Garden Clinic

N.C. Ext. Serv. Answers Gardening Questions

Q. I'm tired of rotten onions. Can you tell me how to store them so they will keep? (G.P., Greenville)

A. The type of onion grown under the hot, humid conditions of North Carolina does not store well. For best results, place them in a mesh bag or slatted box and store in a well ventilated area. Inspect the bags or boxes occasionally and remove any rotting bulbs. Onions that will not be used in about 60 days can be chopped and stored in plastic bags in the freezer for use in stews, soups and sauces. (George Hughes, extension horticultural specialist)

Q. A few of my sunflowers have died because something has eaten the roots. Any suggestions? (R.W. Concord)

A. Check closely and you may find a small, cinnamon brown beetle eating on the roots of your sunflowers. If you do find this beetle present, drench the soil with diazinon. This is the same treatment that is used for white grubs. Follow label directions. (Jim Baker, extension entomology specialist)

Q. What does a gardening expert look for in determining when to harvest sweet corn? (D.C., Durham)

A. The color of the silk, mainly. Harvest corn as soon as the silks have dried and turned brown. Also make sure the ear has a good tight shuck cover and feals firm near the tip. Sweet corn usually reaches maturity 25 to 20 days after tassling and silking. (George Hughes, extension horticultural specialist)

A. To some extent. Ragged or frayed leaves usually mean a worm or beetle is present. Honey dew, a sticky substance in which a dark mold grows, indicates aphids. Vegetables that appear drought stressed when soil moisture is ample may have red spiders hiding on the underside of the leaves. Marginal leaf burn and twisted or distorted buds indicate thrips in the folded leaves. Recognizing these types of damage can be important because often the gardener only sees the damage and not the insect. (Ken Sorensen, extension entomology specialist)

Antique Plane Buffs Try Keep History Alive

By JOE FERULLO

RHINEBECK, N.Y. (UPI) — To Cole Palen, life is a lot like an airplane; both used to be simpler, easier to handle, and a lot more fun.

"I think it's great we have a shuttle to the moon, but I haven't the faintest idea how it works," Palen says. "I see a 747, and cripes! I don't know what holds it in the air."

Palen walked over to a Curtiss Jenny, the World War I dogfight bi-plane, and gave it a pat. It is one of several planes Palen keeps in his Old Rhinebeck Aerodrome, a strip in the Hudson Valley 90 miles north of New York City.

On Sundays, Palen takes out the antique flyers and gives an air show for an average 3,000 Aerodrome spectators. He plays the role of the Black Baron of Rhinebeck, or English World War I flying ace Percy Goodfellow. Whatever the role, when he's in an old plane, Cole Palen is himself.

He is one of a group of men who spend a part of their lives tending to and flying antique aircraft. They climb into an old plane's canvas and wood cockpit and fly around with precious little between them and the air. They used to be called barnstormers; now they're called nostalgic, eccentric, and sometimes — nuts.

The man who searches for World War I and II airplanes is trying to bring back something he feels people shouldn't lose. Their numbers are growing.

"The attraction is the same as the old steam engine," said Robert Taylor, head of the 6,000-member Antique Airplane Association (AAA), based in Ottumwa, Iowa.

"Back in 1928, there were 181 airplane companies, building models with originality and character. Now, it's just a lot of aluminum stamped out the same way."

Collecting such memorabilia is no easy task. Either you hunt for the few originals left, or you go to the drawing board and, from scratch, using authentic materials, build a bi-plane or tri-plane yourself.

In a workshop filled with blueprints, Palen and his co-workers look over the still-unfinished shell of his latest copy, a 1911 Vin Fiz, the first airplane to fly coast-to-coast. He points out a box-like device, an original Wright Brothers engine he will put in his latest replica.

Palen uses both replicas and originals in his air-shows on the weekends.

Toward the back of the show area, draped in green canvas, is something special. "Look," he says, "it's a Dolphin." Not the mammal, but a copy of the 1918 plane that was a power in the Allied air force. Palen said the replica, exact in nearly every detail, took 4,000 man hours to build.

"I've got to spend the time. If I didn't, someone would walk in here and say 'Hey, this is a Piper Cub with a paint job.'"

Because replicas require close work, Taylor said a good number of AAA members are dentists. "They seem to like that meticulous kind of work."

If you've ever seen a Hollywood dog-fight, you've probably seen an airplane replica from the Fla-Bob Airport in Riverside, Calif. The airport is one of the longest running displays for antique airplanes, starting in 1928 when they weren't called "antique", but "slightly used." Owner-operator Flavio Madariaga has had it since 1945.

His copies have appeared in the "Amelia Earhart Story" and the "Howard Hughes Story." He now has 20 planes under construction. He has replicas of the old Jennys, the Newport, the Fokker triplane, "and I'm almost finished with a Sopwith Camel."

The studios pay about $500 a day per plane. "It's a nice way to make a living," Madariaga says.

But copies are only half the story. Those who own antique originals — or even pieces of legendary, early flight machines — track them down like spies hot on the trail of a secret tape.

"It's amazing. They turn up all the time," Taylor said. "I just bought one from Bolivia. It had been covered up in the jungle for years."

Soon, Palen will be heading to central Pennsylvania for an auction where the featured item is a 1931 Krater-Reisner. That's an airplane he says he has "pursued" for 20 years. "I probably won't get it, but I've just got to go out there to see it."

Then there's the old man in the black coat who turned up at the door of Palen's Air Museum.

"I'm up on the roof of a hangar, fixing something and he says come down here. I say in a minute, but he says he's got this old engine, so I run down. And there it is, like new in its own crate — a 1920 engine," Palen says.

Seems the mysterious man in black had a friend who went to France in 1920 to buy a state-of-the-art engine. One day the crate from France showed up at the man's door, with a note from the friend to keep an eye on it until his return.

"The guy kept the crate for 50 years, waiting, but the friend never came back," says Palen. "Finally, he figured it was his to sell."

Many of the collectors pay for their hobby with weekend air shows. Barnstorming is a tradition in the short history of flight. It's the reason many began collecting in the first place.

Charles Lindbergh's 1927 flight across the Atlantic gave a new impetus to aviation. Palen, sitting in his dining room next to a white bust of Lindbergh, recalled that airplane production hit new highs from 1927 to 1932.

But with the Depression, the airplane boom died. It was the barnstormers, performing in World War I surplus planes, that kept it alive.

The secret of the magic sign.

In 1946, when we first opened Overton's, the grocery business operated like a lot of others. Come Monday morning, we'd open for the week's business. And every day, right on through Saturday evening each week, we'd work along helping customers, weighing produce and cutting meat.

But since that time, supermarket hours have become more complex. Big chains started extending their hours. Some went to 24 hour days. And then they decided to open Sunday, too. But, it seemed to us that the longer these markets stayed open, the less important being cheerful and helpful became.

Employees were forced to work all night. Keep odd hours. They frowned. They snarled. And who can blame them? Not very many people are cheerful at 4 A.M. on Sunday morning.

That's why we still open at 8 A.M. and close at 7 P.M. every day, Monday through Saturday. (Friday's till 8.) We expect our employees to be cheerful and helpful every hour that we're open. So, we don't ask them to work long days and odd hours.

And guess what? It pays off.

Because Overton's real secret is good service.

Now some people might not agree that being closed on Sundays means good service. But we know our employees enjoy Sunday off. And we believe that being good to our employees means better service to you.

So every Saturday evening at Overton's we hang out the magic sign.

Come see us.

Naval Hero's Life Is Dramatized

Although Kenneth Colley says acting was always at the back of his mind, "as a kid, I didn't know what a play was."

At 15, he joined a YMCA amateur company. The group performed only Shakespeare, however, and the eager Colley found he had bitten off more than he could chew. Despondent, he quit, abandoning his dream for almost 10 years.

Twenty-eight years later he still remembers the wall mural at that "Y." "It didn't mean much to me then, but I now realize it was the Battle of Trafalgar."

Little did he know that one day he would portray the heroic figure most prominent on that wall, Admiral Lord Nelson, in the four-part television series "I Remember Nelson," to be presented on Masterpiece Theatre during their 1981-82 season.

"I Remember Nelson," is not another screen biography. It is a series with a new approach. Nelson is seen through four different pairs of eyes. As no two people see another person in exactly the same way, the four plays each provide a different impression to the man, deeply human as well as exciting, offering as never before a vivid portrait of this colorful, complex figure.

The first play shows him as seen by his wife, Fanny, Lady Nelson (played by Anna Massey); the second by Sir William Hamilton (Sir John Clements), the husband of Nelson's mistress, Emma; the third by his long time friend and Captain, Thomas Hardy (Tim Pigott-Smith); the fourth by a lower-deck gunner during the Battle of Trafalgar (played by Phil Daniels). Into their personal relationships with Nelson are interwoven every aspect of his enigmatic personality, with Emma Hamilton (Geraldine James) providing the thread of romance and tragedy.

The series provides Kenneth Colley with his first starring role in a major series. "We decided to have a good and interesting actor, rather than a household name," says producer Cecil Clarke. "We found him in Kenneth Colley, who has come very much to the fore in recent years, both on television and in the theatre. And he has the right physical appearance."

Who's Got The Bird?

George Segal stars as Sam Spade, Jr., a reluctant private eye who's forced to juggle a conglomeration of oddball criminals in "The Black Bird," airing on ABC-TV Sunday, July 5 (9-11 p.m.). Others appearing in this humorous takeoff on Dashiell Hammett's classic "Maltese Falcon" include Stephane Audran, Lionel Stander and Lee Patrick.

Segal's character finds himself the unwilling heir to a legacy that includes a rundown office in 'over-the-hill' section of San Francisco, his dad's sassy, smart-mouth secretary (Patrick) and the black bird itself.

The action begins with the murder of Guttman (the 'Fat Man' in the original story), whose dying words — "It's black and as long as your arm" — start a desperate search for the long-forgotten falcon. Suddenly, Sam Jr. is beseiged with requests for what everyone thought was a cheap imitation of the real thing.

Among the greedy seekers are John Abbort, who tries to secure the bird but winds up watching "Let's Make a Deal," and Felix Silla, as a shaven-headed Nazi midget. Austin's character is a decided femme fatale who lures Sam to the point of sensual delight only when she's certain he'll collapse from her drugged Chinese food.

Segal is delightful as the shnook with a penchant of letting his parked car roll backwards down the Frisco hills while his extinguished matches transform litter baskets into raging forest fires.

THE Rook Look

AT GARMENT CARE

Independence Day DICKIE ROOK

Fourth of July: a time to celebrate our independence as a nation, while enjoying sizzling barbecues and other scrumptious delicacies in the parks. The British are no longer the enemy, but ugly stains and spots are lurking, ever ready to attach our clothes.

Garments can end up permanently damaged by stains of salad oils, dressings and food greases. The permanent damage usually results from waiting too long to have a stain removed. After 10 days to 3 weeks, most stains start to oxidize and become set in the fabric.

A Cleaner World advises you not to wait to remove those difficult holiday stains. Better yet, declare your independence, and take the stained items promptly to a A Cleaner World, who has the expertise to remove most stains with no damage to your garments.

To help you with your cleaning budget A Cleaner World will give you 10% off your cleaning bill when you present this ad.

DAVID DUKES and Andrea Marcovicci star as two vibrant, carefree, fun-loving young people about to be married when their lives are turned upside down after he is paralyzed in a surfing accident in "Some Kind of Miracle," poignant, powerful dramatic motion picture-for-television airing Tuesday, July 7 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

'Mickey' Returns

One of fiction's most popular detectives returns to the small screen in "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer," to be broadcast on CBS sometime this fall. Kevin Dobson stars as the hard-hitting private eye.

Cindy Pickett is cast as Belda, Hammer's girl Friday. Charles Hallahan is seen as his police friend, and Donna Dixon appears as a damsel in distress.

Win/Lose Semantics

Sportscaster Joe Garagiola points out that whenever there is evidence of unrest on a ballclub that is winning, the circumstance is the result of a "spirited" ball club.

"In contrast," he says, "if the same happens among the players on losing team, it's rampant dissension."

Frank-ly Speaking

Too much education can be a problem, as Daniel J. Travanti, star of "Hill Street Blues" can attect. Travanti, who received a master's degree in English three years ago, occasionally finds grammatical inconsistencies in the series' scripts.

"One of my teachers used to call me contentious," he said. "I guess I can't help myself. Sometimes I'll see something that has Frank Furillo (his character) saying something that isn't grammatically correct. But they tell me that's the way people speak, so I have to accept that and grit my teeth when I say it."

Michelle Will Tell

Q: What has Jayne Kennedy been doing since "Speak Up America" was cancelled? D. METCALF, TARBORO, N.C.

A: The beauteous gal has never been busier! She recently completed filming a remake of the John Garfield film, "Body and Soul"; is now taping segments of two syndicated sports shows, "Jayne Kennedy's NFL Report" and "Weekend Heroes"; and hopes to start another movie soon. This one is "The Dorothy Dandridge Story." Equally involved in all these projects is her talented hubby, actor/producer Leon Kennedy.

Q: I'd like to know something about Robert Pine, one of the 'regulars' on "CHiPs." S.K.L., DREXEL, N.C.

A: "I started out to be a doctor, but thank goodness I discovered acting along the way — and early," says Pine, who's been before the cameras since 1964. Prior to being cast as Sgt. Joe Getrear on "CHiPs," he co-starred in several Disney films and guested on a number of TV series. Pine is married to actress Gwynne Gilford and they have a seven-year-old daughter, Katie.

Q: What happended to Johnny Sheffield, who appeared as 'Boy' in all those "Tarzan" movies back in the 1940s? M. BAKER, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Sheffield, who's not made a movie since "The Black Sheep," a 1956 release, is a big man in both size and real estate investments. He's now in his late 40s (b. 1932), and lives with his wife and their two sons in Malibu, Calif.

Q: Please settle a question concerning the actresses who play Erica Cudahy, Dorian Callison and Leslie Webber — are they related? We are military wives who have a bet with civilian wives that they aren't. Who's right? F.T.G., FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: The troops win this battle — that's for sure! Although Susan Lucci (Erica on "All My Children"), Robin Strasser (Dorian on "One Life To Live") and Denise Alexander (Leslie on "General Hospital") strongly resemble each other, their relationship doesn't go beyond friendship.

Q: I think Mikhail Baryshnikov is a great ballet dancer. What is he doing now? Will he be back on television? 'INTERESTED' IN MT. AIRY, N.C.

A: Most of Baryshnikov's time is spent attending to his duties as the head of the prestigious American Ballet Theater. What free time he has is usually spent with his girl friend, actress Jessica Lang, and their infant son. As for appearances on TV, there's nothing definite, but he'll be back. Viewers love him!

Film Based On Fact

Jamie Lee Curtis, Robert Reed and Bruce Weitz are starring in "The Dorothy Stratten Story," a two-hour NBC World Premiere drama.

Based on a true story, the film focuses on Dorothy Stratten (Curtis), a Canadian girl just out of her teens who goes to Hollywood with Paul Snider (Weitz), her boyfriend/manager — and later, husband — to find fame and success.

Soon after Dorothy's career gets off to a very promising start, her life is snuffed out by Paul when his feelings for her turn to greed and obsession. He then commits suicide.

Reed portrays director David Palmer, who had visions of making Dorothy a Hollywood personality.

FRANCO NERO (l to r), Christopher Lee and Jeff Corey star in "The Pirate," three-hour special movie presentation, based on the Harold Robbins novel, to be rebroadcast Wednesday, July 8 (8-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Drama About Corruption

"White Line Fever," the action-packed drama of an idealistic young man's struggle against the corruption and brutality of the Arizona trucking industry, airs Wednesday, July 8, (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Jan-Michael Vincent, Kay Lenz, Slim Pickens, Don Porter and L.Q. Jones head the cast of this motion picture set in the awe-inspiring Arizona desert.

In "White Line Fever," Vincent plays Carrol Jo Hummer, a likeable Air Force veteran who arrives home to marry his childhood sweeetheart, Jerri (Lenz). He goes ihto debt to buy a massive truck and soon finds himself blackballed when he refuses to smuggle contraband material across state lines. Nursing a set of savagely broken ribs, Hummer decides to muscle his way back to work using the barrel of a gun and eventually picks up some support from his fellow truckers.

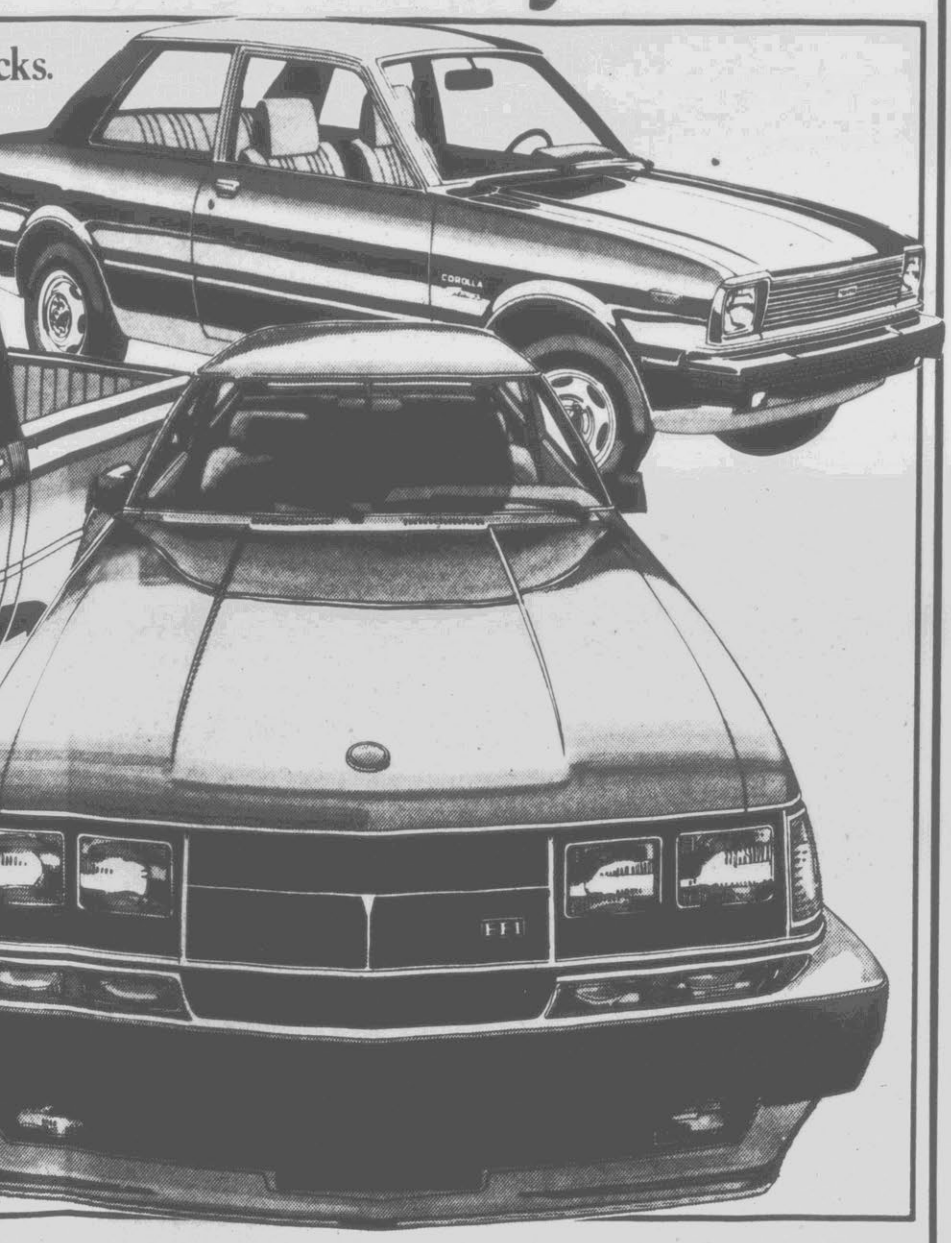

In the meantime, the crooked conglomerate that controls the Arizona trucking industry (as well as the local police and judiciary) spares no violence in trying to stem Hummer's 'organizing.' His rig is desecrated, his body beaten, his house burned and he's even framed for the hit-and-run murder of his father's old partner, Duane (Pickens). Then Jerri suffers a miscarriage, and Hummer really gets angry.

Like the protagonist in the "Walking Tall" films, Hummer represents a raw form of proletarian American hero with the strength and moral steadfastness that the American public finds appealing. The spectacle of an honest working man struggling to build a life while he's in hock up to his neck strikes a thoroughly receptive core, providing impetus to the "White Line Fever's" viewer appeal.

Barker To Host

CBS will telecast "The 1981 Universe Pageant" from the Minskoff Theater in New York City, Monday, July 20. Bob Barker and Elke Sommer will host the event, and their special guests are singer songwriter Peter Allen and the cast of the Broadway musical "42nd Street."

Conrad To Star

Robert Conrad stars as G. Gordon Liddy in "Will," a two-hour NBC telefilm based on the convicted Watergate conspirator's autobiographical best-seller of the same title. The book chronicles his life before, during and after the scandal.

"Will" details how Liddy forcefully overcame various childhood frailties and fears to become a relentless single-minded man unusually devoted to his convictions.

Liddy began his career as an attorney and FBI agent. Tired of being a rear-echelon soldier, he became an assistant district attorney and later made an abortive run for a Republican Congressional seat (1968). He eventually was persuaded to join the Committee to Re-elect the President (Nixon) as General Counsel, and was arrested, tried, convicted and sentenced to 20 years in prison for leading two break-ins at the Democratic National Headquarters.

Bertinelli Stars

Valerie Bertinelli and Robert Desiderio have the key roles in "The Princess and the Cabbie," a CBS telefilm.

Bertinelli's character is Joanna Jones, a pretty, young woman who has been hidden away from society by her over-protective father because of a learning disability. Desiderio plays the feisty cab driver who helps re-educate her.

Film Focuses On Bittersweet Love

Robin Hood returns to Sherwood Forest after twenty years of warfare for an all-too-brief reunion with his true love in "Robin and Marian," ABC's Friday Night Movie, July 10 (9-11 p.m.). Audrey Hepburn and Sean Connery star as the legendary lovers in this bittersweet tale. Other cast members include Robert Shaw, Richard Harris, Nicol Williamson and Denholm Elliott.

The film opens as Robin, disillusioned with the wasted tears and bearing contempt for King Richard the Lionhearted, returns home from the Crusades. Accompanied by faithful Little John (Williamson), he cuts his way through gnarled vines to rejoin Will Scarlet and Friar Tuck at Sherwood Forest.

But, to his dismay, they inform him that Marian has spent the last two decades as a nun. With his heart in his throat, Robin travels to Nottingham Abbey, finds her being held captive by his longtime arch-rival, the Sheriff of Nottingham (Shaw), and sweeps the protesting Marian onto his horse and into the safety of Sherwood Forest. But the lush green setting of the tranquil forest undoubtedly aids Marian in making the decision to relinquish her religious vows and climb back into the scarred arms of her former lover.

Connery's Robin Hood, masterfully fighting the devasting effects of age with a fiercely stubborn twinkle in his eye, meets his perfect mate in the radiant delicacy of Hepburn. Williamson is extremely effective as Robin's bosom companion while Shaw's Nottingham is the incarnation of subtle villainy.

Sweet Taste Of Victory

Sugar Ray Leonard became boxing's only double title holder, capturing the WBA junior middle-weight championship with a ninth-round knockout of Ayub Kalule in Houston and setting up a multi-million dollar showdown against Thomas Hearns, the current WBA welterweight champion. Sugar Ray wants to hold three boxing titles by the time he retires. At the present time he also holds the WBC welterweight title.

The Kalule fight which was pre-recorded on June 25 will be broadcasted July 5, at 4 p.m., on NBC-TV's "SportsWorld." Sugar Ray had to move up in weight class for this fight, even though there are those who said it is not a wise move. Fighters who have gone up in weight classes have not really had that good a time of it. Recently, Eddie Mustafa Muhammed went from light heavyweight to heavyweight and suffered a defeat at the hands of a fighter who was not all that experienced. Angelo Dundee, however, felt that Sugar Ray could take the title from its current holder.

SUGAR RAY LEONARD and Auyb Kalule fight will be telecast on NBC's SportsWorld Sunday, July 5 at 4:00 p.m.

Bob Arum, a boxing promoter of some merit, has said that Leonard will be fighting out of his class, and would be beaten by the undefeated Kalule. There was little doubt in the minds of Leonard's handlers that Kalule has a tremendous amount of talent, and would be one of the toughest opponent Leonard has ever gotten into the ring with. They also know that Sugar Ray has had some tough fights, notably the one that cost him his welterweight crown. That fight was against Roberto Duran.

The big question was whether Leonard would be able to absorb the weight he had to gain to reach the 154 pound minimum. The current welterweight champion said he would have no problems at all and feels stronger at the heavier weight. The added weight, however, was expected to decrease Leonard's mobility, something he has been noted for during his five year career as a professional boxer.

Sugar Ray expressed his thoughts before the fight. He said that should he defeat Kalule, he would attempt to gain the middleweight crown currently held by Marvin Hagler. Hagler said he would fight Leonard.

Kulale is described as a skilled fighter who can take a punch as well as dish one out, and is the kind of boxer who seems to fight best when he is hurt. He is fighting in the weight class he is comfortable with, and his defenses of the crown have not been that difficult. This bout is a real slugfest and worth the price of admission. TV viewers should consider it a rare treat.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — ERIK ESTRADA turned down an invitation to a recent bash held at the WHITE HOUSE because the guest list didn't include his best gal — BEVERLY SASOON.

Meanwhile, the "CHiPs" star is wading through a huge stack of personal appearance offers from Brazil, Argentina and Venezuela, where the series is Numero Uno with TV viewers.

Warbling 30 or more tunes a day on "FACE THE MUSIC" has paid off handsomely for songstress LISA DONOVAN. She's just been pegged to topline yet another musical game show, untitled at this writing.

Composer-turned-actor ALEX HARVEY has grabbed his most important dramatic assignment to date with the title role in "THE BEN HOGAN STORY." Filming is scheduled to be done on locations in Texas next spring.

The citizens of Arlington, Ore., honored the town's 'favorite son' by celebrating "DOC SEVERINSEN DAY" last week. And the special guest was so carried away by the gala occasion that he brought along key members of his "TONIGHT SHOW" band and treated the happy folks to a concert.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask" Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

A look beyond the horizon.

FOR KENNETH RING, professor of psychology, University of Connecticut

Do you foresee the day when the possibility of life after death can be proven? —E.W., Grand Island, Neb.

● I think as this research is continued and more people become aware of it (and we have an organization — the International Association for Near-Death Studies — which exists to further these aims) many individuals will become convinced that there is a high likelihood that physical death is not the end of life. This is not something that can be proven scientifically, but our research can be interpreted as providing more evidence which suggests this possibility. It's up to each interested individual to evaluate the evidence for himself. Perhaps the best way to do this is to talk with people who have had NDE's (near-death experiences) themselves — they're the real experts.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What is the relationship between Yoko Ono and the three surviving Beatles? —E.W., Norwich, Conn.

● According to a family friend, John Lennon's widow was very unhappy at not being invited to the recent wedding of Ringo Starr and Barbara Bach in London. That friend reports that Yoko — who feels John is still with her and protective of her — doesn't mind the exclusion herself but believes Lennon would be hurt at the way she was ignored. Lennon's death did not seem to bring about a rapprochement among George Harrison, Ringo Starr, Paul McCartney and herself, although they were quick to extend condolences and express their grief. It has been said that a business meeting between the trio and Yoko, intended to unravel their complicated business affairs, is in the offing.

Wide World

Yoko: the fifth Beatle after all?

FOR ELIZABETH TAYLOR, star of Broadway's The Little Foxes

When you look back on this play, a decade from now, what will you remember most about the experience? —F.N., Albany, N.Y.

● The fact that I just went ahead and did it is nothing short of remarkable. Also the fact that a week after the opening (my Broadway debut) I received a Tony nomination. It will put an end to the attitude that Hollywood stars cannot make the transition to the legit stage.

FOR LEO SAYER, recording star

What did you mean when you said that, professionally, you were your own worst enemy? —V.K., Decatur, Ill.

● Because I've made a point of confusing my fans (or the people who hopefully buy my records). Throughout my career I've been a love balladeer, a soul singer, a rock 'n roller. Although all this proves in a way that I'm versatile, it has caused me to suffer commercially. In fact, my whole career looks like the charts they put at the end of a hospital bed.

FOR STUART E. WHITE, orchestra leader

What's the worst thing that can happen to an orchestra leader? —H.O., Natchez, Miss.

● Being given the wrong directions to a party. I'm told it's the Hilton, but it's really the Statler Hilton. Can you think of anything worse? That's why I get to every job at least two hours early, so that if an error of this nature does occur (some people don't realize there are places with similar-sounding names), I have time to rectify the mistake.

FOR SANDRA WINSTON, author of The Entrepreneurial Woman

You went from suburban housewife-mother to management consultant. Did you ever doubt your choice? —R.M., Green Bay, Wis.

● Of course. Picture this: pressure building up from a client to deliver a completed training manual; publisher screaming for final chapters in book. I wonder why I am doing this to myself. But then the crises pass. I feel invigorated by meeting these challenges.

FOR CAROL STALLONE, executive director, National Women's Hall of Fame, Inc.

Has Mary Lyons (who founded Mt. Holyoke, America's first girls' school) been installed as a member of the Women's Hall of Fame? —J.J. Johnson, Pocatello, Idaho

● No. The National Women's Hall of Fame has so far inducted 27 women. Our next Honors Ceremony will be July 19, and we plan to induct additional outstanding American women from the past and present every year. Mary Lyons is a candidate for future induction.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What did Gene Barry mean when he said Clark Gable was responsible for his new enterprise, a chain of photo-processing shops? — R.M., Little Rock, Ark.

● In 1954 Gene was in Hong Kong, making Soldier of Fortune with Clark Gable. He wanted to take some pictures of Gable, as a memento, but he didn't have a camera. Off went Gene to buy one, took some snapshots and became hooked on photography because of his professional results and Gable's encouragement.

PRO AND CON

Should Congressional Members Be Permitted to Earn Unlimited Outside Income?

PRO Representative Louis Stokes (D.-Ohio), chairman, Ethics Committee

Yes. Members of the Senate are not under any limitation on the amount of income they can earn from any source outside of their Congressional salaries. However, the House has imposed on its members a limitation on outside income with the exception of investment income. Therefore, we have two standards set for co-equal legislative bodies. The filing of financial disclosure statements required of both House and Senate members provides an adequate vehicle for Congressional leaders and the public to monitor the outside income of members.

Question submitted by Daniel Paley, Hollywood, Fla.

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Senator Howell T. Heflin (D.-Ala.), vice-chairman, Senate Select Committee on Ethics

No. We are elected for one purpose: serving our constituents. Those constituents expect and deserve full-time representation; they question the time involved and the relationship of the member to the source when income is received by a member of Congress because of services rendered outside the Congress. At the same time, the financial responsibilities facing members are significant. A ban on all outside income would disadvantage members without personal fortunes. Let's strike a balance: some outside income but with limits.

AFTER VIETNAM

The Long Battle to Readjust

Vietnam divided America as no foreign adventure in our history ever had. The Vietnam vets ask not for our monuments or our pity. Simply for our help and understanding in rebuilding their lives.

By Al Santoli

—When I came home, I cried when I saw my parents, but that was the last time I cried for a very long time. I didn't feel anything about anybody anymore. I had no feelings, no feelings of love or hate or anything. Just nothing. And I didn't know why. I guess it was because I was emotionally exhausted. I had been through the highs and the lows and the fears and the hatred and the caring for a year, and I had nothing left to give anymore. Gayle Smith

—I have nightmares and sweats. I'll be sweating something fierce. My wife will say, "What's wrong with you?" I'll think of something else to say. I've never talked about these dreams with my wife 'cause she can't understand it, you know. She's been a civilian all her life and how would she understand it? The persons I can talk to is the rap group or another Vietnam soldier. Robert Rawls

—In the war you learned so much so quickly at such a young age. That is part of the readjustment problem for a lot of people coming back. There's some trauma, but they've had their whole value system changed. Scott Higgins

Starting over: Gayle Smith, a nurse in Vietnam, now lives in Vermont with her husband and child.

Vietnam vet Robert Rawls: "My wife will say, 'What's wrong with you?' She can't understand it."

There is a deep trust among many of the 2.8 million veterans who served in the Vietnam War and who once relied upon each other's skills and instincts to stay alive. But most Americans have yet to hear from the soldiers themselves about what they experienced in Vietnam. For the country to come to terms with our still unresolved feelings about the Vietnam War, we need to listen to and try to understand the memories of the men and women who experienced it firsthand.

For many years, Vietnam veterans chose to remain silent about their wartime experiences. There was trauma for the returning soldier — whose average age was only 19. The experience of combat was awesome, and the veterans' feelings about themselves were complicated by the turmoil at home. We were once idealistic young soldiers who risked our lives believing in the goodness of our country's motives, and then found ourselves blamed by the media and by other citizens for taking part in a war that we did not understand. We came home disillusioned young men with old men's eyes. James Bombard, a former infantry lieutenant in the 101st Airborne Division, sums up that disillusionment:

"I can remember sitting at McCord Air Base before I went to Vietnam with a friend of mine, Hunter Shotwell....He was a West Pointer and had been to Vietnam before the build-up as an adviser....He had a beautiful wife and a little child. I said to him, 'Hunter, why are you going back? You're going to get out of the Army.' He wanted to be a lawyer. He wanted to set his life in motion. And he said, 'I'm going back because I am a soldier....I believe in the nation and I believe that this is my duty.'

"Right after the Tet offensive I found out that Hunter Shotwell had been killed. And I couldn't help but feel that had been such a loss, such a waste. He represented to me what was good and right in the nation. And he was destroyed. I thought of his little child and his wife, what that did to them. And with that death and many like his, with each death a little bit of the fiber of what was good in this country was being destroyed."

Veteran James Bombard came home from the war, got married, began to raise a family and found his way back into the mainstream of society. But for many veterans the road back was much more difficult. In March of this year the Veterans Administration released the results of an eight-year study that illuminates some of the problems vets face. According to the report, Vietnam veterans have "significantly more" social, psychological and career problems than nonveterans, and combat related stress-emotional problems — known as delayed stress syndrome — have led to arrests, drug and alcohol abuse and medical problems.

The report also indicated that, of those studied, white-collar jobs were found by only 50 percent of the Vietnam veterans, while 54 percent of the veterans from the same era and 69 percent of the nonveterans had found white-collar jobs. And a total of 24 percent of the Vietnam veterans who had been involved in heavy combat were later arrested for criminal offenses, compared to 14 percent of nonveterans.

One reason for delayed stress syndrome is that when soldiers came home from the Vietnam War they were given no buffer period or

How to Break Bad News to Children

By Jane Marks

Many parents have a tendency to hide painful facts from their children on the theory that the less they tell them about Grandma's worsening illness, Dad's job loss or the impending divorce, the less they'll suffer. There is, however, another point of view: that well-meant "white lies" do children more harm than good and that parents need to help their offspring understand and deal with anything that changes their lives — even if it's ugly or scary or embarrassing.

"Not talking about something tragic or threatening doesn't make it go away," says Ann S. Kliman, author of Crisis (Holt, Rinehart & Winston) and a director of the Center for Preventive Psychiatry in White Plains, N.Y. "If we don't level," she says, "then our kids are forced to draw their own conclusions — which are always much worse than the facts."

Mary Lopez

For instance, if Grandmother's gone to the hospital, 4-year-old Ted may be secretly convinced that it was his fault — maybe because he kissed her when he had a cold or because he was angry at her. His sister, Sally, 6, might be afraid of catching Grandma's disease, and 3-year-old Kris may feel angry at his parents for letting Grandma get sick.

"We mustn't underestimate our children's ability to swing with reality," Kliman says. If Dad is laid off from work, for example, and you don't tell the kids, then they will fear that it's something they've done that makes Dad angry and Mom sad.

Most children can handle the truth far better than parents realize. But it's essential in explaining a painful truth to offer your child reassurance. In the case of job loss, for example, a child won't feel insecure as long as you can say, "Look, dear, it won't be easy for a while, but things will get better."

Generally, the sooner you explain things the better. When Kathy and George were about to break up, they agreed to "say nothing for a while" for 5-year-old Michael's sake. Neither one of them wanted to be the one to break the news.

Late one night, Kathy heard Michael sobbing and she knew it was time to put her own pain aside and talk to him. As she did so, she found that the dreaded act of "telling Michael" was easier than putting it off had been.

"Michael," she began. "I don't know why Dad isn't happy. Maybe we married each other for the wrong reasons or maybe we grew apart without knowing it. One thing I'm sure of is that it isn't anything you've done that's making this happen."

She could see by the look on her child's face that this was a major revelation. Kathy went on to explain that while Daddy wouldn't be living at home anymore, he would still see Michael every week and Michael would be able to call him — every day if he wanted to. "I am sad and lonesome with Dad leaving," Kathy said. "But that doesn't mean you have to take care of me. I'm still the grownup and you are still the child and I'll still take care of you."

Kliman's point is that anything can be explained if we believe it can — and we all end up the better for it. Nothing is too terrible to talk about — or listen to. "It's painful to have to admit to our kids who depend on us that there are devastating random things in the world that none of us can predict or prevent," she says. Still, you can let your child know that you will provide him with all the protection that's available; but even more important, you can be there for him — to listen, hold him and bear with his tears and his terror and not run away or hush him up because you feel scared.

When there's no conflict, no sense of shame or guilt, we are marvelously creative at helping our children understand anything. It is only when we feel upset and unsure that we get tongue-tied and find it very, very hard to reach out to a child. "But that," Kliman says, "is exactly when we need to do it the most." Children are resilient and will take on whatever strength the adults around them can give. Your child doesn't need to be sealed off from reality in order to grow up unscathed. He needs you to help him understand what's going on — so he can feel the pain, the loss, and the anger, and eventually accept it. FW

PEOPLE QUIZ

Do Self-Confidence and Creativity Go Hand in Hand?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. There are certain personality traits that tend to go hand in hand with creative intelligence.
2. Attractive men look more intelligent to most people than those with just run-of-the-mill looks.
3. A person's ability to think creatively varies, depending on the mood he's in.
4. When it comes to making a self-estimate of one's intelligence, most wives surpass their husbands.

ANSWERS

1. True. At Middle Tennessee State University, students were given personality tests followed by a standard test of creative thinking. It was found that those who scored high in creative intelligence tended to differ markedly from low scorers in that they possessed to a significantly greater extent: self-confidence, enjoyment of challenging tasks, versatility, organizational ability, imagination, openness to ideas from others.

2. False. Studies of the effect of physical appearance on the perception of others at the University of Pittsburgh, show that people tend to entertain stereotypes, or preconceived opinions, with respect to attractiveness. It was found that "most prominently, on intelligence-related scales, the unattractive (or relatively unprepossessing) male was rated higher than the attractive male."

3. False. Ohio State University studies indicate that a person's creative intelligence (characterized by originality of thought and execution) functions independently from the mood he happens to be in. If you possess this type of intelligence, it always works for you. "Practically no evidence was found supporting the notion of a relationship between creativity and [emotional] state."

4. True. Studies conducted at East Tennessee State University showed that "wives were better at judging their own intelligence than were the husbands." This matches the findings of other studies that show that women are more introspective than men and have better insight into themselves. FW

COVER STORY

After the war, James Bombard settled down to raise a family. But for many vets, the homecoming was far more turbulent.

counseling to prepare them psychologically to re-enter society. In many cases, they were suddenly home from the battlefield with all survival and combat instincts still functioning full tilt.

"The immediate homecoming period was disastrous for many veterans," explains Dr. Arthur Blank Jr., an associate professor of psychiatry at Yale University who has studied the problems of Vietnam veterans. "A lot of guys walked off the airplanes and faced, instead of celebration, demonstrations and yelling. One patient told me that when he walked off the plane toward the crowd, a demonstrator spat right on his face. Also, the Vietnam War was an unpopular and controversial war There was no sense of doing something valuable to make up for the experienced horrors. And because the war was lost, the suffering became more acute."

It was not only the soldiers who had to survive the shock of homecoming. Our families — the people who loved us and cared for us the most — were directly affected. And they, too, were unprepared to face the changes that the war created. "When these guys saw their families, the families didn't want to hear anything about the war," says Dr. Blank. "They just wanted to forget it ever happened."

More than anything, a veteran needs family members to listen. Stephen Klinkhammer, a former navy hospital corpsman, believes he has weathered the storm of his wartime experiences in large part because of the great compassion and understanding of his wife. She has encouraged him to express his feelings and relate painful memories.

"I still sleep with one eye open," Stephen says. "And I wake up with bad dreams that I have of taking fire and watching people being murdered and being a part of that process....I get really angry, and I have to cry a lot and talk....My wife feels inadequate. I tell her, "There's nothing you can do that can be any more adequate than just to be here."

Dr. Blank agrees that it is essential for the friends and family members of vets to listen: "Those of us who come in contact with veterans should actively help them re-enter society by letting them talk, encouraging them to become active again, and never making them feel guilty."

In 1979 Congress voted to fund a network of outreach centers for Vietnam veterans under the auspices of the V.A. A veteran could walk in to one of these storefront centers and receive counseling and support from fellow veterans.

In less than one year of operation, 91 Veterans Outreach Centers have been frequented by over 55,000 of the estimated 500,000 veterans who suffer delayed stress problems. Many find these centers to be the only environment where they can work out their postwar combat trauma in confidence among peers.

Despite the success of these centers, the Reagan Administration has proposed closing them down as part of the budget cuts. But as this story went to press, it appeared that Congress would provide the necessary funds to continue these centers.

Just as vets and their families have had the courage to face their memories of Vietnam, our country as a whole needs to show similar courage in dealing with our memories of the war. Without that courage, the Vietnam syndrome will continue to haunt us. By dealing honestly with the past, we can move forward into the future much more confidently. FW

British Actress Jane Seymour Captures America

By Katrine Ames

Jane Seymour defies logic and convention. She has become a British staple of the American TV and movie diet and yet, she says, many people don't know who Jane Seymour is. She was cursed with flat feet but became a ballerina anyway. She has had little formal training and yet may become one of the most successful actresses of her generation.

Seymour, 30, blames her versatility for the fact that people have a hard time recognizing her. "I haven't been typecast," she says. "In England I played exotic beauties or Persian princesses. I also did a lot of Victorian virgins."

When she moved to America a few years ago, her roles became even more varied. "I'm lucky," she says. "The range of material I've been given on U.S. networks is outrageous: a pioneer woman who goes mad [The Awakening Land], an alcoholic dress designer [Seventh Avenue], a woman who incarnates evil [East of Eden].

Seymour is unblinkingly straightforward about herself: "I have confidence about me as a person," she says. "My own standards are very high, but you can't do more than your best....Imperfection is the best thing I have going for me." Though considered beautiful, she sees herself as having "rat-colored hair and a nose that never made up its mind between being Jewish or Aryan." Nor did her eyes agree on a color scheme—one is green, the other, brown.

Her versatility and self-confidence can both be traced to her background. Born Joyce Penelope Wilhelmina Frankenburg, she grew up near London, the eldest of three daughters of an English-Jewish doctor and his Dutch-Protestant wife. "My family is very supportive and I have a marvelous role model in my parents," she says.

Seymour made her professional dancing debut at 13 with the London Festival Ballet, but a knee injury soon forced her in another direction. She went into musical comedy, until a one-line role in the movie Oh! What a Lovely War changed her course again. At 18, Jane decided to study acting but found herself turned down by three drama schools for being too young. So "For a while I had a career of screen tests," she recalls. A more fruitful period followed: major parts in popular series on British TV, wide-ranging repertory theater and the eye-catching role of Solitaire, James Bond's girl in Live and Let Die.

Seymour never did go to drama school — and she feels no loss. "I don't believe in acting lessons," she says. "I don't go to classes. People say I break the rules. I didn't know there were any rules. I don't know what I'm doing and I don't want to because maybe I couldn't do it then."

© Robin Platzer, Images

Seymour has survived her on- and off-camera growing pains with no apparent scars. Her two marriages — to Michael Attenborough, son of director Richard Attenborough, and to a British businessman — ended in amiable divorces.

This summer, she will marry David Flynn, an American money-manager. "For the first time I'm able to contemplate spending my life with one person," she says, beaming. "David's clients are actors and musicians. He understands my business and isn't threatened." Seymour and Flynn are expecting a child around Christmas.

For the moment, Seymour is taking time off to read scripts and prepare herself for motherhood. Recently she stepped down from a five-month run as Mozart's wife, Constanze, in the hit Broadway show, Amadeus.

This does not mean, however, that she is planning to give up her career. "I won't stop acting," she says. "I intend to be hanging on at 80. I love climbing into characters. The day it's no longer interesting, I'll give it up." FW

Observations

No one for cricket? "The reason cricket isn't our national sport is that the people of Massachusetts (and a few spirited neighbors) got fed up with an arrangement that had once been easy and pleasant but eventually became intolerable." Not a bad thought for this Independence Day weekend, from Boston Herald American articles by Massachusetts Gov. Edward J. King. Yesterday tea, today oil. Having to import so much foreign oil is "a national disgrace," the governor says, urging our country to mobilize its "Yankee independence" to produce more energy at home. That's a thought refreshing enough to toast with a summer Sunday's glass of iced tea (the Ceylon, Darjeeling and south Indian varieties, if you'd like to taste what the Boston Tea Party dumped).

America the bountiful. From Boston's Old North Church ("One if by land...") to the missions of Old California, the U.S. "has plenty of oil and natural gas," Gov. King notes. "We have coal in abundance, and shale oil we've barely touched...uranium to keep nuclear power humming for decades, and we're just getting started on conservation programs and renewable energy sources like solar and geothermal power." Then why do we also have our still-heavy dependency on foreign energy? Gov. King recalls Sam Adams' words back in the 1770s: *"It is to be feared that the people will be so accustomed to bondage as to forget they were ever free."

"The Redcoats are coming—unless they run out of gas!"

Liberty or debt? Instead of squabbling, one region of the U.S. against another, our energy needs require a united home front effort—New England and the Old South, East and West, energy-rich and energy-poor states alike. "We must all hang together," Ben Franklin remarked at the signing of the Declaration of Independence, "or assuredly we shall all hang separately." Still true. Gov. King points out, for even today "there's a big crowd out there that enjoys the sight of Uncle Sam twisting slowly in the wind." The cost of our foreign-oil dependency is nearing $100 billion a year, "money we urgently need here at home in order to create jobs, to revive our failing industrial strength, and to fight inflation." When any part of America finds and produces more energy, everybody gains.

Rally round! We can't declare energy independence overnight, not when it takes billions in exploration and production outlays just to keep from slipping backward on the energy escalator. But we could cut our oil imports in half by 1990, says Gov. King. How? "Nothing revolutionary, but only enough change in government energy policy to stabilize oil and gas production at present levels, double the national use of coal, and complete the nuclear plants that already have been issued government permits." Continue conservation, develop synfuels and solar, he adds. And balance "the goals of environmental safety and those of energy security." If you agree with his call for action, then volunteer your thoughts to Capitol Hill...and to your state capital. That's the democratic way, and the united voice of America's people would be a shout heard 'round the world.

It's free: For a booklet on "Making your voice heard in Washington," mail a postcard to Box V at the address below. The booklet won't put words in your mouth, but it will show you how to send your own message more effectively.

NEIGHBORS' RECIPE EXCHANGE

By Marilyn Hansen

If you have a recipe to share, write: Marilyn Hansen, Neighbors' Recipe Exchange, FAMILY WEEKLY magazine, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. For every recipe published, FAMILY WEEKLY will pay $10. Recipes must include your name, address, telephone number and the newspaper in which you read FAMILY WEEKLY. We cannot answer letters or return recipes. In case of duplication, recipes with the earliest postmark will be used. All recipes become the property of FAMILY WEEKLY.

SLUSH

- 4 cups sugar
- 6 cups water
- 1 can (46 ozs.) pineapple juice
- 2 cans (12-oz. size) frozen orange juice concentrate, undiluted
- 1 can (12 ozs.) frozen lemonade concentrate, undiluted
- 5 bananas, mashed
- 6 bottles (1-qt. size) lemon-lime, orange or ginger ale-flavored carbonated beverage

1. Measure sugar and water into saucepan. Heat, stirring until sugar dissolves; bring to boiling and boil 1 minute. Refrigerate until cold.

2. Mix chilled mixture with pineapple juice, orange juice and lemonade concentrates and bananas. Pour into 5 (1-qt. size) containers; cover, label and freeze.

3. At serving time, half-fill tall glasses with lemon-lime soda; spoon in frozen mixture to fill. Serve with spoons and straws.

Makes 30 to 35 glasses

Linda writes, "I am a young homemaker and always searching for new and interesting recipes. I follow your column and especially thank you for the 100 Cookie recipe. It was delicious; my little girls enjoyed them so much, and it made enough to freeze a second batch.

"The Slush is a summer-drink idea. I make it up, freeze a large portion of it and use it directly from the freezer on those hot and muggy days."

Patty Aleshevich, a good cook in Palmer, Alaska, sends us a recipe that's sure to please the poppy seed lovers.

POPPY SEED CITRUS CAKE

- 4 eggs
- 1 cup vegetable oil
- 1½ cups milk
- 3 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 2 cups sugar
- 1½ teaspoons baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons grated orange rind
- 2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
- ⅓ cup poppy seed

1. In large bowl, using electric mixer, beat eggs thoroughly. Blend in oil and milk.

2. Add flour, sugar, soda and salt. Mix well; stir in orange and lemon rind and poppy seed.

3. Pour batter into a greased and floured 10-inch tube pan or 3-quart bundt pan. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for about 1 hour and 15 minutes or until cake tests done.

4. Cool on rack 1 hour, then turn out of pan and cool completely on rack.

Makes 10 to 12 servings

Patty says, "This is a yummy cake that I like to serve at a lazy Sunday brunch."

The Aleshevichs read FAMILY WEEKLY in the Times, Anchorage, Alaska.

From Ann Threadgill in big Texas we received a very pleasing cake recipe.

TOASTED COCONUT CAKE

- 1 pkg. (18.5 ozs.) butter recipe yellow cake mix with pudding
- 1 cup flaked coconut, toasted
- ½ cup finely chopped pecans
- 1 cup sour cream
- 4 eggs
- ½ cup vegetable oil
- ½ cup milk
- ⅓ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon ground cinnamon

1. In large bowl, combine all ingredients except sugar and cinnamon. Blend at low speed; beat at medium speed 3 minutes.

2. Mix sugar and cinnamon and swirl through batter; do not mix in completely.

3. Pour batter into greased 10-inch tube pan and bake in preheated 325°F. oven for about 60 to 70 minutes or until cake tests done. Cool on rack for 1 hour, then turn out of pan to cool completely.

Makes 10 to 12 servings

The Threadgills read FAMILY WEEKLY in the Express-News, San Antonio, Texas.

TUNA CHEESE PATTIES

- 2 cans (6½- or 7-oz. size) tuna, drained
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- ¼ cup pickle relish, drained
- 2 tablespoons wheat germ
- ½ cup bread crumbs
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- ¼ cup yogurt or sour cream
- ½ teaspoon celery salt
- ½ teaspoon paprika
- ¼ teaspoon basil leaves
- 1 cup shredded cheese
- Shredded lettuce
- Sandwich buns or toast

1. Combine all ingredients except the cheese, lettuce and buns in a bowl. Mix well. Shape mixture into 6 (4-oz. size) patties.

2. Place on broiler rack and broil, about 4 inches from heating element about 4 minutes or until golden brown. Turn and broil second side about 3 to 4 minutes or until brown.

3. Sprinkle with cheese and broil until melted and bubbly.

4. Serve with shredded lettuce on toasted sandwich buns.

Makes 6 servings

WHAT IN THE WORLD

CAUSE FOR PAUSE

Ever wonder how baseball's traditional "seventh inning stretch" originated?

According to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., one theory says it all began in 1882. Manhattan, a Catholic college, was playing a semi-pro club called the Metropolitans. Brother Jasper, Manhattan's athletic director, was in charge of keeping the student fans sitting reverently and quietly at the games, and one particularly hot and muggy day, he noticed the fans becoming restless and fidgety. So before Manhattan came to bat in the seventh inning he told the students to stand and stretch for a few minutes.

The idea worked and was repeated at other Manhattan games. And since Manhattan annually played the professional New York Giants, the practice spread to major league fans — and it's one we maintain today.

CRAWL IN; CHECK OUT

In describing an innovative Japanese hotel, somehow the old joke "The room was so small even the mice were hunchbacked," comes to mind. For $11 a night, visitors to Osaka can check into the Capsule Inn — the self-proclaimed "business hotel for the year 2100." There they crawl into one of 418 plastic capsules — stacked two-high — that measure 4 feet by 11 inches high, 4 feet by 11 inches wide and 6 feet by 7 inches deep.

Granted it's not the Hilton, but each capsule does have its own TV, radio, alarm clock, mirror and air-conditioning. There are vending machines and sofas in the lobby, where guests lounge about in orange terry cloth robes provided free by management. And for $2 extra, a sauna is available in the basement.

Reportedly the Capsule Inn is filled almost every night, mostly with businessmen traveling on fixed expense accounts.

TALK IS CHEAP

It's been estimated that in most communication situations, people retain only one-tenth of what we say. And according to one expert, this is often the result of one simple mistake.

"Usually, we talk only from our side of the fence. We don't take into account where the other person is coming from, what his interests in what we're saying might be," points out John Connellan, president of The Executive Technique, a communication training program based in Chicago that offers seminars in several cities.

For instance, Connellan says, an example of poor family communication may be when a child asks, "Why should I do my homework?" and the parent answers, "Because you have to" or "Because I said so." Instead, he advises, "Look at it from the child's point of view and retort, 'Do your homework so you can graduate on time this spring and then go on vacation with us in the summer.'"

Connellan adds that communication within a family suffers from special handicaps: "The levels of closeness involved often force people to get emotional. Then they get defensive and retreat into talking about themselves and away from considering others' interests."

TOO MANY M.D.'S BY 1990?

Robert Neubecker

By 1990, the U.S. will have 536,000 doctors — or 70,000 more than needed. By 2000, there will be 145,000 more doctors than necessary. A four-year study, by the Graduate Medical Education National Advisory Committee, blames the coming excess on three factors: a substantial increase in the size of classes entering med school during the last 12 years; the influx of thousands of foreign doctors and U.S. graduates of overseas med schools into this country and the growing role of nonphysician health providers such as nurse practitioners, physician assistants and midwives.

GOLDFINGER

There's gold in them thar hills and Charles Overbey wants to help you find it. The "hills" are the Appalachian Mountains of the Southeast U.S., and after extensive research, Overbey, an engineer and retired NASA executive, has put together detailed maps of just where that gold is — all the way from Alabama to northwest of Washington D.C.

All you need to become a prospector is a shovel, $5 gold pan, magnifying glass and small plastic vial. And with the price of gold hovering near $500 an ounce, maybe it's worth a try.

But don't expect to get rich, warns Overbey: "You'll probably find only a few specks, but best of all, it's an outdoor activity the family can enjoy year round."

Maps of the gold in North Carolina and Virginia are now available, and Overbey is working on ones for Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina. The maps cost $6 per state and can be obtained by sending a check to Big Ten, Inc., P.O. Box 1231, Cocoa Beach, Fla. 32931.

STERILIZATIONS SOAR

Voluntary sterilization is now the world's most popular form of birth control, with one-third of all married couples who use some form of contraception relying on it, notes a new report by Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health.

The use of voluntary sterilization has increased fivefold over the past decade, to a current level of 100 million couples worldwide. The leading country in numbers of sterilizations is China, with 40 million couples relying on this method. India is next with 25 million. In the U.S., sterilizations have risen from 3 million to 13 million couples in the past 10 years, with the percentages divided about evenly between males and females.

My Feet Were Killing Me...Until I Found Relief in Germany!

IT was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted —see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Germany with my own countrymen.

In the last nine years over a quarter million Americans of all ages—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

MADE FOR YOUR FEET ALONE

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom formed and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

NO RISK OFFER

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, pain in the balls of your feet, burning nerve ends, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet. Flexible Featherspring will bring you relief with every step you take or your money back.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Germany can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. No salesman will call. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

TAKE YOUR PICK

OR—if you prefer, you may take a special trial-membership and receive

6 RECORDS OR TAPES 1¢ plus shipping handling

If you are just an occasional record or tape buyer...if you prefer not to obligate yourself to purchase eight more selections...or if you cannot find 10 selections you want right now—here's a perfect opportunity to "try out" the Club on a special trial-membership basis!

Just fill in the special "Trial-Membership Application" at the right—and we'll send you ANY 6 records or tapes—ALL for only 1¢, plus shipping and handling. In exchange, you simply agree to buy as few as four selections (at regular Club prices) during the coming three years. Think of it—only four selections and you have three whole years in which to buy them! And that's all there is to it!

As a trial member, you'll enjoy all of the benefits of regular membership as described on the following page—but without any lengthy commitment...you may cancel at any time after buying just four more selections. So if you'd prefer to enroll now under this special "get acquainted" offer—mail the special application today, together with only $1.00 (that's 1¢ for your 6 introductory selections, plus 99¢ to cover shipping and handling). Read the advertisement for details on how the Club works.

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you for at least 50% off regular Club prices (only $3.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 6 introductory selections. This half-price purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 3 more selections (instead of 4) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number you want.

Here's the "Gold Box" you've seen on TV —use it to get an extra selection

NOTE: all applications are subject to review and Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

TRIAL-MEMBERSHIP APPLICATION

Yes, here's a "juke box" that will play your favorite music for hours on end! Just "push the buttons" for the 10 albums you want and write in their numbers on the application. Then fill in the entire application and mail it, together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 10 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you simply agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years – and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest... plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing – it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98 – plus shipping and handling. (Multiple-unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.) And if you decide to continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our generous, money-saving bonus plan.

10-Day Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation. So you risk absolutely nothing by acting now!

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now – and we'll give it to you for at least 50% off regular Club prices (only $3.99). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 10 introductory selections. ● FASHION NOTE! Keeping your wardrobe up to snuff? Shakespeare penned these words on the subject in Much Ado About Nothing: "Thef ash ionw ears outm orea ppar alth anth eman." Rearrange spacing for sense.

● Waist Product! Measure your waist. Multiply by 99. Jot down the sum of the digits in the product. Answer is below.

Eighteen.

