Dancing Lightning Puts City's Lights On Blink

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Sharp lightning from an early morning thunderstorm danced along utility lines during the dark hours of today, causing spotty power outages in the city but no serious damage.

"The most critical problem we had was at Glendale Court," explained acting director of Greenville Utilities Malcolm Green, "where some underground cables were damaged. Most of the other outages were blown fuses."

Green added that the real problem of the morning came when the utilities' PBX telephone system failed, leaving emergency callers stranded. "We worked from 2 a.m. to 5 a.m. and had no more calls after that," noted Green.

"We didn't know this was because the phone wasn't functioning. Finally, the police department came down and told us they were getting calls about the power being off, so we called the phone company," he continued.

Green noted that the phones were repaired by 6 a.m., at which time nine calls came in. "We had two big construction crews out and we split them up and had all power restored by 9 a.m.," he said.

By 5 p.m. today the emergency number will be separate from the PBX system, according to Green. "In order to prevent this type of inconvenience to our customers the emergency number is being routed directly to our dispatcher counter today."

The acting director added that no main lines suffered damage from the storm. "We recorded many direct lightning strikes but not a single main line went out," he explained. "We feel like the lightning resisting equipment we've installed is working well."

Officially, nearly an inch of precipitation fell during the storm, although reports from Ayden and surrounding communities indicate approximately 1.5 inches fell there. Greenville Utilities' water plant measured .89 inch of rain by 8 a.m. today.

According to agriculture officials, the rain should help farmers. "The last few hot days have dried out soils in the county pretty thoroughly," said county extension chairman Leroy James. "We can use this rain. Other than water standing in fields, I don't think it's going to cause any problems."

Temperatures Wednesday ranged from 98 degrees Fahrenheit to 74 degrees F. At 8 a.m. today it was 75 degrees and Tar River stood at 3.7 feet.

Sharp Rise Is Reported In Economy

By ROBERT FURLLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy grew even more rapidly than reported earlier during the first three months of this year, expanding at an 8.6 percent annual rate, the most for any quarter since early 1978, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department also said that before-tax corporate profits rose 3.8 percent in the January-March quarter rather than 3.7 percent as originally reported.

The revisions came one day after separate new reports on Americans' personal income and on U.S. factory use indicated the national economy was barely crawling along by May. But analysts described that situation as a nearly inevitable "breather" after the robust first-quarter growth.

"Real" GNP — the inflation-adjusted total value of the nation's goods and services — rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.853 trillion in the first quarter, today's Commerce Department report said.

The annual rate of increase had been reported at 6.5 percent two months ago, then was revised to 8.4 percent last month. Even the lowest of those figures was the biggest quarterly gain since the 9 percent growth in the second quarter of 1978.

Real GNP rose 3.8 percent in the final quarter of 1980.

Meanwhile, the report also revised a GNP-connected inflation measure downward — setting the broadly based GNP implicit price deflator at 9.8 percent. The deflator had been first reported at 7.8 percent, then was revised to 10 percent one month ago.

The report also said that before-tax corporate profits rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $259.1 billion in the first quarter.

Corporate profits from current production, adjusting for depreciation and inventory replacement costs, rose 10.7 percent rather than 10.5 percent as first reported.

As reported earlier, Commerce Department officials said rising personal consumption spending and exports helped push the rapid growth in the first-quarter GNP.

That gain, the most in about three years, surprised many economists. They later said the first quarter, pushed by auto rebates and other retail sales promotions, apparently had borrowed economic growth from the following three months.

"A lot of activity was pulled, almost like a vacuum cleaner, from the second quarter into the first," said Robert Gough, vice president of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

"It's normal to expect some kind of a breather" after such a torrid quarter, he said.

In that light, Gough and other private analysts said there was no cause for concern in Wednesday's Commerce report that personal income rose a lackluster 0.6 percent for the second month in a row in May, a gain which probably was eaten up immediately by inflation.

David Ernst, vice president of Evans Economics in Washington, predicted that "what we'll see in the third and fourth quarters is a fairly moderate increase in real wages, and that will set the stage for more consumer strength."

The Reagan administration, meanwhile, is predicting little or no overall economic growth in the second and third quarters. If Congress passes the president's economic package, that should spur some recovery by the end of the year, administration officials say.

Wednesday's Commerce report said that while personal income was rising 0.6 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.367 trillion in May, personal spending was climbing 0.7 percent to a rate of $1.885 trillion.

Subtracting spending from after-tax income — which rose 0.5 percent to a rate of $1.985 trillion — left new personal savings at an annual rate of just over $100 billion, down 2.1 percent from April, the report said.

A separate Federal Reserve Board report said manufacturers used 80.1 percent of their factories' capacity in May.

That was the highest utilization since April 1980, just before last year's recession. But it was also an increase of only 0.1 percentage point over April's figure.

Electric Rates May Go Down With Purchase

North Carolina Power Agency Number III and Carolina Power and Light Co. have reached an agreement under which the Power Agency will purchase nine generating units at four CP&L plant sites.

And if all goes well, according to acting Greenville Utilities Commission Director Malcolm Green, Greenville Utilities customers should be receiving electric power at less cost sometime in December.

Greenville is one of 36 cities in North Carolina represented by Power Agency III. Thirteen of the cities are now customers of Virginia Electric and Power Co. while the rest are now CP&L customers.

Green explained that under the agreement, the power agency will acquire undivided ownership of nine units at four CP&L plants — the Shearon Harris plant in Wake County, the Brunswick County plant, a plant at Roxboro and the Mayo Plant in Person County.

Power Agency ownership would range from 13 percent to 18 percent of the different units which are either nuclear or coal generating units. None of the units is oil fired.

The Power Agency, in turn, would be the supplier for the member cities, rather than CP&L or VEPCO.

The buy-in agreement will provide CP&L with capital for construction. Because the power agency is tax-exempt, it can borrow money at a lower rate than CP&L.

Green said the buy-in agreement is the final step for the CP&L cities. The VEPCO cities, including Greenville, "have one more thing they have to do... get off of VEPCO."

Negotiations for the cities to end their purchase of power from VEPCO are almost complete, Green indicated, adding that the agreements must now be approved by 10 state and federal agencies. He said no problems are expected.

Green noted that the governing boards of the municipalities involved in the Power Agency must also approve of the agreements. He said that is expected to occur after power agency wholesale rates are established, possibly sometime next month.

Green said the generating units will be bought with proceeds from revenue bonds issued by the Power Agency.

Although the power agency will own the generating units, Carolina Power & Light Co. will operate and fuel-manage the sites.

CP&L president Sherwood Smith Jr. said the generating purchase agreement is part of a long-range plan of conservation and reducing the need for new power plants.

PLANE CRASH — William S. Ellis, 47, of Macesfield survived the crash of his single-engine Cessna 172 near Conetoe Wednesday but the Highway Patrol says a motorist was killed when his attention was diverted by the accident. The patrol said John Osmond White III, 49, of Hertford was killed when his pickup collided with a two-ton truck loaded with ice. The plane crashed as it was making an approach to a landing strip on the Floyd Harrell farm. Ellis underwent surgery at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, where he was reported in good condition today.

GOP Urged To Be 'Hardnosed' In Fighting For Budget Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is telling House Republicans to be more "hardnosed" in battling for budget changes, even after Democrats rearranged some spending cuts more to the president's liking.

The House Education and Labor Committee voted Wednesday to restore millions of dollars for student loans, impact school aid and programs for the elderly and handicapped which it had cut last week.

The committee got the money for restoring those cuts by making further reductions in child nutrition programs, public service employment and emergency school aid, as the administration wanted.

Budget director David A. Stockman met privately Wednesday with House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois and other key House Republicans and told them he was not satisfied.

Michel indicated he was not completely comfortable with the administration's stubborn position. "I'm not all that hung up on saying we've got to have everything we want," he said.

Michel said that, overall, he might be satisfied trying to change a small number of "very serious differences" rather than offering a complete substitute plan encompassing everything Reagan wants.

Still, Michel said, it is virtually certain that Republicans will attempt to alter the Democratic package of cuts on the House floor.

He said Republicans are ready to battle Democrats over their rejection of Reagan's call to transfer control of nearly 100 specific federal programs to the states. Under the administration's block grant plan, states generally would parcel out the money as they see fit.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said today he thinks the administration is pushing Michel into a fight with Democrats.

"I think Mr. Michel is being forced into it," O'Neill told reporters. "I feel sorry for Bob — he's just being given the papers. ... It's a sad commentary."

Bani-Sadr Goes Into Seclusion

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr has vanished from view, apparently on the run from his fundamentalist opponents. His relatives and close friends said today they had no word on his whereabouts.

"I have not got any information on him or his family," Bani-Sadr's sister Robabeh Sakineh, a nuclear physicist, said when reached in her Tehran residence by telephone from The Associated Press office in Beirut. "We have entrusted him to God. May God keep him."

Other sources in Tehran said there were unconfirmed reports that the now-powerless president had taken refuge in his native city Hamadan, in western Iran, as the nation's parliament prepared to debate his political fate on Saturday.

There was speculation that the first elected president in Iran's history was planning to flee to Paris, where he spent 16 years in exile during the reign of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

But Mehdi Bazargan, Iran's first post-revolution prime minister and a Bani-Sadr friend and supporter, told The AP in a telephone interview he believed the president still was somewhere in the capital.

"He is more likely in Tehran. But I am only guessing," Bazargan said. "We, my wife and I, called on him and his wife at his presidential residence four days ago. We saw them."

Since that visit, Bazargan said, Islamic Revolutionary Guards seized the residence and are still surrounding it.

Farmers Market Grand Opening Set For Friday

N.C. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham will be the guest speaker at the grand opening of the Greenville Farmers Market at 8 a.m. Friday, according to county agriculture and Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce officials.

"This is an event to make the Department of Agriculture and the public aware of what folks are doing here in the county in relation to horticulture," noted Sam Uzzell, assistant agricultural extension agent for Pitt County.

The market began in 1979 at the Pitt County Fairgrounds, then moved to Pitt Plaza for the 1980 season. This year the market is located on Reade Circle in downtown Greenville.

"It was very difficult getting started," recounts Uzzell. "It began from a feeling that we needed a chance to sell locally grown fruits and vegetables in an effort to diversify field crops in the area."

Uzzell terms 1981 "the best season yet" for the market. "Much of our success is due to the Downtown Greenville Association, the Chamber of Commerce and the city of Greenville," added the farm agent.

Others scheduled to participate in the grand opening include: N.C. Agriculture Commissioner board member Sam McLawhorn, Farmers Market Task Force Chairman Howard Wilson, Pitt Agriculture Extension Service Chairman Leroy James, and Mayor Don McGlohon.

The market also provides a location for consumers and retailers to purchase direct from producers of fresh fruits, vegetables and other farm produce for their own use or for resale.

The market is open on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings from 8 a.m. until 12 noon, and on Friday afternoons from 4 p.m. until 7 p.m.

Farmers will be present with produce for sale at tomorrow's 8 a.m. grand opening.

This year's location is the result of cooperation between the Redevelopment Commission and the City of Greenville, as well as farmers, the Agriculture Extension Service, the Downtown Merchants Association and the Chamber's Agri-Business Committee.

Graham will be honored at a breakfast following the opening of the market. The breakfast will be at the Holiday Inn at 8:45. Reservations are $5 per person and can be made at the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce office by calling 752-4101.

Leroy James Is Recipient Service Award

NAGS HEAD — Pitt County Agricultural Extension Chairman Leroy James received the distinguished service award at the annual meeting of the N.C. County Agents Association held recently. His award was one of five given in the state.

The distinguished service award is presented for outstanding work accomplished in the respective counties for the administration and implementation of an effective program for farm families served by the extension service. James has been in Pitt County for 20 years.

Additionally, James was selected to provide leadership for the association during the 1981-82 year. He is scheduled to receive national recognition at Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. August 16-17 along with agents from the other 49 states.

During his career in Pitt County James has placed emphasis on effective management and crop production, good recordkeeping practices, and providing consultative services to increase crop productivity. He lists his major accomplishments as improved housing facilities, beautification projects and increased soybean yields in the county.

"My philosophy is that extension involves integrated stages to include the needs of people, a plan of action, execution and evaluation of planned crop production and programs," said James.

SUMMER'S OUT, HOW ABOUT VOLUNTEERING?

There are people in this community who could be an asset to the senior citizens and/or nursing home patients in the Greenville area. Summer is here now, and school is out. Many teenagers will be bored in less than a week.

As Director of Nurses at Greenville Villa, I would like to hear from anyone who is interested in volunteering a couple of hours two or three times a week. I would especially like to hear from teenagers (individually, youth groups, scouts).

If there is anyone interested in this volunteer program, contact Carolyn Snipes RN, Director of Nurses at 758-4121-ext. 25.

HISTORIC HELP

Don Lennon, director of the East Carolina University Manuscript Collection is on the trail of a diary and needs help. Apparently the diary was kept by John Brown, editor of the first newspaper in Greenville around 1835. The name of the newspaper was the Greenville Gazette. Lennon has found a 1942 reference to the diary which verifies its existence. Lennon says he is anxious to try and locate the document. "Anything that I can find out would be rather important to the history of the Greenville area."

Dear Abby

Widower Wants Healthy Woman

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I may be the first 80-year-old man to ask you for advice, but I need some help. After 57 years of a good marriage, my dear wife passed away last year. Now I would like to meet a sensible woman to invite out or to my home occasionally.

My friends want to fix me up with women who are much too young for me. (A man who has daughters 53 and 55 years old does not want to go out with a woman who is 40 or even 50. In fact, I don't want a woman who is under 70!)

I'm not interested in any woman's money as I retired with substantial income. I am in good health, play tennis three times a week, and walk no less than five miles every day, rain or shine. I enjoy traveling and can do anything a man half my age can do, but I don't go overboard on anything.

I would like a refined woman with a good sense of humor who doesn't run to doctors every day, and preferably one who can play a good game of gin rummy.

So where is she?

LOOKING IN N.Y.

DEAR LOOKING: Have you looked in Florida and California? There are more women there who fit your description than in all the other states combined. But I warn you, if your identity ever becomes known, you'll have to give up walking and start running or get a bicycle.

DEAR ABBY: I have neighbors who are very good people and I don't want to get them into trouble, but lately they've been doing something that is terribly wrong, although their intentions are good.

They have an 11-year-old son who started to wet the bed about a year ago. They took him to a doctor who found nothing physically wrong with him, so they took him to a psychiatrist. He said the boy was all right, so they just assumed he could quit wetting the bed if he really wanted to. If he woke up wet, they paddled him, and made him wash his own pajamas and sheets every morning.

Now they put a diaper on him and make him play outside in the front yard wearing only a diaper, a T-shirt, shoes and socks! All the kids tease him. He's a nice, polite kid, and I hate to see him humiliated this way.

