UNC Governors Accept New Desegregation Plan

By United Press International

The Reagan administration and North Carolina ended a decade-long university desegregation dispute Saturday with a deal that uses goals instead of mandatory quotas, helping black colleges without penalizing white schools.

The agreement was announced by Education Secretary Terrel Bell and calls for the addition of 29 new academic programs and better funding for the state's five predominently black public colleges.

The agreement is aimed at creating student bodies in the 16-campus University of North Carolina system so their racial balances resemble the black-white breakdown in the population.

The change ends a threat of a federal cut-off in education aid — something both sides said privately was never a serious possibility — and is a major step in Bell's stated intention to end state-federal confronations.

The agreement, approved unanimously by the university's board of governors Saturday, does not require the UNC system to dismantle programs at white schools to eliminate program duplication or include mandatory quotas, as the Carter administration had demanded.

"We have a good agreement and I'm proud of it," Bell said. "It's going to make education for black students in North Carolina more accessible and enhance the quality of it."

Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. praised the settlement, but refused to comment on specifics.

"I am hopeful that the proposed agreement will bring an end to this dispute," he said. "My administration will continue this commitment to improving the qualities of these (predominantly black) institutions and to the educational excellence of the UNC system."

The agreement does not necessarily end the matter. The NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, which brought the original suit that led the government to get involved, will have 72 hours to review the deal.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., a lawyer for the LDF, blasted the agreement.

"Twenty-seven years after the Supreme Court outlawed segregation, the Reagan Administration and the government of North Carolina agreed on a segregated system of higher education," Rauh said in an interview from Washington.

"This is a classic case of separate and unequal," he said. The settlement does not consider the question of duplication of academic programs at black and white campuses, and the integration goals are "wholly inadequate."

Rauh said the LDF will consider its legal options when it receives a copy of the proposed settlement.

Bell said he expected the NAACP to go along but that if not, he would personally defend the agreement in federal court should the civil rights group seek to block ratification.

The agreement was hammered out in secret negotiations at the same time the government was taking the state to court in a legal suit that could have cost North Carolina $90 million in federal education aid. Bell credited Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.,

Pringles Are Alive ... With A Fresh Face

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

In October 1973, Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. announced plans to build a food products plant on a 220-acre site off the Old Creek Road north of Greenville. It was designed to produce Pringle's Newfangled Potato Chips.

At that time, Pringle's were being produced at the company's Jackson, Tenn., plant and being sold throughout the Midwest and in portions of the Middle Atlantic, Great Plains and Southwestern states.

The local plant, with some 10 acres under roof, began producing Pringle's in August 1975. But because of low sales, Pringle's production was shut down here in July 1978 and the local facility has been producing Pampers disposable diapers — in two plant expansions totaling some 16 acres — since that time.

"The brand over the past several years hasn't lived up to our expectations for it," Don Tassone, a spokesman for P&G said from the company's home office in Cincinnati, Ohio last week.

But Pringle's are still being produced for sale nationwide and the company is in the midst of a national television advertising and couponing effort boosting the chips.

"We changed the product line-up of Pringles in late March," Tassone said. "You are just now seeing the advertising on TV for it. The line now includes three products: regular, Pringle's Light, and Pringle's Rippled.

Tassone explained that the "old line" included regular, rippled and Country Style Pringle's. "Compared to the old line, the addition of the new Light replaced the old Country type. They are no longer available.

"The Light version actually," according to the spokesman, are "chips baked slightly prior to frying" and contain one-third less fat and a third less salt "than the average conventional chips."

Rippled Pringle's, he noted, are "designed for dips" and "are thicker than regular."

The regular version of Pringle's, according to Tassone, are the ones "approved most by taste and are better than the original style" produced in Greenville and Jackson in the early years.

Regular Pringle's are packaged in red 4½ ounce single cans or 9 ounce twin packs, while Light Pringle's are packaged in red 9 ounce twin packs with silver labels. Rippled Pringle's are packed in red 8 ounce twin packs with yellow labels.

The current advertising copy, according to Tassone, is "based round taste...and we hope the new Pringle's will appeal better than the previous ones to consumers' taste."

The spokesman emphasized "we haven't had any indication as to sales" since the ad campaign began. "It's too early to tell."

When the production of Pringle's was halted here, P&G left the production line equipment in place. However, over the past three years, some of it has been removed. Parts have been robbed from other machines, apparently going to the Jackson plant for repair of equipment there.

If the sale of Pringle's boomed, would P&G once again produce the chips in Greenville? "The possibility is always open," Tassone said. "But I'm not sure..."

Whether Pringle's are ever made in Greenville again or not, P&G still has a sizeable investment here. According to the Pitt County Tax Supervisor's office, in January 1976, after the production of Pringle's was underway, the value of the plant and land was listed at $6.37 million, while the personal property — equipment and inventory — was valued at $27.65 million.

This year, the total tax value of P&G's property here is listed at $55.9 million. This includes $4.67 million for the land and plant and $3.51 million in equipment and inventory for the old Pringle's operation and $13.7 million for the P&G Paper Products Co. land and building and $34 million in equipment and inventory.

More Talks Planned Today

Strike Threat Still On

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government and union negotiators, after meeting for 12 hours Saturday, recessed their talks without reaching an agreement to head off a threatened nationwide strike by air traffic controllers strike would ground thousands of flights and snarl air travel for millions of Americans.

The two sides will resume talking at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Although Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis appeared to be optimistic that a strike Monday could be averted, Robert Poli, president of the controllers union, told reporters that he did not believe any progress had been made during the day-long negotiations.

Lewis said the two sides are not yet in agreement and reiterated that he will not provide money beyond the $40 million package already proposed by the Reagan administration

Earlier, Poli said, "We're still talking ... nothing has broken down." He also saw the possibility of averting a Monday strike if the talks "really become meaningful."

So far, however, he said they had not reached that point.

The two sides met for 12 hours Saturday, talking at times directly and at other times through a federal mediator. Lewis said his aim during the day was to "agree in principle tonight" and leave the final contract to negotiating teams later.

Presumably, part of such an agreement in principle would include an assurance that a strike deadline, threatened for 7 a.m. Monday, would be postponed.

Earlier, Lewis said "we obviously don't want a strike," but he said that if controllers walk off the job, "we'll come down with the full force of the Justice Department ... we'll start the fines immediately."

At the White House, Gergen said Saturday's talks dealt with substance and added: "The strong em-

Iranian Debate Leads To Deadly Street Battles

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Thousands of Iranians battled on Tehran's main streets with guns, iron bars, clubs and rocks Saturday after Parliament began debate on impeaching President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who has disappeared. Hospitals reported 10 dead and 70 wounded, but witnesses estimated up to 30 killed and 200 injured.

Iran's Revolutionary Guards declared a 24-hour "full red alert" to put down what the official Pars news agency called a "revolt." It said "counter-revolutionaries" supporting Bani-Sadr were trying to destroy the Islamic revolutionary regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Bani-Sadr was reported moving from one hideout to another in the capital to avert arrest by Revolutionary Guards.

A witness in Tehran contacted by The Associated Press from Beirut said three leftist pro-Bani-Sadr groups began demonstrating in various sections of the Iranian capital about 4 p.m. and that the clashes continued on a sporadic basis for four hours.

The witness, who declined to be identified, said pro-clergy hardliners numbering about 3,000 and armed with clubs, iron bars, and stones, battled an equally large group of leftists marching near the main throughfares of Mossadegh and Fatemi streets.

He said Revolutionary Guards, an irregular force loyal to Khomeini, joined the melee on the side of the pro-clergy hardliners and opened fire with hand-held weapons on the leftists, who were also armed and shot back.

The witness said that the Revolutionary Guards fired tear gas in an effort to disperse the demonstrators, identified as members of the Mujahedeen Khalq, Ranjar, or Maoists, Fedayeen guerrillas and its offshoot Peykar. The groups have rallied behind the president, who is in hiding.

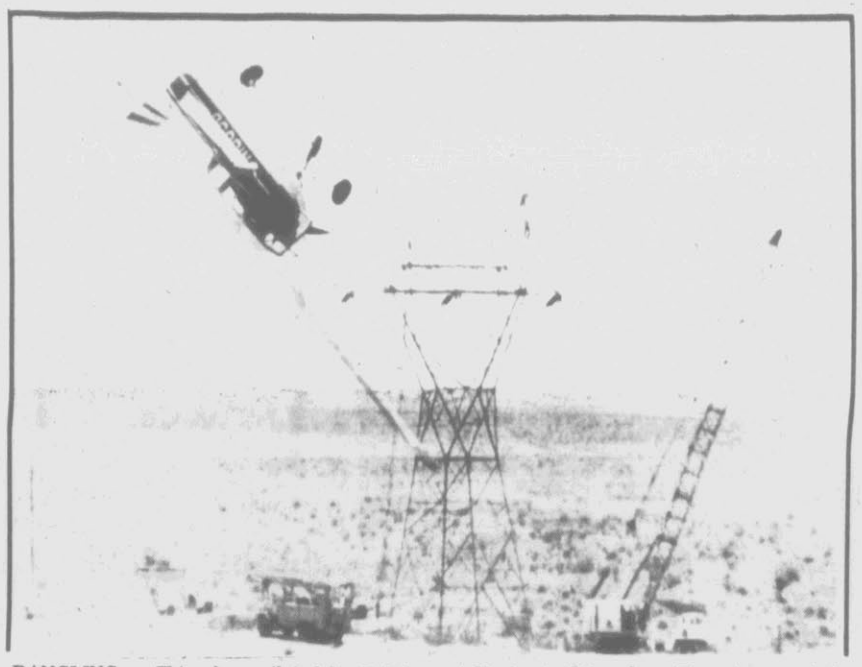

He said both sides barricaded themselves behind cars and buses that had been abandoned in the middle of the streets or parked along the curbs. He said some car windows were broken out by the demonstrators while others were shattered by gunfire.

The confrontation tapered off after the tear gas was fired. But clashes elsewhere in the city were reported continuing into the night, although less intense than the afternoon battles.

A statement from the Revolutionary Guards broadcast by Tehran Radio said a 24-hour alert had been declared. It accused the Mujahedeen Khalq, or leftist people's guerrillas, of joining "other counter-revolutionary groups...to counter Islam and the Koran in an armed manner."

Observers in Tehran have been expecting anti-government riots if Bani-Sadr's impeachment process got under way because the president and his supporters have no other outlet for protest.

The debate was adjourned until Sunday, when a vote is possible.

It took rescue workers five hours to get Neal out of the plane. The wires carried 230,000 volts. Neal was injured, but collapsed when he was rescued. See story on A-8. (AP Laserphoto)

East Carolina To Honor Former Leader With Theatre Arts Center

By Francine Perry
ECU News Bureau

When East Carolina University dedicates its newly enlarged Theatre Arts Center to its fifth president, John Decatur Messick, in August, it will pay tribute to one of the more dynamic and colorful leaders in the institution's 74-year history.

During Messick's administration, 1947-1960, he turned a small teachers' college of 1,400 students known as "Ee-Cee-Tee-Cee" into the state's third largest campus.

"East Carolina was already more than a teachers college when I went there,"

DR. JOHN D. MESSICK

Messick recalls. He noted that bachelor of arts degrees in various liberal arts have been available since 1941.

But the school was sorely in need of vigorous leadership. After the first 25 years under its first president, Dr. Robert Herring Wright, the school was beset by administrative and financial woes during three suceeding leaders.

A search produced Messick, a tall, silver-haired administrator described at the time of his selection as being "cheerful, friendly, dignified in manner and handsome in appearance."

Messick's education was obtained at Elon College, UNC-Chapel Hill and New York University, and he had served as dean of instruction at the Montclair, N.J., State Teachers College. A native of Beaufort County, Messick had an insightful grasp of eastern North Carolina's culture and concerns.

One of Messick's most significant undertakings was to push through the General Assembly a bill changing the school's name from "East Carolina Teachers College" to "East Carolina College." Other BA degree-granting teachers' colleges were undergoing name changes, but East Carolina was the first in North Carolina to do so.

While the name change was important, Messick was after more substantial recognition from the Legislature. He and his trustees frequently lobbied for increased appropriations.

In January 1953, Messick cited figures which showed

Kremlin Fumes Publicly As Polish Crisis Grows

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Political activists vowed a nationwide protest to carry on the cause of three hunger-strikers who ended their fast Saturday, and the Kremlin accused Poland's Communist Party of being unable to handle the crisis.

The Committee for the Defense of Prisoners of Conscience said it would protest "incessantly" on an "all-Poland scale" until two convicted bombers are released from prison. Roman Catholic church leaders also vowed to work on behalf of getting the two prisoners released.

The committee said in written statements distributed to Western news agencies that pickets will start marching outside provincial courthouses next week and a demonstration will be held in Poznan, where a monument to Poles killed in 1956 food riots was to be unveiled.

Sign-carrying protesters will also demonstrate June 29 at the next meeting of the Council of State, which has the power to reprieve prisoners, and members of Parliament will be asked to give an accounting of why the bombers, two brothers, have not been pardoned, the committee announced.

The new Kremlin salvo was fired from Moscow by Leonid M. Zamyatin, a member of the Soviet's Communist Party Central Committee, which has expressed increasing alarm over 10 months of unrest in Poland sparked by Solidarity, the first union in the Soviet bloc free of Communist Party control.

"The (Polish) crisis was, at first, in the economic field," he said. "Now the political state as well as the ideological state of the country are in crisis. The time has come for decisive action so that Poland should really be taken out of the catastrophic situation."

Zamyatin said that Poles and Soviet citizens are demanding to know "why the Polish leadership cannot control the situation ... Why the Polish leadership cannot in this struggle fight back in such a way to strengthen the position of socialism and return the country to a normal way of life."

POPE JOHN PAUL II — returned to a Rome hospital Saturday and began undergoing a full body scan in an effort to determine the cause of a persistent fever. Aides said the ope, looking thin and pale as he left his car to enter the hospital, has experienced difficulty in recovering from last month's assissination attempt. A hospital spokesman said the 61-year-old pope's life was not in danger, but refused to characterize his condition. (AP LASERPHOTO)

Wrecks Reported

An estimated $7,135 in property damages resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police Friday and Saturday.

Heaviest damage occurred in a 12:45 p.m. collision Saturday in the parking lot at Carolina East Mall involving cars driven by Clarence Arthur Rawls III of Washington and John James Lavin Jr. of Route 2, Winterville.

Damage was set at $2,000 to the Rawls vehicle and $75 to the Lavin vehicle.

A car driven by Victoria Lorena Roberts of Route 6, Greenville, entered South Pitt Street near Cedar Lane Saturday, reportedly striking a trailer pulled by a vehicle belonging to Mark Lee Warren of 107 Dellwood Drive, Greenville. The 2:34 p.m. accident caused $1,800 in damages to the Roberts vehicle and $100 damage to the trailer.

A 7:45 p.m. mishap Friday on South Evans Street involved cars operated by Michael Ray Lewis of Route 3, Ayden, and Frederick Lawton Sutton of Route 5, Kinston. The Lewis vehicle had stopped on Evans Street near Arlington Boulevard when the Sutton vehicle, unable to stop, collided with the Lewis car.

Damage was set at $1,485 to the Sutton vehicle and $175 to the Lewis car.

But he said the Justice and Transportation Departments are preparing the necessary papers "in the unhappy circumstances" of a strike taking place to seek a court injunction against it. The goal is to have an injunction in place by 7 a.m. Monday, he said.

"In the event of a strike, the number one priority is safety," he said, and not simply keeping the airlines flying.

The resumption of even informal discussions Friday night and again Saturday by Poli, head of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, and negotiators from the Federal Aviation Administration brought a hint that an agreement might be reached to prevent the strike that is predicted would cost the economy $250 million a day and inconvenience millions of travelers.

But both sides appeared still to be far apart on a wage package. Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett was said to be shuffling between the two sides, who were in separate rooms. At times, however, representives from both camps are talking directly, said D.J. Yount, a spokeswoman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Lewis, who participated in the talks for a little more than an hour and then left, told reporters the Reagan administration is standing firm on its $40 million wage package submitted early in the week.

Syrians Shell Lebanese Cities, Kill Two

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian shelling of Lebanese Christian strongholds in Beirut and the eastern city of Zahle killed two people Saturday and wounded several others, police said.

The renewed shelling undermined a cease-fire between the Syrian troops and Christian militias worked out on June 9 by mediators from the 20-nation Arab League.

Police said one person was killed and 11 others were wounded in Christian-populated East Beirut, while one person was killed in Zahle, 30 miles east of the capital.

The latest round of violence started April 1 with heavy artillery and rocket duels between Syrian troops and Christian militias dominated by the conservative Phalange party.

Syria has an estimated 22,000 troops stationed in Lebanon under an Arab League mandate to police the 1975-76 civil war armistice. The Christians claim the Syrians have become an occupation army bent on destroying them because of Israel's close support of the Phalange.

Israeli jets shot down two Syrian helicopters in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley on April 28 to protect the Christians. The Syrians retaliated by deploying anti-aircraft missiles in the area the next day. Israel has threatened to attack the area unless the missiles are withdrawn.

President Reagan's envoy, Philip C. Habib, met with Saudi Arabian officials in Jidda Saturday about ways to defuse the missile crisis, but no details were announced. The Saudis help bankroll the Syrians.

Habib flew to Saudi Arabia on Friday from Tel Aviv, where Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin told reporters the U.S. envoy's 10-day-old mediation effort had achieved "no results" so far.

In Damascus, the official Syrian newspaper Tishrin accused the Reagan administration of undermining Habib's mediation by favoring Israel. It said Washington was "not allowing Habib to maneuver and consequently his mission was paralyzed from the start."

Habib's first round of Middle East shuttle diplomacy last May has been widely credited with averting open war between Syria and Israel. But his efforts to bring Israel and the Arab states closer together was thrown off course June 7 when Israeli jets destroyed Iraq's nuclear reactor.

Arab outrage over the Israeli attack has been unanimous. Official newspapers in Kuwait, Jordan and the Persian Gulf state of Qatar all expressed disappointment over what they called a "weak resolution" by the U.N. Security Council Friday condemning the attack.

Begin brushed aside the council's unanimous action in a speech at a political rally in Ashdod for the national election June 30.

"Better a condemnation in the Security Council without an atomic reactor in Iraq than a reactor without the condemnation," Israel Radio quoted Begin as saying. It was his first pulice comment on the U.N. resolution.

Israel Television said Begin's cabinet would discuss the resolution at its weekly meeting Sunday.

Protestors Leave Office

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Six demonstrators ended a three-day occupation of Mayor Ernest Morial's office Saturday night after about 150 people rallied at City Hall protesting alleged police brutality against blacks.

The rally dispersed after a number of emotional speeches, including appearances by four black men, one white man and one black woman who who stormed into Morial's second-floor office about 11 a.m. Thursday.

"We achieved everything we wanted to achieve in the mayor's office. We're going to go somewhere else," said Michael Williams, an organizer of the protest.

Williams, who was arrested a week ago for assaulting a police officer, said a demonstration is planned for July 4th. "We are going to be disruptive and aim for civil disobedience," he said.

Although Morial refused to meet with the protesters, chief city administrative officer Reynard Rochon talked to them for about an hour Saturday afternoon. He left without comment.

Earlier Saturday, the six inside Morial's office had decided to stay on when, with temperatures outside in the mid-90s, air conditioning in the 11-story building was turned off.

I cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away.

With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land

And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.

And you—oh, you, who the wildest yearn
For an old-time step, and the glad return,

Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of there as the love of here.

Think of him still as the same. I say, that ECC's share of funds per student enrolled was less than for any other state-supported white college except Appalachian State. "It is not that the other campuses need less, but that ECC needs more," he explained.
He is not dead. He is just away.

When East Carolina's tiny library facility seemed to shrink with swelling enrollment and library holdings, Messick pleaded for and finally received an $814,000 state appropriation for a new building. So while money was no problem, critical post-war building supplies were; there could be no construction without steel.

Students were crowding each other in the cramped library facility and many volumes were stacked on the floor for want of space, a situation which might have continued had not Messick learned that Dr. Ernest Hollis, head of higher education in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, was to be given the task of steel allocation.

Messick invited Hollis to speak at East Carolina's spring commencement and bring his wife also, to be the house guests of the Messicks in the president's residence.

"While he was there, I got his promise for the steel for the library, and he followed through," said Messick. "Soon thereafter, the state budget officer, D.S. Coltrane, and Governor (Kerr) Scott wanted steel for UNC and failed."

Coltrane remarked that Messick must have got his steel "through persistence." But Messick said, "I got it through foresight."

Messick's efforts were spurred by increasing student demand upon East Carolina College. More and more students, including veterans with educational benefits, applied for admission.

While classroom space was ample, East Carolina suffered severe lack of housing space, on and off campus, so hundreds of applicants had to be turned away each year during the early and mid 1950s.

Messick appealed several times to Greenville citizens to rent their "unused rooms" to students as enrollment doubled, tripled, then quadrupled. He was able to get funds for five new student dormitories and an addition to another.

In all, East Carolina acquired 10 new buildings during the Messick years, modified eight others, purchased 80 acres of land, doubled the size of its library holdings, tripled its number of faculty members and instituted 200 new scholarship programs.

Messick Theatre Arts Center

Always interested in technology as a tool for education, Messick established a closed-circuit television system and a campus public radio station. ECC became the first campus in the Southeast to offer courses via commercial television.

New courses were developed, resulting in more degree programs and pre-professional curricula. As ECC grew, Messick stayed in close touch with the general public and other educators, giving speechs, writing articles and completing a book which was published by the Duke University Press.

His vision of East Carolina was prophetic — even as he worked to strengthen the basic science programs and establish a nursing school which received approval in 1959, his long-range view was that East Carolina might someday achieve a two-year medical school. As far back as 1953, Messick urged at a civic gathering in Rocky Mount that East Carolina be allowed "to assume the proportions of a university."

Inevitably, as the college grew, Messick caused some consternation among budget-minded officials and competitors for the education dollar at other campuses. He was told by one university administrator that the "State Board of Higher Education was brought into being to clip our progress at ECC."

There were disappointments and delays, but Messick achieved noticeamong North Carolina citizens. A November 1958 poll sponsored by "The State" magazine revealed that John Messick, along with Billy Graham, Carl Sandburg, Sam Ervin and Andy Griffith, was one of the 10 "most interesting Tar Heels." He was the only educator in the top 10.

Messick was mentioned as a possible successor to Gordon Gray as president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina system in 1955, and a few years later, some Greenville leaders wanted him to try for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

But, in October 1959, when Messick announced his wish to resign as ECC presidemt, it was with no stated intention to rise to a more demanding position.

He had enjoyed the "loyal cooperation of almost everyone involved in the on-going program at ECC," he told the trustees, but he had suffered frustration often when "it was impossible to obtain sufficient appropriations" for East Carolina. "I am tired of being tired," he said.

Although he had reached retirement age, Messick continued for another 10 years in leadership roles, as assistant director of the National Committee on Special Education and Rehabilitation and at Lyndonville, Vt., State Teachers College and at Oral Roberts University, Tulsa, Okla.

As ORU's executive vice president and dean, Messick had immense funds to support his ideas, which included an electronic dial access system and learning resources center lauded by the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education as "the first great technological revolution in education in five centuries."

Messick's long career in education was motivated by his unwavering belief in a statement made by Aristotle, which Messick quoted in a 1950 address at the New York University of Education: "All who have meditated on the art of governing mankind have been convinced that the fate of empires depends on the education of the youth."

The work of John Messick was saluted by his colleagues, the press and political figures, but one of the most meaningful tributes appeared in an East Carolina student newspaper editorial:

"By pouring himself heart and soul into his work he built a little teachers' college into one of the finest places of learning in the state ... He is a great man because he cared."

with helping get the talks started.

The dispute is the closest Washington has ever come to cutting off federal education aid to public colleges. The Education Department has ordered more than a dozen other states to change their desegregation plans to remedy similar but less serious alleged civil rights violations.

Since 1970 civil rights groups have been after North Carolina to do a better job of eliminating a system in its public colleges in which five of the 16 state colleges are predominately black and the 11 others are almost exclusively white.

North Carolina maintained all along the fight was not over desegregation, to which it was committed, but over retaining control of its university system.

Upon taking office, Bell said he wanted to end federal-state confrontations in which withdrawal of funds is the issue. In addition to the UNC agreement, the department previously announced settlement of a sex discrimination compliant against the University of Akron in Ohio that officials hope will eliminate the more than 100 other compliants in that area.

"In the North Carolina case the rights of all students are ensured within the framework of the law and the Constitution," he said. "The state will control destiny of its own distinguished and respected university."

Bell said the new programs — ranging from computer science and accounting to special education and engineering — were in "high demand areas with great job opportunity."

"This is a very significant commitment .... (It) will strengthen these institutions and will draw academically talented white youngsters," Bell said. "I'm impressed with the program commitment made here. We feel we have an agreement that is going to strengthen the traditionally black institutions."

Bell said the university already had some of those programs in the planning stage before the agreement was made but said he did not know how many and emphasized none had previously been approved.

In addition to the 29 new programs and three graduate centers to be created and enlarged at the five black colleges, the pact also sets "goals" — rather than "quotas" — of 10.6 percent black enrollment at white schools and 15 percent white enrollment at the black schools by Dec. 31, 1986.

Bell said if the goals are not met it will not mean automatically the state has violated the agreement.

"This flexibility on the goals will ensure that they are not interpreted as rigid quotas at some time in the future," Bell said.

The agreement also guarantees "equitable financial support" for the traditonally black institutions and continued integration of the faculty and staffs at both the white and black schools.

The black collges are North Carolina A&T, Elizabeth City State, Winston-Salem State, Fayetteville State and North Carolina Central University. Bell said UNC officials reported they currently are spending more per black student than per white pupil.

Bell said when he took office he felt it was time for a fresh try at ending the legal battle that so far has cost North Carolina $1.5 million in legal fees.

He said talked with Helms, who told UNC officils of his interest and secret talks began through Washington lawyer Douglas Bennett, a former aide to President Gerald Ford.

Bennett and top Education Department lawyers met with UNC officials a dozen times beginning in February. The finishing touches were put on in the last few days. Bell said he never talked directly with UNC officials about the case.

Bennett declined to discuss specifics of the give and take between the negotiators leading to the final deal. But the statements of the Carter administration made it obvious the key issues were applying goals instead of quotas and giving the programs to the black schools without removing some from the white institutions.

The secretary called the agreement a "near formal settlement" and indicated he expected to ask U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree in North Carolina to agree to a consent decree that would end the legal entanglements.

Bell said he was confident both the judge and the NAACP would agree to the deal and make moot the court hearing in Washington on the federal attempt to cut off funds, set to resume July 7.

"Obviously we wouldn't be at this point if we didn't think we weren't there (at a settlement)," he said. He said the agreement was "something we anticipate being able to finalize very soon."

Officials Say 'Control' Was Key

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — University of North Carolina officials said Saturday the key to settling an 11-year-old desegregation dispute with the federal government was the preservation of the university's right to control academic programs.

"I'm hopeful this has ended the matter for once and for all and the university can get on with the business of educating," said John R. Jordan of Raleigh, chairman of the UNC Board of Governors.

"North Carolina will control the destiny of its own distinguished and respected university. That's what this whole lawsuit has been about — the determination of the people of North Carolina to control their own destiny," he said after the board unanimously accepted a settlement negotiated by university officials and the U.S. Department of Education.

The agreement was announced in Washington by Education Secretary Terrell Bell, who stressed UNC officials will retain control over academic programs in the 16-campus system.

"We feel we have an agreement that is going to strengthen the traditionally black institutions," Bell said.

Jordan, UNC President William Friday and Joseph J. Levin Jr., a Washington lawyer hired to represent the university, all said they noticed a more cooperative attitude by federal officials during four and a half months of negotiations leading to the settlement of an 11-year-old desegregation dispute with the federal government.

"I think the difference in approach has been when we went in with (Education Secretary Terrell) Bell, we were treated as colleagues, not as adversaries," said UNC President William C. Friday. "It's interesting to watch a climate change."

UNC officials say their previous efforts to negotiate a desegregation plan were frustrated by the hostile attitude of former Carter administration officials in charge of civil rights compliance for the Department of Education and its predecessor, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

During those earlier talks, both sides could never agree on the issue of program duplication, particularly between nearby campuses. Federal officials wanted the university to make a commitment to reduce the duplication and to transfer programs to black campuses if other desegregation efforts failed, but UNC officials refused, saying the location and creation of programs should remain under the control of the board of governors.

Under the settlement approved Saturday, 29 academic programs ranging from accounting to special education and engineering will be added to the five predominantly black campuses during the next five years.

Clay Kirkman Says . . .

Although your spring planting chores are over, there are still a lot of garden cares to be attended to. Gardens will need watering, plants will need spraying and yards will need mowing.

One of the main pests this time of year is the Japanese Beetle. They are easy to identify because of their green color with a metallic finish. It sometimes seems as though they will eat everything in sight. They are particularly attracted to roses, more specifically the lighter colored varieties such as white and yellow. They will also attack other plants, but roses usually concern us the most.

There are several means of controlling beetles, but dusting or spraying the plants with Sevin is the most common way. If your roses don't have many, you could simply pick them off and destroy them. Japanese Beetles will only stay around for about six weeks, since that is the length of their life-span.

Also, be sure to watch for signs of blackspot and powdery mildew on roses. These diseases can cause severe problems if not controlled. The best method to avoid these diseases is to start spraying the plants when the leaves first appear in the spring. If you have not already done this, you can control the diseases fairly well by spraying with Phalton or Funginex every week or ten days.

Belk Tyler Garden Shops can supply you with all your summer gardening needs. We carry everything you will need to control your insect and disease problems from sprays to sprayers.

CP&L Decision To Sell Capacity Is Momentous

It is almost impossible to envision the impact that a Carolina Power & Light Co. decision to sell part of its generating capacity to municipalities which own their electric systems will have.

For municipalities such as Greenville, Winterville, Ayden and Farmville it is a change comparable to the initial decision to establish the municipal systems. It is as significant as the decisions made a couple of decades back to abandon inefficient municipal electric plants and to purchase power from the large utilities companies.

The municipals involved belong to the North Carolina Power Agency Number III and negotiations have been underway for some time to purchase the generating capacity from CP&L. (Some of the municipals are customers of CP&L and some of VEPCO). The idea of selling capacity to the municipals was attractive to CP&L because it needs the money to complete other projects without enormously increasing its own costs. The municipals are in a position to borrow money at relatively low interest rates so they, too, will benefit from the deal.

The agency will actually own portions of nuclear and coal plants. They will continue to be operated by CP&L, but the municipals will be purchasing their own power from equipment they own. Thus they will be in a position to keep costs at the lowest point.

In effect, the cities will be returning to the generating business which they abandoned years ago. Then, however, the small plants were inefficient and it was more economical to purchase from the private companies. Now the municipals will have ownership in efficient electric generating operations. It could mean significant savings for the municipal customers in the years ahead.

Award Is Measure Of Farm Service

Pitt County Agricultural Extension Chairman Leroy James was one of five recipients of the N. C. County Agents Association's distinguished service award at the annual meeting held recently.

The award is given for outstanding work in administration and implementation of programs for farm families in their respective areas.

James will be nationally honored at Cornell University in August along with agents from the other states.

James cites improved housing, beautification and increased syobean yields as among his accomplishments as chairman. He emphasizes effective management and crop production, good recordkeeping and providing consultive services to increase crop productivity.

Chairman James' selection to receive the award is quite a personal honor. Equally important, it is a measure of the high quality services that Pitt County citizens are receiving from the Agricultural Extension office.

Sunday Morning Notes

Joe Jenkins of our advertising department had the job of looking after some animals at the home of a friend who was vacationing recently.

Joe, accompanied by Tom Baines, went around the first day, let himself in the house with the keys the friend had furnished and fed the animals.

Then it dawned on Joe . . . the keys to the house were left on a table behind the locked door.

Checking around clearly showed there wasn't any access without the keys. He later called his friend long distance to determine if there was a spare key anywhere.

In Edgar Allen Poe's "The Goldbug" style, the friend told Joe to start at an old stump at the northeast corner of the house, take 15 paces to the west to a weeping willow tree, 22 paces to the east to a pine, site a clothes line pole to the north, then proceed 10 paces south and the key would be buried there.

Joe followed directions to the letter, and sure enough the key was there.

Hot was the word for this area last week. Temperatures hovered near the 100 mark and in some areas exceeded that figure. Air conditioners worked overtime and electrical usage ran high. It was a typical Eastern North Carolina heat wave.

How hot was it? Well, your columnist's home air conditioner broke down, and a panel inside the car, which was attached with an adhesive, melted and fell off.

At Quail Ridge Condominiums a pretty girl wearing high heels stopped to chat in a parking area. As she prepared to leave she found the heels had sunk into the asphalt.

There were the usual comments around town about the weather.

"It's so hot, even the dogs chasing cats are walking."

"With this heat the only way I'll move is to the ice box for beer."

"With heat like this, why is there an energy shortage?"

"If we could just bottle this and save it for January."

"If you think this is hot, you should have been here for the summer of 1939."

"So you think this is hot. You should have been in North Africa during World War II."

"This ain't nothing compared to working in the kitchen of a short order restaurant."

Democrats Turn To "Special Interest" Committee

RALEIGH — A new direction for Democratic Party politics has been launched with the appointment of the first "special interest" committee within the party itself.

Billy Yeargin will coordinate activities of a committee on agriculture, working out of party headquarters in Raleigh. He is formerly managing director of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee.

Other party committees to come will concern themselves with public education, health and safety, development of business and industry, and problems of the aging.

Party chief Russell Walker, state senator from Asheboro, says this sets a new direction for the party in that all major phases of agriculture will be represented on the committee, and through its functions a direct link can be made to party policy and legislative activities on both state and national levels.

Insiders speculate that this is the first move by the party to recapture popular support and loyalty as a "people's lobby" or forum which can have visible impact in the General Assembly and the U.S. Congress.

Local Raises

While state employees must wait until October to see what the General Assembly will do for them in the matter of pay raises, local municipal employees around North Carolina are already getting the news from city council budget sessions now wrapping up their work.

A survey by the North Carolina League of Municipalities shows that the great majority of North Carolina towns and cities will be giving cost-of-living pay increases in the coming fiscal year. The usual amount is 7½ percent.

The cost-of-living raise isn't all. More than half of the local governments said merit, longevity, or step increases for changes in grade will be made in addition to the cost-of-living hikes.

Revenue Bonds

Since Tar Heel voters approved industrial revenue bonds for expanding industries and for anti-pollution devices, more than 200 issues have been approved in 71 of the state's 100 counties.

The total has climbed beyond $730 million.

The major focus of the program which started in 1976 is creation of jobs. The rules require that an industry applying for the bonds must be able to show an economic impact on the community, and that wages paid will be higher than prevailing rates in that area. Or, the area must have serious unemployment problems so that new jobs even at lower wages would be welcome.

Local bond authorities, county commissioners and three state agencies (Commerce, Treasurer, Employment Security Commission) all get involved in making sure prospects meet the various legal requirements before the low-interest, longterm bonds are issured.

The low interest rates are made possible by the fact that interest earned by the investor is tax free since the bonds are "government" investments. But, government does not take on the risk. That is a matter between the borrowing industry and the lender.

Soviet Bully-Boy Tactics No Longer Work

WARSAW, Poland — Poland's democratic revolution, after surviving last week's Soviet power play, now confronts the Kremlin with an impossible dilemma. Invade this troublesome nation, or else permit its dramatic transformation within the Soviet empire.