● Sez Who? "My favorite color is Greene," says Mean _____. "My favorite color is Blue," says _____. "My favorite color is Rose," says _____. Fill blanks with first names of well-known sports figures.

● Tongue Testers! Say fast: Six soap chippers sat chipping soap chips. Now, try this: Cats scratched for scrod scraps. Repeat each several times.

PUZZLE IT OUT BY YOURSELF

What feeling or state of mind does one experience when stranded all alone on a desert island? Letters of three words underlined at the end of this riddle-verse can be rearranged for a one-word answer:

While many greet the friends they meet,
I know no face, I
press no hand.
Though busy feet may throng the street,
I sit alone, sirs,
feeling grand.

What is the word? Hint: It begins with S; ends with two S's.

The word is solitariness.

Our Story: RORY MOR, HIGH KING OF IRELAND, HAS TOLD GALAN ABOUT THE OTHER RORY, HIS TWIN.

"I WILL KEEP YOUR SECRET," GALAN SAYS, "ONLY IF YOU COME TO THE AID OF CAMELOT." RORY GROANS IN DISMAY: "IF I LEAVE, MY KINGDOM WILL BE TORN APART BY REBELLION. THE PEOPLE WILL SUFFER."

EMBOLDENED BY A SECOND CUP OF MEAD, GALAN STANDS FIRM. THAT NIGHT, TWO SHIPS SAIL.

ONE OF THEM FINDS KING AGUAR IN THE FENS. "BRING ME TO THULE AT ONCE," SAYS AGUAR WHEN HE SEES GALAN'S MESSAGE. FROM VILLAGE TO VILLAGE ALONG THE COAST THEY SPRINT. THE MENFOLK TAKE UP ARMS AT ONCE AGAINST THE HATED DALGRIND -- AND HIS PUPPETEER MORDRED.

ANOTHER OF RORY'S VESSELS BEACHES IN BRITTANY. "MY ISLAND IS A HAVEN FOR YOUR PIRATES," READS RORY'S MESSAGE TO THE CORSAIR CHIEF, SALAM FULDA. "NOW I NEED ONE HUNDRED SHIPS AT CLONTARF BY WEEK'S END." SALAM FULDA, LOYAL ROGUE, SENDS A FLEET AT ONCE.

AT TARA, RORY MOR SPEAKS TO THE ARMY HE HAS RAISED. "I HAVE NO LOVE FOR CAMELOT, BUT A GREATER ENEMY THREATENS US ALL -- MORDRED." AT DAWN HE MARCHES WITH HIS HORDE TO THE COAST WHERE SALAM FULDA'S SHIPS AWAIT. "NOW IS OUR CHANCE," THINK THE PLOTTERS WHO HOPE TO USURP RORY'S THRONE...

Liverpool Riot Violence 'Unbelievable' To Police

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Clouds of smoke from smoldering buildings and cars hung over this port city's Toxteth immigrant district today after a bloody night of riots in which 185 police were reported injured and 70 people jailed.

"It is just unbelievable. I've never seen anything like it," said Inspector Kenneth Hoskisson of the local Merseyside police, which fired tear gas at hundreds of rioters to retake control of the district after a second consecutive violent night.

A police spokesman said squads of officers arrested marauding bands of looters after eight hours of riots in which youths smashed store windows, burned cars and buildings and attacked police with stones, gasoline bombs, bottles and bricks.

Officers with riot shields and nightsticks entered the district after being driven out during seven hours of violence Sunday.

Merseyside Deputy Chief Constable Peter Wright told a news conference at total of 255 policemen were injured in two nights of "public disorder." He said none were critically hurt and denied an earlier report that one officer was speared in the head by a six-foot iron bar.

No figures were immediately available for injuries among rioters or civilians caught in the violence.

The rioting followed a five-hour racial melee in Southall in West London Friday night, in which 200 white right-wing toughs with shaven heads known as "skinheads" fought Asian youths and police. Authorities said 120 people, including 87 police, were hurt.

Most of Toxteth's population are West Indian immigrants, but police said rioters included white and black youths and the violence was not racially inspired. Residents said it was sparked by police probing complaints that youths were stoning motorists.

Youths claim tension had been high since Friday when about 50 people, mostly blacks, stopped police from arresting a blac motorcyclist. Five officers were hurt in the incident and one youth was jailed. Police say the violence was an orchestrated attack by some black and white youths.

"These madmen want to see the blood of policemen splattered across the streets of Liverpool," said one resident who asked not to be named. "It is not race hate. It is just vicious hatred of the police."

Many Toxteth residents are black, poor and jobless, and regard Britain's almost entirely white police as a symbol of white repression, community relations people say.

"Quite often the police become the organized group in society who have got to pick up the pieces for things which have gone wrong," police Supt. Laurie Blackburn said.

Rioters also torched a nightclub next to a geriatric hospitral but allowed ambulances to ferry the 96 patients away from the threatened building.

"Every shop from supermarkets to small corner stores has been smashed and looted," City Councilman Chris Davies told reporters.

He s$id youths wearing masks dispensed gasoline bombs as others armed with clubs guarded corners to make sure nobody interfered. Some looters were four and five years old, he said.

"It was just madness...a battlefield," said Finula Heffeman, a local shopkeeper. She said youths wrecked her grocery and washed down debris with ice cream and lemonade.

"I am in a shotgun mood tonight," 60-year-old white storeowner owner Harry Swainbank said as rioting raged. "I've lost a lifetime's work. We should have a backlash of citizens like me tonight. Or am I expected to swallow this?"

Friday's Southall racial violence was the worst in Britain since April, when non-whites and some leftist whites rioted for four nights in the south London district of Brixton.

The Brixton riots were the nation's biggest racial eruption since non-white immigration began in 1948.

City Dedicated To Maximum Tax Hike

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners and the Greenville City Council are continuing to work on their 1981-82 fiscal year budgets. Both governing boards were unable to complete the budgets by the end of the 1980-81 fiscal year at midnight June 30.

They are trying to provide as many services as possible for the smallest cost to local property owners.

And the cost to local property owners is determined by the value of the property and the tax rate ultimately set by each of the governments.

The total assessed valuation of property in the county in 1980 was $1.121 billion, while the value of property within the City of Greenville in 1980 was $417.3 million.

The revaluation of property throughout the county last year caused the assessed valuation of property in the county to jump by 88.7 percent — to $2.116 billion this year. The city's valuation increased some 76 percent, to $734.8 million.

Assuming that 100 percent of the taxes billed were collected — which is not the case — the $1.03 cents per $100 valuation tax rate used by the county last year would have brought in some $11.54 million to fund county government operations. If the same rate were used this year — based on the new assessed valuation — some $21.7 million or 88 percent more money would be raised.

However, the fact is that Commissioners are committed to holding the county's budget as low as possible ... holding the tax rate as low as possible.

As proposed early last month by County Manager Reginald Gray, county funds in the 1981-82 budget showed only a 1 percent increase — some $109,000 — over the $10.94 million collected in the 1980-81 fiscal year. That would require a 55 cents per $100 value tax rate for the new fiscal year, based on the new valuation of property, taking into account that all the taxes billed will not be collected.

And at the end of the week, Commissioners were still holding the budget close to that 55-cent tax rate figure.

If the commissioners were to consider a rate of, say 60-cents per $100 valuation, and 100 percent of the taxes were collected, some $12.69 million in local funds would come in ... allowing the board to expand local government services.

The city is in much the same position.

Based on the $417.3 million valuation last year, the city's 70-cent tax rate would have produced $2.92 million in revenue if all the taxes billed had been collected. The 70-cent rate applied to the new valuation would raise $5.14 million this year, or 76 percent more than in 1980-81.

Based on the new valuation, the city could raise the same amount of money this year as it did last year with a tax rate of about 40 cents per $100 valuation.

However, Mayor Don McGlohon has said, "we're dedicated to what we feel a maximum tax increase might be this year ... to get the city on a sounder basis." That "maximum" increase he described as "16 percent".

A 16 percent increase would result in a city tax rate of about 46.4 cents per $100 valuation for the 1981-82 fiscal year.

In comparison, a 50 cent tax rate in the city — if all the taxes are collected — would bring in some $3.67 million, while a 55-cent rate would yield about $4.04 million in revenue.

Begin Sees No Obstacle To Coalition

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who says "there is no longer the slightest doubt" he will form Israel's next government, met today with Moshe Dayan to discuss including Dayan's two-man party in a coalition.

Begin invited Dayan to see him after near-final results of last Tuesday's election showed Begin's Likud Bloc leading Shimon Peres' opposition Labor Party by 48 seats to 47 in the 120-member Knesset, Israel's Parliament.

If the unofficial election returns reported by Israel Radio are confirmed, that would virtually guarantee Begin's being asked by President Yitzhak Navon to try to form a coalition with splinter parties that would give it 60 or more seats in Parliament.

Dayan was understood to be demanding some sort of post that would involve him in the issues he believes he knows best — peace talks with the Arabs, the 14-year-old occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and relations with the United States.

The daily Davar reported that Begin had asked Interior Minister Yosef Burg, leader of the National Religious Party, whether he would accept a vice-premiership and give Dayan his present job of Israeli negotiator in talks with Egypt and the United States on Palestinian autonomy for the West Bank and Gaza.

Dayan quit Begin's government nearly 18 months ago to protest his handling of the autonomy negotiations.

The 66-year-old former general declined to answer questions after his talk with Begin. He read a prepared statement saying "the discussion centered on the possibility of TELEM (Dayan's party) joining the government. There was a clarification of principles and it was agreed that the talks would continue."

TELEM Is the Hebrew acronym for "the Movement for State Rejuvenation" which Dayan set up in April as a vehicle for his election campaign.

Initial projections last week showed Dayan winning only one seat, but now he is virtually certain to come out with two seats and a measure of bargaining power in the delicate political lineup resulting from the election.

Before Begin met Dayan he had a second round of talks with Agudat Israel leader Avraham Shapira who told reporters, "We want to make a coalition first and foremost with Begin."

Israel Radio said the National Election Commission had finished tallying the military ballots and was waiting for votes to come in from merchant marine sailors at sea before certifying the results of last Tuesday's vote. The final tally was expected Thursday.

The final makeup of a coalition appeared to hinge on the see-saw race among several splinter parties needed by Begin to fill out his coalition.

Ram Vessel, Arrest Crew

RAMMING — An aerial view at moment of impact when the British off-shore protection vessel, HMS Aldernay (top) rammed French fishing trawler to prevent hijacking a boarding party as the trawler made a run for Boulogne, France. (AP Laserphoto)

GRIMSBY, England (AP) — The Royal Navy finally forced a French trawler into port and put its captain under arrest after ramming it to prevent the skipper from escaping to France with a British boarding crew.

Led by Lt. Simon Hambrook, the boarding party from the fishery protection vessel Alderney went aboard the 250-ton trawler Jean Mermoz Saturday 80 miles northeast of Grimsby because they suspected it was fishing with illegal fine-mesh nets.

The trawler's captain, Jean Blainfain, locked himself in his wheelhouse, started his engines and got under way. The 1,260-ton Alderney, another British fishery protection vessel, the Jersey, and a navy helicopter gave chase.

Other French trawlers tried to get between the Mermoz and the Alderney, but the pursuers did not give up.

Suddenly, the Mermoz turned sharply to head back to Boulogne, is home port. The Alderney, close by, rammed its quarry, a "slight collision," said the navy.

The situation was "unpleasant and very tense," said Hambrook. "There was no violence and eventually the French skipper stopped."

The trawler was put under guard on arrival at Grimsby.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries said the trawler's nets would be checked Monday and officials would decide whether to prosecute Blainfain.

The smaller the mesh of a net is, the smaller is the size of the fish caught in it. Catching immature fish is prohibited because it depletes dwindling fish stocks.

Seven People Victims Of House Fire

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A fire that may have started when a cigarette hit a mattress spread quickly through a single-family house early today, killing seven people, including two children and a woman nine months pregnant, authorities said.

Fire Chief Thomas Hanlon said the fire apparently began on the front porch of the house a few blocks northeast of downtown. It was reported at 2:25 a.m.

"It's the worst fire of its kind I've ever seen," Hanlon said. The fire spread rapidly because of the tinder-dry plaster and lathe building materials and "balloon-type" construction that conducted flames to the second floor, he said.

Fire Investigator John Corbett said the fire appeared to be accidental. He said a cigarette ligher was found in the remains of an overstuffed mattress on the front porch, where the fire was believed to have started. Investigators theorized that someone fell asleep on the mattress with a lit cigarette.

The victims were identified as Walter Allen, 63, and his wife, Martha, 55; their children, Patricia Hanks, 23, who was pregnant, and Leonard Allen, 31; a friend of Walter Allen, Charles Nitzice, 60; and two small children, Francis Allen, 5, and Nancy Allen, 12.

Officials were not certain who the parents of the two young children were.

All seven bodies were found on the second floor, Hanlon said.

Lee Hanks, 22, the husband of Mrs. Hanks, told authorities he returned home at 2:35 a.m. and discovered the fire. He was being questioned but was not considered a suspect, police said.

The first official at the scene, police officer Peter Vallar, was knocked off the back porch by a blast of heat after he kicked in the rear door. A rescue squad was repulsed by heat and flames when it attempted to enter the house minutes later.

Assails Early Accident Report

NEW YORK (AP) — A union official is criticizing the Transit Authority board of inquiry investigating New York City's worst subway accident in decades.

Gil Renschack, Transit Workers Union vice president, says the motorman killed in Friday's crash, which also injured about 100 passengers, is being blamed prematurely. "I don't know why we're having the hearing," he said. "This guy (Transit Authority President John) Simpson has already made up his mind."

The board of inquiry convened Saturday and is trying to determine whether Friday's accident was caused by equipment failure, human error or both.

Report Poland Deteriorating

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's state-controlled press today described the situation in neighboring Poland as "extraordinarily serious" and claimed Western spy agencies were behind much of the unrest there.

East Germany's press also reported recent Soviet-Polish military maneuvers, quoting the Soviet army newspaper as saying participants discussed the necessity to confront "the plots of counter-revolutionaries."

The series of articles appeared in the Communist daily Neues Deutschland and other nationally circulated newspapers in advance of Poland's emergency Communist Party congress July 14 in Warsaw.

The congress is expected to select a new party leadership and consider reforms which may be unacceptable to the Soviet leadership.

In one of the articles, the East Germans said Poland was "as before in an extraordinarily serious situation, which is further sharpened by persistent counter-revolutionary and revisionist activites."

The article claimed the independent union Solidarity, formed after last summer's labor unrest, was seeking to undermine the Communist Party itself. A large number of delegates elected to the party congress are members of Solidarity, the Soviet-bloc's first independent labor federation.

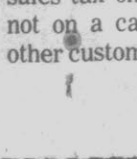

Another report said "certain forces in Poland" were working with West German's spy agency, the Federal Information Service, and other Western agencies to undermine the Polish state.

East German newspapers also published statements by the pro-Soviet Katowice Forum, a group of conservative party members opposed to the reform movement and the present leadership of Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania.

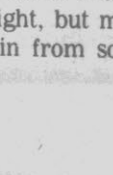

It quoted the forum as warning that the party leadership was allowing the party to be separated "from its natural base, the working class."

SALES TAX ON USED CAR?

My husband recently purchased a used vehicle from a local used car lot and was charged North Carolina sales tax. This car is already titled in this state and sales tax was charged on it when it was new, so I do not see why we should have to pay it again. We checked with some other used car dealers who said sales tax should not be charged. Which dealer is right? How does the law read? M.L

Sales tax must be charged on a used vehicle, two percent of the price charged or $120, whichever is greater, N.C. Department of Revenue Office Assistant Edwina Lee said. Cars taken in on trade-in are exceptions, though, she added. In other words, the dealer must charge sales tax on a car he bought outright, but must not on a car he took as a trade-in from some other customer.

Terror For Hire Among Arms Dealers

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer

A chance encounter in a mountain jail in Alabama led investigators inside a ring of international terror peddlers — American merchants of death with entree to the torture chambers of some of the world's most sadistic despots.

What began as an investigation of fraud in the Appalachian coalfields resulted in gun-running convictions for an ex-CIA operative and a New Jersey businessman, men who one New York prosecutor said "contributed to instability and to chaos throughout the world."

The Alabama connection came to light following the June 8 sentencing of Frank E. Terpil, 41, of McLean, Va., and George Korkala, 40, of Nutley, N.J., on New York state charges of negotiating to sell to undercover agents 10,000 machine guns, 10 million bullets, a bomb, firearm silencers and four other guns.

New York state supreme Court Justice Thomas Galligan sentenced the two men in absentia. After posting bonds of $100,000 each following their arrests at a New York hotel on Dec. 22, 1979, Terpil and Korkala skipped the country the day before their trial.

Galligan, in handing down sentences of 53 years in prison if the two are brought to justice, said, "They have no allegiance to any flag. They prosper in a world at war. Wherever terrorism and torture are, they are."

Indeed, in transcripts of four secretly recorded meetings involving the undercover agents and the fugitives — 542 pages of which were made available to The Associated Press by Alabama authorities — Terpil and Korkala bragged of their fiendish exploits.

The agents heard tales of poison being tested on unsuspecting restaurant patrons, "rat" tortures by former Ugandan dictator Idi Amin, and a gun-smuggling Texan named Sam who exhibited his wares by cutting winos to ribbons with automatic weapons fire.

Terpil, a Brooklyn native with close ties to Amin, also was indicted in April 1980 on federal charges of illegally supplying and training terrorists in Libya, along with his former business associate, Edwin P. Wilson, another ex-CIA agent.

At the time of the arrests, New York District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said Terpil, who was fired from the CIA in 1971, had sold $3.2 million worth of weapons, explosives and surveillance equipment to Uganda during Amin's rule and operated various front businesses in Washington, Paris and Panama.

Terpil, a stocky, brown-haired man with a thick mustache, lived with his wife and two teen-aged sons in a $260,000 Japanese contemporary home in McLean, Va., across the road from Ethel Kennedy.

Described by associates as a "super salesman" with a knack for charming influential people, he spent much of his time on airplanes, shuttling to another home in Crewe, England, to Paris, to Geneva and to the palaces of arms customers in Africa and the Middle East.

By 1976, Terpil and Wilson had become friends with Moammar Khadafy and began supplying the Libyan leader with a total of $2.5 million worth of military supplies, authorities said. The two recruited American-trained guerrilla fighters, including former Green Berets, and electronics experts, to teach Khadafy's troops how to fight and make bombs.

After Terpil and Wilson parted company, Terpil turned to Uganda as a new arms market. His other business associate, Korkala, drove a car with diplomatic license plates registered to the Ugandan mission to the United Nations.

The investigation of terrorism began as a probe of corruption in the coalfields of Alabama and six other states three years ago under the code name "Leviticus Project."

Thomas L. Krebs, 37, director of the Alabama Securities Commission, organized the multi-state crime task force and brought together some of the best investigators from New York, Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Indiana, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Mathew Crosson, assistant district attorney in Manhattan who coordinated the Leviticus Project, was looking into the activities of William Nardone, 50, of Lawrence, N.Y., who later was indicted by a New York grand jury in March 1980 on charges of defrauding investors of more than $3 million in cash and promissory notes in coal deals.

Meanwhile, two of Krebs' agents in September 1979 were in a jail at Ft. Payne, Ala., questioning Alabama coal miner George Hambert, who had been arrested for issuing bad checks.

Unexpectedly, Nardone, whose financial dealings with Hambert were under investigation by New York authorities, walked into the jail with a man he introduced as his lawyer, Stephen Sacks of New York.

Sacks, who a month later would be indicted for practicing law without a license, aroused the investigators' suspicion when he implied he had "Mafia connections."

"Nobody will talk to a lawman like that, especially an attorney," one investigator said.

The Alabama authorities contacted Crosson in New York and subsequent inquiries by the Leviticus agents disclosed that Sacks, 37, was an imposter. He had no law degree even though he had successfully defended a number of alleged underworld figures in New York.

Following his indictment, sacks agreed to cooperate rather than face reprisals from his former legal clients, who could no longer claim the attorney-client privilege for their communications with him.

In conversations with investigators Sacks mentioned his gun-running friends, Terpil and Korkala. He agreed to introduce two Spanish-speaking undercover agents — identified on the transcripts as "Rodriguez" and "Raad" — to Terpil and Korkala.

The first meeting, with Korkala, took place in Room 2737 of the New York Hilton on Nov. 15, 1979. The room was bugged.

Raad was introduced as the "patron," leader of a group of right-wing Latin American terrorists who wanted to buy weapons. Rodriguez, a military intelligence officer and weapons expert before joining the New York City police force, was introduced as Raad's interpreter.

Korkala indicated he could provide a variety of weapons: American M-16 rifles, Soviet-made AK-47s, French MAT 49 submachine guns, Swiss Sig 762s, SAM 7 rockets, 105 millimeter howitzer shells, handguns, silencers, laser sights, grenades and explosives.

The next day Terpil was also present and the two gun merchants discussed exploits involving Amin and Khadafy.

Terpil, bragging that he was an important member of Amin's entourage, said he was the only American allowed to witness public executions in Uganda, including one at a stadium where some of the spectators were killed because the AK-47s used by Amin's firing squad were so powerful the bullets passed through the bodies of the intended victims.

Terpil claimed he was a guest at a state dinner where Amin displayed the severed head of a political foe and shot another on the spot.

The Minister of Defense was not at the dinner, Terpil said, and Amin told his other ministersministers, "We have him up at the State Research Bureau (the secret police headquarters."

"Man, that was a one-way gate," Terpil said. "That's where my offices were up there."

Amin then told his ministers, Terpil said, "One of you people is working for Kenya. If you tell me, we'll let bygones be bygones." When no one spoke up, the waiters began serving the food.

"They put this big tray in the middle of the table and Idi's guy lifts off the lid and there's the head of the Minister of Defense," Terpil said.

One of the ministers gasped and Amin shot him in the face with a .357 Magnum, Terpil said, adding that the gun was a gift from him and engraved with the words, "I want this man killed completely."

Later, Korkala told how they tested the strength of 50 kilos of cyanide he was trying to sell to a group of Middle Eastern terrorists at a Beirut restaurant. A spoonful was slipped into the soup of an unsuspecting diner.

"One spoonful and his head fell in the bowl of soup," Korkala said. "He was gone like that (snapping his fingers)."

Korkala said one of his contacts, a man identified only as Sam the Texan, could provide heroin, as well as shotguns modified into pistol-grip automatics that fire 12 rounds per second.

"We'll take you down there and he'll kill a guy for you," Korkala said. "They get winos out of Dallas, and they set 'em up maybe 20 feet away and you ought to see what two blasts ..."

Korkala said he had been "knocking around" the United States doing odd jobs — like installing machine guns on the boats of drug runners in Key West, Fla. — when he "hooked up" with Terpil in 1975.

He said Terpil's connections in the Middle East, especially Libya, helped him establish ties with Amin.

"Khadafy had been supplying (Amin) with all these things and that's how (Terpil) got in there," he said. "Then, unfortunately, the country fell."

After the first two meetings, Rodriguez flew to Manchester, England, to inspect and test-fire weapons Terpil and Korkala wanted to sell.

It was at a third meeting, at the hotel on Dec. 20, 1979, that Terpil described his "favorite" torture in Uganda.

"What they do is take a rat, a real hungry one," he said. "First, they put a slit in your stomach."

The rat is placed on the victim's stomach, underneath a copper pot, which is then heated with a Bunson burner, Terpil said.

"The rat goes crazy," he said. "There is only one way out."

The two gun runners also discussed how to detonate an automobile by filling the radiator with explosives and the rigging of weight-sensitive briefcase bombs.

"We trained all the Libyans on how to do this ...," Terpil said.

They also discussed how the weapons would be shipped to Puerto Rico with phony documents, obtained by bribery, indicating the munitions had been purchased by defense officials in the Philippines.

The Leviticus Project investigators decided it was time to move.

On Dec. 22, 1979, detectives knocked on the door of the room at the Hilton. Rodriguez opened it. "Freeze," one detective barked. "Freeze. Police. Freeze. Don't move."

Terpil had pulled out a Browning revolver equipped with a silencer.

"Put it down, friend," a detective ordered. "That's it."

Terpil complied.

Two days later, simultaneous raids were conducted in New York, Nutley, N.J., and Crewe, England. They netted millions of dollars in arms, briefcase bombs, letter bombs, grenades, poison darts and scores of documents, authorities said.

Today, the Leviticus investigators are still hunting Sam the Texan.

Sacks, the ersatz lawyer, is no longer in custody, but is "still under protection," Crosson said.

Looking For Good Noses

DENVER (AP) — At the Colorado Department of Health's "odor school," the instructors are looking for nothing more than an average performance.

The purpose of the school is to rate state and county health officials on their ability to smell, so their judgment can be trusted in enforcing the state's odor regulation. If they can smell too well, or too poorly, they flunk.

The idea, according to instructor and pollution specialist Richard Fox, is that an inspector should be able to detect no more and no less of an odor than the average Coloradan.

To pass the odor test, Fox said, participants in the day-long program may be subjected to such aromas as pyridine ("kind of like an old tennis shoe that's been in a locker for a long time"), butyric acid ("a very bad smell ... like Limburger cheese") and hydrogen sulfide ("like rotten eggs").

Students who pass get a diploma in the form of an "odor certification." It is good for a year, and can be renewed only through re-certification.

"I failed a class once because I had a cold and couldn't smell," said Fox.

Elderly Abuse Problem Cited

CHICAGO (AP) — A new study says abuse of the elderly by relatives may rival child abuse as a problem in Illinois, with perhaps 500 deaths or serious injuries in recent years.

The six-month, $50,000 study conducted for the state Department of Aging indicates elderly abuse is "a much larger problem than most people have been thinking," according to John Portner of the Center for Legal Studies at Sangamon State University in Springfield, which carried out the research.

Officials say the problem is aggravated by a lack of legislation by lawmakers and little cooperation by the elderly themselves, many of whom prefer to remain with their family no matter what.

George Carlin Hurt In Wreck

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Comedian George Carlin was listed in good condition at a hospital after suffering a broken nose in an automobile accident.

Carlin was admitted to St. Elizabeth Medical Center early Sunday morning with a fractured nose and head and facial cuts, according to hospital officials.

Police said Carlin's green Volvo struck a utility pole downtown about 3:30 a.m. EDT Sunday.

A spokeswoman said Carlin apparently was on his way to visit his wife, Brenda, of Dayton.

Betty Ford To Present Award

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford will present the Samuel H. Scripps American Dance Festival Award to modern dance great Martha Graham on Sunday, July 19.

The $25,000 award will be given each year to a person who has made an outstanding contribution to American dance and is donated by Scripps of the publishing family.

Mrs. Ford, a former member of the Martha Graham Concert Dance Company, focused her attention on the arts while Gerald Ford was in office.

Ms. Graham was one of the founding artists of the American Dance Festival in 1934 and danced with the company until 1969.

New Reign of Terror

One of the most frightening periods of history, the Reign of Terror, gripped France from 1793-94. A Frenchman wrote of his nation's Terror: "Heads fell like slates from a roof." The Committee for Public Safety, entrusted with France's security, guillotined about 40,000 citizens in the name of the Revolution. A new reign of terror now plagues Iran. Since 1979, the Iranian government of Ayatollah Khomeini has executed nearly 2,000 people for opposing its Islamic rule. One woman in Kurdistan was shot because she criticized killings in her province. Recently Iran's government put up "Wanted" posters for a new enemy of the revolution: Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, the Islamic Republic's first President.

Holiday Traffic Toll Claims 26

By The Associated Press

The holiday death toll for the Fourth of July weekend peaked at 26, according to the North Carolina Highway Patrol, including five multiple-fatality accidents, and three men run over while lying in the roadway.

That brings the state-wide traffic-death total to 669 for the year, compared to 719 for the same period last year.

The multiple fatalities began Friday morning when William S. Mercier, 22, and Tommy G. Adams, 18, both of Crewe, Va. died in a head-on collision near Elizabeth City. Shortly thereafter, two Weaverville men died near Asheville when the car in which they were riding sideswiped another car, ran off the road and struck a tree. They were identified as James R. Moore, 34, and Kenneth W. Hoffman, 49.

Also on Friday, three men died when the car in which they were riding ran off U.S. 13 north of Gatesville, hit a tree and overturned. Police identified the vicims as Jose Vega, 23, and Thomas Bell, 24, or Norfolk, Va. and Alexander Washington III, 38, of Roduca.

On Saturday in Granville County, Frank G. Pettigrew, 18, and Timothy H. Thompson, 20, both of Henderson, died when their car ran off the road and struck a tree.

And Saturday night Dale Pettys Hoard, 45, and Joyce Ramsey Hoard, 43, both of Orange Park, Fla., died when the tractor trailer they were in lost its brakes and overturned on a downgrade near Old Fort in McDowell County.

Police said three men died in separate incidents in which the victims were lying on the roadway when they were struck by oncoming vehicles.

Wayne T. Miller, 19, of Colington was run over near Kill Devil Hills on Saturday, and Dewitt Logan Jr., 21, of Rutherfordton, was struck and killed by a hit-and-run driver near Rutherfordton early Sunday.

Also, on Thursday, Robert L. Phillips, 45, of Henrietta, was hit by a car and killed while lying on a road south of Forest City.

In another accident Thursday, Kelly R. Evans, 20, of New Hill died when his car struck another vehicle head-on near Apex.

On Friday, Ester H. Vick, 67, of Goldsboro died when the car she was driving on U.S. 70 crossed the median and hit another car. Joe L. Cash, 35, or Rockingham died while traveling at a high rate of speed along U.S. 1 near Rockingham. Troopers said Cash hit a bicyclist, lost control and struck a tree.

Also on Friday, Rea L. Willia, 35, of Yanceyville died when he drove off U.S. 158 east of Reidsville, then hit several trees.

On Saturday, Mary A. Lovean, 44, of Fort Mill, S.C., died when her car crossed the median on Interstate 77 west of Dobson and overturned. John D. Butler, 25, of Lauringburg died when his car ran off a road not far from his home and hit a tree. And Russell S. Adams, 23, of Summerfield, died when his car crossed the center line on U.S. 158 and struck another car head-on.

Also on Saturday, 21-year-old Michael M. Lyles of Gastonia died when his car ran off the road in Gaston County and hit a tree. A Fort Bragg man died in a head-on collision south of Lillington. Police identified him as Kevin W. Harper, 24.

An Englehard man, Michael R. Ware, 24, died Saturday when the car he was driving ran off U.S. 264 east of Englehard and hit a tree. And Martha Sherry Clark, 19, or Charlotte, died when a car in which she was a passenger ran off the road, swerved to the other side and ran over an embankment. Norman R. Williams, 37, of Salisbury died when his car ran off the road and overturned near Salisbury.

Winterville Native, Miss Council, Wed At Fort Lee, Va. Yesterday

FORT LEE, Va. — Eddie Jean Council of Monterey, Calif. and Stanley Levan Simmons of Petersburg, Va. were united in marriage Sunday at 1:00 at Liberty Chapel here. Chaplain CPT Clark Lashmett performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Council Sr. of Route 1, Winterville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Simmons Sr. of Miami, Florida.

A program of nuptial wedding music was provided by Kennis McGill, organist, and Lynda Jones, soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by David Council Sr. She wore a traditional gown of chiffonette and chantilly lace. The gown featured a Queen Ann neckline, bishop sleeves and a flared skirt with a chapel train trimmed in chantilly lace. The bodice was trimmed in sequins. She wore a matching headpiece trimmed in seed pearls with a cathedral-length veil trimmed in matching chantilly lace and carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies, carnations, tinted pink, baby's breath and white satin streamers.

Lois Annette Council of New Haven, Conn. served as her sister's maid of honor. She wore a dress of rosebud sylesta styled with a petal skirt and flowing chiffon cape. She carried a colonial nosegay similar to the bride's bouquet of white daisies and pink carnations.

Bridesmaids were Patricia Louise Council, sister of the bride of Greenville; Loretta Thompson of El Paso, Texas; Mrs. Flora Blackledge of Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. Kay Hill and Mrs. Barbara Best, both of Greenville; and Mrs. Dorothes Moyd of Miami, Fla, sister of the bridegroom. They wore dresses of mauve sylesta with a petal skirt and flowing chiffon cape. They carried bouquets of daisies, baby's breath and pink satin streamers.

Latonya Council, niece of the bride from Greenville, was flower girl. She wore a rose dress with lace trim around the sleeves and hem and carried a basket of pink petals. Ring bearer was Seune Council, nephew of the bride of Baltimore, Md.

The father of the groom served as his son's best man. Ushers were Matthew Simmons, Jr. and William Simmons, brothers of the bridgroom from Miami, Fla; Aaron R. Andrews, Clifton F. White, Jr., and James Brattain, all of Petersburg, Fla., and Crispin Abad of Norfolk, Va.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the Yorktown Room of the America House Restaurant in Petersburg. A three-tiered wedding cake with pink flowers was served by Mrs. Jean Webb. Ponthea Simmons, sister of the bridegroom, served the wedding punch. Gifts were received by Evelyn Nassanet . Katherine Thompson introduced guests to the bride and bridegroom in the receiving line. Music was provided by Chico's Disco. Catering service was provided by the staff of the America House Restaurant. The wedding was directed by Mrs. Rose Simmons, sister-in-law of the bridegroom.

An after rehearsal dinner was held at the America House Restaurant July 4 at 7:30 p.m. for all the wedding participants.

The bride is a graduate a North Pitt High School and received her Bachelor of Science degree in nursing from Atlantic Christian College. She is currently a captain in the U.S. Army Nurse Corps officer and an adult health nurse practitioner. The bridegroom is a graduate of Miami Jackson Senior High School and the University of Florida at Gainesville with a B.A. in political science. He is company commander for the 553rd Military Police Company stationed at Fort Lee, Va.

After a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple will live at Ivy Gates, Petersburg, Va.

Mail 10 To One Against Annual Report

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the letter signed MOTHER OF TWO PLUS ONE, suggesting that the adoptive mother keep her child's birth mother informed about the child's progress once a year through a letter. What a marvelous idea!

I am a mother of four plus one, and after I gave up my firstborn on Christmas Day, 1956, it was as though he had died! I have no idea where he is, or even if he is still living.

Of course I would never look for him because I don't want to intrude on his life, but I pray that one day he will find me.

LOVES ALL MY CHILDREN

DEAR MOTHER: My mail has been running 10 to 1 against the annual progress report suggested by MOTHER OF TWO PLUS ONE. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: MOTHER OF TWO PLUS ONE, who had given up her child for adoption 10 years ago, suggested that all adoptive mothers send the birth mother an annual progress report, disclosing the interests, growth and development of the child — including pictures so the child's "real" mother will know what "her" child looks like and how he's developing.

My husband and I adopted four children when they were less than 1 week old. The mothers in all cases knew what their rights were when they signed the adoption papers.

No way will we write an annual progress report to keep their "real" mothers informed. We are their real parents, and they are our children.

Conceiving a child takes only a few minutes. Carrying it for nine months is the easiest part of motherhood, but raising it requires time, patience, money, sacrifices, tears and love. And that responsibility lasts a lifetime.

NO PROGRESS REPORTS

DEAR NO REPORTS: Now let's hear it from an adopted child:

DEAR ABBY: I agree completely with MOTHER OF TWO PLUS ONE. I'm sure the parents who gave up their child for adoption wonder what happened to that child. I'm also sure that children who have been adopted wonder about their natural parents.

I am 13 and adopted. I love my mother who adopted me, but on Mother's Day I wonder if my natural mother has anyone giving her a card or flowers, or perhaps a present. I also wonder if I have any brothers or sisters, and if I have, where they are and what they look like.

I wonder why my parents gave me up. Someday I would like to meet them. But in the meantime, I would like to know something about them.

I'm sure many children and adults who have been adopted wonder as I do. Sign me . . .

ADOPTED AND CURIOUS IN N.J.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who gave up her child for adoption and wants an annual progress report concerning the child's interests, growth and development really got to me.

As parents of several adopted children, were we to write such a letter, could we feel free to ask the birth mother for:

1. Financial assistance when the going gets rough. It's very expensive to raise children these days.
2. Advice, counsel and emotional support when it's needed.
3. Occasional help with the other children when we must maintain a two-week vigil at the hospital with a very sick child who may not make it.

I could go on and on, but suffice it to say that we adoptive parents don't expect any of the above.

We adopted these children, and they adopted us. We are a family, and we do not intend to make out any annual progress reports as a constant reminder that we adopted our children. We've had enough scrutiny and filled out enough forms to last us a lifetime.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Here's another in a series of projects for pastel plastic needlepoint canvas — this time it's a clever "Tulip Time Box," specially designed for the beginner. In fact, it would be an excellent class project for a group of children or adults as an introduction to needlepoint.

Each box is made quickly as the pastel canvas needs no background filling but many needlepoint basics can be learned while making one. The leaflet includes other flower charts and instructions for making boxes in various sizes. Make a few for yourself and several more for gifts or bazaar items.

To obtain instructions for making the Tulip Time Boxes, send your request for leaflet No. L-8265 with $1 and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-8265 by sending check or money order for $14.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains instructions and materials for making at least three boxes. You may specify all one color or your choice of any three of the following colors: pastel green, pink, light blue or pale yellow. Shipping charges are included in price.

Dear readers: Needlecrafters are usually very generous people willing to share their time and talents with others. Many hesitate, however, to try and teach their skills to others, feeling inadequate in this area.

I would like to suggest to all needlepointers that you each teach at least one friend and one child or teen-ager to do canvas work. Just think of how much joy you will be spreading!

Start with a simple — but useful — project, such as the Tulip Time Boxes featured in today's column. I have found that beginners do best when they are started with a quickly finished project for which they can find an immediate use. And who cannot use a decorative box to clear up clutter on desk, dresser or cabinet tops?

If you have never taught anyone to needlepoint, here are a few suggestions on your first session. Of course, you only need one student but it can be more fun and more worthwhile to take on four or five at a time. Don't try, however, to teach a large group on your first attempt.

Present the students with a sheet of plastic canvas, preferably the colored type, a tapestry needle and a small amount of tapestry, Persian or knitting yarn, along with diagrams of the stitches you will be teaching. Be sure that each brings a pair of small scissors to the class session.

You may be surprised to learn that I have found it more satisfactory to teach a pattern stitch first and introduce the basic tent stitch later. Two excellent stitches for the beginner are the Scotch and Smyrna stitches. Teach them first to make one Scotch Stitch then show them how to make another just like it to the side and below the first stitch. The latter gives an understanding of how stitches share holes and shows them how a corner of a border would appear.

Follow the same procedure with the Smyrna Stitch. Then let them decide which of these two stitches they would prefer to use for a border on their first project. As you are teaching these stitches, you will, of course, be showing them how to thread the needle and to secure yarn ends, stressing the importance of clipping these ends off as they go.

When working with the fairly stiff plastic canvas, you will be teaching the "stab" technique of stitching with the needle being taken down in one motion and brought up in another. A hidden advantage is that when they graduate to traditional natural fiber canvas, it will be easier to introduce the use of a frame, where the stab technique is required, than if they had learned by doing "surface stitching" where the needle goes into one stitch and comes up on another in a single motion.

I would suggest that you end the first session after you have started the students on working the borders. Send them home with materials for working borders on top, bottom and four sides of a box. Their homework will be to complete these borders.

A second session will introduce the three ways of working the tent stitch — half-cross, continental and basketweave — assuming

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Taxes, Up Or Down?

When is a tax decrease a tax increase?

Clearly it is after a property revaluation which sees Pitt County values up by 88.7 percent and Greenville city values up by 76 percent.

Needless to say the governing bodies of both the county and the city intend to drop the tax rate to reflect the much higher values.

The county saw its property values jump from $1.121 billion to $2.116 billion. The tax rate used for the 1981-82 fiscal year was $1.03 and the county commissioners, who have not yet approved the budget, are looking at a 55 cents rate for the present fiscal year (which would raise one percent more money).

For the city the rate in 1981-82 was 70 cents per $100 valuation. To keep the tax money coming in equal to the past fiscal year the city's rate would be 40 cents per $100 valuation. The city, however, seems strapped for funds and the word is a 16 percent maximum tax increase is being considered. That rate would be 46.4 cents.

Obviously a tax revaluation year complicates things for the taxpayer insofar as making comparisons with the previous year. However with an 88.7 percent increase in property values in the county and a 76 percent increase in the city the actual tax rate will drop. But for Greenville property owners, at least, there is almost certain to be an increase in the actual amount of dollars paid in property taxes.

Robinson Is Well Qualified

Washington, N. C. businessman W. R. "Bill" Robinson, Jr. is one of those mentioned as a candidate to replace Thomas W. Bradshaw, who recently resigned as Department of Transportation secretary.

It has been reported that Gov. Hunt, who will make the appointment, is leaning towards Robinson for this important job.

Let us say that we heartily approve of naming Robinson to the position. He has all the experience anyone could need in business and in public life to handle the Transportation duties.

The DOT will soon have a new influx of funds to continue highway maintenance and new construction. It is important that the program be administrated fairly and efficiently. We believe Bill Robinson can do this very well.

THIS AFTERNOON

Following Wealth

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — By all accounts, Tar Heels like the idea of balanced growth for North Carolina — jobs and economic opportunities dispersed all across the state so people can stay at home instead of moving to the city.

But the movement contains a threat as well. Rural crime is on the increase.

Statewide crime information gathered through the Police Information Network shows a steady upward direction for incidents in small town and isolated farmland areas; particularly in property crimes.

A data specialist with the Governor's Crime Commission concludes that this trend in crime has a direct relationship to economic growth and prosperity. In short, the money and the people are available in the country, so the thieves show up as well.

"As North Carolina moves into the rapid economic growth predicted for the 1980s, perhaps its greatest challenge may be to keep its crime rate low without having a large increase in its prison population," says David E. Jones.

Details

In a study prepared by Jones, three essential developments are detailed:

1. More jobs at higher pay are resulting from the state's economic development efforts. But as per capita income climbs, the gap between those with money and those without widens. Those with money buy more expensive items, and a readymade target for criminals results.

2. The state is about evenly split between urban dwellers and small town and rural residents. The opportunity for criminal profit exists in both areas.

3. Young people are a key factor in crime. Prison records and police arrest reports alike show a disproportionate share of criminal activity involves those between 15 and 24 years of age. A declining birthrate in recent years producing a declining school enrollment might lead one to conclude that a declining crime rate should also appear. But the job boom along with concentrations of military and educational establishments in North Carolina continues to draw young people to the area so that the high-risk age group continues to increase.

Jones reached a worrisome conclusion in his report to the commission when he says that the number of law enforcement personnel bears little direct relationship to the crime rate. Sheriffs and police chiefs almost invariably demand more personnel to combat crime rate growth.

"Only a small portion of police activity is related to crime prevention. In general, if a police department is increased without focusing its activity on selected offenses — burglary or robbery for example — the impact will be small," Jones thinks.

Impact

State action which does have measurable impact on the crime rate is arrest and conviction with punishment a certainty.

But evidence shows that much of the rural crime in North Carolina is being done by a small number of individuals who are highly mobile and, while perhaps not "organized", are in close contact with one another exchanging information on crime opportunities and methods of disposing of stolen merchandise.

Those young, habitual offenders, often classed as juvenile offenders and not targeted for action by court or law enforcement agencies, are involved in a disproportionate

Other Editors Say A Risk Involved

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

Governor Jim Hunt has issued an executive order creating County Transportation Efficiency Councils across the state.

Each council will be composed of five members. Their responsibility will be to oversee highway maintenance activities with a view toward recommending more efficient ways of doing things.

This speaks to the common, if not always valid, complaint of having more lookers and leaners than workers at pothole patching sites.

The governor's intentions, as always, are laudable. The need for such councils, however, is lamentable. The Department of Transportation has an abundance of salaried supervisors at various levels. If they aren't performing, they should be told to shape up or ship out.

One aspect of the "efficiency council" move is a bit worrisome. It seems that there has been a proliferation of advisory councils and commissions under this state administration. That makes for good politics, of course, and some public good might be served.

But if these assorted groups feel compelled to gather from time to time in Raleigh to pool their corporate knowledge — at taxpayer expense — the citizens of this state may be paying for more than they are getting.

Strength For Today

MORALITY AND RELATIVISM

The 20th century has seen a gradual undermining of basic morality by relativist and pragmatic standards of right and wrong. According to these concepts, the morality of an act is determined by its consequences, not by an inherent quality of its own. Thus, for instance, if an act leads to unfavorable social results, or unhappiness, it is wrong. Conversely, if it produces the opposite effect, it is right. Also, since people and social conditions vary in different ages and situations, the same act may be right for one generation and wrong for another.

These concepts constitute a futile attempt to decide eternal human problems with our own limited intelligence. The Gospels are to a large extent a divine answer to these same problems which the present-day philosophers are struggling with.

We should not be deceived by the glittering rationalizations of the relativists. They are trying to re-open questions long ago decided by God himself. — Elisha Douglass

MARCHING TO THE SAME SLOW DRUMMER!

BY ART BUCHWALD

Patient's Disadvantage

Something happens to people when they visit friends or relatives in the hospital. I was forced to spend a few days in one not long ago for minor surgery, and had a chance to observe the weird behavior of people who came to comfort me.

As a patient, I discovered you are at a complete disadvantage. Dressed in hospital garb, and stuck in a bed, you're no longer on equal terms with your pals. Without their realizing it, the entire relationship has changed.

From being a friend on equal footing with the Parkers, I suddenly found myself being treated like the senile uncle when they appeared at the hospital room door.

"You look great," Yvonne Parker said. "Doesn't he look great, Bill?"

"You certainly do," Bill agreed. "I've never seen you looking better."

"I feel great. I'm sore, but I feel just great."

"You have good color in your face," Yvonne said.

"Thanks," I replied. "Won't you sit down?"

"We can't stay too long," Bill said nervously, as he sat down. Then he got up. "Would you like a drink of water?"

"I don't think so, right now. But if I do I can pour one from this pitcher next to my bed."

"Isn't that great, Yvonne? He can pour his own water."

"I think it's just wonderful.

ART BUCHWALD

Can I help you with your pillow?"

"No thank you. I'm very comfortable."

"You look comfortable. I wouldn't even know you had been sick," Yvonne said.

"What does your doctor say?"

"He says I'm doing just fine. He doesn't think I'll have to stay the week."

"If he says so, he should know," Bill said.

"He wouldn't let you go home unless you were better," Yvonne said.

"That's what I thought," I said. "The reason he wants me to stay here is, if I go home, I'll overdo it. At the same time, he doesn't want me to stay in bed all day because I'll get stiff. He wants me to walk around."

Yvonne said, "We'll leave if you want to walk around."

"No. I don't want to walk around now. I'll walk around later."

"I can't believe how good you look," Bill commented. "Doesn't he look good, Yvonne?"

"I've never seen him look better."

"Well, what's going on in the outside world?" I asked.

"Don't think about the outside world. Your job is to get well," Bill said. "Isn't that right, Yvonne?"

"That's right. There's no sense thinking about other things until you're on the mend."

"Well," said Bill, "we don't want to tire you out."

"You're not tiring me out. I feel great."

"You don't think you're tired," Yvonne said, "because you feel so good. But you have to rest. Do you want me to put your bed down?"

"No, if I want to put my bed down, I can do it with this button right here."

"We don't want to interfere with your dinner," Bill said.

"It's only three o'clock. They don't serve dinner around here until five."

Yvonne said, "Then you probably want to wash up for it. Bill, we'd better be moving along."

Bill got up. "You look just great."

Yvonne agreed. "I wouldn't believe it if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes."

Bill said, "You're going to be okay, guy. Isn't he going to be all right, Yvonne?"

Hunt Record Looks Good

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt was widely credited with batting 1,000 on his requests of legislatures in his first term as governor.

With the first session of his second term now drawing to a close, his record doesn't seem to be as easy to figure — but it may well turn out to be nearly as good.

"We're batting .999," says Zeb Alley, Hunt's chief legislative lobbyist, "and the game isn't even over yet."

Alley could probably crow like that — and consider his salary, $30,000 for six-month's work, to have been earned — simply on the basis of the Legislature's enactment of one bill.

The 3-cents a gallon increase in the state tax on gasoline and other motor fuels that took effect last Wednesday was the real trophy Hunt sought from the 1981 General Assembly, and he probably would have been satisfied with just that.

Hunt had a legislative program this year, but his wish-list was scaled down in size from previous years — in part because of the conservative climate of the 1980 elections and in part because Hunt knew the tax increase would take as much lobbying and coaxing as he could manage.

Aside from the gasoline tax increase, Hunt won enactment of a hazardous waste management act; a $24 million appropriation for his microelectronics center, his major economic-development project; more money for the science and math high school, another favorite Hunt project; enactment of a bid-rigging felony law and passage of amendments to his 1979 presumptive sentencing law.

But there also is a list of things Hunt wanted from this legislative session that he is not going to win before it adjourns, perhaps this week.

Hunt lost portions of his highway system bail-out bill, such as the personal income tax rebate and a $59 million transfer of general tax revenues into the highway fund. Also, the pay raise for teachers and state employees Hunt included in his proposed state budget — amounting to between 4 percent and 6 percent a year, depending on its form — isn't in the state budget nearing final enactment this week.

But the items on that list can't be counted as failures, either. The rebate, even though it was in Hunt's highway package, wasn't really his idea — it was an idea of Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, that came to be regarded as silly by House leaders.

The pay raises, Hunt says, will still be passed when legislators hold their planned special session this fall. The major debate is expected to be over the size and whether the raises will be retroact ive to July 1.

And Hunt could still win more money for the highway program, though probably not the entire $59 million more he would like. His proposed tax increase on alcoholic beverages ran into opposition from Senate leaders after clearing the House, but Hunt's considerable powers of persuasion may yet dislodge it.

"Every major measure that was introduced on behalf of the governor passed," observed Alley, "except those we ran out of time on."

"I'd say he's done well," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey, "and of course the session is not over."

If Alley's calculation of Hunt's batting average is correct, it may be partly due to a good eye. Hunt has chosen carefully the issues he chose to make his major lobbying pushes on and grown quiet on the others.

Remember, for instance, the mining severance tax Hunt proposed in the spring? It still hasn't been introduced, and one Hunt aide — asking not to be named — said the idea proved so unpopular the administration has tried to ignore it.

The Legislature failed to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment again, after Hunt strongly endorsed it. But Hunt has separated that from his legislative program, noting the high emotions that surround the issue, and some ERA supporters believe he never devoted the lobbying to it that he has to other issues.

But the early assessment on Hunt's first legislative season of his second term must be that he won most of what he wanted and isn't out of it yet on the rest. And it seems clear that the early session talk that Hunt was losing his golden touch among legislators was just that — early and premature.

"The thing he really wanted, the gas tax, is the most controversial thing anybody could have asked for," said Rep. Charles Holt, D-Cumberland, who opposed Hunt on that one. "I don't think he's lost that much clout with the legislators."

Giving blood is easy.

Needing it is hard.

We're counting on you.

There Are Ways To Buy Home

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The more you know about the housing market, said the real estate agent, the better is your chance of snaring a good buy. To which the would-be owner replied: There are no good buys anymore.

The notion has become prevalent: If you want to buy a house you have to pay through the nose. You have to beg for the mortgage money, and then you have to pay monthly installments that are almost intolerable.

But interviews with various innovative real estate people suggest there are ways to accomplish your housing goal with perhaps less pain than you fear is out there. It means work, and probably a lowering of your sights for the time being, but there are ways, they say.

—The rundown house. It means opportunity, at a lower price. It means work too. But it does provide the essential element, which is shelter. It might also require that you learn to adjust to less than the ideal.

Probably nobody has counted the number of immigrants who began their ascent to the ranks of millionaires by putting their meager savings into a run-down house, fixing it up and eventually selling it at a profit. But the number is well into the thousands, and still growing.

In recent years, many native Americans have learned the technique, forced to do so because of their inability to find better housing.

These families buy inexpensively, and so can afford monthly payments. They use sweat labor;, and what work they must contract from professionals can be arranged a bit at a time so as to fit the budget.

Unless they commit an outrageous blunder, the evidence shows, they almost always increase the value of their property and sometimes the entire neighborhood. They have equity. They are on their way.

—The multifamily house. Again, an old immigrant tradition. Despite large-scale urban development projects, and private initiatives also, most cities of 10,000 or more people have a supply of relatively low-cost two-family and three-family houses in blue collar neighborhoods.

Many of these houses never have vacancies. They represent assured income, and no lender worth a dollar will fail to recognize that added income when considering you for a mortgage — providing you live in one of the apartments. Is there a quicker way to simultaenously raise your income, raise your borrowing power and raise a roof over your head?

—The no-cash purchase. The non-believers laugh when they hear about the no-cash purchase. It can't be done, they say. But thousands of no-cash transactions every year demonstrate how wrong they are.

No, say those who know about such things, the no-cash deal, and the very low-cash deal, don't advertise themselves. You must look for them. You might have to look at scores of houses and make dozen of proposals before finding a good deal, but when you do it might be worth the work.

No-cash deals generally involve income properties, that is, from two-family houses on up to very large buildings. The seller often is fairly well off and in no immediate need of cash. Because he is also about to retire he is looking for a good investment that provides an income with few headaches and a good rate of return.

That is, the seller is willing to give you a mortgage, with your monthly payments based on a 30-year repay period. In all probability, however, he will require you to pay the entire amount in perhaps five years or so. For five years your monthly payments will be fairly low; then you will be hit with a final payment of whatever remained unpaid.

This could present a problem, of course, but after five years of building your equity, during which time your financial sense has been proven, conventional lenders would look favorably upon you. Generally speaking, they would consider refinancing your property.

Almost all those interviewed who have benefitted from no-cash deals say they were discouraged from proceeding by real estate agents, so you have to be prepared to cheer yourself on, and do your own leg work too.

Draft Ruling Likely To Mark Supreme Court Term

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's just-completed 1980-81 term likely will be remembered most for a decision upholding the nation's male-only military draft.

The ruling was one of several dealing with the roles of men and women in American life.

But other such familiar themes as abortion, parental rights, court access, free speech and religious freedom all played a part in the nine-month term.

As in recent years, no dominant social philosophy was in evidence.

Rather, judicial restraint prevailed. Today's court remains most comfortable "fine-tuning" existing legal doctrines and deferring to the federal government's two other branches and the states when possible.

Liberals and conservatives found decisions to love and decisions to loathe.

Here are summaries of the major rulings announced by the nation's highest court in its 1980-81 term:

THE SEXES

— The Military Selective Service Act, which provides for male-only draft registration and conscription, does not foster unconstitutional sex discrimination against men. The women's rights movement, saying the ruling perpetuates an antiquated view of women in society, called the ruling its most serious legal setback of the last decade.

— Statutory rape laws aimed at punishing only males who have sex with underaged females are constitutional. Feminists panned that ruling as well.

— Military retirement pay is not subject to state divorce laws that require ex-spouses to share all assets.

— Women in jobs held primarily by women can sue on charges that their salaries are being discriminatorily held down. For the first time, the court said women can file and win wage-bias lawsuits without proving that they perform the same jobs as men who get paid more.

— So-called "head and master" laws that allow husbands, but not wives, to have exclusive control over jointly owned property are invalid.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

— The Ten Commandments cannot be posted in public schools.

— A worker who quits a job because of religious beliefs is entitled to collect unemployment compensation.

— States may restrict religious groups such as the Hare Krishnas from soliciting donations and distributing literature from certain public areas.

GOVERNMENT REGULATION

— Federal regulators do not have to show that industry costs are justified by the resulting health benefits when imposing standards for worker exposure to toxic materials, such as cotton dust.

— When setting water-pollution limits, the Environmental Protection Agency does not have to consider the economic capability of individual businesses within an industry to meet those limits.

— Federal inspectors do not need search warrants to enter and check mines, including stone quarries.

— The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission can demand an employer's records and then give those records to employees who are alleging on-the-job bias.

ABORTION

— States may require doctors to notify the parents of "immature" or dependent teen-aged girls when those girls seek abortions.

— States also may outlaw abortions not performed in a hospital after the first three months of pregnancy.

FREE SPEECH, EXPRESSION, PRESS

— States are free to allow television, radio and photographic coverage of criminal trials over a defendant's objection.

— Individual radio listeners have no right to demand governmental review of the abandonment of their favorite programs.

— Candidates for federal office have a "right of access" to buy advertising time on television and radio during a political campaign. And it's up to the federal government, not the broadcasters, to determine when that campaign has begun.

— Cities may ban billboards carrying "commercial" advertising but apparently may not ban those billboards bearing political or other "non-commericial" messages.

— "Nude" dancing is a form of constitutionally protected expression. It cannot be banned by broadly worded zoning laws.

— A federal law banning the placement of unstamped material in private home mailboxes does not unduly interfere with free-speech rights.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE

— Police need a search warrant, not just an arrest warrant, before entering a home to arrest a non-resident.

— Police with a valid search warrant for a home can detain everyone on the premises until that search is completed.

— Once a criminal suspect has invoked his right to have a lawyer's help before answering any questions from police, no further questions can be asked unless the suspect initiates the renewed conversation with police.

— Police officers most often need a search warrant before they can search containers in the car's trunk. But officers who stop a car and make an arrest do not need a warrant when those same containers are in the car's passenger compartment.

— Police may make investigatory stops based on "circumstantial evidence." They do not have to meet the more stringent standard of having "probable cause" to suspect criminal activity.

— A much-used federal law aimed at keeping racketeers out of legitimate business also can be used to prosecute wholly criminal activities.

— The government must strip former Nazi death camp guard Feodor Fedorenko of his U.S. citizenship because he lied to immigration officials when entering this country in 1949.

PARENTS AND CHILDREN

— Parents do not have an automatic constitutional right to a free lawyer when the state tries to take away their children.

— A state may punish more severely parents who leave the state when abandoning their children.

— Men defending against paternity suits have a right to a free blood test.

— In upholding a Minnesota law banning plastic milk containers, the justices said state courts cannot substitute their judgment for that of legislatures on matters of fact.

— Persons victimized by illegal water pollution cannot sue the polluters for money damages.

— Federal courts are authorized to hear labor disputes once legally required arbitration has fallen through.

— A Federal Trade Commission investigation cannot be challenged in federal court until the administrative proceedings are concluded.

THE ENVIRONMENT

— Stringent federal regulations on strip mining of coal are constitutional.

— Illinois and Michigan cannot sue Milwaukee and other Wisconsin entities in federal court for polluting Lake Michigan.

OFFICIAL IMMUNITY

— A judge's immunity from being sued for his or her decisions, even corrupt ones, does not shield co-conspirators.

