100TH YEAR NO. 146 GREENVILLE, N.C. FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 19, 1981 20 PAGES TODAY PRICE 25 CENTS

AT FARMERS MARKET GRAND OPENING TODAY . . . was N.C. Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham, extreme right, who spoke to the 8 a.m. crowd about the importance of crop diversification in eastern North Carolina. "People will grow diversified crops if they can make a profit," he said. "Farmers' markets like the one here support this type of endeavor." With Graham at the grand opening are, left to right, Sam McLawhorn, Greenville Mayor Don McGlohon, and Howard Wilson. (Reflector Photo By Larry Zicherman)

Senate Moves To Busing Vote

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lowell Weicker is agreeing to end his filibuster and let the Senate vote on a far-reaching amendment that would prohibit the Justice Department from seeking court-ordered busing to integrate schools.

"I am going to lose," Weicker, R-Conn., told his colleagues Thursday as he plowed through the third day of his lonely filibuster against the amendment.

By evening, he had yielded to Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr.'s urgings to end the filibuster and let the issue go to a vote.

Baker allotted Weicker one more hour to wrap up his arguments today, gave another hour to the amendment's sponsor, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and another to the Democrats. Then the vote will be taken.

The Helms amendment prohibits the Justice Department from pursuing "any sort of action to require directly or indirectly the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest the student's home." The only exception allowed would be the busing of mentally or physically handicapped children to special education classes.

Weicker launched his attack by offering his own amendment to dilute the effect of the Helms version. Weicker proposed adding a sentence saying that "nothing in this act shall be interpreted to limit in any manner the Department of Justice in enforcing the Constitution of the United States."

The Helms amendment appeared certain to pass. The House already has approved a similar amendment.

Congress last year passed the same sort of restriction but then-President Carter vetoed it, calling it "an unwarranted encroachment on executive authority" and a shackle on the government's responsibility to protect civil rights.

President Reagan, though he has not announced whether he would sign or veto the amendment, has expressed strong opposition to busing.

When he was asked shortly before taking office what he would do about such legislation, he didn't answer directly but said, "I think there are better ways to achieve the end than continuing the busing program."

Should the legislation be signed, a court test of its constitutionality probably would result.

Graham Opens Market, Calls For Diversification

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Celebrating its new location and the most successful season in its three-year history, the Pitt County Farmer's Market held a grand opening this morning with N.C. Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham highlighting the ceremony.

"People will grow diversified crops if they can make a profit," Graham told the 8 a.m. crowd on Reade Circle. "I think it's high time we face reality — we need to diversify — but to keep these folks who do in business they need profit."

Graham commented on what he called "the move to destroy the peanut program as we know it," saying "if they do away with it, and Secretary Block has indicated to me that there are plans to do so, we can then look very closely at the tobacco program.

"This move to do away with our programs reemphasizes the need for diversification in eastern North Carolina and reaffirms the committment to local farmers' markets like the one here," said the commissioner.

Graham added that North Carolina must strive to preserve its agricultural land.

"There are people among agriculture and outside agriculture that take it for granted," he said, "but those people will find a person can't learn to read or do what they have to do on an empty stomach."

At a breakfast later this morning Graham reaffirmed his opposition to the proposed N.C. tobacco tax. "I don't support this at all but I feel that in a few years we will have a tobacco tax. When the vote becomes as close as 70-49, it's time to watch.

"Every year we face another type of adversity with the tobacco program and this year is no exception," added the commissioner.

Speaking on the Pitt County Farmers Market, Graham said, "In years ahead you will have an ideal market here — working together, rural and urban — you can do anything."

Graham emphasized that the world is dependent on this nation's agricultural products, and commented that North Carolina eases a large part of this dependence.

"I am encouraged about the 1981 crops," he noted. "If we continue as we are without any more excess water and without too much heat, we will have the most productive year since 1978.

"We need that badly," he added.

Arnold Parris, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Agribusiness Committee, speaking at the breakfast, called the farmer's market "a cooperative effort of the people of Pitt County," and commended extension agent Sam Uzzell, the chamber of commerce and the Downtown Greenville Association for their roles in its establishment.

"We now need to look down the road to owning a piece of land and a building," he noted. "Other places have done this, and I feel we can also.

Rainfall Is Benefit To Area Crops

Recent rains have benefitted most crops, cooled temperatures and given kids, and some adults puddles to play in.

Sam Uzzell, Pitt County Agricultural Extension agent said the rains have helped all crops, but especially corn. "Corn is at the time now that it must have rain," he commented.

Driving down the road recently, some may have noticed the leaves of corn rolling up, which according to Uzzell "is the first sign corn is really under drought stress."

"These rains have saved the corn crop," said Uzzell. He continued "If we continue to pick up an inch of rain per week the corn crop will be just about perfect."

Tobacco leaves have begun to fill out as the result of the rains and cucumbers which were also in dire need of water benefitted. "The rains will extend the cucumber harvest and help livestock a great deal as well," Uzzell added.

However, a little too much rain fell in the Pactolus area. Pactolus farmer Lindsey Briley of the Briley Brothers Farm said that there was some flooding in their fields which could cause corn to drown and turn yellow, consequently producing nothing. Briley reported that just over five inches of rain was received in his area from Wednesday and Thursday precipitation.

However, Uzzell noted that rain received by the rest of the county was absolutely necessary.

Greenville measured 1.08 inches of rain fall and the river level for today was recorded at 3.7 feet, no change from yesterday.

Temperatures Wednesday ranged from 87 degrees Fahrenheit to 70 degrees At 8 a.m. today it was 76 degrees.

JOHN F. MINGES

THOMAS BENNETT

Three Trustees Named

The UNC Board of Governors recently named three new members and reappointed a fourth member to the Board of Trustees at East Carolina University.

Meeting in Chapel Hill, the governing board appointed Thomas A. Bennett of Greenville, Dr. Roy D. Flood of Murfreesboro, and Mrs. Katie Morgan of Lillington to four-year terms on the Board of Trustees. John F. Minges of Greenville was reappointed to his second four-year tenure.

All of the appointments are effective July 1 and expire in 1985. Swearing-in ceremonies, however, will actually take place at the board's August meeting here.

Two members of the ECU board, Dr. Andrew Best of Greenville and Mrs. Mebane Burgwyn of Jackson, have completed two consecutive four-year terms and were not eligible for reappointment.

Every two years, the governor names two people to the boards of trustees at member institutions of the UNC system. Those gubernatorial selections are expected to be made on or before July 1, according to UNC general administration guidelines.

Bennett, a Beaufort County native, is currently regional vice president of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., serving as executive of the bank's Eastern Region. He joined Wachovia in 1963 in Morehead City and moved to Greenville in 1979 as senior vice president with duties as assistant regional executive.

He is a 1959 graduate of ECU, earning his degree in business administration. He also graduated from the executive program at UNC-Chapel Hill in March of 1979.

Bennett has been a member of the board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, serving as treasurer and chairman of the Finance Committee. He recently resigned the hospital board after receiving the ECU appointment.

He is married to the former Carolyn Williams of Scottsburg, Ind. and they have a son and a daughter.

Flood, a physician in Murfreesboro, is a native of Cofield. He graduated from Calvin Scott Brown High School, N.C. A&T State University with a B.S. degree (Cum Laude) in 1961, and Howard University College of Medicine in 1965. He served his internship at the United States Public Health Service Hospital.

The physician has practiced medicine in Murfreesboro since 1968 and has served as president or Roanoke Chowan Medical Center, P.A.

Flood, who is black, was appointed chief of staff at Roanoke Chowan Hospital in Ahoskie in 1978. He has served as a member of the North Carolina Council on Sickle Cell Syndrome, the North Carolina Textbook Commission, and as a member of the Board of Trustees of North Carolina National Bank in Murfreesboro.

Mrs. Morgan, wife of former U.S. Senator Robert Morgan, is currently associated with the Harnett County Board of Education. Born in Roseboro, she taught high school English for 15 years and was a high school supervisor for eight years and counselor for three years.

The new board member is a graduate of ECU, having received B.S. and M.A. degrees here, majoring in English, supervision and administration. Mrs. Morgan served as senior class president at East Carolina and was listed in the "Who's Who Among Students" publication while at the university.

She is currently serving on the state and national boards of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and is honorary chairman of the state organization. She is a member of the Governor's Council on Persons with Disabilities.

Mrs. Morgan and the former senator have two daughters.

Minges, president of Pepsi-Bola Bottling Co. here, is a Greenville native and graduated Cum Laude from Darlington School in Rome, Ga. before attending Davidson College and East Carolina.

Minges was first elected assistant manager of Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. of New Bern in 1950 and elected president of Pepsi in Greenville in 1960. He has also served as vice president and secretary of Pepsi-Cola in Kinston and as trust officer of the company in New Bern.

He was recognized in 1979 as "Outstanding Citizen of the Year" at the annual meeting of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

U.S. Schedules Sharp Rebuke For Israelies

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States, traditionally Israel's staunchest ally, is planning its harshest-ever U.N. rebuke to the Jewish state with a vote strongly condemning its destruction of the Iraqi nuclear reactor.

U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick was to vote today for a U.N. Security Council resolution that was expected to win unanimous approval from the 15 council members.

Its key provision said the council "strongly condemns the military attack by Israel as a clear violation of the United Nations Charter and the norms of international conduct."

A spokesman for Mrs. Kirkpatrick's office, after checking the record books, told reporters it was the first time the United States had supported a resolution in the council "strongly" condemning Israel, though it had backed condemnations eight times since 1953 and censure of Israel 15 times.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi agreed on the wording of the resolution after the Arabs dropped demands for economic and military sanctions against the Israelis. The United States opposed sanctions during the five days of council debate and was expected to veto any resolution calling for them.

Instead of sanctions, the resolution urged Israel to pay damages to Iraq, saying the Arab state was "entitled to appropriate redress for the destruction it has suffered, responsibility for which has been acknowledged by Israel."

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum, who is expected to reject the U.N. condemnation today, has already told the council his government will not pay Iraq "a brass farthing."

Another provision calls on Israel, which has never signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, to open its own nuclear facilities to the inspectors of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna.

In a rare show of U.S. agreement with a hardline, pro-Soviet Arab state, Mrs. Kirkpatrick drafted the compromise condemnation in closed-door negotiations Wednesday and Thursday with the Iraqi foreign minister.

Iraq agreed to forego the demand for sanctions in the hope that U.S. endorsement of the condemnation clause would drive a wedge between Israel and its closest ally, veteran U.N. observers said.

Israel had said it sent its bombers to destroy the reactor outside Baghdad on June 7 because it had learned the Iraqis were about to use it to make atomic bombs for use against the Jewish state.

Mount St. Helens May Erupt Again

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — State authorities closed the resticted zones around Mount St. Helens as scientists, unable to get a peek at the volcano because of bad weather, predicted an eruption was likely soon.

Scientists said they were expecting a non-explosive, dome-building eruption, but did not entirely rule out a more explosive blast. Other volcanoes have erupted explosively during dome-building activity.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Vancouver said early today that earthquake readings and changes in ground tilt around the volcano since 5 p.m. Thursday "suggest that renewed dome growth may have begun."

Earlier such non-violent eruptions have built a huge dome of hardened lava on the crater floor. Scientists expected the current activity would only add to the dome.

"The thing we want to stress is that we could be having a (non-explosive eruption) right now," said Kathy Cashman, a USGS geologist. "It's not a question of 'When will it go?' It might be 'going' right now."