Nobody here believes that the new tightening of the Soviet economic noose, paralyzing the already moribund Polish economy, will strangle that revolution. Last week's refusal by the Polish Communist Central Committee to knuckle under to Moscow's demands for new, hard-line leadership showed that Soviet bully-boy tactics no longer work here.

But the alternative of armed Soviet intervention would almost certainly bring a bloodbath, from both guerrilla warfare and resistance by Polish army units from the regiment level down. That leaves Moscow with a remaining option of permitting the keystone of its empire to evolve into a Poland that, while not seeking to leave the Warsaw Pact, is becoming a social democratic state in everything but name.

"We have a revolution," one sympathetic government functionary told us, "but a revolution with no building dynamited and nobody hung from a lightpole." Such candor from a Communist Party member shows how the Polish revolution has progressed since last summer's strike at the Gdansk shipyards spawned Lech Walesa's Solidarity union. Newspapers, radios and television are filled with open political discussion. Polish citizens tell foreigners of their contempt for the Soviet Union and the Soviet-style socialism.

Amid political euphoria and economic stagnation, Solidarity leaders declare that economic and political reform has taken on a life of its own, independent of the ruling Communist Party. In fact, Solidarity has deeply infiltrated the party's ranks, which will reflect a wholly new face of the Polish Communist Party Congress, convening July 15.

That new face was a prospective source of vast displeasure expressed by Mikhail Suslov, the Kremlin's chief ideologist, on his day-long visit to Warsaw in April. According to Polish insiders, Suslov demanded that the Polish leadership abandon plans for contested, secret-ballot election to the Congress (that, as expected then, are turning the pro-Soviet minority out of party posts). Party Secretary Stanislaw Kania refused.

His refusal triggered the latest crisis. Moscow stage-managed a "forum" in Katowice attacking Polish democratization. When Tass trumpeted this with an accusation of "counterrevolution," officials in Washington reacquired invasion jitters. When President Leonid Brezhnev last week signed a letter in effect demanding Kania's dismissal and replacement by hard-liners, even Poles who never before credited invasion talk began listening for the roar of Soviet tanks.

But Brezhnev's letter only deepened anti-Soviet public hostility here that so worries the Kremlin. While government leaders in a single day session of Parliament last Friday were echoing Kania's rhetoric that Brezhnev had a point, famed author Karol Malcuzynski took the podium to denounce the letter over national television. He reflected rank-and-file opinion. "The letter wae an insult," one low-level official told us, adding he might resign from the party.

The epidemic of consumer shortages — food, cigarettes, gasoline — is universally attributed to Soviet manipulations. That fulfills suspicions by Western analysts that instead of invading, the Soviets would employ their immense leverage — such as control over this nation's oil supplies.

ERA May Make It... One Way Or The Other

WASHINGTON — In a little more than 12 months, time will run out for the pending Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution. The amendment, as such, won't be ratified — but a funny thing is happening on the way to the deadline: Little by little, the Supreme Court is writing the ERA into the Constitution anyhow.

The court's progress toward a kind of quasi-ratification hasn't been perfectly paced. Those who believe that men and women should have an absolute equality of rights under the law have won a few and lost a few, but they have won far more than they have lost. Step by step, the court is creating a line of precedents that will make it increasingly difficult for state legislatures — or the Congress — to enact laws that discriminate by reason of sex.

As this is written, the court has yet to decide this term's most important case in the area of women's equality. The suit known as Goldberg vs. Rostker challenges the action of Congress in requiring that young men, but not young women, register for a possible future draft. A three-judge lower court found the act patently unconstitutional. "The complete exclusion of women from the pool of registrants does not serve important governmental objectives and is not substantially related to any alleged governmental interests."

My guess is that the high court, after paying deference to the power of Congress to write its own rules for raising armies and maintaining a navy, will affirm the lower court's decision. Regardless of the outcome, the underlying trend will not be altered. Women have advanced dramatically toward the goals that proponents of the ERA have been pursuing.

A couple of decisions in this current term provide support for that observation. On March 23 a unanimous court rejected Louisiana's old community property law. On June 8, by a 5-4 decision, the court extended opportunities for women to sue on charges of sex-based wage discrimination.

The Louisiana case involved a hassle between Joan Feenstra and her husband Harold. In 1974 she filed a criminal complaint against him, charging him with molesting their minor daughter. He hired a lawyer to represent him, gave the lawyer a $3,000 note by way of prepayment, and without his wife's knowledge or consent put a mortgage on their home as security for the note. Louisiana law then regarded husbands as "heads and masters" of their households and gave them exclusive control over the disposition of community property. The law since has been superseded, but the Supreme Court emphatically ruled the old law void.

The wage discrimination case involved four matrons in a county jail in Oregon. They felt they were underpaid because of their sex, and filed suit under the Civil Rights Act of 1964. A narrow majority of the court held that nothing in the corollary Equal Pay Act of 1963 prevents them from pursuing their suit. Because of the particular facts in this case, the opinion lacks landmark significance, but it fits into the trend.

Justice Potter Stewart summed up the situation in yet another case this term. "Gender-based classifications," he wrote, "may not be based upon administrative convenience, or upon archaic assumptions about the proper roles of the sexes." Laws that discriminate between men and women are not always unconstitutional. "We have recognized that in certain narrow circumstances men and women are not similarly situated, and in these circumstances a gender classification based on clear differences between the sexes is not invidious, and a legislative classification realistically based on those differences is not unconstitutional."

Back in 1873, when Myra Bradwell boldly applied for a license to practice law in Illinois, the Supreme Court was aghast at the very idea. "The paramount destiny and mission of woman are to fulfill the noble and benign offices of wife and mother ... The natural and proper timidity and delicacy which belongs to the female sex evidently unfits it for many of the occasions of civil life." With only one dissenting vote, the court ordered this audacious female to tend to her knitting and to leave the practice of law to "the sterner sex." To the shade of Myra Bradwell, a familiar apostrophe may be addressed: You've come a long way, baby!

Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan goes to Peking, as he likely will next year, it won't be to call communism a doomed aberration. Nor is he apt to remind the Chinese that he considers their system a "bizarre chapter in human history."

Those comments were aimed at Moscow, although the Chinese are communists, too.

On the same day Reagan, in Washington, forecast the inevitable, eventual collapse of the communist system, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., in Peking, announced that the administration is lifting a 31-year ban on weapons sales to the largest of communist nations.

There is a simple reason for what seems an inconsistency, and it is that U.S. foreign policy objectives and interests transcend ideology, even in an administration of fervent anti-communists.

Haig made it explicit in discussing U.S. relations with China. "Our objectives coincide, above all in our resolve to press for the complete withdrawal of foreign military forces from Afghanistan and Cambodia," he said.

The Soviet Union occupies Afghanistan and supports Vietnamese forays into Cambodia.

Haig said China and the United States are agreed on the need to oppose Soviet expansionism.

A generation ago, Nikita S. Khrushchev told the West that its days were numbered and that communism would ultimately triumph. "Whether you like it or not, history is on our side," he said. "We will bury you."

Reagan's message to Moscow is about the same.

"It is impossible, and history reveals this, for any form of government to completely deny freedom to people and have that go on interminably," he said at his news conference Tuesday. "There eventually comes an end to it, and I think the things we're seeing, not only in Poland but the reports that are beginning to come out of Russia itself about the younger generation and its resistance to longtime government controls, is an indication that communism is an aberration. ...

"It's not a normal way of living for human beings, and I think we are seeing the first beginning cracks, the beginning of the end."

At the news conference, Reagan called the situation in Poland, where the Solidarity labor movement has challenged the strictures of old-line government officials, a symptom of disintegration in the Soviet sphere.

"The Soviet Union is faced with the problem of this crack in their once Iron Curtain, and what happens if they let it go," he said.

His comments about communism notwithstanding, Reagan predicted closer American ties with China. He said he didn't know how the Soviet Union would react to lifting the arms ban, which covers Russia and most other communist nations.

"But all we have done is to go to the People's Republic of China — we've wanted, and I've said for a long time, to improve relations with them, move them to the same status as many other countries, and not necessarily military allies of ours, in making certain technology and defensive weapons available to them," the president said. "And I think this is a normal part of the process of improving our relations there."

Another part of the process was an exchange of invitations to leaders of each country to visit the other. Premier Zhao Ziyang accepted and is to come to the United States some time next year. Reagan is expected to accept, too.

The arts are alive and well in Eastern North Carolina.

WOOW Radio and sponsors are to be commended for their contribution.

Sunday night was the premier of a new two-hour classical music program hosted by Karen Hause. It was indeed a pleasure to enjoy the music of Aaron Copeland and Respighi.

We now have a standing engagement with "Big WOOW" on Sunday nights from 10 o'clock to midnight. Thank you.

To the editor:

I would like to make a comment and thank the wonderful police officers in the City of Greenville for their loyal and prompt service during the wee hours of the morning.

My son lives in the Meadowbrook area. Someone was stealing the battery from his car. While they raised the hood to get the battery out the police were making their rounds and saw them. As the police stopped at the sight, the thief ran, so it saved my son's battery from being stolen.

Had it not been for the policeman at 3:30 a.m., the thief would have succeeded at his job.

Thanks be to God for such wonderful and prompt officers at that hour of the morning.

To the editor:

I have just read "House Defeats 3 Cent Cigarette Tax Hike." The thought occured to me that our representatives in Raleigh know that agriculture is the biggest and most important business in North Carolina.

The recent valuation of farm land in Pitt County causes me to wonder if our County Commissioners believe that farming is vital to the economy of Pitt County. If all the farm land is sold to non-farmers, who will grow the food and fiber necessary to keep our people healthy and prosperous?

Even if the tax rate for 1981-82 is cut to 50 cents, farmers in this county will find that their 1981 county tax will be doubled and in some cases tripled. I would like to know who represented the farmers in our county when this unfair action took place?

To the editor:

This is my proposal for restructuring the Social Security Act:

1. Restructure the program so that individual trust accounts are formulated in the name and number assigned by the Administration.

2. Distribute these accounts to the local banks in the area in which the worker lives.

3. Payroll withholdings and matching employer contributions would be remitted to these local banks for deposit in the individual accounts. No withdrawal could ever be made from these trust funds until the claimant became eligible to retire.

4. Congress should pass special laws permitting the local banks to use these entrusted funds for their use in making loans, et cetera. The local banks would be held accountable for these funds and would have to report to Social Security Headquarters semi-annually the over-all increase in the accounts they would hold. Congress would also establish the minimum growth rate, percentagewise, that the accounts would increase from interest paid by the banks for a limited use of these funds.

5. Congress would establish the minimum age that a claimant could begin receiving these funds in the form of retirement checks. When the fund became exhausted, no further remuneration could be expected by the retiree.

6. The Federal Government should be charged with establishing the trust funds as described above. The amounts in these funds would be predicated upon the amount that the present accounts embody. Should the retiree die before the account became exhausted, the remaining fund would revert to his or her estate. If there were no remaining claimants to the estate, then the Federal Government would claim the remains.

7. Congress should declare that there would be no tax on these accounts, even though there should be remains which reverted to an estate.

8. In the event a worker would move from one state or district to another, the holding bank would retain the account for one year before permissible transfer to the workers new district.

Shame on Procter & Gamble for acceding to the clamorous demands of Moral Majority. Economic blackmail is very persuasive to management and this action by Moral Majority represents a violation of my constitutional rights and of those who share a similar viewpoint. Moral Majority guards its constitutional prerogatives jealously while seeking to force its views on others.

Perhaps there is too much sex and violence on TV, but all sets are built with ON/OFF switches. If Moral Majority reached all the people they claim to reach and, if those persons turned off programs they considered objectionable, they would have a dramatic impact on ratings and sponsors would certainly take notice. Market forces would then dictate which programs would be shown.

It might be wise for all Americans to pause and reflect: after all, Iran is a theocracy and the Pope is infallible only on doctrine.

To the editor:

Approximately one year ago, the position of Garage Superintendent was open for our city. The job description, in addition to supervising the repair and maintenance of all city-owned vehicles, was to include setting up a storeroom for spare parts and maintaining an inventory control system for same. The salary range was about $16,000 to $22,000. Rather than hiring a Pitt County unemployed or a city taxpayer, Mayo Allen saw fit to hire a recently retired Colonel. Shortly after this, a new position was created, that of Equipment Coordinator, with part of the job description being to maintain spare parts inventory etc. with a salary range of about $11,000 to $15,000.

What happened to our retired Colonel? Couldn't he handle the job he was hired to perform? A year late I understand the Colonel found his job to be too "confining" and he has resigned. I guess, with his government retirement check coming in every month, he was really looking for a part-time job when he was hired. So here we are a year later — the Colonel is gone, so is the Equipment Coordinator, and we are now trying to hire two people with a combined salary range of $29,036 to $38,979 to fill basically what one year ago was one full-time position with a salary range of about $16,000 to $22,000. If a qualified individual had been hired to start with, it might today still be ONE position instead of TWO. Take note, City Council. Talk about the waste and hiring practices of the Federal Government, which most of us are quick to criticize, maybe we should take a closer look at our own local government's waste and hiring practices.

'Good Old Boy' Ran Afoul City Slickers

In language and appearance, T. Lamar Caudle was the epitome of what some folks describe as "a good old boy." His soft, lazy drawl was as Southern as hominy grits, and newspaper accounts of his troubles during the 1950s and 1960s frequently described the Wadesboro attorney as "a country boy who was dazzled by city slickers."

Caudle was assistant U.S. attorney general in charge of the Justice Department Tax Division when he came under fire of newspapers in Charlotte and St. Louis. They alleged he used his job to discourage prosecution of tax fraud cases in North Carolina, Alabama and elsewhere.

Shortly after Caudle was called to testify before a Congressional subcommittee investigating the Justice Department, President Truman fired him for what the White House described as "outside activites" incompatable with his official duties.

The 47-year-old Caudle described himself as heartbroken by the president's action, but he said, "I will go to bed tonight with a clean, clear conscience as I have done everynight. I have favored no friends and I have taken advantage of no one."

During the subcommittee hearings which began several days later, Adrian de Wind, the committee's counsel, charged that Caudle had sought to discourage prosecution of two Charlotte men, Keith Beaty and Troy Whitehead, in tax cases.

Caudle had admitted he and Charles Oliphant, chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau, had flown to Florida for a fishing trip in Whitehead's private plane.

"But that was three years ago, and I did not know that Whitehead was being investigated for fraud," Caudle said.

De Wind questioned Caudle about a phone call he had made to Oliphant, a call de Wind claimed was intended to help Whitehead. Caudle said he did not recall making the call but told the committee he might have made it "just as I would have (done) for any other friend that wanted to know what to do."

De Wind also questioned Caudle about another call in which he told Oliphant that if charges were brought against Beaty, operator of a Charlotte taxi fleet, he would disqualify himself from handling the case. Caudle hotly denied de Wind's charge that his real reason was to discourage Oliphant from sending the case to the Justice Department for prosecution.

The following day Caudle threw the hearing into an uproar when he disclosed that a New York attorney had arranged for Mrs. Caudle to buy a mink coat, which retailed for about $3,500, for $1,500. The excitement came when Caudle said he had arranged similar purchases for the wife of Kenneth Royall, former Army secretary from Goldsboro, and the wife of U.S. Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark.

Caudle said his wife had been so embarrassed by newspaper accounts which said the purchases had been arranged by a tax attorney that she had said "she's never going to wear it (the coat) again."

Several months afterward, the committee issued its report in which it described Caudle as "an honorably motivated" but "weak" public official who had been made a "scapegoat" by Truman. It said it was convinced Caudle "never sold himself for riches or for power." But it cited Caudle's career as "the most accurate reflection of decay within the Department of Justice that the subcommitte has come upon."

Back in Wadesboro where he had resumed his law practice, Caudle hailed the committee report as a vindication and asserted it made him feel "uplifted, podner; yes suh."

"They said I was weak," Caudle noted, "Well, everybody to his own opinion, but if anything, I was too friendly. It's just my Southern way of doing things."

But the Republican administraiton of President Eisehower a few years later took a different view of Caudle's peccadilloes. It prosecuted him and Matthew J. Connelly, Truman's appointments secretary, on charges they accepted oil royalties in exchange for using their influence to block prosecution or ease the sentence of a St. Louis wholesaler convicted of income tax evasion.

After the U.S. Supreme Court twice refused to act on their appeals, Caudle and Connelly entered federal prison to begin serving two-year sentences and were released on parole about six months later. Caudle was granted a full pardon by President Johnson.

When he returned to North Carolina after his release from prison, Caudle was well-tanned and 20 pounds lighter.

Fatherly Love

A really good father is an entrepreneur of sorts. He's willing to take the risk of giving his name to an untried product, but only on the condition that he be involved in all phases of the product's development.

That's called quality control. And it's important. It's all the more important because the man who insists upon it often doesn't get much positive feedback from a society which tends to measure his worth by the number of square feet in his house.

Let's face it. It has got to be difficult to convince yourself that what you are doing is worthwhile when you're trying to listen to the World Series on the car radio while eight enthusiastic cheerleaders are practicing the Little League fight song in the back seat.

It must be even harder when your kid refuses to speak to you for three weeks because you won't let her accept a date with a high school senior whose friends affectionately call him Octopus. After all, she considers herself a very mature 9th grader.

My father is one of those men who kept rushing in where angels fear to tread.

Phillip hasn't reached that stage yet, but he will. Right now he's still weathering crises like cleaning rice cereal off his white shirt after Zachary sends him off to work with an overly juicy kiss.

He is being informed on those rare occasions when he loses his temper that he makes Meg feel like "an egg that's been dropped on the floor."

On top of it all, every time he comes up with a new family budget which just might give us some breathing space in the continuing battle with inflation, the government comes up with some new use for his paycheck like army films on the proper way for soldiers to brush their teeth.

In short, he feels hounded, unappreciated, and incapable of providing the modern essentials like infant swim classes and pre-toe dance.

Meg set him straight though. She came home from Sunday School not too long ago and informed us that her class had been discussing fathers and that she had told them all what a very important man her daddy was.

Her teacher had then asked, "What is the most important thing he does?"

Meg didn't hesitate. "He loves me."

Facing South: A Very Special Children's Camp

LYNCHBURG, Va. — The Rev. Beverly R. Cosby greets visitors with a firm handshake and a warm smile. "Welcome to Camp Kum-Ba-Yah. We're glad you could come."

Beneath tall trees, children sprawl on the grass, absorbed in a craft activity. A line of boys and girls merrily follows a leader down a trail into the woods. Each carries ingredients for the noon meal they will prepare together.

Camp Kum-Ba-Yah is a camp which anybody would like to attend — and anybody can. Children are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis regardless of race, color or national origin. Approximately 60 percent attend on full or part scholarship. Those needing transportation ride in volunteer car pools.

The campers are assigned while at camp to small "family groups' aimed at fostering comfortable communication between them despite their varying backgrounds. The impressive group of counselors includes an attorney, a pastor, school teachers and young people in their teens and early 20s. Each year the staff includes students from other parts of the world as well as local high school and college students, some of whom were campers here themselves.

Camp Kum-Ba-Yah offers no formal religious study. The staff shares Bev Cosby's philosophy: "Take your basic values that come from your faith. Share them without imposing your particular doctrines on others. Through this practical expression of faith we are teaching love, understanding, sensitivity to one another, forgiveness and appreciation of God's worth and of our own gifts in terms of self-worth."

This unique camp had a humble beginning over 30 years ago, with a group of idealistic young Lynchburg residents. As Cosby recalls, "Our first camp program was held in the basement and yard of my home with eight or 10 neighborhood boys. Our purpose then was to provide a creative outdoor experience."

The gradual development of the camp has been only one aspect of a multifaceted ecumenical ministry which Cosby — as pastor of Lynchburg's Church of the Covenant — helped initiate in the early 1960s. In 1960, Cosby and three other Lynchburg ministers visited Prince Edward County to observe "Operation Catch Up," where black students were being tutored by community volunteers. The four were inspired.

"On that day a partnership — then called the Lynchburg Christian Fellowship — began to form. We decided it was time to do something ecumenically in the central city of Lynchburg."

At the same time the group purchased and renovated a stately old mansion in Lynchburg's inner city, which became the base for many other projects. These projects have grown or changed over the years, depending on community needs and volunteer interest. There have been tutorial programs, after-school recreational programs, activities for the visually handicapped, sewing and typing classes, Scout groups, preschool and infant care and distribution of furniture and emergency wood and fuel money to the eldery and indigent.

In 1970 the name of the nonprofit corporation was changed to Lynchburg Covenant Fellowship, since the group now includes Jews as well as Catholics and Protestants. Today, 28 congregations support Kum-Ba-Yah programs. They also provide the camp with scholarships and volunteer help. The camp now has 300 participants each summer, 100 at each of three two-week sessions.

Economic Adviser Says Have 'Faith'

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Bernhard, who a half-century ago founded what has become the nation's largest investment advisory service, was in a reflective mood the other day when he spoke about his catastrophes.

In the unadorned, stick-to-the-facts style that characterizes his stock analyses, Bernhard told a business audience that the catastrophes "somehow turned out to be the luckiest events of my business life."

Preposterous pap, you say? Such statements often are the product of a person's need to dramatize history with moral lessons. But Bernhard has spent his adult life seeking to distill his thinking to the bare facts.

He meant what he said. "And I don't think it would be any different for you if you have faith in your ideas and the will to persevere in their propagation," said the 79 year-old founder of Value Line, which has 100,000 subscribers at $330 a year and manages $1 billion in funds.

It began during the Great Depression, when Bernhard was working as an analyst for Moody's Investors Service. His widowed mother lost her estate (all stocks). He lost his job. "You can have no idea of what it meant to be out of a job in 1931," he said. "My situation was dire."

Earlier, he observed that Moody's and others rated bonds but not stocks. In the thinking of the time — and it continues now — the value of stocks was the price assigned to them by an "efficient" market.

To Bernhard, that thinking didn't mean much, since it was no guide at all to anticipating when the price of a stock might rise or fall. He simply didn't believe there could be no independent standard of value.

"In my arrogance or naivete, (I) determined to find and disclose a standard of normal value which would so enlighten the investing public that the extremes of 1929 and 1932 could never again be repeated."

It was the beginning of the Value Line ratings. "The Great Crash made me go to work on my Value Line rating theory, and getting fired from Moody's set me up in business for myself," he related.

The rating he designed was "a correlation between the monthly prices of a stock over a period of 20 years on the one hand and its concurrent annual earnings and book values on the other," he explained. When the market price deviated markedly from the standard, it was determined that the deviation was a measure of overvalation or undervaluation.

Bernhard worked out the equations for 120 stocks, bought a multilith press and printed 1,000 copies of his book, "Value Line Ratings of Normal Value." "This is what the world needed," he said in triumph. "I was going to give it to them for $200 a book."

He made one sale. Then Major L.L.B. Angas, "the Joe Granville (a popular market forecaster) of his day," told readers of his bulletin that they could buy the book from Bernhard for just $55 a copy.

"You can imagine my dismay on seeing my $200,000 imventory written down to $55,000 almost overnight," Bernhard told his audience. Then he got an $800 bill from the major for printing the endorsement. In order to pay it, he had to arrange for a postponeent of the office rent.

Soon, however, he received 60 checks for $55. "That was how I learned that a service could be sold to the public by means other than direct, personal representation," he remarked. It was another lesson learned.

Having raised circulation to 65 paying subscribers, Bernhard still had no idea how he could put the business into the black. That's when Mr. McQueen of Barron's magazine dropped into the office and convinced him to advertise his product. He got only nine responses to the ads, which for $5 offered a sample of the total product. The ads cost $70.

But McQueen, whose first name Berhard cannot recall, convinced him to follow up with more ads, and then to continue writing to respondents even if they didn't buy the entire service at first. He learned how to follow up, which the direct-mail industry has now made a science.

Bernhard has since refined both his mail-order techniques and his analysis. In fact, the development of an independent standard of stock evaluation has been a consuming passion. The market isn't a perfectly efficient determinant of real value. He has demonstrated it.

RENOUNCING SELF

An English curate was once talking with an old farmer and the question came up, "What is the greatest inpediment to spiritual growth and happiness?"

"Surely to renounce our sinful self," insisted the curate. "No." replied the old farmer, "the greatest difficulty is to renounce our righteous self."

Jesus often criticized the Pharisees who were so sure of themselves and so confident of their own righteousness that they looked with disdain upon all other people. In all ages there are people who likewise are so confident of their own righteousness and so unwilling to admit themselves wrong that they come under the same criticism which our Lord passed upon the Pharisees of his day. Not even the best deeds we do can by themselves bring salvation. We grow spiritually when we confess our weakness and give the Holy Spirit a chance to do something with our hearts.

Legislators Shooting For July 3 Close But Date May Be Changed

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While the list of bills to be considered is growing longer and the patience of state legislators is growing shorter, state House and Senate leaders disagree on when the General Assembly may adjourn.

Both sides acknowledge they're aiming for a July 3 adjournment despite looming conflicts over congressional redistricting, the state budget and Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed highway funding package.

And for every day of delay, the tab for the taxpayers goes up an estimated $34,000.

Hunt's package, which includes a gasoline tax increase, is now in the hands of a conference committee. Fourteen legislative leaders will iron out differences between House and Senate versions of the package and present the compromise to other legislators for approval.

It is likely that differing House and Senate plans for redrawing North Carolina's 11 congressional districts will end up in a similar committee. The Senate is scheduled to vote on a plan Monday while a House committee still is working to come up with a map.

Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, president pro tem of the Senate, said he believes the Senate could finish considering redistricting and Hunt's package within the next week.

"We could adjourn possibly next Friday, but it's more likely it will be (sometime) like July 3," Lawing said.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green told the Senate on Friday that redistricting and Hunt's package "are the reason we've been here as long as we have. (After those issues are settled) We'll have a few more meetings and then we'll be ready to go home."

But House members are not so optimistic about the prospects of adjourning soon.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey estimated the General Assembly should be able to adjourn by July 3 "unless congressional redistricting hangs us up."

To reach that goal, he says the House probably will have to begin meeting at night. That prospect has not surfaced in the Senate.

"They can move faster than we can because of the number (of members)," Ramsey said, adding that he feels no pressure to keep pace with the smaller Senate.

Another way of predicting a possible adjournment time is by looking at the legislative social calendar. At the beginning of the session, lobbyists and special interest groups clamored for the legislators' evening hours.

By this time of the session, the parties are over. Legislators and their staffs have scheduled two final social events at the end of this month, apparently to celebrate finishing their work.

If the session ends by July 3, it will not go on record as the longest General Assembly session, but it will be the longest session in the past eight years.

The longest session was in 1971, the last time the state's congressional and legislative districts were redrawn. That session lasted 163 legislative work days, 41 days longer than this year's session if it ends July 3.

Pilot Survives As Plane Dangles In Power Lines

BULLHEAD CITY, Ariz. (AP) — For five hours, Ralph Neal was as "cool as a cucumber." But he collapsed when rescuers finally got him out of his small plane, which was tangled in 230,000-volt electric transmission lines 95 feet over a small canyon, officials say.

The 50-year-old student pilot from San Luis Obispo, Calif., received only a scratch on the arm in the incident Friday, which ended when authorities built a makeshift road to within cherry-picker distance of the suspended aircraft.

Neal "missed death in four or five different ways," said Chief Deputy Sandy Green of the Mohave County Sheriff's Department. "I don't know why he didn't fry."

The impact of the crash knocked out electricity for an hour in nearby Kingman, authorities said. One man was arrested on charges of breaking into a pharmacy during the blackout.

Neal, who works for River Realty Real Estate here, said he would not comment on the incident until he has talked with Federal Aviation Administration officials.

Bullhead City Fire Chief Larry Adams said Neal was on a solo flight from Bullhead City to Flagstaff and back when the Cessna 190 single-engine plane, owned by Aeromed Flying School here, got entangled in the transmission lines Thursday night.

Workshop Held At PCC

A day care workshop entitled "Learning Together" sponsored by the Department of Human Resources was held on the Pitt Community College Campus Thursday.

The workshop leaders were from the staff of Learning Together, Inc. of Raleigh and included Julia McLean Williams, director; Betty Hafley, Judy Leonard, Dee Dorsey and Doris Gilan.

The main objective of the sessions were to explore "interdependency" education which is the art of living together in the world that begins in early childhood and discovering ways to help children grow toward a happy life.

Materials demonstrating how to keep easy records of activities and teaching techniques were given to participants. Several hand outs conveyed knowledge of how to keep up the spirit of the day carer as they work with children.

The "Learning Together" workshop was also held in Asheville, Jamestown, and Carthage prior to the PCC session.

Revival Planned

Revival services will be held at St. Peter Missionary Baptist Church, Rt. 5, Greenville, from Monday to Friday at 8:00 p.m. The Rev. Kenneth Hammond will be the guest speaker for the week. Different choirs will serve each night.

Quarterly meeting services will be held Sunday with the pastor, Rev. Hue Walston at 11:00 a.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Two Convicted In Plot To Take Dominica

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Ku Klux Klan leader and another man were convicted today of helping plot the armed overthrow of the tiny island of Dominica in return for money and power. A third defendant was acquitted.

The federal jury deliberated for more than 12 hours over two days before finding Stephen Don Black, Grand Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and longtime Klansman Joe Daniel Hawkins guilty of two counts of a seven-count indictment.

Former Klansman Michael S. Norris, 21, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., was aquitted on all seven counts.

Black, 27, of Birmingham, Ala., and Hawkins, 37, of Jackson, Miss., face up to eight years in prison and $13,000 in fines.

The jury found them guilty of illegally conspiring to overthrow the Caribbean island and of violating the Neutrality Act by planning an armed expedition against a friendly nation.

They were found innocent on five counts of weapons violations relating to a large cache of high-powered firearms and dynamite allegedly purchased as part of the scheme.

Before being handed the case, jurors heard court-appointed defense lawyers portray their clients Friday as gullible patriots duped by admitted ringleader Michael Perdue.

Perdue, 32, of Houston, is among the seven other would-be soldiers of fortune who pleaded guilty in a plea bargain arrangement and testified at the trial.

"He used them," lawyer David Craig said of Perdue.

First Lady Says Reagan 'Soft Touch' As Father

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Prss Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twelve weeks after a man tried to kill her husband, Nancy Reagan rejoices in "just having him here. You're grateful for every day. You can't go through something like that without having it change you."

But Father's Day brings gentle memories, too. Like the long drives when Ronald Wilson Reagan would amuse the kids with stories about his life as a horse, or a poodle. Or when he would employ a dad's special magic to relate the conversations buzzing through the roadside telephone lines.

As a father, the president of the United States is one soft touch, the first lady says. By her account, the younger Reagans have always found him generous with his time and money, and especially quick to spoil them with presents.

Her own philsophy of child-rearing: "Discipline laced with love."

In Mrs. Reagan's view, the president relates easily to his children: "He's always willing to take time to talk with them, to answer their questions, to explain his position. Our children don't always agree with him on everything political, but he'll spend however long they need discussing things. He never puts them off or gives them short shrift."

When they were small, she recalled, he used to play a game called Submarine. He'd get in the family swimming pool and all the kids would climb on his back, and they'd dive under water together. A former lifeguard, he taught them to dive — from his shoulders.

"And he played a game we called 'Beaver,'" said Mrs. Reagan. "Whenever someone would see an out-of-state license plate, the person who saw it first would yell out, 'Beaver.' Ronnie was very competitive about this. We all were."

In an interview with The Associated Press, Mrs. Reagan revealed her feelings about her own father, Kenneth Robbins. He and her mother separated shortly after her birth, she said. She doesn't think about him on Father's Day because "I never knew him or considered him to be my father."

Much of her own childhood, she said, was spent living with an aunt and uncle because her mother, an actress, traveled frequently. She only visited her father occasionally.

"I was a little hurt that he wasn't around," she said. "I asked my mother questions. She always tried to be fair and not talk about my father to me. His mother, my grandmother, told me more. I never said anything about him when he was alive. It would have hurt him. But I'm sure he felt badly about it all."

She talked, as well, about the president's handling of one son who embarrassed the admininstration with some business dealings and two daughters whose political views often are at odds with their father's.

Mrs. Reagan said that after Michael, 36, wrote a letter to a military base mentioning his father and soliciting business, "Ronnie told Michael he had made a mistake. I told him he had made a mistake. I don't think (Michael) had thought it through. It's taken (the children) awhile to realize that everything they do now is magnified. That takes adjusting to."

Mrs. Reagan was asked how the president reacted last week when daughter Maureen, 40, took a business trip to Taiwan at the same time Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was in Peking and when Patti, 28, disagreed publicly with her father by holding a news conference to oppose nuclear energy.

Six Americans Reported To Be Held In Cuban Jail

MIAMI (AP) — A lawyer for a group seeking information about missing Americans says Cuban authorities have jailed six Americans within the last six months and are holding them in a prison near Havana.

Washington attorney Joseph Blatchford said two of the Americans were arrested Dec. 16 after their twin-engine plane made an emergency landing in the westernmost Cuban province of Pinar del Rio.

He said Cuban authorities have filed no formal charges against the Americans, but claim there was marijuana aboard the plane, which had taken off from Jamaica.

The Miami Herald reported Saturday that U.S. officials confirmed the story after being confronted with the prisoners' names.

The newspaper said officials at the State Department's consular affairs bureau have been aware of the Americans' detention since shortly after the arrest of the first two Americans last December.

A State Department spokeswoman told The Associated Press late Saturday she was unaware of the report but would seek comment from the consular affairs bureau.

The six are the first group of Americans reported held in a Cuban jail since the pardon and release ordered by Fidel Castro last Oct. 27 of 30 American prisoners, some of whom had been held for more than a decade.

The two men aboard the downed plane were identified as Michael Bey, 25, of Daytona Beach, and Timothy Joyce, 25, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Linden Yodeler Wins Contest

SPIVEY'S CORNER, N.C. (UPI) — Bobby McLamb of Linden out-yodeled 28 competitors Saturday before a crowd of 10,000 who crowded into this tiny rural community for the 13th annual National Hollerin' Contest.

McLamb, at 21 far too young to remember the days when farmers had only their voices to communicate long-distance, launched a 20-second falsetto yelp he described as "country hollerin'" to take the title.

He said he began yodeling as a child, growing up in a family of tobacco farmers.

"I told my family i was going to win. They think I'm crazy," said McLamb, a country-style comedian and entertainer with a thick rural accent. "As a country entertainer, I don't have much time to practice my hollerin' because I'm on the road so much."

McLamb's version of the country holler was the highlight of the day for the thousands of spectators that invaded the tiny community of 49 residents. The crowd's festive, almost rowdy, mood was unspoiled by an overcast sky and an hour of drizzle in the first hour of the day's events.

Throughout the day, spontaneous high-pitched hollers broke out among the revelers, who were fueled by plenty of beer, fried chicken and barbecue pork. Police had to take away three or four of the more boisterous celebrants.

The contest is the brainchild of Ermon Godwin, a Spivey's Corner resident and an assistant bank president at nearby Dunn. He mentioned his idea in 1969 to John G. Thomas, news director of a Dunn radio station, who in turned announced it on his local show. Within a week, Godwin had goteen calls from news organizations across the country and Spivey's Corner had won a reputation as "hollerin' capital of the universe."

All but a handful of the contestants Saturday were in their 20s, in part because most of the locals who actually remember the hollerin' days are former champions and barred from the contest. Entrants claimed hometowns from as far away as Indiana and Florida.