— No "punitive" damages can be collected against local governments whose officials violate a person's civil rights.

— The justices also ruled that former President Nixon and two of his closest assistants must pay for illegally spying on a national security aide and his family. But the case, resolved by a 4-4 vote, did not definitively decide whether presidents and their top aides are absolutely immune from such lawsuits.

CIVIL RIGHTS

— The closing of a Memphis, Tenn., city street to through traffic, which had the effect of isolating a predominantly black neighborhood from a predominantly white one, was not a form of racial discrimination.

— An individual can sue the government for civil rights violations caused merely by an official's negligence.

STATES' RIGHTS

— In upholding Montana's 30 percent severance tax on coal mined within its borders, the court gave states a legal right to cash in to the fullest on their natural resources.

— But the justices struck down Louisiana's "first use" tax on natural gas passing through the state because it was imposed only on out-of-state consumers.

— States cannot ban 65-foot double-trailer trucks from their highways.

DEATH PENALTY

— A criminal defendant facing a possible death penalty must be warned of his right to remain silent prior to psychiatric testing if the test results are used after conviction to help choose between life and death.

PRISONS

— Housing two prison inmates in a cell designed for one is not necessarily unconstitutional.

— States may not change the way a prison inmate's eligibility for release is calculated after the inmate begins serving time.

— States are virtually free to transfer prison inmates to federal institutions willing and able to take them.

POLITICS

— The financial agreement that led to the release earlier this year of 52 American hostages from Iran and by July 19 will free more than $2 billion in Iranian assets from this country was legally valid. The court said then-President Jimmy Carter was authorized to make the deal.

— Wisconsin's "open primary," in which Democrats and Republicans can cross party lines to vote, cannot bind either political party's convention delegates to its results.

BUSINESS AND LABOR

— Employers do not have to pay federal Social Security and unemployment taxes on the free meals and lodging given to employees for the employer's convenience.

— Employers are under no obligation to change work schedules for military reservists.

— Neither are employers required to bargain with unions over their decision to close down portions of their business, even when decision will result in some union members losing their jobs.

— A process using a computer to regulate the curing time of rubber is patentable.

— Companies sued for antitrust violations cannot force all alleged wrongdoers to help pay court-ordered money damages. The court said there is no so-called "right of contribution" in such cases.

Claims Driving With Blindfold

ATLANTA (AP) — Augusta magician Dixie Dooley claims he drove the 213 miles between Columbia, S.C., and Atlanta blindfolded, eluding South Carolina and Georgia state troopers by starting before daylight.

"This is the longest feat of conjuring ever done," Dooley said Saturday after a sealed, black hood was cut from around his neck and the blindfold was removed. "We call it conjuring because we want people to wonder about it."

Dooley, host for an afternoon children's show on an Augusta television station, neatly parked his green van behind The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution building, posed for photographs and walked around the building.

The magician said he avoided state troopers by starting his trip at 3 a.m. rather than the announced time of 7:30 a.m. State troopers in both states had said they would arrest him if he violated any state traffic laws.

"We at the patrol are against anything like this," said J.William Williams, a spokesman for the South Carolina patrol in Columbia.

Blindfolded driving feats are nothing new for Dooley, he claimed, adding, however, that his earlier exploits were over shorter distances.

He claims to have driven blindfolded along the mile-long Cooper River bridge in Charleston, S.C., and down the strip in Las Vegas.

SBI Assists In Slaying Probe

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation and the Beaufort Police Department are investigating the slaying of 69-year-old Mary S. Pasture, who body was found in her home about a week after her death.

Detective Sgt. David L. Nance said Sunday that robbery is suspected in the slaying of Mrs. Pasture, who was found with her throat slashed in a house directly behind the Carteret County Sheriff's Department office.

Police said they have no suspects but are following up leads developed at the scene and through interviews.

Marine Killed In Car Wreck

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A U.S. Marine stationed at Camp Lejeune, N.C. was killed early Sunday in a one-vehicle traffic accident in western Knox County, the Tennessee Highway Patrol said.

A patrol spokesman identified the victim as Charles Ray Novak, 19, of Phoenix, N.Y. He said Novak was traveling at a high rate of speed, lost control of his vehicle and hit a utility pole.

At BB&T we think 5¼% interest is the least you should expect from a checking account.

At Branch Banking and Trust Company, we know our customers expect the most from us. So we wouldn't consider paying anything less on our new NOW account than the highest interest rate allowed by law—a full 5¼%.

Of course, some other banks may seem to offer as much, as may many of the savings and loans that are now starting out in the checking business.

But once you know more about our new NOW account, you'll understand how it offers you more for your money.

The biggest difference isn't the interest we pay. It's how we pay it.

Our new NOW Account pays 5¼% interest on the full balance of your account, not just part of it like some banks and savings and loans.

| Interest Compounded Daily | Minimum Balance To Avoid Service Charges |
|---|---|
| 5¼% | $500 in NOW Account. |
| 5¼% | $1,000 in a designated regular savings account. |
| 5¼% | $500 in NOW Account using BB&T "Constant Credit." |

And our 5¼% interest is compounded daily, not just monthly or quarterly.

Even more important, there are no service charges as long as you maintain a minimum monthly balance of just $500 in a NOW Account or $1,000 in a designated regular savings account or if you use BB&T's Constant Credit to maintain a $500 NOW Account minimum balance.

Finally, we provide something that savings and loans just can't offer. Expertise in checking accounts. You see, we've been handling checking for decades. Savings accounts, too. So it's easy for us to combine the advantages of both in our NOW account and manage it professionally.

Our new NOW Account combines the best of checking and savings with professional expertise.

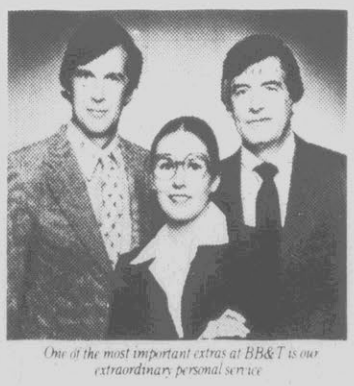

And our professionalism shows in our unique descriptive statement, carefully designed to be easier than ever to understand. This statement not only lists checks in numerical order, it also records in detail other regular payments you may make automatically from your account such as loan or mortgage payments.

Best of all, you get all the BB&T extras.

At BB&T, we're committed to working harder for you. So all our accounts and services—including our NOW account—come with lots of BB&T extras.

Extras like tellers who like to be extra helpful. Loan officers who understand. A branch manager who really listens. And a bank president who inspires his people to offer you the best in banking.

Plus the extra convenience of having our 90 branch offices to serve you when you need them.

One of the most important extras at BB&T is our extraordinary personal service.

Prices To Show Gas Decontrol

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Removing price controls on natural gas in 1982, three years ahead of schedule, could cost consumers up to $127 billion and raise the average homeowner's bill as much as 54 percent, an Energy Department analysis says.

But the report argues that the benefits would be substantial.

Full decontrol of the country's second most popular fuel in 1982 is one option being studied by the administration, and while the Energy Department report made no recommendation, it said President Reagan "should act soon" if he decides to seek the change.

The study, ordered by Energy Secretary James Edwards several months ago, is expected to play a key role in the administration's debate on natural gas prices. It has not been released, but a draft copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

Under a 1978 law, natural gas prices are gradually being raised until controls on most gas are totally lifted on Jan. 1, 1985. Edwards has said the administration is committed to speeding up that timetable and is studying ways to do it.

The DOE report estimated that homeowners' natural gas bills would increase between 21 and 54 percent in 1982 from full decontrol. The cost to all gas customers was estimated at between $91 billion and $127 billion.

The department's study falls in the middle of estimates done by groups on both sides of the decontrol issue.

Energy Action, which opposes decontrol, estimates homeowners' bills would increase 63 percent under full decontrol. The consumer group said the average homeowner would pay $575 for natural gas next year under current law but $940 under full decontrol.

The Natural Gas Supply Association, which supports decontrol, estimates homeowners' prices would rise only 20 percent.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, representing unions and consumer groups, has charged that immediate gas decontrol would be disastrous, costing 3.4 million jobs in the next four years.

The DOE study termed the economic impacts "significant" but gave no estimate on how many jobs would be lost or how much the change would boost the inflation rate.

It did predict that the loss to the country's inflation-adjusted gross national product, the total of all goods and services produced, could be $20 billion over three years.

However, it said that impact should be weighed against the benefits from faster decontrol, which it listed as removing the "regulatory burden" of price controls, cutting oil import levels and stopping "continued bad press in the international community, where we are pressing our allies to move to market-based pricing."

The study said that as an alternative to full decontrol in 1982, the administration might consider some method of speeding up the price increases. It said that unless this was done, the price shock in 1985 from decontrol could be substantial because the current monthly increases in natural gas fall below what is needed to keep up with rising oil prices.

Whatever the administration recommends must be approved by Congress. While administration officials such as budget director David A. Stockman are on record in support of faster decontrol, Republican leaders in Congress have urged the administration not to open the devisive issue this year.

DOE officials said the draft study is still being revised and Edwards has made no decision on what recommendation he will make to Reagan.

Reagan lifted all remaining price controls on domestic crude oil a week after taking office in January.

Columbus Is Becoming Nation's Cable Capital

By THOMAS RIZZO
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — You almost don't have to leave the house to enjoy Columbus. You can pay your bills and do your banking, summon the police or call the fire department, read the news and express your opinions all at the push of a button.

And if you're bored, there is entertainment and movies and sports aplenty, on one of four cable television systems, including KBLE, the only operating black-owned system in the United States.

Columbus, a predominantly white-collar city of 1.1 million, is the capital of Ohio and home of Ohio State University. It is a major research center and has been the subject of much research as a test market.

It is also America's premiere cable TV city.

It was here that Warner Amex Cable Communications Inc. introduced QUBE, the first "interactive," or two-way, system that let viewers talk back to their television, opening the door to at-home banking and buying.

And Columbus-based Banc One Corp. and the Ohio College Library Center were among the first to test banking and marketing services, with an experiment in 200 homes that let people pay bills and transfer money between bank accounts.

The Columbus Dispatch is among 11 newspapers and The Associated Press now providing news to some 10,000 computer subscribers of CompuServ, a subsidiary of H&R Block. It has also tested news delivery via QUBE.

The Columbus City Council conducts its meetings on the public access channel operated by the municipal Energy and Telecommunications Department. QUBE subscribers sometimes are been asked to register opinions on subjects being debated.

And people who don't feel safe in Columbus now can buy cable-linked police and fire protection, through a Warner Amex home security system that sends alarms to a central computer and the proper authorities.

"I call it the interactive television capital of the world," says Roger Blackwell, professor of marketing at Ohio State. "There is no other city in which people have such a variety of options."

Actually, not everyone has all the options. The four cable companies are assigned areas of the city serving about 110,000 potential customers each. Warner Amex's system is the only one with 30 channels and two-way TV.

Basic service is $11.95 a month on that system, which includes 10 pay-per-view channels and the extra-charge QUBE option.

What has this wiring done to Columbus? Preliminary findings are sketchy.

Thomas McCain, an associate professor of communications at Ohio State, says it seems to have created a lot more channel-switchers, especially among QUBE viewers who get a booksize console that permits remote-control decisions about programs.

"You never have to watch a commercial and you can watch two or three shows at the same time," he said. McCain says further studies on the phenomenon are planned for this fall.

Yet at the same time, cable seems to have enhanced word-of-mouth advertising, Blackwell said. He noted Kroger's supermarkets, which usually offered the lowest prices in cable advertising, reported dramatic increases in market share.

While expansion efforts certainly played a major role in the gains, "it's my personal believe that QUBE has helped Kroger's," he said. "I do know it's having some effect on consumer perceptions of prices."

Research by a former doctoral candidate, Nancy Offett, found that not only did people watch QUBE to check prices, "but they also talked about prices with people who didn't have QUBE."

Blackwell says QUBE also has restored the old-fashioned habit of gathering around the television to watch special programs, like prize fights. "It's not unusual to see 10 to 15 people around the TV," he said.

However, that's probably a result of the novelty of QUBE, he said, and may wear off as more people subscribe.

Cite Millions Lost In Unpaid Hospital Bills

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Memorial Hospital is losing millions of dollars because of unpaid patient bills, according to state records, and most of it ends up being paid for by taxpayers.

State records also show the facility loses more money per patient billed than any other hospital in the state — as much as 20 percent of the money it is supposed to collect from patients.

At the end of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1980, the hospital had uncollected hospital bills totalling $13 million from $66 million in patient charges. The General Assembly allocated $16 million for that period, and this year the Legislature has tentatively approved a $25 million outlay. A $26-million expenditure is being looked at for the following year.

The state's other three major hospitals appear to be doing better at coming up with back bills. But while the state auditor's office says N.C. Memorial is not trying hard enough, hospital officials point out extenuating circumstances.

Joseph Brugnolotti, acting director at N.C. Memorial, said other hospitals send patients to Chapel Hill who are no longer financially solvent because of the hospital's mandated open admission policy. And he said the hospital has taken steps to improve collections.

Meanwhile, Duke Hospital in Durham wrote off uncollected charges of $8.8 million, or 6.9 percent of its patient charges. North Carolina Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem reported an even lower rate of 4.8 percent, or $3.2 million uncollected. And Charlotte's publicly owned Memorial Hospital wrote off $5.8 million, or 7.6 percent of total patient billings of about $76 million.

The state audit said N.C. Memorial makes little effort to see that patients receive financial help from federal or state medical aid programs, and pointed out that the hospital had discontinued the job of a staffer whose job was to work out such qualifications. Now the hospital simply instructs patients in how to apply and lets them fill out their own forms.

Hospital officials said they have begun using a computer to speed billing and plan to hire a lawyer to assist in collections, but they did not indicate a change in the financial aid applications would be forthcoming.

Adminstrators at private, non-profit hospitals such as N.C. Baptist said they couldn't continue operating if patients handled their own applications for aid. Duke, Charlotte Memorial and N.C. Baptist said they have staff members who not only help poor patients in qualify, but who appeal when agencies reject the claims. And all three said the sue to collect on overdue bills.

No School Board Meeting Monday

Due to the first Monday of July falling on a holiday, there will be no meeting of the Greenville City Board of Education on Monday. The information meeting will instead be held Monday, July 13.

Also, all offices of the Greenville city schools, including the central office, will be closed on Monday.

County Farm Tour

A county farm tour will be conducted by the Pitt County Agricultural Extension agents on July 11. The tour will begin with a sponsored breakfast at Tom's Restaurant, West End Circle, at 6:30 a.m. The tour bus will leave the restaurant at 7:15 a.m. and return by 12:30 p.m.

Stops on the tour will include a horticultural weed control and cultural practices test plot, an alfalfa test plot, a peanut leafspot control test lot and an aphid management in tobacco test plot. A weed identification contest will be held at the soybean weed control test plot and a prize will be awarded to the winner.

For further information and/or a schedule and map of the tour, contact the extension office, 1717 W. Fifth St., Greenville, at 758-1197 or 752-2934. Persons planning to eat breakfast with the tour group should contact the extension office by July 8.

Youth Garden Contest Open

Gardeners between the ages of 6-19 are eligible for prizes to be awarded July 9 at the second annual youth gardening contest. The contest will be held at 9 a.m. at the Farmer's Market on Greene Street in Greenville.

To enter, the produce must be grown by the youth in a separate garden or the youth must have assisted with the family garden in a major way. Entries are made by bringing six items of ther vegetable they wish to enter (for example, beans, bring a quart, and melons, bring three.)

The vegetable categories will be tomatoes, peppers, squash, cucumbers, potatoes, carrots and beets. An open category will be available for all other items to be judged.

Judges will look for color, size, overall appearance and quality of produce.

Ribbons will be awarded each entry and prizes will be given the first and second place winners in the following divisions: beginners, 6-9 year-olds; junior, 10-13 year-olds; senior, 14-19 year-olds.

The contest is sponsored by the Pitt County 4-H office and will be conducted by Sam Uzzell, Pitt County Horticultural Agent.

$5,000 Reward Buys No Leads

HOUMA, La. (AP) — Despite a $5,000 reward for information, police say they have no leads on who set fire to a flammable liquid near the back door of the Odyssey Disco. The June 28 fire killed Molly Boudreaux and four other people.

Gilbert Boudreaux has offered the reward in hopes of securing a conviction of whoever set the fire that killed his teen-age daughter. "Whoever did it, I want him," Boudreaux said.

Three other businessmen have added $500 each to the reward.

HOUSING MEET

Congress Moves Give States Spending Freedom

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a few brief paragraphs, Congress is moving to unwrite some of the biggest social legislation of the 1970s, replacing it with blocks of money that the states will have broad freedom deciding how to spend.

The block grant proposals — part of President Reagan's budget-cutting package — would affect programs ranging from day care to foster care, from homemaker services for the old and handicapped to protective services for abused children and battered wives.

The block grants would give states control over whether to spend money on maternal and child health programs, water fluoridation, rat control and aid to communities facing court-ordered desegregation.

Reagan has described the block grant approach as "an intermediate step" toward turning back to the states the authority over social programs and the tax revenues to pay for them.

However, Congress is not yet ready to go as far as the president would like.

While Reagan proposed block grants for nearly all health and education programs, the House and the Senate kept many as "categorical" programs, meaning that Washington can still tell the states how to spend the money.

Despite such victories, Reagan critics contend the block grants heading for congressional passage would devastate an array of important social service programs.

They say the Reagan approach would touch off a scramble for the money and tempt states to divert funds intended for the "truly needy" to other state needs, such as state tax cuts and roadbuilding.

"The administration is in the process of dismantling all the requirements that federal money go to people who are truly needy instead of those that have political clout," said John Carr, spokesman for the Ad Hoc Coalition on Block Grants, a group representing labor, liberal and religious organizations.

Carr argued that block grants could wreak political havoc in state legislatures, with one needy group pitted against another in a battle for a reduced pot of federal money.

Conservatives, however, welcome the block grant approach, saying it would "defund the left" and reduce the clout of liberal special interest groups in Washington.

"Block grants will require the special interest groups to work in 50 locations to affect policy changes instead of in Washington, D.C., alone," declared a coalition of 80 conservative organizations, including the Moral Majority and Conservative Caucus. "This change will substantially reduce the power of these special interest groups that has built up over the past 50 years."

The block grant approach is contained in both the House and Senate versions of Reagan's budget-cutting plan. The House and Senate passed separate bills last month and a conference committee now must iron out the differences.

But since both bills contain similar approaches to block grants, the concept is virtually certain to be included in any legislation that wins final congressional approval, expected in August.

In one paragraph in the hastily drafted House Republican budget proposal, some of the major liberal victories of the last decade are wiped out.

"The following provisions of law hereby are repealed," starts the paragraph.

The victims include "Title XX of the Social Security Act," a $3.1 billion package of federal programs designed to help the nation's poor, elderly, handicapped, battered wives and abused children.

Title XX provides money to states for day care, job counseling, transportation to hospitals, foster care, vocational rehabilitation and protection of children and abused adults. Last year, the program aided an estimated 11 million people.

The House bill also would repeal child abuse laws passed in 1974 and 1978 and major sections of the 1974 Community Services Act.

Republicans estimate that those targeted programs would have cost a total of $3.7 billion next year.

In their place, the House would approve $3.1 billion — about a 16 percent cut. The money would be divided among the states, which then could decide whether to continue appropriations for the various social programs.

The bill authorizes states to spend their allotment on "social services to individuals and families, particularly those most in need," but sets few requirements.

Critics note that no cap is placed on "administrative costs," raising fears that state governments might use their grants to pay state salaries and thereby free state money for other purposes.

States also would conduct their own audits on how the federal money is spent.

"For an administration that talks about (curbing) waste, fraud and abuse, this is a blank check," Carr said.

The National Governors' Association, which supports block grants, contends that the reporting requirements in the House bill might be too stringent.

The bill states that a governor must "prepare a public report on the intended use of the funds" and establish a system of public review.

"We feel that's unnecessarily burdensome and goes against the idea of block grants," said Scott Bunton, human resource director for the conference.

Although the House bill states that appropriations would be continued for three years at the $3.1 billion level, block grant opponents contend that the administration might well come back next year and seek even deeper cuts.

The House and Senate bills also create block grants for health and education, although they are much more limited than Reagan wanted.

On education, special funds for disadvantaged, handicapped and bilingual students was kept out of the block grants and only about two dozen smaller programs included.

On health, the House created three block grants — for maternal and child health, for mental health and drug abuse and for a variety of small programs such as rodent control and fluoridation. Community and migrant health centers, family planning and several other major programs are eft as categorical grants.

The Senate also has three block grants, and although community and migrant health centers are included in one, special set-asides prevent a sharp cut in that spending.

Reagan supporters argue that block grants would not only give states greater control over social programs, but would reduce federal administrative costs, allowing each dollar to provide more services.

Critics, however, argue that block grants would replace one bureaucracy in Washington with 50 at the state level.

They also warn of serious confusion that may result when the responsibility is shifted to the states.

Bob Goss of the National Conference of State Legislatures said that with the Reagan package scheduled to take effect Oct. 1, as many as half the states might have difficulty enacting legislation needed to handle the new responsibilities.

The states also might have to grapple with a clause in the House bill that stipulates that they "shall assure the continuation of funding of effective programs which are servicing demonstrated needs."

This would apparently require the state governments to declare that specific programs are either ineffective or not needed before the money could be eliminated — a tough political decision for any government.

Burroughs Wellcome Is Winner In Arts Award

AS A WINNER . . . in the 1980 "Business and the Arts" competition, Burroughs Wellcome Company received an original limited edition print by American artist Chen Chi. William M. Sullivan (right), executive vice president, accepted the award from James J. Dunn (center), publisher of Forbes Magazine and Edward M. Strauss, left, president of the Business Committee for the Arts.

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK — Burroughs Wellcome Company was selected a winner in the 1980 international "Business in the Arts" competition, cosponsored by Forbes Magazine and the Business Committee for the Arts.

The company was recognized by the awards judges for its "major financial commitments to the North Carolina Museum of Art, the North Carolina Symphony, the American Dance Festival, and the state's public radio network." Also cited were funds given to local arts councils in Durham, Raleigh, and Greenville, as well as the company's own collection of contemporary American art.

In a congratulatory letter to Burroughs Wellcome, President Ronald Reagan commented: "Your efforts are an outstanding example of what Americans can accomplish through voluntary giving. Our nation's cultural richness and diversity are due in large measure to the generous contributions which have been made by citizens and organizations in the private sector."

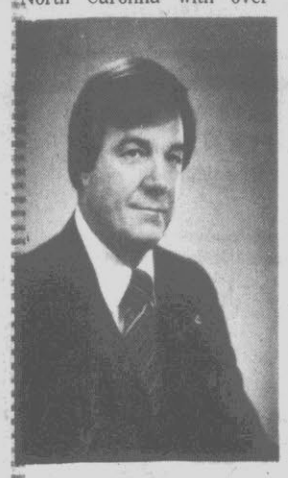

An independent panel of arts, business and government leaders reviewed the nearly 300 nominated progrms and selected 50 firms as winners. The award winning firms ranged in size from small local businesses to giant multi-national corportions. Since 1966, awards have gone to firms in more than 200 U.S. cities and Canada, England, Hong Kong, South Africa and Japan.

On April 9, Burroughs Wellcome was one of the North Carolina firms presented with a 1980 "Governor's Business Award in the Arts and Humanities."

Appointed to the Regional Advisory council of the Small Business Administration by President Jimmy Carter in 1977, Stephenson was recently appointed to a second term on that board.

Adjournment Looks Like Set July 10

By SAM D. BUNDY
N.C. House of Representatives

I missed it again. I predicted we would adjourn on Friday, July 3; however, it will now likely be Friday, July 10.

The Senate has passed the 1981-83 State Budget; and by the time you read this, the House wil have done likewise. It amounts to $5.7 billion in 1981-82 and $6 billion in 1982-83 for a total biennial budget of $11.7 billion. Of this amount, in round figures, about $7 billion is for the General Fund, $1.6 billion is for the Highway Fund, and $3.1 billion, Federal Funds. It might be interesting to note that 70 percent of the entire budget is spent on education — university system, community colleges, and public education (elementary and secondary schools). The main issue now to be resolved is the Congressional Redistricting. The House and Senate have passed different versions, and a conference committee is now at work on this matter. There wre some things in the budget that I did not like, and there were some things I did like. However, in a budget package, you have to vote for some things you don't like in order to get the things you want.

House Bills now number 1,263 and Senate Bills 761 for a total of 2,124; however, many of these bills will be held over for the 1981 October session and/or the 1982 mini-session.

See you next week.

GOSPEL GROUP

The public is invited.

Ayden Club Has Aquathon

AYDEN — The Golf and Country Club will sponsor an aquathon for Easter Seals July 11-12, open to country club members only. All proceeds will be donated to the Easter Seal Society of Pitt County with Jackie Repolge as volunteer coordinator for the event.

Persons of all ages are urged to participate in thre aquathon. Registration forms amy be picked up at the Country Club pool. Two trophies will be awarded to the swimmers raising the most money, with ribbons awarded to those who swim the most laps in each age group. Participants raising $25 and up will receive "I'm A Pepper" t-shirts.

The Aquathon participants will be obtaining pledges from sponsors in the Ayden-Grifton areas. For more information, contact Jackie Repolge, 746-6774.

Stock And Market Reports

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 47.47 points in the last seven sessions, dropped another 6.75 to 952.44 by noontime.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 3-1 margin in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

DuPont and Conoco were delayed in opening. DuPont agreed to acquire Conoco for a combination of cash and stock, topping a previous offer for a large chunk of Conoco shares by Seagram Co.

The NYSE's composite index fell .63 to 74.10. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 5.81 at 361.03.

No Trace Of Favorite Son

BUFFALO, Wyo. (AP) — Two years ago, this small Wyoming town made front pages across the country when Western Airlines pilot Lowell Ferguson landed a Boeing 727 here by mistake, 45 miles short of his destination in Sheridan.

Spurned last year in their efforts to honor Ferguson for bringing them into the jet age, town fathers are rolling out the red carpet again. This time, though, they are cutting their chances of being stood up.

Anyone who is named Lowell Ferguson, and can prove it, will get favorite son status at the Johnson County Centennial Celebration July 25 and 26. The benefits include the prizes that Ferguson wasn't able to claim last year plus free lodging for three days.

If more than one Lowell Ferguson shows up, chamber of commerce officials said, they'll honor whichever one wins a buffalo-chip-throwing contest.

Residents in this town of about 4,000 were delighted at Ferguson's unexpected landing in July 1979 and promptly dubbed their little airstrip Buffalo International Airport. Last summer, the town fathers planned a "Lowell Ferguson Days" festival to mark the anniversary of the event.

Ferguson accepted an invitation, but Western Airlines officials were less than delighted by the prospect and told him to stay home.

With the county's looming centennial celebration, the Chamber of Commerce decided to invite Ferguson again.

The chamber suspects Western Airlines will again try to block the real Ferguson's chances of attending, so they broadened the invitation a little.

Rules Death Self-Inflicted

Roland Daniel Brock, 25, of Pinewood Trailer Park near Ayden died today in Pitt Memorial Hospital of injuries resulting from an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound on Sunday, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Pitt County Medical Examiner Dr. Stan Harris, who ruled suicide in the incident, said this morning that Brock died of a gunshot wound to the head. He added that he understands the man suffered from Hodgekins disease.

Sheriff Tyson said that the incident was reported at 6:51 p.m.

Brock was taken to Pitt Memorial by the Ayden Rescue Squad.

Three Cars In Accident

A three car collision occurred Sunday at 5:50 p.m. on Stantonsburg Rd. (rural paved road 1200), according to the Highway Patrol.

Investigating Trooper Spencer Padgett reported that Robert Lee Stallings of Rt. 6, Greenville was traveling east when the vehicle he was driving was involved in a collision with a car operated by James Lee Hooker, Kings Drive, Greenville. Padgett reported that Hooker said his car then "automatically" went into reverse.

The patrolman said Lenny Morris of Slay Drive, Greenville, a witness to the accident, stopped behind the wreck scene and was going to assist Stallings and Hooker when the Hooker vehicle backed into his car.

Stallings, Hooker and three passengers in the vehicles were treated for injuries and released from Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Hooker was charged with reckless driving, the patrol spokesman said.

Rules Suicide In Gun Death

Pitt County Medical Examiner Dr. Stan Harris has ruled suicide in the Sunday afternoon death of Joseph Columbus Coltrain, 52, at his 1401 E. Wright Road home.

Harris said this morning that Coltrain had been suffering from heart disease.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon, who said a .22 caliber pistol was apparently used in the suicide, added that the incident took place at 3:30 p.m.

Panel Gets Vatican Finance Problems

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II named a special council today of 15 archbishops, including two Americans, to study the Vatican's financial problems.

Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, said the group will hold its first meeting next Monday and Tuesday, under the leadership of Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, Vatican secretary of state.

Panciroli gave out no details on the current state of the Holy See's finances, but the Vatican issued a gloomy picture in a historic disclosure in 1979.

The Vatican said it expected a budget deficit of $20.2 million for 1979, that the deficit would probably be worse in 1980 and the within a few years the Holy See could "find itself in serious difficulty" if inflation-fueled expenses continued to rise and income remained at the present level.

The 1979 statement, issued after an extraordinary meeting of cardinals, was the first time in modern church history that the Vatican released figures on its financial position.

Members of the special commission are all cardinal-archbishops from outside the Vatican and Italy.

The two American cardinals are John Krol of Philadelphia and Terence J. Cooke of New York.

The other members are Cardinals Joseph Hoffner of Cologne, West Germany; Narciso Jubany Arnau of Barcelona, Spain; Roger Etchegaray of Marseille, France; Gerald Emmett Carter of Toronto, Canada; Juan Carlos Aramburu of Buenos Aires, Argentina; Ernesto Corripio Ahumada of Mexico City; Eugenio de Araujo Sales of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Also Maurice Otunga of Nairobi, Kenya; Paul Zoungrana of Ouagadougou, Upper Volta; Jaime Sin of Manila, Philippines; Joseph Parecattil of Ernakulam, India; James Freeman of Sydney, Australia; Joseph Cordeiro of Karachi, Pakistan.

LOOKING AHEAD

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs Elliot Abrams today had talks with Foreign Ministry officials and the military here on the upcoming international conference on Cambodia, scheduled for July 13 in New York.

Fiori Shakes Off Pressure To Win Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Ed Fiori felt the pressure mounting Sunday, but the relatively unknown touring pro shook it off to capture the top prize of $54,000 with a record-shattering performance in the 78th Western Open.

"The pressure was there and it usually scares me to death, but I handled it well," said Fiori.

Fiori fired a final round 67 over the hazardous 7,097-yard Butler National layout and finished with a 72-hole total of 277, 11 strokes under par, and four shots better than the previous Western-at-Butler record of 281 posted by Scott Simpson last year.

"I've been working on my game, I've been working on my swing and I've played well," said the chunky Fiori when asked how he conquered such a tough course while beating out a strong field which boasted the likes of Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Tom Watson.

But it wasn't Nicklaus, Trevino or Watson who Fiori had to defeat. He finished four shots ahead of Jim Simons, Greg Powers and Jim Colbert, who tied for second at 281, while Bill Rogers, who had the lead going into the final round, finished fifth at 282.

Fiori, who lives in Sugarland, Texas, and claims he must lose 20 pounds to get down to the 175 listed for him in the Tour Guide, had things going so well that even when he played safe and would have been satisfied with a bogey 5 on No.18, he sank an 80-foot putt to save par.

"I was about to cry," said Fiori. "I was the happiest guy in the world there for about five minutes. On the 18th, I hit a 2-iron off the tee, a wedge over the tree, and a sand wedge to the green. I made the putt. It might have been 80 feet, but by tomorrow it'll probably be a hundred feet."

Rogers held a two-stroke lead over Fiori as the final round started, but that quickly went by the boards as Rogers, who had birdied the first two holes in each of the previous three rounds, opened with a bogey while Fiori birdied to climb into a tie.

Although Fiori did not have a single bogey in the round, he fell behind Simons, who birdied four of the first five holes to take a one shot lead.

Fiori birdied No.6 to gain a tie with Simons and went ahead to stay when Simons took a bogey 6 on No.7. Fiori finished the front nine with a 3-under-par 33 and tacked on birdies at the 12th and 15th holes.

It was Fiori's second tour victory, the other coming in the 1979 Southern Open when he defeated Tom Weiskopf in a playoff. The $54,000 payoff boosted his earnings this year to nearly $90,000. His previous high was $79,481 last year.

Simons bogeyed the last two holes and missed a short putt on the 18th to drop him into a three-way tie for second place. That cost him $10,000. He had to settle for $22,400, the same

Pitt Co. Slips Past Edenton, 2-1

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Troy Hudson hasn't played much for the Pitt County American Legion baseball team this summer, but Sunday afternoon he appeared at the right time in the right place.

With the bases loaded and one out in the bottom of the ninth, Hudson slapped the ball through the drawn-in infield and drove in Kenny Barnes with a game-winning run as Pitt nipped Edenton, 2-1.

Saturday night, Snow Hill spoiled a bid to finish the season on a solid winning note, handing Pitt a 7-6 defeat. Pitt, which wrapped up its fifth straight regular season Area I East title with three games to go, still won two of the final three.

Sunday's win didn't come easy, however, and pitcher Tyrone Gay was probably wondering when his teammates were going to come to his rescue. He had done the job for them on the mound.

Gay, who finished the regular season with a 5-0 mark, had an outstanding effort on the day. He scattered only three hits, walked three and struck out 15 batters. Ironically, the only run Edenton scored came after he made an error that let the man who scored live.

But Pitt, after being held in check on four hits, three walks and two strike outs by Phil Holton of Edenton, struck back and got the victory thanks to a lead-off error by third baseman Warren Perry in the bottom of the ninth that put the tieing run on third.

Edenton, which had left a runner at second in the second, missed out on a fine chance in the fifth when Emmett Walsh threw out the stealing Tony Brabble one pitch before Steve Sawyer lined a single into center for a potential RBI had the steal worked.

Finally, in the seventh, Edenton pushed over its unearned run. Al Bunch, who drew all three walks off Gay, led off with a free pass. Perry grounded back to Gay, but he threw over second in the attempt to get Bunch. Brabble grounded into a fielder's choice that got Perry at second, but moved Bunch to third. A passed ball on Walsh then let Bunch cross with the go-ahead run.

Edenton again threatened, putting a man on third in the eighth and one on second in the ninth, but couldn't scrach again.

Pitt left a man on second in the third, and on third in the fourth, but had only one other baserunner — erased in a double play — until the ninth.

But the ninth was enough.

Sammy Hodges led off grounding a slow roller to Perry at third. Perry, who had made seven assists on the day with fine play, including starting one round-the-horn double play, was just wide of the target at first on his hurried, off-balanced throw, however. As the ball was chased down, the speedy Hodges legged on to third. Barnes followed with a soft liner over the head of Holton that Woody White couldn't come up with in time for a play at second, as Hodges had to hold third. Walsh made up for his passed ball with a single to right, driving in Hodges and moving Barnes to second. Gordon Douglas sacrificed both runners up, and Roger Williams was intentionally walked.

That brought up Hudson, who sliced one past short in the drawn-in infield to easily score Barnes with the game-ender.

"I'm glad we didn't play seven," a relieved coach Pat Smith said afterwards. Edenton, which went on to play another game in Snow Hill later Sunday afternoon, had suggested playing seven, but Smith, after thinking about it, decided to stick with the regulation nine. "I got to thinking that we had won a wad of games in the eighth and ninth innings.

"We looked sluggish and anemic there for a while," Smith added. "But Holton really pitched a good game against

Seahawks Sweep Pair From East Carolina

WILMINGTON — UNC-Wilmington, despite being outhit in both games, swept a doubleheader from East Carolina Sunday night. The Seahawks scored four runs in the second to win the opener, 5-1, and took the nightcap, 2-0 in a North State Collegiate Summer Baseball League twin bill.

East Carolina, now 9-10, outhit the Seahawks six to five in the first game and five to two in the second. Contributing to the two losses was the fact ECU left 14 men on base in the two games — nine in the second game. The Pirates also made four errors — three in the first game.

In the opener, the Seahawks scored four runs in the second inning to take a lead they never lost. Clyde Holley singled to open the inning and moved to second an error by shortstop Pete Persico. Johnny Slaughter then reached on a fielder's choice in which no one was out.

Mike Antle followed with a single to score Holley. Tommy Phillips fly to right moved Slaughter to third. He later scored on David Price's single. Singles by Tim Whitehead and Paul Murr, with Antle scoring on Murr's single. Price later scored when Roger Hudson reached on an error.

UNC-W scored its final run of the game one inning later when Kelly O'Donnell reached on a

Applause For The Champ

McEnroe's Problems Not Over

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The troubled story of the Wimbledon tennis tournament will drag on for two months before John McEnroe, the new champion, knows what ultimate penalty is in store for him.

The International Tennis Council is due to meet during the U.S. Open Championships in September to study reports from the All-England Club on the court behavior of the rebel champion.

If the club's recommendations are approved McEnroe will be fined a total of $14,500 and will be liable to suspension for up to a year.

The Council is not expected to take such extreme action as that. And McEnroe will certainly not miss the U.S. Open, which he has won for the last two years, because the unit will not meet before then.

McEnroe, 22, made history by beating Bjorn Borg 4-6, 7-6, 7-6, 6-4 in Saturday's final and ending the Swedish star's five-year reign. But on the way to the final he did a few other things that caused members of the highly respectable All-England Club to splutter into their teacups.

In three matches, two singles and a doubles, he was reported for arguing over line calls and abusing officials.

He stormed out of a press conference after being asked a question about his girl friend Stacy Margolin and it sparked off a fight between two reporters.

McEnroe was on his best behavior in the final and defeated Borg on merit. He served more consistently than the defending champion and played the big points more securely.

But McEnroe's rebellious behavior went on. That night he dodged out of the Champions' Dinner, at which all Wimbledon champions are expected to wear evening dress and respond to a toast.

His father, New York lawyer John Patrick McEnroe, said his son was celebrating elsewhere. Officials of the All-England Club said McEnroe told them he would not be at the dinner but promised to appear at the end and say a few words.

But it was all left to Chris Evert Lloyd, the women's champion. She responded to a toast by Sir Brian Burnett, chairman of the All-England Club, and made a gentle joke at the expense of her absent fellow champion.

"Sir Brian told me I would have to make two speeches, one for myself and one for You-Know-Who," Lloyd said.

"But I am only speaking for myself because I don't have the same vocabulary."

When he talked of Borg after the final, McEnroe was all good sportsmanship.

"I am glad to have beaten one of the greatest players in the history of tennis," he said. "I want to congratulate him as a great champion."

Their rivalry, which Borg said was good for the game, is likely to be renewed at the U.S. Open at Flushing Meadow in New York.

McEnroe gave Wimbledon problems it had never had from any previous champion in the tournament's 104-year history.

The whole of Britain watched McEnroe's matches and court tantrums on television. During one match 20 people telephoned Wimbledon and asked that he be disqualified, a spokesman of the All-England Club said.

McEnroe Vs. Borg

Feisty Lefty Breaks Swed's Aura Of Invincibility

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The red Indian headband that holds John McEnroe's corkscrew curls in place is a symbol of anger and courage. Bjorn Borg's golden locks are restrained by a white band, denoting purity of behavior and purpose.

Tennis is in for a great traveling road show — the two best players in the world, so close that a point or two can swing the pendulum either way — crossing oceans to battle each other like restless gladiators.

McEnroe, fiery and feisty, has broken the stolid Swede's grip on the prestigious Wimbledon crown, wrecking Bjorn's aura of invincibility here with a 4-6, 7-6, 7-6, 6-4 victory Saturday on the Center Court's chopped-up grass.

Five straight Wimbledon crowns, 41 match victories without a loss covering half a decade has been broken on the taut gut strings of McEnroe's wooden racket.

Now the two move to McEnroe's home grounds — the U.S. Open at Flushing Meadow — on a hard, fast artificial surface where the American has won the last two years and the young Swede, with six French crowns and five Wimbledons dangling at his belt, has never prevailed.

It should provide an exciting head-to-head series between the sport's impeccable and imperturbable Borg and the volatile, always-ready-to-explode McEnroe.

It is the quiet "Shane" against the snarling man in black in a saloon shootout. It is a tennis version of those wild wrestling matches — always the good guy, like Gorgeous George, against the villain, the Mad Strangler.

It's hard to recall when tennis has produced two rivals so oppposite in personality and style yet so closely matched.

Since they began whaling away at each other with 100 mph services and chalk-raising placements in 1978, they have met in 13 tournaments and been involved in 40 sets.

Borg holds a slight edge in victories, 7-6, but McEnroe has won the last two. In the 40 sets they have played, the score is a standoff 20-20. Thirteen of the sets have been tiebreakers, McEnroe winning nine.

"The tiebreak is an advantage for John," Borg said after being dethroned as Wimbledon king. "It is his kind of game, big serve and volley, quick points.

"Me? I am better when we have long rallies."

Young McEnroe borrowed some pages from the Swede's book to score his epic victory. He hit with some 65 per cent of his wicked, sometimes wide-swinging left-handed services, enabling him to move in swiftly and put away the volley.

Stealing a Borg trademark, he managed to win the big points.

Borg was one of the first to give his conqueror credit for that.

"John got a lot of his first serves in and he came through on the crucial points," the tall, blond Swede acknowledged.

"I had a 4-1 lead and four set points in the third set. If I had taken that set, it might have made a big difference. But John kept coming up with those saving big points."

The 22-year-old American, three years Borg's junior, admitted that he closed out of his mind all the furor of the last two weeks during which he constantly feuded with linesmen, umpires and the critical British press and drew a succession of warnings, penalties and fines.

"When you play Wimbledon you've got to give it everything you've got," he said. "I felt like telling myself, 'Come on.' But I didn't even do that.

"When it got close, I got tougher. I was determined to close the door."

Gant Still Waiting For First NASCAR Victory

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The consensus is that someday Harry Gant will win a NASCAR Grand National stock car race.

But Cale Yarborough knew that Gant's first victory wasn't going to come during Saturday's Firecracker 400 at Daytona International Speedway.

"It would have been hard to lose this one," said the man who now has picked up four Firecracker 400 victory trophies. "The car handled perfectly all day and the engine was super strong."

And, despite the fact that Gant was leading going into the 160th and final lap, everybody seemed to know that Yarborough was going to finish on top.

After taking turns leading the 160-lap event, Yarborough decided to stay behind Gant with 23 laps to go.

"I knew I could pass him any time I wanted to" Yarborough said. "But I also knew he could do the same to me.

"In this day and age, you've got to use your head or somebody is going to beat you. You have to use your head and have patience."

The 41-year-old Yarborough, a gentleman farmer from Timmonsville, S.C., bided his time until the two cars hurtled down the long backstretch of the 2.5-mile, high-banked oval on the final lap.

With Gant just trying to stay ahead, Yarborough dropped low on the track, pulled even, then passed Gant as the two Buick Regals sped through the third turn.

"I knew if I could pass him there and keep my momentum going, there was no way he would get by me before the end of the race," said Yarborough.

Gant, also 41 and a longtime star in late model sportsman racing, has yet to win a Grand National race since becoming a regular in 1979. However, the Taylorsville, N.C., driver has has firmly established his credentials as a bridesmaid by finishing second eight times — five of the this season.

"Cale had the superior car all day," Gant said with a shrug. "But I just wish I had been able to be running second on the last lap. Then I think I could have done the same thing to him. It's better to be behind in that situation.

"Before that, I tried to back off (the throttle) so Cale would go by me. But he just backed off too, and then (Richard) Petty started to catch up and I was afraid he'd pass both of us."

Gant says he isn't frustrated, though.

"I'd like to win, but I'm happy with this," he said. "Any time we finish it's a financial victory and I'll take second any time.

"In fact, I wouldn't mind if I finished second the rest of the year and set a record for seconds. There's a lot of money in finishing second."

Gant earned $15,350 Saturday, while Yarborough won $24,675 for himself and team owner M.C. Anderson.

Travis Carter, Gant's crew chief, is sure the first victory is right around the corner.

"Harry is a heckuva driver. The barrier gets a little harder to crack every time he finishes second, but, when he does win one, everything will fall into place real quick."

Yarborough, who gained his second victory of the season and 71st of his career, agreed, saying, "Harry is a good driver. He's gonna win."

Yarborough rolled across the finish line just ahead of Gant, and Petty's Regal was less than a second behind.

Buddy Baker, who wrecked his car during practice last Thursday, started 21st in the beat up Oldsmobile and wound up a distant fourth.

Johnny Rutherford, who has been having all kinds of problems being competitive this year in his return to stock car racing, was fifth. The three-time Indianapolis 500 winner outdueled Grand National rookie Tim Richmond, who blew his engine with four laps to go, and Kyle Petty, Richard's son.

Yarborough, a three-time national champion, averaged 142.588 mph in the race that was marred by six caution periods, five of them coming during the first half of the 400-mile race.

The only serious accident of the day came on the lap 16 when Ricky Rudd apparently cut a tire. His Oldsmobile suddenly veered into the outside wall coming out of turn four, triggering a wild melee that caught five other cars.

Before it was over, Benny Parsons and Billie Harvey joined Rudd on the sidelines and the cars driven by Darrell Waltrip, defending Winston Cup point champion Dale Earnhardt and Bill Elliott all were damaged badly enough to keep them from getting anywhere near contention the rest of the way. But there were no injuries.

There were 35 lead changes among 10 drivers during the race, but it was all Yarborough and Gant over the final 45 laps after current point leader Bobby Allison, running second at the time, dropped out with a cracked cylinder.

Ferragamo's Debut Rough, Uninspiring

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Vince Ferragamo would rather forget bout his Canadian Football League debut than dwell on the subject at any length.

Ferragamo, spirited away by the Montreal Alouettes during the offseason from the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League, fielded several post-game questions much smoother than he threw the football Saturday night during a 48-8 loss to British Columbia.

"I don't know what it was, but we didn't execute well on running or passing plays," Ferragamo said after completing just 13 of 30 passes for 155 yards and two interceptions.

"We have to get back to the basics next week, get our timing down a little better. It was very embarrassing for the entire team. We played a good team tonight, but it was a combination of their play and our mistakes which caused all the problems."

Ferragamo said the Alouettes, with fellow imports David Overstreet and Billy "White Shoes" Johnson in the lineup, were lax and didn't have the intensity of the charged-up Lions.

He said the three-down Canadian game, compared with four downs in the NFL, caused a few problems, "but not any for the other team, so that theory is out the window."

The Lions twice were penalized for roughing the passer and Ferragamo was asked if he felt like a marked man.

"The referee has to protect the quarterback at times," he said, "an he called the late hits."

Montreal Coach Joe Scannella said Ferragamo will have to learn that when his team is behind, he can't "get it back too quick."

"The three-down football game is much different, but Vince will pick these things up quickly," Scannella said. "We can come back and put things together for next week."

Montreal's next game is at home Friday against the Toronto Argonauts and their former All-American defensive tackle Bruce Clark.

Overstreet, who gained All-American status at the University of Oklahoma, showed plenty of potential in rushing 12 times for 73 yards, including a 19-yard burst on a draw play. He also caught three swing passes for 14 yards.

"We wanted to do well, do the right things to win the game, but didn't," said Overstreet, drafted No.1 by the NFL Miami Dolphins. "We have to do some soul-searching before our next game.

"The game is wide-open and exciting up here and I always felt it would be a competitive league. We all have to improve and we're not ashamed to face the situation."

Johnson, a former NFL Houston Oiler, caught three passes for 67 yards, including a brilliant reception of a 49-yard toss from Ferragamo early in the game.

"There's no need to get too excited about one game because we can play much better than this," said Johnson. "British Columbia has a good team and this was their night.

"We made some little mistakes which hurt us a lot. We'll get back to the basics and be all right.

"I feel comfortable here and the bigger field will allow me to work much better along the sidelines and in the end zone."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Louis Orr of the NBA's Indiana Pacers is 6-8 and 175 pounds.

Coach Jack McKinney thinks he is a coming star.

"Louis is a very good outside shooter and a very clever man inside. He's quicker than a lot of big forwards and he has the speed to stay with the smaller forwards and guards."

us. Tyrone, however, was just outstanding."

Smith said he really didn't believe a lot in "momentum" but he wanted to win to finish the regular season off. "I don't know if momemtum really means that much, but finishing on a high note makes me feel better anyway."

Walsh led the hitting with two, while no one had more than one for Edenton.

Saturday night, things came out a little different, as Snow Hill managed to push over a run in the ninth to break a 6-6 tie and come away with a 7-6 lead.

Snow Hill scored first, getting a run in the first. David Shirley walked with one down, and Jabo Fulghum doubled. Frank Milkovits followed with a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Shirley.

Snow Hill added two more in the third for a 3-0 lead. Again with one out, Fulghum got things started with a single. Milkovits added another hit and Kevin Korpi's hit loaded the bases. David Kester's grounder, played to second, was errored, allowing both Fulghum and Milkovits to score.

Pitt finally got cranked up in the bottom of the third, scoring three times to tie it up. Hodges walked and after an out, Bill Kittrell walked. Mark Douglas also got a free trip, loading the bases. Mitch Brann singled in Hodges and Kittrell and Barnes reached on an error. Walsh then singled in Douglas for the 3-3 tie.

Snow Hill went back out with a run in the fifth. That came on a two-out bases-empty homer by Kevin Kester.

Pitt got the lead for the only time in the sixth, scoring twice for a 5-4 edge. Gordon Douglas singled and Williams got a hit. Marshall Rand doubled in Douglas, and Kittrell was hit by a pitch. Mark Douglas' sacrifice fly scored Williams

Snow Hill moved quickly ahead again with two in the seventh. With one away, Milkovits reached on a passed ball third strike. Korpi tripled him in, and Kester singled to score Korpi.

In the bottom of the eighth, Pitt tied it once more, 6-6. Kittrell reached on a bunt single and was sacrificed up. Brann walked and Walsh singled, scoring Kittrell.

But the win was to escape Pitt as Snow Hill pushed over one in the ninth, then held on to win. With two away, Kester walked, moved up on a passed ball, and scored when Bobby Avery singled.

Korpi led the Snow Hill hitting with three, while Kester and Fulghum each had two. Williams had three and Walsh, two, for Pitt.

Pitt now faces a week off, having drawn a bye in the first round of the area playoffs. They will face the winner of the best-of-three series between (the fourth and fifth place finishers in the best-of-three second round, scheduled to start Sunday. A sweep by one team or the other could start that series a day earlier, however.

"We're going to practice on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, so I don't think the layoff will hurt us," Smith said. "It's really been a long time since we've had a practice, so it really should help us. It will give us a chance to go over some things, as well as refresh our minds too.

"Sunday we'll consider the start of a new season. Well, really that's what it is...the start of a new season," Smith concluded.

Stephenson Edges Melton In Tourney

DORION, Quebec (AP) — Winning the $200,000 Peter Jackson Classic, one of the top events on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, was more than wishful thinking for Australian-born Jan Stephenson.

"My friend Debbie Meisterlin recently gave me a book, and if I remember the quote, it said: 'Whatever you wish, if you wish it, it will probably come true," said Stephenson.

Helped by Stephenson's skill with a putter, the wish became reality Sunday as she rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole at the 6,287-yard, par-72 Summerlea Golf Club and recorded a one-stroke victory over Nancy Lopez-Melton and Pat Bradley.

The dramatic putt gave the 29-year-old Stephenson a 1-over-par 73 for the day and a 72-hole total of 278, 10-over-par for the tournament. The shot also averted a possible three-way playoff with Lopez-Melton and Bradley, who waged an exciting, see-saw battle with Stephenson throughout the muggy afternoon.

"I can't believe that last putt went in," said Stephenson, who collected $30,000 for her efforts. "I've missed four-footers under pressure before, but this gives me confidence under pressure for the future."

Lopez-Melton, making her familiar charge, came from five strokes back heading into the final round to pull even going into the 18th hole.

But shooting from the rough on her second shot on the par-five 18th she landed in a bunker. Lopez-Melton chipped out of the trap in excellent fashion, but could not sink a putt of about 15 feet and settled for a par.

"From the rough, I just knew I had to go for it, but the shot went into the bunker, which isn't my favorite place to be," she said. Then I thought my birdie putt was going in."

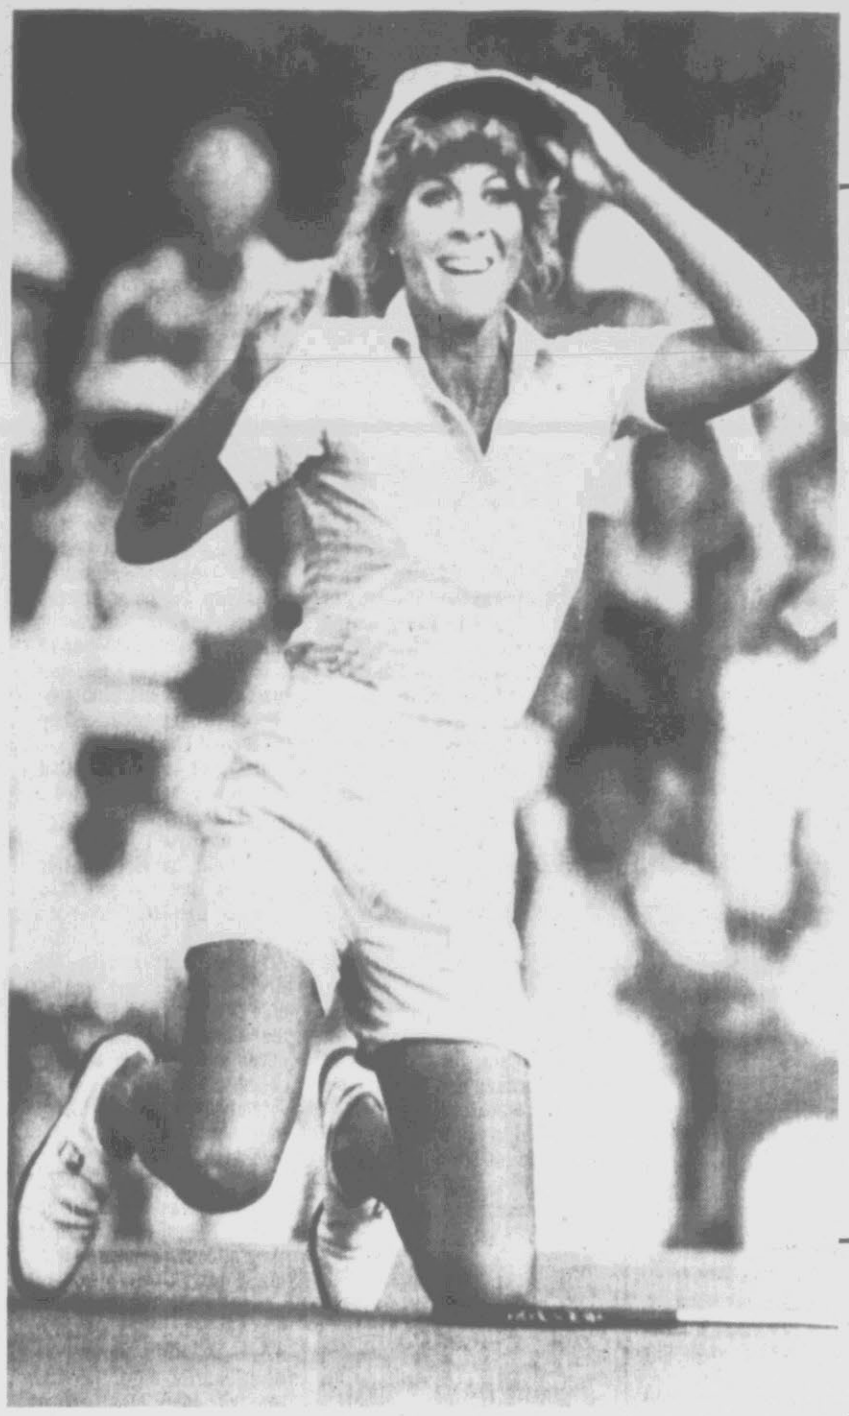

The putt came up short, while Bradley's bid for an eagle on the 18th slid just wide of the cup. She tapped in for a birdie, applying pressure on Stephenson, but the resident of Fort Worth, Texas, responded to the challenge.

"I thought I read the putt right but it slid along a little quicker than I thought," said Bradley of her eagle attempt.

"I didn't feel I had to make it but I wanted it badly because I knew it would give me at least a tie. It put a little pressure back on Jan but she handled it well. You can't take it away from her."

Bradley, the defending Peter Jackson champion, had entered the round tied with Stephenson with an 11-under-par 205 for 54-holes.

She said one of the turning points of the final round was on the par-four 14th hole when she two-putted and took a double bogey, failing to take advantage of a bogey collected by Stephenson.

NLRB To Hold Hearing Today

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The warring sides in the major league baseball strike were to attend a National Labor Relations Board hearing today that was expected to take up too much time to allow any negotiations.

The hearing, before an administrative law judge, was set for 11 a.m. EDT this morning in New York. The NLRB will examine the players' charge that the owners were guilty of unfair labor practices.

The players were hoping the hearing would lead to their getting access to the owners' financial records. Originally scheduled for June 15, the hearing had been postponed three times.

The owners' Player Relations Committee, headed by Ray Grebey, and the Major League Players Association, led by executive director Marvin Miller, met on Saturday. At the end of that session, the players told the owners' representatives to get in contact with them once they had another offer to present to the striking players.

There has been no major league baseball since the strike, over the issue of compensation for a free agent, began June 12. Through the July 4th weekend, 303 games had been lost to the walkout.

The NLRB sought an injunction last month that would have put off the owners' compensation program for one year. But U.S. District Court Judge Henry F. Werker refused to issue the injunction and the players' walkout quickly followed.

The owners were confident they would be victorious at the NLRB hearing. The players claimed the owners had bargained in bad faith and that by allowing the players' to examine their records, the owners might prove that compensation is necessary. The players say that such financial information is critical to their bargaining position.

Slated to appear at the hearing were Grebey; Miller; Commissioner Bowie Kuhn; Daniel Silverman, New York regional director of the NLRB, who was subpoenaed by the owners; Calvin Griffith, owner of the Minnesota Twins, and Ruly Carpenter, owner of the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I would expect a substantial part of the testimony to be the same (as before Werker)," said Miller.

Miller also charged that not all owners were being given full information on negotiations by the PRC.

amount collected by Colbert and Powers.