"It may be we're actually having extrusion occurring now," University of Washington geophysics spokesman A.B. Adams said early today. "We do have small events that may be steam and ash emissions."

However, clouds and darkness covered the 8,400-foot volcano in southwestern Washington and there was no visual confirmation of the seismograph readings.

National Weather Service radar in Portland, Oge., about 50 miles southwest of the mountain, did not detect any ash plume, Adams said.

Stormy weather is forecast through the weekend.

ANTIQUE WATCH NEEDS TO BE FIXED

I have a watch that is about 150 years old. I recently had the crystal replaced, however after having it glued in four times it finally fell out and broke. The jeweler I took it to said there was not a crystal made with a rim thin enough to go in the watch, therefore it could not be anchored properly. Does anyone know of a jeweler that hand crafts crystals or has old fashioned ones that might fit this watch? S.F.

Air Controllers Ready To Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the air traffic controllers' union today accused the government of refusing to bargain for a new contract and said controllers are ready to strike — even if it means going to jail — to force an agreement.

Robert E. Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO), said while union members are "law-abiding citizens," they will risk criminal prosecution and strike at 7 a.m. EDT Monday if an agreement has not been reached. Such a strike would create chaos for air travelers.

"I don't think there is a member of the union who wants to go to jail," Poli told a House Transportation subcommittee, but if "they don't have an alternative they must make a stand at this time."

PATCO and the Federal Aviation Administration broke off informal talks last Tuesday after the union rejected an FAA wage and benefits package.

FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms vowed Thursday not to budge from the government offer and said he could only "assume there will be some kind of (strike) action" by the controllers.

Poli today accused the FAA of refusing to negotiate and said they have offered only a "take it or leave it proposal."

That proposal, he added, would provide little beyond the normal pay increase being given to all government workers. "In reality there's nothing here," he said of the FAA offer.

Poli earlier accused the Reagan administration of having an "intransigent and provocative attitude" that may force an illegal walkout.

A nationwide strike by PATCO would result in hundreds of flights being canceled and the FAA has said long delays should be expected on whatever flights remain in service. The government and airlines are putting final touches on a nationwide emergency plan that would allow half of all commercial flights to operate in the event of a walkout.

Because controllers are government workers, a strike would be illegal and the Justice Department has told U.S. attorneys to prepare to "seek indictments on short notice" in the event of a strike. The maximum penalty for violating the no-strike law is a $1,000 fine and a year in jail. The government and industry also are expected to seek civil judgments against controllers who strike.

A federal judge in New York City refused Thursday to lift an injunction prohibiting the controllers from a slowdown or strike, saying the controllers complaints about pay are "no excuse for violation of the law."

"Unlawful conduct (by controllers) ... cannot be condoned," Judge Thomas C. Platt declared in ruling on a request by the union to have the 18-month-old injunction lifted.

However, Poli indicated in a letter to Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., that the injunction would not stop the controllers from striking as "an act of civil disobedience" because of the FAA's refusal to budge from its current contract proposal.

The FAA said about 8,500 commercial flights and 1,500 military and emergency flights could be allowed to operate daily if a full-fledged strike is called. That would be about 25 percent to 30 percent of all flights and about half of the commercial flights that flow under normal conditions.

Priority would be given to essential military flights, followed in order by scheduled commercial flights of more than 500 miles; scheduled commercial flights of 500 miles or less; cargo, air taxi and some commuter flights; and finally general aviation aircraft.

Dear Abby

To Make A Person 'Whole'

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to BROKEN-HEARTED PARENTS, who were concerned because their daughter chose to marry an amputee.

Nearly 40 years ago, a young female volunteer in an Army hospital fell in love with a young soldier who had lost both legs to an enemy mortar shell. The young couple married over her parents' objections. He became an industrial psychologist (with two degrees), has held responsible administrative positions, and became the loving, active father of three. He has no legs, but that doesn't make him an invalid. I should know. He's my father.

My parents have been a loving, devoted couple for 35 years. Last month, Mother graduated from the Boston School of Nursing with her B.S.N. She, too, is a strong and wonderful person.

Words cannot adequately express how deeply I love and respect my parents for who they are, and for how they have handled the pain and crises in their life together.

JOANNE SHAW, ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR JOANNE: Thank you for a beautiful letter, and thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Barres of Boston for a beautiful daughter. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to BROKENHEARTED PARENTS, whose daughter was marrying a man who had no legs.

Two years ago my twin sister, after being married to a "whole man" who beat and abused her, married a man with only one arm and no legs. He was confined to a wheelchair.

Naturally we were concerned about how much care this man would need, but it was obvious that she loved him so much she didn't consider it a chore, so we supported the marriage wholeheartedly.

She had three children by her previous marriage whom her new husband accepted without question. A year later they had a baby girl of their own.

Six months later, my sister died unexpectedly. The night of her death, that dear man embraced those children and told them that he would like them to stay together as a family, but if they chose to go back to their real father, he would understand. They chose to stay with him.

How much of a man does it take to accept the challenge of raising three children, none of whom were his, along with a 6-month-old baby?

Since then, he has adopted the three children. Abby, this man gave my sister more happiness in the year and a half they were married than she had known in the previous 35 years of her life.

HER TWIN IN UTAH

DEAR ABBY: I have been very happily married for several years to a wonderful divorced woman with two fine children. I am 25 and she is 40. She is a first-class woman, but my marriage has created a major problem in my life.

My parents, who live in another state, have refused to acknowledge my marriage. They are respected civic and church leaders in their community, but they rejected my wife without even meeting her. My father called me a heathen, and my mother asked me never to mention my wife or stepchildren to any family members in my letters home. So far I have honored my mother's request because I love my parents.

My parents still consider me single. It is becoming increasingly difficult for me to not mention my wife and stepchildren in my letters home. Should I continue this policy, or is there an alternative?

HURTING IN TEXAS

DEAR HURTING: The alternative is to assume a more manly posture and tell your parents that if they refuse to acknowledge your wife and stepchildren, they can forget you. The choice is yours.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Tell BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE not to waste any more time feeling sorry for himself. There are plenty of girls who would be glad to go out with him. I, for one, think bowlegged guys are sexy.

TRUDY IN WILMINGTON, N.C.

MRS. JEFFREY DAVID JENKINS

Jenkins-Hester Vows Said Sunday

Business Women Discuss Saving

The Pirate Charter of the American Business Women's Association held its regular monthly meeting Monday at Abrams Bar-B-Q.

The program for the evening was a round table discussion by the members on the topic, "Money Saving Ideas." A short business meeting was held by chapter members following the program.

The ways and means committee reported the chapter netted $54 for the scholarship fund by the Flea Market Sale. Another sale has been planned for the fall. Co-chairmen of the ways and means committee are Mrs. Becky Brock and Mrs. Pat Hardee.

Gas Tax Clears House

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Only one more hurdle — Senate concurrence in House changes — remains in the way of enactment of a 2¾ cents a gallon increase in North Carolina's tax on gasoline.

The gas-tax increase, a quarter of a cent smaller than the amount asked for by Gov. Jim Hunt and approved by the Senate, drew closer to enactment Thursday when the House voted 70-48 to give its final approval.

The tax bill that is aimed at raising new money for the state's highway system was sent back to the Senate, where legislative leaders predicted members would go along with the House amendments.

House Finance Committee Chairman Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, who presided over the House's major amendments cutting the size of the increase and throwing out a personal tax rebate provision, predicted the Senate would easily concur.

Hunt, speaking to reporters only hours before the final vote, said he accepted the House changes and felt its version was satisfactory to meet next year's highway program costs. But Senate leaders kept mum about how and even when they would consider the concurrence question.

The leading Senate opponent of the bill, Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said he would oppose concurrence — but also predicted the tax bill would be enacted exactly as the House approved it.

"Sure the Senate will accept it, exactly as it is, because they're afraid they'll lose something else out of it," Rauch said.

While Hunt forces celebrated their victory, the governor also issued a caution that the tax package may not be large enough to solve the highway finance problems for long.

Ask New Import Rules

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute said Thursday that an international plan to help developing countries is hurting the United States.

"The Multifiber Arrangement ... is failing in its basic purpose ... to bring about orderly trade without disrupting the markets and the production of developed nations," said Robert E. Coleman in a speech at the annual meeting of the Southern Textile Association.

He said heavy textile and apparel imports — projected by the government to be increasing at a rate of 12 percent this year — would damage the domestic market and the U.S. economy along with it, unless international trade policies are revised.

The U.S. textile industry favors changing the Multifiber Arrangement so that it would base import quotas on economic conditions in individual countries instead of the present arrangement which allows a 6 percent annual increase in imports, said Carlos Moore, the institute's director of international trade.

Moore said the U.S. market currently is growing at a rate of only 1 percent to 1... percent per year, which leaves an increasingly larger share of the domestic market for foreign countries.

"When you consider the fact that the textile business is (a major U.S. industry), you realize how seriously it could affect our economy if we don't stop taking such a beating," he said.

Moore said the industry also wants tougher restrictions on imports from the "big three" — South Korea, Hong Kong and Taiwan — so the undeveloped countries like Indonesia can have a chance.

He said there are negotiations under way between the industry and the Reagan administration on an official U.S. government position on the issue. Any changes in the Multifiber Arrangement would have to be agreed on by involved countries.

Time To Finalize Budget

The City administration is still fighting its budget problems, with figures not yet available on the recent tax re-vaulation.

It has prompted City Manager Ed Wyatt to say that, if the totals are not received soon, the council might have to adopt a provisional budget. The tax rate for the coming year cannot be set until the actual property valuation is received.

The city is looking at a $12,541,044 budget which Wyatt describes as a "lean one that omits a number of items that should be funded, provided there are adequate resources."

Wyatt said the number of full-time personnel will actually show a decrease of four for next year with a full-time allocation of 379 positions.

There will be no layoffs, however, and seven positions are being shifted from one department to another.

The city has suggested that the county take over funding of some services, and it was also asked Greenville Utilities for additional turn-over. Both requests have been answered negatively.

We hope the tax figures will soon be available. Obviously the tax rate will go down because of the re-valuation. Of course, the actual dollars property owners will pay may increase some, which is in effect a tax increase.

Whatever has to be done, it is time to wrap up the city budget with whatever funds we will have available.

Project Ahead Of Schedule

The badly needed bed tower, now under construction at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, has moved along quite well.

Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the ECU Scool of Medicine, said the tower will be partially occupied by December and will be in full use by this time next year.

Ralph Hall said "We have received nothing but good reports on our bed tower, and we're ahead of schedule."

It is refreshing to hear that a building project is actually moving ahead of schedule, particularly one whose facilities are needed such as this one.

The next problem will be finding adequate nursing staff to handle the new facility. That problem will undoubtedly be solved, however, and the tower should be available to the people of our state in the near future.

Pocosin Fuel

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Imagine the Good Ole Boys down at the store arguing about which gets more miles to the bale in their pickups.

It seems time is close when Tar Heel peat bogs will be pumping up fuel to run cars and trucks. Not many North Carolinians realized we were sitting on a heap of black gold in those Down East pocosins.

Is this realistic? In Brazil, the Ford Motor Company is already manufacturing a complete consumer line of vehicles which operate on methanol: a liquid form of methane gas produced from natural stuff like plants or animal wastes. In that South American nation, ample stocks of sugar cane provide the foundation.

