$12.4 Million City Budget Is Adopted

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

After weeks of laboring over revenue problems associated with the new 1981-82 budget, the City Council last night formally adopted a $12,408,677 financial package for the city and a $49,435,800 Greenville Utilities budget.

The city segment reflects a tax rate of 49 cents per $100 valuation, based upon a new tax valuation of $734,883,601 and projected collection rate of 98 percent. The value of property within the city increased some 76 percent this year over 1980, from $417.3 million.

The increase in property values and subsequent jump in tax revenues meant a reduction in the tax rate from the 1980-81 figure of 77 cents was in order this year. Mayor Don McGlohon said last night that several weeks ago, the "needs of the city" indicated a tax rate of 52.7 cents would be required to balance the package. That figure was finally reduced down to 49 cents, however.

The mayor said that in order to raise the same amount of revenues as last year under the new valuation, a tax rate of 44 cents per $100 would have been required. However, in order to get the city on a more sound financial basis, McGlohon had said during budget deliberations that an overall tax rate increase of some 16 percent would be needed.

The new tax levy will generate $3,528,911 in the upcoming fiscal year, the city reported, with the adopted rate representing an increase of some 13.95 percent over the 1980-81 levy of $3,096,631. Taking into consideration the annual growth in tax revenues of nine percent, the actual amount of the tax increase received by the city drops to some 4.95 percent, it was explained.

McGlohon also said that funds to pay the first bond principal payment and an interest payment on the Public Works facility represents an increase of $152,004 over the 1980-81 debt service payment and amounts to some 3.5 cents on the tax rate.

He said that city residents expressed a desire during public input on the budget to see an increase in protection levels. Through the reallocation of city positions, he noted, that protection level should be improved by employing four additional police officers and three more fire-rescue officers.

Funds are budgeted in the new fiscal period for 379 full-time positions, a decrease of four from the 1980-81 allocation of 383. Position reallocations allowed the city to increase the police and fire-rescue staffs.

McGlohon, emphasizing that the new package reflects a "lean budget," expressed concern about limited contingencies available. He added that it was necessary to delay any wage adjustments for city and GUC employees until the first pay period in September. He said the adjustment in the fall will amount to seven and one-half percent.

The budget, the city reported, includes only essential capital outlay items such as police cars, fire-rescue equipment, parks maintenance vehicles, and refuse trucks.

McGlohon mentioned a need to look at all fee schedules for possible revisions and he said he feels it is "imperative" that the city have a capital projects fund to handle equipment replacement needs.

The new package of projected revenues and expenditures includes: a General Fund segment of $8,947,975; Revenue Sharing Trust Fund of $635,416; total Debt Service Fund of $2,376,530; Public Transportation Fund of $399,956; and Parking Authority Fund of $30,800, for a total of $12,408,677.

The Council, meeting June 30, had adopted an interim budget to cover the period through July 31 and give the board "time to consider alternatives" regarding the city's financial needs.

Flood Plain Zoning Amended Official Zoning Maps Okayed

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council gave its approval to a new consolidated system of official zoning maps last night and also approved an amendment to the Flood Plain zoning classification.

The new official zoning maps, according to Bobby Roberson, planning director, reflect a conversion of the present system of four official maps into one map and brings into compliance the new Floodway Ordinance.

The new floodway classification provided in the ordinance regulates the type and location of uses in the floodways of the city and extraterritorial planning and zoning jurisdiction.

At the request of Phil Carroll, who was represented last night by attorney Fred Mattox, property owned by Carroll referred to as Luzanne Lakes north of the river off the eastern bypass was excepted from the new zoning district until the owner can appeal to the Corps of Engineers to be able to develop the acreage. Councilwoman Judy Greene voted against the motion to delete the property from the floodway zone.

Mattox, who contended that nothing would be hurt by deleting the property because Carroll can not develop the land under present Corps requirements, asked that the property be left under the present Highway Commercial zone. The attorney said if the property is included in the floodway zone and Carroll is successful in his appeal to the Corps of Engineers, he would have to come back to the city and petition for rezoning.

Mattox contended that if the property is ever zoned floodway, it would be hard to have it rezoned back to Highway Commercial. He said it would be easier to "leave it as it is" and he said if Carroll can not convince the Corps, "he can't do anything anyway."

Ron Sewell, director of Engineering and Inspections, confirmed that regardless of what action the Council took, the property could not be used under present restrictions.

Councilman Louis Clark said he was concerned about setting a precedent.

Roberson explained that if the property is deleted from the zone, it would only require an adjustment to the zoning map.

Under the motion adopted, if Carroll is not successful in his negotiations with the Corps of Engineers, the city will reconsider the property for inclusion in the floodway zone.

In other other business, the Council approved the rezoning of two contiguous tracts (Durward M. Harris and Harry A. Hardee properties), located on the east side of NC 43 just north of Bell's Fork, from RA-20 to Shopping Center, and continued consideration regarding the rezoning of a third tract from RA-20 to R-6 until the August meeting.

Clark said that he understood two or three parcels on NC 43 had been sold but not legally subdivided. He asked the petitioners why they had not adhered to state law and subdivided the tract.