Maybe if the parents see this in the paper they will change their tactics. I hope so.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

DEAR JACKSONVILLE: Well-meaning or not, those parents are being unspeakably cruel to the boy. Should they miss this column, please suggest that they buy a Wee Alert Wet Buzzer (Sears catalog lists it). I have recommended this inexpensive device for years, and according to my readers, it's worked wonders.

DEAR ABBY: We have no ashtrays in our home as a signal to smokers that we do not want them to smoke. (My wife is allergic to cigarette smoke.)

We recently gave a dinner party. There were four smokers present who lit their cigarettes from the candles on the table and dropped the ashes on their plates! They puffed all through dinner. It was disgusting.

How can a host and hostess keep their guests from smoking, short of asking them not to?

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Most smokers have become more considerate. They ask if anyone objects before they light up. Those who light up without asking should be told at once that their smoke is offensive.

Taming hot chilis is a simple task. Just remove seeds and veins, then soak them in vinegar or salt and water for an hour or so. The hotter the chili, the longer it should soak.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Does anyone else suffer from "latent genius"?

My brain is just not geared for conversational combat. Put it in a situation that requires speed, cunning and excessive cuteness and it'll stall every time.

It doesn't wake up until after a door slams, the phone is hung up, the party is over, or Johnny Carson is saying good night.

I fantasize about being approached by a tall, dark stranger and having him say, "Have you ever thought of leaving your husband?" and I'd yawn. "Why should I settle for polyester when I have ultra-suede at home, if you get my drift."

Then he says, "I admire your flippancy."

And I reply, "Then you'll love the movie."

"Please," he begs, as I turn to leave, "I love to talk to liberated women who know who they are."

I sigh, "When I can't stand the heat... I'll go back to the kitchen."

He says, "would you mind if I sent that in to Reader's Digest?" and I shrug, "Whatever makes your wheels spin."

It never happens that way. The only time a man asked me if I had ever thought of leaving my husband I answered, "Where?" and dropped a smoked oyster in his drink.

A lot of people are brilliant when they're angry. Not me. I usually end up with a colorful, "Well, we'll see about that" or "Sticks and stones will break my bones but words will never harm me."

I suspect a lot of it stems from a basic shyness or insecurity. All I know is I am dynamite in the car by myself behind the steering wheel. There is no one who can top me in quick retorts, asides, innuendoes, plays on words and insights. I could convulse a convention of nuclear protesters.

That is where I rehearsed a comment I was going to deliver at a dinner honoring Arthur Hailey a few years ago. The speech was devastatingly hilarious and I began to feel sorry for poor Mr. Hailey, who would fade into oblivion as the guests crowded around my silver tongue.

At the dinner, I cleared my throat and said, "Mr. Hailey, I've written everything you've ever read."

Luckily, I mumbled and no one heard me.

"Home Owned & Operated For Over 63 Years"

Varied Items Are Handled By Board

Rick Gilstrap gave the JCAH Interim Study report at the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees meeting Tuesday night. He said the interim self-survey of the hospital's first year activities has been finalized and sent off. The survey is part of the two year accreditation program PCMH is involved in.

A committee to provide "medical direction" and supervise clinical duties of the Rehabilitation Medical Director Dr. Donald Weir was appointed. Selected to serve on the committee were, Glen Strickland, chairman, Dr. Edwin Monroe; Dr. Greg Hardy; Dr. William S. Bost; Ephraim Smith; Dr. W. Jeffres Smith; and Linwood Rouse.

"I want to make you aware that our staff is working hard to keep the turn over rate at a good level, so we can supply services to the community," said Dr. R. William McConnell, chief of staff in his report. He also expressed anticipation and congratulations concerning the arrival of new House Staff members.

Other business covered by the board included acceptance of the resignation of board member Thomas A. Bennett, effective July 1. Bennett has accepted an appointment to the ECU Board of Trustees.

A letter of appreciation was read to the board by Chairman G. Henry Leslie, from James Speight in recognition of the resolution of appreciation recently adopted by the hospital honoring his deceased brother, W. W. "Bill" Speight, who was county and hospital attorney.

Day Camp Is Scheduled At Center

A day camp will be held at South Greenville Recreation Center for children ages 4-12 beginning Monday and running Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 2:45 p.m.

Each day camp will be limited to 20 participants per session. There will be four sessions: June 22-July 3, June 7-July 17, July 20-July 31, August 3-August 14. Camp activities include games, sports, films, roller skating, swimming and tours. The children are asked to bring bag lunches everyday and extra money will be needed when they go on special outings.

Registration will be held at South Greenville Recreation Center from 9:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. Thursday and Friday June 18 and 19. There is a $3.00 registration fee and each child should be accompanied by an adult at registration.

Tour Planned About Weeds

A weed management tour will be held June 30 through July 2. Several eastern North Carolina counties will be involved. All farmers are welcome to attend but must contact the Agricultural Extension Service by June 25. The number to call is 752-2934, ext. 361.

The first stop on the tour may be the best, according to Roger Cobb, Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent. This field tour begins at 4:00 p.m. at Lewiston in Bertie County. Field application of herbicides will be covered. Several misapplication techniques will be demonstrated and proper corrections made. Equipment demonstrations will also be presented. A fluorescent dye incorporation demonstration will take place that night. This should be of particular interest to growers.

Contact the Agricultural Extension Service for schedules and a map to Lewiston.

Two Wrecks Cause Damage

An estimated $2,800 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 12:50 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, one-tenth of a mile east of the Secondary Road 1135 intersection, involving a truck driven by James Frank Russell Jr. of Route 1, Sunbury and a car driven by Thomas Wright of Rocky Mount.

Damage from the mishap was set at $200 to the truck and $2,000 to the car.

An estimated $300 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in an 11:45 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene Street and Mumford Road.

Investigators said the collision involved a car driven by John Ovelite of Quail Ridge Trailer Pk., and a truck driven by Michael Douglas Bullock of 1013 East Mumford Rd.

Talks With The Chinese

U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, Jr. has concluded talks with China's leaders and he claims the success of the visit "exceeded our hopes."

We hope that is the case. The Chinese were not particularly subtle during the presidential campaign in expressing their concern that a Reagan administration would not be favorable to China.

They particularly were concerned with Reagan friendliness toward Taiwan, which is considered the arch enemy of mainland China. The claim of China for the nationalist China fortress of Taiwan, in fact, has never been given up.

Hanging in the balance, of course, was the hard-won resumption of relations between China and the United States. They were drawn together by what has become a common enemy, in the Soviet Union.

Dealing with the communist power of China does not set well with some in the United States, but the relationship can serve us well in face of the growing Soviet military power. China can also be a major customer for American industry and agriculture.

It seems certain that the Reagan administration does not wish to derail the friendship.

Nothing Is Insurmountable

Dr. Jon Tingelstad, an ECU Medical School physician, was unanimously elected chairman of the Greenville Board of Education at its meeting Monday night.

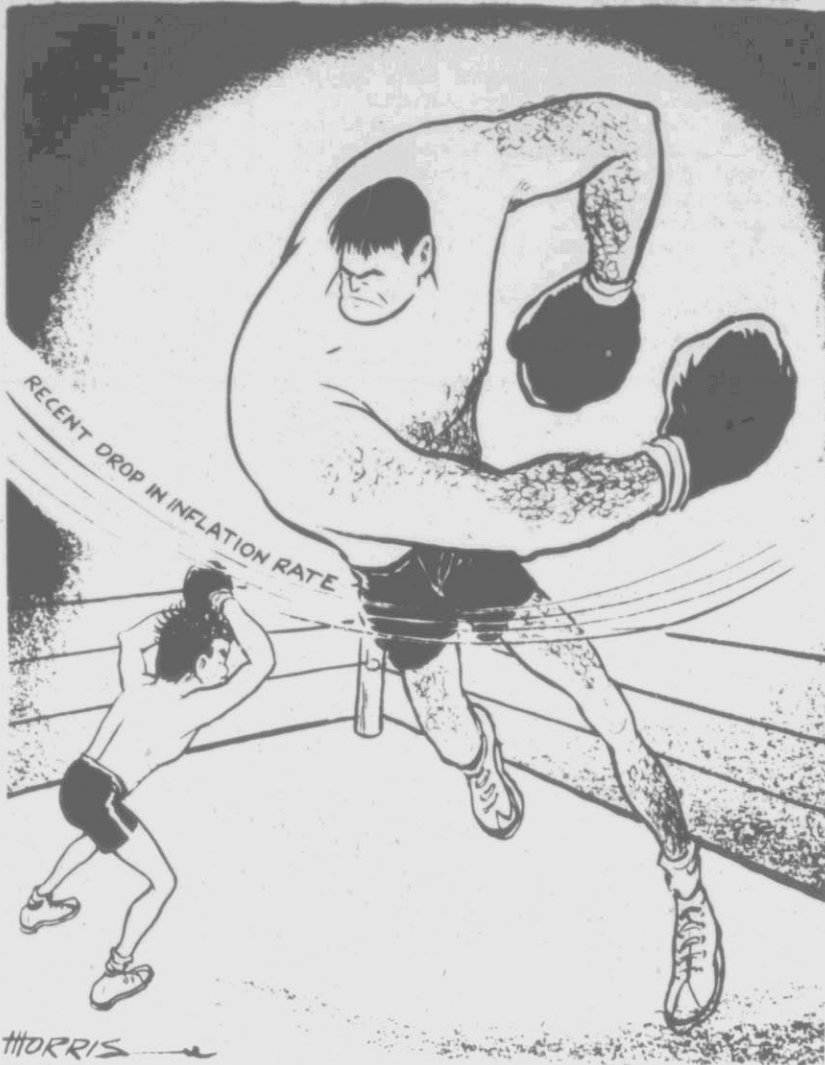

He succeeds Mrs. Nancy Jenkins who is moving from the city.

Dr. Tingelstad, as vice chairman of the board, has presided over a number of meetings in recent months. He is becoming chairman even as a new superintendent is about to assume his duties with the city schools.

The new chairman has shown a strong interest in local education almost from the first day that he became a citizen of our city. He, the board and everyone in the schools face a real challenge to build one of the strongest school systems of the state.

There are many problems to be faced in doing this, but none are insurmountable. We can have the kind of schools we want if we are willing to work for them.

A Knee Situation

Anyone who has been flying tourist class these days has noticed that the airlines are placing their rows closer and closer to each other, making it more difficult to get your entire body into a seat.

I was on a shuttle to New York City the other morning, and the stewardess announced that all carry-on luggage had to be placed under your seats.

The man next to me called her over and said, "What do I do with my knees?"

The stewardess said, "I beg your pardon?"

"My briefcase is under the seat in front of me, but I don't have any place for my knees."

"Neither do I," I told her.

regulations as to how many cattle may be shipped in a car. You'd think we would have the same rights as animals."

"I'm just a stewardess. If you have any complaints, why don't you make them to management?"

"Could I check my knees in the baggage compartment?" he asked.

"I'm sorry, we're just about to take off and we can't check anything."

The stewardess went away. I turned to the man and said, "I have a suggestion, if you don't mind. Why don't you put your knees on my lap and I'll put my knees on your lap. In that way we'll both be more comfortable."

"You're not gay are you?" he wanted to know.

"Heck no, and I assume you're not either."

"Well, let's give it a try," he said.

"Could I put my knees in the overhead rack?" he wanted to know.

"No," she said. "That would be against regulations. It would present a safety hazard in case we hit turbulence."

"Why don't you put them on your chest?" I suggested to my seatmate.

"I was hoping to read my newspaper," he replied. "It's almost impossible to turn a page if you have your knees on your chest."

The stewardess said, "FAA regulations forbid you to put your knees on your chest while the safety belt sign is on."

"Why doesn't the FAA have a rule that an airline has to provide room for a passenger's knees?"

"Because the airlines have been deregulated to increase competition. They can now put the rows as close together as they want. The government is no longer concerned with leg room."

My seatmate said, "I'm in the cattle business and the government still has strict

Political Fiddling

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH How come, all of a sudden, are the leaders of North Carolina's political power structure fiddling with the machinery?

Some are pushing for an amendment to the State Constitution so that legislators would serve four years rather than two. Having only recently allowed a governor to seek a second term, some are toying with one six-year term. Having fallen into the habit lately of meeting every year rather than every two years as law provides, the General Assembly is now getting ready to leave after a long session only to return in October and then come back again next winter.

A subtle but significant change is also nearing fruition which figures in these directions. A new legislative office building costing some $12 million to build and equip is nearing completion across the street from the Legislative Building.

It will provide expansive office space for each legislator, complete with a receptionist at the front door to protect the Honorable tucked away in his sanctuary. Added to the maze of corridors and committee rooms already in use will be another maze in another building.

Another Maze
It will be all that much easier for individuals to "get lost" and stay away from undesirable contact with the public, more room for private get-togethers and caucuses. The public will be hard pressed to find what is happening.

More sophisticated computer equipment will be installed, and delicate changes in how the state budget is handled, how state agencies are supervised, and how the governor provides leadership are already taking place.

The net result of this and other activities will be a more isolated and more powerful Legislature. One assemblyman put it neatly with this comment:

BILL NOBLITT

"If we were elected to four-year terms the Governor's gas tax plan would have sailed through because there would have been enough time for people to forget what we did prior to the next election."

"As it is we felt the pressure from home."

Pressure from home is what government should be all about. The more distant and isolated it gets, the less that pressure can be felt, and the more likely decision-makers are to take action which is opposed in the hustings.

Even Gov. Jim Hunt is beginning to take a closer look at what is happening to the balance of powers. He doesn't think that a six-year term for governor is a good

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

The editorial reprinted June 12 from "The Chapel Hill Newspaper," "College Not For All," must outrage anyone who believes America is still a land of opportunity and not a citadel of special privilege. Columnist William Buckley claims an IQ of 110 is needed to profit from a college education, and while 40 percent of college-age Americans attend college, only 25 percent meet that requirement. The editorialist agrees with Buckley, that 37 percent of college students are wasting their time.

The views of Buckley and the editorialist rest on long-discredited myths which continue to enthrall those who hold an elitist view of society. Among those myths are:

1. The Myth of Static Intelligence. Intelligence, like any other skill, can be taught. Differences in the initial capacities of students determine only how long it will take an individual to master a subject.

2. The Myth of Tests. There exists no test for predicting success. The only way of determining a person's abilities is to provide the opportunity for the individual to become what he is capable of becoming. Dedication, enthusiasm, diligence, and perseverance are more important in success than test scores.

3. The Stupid Student Myth. Bright students are at least as prone to waste opportunities as slow students. Because of their limited scope, transcripts do not reveal the true profit of a college education; for that, you must look to individual lives.