Ford officials have said they don't build and sell the cars in this country because there is no system in place for making and distributing the fuel. When such a system develops, expect the automakers to provide the vehicles. Already, on the West Coast, some methanol burning vehicles are in operation. The North Carolina Department of Transportation plans to test drive a research fleet soom. At the Indianapolis Speedway, the fast, funnycars have been burning methanol for years. Conversion of gas burning equipment to methanol is relatively simple.

What It Is

But back to the burning question on everybody's mind: what is peat, and how did North Carolina get to be so important that Malcolm P. McLean has bought up vast acreages of Washington, Hyde, and Tyrrell Counties and gotten a permit to mine 15,000 acres of peat now, with prospects of almost unlimited supplies if the experiment proves itself.

Experts say this state's peat bogs hold 875 million tons of fuel grade peat; the energy equivalent of more than a billion barrels of oil. But that's only three per cent of the nation's potential supply of peat. The stuff is found in Alaska, around the Great Lakes, and in coastal plains of Gulf and Atlantic states.

Back in the ice ages when water levels rose and fell, all kinds of vegetation would be covered and decompose under water. The absence of oxygen produced a slimy, yucky looking mess kind of like axle grease.

Now, the topsoil can be scraped aside and the rich water-logged peat sliced up and left to partially dry; then harvested. Nobody can tell how deep some of the peat deposits may be. After harvesting, or strip mining, the land can be returned to farms or forest with the still rich soil merely lowered from its original elevation.

Dried, peat can be burned just as coal is as a fuel. It is widely used in Russia, Finland and Ireland. Experiments are now going on to see if peat can be used in generating plants and other facilities which burn a solid fuel.

The excitement in the automotive world comes from plans of Peat Methanol Associates to build a $250 million plant to produce 51.3 million gallons of methanol a year using peat.

Potential

The potential is there to increase the plant's capacity to more than 500 million gallons of methanol yearly.

Methanol is known popularly as wood alcohol. It is clear, odorless, and burns

COOLING THE HOT TAMALE!

Reagan's Different

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Soviet Ambassador Anatoliy Dobrynin is complaining, very privately, that the Reagan administration is not keeping him clued in on U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union.

Dobrynin, who started his ambassadorial term here way back in 1962, was on intimate terms with many previous secretaries of state and on fairly close terms with some presidents, notably Henry Kissinger and Richard Nixon. But in the Reagan administration, he finds himself frozen out of the intimate tete-a-tetes that marked earlier years.

That reflects Reagan's strong antipathy for continuing the old ways, in which Dobrynin was the focal point of all top-level U.S.-Soviet diplomatic business. Reagan was strongly reinforced by former U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon, who publicly protested that he felt squeezed out of the diplomatic game because the main business was done in Washington with Dobrynin. Neither Secretary of State Alexander Haig nor national security assistant Richard Allen has gone out of his way to disabuse Dobrynin of his morose sense of being left out.

Iraq's First Response

In one of the dozens of secret briefings given Congress about the Israeli attack on the Iraqi nuclear reactor, a top intelligence official reported this startling word: Iraq's first reaction to the noise and flashes of the Israeli bombs was that a great fireworks display had started.

The reactor ie located 10 miles southeast of Baghdad, far enough away that ground tremors would not be felt but the flashes would be clearly visible.

That shows the complete success of Israel in maintaining the crucial element of surprise. Although the Israelis had been saying privately for many months that the reactor would never be allowed to start up, Iraq's government and its air force apparently took that warning as a tall tale — just as many American officials did.

Kennedy Eyes Iowa

A new clue that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has one eye peeled on the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination lies in the fact that Paul Wagner, key Kennedy operative in 1980's losing struggle, has taken a roving teaching assignment for a consortium of Iowa colleges.

Wagner's roving seminar, covering five liberal arts colleges in the state considered certain to hold the first 1984 test for the wide-open Democratic nomination, is a review of Ronald Reagan's first 100 days. He brings in experts from Washington, including some from the Reagan administration. That guarantees priceless exposure for Wagner, an Iowa native, to just the sort of youthful enthusiasts who might be recruited for the 1984 Kennedy campaign — or for Wagner himself, if he decides to launch a political career of his own.

Although the unique roving seminar ends in July, Wagner is considering extending his teaching chores in Iowa for another year. He discounts talk that he is a Kennedy stalking horse, pointing out that the senator first has to win big in his Senate re-election campaign next year. Insiders, however, insist that Wagner is laying the groundwork for Teddy Kennedy in the Iowa caucuses.

Sadat Stems The Tide

A riotous debate in the Egyptian parliament just after the Israeli raid on that Iraqi nuclear reactor almost forced President Anwar Sadat to recall his ambassador to Israel to show Egypt's anger over the attack — accomplished with American-supplied warplanes.

The debate started off raucously, reflecting rising nationalism among Egypt's political militants and younger-generation army officers never fully reconciled to the Egyptian-Israeli treaty. What enflamed that mood waa the fact that Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin had been given a gracious political boost when Sadat agreed to confer with him only days before the secretly-planned raid.

Sadat flatly rejected recalling his ambassador, even as a token gesture. He wants to keep his Israeli relations on an even keel at least until next spring, when final Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula is supposed to take place. Sadat worries that too strong an anti-Israeli reaction to the Iraqi raid might put in jeopardy that final Israeli pullout.

Now-It-Can-Be Told

Former President Carter actually used the line about his daughter Amy's fear of "nuclear proliferation" in a debate rehearsal he held at Camp David a few days before the Cleveland debate with Ronald Reagan last Oct. 28.

When top Carter aides monitoring the rehearsal heard the line, they reacted negatively and instantaneously. That would never do, they told Carter; it just didn't sound logical, it would make people laugh. Carter argued, but then seemed to agree. The rehearsal continued for a few minutes when he suddenly said he had had enough and did not need any rehearsal anyway.

When he then spoke the offending line during the actual debate, those same aides were incredulous. It had exactly the response they predicted: guffaws and ridicule. Looking back, they decided Carter always had intended to use the line but did not want to argue the case with his aides. Stubborn to the end, Carter was convinced that the line he attributed to Amy was a winner.

Gain A Home, Bit By Bit

The June weddings are upon us, and once again everyone is trying to figure out what kind of present to buy newlyweds. Many friends call up parents and ask, "What do Phillippe and Jacqueline need?"

The Whelans have decided to deal with their son's wedding in a very practical way.

I was over at their house while the calls were coming in.

Phil, the father, said to the first caller, "They would like a window. Yes, that's right, a window. No, it doesn't have to have shutters. Any window will do."

He told the next caller, "The kids would love a chimney attached to a fireplace."

The third caller was told, "They're dying for a linoleum floor. I don't have the measurements, but I'll let you know in a few days."

Phil marked everything down in a book.

I asked him what he was doing?

"Well, people want to buy the kids something they need. What they need is a house. So every time someone calls, Sherry or I ask the person for a piece of it. We've got 12 windows promised, a ceiling for the living room, two walls for the bedroom and light fixures for the bathroom. If the Holbrookes come through with a front door, and the Evans with a kitchen door, we can start telling people they want a roof."

"A roof is an awfully expensive wedding present," I said.

"We don't expect one person to give them a roof. But if we can talk 10 of our friends into going in on it, we can get Phillippe's aunt to give them the shingles."

"That's a great idea. What happens if a wedding present arrives without consultation with you?"

"We take it back to the store and exchange it for a bag of cement."

The phone rang again. Phil said, "Yeah, it was a lovely wedding wasn't it? What do they want? I heard Jacqueline say she'd love a kitchen sink. What pattern? It really doesn't matter as long as it goes with her cabinets. No, she doesn't have cabinets yet, but we're still hoping. That's very nice of you."

Phil made a notation in the book. "We're moving right along."

"Once you get all the stuff together, who is going to build the house?"

"Phillippe's best man and ushers said they would work on it. My present to the kids is to pay someone to supervise the construction. It will be a rather tricky job since most of the presents won't match."

"Anyone come through with lumber yet?"

"People have offered, but we're holding out for redwood. I think Jacqueline's uncle might come across because she's his favorite niece. The Dumbartons sent us a stack of plywood, and Sherry was outraged because we gave them a Cuisinart when their son got married."

The phone rang again. "Teresa," said Phil, "how nice of you to call. No, the kids have linens and towels. Someone beat you to a coffeemaker. They also have an electric can opener. Let me think, what do they really want? I've got it! A gas furnace. They told me that if anyone asks just to say the thing that would make them the happiest would be a nice gas furnace to keep their love warm. Thanks for calling, Teresa, and best to Joe."

"I didn't think she'd go for it," Phil said, writing it down in his book. "Particularly because when their kids got

Other Editors Say Check The Trains

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

What effect would 2,200 train cars of coal have on North Carolina as they crossed the state every day?

The effects would vary, of course — from none to plenty.

The coal would be en route to the port at Morehead City.

Among areas which probably could anticipate plenty of impact are New Bern and Morehead City. The cars would converge from various directions. But they would all pass through Morehead and New Bern. That's a bunch of railroad traffic for any town in a given day.

Many other cities and towns will have long trains of rail cars passing through them every day. Some apprently are unaware of what is coming.

Goldsboro is on one of the lines. Our officials were unaware of what to expect. They just now have been assured that effects here would be minimal. Only a few "straggle cars" passing through at night, a railroad spokesman told the city manager.

But cities and towns along the routes need to examine the facts and determine what, if any, ordinances or other measures they might need to avoid traffic, noise, pollution or other problems.

The railroads have assured Goldsboro that it has nothing to worry about. But, just the same, we don't want to be caught asleep at the switch, so to speak.

Strength For Today

IS THE DEVIL DEAD?

Someone has said that the neatest trick the devil ever perpetrated was to spread the story that he was dead.

The concept of a living, anthropomorphic devil is considered naive by many Christians. And they may be right. But this does not alter the fact that evil is a gigantic force which has been at work in the world ever since the beginning. Certainly the world in which we live today is more confortable and in many ways more wholesomely enlightened than it was a thousand years ago. It is doubtful, however, that the sum total of evil today is less than it was centuries ago. In the twentieth century, for example, we have been through two world wars which have killed more people than any struggles, ancient or modern, which we know anything about.

So let us not be too sure of the death of the devil. We may not be as sure as our ancestors about the form he may take, but along with them we can be certain about his continuing presence in the world. — ELISHA DOUGLASS.

Sales Can Be Emotional

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Helping the founder of a private business sell out to a larger company is similar to being a divorce lawyer, except that sometimes the emotions are even stronger, says Denis Kelly.

Nevertheless, in a year's time Kelly and Gary Roelke, his associate at Merrill Lynch White Weld Capital Markets Group, help sell 10 to 15 companies with annual sales of between $10 million and $100 million.

To do so, they often must spend 75 to 100 hours in the presence of the seller, and perhaps 40 hours more on the telephone. By then, they say, they know more about the company than any buyer can ever need to know.

"We have all the information," he said, picking up the presentation, a large, loosely bound volume. Information, said Kelly, controls the deal. "The seller has to be in control of the transaction."

Kelly and Roelke, MBAs both, are rarities of high finance, which generally pays scant attention to the needs of smaller businesses. Very few big-name securities firms are organized to help smaller companies sell. Asked to name another, Kelly could think only of Lehman Brothers.

