

Charles Visits N. York

NEW YORK (AP) — Royalty rubbernecks, Irish-American protesters and $300,000 worth of security were on hand to greet Prince Charles as Britain's No. 1 son came to New York today for a 24-hour visit.

Charles, who arrived aboard a supersonic Concorde jet at Kennedy airport at 10:15 a.m. EDT, was to spend his day in America on a yacht cruise with first lady Nancy Reagan and as guest of honor at a gala 50th anniversary performance of the Royal Ballet.

Charles' fiancée, Lady Diana Spencer, and Mrs. Reagan's husband, the president, were staying at home.

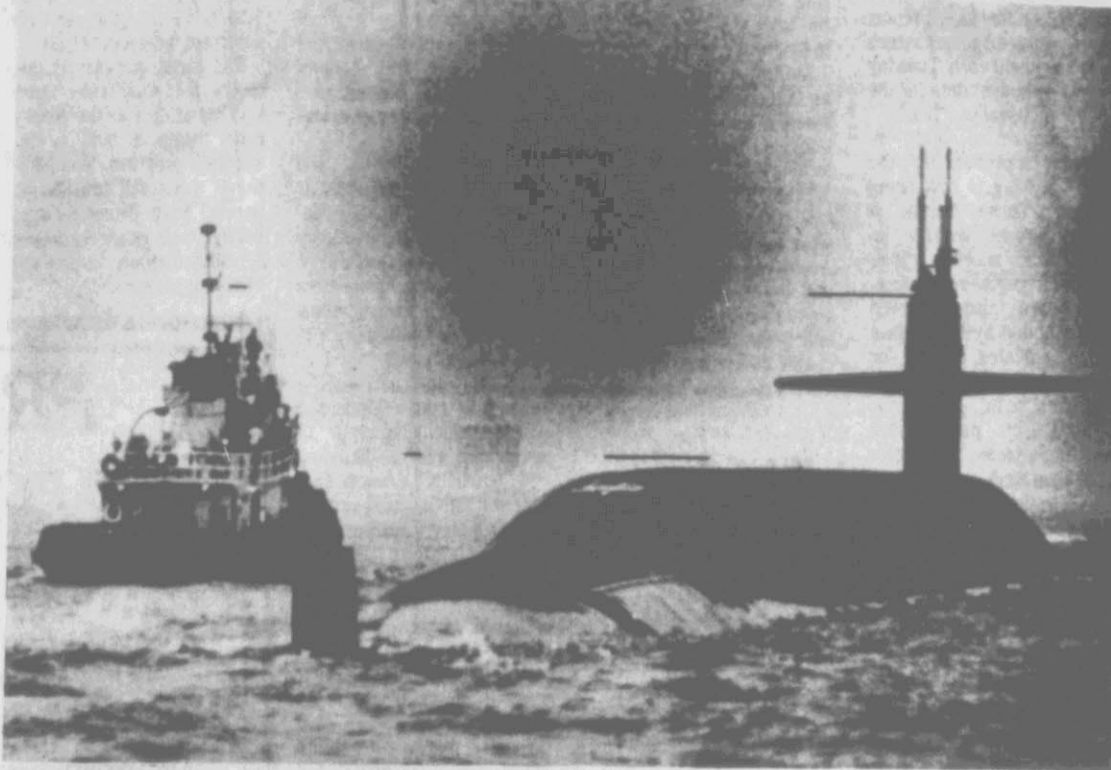

A level of security usually reserved for heads of state was to be in force, and even reporters were to be limited in number and kept at a distance. No interviews were to be allowed.

At least one major Irish-American demonstration was planned — at a park across the street from Lincoln Center.

Organizers said relatives of several Northern Ireland hunger-strike victims would be among thousands on hand.

While calling for moderation and restraint, New York Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo said Tuesday that the prince's visit should not be viewed with "unalloyed pleasure."

Cuomo said Prince Charles "is a symbol of Britain's policy of maintaining and enforcing by military might an oppressive system in the northern part of Ireland."

SUBMARINE OHIO ... The Ohio, first trident submarine produced by the United States, glided past a light at the mouth of the Thames River at Groton, Conn., today. The 560-foot submarine is making its initial sea trials. (AP Laserphoto)

Trident Submarine Begins Trials

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — The largest submarine ever built began sea trials today with a motley flotilla of private and official boats tagging along, anti-nuclear arms protesters jeering from shore and a Soviet spy ship warning nearby.

The 560-foot-long Trident submarine Ohio, built at a cost of about $1.2 billion and two years behind schedule, departed shortly before 5 a.m. for three days of tests.

More than 50 protesters, backed by the American Friends Service Committee, stood on Eastern Point Beach at the mouth of the Thames River, waving signs and jeering as the Ohio passed slowly by.

The protesters were demonstrating against the submarine's potential to carry nuclear missiles.

The Ohio ambled toward the open sea with a police escort, three company ships and a flock of small private boats.

At General Dynamics Corp.'s Electric Boat Division shipyard where the Ohio was built, two men were arrested and charged with criminal trespassing, police said.

John Bach, 34, and Timothy Quinn, 27, both of Hartford, Conn., swam from the Thames River onto EB property, unsuccessfully trying to affix a peace sign to the side of the vessel as it passed, said Groton police Sgt. Richard Horan. The men were to be held pending processing, police said.

Many boats and aircraft in the surrounding area were chartered for the occasion, and the Coast Guard monitored the situation from the three cutters stationed along the sub's planned route.

The Ohio was heading for the Atlantic Ocean, where it will be under the watchful eyes of not only its Navy sponsors but the Soviet spy ship Ekvator as well.

The 240-foot ship has been stationed just outside U.S. waters for several days, where its sonar will listen to the Trident's sounds as it passes out of Long Island Sound into the Atlantic Ocean.

The Ohio traveled about six miles down the Thames River before it reached the sound. The river, which can easily handle most vessels, had to be dredged so the Trident could make its way to sea.

"We believe the Trident represents an escalation of the nuclear arms race — way beyond what we call nuclear overkill," said Marta Daniels of Voluntown, Conn., a spokeswoman for the American Friends Service Committee.

The group used a 43-foot sailboat to transport banner-waving members to taunt the submarine and its crew.

The submarine was launched at Electric Boat in 1979 and has been undergoing final preparations ever since. It is designed to carry 24 missiles, each capable of carrying five warheads.

The contract for the Ohio was signed in 1974 and the sub has been the center of controversial cost overruns and delays. After sea trials, the ship will be officially turned over to the Navy.

The Electric Boat shipyard has contracts to build a total of eight Trident submarines; the Newport News shipyard in Virginia is to build the ninth and a 10th contract has not yet been awarded.

House Leaders Say Israeli Aid Safe Despite Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. aid to Israel is not in jeopardy despite Israel's use of American-made fighter planes to bomb an Iraqi nuclear reactor, say the chairmen of two congressional panels opening hearings on the raid.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, chairman of the House Middle East subcommittee, said an unconditional finding by either President Reagan or Congress that Israel violated U.S. law by using the planes for aggression would force a cutoff of U.S. aid "and we're not going to do that."

Reagan administration officials were called before Hamilton's committee today for public questioning on the bombing and whether Iraq was really developing atomic weapons, as Israel claims.

"I do not expect Congress to take action against Israel," Hamilton said Tuesday.

The Indiana Democrat said lesser action, such as strengthening the U.S. law, is possible later. But he said the subcommittee's only plan for the present is to gather information on Iraq's nuclear program, the Israeli raid and its effects in the Middle East.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which begins hearings on the raid Thursday, agreed today that Congress will not cut off U.S. aid to Israel.

"I don't think Congress would ever cut Israel off and leave it to the tender mercies of its adversaries in the Middle East," Percy said on the NBC-TV "Today" show.

But Percy said he thinks Israel will have to make some concessions to get the four F-16 jet fighters sold to it by the United States but held up by Reagan following the raid.

The senator did not specify what such concessions might entail but said he expects "what Congress would do, just as the president has done, is send a message to Israel that taking precipitous action of this kind, which vitally affects American policy, cannot be unilaterally done."

Reagan, in suspending delivery of the four jets pending further review, already has ruled that Israel's use of the American jets "may have been a substantial violation" of U.S. law.

Bani-Sadr Case Goes To Debate

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — As thousands chanted outside for his downfall, the Iranian Parliament opened debate today on impeaching President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

Tehran Radio reported the Parliament, dominated by Moslem clergymen opposed to Bani-Sadr, gave preliminary approval to a procedural bill relating to the impeachment and then recessed for noon prayers, to resume later today.

Impeachment by the Parliament, or Majlis, could clear the way for Bani-Sadr's dismissal by revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. That might be followed by a trial for alleged violations of the constitution and disobedience of Khomeini.

A spokesman for the Parliament's public relations office said several thousand people were demonstrating outside, chanting slogans that urged the deputies to speed up the debate.

It was not clear whether Bani-Sadr would appear to conduct his own defense. The switchboard at the president's office was not answering long-distance calls today for the first time since he was fired as commander-in-chief of the armed forces a week ago.

Reporters attending the session said none of Bani-Sadr's supporters was present at the debate on the 47-year-old president's "competence" in office.

The debate was scheduled in response to a demand from the cleric-dominated Islamic Republican Party and the government headed by Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai.

Pars, the government news agency, said Bani-Sadr could be declared incompetent by a majority vote.

Work On Hospital's Bed Tower Ahead Of Plans

The new bed tower will be partially occupied over Christmas of this year, and will be full by this time next year," Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the ECU School of Medicine predicted at the Pitt County Memorial Hospital board meeting Tuesday night. Laupus further reported that as of now the outside structure of the bed tower is "70 percent complete and the interior is going well."

Giving the Building Committee report was Ralph Hall who stated "we have received nothing but good reports on our bed tower, and we're ahead of schedule."

Other news presented to the board by Laupus concerning the medical school included planned expansion of three programs. The med-school is going ahead with a Radiation Therapy program. "We will develop a search committee for a chairman, who will also be used in the planning phases of the building," he said. Clinical Pharmacology instruction through the Department of Internal Medicine is also slated.

The Emergency Medicine program has also been pinpointed for expansion. Laupus reported that in conjunction with development of the emergency program, additional people will have to be recruited to work in the department.

In his report, PCMH Director Jack W. Richardson stated that the emergency (Please turn to Page 2)

REWARD OFFERED

On June 27 someone called the school I go to in Farmville (threatening incidents similar to the Atlanta killings) I don't like to be afraid of everything. I would like you to print this in the paper because I want everyone to be aware of this incident. G.S.

According to Chief Ron Cooper of the Farmville Police Department a call was indeed made to Farmville's H.B. Sugg Elementary School. Since that time, a few calls have been reported by parents of area children. "We don't know who is doing this, all we can do is speculate," he said. However, Cooper pointed out that no calls have been reported since June 9.

The city of Farmville is taking action in this matter by offering a $1,000 reward for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who created panic in the school. The reward is sponsored by the Farmville Area Chamber of Commerce, citizens and merchants of the area. Any information will be treated with the strictest confidence.

"I know there's only been one school call, but it caused a lot of suffering. It's an ugly thing to do to a child," Chief Cooper said. Calls of this nature have been occurring all over eastern North Carolina.

Anyone having information pertaining to the Farmville incidents should call 753-4113. Information pertaining to other areas should be turned into local police stations.

City Raises Possibility Of Provisional Budget

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

City officials expressed concern at last night's public hearing on the 1981-82 budget that the new tax valuation figures, needed to project the local tax rate, have not been received from the county.

City Manager Ed Wyatt, saying that the 1981 property valuation revenue figures will hopefully be available to the city by Friday, told the hearing gathering it is possible that the City Council might have to approve a provisional budget if the tax totals are not received soon.

City Councilman Louis Clark said that without the figures from the county, the council "can not come up with a tax rate." Saying he was concerned, Clark observed that it is the "middle of June and we can't do anything."

During the hearing, Wyatt presented an overview of the recommended $12,541,044 city financial package and Malcolm Greene, who is serving as acting director for GUC in the absence of Charles Horne, discussed the proposed $49,435,800 Utilities budget segment.

Wyatt described the proposed budget as a "lean one that omits a number of items that should be funded, provided there are adequate resources."

He said the "major thrust" of the budget is to continue the present level of services to local citizens, improve the level of public protection, provide funds for the replacement of equipment, and to fund basic capital improvements.

The city manager said that the city enjoys a continued growth in resources, although not on a level corresponding with the "needs of a growing community." General revenue sharing funds have also increased, he said, for the first time in years.

Greenville, the city manager reported, "has a considerable amount of non-taxable property which amounts to, under the new revaluation, some $79 million, excluding the university property."

Wyatt said, "It is hoped that progress will be made with the County Commissioners assuming more responsibility for joint agencies. Also, it is hoped that Greenville Utilities...turnover will be increased."

He mentioned that personnel services reflect the "most expensive item" in the budget, with the cost of those services amounting to some 67.5 percent of the total package, excluding Utilities debt service.

Wyatt said the recommended budget includes a decrease of four personnel, for a full-time allocation of 379 positions. He said that the proposal involves no employment terminations but the city is not filling certain positions when they become vacant. Seven positions are reallocated in the recommended budget.

Wyatt reported that fringe benefits have increased "markedly," while operating expenditures, the "nuts and bolts" of the budget, are up some 6.7 percent.

Some $454,000 in capital improvement funding was requested this year, he said, but only $106,850 has been recommended. No street resurfacing funds are included in the budget. Wyatt said it would be desirable to maintain a capital reserve account but it is not possible at this time.

A large increase in debt service has also been experienced, Wyatt said, including a jump of $1,046,310 in the Utilities debt service.

Green, discussing the Utilities budget, said the Electric, (Please turn to Page 2)

Doll Sculptures Are Homely, But Popular

By TERRI PERRIN
The Chandler
Arizonan

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) — The first time she saw "soft sculpture" similar to the stuffed dolls that have been selling like hotcakes for Chandler craft enthusiast Mert Stump, her reaction was "yuk."

"My first feelings were that they were repulsive," the artist recalls.

"Other people respond with 'gee — those things are homely.'"

"Or sometimes, they use the word 'beautiful,' but they're really using it in the negative sense," Mrs. Stump says.

Contorted little babies with sneering faces stuffed in Mason jars, "kitchen witches" with a pursed look that would curdle honey; a full-size toddler with a cute yellow sleeper and a face that rivals something out of a nightmare — Mrs. Stump says she's been "into ugly" with these creations for several months.

It began near Christmas, when her daughter gave her a bag of nylon hose and asked whether there was anything she could do with them, she says.

"I sat and worked on them at art shows," the president of Chandler Arts and Crafts League says, "and it was obvious from the first that they would get a big response from the public."

"People would come up and ask me a lot of questions about what I was doing," she adds, "but at the time I didn't even really know yet."

Stuffed with polyester fiberfill, the nylon gives the figure a realistic flesh tone that the artist enhances with cosmetic colors.

Beads or moving doll eyes, yarn or fake fur and sometimes even wigs form the features for their faces. Noses are over-size and crooked. Eyes are close-set or grossly uneven. Mouths contort. Chins recede.

They all look a little, well, lumpy. Lumpy and fretful. Or shrewish. Seductive. Sometimes just plain mean.

"They really have character," the artist admitted. "The first thing I do is make the nose and then go to the mouth or the eyes. They just sort of take on personality as you go."

"Most people, if they look close enough, will say it reminds them of someone they know — a friend or a relative," she added. "One man bought a witch and told me it looked just like his ex-wife. I told him no wonder he was in trouble."

A serious painter who also does basket weaving, embroidery and other crafts, Mrs. Stump said the reaction her dolls received made her speculate that "people must look at people this way" — imperfect and a little, well, lumpy.

To soften hardened glue, add a couple of drops of vinegar to the bottle.

CURIOUS CREATURES — They may have faces only a mother could love, but these "soft sculptures" made by Chandler, Ariz., artist Mert Stump are finding friends among people who say they remind them of someone they know.

Dear Abby

I.D. Makes Difference

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I work in the baggage department for Eastern Airlines. Today I am sending an unclaimed piece of luggage to our tracing center in Miami because there is no identification in or on it. It is filled with small antiques and personal items. I'm sure the emotional loss to the owner will be enormous. I completely unpacked the case, hoping to find a clue that would lead me to the owner. There was none. This case will join thousands of other unidentified pieces of luggage in our warehouse to be auctioned off eventually.

Abby, please tell your readers to put ID tags on their luggage (outside and in), and also on their carry-on items — cameras, eyeglasses, raincoats, books and company documents! So many beautiful unidentified items are left on airplanes and not even missed until the plane is 1500 miles away.

Travelers spare no expense to buy nice clothes, costly souvenirs and gifts on vacation trips, pack them into expensive luggage, and don't bother to label anything! I hope you will think this is important enough for your column. It's heartbreaking to see so much valuable property lost forever.

DONNA T. IN SEATTLE

DEAR DONNA: Thanks for a timely contribution to this column. (Now, where did I put my nametags!)

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old, reasonably attractive girl. I live at home and work in a large office.

How can I refuse a date without hurting the man's feelings, and at the same time keep him from asking me again? If I say I am busy, he asks me again, or worse yet he'll ask for my first free evening, and then I am really stuck.

You see, I don't want to date anyone outside my own religion. I'm not that hung up on religion, but my parents are so much against it, I decided it would just eliminate lots of arguments at home if I just dated men of my own faith. My parents have been wonderful to me and I don't consider it too big a sacrifice if it will make them happy.

So, how can I politely turn down a date without appearing rude, and at the same time discourage that fellow from asking me again?

THERESA

DEAR THERESA: What's wrong with telling him the truth?

Officers Installed

Mrs. Joan Robinson was installed at the 1981-82 president of the Alpha Omega Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha last Thursday evening. Following a covered dish dinner held at the Cherry Oaks Club House, Mrs. Nellie Taylor conducted the installation ceremony using "The Legend of the Daisy." Other officers installed were Cheryl Adams, vice president; Marie Horne, secretary; Barbara Woods, treasurer; and Margaret Roberts, parliamentarian.

Barbara Woods was recognized and presented "Woman of the Year" charm by Mrs. Taylor. Mrs. Robinson received her presidents pin at which time she announced her theme for the year, "Just for Today."

Mrs. Linda Peele, outgoing president, was the recipient of an engraved silver tray in behalf of the sorority. She thanked everyone for their support and gave each member a token of her appreciation.

Mrs. Barbara Parker was hostess.

JERICHO, N.Y. (UPI) — Small, head-hugging waves combed straight back — that's the summer hairstyle trend this year for black men and women, says designer Wayne Johns.

"The new, wavy look is part of the trend toward healthier hairstyles that need less maintenance," says Johns, who is national director of Signature Hair Care Salons.

The new fashions also let hair grow naturally without harsh chemicals or pomades, curling irons, blow dryers and rollers. The small waves are set in with a permanent, a relaxer or a comb-in lotion. The choice depends on hair texture, Johns says.

Energy Study Important

Greenville appears ready to meet the energy problem head-on as it develops an energy plan through Greenville Utilities' Office of Energy Conservation and Management.

Greenville will be one of 17 U.S. cities to participate in the Comprehensive Community Energy Management Program and the plan was presented to the City Council last week.

The communities are charged with developing "a comprehensive plan for increasing community energy efficiency and decreasing imports of dwindling conventional fuels."

The plan will involve looking for ways to conserve energy in present and new buildings and also looking for new energy sources.

Peat, waste wood, Tar River, groundwater, solar energy were all mentioned as potentials.

Mayor Don McGlohon said the city should take a leadership role. Councilman Dick McKee, the Council's representative on the energy commission, said the city should continue its involvement.

We think so, too. There are many ways to save energy in the city operations, and perhaps more important, there are many possible sources of energy which are currently being wasted. Now is the time to utilize them.

BECOMING THE GUILDING HAND!

Reagan Turns Up Heat

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — On a 99-degree day, President Reagan decided to turn up the heat.

After five months of talking about cooperation, partnership and bipartisan efforts to deal with the economy, the nice guy in the White House took out after the Democrats in the House of Representatives.

His news conference rhetoric was as hot as the sweltering city. He saw sleight-of-hand in the Democrats' budget cuts, demagoguery in their leader and political trouble in their future.

"Let us never forget the mandate of November," Reagan said, in a favored phrase he doesn't let anybody forget. "The people of this nation have asked for action and they deserve it now, not somewhere down in the misty future."

Reagan said he wants his budget cuts, intact, and his three-year tax reduction, in a hurry. He gave Congress about six weeks to deliver a tax bill to his desk, and that would be record time.

On spending, he won virtual assurance Tuesday that the securely Republican Senate will deliver $39.6 billion worth of budget reductions. But he accused the Democratic House of funny business in shaping the $36 billion slash it is supposed to produce.

"There is now a clear danger of congressional backsliding and a return to spending as usual," Reagan said. "Some House committees have reported spending cuts they know can't be made, closing, for example, one-third of the nation's post offices...."

"This practice is unconscionable," Reagan said, and he warned that the administration will if necessary try to reassemble a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats to discard the handiwork of the Democratic-controlled committees and pass a substitute budget.

Reagan has played congressional hardball before, on the budget and in demanding his three-year tax reduction bill instead of the abbreviated, revised version the Democrats favor. But even when he was getting tough, he didn't talk that way.

The tone changed Tuesday — especially when he came to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

O'Neill had said on national television that Reagan's tax bill was geared to the rich because the president had no concern for the common man. "Because of his lifestyle, he never meets those people, and so consequently he doesn't understand their problems," O'Neill said. "He's only been able to meet with the wealthy."

That matter wasn't raised in the news conference questions, so Reagan volunteered a footnote without being asked.

"I know very much about the working group," he said. "I grew up in poverty.... And I think it is sheer demagoguery to pretend that this economic program which we've submitted is not aimed at helping the great cross-section of people in this country that have been burdened for too long by big government and high taxes."

For any Democrat who missed the message, Reagan had a qualified endorsement of conservative groups which are starting early in the campaign to oust Democrats in the 1982 congressional elections.

He said negative campaigning doesn't set well with him, but "the game of (Please Turn to Page 6)

Something Has To Give

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
PESHAWAR, Pakistan

A mirthless wind churned up the deep ridges from Soviet-occupied Afghanistan at the Khyber Pass, a lonely point on the 1,400-mile border that has now been crossed by nearly 2 million Afghans in one of history's most heroic refugee tides.

This is part of the still-rising human cost of the vast extension of the Russian empire that the czars could not achieve against the power of the British empire. For the first time, Pakistan now looks across the Khyber Pass to Soviet fiefdom, chillingly described to the Pakistan ambassador in Moscow in these words: "You are now our neighbor."

But the fiefdom seethes with hostility. Like the tide of refugees, the resistance shows no signs of weakening. One reason for that is the fiber of the Afghan tribesmen — tough, independent and not to be tamed even by MI-24 helicopter gunships. But without the safe refuge haven in and near this border city in Pakistan, the resistance inside Afghanistan would be difficult if not impossible to sustain.

Peshawar is the capital of the northwest frontier province. It is over-the-border headquarters for a dozen major resistance groups carrying the guerrilla war to the Russians and their Afghan fifth column. A leader of one of these groups, whose name is Najibullah, fingered a smudged Soviet passport in his whitewashed office in Peshawar. The passport was taken from a Soviet soldier in Afghanistan who will never return to Mother Russia.

"Only 21," Najibullah said, studying the birthdate on the passport. "Young to die."

A native of Kabul, Afghanistan's capital, Najibullah is 32 years old, also young to live so close to death. He learned English as a student at the University of Hawaii in the mid-'70s, returning to Kabul where he joined the resistance after the communist coup of 1978. That meant converting his fundamentalist Islamic movement from politics to war. It meant organizing small fighting units, rounding up arms and ammunition and developing guerrilla war tactics against the Soviets and what is left of the Afghan regular army.

All this, with only a semblance of outside help — except for the blessing of hospitality offered by Pakistan.

To the freedom-fighters, called Mujaheddin, the U.S. is a non-player in the resistance drama now taking place beyond the fabled Khyber Pass. "I have not heard much on the BBC about demonstrations in your city streets against Soviet genocide," Najibullah told us. "The British Broadcasting Overseas service is the only source of news inside (Please Turn to Page 6)

Hot Enough For Everyone

Record high temperatures gripped North Carolina this week ... the kind of weather that we usually complain about in August.

Regardless some cities recorded 100 degree temperatures, and the usual problems of a heat wave were with us. Air conditioners broke down, electrical systems were strained and everybody was occupied with the problem of how to keep cool.

There were many ways, of course. Many stayed as close to the air conditioning as they possibly could. Many took to the pools around the city. Most wore as few clothes as possible and moving about was held to a minimum.

It was old fashioned summer time in Eastern North Carolina, a happy time for sellers of ice cream and soft drinks. The classic question of the day was "Hot enough for you?" So far as we know not a soul answered in the negative.

THIS AFTERNOON

Genuine Effort

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — What might have been a major political fight in the General Assembly has, instead, developed into a genuine effort by concerned parties to get together on the strongest, most effective approach possible.

The Waste Management Act is moving steadily ahead, with those most concerned with it feeling that any changes being made by legislative committees are in the direction of strengthening rather than weakening the proposals.

Gov. Jim Hunt focused public attention and sentiment toward the waste management crisis when he made it clear that economic success and growth of the state is dependent upon a workable waste management program.

Officials in the State Commerce Department say that waste management has moved quickly to one of the top places on the list of priorities which a prospect looks at when considering a location for a new industrial plant, or expansion of existing operations.

The bottom line is simple — if there is hazardous waste as a result of an industrial operation, and hardly a manufacturing process is without waste, then government must take a hand in providing that facility.

Yet there is a fine line between efforts which boost the state by making industrial and economic growth possible; and protecting the land and the people from the blight which has stricken industrial sections of the Midwest and Northeast.

Legislators working on the proposed law put forth by Gov. Hunt and his Waste Management Task Force, are finding the proposals for the most part acceptable on both sides of that line.

At first there was some reluctance to let the governor override local zoning ordinances or restrictions which might otherwise bar a waste disposal facility, but closer study made it clear by writing into law that authorized state officials must be given complete and unrestricted access to the property at all times.