4. The Unmotivated Student Myth. Interest in academics, like any other interest, is a by-product of skill and familiarity. Effective teaching arouses interest rather than presupposing it.

5. The Pigeonhole Myth. When Buckley and the editorialist speak of "success" and "productivity," they mean, bluntly, earning enough money to pay taxes. Success means more than amassing wealth. A college education helps any person. Should we really restrict such an education to Buckley's chosen 25 percent?

The vision of Buckley is not a democratic vision. His ideal is of a society in which a wealthy, privileged class alone has access to a system of higher education whose main purpose is to perpetuate that class. Let us rather urge the young to dare to dream of successes beyond any we have known, and let us not fear to provide them the opportunities to earn those successes. College is for all who really want it.

Strength For Today

WILL THE MIRACLE OCCUR?

In 1701 a distinguished Englishman wrote to Samuel Pepys — famous for his diaries — that the nation had never been "so atheistical, false and unsteady, covetous, ungrateful, lewd, luxurious, self-interested, impudently detracting and uncharitable" as at the time when he was writing. And he felt that without "a miraculous undeserved Providence" there would be "a total dissolution of government and constitution."

The miracle occurred two years later. In 1703 John Wesley was born. He was the Church of England minister who did much to bring about a spiritual regeneration in England through his foundation of Methodist Societies. These later formed the basis of the Methodist denomination as we know it today.

So an "undeserved Providence" had come to the English people. Will another John Wesley arise? Let us hope that God will be as good to America in the 20th century as He was to England in the 18th. — Elisha Douglass.

No Invasion Is Expected

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WARSAW, Poland — In the wake of the latest crisis here, a senior governmental official Friday told the West that the Polish regime neither expects a Soviet invasion nor wants the U.S. to warn the Kremlin about keeping hands off Poland.

Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski, a highly influential member of the government, stressed that Poland's "anti-Soviet tendencies are most dangerous." He thereby continued the Polish regime's tightrope act to keep its balance in not knuckling under to Moscow but not provoking direct Soviet intervention.

Rakowski, editor of the Polish newspaper Polityka, is considered a moderate element in the regime frequently used to spell out positions for Western ears. His remarks Friday, in a one-hour session with eight western newsmen, marked the first statement by a senior Polish official since the dramatic session of the Polish Communist Party's Central Committee that ended Wednesday.

That session confronted a threatening letter from Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev that revived Russian invasion jitters in Warsaw. A Soviet-backed move to replace the present moderate leadership with hard-liners determined to crack down on the Solidarity labor movement and the rest of the nation's democratization movement failed when Polish communist leader Stanislaw Kania called the bluff of the hard-liners. Kania asked whether they wanted to risk a vote of confidence of each Politburo member, and the hard-liners declined.

But in his remarks Friday, Rakowski showed that the Polish government did not want to unnecessarily provoke Moscow after defeating the Soviet power play.

"I think the Soviets are the last ones who would want to invade Poland," he said. "But they would not be the last to express their discontent (over what's happening here)."

Asked about President Reagan's admonition for the Soviet Union not to interfere in Poland's affairs, the Polish leader said: "Reagan should not teach anyone what is interfering and what is not." He then commented that the Americans "have done enough of interfering" in the affairs of other nations.

Rakowski reportedly warned about the unacceptability of "anti-communist" or "anti-Soviet" sentiments coming out of the Solidarity movement. He berated the Western correspondents for praising such sentiments but being unable to "see the other side." He noted that the newsmen were not concerned about people "who have to live in this country" as neighbors with the Soviet Union.

He attacked a lack of discipline in the Polish Communist Party and claimed Solidarity leader Lech Walesa no longer has the power to defy the regime. Rakowski contended the regime now can say "no" to Solidarity demands ranging from wage increases to changing street names.

Rakowski also said last year's decision to permit Communist Party members to belong to Solidarity must be reviewed now that some 1 million communists had joined the union. But he denied speculation of a government return to strict press censorship as a crackdown that would please the Kremlin.

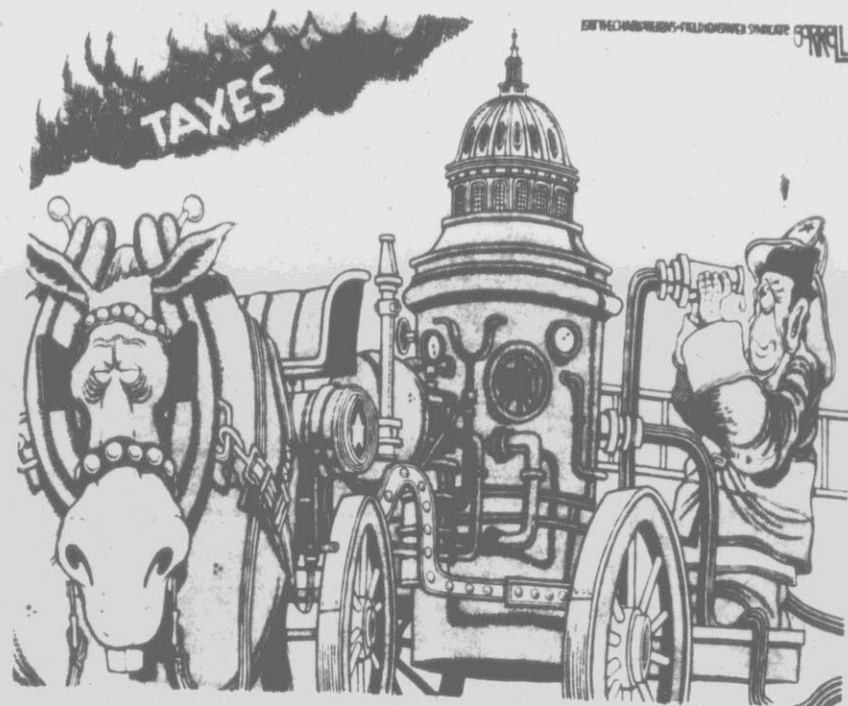

No hard-liner, Rakowski clearly intended his remarks for foreign consumption — both to please Moscow and to warn the West to keep quiet about Poland. His claims that the government now can control Solidarity's activities find little agreement within Poland.

Reagan And His Words

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan strode into the auditorium in the Old Executive Office Building, face displaying a grin, hair-slicked down, the model of confidence.

Then, after an opening statement, he began taking questions, many of them intended to shed light on the administration's foreign policy.

Was Israel's attack on the Iraqi nuclear reactor defensive?

"I can't answer that because, as I say, this review has not been completed."

What about Israel's refusal to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty?

"Well, I haven't given very much thought to that particular question there. ... I'll have to think about that question."

Would an Israeli strike against Syrian missiles violate the terms under which Israel obtained its weapons? "Well, this one's going to be one, I'm afraid, that I can't answer now as to how."

Has Pakistan given assurance that it will not try to build an atomic bomb? "I won't answer the last part of the question."

The session with reporters was Reagan's third news conference as president and his first since early March, before he was shot in an assassination attempt March 30.

It had been planned for several weeks, and his top aides gathered with the president for a lunch-time rehearsal, peppering him with anticipated questions, just two hours before air time. It was a format at which he was adept during his early weeks in office.

But as he stood behind the lectern Tuesday afternoon he stumbled several times reading his opening statement. He got caught up in his own language as he fielded questions that kept him shifting from China to the Middle East to Congress.

There was one inaccuracy — quickly corrected by his press spokesman.

Asked about the Israeli threat to take military action against the Syrian missiles in Lebanon, and whether this would violate the terms under which Israel obtained weapons, Reagan responded: "Well, this one's going to be one, I'm afraid, that I can't answer now as to how — I would hate to see this happen. They are offensive weapons. There's no questions about the direction in which they are aimed. I'm speaking now of the Syrian weapons."

Those weapons, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said within an nour, are defensive, and that's what the president meant to say.

Each question on the Middle East, on China, on Poland and the Soviet Union sought to elicit indications of Reagan's foreign policy — a subject that he has not addressed in a public forum while he and his aides try to keep the focus on the economy.

Could he, Reagan was asked, outline that foreign policy?

He chose not to do that. Instead, he gave an abbreviated global tour to list the areas to which his top State Department officials have been dispatched.

"I'm satisfied that we do have a foreign policy," Reagan said.

The evidence? "I have met with eight heads of state already (and) representatives of nine other nations." Reagan said.

Israeli Challenge Draws Sharp Rebukes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is drawing a sharp rebuke from Israel's friends in Congress for questioning the Jewish state's assertion that its bombing of an Iraqi nuclear reactor was an act of self-defense.

Undersecretary of State Walter J. Stoessel testified at a House hearing Wednesday that the administration does not agree with Israel's declaration that Iraq had decided to develop nuclear weapons.

Several of Israel's House backers attacked Stoessel's assessment and Senate

Democratic Whip Alan Cranston said today said he has received four internal documents from the International Atomic Energy Agency that show the agency's inspectors, who monitor reactors to insure they are not used to build weapons, estimated Iraq could have produced nuclear bombs without being detected by the agency.

Cranston told a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing the documents "contain an estimate that Iraq could have produced enough plutonium each year in the Osirak reactor sufficient for up to three nuclear bombs."

"Furthermore, these IAEA documents indicate that there is a significant possibility, indeed probability, that this plutonium production would not have been detected by the IAEA inspectors."

The argument stretches beyond semantics. U.S. law requires cutting off aid to Israel if its use of American-supplied planes to bomb the reactor June 7 was aggression and not an act of self-defense, as Israel says.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Sunday that he has "absolutely sure information from the best and most reliable sources" that Iraq intended to develop nuclear weapons and use them against Israel.

Although the Reagan administration has not decided whether Israel violated the U.S. aid law, Stoessel told two House subcommittees Wednesday that it does not agree with Begin's statement.

"We have not made any definitive conclusion that they (the Iraqis) were aiming at a weapons program," Stoessel testified.

"So you don't agree with Israel that Iraq was making a nuclear bomb?" Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., asked.

"No, we would not agree with that position by Israel," Stoessel said. "We were not able to make a definitive judgment ourselves which would confirm Israel's position."

"Do you agree that Iraq ultimately sought nuclear weapons?" Hamilton asked.

"No, we have no definitive confirmation of that," Stoessel said.

But he said "we were concerned about the Iraqi nuclear program ... because it would eventually give Iraq the capability to build an atomic weapon."

Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., told Stoessel he was "amazed and appalled" by the administration's assessment. Solarz asked Stoessel if he agreed that Iraq is technically in a state of war against Israel, supports terrorism and has demonstrated its aggressive nature by invading Iran.

"Try not to take the crease out of my pants," I begged him. "I have to speak at a lunch today."

"I'll be careful."

We put our legs across each other's laps. The pilot announced we were third in line for takeoff. The stewardess came down the aisle to check if our safety belts were fastened.

"That's not permitted," she said sternly.

"Where does it say so in the regulations?" my seatmate demanded.

"Look what you've started," she said. "Everyone is putting his legs in the person's lap next to him."

It actually wasn't a bad trip, and when we got to La Guardia we shared a taxi into New York. Fortunately it was a Checker cab and we could both stretch our legs as far as we wanted. The ride put shuttle airline to shame.

a record on which to run a second time. This makes for a positive first term in office whereas previously some governors became lame ducks halfway through their four years.

Studying

As for longer terms for legislators, the governor is still studying that matter. "I'm looking in terms of the balance of power. Especially, are we on a course designed to give us good government, or are we veering off in one way or another."

His approach will be to determine that the balance not "get out of whack," and he will decide later whether to take a firm public stance on the issue and give his support either way.

Change is inevitable in governmental machinery as in other segments of society. The critical thing is to keep close watch on who is devising that change and for what purpose, ultimately.

Change can be an exercise in power; or it can be a better way to make government more responsive to the people.

Grimesland Youth Chosen For Camp

Gwen Nichols of Grimesland has been selected by Pitt-Greene Production Credit to attend the Cooperative Youth Camp organized by the Cooperative Council of N.C.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Nichols, Gwen is a senior at D.H. Conley High School. She will be participating in the Youth Camp at R.J. Peeler FFA Camp at White Lake June 15-19.

Gwen is among more than 70 youth from across North Carolina who are being sponsored by their local cooperative for the camp.

On the camp agenda this week, Gwen will join the others in organizing their own cooperative, election of a board of directors, hiring a general manager, adoption of by-laws and distribution of net savings.

The youth will participate in informal seminars conducted by cooperative managers who will explain marketing, purchasing and service cooperatives.

To address the campers this week from Washington, D.C. will be Kirk Kirkman with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Commissioner of Agriculture James Graham, Secretary of State Thad Eure, Bernard Parker of Nationwide Insurance, C.E. Smith of FCX, Dr. D.L. Stormer of N.C. State University, W.E. Lane of the N.C. Department of Agriculture, Dr. Robert Dahle of N.C. State University and many other prominent agricultural leaders will also participate in the program.

Area Students On Dean's List

Several local students achieved dean's list honors at Duke University during the 1980-81 academic year. Among those on the dean's list were Timothy Casper, Carol Anne Grossnickle, Mark Earl Grossnickle, Christopher Paul Tardif, Barbara Lynn Tucker and Donald Hugh Tucker, all of Greenville; Christopher Paramore of Grimesland; and Patricia Lynn Tenpenny of Ayden.

To make dean's list, students must have a 3.0 average out of a possible 4.0.

Conservationists Balk At EPA Personnel Acts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservation groups say Anne M. Gorsuch's first personnel decisions as head of the Environmental Protection Agency confirm their worst fears about what direction the agency will take: sharply curtailing anti-pollution efforts.

Mrs. Gorsuch, who was an attorney for Mountain Bell Telephone Co. in Denver before being picked for the EPA post, drew heavily from the ranks of corporate attorneys in picking her key policy advisers.

She announced eight appointments Wednesday, and seven of those selected are attorneys representing such clients as General Motors and Exxon.

Environmentalists charged that the people being picked have fought EPA regulations in private practice and now can be expected to lead a push to cut back EPA enforcement activities.

"These are people who have worked for industries that are opposed to what EPA is trying to do," said William Butler of the National Audubon Society.

"We think it is a clear choice of politics over cleanup," said Marchant Wentworth of Environmental Action Inc. "Many enforcement decisions will be made, we fear, by these political appointees who don't share a concern for the environment, but rather want to continue business as usual for polluters."

The environmental groups were particularly unhappy with the selection of Miami attorney Frank A. Shepherd as the new associate administrator for legal counsel and enforcement.

One of Shepherd's clients was General Motors, a leading opponent of the auto emission requirements in the Clean Air Act.

Environmentalists also expressed concern with the choice of John E. Daniel as Mrs. Gorsuch's chief of staff. Daniel, an attorney, last year became a Washington lobbyist for Johns-Manville Corp., a leading manufacturer of asbestos. Before that, Daniel was director of legislative affairs for the American Paper Institute, chief lobbying group for the paper industry.