When private business people seek to sell out, they generally turn to accountants or lawyers. Or, if they are in the low multimillion-dollar category, they turn to specialists such as Niederhoffer, Cross & Zeckhauser Inc.

The separate commissions, which might range from $100,000 to perhaps $700,000, may not seem large as Wall Street numbers go, but he points out the costs are low also.

Moreover, there's plenty of business out there in the form of very successful companies begun after World War II whose owners are nearing 60 and thinking more about life's enjoyments than its challenges.

They sell, says Kelly, because the are tired of the company; or the company is 'going gangbusters" and needs new debt financing, which is especially costly today; or because the business is going nowhere, or because conflicting interests are busting apart the old partnership.

Why not go public? Because, says Kelly, it's a nuisance to most of them. And because there's a strong chance they'll get more by selling as a unit. "When you sell control you sell at a premium," he says.

Many people who build businesses, however, are not good at selling them, and they know it. But Kelly and Roelke, like many young MBAs with insights into the variety of creative accounting practices, computers, information processing and tax law, tell you with no trace of modesty that they are very good at the job.

They work at work — nights and weekends, if need be, they say. They have the enormous resources of Merrill Lynch's in-house experts and outside consultants. And they are aided by Merrill Lynch's image.

All this provides them with the information to maintain the upper hand over the buyer, they say. Information is the big weapon. Organization and presentation follow.

"One secret of selling well is to be better organized than the buyer," says Kelly. You train management in making presentations. You organize what buyers will see when they come to the company. Being organized, he says, adds greatly to the confidence of the sellers.

Kelly and Roelke are careful to screen potential buyers. They're quick to spot "tirekickers." They decline to take interested parties on a tour of facilities before presentations are made. "Bad for worker morale," Roelke explains.

For their efforts, Merrill Lynch is well paid. Including an initial $25,000 to $50,000 binder, the commission on a $14-million deal, for example, might total $200,000, with perhaps an additional 5 percent for a price up to $17 million, and maybe 10 percent for anything over that.

Kelly and Roelke get paid a straight salary, which they do not specify, plus an incentive bonus each year. They insist that they work for it. Seventy-five percent of their time is on the road. It takes six to nine months for a sale to go through. Some eventually fall through.

And, they say, it's hard work getting the information and organizing the deal. And along with information, they claim, the business is "organization, organization, organization."

Burglar Alarm Policy

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced that the City Council recently adopted an ordinance regulating false burglar alarms.

He said the ordinance provides for the charging of a $25 fee to any business or firm from which a false burglar alarm is transmitted by its alarm warning system in cases in which his department determines that the alarm was not caused by equipment malfunction or inclement weather conditions, but by actions of the owner or employees of the business.

It also provides that if the department receives three successive false alarms over a burglar alarm warning system from any business or firm within a ten day period which are determined to be caused by equipment malfunction, the department will disconnect the alarm at the department terminal until the repairman certifies that the equipment is operating properly.

Workshop Held At PCC

A day care workshop entitled "Learning Together" sponsored by the Department of Human Resources was held on the Pitt Community College Campus Thursday.

The workshop leaders were from the staff of Learning Together, Inc. of Raleigh and included Julia McLean Williams, director, Betty Hafley, Judy Leonard, Dee Dorsey and Doris Gilan.

The main objective of the sessions were to explore "interdependency" education which is the art of living together in the world that begins in early childhood and discovering ways to help children grow toward a happy life.

Materials demonstrating how to keep easy records of activities and teaching techniques were given to participants. Several handouts conveyed knowledge of how to keep up the spirit of the day carer as they work with children.

The "Learning Together" workshop was also held in Asheville, Jamestown, and Carthage prior to the PCC session.

Scholarship Fund Is Set Up

Pitt Community College announced today the establishment of the Clifton Walter Sawyer (C.W.) Scholarship Fund.

The scholarship program has been established in memory of Clifton (C.W.) Sawyer who was a student enrolled at PCC in Data Processing at the time of hie death resulting from an automobile accident on March 11, 1981. Sawyer was formerly of Coinjock, and living in Greenville at the time of the accident.

The scholarship funds will be available to students planning to enroll in Electronic Data Processing at Pitt Community College and who need financial assistance.

Miss Martha Moore, formerly of Point Harbor, and Sawyer's fiancee, is responsible for the initiation of the scholarship fund.

According to Ms. Moore and PCC Dean of Students, Edgar L. Boyd, plans are to use the interest from the funds for the yearly scholarships.

Persons interested in making contributions (which are tax deductable) to the C.W. Sawyer Scholarship Fund should send their contributions to Edgar L. Boyd, Dean of Students, Pitt Community College, P.O. Drawer 7007, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Further information is available from Boyd or Ms. Moore.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Bridge becomes a relatively easy game when the position of every card is known. Observe South's technique in bringing home this close heart game.

Despite the fact that he held a relatively good hand, South contented himself with an overcall of two hearts—at this vulnerability, it showed a good hand. North made a natural raise and South went on to game.

West led the queen of his partner's suit and continued with the jack, ruffed by declarer. Once West had shown up with two spade honors, it became unlikely that he held another picture card. Thus, declarer's task of avoiding three losers in the minor suits became that much easier to achieve. He could accomplish it either by dropping the queen of diamonds in two rounds or by snaring East in an end play.

The latter possibility was the better chance. To prepare for it, declarer entered dummy with the jack of trumps and ruffed another spade with a high trump. A trump to the queen drew the outstanding trumps, and declarer ruffed dummy's last spade.

The scene was set for the coup de grace. Declarer cashed the ace-king of diamonds, and he did not mind greatly that the queen did not fall. He simply continued with a third diamond. East won the trick but found himself in an uncomfortable situation.

If he returned a spade, declarer would ruff in one hand while discarding a club from the other, so East was forced to attack clubs, and he had to lead an honor. Had declarer carelessly won the king with the ace, he would have had to concede two club tricks. But South allowed East to win the king of clubs, and the defense was rendered helpless. East was left on play with the Hobson's choice of continuing with a club into dummy's major tenace or of conceding a ruff and sluff. Either way, declarer avoided losing a second club trick, and the contract sailed home.

On Oct. 8, 1945, President Truman announced the United States would retain the secret of the atom bomb and only Britain and Canada would share the knowledge.

Investigation

MANLIUS, N.Y. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies investigating the shooting death of a 25-year-old deaf-mute say their efforts are hampered by the fact that neither the suspect nor a witness can hear or speak.

All three were roommates and were described as friends.

The witness's stepfather interpreted for police, and Ernest Bellardini Jr., 26, was charged with second-degree murder in Thursday's killing of James Conley. Bellardini pleaded innocent.

Action Is Sought On Farm Fuel Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the current fuel allocation program expiring this fall, the government must take steps quickly to ensure that farmers have enough fuel in times when oil supplies are disrupted, as they were two years ago, says the chairman of an agriculture oversight subcommittee.

Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., the panel chairman, endorsed a plan Thursday that would require refineries throughout the nation to share available supplies during any disruption.

"I'm convinced that this approach will work in getting fuel to agriculture during disruptions," Andrews said at the close of two days of hearings on farm fuel needs.

Andrews said the plan, proposed by the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, "is a thoughtful and comprehensive policy which I believe will address the regional nature of disruptions and maintain government involvement to the minimum level necessary through timely and effective action."

In addition to a crude oil sharing program, the council also recommended tapping the Strategic Petroleum Reserve for crude oil during limited disruptions.

In a severe supply crunch, it said the government should have authority to allocate available oil to priority users and — with congressional approval — to control prices and even ration fuel.

Martin Fitzpatrick, head of the Agriculture Department's transportation office, said the Reagan administration has yet to decide whether the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act, which expires Sept. 30, should be renewed.

But he said the administration hopes to present Congress a plan within three months for continuation of some type of allocation authority in severe situations.

FOCUS

A Sinister Person

What did Benjamin Franklin, Queen Victoria, Babe Ruth and Marilyn Monroe have in common? They were all sinister. The word "sinister" is Latin for "left," and describes left-handedness. Tomorrow "sinister" people have scheduled a march in Toronto, Canada, to protest the bias many say they face in a world predisposed to the "right." The word "left" itself has negative meanings. In Italian it means "deceitful." In Russian, to be "left" is to be "sneaky." The philosopher Plato described the road to hell as the "left-hand" path. Expressions such as "upright" and "Bill of Rights" attest to the strong bias to the right throughout the English language.

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Stalin was the leader of the Soviet Union during World War Two.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

"LET'S GO HUNTING!" IN TODAY'S LANGUAGE THAT PHRASE BRINGS TO MIND A PLEASANT DAY IN THE FIELDS WITH A GOOD DOG, THE TAKING OF A PHEASANT OR TWO—FINE SPORT! NOT SO, IN BIBLICAL TIMES! TOO OFTEN, IT WAS A CALL TO THE UNPLEASANT DUTY OF RIDDING THE COUNTRYSIDE OF SOME BEAST OF PREY—USUALLY THE FEROCIOUS LION! THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE CONTAIN MANY REFERENCES TO THE LION AND, ALTHOUGH HARDLY A ONE CAN BE FOUND TODAY IN WHAT IS TERMED THE BIBLE LANDS, THE AREA ABOUNDED WITH THEM IN THOSE TIMES.

ANCIENT WRITINGS, PAINTINGS, AND SCULPTURE, HAVE REVEALED MANY RECORDS OF LION HUNTS. THE PLENTITUDE OF YOUNG KIDS, LAMBS, ELDERLY PEOPLE, AND SMALL CHILDREN, ALL EASY PREY, ATTRACTED THESE BEASTS AND, WHEN THEIR DEPREDATIONS BECAME TOO NUMEROUS, A LION HUNT WAS ORGANIZED TO WIPE THEM OUT, OR AT LEAST DRIVE THEM OUT OF THE AREA.

THIS DUTY USUALLY FELL TO ROYALTY AND THE UPPER CLASSES BECAUSE THEY HAD HORSES AND CHARIOTS AND PLENTY OF SOLDIERS OR SERVANTS WHO WERE EXPERT WITH BOW AND ARROW. ALTHOUGH HORSE RACING HAS BEEN CALLED "THE SPORT OF KINGS," YOU MAY BE SURE THAT LION HUNTING EARNED THIS TITLE LONG BEFORE—EXCEPT, UNFORTUNATELY AT TIMES, IT WAS FAR FROM WHAT WE TODAY WOULD CALL SPORT!

Priest 'Spread The Word' For 50 Years

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Some elements of the hell-fire and brimstone camp meeting were there — the trailer set up on the edge of town, an itinerant preacher who spent a week in one little Georgia town before moving on to the next tiny hamlet.

But the man with the trailer wasn't some evangelist preaching to a sweaty, packed crowd in a big tent with a sawdust floor.

He was Monsignor Joseph G. Cassidy, a Roman Catholic priest who quietly won the hearts of the so-called "Georgia crackers" who populated the backwoods of the late Depression years.

"It was rather primitive work," the 83-year-old Cassidy said in a telephone interview, recalling his four years as an itinerant Roman Catholic missioner in Georgia.

Cassidy, now retired and living in Dalton, Ga., was awarded the Lumens Christi Award by the Catholic Extension Society in Chicago for "spreading the light of Christ" in Georgia for more than half a century and in every corner of the state.

In 1938, Cassidy launched the four-year adventure which would earn him the nickname of the "Trailer Priest." Beginning in Savannah, an Atlantic ocean seaport, the lone priest drove his trailer inland across the southern end of Georgia, then turned northward and worked his way through the north Georgia mountains.