"It was frustrating to bogey the last hole when I had second place locked up by myself," said Simons, who finished wioh a final round 70, as did Colbert and Powers. Rogers closed with a 74 for 282 and $12,000.

Colbert birdied the last two holes to make it and Powers birdied five of the last eight.

Nicklaus had a fine 69 Sunday and a 2-under-par 286 total to tie for seventh, but more important, it virtually assured him of the final spot on the Ryder Cup team.

"Anytime you have something to make, you try to make it," said Nicklaus. "I missed the Ryder Cup team in 1979 when I played poorly."

Trevino had a 1-under-par 71 in the final round and a 292 total while Watson, who like Nicklaus is a two-time Western winner, ended up at 294.

Although none of the Big Three seriously challenged during the tournament, their mere presence was largely responsible for the record crowds totalling 99,900 for the four rounds and 113,600 counting Wednesday's pro-am.

Post 94 Defeats Edenton, 11-10

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill erupted for eight runs in the first inning but it took a three-run sixth to bring 94 an 11-10 victory over Edenton Sunday night in the final regular season American Legion game for both teams.

The victory left Snow Hill tied with Wilson for third place in the league. The two teams split their four games this season, but Post 94 was awarded third place because it outscored Wilson in the four games.

Snow Hill will now play Edenton in the opening round of the American Legion tournament. Post 94 will play host to Edenton Tuesday night and then travel to Edenton Wednesday in the best-of-three series. If a third game is needed it will be played Thursday in Snow Hill.

Edenton took a 2-0 lead in the first half inning Sunday but Snow Hill countered with eight runs in the bottom of the first. The inning was highlighted by Gary Ream's two-RBI triple and doubles by Greg Hardison and Kevin Korpi.

Edenton, however, wasn't through. The visitors scored seven runs in the third inning to retake the lead, at 9-8. It stayed that way until the sixth when Post 94 scored three runs and take a lead it never lost.

Hardison opened the inning with a single. David Shirley then walked and Jabo Fulghum singled to load the bases. Frank Milkovits reached on an error to score Hardison and Bobby Avery followed with a single to score Shirley. Fulghum later scored on a sacrifice fly by Wade Corbett.

Edenton scored its final run of the game in the seventh but it was not quite enough as Snow Hill hung on for the win.

Edenton was led by Woody White and Steve Sawyer, both of whom were three for five. Al Bunch was two for four. Hardison and Fulghum both had two hits for Snow Hill.

throwing error by third baseman Todd Hendley and then scored on an error by Persico.

ECU's only run came in the seventh when with two outs Jay Carraway scored on Robert Wells' double.

In the second game, Kirk Parsons and Charlie Smith held UNC-W to two hits, but it wasn't enough as the Pirates failed time and again to get runners home for their two hurlers.

UNC-W had nearly as much trouble scoring but managed a two-run fifth that carried it to the victory.

Richard Foy walked to lead off the inning, the first of three walks by Smith in the inning. Phillips then sacrificed Foy to second. O'Donnell then walked before Foy scored on a passed ball.

Price then walked and both he and O'Donnell moved up a base after a wild pitch. Whitehead followed with a single to score O'Donnell and the Seahawks led, 2-0.

ECU left a runner on base in all but the third inning. The Pirates wasted a leadoff double by Smith in the second and a one-out double by Smith in the fourth. Both times the Pirates left two runners stranded.

But it was even worse in the sixth when ECU loaded the bases with two oiuts on two walks and a single by Curlings only to have Jay Carraway ground to short for the final out.

ECU was to have traveled to N.C. State this afternoon.

CART To Let Decision Stand

TROY, Mich. (AP) — The board of directors of Championship Auto Racing Teams has decided against appealing a federal judge's decision lifting 60-day suspensions against seven drivers for racing in non-CART approved events, it was announced today.

The decision means that drivers Tom Bigelow, Geoff Brabham, Jim McElreath, Roger Rager, Dick Simon, Tom Sneva and Dean Vetrock will be able to participate in the Norton Michigan 500 at Michigan International Speedway July 19. The race is the next event in CART's PPG Indy Car World Series.

"It is our feeling these are internal matters, bext handled outside the courtroom," CART chairman John W. Frasco said in a prepared statement. "We have decided it is not in the best interests of racing to continue litigation in this matter."

Officials To Meet

Ted Lange Not A Bar Tender

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's more to Ted Lange than just tending bar aboard ABC's "The Love Boat," although he claims he can mix a mean martini.

Lange plays bartender Isaac Washington in the fluffy TV tales of romance afloat. But beyond that he is a dedicated playwright and director. His original rock musical, "Born a Unicorn," the story of the first black Shakespearean actor, opens this week.

"I love the theater," he says. "It's so marvelous. It's so raw. It's wonderful to see it survive."

Lange, who previously produced an original production of "Hamlet" and a black version of "The Odd Couple," is now doing a rock musical on the life of black actor Ira Aldridge.

"He went to England in the 1830s and they wouldn't let him play 'Othello,'" says Lange. "They said, 'It's all well and good, but we don't think blacks should play blacks.' They did let him play slaves. And he did play 'Othello' in the London ghetto, the poor area with all the pickpockets. He became the first black man to play 'Othello.'

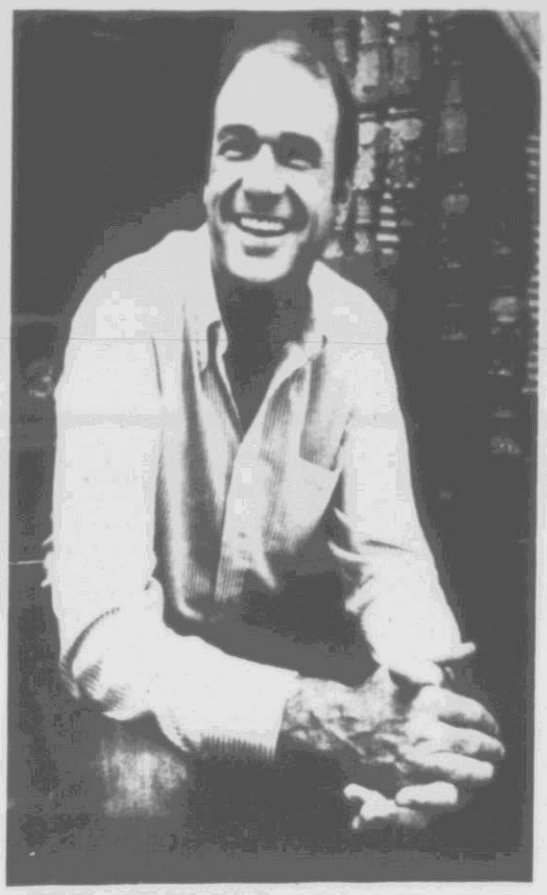

"I love doing Shakespeare," Lange says. "One reason is I love it when English actors are bad. That's why I do other Shakespeare besides 'Othello' and direct Shakespeare. English actors say to me, 'I say, old fellow, you're a bartender.' I say, I've done Shakespeare, and they say, 'Othello?' I say, no, 'Romeo and Juliet.' That gets them."

Lange grins broadly and adds, "There's nothing worse than an English actor in a bad American movie."

Charles Weldon stars in "Born a Unicorn," which is at the Center. Damita Jo Freeman is choreographer, and Phyllis St. James and Beverly Bremers wrote the music and lyrics.

Lange recites the legend of the unicorn to explain his title. He says, "A unicorn cannot be captured alive. If you want a unicorn you have to kill it. In its horn is a magical power. A unicorn will lay its head in the lap of a virgin and go to sleep.

"My play is about a black guy from New York in the 1830s who thinks he can go to England and become a famous actor. He had to believe he was a special person.

LOU'S RIGHT-HAND MAN — Jack Bannon, alias Art Donovan, assistant city editor on CBS' "Lou Grant", refers to his role as a "one-in-a-million" job. The Emmy Award-winning show is the first series for the 40-year-old Bannon, who said recently while on the set for the show, "I'm proud of what I do ... and in television, that's unusual." # William Warfield's Time Goes To Teaching Others

Warfield, whose face belies his 61 years, has spent much of his 31-year career giving concerts and recitals, singing with symphony orchestras, recording albums and acting.

Lately, though, he is spending more of his time in the classroom teaching young vocalists at the University of Illinois and less of it on the concert stage.

"I thought it was time to do less, so I decided to do more teaching and less performing," Warfield said in his rich bass voice.

Teaching was his first ambition as a child growing up in Rochester, N.Y. It wasn't until the last seven years that he finally attained that goal.

Warfield said he came to the Champaign-Urbana campus because it was the first with an attractive offer. Now he spends most of his weekends on the road performing and three days a week teaching.

As a youngster, Warfield began his study of music on the piano. It wasn't until he was in his teens — after his voice had changed — that he seriously began to consider his future as a singer.

"I was told that I had a very fine voice and that I needed to work and develop it. It made me decide to start studying singing and, knowing that, I started studying languages."

But Warfield, who was greatly influenced by the great singer, Paul Robeson, said, "Nobody was standing around saying I would be the world's greatest singer. I was just a young talent and I was encouraged by my teachers, friends and the church to sing because they all thought I had talent.

"I doubt anyone at that time would have predicted I would become well known — including myself."

Warfield, the eldest of five brothers and the son of a Baptist minister, attended the Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester. He was one of only two or three blacks in the school but there was never any question about a college education.

"Nobody even considered that I wouldn't go to college."

His ambition of becoming a teacher was sidetracked after a recital debut in New York's Town Hall on March 19, 1950.

From there he went on to his role as Joe in the 1951 movie version of "Show Boat" with Ava Gardner and Howard Keel. His career continued to flourish in the role of the crippled beggar in George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess."

While Warfield is best known for his movie and Broadway performances in those two musicals, within the world of voice he is better known for his classical concerts. He is considered one of the great bass-baritones of the era.

The popular acclaim of his rendition of "Ol' Man River" has led Warfield to use it as an encore for most of his concerts. Yet he never tires of the song.

"It's always very current. It's representative of a certain byplay between myself and the audience. It's not a song that used to be, it's very real and modern every time I do it."

Uniquely, Warfield's trial rehearsal of the song prior to full production during the filming of "Show Boat" became the finished performance heard in the theater and the recording on the album.

A biographical sketch of Warfield's life reports the conductor, producer and director were so startled by the perfection of the first take, they sent for movie magnate Louis B. Mayer. After listening to it, Mayer reportedly had to mop the tears from his eyes.

Warfield said he occasionally accepts offers to play the part of Joe in "Show Boat," including a planned eight performances of the musical this summer in Freeport, Ill. But he has all but phased out "Porgy and Bess" as a drama and limits his performances to concert versions.

Asylum For Chorus Girl

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The U.S. government has granted political asylum to a 27-year-old Soviet ballerina who defected from the chorus line of the Bolshoi Ballet, U.S. Consulate sources reported today.

A senior official at the U.S. Embassy in Ankara, the Turkish capital, said Galina Chursina, a member of the corps de ballet of a visiting Bolshoi troupe, is expected to leave Turkey for the United States within two days.

Miss Chursina sneaked away from companions in a crowded bazaar Saturday and went to the U.S. Consulate, remaining overnight while officials contacted the embassy in Ankara for instructions, police sources said.

Soviet Consulate officials in Istanbul said Miss Chursina plotted her defection with a Turkish man she met in Moscow, but gave no details. In Moscow, Bolshoi deputy director Bony Venedikt refused to talk about Miss Chursina, but said "all our dancers are young and pretty."

U.S. Consulate officials acknowledged she defected but refused to discuss details today, saying it was an embassy matter. Earlier, they refused to confirm the incident but Turkish authorities said approval for the defection came late Sunday after consultations with the State Department.

The famed troupe was appearing at the Ninth Istanbul Art Festival. Bolshoi officials said performances would continue as planned.

Rocky Fans Seek Statue

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rocky, all 8-feet-6 of him, may yet return to Philadelphia.

More than 2,100 fans of actor Sylvester Stallone have signed a petition to get the big bronze statue of "Rocky" — hero of the popular boxing films — back into this city.

Stallone, who portrayed the movie hero, brought the statue here in May for the filming of "Rocky III." The statue was planted at the top of the steps of the city's art museum, the same spot where the fighter trained in the first of the "Rocky" trilogy.

But when shooting ended, art museum directors turned down Stallone's offer of keeping the statue there permanently. That's when Stallone and his production company took it back to California.

But now, a Philadelphia resident has collected 2,100 names on petition to get the statue back in Philadelphia. Art Gorman, a Stallone fan who lives in the neighborhood where the actor attended high school, has taken the petition to city representative Richard A. Doran.

7-6

Answer to Saturday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 7-6

P Z I Y P C Z T A I U A C U T R Z X C R T R C Q Z X Q Z C T Y X R

Today's Cryptoquip clue: U equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♡A62 ◇Q9764 ♣AQ76
The bidding has proceeded:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ◇ | Pass | 2 ♣ | Pass |
| ? | | | |

What do you bid now?
A.—In support of clubs, your hand revalues to 19 points. Since partner's two-over-one response shows a minimum of 11 points, game should be assured and you are in the slam zone. Bid four clubs. An immediate jump raise, bypassing three no trump, is the best way to tell partner of your distributional strength.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠4 ♡AQ87 ◇KJ764 ♣A92
The bidding has proceeded:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ◇ | Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| 1 NT | Pass | 3 ♣ | Pass |

What do you bid now?
A.—From the bidding, it is almost certain that partner cannot hold four hearts. Nevertheless, it is incumbent on you to describe your hand as best you can. Bid three hearts. By showing your second suit now, you will be much better placed to handle the subsequent auction. For example, if partner rebids clubs, showing a five-card suit, you have an easy raise, which strongly suggests that you have no more than a singleton spade.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A6 ♡AK8 ◇AKJ983 ♣K7
What is your opening bid?
A.—Although you have a six-card minor suit, your hand is essentially balanced. While you are not strong enough for an opening bid of two diamonds, your hand is much too good for one diamond lest that bid gets passed out. Open two no trump. That will also protect your king of clubs from a lead through should no trump be your final contract.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡K8732 ◇K105 ♣A1092
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 1 ♡ | 1 ♠ |
| Pass | Pass | ? | |

What do you bid now?
A.—We would like to make a forward-going bid, but there is no convenient one available. We cannot jump to three clubs, for that would be forcing to game, and we don't have quite enough for that. Though it may seem a mite on the timid side, we suggest a reopening bid of two clubs. The fact that we have bid freely even though partner has announced a minimum, means that we must have a fair hand. This will also leave us well placed if partner acts again.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠75 ♡1043 ◇KJ98 ♣AJ42
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 1 NT | Pass |
| 3 ♡ | Pass | ? | |

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's bid is forcing to game, so we suggest you rebid three no trump. That tells partner that your strength is concentrated in the minor suits, and that you have both well stopped. Don't raise to four hearts—partner might have jump-shifted on a four-card suit.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡KQ10954 ◇Q1094 ♣AJ
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 2 ♡ | Pass |
| 2 ♠ | Pass | ? | |

What do you bid now?
A.—You have an opening bid and a good six-card suit that can play even opposite a singleton. Take the strain off partner by bidding four hearts. Don't bid a timid three hearts—partner might be reluctant to act again if he is looking at a singleton heart, even if his hand is rather better than minimum.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is the best time for going to a trusted person and getting the advice you need. You would be wise to relax more and conserve your strength for the days ahead.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact an influential person you now and plan how to become more successful. Rest and relax at home tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Ideal day for talks with higher-ups which could pave the way to greater success. Engage in social activity in the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go to new sites with interesting persons who can help you get ahead in the future. Sidestep one who likes to argue.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A day to listen to suggestions of financial experts so that you can put your business affairs in better order.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Obtain the data you need from associates so you can operate in a more efficient manner. An outsider can be helpful to you now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use modern appliances so that you can do your work more efficiently. Be more fair-minded with co-workers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Making plans for putting your creative ideas to work is wise at this time. Strive for increased happiness and it is yours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Meet with family members and make long-range plans for the future. Study a new venture that could be profitable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) An expert can help you improve your daily routines so that you can save time and make more money. Be logical.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A financial expert can give you the advice you need so that you can solve a money problem. Use care in travel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handling personal affairs early in the day is wise. Accept a social invitation tonight and have a good time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan time for studying new ventures that could be profitable in the future. Make plans to engage in favorite hobby.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be modern-minded and should be sent to the finest schools where such thinking could pave the way to an interesting and successful future. There is much sociability in this chart. Don't neglect ethical training.

Fumes Strike Tanker's Crew

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — A Greek tanker was led to shore by the Coast Guard and a Morehead City pilot early Sunday after fumes overcame three crewmembers — killing one — and the captain suffered a heart attack.

Coast Guard Chief Warrant Officer Newman Cantrell said Captain Nicholas Dlissidis of the Greek-registered Yannis called around midnight to report that one crewman was found dead and two others were unconscious after cleaning a tank once filled with tallow.

At that time, Cantrell said, the Yannis was about 30 miles out from it last port of call in Norfolk, Va.

In a second call at 2 a.m., ship's personnel said the captain needed immediate medical attention. It was also reported that the tanker's first mate was among the stricken crewman and that the crew was having trouble navigating, Cantrell said.

"Evidently," he said, "the only people left on board didn't know how to navigate."

Cantrell said the Coast Guard dispatched a boat to the tanker with Lt. Tony Reed of the Marine Safety Detachment at Morehead City and medical corpsman Greg Fant aboard. Reed later requested that a pilot and a local doctor be brought to the ship.

Cantrell said a pilot boat with a local captain and Dr. Peter Kuers of Beaufort on board met the Yannis off Cape Lookout Shoals.

When the tanker reached the State Ports Authority terminal, it was met by rescue squad personnel, who transported Captain Dlissidis and crewmen Chun Sin and Bob D. Jung to Carteret General Hospital in Morehead City.

Hospital authorities said Dlissidis had suffered a heart attack. He checked out of the hospital Sunday against doctors' recommendations, but a hospital spokesman said Sin remains in guarded condition and Jung in critical condition. Both were in the hospital's intensive care unit.

The identity of the dead crewman and the nationality of the ill seamen were not available Sunday, but doctors at Carteret General requested the Cherry Point Marine Station to provide a Korean translator for Sin.

Strike Begins At Durham Plant

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Fifty-four members of Local 248 of Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union began a strike against the Continental Forest Industries plant in Durham Monday morning.

The worker's chief duty is printing cigarette cartons.

Continental's printers had voted down two proposals Friday and will be on vacation until July 13, according to James Hardy, Local 248 president.

Although their building is separate, they share the main entrance with workers of Gold Belt Manufacturing Co. But Hardy said that Golden Belt workers would not be on strike as they work under a different contract.

Hardy said the union wanted to keep its cost-of-living allowance the same as it had been in the old contract. That pact called for a wage increase of a penny per hour for each four-tenths increase in the cost-of-living index. Under the old contract, if the index increased two points, a worker's wage would go up a nickel per hour.

Hole-In-One Tourney Set

A hole-in-one tournament for Easter Seals will be held at the Putt-Putt Golf Course July 11 from 1-5 p.m.

The purpose of the tournament is to raise money to send handicapped children and adults to Camp Easter-in-the-Pines in Southern Pines and to support other services provided by the Easter Seal Society for handicapped citizens in Pitt County.

Participants may pick up information and sponsor sheets from the putt-putt course. A first and second place trophy will be awarded to putter raising the largest amount of money. A trophy will be awarded to the putter scoring the most holes-in one.

For more information contact Mike Brown, course manager at 758-1820.

NOTICE
RESOLUTION NO. 637
A RESOLUTION DECLARING THE INTENT OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA, TO CLOSE A PORTION OF JOHN AVENUE LOCATED NORTH OF GOLDEN ROAD BETWEEN U.S. 264 BYPASS AND CEDAR LANE WITHIN THE CORPORATE LIMITS OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA PURSUANT TO PROVISIONS OF G.S. 160A-229

WHEREAS, application has been made to the City Council of the City of Greenville, North Carolina, by Heber R. Adams, Jessie Tobie Worthington, and I.H. Morris, Jr., for Trinity Free Will Baptist Church for the closing of a dedicated public street within the City of Greenville, as hereinafter described; and,

WHEREAS, it is the intention of this Council to conduct a public hearing at the regularly scheduled July 9, 1981 meeting of the City Council in order to permit any person who may desire to be heard on the question of whether or not the closing would be detrimental to the public interest, or the property rights of any individual; and,

WHEREAS, that portion of John Avenue located north of Golden Road between U.S. 264 Bypass and Cedar Lane proposed to be closed is described as follows:

Beginning at a point, said point being the intersection of the northernmost right-of-way of Golden Road and the westernmost right-of-way of John Avenue from said point N. 36° 33' E., 160 feet; thence, S. 53° 27' W., 50 feet; thence, S. 36° 33' W., 160 feet; thence, N. 53° 27' W., 50 feet to the point of beginning.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the City Council of the City of Greenville, North Carolina; that it is the intention of the City Council of the City of Greenville, North Carolina, pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 160A-229 to permanently close that portion of John Avenue as hereinabove described. That this resolution shall be published once a week for four successive weeks prior to the hearing in the Daily Reflector, that a copy of this resolution shall be sent by registered or certified mail to all owners of property adjoining the street as shown on the tax record and a notice of this resolution shall be prominently posted in at least two places along the street or highway. That further the City Council will at the regular July 9, 1981, meeting of the City Council conduct a public hearing upon the proposed closing at which time any person may be heard on the question of whether or not the closing would be detrimental to the public interest, or the property rights of any individual.

ADOPTED this the 11th day of June, 1981.

Social Security Hearings

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two key Senate Republicans are ruling out further Social Security tax increases, despite a fresh warning that the retirement fund will be bankrupt by the end of 1982 unless taxes are raised or benefits are slashed.

On the eve of Senate hearings today, Sens. William L. Armstrong of Colorado and Bob Dole of Kansas stopped short of endorsing President Reagan's proposals for major reductions in benefits, including a hefty penalty for early retirement.

Armstrong compared Monday's annual assessment of Social Security's solvency to "a slow-motion fall off a cliff."

"We can see the end coming but still have a little time to consider saving alternatives," he said.

But he and Dole also ruled out another alternative — using general revenue funds in an effort to make the retirement fund solvent.

Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker said today the administration also is ruling out the use of general revenues or any new increase in Social Security tax rates.

"The current congressional budget process makes it very clear that there really are not any uncommitted general revenues present to turn to for Social Security," Schweiker told Armstrong's Senate Finance subcommittee. "Any general revenues for this purpose would have to come from new or increased taxes of other types. This would mean that additional taxes would need to be paid by — and be a burden on — the same people who now pay Social Security taxes."

Schweiker noted that some Social Security tax rate increases already are scheduled, but said it would be possible, even under pessimistic economic assumptions, to have a somewhat smaller increase in 1985 than that now scheduled.

"Then, in 1990, the Social Security tax rates can be decreased below the current level," he said.

Schweiker said the administration proposals "will overcome Social Security's serious funding problems by eliminating excessive incentives to claim benefits early, by removing penalties for continued work efforts, and by lessening the emphasis on the social-adequacy or welfare aspects of the system at the expense of its basic purposes."

John Svahn, head of the Social Security Administration, also was to testify before Armstrong's subcommittee today on the administration's plans for rescuing the retirement fund.

The system's trustees reported Monday that the retirement fund will go broke by the end of next year and the related Medicare program could fall within the decade unless taxes are raised or benefits are slashed.

The report, compiled by Schweicker, Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, urged Congress to act quickly to adopt the Reagan plan or one "which will accomplish the same objectives."

"I don't expect we will raise payroll taxes — they are already a back-breaking burden — and I don't think we will go into the general revenue fund," Armstrong said. "That's sort of like asking Amtrak to bail out Chrysler. The rest is completely negotiable."

Dole, the Senate Finance chairman, said the trustees' projections "underscore the need for Congress to move quickly to restore the soundness of the Social Security system."

He noted that a series of increasingly gloomy trustees' reports in the mid-1970s led to the enactment in 1977 of the largest peacetime tax increase in U.S. history.

"Taxpayers, who have already experienced two of the tax increases enacted then, face another four increases by 1990," he said. "And yet, the reports today confirm that these added taxes will be insufficient to keep the system solvent."

Woman Nominated For High Court Seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today nominated Judge Sandra D. O'Connor of the Arizona Court of Appeals to become the first woman justice in the history of the Supreme Court.

Reagan called this "the most awesome appointment" that presidents make because justices leave "footprints on the sands of time."

Reagan chose Mrs. O'Connor to succeed the retiring Potter Stewart, whose decision to leave the high court opened the first vacancy there in six years.

The president made his announcement even as far-right conservatives mounted a mail-and-telegram campaign in opposition to her nomination, on grounds she had supported the Equal Rights Amendment and had not opposed abortion.

His choice of a woman justice fulfilled a campaign promise made last Oct. 14, when candidate Reagan said "one of the first Supreme Court vacancies in my administration will be filled by the most qualified woman I can find."

Reagan repeated that campaign pledge as he announced the choice of Mrs. O'Connor and urged swift Senate confirmation so that she can take her seat on the court "and her place in history."

He said he did not name a woman 'merely to do so," but because Mrs. O'Connor meets the standards he set for an appointment he called one of the most awesome a president can make. He said to have made the choice on the basis of her sex would have been unfair to women, to the nation, and to the future generations that will be affected by high court decisions.

Mrs. O'Connor, 51, was graduated from Stanford University law school in 1952, with the Order of the Coif. Among her law school classmates was Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist.

Wholesale Food Prices Up; Hike Index

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale food prices, unchanged for most of the spring, began rising in June, pushing the nation's inflation ahead at an annual rate of 6.9 percent at the wholesale level, the government reported today.

The Labor Department's Producer Price Index for finished goods — the official name for the wholesale price index — rose a seasonally adjusted 0.6 percent in June.

Through the first six months of this year, inflation has risen at a 9.5 percent annual pace.

For all of last year, wholesale prices rose 11.8 percent. Analysts see little likelihood, however, that the rate for all of 1981 will edge over 10 percent.

In May, the wholesale price index rose a seasonally adjusted 0.4 percent.

If prices rose at June's rate for a full year, the annual inflation rate would be 6.9 percent.

Economists are forecasting that the rate will remain relatively low for at least the next few months, particularly in light of the current ready availability of oil worldwide.

Food prices, however, probably will continue rising during the summer, keeping overall inflation from dropping further than it has in the last few months, analysts say.

Prices for finished consumer foods — those ready for retail sale — rose 0.5 percent in June after remaining virtually level during the previous two months, the new Labor Department report said.

Food prices had shown almost no net change since November, although they fluctuated during the winter months.

A wide variety of food prices rose in June, but meat was the biggest factor. Prices for beef and veal, for example, rose 2.4 percent after climbing only 0.3 percent in May.

Wholesale prices for finished energy goods rose 0.2 percent in June after declining 0.5 percent in May, but analysts say no big new energy jumps are expected soon.

Overall, prices of finished consumer goods rose 0.5 percent in June after rising 0.2 percent in May, the report said.

Capital equipment prices rose 0.7 percent, led by increases for aircraft, heavy trucks and various machinery.

All the figures are adjusted for seasonal variation.

Before seasonal adjustment, the wholesale price index rose 0.4 percent in June to 269.9. That means goods costing $10 at wholesale in 1967 cost $26.99 last month.

The new report also revised figures for several months earlier this year because of more accurate information. It said the index rose an adjusted 1.2 percent in January rather than the 1 percent reported earlier, 0.8 percent in February rather than 0.6 percent and 0.9 percent in March rather than 1.3 percent.

Iran Regime Announces 9 More Backers Of Bani-Sadr Executed

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's Islamic regime has put to death nine more "counter-revolutionaries" on charges they organized riots to protest the ouster of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Tehran Radio said today.

Meanwhile, Iran's Information Ministry announced the closure of the Tehran bureau of the British news agency Reuters for alleged "biased reporting and ignoring repeated official warnings."

Officials at the agency's London headquarters said they would not comment on the announcement until they learned more details. Reuters is one of the few Western news agencies still represented in Tehran.

The latest executions raised to 140 the number put to death since the leaders of the Islamic Republican Party engineered Bani-Sadr's dismissal on June 22. Authorities say 1,500 leftists have been jailed.

A Kurdish-language radio station confirmed that Bani-Sadr, not seen publicly since June 12, is hiding in Kurdistan with Ivari tribesman near the Turkish border. The broadcast was monitored in Tehran and the monitors, reached in Tehran by telephone from Beirut, said the station was in the town of Baneh.

"Bani-Sadr deserves execution," Tehran Revolutionary Court Chairman Hojatoleslam Mohammad Gilani said in a Tehran television broadcast.

In another development, the Islamic Revolutionary Guards command said it is hunting a 23-year-old electronics student suspected of planting two bombs that blew up the ruling party's headquarters and killed 72 political leaders.

The suspect was identified Monday as Mohammmad Reza Kolahi, who attended the University of Science and Industry and worked at the Islamic Republican Party's Tehran hall. He vanished after the June 28 blast, authorities said.

"He planted one bomb underneath the conference hall rostrum and the other close to a pillar at one side of the hall," an unnamed spokesman for the revolutionary guard militia said in a Tehran Radio broadcast.

The spokesman said Kolahi belonged to the Islamic-Marxist Mujahedeen Khalq, a leftist guerrilla group opposed to the fundamentalist Islamic clerics who control the Islamic Republican Party and dominate the revolutionary regime.

It was the first time officials said two bombs were planted in the blast that collapsed the roof of the two-story building and killed Chief Justice Ayatollah Mohammad Hussein Beheshti, four Cabinet ministers, eight deputy ministers and 27 Parliament members.

The state-run Pars news agency said the deputy governor of Gilan province in northern Iran died today of head injuries received in an attack Monday. Gilan's governor died instantly in the attack by unidentified gunmen.

Pars also reported that no one has yet officially declared candidacy for the July 24 elections for a successor to Bani-Sadr. The nominations close Wednesday.

Mall Fire

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A mid-morning fire extensively damaged a two-story building bordering Salisbury Street and the Fayetteville Street Mall in downtown Raleigh today.

Firefighters said the two-story building was heavily damaged, although no estimates of damages have been made.

The fire was reported shortly after 9 a.m.. Firefighters said they had contained the blaze within the one building an hour later.

Several businesses are housed in the building. The cause of the fire was not immediately known. There were no injuries reported.

Recovering 3 MIA Bodies

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — An Air Force C-130 cargo plane flew to Hanoi today to recover the remains of three unidentified U.S. servicemen killed in the Vietnam War, a military spokesman said.

The C-130 was to return the remains to Clark Air Base tonight. They will be put aboard a C-141 Wednesday and flown to Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii, where an Army laboratory will try to identify them.

Ceremonies for the dead were planned Wednesday in Honolulu.

Had Birthday, But Which?

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan has celebrated another birthday. The only question is: which one?

The number 58 has been mentioned.

Mrs. Reagan says she was born in 1923, and her spokeswoman, Sheila Tate, said on Monday, "It's definitely 1923" — which would, indeed, make her 58.

But records at Smith College in Northampton, Mass., her alma mater, give her birthdate as July 6, 1921, according to a spokesman quoted in The Washington Post. That would make Mrs. Reagan 60.

And NBC News reported on Monday that it had found a copy of Mrs. Reagan's birth certificate, No. 32579, at a New York City library, showing that she was born in 1921.

Cabaret Dancer Became President

By JOHN REICHERTZ

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Dictator Juan Peron's wife Eva became a virtual saint of the Argentine people. His next wife, a former cabaret dancer named Isabel, became their president.

It was a political height no woman had then achieved and one for which Isabel Peron was ill prepared.

The slender blonde became president of 24 million Argentines on July 1, 1974, on the death of her husband, whom she had served as vice-president.

"My only qualification is having been a disciple of Peron and my love for Peron and the Argentine people," she said.

Those qualities were far from enough to rule a country already suffering from economic stagnation and from political violence that had claimed hundreds of lives.

On March 24, 1976, Isabel Peron was overthrown in a coup led by Gen. Jorge Rafael Videla, the army commander, who became president of a military government. Mrs. Peron was put under house arrest, first in a presidential house in the Andes mountains, then in a chalet at an Atlantic Ocean naval base. Since 1978 she has been held in a country estate in San Vicente, 30 miles outside Buenos Aires.

Her health was fragile. Her doctor reported she suffered from "anxiety and uncertainty."

There was speculation she would be freed before retired Gen. Roberto Viola replaced Videla as president of the military regime March 29.

But in early March, Federal Judge Norberto Giletta sentenced the former president to eight years' imprisonment on two of the five charges against her.

Giletta found Mrs. Peron guilty of depositing $740,000 from a state-run charity into the estate of her late husband and of accepting $8 million in illegal contributions.

Her cause suffered new setbacks in April in other cases involving alleged corruption.

In a counter move, she has appointed three top-ranking Peronists — two former foreign ministers and a former acting-president — to join her legal defense team, according to Peronist sources.

"A great deal of political and social tension is being generated by these very questionable charges," said one of the three, former foreign minister Angel Robledo. "This is a political attack in the guise of a judicial process."

The Peronist movement, a vast, repressed, political conglomerate that is closely aligned with labor, sees Mrs. Peron as the No. 1 victim of an unpopular military regime.

The movement repeatedly has condemned the regime for its economic policies, its human rights record, and its usurpation of power. "All that Mrs. Peron's continued arrest does is widen the breach between the armed forces and the people," said Dante Loss, a young Peronist.

ISABEL PERON. . .as she appeared in 1973, shortly before becoming president of Argentina in 1974.

Born Feb. 4, 1931, in the impoverished province of La Rioja, 725 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, Maria Estela Martinez was the sixth child of a bank employee. She quit school after the sixth grade to become a dancer, using the name Isabel Martinez.

Isabel was 24 and working in a cabaret in Panama in 1955 when she met the recently exiled Peron, then 60. She followed him in exile to Santo Domingo and eventually to Spain.

She became Peron's third wife in 1961 but the marriage was long kept secret for fear that Peron's followers would not accept their leader's new wife. Such was their reverence for Eva — "Evita" to adoring Argentines — who died of cancer at age 33 in 1952 during Peron's second term as president.

During the 17 years Isabel shared Peron's exile, she met Argentine political leaders who came to consult with him on matters of the Peronist Party, of which he was the founder and undisputed leader.

In 1965, she went to Buenos Aires as Peron's emissary but showed little of Peron's political savvy or Eva's fiery personality.

When Peron returned to Argentina in 1973, he made Isabel his running mate in the elections and won easily.

Nine months later Peron died, leaving his 43-year-old widow as his only heir — and successor.

The country was racked by inflation, huge trade deficits, a nearly empty treasury and sharp drops in production.

Right-wing death squads and leftist gunmen went on a rampage of political assassinations.

Unable to cope with the chaos, she broke down in tears during cabinet meetings. She took a month's leave to recuperate from nervous exhaustion.

Shortly after the congressional committee began to investigate charges of corruption in her government, Mrs. Peron again became ill.

As pressure for her resignation, impeachment or removal from office intensified, she pledged to stay on until her term expired in May, 1977.

In December, 1975, after rebel air force officers failed to force her from office, she pledged she would not seek re-election.

She became a familiar figure through TV speeches given in her thin, high-pitched voice. But she never held news conferences. The public and press speculated on whether she ran the government or merely followed a succession of advisers.

Mrs. Peron had few diversions. She spent most of her private life with a few intimate friends in the presidential residence.

Mrs. Peron's defense lawyer has declined comment on reports that he has visited Panama, a country Mrs. Peron is expected to visit if she is freed.

"My trips are of a top-secret nature and part of an intensive effort, not only in the judicial arena, with an eye to bringing an end to the arrest of Mrs. Peron," he said in an interview.

The lawyer said Mrs. Peron, if she were freed, probably would go to Panama, Spain, France and Italy, where she has friends. But he said he thought she eventually would return to Argentina.

Justice minister Amadeo Frugoli said Viola has not considered pardoning Mrs. Peron.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

For year, parents have been trying to figure out where they went wrong with their children.

Did we nag too much? Love too little? Hold the reins too tight? Give in to social pressure?

When I think back on it, everything started to go downhill when digital watches came into being. Teaching a child to tell time is the only thing a mother ever does that a child believes in and has respect for.

My mother couldn't do anything. She couldn't spit through her teeth without dribbling on her chin. She couldn't put two fingers in her mouth and whistle. She couldn't ride a two-wheel bicycle without hands. She couldn't pick up eight jacks at a time. She couldn't hold her breath and count to a hundred without fainting. The woman was useless.

But one day I discovered she could glance at a clock and tell you exactly the hour and the minutes you had to play, come to dinner, go to bed or take your bath. She was a mathematical genius.

I figured out that if I had a watch of my own I'd soon have control over my own life. When I asked her for one, she laughed her little remember-who-is-nearer-the-floor laugh and said, "We'll see."

It took me three years to learn how to tell time. Every morning we sat at the dining room table and mother would point out how the big hand, within the next 60 minutes, would travel toward the china cabinet, then to the bay windows, to the kitchen and the door to the basement before the small hand would move toward the fireplace.

I caught on quickly. Then we moved.

This time the big hand would begin its clockwise descent toward the refrigerator, then the sink, the back yard and eventually the sewing closet.

I learned things about my mother during those years that I had never known before. Her ring fingers was skinnier than the rest of them. She was pretty when she smiled. She didn't have to run alongside a bicycle balancing me to gain my respect. She was patient.

Then watches came out that beeped, lit up in the dark, went right on ticking after they'd been tied to a motor boat, and had little buttons that you pushed and flashed the time. And mothers had made such a big deal out of it.

Something interesting is happening, though. There's a new watch just out with a voice on it that not only announces the time, but if the alarm isn't reset in five minutes the voice nags, "Attention, please! Please hurry!"

Mothers don't give up easily, do they?

FAST BUT FANCY DINNER
Broiler Pork Chops with My Wild Rice
Green Salad Cheese
Raspberry Mousse Coffee

MY WILD RICE

Inspired by Japanese cuisine.

8 medium to large (about ½ pound) mushrooms
2 tablespoons bottled teriyaki sauce
12 medium scallions, roots and any frayed tops trimmed
1 medium green pepper
Hot cooked wild rice

Separate mushroom caps from stems. Finely knife-chop or in a food processor coarsely grate the stems; mix with 1 tablespoon of the teriyake sauce; stuff caps with stem mixture. Arrange in 2 rows on a capacious sheet of heavy foil. Slice scallions, including green tops, fairly thin. Halve pepper and discard seeds; quarter each half lengthwise; slice crosswise fairly thin. Around the mushroom caps scatter the scallions and green pepper and sprinkle them with the remaining teriyaki sauce. Bring two opposite edges of the foil together and make a drugstore fold; fold over the ends several times to make a leakproof package. Place on the center rack of a preheated 350-degree oven and bake for 30 minutes. Top the mushrooms with a little of the scallion-pepper mixture and sprinkle the rest on the rice. Place the mushrooms on the rice. Makes 4 servings.

Lowe Family Reunion Held

"Today's preparation, tomorrow's future" was the theme of the Lowe family's 18th reunion held Friday through Sunday.

Relatives of the late Lonnie and Lula Lowe from Alabama, Connecticut, Washington, D.C., Louisiana, Maryland, New York, Virginia and texas joined the North Carolina relatives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Chance for a cookout Friday.

The Abrams Family Restaurant here was the site of the main event Saturday. Charlie Best, local vice chairman, presided. The welcome was given by Mrs. Doris Dixon, while Burnest Griffin of Maryland gave the response. Jerome Spruill rendered the invocation and Charlie Best gave the grace for the meal.

Lonnie C. Lowe of Washington, D.C. spoke on the reunion theme and recognized deceased members of the family. Gwendolyn Baylor recognized the senior family members who have supported the reunion over the years. These included Mrs. Willard Griffin, Mrs. Johnnie Carney, Mrs. Lurlean Williams, Mrs. Jimmy M. Jones, Mrs. Hattie Richmond, Charlie Best, James Lowe, Mrs. Pinky Lowe, Mrs. Lillie Roberts, and Mrs. Minnie Chance.

National reunion chairman Harold Lowe of Chesapeake, Va. led the business session.

Other reunion activities included skating, card playing, visiting and worshiping in various local churches.

Gwendolyn Baylor was appointed acting chairperson of the Washington, D.C. delegation which will host the 1982 reunion.

Ballplayers' Chewing OK By Lasorda Fan

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Why ask Steve Garvey why baseball players chew tobacco? He doesn't chew. You should have asked that handsome hunk, Tommy Lasorda, who manages the Dodgers. I used to see him on TV with a plug of tobacco in his mouth as big as a baseball. Not lately, however. Either he's reformed or he's ducking the camera.

IN LOVE WITH LASORDA

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter the woman wrote on how disgusting baseball players look, spitting tobacco juice all over the place:

I read it to my husband, a devoted chewer, and in answer to her question, "Why do baseball players chew tobacco?" he calmly said, "Have you ever tried to hold a cigarette with a baseball glove?"

GAVE UP NAGGING IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 12-year-old girl who loves baseball. I think I know why baseball players chew tobacco. It calms their nerves. I think it looks icky when they spit on the ground, but they can't carry around a garbage can. I would rather see ballplayers spit tobacco than chew their nails, keep tying their shoelaces or scratching whatever itches.

YANKEE FAN

DEAR ABBY: Baseball players aren't the only ones who chew tobacco. I belong to an organization called Cuspidor Hitters Worldwide, and we have members (both men and women) who are doctors, lawyers and socialites. I've been chewing tobacco and dipping snuff for three years. Some people may think it's disgusting, but there are worse habits.

CHEWING IN MELBOURNE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Kissing a guy who chews tobacco is like licking a dirty ashtray. Yech!

VICKI

DEAR ABBY: Baseball players chew tobacco because they don't realize how harmful it is. If they could hear a surgeon describe his feelings of helplessness and remorse after performing surgery for cancer of the tongue, the mouth or the throat caused from habitual tobacco chewing, they would never chew again.

BOSTON M.D.

DEAR ABBY: You were asked, "Why do baseball players chew tobacco?"

In the early days of baseball, the old-timers chewed tobacco to keep the dust out of their throats. Today, however, baseball is played on meticulously manicured diamonds where groundskeepers sprinkle the dirt infields before and again halfway through the game to keep the dust down.

My gripe is with the TV turkeys who put the camera on the ballplayers while they're chewing and spitting. What a poor example for our growing boys to see!

JOHN IN CONCORD, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: A couple recently wrote objecting to ballplayers spitting tobacco juice. I don't think the spitting is nearly as disgusting as the half-naked jerks who come to the ballpark and occupy seats in the midst of decently dressed people!

Diana Nyad: Be Sleek - Face Up To Exercise

By FRED FERGUSON

NEW YORK (UPI) — Here's a switch: Swimmer Diana Nyad lifts weights.

A swimmer lifts weights?

She runs, too — contrary to a popular belief running and weight lifting hurts swimming ability by knotting muscles.

Miss Nyad runs a fast 12 miles a day. "Every day," she says. "I do about a 6-minute mile — a 3-hour marathon."

She's full of surprises this attractive, 31-year-old woman. That is what she came to our office to talk about — how women can be sleek, instead of obese, if they'll face up to exercise and overcome a lot of hangups she says they have about it.

It's her personal crusade for women's liberation from past traditions and customs.

We asked about her tips on running since she is a consultant and coach for the Colgate Women's Games, in addition to her other activities — sports commentator on ABC, preparing a 100-mile swim off Japan next year, finishing a book, "Basic Training for Women," to be published this fall.

"I really didn't come here to talk about that," she said, pleasantly.

You don't argue with the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., girl who was stricken in 1966 at 18 with heart disease, ending a career as a world class sprint swimmer with the '68 Olympics then her goal — the same girl who, in the 1970s, did all those spectacular distance swims:

Twenty-five miles in the Suez Canal, 22 miles in the Nile, 32 miles off the coast of Mexico, 50 miles from the Great Barrier Reef to the Australian mainland, 67 miles in the North Sea along the Dutch Coast in '74.

A much shorter swim, 28 miles in filthy waters around Manhattan Island in 1976, got her headlines.

She tried to swim 90 miles from Cuba to Florida in '78, gave up only after 42 consecutive hours of continuous swimming, but later swam 78 miles from Bimini to Florida.

"What I want to talk about is how women can come out of the closet and exercise now — really sweat! A lot of women are cowardly about this.

"You see them jogging around the reservoir in Central Park. (She lives here now.) They're like lambs in tiger's clothing. They don't really run. They're scared of pain, of looking poorly to men.

"In the gym," where she lifts light weights, works out and coaches, "there's this one woman.

"Every Sunday morning you'd see her on the bicycle machine, with the Sunday Times on the floor, pedaling slowly." She does an imitation of very slow pedaling by a very large woman. "She'd read the whole paper, section by section. And the rest of us were in there killing ourselves.

"Finally, in the locker room, I had a word with her.

"'I don't mean to butt in but, look,' I said, 'this is not doing you any good. If you got on that machine for just 15 minutes and did sprints, really sweat, it would make all the difference.' She did. You should see her now," She does an imitation of furious pedaling. "She's one of those Cinderella stories."

"THIS IS A 90-90," says Diana Nyad, as she forms two 90-degree angels by taking a sitting position with he back against a wall.

"Women are afraid to push intensely, to pain, to ache. They are afraid of all those feelings.

"Women have been taught it is the man who is physical and the woman is to nurture, to stay home and be passive."

During part of this dissertation, she has been seated — on nothing!

"This is a 90-90," she says, taking up a sitting position with her back against the wall, her feet on the floor, thus forming two 90 degree angles and seated on nothing. It is a painfull position if held for any length of time. She goes right on talking, sitting there for quite a while. We didn't have time to time it because she talks fast.

She studied at the Sorbonne; has a Phi Beta Kappa key from Lake Forest College '73, graduate degree in comparative literature; is annoyed when asked to repeat for note taking.

"Don't you use a tape recorder?"

"I do this to show women they can take a little pain, that it will help. There's an amount of discomfort but it's not bad for you.

"Feel my thighs. Like rocks, right?"

Right, we say.

"I'm not trying to make this a male-female issue. It's just that women can make themselves so much better.

"We've got this obesity epidemic... In this country, women turn to eating for emotional problems. And they don't know how to exercise efficiently.

"We need to educate, to show them what exercises to do to build different parts of the body; to tell women they're not going to get huge — muscle bound; to get them to say, 'alright, it is my right to build my body and all the other things in life will be better.

"They'll sleep better, have easier pregnancies, more energy, less depression, less menstrual pain, higher self esteem. The brain is stimulated with exercise."

"All this can be done with just half an hour a day. The fat disappears. You're burning calories.

"You're not going to look like Jane Fonda. But you'll sure look a lot better."

PHYLL'S SPINACH SOUP

It's a low-calorie version my sister concocted and now is repeated on request.

- 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach
- 2½ cups milk
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 envelope (.19 ounces) instant chicken flavor broth mix
- ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg

Cook spinach according to package directions; do not drain. In an electric blender puree the spinach and its small amount of liquid with ½ cup of the milk. In a saucepan over moderately, low heat melt the butter; whisk in the flour; gradually whisk in the remaining 2 cups milk; add the broth mix, pureed spinach and nutmeg; stirring constantly, cook until thickened. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Blind travelers going to Switzerland will have an easier time with the currency than they have had previously. The Swiss have printed slightly raised identification marks on their currency so that a blind person can identify the denomination by touching it. Braille identification is also printed on most Dutch currency printed in the last five years. It is hoped that within the next few years many other countries will follow suit.

This Is A Time For Assessment

For a generation the federal government has promoted programs ... and heavily financed them together with state and local outlays ... to help feed the hungry, educate the ignorant, provide health care for the indigent, force open the doors to opportunity to business and in the political life of our country.

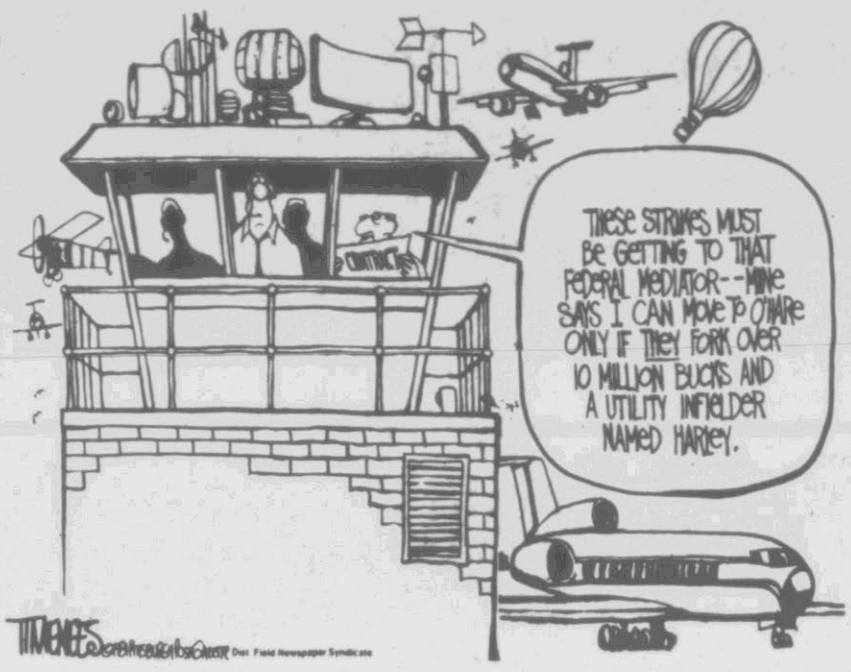

The process has been expensive in terms of private and national wealth. Few nations could or would devote so much effort to their poor.

Every country, every people, has had its share of poor. But poverty in the United States today is not "poverty" as measured in Europe, Asia, Africa or Latin America where even our slums represent a giant step upward from what they know.

Loosely speaking, the grand experiment began in the Roosevelt era, growing through the years of Harry Truman, John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter. It continues today, but there is much evidence of lessening interest.

Certainly no one in his (or her) right mind could envision such a massive outpouring of effort into social programming as continuing ad infinitum.

We suspect this is a time of national consensus to sit back and to see what government hath wrought: a generation of dependents, or a generation of self-sufficient, participating citizens.

Iran Assets Ruling Narrow

The U. S. Supreme Court has ruled in a unanimous decision that former President Carter and his successor, President Reagan, were fully within their authority to conclude the agreement that freed the American hostages from Iran.

Involved in the complicated negotiations was the transfer of over $2 billion in Iranian assets from the United States. Since there were legal claims against the assets in the United States, a Supreme Court ruling was necessary.

It would have been difficult for the court to rule any other way, given the sensitivity of the Iranian situation. At the same time the court made it clear that the ruling was narrow and it did not give the president broad powers in other litigation cases.

The opinion was a practical one designed only to clarify a highly complicated international situation.

Stopgap Measure

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Now that all the screaming is over in the General Assembly about new funds for road work, and motorists during the July 4 holiday got a chance to pay the new three-cent gas tax hike a time or two, will things quieten down and return to "business as usual?"

If so, the long debate will have produced only a stopgap boost in money without the real reforms which a top-drawer legislative committee considered essential.

Two hardnosed facts dictated the final outcome of the year's most newsworthy event:

1. Despite whatever wrongs of the pst were obvious, and those have been copiously recorded, the fact remained that the Department of Transportation had to get more money to keep North Carolina highways in good condition and build essential ones in the future; and,

2. Shrill opposition to the Gov. Jim Hunt Good Roads Plan by the Congressional Club forced a number of legislators who might otherwise have opposed the governor to join ranks for a Democratic show of unity.

Future

All of that is history. But now, for future reference, is a good time to review in a quieter way the report of the Joint Select Committee to Study the Department of Transportation.

Legislators on that committee spent long hours reviewing the situation and compiling their report. Two veteran lawmakers chaired the effort: State Senator Marshall Rauch, and State Rep. Allen C. Barbee.

What happens to the findings and recommendations presented by that group could well determine whether the battle was worth it, or whether the war will be lost on Tar Heel highways.

Here are some of things

from that report which will demand close scrutiny, now:

A single, 80,000 pound truck causes the same impact on highway pavement as 9,600 automobiles. A four-lane road designed to carry heavy trucks costs $863,000 per mile, while one for cars costs $336,000 per mile.

The so-called seven year plan for road construction is now totally unrealistic. The state should stop buying right-of-way for roads in that plan and rework a plan which establishes the most critical needs in construction only. And if there is a delay in getting federal money for construction, then the state should wait instead of pushing another road bond issue which means a double payback.

Local highway officials who determine crew sizes and work standards need to crack down on production, and the department needs to cut down on equipment purchases while getting better use of that already on hand.

Trimming

Work crew organization varies widely from one location to another which means unneeded supervisory and administrative personnel, and equipment which can sit idle.

Grass mowing crews and equipment could be reduced by cutting down on right-of-way widths, by using growth retardants or letting the shoulders grow naturally, and by contracting with farmers to use their own mowing equipment to trim the grass.

The Department of Transportation is spending $325,000 for public relations, over $100,000 for Board of Transportation members, and hired a consulting firm costing $300,000 to work with the Blue Ribbon Study Commission which recommended the gas tax hike. Indeed, the department has spent more than $41 million in just a few years for outside consultants. . . such spending should be sharply curtailed.

Finally, the committee calls for revised budget procedures so that legislators and the public can tell how much is being spent for what purpose, and that the budgets contain certain specifics on upcoming construction plans, anticipated costs, and revenues.

Subsidies Do Remain

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Though Congress generally went along with President Reagan's scaledown of government businesses like the Postal Service and two railroads, it balked at his attempt to slash the export loan subsidies that benefit private industry.

The Export-Import Bank, which provides low-cost loans to foreign buyers of Boeing airplanes, General Electric turbines and other goods made by U.S. companies, is among the few targets of Reagan spending cuts to emerge unscathed from last month's budget battle in Congress.

Ironically, it was the Ex-Im bank that Reagan's budget director, David A. Stockman, frequently pointed to as evidence of the administration's even-handedness in cutting programs affecting big business as well as needy individuals.

The U.S. Postal Service and the two federally supported rail systems — Conrail and Amtrak — were not as lucky as Ex-Im. Congress agreed to reduce their subsidies more in line with Reagan's proposals.

For the Postal Service, the cuts mean higher rates for non-profit fundraisers and other bulk mailers. At Conrail, which operates freight and passenger service in the Northeast, 10,000 or more workers face layoff and the system may be sold to a private owner.

Subsidies to Amtrak, the national rail passenger service, were not reduced as sharply as Reagan wanted, but Congress cut enough to allow only 85 percent of the system to survive.

Congress also went along with a presidential proposal to give 1.4 million federal white-collar employees only a 4.8 percent pay raise on Oct. 1. Under current law, the workers would have been entitled to a 13.5 percent raise. By limiting the increase, Congress will save $3.7 billion in fiscal 1982.

The Ex-Im bank program overcame Reagan's cutback proposals because it has a powerful constituency with lots of influence in Congress — namely large U.S. corporations that do a lot of their business overseas.

This year, the bank expects to make $5.5 billion in loans at interest rates of about 9 percent — less than half the prevailing rate. Traditionally, between one-third and one-half of all the loans cover the sale of aircraft and nuclear power equipment.

Reagan proposed that new loans for 1982 be held to $4.4 billion, but Congress voted instead to allow up to $5.1 billion in loans — about $100 million more than even former President Carter had requested before leaving office.

Reagan's proposal to cut the general subsidy for the Postal Service in 1982 from $644 million to $300 million was approved by the Senate, but the House went him one better by cutting the subsidy to $200 million.

The Postal Service says it can live with a $300 million subsidy without a significant reduction in service. Postal officials, unable to assure current service with a $200 million subsidy, said they hoped the larger subsidy would prevail when the Senate and House work out there budget differences in conference.

Both houses of Congress also went along with a Reagan proposal to end this year about $300 million in annual subsidies that have kept rates down for non-profit bulk mailers. Under previous law, the subsidies were to be phased out by 1987.

The bulk, or third-class, rate is a low-cost charge for non-profit groups such as veterans, charities, labor unions and religious and fraternal organizations. Most eligible groups use the bulk rate for fund-raising. The subsidy elimination means that a typical letter that now costs 3.6 cents to mail will go up to 5 cents.

Congress also agreed to eliminate a subsidy for rural weekly newspapers that circulate within one county, a move that will nearly double those mail rates. In the Senate version of the subsidy cut, rates would double as well for non-profit magazines and books mailed between libraries.

A grass-roots lobbying campaign on behalf of Amtrak helped the rail system avoid as sharp a cut as Reagan had sought. Amtrak initially asked for $970 million for 1982, but scaled its request down to $842 million after the president said no more than $613 million should be provided. Amtrak said Reagan's proposal would mean the end of a national system.

Congress decided to split the difference by approving a $735 million subsidy, which Amtrak says is sufficient to maintain nationwide service.

To live within the reduced subsidy, however, Amtrak said marginal Washington-Chicago and Washington-Cincinnati trains would be dropped, a Chicago-Texas train will be curtailed and other route reductions may be necessary.

The future is less certain for Conrail, which has received $5.7 billion in federal subsidies since 1976. The administration and the Senate want to sell the troubled 17,000-mile rail system to a private owner within about 18 months to get the government out of the railroad freight business and put an end to federal subsidies. Toward that end, the Senate approved a Reagan proposal to provide one final subsidy of $150 million for 1982 and 1983.

The House also wants to stop subsidizing the system, but is willing to continue financing Conrail for 2½ years to give it a chance to become a profitable operation. Thus, the House approved a $150 million subsidy for 1982 and a $225 million subsidy for 1983. Should Conrail remain in the red afterwards, the House would favor selling off the government's interest in the system.

C'MON, WE'LL GET HIM AT TAX-CUT GULCH!

Boobytrap For Tax Cut

By MAXWELL EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A device is now being wired to booby-trap President Reagan's three-year tax cut plan with a Democratic alternative that would cut individual income taxes over the next four years — but with the last two years tightly triggered to economic performance.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the Democratic-controlled Ways and Means Committee, has not said "yes" to this proposal. But he has not said "no." Rostenkowski is drafting a tax bill with only two years of individual tax cuts skewed to lower middle-income groups. He is working in the shadow of Ronald Reagan's stunning victory over the Democrats in the budget fight.

The latest Democratic nightmare is the prospect of yet another Reagan sweep, this one substituting his three-year, 25 percent marginal rate cut bill for the Rostenkowski two-year bill on the floor of the House. Danny Rostenkowski has more to lose than anyone else if, as now seems probable, Reagan rolls him on the floor in his first test as chairman of the tax-writing committee.