"What we are seeing at the EPA is what we have seen at other federal agencies, a wholesale infiltration of the regulator by the industries it is supposed to regulate," said Blake Early of the Sierra Club.

Mrs. Gorsuch's other appointments include:

—Robert M. Perry, a Houston attorney for Exxon Co. since 1969, as EPA's general counsel.

Firing Blamed On Flag Decals

SATSOP, Wash. (AP) — Two electricians say they have been fired from their jobs at the Satsop nuclear project for wearing American flag decals on their hard hats.

Lee Grater and Robert Rondeau, both of Everett, said they were fired Wednesday after they refused requests from two Fischbach & Moore Inc. officials and two foremen to remove the flag decals from their company-owned hard hats.

Project manager Ken Bryden said the company would have no comment on the matter. Fischbach & Moore has a $157.8 million contract with the Washington Public Power Supply System for electrical work at Satsop.

About 10 Fischbach electrical workers lost their jobs at Hanford in 1978 after refusing to remove flag decals from their hard hats. Most were reinstated after the company conferred with the union.

The two electricians said many plant workers had purchased 25-cent decals for their hard hats from a shop steward, Ed Arne, who was selling the stickers to raise money for children's prizes at a union picnic.

When Grater and Rondeau refused to remove the decals, they were fired for job misconduct and violation of company rules, the men said.

The two, employed at Satsop since June 1, consider the flag decals a matter of personal pride, said Grater.

Court Approves Strict Limits For Cotton Dust

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of Reagan administration efforts to ease health and safety regulations in the industrial workplace is uncertain in light of Supreme Court approval of strict limits on cotton dust.

By a 5-3 vote Wednesday, the justices rejected a challenge to the cotton dust standards and ruled that federal regulators do not have to satisfy a cost-benefit test before imposing limits on worker exposure to toxic materials.

But the court has not yet decided whether to hear a similar appeal attacking federal imposed limits on the amount of lead workers can be exposed to in the workplace.

Both sets of standards were adopted in 1978 under the same congressional act. And, both were appealed to the Supreme Court on grounds they did not take into account the costs involved in relation to their benefits.

Shortly after the Reagan administration took office 5½ months ago, it ordered all federal agencies to put a freeze on any new regulation until after it is justified with a cost-benefit study.

Cost-benefit analyses also were ordered for federal regulations adopted during the Carter administration but not yet fully implemented. The textile industry says implementing the cotton dust standards could cost it $2.7 billion.

The Labor Department asked the Supreme Court to defer rulings on both the cotton dust and lead cases so that Reagan officials could revise the rules they inherited from the Carter administration. The justices, in a terse footnote in Wednesday's decision, dismissed that suggestion.

Several lawyers involved in the lead dispute said it includes additional question not raised in the cotton dust case. But they would not predict whether the court will simply reject the case on the grounds that the cotton dust decision forced closed further challenges.

"I can't say," said George H. Cohen, who represents the United Steelworkers of America, one of the parties in the lead case, when asked whether he thought the court would hear it.

"I can't imagine them taking another full-scale look at an Occupational Safety and Health Administration standards case now," said another lawyer in the lead dispute, who asked not to be named.

The Supreme Court is expected to take some action

New Chairman Assumes Post

A new chairman and vice-chairman were installed and a new member of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission was welcomed at the annual banquet-tour meeting of the commission Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Lib (J. Knott) Proctor was elected chairman of the commission, with Joe Godette elected vice-chairman. Mrs. Proctor succeeds Roy Carawan, who has resigned from the commission as he will be moving from Greenville at an early date.

The commission's new member, Mrs. Sydney (David) Womack, appointed by the City Council for a three-year term, replaces Mrs. Dorothy (Wallace) Woolees, whose term expires June 30.

A native of Danville, Virginia, Mrs. Womack has lived in Greenville since 1972.

She is a graduate of St. Mary's College and UNC-Chapel Hill. In Greenville, she has been active in several fields, serving as a tutor in the city schools tutoring program and as a member of the Mayor's Advisory Council for the past year. She also chaired the Jarvis Weekday School Committee.

Mrs. Womack is a tennis enthusiast, and is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. She and her husband David are the parents of two children, a son, Brad, and a daughter, Kathryn.

The brief election session followed an outdoor meal and a tour of the city's recreation and park facilities. Among those attending were Mayor Don McGlohon and several members of the City Council.

Plaques of appreciation were presented to outgoing members Roy Carawan and Mrs. Woolees.

Resolution Being Negotiated

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States and Iraq are trying to negotiate a veto-proof U.N. Security Council resolution that would censure Israel for its destruction of an Iraqi nuclear reactor.

The Reagan administration said, meanwhile, it could not support Israel's claim that Iraq was planning to build an atomic bomb at the Baghdad reactor. That assessment drew a sharp rebuke from Israel's friends in Congress.

"There's been some movement, there's been some hope" of negotiating a resolution acceptable to all sides, U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick told reporters Wednesday night after working for two hours on a draft resolution with Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and the ambassadors of Britain and Mexico.

She said she would confer with officials in Washington on the new draft.

Hammadi said there "could be a consensus or there could be a breakdown."

Mrs. Kirkpatrick would not say whether the draft called for sanctions against Israel. U.S. officials have said privately that Washington might support a resolution condemning Israel's June 7 raid and calling for compensation to Iraq, but certainly would veto sanctions or "reparations."

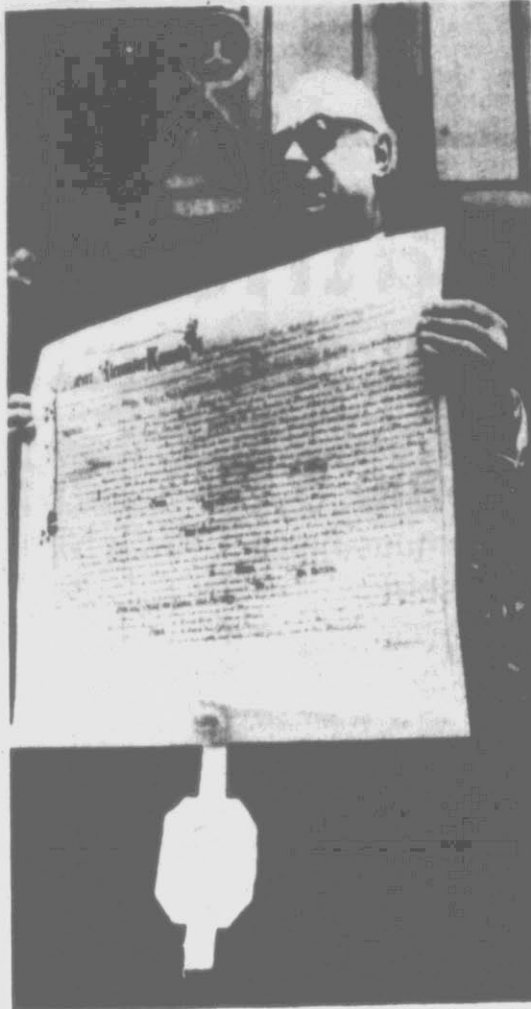

The 15-member council has spent five days debating Iraq's demand that Israel be punished for destroying the Baghdad reactor. Israel claims it bombed the reactor to stall Iraqi plans to build atomic bombs for use against the Jewish state.

It takes nine affirmative council votes to adopt a resolution, but any of the five permanent members — the United States, the Soviet Union, China, France or Britain — can veto it.

In Washington, Undersecretary of State Walter J. Stoessel told a House hearing Wednesday the administration does not agree with Israel's claim that Iraq had decided to develop nuclear weapons.

"We have not made any definitive conclusion that they were aiming at a weapons program," Stoessel testified.

MARRIAGE LICENSE — Dr. D.N.M. Carey, registrar and legal advisor to the archbishop of Canterbury, holds the license for marriage contracting the planned wedding of Britain's Prince Charles and Lady Diana Frances Spencer. The wedding is scheduled July 29 in London.

Eden Man Confesses In Old Murder Case

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — Odell Blackstock has left the Garden of Eden, looking perhaps for a similar paradise within his own conscious. A paradise of peace. Maybe a paradise called prison.

Blackstock, 52, of Eden, startled his family, parole officer and police at Eden and Beckley, W. Va., by confessing to a murder he says he committed 35 years ago. He said he wants to "settle his accounts."

Blackstock walked into the Eden police station Wednesday morning and politely asked to speak to a detective. When told all the detectives were in court, he took a seat and waited for their return.

By 10:15 a.m., Blackstock had confessed in calm detail the murder of a Beckley woman, whose body was found beaten and stabbed. She was last seen alive Jan. 9, 1946.

Although no murder charge has been filed against Blackstock, he was charged with being a fugitive from justice and jailed without bond. He awaits an extradition hearing next week which will likely return him to Beckley. Police there say the murder of Celestia Hilton was never solved.

Blackstock was paroled from an Ohio prison last year and went to live with his mother in the Eden Court Apartments, a housing project formerly known as the Garden of Eden Apartments.

He had served 22 years for the murder of a man in Canton, Ohio, bar.

Quarterly Meeting

Quarterly meeting will be observed at Holly Hill FWB Church beginning Friday at 7:00 p.m. with a quarterly conference. All members should be present.

Holy Communion will be held Saturday at 6:00 p.m.

Sunday at 11:00, the service will be conducted by Bishop R.L. Worrell and the Senior Choir. The 3:00 p.m. service will be held by Bishop W.L. Phillips and his English Chapel FWB Church.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The City of Greenville has been invited by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to submit a full application for Community Development Small Cities Fund in the amount of approximately $3,000,000 over a three year period.

The Greenville City Council will conduct a public hearing to hear citizen's comments and recommendations on how these funds can be used to the greatest benefit of the City.

The meeting will be held Monday, June 29, 1981 at 4:30 P.M. in the City Council Chambers on the Third Floor of City Hall.

Air Controllers Face Legal Action Over Strike Effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is prepared to prosecute air traffic controllers if they carry out their threat to strike next week and ground more than half the nation's commercial air traffic, says Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis.

Negotiations between the government and the controllers broke off Wednesday when union negotiators walked out of informal talks after rejecting the Federal Aviation Administration's wage offer.

Robert Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) said he stands firm on a 7 a.m. Monday strike deadline if an agreement is not reached by midnight Sunday.

Lewis said that while he wants to avoid a strike, the administration is prepared to move quickly in the courts to bring the controllers back to work if necessary. He said he would rule out criminal prosecution of those who strike, even recommending that some controllers be jailed.

"We are not going to tolerate an illegal strike," Lewis told a news conference. By law, controllers are forbidden from striking and a federal court injunction against a walkout is in effect.

A strike would be felt across the economy as travelers and shippers of air freight would find leg delays and no aircraft at all along many routes.

"If a strike occurs it will come at a high cost to the union, seriously inconvenience thousands of air travelers, and it will cause millions of dollars in economic loss to the airlines and to air commerce," Lewis said.

He called the controllers "among the best paid employees of the federal government" and accused them of "breaking faith" with the public with their demands for a minimum $10,000-a-year pay increase and other benefits.

Lewis described the FAA's wage offer as "serious and reasonable" and said it would cost the government $40 million a year, an overall figure he said the administration cannot exceed. The union's wage demands would cost three times that amount and are unjustified, he said.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said he would try to get the two parties together again, but Lewis and union leaders made it clear that a wide gulf remains between the union's demands and the administration's offer.

One knowledgeable source said immense pressure will mount over the next few days to resume the talks and move toward an agreement. But those talks have been described all along as informal, and actual negotiations on a contract proposal have not yet begun.

Congress will determine the actual wage package, but the controllers want the Reagan administration to endorse their demands.

Journeyman controllers now earn from $20,500 to $26,600 at low traffic density airports to a high of $37,800 to nearly $50,000 at high density centers and towers.

A walkout by the controllers would immediately throw the nation's air transport system into chaos. Airline industry officials estimate the cost to the airlines alone at $80 million to $100 million a day and some carriers may be forced to shut down.

No Plan To Halt Anti-Busing Filibuster

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. says a one-man filibuster against an anti-busing amendment may go on intermittently for days, but he plans no immediate effort to halt it.

"I don't plan to do it right away," Baker, R-Tenn., told reporters. "We will probably use up most of the week on this and other bills."

It takes 60 votes to limit debate in the Senate. Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., said there "might be" that many votes to cut off the filibuster by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.

"Support for that type of amendment has been pretty strong in the past," Byrd said.

Weicker conceded that he has no hopes of preventing adoption of the amendment, telling the Senate that "clearly the votes are here."

The amendment sponsored by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would bar Justice Department lawyers from seeking court-ordered busing for school integration. It is proposed as part of a $2.46 billion authorization bill for the department.

Group Asks Ford Recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Ralph Nader group wants the government to reopen its investigation into alleged defects in Ford Motor Co. automatic transmissions and force Ford to recall 16 million automobiles for repairs.

The Center for Auto Safety, in petitioning a U.S. District Court, said fewer than 7 percent of the Ford owners who received warning labels ordered by the government have placed them on their vehicles.

Saying the company's warning program is not working, the center said Wednesday that the federal Traffic Safety Act requires that such a problem be solved by repairing the cars.

Ford early today denied that the warnings were "a flop" or that the transmissions were defective.

The Highway Traffic Safety Administration last summer warned of the safety problem, saying nearly 100 people had been killed and 1,700 injured when transmissions in Ford vehicles abruptly shifted from park to reverse while the car engines were idling. The cars involved were sold from 1970 to 1979.

But then-Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt decided against a recall after Ford agreed last December to send warnings to the automobile owners along with stickers to put on the cars.

Nader, who is associated with the center, said in a petition addressed to the administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration that a survey of 750 vehicles and owners in San Francisco, Washington and Minneapolis showed that only 49 had put the warning labels on their cars.

"The warning labels have simply flopped on this ground alone," Nader's letter said. "Even where the stickers have been placed on the cars by consumers, the accidents have continued to occur because the defect is in the vehicle, not the driver."

Nader asked Administrator Raymond A. Peck Jr. to reopen the investigation into the transmission problem and order a recall of the vehicles to make the repairs, which he said would cost $10 per car.

In its petition to the federal court, the Center for Auto Safety said at least six accidents, three of them involving injuries, have occurred since December because Ford automatic transmissions failed to hold or engage in park.

Ford spokesman Jerry L. Sloan responded that reports of people hurt or killed in Ford cars "may well be just like the other reports the center claims occurred because of this alleged problem... The ones we've been able to check have turned out to be due to faulty reporting for the Center for Auto Safety rather than faulty transmissions."

"There is no defect in the operation nor in the design of Ford automatic transmissions," Sloan said.

Bean Resigns As Astronaut

HOUSTON (AP) — Alan L. Bean says he's through walking on the moon and plans instead to devote himself to painting it.

