Utilities Again Reject Appeal

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission yesterday rejected for the second time in as many weeks a city request for an additional $300,000 in turnover for the 1981-82 fiscal year.

The Commission voted to leave the turnover as previously approved after Mayor Don McGlohon said "you've got a political thing," to deal with in a tax rate increase while "people are used to their utility bill going up."

In requesting the additional money, McGlohon said, "What it really amounts to ... the city's finances are such that in order to have a balanced budget ... in order to give the employees close to a 10 percent increase," the city needs the money "because of our limited sources of revenue."

He explained that to balance the city's proposed budget,

"We would have to increase the ad valorem taxes about 23 percent," over the 1980-81 level without the additional utility revenue.

"We're dedicated to what we feel a maximum tax increase might be this year," McGlohon said of the council, citing the figure of 16 percent for the coming fiscal year. He added that a 12 to 15 percent increase for the 1982-83 year "will get the city on a sounder basis ... where it should have been all along."

He emphasized that the council could hold a tax hike to 16 percent for the 1981-82 fiscal year "if we get the additional money from the utilities." McGlohon added that the council is looking "at all sorts of user fees" including an increase in building inspection fees and the addition of fees for "rescue calls outside the city ... maybe inside if we have to," in order to help fund city services. "Those are the types of things we are doing."

"We can't annex anybody between now and the end of the month. I don't know of anything we can do except come back for a one-shot increase from the Utilities."

"I think what we are taking about," according to City Manager Ed Wyatt, a member of the Utilities Commission board, is "unappropriated funds," in the commission's electric and gas funds.

Commission member Gene Prescott countered by saying, "Both funds are now, in my estimate" below what they should be, while acting GUC director Malcolm Green emphasized, "we feel you need to retain some," in order to meet unexpected needs of the system.

"I can't disagree with you on a purely business point of view," McGlohon noted. However, he said "the city's position

Tax-Cuts On Collision Course

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans solidly behind President Reagan's tax plan and House Democrats claiming to be "on the move again" with a program on paper are advancing on a collision course over who should benefit most from the largest tax cut in American history.

The Senate Finance Committee, voting 19-1 Thursday to give Reagan almost everything he wants and more, recommended that everyone get the same tax break, regardless of income. The House Democrats, meanwhile, unveiled the specifics of their plan favoring low- and middle-income Americans who suffer most from inflation and rising Social Security taxes.

Both plans would become effective Oct. 1. And both would give businesses and individuals the largest tax cut in history.

But Reagan's plan would give a typical family of four with a $10,000 income a $52 tax cut in 1982, compared with a $362 reduction in the Democratic version. A $20,000 family would get $275 in Reagan's bill, $345 under the Democrats'. The president would give a $2,802 cut to a $100,000 family, the Democrats $2,453.

Reagan, in Los Angeles, was described as pleased with the Finance Committee action. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan considered the vote "a good indication of solid support in the Senate. He thinks it speaks well for the future of the tax bill."

The major provision in Reagan's bill would cut personal tax rates by 25 percent over three years.

But Democrats say a three-year cut would worsen inflation. Their plan, unveiled Thursday, would cut rates an average of 15 percent over two years, but workers in the $15,000-to-$50,000 range would get a better break than others.

The Democratic substitute also would increase the zero-bracket amount — formerly the standard deduction — by $200 to $2,500 for single people and by $400 to $3,800 for couples; raise the maximum earned-income credit for poor working families $50 to $550 and boost the maximum child-care credit to $600 for one child and $1,200 for two.

Reagan and the Democrats agree on the need to lessen the tax penalty that hits many married couples when both spouses work. Reagan would allow the couple a special deduction of up to $1,500 in 1982 and $3,000 in future years; the Democratic plan would provide a deduction of up to $5,000 starting in 1982.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, called the Democratic bill "fairer to individuals than the president's proposal — especially to working American families ... the people who doubted us last November."

"The Democratic Party is on the move again," Rostenkowski told a news conference. "We are recovered from November's defeat. We are once again united. We're now ready to go out and tell people what we stand for — and our tax alternative is the document we will carry."

But Rostenkowski and other House leaders have their work cut out for them. Even as Rostenkowski was speaking, conservative Democrats were lining up with Republicans to hand Reagan his second major budget victory of the year. The president is trying to pull together the same coalition to push his tax bill through the House.

Democrats, who until recently had focused most of their criticism on the three-year aspect of Reagan's plan, now are concentrating on the bill's treatment of low- and middle-income Americans.

Rostenkowski said that under his bill, people in the under-$20,000 group would get 21.8 percent of the tax relief, compared with 16 percent under Reagan's plan. The $20,000-to-$30,000 group would get 57.5 percent of the Democrats' bill and 49.3 percent of Reagan's. Those with incomes above $50,000 would receive 20.6

percent of the benefits under Rostenkowski's plan and 34.7 percent under Reagan's.

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, told the Finance Committee that after rising Social Security taxes and the higher income taxes caused by inflation are considered, a family earning less than $20,000 a year would face a federal tax increase in 1982 — even if Reagan's bill were approved.

Reagan's advisers say that when the president's bill is fully effective in 1984, it would offset for all workers the rising tax burden caused by inflation and Social Security taxes.

The Finance Committee tentatively approved its own method of offsetting inflation in the tax laws. It agreed to an amendment by Sen. Bill Armstrong, R-Colo., that, starting in 1985, would automatically adjust tax rates each year to reflect increases in the Consumer Price Index.

The only vote against Reagan's plan was cast by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.,

SURPRISE, SURPRISE — President Reagan is all smiles after a surprise-filled day in Los Angeles. The House had rejected an attempt to split his budget-cut package, and that was followed by a surprise visit by his wife, Nancy, who stopped in to congratulate him on his victory. (AP Laserphoto)

General Assembly Votes State Gas Tax Increase

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Six months of debate and controversy ended very quietly Thursday as the General Assembly officially enacted a 3-cents-per-gallon increase in the state gasoline tax.

Enactment came on anti-climactic votes in the state House and Senate to approve a final time an agreement worked out by legislative leaders resolving differences between the two chambers on the bill.

In other action higher taxes on beer and wine won preliminary approval in the state House.

Passage of the gas tax bill, the major prize sought by Gov. Jim Hunt from the 1981 Legislature, means higher prices at the gasoline pumps beginning next Wednesday, July 1.

Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch said Thursday he was notifying all wholesalers and retailers of motor fuels about the tax. He said he was emphasizing that all inventories on hand at 12:01 a.m. July 1 would be subject to the tax.

Lynch said a form for remitting the tax was enclosed with the notification, and department investigators would be making sure everyone complies.

The bill raises the state motor fuels tax to 12½ cents a gallon, in addition to the 4-cents-a-gallon federal tax.

There was no debate in the House or Senate as the final votes were taken — the issue having been settled in earlier floor battles. The final votes were 31-17 in the Senate and 69-43 in the House, reflecting the same pattern of the earlier decisions. The Senate tally was later switched to 31-17 later in the afternoon when Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford, said she voted for the measure by mistake and was allowed to change her vote.

Hunt proposed the tax in late April but really began working on it last year, as he campaigned for election to a second term. Hunt praised legislators and said the higher gasoline tax would be used to improve highways and to "build our economy and increase the income of our people."

"This 1981 session will be remembered for making courageous and farsighted decisions that will keep good jobs coming to North Carolina," he said.

The bill also raises the costs of drivers' licenses, truck fees and other highway-related permits. The bill does not include the personal income tax rebate Hunt proposed as a way to partially offset the higher taxes. It was rejected by the House when members realized it would amount to less than $5 per driver.

Hunt proposed the tax as a way to bail out the financially troubled Department of Transportation, but the final package falls far short of the $200 million he said he originally wanted to raise.

The final package will raise an estimated $113 million in the fiscal year beginning in July, and an estimated $119 million the following year. Most of the money would come from higher gasoline taxes, and $31 million next year would come from the higher fees.

Another Plan For Redistricting Handed Rejection In Committee

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Another plan for redrawing North Carolina's 11 congressional districts was rejected by the House Congressional Redistricting

Committee today, and the chairman established new subcommittees to attempt to resolve a deadlock.

Members of a House subcommittee struggled for most of the day Thursday before coming up with the new map, then saw it rejected by a 13-11 vote this morning.

The vote marked the third plan — each of which would split counties to achieve numerical balance — that the subcommittee has recommended and the full committee has rejected.

The latest map was similar to one rejected by the full committee earlier in the week, but with a few slight variations. It would have divided Avery, Watauga, Alexander, Davidson, Johnston and New Hanover counties.

One township of New Hanover, Harnett Township, would be moved from the 7th District to the 3rd District.

Frustrated by failure to break the stalemate, Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, chairman of the full committee, said he was forming four new subcommittees, giving all members of the full committee the opportunity to draw new plans.

The committee will meet again Tuesday to consider new maps.

Several committee members said they would continue to oppose any plan put forward that divides counties into more than one district. "Each time this committee has met, it has indicated to the subcommittee, 'folks, we don't want to cross county lines,'" said Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford.

But Huskins said the subcommittees could present maps either with whole counties or split counties.

Huskins also continued to refuse to allow the full committee to vote on another plan drawn up by Rep. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth. Kaplan's plan has the support of most of the state's Democratic congressmen and does not split county lines — but it is opposed by Huskins and other House leaders because it places Durham County in the 2nd District, which is represented by veteran Democrat L.H. Fountain.

"We have asked for only one thing, and that's a chance to vote," Kaplan said, referring to supporters of his plan. "We will continue to do that."

Huskins, chairman of the full committee, said that if the full panel does not approve this plan the House may have to postpone redistricting until the planned fall special session. Legislators have hoped for a July 3 adjournment, but Huskins said that is unlikely and that July 10 seems to be a more likely adjournment date.

LAW BEING VIOLATED?

I live beside a nice young couple who have had a problem develop. One of their dogs has started to bite people. I know they love this dog and hate to destroy him and I don't blame them and I don't want to cause them any trouble. But now this dog is coming over to my house (We live out in the county, but this area is as thickly populated as town.) and biting my visitors, gas meter reader, and the like. I understand from the health department that there is nothing they can do and that the most they could possibly do is see that the dog is confined if he bites me or someone in my family and then only for 10 days till it's proved that he doesn't have rabies. This doesn't make sense.

No, it doesn't, Pitt County Magistrate Elmore Hodges said. He said there is a North Carolina law (GS 106-381) that reads, "When an animal becomes vicious or a menace to the public health, the owner of such animal or person harboring such animal shall not permit such animal to leave the premises on which kept unless on leash in the care of a responsible person."

Hodges said this statute would be sufficient to enable him to issue a warrant to you, if you were to care to press charges, and he believes that the health department should be able to enforce such a law, also.

Pitt County Health Department Environmental Health Director Willie Pate said, however, that he's been told more than once in dog control seminars that rabies control officers do not have the legal power to decide which dog is vicious and which is not. Therefore, his agency, as he presently understands its function, cannot require your neighbors to keep their dogs confined for you and your visitors' protection. He agreed that this law is one that should be clarified to make it possible for it to be used by the rabies control officers within his division who daily have to deal with difficult situations like the ones you describe.

Okay Building Inspection Fees

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

The Board of County Commissioners yesterday adopted a schedule of fees for the building inspection program scheduled to go into effect on July 1.

Commissioners on Tuesday adopted a building inspection ordinance designed to enforce the N.C. State Building Code throughout the county. Under state law, Pitt is required to begin a building inspection program on July 1.

The fees set yesterday, designed to make the inspections program self-supporting, include $2 per $1,000 value for building inspections, $20 per house for insulation inspections (when done separately from a building inspection), $2.50 per fixture for plumbing inspection, $10 per unit for heating and air-conditioning, and $20 per unit for mobile home set up and installation.

The board also revised the present electrical inspection fee schedule — increasing the range of fees now charged by from 33 percent to 100 percent.

Under the inspection ordinance, building permits are required for construction of new buildings; reconstruction, alteration, repair, moving or demolition of existing buildings; mobile home set up and installation; the installation of signs, marquees and awnings; and when the use of an existing building is changed.

Inspections are required for general and residential construction, plumbing, heating and air conditioning, electrical and mobile homes and modular housing in unincorporated areas of the county, excluding the extraterritorial jurisdiction of Greenville, Ayden, Farmville, Winterville and Grifton.

Excluded from the provisions of the ordinance is construction of nonresidential farm buildings (but not from the electrical code), prefabricated buildings or preassembled outside storage buildings (less than 500 square feet) (but not any wiring, plumbing or mechanical systems installed), and nonstructural repairs or alterations not to exceed $1,000 in value.

In addition to adopting the building permit/fee schedule, Commissioners continued their review of the proposed 1981-82 budget.

The board tentatively approved a cut of almost $100,000 in funds for the Department of Social Services — primarily in the area of grants for Medicaid, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, and other programs.

Also given tentative approval was a reduction in funds for rescue squads in the county.

County Manager Reginald Gray had recommended $4,235 for rescue squads having two trucks and $3,046 for squads with one truck — a 10 percent increase over what was budgeted for the 1980-81 fiscal year. Commissioners tentatively approved $4,000 for two-truck squads and $2,895 for one-truck units.

As recommended, Greenville would have received $36,788 for its rescue operation. Commissioners tentatively cut that amount to $34,775.

The board has scheduled a meeting for 10 a.m. Monday to continue its work on the 1981-82 budget.

Couple Speaks Vows

WASHINGTON — Vicki Shannon Alligood and Richard Charles Belthoff Jr. were united in marriage Saturday, June 13, at 3 p.m. in the Old Ford Church of Christ here. The Rev. Lewis Styons was the officiating minister of the double ring ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Michael Finney and Mr. Dalton Alligood of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Belthoff of Dover, N.J.

A program of traditional wedding music was presented by Mrs. Joyce Harris, organist, and Preston Phillips, soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her stepfather, Michael Finney, wore a formal gown of white silk organza designed with a fitted bodice, sheer yoke and high neckline which was encircled with Venise lace. The bishop sleeves were styled with lace cuffs. The semi-full skirt, with a flowered hemline, extended into a chapel train. Her cathedral length mantilla was edged in lace and attached to a lace bandeau. She carried a bouquet of white roses and carnations with baby's breath and white lace streamers.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was her sister, Dawn Alligood. Bridesmaids were Janet Campbell, Jennifer Leggett and Carole Tigchelarr.

Larry Polanski was best man and ushers included Jimmy Belthoff, John Belthoff and Jimmy Campbell.

Mrs. Lynn Woolard was the mistress of ceremonies and Susan Morgan presided at the bridal register.

The bride is a graduate of Washington High School and East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Morris Knolls High School and ECU. He will enter the UNC-School of Law, Chapel Hill, in the fall.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the Holiday Inn, Washington.

Program Held By Council

Withia Council No. 42, Degree of Pocahontas held its meeting Tuesday evening. The Fourth of July — Patriotism was the program theme and was given by Maycie Culbreth for Margaret Parker.

Thelma Vincent extended an invitation to all members to attend a covered-dish lunch and supper at her cottage at the river Sunday, July 5. Family members are also invited.