DOT CHIEF NAMED — Gov. Jim Hunt tells a news conference in Raleigh Thursday he has named William R. Roberson, Jr., left, as the state's new secretary of transportation to succeed Thomas W. Bradshaw, Jr., who resigned July 1. Bradshaw, 63, a former four-term legislator from Beaufort County and chairman of five Washington, N.C. area corporations, will be sworn in July 20. Roberson said he had no preconceived notions regarding changes at DOT. He promised to spend highway money "as fast ... and as fairly as possible", and that maintenance and resurfacing of highways would be a top priority. (AP Laserphoto)

LITTER GALORE

I live on the Stantonsburg Road between the Allen Road turnoff to the County-City Landfill and the dumpster site on this road. You have to see to believe the debris I have to pick up out of my yard each and every day and the bags full of refuse that I regularly see dropped in ditches and then strewn by dogs and the like near here. The persons who contract to haul the dumpsters are not covering them to bring them to the landfill always, and building contractors are bringing in uncovered loads (what's left after they've strewn lots up and down the road), as are individuals who are letting stuff blow off the backs of pickup trucks. It's a mess out here and I don't know who to complain to to really get some results. There's a big load of tree limbs that came off a dumpster in my yard right now.

County Manager Reginald Gray said he will contact the dumpster hauler(s) immediately and reiterate that these MUST be covered. He said he'd also tell the person(s) who keep the landfill during the hours it's open (8 a.m. to 4 p.m.) that these dumpsters must not come in uncovered and that neither must building contractors and individuals carrying trash on the backs of uncovered trucks. He reminded the public that there is a law against carrying trash uncovered.

Also, he said, he'd send someone out within the next 48 hours to remove the tree limbs from your yard. You're to call him if you have any more serious trouble or observe uncovered loads going by.

Satellite Now Bringing News To The Reflector

The Daily Reflector yesterday began receiving state, national and international news reports from The Associated Press by satellite transmission.

A 10-foot dish to capture the microwave signals coming to earth from Western Union's Westar III satellite was installed at the rear of the Reflector in March. The system was activated yesterday, and the AP wire stories appearing in today's edition of the Reflector were received from the satellite which sits in a "stationary" orbit some 20,300 miles from earth.

Although Westar III is the primary satellite, the newspaper may use Westar II signals in the event problems develop with Westar III.

The microwave signals originate at an AP station near New York City which beams them to the satellite, that in turn bounces them back to receiving stations on earth. The result is fast, accurate transmission of the news in virtually uninterrupted fashion in all types of weather, and at less cost to the Associated Press members.

Traditionally, The Daily Reflector has received its AP news via land-based telephone lines which, just as your phones at home, were subject to interruption from storms or other causes.

Eleven newspapers in North Carolina are scheduled to participate in the initial phase of the satellite operation. Newspapers in Charlotte became the first to begin receiving data from the system in April. The Reflector was the second newspaper to become operational.

Eight other installations have been made in the state — Durham, Hickory, High Point, Raleigh, Winston-Salem, Gastonia, Asheville and West Jefferson — but they are not fully operational, a spokesman for the Associated Press said.

In addition to the regular AP news reports, the microwave dish at the Reflector receives Dow Jones audio, RKO stereo, AP Radio audio and several other news service transmissions. Electronic equipment filters or separates the various transmissions and sends the regular AP news report to the Reflector's computer for storage.

Next year the Reflector will begin receiving Associated Press picture transmissions via the satellite. For the time being, AP Laserphoto transmissions will remain connected to land-based telephone lines.

Safe Drivers Given A Break With Adoption Of New Insurance Law

By W.A. WERONKA Jr.
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Six months of debate and intense lobbying ended Thursday as legislation eliminating most auto liability insurance surcharges on safe drivers and limiting rate increases was enacted into law.

State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, who has pushed for the bill since it was introduced in January, hailed the passage of the bill as "a great victory for the people."

Bill sponsor Rep. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth, was more relieved than happy with the passage. His comment was "I guess people will just have to be more cautious on the roads."

Gov. Jim Hunt, who has supported the bill, said he "was pleased." The insurance industry lost just about all its battles on the bill, and disillusioned spokesmen after the final vote called it "a hollow victory."

The bill was enacted when the House voted 94-6 to concur with Senate amendments.

In explaining the final version to the lawmakers Barnes noted that he was not totally happy but considered it "the best deal" that could be reached this session, and urged them to concur.

The bill shifts the burden of surcharges levied by insurance companies from all drivers to only those drivers with chargeable accidents or those with traffic violation points on their record.

The surcharges are levied insurance companies to recoup losses incurred by the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility, a pool of insurance companies formed to insure high-risk drivers.

The new law becomes effective Oct. 1. (Please turn to Page 6)

Assembly Hoping To Adjourn

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Members of the General Assembly were back in session today for what most hoped would be the final day of the 1981 regular session.

Lawmakers in both the House and Senate met for most of the day Thursday, clearing through bills with dispatch in the final rush toward adjournment.

If it ends today, on the 126th day of meetings, this year's session would end as the second-longest in North Carolina history, shorter only than the 1971 session that ran until July 21.

"We're going to adjourn Friday if the Senate doesn't take a vacation," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

But Ramsey's counsel and parliamentary advisor, James Long, said the outlook was uncertain. "I have no idea when it will be," said Long. "Maybe sometime in the late afternoon."

Over in the Senate, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green said he hoped for adjournment by 1 p.m.

Although both chambers pressed toward adjournment, both took several recesses to allow clerks to catch up with the paperwork and to allow time for bills to be brought over from the opposite chamber.

The House Rules Committee, but it left blank an exact time and date. Chairman Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, was authorized to fill in a time and he said he hoped it would be this afternoon.

Legislators are planning another session this year, a special fall meeting primarily for completion of work on the state budget. An $11.7 billion two-year state budget has been enacted, but lawmakers provided no pay raises for teachers or state employees, saying they wanted to wait and see what the effects would be of federal budget cuts.

