Power Demand Soars As Blistering Heat Rages

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Soaring temperatures and high humidity sent eastern North Carolinians running to their air conditioners for refuge Monday and today, pushing power peaks abreast with last year's levels.

In Greenville, where temperatures topped 97 degrees yesterday, electricity usage peaked at 130 megawatts, the heaviest load this year, noted Greenville Utilities' acting director Malcolm Green.

"Our highest peak in 1980 was 135 megawatts, so you can see we are experiencing very high demand indeed," commented Green. "We may pass that peak today." Green added that he expected today to be the peak day for the month of June.

"We did use our load management equipment yesterday," he continued, "and we'll probably use it again today." The acting director estimated use of this equipment shaved six-seven megawatts off peaks.

"We did not experience any power outages from the heat," said Green, urging people to "conserve — now is the time."

According to the utilities' water plant, high and low temperatures for Monday were 97 degrees Fahrenheit and 74 degrees. Saturday and Sunday were carbon copies, with highs setting at 97 degrees on Sunday and 92 on Saturdays. Nighttime lows hovered at 70 degrees or above.

Humidity remains high, reaching 95 percent Monday and climbing to approximately 60 percent by 10 a.m. today. At 8 a.m. the temperature was 84 degrees.

The heavy loads and hot weather created havoc with air conditioning units and local dealers report they are swamped with service calls. According to Jim Clark, service manager of Greenville Heating, company repairmen worked until midnight Sunday and Monday nights trying to catch up.

"About 45 calls came in from the weekend and yesterday and we are still answering calls," noted Clark. "We have had to turn down many, about 20 calls perhaps, just because we couldn't get to them."

Riddle Brothers reported their situation was similar. "We've had around 25 calls a day," said a spokesperson, "and we've had even more we've had to turn down." Both businesses said 6-10 calls per day was a normal number.

Crops in the county are holding their own against the heat, according to agricultural officials. "It's hot and the crops look droopy," noted county chairman Leroy James, "but the relief they're getting at night is keeping them all right."

James added that if the hot weather continues, yellowing on tobacco and corn leaves will appear.

"The animals are having an especially hard time with the heat," noted the chairman. "Egg producers are experiencing a drop in yield and pork producers will see a drop in conception rates in their sows as well as some decrease in weight gain."

No serious heat-related injuries have occurred in the area to date. "We've treated about a half dozen people so far for heat exhaustion," said chief of emergency services at Pitt Memorial Hospital Jack Allison. "In contrast, last year we about a half dozen heat stroke victims, which is much more serious." Allison noted two of last year's victims died.

"Three out of the six afflicted with heat exhaustion this year had been fighting a fire in Farmville," added the chief of services. "It was a combination of the fire and the hot temperatures that exhausted them."

Jon Tingelstad To Head City School Board

By JERRY RAYNOR

Dr. Jon Tingelstad was elected by acclamation as chairman of the Greenville Board of Education at the action meeting of the board Monday night. Sue Zadeits was elected vice-chairman. Mrs. Zadeits and Donovan Phillips were nominees for the vice-chairman position. The appointments are effective for a one year period, July 1, 1981 to June 30, 1982.

The election coincided with the resignation of Mrs. Nancy M. Jenkins, who has been chairman for the past year. She tendered her resignation earlier, to be effective today, June 16. The City Council is scheduled on July 9 to appoint a board member to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Jenkins.

Insurance coverage on vehicles and buildings (including contents) was approved at last night's meeting. The winning low bid for vehicle insurance was that of $5,863.74 submitted by Tadlock Insurance Agency. The insurance covers a fleet of vehicles valued at about $300,000.

The Professional Insurance Consultants, a multi-peril specialist insurance firm, was the acceptable low bid submitter at $11,688 for insurance coverage of buildings and contents of the city school system, valued at approximately $25 million. Stuart L. Buchanan, a local insurance consultant, is the representative for the Professional Insurance Consultants. The insurance contract is for a three-year period, with annual premiums of $11,688.

Other agenda items approved at Monday night's meeting are:

President's Office Bombed

Bani-Sadr's Fate Placed On Line By Parliament

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's Parliament voted overwhelmingly today to hold a debate on President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's political competence that could lead to his impeachment, Tehran Radio reported. A bomb went off at Bani-Sadr's offices but caused no casualties.

Officers from Tehran's revolutionary prosecutor's department also raided the president's offices with arrest warrants for an undisclosed number of Bani-Sadr's aides, a presidential spokesman said. He said those sought were not found and no one was arrested.

There were also unconfirmed reports that Mehdi Bazargan, Iran's first post-revolution prime minister and a strong supporter of Bani-Sadr, will be arrested.

Parliament Speaker Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaking to thousands of demonstrators outside Parliament calling for the Bani-Sadr's removal, said the debate on Bani-Sadr's competence will begin Wednesday, Tehran Radio said.

The debate, demanded by 120 deputies of the 215-member Parliament, or Majlis, will be public, the official Iranian news agency Pars said.

Pars said Bani-Sadr will be allowed 10 hours to present his defense, and it will take a majority vote by the Majlis to strip him of his few remaining presidential powers.

An official at the presidential compound said a bomb exploded at the compound Monday night but caused no injuries. Asked where Bani-Sadr was at the time of the blast, the spokesman said, "I really can't tell you. I don't know."

A spokesman at Bani-Sadr's office told The AP an explosive charge went off in the courtyard of the presidential compound about 150 yards north of Bani-Sadr's office.

The spokesman, who declined to be identified by name, said the blast occurred a few hours after an estimated half-million demonstrators marched in the streets of Tehran chanting "Death to Bani-Sadr."

The Jomhuri Eslami newspaper, which speaks for the fundamentalist Islamic Republican Party that is leading the campaign to oust Bani-Sadr, said the explosion occurred in the basement below the president's office. It also said no casualties resulted and the president was unharmed.

The blast followed Bani-Sadr's rejection of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's demands for a public apology. He accused Iran's leader of being unjust to him.

But the beleaguered, 47-year-old president said in a statement his allegiance to the 81-year-old patriarch "will not decrease with your anger." He accused Khomeini's advisers of giving him "false reports to deprive you and your country of your deserving child."

Naviv Bazargan, son of Mehdi Bazargan, told The Associated Press office in Beirut by telephone that he had received an anonymous telephone tip that his father will be arrested.

The elder Bazargan, the first prime minister of Iran after the downfall of the monarchy in February 1979, heads the Freedom Movement of Iran. His son said he was aware of the threatened arrest, but attended the Parliament session that voted for a debate on Bani-Sadr's competence.

The clerics and their front man, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, have steadily extended their hold on the government since winning control of the Majlis in the elections last spring and summer. Bani-Sadr, the standard bearer of the moderate, leftist and secular factions in the Iranian revolution, finally lost the power struggle last week when Khomeini removed him from his last position of any authority, commander in chief of the armed forces, leaving him a figurehead president.

Board Gets Budget Plea

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Officials of four Pitt County agencies — Pitt Community College, the Department of Social Services, the Pitt County Board of Education, and the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority, met with Pitt County Commissioners on Monday afternoon to present requests during sessions on budget considerations.

Clifton Everett, Sr., chairman of the board of directors, Pitt Community College, was spokesman for additional funds request for the institution amounting to a total of $82,239.

Everett averred that PCC "is at a point where we cannot admit more students. We have reached full capacity. At any given time our classrooms are all full. If we cannot add additional classroom space, then we will have to tell some applicants that we cannot take them."

Of the $81,239 additional budget funds being sought by Pitt Community College, $50,000 would be for adding three mobile units for classroom spaces. Another item is $20,342 for street work and parking spaces, $5,200 is requested for hiring a security officer for night work, and the remaining amount requested would cover rents, contractual services, work study, and a new oil burner.

Ed Garrison, director of the Department of Social Services, presented a request for the addition of $74,975 in reserve county funds to match Title 20 federal funds if such funding becomes available after October 1. If approved, the $74,975 request would raise the grand total of the Department of Social Services budget in Pitt County to $4,053,321.

Garrison explained that the uncertainty of funding at federal and state levels necessitated having this amount available for matching funds. "Otherwise you risk Congress

Monkey Birthday

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — A spin in space and a climate-controlled home have done wonders for the aging Miss Baker, who is already about twice as old as her life expectancy. She'll be 24 today.

More than 500 kindergarten youngsters are to be on hand for the birthday celebration for the tiny squirrel monkey who was the first creature to survive an American space flight.

The life expectancy for squirrel monkeys is only 10 to 15 years.

Postal Workers Seek Contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of postal unions said today that salaries and safety conditions will be major issues as they began negotiations with the Postal Service on a new labor agreement that will have a major impact on the cost of mailing a letter.

Because nearly seven-eighths of Postal Service expenses go for labor, any sizable wage increase will necessitate higher postal rates.

Postmaster General William F. Bolger, who was not at the ceremonial opening session, issued a statement saying the talks covering 600,000 workers whose contracts expire July 20 will not be easy.

"But ... the task will be eased if there is recognition on the union side of the vast gain made in employee compensation, benefits, job security and work conditions in recent years."

Negotiations with two smaller postal union begin later this week. The talks were delayed seven weeks

AID FOR SINGLES

I am single and am unemployed and my unemployment has run out. My utility and rent bills are due and I can't pay them. I have been to the Department of Social Services and they told me unless I had a child I could not get assistance except for foodstamps. I have also been to the Salvation Army and various other Greenville agencies who also would not give assistance. It's like society is saying I've got to have a child to get help and it's just not fair.

Hotline contacted the Department of Social Services and inquired about aid for singles in trouble. According to a spokesman for the department, aid is not offered to singles unless they are unwell or have a dependent child. However, singles may get some relief through foodstamps. Other agencies reported that they do not have services for singles as such, but can supply minimal help. Churches in the area likewise provide some relief from $15 to $20 per church. None of these sources are set up to provide extensive relief to healthy single persons. Spokesman for the Real Crisis Center, Mary Smith, added that what little help is given now in emergency situations is going to be severely limited by the passage of Reagan's budget cuts.

Despite Critics, Federal Government Isn't All Bad

(Last of A Series).

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

The federal government is easily ridiculed for its bureaucratic excesses, its stifling regulations, its intrusive Big Brotherism.

But against that, one needs to recall it was the federal government, not the states or private industry or private charity or the free marketplace, that sustained the country in the Great Depression and saved it from revolution. It was the federal government that ended slavery in the South and had to come back 100 years later with "swarms of officers" to make that liberation real.

It is the federal government that insists management pay labor overtime for overtime work, that cushions the shock of dismissal and prevents child labor. It is the federal government that keeps the poor and the aged out of county poor farms and back attics.

It is the federal government that keeps Wall Street honest, makes bank deposits safer, makes the air and the water cleaner, reduces deaths in the mine shafts of Pennsylvania, keeps horrors like thalidomide from disfiguring our babies, makes American airways the safest among the world's busiest, and keeps chaos out of our airwaves by controlling shares to the small Citizen Band owner and the big television networks.

It is the federal government and its loans which keep many small and large business men in business, many farmers on the family farm, many students in college. It is the federal government which injected new life into many downtown areas of the dying cities, with money for new hotels, parking garages, civic centers and open plazas. It is the federal government that gave Detroit its Renaissance Center and Baltimore a revitalized harbor.

"I have no apologies for the federal government being interested in people, in nutrition, education, health and transportation," Hubert Humphrey once said. "Who's going to take care of the environment and establish standards? You? Me? Who's going to work out our transportation problems? The B & O railroad?"

Others ask, who would do all this with better planning and greater efficiency? Franklin Roosevelt made the economic welfare of Americans a federal commitment. In his turn, Lyndon Johnson took the ball and ran with it — ran away with it, some say.

More aid to the poor. More foreign aid. Supreme Court decisions to ensure the rights of minorities and the accused. Food stamps. Medicare. Affirmative action. Job training. Child care. School lunches. Housing and rent subsidies. Corporate subsidies. Educational aid. Urban renewal. Consumer programs. Wars on poverty and cancer and pollution. Projects to combat heart disease, reduce mental illness, raise reading scores, reduce juvenile delinquency.

All of it was part of what seemed like an unquestioning national momentum to take the risk and inequity out of life, in ghettos and board rooms, in factories and farms, in schools and homes. And people voted for the candidates who made government bigger, Republican as well as Democratic, and before long Washington was into everything from the number of Hispanic teachers in Waukegan to the number of prongs in the electric plugs of a bakery in West Warwick, R.I.

Much was attempted, much was accomplished, much ended up a mess. Where failure resulted, it usually was attributed, in retrospect, to an excessive confidence in what government could do. The war on poverty fed and housed the poor but largely failed to make them self-sufficient. Subsidized housing provided better housing but no less crime in the disrupted neighborhoods. Federal efforts to improve student learning fell far short of their spectacular promises.

Between 1961 and 1973, Washington sprouted 141 new agencies, more than a third of the current total, and none disappeared.