The Audit Committee will meet July 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Marie Stocks and members of the committee are Sally Vainright, chairman, Marga Ross and Ms. Stocks.

Pocahontas Pennie Dunn gave details of a fund raising event for the Association for Retarded Citizens of Pitt County.

The July fund raising committee includes Margaret Parker, Alice Culbreth and Estelle Tucker. Alice Culbreth will give the July 14 program and meeting hostesses will be Lillie Randolph and Mildred Merrill.

Summer Sunburn Warning

NEW YORK (UPI) — Parents tend to forget children are exposed to the sun all summer long, not just for two weeks a year at the beach, says Robert M. Sayre, a photobiology researcher.

Sayre says prevention of accumulated exposure requires daily skin care, beginning in childhood, to avoid premature aging and skin problems in later years.

In a speech at a recent science seminar in New York City, he said:

"Children are out in the sun much more than adults ... children may spend 100 days or more (per year) in the sun. Probably they are accumulating three to 10 times more exposure per year than they will have as adults."

"We must all try to educate our children that accumulated sun exposure is not beneficial," Sayre said. "Sun-damaged skin looks old. The greatest chance of reducing accumulated sun damage must be through good skin care in the sun begun as early as possible."

"Faces, ears, arms and hands require more protection," he said, because they are always in the sun and tend to show aging changes due to sun exposure earlier and to a greater extent.

"We need a new strategy of skin care in the sun, one which involves the daily use of a sunscreen," he said. "Until now all scientists have been in agreement that 'sunburn' is bad."

"Today, we still need to prevent sunburn, but to attain the goals of reducing skin cancer and delaying aging changes, means that every little bit of unprotected exposure counts. It all adds up. Our skin remembers."

Until now, no one was especially concerned about exposures that didn't produce a sunburn, he said.

"Big deal, my 30 minutes in the sun today really did nothing," some people say. I am here to tell you that that is not true," Sayre said.

"... our two weeks at the beach appear to represent no more than one-third of our yearly exposure. Reducing that fraction through the use of sunscreens during our vacation has to help. But during our normal, daily activities, we are still accumulating over two-thirds of the original annual exposure."

Sayre is director of the Coppertone Solar Research Laboratory in Memphis, Tenn.

Dear Abby

Boss's Wife Searches Desk

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A secretary recently wrote to say that while her boss was out of town, his wife came into his office and searched his desk. She asked if she should tell her boss about it. You replied: "I wouldn't."

What a fascinating answer! I assume you gave that response because the person who did the searching was the boss's wife. This leads to my questions:

If it were the man's mother, should the secretary have told him? What if it were his 25-year-old daughter? His 17-year-old daughter? Two men who claimed to be CIA agents, but flashed their IDs so fast the secretary couldn't read them? The boss's wife, legally separated?

I'd really like to know your thought process!

JOHN C. IN PASADENA

DEAR JOHN: The secretary asked me if I would have told the boss and I replied, "I wouldn't." My reasoning: I would not want to be responsible for the marital brouhaha that might ensue. Had the boss's privacy been violated by someone other than his wife, I would have had no hesitation about informing my boss. Was my answer correct? Not necessarily. But it was honest.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old girl, engaged to be married. My fiancé and I went for our blood tests and mine came back positive for syphilis. Abby, I knew something had to be terribly wrong because the only person I've ever been with in my life is my fiancé, so if I have syphilis I would have had to get it from him. But his tests came back negative! Abby, if I have syphilis, how come he doesn't have it, too?

We both took our blood tests over, thinking there might have been a mix-up at the lab, but mine came back positive again, and his came back negative.

How can this be? Help me, please.

A Trend Is Possible

Arguments and pleadings heard at this week's Pitt County budget hearings re-raise a question that has lurked in the back of our editorial mind for a number of years. Namely, that of poorly defined roles of governmental responsibility shared by communities and their county.

Equitable division of funds and services are the logical aspirations; but it becomes a terrible headache for all sides when communities attempt a role of self-sufficiency, or something approaching that.

One becomes very conscious of conflicting interests and ambitions and resources . . . the desperation evident on all sides . . . in attempting to serve the public as well and as practicably as possible.

(And, we might interject, the citizenry of a county's communities and its rural areas are as responsible as any other component for the incipient rivalry inherent in the system.)

We are aware of some counties in the nation who have been delegated full responsibility for the services and filling needs of all urban areas and communities within their respective boundaries. It seems to work, though it might not work for all; but we sense a trend in that direction.

It is a concept posing a different breed of problems for all concerned. It is possible this different course might well be the ultimate answer.

Strength Differences Exist

The question of whether women may be required to register and subsequently be drafted into military services has been decided by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The court ruled in a 6-3 decision that women can be excluded from the draft.

The decision won't suit all — it didn't follow the thinking of three members of the court — but at least the decision has been made.

Some will see it as discriminatory, but if the drafting of women were approved and they were subsequently excluded from combat duty, that, too, could be seen as a non-equal treatment of women.

The fact remains that Congress, if it does authorize a draft, will be doing so to provide combat ready defensive forces for our nation. If the enemy we may face has an army made up totally of men, then ours would need to be, too. Women perform well in almost every role of our modern day life, but when it comes to physical strength we must recognize there are differences.

Begin Faces A Backfire

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Self-inflicted damage following the destruction of Iraq's nuclear reactor has personified Prime Minister Menachem Begin as a potential threat to Israel's indispensable relationship with the Reagan administration, arousing anguish among Israel's strongest U.S. backers.

An additional irony for Begin is that astute diplomacy by U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick has now put the U.S. and Iraq in tandem, a defeat for Begin's strategy of keeping the U.S. and the Arab world split.

The anguish about Begin was typified by an unlikely source when Sen. Paul Tsongas told State Department officials testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week that "a distinction" must now be made between Begin and Israel. Tsongas has a 100 percent pro-Israel voting record.

The anti-Begin backfire is raising for Israel the specter of partial separation from the U.S., its only benefactor. Even before the prime minister's perfectly executed order to destroy Baghdad's nuclear facility, President Reagan privately expressed contempt for Begin's attack on West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt last April. The invariably polite Ronald Reagan found Begin's language unbecoming a head of state.

Far more harmful are Begin's unproven justifications for the raid, undermining Israel's credibility in the Reagan administration. His government's formal explanation of the raid asserted that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had said the reactor "was being built against Israel alone." A full retraction had to be made. The formal government statement said that "no foreign expert was hurt" in the raid, another provable misstatement.

Begin then zeroed in on Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, one of Reagan's closest friends in the administration. Within hours of Weinberger's persuasive argument at the secret June 10 National Security Council meeting for a strong American response to the raid, Begin had been informed. The spectacle of a foreign leader attacking one of Reagan's Cabinet chiefs for advising the president at an NSC meeting did not set well in Reagan's White House.

Behind the scenes, Ambassador Kirkpatrick was pulling off her diplomatic feat: persuading Iraq to tone down its Security Council resolution to a level acceptable to the U.S. The unwitting catalyst of that achievement for both the U.S. and Iraq (which has long desired closer relations with Washington) was Menachem Begin himself.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick could not have pulled off her coup without preliminary groundwork by two of the closest friends the U.S. has in the Arab world: Saudi Arabia and Egypt. President Anwar Sadat, cut out of the Arab community ever since the Camp David accords, privately encouraged the Saudis immediately after the Israeli raid to send this message to Iraq's Saddam Hussein: Go easy on the U.S. and Ronald Reagan. They argued that Israel's offense should be exploited to tighten, not weaken U.S.-Arab links. The Saudis had similar hopes.

When the Arab foreign ministers met in Baghdad following the raid, Saddam Hussein was impressed by the arguments of Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud. Saud warned that in the aftermath of the raid Begin would use the expected harsh anti-U.S. Iraqi reaction to further weaken Iraq's standing in this country. Don't let that happen, Saud argued; exploit Begin's exposed position to strengthen the U.S.-Iraqi link.

Other Arab leaders sang the same song. If Iraq accepted the veiled Israeli implications tying the U.S. into the raid, and blamed the Reagan administration, the

State Hiring Lid

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Since 1975, State Rep. John Jordan has been trying to put a lid on out-of-control state government hiring which has increased far more rapidly than the state's population growth.

This year, while most eyes have been riveted on the gas tax battle in the General Assembly, Jordan's simple proposal has sailed through the House of Representatives and continues to show signs of life in the Senate.

"The nut of this law is: total numbers of state employees could not be increased in a given year by more than an average rate of population growth in the preceding 10 years.

Those who keep close tabs on state government readily understand why a limit on employee growth is essential. About 80 cents of every dollar spent goes directly for personnel costs: salaries, fringe benefits, personnel administration and such. And a good portion of the rest goes for work space, transportation, supplies and equipment to satisfy the needs of those employed.

Jordan did his homework before introducing the proposal.

The Figures

This year there are 180,216 state employees being paid salaries and fringes averaging $15,512 for a total payroll of $2.8 billion.

Ten years ago there were 128,802 with average earnings of $7,703 for a total payroll of just under a billion.

Numbers of employees increased 40 percent; salaries increased 101.4 percent, and total payroll increased 181.8 percent in the decade.

Population increased only 16.2 percent.

BILL NOBLITT

If growth continues unchecked for the next 10 years, Jordan figures, there will be more than a quarter of a million state employees averaging $31,246 per year making a total payroll of nearly $8 billion.

Jordan's proposal doesn't stop growth, but it does slow it down.

If limited to the population growth rate, state employment would be 209,411 in 10 years. Salaries would be the same ($31,246) but the total payroll would be held to $6.5 billion for a savings of $1.3 billion in that year.

Surprisingly, Jordan has not found the leadership of state employee and teacher organizations fighting his proposal. The reason, he says, is simple: They understand that such rapid growth in numbers of state employees and the corresponding dollar drain which that creates makes it increasingly harder to get legislative approval of salary and fringe benefit increases for the people already on the payroll.

(Wilson Daily Times)

A recent news report stated the average price of a single-family home has risen to $84,000 nationwide, and that 97 percent of would-be homebuyers were eliminated because of their inability to meet the requirements for such a large investment.

It is startling to realize that only 3 percent of potential homebuyers can afford to build a new home today.

Herman Smith, president of the National Association of Home Builders, says this country needs a policy at the very highest level of government to plan for the housing needs of the 1980s.

He says such a policy should be similar to those for energy, defense and technological advance. But he says there is no policy.

Smith says President Reagan has agreed to a housing policy commission, but that commission and commitment are two different things and that acres of empty lots and millions of would-be homebuyers stand between the two.

Smith is concerned that there is no concerted effort by homebuyers to make an issue of the housing situation such as the popular involvement that made the consumer movement an agent of change. But he foresees an organized effort in the future.

The young adult generation is becoming a deprived group. The American dream of owning a home became a reality for millions of young-marrieds before inflation became a major factor in our lives.

"Housing at the Turning Point" is a booklet put out by Home Builders. It says that more than 16 million households will be formed during the 10-year period ending Dec. 31, 1989, an increase of 25 percent over the number of households created in the previous decade.

The booklet also states that more than 41 million people will turn 30 in the '80s, creating an unprecedented increase in the number of first-time buyers entering the housing market.

They represent elements of constituency and events may force them into activism.

In the past, the housing industry had a sizable impact on the nation's economy, but with ever-escalating costs for borrowing, it has fallen on hard times and many workers have been laid off in the industry. It would seem the Reagan administration would have to take action to help get the housing market back on solid footing again.

"That's reasonable. Can we charge it to our credit card?"

"Why?"
"Well, if you made it on a Saturday or Sunday, we could give you our special tourist weekend rate of $5,000 per plane, though you would have to return them on Monday morning."

There is a solution. Instead of selling our equipment to every ally that asks for it, we could rent the hardware on a daily or weekly basis. Working with Hertz, Avis and other leasing companies, we could set up booths at air, naval and Army bases where all our military hardware would be kept.

Pretty women officers in attractive uniforms would be behind the counters.

This is how it would work: A foreign general and his staff would come the counter and say, "We'd like to rent five F-16s for a pre-emptive strike on our archenemy, Balantaria."

"That's no problem. I assume you want them fully equipped with rockets, bombs and gas."

"I certainly do."

"Well, that's included in the price of the rental. But if you have to re-arm and

The Benefits From Inflation

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — While it is customary to wring hands when the Bureau of Labor Statistics announces another rise in consumer inflation, that reaction is often inappropriate. Some people should clap instead.

Based on the latest report of the consumer price index, the clappers might include some homeowners and homebuyers, retirees, and people with money to lend, all of whom conceivably could have benefited.

Which is to say that the consumer price index, specific and detailed though it be, is a very broad generalization that applies to people in various ways, and sometimes doesn't apply to certain people at all.

The latest increase, a seven-tenths of 1 percent rise in May, resulted mainly from rises in housing costs — prices, rents and mortgages. Did this add to your living costs? Most likely not. Seventy percent of all U.S. households are homeowners.

Most have fixed-interest mortgages.

Many homesellers didn't really mind either, even if high-interest mortgages were said to depress homebuying. Having accumulated big equities in their houses, they were willing to grant the buyer a first mortgage at lower rates. To offset this, they raised the selling price.

Some retirees have indeed been hurt by inflation, but many haven't. Some have benefited. Who? The homeowner, for one. The Social Security beneficiary for another. Remember, their cost of living raises are based on the consumer price index, even if their expenses may not be.

Lenders, of course, have been in an enviable position recently, since interest rates they earn often exceed the inflation rate. It's hard to believe they were offended by higher interest rates in the CPI.

Yes, there's another side to the CPI. In general, we hate inflation because it is disruptive, usually leads to economic decline, and unjustly takes from some and hands to others. But as recipients, it is hard to turn down the benefits. It's easier to just feel guilty.

Robert Parry, chief economist of California's Security Pacific Bank, said he often observes the mixed feelings at cocktail parties. The first thing people comment on is the terrible inflation, he said. Then, he said, they tell you how much their house has risen in value.

Besides the outright beneficiaries of inflation, there are those who are affected much less than others.

Not everyone buys a house each month. Very, very few, in fact. And most buyers already own a house and therefore are likely to have substantial equity. Still, rising prices and mortgage rates weigh very heavily in the CPI, and suggest that things are worse than they are.

The list of exceptions can go on an on. Smart shoppers have always avoided buying when certain products, such as vegetables and fruits, are at their seasonal highs. Southerners pay less to heat their homes than do Northerners. People who who lower thermostats at night save fuel. Millions of Americans save by lowering lifestyles in minor ways: keeping the car another year, walking instead of riding, vacationing nearer home, eating out less often, substituting pasta for red meat.

Individually, these exceptions aren't reasons for cheering and clapping, because they are based mainly on denial.

But among homeowners especially, it's hard to believe they were very discouraged to read that the CPI rose in May chiefly because of rises in the market prices of homes.

In the privacy of their homes they probably lifted a cocktail to dull their feelings of guilt. They might even have clapped.

Jordan's proposal fits right in with Gov. Jim Hunt's budget proposals for the coming years. The governor has also recognized the need to trim employment and for the first time has brought hiring below the annual population growth line.