The four-year tax cut, with the last two hinged to economic performance — budget deficits, inflation and interest rates — is tailored to deprive Reagan of what one House Democrat calls an unbeatable argument: A tax cut covering three years looks a lot better than one covering only two years.

Prime mover of the proposal to add a third — or a third and fourth — year to Rostenkowski's two-year tax cut is Rep. Ed Jenkins, a conservative "boll weevil" Ways and Means Committee member who is certain to stay with Rostenkowski in the tax-cut shoot-out on the floor late this month.

Jenkins argued the plan eloquently last week in a closed-door caucus of committee Democrats and picked up impressive support. Rostenkowski said nothing. The Georgia conservative, who stuck with the Democrats in their defeat on the budget June 25, definitely will offer the extended tax-cut plan to the Democratic caucus when the committee gets back to bill drafting late next week.

Last month Georgia Rep. Elliott Levitas, an assistant Democratic whip with modest supply-side credentials, wrote Ways and Means Committee Democrats that the multi-year plan "would eliminate the argument" Reagan is certain to make that three years of tax cuts are better than two. "The issue," he wrote, "would then become the substance of the differences between the Republican approach and the Democratic alternative."

There is no question whatever that the administration views this democratic plan as totally unacceptable. "A political gimmick," a senior Treasury Department official told us. "They're outbidding the president but with a catch-22." Reagan would have to abandon the supply-side theory on which his bill is based if Congress imposed any trigger device at all — with the possible exception of a trigger Reagan himself could pull without the advice or the consent of Congress.

Thus, the Democratic plan is designed not as the opening wedge of any compromise with the administration but to attract a few conservative Democrats — and conceivably a handful of liberal Republicans from the Northeast — in the key floor vote substituting Reagan's bill for Rostenkowski's.

Republicans who might be won over are those who took heavy heat on the budget fight in districts with large numbers of lower-middle- income voters clearly favored by Rostenkowski's income tax cuts. Conservative Democrats worried about deficits in the last year of the Reagan plan despite deep cuts in the budget, including Jenkins himself, would feel safer with the out- year Jenkins trigger.

Moreover, Rostenkowski's generous treatment of business and corporate tax cuts and investment incentives has real appeal for the business community, particularly small, capital- intensive enterprises favored in his bill. A hedge against the possibility of a large deficit during the last year of Reagan's tax cut — if supply-side incentives fail to build economic growth and tax revenues — could prove attractive to the business community.

But the politics of adding one or two years of individual tax cuts to Rostenkowski's bill is sweet and simple: Deprive the president of the persuasive argument that he is guaranteeing three years of deep, continuous individual tax breaks against two years for the Democrats. That third-year reduction amounts to $40 billion.

Bargain Loans May Be Ended

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans have found a way to borrow money at low interest by taking advantage of the cash value of their life insurance. But the bargain-basement rates may be on their way out for future policyholders.

The insurance industry has begun a campaign in state legislatures to win passage of measures allowing higher interest rates on loans against new policies. So far, according to Robert Waldron of the American Council of Life Insurance, 10 states have OK'd some type of boost in rates. (Holders of existing policies are not affected.)

The bonanza for consumers — and the problem for the insurance industry — stems from the recent surge in interest rates.

"Whole life" insurance policies — also known as a "straight life" policies — build up cash value through the years. These policies traditionally have included provisions allowing the holder to borrow against that cash value. Interest rates, set years ago and usually limited by law, are low — generally ranging from 6 percent to 8 percent, but running as little as 4 percent in some cases.

As interest rates for other types of loans increased, consumers turned to their insurance policies when they wanted to borrow money. They also discovered that they could borrow against their policies and reinvest the money — in high-yield certificates of deposit, for example.

In April 1979, Waldron said, policyholders borrowed $600 million. The total amount of outstanding loans against life insurance policies was about $31.5 billion.

In April 1980, when credit controls were in effect and loans were hard to get, policyholders borrowed almost $1.7 billion — about triple what they had borrowed a year earlier. Outstanding loans totaled $38.2 billion.

The borrowing has tapered off, Waldron said, but it still topped $1 billion this April. The total now outstanding against insurance policies is $43.8 billion.

Waldron said the industry is not trying to discourage or prevent people from borrowing against their policies. "It's a contract right," he said. "There's nothing the insurance industry can do (to a customer who wants to borrow) except say, 'Yes, sir.'"

He said, however, that the situation is "causing some re-evaluation of product and marketing."

One result of the re-evaluation is the campaign to allow increased interest rates on new policies. In general, the industry is seeking legislation that allows insurance companies to set rates either at 8 percent or at an adjustable level tied to the monthly average of the yield on corporate bonds as published by Moody's Investors Service Inc. Under the adjustable alternative, the allowable interest rate as of last December would have been 14.4 percent.

The concern in the industry stems from the fact that the loans put a drain on the assets of insurance companies — assets they invest to pay stockholders and policyholders. Waldron said outstanding loans now equal about 9 percent of industry assets.

Phillip R. O'Connor, director of the Illinois Department of Insurance, said earlier this year: "Borrowing against policy cash values must always remain an essential feature of a whole life policy. But this right cannot continue to be abused to hamper the investable cash flow of insurance companies, which materially and adversely affects earnings."

There are several factors to consider if you are thinking of borrowing against your policy. You must find out how much cash value you have accumulated. Different policies build up value at different rates. A $100,000 policy that has been in effect for five years, for example, will have "considerable cash value," Waldron said. A $10,000 policy, by contrast, probably will not yield enough to make borrowing against it worthwhile.

You also should remember that you lose some protection when you borrow. If the insured person dies, the amount of the loan must be repaid from the death benefit.

Strength For Today

ATTITUDES COUNT

There is an oft-told story that Sir Christopher Wren, who had designed and was building St. Paul's Cathedral in London, was inspecting the work in progress. He came across three stonemasons busily engaged in shaping blocks for the walls. None of them knew Sir Christopher by sight.

"What are you doing?" he asked the first man. "Cutting this stone," the man replied in a surly tone, without looking up.

The architect passed by and put the same question to the second mason. "I'm earning three shillings a day," the man said.

Again, Wren asked the third mason the question. "I'm helping Sir Christopher Wren build this great catedral," he said proudly, with a smile.

We should certainly not imitate the man who was just cutting the stone. We should be the one who knew that his work would be part of a great and beautiful cathedral.—Elisha Douglass

Redistricting Tops Legislative Agenda For Today

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — House and Senate conferees meet today in hopes of reaching agreement on a plan for reapportioning the state's 11 congressional districts to clear the way for adjournment of the 1981 General Assembly.

Disagreement between the House and Senate on redistricting remains the major item to be resolved before legislators go home, although House Speaker Liston Ramsey has suggested the issue could be put off until a fall special session.

The 13 House conferees prepared for today's meeting with their Senate counterparts by holding a private session Monday night from which reporters were excluded at the insistence of the chairman, Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell.

Huskins offered a new redistricting map, one that would divide two counties as a way to achieve a population balance. But he and other conferees said later that the House members failed to agree and took no votes.

"We talked about it but there was no agreement," Huskins said. "It's just like the old committee."

House and Senate members have hopes for adjournment by late this week, and Huskins said he believed the redistricting issue could be settled by then. Ramsey said last week that it was possible the conference committee could wait until the session planned for completion of the state budget in October or November.

House members returned early from the Independence Day holiday and held a short Monday night session. Senators took Monday off and returned today..

The conference panel was named after the Senate, which had already passed its own congressional redistricting plan, refused to go along with a House map approved last week. The House passed its version after weeks of deadlock in the House Redistricting Committee, also headed by Huskins.

Huskins' new proposal to the House conferees would split Onslow County between the 1st and 3rd districts. It would also split Moore County, moving the northern portion out of the 8th and into the 6th. It would drop all of Chatham County out of the 2nd District and put it in the 3rd, cutting off the hook-shaped portion of the 2nd that has contributed to charges of gerrymandering with the Senate plan.

The only differences between maps approved by the House and Senate lie in the 5th and 6th districts, but the conferees could come up with an entirely new plan. Democrats have split over how to align those districts, and that has emerged as the major division since loyalists of 2nd District Democratic Congressman L.H. Fountain succeeded in rejecting moves to put Durham County into the 2nd.

Huskins' latest plan would appear to strengthen Democratic standing in the 5th District, represented by Democrat Steven Neal, at the expense of the 6th, which was held by Democrats until Republican Eugene Johnston won the seat last year.

His map would make the 6th consist of Guilford, Randolph, Davidson and northern Moore. It would make the 5th Rockingham, Forsyth, Stokes, Surry, Wilkes, Alleghany, Alexander and Ashe.

In other legislative action:

Debts

The House overwhelmingly defeated a bill sought by the North Carolina Bar Association that would have made it easier for creditors to collect debts in cases where property is jointly held.

The House voted 80-27 to defeat the bill, which dealt with collection of debts of a person whose property is held in a tenancy-by-the-entirety.

Currently, all property held in such a joint husband-and-wife arrangement is subject to sale in order for creditors to collect on debts of the husband and wife, but not for the debts of only one spouse. The bill would have provided that one spouse's share of jointly held property would be subject to debt collection.

Credit Cards

The House concurred in a minor Senate amendment and enacted a bill dealing with the computation of interest on credit cards. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Jean Fenner, D-Wilson, ensures that banks may charge interest only on the unpaid balance, not on the full amount of the balance before monthly payments were made.

Expo

The House tentatively approved a resolution that would establish a liason committee of legislators to oversee the state Department of Commerce's plans for establishing a North Carolina display at Expo 82 in Knoxville, Tenn.

Green

The House passed a resolution honoring the late Paul Green, North Carolina's former dramatist laureate.

Re-Establishing Golden Eaglets

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina conservationists expect to free in August two golden eagles raised in captivity in an attempt to re-establish them in the Pisgah National Forest.

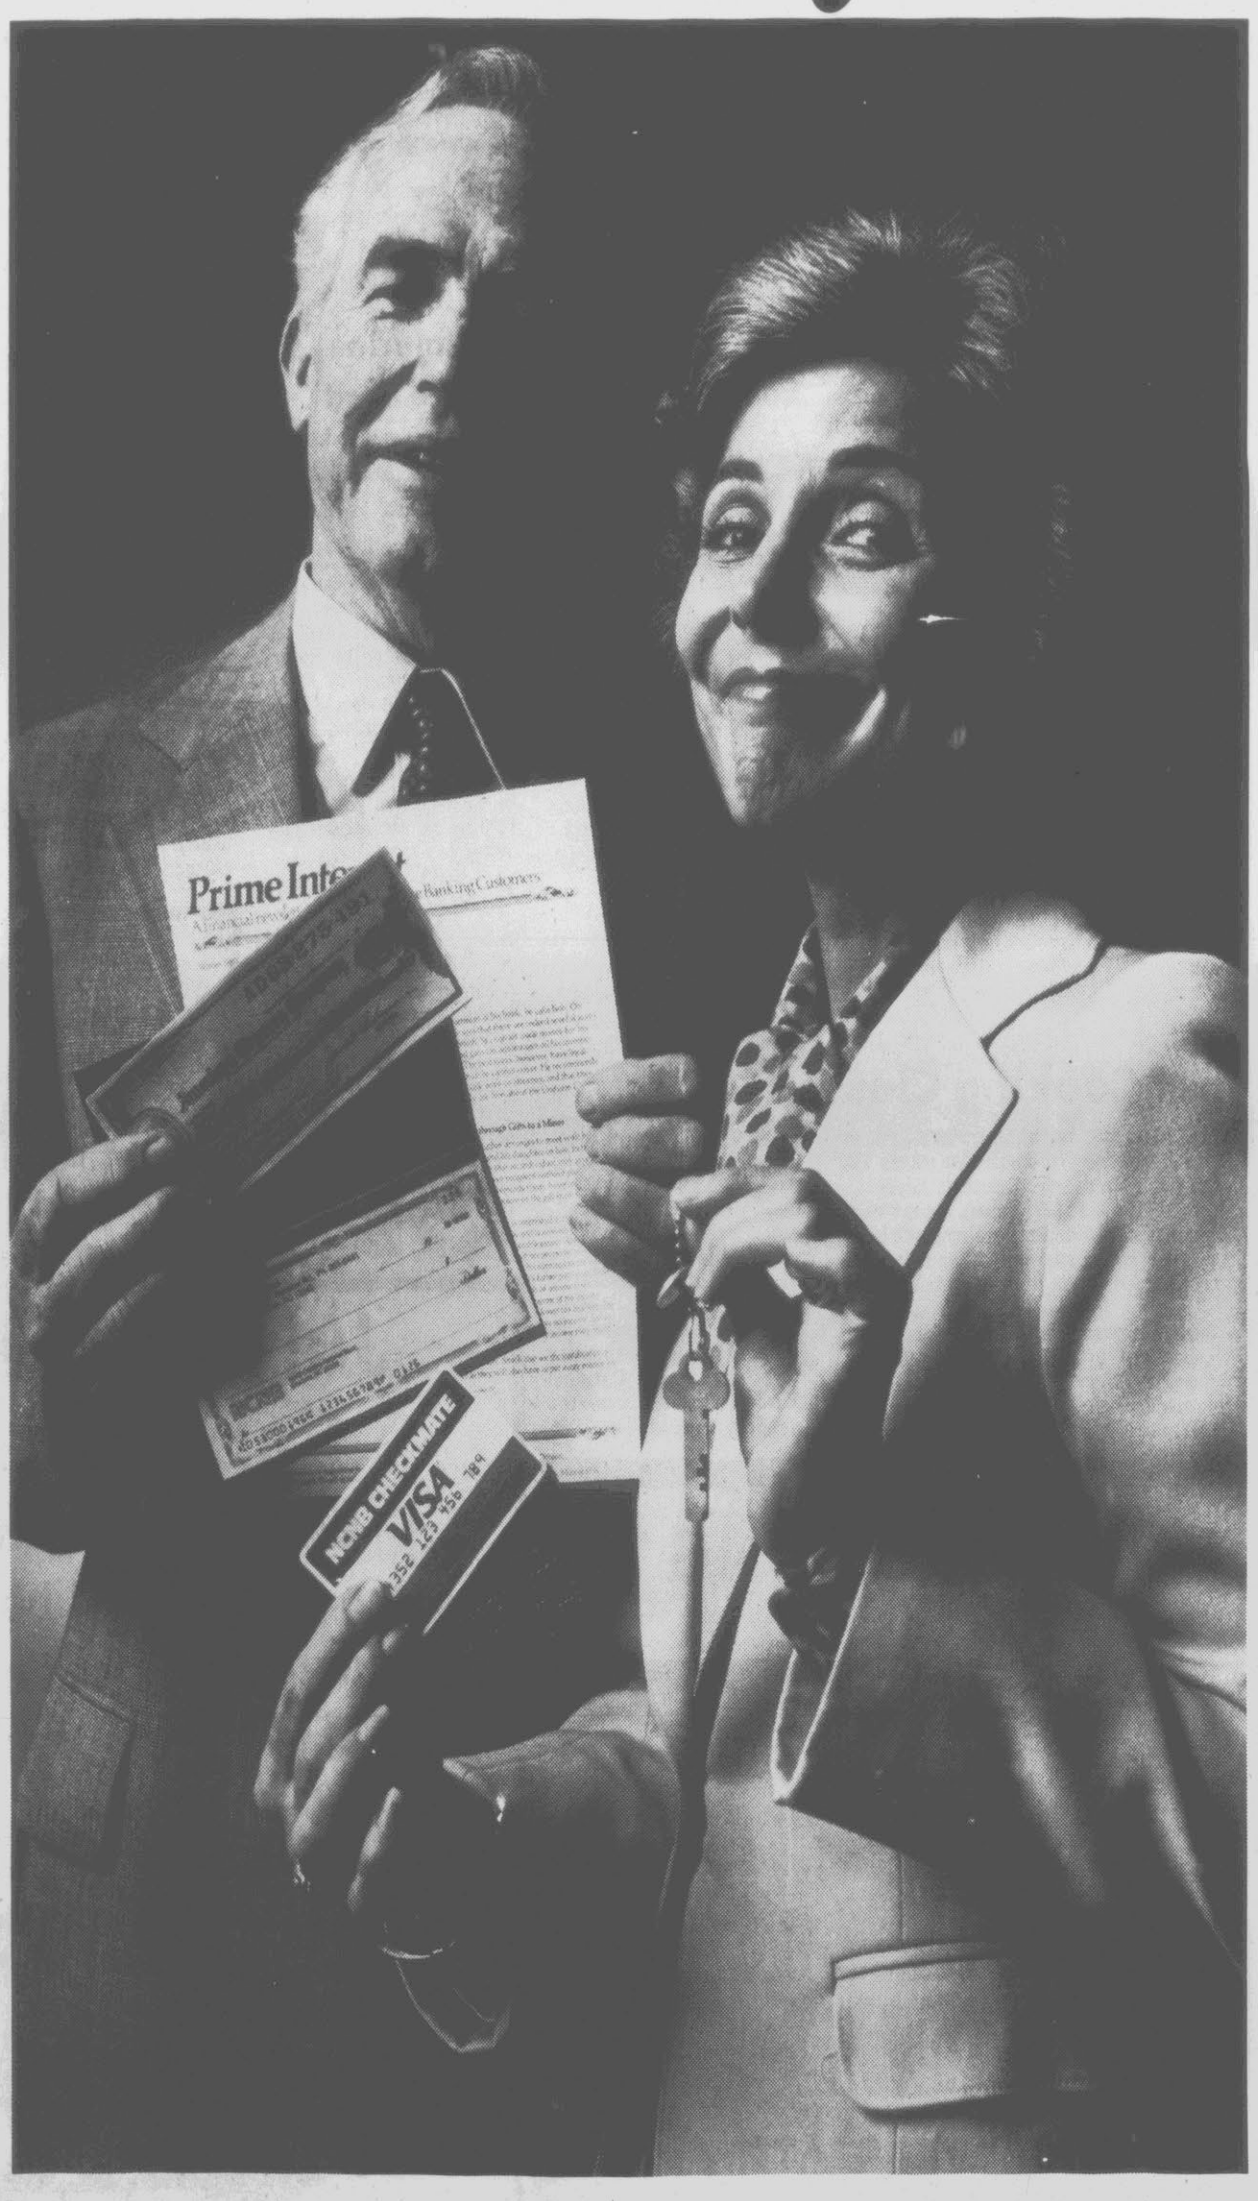

But the experiment — being tried for the first time in the United States — might take three or four years before any birds survive to maturity.

"Three out of four golden eagles don't survive to breeding maturity even when they're reared by their mother," said David Cone, curator of education at Gastonia's Schiele Museum of Natural History.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gained ground today, rebounding from the slide of the past eight sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 57.36 points since June 23, climbed 5.13 to 954.43 by noontime today.

Gainers held a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Late Monday the Federal Reserve issued figures showing no change in the basic measures of the money supply for the latest reporting week.

The data, which surprised some analysts who had been looking for a moderate increase, were taken as encouraging news for the interest-rate outlook.

And brokers said they seemed to provide the spark needed for the market to halt its early-summer decline.

Also in the economic news, the government reported that the producer price index rose 0.6 percent in June, maintaining the single-digit pace of recent months.

Texasgulf topped the active list, up 7¼ at 54¼. Elf Aquitaine of France raised the price tag on its takeover bid for the company from $50 to $56 a share, and Texasgulf said it wouldn't fight the offer.

The NYSE's composite index rose .53 to 74.52. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 1.33 to 361.53.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 21.41 million shares at noontime, against 18.70 million at the same point Monday.

Conoco Accepts Du Pont Offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Du Pont Co. is launching a major invasion of the energy business with its plan to buy Conoco Inc., giving the giant chemical and plastics company guaranteed access to the petroleum that is the raw material for many Du Pont products.

The merger deal, which would be the largest corporate takeover ever, has won the endorsement of the beleaguered management of Conoco, which was scrambling for a merger partner to avoid an unfriendly takeover offer. But the deal, announced Monday, wasn't as enthusiastically received by Du Pont stockholders.

The merger would create the seventh-largest industrial company in the nation. Conoco ranks 14th on the list, based on sales, one place ahead of Du Pont, which ranks first in the chemical field.

The current takeover record is held by Shell Oil Co., which paid $3.6 billion for Belridge Oil Co. in 1979.

Conoco, a major oil company and owner of Consolidation Coal, the nation's second-largest coal company, has been fighting an unwelcome $2.55-billion offer from Seagram Co. Ltd. of Canada for 41 percent of its stock. Seagram, which is offering $73 a share, declined comment Monday on the Du Pont offer.

Du Pont stock fell $4.875 a share, to $46.375, in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange Monday after the deal was announced. At the same time, Conoco stock rose $7.375, to $77.

The drop in Du Pont stock cut the value of the deal to $6.8 billion from the $7.3 billion pricetag originally put on the acquisition based on the price of Du Pont stock last week.

Du Pont proposes to acquire 40 percent of all Conoco stock for $3 billion in cash, at $87.50 a share, and to acquire the rest at an exchange rate of 1.6 Du Pont shares for each Conoco share. The value of 1.6 Du Pont shares fell Monday to $74.20 from $82.

Jack Henry, an analyst with E.F. Hutton & Co., said some investors have been enthusiastic about Du Pont's growing ventures in health care and electronics products, which would be proportionately less important after Du Pont swallows the larger Conoco.

Like most oil companies, Conoco is already involved in chemicals. Last year, it reported $1 billion in revenue and $44.3 million in profits from chemical operations, which included a joint venture with Monsanto, a major Du Pont competitor.

But the deal could escape opposition from Washington on antitrust grounds because Du Pont is not heavily involved in petrochemicals and because the Reagan administration is more sympathetic to large mergers than was the Carter administration. The Justice Department did not comment.

Du Pont Chairman Edward Jefferson said the merger "will further diversify our business and give us a strong base in natural resources." Besides chemicals, Du Pont is involved in plastics, fibers, electronics and agricultural and health-care products.

Jefferson said the merger "will tend to reduce the exposure of the combined companies to fluctuations in the price of energy." He said Conoco has "a unique position in energy resources including oil, gas, coal, heavy oil, shale oil and uranium reserves and a reputation for innovative leadership in exploration, production and marketing."

Du Pont has wanted to get into the oil business for some time. In 1976, it attempted to acquire the much smaller Shenandoah Oil Co.

Jefferson and Conoco Chairman Ralph E. Bailey said Conoco would benefit in the deal from Du Pont's engineering and research skills, particularly in expanding the use of coal. Du Pont has done work in technologies for converting coal to a liquid or gas fuel.

Hit By Truck, Pedestrian Has No Injuries

FALKLAND — "God was looking out for my son yesterday," Mrs. McCoy Williams of Rt. 1, Fountain, said this morning. "He's got something left for Bobby to do in this world; otherwise, I don't see how that driver could have kept that rock truck from running over him."

Bobby Williams, 36, stepped into the path of a tractor-trailer yesterday at 11:35 a.m., yet is walking around today with no injuries more serious than bruises, his mother said.

N.C. Highway Patrolman D.W. Taylor, the investigating officer, said Edwin Clark Owens, 26, of Rt. 1, Fountain, steered the truck owned by the David C. Owens Trucking Company to the left and just brushed Williams' body. Williams was lying under the truck only a few feet in front of the back wheels when the truck came to a stop, witnesses said. The accident occurred two tenths of a mile west of Falkland on Highway 222 in front of the home of Mr. and Mrs. McCoy Williams.

Williams was transported by the Falkland Rescue Squad to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, where he was checked for internal injuries and released.

Rule Attempt To Kill Self

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A college student who caused a power outtage here by touching a 115,000-volt transformer was trying to kill himself, police said.

Michael A. Dillon, 22, of suburban Brighton, a student at the Rochester Institute of Technology, was hospitalized Monday in guarded condition after he scaled a fence and climbed a tower at a Rochester Gas & Electric Co. substation, said utility spokesman Richard Peck.

"The full dose would have killed him," Peck said. "As it was, he probably was thrown 10 to 15 feet by the jolt. It had the effect of shorting out the transformer to homes in that area."

Some 500 homes lost power for about an hour. Police said Dillon told them he and his wife had had a quarrel and he went out drinking, then went to the substation. He was burned over more than half his body.

Gourmet Cooking Class

A gourmet cooking class will begin July 8 at 9 a.m. at Aycock Junior High School home economics. The course will meet from 9 a.m.-12 noon and from 1-4 p.m. through July 10.

The registration fee will be $5-$8 per student, but is free to senior citizens 65 years or older. Students are responsible for their own supplies. High school students (16 or older) are permitted to enroll with permission from the proper school official.

The class will focus on French, Italian, Greek and Polish cooking, and is sponsored by Pitt Community College, Greenville City Community Schools and Aycock Junior High.

Arrest Made In Sunday Shooting

Greenville Police arrested Sadoc Parker of 1305 W. Third Street in connection with a Sunday night shooting incident involving a Farmville man, according to Police Chief Glenn Cannon.

The chief said that Parker was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, resulting in bodily injury, after Robert Lee Williams, 39, of 404 Cotton Street, Farmville, was shot in the right leg with a handgun. Cannon said that Williams received a small wound below the right knee in the incident.

The shooting, he added, took place at Parker's house and was reported at 11:35 p.m. Sunday.

Parker was placed in jail under $1,000 bond, Cannon reported, with a first appearance hearing scheduled for today in District Court here.

Sunshine Planning Trip

Forty-six girls in Operation Sunshine went on a field trip to New Bern July 6 for a tour of Tryon Palace.

"A Look at North Carolina" is the theme for the girls' organization this summer. Trip to Bath, Beaufort and Wilmington are planned.

Other activities include macrame towel racks and key rings, making pencil boxes out of craft sticks, yarn craft animals and home-made clay items. The girls have also participated in games and sports of all types.

This week, the club plans on going swimming. They are also quilting.

No Injuries In Accident

No injuries resulted and no charges were preferred as a result of a Sunday afternoon traffic mishap investigated by Greenville Police.

Officers said the 3:20 accident near the intersection of N. Greene Street and Mumford Road involved vehicles operated by Robert Eugene Windham of Rt. 4, Greenville, and Harold Allen Jones of 202 Queen Annes Road.

Damages were set at $250 to the Windham vehicle and $100 to the car operated by Jones.

Eye Redress For Victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the weeks after Japanese planes attacked the U.S. Pacific Fleet at Pearl Harbor in 1941, a growing fear of invasion by Japan gripped the West Coast.

Hysteria caused people to look not only across the Pacific for planes and warships but around their neighborhoods for supposed fifth columnists who would assist the invaders from within.

What they — and leaders in Washington — saw were persons of Japanese descent ranging from recently arrived resident aliens to citizens whose ancestors migrated to the United States generations earlier.

On Feb. 19, 1942, President Roosevelt signed Executive Order No. 9066. As a result, 120,000 persons of Japanese ancestry were forced into internment camps during World War II.

The action was debated then, and it was still being debated in 1976 when President Ford rescinded the executive order with the comment: "We now know what we should have known then — not only was the evacuation wrong, but Japanese-Americans were and are loyal Americans."

Next week, a nine-member commission created by Congress begins hearings to determine "whether any wrong was committed" by internment not only of Japanese-Americans but of some Aleutian and Pribilof islanders.

Red blood cells are formed in the bone marrow and usually live no longer than 120 days.

NLRB Seeks To Open Owners' Books

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board resumed its case against major league baseball today before an administrative law judge who asked Mark Belanger and Bob Boone for their autographs after the first day of hearings.

Melvin Welles, the NLRB's chief administrative law judge, listened with a bemused smile to the testimony offered Monday as the labor board sought to force management to open its books to the union.

"I am a baseball fan," the judge said. "Most of us are. I root for the Yankees. When Washington had a team I saw 30 games a year. Now I see 10 or 12, almost all of them in Baltimore."

That's why the judge must have been particularly impressed by the presence of Belanger, the Orioles' shortstop, who was called to testify for the union.

"It was interesting to have Belanger," Welles said. "He takes so many hits away from Yankee batters. I like the fact that he bats about .200 against us, though."

Welles is in charge of assigning administrative law judges for cases like the one the NLRB is pursuing against the owners. "I assigned this one to myself, because it sounded interesting. It will be more fun for me"

Acting on behalf of the union, the NLRB is seeking to prove management has bargained in bad faith by refusing to open its financial books in negotiations while, at the same time, various club owners and Commissioner Bowie Kuhn have bemoaned the game's financial condition.

Kuhn and three club owners, Jerry Reinsdorf of the Chicago White Sox, Calvin Griffith of the Minnesota Twins and Ruly Carpenter of the Philadelphia Phillies, were scheduled to testify today. Also scheduled for tonight is a meeting of the executive board of the Major League Players Association. The 26 player representatives will be briefed on the status of negotiations in their strike, which entered its 26th day today with 13 more games canceled for a total of 324 lost since the walkout began June 12. On Thursday, the 26 club owners will meet in New York for a briefing from chief negotiator Ray Grebey and the Player Relations Committee.

The owners' meeting came about after eight teams reportedly asked league presidents Lee MacPhail of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National by telegram to set it up.

The New York Times said that the New York Yankees and Mets, Houston Astros, Cleveland Indians, Chicago White Sox, San Diego Padres, Texas Rangers and Baltimore Orioles had requested the meeting, the first by the owners since the strike began. The Times also said that two of the owners of those teams identified Edward Bennett Williams, owner of the Orioles, as the main force behind the request.

Most of the opening day of the NLRB hearing was devoted to testimony from Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, who traced relations between the players and management which led to the strike. Miller spent more than two hours on the stand, testifying under questioning from Mary Schuette, the NLRB attorney, and David Silberman, representing the union.

When they were through, management counsel Louis Hoynes asked only that Miller confirm two bits of testimony he had offered last month in Rochester, N.Y., before federal judge Henry Werker. Both involved quotes attributed to Miller regarding poverty reports of management.

Hoynes quoted Miller as having said, "Why should I believe Bowie's annual poormouth speech?" and "All I hear is more and more losses and all I see is more and more capital gains."

Miller confirmed both quotes, just as he had in the Rochester case, when the NLRB sought an injunction against management, delaying for one year its free agent compensation plan and any possible strike by the players. Werker denied that petition.

After Miller's testimony ended, the players entered into evidence lists of ball players with no trade contracts. The effort was to illustrate that the owners' compensation proposal requiring that only 15 or 18 players be protected, would necessarily leave quality players unprotected and, as a result, reduce the bidding for free agents.

The Los Angeles Dodgers, for example, have 15 players with no-trade contracts and would be forced to leave ace pitcher Fernando Valenzuela available as possible compensation.

Then Belanger was called to testify.

Hoynes, looking at his watch, noted, "It's awfully late in the day and we will stipulate, he's one helluva ball player."

"I know," said Welles, "he's robbed my team of a lot of hits."

Schuette wanted Belanger to give his opinion of the Oriole player list which had been entered into evidence. Hoynes objected, suggesting that management could then bring a parade of scouts and coaches to evlauate each of the 650 striking major leaguers. Welles let Belanger go on and he talked about pitchers Tim Stoddard and Tippy Martinez, classifying them as "stoppers." Then the judge stopped him, saying, "I don't think Mr. Belanger is adding anything I don't know."

Schuette then entered the Orioles' press guide into evidence. Again Hoynes objected, asking its relevence to the case. Welles permitted it, saying, "It will just add a little bulk to the exhibits."

Later, the Phillie press guide was entered and again Welles accepted it. "It's even thinner," he noted.

Pirates Stop State By 4-1

From Staff, Wire Reports

RALEIGH — John Hallow and Pete Persico each went two-for-three at the plate to lead East Carolina over North Carolina State 4-1 in North State Summer Baseball League action Monday.

The win, the Pirates' second straight over NCSU, leaves ECU at 10-10 on the season. The Wolfpack drops to 8-9.

N.C. State had opportunities to take the early lead but could not get its runners home. The Wolfpack left two men on base in the first and fourth before seeing ECU break up the scoreless battle in the bottom of the fourth.

John Hallow singled to open the inning and moved to second on Jack Curlings' sacrifice. After Todd Evans flew out to left, Pete Persico singled home Hallow to give ECU a 1-0 lead.

One inning later, the Pirates added two more runs to their total. Jay Carraway singled to open the fifth and moved to second on Robert Wells' sacrifice. Mike Sorrell then singled home Carraway.

With two gone, John Hallow walked to give ECU runners on first and second. Curlings then singled to score Sorrell and ECU led, 3-0.

N.C. State scored its lone run of the game moments later when Tracy Black walked, advanced on Ronnie Lee's base hit and scored on a Tim Barbour single. Leo Thomas walked to load the bases, but Kirk Parsons came on in relief of Robbie Harper to get the third out.

ECU countered that run with one of its own in the seventh. Sorrell reached on an error and then went to second on Hendley's single. He scored when Hallow followed with a single.

Harper got the win for the Pirates. He pitched 5$^{2}_{3}$ innings, allowed four hits, one earned run while striking out five and walking four. Parsons pitched the final 1$^{1}_{3}$ innings for the save. He allowed two hits and struck out three and walked two.

Three Gain Ryder Team

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Weekend performances at the Western Open golf tournament earned Jack Nicklaus, Bill Rogers and Howard Twitty spots on the 12-member U.S. Ryder Cup team headed for England in September.

The team plays in biennial competition against the top 12 British pros.

The three touring pros earned the final three Ryder Cup berths with their performances at the tournament, in which Rogers finished tied for fifth, Nicklaus was tied for seventh and Twitty was far back in the field.

The Western Open was the final chance for the pros to earn points that determine the golfers who make the team.

If Baseball Has Struck Out, Let's Try The Union Baseball League

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

"...for it's one, two, three strikes, 'You're out' at the old ballgame."

For baseball, it may only take one strike to be out.

We are obviously witnessing the end of this marvelous sport as we have known it. Kiss it goodbye. Accept that fact. It is an obvious one to anybody paying even minimal attention to Marvin Miller, Ray Grebey and the hoardes of attorneys who follow them from one negotiation to another, from this caucus to that one, from these hearings to those.

Now the question is, how do we replace the grand old game? There are all manner of suggestions and Miller himself may have come up with the best five years ago.

You may recall in the spring of 1976, the baseball club owners were in a tizzy over the arrival of free agency and the negotiations of a collective bargaining agreement to deal with that dilemma. We'll fix the infidels, they decided. We'll shut down spring training camps.

That strategy lasted about two weeks until Commissioner Bowie Kuhn stepped in and ordered the camps opened. But just before that happened, Miller had a quaint thought.

The show in baseball, he observed at the time, is the players, not the owners. Owners are superfluous, excess baggage, really unneeded. Miller suggested that unless management got off its collective duffs, the players would simply dispense with them.

Remember how it was when you were a kid. You just chose up sides and played a game. No owners, no general managers, just players. Well, said Miller in 1976, the players could do exactly that again, only this time on a larger level. If it was possible in 1976, then it's possible now.

So, in the interest of saving the game, we offer a plan. It is presented free of charge, in, of course, the best interests of baseball.

We start by having a commissioner. That will be Marvin Miller, naturally.

Now we need teams, and to form them, the players hold their own draft. If you need league presidents — and no one is quite sure you do — then the two league representatives, Bob Boone and Doug DeCinces will do. Use the current team player reps to serve as general managers, doing the drafting and dividing up the talent.

The rules in the UBL — that's Union Baseball League — are simple. There will be no free agent compensation and every year everybody goes free — just the way arbitrator Peter Seitz and the federal courts said they ought to be back in 1976.

That will keep fan interest at maximum levels because players will be changing annually. If you have a bad team this season, hang in there. Next year's draft will deliver 25 new faces and maybe it will be better. That's more than Chicago Cub fans can hope for right now.

See, we've already improved on the current system.

In our league, the World Series is played in the day time and we use real grass and nine players to a team. Violations of tradition like artificial turf and designated hitters are outlawed.

Where do our teams play? Most big city ballparks are leased to those dinosaurs who once played major league baseball. If our teams can't use those facilities, there are other places to play.

Wouldn't New Orleans like a team for the Superdome? Call them the Pelicans. How about Washington D.C. where Robert F. Kennedy Stadium stands vacant? Let's see...for a nickname, how about the Senators? That's not being used right now.

The Miami Palmtrees could play in the Orange Bowl and the Detroit Firebirds would be perfect for Pontiac Stadium. For Los Angeles, we offer the Coliseum, where baseball was played once before by a currently out-of-business team called the Dodgers. Label the new club something appropriately Californian, like the Laidbacks.

The Montreal franchise moves back into quaint Jarry Parc, which has hosted major league baseball before. We'll call the team the Snowmen. The Philadelphia Franklins will play in John F. Kennedy Stadium.

See how easy it is?

Now of course, our new league is going to need a New York franchise and for awhile the organizers were stumped on where the Big Apples could play. But the problem has been solved.

We'll simply put them at Aqueduct racetrack.

All-Star Plans Go On, Despite Strike

CLEVELAND (AP) — As the strike by baseball players nears its one-month anniversary, the chore of preparing for an All-Star Game that may never happen has become increasingly frustrating.

"Extremely frustrating," said Cleveland Indians spokesman Bob DiBiasio Monday as baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn declined to cancel the game, scheduled for Municipal Stadium next Tuesday.

"There's no change in plans," said Gabe Paul, president of the host Indians. "We're going full steam ahead and will until the last possible minute."

Thousands of souvenir T-shirts, mugs and pennants are locked away, 5,000 pounds of hot dogs are stored in the Stadium's freezers, 50,000 programs are printed and 1,600 hotel rooms are reserved for incoming media and baseball officials.

"I'm still processing credentials. We're still getting requests," DiBiasio said. More than 500 media representatives planned to cover the event.

But no one seems optimistic that the players' strike will be settled in time to save the game, at least for its scheduled date.

"The game hasn't been canceled," said Chuck Adams, a spokesman for Kuhn. "We're continuing to re-evaluate it day by day. But obviously a decision has to be made soon. We're rapidly running out of time."

If it is not played next Tuesday, the game could be rescheduled, with July 30, the second rain date, the most logical choice. July 15 is the primary rain date.

"The thing they obviously don't want to do is cancel the game," DiBiasio said. "A postponement would be OK."

Cancellation of the contest would cost the Cleveland economy $4-$6 million according to Frank Carrell, vice president of the Convention and Visitors Bureau. Also, the baseball players' pension fund would lose about $2 million.

The decision rests with baseball's executive committee, comprising Kuhn and team owners from Detroit, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Kansas City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Boston and Pittsburgh.

If the game is saved, Municipal Stadium will be prepared. A month without baseball has left its natural turf in excellent shape, and Al Friedlander, Stadium Corp. vice president, said there would be no problem rounding up salespeople to staff concessions and souvenir booths.

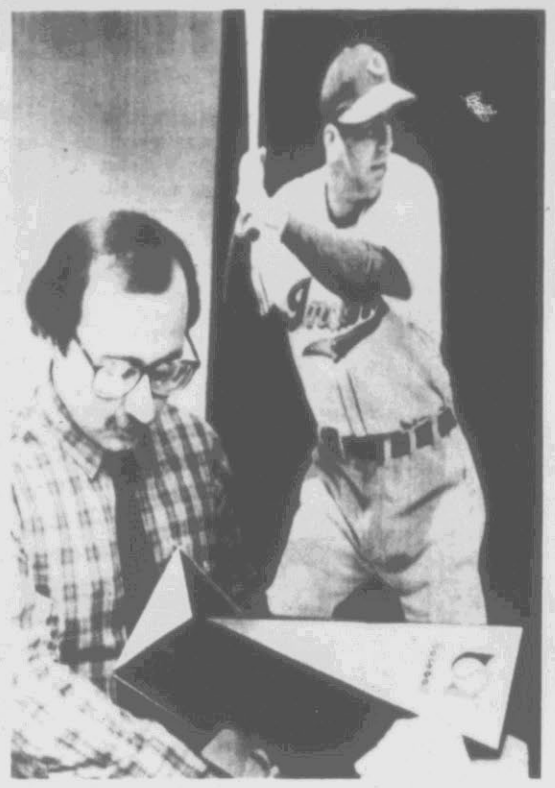

"If they say, 'No All-Star Game this year,' we'll run a sale for about two weeks and sell the (souvenirs) at half price," he said.

Contingency plans have not yet been made for the 78,000 people who bought tickets for the soldout contest.

"Obviously if the game is played July 30, the July 14 ticket would be good," DiBiasio said. "As far as refunds, that'll probably be the last thing they decide on."

The All-Star Game has been canceled only once since the first one was played in Chicago's Comiskey Park in 1933. That was in 1945, when wartime restrictions prevented players from traveling to the game.

Monday was the anniversary of the 1933 contest.

Little League

Wellcome ..... 3
Lions ..... 1

Wellcome, champions of the Tar Heel Little League, rallied from a 1-0 deficit in the City Championship and beat the Lions 3-1 yesterday to win that title, winning the final two games.

The Lions, winners of the North State title, took a lopsided 25-2 victory in the opening game of the series, but the Wellcome nine rallied for a 7-2 win on Thursday to tie the playoff at one game each before rain Friday delayed the final contest until Monday.

Anthony Cobb, hurling his first complete game for the Wellcome team, scattered seven hits and stuck out 12 in getting the victory. He walked five.

In contrast, Lion hurler Tom Moye allowed but three hits, striking out eight and walking two, but Wellcome made more use of what it got.

The new champs got all they needed in the top of the first, scoring twice. Andrew Perry led off with a single and moved up on a passed ball and a fly out. He scored when Terry Warren reached on an error. Another error allowed Warren to move on to third, and he scored on a passed ball.

The other Wellcome run came in the third. Warren singled, moved up on a wild pitch, and took third on an out. He scored when Vicki Parrott reached on an error.

The lone Lion run came over in the sixth. Donald Perkins doubled with one away, and scored on Junior Taft's double. That had come after Earl Evans had also singled, putting the tieing run at second.

But Cobb struck out the final two batters to end the threat and preserve the Wellcome victory.

Taft, Perkins, and Ralph Harper led the Lion hitting with two each.

Babe Ruth League

Planters Bank ..... 3
Coca-Cola ..... 2

It took nine innings, but Planters Bank, scoring twice in that frame, held off a Coca-Cola rally to take a 3-2 victory in the Babe Ruth League last night.

Planters grabbed the initial lead in the top of the first, but Coke tied it up in the second at 1-1. It stayed that way until the ninth.

In the top of the ninth, Tony Daniels led off by reaching on an error to start the Planters' rally. He took second on the misplay and reached third on a passed ball. Jordy Smith reached on an errored fielder's choice, scoring Daniels. He came around to score on Carlton Wilson's hit.

Coke tried to rally, scoring once in the bottom of the inning, but Planters cut them off before they could tie it up, leaving the winning run at second base.

Winner hurler Smith allowed just three hits, as did loser Ronnie Moore. No one had more than one hit.

Aaction Movers .... 8
Coca-Cola ..... 6

Aaction Movers outlasted Coca-Cola, 8-6, last night and wrapped up the regular season Babe Ruth League title.

Aaction jumped into the lead with a five-run first inning. Coke came back with one in the second, then added five in the third to take a 6-5 edge in the contest. Aaction tied it up with one in the fifth, however.

In the sixth, Aaction pushed over the two that won the game. Toby Fischer led off with a single and scored on Billy Godley's double. Godley stole third and scored on a wild pitch with the final run.

Fischer led the Aaction hitting with four, while Godley had three and Darryl Pettis had two. Mike Smith, Traye Fuqua and Battle Emory each had two hits for Coke.

Ellenberger's Fate To Jury

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The fate of former University of New Mexico basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger today was in the hands of a state diztrict court jury that heard five days of testimony in his trial on 22 counts of fraud and making false public vouchers.

The jury considered the case for about three hours Monday after closing arguments were presented by attorneys for the state and Ellenberger, then was dismissed for the day.

Jurors were scheduled to resume their deliberations today at 9 a.m.

Ellenberger was indicted by a state grand jury in May 1980 on 12 counts of making false public vouchers, one count of fraud in excess of $2,500 and nine counts of fraud in excess of $100.

The charge of fraud in excess of $2,500 is a third-degree felony that carries a maximum penalty of three years imprisonment. The other 21 counts against Ellenberger are fourth-degree felonies, each with a maximum penalty of 18 months imprisonment.

The charges stemmed from an investigation into the Lobo basketball program, triggered by a recruiting scandal that eventually led to the firing of Ellenberger at the start of the 1979-80 season.

The fraud charge involving an amount in excess of $2,500 alleged that Ellenberger had cheated his former assistant coach, Charlie Harrison, or the school's athletic booster club, out of $3,000.

On the false public voucher charges, the state contended Ellenberger had billed UNM for airline trips that he never took or for airfare that had been paid by Medalist Industries Inc. The company is a private sporting goods manufacturing firm for whom Ellenberger worked as a speaker at various basketball clinics nationwide between 1978 and 1979.

While the prosecution had labeled Ellenberger "a confidence man," the defense contended the once highly successful coach had been victimized by the demands and pressures placed upon him to produce a winning team at New Mexico, even if it meant breaking National Collegiate Athletic Association regulations.

Ellenberger's attorney, Leon Taylor, told the jury in his closing arguments that the former coach did not defraud his former assistant or cheat the university out of any money.

Taylor told the jury that Harrison testified he was promised $1,000 and got $1,000, and that former UNM Lobo Club executive secretary Bill Byrnes testified the booster club was not defrauded, as was argued by the state.

Taylor told jurors that if Ellenberger is "guilty on one count, he is guilty on all. He didn't commit any crime."

He said that "all we have here is possible indiscretion. There is no violation of law."

He urged the jury to "let him put the threads of his life back together. Spare him. He has endured enough."

Testimony during the trial also revealed the existence of "secret accounts" which both the UNM football and basketball programs kept at a travel agency to provide airfare for players, without detection by the NCAA. The defense contended much of the money that went into the fund came from Ellenberger, without reimbursement from the school.

But Assistant Attorney General Stephen Westheimer told the jurors in his closing arguments that Ellenberger was "a confidence man ... a procurer."

McEnroe Always Had Fierce Desire To Win

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

John McEnroe, Sr., and his wife, Kay, knew they had something special on their hands back on Feb. 16, 1959 when an Air Force doctor in Wiesbaden, Germany, lifted the newly born baby boy by his feet and brought forth the breath of life with a few hard thumps on the bottom.

"He was pretty lively then," says the elder McEnroe, a successful attorney from the suburban-like Douglaston area of New York City. "He seems always to have had a natural affinity for sports. He could hit a thrown ball with a bat when he was two."

Kay McEnroe, the attractive, ebullient mother, recalls that her No.1 son was the "firstest" in almost everything he tried. "He talked sooner and walked sooner than most children. He made the top grades in his class. As long as I can remember, he had this fierce desire to win."

John Patrick McEnroe, Jr., is the talk of the tennis world — the youngster with the unruly curls, familiar red headband and low temper fuse whose left-handed brilliance halted Bjorn Borg's streak of five men's championships and 41 consecutive match victories at Wimbledon.

In producing this sensational upset, the 22-year-old shot-making wizard enlarged upon his reputation as the game's bad boy — "Super Brat," "Mac the Strife," "Mac-In-Row," "Prince of Wails," pick your own cliches — while piling up a series of fines for his court tantrums.

He has the whole sports world asking: What makes McEnroe steam? Did he have no discipline as a kid? Was he pampered by his parents? Realizing their son was a rare genius, were the elder John and Kay McEnroe derelict in their obligations to apply a tight rein?

"Absolutely not," insists Kay McEnroe. "We have three boys, John the oldest. They were taught to be considerate and polite. When they weren't, they were punished. John has had his share of paddling.

"We never pushed any of them. We wanted them to grow up to be normal, healthy kids but at the same time individuals. There was never an attempt to put them in a mold."

The mother said young John has been misrepresented by some of the media and misunderstood by the public.

"He is basically very, very shy, a private person," she said. "He is close to a genius. He is a perfectionist. He can't abide by sloth and indifference. In school, he won a medal for high grades. He played basketball, soccer and baseball, besides tennis, and got mad when he thought his teammates weren't going all out.

"When he got his first racket at age of eight, he was beating the 12-and 13-year-olds. Once he fell on a bicycle and broke his left wrist. He didn't tell anybody. He kept playing tennis until one day a bump came up on his arm and X-rays showed a fracture.

"That's John."

John Sr., who was serving the Air Force in Germany when John was born, said his precepts to his boys have always been "try hard, do your best and give it your all."

"That may sound corny," he added, "but we've always impressed upon the kids to stand up for their rights.

"I am not in total agreement with everything that happens in public and I've often told John that he sometimes overreacts on line calls, although he's generally right. Yet I think it absurd the way the All-England Club escalates to the level it does in the treatment of such instances."

Mrs. McEnroe says, while she gets uncomfortable when John launches into one of his tantrums, she doesn't think the punishment fits the crime.

"I am outraged by the actions of the All-England Club," she said. "I get the feeling that the powers are trying to break the back of this 'little upstart from the States.' "John has received tons of letters, much of it from British fans. They urge him to please not give in to the officials who are out to get him."

McEnroes' parents accuse the All-England Club and a segment of the British press of engaging in a personal vendetta against the talented new Wimbledon champion.

"I am outraged by it," the mother said.

She related that last year photographers slipped into John's room and jumped out of the closets at him.

Allison Holds NASCAR Lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Allison continues to lead NASCAR's Winston Cup National point standings, according to statistics released by the racing sanctioning body Monday.

Allison saw his commanding lead cut 50 points after Saturday's Firecracker 400 at Daytona International Speedway. But his 2,596 points still place him far ahead of Darrell Waltrip's 2,390.

Harry Gant is third with 2,305, followed by Ricky Rudd, 2,260, and defending Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt, 2,246.

Richard Petty is sixth with 2,206 and rounding out the top ten are Jod Ridley, 2,172; Terry Labonte, 2,124; Benny Parsons, 1,953, and Buddy Arrington, 1,939.

Allison also is the leading money winner on the circuit with $363,670. Petty is second with $245,090, followed by Waltrip, $241,835; Earnhardt, $230,545; Rudd, $220,810; Parsons, $161,105; Labonte, $148,325; Gant, $140,625; Ridley, $139,950, and Cale Yarborough, $120,370.

The NASCAR Winston Cup National point standings issued Monday:

Bobby Allison, 2,596
Darrell Waltrip's, 2,390
Harry Gant, 2,305
Ricky Rudd, 2,260
Dale Earnhardt, 2,246
Richard Petty, 2,206
Jody Ridley, 2,172
Terry Labonte, 2,124
Benny Parsons, 1,953
Buddy Arrington, 1,939

Pair Take Putt Match

Junior Knox and David Manning defeated Johnny Carrow and Mike Breown in a sudden-death playoff to win the Monday Night Best-Ball Tournament at the Greenville Putt Putt Golf Course.

Trailing by five strokes after one round, Knox and Manning sliced the lead to three strokes after two rounds before catching Carrow and Brown in the final round. Both teams tied with 26 under par 82's.

Knox aced the first hold of the playoff to end the tie.

Third place went to Robert Beacham and Danny Pollard after they defeated Lavern Mayo and Henry Beacham in a playoff. Both teams had tied at 85.

Don Lewis and Bobby Beacham finished fifth with an 87.

'The Fan': Acting Compensates

"The Fan," playing through Thursday at the Buccaneer Movies is a suspense-thriller showcase for the talents of screen and stage Lauren Bacall, who is aging beautifully, and for Michael Biehn, a 23-year baby-face actor. All down the line, acting talent in this film compensates for some disappointing turns in the story line.

The atmosphere of impending danger is established from the beginning, in superb scenes with only the fingertips of Douglas Breen, the fan, showing, as he types and reads aloud a fan letter to his idol, stage star Sally Ross. The close-up action of the keys are like flying hatchets ripping into the paper. The cluttered room gives keen insights into the mind of a pyschotic person.

The build-up of suspense is slow, almost leisurely; yet there's a tauntness realized in minor cues that creates a pattern like a jig-saw puzzle. Piece by piece, they fall into place as a fascinating picture begins to take shape.

Maureen Stapleton as Belle Goldman, the woman of all trades for the busy star, effectively heightens the sense of suspense as she becomes increasingly concerned about the threatening tone of the fan's letters. She is unable to communicate her concern and frustration to Miss Ross, involved as she is to the point of exhaustion in the demanding life of the theater.

It is only when the secretary is attacked in a subway and slashed with a razor that Miss Ross begins seriously to heed the danger she may be in.

From this point on, the film loses much of its special quality. The satisfying, marvelously detailed scheming of a demented mind is sacrificed for a commonplace trail of victims. What had been an tapestry of reality-unreality woven from haunting fantasies and the clever scheming of a confused mind becomes another standard filmic bloodbath. The first two victims are only wounded. The others are brutally murdered.

The full extent of the fan's diabolical cleverness is shown in a scene where he goes to a gay bar, lures a youth to his death, sets the body afire and leaves a note making it appear that heartbroken in his efforts to gain access to the star, he has chosen a dramatic suicide.

This development, naturally, leads all concerned to think the murderer has turned his murderous passion on himself in a final act of destruction — an assumption that has fatal consequences for two more victims before the fan and his object of misguided love finally come face to face.

James Garner as Miss Ross's divorced husband who comes to her aid, and Hector Elizondo as the detective assigned to guard Miss Ross give strength to the film in first rate performances.

Rehearsal and stage performance scenes of the musical Miss Ross is appearing in while the run of murders are in progress are too hastily presented — what little there is is far too good to have been given such cursory treatment.

If the concept of the unusual and intelligent cat and mouse game of the first part of "The Fan" had been maintained, this could have been a totally exhilirating film. As it is, it is a promise ruined by a cop-out of turning to violence.

A Premature Twitty Healing

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The 1½ month-old granddaughter of country music singer Conway Twitty, born seven weeks prematurely on May 22, is recovering well after stomach surgery, her father says.

Bruce Harris, father of Angela Harris, said Monday that his daughter has "come along just fine" after surgery at Vanderbilt Hospital to repair a weakness in the muscle at the top of her stomach.

The baby, who weighed 4 pounds, 5½ ounces at birth, may be allowed to go home in "another week or so," Harris said.

The baby's mother, Kathy Twitty Harris, 23, is Twitty's daughter. The family moved recently from Texas to suburban Hendersonville to be close to Vanderbilt.

Atomic Gold

Until 40 years ago, its chief use was to color glassware and false teeth. Today uranium, a key ingredient for nuclear bombs and reactors, has become a source of international tension. Uranium is the only atomic fuel found naturally on Earth. In the late 1930s, scientists discovered that a rare type of uranium, U-235, could split apart and release energy. This discovery made uranium almost as valuable as gold. Although uranium ore is more plentiful than gold, only about 5 pounds of it are extracted from every ton mined. And only about 1 percent of that uranium is U-235. Today some countries use breeder reactors to change non-useable uranium into plutonium, which also can be used as a nuclear fuel.

DO YOU KNOW — What federal agency controls uranium production in the U.S.?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — The French Revolution overthrew King Louis XVI.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — COMIC TOLD MAD TALE ON TELETHON HOT LINE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: N equals F

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Ten of ◇.

Defense is the soul of bridge. Modesty prevents us from mentioning that the East hand was held by one of the writers of this column who, perhaps, is better known for his exploits on the silver screen than the green baize.

The hand occurred during a rubber bridge game in England, which accounts for why East was using a weak no trump. South made a very risky overcall, although his good suit did offer a measure of protection, and North judged that his hand was worth a raise to game.

West led the top of his diamond sequence. Declarer played low from dummy and East won the king. It was obvious that West was going to provide little toward the defensive effort. In addition to the diamond trick, East could see two club tricks. Since trumps were certainly not going to yield a trick, the setting trick would have to be developed in spades.

So at trick two East smartly shifted to his low spade. He was hoping that his partner held the ten, but even the nine might be enough if declarer held the ten and did not realize the necessity of playing it. Declarer won the queen, drew trumps and led the queen of clubs, but East was one step ahead of declarer. He won the k of clubs and continued with the king of spades to force out the ace. When he regained the lead with the ace of clubs, he was able to cash the jack of spades for down one.

This was fine defense by any standards. But did you notice that declarer made a tiny error which permitted this defense? Observe what would have happened had declarer won the ace of diamonds at trick one and then tackled clubs immediately.

Now it would have been declarer who was a tempo ahead in establishing his suit. By the time East had his spade trick established, declarer would already have the clubs set up and he would be able to take two spade sluffs on the good clubs. So the defenders would have to be satisfied with two club tricks and a diamond, and the topic of this column would have been declarer's careful play rather than East's sparkling defense.

Rose High Class Has Reunion

The graduating class of 1961 of Junius H. Rose High School gathered for its 20-year reunion over the Fourth of July weekend. Some 114 classmembers, faculty, and guests met at the Holiday Inn for a prime rib dinner Saturday night.

The Rev. William St. Claire Wade, class president, gave the welcome and the invocation. Eddie Harrington served as master of ceremonies for the evening. Mrs. Kemp House Baldwin, Mrs. Nell C. Everette, Mrs. Christine Tripp and Mr. and Mrs. Odell Welborn, former faculty members, were special guests. They were remembered with corsages of silk flowers.

Various class members were recognized during the evening. Lois Sermons Edgerton traveled the furthest to the reunion, having come from Los Angeles.

On Sunday, class members and their families gathered at the river home of Mr. and Mrs. Tyson Bilbro at Rest Haven on the Pamlico River below Bath for a family picnic and a day of swimming and boating.

Class members who planned the reunion were Betsy Bryant Allen, Alice Cannon Moore, Betty Carawan Scoopmire, Julie Dodson Surles, Rita Carloyn Griffith, Lynda Hunning Harrington, Jean Trahey Maner and Ann Pollard Whitehurst.

Cardinal's Successor

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II has named Bishop Jozef Glemp as the new archbishop of Warsaw and Gniezno, succeeding the late Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, the Vatican announced today.

The appointment makes Glemp the new primate of Poland, whose title comes with the nomination to the see. Glemp, 52, was bishop of Warmia.

Wyszynski died of cancer May 28 at the age of 79 after leading the church in Poland for 33 years and seeing his protege become pope. Wyszynski was also an important counselor to the founders of the independent trade union Solidarity, ofter counseling moderation in the union's confrontation with the Communist government.

Glemp visited Rome last week and led a group of Poles to St. Peter's Square on Sunday to listen to a taped message from the pope, who is in the hospital recovering from complications following the attempt on his life May 13.

In the taped broadcast, the pope delivered a special greeting to the group in Polish, his native tongue.

Glemp was born Dec. 18, 1928, in Inowroclaw, near Gniezno. He was ordained a priest in 1956 and elevated to bishop two years ago.