"It was a mobile chapel on wheels that had an altar on the back. In the middle section we had living quarters, Pullman berths and bath," he said. "It was very well equipped, but it was impractical.

"Evidently the man who designed it had never been on a Georgia road. He gave me a clearance of only six inches. I had some perilous times ..." Cassidy said.

The monsignor's itinerary reads like a Georgia travelogue — he hit Valdosta and its environs, Lakeland, Thomasville, Moultrie, Albany, Gainesville and countless forgotten communities in between.

"They were not revivals, but just discussions of religion and generalities which (people) were interested in. In those days, the rural areas didn't have much to offer for recreation, so whatever we gave them was accepted," he said. He showed movies and travel films.

"We gave them a good show, and from that, we hoped a personal interest would develop, and liking me, they would like what I was talking about," he said.

Cassidy said he would set up on the outskirts of a rural community without challenging its established churches and "stay there as long as I pleased them."

"We had very few Catholics. We had many non-Catholics, and many of them were not affiliated with any church. We thought that from being there, they would gain something definite."

Cassidy, who spent later years as a chaplain in mental health institutions and on the staff of the archdiocese of Atlanta, said he encountered no opposition to his work during those four remarkable years as an itinerant, even though some people disagreed with him.

"I found that most of these people were fundamentally wonderful," he said. "They had very little in the way of worldly goods, but in one way or another, they had God in their hearts."

Church Leaders Applaud Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Religious leaders have applauded a U.S. Supreme Court decision striking down a labor department ruling requiring church schools to pay unemployment compensations taxes.

The ruling came in the case of a Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod church school, which the high court said does not have to pay the federal unemployment compensation taxes.

The unanimous decision, specifically regarding a school operated by St. Martin Church in Watertown, S.D., was seen as applicable to all religious schools integrated into a church structure and not separately incorporated.

Loss Of Subsidy Is Threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The threatened end of a current postal subsidy to religious publications faces them with a "potentially devastating situation," says a church magazine editor.

The Rev. Edgar R. Trexler, editor of The Lutheran, appeared before a congressional committee on behalf of 750 publications of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish organizations.

If the subsidy is ended, as threatened next Oct. 1 under a reduction in postal appropriations in the Reagan administration budget, Trexler said it would more than double mailing costs "in one fell swoop."

He said it would force an indicated 10 percent of the nation's religious publications out of business and force half of them to reduce the number of issues.

"There will be no winners, only losers," he said. "The postal serice will not have additional revenue if fewer publications are mailed."

CRISIS HUNT

NEW YORK (AP) — Many European Christians are turning to Judaism in quest of a renewal of their own faith, says a Jewish theologian from West Germany.

Pinchas Lapide of Gottingen University says many Christians are beset by a crisis in security and doubt about their own faith.

Priests Climb In Numbers

VATICAN CITY (AP) — For the first time in more than a decade, the number of diocesan Roman Catholic priests in the world is on the rise, new Vatican statistics indicate.

The figures show there were 258,663 diocesan clergy at the end of 1979, 212 more than at the end of 1978, and the first net increase since the mid-1960's.

The number of priests in religious orders declined by 145 to 157,773, while the number of nuns fell steeply to 964,742, down 20,000.

City Workers Are Honored

Seven employees of the city's Engineering and Planning Departments here and the spouse of an engineering employee were recently presented certificates of appreciation by the City Council for rendering services to the city.

The individuals, it was pointed out, gave a total of 608 hours of their own time to remodel the third floor of the city-owned Community Building. The effort, the city reported, saved citizens of Greenville thousands of dollars.

Recognized at the June 11 Council meeting were Bobby Roberson, Skip Browder, Wade Pitt, Bill Shaw, Lee Murphy, John Burch, Ron Sewell, and Roland Faulkner.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today amid lingering concern over interest-rate prospects.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 11 points on Thursday, recovered 2.19 to 997.34 by noontime today.

Southern California Edison led the active list, off ⅝ at 26½. A 436,900-share block traded at 26⅝.

Pitt County Squeeks Past Snow Hill

SNOW HILL — There are pitching duels and there are pitching duels, but last night's American Legion matchup between Pitt County's Roger Williams and Snow Hill's Gary Ream turned out to be a classic.

Williams and Pitt County came away with a 2-0 victory, but the runs didn't come until the ninth inning, and even then two errors helped them along as both were unearned.

In gaining the victory, Williams gave up only three hits, faced just three more men than regulation, and threw only 121 pitches. He went to full counts only six times during the evening, two of those in the final frame. He struck out 15 and walked none.

Only one Snow Hill runner got past first base, as Greg Hardison singled with one down in the ninth and advanced on a wild pitch.

Ream did almost as well. Although he gave up eight hits, they were well scattered. He walked two and fanned 11. Only in three innings prior to the ninth did Pitt put a runner as far as second against Ream.

The first Pitt threat came in the second inning as Emmett Walsh led off with a triple. But a strikeout got one away, and although Williams reached on an infield hit, Walsh had to hold third. A double play then got Snow Hill out of the jam.

Mitch Brann doubled in the fourth, but was promptly picked off by catcher Jabo Fulghum. In the eighth, Billy Kittrell singled with two down and Mark Douglas walked. Both moved up on a wild pitch before a strikeout ended that threat.

But in the ninth, Pitt finally pushed over the winning runs.

With one away, Walsh sent a ball into center that fell off the end of the fielder's glove, struck his leg and rolled away. By the time it was chased up, Walsh was again on third. Then, after a second out, Williams helped his own cause by reaching on an error, allowing Walsh to score. Williams moved on to second on the misplay, and scored when Sammy Hodges singled.

Brann and Walsh each had two hits to lead Pitt, while Hardison had two of the three Snow Hill singles.

The victory raised the Pitt record to 7-3 on the year and snapped a two-game losing streak by the Post 39ers. Snow Hill drops to 5-5.

Pitt returns to action tonight, traveling to Wayne County, while Snow Hill visits Rocky Mount.

Two other games scheduled for last night in Area One were postponed. Wilson at Wayne County will be played July 2 and Edenton at Rocky Mount will be played on June 23.

Wolfpack Powers Past ECU

RALEIGH — Ronnie Lee went three-for-three and Tim Barbour cracked a three-run homer to highlight a 10-3 North State Collegiate League baseball victory for N.C. State over East Carolina yesterday.

The loss was the fourth in the last five games for the Pirates, who had won their first two contests. State, which lost its first two, has now won five of its last six.

State scored early, getting three runs in the first, and added two more in the third before the Pirates finally cracked the ice and pushed over a pair in the fifth. But by then, State held an overpowering lead.

Ken Sears led off the first inning for the Wolfpack, reaching on an error. Terry Black followed with a single up the middle and Lee got his first hit of the night, a double, driving in both Sears and Black. Chris Baird followed with another double, scoring Lee.

State picked up two more runs in the third. Black singled and Lee walked. Jim Toman walked, but Baird hit into a double play, scoring Black, but getting Toman at second. Barbour followed with a third State double, scoring Lee for a 5-0 lead.

East Carolina finally got things going in the top of the fifth. Mark Shank walked and Mike Sorrell followed with a single. Pete Persico got another hit, driving in Shank, and Todd Evans followed with another hit, scoring Sorrell.

State, however, snapped right back, scoring three more times for a 8-2 lead. Lee led off with a double and stole third as Toman walked. Barbour then cracked out his homer to account for all three runs.

East Carolina added its final run in the sixth. Jay Carraway singled and Robert Wells was safe on an error. Sorrell singled to score courtesy runner Charlie Waynick to trim it to 8-3.

State finished up its scoring in the bottom of the sixth. Michael Sprouse reached on an error and Black walked. Lee singled, loading them up, and a hit by Toman brought in both Sprouse and Black.

The defeat dropped East Carolina's record to 3-4 in the league, while State climbed to 5-3.

East Carolina returns home tonight to face Campbell University in a 7:30 p.m. game at Harrington Field.

Tradition Fits Open Leader

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Jim Thorpe, a golfer with a legendary name but not a legendary record in his profession, led the U.S. Open Golf Championship when the first round was over. It was fitting.

Like so many Opens of the past, the first-day heroics go to the unknown, the undistinguished or the unheralded.

Thorpe's golfing career fits the description nicely — and more.

He's won just over $7,000 this year, he's a black in a mostly white profession, and he's relatively unknown.

But he played the snug little Merion Golf Club Thursday like you might have thought Raymond Floyd would. (Floyd thrashed around in woods, bunkers full of fern and creeks. He shot a 75.)

"I haven't played well this year, so I am pleased," said Thorpe as he came off the 18th green.

With his 4-under par, 34-32-66, he took a 1-stroke lead over J.C. Snead, and a 2-stroke lead over a cluster of five that included a variety of talent and personalities such as:

—Bob Ackerman, an assistant golf pro in his first Open after failing to qualify five previous times.

—David Graham, an Australian who last tasted victory in Phoenix in January but has not played well recently.

—Jack Renner, a frail-looking short-hitter with only one tournament win to his credit since turning pro in 1976.

—Chi Chi Rodriquez, 45, the dapper little Puerto Rican, always with the straw hat, who hasn't seen the inside of a press tent in five years.

—John Cook, rookie pro and former amateur champion.

Three shots back at 1-under par and no strangers to contention were were Johnny Miller, Jack Nicklaus, Hubert Green, George Burns, Lon Hinkle, Rex Caldwell, Bill Kratzert and Tommy Valentine.

At even par 70 were 16 golfers, including Tom Watson, Bruce Lietzke, Jerry Pate, Ben Crenshaw and Lanny Wadkins.

Less successful were Gary Player, with a 72, Arnold Palmer, with a 77, including a triple bogey on No.18, and John Brodie, the former National Football League player who turned in an 80.

Thorpe was king for a day, the entire day.

He teed off at 7:36 a.m. and finished his work over the 6,528-yard course before half the field of 156 had started.

His round included three birdies and one bogey on each side. "I wedged it well and I putted it well," he said.

Thorpe is one of only about a half dozen black players on the pro tour. His name is identical to the immortal Jim Thorpe of football and Olympic fame.

But he says he doubts he is named for Jim Thorpe, the Indian who carried the football so well for Carlisle Indian School.

"I doubt my mother and father knew who Jim Thorpe was. They had so many children — five boys and seven girls — they might have just run out of names."

Thorpe learned his golf from his father, a greenskeeper at Roxboro Country Club in North Carolina.

Golf was for weekends, however. Football was his first love, and he parlayed his talent into a scholarship at Morgan State. But not for long.

"I discovered it was a mistake. It was too rough and dangerous." He transferred to Winston-Salem State, where he continued his golf.

He turned pro in 1972 and finally got his card in 1975.

Then he lost it. "I found I was just wasting money. I couldn't compete. So I became sort of a gypsy golfer.".

He finally regained his pro card in 1978, but his life on the tour has not been easy. His career earnings are about $90,000, less than Watson collected in his last two starts.

His best finish was a tie for second in the 1979 Tucson Open, and he did no better than a tie for sixth in 1980.

"I've been playing very, very poorly this year," Thorpe said. "It comes from a lack of working and thinking. One thing I learned today was that when you start playing good, you have to start working and thinking harder."

Snead had a friend who helped him think about the way to attack Merion, with his tiny, testy greens, short holes and narrow fairways.