Cutback
If 16.2 percent population growth in the past decade is the benchmark, that would allow growth in jobs of 1.62 percent in a given year. From 1970 to 1977, jobs increased at the annual rate of 3.8 percent. In 1978 this dropped to 3.2 percent; the 3.1 percent and then to 2.5 percent in 1980. This year, job growth was down to less than one percent, and the proposal for next fiscal year is to actually trim jobs by three-tenths of one percent. In 1983 there would be a growth of only seven-tenths of one percent in new jobs.
Just how critical is this effort to cap employment growth? Jordan thinks it just may be one of the most important legislative actions in this century in North Carolina; putting it on a level with the state law which requires that the state budget be always in balance so that deficit spending is outlawed. That measure is widely regarded by experts as the very foundation of the state's ability to attract economic growth and development while meeting public service obligations.

It was Ambassador Kirkpatrick's unenviable assignment to sit for long hours with the Iraqi foreign minister and hammer out the compromise. Behind the scenes, she had sympathy and support from some leaders of the American-Jewish community who know that long-term U.S. relations in the Arab world can make or break President Reagan's attempt to build an American-Arab regional defense system for the Persian Gulf.
In succeeding, Mrs. Kirkpatrick not only preserved but actually strengthened those relations. Her success notified Prime Minister Begin that Reagan's fidelity to Israel can not be used to subvert the infinitely higher consideration of America's own national security.

Hazardous Waste Bill Adopted By N.C. Assembly

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Obtaining an increase in the state gasoline tax was not the only battle that Gov. Jim Hunt won Thursday. Also enacted was his bill to set up a 15-member board for regulating the disposal of hazardous and low-level radioactive wastes in North Carolina.

The state Senate voted 35-8 to concur with House amendments in the bill, thus enacting the measure.

Hunt has pushed strongly for the bill, which incorporates recommendations from his task force on hazardous wastes. It will give him authority to override local ordinances and regulations in selecting a disposal site.

That decision could be challenged in the state Court of Appeals.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, restated his opposition to a state plan.

"I would much rather pay money to send it (hazardous and low-level radioactive wastes) to other places," Rauch said.

North Carolina, the nation's fourth-largest generator of low-level radioactivity and 11th-largest generator of hazardous waste, has been shipping much of its waste to South Carolina and Alabama.

Supporters of the bill say that alternative is no longer feasible and the state must set up a system for handling its wastes.

The bill leaves the 15-member board wide discretion in setting up regulations for disposing of the wastes.

But the new law does specify that above-ground storage, recycling and reducing of waste are preferred to burial of the substances.

In other legislative action:

Sales Tax

A proposal that would allow counties to increase their sales tax was approved by a legislative committee.

The House Finance Committee, voting by voice, approved the measure that would allow counties to raise their local-option sales tax from 1 percent to 2 percent while a Senate committee recommended an increase in the maximum interest rate on credit-card purchases.

The sales-tax bill now goes to the House floor, and committee chairman Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, predicted a floor vote on Friday.

The state now levies a 3 percent sales tax, and that would not be changed by the bill. All of North Carolina's counties except one — Burke County — currently levy a 1 percent local-option sales tax.

The committee's bill would allow county commissioners to raise their local sales tax, making the overall state and local sales tax 5 percent in their counties.

No Violations By Green Seen

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green violated no criminal law in accepting a cash give of $4,774 from a paving company executive, Wake District Attorney J. Randolph Riley said Thursday.

Riley and Lee J. Greer, the district attorney for Bladen County, where Green resides, issued a joint statement clearing Green after reviewing a State Bureau of Investigation report of the 1977 incident.

"No criminal offenses appear to have been committed in the incident and therefore no criminal charges are appropriate," the statement said.

A former official for Crowell Constructors Inc. of Fayetteville had told investigators that the company had paved a parking lot at the Jimmy Green Brightleaf Warehouse in Clarkton, billing the warehouse for about $4,800 — or half the cost of the job.

Company president William W. Crowell later returned the money to Green in cash, a fact which Green has acknowledged to state officials.

The statement continues, "There is no evidence of Mr. Green having made any promises in exchange for the gift, either before or after its receipt."

Green declined to answer any questions about the investigation Thursday. But a spokesman said Green would hold a news conference today. If held, it would be Green's first public comment on the allegations since the news of the SBI probe became public June 1.

Greer said he agreed with the recommendation to clear Green of any wrongdoing, after his own contacts turned up no incriminating evidence.

"We also contacted every member of the Board of Transportation who was in office at the time, except one member who is dead, and every member of the present board, and could find no indication that there was any pressure of any kind for decision favorable to Crowell," he said.

Riley said it would be necessary to prove "corrupt intent" to obtain a conviction for bribery in the case, adding that there was no evidence that was the case.

Riley said Green gave no explanation for why he accepted the gift.

The accusation that touched off the investigation came from former Crowell Constructors executive Wilbur Dees, who pleaded guilty to charges of rigging bids on state road projects and served a 60-day prison sentence.

Sees Inequality In Opportunity

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Women still lack equal opportunities in the nation's largest U.S. Protestant body, the Southern Baptists, says Christine Gregory, president of the Women's Missionary Union, a denominational auxiliary.

"Women still are not given proportionate opportunities to use their God-given gifts to edify the body of Christ," she says. "Either women are pushed down by false teachers or they are not being challenged to use their abilities in the denomination."

School Bond

In another action, the committee voted not to take any action in the current legislative session on a proposed $600 million bond issue for education. The committee made the decision without debate on the recommendation of a subcommittee headed by Rep. Thomas Ellis, D-Vance.

Credit Cards

The Senate Banking Committee voted 7-3 to send the full Senate a bill allowing banks and stores to raise the interest rates they charge on credit cards from 18 percent to 21 percent a year.

Lobbyists for banks and merchants have strongly pushed the bill, arguing that they are losing money on credit operations under the current limits. Although the North Carolina law sets only a maximum limit, banking officials say the know of no institution that charges less than the maximum on credit cards.

Earlier this year, the General Assembly enacted higher limits on most other types of consumer loans. The latest bill would cover bank-issued cards, such as Visa and Mastercard, and credit cards issued by retail stores.

Pornography

Supporters of a bill that would do away with prior adversary hearings to determine obscenity in certain cases created quite a stir in a legislative committee.

The bill would repeal the current law dealing with prior hearings to determine the obscenity of certain materials and allow for immediate prosecution if the materials fell into eight categories listed in the bill that are consider blatantly obscene.

Capt. Larry Horton of the Gaston County Sheriff's Department spoke out in favor of the bill, and then attempted to show a pornographic film to the House Judiciary 1 Committee. But Reps. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, and Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, objected to the showing of the film and the committee agreed.

Ann Frazier spoke in favor of the bill, saying it would help "to rid North Carolina of an engulfing flood tide of filth."

"You may argue that we cannot legislate morals," she told the committee. "But there are laws against murder, theft, even unfair political campaigning. We can't make people angels, but we can make it harder for them to be utterly vicious."

Bill Phillips, assistant secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said department secretary Burley Mitchell and Gov. Jim Hunt support the bill.

Action on the bill was delayed until opponents of the bill speak to the committee next week.

Bid Rigging

The Senate approved a bill to make bid rigging a felony after narrowly rejecting an amendment that would have made it illegal for elected officials who can influence the bidding process to accept gifts from contractors or suppliers.

The action follows an acknowledgement by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green that he accepted a cash gift of about $4,775 from a paving contractor in 1977. Wake District Attorney Randolph Riley has said Green's actions apparently did not violate state laws and he will not be charged with a criminal offense.

The bid-rigging bill now returns to the House for concurrence in Senate amendments. Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, introduced the bill, which would make it a felony to conspire to rig bids. The felony would be punishable by a presumed sentence of three years and a maximum fine of $100,000 for an individual or $1 million for a corporation.

The bill also provides for removing convicted companies from bidding on future projects and suspending the license of convicted individuals.

Rules of the Senate were suspended to allow Sen. Walter Cockerham, R-Guilford, to introduce once again an amendment making it illegal for elected officials to accept gifts in exchange for bidding information. The amendment was rejected 24-23.

Credit Life

The Senate approved a bill that would ban the sale of level-term credit life insurance after Oct. 1, 1982. Finance companies sell the life insurance to cover payment of a loan in the event of death or illness. With level term the amount of insurance stays the same for the period of the loan and usually costs more than decreasing term insurance, in which the amount decreases with the amount of the loan. From the effective date of Oct. 1, 1981, the sale of any level-term insurance would be reduced from $1.50 per $100 a year to $1.35.

The bill now goes to the House for concurrence in a Senate amendment.

Jury Lists

The Senate gave tentative approval to a bill that would require municipalities to use driver's license lists, along with voter registration lists, to select juries. Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, said it would allow juries to be selected from more of a cross-section of a person's peers. He said voter registration list tend to be dominated by white males.

Haig 'Sorry And Angry' Over Kirkpatrick Flap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. returned to Washington early today from a two-week Pacific tour "sorry and disappointed" about two aides' reported criticism of United Nations Ambassador Jeane K. Kirkpatrick.

In his 27,000-mile trip to Hong Kong, China, the Philippines and New Zealand, Haig sought to fashion an Asian policy for the Reagan administration that includes closer relations to China, while strengthening ties with America's traditional friends and allies.

In China, he announced that the administration had cleared the way for the possibility of weapons sales to the communist government.

But Haig's return was overshadowed by newspaper reports quoting two of his top aides as saying the secretary was unhappy with Mrs. Kirkpatrick's handling of the U.N. resolution condemning Israel's bombing of a nuclear reactor in Iraq.

The aides' remarks, as reported in Wednesday's editions of The New York Times, were interpreted by some analysts as an attempt by the secretary to take credit for the U.N. resolution.

The resolution was widely regarded as a diplomatic triumph for the United States because it stopped short of demanding sanctions against Israel despite appeals from many nations that such action be taken.

Haig stopped in Los Angeles on the return trip Thursday to report to President Reagan. He acknowledged later to reporters that he had discussed the Kirkpatrick controversy with Reagan, but said the president was not upset by the furor.

"Look, we have a lot of serious business to do in the conduct of America's foreign policy," he told reporters. "These kinds of things happen as they have happened in the past. If we allow them to divert us from the serious business that we are about, I think we are not serving the American people and their interests properly and I'm not going to do it."

The Times story said Haig's aides were openly critical of Mrs. Kirkpatrick's handling of the U.N. resolution condemning Israel's bombing raid.

The aides were quoted as saying it was Haig's behind-the-scenes efforts which resulted in approval of a Security Council resolution that omitted all reference to the imposition of sanctions against Israel and was less critical of Israel in other ways than another resolution under consideration.

Asked if any actions were planned against the two aides, Dean Fischer and Richard Burt, Haig said, "I'm not taking any action against them other than to be very concerned that the situation came up."

Haig said he was "sorry and disappointed that it did because it doesn't reflect reality and that's frequently the case in such personality, speculative stories." He said his aides were either misinformed or were misinterpreted, declaring that Mrs. Kirkpatrick did a "superb job" on the Israel-Iraq issue.

Fischer is Haig's spokesman and Burt, a former Times reporter, is director of the State Department's political-military affairs bureau.

David Passage, a State Department spokesman in Washington, said there were factual errors in the Times story and that Mrs. Kirkpatrick's performance was "unusually skillful."

Reagan's aides said the president called Mrs. Kirkpatrick to assure her he believes her performance was "splendid."

In a telephone interview with the Times, Mrs. Kirkpatrick said from her vacation retreat in France that she had no differences with Haig on the U.N. resolution and that there was a "perfect consensus in the government from the outset."

Saudis Deny Oil Cutback

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Reports of a cutback in oil production by Saudi Arabia were denied today by "an authoritative official Saudi source," the Middle East Economic Survey reported.

The oil journal, which has very close links with the Saudi Oil Ministry, quoted its unidentified source as saying, "No decision has been taken to reduce the present level of production."

The Saudi denial was made in response to foreign reports that the Saudis had decided to make cuts because of a worldwide oil glut.

The Wall Street Journal reported Thursday, quoting unidentified oil industry officials in London, that the Saudis had decided to reduce output by nearly 450,000 barrels a day from the recent level of 10.3 million barrels a day.

Earlier this week, sources at the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna reported Saudi plans for a similar cut.

There has been no official comment from the Saudis, and an official of the Arabian American Oil Co., a consortium of four American companies that produces nearly all of Saudi Arabia's oil, said Thursday there had been no order to cut oil output.

The oil journal said confusion over Saudi intentions and the reports of a Saudi reduction in production apparently stem from the phasing out of "war relief" supplies — crude oil earmarked by Saudi Arabia for consumers on a temporary basis to compensate for the shortfall caused by the Iraq-Iran war, which broke out last September.

UNC Desegregation Plan Faces A Possible Snag

Area Youth Is Elected FFA President

RALEIGH — Marshall Stewart, son of the Rev. and Mrs. R.M. Stewart of Black Jack, was elected to the position of state president during the 53rd annual convention of the North Carolina Association of the Future Farmers of America (FFA) held recently.

Stewart is a 1981 graduate of Midway High School, but is a native of Pitt County, where he attended Chicod School for seven years. His parents returned to Black Jack to live recently.

MARSHALL STEWART

Selection of officers came during the final business session of the three-day convention which drew over 1,200 members, advisors and guests to Raleigh.

During the coming year, Marshall will spend approximately a fourth of his time representing the North Carolina FFA Association — attending chapter, federation and district activities. He will also represent the state association at regional and national meetings, beginning with the State President's Convention in Washington, D.C. in July.

Stewart plans to enter East Carolina University this fall in the general college program.

Candidates for state officer in the North Carolina FFA must hold the state FFA degree. They complete an application and are interviewed by a nominating committee which recommends a slate of officers to the convention delegates for election.

TUTORING PROGRAM

The tutoring program at the South Greenville Recreation Center will be in session until July 31 from 9:00 a.m. until 12 noon. Parents can schedule their children so that there will not be any conflict with their other activities. There are certified teachers who will work with children in kindergarten through sixth grade.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Justice Department attorneys balked Thursday at a provision in the University of North Carolina desegregation that would declare UNC in compliance with the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution prohibiting discrimination.

State and federal officials told the Greensboro Daily News Thursday night that objections to the provision cropped up within the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division. They said the objection threatened to scuttle the entire agreement.

U.S. Secretary of Education Terrel H. Bell announced the agreement last Saturday after the board of governors approved the contents of a 34-page consent decree to be filed with U.S. District Court Judge Franklin D. Dupree in Raleigh. He said the decree would settle the case, which has dragged on for a period of more than 5½ years. Bell said that both he and Attorney General William French Smith had reviewed and approved the consent decree.

But late Wednesday night, Justice Department lawyers informed UNC officials that a provision in the consent decree might have to be changed. Federal sources said the Justice Department lawyers opposed a finding that UNC would be deemed to be in compliance with Title VI of the 1964 Civil

Revival Services

Revival services will be held Monday through Friday at Simpson Chapel Church. Services begin at 8:00 p.m. nightly. Rev. W.J. Best will be the guest speaker for the week.

Different choirs will provide music for the revival. Monday night, the Phillip Male Chorus of Simpson will be in charge. Music will be performed by Nazarine Church of Christ of Greenville Tuesday night. Wednesday, singers will be the New Shivers Senior Choir of Greenville. Thursday's choir will be the Queen Chapel Choir of Vanceboro. The music will be provided by the W.J. Best Traveling Choir Friday night.