The 49-year-old Texan, the fourth man to walk on the lunar surface, announced Wednesday that he is retiring after 18 years in the astronaut corps effective June 26.

"I am going to sit in front of my easel and become as fine a painter of moonscapes as I can," Bean said.

He said no other artist has had a first-hand view of space.

NO QUESTIONS — President Reagan points to his ears to let reporters know he cannot hear their questions as he and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige stride across the grounds at the Quantico, Va., Marine Base. The president and Baldrige went horseback riding at the base Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Sister Dies As Car Backs Up Over Her

DEANSBORO, N.Y. (AP) — A 99-year-old woman whose eyesight and hearing "weren't too good" stepped behind a car as her 89-year-old sister was backing it out of their driveway and was crushed to death, authorities say.

Eva R. Peck, 99, and her sister, Clara Adams, were "always together" during the more than 40 years they shared a home, said Barbara Ames, a neighbor with emergency medical training who rushed to the sisters' house after Wednesday's accident and tried to help.

"They were just the sweetest, loveliest, sharpest ladies you could ever meet," Mrs. Ames said.

Other neighbors who ran to the rescue jacked up the car, and ambulance attendants detected a faint heartbeat in Miss Peck, Mrs. Ames said. But she was pronounced dead on arrival at Faxon Hospital in Utica, 10 miles northeast of Deansboro.

"It's hard to believe this all happened," Mrs. Ames said. "We were all looking forward to (Miss Peck's) 100th birthday."

Group Seeks New Controls On Makers Of Baby Formula

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of minority rights groups is asking the Reagan administration, which rejected an international code on infant formula marketing, to strictly regulate the industry in America.

The organizations say millions of dollars and thousands of lives can be saved by promoting breast feeding for babies born to poor people in this country.

The Senate, meanwhile, was voting today on a bipartisan resolution that expressed "concern" about the administration's position on the infant formula issue. The House on Tuesday said it was "dismayed" that the administration opposed the code.

Public Advocates Inc., a San Francisco law firm representing the minority rights coalition, told a House Commerce subcommittee Wednesday that the Food and Drug Administration should force formula makers to state on package labels that "Breast is Best."

The labels should be written in Spanish as well as English, the coalition said.

A spokesman for the baby formula industry said the rights groups were trying to force their ideas on the nation's mothers, regardless of their preference.

The Infant Formula Council of Atlanta, representing the formula makers, also said the rights groups were using outdated and misleading figures in seeking to scare people about the use of infant formula. There has been a sharp decline in infant deaths in the last 10 years, including those born to poorer families, the council said.

Robert C. Gelardi, head of the council, said opponents of formula "appeared to be proposing a campaign of enforced universal breast feeding regardless of the mother's or the physician's choice."

Angela Blackwell of Public Advocates said promotion of breast feeding in poorer communities could save nearly $400 million a year in public health costs.

GM Recalls '81 Models

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. says it is recalling about 9,600 1981 Oldsmobiles and Cadillacs for inspection of the suspension that could loosen and affect the cars' steering.

There have been no reports of accidents or injuries resulting from the problem, GM said Wednesday.

The problem was discovered when an inspection of the tool used to tighten the nuts in the factory showed the tool was not working properly, said GM spokesman Harold Jackson.

He said GM tests showed if one of the nuts loosened enough to allow a bolt to fall out, it could cause the car to pull to one side or be difficult to steer on tight curves.

Certain 1981 Oldsmobile Toronados and Buick Rivas and Cadillac Eldorados and Seattles are affected. The cars will be inspected by dealers, and the nuts tightened if necessary at no charge to the owners, GM said.

Class On Gun Safety Canceled

HOUSTON (AP) — Only 11 elementary-school kids signed up for a summer course on gun safety and how to shoot, so the class has been canceled for this year.
 "We needed 18 to make the class," Kenneth Royal, principal of Clear Lake Elementary School, said Wednesday. He said he was "really surprised" by the public reaction and media interest in the course.

Redistricting Runs Into Legislative Stagnation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two weeks before the traditional end-of-June adjournment date, the General Assembly is barely closer to a congressional redistricting plan than it was when the session began in January.
 House and Senate redistricting committees have gone their separate ways, with the issue likely to be settled in a conference committee — a star chamber where legislative leaders can exert their maximum influence in a small group.

A major factor in all the delays, legislators agree, is the high-stakes survival struggle underway by Democratic legislators who are loyal to their particular congressman.

Also apparently a factor is the sometimes bitter bickering between legislative redistricting leaders that has erupted.

Within the next week, the Senate probably will consider a redistricting plan drawn by Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, and approved by the Senate committee. The map would not change most western counties but would create a controversial Research Triangle Park district consisting of Wake, Durham and Orange counties.

In another controversial area, it would rearrange the 6th District in a fashion that has upset Democrats who want to keep Democratic voter strength high so that ousted Congressman Richardson Preyer could attempt a comeback. Under Royall's map the 6th would include Davidson, Guilford and Randolph counties as compared to the current district consisting of Rockingham, Guilford and Alamance counties. Meanwhile, the House committee this week rejected the only map proposed by its subcommittee, sending the panel back to the beginning of its work. An earlier subcommittee was disbanded when the committee didn't like its map, either.

The second subcommittee was scheduled to meet today to begin anew. Rejection of its first map was taken by most to mean a rejection of the idea of breaking county lines in order to achieve equal populations in the districts.

That map would have split up five counties, including populous Wake and Durham counties. The committee chairman, Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, has pushed the idea of splitting counties, and even refused to appoint to the subcommittee any legislator who didn't like the idea. As a result, the subcommittee has no Republican members.

Committee members argued bitterly over the procedure for voting on maps. At one point, Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, charged that the committee "seems to be operated by a more authoritarian plan than others." Huskins replied that "this is not a usual committee. This is a committee that meets once every 10 years."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned downward today, faced with a new rise in interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 3.23 Wednesday, dropped back 6.56 to 1,000.00 by noontime.

Losers took a 7.5 lead over gainers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market bounced back from an early decline Wednesday when the depressed oil stocks attracted some buyers.

But the rally faded as open-market interest rates, which began to climb Wednesday, continued to rise today.

A few banks have recently lowered their prime lending rates to 19 or 19 1/2 percent. But others have been slow to follow suit, testifying to their doubts about prospects for a sustained drop in borrowing costs.

Today New York's Chemical Bank raised its broker loan rate from 19 to 20 percent.

Most of the oils turned weak again today. Exxon lost 1/4 to 34 1/4; Texaco was down 1/4 at 34 1/4, and Standard Oil of Indiana dropped 1/4 to 52 1/4.

One exception was Texas Oil & Gas, which rose 1 1/4 to 31 1/4. The company estimated record earnings for the three months ended May 31 and raised its quarterly dividend from 4 1/2 to 6 cents a share.

Ecology Study To Be Offered

Pitt County Schools will offer a program of study of North Carolina coastal ecology at Kitty Hawk the week of June 22-28. The program will be open to students in grades 7-9 in Greenville and Pitt County Schools who demonstrate a strong interest in science. The cost for the program is $125.

An art program will also be held at Wellcome Middle School. This program will be open to students in grades 5-8. Cost will be $35 per student.

Interested students or parents should contact Betsy Leech, Pitt County Schools, 752-6106, by Friday.

Condition Still 'Guarded'

Greenville Utilities Commission Director Charles Horne, hospitalized last Friday after suffering chest pains, was moved from Pitt Memorial's critical care unit to a post-intensive care area Tuesday.

A hospital spokesman said this morning however, that his condition is "still guarded."

"He's doing as well as can be expected," acting GUC director Malcolm Green said. Although "every sign so far is encouraging... you just don't know."

"We hope he will have a full recovery."

Local Entry Wins First Place

Emily Wilkerson participated in the Tarboro Horse Show held last Saturday. Riding her horse "Little Rebel Lady," she won first place in Working Hunter Under Saddle, Working Hunter Hack and Hunt Seat Equitation. She also placed third in Hunters Over Fences and fourth in Hunter Pleasure.

The show was sponsored by the Coastal Plains Horse Show Circuit and the Tarboro Saddle Club.

Special Service

There will be a special Father's Day service Saturday at 8:00 p.m. sponsored by New Deliverance F.W.B. Church. The service will be held at the Grifton Chapel F.W.B. Church in Grifton.

The guest speaker for the service will be Elder George Blair of College Park, Md., Associate Minister of the First National Deliverance Center, Washington, D.C. Elder Blair is married to the former Elaine Griffith of Greenville.

Music will be provided by the Chosen Generation of Kinston, Evangelist Dianne Harris of Greenville, and Shirley Blount of Ayden.

Pastor J.L. Wilson invites the public, especially fathers, to attend this service.

Pirates Snap Back, Top Tar Heels, 7-3

PIKEVILLE — East Carolina's Pirates, after dropping three straight games, got back on the winning side of the ledger last night, gaining a 7-3 victory over the University of North Carolina.

The game, a home contest for East Carolina, was played at Charles B. Aycock High School near Pikeville, as a benefit game.

Rick Ramey, making only his second start for the Pirates, picked up his first win, going the first five innings. Charlie Smith and Robbie Harper each hurled an inning of relief. Ramey gave up only four hits, but two of them were homers, and accounted for all three of the Tar Heel runs. He walked one and struck out three. Smith and Harper did not allow a hit by the Tar Heels.

East Carolina also produced some home run power, banging out two, and getting eight hits along the way. In their previous outing last Saturday, East Carolina got only three hits in a pair of games against UNC-Wilmington.

Mike Sorrell got things started for the Pirates, hitting a lead-off homer to put ECU into a 1-0 lead.

That proved short-lived, however, as Carolina came back in the second inning to score all three of its runs. Pete Kumeiga got the Carolina rally going by leading off with a home run, tying it up. John Marshall reached on a fielder's choice and Jeff Hubbard completed the Tar Heel scoring with another homer, making it 3-1. Todd Wilkinson got the only other Carolina hit earlier in the inning, going down on Marshall's grounder.

East Carolina's hurlers handcuffed the Tar Heels after that, as they left only three men standing the rest of the night.

The Pirates put on a rally of their own in the fourth inning, scoring four times to take the lead for good, 5-3.

Charlie Smith walked and Jack Curtings doubled. After David Wells came on to run for Curtings, Charlie Waynick singled, driving in Smith. A wild pitch then allowed Wells to score. Mark Shank followed with a single to drive in Waynick, and Shank stole up. He scored when Sorrell reached on an error.

The Bucs added single insurance runs in the fifth and sixth frames. The fifth inning run came off a solo homer by Curtings.

The sixth saw Robert Wells get hit by a pitch and Shank walk. A double steal attempt saw Wells caught at third, while Shank pulled in safely at second. He scored from there on Sorrell's single.

Sorrell and Curtings each had two hits to lead the Pirates. Wilkinson had two for the Tar Heels.

The win boosted the Pirate record to 3-3 on the season, while North Carolina dipped to 3-5.

East Carolina travels to Raleigh today to face N.C. State in a 5:30 p.m. game. The Pirates return home on Friday night, hosting Campbell in a 7:30 p.m. game at Harrington Field.

Wilson Rallies In 9th, Then Tops Pitt County In 13th Inning, 10-9

WILSON — Al Hardison rushed across the plate on a passed ball in the bottom of the 13th inning to give Wilson a 10-9 American Legion baseball victory over Pitt County last night.

The defeat, the second in a row for the Pitt team, still kept the team in first place, as second place Rocky Mount also bowed, falling to Snow Hill, 6-4.

Gordon Douglas took the loss after having come on in relief of Tyrone Gay in the ninth inning. It was that frame which saw both teams blow chances. Pitt rallied to six runs in that inning, but turned right around and allow Wilson to rally for five to knot it at 9-9.

Wilson took the initial lead in the first inning, Randy Deans reached on an error and Charles Simpson walked.

Donald Williams reached on a fielder's choice and Chris Bradberry singled to score Deans.

Wilson added two more in the second. Joel Patterson singled and Andy Jones reached on an error. Don Doster walked, leading the bases, and Deans reached on a fielder's choice, bringing in Patterson. Simpson singled to score Jones.

Pitt County finally got on the scoreboard in the sixth inning. Douglas reached on an error and scored when Billy Kittrell doubled.

Wilson added another run in the seventh. Williams reached on an error and Bradberry singled. An error on the play let Williams come around.

Greenville then came up with two in the eighth. Roger Williams singled and moved up on an error on the play.

Sammy Hodges singled him to third and the two worked a double steal, with Williams scoring. Gay then reached on an error, allowing Hodges to score.

Finally, in the ninth, Pitt rallied once more, scoring six runs to take a 9-4 lead. Douglas reached on an error as did Williams. Hodges then singled in Douglas. Troy Hudson singled to load the bases. Gay reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Williams. Mark Douglas followed with a triple, driving in Hodges, Hudson and Gay. Douglas then scored when Mitch Brann reached on an error.

But Pitt couldn't hold the lead. Wilson rallied for five in its half of the frame, tying it at 9-9. Simpson opened with a single and Williams got a hit.

Bradberry singled in Simpson, and with two away, Joey Page walked. Randy Prince then singled in Williams and Bradberry. Page scored when Doster reached on an error, and a passed ball let Prince score the tying run.

It stayed that way through the next three innings. But in the bottom of the 13th, Wilson got the game-ender. Hardison led off with a single and moved up on an error on the play. He was sacrificed to third, and scored on a passed ball to win the contest.

Mark Douglas, Hodges and Gay each had three hits to lead Pitt County, while Bradberry had four, Williams had three, and Doster, Simpson and Patterson each had two for Wilson.

Greenville returns to action tonight, traveling to Snow Hill, seeking to bounce back on the winning side of the ledger.

Fans, Baseball World Welcome Sale Of Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — The sale of the Chicago Cubs' National League baseball team to the Tribune Co. has won widespread enthusiastic endorsement from both fans and the baseball world alike.

As one fan said gleefully, "Now the Cubs can join the 20th century."

After 65 mostly lackluster years of Wrigley family ownership, it was generally hoped the Tribune Co., which is privately owned and is the parent company of the Chicago Tribune, would spend the money needed for better players and to improve the Cubs' stagnant farm system.

The sale sparked debate over whether lights would be installed in Wrigley Field — a move resisted by the Wrigley family in deference to neighborhood residents' need for peace and quiet, but urged by players over the years.

Freda Craven, a fan, said, "The sale was needed since Wrigley wasn't going to spend the money on the team that was necessary to make them a contender. I just know the Tribune will go out and buy more expensive players."

"There would be no strike now if not more money," said Elmer Nichols of suburban Park Ridge. "And there's no reason the Tribune would get into this if they didn't want to spend the dollars it takes. It's a business first, a game second."