"He told me I was nuts if I used a driver," said Snead, who hit his driver only five times all day.

"It was the best striking of the ball I've had in a good while. I've been fighting my driver all year."

Snead said he believes he should be able to sustain his fine start.

"I think I should be able to play well if I can get the ball in the fairway."

But he wasn't being cocky about his position one stroke back.

"There are still 54 holes to play. Being one shot behind is nothing to think about now. If I'm stroke behind on the last hole on Sunday, then I'll start to think about it."

There are other good reasons not to get too estatic about a good first day at the Open.

Nicklaus and Watson are two of them.

"I don't worry too much about leading until after the last round," said Nicklaus, the defending champion and the playoff loser to Lee Trevino in 1971, the last time the Open was played at Merion.

And Nicklaus predicted the scores will go higher if the weather stays hot and dry through Sunday.

"I don't think anyone will shoot in the low 60s, well, someone might, but I think Merion will hold up."

Merion has never been successfully assaulted during the three previous Opens held here. The four-day total has never been under par.

Watson understands why quite well.

His even par 70 on the first day included six missed fairways.

"I guess I was nervous off the first tee. I didn't hit a good shot until the fifth hole. With six missed fairways, I guess I'm fortunate to shoot 70."

Negotiators Try Again To End Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The baseball strike, now a record in terms of games lost, headed into its second week today and the owners and players headed back to the bargaining table after a one-day reassessment period.

And if there is a break, the general counsel of the Major League Baseball Players Association says it will have to come from the owners' side.

"We don't have any brand-new ideas that we haven't broached," says Donald Fehr. "But that doesn't mean that we won't react to something they might have."

At this stage, the only glimmer of hope would seem to come from the Player Relations Committee (PRC), which sets the owners' policy. It has met many times in recent weeks and, in fact, had another closed session Thursday.

Committee members would not say if they had new proposals to present to the players' negotiatiors when talks were to resume at 3 p.m., EDT, today at a midtown New York hotel.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett had given negotiators a day off Thursday in hopes that both sides would be able to come up with new proposals to halt the strike which has cost baseball a record 87 canceled games so far. That's one more game than was canceled in the 13-day strike of 1972.

The players went on strike last Friday in a dispute over compensation for players who sign in the baseball's re-entry draft.

Meanwhile, the National Labor Relations Board — because the negotiations have dragged — has decided to give the two sides additional time to talk and has postponed until June 29 its hearing into the players' charge of unfair labor practices.

The hearing had been scheduled to start June 15, then was postponed to June 22. The owners later requested a six-week continuance — and got a week.

"We are anxious to let the parties try and resolve their dispute in collective bargaining," said Alvin Blyer, counsel for the NLRB's New York office, "but at the same time we don't want to disband our procedure. As time goes by, a postponement is less likely. Each request is looked at more carefully."

In a related development, New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner reaffirmed publicly his support for PRC director Ray Grebey. It appeared to quiet rumors that there was a rift developing between a small group of owners and the PRC.

There had been reports that Steinbrenner was pushing for Grebey's release and that he and two other owners — Edward Bennett Williams of the Baltimore Orioles and Eddie Chiles of the Texas Rangers — were prepared to mount a threat to Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's job if he did not act quickly to end the walkout.

In a message from Steinbrenner received Thursday by the commissioner's office, both league presidents and the PRC, the Yankee owner said:

"Please be assured that the Yankees are supportive of the PRC and the negotiating committee and have publicly stated so numerous times. We think it is imperative that our representatives engage in a meaningful negotiating as part of the bargaining process regardless of any factors. We have been advised by the negotiating committee that this is being done.

"We are completely supportive of the commissioner in this approach."

Steinbrenner's telex served to answer some suggestions that the owners were not unified in their cause.

On another labor front, it was revealed that baseball almost had another strike on it hands — by umpires.

Richie Phillips, counsel for the Major League Baseball Umpires Association, said Thursday that umpires considered striking in protest of American League President Lee MacPhail's edict aimed at keeping Terry Cooney from umpiring in a game involving the Oakland A's.

But Phillips said the potential walkout was made unnecessary by the players' strike last Friday.

MacPhail had ordered the crew of which Cooney is a member off the Oakland assignment because, he said, he feared for Cooney's safety after the umpire had filed criminal charges against Billy Martin, the Oakland manager. MacPhail had suspended Martin one week and fined him $1,000 for bumping Cooney during an argument May 29 in a game against the Toronto Blue Jays.

Martin, allowed to continue managing pending a hearing of his appeal of MacPhail's ruling, has said that Cooney should not work any games involving the A's and other teams in the American League West.

"MacPhail is buckling under pressure from Billy Martin," said Phillips in an interview from his home near Philadelphia. "The reassignment is a declaration of open season on umpires. Cooney wants to work his schedule. The issue here is the perception of the public that Cooney is an honest ump who can't be run out of a series."

Phillips said that MacPhail's action would encourage other managers and players to abuse umpires, with whom they were having problems.

Organized Labor Stands Behind Striking Players

By The Associated Press

Organized labor stands behind the cause of striking major league baseball players, even though statements of support from union leaders often seem to begin: "I know the wages are high, but..."

The average worker can no more conceptualize the number of zeroes in the salaries of some ballplayers than he can the walking time to the moon and back.

The minimum wage for a ballplayer is $32,500 a year, the national minimum wage is $3.35 an hour — $6,968 a year based on a 40-hour work week, instead of a 162 game schedule.

Few ballplayers have picked up a picket sign, that traditional weapon of the striking wage earner.

Wages, holidays, vacations, overtime, pensions, and other traditional sticking points in collective bargaining are not among the issues in this strike.

The major league baseball player and America's blue collar worker have little in common. Yet, when it comes to the bargaining table, union leaders say, all workers are brothers.

"They are a part of the house of labor ... and to me, it is the same as when we sit down at our bargaining table and have our attorneys with us," says John Jennings, secretary-treasurer of the Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts, which represents 14,000 of the state's fire fighters.

"No tradesman likes to go on strike, but there is a point when he is left no choice," Jennings said. "He has to withhold services."

Jennings echoed the sentiment of other labor leaders when asked if the escalating wages of ballplayers had made empathy with them impossible.

"I know the wages are high, but their earning capacity — I mean their years — are not as great. They're burnt out in four or five years, and they become Johnny Who?," he said.

Whereas a stereotypical blue collar worker might miss his beer and baseball on a day off, union leaders let it be known that when it comes to a strike, the millionaire pitcher and the truck driver share a common cause.

"I follow baseball closely," said Bill Robertson, executive secretary of the Los Angeles County Federation of Labor, AFL-CIO. "I go back to playing in Class D baseball (Northern League) for $60 and $70 a month. I guess I can sympathize with the players.

"I agree they are — some of them are — making too much money, but I attribute that to the owners' greed," Robertson said. "They themselves went out in the competitive market and generated these astounding salaries.

Lions 9
Kiwanis 6

The Lions scored three runs in the fourth and added two more in the fifth to defeat Kiwanis, 9-6, Thursday in a North State Little League baseball game.

The victory boosted the Lion record to 13-1, while the Kiwanis drop to 11-3, thus clinching the title for the Lions.

The score was tied at 2-2 after the first inning. Kiwanis took the lead with a three-run third, thanks in part to Scott Scharinger's two-run single. The Lions countered with two runs in the bottom of the inning, an inning which included a leadoff triple by Mike Duncan and a double by Carlos Harris, to cut the deficit to 5-4.

One inning later, the Lions took the lead for good with three runs in the fourth. With one gone, Junior Taft singled, went to second on a wild pitch and stole third.

Mike Duncan followed with a walk and then stole second. Burt Aycock then reached on an error to score Taft and Tom Moye singled home Duncan. Aycock subsequently scored on an error.

After Kiwanis scored its final run of the game in the top of the fifth, the Lions added two more runs to their total in the bottom of the inning for the final total.

Tim Bland led Kiwanis with two hits. Kiwanis managed only three hits off Duncan, Aycock and Moye.

Wellcome 4
Moose 0

Terry Warren hurled a two-hitter and Vicki Parrott drove in two runs with a triple in the top of the sixth to lead Wellcome to a 4-0 triumph over Moose Thursday in a Tar Heel Little League baseball game.

The win clinched no worse than a tie for the league title for Wellcome.

Warren struck out 13 and walked three en route to the victory. Moose's two hits were a one-out double by Greg Jones in the first and a two-out single by Robbie Barnes in the fifth.

Wellcome jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Andrew Perry singled, moved to second on a passed ball and then scored on Anthony Cobb's single.

The lead remained one until the sixth when Warren and Cobb walked with one out and both came home on Parrott's triple. Parrott later scored when Chris Brown reached on an error.

Parrott and Perry both had two hits for Wellcome.

Sr. Babe Ruth

Bill Clifton 4
Kiwanis 2

Crowell Pope's two-run home run in the fifth sparked Bill Clifton to a 4-2 victory over Kiwanis Thursday in a Senior Babe Ruth baseball game.

Bill Clifton led, 1-0, on a second-inning home run by Kenny Kirland but Kiwanis tied the game in the third with a run. Kiwanis then took its only lead of the game in the fifth with a run before B.C. countered with two runs in the bottom of the inning and another run in the sixth.

Terry Smith doubled to lead off the fifth. Then, with two outs, Pope connected on his four-bagger to give Bill Clifton a 3-2 lead. B.C. added an insurance run to its total in the sixth.

Kiwanis was led by K. Evans and K. Whitehurst, both of whom had two hits. Kirkland led B.C. with two hits.

Nicklaus And Son

Jack Nicklaus and his caddy-son, Jack Jr., study the lie of the 18th green Thursday during the opening round of the U.S. Open tournament in Ardmore, Pa. Nicklaus carded a 1-under-par 69. (AP Laserphoto)

Jack Jr. Carrying Dad's Clubs

The good-looking, straight-as-an-arrow kid lugging Big Jack's pounds of clubs around the Merion course this weekend is Nicklaus' No. 1 son, Jack Jr.

The father-son and son-father combination isn't a new thing in big-time golf. Jackie, Jr. previously carried Nicklaus' bag in the 1976 British Open at Royal Birkdale. Big Jack reversed the procedure the last two years in qualifying for his oldest son in qualifying heats for the Open.

"My dad said he was a better caddy than I was a player," Jackie Jr. quipped, noting that in both occasions he failed to make the cut.

Jackie, a model-handsome North Palm Beach resident like his famous parents — all 6-foot-2, 190 pounds of him, is a graduate of an international school at age 19.

Jackie Jr. made his pop in 1979 after a couple of years named for Jack in 1969 in the Jackie Jr. Tournament in Ohio, while Jack, Sr. was trying to extract the golf bug from his son.

Jackie Jr. is a budding golfer himself. Michael, 8, is a miniature version of North Palm Beach, as Mrs. Nicklaus is the boss of the whole family.

Jackie Jr. is still busy with his mountain of 19 trophies and 68 medals, is not a doting parent pressing his offsprings into following his footsteps.

"I don't care what they do," Jack said when questioned on the subject, "it's only important that they do well."

In recruiting a member of the family to tote his heavy bag, Nicklaus isn't trying to save pennies. After all, he has won more than $3.5 million in prize money alone and oversees a multi-million-dollar corporation chiefly concerned with building Nicklaus-style golf courses all over the world.

"Jackie knows as much about my game as anybody," the father said of the son. "He does what I ask. He is knowedgeable about my golf swing and notices when I do something wrong."