Rev. Matthew Best invites the public to attend.

REHEARSAL

Rock Spring Choir No. 2 will have rehearsal Saturday at the church at 5:00 p.m. All members should be present and on time, according to President Mary L. Taft.

JOY NIGHT

Rev. A.J. Clark will speak at Allen Chapel Church Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Pastor Jasper Tyson invites the public to attend this Joy Night Service.

KILLED 40 REBELS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Government troops killed 40 guerrillas in an attack on a battlefield hospital run by leftist rebels, an army officer reported Thursday.

Rights Act and with the 14th Amendment to the Constitution — both of which prohibit discrimination and which have been used to integrate public schools and universities in the South.

But the finding of compliance was a major point pushed by UNC in its long negotiations with the federal government. "It was virtually a nonnegotiable item," said one state official.

Federal sources said that Bell was dismayed by the potential change of heart by the Justice Department and was embarrassed because he had given his word to Friday that it had been accepted.

One source told the Daily News, "It would have been nice if they had caught this thing before the secretary had announced it. This puts the secretary in a hell of a position."

The Justice Department objections were based on fears that other states with pending desegregation cases would seek the same findings, a precedent they did not wish to set.

Earlier Thursday, U.S.

Condition Still 'Guarded'

Mrs. Arlene Rhodes Collins of Greenville was still in "guarded" condition today at Pitt Memorial Hospital from injuries she received in a collision at the intersection of Charles Street and Red Banks Road Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Collins was the driver of a car involved in a collision with a truck about 3:30 p.m.

Her daughter, 10-year-old Dana Collins, and a 10-year-old neighbor child, Luann Baker, both passengers in the Collins car, died instantly of injuries received in the crash.

Police Department spokesmen late this morning said investigation of the fatal mishap is continuing.

The driver of the truck, Alphonso Linwood Cogdell of Vanceboro, received minor injuries.

WORSHIP SERVICE

There will be worship services at Mills Chapel FWB Sunday morning at 11:00. Pastor Elder J.L. Swinson will be the speaker. The public is invited to attend.

EAC MEETING

The Environmental Advisory Commission will meet Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. in the first floor conference room at city hall.

District Judge John H. Pratt of Washington, D.C. refused to accept jurisdiction in the case, and referred attorneys for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund to U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

Attorney Elliott C. Lichtman had argued that the decree ignored the criteria established by Pratt in 1977 for desegregating the system as well as universities in five other states.

Pratt, however, accepted the reasoning of Justice Department lawyer Robert Bombaugh, who said jurisdiction rested in North Carolina because the fund suit was filed against the Department of Education.

Bombaugh said if Bell finally approves the consent decree — a move expected Monday — the fund lawyers could still argue their case before the federal court in Raleigh.

But Joseph L. Rauh Jr., also representing the fund, said it has not been decided whether the next effort to block the decree will be made in the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington or in North Carolina.

UNC President William C. Friday said late Thursday that he assumed that the attorney general and Bell were standing by their agreement. "I stand ready to go with Mr. Smith to call on Judge Dupree any time he wishes," he said.

Meanwhile, top civil rights officials in the Ford and Carter administrations say the settlement is illegal.

Former Health, Education and Welfare secretary Patricia Roberts Harris said the agreement allows "separate but unequal or semi-equal" campuses.

"You can't have separation based on race," she said.

"That's an outgrowth of slavery and against the 13th and 14th amendments."

David Tatel, head of the federal Office of Civil Rights under President Carter, said, "The government has accepted a plan that is illegal" and that "reads like a brief defending the status quo rather than a desegregation plan."

Utilities Reject....

is worse than the utilities. We're saying that at this point in time the city needs help to get back where it should be.

"I don't believe you are violating your trust to help get the city pulled up a little bit."

The requested $300,000, McGlohon pointed out, would be about 4 cents on the tax rate for the coming year. "We hope the (present) rate will go down 35 to 40 percent," he said. But "I personally am committed to get the tax rate as high as we can get it this year," in order to get the city on a sound financial footing.

Prescott noted that the GUC rates are "in the top 20 percent" in the nation because of the high cost of power, while Greenville's ad valorem tax rate is "in the bottom 20 percent," nation-wide. "We're courting a major disaster if we give more funds to them at this time," Prescott emphasized.

"It's been apparent for some time that a 20 percent increase in taxes would not balance your budget," Prescott said to the mayor and city manager.

"The fact is," McGlohon said, "we've got two choices ... get this assistance from this body, or go back and start reducing and cutting out. It's not reasonable to go up 23 percent," in taxes.

Wyatt noted that 6 percent — the amount of turnover already approved by the Utilities Commission — "is a very modest amount." "The bottom line," he continued, "is personnel and what's going to be done in assistance to them," if the turnover is not increased for the coming fiscal year. About 67 percent of the city's budget is involved in personnel costs, he explained.

"Why is 23 percent (tax increase) so uncomprehensible," Commission member Margaret Worth asked.

McGlohon answered that historically tax rates are reduced during revaluation years. If the council raised the tax rate 23 percent, property owners would be paying more taxes. "That's the main reason ... you have to do it a little bit slower."

Following further discussion, Prescott moved that the turnover remain "as is at this time." A substitute motion by Wyatt to increase the turnover by $300,000 died for lack of a second and Prescott's motion was approved. Wyatt and Commission member Richard Powell voted against Prescott's motion.

Under the present 6 percent turnover formula, the city will receive some $1.15 million from the Utilities Commission during the 1981-82 fiscal year. Greenville will also receive between $950,000 and $975,000 in franchise tax collected by the state from utility power suppliers but ultimately paid for by GUC customers.

At a June 12 meeting, when the commission initially rejected the city's request for an additional $300,000, Prescott presented figures, based on the life expectancy of utility vehicles, equipment, poles, transformers and other items, which indicated that $2.7 million to $2.8 million should be spent on annual replacement. "These are reasonable guidelines," Prescott noted.

"If we expect to avoid major crises ... we must maintain an orderly and consistent program of updating exhausting assets."

The City Council, Prescott added, is "between a rock and a hard place" and in order to turn over more funds to the city, the commission would have to "delay some things" which would have to be caught up in a subsequent year. Such delays, he suggested, would place the Utilities Commission "in the same position" the city is in.

Atlanta Checking The Associates Of Accused

ATLANTA (AP) — Associates of the man charged with murdering one of 28 slain young blacks are being checked by authorities to see whether they knew anything about the killings, officials say.

But the officials, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press Thursday individuals close to Wayne B. Williams are not being investigated as accomplices in a crime.

Williams, a 23-year-old black free-lance photographer, is being held in an isolation cell at the Fulton County jail awaiting grand jury action on a charge of murder in the slaying of 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater.

Cater, the most recent victim on a list of 28 slayings under investigation by a special police task force, was strangled. His nude body was found in the Chattahoochee River last month.

One official close to the probe said authorities are investigating the possibility that "one or more people" close to Williams were "accessories after the fact" — someone who learned Williams might have been responsible for a crime but did not tell authorities.

That official, who asked that his name not be used, said that aspect of the investigation is based more on the suspicions of officials and on "common sense" rather than on evidence.

Atlanta police, meanwhile, withdrew Thursday from Williams' northwest Atlanta home, where he lives with his parents. Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said Wednesday police were at the home to provide protection for Williams' parents at their request.

Williams is the only person charged in any of the 28 killings that began almost two years ago. He was arrested Sunday after an investigation that began when he was spotted May 22 on a bridge over the Chattahoochee River.

Authorities, aware that five of the 27 victims at the time had been found in the river, were staking out the bridge when one of the officers heard a splash and spotted Williams driving slowly across the span.

Two days later, Cater's body was found in the river about a mile downstream from the bridge.

At a preliminary hearing this week, both of the stakeout team members who testified said they did not see Williams throw anything into the water and did not see his car stop on the bridge.

Williams was questioned the night of the bridge incident and then released. Authorities placed him under surveillance several days later, and, on June 3, he was brought in for 12 hours of questioning at local FBI headquarters but was released without being charged.

After his arrest Sunday, a State Court magistrate ordered him turned over to the grand jury after hearing testimony about the bridge incident and about microscopic comparisons between fibers found on Cater's body and fibers taken from Williams' home.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

"LET'S GO HUNTING!"

IN TODAY'S LANGUAGE THAT PHRASE BRINGS TO MIND A PLEASANT DAY IN THE FIELDS WITH A GOOD DOG, THE TAKING OF A PHEASANT OR TWO—FINE SPORT! NOT SO, IN BIBLICAL TIMES! TOO OFTEN, IT WAS A CALL TO THE UNPLEASANT DUTY OF RIDDING THE COUNTRYSIDE OF SOME BEAST OF PREY—USUALLY THE FEROCIOUS LION! THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE CONTAIN MANY REFERENCES TO THE LION AND, ALTHOUGH HARDLY A ONE CAN BE FOUND TODAY IN WHAT IS TERMED THE BIBLE LANDS, THE AREA ABOUNDED WITH THEM IN THOSE TIMES.

THIS DUTY USUALLY FELL TO ROYALTY AND THE UPPER CLASSES BECAUSE THEY HAD HORSES AND CHARIOTS AND PLENTY OF SOLDIERS OR SERVANTS WHO WERE EXPERT WITH BOW AND ARROW. ALTHOUGH HORSE RACING HAS BEEN CALLED "THE SPORT OF KINGS," YOU MAY BE SURE THAT LION HUNTING EARNED THIS TITLE LONG BEFORE—EXCEPT, UNFORTUNATELY AT TIMES, IT WAS FAR FROM WHAT WE TODAY WOULD CALL SPORT!

The DeVeaux's To Be At Saint Paul

The DeVeaux's To Be At Saint Paul

The DeVeaux family will be presenting special music at the Saint Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church this Sunday evening in the 7:15 praise service. The blend of Mr. DeVeaux's instrumental talents with the inspirational singing of Mrs. DeVeaux will be a unique worship experience. Following the special music, Pastor Maurice Phelps will be bringing a message entitled "How To Confess Your Faith Without Telling A Lie". Prayer for the sick and needy will follow.

The public is cordially invited to join the congregation for a time of worship and fellowship. For further information, call Pastor Phelps at 756-9723.

Would Rest After 12 Years

By ED SCHAFFER
Associated Press Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Next month the Rev. Dr. Jacob A.O. Preus celebrates his 12th tumultuous year as president of the schism-ridden Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod. It'll also be his last.

"I'm tired and I want to rest," says Preus, who vowed prior to his election in 1969 to stem a trend toward liberalism in the second-largest Lutheran church in the U.S. "The church needs a president for the '80s and no longer for 1969."

As he leaves, however, the staunch defender of doctrine for the 2.7 million-member church says he feels more comfortable about the condition of the organization.

"In a position like this," he said in an interview, "you never fully accomplish what you set out to do. But the Missouri Synod will continue to be very concerned about doctrine."

The crunch came in 1974 when most of the faculty and students at Concordia Seminary in St. Louis left the school because Preus ordered an investigation into complaints that some professors were deviating from church doctrine.

The question then involved interpretation of the Bible. The moderates insisted that the historical-critical method be used, involving interpretation in light of linguistic, literary and historical evidence. Conservatives insisted on a literal interpretation of such stories as Jonah and the big fish and Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden.

"My greatest regret is that it was not at all necessary," said Preus in retrospect. "A lot of it was the times. The feeling of anti-institutionalism, individualism."

Claims Congress Can Curb Arms
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Baptist constitutional lawyer says the U.S. Constitution does not prohibit Congress from controlling the right to keep and bear arms.

James W. Baker, general counsel to the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, notes that his view runs contrary to that of the gun lobby.

He says the Second Amendment as originally drafted emphasized the relationship of the militia to the bearing of arms rather than guaranteeing every citizen the constitutional right to own and use guns, as maintained by the National Rifle Association.

The amendment reads: "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

JOY NIGHT
The Wells Chapel Church of God in Christ Church will observe a joy night service Sunday at 8 p.m.

Speaker will be Elder William Royster, alias "Little Wyoming Wells" of Chocowinity. The pastor and church invite the public.

alism. It seems to me that it was the mind-set of the leadership there that caused the problem. A lot of innocent people got hurt."

The then-president of the seminary, the Rev. Dr. John Tietjen, took the faculty majority and students and formed Seminary in Exile (Seminex). Eventually the group formed another church, Evangelical Lutherans in Mission (ELIM).

While the controversy was called "The Great Schism" and "The Split" outside the church, Preus tends to think of it as nothing more than a minor splintering.

He noted that about 100,000 members had left the church and most of that number has been regained in the ensuing years.

"Last year we registered a net gain in membership for the first time in a decade," he said.

But Preus, a stocky, gray-haired man with eyes that sparkle hazel in a jovial

See No Wave Anti-Semitism

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Jewish Congress says that while there is evidence of increased anti-Semitic violence and vandalism in the country, "claims of a 'wave' of anti-Semitism in any part of this country do not seem to be justified."

The congress says all social indices used to measure anti-Semitism point to its "low estate" in the U.S. "In all sectors of American life, anti-Semitism has become shabby, disreputable and abhorrent."

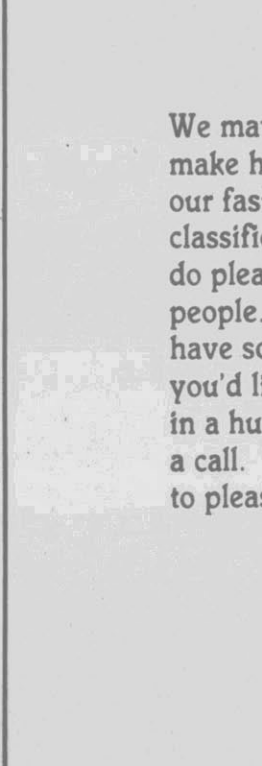

Joy Night Service
The Angelic Voices of Joy are sponsoring a Joy Night service Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Tabernacle of Victory on the Bethel Highway.

Guest singers will be the Brothers of Faith from the Raleigh-Durham area. There will also be a guest speaker from the Greenville area. Pastor Paul A. Thomas invites the public to attend.

QUARTERLY MEETINGS
Quarterly meetings will be held at Sycamore Hill Missionary Baptist Church on Sunday, beginning at 11 a.m.
The Rev. Howard W. Parker from Mocksville will be the speaker and holy communion will be served.
The public is invited to attend.

Following the special music, Pastor Maurice Phelps will be bringing a message entitled "How To Confess Your Faith Without Telling A Lie". Prayer for the sick and needy will follow.

The public is cordially invited to join the congregation for a time of worship and fellowship. For further information, call Pastor Phelps at 756-9723.

mood or snap steel-grey in a crisis, admits that the affair had a personal affect on him, resulting in high blood pressure and other ailments.

"I knew going in that it wouldn't be easy," he said. "But my views were widely known when I was elected president and my task was to maintain that position."

"I'm not by nature a particularly ruthless person. I never sat down and said 'How do we clean this up?' It was more as though I reacted to their actions. I would do it again, but I hope I would do it differently."