Twenty years ago, federal money going to the state and local governments was slightly more than $7 billion. Now there are nearly 500 programs that cost $88 billion. Then, there were few regulations tied to the money. Now there are 1,260 sets of rules. Then, federal aid went almost entirely to the 50 states. Now it also goes directly to 65,000 cities, towns and wide bends in the road.

A commission appointed by Congress last year concluded that the constitutional system of shared and separate powers among federal, state and local governments is "in trouble."

"The federal government's influence," the commission said, "has become more pervasive, more intrusive, more unmanageable, more ineffective, more costly and, above all, more unaccountable. The intergovernmental system today is a bewildering and bewildering maze of complex, overlapping and, often, conflicting relationships."

Elmer Staats, as head of the General Accounting Office, spent 15 years ferreting out waste, fraud and sloppy management in Washington. He found plenty. He is not naive about the bureaucracy. He says:

"Americans have come to expect more and more from government while trusting it less. Many of the same individuals who bemoan the growth of government are the first to seek its help when their own interests are involved."

"They deary the government bureaucrats but are unwilling to accept positions in government because the salaries are too low or the ethical requirements too high. They speak out at every opportunity against the encroachment of government but fail to speak up when asked to volunteer for community endeavors. They most often assert demands or speak of rights rather than duty, obligation or responsibility. They see nothing inconsistent with pleading for tax reduction yet expecting public services to remain the same."

"The once prized characteristic of American society of hard work and self-reliance too often has given way to the view that 'someone else should do it' or someone else should pay the bill, that someone else being government."

Successful Visit

A Bloodmobile visit yesterday at Procter & Gamble here resulted in a new collection high for the plant, according to Mrs. Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross.

Mrs. Taylor said plant donors gave 84 pints of blood during the successful visit. Seven persons were deferred for various health reasons, she added.

The Red Cross official offered her thanks to Pam Gardner, plant nurse, and her staff for their efforts yesterday and she also extended special thanks to the women of the Greenville Service League and the volunteer nurses.

Mrs. Taylor said the blood program appreciates the opportunity to visit the plant, where employees are able to make time in their schedules to donate. She added that Bob Griffin, plant manager, headed the list of donors that included several staff members.

Noting that blood collections are usually slow during the summer, Mrs. Taylor said the blood program needs "every pint we can get." She added that the new collection high at P&G comes at a critical time.

The next Bloodmobile visit will be on July 2 at East Carolina University, followed by a special visit on Sunday, July 5 at Pitt Memorial Hospital to help meet the needs of the July 4 holiday period.

Organization Relations; and Chapter M, Education Agency Relations.

A modification added to the Organization Relations policy deals with organizations such as booster clubs working directly in school affairs. The adopted addition is that such organizations shall submit by-laws and regulations to the board for the board's knowledge, review and approval.

The adoption of these three chapters leaves four chapters yet to be reviewed and adopted.

Adoption of three budget amendments: Budget amendment No. 13 to the Current Expense Fund. This amendment is an increase of $5,715.58 representing the receipt of $4,097 in additional CETA funds and $1,618.58 in interest income; budget amendment no. 4, School Food Service, for an increase of $17,434.53. This figure covers $25,539.82 in U.S. Department of Agriculture grants less $8,105.29 for loss in revenue of lunch sales; and an unnumbered budget amendment for a $1,500 increase Federal Grants fund.

Approval to grant a high school diploma to Paula Alcock contingent on the successful completion of a literature course at East Carolina University, English 2100. "Major British Writers." Paula left Rose High School prior to the end of the first semester for early enrollment at ECU. She had earlier requested a high school diploma be granted, but action on the request had been delayed until compilation of credit hours and course content requirements could be ascertained. The board also went on record to write and adopt a firm policy governing granting of diplomas to any student who leaves high school for early college enrollment.

In a discussion held on the status of the proposed city school budget for the coming school year, board members concurred with Supt. Glenn Cox that a concerted effort must be made to request county commissioners to restore funds in at least five areas, amounting to $66,842. (The administration and board members are scheduled to meet in session with county commissioners today).

Specific items which Cox recommends as essential in being put back in the budget, ones recommended by County Manager Reginald Gray to be cut from the proposed budget are: $27,000 in teachers salary; $10,500 salary for a social worker; $18,248 in hospitalization funds for School Food Service employees; a $6,094 salary supplement for a vocational education teacher; and $5,000 for a computer terminal service.

Cox pointed out that the initial proposed budget called for an increase of about 12 percent over the current year's budget. "The recommendation made by the county manager calls for a total overall increase of $19,000, or a little less than a one percent increase.

"I feel it is the obligation of the county commissioners to give city schools and county schools enough money to provide education for our students," Cox added. "I think it's going to take a tax increase to provide even the minimum services. Otherwise we are going to go backwards in everything."

School board members also voiced objection to recommended cuts made by County Manager Gray without input from school board members. "Give us a bottom line amount to work on. We can accept that," Jerry Smith remarked, "but anyone taking that on that role for themselves is an insult to our intelligence."

Mrs. Terry Shank said "it should be remembered that we are elected and appointed officials with responsibilities to fulfill, including budget responsibilities."

In a letter from the Department of Public Instruction, Cox was notified that the application for the city schools' Title I Project has been reviewed and found acceptable. However, formal approval is not possible now since the state has not received notification of its 1982 allocation from the Department of Education in Washington, D. C. The letter further adds that "within the funding resources to be allocated later, your project will be approved as proposed."

Four Wrecks Investigated By Officers

An estimated $4,700 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police Monday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 6:04 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greenville and Crestline Boulevards involving cars driven by Jessie Johnson Averette of Route 1, Winterville, and Robin Gary Crumpler of Fremont.

Damage was estimated at $1,000 to the Averette car and $1,400 to the Crumpler vehicle.

An estimated $500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 12:50 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 700 feet south of the Greenville Boulevard intersection.

Drivers of the cars involved were identified as Ann Hasting Brocato of Ayden and Mildred Thompson McLamb of Kinston.

Cars driven by Sharon Leigh Potter of Greenville and Jean Mullin Senter of Ayden, collided about 5:20 p.m. on Charles Street, 35 feet south of the 14th Street intersection, causing $800 damage to the Senter car. Police said no damage resulted to the Potter vehicle.

changing their action on grant funds after you've made your budget, making federal money available, with no county money available to match it."

Another problem Garrison mentioned in Social Services budget planning is that of "having to negotiate to convince the N. C. State Department of Human Resources." Noting that the Human Resources Department has strict guidelines about county budgets and contributions, Garrison added "they have an ace we don't have (in planning). They can take their time and hang around until October 1 before making final decision. You can't, you're faced with projecting a budget based on the best information you have today."

County Manager Reginald Gray commented, "The Social Services budget is the most complicated of them all, and Ed Garrison has done an admirable job of preparing this difficult budget."

Pitt County Superintendent of Schools, other school administrators and members of the Pitt County School Board were on hand to advocate reconsideration of funds earmarked for capital outlay in the county school budget.

The county's original request in capital outlay funds was for $2.5 million. The county manager has recommended allocation of $402,000.

In their remarks, spokesmen focused on what they term a pressing need to go ahead with plans to build a new Ayden Middle School and two cafeterias, one at Chicod, another at Pactolus. The Ayden school was constructed in 1927 and has reached the point to where the front entrances have had to be boarded up and another entrance used for the school.

Reinstatement of $1.5 million to the capital outlay funds for the county schools is hoped for to permit early action for these facility needs. Spokesmen referred to the growing population pattern in the Ayden-Winterville area. Another comment offered is that North Carolina law stipulates the school board and county commissioners provide adequate facilities for the student population.

The final of four agencies to have a session with county commissioners Wednesday afternoon was the Airport Authority. Marvin Blount, Jr., chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority, told commissioners the basic problem in the airport operations is that "the city would like for the county to take over the whole operation."

Blount said the total operating budget this year was $130,000, and that with cutbacks in budget funds requested, it would be necessary to dip into reserve funds, of which there is now only about $40,000 remaining.

City School Board Cites Cox And Mrs. Jenkins

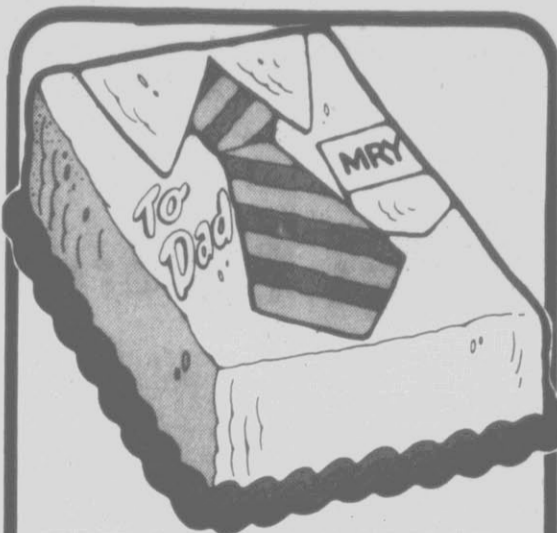

Outgoing Superintendent of City Schools Glenn Cox and resigned school board chairman Mrs. Nancy M. Jenkins were honored at Monday night's meeting of the city school board.

In a resolution of appreciation to Cox, it is noted that "during the years of 1973 to 1981 Glenn Cox did serve with distinction as Superintendent of the Greenville City Schools.

"Because of his leadership, the children of the Greenville

City Schools received equal opportunity to learning in areas of academics, athletics and cultural arts, and the children achieved consistently in these areas."

The resolution further cites "the rewards of Cox's civic, religious, and educational interests and concerns," and commends him "for his efforts and services to this public school unit."

NAACP Holds Citizen Comes Monthly Meet With A Dove In Fountain

The Pitt County Branch of the NAACP held its monthly meeting at Wilda's Chapel FWB Church in Fountain Sunday. As was announced, this meeting marked the branch's membership drive kick-off.

The special guest speaker was Reddick E. Wilkins of Warsaw, state special membership chairman. Wilkins discussed the impending threats to various social programs which directly affect the poor and minority groups. He encouraged branch members to get out into the communities and to educate the masses with regard to these issues.

Saturday was Tag Day, a fund raising campaign in support of the national officers of the NAACP. This year's theme was "Freedom Ain't Free." D.D. Garrett, president of the P.C. Branch, reports that in order to help the financial status of the national office this fund raising activity will continue throughout the county for another week.

Also on Saturday, Mrs. Annie Cohens, chairlady for the Mother of the Year Contest, hosted a banquet at the Cinnamon Tree Restaurant in Greenville. The mothers who participated in this event were honored in appreciation for the work they did this year. Mrs. Fleeta Tetterton of Simpson received a plaque and special recognition for having made the largest financial contribution to the contest.

The guest speaker for this occasion was Mrs. Otella Williams of Cedar Lane Baptist Church, Winsor. Mrs. Williams gave a brief history of the NAACP, illustrating the progress made in its 72 years of existence. She urged the women of the branch to "work faithfully by carrying a torch for humanity," and also by dutifully using their talents for the collective success of the NAACP and other civil rights organizations.

"Mothers have a great job to do in the home," she said. "Counsel and pray with your children."

Dr. Herbert Hadley, a local physician, Greenville native and life-long resident of Greenville, made a brief one-man appeal to Pitt County Commissioners on Monday.

Labeling himself "an irate taxpayer," he signified his good faith as a peaceful citizen, by sharing his appearance with a splendid artificial dove, one with shining white feathers.

Addressing his concern to the proposed increase in valuation and escalation of taxes on farm property, he said, "You have upped the valuation 400 percent, which means that next year farm property taxes will be 108 percent more, or more than double, what they were this year.

"I ask you, as a private citizen and farm property owner, to look at the budget awfully close, to remember that most tax income still comes from farm property."

Commissioners expressed appreciation for Hadley's concern and for voicing them directly to the commissioners.

BANK ROBBED

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) - Two armed men robbed the Hot Springs branch of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. Monday morning escaping with an undetermined amount of cash, authorities said.

Madison County Sheriff E.Y. Ponder said the unmasked men may have been photographed by the bank teller. The film was being processed late Monday night.

Police Chief Leroy Johnson said the men entered the bank armed with a pistol and a knife, forcing employees to give them money and then locking the only customer and the three employees in the bank vault.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Create decorating magic with Gothic-style monograms cross-stitched on even-weave fabric. These stunning decorator pillows will be the focal point of any room and make marvelous personalized gifts that say you really care.

The pillows are designed to be worked on 21-thread-to-the-inch fabric, but each stitch is taken over three threads at a time, so your stitching is fast and easy. No background filling is needed, so when the design is finished, you are ready to assemble your pillow. This is an excellent project for the beginner. The leaflet includes stitch charts, border charts and charts for the full Gothic alphabet.

To obtain instructions and charts for the pillows, send your request for Leaflet No. E-34 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. KE-34 by sending a check or money order for $12.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains instructions, embroidery floss, needle and sufficient fabric for making three pillow tops. If matching fabric for the backs of the pillows is desired, send an additional $7.50. Ivory fabric with embroidery threads in a combination of earthtone colors will be sent unless another color combination is specifically requested. Pillow forms are not included.