Nicklaus was asked if such a relationship hadn't resulted in some bickering on the course.

"We've never had a cross word between us," Jack Sr. insisted. "We are like two people not even kin to each other. Jackie respects me when I am working, I respect Jackie when he is working."

The thousands of fans following Nicklaus Thursday saw father and son in deep conversation after Jack had teed off on the fifth hole.

"Jackie reminded me to be sure to hit right," Papa Nicklaus said. "After I drove, I showed him what I did — pause at the top of my swing and shift weight — to avoid going left."

Every round is a learning experience for young Nicklaus.

"Sometimes a caddy can be a hindrance," the elder Nicklaus said. "Jackie respects me and I him. We team up very well."

Nicklaus' longtime regular caddy, Angelo Argea, will continue sharing the bag while supervising a new Golden Bear restaurant back home.

Being the son of a famous personality and carrying his name can be a handicap to a youngster entering the sophomore year at the University of North Carolina.

Once asked how it feels to have the name "Jack Nicklaus," the eldest son shrugged and said philosophically:

"Well, it's the only name I've ever had."

Nicklaus said he had hesitated about giving his name to his firstborn but had been persuaded to do so by doting grandparents.

Jack Jr. hasn't allowed it to bother him.

"Sometimes it's hard to blend into a crowd," he says. "It's an attention-getter. I don't like special attention. I'd rather be treated like everybody else."

It would be hard for Jack Nicklaus, Jr., to be treated like everybody else under any circumstances. Blond, blue-eyed, personable, he could cause a stampede in any ladies' dorm.

Junior, who uses stiffer club shafts but the same heads as his father, said he can drive the ball as far as pop but is not as good with short irons and around the greens.

Jack Sr. was asked if he paid Jack Jr. the going caddy rate.

"Less," said the Big Bear, kiddingly. "Let's see, the normal fee is $25 a day. I pay $18."

Team Says It'll Quit

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Carolina Cougars team, protesting poor attendance and lack of support in the Charlotte area, announced plans to disband if at least 5,000 fans don't show up for today's American Basketball Association game with San Antonio.

Speaking for the team, Wednesday night, linebacker Joe [illegible] said, "We have decided that if Saturday [illegible] aren't in the stands [illegible] We want no less than 5,000 in the stands. This is our ultimatum to Charlotte."

Each NBA player is supposed to be guaranteed a certain percentage of the home gate after certain expenses and taxes are taken out. The Cougars drew 4,500 for their June 6 game with the Virginia Squires. Each player is guaranteed about $65 [illegible] of the three-week season.

South Korea Proposes Unified Korean Team

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea proposed Friday that North and South Korea field a unified team for the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

The move represented another effort by the two Koreas to form a joint team for an international sports event. Such attempts in the past have produced little to help narrow differences between the two sides in the sports field, much less in politics.

The latest proposal was contained in a statement by Cho Sang-ho, president of the South Korean National Olympic Committee. It was broadcast on the state-run radio network KBS at 11 a.m. (GMT) Friday.

Cho said, "I am making this proposal in this form because, at the moment, all means of communication have been cut off between the South and the North. However, I wish to make it clear that, if North Korea so desires, a letter containing this proposal can be conveyed at Panmunjom."

Panmunjom is the site for military armistice talks between the two sides. The village in Korea's demilitarized zone has often served as a place for political and other talks.

Cho proposed that representatives of the two sides meet in Seoul (South Korea), Pyongyang (North Korea) or Panmunjom "at an early date" in order to have time to form a unified Olympic delegation.

Brooke Shields Denied Ad Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Brooke Shields says "smokers are losers" — and so is the government for trying to keep her from saying so.

At a news conference Thursday, the sultry 16-year-old actress said she was "very much hurt" by the federal government's decision that she is an "inappropriate model" for an anti-smoking campaign aimed at young people.

Miss Shields and the president of the American Lung Association, Dr. Edmund C. Casey, announced that the anti-smoking campaign would be presented anyway, even without government funds.

They blamed the tobacco industry for the government's withdrawal, which came after the Department of Health and Human Services had invested $68,000 on the television and print advertisements featuring the young actress, who donated her services.

The tobacco industry was "afraid the ads would be effective," Miss Shields said.

The department and the industry have denied the charge, but today's New York Daily News reported that a House subcommittee would investigate the allegation.

The News quoted an unidentified staff member of the oversight and investigations panel of the Energy and Commerce Committee as saying the committee would begin its probe next week.

Casey said the health department claimed Miss Shields was an "inappropriate model for teen-agers to follow." In two recent movies, Miss Shields played a child prostitute and a shipwrecked girl discovering sex. She has also been criticized for appearing in suggestive ads for Calvin Klein jeans.

The government said the campaign was "ineffective" and that it could present better ads of its own. No substitute has appeared so far.

Two anti-smoking advertisements featuring Miss Shields have aired. In one, Miss Shields is shown drying her abundant hair and complaining that, "If there's anything I hate, it's washing my hair and then being with people who smoke ... yecch!"

In the other, Miss Shields, lying on a bed doing homework, talks about a boy she admired until she learned that he smokes. In the ad, she says, "I think people who smoke are real losers."

That line in particular met with disapproval from Carl Anderson, a Health and Human Services official who was on the committee that rejected the ads.

Anderson is a former aide to Republican Sen. Jesse Helms from the tobacco-growing state of North Carolina, a staunch friend of tobacco farmers and an adamant critic of the anti-smoking crusades launched by former President Carter's health secretary, Joseph Califano.

On the print side of the campaign, one poster depicts Miss Shields, posed seductively by fashion photographer Francesco Scavullo, staring forward as she pulls back her hair. A cigarette hangs from each ear.

"Smoking spoils your looks," says the ad.

Miss Shields, who was named national youth chairman of the lung association, said at the press conference she believed the ads would work because "I am a teen-ager myself, and I think I can relate to other teen-agers."

Also present at the press conference was Robert Rodale, chairman of the health-minded Rodale Press, who presented Casey with a check for $59,640 to help the lung association keep Miss Shields in the public eye.

BLAMES TOBACCO INDUSTRY ... Actress Brooke Shields talked to reporters Thursday in New York about the government's decision that led to cancellation of her anti-smoking campaign. She said that the tobacco industry was responsible for the cancellation because it "was afraid the ads would be effective." The government called Miss Shields an "inappropriate model for teen-agers to follow." The ads will be shown under the auspices of the American Lung Association, however. (AP Laserphoto)

Hearing Postponed For Film Actress

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Superior Court judge has scheduled another court session in July to permit screen star Rita Hayworth's daughter time to gather information on whether her mother needs a conservator.

The actress' manager and attorney, Leonard H. Monroe, had petitioned the court to become Miss Hayworth's conservator.

Judge Ronald Swearinger on Thursday postponed a hearing until July 23 after Miss Hayworth's younger daughter, Yasmin Khan, who lives in New York, sent word through a lawyer that she wanted time to gather facts about her mother's reported senility.

Miss Hayworth has another daughter, Rebecca Welles, who lives in Tacoma, Wash.

Monroe said in documents filed with the court that Miss Hayworth, 62, is afflicted with Alzheimer's Disease, a form of senility.

A court-appointed investigator reported earlier this month that Miss Hayworth, who lives in Beverly Hills, "cannot take care of her physical needs relating to health, food, clothing and shelter and requires personal assistance in her home for these needs, nor (can she) maintain bank accounts or personal records. She is unable to address any question or explanation clearly."

Monroe estimated in court documents that the actress' property is valued at more than $250,000.

Raleigh Girl Is New Junior Miss

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A blonde, blue-eyed North Carolina teen-ager who became the 1981 America's Junior Miss has vowed to take her responsibilities "by the horns."

Kimberly Ann Smith of Raleigh, a 17-year-old dancer who dominated the preliminaries, burst into tears when she was announced the winner of the pageant Thursday night. She will receive $43,500 in college scholarships.

Because of changes in this year's program, she was handed a scroll bearing her new title instead of being crowned Junior Miss.

Miss Smith, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Smith, performed a dance routine in a clown's costume to take the creative and performing arts category. She also was the winner of the physical fitness and poise and appearance categories.

When asked how she planned to handle the responsibilities of her new role, Miss Smith replied, "I'm going to take them by the horns."

Miss Smith, who plans to become a professional dancer, said she will study dancing in New York City next year.

The first alternate was 18-year-old Alison Leigh Skelton of West Lafayette, Ind.

The three other finalists were Elisabeth McMillen Fee, 18, of Arlington, Va.; Laura Beth Kofoid, 17, of Joliet, Ill., and Kristi Louise Becker, 17, of Oakland, Calif.

A total of $105,800 in scholarships were awarded during the program.

Fifty-two young women representing the 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico participated.

Life As It's Lived

June Brings Volcanic Heat To Eastern North Carolina

By GAIL MICHAELS

It's a sure bet that the song, "Nothing could be finer than to be in Carolina," was not composed in Smithfield in June. June boils into eastern North Carolina like a volcanic eruption.

There is little if any warning. One evening the temperature is in the balmy 70's. The next morning it's rocketing into the 90's. Worse than the heat is the humidity. Even the birds sweat.

Intelligent life retreats immediately to the safety of central air — which indicates that Phillip and I have a collective IQ of ten. We decided to brave out the month with only an attic fan.

Rather Phillip did. Despite my insistence that fuel conservation is a waste of energy, he decided to spend $100 to replace the fan motor.

"For that kind of money I could set the thermostat on 75 all summer long," I moaned.

He was deaf to my pleas. "Look at it as a long term investment. Besides, it improves the value of the house."

That is debatable. Within a few hours after the motor's installation, the shower curtain turned black, the first victim of galloping mildew. The washcloths soured upon contact with water. The dresser drawers swelled shut. All the shoes in the closet sported one decorator color, mold green, both outside and in. This was all the more distressing because the closet door wouldn't shut. Overnight it had warped.

Phillip was unpreturbed. He could afford to be. For eight hours a day he sat in an air-conditioned office while Meg and Zacahary and I took steam baths as the fan recirculated the water vapor.

I'll have to admit that the fan did help a little. I realized that every time I turned it off to do the wash. The fan and the washing machine couldn't run simultaneously without blowing the fuse which also cut off power to the refrigerator.

By the end of the week the children were harmonizing in a continuous whine and I was acting like a pressure cooker left too long on "high." The only thing in the house shorter than our tempers was the supper menu. I'd be the last one to defy an old saw. I couldn't stand the heat, so I got out of the kitchen.

Legislature Approves Redistricting Plans

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said Thursday that the redistricting map approved by the state Senate could stand any possible court challenge.

Rauch, chairman of the Senate Redistricting Committee, said his panel unanimously selected the Senate plan from among four maps proposed by a subcommittee.

"There is absolutely no gerrymandering," Rauch said. "There is absolutely no attempt to put any minority at a disadvantage, be it a racial minority, a political minority or a religious minority."

Both the House and Senate approved plans for redrawing their own chamber's districts. There was no opposition to the Senate plan, and only four dissenting votes marred passage of the House plan.

Each plan is expected to be approved up by their opposite chamber.

The Senate map breaks up some districts while renumbering others to come up with 29 districts, two more than the current 27. The House plan provides for 44 districts, one fewer than at present.

The number of legislators remains the same, with 50 in the Senate and 120 in the House.

Redistricting plans are required every 10 years to equalize the populations of each district in conformity with federal court rulings.