And Ann Snyder said, "I don't know much about baseball, but I know enough to know Bill Wrigley didn't know enough."

Jim Brosnan, a former Cub pitcher and author of "The Long Season", noted: "The first thing new management should do is get rid of all the people they're going to inherit and start with an entirely new organization. The old one didn't work."

One-time Cub batboy Walter Jacobson, now WBBM-TV anchorman, was "so thrilled" by the sale that "I'm going to apply for another term as batboy." Glenn Beckert, the Cubs' star second basemen when the club almost won the Eastern Division crown in 1969, said, "Hopefully (the sale) will give them enough finances to start competing in the free-agent draft."

Said retired relief pitcher Moe Drabowsky, "Terrific! I would hope with the Tribune the financial resources would be there to play the game by today's rules."

Catcher Barry Foote, traded by the Cubs to the New York Yankees last month, said lights ought to be a priority item. "The next thing they should do is put in lights; having played there for over two years, I can see that now."

Aaction Movers 4

Pepsi-Cola 2
Aaction Movers rallied for two runs in the third, then added two in the fourth to overcome an early 2-0 Pepsi-Cola lead and take a 4-2 victory in the Babe Ruth League last night.

Pepsi gained the initial lead in the second inning, scoring a single run. They added another in the third for a 2-0 margin.

But in the bottom of the third, Aaction came up with two runs, tying the score.

The fourth saw Aaction pick up two more for the win. Mike Walsh led off with a walk and Maury Harris singled. Both were sacrificed up, and Kevin Lang walked, loading the bases. Billy Godley singled in Walsh, and Toby Fischer singled Harris over with the final run.

Ted Stanley had two hits for Pepsi. No one else on either team had more than one hit.

Wachovia Bank 5

Planters Bank 3
Mark Gatlin tripled in the winning run in the sixth inning, as Wachovia Bank gained a 5-3 victory over Planters Bank last night in the Babe Ruth League.

Wachovia spotted Planters a 1-0 lead in the top of the first, but came back to score three times in its half of the frame for a 3-1 lead.

It stayed that way until the bottom of the sixth, when Wachovia added two more and they eventually proved to be the difference. Marvin Barrett led off with a single and Gatlin tripled into the left field corner to score Barrett with the fourth Wachovia run. Gatlin scored when Tom Moore added another triple with the insurance run.

Planters tried to rally in the seventh, scoring twice before Wachovia could put a halt to the uprising.

Barrett led the Wachovia hitting with two, while Gary Scott had two hits to lead Planters.

Little League

Optimists 8

Union Carbide 7

Heath Clark scored on a sacrifice by Jim Hester in the sixth inning to allow the Optimists to nip Union Carbide, 8-7, in a North State Little League game played yesterday.

The Optimists gained the early lead in the game by scoring two in the top of the first. Union Carbide rallied in the bottom of the inning, however, and tied it up with two of their own. UC then took the lead with one in the second, and added two more in the third on a Morris Johnson homer.

The Optimists got back into it in the fourth, scoring once, then pushed over four in the fifth. Union Carbide, however, rallied once more with two in the bottom of the fifth to tie it at 7-7.

But in the sixth, the Optimists pushed over the winning run. Clark led off the frame, reaching on an error. He took second on a passed ball and stole third. He scored when Hester's one-out sacrifice bunt was errored.

Union Carbide got the tying run back on base, but failed to get him past first.

Jeff Mahoney and Charles Wilkerson each had two hits for the Optimists, while Billy Turcotte, Kevin Fisher, Johnson and Greg Davis each had two for Union Carbide.

First Federal 10

Pepsi-Cola 7

First Federal stayed close in the race for the Tar Heel League title with a 10-7 victory over Pepsi-Cola yesterday.

First Federal took the lead in the second, scoring once. Pepsi came back to push over four in the top of the third, however.

But First Federal put the game away with seven runs in the bottom of the third. Andy Eatman walked and John Bolen reached on an error. Rodney Harris then cracked a three-run homer.

Brian Joyner kept the rally going with a walk and Frankie Pugh reached on a fielder's choice. Stacey Best singled in Joyner, and Richard Lewis reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Pugh. An error let Best score, and Bohlen again reached on an error, scoring Lewis.

First Federal added one more in the fourth and one in the fifth. Pepsi picked up its other three in the fourth.

Harris and Best each had two hits for First Federal, while Greg Hallow and Clay Young each had a pair for Pepsi.

Basketball Brings Williams Out Of Basement Toward The NBA

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — It was not so very long ago that Melvin Williams was a self-proclaimed bad boy. Drugs and drinks were more important to him in those days than hopes and hoops.

Williams remembers those days, carries them with him. Memories remain of a junior year when he practiced with both D.H. Conley's junior varsity and varsity basketball teams, but played only on the JV team.

Memories remain of his lone year of varsity basketball in 1975 when he started on a team that finished 26-2, won the Eastern Carolina Conference crown, the district playoffs and made it to the state semifinals before losing to the eventual state champion, West Brunswick, by a point.

Those days are now the past. Williams, who was born and raised in Winterville, is now more concerned with the present — and the future, a future he hopes includes the National Basketball Association.

Williams, who returned to Pitt County earlier this month to see his parents and help D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh with his basketball camp which is going on all week, just completed his second season with the Canadian Athletes-in-Action team.

Later this month he will fly to Oregon for a tryout with the Portland Trailblazers and a chance at the NBA.

"They contacted me and asked me if I'd like to try out," Williams said earlier this week in an interview. "The president of the Trailblazers and my coach are good friends and he helped me get the tryout."

"They're only looking for certain players. I think right now they're looking for a small forward who's quick and can get up and down the court, play defense and rebound."

Williams believes he fits the bill. If his performance in Canada and, before that, at Kings College in Raleigh and (S.C.) Central Wesleyan, is any indication, he may be right.

In his first season in Canada, Williams was the team's leading rebounder and third leading scorer. This past season, he was the second leading scorer at 21.0 points a game and the top rebounder again.

Prior to that, Williams was among the scoring and rebounding leaders at Kings College when the team made it to the national tournament four years ago. After two years at the Raleigh business school, Williams transferred to Central Wesleyan, located barely a full-court pass from Clemson.

At Wesleyan, Williams was the team's leading rebounder both seasons and was named most valuable player in the District 6 playoffs in his second year at the school.

Not bad for someone who played only one year of high school varsity basketball. Not bad for someone who had few contacts coming out of high school and was not headed anywhere until Marsh told the Kings College coach he would have to take Williams if he wanted two other Conley stars, Clennell Streeter and Gary Mobley.

The coach agreed, the deal was made and Williams was on his way. After graduating from Wesleyan with a business degree his coach sent his statistics to Canada. A few days before tryouts were to begin, he was invited to the try out for the team.

"It was suppose to be a five-day tryout, but I hurt my arm Tuesday," Williams said. "There were 22 trying out. Only two made it."

One was Williams. This year a similar tryout was held. One of those making the club was former N.C. State star Clyde "The Glide" Austin.

The Canadians played 69 games this past season, winning 59 and losing 10. Among the teams they played were Oregon State, Colorado and Boston College. The talent, Williams said, is on par with many of the better college teams in the United States.

"We've got some pretty good players up there," Williams said. "Clyde 'The Glide' was a second round pick by Philadelphia. And it's more physical. It's a lot like international basketball."

"It took me a just about a year to adjust to that. But you've got to take it. But I got used to it and I don't mind playing that way now."

In fact, he is happy to be playing basketball, period. "I wouldn't have believed it if you had told me I'd be playing ball now," Williams said. "I always dreamed of it. But every young guy has dreamed of playing."

"I didn't think I had a chance after high school. But I've been pretty lucky. I guess I've really been God-blessed."

Strike Reaches Landmark Today: Surpasses 1972 In Games Lost

By HAL BOCK

AP Sports Writer

The major league baseball players strike reaches a landmark today when 11 more games will be cancelled, pushing to 87 the number of contests wiped out this month. That's one more than the number lost in 1972, when players struck for 13 days at the start of the season in a battle over pension contributions.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association since 1966, had counseled against that first-ever league-wide walkout.

"I told them I didn't think we were ready to strike," Miller said. "I pointed out that we were a small organization without great resources and that they would have to get by without pay until the thing was settled. I told them not to expect any support from the fans or the press. I told them that once we were in a strike, it would be tough to pull out."

The vote by the union's executive board was 47-0 with one abstention and the first general strike in baseball history began.

The walkout followed three months of deadlocked negotiations between Miller and management representative John Gaherin. On Jan. 12, 1972, the players submitted their original demand, asking for a 25 percent increase in pension benefits and more money to cover increased medical costs. The demand was rejected.

By February the owners — there were 24 clubs then — came up with $375,000 for increased medical benefits. The players responded by calling for the pension program to be improved over a four-year period or a one-year contract providing an immediate 17 percent increase in pension payments.

The four-year plan called for pension fund increases from the $5.4 million in 1971 to $7.2 million by 1975. The one-year proposal would have carried a $1 million price tag in increased contributions in 1972.

The owners rejected both proposals.

During the first week in March, the players began voting on strike authorization. Management responded by saying they would cover the $490,000 new estimate for medical premiums but refused any more money for the pension plan.

On March 22, the owners voted unanimously to stand firm. Their position was stated most emphatically by August Busch, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, who declared, "We won't give another damn cent."

On March 29, the players lowered their pension demands to $800,000, and the next day Miller announced that the players had voted strike authorization by a 663-10 margin.

The owners broke off talks and on April 1, the strike began with training camps closing down.

The season openers were scheduled for April 5-6. The owners met in Chicago April 4 and decided to make no new offer.

Peace progress was slow. On April 7, the players offered to return to work if the owners would submit to binding arbitration. The suggestion was rejected. On April 9, representatives of both sides met in Washington with Curtis Counts, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

The next day the owners offered to use $400,000 of surplus funds for use in the pension program but insisted that cancelled games be made up without pay. The players rejected that idea.

Then, on April 11, management made a new offer, using $500,000 in surplus funds for the pension plan and agreeing to write off the cancelled games. The players agreed to "token punishment," and on April 13 the strike ended.

Both sides, of course, claimed victory.

"Clearly, the players have triumphed in something that few people thought they could or would do," Miller said. "They have stood together."

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said he was delighted to have the strike over.

"I hope we've all learned a lesson," he said. "I will work with people in baseball for procedures to prevent this sort of thing in the future. Nobody wants it again."

One year later, Miller and the owners reached a three-year contract agreement and baseball enjoyed labor peace until 1976. By then, though, the free agent gates had swung open because of the rulings by arbitrator Peter Seitz on the Catfish Hunter case in 1974 and the Dave McNally-Andy Messersmith cases in 1975.

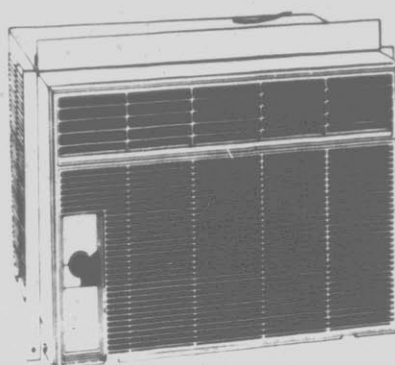

With negotiations stalled, the clubs kept spring training camps closed until March 18, 1976, when Commissioner Kuhn stepped in and ordered them opened.

Miller, furious with management, declared baseball owners unnecessary and suggested half seriously that players might form their own independent leagues.

Negotiations continued until midseason when a contract was reached during the All-Star break in Philadelphia.

No New Movement In Strike Talks

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

And on the seventh day, the negotiators rested.

"I made the suggestion to both sides that they should leave here, rethink their positions, come back here Friday (at 3 p.m., EDT) prepared to go forward, address the issue and come to an agreement and conclusion," said Ken Moffett, who played shuttle diplomacy Wednesday, attempting to make peace between the striking players and the baseball owners.

No new proposals were offered during a two-hour session Wednesday, in which the two sides shot the breeze in separate rooms, never talking face-to-face. "If we did get together, an already deadlocked situation would get into a worse situation," Moffett said.

The mediator, who has described these talks as "the most bizarre negotiations I've been involved in during 22 years as a mediator," was not optimistic that the one-day recess would inspire any changes at the bargaining table.

After all, there was a three-day recess before Tuesday's session, and when the parties got back together they discussed the progress made over the past 18 months — in just two hours. That's less than most games, and the games are played to a conclusion.

You remember baseball games, those nine-inning affairs unencumbered by the clock, which help a nation while away the lazy days and nights of summer.

If those games were being played today, they would have included Philadelphia and Houston in a rematch of last year's scintillating National League playoff and 10 other games, raising the casualty count to 87, one more than the total of missed games in the 13-day season-opening strike in 1972.

But instead of the Astrodome in Houston, Bob Boone of Philadelphia plans to play a round of golf and then take in a round of golf at the U.S. Open in Ardmore, Pa., near his home.

Boone, who has emerged as the main spokesman for the players' five-man negotiating team, said people missed the point when they expressed financial concern for only the players near the minimum salary level of $32,500. "The high-salary players have obligations and house payments to make, too," he said.

One player expressed what appeared to be a minority viewpoint, welcoming a season-long strike.

"I don't really care if it doesn't end at all," said pitcher Ron Davis of the New York Yankees. "If they want to take the whole year to settle this thing, let 'em."

"I've got enough money saved up to last me two years. I don't have any big expenses to worry about, so who cares?"

"I want to just sit here and have fun watching my son grow up. I want to go fishing and have picnics. My friends are always coming to see me (pitch) on weekends. Now, I can go see them."

And in Baltimore, the report on Manager Earl Weaver's summer harvest was onions, radishes and lettuce — picked; zucchini, yellow squash and peas — ready, and green beans — "starting to form."

If there is to be a settlement and a baseball season by the time those beans are picked, then Moffett feels both sides have to give a little. The posture of the negotiators indictated the opposing viewpoints had hardened on the sole issue of the quality and form of compensation for free agents.

"We feel it's necessary for ownership to come forward with something," Boone, who was joined at the negotiating table by Mark Belanger of Baltimore, Tom Seaver of Cincinnati, Steve Rogers of Montreal, Rusty Staub of the New York Mets and Don Fehr, counsel for the Major League Baseball Players Association.

"We've addressed their problem of equity (for lost free agents) in several different ways and in several different proposals, but they rejected every one."

The latest proposal for giving teams losing free agents a replacement player came a week ago. The players suggested each team would contribute four players from its 40-man roster into a pool, from which teams losing free agents can pick a replacement.

American League President Lee MacPhail, a member of the owners' negotiating unit, the Player Relations Committee, called that proposal "a step backward. The pro players they're offering are meaningless and we would get less than the amateur draft choice we currently get," he said.