Another suggestion which some thought might produce fireworks was the proposition that government-backed industrial revenue bonds could be made available for waste handling facilities engaged in recovery, recycling, and reduction, but not for simple storage or burial.

that there must ultimately be some statewide mechanism for blocking local control, otherwise, even communities which benefit most directly from particular industrial operations might force the waste from those plants to be transported elsewhere for disposal.

One phase of the law which produced interesting debate among lawmakers was that requiring that disposal sites be sold to the state and leased back to the operators; that to assure constant access by state officials to monitor performance and guard against escape of hazardous materials from the site.

Seeking to make that access more certain, legislators fixed that section

To the editor:

Israel announced its planes destroyed an Iraqi nuclear bomb factory. Possibly they thus preempted early destruction of their heartland. More than possibly they further hardened many hearts — of Arab national leaders (who recently proclaimed jihad against Israel), of Arab peoples (whose wealth-fed technologies will vastly grow in coming decades). So those planes maybe actually helped bring the destruction of Israel, though later.

Israel faces such Hobson's choices repeatedly. Space allows few examples: 1) Military authorities impose textbooks and close Palestinian schools to nip violence, but cutting freedom and teaching hate. 2) The Palestinian mayors of Hebron and Halhoul were deported, the day after Palestinian commandos attacked a Gush Emunim-occupied building in Hebron, killing six. Even the U.S.'s U.N. vote opposed the exiling. The beacon of Israeli democracy was dimmed. 3) The Knesset declared the West Bank "inalienable part of Eretz Israel," to support Israel's viability. But if permitted, growing Arab numbers could elect a future Israeli government — so ahead we see voteless apartheid or population expulsion chosen as "lesser evils."

Grim choices — why do they recur? I suggest a basic cause is a contradiction between mainstream Zionism and the noble traditions of Judaism (without state power for 1878 years). The Law of Return does not support equal justice. Necessary state violence undermines that wonderful social conscience derived from rabbinical wisdom of millennia. The contradiction is symbolized in the March police attack on a superorthodox Jerusalem synagogue.

Writing here several years ago, I appealed to my Arab friends concerning some anti-Israel tactics. Now I appeal to Jewish friends to consider: Judaism's future may lie in separating from Zionism. Israel's future in lessening theocracy and talking with those on record against her very existence. Holocaust lessons forbid quietism; problems entangle thought; my advice was unasked. Yet, Semites must strive toward familyhood. Lest young Israel die. Perhaps like Samson.

Refugees Point Up Human Cost

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When irresistible forces converge, something has to give. They have converged: High loan rates that have drained funds from the home mortgage market, and a steady growth of would-be homebuyers.

What gave was the conventional mortgage, a simple financial instrument that had been a standby of homebuyers since the 1930s. It was the rock of home finance — a sturdy, unchanging, understandable loan agreement.

No more. The new loans are of such variety and changeability that you might say the rock has been crushed to gravel. The uncluttered, unchanging mortgage of 1978 is gone as surely as the uncomplicated days of yore.

And out of the confusion has come a guide, "How to Get the Money to Buy Your New Home," by Dennis Jacobs and James N. Kendall, that tells you the differences, the advantages and the disadvantages of the graduated payment mortgage and variable rate mortgage and adjustable rate and renegotiable rate and split rate and graduated-payment adjustable mortgages.

If it sounds like hard work, it certainly is. The all-American dream of owning a house isn't accomplished by dreaming. Today, it's all business. "In buying a house, you should always be aware of how, when the time comes, you're going to get rid of the house," says Kendall.

It's an investment, that is, and an exceedingly good one, he and Jacobs say. And so, when you decide to buy, you don't go charging out to the suburbs but instead sit down at the kitchen table and figure.

Since you'll be stretching the budget to the limit, you have to decide what comforts you'll forego. It's almost inevitable. According to the old rule of thumb, your monthly housing payments shouldn't exceed 25 percent of your gross income. The new rule says you'll probably have to use 30 or 35 percent of your gross, and perhaps even 40 percent.

Almost certainly, you will consider lowering your monthly payments by extending the repayment period from 25 years to 30 years or more. Watch out; already, you're running into trouble. To obtain five years more in which to repay your loan may cut your monthly payments by just pennies.

Jacobs and Kendall have unusual credentials for writing such a book: Both work for the U.S. League of Savings Associations, whose members account for the biggest share of single-family home mortgages, Jacobs as an economist, Kendall as a writer. The book doesn't reveal this.

Whatever, they've been deeply involved in the changes of the past few years, changes that have pushed some savings and loan associations close to insolvency and scrambled 50 years of tradition and routine.

As savings and loan representatives, they accurately state the problem for S&Ls and their customers when they say, "There are no bargains in borrowing any more because there are no bargains in savings."

That is, S&Ls have been forced to raise interest rates on savings deposits in order to keep funds from being drained off to competitive investments. No longer able to obtain deposits at bargain rates, they are unable to offer loans at bargain prices. Bargains are no more.

That's what conventional lenders and their representatives will tell you, but putting on another hat, Kendall contends in an interview that you shouldn't "be fooled about the high rates everyone talks about." If you search, he says, "you may find cheaper money." And that brings up creative finance. "If you can afford to buy, now is the time to buy," says Kendall. "You may be able to write some concessions from the seller." A mortgage, for example, on good terms.

There is an interconnected reason for this: Some conventional lenders, such as savings banks, are pressed for funds to lend. Some homeowners, in contrast, have run up sizeable equities in their homes. So high, in fact, that their need for security no longer requires them to maintain large savings accounts. They have funds the conventional lenders lack.

If the homebuyer can tap some of that equity, he or she might find it easier than imagined to buy a home. But that's just one possibility. Creative buying also includes the use of other financing techniques: contracts, leases, options, installment deals, second mortgages, wraparound mortgages, delayed payments and the like. All are explained.

Most other aspects of the new world of home financing are, too. The book is published by Dow Jones-Irwin. It's already in some bookstores, and it will be in most others in another week or so.

Strength For Today

HOW MUCH DOES IT MEAN?
We read in the Book of Acts (17:6) that the early Christians were referred to as people who turned the world upside down.
Christianity, when it has really been worthy of the name, has been doing that for centuries. In the Beatitudes we find a series of truths set forth which are almost directly contrary to the truths taught by the world. If there is one thing we need to ask ourselves about our religion, it is this: "Is it turning life upside down for us?" If our religion is real, and not a shadow, it does. If it does not preform this function, the it is not valid Christianity.
For Christianity makes sinful people righteous, mean people generous, violent people peaceful. It cleanses the filthy, fills the mind with generous thoughts, and leads people to love life in a deep and satisfying measure. The question is always there: Is religion turning me and my world upside down?

Fireman Saves Infant, Mother In Hotel Fire

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A firefighter tucked a 1-year-old girl in his coat and helped her mother and grandmother walk to safety along a ledge on the fifth floor of a burning residential hotel, witnesses say.

Twelve people suffered minor injuries during the Tuesday night fire, which was confined to the second floor but sent heavy smoke billowing through the 200-room building.

James D. Bryan, an 18-year veteran of the Los Angeles Fire Department, reached through a hotel-room window to scoop Elizabeth Ann Foster from the arms of her mother, Helen Foster, according to witnesses and officials.

With the baby secure in the front of his jacket, Bryan guided Ms. Foster and the baby's grandmother, Violet Brown, 70 feet along the 2-foot-wide ledge leading to a roof, fire department spokesman Ted Aquaro said.

Bryan was the last to leave the roof, waiting until many of the hotel's 400 residents were evacuated by fire escape to the second floor and then down ladders to the ground, witnesses said.

Aquaro said the blaze was fought by firefighters who were "bone-tired" from their day-long battle against a score of brushfires fanned by Southern California's record-breaking heat and high winds.

"Everybody's been out all day," Aquaro commented. "Nobody's had a free ride today in this town."

The cause of the fire had not been determined.

Three of the injured — two civilians and one firefighter — were taken to Queen of Angels Hospital and treated, primarily for smoke inhalation and exhaustion, said hospital spokesman Ken Gosting. Aquaro said nine other injured civilians were treated at the scene for smoke inhalation.

The hotel, near downtown MacArthur Park, was inhabited primarily by elderly, handicapped and non-English-speaking residents, Aquaro said.

Boy's Body Will Be Frozen

ROME (AP) — Experts decided today to freeze the body of 6-year-old Alfredo Rampi to prevent decomposition while workmen dig a new shaft to recover his corpse from a deep and muddy well.

A statement issued after a meeting of experts at the Interior Ministry said liquid nitrogen will be pumped into the well to conserve the boy's body, which fell 200 feet down the narrow shaft.

Alfredo was playing last Wednesday near his grandparents' hillside home in Frascati, 15 miles south of Rome, when he slipped and fell into the well. Efforts by rescue workers to pull him out failed, and he was declared dead Sunday after a television camera and microphone lowered into the shaft detected no signs of life.

A firm specializing in such work for mineral research will be called in to dig a parallel shaft to reach the well. Another shaft used during the actual rescue attempt will be abandoned because it is too rocky.

Haig Concludes Trip To China

PEKING (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. concluded his visit to China today after announcing that the Reagan administration is lifting the 31-year-old ban on the sale of U.S. war weapons to its Korean War foe.

Haig told a news conference Tuesday night his government has decided to remove China from the list of nations — including the Soviet Union and most other communist countries — barred from buying lethal military equipment from the United States.

President Reagan told a news conference in Washington Tuesday removal of restrictions on arms sales to China was "a normal part of the process" of improving relations between the two countries.

A Chinese military delegation is to go weapons shopping in the United States in August. But Haig said each arms request would be considered individually, and that China might ask for weapons which "it would be imprudent to provide at this juncture."

The secretary of state described an expanded military relationship — but not a military alliance — between the two governments that became foes after the Communists defeated President Chiang Kai-shek's U.S.-backed Nationalists in 1949.

He said Reagan, long a supporter of the Nationalist regime on Taiwan, "intends to treat China as a friendly nation with whom the United States is non-allied but with whom it shares many interests."

Chief among those interests is mutual opposition to the Soviet Union. Haig said both the United States and China agreed on the need to oppose Soviet expansionism.

China recently slashed its budget for military spending, but Haig said it could purchase American military equipment and technology with $2 billion in credits promised by the Carter administration.

Carter's defense secretary, Harold Brown, visited China in January 1980 and said the United States would make available certain technology and such non-lethal, defense-related equipment as trucks, helicopters and radar. But China made no such purchases.

Afghanistan, broadcasting in the native Pashto tongue (the Voice of America has no such service). To the Mujaheddin, to be without transistor radio — and rifle — is to not be dressed.

Najibullah remembered what happened in the States during Vietnam, when the Americans fought another communist invasion. He also remembered President Reagan's failure to follow his own suggestion during an ABC television interview last March. Reagan had spoken of the U.S. sending small arms to the Afghan resistance.

But military help from outside is not so important as U.S. efforts to make the Russians suffer for their brutal invasion. "America should discharge its responsibility as human beings. We are not asking for arms. If you treated Soviet aggression with the right punishment of economic boycott and political pressure, that is all we ask," Najibullah said.

Termination of the grain embargo devastated the resistance movement.

This leader, who is one among many similar leaders in the fight for survival of Afghanistan, claimed that 500,000 members of his Islamic faction are now out of Afghanistan and living in the mud-hut and tent villages supplied by Pakistan. They stretch for miles around this capital of the northwest frontier.

Outside his untidy ground-floor office, resistance fighters temporarily out of Afghanistan on rotation studied dozens of black-and-white photographs, tacked up on every wall of the small courtyard, that celebrated Mujaheddin victories and Soviet disasters.

These symbols spoke silently. Against that silence, Najibullah was pleading for a strong response from the West, especially from the U.S., to the butchery of his homeland.

Career Center Helps Pitt County Women Train For Jobs

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
They're Pitt County women who want to work. Like everybody else in today's tight job market, they face rigid competition. Unlike many job seekers, most of them have had little or no previous work experience.

"What they do have is a motivation to get work," Honey Ball, Job Developer for the local Career Development Center for Displaced Homemakers commented. "These women are definitely realistic in their attitudes about jobs. They are willing to accept any work they are capable of performing, including domestic work."

The Greenville office of the Career Development Center for Displaced Homemakers is one of a number of such offices established throughout North Carolina.

Their establishment was an outgrowth of studies made by the N. C. Council on the Status of Women. One of the significant findings in these comprehensive studies pinpointed a pressing need for a program to focus on helping displaced homemakers find employment.

"In this program," Ms. Ball remarked, "we deal with women who are thrown into the work force because of unexpected, often tragic circumstances. These are women whose husbands have died or become disabled to work. Others have had husbands desert them, or are divorced without alimony support." The women come from families which even in better circumstances were without financial arrangements such as insurance or pensions to support them in the critical time of being left as bread earners for themselves and in many instances, children.

"All the women enrolled in the program are economically disadvantaged," Ms. Ball pointed out. "They all fit into CETA eligibility. This is part of the requirement to enter the Displaced Homemakers program. Another requirement, the most basic one, is a pre-enrollment screening to determine that a person is indeed willing to work."

Amelia Peebles heads the Greenville program. The basic program runs six weeks — four weeks of training, two weeks spent in job search. An alternative if a job is not found is placement in some kind of vocational class at Pitt Community College. Pearl Rogers is counselor for the program.

Training includes focusing on developing whatever job skills the women might have, learning to write a brief resume, and confidence in job interviews. Classes are from 9 to 4 daily, with 20 women enrolled for each six weeks session. Each class takes four tours of various area industries and attend workshops.

"We also have a follow up schedule on a 30, 60 and 90 day basis after the women have completed the six weeks program. If, at the end of 90 days, we have not been able to place them in a job or a school program at Pitt Community College, we have to end our active work with them. There's always others waiting to get in the program," Ms. Ball explained.

Ms. Ball said that Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission "has without fail been sympathetic, concerned and helpful. Unfortunately, they fit into the category of people who must take sporadic jobs for short time periods, so they fit into the pattern of last-hired, first-fired."

Pitt Community College also, Ms. Ball said, has gone all-out to help in every way possible.

"All of us in the program, the staff and the women who take this training, realize that at best it's a rocky road," Ms. Ball said. "The job market is tight, these women generally are without previous work experience."

"But it's worthwhile for so many reasons. Every displaced homemaker who can find work is one person less on public welfare. Most important, it gives a person a good feeling to be able to earn their own living. That's really what this program is all about."

Reagan Says House Cuts Would Be 'Backsliding'

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats are moving toward undoing some of their own proposed spending cuts, which President Reagan says "they know can't be made" and would not lead to congressional backsliding on the budget.

And if Democrats don't keep the faith on the budget targets set last month, Reagan says, he's willing to fight once again on the House floor for a substitute package of spending reductions.

The administration has declared that some of the $37.4 billion in budget cuts recommended by Democratic-controlled House committees for next year were designed to be so severe, counterproductive or phony that the full House would be forced to reject them. That, the reasoning goes, would open the way to possibly saving some programs to be cut under Reagan's budget blueprint.

Reagan echoed those charges and stepped up the criticism during his nationally televised news conference Tuesday.

"There is now clear danger of congressional backsliding and a return to spending as usual," he said. "Some House committees have reported spending cuts they know can't be made," such as closing one-third of the nation's post offices.

House Democratic leaders chided Reagan for his remarks.

Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., a key member of the House Budget Committee, said this is "a fine time to start picking and choosing who's being hurt by a $37 billion cut."

"There has never been an administration in my recollection that has demanded to dictate so thoroughly to Congress," added House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas. "The committees of the House very faithfully and in some cases very painfully responded to the mandates of the ... budget which President Reagan so forcefully supported."

Despite the tough talk from Democrats, there were indications that some of the cuts Reagan objected to would be amended.

Democrats on the House

Education and Labor Committee met privately Tuesday and the full committee was scheduled to meet today to consider restoring some funds cut from such politically popular programs as student loans, special impact aid for school districts with federal installations, Head Start classes for preschoolers and meals for the elderly.

Under one plan discussed Tuesday, nearly $1 billion previously retained for public service jobs would be cut and shifted to education and nutrition programs.

Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., the committee chairman, had said he had received "an absolute guarantee" from House leaders "that we will be allowed several votes on the House floor in order to reverse some of the worst cuts."

But that strategy appeared to be fading.

A top House Democratic aide, who asked not to be quoted by name, said Democratic leaders "no longer find the amendment approach as attractive."

Republicans and some conservative Democrats, wary of the work done by the committees, have been drafting a substitute package of cuts that more closely follows Reagan's plan.

That's the same strategy used last month to pass Reagan's spending targets over those pushed by the Democratic leadership, and the president said Tuesday he is prepared to go that route again if necessary.

If the Democrats push their own package, Reagan said, "let me be clear, my administration will have no other choice than to support the proposal of a number of representatives in the House to offer a budget substitute on the floor that matches the resolution they voted for in May."

Terrorists Pick Out Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly two out of every five incidents of international terrorism last year involved U.S. citizens or property as targets, the Central Intelligence Agency says.

With diplomats the primary targets, 10 Americans were killed and 94 were wounded, the agency said in a new report Tuesday. Most of the attacks were in Latin America.

Soviet citizens and installations were the second most frequent target, followed by those of Turkey, Iraq, France, Iran and Israel.

"The number of terrorist incidents apparently aimed at causing casualties — most notably assassination attempts — increased dramatically in 1980," the report said.

It attributed the rise to an increase in state-supported terrorism and cited Libya "as the most prominent state sponsor and participant." Also giving support to terrorist groups were the Soviet Union, Yemen, Cuba and Syria, the CIA said.

The League of Nations held its first meeting on Nov. 15, 1920.

That may not be necessary.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said in an interview that if Perkins' panel makes the anticipated changes, it "narrows down the areas of difference."

A Republican aide who asked to be anonymous said the contemplated changes being discussed by the Education and Labor Committee "sound like the Reagan program without the block grants." If the changes are made, "what's the fight going to be?"

House committees almost unanimously have rejected the block grant program proposed by Reagan to transfer control from the federal governments to the states for nearly 100 programs that now distribute money directly for specific purposes. Under the plan, states generally would parcel out the money as they see fit.

Senate committees accepted only parts of the block grant concept.

The Senate Budget Committee voted 19-0 Tuesday to approve $39.6 billion worth of administration-backed 1982 budget cuts, sending the package to the Senate floor to await almost certain passage.

The Senate measure calls for cuts of $141.4 billion over four years — the stack of paper needed to make the reductions runs to more than 1,000 pages and is more than four inches tall — and is designed to help Reagan meet his goal of balancing the federal budget in 1994.

The cuts would affect more than 200 programs, although the bulk of the reductions would come in social programs such as food stamps, public service employment, welfare and Social Security benefits.

New Plant Site Sought

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) - A Hillsborough executive is seeking a site for a $3 million factory that will manufacture ammunition boxes and other military support equipment.

Raymond J. Outlaw Jr., who has searched in Durham, Orange and Person counties for a plant location, said four Korean businessmen who might become his partners in the business venture would arrive today to help him search. They represent the Tongil Corp. and a subsidiary, Tongil Manufacturing Co., which Outlaw said might acquire part ownership of the planned factory.

He said the factory would require from 50,000 to 80,000 square feet on 10 to 40 acres of land. It would provide up to 250 jobs and have a weekly payroll of $60,000 to $65,000, with wages ranging from $5 an hour to $7.50 an hour.

Outlaw said he preferred building the factory in Hillsborough with a second choice either Orange or Durham counties but that "right now everything is pointing toward Person County because of high unemployment there."

Outlaw said he owns five Wisconsin plants that employ 180 people and fill $29 million in orders for military heaters, which allow airplane engines to crank in cold weather, ammunition boxes and other ground support equipment.

Nation's Economy

Showing Downturn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virtually every day now, new government statistics show a national economy slowing almost to a halt while its housing industry slides toward a second recession in two years.

Economists say the overall economy shows no signs of slipping into another severe recession like the one that struck last spring.

And industrial production figures for May, released Tuesday, even showed a slight 0.3 percent increase, indicating a sluggish economy rather than one that is falling apart. Other reports also have been showing tiny increases or declines in a variety of economic indicators.

But that is small comfort to builders, real estate salesmen and thousands of Americans unable to buy or sell their houses.

The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that housing starts fell 14 percent in May after two months of modest recovery from the huge 26.8 percent decline in February. In all, starts have plunged 30.6 percent since January, and sales also have been falling.

New housing units were started in May at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.15 million, the lowest since the 938,000 reported in May 1980 at the bottom of the recession, the new report said.

Analysts inside and outside government concur on the culprit — high interest rates — and they also agree that little housing improvement is likely until rates come down.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige had the most optimistic words Tuesday, conceding that "the immediate future of the housing industry is not rosy," but adding that better times could lie ahead.

If the nation can win "lasting relief" from inflation, then interest rates also will come down and "the next housing recovery could be more lasting than the most recent one," he said.

That recovery was indeed short-lived, with the housing-start rate climbing from the May trough to January's 1.66 million units but then falling quickly almost as far as it had climbed.

Industry spokesmen are quick to point out that housing never suffers completely alone, since its declines are felt eventually by timber producers, appliance manufacturers and others.

And Commerce Department analyst Adren Cooper said Tuesday that the current housing slump will have "an impact that's going to be felt for some months yet."

Herman Smith, president of the National Association of Home Builders, said June figures could be even worse and that "housing will continue to limp along at the currently depressed level until these exorbitant rates come down."

Mortgage rates were averaging a near-record 16.1 percent in early May. Builders have to pay even higher rates for construction money, often higher than banks' prime lending rates, which now range from 19 percent to 20 percent.

The housing-start report also said permits for future construction fell 0.3 percent in May, indicating no big recovery is coming soon. And Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the home builders group, said even that building-permit number was distorted by Phoenix, Ariz., builders' rush to beat a new permit fee system taking effect in June.

Reagan Presents Medal To Canada

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saluting the "courage and ingenuity" Canada displayed in helping six Americans flee Iran last year, has awarded a congressional gold medal to Canadian ambassador who masterminded their escape.

The award was presented to Kenneth Taylor, Canada's ambassador in Iran and now the Canadian consul general in New York, during a ceremony Tuesday in the White House Rose Garden.

Among those present were Bruce Laingen, the highest ranking U.S. diplomat held in Iran during the 444-day hostage crisis, and Lee Schatz, one of the six Americans who reached the sanctuary of the Canadian embassy in November 1979.

Using Canadian passports, the six left Tehran on Jan. 28, 1980, after 79 days in hiding in the embassy. Taylor praised the "dignity and professionalism" of the Americans in Tehran and the courage of the eight servicemen killed in the April 1980 attempt to rescue the U.S. hostages.

Senate Debates Anti-Bus Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lines are familiar and the leading players are the same as the Senate debates an anti-busing rider that was vetoed by the president seven months ago.

But this time, the principal role at the White House is played by Ronald Reagan, not Jimmy Carter, and that could make a difference in the outcome.

In November, when Congress amended a Justice Department spending bill to bar department lawyers from seeking court-ordered busing for school integration, Carter vetoed the bill.

The amendment, he said, was "an unprecedented and unwarranted encroachment on executive authority and responsibility" that would hamper the government in protecting people's rights.

Reagan, then president-elect, was asked what he would do if a similar bill were sent to him.

"Busing has been a failure and is not accomplishing the ... worthwhile purpose that gave it birth," he replied. "So therefore I think there are better ways to achieve the end than continuing this program."

On Tuesday, the amendment's sponsor, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., offered it again, saying both black and white Americans are "fed up" with busing.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., again led the opposition, arguing, "This is not an anti-busing amendment; this is an anti-civil rights amendment."

Weicker indicated he saw little hope of a presidential veto this time, however.

"It is clear from campaign statements and statements by the attorney general that if they are not in agreement with the present language, the administration and the attorney general are certainly in agreement with the thought expressed," he said.

Weicker did not specify what statements he meant, but said the administration had not opposed a similar amendment that already has been adopted by the House.

Tom Stewart, a Justice Department spokesman, said Attorney General William French Smith has not taken a position on the amendment.

Deputy White House press secretary Karna Small said it is White House policy not to say whether the president is going to sign or veto a bill until it reaches his desk.

But she said Reagan's "general view on busing situations is longstanding" and is reflected in his comments last November.

The Senate debate reflected the strong feelings aroused by the busing issue.

"Demagoguery is on the move again," said Weicker. Helms argued that Weicker was violating a Senate rule by impugning the motives of a fellow senator.

A Senate rule says, "No senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words impute to another senator or to other senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a senator."

After the presiding officer, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, read this rule without comment, Weicker said that to put his sentiments in any other way "loses the truth of what is before us."

"The line is going to be drawn right here," he said. "If this goes through, there will be much to follow, hard on its heels."

Helms offered his rider as an amendment to a $2.46 billion Justice Department authorization bill.

Weicker offered again, as he did unsuccessfully in November, an amendment of his own to spell out that the Justice Department and the courts would still be empowered to enforce the Constitution.

Weicker held the floor during much of the debate, reading from a civil rights study by the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress and saying he was prepared to talk for days.

David Landau, a lobbyist for the American Civil Liberties Union, said the ACLU would encourage Weicker to filibuster the Helms amendment and others that are expected.

The other amendments include one by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., to prevent courts from ordering students bused more than 10 miles or 30 minutes from their schools.

Two Witnesses Are Sentenced

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Two men who were given secret identities in exchange for their testimony about three gangland slayings have been sentenced to 20 years in prison each for racketeering.

The sentences were handed down Tuesday in separate proceedings for Gerald Walls, 34, of Uniontown, Pa., and Charles Kellington of Pittsburgh, who pleaded guilty to the federal racketeering charges. The two were indicted last week as authorities arrested seven other men in connection with four murder-for-hire cases in 1978 and 1979.

Walls and Kellington and their families are in the Federal Witness Protection Program to guard against retaliation.

CHILD BAN ... Steven and Barbara Zipp hold their 6-month-old daughter, Shifra, outside their home in a Los Angeles trailer park. The couple has been living in an adult-only park but now has lost their fight to block an eviction order. (AP Laserphoto)

Child's Parents Face Eviction

(AP) - The parents of a 6-month-old girl face eviction hearings next week because a court has upheld an "adults only" policy at their mobile home park.