In spite of the anguish it has put him and others through, Preus said he believes the "tough years of 1973 through 1975" have made the church stronger.

"The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod has a much greater sense of identity. It knows now what it wants to be," he said. "It's solid. The troubled times have passed and I feel much better about things."

Preus, who said he has purchased "a place on a beautiful lake" in Arkansas and hopes to rest and relax, still intends to keep his hand in by teaching and translating German classics.

"But it's a good time to step down. I think the church feels the same way," he said. "I started out as a young man who wanted to serve God. I've been doing that for 35 or 36 years. In that time I've been honored above my talents and worthiness. I feel very good about things."

Even so, Preus has not let down his guard.

In recent articles, he has warned against electing a new president who may represent one or another of several political factions within the church.

"The president has to be his own man," he said. "His door should always be open, but not to just one group."

Plans No More Anthony Dollars

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are more Susan B. Anthony dollars on the shelves of the U.S. Mint than in the pockets of the public, and the government has no intention of making any more — no matter what size or shape — says the director-designate of the Mint.

Donna Pope, nominated by President Reagan to head the Mint, said Thursday that there are 300 million Anthony coins in circulation and 500 million stashed away.

"They certainly are well hidden. I never see any," said Senate Banking Committee Chairman Jake Garn, R-Utah, who conducted a one-senator confirmation hearing for Mrs. Pope.

Garn said he would like to see the Anthony dollar reissued in a more acceptable size and shape — one that "people won't confuse with a quarter."

He said he questioned the design of the coins before they were issued by the Carter administration and urged that a study be made to assess the acceptability of the coin.

"But it became a women's rights issue," Garn said. "Everybody was afraid to vote against it."

Mrs. Pope told Garn that because of budget and personnel cuts imposed by the administration, "any additional programs would put a burden on the Mint."

Garn let Mrs. Pope know the Mint might get at least one new project that he is supporting — a 1984 Olympic promotional coin.

Garn is co-sponsoring a bill under which the Mint would produce more than 50 million silver, gold and nickel-clad coins that would be distributed by the Los Angeles Olympic Committee at prices ranging from $100 to $1.

Garn said he expected no problems in getting quick committee and Senate approval for Mrs. Pope.

Censorship To Be Subject

ECU News Bureau

The censorship of library books is the topic for "ECU Concepts," Saturday at 9:15 a.m. on WOOW Radio.

Hosted by Dr. Thomas Brewer, ECU Chancellor, the show features Dr. Gene Lanier, chairman of the Department of Library Science at East Carolina University and also chairman of the North Carolina Library Association's Intellectual Freedom Committee.

Dr. Lanier will explain the function of the intellectual Freedom Committee. He will also discuss the reaction of the Library Association to groups espousing censorship.

"ECU Concepts" is a 15 minute weekly radio series providing information on a wide range of subjects. Guests for the programs include campus and community personalities and visiting celebrities.

Would Utilize Existing Silos

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Sens. Paul Laxalt of Nevada and Jake Garn of Utah want to put MX missiles into Minuteman silos instead of into thousands of new shelters in the Western desert.

The two senators unveiled their proposal Thursday as an alternative to building 4,600 shelters in Utah and Nevada, where opposition has mounted to the MX program because of its anticipated effects on the region's environment.

Deputy Secretary of Defense Frank C. Carlucci said the department would study the proposal.

Green Sees A Mistake

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, breaking his silence on an investigation of a gift he received from a highway contractor, said today that it was a mistake for him to accept the cash gift from Cumberland County contractor W.W. Crowell.

Green said he would not accept the gift if he had it to do over again. But he added that the gift never influenced any decision he has made and said investigators had told him he had been cleared of any legal wrongdoing.

"I think it was a mistake as far as I personally am concerned," Green told reporters.

"Yes, I regret that I accepted the gift," he added. Green read a five-page statement and answered reporters' questions in a news conference that ran 17 minutes before being cut off by a Green aide.

It was the first time Green has responded to questions since allegations surfaced in late May that he accepted a gift from Crowell, head of Crowell Constructors Inc. of Fayetteville.

Green said the company did paving work at his Bladen County tobacco warehouse in the summer of 1977 and that his company paid the $4,774.19 invoice.

"Without any prior notice, a few weeks after the paving was completed Mr. and Mrs. W.W. Crowell came by my home one day and Mr. Crowell presented me with a cash gift," Green said. "I do not recall the exact amount but it was under $5,000."

Teams Set For 19th Home Clash

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The two-day practices are over, the lessons taught and learned. The preliminaries complete, it is time for the 19th annual Jaycee Boys Home All-Star Football Game.

Set for 8 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium, the game pits the North, coached by Henderson Vance coach Tony Oakes, against the South, coached by Douglas Byrd coach Bob Paroli.

Both teams feature high-publicized and high-powered halfbacks. The North is led by Lexington's Joe McIntosh, player of the year in North Carolina. The South counters with Pine Forest's Vince Evans and Greensboro Page's Micheal Miller.

The game could turn into the battle of the runningbacks. Both coaches, however, said they will throw the ball. "I hope it doesn't get into a running battle," said Oakes, who is coaching an all-star team for the first time. "Bob and I talked about it and we both want to throw a lot. But to tell you the truth, both of us are going to have to run first and pass second."

"Each of us have capable tailbacks and each of us have good fullbacks. It's just hard to predict what will happen."

Paroli, who has been both an assistant and a head coach in both the Shrine Bowl and the East-West game, agrees but is unsure whether his club can run on the North.

"Primarily, I'm concerned with our own people, but I am concerned about what kind of people they have," Paroli said. "They're bigger than we are, much, much bigger and I don't know if we'll be able to run on them."

While both coaches are unsure how the game will develop, both agree that the players are ready. So, too, does Evans.

"You'll find out at the end of the week how much we want to win," Evans said. "We'll get more serious as the week goes along."

"You have this game for a couple of reasons," Paroli said. "It's a benefit game for a worthy cause, but anytime you line up to play a game you do it to win."

"These kids are good athletes and they know what sacrifices it takes to win and they're able to do it."

NOTES...

The South had two players not show up for the game and coach Bob Paroli has since filled the vacancies. Tuesday he brought in linebacker Doug Gabriel (6-0, 190) from Harding High School in Charlotte. Wednesday Paroli added lineman Theodore Livingston to his team. Livingston, a 6-5, 265-pounder from Pine Forest, has signed a grant to play with East Carolina.

Five other players who are participate in the game have also signed grants-in-aid to play for East Carolina this fall and at least two others will attempt to make the team as walkons.

Stephon Adams, Steve Mullen and Thad Smith have all signed to play for ECU and will all play for the North tomorrow night.

The other two players — Eric Beck, David Wynn — have also signed scholarships at ECU and will play for the South.

Adams (5-10, 175 from Southwest Guilford) was all-state. Mullen (6-2½, 210 from Currituck) was all-east and Smith (6-4, 220 from T.W. Andrews) was honorable mention all-state.

Beck (6-2, 175 from Lee County) was all-east, Wynn (6-1½, 185 from Monroe) was all-Piedmont.

At least two players — Jeff Ferrell and Tommy Barnhardt — will try to walk on at ECU. Barnhardt (6-3½, 195 from South Rowan) will try to make it as either a quarterback or punter while Ferrell (6-0, 190 from Greenville Rose) will be attempting to make the ECU squad as either lineman or linebacker.

There are a number of rule changes for this game, including no fake field goals or punts. Both teams must run a 5-2 defense with no blitzes or stunts.

The South won last year, 27-0.

Pirates Take Two From Heels

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Todds — Hendley and Evans, each provided the hits that drove in the winning runs as the Pirates swept a doubleheader from the University of North Carolina last night. East Carolina won the opener, 4-3, in eight innings, then took the nightcap, 9-6.

Both times, the Pirates went into the seventh with the lead. In the first game, they lost the lead and had to go an extra frame to win it, while in the second, they lost one of a three-run lead, and saw Carolina put the go-ahead run on base before the rally was finally brought to a halt. Both times, the damage was done with two away.

In the opener, East Carolina had fallen behind, 2-0, before a three-run double by Mike Sorrell staked the Bucs to a 3-2 lead that held until the seventh when the Tar Heels tied it up.

But in the bottom of the eighth, Evans' single to left drove in John Hallow from second with the winning run.

Hallow, who has just rejoined the team for the summer, provided some fireworks in the second game, hitting a three-run homer in the second inning and adding another rbi before the game was over.

East Carolina led 5-0, only to see the Tar Heels rally to tie it up in the fifth. But a two-run triple by Hendley, followed by Hallow's single that closed out the scoring provided the Pirates with the winning edge.

Rick Ramey went the distance in the opener for his third win against one loss. While he scattered seven hits, only one of the three runs against him was earned.

"We got a well-pitched game from Rick and that helped get us off to a good start," Coach Gary Overton said. "He kept us in the game until we finally started to hit."

The Pirates, held to only four hits in their last three home games, looked headed that way again, as UNC's Ronnie Huffman held them in check with just one hit in the first four innings. "But Sorrell's double got things started for us," the coach pointed out.

Overton admitted that the seventh innings gave him the jitters, especially when the Tar Heels loaded the bases in the second game. "I kept remembering that they won the second game of the Sunday doubleheader by getting a grand-slam," he recalled. "We had to use a lot of pitchers to quiet their bats in the second game. Carolina really swings the bat well. I feel that they may be the best hitting team in the league."

They did out-hit the Pirates in both games, but it is the runs that count.

"Oh, we got some good hits. They came at key times for us. Hendley and Hallow hit the ball well in the second game, and Sorrell played well in both games."

"It's good to have Hallow back. That's another left-handed bat, and he was the top hitter on the team during last summer's play, too," Overton said.

North Carolina pushed ahead in the second inning of the first game. Pete Kumeiga led off with a single and moved up on Jeff Hubbard's hit. Todd Wilkinson then singled in Kumeiga.

The Tar Heels added a second run in the third. With one down, Mitch McClenny was hit by a pitch. John Marshall doubled and Kumeiga was intentionally walked. Hubbard then reached on an error, scoring McClenny.

The Pirates got back in the game in the fifth, on Sorrell's base-clearing double. With two away, Pete Persico had walked, followed by Jay Caraway's single and a walk to Robert Wells. Then came Sorrell who lined one up the alley in right center.

But Carolina came back to tie it up in the seventh, 3-3. With two down, McClenny reached on an infield hit and stole second. He scored when Marshall reached on an error. East Carolina won it in the bottom of the eighth, however.

With one down and a runner on, Hallow reached on a fielder's choice, getting the lead man. Charlie Smith then reached on an infield hit, and Evans followed with a fly to short left that fell in, scoring Hallow with the game-ender.

Wilkinson had two hits to lead Carolina, while Evans had a pair for the Pirates.

In the second game, the Pirates pushed ahead in the first, getting two runs. Sorrell led off with a walk and Hendley reached on an error. Both were sacrificed up, and after Evans walked, Persico hit a two-run double.

In the second, three more went up on the Pirate side of the scoreboard. Sorrell singled and Hendley again was safe on an error. Hallow got his first hit of the summer, sending the ball over the fence in right for a 5-0 lead.

But Carolina came scrapping back. Luke Rasnake got things started in the third with a lead-off solo homer to right. Chip Gibson followed with a single, moving up on an error. He scored on Marshall's double.

In the fourth, two more Carolina runs scored. Wilkinson singled and Ronnie Broome got a hit. With two down, Chip Gibson singled in courtesy runner Jay Matthews, and McClenny followed, reaching on an error that scored Broome.

The Tar Heels then tied it up in the fifth. With two down, Jeff Scott walked and stole second, moving on to third on a wild pitch. He scored on Wilkinson's infield hit.

The Pirates sewed it up in the sixth, however. With one out, Wells singled to left and

Pitt Tops Rocky Mt., 2-0

ROCKY MOUNT — Pitt County's Gordon Douglas scattered five hits coming off a sore arm, and although walks kept him in trouble, he was able to throw a shutout as Post 39 gained a 2-0 victory.

Both of the runs came in the first inning, and although both teams had threats after that, Douglas, and his opposite, Chubby Butler, kept the batters at bay the rest of the way.

Douglas, who walked seven, saw Rocky Mount leave 12 runners stranded during the evening. They left men at third in the first, second and fifth innings, and on second in the third and fourth. After the fifth, however, Douglas seemed to settle down, and only three men reached base after that, one going down in a double play.

But those first five innings were enough to scare the Pitt team, which holds a two-game edge in the loss column in the league standings.

Pitt meanwhile, got all it needed in the first inning of the contest, scoring twice. Mark

Douglas led off by reaching on an error and was sacrificed up. Kenny Barnes reached on a fielder's choice that got no one out, and Emmett Walsh singled to score Douglas. Roger Williams then singled to drive in Barnes for the 2-0 lead.

Pitt didn't have another base runner until the fifth, when Billy Kittrell doubled and moved up on an infield out, but he was thrown out after getting caught off third in a rundown.

Pitt offered a threat in the seventh when Marshall Rand single and stole second, but died there. In the eighth, Sammy Hodges singled and Barnes reached when his sacrifice was errored, putting runners on second and third. But a fly-out, a strike out and an infield out ended that threat.

Rocky Mount offered a threat in the first when Eddie Coates walked, and Bruce Ellis also drew one. Coates then took third on Bill Wilkes' infield grounder, but another grounder ended the threat.

In the second, Paul Bauer led off with a walk and Mitch Drive also got one. Both advanced on a sacrifice, but an infield out and a line-drive stopped this one.

In the third, Wilkes reached on a single and Butler followed with a two-out single, but neither advanced after that. In the fourth, Ben Harris walked and stole second, only to die there.

The final Rocky Mount threat came in the fifth when Ellis walked with one down, and Wilkes singled. Bauer drew a two-out walk, but another infield out ended that threat, and that seemed to take the wind out of the Rocky Mount sails.

Rand led the Pitt hitting with two, while Wilkes had two for Rocky Mount.

Pitt travels to Wayne County tonight for a make-up game, then returns to Rocky Mount on Sunday for another contest.

ECU Announces Cage Schedule

Home games against NCAA participant James Madison, NIT participant Old Dominion, UNC-Charlotte, Richmond and William & Mary highlight the 1981-82 East Carolina University basketball slate, announced today.

Dave Odom's Pirates, 12-14 last season, play one of the most competitive schedules in ECU history, including showings in the prestigious Missouri Show-Me Classic and West Virginia's Mountaineer Classic. The 26-game card also includes games at Duke, N.C. State and Navy.

The Pirates have home-and-away arrangements with Campbell, the away game at the Raleigh Civic Center; George Mason, UNC-Wilmington, Richmond, Baptist and William & Mary.

The 12-game home slate also offers the season opener against Ohio University, Western Illinois and Eastern Illinois. The schedule:

Nov. 28 — Ohio University.
Dec. 4 — at Missouri Show-Me Classic; 7 — Campbell; 18-19 at Mountaineer Classic; 22 — at Duke; 30 at George Mason.
Jan. 4 — at Baptist; 6 — William & Mary; 9 — at James Madison; 11 — Western Illinois; 14 — UNC-Wilmington; 20 — at Campbell (Raleigh Civic Center); 23 — at N.C. State; 27 — Richmond.
Feb. 4 — Baptist; 6 — UNC-Charlotte; 10 — Old Dominion; 13 — at UNC-Wilmington; 15 — Eastern Illinois; 18 — James Madison; 20 — at Navy; 22 — George Mason; 24 — at Richmond; 27 — at William & Mary.

