

The study exposed this revealing information: "The strongest influence on teen-age drinking seems to be parental attitudes about alcohol, and their behavior in the home. Adolescents from non-drinking homes were four times more likely to abstain from drinking than those whose parents approved of drinking."

Quicksand looks harmless, just like any other sand, until you step into it... Our teen-agers have stepped into quicksand in this matter of "problem drinking" and it doesn't seem there are too many helping hands to reach out to them. That is, "hands" who aren't also already trapped in this quicksand.

Arnold J. Toynbee, the noted British historian who studied the rise and fall of 21 civilizations, said three factors were always prominent in their demise: over-emphasis on sex and sports, and a heavy indulgence in intoxicating beverages.

'Chairman' Provides Diversion

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — Brian Concannon: poor kid from Brooklyn who becomes the country's highest paid executive as chairman of Apple Enterprises, a food, liquor and fashion conglomerate founded by an art collector.

David Mahoney: poor kid from the Bronx who earns one of industry's highest salaries as head of Norton Simon Inc., a conglomerate in food, liquor, fashion and other products, founded by an art collector.

Brian Concannon is fictional, product of the imagination of William Flanagan, author of "The Chairman," published recently by Dell Publishing Co. David Mahoney is actual. Chances are he is somewhat riled, too.

Mildly upset also are some other executives who, recognizing that cycles come and go, foresee a possible spate of novels about business, in which they may serve as the basis for only slightly fictionalized characters. Flanagan himself has another business novel in the works.

Whatever other impact it has, "The Chairman" has provided a bit of warm weather diversion from the routine news about the money supply, taxes, inflation, Japanese imports, oil prices and a meandering stock market.

"Can a longtime business reporter suddenly switch from writing facts to creating fiction?" asks Jack O'Dwyer's Newsletter, a publication of media and public relations news. "Yes," he quotes Flanagan as saying.

In business and media circles, however, questions exist about what is fact and what is fiction in "The Chairman."

Executives, who dearly like to control their image, hardly relish the idea of having their careers embellished in paperback novels, and later perhaps in motion pictures.

But the ingredients are there: the personalities, the battle for power, the keeping of it, the maneuvering in boardrooms and clubs, the quirks that never are hinted at in the official corporate biographies.

Not that Brian Concannon and David Mahoney are one and the same, though Flanagan did interview Mahoney for a magazine profile, and he concedes this could have influenced his thinking. Still, he insists his Concannon could be various other people as well.

That's one of the things that disturbs the business community. Several of Flanagan's characters seem to be montages of real businessmen. One character, for example, carries a gun. And so in real life, it has been observed, does the esteemed chairman of a well known corporate giant.

Mahoney, a highly regarded and decorous chairman, hasn't commented on the Concannon character. Asked if Mahoney had read the book, an aide replied: "No comment." The aide, who did read the book, said he had seen similarities with Mahoney, "but I saw lots of others too."

Fear Divisiveness

By BILL NOBLITT RALEIGH — Public school principals have adopted a stance against collective bargaining in North Carolina schools, and warn especially that public reaction to such a move should be "most seriously considered."

"Most people want power, but the most power is in the purse strings, and the electorate controls them and is unwilling to turn them over to others. A struggle for power could hurt educators and education," a position paper developed by the Division of Principals and Assistant Principals of the North Carolina Association of Educators spells out.

The document comes in the wake of public notice of activities in the Classroom Teachers Division of the NCAE to push collective bargaining at the local school level.

J. Breeden Blackwell, president of the principal's unit, says the position statement is essential because "principals and assistant principals cannot bury their heads in the sand and say that collective bargaining will not happen." The principal's committee was aided in drawing up its position statement by Alvin Hooks at Appalachian State University in Boone.

"them and us" situation in place of a concerted effort to improve education. Evidence is presented showing that in most cases where collective bargaining and other union techniques are used, the main thrust is toward winning improved salaries and fringe benefits for employees. Yet, statistics show that salaries have increased faster in areas without collective bargaining than where the tactic is used. "The argument that collective bargaining improves the quality of education for pupils is probably weaker than the argument that it improves economic benefits for teachers," the paper notes.

Does collective bargaining allow the ranks of teachers a stronger voice in decisions? "This contention has not proven to be true. In fact, the masses are taken completely out of the decision-making process other than to vote on the final, negotiated package - This situation is a far cry from the good working relationship North Carolina educators currently have with state legislators, county commissioners and members of local boards of education," the report notes.

Bargaining means an adversary relationship which will tear down the traditional trust and respect which is the hallmark of present local and state-level relationships, the principals feel.

"North Carolina is not an industrial state and is not attuned to collective bargaining. Our pattern of decision-making is through grassroots approach - one on one relations - lobbying and reasoning with effective rationale. Many of our state legislators and others in decision-making positions will not look favorably on collective bargaining, and neither will the masses of citizenry who have to foot the bill, the report states.

The principals raise questions about the extent of involvement of the National Educators Association in politics, and its efforts to remove education from local control. That goes against the grain for most North Carolinians, they believe.

"We have already seen the beginning of a revolt by taxpayers - Educators may be making a mistake by pushing too fast and too far.

"Are our counties and our state ready to let educators, through collective bargaining, develop a power base that will destroy the traditional system of grassroots control of education? We think not, and to do so would be pursuing a dangerous approach to solutions of our problems," the principals feel.

The longest reign of a monarch, on record, is that of Pepi II, of Egypt, who according to all evidence, ruled for 90 years. He would have to have been an infant when he succeeded to the throne. Within two years of his death, Egypt fell apart.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES
Cnty. Ext. Chairman

Wheat will soon be cut in North Carolina and other areas of the southeast. Many farmers are trying to make decisions on which way to plant double crop soybeans. Four basic options exist: (1) no-till in to wheat stubble (2) harrow down straw and/or break land prior to planting (3) burn straw, harrow land and plant (4) burn straw and plant without tillage.

From a weed control standpoint, all four options can present an individual with positive and negative advantages.

Positive Side
In the no-till situation, the positive side lists advantages of keeping the wheat straw which reduces soil surface temperatures, helping to reduce water evaporation. Straw reduces water runoff, in turn increasing water infiltration. The straw helps, to some degree, fool the lesser corn stalk borer, thereby reducing stand losses from this insect.

Soil Moisture
Planting immediately after wheat harvest allows one to take maximum advantage of existing soil moisture to get a uniform stand. Immediate planting allows one to plant soybeans sooner, increasing the potential for higher yields. Reduced fuel labor and machinery inputs to plant soybeans means less investment to make a crop.

Negative Side
On the negative side of no-till, there are some disadvantages which have to be overcome. Planting into wheat straw can present soybean growers with a challenge to get a uniform stand. Erratic soybean stands can become a weed control nightmare. To offset this problem, farmers must invest in one of the newly-designed stubble planters - increasing cost of plant equipment. Higher investment in weed control herbicides due to broadcast applications, usage of maximum rates and addition of contact herbicides.

Without timely rainfall, annual grass can become the dominant weed problem. Other disadvantages include herbicide application problems due to high water volumes (40-60 GPA) needed to get through the wheat straw and get herbicide/soil contact, wheat straw residues can tie up 20-40 percent of the pre-emergence herbicides setting up possible weed control failures even with a timely rain, lack of ability to cultivate should weeds escape control, possible coverage problems with post-emergence herbicides due to wheat straw, and the build up or establishment of perennial weed problems with continuous no-till culture.

Carpenter Ants In Dwellings Can Do Damage

Pitt County homeowners seeing big black ants on their floors probably have carpenter ants, according to Sam Uzzell, Pitt County extension agent.

Not all big black ants are carpenter ants, said Uzzell, but the ones that invade houses usually are.

The reason homeowners should be alert to carpenter ants, he noted, is because they can damage wood as well as become nuisances.

Usually carpenter ants build nests in wood that has begun to decay, such as wood found in the base of a porch post, around a chimney or along the edge of a roof.

Therefore, if carpenter ants are discovered, the most important thing to do is to determine why the wood is decaying, Uzzell said.

Sometimes carpenter ants are brought into homes on firewood, but the extension agent noted that these ants are not likely to become a problem because firewood is brought in during cold weather and ants become established during warm weather.

Sevin, Dursban and Baygon are three insecticides that will control ants. The important thing, Uzzell said, is to locate the nest and make sure it is treated thoroughly. A dust formulation usually works better than a spray and sometimes it is necessary to drill holes into the wood to get good coverage.