The House version of the resolution says the General Assembly will reconvene Nov. 16 unless Congress approves a federal budget earlier. In that case, the House speaker and lieutenant governor would set the time for the short session.

Both chambers sought to clear their calendars of bills by rushing through groups of bills, often voting without sending bills to committee or giving time for explanations. But the final days were not as frantic as the conclusion of previous sessions.

"Things are better than they have been in the past," House Speaker Pro Tem Allen Barbee, D-Nash, said. "We've gotten the big things out of the way."

Engagement Announced

DELLA LOUISE JENNETTE, . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Lee Jennette of Grimesland, who announce her engagement to the Rev. Larry Donnell Walston, son of the late Rev. and Mrs. James Walton of Greenville. The wedding will take place Aug. 1.

A woman does not need a lot of pain killers, tranquilizers and mood altering drugs to cope with her physical problems, she said. She needs to nourish and exercise her body.

Americans' diets are generally stripped of enough nutrients to help a body to fight germs and poisons and to cope with such vitamin-depleting substances as tobacco, alcohol and air pollution, Mrs. Lettvin said. Smokers, drinkers and people who inhabit polluted areas need a lot more vitamin C, she said.

To assure an adequate daily nutrient supply, Mrs. Lettvin recommends her own creation, a 395-calorie health

Miss Bunn, Mr. Sharpe Married

ROBERSONVILLE — Jaunita Bunn of Robersonville and Gentry Martez Sharpe of Greenville were united in holy matrimony Saturday at Wynn's Chapel Missionary Baptist Church here. Elder James L. Snuggs performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bunn of Robersonville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Barbara Best Sharpe of Greenville and the late Jerry Sharpe Jr.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Johnny A. Wooten, organist, and vocal soloists, Kim Sharpe, Lisa Barnes and Vickie Barnes.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a white gown of organza and silk venise lace. The gown was fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline enhanced by pearls and sequins. The bodice featured appliques of lace roses, as did the tapered bishop sleeves with deep lace applique cuffs. The full skirt of venise lace flowed into a chapel train with double ruffles of lace satin bows and appliques of roses. A Juliet capelet headpiece of venise lace, pearls and sequins attached to ties of silk illusion with double rows of venise law rose appliques framed her face. She carried a bouquet of daisies, carnation, and miniature mums interspersed with baby's breath and white lace streamers of love knots.

Matron of honor Mrs. Sylvia Crandall Best of Greenville wore a yellow organza floor-length gown. The t-strap bodice was topped with a square neckline trimmed with a single ruffle. The skirt flowed into a deep single ruffle which formed a double row of ruffles up to the back waist, which was accented with a rose. She wore baby's breath in her hair and carried a long-stemmed mum with baby's breath and yellow, blue and white satin streamers.

Bridesmaids were Joycelene Bunn, Delphine Bunn and Dawn Willis, all cousins of the bride, of Robersonville. Darlyn A. Sharpe of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, and Felecia Sharpe of Greenville. They each wore a powder blue gown like that of the matron of honor and carried a long-stemmed mum with yellow and blue streamers.

Tisha Best, the bride's cousin, of Robersonville was flower girl. She wore a formal white gown which featured a square neckline, puffed sleeves and ruffles. She wore a matching flower with baby's breath in her hair and carried a white wicker basket filled with rose petals.

Donta Bunn of Robersonville, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

Ray Sinatra Sharpe of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Groomsmen were Dennis Bunn, Cedric Bunn and Robert Bunn of Robersonville, brothers of the bride, and Reginald D'von Sharpe of Greensboro, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Van Joel Sharpe and Von Jerry Sharpe, brothers of the bridegroom, both of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a formal baby blue gown and the bridegroom's mother selected a formal beige jacketed gown. Each wore a double white carnation and matching accessories.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Guests were welcomed by Mrs. Ethel Best, aunt of the bridegroom. Cake was served by Mrs. Daisy Spain, aunt of the bridegroom, and Fannie Carmack served punch. Mrs. Dorothy Maye, Mrs. Betty Jean Teel, Mrs. Eula Howard and Mrs. Margret Moore assisted. Miss Doris Adams Clemmons presided at the register.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the couple and their grandparents, Mrs. Nellie C. Ellison, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bunn Sr., Mrs. Barbara Best Sharpe and Mrs. Gertrude Best.

The bride is a 1981 graduate of North Pitt High School. The bridegroom is a 1979 graduate of North Pitt who is serving as a communications electronics technician in the U.S. Army.

After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Fort Richardson, Alaska.

Maggie's 54 And Fit Teaches Fitness At MIT

By CHRIS CHRYSTAL LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Maggie Lettvin is a 54-year-old grandmother who manages to look girlish in skin-hugging leotards and long black hair but she doesn't keep in shape by jogging.

"Jogging is not for women," she said. "Women need tummy, hip and thigh exercises."

Does she take vitamin pills?

"Daily vitamin pills don't get the job done," Mrs. Lettvin said. She believes in "fertilizing" the body with a variety of natural vitamins and minerals.

Mrs. Lettvin did not bother with fitness until she was 36. Now she qualifies as an expert on exercise and nutrition. Her children grow, she teaches fitness at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has written articles and books about exercise and nutrition.

She says she ignored physical fitness until she and husband, Jerry, an MIT professor, had three half-grown kids.

Then she suffered a painful, crippling whiplash in an accident, which doctors could not cure. She resolved to find her own cure.

She read up on backbones. She figured out which exercises would help her whiplash and did them religiously for years.