Snow Hill Tops Wayne, 18-12

GOLDSBORO — Snow Hill, which put on a muscle attack against Wilson on Wednesday night, continued it last night, powering past Wayne County, 18-12.

Wayne County grabbed the initial lead in the game, scoring a run in the first. Snow Hill came back with two in the second, and added four in the third for a 6-1 lead.

But Les Surles sparked a third inning rally with a grand-slam homer, and Wayne tied it up with five runs.

Wayne took the lead with one in the fourth, but Snow Hill came back with two in the fifth. Wayne then powered back ahead, 12-8, with five sixth inning runs.

But in the seventh, Snow Hill took advantage of five walks and five hits and an error to push over nine big runs and put the game out of reach.

Bobby Avery led the way in the inning with a three-run double, while Jabo Fulghum had a two-run single. Frank Milkovits and Wade Corbett both had run-scoring singles, and Greg Hardison also got a hit during the frame. Two bases loaded walks helped the scoring along also.

Snow Hill added one more run in the eighth.

Fulghum led the Snow Hill hitting with four, while Hardison, Milkovits, Corbett and Avery each had two. Wayne County was led by Jeff Brodgen with four, while David Frederick and Paul Thomas each had two hits.

Snow Hill is now 7-8, while Wayne County drops to 5-9.

Snow Hill returns to action tonight, hosting Wilson.

Sorrell followed with a hit. Hendley then drove both in with a triple to right, and Hallow brought Hendley home with a single to right for an 8-5 lead.

Carolina tried to rally once more, but got only one run. With one down, Kumeiga singled and Hubbard doubled. Scott walked to load them up, and with two away, Broome single to left, scoring Kumeiga. But the rally ended there, with a pop-up.

Sorrell, Hendley and Hallow each had two hits for the Pirates, while the Heels were led by Gibson, Kumeiga, Marshall, Wilkinson and Broome, each with two.

East Carolina travels to Campbell tonight, then will visit UNC-Wilmington on Sunday for a doubleheader.

"I think these last three (victories) will help us a lot," Overton said. "We've got some tough games coming up, but we're playing better now. For about a week there, we played poorly both offensively and defensively, but I feel like we've got things going now."

East Carolina will probably be without regular catcher Jack Curllings for the Campbell game, anyway. Curllings suffered a cut in his head when he was struck by Kumeiga's bat in the second inning of the opener. Kumeiga's followthrough on a hit caught Curllings and flattened him briefly. Carraway came on to catch the rest of the evening. Overton said he hoped that Curllings would be ready to play by Sunday. Four stitches were required to close the gash.

Leonard, Hearn Both Win

HOUSTON (AP) — Thomas Hearn and Sugar Ray Leonard marched through a pair of potential minefields in the Astrodome and after they reached the other side, they began heaving verbal hand grenades at each other.

Hearn knocked out Pablo Baez in the fourth round to defend the World Boxing Association welterweight championship. Then Leonard, the World Boxing Council welterweight king, had to go nine grueling rounds before stopping Ayub Kalule to win the WBA super middleweight title.

If either man had lost, it would have taken much of the gloss — and probably some of the money — off their Sept. 16 date in Las Vegas, a welterweight unification fight that is fast developing into a grudge match.

"I think he will try to pull the same stunt that (Roberto) Duran did the second time (against him)," Hearn said. "I say Leonard will quit and I say he will have a good reason to quit. You will know why."

Sugar Ray had an answer for that.

"I can't wait for September," he said. "I hope some day they can do a medical examination of Hearn and look in the top of his head. They'll find no brains."

"Tommy Hearn is a perfect physical specimen of an athlete. He has speed, power, reach and height. And he has no brains."

Both men did workmanlike jobs in Thursday night's stage-setters, Hearn stopping Baez in 2:10 of the fourth round and Leonard finishing Kalule with just one second left in the ninth round of their fight.

"I was very surprised the fight ended that fast," said Hearn, who posted his 30th knockout in 32 professional fights. "I thought the fight would go much longer. Baez seemed like a good opponent for me."

Baez took some of Hearn's best shots early and kept coming back for more. "He started well and I had a little trouble figuring him out," Hearn said. "Only my left jab was working and I wanted to use more left hooks. I had to work the jab to the body. It helped set up the shot I wanted to get in."

That was a big right hand. "It brought his head up and then I hit him with a hook," Hearn continued.

Baez sank to the canvas and struggled back to his feet. But referee Kenneth Morita decided that the game challenger had taken enough punishment and stopped the fight.

"It was more difficult than it looked," said Hearn.

Leonard didn't exactly have a cakewalk either. Kalule, making his American debut, showed that his 36 straight victories were no fluke. He slugged it out with Leonard, making a determined defense of his crown.

The two men put on a slugfest in several rounds and after taunting Kalule early, Leonard seemed to gain respect for the Ugandan who now lives in Denmark.

"Early in the fight, I tried to work on his head but I found out he was durable upstairs," Leonard said. "I switched to a body attack and it took its toll as the fight went on."

Kalule absorbed some brutal body shots but never backed up, whaling away at Leonard and seeming on at least a couple of occasions to sting Sugar Ray.

"I was not hurt," Leonard said. "I think the crowd was misled a couple of times. He has stiff punches and that tends to knock opponents back. That's what he did to me."

By the ninth round, it was obvious that this bout would be a test of endurance. Both men were landing punches in bunches at that stage and then late in the round, Leonard caught Kalule with a left-right combination that dropped the challenger to the deck.

Referee Carlos Berrocal counted over him and when Kalule got up, the referee asked him if he could continue. When Kalule did not answer, Berrocal stopped the bout. The time was 2:59 — one second left in the round.

"I didn't know the round was over," Kalule said. "If I knew the round was over, I would have continued. But I have no complaints. I wanted to go out of the ring safely."

Leonard laughed off the suggestion of controversy because of the fight being stopped with just one second left in the round.

"If there was another half hour left in the round, then he could have continued," Sugar Ray said. "I don't think he has any excuses."

The victory pushed Leonard's career record to 30-1 and made him the first man to simultaneously carry world championships in two divisions since Henry Armstrong held the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight titles at the same time in 1938.

Now Sugar Ray has a definite timetable in mind. It calls for the September welterweight unification bout against Hearn and then a junior middleweight unification match against the division's WBA champion, Wilfred Benitez, and, eventually, a fight against middleweight king Marvin Hagler.

Somewhere in that scenario, Sugar Ray may have to find room for ex-WBA welter champion Pipino Cuevas, who destroyed Jorgen Hansen, the European welterweight champ, in 1:20 of the first round Thursday night. It was Cuevas' second straight fast knockout since he lost the title to Hearn last year and it marked the first loss for Hansen, making his American debut, since Aug. 18, 1978.

Gehring Gets Chance At Dethroning Borg

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Rolf Gehring today plays the man everyone wants to avoid in the third round of the Wimbledon men's singles.

The 25-year-old West German meets defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden, who is going for his sixth straight All-England title. Gehring is one of the few players to hold a victory over Borg, defeating the Swede in Brussels earlier this year.

But he was far from confident that he can repeat that feat.

"I would like to play someone else, almost anyone else," Gehring said before the match.

"Although I beat Borg in Brussels, I think I have very little chance in this tournament. Borg is a different player in the major tournaments. In the big events he concentrates so much. Certainly I do not expect to win. He is a much better player than I am."

John McEnroe, who figures to be the main obstacle to another championship for Borg, faced Bob Lutz, best known as Stan Smith's doubles partner, in the third round. McEnroe scorns the idea that he has an easy draw, despite the fact that Balasz Taroczy of Hungary is the only other seeded player left in his half.

"Look at my games. I don't think they have been that easy," said the New York left-hander.

McEnroe, 22, defeated Raul Ramirez of Mexico in the second round.

"Raul played better against me than ever before," he said.

Third-seeded Jimmy Connors played young Tony Giammalva in an all-American third-round match.

Upsets Thursday left McEnroe with an open path to the final.

Still left in the Swede's half of the draw are No. 3 seed Jimmy Connors, ninth-seeded Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina, 12th-seeded Peter McNamara of Australia, 14th-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland and Borg's practice partner, 16th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis.

Three seeded players fell Thursday, leaving Borg, McEnroe and Connors the only surviving seeds from the top eight.

McEnroe's semifinal opponent, fell to Brazilian rock musician Carlos Kirmayr, 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 6-2.

Jeff Borowiak, a 31-year-old Californian ranked 78th in the world, ousted seventh-seeded Brian Gottfried 6-4, 7-6, 6-4, while Vijay Amritraj of India won a five-set thriller against sixth-seeded Brian Teacher 6-4, 2-6, 2-6, 6-2, 6-1.

McEnroe's draw should help soothe the volatile New Yorker, who is still smarting over his $1,500 fine and what he considers the unfair attitude of the British media. McEnroe was punished for his outbursts in his opening match against fellow American Tom Gullikson.

McEnroe was impeccably behaved in defeating Mexican Davis Cupper Raul Ramirez 6-3, 6-7, 6-3, 7-6 Thursday, but said afterwards that the incident, and the resultant publicity, had affected his play.

"I wasn't concentrating today," he said. "All this has not helped my tennis. I'm just not behaving like myself."

Connors, grunting as loudly as ever despite a Wimbledon ruling asking umpires to clamp down on the habit, quickly wrapped up his second-round match against New Zealand's Chris Lewis.

Bethel 12
Grifton Jaycees 6
BETHEL — Bethel rallied from a 6-1 deficit in the fifth inning to take a 12-6 victory over the Grifton Jaycees in the Pitt County Babe Ruth League last night.

Bethel scored five runs in the fifth, then added six more in the sixth to take the win, giving the team an 8-1 record.

Chris Ayers was the winning pitcher, while Doug Coley took the loss. Daniel Keel went two-for-two for Bethel and had three runs batted in. Levon Shaw added two hits in four trips and two rbi's. Thorbes led Grifton with three hits in four at-bats.

Langston Wins

Putt Tourney
Mark Langston shot a nine under par 63 for two rounds to win the Thursday Nite Amateur Tournament last night at the Greenville Putt-Putt Golf Course.

First round leader Smokey Norris finished with a 66 for second. Don Lewis shot a 69 for third, while Robert Beacham's 70 was fourth and John Blount and Dan Harris tied for fifth with 71's.

Auto Specialty added one scored one in the third and one more in the third. The Elks more in the sixth.

Regular season champ True Value opened the Prep League's post-season tournament with a 12-0 victory over First State Bank. The win puts True Value into the winner's bracket of the double elimination event, to face Auto Specialty, while First State Bank meets the Elks in the losers' bracket.

True Value got all it needed in the first inning, scoring four times. Steve Iaboni walked and Tyrone Jones reached on a single. Clark Stallings walked and a passed ball let Iaboni score. Another brought in Jones, and a third scored Stallings. Robbie Erhman, who had also walked, also came around on passed balls.

True Value added five more in the second and three in the third of the five-inning game.

Larke Wetherington hurled a two-hitter at First State Bank in the shutout.

Left Lofty Network Perch, Says Local News 'Best Little Corner'

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Marash left a lofty perch in network TV two months ago to return to local news and the promise of what he calls "the best little corner in broadcast journalism."

"My professional situation has never been remotely as good as it is now," says Marash, once again a correspondent and anchorman at New York's WCBS-TV after three years with ABC News, primarily as an investigative reporter for the network's "20-20" newsmagazine.

It was an extraordinary switch, from network to local news, apparently initiated by Marash himself, though there are signs ABC was not entirely satisfied with the arrangement either.

"I really didn't like the life that went with being a roving correspondent," Marash says, "and it had begun to affect the kind of work I was doing."

Investigative reporting, he says, takes time, and ABC was more inclined toward quantity.

"What they want to do, and what '60 Minutes' has done to a fare-thee-well, is industrialize journalism. Roone would say to me, 'Marash recalls of his boss at ABC News, Roone Arledge. 'Why do you want to go out and do the research yourself? Why do you have to be there every time the camera rolls?'"

"In retrospect," he says, "I am astonished at the number of really pride-inducing stories I was able to do there. For all of the combat that was entered into, I am personally in their debt at '20-20.' And I feel I left ABC as I did Channel 2 the time before with no bridges burning."

"But there were problems," he says, "that I felt could be solved only by taking a job that would combine anchoring and investigative reporting, that would guarantee me the right kind of exposure — at a controlled pace and with the proper staff."

"Channel 2 has basically furnished me with that kind of staff, and that kind of platform," he says.

If the people at WCBS were happy to get Marash back, the local critics were ecstatic. "Dave Marash is the Dave Winfield of local TV journalism, a superstar of the first magnitude," wrote Newsday's Marvin Kitman.

Marash reportedly will make more than twice the $160,000-a-year he was paid at ABC, co-anchoring WCBS' "Eleven O'Clock Update" with Rolland Smith and providing at least nine documentary-style reports each year. The first, on political repression on the Caribbean island of Grenada, was broadcast May 16.

"Within 72 hours of the decision to do the report on Grenada," he says, "the show was sold out, and eventually, it made money."

"I think the sales department is convinced," he says, "that Dave Marash on the air can make money. That's going to allow me to pursue stories more aggressively within a wider spectrum of ideas."

"We're not going to ignore our local responsibility," he says of the mandate. "Though I would love to go to Afghanistan, I'm not going to commit the sin of Afghanistanism. The nice thing about working in New York is it offers a local perspective to almost everything in the world."

The film on Grenada, for instance, focused on the imprisonment there of a Brooklyn man, Antonio Clement Langdon.

Marash, with a degree in English literature from Williams College, began his professional career at a radio station in New Brunswick, N.J., while a graduate student at Rutgers University.

He worked for WPIX-TV and radio stations WNEW, WINS and WCBS, all in New York City, before taking a job as the 11 o'clock sports man at Channel 2 in December 1972.

He won an Overseas Press Club award in 1972 for his reporting from the Olympic Games in Munich, where Israeli athletes were killed by Palestinian terrorists. Four years later, he won an New York-area Emmy for his 10-part series on the Arab-Israeli conflict, "Mid-East Journal."

He returned to Channel 2 with another Emmy in tow, for his work on "20-20."

Marash says he's convinced the local platform can be as satisfying as the national exposure, indeed, more rewarding.

"I really think that the only limitation on me is my energy," he says. "And that's fantastic. Channel 2 really is letting me do Ed Murrow."

TV Directors OK Sharing Of Profits

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Chances that Hollywood directors will join screen writers in a strike against movie producers have lessened with a tentative agreement on profit sharing in the home video market.

The thorny issue has put both actors and writers on the Hollywood picket lines during the past year.

While members of the Directors Guild of America appeared alongside the striking screen writers on a picket line Thursday at the gates of 20th Century Fox Studios, the producers' negotiators announced agreement on a profit split with directors.