The Pitt County extension office has additional information on carpenter ants and other wood-destroying insects, available in the "Wood Can Last for Centuries" program.

Club Organizes

A new service organization for women. The Tar River Civitan Club, will be chartered on June 23. This was announced today by Dr. William F. Troutman Jr., president of Greenville Civitan Club, the sponsor of the new group. The final organizational meeting will be held at the First Presbyterian Church on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

In 1974 Civitan International became the first and only major service organization to open its membership to women.

The Tar River Civitan Club will become part of an association of more than 1,000 locally-organized service clubs. Each club is independent and each serves its community in the way it sees fit.

The emphasis of the clubs are on service, knowledge and fellowship with a primary focus on good citizenship. Civitans assist both youth and old through "hands on" and other projects including the nursing homes and hospitals, special olympics, ADAP, Boys Home, Girls Haven, and the building of parks, playgrounds, etc.

Among service clubs, Civitans were pioneers in the efforts to organize and to fund outstanding projects and programs for the mentally retarded.

Anyone interested in learning more about Civitan and about joining the new club may call club builders Douglas Caldwell at 758-1735 or Julian Rawls at 756-5850.

See Decline In Auto Layoffs

DETROIT (AP) - The nation's auto production is up 29.1 percent this week from year-ago levels, while the number of autoworkers on layoffs dropped, according to industry reports.

The five major domestic automakers reported Thursday that 157,975 workers were on indefinite layoff - without a recall date - compared with 160,775 reported last week. The number of temporary layoffs dipped to 5,600, from 7,550 a week ago.

Car production for the week ending Saturday will be 211,503, up 23.7 percent from last week's 170,913 and an increase of 29.1 percent over the 149,944 produced during the same week last year, estimated Ward's Automotive Reports, an industry journal.

Gymnastics Program Set

The Pitt County Community Schools Program will sponsor a one week gymnastics program at Farmville Middle School during the week of June 22 through June 26. The sessions will be from 6:30-8 p.m. each night. Boys and girls 6 to 13 years of age will be eligible to attend.

The class will include instruction on the balance beam, uneven parallel bars, mini-trap, and basic floor exercises. The head instructor for the class will be Coach Jon Rose, gymnastic's coach at East Carolina University. For further information, contact the Pitt County Community Schools office at 752-6106, ext. 248 or 249.

Exceed Penalty

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - According to figures supplied by a North Carolina paving contractor to federal investigators, his profits more than outweigh the amount he was fined for bid rigging.

The Greensboro Daily News reported in its Sunday edition that C.G. Tate of Concord received $473,000 between 1976 and 1978 for helping them rig bids on projects in North Carolina and South Carolina.

In a letter to his attorney, Tate supplied the details of the scheme, to be relayed to federal investigators in the bid-rigging trial of a South Carolina paving contractor.

Based on the amount of money he received for not doing work and the amount he was fined, Tate came out more than $37,000 ahead.

Tate has been a central figure in the government's investigation since Nov. 26, 1980, when he signed a plea bargaining agreement to cooperate with investigators in North Carolina and South Carolina.

In January 1980, he received a 30-day prison sentence, one of the lightest imposed in the scandal that has sent 28 paving company executives to prison.

According to Tate's figures, he received $449,000 between January 1976 and July 1978 in exchange for not bidding or for deliberately submitting high bids on North Carolina projects in 13 counties. The remaining $24,000 came from state companies bidding on South Carolina road projects.

He was fined $360,562 by the North Carolina Department of Justice for his part in the bid-rigging scandal. His company, C.G. Tate Construction Co., had to pay a federal fine of $75,000.

Tate, 75, refused to talk about the letter. Tate's attorney, Charles D. Nye of Durham, said some of the dollar amounts listed by Tate "were just preliminary figures given to me in a letter more than a year ago."

Senior Club Holds Meeting

The Town and Country Senior Citizen's Club held its business and luncheon meeting at Abram's Restaurant Thursday.

Some 70 members and one guest attended. Members reported on the recent trip to Asheville and Carowinds. Thirty-four members and guests went on the trip.

Tentative plans are being made for a trip to Raleigh to the Village Dinner Theater.

Members and friends planning on going to Nashville, Tenn. in September or October are requested to make their reservations early.

Lee Williams reported on the A.A.R.P. Insurance Plan. The July meeting of the Town and Country Senior Citizen's Club will be July 16th. The place of the luncheon meeting will be announced.

Students Present Budget Liability

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - State and federal budget cuts will hit lower-income students in eastern North Carolina school systems particularly hard through reductions in funds for free and low-priced meals, according to Dr. J. Frank Yeager.

Yeager, president of the N.C. Association of School Administrators, said one example of that is in Halifax County, where 5,000 of the 7,600 county school pupils qualify for federal aid to economically or educationally disadvantaged children.

"About 99 percent of our children eat free," said Halifax School Superintendent Luther A. Adams. "This (the expected cut) would force a great many of them to try to find money somewhere to pay for their lunches."

The Halifax County Commissioners voted an 11 percent increase in county school funds. But Adams said the increase will be consumed by inflation and will not blunt the effect of the cuts.

"In order to combat the situation, we're just doubling up on things, learning to adjust and readjust, and just trying to learn to do more with less," Adams said.

Hundreds of teachers across the state are receiving dismissal notices and many counties are considering property tax increases to help adjust to the cuts planned in Raleigh and Washington.

Many counties are finding it beyond their means to make up for all the funding cuts.

The Onslow County commissioners, who have already committed themselves to a 13-cent tax rate increase, say they have been asked to come up with another 20 cents to help make up for an expected $1.3 million cut in federal school aid to the county. The commissioners were expected to approve considerable less than the proposed 33-cent increase.

The family suggests that anyone desiring to make a memorial contribution consider the First Presbyterian Church Building Fund.

Boat Accident

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three people drowned and three others were lost and presumed dead after two small boats were sucked over a dam and sunk in the rain-swollen Ohio River, authorities said.

"I can still see them in the air. I saw six people fall to their deaths," said Michelle Lona.

Ms. Lona and friends fishing from a boat below the dam rescued Melissa Andrews, 34, after Saturday's accident. She said both craft went over the dam bow first, despite evasive maneuvers.

"We thought: Gee! Oh man! What are they doing so close to the dam?" Ms. Lona recalled. "They looked like they were full throttle... as if it was a stunt."

"At first we thought they must know what they are doing," Ms. Lona said. "Mrs. Andrews said they didn't know there was a dam."

The boats were in a restricted area when the current, strengthened by recent rain storms, pulled them over the edge of the Dashields Dam near suburban Sewickley, said U.S. Coast Guard Lt. Jim Simpson.

Mrs. Andrews was treated at Sewickley Valley Hospital and released, a nursing supervisor said.

The Allegheny County Coroner's office identified the dead as Leo Andrews, 34, of Houston, Pa.; Karen Andrews, 32, of Eustis, Fla., and Carla Spiker, 18, of Canonsburg, Pa.

Crescent Township Policeman Jeff Hyre identified the missing as Leo Andrews' son, Edward, 16; David Smith, 17, of North Houston, Pa., and Karen Andrews' husband, Burt, 38.

Hyre said Burt Andrews was a cousin of Leo Andrews, husband of Melissa Andrews.

The search for the missing was suspended Sunday at dusk, Saturday's search ended because of rain, heavy fog and darkness.

The outboards, a 14-foot wooden model and a 16-foot fiberglass craft, dropped four feet over the dam, said Tom Guzowski, a Coast Guard crew chief.

Vote Could Mean Socialist Majority

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand appeared likely to win a majority in the National Assembly in runoff elections next Sunday after leftist parties took more than half the votes in the first round.

With 246 seats need for a majority in the 491-seat assembly, computer projections of the voting Sunday gave the Socialists and their allies in the Radical Left Movement between 242 and 300. Their candidates were elected in 49 districts and ran well ahead in 199 others.

If the voting trend continues in the runoff, Mitterrand will be able to enact his economic and political programs without Communist support or their participation in his government.

The conservatives led by Gaullist Jacques Chirac and former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing won 100 seats but were leading well in only 35 other races. They had 265 in the old assembly, compared to 116 for the Socialists and 85 for the Communists.

Leftist parties got 55.7 percent of the 25 million votes; conservatives got 43.2 percent.

It appeared that the Communists would win less than 50 seats. They got only 16.17 percent of the vote, about one percentage point more than party leader Georges Marchais' vote in the first round of the presidential election. That was the Communists' lowest vote total in 45 years.