Dear Pat: Your recent column about your two male needlepoint students caught my eye. Hurrah! So there really are other men out there who needlepoint. I keep hearing about them, but have not yet met one. I was beginning to think I was the only male needlepointer in the world, except, of course, Rosey Grier.

MONOGRAMMED PILLOWS

I think it would be great if you would do a column on men needlepointers — or better yet — start some type of organization or newsletter by, for and of men. I have been afflicted with this "disease of needlepoint" for about eight years and have worked on all types of canvas. I have only started working on plastic within the past year or so. My favorite is petit-point and I am currently doing a set of Christmas cards and Christmas plates in petit-point.

In the eight years I have been haunting the shops here in Milwaukee, I have yet to run into another male needlepointer. Please, please tell me there are many more out there. — Peter S., St. Francis, Wis.

Yes, Peter, there really are more than you might imagine. And most of them started it when they found — or were told by their doctors — that it is one of the best, safest and cheapest ways to relieve tension. For the same reasons, many men are also turning to counted cross-stitch, which is really a first cousin to needlepoint. Beyond that statement, I really don't know how to write a column specifically for men as any instructions are certainly the same for either sex and this is an instruction-oriented column.

And I am afraid that I just don't have the spare time to start an organization or newsletter.

I can, however, print your plea. So, how about it, fellows — are there more of you out there who would like the same thing? If so, drop me a line and I will forward your cards or letters to Peter and perhaps something great will develop.

There are some organizations and publications that I think many of you — men and women alike — might be interested in. There are three major organizations for those who share a love of stitching. They are the American Needlepoint Guild, the Embroiderer's Guild of America and the National Standards Council of American Embroiderers. Each has local chapters in many cities and members-at-large as well and each publishes a regular magazine for members.

If any of you wish to write for membership information, here are the addresses: American Needlepoint Guild, Mrs. George Sayer, 5 Channel Drive, Excelsior, Minn. 55331; Embroiders Guild, 6 East 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017; and National Standards Council, Barbara Rowland, 6290 E. Pinchot, Scottsdale, Ariz. 85251.

Needlepoint News is a bimonthly magazine specifically for needlepointers. A yearly subscription is $9 and should be sent to: Needlepoint News, Box 668, Evanston, Ill. 60204.

Started eight years ago solely for cross-stitchers, Counted Thread magazine now touches on all counted-thread embroideries. This well-written and clearly illustrated magazine is published quarterly and subscriptions are $5 per year. The address is: Counted Thread Society of America, 3305 S. Newport St., Denver, Colo. 80224.

For subscribers outside of the United States, the Needlepoint News subscription rate is $11 and the Counted Thread subscription is $6.

Dear Abby

Dog Requires Much Care

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My name is Joshua and I am 7 years old. I want a dog but my mother says no. I really want one bad, Abby. I will take any kind. I promise to take care of it. How can I get my mother to let me have a dog?

WANTING A DOG

- DEAR JOSHUA: Please answer these questions:
1. Who will prepare the dog's meals?
  2. Will someone be home during the day to look after the dog?
  3. If the dog is a puppy, someone will have to exercise it at least twice a day. Who will do it?
  4. Who will pay for the dog's license, collar, shots, regular examinations at the vet's, and any emergency treatment the dog may need?
  5. Who will pay the cost of spaying or neutering your pet to prevent the birth of more unwanted puppies in a nation that already has so many? Every day, thousands are "put to sleep."
  6. Are you willing to obey all the laws concerning dogs, such as keeping it on a leash, and seeing that it doesn't do its "business" where it shouldn't?
  7. Are you willing to care for the dog as long as it lives?

Important lessons are learned from having a pet, but it takes time, money and a willingness to accept responsibility to be a dog owner. Can you handle it?

DEAR ABBY: I was a Catholic widow who married a devout Catholic widower. The problem is he won't let me into our bedroom while he's dressing or undressing. And if he's in the room while I'm undressing, he turns his head. He acts as if it's sinful for us to see each other undressed.

I thought maybe time would improve the situation, but it has been years, and he's still the same.

I must admit that our sex life is wonderful — in the dark. This may not seem like much of a problem, but it makes me feel less of a wife, and I am hurt.

What is the official Catholic position on nudity, Abby? Perhaps the reason for my husband's attitude can be found there.

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: There is no Catholic doctrine on nudity. Nudity is the natural state and is so regarded in matrimonial affairs. Don't blame your husband's inhibitions on his religious upbringing. Leave well enough alone, lady. You're doing well where it counts.

DEAR ABBY: I just buried my beloved husband of 20 years, and here are some of the questions I was asked at the funeral:

1. Are you going to get married again?
  2. Did your husband leave you fairly well fixed?
  3. Will you have to get a job now?
  4. Don't you think you should change your hair style?
- Abby, please tell people if they can't say something that will make the mourners feel better to shut up or stay home.

STILL IN SHOCK IN N.C.

DEAR STILL: You said it well. I'll pass it on.

DEAR ABBY: Why all the flak about the guy who was bowlegged and miserable? Now that Western clothes are in style, so are bowed legs. He should find himself a knock-kneed girl, and when they stand side by side, they will spell "OK."

BOWLEGGED AND HAPPY

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply, write to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

For a nation that has the most sophisticated form of communication ever devised, it is ironic that people still don't know what to say on an elevator.

No one is denying it's tough. The subject matter has to be concise, have universal appeal, subject to interruption, and hold everyone's attention. You are also playing to a unique audience that faces in the same direction and stares spellbound at the ceiling while little red lights flick on and off. It's not your basic New Year's eve revelers.

Most elevators have the excitement of a recovery room. They're sterile little cubicles of silence where people talk in whispers (if they talk at all) and attract attention if they so much as clear their throats.

To relieve the awkwardness, music was added a few years ago, but does anyone dance? Hum? Sing along? Nope. They just stand there like prisoners awaiting liberation.

Conversational Elevator is rather new, but there are some innovators in the medium. I saw one man employ the namedropping theory. He got on the elevator wearing a ribbon marked HOSPITALITY and a convention button, "NATIONAL PAPER CLIP ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA," and said, "Do I have this straight?"

Reagan draws the ticket for the winning car and THEN I introduce the keynoter."

The mystery approach is becoming quite effective. Just before a woman is to get off the elevator, she turns to her companion and says, "Are you saying I'm just another one-night stand?" (I've seen the entire elevator empty out on that one.)

A little ice-breaker that never fails to get a rise out of the passengers is the Decadence Diet where the man or woman announces, "I ate everything, I drank everything and didn't move a muscle. Lost 38 pounds in four days. I know I look terrific. Three people asked me if I was sick."

Other elevator teasers are still in the experimental stage: The E.F. Hutton Approach, where someone announces they know where you can get gas for 78 cents a gallon, and the Confidence Trick, where you whisper just loud enough for everyone to hear that you just heard the U.S. is being sold to a group of Canadians for summer condos.

I don't speak Elevator well at all. All I want to do is to get on and off without my stomach growling or suffering an attack of hiccups. I honestly tried. The other day I was coming from the 28th floor to the lobby. There were two of us on the elevator. I turned to him and said, "You come here often?"

He got off at the 27th floor.

Rule of thumb for the working cook: Prepare several entrees at once, package in serving portions and freeze. These will provide an abundance of quick hassle-free dinners.

Plant Trouble Ahead

The Utilities Commission, and the entire city, suffered a blow last week when it was revealed there will be further delays in construction of the planned sewage disposal plant.

It was learned that there is not presently enough federal money to fund the construction of the Greenville plant — and since such funds are being cut in Washington there might not be any federal funds forthcoming at all.

To understand what a disaster this is, it has to be recognized that the Environmental Protection Agency funds 75 percent of the planning and construction work. Some 12½ percent comes from the state but that is contingent upon the granting of the federal funds.

The new sewage plant is already far behind schedule because of delays brought on by regulatory agencies slowness in acting on the plans. Now there is almost certain to be further delay.

It may be that the federal funding will be resolved by next Spring — but in the meantime inflation is causing the cost of constructing the plant to soar.

Why not just forget it? No way. The present plant is reaching capacity. We may have lost one desirable industry because we didn't have adequate capacity, and we certainly will lose industry in the future if we don't develop the additional capacity. In addition, the old plant does not treat sewage to the point which current regulations require. Thus we will be in violation of water requirements if we continue as we are.

The best we can hope for is resumption of federal funding for treatment facilities. At worst, the plant would have to be funded out of Utilities revenues and almost certainly there would be another bond issue to pledge funds for the project.

A Look At MX Missile

This opinion page has maintained a long, and deliberate silence on what is known as the MX missile proposal.

It is not something to rush into. But the administration's stated intent to eventually get into the MX program calls for this observation.

At a great (and reluctant expense) the United States built a three-pronged nuclear deterrent force: any one of which was said to be sufficient unto itself: the ICBMs in silos, the airborne weaponry, and the missiles capable of being launched from especially designed submarines.

Three co-existing systems should suffice. The only requisite is that they be maintained in a state of readiness and capability.

The price tag on the MX system is prohibitory if one looks at forces-in-being and the true essential measures of providing manpower, hardware, transport and communications required for the kind of eventuality we do not seek.

MX: No! The basics: Yes.

'Egg' Education

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — A teacher friend in another state where, unlike North Carolina, sex education is encouraged in the public schools has hit upon a method she reports is quite successful.

It goes to the often forgotten point that sex makes babies.

She gives her students — boys and girls alike — an egg. The egg represents a baby in all its fragility. For one week the youngsters are required to carry that egg at all times during school hours, tenderly caring for it, looking after it, showing it to any teacher upon demand to prove that they are taking good care of it, and at all costs, not breaking it.

To take part in a roughhouse game, the student must find a friend who will agree to "eggst" for an hour. To leave the campus at lunch, students must arrange for someone to care for the egg, or make certain they do not jam on each others laps in a car as teens are apt to do.

This may sound silly. But, says the teacher, it works. Students become at least partially aware of just how much time, trouble, and restriction of activity comes from having a baby.

And that is without either feeding or changing, two chores which certainly compound baby care procedures.

No Reason
Amidst all the public argument and legislative debate in this state and nationally about birth control, family planning, abortions, and the various roles of government and family in these controversial areas, quiet reason is lacking, reason which says that from all of this there must yet come some way to convince young people that having babies when you are still in many ways babies yourself simply isn't very smart or advisable.

BILL NOBLITT

Knowledge is the most important weapon in combating pregnancies among teens, says the Governor's Advocacy Council in

Other Editors Say People Bewildered

(Goldsboro News Argus)
The people of North Carolina must be bewildered by the charges and counter charges surrounding Gov. Hunt's proposed increase in the gas tax.

The governor would increase gasoline taxes three cents per gallon to offset declining use of gasoline and higher costs of paving.

At least two apparently well-financed groups have the governor and his proposal under attack. They charge:

1. Highway costs can be met with already available funds and through economies in government.
2. State taxes have increased three times higher than prices.
3. General Fund appropriations have been rising twice the rate of citizen's income.

The number of state employees has grown faster than the population.

Supporters of Governor Hunt counter that critics are using unrealistic figures which can't be supported by facts. They say that to provide roads through existing funds it would be necessary to sacrifice in areas of education, health and public safety.

The governor notes that many of the new state jobs referred to by his critics actually were funded from federal rather than state sources.

Hunt says North Carolina ranks 45th in the nation in average state and local tax burden, and that state taxes have been reduced during the past four years.

Both supporters and critics of the gas tax proposal offer what purports to be documentation for their arguments. This brings to mind the old saw: Figures don't lie — but lies sometimes figure.

It is not suggested here that either side in this controversy is deliberately misleading the public. But it is to note that the claims are in apparent conflict.

The average citizen is not in a position to adequately analyze the arguments and make a determination of fact and fiction.

But our elected representatives to the General Assembly have both the time and the available expertise — both in and out of government — to make that determination.

They have not only the opportunity, but also the responsibility.

On the line here not only is the important issue of good highways and state taxes. At stake also is the credibility of two factions which will remain on the political scene in this state long after the gas tax vote has been counted.

We are creatures of the flesh. Every breath we draw, every meal we eat, every day's work and every night's rest makes our humanity perfectly plain.

A VERY SERIOUS CASUALTY!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Busing Issue Quiet

WASHINGTON — It wasn't even much of a fight in the House last week when James Collins of Texas trotted out his anti-busing amendment. An issue that once would have churned great waves of emotional argument this time stirred hardly a ripple. The amendment passed, 265-122.