The pact would give directors 2 per cent of the profits a movie makes after it earns a certain amount, said Jan Slater, spokeswoman for the Motion Picture and Television Producers Industry negotiating committee.

"The Directors Guild of America has reached basic conceptual agreement with the producers' negotiating committee on the important pay-TV, video disc and cassette issue," said Dan Swinton, spokesman for the directors.

The directors guild also has demanded an increase in the $11,000 minimum a director now earns for an hour's worth of movie air time.

The issue of how to share the money earned in the booming pay-TV, cable, video disc and cassettes market was a major cause of the actors strike that delayed start of the new TV season until October.

The screen writers have been on strike for 11 weeks. Their talks with the producers broke down over the pay-TV issue.

Carter Plans A China Visit

ATLANTA (AP) — Former President Carter extended diplomatic relations to China in 1978 and later pledged to visit the country and meet with its leaders. But only now, after he's left office, is Carter finally making plans for the trip.

Carter's office said Thursday the former president and his wife, Rosalynn, will visit China from Aug. 24 through Sept. 3 and visit Japan from Sept. 3 through Sept. 8.

Dismissal Story Flatly Denied

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — An RCA spokesman says there is "absolutely no truth" to a report by TV Guide that incoming RCA chairman Thornton Bradshaw will dismiss Fred Silverman as president of NC.

NBC has been in third place in the network ratings for several seasons.

TV Guide said Thursday it will report in its next issue, dated July 4, that dismissing Silverman will be one of Bradshaw's first acts after he takes office July 1 as chairman of NBC's parent company.

"Silverman's gone. He'll never come back as NBC president," the magazine quoted an unidentified "highly placed network source" as saying.

"We categorically deny it," said RCA spokesman Leslie Sote. "There is absolutely no truth to it."

TV Guide said in a statement that Silverman is vacationing in Hawaii and is expected back July 6. Silverman's contract, which expires December 1982, reportedly provides for a $1 million annual salary.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm, sunny weather is expected in the forecast period until Saturday morning for most of the nation. Cooler weather is expected across the northern tier of states. Showers are forecast in southern Texas and northern New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A cold front moving through western Virginia to northern Tennessee was expected to bring relief to North Carolina from the hot, muggy weather that has plagued the state all week. Scattered thunderstorms were forecast by the National Weather Service as the cold front moved through the state, with the majority expected to hit eastern sections. Thunderstorms were expected to end this evening as a high pressure system take control of the weather heading into the weekend. That should bring cool and dry weather to North Carolina through Saturday, with highs staying in the 80s. Around the state Thursday skies were mostly sunny during the morning hours but by the afternoon, thunderstorms spread southeastward into the western sections. These thunderstorms moved into central North Carolina during the nighttime hours. Afternoon highs climbed well up into the 90s for most of the state, with a 99-degree reading at Hickory and Raleigh-Durham Airport. As usual, Boone was the cool spot with a high of 80 degrees. Rainfall from the thunderstorms Thursday ranged up to three-quarters of an inch at Asheville and Hickory. Recreational weather outlook...It will be partly cloudy today with scattered thunderstorms across the state today, ending from the west by evening. High temperatures were expected to be in the mid 70s in the northern mountains to the low 90s in the southeast. Saturday should be sunny, cooler and drier with highs generally in the low to mid 80s. On the beaches, winds will be southwest at 10 to 20 knots becoming northeast Saturday. Scattered thunderstorms today should clear by the weekend.

Rain, Cooler Weather Said Needed By Crops

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
Dry weather may have been beneficial in keeping the usual pests away from crops, but North Carolina agriculture officials agree that July rains are essential for a good harvest. "The potential looks good," said John Cyrus, chief of tobacco affairs for the state Department of Agriculture. "But it hinges on getting showers every week." Heat can be as much of a problem as lack of moisture for tobacco, he said, scalding the tender leaves and eventually browning them. He added that last year's flue-cured crops were severely damaged by oven-like conditions in August. Specialists in tobacco, vegetables, grain and peanuts agreed that 1981 could be a good year, if the state gets enough rain and not too much heat. "The rains of the last six weeks brought the flue-cured crop out enough to keep progressing," said Cyrus. "Our biggest concern right now is high temperatures — from 95 to 100 degrees." Burley tobacco, on the other hand, has had too much rain in recent weeks, Cyrus said. "The problem was getting them planted — they'd come up yellow and stunted," he said. "But the situation is looking better now." But July rains are crucial to most farmers, said Greg Johnson, an extension specialist in agricultural meteorology at North Carolina State University. "That's when crops need the most moisture to become fully formed." He said that the discouraging effect of the drought on pests could be temporary. Thrips may still cause trouble for peanut growers, he said, and hornworms are already increasing in tobacco fields in the east. Aphids may soon become a serious problem in the southeast as well. Fred Hockaday, chief of the horticultural crops section of the Department of Agriculture, said that while some farmers have suffered losses due to high moisture and heat, potato, cucumber, bell pepper, squash, tomato and peach harvests were proceeding without major complications. "Most of it looks pretty good, but there's been spotted reports of too much rain in Sampson, Duplin, Johnston and Harnett counties," said Hockaday. He added that excess rain can cause the vegetables to decay, and heat hastens the process. Johnson said fairly steady rains from about May 10 to June 10 aided crops without replenishing stream and groundwater levels depleted by this spring's drought. And the weather report for the next 10 days calls for more hot, dry weather, he said.

Judge Says Tarzan Image Besmirched

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge who found that High Society magazine "besmirched, tarnished and debased" the image of Tarzan and Jane, has ordered the magazine's July issue recalled from distribution. U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack issued his ruling Thursday as a preliminary move in a $3 million damage suit brought against High Society by Edgar Rice Burroughs Inc. of Tarzana, Calif. The firm, named for the author of the Tarzan novels on which a long series of movies was based, owns trademark rights to the characters and claims it licenses their use only to those who will portray Tarzan and Jane as persons of high moral character. Judge Pollack said High Society had no authorization to use the characters, and its 10-page article, "Monkeying Around With Tarzan and Jane," shows them "purportedly engaged in explicit sexual activities and conversation." The magazine contends the article was meant only as a "satire."

Pollack said "the evidence indicates very clearly that right from the start, the standards of the Burroughs' licenses made clear that there was to be no endorsing or engaging in illicit sexual practices" in portraying Tarzan and Jane. The judge said the magazine had "transgressed" these standards and described the 500,000-circulation publication as "a sex magazine containing lewd, vulgar, sexually explicit photographs and articles." He held the magazine article had damaged "the reputation and good will with the public and among publishers, motion picture and TV producers and in the publishing and entertainment fields, which used the literary works authored by the late Edgar Rice Burroughs."

Three Named As Pages

Three local students were appointed by Lt. Governor Jimmy Green to serve as pages in the North Carolina Senate during the week of June 15-19. They are Austel Martin Miller, son of Beverly Knapton; Melanie Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Robinson; and Michele Delayne Garris, daughter of Mrs. Judith M. Garris and Myron D. Garris; all of Greenville. The duties of a page include working with members of the North Carolina Senate and the staff of the General Assembly. Pages are assigned to the various committee meetings and assist in the Senate Chamber during sessions.

Spokesmen Laud Proposed Prosecution Of KKK

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Spokesmen for the Communist Workers Party applauded the recommendation by former U.S. Attorney H.M. "Mickey" Michaux to prosecute participants in a Nov. 3, 1979 shootout that left five of their members dead. But the applause grew faint with the possibility that the investigation could reach the CWP as well as Ku Klux Klan and Nazi members.

Representatives of the CWP said they think Michaux was referring only Klansmen and Nazis when he said Wednesday he had recommended that the Justice Department file criminal civil rights charges against those involved in the skirmish.

"I didn't see anything in (Michaux's statements) that suggests (members of the CWP) will be charged," said Sigmund Waller, wife of Dr. James M. Waller who was killed in the confrontation.

"I think it is an absurd implication to make. To even suggest that victims or families of victims of the assassinations would themselves be prosecuted is outrageous."

Marty Nathan, wife of Dr.

Michael R. Nathan who also was killed, said there would be a "great public outcry" if the Justice Department decided to seek indictments against CWP members.

"It would be a ... transgression against justice of the highest magnitude," she said. "I really do not believe they will do such a thing."

Michaux declined to identify the people he had recommended for prosecution, but said they could include Klansmen, Nazis and CWP members.

Mrs. Nathan also said the CWP would cooperate with the Justice Department "as long as it acts in good faith (by prosecuting Klansmen and Nazis)."

That has not been the case in past investigations, however.

Cecil Moses, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said the department had been hampered by CWP members' refusal to cooperate.

"We weren't able to get all the facts," said Moses. "It is always better to get both sides of the story and we weren't able to get any information from (the CWP)."

He said the investigation, performed with the help of between 25 and 40 agents sent by former President Jimmy Carter, had numerous "false starts" because of CWP unreliability.

"They indicated they might (talk to agents), then they'd back off," he said. He added that a $37 million lawsuit filed by the CWP against a group of federal, state and local law enforcement officers allegedly involved in a "conspiracy" against the CWP had caused problems as well.

But Mrs. Nathan said the CWP had declined to cooperate during the trial of six Klansmen and Nazis last year because "it was obvious" that it was slanted in favor of the defendants, who were acquitted by the all-white jury.

"We really don't have much confidence in the Justice Department, but we're willing to give them a whirl," she said.

Klansman Joe Grady of Winston-Salem said the decision by Michaux, a black, showed he was a "racist."

"I had thought he was a pretty good guy, but his racism came through," he said.

Grady said he didn't think Michaux had recommended that any CWP members be prosecuted. "It's only the Klan that gets charged for these things," he said. "The whole thing was the communists' fault, but they'll get off scot-free."

Coleman Pridmore, one of the Klansmen acquitted in the trial, said the CWP had violated the rights of the defendants, a position backed by attorney Robert Cahoon, who defended Roland Woods in the trial.

"You don't have to agree with their philosophy — and I don't — to see that they were the people who were attacked and that they only acted in their own self-defense," Cahoon said.

"The judge and jury were very conscientious and the two DAs did a hell of a job. But the facts simply showed that the communists instigated this confrontation and they were the civil rights violators."

U.S. Justice Department spokesman John Wilson says it may take months to decide whether — and who — to prosecute in the 1979 incident. He added that the case was far too complex to be decided overnight.

Begin's Opposition Strengthens Election Position

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Opposition LABOR Party leader Shimon Peres and his enemy Yitzhak Rabin kissed and made up five days before Israel's June 30 election in a bid to trim Prime Minister Menachem Begin's lead.

Peres announced Thursday, shortly after a TV debate with Begin, that Rabin, a former Labor Party prime minister and ambassador to the United States, would become his defense minister if their socialist party defeats Begin's conservative Likud bloc at the polls.

The defense post had been promised to Haim Bar-Lev, a former military chief of staff. He agreed to be deputy prime minister instead and said he had no hard feelings.

Peres and Rabin, political foes since they served in the late Prime Minister Golda Meir's government, appeared together at a news conference. Peres said the party needed Rabin's help in order to defeat Begin's coalition, and Rabin said he was withdrawing his past vows never to serve under Peres.

"I would like to draw a line, not to look back at the past," Rabin said.

Rabin, the architect of Israel's 1967 victory against the Arabs, succeeded Mrs. Meir after her retirement in 1974. The first Sabra, or native-born Israeli, to hold the nation's highest elected office, Rabin resigned on Dec. 20, 1976, after losing a confidence vote in Parliament and became caretaker government chief pending election of a new Parliament.

With nearly a month to go in that campaign, Rabin was forced to surrender the party leadership following the revelation that he and his wife maintained a bank account in Washington in violation of the law concerning overseas bank deposits.

Peres became party leader but was unable to stem a tide of public pressure for change. Begin's party won a landslide victory, giving the Labor Party machine its first defeat since Israel became a state in 1948. Afterward Peres and Rabin fought for control of their party, and Peres gained the upper hand early this year in a bruising battle of words that prompted Rabin's pledge never to serve under his rival.

Their surprise rapprochement came after public opinion polls showed Begin leading Peres as much as 12 percentage points but with about 25 percent of the electorate still undecided.

Earlier Thursday, Begin and Peres traded harsh charges in the first TV debate of the campaign.

The Labor Party said today that a spot survey of voters taken after the debate indicated 57 percent of those questioned favored Peres' performance and 43 percent endorsed Begin. The Likud Party refused to release its post-debate poll, but claimed 80 percent of the voters were not swayed by the debate.

An independent poll taken by the Hebrew University's Institute for Applied Research before the debate and released today indicated Begin led Peres by 39 percentage points to 32.

In an unusual move, Israel's most respected newspaper, Haaretz, today endorsed the Labor Party, and called on its readers in an editorial "to throw the Likud out of office for the good of the state."

It is not customary for Israeli newspapers to endorse political parties outright, but Haaretz has been one of Begin's most vigorous critics. The paper, charged that while Begin signed the peace treaty with Egypt, he did everything he could to prevent that peace from being broadened to include the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

During Thursday's debate, Peres accused Begin of putting President Anwar Sadat, Israel's peace partner, in an "insupportable position" and "embittered" him by bombing the Iraqi nuclear reactor three days after he and the Egyptian leader met in the Sinai.

Begin's style has "made Israel's name repulsive the world over," Peres asserted.

Although Sadat joined in the general foreign condemnation of the attack, Begin denied the Egyptian president was embittered by the raid. He claimed Sadat spoke warmly of him in a talk with the Israeli ambassador after the attack.

Begin reiterated his claim that the Iraqis planned to use their reactor to make atomic bombs for use against the Jewish state and called the bombing "an act of salvation." Peres agreed that the Arabs should be prevented from getting nuclear weapons, but he opposed Begin's methods.

Apparently reluctant to condemn an action that has wide support in Israel, Peres did not press the issue during the 40-minute debate, which was taped in the morning and broadcast to an estimated audience of 2 million in the evening.

Peres zeroed in on Begin's weakest points — the economy and a barrage of campaign violence aimed primarily at Labor Party candidates.

He claimed unemployment had doubled and inflation climbed 1,210 percent during Begin's four years in office. Begin countered that inflation, "a serious problem," has begun to recede and real wages had risen 13.5 percent during his term.

Replying to the charge of campaign violence, Begin said he was victimized by the Laborites' political forerunners when he led an underground army that fought British rule and the established Jewish leadership during Israel's battle for statehood in the 1940s.

RIVALS BACK TOGETHER — Israel's opposition leader Shimon Peres (left) shakes hands with former Premier Yitzhak Rabin after he had announced that Rabin would be Defense Minister in a Labor Government if Labor wins the upcoming election against the forces of Prime Minister Begin. Peres and Rabin led a bitter fight over leadership of the Labor party, and Rabin wrote a book in which he attacked Peres. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagan Coalition Seen As Temporary Agreement

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House coalition that has given President Reagan two smashing budget victories over his Democratic foes is built on the sands of temporary agreement and not the rock of common purpose. Both Democrats and Republicans agree that the sight of unanimous Republicans united with a smattering of conservative Democrats is likely to disappear once the economic matters that now bind them are completed. But so far this fragile structure, bolstered by the organizational abilities of the Republican Party and Reagan's knack of convincing Congress that the public backs him, has held up to the best shots of Democratic leaders. And the defections of conservative Democrats on key votes is stirring dissension within the party, with some suggestions that members who vote with Republicans be stripped of their committee posts.