The Socialist gains, at the expense of the Communists as well as the conservatives, stemmed from a simple appeal to the electorate: since the nation elected Mitterrand president five weeks ago, he should be given the legislative support necessary to govern.

Commenting on the prospect that the left could control the assembly for a five-year term, Premier Pierre Mauroy said: "For the first time in its history, the left has a new dimension — time." He was referring to the short-lived, Socialist-led coalitions of the 1950s, when governments fell in weeks or months.

The voter turnout was 71.5 percent, the lowest since 1962. Chirac, who was re-elected on the first ballot, called on the 28.5 percent who stayed away from the polls to turn out in force next week and reverse the Socialist trend.

All who received 12.5 percent or more on the first ballot qualified for the runoff. But both the Socialists and the Communists on the left and Chirac's Gaullists and Giscard d'Estaing's Union for French Democracy on the right agreed to support whichever party's candidate led in the first round.

Marchais, despite the Communists' poor showing, said his party was not dropping its demand for ministers in the post-election government.

Mitterrand has refused to say whether he would or wouldn't admit the Communists to his Cabinet, arousing concern among France's allies and providing the conservatives with their main campaign issue.

The new president boosted the Socialists' chances with a series of decrees raising the minimum wage, increasing pensions and rent subsidies, proposing that they be paid for by extra income taxes on the rich, creating 54,000 new civil service jobs and promising 200,000 more to reduce the 1.8 million unemployed.

But he needs a majority in the National Assembly to carry out the sweeping changes he proposed during his presidential campaign — the nationalization of the remaining private banks, the steel industry and 10 other industrial groups, and decentralization of the Paris-based government bureaucracy.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a broad rally in heavy trading today, encouraged by signs of declining interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 8.08 to 1,014.36 by noontime.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 5-2 margin in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

New York's Chemical Bank today lowered its prime lending rate from 20 to 19 percent.

More interest-rate cuts were expected shortly, following the Federal Reserve's report late Friday of a surprise $2.9 billion drop in the basic measure of the money supply known as M1B.

Analysts said that word sparked hopes that the Fed would not find it necessary to apply new credit-tightening pressure in the immediate future.

Telephone and electric utilities, which are highly sensitive to changes in interest rates, dominated the active list.

American Telephone & Telegraph rose 3/4 to 58 3/4 and General Telephone &

Electronics 3/4 to 31 3/4. Among electric-company issues, Southern Co. gained 3/4 to 12 3/4; Texas Utilities 3/4 to 20 1/2; Houston Industries 1/2 to 19 3/4; and Duke Power 1/4 to 19 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index picked up 49 to 78.09. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.50 at 370.21.

Volume on the Big Board came to 30.57 million shares at noontime, against 28.57 million at the same point Friday.

Elocution Bad Late In Session

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Now is the time of the General Assembly session, when the days run long and everyone wants to go home, and you sometimes have to listen carefully to tell what legislators are talking about.

Debate often becomes tedious as the lawmakers plod toward adjournment, and the language is the first casualty. Now is when legislators take to the floor to hail the amendment that "makes a good bill more better," to say they are "in agreement" with their colleagues or, as Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, has declared, that the opposition is arguing "a mute point."

Legislators can be heard making those utterances throughout the session, of course. It only seems to get worse toward the end.

When the Senate debated Gov. Jim Hunt's highway tax package last week, the fractured quotes were as frequent as references to potholes.

Sen. J.J. Harrington, D-Bertie, "Monk" to his friends, rarely takes the Senate floor, but when he does it always causes pens to wag along the press table.

"The governor," Harrington declared as he pushed the gas tax, "is not trying to put a hardship on no one but an absolute necessity."

Harrington distinguished himself a few sessions ago when he unsuccessfully offered a bill legalizing tandem, or twin, truck trailers — and every time he described the bill it came out, "trin trailers."

This time he delivered other gems, such as: "It took tremendous courage for him to try to try not to get around higher taxes." And when he defended the honor of some commission's report, he underscored his point by telling the Senate, "and I can contest to that."

Sen. Jim Garrison, D-Stanly, joined the debate with his own high praise for state government: "We've probably got the best highway department in the whole state."

Another came from Sen. Walter Cockerham, R-Guilford, who in a recent debate acknowledged his opponent's point and said he was "recognizant" of his facts.

Reporters in the Legislature, to pass the time during stale moments of debate, have been recording these sayings and posting them on a press-room bulletin board for all to see.

From the House, one of the best of that bunch came from Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, who tried to muster support for a tax bill by saying, "A good day's pay for a decent salary — I believe in that."

Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, pushed her bill to place a tax on cigarettes produced in the state with this one: "We manufacture 45 percent of all the cigarettes manufactured in North Carolina."

Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg, told her Insurance Committee that drivers with points on their insurance policies for traffic violations were "pointed people."

The Senate minority leader, Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, actually said last week: "It's easy to say that everybody's black and white, that there's no gray matter."

And a GOP House member, Rep. Charles Hughes, R-Henderson, got so mad at a budget committee last week he walked into the press room to let off steam. "You can't play political pollitical politics in there," he stormed.

At least it all may end soon, and after nearly six months in Raleigh, legislators seem to be hoping so. As Rep. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, declared to her budget subcommittee, "We don't know what we're doing."

May Cause Crashes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Anesthetic gases might be leaking from airplane engines, knocking out pilots and causing crashes like the 1980 mystery that claimed the life of the Louisiana State University football coach, the head of a private watchdog group says.

7,000 planes, most of them corporate or private aircraft, are flying with the engines.

He said the company was cooperating with the NTSB investigation but said, "We don't think there's anything to it (the reports)."

John Galipault, president of the Aviation Safety Institute, said Sunday both his group and the National Transportation Safety Board were investigating about a dozen crashes of mid-sized airplanes using AirResearch series 331 turboprop engines manufactured by Garrett Corp. of Los Angeles.

The San Francisco Examiner on Sunday quoted Robert Allard, chief of the board's technological division, as saying tests are under way to see "if there are any toxic or noxious fumes that would affect the pilots' ability to fly."

Brad Dunbar, an NTSB spokesman in Washington, said Sunday he was unaware of such an investigation.

Garrett officials were not available Sunday. The newspaper quoted an unidentified spokesman as saying about

No Honeymoon

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The nation's Democratic mayors have called off the honeymoon with President Reagan and are demanding that he spend as much on "the social defense of this country" as he does on restoring military might.

Republican mayors attending the opening sessions of this week's U.S. Conference of Mayors tried to rally behind their president, but they consistently were outvoted by Democrats who hold a solid edge in city hall strength across the country.

One measure adopted 22-8 Sunday by the conference's resolutions committee reminded Reagan and Congress "that the national security of this nation includes both the military defense and the social defense of this country."

curity of this nation includes both the military defense and the social defense of this country."

Water Witching: Matter Over Mind

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Richard Cumbee calls water witching a case of matter over mind, but it's a matter the Whiteville Water Department employee has under his control.

"The first time, a lot of people who try to control the rods with their minds and it doesn't work," he said. "But after a while you let them flow to where they want to go, and every time they'll turn when you're over that water line."

Cumbee says water witching is a centuries-old practice using two metal rods — welding rods are best — to find water underground.

Whiteville public works director Jake Heye is the man who first introduced the practice to the city's water department.

Floyd Looking Ahead To U.S. Open

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Ray Floyd let the hint of a smile play across his face as he considered the U.S. Open.

"Well," Floyd said in his typically low-key fashion, "I've won two tournaments back to back already. I'm just hoping this may be my year for back-to-backs."

The earlier consecutive victories were in Dorland and the Tournament Players Championship in Florida.

The veteran Floyd scored his third triumph of the season Sunday with a two-shot edge in the $400,000 Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic, the last warmup for the 81st U.S. Open, to be played this week at the Merion Golf Club in Ardmore, Pa.

And Floyd is among the prime favorites for the American national championship.

"I'm not predicting I'll win it," he said after his closing round of 69 had produced a 275 total, nine shots under par on the Westchester Country Club course, "but I'm very pleased to be playing well. I'm very optimistic about the Open."

And well he should be. His credentials now rival those of anyone on the tour.

He joined Tom Watson and Bruce Lietzke as the only three-time winners this season. The $72,000 he collected pushed his season's earnings to a career-record $323,094, second only to Watson.

His level of consistency is unsurpassed in golf this year.