She ate only highly nutritional food that gave her energy and lifted her spirits. She says exercise and diet cured her whiplash.

Preaching what she practices, Mrs. Lettvin got a job as a fitness instructor in the athletic department at MIT. The day she turned 50, she stunned her MIT exercise class by doing 160 pushups in 45 minutes.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brantly Bissette Jr. of Morehead City, a son, Charles Brantly Bissette III. Mrs. Bissette is the former Nancy Ann Harrington of Greenville.

Some desert plants do more than soak up moisture in their area. They actually spread poison to keep other plants from growing too close to them. The American brittlebush and guayule give off a chemical that ensures that no other plant can spring up to compete for the small amount of available moisture.

Caldwell Spoke On Drought Help

Doug Caldwell, superintendent of buildings and grounds at East Carolina University, addressed the Greenville Welcome Wagon Club Wednesday at the Cinnamon Tree Restaurant.

He talked about drought stress on lawns and shrubs and how to cope with it. He mentioned three types of irrigation: the sprinkler, conventional irrigation and flood irrigation. The common sprinkler generally is worthless, in comparison to the other two mentioned, he said, nevertheless, this is what most people will use. He advising using one which puts out as much water as possible in as confined an area as possible. Daytime watering is not recommended, he said. The best times are in early morning and late evening.

Most plants and shrubs need about one inch of water per week, he said, up to two inches on sandy soil. He suggested testing the soil by scratching the surface an inch or so. If there is no moisture, it needs water, he said. "You need to know what kind of soil you have in order to care for it properly," he said. "Free soil testing is offered by the Agricultural Extension Department."

Caldwell said research shows that shrubs and trees previously thought to have been damaged by winter actually were victims of summer drought, since this damage does not show until the following spring. He said roots need watering in winter, as well as in summer, though in less quantity.

He recommended cutting a new tree back one third for balance. "In the long run, you will have a bigger tree faster if it is pruned when planted."

"It is not when you prune a shrub, but how," he said. "Conical or ball-shape pruning allows the plant to get light needed for good overall growth."

Prospective Welcome Wagon members were introduced: Barbara Hall, Genevieve Player and Joan Shaw.

Dee Schaff announced Marcie Byrd's resignation as hostess.

RICE PANCAKES AND STRAWBERRIES
Especially good combination.

- 1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 large egg
- 1 cup milk
- 3 tablespoons butter, melted
- 1 cup cooked converted rice
- Sliced sweetened fresh strawberries
- Crème fraiche

In a medium bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. In a small bowl beat the egg slightly; add the milk and butter and beat to blend; pour into flour mixture and beat only until moistened — batter will be lumpy. Stir in the rice. Meanwhile, heat an electric griddle to 400 degrees; stir the batter each time you pour it: drop by scant 1/4-cupfuls, well apart on the hot griddle. Cook until bubbles form on surface and edges look dry. Turn and brown other sides — about 2 minutes longer. Top with strawberries and crème fraiche. Makes about 12 medium-thick griddlecakes.

Reacting To Citizens

It is always encouraging when a public body reacts to citizen input. And that, presumably, is what Beaufort County Commissioners did this week in reversing a policy that would have allowed Texasgulf Chemicals Co. to mine phosphate from the Pamlico River.

The county board, three months ago, voted to classify the river as a rural stream, which would have allowed dredging — and mining — its bottom. Environmentalists, fishermen, concerned citizens and even some state officials expressed opposition. And then a consultant warned that such a classification could endanger Beaufort County's entire land management plan. The board reversed its stand, at least tentatively blocking the mining proposal.

A board spokesman said the county body had never intended to allow mining, but that position had not been expressed clearly enough. The action this week does.

Meanwhile, Texasgulf apparently has not lost its right to pursue the river-bottom phosphate deposits. It simply will have to meet stronger criteria safeguarding the environment.

Bear Facts: Grizzly Case

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
SITKA, Alaska (AP) — Those lean, leathery U.S. Forest Service rangers in the wide brim campaign hats may not say much, but when they do ... Pow. Zowie. Zap. Everyone stand aside.

Listen, if you can bear it, to this Smoky the Bear type being bearish on the subject of bears:

"Bears are unpredictable and dangerous. Climbing a tree may save your life, if you can get high enough and the tree is stout enough to withstand a buffeting."

Now just a minute, pardner, how high do I have to climb and who is going to be down there doing the buffeting? Not, I hope, old Ursus arctos horribilis, as the grizzly is called in the scientific community, where the fact that he can crush a moose's skull with a slap of his paw or rip off an automobile door with his fingernails is downplayed for ecological reasons.

I read that interesting bit of bear lore in "All About Sitka Summer," a special tourist section put out by the Sitka Sentinel to defuse visitors of their fears about the local fauna. Such cautionary tales always have the opposite effect on me, invoking sheer terror, especially when the ranger goes on to advise "people who carry guns to carry at least a 30-06 or larger."

I no longer even carry a Boy Scout knife. For the unarmed, the best of the forestry flack can suggest is "throwing down a piece of clothing if followed by a bear in order to distract it."

How do I know the particular bear on my trail is a kinky transvestite? I don't see myself pausing long enough to perform a strip act for his benefit. I figure if I'm not stepping out two feet ahead of my jockey shorts by the time the bear marathon kicks off, it's all over but the hors d'oeuvres.

These Sitka folk aren't talking about back-packing into the trackless wilds of the Brooks Range. No Sir.

They're talking about a quiet Sunday stroll in the suburbs. "A favorite climb locally," the Sitka paper advises, "is up to Beaver Lake, just a few miles past the pulp mill, where hikers should be prepared for mosquitoes as a good portion of the hike is through muskeg."