Steven and Barbara Zipp lost their fight Tuesday to prevent the owner of the park from filing an eviction action against them.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Robert Weil noted that there is a specific state law giving mobile home parks the right to restrict residents to adults.

"I am not, repeat not ... getting into the constitutional arguments," Weil said, adding that the couple would have an opportunity to raise their objections at a regular eviction hearing in Municipal Court.

"We're not just trying to stop their eviction. We're trying to get rid of these laws that allow discrimination against children," said the Zipp's attorney, Gloria Allred.

She claimed that the case is the first such test of the legality of an adults-only policy in a mobile home park.

Policies banning children in apartment buildings already have been ruled legal by the state Court of Appeals in a decision to be argued before the California Supreme Court this fall.

In the appellate court ruling, Associate Justice James Hastings said that of all society's laws, "none is more basic than an infant's unfettered right to cry when it is hungry, but in a court of law that right stands on an equal footing with a landlord's right to the quiet of his property."

Walter Talley, the attorney for the owners of Pt. Dume Mobile Home park and the management company, said eviction proceedings against the Zipp's would begin sometime next week unless the couple decides to leave.

Talley said that after the Zipp's baby, Shifra, was born in December, 150 residents of the park signed a petition asking that the ban on children be enforced.

SENTENCING
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - A sentencing date still must be set for three construction executives and their companies, who pleaded guilty to conspiring to rig bids on a 1976 Tennessee highway contract.

The guilty pleas were filed Tuesday by Ken-Tenn Construction Co., of Fulton, Ky., and its president, Maxwell F. Modade Jr.; Union City Paving Co., of Union City, Tenn., and executive Leonard W. London; and J.A. Hadley Construction Co. of Humboldt, Tenn., and its president E.J. "Pete" Stricklin.

The corporations face penalties of $1 million each.

Arabs Avoiding Call For Sanctions Against Israel

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - The Arabs are asking the Security Council to condemn the Israeli destruction of Iraq's nuclear reactor and call for Israel to pay compensation. But they apparently are omitting a specific demand for sanctions because the United States would veto it.

In a statement read to the council Tuesday by Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi, the 40-nation Islamic Group "strongly condemns the premeditated and unprovoked aggression as an act of state terrorism" and demands that Israel "pay prompt and adequate compensation for damages suffered by Iraq."

The statement made no mention of the sanctions the Arabs had been expected to ask the council to vote against the Jewish state. Instead it asked that "the international community take the measures envisaged in the (U.N.) Charter to prevent Israel from pursuing such action in the future."

The Arab League's U.N. observer, Clovis Maksoud, told reporters the statement embodied the "thrust" of a resolution that would be presented to the 15-nation council. A vote on the resolution is not expected before Thursday.

It takes nine votes to adopt a resolution, but a negative vote by any of the five permanent members - the United States, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and China - constitutes a veto that kills the resolution.

American officials have said privately that the United States might support a resolution condemning the raid and calling for compensation but certainly would veto sanctions or reparations.

Israel says its attack on the nuclear reactor in Baghdad was an act of self-defense prompted by solid information that Iraq, which still is technically at war with Israel, was planning to use the reactor to build atomic bombs to be dropped on the Jewish nation.

Speaking in the council debate Tuesday, Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Blum said a French proposal that reparations be demanded of Israel was bizarre.

"Did the Allies pay reparations for the Nazis' atomic plants at Peenemuende and elsewhere which they destroyed in World War II?" Blum asked. Peenemuende was Nazi Germany's research and missile center on the Baltic Coast.

France sold Iraq the reactor and weapons-grade uranium to fuel it and was installing it. A French technician was reported killed by the Israeli raiders.

Blum said four days of debate had not explained why Iraq was obtaining equipment and radioactive material that could be used for bomb production if its only plans for the reactor were peaceful.

Isamat T. Kittani, an undersecretary in Iraq's Foreign Ministry, refused to answer Blum's questions, saying, "One would think that it was Iraq that was brought to account before this council."

In Washington, President Reagan softened his earlier condemnation of the Israeli attack, telling a news conference Israel "might have sincerely believed" its raid was a defensive attack and "had a reason for concern" because Iraq has never signed an armistice with Israel or recognized Israel as a nation.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told a campaign rally in Israel Reagan's comments were "words of great importance" that justified the attack.

The Arab League's U.N. observer said the president's statement "tends to justify (Israel's) naked and blatant aggression on Iraq."

In Damascus, the Syrian government radio called Israel "the strategic assistant of the United States" and said Syria would regard any Israeli attack on Syria's anti-aircraft missiles in Lebanon as "direct aggression by the United States."

U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib arrived in Israel today to continue his Mideast shuttle diplomacy but declined to comment on the progress of his mission.

Habib flew in from Damascus, Syria, where he met Tuesday with Syrian President Hafez Assad to discuss the crisis over the missiles Syria stationed in central Lebanon in April.

Begin has said Israel would destroy the missiles if they are not removed.

Habib was expected to meet Begin Thursday morning, but no other details of his schedule were available.

No details of Habib's talks with Assad were disclosed.

Youth Is Accused Of Shooting Duck

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - A 15-year-old youth has been accused of shooting the arrow that sent animal lovers on a two-week chase and turned a wounded Donna the Duck into a national celebrity.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agent Tom Harper said Tuesday the youth would appear before juvenile authorities on a misdemeanor charge of hunting waterfowl out of season. He said the youth, who was not identified, lives on the Sahara Country Club golf course where Donna was shot.

"The investigation showed Donna was shot in the same pond from which she was rescued," Harper said.

Officials tried for two weeks to capture the duck after it was spotted with an arrow protruding from its breast. Finally, the duck was drugged and captured so the arrow could be removed surgically.

At last word, Donna was resting comfortably back in the pond on the golf course's 13th fairway.

Carpenter Strikes Slow Projects

By The Associated Press

Work has come to a halt on new houses across Northern California and on major construction projects in Massachusetts as more than 18,000 carpenters were off the job today in unrelated contract disputes.

About 10,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters called a strike Tuesday in 46 northern California counties, demanding higher wages and retention of their current work schedule providing alternate Fridays off.

Talks between the carpenters and the Northern California Homebuilders Conference broke off in mid-afternoon Tuesday with the two sides still at odds over the work schedule. The homebuilders want the carpenters to return to five-day workweeks every week.

"There's no way we'll give way. That's something we worked too hard and too long for," said Harvey H. "Skip" Landry Jr., head of the Santa Clara Valley District Council of Carpenters.

On Friday, the union reached tentative agreement with the Associated General Contractors in Northern California, which represents heavy construction project builders. That agreement kept the present work schedule.

The carpenters are reported to be seeking the same agreement with the homebuilders. Bill Botteff, president of the homebuilders' negotiating committee, called the pact "too expensive."

The proposed two-year pact with the contractors provides hourly wage increases of $3.10 plus a cost-of-living adjustment next year for San Francisco Bay-area carpenters. In addition, it provides $1.20 an hour in added fringe benefits over the two years.

Carpenters outside the Bay area would receive $2.20 an hour in raises over two years in addition to a reduced cost-of-living adjustment next year. The fringe package is the same.

All journeymen union carpenters in northern California receive $15.35 an hour in wages and $5.35 an hour in benefits.

In Massachusetts, meanwhile, approximately 8,000 union carpenters struck at midnight Monday when their old contract expired. Carpenters said the walkout stopped work on $2 billion in construction projects, most in the Boston area.

Negotiations were scheduled to resume Thursday morning. An industry spokesman said the main issue was wages, but a union official would not confirm that and said the union "wants to keep the negotiations at the bargaining table."

"The union is seeking a totally unreasonable two-year increase of $7.18, or 50 percent, over their current $14.36 wage and fringe package," said James F. Grosso, executive director of the Associated General Contractors of Massachusetts.

He said management's offer was a $4 hourly hike.

Andris J. Silins, general agent for the Boston District Council of the Eastern Massachusetts Councils of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, AFL-CIO, said Tuesday there were no pickets.

"We won't throw up any picket lines ...," he said. "These are union contractors that we have to get along with afterwards."

Two Major Banks Drop Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite earlier predictions, it appears that most U.S. banks will not lower their prime lending rate until their own borrowing costs decline, economists and analysts say.

While two New York banks, Citibank and Bankers Trust Co., lowered their prime rate to 19.5 percent Tuesday, other banks did not follow suit, probably due to uncertainty over when other interest rates will recede, said Maury Harris of the investment firm Paine Webber Inc.

Specifically, banks now face a 20-percent-plus rate for "overnight money" — also known as federal funds — the money that banks borrow and lend overnight to each other to finance their other loans.

The "fed funds" rate is a "cornerstone" of a bank's operating costs, said Sung Wong Son, chief economist at Northwestern National Bank in Minneapolis.

At times on Tuesday, that rate exceeded 20 percent. When a bank borrows money at 20 percent and lends it out at 19 percent, "that is not a very good business," he said, adding that federal funds must come down before the prime rate can.

Nevertheless, the rates banks are offering on certificates of deposit are falling in anticipation of a decline in overnight money, Harris said.

He said banks are reluctant to lower their prime, only to discover they have done so prematurely and have to raise it again.

Since the beginning of the year, there have been 18 fluctuations in the prime, from a high of 20.5 percent to a low of 17.5 percent. The prime rate reached a record 21.5 percent in December 1980.

The prime rate has held at an even 20 percent at most U.S. banks since early June, after dipping in late March to 17.5 percent. A year ago at this time, during a brief recession, the prime rate was 12.5 percent.

The prime is the rate at which most banks lend money to their best corporate customers and is often influential in determining the rates banks charge for other types of loans.

On Monday, Chemical Bank of New York, the sixth-largest in the nation, dropped its prime rate from 20 percent to 19 percent, but was not followed by any other bank.

And when Citibank, No. 2 in assets, and Bankers Trust, ranked No. 8, dropped their prime from 20 percent to 19.5 percent, they did so alone among the major banks.

Even so, other banks are expected to follow the two New York banks in time, anticipating a prime rate this summer in the 15-percent range, analysts said.

In addition, Son said, loan demand is light, because of high interest rates.

Meanwhile, the Reagan administration, under verbal siege at an economic forum in Europe, denied that high U.S. interest rates were a deliberate policy.

At the first session of a two-day meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, Italian and French officials were the most critical. They said U.S. monetary policies were dampening demand and investment and hindering the fight against inflation in Europe at a time of record-high unemployment.

Myer Rashish, U.S. undersecretary designate for economic affairs, rejected that analysis.

"The United States doesn't have a high interest rate policy," he said. "Interest rates are a reflection of inflation and of inflationary expectations."

Pilot Accused Of Smuggling

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A California pilot was being held on $5 million bond today on charges of smuggling a shipment of high-grade cocaine that would be worth $140 million on the street, officials said.

Bond was set Tuesday for Donald Kramer Peterson, 50, of Irvine, Calif., who was arrested last weekend after an air-and-ground chase.

Authorities said the 559-pound seizure of the cocaine was the second largest in the history of the U.S. Customs Service.

Peterson's lawyer said he expected to file a motion within 10 days to have bond reduced.

Two other men sought in the case still were at large Tuesday.

Kuhn Not Going To Get Involved In Strike Talks

Five Players Enter Baseball Meetings

By The Associated Press
Commissioner Bowie Kuhn says he won't get involved. Three owners of major league teams would like to and five of the striking players did.

And, as the negotiations aimed at ending the baseball strike continued to show no progress, the ballparks remained empty.

On Tuesday, negotiators for management and the players met for the first time since major league baseball was struck by the players last Friday over the issue of free agent compensation. Another meeting was set for today.

Representing the owners in the talks — as he has throughout these negotiations — was Ray Grebey, Kuhn, George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees, Edward Bennett Williams, owner of the Baltimore Orioles, and Eddie Chiles, owner of the Texas Rangers, were not.

The three owners met with Kuhn and American League President Lee MacPhail Tuesday morning, apparently in hopes of getting more input into the negotiations. Williams and Steinbrenner were among the owners instrumental in averting a strike in May 1980.

They also may have been trying to get Kuhn to use his influence on Grebey and the Player Relations Committee, the owners' bargaining unit, to get them to change their approach in negotiations.

Grebey said, "I'm always in contact with all the owners" and Kuhn reiterated that he was "not a spokesman for any bargaining group."

"The emphasis should be on the two bargaining teams," said Kuhn. "That is where the solution should be found."

Meanwhile, five players joined Donald Fehr, counsel to the Major League Players Association, in the two-hour negotiating session. Marvin Miller, the union's executive director, took himself out of the talks when the strike began.

The five players — Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies, who is the National League player representative; Rusty Staub of the New York Mets; Steve Rogers of the Montreal Expos; Tom Seaver of the Cincinnati Reds, and Mark Belanger of the Baltimore Orioles — were brought up to date

Moffett Hopes Session Turns Into 'Night Game'

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Moffett, the federal mediator in the stalemated baseball talks, says he hopes today's bargaining session between representatives of the club owners and the players turns into a night game.

"I hope, if there is any conversation as far as compensation, that we would go through the night," said Moffett, the almost-eternal optimist of these talks.

Moffett scheduled the talks to resume today at 2 p.m. EDT.

Tuesday was the first negotiation session since last Friday, when the 6-day-old strike began. While a nation of baseball fans is looking into the future and wondering when the walkout would end, negotiators were rehashing the 18-month history of the dispute.

According to Don Fehr, general counsel to the Major League Baseball Players Association, that history has covered over 100 meetings, and the negotiators reviewed them in less than two hours Tuesday.

"We had a brief but good meeting," said Ray Grebey, the owners chief bargainer as director of the Player Relations Committee. "There was an effort to clear the air, clear some misunderstandings after 18 months. There was just a general airing of the situation."

Bob Boone of Philadelphia, the National League's player representative, said he "wasn't real excited with (the meeting) because we're still on strike. Nothing really happened."

And Moffett, who said the attitude of both sides was "a tad better" than "lousy" — his description of last Friday's session — added: "We explored the past history of the situation bringing us to where we are right now. I would characterize the meetings as amicable without any progress toward ending the strike."

Another 13 games went by the boards Tuesday, raising the total of canceled games to 64, with no reason for optimism in sight.

The bleak prospect for a quick settlement led three owners to meet Tuesday with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. Ed Chiles of Texas, Edward Bennett Williams of Baltimore and George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees all have expressed

Edenton Snaps Pitt Co. Streak At Six Games

EDENTON — Tony Lee's sixth inning single, one of three hits he got, produced an error that allowed what proved to be the winning run score, allowing Edenton to snap a six-game winning streak by Pitt County's American Legion baseball team last night, 7-5.

The loss was only the second of the season for Post 39, which is now 6-2. Edenton, in last place in the Area, boosted its record to 3-6 with the victory. Pitt County did manage to hold onto first place, but lost ground in its bid for a fourth straight regular season title.

Pitt's Doug McRoy started the game, but was tagged for ten hits and six runs, three of them unearned in five and two-thirds innings. Gordon Douglas came on for the final two and a third, but the damage had already been done.

Edenton's Allen Harrell gave up 11 hits to Pitt County, but kept them in check enough to pull off the victory. Pitt left 13 men stranded during the contest.

Pitt jumped ahead in the first inning, scoring twice. Mark Douglas led off with a walk and Mitch Brann doubled him to third. Kenny Barnes then singled in Douglas — the first of three rbi's and four hits for Barnes. Gordon Douglas followed with a hit, bringing around Brann.

However, Edenton came right back with one in the bottom of the inning. Lee doubled with one away and Phil Holton singled. An error on the play allowed Lee to come the final 90 feet.

Pitt added a third run in the second. With one down, McRoy tripled his own cause with a triple, scoring when Brann reached on an error. That made it 3-1.

Edenton scrapped back however, scoring twice in the third to tie it at 3-3. Woody White led off with a single and Lee added a second hit. Both moved up on an out, and Holton singled in White. Warren Perry reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Lee with the tying run.

Pitt rushed back out in the fourth, scoring once. Mark Douglas walked and stole second. Brann singled him to third, and he scored when Barnes added a second hit.

It became knotted again in the fifth, when Edenton came up with another run, making it 4-4. Harrell singled with one out and moved up on a wild pitch. Holton walked and Perry reached on an error, scoring Harrell.

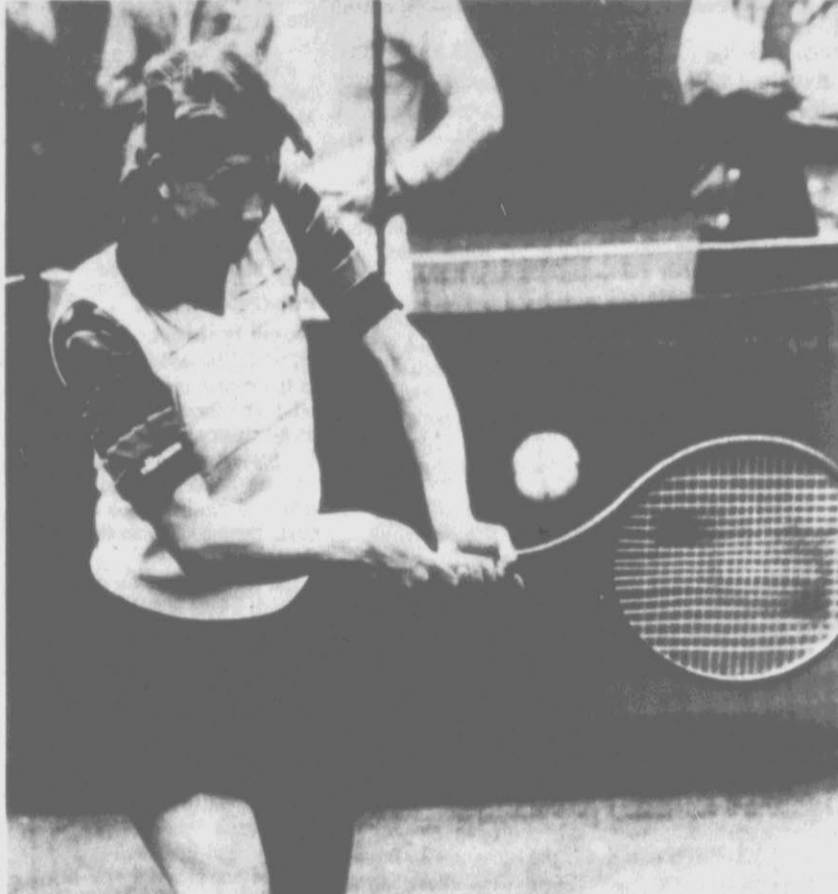

Pitt once more pushed ahead, scoring in the top of the sixth. Brann reached on a fielder's choice, moving to second on an error. Barnes added a third hit for the game, scoring Brann to make it 5-4.

Then, in the bottom of the sixth, Edenton struck for two more, taking a 6-5 lead. With one down, Steve Sawyer singled and Dennis Askew followed with a run-scoring double. After a second out, Lee singled to left, and an error on the play let Askew come over for a 6-4 lead.

Edenton's insurance run came over in the eighth. Sawyer got a one-out single and with two away, White got a hit. Lee reached on an error, allowing Sawyer to score the final run.

In addition to Barnes' four hits for Pitt, Brann and Gordon Douglas each had two hits. Sawyer also added three hits for Edenton to go with Lee's total, while White and Holton each had two.

Pitt travels to Wilson tonight, hoping to get back on the winning track.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Paul Murr slapped a bases-loaded double to cap a four-run spurge and lead UNC-Wilmington to a 6-2 victory over North Carolina State Tuesday night in a North State College League baseball game.

Centerfielder Tom Jones stroked three hits to aid Ronald Inman in capturing his first victory of the season in two decisions. Inman went the distance against the Wolfpack, despite surrendering nine hits.

N.C. State scored single runs in the fourth and seventh innings, but choked off its own rallied throughout the night, leaving the bases loaded in the fourth and fifth innings. In all, the Wolfpack stranded nine runners.

UNC-W, playing its first home game of the season, raised its record to 3-3. N.C. State fell to 4-3 as Nelson Carlton took the loss and evened his record at 1-1.

Cubs Sold For $20.5 Million

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs, charter members of the National League who have not won a pennant in 36 years, have been sold for $20.5 million by William Wrigley to the parent firm of the Chicago Tribune.

Wrigley, a chewing game magnate and head of the William Wrigley Jr. Co. whose father and grandfather before him owned the club, agreed Tuesday to the sale of the team to the Tribune Co., a privately owned firm with newspapers, radio and television stations and cable TV operations.

The sale was quickly approved by the club's board of directors and now needs the approval of the National League and the club's stockholders.

Stanton R. Cook, chief executive officer of Tribune Co., said he was elated over the transaction, noting the Cubs and Tribune Co. broadcasting properties have been associated for years.

WGN radio first broadcast Cub games in 1924 and WGN-TV began its television coverage in 1948.

Cook said Tribune Co. newspaper and broadcast subsidiaries would continue independent coverage of the news of baseball consistent with the company's editorial tradition.

In announcing the sale, Wrigley said he is turning the club over to a stable and well established entity committed to keeping the Cubs in Chicago and that the Tribune Co. is financially able to meet its commitments to the shareholders of the club and the National League. Wrigley controlled 81 percent of the stock.

The cellar-dwelling Chicago Cubs, who make their home in Wrigley Field, have been sold by owner William Wrigley to the parent company of the

The Cubs are one of eight original charter members of the National League along with New York, Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Hartford, Louisville and Cincinnati. The Cubs are the only team of that group to remain in the same city where they started in 1876.

The Wrigley family came onto the baseball scene in 1916 when William Wrigley Jr. and several other Chicago businessmen purchased the club from the Taft family of Cincinnati. Wrigley became majority stockholder in 1921 and ran the club until his death in 1932.

P.K. Wrigley took over at that time and ran the team until his death in 1977 when young William Wrigley assumed operation of the club. Wrigley, 48, apparently ran into financial problems brought about by estate tax difficulties stemming from the deaths of his parents within a short time of each other. The Chicago Sun-Times reported the club faces a possible $3 million loss this year. Attendance is down more than 220,000 compared to the same number of home dates last year.

Wrigley Field remains the only park in baseball without lights and night baseball. P. K. Wrigley always considered baseball a day game and he felt lights and night games would hurt the neighborhood.

Prep League

Auto Speciality 7

True Value scored six runs in the fourth inning to erase a five-run deficit and then held off Auto Speciality in the late innings to capture a 9-7 decision Tuesday in a Prep League baseball game.

Auto Speciality led, 1-0, after the opening inning and pushed its lead to 5-0 with two runs in the second and third innings. One inning later, True Value erupted for six runs to take the lead.

Tyrone Jones tripled to start the sixth and scored on an error. Robby Erhmann and Stallings walked. Both runners moved up a base on a wild pitch.

Paul Sullivan and Jim Hall then walked, forcing home one run. Larke Wetherington then reached on an error to score the final three runs of the inning and give True Value a 6-5 lead.

True Value added single runs to its total in the sixth and seventh before Auto Speciality scored twice in the bottom of the seventh to make the final, 9-7.

Flether Phillips led AS with two hits, including a double. Monty Atkinson had a triple for AS. No one for True Value had more than one hit, although Wetherington did have a double.

Babe Ruth League

Home Builders 4

Pepsi-Cola scored five times in the second inning then held off Home Builders to capture an 8-4 victory in the Babe Ruth League last night.

Home Builders scored first, getting a run in the top of the first, then adding another in the second.

But in the bottom of the second, Pepsi put the game away, scoring five times. Bobby Casey reached on a fielder's choice and Timmy Norris doubled. Ted Stanley singled in Casey, and Cyrus Blackwell reached on a fielder's choice that brought in Norris. Pete Grice reached on a fielder's choice, plating Stanley, and Blackwell scored on Pat Rand's sacrifice fly. Bill Messick followed with a single, bringing in Grice with the fifth run.

Pepsi later added one in the third, one in the fourth and one more in the sixth for its eight-run total. Home Builders came back to score two more in the fourth.

Messick led the Pepsi hitting with two, while Nathan Green had two for the Builders.

Senior Babe Ruth

B.C. Insurance 10
Winterville 9

Bill Johnson singled home Billy Dough in the bottom of the seventh inning to lift Bill Clifton Insurance to a 10-9 victory over Winterville Tuesday in a Senior Babe Ruth baseball game.

With the score tied at 9-9, Dough singled and stole second to lead off the seventh. Then, with a 3-2 count on him, Johnson connected for a single to the left-centerfield gap to score Dough with the winning run.

Winterville wasted little time in taking the lead in yesterday's game. The visitors scored five times in the opening inning, thanks in part to a double by Todd Rouse and four singles.

Winterville added another run to its total in the second before B.C. Insurance scored twice in the bottom of the second to cut the gap to 6-2. The inning was sparked by Dough's two-run home run over the right-centerfield fence.

Crowell Pope connected on a solo home run in the third to make the score, 6-3. And then, after seeing Winterville score another run in the top of the fourth, B.C. Insurance erupted for six runs in the bottom of the inning to take a 9-7 lead. The inning was highlighted by Scott Galloway's double and singles by Tom Buie, Rudy Stalls, Kenny Kirkland and Dough.

Winterville, however, wasn't beaten yet. The visitors managed to score twice more in the sixth inning on a two-run homer by Sammy Tucker to tie the game at 9-9.

Dough had three hits for B.C. while Stalls and Galloway had two each. Emory Vines and Roy Lassiter each had three hits for Winterville while Page and Rouse had two hits each.

Little League

Coca-Cola 7

The Kiwanis banged out 24 hits, including three homers, a triple and six doubles, and romped to a 20-7 North State Little League victory over Coca-Cola yesterday.

Jimmy Gillahan led the hitting with four, including a first inning solo homer, while Russell Williams had three hits, and Kraig Butler, Jason Galloway, Tim Bland, Robbie McDonald and Scott Scharinger each had two hits for the Kiwanis.

The Kiwanis struck for the lead in the first, getting three runs, one on Gillahan's homer and the other two on a round-tripper by Scott Davis.