One contestant brought a goat with him on the platform during his holler. Another had a three-legged dog.

The lady's hollerin' winner was Darlene M. French of Richmond, Va. who said she modeled her yodel on the one her grandmother used to call her husband in from the fields. Jeff Wilson of Spivey's Corner, who yodeled "Amazing Grace," was the junior hollerin' champion.

Other events included a 10,000-meter run, clogging, a watermelon roll, a greased-pole climb and bingo.

First A Smell ... ... Then A Charge

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — A produce vendor who aroused the ire of neighbors by storing 45,000 pounds of rotting onions in his back yard has been arrested on charges of stealing the onions, police say.

Nezhdet Banushi, 38, who said he hoped to peddle the pungent vegetables to area restaurants, was charged Friday with stealing $9,000 worth of onions from the Commonwealth Fruit and Produce Co. Inc. of Boston, Quincy Police Detective Thomas Healy said Saturday.

Banushi had said he bought the onions for a good price. His neighbors complained the back yard was no place to store 900 bags of onions — especially in 90-degree heat — and said the slowly rotting onions smelled bad.

The Quincy Health Department ordered Banushi last Monday to remove them and then took him to court Thursday. But a district court judge said he could find no criminal offense gor which Banushi could be charged.

By Friday, all but 150 bags had been sold or given away. But residents continued to complain because Banushi had peeled off the rotten outer layers of thousands of onions before trying to sell them.

After a Boston television station did a story on the complaints, William Kostinden Sr., owner of Commonwealth Fruit, told police that the onions were stolen from his plant in Boston's Dorchester section June 12.

Banushi was arrested Friday night and charged with receiving stolen property with a value of over $100, police said. He was to be arraigned Monday in Quincy District Court.

Trident Ends Trial Run

GROTON, Conn. (UPI) — The Navy's first Trident nuclear submarine, the $3 billion Ohio, returned home Saturday after three days of sea trials. Its builders called the initial tests a "very successful run."

The 560-foot forerunner of a planned fleet of long range nuclear missile subs moved up the Thames River under murky skies to the General Electric Boat Division yards of General Dynamics where it was built.

The Ohio, escorted by four tugs, was cheered by several hundred onlookers without the anti-nuclear protesters who watched the boat's departure Wednesday.

Navy officials said little. But Electric Boat representatives said the sub, equipped with the nation's most destructive weapons system, and its crew of 139 enlisted men and 15 officers performed well.

"Everything performed very well. The trials were run very smoothly and without any serious incidents," said Spencer Reitz, deputy general manager of Electric Boat, who was aboard the Ohio.

Reitz told newsmen the Ohio's commanding officer, Capt. Alton Thompson, and his crew "were excellent." He said Electric Boat still planned to deliver the vessel to the Navy in October.

Asked about reports of some mechanical problems, Reitz said, "It never was a serious problem in the trials that were conducted on the surface and submerged at various speeds."

The Navy Department refused to make any comment.

Also aboard the Ohio for the shakedown was Adm. Hymam G. Rickover, the godfather of America's nuclear-powered submarine program.

Rickover has been severely critical of General Dynamics, accusing the firm of costly overruns and delays in building the nation's first Trident submarine.

Gunman Takes Bus Carrying 32 People

ERICK, Okla. (AP) — A gunman, yelling that he wanted the FBI to arrest him, hijacked a Greyhound bus Saturday with 32 people aboard but surrendered to police two hours later, authorities said.

There were no injuries aboard the bus, which was en route from Los Angeles to New York, on Interstate 40, police said.

"Nobody went hysterical until it was all over," said passenger LeAnn Bassford of Springdale, Ark. "There's a kind of scare that's controlled and one where you climb the walls."

Beckham County Sheriff Dean Smith said charges against Larry Darnell Wallace, 25, of St. Louis would remain pending until Monday. He said federal investigators and officials from Texas and Oklahoma would have to decide how charges could be filed.

Police said the man got on the bus at Amarillo and commandeered it two miles out of town, putting a .38-caliber pistol to the head of driver Michael Banfield.

"He kept hollering that he wanted the FBI to arrest him," Smith said. He said federal officials were not informed of the hijacking until after it was over.

The gunman did not make any other demands, and Smith said investigators hadn't determined a reason for the hijacking.

The driver of another bus witnessed the takeover and notified Texas police, who followed the bus.

The gunman ordered the bus stopped twice in Texas to let three people off, including a woman and her infant son.

The hijacking ended five miles inside Oklahoma near Erick when the man told Banfield to stop. Police said he threw his gun in a ditch after stepping out of the bus and surrendered to officers who had followed them in about 10 cars.

Rightists Threaten Brazil's Drive For Liberalization

By ARTHUR HERMAN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Because of its sheer size, its 120 million population, its economic weight, there is a political axiom: "As Brazil goes, so goes the rest of Latin America."

The question now is whether South America's mammoth can keep its course on the rocky road to political liberalization?

With a border on every South American nation except Ecuador and Chile, Brazil's choice will have enormous regional repercussions in determining the political future of the Western Hemisphere south of the equator.

Since he took office two years ago as the fifth president of a military system of government that began with a coup d'etat in 1964, Joao Baptista Figueiredo has allowed left-wing exiles to return home and has freed political prisoners. He has permitted widespread press freedom and scheduled elections for 1982.

But as Senate President Jarbas Passarinho said, "There are people who do not want (Figueiredo's) political program carried out."

Some of those hardliners who may move to block Figueiredo are in the Brazilian armed forces.

This was underlined by a botched up bombing, suspected to be the work of the right-wing military, on the eve of the May 1 international labor holiday.

During a left-of-center music festival, songstress Elba Ramalho was starting her act before 20,000 young people crammed in Rio's convention center. The bomb exploded in a Brazilian-made Puma sportscar outside. Two army intelligence officers were in the Puma. The blast killed one, wounded the other.

The incident had all the makings of what one congressman called "a work accident." That is, that the two officers are suspected of planting bombs to disrupt the concert and touch off a round of political agitation and violent retaliation, thus creating a pretext for an eventual rightist military crackdown.

The bombing threw this South American country, which is larger than the contiguous United States, into a political uproar. The aftermath brought into question its ability to fulfill a two-year-old promise to make Brazil a democracy.

That possibility, plus a series of 38 other bombings and incidents of right-wing violence, has sent a chill through people who care about liberalization in this nation with superpower pretensions.

"What the military men must understand," said Maurice Duverger, a French political science expert, during a recent visit, "is that Brazil will never be able to become a great power if it does not first become a democratic country."

Brazil is a nation that launched spectacular projects and succeeded. It implanted an alternative fuel system and now has more than 400,000 automobiles that run on pure alcohol. Brazil's first nuclear power plant is to begin operation this year. The country has opened up an entire "mineral province" in the Amazon region where it hopes by 1992 to be making $10 billion from iron, steel, copper, manganese, bauxite, aluminum and gold.

Brazil's Gross National Product is $207 billion, double that of oil-rich Mexico.

Many outsiders have a stake in Brazil through billions of dollars in foreign investment. Brazil has a foreign debt of $55 billion, owed mostly to international bankers.

Cartoonist Ziraldo depicted one Brazilian telling another: "The government may not have the know-how to discover the terrorists. But on the other hand the entire nation has the know-who."

A poll taken after the explosion found 48 percent of Brazilians did not believe Figueiredo would succeed in making Brazil a democracy.

The political tension comes at a delicate time for Brazil.

There is the shaky state of the economy.

At the end of April the 12-month accumulated inflation stood at 120.6 percent, the highest in Latin America. Just paying interest on the foreign debt costs $10 billion a year.

Brazil has to import 80 percent of its oil. The fuel bill plus the money paid on the debt eat up practically everything Brazil makes on the coffee, iron ore, armaments, soybeans, cocoa, cars, orange juice, and frozen chickens it sells to the rest of the world.

On top of that, an economic slowdown hit in 1981. One leading economist who calls it a "growth recession" says it will be the worst since 1966. Antonio Carlos Lemgruber said that while growth hit 8 percent last year, it should be 4 percent this year. That is low for a country that needs to create 1.5 million jobs each year just to absorb manpower coming into the work force.

The government already postponed municipal elections that were set for 1980.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—We have no problem in our game with the Stayman Convention when partner opens the bidding with one no trump. But there is considerable disagreement about what constitutes a Stayman inquiry for the major suits after the opponents open the bidding and partner overcalls one no trump. Some say that it should still be two clubs. Others argue in favor of a cue-bid of the opponent's suit. Can you give us some help?—L. Solomon, New Haven, Conn.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—There are some players, not too many, who do play that two clubs is still the way to check on major suits. If you want to use that method, go ahead.

There is one slight drawback to that method. Once there has been an opening bid and a no trump overcall by your side, chances of making game are not bright. Thus, over partner's no trump overcall, it makes sense to retain the natural meaning of two clubs — a long club suit and a weak hand. If you want to hear about a major suit, you cue-bid the enemy suit.

There is only one case where the cue-bid might result in a higher contract than if you used two clubs as Stayman. That is where the opponent opened the bidding with one spade and partner overcalled with one no trump. Now you will have to use a cue-bid of two spades as your Stayman inquiry, which forces the auction to the three-level if partner has hearts. On all other hands, however, you will be able to get partner to show his major suit at the two-level and still have two clubs at your disposal as a natural bid.

The latter method has been endorsed by this department over the years, and we see no reason to change now.

Q.—In several columns over the past few years you have advised us that new rubber bridge laws are imminent. How long is "imminent" in your language? —B. Jackson, Cincinnati, Ohio

A.—It is not my language that should be held in question, but the authorities whose task it was to revise the Laws!

However, I can now report that changes in the Laws of Contract Bridge were approved at the end of last year, and that a new edition of the Laws book is expected late this month. We will announce it in these columns as soon as we know the date.

From what we understand, the most significant alteration is in the penalty for a revoke—from two tricks to one in most cases—which has been revised to agree with the revoke law in duplicate bridge. There are also a number of less revolutionary changes. As soon as we have had the opportunity to study the official revisions, we will report on them.

European Trip Bargain Again

By ANDREW MARTON

ROME (UPI) — American tourists in Europe this summer are discovering more than Old World charm, ruins of ancient civilizations and other traditional attractions. They're finding bargains again.

From London to Athens, the American tourist's dollar is climbing in value, and that means cheaper prices on just about everything.

Rome is now one of Europe's best dollar values. Americans are buying fine leather goods on the Via Condotti or period antique pieces on the torch-lit Via Coronari for last year's prices, and sometimes even lower.

"Not only did we come here for the food, flora and fauna, but also to take advantage of the better (dollar exchange) rate," said Jo Burr, a vacationing travel agent from Milwaukee, Wis.

The dollar has appreciated against the Italian lira by 30 percent in the past year, a factor that has more than overcome the nation's 20 percent inflation during the same period.

Americans are now paying $2.72 for that cool glass of orange juice on the fashionable Via Veneto that cost them $3.85 last year. A pair of Gucci loafers now costs $85 instead of the $95 of 12 months ago and Valentino suits start at $240 instead of $300.

"With the dollar the way it is, we're buying what the Italians make best — leather goods and clothes," said Mrs. Jean Hastings, of Madison, Wis., as she walked along the swank Via Condotti.

Legislatures Find Going Tough Without Federal Aid For Budgets

By MARK NOBLIN
United Press International

President Reagan's spending cut proposals, which are sailing through Congress, have left the nation's legislatures, governors and state budget planners adrift.

Not only is the administration speaking of cutting money sent to the states by around 25 percent, it also is proposing a new way of doling it out through so-called "block grants" with fewer strings attached.

Since several states' income taxes are tied to the federal income tax and because sales taxes could be boosted by a federal tax cut, Reagan's more controversial tax package could affect state tax revenues for next year.

With so much up in the air, states trying to fashion their own budgets for next year have found it a difficult and uncertain task.

Most, however, are unwilling to condemn the Reagan economic package nor seek to boost state taxes to make up for the loss in federal funds.

"State officials do not know how much federal funds are going to be flowing down," said South Carolina State Auditor Edgar A. Vaughn Jr.

"Secondly, what form are they going to come in? It's very disconcerting."

In the words of Democratic Oregon State Sen. Ed Fadely, state budgets must be made "like a porcupine makes love — very carefully."

Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson told his Legislature one thing is certain, however: "The gravy train from Washington has been halted before reaching our borders this year. And next year, it's not even going to leave the station."

Most state governments already are, or soon will be, completing their budgets for next year, without knowing for certain how much federal money will be coming in to fund programs such as education and social services.

Congress is not expected to take final action on the federal budget until next fall.

A few legislatures are contemplating special sessions after the federal budget is approved so they can deal with the changes. Among them are Rhode Island, New Hampshire, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Iowa passed a new law to help it deal with federal budget changes.

Texas took a simpler approach. "This is all so tenuous we are going to deal with it through a rider," said state Rep. Bill Presnal, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

"The rider will simply say, 'When block grants come down, agencies are to stay within the programs outlined in the appropriations bill.' We're going to let them know we expect them to consider what the legislative intent was when we passed the budget.

"Hopefully," Presnal said, "the agencies will take the rider language to heart and think about what the Legislature would do if it was in session."

The "block grant" approach, which is touted as giving the states more authority to spend federal money the way they want, would combine numerous grants in areas such as education and welfare and drop some federal requirements on how the money is spent.

In addition, the Reagan administration said the resulting decrease in bureaucracy will cut overhead costs and get the money to the programs for which it was intended.

"We expect it will cut our administrative costs about 5 percent, and allow us to place some of our best people on administering programs," said Maine Finance Commissioner Rodney Scribner.

"Up to now, they've been put to work writing applications for all the federal programs we have to apply for."

Scribner noted, however, "that 5 percent is not going to help cover the 25 percent loss in funds."

"The only salvation will be once we receive block grants, Alabama will have the responsibility of setting priorities," said Alabama state Rep. Walter Owens, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

"Hopefully, there will be less red tape and less regulations to operate under. The guidelines have always cost the state more."

Virginia Gov. John Dalton would agree. Earlier this year, he sent back to the federal government several million dollars for a program for the handicapped because he said it would cost the state more money in administrative costs than it was worth.

Opponents of the "block grant" approach see it merely as a way for Congress and the administration to get part of the blame for budget cuts off their backs.

Ejner J. Johnson, chief of staff for Maryland Gov. Harry Hughes, said Reagan gets it both ways with his budget: He gets all the glory for cutting spending and, through the block grant program, forces the governors to make the politically unpopular choice of which programs get cut and which are saved.

Arthur Kremer, New York Assembly Ways and Means chairman, said he wants to make sure credit is given where credit is due.

"People are just now finding out that a lot of programs near and dear to the people of New York are being chopped 25 percent and more," he said.

"We want to let people know it's Washington that's doing it, not Albany. We want to make sure blame goes to the proper place."

While state officials do not want the blame for the federal budget cuts, they also are in no mood to increase state taxes to make up for the loss in federal funds.

"I don't think we're prepared in Rhode Island to increase our taxes to replace federal cuts in the budget," said Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy.

"I have a serious problem with raising taxes to balance the federal budget," said Harry Meshel, Democratic minority leader of the Ohio State Senate.

South Carolina's Vaughan said there will be pressures to increase state taxes to make up for federal reductions. "There's going to be a real push to replace the lost money with state money," he said. "But, quite frankly, I don't know where it would come from."

Cleta Deatheridge, appropriations committee chairman of the Oklahoma House, summed it up: "What the federal government is saying to the states is, 'If you want these programs, you come up with the money for it.' That's going to make for some tough decisions."

Robert Dickeson, director of Arizona's department of administration, said much of the burden of the cuts will fall outside of government.

"I don't think anybody fully realizes what impact this is going to have on services, programs and delivery," he said. "It's not just going to be played out within the governmental arena.

"It's going to have a terrific impact on private sector organizations — charities, churches and other institutions," Dickeson said.

Burns Escapes Penalty, Holds The Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — George Burns, in position to win the gaudiest prize in golf, has at last one thing going for him, and one big, big lesson to learn in Sunday's final round of the chase for the 81st United States Open Championship.

Stretches His Lead

George Burns sticks out his tongue as he lines up a putt during Saturday's round at the U.S. Open. Burns, despite some problems, pulled out into a three-stroke lead after three rounds of the tournament. (AP Laserphoto)

"I'm a great one for momentum," Burns said Saturday after a magnificent escape act, aided and abetted by a critical ruling, enabled him to overcome the varied disasters that struck down golf's greatest players and staked him to a 3-shot lead.

"I got it going last week," with his strongest showing of the year, a fifth place in the Westchester Classic.

And the momentum has continued this week with three consecutive rounds in the 60's, the latest a hard-won, 2-under-par 68 on the nerve-wracking, 6,528-yard Merion Golf Club course.

It produced an Open scoring record for 54 holes, a 203 total that broke by a single shot Jack Nicklaus' effort last year at Baltusrol.

"I never expected to shoot those rounds here," Burns said. "This is a big surprise to me."

He didn't really expect to play too well. It's not his favorite golf tournament. And it's not his favorite golf course.

He's been openly, surprisingly critical of the sponsoring U.S. Golf Association and said, before the tournament started, he was playing "only because I need the money.

"I don't particularly like the guys that run it and I don't particularly like what they do to the golf courses.

"I don't particularly like the limelight and all the bull that goes with it," he said.

Much of his displeasure goes back to his amateur days, and a bitter dispute he had with U.S.G.A. officials during the Walker Cup matches.

"I worked myself into a frenzy," he said and later was forced to write letters of apology.

"It weighed on me for two or three years," he said. His displeaure with the U.S.G.A., which is concerned primarily with the amateur game, was a key factor in his decision to turn pro at the relatively late age of 25.

"I had planned on remaining an amateur. That was a key factor in the decision to turn pro," he said.

His brilliant amateur record performance did not carry over into the pro ranks. Burns has won but one individual title in his six years of PGA Tour activity. He's been in position many times before and let them get away.

He's very much aware of the problem and the lesson he has to learn.

"I haven't learned to win yet," he said.

He's three shots in front. But should he falter, should he provide an opening, at least three men are poised and ready to make a move at him: steady David Graham; wiry, tough-minded Bill Rogers; and the greatest player of them all, Jack Nicklaus.

"I'll just try to keep the ball in play," said Graham, a former PGA champion. "Four steady rounds usually win the Open."

He was second alone with a round of par-70 and a 206 total.

"There's no pressure on me," said Rogers, winner of the Heritage Classic earlier this year and one of golf's more accurate players. "I've got nothing to lose."

He was at 207 after a 69.

"On Open courses," said Nicklaus, the defending champion who has been there so often before, "several shots can change hands very quickly."

He was tied at 208, five shots off the pace, with Chi Chi Rodriguez and John Schroeder.

Nicklaus had a 71 that included a double bogey on the 14th hole. ChiChi closed up with a 67 and Schroeder had a 69.

The only others under par were Ben Crenshaw, first-round leader Jim Thorpe, former American amateur champ John Cook and Tommy Valentine. Crenshaw tied the competitive course record for Merion with a 64, the lowest score ever shot in the third round of a U.S. Open. Thorpe matched par-70, Cook had a 71 and Valentine, who said he's only trying to finish in the top 16 and win a trip to the Masters, had a 72.

Nicklaus, generally recognized as golf's greatest player, appeared poised to make a run at the lead at one point.

He'd birdied two holes in a row, missing a hole in one by a couple of inches, and was within two strokes of the lead when he fell back with the double bogey on the 14th. He drove into the rough, missed the green short and right, had a difficult lie and pitched poorly from there, then three-putted, missing a 6-foot second putt.

"I suffered the consequnces of trying to make up for a bad shot," he said.

"For two days I've had it in shape and let it get away," said Nicklaus, who also took a double bogey in the second round. But others had even sadder stories.

Within the space of 10 minutes, Masters champion Tom Watson, Australian Greg Norman and Bill Kratzert, all among the leaders, suffered triple bogeys and disappeared from contention.

Watson, who so desperately longs for this title to add to his two Masters and three British Opens, pulled his tee shot out of bounds and eventually three-putted on the 15th. He finished with a 73 and a very long face and is nine shots back at 212.

Norman, who currently holds the Australian Open and British Masters titles, went into a fairway bunker on the 12th, took three more shots to reach the green and three-putted for his triple. He had a 73 and a 211 total.

Kratzert, once within two strokes of the top spot, put his ball into a bunker behind the 13th green and took three swings to get it out. It was the big mistake in a round of 73 that left him at 211.

And Burns flirted with the same sort of thing. But time after time, a putter he jerked out of his fathers junk barrel last week, pulled him through. He one-putted half the greens. And he made five birdies.

But the key for the big guy who had such a gaudy amateur rogey on the 11th hole.

It was a bogey, yes. A bogey-5. But, as so often happens on the double-tough courses used for the U.S. Open, it was a round-saving bogey. He was looking at something much worse. A double bogey-6 seemed probable; a 7 or 8 or even 9 wasn't out of the question.

That was on the 11th, a 370-yard par-4. He hit his drive in the left rough, ankle-deep stuff. He hit his second off the heel of the club and punched it into terrible trouble, deeper into the rough, a shot that sent officials scurrying into the woods and weeds in search of the ball.

They found it, some 40 yards away from the green in waist-high brush in a position that bordered on the impossible.

But a spectator's stand was between his position and the putting surface.

And he was given relief from the stands, according to the rules of golf.

It was a great break. He was allowed to drop it in a position so that he could, at last, get his club on it. And he played his third shot just short of the putting surface, chipped on and rapped in a 5-footer for the bogey.

"That could have been a real bad hole," Burns said.

"I thought I was going to be there all afternoon. It was a very big break for me."

Graham, playing with Burns in the final twosome, agreed.

Pickard Wins Home Run Title

From Wire Reports

OKLAHOMA CITY — Sherri Pickard, assistant women's basketball coach at East Carolina University, captured the Women's National Softball Home Run Hitting Championship yesterday.

Pickard, a native of Graham, N.C., hit 16 over-the-wall shots to edge Tulsa, Okla.'s, Shirley Rose, who finished with 14.

Dick Bartel of San Antonio, Texas, hit home runs on his first two swings of a five-swing playoff and captured the men's championship during the windy Saturday afternoon finals.

Bartel forced a playoff with Don Arndt of Sherrils Ford, N.C., when the pair completed the regulation 55 swings with 22 homers each.

Arndt managed only one round-tripper on his five extra swings before Bartel quickly disposed of him on his first two chances.

Third place on the men's side went to Dan Daniels of Kings Beach, Calif., who finished with 17 home runs.

Third place women's winner was Teresa Held of Anoka, Minn., with 12 four-bag hits.

Bartel and Pickard won expense paid trips to Santa Clara, Calif., for World Games I, which will be staged in 17 sports July 24-Aug. 2.

Pickard, who just completed her first year at East Carolina, served for two season as women's basketball coach at Millbrook in Raleigh prior to coming to Greenville. A graduate of N.C. State University, she was an all-state player in basketball, softball and volleyball.

She has twice made the All-America first team in ASA softball, and this past summer was named Most Valuable Player of the national tournament won by her team, Rubi-Ott's.

Gay Holds Off Wayne Rally, 4-3

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Seven games in eight days plays havoc with a pitching rotation. Just ask Pitt County coach Pat Smith. But Saturday night Smith found an answer to his pitching problems — Tyrone Gay.

With Pitt County clinging to a one-run lead over Wayne County in the seventh inning and starter Doug McRoy tiring, Smith called on Gay. Gay's response was all Smith could have wanted.

The Ayden-Grifton left-hander retired all eight batters he faced, including five on strike outs, to help give Pitt County a 4-3 victory over Wayne County Saturday night in an American Legion baseball game at Harrington Field.

The win, Pitt County's second straight and eighth this season in 11 outings, came on a cool evening when Post 39 returned home after having played five straight road games and after being forced deeply into its pitching reserves after suffering two straight losses earlier last week.

"We've played a wad of games in the last few days and we've been taking it day-by-day as far as our pitching goes," Smith said. "A loss now is the same as a loss later in the season."

When asked afterwards why he picked Gay, normally a starter, to relieve McRoy, Smith said, "All our pitchers have been used. I didn't have anybody else."

Gay was more than Wayne County could handle during the last 2⅓ innings. Trailing 4-1 going into the seventh, Wayne County used two hits and an error by Mitch Brann to cut the gap to one before Gay entered and ended any and all thoughts Post 11 had of winning.

Jeff Brodgen tripled to the left-centerfield gap to open the seventh. David Frederick, who was two for four including a solo home run in the third, then sent a sacrifice fly to center to score Brodgen.

Paul Thomas then reached on an infield single when second baseman Sammy Hodges ranged to the shortstop-side of second but threw late to first. Moments later, Hodges was at it again.

Scott Pelletier sent a sharp grounder up the middle that Hodges dove for and then flipped to second for a force out. Pitt County appeared out of the inning when Rusty Talton sent a deep drive that leftfielder Mitch Brann had but dropped, allowing Pelletier to score.

The play chased McRoy, who threw 105 pitches during his 6⅔ innings of work, for Gay. Gay promptly struck out Larry Searles on a sweeping 3-2 curve ball to end the threat.

Of the final six batters Gay faced, he struck out four and forced two infield ground balls to preserve the victory.

"Gay done a real good job coming in there," Smith said. "Doug was getting a little tired and they were hitting the ball there in the that inning hard on him. But we got six innings out of him, which is what we were hoping for."

After leaving two runners stranded in the first and second innings without scoring, Wayne County finally broke through in the third when leadoff hitter Frederick hit the first pitch he saw over the left-centerfield fence, some 340 feet away.

The lead lasted but one inning. Pitt County, held without a hit by Talton the first three innings, used three singles in the third to score two runs and take a lead it never relinquished.

Brann singled and stole second to open the inning and then scored when Kenny Barnes, who was two for four for the night, fought off a pitch and poked a single into rightfield. Barnes went to second when rightfielder Tim Teachey misplayed the ball.

After Emmett Walsh struck out, Gordon Douglas singled to right to score Barnes and Pitt County led, 2-1.

Two innings later, Post 39's lead mushroomed to three runs, but only after Barnes made sure Post 11 didn't tie the game in the top of the sixth.

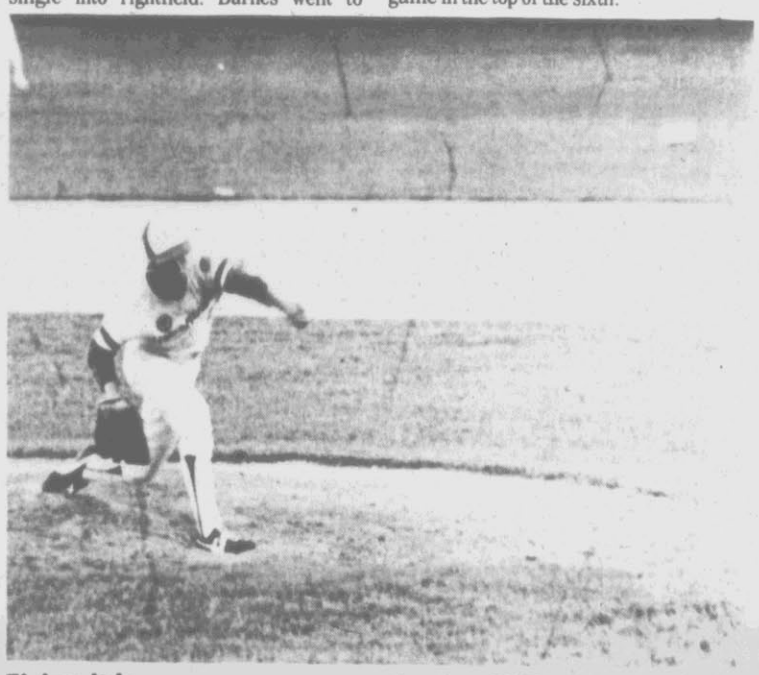

With one gone and Searles on second, Thomas Battle singled to centerfield. Searles was waved home but Barnes' throw to Walsh was in time to get the sliding Searles and preserve the 2-1 lead, which quickly became 4-1 in the bottom half of the inning.

With one gone in the sixth, Walsh drove a double into the right-centerfield gap. Then, with two gone, Walsh went to third on a wild pitch and Roger Williams walked.

Hodges then sent a shallow looper into centerfield that dropped for a single to score Walsh. Billy Kittrell followed with nearly an identical hit to score Williams and Pitt County led, 4-1.

Wayne County managed to cut the deficit to one in the seventh before Gay came on to preserve the victory.

No Movement; Strike Continues

By The Associated Press

Thirteen more major league games were cancelled Saturday because of the baseball strike, pushing the total number of games lost for the nine days since June 12 when the players walked off the job to 114.

That is just 39 short of the 153-game deductable needed to trigger management's $50 million insurance policy. That plateau will be reached next Wednesday and thereafter each club will receive approximately $100,000 per cancelled playing date.

Teams have already been receiving benefits from a mutual assistance fund with assets reported at about $20 million. That money was accumulated over the past two years under direction of the Player Relations Committee, bargaining arm of the 26 owners.

The insurance policy, purchased at a premium of $2 million, will provide income for the owners through early August and, based on the total absence of any progress at the bargaining table last week, there is every reason to expect the strike to still be going on then.

Federal Mediator Kenneth Moffett seemed annoyed at the stalemated situation and said he would not call the two sides back into negotiations until there was some indication of a willingness by one or the other to move on the issue of free agent compensation, the lone issue on the table.

Moffett said he had reason to believe before Friday's negotiating session that there might be some progress. "Obviously, that fell through," Moffett said after a joint session lasted only 10 minutes in what Baltimore's Mark Belanger described as a "sullen" atmosphere.

So Moffett returned to Washington to mediate negotiations in the air traffic controllers' strike threatened for Monday, saying he would remain in touch over the weekend with both sides in the baseball walkout. But he made it clear that negotiations would not resume routinely.

"It's futile and stupid going through the charade of getting together on a regular basis with no movement," Moffett said.

A committee of five players — Belanger, Bob Boone of Philadelphia Rusty Staub of the New York Mets, Montreal's Steve Rogers and Tom Seaver of the Cincinnati Reds — has been representing the union in negotiations with Ray Grebey, director of the Player Relations Committee.

The players seemed angry and frustrated following Friday's session, apparently tired of having their ideas dismissed by management negotiators.

The union has proposed a player pool formula to supply professional compensation to teams losing ranking free agents. All teams would contribute players to the pool with selections carrying price tags from $30,000 to $60,000, depending on team standings. The owners have rejected that plan because it would draw compensation players from all teams, not just the ones participating in the re-entry draft and signing free agents.

Grebey seemed to signal a hardening of the management position when he said "the conditions placed on an acceptable resolution of the issues (by the players) are insurmountable."

All-Stars Begin Arriving Today For Boys' Home Drills

The week-long buildup toward the 19th annual North Carolina Jaycees Boys Home All-Star football game gets under way today when some 70 football players invade Greenville.

The players — 35 for both the North and South squads — will start arriving at East Carolina's Jones Dorm around noon and will have orientation meetings much of the afternoon. A cookout is planned in the evening from 5 to 9 p.m. at the Tar River pool.

The week culminates with the players' banquet Friday night at 6 p.m. in the American Legion building and the game itself, set for 8 o'clock Sunday evening in Ficklen Stadium.

The week will include movies and putt golf for both squads as well as two-a-day practices.

The teams will work out from 9 to 11 a.m. every day this week on the Rose High and ECU practice fields. Practice will also be held each afternoon, but the times will be adjusted depending on the heat.

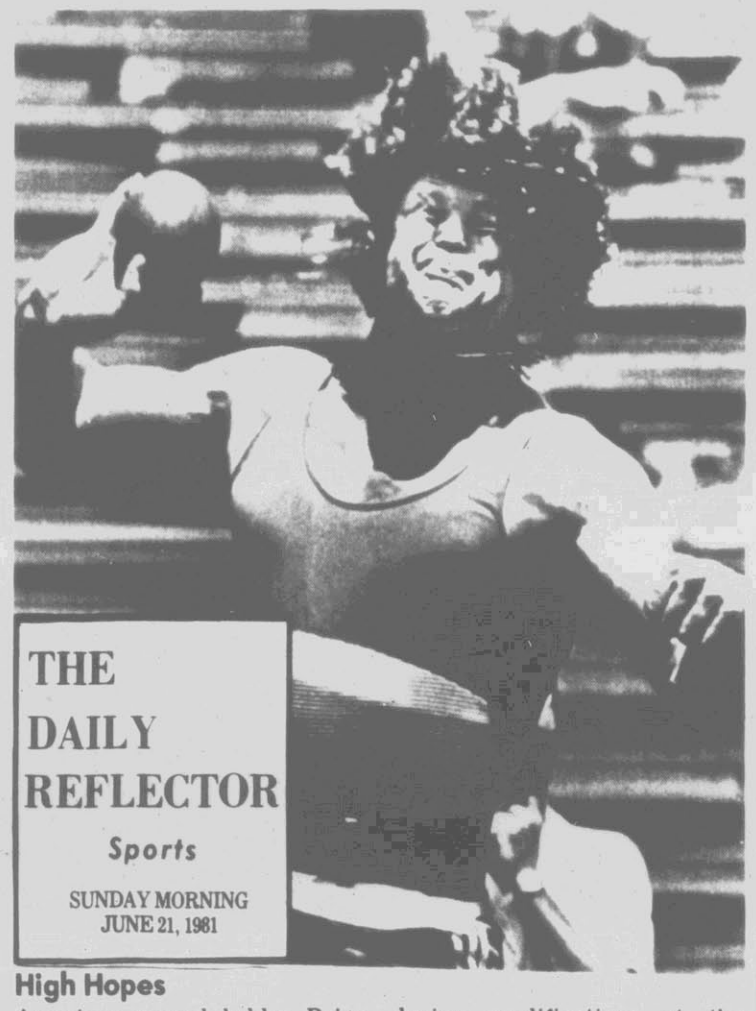

A press day will be held Tuesday morning where players will be available for pictures.

More than 30,000 tickets are now out on the market. Of those, 8-12,000 are being sold throughout the state. Another 11,000 were given to Greenville and Pitt County students, grades K through 7. Another 9,000 tickets are being sold in Greenville.

Tickets are $3 in advance and $4 at the gate. Children under 12 are admitted free.

Tony Oakes of Vance Senior High School will head the North coaching staff while Bob Paroli will lead the South staff.

High Hopes

Austin Rips Jaeger In Finals

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Tracy Austin blitzed Andrea Jaeger 6-3, 6-4 Saturday in a teenage battle for the singles title of the $125,000 BMW women's grass court tennis championships, a stagesetter for Wimbledon.

Austin, 18, took 1 hour, 13 minutes to defeat Jaeger, a 16-year-old schoolgirl from Lincolnshire, Ill., and retain the title.

Austin, who did not drop a set in six matches the tournament, said the win confirmed in her own mind that she had made a complete recovery from the sciatic nerve injury that kept her out of action for nearly five months.

She had played only six competitive matches since January before this tournament, but she was in brilliant form throughout the week.

"It is certainly a good way to go into Wimbledon," said Austin, of Rolling Hills, Calif. "I've proved I'm mentally tough and physically strong for six days in a row."

Jaeger, who had excelled herself in beating two-time Wimbledon champion Martina Navratilova in Friday's semifinals, was unable to raise her game again and made too many unforced errors.