But there's a lot more waiting than mosquito and muskeg: "The climb begins quite steeply with multiple switchbacks. After reaching the top of the hill, a boardwalk takes hikers across the muskeg, where they should watch out for bears."

Bears along the boardwalk? In Coney Island you only have to worry about sandfleas, a bad sun burn and muggers. What if the bears are watching out for the tourists, which apparently is their wont?

Not to worry, writes another local bear expert in the same edition of the paper: "Yell at it. Make your presence known. They have really poor eyesight but are naturally curious and may come close because of it."

This author, described as "a hiker who has lived in Sitka most of his life," further encourages those who find bears unbearable to "tie a bell to their packs so bears have audible warning. They can smell and hear much better than you can!"

Let me get this straight now. Just because a bear has poor eyesight and the oil rich state of Alaska has not yet got a bifocal program going for myopic grizzlies, am I supposed to cooperate with whatever he has in mind by ringing a bell and yelling at him? To me that smacks of Daniel putting out place cards in the lions den.

If I'm going to be the plat du jour for some near-sighted half-ton grizzly, I can't imagine myself ringing the dinner gong for his benefit or running around the woods shouting "come and get it."

I don't blame the bears for being testy about tourists. Almost every hotel lobby or airport terminal you enter in Alaska has a furry mountain of stuffed bear in a glass case with the inscription, "Shot along the Kobuk River by Clem Dimwitly with a .175 howitzer at a range of 30 feet, July 12, etc.,"

Bear stories have a prominent place in the literature of Alaska. They made a bigger impression on Jon McPhee, the New Yorker writer, in "Coming Into the Country" than owl soup or killing 40 mosquitoes at a slap. He records that "once, not long ago, a writer visiting Alaska pitched his tent on a bear trail. A bear removed the writer from his tent, ate him and left nothing but the pencil."

I can't understand why the bear rejected that pencil because elsewhere, in discussing the grizzly's keen sense of locating groceries, McPhee says that "unopened cans of sardines have been found in the scat of grizzlies."

No wonder bears are so mean. If you ever gave up on opening a can of sardines with one of those keys that never work you know the feeling.

Poor Should Not Suffer

Over the years ministers have occasionally decried the role of churches in the field of charitable work because that field has been largely usurped by government.

There is going to be a change. Governments (federal, state and local) are cutting back. We are told nobody is really going to suffer; but neither do we expect the very poor to have an easy time in the months and years ahead.

There appears no immediate urgency. Wheels turn slowly when government sets new directions; but it is not too early for churches and clubs and fraternal organizations to begin thinking about what they can do and how to do it.

There are well over a hundred churches in Pitt County; scores of clubs and organizations whose interest in service goes beyond self. Even modest contributions by these wellsprings of good intent will alleviate the hardship some of our poorest households may encounter.

Forethought, organization and the avoidance of overlapping are keystones of prudent planning...all good reason for the charitable-minded to consider the future.

There is no reason for any Pitt Countian to suffer from the cold, for lack of food, or the basic needs.

Dealing In 'The Float'

Everyone can understand it when a little guy owes you money and is late in paying it. But it's hard for most people to comprehend when a big corporation will play games with you.

Because of high interest rates more and more of the larger companies are dragging their feet when it comes to paying their bills. These are the same outfits who threaten an individual with the death penalty if he doesn't pay his bill on time.

The reason for this can be attributed to what is known in the banking business as "the float."

"The float," is the amount of cash that a company has on hand at any given time to invest in short-term bonds, notes, or certificates of deposit paying 14 or 15 or 18 percent interest.

The longer the corporations hold on to your money, the more money they make on it for themselves. When interest rates were low, companies didn't pay much attention to "the float." Now it's keeping many of them alive. With double-digit interest, "the float" can make money for its owner on nights, weekends and holidays. Special divisions have been set up to make sure every bit of cash in a company is earning interest at all times, whether it's money that belongs to the company, or money that is owed to you.

This is how it works. You have provided a small service for Corporation Busbee, and your bill comes to $5,000, a pittance to this great conglomerate. One month goes by and you don't hear a word — then the second month goes by, and you decide to call up the man who ordered the work.

Because you're hoping for more business from C.B. you're very polite on the phone. (Large companies who deal in "the float" count on the little fellows not becoming belligerent when it comes to asking for the money owed to him.)

The man who ordered the $5,000 worth of services is expecting the call. "I put in a voucher for that bill the day I received it," he says in his most surprised voice. "I'll call Wheat Bluff, Kansas, and see what happened to it."

"Why would you call Wheat Bluff, Kansas, when you're located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania?"

"That's where our computers are. We pay all our bills from Wheat Bluff."

"Isn't that a bit out of the way for you?"

"Not really. They have two commuter flights going in there every week. I'll get on this right away."

The next time you call the man is on sick leave, and the time after he's on vacation. Two months later you get him back on the phone.

"Any news about my $5,000?"

"Didn't you get your money yet?" the man says. "This is a shocking state of affairs. The people in Wheat Bluff promised me they would put your check in the mail the next day. I'll get right back to you."

The next week the man at C.B. calls. "Well, you'll be glad to hear I found out what the hold-up was. Your invoice never reached Boulder, Colorado."

"Where does Boulder fit in to this?"

"The computer in Wheat Bluff won't issue a check unless the computer in Boulder confirms the figure is correct. I've sent a duplicate of the invoice off today. I wouldn't be surprised if you got your money in a week."