The idea of racial-balance busing of school children is an idea whose time has passed. As voters in Los Angeles demonstrated some months ago, taxpaying parents are fed up with busing. Federal judges seem also to be losing their enthusiasm for this flawed attempt at social engineering. The Collins amendment reflects overwhelming sentiment in Congress. In the matter of busing, let us bid good riddance to bad rub-cent. "It would effectively allow the Congress to tell a president that there are certain constitutionally mandated remedies for the invasion of constitutional rights that he cannot ask the courts to apply." But in attempting to exhalt the powers of a president, Mr. Carter proposed to undermine the powers of Congress. If Congress is unable to command how the people's money shall be spent — or shall not be spent — the whole concept of a republican form of government may as well be abandoned. Congress has the power through the appropriations process to put the Justice Department on a short leash or a long one. In the matter at hand, a short leash will do nicely.

JAS. J. KILPATRICK

bish. It was a wretched idea to begin with.

The Collins amendment, attached to an authorization bill for the Department of Justice, says in language too clear to be evaded that the department may not spend public funds to bring any sort of court action to require "directly or indirectly" the busing of any student to any school but the one closest to his home. Substantially the same provision passed both houses last December, but Mr. Carter vetoed the measure and it was too late to mount an effort to override.

Mr. Carter thought the Helms-Collins amendment, as it was then identified, would set a dangerous precedent. "It would effectively allow the Congress to tell a president that there are certain constitutionally mandated remedies for the invasion of constitutional rights that he cannot ask the courts to apply." But in attempting to exhalt the powers of a president, Mr. Carter proposed to undermine the powers of Congress. If Congress is unable to command how the people's money shall be spent — or shall not be spent — the whole concept of a republican form of government may as well be abandoned. Congress has the power through the appropriations process to put the Justice Department on a short leash or a long one. In the matter at hand, a short leash will do nicely.

As a mechanism for enforcing the doctrine of Brown vs. Board of Education, racial-balance busing has made constitutional sense. The whole thrust of the Supreme Court's historic 1954 opinion is that children must not be assigned to schools by reason of their race. In place of a color-blind Constitution, the device of busing has given us a color-conscious Constitution.

For most parents the constitutional objections have been outweighed by human objections. In an effort to achieve ephemeral racial balances, the lower federal courts have subjected children and parents to monstrous inconvenience. Children were cut out of after-school activities; parents could not easily participate in school programs. The sheer cost of operating the buses ate into school budgets.

And the ultimate irony was chairman — made when inflation and interest rates were soaring — that anyone who used existing trends to project the economic future could be making a fundamental mistake.

Based on conditions existing then, said Filer, it might sound preposterous to say that interest rates and inflation could fall sharply, but that possibility, he said, could never be dismissed.

Now, after a winter of economic gloom, Morgan Guaranty Trust offers the opinion that "Much evidence suggests that the recent ebbing in inflation is more than just a temporary dip." Reduced inflation, it says, "is a strong possibility for the year ahead."

It's been a long time since Americans heard such views from anyone but political candidates, and the views may be difficult to assimilate. Some teenagers never knew only a world of dangerous inflation; some of their parents never expected to live to see any real gains against it.

Now, suddenly, some of the views being circulated include not just a pinpoint of light but a burst of sunshine. Morgan expects a rise of only 7.5 percent in inflation during the next 12 months, compared with a rise in the consumer price index of 12.4 percent from December 1979 through December 1980. That's a huge drop.

A careful reading of the Merrill Lynch forecast refines the lines of the brighter picture: —Unemployment, now at 7.6 percent and tending to rise, is expected to fall to 7.5 percent in 1982, to 6.3 percent in 1983 and to 5.3 percent in 1984.

—The consumer price index, which is expected to rise 9.3 percent in calendar 1981, is projected at 6 percent next year, 5.9 percent in 1983 and 6.1 percent in 1984.

—Housing starts, which fell 23.6 percent to just 1.3 million units in 1980, are expected to rise to 1.46 million this year, 1.76 million in 1982, 1.89 in 1983 and to 1.95 million in 1984.

—Retail automobile sales, which fell to 9.1 million units last year, are seen rising to 9.6 million units this year, to 11 million in 1982, 11.7 million in 1983 and to 12.1 million in 1984.

—Corporate after tax profits, which declined 2.7 percent last year, are expected to rise 1.7 percent this year, 5.5 percent in 1982 and 3.1 in 1983, before falling off to a small net decline in 1984.

You are entitled to discount any of these numbers to fit your own personal view of things, which probably includes a pejorative attitude toward economists in general, but they do represent a decided change. One of the problems with the American economy over recent years, it has been said repeatedly by economic and political leaders, was the uncharacteristic lack of faith in the future. If nothing more, some of the numbers now being projected by economists suggest that attitudes are changing. Maybe they are.

Rights Issue Is Pinpointed

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Troubling ambiguities surrounding the role of Jacobo Timerman in the Senate rejection of Ernest Lefever point up failures of the Carter administration human rights policy that President Reagan wants to scrap.

Lefever's self-inflicted wounds were such that he might have failed confirmation even without Timerman, the exiled Argentinian newspaper editor now living in Israel. But Timerman's dramatic intervention, violating the spirit of Senate Foreign Relations Committee customs, doomed Lefever's hopes to be assistant secretary of state for human rights.

Although there is no evidence that they planned it that way, the senators opposing Lefever used Timerman as a catalyst against both Reagan's human rights policy and Lefever. At no time, however, was there any scrutiny of Timerman's ideological stance as a man of the left or the propriety of his influencing the nomination.

The fact that Timerman was brutalized by an anti-semitic clique in the Argentinian military transformed him into an authority on proper U.S. attitudes toward oppression. That mirrors the Carter policy that Reagan seeks to end: equating sporadic villainy inside friendly governments with the organized oppression of the Soviet police state.

Timerman came to intervene in the confirmation fight through the good offices of his American publisher Robert Bernstein of Random House. One of several figures in the literary community opposing Lefever's appointment, Bernstein was scheduled to testify against him before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Unwritten but unbroken custom prohibits foreign nationals from testifying before the committee — certainly never in a confirmation hearing. The breaching of that custom, in spirit if not in fact, began when Bernstein asked Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, a leader against Lefever, whether there would be room for Timerman to attend the hearing. Tsongas assured the publisher he would find room.

It soon became clear that Timerman would not be just another face in the crowd. When Lefever's fatal inquisition began, one of his chief inquisitors — Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, the committee's senior Democrat — held aloft "Prisoner Without a Name, Cell Without a Number," Timerman's impassioned portrayal of his torture and imprisonment in Argentina.

That night, Timerman dined in Washington with Sens. Pell and Tsongas as well as two anti-Lefever Democrats from the House, Reps. Don Bonker of Washington and Tom Harkin of Iowa. Tsongas told us there was no discussion of using Timerman as a weapon against Lefever but that, as a politician, he immediately perceived the force of his personality.

On the next day, Chairman Charles H. Percy introduced Timerman to standing and thunderous applause. While not permitted to testify, Timerman did better: news interviews spelling out his opposition to Lefever and his preference for Jimmy Carter's human rights policy.

It was better because Timerman was saved from probing questions by unsympathetic senators. La Opinion, the daily newspaper edited by Timerman, was half-owned by David Graiver, an accused international swindler charged with handling ransom money for the Montoneros urban guerrillas. Six men who worked for or with Timerman on La Opinion were deeply involved with the Montoneros.

Those connections certainly do not justify the barbaric treatment meted out to Timerman. But they do uncover a mindset that ignores Soviet and Cuban anti-semitism while indicting Argentina as today's Nazi Germany. While anti-semitism is an endemic cancer in Argentina, its government's condemnation of that blight does not suggest the "holocaust" there claimed by Timerman.

The columns of La Opinion under Timerman portrayed Ho Chi Minh, Salvador Allende and Che Guevara as international heroes. That is no crime, but it shows an orientation with no inclination to assault Left totalitarianism. At the least, it raises doubts about the qualifications of this foreign national to judge the fitness of a U.S. Senate Department official.

While Timerman's treatment in Argentina is inexcusable, the merits of his political case are clouded and certainly beyond the competence of U.S. senators to judge. Ronald Reagan believes his government has no business trying to resolve painful internal matters in a troubled neighbor. The questions raised by Timerman's collaboration with U.S. senators in a confirmation proceeding suggests the president is correct.

Of all the things you know about cancer this may be the most important.

Attitudes On Economy Change

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Of all things, some of those economist people who have had so little good to say for so many months are now sounding as if there might be a future down the road.

Heretofore, most of their projections have seemed to lead down a dark path into a swamp of carnivorous creatures. Now, a few projections at least, seem to depict a different route to a different kind of future.

The conventional wisdom may be changing. "On the inflationary front, the key question voiced by conventional wisdom now concerns how rapidly inflation will abate and how far volatile commodity prices will decline," says Merrill Lynch Economics.

This, it continues, "represents an abrupt shift from earlier attitudes which typically assumed double-digit inflation would persist indefinitely." How true in that respect seems the comment by John Filer. Aetna Life & Casualty chairman — made when inflation and interest rates were soaring — that anyone who used existing trends to project the economic future could be making a fundamental mistake.

Based on conditions existing then, said Filer, it might sound preposterous to say that interest rates and inflation could fall sharply, but that possibility, he said, could never be dismissed.

Now, after a winter of economic gloom, Morgan Guaranty Trust offers the opinion that "Much evidence suggests that the recent ebbing in inflation is more than just a temporary dip." Reduced inflation, it says, "is a strong possibility for the year ahead."

It's been a long time since Americans heard such views from anyone but political candidates, and the views may be difficult to assimilate. Some teenagers never knew only a world of dangerous inflation; some of their parents never expected to live to see any real gains against it.

Now, suddenly, some of the views being circulated include not just a pinpoint of light but a burst of sunshine. Morgan expects a rise of only 7.5 percent in inflation during the next 12 months, compared with a rise in the consumer price index of 12.4 percent from December 1979 through December 1980. That's a huge drop.

A careful reading of the Merrill Lynch forecast refines the lines of the brighter picture: —Unemployment, now at 7.6 percent and tending to rise, is expected to fall to 7.5 percent in 1982, to 6.3 percent in 1983 and to 5.3 percent in 1984.

—The consumer price index, which is expected to rise 9.3 percent in calendar 1981, is projected at 6 percent next year, 5.9 percent in 1983 and 6.1 percent in 1984.

—Housing starts, which fell 23.6 percent to just 1.3 million units in 1980, are expected to rise to 1.46 million this year, 1.76 million in 1982, 1.89 in 1983 and to 1.95 million in 1984.

—Retail automobile sales, which fell to 9.1 million units last year, are seen rising to 9.6 million units this year, to 11 million in 1982, 11.7 million in 1983 and to 12.1 million in 1984.

—Corporate after tax profits, which declined 2.7 percent last year, are expected to rise 1.7 percent this year, 5.5 percent in 1982 and 3.1 in 1983, before falling off to a small net decline in 1984.

You are entitled to discount any of these numbers to fit your own personal view of things, which probably includes a pejorative attitude toward economists in general, but they do represent a decided change. One of the problems with the American economy over recent years, it has been said repeatedly by economic and political leaders, was the uncharacteristic lack of faith in the future. If nothing more, some of the numbers now being projected by economists suggest that attitudes are changing. Maybe they are.

Republicans Busy Lobbying

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Republicans like to slough off the rhetoric of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, attributing its resolutions and demands to big-city Democrats, but the GOP is lobbying heavily at this year's national convention nonetheless.

The intensity of cajoling, arm-twisting and twitting is heavier at this meeting than it has been since Republican President Richard Nixon moved the mayors off their anti-Vietnam War stance with similar tactics a decade ago.

Republicans say they are "just feeling their oats" with a fellow Republican back in the White House, but the fact is that the Democratic majority, with some Republican sympathy, has mounted this week the first solid challenge to Reagan since his landslide election last fall.

That's why the Republican leadership here, White House officials and party staff have operated a virtual boiler room at the convention hotel, seeking support for Reagan's economic programs.

The Republicans lost on most of the key economic measures in the conference's Resolutions Committee Sunday, but there is a full-scale campaign moving to reverse as much as possible when the resolutions come before the general membership on Wednesday.

There also was a plan to nominate from the floor Republican Mayor Herman Padillo of San Juan to head the conference's Advisory Council. This would put him in line to become, two years from now, the second GOP chairman of the conference in modern times.

Republican sources who confirmed this asked not to be named. They verified a Democratic charge that Republicans were operating off a "scouting sheet" in their effort to sway Democratic votes.

Mayor Lee Alexander of Syracuse waved a copy of the list during a Democratic caucus Monday, saying it "analyzes the mayors they think they can get to and those that they can't get to."

Alexander said his side was in real danger because of the power of Reagan's personal popularity and asked his colleagues to leave proxies if they go home before Wednesday's voting.

Kilpatrick....

that busing simply didn't work. The tidy little quotas and percentages prescribed in court decrees could not possibly be maintained. In one city after another, the phenomenon of white flight appeared. There was black flight also; as the Los Angeles experience made clear, thousands of black parents are as fed up as their opposite numbers in white communities.

In a little noticed address to the American Law Institute last month, Attorney General William French Smith said flatly that "we must find better remedies" than racial-balance busing. Such orders, he said,

"stigmatize the beneficiaries." Worse still, the quotas that are fixed as minimums today may become maximums tomorrow. "Throughout history, quotas have become the means by which the upward mobility of some groups has been hampered."