Top-seeded Austin was far more consistent from the baseline and controlled the pattern of the match, although in the second set Jaeger clawed her way back from 0-4 to 4-4.

"I just didn't play 100 per cent," Jaeger said. "I think I went for a little too much. I went for too many winners when I was out of position and made stypid mistakes."

Jaeger appeared to have Austin worried at 4-4, when she won the eighth game on a disputed line call.

Completely out of character, Austin argued with the umpire and accused of him of only overruling in her opponent's favor.

"It was pretty vital, and I guess I got annoyed," she said afterward.

Austin then pulled her game together. "I found I was hitting a little short, but I got my length back and everything was fine," she said.

She rattled off two straight games for the match - her fourth win in seven meetings with her teenage rival.

Austin was seeded No. 2 and Jaeger No. 3. here for Wimbledon, which starts Monday, Austin is No. 3 and Jaeger No. 5. Chris Evert Lloyd, the Wimbledon top seed, did not play here.

Lewis Nears Rare Double Feat

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Carl Lewis was on the verge of the first sprint-long jump double in 45 years in the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships Saturday night after winning the 100-meter dash in 10.13 seconds and soaring 28 feet, 3½ inches in his first long jump attempt.

No athlete has won the sprint-long jump combination since the great Jesse Owens in 1936. But the sensational Lewis was halfway there after beating an elite field in the 100.

Among those who trailed Lewis, of the University of Houston, across the finish line were 1980 champion Stanley Floyd, 10.21, Southeastern Conference champion Mel Lattany, 10.21, and 1979 winner James Sanford, 10.22.

Also in the race, but trailing badly, were two-time Olympian Harvey Glance and 1976 Olympian Steve Riddick.

In the long jump, Lewis' performance during the trials put him far ahead of the field and he passed his next two attempts in order to concentrate on the 100. But after the sprint, he returned to the long jump area for his final three opportunities.

Hurdler Edwin Moses extended his winning streak to 66 races.

Moses, unbeaten in the 400 intermediate hurdles since August 26, 1977, won his semi-final heat in a relatively slow 51.8 in advancing to Sunday night's final. During Moses's long streak, 62 of his victories have been finals and the other six in preliminaries, heats or semifinals.

Moses was not happy with the 100 degree heat that basked Hughes Stadium.

"I could feel the heat of the track step by step," he said. "This weather was way too hot for me. It will hurt me to run hard in the final because when I run hard I put too much pressure on the track with my feet and that is what causes them to get hot.

Earlier, colorful Brian Oldfield, the American record-holder, led the shot put qualifying with a heave of 68 feet, 10½ inches.

Despite the distance, the massive Oldfield was not especially pleased with his effort.

"I pulled away from it (the front of the shotput ring)," he said. "I was rushing my throw and it was mostly flat."

Flatter than usual, because Oldfield's throws generally are lower than most shotputters. His unusual spinning stlye sends the put on a low trejectory, as opposed to a greater arc that is prevailant among most shotputters.

Asked if he could reach 73 feet in the final, beating his American record of 72-3 and the world mark of 72-8 by East Germany's Udo Beyer, Oldfield replied, "I hate to limit myself."

Actually, Oldfield already has surpassed those marks. He once threw 75-0, but that was in a professional unsanctioned meet and ineligible for world recognition.

Qualifying was held Saturday in several other events, with 13 finals also on the program. Three finals were contested Friday night and 22 finals will be held Sunday.

The best performance in Saturday's early qualifying was by javelin thrower Bob Roggy. He broke the Hughes Stadium record of 271-3 with a toss of 278-6.

Meanwhile, American record holder Jodi Anderson led the qualifiers into Sunday's women's long jump final with a leap of 21-3½.

Carol Lewis, younger sister of Carl Lewis, who soared a spectacular wind-aided 28-7¾ in Friday's men's long jump qualifuying, was the second best women's qualifyer with a wind-aided 21-1½.

Carol, like her brother, was attempting to win two events in the National Championships. Friday, she reached the final of Saturday night's women's 100-meter high hurdles. Carl also was in the men's 100-meter dash semifinals Saturday night.

Arguello Tops Watt For WBC Lightweight Title

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — Alexis Arguello of Nicaragua won the World Boxing Council lightweight title by outpointing defending champion Jim Watt of Scotland over 15 rounds at Wembley Arena Saturday night.

Arguello, who now lives in Miami, completely dominated the fight and put Watt down for a count of eight in the seventh round.

He became the sixth boxer in history to win a world title in three different weight divisions. He previously was featherweight and junior lightweight champion.

The judges' decision was unanimous.

Robert Desgain of Belgium scored it 147-143 for Arguello, Dick Young of the United States had it 147-137 and Kurt Hallbach of West Germany also scored it 147-143.

Watt, 32, had held the title for more than two years. He had successfully defended on four occasions but was fighting outside his native Glasgow for the first time in three years.

Arguello, a master technician, found no problem in coping with Watt's southpaw style and now has won a remarkable 15 out of 16 title fights.

Watt, his face a crimson mess at the end, was cheered on by 3,000 Scottish fans in a disappointing crowd of 7,000.

He fought gamely to the end but was outclassed by the crisper punching and skillful combinations of the Latin American.

A noisy band of 100 Nicaraguans cheered Arguello to victory.

The taller Arguello, who retired in both his previous divisions because of weight problems, mixed his punches magnificently and showed he was worthy of being the 2-to-5 odds-on pre-fight favorite.

Watt, at 5 feet, 7½ inches — nearly two inches shorter than his challenger — came into the fight in the middle rounds but was never able to get his right jab working with his usual efficiency.

The Scot, who had been criticized in the United States as a journeyman fighter after his victories over Howard Davis and Sean O'Grady, showed the fighting qualities of a champion. But his face was a puffy mess at the end.

O'Grady, whom Watt controversially defeated in his last defense eight months ago, was at the ringside working as a television commentator. O'Grady holds the WBA version of the title and was reported ready to fight Arguello next to unify the crown.

The fight was the richest in British boxing history, including worldwide television revenues. Watt received $750,000 and Arguello around $280,000.

Watt weighed in at 134¾ pounds and Arguello at 134½.

Edmondson In Grass Victory

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Mark Edmondson of Australia served in great style Saturday and defeated Roscoe Tanner 6-3, 5-7, 6-4 in the final of the Lambert and Butler grass courts tennis tournament.

The American left-hander suffered a blow to his prestige two days before the start of Wimbledon, where he is the No. 8 seed. Edmondson is not seeded.

But there was no doubt about the result Saturday. The 26-year-old Australian outserved Tanner and outvolleyed him in winning $15,000.

Tanner, known for his big serve, said: "I don't think I played that badly, but all credit to Mark. He was simply in great form."

Edmondson ran through the first set in 24 minutes, dropping only six points in his five service games.

He might have won in straight sets, because Tanner struggled to hold on to his first three service games in the second. But the American weathered the storm and got his only service break of the match in the 12th game to level at one-set each.

The final set went to 3-3, and Tanner led 40-0 on his service when suddenly his game disintegrated and Edmondson surged ahead.

The American made a string of bad shots, starting with a double fault and ending with a simple forehand volleying error. It enabled Edmondson to rally and break service for a 4-3 lead.

Burns...

"If he hadn't gotten relief, he'd probably have made a 7," Graham said. "But, under the rules of golf, he's allowed relief. It was a very lucky break for him, a very good 5."

It was Burns' biggest adventure, but not his only one.

"I was a little unsteady all day, but I was lucky with my putting," he said.

The key, he said, was that "I stayed away from the potential 2-shot disaster thanks to the relief I got."

He paused a moment, and offered a wry grin.

"I killed a few trees and a few spectators on the way in, but I got it in."

He saved par on the fifth after driving into deep rough, playing a shot between trees and finally dropping a 3-4 footer.

He saved par on the 17th after missing the green. This time it was from about 5-6 feet.

And he seemed to be in trouble on the 18th. His second shot went well over the green. Again he saved, playing a delicate little chip down to about 6 feet and ramming the putt into the back of the cup only moments before rain began to fall.

He got off to a birdie-birdie start with 6-and 12-footers on the first two holes, then bogeyed the third after missing the green. He got the shot back with a deft little pitch to 2 feet on the fourth hole, then parred around — thanks to some scrambling saves — to the 11th.

After the saving bogey there, he birdied the 12th from six feet, bogeyed the 14th after missing the green, then holed a 15-18 footer for birdie on the 15th.

He matched a birdie with a bogey going out, then gradually dropped back.

He got it one under for the day with a sand wedge shot that missed by six inches of being an eagle-2 on the 10th, but bogeyed the 12th from a bunker.

A 9-iron left him 12 inches for a birdie on the next, but he gave it back from the high, wiry grass, the Scotch broom, on the 14th. And he bogeyed the 18th after driving into the rough.

Negotiator Moffett Feels The Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proletariat of the baseball parks are on strike this summer weekend and the traffic cops of the skies might join them, so it's understandable if Ken Moffett is feeling some pressure.

His job is to get the ballplayers back to work and to keep the air traffic controllers in their towers.

Moffett, 49, is acting director of the Federal Mediation and Concilation Service. As top mediator, he fields the hottest potatoes in labor-management disputes.

But he's been reconciling the unreconcilable for 20 years, and if he's under pressure now he isn't showing it. Under-fire cool is his professional mien. Even when the going gets roughest, he says, his heart thumps a lackadaisical 51 beats per minute, far slower than most people's.

In an interview this week, his collar was open and his long legs sprawled across a table. Occasionally, he excused himself to take a phone call from a baseball mogul or a congressman. Conducting such behind-the-scenes soundings is a chief part of his job.

He is so unruffable, Moffett says, that sometimes during a heated bargaining session one of the participants accuses him of lethargy bordering on indifference. That goes with the territory, too, he says: one of his roles is lightning rod.

One reason he can be relaxed, he says — and this might sound like heresy — is that he thinks there are worse things in the world than strikes.

An economic situation that forbade them from occuring would be worse, he says. Strikes, he argues, are the price of economic democracy.

For all that, he hates to see them occur in disputes he has been mediating.

"You feel rotten," he says. "You always think there must have been something I did wrong. Unless you're totally without a conscience, you always wind up blaming yourself."

Moffett has no bag of tricks. His key technique is to listen hard for the nuances by which each party signals its minimum demands.

Then he plays what he calls "what if." Knowing one side's bottom line, he goes to the other side, and asks: "What if they offered this?"

It sounds simple, but it doesn't work if both sides don't trust the mediator to keep their secrets.

"Ken has their trust," says labor lawyer David Vaughn, a former colleague. "Mediating is very much a listening game, and he's a skilled listener. He's far more than just a shoulder to cry on. He knows how to get inside the parties' heads.

"Ken knows that no matter what, you can't get excited. If you do, you become part of the problem. He's very good about being very calm under a lot of pressure. He's a real deadpan."

Sometimes, Moffett says, the situation demands a bit of pressure.

"You have to be forceful, terribly presumptuous, set deadlines you have no more right to set than the man in the moon. You have to take charge."

He credits his ability to remain calm in the 20th hour of a heated bargaining session to the other kind of marathoning. Running is almost an obsession. He covers 70 miles a week.

Since he spends about a third of his life out of town, he has run in cities across the land. His best time is three hours, 37 minutes in Washington's Marine Corps Marathon — 17 minutes too slow to qualify for the Boston Marathon. "But I'm going to do Boston if it kills me," he vows.

Moffett attributes his snail-pace heartbeat to running, as he does the stamina that requires for him to spend sleepless night after night in bargaining. "I'm always the last guy at the table to yawn," he brags.

Like many professional mediators, Moffett grew up in the labor movement. He worked as an organizer, mediator and administrator for a United Mine Workers unit which represented 250,000 non-mining, industrial workers. His grandfather was a member of the same unit, and his father served as president.

Moffett was born in Lykens, Pa., in the Pennsylvania coalfields, but his family moved a lot while he was growing up; he attended eight schools in eight states over eight years.

His youthful goal was not to settle strikes but to throw them. He wanted to be a pitcher. But he washed out of several tryout camps. He says his fastball was so unfast it "should have been arrested for loitering."

He remains an ardent fan of the Philadelphia Phillies — giving a sentimental spin to his professional desire to see the ballplayers playing ball.

78-Year-Old Sees Watson As Another Snead In The Open

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — "If Tom Watson doesn't win the Open here this year, I fear he will become another Sam Snead," the old man said dolefully, tweaking a neat gray beard.

When this old man talks — as they say in those brokerage house commercials — people listen.

Robert Mossman is 78 years old, and he claims that golf has been his passion for 71 of them — first as a playing tyke, then as a weekend competitor, later as operator of a driving range and a man who has rubbed elbows with the greats and near greats of the game from Bob Jones to Watson.

"When you are as good a golfer as young Watson is and when you try as hard as long as he has to win the Open and keep seeing it slip away, your attitude changes," the septogenarian said.

"You get jittery and start pressing. You don't relax. You don't relax. You try to steer the ball. It can be disastrous, as Sam Snead will tell you."

Mossman is just a slip of a man — 5-feet-7 and 148 pounds — but bouncy, dapper and articulate. A Pennsylvania native now retired and residing in Kansas City, he is doing 90-second reports on the Open for radio station WDAF-FM in Kansas City.

He has become one of the centers of attention in the press tent at Merion.

Son of a successful Pittsburgh public relations executive, he has been on the scene for some of golf's greatest moments.

He was at Merion when Bobby Jones, the Atlanta prodigy, made his debut in the U.S. Amateur at age 14 in 1916 — "I was 15 at the time" — and he saw Jones beat Gene Homans 8 up for the Amateur crown at Merion in 1930, completing his unprecedented "Grand Slam."

Mossman also was at the Philadelphia Golf Club at neighboring Spring Mill in the 1939 when Snead, needing only a 5 to win and a 6 to tie, skied to a shattering 8 on the final hole to blow one of his many Open chances.

Snead, whose swing was designed in heaven, went on to flub a half-dozen other chances — four times a runnerup — but never could list an Open among his 84 tour victories.

It has become golf's most notorious example of frustration and ironic twist of fate. Similarly, Arnold Palmer has never won the PGA.

Mossman had a role in determining the outcome of the 1939 Open and he wears a scar on the side of his head as a mark of honor.

"After Snead blew it, Byron Nelson, Craig Wood and Denny Shute finished in a tie and had to play an 18-hole playoff," Moosman recalled.

"They came to the last hole with Wood one shot back of Nelson and Shute four back. I was one of those surrounding the 18th green.

"Suddenly we heard people yelling 'Fore! Fore!' I was glinting into the sun and could see nothing. Wood's approach shot hit me just above the right temple.

"An inch or so lower and I would have been killed. I was knocked unconscious, taken, bleeding, by stretcher to the hospital where eight stitches were taken on my head."

Mossman didn't know until that evening, when Wood visited him at the hospital, that the ball caromed off close to the green instead of going out of bounds and allowed Wood to tie Nelson. A second 18-hole playoff was required, which Nelson won.

"Eggs were 20 cents, milk nine cents a quart, bread nickel a loaf," he said. "You could get five hamburgers for 25 cents. It was the depth of the depression."

Later the aging golf buff gravitated to Kansas City to join a nephew, whose three-acre plot adjoins the property of Tom Watson.

He only returns East when a big tournament comes to his old stomping grounds. He's missed none.

In nine tries, Watson's best showing in the Open was a tie for third at Baltusrol last year.

"A wonderful golfer and a totally nice man," Mossman said of Watson. "But he must be talking to himself by now. Jack Nicklaus is the same — a great competitor in the big championships.

"But my favorite always will be Bobby Jones. Hot-tempered as a kid but he whipped it. He was always gallant, the Southern gentleman and he gave golf a grace and rhythm no one can ever match."

Pieces, Players Come Together In Former Arizona Coach's Trial

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — After opening arguments and initial testimony, contrasts are emerging in the trial of Tony Mason, the former University of Arizona football coach who stands accused of filing false travel vouchers.

With the 4-day old trial adjourned until Tuesday, the pieces and players shaping the trial scenario are these:

—The prosecution says Mason defrauded the university with false travel claims; the defense says he was in the hole financially from recruiting costs because he was trying to do a first-class job, and he "made some poor misjudgments" in trying to obtain what he felt was justifiable reimbursement.

—The prosecution maintains that Mason was involved in a conspiracy, receiving reimbursement by turning in airline passenger receipts for trips he never took; Mason's attorney contends that Mason was suckered by the state's key witness, who used his position as an American Airlines employee to curry favor with coaches at the university and offered ticket receipts to them when they complained of not getting the financial support from the university needed to make up for their out-of-pocket expenses. That witness, the defense seems to be suggesting, profited from at least two personal checks provided by Mason.

—The prosecution has painted a picture of a relatively simple case — one in which Tony Mason submitted six false claims for repayment of money. "He not only lied on those claims, but he managed to obtain false receipts to substantiate those lives," Assistant Attorney General Lindsay E. Brew, who is heading the prosecution, said in his opening statement Thursday.

The prosecution says a seventh phony claim was turned in by one of Mason's assistants, each "based on the claim that someone had gone on University of Arizona business and was flown by American Airlines. None did."

—The defense has cast the 53-year-old Mason as a hard-working man with a national reputation "as a good football coach and recruiter," who spent long hours, days, weeks, months on the road trying to recruit blue-chip athletes for the university. When Mason became head coach, Arizona had just joined the prestigious Pac-10 athletic conference.

Defense attorney William T. Healy has admitted Mason's "misdjudgments" are why he is on trial, but says Mason is the victim of the competition endemic in the Pac-10, and that expense allowance of $40 a day for room and meals to state employees aren't close to enough. Mason, he said in his opening remarks, "was going in the hole $5,000 or $6,000 a year" to compete for players.

He has painted a picture of Mason as a man who "made some other mistakes" by helping his players who needed money — such as two who couldn't afford to fly home when deaths occurred in their families — but did so at Mason's expense.

And Healy has attacked the motives of the key prosecution witness — Michael E. Hoffman — who originally was indicted with Mason and six assistant coaches but who entered a plea-bargain agreement earlier this year.

In exchange for pleading guilty to two misdemeanor charges, Hoffman agreed to testify in Mason's trial. During cross-examination Friday, Hoffman continually asked Healy to repeat questions, constantly stretched out answers, often appeared openly antagonistic. Healy was little less so.

Hoffman testified to having given Mason unused airline passenger receipts six to eight times, but said Mason initiated the "deals."

Healy contends that Hoffman started it, and in cross-examination Friday asked him several times whether Mason or his assistants knew anything about American Airlines ticketing procedures and computerized records. Hoffman answered each time with a variation of "I don't know what he (Mason) knows. He travels a lot."

Mason's secretary, Patricia R. Evans, testified on Friday, saying Mason had filed false ticket receipts with travel expense vouchers and purchase requisitions. She said she knew they were false because names on the airline receipts didn't match those of recruits brought by Mason and his coaches to preview the school. She hasn't been cross-examined yet.

She did testify that she filed Mason's claims, as part of her secretarial duties, with the university's business office. She also testified that one of Mason's assistants, L. Wayne Jones, filed what appeared to be an improper claim because he was in the office on a date for which he claimed to have been traveling. He told her to file it, she testified.

When the trial resumes, the prosecution intends to produce an American Airlines ticket security official from Tulsa, Okla., among its other witnesses.

Healy has indicated he will be calling numerous local business and civic leaders to testify on Mason's behalf. One prominent sports figure mentioned is University of Arkansas head football Coach Lou Holtz. Another possibility is major league baseball player Johnny Bench.

The trial itself was delayed for 2½ days because of individual questioning of prospective jurors. Healy argued that inoensive local pretrial coverage had "inflamed and prejudiced" potential jurors, but most of the panel questioned indicated they knew little of the case through news accounts and few said they read newspapers regularly — with those who do saying concentrated on comic, lifestyle or sports sections.

Exchange 2
Pepsi 1

Mitch Mitchum pitched a no-hitter for Pepsi, but a first-inning walk and two passed balls allowed Exchange to score twice and escape with a 2-1 victory Saturday afternoon in a Tar Heel Little League game.

It was Exchange's first victory of the year.

Mitchum struck out four and walked five en route to the no-hitter. But it was a two-run first inning by Exchange that proved the difference.

Danny Weisenberger walked to open the bottom of the first and went to second on an error when Axel Smith reached on a fielder's choice. With one gone, Tim Clark reached on a fielder's choice when Smith was forced at second.

Weisenberger, who went to third on the force out, subsequently scored on a passed ball. Clark, on second after the passed ball, went to third on another passed ball and then scored on an error to give Exchange a 2-0 lead.

Pepsi managed seven hits but could score just once, in the fourth when Owen Cox singled and scored following singles by Mitchum and Bobby Sullivan.

Clay Young led Pepsi with two hits.

First Federal 1
Carroll & Assoc. 0

John Bolen and Rodney Harris combined for a three-hit shutout to lift First Federal to a narrow 1-0 victory over Carroll & Associates Saturday afternoon in a Tar Heel Little League baseball game.

Bolen pitched the first three innings, giving up all three of C & A's hits. He struck out one and walked three. Harris came on in the fourth and did not allow a hit while striking out seven and walking one and picking up the victory.

Two of C & A's three hits came in the first inning but the home squad could not manage to score. First Federal finally broke the scoreless tie in the fifth inning.

With one gone, Bole was hit by a pitch and went to third on two wild pitches. He scored what proved to be the only run of the game when, after Harris walked and stole second, Mark Holloman reached on a fielder's choice.

Chris Meeks had two hits for First Federal. No one for C & A had more than one hit.

Union Carbide 4
Coca Cola 1

Kevin Fisher scattered four hits and Union Carbide scored one run in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth innings to capture a 4-1 victory over Coca Cola Saturday afternoon in a North State Little League baseball game.

Fisher struck out three and walked four en route to the victory. Union Carbide broke open a scoreless game with a run in the third when Billy Turcotte doubled with one out, went to third on a ground out by Fisher and then scored on a single by Tim West.

Coca Cola tied the game in the bottom of the inning when Michael Smith walked, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on Eddie White's single. It was the only run Coke would get. One inning later, Union Carbide took the lead for good.

With one gone in the fourth, Abram Lang singled, went to second on a wild pitch and to third on a passed ball. He scored on a ground out by Greg Davis and UC led, 2-1.

Union Carbide added single runs to its total in the fifth and sixth. In the sixth, Davis doubled, went to third on Paul Powers single and scored on a wild pitch.

Turcotte and West both had two hits for Union Carbide. White had two hits for Coca Cola.

Home Builders 7

Coca-Cola pushed a run over in the bottom of the eighth inning to score an 8-7 victory over Home Builders yesterday. The game had been halted back on June 5 after seven innings tied at 7-7.

The Builders had scored first, getting two runs in the third, and adding three more in the sixth. Coke rallied for three in the sixth, and after the Builders picked up two in the seventh, scored four more to tie it at 7-7.

Then, when the game was resumed Saturday, Coke held the Builders, retiring the side in the eighth with the go-ahead run on third.

Coke then scored the winning run in the bottom of the inning. With one down, Battle Emory singled and Mike Iaboni walked. Mike Smith singled to load them up, and Billy Michel singled, scoring Emory with the game-ender.

Traye Fuqua and Paul Hill each had two hits fort Coke, while John Ravaris had two for the Builders.

Aaction Movers 2
Planters Bank 0

Aaction Movers pushed over single runs in the third and fourth innings to gain a 2-0 victory over Planters Bank and hold onto first place in the Babe Ruth League standings Saturday.

Steve Wall, in hurling the shutout victory allowed Planters only three hits, two of them coming off the bat of Gary Scott.

Aaction got all it needed in the third. Billy Godley doubled and stole third. He scored when Jay Wynn reached on an error.

The other run came in the fourth. Wall singled, moved up on Tom Warren's sacrifice, and scored when Evan Hause reached on an error.

Pepsi-Cola 10
Wachovia Bank 9

Pepsi-Cola pushed over a run in the bottom of the seventh to capture a 10-9 Babe Ruth League victory over Wachovia Bank yesterday.

Wachovia had rallied for a pair in the top of the inning to tie it up at 9-9.

Wachovi scored first getting four runs in the top of the first. Pepsi came back with one in its half of the inning, only to see Wachovia score three more times in the top of the third. Pepsi then added two in the bottom of the frame, but still trailed 7-3.

Pepsi finally took the lead in the sixth, scoring six times for a 9-7 margin. Wachovia came back in the seventh to score twice, tieing it up.

Then, in the bottom of the seventh, Pepsi scored the winner. Tim Norris led off with a double and moved up when Pat Rand singled. Hunter Bost then singled in Norris to end the contest.

Rand and Bobby Buie led the Pepsi hitting with two, while Marvin Barrett, Mont Brown and Mike Kinley each had two for Wachovia.

Coca-Cola 2

Home Builders, which had lost in the conclusion on a suspended game at the start of Saturday's action, came back to get revenge over Coca-Cola in the Babe Ruth nightcap, taking a 7-2 win.

Home Builders scored once in the scond and added another run in the third. But it was the fifth that made the difference, as the Builders scored four times.

James Smith reached on a walk with one down, and David Jester also walked. John Ravaris reached on an error, loading the bases. A walk to Todd Martin brought in one run, and Jerry Mayo reached on an error, scoring Jester. Ravaris was out at home, however. Chris Evans walked and Nathan Green singled in both Martin and Mayo for a 6-2 lead.

The other two Home Builder runs came in the sixth.

Coke scored both of its runs in the top of the fifth.

Campbell One-Hits Pirates In 7-2 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

In their last three home games, the Pirate bats definitely have been off somewhere else. They haven't been at Harrington Field.

Friday night was no exception as the batting woes of the Pirates continued. They were held to only one hit by Campbell's Darin Cloninger, as the league-leading Camels rolled to a 7-2 victory.

Thus, in their last three home contests, a doubleheader against UNC-Wilmington last Saturday, and the game Friday night, the Pirates have collected only four hits.

"I don't know the problem," Overton said. "It's just one of those slumps that you get into now and then. We've just got to keep working and work our way out of it."

Campbell, meanwhile got only seven hits off two ECU hurlers, starter Charlie Smith and reliever Robbie Harper, but they managed to bunch them well. Five of them came in the big fourth inning when the Camels pushed over seven runs. It was in that inning that they chased Smith, after scoring six runs off him.

East Carolina was held fairly well in check, although the Pirates did score first to take a 1-0 lead. The other run came in the fifth after they fell behind 7-1.

East Carolina sent only 27 batters to the plate in the seven inning game, seven of them drawing walks and two getting sacrifices for just 18 official trips. Cloninger struck out nine along the way.

The lone hit he allowed came in the second inning and helped account for the first Pirate run.

After going down in order in the first, the Pirates got that brief lead. Smith led off with a walk and Jay Carraway came on to run for him. He was sacrificed up, and with two away, Pete Persico hit a grounder between first and second into right. There, rightfielder Tim Handy kicked the ball away, allowing Carraway to continue on home. Persico, who tried for second, was thrown out after Handy recovered the ball.

In the third, the Pirates had another chance as David Wells reached second on a third-strike passed ball. Camel catcher Wayne Dale couldn't find the ball in time, and Wells raced all the way to second on the play. Dale got his revenge, however, picking Wells off second just minutes later.

The only other Pirate threat came in the fifth, when the Bucs got their other run. Todd Hendley led off with a walk and Persico also drew one. Both moved up on a passed ball, and Mark Shank's sacrifice fly to left scored Hendley.

Campbell left a runner in scoring position in both the second and third innings, but it wasn't until the fourth that the Camels exploded for seven big runs to put the game on ice.

Dale led off the inning with a single, and Tim Montgomery came on as a courtesy runner. Terry Strickland walked and Kelly Hoffman, attempting to sacrifice, beat out the bunt, loading the bases with none away. Phil Hunt walked, forcing in Montgomery, and Kirk Pollard singled to center, driving in Strickland and Hoffman.

Then, after one out, Herb Williams walked to reload the bases. That chased Smith.

Montgomery, back up as a pinchhitter, grounded out, but scored Hunt. Bobby Spicer, the leading hitter in the league, followed that up with a three-run homer to left, ending the scoring in the inning.

Campbell put runners on second and third in the sixth, with just one out, but Harper pitched his way out of that jam.

In the seventh, however, he wasn't as lucky, giving up two unearned runs. Hoffman reached when he grounded back to Harper, who overthrew first, allowing Hoffman to take an extra base. Pollard singled him home, and Harper then walked Williams, Montgomery and Spicer to force in Pollard with the final Camel run.

The loss dropped the East Carolina record to 3-5, while Campbell climbs to 7-3.

East Carolina returns to action today, traveling to Chapel Hill to face the University of North Carolina in a doubleheader starting at 6 p.m.

NASCAR Year Reaches Halfway Point

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — The NASCAR Grand National season reaches the halfway point this weekend when the traveling stock car show comes to Michigan International Speedway for the Gabriel 400.

There have been some surprises during the first 15 races of the 31-race schedule — and there also has been plenty of the expected.

Among the surprises have been victories by rookie Morgan Shepherd and 1980's top rookie, Jody Ridley.

It's never surprising when Bobby Allison, a 43-year-old veteran from Hueytown, Ala., wins a race — he's taken three of them in 1981. But it is different to find him leading the point standings by nearly 200 points, since he's never won the NASCAR championship.

And defending national champion Dale Earnhardt, although finishing in the top five a half-dozen times, has yet to win a race this season.

Young Ricky Rudd currently is second in the standings, followed by Darrell Waltrip, who joined forces with car owner Junior Johnson this season and leads the circuit in victories with five, and Earnhardt.

The top rookie in the standings at the halfway mark is Shepherd, a veteran of long years in sportsman racing, who currently is 13th in points.

This has been the season of the great downsizing in NASCAR, with new regulations cutting the stock cars down in wheelbase by several important inches in order to reflect on the track what is happening to the American consumer.

Between the smaller wheelbase and a generally blocky design among the 1981 cars okayed for use, the NASCAR teams suddenly found themselves with dangerously unpredictable aerodynamics.

"I think that's mostly done now," noted Waltrip, who drives a Buick Regal.

"The design and size of the new cars were not ideal," he added. "The cars had their shortcoming and everyone protested their instability when we started running them back in February at Daytona.

"But, it was like raising a basket to 12 feet in basketball. It just took everyone a while to adjust to the new situation.

"Everyone — the crews and the drivers — had problems. The new cars were as fast as the older, bigger ones. Some were even faster.

"But no one was anxious to race them," he added. "They were all over the track."

Experimentation with the chassis, suspension systems, window glass, rear spoilers and everything else involved in aerodynamics came under close scrutiny during the months that followed Daytona.

"Now we're back where we want to be," Waltrip explained. "Most of us feel comfortable enough to race each other again."

Qualifying for today's $214,140 event was scheduled Saturday, with the 400-mile race slated to begin at 12:30 p.m. EDT.

Benny Parsons won the pole and the race here a year ago. His pole speed of 163.662 mph was just shy of the record of 164.073 on the two-mile oval, recorded by David Pearson in August of 1978.

Optimists 3

Carl Willie and Bruce Koonce each drove in three runs and the Jaycees scored four runs in the first and five in the fifth to easily defeat the Optimists, 12-3, Friday in a North State Little League baseball game.

The Optmists jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the top of the first only to have the Jaycees answer the challenge with four runs in the bottom of the inning and take a lead they never lost.

Brian Willie singled to open the inning and went to second when David Lee reached on an error. Carl Willie to load the bases before Brian Willie scored on a wild pitch. Michael Garris then walked to reload the bases.

Koonce then followed with a single to score Lee and Carl Willie and Jody Barnes then grounded out to score Garris and the Jaycees led, 4-2.

The Jaycees added two more runs to their lead in the second, sparked by Garris' RBI double. The Jaycees added another run in the fourth and five in the fifth, an inning highlighted by two-RBIs doubles by Lee and Carl Willie.

The Optimists final run of the game came in the fifth.

Carl Willie led the Jaycees with three hits in three at bats. Garris was two for two and Koonce and Lee were two for four for the winners.

The Optimists managed just three hits off Koonce, who struck out 10 and walked five in going the distance for the victory.

The other Little League game scheduled for Friday, Exchange vs. Pepsi-Cola was rained out, and was to have been made up Saturday afternoon.

Two Babe Ruth League games were also rained out, and have been rescheduled for Sunday afternoon, along with two Prep League games, rained out earlier in the season.

Weaver To Ignore Order; Wants Cooney Instead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mike Weaver said he will ignore the World Boxing Association's edict to defend his heavyweight title against James Tillis and hold out for what he termed a bigger money bout against undefeated Gerry Cooney.

The WBA said Weaver of Los Angeles has until Saturday to sign for a fight against Tillis and if he should refuse, it would auction the rights to such a fight to the highest bidder. If Weaver refuses that, he would be stripped of his WBA title.

"I am not fighting Tillis," said Weaver, who won the title in April 1980 with a 15th round knockout of John Tate in Knoxville, Tenn. He defended the crown with a 13th-round knockout of Gerrie Coetzee the following October in South Africa, the home nation of the challenger.

Weaver said Friday he had offers to box the undefeated Tillis, of Chicago, or Cooney, the top-ranked contender.

"I've signed to fight Cooney and I want to fight Cooney," said Weaver. "Cooney is the No. 1 contender and the rules of the WBA say the champion should defend against the No.1 challenger," he added.

Weaver readily admitted he would make more money fighting the well-known Cooney rather than Tillis.

"Sure, money has something to do with it," the champion said. "No television network will buy a Weaver-Tillis bout.

Angelo Dundee, who trained Muhammad Ali and now handles Sugar Ray Leonard, also is the man who works with Tillis.

He disputes the television statement by Weaver as "a bunch of hokum" and says the champion "has no right or reason to duck him and that's what he's trying to do."

To which Weaver answers, "Who is Tillis? He's beaten only one boxer in the top 10.

"I want to fight Cooney and then Larry Holmes. Those are the two fights I want. I don't like Holmes' mouth. I think he is a poor excuse as a fighter."

Holmes is the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion. Just last week, he defended his title with a third-round knockout of former champion Leon Spinks.

"I hope, pray and dream I can beat Cooney and Holmes," Weaver said. "Those are the only two fights I'm looking for now, although I might fight again."

Weaver, 29, has a record of 23-9 with 17 knockouts.

Legion Is Rained Out

Pitt County's American Legion baseball game at Wayne County Friday night was rained out, as was Snow Hill's contest at Rocky Mount.

Neither game has been rescheduled as yet.

Pitt was to have played Wayne County in a home contest Saturday night, and plays host to Edenton on Monday night.

Pacers Up For Sale

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indiana Pacers are for sale, but General Manager Bob Salyers says chances are slim that the National Basketball Association franchise will be moved to another city.

Salyers confirmed Friday that owner Sam Nassi is seeking a buyer for the team, but he said it would not be "a fire sale done out of financial necessity."

Salyers said operating losses the past year totaled about $1.2 million, and he acknowledged Nassi's frustration at a drop in average attendance to about 10,000 from 10,500 the year before.

But he told a news conference that Nassi's decision to sell the club is "simply a matter of an individual selling a going business. He does not have to sell the franchise to meet operating expenses.

"There are absolutely no plans to move the Indiana Pacers to another city at any point in time as long as Sam Nassi owns it."

"Furthermore," he continued, "Sam has assured me and asked me to assure the community that the Indiana Pacers will play in Indianapolis for the 1981-82 season, regardless of who owns the franchise.