His diocese of Warmia is just south of Czestochowa, Poland's shrine city, which Pope John Paul visited during the return to his homeland in 1979.

Urged Follow Family Role

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Cynthia Baker, daughter of Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, is being urged to follow family tradition and run for Congress, according to published reports.

Both Gov. Lamar Alexander and Charles Overby, state chairman of the Republican Party, have talked to Miss Baker, 26, about running for Congress in 1982 in the new 4th District seat, the Nashville Banner said in today's editions.

"She's very interested in the idea," Overby told the Banner. "She said it is too early for her to make a final decision on this, but she also said the idea appealed to her a great deal."

Peron Widow Finally Freed

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Former President Isabel Peron, who succeeded the legendary Evita as Juan Peron's wife but could not replace her in the hearts of the Argentine masses, has been freed after five years and three months of house arrest. She is returning to Spain, where she and Peron lived in exile for 13 years.

Federal Judge Pedro Narvaiz ordered the release of the 50-year-old ex-president on Monday "in accord with the procedural norms applicable in her situation." She was eligible for parole because she had served more than two-thirds of her sentences.

"She is going to take a rest outside the country, ... somewhere along the coast of Spain," said Angel Robledo, one of her lawyers.

Robledo said she would leave for Europe in two or three days. Pilar Franco, a sister of the late Spanish dictator, Generalissimo Francisco Franco, arrived in Argentina last week and said she had come "to take Isabel to Spain."

Mrs. Peron, who was ousted and arrested in a military coup March 24, 1976, is still the titular head of the Peronist Justicialist Party, Argentina's largest political party. But normal political activity is banned by the military government, and she is barred from holding public office or engaging in political activity for the rest of her life. Robledo said she would not resume active leadership of the party.

Her husband, Juan D. Peron, was an army general who was elected president in 1946 after a military coup and with the help and guidance of his dynamic blonde wife, Eva Duarte, made himself the country's dictator. Adored by the masses because of the social welfare programs she sponsored, she was a virtual co-president until her death of cancer in 1952 at the age of 33, but the military in 1951 denied her the vice presidency which was her successor's stepping stone to the presidency two decades later.

Peron was overthrown in 1955 and fled to Panama, where he met Isabel Martinez, an Argentine night club dancer. She became his secretary, accompanied him to Spain in 1960 and married him the next year. Before his return from exile in 1973, she made several trips to Argentina to help keep his millions of followers faithful to him.

Reuters Office In Iran Closed

LONDON (AP) — The Tehran bureau of the British news agency Reuters Ltd. has been closed indefinitely for allegedly conspiring against the Iranian revolution, Tehran Radio said today in a broadcast monitored here.

"The British Press office of Reuters in Tehran, which has been a center of conspiracy against the Islamic revolution of Iran, has been closed down," the broadcast said. It did not elaborate.

FARM EXPORT

STONLEIGH, England (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, praising the efficiency of British farmers, said Monday that Britain is now exporting brussels sprouts to Brussels.

Bicycle Trip Is Sponsored

The Tar River Bicycle Club will sponsor a day trip Saturday to the Falkland State Access Park on the Tar River.

The trip will be about 20 miles round trip. Families and individuals are welcome to join the group, with each persons being asked to bring a light lunch. Tom Marsh and George Moye will be the group's shepherds. The tour will start at the Bicycle Post, corner of Cotanche Street and Reade Circle at 9 a.m. For more information, call the Bicycle Shop, 757-3616.

Easy Confirmation Of O'Connor Is Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — With praise from both ends of the political spectrum, Sandra D. O'Connor seems headed for easy Senate confirmation to take "her place in history" as the first woman ever on the U.S. Supreme Court.

From the moment President Reagan's choice of the 51-year-old Arizona appeals judge was announced Tuesday, senators applauded her legal credentials as "brilliant" and "eminently well qualified" and hailed Reagan's fulfillment of a campaign pledge to appoint a woman justice.

Republican leaders promised to heed Reagan's request for swift confirmation "so that as soon as possible she may take her seat on the court, and her place in history." It may be September, however, before hearings begin.

Public opposition came from the fundamentalist group Moral Majority and the National Right to Life Committee, both normally Reagan allies, which bitterly questioned Mrs. O'Connor's record on abortion and vowed to try to defeat the nomination.

But Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, a leading Republican conservative, said anyone who wants to fight Mrs. O'Connor's confirmation will have to fight him.

At a news conference in Phoenix, Mrs. O'Connor declined to answer questions on abortion and other substantive issues pending the confirmation process.

But deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said she is truly against abortion, and Reagan said he was "completely satisfied" on the matter.

Mrs. O'Connor was the only candidate whom Reagan interviewed personally to replace Potter Stewart, who retired last Friday, and become the 102nd justice in the Supreme Court's 191-year history. "One of the reasons Reagan was attracted to her was when he looked at the total woman," said deputy White House chief of staff Michael K. Deaver. "She had not been an activist on either side. She had taken a moderate position."

Congressional sources, however, said Sen. John East, R-N.C., who is leading the fight for anti-abortion legislation that may ultimately be tested on constitutional grounds before the Supreme Court, would assail Mrs. O'Connor's votes on the issue in the Arizona Legislature.

East was considering announcing his opposition to the nomination, perhaps today.

The prevailing sentiment in the Senate, though, was positive.

Praise came from senators as divergent in their outlook as Democrats Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Joseph Biden of Delaware, Alan Cranston of California and Dennis DeConcini of Arizona and Republicans Orrin Hatch of Utah, Goldwater and Strom Thurmond of South Carolina.

Goldwater lashed out at critics of Mrs. O'Connor's positions on abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment.

"I don't buy this idea that a justice of the Supreme Court has to stand for this, that or the other thing," he said. "And I'm getting a little tired of people in this country raising hell because they don't happen to subscribe to every thought that person has."

He added: "If it's going to take a fight, they're going to find old Goldy fighting like hell."

Kennedy said he was "extremely pleased," and Hatch, a noted opponent of legalized abortions, said he was "elated" that a woman was chosen.

Thurmond, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee which will consider the nomination before it goes to the full Senate, said: "I will do everything I can to help."

Biden, senior Democrat on the committee, said Mrs. O'Connor "seems to be eminently well qualified for the position."

Cranston, the Senate's No. 2 Democrat, called her "a brilliant legal scholar with considerable legal experience" and said Reagan had taken a "major step in the battle to eliminate sex discrimination."

In his nationally broadcast announcement of "the most awesome appointment" a president can make, Reagan said Mrs. O'Connor was not selected just because she is a woman. He called her "a person for all seasons."

Tuesday night, however, in a speech to a Republican fund-raising dinner in Chicago, Reagan said that as soon as Stewart told the White House about his retirement plans in March, "we began a search for a highly qualified woman who would serve this nation well."

One source close to the White House had said earlier that Reagan was determined to find "another Rehnquist" — a solid conservative young enough to serve for two decades or more. In Mrs. O'Connor, he found a jurist who not only is 5 years younger than 56-year-old Justice William H. Rehnquist, but who was his classmate and fellow editor of the Stanford Law Review. Rehnquist, too, is an Arizonan.

Mobs Again Rampage

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Britain had its fifth successive night of street violence, with a third city affected, as 500 youths rampaged through a North London suburb and rioters set fires to stores and stoned fire engines in Manchester.

The mob in the Wood Green district of London "went absolutely mad" Tuesday night, said cafe owner Saul Liasi. "It was not racial, just pure hooliganism. Undoubtedly, they want excitement and they want to destroy things — they are not short of money."

"All it is, we've been taking stick from the police — now we're giving it back," a 14-year-old West Indian youth who would not give his name told a reporter for Independent Radio News.

"I've been arrested every week, man. Stop, search, stop, search. Now I'm getting my own back. I don't care, I don't care about anything. I threw a couple of bricks, hit a couple of policemen. Just getting my revenge back."

Jeff Crawford, a West Indian community relations officer in the area, said most of the mob was black, but a "significant" number of young whites took part, "white lads and a number of Cypriots."

Scotland Yard reported 50 youths were arrested and 40 shops were broken into before the violence subsided at 1 a.m. today. The London Ambulance Service said it took four people to a hospital, including a man with a slashed throat and another man with a stab wound. No police injuries were reported.

WATER DAMAGE — A bystander, at right, tests the loose ground at the edge of a 1,000-foot long gorge caused by the release of millions of gallons of water from an underground reservoir. Newark water officials believe the valve, at center, was tampered with, causing the water loss and creating a water supply emergency in Newark. (AP Laserphoto)

Vandals Open Pipeline Valve; Big Thirst Threatening City

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — City residents have been ordered to use as little water as possible after vandals spun open pipeline valves, loosing a cascade up to 100 million gallons that ruptured mains and cut off the city's principal source of water.

Mayor Kenneth Gibson declared a state of emergency, prohibiting all non-essential uses of water, including car-washing and lawn-watering. The action came as the as city faced its biggest heatwave of the summer.

Just a few months ago, Newark and most northern New Jersey cities were under strict rationing imposed by the governor because of a drought that began last year and brought reservoirs to perilously low levels.

A wet spring eased the danger, and the restrictions that threatened to close major industries and recreation spots were lifted. But now Newark must "juggle supplies around so we can keep in service," said city civil engineer Jim Conley.

"It was a major catastrophe," Conley said.

The city's backup reservoir has a nine-day supply, Conley said, and it is hoped that neighboring communities can help supply Newark with water until the damage can be repaired. City spokesman Doug Eldridge said that would take four to six weeks.

The Pequannock Townhsip watershed, where the break occurred, supplies 50 million of the 100 million gallons that the 330,000 people of Newark use each day.

Vandals apparently got to the valves late Monday or early Tuesday by breaking into a concrete blockhouse, Eldridge said. The valves were reached through a manhole and opened, causing an estimated 50 million to 100 millions gallons of water to spill from the twin pipelines that stretch 28 miles to the city, Conley said.

Hopeful Word From HUD On Housing Units

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

For the first time since the early 1970s, the Housing Authority has received favorable word from the Department of Housing and Urban Development on a package of new conventional housing units for Greenville.

Joe Laney, the Authority's executive director, reported Tuesday night that HUD has given what amounts to approval of the local pre-application for 40 units of low-rent family housing and has asked the Authority to submit a formal application for the units.

Greenville has not received any new conventional housing allocations since early in 1970 when HUD authorized the Hopkins Park units.

Laney reported at the April meeting that the city's Community Development staff has been asked to look at the possibility of using sites already owned by the city in the West Meadowbrook area for the new units.

The director reported that the 40-unit package involves anticipated total development costs of $1,871,246, including construction, administration, land acquisition, relocation and other related project matters.

Laney said the timing of the HUD approval is surprising, especially in view of the current administration's emphasis on reduced expenditures and budget cuts.

Housing commissioners approved a resolution last night authorizing the execution of an amendment to the annual contributions contract to include funds necessary for the development of the 40 units.

Laney also pointed out that the Authority never received word from HUD regarding an application submitted back in May of 1977 for 50 units of conventional housing. At that time, the Authority and City Council approved an amendment to the cooperation agreement increasing the number of units authorized here to 715 from 665. Laney said that since HUD never responded to the application, the Authority was not aware that HUD did not like the amendment format used here.

He said that due to a legal technicality and to clear matters in order to receive the 40 new units, HUD has asked that the

County School Board Is Waiting On Decision Of Available Money

By MARY SCHULKEN

Refusing to "give guidance without knowing just what we have," the Pitt County Board of Education voted not to discuss the matter of central office staff cuts until the county commissioners divy the funds.

"I just don't see how we can give you guidance," board member Jack Edwards told superintendent Ott Alford, who asked the board for its recommendation should cuts be necessary, "without knowing exactly what we have to work with."

The cuts in question would eliminate assistant superintendent positions with the county, and said Alford, "These positions are essential in providing the best education possible in our schools.

"It all boils down to whether or not our boys and girls are going to be providing the best or average program which is funded by the general assembly," he added.

The board also discussed at their regular meeting Tuesday the final bid for the Ayden Middle project — an amount totaling $2,616,181.32. Individual bids include: general contractor, Farrior & Son, $1,712,140; plumbing, Stuart Shinn, $245,579; heating and air conditioning, Kinston Plumbing and Heating, $354,394; electrical work, Watson Electrical, $226,450.

According to associate superintendent Thomas Craft, the board needs approximately $504,770 (this figure includes $400,000 in recommended capitol outlay funds) to let the contract. The $504,770 does not include any fees or contingency.

Assistant superintendent Leck Keeter reported to the board on what he termed "very tentatve position allotments" for the next school year. "In order to give our principals some type of guidelines I feel compelled to review what now is merely the tentative number of positions," said Keeter.

The assistant superintendent said he had been told by Raleigh that Pitt County would get at least 389 teaching positions for 1981-82, the same number as in 1980-81.

Positions will be shifted among the schools as follows: A.G. Cox, plus two positions; Ayden-Grifton, minus two positions; Belvoir, plus one; Bethel, minus one; Conley, plus one; Falkland, minus one; Farmville Middle, minus two; Farmville Central, minus one; Grifton, minus one; Pactolus, minus one. All other schools will retain the same number of

Commissioners Make Changes

By STUART SAVAGE

Don Davenport, administrative assistant to Pitt County Manager Reginald Gray, was named assistant county manager and clerk to the Board of Commissioners yesterday.

A Creswell native and N.C. State University graduate, Davenport has been administrative assistant to Gray since January 1979. As clerk to the board, he replaces county finance officer Margaret Roberts who has served in that capacity for $10\frac{1}{2}$ years.

Commissioners, after naming Davenport assistant county manager, instructed him to act as county planner with the assistance of county engineer C. A. Holiday, until development in the county picks up.

The board, earlier in the meeting, voted to eliminate the county planner position effective August 31, until such time as development in the county picks up enough to justify the position. Craig Smith has been as county planner since July, 1979.

In other business yesterday commissioners named a committee to work with the Fire Commission and make recommendations on a request by the Sharp Point Fire Department for county financial support.

Members of the Sharp Point department met with the board yesterday to ask for county funding.

Commissioners also accepted a low bid from Carolina Office Equipment Co. for office supplies for the coming year. The Carolina bid totaled $6,526.15

The board adopted a resolution asking the North Carolina General Assembly to pass legislation which would allow pawn shops to operate outside municipal limits in Pitt County, and adopted resolutions approving the issuance of industrial revenue bonds for A & F Realty and Leasing Co. and Hexagon-Honeycomb Corp.

Commissioners scheduled a meeting for 2 p.m. today to continue work on the 1981-82 budget.

BRAILLE MENUS?

Greenville has become a medical and educational center of some renown and therefore now has more persons with all kinds of handicaps than it once did. I wonder if restauranteurs realize now much their blind customers would appreciate braille menus and if there's a relatively inexpensive way the restaurants can obtain these. H.D.

Hotline contacted the N.C. Division of Services for the Blind and spoke to Mack Worley. He said interested restaurant owners could contact him at the agency, 756-5851, and he could arrange for the menus to be printed.

The process would involve having a master copy made at the Raleigh office from which a thermal copy could be made. The thermal copy would be made here in Greenville, according to Worley. He said one menu would run about four pages in Braille with each page costing 8 cents.

An alternative to the Greenville service is the Raleigh office where interested parties may contact Clay Days, certified Braillist, 737-9700. Worley also said some members of his staff use Braille and could possibly make copies.

Farmville Board Sounds Out Opinion At Hearing

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Commissioners held a public hearing last night on the town's applying for second-year Community Development Block Grant funds.

Citizens voiced their opinions on the matter, mostly in positive tones. Several said they are pleased with the Hospitality Hut now located in the southside area near the CD impact area and hope it will be retained.

One citizen expressed the view that more needs to be done for the north side of town and that, instead of building a new recreation building, the old gymnasium in the 200 block of North Main Street should be restored and used.

In response, Mayor Linwood Mercer made it clear that the the three-year CD plan was long ago made and that such midstream changes could not be made while using already designated federal funds.

Included in the second-year plan are the rehabilitation of 63 dwelling units; demolition of two structures, acquisition of two parcels of land, relocation of two families, paving of 275 feet of storm drain, acquisition of property for a community center, and design and initial construction of a community center.

The site for the community center has not be chosen, CD planner John Downs said.

Following considerable discussion, the commissioners voted to authorize the application.

The board approved the town's handling of all phases of the Rehabilitation Housing Loan Program for the town. This program is to be used for the financing of the rehab of certain residential properties within the C.D. target area. There had been previous discussion about farming out this phase of the program to an interested lender in the community.

Action was deferred on how much the town will pay on the brick paving of the sidewalk adjacent to the Summit (old Ford dealership) Building along Grimmersburg Street. The building owner, R.E. Deans, had the work done at the cost of $3,680.15 and now has asked the town to reimburse him. Town

FOCUS

Extraordinary Aircraft

The proposed sale of this "super plane" to Saudi Arabia has created a furor in Congress. An AWACS, the world's most advanced reconnaissance plane, can provide radar surveillance of an area 250-350 miles in radius. Its computers, which track up to 400 aircraft at once, could make it a decisive factor in battle. In one test, the $131 million plane monitored all aircraft flying between Paris and Warsaw. Many people concerned about Israel's security oppose the sale because an AWACS, well within Saudi territory, could monitor Israeli aircraft and defense installations. The President is scheduled to submit the proposal for the sale today. Congress may veto it within 30 days after it is proposed.

DO YOU KNOW — What does the acronym AWACS stand for?

New Approach In Buyer-Lure

SEATTLE (AP) — Remember that used-car dealer on your block who tried to lure customers by painting bait words on the windshields of his wares such as "Clean," "Just Painted" and "Like New?"

Well, in Seattle a few businesses have tried a different approach, with unknown motives and results, by putting their names on the line.

The Seattle Times found these:

—Reasonably Honest Dave's, an appliance dealer.

—Close Enough Enterprises, a building contractor.

—The Daily Habit, an espresso vendor.

—Mad Dog Builders, another contractor.

And yes, an auto dealer: Jesse James Inc.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

The threat that a particular distribution might exist can be as dangerous as the fact that it does exist! East took advantage of this phenomenon to bring off a sparkling defense.

The auction was routine. West tried to exploit the favorable vulnerability when he overcalled without too much in the way of high cards. North had ample values for a jump raise of his partner's suit and South had more than enough to continue on to game.

West led the king of spades, and when dummy appeared, the defensive prospects seemed rather bleak. Declarer surely held the ace-jack of hearts, so it seemed that the most the defenders could hope for were two spade tricks and a club. However, East found a diabolical way to take advantage of the auction and the fact that declarer would have no time to find out how the cards lay. Thus, an "impregnable" contract was headed for defeat.

After dummy followed to the spade lead, East overtook the king with the ace and returned the two, trying for all the world to look like a man who started out with only two spades. West went along with the deception by winning the second trick with the queen of spades and continuing the jack.

Consider declarer's plight. West did not have much in the way of high cards, so it was quite possible, even likely, that he had started out with six spades. What was more, the early defense had strengthened that possibility. If that were the case, to ruff the third spade with one of dummy's low trumps would court defeat by way of an overruff.

Considering that a 4-0 trump break was far less likely than a 6-2 spade division and that the club finesse might succeed, declarer made the reasonable play of ruffing the third spade with the queen of trumps. When East followed to this trick, declarer began to suspect foul play. West's failure to follow to the first heart confirmed declarer's fears, and when East turned up with the king of clubs, the contract was down one.

Going Home

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Twelve hundred Cuban teachers invited here by the revolutionary regime that ousted dictator Gen. Anastasia Somoza are going home after two years.

"While this country has received from the United States only invasions to rob and kill our people in the past, Cuba sent an invasion of teachers to spread literacy and build schools," said Daniel Ortega Salvedra, coordinator of the three-man ruling junta that took power in 1979.

Government leaders gave a farewell party for the Cubans. It was not clear if 800 Cubans vacationing at home would return.

Pro-Western observers here said the Cubans were leaving because they caused problems among Nicaraguans who oppose the country's close ties with Communist nations.

The United States halted millions of dollars in aid to this country after saying it found Nicaraguan complicity in shipping arms to El Salvador guerrillas.

March One Plans Store On E. Fifth

Richard E. Warren Sr., vice president and general manager of the Retail Division of March One Inc. of Fremont, announced that a lease has been signed for the company to open a factory outlet facility here.

Warren said March One, which manufactures jeans, will take over the space previously occupied by the Tandy Leather Store at 116 E. Fifth Street.

Grand opening activities are scheduled for Thursday, July 9, according to Warren, who said the store will sell jeans for the family and jean-type tops at factory outlet prices.

The company spokesman said that the Greenville store will among several March One factory facilities to be located in the state in the coming year. Already open are two company stores, located in Rocky Mount and Mount Olive.

March One, with corporate offices in Fremont, has three manufacturing plants in North Carolina.

Fountain Funds Are Approved

First District Congressman Walter Jones announced approval by the Environmental Protection Agency of additional grant funds to the Town of Fountain in the amount of $57,885.

Jones said the grant money will provide funding for Step Three increase based on bids received relative to wastewater treatment facilities.

Wedding Vows Said In Evening Ceremony

AYDEN — The Zion Chapel Free Will Baptist Church here was the scene of the wedding of Julia LaVern Williams and the Rev. Julius Adam Hunter Saturday at 5 p.m. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. L. Wilson of Ayden, the bride's pastor, and Bishop Stephen Jones of Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Williams of Ayden. Mr. and Mrs. Owen Hunter of Morrisville are parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her cousin, the Rev. James Vance of Ayden, the bride chose a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and chantilly lace. The fitted organza bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline and full length puff sleeves. Chantilly lace etched with seed pearls outlined the neckline, adorned the bodice and trimmed the sleeves. The tiered skirt was of of chantilly lace. She wore a cathedral length layered mantilla of bridal illusion bordered with chantilly lace attached to a lace caplet etched with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations with white streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a romance blue gown with an attached chiffon caplet. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of pink chiffon with a chiffon bow at the neckline.

The honor attendant was Mrs. Margaret Anderson and the maid of honor was Brenda Morris, both of Grifton. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Cardell Chambers of Morrisville, sister of the bridegroom, Ms. Grossie Smith of Winterville, Ms. Audrey Burnett of Wake Forest and Ms. Janet Burney of Washington, D. C. They each wore a crystal rose formal length gown of tinesta polyester styled with a Grecian cross bodice with a pleated skirt. Sheer satin bordered the caplet. The honor attendants carried bouquets of pink carnations with pink and white streamers. Bridesmaids carried bouquets of pink carnations with pink streamers.

A program of wedding music was presented by Rodger Ingram, organist and soloists, Ruby Cannon of Ayden, Carol Thomas of Winston-Salem and Darlene Hunter of Morrisville, niece of the bridegroom.

James Huntley of Kannapolis was best man and groomsmen included Ernest Adams of Greenville, Jerry Hunter, Donald Taylor and Kenneth Jones, all of Morrisville, Ernest Hall of Winston-Salem and Donald Anderson of Grifton.

Betty Denise Allen was flower girl and wore a formal gown of white eyelet and carried a wicker basket filled with red rose petals. Chad Deveaux of Greenville was ring bearer and carried a white satin ring pillow. Penny Vance, cousin of the bride, was train bearer and wore a pink and white dotted swiss dress and wore pink and white carnations in her hair.

After the ceremony, the bride's parents and family entertained at a reception in the church fellowshipl hall. Mrs. Fannie Pritchard welcomed guests and Mrs. Mary King presided at the register.

MRS. JULIUS ADAM HUNTER

Mrs. Marion Smith, Miss Gloria Dixon and Miss Ernestine Wilson registered wedding gifts.

Wedding cake was served by Mrs. Pauline Anderson. Mrs. Martha Westbrook and Miss Victoria Westbrook poured punch. The refreshment table was accented with flowers in the bride's colors.

Penny Vance distributed scrolls.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Hattie Hooks and Mrs. Ava Mae Brown. Mrs. Josephine Reaves and Mrs. Leola Dixon said good-byes.

An after-rehearsal dinner was held in the fellowship hall of the church Friday and was given by friends of the bridal couple. Hostesses were Mrs. Eula Younger and Mrs. Virginia Rowe of Ayden. An informal party followed at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. James R. Payton of Ayden given by Miss Hilda Payton and Mrs. Diane Rountree.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of Winston-Salem State Universityh and he is employed as a teacher.

The wedding was directed by Ms. Elnora Vines of Greenville, Mrs. Martha Moore of Kinston and Ms. Lucy M. Stewart of Ayden.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Dear Abby

Let Them Wait For Grand Tour

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: What do you do about people who are invited to your home for the first time, rave about how beautiful the room in which they are being entertained is, then ask to have a "grand tour" of the rest of the house?

Sometimes I don't even have time to make the beds because I work outside the home. (I'm lucky to get the living room area cleaned up in time for company, let alone the bedrooms and baths.)

This is very embarrassing for me, Abby. I could never do this to someone else. But what should I do when this happens to me?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: There are two solutions. Anticipate the request for a grand tour and 1) have the place reasonably picked up to minimize the embarrassment; 2) counter emphatically with, "Sorry, another time; the other rooms aren't ready for the grand tour just yet."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Why would a man check up on his wife to be sure he knows exactly where she is every minute? Do you think he suspects that she's playing around?

CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Not necessarily. Maybe he just wants to know where she is while he's playing around.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 39 years to a man who thinks he knows everything. Please settle this. How much energy is consumed when an electric light is left on for 15 or 20 minutes, compared to turning it off and then turning it back on again?

I have always turned the lights off when leaving a room, even though I know I will be turning them back on in 15 minutes or so. My husband insists that energy-wise, I'd be ahead just to leave the lights on. He says turning them off and on wastes more energy than leaving them on. Who is right?

ME IN LINDEN, N. J.

DEAR ME: You are. The energy used in switching a light off and then on again is so insignificant that it hardly matters. But there are just so many hours' life in an electric bulb, so you would be ahead to turn off the lights when you leave the room. (Now can somebody tell me why light bulbs don't last anywhere near as long as they used to?)

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Just before hunting season last year I read about an organization that is anti-hunting. The day before hunting season starts, members go out and spread "human odors" around so the animals will leave the area.

Do you know of any such organization? I would like to get in touch with it.

B.H. IN HOLLAND, PA.

DEAR B.H.: I've never heard of it, but I'll do some sniffing around. Readers?

COOKING IS FUN

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

A few weeks ago we tried a quick bread made with oats that differed from standard loaves of its kind. We were attracted to the recipe, when it came across our desk, because it called for fresh tomatoes and basil and Parmesan cheese — a good-tasting flavor combination. With tomatoes and basil growing in gardens this summer, this might appeal to some cooks.

Results of our trial? This bread is a rib-sticking loaf that should be sliced thick, slathered with butter and serve hot — as you would spoonbread. Its texture is on the coarse side. It wouldn't be amiss to serve it on a plate with fish or eggs (instead of potatoes) for lunch, a light supper or brunch.

TOMATO OAT BREAD

- 2½ cups all-purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 cup quick-cooking or regular oats
- ¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 tablespoon dried crushed basil leaves or minced fresh basil leaves to taste
- 1 teaspoon dried crushed thyme leaves or minced fresh thyme leaves to taste
- 2 large eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 1-3rd cup oil
- 2 medium tomatoes (about ½ pound), skinned and seeded and diced (¼ inch) to make 1 cup, not packed down.

Oil the bottom of a 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan; line the bottom with wax paper; oil the paper. In a large bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar; stir in the oats, ¼ cup of the Parmesan, the basil and thyme. In a small bowl beat the eggs slightly; add the milk and oil and beat to blend; add to flour mixture with the tomato; stir just until dry ingredients are moistened. Turn into prepared pan. Sprinkle with the remaining 2 tablespoons Parmesan. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 55 to 60 minutes. Let stand on wire rack for about 10 minutes. Loosen edges and turn out. Remove paper. With another rack, turn right side up. Loaf will have a crack. Serve while still warm or reheat, cut rather thick, with lots of butter.

Social Security Fears

Nothing raises fears in the hearts of Americans more so than reports of the failure of the Social Security system.

The system is popular with practically all our citizens. Most have figured heavily on Social Security in their retirement plans, and all feel they have paid for something they should receive.

Yet once again the system's trustees are reporting that the retirement fund will go broke by the end of 1982 and Medicare could be insolvent by the end of the decade unless something is done. That something is either to raise the tax or cut benefits.

Social Security Commissioner Jack A. Svahn says we must lower our expectations of Social Security. He noted the system was never intended to be a full retirement system for Americans.

It is clear that Social Security has severe problems. The resistance to a tax increase is going to be great and the alternative will be easing off on benefits — perhaps later retirement or less attractive benefits for early retirement.

Neither Republicans nor Democrats have the answers at present, but we can be virtually certain that the Social Security system will be maintained. Even if as a last resort the administration and Congress have to turn to general tax monies, they will do what is necessary to keep the system going. The program is a part of everybody's lives and it will not be politically viable to allow it to collect.

Implications Are Vast

Flattery, expression of affection, encouragement, sympathetic words and intense feelings of "empathy" work well in making children grow up; they are applied in the romance department and even pets seem to flourish under the creative force of "sweet talk".

Neglect, expressions of scorn, abuse, harsh words ... all have an opposite effect. We are all aware of that, too.

That awareness has been carried one step further. "Talking to plants" is not new any more. There are people who swear it encouraged growth and richness in development. Amateur experiments tend to support the theory. In fact, some reports are so positive one is tempted to wonder aloud if there has been any intense scientific research in the field; and if not, why not? Stranger and even less practical fields of study have been delved into by human minds.

True, the application of the empathy theory on a people-to-people basis is only sporadically used; but the concept and possible proof of its value among all living things (plants, too) conceivably could do much to change the world. The implications are vast.

Reagan-Style Pressure

President Reagan is given full credit for his budget-cutting victory in the House. He used the telephone to persuade 29 "boll weevil" Democrats to vote for this program, which gave him just enough of a majority to get all the cuts through without debate.

ART BUCHWALD

This was the same tactic Lyndon Johnson used to get his "Great Society" program through. But whereas Lyndon did his by arm-twisting, President Reagan's style was entirely different.

I wasn't listening on the phone when he made the calls, but I heard they went something like this.

"Congressman Lighter, this is Ronnie Reagan. I have a great favor to ask of you."

"Yes, sir, Mr. President."

"I would like you to break from your party and the Democratic leadership, and vote your conscience by passing my budget recommendations without reading them."

"That's pretty tough to do, Mr. President."

"Before you say no, Tom, I would like to tell you a story. When I was playing college football, there was a fellow on the team named George Gipp. We used to call him the Gipper. George had a rare terminal illness, and I used to visit him at the hospital every chance I got.

"One day, when it looked as if the end was near, he said to me, 'Ronnie, some day you're going to be president of the United States and you will be up against it. You're going to want to balance the budget, and cut taxes and bring a new prosperity and hope to the American people. It's going to be tough because with the fat and waste, you will have to cut out some meaningful programs that people need and want. And they're going to fight you in the House of Representatives where they will demand an up and down vote on each cut.'

"Are you still with me, Tom?"

"Yes, sir, Mr. President."

"Gipp continued, 'And because they're Democrats, Ronnie, they're going to want their own budget-cutting package, which will not do the job, and sabotage your well-thought-out economic package. These free spenders, who don't care what happens to the taxpayers' money, will forget the mandate that you won from the American people to cut out all the social programs that destroy incentive and cause inflation that hurts every man, woman and child in America.'"

"Is there much more to this story, Mr. President?"

"Gipp was having a hard time breathing by then, but he told me, 'The day before the vote, the Speaker is going to do some dirty maneuvering to see that all the reforms you worked for will go down the drain. It is then, Ronnie, when you think all is lost, that I want you to do something for me.'

"'Anything, George,' I told him. And he said, 'I want you to call up 29 Democratic congressmen, men who would vote their convictions over their party loyalty, and tell them — and tell them, to win this one for the Gipper.' That's the end of my story, Tom."

"Did George Gipp say anything about sugar?"

"I don't think so."

"Well, in Florida we raise a lot of sugar and we're interested in farm supports for our crop. The world price of sugar is ridiculous, and unless the federal government steps in and keeps the price above 19 and a half cents a pound, I'm going to have a lot of unhappy farmers in my district."

"Come to think of it, Tom, the Gipp did mention sugar subsidies. I think his exact last words were, 'Ronnie, I got one more favor to ask of you. Whatever you do, don't ever let imported sugar drive down the domestic price, so our own farmers can't sell theirs at a profit.'"

"He said that?"

Crossed The Line?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The complete record of the 1981 General Assembly could become the documentation which tells whether or not North Carolina has totally crossed the line which divides a citizen's legislature from a professional one.

One of the prime tests is whether lawmakers hear loudly and clearly the majority of their people back home, or whether they feel so comfortable and secure in office that they can vote as they please without worrying about reaction from their constituents.

Many legislators now confess that how they vote on the issues has nothing to do with winning elections. Money and personality are the key ingredients for a win.

A brief review of some key decisions made this year demonstrate whether legislators, by and large, are voting as the home folk wish, or are swayed more by special interest groups — or their own special interests.

Opposed

Numerous polls showed opposition of 80 percent or more to a higher gasoline tax. North Carolina got a higher tax. There was no public demand for legislators to serve four-year terms. The General Assembly endorsed and is putting to vote four-year terms.

Those who borrow money certainly did not ask for higher interest rates. Those who lend it did, and despite their much smaller numbers the rates will go up sharply, whether the loan is a regular mortgage loan, a small loan, or a credit card transaction.

A broadly based citizen outcry for spending cuts and tax increase resistance is apparent across the state. In spite of that, legislators gave saving and loan institutions a hefty tax break; started the ball rolling on ending the inventory tax; and is pumping nearly $25 million into a specialized research and training effort in hopes of luring the new microelectronics industry to expand in the state.

And in the face of local organizations which have demonstrated their opposition, legislators gave local governments the authority to collect another penny sales tax while keeping the food tax. But will citizens get a chance to vote on this and other tax-raising maneuvers? No. The General Assembly rejected the notion that citizens ought to have the right to petition for an election to determine revenue matters.

These and other matters of record from the 1981 General Assembly help focus attention to how to tell the difference between a professional legislature, and one which is dominated by citizen representatives.

Looking at the record, the key questions are whether the assembly represents special interests more than general; is action speedy and without debate when pleasing special interests; are legislators close to the people, open, accessible and responsive; are legislators tending to encroach more on the powers of the executive?

Profile

Careful study of the record should produce some clues to what the future holds. And some figures may help put it all in prospective.

Fifty years ago a citizen legislator usually served only one term. He spent two or three months in Raleigh as the Legislature met only every other year. About half the membership of each chamber changed every election.

Now, senators average three terms and representatives average better than two. Turnover is only 14 percent in the Senate and 24 percent in the House of Representatives.

Once it was working people in the General Assembly; planters and merchants and lawyers anxious to get back home and make some money.

Now, real estate and insurance interests make up 16 percent of the membership. Lawyers are down to 25 percent instead of half. Educators have 10 percent of the seats. And regardless of title, more than 120 of the 170 lawmakers get their main incme from business interests.

Strength For Today

REMEMBERING AND FORGETTING

Some psychologists believe the capacity of the human brain to be so great that all the experiences of our past are stored in it. Few if any of us can tap a very large percentage of this stored data. But if we could develop our mental powers sufficiently, according to this psychological theory, our brains, like computers, would deliver any desired piece of information for which we pressed the right combination of buttons, so to speak.

As things are, however, most of us forget more than we remember. But what a blessing most of this forgetting really is! Suppose we had to go around burdened with the recollections of all the trivial and dull experiences which have filled most of the days of our past life. We are better off as we are, forgetting the foolish and useless things, and remembering only the useful and important ones.

Our yesterdays should not be tombstones of the past, but foundation stones for the future. — Elisha Douglass

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

There's magic in reaching out. Leo Bruscaglia, educator and lecturer, observes that we have lost the ability to love and, therefore, are dying from loneliness.

But we don't have to be alone to be lonely. We can feel isolated in a room full of people. Sometimes people find themselves in a totally hostile environment, where they aren't relating well to anyone. This hostility can be a strain. It saps people's energy, depresses them, perhaps even causes them real pain.

Each of us has met someone and sensed an instant dislike for that person, nothing we could put our fingers on. It's just intuition. It's best to seek out people we are comfortable with. For we're like plants, we can grow at our best in a comfortable environment. It's within such an environment that we build relationships.

Community can provide the emotional security we need but only if people are reaching out to one another.

Alexander Lowen, author of Pleasure: A Creative Approach to Life says that happiness is derived from pleasure and a total commitment to what one is doing is the basic condition of pleasure."

Unfortunately, most people are so busy unduly reflecting on the past or worrying abut the future that they are missing the sheer joy of living in the present moment. Perhaps finances, loss of loved one, a medical problem, or simply thinking about what we're going to do next is cheating us out of the pleasures that are ours today, if only we could learn to relax and enjoy them.

We're all part of one another in the chain of life. If we think of ourselves as being linked to others, we may care more about what happens to the other person. Caring is a prerequisite to loving.

Psychiatrist Erich Fromm once said, "Love is the only satisfactory answer to the problem of human existence."

Begin Again Challenging

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Reagan may be forced to the mat soon again against Menahem Begin, Israel's apparently re-elected prime minister, whether he likes it or not.

U.S. diplomats expect Begin to keep pushing his nationalistic politics with a possible move of his formal office from West Jerusalem to Arab-occupied East Jerusalem, claimed by Israel ever since the six-day war of 1967. The claim violates international juridicial law and is opposed by the United Nations, the U.S. and other nations.

Diplomatic officials here held their breath during the campaign in trepidation that Begin would promise to make the move to East Jerusalem as an added political inducement for his hard-line backers. Although he avoided the subject, U.S. officials fear he will in fact move his office within six months. Few if any foreign countries would allow their diplomats to see Begin in East Jerusalem, including the U.S. But the move would further exacerbate relations between Reagan and Begin and hurt Reagan's Persian Gulf defense plan with the Arab states.

Meese To The Breach

A blast at the Reagan administration's strategic arms program by the prestigious, right-wing Heritage Foundation brought an immediate telephone call to foundation President Edwin Fuelner from an unhappy Edwin Meese III, the president's counselor and most powerful adviser.

The report published in the June issue of National Security Review, an organ of the foundation, charged that "so far, the new administration has shown few signs of generating new strategic policies upon which programs and spending can be based." The president will soon receive recommendations from Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger on whether to build the B-1 bomber and what to do about the mobile MX missile system approved by President Carter.

When Meese read a story in the Washington Post about the charge against Reagan, he was upset. He immediately called Feulner and asked for a copy of the article, titled: "The Need For a Reagan Strategic Nuclear Policy." Meese oversees Reagan's National Security Council apparatus, headed by Richard V. Allen.

Ottawa Mood: Bad

President Reagan is being warned to expect diplomatic fireworks at the July 19 Western summit in Ottawa when no fewer than four heads of government will be attending their first conference at the top: Ronald Reagan, French President Francois Mitterrand, Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini.

The fireworks will be aimed at Reagan but cloaked, of course, in diplomatic niceties. The Japanese are still smouldering over Reagan's decision to end the anti-Soviet grain embargo without giving them the word in advance; Mitterrand did not like the State Department's relatively strong criticism of communists being invited into his government, and West German Chancelor Helmut Schmidt, now the old pro of the alliance of industrial democracies, wants much faster motion from Reagan on nuclear arms talks with the Russians.

In addition, Reagan will get heat for record-high interest rates in the U.S. and the rising value of the dollar, which is causing economic pain throughout Western Europe. One other likely problem: Reagan will produce a tough, new U.S. position on technological and strategic trade with the Soviet Union he wants U.S. allies to adhere to. They are certain to rebel.

Dan To Don To Dan

A barbed exchange of letters between Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Secretary of the Treasury Don Regan seems to have nailed down a July date for House passage of the tax-cut bill.

Taking strong exception to Regan's warning to the American Stock Exchange on June 22 that Rostenkowski's committee might not report a tax bill to the floor until October, the chairman called that "a misrepresentation." He predicted in his June 23 letter "the largest tax bill in our history" would almost surely pass the House "during the month of July" and got in this dig at Regan: "I hope over time you will learn the details of the process by which we must all work."

Regan's June 24 reply was brief. Rostenkowski's timetable, he said, "ensures that the schedule for having the bill to the President by Aug. 1 can be met." After House passage, the bill goes to conference with the Senate, which will already have passed its version.

Pushing Wayward Democrats

Despite all the cloakroom gossip about punitive action against "boll weevil" conservative Democrats fighting for President Reagan's budget and tax programs, a small panel of Democrats to be named by the liberal Democratic Study Group (DSG) to recommend disciplinary measures will proceed with caution.

One reason is that DSG Chairman Rep. William Brodhead will put shrewd Rep. Phil Burton in charge of the panel. Burton tells intimates that promoting punitive action "when everyone is angry" is the wrong time; better to wait till passions cool. If that view prevails on the Brodhead panel, nothing in the way of quick revenge ie likely.

The most probable resort to punishment in a party long notorious — and celebrated — for diversity is at the start of the next Congress after the 1982 election when committee chairmen are elected and committee assignments made.

Index Itself Is Inflationary

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In a mockery of sound economics, the cost of living index is almost certainly inflationary.

It is universally recognized as marred in concept. Various economists point out that the housing category, which makes up 45 percent of the index, carries far too much weight, at least under current conditions.

In practice, any exaggeration in measuring living costs is immediately compounded by cost-of-living adjustments written into union and pension contracts. And so the index contributes to what it allegedly measures.

And that brings up — before Congress this week — the subject of the cost of living index as it applies to Social Security's 23 million recipients, who benefitted this month from an 11-percent pay raise.

Did the cost of living for Social Security recipients really rise 11 percent? Or was it less?

For the years gone by, the question is academic. But in the future, a more accurate index, it is argued, conceivably could save the Social Security retirement fund, and the government, many billions of dollars.

The more accurate index would be one that (1) more accurately reflects changes in living costs, and (2) is more attuned to the costs of living of retirees, who make up the bulk of recipients.

Critics of the index say a more accurate measure would put housing in its place. Despite today's high prices and interest rates, only a small fraction of homeowners are experiencing them. Most people, especially retirees, bought their homes years ago, when prices and mortgage rates were much lower. Taxes and repairs excepted, major costs are fixed.

Rental costs are another matter. Rents in many areas have risen faster than the overall inflation rate, a result in part of the low level of multi-family housing construction over the past few years.

A more accurate index would adjust for these factors. And it would be further refined to reflect changes not just in the overall cost of living but in the specific living costs of the elderly as a group.

Is the cost of living higher for older people? Or lower? Clearly, many of the factors in the overall cost of living don't apply in the same weight to the elderly.

Does it, for instance, cost more to feed a retiree than to feed a family of growing youngsters? Who must spend more for clothing? How much more does a retiree spend for uninsured medical care?

The purpose of studying the cost of living index, and the adjustments made on the basis of it, are not to reward or deprive any group, but simply to develop and implement a sensible criterion for payments.

Critics have for years asked why the cost-of-living index should be employed as an escalator if it doesn't apply to recipients of Social Security. And, while Congress isn't dealing with the index as such but with the more specific question of equitable Social Security payments, the question applies equally to all cost-of-living escalators.

If the index overstates living costs increases, as economists by the score have said for years, it probably helps nobody except temporarily.

Why? Because it contributes to the very problem everyone is seeking to overcome. And it probably assures that it never will be overcome.

Air Controllers Claim Govm't Has Informants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department used "union informants" to gain an advantage over the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization in the final pre-dawn hours of contract negotiations June 22, the union president says.

The accusation, denied by the government, was made Tuesday by PATCO president Robert E. Poli, who predicted the tentative contract which averted a strike would be rejected by the 15,000-member union.

Poli said the department strengthened its bargaining position June 22 by using "union informants" to learn that PATCO members had not endorsed a strike by the minimum 80 percent vote union leaders were seeking.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis knew the strike-vote results about the same time as union leaders and used the knowledge to force a contract settlement, Poli charged.

Poli said he had no choice but to take the government's offer. "It was the best possible deal I could get at the time," he said.

Spokesmen for Lewis and the Federal Aviation Administration denied that he knew of the strike vote outcome before PATCO announced it.

"We thought all along that they had the vote for a strike," said Linda Gosden, the department's assistant secretary for public affairs who sat in on the contract talks.

"The only solid information that we had on the vote was when it was announced by PATCO," FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said.

Poli said he has "a pretty strong feeling" the tentative contract will be rejected through a process which began today with the mailing of ballots to union members. He said the results will not be known for several weeks.

The union's executive board has recommended rejection of the 42-month pact, which calls for $40 million in increased wages and benefits the first year — the same level as originally offered by the government.

Poli said that if the rank-and-file turns down the contract he will immediately seek to reopen negotiations in hopes of reaching "a reasonable settlement" without controllers walking off their jobs.

The Reagan administration, however, will stand firm on its money offer no matter what the outcome of the union vote, the Transportation Department spokesman said.

Poli said there are no immediate plans a new strike deadline but added that the government's threat of seeking civil penalties, including possibly heavy fines, would not prevent a walkout.

A strike by the controllers would be illegal. Lewis has said the administration would act swiftly through the courts to force them back to work.

The tentative contract calls for a 6.6 percent increase in wages and benefits on top of a 4.8 percent wage hike that is expected to be given to all government employees.

Poli said there is a possibility a new contract can be worked out within the $40 million package but that work hours would have to be reduced and retirement benefits increased.

FAA Approves RDU Runway

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration approved Tuesday a plan for a 9,000-foot runway at the Raleigh-Durham airport.

Residents of Wake and Durham counties will have the final say in a referendum, probably early next year, on the issuance of $45 million in bonds to finance the project.

SOCIALIST BRIEFING

BONN, West Germany (AP— — West Europe Socialist leaders said Tuesday they will meet next week in Bonn to hear former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt report on his recent talks in Moscow with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

Claims Reverse Discrimination

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A former state employee is suing a state agency for $135,000, contending that he was a victim of reverse dicrimination while working for the agency.

Albert Huey filed the suit against the State Economic Opportunity office in Wake Superior Court on Monday.

Huey contends that he told office director John W. Edwards and other supervisors about political favoritism and sexual and racial discrimination in the office, but that his reports were ignored.

Huey said that on several occasions, his duties were given to female employees and that female employees were hired without prior advertising.

Counseling Retreat Is Planned

Rev. Richard (Dick) Arno has announced plans to establish a counseling retreat called "The Refreshing" located seven miles west of Greenville of route 264 (Wilson Highway).

REV. RICHARD ARNO

Those interested in helping establish a Counseling Retreat and a place of worship are asked to attend an information meeting at the Rotary Building, Rotary Ave., Sunday at 3:00 p.m. For further information call 753-2774.

Pastor of Salem United Methodist Church, Simpson, from 1972-1976, Arno has since been director of the 700 Club's National Counseling Center, Virginia Beach, Va. He has also hosted a television and radio show and plans to do radio and television work in the Greenville area.

RUSHED THROUGH

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Bolshoi ballerina Galina Chursina, a Soviet defector, was whisked through the airport en route to the U.S. from Turkey, but American officials would not allow her to speak with anyone.

Pitt Man Killed

INDIAN BEACH — A 21-year-old Pitt County man was electrocuted here yesterday.

Police Chief John Stevens said Walter Monroe Glisson, Stokes Highway, Greenville, was rolling up a 220 volt drop cord around his shoulder at the time of the mishap.

An employee of East Coast Roofing Co., Stevens said Glisson fell to the roof after the shock and co-workers began cardiopulmonary resuscitation moments after the accident. He was pronounced dead on arrival at the Carteret County Hospital in Morehead City.

According to the chief, the fatal mishap occurred about 5:02 p.m. at Colony By the Sea, a condominium complex under construction at Indian Beach.

Fire Destroys 12 Businesses

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The fire that gutted the old Mangel's Building and destroyed a dozen businesses on the Fayetteville Street Mall Tuesday morning caused an estimated $250,000 damage.

Eleven firefighters were treated at local hospitals for smoke inhalation following the blaze, but officials said none were seriously injured.

By Tuesday night, as investigators sifted the rubble for elusive clues to the cause of the fire, officials were calling it the worst fire to hit Raleigh in more than a decade.

More than 100 firefighters battled the fire, which was reported around 9 a.m. on the second floor of Mangel's. The two-story brick and wood structure, divided into 10 smaller businesses, collapsed into an adjacent parking lot at 11 a.m., crushing two cars and damaging a third.

Fire and police officials braved smoke and searing temperatures to salvage other automobiles parked nearby.

Jerry Heath, assistant director of communications for the Raleigh Fire Department said there were reports that the fire began shortly after Ann Jensen, store manager at the gutted Raleigh Bazaar, turned on its air conditioner. But he said arson had not been ruled out as the cause of the blaze.

"We'll have an arson investigating team in there as soon as possible," he said. "We'll be looking to see if possibly a vagrant dropped a cigarette or something."

Heath credited a fire wall for preventing the fire from spreading further.

"The Coleman-Womble building got some water and smoke damage, but the fire wall held," he said. "We're lucky it was there."

Destroyed in the fire, in addition to Mangel's and Raleigh Bazaar, were the Corkscrew Restaurant, Allred Home Fashions House and nine smaller antique, jewelry, concessions and gift shops.

The past owner of Raleigh Bazaar, C.H. Atkinson, said the store was closed for a week in March to bring the building in compliance with the city fire code.

Bobby Brown, Raleigh city building inspector, said the first floor of Mangel's complied with the minimum standards of the North Carolina Building Code, but the second floor "would not comply." Brown added that the second floor was exempt from meeting the standards because it was not occupied by business or storage.

As the fire raged, Carolina Power & Light Co. and Public Service Co. employees turned off electricity and gas service to the block. A spokesman for Southern Bell said telephone service was interrupted to several nearby businesses for most of the day when a cable on the Mangel's Building melted through.

teaching positions.

The committee appointed to study school attendance district lines reported on their findings and recommended the following to the superintendent: (1) no redistricting be done at this time, and (2) that the superintendent work individually with families in the marginal areas for the benefit of the schools and families.

The board later voted to have the state School Planning Board study school district lines in the county in an effort to alleviate space problems. The results will be submitted by December 1, 1981.

Pat Byrd of the Pitt County Health Department reported to the board on the services provided to the schools by the department during the past year. According to Byrd, over 14,444 services (both city and county schools) were performed during 1980 in the schools.

"In Pitt County, 40 percent of the number of services were direct services, or what we call 'hands-on' services," explained Byrd. "Twenty-six percent consisted of counseling students, eight percent were home-based follow-ups, and seven percent were referrals to outside agencies."

Forty-six percent of the direct services were orthopedic screenings, with 19 percent eye screening, 15 percent oral screening and 10 percent dermatological checks.

Of the referrals made, reported Byrd, the majority were for eyes and dental problems. Of all the referrals, 60 percent received documented care.

"We believe that we have given a high level of service to the schools of Pitt County, and after a quick study we feel it is beneficial to continue this program," added Byrd. "We hope to do so."

Homicide Rate Said Increased

ATLANTA (AP) — The slayings of 28 young blacks here have caused a dramatic increase in the homicide rate in several suburban jurisdictions, although the deaths have had little impact on the murder rate in the city of Atlanta.

Only 12 of the 28 victims whose deaths are being investigated by a special police task force were found slain inside the Atlanta city limits. The other 16 bodies were dumped in surrounding jurisdictions.

In Fulton County there have been six homicides so far this year, compared to only four in all of 1980. Of those six, four are being investigated by the task force.

"We just happened to be the dumping ground," Fulton County Police Chief Clinton Chafin said. "It's the kind of thing that's hard for us to stem. There's not much control you can exert when the crimes occur somewhere else."

DeKalb County's homicide rate for the first six months of 1981 would have dropped from the same period last year if the bodies of five of the victims on the task force list had not been found in that county.

Instead, DeKalb County has recorded 19 homicides through June of this year, compared to 18 in the same period last year. Of the 19 this year, 13 have been cleared.

Atlanta homicides have increased from 92 during the first six months of 1980 to 102 during January through June this year.

Williamston Employees Get No Raises

WILLIAMSTON — No provision was made for salary increases during the coming year for Williamston town employees in the 1981-82 budget adopted by Williamston Town Commissioners at a special meeting held Friday afternoon.

The budget, totaling nearly $4.1 million and a tax rate of $1.10 were adopted by a four to one margin with commissioner Tommy Speight voting against the proposed budget.

The budget is essentially the same as that proposed earlier to the town board by Administrator J. B. Godwin, with a few amendments carried by the board at earlier budget meetings.

In the adoption action, board members specified that a hiring freeze is in effect with no position to be filled unless one is vacated. Also, prior to adopting the budget, department officials were told they could either keep their current workforce at no pay raise or lay off workers from each department in order to incorporate pay raises for other employees.

The option was made to leave manpower at current levels.

Department heads reported that because of the no pay raise prospect, morale was low among employees. Commissioner Grey Griffin said she was concerned with the attitude of employees, but stressed that workers should try to understand the position in a dwindling tax base situation.

We'll never finish America's finest vocational center without your help.

But that's not the greatest tragedy.

Because the personal tragedies begin if we don't finish it. Literally hundreds of mentally, physically, emotionally and economically handicapped people will never receive the jobs training that can make them useful, productive and proud citizens.

The completion of our $5.1 million expansion program is a very few thousand dollars short of our goal. When we finish, the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center will unquestionably be one of the finest programs of its kind in the U.S. A shining example of the kind of program that works. The payoffs are enormous. An estimated $44 million dollars in productive employment and tax dollars left unspent so far.

But, without your help, our program will remain a dream.

Give the handicapped an opportunity to develop their fullest potential with your deductible donation.

Won't you please contact one of the people below and make your tax-deductible pledge?

To you, your pledge can mean the completion of a program that will stand out among others in the country.

But, to our clients—the people that we help—your contribution can mean so much more. A heretofore unattainable opportunity to develop their lives. A pragmatic solution to a tragic problem.

Please call today and help us with your pledge.

THE ROBERT LEE HUMBER HOUSE . . . in downtown Greenville has been nominated for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places. # Humber House Is Nominated For Register

RALEIGH — The Robert Lee Humber House in Greenville has been nominated for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places by William S. Price, State Historic Preservation Officer.

The register is a national list of distinctive properties worthy of preservation because of their historical or other cultural value.

Built in 1895, the Humber House was the birthplace and home of Robert Lee Humber, Jr., 1989-1970. Humber's illustrious career as an international lawyer, intellectual and servant of the people of North Carolina spanned the decades of the 1940s through the 60s. During this period his home served as the base from which he worked to establish and develop the N. C. Museum of Art and its core collection, and to promote international peace and cooperation through a world federation and later the United Nations.

The house, a typical late 19th century residence built for Humber's father, has been altered over the years. In the 1940s and 50s the interiors were enriched with moldings, imported mantels and a walnut paneled sitting-room. The house with minor renovations is scheduled to become the eastern field office for the N. C. Division of Archives and History.

The nomination was submitted in connection with the Division of Archives and History's long-range program to identify and document historic properties in North Carolina. Approval of the nomination by the Department of Interior usually takes about six months and will be announced through the state's congressional delegtion.

Discrimination Suit By Goldsboro Board

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A federal lawsuit claiming the Wayne County school board is guilty of "intentional racial segregation and discrimination" was filed Tuesday by the Goldsboro school board.

William R. Johnson, superintendent of Goldsboro schools, said the suit filed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh is to "seek redress for alleged unconstitutional conduct on the part of the Wayne County Board of Education, (whose) conduct has an adverse impact on the Goldsboro city schools."

City officials have contended that the county has refused to help redraw school district lines to bring the systems into racial balance. No change in the city school district boundaries is possible without consent of Wayne County Board of Education.

"The board has sought to avoid filing this suit," Johnson said. "But all earlier efforts to work with the county board has met with frustration and failure. The board is taking the legal remedy, because the political approach didn't do it."

The suit claims that the county board has perpetuated a dual system of education in which the city schools are 77 percent black while county schools are 68 percent white.

But Johnson said busing is not a major issue.

"Right now some students who attend eastern Wayne are being bused further than if they went to Goldsboro city schools," he said. "Busing is an emotional issue. If we flew students in by helicopter or brought them in by train, there wouldn't be the row about busing."

Mrs. Kenneth Wilkins, chairman of the city school board, added, "The Goldsboro city school Board of Education has always been committed to providing quality education for all of its students.

Ex-Congressman Now Runs A Bar

CENTRAL FALLS, R.I. (AP) — Edward Beard — ex-boxer, ex-house painter and, more recently, ex-congressman — draws a beer from the tap and squints at the noon sun splashing the pavement outside the dim, blue-collar bar he now runs in this gritty mill town.

Only a year ago "Eddie" Beard seemed headed for a fourth two-year term as Rhode Island's 2nd District congressman. The Democrat had a plush office in Washington's Cannon Building, staffed with aides and secretaries, and served as chairman of the House Labor Standards Subcommittee.

He enjoyed what seemed to be the unqualified backing of two key groups in his district — labor and the elderly. The last thing he expected was to lose the election — and to an underdog at that.

But upstart Republican Claudine Schneider campaigned vigorously and bested the 41-year-old Beard, who had abandoned his job as a house-painter in 1974 to forge a political career as the "man who speaks for working people."

"All of a sudden, boom, I had no money," Beard said by way of explanation, slapping the wooden bar for emphasis. "Other congressmen, when they lose an election, can become lobbyists or go back to big law practices.

"It was a nightmare for awhile," said Beard, who finished high school in the Army and never went to college, "but I cashed in my $26,000 pension and we bought this place."

"This place" is the Batter's Choice Tavern, a beer joint in a working-class neighborhood of triple-decker houses, tenements and laundry flapping in the breeze.

A regular customer, 20-year-old Joseph Bouchard, politely eavesdropped as he chewed on a piece of chicken that Beard had fried in the bar's tiny kitchen.

Bouchard, a self-employed contractor, doesn't think it's a big deal to be waited on by a former congressman. "I don't think of it like that. I think of it more as friendwise, you know?"

Beer-drinkers Albert Nolezte, 52, and Jack Dowdy, 25, said they feel the same way.

"He's like us. He's got to make a living somehow now that he's not a congressman," Dowdy said. The two leave their construction jobs up the str3et almost every day for lunch at the Batter's Choice.

The little tavern's walls are covered with dozens of pictures, drawings and other memorabilia of Beard's days in Washington.

There are autographed pictures of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and other political luminaries. Framed newspaper cartoons praising Beard hang at one end.

A hand-lettered notice is nailed above the bar urging customers to come in Sundays to catch assistant bartender Paul Boutin's "perfect imitation" of a submerging submarine. "He's working 9n an elephant call 4ight now," said Beard's helper, Patricia Bannon.