The Collins amendment would apply, of course, only to court actions taken by the Department of Justice. The amendment would not affect petitions from private groups. But opposition to racial-balance busing is now so widespread that only the most foolhardy federal judge would impose busing except as an absolute last resort. We may yet return to the wise concept of neighborhood schools, attended by neighborhood children. In the process we may travel toward better race relations than the ill-advised buses could ever bring us.

Death Toll Climbs To 20 As Violent Weather Racks United States

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer
A storm packing 100-mph winds slashed through a Missouri suburb, injuring seven people, as shell-shocked survivors of deadly spring floods and tornadoes surveyed wreckage in at least eight states today.

Hundreds of homes and business were damaged or destroyed, and thousands of people were evacuated as storms pummeled the central and eastern parts of the nation.

A Kansas airport was open only to seaplanes, and flood victims in Texas found snake-infested waters surging through their homes. A Florida heat wave, meanwhile, killed thousands of chickens.

States of emergency were declared in Kansas, Ohio and Illinois as rivers and creeks heaved over their banks and surged into homes and the rains continued to fall.

Storm-churned winds slashed through a two-mile stretch of suburban Ruskin Heights near Kansas City, Mo., Monday, damaging homes and businesses and knocking down trees. Seven people were injured, mostly from flying glass. One man was hospitalized for observation; the others were treated and released.

Property owners and businessmen estimated storm damage at between $500,000 and $750,000. A tornado later touched down at a farm one mile north of Smithton, causing more than $75,000 in damage and killing at least two animals.

Meanwhile, a storm-related death was reported Monday in Chicago as the area continued to mop up after weekend floods that drove hundreds of people from their homes and led Gov. James R. Thompson to declare three counties a disaster area.

A spokesman for Commonwealth Edison Co. said a 25-year-old utility worker, Richard McCrory, was killed Monday when he came in contact with a 9,000-volt power line after pumping rain water from an underground equipment-storage vault.

Cleanup efforts were under way after rain-swollen rivers forced hundreds of northern Illinois and Indiana residents from their homes in flooding that caused two deaths over the weekend.

What Causes Swollen Eyelids?

What are the most common reasons for sudden swelling of the eyelids? It may sound ridiculous, but I think there is some relationship between the swelling and the onset of my menstrual period. — Miss W.K., La.

Dear Miss K.:

The most frequent cause of repeated bouts of swelling of the eyelids is probably some allergic reaction to a substance in contact with the skin of the eyelid. Allergy to drugs, eye makeup and hair sprays frequently accounts for such swelling. Some eyedrops and fingernail polish may also be hidden offenders.

In rare instances trichinosis, a disease acquired by eating uncooked and contaminated pork products, can be responsible.

The body's hormone balance is in a measure upset during the menstrual cycle. It is conceivable that some water retention, especially in those people who use a great deal of salt, may cause such swelling of the eyelids.

If allergies are the offenders, then antihistamine drugs may modify the degree of swelling.

Skin testing might be very revealing. If the condition is marked and prolonged, then consultation with an allergist certainly would be in order.

Another method would be the trial-and-error technique. By eliminating substance after substance that you use on your face, you yourself might be able to pinpoint the offending agent.

Why don't we ever hear about the disease "dropsy" any more? Has the condition been wiped out? I remember hearing about it when I was a little boy. — Mr. D.M., Okla.

Dear Mr. M.:

Dropsy is not and never has been a disease. The word is taken from hydrops, which is an abnormal collection of fluid in various tissues of the body. Fluid can accumulate in the legs and feet, in the chest cavity, in the abdomen, and in the brain, and can cause marked impairment of the function of all body organs.

Chronic heart, kidney, lung, liver and brain disorders can be responsible for fluid retention. Our greater knowledge of fluid balance and mineral relationships now makes it possible to control fluid saturation before it advances too severely.

Dropsy is a symptom. When once it is recognized, a whole battery of tests for diagnosis is available to determine the exact cause. And on that determination depends the rapid onset of treatment and ultimate recovery.

Court Upholds Strip Mining Law As Watt Pares Down Restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has upheld the nation's strip mining law, even as the Reagan administration is moving to relax it.

The court unanimously upheld the four-year-old act Monday, while cautioning that some provisions may be open to challenge in specific instances.

The Interior Department moved ahead the same day with plans to ease federal restrictions on strip-mining, and Secretary of Interior James Watt promised to end "excessive enforcement" of the law.

Last Friday, Andrew V. Bailey Jr., acting director of the Office of Surface Mining, notified his five regional directors that the mining agency would be reduced from 860 to 626 employees, a department spokesman said.

The regional directors were to let their employees know of the plan Monday, according to spokesman Ed Essertier.

The plan calls for a reduction of the surface mining agency's offices nationwide from 42 to 22 by Aug. 31.

The department also has proposed easing the regulations that were drawn up under the law, known as the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977.

"We want to bring strip-mining enforcement back into the mainstream where it belongs," Watt said Monday in a speech to the Outdoor Writers Association of America in Louisville, Ky.

He said the court's ruling would have no impact on decisions already made by his agency because "we have been making them on the presumption that the law was legal." Watt said his agency wants to "roll back the regulations so that the pendulum will be on center."

Among Watt's proposals is a plan to eliminate the requirement that mountains mined for coal must be restored to their original shapes.

The department also has proposed limiting the amount of land that can be considered "prime farmland" and thus also subject to restoration.

"Secretary Watt wants to modify the regulations. And some say this could result in the regulations being eased," Essertier said.

However, he said it could amount to simply a "different interpretation" from the way the Carter administration viewed the 1977 law.

The act is designed to require the restoration of lands used for strip mining. It also limits where the activity can take place and contains rigid enforcement procedures.

"All of the regulations that were on the books are being reviewed now," he added.

Essertier added that the Reagan administration plans to hand over strip mining regulation to the various states — as the 1977 act allows.

He said that ideally the federal government would exercise "supervisory power" in overseeing state programs.

Essertier said the administration wants to get out of the business of regulating local strip mining activities.

He said 15 states so far have been given full or conditional approval of their own plans, which he noted may incorporate any federal regulations which eventually are eased.

Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, writing Monday's majority opinion, noted that some of the act's provisions may be subject to challenge in specific instances.

He said the court was ruling only on a "pre-enforcement" challenge.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices William H. Rehnquist and Lewis F. Powell joined the rest of the court in upholding the law. But they indicated that Congress may have reached the limits of its power.

No Date For Talks Set Yet

By The Associated Press
United Mine Workers officials, accusing employers of refusing to negotiate, say no date has been set for resumption of talks in a contract dispute with the union's 11,500 mine-construction workers.

The construction workers were in the 82nd day of their strike today, although the 160,000 UMW miners settled with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association June 6. Construction workers, who represent about 7 percent of the UMW's active membership, work under a separate agreement from coal miners. The contracts for both groups of workers expired March 27.

"The UMW's negotiators have worked earnestly to find a speedy but fair resolution to our differences with the (Association of) Bituminous Contractors," said Willard Esselstyn, secretary-treasurer of the UMW and chief negotiator in the talks.

"I believe if the ABC would sit down and realistically attempt to resolve these few issues, that we could have an agreement in a day or two or possibly even less," he said.

However, industry negotiators indicated they have no plans to return to the bargaining table in the near future.

Inmates Torch Buildings At Georgia State Prison

REIDSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Inmates demanding an unscheduled gym period torched four dormitories at the maximum-security Georgia State Prison, forcing more than 400 prisoners to evacuate, officials said.

No injuries were reported, but volunteer firefighter Earl Taft, 55, of Claxton, collapsed on a fire engine and died of a heart attack en route to the blaze Monday night, authorities said.

Officials had no estimates of damage but said smoke damage was extensive, although the buildings were intact.

The disturbance began around 7:30 p.m. when inmates in one dormitory demanded to visit the gymnasium, although no such recreation was scheduled for the men that night, said Sara Englade of the Department of Offender Rehabilitation.

The duty officer met with the 55 to 60 inmates, and they told him he had five minutes to let them go to the gym or they would start burning the dorm, Mrs. Englade said.

By the time the duty officer had contacted the officer in charge of the prison and returned to the dorm, the inmates had set fire to a pile of mattresses and other materials in front of the dorm.

At least four separate fires were set in the two buildings, Mrs. Englade said.

The inmates were placed in the yard between the two buildings, she said.

In a building with individual cells, defiant inmates had to be physically placed inside their cells after refusing to return after the fire, she said.

Inmates who were evacuated also broke into the inmate store while firefighters battled the flames, she said.

"We are in the process of cleaning up the debris in the four dormitories and shaking down the area," she said just after midnight.

School Group At Convention

RALEIGH — The Career Exploration Club from Wellcome Middle School, along with 1,300 students from other middle schools across the state, attended the organization's state convention recently and received honors in the competition.

Twanda Daniels received a third place award for the cluster contest of manufacturing on the state level. Another student, Anita Little, state reporter, and Twanda Daniels, state vice president, had previously attended state office preliminaries and were nominated to run for offices.

During the state convention these students presented a campaign speech before over 1,300 club members and guests. Anita Little became the state reporter for 1981-82.

Arrests Made In Break-Ins

Greenville Police Sunday arrested Jerome Jenkins, 17 of 1809A Hopkins Dr. and David Earl Thomas, 18 Richmond, Va., on two counts of breaking, entering and larceny.

Chief Glenn Cannon said today that the pair were charged with break-ins at Johnson Supply Co. on May Street on June 1 and June 4, and with break-ins at Save-A-Stop at 2204 May St. on June 7 and June 14.

A quantity of merchandise taken in the June 14 break-in was recovered, the chief noted.

Canning And Freezing Seminar

A canning and freezing seminar will be held Thursday, June 18 at the Agricultural Extension Office, 1717 W. Fifth Street, Room 210, from 2-4 and again 7-9.

The program will include canning and freezing methods, equipment, terminology, and demonstrations will be on hand. If you plan to attend, call 752-2934 or 758-1196 by June 15.

In the meanwhile, the question is often asked "Why Blanch Vegetables?" How can I be sure my canned food is safe?

There's one step in the freezing of vegetables that some homemakers think they can ignore. And that step is blanching.

But blanching—that is the scalding of vegetables in hot water or steam before you put them into the package—is a must.

Here's why. Blanching inactivates most of the plant enzymes that might otherwise cause toughness, change in color, softening, and loss in nutritive value.

And blanching vegetables before freezing reduces the number of micro-organisms in the food.

Also, blanching can enhance the green color vegetables, including peas, broccoli and spinach—giving them a fresh-from-the-garden look.

It also wilts leafy vegetables—such as spinach and other greens—making them easier to pack into the freezer container.

In addition, blanching displaces air that is trapped in the tissues of vegetables—and it saves and reserves the flavor of fresh vegetables.

So if you're thinking about saving a step—and not blanching your vegetables—reconsider.

And blanch.

Botulism
Before you use home canned vegetables for family meals, make sure the food is safe to eat. Boil those vegetables ten minutes before tasting.

Also look for obvious signs of spoilage. A bad odor will tell you the food is spoiled and should be discarded. Another danger signal is an unsealed or bulged lid. Or if the food has an unnatural cloudy or foamy appearance, get rid of it. But be sure you destroy it out-of-reach of children or animals.

Low-acid foods—such as corn and beans—and special low-acid tomatoes can be problem foods. For they provide the best home for botulism—the most dangerous type of spoilage.

Botulism can't always be detected by sight or smell. And that's why it's important to boil canned vegetables before tasting them.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed today as oil issues continued to lose ground. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up 5.71 points on Monday, added 0.19 to 1,012.18 through noon. Losers outnumbered gainers by a 7-5 margin, among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Oil stocks, hurt by a trend toward lower oil prices worldwide, were broadly lower. Conoco was off 1/2 at 52. Mobil was down 1/2 at 55 1/2, and California Standard gave up 3/4 to 35 1/2.

In a sign that interest rates were headed lower, Citibank and Bankers Trust cut their prime lending rates to 19.5 percent from 20 percent. Although most other banks are still quoting a 20 percent prime, Chemical Bank had cut its rate Monday to 19 percent, the lowest among the major banks. The Federal Reserve Board, meanwhile, reported today that production by the nation's industries rose 0.3 percent in May, led by an increase in auto assemblies. The report, following a 0.1 percent gain in April, reflected a continuation of a sluggish recovery from last year's recession. Sony led the NYSE most active list, down 3/4 to 23 1/2. It reported sharply lower profits for the quarter ended April 30. Big Board volume totaled 26.53 million shares in the first two hours of trading. The NYSE's composite index lost 24 to 77.41.