He has finished lower than 12th only once since January. He now has been 10th or better in 11 of 16 starts this year.

Floyd, 38, playing the best golf of his life in his 19th year on the PGA Tour, fully expects it to continue.

"I've played well all year," he said. "My game is very sound mechanically. It's where I want it to be. If it gets a little off, I can feel it and know immediately what to do to correct it."

"I've always felt sports are played in streaks. If you're playing well, you have confidence, and you continue to play well."

Actually, he said, his last round Sunday "was probably the worst round I've played in a month or two. It's the kind of round that can get away from you."

Snow Hill Wins, 13-1

EDENTON — Guy Sanderson and Bobby Avery combined for a four-hitter and Snow Hill erupted for five runs in the sixth inning to defeat Edenton, 13-1, Sunday afternoon in an American Legion baseball game.

Sanderson started the game and went seven innings before being replaced by Avery in the eighth. Sanderson returned to the mound in the ninth to finish the game.

Snow Hill, now 3-4, took a 1-0 lead in the second only to have Edenton tie the game with a run in the bottom of the third. Snow Hill then pushed across the go-ahead run in the fourth for a 2-1 lead and then exploded for five runs in the sixth to all but seal the victory.

Kevin Korpi led off the inning with a double and David Kester followed that with a single. Wade Corbett then singled home Korpi and Gary Ream tripled home both Kester and Corbett.

Ream subsequently scored on Sanderson's double. Al Hardison followed with a single to score Sanderson with Snow Hill's final run of the inning.

Snow Hill added three more runs to its total in the eighth and ninth for its 13-run total. Snow Hill banged out 20 hits and was led by Hardison, who was four for six. Corbett was three for four and Jabo Fulghum three for six. With two hits for Snow Hill were David Shirley, Kester, Ream and Sanderson.

Snow Hill travels to Rocky Mount Tuesday night.

you. I'm pleased that I was able to keep my patience, keep my composure. I'm very lucky no one ran away with it." Rookie Bobby Clampett, Gibby Gilbert and Craig Stadler tied for second at 277. Clampett closed up with a 68. Gilbert, who now has been runner-up three times in this event including the last two, shot a 70. Stadler, a winner two weeks ago, had a 72. It was two shots back to George Burns, who came out of the pack with a 6-under-par 65, the best round of the day, and was alone at 279.

Baseball Talks Now On Hold

By The Associated Press Not only was there no major league baseball over the weekend, there were no talks aimed at ending the inactivity caused by a players' strike.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said it appeared that Tuesday morning seemed the best time to get the negotiators back to the bargaining table to seek a settlement of the free agent compensation issue that triggered the walkout.

"I have a conflict Monday afternoon, but I would be available Monday night," Moffett said. He added, however, he had not been able to contact Ray Grebey, director of the club owners' Player Relations Committee to set up a session for tonight.

"It looks like Tuesday morning," said Moffett. Grebey, after spending the afternoon with family members at a movie, was back home Sunday evening awaiting a call from Moffett. "We're available anytime Ken wants to call us," he said. Don Fehr, counsel to the players association, said his group was available to resume talks tonight.

Whenever the talks resume, Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, again will not take part. Commenting on criticism of his absence by one club owner and one other club official, Miller insists:

"The importance of my being there is greatly exaggerated." Miller, who bowed out of the talks last Friday as negotiators went through one last fruitless session before the 650 players went on strike, reaffirmed his position Sunday.

Miller, bristling at claims by some club owners that he was a roadblock to a settlement, said he wanted the owners' negotiators to see that how strongly the players felt about the compensation issue. Miller Sunday also responded to strong suggestions by owner

George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees and vice president Arthur "Red" Patterson of the California Angels that he attend negotiations.

Both Steinbrenner and Patterson made the observations in television interviews Saturday. But Miller turned those observations around, himself chastising the owners for their absenteeism from the talks.

"Mr. Steinbrenner, I have great respect for his ability," said Miller. "I feel he should be there. Here are these people who have never attended a single negotiating session — not one owner has ever attended a negotiating session."

However, one owner — Edward Bennett Williams of the Baltimore Orioles — said he would be in New York tonight and Tuesday to "see what's going on" in the bargaining talks.

"I want to talk to (Commissioner Bowie) Kuhn and (American League President Lee) MacPhail and find out what's happening," Williams said Sunday.

Williams declined to say publicly that he hoped to attend the next bargaining session, although the noted Washington lawyer has said he believes he could help settle the dispute if given the chance. So far, however, Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the clubs' owners, has kept Williams away from bargaining talks.

Earlier in the day, Williams suggested that President Reagan could help end the walkout by asking that the free-agent compensation issue be sent to an impartial arbitrator.

"I don't think I have the right to personally ask the President for such action or try to initiate the process myself," Williams said in a copyrighted interview with the Baltimore News-American. "But maybe the only way we are going to get this settled is to have the issue go to binding arbitration."

Miller, the player union's executive director since 1966, removed himself from the picture because he said he wanted the players to make their own decisions in the event of a strike.

"I have been in touch with the mediator (Federal Mediator Kenneth Moffett)," said Miller, "and advised him to talk to the players."

His reference to the "players" included Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies and Steve Rogers of the Montreal Expos, representing the National League, and Doug DiCinces and Mark Belanger of the Baltimore Orioles, representing the American League.

They will meet either today or tomorrow with the owners' bargaining unit, headed by Ray Grebey, head of the Players Relations Committee, in an attempt to resolve the first mid-season strike in major league baseball history.

Waltrip Survives Flat, Hodgdon

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — "Every year I have to do it the hard way," Darrell Waltrip said after he survived a flat tire with 13 laps remaining, and came from third place in the next-to-last lap to win the Warner W. Hodgdon NASCAR stock car race Sunday.

Dale Earnhardt had taken the lead away from Richard Petty with 2 1/2 laps remaining at Riverside International Raceway, but Waltrip passed both of them in the next lap and easily held off Earnhardt's challenge in the final lap. Petty finished third, Neil Bonnett was fourth and Ricky Rudd was fifth.

Waltrip's 1981 Buick Regal was the fastest in qualifying over the 2.62-mile road course with eight right-hand turns, and he appeared faster throughout the race Sunday, but he dropped out of first place because of a flat tire with 13 laps to go.

"I had everybody covered, but on that restart (with 13 laps to go) something flew out from under a car. I think it was (Terry Labonte's. I had to slow down and come in. The tire was all wrapped up around the hub, and my crew guys burnt their hands getting it off. And I got out just ahead of the pack," Waltrip said of the flat tire. It put him nearly one lap behind the leader at that point, Earnhardt in a 1981 Pontiac.

"There was no way I could have won if the yellow hadn't come out," Waltrip said of a piece of reversing fortune with nine laps remaining. A car driven by Richard Childress hit a guard rail and blocked the outside of turn 9 on the twisting road course, and while the yellow light was on Waltrip was able to close up on the leaders from about two miles behind.

"I didn't think I had a chance, but when I started reeling in Petty and Bonnett, I thought I might do it but I didn't know I could catch Dale," Waltrip said of the furious finishing laps.

"I've got a real chance now to go for the championship the third. After an out, Frank Mikovits reached on a throwing error by Gordon Douglas and Shirley to score.

Then, with two gone, David Kester singled Mikovits to third. Mikovits subsequently scored on an error by Billy Kirtrell and Snow Hill led, 3-0.

Pitt County chipped away at the lead with single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth. Snow Hill, meanwhile, scored a run

Pitt County Captures Two Wins

Although it's still early in the season, Pitt County continued to make a strong bid for its fourth straight American Legion regular season title with two road victories this past weekend.

Pitt County used a six-run sixth inning, sparked by Mitch Brann's two-run homer, to defeat Wayne County, 9-2, Sunday afternoon, one day after Post 39 edged Snow Hill, 6-4. The two wins leave Pitt County at 6-1 overall and in the league.

In Sunday's victory, Roger Williams went seven innings, striking out nine and walking three in picking up his second victory in three outings. Doug McRoy came on in relief in the eighth and pitched the final two innings.

Wayne County jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the second inning and maintained that lead until the fifth when Pitt County tied it up when Billy Kirtrell walked, went to third on two wild pitches and scored on Mitch Brann's single.

One inning later, Pitt County erupted for six runs to take a lead it never relinquished. Emmett Walsh walked to lead off the inning and scored when Gordon Douglas followed with a double. After Roger Williams grounded out, Sammy Hodges singled. Douglas then scored and Hodges went to second on a wild pitch. Paul MacMillan then reached on a fielder's choice when Hodges was out.