Coke came back with two in the bottom of the inning, but the Kiwanis added two in the second with the Kiwanis picking up one.

In the fourth, three more runs finished off the Coke team. Davis led off for the Kiwanis with a walk and Gillahan doubled. Williams grounded out, scoring Davis, and Bland doubled to score Gillahan. Bland came around with the tenth Kiwanis run when Charlie Crandell reached on an error.

The Kiwanis added ten more in the sixth, including a two-run homer by McDonald. The other four Coke runs came in the sixth.

No one had more than one hit for Coke, which got only two off Williams.

Wellcome

Carroll & Assoc. 4

Terry Warren and Anthony Cobb each had three hits and both hit homers to lead Wellcome to an 11-4 victory over Carroll & Associates yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League.

Wellcome pushed ahead in the first, scoring twice, as Cobb got his homer providing both runs.

Wellcome then put the game away with four more runs in the second. Robie Moyer led off with a double and Chris Brown singled. Dallas McPherson reached on a fielder's choice that got Brown, but scored Moyer. Judd Crumpler walked and both runners moved up on a passed ball. Greg Vanscoy singled, scoring both runners, and an error moved him all the way to third. He scored from there on a passed ball for a 6-0 lead.

Wellcome later added one in the third, two in the fifth and two more in the sixth, the latter on Warren's two-run homer.

Carroll & Associates picked up one in the third, as Billy Carr homered, and then added three in the fifth, all on a homer by Travis King.

Vanscoy also helped the Wellcome hitting with two, while King led the Carroll hitting with two.

Rocky Mount Downs S. Hill

ROCKY MOUNT — Rocky Mount used three Snow Hill errors and seven base hits to score eight runs in the first inning en route to an 11-6 victory Tuesday night in an American Legion baseball game.

Snow Hill scored once in the top of the first to take its only lead of the game. It was a lead short-lived, however, as Rocky Mount countered with an eight-run bottom of the first.

In that inning, Snow Hill committed three of its four errors for the night while Rocky Mount managed seven of its 15 hits for the game.

Snow Hill, now 3-5, scored twice in the second to cut the deficit to 8-3. David Kester walked and Wade Corbett tripled him home. Corbett later scored on Greg Hardison's sacrifice fly.

Snow Hill added another run to its total in the fourth and then scored twice more in the fifth to cut the gap to 8-6. Kevin Korpi reached on a error to lead off the fifth and Frank Milkovits followed with a walk. Both scored on Kester's double.

It was as close as Snow Hill would get. Rocky Mount scored twice in the sixth and once in the eighth for its 11-run total.

The game was played under protest by Snow Hill from the sixth inning on. Snow Hill coach James Fulghum said the protest concerned player placement on the base paths following an overthrow.

Korpi, Kester and Corbett all had two hits for Snow Hill. Rocky Mount was led by Phil Sikes, who was three for four. With two hits for Rocky Mount were Chuck Davis, Bill Wilkes and Marshall White.

Snow Hill was to have played host to Rocky Mount tonight.

Cornbread Is Basketball For Many In Kinston

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — The visitor was obviously not your ordinary speaker, and although the youngster didn't know exactly who the fellow was, he ventured a pretty good ballpark guess.

"Hey, do you play basketball?" he shouted at the towering figure striding just ahead of an excited, milling crowd of students at Rochelle Junior High.

Cedric Maxwell, busily signing autographs, did not hear the boy's question, but another student close by reprimanded the youth with a stern, "Man, that's Cornbread!"

You see, in Kinston, Cornbread and basketball mean just about the same thing.

The Most Valuable Player in the National Basketball Association's Championship Series, Kinston native and Boston Celtics forward Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell was in town this past week and took time to stop by the junior high to talk to seventh graders about careers and goals.

"Give your best and play with enthusiasm," Maxwell urged his rapt audience after introducing himself and his occupation. "You never want to give up in anything."

"I was cut from the basketball team in high school," he went on. "But I had to learn from that. It made me come back and play that much harder."

Earlier in his stay Maxwell, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Manny Maxwell of Tower Hill Road, had pointed to the same philosophy as the key to his team's drive to the NBA crown. Time after time the Celtics had to come back in the final minutes to keep their hopes alive.

Down three games to one in the best-of-seven series with the Philadelphia 76ers, the Celtics clawed their way back to three consecutive victories by a total of five points to take the Eastern Crown. And after falling twice to the unheralded Houston Rockets in the finals, the Boston badmen put it on the Rockets, Moses Malone and all, to take the series with two convincing victories. Both of them defensive masterpieces.

Maxwell had 28 points and 15 rebounds in game No. 5 and 19 points and five boards in the finale. The performance, along with his sterling defensive play the entire series, earned him the MVP trophy.

"Defense is what brings you back when you're behind," said Boston coach Bill Fitch after the Celts rallied from a fourth-quarter deficit to take the series from Philadelphia. Defense on the Celtics begins with Maxwell.

"Coach (Fitch) came to me before the season and said 'You're going to be guarding the Doc (Julius Erving) and Marques (Milwaukee's Johnson),' Maxwell said while relaxing in the gym at Kinston High earlier in the week. "(Chris) Ford and I draw the toughest defensive assignments. We're to control the top guns. Playing the defensive role requires more determination than anything else."

Much has been said about the Celtics' role playing, and Maxwell pointed to necessity as the reason for the style of play that brought a record fourteenth title to the Boston Garden.

"In order to win, someone has to do more scoring. That someone for us is (Larry) Bird. And (Robert) Parish. The rest of us simply fill in. Larry is the pivot of our offense. It's tough to handle that job and try to guard the other team's top scorer. Philly tried it with the Doc and it showed."

"After we beat the Sixers we felt like the world champs. But we had to prove it on the court," the lanky Maxwell said proudly. "We underestimated them (the Rockets), but losing the second game in Boston brought us back to reality."

Reality for Maxwell now includes condominiums in Boston and Charlotte and a new contract with the Celtics that he admits has "put me in a good, stable situation." At 25, he has reached the heights of the hardwood world. But there is no trace of complacency. "There are still a lot of things to do," he said. "All-Pro, All-Defensive team ... there are still goals to reach."

Lofty goals, but Maxwell has been aiming for lofty goals since his senior year at Kinston High School. After helping take the 1972-73 Vikings to the Midwestern Conference title, he went to UNC-Charlotte, where he led the 49ers to NIT and NCAA post-season appearances. In 1975 the 49ers made it to the finals of the NIT, only to lose to Kentucky 71-67. Maxwell was named the tournament's MVP. The following year it was to the NCAA's final four, but the 49ers fell to eventual champ Marquette, 51-49.

"Playing in the NIT gave me confidence," Maxwell noted. "Playing against the top caliber players in the cuntry made me more confident each time I went on the court."

He was drafted by the Celtics, and his confidence didn't flag despite the team's poor showing his first two years. "There were a lot of jealousies on the team at that time," he said. "But the players we have now are completely comfortable with each other. We have a good working relationship on and off the court."

Joining Cedric in the Boston lineup are a couple of other players with smalltown backgrounds — Bird, of French Lick, Ind., and M.L. Carr, a native of nearby Wallace, N.C., and a former star at Wallace-Rose Hill High School.

Hopewell Opens Putt-Putt Lead

Hopewell Presbyterian, using a record 16 players, beat the other teams in Putt-Putt Church League action last night to open up a 3½-game lead over second place Farmville Presbyterian in the league standings.

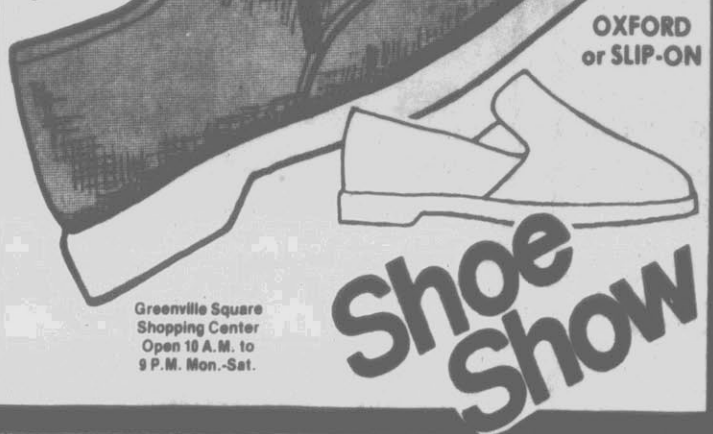

Hopewell (11-1) was led by medalist Danny Pollard with a 65 and George Mayo with a 66. Jeff Taft led Salem Methodist (7-5) with a 68 and Faith Pentecostal's (0-12) Lynn Cherry also had a 68. Mel Williams' 70 was the best for Farmville (7-4-1), while Wayne Peaden was tops for Bell Arthur Christian (4-7-1) with a 76.

U.S. Open, Ben Hogan: A Pair Linked In History

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Merion and the miracle of Ben Hogan.

Much of the history of American golf is woven into the white-faced traps, subtle mounds and unique basket flagsticks of the Merion Golf Club on the outskirts of Philadelphia, where the U.S. Open again will be played this weekend.

It remained, however, for the grim-faced Texan to provide the old course with the sport's highest drama.

It was the fabled comeback of 1950 — a story that has been preserved in history books, movie film and word of mouth generation to generation.

Hogan undoubtedly remembers every blade of grass, every difficult lie and every stab of pain of that memorable experience, but he doesn't like to talk about it.

"You'll have to write it from what you saw," he said when reached by telephone in his office at the Ben Hogan Golf Company in Fort Worth, Texas. "After all, you were there."

Ben Hogan is and always has been a "yep" and "nope" guy — reserved, taciturn, often cold and detached, even with the closest friends.

Scots called him "The Wee Ice Man" but always with reverence. His closest playing companion, Jimmy Demaret, nicknamed him "Blue Blades" and once quipped: "I don't know why people say Ben doesn't talk. When I play with him, he talks to me on every green. He turns to me and says, 'You're away.'"

Hogan, an army lieutenant in World War II, won his first Open at Riviera in Los Angeles in 1948 with 276, the first time a winner had broken 280. On Feb. 2, 1949, he and his wife, Valerie, were driving home along a lonely Texas highway from Phoenix, Ariz., when a huge transcontinental bus lunged out of the haze and skidded into the path of the Hogan car.

Instinctively, Hogan threw his body in front of Valerie to shield her from injury, a heroic gesture that probably saved both of their lives. The steering wheel of the car was driven through the driver's seat like a spear.

Valerie's injuries were minor. Hogan suf-

In order to halt the clotting of blood, doctors performed a two-hour abdominal operation, tying off the principal veins in his legs.

"He'll never play golf again, he may never walk again," some medical experts predicted.

After the accident, Hogan lay flat on his back for 58 days. When he was transferred home, he began by walking around his bed — at first one lap, then two, then three — in agonizing pain.

It was late in August before he could pick up a golf club. In December, 10 months after the accident, he dared to try a round of golf, legs bandaged from ankles to hips, riding a cart.

In January, the sports world was electrified to read that Hogan had entered the Los Angeles Open. Hogan trudged the course stiff-legged, in constant pain, tying Sam Snead for the title, the playoff delayed by rain.

Then came Merion, bringing with it not only the pressure of the Open but also the supreme test of having to go 36 holes on the final day.

An unknown named Lee Mackey from Birmingham, Ala., shot a record 64 the first day. Hogan was eight shots back. Ben fired a second round 69 to move to within two shots and survived the 36-hole marathon to tie Lloyd Mangrum and George Fazio for the title. The next day he won the playoff with a 69.

During the ordeal, Hogan had to go to his hotel each night, soak his legs in hot baths to reduce swelling and put them on stacks of pillows to stimulate circulation. Before every round, he wrapped both legs in layers of bandages.

Ben recalled later that in the final round on Saturday he thought he would have to abandon the effort.

After hitting his tee shot on No. 12, his legs locked on him. A friend, Harry Radix, rushed to his support and supported him down the fairway. Hogan three-putted three of the remaining holes but a remarkable two-iron shot to the final green saved the day.

The Miracle At Merion

4 Contenders Suffering As U.S. Open Nears

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — At least four potential leading contenders — including defending champion Jack Nicklaus — are suffering from a variety of ills and ailments on the eve of the first round of golf's 81st United States Open Championship.

Lee Trevino, Johnny Miller and David Graham join Nicklaus on a list of the walking wounded that would be more appropriate to a National Football League training camp than a golf course.

And still another top player, Andy Bean, is injured so badly he isn't competing. Bean, winner of the Bay Hill Classic three months ago, has his hand in a cast in an attempt to repair some torn ligaments.

Nicklaus, who is gunning for a record fifth American national championship, has been troubled by a stomach ailment for three months. He checked himself into a clinic for diagnosis and treatment last week and has been given a clean bill of health.

Trevino, who beat Nicklaus in a playoff for this title in 1971, the last time the Open was played at the historic Merion Golf Club, hasn't played competitively in a month and had a brief hospital stay for treatment of a chronic back ailment.

"I strained it doing some work around the house and then aggravated it jogging" late last month, said Trevino, who had surgery on his back several years ago. The condition worsened.

"I spent a couple of days in bed and when that didn't work, I went to a hospital for medication and treatment. I bought an electrical shock machine and carry it with me."

Miller, a former Open champion and a two-time winner this season, has been troubled by a shoulder injury that, at one time, threatened to knock him out of the 156-man field. He took cortisone shots early this week and said "I'll play if I have to crawl around."

Graham, a former PGA champion and winner at Phoenix early this year, declines to discuss his physical problem but has sought medical help in the last couple of weeks.

Nicklaus, greatly relieved that his problem was of a relatively minor nature, shot a 65 in his first practice round at Merion and appears to be near the peak of his game.

"I'm playing pretty well and, at times, I'm putting pretty well. I'm not unhappy with any part of my game," said Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles and seeking to become the first man in 30 years to make a successful defense of his Open title.

He has not won this season but, at age 41, he plays a light schedule and concentrates solely on golf's majors, the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA.

His chief rivals are Ray Floyd, Tom Watson and Tom Kite, all of whom are healthy.

Floyd, enjoying the best season of his 19-year career, scored his third victory of the season last week. A former Masters and PGA champion, he has finished lower than 12th only once since January.

"I'm pleased that I'm playing very well right now," Floyd said. "I'm not predicting I'll win it, but I'm very optimistic."

Watson is, quite simply, the best player in the game. He has won the Masters and two other events this year, holds his customary spot atop the season's money-winning list and is seeking a fifth consecutive Player of the Year title.

Although he has played well in the Open, with top 10 finishes in six of his last seven appearances, he has yet to win it. And that is his greatest ambition.

"My goal is to win the U.S. Open. It is my No. 1 priority in golf. And, until I do win it, it will remain my No. 1 priority," he said.

Kite, one of the steadiest players in golf, has a remarkable record of consistency. He has been seventh or better in his last seven starts. And Merion, relatively short but demanding of accuracy, seems ideally suited to his game.

Other major standouts include three-time 1981 winner Bruce Lietzke, Ben Crenshaw, Hale Irwin, John Mahaffey, Craig Stadler, Jerry Pate and Lanny Wadkins. Trevino cannot be counted out.

For U.S. Open Victory is This Watson's Last Chance?

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — This driver out of his hand, thus eliminating his greatest chance for error.

"It's a short (6,528 yards) course, a lay-up course, a position course," said Jack Nicklaus, the defending champion. He used the driver on only three holes in 1971 — the last time the historic old course was host to the Open — when he tied with Lee Trevino, then lost the title in a playoff.

That was the year before Watson joined the PGA Tour. He has dominated — thoroughly — the pro circuit for the past five seasons.

His record is overwhelming. He has won Player of the Year honors for four consecutive seasons and is the leading contender this year. He has led the money-begins Thursday, takes the winning list for four consecutive seasons and, with $332,492 this year, is well in front again.

He has led the tour in stroke average in three of the last four years.

Since the start of the 1977 season, he has won 23 American tour events, including three this year. He's a three-time British Open champion. He is the current holder of the Masters title.

The 31-year-old redhead has done almost everything that can be done.

Except win the U.S. Open. The failure is the cause of his greatest disappointment. And the goal of an American National championship is the source of his greatest ambition.

"That's my major goal for the year," Watson said. "I haven't won the Open. Until I do, it will be my major goal every year. I feel that my career will not be complete until I win the Open."

He's had his opportunities. He's played well in the Open. He's been ninth or better six of the last seven years. He had a chance to win at Winged Foot. He had another opportunity at Medinah. And he was third last year at Baltusrol.

And he comes to Merion as one of the favorites.

Despite his success this season, however, Watson is not completely satisfied with the state of his game.

"I'm not driving it nearly as well as I'd like to," he said. "I'm not as consistent as I should be. I'm hitting some good shots, but I'm not stringing them together the way I want."

"My short game is good, very good. But you can't win the Open with a short game alone."

Hurting Miller Set To Battle Merion

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Two days before the start of the U.S. Open, Johnny Miller walked the Merion Golf Club course, resting an aching shoulder.

The 34-year-old Miller, who could qualify for golf comeback of the year, injured the shoulder this past weekend.

It hurt enough for the 6-foot-2 Californian to take two cortisone shots from a member of the Philadelphia Eagles' medical staff.

"I don't know how I did it," said Miller, who almost disappeared from sight on the pro golf tour after topping the money winners in 1974 and finishing second the following year.

Miller, who appeared to be headed for stardom on the tour, lost the touch as fast as he had found it, maybe faster. He dropped to 14th on the money list in 1976 and even as late as last year was 30th.

There are those who think Miller was the victim of too much success too soon. Mentally he got bored with the tour. Physically he developed muscles that messed up his swing.

Miller said he may have damaged the shoulder lifting his luggage at Harrison, N.Y., where he finished 11th Sunday in the Westchester Classic. He earned $10,000.

Baseball's First Strike Started By Unruly Fan

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The suspension of Ty Cobb for hitting a heckling fan triggered the first strike by big league baseball players here on May 18, 1912.

The Detroit Tigers staged the one-day walkout, and each player was fined $100. Cobb had been suspended for hitting a fan three days earlier in New York.

The dispute made a group of local amateur players, including eight from St. Joseph's College, big leaguers for a day.

At the suggestion of Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, the amateurs were signed to Detroit contracts. This enabled the Tigers to avoid a forfeit fee of $5,000 and gave Mack's reigning world champions an easy victory.

The amateur Tigers were held to four hits, made nine errors and lost 24-2, a record score at the time.

Aloysius Joseph Travers became the only pitcher to allow 24 runs in a big league game, a record that still stands. Later, as a member of the St. Joseph's Prep faculty, he reminded students that "only" 14 of the A's runs were earned.

American League president Ban Johnson had suspended Cobb after seeing him go into the stands after the fan. Johnson ruled the Tigers would be fined $100 for each game there were on strike. They were idle on May 19 and 20, and they voted to end the strike on the night of May 20. Cobb was reinstated on May 26.

Billy Maharg, one of the St. Joseph's players who became a one-day Tiger, later signed with the Philadelphia Phillies and played in one National League game.

He provided a baseball writer with a tip on the rigged 1919 World Series between the Chicago White Sox and the Cincinnati Reds. The writer then broke the story of baseball's greatest scandal.

Minors Returning To Erie, Pa.

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Minor league baseball returns to Erie this weekend after an absence of 14 years.

The Erie Cardinals, affiliated with the major league St. Louis Cardinals, will play a 76-game schedule in the Class A New York-Pennsylvania League.

The Erie team opens Friday in Jamestown, N.Y., then plays its home opener here Saturday night against the same Jamestown Expos.

Erie first fielded a minor league team in 1890 in the old Iron and Coal League, but hasn't had a team since 1967. That was the year the Erie Tigers, a farm club of the Detroit Tigers, finished last and drew poorly in the New York-Penn League.

But a new $300,000 lighting system has been installed at Ainsworth Field, which was erected in 1938. The stadium, located in a residential district, has also been refurbished with new seats.

Through the years, Erie has had farm teams for the Boston Braves, the Cincinnati Reds, the Washington Senators, the Detroit Tigers and the Minnesota Twins.

"This is our first venture into Erie, and we're quite excited about it," said Paul Fauks, the Cardinals' minor league director.

"The townspeople seem very, very enthusiastic, and with the caliber of ball club we'll be fielding, it should go over very well," Fauks added in a phone interview from St. Louis.

The Erie team will be managed by former major leaguer Roger Freed, who retired last season after playing with Baltimore, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Montreal and St. Louis.

In a spring training league in Florida, the nucleus of the Erie squad compiled a 28-16 record and finished in first place.

"They're a good bunch of guys who are very eager to win," Freed said after the team arrived here.

"We've got a couple of guys who can pop the ball out of the park. But basically we're a good hitting club that makes contact," Freed added.

"And we do have some speed. This should be a very aggressive ballclub that is ready to play ball."

In addition to Jamestown, other teams in the league are Batavia, Elmira, Geneva, Little Falls, Oneonta and Utica, all in New York.

COMPARE OUR PRICES

A FEW WORDS ABOUT FOOD PRICES

Some local food chains are claiming to have Greenville's lowest food prices. Some are even running price surveys in the newspapers—others will "triple the difference" if you can buy food cheaper elsewhere.

We don't make such claims—they are not true.

The real truth is that the large chain stores have very high meat prices. They never mention their meat prices in their ads or price comparisons. It's difficult to truthfully boast about prices in an area in which you are not competitive!

When you buy groceries, it's the total cost of your food bill that really counts—the combined cost of your groceries, meats, produce, non-foods, etc. How can you save money at stores which give you savings in a few areas, but overcharge you in others?

We think competitive food pricing is the fairest pricing for shoppers. We are firmly convinced that the best way for a customer to buy food is to buy all of it at one store, (especially when gas is $1.20 per gallon, or more). When the total cost of groceries is considered, no one store can claim to be significantly cheaper than another.

We are a full service supermarket with friendly employees, bag boys and plenty of extra customer services. For example, you don't have to "take a number" and drive around to pick up your groceries. They are put in your car for you by a friendly bag boy. When you shop at Overton's, your money stays right here in America—in Greenville, N.C.—good ole Pitt County U.S.A.

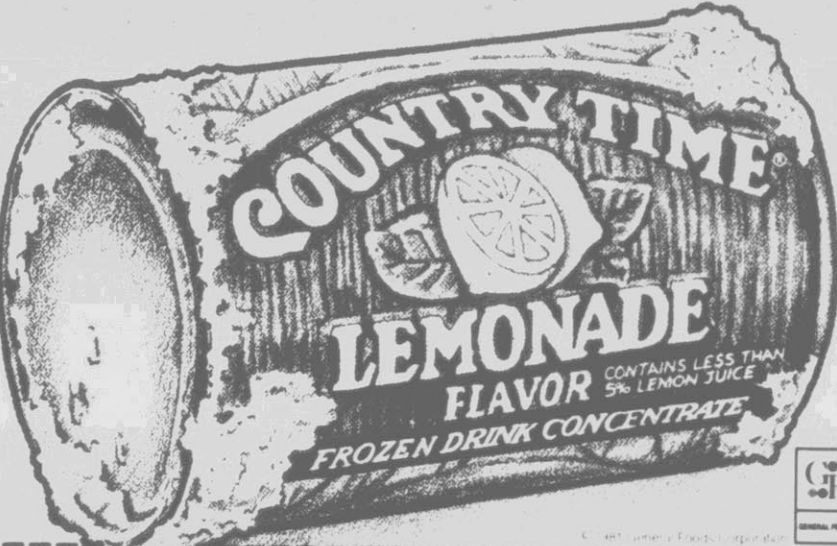

THE COLD FACT:

Country Time Frozen Drink Concentrate tastes better than Minute Maid.

There aren't many things Americans agree on, but in a recent taste test people agreed that Country Time Lemonade Flavor Frozen Drink Concentrate tastes better than Minute Maid Frozen Concentrate for Lemonade.

Country Time frozen is made with a unique blend of real lemon juice and natural lemon flavor. And it...tastes like good old-fashioned lemonade.

Country Time frozen tastes better than Minute Maid. That's a cold fact. And here's twenty-five cents to prove it.

New 'Summer Civilians' Return To Farm, Fishing

By The Associated Press

Nolan Ryan is back on the ranch. Buddy Bell's raising money for charity. Carl Yastrzemski hung out the "Gone Fishing" sign. Pete Rose, who just couldn't stay away from the game, is playing softball. George Brett took a doctor's holiday on the golf course. Pat Zachry is attending to his newborn son. And Mike Hargrove saw the movie "Herbie Goes Bananas."

Major league baseball's richest players — the ones who stand to lose the most and suffer the least from the 6-day-old players' strike — are occupying their time with more mundane activities these days.

During this break from summer's traditional pastime, players are returning to their homes to exercise on their own, putter around the house, spend time with their families and attend to their own businesses. For the first time since their childhoods, many have become summer civilians.

The gentlemen farmers included Ryan of the Houston Astros, who owns a ranch in Alvin, Texas; Gaylord Perry of the Atlanta Braves, who is working his farm near Williamston, Texas, and the Texas Rangers' Ferguson Jenkins, who works a spread in his native Canada, near Blenheim, Ontario.

Charity work will occupy much of the time of Bell, third baseman for the Rangers, who is chairman of the Leukemia Society of America's Super Swim Classic this weekend in Arlington, Texas. The Braves also say that pitcher Phil Niekro has become involved in several charities in Atlanta.

Other leisure activities will keep players like Yastrzemski of Boston, Rose of Philadelphia and Brett of Kansas City busy.

"I'll do a lot of fishing and keep myself in shape by running and working out," says the 41-year-old Yastrzemski, who lives on Cape Cod in Massachusetts.

Rose will appear tonight in a charity softball game at Fairfax Elementary School in Cincinnati, where more than 2,500 people are expected to attend at $2 a head, sponsors say. Rose normally plays in the game after the season, but the game was moved up this year because of the strike. The strike began after Rose tied Stan Musial for the most lifetime hits in the National League, 3,630.

Brett, last year's American League batting champion with a .390 average, told a television interviewer he was going shopping for some golf balls because it was the first chance he'd ever had to play golf in Kansas City during the summer.