4-H Activities Being Planned

Pitt County 4-H and pre-4-H activities are planned for 6-19 year old youth this summer, according to the county 4-H office. With the exception of a few pre-4-H and 4-H clubs in the county, most organized clubs will meet monthly throughout the summer. Youth enrolled in club work should check with their local leaders concerning their meeting time and place for the summer, according to Dale Panaro, Pitt County 4-H coordinator. Two weeks of 4-H summer camp for youth 9-13 have been scheduled. Thirty-five youth are registered for 4-H camp the week of June 29-July 4 and 30 youth are registered for camp July 13-18. Pre-4-H youth will be notified about a one-day outing which will be held in August. Other summer special interest activities for youth 6-8 years of age will include workshops on crafts, sewing, and terrariums. Water safety demonstration and local swimming classes will hopefully be offered to these youth as well. Youth 9-19 in Pitt County will also have a variety of special workshops offered by the 4-H office in their local communities. Some of these include bicycle safety, leathercraft, babysitting techniques, and crafts. Water safety demonstrations and local swimming classes will be scheduled in communities as the interest and availability can be determined. Information on the dates, times and locations for these workshops will be publicized locally and through mass media as the workshop becomes available. For more information about 4-H summer opportunities or how to initiate 4-H club activities contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office at 752-2934.

Agent Orange Bill Nearing Passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam veterans affected by the defoliant Agent Orange would be eligible for federally financed health care under legislation nearing passage in the Senate. A compromise worked out Monday was scheduled for a vote today. Similar legislation passed the House on June 2 by a vote of 388-54. The Agent Orange provision is part of a bill reauthorizing and expanding or curtailing a number of Veterans Administration health care programs. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., originally proposed the provision last month at a meeting of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee. It failed on a 6-6 tie vote. In Monday's floor session, however, Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., chairman of the Veterans Affairs panel, offered a compromise that would provide basic Veterans Administration health care eligibility for veterans suffering from a disorder linked to dioxin, a toxic contaminant found in Agent Orange. The compromise, which Cranston accepted, dropped

Child Nutrition Banquet Held

The Pitt County Child Nutrition Program held its annual awards and retirement banquet recently with 129 people attending representing each of the schools in the county. The program was dedicated to six retiring child nutrition program employees. They were given engraved silver trays for their service to the schools and students in the county. These retirees were: Leslie McKeel, North Pitt, 24 years; Annie Vines, Sam Bundy, 19 years; Roberta Churchill, D.H. Conley, 17 years of service; Cora Hammond, H.B. Sugg, 16 years; Luvenia Dickens, Falkland, 13 years; Alee Stalon, Bethel, 10 years. Sanitation awards of merit were given to the schools averaging a 95 or better sanitation grade for the 1980-81 school year. The awards were given to Ayden-Grifton, Farmville Middle, G.R. Whitfield, Grifton, Pactolus, Stokes and Wellcome Middle. Special recognition was also given to other areas. The employee of the year award went to Ethel Dudley at Ayden Elementary. The manager of the year award went to Martha Best from Farmville Middle. Pitt County maintenance supervisor Carl Heath was given the child nutrition program's Best Friend Award. This award honored his support and promotion of the program. "He has helped to strengthen the program through his daily work and suggestions for improvement to the cafeterias," said program director Donna Ware. "We are very proud of the dedication and service provided by lunchroom managers and their staffs," she continued. "It is due to their efforts and the support of related services that allows the Pitt County Child Nutrition Program to provide the highest quality of service to Pitt County."

Citibank Cuts Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Citibank, the nation's second largest bank, joined the move to a lower prime rate today, cutting its prime lending rate a half-percentage point to 19.5 percent. Citibank was the third big bank to drop its prime rate from the industry norm of 20 percent, and economists generally said they expected the downward trend to spread. Marine Midland, the No. 13 bank, cut its prime rate to 19.5 percent last week, and Chemical Bank, the No. 6 bank, lowered its prime rate a full percentage point to 19 percent on Monday. The prime rate is a bank's base lending rate on which it computes its various categories of loans for its customers, with corporate loans sometimes being made under prime, and small business and consumer loans made at higher interest levels. Thomas Thomson, chief economist for Crocker National Bank in San Francisco, said Monday that he expected the prime rate to reach 18 percent by the end of the month.

Rambling In The House

By SAM D. BUNDY
N.C. House of Representatives
Bills still keep coming in with House Bills numbering 1,242 and Senate Bills, 680 for a session total so far of 1,922. Daily session are running anywhere from three to four hours; and this, plus committee meetings in the morning, makes for a long day. Everything seems to be rushing for adjournment which, in my opinion, will come during the week of June 22-26. It could be later, but I hope not. The hot issues this week have been the Roads Tax Package and the Tobacco Tax. At a special meeting on Friday morning of the House Finance Committee the Tobacco Tax Bill was defeated by a 37-15 vote, and the Roads Tax Package was given a favorable report by a 28-25 vote. Now this bill goes to the floor of the House. I voted against the Tobacco Tax which lays this issue to rest for this session. After consideration and scrutiny, I felt it best to support the Good Roads Package and voted accordingly. House redistricting has been approved by the committee which calls for Pitt and Greene Counties to remain together in the 8th House District. It was a pleasure and privilege for the Pitt county delegation to sponsor a dinner meeting at the Angus Barn on Wednesday evening at which time the top officials of East Carolina University, the School of Medicine, and Pitt Memorial Hospital were present, along with the top leadership of the House and Senate. It was an informal affair with the purpose of having the groups together for a social event to know one another better. A fine occasion.

City Costs Low

The city reported that a recent survey it conducted revealed that its per capita cost of providing city services is lower than some of the surrounding cities. The per capita cost for Greenville to provide municipal services, it was pointed out, is $252 as compared with $386 for Goldsboro, $401 for Rocky Mount, $295 for Kinston, and $309 for Wilson.

Bargaining Talks Will Resume Today

NEW YORK (AP) — Management and players were set to meet at the bargaining table today for the first time since the baseball strike began, and it was learned that another high-level meeting would take place in New York.

Baltimore Orioles owner Edward Bennett Williams, George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees, and perhaps Texas Rangers owner Eddie Chiles planned to meet today with baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in an effort to get talks moving. There was a possibility that still more owners would join the summit.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said negotiations would begin at 2 p.m. at the Doral Inn in New York. The two sides have not met since Friday, the first-day games were cancelled because of the strike. Chiles told a Dallas radio station Monday that he no longer was content to take a passive role in the strike. He said "somebody has to do something to make things happen. I'm not content to sit back in Fort Worth and wait for something to happen in New York."

A source with the Rangers said Chiles would travel to New York to meet with other owners and was expected in the city by Monday night.

Williams, Steinbrenner, Houston Astros owner John McMullen and Peter O'Malley of the Los Angeles Dodgers played key roles in avoiding a regular-season strike last year after a spring-training walkout over a new collective bargaining agreement wiped out 92 exhibition games.

Players Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies, Steve Rogers of the Montreal Expos and Mark Belanger of the Baltimore Orioles were named to conduct the players' side of the negotiations. Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, removed himself from the bargaining team after negotiations stalemated Friday.

In a statement released Monday, management negotiator Ray Grebey said he would remain at the bargaining table despite suggestions that he, too, replace himself. The statement did not say who made the suggestions.

The board of directors of the Major League Player Relations Committee, which negotiates for the owners, said its bargaining team "is in place and will remain in place," the statement said.

Management bargainers also include American League President Lee MacPhail; his National League counterpart, Chub Feeney, and attorneys.

The only issue remains that of compensation to teams losing free agents. Both sides have offered variations on the owners' original proposal that would have compensated a team losing a "premium" free agent through the re-entry draft with a player of major league caliber. Previously, compensation had been a pick in the amateur draft.

The New York Times quoted one owner, who requested anonymity, as saying, "The thing is so set in concrete I don't see any resolution. We won't be back soon. Positions will harden. There's no turning back."

Through today, 64 games have been cancelled by the strike, 30 in the National League and 34 in the American League. Thus far, owners have shared in a mutual assistance fund set up more than a year ago to handle such a contingency. The fund provides about $100,000 per game to be shared by the two clubs.

After 153 playing dates have been cancelled, or on June 24, the owners have a $50 million insurance plan that will pay the clubs $100,000 per date for 500 dates, or until Aug. 8.

According to Donald Fehr, general counsel for the players association, players stand to lose about $4 million a week in salaries. Some players on at least one club, the Montreal Expos, found themselves in the curious situation of owing the club money. Since some of the Expos have received bimonthly installments on their salaries, they actually have been overpaid, the club said.

"It becomes a fairly complicated payroll procedure," Expos President and General Manager John McHale said. "Some of the players are ahead of us so far as their pay is concerned."

"We aren't about to make things unduly tough for anyone, but this is hardball they are playing now. We will pay everything that we are contracted for, and we expect to be paid what is due us," McHale said.

At the same time, the Expos said they lost about $900,000 in gate receipts and concessions because they did not play their weekend series with Cincinnati. Cancellation of Philadelphia's series with Atlanta cost the Phillies $750,000, the club said.

Nicklaus Knows Where He's At On Eve Of Another U.S. Open

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — There is a different feeling, a different outlook, for Jack Nicklaus in the U.S. Open this year.

"Last year I wasn't sure. I wasn't sure where I was or where I was going. This year I am," Nicklaus said before a practice round on the Merion Golf Club, where he will defend his American national championship beginning Thursday.

Last year, there were doubts. This year, there are none.

Last year, coming into the U.S. Open, Nicklaus' matchless career appeared to be nearing an end. His game was, at best, questionable. At age 40, he hadn't won in two years. He was, he later admitted, considering retirement from the game he had dominated so long.

There were doubts and self-doubts.

All were erased by his record-setting triumph at Baltusrol and a subsequent victory in the PGA, pushing his record collection of major professional titles to 17. And they re-confirmed Nicklaus' stature as the dominant force in golf, at least insofar as the showcase Big Four events are concerned.

He has not won this season. But that is not significant.

"I changed my priorities several years ago," said Nicklaus, generally considered the finest player the game has known. "If I had not, I would be gone from golf now. I would not be playing. "Between the ages 25 to 35, I expected to win every time I played. I prepared for every tournament like I prepare for the majors now."

"I simply couldn't continue like that. If I had, I'd have burned myself out and be out of the game. I didn't want to do that. I still enjoy golf. I enjoy playing golf. I enjoy the competition, the work that's required to get ready for competition. I want to continue to enjoy it."

So he backed off on his schedule, cut down to "the majors and those tournaments I feel it's necessary to play to prepare for the majors," he said.

With that restricted schedule, "I can't expect to win (the routine events) as frequently as before. I can't expect to compete for leading money-winner because I don't play enough. But that is no longer among my priorities."

His priorities now are the majors — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA. His goal is in those alone. And his only disappointment for the year was in the Masters, where he finished second to Tom Watson.

"I'm disappointed I didn't win the Masters," he said. "I had a chance to win, a very good chance, and let it get away."

Now he faces 155 of the world's best players with the chance — possibly a very good chance — of enhancing still further his incomparable record. He seeks to become the only player to win five American national championships and become the first in 30 years to make a successful U.S. Open title defense.

He has several things working in his favor.

"I like Merion and I've had some success here," he said. "I'm playing pretty well. I'm hitting the ball well and putting well at times."

And his mental attitude is very good, buoyed considerably by a clean bill of health produced by a medical checkup last week that eliminated some nagging concern about a stomach ailment.

"Everything is fine," Nicklaus said. "No problems. I'm ready to go."

Tom Watson wipes his dripping face with a towel Monday afternoon during a practice round on Merion Golf Club course in suburban Ardmore, Pa. Watson and 155 other players will be playing here in the U.S. Open tournament starting Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Dokes, Page Waiting In Wings For Their Chance

By ED SCHUYLER JR. AP Sports Writer Michael Dokes and Greg Page have title fights in their futures, but right now they're a couple of young heavyweights with time on their hands.

It looks as if they probably will have to wait until the Cooney-Weaver-Holmes situation is cleared up, and time can be dangerous because while waiting they must keep fighting ... and there is the risk of upset.

Gerry Cooney and Mike Weaver, the World Boxing Association champion, are signed to fight in October even if the WBA withdraws title recognition from Weaver should he not defend against James "Quick" Tillis.

The winner of that fight probably then would meet Larry Holmes, the World Boxing Council champion. Holmes, who will be 32 Nov. 3. Holmes and who already has beaten Weaver, would like to fight Cooney. He is confident he can beat him and knows it's the biggest money fight available to him.

Holmes might fight while waiting for Cooney, but outside of Dokes and Page, there aren't many attractive opponents for him now that he has beaten Leon Spinks.

But Holmes said he won't fight the Dokes, because "I don't want a scandal." Holmes, who is his own manager with the departure of trainer Richie Giachetti, who was manager of record, fights for promoter Don King. Dokes' fights also are promoted by King, and he is managed by King's son, Carl.

But Page feels his career "is starting to fall in place," and off the strength of his last three fights, it certainly is. Greg Page has become a risk that Holmes might not feel like taking with Cooney in his future.