There have been press reports that a minority of owners, particularly Ed Chiles of Texas and Edward Bennett Williams of Baltimore, was dissatisfied with the current tact of the Player Relations Committee, chaired by director Ray Grebey.

"We have 26 owners, and I've learned that nobody agrees on everything," Grebey said in an interview on ESPN Wednesday night. "We have some owners, a singular one or two, and in any multi-employer group you'll find a dissenting few. But we have more unity and more strength than we've ever had before."

That view was supported by baseball's executive council — composed of MacPhail, National League President Chub Feeney and eight owners — which is counterproductive to the resolution of the current collective bargaining issues, reports of owner dissatisfaction with the Player Relations Committee and totally disassociate themselves from any such view.

Ewing Kauffman, owner of the Kansas City Royals and a member of the executive council, said: "If the owners back down now, we're dead."

Well, not dead, but we'd be in terrible shape when we have to negotiate our next contract with the players.

"The owners have a history in our negotiations with the players of never standing firm," he said in an interview with sports editor Joe McGuff in the Kansas City Star. "We've given and we've given and now we've come to the point where we can't give any more."

Jack's Favorite? He's Not Picking Anybody

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Johnny Miller picks Bruce Lietzke. Lietzke picks Tom Watson. Watson picks Watson if he drives well. Jack Nicklaus? He chooses not to choose.

"I can't pick anybody, including myself," Nicklaus said.

It's not difficult to come up with a list of golfers whose game would seem to fit the snug, elegant Merion Golf Club, where 156 qualifiers tee off today in the 81st United States Open championship.

"About 20 people could win it," said Watson, naming Tom Kite, Lee Trevino, Raymond Floyd, Severiano Ballesteros, Tom Kite, John Mahaffey and Lanny Wadkins among them.

Lietzke, a three-time winner this year, is Miller's choice.

"He has the game to win the Open," Miller said. "He's been sort of overlooked, but he hits the greens in regulation, he's been playing well. I like his chances."

Miller isn't as high on Miller. His right shoulder has been hurting, the residue of a friendly arm-wrestling tussle 2½ years ago.

"If I do well it will be a surprise. I'm just going to go out and have some fun and smell the roses."

Lietzke says he's not putting well and dismisses his chances. Instead he picks Watson, "not because he's the best player, but because they've eliminated the driver in this tournament. That's Tom's biggest enemy."

Watson basically agrees. "Short hitters have the advantage," said Watson, whose victories this year include the Masters, the Atlanta Classic and the New Orleans Open. "You have to play it like Hogan did, below the hole."

Ben Hogan won here in 1950. "My chances are good if I put the ball in the fairway," Watson said.

The driver is almost superfluous at Merion. It's needed on only three or four holes.

The Open is one of two majors that has eluded Watson, and a win over the 6,544-yard L-shaped course would satisfy his passion.

"I don't have a fixation or a phobia about winning the Open, but it's my No. 1 priority," Watson said.

And then there is Nicklaus, like Watson and Trevino always a force to consider.

He's played well recently. He finished second to Watson at the Masters. He's the defending champion. And, well, he's Nicklaus.

He's won four Opens. No one has ever won five. He likes Merion and over the years he's played it well.

As an amateur in 1960, he shot an incredible 269, beating par by 11 strokes.

To consider that feat, one needs only to know that par of 280 has never been broken in three previous Opens here.

Trevino said his ailing back is feeling better, that he played five straight days last week and that he's ready.

It was 1971 when Trevino and Nicklaus tied at the end of regulation, then played an 18-hole playoff which Trevino something we can live with." Rogers said he was glad the negotiating was over and glad that he wound up with the Saints, although he said he would have signed with Montreal, if Mills had thought that was best.

"I'd just like to thank the people in Montreal for the hospitality they showed me. I'm sorry things didn't work out for them, but I really wanted to play in the NFL."

Mecom said he never thought Rogers would wind up at Montreal.

"I know a bit about what goes on there, and a bit about the man making the offer," Mecom said. "It would be something like a dog chasing a car. If he caught it, he couldn't drive it."

Rogers said he had few solid plans for using his big new salary.

"Invest it, probably," he said.

Gasoline Tax Bill Wins First Test In State House By Wide Margin

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A gasoline-tax increase bill including most of what Gov. Jim Hunt has asked for goes before the state House a final time today after winning tentative approval Wednesday by a margin so wide it even surprised Hunt's top aides.

"We got two more votes than we thought we would," beamed Zeb Alley, Hunt's chief legislative lobbyist, as another aide to the governor stuck a cigar in Alley's pocket following the victory. "It was a great vote."

The House version of the tax bill, which would raise state motor fuels tax 2½ cents a gallon, won its first test on the House floor by a 70-49 vote. If given final House approval today, the tax package will head back to the Senate for consideration of a string of House amendments.

The vote for the tax package came after a 2½ hour debate in which opponents charged that the Department of Transportation, which would use the tax increase for highway construction and maintenance, was riddled with waste and abuses.

The House's 24 Republicans — 20 percent of the House membership — voted in a bloc against the bill. But opponents were led in their floor fight by a Democrat, Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, who charged that the issue was a "highway fund shell game."

"Now you see it — now you don't," he said. "Which shell is the pea under? Do you know for what all those millions of dollars are going to be spent?"

"No, you don't. If you ask them, you'll only be told a bunch of gibberish," he added. "It's not right. It's not fair. And it's not what I was elected to do."

But the tax was defended by its House floor manager, Rep. Alan Barbee, D-Nash, who was also co-chairman of a joint select committee that issued a report highly critical of the department.

"Go home and tell the people you have provided for continuing ferry service, for four-lane roads to our ports and for the resurfacing and maintenance of our highways, and be proud of what you have done," he said.

The tax increase approved by the House is one-quarter of a cent smaller than the amount originally asked for by Hunt. The reduction was made in the House Finance Committee last week and accepted on the House floor.

In addition to raising the tax on gasoline, the House bill would raise the cost of drivers licenses from $4 to $10, raise other highway fees and transfer to the highway program some $59 million in sales taxes already being collected on auto parts and accessories. That money goes to the state's general tax fund, and the House added a provision requiring that money from additional new taxes must be found for the general fund before the transfers take place.

If the full $59 million is made up through other taxes the gas-tax package would produce an estimated $165 million in new revenue for the highway program in the year beginning July 1. The figure would rise to an estimated $175 million the following year.

Hunt has proposed making up the $59 million through higher taxes on alcoholic beverages and new taxes on mining and vacation homes. But the administration has said it is prepared to accept less than it asked for, meaning the total size of the highway-finance package could be diminished.

The House added another amendment changing the way the transfer could be accomplished. Instead of requiring that merchants make yearly estimates of the amount of sales taxes they collected that were attributable to auto parts, as Hunt proposed, the House version would allow the Department of Revenue to make that estimate yearly, beginning with the $59 million figure next year.

The House version does not include the small personal income tax rebate first proposed by Hunt as a way to partly offset the impact of higher gas taxes. The rebate was strongly backed by Senate leaders but was deleted in the House committee.

Hunt praised the House majority for "their courage, their vision and their commitment to progress" and did not openly object to the House changes.

"The important thing, however, is that the House-passed version will generate sufficient revenues to finance our basic transportation needs," Hunt said.

Senate leaders have not yet said whether they will go along with all the House amendments.

The House defeated moves to reduce the increase to 2 cents and to 2½ cents, to delay the issue until the expected fall special session, and to add a provision repealing the 1980 General Assembly's decision to permit the department to shift to a controversial new accounting method.

The motion by Rep. Graham Bell, D-Gaston, to delete the so-called cash-flow accounting system — which allows the department to begin highway projects before money has been appropriated to cover the entire cost of the project — was killed on a 69-50 vote.

Hunt's tax package has been opposed vigorously by several groups, including one backed by the Congressional Club, a conservative organization built around GOP Sen. Jesse Helms. Several Democrats spoke on the House floor against those groups. One, Rep. Bob Jones, D-Rutherford, voted, against the tax increase but denounced the opponents' advertisements as "slandorous" and "deplorable."

Producer Plans New 3-D Movie

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina film producer plans to be on top of the latest resurgence of three-dimensional movies. And while some things have changed, throw-away 3-D glasses will be back.

Earl Owensby of Shelby and a California-based manufacturer of 3-D systems have signed an agreement that will include a $5 million expansion of Owensby's EO Studio.

Next month, Owensby and Future Dimensions Optics of Burbank, Calif. will begin production of an attack-dog film called "Rottweiler." And in September, a California producer is expected to make a 3-D film at the EO studio.

Owensby said his association with Future Dimensions makes his studio the first in the nation fully equipped to produce 3-D movies with the latest system. And with a $30 million commitment planned over the next three years, he said this was the biggest motion picture announcement ever made in North Carolina.

Owensby says shooting a 3-D movie with the latest technology requires a longer schedule and an additional $100,000.

Tar Heel Coast Probably To Be Free From Sharks

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians are probably safe from a return of the high number of sharks that infested the state's coastal waters last year, according to a shark specialist at the Institute of Marine Sciences in Morehead City.

Dr. Frank J. Schwartz, professor of zoology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill-run institute said the increase in shark population off Bogue Banks last August resulted from an unusual combination of factors.

He said the chances of those factors recurring were fairly remote. And he pointed out that even if sharks come close to shore, the odds of being bitten are less than the chances of being struck by lightning or dying in a boating accident.

Schwartz explained the causes of last year's infestation.

"First we had an extreme heat wave in July that raised water temperatures at the coast above 85 degrees," he said. "Then there were months of prevailing southwest winds that pushed this super-heated water against Shackleford and Bogue banks while the hook from Cape Lookout kept it from being carried up the coast."

Schwartz said the warm water drove many of the fish that sharks feed on to seek deeper, cooler water. For a few days, he said, sharks gathered near the shore looking for food, but left when their quest proved fruitless.

A shark alert was issued for some 70 miles of coast from Bogue Inlet to Cedar Island, but many people ignored the warnings and went in the water. One 10-year-old Greensboro girl was bitten on the leg by a shark at Ocean Isle and had to be hospitalized. That was the fourth documented shark attack in North Carolina waters since 1935.

Schwartz said people who see a shark near them in the water should move away from it as calmly as possible. He said thrashing around may attract the shark.

He also warned against swimming with an open wound, because sharks are able to detect even a small amount of blood and follow it to its source.

Schwartz said 36 of the 400 known species of shark inhabit North Carolina's coastal waters, many living at depths of less than 50 feet.

Meanwhile, marine biologist Charles Moore of Charleston, S.C., says shark steaks are a tasty food people ought to be sinking their jaws into.

As food, Moore said sharks are increasing in popularity because of their low price.

"Most people will be pleasantly surprised by their taste," he said.

South Carolina has a large variety of sharks off its coast ranging from the small spiny dogfish that feed primarily on shellfish to the mako, which are often caught by anglers fishing off piers.

Moore said smaller sharks make better-tasting food than the larger ones, although there is no danger in eating the larger species.

He said the spiny dogfish and hammerhead sharks are particularly good. "They taste like pork chops," he said.

Most people prepare sharks in the same manner they would other fish. They can be smoked, grilled, barbecued or broiled and topped with lemon juice or butter and garlic, he said.

One particularly good-tasting shark species is the mako, which Moore said has a taste similar to that of a swordfish, a seafood delicacy.

Two Students Sentenced

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two men arrested in a massive undercover drug operation at Fayetteville and Cumberland County high schools were given active sentences Wednesday.

Raymond Tyler, 20, of Fayetteville, was convicted on one count of possession with intent to sell and deliver methaqualone and one count of selling and delivery of methaqualone in an incident involving an undercover agent on Jan. 27.

Stephen Arnold, 18, a former E.E. Smith Senior High School student, pleaded guilty to a felony charge of possession with intent to sell and deliver marijuana.

Tyler, a 1979 Douglas Byrd High School graduate, was sentenced to three years in prison as a "committed youthful offender."

Under the special sentence handed down by Superior Court Judge Giles Clark, Tyler is immediately eligible for parole or work or study release.

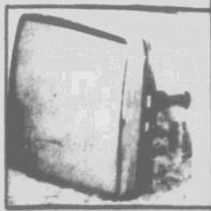

A second three-year sentence was suspended for three years and Tyler is to pay a $250 fine and court costs. He will also be on probation for three years after his release from prison.

Gunman Kills Three Before He Is Killed

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A 37-year-old man who seized seven hostages in a bank and said he "wanted to be executed" was shot dead by police after killing three people, including his mother, officials said. Seven were wounded.

Police said the three-hour siege of terror ended Wednesday when William Bernard Griffin stepped into the view of a police sharpshooter after fatally wounding one of the hostages in the doorway of the Security Trust Co.

The shooting began shortly before noon when Griffin, following an apparent family dispute, took a shotgun to his mother's house in a normally quiet neighborhood on the city's west side. He killed her and a wallpaper-hanger working at the house and seriously wounded his stepfather, police said.

Griffin left the house and headed toward the bank two blocks away, "walking fast with a rifle over his shoulder," said Scott Daitz, 27, of Greece, N.Y., who was delivering potato chips to a bar across the street from the bank.

"It looked like something wasn't right — you could just sense it — like he had something to do," Daitz said. The gunman entered the bank, and then "a whole bunch of people came running out of the bank in all directions — just scattering," Daitz said.

Daitz's partner, Billy Winkler, ran across the street "to help get them out of there," Daitz said, but then a motorcycle policeman arrived, and "a shower of shots began."

Police said Griffin fired about 80 shots while holding seven people hostage. Four civilians and two police officers outside the bank were injured.

Norm Palermo, who was working in a building two doors away, said "everybody thought it was a bank robbery until the bullets started flying. Cars were just abandoned. People were stopping and running." Four nearby schools kept students inside.

Attempts to negotiate with the man failed, and a special-weapons team was called. Police Chief Delmar Leach said the gunman had the bank manager read a message over the telephone to law officers.

"The message said he wanted to be executed," Leach said. "He would give police a half-hour before he would start shooting the hostages."

Daitz said he stayed behind his truck for about an hour,

HOSTAGE FLEES ... One of several hostages held by a gunman at the Security Trust Co. Bank in Rochester, N.Y., runs to safety Wednesday past a bullet-marked glass. She escaped uninjured. (AP Laserphoto) then "felt wind go by my pants like an airgun. I looked down and there was a hole in my pants. After that, I ran." After the hostages had been inside the bank about two hours, two employees escaped out a door, followed by a third — Margaret O. Moore, 30, of Rochester — who was shot and fatally wounded by the gunman, police said.

Authorities said that at that point the gunman came into their line of fire, and they shot him.

At St. Mary's Hospital, Officer Ronald Baker, 32, was listed in satisfactory condition after surgery for a chest wound. Curtis Dandridge, 67, was listed in critical condition.