"The possibility of the Pacers leaving Indianapolis at any time in the future is slim. The Pacers have eight years remaining on a 10-year lease with Market Square Arena, and the movement of the franchise from one city to another requires approval by three-fourths of the NBA club owners."

The news conference was in response to a story in the Indianapolis News in which Nassi was quoted as saying the Pacers are losing money and that "I don't think the community is concerned."

Nassi, a Beverly Hills, Calif., businessman, said he loves the sport "but I can't continue the losses," according to the News.

Salyers said Nassi's "comment on the lack of interest on the part of Indianapolis was meant only as an indication of his natural disappointment in last year's decline in attendance. Reasons for the decline are not the result of a lack of interest on the part of this city."

Nassi told the News he had not set a price. "I haven't come up with numbers," he said. "There's still a big interest in (owning) sports teams. I'm looking for someone to have sitting across the table and then hammer something out."

Nassi, placing his losses over the past two seasons "in excess of $3 million," said: "If the town is committed not to support the team, I don't know what it takes. The town has indicated it is not interested in having a major league ball club. Maybe it is time I pack my bags."

The News, quoting "an inside report," said the team can be purchased for $2 million down with an additional $3.5 million in interest paid over 10 years. The paper also said the buyer would have to assume some $6.5 million in longterm liabilities.

Waltrip Grabs Gabriel Pole

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip charged around the slippery Michigan International Speedway oval Saturday to grab the pole position for the Gabriel 400 NASCAR Grand National stock car race.

Waltrip, who now has driven his Buick Regal to four poles in 16 tries this season, turned a fast lap of 160.471 mph to gain the top spot for Sunday's 400-mile event.

It was the first pole here for the Franklin, Tenn., driver, who won a race at MIS in August of 1977.

"It didn't really feel that bad," said Waltrip, when first told his speed. "I thought it was going to be a little faster than that."

But, with the early afternoon sun heating up the asphalt track, the speeds got slower as the time trials continued, leaving the tall, trim Waltrip at the front of the 36-car field.

"I went relatively early — I guess I was 20th — and I noticed some change in the track from the morning practice session. Some of the guys who went later had more change to contend with," Waltrip added.

He was followed by Harry Gant's Pontiac Grand Prix at 159.915, Bobby Allison's Buick 158.603, Ron Bouchard's Buick 158.980 and defending pole and race winner Benny Parsons at 158.972 in a Ford Thunderbird.

Defending national champion Dale Earnhardt put his Grand Prix in the seventh spot at 158.923, while seven-time NAS-CAR champion Richard Petty was 12th in a Regal at 158.037.

Waltrip, who leads the circuit in victories with five and is coming off a triumph at Riverside, Calif., is hoping to put some pressure on Allison, the current point leader.

Allison leads by 193 points over Ricky Rudd, who qualified his Buick 15th at 157.951, and 232 points over Waltrip, who is third.

"If we don't do anything foolish, we can still win it," Waltrip explained.

"Really, the pole position is just a little psychological. After sitting on the pole and winning last week and sitting on the pole this week, it may get some guys to thinking. At least I hope so.

"But, I need it (this pole), too," he added with a laugh. "Boy, I need a good start here. I've just never done anything much here. Other then winning in 1977, this is the most exciting thing that's happened to me here.

"Actually, I like this track and I've run very well here, but I just have a hard time finishing. It seems like something always happened toward the end of the race."

Several of the drivers complained that cracks which have appeared on the track surface since last season added to the traction problem. But Waltrip said, "We usually run higher on the track in the race than we do in qualifying. Hopefully, we'll be above them (the cracks). But, it's not really that bad, anyway, as long as we know they're there.

The lineup for Sunday's Gabriel 400 NASCAR Grand National stock car race, with type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Darrell Waltrip, Buick Regal, 160.471
2. Joe Millikan, Buick Regal, 160.318

Thorpe Is Philosophical After A 73

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Jim Thorpe took his collapse philosophically.

"On a golf course like this you have to have a bad round," he said. "I still think I can win this thing."

Thorpe, who shot a 4-under-par 66 Thursday to lead the first round of the 81st U.S. Open Golf Championship, slipped to a 3-over 73 in Friday's second round.

He was disapointed, but not dejected. He was unhappy, but not disconsolate. He played the part of a guy who believed there was a tomorrow. His ego wasn't crushed.

"With so many great players out there, I would lie if I said I didn't feel the pressure," declared the first black since 1896 to lead the Open.

"I felt a little fidgety on the first hole, but by the seventh and eighth I felt settled down," said the man with the same name as one of the world's great all-time athletes.

"I feel pretty good about tomorrow (Saturday). I'm going to work on my 1-iron. I might go out there without a driver at all," Thorpe said.

"What hurt me today (Friday) was putting the 1-iron in the rough seven or times."

How many times did he use his driver over the short but tricky 6,544-yard Merion Golf Club course?

"Too much," he replied. "Out of six times I was on the fairway once."

Thorpe, who has earned more than $90,000 in his two stints on the PGA tour, had four bogeys and just one birdie in his 3-over-par, 37-36—73. He is 139 for 36 holes, just four strokes off the pace.

Thorpe, a former Morgan State running back from Roxboro, N.C., said the course played two or three shots harder Friday. He said the wind made it difficult to get the ball close to the greens.

How did he feel when he walked off the final green and didn't see his name on the leader board?

"I don't worry about the leader board," he said. "I know what I'm doing. I know come Sunday, if you're playing well enough, your name will be there."

Thorpe concluded: "It wasn't bad golf but poor management, bad thinking that made me shoot a 73....

"Under the circumstances I'm satisfied with the round. It could have been a shot better, but it could have been a shot or two worse with the number of greens I missed."

Kupchak Is On Market

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bullets' forward Mitch Kupchak, a free agent, has been offered a seven-year guaranteed contract for at least $850,000 per season by an unidentified NBA team, believed to be the Los Angeles Lakers, it was reported today.

The Washington Post quoted Kupchak as saying he doesn't want to leave Washington, but the Bullets' offer to him was so low. "If I signed it I'd be the lowest paid free agent in the league."

Kupchak would not confirm it was the Lakers who made him the offer of between $850,000 and $1 million a season.

The 6-foot-11 forward-center told the Post he agreed last week to sign a long-term contract with the Bullets if it was within $10,000 of what was offered him elsewhere.

"My parents and my agent throught I was crazy for offering to sign with the Bullets for less," Kupchak told the Post, "but I don't like this free-agent stuff. I don't blame (Bullets Owner) Abe (Pollin) or (General Manager) Bob (Ferry) or anyone. It's just economic, I guess.

"I don't understand why they don't have the money to pay me, but if they say they don't I believe them."

Kupchak said he probably will present an offer sheet to the Bullets next week. They will have 15 days to match the offer or lose him.

Grist Mill Is In Operation

STONY BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — Visitors to The Museums at Stony Brook can see an 18th-century grist mill in operation during tours to be conducted on Sundays through Oct. 26.

On the lower level they will see the gears turned by the 14-foot water wheel. On the second floor, grain is ground between the original 5-foot millstones, weighing nearly a ton each, which were imported from France in 1750. On the third floor observers will see the sifting and bagging.

Led by miller Art Mallamo, trained volunteers stationed at each level will demonstrate the milling process and answer visitors' questions.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations was organized under the leadership of John L. Lewis in 1935.

No Major Disruption Sighted If Controllers Strike

By The Associated Press

The wheels of industry probably won't drop off, but they may wobble a bit in the event of an air traffic controllers' strike, say the airlines that transport the nuts and bolts that make U.S. commerce run.

"We don't anticipate any major disruption in shipping patterns," said American Airlines Vice President for Freight George Shipman. "But we're warning our shippers that it's possible."

Along with passengers, the airlines and air freight companies transport medical supplies, newspapers and magazines, machine parts, clothing, electronic equipment and much of the nation's food.

Normal flight schedules would be cut by up to 70 percent under the Federal Aviation Administration's contingency plan if 17,000 air traffic controllers proceed with a strike threatened for Monday.

In preparation, the Civil Aeronautics Board has listed air cargo that would get first priority treatment during a strike, including hospital supplies, checks and vital parts and equipment for electrical power and communications systems.

U.S. Postal Service spokesman Ralph Stewart, in Washington, said the bulk of mail is sent from one address to another in the same city and would not be affected by a strike. Express Mail and most mail sent more than 300 miles is transported by air, he said.

"We have contracts with just about every commercial airline to transport mail," Stewart said. "But we are not prepared to say yet exactly what effect the strike could have on mail service."

But, said United Airlines spokesman Charles Novak, "Mail gets priority. We don't expect it to be too big a problem."

The airlines, meanwhile, were scrambling to fill in holes in their cargo schedules created by the FAA contigency plan. At Flying Tigers, for example, service would be halted under the plan to 10 of the 19 U.S. cities usually served by the air freight company.

Flying Tiger spokesman Joy Sabol said the company will use "high speed trucking" to serve the freight needs of those 10 cities.

"We already truck extensively," she added, "so it will not be difficult to expand our services."

Meanwhile, Flying Tigers was planning to use only its largest freighter, jumbo 747 jets which can carry up to 200,000 pounds of cargo, "to get the most out of each flight," she said.

Most of the air freighters were also planning to expand their trucking services, already in place to link some airports and deliver goods to and from airports.

"We expect our shippers to experience only marginal delays," said Shura Bary of Burling Northern Air freight. He said the freight operation has "contracted with a network of express truckers" to move cargo traveling less than 1,500 miles.

Under the FAA plan, most flights of more than 1,500 miles would not be cut, Bary said. "There are some reductions in those flights, but most will be operating. So the long-range market is in fairly good shape."

Others noted that air cargo is normally shipped on night flights. During a controllers' strike, air cargo would fly 24 hours a day. And the commercial airlines load cargo on both passenger flights, in the luggage hold, and on special freight aircraft.

United Airlines has embargoed bookings for "perishables" — like strawberries and newspapers — for the first 24 hours of a strike, anticipating confusion on the first day. Thereafter, said spokesman Charles Novak, "providing the strike's not too long, we feel we can handle it pretty well."

"We've been able to schedule enough cargo lifts to meet the full demand we usually have at this time of year," said American's Shipman. But, because delays may occur during the shift to the FAA's contingency schedule, he said, "we probably won't be able to guarantee our shippers delivery within 24 hours as we usually do.

"There may be a 48-hour delay. But most shippers of perishable foods can adjust for that, so there should be no major losses," he added.

Pan Am spokesman James Arey said the airline was asking domestic shippers to cover their bets by making double bookings for Monday.

Oak Ridge Plant Struck

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — Only security guards and supervisors were left on duty Saturday after 4,400 workers walked off their jobs in a strike that halted production of components for nuclear weapons at the Y-12 plant and the Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

The workers, members of the 19 unions represented by the Atomic Trades and Labor Council, struck Friday when their contract expired, according to officials of Union Carbide Corp., which operates the facilities under contract with the U.S. Department of Energy.

Union Carbide spokesman Harvey Cobert said guards, who belong to a different union, were on duty at the plant along with supervisory personnel. The plant normally operates on weekends but there was no production this weekend because of the strike, he said.

Bargaining for a new contract ended Friday afternoon, union officials said. Cobert said Saturday he knew of no more talks.

Cobert said a major issue in the contract dispute was the unions' demand for fixed, rather than rotating, shifts.

OPEC Report Spurs Oils

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Heating oil futures were boosted Friday as the prospects for an oil production cutback appeared to improve, analysts said.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, heating oil closed 0.10 cent to 1 cent higher, with the contract for delivery in July at 90.50 cents a gallon.

Analysts said there was buying in response to reports that officials of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting countries had made progress Thursday toward a long-term pricing strategy and could come to an agreement on a crude oil pro-duction cutback.

Precious metals were mixed as June-delivery gold rose to $459.40 a troy ounce on the Commodity Exchange Inc. in New York and silver settled unchanged at Thursday's close of $10 an ounce.

Howard Levine, analyst with ACLI International in White Plains, N.Y., said gold resisted the pressure of high interest rates and the associated strength in the U.S. dollar — which normally depress precious metals — as traders don't want to hold short contract po-sitions while there is the threat of further tension in Poland and the Mideast. Political tensions often boost the price of gold as investors seek a safe refuge for their currency.

Levine noted that platinum has showed the strongest resist-ance in the last several sessions and cited buying by Swiss dealers and Japanese interests.

Platinum on the New York Mercantile Exchange gained between $2.10 to $3.60 and closed at $445.50 an ounce for delivery in July.

Levine said copper rose despite the continuing negative impact of the European recession, seasonally low U.S. demand, high interest rates and selling influenced by the weakness in the British pound.

"Although business is slow, as is normally the case in the summer, and although Europe is still mired in recession, prices are so cheap that pepole are beginning to look beyond the summer months and slowed down European activity and beyond the current interest rates," he said.

Grain and soybean prices closed mixed in a lackluster session on the Chicago Board of Trade. Analysts said there was little interest from speculators or commercial interests.

Dear Daddy,

You know I love you very much, but one of the hardest things for me to do each year is to find you a Father's Day or Birthday present. This year I hate to apologize but I just couldn't find you anything that great.

Next year I won't have that problem because Brody's is opening a men's store in September. I hear they are going to carry everything at Brody's from suits to shoestrings. I'm so excited and I know next year I'll finally be able to get you that "extra special" present from Brody's at a great price.

Love always,
Your "little girl"

FREEZE SQUASH

Select young squash with small seeds and a tender rind, suggests Dr. Nadine Tope, extension food specialist, North Carolina State University.

Wash the squash and cut into ½ inch slices. Blanch the slices in boiling water for three minutes, then cool the squash in cold water and drain.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

When I was a little kid, a father was like the light in the refrigerator. Every house had one, but no one really knew what either of them did once the door was shut.

My dad left the house every morning and always seemed glad to see everyone at night.

He opened the jar of pickles when no one else could.

He was the only one in the house who wasn't afraid to go in the basement by himself.

He cut himself shaving, but no one kissed it or got excited about it.

It was understood whenever it rained, he got the car and brought it around to the door. When anyone was sick, he went out to get the prescription filled.

He kept busy enough. He set mousetraps. He cut back the roses so the thorns wouldn't clip you when you came to the front door. He oiled my skates and they went faster. When I got my bike, he ran alongside me for at least a thousand miles until I got the hang of it.

He signed all my report cards. He put me to bed early. He took a lot of pictures, but was never in them. He tightened up mother's sagging clothesline every week or so.

I was afraid of everyone else's father, but not my own. Once I made him tea. It was only sugar water, but he sat on a small chair and said it was delicious. He looked very uncomfortable.

Once I went fishing with him in a rowboat. I threw huge rocks in the water and he threatened to throw me overboard. I wasn't sure he wouldn't, so I looked him in the eye for a whole year. I finally decided he was bluffing and threw in one more. He was a bad poker player.

Whenever I played house, the mother doll had a lot to do. I never knew what to do with the daddy doll, so I had him say, "I'm going off to work now," and threw him under the bed.

When I was nine years old, my father didn't get up one morning and go to work. He went to the hospital and died the next day.

There were a lot of people in the house who brought all kinds of good food and cakes. We never had so much company before.

I went to my room and felt under the bed for the father doll. When I found him, I dusted him off and put him on my bed.

He never did anything. I didn't know his leaving would hurt so much.

I still didn't know why.

They were making pickles with the creative dill seed as early as the 17th Century.

Ramie Used In Textiles

Ramie is a fiber you may be seeing more of in today's placemats, curtains and other decorative textiles. It's not a new synthetic, but a natural fiber that's been used for centuries in other countries.

Ramie, produced from the stalk of a semi-tropical plant, is similar to linen. It can be blended with cotton or rayon to create fabrics with a semi-coarse texture.

According to Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist at North Carolina State University, ramie is strong but also brittle, so it will not withstand a lot of abrasion of rubbing.

However, it can be laundered with regular detergents, bleached or drycleaned.

Miss Tutterow warns that ramie, like all plant fibers, is highly flammable. She says ramie has poor resistance to acids, so vinegar or citric juice stains should be removed promptly.

June Is Dairy Month

According to Kathy Hooper, Home Economics Extension Intern, June is state and national Dairy month. During this month, tribute will be paid to the ever-so-important dairy industry and the dairy farm families in the surrounding areas. The theme chosen for this year is "The Magic of Milk."

Milk is considered to be nature's most nearly perfect food. It is highly recommended by nutritionists, and the following servings are suggested on a daily basis: Children should receive 3-4 cups of milk daily, 4 or more for teenagers, and 2 or more for adults. This milk can be consumed in its natural form by drinking it straight down or putting it on cereal. You might even want to have it in the form of ice cream, a float, milk shake, frappe (milk mixed with a fruit juice and then slightly frozen) or any other dish that you can think of in keeping cool with the hot weather steadily approaching.

Another point about milk that you may want to remember, in this fast paced society which contributes to our "fast" food needs, is that milk is considered the best "fast" food. It is simple to use, for it requires no preparation. It is as easy as going to the refrigerator and pouring a glass or purchasing it while on the go.

Milk is loaded with protein and calcium along with vitamins and minerals to give you the extra boost that you need during the day. So, next time you are looking for a source that is quick and will replenish your energy ... reach for milk. It's cool, fresh and by all means — it's a Natural!

Enjoy your milk and think of all the magic that you can create with its use.

The canvas, plastic and cord webbing on outdoor furniture can be kept clean with warm detergent or soap suds and brisk scrubbing. Always rinse well and wipe off excess water.

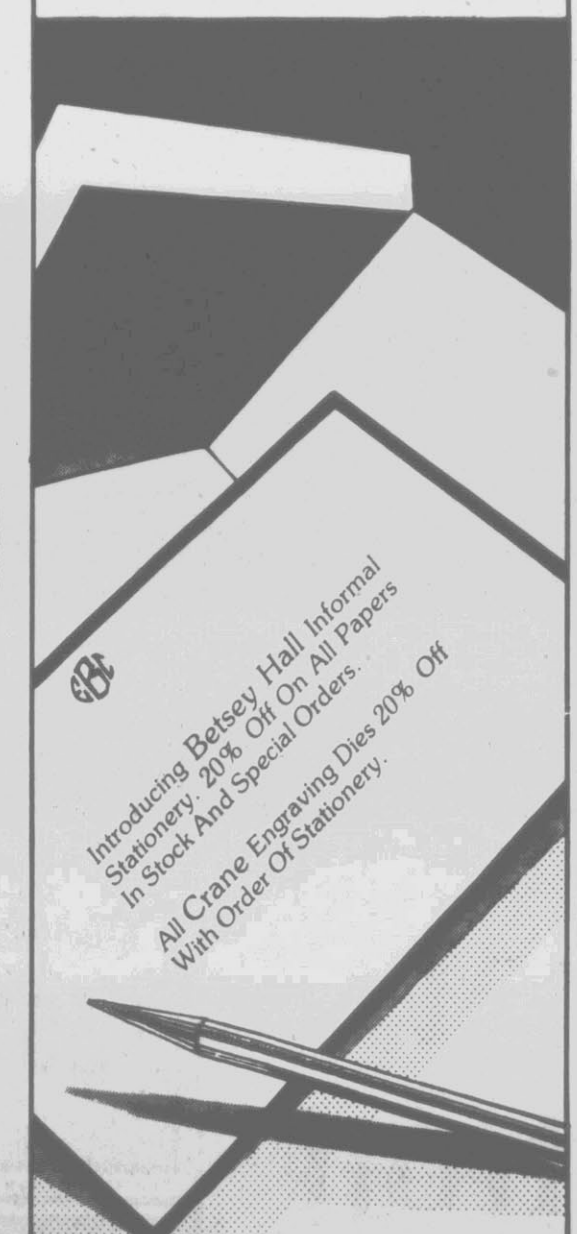

To re-season a cast iron utensil, coat with unsalted fat and heat in a slow oven for one or two hours.

Wedding Vows Are Said

Jennifer Lynn McRoy of Winterville and Tony Earl Evans of Greenville were united in marriage Saturday at three o'clock in the afternoon at Rose Hill Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. N.D. Beamon performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Ray McRoy of Winterville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Earl L. Evans of Greenville.

A program of nuptial wedding music was presented by Mrs. Alma Buck, organist, and Mrs. Angela Langley, soloist, sang "You Light Up My Life," "You Needed Me," and "The Wedding Prayer."

The church was decorated with a large basket of white gladioli, chrysanthemums, and white cushioned poms enhanced with two seven-branched candelabra with white candles, greenery and white ribbon bows.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of satin silkened organza and chantilly lace over peau de soie. The gown featured a fitted all-lace bodice, sheer yoke with schiffli embroiderey, stand up collar, and full sleeves with cuffs. The chantilly lace front of the A-line skirt of silk organza was edged with matching lace. Ruffles of chantilly lace flowed down the back of her chapel-length train and encircled the skirt which formed a lace front panel. She wore a two-tiered elbow-length mantilla edged with imported silk and was edged with Venise lace and attached to a Camelot cap accented with appliques and bridal pearls. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and baby's breath over lace loops and white ribbon streamers.

The bride's sister, Kay Evans of Greenville, was maid of honor. She wore a peach-colored gown with an empire waistline and fitted top. The gown was enhanced by a multicolored cape. She carried a hand bouquet of white cushioned mums, purple statice and peach ribbon streamers.

Connie Wade and Teresa DeLong, both of Winterville, served as bridesmaids. They wore dresses styled similarly to that of the maid of honor and carried bouquets of mixed white and peach cushioned mums, purple statice with peach ribbon streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a long gown of green qiana and featured a chiffon cape. The mother of the groom wore a long gown of blue qiana. Each wore a corsage of white carnations. Grandmothers of the bride and bridegroom were remembered with white carnation corsages.

The bridegroom's father, Earl Evans, served as best man. Ushers were Ricardio Cruz, the bride's uncle of Tarboro, and Wayne Garris of Ayden.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. The reception was given by Mrs. Mary Ann Browning, Mrs. Shirley Denton, Mrs. Theraldine Forbes, Mrs. Irene Gurganus, Mrs. Nancy Meltzer, Mrs. Debbie Mills, Mrs. Bettye Phillips, Mrs. Anne Powell, and Mrs. JoAnn Ward. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Evans, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom. Mrs. Shirley Denton played the piano. After the first slice of cake was cut by the couple, Mrs. Lois Wilson and Mrs. Evelyn Parker, the bride's aunt, cut the cake. Punch was poured by Mrs. Barbar Cruz, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. June Walston, aunt of the bridegroom. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McRoy.

An after-rehearsal pig picking was given by her parents of the bridegroom at their home Friday night.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of D.H. Conley High School. The bride is employed by Pitt Internal and Renal Medicine of Greenville. The bridegroom is employed by Vincent's TV of Winterville.

Prayer For The Aged

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing an article that I cut out of your column in the Portland Oregonian. I don't know how many years ago. Twenty, maybe. As you can see, it is yellowed with age and falling apart. I am 81 years old and live alone. My children live close by and are very good to me. How I wish all older people would try to follow what this article says. Please print it again. Thank you.

DAISY S., PORTLAND

DEAR DAISY: With pleasure:

PRAYER FOR THE AGED

"Lord, Thou knowest better than I know myself that I am growing older, and will some day be old.

"Keep me from getting talkative, and particularly from the fatal habit of thinking I must say something on every occasion.

"Release me from craving to try to straighten out everybody's affairs.

"Keep my mind free from the recital of endless details — give me wings to get to the point.

"I ask for grace enough to listen to the tales of others' pains. Help me to endure them with patience.

"But seal my lips on my own aches and pains — they are increasing and my love of rehearsing them is becoming sweeter as the years go by.

"Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionally it is possible that I may be mistaken.

"Keep me reasonably sweet; I do not want to be a saint — some of them are so hard to live with — but a sour old person is one of the crowning works of the devil.

"Make me thoughtful, but not moody; helpful, but not bossy. With my vast store of wisdom, it seems a pity not to use it all — but Thou knowest, Lord, that I want a few friends at the end."

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to this man for six years and I don't think he loves me anymore. I came home early from work one morning and I found my husband and this woman together. She was wearing my best nightgown. I lost my temper and tore into her, until the police came and broke it up. They took her away to the emergency hospital to repair some cuts and bruises I had given her, as she was in a pretty bad way.

The next day when I was straightening up the house I found all her underwear on top of the TV. I still have it. What should I do with her underwear?

BERNICE

DEAR BERNICE: Hang on to it. She may be back.

DEAR ABBY: The fact that too-tight jeans may cause male sterility is nothing new. I wrote this little jingle back in 1970s:

"If your jeans are too tight in the crotch
"Your parental potential is bad.
"Better let out your seams just a notch
"If you hope to be somebody's dad!"

BMS

DEAR BMS: Thanks for an appropriate item for Father's Day.

—Wadie Winslow

"I like the idea of retiring among friends. That's most important. But there are added attractions, like its location. It's close enough that you can walk to the post office, and stores, and other parts of town, like the parks.

"It's important that people not confuse The Albemarle with a nursing home. It's an entirely different approach. At The Albemarle, everybody has their own complete apartment and total independence. But they also have a health care facility available right there where they live.

Brighindi-Harris Vows Are Said Saturday

Nellie Rae Harris of Greenville and August Norman Joseph Brighindi of Winterville were united in marriage Saturday at 10 o'clock at Green Springs Park. The Rev. Leroy Woolard of Columbia conducted the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Johnson of Rocky Mount and the late H.B. Harris Jr. The bridegroom's parents are Elsie Brighindi of Winterville and Joseph Brighindi of Fairfield, Conn.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Benjamin Harris III of Winterville. She wore a Victorian-style blue floral cotton gown with a white background. The gown featured a floral lace Victorian neckline with stand-up collar, trimmed with white ribbon and a lace ruffle. A ruffle trimmed in matching lace fell from the V-neckline over the shoulders. The waistline, with a ribbon and lace trim, tied in the back. The gown also featured a ruffled bottom trimmed with white ribbon and lace. The long sleeves gathered at the wrist in a ruffle of the same lace trim. She wore a soft straw, wide-brim hat with a ruffled white cotton overlay, which gathered in the back with two flowers and two wide ruffled streamers. The bride also wore a cameo brooch belonging to her grandmother. She carried a nosegay of white daisies, pom-poms and baby's breath with white ribbon tied in love knots.

Susan Taylor of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a long strapless sundress of pastel pink with a matching jacket. She carried a bouquet of long-stemmed daisies with pink ribbons. She wore silk flowers in her hair.

Best man was Stan Peyalmai of Greenville.

Flower girl was Lori Nichole Harris of Winterville, niece of the bride. She wore a long yellow dress of dotted Swiss with long sleeves and a stand-up collar. The empire waist tied in the back. She carried a natural color hand basket covered with daisies, pom-poms and white ribbon streamers. She wore silk flowers in her hair. Jeremy Elliott, nephew of the bridegroom, from Naugatok, Conn., was ring bearer. He carried a white lace-covered pillow with white ribbon streamers and lilly of the valley.

The mother of the bride wore a long linen dress with a white top and green and white polka-dotted bottom. The mother of the bridegroom chose a light blue sleeveless accordian-pleated long dress. Each wore a corsage of white daisies and matching ribbons.

After the ceremony, the bridegroom's mother entertained at a barbeque luncheon at her home. The wedding cake, made by the bride's cousin, Mrs. Janice Hill, was on the bridal table, which was covered by a white tablecloth. Mr. and Mrs. D.R. House, aunt and uncle of the bride said the goodbyes. Later that night, the mother of the bridegroom entertained the out-of-state guests at her place of business, the Kozy Koral Kountry Lounge. The guests were entertained by the live band, Hipp-Billies.

The bride attended Stokes-Pactolus High School and Mitchell's Cosmotology School of Greenville. The bridegroom attended Newtown High School in Conn. and served in the U.S. Navy. He is currently employed by Service and Roofing of Greenville

On their wedding trip, the couple will visit Connecticut, where they will later make their home.

FRESH FRUIT

Most fresh fruits remain at their best for only a few days, but some, if stored properly, may last longer.

How you handle fresh fruit makes the difference. Before storing fruits, sort them and either use or discard damaged fruits immediately. Most fruits, except berries and cherries, should be washed and dried before storing, recommends Rachel Kinlaw, extension food specialist, North Carolina State University.

Engagement Announced

PATRICIA ANNE JOHNSON. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brant A. Johnson of Rt. 3, Benson, who announce her engagement to Charles Madison Lee Jr. of Greenville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Madison Lee Sr. of Winston-Salem. The wedding is planned for July 25.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American male is far more concerned with recording his favorite television program than are women viewers, says a major manufacturer of video equipment.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

Another phase in their lives having ended, members of this year's graduating class at Rose High School are ready to enter an important time period, one which may be crucial in determining their future as full-fledged responsible adults.

The majority of graduates will spend the next four years busily studying at college, while hopefully becoming more independent, mature and knowledgeable.

Alumni of Rose can be found in the next few years scattered across the hills and plains of North Carolina. Four or five will even have strayed out into other state such as Georgia (Georgia Tech), Indiana (Indiana University), New Jersey (Princeton University) and South Carolina (Citadel).

Among in-state colleges and universities familiar to the average North Carolinian, East Carolina will receive the largest number of Rose grads — approximately 60. Other schools include: Pitt Community College, 30; N. C. State, 19; UNC-CH, 15; N. C. A & T, nine; Meredith College, four; Duke University, UNC-Charlotte, UNC-Wilmington, three; Atlantic Christian College, Lees-McCrae, Winston-Salem State University, two; Wake Forest University, UNC-Greensboro, first.

Several of the college-bound students have received financial aid through scholarships offered by industries, foundations, clubs and colleges.

A total of 22 graduates will be joining the military. Eight will serve in ther Air Force, two in the Navy and 12 in the Army.

Remaining graduates not fitting in the college or military categories will probably choose to earn a living by working or they may work for a few years and then continue their education.

To all Rose graduates, congratulations and good luck in future endeavors.

NAME OMITTED

Ronald Stephenson, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer in the recent wedding of Becky Marie Allen and Obie Devon Godley. His name was omitted in the wedding write-up.

Belhaven Sets Events For July 4 Celebration

BELHAVEN — For the first time in years, there will be no night street dancing in Belhaven's July 4th celebration. City fathers ruled earlier the after-dark bash had become the one unmanagable, sometimes rowdy element of the day-long celebration. All other events traditional to Belhaven's well known festive observance of America's national independence day, however, will be featured in the Beaufort County harbor town.

The public is invited to all the events, and except where noted, there is no admission charged.

In conjunction with the holiday, Belhaven's Community Center will be open all day on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 3-5, to give local people and visitors an opportunity to play games, swim and picnic.

Two events are scheduled for Thursday, July 3. A youth dance will be held at the Community Center at 6:30 p.m., with an admission charge of 50 cents. At 9 p.m. the traditional Twilight Hour will take place at EEii's little KORNERs of the World.

Early Saturday morning, the Spirit of America Marathon Run will get under way at 5:45 a.m. The run will begin at the junction of Highways 264 and N.C. 32, some seven miles east of Washington for a run distance of about 25 miles into Belhaven. Successful runners are due to arrive in Belhaven in time for the 11 a.m. parade.

All day events Saturday include tours of Belhaven's Memorial Museum and an exhibition of arts and crafts at EEii's little KORNERs of the World.

The schedule of Independence Day events is:

— 11 a.m., parade, Main Street, featuring the 2nd Marine Division Wing Band, Cherry Point, the Blackbeard cast from Bath, antique cars and street rods, horses, and a number of floats.

— 12 noon, fish fry, high school grounds, sponsored by Sudan Temple Turtle Patrol.

— 1 p.m., ski show, on Pantego Creek. The Tarheel Footers will present a ski show demonstrating water skills such as barefoot skiing, kite flying, and trick skiing.

— 2 p.m., band concert to be performed by the Washington Community Band on the high school grounds.

— 2:30 p.m., ball game, high school ball field.

— 5 p.m., crab derby, with large Atlantic Blue Crabs competing for top honors, to be held at the Blue Channel Corporation lot fish house on the water.

— 6 p.m., the Little Miss contest, for young ladies ages 3-6.

— 7 p.m., Miss Independence competition, for girls 16-21. Entry fee for sponsor of candidates is $15 to help defray expenses. No talent required.

— 9:30 p.m., the annual display of fire works set off over Pungo Creek, with reflections showing the dark water.

The primary Independence event to be celebrated on Sunday, July 5 is the Freedom Cup Regatta Sailboat Race to be held during the afternoon, with award presentation to be made at 7 p.m. at Jordan's Marina.

All week, from June 29 through July 5, a carnival will be operating at the American Legion Building on Highway 264.

Marine Band To Play Today

MARINES FROM CHERRY POINT . . . are the featured attraction in today's Sunday in the Park concert beginning at 7 p.m. on the Sunday in the Park site east of Reade Street between Third and Fourth Streets. The Second Marine Aircraft Wing Band of the Marine Corps Air Station will present a program of varied music for the outdoor audience. Winner of the Navy's Meritorious Unit Commendation, the band has performed extensively in 28 states and in several foreign countries. (Photo Courtesy USMC).

The 2d Marine Aircraft Wing Band is the star attraction for the third of the free, City of Greenville funded Sunday in the Park series being presented at 7 p.m. today.

The concert will be in the Sunday in the Park grassy slope adjoining Reade Street between Third and Fourth Streets. The audience is reminded to bring along creature comfort items for more relaxed listening.

The 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing Band, organized in the Pacific Theater of Operations in 1943, has been home based at Cherry Point since 1946.

The band is composed of several distinct units — a field band, a concert band, stage band, rock group and a combo. With this diversity, the band is able to offer a wide range of music to please nearly all musical tastes.

A 1973 recipient of the Navy's Meritorious Unit Commendation, the 2d Marine Aircraft Wing Band has gained audience favor in the U.S. and abroad. It has performedin 28 states, in Canada, Mexico, Scotland, Germany, Denmark, England and the Caribbean.

Captain Harold E. Whitney, Jr. is the band officer. Gunnery Sergeant B. G. Swindle is the enlisted band leader, and Sergeant S. Joel Staffort is the drum major.

During recruit training, Whitney, of Norwich, New York, auditioned and was accepted into the Marine Corps music program. He was first assigned to the Marine Corps Air Station Band, Miami, Florida, as an instrumentalist in the trombone section. His duty assignments have included Parris Island, South Carolina, Camp Pendleton, California, Iwakuni, Japan, Viet Nam and Hawaii. In 1973 he received a commission and in 1979 assumed the post of band officer with the 2d Marine Aircraft Wing Band.

The band enlisted leader, Sergeant Swingle, is from Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. He enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1965 and after recruit training was assigned to the Depot Band at Parris Island. Tours as an instrumentalist have included service in Vietnam, San Diego, California, and Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. He assumed his present band leader position at Cherry Point in 1977.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Historic Beaufort is the focal point today on "Hospitality House," the weekly Sunday personality and talk show hosted by Kay Currie and aired from noon to 1 p.m. Sundays over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington.

Several of the segments were taped on location in the colorful waterfront town. One features Dave Yelton during the Wachovia Cup Races.

Other segments preview the upcoming (the last weekend in June) annual invasion of Beaufort by pirates and the annual wooden boat races on the same weekend.

Grayden Paul, Beaufort's Town Crier and founder of the Pirate's Invasion event, will be Kay's studio guest.

Paul will also discuss the book he and his wife Mary have authored, entitled "Carteret County, North Carolina — Folklore, Fact and Fiction."

Another guest, poet Carol Bessent Hayman of Cape Carteret, will read her poem of tribute to her home town area, "Beaufort by the Sea."