Whether you finally get your money in a week or a month after this call, depends on whether the treasurer of Corporation Busbee wants to let you out of the company's float.

You may be wondering where your $5,000 was while you were trying to keep your head above water. If it will make you feel any better, it wasn't just sitting in Wheat Bluff, Kansas. It was floating in U.S. Treasury Bills, German marks, Japanese yen, tax-free hockey bonds, or an off-shore Euro-dollar fund and Oil of Olay futures in Toronto, Canada.

Who says the big companies don't give you a ride for your money?

Questions Remain

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Now that the 1981 session of the General Assembly, Phase One, enters the history book, reflection shows some questions that remain unanswered. They may never be answered.

If, as Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green says, he would not accept a gift in light of what has happened since he took some $5,000 from a business acquaintance, could circumstances change?

He took the money, Green said, because he needed it at the time. He doesn't need it now, he says. Besides, he adds, $5,000 is not a lot of money — to him. It may be a lot to some people, but it is not to him, he says.

If the gift were a lot of money, and he needed it at the time, would he take it?

On that same topic: if his taking the gift had become public knowledge shortly after it happened in 1977, would the close call election primary between Green and former House Speaker Carl Stewart have come out differently in 1980?

Governor. He had to bounce his ideas off legislative leaders and get their support. That took a lot of time. Funny thing, however. The legislative leaders took the gas tax and let all the other pieces like increased liquor taxes, and income tax rebate

General Assembly adjourned. Reaction from home during the final days of the session made some lawmakers pause on boosting any more taxes. Would the outcome have been different if effective date had fallen after adjournment?

And what would have been the sequence of events if legislators were serving four-year terms instead of two?

Some outspoken critics of this session of the General Assembly maintain the honorables did nothing for the people: no new programs to help children or the sick or the handicapped.

Did Good

Legislative leaders bristle to that claim. What they did for the people in this session, they argue, is worth much more than would some more governmental programs. They boosted interest rates for financial institutions not so that banks and others can make more mney, but so that money can be made available to people needing it to build and buy homes, start businesses, launch business ventures, underwrite plant expansions and so on. If they had not done so, the mortgage money would have sifted away to New York or other states — even overseas — where higher interest is available.

Will the good things happen, and will better paying jobs make it possible for to reduce the strife of the needy? Only time will tell.

Finally, how long will it be until the North Carolina General Assembly is in session all year long every year? Judging from this session, the time will come before 10 more years go by, unless firm action is taken soon to structure the work so that legislators arrive with an agenda ready for action, and relatively clear of the time and energy consuming local measures which could be handled better in local or regional political structures.

for essential driving, a severance tax on minerals get away. What would have happened to a straightforward take-it-or-leave-it proposition which equated leaving it to bad roads?

On that same topic: did the Congressional Club opposition to Gov. Hunt's plan force a lot of Democratic legislators to swing to the Governor's side despite back home pressure to stand against a tax hike? Speaker Liston Ramsey thinks that it is just what happened.

But maybe the biggest tactical error in the series was to have the tax take effect on July 1, before the

Strength For Today

WHAT'S A SOUL?
What is the soul?
This is not an easy question to answer. The Bible mentions the soul often, but does not define it. The word in both Hebrew and Greek means "life", from which we get the word "psyche", meaning the vital principle which constitutes the inner spring of action. Psyche, or soul, it is also defined as "the spiritual being as distinct from the body."
The Bible teaches that in addition to the visible physical order with which we

Current Madness In Mergers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The current madness is mergers.

Texaco, which has lots of oil cash but needs more oil in the ground, admits it has been looking, and speculation is that it has its eye on Cities Service Co., which could supply the missing ingredient.

Seagrams, also loaded (with cash), sought and was rejected by Conoco, which also has sumptuous assets in the form of oil and coal deposits. Analysts expect it will try again.

Du Pont, which fears being unable to obtain raw materials at a fair price for its petrochemical products, saw a chance to resolve that problem by outbidding Seagrams for Conoco.

And Societe National Elf Aquitaine, a French operation, continues to seek a piece of the earth in the form of Texasgulf Inc., which mines gold, silver and other minerals, and which pumps oil as well.

All these are giants, and all seem to have the same thing in mind: To acquire un-replenishable natural assets, especially within U.S. boundaries, to enhance their own operations, to assure themselves of a raw materials supply or to benefit from rising prices.

Don't expect the public to benefit, at least in any noticeable form over the short term. Such marriages rarely produce more jobs or lower prices. They may, over time, enhance the ability of the United States to compete in world markets. But even that takes time to prove.

But there's another aspect to the story, one that could conceivably be having even greater consequences. Small businesses also are being pursued and won by the giants of industry.

Small business, it should be remembered, is the entrepreneurial, innovating, job-creating segment of the economy.

W.T. Grimm & Co., a Chicago business broker, produces figures showing that mergers and acquisitions of smaller, closely held businesses, are making up an increasingly larger percentage of the total — 38 percent in 1976 and 52 percent in 1980.

In its 1980 summary, Grimm says the reasons are many: "To obtain needed financing for expansion, to overcome market saturation, to provide liquidity for estate tax purposes, to perpetuate the business while being relieved of day to day operational responsibilities."

Obtaining financing carries special meaning in these days of high interest rates. Debt is really the only outside financing available to smaller companies, and interest costs are almost prohibitive, sometimes amounting to several points above prime rate.

Having built sizable estates, and perhaps nearing retirement, owners of such businesses are faced with a critical choice: Do they risk possible disaster, or do they accept an offer that makes life easier?