Angela Harvey, 18, of Rochester was in satisfactory condition with a gunshot wound in the face. Robert Hudson, 39, of Spencerport, another police officer, was discharged after being treated for a gunshot wound on the hand.

At Strong Memorial, 56-year-old James Corcoran was in satisfactory condition with a shoulder wound. Amos Anderson, 53, the gunman's stepfather, was in guarded condition with an abdominal wound. Both are from Rochester.

Officials at Highland Hospital said John Beers, 20, of Rochester, was treated for a gunshot wound and released.

"CHARGE IT!"

Soviet TV Has Animal Show In Favorite Spot

By TOM JORY

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's called "The World of Animals" and, says ABC News correspondent Anne Garrels, it's a "light-hearted, non-political half-hour." That's important, because it's the most popular program on Soviet television, an otherwise ideologically inclined tool of the state.

"Soviet television plays a role far different from television in the United States," Ms. Garrels says at the outset of a report on TV in the Soviet Union, a segment of ABC's "20-20" newsmagazine to be broadcast Thursday evening, 10-11 EDT.

Soviet TV is broadcast 8 a.m.-midnight each day, Ms. Garrels says, "and like Americans, Soviets are glued to their TV sets."

Ms. Garrels and Karen Burnes, a producer for ABC News, analyzed a week of Soviet TV for the "20-20" report. They examined a variety of programs, including "The World of Animals," which Ms. Garrels says is a realistic portrayal of animal life, and "Traveler's Club," another show popular with Soviet viewers.

And they looked at news and sports broadcasts, movies and other features and children's programs — 50 hours in all, taped by the correspondent.

Clips from many of the programs they watched are included in the "20-20" segment.

Soviet viewers, they concluded, are fed a healthy dose of "socialist realism," which Ms. Garrels says translates as "unreal realism." They learn from television, she says, only what their leaders want them to know.

"I was quite stunned by it," says Ms. Burnes. "I was prepared for a one-sided view of life, but I didn't think it would be so blatantly propagandistic."

Not only is Soviet society portrayed in a positive and optimistic light, she says, but the United States is attacked "hour after hour as an imperialist country, portrayed in a re-markedly negative way."

One brief clip from a Soviet news program on the recent killings in Atlanta underscores the point. The correspondent's report is accompanied by music clearly intended to suggest failure and doom.

Ms. Garrels notes in the report that when President Reagan was shot in March, American television pre-empted regular programming to cover the attempted assassination. In contrast, she says, Soviet viewers learned of the death of Premier Alexei Kosygin three days after it happened.

"No information is given about those events in the world which could present the Soviet Union in some sort of unfavorable light, which would darken the life of the Soviet people, and would cause doubt about the correctness of the party's policy," dissident historian Roy Medvedev tells Ms. Garrels in an interview in Moscow.

"The other thing that struck me," Ms. Burnes says, "is how much of Soviet television appears to have been produced for children, though of course it is not. There is so much teaching."

There is very little that doesn't carry some message," the producer says. "Even something like 'The World of Animals' is so non-political," she says, "that there is a message in that."

At least one movie a week is set during World War II — The Great Patriotic War, as the Soviets call it, Ms. Garrels says.

Production quality is not high, Ms. Burnes says, and it's clear Soviet producers have benefited from color equipment left in Moscow by NBC when the United States pulled out of the Olympic Games last year.

"They colorize everything," she says, "and it's obvious they're using the NBC equipment to do it."

Hollywood Expects More Job Problems

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Film and TV officials are forecasting a "catastrophic" labor shutdown for the second summer in a row as writers continue a walkout and a directors' strike looms.

Studio craftsmen — from painters and plasterers to caterers — have been laid off by the thousands, pushing unemployment in behind-the-scenes film and TV unions to 50 percent, officials said Tuesday.

Many of the unemployed still have not recovered from the 10-week actors and 24-week musicians strikes last year.

The strike by the Writers Guild of America has been going on since April 11. Directors are threatening to walk off the job when their contract expires July 1.

"It will be terrible," Mac St. John, spokesman for the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, said of the probable directors' strike. "Some of these people (union members) haven't worked since the actors' strike."

St. John said a survey conducted last week by the Hollywood Film Council labor group found 50 percent of its 30,000 members out of work. He said those figures do not include actors or writers.

MCA-Universal Chairman Lew Wasserman has said a directors' walkout would have a "catastrophic impact," and lead to the closing of every major studio. He said Universal has lost "a substantial sum of money" during the writers' strike. He estimated 22,000 to 24,000 film-TV workers have been idled by the walkout.

MGM already has confirmed an unspecified number of staff layoffs because of the writers' strike.

Negotiations between major producers and writers broke off indefinitely Sunday after an impasse was reached on residuals for made-for-TV programs.

No new writers' talks were scheduled, and little substantive progress has been reported in the producers-directors' talks.

New Show Seeks Help From Experienced Crew

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's "Saturday Night Live" flourished in the mid-1970s with a repertory cast composed of people from improvisational theater. As performers like Chevy Chase, Bill Murray, John Belushi and Gilda Radner left the show, it seemed they took the "SNL" vitality with them.

The repertory troupe was rebuilt for the 1980-81 season with performers schooled largely in stand-up comedy, and the show was a flop from the start. "SNL" was restructured a second time, with help from Toronto's Second City improvisational troupe, but the writers' strike in Hollywood intervened before the show could begin to reclaim lost ground.

"I think they've realized that to do the kinds of things they want, you've got to have experience working with other people on stage, working off of other people," says Catherine O'Hara, a member of the Second City cast in Toronto since 1974.

"You develop a shorthand after a while," says Joe Flaherty, who performed with Chicago's Second City troupe before moving on to Toronto to help create the company there. "Bad ideas are usually tossed out a little quicker — you know how to deal with one another on things like that."

"And working with others helps develop characters, on their own or in relation to other people," Flaherty says. "In stand-up, the characters are supposed to stand alone, and that technique just doesn't work with others on the stage."

Miss O'Hara, Flaherty and Eugene Levy, another Second City performer, were in town for the afternoon, to appear on NBC's "Tomorrow" show. They're among the stars of NBC's "Network 90" late-night comedy program, broadcast after Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" each Friday.

All seven members of the "Network 90" repertory cast — John Candy, Andrea Martin, Rick Moranis and Dave Thomas are the others — are from Toronto's Second City company. Andrew Alexander, another Second City veteran, is executive producer of the NBC series.

"Network 90" is produced in Canada, and is not affected by the writers' strike. Flaherty, Levy and Miss O'Hara were members of the original "SCTV" repertory company when the syndicated TV series made its debut in 1977.

"There is a training that everybody in Second City goes through," says Levy, whose career includes parts in stage performances of "Godspell," "The Owl and the Pussycat" and "Love Times Four," "and we all come out thinking alike in several respects."

"It's a training for coming up with stuff that is always trying to be intelligent and bright, and never playing down to the audience."

"One thing you have to remember," says Flaherty, "is that improv fails most of the time. You're doing quite well if you get 40 or 50 percent funny, though there often are lines within a piece that are good."

Though the initial stages of the creative process may be similar, the segments for the TV show are produced with more attention to organizing and scripting, and are taped without an audience.

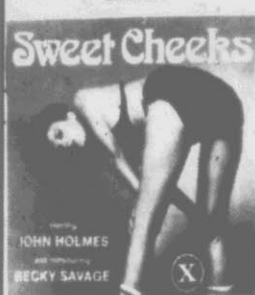

"In Second City," says Flaherty, "you've got the stage and the wall in back that don't change, and you have to imagine costumes and props. For TV, that becomes visually boring."

"Stage and television, in my mind, don't mix," Levy says, expanding on the distingtion. "We've tried to create scenes that worked on the stage before an audience."

New Musical 'El Bravo' Has Raw Energy, But Little Else

By JAY SHARBUTT

AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK (AP) — I may be wrong. But I don't think a new Latino musical, "El Bravo," is destined for the same success as "Grease," even though it is.

—Choreographed by Patricia Birch and produced by Ken Weissman, part of the team that gave you "Grease."

—Playing downtown at the Entermedia, where the hit Fifties rock 'n' roll musical opened in 1972, then moved uptown to become Broadway's longest-running musical, with 3,388 performances logged.

Sure, lightning might strike twice in the same place. But "El Bravo," a tepid fantasy about a Puerto Rican Robin Hood in a New York barrio, doesn't even seem a candidate for a one-walt bolt.

Bowing Tuesday, it exudes raw energy but little else. The first act runs forever. Only one song, a lovely piece called "Hey Chico," is worth hearing. There's a dire shortage of wit throughout.

And the whole book is terminally lame. By Jose Fernandez and Thom Schiera, with music by John Clifton, it has the kind of plot and stock characters you usually find in an NBC sitcom.

In it, Pepe, a handsome lad from San Juan, comes to New York planning to (a) buy a small restaurant; (b) bring Mariana, his true love, to New York when he's established, and (c) marry her and live happily ever after.

Alas, he runs afoul of Honest John, a cad who controls all barrio business and bilks the residents. Pepe gives him his life savings for a "restaurant" that turns out to be a cuchifrito cart.

Whereupon Pepe, in true Robin Hood style, forms a band of merry men. All don masks and steal from Honest John, the money going to aid his victims. Pepe becomes a local hero, El Bravo.

Meanwhile in San Juan, the fair Mariana wonders why she's not heard from her beau. With her fat Aunt Rosa, she flies to New York to see what gives, to check up on him without telling him.

She dons a red wig, sunglasses and poses as Chiquita Bonita, famed Mexican movie star. By gum, Pepe says she looks "very familiar." And he guiltily finds himself quite hot for her.

As he tells the jolly local padre at confession, "this Mexican hot tamale" has turned "my blood to chili peppers" (no kidding, he actually says that).

Many predictable things ensue. Our heroine winds up in mortal jeopardy, in a Rubie Goldberg-like device with which Honest John will tickle her to death unless she reveals El Bravo's whereabouts.

Our hero slips in and out of the clutches of the cad, who's posted a $349.95 reward for his capture. The cad's dim-bulb quintet of corrupt cops keeps chasing El Bravo & Co., to no avail.

Big, medium-sized and little production numbers occur with clocklike regularity, in the street, Honest John's parlor and even at a mystifying talent contest featuring three hookers. After a surprise appearance by the local congressman, love triumphs, evil loses.

But there's little inventiveness to all this, just constant action, with 23 players dashing about, leaping and singing on Tom Lynch's two-level set of cartoon-like building fronts.

As El Bravo, Aurelio Padron is pleasant but unremarkable. Ray De Mattis as the villain is evil but also forgettable. But there is a strong performance by Yamil Borges, who as Mariana displays a lovely singing voice that deserves better material.

Of the supporting players, Michael Jeter as a cop and Charlie Serrano as one of El Bravo's band are particularly good. But all hands are in a losing cause, ditto Miss Birch, who directed as well as choreographed this wayward caper.

Roll Call Votes

WASHINGTON — Here is how North Carolina members of Congress were re-recorded on major roll call votes June 4-10:

House

BUSING — The House adopted, 265 for and 122 against, an amendment to prevent the Justice Department from pursuing court actions that propose busing to desegregate schools. The measure was attached to a FY 1982 funding bill (HR3462) later sent to the Senate, which is expected to clear the busing language for President Reagan's anticipated signature. Last year, former President Carter vetoed a similar prohibition.

Sponsor Jim Collins, R-Texas, said "we see increasing minority populations in the public schools and white flight to the point where busing for racial purposes is actually causing segregation."

Opponent Don Edwards, D-Calif., said "if we adopt this amendment we will be setting back the cause of desegregation in this country by 25 years."

Members voting "yea" wanted to prevent the Justice Department from advocating busing to integrate schools.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Charles Whitley, D-2, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Eugene Johnston, R-6, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Rep. Charles Rose, D-7, voted "nay."

Rep. James Martin, R-9, did not vote.

enate only 120 slots at the expense of deeper cuts elsewhere in Commerce. The vote occurred during debate on a FY 1981 funding bill (HR3512) later cleared by Congress and sent to the House.

Sponsor Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said it would be wrong to block needed personnel cuts at "one of the biggest bureaucracies in town, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration."

Opponent Neal Smith, D-Iowa, said major job cuts at NOAA would hurt aquaculture programs and a project to combat fruit frost.

Members voting "yea" supported cutting NOAA staffing this year by as much as 3.6 percent.

Fountain, Johnston, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Whitley, Andrews, Rose and Hefner voted "nay."

Jones, Neal and Martin did not vote.

FOOD STAMPS — The Senate passed, 77 for and 17 against, a bill reducing the $12.3 billion a year food stamp program by $1.5 billion in fiscal 1982 and tightening eligibility to deny stamps to about one million of the present 11 million recipients. The bill (S1007) was sent to the House.

Virtually all senators voting "nay" thought the bill did not go far enough to tighten the program.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

BUYING FOOD STAMPS — The Senate rejected, 33 for and 66 against, an amendment to require some food stamp recipients to pay for the coupons. The blind, disabled and very poor would continue to get the stamps free, but about 55 percent of present recipients would have to buy them at a cost well below the stamps' purchasing power.

Sponsor Steven Symms, R-Idaho, said lifting of the purchase requirement in 1977 was "an open invitation to the public to come in and get the free food stamps and now the program has gotten out of hand."

Opponent Robert Dole, R-Kans., said requiring purchase would add administrative overhead and deny stamps to nearly three million needed who cannot afford to buy them.

Senates voting "yea" wanted the majority of food stamp recipients to start paying for them.

East and Helms voted "yea."

INDEXING FOOD STAMPS — By a vote of 41 for and 53 against, the Senate rejected a plan to let spending for food stamps rise if inflation and unemployment increase faster than anticipated by the congressional budget blueprint.

Supporter Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the amendment seeks an "honest cap formula — not a liberal one, not a conservative one, not a Republican one, not a Democratic one, but a realistic one."

NERVE GAS — By a vote of 135 for and 220 against, the House rejected an attempt to prevent the Army from producing nerve gas. Left intact by the vote is ongoing preparation of the Pine Bluff, Ark., arsenal for production of binary nerve gas. The vote came during debate on a military construction bill (HR3455) later sent to the Senate.

Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., who voted "yea," called the move toward nerve gas production an example of the "unjustified militaristic hysteria which seems to have dominated the Congress following the international events of the last year-and-a-half."

Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., said nerve gas weaponry "would give us a creditable deterrent against what I believe is a very serious Soviet-Warsaw Pact threat."

Members voting "yea" oppose Pentagon plans to add binary nerve gas to the U.S. arsenal.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

Johnston did not vote.

PERSONNEL CUTS — The House adopted, 195 for and 178 against, an amendment to permit deeper personnel cuts at the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. This put the House behind the administration request that 435 of NOAA's 12,670 fulltime positions be eliminated this fiscal year. The Senate had wanted to elimi-