Another event of the coming weekend to be discussed is the 25th annual tour of old and historic homes in Beaufort.

An added feature on today's show is to be the screening of the Bob Dodson's film, "Sinbad the Pirate."

Six From Greenville In This Year's Cast Of Blackbeard Drama

SWASHBUCKLING ACTION . . . is one of the ingredients of the Bath outdoor drama, "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag." The drama, based on the life of the infamous pirate, opens for the summer season Thursday, June 25, with performnces on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evening at 8:45 through August 15. The shipboard fight scene shown here is from the 1980 production. Six of this year's cast members are from Greenville. (Reflector photo by Jerry Raynor)

A Review

'Clash Of The Titans' A Comic Brew Of Mixed-Up Mythology

This one, "Clash of the Titans," now showing at Plitt No. 3, you've got to see to believe. Don't go with preconceived notions you may have picked up from Herodotus, Bulfinch or Edith Hamilton about gods, goddesses and mortals. It doesn't work that way.

It's a potluck serving of revised mythology flavored by assorted influences thrown into the story hopper. Bits of "Macbeth," snippets of Superman, shades of Bibical epics are blended into a hodgepodge that begins and ends in a comic state of confused fantasy.

"Clash of the Titans" undoubtedly boasts the biggest star cast ever assigned to a high-tone B movie. Lawrence Olivier as old papa Zeus gives the distinct impression that he loves strutting about in a lordly manner, blithely ignoring the eloquent pleas of number one mama goddess, Hera, and other handmaidens — among them Athena, Aphrodite and Thetis.

ERA advocates will surely bristle at the manner in which Zeus displays his overweening chauvinism, lounging on his marble throne while the women mill about on their feet, not once being offered a seat.

In those remote days, old Zeus up on Mount Olympus was the final authority on fates, mortal and immortal. The old boy and his women were capable of playing some pretty nasty things on their hapless charges below. The big bone of contention in the Olympian paradise is Hera. She harps without ceasing about the favoritism her husband shows to Perseus, his favorite son, and the ill treatment he accords her favorite son by turning him into a loathsome outcast with horns and a long leathery tale living in an infested swamp.

Perseus is a half-breed, son of Zeus and the lovely mortal virgin, Danae, who conceived when visited by Zeus in the guise of a shower of gold. Naturally, Danae's daddy, Acrisius, king of Argos, was outraged that his daughter had given birth without the benefit of matrimony, so he puts daughter and infant son into a casket and has them cast into the sea.

He shouldn't have done that, of course. Zeus, angry as blazes, refuses to listen to his womenfolk who argue that Acrisius had always before been loyal to Zeus, but all to no avail. Zeus summons Poseidon and has him unleash a fury of storm that wipes Argos off the map, sparing only Danae and baby Perseus.

Like a mythological soap-opera, the plot staggers on. Switch to Perseus the adult, played by Harry Hamlin, handsome as Achilles, endowed with the brawn of Hercules, and given dialogue as wooden as the Trojan horse.

It really doesn't matter that the filmmakers take a dozen or more detours, bypassing the accepted story of Perseus' life. (After all, even ancient chroniclers have left us a couple of differing versions.)

So, in "Clash of the Titans," in lieu of a magic shield donated by Athena, Perseus instead discovers a magic sword, a helmet that makes him invisible, and the life protecting shield, all appearing mysteriously at the feet of statues after Perseus has been magically transported from his pastoral childhood retreat to the sinful, urban bedlam of Joppa. Rather than sandals for flying like Superman, courtesy of Hermes, Perseus finds and lassoes Pegasus, the last of an endangered mythological creater, the flying horse — another major variation from the standard tale where Pegasus sprang full grown from blood dripped on the ground from the severed head of Medusa.

Anyway, back to the action. Perseus' bronco-busting in the sky of the winged white stallion is a marvel of special effects, a campy spoof of Mobil's flying horse sign or a variation on the Lone Ranger as ghost rider in the sky.

Another interesting switch is that of having a lovely blonde lass, Judi Bowker, cast in the role of the Andromena, the Ethiopian princess of fabled beauty. Andromena's mama, Cassiopeia, like Acrisius, makes a fatal error when she declares her daughter more beautiful than even the goddesses. This doesn't sit well with the offended goddesses and leads to a string of recriminations and problems for the whole swarm of earthlings.

Perseus, understandably, becomes instantly and incurably smitten by Andromena's beauty, and steps forth boldly to go through hades or high water to conquer all for love and beauty.

Perseus, like all good heroes should, dashes about slaying an astonishing assortment of evil creatures, freeing his beloved damsel from curses and perils that put to shame those of Pauline.

He never would have made it, however, except for the real hero of the piece, a robot owl, all golden scales and twirping peeps that only Perseus can decipher. This "Star Wars" creature comes to the aid of Perseus more times than can be counted.

A few final observations — "Clash of the Titans" very likely supplants "Godzilla" for its showcase of rubber and plaster monsters. Every extra (and most principals) are coated in identical waffle-hued flesh tones; and veteran performers Burgess Meredith, Sian Phillps, Maggie Smith, Claire Bloom, Ursula Andress and Flora Robson actually manage to make some of this nonsense seem almost plausible.

If you're a B movie nut or if you're keen on artificial movie monsters, or curious to see what a Greek mythology cowboy film is like, go to see "Clash of the Titans." It does clash with accepted Greek mythology, but it's all great fun.

The Guy Lipscomb Show

South Carolina watercolorist Guy Lipscomb is an artist who has known success for several decades. Based on the exhibit of about two dozen of his recent work now at the Greenville Museum of Art, he nonetheless remains a young at heart artist who is deep into experimenting with the elusive watercolor medium.

Within the framework of this show, Lipscomb offers viewers works that span the spectrum of styles from one piece that has the dreamy, poetic quality of an Oriental scroll, through traditional landscape paintings, on to portraits of people, and works that in their structuring are essentially abstract fields of color. One piece, "Urban Cowboy" is unabashedly pop art oriented. "Cowboy" sports a shocking inset of mirrored sunglasses.

Many of these paintings reveal the observant eye of a dedicated lover of nature. Several pieces focus on fish and fishing, including a richly detailed painting of a boy fishing. In this work, the vibrant colors of water and forest surrounding the central figure of boy seated on an upturned boat conveys a distinct kinship to a stained glass window.

Another fish theme picture depicts a fish within a stream contained within the formal structure of an opened sardine tin.

"Dory Be," based on a dock scene with recognizable objects — fish crates, boats, rope, people, comes close to pure abstraction. It encompasses an exuberant splurge of color that works well to coordinate the clutter of the painting.

Lipscomb's freer, more loosely composed landscapes are the most rewarding pieces in this exhibit. In this category are paintings such as that of a beach house enclosed in pale wash steaked stretches of sand and sky, and one of a cobbled courtyard leading to steps and an arched doorway. Another, an industrial scene, has precisely drawn buildings which provides an armature on which he has placed a field of serene peach, tan and gray washes of color.

This is Lipscomb's first exhibition at the Greenville Art Center. Earlier, he gave a workshop in watercolor here. He is an artist who confesses to a lifetime love affair with museum ideals, and because of this, has served numerous museum efforts. He has been chairman of the board of the Columbia Museum of Art and the South Carolina Museum Commission and is a member of the Trustee Committee of the American Association of Museums.

Lipscomb is a consistent exhibitor, and has had 21 one-man shows within the past five years in museums and galleries in the Southeastern states. His work is included in many public and corporate collections in the U.S. and abroad.

BRICK LOOK

DALTON, Ga. (AP) — A newly developed artificial turf that resembles bricks is being introduced for home use.

"For pools, patios or walkways, the brick look is going to be very popular," said Arthur Lauman, president of Instant Turf. "Turf makes a pool or patio area safer and more comfortable because it only looks like brick."

Research Into Slavery Scheduled

Learning about the daily lives of some of the earliest slaves in North Carolina is the assignment for participants in next month's Stagville Historical Archaeology Field School.

Somerset Place, a state historic site near Creswell in Washington County and the 19th century home of the Josiah Collins family, will be the scene for the six-week school. A week-long lecture series at Durham's Stagville Plantation will precede the five-week excavation at Somerset.

Students will learn methods, techniques and theory of field archaeology with experienced professional archaeologists in the Stagville sessions before moving to Somerset Place to become familiar with the culture and artifacts of the 18th and 19th centuries.

About 100 slaves arrived at Somerset Place from Africa in 1786. By 1850 Somerset had almost 300 slaves, becoming one of the largest coastal plantations in North Carolina.

Students attending the field school will develop skills a certified archaeologist uses including photography, surveying, labratory skills, data recording and excavation techniques, according to School Director Thomas C. Funk, staff archaeologist with the Historic Sites Section of the Department of Cultural Resources, co-sponsor of the school.

Other sponsors are Durham Technical Institute, Duke University and the institute of Applied History.

The field school is open to anyone without regard to age or experience, Funk said. Registration costs $5.00 through Durham Technical Institute. Students wishing to receive credit at their college or university should make necessary arrangements with their advisers.

Food and housing costs will be arranged on the basis of enrollment. The week-long lecture series at Stagville is open to anyone without attendance at the Somerset excavation sessions, Funk said. However, for those expecting to go on to Somerset, the lecture series is required.

Historic Sites staff members conducting the school in addition to Funk are Terry H. Erlandson, William B. Herring and Thomas Hartzell. Participating faculty members will include Peter H. Wood and Edgar T. Thompson from Duke University; James Deetz of the University of California at Berkeley; Gordon Watts from the division of Archives and History; David Hazzard of the Virginia Research Center for Archaeology; Beth Ann Bower of the Museum of Afro-American History and John Fugelso, coordinator of historic preservation technology, Durham Technical Institute.

Anyone interested in the field school should contact Fugelso at Durham Technical Institute, 1637 Lawson St., Durham, 22703.

ECU Graduate Designs Dance Statue

DURHAM — When modern dance pioneer Martha Graham receives the first annual Samuel H. Scripps American Dance Festival Award in July, she will be presented with a piece of sculpture designed by a young North Carolina sculptor, Dean Leary.

Manteo native Leary is the son of an artist, a painter, and is a graduate of East Carolina University, where he earned a master of fine arts degree. Examples of his work are included in outdoor statuary work on the grounds at ECU, and at the Greenville Museum of Art. Several of his pieces are also in the permanent collection of the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh, and in private and corporate collections.

Now a resident of Statesville and a fulltime sculptor, Leary formerly taught at UNC-Charlotte and at Mitchell Community College, Statesville. He was commissioned by the American Dance Festival to design the award, which will be given each year to honor lifetime achievement in modern dance choreography. The sculpture accompanies a $25,000 annual gift made possible by Samuel H. Scripps.

The sculpture designed by Leary is an untitled abstract piece executed in blue fiberglass, suggestive of the human form and of dance movement. Mounted on a marble base, it stands about 18 inches high.

Leary notes that he is strongly influenced by the marine forms of the coastal areas aound his home town of Manteo. He was chosen from among several North Carolina sculptors suggested by local arts organizations for the project. The selection was made by John Spencer, chairman of the Duke University art department, and Evan Turner, director of the Ackland Art Museum at UNC-Chapel Hill.

SCULPTOR DEAN LEARY . . . a native of Manteo and a graduate of East Carolina University, has designed and executed the piece of sculpture to be given to dancer Martha Graham along with a $25,000 dance award in a ceremony to be held in Durham in July. FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By WILLIE MAE GIBBS

It's that season of the year when every woman feels the need to be in good shape. For those who are finding it difficult to achieve this goal, the library offers two new books which can help.

"Arnold's Bodyshaping for Women," a complete program of fitness and beauty, is a serious program for women who are tired of frivolous exercises that produce no measurable results. In this book, Arnold Schwarzenegger demonstrates how you can actually reshape and change your body at home or in the gym with weights and calisthenic routines.

Of the many ways to exercise your body, this progressive exercise program is suggested as the fastest, most efficient, and best way to shape up, trim down, feel great and look terrific. This unique program is broken down into four series of exercises including at-home exercises, gymwork, supersets (an advanced, very strenuous program for women who are really serious about exercise), and exercises for any time, anyplace.

Other features of this book include Arnold's personal tips on better health and nutrition and two common sense diets for losing weight during resistance training. Illustrated with hundreds of photographs of Arnold and top women bodyshapers in action, this is the most comprehensive and complete, authoritative, and easy-to-follow book on shaping the real physical you.

"Aerobic Dancing" by Jacki Sorensen is the only definitive and complete guide to a new fitness program that is showing thousands how to feel great, look great, and enjoy exercise the way you've never enjoyed it before. This figure shaping program is the result of combining aerobics with vigorous dance movements.

If you can't face jogging, the monotony of pushups, and the aches that often accompany other exercises, then aerobic dancing may be the answer for you. Mrs. Sorensen's book containing numerous illustrations and detailed instructions on preparatory exercises, the basic forms of aerobic dancing, and the concluding exercises, gives you everything you need to learn the basics of aerobic dancing and move on to shape your own individualized program.

Aerobic dancing is sweeping the country as a fitness sport that you play for fun, without worrying about how you look as you dance. Through the program you learn a variety of energetic, easy-to-remember dances — from Disco to Charleston — that affect every part of your body, and can serve as your basic fitness conditioner if yu follow the guidelines established in the book.

AN OVERLOOK VIEW . . . of Flatty Creek, a short tributary of Goose Creek, is one of many fine vistas to be glimpsed in Goose Creek State Park. In season, pale pink wild roses or brilliant goldenrod splash the green of the forested shores.

FRONTIER LUXURY . . . A dozen camp sites in a quiet wooded area of Goose Creek Park, while without the amenities of a Hilton, do offer a setting that frontiersmen would have called luxurious. The family group enjoying a meal of fish and crab caught near the camp site are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kline of Nescopeck, Pennsylvania, and their two children, Benjamin, 3, and Becky, 1.

Goose Creek State Park On The Pamlico River

Goose Creek State Park is a quiet place, where rural summer silence reigns even when a goodly number of visitors are scattered about over the 1,300 land acres and the water areas within the park's confines.

Everywhere, long streamers of gray Spanish Moss hang from tree limbs, whispering in barely perceptible rustles when brushed by breezes. Lizards skitter across accumulated layers of forest floor leaves, an occasional black snake glides across a shade dappled trail, and doves call softly to each other in sad, gentle song. Dragonflies spread their transparent wings as they alight on twigs, then take flight again in chase of their favorite quarry, the mosquito.

The park is an ideal place to observe nature. Bay trees, sweet gum, hickory, pin oak, cypress, pine and other trees native to Eastern North Carolina grow within the park. There's a good sampling of wild grape vines, Virginia creeper, wild blueberry, myrtle and swamp briars. Flowers in the wild state even include yellow flowered cactus in sandier areas.

The Park's History

Twelve years ago, in the spring of 1969, at the request of interested citizens and groups, the Division of State Parks conducted preliminary field trips along the Pamlico River looking at and investigating potential state park sites in the area.

In June 1970, it was decided the Goose Creek area possessed the physical qualifications desired for a state park site. On September 11, 1970 the Board of Conservation and Development resolved to conduct a detailed investigation of the site.

Weyerhaeuser Company, owner of most property within the potential park site, in the summer of 1971 requested a more extensive study of the Pamlico region to seek alternative sites, since the Goose Creek area was one of the company's more valuable banks of timberland which could be cut in wet seasons when logging operations could not be carried out in other lands.

Additional investigations of both sides of the Pamlico River, over a period of several months, confirmed the Goose Creek area as the prime one for a state park. After two years, an agreement was reached. Negotiations were completed on September 25, 1974, with the Conservation and Development Board purchasing a total of 1,208.60 acres from Weyerhaeuser for $1,115,000. The purchase price represented a reduction of $50,000 due to Weyerhaeuser's retaining mineral rights.

Earlier History

Little is known about the early history of the Goose Creek area. What is known, however, is sufficient to challenge the imagination about life in the area in earlier days. Prior to the coming of Europeans, the area was occupied by Tuscarora Indians. An Indian village was located between Goose Creek and the town of Bath to the east. It's likely that the earth contains many artifacts awaiting archeological explorers.

Known factual history includes exploration by Captain Thomas Blount. On May 21, 1701 he landed near Ragged Point on the present park site. And the most famous explorer and chronicler of North Carolina in early days, John Lawson, may have owned land around Goose Creek. Old records in Bath indicate that Lawson owned large parcels of land in this region in the early 1700's.

Of interest too is the fact that several old home sites and surrounding fields have been discovered, though now the forest has now reclaimed these places that once were homes to early farmer-fishermen.

Within the park site there's an old abandoned railroad bed, the remains of a logging operation conducted by Eureka Logging Company in the early 1900's. A couple of small family cemeteries are located within the park

Master Plan

Two primary objectives are foremost in the overall master plan for future development of Goose Creek State Park. One is preserving and protecting the park's natural character. The second objective is that of providing varied types of recreation for the public — both in the enjoyment of nature in all seasons, and seasonal activities such as swimming, picnicking and camping.

Clifton Carroll, a Park Ranger at Goose Creek State Park, notes that use of the park is "far greater during summer months than in other months of the year. Last June we had over 800 using the park, this jumped to more than 2,000 in July and dropped to 1,500 in August."

Carroll said "the swimming area, one of the most popular attractions in the park, is open with lifegurds on duty, from June 1 through Labor Day. Use of our camp sites are increasing too, and we now have a dozen such sites available."

A boat-water activity at Dinah's Landing is to be expanded, and there are also plans to add limited small new parking areas.

Summer Staff

In addition to Carroll, six other trained park personnel are assigned to serve the public during the summer season. Lauris Joyner is the park superintendent; Dennis Helms is the second Park Ranger; and Paul Stevens is the Park Attendant.

Susan Corda, a graduate of East Carolina University now doing graduate work at N.C. State University, is the season naturalist; and the two lifeguards are Josephine Whitley and Kimberly McRoy.

"The only facility for which there is a charge is for camping," Joyner said. "It's $2 per night for up to four people and 50 cents for each additional person." During summer months, it is advisable to make reservations in advance — this can be done by calling the park headquarters number, 923-2191 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. A central water supply and central toilets serves the camp area.

Joyner informs that during June, July and August, park hours are from eight in the morning until nine at night (except for overnight campers). During September and October hours are 8 to 8; in November 8 to 7; in December and January 8 to 6. Then in March, the hours are lengthened again, from 8 to 7, and in April and May from 8 to 8.

Other than the nuisance of picking up a few red bugs and an occasional mosquito bite, the only serpent in this Eastern Carolina Eden is wood ticks during the spring and summer months. Joyner said that "this year, beginning in October, we are getting a tick control operation going. Hopefully this will be a big help."

In the meantime, visitors to Goose Creek Park, as well as to any wooded area in Eastern North Carolina, are well advised to take precautions to guard against ticks. One of the most effective actions is to have a friend or family member look you over in places you cannot see well yourself, and to take a shower under a strong spray after any outdoor outing.

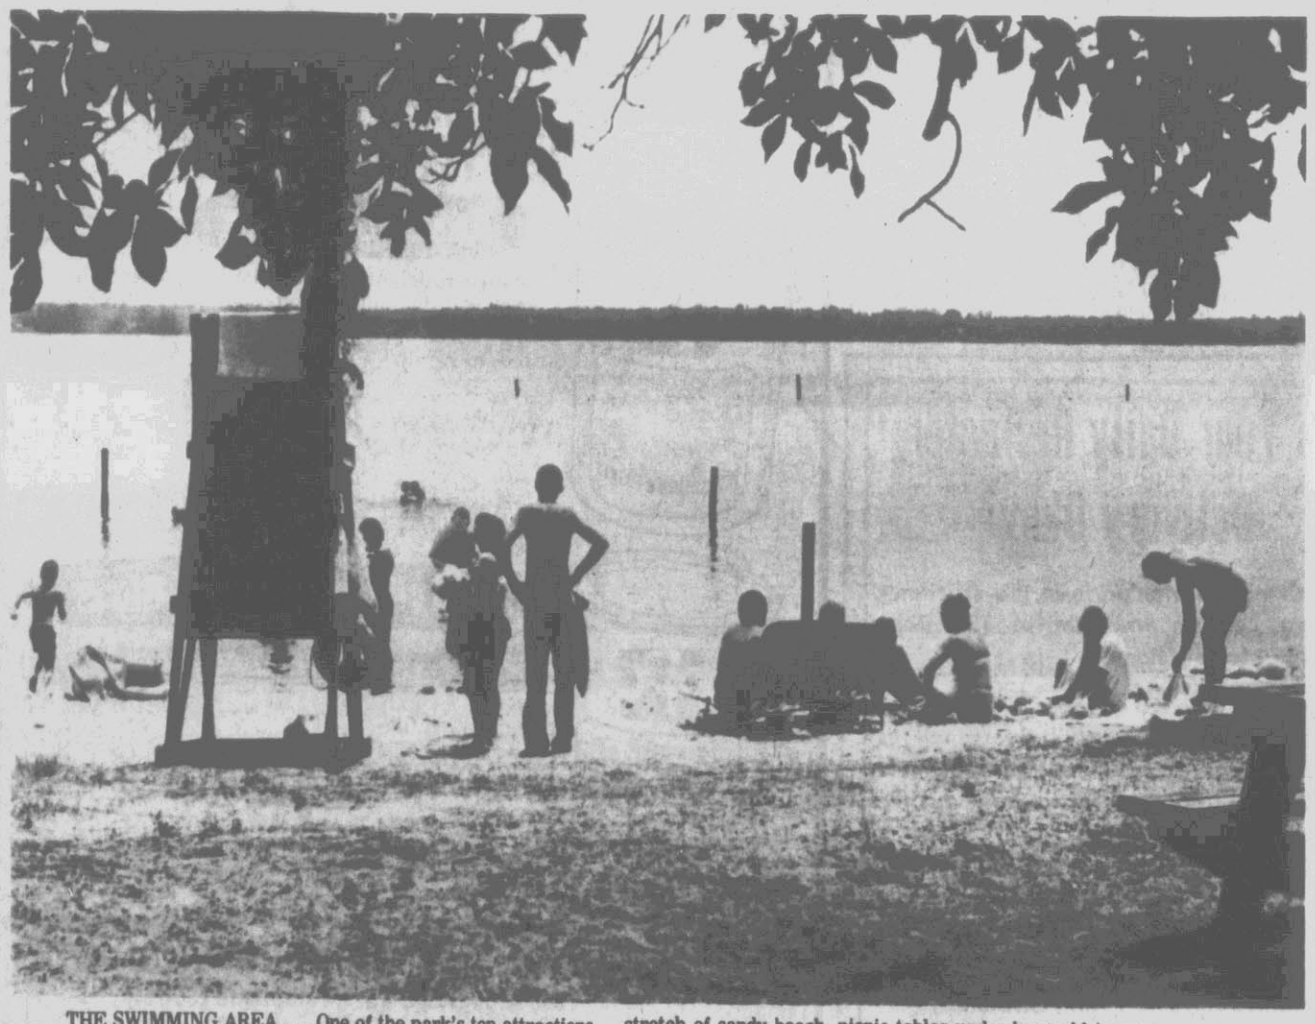

How To Get There

Goose Creek Park is located on State Road 1334, about ten miles east of Washington. Take U.S. 264 east, and watch for the single brown and white sign just before the turn-off on the right side of the road onto SR 1334. The turn-off is a short distance before the point where N.C. 92 to Bath junctions with U.S. 264.

The park office is located in a blue two story house on the right side of the road near the entry road to the park. Information on the park, including an excellent one-page mimeographed map showing location of facilities is available here. Also, camping permits must be purchased at the park office prior to taking in any type of camper.

New York Exhibition Highlights Need For Better Coordination

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

America's bathrooms and bedrooms are going to be better coordinated if the manufacturers and retailers at the National Bath, Bed & Linen Show in New York have anything to do with it.

The industry's new product introductions here recently featured many coordinated groups of bed and bath linens and related accessories. Industry executives said that these offerings reflected a growing sophistication among American consumers of home furnishings.

Judging from the variety of offerings, the winds of change which have affected all areas of home furnishings are blowing up a storm in the domestics field — once among the stodgiest product classifications in home goods.

After all, it was not very long ago that redecorating the bathroom meant buying a new solid-color shower curtain, something consumers did very infrequently, according to Harold Kaplan, president of the Bath, Bed & Linen Association.

"We had customers who wrote to us to complain that their shower curtain had faded after 25 years of wear," wryly noted Kaplan, who is also president of Jakson & Jakson International.

"Today, we know people are buying shower curtains and other bath products more often. As a result of the more attractive goods available consumers are inspired to change their rooms," added the executive.

To keep up their sales, manufacturers and retailers have come up with a steady stream of new coordinated products, many of which also have the added appeal of a designer's name or which tie in with some already-accepted product or individual, such as Sesame Street or Walt Disney.

Multiproduct groups typically include a mix of items for the bedroom, the bath and dressing room, such as shower curtains, bathmats and curtains, towels and toilet accessories, sheets and comforters and pillows.

According to one retailer, the new emphasis on full lines of products bearing the same or similar designs is in direct response to consumer wishes. "Consumers want to shop the way they live; they don't want to make a career out of buying, either," said Jack Crookston, an executive with the Associated Merchandising Corp. department store chain.

His point was backed up by others in the field. They noted that the public has gotten used to the wealth of choice and to precoordinated domestics that take the guess-work and worry out of making decorating choices.

By coordinated products, industry designers do not mean merely a slavish copying of a single pattern on all sorts of products. Instead, it's a subtle match in which families of colors and prints can be used in a variety of ways.

"Each item has got to stand on its own, as well as part of a collection," explained Harold Kaplan.

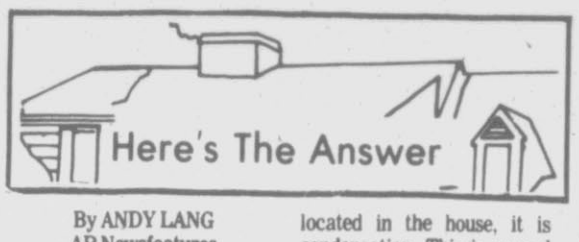

Communications may be responsible for the noticeable rapidity with which new style trends are appearing in the domestics field.

At Saturday Knight Ltd., a shower curtain and towel manufacturer, for example, a shower curtain made out of camouflage cloth was on display. A khaki "garrison belt" attached to the shower curtain had pockets for towels. Consumers who follow fashion will realize that camouflage cloth, as worn by soldiers, has recently made an appearance on ready-to-wear sales floors as a sportswear fad.

A company executive explained that fashion and other outside influences are making themselves felt in the domestics world.

This point was borne out by the variety of events, individuals and brand names outside home furnishings which inspired collections of sheets, towels and bedroom furnishings. The list includes such disparate influences as fashion designer names, Walt Disney characters, Sesame Street characters, Hallmark greeting cards, Princess Grace of Monaco and Barbara Cartland (the romantic novelist).

"Fantasy is the thing," explained Ray Faragher, owner of Saturday Knight Ltd. "I can go into the bathroom and be Lawrence of Arabia or an opera singer.

Q. — After my toilet is flushed, water keeps running into the bowl, not too much, but enough to be wasting money. Besides, it is annoying to the ear. I took the porcelain top off the tank in back of the bowl. There is a wire guide that places the flush ball over the opening at the bottom of the tank. It does not appear to be set evenly and water is seeping under it. How do I properly align the ball over the opening? I do not want to touch anything until I know what I am doing?

A. — Turn off the shutoff valve, usually under the tank at the left side. To do so, turn it clockwise. If there is no valve, which is sometimes the case in older houses, and you don't know where it is in the basement or utility room, hold up the horizontal rod in the tank with a piece of string attached to something higher than the tank. Or use any method you want to keep that rod upward so that water does not flow into the tank while you are working there.

When the noise of running water has stopped, loosen the screw that keeps the guide tightly attached to the vertical overflow tube. Rub steel wool around the inside of the valve seat at the bottom to clean off any rust or grit. Place the flush ball on the valve seat so that no water runs into the bowl. When it is set perfectly, tighten the guide screw.

Flush the toilet a few times to be sure no water is dripping into the bowl. In some cases, you may have to loosen and then retighten the screw until the ball sets properly. When it does and everything is working, turn on the water and replace the tank top. Be very careful when putting back the tank top. If it falls on the hard bathroom floor, it most certainly will break.

Q. — The cold water pipes in our house run across the basement floor. At certain times during the year, there is a constant dripping from these pipes which forms puddles on the basement floor. What can we do to stop this dripping?

A. — When water forms on the outside of cold water pipes, wherever they may be located in the house, it is condensation. This is caused by warm, moist air hitting the cool metal surfaces of the pipes. The best way to prevent this condensation, other than getting rid of the moist air, is by wrapping the pipes with coverings made especially for this purpose.

Hardware stores, lumber yards and home centers are among the establishments selling these coverings. They vary in price, depending on what they are made of and how easy they are to apply. Some are wound around the pipes and some are merely placed on the pipes and sealed at the joints.

Jackson Grant To Be Released

CHICAGO (AP) — A U.S. Education Department spokesman says Secretary T.H. Bell plans to release an $825,000 grant that has been withheld for more than three months from the Rev. Jesse Jackson's minority-education program.

Spokesman Louie Mathis said Thursday that Push for Excellence Inc. will get the money because it was included in a budget approved by Congress. Education spokesmen refused to say why Bell had withheld the money.

There have been several critical reports on the program by the American Institutes of Research, which asserted that Jackson hadn't found effective ways to promote academic achievement among minority-group students. Jackson was unavailable for comment.

SERVICE RESTORED

CRYSTAL RIVER, Fla. (AP) — The Crystal River nuclear power plant is back in business after lightning hit a switchyard and knocked the plant out of operation.

A spokesman for Florida Power Corp. said the plant resumed operation Thursday and was generating enough electricity to help ease the threat of power shortages in South Florida's scorching heat.

Lightning knocked the 825-megawatt nuclear unit out of service Wednesday. The plant was not damaged, officials said.

Your first swimming pool is likely to intimidate you and, when anything goes wrong, you probably will call for professional help. As the pool ages and you learn about the cost of maintenance, you become more venturesome and begin to take care of it yourself.

When a pool needs painting, whether it is new or old, you may or may not undertake the job. If you decide to handle it, here are some tips that will help you to get good results. These hints are divided into three categories — those for new or old concrete, metal or plaster-lined pools. The lists were compiled with the assistance of Jack De Vido of Hercules, Inc.

NEW CONCRETE POOLS

—Let them age several weeks before painting.

—Fill the pool with water during this time so that the water-soluble salts held in the concrete will leach out. That eliminates "flowering" under the paint.

—Wash off any grease or oil spots with a strong alkaline cleanser such as trisodium phosphate.

—Etch it, especially if the new concrete has a slick surface or is "dusting." Acid etching with a dilute solution of muriatic acid and water both cleans the concrete and prepares the surface to hold paint. Be sure to follow the safety instructions on the muriatic acid label.

REPAINTING CONCRETE POOLS

—Scrape it. Loose, peeling and blistered paint must be completely scraped or brushed off with a wire brush.

—Scrub it. Use hot water and a common alkaline cleanser until it's as clean as you can get it.

—Sandblast, if necessary. But only if the paint is peeling, in which case all of it must be removed.

—Scrub it, allow it to dry, then paint.

—Use a prime coat on any bare spots or overall if recommended by the paint manufacturer.

NEW METAL POOLS

—Sandblast before priming if it's steel.

—Apply a prime coat right away to prevent rusting. (In fact, your contractor should do this during the installation of the pool.)

—Remove any rust, anywhere, before you begin to paint.

—If your pool isn't steel, no need to sandblast. A solvent cleaning and water washing will suffice before the prime and finish coat.

—Apply that prime coat immediately after the pool is washed.

REPAINTING METAL POOLS

—Remove loose paint and rust with a wire brush.

—Sandblast, but only if extensive peeling or corrosion has set in.

PLASTER-LINED POOLS

—Paint them while relatively new. This prevents roughness and the dirt that can accumulate on the uncoated plaster after a few years.

—Otherwise, you're home free. This type of pool is easy to maintain and often needs no paint for several years.

As for paint, ask your paint dealer or contractor for one that's based on chlorinated rubber. In addition to being easy to apply, De Vido says, this kind of paint has broad compatibility with other paints you may have used, so the new finish will be less likely to "lift," blister or peel from the previous coat. And be sure you follow the manufacturer's label instructions.

Parents Form Self-Help Unit

By MARIE C. COLVIN

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — The early years of accused presidential assassin John Hinckley Jr. — another child of privilege somehow gone wrong — have become fair game for armchair analysts.

His parents say their 25-year-old son was "wayward" and an "aimless wanderer." But they told reporters after their son was charged with wounding President Reagan and three others March 30, "We love our son and will stand by him."

"Shame, guilt, and blame is what they're feeling," says Dave York, head of Tough Love.

"We get the same story over and over and over. I really feel awful for his parents. Why do you need a kid who's just using you? Tell him not to come home until you make something of yourself. And I would say that's a loving approach."

He says this generation of parents were told all they had to do was love their children, be open, communicative and reasonable and they would end up with open, communicative and reasonable children.

"Baloney. We ended up with closed, non-communicative, violent kids, and we feel it is our fault."

Dave York and his wife, Phyllis, founded Tough Love, a three-year-old movement that is spreading from the suburbs of southern New Jersey and Pennsylvania across the nation. Parents who once recited Dr. Benjamin Spock to each other are now forming groups to share their common sorrow, pain, helplessness and, finally, anger.

The groups are a parent version of "I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it anymore." In child-centered America, they are controversial.

Tough Love says get tough with your kids. Kids are not equal. No guilt and don't back down. And, sometimes, close the door on a child if he won't obey the rules.

"We don't say this is how to raise your kid," York says. "We deal with parents who have kids in trouble. They've been through every possible therapy, their marriage is crumbling because of arguments over how to handle the kid, and other kids are feeling neglected. Tough Love is a last resort."

York and his wife know. Their three daughters had the same problems — drinking, failing in school, taking drugs.

"We doubted ourselves. We'd think, I guess we're bringing our work home. Every day, we went from being competent therapists to an inadequate mom and dad."

York says part of the problem is "buying all those messages about what parents are supposed to be."

"We went the therapy route and it was always us, what was wrong with our relationship," he says. "Our kids were acting like little brats right there in the session and the psychiatrist would say 'Leave them alone. They're only kids.'

"And we had been doing the same dumb stuff," he says of his and his wife's pre-Tough Love therapy. "It's like when you become a parent you become stupid."

The Yorks told friends they were desperate. The friends ordered the Yorks to let them take over. York says he and his wife agreed they wouldn't say anything to the children without checking with the friends first.

The problems cleared up. York says his three daughters are now managing on their own and support their parents' crusade — and Tough Love was founded. Today, they openly disdain their former profession.

"We live in a psychology-oriented culture, where anything someone does is supposed to be a symptom of something else," says York. "Tough Love says baloney. This is the problem, let's clean that up."

"'I want my kid to stop smoking marijuana' is not an appropriate goal, because then you're into cops and robbers until you go nuts," he says. "We ask 'What behaviors do you want?'"

Tough Love organizes a support system among parents in a community.

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Sally Struthers, now on Broadway in a new comedy called "Wally's Cafe," once did a CBS show from Leningrad. In Russia, they say, sometimes even innocent table talk is secretly taped.

This may be why, as she sat down for lunch here, she leaned over and murmured into a small vase of flowers: "Hello, I love Russia. They are wonderful 'pipples' and they are wonderful country."