So far, Democratic leaders are opposing any punishment that could divide the party even further.

One highly placed Democratic aide said the leadership believes it's better to keep a part-time Democrat than to turn him into a full-time Republican. "You never know when you'll need them," said Gary Hymel, assistant to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. House Majority Whip Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said flatly: "There is no official leadership consideration of such action."

At any rate, Foley added, Reagan's coalition is hardly permanent. "The president does not have a built-in available group of Democrats on all issues," he said.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, the Republicans' liaison with conservative Democrats, agreed.

"To say that everything is running from a coalition effort or that there is automatically a coalition government is not correct. It's on an issue-by-issue basis."

Rep. G. V. Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss., the Veterans Committee chairman who broke ranks to help defeat the Democratic parliamentary tactic Thursday, said the coalition is one of fiscal conservatives and could divide on other issues.

"I don't think there will be a coalition like you used to have, where racism held it together," he said, referring to an earlier alliance of Republicans and Southern Democrats.

Democratic defections are hardly new. But they really weren't a problem as long as Democrats had a large enough majority and Republicans were divided.

The 1980 elections, however, changed that. Democrats' hold on the House was reduced to 52 seats. And Reagan's victory, coupled with the trend toward conservatism in Republican ranks, encouraged not only his own party but also the Democratic conservatives.

"The Democratic leadership is going to have to realize that they're going to have to choose between one of two conflicting principles in constructing a Democratic majority," said Rep. Charles Buddy Roemer, D-La., secretary of the 47-member Conservative Democratic Forum.

"On the one hand, there's the principle of purity. Republicans went through that a decade ago. Democrats are faced with the same decision," he said. "The conflicting principle is unity. Historically, the Democratic Party has been the home of divergent philosophical and economic principles. It was that unity which made it strong. It's losing that unity now."

To recoup, Roemer said, Democrats first must be willing to honestly discuss their differences. And he added: "I have received more input, knowledge and assistance from the White House, from the Office of Management and Budget, from the Republican Party than I have from my own Democratic Party leadership."

About the only thing Democrats agree on so far is that they have been out-organized by Republicans and out-manuevered by Reagan, a master of the electronic medium.

A case in point was their loss Thursday on a parliamentary tactic aimed at dividing Reagan's budget cuts in hopes of conquering them.

Republicans knew more than six hours before the tactic was formally adopted by the House Rules Committee on Wednesday what it would entail. House Republican leaders and White House aides met in mid-afternoon to set their strategy.

Reagan, who was flying to San Antonio, Texas, was contacted by House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., and asked to insert a statement about the tactic in his speech and to continue hammering at Democrats throughout the night.

Reagan did that, reaping widespread television coverage in the process, and he also phoned 16 conservative Democrats Wednesday night and Thursday morning.

Meanwhile, Republican political operatives and some conservative Democrats were knocking on doors. Businessmen who supported the president were enlisted to make phone calls. And Republicans prepared 80 one-minute speeches for delivery at the start of Thursday's session, as allowed by House rules.

The result of that last tactic was almost a two-hour delay in the start of debate on the parliamentary maneuver.

And that extra time gave Republicans more chances to persuade Democrats to go along with them. Reagan's last call was made at 12:45 p.m. EDT, just before the voting, and 11 of the Democrats he phoned voted with him.

Child Restraint Nears Approval

By W.A. WERONKA Jr.
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill requiring parents to protect children with seat belts or restraining seats is nearing enactment, but it could be a long time before violators of the proposed law pay a fine.

The law would not take effect until July 1, 1982, and only warning tickets would be issued for the first two years thereafter, according to Sen. William Hancock, D-Durham.

After that, he said, violators would be receive a maximum fine of $10.

The phasing in of the law would allow plenty of time to "warn the public," Hancock said.

The bill, introduced by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, would require parents transporting their own children by car to restrain those under 1 year old with a restraining seat. Children between the ages of 1 and 4 would be required to wear a seat belt.

Sen. William Hancock, D-Durham, said the measure would help cut down on the estimated 1,500 children a year injured in automobile accidents.

He said statistics show 20 children under the age of 4 are killed each year, with 101 child fatalities since 1976, "and not one was restrained," he added.

Hancock said the chances that a child would die in a traffic accident when unrestrained was 50 times greater than all the childhood diseases combined.

The only opposition appeared to come from Sens. Paul Smith, R-Rowan and Sam Noble, D-Robeson. They said the bill was a government mandate, without government funding and an unnecessary imposition on parents.

"It's hard to speak against this bill because it's like speaking against motherhood and apple pie," Noble said. "I've had people call me that were against it. I agree that we have too much mandated already."

A final vote on the bill will come today, following its 37-6 Senate approval Thursday.

Suspect Death Due To Spotted Fever

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Health officials suspect Rocky Mountain spotted fever may have been behind the death of a 29-year-old Buncombe County man on Wednesday.

David Lee Brookshire went to a doctors' clinic with a fever, and died two days after he entered Memorial Mission Hospital, and Dr. Richard P. Olson said the patient had symptoms of the disease.

"He had been seen with some symptoms a few days before," said Olson, who works in the hospital's family practice center. "That's one of the bugaboos of this particular illness. It looks in the early stage like a lot of common problems."

Brookshire, a land surveyor with the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, was treated for tick fever, despite the fact that no tick was found on him. The results of an autopsy performed on Brookshire had not been released late Thursday, according to the hospital.

The hospital's public affairs office said a final diagnosis on the exact cause of death will be available in four to six weeks from a state lab in Raleigh.

Brookshire's death was the second this year at Mission Memorial this year suspected of being caused by Rocky Mountain spotted fever. A hospital spokesman said the first death occurred May 22, but the exact cause of death has not been confirmed.

The fever is caused by the bite of an infected dog tick, especially common in the woods and fields of North Carolina. Of 321 cases reported in the state last year, 17 died, according to the state Division of Health Services.

Tar Heel Native Once Served As Sec. Of State In Texas Republic

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — There were strange parallels between Samuel Price Carson and Robert Potter.

They were both Democrats, they served together in the North Carolina legislature and in the U.S. Congress, they went west and signed the Texas declaration of independence, both were elected to the cabinet of the Republic of Texas and both were involved in violent confrontations with their enemies.

Of the two, Carson has been treated better by history.

The son of John Carson, a member of the Fayetteville convention that ratified the constitutions of the United States, and grandson of Revolutionary officer Joseph McDowell, Samuel Price Carson was born in the Pleasant Garden community of McDowell (then Burke) County on Jan. 22, 1798.

Educated locally, the young man was elected to the state senate for two terms, then in 1825 he defeated Robert Brank Vance for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Two years later Vance, attempting to recapture the seat, cast aspersions upon

John Carson. Vance rejected the elder Carson's challenge to a duel but offered to give satisfaction to "some of your chivalrous sons."

Congressman Sam sprang to his father's defense, and late that year, to avoid violating North Carolina's law against dueling, the candidates met just across the South Carolina border at Saluda Gap.

The men briskly walked off ten paces and turned toward each other. One shot was fired. Carson's bullet tore through Vance's body. Death followed the next day.

The killing of an adversary on the field of honor was an accepted practice, and Carson was reelected in 1827 and for the next two campaigns.

When the congressman sided with John C. Calhoun in the South Carolina nullification controversy, however, Carson lost support of many of his constituents, and in 1833 he was defeated for reelection.

However, he won a seat in the state senate in 1834.

While serving in Congress, Carson had become friendly with Sam Houston and other brash Tennesseans fascinated by opportunities in the southwest territories. In 1835, therefore, Carson went to the Arkansas territory to find good land. While he was there, his Burke County constituents elected him to the constitutional convention in Raleigh. He came back to North Carolina long enough to participate in amending the constitution.

This was his last service to his native state, for he moved his family and slaves to the southwest, arriving just in time to participate in the Texas revolution. His previous service in Congress put him in good standing, and he was elected to the Texas convention early in 1836 from an area along the undefined border between Texas and Arkansas.

Arriving at the convention after the declaration of independence had been adopted, Carson eagerly affixed his signature along with those of Potter and eight other natives of North Carolina.

At the convention, Sam Carson came within a few votes of being elected president of the new Republic of Texas. He lost that position to David G. Burnet, but Carson was elected secretary of state.

Texas at that time was little more than an idea. Col. William Travis and his 187 colleagues were all killed in the Alamo, and a number of citizen-armies were waging an uncertain resistance to the Mexicans under Santa Anna.

The survival of the new republic depended upon recognition from the United States and financial support from the American people. Consequently, Carson and Robert Hamilton, another signer of the declaration and a former North Carolinian, were sent to Washington and New York as agents for the Texans.

They met with considerable success, and soon the American government announced recognition of the republic. Investors, recognizing the tremendous potential of independent Texas, increasingly came to its aid.

Still, petty politics back in Texas undercut the Carson-Hamilton mission, and the disappointed secretary of state, always in delicate health, was compelled to return to the southwest.

He died at Warm Springs, Ark. on Nov. 2, 1838, leaving his widow, Catherine Wilson Carson, a daughter, Rachel Rebecca Carson and an adopted daughter, Emily Carson. No one knows the location of his grave.

Carson County, Texas, was named for Sam Carson in 1876.

Rare One-Room Schoolhouse In Northern Michigan Village

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
COPPER HARBOR, Mich. (AP) — In this village, if you leave a tip, the waitress calls after you. "Hey, mister, you forgot your change." It is that sort of village.

It is at the northernmost point of a finger of murmuring pines and hemlock jutting into Lake Superior. About 30 people live here year round, far fewer than reside in the town graveyard. If you look at a map, Copper Harbor is the dot at the tip of Michigan's Upper Peninsula's upper peninsula.

Spring arrives late this far up the global tilt. At the end-of-school picnic the other day, the kids played softball amid lilac blossoms. Lilacs in June.

Miss Howe played shortstop. She had to, and parents and friends and recent graduates played other positions, as ringers, because the kids actually celebrating the end of school barely numbered enough to make a team, let alone a team to play against.

Bobbi, Natasha, Johanna, Forest, Aaron, Darren, Jeff, Kristen and Danny constitute the Copper Harbor School student body. Miss Howe is the teacher.

One-room schoolhouses with one teacher once were commonplace in this country but that was before the nation traded remoteness and innocence for pavement.

one-room schoolhouses, remoteness and waitresses who remind you to collect your change — though you might have to find them.

The road ends here. Education does not.

"My pupils take the same standardized tests as all the other pupils in the state," Miss Howe said, with pride. "They do well."

"I want them to excel. When they go on from here, to high school, the social adjustments will be hard enough for them without having to worry about their studies. I don't want anyone to fall behind."

When they do go on to high school they will climb into a bus and ride 35 miles, to Calumet, and 35 miles back, through winter snows that accumulate 200 to 400 inches. That's snow enough to cover the schoolyard flagpole. People here dig tunnels in order to shovel less.

It was Copper Harbor's isolation and severity that lured Marsha Howe, the schoolmarm, here a year ago.

She is a backpacker, a climber, a skier. She is 30. She is a fine shortstop and, apparently, a fine teacher. After only one year the members of the school board who are also the parents of most of her pupils granted her tenure.

"You can imagine how personal teaching is here," she said. "I don't prepare a year's study program for a grade. I prepare individual study programs for individual pupils."

"Next fall we get a new kindergartner, Amber Meadowcroft, and I will have 10 pupils," she said.

"If you want to be a teacher, in Copper Harbor you really feel like you are one."

"I mean, here a parent doesn't go running to some principal with a problem. I am the principal. I am also the curriculum developer, music director, counselor, coach. I love it."

"I also like the wilderness, the isolation, the closeness that results. I even like the

In a nation of interstate highways, resource centers and peer-group relationships, there remains, it would seem, something to be said for one-room schoolhouses, closeness and clean snow.

Not to mention lilacs in June.

Will Advertise For Killers

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The Telex Corp. will advertise in newspapers nationwide as part of its search for the killer who gunned down Chairman Roger F. Wheeler at a country club May 27.

Telex also indicated Wednesday it may extend the 60-day deadline on a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Wheeler's killer. The offer was made June 8.

Police have not located any suspects. Neither the car in which two men fled from the scene nor the murder weapon has been found.

The ads will appear beginning June 27 in newspapers in Tulsa; New Orleans; Miami; Hartford, Conn.; Abilene, Texas; Dallas; Houston; Los Angeles; Tampa, Fla.; New York; Chicago; and Las Vegas, Nev.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to enjoy the pursuits which bring you the greatest amount of relief from pressures. A time to express your appreciation to those who have been loyal to you in the past.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contacting associates and talking over how to improve the relationship is wise at this time. Avoid a troublemaker.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can make the right improvements to your surroundings now and gain added prestige. Plan the future wisely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Your finest talents can be expressed most intelligently now and you can make a fine impression on others. Be logical.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Show that you appreciate new benefits which you now enjoy. Strive for more happiness and harmony in the home.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You are able to gain the support of those who are important in your life. Show true appreciation in a tangible way.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are now able to get the backing you need so that you can put a new project into operation. Make improvements to property.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can accomplish almost anything you set your mind to at this time. Attend the social tonight and show affection for friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Let your intuitive forces come to the fore now which can be helpful when dealing with allies. Take no risks in motion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Think in terms of how you can help friends in need. Any social affairs to which you are invited should be attended.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find the right appliances to make your home function more efficiently. Don't lose your temper with foes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Obtain the information you need from the right source. A friend can be most helpful to you now. Show your appreciation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't take loved one so much for granted. Make sure your bills are paid. Take steps to improve your surroundings.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be one of those persons with a particular charm that most everyone likes. There is much artistry in this nature and this should be accentuated in the educational curriculum. Don't neglect ethical training.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♠ 2 ♥ 2 ♠ Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: King of ♥.

It is all very well to establish a winner in a suit by ruffing—but what if that winner then proves to be of no use to you? South found a neat way out of his predicament to land his contract of two spades.

West's distribution weighed against a takeout double at his first turn, so he contented himself with a two heart overcall. North had barely enough for a free raise of his partner's opening bid, especially since he had only three-card trump support. In the long run, however, it is wiser to bid with the North hand to prevent getting preempted out of the auction.

West led the king of hearts against two spades and, after taking a look at dummy, shifted to a trump—an initial trump lead might have been more successful. Declarer won in his hand with the queen and, since an immediate heart ruff would have left him in dummy with no quick entry back to his hand, he finessed the queen of diamonds. After cashing the ace of diamonds, he returned to his hand by ruffing a diamond with his low spade. West followed to the three diamond tricks with the K-J-10, so the table's nine of diamonds was now high.

Declarer ruffed a heart in dummy and was tempted to discard a club from his hand on the high diamond. But he realized that West would ruff and, if he still had a trump to return, there might be no way to make the contract.

There was a sure way to eight tricks, and declarer took it. He ruffed his diamond winner in hand and then ruffed a heart with the jack of trumps. That gave him six trump tricks (four on crossruffs) along with two diamonds—just enough to get home.