Some large companies are always seeking to adopt these smaller companies, and for at least one very good reason. That is, it costs much less, and it involves much less risk also, to buy a going enterprise rather than start from scratch.

The consequences, however, cause concern among those who see small business as not just a contributor to the U.S. economy but perhaps its most essential element.

Maggie's 54 and Fit, Fitter Than Before 36

"brew," which she said she has drunk faithfully for 10 years.

"Some very high-quality foods eaten every day can give you all the elements and compounds we know, so far, that you need," she wrote in her latest book, "Maggie's Woman's Book" (Houghton Mifflin, $6.95 paperback, $12.95 hardcover).

The "brew" does not taste good. She likes to call it "snake oil," probably because of its fishy flavor (from the cod liver oil).

It combines such health food store acquisitions as desiccated liver powder, kelp, wheat germ oil and acidophilus capsules, to name several ingredients, which are dropped into the blender with juice or milk and drunk, in the same manner as bicarbonate of soda.

Processed foods, picked from supermarket shelves, are mostly stripped of such essential nutrients as calcium, potassium and magnesium, she said.

"You go into the supermarket and look into people's baskets and you know why they're sick."

Maggie recommends eating lots of "fertilizer" — dark leafy vegetables and liver (daily), as well as sardines, shellfish, whole wheat bread or crackers, yogurt and blackstrap molasses among other foods on the high nutrient list.

It can keep the doctors away, she believes.

"The truth is, if you nourish a body well enough, it can fight its own battles."

Camp Don Lee Reunion Set

Camp Don Lee, a United Methodist Camp in Arapahoe, is having a reunion of staff persons for the past 32 years. The date is Saturday, July 18.

The all-day event at the camp begins at 10:00 a.m. with registration. Families are invited. A picnic lunch will be held on the grounds at 1:00 and there will be swimming and sailing.

Staffers should bring any old pictures, souvenirs or memorabilia and be prepared to tell old camp stories.

The planned activities end at 4:30 but staffers and families are welcome to stay over the night of July 18. Arrangements may be made that day if necessary.

For more information, call John Farmer at Camp Don Lee at 249-1106.

Trip To Zoo Being Planned

The Sweet Hope FWB Church Sunday School is scheduling a trip to the Asheboro Zoo and the Morehead Planetarium, Chapel Hill, for Saturday, July 18. Departure time will be 5:30 a.m. at the church.

For more information and reservations, see or call one of the following committee persons: Pansy Donastorg (752-4633); Doris Godley; Albert Williams (752-6504); or Betty Washington (756-5918). Reservations must be verified by Wednesday morning.

SERVICE PLANNED

There will be an appreciation service at St. John Baptist Church, Stokes, for Lizzie Mae Little. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. Roger Hook, accompanied by the Hayes Chapel Choir. Refreshments will be served. The public is invited to attend.

SATURDAY PROGRAM
Roy and Sunset Spirituals of Wilson will be at Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Ayden, at 7:00 Saturday. The public is invited to attend.

Life As It's Lived

There Is Much To Be Said On Child-Planning

By GAIL MICHAELS
I'm often asked if I'm planning to have another child. No, I am not planning to, but that doesn't mean that I won't. The one thing I keep in mind when considering family planning is that immortal quote of Robert Burns about the best laid plans, etcetera, etcetera.

The problem with the idea of family planning is that it assumes that science can overcome Nature. That's ridiculous. Modern science can't even begin to explain human reproduction. Just because scientists can make some interesting diagrams of the physical process of conception doesn't mean that they can account for the more mystical atmospheric influences which prevail during this process.

What textbook, for instance, can explain why in 1974 every married woman under 45 in one particular Greenville office sent a rabbit to his grave whether she wanted to or not? Or why a friend of mine who resorted to an IUD after her first child and a tubal ligation after her second delivered her third child last summer? It had to have been something in the air.

So the strongest statement I can make concerning my progeny, present and future, is that if I have my druthers, there won't be any in the future. In the first place I don't think I can afford another pregnancy. Not only has inflation pushed medical costs beyond the reach of all but the most affluent, but I noticed the other day that the watermelons in the supermarket were selling for $3.99 apiece. And that was after they were "reduced for quick sale." If those prices had been in effect before Meg's birth, I would have had to finance her through the underworld.

In the second place, the past year has destroyed any faith I ever had in that ancient cliché, the more merrier, and the more recent cliché, the more the easier. One is easier. None is even easier. With no children, childproofing a home doesn't even have to be considered. With one child, childproofing is within the realm of the possible. But a mother with two or more children who tries to childproof her home might as well be riding into the sunset with Don Quixote and Melvin Dumar.

I can't even keep Zachary out of the bathroom. When Meg was a baby, I just kept the door shut. I could usually count on Phillip to help out. But Meg can't remember two simple instructions in consecutive order; it's sheer lunacy to expect her to remember something as complicated as closing the door after she has already remembered to flush and to wash her hands. I just hope that one of these days when Zachary is washing his hair in the toilet, he doesn't slip in and drown.

Then there's the hassle with Meg's toys. Meg is as ferocious as an old tomcat when it comes to protecting her own territory, littered though it may be with baby toys purloined from Zachary's room. But it hasn't occurred to her yet that anyone else in the family has any territorial prerogative. All toys which are small enough for Zachary to choke on invariably find their way into the den, kitchen or dining room floor.

I fish these toys out of Zachary's mouth at great personal risk, and on those days I am forced to invite partial amputation over and over again I find myself in a rather ugly mood. The last thing I want to think about is another mouth from which to retrieve pop beads, marbles, Legos, and barrettes. So when an acquaintance asked me on one such day whether or not I was planning to have another child, my reply was a snappish, "Not on your life."