Beard said he sees his new enterprise as a return to the basics that got him to Washington in the first place. He said he plans a return to politics and the tavern is whipping him back into shape.

"Running this business, serving working people, is giving me back my old instincts, my old ability to go one-on-one with the people," he said.

"Another thing. I'm learning a lot. I couldn't afford to run this business the way we run government. Things have to balance here. I think all congressmen should run a small business for awhile."

Beard, who boxed as an amateur in his 20s and had a few professional bouts, took a beating from Mrs. Schneider who came from nowhere to capture about 55 percent of the vote. He blames his defeat on many things, including his belief he became insulated from the people.

"The absolute worst thing I did was hire a public relations firm and take their advice. But I found that out too late."

In his first three campaigns, Beard "read the paper every day; kept up on the issues and exposed things. Most important, I got out and walked and talked to people. I knocked on doors. I worked."

This time, the strategy was to keep a low profile and ignore most of Mrs. Schneider's broadsides about his "do nothing" record. "That was a mistake. The voters you know, they really like the rough and tumble."

Beard said he definitely plans a political comeback. "Come J$nuary, I will launch a new ship like gangbusters."

Beard said he will run either for mayor of nearby Providence or take another shot at Congress. Mrs. Bannon says political talk at the bar usually centers around the chronic fiscal problems in Providence and how Beard is just the man to straighten things out.

Beard, she observed, is still representing the people even though he's out of office: "People, they're in here everyday getting Eddie to help them with the Vets (Veteran's Administration), or with child placement, or a place to live."

Had Expected A Blood-Letting

NASHVILLE (AP) — Many editors of Southern Baptist state newspapers say they went to the denomination's June convention in Los Angeles expecting a "blood-letting," an "angry knock-down battle," but that instead it turned out to be conciliatory and unifying.

"Surprise! Surprise!" editor Elmer Gray of the California Southern Baptist headlined his editorial about the mellowing mood that dispelled tensions over differing approaches to the Bible. "The surprises were nearly all pleasant."

A survey of the editorial comment found that many editors felt that prayer is what made the difference. Wrote Bob Terry of Missouri's Word and Way:

"While God used several human instruments to accomplish this miracle, it was his power alone that brought it about. The worst was feared, but it was not to be."

I'LL BE DANGED

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Why does a television news anchorman here or in Atlanta or Boston sound the same as counterparts in other U.S. cities? Because regional accents hinder careers and broadcasters want to be as universal as possible, with the ability to move anywhere in the country, reported a network executive.

Broadcasters who twang, drawl or have local accents are generally out of luck, if they ever want to move away from their region.

Fairy-Tale Castle Truly Is His Home

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

FUESSEN, West Germany (AP) — For Julius Desing, his castle is his home.

This bearded Bavarian lives in Neuschwanstein, the famed fairy-tale castle bristling with turrets and towers that was built in the Alps a century ago by the eccentric King Ludwig II.

With a cheerful grin, a tough eye for the bottom line and a flair for helping people have fun, Desing has been resident administrator of the castle-turned-museum for the past 18 years.

"If there's a ghost in the castle, I'm it," Desing, 53, said with a chuckle. "When you see a light moving through the halls late at night, it's me."

Moviegoers, armchair travelers and fantasy lovers of all nationalities imagine Desing's lavish abode when they dream of castles in the air, even though they may have never heard its tongue-twisting German name.

Photos of the delicate white stone fortress grace thousands of travel posters around the world. Perched atop a stone pinnacle 600 feet above a rolling green meadow, the castle appears to float on a dark forest with a backdrop of snow-dusted mountains.

It looks like a Walt Disney setting, and most American tourists tell Desing this image drew them to Neuschwanstein.

Gesturing at the mountain scenery from his arched office window in the castle's "lady's chambers," Desing said the young king "allowed his dreams to blossom" by building the castle.

Ludwig directed the construction from 1869 until his mysterious drowning in 1886, three days after he was deposed for alleged insanity. He spent only 120 days in his castle and died at age 41.

The king was mesmerized by the revolutionary, romantic operas of Richard Wagner, such as "Lohengrin" and "Tristan and Isolde," which were based on the medieval legends of German knights and their ladies.

he had the castle designed in a flamboyant style to recall those heroic opera figures. Many walls are painted with scenes from ancient German mythology, and his favorite animal — the swan from Lohengrin — appears woven into draperies, carved in wood and even as the gilded water spout on his bathroom sink.

It took seven wood-carvers four years to carve just the Gothic oak flowerets that form the canopy above the king's bed.

"It was my wife's dearest wish that we could live in a castle, and I was able to make it come true," said Desing.

He and his wife, Hanna, live in the castle gatehouse, which contains the original oak paneling and parq7et floors similar to Ludwig's private apartment. It has been remodeled to allow for central heating, electric lighting and modern plumbing. The Desing's two children are grown and on their own.

"I love it here, but if people think this is a dream job, well, all that glitters isn't gold," said Desing.

Coping with the 1,200 tourists who stream hourly through the 90-room castle in peak season is "a challenge," Desing said.

Ludwig's family opened the private residence as a museum several weeks after the king's death, and this spring the castle recorded its 20 millionth visitor.

"The family had to do it. The construction put them near bankruptcy," Desing said. The family gave the site to the state in 1923.

More than half of those 20 million visitors have come to Neuschwanstein in the last 15 years, Desing said. Around 60 percent of the tourists are German-speakers and Americans are the next largest group, about 15 percent of the total.

Tours are given in German, English and French. Tape recordings in Dutch, Italian, Spanish and Japanese are available, while Swedish and Russian are being prepared, he said.

As castle director, Desing said his two biggest worries are fending off souvenir hunters and protecting the public in case of fire.

Lakeside Town Has Taken 'Monster' To Its Heart

By LARRY ELKIN
Associated Press Writer

PORT HENRY, N.Y. (AP) — The "sea monster" of Lake Champlain is the summer's hot news all along this 125-mile inland sea. Here in Port Henry, across the lake from Vermont's Green Mountains, "Champ" is king.

Nearly everyone in town claims, or knows somebody who claims, to have seen the monster whose purported picture was published in The New York Times last week. Sandra Mansi, now of Winchester, N.H., said she took the copyright photo on July 5, 1977, from somewhere on Lake Champlain's coastline in northern Vermont.

The existence of a dragon-like creature in the lake has been talked about for 350 years, since the days of explorer Samuel de Champlain himself. Sightings have been reported all along, but given far more credibility in recent years as serious scientific research into "Nessie," the sea serpent of Scotland's Loch Ness.

Scientists who examined Mrs. Mansi's photo say it does not look like a forgery, but they stop short of saying it looks like a monster. Further investigation is difficult becase Mrs. Mansi says she no longer has the negative and does not remember the exact spot where the shot was taken.

The photo seems to show a creature with a long, serpentine neck and a rounded dorsal area above the water. It's a lot like the caricatures of Champ that dot the landscape in Port Henry.

For many in Port Henry, no further proof is needed. Champ already serves as the town's all-but-official mascot.

Last fall, the town passed a resolution declaring the local part of the lake, Bulwagga Bay, off limits "to anyone who would in any way harm, harass or destroy the Lake Champlain Sea Monster."

Drawings of a friendly dragon appear in Main Street shop windows. Signs at the village line read, "Welcome to Port Henry — Home of 'Champ.'" A sign along state route 9N near a lakeside campground cautions, "Monster Xing." Another roadside sign lists village residents who claim to have seen the monster since 1926.

Champ T-shirts, buttons and postcards all proclaim the civic pride these days. Soon, a fluffy stuffed Champ will be part of Port Henry's cottage monster industry.

Mayor Robert Brown says he thinks many earlier sightings probably went unreported because monster-watchers "thought people would laugh at them."

Yet despite Port Henry's effort to adopt Champ, and Brown's estimate that the town has received millions of dollars worth of free publicity, the village of 1,400 appears ill-equipped for throngs of tourists.

It has no big hotels and only a few small ones. Some of the lakeside campgrounds are already full. The town usually attracts so few visitors that the off-season atmosphere sometimes lingers well past the Fourth of July.

Port Henry could use some monster-sized economic help. A decade ago, Republic Steel closed its iron mines here, forcing older residents into retirement and younger ones to travel up to 50 miles for work. One out of every 15 residents moved away between the censuses of 1970 and 1980.

But although Brown said he would welcome an economic boom — if tourists can find someplace to spend their money — he conceded, "We're really not ready for it."

Talking with other locals, however, gives a visitor the feeling that Champ is considered more than just a possible money-making freak show.

"I believe there's something out there," said 24-year-old Tom Scozzafava, manager of the town campground. "I've never seen it, but last week two of my men saw something. They were picking up the garbage from along the beach."

At Laura's coffee shop downtown, business is so slow that closing time is 3 p.m. A young woman there who did not want to give her name scoffed at the monster stories. "Usually they've had four or five drinks, then they see it," she said.

Charlie Mazurowski, who lives across the bay on Crown Point, looked up from his milkshake to interject, "That's not so. I saw it."

Mazurowski, 56, said he and his son, Steve, saw the monster in July 1978. They were taking pictures of storm-damaged trees on Crown Point when Champ came up to look around.

"First I saw the head, like a horse's head without ears. Then a long neck came out of the water. It lasted less than a minute, and suddenly, it just sank out of sight."

They didn't get a picture, though. Steve's camera was out of film.

Coal-Use Polluted Bohemian Forests

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer

TEPLICE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Rising energy needs and expanded coal mining are forcing communist officials here to confront issues which have long been raging controversies in the West.

Expanded use of sulphur-ridden soft coal has killed a large part of this northern Czechoslovak region's picturesque forests, and officials say it is time to tackle the problem.

"This is spoiling our environment, but we are taking steps to correct the problem," says Vladislav Sahovsky, chief of the local Chemical Workers Union.

In North Bohemia, the afflicted area, coal mining has increased dramatically since the skyrocketing of oil prices in 1974, and new coal-fired power plants have also been added to the area.

The region, which borders East Germany, now produces nearly 80 percent of Czechoslovaia's coal amd more than one third of its electricity.

But the coal is dirty, with twice the sulphur content of coal mined in neighboring areas.

"It's a major problem," said an official at the 500-acre Doly Nastrup open-pit mine, one of the biggest in the country.

"Neither German nor Polish coal has as high a sulphur content," he said.

The problem is not new. As early as 1978, press reports in North Bohemia said 41 percent of the area's forests were being affected by coal dust and fumes.

The trade union daily newspaper, Prace, demanded action before the area was turned into a "moonscape" and a government commission was set up to study the problem.

The issue is likely to remain acute. Czechoslovak energy needs are rising an estimated 3 percent a year, but the Soviet Union, which supplies more than 90 percent of the country's oil, has said it cannot increase its exports.

Czechoslovak officials say nuclear power will help keep expanded production of domestic energy from increasing environmental problems inNorth Bohemia.

The country's next five-year economc plan, they say, includes an air pollution control scheme aimed at existing problems.

The program provides for chemical sulphur filters to be installed at two coal-fired power plants in the next five years.

Officials describe the plan as a "pilot project" and estimate its cost at $50 million.

Czechoslovakia's communist leadership is placing great emphasis on nuclear power to meet future energy needs and avoid more problems like those of North Bohemia.

One nuclear power plant is now operating and two more are to be completed in 1990.

Czechoslovak officials in Prague tend to depict Western-style anti-nuclear movements as overblown. Some Western experts, however, contend that Soviet bloc nuclear power facilities, of which Czechoslovakia is a chief producer, are notably less safe than those built in the West.

On local levels, however, the browning of Bohemia's mountains seems to have prompted official attention to environmental problems.

"It's a social necessity for us to face this problem," said Antonin Zemlicka, a regional party official.

GUEST SPEAKER

Eldress Shirley Atkinson, of Holy Mission, will be speaking tonight at 7:30 at St. Luke Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Hattie Mae Cobb invites the public to attend.

FAMILY AFFAIR — When Steve Budry, 28, of Ferndale, Mich., takes off for a ride his children go along. # How Tar Heel Senators, Representatives Voted

Roll Call Reporting Service

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes prior to the July 4 recess.

HOUSE

THE REAGAN BUDGET — The House voted, 217 for and 211 against, to follow GOP marching orders that will cause the most fundamental change of the federal government since World War II. Once the House and Senate agree on final wording, the "budget reconciliation" measure (HR 3982) will inflict at least $35 billion worth of FY 1982 cuts in some of 250 federal programs, with defense spending the only major area left uncut.

The measure is evolutionary because it forces permanent changes in scores of laws — a rewrite that the 100-plus congressional subcommittees and committees could not have accomplished on their own. The Democratic alternative killed by this vote also would have saved tens of billions in FY 1982, but it stopped short of major changes in enabling legislation.

Supporter Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, said, "The spending of the federal government is out of control" and noted that the $100 billion annual budget threshold crossed in the Kennedy Administration has risen to $695 billion today.

Opponent Jim Wright, D-Tex., said the GOP plan will "cause egregious injuries to many millions of innocent Americans who have nobody to stand between them and those injuries except the members of this House."

Members voting "yea" favored the GOP rather than the Democratic attack on runaway federal spending.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, and W.C. Hefner, D-8, voted "nay."

SENATE

BUDGET CUTS — By a vote of 80 for and 15 against, the Senate passed its version of the budget reconcilliation measure (see House vote above). The bill (S 1377), sent to conference with the House, mandates $39.6 billion in FY 1982 spending cuts as well as reductions for other fiscal years. Reconciliation is an interim disciplinary step between last May's enactment of the FY 1982 budget blueprint and upcoming action on specific spending bills.

Supporter Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said the bill "will cut in half the rate at which federal spending has been growing" while providing for "real growth in spending for national defense, thereby reversing a dangerous decline in that area."

Opponent Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said that while Americans "want better economy in government" they do not want "massive reductions in income security and retirement programs...a lowering of minimum standards for health care, for shelter, and for feeding programs...for education and job training assistance, for transportation systems, for help to the handicapped and the elderly, and for energy and economic development programs."

Senators voting "yea" supported the GOP-authored budget-cutting plan.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

'WASTE AND ABUSE' — By a vote of 44 for and 52 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to require deeper FY 1982 cuts in what federal agencies can spend on travel and consultants' fees. The pending bill (S 1377, see preceeding vote) already contained cuts of $550 million for travel and $500 million in outlays for consultants. This amendment sought additional cuts of $200 million and $500 million respectively.

Sponsor Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said "The only sure-fire way I know to make a dent in the waste and abuse in both travel and consultant services is to cut these funds and cut them sharply."

Senators voting "nay" opposed the still deeper FY 1982 cuts in travel and consultants' outlays.

East and Helms voted "nay."

North Dakota Bachelor Offering Land To Keep Town School Alive

ANTLER, N.D. (AP) — Harley "Bud" Kissner believes tiny towns like Antler "wither and die" without schools, and since you can't have schools without children, the 72-year-old bachelor is offering free land to modern-day homesteaders willing to settle here.

"I've had a lot of phone calls," said Kissner. "About 30 or so from Idaho, West Virginia, Minnesota, North Dakota."

Kissner offered to give away four lots of nine acres each near Antler Creek, but now he is being asked to provide more land from his 640-acre spread.

Land in the area, which is near the Canadian border, sells for about $450 to $500 an acre.

The community's 29-student elementary school closed this spring when the enrollment potential for the fall dropped to 23. The following year it would drop to 15, officials said. Students are to be bused to the towns of Sherwood, Mohall and Westhope, each about 20 miles away to the west, south and east.

"These little towns just wither and die" without schools, Kissner said.

He said he is interested in preserving the town of 150 because he has lived there all his life and has enjoyed it.

"I come from a very poor childhood, but my folks took in people and helped them out," Kissner said. "Here's my opportunity to help the community and maybe help the school."

He placed advertisements in three area newspapers that promised free land to people with school-age children willing to remain five years.

Kissner said loss of a rail line and the growth in the size of farms has contributed to the population drop over the years, which led in turn to the school's closing and his decision to help out.

"I suppose we need 20 kids; if we get more, so much the better," Kissner said. "I can't see that we should just sit down and do nothing and let our schools be closed."

He said a young Antler native named Rick Jorgensen is helping him, and Jorgensen has proposed that Kissner provide more land and reduce the number of acres involved in each lot to five.

"I'm still scratching my head on that," Kissner said.

Jorgensen said Kissner isn't just a sentimentalist.

"He is basically determined he will do whatever is necessary to make sure this town will exist after he's gone," Jorgensen said. "I've never run across another guy as generous and civic-minded as he is."

Don Conroy, former school board president, who resigned at the last meeting, said the decision to close the school was largely a matter of economics.

"We're in a relatively good financial position at this point, but there was just no future," he said.

"We could operate another year, but we looked at it over a two-or three-year period, and we felt with the school not now in bad financial shape it was a better point to terminate. Obviously, a lot of people disagreed."

Officiated At Bird's Burial

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Sentator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina missed his part on the program of a breakfast for Southern Baptist members of Congress — because of officiating at the funeral of a bird.

Thurmond apologized to fellow Southern Baptists legislators for being too late to lead the prayer of thanks, explaining that his children had rescued a bird which had fallen out of a tree.

In spite of their efforts to splint the bird's broken wing and restore it to health, he said, the bird had died and he, in his role as a father, was chosen to officiate at the family backyard interment service.

Cite Birth Control Up

BALTIMORE (AP) — The use of birth control devices in six of 16 developing countries surveyed by the journal Population Reports is nearing the levels found in the United States.

More than half the married women in Costa Rica, Panama, South Korea, Jamaica, Thailand and the Brazilian state of Sao Paulo were found to be using contraception. The report said about 70 percent of married women in the United States use some form of birth control.

"The surveys found that more than half the married women questioned wanted no more children at all, and another 30 to 40 percent wanted to delay having their next child," said Dr. Phyllis Piotrow, director of the Population Information Program, which publishes the journal and is based at the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health here.

The report showed more than 60 percent of married women in Costa Rica, Panama and Sao Paolo practiced birth control. Married women of South Korea, Jamaica and Thailand had use rates above 50 percent. Among the surveyed countries with the lowest rates were Guatemala, with 19 percent and Paraguay with 24 percent.

REFUGEE AID

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico says it will give food and medicine to thousands of refugees who fled Guatemala, but send home those it considers ineligible for political asylum.

WOULD NEGOTIATE

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — President Rodrigo Carazo is asking the U.S. to end a two-year embargo on Costa Rican tuna and bring the issue of fishing permits to the negotiating table.

Grandparents Not 'Typical'

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — There's no such thing as a typical grandparent, says a social work specialist at Syracuse University, who notes that — unlike a century ago — many grandparents lead active lives of their own.

Darrell Slover, associate professor of social work, says the closeness among different generations that marked many families in past years was dictated by economic necessity. Today, families are more financially secure and have a greater number of options. So, he says, the role of grandparent has become quite diverse.

"Each grandparent and each grandchild does it in his or her own way," he says. "For some, it's a fairly active and quite satisfying role. For others, it's a fairly distant role, an inactive role. Each grandparent finds his or her own way of dealing with it."

Slover says people are becoming grandparents at a younger age than in the past. Many have their first grandchild in their mid-40s.

U.S. Pilots Regularly Play Deadly Coastal Guard

AT THE READY — F-106 jet interceptors assigned to Otis Air Force Base on Cape Cod have responsibility for the outer reaches of the Air Defense Identification Zone — some 250 miles out in the Atlantic. (AP Laserphoto)

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

FOX AREA, ATLANTIC (AP) — Capt. Joe Scavuzzo tipped his F-106 jet interceptor into a shallow dive and quickly dropped 2,000 feet to meet the target — an enemy jet sneaking at low altitude toward the New England coast.

Guided by a ground controller in upstate New York, his on-board computerized Tactical Situation Display and a radar gunsight that resembles a video game, he locked on the target. The plane's weapon bay doors snapped down and an air-to-air missile was "fired."

Then, traveling just under the speed of sound, Scavuzzo climbed and turned for what pilots call a "re-attack," while the target tried to escape by twisting inside the F-106's own curving route.

Scavuzzo pushed his aircraft into a tighter turn, grunting softly into the intercom as his body was crushed by six times the normal force of gravity. The vast Atlantic Ocean, 5,000 feet below, appeared to hang above the cockpit.

Again, the cross-hairs closed on the radar gunsight and a rocket was launched. There was silence. Then the plane's on-board camera recorded a kill.

The drama over the sea was real enough — but the target this day was not a real enemy warplane. It was another F-106 from the 102nd Fighter-Interceptor Wing of the Massachusetts Air National Guard, simulating a hostile enemy intruder in Fox Area, a 3,000-square mile patch of sky 25 miles off Provincetown, Mass.

The 102nd, based at Otis Air Force Base on Cape Cod, is one of 10 Air National Guard and 10 Canadian and U.S. Air Force squadrons with the mission of defending the continent's skies against an enemy air attack. Air cover for the Hawaiian Islands is flown by another Air National Guard unit.

For the most part, it's routine duty. The 102nd's pilots fly about a dozen missions each month, rehearsing tactics against attacking bombers by "bumping heads," a pilot' term for practice intercepts.

Scavuzzo, 31, is one of the 102nd's 32 pilots. Over half of the pilots are former Air Force officers. The rest include commercial airline pilots and civilians with full Air Force training.

In the late '50s, there were 69 squadrons of jet fighters committed to air defense. But military experts say the only major threat today is Soviet missiles, which jet fighters can't stop.

Nevertheless, the Soviet and U.S. military engage in daily cat-and-mouse games of electronic warfare, each side probing the other for weaknesses.

Three times in the past nine months, pilots from the 102nd and other Air National Guard and Air Force squadrons have intercepted Soviet TU-95 bombers nosing along the outer edges of the nation's Air Defense Identification Zone — an imaginary line 250 miles out to sea.

"You have to admit it's somewhat exciting when you're sent out there," says Scavuzzo, who served in the Air Force for six years.

According to Delbert Kindschi, a civilian spokesman for the North American Aerospace Defense Command at Colorado Springs, Colo., there are no more than a half dozen intercepts involving Soviet planes each year. In 1979, there were none.

Still, pilots like those at the 102nd are sent aloft a dozen times a month to investigate radar blips that turn out to be airliners or private planes off course. The pilots speculate that some of these private planes may be drug smugglers trying to sneak into the country.

The three recent alerts began when radar in the United States and Canada, part of a network of 111 radar posts in the Western Hemisphere, picked up two unidentified objects well out to sea. The objects' speed, altitude and size were matched against the 2,000 daily oceanic flights plans collected and filed in NORAD computers by the Federal Aviation Administration.

If there is no match in two minutes, and attempts to raise the aircraft by radio fail, the commander of the 21st NORAD region at Hancock Field, Syracuse, N.Y. orders two jet fighters from squadrons closest to the targets into the air to investigate.

The fighters, manned 24 hours a day, carry a variety of sophisticated weapons systems that can include missiles tipped with nuclear death. The Air Force, under long-established guidlines, declines to say if those missiles are standard issue.

Once the Soviet bombers are spotted, the interceptors escort the visitors until they are out of the U.S. zone.

"From what we've seen they are very anxious to let us know they're out there," says Scavuzzo, who participated in an intercept earlier this year. "They don't want to try antagonize us and we're careful not to antagonize them."

Stephen Meyer, a professor of defense studies at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, says the Soviet planes are loaded with electronic gear that analyzes radar patterns and communications to give military intelligence a better picture of U.S. air defense.

He speculates the recent Soviet reconnaissance flights may reflect Soviet interest in Trident submarine construction taking place in Groton, Conn.

"We play the same game all the time," he says. "You accidently intrude in their air space or zip by it, then you study their reaction, the wavelength of their radar, the coverage, the holes, how long it takes them to send up fighters. It's really cat-and-mouse.

"Certain tacit rules develop. You don't come too close. These guys begin to wave to one another; they begin to recognize crews. It's a good time for both sides to some extent."

Once a major part of the nation's military structure, the U.S. air defense system has shrunk to a tenth of what it once was. The change recognizes shifts in both U.S. and Soviet strategic planning.

"Over the past two decades we have witnessed a very real reduction in the capability of our air defense system to provide atmospheric surveillance and to provide adequate warning of and defense against penetrating aircraft," Air Force Secretary Vern Orr and Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Lew Allen told the Senate Appropriations Committee this spring.

"During this period we have drastically reduced the number of aircraft dedicated to air defense from 2,600 aircraft in the early 1960s to less than 300 today."

But defense experts say the nation's air defense is adequate.

"The only real threat to this country is Soviet missiles," says Meyer. "What you have now in air defense is good for the job: catching smugglers and harassing Soviet reconnaissance planes. Anything more than that is silly."

Meyer says the Soviets haven' developed a new long-range bomber since the 1950s and currently have a few squadrons of slow, subsonic planes he thinks would be used to attack Europe and the Far East in the event of war.

The new Soviet Backfire bomber, a smaller aircraft that can fly twice the speed of sound, has sparked much debate in U.S. defense circles about Soviet military intentions. But Meyer says the bomber doesn't have the range to fly round trip from Russia to this country.

The Soviets, however, have committed a large proportion of their military budget to air defense. Meyer says the Soviet equivalent of NORAD is a separate military branch, independent of the Soviet Air Force. It has 3,000 fighter aircraft at its disposal plus other squadrons from Warsaw Pact nations.

These planes include the most modern fighters in the Soviet arsenal. By comparison some of the F-106s, F-101s and F-4s that make up most of the U.S. air defense are entering their third decade of service.

There are also 10,000 to 12,000 surface-to-air missiles launchers based on Soviet soil, Meyer estimates. The United States has none.

But Meyer also notes that much of Soviet air defense is concentrated on Russia's southern and western borders to defend against air attack from neighboring China and Western Europe.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly today in a carryover of the buying that appeared late in Tuesday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose .85 to 955.00 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about an 8-5 margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that the market had begun to stabilize Tuesday after a sharp decline over the previous eight sessions.

But they said investors still were concerned about the interest-rate outlook.

Interest rates climbed in both the bond and short-term money markets Tuesday as traders debated the prospects for any easing of credit by the Federal Reserve in the near future.

Today's early prices included Southern California Edison, 25; Exxon, up ⅛ at 34½, and General Motors, up ⅛ at 50. Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 4.85 to 954.15.

But declines outnumbered advances by about an 8-7 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 53.56 million shares, against 44.59 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .40 to 74.39.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .57 at 360.77.

Richardson Gets Lifetime Membership

Jack W. Richardson, general director at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was recently awarded a lifetime membership in the North Carolina Hospital Association.

JACK W. RICHARDSON

NCHA president Ed McCauley presented the award to Richardson "in sincere appreciation for the service rendered in the hospital administration field in North Carolina."

The presentation was made in Greenville at a meeting ot the Northeastern Hospital Administrators Association. Richardson has been general director at PCMH since 1971. He served as chairman of the board for the state hospital association in 1977-78.

First Goring By Fighting Bulls

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — A Spaniard was gored in the hip today, but police reported no other serious injuries among the 2,000 people who dared to run ahead of the fighting bulls on the second day of Pamplona's annual festival.

Pamplona Hospital said Manuel Diez de Cerio Albeniz, 41, suffered a 4-inch deep wound from the bull's horn. On Tuesday, when the festival opened, nine people received minor injuries when they were trampled in the run through the city's narrow streets to the bull ring.

Police said today's run lured the biggest crowd of the festival and took more than four minutes, almost twice as long as the opening day.

The annual event, popularized by Ernest Hemingway's novel, "The Sun Also Rises," devotes a week to drinking, dancing and daring before the bulls. More than 50 people have been killed running in front of the bulls since the festival began in 1591.

Robbery Arrest

One person has been arrested and the Pitt County Sheriff's Department is continuing its investigation into an early morning armed robbery at a club located on the Pactolus Highway near Greenville.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Richard Darnell Davis of 209 Queen Street was charged with armed robbery in connection with the incident at the Dixie Social Club, located near the intersection of Creek Road and Pactolus Highway. Bond for Davis was set at $10,000.

The sheriff said club owners reported that two black males kicked down the door, entered the facility and fired one shot into the ceiling from a shotgun. Several people inside the club ran out the door, he said, but the intruders made three people who remained inside empty their pockets and approximately $250 and a gold watch were allegedly taken from them.

Sheriff Tyson said that two people were apparently struck with the barrel or stock of the shotgun during the incident, receiving cuts requiring treatment.

He said that the incident was reported at 12:59 a.m.

Housing Board.....

1977 amendment be ratified locally. That action was taken by the commissioners last night and the Council is expected to consider the matter Thursday night.

Laney said HUD also notified the Authority that 25 housing units under the moderate rehabilitation program have been approved, bringing the total number authorized here to 100 units. Commissioners authorized the chairman and Laney to execute the annual contributions contract for the additional units.

In other business last night, Laney said that the energy conservation department of Greenville Utilities, with help from students at Pitt Community College, is in the process of completing an energy audit of local public housing units.

Laney said the Authority is pleased that GUC is undertaking the audit, as it will help the Authority analyze its energy conservtion problems and provide an opportunity to educate residents of local housing units as to conservation measures that can be taken. At the same time, the audit will satisfy a HUD regulation requiring all housing agencies to complete an energy audit.

"We appreciate Greenville Utilities' energy conservation staff taking this on," the director said.

Laney, reporting on the status of local Section Eight programs, said that all 60 units in the University Towers mid-rise complex for the elderly are occupied, and 75 of the 100 units under the existing housing program are leased, with certificates issued for the remaining 25 units. He added that 30 of the 75 units under the moderate rehabilitation program are under lease.

Commissioners approved a revision in the budget for fiscal year 1981 providing for the reallocation of funds realized from the receipt of slightly higher rental income than anticipated. The relocations will fund several pieces of replacement equipment and appliances for housing units.

Work is nearing completion on the new storage building at the central office, Laney said, with shingle work, painting and completion of electrical work remaining. He added that the facility should be finished around July 20.

Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs, reported that two temporary vacancies occurred during June in the 702 units operated by the Authority.

Average rents in the six project areas included: NC 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $81.37; NC 22-2 (Kearney Park), $85.27; NC 22-3 (Moyewood), $89.98; NC 22-4 (Moyewood), $91.51; NC 22-5 (Hopkins Park), $75.89; NC 22-6 (Newtown), $89.32, for an overall average of $85.52.

Farmville Bd.....

Administrator Robert Morgan has recommended, based on town policy, that the town pay the amount it would have cost to install a concrete sidewalk — $1,140. Deans told the board that he was acting in the spirit of what he had perceived to be the town's wish to carry out a turn-of-the-century theme begun with installing free-to-merchants brick sidewalks downtown and that he made the decision to go ahead and get the work done rather than spending months going through channels. He said he would resent being paid only about 30 percent of his actual cost when he was acting in good faith to upgrade an area immediately adjacent to downtown.

The Farmville Thoroughfare Plan was amended to provide for Acton Place, rather than Perry Street, as a minor thoroughfare. Perry Street is scheduled for improvements as part of the C.D. program, so it was decided that Acton Place, which has a wider right-of-way and a properly aligned intersection with Main Streets, would be a better choice.

Approval was given for the following:

— the erection of a yield sign on the northeast corner of N. Waverly Street at the N. Waverly Street Extension cutoff and the removal of the yield sign from the north side of the N. Waverly Street Extension at its intersection with North Waverly Street. This action follows investigation and recommendation by the police department.

— the addition of paving Baldree Street (cost — $10,356) to the town's contract with Barnhill Contracting, Tarboro — certification of the rosters of active municipal and rural fire departments.

— the town's administrator's proceeding with cooperation with Southern Railroad in doing drainage work along the railroad. Town Administrator Morgan emphasized that the work to be done this year is only a part of the overall work that needs to be done.

Obituaries

Glisson

Walter Monroe Glisson, 21, was electrocuted in an accident at a building he was working on in Indian Beach Tuesday.

The funeral service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Friday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by his pastor, the Rev. David Hill, and the Rev. Andrew Hill, a former pastor. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Walter, a native of Portsmouth, Va., spent most of his life in Pitt County and was employed by East Coast Roofing Company. He was a member of Sweet Gum Grove FWB Church.

He is survived by his father, Walter D. Glisson of Fort Lauderdale, Fla; his foster parents: Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Glisson of the Stokes highway; a brother, David Earl Glisson of Florida; a sister, Miss Carol Ann Glisson of Grimesland; three foster sisters: Mrs. Mary Gandy of the Stokes highway, Miss Donna Glisson, Beth Glisson, both of the home; his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Sallie Glisson of Greenville; and his foster maternal grandparents: Mr. and Mrs. Clyde L. Gray of Greenville.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Thursday.

Green

Ms. Lillie Mae Green of 505 W. Twelfth St., Greenville, died Saturday at Pitt Memorial Hospital. Funeral services will be conducted Friday at 2 p.m. at Norcott Memorial Chapel in Ayden with Elder J.L. Wilson officiating. Burial will follow in the Ayden Cemetery.

Ms. Green was born in the Grifton Community of Lenoir County and was reared in Pitt County. She lived in Ayden for many years but had made her home in Greenville for the past eight years.

The body will be at the Norcott & Company Funeral Home in Greenville from 6 p.m. Thursday until carried to the Norcott Memorial Chapel in Ayden at 12 noon Friday, where it will remain until the hour of the funeral.

Family visitation will be at the chapel in Greenville from 8-9 p.m. Thursday.

Hines

Mrs. Maggie Hines of Greenville died Saturday at the Greenville Villa Nursing Home.

Funeral services will be conducted at 4:30 p.m. Thursday at Flanagan Funeral Home in Greenville with the Rev. David Hammond officiating. Burial will follow in the Brown Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Hines was born in Pitt County and made her home here. She was the widow of Charles Hines.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Neva Patterson of Greenville;, one son, Charles Hines Jr. of New York City; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Family visitation will be from 7-8 p.m. Wednesday at Flanagan Funeral Chapel.

Family visitation will be at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. tonight.

'Cold Spot' Sweltering

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn. (AP) — Air conditioners and bathing suits have been pressed into battle against an unexpected heatwave in this tiny town, where bitter cold temperatures have established a nationwide reputation and a cold spot in America's heart.

International Falls, which is near the Canadian border, is almost a fixture on weather maps during winter, but this week it's stretching its mercury to new heights.

After reaching a record-breaking 97 degrees Monday, it was 93 here Tuesday, just 3 degrees short of the record for the day.

"But when it gets into the 90s, why quibble about a few degrees one way or the other?" quipped resident Ray Gorder, who said he has "hardly left home these days." He has air conditioning.

The resort town's 6,439 people are "used to cold up here, but heat like this is unusual," Dave Anderson said of his neighbors. "A lot of people are in the bars or someplace else in front of an air conditioner."

Gen Fischer said some don't like it too cold. Rainy Lake, just a few miles north of town, gets mixed reviews. "It's like ice," she said after momentarily sampling the lake. "Your leg aches from the cold." She estimated the water temperature at 50 degrees.

However, Harvey Fischer, 45, a lifelong resident, sought refuge at Rainy Lake beach, and said, "Monday's stifling heat was a new experience for me."

Meteorologist Tom Fairhurst of the National Weather Service office in International Falls said winds of 15 to 20 mph Tuesday mixed with colder air above to prevent the city from experiencing the second straight day of record heat.

Long-Awaited Hearns-Ray Fight Set For Sept.

NEW YORK (AP) — The long-awaited meeting of Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns will take place in Las Vegas Sept. 16, with officials saying Tuesday that the fight for the universal welterweight championship could produce a record gross of up to $50 mil-lion.

Leonard and Hearns, with just one loss between them in 63 professional bouts, will fight in a special arena being built on the grounds of Caesars Pal-ace. Tickets will start at $50 and go to $500 for ringside.

The expected capacity crowd of 25,000 will be joined by an estimated 1.5 million fans at closed-circuit outlets and anoth-er 1 million viewers on a cable-television network.

Dubbed "The Showdown" by the promoters, the fight prob-ably is the most widely antici-pated since Leonard's bouts against Roberto Duran last year.

The fight will pit Leonard's classic boxing style and grow-ing reputation for theatrics in the ring against Hearns' devas-tating punches and sobering gaze.

It also will present a chance for Hearns, an unheralded fig-ure despite his 32-0 record, to step out of the shadow of Leon-ard, 30-1, 1976 Olympic cham-pion who has become well known from both fighting and frequent TV appearances in commercials and as a ringside commentator.

Hearns is the World Boxing Association's welterweight champion, while Leonard is the World Boxing Council's 147-pound titleholder.

"I've waited 2½ years for this fight," Hearns, known as "the Detroit Hit Man," said at a news conference to promote the bout. "I have a lot of re-spect for Ray. He's not a push-over, somebody you can walk over. But you've been ducking me, Ray, and it's time you got what's coming."

Leonard said the bout would be "what I consider the great-est boxing match in history."

"I once said about a fight with a $1,000 ringside seat that the people pricing the tickets must be crazy," said the fight-er from Palmer Park, Md. "But I'd pay $1,000 to watch this fight."

Dan Duva, head of Main Event Productions Inc., promo-tor of the fight, ref-used to dis-close the size of the purse. But it was learned that guarantees had been made of $8 million to Leonard and $6 million to Hearns, with the possibility of percentages from various gate and related receipts pushing the figures higher.

Whatever the final figures, Leonard will receive the larger amount, a fact that did not seem to bother Hearns.

"I would have fought him for less than what I'm get-ting," Hearns said. "I just wanted to finally fight him."

Mike Trainer, Leonard's chief adviser, said there was a "very good" chance that the Leonard-Hearns bout would gross more than the record $24 million-$25 million taken in by the first Leonard-Duran fight in Mon-treal in June 1980.

Later. Trainer said he

Ellenberger Faces Sentencing Today

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Former University of New Mexico basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger, who still vows he's an innocent man, faced sentencing today for convictions on 21 counts of fraud and making false public vouchers.

The flamboyant former coach who was as well known for his courtside antics as his winning teams, could receive maximum sentences of 18 months in prison on each of the 21 counts, all fourth-degree felonies.

Sentencing was set for today by District Judge Phillip Baiamonte after a seven-man, five-woman district court jury returned the guilty verdicts Tuesday. The jury found Ellenberger innocent on one count of fraud over $2,500, a third-degree felony carrying a maximum penalty of three years imprisonment.

"I don't like it," Ellenberger told reporters when asked about the guilty verdicts as he emerged from the courtroom. "This is not right. It isn't right. It is wrong, this is an absolute wrong."

He and his attorney, Leon Taylor, said they would appeal.

"We're not through yet," Ellenberger said. "Maybe we've just begun to fight. More than one case has been reversed."

"It's not over yet," Taylor said. "There's an appeal coming. A wrong has been committed against this man. It will be reversed."

Ellenberger, 48, was indicted by a state grand jury in May 1980 on 12 counts of making false public vouchers, one count of fraud in excess of $2,500 and nine counts of fraud in excess of $100.

Ellenberger also was indicted by a federal grand jury in 1980 on five counts mail fraud, one count of interstate travel in aid of racketeering enterprises and one count of wire fraud. He was acquitted on all seven counts at a trial last summer.

The state and federal charges stemmed from investigations into the UNM basketball program, triggered by a recruiting scandal that eventually led to Ellenberger's firing.

Meetings Continue As Baseball Strike Reaches 27th Day

By The Associated Press

The player union's executive board has met, the club owners will meet, the National Labor Relations Board hearing continues ... and the baseball strike is now in its 27th day, with no end in sight and the All-Star Game all but left for dead.

Marvin Miller, the union's executive director, said following Tuesday night's meeting in New York — which lasted more than four hours and was attended by at least one player from each of the 26 teams — that the players were as unified as ever.

"As you who have been involved in strikes know, as time goes on you get more militant, solid and stronger," said Miller. "That has happened here without any question. That's not always good. It makes it more difficult to get a settlement.

"What was acceptable in April and May is not acceptable in June or July."

What is not acceptable to the players right now is management's plan for compensation to teams losing free agents. The dispute has been over what free agents, and how many, will be subject to compensation by professional players rather than amateur draft choices, and how the compensation will be determined.

The club owners will meet Thursday in New York with their chief negotiator, Ray Grebey, and other members of the Player Relations Committee. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn will also attend the session, at the owner's invitation. It's the first such meeting for the owners since the strike began June 12.

"We have meetings once in awhile and Mr. Grebey brings us up to date. We don't express our views," said Minnesota Twins President Calvin Griffith.

But a growing number of owners who are dissatisfied with the pace of negotiations reportedly plan to voice their feelings at the meeting.

Meanwhile, Kuhn testified at Tuesday's NLRB hearings that player salaries are escalating at a rate exceeding the one he quoted in a speech to club owners last December, when he cited projections by the certified public accounting firm of Ernst and Whinney which said the average salary would reach $320,000 by 1983.

"I think they're low," Kuhn said of those estimates. "I think the salary has gone up faster than their estimates."

The Players Association has filed an unfair labor practices charge against the owners, claiming they have not bargained

Kuhn Reiterates Belief Salaries Rising Too Fast

NEW YORK (AP) — According to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, salaries of major league baseball players are escalating at a rate exceeding the one he cited in a gloom and doom report he made to club owners last December.

Kuhn testified Tuesday at a hearing before chief administrative law judge Melvin Welles in which the National Labor Relations Board is charging the owners with an unfair labor practice of bargaining in bad faith. The NLRB, acting in behalf of the striking Major League Players Association, wants the owners ordered to open their financial books for examination by the union.

The players association maintains that, in view of statements by Kuhn and some club officials relating to rising player salaries, it needs the financial data for use in its bargaining on the free agent compensation proposal which triggered the strike.

The numbers the union wants to see are essentially the same ones Kuhn referred to in his state of the sport address made at the winter baseball meetings. The commissioner called the address, "my personal view," seeking to separate them from any connection to the formal position of management in negotiations with the players.

The club owners negotiating representative, the Player Relations Committee, has maintained there is no inability to pay for any settlement reached with the players. It has dismissed various statements by Kuhn and a number of owners bemoaning baseball's current financial condition.

In Dallas, the commissioner cited a study by the certified public accounting firm of Ernst and Whinney which said that by 1983, the average major leaguer's salary would be $320,000. Union attorney Donald Fehr asked Kuhn if he thought those projections were accurate.

"I think they're low," the commissioner said. "I think the salary rate has gone up faster than their estimates."

Meanwhile, according to two leading player agents, major

Snow Hill Rips Edenton

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill erupted for five runs in the fifth inning to erase a three-run deficit and then went on to defeat Edenton, 8-5, Tuesday night in the opening-round of the Area I East American Legion playoffs.

The win gives Snow Hill a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three series. The two teams return to Edenton tonight for the second game of the series. A third game, if necessary, will be played Thursday in Snow Hill.

Edenton took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first last night only to see Snow Hill rally to tie the game in the bottom of the second. Kevin Korpi and David Kester walked to open the second and both moved up a base on Wade Corbett's sacrifice.

Edenton pitcher Al Bunch then hit Gary Ream to load the bases and followed that by hitting Bobby Avery to force in Korpi. Kester scored moments later on Greg Hardison's sacrifice fly to rightfield.

Edenton regained the lead in the top of the fifth with a three-run rally. Again, however, Snow Hill countered, this time scoring five runs in the bottom half of the inning to take the lead for good.

Jabo Fulghum singled and Korpi doubled to start the inning. David Kester then walked to load the bases. Corbett doubled home Fulghum and Korpi and Ream was hit by a pitch to load the bases again.

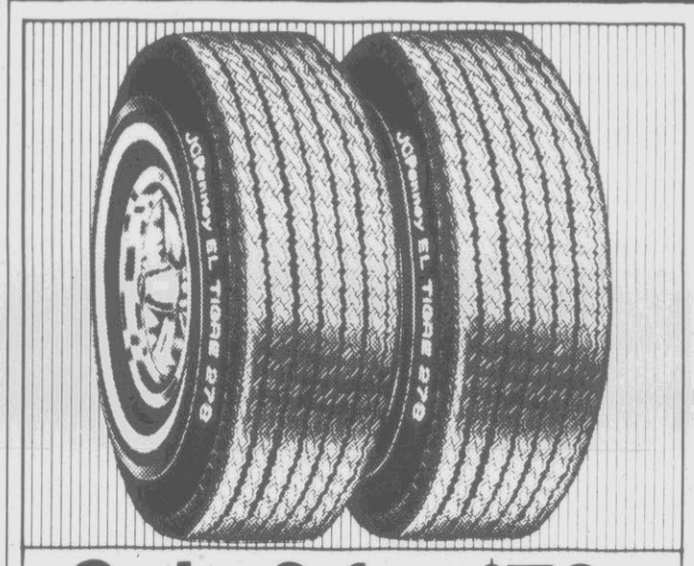

Avery then reached on a fielder's choice to score Kester. No one was out on the fielder's choice. Hardison then walked to force home Corbett and David Shirley then squeezed home Ream and Snow Hill led, 7-5.

'No-Names' Fill Milwaukee Field

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament, which annually fights a losing battle to attract the top names on the tour, begins its 14th run Thursday with what officials concede is even a less attractive field than usual.

But, the same officials say, the no-name field's deterrent effect on the tournament's success probably is overrated.

That's because the 7,010-yard, par-72 Tuckaway Country Club course offers little challenge to the pros, who usually record some of the best scores of the year here. And Milwaukee fans have shown they will turn out to watch low rounds, regardless of who shoots them.

"We feel that people come out here to watch the pros make birdies," said Ken Thelen, a GMO past president.

The GMO lost $135,000 when it offered a $200,000 purse, at the time a sum very competitive with other tournaments, for the first try here in 1968.

Hard work and persistent promotion helped to erase the last of the debts a few years ago, and record crowds have been the rule since the late 1970s. Good turnouts are expected again, especially because the baseball players' strike has sharply reduced competition for the sports dollar.

The pros score well at Tuckaway primarily because the course usually is in impeccable condition and because most of them can reach the four par-5 holes in two shots.

"Some pros have told us that it's one of the best courses they've ever played, condition-wise," Thelen said.

The 36-hole cutoff point here last year was 141, 3 under par. Bill Kratzert won the tournament with a 266, or 22-under for 72 holes.

The entry list includes only four of the 1981 tour's top 30 money winners. Lon Hinkle, who finished second at Tucson, heads the list with $116,004 for the year, 16th best on the tour.

Others in the top 30 here are Bobby Clampett, 25th at $92,564; Ed Fiori, 26th at $89,122, and George Archer, 29th at $78,275.

Fiori, who won the Western Open last weekend, and Dave Eichelberger, champion at Tallahassee and 67th on the earnings list, are the only entrants who have won 1981 tour events. Two of Eichelberger's three other career victories came here in 1971 and 1977.

"It's a very disappointing field," GMO president Gordon Kress said. "It doesn't mean that people won't see good golf. But it's one of the weakest fields we've had in recent years."

A major reason for the lack of big names is the GMO's conflict with the presitigious British Open, scheduled next week. Many golfers claim they cannot play well in Britain unless they get there a week before that tournament.

Also, the GMO purse is only $250,000. The 11 previous events on the tour all pay between $300,000 and $400,000. The Quad Cities Open, scheduled next week in direct conflict with the British Open, pays only $200,000.

Winterville LL

Sunshine Garden . . 12
Dr. Cohen . . . . . 7

Three players had two hits to lead Sunshine Garden Center to a 12-7 victory over Dr. Cohen Tuesday in the Winterville Little League baseball tournament.

The loss eliminates Dr. Cohen. Sunshine Garden Center will play Aldridge & Southerland, a 24-9 winner over Thompson Insurance last night, Thursday. In Thursday's other game, Pizza Inn will meet Edwards Auto.

Leading Sunshine Garden to last night's victory were Derrick Cradle, Joey Williams and Sherman Anderson, all of whom had two hits. Williams had a double.

Dr. Cohen did not have anyone with more than one hit, although Scott Bond did have a double.

A & Southerland . . . 24
Thompson Insur. . . . 9

Seattle Tyson, Matt Stocks and Ronald Farrow all had three hits to lift Aldridge & Southerland to an easy 24-9 victory over Thompson Insurance in the Winterville Little League baseball tournament.

The loss eliminates Thompson Insurance. A & S will now play Sunshine Garden Center, a 12-7 victor over Dr. Cohen last night, Thursday. In Thursday's other game, Pizza Inn will battle Edwards Auto.

Of those with three hits for A & S, Stocks had a triple and a double while Farrow and Tyson both had doubles. Leonard Bryant, Al Newman and Mike Futhrell all had two hits for A & S. All three had doubles for one of their hits.

Carlton Elks led Thompson Insurance with two hits.

Babe Ruth League

. . . Planters Bank . . . 7
Aaction Movers . . . . 6

Planters Bank pushed over a run in the bottom of the ninth inning to nip Greenville Babe Ruth League champ Aaction Movers, 7-6, in the final game of the regular season for both teams last night.

Planters struck first, getting a run in the bottom of the first. The Bankers added five more in the second for a 6-0 lead. Aaction struggled back, scoring once in the third, one in the fifth and three times in the sixth. A final Aaction run in the seventh tied it at 6-6 and forced the extra innings.

Planters finally ended it in the ninth, scoring the game-winner. Richard Pace led off the inning with a single, moving to second on an error on the play. He scored when Tony Daniels followed with a single.

Carlton Wilson led the Planters' hitting with two, while Toby Fischer had three to lead Aaction.

Pepsi-Cola . . . . . 13
Home Builders . . . . . 5

Les Turner had three hits to pace Pepsi-Cola to a 13-5 victory over Home Builders in the Greenville Babe Ruth League last night.

Pepsi broke a scoreless tie in the third inning, scoring seven times to put the game on ice right then. Pat Rand walked and Ted Stanley reached on a fielder's choice. Bobby Casey was hit by a pitch and a wild pitch scored Rand with the first run.

Bobby Buie walked, reloading the bases and Turner singled in Stanley. Tim Norris got a hit to score Casey, and Buie scored when Bill Messick singled. A wild pitch brought Turner in. Pete Grice singled in Norris, and a passed ball scored Messick with the seventh run of the frame.

Pepsi later picked up five in the fifth, and got another in the sixth. The Builders picked up one in the fifth, two in the sixth and one in the seventh.

In addition to Turner's three hits, Stanley, Norris and Messick each had two. Ed Farley had two hits to lead the Builders.

Regular season league play is scheduled to wind up tonight.

Sr. Babe Ruth

Winterville . . . . . 8
Clifton Ins. . . . . 5

WASHINGTON — Winterville scored four times in the first inning and never lost the lead as it took an 8-5 victory over Bill Clifton Insurance in the first round of the Coastal Plain Senior Babe Ruth League's post-season tournament in Washington last night.

In the other game, Washington gained a 10-3 win over Red Oak. Tonight, Greenville's Kiwanis will meet Washington, while Winterville faces Cooper's of Nash County in winners' bracket games. Both Kiwanis and Cooper's had byes in the first round. Clifton and Red Oak will meet later in the tournament in a losers' bracket game.

Dixon Page led the Winterville effort with four hits in four trips, two of them doubles. He scored four times. Jeff Cox added two hits, and Sammy Tucker was the winning pitcher.

Scott Galloway led Clifton, driving in three runs with two hits, one of them a double.

Putt-Putt Roundup

Salem Methodist swept all four matches last night, but Hopewell Pentecostal was the big winner as it won its first Church League Championship at the Greenville Putt Putt Golf Course last night.

Salem was led by Ray Taft, who took medalists honors for the night with a ten under par 62.

Danny Pollard's 65 paced Hopewell as it won three matches to capture its first title.

Farmville Presbyterian split its four matches with Mel Williams' 66 leading the way.

Lee Nichols' 73 and Lynn Cherry's 68 paced Bell Arthur Christian and Faith Pentecostal, respectively.

Hopewell finished at 20-4 to garner top honors. Farmville was second at 16-7-1, while Salem came in third with a 14-10 mark. Bell Arthur was fourth at 8-15-1 and Faith was fifth at 1-23.

In Junior League play, the Sharp Shooters and Junior Aces tied each other while defeating the Hot Shots yesterday afternoon.

Rodney Hooks, with a 76, and Robbie Erhmann with a 73, led the Junior Aces and Sharp Shooters as they tied at 160.

Mike Sturtevant took medalist honors for the Hot Shots with a 70.

The Sharp Shooters are still in first place with a 6-3-3 record, while the Junior Aces are second with a 5-5-2 mark and the Hot Shots are third at 4-7-1.

SNAPPER HI-VAC™ RIDERS GET YOU MOWING BEFORE THE DEW DRIES OUT.

The "high vacuum" action of your SNAPPER Hi-Vac™ rider lets you mow during high moisture conditions. The power will give you a jump on your chores as your SNAPPER vacuums cuttings, leaves and litter into an optional 6 bu. catcher or trailing 30 bu. Bag-N-Wagon. The floating cutting unit gives you a smooth even cut and minimizes scalping and damage. Cutting height and speed can also be adjusted while on-the-go. And, tight spots are no problem when you have immediate response steering.

SNAPPER mowers are worth more because they do more and their price is competitive with other quality mowers.

Duran Returning To Ring In August Vs. Gonzalez

CLEVELAND (AP) — The last time Cleveland hosted a major professional fight, heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali needed everything he had to knock out a burly unknown named Chuck Wepner in the 15th round.

That was in March 1975. More than six years later, the city is likely to host the return to the ring of former lightweight and welterweight champion Roberto Duran in his Aug. 9 bout against junior middleweight Nino Gonzalez.

"Cleveland has always been a good fight city. The interest has to be revitalized and rekindled. If the (baseball) All-Star game doesn't occur, the city will really need something like this to cure its appetite. It's 90 percent certain," Clarence Rogers, a local attorney and one of the fight's main sponsors, said Tuesday.

The fight will be the first for the 30-year-old Duran since Nov. 25, when he complained of stomach cramps and quit his World Boxing Council welterweight championship bout against Sugar Ray Leonard. The Duran-Gonzalez bout would be held in the 9,000-seat Public Hall, where Ronald Reagan and then-President Jimmy Carter debated last October.

"It looks good based upon some of the things that have occurred today (Tuesday)," Rogers said. "We have a commitment from the city on the availability of that date. We don't anticipate any problems."

Gonzalez, 24-1, and ranked just outside the top 10, has signed to fight for $50,000, fight promoter Don King said. He said Duran, 72-2, will get a share of television and cable receipts, but he declined to elaborate. The bout will be nationally televised live on CBS.

McEnroe Vs. Wimbledon

A Final Plea: Smile And Light Up The Peace Pipe

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Before wrapping up the John McEnroe vs. Wimbledon case and putting it into the archives to rest, we would like to offer one final plea:

Drop the hatchets and recriminations, fellows. Light up the peace pipe. Shake hands and come out smiling. Acknowledge you both were wrong. Then get on with it.

The All-England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club has been around for 103 years and it will be around for 103 years more multiplied by 10 to 100. It is, in a way, sacrosanct, the cradle and the beacon of tennis.

"Profaning Wimbledon," says Arthur Ashe, one of the former champions and the current U. S. Davis Cup captain, "is like profaning the Royal Family."

John McEnroe is one of the rare talents that come along perhaps once every 50 years. He is a marvel in innate athletic ability — speed, quickness, reflexes, anticipation — and has natural instincts that few, if any, of his predecessors ever possessed. Only the eroding factor of his volatile temperament has prevented him from completely dominating the sport.

He is only 22, meaning he has many years of championship tennis ahead of him. Big Bill Tilden never really matured until he was in his late 20s, yet won seven U.S. titles and three Wimbledons. McEnroe's prospects are phenomenal.

It doesn't make sense that he and Wimbledon should use those years in an adversary relationship. Not that the so-called Super Brat must douse the fire that burns within his chest, not that Wimbledon change its moss-covered traditions.

Each should respect the other for what the other is — Wimbledon, the dowager queen, austere and regal, mystical, zealously resistant to change and McEnroe, the racket Houdini who can make the faded grass of the Center Court come alive like a rose garden.

It's simply a case, on the one hand, of a young, obstreperous guy bursting with live-wire intensity being nice to a cranky old lady who has refused to step into the 20th Century. And, on the other, a haughty, crusty dame accustomed to having her way bending a little to accept the precocious kid who, with all his personality faults, has many redeeming attributes.

Neither would have to swallow too much pride.

For all the stormy tantrums and insults that the New York bad boy spewed over Wimbledon's dedicated fortnight, both sides were at fault in the ballyhooed case of "The Man Who Didn't Come to Dinner."

As the champion, McEnroe was obligated to attend the Champions Dinner on Saturday night. He should have postponed his private celebration party, donned his black tie and tux, bit his lip and suffered through the ordeal — if so it was — from the shrimp cocktail to the chocolate mousse.

It's an aged tradition going back to Reggie Doherty and Tilden. McEnroe was Wimbledon's honored guest. More than that, he was the guest of Britain and all of the tennis world.

The proud and pompous All-England Club should have shrugged off any rancor that might have accrued from McEnroe's abuses. Retaliation should have been left to the council, tennis' punitive arm that has shown no reluctance to deal harshly.

"Mr. McEnroe, you are our men's champion," Sir Brian Burnett, chairman of the All-England Club, should have said personally to his new titleholder. "We would be happy to have you join us at dinner."

Wherewith McEnroe would have done well to respond: "You may expect me. Thank you, sir."

This would run afoul of the existing characteristics of both, granted, but it would have been a start toward a common ground of sanity.

McEnroe, Connors Glad Davis Cup Back In N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Davis Cup tennis competition returns to New York this weekend for the first time in 22 years. No one could be happier than John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors.

"I like playing in New York and in front of the fans here," said Connors, who will be playing his first Davis Cup match since 1976.

Connors has won three U.S. Opens and been runnerup twice at the New York tournament. One of his victories was in 1978, the year the U.S. Open was moved to the National Tennis Center in Flushing — the site of the Davis Cup quarterfinal clash between the United States and defending champion Czechoslovakia.

McEnroe, who lives here, has won the last two U.S. Opens.

Czechoslovakia will counter with Ivan Lendl, Tomas Smid, Pavel Slozil and Stanislav Birner. Besides defeating Italy to capture the 1980 Davis Cup, the Czechoslovakians also won the Nation's Cup in Dusseldorf, West Germany, earlier this year.

"We have two strategies," said Arthur Ashe, the U.S. captain. "One strategy is to beat Smid twice and win the doubles" in the best-of-five, three-day series. "The other strategy is to try to win 5-0."

Lendl, ranked fourth in the world behind McEnroe, Sweden's Bjorn Borg and Connors, is considered the key for Czechoslovakia. He defeated McEnroe in the quarterfinals of the French Open, losing the final to Borg. He has never beaten Connors in seven meetings.