But she has that kind of mind. She is OK. Eight years as Archie Bunker's daughter on the CBS series "All in the Family" hasn't done her lasting harm. Why, she only mentioned the show once during her lunch interview.

And that only was when she was asked if she's found the transition from tube acting to stage emoting difficult. The short, pretty, blond-haired native of Portland, Ore., shakes her head.

"I hate to take away any glory that people might unjustly want to shower and flower on me," she says, "but eight years of 'All in the Family' was doing a Broadway play every week.

"If I can't do this now, in my sleep, I'm in a lot of trouble.'"

Serious about her craft, the lady isn't the terminally serious kind of actress one often finds in Hollywood, the kind torn between doing Lady Macbeth or a walk-on in "B.J. and the Bear."

Miss Struthers marches to a different drummer.

She likes to give the unsuspecting of Tinseltown what you'd call a mental hotfoot, specifically as one-third of an all-girl singing group apparently based on Gladys Knight and the Pips.

Only they call themselves Gladys Day and the Dips. Their preferred arias are "Billy Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home" and "Bye, Bye Blackbird." They like to perform in piano bars. They always sing off-key. Deliberately.

The first, in 1972, was in a dinner theater 60 miles from Chicago, in a two-character tableau, "A Girl Could Get Lucky." She says it played Broadway in 1956 but withdrew after three nights.

In "Cafe," she shares the bill with two stage veterans, James Coco and Rita Moreno, who play a married couple. This couple runs a roadside eatery in the California desert.

It became TV's most improbable hit, acclaimed for its social import and consequence.

'Hill Street Blues' Is Hamel's 'Pearl'

Veronica Hamel, who plays Joyce Davenport on NBC-TV's "Hill Street Blues," is a model-turned-actress who calmly rejected a heavenly offer five years ago to jiggle and wiggle as one of the original "Charlie's Angels." And she hasn't regretted the decision.

"It wasn't right for me," said the dark-haired Hamel, referring to the role eventually taken by Jaclyn Smith. "I didn't feel like I could grow from that part. I knew it would be a succesful show, but at the time, I didn't want to be committed for five years. I have no regrets.

"I never wanted to do a series, but when I read this ('Hill Street'), I thought it was so much better than even most film scripts I've seen.

"I'm glad I waited. You can open up a lot of oysters and never find a pearl. Well, I found one — 'Hill Street.'"

The Philadelphia-born Hamel is actively involved in researching her role of the coolly intelligent public defender.

"I think Joyce Davenport is a bright lady and a very compassionate human being; otherwise, she wouldn't be doing this sort of thing. She's got to be perceptive. Her clients see her as part of the system, so she has to show some guts. There's also some money in her background."

Hamel began to research her role when the program was tabbed to be a series in the spring of 1980.

"I interviewed eight female public defenders. I was amazed at how many young, attractive, smart female lawyers and judges there are. They are actors, just like we are, with different personalities and temperaments."

Hamel comes from a small "working class" family, and has one sister. While she was employed as a secretary and attending Temple University, she followed a friend's suggestion and posed for a few photos that were submitted for use on an ironing board bag. When her photos were selected, she began a modeling career that led to a 10-year association with the prestigious Ford Model Agency.

"I should never have told anyone about that ironing bag story," she says, laughing, "I'll never live it down."

She eventually made the transition to talking in TV commercials, but feeling a need to expand her capabilities, she invested in acting courses.

VERONICA HAMEL portrays Joyce Davenport, a public defender in "Hill Street Blues" airing Tuesdays (9-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Horse Race Is Grueling

Intense emotions and desperate determination are a greater goal than prize money when Gene Hackman, Candice Bergen and James Coburn star in "Bite the Bullet," a western drama centering on a grueling cross-country horse race. The film, nominated for two Academy Awards, is returning as the ABC Sunday Night Movie, June 21 (9 p.m.).

Also featured in the star-studded cast are Ben Johnson, Jan-Michael Vincent and Ian Bannen.

Set at the turn of the century, the plot is pegged on a factually-based "Endurance Race," a sort of Indianapolis Speedway on horseback sponsored by a Southwestern newspaper chain. Participating riders are required to traverse a grueling 700-mile course through desert, prairie and canyon country.

Those vying for the pre-inflation grand prize of $2,000 include Sam Clayton (Hackman), a former Rough Rider concerned less with victory than with the race's inhumane brutalization of horses and Luke Matthews (Coburn), a wry, gritty gambler. There's also Carbor (Vincent), a young hothead fanatically obsessed with winning. Mister (Johnson), an aging self-described "saddle tramp" whose modest goal is to get his picture in the papers, and Norfolk (Bannon), a tweed-suited British dude. The sole female contestant is Miss Jones (Bergen), an ex-hooker using the race as a cover to spring her jailbird husband from a chain gang.

The carnival atmosphere prior to the race as contestants and spectators converge en masse to feed the coffers of bookmakers and brothels, launches the picture with rambunctious, gin-soaked humor. Director Producer Richard Brooks' gift for dialogue is in dazzling display, producing a non-stop barrage of terrific wisecracks and putdowns, all tied together with the expert timing.

Once the race gets underway, the scene darkens with the ruthless whipping and spiking of bone-tired horses by contestants determined to win at all costs.

The acting in the film is superb, with Hackman demonstrating more facets of his seemingly limitless range; Coburn swiping scenes through adroit comic delivery; Vincent effortlessly handling the tricky transitions, his role demands, and Johnson scoring memorably with lyrical monologue that represents Brooks-the-screenwriter at his finest.

Star Going Dutch

"I think I got the job because I look Irish," says Garry Walberg, referring to his "Quincy" character, Lt. Frank Monahan. "Actually, I am from Dutch stock and my ancestors were seafaring men."

CANDICE BERGEN is a hard-riding woman who can compete with any man in a rugged 700-mile race through the mountains and deserts of the American West in "Bite the Bullet," airing Sunday, June 21 (9-11:45 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

The Rook Look at Garment Care

DICKY ROOK

JUNE BRIDES

Your wedding gown can be a lasting memento of a meaningful day if it is properly cared for after your wedding. Dirt and stains become permanent with age and their prompt removal is important. Some stains, such as champagne, will set quickly and leave a brown spot with age. Fabrics such as lace and satin are delicate and can deteriorate with age if they are not stored clean.

When storing your wedding gown, remove dress shields if you've used them. In time, they will break down and stain the gown. Store your gown in a dry place, as moisture can ruin it.

We can package your gown in a Bridal Chest to protect it from harmful elements such as light. Store your gown in a dark place. We also suggest that, once your gown is returned to you in its protective packaging, don't open it. You can destroy some of the protection if you open the packaging. A CLEANER WORLD has the knowledge and facilities to clean and package your wedding gown so that it will look as beautiful as the day you wore it.

Urich, Raffin Star

Robert Urich and Deborah Raffin have been cast in key roles in "Hell and High Water," a TV movie that will be filmed entirely on and near Oregon's Rogue River.

Michelle Will Tell

Q: I would appreciate your giving me some background information about Daniel J. Travanti, who plays Capt. Furillos on "Hill Street Blues." M. HARRIS, HENDERSONVILLE, N.C.

A: Travanti is a reformed alcoholic who is truly an inspiration to anyone who's ever been 'down-and-out' — he's been there, too! "I used to be an angry young man. I had to change or die because I was drinking too much. I had to quit, and I did, thank God!" he says. "Now I'm having the time of my life. I love everybody, and saying that makes me blush, but it feels very comfortable. In fact, life seems too good to be true." Travanti, a native of Kenosha, Wis., spends most of his free time helping other alcoholics.

Q: Is James Best, the actor who plays Sheriff Roscoe Coltrane on "The Dukes of Hazzard," dead? My mother-in law says he is. She also says this is why we're only seeing re-runs now? K. BRADBURN, SHELBY, N.C.

A: James Best is alive, extremely healthy and keeping busy on his ranch in Bishop, Calif. while he awaits the start of production on another season of 'Dukes.' CBS is showing re-runs of the popular series simply because there are no new ones!

Q: I recognized Johnny Whittaker and Jodie Foster in the recent movie titled "Tom Sawyer" but who played Huckleberry Finn? B. THAGGARD, LUMBERTON, N.C.

A: A talented teenager named Jeff East was cast as Huckleberry Finn in the 1973 release. He's since been in great demand by producers of ABC's "Afterschool Specials" and 'Weekend Specials' series as well as NBC 'Special Treat' presentations. Don't be surprised to see Jeff on a primetime show within the next year or two.

Q: I'd like to know more about Redd Foxx. Where was he born? What is his wife's name? How old is he? P.B., SIMS, N.C.

A: Foxx was born Jon Elroy Sanford, Dec. 9, 1922, in St. Louis, Mo. He's enjoyed considerable success as an entertainer, but has really 'bombed' when it comes to love — both marriages landed in the divorce courts!

Q: I'm a Todd Bridges fan and would like to know something about him. J. FERGUSON, DUNN, N.C.

A: Todd, the personable co-star of "Diff'rent Strokes," celebrated his 16th birthday last month. He's been a 'pro' since he was six, made numerous commercials, guested on several other shows, and was a 'regular' on "Fish." His hobbies include fishing, football, horseback riding and snake hunting. Todd lives with his parents, both involved in show business, too — dad's a Hollywood agent and his mom is an actress.

Burton Gained New Sensitivity

LeVar Burton was propelled to stardom as Kunta Kinte, the African youth kidnapped into slavery in the mini-series "Roots." Since then he has portrayed his share of streetwise kids fighting their way up, through, or out of the ghetto.

"Donald Lang is different," claims Burton, regarding the character he portrays in "Dummy," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, June 23 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV. "His ghetto environment is the same, but that's where any similarities end."

The script, based on Ernest Tidyman's book, recounts the true story of a deaf black youth, incapable of speech, who was brought to trial for the murder of a prostitute in Chicago.

"I was intrigued by the uniqueness of Donald Lang's plight," continues Burton, "but the obstacles were overwhelming. As an actor, feeling and instinct are most important tools. However, verbal expression, the dialogue, is provided as the means to convey those abstracts. With Donald, there were no words, only the abstracts. He had never even been taught the sign language for the deaf. Everything was internalized.

"Sure, I was able to obtain the available information. I spoke with friends who had known him, and met people with similar handicaps. I spent time in the home of Carol McEvoy, who was doing the television deaf news broadcasts on KTLA in Los Angeles — her parents are deaf — and it gave me first-hand contact with these handicapped people. Deaf people in this country are invisible. They're discriminated against; people are not sensitive to their needs.

"Through study, I was able to create a history for Donald Lang. What I couldn't do though, after having met with Donald, was to penetrate beyond this man's eyes to know the reality. No one could, not really.

"During the filming, I was forced to rely almost completely on the visual and sensual to convey what Donald was unable to communicate verbally. It was frustrating, often painful, but as trite as it may sound, the experience was incredibly rewarding. I emerged with heightened sensitivity, a greater understanding for the problems encountered by the handicapped.

The story, I think, speaks clearly. I hope people will listen."

Ross Stars In 'Mahogany'

Diana Ross portrays an ambitious young designer determined to fight her way to the top of the glamorous but dog-eat-dog fashion world, in "Mahogany," to be rebroadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, June 24 (9-11 p.m.).

Billy Dee Williams is cast as the politician who loves her but rejects her dream, and Jean-Pierre is seen as the millionaire who offers her career his backing, but at a personal price. Anthony Perkins portrays the photographer who discovers her, then seeks to destory her.

Tracy Chambers (Ross), an attractive young secretary in a Chicago department store, has a dream of someday becoming a successful fashion designer. Her boyfriend (Williams), an aspiring neighborhood politician, loves her but discourages her aspirations, leading to bitter quarrels. Tracy's boss (Foch) also disapproves, especially of Tracy's moonlighting at fashion school and at home working on her designs. Eventually she fires her.

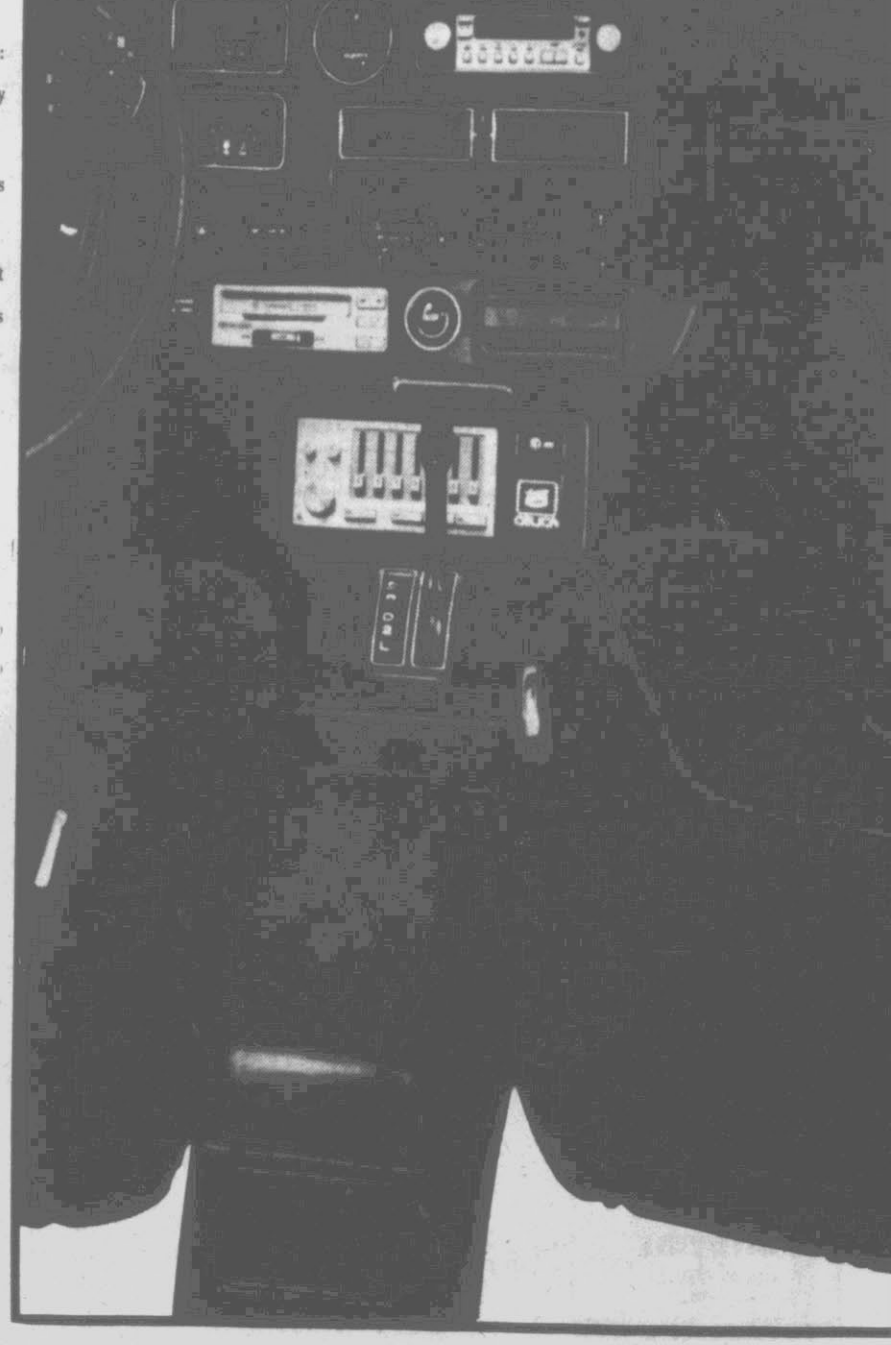

Just when things look their bleakest, a photographer (Perkins), who had met her at the store and mistaken her for a model, asks her to come to Rome to pose for some layouts.

This seems to be the chance that Tracy has been waiting for — an introduction to the world of international high fashion. But things turn out less than perfect:

the neurotic photographer remakes her completely, even giving her a new name, Mahogany. Tracy finds it a constant battle to break out from under his sick, possessive domination and assert her independence. When her former boyfriend visits, after losing his election, she must face his disapproval and rejection of her new life. Meanwhile, a wealthy patron (Aumont) offers her a chance at her dream, but at an obvious price.

Ross designed her own clothing for the movie and also sings the title song.

Forrest Respects Cats

At 6'3" and over 200 pounds, Steve Forrest is no small man. Nevertheless, he was dwarfed by his co-stars in "Maneaters Are Loose!," The CBS Late Night Movie, airing Wednesday, June 24 (11:30 p.m.). They were two giant Siberian tigers, who add a goodly portion of menace to the suspense film.

The tigers weighed in at 600 pounds each and stretched some 10 feet from nose to tail. And they were an awesome sight to Forrest and other cast members as they prowled about the location site in a re-mote section of Soledad Canyon in Southern California's sprawling Antelope Valley. They were, of course, watched very carefully by a corps of trainers.

Forrest has a healthy respect for jungle cats that dates back to 1957 when he was severely mauled by a leopard while making a movie, "The Living Idol," in Mexico. He noted that the leopard weighed about 80 pounds, no comparison with the tigers used in 'Maneaters.' "If one of those babies were to take a bite out of you, it would be all over," he said.

In the film, growing terror stalks a small American national forest community which is menaced by two huge tigers.

Forrest, Tom Skerritt, G.D. Spradling and Harry Morgan star in a variety of roles that depict a range of human problems and troubled conditions being played out against the unfolding horror of the prowling maneaters. Others featured are Frank Marty, Josh Bryant, Priscilla Morrill and Jennifer Shaw.

The intricate working out of the lives of the Midland County citizens is complicated when the broke and depressed animal owner-trainer, Claude Davin, is forced to abandon his tigers — Mohan and Ranee — to fend for themselves in the national forest area near the Midland County town of Whitford. Davin can't find work to provide for himself or his beloved tigers and in desperation, turns them loose and subsequently commits suicide.

At first, the tigers are confused after having lived all their lives in captivity, but quickly begin to adapt to their new surroundings.

Almost Perfect Fit

Long-time movie and TV actor Robert Alda, now a 'regular' on NBC-TV's "Days of Our Lives," recently needed a suit from the 1940s. He told a wardrobe person to try the costume department at Warner Brothers, and they found a suit Alda had worn in the 1945 film, "The Man I Love." The only adjustment was to let out the waist two inches!

Can They Quit??

An entire town stands to win a fortune if its citizens can quit smoking, and the big question is: can they? That's the focus of "Cold Turkey," a wildly satirical comedy starring Dick Van Dyke, Bob Newhart and Jean Stapleton, to be rebroadcast as the ABC Friday Night Movie, June 26 (9-11 p.m.).

Others in the cast include Pippa Scott, Tom Poston, Edward Everett Horton, Bob (Elliott) and Ray (Goulding), Vincent Gardenia and Barnard Hughes.

To boost their community's sagging economy, the residents of Eagle Rock (pop. 4,006) agree to a zany scheme to give up smoking for 30 days to win a $25,000,000 reward. Their 'benefactor' — a major tobacco company — is convinced that no town can go 'cold turkey' for that long. To insure that the reward is not collected, every possible manipulative device is used to fill every home with smoke-filled rooms. But the citizens, edgy from the strain and hungry for the reward, become smoke-detecting vigilantes, spying on backsliders, to protect their shot at the money.

Buck's Birdman Was Challenge

So you thought Mr. Spock's ears were a challenge for a make-up artist? An equally challenging task came along with actor Thom Christopher's character on "Buck Rogers," seen Fridays (9 p.m. on NBC-TV). He's a poweful half-man, half-bird named Hawk.

Like Mr. Spock on "Star Trek," Hawk is a unique character set apart from his compatriots. Spock was born of a human mother and an alien father; Hawk, introduced in a two-hour segment of "Buck Rogers" that's returning June 26, is a creature descended from the legendary birdman who once inhabited Easter Island.

The most stunning aspect of the make-up which Christopher wears as Hawk is a crowning skullcap made of feathers which represents Hawk's scalp. The creation is the work of Werner Keppler, a make-up expert who is a lab technician in the make-up department at Universal Studios.

Keppler has been in the business for 36 years, but this was the first time he had to construct a feathered cap that represents a creature's scalp.

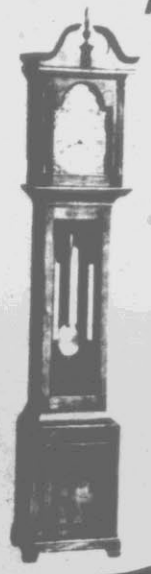

"I began by taking a full head impression of Thom, then sculpted a forehead that sloped forward, to create the impression of a hawk," explains Keppler. The mold that was created was then injected with ployurethane foam. Many pounds of chicken feathers were ordered, and Keppler dyed some of them to create a contrasting effect.

Each feather was glued to the cap and laid in the proper direction, with the feathers meeting at the crown, just as a human's hair would grow.

"Each head used a half-pound of feathers, and took a complete day to make," says Keppler. "The caps are very fragile and I had to construct a new one for each episode."

JACK NICKLAUS, trying for his fifth U.S. Open victory, expects stiff competition from Lee Trevino. ABC-TV will telecast four hours of coverage on the U.S. Open Sunday, June 21 beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Jack Nicklaus Tries For Number Five

Jack Nicklaus won the U.S. Open last year for the fourth time in his career. A win in this year's Open would make him the only man in professional golf to win the title five times.

The Merion Golf Club in Ardmore, Pa., will be the site of this year's Open and ABC-TV will be carrying the tournament on Sunday, June 21. Coverage will start at 2:30 and run until 6 p.m.

Nicklaus can expect some stiff competition this year from several quarters. The most notable players mentioned as possible title holders are Lee Trevino, Ray Floyd and Tom Watson. Of course, to leave out Bruce Lietzke or Curtis Strange would also be foolish.

Trevino won the last U.S. Open held at the Merion Golf Club in 1971. He won the match after an 18 hole playoff with Nicklaus. The two were tied at 280 after the regulation 72 holes, and Trevino went on to score a 68 in the playoff to Nicklaus' 71.

ABC will be using six announcers to cover the Open. Golf commentators Jim McKay and Peter Alliss will be joined by expert commentator Dave Marr, recently named captain of the Ryder Cup team. Bob Rosburg and Bill Flemming and an announcer to be named will be roving the golf course. United States Golf Association Assistant Director Frank Hannigan will be providing rules interpretations.

Unser Demoted

Bobby Unser was demoted to second place in the Indy 500 in 1981. It was the first time in the history of the race that a one-lap penalty had been assessed after the race.

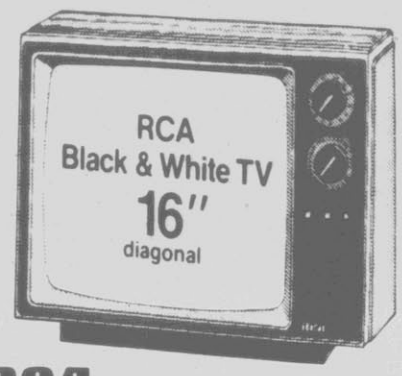

Byron Holds PGA

Byron Nelson holds the PGA record for the most victories in a calendar year. Nelson, one of the legends of golf, managed to score 18 victories in the year 1945.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — Pretty Lisa Whelchel has gained so much weight over the past few months that she's been told by "FACTS OF LIFE" producers to get rid of it — and quick! Now she is practically starving herself in an effort to shed 20 pounds.

Another 'FACTS' star who lost 40 pounds a year ago, CHARLOTTE RAE, just picked up a check for $100,000 she was paid for doing a batch of Drano commercials.

ROBERT WALDEN's resentment over playing 'second fiddle' to ED ASNER on "LOU GRANT" is so obvious that people were stunned when he ignored Ed at a cast picnic the other day. In fact, Bob even refused to acknowledge his "Hello, Bob," and acted as though Ed didn't even exist!

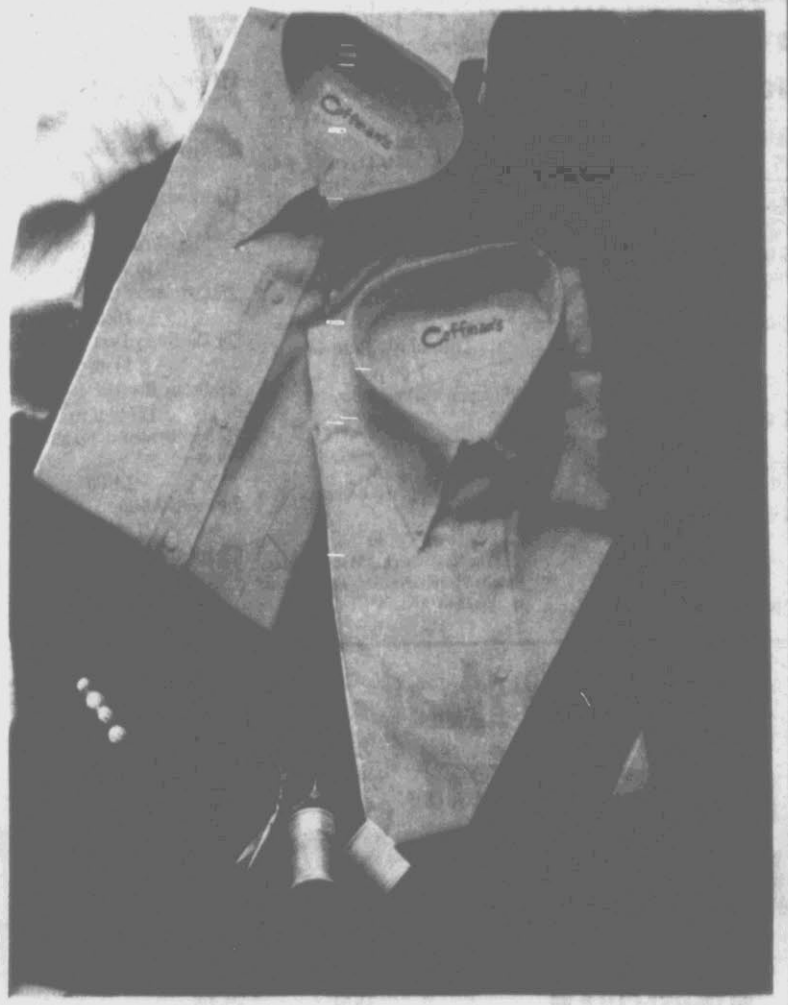

It didn't take ANDREW STEVENS long to recover from the heartache incurred during his split with KATE JACKSON. And AMY BOTWINICK, the cute gal who plays 'Peaches' on "LOBO" is responsible! She and Andrew are spending all their spare time together these days.

Just a few months ago, NBC proudly announced the return of GLENN CORBETT to "THE DOCTORS." No sooner had Glenn settled down in his role of Jason Aldrich than the writers decided to write the character out of the storyline, and now the perplexed actor is unemployed again!

"DYNASTY" co-star BO HOPKINS and songwriter CAROL CONNORS have decided to go 'solo' for awhile, and she's being squired around Tinseltown by handsome JOSH TAYLOR, who toplined the "RYKER" series.

Teen-age: when money matters matter.

FOR KEN DAVIS, co-author of Kids & Cash

At what age should children be allowed to listen to or participate in their parents' money-matter discussions? —M.B., Easton, Pa.

● Including children in discussions about family money matters should be a gradual process, probably starting with some limited exposure in the preteen years, but certainly including them as they go through high school. However, it is far more important to focus on the reason for doing this than to worry about the age at which they should be included. Secrecy about family finances will mean they have to make the same mistakes their parents made while they learn to adjust to the real world. It is important that they know that the family income extends to more than ice-cream cones, bicycles and designer jeans.

Wide World

Did Larry O. act out of necessity?

FOR THE ASK EDITOR

What did Sir Laurence Olivier mean when he said that sons of ministers make the best actors? —I.I., Reno, Nev.

● Olivier, whose father was a minister (Gerard Kerr Olivier), said: "If your father is a minister you have to give the impression that you are the soul of virtue. Well, I was like most minister's sons in that I was a hell-raiser when I was a young man, and no girl was safe within 50 miles of me. But I learned to smile and lie beautifully — the first things on a budding actor's agenda — and also managed to keep my halo in shape." He adds he wouldn't be at all surprised if every great actor in history had a minister for a father. In 1975 Olivier was quoted thus: "I spent most of my stupid youth being terrified of my father." His sister, Sybille, explained and described their father's temper as a storming tornado.

FOR EVELYN SHAEVEL, executive director, Young Adult Services Division, American Library Association

What is the most popular book among teen-agers? —B.S., Beachwood, N.J.

● Gone With the Wind is still tops with teen-agers. Its popularity is nationwide. The reason for the enduring popularity is quite simple: It combines romance, adventure and memorable characters faced with adversity, essential elements for an enduring book for all age levels, but especially with teen-agers.

FOR DANNY AIELLO, star of Woody Allen's The Floating Light Bulb

Why do you find this role so difficult? —W.M., Cumberland, Maine

● I have no trouble playing a bum, a villain or a murderer. But when it comes to portraying a man who doesn't consider his kids, who puts himself before them, then I run into trouble. Corny or not, I love my kids, and trying to inject realism into a character who doesn't think the way I do was a tremendous challenge for me.

FOR VICTOR BORGE, comedian-musician

● No, it's much too risky. As you well know, men from Denmark are very attractive and very sensual. We let France take most of the credit, but those in the know are aware that the true lovers are born and raised in Denmark. Because of this, amorous Danes feel it might be a little too risky to observe Father's Day! However, in the U.S., with five children and five grandchildren, I celebrate Father's Day every day.

FOR JOY TODD, casting director

What's the most awful thing that can happen to a casting director? —J.S.J., Joliet, Ill.

● Nothing can surpass this in terms of sadness. There was an actor of whom I was very fond. I booked him on a film which was to be his big break. A few days later, I called his house to tell him of the starting details, only to find out that he had passed away. My nightmares are caused by an actor not showing up on the set when the director is about to start the scene.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is Marlo Thomas helping her father, Danny Thomas, write his life story? —N.M., Waco, Texas

● We checked with Danny, who said, "She'll help me — on the spelling. After all, what did I send her to college for?" Otherwise, he swears his tome will be a do-it-myself job. "I've been approached by about 30 writers who wanted to do the whole book, but I turned them down. I've got time now, so I'll give it a whack. If I get stuck, then that's when I'll call in Marlo."

FOR BERT BACHARACH, father of Burt Bacharach, and author of How To Do Almost Everything

Is your son raising his daughter the same way that you brought him up? —H.F., Marion, Ind.

● In some ways yes, in some ways no. We agree on the basics, such as courtesy and consideration, but we disagree in matters of formality. For instance, Nikki calls her mother and father "Burt" and "Angie." When he was her age, Burt never called Irma and me by our first names. It was, and still is, "Mom" and "Dad."

PRO AND CON

Should Federal Employees Be Required to Pay Social Security Taxes?

PRO Wilbur J. Cohen, former Secretary, Health, Education and Welfare

Yes, on a phased-in basis, by covering all Congressmen, members of the Cabinet and newly hired Federal employees. Employees in industry and commerce are covered under the basic floor provided by Social Security and many have a second layer of protection under private plans which have worked very well. As a former Federal employee and member of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, I support this principle as do most employers and unions. I am opposed to any merger of the Civil Service and Social Security reserve funds and nobody is proposing it.

Question submitted by Pauline Crawford, California, Mo.

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Steve Skardon, legislative representative, National Association of Retired Federal Employees

No. Social Security has enough problems already. Each time Congress has expanded coverage, it eventually had to raise payroll taxes to finance the subsequent benefits. While coverage of Federal employees could initially mean more revenue, it will certainly create greater long-term demands on the system when these folks start drawing monthly benefit checks. The real issue is Social Security. As long as the system remains a costly configuration of insurance, welfare and retirement protection, Government officials will always be looking for new schemes to bail it out.

While coverage of Federal employees could initially mean more revenue, it will certainly create greater long-term demands on the system when these folks start drawing monthly benefit checks. The real issue is Social Security. As long as the system remains a costly configuration of insurance, welfare and retirement protection, Government officials will always be looking for new schemes to bail it out.

COVER STORY

The Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World of Mel Brooks

Off screen, the king of off-the-wall comedy is really a very nice guy, a devoted husband and father. But the world still makes him a little crazy.

By Arthur Cooper

Scene: Heaven's gate, several decades from now. Among the hopeful entrants is a short, nervous old-timer whose energetic fidgeting belies his years. "What is your name?" St. Peter asks the ancient. "Kaminsky. Melvin Kaminsky," comes the reply. "But maybe you know me by my stage name. Mel Brooks." "Ah, yes, Brooks," says St. Peter. "You have spent your life being irreverent and making outrageous movies. What makes you think that you have the grace of an angel?" Old Mel considers that one for a moment, then replies, "Well, I made even normal people laugh out loud." "Indeed," smiles St. Peter. "You may enter." "First, tell me," says Brooks. "Are there some nice ladies up here?"

There is room in the kingdom of heaven for merrymaking. And there must be some sort of celestial cable TV where angelic normal people guffaw over reruns of Mel Brooks's outrageous comedies, including The Producers, Blazing Saddles and Young Frankenstein. Now add to those off-the-wall classics his new movie, The History of the World, Part I, which opens here on earth this week.

In the new movie, Brooks, who plays five roles, brazenly satirizes the human condition in the wildest collection of skits since Mel, Woody Allen and Neil Simon were writing for Sid Caeser in television's wonderful Your Show of Shows. The most democratic of movie-makers, Brooks has included something to offend nearly everyone.

Brooks' films have been so successful at the box office that he has become one of the most powerful — and wealthiest — movie-makers in the world. Not bad for a former Catskills drummer who had to change his name because "Kaminsky" wouldn't fit on his drums.

While Brooks was putting the finishing touches on History of the World, I visited him in his Hollywood office, where he talked about everything from fatherhood to fascists. Ladies and gentlemen, he-e-e-re's Melvin.

Q: Mel, you've said that your comedy is based on rage. What makes you angry these days?*

Brooks: The Nazis again, Neo-Naziism. After The Producers, I wasn't going to touch Hitler again. But I threw him in this movie just because they're getting me crazy with the vandals in the synagogues. And this throwback, this kind of horror, has a kind of negative attraction for the aimless and uncoalesced; it's very dangerous. That's why the rise of this militant right, the Moral Majority, is so scary. They appeal to our fear of death. They use God as their weapon. What it is, is bigotry, racial prejudice. It's a whole bunch of Hitlers.

Q: One of the things that make you happy, obviously, is your marriage to the lovely and talented Anne Bancroft. How did you meet her?*

Brooks: It was 1961. A mutual friend went to watch Anne rehearse a Perry Como special, and I went with him. There was Anne, singing in a beautiful white gown. She was singing "Married I Can Always Get," and I said to myself, "Gee, she's beautiful. I think I'll marry her." It was instant. I fell in love. As a matter of fact, I tripped over a cable and really fell in love. When she finished the song, I stood up and clapped. "Bravo!" I shouted. "Terrific!" Then I rushed up onto the stage. "Hi," I said, "I'm Mel Brooks." I shook her hand and she laughed. Three years later, I married her.

Q: How did your mother take the news that you were marrying a Catholic girl?*

Brooks: She said, "Wonderful, wonderful, a big star." And then she stuck her head in the oven. Only kidding. The truth be told, my mother was thrilled and delighted because she always loved Anne's work.

Brooks: I have four children. Stefanie, Nicky and Eddie from a

Carlton claims to be lowest in tar. And in fact, Carlton and Now share the distinction of being the lowest 80s Box. And the lowest 85s Soft Pack, regular or menthol.