Kirtrell followed with a walk and Mark Douglas a fielder's choice in which no one was out. MacMillan scored on the play and when the throw bounced into the dirt, Kirtrell scored as well.

Brann then hit his second home run of the American Legion season and Pitt County led, 7-1. Pitt County added single runs to its total in the seventh and ninth.

In the seventh, Walsh singled, went to second on a balk and to third on a wild pitch. He scored on Roger Williams' fielder's choice.

In the ninth, Walsh was at it again. This time he led off the inning with a triple and then scored on Gordon Douglas' single.

Wayne County's final run came in the eighth. Brann, Walsh and Gordon Douglas all had two hits for Pitt County. Wayne County was led by Scott Pelletier with two hits.

In Saturday night's victory, Pitt County ripped Snow Hill's Kevin Korpi for 13 hits, including three by Mark Douglas and Emmett Walsh and scored twice in the seventh inning to capture the victory.

Tyrone Gay went the distance for his second victory in as many starts. The Ayden-Grifton sophomore struck out 10 and walked eight.

It was Snow Hill which jumped out to the early lead Saturday, scoring three times in the third inning — only an inning after Gay struck out the side in the second.

Washington ..... 4

Keyed by a Curtis Evans grand slam home run, Kiwanis scored five runs in the third inning and then held off Washington in the late innings to capture a 6-4 victory Sunday afternoon in a Senior Babe Ruth baseball game.

Kiwanis broke a scoreless tie in the third with the five run outburst. Jamie Jones and Jody Forbes led off the inning by both reaching on errors: Jeff Wilson followed with a one-out single to score Jones and give Kiwanis a 1-0 lead.

With two gone, Mont Carter was walked intentionally to load the bases. Evans then unloaded his four-bag blast to give Kiwanis a 5-0 lead.

Washington scored once in the fifth and added three runs in the seventh but Kiwanis, which scored its final run in the sixth, managed to hold on for the win.

Neither team had anyone with more than one hit.

In two Babe Ruth games Saturday, Coca-Cola defeated Wachovia, 8-7, and Pepsi defeated Home Builders, 7-4.

Caponi's Pain Passes

Rib Injury Flares Up, By LPGA Title Eases Hurt

MASON, Ohio (AP) — The best remedy possible, a fourth major championship and a $22,500 payday, eased the pain of Donna Caponi's old flaring rib injury.

"I swung in the rough at 17 and hurt my rib cage. It was killing me coming down 18. Fortunately, I didn't have any more holes after that," said the 36-year-old veteran, who first suffered the injury in 1975.

Caponi made sure there would be no more holes in dramatic fashion. She sank a 15-foot birdie putt on the last green Sunday for her second Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship.

The putt gave her a one-shot victory and broke up a tense finish with her playing partners, Jerilyn Britz and Pat Meyers. It gave Caponi a 1-over-par 73 for a 72-hole total of 280, 10-under for the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center's Grizzly course.

Britz missed her birdie attempt from 12 feet, miffing a playoff opportunity with Caponi. Instead, she matched par of 72 and Meyers, total of 281.

Meyers had eliminated herself from contention when she missed the green with her approach shot on the 47-yard par 3 closing hole. She scrambled for a par, dropping a four-foot putt.

Britz, the runnerup to Caponi in this major two years ago, and Meyers each earned checks of $12,000.

Debbie Massey closed with a 70 for fourth place at 283. JoAnn Garner, Nancy Lopez, Melton and Beth Daniel shared fifth at 284. Garner and Lopez-Melton shot 70s and Daniel 71.

Defending champion Sally Little, whose 69 was the best final round in the muggy 95-degree heat, was alone at 285. Sandra Post missed her chance at a $100,000 bonus for winning a second straight title. She finished with 73 — 290 — and settled for $1,773 instead.

Caponi, Britz and Meyer came to the 18th tee tied for the lead at 7-under, setting up the dramatic finish.

"It was like a playoff, like match play, the last few holes," said Caponi. "It was an unbelievable feeling."

Perhaps her background gave Caponi the edge over her opponents. She won 21 tournaments and more than $900,000 in 17 professional seasons. Britz and Meyers own a combined three-tournament victories in their 14 seasons.

Caponi played the 18th as if it were clinic. She pulled her tee shot slightly into the rough, pitched out into the fairway with an 8-iron and knocked a pitching wedge onto the green in regulation.

Britz chose to use a gully, a specially built lofted wood, to go for the green in two. She caught a tree, skipped her ball across a lake into rough in front of the green. She then chipped to within 12 feet.

"I miss hit my gully," said Britz. "But I had intended to go for the green if I had the opportunity."

Meyers used a final-hole combination of 3 iron, 7 iron and 9 iron, but hit her approach shot right of the green.

"I hit my 9 iron thin. It hit on the green but bounced right," she said of her costly approach.

Caponi said she had an ideal putt to clinch the championship.

"It was straight up. It was straight in. When it was two feet from the hole, I knew it was in," she said.

The California veteran now has won $109,420, No. 1 on the 1981 money list and $92,357, third on the all-time list. She has two U.S. Opens and two LPGA championships.

"No, it never gets old hat," she said of her latest major. "I'm 36 and I want to win some more."

Gonzalez Comes Off Canvas To Claim LWT Boxing Battle

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Unbeaten knockout specialist Rodolfo "El Gato" Gonzalez of Mexico City found himself on the canvas, with an injured left hand to add to his problems, before he rallied to earn a majority-decision victory over Andy Ganigan of Honolulu in a rousing battle of lightweight contenders.

After Gonzalez took control midway through the 10-rounder at the Forum Saturday, Ganigan was knocked down three times by right hands, twice in the sixth round and again in the seventh.

Referee Marty Denkin scored it 94-92 for Gonzalez, judge Chuck Hassett also favored Gonzales 94-92. Dr. James Jen-Kin scored it even at 93-93 in the bout before 3,100 appreciative boxing fans.

Gonzalez, the No. 2 rated contender in the World Boxing Council rankings, was floored once himself in the third round when Ganigan caught him with a left as he was stepping back.

Gonzalez is 21-0 with 19 knockouts. He weighed 135 1/4 at Friday's weigh-in and Ganigan was at 136 pounds.

last half of the season," said Waltrip, who trails points leader Bobby Allison by 32 points with 15 races remaining. Allison went out early Sunday with a blown engine.

Allison has 2,332 points, Rudd is second at 2,139 and Waltrip remained in third with 2,100 as he gained 109 points on the leader Sunday.

Earnhardt, the 1980 NASCAR driving champion, took a chance and took a pit stop for new tires during the caution flag with nine laps remaining, dropping out of the lead and surrendering it to Petty. But with new tires his car had enough in the more than 94 degree weather to pass Bonnett and then Petty to take the lead with 2 1/2 laps to go.

But Waltrip had even more car left for the closing rush. He was the race qualifying leader on Friday with a 114.419 mile per hour average, almost one second per lap faster than runnerup Earnhardt in qualifying.

Waltrip went past Petty early in the next-to-last lap and then caught and passed Earnhardt just before the final lap began.

With a clear field ahead, there were no further problems for the 34-year-old Waltrip in his 1981 Buick Regal. The car was prepared specially for the Riverside road course, which is a clockwise circuit in contrast to the left-hand turns of most NASCAR tracks.

Baseball Talks On Hold....

As of late Sunday night, no definite time was set to resume the negotiations. Donald Fehr, chief counsel to the Players Association, said he was waiting to hear from Molton.

"It's fair to say we're working on it," he said Sunday. "We're hopeful of getting the two sides together tomorrow. (But) the federal mediator has not been able to make an arrangement with both sides. We are still prepared to meet, but it probably wouldn't occur until sometime in the afternoon and given this late juncture, probably tomorrow night."

The players struck last Friday after last-ditch negotiations failed to resolve the issue of free agent compensation.

Basically at issue is the compensation awarded a team that loses a player who turns free agent. Owners want a so-called "quality" player in return for such a loss and there is some discrepancy between the owners and players over the definition of such a player.

This controversial issue has been in a logjam for more than a year now.

The owners and players began looking for a compromise in the free-agent compensation dispute when they set up a panel in May 1980, when the two sides agreed to all other issues in a new Basic Agreement. When no compromise was reached, the agreement gave the owners the right to unilaterally implement their plan providing a major league player rather than just an amateur draft choice as compensation for losing a free agent.