For many players, the strike was a welcome opportunity to spend time with the wife and kids during the summer, a season when daddy-the-ballplayer usually becomes a stranger. In the case of Zachry, a New York Mets pitcher, the strike could not have been better timed.

Zachry's wife, Sharron, gave birth to 8-pound, 9-ounce Joshua Paul Zachry at 7:15 p.m. Friday, the first day of the strike, and the parents brought their son home Tuesday morning.

"I've been totally involved with Sharron having the baby, so this really couldn't have happened at a better time," Zachry said. "I'll just stay home and enjoy the boy."

Hargrove, the Cleveland Indians' first baseman, spent part of his first weekend off at the cinema. He took his children to see "Herbie Goes Bananas," a vintage Disney film about a self-motivated Volkswagen. Recovering from a pulled hamstring, Hargrove says he'll try to stay in shape by running and playing catch with the neighbor's teen-age son.

Other players, like Jim Sundberg of the Rangers and Rusty Staub of the Mets, have used the strike as a chance to keep their businesses running smoothly. Sundberg owns a travel agency in Arlington, where he has been keeping himself busy, and Staub occasionally dons his chef's hat at Rusty's Restaurant on Manhattan's upper East Side.

Workouts of a more formal nature continued for some players. George Foster and some of his Cincinnati teammates, along with Rose, took batting practice and some fielding at the University of Cincinnati.

Still other players sought solitude from the jangling of telephone calls from people asking them what they were doing during the strike.

"I'll be in the Ozarks where you can't reach me because there are no phones there," Chicago Cubs reliever Dick Tidrow said.

Kaat: Grebey, Kuhn To Blame

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The second-oldest player in the major leagues Tuesday blamed Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and negotiator Ray Grebey for the players' strike — and predicted both would lose their jobs.

"If you want to point the finger of blame in this, you can pick Kuhn and Grebey," said Jim Kaat, pitching in the twilight of his career as a reliever for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Kaat, playing in his 22nd major league season, said he had called Kuhn several times before the strike to ask the commissioner to become active in the dispute.

"Kuhn could have taken action, in the best interests of the game," Kaat told the St. Louis Globe-Democrat in a telephone interview from his Philadelphia farm. "And if the owners had been allowed to speak out on the strike, without fear of a $500,000 fine, it never would have reached this point."

The 42-year-old Kaat, who has a career 275-229 record, said he reached a $60,000 salary in 1967 after winning 25 games for the Minnesota Twins the year before.

"But when I went 16-13, 14-12, 14-13 and 14-10, (Twins owner Calvin) Griffith assessed me 10 percent cuts three of those years, then a token cut," Kaat said. "I think I contributed to the club, but another of his favorite quotes was: 'Go out and get a job.'"

"I had no choice," added the lefthander. "My salary went to $48,000."

Kaat said the free agent system, at issue in the current dispute, prevents arbitrary salary cuts.

"What do you think I could have gotten as a free agent with my record for the Twins?" he asked. "I realize it's all relative, but if the owners had been fair and honest in earlier years, I'm sure the players would have reciprocated."

The owners should "come out of the woodwork and say how they feel about all this," said the relief pitcher, who was 3-1 with three saves and a 1.75 earned run average before the strike.

"Then they might tactfully ease Grebey out of the picture," he added. "His stance is to blame for this mess. We have been talking compromise, when we don't have to give back a nickel."

Kuhn Not Getting Involved...

on the bogged down talks.

"We explored past history of the situation bringing us to where we are right now," said federal mediator Kenneth Moffett. "I would characterize the meetings as amicable without any progress toward ending the strike. I hope (Wednesday) if there is any conversation as far as compensation that we would go through the night."

As might be expected, the two sides disagreed on the results of the meeting. Grebey called it a "brief but good meeting. There was an effort to clear the air, clear some misunderstandings after 18 months."

Boone was not happy with Tuesday's meeting. "There's no merit to rehashing old things," he said. "We need to explore new avenues to ending this thing. As to getting to the issues, that didn't happen today."

The only issue is the degree of compensation to teams losing free agents through the re-entry draft. The owners' compensation plan provides that a major league roster player as well as the amateur draft choice be awarded to any team losing a "ranking" free agent. The players say such a plan forces them to give up freedom to move from team to team won in previous negotiations and in court.

So the major leagues entered its sixth day of non-activity and the owners drew closer to collecting on their $50 million strike insurance policy — after 153 games are cancelled, the owners begin collecting $100,000 per date. The 26 teams already are sharing in a mutual assistance fund estimated at $15 million.

Baseball fans throughout the United States have been frustrated by the first midseason strike in the sport's history.

William Halloran, a busdriver in Philadelphia, filed suit in a U.S. District Court on Tuesday claiming that his civil rights are being violated by the strike and asking a judge to order immediate resumption of play.

The suit, which names the National Labor Relations Board as defendant, also seeks to have a yet-to-be-formed "Baseball Fans of America" organization recognized.

About 200 fans demonstrated outside Memorial Stadium in Baltimore Tuesday night to protest the strike. At the rally, a petition was passed among the fans, demanding that Kuhn "take the reins away from the bumbling idiots and return a sense of sanity to the negotiations before irreparable harm is done to our national pastime."

Talks Continue...

in happiness with the stalled talks. They appeared eager to become more involved at the bargaining table, and reportedly to get Kuhn to use his influence in obtaining a settlement.

Kuhn called the meeting with the owners "useful." He said those calling for more involvement by the commissioner did "not understand the internal dynamics. But the emphasis should be on the two bargaining teams. That's where the solution should be found."

Grebey, demanding one voice at the negotiations, has resisted any owner's participation at the table. He said the talks with Kuhn "had absolutely nothing to do with the negotiations today."

One management official, who requested anonymity, said the Kuhn meeting had nothing to do with the reality of resolving the dispute. The source called the owners' session with Kuhn "a grandstand play, a public spectacle."

In his testimony in federal court in Rochester, N.Y. two weeks ago, Kuhn said he spoke only as an individual and had no leverage with the owners' bargaining unit.

Boone and four other players led the union's negotiating team, as Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association, continued to stay away from the talks. He had said several owners considered him an obstacle to the settlement.

"We're giving them the opportunity to sell their (free agent compensation) proposal to the players," Boone said, adding that the players "want to make it perfectly clear that Marvin is not dictating to the players."

House Rejects Higher State Tax On Cigarettes

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After turning down a bid to raise North Carolina's lowest-in-the-nation tax on cigarettes, the state House scheduled a vote today on Gov. Jim Hunt's proposal to increase gasoline taxes.

Hunt aides continued final lobbying efforts on the eve of the vote, but it was without a frantic air and supporters of the higher gasoline tax voiced confidence that they held a small edge.

"We've got more than half," said Zeb Alley, Hunt's legislative lobbyist. "It ain't no landslide, but I think we'll have a good victory."

The Hunt proposal would raise gasoline taxes by 2 and three-quarters cents per gallon, raise other highway-related fees and transfer to highway uses as much as $59 million in sales taxes collected on auto parts.

The Hunt proposal approved by the Senate would have raised the tax by 3 cents, but the House Finance Committee trimmed a quarter-cent and dumped a section that would have provided a small rebate — amounting to an average of less than $5 per driver — from the bill.

The gas-tax vote was set after the House defeated a move by Piedmont and western legislators to bring to the floor a bill that would have increased the tax on cigarettes from 2 cents to 5 cents a pack.

The House voted 75-41 against a procedural move aimed at bringing the cigarette bill to the floor, as legislators from eastern tobacco areas argued that a higher tax would hurt North Carolina's No. 1 farm crop.

"If we don't think farming is important in North Carolina, then we've missed the point," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir. "Who is going to stand up for the tobacco farmer if we in the rural areas do not?"

The tobacco tax was indirectly tied to the gasoline tax increase, as supporters argued it was a reasonable way to make up part of the $59 million that would be lost from the state's general tax fund through the transfers of Hunt's bill.

Under the House version of the gasoline tax bill, the transfer cannot be made unless the General Assembly approves other tax increases to replenish the general fund.

"If we're not going to put a tax on a luxury like cigarettes and liquor, then I cannot and will not vote to tax gasoline," said Rep. Bob Jones, D-Rutherford. "I don't want to go home and tell them I voted for a necessity and against a luxury tax."

Hunt has proposed higher alcoholic beverage taxes to make up much of that loss due to the transfer, and a Senate subcommittee began considering that measure Tuesday. Hunt's plan would raise $48 million through a 50 percent increase in taxes on liquor and a 38 percent increase in the taxes on beer.

With the cigarette tax vote, House Speaker Liston

Ramsey ruled that House rules would now prevent consideration of similar bills raising the tax by the same or larger amounts. But, he said, it did not rule out consideration of bills raising the cigarette tax by 1 and one-half cents per pack or establishing a new tax on cigarettes manufacturer in the state.

Court Rejects Cable TV Order

NEW YORK (AP) — Rejecting claims that commercial networks and professional sports leagues would lose money, a federal appeals court has refused to overturn an order de-regulating cable television.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals unanimously rejected a request Tuesday by the broadcasting industry and the sports leagues to block the Federal Communications Commission from repealing rules that now prevent cable TV systems from expanding.

The FCC has not yet set an effective date for repeal of the rules. But the National Association of Broadcasters indicated Tuesday it would appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

IN TOMORROW'S OPENING — John Williams, left, and Paula Pyle are among cast members appearing in Noel Coward's comedy, "Blithe Spirit," opening Thursday night at 8 p.m. at Ayden-Grifton High School. Williams has the role of Charles Condomine, and Ms. Pyle portrays his second wife, Ruth. Kim Dale directs the play which will also have an evening performance on Saturday and a matinee on Sunday, June 21. Admission is $2, with tickets available at the door.

Cigarette Tax Voting

By The Associated Press
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Here is how the House voted Tuesday on a minority report on a bill that would increase the tax on cigarettes by three cents, to five-cents a pack.

A "Yes" vote was a vote to adopt the report and place the cigarette-tax bill on the agenda for a vote. The move was defeated 75-41.

Patient Gets New Heart

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A smiling, joking Charles Walker has left the Stanford University Medical Center with a new heart, a new set of lungs and a new lease on life.

Walker, who was born with a defective heart, walked out of the hospital Tuesday, 48 days after he became the world's fifth recipient of a transplanted heart and lungs.

Before the May 1 operation, walking was a chore that left the 30-year-old Binghamton, N.Y., resident out of breath.

Cuban Is Killed In U.S. Prison

ATLANTA (AP) — A third Cuban detainee has been slain at the Atlanta federal prison, home to more than 1,700 refugees who arrived aboard last year's boatlift from Cuba, authorities said.

Warden Jack Hanberry said the latest victim was Victor Robaina-Valdivia, 34, who was fatally stabbed Tuesday afternoon.

Another Cuban was stabbed to death at the institution in May, and a detainee died last September from wounds he suffered in a scuffle.

The Cubans, among the 125,000 who arrived aboard the "Freedom Flotilla," are being held because they allegedly admitted committing crimes in their homeland.

Legislators Draw Line On Redistricting

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A confrontation appears to be growing between the state House and the Senate over whether to cross county lines in establishing congressional districts.

The Senate Congressional Redistricting Committee rejected a House plan Tuesday that would have broken county lines in redrawing North Carolina's 11 congressional districts.

Instead, the panel approved its own map, drawn by Senate leaders to adhere strictly to county lines.

The House Congressional Redistricting Committee was scheduled to meet today to consider a map splitting five counties into more than one district.

Although counties may be split into different congressional districts, they traditionally have followed county lines in North Carolina.

"It almost looks as if we're going to have an impasse," said Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate panel.

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Halifax, chairman of the House panel, said he still hoped the map crossing county lines would be adopted. A subcommittee named by Huskins has recommended his map to the full committee.

"We're going to try to pass our bill, and the differences are going to have to be resolved in a conference committee," Huskins said.

The map approved Tuesday by the Senate committee was forwarded by Sen. Dallas Alford, D-Nash, and Sen. Melvin Daniels, D-Pasquotank and is like one drawn earlier by Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham.

The map would set up a Research Triangle district consisting of Wake, Durham and Orange counties while leaving the districts in the western part of the state unchanged.

The map would:
— Drop Jones and add Northampton in the 1st District.

— Drop Northampton and Orange and add Alamance and Chatham in the 2nd District.

— Add Jones in the 3rd District.

— Drop Chatham and Randolph and add Orange in the 4th District.

— Drop Davidson and add Yadkin and Rockingham in the 5th District.

— Drop Rockingham and Alamance and add Randolph and Davidson in the 6th District.

— Drop Hoke in the 7th District.

— Drop Yadkin and add Hoke in the 8th District.

— Preserve the 9th, 10th and 11th Districts in their present configurations.

Marijuana
The Senate Judiciary III Committee turned a bill easing penalties for keeping small amounts of marijuana into a resolution urging a study of the penalties for possessing marijuana. The bill was introduced by Sen. William Creech, D-Wake.

The resolution approved by the Senate Judiciary III Committee directs the Legislative Research Commission to examine current pot penalties and study the feasibility of letting district courts handle some of the cases currently handled in superior court.

State law now makes possession of more than one ounce of pot a felony, punishable by up to five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Creech's bill would make it a general misdemeanor to possess between one and four ounces. His bill would add a 30-day sentence to the $100 fine for possession of less than one ounce, while setting a penalty of up to two years in prison and a $2,000 fine for possession of one to four ounces. Amounts in excess of that would constitute felony possession.

Attorneys
Clients who pay attorneys without receiving their services would be returned their money under a bill that cleared the House Finance Committee.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Ed Nye, D-Bladen, would set up a clients' restitution fund with $10 annual dues from each of North Carolina's 7,000 attorneys.

Bobby James, executive director and secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina State Bar Association, said North Carolina is the only state without such a fund.

James said that six clients in the state lost $111,087 to their attorneys last year. He added that the bar heard 50 cases involving legal fee disputes.

"The state bar has this responsibility to the people of North Carolina," said Rep. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, an attorney who no longer practices law. "We are talking about the unscrupulous lawyer who runs off with the widow's money."

But Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, objected to the bill.

"We're being asked to contribute to a fund so one rotten apple at the bottom of the barrel ... (won't) have to pay for his problem," said Nesbitt, who also is an attorney.

License Plates

A bill to revamp North Carolina license plates won the House Finance Committee's approval. The new red, white and blue plates would carry the slogan "First in Flight" and a replica of the Wright brothers' airplane flying over the dunes at Kitty Hawk.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Goldsboro, already has passed the Senate.

If the bill passes, North Carolinians may buy the tags for $5 beginning in January. Barnes estimated it would cost the state an additional 3½ cents each to manufacture the tri-colored plates.

Industrial Commission
Several attorneys asked the Senate Judiciary II Committee to approve a bill that would make public the records of the state Industrial Commission. The commission rules on workers' compensation cases, including cases involving brown lung victims.

Raleigh attorney Jim Lore said many employees facing the commission do not retain an attorney. He said open records in such cases are the only check on the commission's powers.

Bland Kilpatrick, a member of the Brown Lung Association, said open records "are a way to check on the Industrial commissioners. The sick and injured workers need to be protected from small settlements."

Ms. Kilpatrick and Lore cited cases in which workers with brown lung, or bysionosis, accepted low settlements without knowing what they were doing.

But Bob Stevens, counsel for Burlington Industries, said current laws offered adequate protection. And he said open records might inhibit the commission's work and let competing companies get confidential information about each other.

Senator Demands Apology

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Carolyn Mathis and Insurance Commissioner John Ingram squared off Tuesday over statements concerning two insurance bills.

The Mecklenburg County legislator forbade Ingram or any of his staff from speaking before the Senate Insurance Committee or any of its subcommittees until he made a public apology for what she termed "irresponsible comments" he made Monday during a news conference.

Her pronouncement came during a subcommittee meeting. Mrs. Mathis chairs the subcommittee as well as the full committee.

Her main complaint dealt with Ingram's statement that a "so-called public hearing" on two insurance bills was called for Tuesday but his office was not notified until late Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Mathis said that was "absolutely false," adding that Ingram had personally asked her on Thursday morning to set up the public hearing, which she did, announcing it on the Senate floor Thursday afternoon.

Ingram stormed out of the meeting room after Mrs. Mathis made it clear she would not let him speak.

Ingram maintained later that he had nothing to apologize for and Mrs. Mathis stood her ground, maintaining that no one from the department would be allowed to speak before any Senate insurance committee until the public apology was made.

Train Offers Jolting Trip In Style

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer

ABOARD THE BANDEIRANTE, Brazil (AP) — Not far into the 665-mile train trip from Brazil's gleaming capital to the industrial center of Sao Paulo, a passenger may be pardoned for thinking the journey is the closest thing to riding on the back of a Brazilian armadillo.

The Bandeirante train — named for the bold Portuguese explorers who carried flags, or "bandeiras," as they settled the Brazilian interior 200 years ago — bounces along a single pair of rails at the less-than-breathless average speed of 30.8 mph.

The journey traverses flat plains, dotted with solitary trees and huge termite mounds inhabited by wild parrots, giant snakes and, indeed, armadillos. The train passes the ramshackle houses of subsistence farmers, where faces appear in rough-hewn windows along the way. Further south, farm houses are surrounded by banana trees full of purple, unripened fruit. Cotton and coffee plantations along the way give a sense of what the American South of colonial days might have looked like.

There is an attempt at elegance on the Bandeirante train, refurbished since it last made this trip 10 years ago. There are comfortable recliner bed-seats in the first class car, and each passenger gets an individual pillow and blanket. The restaurant car serves inexpensive drinks, and the steak is reasonable.

But the reality of the trip sometimes seems like a Peter Sellers spoof.

The train has a sleeper car. But ticket sellers have warned that couples must produce their marriage certificates before paying the special passage of the equivalent of $30 dollars each. Other fares run between $15 and $20. The Federal Railway Authority later overruled the marriage requirement, but admonished that "libidinous acts" on its trains would be punished.

In the dining car, nicely dressed people are trying to sip their breakfast coffee just as the train lurches. A woman pours a drink down her decolletage. A waiter smiles sheepishly.

One traveler, a Harvard University graduate student, laughs at the mishap — until a fat man with a cane passing by loses his balance and tumbles into the student's lap.

Despite the glitches, the Bandeirante has become an instant hit. The platform of the modern train station in Brasilia is filled with passengers and curiosity-seekers. Entire families come to the station to look.

"Most of these people have never seen a passenger train before, except in the movies," said one young Brazilian ranch-owner as we gazed at children pressing their noses against the windows to get a look at the lucky passengers.

Motor vehicles have been the preferred mode of travel in this vast country, with a population of 120 million and a land mass larger than the contiguous 48 United States. A car can travel between Brasilia and Sao Paulo in about 12 hours. As the train plods along for 22½ hours, no fewer than 30 modern jetliners fly between the cities, in 85-minute flights.

The rancher said it was more convenient for him to take the train than either a bus or a plane from Brasilia to his home in Ribeirao Preto, 200 miles closer than Sao Paulo. "This trip takes two hours longer than the bus (which makes local stops), but I get a good night's sleep on the train," he said.

The Federal Transportation Ministry projects spending several billion dollars in the next decade to upgrade the nation's subpar rail lines. Despite its size, the nation has only 20,500 miles of railroads, one tenth the number of lines in the United States. It has the additional problem of being forced to run two different rail systems because the track comes in two gauges.

Most federal efforts are focusing on industrial and commercial train transport. But besides the Bandeirante, the government has opened in the last year a passenger route between Rio de Janeiro and the city of Belo Horizonte, Brazil's third-largest city, after Sao Paulo and Rio.

Brazil also is completing subway systems in Rio and Sao Paulo and has local commuter train lines.

Still, if the government expects Brazilians to ride long-distance trains, it will have to spruce up service on lines like the Bandeirante. The roadbed is deteriorated so much in some places that the train can barely crawl along at 10 mph.

Problems in service will also have to be resolved. The conductor on the Bandeirante more than once was uncertain of what the next stop would be. And he managed to tarnish traditional lore about the deep-voiced trainman who folds currency neatly between his knuckles and wears a golden watch fob.

Jerked awake when the train bounced a bit more than usual, he sleepily asked a reporter, "Excuse me, can you tell me what time it is?"

Official Says PCBs Threaten 2 States

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — Up to 8 million pounds of toxic PCBs randomly dumped in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin during the past three decades is creating what one government official calls a "ticking time bomb."

No one knows exactly where all the poisonous chemicals are.

Efforts to find them have uncovered PCBs at a playground in this northern Illinois city of 65,000, in one family's well water and in sufficient quantity to create "very high" contamination of a creek that flows into Lake Michigan. The lake is the source of drinking water for 10 million people.

The random dumping occurred before the 1977 government ban on the manufacture of PCBs — polychlorinated biphenyls — suspected of causing cancer, birth defects and other problems. It has been used in the United States since 1929, mainly as a lubricant and coolant in industrial machinery and electrical equipment.

Federal officials have known for years that up to 2 million pounds of PCBs was dumped by Outboard Marine Corp., which makes boat motors, into Waukegan harbor, 25 miles north of Chicago. The company used the chemical to lubricate aluminum die-casting machines. But only within the last year have federal officials joined local efforts to track down millions of pounds of the chemical apparently dumped on land.

Lake County Health Department officials fear that the PCBs will work their way into ground water, Lake Michigan and the food chain. The harbor dumping already has been linked to dangerous levels of PCBs in fish.

"We feel we are sitting on a ticking time bomb," Tom Nedved, director of the health department's environmental health division, said last week.

The missing PCBs were first described in a letter from Outboard Marine to the EPA, dated March 15, 1976, but officials have concentrated their efforts on the harbor dumping because it presented a more immediate threat.

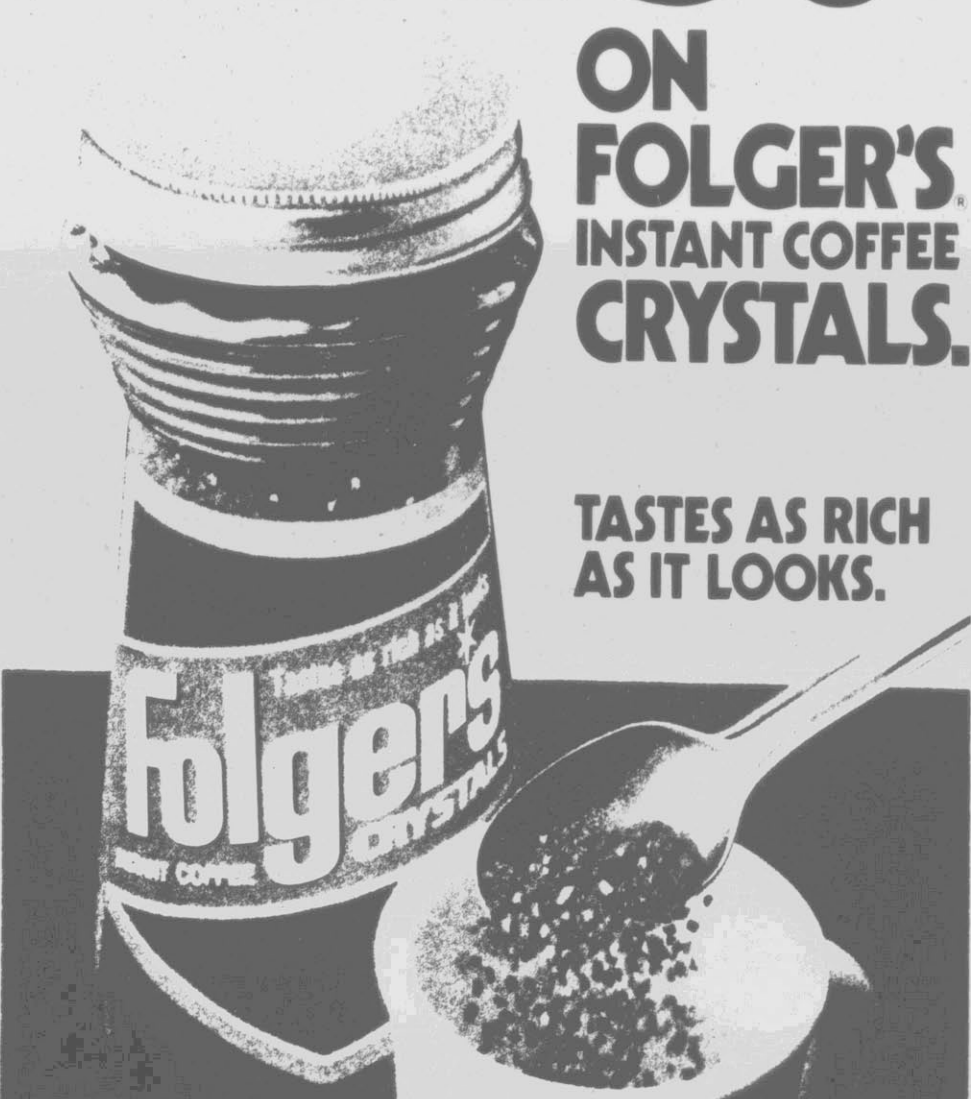

Outboard Marine attorney Hugh Thomas estimates that between 5.9 and 6.7 million pounds of PCBs were given to refuse collectors to haul away, presumably to dispose of in dumps and landfills. EPA attorney Kay Jacobs puts the figure at 8 million pounds.

Outboard Marine officials say they don't know where the waste haulers took the chemicals because 20 years ago there were no disposal restrictions.

Agent Orange Care Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Free medical care for Vietnam veterans whose illnesses were caused by the defoliant Agent Orange is heading toward final congressional approval.

The Senate passed a $232 million, four-year package of veterans' benefits Tuesday after adopting an amendment extending eligibility for care to victims of the defoliating chemical.

Veterans exposed to nuclear weapons tests would also be covered for any illnesses arising out of radiation.

The House version of the bill, passed June 2, would cover veterans exposed to Agent Orange and other defoliants but not those affected by nuclear weapons tests. A committee of House and Senate members will work out the differences between the two bills, but cannot eliminate provisions that are in both of them.

Meanwhile, eight Vietnam veterans, some of whom have been without solid food for almost a month, flew here from California on Tuesday to press their demands for Veterans Administration reform.