The 22-year-old Page, of Louisville, Ky., has two fights left on a three-bout promotional contract with King which runs out in November. Page isn't sure what arrangements are for his fights after that, but he won't have trouble finding promoters.

Besides Cooney, Page is the hottest young fighter in boxing and box-office potential in the game.

He currently is ranked fourth, just behind Dokes. Both (Please Turn To Page 10)

Chicago Man Sues To End The Strike

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chicago man filed Monday a class action suit in Circuit Court which seeks to direct baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn to order major league baseball players to end their strike.

Howard Orne, who said he filed the suit "on behalf of all baseball fans," claims Kuhn has the power to order an end to the strike, which began last Friday because of a dispute between club owners and the players over the degree of compensation to teams losing free agents in the re-entry draft.

The strike is against the wishes of baseball "owners, most players and all of the fans ... and thus is contrary to the public interest and not in the best interests of baseball," the suit alleges.

Kuhn is empowered to act "in the best interests of baseball," said Orne.

Philly Newspapers 'Play' Baseball Despite Strike

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — In this city, where the world champion Phillies are in first place, where Pete Rose is one hit away from setting the all-time National League hit record and where pitcher Steve Carlton is mowing down hitters, baseball is serious business.

That's what at least two of the city's daily newspapers figure, as they've decided the season will go on — even if the major league players are on strike.

"Rose Breaks Record" screamed Monday's headline in the Philadelphia Daily News, while the Philadelphia Journal proclaimed "Pete Breaks Stan's Mark."

Under each headline was a fictional account of a Phillies-Atlanta Braves game that was scheduled for Sunday. In The News, Rose's record-breaking 3,631st hit came off Gaylord Perry. In The Journal, Rick Mahler served up the record-setter.

Each story, accompanied by an explanatory note, gave the usual game highlights. File photos recorded the fictional hit. In The News story, Philadelphia won, 6-4. In The Journal, Atlanta triumphed, 6-5.

"The whole object is to provide some vicarious entertainment for people who need their baseball fix," explained a tongue-in-cheek Bill Conlin, who covers the Phillies for The News. "Probably the first objective of a sports section is to entertain."

Some readers believed the stories and called the Phillies office to get tickets for Monday night's previously scheduled game against Cincinnati.

"They want to know why we played without telling everybody, and they want tickets," said Chris Wheeler, a News editor. F. Gilman said the idea originated with last season's players' strike threat.

"This year it was suggested that we sort of continue the season in a mythical account by our baseball writer, Bill Conlin, who is a very imaginative writer," Spencer said.

For today, Conlin said he was writing an account of a unique news conference by Carlton, who stopped talking to the press years ago.

"Carlton will speak," Conlin said. "He will have seen the light."

Conlin did not say how the Phillies would do in his stories, but added the team "will be very, very strong contention all the way."

Spencer said his staff believed the stories wouldn't be confusing to readers because "everybody who was interested in baseball would immediately know" it was fiction, especially since a strike story was on the same page.

Bobby Allison Holds His Lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. Parsons, $140,400; Labonte, $130,535; Ridley, $127,510; top money winner so far this year, Bobby Allison, continues Yarborough, $92,445.

Morgan Shepherd led the standings, according to statistics released by the racing group this week.

Allison has amassed 2,332 points in his bid for the national championship, 193 more than Ricky Rudd's 2,139 points. Darrell Waltrip was third with 2,100, followed by Dale Earnhardt, 2,023, and Jody Ridley, 1,963.

Harry Gant was sixth with 1,955. Rounding out the top ten were Richard Petty, 1,881; Terry Labonte, 1,852; Benny Parsons, 1,737, and Dave Marcis, 1,720.

Allison led the winnings list with $222,375. Waltrip was next with $218,940; Earnhardt, $210,260; Rudd, $207,970;

Bank, Bird Owners Seek To End Strike

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
The men to watch in the backroom wheeling and dealing efforts to end the present baseball strike are George Steinbrenner and Edward Bennett Williams.

They were instrumental in cracking the impasse before. They are apt to do it again, sooner than most people expect. They are not sitting around counting their insurance payments while ballparkers decay. They are pressing for immediate action.

Williams, eminent Washington, D.C., lawyer and sole owner of the Baltimore Orioles, flew into New York overnight. The first man he looked up was Steinbrenner, the shipbuilding tycoon who signs those million-dollar contracts with the New York Yankees.

They had a Tuesday date with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in the latter's 16th floor Rockefeller Plaza offices. Their mission: Get the strike off the track. Get the ball players back in the parks. Get those turnstiles clicking, those hot dogs, peanuts and team pennants moving again, players out of mufti and into the dugouts.

"The owners are sticking together," insisted Williams. "We are working through the committee — we are 100 per cent behind the committee (Player Relations Committee.)" said Steinbrenner, "but there is no reason the owners shouldn't have some input. We are the ones involved."

The story of strike developments cannot be found in newspaper headlines nor in the communiqués from negotiating sessions. It's taking place behind the scenes between a few adamant traditionalists, still looking for Kenesaw Mountain Landis to poke his the Washington Redskins, one of the keenest legal minds in the country. They are buttressed by other enterprising club owners who feel baseball needs fresh, new vision and better understanding of modern conditions — men such as Peter O'Malley of the Dodgers, John McMullen of the Astros and Eddie Chiles of the Rangers.

had to bargain with 30 unions. I sit there and we thrash it out head to head, all day and all night, if necessary. "Personally, I have great admiration for Marvin Miller (director of the players' association.) I think he is making a mistake in withdrawing himself from the talks."

Winterville Little League

Edward's Auto . . . . 11
Al. & Southerland . . 1
WINTERVILLE — Mitchell Phillips hurled a no-hitter and Sherwood Wilder banged out three hits to lead Edward's Auto to an easy 11-1 victory over Aldridge & Southerland Monday in a Babe Ruth League baseball game.

Phillips struck out nine and walked eight en route to the decision. The win leaves Edward's Auto at 9-1. A & S is now 2-9.

Pizza Inn . . . . . 13

Thompson In. . . . . 1
WINTERVILLE — Pizza Inn won its tenth game of the Winterville Little League season Monday with a 13-1 triumph over Thompson Insurance.

Pizza Inn, now 10-1, was led by Tim O'Shea with three hits. O'Shea had a triple and double for two of his three hits. Bronswell Patrick also had a triple for Pizza Inn.

Babe Ruth

Coca-Cola . . . . . 5
Planters . . . . . 4
JOE HOLLOW singled home Billy Michel in the top of the seventh with the go-ahead run to lift Coca-Cola to a 5-4 victory over Planters' National Bank Monday afternoon in a Babe Ruth baseball game.

Michel with the score tied at 4-4, Michel singled to lead off the seventh, stole second and went to third on a balk. Hollow then singled to left field to drive home Michel and give Coca-Cola a 5-4 lead.

Coca-Cola hurler Ronnie Moore, who struck out six and walked three, set down Planters in order in the bottom of the seventh to seal the victory.

Coke jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning, sparked by an RBI single by Michel and an RBI double by Paul Hill. Planters scored once in the bottom of the inning to cut the deficit to 4-1.

Planters continued to chip away at the lead with a run in the fourth and then tied the game in the fifth with two runs. But two innings later Coke managed to regain the lead — this time for good.

Michel led Coca-Cola with two hits. No one for Planters had more than one hit. Lee Allen had a double for Plant-

Wachovia . . . . . 10
JOHN RAVORIS reached on an error in the top of the seventh to spark a five-run outburst that carried Home Builders to a 14-10 victory over Wachovia Monday in a Babe Ruth baseball game.

Home Builders trailed, 10-9, going into the seventh but took advantage of four Wachovia errors to push home five runs and all but seal the victory.

Todd Martin led off the inning by reaching on an error. Darryl Perkins followed with a double to score Martin. Jerry Mayo then reached on a fielder's choice and Ed Farley singled to load the bases.

Smith then reached on a fielder's choice to score Perkins. With one gone, Ravoris then hit a drive to right field that was misplayed, allowing Mayo, Farley and Smith to score and giving Home Builders a 14-10 lead it never lost.

Wachovia led, 3-1, after the first inning, sparked by Mark Gatlin's double. A five-run second pushed Wachovia's lead to 8-1. Home Builders closed to within four with a three-run third and then took the lead, at 9-8, with five runs in the fifth inning.

Wachovia regained the lead with two runs in the sixth, but one inning later Home Builders took the lead back — this time for good.

Gatlin led Wachovia with three hits, including a double. Todd Jordan and Andre Wooten had two hits for Wachovia. Farley, Martin and Ravoris all had two hits for Home Builders.

JAYCOCK and Tom Moyer combined for a two-hitter and both also connected for home runs in a four-run fourth to spark the Lions to a 4-0 victory over the Jaycees Monday afternoon in a North State Little League baseball game.

Aycock pitched the first three innings and allowed only a two-out single in the first to Michael Garris. Moyer then came on in relief in the fourth and allowed just one hit, a two-out single in the fourth to Jody Barnes.

The Jaycees' pitchers — David Lee and Garris — did nearly as well, holding the Lions to three hits. But a four-run fourth spelled the difference.

Ralph Harper singled and Mike Duncan walked to start the fourth for the Lions. Moyer then connected for a three-run

Sr. Babe Ruth

Greene County 10
Winterville . . . . . 11
WINTERVILLE — Winterville eased past Greene County, 11-10, last night in the Senior Babe Ruth League.

Mike Gurkins hurled the victory, but needed help from Roy Lassiter, who came on to strike out the final batter in the seventh inning with the tying run on base and earn a save. R. Chase took the loss.

Dixon Page, Jeff Cox, Sammy Tucker and Chris Buck each has two hits for Winterville, with Page, Dox and Buck each having a triple. Greene County's hitting was led by M. Gilmore, C. Suggs, J. Mayo, Chase and Dana Harrell, each with two. Gilmore and Mayo each picked up doubles.

The Moose gained the lead in the contest, scoring two first inning runs, only to see Exchange tie it up with two in the top of the second. The Moose went back out, scoring once in the second and once more in the third.

Then, in the fourth, the Moose put the game out of reach. Chris Christopher reached on an error and stole second. He scored when Greg Jones reached on a two-base error. Simon Moyer singled, and a wild pitch scored Jones and put Moyer on second. Moyer took third on a passed ball and scored on an error.

The Moose picked up three more in the fifth, while Exchange got its other two runs in the sixth.

Moye, Tripp Andrews and Timmy Ricks each had two hits to lead the Moose, while Lyman Cox had two hits to pace the Exchange.

Moose . . . . . 10

Red & White . . . . . 15
Chicod . . . . . 1
GRIFTON — Grifton's Red & White rolled to a 15-1 Southern Pitt Little League victory over Chicod last night.

Stacey Cole hurled the victory and went two-for-two in the game. Anthony Cannon, Frank Mills and John Tyndall also had two hits for Red & White, with Mills having a homer.

Stevie Haddock led Chicod's hitting with two.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CLINGING FRAGRANCE OF RED ROSES FILLED GARDEN

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Film Depicts 'On The Job' Sexual Harrassment

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The stare that lasts too long, the playful pat on the posterior, the proposition that sounds like a joke — it's all part of a ritualistic on-the-job dance that two San Francisco filmmakers call "The Workplace Hustle."

In an award-winning, 33-minute documentary that makes some men squirm and women cheer, co-producers Woody Clark and Al Brito have captured the rite of sexual harassment as it is performed in offices, factories and universities from coast to coast: a pervasive exercise in degradation that many men can't seem to take seriously and women can't take at all.

The film, narrated by Ed Asner, star of the "Lou Grant" television series, features actors in situations all too common to American workplaces, from the boss who lets a woman know she can buy a promotion with sexual favors to the waitress whose leering customer wants something "that isn't on the menu."

"We did a film about the prevalent problem, the one that's been historical, the one that's really at the guts of our society in terms of working," said Clark, an anthropologist who left academia three years ago to start Clark Communications Inc.

"From the male point of view — there's a line in the film — 'the office is the hunting grounds, the promotion becomes the bait,'" he said.

"The Workplace Hustle" also tells the story of Helen Young, a former Oregon bank executive who lost her job after refusing the advances of her boss. She sued and won.

More and more, Clark said, companies are being forced to pay damages to women who take legal action after being fired or demoted for refusing to bed down with their bosses. And corporations realize that employees who are fooling around can't be getting much done.

"The bottom line is profit. When you have sexual harassment on the job, you're interfering with work performance and people's economic productivity," he said. And because of this growing corporate awareness, "The Workplace Hustle" — which won awards at the San Francisco Film Festival and the New York Film Festival — has found its way into training sessions of several Fortune 500 companies, among them Xerox and Hewlett-Packard, and of government agencies, including the Coast Guard and Army.

The average film of its type sells 500 copies total — Clark has sold almost that many in 10 months, at $320 a copy.

So far, no television network has chosen to air the film. Clark said broadcast executives have complained "Hustle" is too one-sided.

Clark maintains his film addresses a problem that touches many lives. "The office is where people traditionally have met and married, and that's what often happens. But sexual harassment isn't love and marriage. It's clearly something else."