The players in turn had the right to strike in response to the owners' plan anytime before June 1 of this year. They set a strike deadline of May 29, but a last minute deal postponed any action while the National Labor Relations Board asked a judge to order the owners to rescind their compensation plan on the ground they had bargained in bad faith. U.S. District Judge Henry Werker last Wednesday denied the request, and the players went on strike two days later.

William Lubbers, the NLBB's general counsel in Washington, was expected to announce this week whether Werker's decision will be appealed. Principals in the strike declined to discuss the possible effects of an appeal, and Lubbers was unavailable for comment Sunday.

Meanwhile, the business end of baseball raised its economic head.

The owners are bolstered by strike insurance totaling $50 million and a mutual-aid package totaling an estimated $11 million, but this only begins paying dividends after 152 games are missed. Then, each owner will receive $100,000 for each unplayed game. At that rate, the insurance could last until early August.

Club owners began buying the strike insurance last fall and winter as a panel of players and general managers looked for a compromise in the free-agent compensation dispute.

Baseball's first lost weekend proved costly for both players and owners alike.

Calvin Griffith, the Minnesota Twins' president, estimated losses in gross revenues of $600,000 from the three-game series with the New York Yankees in Bloomington, Minn., including ticket sales and concessions. The Philadelphia Phillies placed the loss from the canceled weekend home series with the Atlanta Braves at $750,000 in gate receipts.

The Detroit Tigers' weekend series against the Kansas City Royals had drawn "the biggest advance sale of the season," said General Manager Jim Campbell. The Tigers had been expecting 90,000-95,000 fans for the three games, so the cancellation meant a loss of some $450,000-$475,000.

Fans and players alike missed the game as baseball went through its dark weekend. Typical of the reaction to the strike was Pat Lindia, a salesman and baseball fan from Fairfield, Va., who was forced to watch a baseball rebroadcast on television rather than the real thing.

"I find this whole thing really upsetting," said Lindia. "Here I am, sitting around with a few beers, ready to relax, and all there is to watch is a rerun of the 1975 World Series."

Yogi Berra, the New York Yankee coach, seemed to reflect those in baseball uniform with his remark that, "It feels funny being here now at home."

Berra has spent the past 35 years in the big leagues as a player, manager or coach. "I feel like I should be wearing a uniform somewhere," he said. "Sometimes I think I always have one on. It's the first weekend I've had off during the summertime in I don't know how many years... a long time."

Ernie Harwell, the veteran broadcaster who does the Tigers' games, spent the weekend working around his new house in the Detroit suburbs, "fixing up the place, watering the garden, things like that."

in the fifth and led, 4-3, after six innings.

Post 39 then grabbed the lead in the seventh and never lost it. With one gone, Mark Douglas singled and went to third on Mitch Brann's double. Walsh then singled home both runners and Pitt County led, 5-4.

Post 39 added an insurance run in the eighth. Roger Williams singled and went to second on a bunt by Sammy Hodges. Mark Douglas then walked to load the bases and Mitch Brann followed with a walk to force home Williams and give Pitt County a 6-4 lead.

No one for Snow Hill had more than one hit.

Hagler Bloodies Antuofermo

Antuofermo Beaten

His face battered, Vito Antuofermo talks with newsmen after losing to Marvin Hagler Saturday night in a fifth-round TKO in their middleweight championship bout at the Boston Garden. (AP Laserphoto)

BOSTON (AP) — It seemed like Vito Antuofermo's blood was everywhere except in Vito Antuofermo.

It gushed from a gash on his forehead and splattered onto Marvin Hagler's white boxing shoes. It streamed from a cut on his cheekbone. It flowed from a deep cut over his right eye and spattered onto his appropriately bright red trunks.

The bleeding, a curse throughout Antuofermo's boxing career, haunted him once again Saturday night as Hagler stopped him after just four rounds to retain the world middleweight championship.

Hagler threw everything in his arsenal at the former titleholder from New York. Swift combinations; thundering left hooks; straight rights.

But the champ did the most damage with his shiny, shaven head, butting Antuofermo twice to open cuts that kept the challenger from answering the bell for the fifth round.

"He didn't beat me — he outboxed me," complained Antuofermo, who opposed his cornermen's efforts to stop the fight. "So what's a little bleeding. I could have gone on. I'm cut, but I'm not hurt. I'm in good shape."

"Outboxed?" responded Hagler, who has 52 victories and has not lost in 27 straight fights dating back to 1976. "He was gone. He was beat. It was just a matter of time anyway."

Referee Davey Pearl apparently agreed. "I had Hagler pitching a shutout," he said when asked how he scored the first four rounds.

Hagler confessed to the butts, but called them unintentional.

"He came at me. It was his mistake," Hagler said of the first butt less than a minute into the fight. "On the second one (in the fourth round), I was going through my combinations, going down for a belly shot. It was an accidental butt."

"I wasn't looking to cut him up. I was looking to put him out," the champ from Brockton, Mass., continued. "He sure has a hard head. But they should have stopped it in the first round for his own safety."

Antuofermo, naturally, had a different opinion. "You've got a dirty fighter here," he said. "Hagler should have been disqualified."

Antuofermo banged heads with Hagler early in the first round and came away with a wicked forehead gash.

The challenger's trainer, Freddie Brown, tried to stop the fight after the first round, demanding that Pearl call a draw because Hagler had committed an illegal butt.

But after a delay of several minutes, as the Boston Garden crowd of 8,654 grew surly and began tossing paper cups, Massachusetts Boxing Commissioner Walter Byers ordered the fight to continue.

"It was an unintentional butt and Antuofermo caused it himself — he ran into Hagler," Byers said.

Hagler knocked Antuofermo down with a stinging left hook in the third round and then caught him in the next round with a right uppercut that sliced open the challenger's right cheekbone. The two fighters bumped heads again later in the fourth round, cutting Antuofermo above the eye.

Four of Antuofermo's six losses, against 46 victories, have come because of cuts. Last fall, Antuofermo tried to solve the problem by having a surgeon shave down the sharp bones over his eyes.

Antuofermo lost a chance to regain the title he held for just two fights in 1978-79, including a controversial 15-round draw with Hagler in Las Vegas.

Antuofermo retained the title after the draw, which is the only blemish on Hagler's 27-fight unbeaten string.

Antuofermo, 28, lost his title last year to Alan Minter, whom Hagler knocked out last September to win the crown. Hagler, 29, earned $500,000 in his second successful title defense, while Antuofermo got $200,000.

The champ, who retained the only boxing title recognized by both the World Boxing Association and the World Boxing Council, vowed to buy his mother a new house with his winnings.

Leon Beaten, Holmes Waits...

DETROIT (AP) — Having destroyed challenger Leon Spinks quickly and efficiently to defend his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship, Larry Holmes now must cool his heels for a while.

There simply is no one else around for the 31-year-old champ to fight right now.

Two of the best young heavyweights available also scored impressive victories on the undercard of the Holmes-Spinks fight Friday night. Greg Page disposed of veteran Alfredo Evangelista in 40 seconds of the second round and Michael Dokes knocked out John L. Gardner, the British and European champion, at 1:54 of the fourth.

But Holmes has eliminated Dokes as a potential opponent because the youngster is managed by the son of Don King, who promotes the champion's fights. That kind of relationship would create too many suspicions for a sport which hardly needs them.

And Page, with just 16 professional fights under his belt, needs more experience. Both men, it seems, will have to wait until Holmes is through with the boxing business.

That leaves Gerry Cooney, whose devastating first round knockout of Ken Norton left him as the No. 1 challenger. King offered Cooney $5 million for a match with Holmes but the youngster reportedly is already committed to an October date with World Boxing Association champion Mike Weaver, though the WBA has not given its sanction to that bout.

Holmes knocked out Weaver once but a title unification bout is always a possibility. Still, King's keen promotional mind knows that there would be more money to be made from a Holmes-Cooney fight, especially with the public animosity the two men have displayed for each other.

"Let him come in here today and I'll punch him in the mouth for free," Holmes said moments after finishing off Spinks at 2:34 of the third round Friday night. "He's a white hope, that's all he is. He's hasn't fought anybody. If he was black, he'd be nowhere."

It sounded like the traditional fight hype but Holmes' dislike for Cooney seems genuine. That could be a serious problem for the youngster from New York's Long Island, because against Spinks, Holmes looked absolutely awesome.