Bobby Phillips, spokesman for the hunger strikers, said the group, which began their protest May 20, planned to set up at least one tent on the White House lawn and deliver to President Reagan six 20-minute, tape-recorded pleas from veterans about their complaints regarding the VA.

A scheduled Fourth of July march on Washington by veterans from all over the country has been canceled, Phillips said, but one will be held at the end of September.

He said the Senate's vote on Agent Orange funds represents "a big part of the demands that we have been demanding."

In both the Senate and House bills, the Veterans Administration or a VA-approved doctor would have to determine that an illness was indeed caused by Agent Orange for a veteran to be eligible for care in a VA hospital or nursing home.

Vietnam veterans have claimed that exposure to Agent Orange resulted in ill effects including birth defects among their children, cancer, skin conditions, liver damage, unexplained rages and impotence.

The Veterans administration is conducting a study, ordered by Congress, to determine what, if any, medical effects the defoliant has had.

Reagan Will Use Sequoia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Sequoia, the presidential yacht sold in 1977 as an austerity gesture by Jimmy Carter, is returning to Washington for President Reagan's use.

Reagan had expressed an interest in obtaining a yacht since taking office, but he declined using federal money to buy one. Checks with the Navy and other agencies disclosed no available boats and the search had been discontinued.

A group known as the Presidential Yacht Trust came to his rescue Tuesday, announcing it had purchased the 105-foot Sequoia and would make it available to the president and for special forums and other events.

Dr. Jon Staiger, director of the Ocean Learning Institute in Palm Beach, Fla., most recent owner of the vessel, confirmed the sale but declined to discuss the price. The institute, he said, retains an interest in the yacht.

The Sequoia began its trip north Monday and is expected to reach Washington on June 28, Staiger said. It will be kept on the Potomac in the summer and return to Florida in the winter for use by the institute, he said.

Thomas J. Tague, a spokesman for the trust, said money to buy and maintain the yacht was raised by private donations. The trust is chaired by Washington businessman Michael Dowd Gill, a nephew of former President Eisenhower.

Four Die In Tokyo Stabbing

TOKYO (AP) — A middle-aged man stabbed two women and two children to death on a Tokyo street today, then took another woman hostage and pulled her into a nearby restaurant, police said.

The attacker, whose motives were unclear, asked the police to bring a leader of an ultra-rightist gangster group to the restaurant.

Police said the man started slashing with a knife at passerbys in a shopping area shortly before noon.

He killed a 26-year-old housewife, Rumiko Nagano, and her 3-year-old daughter and year-old son. Another victim, Miyoko Nihonmatsu, 33, died several hours later in a hospital.

Meanwhile, the man grabbed Rumiko Ishizuka, 33, by the arm and pulled her into a nearby Chinese restaurant.

The police cordoned off the street and were trying to persuade the man to surrender.

There has been a rash recently of such "torima" or "passing devil" attacks in which men use knives or other weapons on victims at random, usually women and children.

Nine previous attacks have been reported in the past month, resulting in four deaths.

Most of the assailants have been men in their 20s who either had mental problems or were disturbed because of failures in their jobs or their social lives.

Railway Asks Fare Increase

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Chicago-area's largest commuter railway is asking for a 50-percent fare hike, becoming the fourth line to seek higher rates to stave off bankruptcy in the wake of financial problems plaguing the Regional Transportation Authority.

The Chicago & North Western Transportation Co. will ask the Illinois Commerce Commission to approve the hike effective July 1, railroad spokesman James McDonald said Tuesday. The C&NW serves 49,860 daily riders.

Meanwhile Tuesday, RTA Chairman Lewis W. Hill released a preliminary draft outlining proposed 12.5-percent fare hikes as well as service cuts for the five railroads serving the Chicago area. It was to be presented to the RTA board today. Any proposal for fare hikes adopted by the RTA board still would have to be approved by the ICC.

The RTA has not endorsed the C&NW's proposed 50-percent fare increase.

Only one of Chicago's five railroads has not filed a request yet for higher rates with the ICC, the state agency responsible for approving all bus and train fare hikes. The requested fare boosts from the other three railways range from 55 percent to 80 percent.

The RTA, whose carriers serve a six-county area, cut off subsidies to its railways and suburban bus companies last month after it ran up an $87-million deficit — a victim of falling sales-tax revenues and higher costs.

Subsidies were resumed this week, at least temporarily, when state officials advanced more than $23 million in sales-tax revenue.

The $16.3 million disbursed by Hill this week headed off the threatened shutdown of at least one railroad, but some suburban bus lines said the money would not be enough to keep them running.

Four suburban bus lines have shut down, and a fifth is contemplating a shutdown Friday.

Under Hill's proposal to the RTA board, the C&NW would lose 102 trains used by about one-fifth of its riders.

The proposal also would cut 113 trains from the Illinois Central Gulf, which has 30,287 daily riders and has asked for an 80-percent fare hike. The Milwaukee Road, which is seeking a 75-percent jump in fares affecting 19,875 daily riders, would lose 34 trains.

Officials Rule Out Drug Use

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Navy is denying that drug use contributed to last month's crash of a radar-jamming plane on the deck of the aircraft carrier Nimitz despite autopsies showing "traces of marijuana" in some of the crewmen killed.

"I can categorically state that drug use or abuse did not contribute to the tragic crash," Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr. said in a letter to Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y.

Rep. G. William Whitehurst, R-Va., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said Tuesday that Navy officials had told him that pathologists detected the marijuana traces in the bodies of six of the 10 flight-deck crewmen who were killed.

Three dead Marine officers in the EA6B radar-jamming jet that crashed had no drugs in their systems, Whitehurst said. The body of a fourth Marine in the jet was lost at sea.

Lehman did not deny that some of the dead sailors may have taken drugs before the fiery crash during a night landing May 26. Other Navy officials said he felt confident making that statement because an investigation indicates the crash was caused by pilot error rather than anything done on deck.

"There was no trace whatsoever of any kind of drug in the recovered remains of the air crew," according to a Navy statement.

Navy sources acknowledged the traces of marijuana found in the sailors' bodies. "But we believe that nobody was under the influence of drugs on the flight deck," said one source who asked to remain anonymous.

Traces of marijuana can remain in a person's bloodstream for up to 30 days after it is ingested and the Nimitz had left Norfolk, Va., just 11 days before the crash, Navy officials said.

Addabbo, chairman of a House subcommittee on defense spending, said he intends to investigate whether use of drugs contributed to the accident at a hearing Thursday.

He said Pentagon studies show that 60 percent of the Navy and Marine Corps junior- and middle-rank enlisted personnel have used drugs other than alcohol in the past year.

"If any of the key air operations personnel on board the Nimitz were under the influence of drugs at the time the Marine EA-6B made its final approach, it would be tantamount to a death sentence for those in the aircraft as well as those on the flight deck," Addabbo said in a letter to Lehman.

Lehman's letter called Addabbo's raising of the issue a disservice to the dead and injured.

"There are 14 who can no longer defend themselves against such accusations," Lehman wrote. "To raise this question now is to cause anguish and pain to a number of families who have already paid a very great price."

The Navy secretary said he has personal knowledge that flight-deck crews are well supervised. Any individual who does not appear able to perform his duties is immediately removed from the flight deck, he said.

In addition to the 14 dead, 48 Nimitz crewmen were injured in the crash, which occurred during training exercises about 50 miles off Jacksonville, Fla.

INVESTIGATION
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) - Naval Investigative Service agents are looking into the shooting death of Marine Pfc. Francisco Andrade, 22, of Hialeah, Fla.

A base spokesman said Lance Cpl. William Castillo of Jamaica, N.Y. is being held in the brig under a confinement order listing suspicion of murder as the reason for his being held.

Andrade was shot once in the chest and heart with a .45-caliber pistol Saturday evening. He died that night at the Naval Regional Medical Center at Camp Lejeune.

Atlanta Order May Be Hard To Enforce

ATLANTA (AP) — The lawyer for a man seeking a court order to stop police from leaking information that links him to the slayings of 28 young blacks admits such an order would be difficult to enforce.

But the attorney, former Atlanta Solicitor Mary Welcome, said the order would help slow the leaks by making police officials responsible for details that reach the news media about her client.

Ms. Welcome's comments came Tuesday during a break in a closed hearing on the man's request for a court order against law enforcement officials. U.S. District Judge Orinda Evans took the request under advisement.

Meanwhile, a survey released in New York Tuesday indicated that black Americans believe overwhelmingly that national and black community leaders and police are not doing enough to solve the killings.

Seventy-three percent of the 1,284 blacks questioned in April by Data Black Public Opinion Polls said there was too little attention from law enforcement authorities, and 58 percent felt black leaders were not doing enough. Sixty-nine percent said there was too little attention from national leaders in general, regardless of color.

Seventy-three percent of those responding to the telephone poll also said more attention would have been paid had the victims been white.

Ms. Welcome's client, a black, 23-year-old free-lance cameraman, has been under police scrutiny since he was stopped briefly May 22 by officers staking out the Chattahoochee River, where the bodies of six of the 28 victims have been found.

Two days later, the body of the 28th victim, 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater, was found in the river.

The man was questioned for 12 hours at FBI headquarters June 3 and 4 before being released. He has not been arrested or charged in any of the slayings.

News organizations objected to the closed hearing Tuesday, asking the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans to order it opened. But the appeals court refused to grant the request.

Judge Evans, however, indicated after the hearing that transcripts of the proceedings would be made available to the public and press.

The man's original suit asked for court orders to prevent both the police and press from linking him to the slayings. But Judge Evans on Monday ordered the complaint divided.

She ruled that the hearing on the complaint against law enforcement agents would be closed, while the hearing on the complaint against the news media would be opened. That hearing will be held Thursday.

Ms. Welcome asked in an amendment to the original suit that police be stopped from making statements ground; events surrounding his questioning; investigative procedures, including the results of lie detector tests; any statements the man made, and any evidence concerning him.

Youth Free In Drug Case

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court jury on Tuesday issued the first acquittal of a defendant tried in a massive drug operation at Fayetteville and Cumberland County high schools.

After deliberating about two hours, the jury found Dennis E. Brewington of Hope Mills innocent of one count of possession with intent to sell marijuana and one count of selling marijuana. Conviction on the charges would have carried a five-year prison term and possible fines.

Brewington, a South View High School student, was the second student to ask for a jury trial. Last week, a case ended in a mistrial when the jury could not reach a verdict.

Previously 125 of the 152 students arrested in the February drug raid pleaded guilty to reduced charges, each of them receiving active jail sentences and/or probation.

Steven A. Burton, then a Fayetteville police officer, had charged Burton with selling him a marijuana cigarette.

He said Brewington asked several students if they wanted to buy a "joint" (marijuana cigarette). Burton said when one of the students did not have the money to purchase the grass, he (Burton) gave Brewington $1 for it and promised to pay 25 cents more the next day.

Brewington and two defense witnesses denied the charge in testimony Monday. They said Burton gave Brewington the marijuana cigarette to sell for him and that, when Brewington returned it, Burton gave him a dollar.

Brewington's attorney, Zerry Beaver, said following the verdict, "It was a pretty open and shut case. It was obvious that the jury felt the officer was lying."

Cancer Researcher Defends New Study

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese cancer researcher who concluded that wives of smokers were more likely to contract lung disease than wives of nonsmokers rejected today a challenge by the Tobacco Institute that a mathematical error renders his conclusions invalid.

In Dr. Takeshi Hirayama's 14-year study — involving about 143,000 women and 122,000 men — women whose husbands smoked more than a pack of cigarettes a day were found to have a lung cancer risk 2.08 times greater than wives of nonsmokers.

Hirayama, chief epidemiologist of the National Cancer Center Research Institute in Tokyo, said in a telephone interview that he used a standardized computer program developed at the government-run National Cancer Institute in Washington. He said his calculations were checked and rechecked by a medical journal before being published last January.

"Before it was published it was screened by the British Medical Journal. Unless the article is cleared it can never be published. That is the usual procedure for any manuscript," said Hirayama, a former research associate at the Sloan-Kettering Institute in New York.

The Tobacco Institute, lobbying arm of the American tobacco industry, said Nathan Mantel, the biostatistician from George Washington University who developed the program used by Hirayama, has confirmed an error was made at a critical point in the calculations.

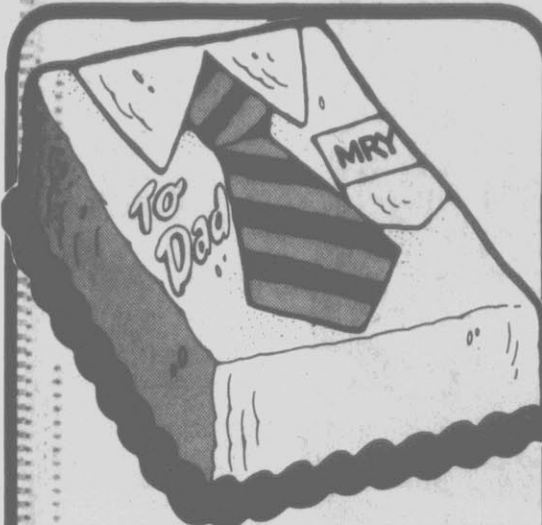

Hirayama rejected the claim.

"Either his original formula is wrong or he made a mistake. There is no other possibility. When I was at the National Cancer Institute I studied the program," he said.

Hirayama said the Tobacco Institute or Mantel should publish their results in a scientific journal so their evidence can be examined.

Researchers have been "neglecting the importance and serious health consequences of passive smoking," Hirayama said. He said all smoking studies that divide subjects into just two groups — smokers and nonsmokers — should now be recalculated because they did not distinguish passive smokers from nonsmokers.

"They are underestimating the risks of direct smoking" by including "passive" smokers in the non-smoking population of research studies, he contended.

Two Buildings Razed By Fire

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — An early morning fire that gutted two buildings in Wilmington's historic downtown section kept firefighters occupied for more than three hours, fire officials said.

The blaze broke out in the Barrister Restaurant on Princess Street at midnight, officials said, and spread to an unoccupied three-story building next door.

Police blockaded several downtown streets as six fire companies responded to the three-alarm fire. Officials said off-duty firemen were also called in to fight the flames.

The fire was under control by 3 a.m. and no injuries were reported.

Witnesses at the scene said a pillar of smoke and flame could be seen across the city at the height of the fire.

Gypsies Enter Guilty Pleas

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Guilty pleas entered Tuesday by seven Gypsies charged with transporting stolen property were negotiated by a New Jersey attorney, who said she was hired by a friend of the defendants to replace their present attorneys.

Attorney Linda George told federal District Court Judge Richard Erwin, on the day after jury selection in the case, that she wanted to arrange a negotiated plea.

Ms. George, who speaks Polish, had immediate rapport with the defendants, according to several interpreters involved in the case.

Attorneys for both sides reached a plea bargain agreement for three women and four men arrested April 11 in Greensboro after a high-speed chase with police. An eighth defendant, Danuta Lechowska, 40, has been sent to a federal facility in Lexington, Ky. for psychiatric evaluation after reportedly attempting suicide several times. A trial date for her has not been set.

The Gypsies had been detained for 45 minutes and were being escorted in two cars to police headquarters when one car broke away, police said. Officials said silver goods valued at $250,000 were thrown from the fleeing vehicle. The government contends that the items were stolen from Atlanta, Ga. and Jackson, Miss.

Under terms of the arrangement, the government agreed to recommend a sentence of not more than five years for the three women on one count of transporting stolen silver, furs and jewelry across state lines. Two other counts of the same charge will be consolidated for sentencing with a 10-year sentence and five years probation.

Barbara Langer, 30; Maria Szczawinska, 28; and Maria Kochanowska, 40, also agreed to pay restitution to defray the government's expenses.

The charges against the men will be consolidated with a 10-year sentence and restitution as in the women's cases. The difference with the men's sentences is that they will serve a three-year probation, provided they serve the entire term.

The four Gypsy men signing the agreement were Edward Dabrowski, 24; Peter Langer, 30; Kazimierz Malinowski, 22; and Tadeusz Wisniewski, 28.

The seven Gypsies also promised to return to Poland after serving their sentences. The defendants, prior to the agreement, faced a maximum 30-year sentence and $30,000 fine.

Paraphernalia Law May Just Be The First Step

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

The speeches and lobbying have ended, the votes have been cast and North Carolina's first attempt to regulate possession and distribution of drug paraphernalia now is law. But supporters and opponents of the new law agree the battle is far from over.

The burden of the legislation now shifts to law enforcement agencies, and observers foresee court challenges that may ultimately attack the constitutionality of the law.

Vic Larsen, co-owner of The Joint Shoppe in Raleigh and Durham, says he's willing to be arrested to get the issue before the courts, which he thinks will declare the law unconstitutional. Others, including the bill's legislative sponsors, believe it will withstand court scrutiny.

"We have no intention of obeying this ridiculous law, and if getting busted and going to court is what it takes to get it off the books that's what we'll do," said Larsen, whose stores specialize in drug-related equipment and literature.

Larsen, a member of a group called the Carolina Accessory Trade Association that lobbied against the bill, said he expected other members to follow his example by ignoring the law. But he said the public appeared to be expecting them to knuckle down under the new law.

"I've had 10,000 people call me since this thing passed to ask when we're going out of business," he added. "It says something about American society when everybody automatically thinks you'll roll over and play dead just because the legislature gives an order."

State Sen. Henson P. Barnes, D-Wayne, who studied legal ramifications of the bill while debate was underway, admitted it could encounter problems in court but said it appeared sound.

"Let's put it this way," said Barnes, an attorney. "I don't know that it's completely safe but at least it isn't patently unconstitutional."

One section of the law prohibits advertising items if it is known the items will be used as drug paraphernalia. Barnes said that section "comes close" to being a First Amendment violation.

Modeled after drafts made by the federal Drug Enforcement Association, the new law outlaws possession with intent to sell of any product that can be used for illegal drugs, such as pipes, kits for growing plants that are controlled substances, testing equipment, hypodermic needles, and cocaine spoons.

Also on the list are such routine items as scales, bowls and blenders.

The law's broad wording has sparked fierce debate between supporters and opponents of the measure. Those favoring the law say it will affect only those dealers knowingly selling drug paraphernalia. But opponents fear it will lead to widespread arrests and the harassment of innocent businessmen.

Sen. Joe B. Raynor, D-Cumberland, who sponsored the bill, said those who sell the items for legitimate purposes have nothing to fear since intent is crucial in enforcing the law.

"I think this will put head shops out of business. That's what it's intended to do and what it should do. I don't think people in other types of stores have much to worry about unless it's clear they're selling the stuff to use as drug paraphernalia," he said.

"Enforcement is really going to be a matter of common sense," he added. "I don't think officers are going to run around arresting every kid with a clip or baggie, because they know they're going to have to prove intent."

But merchants throughout the state are less assured than Raynor, and many say they're getting rid of items they consider legitimate in fear of being arrested.

Jim Newman, manager of the Wolfpack Buy-Quick of Raleigh, said he no longer sells "bongs," a special pipe used for smoking marijuana, and said he will no longer sell rolling papers after Oct. 1, when the new law takes effect.

"I can't say for sure the papers were used as drug paraphernalia but I'm not taking chances," he said.

Newman and Sam Phillips, manager of the Original Party Shop in Charlotte, agreed that business would not suffer from the loss of paraphernalia sales. Both said they didn't depend on the sale of those items to keep afloat.

But John Little, manager of Party Junction of Charlotte, said the law was "completely berserk. Anything that's made out of a material that isn't illegal shouldn't be illegal," he added.

Proprietors of smoking shops expressed reservations about the law.

Marie Mitchell of Michel's Tobacco Shop of Charlotte said she feared it could involve pipe sales, and David Mason of The Tinder Box of Raleigh said his worry was cigarette papers.

"I'm not concerned about pipes, because anyone who tries to use a briar pipe for marijuana will ruin it within two weeks," Mason said. "We don't sell the stone and metal pipes used for marijuana."

He said he planned to continue selling papers until convinced that he faced arrest. "We have lots of regular customers who use them for tobacco — including some law officers," he said. "They say they're just as in the dark as I am about how the law affects papers."

But Mason admitted it probably was no coincidence that sales of the papers have skyrocketed since the law passed.

"We've had kids out here buying the things by the case," he said. "They're stocking up while they still can."

Power Agreement Is Sought

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A purchase agreement on generating at nine Carolina Power & Light Co. plants is in the offing between CP&L and North Carolina Municipal Power Agency No. 3 — a move that will affect 36 North Carolina communities, a spokesman for the power agency said Tuesday.

An announcement was expected later today at a news conference.

"We're very near agreement, but they're still negotiating matters in Washington. The press conference was scheduled on the assumptions that the two negotiating sides will have reached agreement," Aulis said.

Under the proposal, the power agency would acquire ownership in generating capacity and CP&L would get capital for construction. Because the power agencies are tax-exempt, they can borrow money at a lower rate than CP&L, according to a spokesman for the Utilities Commission.

Aulis manages member services for Electricities of North Carolina, which provides management services for the power agency. He said CP&L and the power agency have been negotiating for two years over the acquisition.

Aulis said the proposed agreement is beneficial to both sides.

Hunt Avoids Reference To Attack By Israelis

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt avoided speaking of a recent Israeli bombing strike against a nuclear reactor in Iraq when he spoke to Jews gathered to raise money for Israel on Tuesday.

But he told reporters afterwards that critics of the attack "should put themselves in the shoes of the Israelis."

Americans should remember the 1962 Cuban missile crisis, he said, in which the United States threatened war if the Soviet Union didn't remove missiles from Cuba.

Israeli officials have said their attack was prompted because beneath the plant was facility to manufacture nuclear weapons.

In his speech at the fund-raising dinner sponsored by the State of Israel Bonds development corporation, Hunt said he was thankful for the Jewish community.

"I thank you for your traditions, your religion, your energy," he said. "May our support and faith in Israel grow stronger every single day."

Hunt, a Greensboro-born Presbyterian who visited Israel in 1978, called North Carolina's Jewish community "absolutely crucial and vital and essential."

His World Is One Of Goblins, Ghouls And A Free Imagination

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The battle was fierce. Hitler's army was on the attack. A bomb exploded, and that's when little Maurice ducked under his pillow.

But to no avail. The invisible man was there, hunkering around the bed being, well, invisible.

Welcome to the world of Maurice Sendak — a world of goblins and ghouls where imagination rides shotgun for the bumpy ride of childhood.

As an artist, writer, illustrator, set designer and costumer, Sendak believes in the shared experience of delight and fright — delight in using the imagination to invent battles in the bedclothes, fright because it can get downright terrifying.

Some readers of his award-winning books might not agree that scaly beasts with talons and fangs make for wholesome reading for tender young things. Sendak shrugs.

"Horror was an intensely important ingredient to the manufacture of me," he said. "Any child living has to be subject to some hideous thing. You can't protect the child. The child sees the fallen bodies of assassinated leaders on television.

"I'm a responsible man and I'm irritated when they tell me my books are frightening to children," he said. "If they are, then take the book away from the child. Usually, you don't even have to do that because kids aren't polite critics — they'll throw the book against the wall if they don't like it or if it scares them."

Sendak has won the Hans Christian Andersen and Caldecott awards for his children's books, but says his work suffers from being in "the ghetto of kiddie bookland."

"Even though I love my audience, I don't like the category," he said. "I hate pigeonholing, because when I do something else, like operas, people look at me and say, 'but you write children's books.'"

Indeed, Sendak's work would require a whole maze of pigeonholes: he has illustrated the Grimm brothers' fairy tales, written a trilogy of children's tales, staged the Broadway production of "Really Rosie," which had an all-kids cast, and created sets and costumes for the Houston Opera production of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and the New York City Opera production of "The Cunning Little Vixen."

Now the Brooklyn-born artist is working on an opera by Prokofiev and has been asked to do "The Nutcracker" for the Seattle Ballet.

His latest work, the final part of a trilogy, is another illustrated children's book, "Outside Over There." It is the story of Ida, a youngster who rescues her baby sister from goblins. The first two books were "In the Night Kitchen" and "Where the Wild Things Are."

"I'm not a sociologist and I'm not a child psychologist — that's not the artist's role. But since I take my work seriously, unwittingly I'm taking up problems or solemn moments in my life."

And what a life it's been. Full of kid fright. "King Kong" scared him. So did Charlie Chaplin in "The Great Dictator" with his zombie-like walk as Adolf Hitler.

"I had heard enough about Hitler to know it was no joke,"

Teen's Death Still Mystery

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Efforts to link a teen-ager's slaying to the string of so-called "trailside killings" may be difficult because only part of her skeleton has been found, investigators say.

Teams from the Santa Cruz County sheriff's office ended their search Tuesday of the wooded hillside where the remains of 17-year-old Anna Kelley Menjivar were discovered Sunday by two hikers. The area is near Castle Rock State Park, 40 miles south of San Francisco.

Sheriff's spokesman Bruce Simpson said searchers found little beyond some clothing and half a skeleton. The rest of the remains was presumed to have been scattered by animals.

An autopsy is planned, Simpson said.

"Finding nothing more than this, can't, I think, establish the cause of death," said Ray Belgard, chief investigator for the Santa Cruz County district attorney's office.

With no known cause of death, investigators would "probably not be in the position of charging someone" in the killing, Belgard said.

Miss Menjivar, a Daly City high school student, disappeared last Dec. 28, and officials at first suspected she was a runaway.

But the recent arrest of San Francisco printer and convicted sex-offender David Carpenter in connection with other park killings in Santa Cruz County made authorities suspect foul play.

Miss Menjivar had been friendly to Carpenter, who patronized the bank where she worked, according to her family. She had visited the gift warehouse where he once worked, and he had given her trinkets to use as Christmas gifts, her family said.

Carpenter has been charged with murder in two Santa Cruz County deaths, and he is under investigation in several other killings along hiking trails in Marin County north of San Francisco, according to officials there.

Belgard said investigators are "trying to look at all angles" but have not linked her disappearance to Carpenter.

Father Says Child Was Taken Illegally

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Debra Parsons, a former high school cheerleader with long strawberry-blond hair, was working part time in a sandwich shop here when she was allegedly abducted.