But when it comes to 100s Soft Pack, regular or menthol, you'll note in the chart on the right that Carlton contains more than twice as much tar as Now!

And when it comes to 100s Box, Now is lower by far than Carlton. In fact, Now Box 100s is lower than any other 100mm cigarette anywhere.

There's no question about it. Now is the Ultra Lowest Tar™ brand.

And if that's what you'd like in a 100s cigarette, there's no question about what brand you should be smoking.

20th Century-Fox

former marriage and Max from my marriage to Annie. I love them all. They're very important. Especially when they're little, their innocence is very important because they see the world as it should be seen. And their disappointment with reality is what I have to cure as a filmmaker. Children are the best pointers of reality. So when people call me childish, I don't like it, but when they call me childlike, I do like it. Children are very important to me intellectually as well as emotionally. And also, I feel that it's a nice crop, like a farmer with a crop. We've got four nice children we grew. It's a nice crop.

Q: You've said that when you were an infant, your family loved you so much they kept throwing you in the air. Did you do that with your children?*

Brooks: Yes. A little too much. Sometimes they didn't come down for days! Too hard in the air. But I'm still emotional, demonstrative and physical with my kids. I believe in biting and pinching and hugging. Maybe that's just being Jewish. I mean, there is no Grant Wood "Sister, you didn't finish your dinner" kind of talk. There is, "You eat that or I'll kill you." Very emotional.

Q: I've heard that you had some trouble learning to be a father. In fact, that was one of the reasons you went into psychotherapy.*

Brooks: That's right. I was always the baby of the family. A lot of people are the babies of their family. And when they're 45, they have a big identity crisis because they can no longer be the baby. Life doesn't let you be the baby. Either you have babies of your own or you're getting gray hair. That's a very difficult transition to make. And my analysis helped me get through that. It's very difficult for every adolescent person to become an adult. That's why some of these religious rituals, especially the old-fashioned Catholic and Hebrew rituals, are wonderful. They help you through birth, through adolescence, through marriage, through death.

Q: Was your analysis worthwhile?*

Brooks: Absolutely. When I was 22, I had my first nervous breakdown. I've had 104 since then. But when I was 22, I was writing for Your Show of Shows and I felt, "Oh my God, they'll find me out. I'm a little Jew from Brooklyn. I can't do this job." So I went to this psychiatrist, and he taught me self-esteem. In fact, during that period I asked for five big raises — to pay for the analysis — and I got them. In the beginning, I was afraid analysis would make me "normal" and take away my talent. But what it did was to free me to be a more complete artist and a good writer.

Q: At this point in your life, why is it fun being Mel Brooks?*

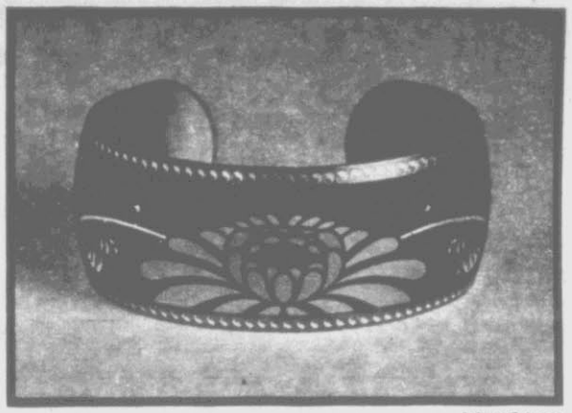

Brooks: It's fun because the big struggle is over — to make it, to make it, to achieve, to achieve. I've achieved some of my primary goals. So I'm relaxed now. Yeah, now I'm relaxed. FW

BEAUTY

Put on a Summer Face

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

All of us know that summer means lighter clothes and lighter foods. But many women don't realize that hot weather also calls for lighter makeup. You'll find that sheer colors and a light touch make you look and feel cooler.

FAMILY WEEKLY canvassed top cosmetic experts for makeup tips that will help you put your best face forward.

Makeup by Merle Norman Cosmetics

"Fashion color trends are an important key to making up this season," says Rae Wisely, makeup and wardrobe consultant for Merle Norman Cosmetics. For those who will be wearing clothes in pinks, melons and mauves, blend gray and pale mauve for eyeshadow, use a gray eye pencil to outline the eyes and finish up with a peppermint pink or deep rose lipstick. For those wearing beige, putty or khaki, beige or saffron-colored eyeshadows are good, with a tangerine or apricot shade for cheeks and lips.

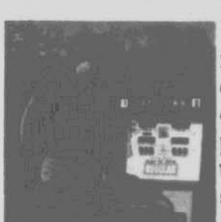

Wisely also advises a change to a lighter-textured makeup foundation for summer. She cautions against creating an "instant suntan" with foundation. Select a color no more than one or two shades darker than your complexion. "A good way to tell," she says, "is to test color on the inside of your wrist, not on top of the hand where skin is darker."

The experts at Almay see the newest shades this summer as sleek matte pales, like colors of the South Seas. Angela Abelow, vice president, Creative Services, offers these quick tips for keeping your makeup — and your look — fresh: If your skin tends in summer to be oilier than usual, use a water-based foundation and an oil-free moisturizer. Keep your astringent in the refrigerator for a fast morning cool-off. For a perfectly shaped mouth, use a lipliner pencil to place color dots along outer lipline. Then connect the dots and fill in.

The creative people at Avon are also following the cosmetic trend toward "sheer and light." Marilyn Cottone, Avon's group manager of product information, reports that the firm has for the first time designed an entire makeup line for summer wear — which offers a foundation containing a sunscreen. Cottone shares these summer makeup techniques: To keep lip gloss from "feathering" on lips, first outline mouth with a lipliner pencil, then dust with face powder to "set" before applying gloss. Another good idea: When makeup is complete, "weatherproof" it by using transparent face powder, pressing it gently over the face. Dust off excess powder. Then, using a cotton ball that has been dipped in ice water and thoroughly squeezed out, gently press over face to "set" makeup. FW

Tom Watson: Golf's New Aristocrat

By Mark Goodman

When the world's finest golfers begin the final round of play Sunday in the 81st U.S. Open, they will all, no doubt, have their sights set on the game's latest top gun. That would be Tom Watson, 31, the freckle-faced heartland aristocrat who has struggled through caddie carts of agonizing defeats before garnering sufficiently ecstatic victories to earn him his new eminence in the P.G.A. hierarchy.

SPORTS SECTION

Tom Watson

For nearly a decade it was Arnold Palmer and his legendary rushes in the twilight of the final holes who dominated the game's most prestigious tournaments. Then along came a hefty kid from Ohio State named Jack Nicklaus, with his booming drives and uncanny putter, to lead the pack from green to green. Now after years of battling the cries and whispers of "choke artist," Watson, with his gritty two-stroke victory in April over Nicklaus and Johnny Miller in the Masters Tournament at Augusta, Ga., has emerged as The Man To Beat at the U.S. Open.

The sunburned men Watson competes against every week have long since acknowledged his prowess. Last year, when Watson became the first touring pro ever to win more than $500,000 in one year, Nicklaus said, "Tom is playing by far the best golf of anyone in the game right now. He's one heck of a player and one heck of a guy. I have nothing but admiration for how hard he's worked and how he's conducted himself."

Or, listen to fellow duffer Miller Barber after a frustrating weekend of chasing Watson around the links: "The closer I got, the harder he was to see. There's something intangible about him. I don't know what it is or how to describe it, but truly great athletes have something that sets them apart, something the rest of us don't get given. Tom Watson has it. He's willing to make the sacrifices you need to make; he's got the drive, the ambition and, Lord knows, the ability."

And if that isn't enough, hear this concession speech from Arnold Palmer, the man who made professional golf the richest sun-drenched idyll in the chronicle of mankind: "Tom's extra cocky and very confident, two very necessary things to becoming a great player. I'm ready to hand the crown over to him, and it looks like Jack is, too."

Says Arnold, that is. Nicklaus is never to be counted out of the money as long as he can swing a club. In fact, Nicklaus, the legendary Golden Bear, and Watson, the hungry cub, now comprise golf's most delicious rivalry. After Watson won his first Masters over Jack in 1977, Tom stepped up to the microphones in the clubhouse, pointed to Jack and said, "I'm always afraid of this man." Nicklaus laughed graciously. "No, he's not," Jack said. "He's not afraid of anybody. That's why he won." (continued)

Nicklaus is a decade older than Watson, to be sure, but golfers fade slowly and gracefully. Also, the tour is crowded with gifted pretenders, notably Bruce Lietzke. In the Byron Nelson Classic at Dallas a month after the Masters (a tournament marred by the death of a spectator in a lightning storm), Lietzke roared from behind to tie Watson at the end of regulation play, then beat him by a stroke in a sudden-death playoff and earn the $54,000 top prize.

But on a relative scale, money is probably less important to Tom Watson than to most pro golfers. He is a throwback to the Bobby Jones era, when golf was indeed the sport of country club gentleman. Nowadays the tour is replete with roughouse types like Lee Trevino, who learned his golf on a hustler's snake pit, the Tennyson Public Course in Dallas. Then there are the collegians on the tour, who earn their degrees through golf scholarships to places like Wake Forest and Houston.

Watson grew up in Kansas City, the son of a wealthy insurance executive named Ray Watson, himself a scratch golfer at the blue-ribbon Kansas City Country Club. Young Tom prepped at Pembroke Country Day and, like his father and brother Ridge before him, attended Stanford — and not on scholarship. Even now, Watson can say, in his reserved fashion, "I don't care about money. I'm just trying to play the best golf I can. I have a certain talent; I think it's a better-than-average talent. If I can get a variety of shots and start hitting the ball with more authority and a little bit lower..."

That may sound odd coming from a gentleman who's been P.G.A. Player-of-the-Year the past four years, but Watson is the sort of craftsman who is constantly analyzing his complex and precarious trade. He has all the tools for success. Though only 5 feet 9 inches tall, and weighing 160 pounds, he has a compact athlete's body and marvelous hand-eye coordination. Back in 1972, watching him putt at the Tuscon Open, Bert Yancey was moved to comment, "There's the next Arnold Palmer."

Still, an awful lot of work and desire went into building his game. Watson seems calm, even aloof, on the surface (though he did manage to utter "Hot damn!" when he won the British Open in 1975). "But," says Bob Willits, his father's golfing partner, "he burns inside,." Adds Stan Thirsk, the longtime pro at the Kansas City Country Club, "He can't resist competition. And if he's in it, he wants to win it." In teaching young Tom, Thirsk basically let him do what came naturally to such a youngster. "You let him imitate," Thirsk once said. "Tom's dad was a club champion. He has an excellent swing, long and upright. Tom simply imitated Ray Watson's swing."

With over $2 million in lifetime tour earnings, Tom and wife Linda can laugh all the way to the bank.

However, Tom early on proved himself to be something of a maverick. The apple of his father's eye, he won four Missouri state amateur championships. But, in probably the only probationary moment in an exemplary life, Tom at 14 was suspended from Pembroke for three days. The crime: smoking on his first date with Linda Rubin, a pretty, vivacious Jewish girl from a nearby academy, whom he met during an interschool production of Pirates of Penzance.

Thus began a love affair that drove Linda to college in eastern Pennsylvania, as she puts it, "to be as far away as possible." After two years of enforced distance, she transferred to Mills College, only a freeway ride from Tom at Palo Alto, "to be as close as possible."

There were problems. Watson comes from a society in which nice gentile boys still marry nice gentile girls. Linda, for her part, was not wild about the idea of following the sun on the golf circuit. For, by his senior year, though his play had been erratic at Stanford (he won only two collegiate tournaments), Tom was giving serious consideration to the pro tour. He had already demonstrated a disinclination for his father's life style by switching his major from economics to psychology. "I just didn't want to be a vice president of a corporation," Tom says. "I figured the thing I did best was the thing I wanted to do most, play golf. It's never dull for me, never a job. Every time I tee up it's a new challenge."

It's one he invited Linda to share as his wife, and she is now his biggest fan as well as perhaps the most able administrator on the tour. Even though she is now mother of a little girl (Meg, almost 2) Linda handles all the bookkeeping and arrangements, always making sure Tom gets the best — the best room, the best car — each step along the trail. As chatty as Tom is restrained, she is quick to defend him against critics who perceive him as a cold golfing machine. "Tom is Tom," she says. "He's never going to be anything else or try to be things he isn't. He's not the automaton he's made out to be. If people can't see the human being, the warm, compassionate loving man I know, they're just misreading him, that's all."

Wide World

Wide World

Watson dons the traditional Green Coat after winning this year's Masters. He gets an assist from 1980 winner Seve Ballesteros.

The key to Watson is that he turns his emotions inward and gets down on himself when his game tails off. This, coupled with his willingness to "tear up his swing" rather than play it safe, and to go for broke in every tournament rather than just try to finish in the top money, has caused him to blow more than a few matches. As early as 1974, when he led the U.S. Open at Winged Foot (Mamaroneck, N.Y.) after three rounds only to shoot a 79 on the final day, Tom picked up that dreaded tag, "choke artist."

After several such rough times, Tom was taken in hand by Byron Nelson, the crafty old pro who lends his name to the classic at Preston Trails in Dallas (now Watson's second club). Nelson began working with Watson on his rhythm, his tempo, smoothing out his swing. He talked patiently with him before each round of the 1975 British Open. On the final round, Tom sank a 20-foot birdie putt on the last hole to tie in regulation, then won the playoff for his first major title.

With two more British Open wins, a World Series of Golf victory, and two Masters championships in his bag, people are no longer questioning Tom Watson's ability to swallow. Still, if he's going to reign over the fiercely competitive P.G.A. tour, he must win its most competitive event: the U.S. Open.

"Sure, I'd love to win the Open," Tom says. "To be considered the best, you have to win the biggest tournaments." Which is why he works on his game constantly, flying back and forth between his French provincial home in Mission Hills, Mo., to Dallas and Preston Trails — sometimes between breakfast and dinner.

As Watson once put it, standing on a fairway during a practice round, "You have to be dedicated because it's a naturally frustrating game. A six on a hole can ruin a day or lose a tournament. That's the first thing you learn as a kid, how frustrating it is. The right grip is an unnatural grip. You can't blame the club or the conditions or the weather. You can't blame the team because it's just you....You can't conquer this game. But when you get close, it's the best." FW

ROACH PRUFE, No. 1 in UNIVERSITY TESTS

In a report just released by the UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA and published by the ENTOMOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF AMERICA, eight commercial and test products that included a broad spectrum of insecticides were tested against a product called "ROACH PRUFE." The tests were conducted in heavily infested apartments and showed at the end of the 8 week test period that with a single application of ROACH PRUFE in each apartment, the roach population was reduced by an average 99.5%. By comparison, with the worst results were two widely recognized insecticides currently used in aerosols and applied by professionals. They showed a 0% (no) reduction at the end of the 8 week tests.

Commenting in a letter, the University researchers stated: "Our experience under field conditions has shown that when properly applied, the ROACH PRUFE formula provides a degree of cockroach control that is usually superior to all other registered commercial or consumer products."

Odorless, Easy To Apply

Because roaches simply do not recognize ROACH PRUFE as an insecticide, they do not try to avoid it by scattering to other parts of your residence as they do with other insecticides. Plus the electrostatically charged powder sticks to their bodies. They then carry the powder back into the walls spreading it among the other roaches. The result is you kill not only the roaches you see, but also those hiding and multiplying in the walls.

ROACH PRUFE is odorless, non-evaporating, non-staining and non-flammable. The powder is simply applied with a teaspoon under kitchen appliances and in other hidden areas. It can be used in homes, schools, hospitals, restaurants, plus new construction.

If ROACH PRUFE is not available at your local hardware store, the manufacturer will be glad to send it to you. To obtain a one pound container, just send a check or money order for $8.90, which includes postage. Add tax if you live in California. One pound covers up to a 9 room residence. You'll need an extra pound for a basement or garage. Send to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. 93 at 5147 W. Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca. 90016. Copies of the University test are available by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. A.

FOOD

It's Fresh Sweet Cherry Time

By Marilyn Hansen

HOW TO FREEZE FRESH SWEET CHERRIES

1. Select moistureproof containers with lids or plastic freezer bags. Work with a small amount of cherries at a time to allow for quick handling and prompt freezing. Wash cherries in ice water and drain.
2. Spread washed cherries with stems intact on cookie sheet. Freeze until firm. Pack into freezer containers or plastic freezer bags. Cover or fasten tightly, label and freeze.

CHERRY-SAUCED CHICKEN WINGS

- 3 lbs. chicken wings
- 1 lb. fresh sweet cherries, halved and pitted
- ½ cup orange juice
- ¼ cup packed brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons grated fresh ginger root or ½ teaspoon powdered ginger
- 1 small clove garlic, minced
- ½ cup soy sauce
- ¼ cup port wine
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice

1. Cut off and discard the small wing tips of chicken wings. Cut between the main and second wing joints to make 2 pieces from each wing. Place in glass bowl.
2. Place pitted cherries with orange juice in blender and blend until smooth. Add remaining ingredients. Pour over chicken wings and marinate 2 to 3 hours, turning occasionally. Drain, reserving marinade.
3. Place chicken wings in single layer in baking pan. Bake in preheated 450° F. oven for 10 minutes. Turn and bake 10 minutes more. Reduce temperature to 350°F. Continue to bake 20 minutes longer or until tender, brushing 2 or 3 times with reserved cherry marinade.

Makes about 36 pieces

NOTE: Remaining marinade may be thickened with 2 tablespoons cornstarch to serve as a dipping sauce.

CHERRY CHICKEN SALAD

- 2 cups diced cooked chicken
- Crisp lettuce leaves
- ½ cup sliced almonds, toasted
- 2 bananas, cut into spears
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 3 cups pitted fresh, sweet cherries
- 2 nectarines or oranges, peeled and sliced
- 1 ripe avocado
- 2 tablespoons lime juice
- Dash salt
- 1 teaspoon grated lime peel
- ¼ teaspoon sugar
- 1 cup mayonnaise

1. Combine chicken and almonds; portion evenly among 6 lettuce-lined salad plates.
2. Sprinkle banana with lemon juice.
3. Arrange fruits on plates with chicken. Mash avocado; combine with remaining ingredients for dressing. Pass with salad.

Makes 6 servings

Fresh Sweet Cherry Facts

Mid-June is the time for the first marketing of the fresh, sweet cherries. From then until early August, there is plenty of this delicious fruit for everyone to enjoy.

Varieties

Fresh, sweet, dark cherries from the Northwest come in two varieties, Bing and Lambert. The plump Bing was developed as a result of the efforts of a Chinese gardener named Bing, and thus carries his name. The Lambert cherry was first grown as a seedling of the Napoleon cherry and then developed to yield the deep-red fruit with the sweet cherry flavor that is grown today.

Packing and Storage

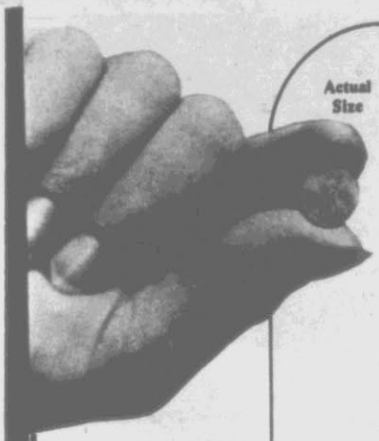

New marketing procedures assure that fresh cherries will be at their peak when they reach your local market. Research is continually in progress to produce new varieties less susceptible to frost and rain. Fresh, sweet cherries are packed in polyethylene-lined boxes to prevent moisture loss and keep them in prime condition. Similar methods can be adapted for home use. Store unwashed cherries in plastic bags in the refrigerator. Wash just before serving.

Nutrition

In addition to a delightful flavor, cherries make their contribution to good nutrition. Sweet cherries are a good source of Vitamins C, A and B_1 and Thiamine. They rate among the foods that are highest in three important minerals: iron, calcium and phosphorus.

Preservation

The season and refreshing flavor of this first-of-the-season fruit can be extended for year-round enjoyment by canning and freezing. Three cups of stemmed unpitted cherries equal one pound. Two and one-half cups of stemmed and pitted cherries equal one pound.

PEOPLE QUIZ

Men or Women: Who Sings the Blues the Loudest?

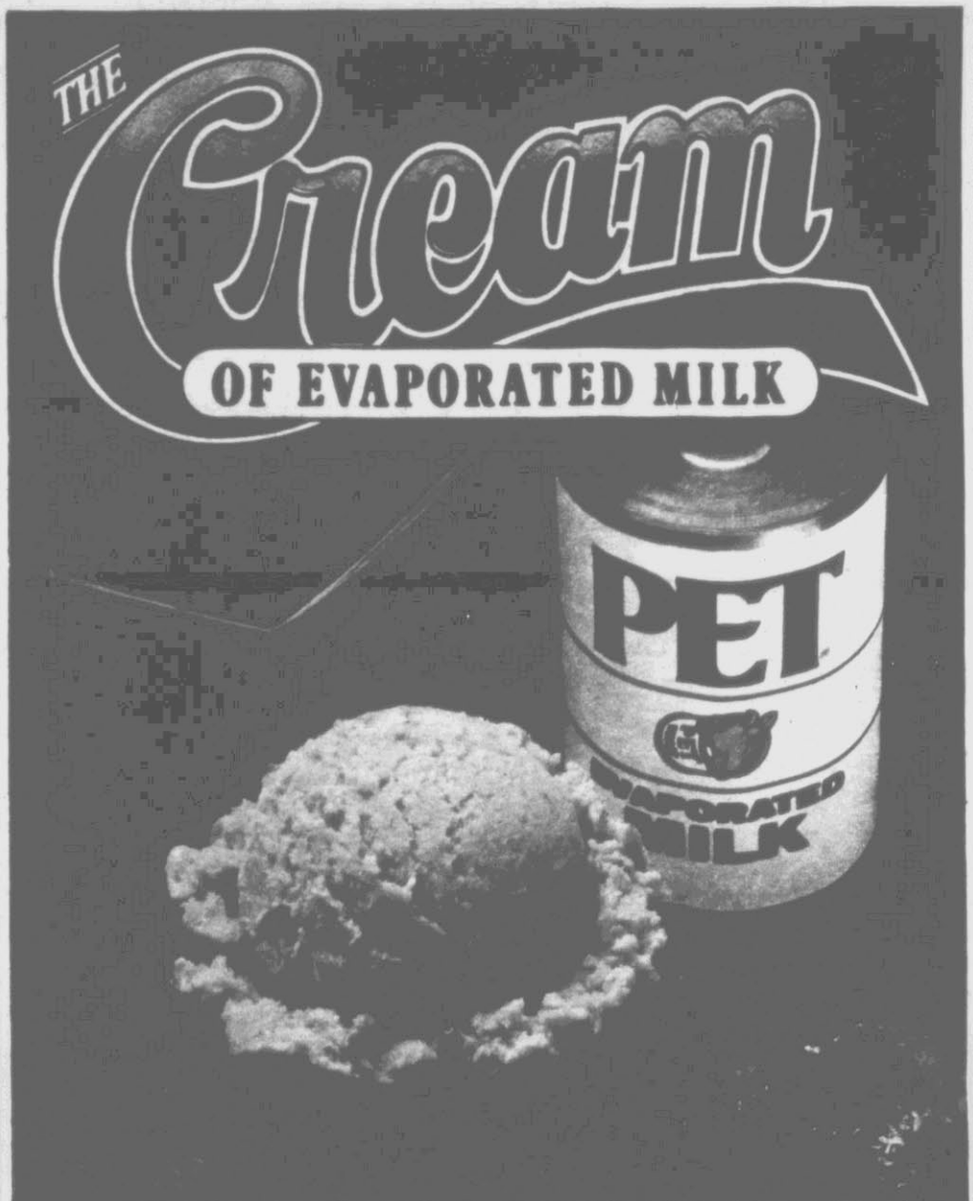

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Men and women react differently when they have "the blues."
2. Whether men or women get the blu-est when they get depressed raises a provocative question.
3. If events went along smoothly, without disappointments or unpleasant events, life would be considered pleasant, and we'd rarely feel blue and depressed.
4. How often you get the blues depends on whether you feel that what happens to you is largely the result of your own efforts or fate.
5. Some people lose their appetite when they're feeling depressed, but with others, the blues have the exact opposite effect — appetite increases dramatically.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies of men and women students at the University of California showed that depressed men were more likely to report an inability to express their feelings (despite wanting to do so), a loss of social interest, a sense of failure and assorted physical complaints. Depressed women, on the other hand, were characterized principally by indecisiveness ("I just can't make up my mind what to do, where to go, or anything..."), and self-dislike ("I'm disgusted with myself for letting things get me down like this").
2. True. The team of investigators who conducted the University of California study concluded: "It is unclear whether women do in fact become more depressed than men or whether male and female experiences with depression differ in ways that lead women to express their symptoms (talking about their feelings), cope with, seek help or receive labels of depression in a different way than men." It was noted that depressed men who are voluble about their symptoms and feelings tend to evoke a negative or 'so-what' response from others and that depressed men are judged more harshly and are seen as more impaired than depressed women for display of the same behavior.
3. False. A two-year University of Oregon study examined the relationship between depression and pleasant and unpleasant events in the lives of two selected groups, consisting of one hundred men and women, ranging in age from 20 to over 60. Case histories obtained from interviews showed one group to be appreciably more subject to feelings of depression. Findings: "There was no indication that unpleasant events occurred more often to the depressed group than to the others. And there was no association in the sample of subjects studied between the state of depression and the amount of pleasure experienced." This would seem to suggest that attitudes, rather than events, bear the greatest responsibility for dark moods.
4. True. Studies at the University of Massachusetts have shown that a tendency toward depression among students "was characterized by greater attributions to chance and decreased beliefs in personal contact over one's outcomes."
5. True. Studies of depression and appetite, conducted at the Department of Psychiatry, St. George's Medical School, London, England, examined patterns of appetite change during depressed moods in men and women aged 21 to 65, from various walks of life. It was found that though depression is more often accompanied by reduction of appetite, in an appreciable number of cases it actually increases. This was more likely to occur when depression was on the mild side, and to involve an interesting sex difference. For it was noted that "the normal phenomenon of overeating in response to a mild emotional upset" is far more common among women than among men. In fact, it is observed that "a striking feature of appetite increase was its virtual limitation to women." FW

On 20-year, $30,000 financing at only 13% ... just 3% more than Jim Walter's annual percentage rate ... you will pay $14,872 MORE! Your monthly payment will be approximately $62.00 MORE. Think of that ... and we're talking of financing only $30,000 over a 20-year period. On a 20-year, $40,000 mortgage at 13% you'll pay back $19,855 MORE than you would pay Jim Walter. That's nearly $20,000 of your money. And with Jim Walter there are NO "POINTS" OR "CLOSING COSTS". The chart gives typical examples:

EXAMPLE 20 YEAR FINANCING WITH NO DOWN PAYMENT

CASH PRICE	JIM WALTER'S ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE	240 MONTHLY PAYMENTS OF	BORROWED ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE	240 MONTHLY PAYMENTS OF APPROX.	DIFFERENCE 20 YEARS APPROX.
$25,000	10%	$241.20	13%	$292	$12,407
$30,000	10%	$289.50	13%	$351	$14,872
$35,000	10%	$337.70	13%	$410	$17,365
$40,000	10%	$385.90	13%	$468	$19,855

Choose from more than 20 models ... Built on your property to almost any stage from the shell to 90% complete!

A low financing rate is not the only cost-saving advantage offered by Jim Walter. We will build to almost any stage, from the shell home (unfinished inside) to one that is 90% complete. This means you can cut your costs to the very bone by doing some or all of the inside finishing. The more you do, the more money you'll save. Just tell us where you want Jim Walter to stop building, then you take over and finish the rest.

So if your goal is to get a good solid value, but to keep your costs to a bare minimum, be sure to check with Jim Walter before deciding on a builder. Call, stop by or send the coupon to our nearest display park today.

Easy Summer Projects— Make Purses, Placemats And Poolside Sandals

We've got great summertime items for you to create: fashion accessories, household articles and hostess aids. And you can enjoy using them now.

Even a beginning seamstress can turn out a wardrobe of stitch-and-switch summer purses using a variety of fabrics to fit one set of handles. Poolside sandals are easy to make and fun to wear. They're crocheted from plastic strips cut from a trash bag and are flexible, water-resistant and very comfortable.

To create a bright spot of color in your home, wooden or plastic berry baskets can be covered with strips of stiffened cotton ribbon or leftover fabric and filled with bouquets of flowers. Covered handles can be attached and a touch of baby's breath added for an airy look.

A straw placemat is easily converted into a decorative, curved table caddy. Then use it to hold mail, flowers or guest towels.

Ready-to-go placemats, with pockets to hold utensils can be made from vinyl and and are great for picnics or backyard barbecues.

TRAVEL BOUND

When friends show slides of travels,
The places where they were,
I make it known quite firmly
The front row I prefer.

This flatters the film shower,
who thinks I fear I'll fail
To see each splendid picture,
Not missing one detail.
But that is not the reason
To sit close I'm disposed.
My host, who shows the pictures,
Can't see my eyes are closed.

OF HUMAN POUNDAGE

New bathroom scales have upright posts,

WHAT IN THE WORLD

SUPERWOMEN HAPPIER

The nation's busiest women — those who combine the three roles of wife, mother and jobholder — are also the nation's healthiest women, it seems. Reporting on research by Dr. Lois Verbrugge of the University of

Alice Golden

Michigan School of Public Health, Ob. Gyn. News says such women have the best general health status, lowest morbidity, least long-term disability and restricted activity and the least drug use. Homemakers suffer worse health than working mothers, while divorced and separated women, both working and nonworking, show the worst health patterns — they have the highest number of doctor visits, the most disability days and the longest hospital stays.

A DRINK A DAY KEEPS THE DOCTOR AWAY

To those who preach the virtues of temperance, we can now answer, "Ha." Besides its pleasurable effects, moderate drinking may actually be good for you, according to research by Dr. Thomas Turner, dean emeritus of Johns Hopkins Medical School. Moderate drinkers have fewer heart attacks than teetotalers, says Turner, possibly due to drinkers' greater amounts of high-density lipoproteins, the so-called "good" cholesterol that seems to protect against clogging of the arteries.

The study also found that alcohol can relieve tension; among the elderly in particular, booze was found to reduce anxiety, clear perceptions, help in sleeping and lower the pulse rate.

What constitutes "moderate" drinking depends on one's weight. Turner says for a 150-pound person it might be four drinks over 24 hours. "Obviously, it comes down to sensible use," he adds. "But with a few exceptions, such as before driving and for pregnant women, the bad effects of alcohol are exclusively related to consuming large amounts."

SHOCKING CAR

Someday soon, you may drive into your local service station, and instead of saying, "Fill 'er up," you'll say, "Plug 'er in." Word comes that scientists have developed an experimental electric car that plugs into a conventional 110-volt outlet for overnight recharging.

Previous attempts at electric cars have failed because the batteries have not provided proper acceleration. But this model, made entirely from lightweight, fiberglass-reinforced plastic, has a top speed of 60 miles per hour and goes from 0 to 55 m.p.h. in 16 seconds.

The car, developed for the Department of Energy by the Garrett Corporation, gets extra power from a flywheel in the rear of the vehicle. The flywheel, weighing 60 pounds and measuring 23 inches in diameter, serves as a power link between two electric motors and the car's rear axle. It stores energy when it spins and also recovers energy from the wheels during braking.

Unfortunately, the flywheel can add just so much — right now the car can go only 100 to 150 miles between rechargings.

BONE TO PICK

Sticky situation of the week. You're eating chicken in a semiformal setting — in other words not with laissez-faire family and friends — and you get a bone in your mouth. What to do? "Whatever you do, don't stick your fingers way up in there like you're extracting a tooth or put your napkin over your face like you're doing a puppet show," Marjabelle Stewart, etiquette expert and author of Marjabelle Stewart's Book of Modern Table Manners, told us. "Instead, using your tongue, work the bone to the edge of your lips. Then raise your fist — slightly open — drop the object into the hole and discreetly place it on your plate."

WALTER, JR.?

Looking for a young man most likely to succeed? Try Bill Chadwell, a TV news anchorman at the ripe age of 20. Every weeknight at 6 o'clock 2,600 subscribers to OVC cable TV system in Mt. Sterling, Ky., can tune into the "Action 6 News" team — featuring Chadwell, co-anchor Hunt Priest, 16, and sportscaster Keith Harris, 17.

It all began two years ago when Chadwell — then an 18-year-old high-school senior — approached the vice president of OVC and suggested the company broadcast a local news program. One month later Chadwell was on the air, anchoring the news, doing the weather, researching his own stories, even setting up the cameras.

Chadwell admires the work of Tom Brokaw and Roger Mudd but says his true mentor is Walter Cronkite. With a wisp of nostalgia, he admits, "I still get choked up when they announce, 'This is the CBS Evening News with Dan Rather.'"

He also admits his precociousness presents problems: "I have trouble relating to people my own age, and sometimes I feel I missed out. But it's too late to go back; that door is shut."

RED-EYE HOP

Can "happy feet" cause red eyes? Maybe so, reports Science '81. Dr. Robert Caspari of the Harvard Community Health Plan told of treating a young man suffering from "subconjunctivial hemorrhaging" — the bursting of the eye's blood vessels. The ailment, more frightening than painful, is characterized by huge, red, blotchy eyes. And the cause in this case? Well, the night before, the young man had enthusiastically been doing the "Pogo," a punk-rock dance in which one bounds up and down as in a tribal rite.

Is it time to bring back the "Twist"?

LETTER-PERFECT WITS TESTER

Jones, a showoff, faced the rear of the room, peered into a mirror, and answered unerringly.

Now then, if so happened that each of the six consecutive letters named (all capitals) appeared exactly the same in the mirror as on the chart.

Our Story: SOMETHING IS AMISS AT TARA: KING RORY MOR AND HIS CRAFTY "BREHON" JUDGES SHARE A GUILTY SECRET. GALAN AND THE TWINS FLEE IN FRIGHT ABOARD A TRAMP MERCHANTMAN, BUT RORY OVERTAKES THEM. "LITTLE BOYS SHOULD NOT PRETEND THEY ARE MEN," HE SMILES.

"IN THAT CASE," KAREN SAYS SWEETLY, "I WILL NOT PRETEND I AM A LADY." HER TEETH DRAW BLOOD.

A MOMENT LATER, WITH VALETA'S HELP, RORY FINDS HIMSELF STARING INTO THE CLOUDS. NOW HE IS ANGRY...

...BUT THE CHILDREN REGARD THE PUNISHMENT AS WORTH THE CRIME. IT IS RECORDED THAT THEY GIGGLE ALL THE WAY HOME.

RORY MOR IS ILL AT EASE. "WHEN WILL WE BE THERE?" HE KEEPS ASKING THE CAPTAIN. "MAY THE FAERIES HELP YOU IF I AM LATE." NO SOONER DO THEY REACH THE MOUTH OF THE BOYNE THAN A PITCH-COATED CURRACH TAKES RORY ASHORE. HE GALLOPS ALONE TOWARD TARA.

THE NAUGHTY HEIRS OF PRINCE VALIANT AND ALETA ARRIVE AT TARA THE NEXT DAY TO FIND RORY IN HIGH SPIRITS. "ALL IS FORGOTTEN," HE SAYS GOOD-HUMOREDLY. "HAVE SOME VENISON."