Spinks came out stalking, trying to turn the bout into an alley fight. Holmes kept sticking the challenger with accurate lefts and rights, scoring repeatedly.

In the second round, the two men slugged it out toe-to-toe on the ropes, each throwing roundhouse shots. In the third, Holmes took control, banging away on Spinks and sending him tumbling to the canvas for a nine-count before finishing the job.

Then, in a postfight interview, announcer Howard Cosell brought over Cooney, who was at ringside. Holmes angrily waved the young heavyweight away, accidentally slamming the microphone into the television man's mouth and causing superficial damage.

Holmes craves public acceptance and the Spinks knockout, his 28th in 38 professional victories, may have finally earned it for him.

...For Collision With Rival Gerry Cooney

DETROIT (AP) — They are two mighty heavyweights on a collision course, and the resultant wreckage could be devastating.

It's been a long time — certainly not since the slambang three-match series of Muhammad Ali and Smokin' Joe Frazier — that boxing could contemplate such an interesting matchup as that between Larry Holmes and Gerry Cooney.

Too bad it has to get ugly. It already is ugly and uglier it'll get as the racial issue festers and grows until the two meet in bloody combat.

Holmes, normally a nice guy, has seen fit to bring the sensitive social problem to the fore while the country as a whole is seeking to cool it.

Nobody knows why Holmes dislikes Cooney so much. Yet the undefeated WBC champion never makes reference to his logical next challenger without bringing up the color of Cooney's skin.

"I just don't like the guy," Holmes has said repeatedly. "I feel that people are pushing him just because he is white."

The animosity between the two — and every indication is that it is genuine although everybody knows fight people often fabricate such rivalries to hype a gate — resurfaced last Friday night when Holmes battered Leon Spinks in less than three rounds in Detroit's Joe Louis Arena.

The tone of it was unsettling. In his postfight exuberance, Holmes went to great lengths to cast aspersions on the good-looking New Yorker, his next logical challenger, while emphasizing racial differences.

He made snide references to Long Island's handsome and popular "White Hope." When he stuck in the verbal knife, he twisted the blade.

"If he was black, he wouldn't be anybody," Holmes said of Cooney.

Then he added: "He's a deformed kid with only a left arm."

As if that wasn't enough, Holmes continued his not-so-subtle knife work.

"A few years ago I taught at a camp for retarded kids, and I think he was one of them."

Then he said Spinks, not Cooney, should be the No. 1 contender despite Leon's humiliating defeat. "Spinks is the best — he just needs somebody to look out for him," Holmes added.

Cooney has not struck back with equal venom although he has chided both Holmes and Holmes' Svengali, promoter Don King, for continuing to insinuate that Cooney is purposely ducking the WBC champion.

The latest of these episodes also occurred Friday night when King circulated a notice along the press rows that he was offering Cooney $5 million to fight Holmes in October. "Lies, just lies," retorted Cooney. "King knows we have signed to fight Mike Weaver. He is just doing this for show."

Cooney was at ringside for the Holmes-Spinks fight and took the liberty to squeeze up to the apron to take movies of the action. The crowd gave him a thunderous ovation when he was introduced from the ring.

It's easy to understand Holmes' resentment since he has labored so many years in Ali's shadow without due recognition and now is being upstaged by a middle class white kid from the suburbs of New York.

Boxing, which had only one black heavyweight champion in 55 years (Jack Johnson) now hasn't had a white one since Sweden's Ingemar Johansson reigned in 1959-60.

Cooney thus is a novelty. More than that, he represents a middle class suburban upbringing — itself a rarity in this business — and he has fascinated the public not only with his boyish good looks and down home naturalness but with the explosive destructiveness of his left hand.

He has knocked out most of his foes two rounds or less, the last two victims the veterans Ron Lyle and Ken Norton.

At 24, he is five years younger than Holmes, at 6-6 three inches taller and at 225 some 12 pounds heavier. He is a ring assassin.

Holmes, also unbeaten professionally with 38 victories and 28 knockouts, no longer has to prove his worth. He is a tough, poised and dominating fighter who has outclassed all his peers.

After crushing Spinks, Holmes was asked if he saw anybody on the horizon who might give him some competition.

"None of them," Holmes snapped. "Nobody in the world can beat me."

Cooney has got to be shown.

Writers Talks Resume, Breakdown Once Again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producers put talks with striking writers on hold as they prepared for new talks with directors today.

Talks with the writers broke down Sunday after a spasm of negotiations.

In Sunday's surprise session, negotiators for the Writers Guild of America put forward new proposals for taking the sticky issue of how to give writers a share of pay-TV money off the bargaining table.

A counterproposal by the producers was rejected, and talks recessed once again, according to Barbara Brogliatti, spokeswoman for the producers' negotiating committee.

She said no further talks were planned, and further negotiations were complicated by today's talks with the Directors Guild of America, which has a July 1 strike deadline of its own.

A strike by the directors would close down the industry and delay the fall TV season as happened last year when actors struck for 10 weeks over the home-video issue.

Under the proposal rejected by the writers, producers would recoup $1 million of the cost of making a one-hour program produced on videotape and $1.5 million for a program produced on film before writers would get a share of the proceeds, she said. The amount of the percentage was not discussed before talks broke off.

The writers, on strike since April 11, originally asked for 2.75 percent of the producers' gross for pay-TV programs after producers recouped $1 million in costs for each hour of programming.

The writers' first proposal simply called for producers not to enter the pay-TV field, while the second proposal would allow producers to begin working in pay-TV for a year before the reimbursing formula took effect, according to Leonard Chassman, executive director of the writers' union.

Sunday's session followed a breakdown in talks Saturday. Earlier in the week both sides were optimistic a settlement was near in the nine-week strike.

Except for the home-video provisions, the only items holding up a settlement in the writers' dispute were minimum pay scales and the length of the contract.

Writers, who currently earn a minimum $9,434 for a one-hour television show and $26,326 for a feature film script, had asked for a 100 percent increase in those fees.

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's Alpha Repertory Television Service plunged into the unknown April 12 as the first of the cable systems spawned by network TV, and in the two months since then has been working on an identity designed to attract both viewers and advertisers.

ARTS, as the ABC cable network is called, began with about 3.5 million potential viewers hooked into 700 cable systems nationwide. By the first week in June, the prospective audience had increased to 4.6 million subscribers to 1,178 cable systems.

"Who will ever know how much we had to do with that increase," says Herb Granath, who administers ARTS as vice president for ABC Video Services. "But the mail, the reviews, everything I have seen has been positive."

ARTS reaches subscribers served by the Nickelodeon channel for young people, a product of the Warner Amex Satellite Entertainment Co.

Attracting the advertiser has been a problem, and to this point, ABC has carried ARTS, presumably at a small expense. But Granath says that may be changing soon.

"We felt we had to be careful not to alienate people who might be more interested in the non-commercial children's channel, which we share," the ABC executive says. "We decided at first that we would run only billboard-type commercials."

"We discovered early that that did not appeal to advertisers."

Later this month, Granath says, ARTS will begin accepting traditional commercials, "though nothing hard-sell."

CBS Cable, scheduled to premiere in October, will be advertiser-supported, while RCA's planned Entertainment Channel and public TV's Public Subscriber Network will be pay services — provided subscribers at additional cost.

"As long as there exists a no-pay service, it's going to be difficult for anyone to come in and start exacting payment from subscribers," Granath says of ABC's decision to offer ARTS as a basic service.

ARTS provides subscribers with three hours of programming each night, beginning at 9 EDT. Programs are presented in a "theme week" format, with individual segments linked by commentary from personalities like Olivia de Havilland, Anne Baxter and George Kennedy.

The week of June 22-28, for instance, features ARTS' "Verdi at La Scala," a selection of the Verdi opera performed at the famous La Scala Opera House in Milan.

Programming the week of June 15-21, "Paris: The Dream and the Reality," and the week of June 29-July 5, "There'll Always Be an England," which was shown previously.

Granath says the aim is to appeal to as wide an audience as possible — and to one not served by the competition, both current and anticipated.

"From what I read," he says, "we will be the narrowest in our approach, concentrating primarily on the visual arts."

RCA's Entertainment Channel, for example, will feature a broad range of entertainment, including comedy, drama, feature films and children's programming. CBS Cable, which will offer performing arts programming, recently announced plans for several series, including a new version of "The Quiz Kids," "The Jack Gilford Show" and "A Walk Through the 20th Century" with Bill Moyers.