That something else ranges from stares and physical assault, Lyn Farley, author of "The Sexual Shakedown," says in the film.

"A stare becomes sexual harassment when it begins to make the woman feel uncomfortable," Clark said. "The point we make in the film is, it's not up to (women) to draw the line. (Men) should know that it's inappropriate behavior."

Seventy percent of all women have experienced sexual harassment at least once, according to studies conducted by Redbook magazine, by the Department of Housing and Urban Development and by Ms. Farley at Cornell University. More than half of all women have left a job — or been fired — because of it, the studies indicate.

While few people deny that sexual harassment exists, there is disagreement about why and how often it occurs.

Phyllis Schlafly, for instance, told a Senate subcommittee in April that no "virtuous woman" would be subject to sexual harassment. The testimony by the outspoken opponent to the proposed Equal Rights Amendment and other feminist goals was contrary to that of most other witnesses, who agreed that sexual harassment on the job is a serious national problem.

Scenes in the film of groups of men and women discussing their perceptions of the problem help support Asner's statement that men and women "see sexual harassment through different eyes, hear it through different ears."

The women's scene took two hours to film; the men's took twice as long and included much joking.

"It's almost like, if you want to be a real man in these situations, you've got to harass your secretary, right? You're fulfilling social expectations," Ms. Farley says in the film. "That again brings it back to society and to the way our social attitudes have aided and abetted this whole behavior. The jokes. Laughing about it. That's why the accurate information interrupts all that. Because it's not a joke."

Actress' Novel Cites Early Life

By JOY SFILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When Fannie Flagg was growing up in Alabama in the '50s, her life was safe, secure and innocent.

"We can't have that kind of childhood anymore; the world has changed," says the television, film and stage star who has captured those vanished days in her just-published novel, "Coming Attractions."

Daisy Fay Harper is 11 years old, living in Mississippi and starting the sixth grade in 1952 when she begins her journal that forms the book. Fannie Flagg was also 11 years old, living in Alabama and starting the sixth grade in 1952.

"It's as autobiographical as the work of anyone who writes about growing up in the South," the author said in an interview. "I tried to write about something I knew, but I moved it over a state to Mississippi."

Though she says she basically remembered what life was like in the '50s, she spent seven months researching, going through old newspapers to see what the fashions were, what movies were showing, what music was popular, what the language was like.

"Those were innocent times," she recalls. "I think that children really had no concept of anything bad ever happening to us. We had missed the war; we felt very safe and believed that America was the strongest and the best."

"Today's 11-year-olds are so different," she adds. "They've been exposed to war on television, to all the assassination attempts; they've been exposed to drugs, exposed to much freer sexual knowledge; they have a much better view of the world than I did at the age of 11."

Miss Flagg, a blue-eyed strawberry blonde, slim and attractive in a blue shirt, gray pants and lavender blazer, competed in beauty contests for seven years in pursuit of scholarships. She started in the Junior Miss pageant and went on to the Miss Alabama contest.

"I do have first-hand, inside knowledge of beauty pageants," she said with a smile, explaining that she let Daisy win the Miss Mississippi crown partly to make up for not ever having come in first herself.

Miss Flagg, unlike her heroine who has attained only the age of 17 at the end of the book, has reached the age of 39. She has been acting and writing for 31 of those years, having written,

Treasury Yields Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury bills are continuing to fall off after hitting an all-time peak of 16.75 percent three weeks ago.

The Treasury sold about $4 billion in six-month T-bills in Monday's auction at an average discount rate of 13.36 percent, down from the 14 percent of one week earlier.

About $4 billion in three-month T-bills were sold at an average yield of 13.451 percent, down more than 1.5 percentage points from the 14.982 percent of last Monday.

Beginning Tuesday, banks and thrift institutions may pay as much as 13.606 percent interest on six-month money market certificates, down from the previous 14.25 percent. Interest on the $10,000-minimum certificates is limited to one-quarter percentage point above six-month Treasury bills.

Savers investing in 2 1/2-year "small saver" certificates can earn 12 percent at thrifts and 11.75 percent at commercial banks.

Film-TV Producers, Directors To Talk

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — With a deadline for a potentially crippling strike only two weeks away, talks between film and television producers and the Directors Guild of America were scheduled to resume this week.

But no more negotiations had been scheduled between producers and the Writers Guild of America, which has been on strike since April 11. Talks involving the writers broke down Sunday.

Lew Wasserman, chairman of MCA-Universal, said Monday producers still want to reach an agreement with writers and that producers were willing to take the issue of pay for material used in home video off the bargaining table.

"Having failed to reach an agreement (in home video) pay, we did exactly what we told them we would do two weeks ago, namely offer to take the pay TV issue off the table. We feel it is destructive to continue this strike over pay TV and deny thousands of people in our industry employment in free television and theatrical productions," he said.

Directors and producers have been meeting since early May in an attempt to negotiate a new contract before the old one expires July 1.

The directors have said they will strike over the home video residuals issue that precipitated last year's strike by actors and the current strike by writers.

Should the directors go out, all production would stop and the fall TV season would be delayed.

The writers were reported close to an agreement late last week. But weekend negotiations ended in failure Sunday.

Officers Are Elected By Group

Andy Chused of Hampton Industries Inc., Kinston, was elected president of the Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Association of Accountants for 1981-82.

Other officers elected included Ron Mueller and Jerry Sutton of Hampton Industries, Marlene Dunbar of Weyerhaeuser Co. in New Bern, and Curtis Howell of Greenville Utilities, vice presidents; Brenda Ennis, Hampton Industries, secretary; and William Ford, Hampton Industries, treasurer.

Wetzel Smith of Eaton Corp., Jon Pratt of First Federal Savings and Loan, and Charlotte Hale and Michael Hosey of Burroughs Wellcome, all in Greenville, were elected directors.

The chapter, headquartered here, has a service area of 19 northeastern counties. People seeking further information should call Paul Setliff at 752-4126.

Haig, Chinese Leaders Meet In Final Session

PEKING (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. met today with China's two top leaders and said the success of his visit here "exceeded our hopes."

Haig met for two hours with Deng Xiaoping, Communist Party vice chairman. He then conferred with Premier Zhao Ziyang in an ornate reception room once used by emperors to give examinations to officers.

Before his meeting with Zhao, the last in his four-day visit, Haig said talks with Chinese leaders were going well, and one U.S. official predicted the visit would "advance Sino-American relations in every sphere."

Both the Chinese and Americans appeared to be playing down the potentially divisive issue of U.S. arms sales to the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan. China says it is unhappy about such sales. U.S. officials say the need for a common strategy against Soviet expansion is more important.

"It's been a very, very good visit," Haig told Deng at the start of his session in the Great Hall of the People, before reporters were escorted from the room. "I've felt very welcome. I feel my time has been well-used."

U.S. spokesman had given little information on Haig's meeting for nearly four hours Monday with Foreign Minister Huang Hua, leading to speculation that there might have been serious disagreement over U.S. relations with Taiwan. But Deng appeared to dispel such speculation when he told Haig: "I hear you had a very good session with Vice Premier Huang Hua."

Haig did not reply. Another U.S. official said that while Taiwan had been discussed, "the time and attention devoted to that has been minimal compared to everything else we have been talking about."

However, Haig and Deng did meet in the Great Hall's Fujian Room, named for the province across the Taiwan Strait from the Nationalist island. Chinese leaders often meet foreign officials in that room when they want to discuss Taiwan.

Teacher Picked For Seminar

RICHMOND, Va. — Ayden Middle School teacher Wilene Loftin has been selected to participate in a two-week "living history" seminar on Revolutionary America from June 21-July 3 at Stratford Hall Plantation.

Loftin, a resident of Ayden, is among 29 other elementary and secondary history and social studies teachers from throughout the United States participating in the program.

Teachers were selected on a competitive basis for participation and will study life in colonial times, early American heritage and the character and lives of the patriots at several historical sites in Virginia.

ON HONOR ROLE
EMPORIA, Kan. — Eric Kushnick of 121 Lee St., Greenville was recently named to the dean's honor roll at The Way College of Emporia.

Court Closed In Atlanta Hearing

ATLANTA (AP) - A federal judge closed her courtroom today for a hearing on whether to prohibit law enforcement agents from leaking details about their investigation of a man questioned in connection with some of the slayings of 28 young blacks here.

conducted in the suit is sufficient grounds for the secret proceeding to ensure that he could get a fair and impartial trial if he eventually is charged in any of the cases.

U.S. District Judge Orinda Evans allowed only a handful of lawyers into the courtroom as the hearing began at 9:30 a.m. EDT. Attorneys for several news organizations asked that the proceedings be opened to reporters, but the judge refused.

Officials have said some of the victims' bodies had fibers such as might have come from carpeting or other textiles.

Green Probe Continues

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - State officials looking into allegations that Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green accepted free paving from a Fayetteville contractor have decided to continue their investigation for another week, a spokesman for the Wake County District Attorney's office said Monday.

officials that Crowell paved two parking lots and a driveway for Green in 1977. Dees said Crowell took a check from Green for half the $9,800 value of the work, then reimbursed Green in cash.

Redistricting Proposal Would Split Five Counties

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A plan for redrawing North Carolina's 11 congressional districts that splits five counties to accomplish equal representation was recommended Monday by a House subcommittee.

The plan, drawn by Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, would depart from the longstanding state tradition of following county borders in establishing congressional districts.

The latest map emerged after several others had been examined and abandoned in the subcommittee and in the full committees of both the House and Senate.

Huskins, chairman of the House Congressional Redistricting Committee, presented his latest map as a compromise, but acknowledged it would face opposition.

"I don't think Jesus could draw a map that would make everybody happy," Huskins said.

The map would split Wake, Durham, Avery, Alexander and Iredell counties into more than one district. The largest splits would come in Wake, which would lose 28,782 people to the 2nd District, and Durham County, which would lose 17,434 people to the 2nd District. Both are in the 4th District now.

The plan was approved by the subcommittee and sent to the full committee on a 4-1 vote, with only Rep. Patricia Hunt, D-Orange, dissenting. She objected to what the plan would do to the 6th District.

It would be redrawn to include Guilford, Alamance and Davidson counties. The district currently includes Rockingham with Alamance and Guilford, and some Democrats — hoping for a comeback by ousted Congressman Richardson Preyer — have opposed the inclusion of GOP-voting Davidson in that county.

"I'm concerned about the 6th," Mrs. Hunt said. "I think that really makes it a Republican district."

But Huskins said to eliminate Democratic concerns about the 6th would require upsetting other districts, particularly the 5th.

The plan meets concerns of Democrats close to 2nd District Democratic Rep. L.H. Fountain, a 30-year incumbent whose allies have resisted efforts to include Durham in that district. The plan would move three northeastern, rural townships — Carr, Oak Grove and Mangum — to the 2nd, but would leave the city of Durham in the 4th District.

Wake County would see a large chunk of its rural, northeastern region — New Light, Wake Forest, Little River and Marks Creek townships — shifted to the 2nd.

The new map would make the following changes:

- 1st. Drops Jones. Adds Northampton.
- 2nd. Drops Northampton. Adds parts of

- Wake and Durham.
- 3rd. Adds Jones.
- 4th. Drops parts of Durham and Wake.
- 5th. Drops Davidson. Adds Yadkin and Rockingham.
- 6th. Drops Rockingham. Adds Davidson.
- 7th. Drops Hoke.
- 8th. Drops Yadkin. Adds Hoke and four townships of Iredell County.
- 9th. Adds most of Alexander, except for one southeastern township.
- 10th. Adds four townships from Avery.
- 11th. Drops four townships from Avery.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES Don't be upset if there are changes today that you are uncertain about. Through these new arrangements you will be able to express your talents and capabilities much better.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make plans that will mean greater benefits in the future for you. Avoid one who is detrimental to your progress.

TAUROS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use approved methods if you want to gain a personal aim. Go to the right sources for the information you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You need more modern appliances to make your daily routines more profitable. Engage in civic affairs and gain prestige.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Go to new places where you can gain knowledge and find new opportunities to advance in your career.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Making sure to keep promises you've made is most important at this time. Strive for a more harmonious relationship with loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21) Discuss a new project you have in mind with associates and get their approval. Strive for increased happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 to Oct. 21) Don't neglect important duties in your field of endeavor. Plan time to improve your health through proven methods.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22 to Nov. 21) A good day to plan amusements that will extend into the future. Express your finest creative talents to others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Those plans made with close ties can be in operation now with good results following. Be more optimistic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you are more cooperative with associates at this time, you can gain their goodwill and accomplish a lot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have clever ideas for adding to present abundance. Set them in motion without delay. Be practical in all things.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put more effort into gaining your personal aims and do excellent results. Use positive methods in a business deal.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY — He will be one who can comprehend a most difficult task and will be cooperative with others. Teach him the fine intuitive faculties to best advantage. Fine start for professions that require being alone much of the time.

The Stars impel they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to you.