One of the purported abductors was her father. Now the 26-year-old mother of two young boys, Debra Parsons Rausch is suing her parents and others for $1 million over the 1977 incident which her father says was a gesture of love.

As his daughter, the plaintiff, sat across the courtroom Tuesday, Richard Parsons, the defendant, described how the family had decided to whisk the young woman away four years ago because they feared she "would become a robot" without religious deprogramming.

"They had no free thinking of their own," Parsons, a Hellertown, Pa., manufacturing engineer, said of followers of The Way Ministry, a fundamentalist religious group based in New Knoxville, Ohio.

"They were like robots. They were told what to do and when to do it and to do it without question," he testified in U.S. District Court.

Parsons, questioned by American Civil Liberties Union attorney Carol Mayes, said the family was so worried they took out a second mortgage on their home and sought out deprogrammers.

They obtained a state court order declaring their daughter mentally incompetent, he testified.

They didn't notify Debra of the guardianship hearing because the family feared she "would be moved to some obscure location" if the sect got word of their intent, Parsons said.

Accompanied by a deputy sheriff and two police officers, they went to the sandwich shop where Debra worked part time, he said.

Although his daughter offered no resistance, Parsons said the officers had to prevent several young men in the shop from barring their way.

Sendak said.

But nothing terrified little Maurice as much as Claude Rains as "The Invisible Man."

"It was the most terrifying experience in my life," he said. "That's when my insomnia began. After all, who can see the invisible man? How do you know if he's in the bedroom at night? I still have insomnia."

Sitting in his publisher's Manhattan office, dwarfed by the ceiling-high bookcase behind him, Sendak cringed as he discussed facing another frightening experience: touring the country to promote his book.

"I had a good time as a child. I enjoyed life. I hated being in my 20s, loathed my 30s, liked 40s and love my 50s," muted

Sendak, now 52. "I think I was made to be in my 50s. I didn't see the 20s and 30s as a challenge. It was a migraine headache."

Sendak was a sickly child who spent much time in bed. His imagination, like those of his characters, became an important medicine in daily survival.

"My bed became the soldiers' battlefield. Blankets were tents and pillows were huge caves. It was the way you got through the day."

There was no television, and now Sendak opposes illustrating books for children past a certain age because "you want to exercise your brain and see these things as you read. We're our own television sets."

He also has a good memory bank, as he drills to the past and explodes with childhood memories, such as being chased through the halls by the imaginary witch of his apartment building, or seeing his close friend, Lloyd, killed by a car after he had chased a ball into the street. It was Sendak's first encounter with death.

But he said he didn't become friends with death until about 14 years ago when he suffered a serious heart attack.

"I'm not afraid of it," he said. "The coronary became a positive gain for me as an artist."

Sendak also survived the goblins and ghouls and the invisible man. Sendak laughed: "I'm 52 and they haven't hauled me away yet." It was a rare laugh.

Watch Stars By Auto Controls

WASHINGTON (AP)—An astronomer in Michigan taps keys on his computer and a telescope in Arizona zeros in on a galaxy far, far away. Remote-control astronomy has arrived, and scientists say it could save time and money in watching the stars.

In the most extensive demonstration of its kind, scientists this month showed that astronomers thousands of miles from a telescope can use it to see billions of miles into space.

"Everything went much better than we thought it would," Dr. Robert Kirshner said Tuesday. "It was basically much the same as being on (the telescope) site except that it was much more convenient."

During five nights of observing, June 4-9, Kirshner sat in his office at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor and ran a giant 84-inch telescope at the Kitt Peak National Observatory near Tucson, Ariz.

The astronomer had a television monitor to see that the telescope was seeing. He also had an open telephone line with the scope operator and a computer terminal through which he could monitor incoming data and send movement instructions to the telescope.

Astronomers are interested in both the money and time-saving potential of remote observing, and they see the demonstration as opening a new dimension in astronomy.

The advantages of remote observing include not having to travel to the scope, which saves time and expenses, and the possibility of simultaneous observations by researchers in scattered locations.

Astronomers also don't have to spend so much time away from their families and teaching responsibilities, and observatories don't have to worry as much about room and board for visiting scientists.

"The cost of transportation keeps going up and the cost of communications is going down," Kirshner said. Cost and the quality of the data gathered by remote control will determine the future of the concept, he added.

Proctor & Gamble Drops More Than 50 TV Shows

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The nation's largest television advertiser has withdrawn sponsorship from more than 50 TV shows, saying a "large, serious and increasingly vocal segment of our population" is objecting to sex and violence.

"For sound commercial reasons, we are not going to let our advertising messages appear in an environment which we think many of our potential customers will find distasteful," said O.B. Butler, chairman of the board of Proctor & Gamble Co.

In a Monday night speech to the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, Butler did not list the programs from which Proctor & Gamble is withdrawing.

Proctor & Gamble products include Ivory soap, Tide and Cheer detergents, Sure and Secret deodorants, Folgers coffee, Duncan Hines cake mixes, Charmin' toilet paper and many more. Last year, it had gross sales of more than $10 billion.

Butler said the company was not reacting to threats of consumer boycotts. He said sponsors "must be responsible for the environment in which our commercials appear" without turning that responsibility over "to any group, no matter how highly motivated and how well-intentioned they are, by permitting our program choices to be dictated by threats of boycott."

But he added, "we have simultaneously made an intense effort to listen very carefully to what the vocal critics, as well as the general public, have to say about the kind of television programs we sponsor."

A number of conservative religious groups, including the Moral Majority Inc., have urged consumers to boycott the products of companies advertising on shows they deem immoral.

Cal Thomas, a Moral Majority vice president, applauded Butler's speech as "an extremely responsible statement."

The Moral Majority is a national organization founded by the Rev. Jerry Falwell of Lynchburg, Va., advocating a back-to-the-Bible morality in America.

It has joined a campaign by the Rev. Donald Wildmon's National Federation for Decency to urge boycotts of sponsors whose programs are judged offensive. The Coalition for Better Television has threatened a product boycott to begin in July if the warning to clean up "dirty, profanity, vulgarity and sex" on the screen went unheeded. Wildmon says the coalition claims about 300 groups nationwide.

Butler said Proctor & Gamble has "withdrawn sponsorship from over 50 programs, including movies, for reasons of taste."

He said some sex or violence could be tolerated if it were considered integral to a program. Violence and sex in some films, such as "Roots" or "Holocaust," should not be viewed in the same light as "purely gratuitous 'jiggle' and unnecessarily bloodthirsty violence," he said.

"There is a large, serious and increasingly vocal segment of our population which believes that much of what you are teaching is destructive, that it tears at the character which enabled this country to become what it has become," Butler said.

Last month, some of the television industry's top decision-makers held a three-day workshop in Ojai, Calif., to discuss special-interest groups such as the Moral Majority.

"Roots" producer Stan Margulies told the Ojai workshop that TV is too sensitive to criticism from such groups.

"Television is overreacting to pressure groups now because it has had a free ride for such a long time," he said. "Now, many groups are discovering the way to get a free ride is to attack television. We are not persuaded that the Moral Majority is a majority."

James E. Duffy, president of the ABC television network, last month warned ABC affiliates against yielding to pressure groups, which he described as "a band of moral zealots busy inventing" a national problem.

South African Tour Group Drops Show

BALTIMORE (AP)—Members of a South African theater troupe are refusing to go on with the show tonight after local black leaders objected to their scheduled appearance because of South Africa's human rights policy.

The director of the Baltimore International Theatre Festival on Tuesday tried to persuade the Baxter Theatre Company to perform, saying that while apartheid is "terrible," the black community's protest was misdirected.

Hope Quackenbush said she feared the actors' careers would be jeopardized by boycotting the event.

The troupe announced that it would not perform the production of Samuel Beckett's "Waiting For Godot," which stars two black actors, because of protests against South Africa's human rights policy. The show was scheduled to open its eight-performance run at 2 p.m. EDT at the 525-seat Center Stage theater.

"We didn't invite South Africa, we didn't invite England, we didn't invite Israel, we didn't invite Ireland. We invited performers," Mrs. Quackenbush said of the protests. "We are not political people, we brought the best we could bring."

Mrs. Quackenbush said the integrated South African theater group was asked to perform because of its "outstanding theatrical ability."

After meeting with the actors late Tuesday, she said the main question was whether the troupe could perform in the "phony" political climate that had been created. There was no indication that the actors would change their minds.

Local black leaders complained that the group does not represent the political realities of South Africa.

"We're very proud that there was a demonstration of unity between the people of South Africa and the black people of this city," Anthony Robinson, one of the protesters, said after learning of the actors' decision not to perform.

The Baltimore City Council joined the controversy by voting to condemn apartheid, South Africa's policy of racial segregation and exploitation, and urging the United States to sever ties with South Africa.

Campus DJ Pines For The 20's

NEW YORK (AP)—Given a choice, Rich Conaty would have been born in 1903.

"I'd have been too young for World War I, too old for World War II, and I'd be dying about now," he says. "And I'd have seen all the neat stuff."

Conaty pines for the 1920s — "when 'Rhapsody in Blue' was No. 1 with a bullet" — and dwells there for two hours every Sunday night on "The Big Broadcast" on Fordham University's radio station, WFUV.

Between the opening theme, Fats Waller's "You Meet the Nicest People in Your Dreams," and Bing Crosby's closer, "Great Day," Conaty serves up Paul Whiteman, Russ Columbo, Louis Armstrong, the Mills Brothers, the Boswell Sisters, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Benny Goodman and Bix Beiderbecke. He rarely strays past 1935.

Although he has called it "music for the old at heart," the 26-year-old Conaty is not after "the Polident crowd."

"I don't like making a point of the music being old," he says. "This is young people's music."

Conaty estimates he has 5,000 tunes in his personal collection, mostly on long-play albums instead of the bulky old 78 rpm discs. Any beginning collector, he says, will find lots of records available.

For serious time travel, however, he keeps an old Victrola at home. He sometimes cues up a Whiteman recording made before the invention of electronic microphones, opens the doors of the cabinet and peers into a fantasy.

"I can see guys in shirtsleeves, sweating in some dingy studio and playing into the megaphones," he says.

He has been doing the show since 1972, continuing long beyond his college days because no one with similarly antique ears has come along. It's been an education for him and his listeners, he says.

"When the audience stopped asking for the Andrews Sisters and asked for the Boswell Sisters, I knew I had a breakthrough," he says.

The Mills Brothers' "Tiger Rag" hooked him on the era. "I played it to death when I first went on," he says. Lately he has been playing more jazz, Jelly Roll Morton being his latest rediscovery.

The show takes its name from the 1932 film starring Crosby, the Boswell and Mills siblings, Cab Calloway and Kate Smith. Crosby also stars on the radio version.

"You listen to the other people who recorded then, they were just stiff," Conaty says of "the Groaner's" enduring popularity.

Judging from requests, Crosby's nearest rival is Columbo, whose career lasted only from 1930 until his death in 1934. The original four Mills Brothers are the most requested vocal group, and Whiteman's is the most popular band.

Conaty also exults in playing turkeys like "Mr. Radio Man," a maudlin Al Jolson tune about a little boy pleading with a radio to send his mommy back, or something called "Twenty Swedes Ran Through the Weeds (Chasing One Norwegian)" — a salute by the California Ramblers to Knute Rockne's 1930 football team at Notre Dame.

If he had the money, and the power to raise the dead, Conaty would like to hire a ballroom — "a sleazy, rundown ballroom" on 43rd Street in Manhattan is what he has in mind — and anchor the bill with Whiteman's early 1928 band, featuring the Dorsey brothers, the Rhythm Boys and Belderbecke on cornet.

Eddie Long and Joe Venuti would open the show.

Burlington Mills Wins $21 Million Settlement

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Burlington Industries has been awarded about $21 million in settlement of a lengthy dispute with Milliken and Co. and several related companies over textile patents.

The case, involving suits and countersuits, has been in the courts since the late 1960s. The judgment was approved by a federal judge in South Carolina.

A spokesman for Burlington said the company also will be entitled to recover reasonable costs and lawyers' fees involved in the anti-trust portions of the lawsuits.

Milliken filed a group of lawsuits in the late 1960s against Burlington and other manufacturers of textured yarn, accusing them of infringing on 22 patents relating to textured-yarn equipment and processes.

Burlington and the other yarn producers then filed anti-trust claims against Milliken and its related companies. After the lawsuits were consolidated into a single case, U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree in North Carolina heard the matter in 1976 and 1977.

The courts ruled that Milliken and the other defendants conspired with licensors of competing technology to restrain trade in violation of federal anti-trust laws.

The U.S. Supreme Court refused in early 1980 to review the case, which was then returned to Dupree for a trial to determine what anti-trust damages should be paid to Burlington and other manufacturers of textured yarn.

The decision reported Tuesday resulted from the long-running case. Milliken had reached a settlement in March with another company, Textil, but neither company announced terms of the agreement.

Burlington officials said they may appeal some of the issues decided against the company.

Tobacco Charlotte Firemen Leases Doubled

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A study by a North Carolina State University extension economist shows lease rates for flue-cured tobacco in North Carolina have more than doubled in the last 15 years, mostly due to inflation.

Charles R. Pugh studied data on lease rates from 1966 to 1981 and noted that they have risen from 17 cents per pound in 1966 to more than 40 cents per pound in 1981. And he said the percentage of the total flue-cured crop produced under lease and transfer has risen steadily.

"Lease rates have indeed become a highly visible cost component in flue-cured tobacco farming," Pugh said. "Many growers who lease in quota to maintain their farming operations at economically sound size have complained a great deal about what they believe to be unjustifiably high lease rates," Pugh said.

He said a number of circumstances resulted in an unusual jump in lease rates for the 1979 crop.

Bumper production in 1978 left a lower effective quota available for leasing in 1979, he said, and growers bid aggressively for quota in 1979, based on the 1978 prices.

Adding to the pressure on rents, he said, was the abolishment of authority for excess pools which eliminated the practice of growers borrowing from their future quotas.

Charlotte Firemen Reject Strike Call

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Lobbying wasn't effective, a sick-out didn't convince the city council and a strike vote went the other way. So Charlotte firefighters decided Tuesday night to turn to political action.

The central issue of equal pay for police officers and firefighters is something the firefighters have been battling unsuccessfully to achieve for years. As a last resort to pressure the city into a bigger pay raise, the firefighters union called for a strike vote on Monday.

But the proposed strike failed to come off, a fact which pleased city officials.

"I'm elated," Mayor Eddie Knox said after the outcome was announced Tuesday night. "I'm glad they didn't strike. It would have created new problems for them and for the city."

The strike vote failed to attain the required 75 percent majority. While exact figures were not released, more than 300 firefighters were believed to have participated.

The vote, announced by union president Capt. James McLaughlin, was 55 percent in favor of striking, 45 percent against. The department has about 575 firefighters, with 469 union members.

Fire Capt. Bob Middleton said he told firefighters in the meeting, "Political activity is the only thing we got left for ourselves. We've got to come up with some candidates of our own," he said, "and we've already started that process."

In a statement released after the meeting, the union called its grievance valid.

"To downgrade the fire fighter in pay and professional relativity in order to save on the (city) budget and for vindictiveness because of 'union activities' in a supposedly 'non-union' territory cannot be condoned," the statement said.

"We're gonna have to take a different approach," McLaughlin said after the meeting.

A city statement released Tuesday night by spokesman Bill Guerrant said "formal discussions will be initiated between fire fighters and city staff members to hear fire fighters' complaints about their jobs."

City Manager Wendell White said if the election had gone the other way, everyone would have lost.

"There would have been hard feelings within the department and certainly I would have had to take actions appropriate to meet

Town Approves ABC Referendum

LAUREL PARK, N.C. (AP) — Residents of this Henderson County town have overwhelmingly approved the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Preinct registrar Dorothy Kilpatrick said more than half of the town's approximately 600 voters participated in a referendum on four alcoholic-beverage issues Tuesday.

They voted 340-55 in favor of ABC stores, 351-44 for sale of mixed drinks, 346-49 for wine sales and 342-52 for beer sales.

On Nov. 15, 1777, the Continental Congress of the 13 colonies approved the articles of confederation.

Nashville Man Held In Death

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 20-year-old Nashville man has been charged with murder in the shooting death of an Onslow County convenience-store clerk.

Walter Lee Williams was charged Tuesday in the death of Gordon Stuart Farley II, 23. Authorities said Farley was shot in the back in a convenience store on U.S. 17 south of Jacksonville near the entrance to the New River Marine Air Station.

Onslow County Sheriff Billy Woodward said Farley was shot as he stood at the store's cash register. He said the shot was fired from a car parked about 50 yards from the door.

Another clerk in the store told authorities that Farley was threatened by a customer and that Farley ejected customer from the store. The customer said Farley "would leave in an ambulance," Woodward said.

FISH EYES — Hot weather has caused problems with staying cool in Virginia but Lindsay Crump, 11, escaped Richmond's heat wave by splashing in the cool water of Richmond's Ginter Community Pool. Unfortunately, Lindsay had to surface from time to time to refill her lungs with more of the hot, muggy air. Like the rest of the South, Virginia has had temperatures running well into the 90s. Workers Mark Safety Record

FARMVILLE — Employees of Collins & Aikman's Farmville plant recently celebrated the achievement of one million work hours without a lost time accident by enjoying a catered barbeque dinner served at mealtime on all shifts. The company said that for the tenth time since its construction in 1963, the plant completed the one million work hours safety milestone. The plant, C&A reported, holds the National Safety Council Safety Record among knitting plants, compiling nearly four million work hours before the record was snapped. Robert W. McCullough, C&A executive vice president, awarded a corporate plaque to Bob Findley, plant manager. The plant's employees, it was noted, have received more than 20 awards from national, state, regional and corporate safety groups. Collins & Aikman is a producer of specialty textiles and wallcoverings, with sales of more than $600 million.

TAKE THAT ... Frances Piva, right, fends off a blow by tae kwon do instructor Jim Garrett during a recent self-defense class held in Wheaton, Ill. Garrett teaches paraplegics how use every means possible to repel muggers. (AP Laserphoto).

Wheelchair Users Learn Tactics Of Self Defense

CHICAGO (AP) — Each Thursday, Gail Schwartz's smile turns into an icy stare and her slight hands become weapons. Moving deftly, the tiny woman strikes, punches and pokes — preparing for any mugger who dares to get in the way of her wheelchair.

At 4-foot-10, Miss Schwartz is far from an imposing figure as she cruises down the street in a wheelchair or motorized cart. But her special training, she says, makes up for her size.

Miss Schwartz, 31, is one of several paraplegics enrolled in a self-defense course at the Marionjoy Rehabilitation Hospital in suburban Wheaton. Most of the students in the program are disabled.

In the past few weeks, Miss Schwartz has learned how to block a mugger's blow, poke him in the eyes or even run him over.

And don't think she would hesitate to do just that.

If attacked, she says, "I would put the cart in high gear and run it into his shins. I would give him a punch in the groin and then you've got it.

"Or you get him in the eyes and get him in the stomach and you've got it."

But Miss Schwartz — who has cerebral palsy — says confidence is just as important as physical ability.

And that, too, is one of the goals of the six-week program, says Jim Garrett, an instructor in tae kwon do, a Korean martial art form.

"It's a release of their own tensions and their feelings that are bottled up inside," says Garrett, a third-degree black belt. "It allows them to improve their breathing, their outlook and their attention span."

When disabled people learn to defend themselves, "it makes them lose their sense of helplessness," he adds. "They have a potential all over again."

Robert Kramer, a clinical psychologist at Marionjoy, agrees.

Paraplegics and the disabled can say, "My God, I can learn a skill again. I can learn to move my arms in a purposeful way," Kramer says. "It's a moot question whether what they learn is able to be used to defend themselves."

But Gordon Minster, a 22-year-old paraplegic who was paralyzed in an accident, says he thinks the course is practical.

"I can't see anybody mugging someone in a wheelchair, but it's good to know you can defend yourself," Minster says. "Unless an assailant is armed with a gun ... I feel perfectly safe."

The self-defense methods Garrett teaches vary with the coordination of the student. But he says some basic lessons are showing someone how to move, block attacks and how to use a wheelchair as a weapon.

Donald Nix, 37, a toy designer and former student, says the course "is like a coming-out for some people. ... You're there yelling, swinging your arms and having a good time."

But Nix, who is confined to a wheelchair, has serious doubts about how useful the training is out on the street.

U.S.-China Relations Show Steady Gain

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — For American business, a decade of rebuilding trade relations with China has been a little like reconciling a broken marriage.

At first it was euphoria; then came a letdown. Now, 10 years after the lifting of the U.S. trade embargo against China, the relationship has settled into a period of steady growth and modest expectations.

The value of trade between the two nations rose from virtually nothing in 1971 to $4.9 billion last year, when U.S. sales to China reached $3.7 billion — about 2 percent of total U.S. exports. Government officials say two-way trade could climb to $7 billion in 1981.

Despite recent gains, the road to more prosperous trade with China has been dotted with potholes.

Some U.S. businessmen, agog at the potential for profit in a foreign market of nearly 1 billion people, at first thought of China as an instant gold mine. Dwight Perkins, an economics professor and China specialist at Harvard University, calls that the "Billion-Customer Syndrome."

The excitement faded as it became clear that closer commercial ties to China depended less on capitalist ingenuity than a gradual acceptance by the Chinese of Western political and economic policies.

President Nixon lifted the trade embargo June 10, 1971. As recently as 1977, two-way U.S.-China trade was only $374 million.

But in 1978, China disclosed a 10-year plan aimed at propelling the world's most populous country into the front ranks of industrial nations. A key to the strategy was use of foreign trade to get the latest technology in agriculture, industry, science and defense.

And in January 1979, the United States normalized diplomatic relations with China, opening the trade door still wider. The governments further eased trade restrictions in place since the communist takeover in China in 1949 — including U.S. tariffs on Chinese imports.

It seemed as though the golden era of U.S.-China trade had arrived.

U.S. Steel Corp., for example, signed a multimillion-dollar agreement in 1979 to help the Chinese develop an iron ore facility. But it and other heavy-industry projects were postponed only months later when China realized its modernization plans were too ambitious. The reversal stunned dozens of U.S. companies.

Christopher H. Phillips, president of the National Council on U.S.-China Trade, a private group based in Washington, said "there were a lot of companies that were expecting things that simply were unrealistic."

His group now advises U.S. companies eyeing the China market to look elsewhere unless they are willing to spend at least two years developing a business relationship.

"I've told them you're not going to go into China and make a killing," Phillips said.

Coca-Cola Co., which began shipping the world's largest-selling soft drink to China in January 1979, has learned the lesson of patience and persistence, spokesman Frank Stansberry said.

Under its agreement with the Chinese government, Coca-Cola is allowed to sell soda only to tourists. Although he declined to provide figures, Stansberry indicated Coca-Cola is losing money on its China operations, which thus far are limited to a bottling plant.

Other U.S. companies have done better, and the Reagan administration has announced it will ask Congress to lift still more trade restrictions against China. The remaining curbs chiefly limit sales on high technology or military goods.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is expected to discuss possible sales of military equipment to China during a visit to Peking next week.

Such sales could be a boon to the U.S. aerospace industry. Boeing, the world's largest producer of commercial aircraft, has sold 13 jetliners to China since 1972 at a combined value of about $300 million. Lockheed Corp. and McDonnell Douglas Corp. have had less success.

Gordon Williams, a Boeing spokesman, said the company expects more deals with China, adding: "We're quite optimistic. But like any U.S. company doing business with China, our optimism has to be tempered a little bit by reality."

China faces problems that are unfamiliar there: rising prices and a growing budget deficit. Last year, its inflation rate was an estimated 10 percent — enormously high for such a controlled economy — and its budget deficit reached $8.1 billion, three times the anticipated figure. China's leaders reacted by cutting the construction, defense and administration budgets.

As a result, and also because of China's reluctance to borrow from foreign sources, American commercial banks have had little involvement there, and only three U.S. banks have offices in China.

"I don't think there is a bonanza for the banking business in China," said Frank Stankard, an executive vice president at Chase Manhattan Bank and head of its international department. Chase opens a China office this month.

There are some extremely promising areas for U.S. companies, including energy development.

Hopeful News in Medicine

A new contraceptive pill is being studied with extreme interest because it is the male who takes the pill instead of the female. Dr. Alejandro D. Ridley recently addressed the American Fertility Society Meeting in Atlanta and told them that a substance called Gosypol may be potentially advantageous as a contraceptive in some patients.

A nasal spray is being tried to induce ovulation in some women who do not have normal menstrual periods. Yet there is sufficient interest in this technique to warrant continued study as part of an all-over approach to a new method of contraception.

Dr. Ridley, working at the University of Pennsylvania, has extended the work originally done in China on this problem. Gosypol is a derivative of cottonseed and apparently has been used in China for a number of years.

Early animal experiments performed at the Rockefeller University in New York City indicate that Gosypol, used as a vaginal cream or gel, may be extremely valuable as a contraceptive. The drug acts in a very complicated manner. The possibility of any toxic effects are being studied to ensure perfect safety before the drug is OK'd by the Food and Drug Administration.

Antabuse is a drug which is used in carefully selected cases of chronic alcoholism. Those who are given antabuse are warned that if any alcohol — even the slightest amount — is imbibed, severe and dangerous reactions can ensue.

So dangerous, in fact, is this alcohol-antabuse reaction that many doctors are fearful about using antabuse.

Recently a Finnish scientist, Dr. Kai O. Lindros, of the University of Helsinki, has begun to use a promising drug that will reduce the severe toxic and dangerous effects of the combination of antabuse and alcohol.

The drug, 4-methyl-pyrazole, works in a complicated manner to reduce the alcohol-antabuse reactions. The preliminary studies indicate that the drug is extremely important in reducing violent and dangerous side effects.

If 4-methyl-pyrazole is as safe and effective as it seems to be, antabuse may become one of the more significant medical techniques for the control of chronic alcoholism.

Disabled Teacher Honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Anne Carlsen was honored recently as recipient of the 18th annual "Woman of Conscience Award" presented by the National Council of Women of the United States.