"We certainly don't want to alienate the true culture buff," Granath says of ARTS, "but at the same time, we don't want to appeal just to those people."

"We'll continue with opera and ballet and the like," he says, "but the one thing that will be heightened will be our theatrical content."

"We're silent partners in 'Amadeus,' on Broadway now, and we have just taken the major step to help back the new Hal Prince-Stephen Sondheim musical, 'Merrily We Roll Along.' Both of those will be on ARTS in the future."

"Probably the first theatrical thing we do will be 'Tintypes,' which we took up when it was Off-Off Broadway," Granath says.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — WILD SPRING SHOWERS DROWNED GORGEOUS WHITE TULIPS

Today's Cryptoquip clue: L equals D

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Jackson signed HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kate Jackson, one of the original "Charlie's Angels," has signed with MGM to co-star with world-famed operatic tenor Luciano Pavarotti in the romantic comedy, "Yes, Giorgio."

Miss Jackson will play an accomplished American physician pitted against her reluctant patient, a famous Italian opera star.

"Yes, Giorgio" will begin filming on locations in Boston, New York, San Francisco and Italy this month. Miss Jackson recently completed starring in "Making Love" and "Dirty Tracks."

Academy cutback HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The television Academy's Emmy awards, which usually produce larger parades of winners before the cameras than any other awards show, will cut back on the number of on-camera winners this year.

The academy board has voted to hand out a maximum of 23 Emmys during the 33rd annual awards program Sept. 13. The previous on-the-air awards minimum was 33 in 1979.

A spokesman for the TV academy said it hoped the reduction would enable the telecast to stay within its scheduled 2 1/2 hours.

By CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

RETIRED CHAMPION

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A872 ♠AQJ1073 ♠83 ♦8

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 Pass 1 Pass

2 Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Don't bid a timid four hearts. Despite the fact that partner could do no more than make a simple raise, your hand has slam potential. If partner has the right minimum, you could easily be cold for twelve tricks. Your hand rates one move, and the obvious one is to bid two spades. If partner makes no constructive move over that effort, you can still settle for four hearts.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠QJ7 ♠A10763 ♠8 ♦A104

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

4 ♦ Dbl. Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Partner's double is not intended purely as takeout—at this level it shows a good hand. If he wanted to force you to bid, he could have ventured four no trump. Certainly, you might have a slam but there is no simple way to find out. Pass. You should collect a substantial penalty from four spades doubled and you are still a heavy favorite to win the rubber.

Q.3—East West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q762 ♠A1097652 ♠86

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♦ 1 2 ♦ 4

5 ♣ Pass 6 ♦ ?

What action do you take?

A.—We have no reason to expect that we can defeat an opposing slam even if partner leads a diamond, so we intend sacrificing at six hearts. However, it costs us nothing to bid six diamonds en route. That lead directing bid should enable partner to get off to the right attack should the opponents heedlessly continue on to a grand slam.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KQJ72 ♠KQ843 ♠K6 ♦KQ

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass

2 ♣ Pass 4 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—We cannot conceive of a hand where partner would bid this way without, at least, two aces. Therefore, this is a perfect hand for the Blackwood convention, since you must be safe at the five-level. Your final contract will depend entirely on how many aces partner shows in response to your inquiry, and it could be anywhere from five spades to seven spades.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J982 ♠75 ♠AK3 ♦AJ76

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

2 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Your hand has just improved a little. While the point count might be minimum, your values are all prime, which is excellent for suit play, and you have a fourth trump. In addition, your doubleton heart in partner's "game-try" suit is another plus. We would bid four spades.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A109 ♠KQ93 ♠AQ104

♠104

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Your hand is just worth a raise because of the body given it by your tens and nines—those soft values are very important for no trump play. Partner may have 9 or 10 points for his no trump response, so the combined holding could be enough for game. Invite with two no trump.

Marie's mama

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Marie Osmond will portray her own mother, Olive, in "Side by Side," a two-hour NBC biographical drama of the saga of the Osmond family.

"Side by Side" will cover a period of some 20 years in the Utah family's history, including the courtship of 18-year-old Olive Davis and her future husband, George Osmond.

The story will encompass the use of music to teach two of the Osmond's sons who suffered hearing impairment, a step which led to the family's musical fortunes.

FDR documentary

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The 100th anniversary of Franklin D. Roosevelt's birth, Jan. 30, 1982, will be observed with a special two-hour documentary to be produced by Centennial Productions.

The star-studded entertainment tribute, "FDR Remembered," will be telecast on the 100th anniversary date next year, according to producer Peter Kovler.

Prepare for More, Less Soviet Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet oil production could rise or fall in the next 10 years but it will not likely drop by the significant amount the CIA says is possible, according to a new Library of Congress study.

This uncertainty should prompt U.S. policymakers to adopt a flexible approach, ready to cope with Soviet pressure on Western oil supplies but also open to possible expansion of East-West energy cooperation, the Congressional Research Service study concludes.

Rep. Gillis Long, D-La., who released the study Sunday, said a planned new natural gas pipeline from northwestern Siberia to Western Europe has just as major political and economic implications.

Eventually, the Yamal pipeline could supply up to one-third of West Germany's gas needs. But Long, chairman of the congressional Joint Economic Committee's subcommittee on international trade, said the project would require about $15 billion in Western credits.

"The overall implications of increased Soviet-European interdependence makes this development a major issue in Washington and other Western capitals, as well as in Moscow," Long said.

Sen. Jack Garn, R-Utah, and two conservative House Republicans wrote President Reagan last week urging him to reconsider a Carter administration decision approving a U.S. firm's participation in the Yamal project.

"The Yamal project poses a clear and present danger to Western security, and the United States should make every effort to persuade our allies to break off negotiations with the Soviets," said the letter from Garn and Reps. John LeBoutillier of New York and James L. Nelligan of Pennsylvania.

While most Western specialists concur that the Soviet Union will be able to significantly boost its output of natural gas in coming years, there continues to be wide disagreement over Soviet oil prospects.

The CIA's most recent estimate last month forecast that Soviet petroleum output — currently the world's highest at 12.1 million barrels a day — will taper off to 10 million to 11 million barrels in 1985 and subsequently drop to 7 million to 9 million barrels by 1990.

This amounted to a substantial revision from the intelligence agency's earlier prediction that Soviet oil output would be 8 million to 10 million barrels a day by 1985, forcing Moscow to become a net petroleum importer.

The newer CIA report says this shift to oil imports could be vade unnecessary by greater Soviet investment in natural gas and other energy sources.

But the Congressional Research Service report cites a forecast by the Economic Commission for Europe estimating that Soviet oil production in the 1980s will remain steady or climb to as high as 14 million barrels a day.

"Soviet oil output growth may slow down, level off, or moderately fall, but a sharp fall from over 12 million barrels per day to 8 million (the CIA estimate) in the next decade, although possible, in our judgment seems to be an unduly pessimistic projection for 1990," the CRS study said.

It said the Soviets have a variety of options. Among them is putting greater stress on natural gas, coal, nuclear and hydroelectric energy resources to offset any declining oil output.

"If the Soviet Union is able to continue to sell oil and expand natural gas exports, this capability will be an important factor in East-West economic expansion and a significant Soviet diplomatic tool," the CRS report said.

It added, however, that if domestic shortages force Soviet withdrawal from energy trade with Western Europe, "considerable economic and diplomatic opportunities will be lost by the U.S.S.R." — while pressure on Mideast oil increases.

"Our diplomatic posture should be prepared for a two-track response" to deal with the different possibilities, the study said.

 A downpayment of 10% of the amount of the bid will be required with your sealed bid at the time of the bid opening, either by certified check, cashier's check or money order, made payable to HUD. The sales closing must take place within 30 days from the acceptance of the offer. The offer that is accepted will be on the basis of the highest sealed bid exceeding the established minimum price. All offers must be submitted by sealed bids only to the Greensboro Area Office (completely addressed) up to June 24, 1981 at 4:45 p.m. and they will be opened at 10:30 a.m. on June 25, 1981. To be eligible for consideration each bid must be firm, unconditional, responsive, based in one specific amount and not in the alternative. HUD reserves the right to accept the bid it deems most advantageous to HUD or cancel and no bids on individual properties will be considered. If no bids are received up to the closing date, the bulk package will be sold on a first-come first-served basis and further notice. Telegraphic bids will not be accepted. In the event that the successful high bidder fails or is unable to close the sale within 30 days, the 10% downpayment will be forfeited to HUD.