"Lendl is so good it's not out of the realm of reality that he could win two singles," Ashe said. "That brings us back to our first strategy."

The fast, hard courts at the National Tennis Center also will favor the Americans, although they, like the Czechoslovakians, are adjusting from the grass courts.

"Clay is probably his best surface," McEnroe said of Lendl. "He is very good from the back court and has a good first serve."

Former Bouncer Breaks Own Discus Mark

Plucknett Sets Record

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Ben Plucknett, a one-time bar bouncer from Nebraska, cracked his own world discus record Tuesday night and then denied rumors that he had used a banned muscle-building drug.

"I have never used anabolic stereoids," the 27-year-old American said after bettering his former mark set May 16 at the California Relays at Modesto, Calif., by a whopping 3-feet, 9 inches, to 237-4 (72.34 meters.)

John Holt, a spokesman for the International Amateur Athletics Federation (IAAF), refused to say if any charges had been filed against Plucknett.

Several other athletes, including discus throwers, have been suspended for using anabolic stereoids. Five East European female athletes were banned last year, but the IAAF voted to let them compete in the Moscow Olympics.

The use of anabolic stereoids is still believed to be widespread in track and field. But nobody really knows if it has increased in recent years.

Called Gentle Ben by his fellow throwers, Plucknett is 6-7 and weighs 291 pounds. Speaking softly, almost whispering his answers, he said he felt a big pressure before the meet.

"I wanted to prove it wasn't just a fluke in Modesto. I was so nervous and it was an amazing feeling to break the record here. I really felt good tonight," the bearded American said.

Plucknett, who now lives in San Jose, Calif., has been throwing the discus — one of track and field's most ancient events — for 13 years.

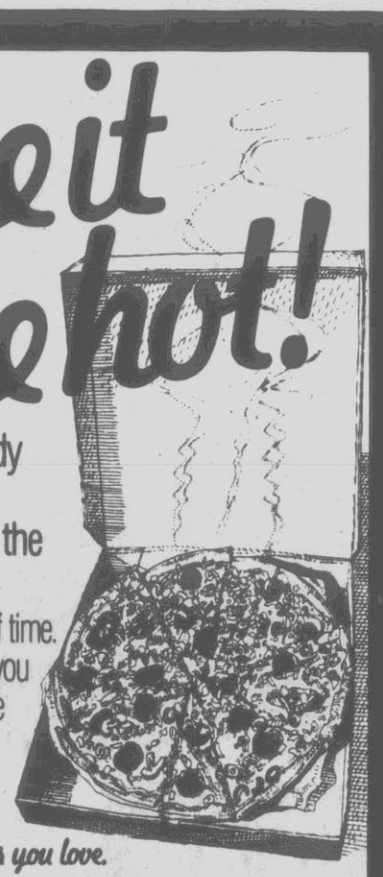

"My strength and speed is pretty good, but I can still improve my technique and I need a lot more experience. This was only my second meet against the very best," he said.

Sebastian Coe, Britain's Olympic Champion, missed the world 1,500-meter mark by just 0.59 seconds in winning the coveted Dickson Trophy in 3 minutes and 31.95 seconds. It was the fastest time of the year and the third fastest ever.

Players Insisting Union Remains Strong, Solid

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty seven days into their strike, the major league baseball players insist they are even more solid than when the walkout began.

The executive board of the Major League Players Association met Tuesday night and, when the four-hour session was over, solidarity was the main word being bandied about.

"If anything, the players are getting stronger," said Kansas City Royals pitcher Dan Quisenberry, one of about 40 players at the meeting. "Each team was polled and each one is taking a much harder line than on June 1. It was a surprise to me."

The meeting was called to gauge the feelings of the striking association members and to update the player representatives on the status of negotiations with the owners. There have been no talks since Saturday when the players rejected management's latest proposal on free agent compensation, which led to the strike on June 12.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association, said he believed that federal mediator Kenneth Moffett was interested in calling another negotiating session for Friday but that he had not been contacted by Moffett.

"We had asked each of our representatives 10 or 12 days ago to call all their players," said Miller, "and get their views, reactions and thoughts. Each member of the board reported on the results of those calls."

The results showed total support of the strike.

"The players unanimously agreed that we have given them a very good proposal and unanimously disagree with the owners last proposal," said Quisenberry. "We talked about every aspect of strike.

"We're confused. Bob Boone and Doug DeCinces (player reps of each league) are extremely frustrated over the negotiations. They think the negotiations are a waste of time. They can't believe it. They think the obners are playing games."

DeCinces concurred.

"The mood (of the players) is definitely one of unity," said the Orioles third baseman. "We get more and more militant as time goes by.

"Players are competitive people and if you push them to the wall, they just get tougher. I would love to see the owners here (at the negotiations). Even a hard-liner would be welcome. If the owners aren't actually going to get the feeling first-hand, I don't trust Ray Grebey to give it to them."

Grebey is the chief negotiator for the owners.

"If the owners got involved, there'd be no strike," concluded DeCinces.

But there is a strike and Miller says it isn't getting any easier to settle.

"As you who have been involved in strikes know, as time goes on, you get more militant, solid and stronger," he said. "That has happened here without any question.

"That's not always good — it makes it more difficult to get a settlement. What was acceptable in April and May is not acceptable in June and July."

"I wish the owners would sit in on the meetings," said Ray Burris, a pitcher for the Montreal Expos. "I can't understand the owners' philosophy. The negotiations are hard to describe... they'd probably even make you mad. How you can even get something done is beyond me. They mess around for two hours and then go to lunch."

Miller noted that the issue of accredited service time — time counting toward pensions and attaining enough major league experience to become a free agent — would be a meaningful one in any settlement.

"Accredited time was mentioned (at the meeting)," he said. "There will be no settlement without it. That is written in stone."

The players acknowledged that they were in a holding pattern at the moment, with the owners scheduled to meet here Thursday.

Texas Rangers pitcher Jon Matlack said the fact that the owners had called their first meeting since the strike began might be encouraging.

"I guess it was a good sign that the owners themselves called a meeting," he noted. "Maybe they'll find out which way they want to sail. We still don't have any logical reasons for (the owners' stand on compensation). Hopefully the owners will get their house together."

Kuhn: Salaries Rising Too Fast...

league owners are awaiting the outcome of the free agent compensation battle before negotiating long term contracts for players.

Dick Moss and Tom Reich, both attorneys who now represent a number of players, testified that clubs have adopted a wait-and-see posture in contract talks.

Management's compensation plan, sole issue in the 27-day-old strike which has forced cancellation of 338 major league games, seeks to provide replacement players for free agents leaving one team to sign with another. The players association claims the plan will restrict the bargaining power of the free agents by inflicting a penalty on teams signing new players. Reich and Moss were called to relate their recent experiences in bargaining.

"Clubs prefer to wait and see what happens on long-term contracts," Moss said.

When pressed by management attorney Louis Hoynes for examples, Moss cited two of his clients, Steve Kemp of the Detroit Tigers and Bump Wills of the Texas Rangers.

"For two years, my conversations with Jim Campbell of the Tigers have been mostly, 'let's wait and see,'" Moss said. "The same thing happened with Eddie Robinson of the Texas Rangers over Wills. I don't mean to imply there was anything wrong with that. It was a legitimate management position."

Reich said he had experienced the same reaction from Pittsburgh Pirate management when he sought to talk about long-term deals for Ed Ott and John Candelaria. Ott since has been traded to California. "I was told many times they were not in a position to discuss those contracts," Reich said.

Earlier, attorneys for the union called three major league owners, Calvin Griffith of the Minnesota Twins, Ruly Carpenter of the Philadelphia Phillies and Jerry Reinsdorf of the Chicago White Sox to the stand.

Griffith and Carpenter were asked to confirm a number of quotes attributed to them in newspaper articles discussing baseball's financial conditions.

During his testimony, Griffith said the Twins had lost $1.2 million in 1980 but added that the club's profit in 1979 had been more than that.

"Do you have any inability to pay your obligations?" management attorney James Garner asked Griffith.

"None whatsoever," the Twins owner said.

Griffith also commented that compensation would not interfere with the bargaining power of free agents.

"If a club wants a player, they're going to go after him, no matter what happens," he said. "I say we've got to get a replacement for the fellow we lose."

Griffith was asked about Kuhn's December speech and said, "The only thing I know is what the commissioner said. I always agree with the commissioner."

Reinsdorf testified that he believed compensation would have no effect on the bargaining power of players. He attached an arbitrary figure of $1 million to the development of a major league player and Fehr asked if it wouldn't bother him to transfer a $1 million asset as compensation.

"If I get a 16th player (the top player available according to management's compensation plan) for a 16th player, I'm interested," he said. "If I give a top quality player for a 16th, I won't think about it."

Baseball Meetings Continue...

in good faith and seeking to force the clubs to make public their financial records. Chief administrative law judge Melvin Welles is hearing the case and will decide whether to seek an enforcement order requiring the clubs to comply.

The union has cited several quotes from various owners, as well as Kuhn, regarding baseball's fiscal condition and claims that if free agency is creating a financial hardship, the books should be opened to prove it. Management's position is that high salaries brought about in part by free agency have not caused a financial problem, and no such problem has ever been claimed in bargaining.

"This is a sham charge," declared Louis Hoynes, attorney for the National League, at Tuesday's hearing. "We shouldn't be here today. We should be in collective bargaining."

When will collective bargaining resume? Talks broke off Saturday and federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said he did not expect to get the two sides together until at least the end of the week, after the players and owners have held their separate meetings.

Asked to forecast when the strike might end, Moffett said, "I really would rather not say. But I have some ideas. Anything can be mediated. Life is a compromise."

The inability of the owners and players to reach a compromise on the compensation issue has forced the cancellation of 338 games to date. The All-Star Game, scheduled for July 14 in Cleveland, has not been officially called off as yet, but with no face-to-face negotiations scheduled that seems to be only a technicality.

The players' meeting was called to bring the union representatives up to date on the status of the negotiations and the NLRB hearings, and to let the negotiators know the players' feelings.

"Every player had his time to give his feeling of how his players are reacting to the strike," said Atlanta pitcher Phil Niekro. "Basically, down the line, they said to stand pat."

"The mood is definitely one of unity," agreed third baseman Doug DeCinces of the Baltimore Orioles, the American League player representative. "We're more and more militant as time goes by. Players are competitive people and if you push them to the wall, they just get tougher.

"I would love to see the owners here (at the negotiations)," added DeCinces. "Even a hard-liner would be welcome. If the owners aren't actually going to get the feeling first-hand, I don't trust Ray Grebey to give it to them. If the owners got involved, there'd be no strike."

"I guess it's a good sign that the owners themselves called a meeting," said pitcher Jon Matlack of the Texas Rangers. "Maybe they'll find out which way they want to sail."

Miller said that if and when an agreement on compensation is reached, the union will press for accredited service during the strike for players who would be eligible to become free agents, as well as toward pensions.

"There will be no settlement without it (accredited time)," said Miller. "That is written in stone."

Besides Kuhn, the NLRB heard testimony Tuesday from player agents Dick Moss and Tom Reich and owners Griffith, Ruly Carpenter of the Philadelphia Phillies and Jerry Reinsdorf of the Chicago White Sox.

Griffith, who testified that the Twins lost $1.2 million in 1980, argued against the union's claim that compensation will decrease the bargaining power of free agents.

"If a club wants a player, they're going to go after him no matter what happens," said Griffith. "I say we've got to get a replacement for the fellow we lose."

The NLRB hearings continue today. In the meantime, the financial impact of the baseball strike on major league cities rises.

In Seattle, former major league pitcher Ted Bowsfield, manager of the Kingdome, estimates that King County has lost between $8,000 and $12,000 for each of the 13 Mariners home games canceled so far. And that's only the tip of the iceberg, says Bowsfield.

"The residual effect that baseball has on the community is big," he said. "Don't ever think that restaurants and taverns don't feel the pinch."

Hearns-Ray Set...

ex-pected the Sept.16 meeting to "net $20 million, and to do that you have to gross in the $30 million range."

But both of Trainer's estimates looked small compared with that of Main Event.

In a news release, the promoters estimated the fight could gross $51.5 million — $5 million from the live gate, $30 million from closed-circuit showings, $15 million from pay-per-view cable TV and $1.5 million from foreign broadcast rights and the sales of posters, programs and corporate sponsorships.

Besides the fighters, those sharing in the pot of gold will include Main Event, Caesars and Shelly Finkel, the rock-music concert promoter who helped convince the Leonard and Hearns camps that the time was right to unite the WBC and WBA titles.

Leonard said the timing hinged on dollar signs.

"I've been looking for this fight for a long time, too, but the timing had not been right, and I mean financial timing," Leonard said as he looked at Hearns during the joint portion of the news conference. "Now I'm looking forward to popping your head."

That remark started a rapid-fire exchange between the fighters.

"It'll be like this all day," said Leonard, striking left fist into right palm with machine gun-like speed. "All day."

"All it's going to take is one shot, Ray," replied Hearns. "One shot, and you wake up in a hospital. One shot is all."

"I'm not saying you haven't fought anybody," continued Leonard. "You've had knock-outs. You've knocked out ... Who have you knocked out?"

"I've knocked out everyone you wouldn't fight," responded Hearns, who has kayoed 30 foes.

Snow Hill scored its final run of the game in the bottom of the eighth. Edenton did not come close to scoring again as Avery, who did not walk a batter in nine innings, shut the visitors down. Of his eight strike outs, seven came in the last four innings.

Edenton was led in hitting by David Jordan, who was three for five with a double. Woody White was two for five with double while Turner Lee and Tony Spivey were both two for four.

Snow Hill was led by Fulghum, Korpi and Corbett, all of whom had two hits. Both of Korpi's hits were doubles.

Builders Proud Of Corn Huskers

MEAN MACHINE — Don Cook, the youngest in a dynasty of farm country mechanics, stands on a model of the biggest corn sheller on earth — the Steinway of husking machines. The Cook family has been building corn shellers for more than 40 years. (AP Laserphoto)

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, Ill. (AP) — They do not perch. They hunker.

They do not so much drive on the fields as dominate them, rising up off the flat black Illinois prairie like carnival rides gone amok, thrusting out in every direction in some grand Rube Goldberg design — all gears and belts and chutes and steel.

Welcome to the home of the mean machine, the biggest corn shellers on Earth.

"None even half as big," said Don Cook, at 27 the latest in a dynasty of farm country mechanics.

For more than 40 years, the Cook family has been making the biggest — and they say the best — mechanical corn huskers anywhere, the Steinway of husking machines.

"When we get done with a sheller, we're all at the door watching them take it away," Cook said. "There goes something we dreamed up and something we made."

In 1939, his grandfather, a farmer and dabbler in the mechanical arts named Amer W. Cook, began building corn shucking devices out here in Tazewell County. He built them by hand, one bolt at a time.

They still do.

"No two shellers are alike," Don Cook said, sitting in the greasy shop amid cogs and drive belts and eight-foot augers. "Each farmer wants his a little different. Here there's no assembly line production. If a guy makes a part, he puts it on the sheller — he does his job start to finish."

Outside the metal hanger that is the Cook Machine Co. is Illinois 24 and miles of cool green patchwork fields. And silence.

Fact is, almost nobody buys corn shellers anymore. Cook makes only f8ve or six a year now. The combine, which both picks and shells, has overtaken the market. The giants — International Harvester and Deere & Co. — have abandoned the corn sheller business. They make comb8nes no2.

With a combine, a farmer can harvest in one pass — pick, shuck and load his corn into trucks in a single stroke. A farmer with a sheller must first picks the cobs, which are then fed into the shucker.

But Don Cook says there are distinct advantages to staying with a sheller. For one thing, it can be cheaper because combined corn harvested in summer must be run through driers powered by gas or electricity, then stored.

Picked corn, still on the cob, can be stored in open air grain bins where it will dry naturally, then be shucked in autumn.

The pick and shuck method also leaves fields filled with standing stalks whose roots hold topsoil in place during the winter months.

"And combines damage the grain. They crack the kernels and so farmers growing seed corn must use shellers," Cook said.

The same goes for popcorn growers, which brings him to the story about the man in the blue suit who walked in off Illinois 24 one drowsy day.

"It was about five years ago and some farmers were all in here sitting around. They always jump all over anybody in a suit because anybody who wears a tie doesn't work for a living," he said. "So this guy in a suit comes in and before you know it this doggone farmer has him climbing all over a sheller. Then he starts drawing on the floor with chalk, all about how to plant corn, when to plant corn, giving him a course in farm theory."

So impressed — or bewildered — was the man in the blue suit that he plunked down cash for a new Cook sheller. It wasn't until they were watching television later that the Cooks realized they'd sold a machine to Orville Redenbacher, the gourmet popcorn king.

Cook shellers are voracious machines. The largest of the three models shells 2,000 bushels an hour, sending a sea of yellow kernels out one side and naked cobs out the other. It is 30 feet long and 13 feet high and weighs 8,500 pounds. But there's not a blueprint to be seen. Grandfather Amer's blueprints were put away in a drawer a long time ago and the old fellows who built two generations of Cook machines, gone now, never needed them anyway.

"The old guys, they taught us — two young guys besides myself. They taught us how to build the shellers. We've added a few things, sophisticated hydraulics and hoses, but basically the shellers are the same," Cook said.

Somewhere in the future, somewhere when fuel and electricity costs rise too high and farmers start to worry more about lost topsoil — somewhere in that certain future, Don Cook sees a return of the old-fashioned corn sheller. And with it, the return of quality and craftsmanship.

"This is the way things used to be done," Cook said, looking out over the prairie shop. "There's real pride in what we make here. The assembly line came in and swept a lot like this away. But not here. Not here."

Lawmakers Will Be In Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Thousands of state lawmakers from throughout the nation will be in Atlanta later this month for the convention of the National Conference of State Legislators.

Cary Bond, Georgia's legislative fiscal officer who is helping to coordinate the gathering, said between 3,000 and 4,000 legislators are expected to attend.

President Reagan announced last month that he will address the convention, which meets July 27-31.

Georgia legislative officials have been planning the convention for two years. The cost is estimated at between $200,000 and $300,000.

Tom Murphy, speaker of the Georgia House, said no state money is involved.

Fees Increased

Drivers license fees, vehicle registration fees, penalties for overweight violations and other fees charged by the Department of Transportation increased July 1.

W. S. Allen, district supervisor for the DOT's Division of Motor Vehicles License and Theft Section said the fees and overweight penalties were increased by the 1981 General Assembly.

The fee for a Class C drivers license increased from $4 to 10, while fees for Class A and Class B drivers licenses increased from $10 to $15. Charges for a duplicate license jumped from $1 to $5, while an original learner's permit increased from $2 to $4. The second or renewal learner's permit went from $3.25 to $7.

Penalaties for overweight violations — over axle weight violations and over license and road weight violations — doubled under the new law, Allen noted.

He added that the former $25 charge for each vehicle or combination of vehicles operated with three or more axles not registered with the Gasoline Tax Division of the N. C. Department of Revenue has been increased to $75.

The fee increase includes charges made for such things as certificate of title (was $3.50, now $5), corrected or substitute certificate of title or duplicate (was $5, now $7), transfer of registration (was $2, now $4), replacement registration plate (was $5, now $9), and additional or duplicate registration card (was $1, now $3).

Fees for private motor vehicle and trailer licenses and fees for for-hire vehicle registrations increased, Allen said, from the former minimum of $19 a year to a Mininum of $21.50 a year. The maximum charge for vehicles jumped from the former maximum of $803 for a gross weight of 79,800 pounds to $923.

The farm truck license fee increased from a minimum of $15.50 to $17.50 while the maximum for a gross weight of 79,800 jumped from the previous $403 to $467.

Planters Sets Ayden Opening

AYDEN — Ribbon cutting ceremonies marking the formal opening of Planters National Bank's new location here were scheduled for today at 5:30 p.m. with bank and local officials expected to take part.

The bank office is located in the newly renovated facility that formerly housed the Captain's Table restaurant at 1114 W. Third Street, in Harris Shopping Center.

Taking part in the ribbon cutting activities, which were followed by open house, were James Powers, PNB president and board chairman of the Rocky Mount based bank; J. Richard Futrell, executive vice president in the Rocky Mount offices; Louis G. Stanfield, PNB vice president and Ayden city executive; and Mayor Ross Persinger.

Clowns providing entertainment for the children and a country and western band for other visitors were scheduled to take part in 6-8 p.m. activities tonight at the bank.

A spokesman for PNB here said that the bank is utilizing some 5,600 square feet at the facility and approximately 50 parking spaces are available. One of two drive-in windows will be operational initially and a second window will be opened in the future when a need for the facility is indicated. The drive-in window will be open all day during banking hours.

PNB moved to the new location from facilities at the corner of Second and Lee Streets. The bank still has a small branch office on Lee Street.

Firm Lacks 2 Permits For Rocket-Launching

By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials of a private company that hopes to go into the satellite business for profit say they are just two permits and three engine tests away from launching their first rocket.

Space Services Inc. of Houston still needs the approval of the Federal Aviation Administration and the Federal Communications Commission before it can go ahead with its first suborbital flight, attorney Art Dula said Tuesday.

Spokesman Charles Chafer said Space Services is aiming for a launch date between July 25 and July 28.

The company loaded its spacecraft at a California assembly site Tuesday for its trek to a launching pad on Matagorda Island off the Texas coast.

Dula said the group has all the standard radio transmission permits from the FCC, but still lacks one for the rocket's safety system.

"That lets them destroy it (the rocket) if it goes off course," Dula said. He said he expected to have to "educate" FCC officials about the permit for the system, "just because no one has ever had to ask for one."

But Dula said he expects no problem getting FAA approval. "We may have to get some kind of waiver," he said, because under present law, unmanned rockets are not allowed in controlled air space.

"We will apply to the FAA formally," he said. "We haven't yet because you have to tell them exactly when you're going to launch."

Three engine tests will be conducted beginning July 20, Chafer said. He said there's about a 50-50 chance they will be successful.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which runs the government's space program, have generally taken a wait-and-see attitude toward the businessmen's plans.

The first flight of the 53-foot rockets will be suborbital and is supposed to end in the Gulf of Mexico. It is chiefly intended to establish the company's credibility, company President David Hannah said.

Space Services announced its intention to make the launching of satellites a private enterprise in June.

At that time, officials estimated that they would evenutally charge about $2 million to put a satellite into a 100-mile-high orbit. Such an orbit appears stationary to observers on the ground.

"We did engine tests back in May and they were more successful than they had any right to be," Chafer said. "We're feeling very positive about it."

Chafer said the rocket is scheduled to arrive Friday at the Texas site.

Space Services leased a new launch site on Matagorda Island in June after some landowners of a Matagorda Peninsula location filed suit, fearing they would be liable for any damage the rocket caused. The suit has been settled out of court, Dula said.

"We determined it was in our best interest to move to the part of the island that was owned by only one person," Dula said.

Again Planning Global Flight

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Balloonist Maxie Anderson is preparing for a second attempt to circle the globe in a balloon, and his partner says, "This time, we'll make it."

Anderson, who gained world fame with the first trans-Atlantic helium balloon flight inn 1978, will be testing out a new craft here with his partner, Don Ida of Boulder.

Anderson, who hails from Albuquerque, N.M., first tried to fly around the world aboard the "Jules Verne" in March 1980 but was forced to set down in India because of gas leaks and other problems.

The next attempt will be made this winter, Anderson says, and the take-off point will be Jaipur, India. He plans to go around the world in 10 days.

Martin County Panel Trimmed

WILLIAMSTON — The Martin County Industrial Development Commission has been changed from a 13-member to a five member commission, with the five members named by the Martin County Board of Commissioners at their July meeting on Monday.

Those appointed to the commission are: Minton Beach, III of Oak City; Leroy Harrison, Rt. 4, Williamston; George Corey of Williamston; Wilford Griffin of Rt. 1, Williamston; and J.R. Crandell of Robersonville. Beach and Harrison have been appointed to two-year terms, with the other three appointed to four-year terms. This gives the group staggered terms. Harrison and Corey were both members of the old 13-member commission.

The mission of this commission is to work to improve chances for economic development in the county.

Changes in state fishing regulations that govern fishing in Roanoke River were discussed by a group of concerned commercial fishermen appearing before county commissioners. It was pointed out that the regulations are not uniform throughout the area. The new regulations cited as being harmful to local fishermen's success is that prohibiting the use of rock nets, stationary nets, or nets with meshes smaller than three inches during the month of April.

The new regulation does not affect fishermen above Scotland Neck or below Plymouth and is not in effect in other North Carolina rivers. It was also stated that since the river has been so shallow this year drift nets and fishing machines have been useless.

The fishermen asked commissioners to make efforts to have the law repealed as it is a non-uniform one applying only to one stretch of one river in an area where spawning does not occur. Commissioners agreed to contact Marine Fisheries officals to determine what action can be taken.

In other action, the board:

— Approved a resolution to form a committee consisting of the sheriff, and the chiefs of police of Robersonville and Williamston to serve as the controlling commission for the Martin County Communications and Police Information Network.

— Approved a resolution adopting a revised county landfill ordinance, with changes dealing mainly with rural garbage collection services.

— Approved an agreement with the Soil Conservation Service for the soil survey mapping program in the county.

Prison Steaks Too Expensive

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A Mother's Day meal served to prisoners at the state prison at Chino was "outrageously expensive," consisting of $4.90-a-pound T-bone steaks, a state senator says.

Democratic Sen. Dan Boatwright demanded an auditor general's investigation Tuesday, saying Los Angeles markets were selling T-bones at the time for $2.59 to $3.09 per pound.

"I am hard pressed to explain to the families I represent in Contra Costa County why the State of California is paying $4.90 a pound for T-bone steaks, or why the state is even buying T-bone steaks in the first place," Boatwright said.

Boatwright said the price of the steaks served at the Institution for Men at Chino included a large fee charged by the vendor for cutting all the steaks the same size. The state senator said the Department of Corrections insists that the steaks must be identical to prevent a riot.

Department officials could not immediately be reached to comment on Boatwright's statement.

John Babich, chief of procurement for the General Service Department, confirmed that the steaks cost $4.90 a pound, but said they were part of a $170,000 contract for beef for six months at the prison. He said the low bid by Specialty Meat Products of Long Beach was $10,000 below the next highest of three bids.

Babich said he welcomed an auditor general's investigation. "We've cooperated with them on other investigations, and will be happy to make everything available to them," he said.

Boatwright said Chino Food Manager F.D. Lisenbery told him he could have bought the steaks for $2.99 a pound. He said Lisenbery did buy the "traditional" Mothers Day T-bones outside the contract in 1979 and 1980, but this year was overruled by the General Services Department.

Babich confirmed that Lisenbery had bought the steaks separately in previous years, but explained that this year he was late with his request.

Still, Pot In Martin Seized

WILLIAMSTON — Seizures were the order of the day during the first week in July with a liquor still and a field of marijuana discovered by Martin County officials.

On Friday, July 3, a homemade liquor still constructed of two 50-gallon barrels was discovered in a wooded area in the Piney Woods area of the county near the Washington County border. Officials confiscated the equipment.

In another wooded area, a field enclosed with woods southwest of Bear Grass, the county's sheriff department located a healthy growth of 106 marijuana plants, some as high as five feet. The marijuana plants were said to be cleverly disguised by surrounding undergrowth, and the plot was marked off by wooden beams.

No arrests have been reported in relation to the two discoveries.

Ben Jones Is Postmaster

The appointment of Ben Jones as Postmaster of Bethel was recently announced by the sectional center manager of Rocky Mount.

Jones will begin work June 27.

Jones, 33, a native of Oak City, served as Postmaster at Merryhill for the past four and a half years.

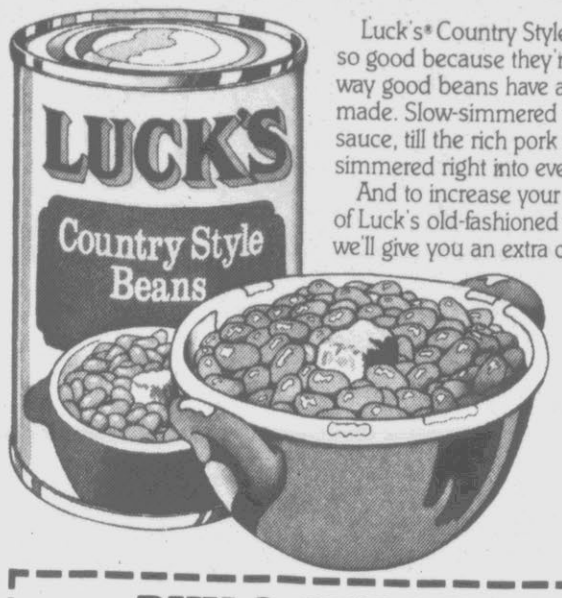

Postmaster selections for offices of this size are made on the basis of merit from a list of qualified candidates submitted to the sectional center manager at Rocky Mount. He selects and recommends to the Postmaster General the best qualified person for appointment to each vacancy.

County Flag Is First Registered

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County is the first North Carolina county to have its flag officially registered with the North Carolina Department of Archives and History.

The flag, green with white workings, bears the county's name and the date March 14, 1774. The center insignia features a plowshare, tobacco plant leaves and a tool handle.

Kids Alerted About Crime By Puppets

By SUSAN LEONARD
The Arizona Republic

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — If Eager Edger were able to, he probably would have cried.

Eager foolishly had given out his address to a stranger, and now he and his sister were being held hostage in their house while their parents were gone.

"Why won't you let us go?" asked Eager, desperation in his squeaky voice.

"Because it's fun to keep little kids in their house and scare them when no one is home," said Gen Rummy, a sneaky, evil woman who had had too much to drink.

To the youngsters who recently watched Eager and Ms. Rummy perform at Our Lady of Mount Carmel School here, the situation and the characters seemed very real — and educational.

That's the point, according to officials with the Tempe Police Department and Mount Carmel, who supervised a recent puppet show starring Eager and Ms. Rummy.

The act was part of a five-day series of puppet shows that a group of Mount Carmel eighth-graders recently developed and put on for their school's younger students and for students at Laird Elementary School. The idea for the program originated with the Tempe Police Department.

"It's been a very successful program," said Al Taylor, a Tempe detective who helped develop the program to teach students about crime, police and how to protect themselves against dangerous situations and dangerous people.

The pilot program debuted this year at Mount Carmel and another Tempe school, Kyrene Junior High, which also presented puppet shows to a Tempe elementary school. In all, 1,100 students saw the shows, Taylor said.

He says police plan to expand the program to several other schools next year because it has been so successful.

"The older kids have a greater impact on the younger students than the teachers or the police," Taylor said. "And we believe all of the students will remember the concepts longer this way than if they read them in a book."

In the play involving Ms. Rummy, the children eventually are rescued by a policeman named Justin Time — and the audience gets the message.

"The lesson to this story is don't give information over the phone or answer the door to strangers," Officer Time says at the end of the show.

Taylor said the program has been well-received by the younger students, the police, the teachers, the Sunrise Kiwanis, which put up $400 for it — and, most of all, by the eighth-graders, who wrote the scripts and made the hand puppets and the sets.

Sister Virginia Marie Crilly, one of the eighth-grade teachers at Mount Carmel, said 43 students out of a class of 52 worked on the voluntary project.

The subjects of the series were vandalism, shoplifting, traffic safety, home safety and the dangers of associating with strangers.

Speedy Fingers Earned Award

BALTIMORE (AP) — When Gloria Schweigman entered Staff Builders' World's Fastest Typing Contest last year, she went home with just a special T-shirt.

This year the Baltimore woman received not only the title of World's Fastest Typist, but also a grand prize of $1,000, an electronic typewriter and a first-place trophy. In the national contest, co-sponsored by Olivetti, her net winning speed was 114.6 words per minute.

Ms. Schweigman, who is in the word processing department of the Maryland Casualty Co., credits her early piano training for much of her skill on the typewriter, as well as for her crocheting ability.

Zoo Condors Returned To Homelands

By JOE WING
For AP Newsfeatures

NEW YORK (AP) — Five young Andean condors from the Bronx Zoo here and four from the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center in Maryland are soaring over the mountains of Peru and providing scientists with data that may help them save the tiny remnant of the California condor population in the United States.

These Andean vultures are the largest flying land birds in the world; the Californians are somewhat smaller.

The transfer of the captive-bred South Americans to their ancestral homeland has crowned a 13-year breeding project by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and others. Not only have Patuxent researchers been involved but also Peruvian scientists and experts from the National Audubon Society, the University of Wisconsin and New York City's big zoo.

Their objective has been to develop reliable capture, propagation and reintroduction techniques before trying them out on the California birds, which now number fewer than 30. Even so, they probably are more numerous than the whooping crane, which was down to 14 before it started its slow progress under protection and artificial nurturing to the hundred or so now flying free.

The Andean condor also is endangered but not so much as its North American cousin. Four breeding pair of them were captured for the experiment. In 1973 they produced their first chick. Generally they lay only one egg every other year but the experimenters found they could double this by removing the young from their parents' enclosure well before the start of the next breeding season. Then they discovered they could double production again, to four times normal, by stealing the first egg laid and incubating it artificially.

The birds transplanted to Peru by air made the transition from captivity to freedom with remarkable ease, says Dr. Stanley Temple of the University of Wisconsin, who has been supervising the project down there. They have had no trouble getting along with their wild relatives and learning to find food.

Meantime, the California condor project is hanging fire. Initiated by the Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Audubon Society, it was finally authorized last year over the vehement objections of those who thought it too risky for the birds, or unnatural.

The idea was to capture all or most of the remaining condors and start an artificial breeding program such as that which has helped propagate the whooping crane and as that being used for the Andean condor.

Things came to an abrupt halt last year, however, when a wild nestling died unexpectedly while being examined by a researcher. Permits for the project were withdrawn at once by the state of California pending further consideration. There is hope, however, that it will yet go forward.

Parents' Voices Said A Comfort

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Tape recordings by parents seem to be a comfort to hospitalized children, according to Gail McCain, instructor in Nursing at the University of Rochester School of Nursing and clinical specialist in pediatrics at the university's Strong Memorial Hospital.

Miss McCain reports that in a study the children, all between age 4 and 8, asked again and again to hear the tapes, played at the "lonely" times, just after awakening in the morning and again at naptime. They seemed to suffer less "separation anxiety," thanks to hearing their parents' voices, she said.

CZECH ON TRIAL

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Jiri Gruntorad, a member of Czechoslovakia's human rights movement, is on trial for anti-state activity, Czech emigre sources say.

Imports Of Pistols Are Seen Rising

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States appears to be importing an increasing number of parts to be assembled into the small handguns that gun-control advocates blame for much of the crime in the country.

Last year U.S. imports of pistol and revolver parts were valued at $6.2 million, up more than a third since 1978 and 16 percent ahead of the 1979 value, according to a report from the U.S. International Trade Commission.

The largest 1980 shipments, $2.61 million worth, came from West Germany. Italy was a fast-rising second with $2.2 million. Brazil shipped $799,000 worth, more than twice as much as the year before.

The report gave no figures that would permit a calculation of the number of weapons that could be made from foreign parts.

But the ITC study did say, "Approximately 10 percent of domestic production consists of pistols and revolvers assembled from foreign parts on a domestic frame or receiver, primarily in Florida. These assembly operations exist, in effect, to circumvent the import restrictions on small finished pistols and revolvers under the Gun Control Act of 1968. The recent production increases in pistols and revolvers are at least partially due to the growing demand for these weapons for use in personal protection."

U.S. civilian handgun production rose from 1.89 million in 1976 to 2.17 million in 1979 and 1.8 million in the first nine months of 1980, the report said. The 1980 figure represented an increase of 16 percent from the comparable period of 1979.

The 1968 law requires that imported revolvers have a barrel at least 7.5 centimeters — a little less than 3 inches — long, to make them harder to hide. But it does not restrict imports of the parts to build revolvers, however small.

These parts will become cheaper because duties on them are declining under an international agreement to 8.4 percent in 1987 from 21 percent in 1979.

"Parts from West Germany are usually assembled into inexpensive handguns," the report said. "Those from Italy cover a range of values, and those from Brazil are, atypically, assembled into high-quality, expensive handguns. These guns tend to supplement domestic production. Very few are intended for sporting purposes."

In addition to the parts for the smaller guns, another 10 percent of U.S. production is imported. The ITC report said the imports of the finished products "from Belgium tend to be high-value, high-quality handguns; those from Brazil fall in the lowest value levels imported. Those from West Germany and Italy cover the entire price range."

Though previous efforts have failed, several bills now before Congress seek to tighten the import provisions of the 1968 law. But President Reagan, who was wounded by a handgun in March, has long opposed new laws and has said he still feels that way.

His wife, Nancy, said before the inauguration that her husband had shown her how to use a "tiny little gun" that she kept in a drawer near her bed.

Guthrie Heads Campaign

CHICAGO (AP) — Janet Guthrie, a professional race driver for 16 years and the first woman to drive in and finish an Indianapolis 500 race, has been named chairman of a national campaign sponsored by the women's division of the National Safety Council.

In the "Make It Click — Buckle Up" program she will promote the use of safety belts. Her driving tips include: use concentration when driving any motor vehicle; keep your emotions under tight control when you're behind a wheel; use good judgment when you're on the highway; be cooperative and considerate of other drivers.

Senate May Act On Delayed Insurance Bill Today

By W.A. WERONKA Jr.
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Senate still has yet to vote on a controversial insurance bill despite two days of debate.

The bill made it to the Senate floor last Thursday but after more than an hour of debate, the Senate voted to postpone any action until Tuesday, even though an amendment by Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, was pending.

The same plot was followed Tuesday, with action on the amendment again delayed by adjournment, which postponed any action until today.

The bill would eliminate auto liability insurance surcharges on drivers without traffic points on their records. But surcharges would be eliminated altogether in March 1982. Plus, it places a ceiling on rate increases tied to the urban Consumer Price Index, now about 12 percent a year.

But in July 1982, the ceiling would be lifted and a competitive rating system would be put in, allowing companies to file for rate increase individually and encourage competition.

The Soles amendment would maintain the ceiling and eliminate the surcharges on safe drivers, but would take out the section on competitive rating.

Soles said the competitive rating section was added on in the Senate Insurance Committee because supporters did not think it would pass until tacked on to a bill that had "strong support."

He also passed out copies of an Associated Press story that quoted an insurance industry lobbyist as saying most insurance companies needed about a 20 percent increase in rates because the current rates are "woefully inadequate." The spokesman in the article said the rates were inadequate because the 6 percent ceiling on insurance rate increases, in effect since 1977.

He added, "This 20 percent increase will make the gas tax increase fade into the background. If you pass this you will hear the hue and cry."

One of the bill supporters, Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, said the combination bill was a "compromise" because the House-passed version could not get out of committee otherwise.

Jordan said this was a way to help straighten that out. He pointed out that competitive rating has worked in commercial insurance lines in the state and can work for auto insurance.

Before any vote was taken a motion to adjourn was made and passed.

Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg, chairman of the Senate Insurance Committee, said after the chamber adjourned that the fate of the bill was "a toss up."

"It changes from moment to moment," she said.

In other legislative action:

Obscenity

A House committee gutted a Senate-passed bill that would have made it easier to prosecute obscenity cases in North Carolina. The House Judiciary I Committee turned the bill into a resolution which, rather than altering the state's obscenity laws, authorizes a legislative commission to study the laws on pornography.

The bill was sponsored by Sen. John Cavanagh, R-Forsyth, and in its original form would have dropped the legal requirement for an adversary hearing in obscenity cases. The hearings are required in order to obtain a legal declaration that a book, magazine, film or other material is obscene.

The bill passed the Senate, but ran into trouble in the House committee after a public hearing was held in which opponents raised questions about its constitutionality, saying the change would impede freedom of speech.

The committee approved the study-commission version and sent it to the House Appropriations Committee for inclusion in a group of study commission bills being considered for funding.

The committee also approved a bill introduced by Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, that would set up a special five-man obscenity prosecution team in the attorney general's office. The team would be responsible for handling the prosecution of all cases in adversary hearings under current law. The bill was also sent to the appropriations committee because it calls for spending $300,000.

Adoption

The Senate further weakened and then approved a bill that would permit adopted persons to gain access to certain non-identifying information about their biological parents. The Senate first adopted a string of amendments to the already-weakened bill, removing a section that would allow adoptees to learn thee religious preference of their biological parents.

The bill was then approved 35-9 and returned to the House for concurrence in Senate amendments.

State Workers

A bill was enacted authorizing payroll deductions for state workers who are members of employee associations. The Senate voted 34-9 to give the measure final approval and the House later voted to concur in Senate changes.

The vote came after the Senate defeated a move by Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, an opponent of the bill who wanted it sent to the Appropriations Committee.

Opponents charged that allowing the deductions would lead to public-employee unions, but supporters said the bill included sufficient safeguards to prevent collective bargaining. The bill would not apply to teachers.

Schools

Two western North Carolina legislators sponsored a bill that would create a special reserve fund for use in helping counties build and maintain public schools. The bill would start the fund with a $40 million appropriation in 1982.

Reps. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, and Gordon Greenwood, D-Buncombe, filed the measure.

The state Board of Education has proposed a $600 million bond issue to help counties construct facilities, but the bond issue bill has run into legislative opposition and remains stuck in committee.

State Employees

The Senate gave tentative approval to a bill that would not allow state employees to grow faster than the state's population increases.

But the chamber rejected an amendment introduced by Republican Sen. Cary Allred of Alamance County which would have required the state to decrease the number of employees if the population decreases.

Contributions

The Senate gave tentative approval to a bill that would require non-resident campaign contributors to sign a statement, saying the money came from their personal fund.

Political Dinners

The Senate rejected a bill that would have allowed corporations to buy up to two tickets to a political fundraising dinner if the cost did not exceed $50 per ticket.

Opponents argued that corporations are not allowed under state law to contribute to state campaigns and the bill would allow that. The vote was 27-11 against the bill.

Prostitution

Mecklenburg County representatives split over a bill aimed at getting prostitutes off the street in downtown Charlotte. The bill would set a 60-day minimum sentence for first-degree prostitution, a misdemeanor often involving two prostitution arrests within a year.

The House tentatively approved the bill, 51-46, with a final vote set for today.

Rep. Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg, tried to amend the bill to prohibit the prostitute from being punished unless the patron appeared in court to testify against her. She said that ideally, both the customers and prostitutes should be punished.

But Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, led a successful move to table the amendment, which she said would gut the bill. Ms. Foster said police do not have the legal tools to prosecute the prostitutes now.

Power

The House tabled a Senate-passed resolution acknowledging the state's concern that adequate electric power be provided in the future.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, called the measure a "bad, bad resolution" because it would be "asking the (state) Utilities Commission to raise rates so utilities will have the capital to build new facilities."

It was the second time the bill, introduced by Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, had been debated on the House floor. The first time the bill was sent back to a committee.

FINAL MEMORIAL — Pauline Gagnon, widow of Rene Arthur Gagnon, the last survivor of the Marines who raised the flag on Mount Suribachi, Iwo Jima, receives the flag that covered his coffin from Marine Gunnery Sgt. Filipe Torres at Arlington National Cemetery Tuesdy. Gagnon was first buried in Manchester, N.H., following his death in 1979. His remains were reinterred Tuesday when requirements for burial at Arlington were waived at the request of the widow. (AP Laserphoto)

Will Pay For Crop Damage

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state will reimburse farmers for crops inadvertently destroyed when herbicides being sprayed by highway crews drifted to cultivated fields in Wake, Johnston and Wilson counties, officials said Tuesday.

W.D. Johnson, director of the Transportation Department's landscaping unit, said crews used the herbicide Dicamba to kill off broadleaf weeds along U.S. highways 64 and 301 and along Interstate 95.

But T. Dan Lockamy, an adjustor with the tort claims division of the N.C. Attorney General's Office, said some fraction of 40 to 50 acres of crops was damaged by the chemical.

"Anybody who had any crops growing alongside of the roads where they were spraying seems to be affected," Lockamy said.

He added that agriculture specialists advised waiting several weeks before assessing the total damage.

Johnson said the uppermost leaves of some tobacco plants growing in fields beside the highways were caused to shrivel up by the herbicide. But he said it was not yet apparent whether the damage was permanent.

"Once the crop has had a chance to recover we will come back and appraise the damage," Johnson said.

He said unusually early application of the herbicide and unseasonably high temperatures may have contributed to the trouble, adding that dicamb had been used for three seasons without complaints from farmers.

This time, however, a group of farmers with crops affected by the chemical is meeting with transportation officials and representatives of the Attorney General's Office to work out a settlement.

Blind Given Integrated Education

BANDUNG, West Java (AP) — A pioneering education program is making it possible for blind children in Indonesia to attend school along with sighted students.

"To be blind, at any age, in any country, creates severe hardships," says John H. Costello, associate director of Helen Keller International (HKI), which is assisting the government of Indonesia in the project.

"But in developing areas of the world, where mere survival often means hanging on by the barest of threads, the fate of blind children can be especially cruel," he adds. "Many are doomed to grim lives as beggars, or to lives shortened by disease and malnutrition."

Only about a thousand of an estimated 250,000 blind children in the country receive any formal education, Costello says, and most have been forced to go to special schools for the handicapped.

Now, youngsters like Yeyep Erwin, 14, and his younger brother, Dadang, 9, both blind, walk five miles back and forth to school each day from their small farming village outside of Bandung, to learn along with their sighted peers.

"Before I went to school, I felt very sad," recalls Yeyep. "I was always wondering what I would be when I have become adult. How could I live without knowledge and experience? I felt that the world was in darkness in which there was no light at all."

The brothers are among scores of blind children in Indonesia now getting an education, thanks to the experimental program launched in 1978 with the help of a team of experts from HKI, a U.S.-based voluntary assistance agency that works to combat blindness in developing countries.

The program receives financial support from the U.S. Agency for International Development, UNICEF, Lions Clubs and other groups, as well as volunteer assistance from American women living in Indonesia.

According to Frances Wiesenfeld, HKI education project leader in Bandung, "An estimated 15,000 individuals, including blind students and their families, teachers and other educational personnel, have already benefited from the program."

And, Mrs. Wiesenfeld points out, the youngsters' classmates have also learned a valuable lesson:

"The blind are really no different from children who can see, yearning as they do to develop their individual talents and abilities. In the classroom, playground and elsewhere, these blind youngsters are fast becoming integrated — in a very real way — into the mainstream of Indonesian life."

"My sighted classmates are very helpful," declares Ade Momon, a fourth-grader. "They often read to me when necessary, and during recess they take me to play in the schoolyard. They help me if I have difficulties."

Says 8-year-old Yayan Suryana, "I do not feel inferior any more because I can do the same things sighted children can do. Even though I am blind, I will work hard and learn much. I want to become an engineer."

Yayan's teachers agree that he is making rapid progress, helped by special tutoring from HKI-trained teachers and Braille books, maps and other educational aids developed by HKI staff and local volunteers.

In the classroom, the teacher treats the blind child virtually the same as a sighted pupil, though when he writes on the blackboard, the teacher reads aloud what he is writing.

If the blind child does not follow certain parts of the lesson, he can request that the teacher review the material after class. Parents are also counseled so that blind children have backup support at home.

New Sewage Plant May Go Unused

WANTAGH, N.Y. (AP) — A $14.5-million sewage treatment plant being completed here has "no use," but it's cheaper to finish it than break construction contracts and face lawsuits, officials say.

Built with federal, state and local funds as an alternative to ocean dumping of sludge, the plant became a white elephant before it was finished because a federal court ruled that ocean dumping — which is cheaper — could continue.

Some environmentalists also say that using the treated sludge as compost on farmland might be more hazardous to the environment than the ocean dumping, because of the presence of heavy metals and toxic substances in the sludge.

Nassau County officials decided to go ahead with construction of the plant, they say, because it would be more expensive to get involved in legal battles over breaking construction contracts.

Nassau County borders New York City's borough of Queens on Long Island.

Acknowledging that at the present time "there is no use for the plant" and its specially designed equipment, Deputy County Public Works Commissioner James Gillen feels that the county "may or may not find some use for it in the future."

But Deputy County Executive Owen Smith is more optimistic.

"I'm sure it will be used for something, somehow," he said. "If it becomes obvious over the years it can't be used for its intended purpose, we'll park trucks in here or something."

Smith said county officials had gone as far as Pennsylvania in their efforts to find some place "where we can truck the dried sludge so that we can use this plant."

But he said that so far they have found no one to accept the sludge.

Richard Dewling, acting regional administrator of the federal Environmental Protection Agency, says the Wantagh plant and others like it in the metropolitan area may still play a useful role in continued ocean dumping.

But the Nassau officials disagree, saying the dried sludge the plant would produce, with a consistency of shoe leather, could not be pumped through a pipeline to the boats that take the sludge to the ocean dumping sites.

The treatment plants were the outgrowth of a furor in 1976 over a fish kill in the area 12 miles out, where New York City and suburban communities were dumping their sludge. Public reaction grew more heated with reports that a giant sludge mass was moving toward land and would pollute the area's beaches.

Dewling says no evidence has been produced to support the latter fears and the fish kill would have occurred without sludge dumping.

The ocean dumping was ordered stopped as of next Dec. 31, but U.S. District Judge Abraham Sofaer in Manhattan federal court issued a preliminary ruling last April overturning the ban. He said the EPA "overreacted" in ordering the total ban on ocean dumping.

Call Your Agent In Case Of Fire

NEW YORK (UPI) — Homeowners should immediately contact their insurance agents after a fire in their home, according to the National Insurance Information Institute.

Agents can give advice on how to minimize further damage, find temporary living quarters and often provide emergency funds if needed, institute reports said.

Owners should keep track of all repair costs, including boarding up windows, which are considered part of the insurance claim.

Policy holders should also be aware they must submit a signed and sworn statement of loss within 60 days after their insurance company requests it.

Ron Ely Again Pageant's MC

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — NBC expressed its satisfaction with Ron Ely as a replacement for Bert Parks by announcing the former screen Tarzan will host the Miss America Pageant for the second straight year.

Ely became a storm center last year when it was announced he would replace Parks who had been master of ceremonies of the beauty contest for two decades.

This year's Atlantic City beauty event will be telecast Sept. 12 with Dorothy Benham, Miss America of 1977, as co-host.

A Genuine Spy Thriller Slated

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A genuine spy thriller will be brought to the screen next year by English director Michael Winner with a movie based on the cold war spy scandal involving three British defectors.

Titled "Philby," the picture traces the actions of H.A.R. (Kim) Philby, Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess.

Say 'Worst Critics' Never Saw The Show

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Post-Newsweek Productions has a reputation in the TV syndication business built on serious-minded stuff like "Agronsky & Co." and the "The Charlie Rose Show." So no wonder the concern when a proposed series called "Young Lives" found itself embroiled in rather nasty controversy.

The high — or low — point came during the TV programmer's convention in March, when at least five church-related groups complained about "Young Lives" — though Post-Newsweek insisted at the time that none of the protesters had seen the show.

Ken Livesay, the series' producer, took part in a panel discussion during the convention on "Sex and Morality on TV," along with Cal Thomas, a spokesman for the Moral Majority, one of several groups behind a campaign to boycott companies that advertise on programs considered "inapproriate."

Thomas spoke largely in general terms of TV's fascination with sex, and maintained television does not portray life in America as it is. Livesay insisted, "We're trying to provide what Cal says — a broad spectrum of life."

In an interview some time after the convention, Joel Chaseman, president of Post-Newsweek Stations, Inc., expanded on Livesay's observation, with a dig at the people he called "suppressionists."

"They say that widespread teen-age sexuality and drug use are major problems in our society," Chaseman said, "but they say that any program that attempts to deal with these problems should be suppressed.

"I think that's entirely wrong, short-sighted and counterproductive.

"We think it's possible," he said, "to do a program that is on the one hand realistic, and on the other provides parents and kids and others with role models and genuine solutions to problems they might face."

Post-Newsweek is partly responsible for the controversy. The original promotional material for "Young Lives" was at least mildly suggestive, despite the syndicator's claim that the show "is for all who strive to understand and deal with the crises that dominate so many young lives. Identity. Peer group pressure. Sex. Drugs. Parental communication."

Take, for instance, this "quick cut" from a promotional note for the program:

"Monday: Mutually attracted, Brad and Melanie are paired off for a study group project in class — on sexuality and health. Later in the day, Brad starts inviting his friends to his unchaperoned party on Friday night. His mother, Cheryl Hoffman, a nurse who works the graveyard shift, is at home getting dressed after making love to Johnny Royce. Her daughter Susan walks in. Susan — talented, precocious, hates Royce — convinced he is a 'hood.' ..."

On film, the scenes described in the promotional material are almost tame — hardly the stuff of controversy, comparable perhaps to the films church groups themselves produce on "teen-age problems" for Sunday morning broadcast.

"It was a tough show to decide to do," Chaseman said. "We were concerned it would be labled a teen-age soap opera. It's hard not to be overwhelmed by categories and labels and cliches.

"We had in mind an honest-to-God family show, that dealt in a real way with real problems."

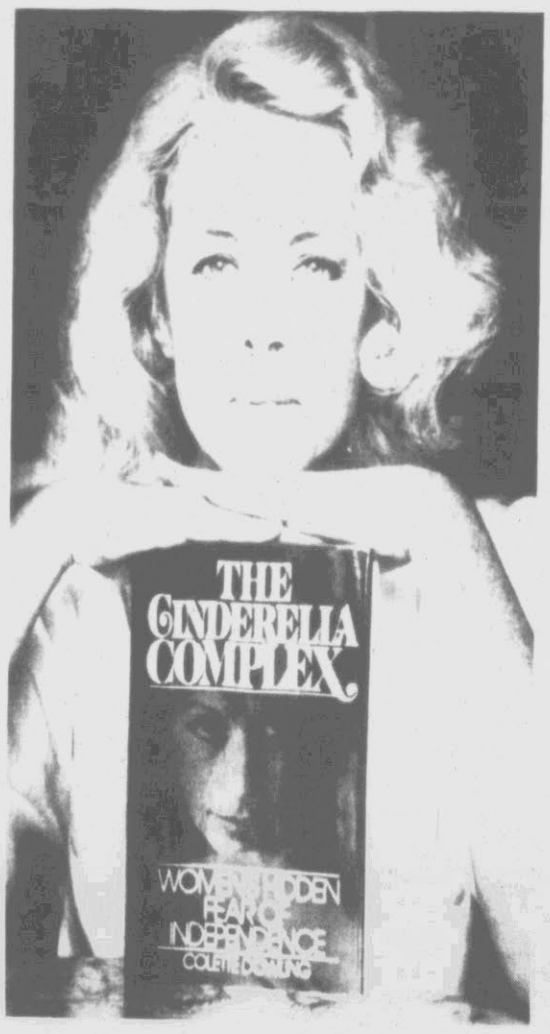

The series' producers, Chaseman said, sought the counsel of experts on adolescent development and psychology at two major institutions, Stanford and UCLA. "It was important to do something that rang true," he said, "and yet would show troubled people that their problems can be solved."

Alas, programmers were not receptive to "Young Lives," and Post-Newsweek, perhaps under a bit of pressure from the parent Washington Post Co., decided to offer "Young Lives" to stations in major TV markets, free of charge, for week-long trial in July.

By mid-June, several stations, including the four in the Post-Newsweek group — in Detroit, Hartford, Conn., Miami and Jacksonville, Fla. — had agreed to run "Young Lives" on the test basis.

"We took considerable risks," Chaseman said. "We could have done another game show, but we took the tough course. We didn't do one pilot, we did five. We didn't hire one expert, we got two universities.

"We did everything we were supposed to do, but maybe we did it in the wrong year," he said. "We've been subjected to the worst criticism from people who have made no effort to even see the show."

STIRS CONTROVERSY — Author Colette Dowling, a freelance writer for 18 years, has stirred controversy with the release of her book "The Cinderella Complex", a lengthy definition of what she claims is a feminine mind-set in America. According to the 43-year-old Dowling, women (whether they are highly-paid executives or housewives) harbor the same hidden wish she once had — to have someone else take charge of their lives. Yesterday's Cryptoquip — COMPUTER GOOFED; MADE UNFAIR PROGNOSTICATIONS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: R equals S

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JULY 9, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Confine your activities to the details that require your attention in any plans that have breadth and scope to them. Many benefits are due to take place at this time. Keep cheerful.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Engage in small duties that need your attention and forget bigger ventures for the time being. Try to help associates more.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Doing thoughtful things for good friends will be appreciated and will strengthen the alliance. Strive for happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Attend to public duties early so you don't lose out in an important business deal. Stear clear of a troublemaker.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be sure to handle the minute details of a new plan you have in mind. Don't neglect important research.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Deal fairly with debtors and creditors and excellent results will follow. Make sure everything is in order at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You would be wise to carry through with your end of any agreement made with others. Engage in your favorite hobby.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take time to make your environment more charming so you will feel happier. The evening is fine for entertaining friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good day to correct errors you have made in the past. Show the depth of your affection to the one you love.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you don't lose your temper with an associate or there could be unfortunate results. Use common sense.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make sure you work carefully so that you don't make errors at work today. It's important to use caution in travel today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be alert in the handling of finances now, otherwise you could make costly errors. Spending less and saving more is wise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't broadcast personal woes to others at this time. Avoid the source of your discontent and express happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will may want to argue with others and should be taught early to conserve energy for more constructive activities. Otherwise, your progeny could get into needless trouble. A fine chart for the field of engineering.

Illinois Saving In Gasohol-Use

NEW YORK (UPI) — Conversion to gasohol by Illinois state vehicles is saving an estimated 700,000 gallons of gasoline in 1981, according to an energy-oriented publication.

All state vehicles were converted to use gasohol last year in an effort to gain better mileage and reduce the amount of maintenance necessary, according to Energy User News.

To encourage use of gasohol, the state circulated a directory of gasohol retailers around the state.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC
COLIFORM BACTERIA FOUND IN DRINKING WATER

During June 1981 coliform bacteria was found in drinking water samples from the SHADY KNOLL MOBILE ESTATES above the limit as it appears in the "Rules Governing Public Water Supplies".

Coliform bacteria is normally found in the intestinal tract of man or other warm blooded animals and can be easily found in drinking water samples. The presence of coliform bacteria indicates that some contamination has occurred.

In an attempt to correct the cause of the contamination we have done the following:

Water samples collected and submitted by a representative of the N.C. Division of Health Services on June 18, 1981 show the water to be free of coliform bacteria.

Shady Knoll is working with the N.C. Division of health services to insure that the water quality is satisfactory.