Ms. Carlsen, herself disabled from birth, has worked as a teacher of the disabled for 43 years. She has been administrator of the Crippled Children's School-Hospital in Jamestown, N.D., renamed the Anne Carlsen School in her honor, since 1950.

"It is a great honor for me to be selected," she said during the awards ceremonies here. She said that as a representative of 35 million disabled persons in the United States, "I am eager that each one of them have a chance of full participation in our society."

Ms. Carlsen identified five problem areas for the disabled: social acceptance, education, employment, transportation and housing. She said work in these areas would require the cooperation of the disabled and the non-disabled as well.

"We have come a long way in giving the disabled a chance to participate in our society, but we still have a long way to go," she said.

Her remarks were echoed by the keynote speaker, Dr. Howard Rusk, founder of New York University's Institute of Rehabilitative Medicine.

"We have a long way to go, tremendous numbers of people, all kinds of problems," Rusk said, "but progress is being made. I feel heartened because I know the dedication of people working in this field. The United Nations has designated 1981 as the International Year of Disabled Persons."

The National Council of Women of the United States is a non-profit, non-partisan, non-political organization made up of 26 organizations throughout the nation. The award included a $1,500 grant from Clairol Inc.

Firm Runs Day-Care Unit For Alcoholic Workers

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — A company-run day program for alcoholics has treated some 200 employees during its first year of operation with a high score of success, according to the firm pioneering the project. The United Technologies Counseling Center here reports that of the employees who completed the program during the first year, 75 percent to 80 percent have remained sober and are working effectively within the company.

During the two-week intensive program close family members are also counseled, since the center believes the success of the treatment depends on the family's understanding why a certain member has a drinking problem, said Charles Pilkington, director of the program. The company, which has some 60,000 employees in Connecticut, leased a large home within walking distance of New Britain General Hospital, which opened a separate detoxification unit to provide detoxification and medical evaluation services for employees using the center. The center treats between 12 and 14 clients a day. "The importance of the project is underscored by statistics which reveal that one out of 15 American adults has a drinking problem," said Pilkington. "Within the national work force, an estimated 5 million men and women are alcoholics." Pilkington cites as an example a 34-year-old secretary for the company, divorced and raising three children alone, an alcoholic though she has not had a drink in over a year. While she did not drink on the job, she would race home for her first drink. "She thought she was coping with her drinking since she got her children off to school and went to work each day," Pilkington explained. "When the children began to notice her drinking, she sought help through the day treatment program. "Our day treatment program is designed to help people like this secretary," added Pilkington. "They come to the center for treatment five days a week all day long and for half a day on Saturdays. It's just like going to work. Clients are free to return home nights. Because our program is concentrated into two weeks, no one automatically suspects that the employee is in an alcoholic treatment program."

The corporation began its special program for employees with drinking problems in 1975. The first step was treating the employee as an inpatient at a detoxification institution for 28 days. A five-year review of inpatient treatment from 1975 showed that the average length of stay per patient had doubled and the average cost per patient had tripled while the outcome of the treatment had not improved at all.

Beth Baker Ward of 112 Lakewood Drive, Greenville, has been named principal at Pactolus Elementary School.

She is a graduate of East Carolina University with a major in elementary education and a minor in psychology. She also attended the University of Virginia for administration and supervision courses.

Mrs. Ward has been assistant principal of curriculum and instruction at Farmville Middle School. She has 20 years of experience in the field of education, having served as an eighth grade reading teacher and school system supervisor at Chaloner Middle School in Roanoke Rapids, a team leader and teacher at Greer Elementary School, Charlottesville, Va., and eighth grade math and science teacher at Andrew Jackson Elementary School, Halifax.

She has taught courses in the Division of Continuing Education at East Carolina University since 1968 and has conducted a number of workshops for the division.

Mrs. Ward is a member of Delta Kappa Gamma, Phi Delta Kappa, and the North Carolina Association of School Administrators professional organizations. She is also a member of St. James Methodist Church and a neighborhood chairman of the Heart Fund.

Mrs. Ward is married to Charles Stuart Ward, associate director of graduate studies, Division of Continuing Education, at ECU. She is the mother of three children.

Agriculture Head Also Runs Farm

BOSTON (AP) — Frederic Winthrop is certainly the only top Massachusetts official who has literally made hay in the last two state administrations.

He's also the only one who can claim a governor in the family — albeit from 350 years ago, when John Winthrop was chief executive of the Massachusetts Bay Colony from 1629-34.

That makes him Frederic's great-grandfather, 14 generations removed.

The distinguished Winthrops have been Harvard professors, scientists, bankers, lawyers and farmers. Frederic, a boyish 40, is commissioner of agriculture — and the man generally credited with halting the blacktopping of Massachusetts' rich farmland.

"Land is important to me," says Winthrop in his Boston office. "I farmed all my life, and, clearly, I didn't have to. I wanted to."

Massachusetts farmers like their jobs, too, and they have an ally in the gentleman from Ipswich, whose family still owns 500 acres.

A Republican, Winthrop was sought out for his job in 1975 by Democratic Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

Democratic Gov. Edward J. King swept out Dukakis' appointees, but Winthrop is a notable holdover, one of the very few.

A Harvard graduate who majored in government, then served in the Marines, Winthrop was brought up on Turner Hill Farm, where the family raises beef cattle and pigs, and sells hay, corn, Christmas trees and firewood.

Frederic has managed the property since 1969 on behalf of his brothers and sisters — while running a state agency that regulates food quality, farm sanitation, animal health and pest control.

Vietnam Tries Free Mart Plan

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Free-market practices are in effect in Vietnam in an attempt to cure its ailing economy. Individual incentives are being developed in industry and agriculture. State subsidies on consumer items have been cut in a move to make prices more accurately reflect production costs and to accumulate capital for investment, according to Western diplomats here.

"The government's doctrinaire Marxist approach is changing because of the realizations of those who have suffered privation in their own lives," one of the diplomats said. The production incentives in industry have led to many workers' doubling or tripling their monthly earnings, while rank-and-file Communist Party and government officials on fixed salaries have become a disadvantaged class, facing high inflation and decreased subsidies, according to the diplomatic sources.

"Now the practice is to pay for the amount of work produced, and not according to needs," one diplomat said. "This also creates inequalities — but it is the price they have to pay for increased production." The diplomats asked to remain unidentified, even by nationality, because of Vietnamese restrictions on the passing of information other than what comes officially from the government. The Western envoys, however, said much of their information is gleaned from the official press and other sources.

The new economic measures were instituted early this year following recommendations made by a mission sent here by the Washington-based International Monetary Fund, an independent but United Nations-associated organization that helps countries resolve economic difficulties. The innovations, however, have generated a debate within Vietnam's governing institutions, which previously pursued strict "Marxist" policies of state control over all aspects of the economy.

According to the diplomats, the old-guard economists right now are on the defensive.

The progress of the debate, and perhaps new announcements, will be seen when Vietnam's National Assembly convenes here later in June, and elects the first State Council — a new government body created under Vietnam's recently revised constitution. The Westerners here say little news filters down directly to them about alternatives contemplated in the debate, but they add that contradictions to the Marxist concept of equality, caused by the new policies, are a likely topic.

Government salary scales range from about 70 to 120 dong a month, while some textile workers in Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon) in the South can earn 200 to 400 dong a month through piecework incentives. One U.S. dollar is equal to 2.5 dong at the official rate of exchange.

Farmers who sell their surplus to the free market have a hedge against inflation, as do tradesmen with profitable skills to sell.

There are no official figures available on inflation rates, but the diplomats' estimates range from 30 to 60 percent in the last 12 months.

Another problem, after putting extra cash in people's pockets, is that they have nothing to invest in, to further spur the economy. The only private businesses are small and limited to the family.

"If there were some private firms, they could start a development spiral," said one of the sources.

Forty years of war, disastrous weather in recent years, the brief but destructive Chinese invasion of 1979 and the cost of invading Cambodia are listed as factors — along with rigid planning — that led to the failure of Vietnam's last five-year plan, ending in 1980.

Vietnam lacks almost everything, from spare parts and consumer goods to sufficient electricity.

Once Called 'Most Livable,' Portland Now Has Problems

By RICK GLADSTONE
Associated Press Writer
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — In this city, once rated America's most livable, police are accused of racism and corruption, schools are closing and air has become dirty enough for a state task force to urge a ban on coal heat.

City officials, sensitive about Portland's most-livable status, say they are working on the problems. They say the 1 million people who live in the area are still luckier than most.

"No question about it," says Portland Mayor Frank Ivancie. "Let me give it to you this way. Our budget is balanced. We're in a very sound fiscal position as a city. We're basically unaffected by federal budget cutbacks. We're a Rock of Gibraltar as far as other cities around."

Oregon's largest city is a mix of high-rise buildings, old houses, evergreens and rose bushes, nestled in a valley at the confluence of the Columbia and Willamette rivers.

Portland got its most-livable reputation in 1974, when the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency commissioned the Midwest Research Institute, an urban studies center in Kansas City, Mo., to evaluate the country's 65 largest cities.

Ranked 32nd in size, Portland received top grades in all categories — economic, social, political, environmental and health-and-educational.

"The study never implied that Portland was perfect," said Chris Sturm, an official at the Portland Chamber of Commerce, which still distributes reprints of the study. "It just said Portland is better off than most other cities."

Former U.S. Secretary of Transportation Neil Goldschmidt, who was Portland's mayor in 1975, says the city is still No. 1 as far as he's concerned.

"I came back to live here," he says. "I think there's no city at the top or bottom that doesn't have problems. The question is how they deal with those problems."

Portland does not have the fiscal woes of Boston, crime rate of New York or horror of Atlanta's child murders. But some citizens, especially in the city's community of 29,000 blacks, have complained of alleged police racism and corruption here.

"For Portland's black citizens, the designation of Portland as one of the nation's most livable has a hollow ring," says Bruce Broussard, publisher of the black-owned Portland Observer newspaper. "We're still harassed and brutalized by police."

The Black United Front, a Portland civil rights group, has complained to the United Nations, asking for a probe into alleged human rights violations against blacks here.

The school board, faced with a $9 million deficit, has announced it is closing at least one high school and possibly four elementary schools.

In April, a group of public health experts, reporting to the state Environmental Quality Commission, said Portland, Eugene and Medford have serious air pollution and urged that coal heat in the cities be outlawed.

Portlanders also face a problem few other U.S. cities share — volcanoes. Mount St. Helens, 45 miles to the northeast, has dumped ash on Portland three times since it first erupted last year. Geologists say Mount Hood, 45 miles east, is also destined to explode.

Ivancie, who has been here since 1952 and became mayor last year, says most of Portland's citizens feel good about their city, shown by voter approval of a $10 million civic stadium improvement levy and a $24 million levy to build a performing arts center.

SCHOLARSHIP WINNER — Thomas K. Barefoot (R) of Fayetteville, senior chemistry major at East Carolina University, is the 1981 winner of the Joseph N. LeConte Memorial Scholarship established by family and friends of the late Dr. LeConte in 1977. Mrs. LeConte (L) makes the presentation to Barefoot who met scholarship and course requirements for the award. Dr. LeConte was a member of the ECU chemistry faculty for 15 years before his retirement in 1972. (ECU News Bureau Photo.)

Blind Woman 'Reads' To Kids

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Virginia Baker is blind. She's also a favorite "reader" among the day-care preschoolers at the Downtown YMCA's Prime Time Center.

Accompanied by her guide dog, Mugsy, and using the Braille method to read, Mrs. Baker entertains the children every Thursday morning.

"I love to read. I love children, too," she said. "I get magazines especially for this. If there's anything I think they can't understand, I explain it to them."

Mrs. Baker, 65, began going to the Prime Time Center in 1979. She had been a widow for 2½ years since her husband DeWayne died. And she was lonely.

"I just lost interest in living after he was gone," Mrs. Baker said. "I would just cry. Even two years after he was gone, I'd come upon something of his and I'd just start crying."

Several months after venturing to the Prime Time Center, Mrs. Baker suggested that the children and the elderly in separate programs could benefit from a story time together.

Being with children has helped ease the emptiness she sometimes felt from not having children of her own, she said.

The toddlers also remind her of her last memory of the sighted world, when she was 2 years old.

"My mother had gone up to the attic for something. I toddled up, too, as children do," Mrs. Baker said. "Then someone came to the door. She hurried down and I hurried down after her and went crashing down the stairs."

The fall damaged her optic nerves and her sight deteriorated.

"I could see light until I was about 22, then it went, too," she said.

Half Of Caracas Lives In 'Margin'

By JANELLE CONAWAY
Associated Press Writer

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Bartolo and Carmen Bareto live in a sea of orange brick and clotheslines, at the top of an alleyway flight of 116 wide cement steps set at a 60-degree angle.

Their brick box-house, perched on top of one like it, opens into a room containing a plastic-covered couch, a table with two unsteady chairs and a gaudy reproduction of the Last Supper. From the open hole that is their front window they can just see the main avenue below that leads to a Sears shopping center.

In government terminology, the Baretos are "marginados" — in the "margins" of society. In their own words, they are poor.

Out of nearly 4 million people in this OPEC member's capital about half live in the margins, out of the mainstream of the oil wealth flow. These are the janitors, secretaries, messengers, servants, waiters, seamstresses and construction workers who serve Caracas. Their incomes, according to one economic survey, average between $300 and $500 a month for a family of four, in a city listed on U.S. tax forms as more expensive than Boston.

Most live in the geographical margins too, in orange-brick, tin-roofed slums that ring the hillsides around this valley city. They are nearly hidden from downtown because of the tall buildings. The freeways leading out of Caracas part this reddish sea where, as one resident put it, "you see a lot of reality."

The tabloids thrive on daily stories of murders "of passion" in the barrios, as the slums are called here, and frightened women talk about their fear of robbery or rape.

It is difficult to find statistics on crime, since the government does not even have accurate population figures for the hillsides, due to the large number of Venezuelans and foreign immigrants without identification documents or birth certificates. (Estimates on the city's barrio population range from 1.5 million to 2.5 million.)

Police say gang crime is dangerously high in the barrios. In some areas, they say, gang leaders stand at the tops of the long flights of steps and force people to pay a "toll" to get home. Caracas police recently launched an anti-crime campaign that has reportedly reduced gang activity by half, but it has also drawn some complaints of police brutality.

The barrios have lots of children. An estimated 52 percent of Venezuelan children are illegitimate. In the barrios that estimate goes up to 70 or 80 percent.

Generally, income levels are lower in the upper reaches of the multilayered barrios, where the brick gives way to wood, cardboard and tin shacks that tend to collapse with hard rains. To get home from their jobs, many people must take a long bus ride to the bottom of the hill, a longer ride in a 4-wheel-drive Jeep up the mountain (for a quarter), then a walk up a steep flight of steps.

Venezuela's 23 percent inflation affects the barrios, too. The Baretos said they could sell their little two-bedroom house — no plaster, no paint and only one window with panes — for $20,000. That is why when families expand, they just build another level of brick on top of the existing house. Some houses are stacked five-and-six-high.

Food prices in barrio stores are as high as elsewhere, leading to what is increasingly being called a severe problem of malnutrition. The government food agency, Corpomercadeo, does have trucks and warehouses with lower-priced food.

A Rose-Colored Record

More than 10,000 men have played major league baseball. Of these, only 13 have gotten 3,000 or more hits in their careers. And only four — including Pete Rose — have reached the 3,600 mark. To realize how tough it is, first note that 180 hits in a season usually means a player had a very good year. Someone must do that for 20 separate years to reach 3,600. (And the average major leaguer only lasts about six years!) As Rose approached Stan Musial's National League record of 3,699 hits, he was already setting his sights on Hank Aaron's 3,709. (Aaron played in both leagues.) Then, there is Ty Cobb — the only man ever to reach the 4,000 hit mark, with 4,191.

DO YOU KNOW: For what two teams has Pete Rose played during his entire major league career?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — The majority of Philippine citizens are Roman Catholics.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to think about what you want to do in the future that is new and different. Take the time to formulate long-range plans to have greater abundance in the days ahead.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Engage in a challenging venture you enjoy and make much progress. Enjoy the company of friends at pleasurable activities.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): You can add new activities to your regular routines which could be profitable. Don't be so opinionated.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You have a new plan that requires the backing of good friends, so be sure to contact them without delay. Express happiness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Try to be more active in public affairs and gain added prestige. Be clever in handling money matters.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): If you make plans now for improving your position in life, you can easily add to your abundance. Think constructively.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Study carefully how to handle responsibilities more intelligently in the future. Study new outlets that could be profitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Good day to talk over your finest ambitions and ideas with associates and get the results you want. Show that you have wisdom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Become more enthused about the work you have to do and get better results. Make new plans for the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): This is the right day to gain a most cherished aim. Do whatever will bring you closer to the one you love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Showing true loyalty at home can bring about the harmony that is needed there. Stop being so unsure of yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Plan just how to produce more and increase your income in the future. Sidestep one who could get you in trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): You have fine ideas for getting ahead so jot them down today so you won't forget them. Take time and improve your property.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY — he or she will be mentally alert and can pioneer with success in various avenues of expression. Give the right kind of education, stressing modern ways of doing things. Don't neglect spiritual training early in life.

The Stars impel, they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Fiddler At Age 4

LLANO, Texas (AP) — A gold medal, a plaque and $30 is not a bad start in the music business, especially when you're 4 years old and have to have someone hold the microphone at ground level while you fiddle.

Jason James has been sawing catgut since he was 3 and already has made appearances at the recent Llano Old Time Fiddlers Contest and other events.

The $30, which is safely tucked away in his piggy bank, was for the fifth place he won in the Llano fiddlers' battle in the age 0-17 division. "I'm going to buy something with it," said Jason, who, after a little coaxing, revealed that it will be used to purchase equipment "to build a go-cart that my daddy's going to make for me."

Jason inherited his love for the fiddle from his grandfather, Tilmon Harlow, who has been playing since 1935. He gathers the family every month or so at his home, where they break out the instruments and play for fun.

CRYPTOQUIP 6-17

XUYVKRQVAV ZGAUF ZGAUY KG
FGRX ZGPIUGXU ZRPUI

Yesterday's Cryptquip - ABILITY TO COUNT GOD'S BLESSINGS IS ACUTELY NEEDED.
Today's Cryptquip clue: F equals R

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Pass 1 ♦ Pass 2 NT

Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

If you need to find a particular distribution to make or beat a hand, play as if that distribution exists. Don't worry about an overtrick or extra undertrick - the potential rewards more than compensate.

North was not overjoyed at the prospect of playing a no trump contract, so he made the mistake of rebidding his diamonds. This led South to believe that his partner had a six-card suit and better hand. Since South had the top diamonds, North had to have strength in the major suits, so South's decision to go to game cannot be faulted.

West led his top club, and East did not like his chances of defeating the contract. The opening lead marked declarer with at least four clubs headed by the king-queen-ten, and neither spades nor diamonds were likely to be a source of tricks for the defense. That left hearts as the only suit where the defenders were likely to earn some grit.

East knew that he could not expect to find more than 3-4 points in his partner's hand. If West held specifically the ace of hearts, there was some slight hope for the defense. All that remained was for East to find the best method to tackle the suit.

If South held three hearts to the queen and West a doubleton ace, the contract was unbeatable. There was only one real chance - that declarer held specifically a doubleton queen.
Once that was established, the defense became simple. East shifted to the king of hearts. West did his share by following with the eight to unblock the suit. The deuce of hearts to the ace felled the queen and, when West led a third round of the suit, East held the jack-seven over dummy's ten-six. Thus, the defenders raked in four heart tricks and the ace of clubs to defeat the contract, and East modestly acknowledged the kudos for his excellently reasoned play.

OLD-FASHIONED ENERGY
LITCHFIELD, Conn. (AP) - One of the smallest commercial hydroelectric stations in the nation has started producing power again after being shut down for 10 years.
The 76-year-old Bantam Station, perched alongside the rapids of the Bantam River here, was reactivated by Northeast Utilities to generate as much electricity as 2,300 barrels of oil would produce.
The vintage hydro station was retired in 1971 when a problem developed in the generator. Because oil was about 7 cents a gallon in those days, repairing the generator was uneconomical. Now that oil costs some 93 cents a gallon, by putting the power of the river back to work NU will save some $92,000 a year in fuel costs.

Thais Find 'Pig Man' Survives

UDORN THANI, Thailand (AP) - When they call Jim Gustafson the "pig man," he doesn't bristle. In fact, he takes it as a compliment.

Gustafson, 36, a missionary in a remote area of northeast Thailand, earned his nickname from a small group of admiring pig farmers - men who, for the first time, are able to support themselves and their families with a measure of independence and dignity.

A few years ago, they weren't farmers at all. They were what sociologists call the "landless poor," eking out a bare living doing odd jobs for local landowners, and viewed as lazy and worthless even by low-income farmers in the region.

But that was before Jim Gustafson revved up his pig bank with the aid of a grant from World Relief, the international relief and development arm of the National Association of Evangelicals.

Standing on a narrow walkway in a maze of piggens occupied by over a hundred healthy porkers and their young, Jim shouts above the feeding-time din of oinks and squeals.

"In Thailand, poor people don't usually raise pigs," he explains. "It's a rich man's occupation, because you need capital to feed the pigs until you can sell them. That's why most economic development schemes in this country have failed to help the really poor, who have no capital at all."

"But the pig bank is different," he adds. "We provide everything - pigs, feed, medicine and advice - until the owner starts to make a profit from selling the pigs at market. Then, gradually, he begins buying pigs from us and paying us a part of his earnings."

The pig bank also earns money from an ingenious ecosystem Gustafson has established on the property.

Just down the road from the piggens is an enormous rice mill, which processes rice for local farmers. Bran produced during the milling is used as pig feed, the pig manure is used as feed for a flock of egg-laying ducks living on an adjacent pond, the duck droppings feed the fish raised in the pond, and the duck eggs and fish are sold at market.

Just to make sure nothing is wasted, Gustafson has planted banana and mango trees around the pond.

A native of Meadville, Pa., Gustafson was raised in Southeast Asia by missionary parents. He has degrees in history, anthropology and divinity.

"None of it has anything to do with pigs," he says. "Everything I've learned, I've picked up from Thai veterinarians and from visits to agricultural schools on my home leaves in the States."

"I even learned that the local pig farmers, who had been doing this for generations, were raising pigs all wrong. They had been following the advice of the feed companies, who also happen to sell pigs - and who wanted to sell purebreds to the farmers. But in this climate, a three-way crossbreed is best."

"We've lowered the mortality rate, and we're raising pigs in four to five months instead of the six to seven months it normally takes around here."

World Relief officials are happy about the pig bank too. "Our startup costs were $170,000 the first year and $39,000 this year," says Reg Reimer, director of Southeast Asian operations for the agency based in Wheaton Ill. "Next year it looks as though the pig bank will be completely self-supporting and Jim won't need anything from us at all."

License Fee Is Revised

A revised privilege license fee scheduled for fiscal year 1981-82 was approved recently by the City Council.

The schedule, it was pointed out, has been revised in nine categories to update the city's license schedule to conform with changes in state law and to bring several fees in line with charges made for similar businesses.

The new schedule will become effective July 1. People seeking more information should contact Floyd Little, revenue collector, at 752-4137.

Old Statues Steal Show

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — After 2,500 years under the Ionian Sea, two bronze warriors have jumped into the spotlight, rivaling Florence's main tourist attractions and triggering a national controversy about what city should have the right to keep them.

"We had never seen tourists scuffling to see two statues," said a museum official in Florence, where statues are now being shown.

The bronzes, which some believe are the work of the 5th-century B.C. Greek sculptor Phidias, went on display quietly in an obscure Florentine museum in January.

The lifesize figures, weighing 990 pounds each, are impressive works of craftsmanship and have been carefully restored. One, with a headband, stands mightily, with his left foot forward and his muscles tense. The other is more relaxed and has a pensive expression.

They are so perfectly preserved, visitors can see details such as the veins on the bodies, silverplated teeth and copper eyelashes.

"Their physical presence is so powerful that people reach out to touch them," said another museum official.

Italian newspapers say that Werner Fuchs, a prominent German archeologist and professor at the University of Munster, believes the bronzes are an early work of Phidias, regarded as one of the greatest Greek sculptors. None of Phidias' original work has been discovered, although there are many Roman copies of his statues.

The bronzes were the unusual catch of a Roman swimmer in the summer of 1972. Stefano Mariottini was skin-diving off the coast of Riace, a town in the southern Italian region of Calabria, when he spotted a darkened forearm sticking out of the bottom of the sea, 26 feet below the surface.

Experts soon found a second bronze lying nearby. The Riace townspeople, in a scene resembling a Fellini movie, tried to erect them immediately in the middle of the village square.

Spinal Injuries Are Considered Major Threat

NEW YORK (AP) — For some teen-agers and young adults, the summer of 1981 could be their last as healthy, active individuals, warns a physician at New York University Medical Center's Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine.

The incidence of spinal-cord injuries, which claims its highest number of victims in the 15 to 22 age bracket, rises dramatically in the summer, says Dr. Kristjan Ragnarsson, who is project director of the New York regional spinal-cord injury center.

Once the spinal cord is injured, the patient becomes paralyzed and is probably doomed to a lifetime in a wheelchair, he points out.

"Each year we see some 80 to 100 new spinal-cord injury patients," says Ragnarsson. "The sad part is that these healthy, active persons need never have been injured. Spinal-cord injury is entirely preventable."

Diving accidents produce a higher percentage of quadriplegia than any other injury, he notes. Yet other forms of summer sports — surfing, roller-skating, bicycling, rock climbing, motorcycling or even riding in a car — can result in irreversible spinal-cord damage.

Ragnarsson offers the following suggestions on how to avoid spinal cord injury:

- Know the depth of any water before diving in. Be wary of ponds or lakes that may have submerged rocks.
- Familiarize yourself with the ocean tide schedule. Remember that sand bars can shift location.
- When climbing, wear proper safety equipment for protection if you fall.
- When engaging in a sport, know the rules, wear proper safety equipment and be aware of your own limitations.
- Always wear a safety belt when driving.
- Don't drink before driving or participating in sports.