Based on the 1980 census, each senator should represent 117,489 people, with House members speaking for 48,954 people.

The Senate map has a 22 percent range of deviation. One district, the 22nd which is Guilford County, is 10 percent below that number, while the 15th District — comprised of Wake, Lee and Harnett counties — is 12.7 percent above the ideal figure.

Responding to concerns about the skew of nearly 13 percent, Rauch said that because few objections have been raised, such a deviation probably would not be questioned.

In the House plan, the range of deviation is 23.6 percent. The 19th District — Columbus, Bladen and Sampson counties — is the lowest deviation at 10.6 percent below the ideal number for its three representatives.

The largest House deviation is the 6th District, Halifax County, which is 12.9 percent above the ideal number for its one representative.

The other changes made by the Senate plan would:

— Divide the current 6th District of Edgecombe, Halifax, Martin and Pitt counties into two districts of two counties each.

Speaking of Your Health...

Antacid Overuse Is Harmful

My father pops antacid pills as one would eat peanuts. Not quite, but almost. I'm married and live about 200 miles from him but I constantly worry when he tells me he's been doing this for years and it's nothing to worry about. I just can't believe that they are entirely safe. Am I right? — Mrs. G.R., Tenn.

Dear Mrs. R.:

Your father is not alone in his misbelief that antacids are entirely safe when taken for any length of time in large quantities and without interruption. These people are also in error if they believe that any choice of antacid is as good as another.

Pressured by advertising campaigns, one would seem to believe that antacids are entirely harmless. They are not.

Calcium is one of the major ingredients in some of the antacids. In large doses they may possibly have an effect on some of the organs of the body. Magnesium hydroxide and other chemical agents are common ingredients in antacids, which can cause a variety of intestinal problems. Persistent diarrhea is only one of them.

Even though antacids taste good, their uncontrolled use may be hazardous. Certainly your father, like many of my other readers who have digestive disturbance, heartburn and stomach ulcers, should use antacids only for the period of time prescribed by the doctor.

A good way to wean your father from antacid-popping is to tell him that the liquid variety of antacid is more effective and the benefits last longer than does the pill variety. Rarely does anyone carry a bottle of antacid in his briefcase.

* * *

My son was injured in a motorcycle accident. He had a concussion of the brain. The doctors assure me that he has completely recovered. Yet I wonder if this damage will become evident at some future time of his life. He is now 17. — Mrs. B.J.T., Va.

Dear Mr. T.:

The brain is a remarkably hardy organ. In fact, even during surgery it can withstand far more manipulation than can the intestines or the stomach. It is astonishing what a remarkable ability to rebound to health the brain has.

You can be sure that the doctors were not merely speculating when they assured you your son was completely recovered. Undoubtedly your doctors and neurologists have done all the complicated electroencephalograph studies, CAT scans, and other sophisticated studies before they offered you such heartwarming support.

It is most important that you and your family do not, in a solicitous way, anxiously follow every movement of your son for fear that there will be evidence of brain damage.

It is easy to transmit your anxiety to him and convert him to psychological invalidism, even though his brain has completely and permanently recovered from the impact of the accident.

Reagan Prepares Plan For House Budget Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is preparing "marching orders" for Republicans in an all but certain House battle over a $37.8 billion package of budget cuts that the administration says doesn't go far enough.

Republican lawmakers were expected to reveal today how Reagan wants them to proceed on the reductions recommended by Democratic-controlled House committees. Congressional aides indicated that a GOP attempt to amend the plan was virtually assured.

However, one Republican aide who asked not to be identified said it appeared the Republicans were moving away from an attempt to substitute their own plan — encompassing Reagan's recommendations almost exactly — for the Democratic proposal.

Instead, the aide said the Republicans likely would offer a trimmed down substitute plan designed to pick up the support of conservative Democrats on a few key points.

Meanwhile, Democrats have moved to block Republicans from offering a substitute proposal on the floor.

The House Budget Committee voted 16-13 Thursday to recommend that the House Rules Committee exclude the Republicans from offering amendments. Under the rules of the House, amendments can be offered only if they are approved in advance by the Rules Committee.

The GOP strategy was being worked out late Thursday in a series of meetings at the White House and on Capitol Hill.

After a White House meeting Thursday afternoon that included Reagan, key Republicans and a handful of conservative Democrats, House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said the president would "issue our marching orders one way or another."

Some word had been expected by Thursday evening but a final decision was delayed after the president's budget architect, David A. Stockman, and Max Friedersdorf, presidential assistant for congressional liaison, met at the White House with senior administration officials and then went to Capitol Hill to consult with Michel.

Stockman and other administration officials are concerned that despite last-minute changes by Democrats, their $37.8 billion package of cuts for 1982 would fall $8.2 billion short of the permanent changes needed to put federal spending on a track toward Reagan's goal of a balanced budget in 1984.

In addition, the Democratic plan ignores Reagan's call to combine dozens of existing federal programs into a handful of "block grants" that would give the states much wider discretion in spending the money.

White House spokesman David Gergen acknowledged the Democrats had made revisions in their original plan, but added, "It hasn't gone far enough."

Reagan won a budget fight last month when 63 Democrats joined with the solid Republican minority to agree to a spending blueprint embraced by the president, but Michel has conceded it will be tougher to win this vote over the actual cuts.

"I'm not going to deny the fact ... that the last vote was a cake walk," Michel said. The upcoming vote will be the "first nitty gritty test of how sincere members were in that earlier vote. ... This is the flesh around the skeleton."

Asked if the administration had enough votes to prevail, Gergan replied, "They're not sure. There's not a hard vote count on this. The voting is in flux."

Democrats hold a 242-190 voting edge on paper in the House and Republicans would need the support of 27 Democrats to prevail in a showdown, assuming all GOP members back the president.

However, a number of the conservative Democrats who joined with Republicans to give the president his budget victory last month say they will stand with the Democratic leadership this time.

"I just don't see the need for a substitute," said Rep. Bo Ginn, D-Ga., a member of the Conservative Democratic Forum.

Ginn added that Reagan could count on no more than a dozen conservative Democratic votes this time.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., also said he thought Democrats would have the necessary votes to carry their package of cuts.

The speaker also cited the pressure the administration has been placing on Republican leaders to fight for cuts the president wants.

"I think Mr. Michel is being forced into it," O'Neill said. "I feel sorry for Bob. He's just being given the papers."

"It's a sad commentary," O'Neill said.

Asked about the comments, Michel replied, "I appreciated his empathy."

Demonstrators Take Over New Orleans Mayor's Office

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mayor Ernest Morial says he won't try to oust nine people who burst in and took over his office to protest what they said was police brutality against blacks.

The demonstrators — eight blacks and one white man — vowed to remain indefinitely in the mayor's second-floor office in the 11-story City Hall building until their demands were met.

Morial, the city's first black mayor, was in the City Council chambers Thursday morning when the protesters took over his office. He simply conducted business elsewhere.

"Although they seek a physical confrontation, I will not accommodate them," Morial said. "They will not be allowed to provoke anyone into a physical confrontation with them."

The mayor said the protesters would be allowed to stay as long as they posed no threat to safety and destroyed no public property.

The protesters blew whistles and wore signs bearing the names of blacks they said were slain by "killer cops," and someone pulled a fire alarm when the takeover occurred. The mayor's receptionist said she was roughed up when the demonstrators pushed into the office.

By midafternoon, the protesters stretched out on sofas and on the floor, while a handful of plainclothes policemen lounged nearby and in the outer offices. Workers continued with their duties.

The demonstration was coordinated by Community Action Now and The Police Brutality Committee, a group formed after four blacks in the Algiers district were killed — three of them in separate raids — by police investigating the murder of a white patrolman last November.

Public outcry over those killings led to the resignation of Police Superintendent James C. Parsons. A local grand jury refused to indict any of the officers involved in the shootings, but one officer, Stephen Reboul, was fired last week for alleged past misconduct.

Kalaamu Ya Salaam, a spokesman for the demonstrators, presented a list of three demands — the firing of all officers involved in the shootings, the release of police photographs of the raids, and polygraph tests for the officers involved.

Morial responded that the officers involved were constitutionally entitled to a hearing before they could be fired. He said the officers' names already were known and release of their photographs might endanger the officers and their families. And he said lie-detector evidence could never be used as trial evidence because of constitutional guarantees.

Airline Ordered To Pay Cost Of DC-10 Search

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge has ordered American Airlines to pay the costs of a search for an internal maintenance report allegedly concealed following the nation's worst air disaster.

A committee of lawyers representing relatives of the crash victims asked U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will to order the airline to pay legal fees and other expenses incurred during their pretrial attempts to uncover the document, known as the Eastburn Report.

The report was prepared after the May 1979 crash of an American DC-10 that killed 273 persons near O'Hare International Airport.

"The bottom line is, we don't know today what was in the Eastburn Report," Will said in issuing the order Thursday. He called the search for the report a "fruitless pursuit" that led attorneys "around the barn several times."

It was later discovered that all notes taken by airline investigators reviewing maintenance procedures had been shredded and all copies of the Eastburn Report were destroyed at the request of American's in-house attorneys.

Donald Madole, a Washington, D.C., attorney who heads the plaintiffs' committee, estimated his group spent at least 2,000 hours looking for the report and trying to obtain materials the airline claimed were privileged.

He estimated the cost of the search at more than $200,000.

At first American denied the existence of the report, but later said it existed and maintained it had been incorporated into a new report, Will said.

The original report was put together by Mack Eastburn, American's safety director, at the request of Donald J. Lloyd-Jones, American's senior vice president for operations.

Eastburn said in a deposition that he put his notes in an office paper shredder after lawyers told him to destroy all notes taken during the investigation. He said he handed over his only copy of the results to Lloyd-Jones.

Will said that when the airline finally turned over the second report a month after he ordered it, the documents amounted to a "catalogue of junk" that included portions of the Federal Register and two dozen undated documents without authors' names.

"No honest attorney could have thought that those were privileged documents," Will said.

McDonnell Douglas Corp., manufacturer of the jet, had contended the report was critical of American's maintenance and engineering procedures.

McDonnell Douglas dropped its effort to trace the report after it settled out of court with American over what percentage each company would pay in damage claims resulting from the crash.

Boys' State Officer Named

WINSTON-SALEM — Chip Little, a rising senior at J. H. Rose High School, was elected Lieutenant Governor of Boys' State at Wake Forest University on Wednesday.

Little, a member and chairman of the Federalist Party, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Little of Greenville. He defeated John Fleer of Winston-Salem, a member of the Nationalist Party, by a vote of 219 to 207.

Ltlle will be one of two young men from Boys' State who will address the State American Legion convention Saturday in Raleigh.

He is president-elect of the Rose High Student Government Association and is a member of the First Presbyterian Church.

Boys' State, which began on Sunday, June 14 at Wake Forest University, will run through Saturday, June 20. Sponsored by the American Legion and Wake Forest, the event gives students an opportunity to study government at city, county and state levels. About 460 North Carolina high school students ar attending Boys' State this year.

WISHING WELL

CHICAGO (AP) — When they opened up Max the harbor seal to see what did him in, they found nearly $10 in pennies, a brass ring and a medallion in his stomach, Lincoln Park Zoo Director Lester Fisher says.

The 5-year-old seal fell victim to the "wishing-well syndrome," the habit visitors have of tossing coins into the seal pool, officials said.