She sighed. "That's what I used to say. But it seems that somehow almost every family in Smithfield winds up with three kids. It's got to be something in the air."

Given my belief in

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You said when a woman wears a flower over her left ear it means "I'm available." A flower over the right ear means "I'm taken," and a flower over both ears means "Let's negotiate."

Actually, a flower over the left ear means "I'm taken." But you failed to mention that a flower worn on the back of the head means "Follow me," and a flower worn on the top of the head means "Let's fool around."

PUA LILA IN HONOLULU

DEAR PUA: Thanks for the correction. My Hawaiian "expert" gave me cockamamie information. But I'm intrigued by the additional flower signals. Now all the tourists will be on the lookout for ladies wearing three flowers: one over the right ear, another on the back of the head and one on top!

DEAR ABBY: I'm 40 and have been divorced for seven months. My husband left me for another woman. She has six kids. (I have five, but only three are at home.)

My 22-year-old daughter lives at home. We get along fine, but here's the problem. She has a boyfriend, and I also have a boyfriend. Her boyfriend comes over about five nights a week and they sit in the living room, talking or watching TV until 2 a.m. My boyfriend comes over maybe once or twice during the week, and only every other weekend. My younger kids (13 and 16) have the good sense to go to their rooms and leave us alone, but my daughter and her boyfriend don't budge. Abby, we need a little privacy. I'm afraid my boyfriend will quit coming around if he can't see me alone. He takes me to dinner now and then, but afterward he can't even kiss me goodnight without an audience.

My daughter's boyfriend goes out two or three times a week, spends his money, then tells her he can't take her anywhere. I'm beginning to think maybe my daughter is jealous of me. What should I do?

NO PRIVACY

DEAR NO: Have a frank talk with your daughter and agree to some ground rules stating which nights the house will be exclusively yours and which nights will be hers. Period.

DEAR ABBY: I met a girl a few months ago, and I asked her out. We had a great time, but when I tried to kiss her goodnight, she said, "Don't rush it." I felt like an idiot. I figured she didn't like me, so I didn't call her for a long time. Then I got to thinking that maybe it was her credit that she didn't jump at the chance to kiss a guy she'd only known a few hours. Anyway, I asked her out again and we had a wonderful time. This time I didn't try to kiss her, but when we said goodnight, she gave me a hug, which meant more to me than a kiss.

My advice to guys who don't get kissed on the first date is to call the girl for a second date. Don't feel rejected. It's nice to know that there are still some girls who place a high value on their kisses. I, for one, appreciate a girl who's hard to get.

BRISTOL, CONN.

DEAR BRISTOL: And it's nice for a hard-to-get girl to know that she's appreciated.

DEAR ABBY: I've read a lot in your column about tipping waitresses, but has leaving a tip for the maid in a hotel or motel gone out of style? My friends say it has, but I disagree. Who is right?

BONNIE IN PALM BAY, FLA.

DEAR BONNIE: Leaving a tip is a gesture of appreciation for a job well done. Such thoughtful generosity never goes out of style. (Especially when you're on an expense account.)

HOT WORK — As temperatures in Greenville approached the 100-degree mark, many people chose to do their outside work in the mornings and evenings. Herbert Irving, an employee of Greenville's Public Works Department, mows the grass at the corner of Reade and Colaniche Streets this morning, avoiding the 95-degree high reached yesterday afternoon. It wasn't all that cool for him this morning, though — Greenville Utilities reported an 8 a.m. temperature of 80 degrees. Yesterday's low was 71 degrees, while the marks for Wednesday were a high of 94 and a low of 70. There has been no rain for the past three days, with only a chance of rain this afternoon, and none predicted for the weekend. (Reflector Photo By Larry Zicherman)

See 'Escape' In Bankruptcy Law

By The Associated Press

The newly revised federal bankruptcy laws have paved the way for more and more North Carolinians seeking respite from inflation, unemployment, small pay increases and easy credit, financial experts say.

Last year was the first full year under the new code, which lets debtors keep more of their property after filing for bankruptcy.

And Thomas L. Ridenhour, a senior vice president of First Union National Bank, said if the bankruptcy code isn't changed and filings continue at the current pace, bankruptcies could reach 500,000 cases nationally by the end of 1981. That compares with about 380,000 cases reported nationally last year.

Court records show that bankruptcies were up nearly 54 percent in the Western District of North Carolina in the first half of 1981, compared with the same period last year. In the Eastern District, bankruptcies rose about 18 percent in the same

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Home Secretary William Whitelaw said today army troops might have to patrol Britain's cities if the street rioting of the past seven nights gets worse.

Whitelaw, the government minister responsible for police and public order, said

Insurance ....

The legislation also places a ceiling on rate increases tied to the urban Consumer Price Index, currently about 12 percent a year. However, an amendment in the Senate removed the ceiling on drivers with points in the facility.

Hunt has maintained that it would be a mistake to not place a ceiling on rate increases. The previous 6 percent ceiling, which had been in effect since 1977, expired July 1.

Another of the Senate amendments changes the method by which insurance companies charge drivers with points. Currently, insurance companies can put all the points on one car in a family, which can cause insurance premiums to pyramid, supporters of the bill say. The amendment requires companies to spread the points among all the cars in a family, which could reduce some premiums.

Bill supporters won a major battle in the Senate Wednesday when a 38-page section that would have allowed competitive rating among companies was removed from the bill, returning it to basically the same form it originally passed the House.

That section also would have removed the ceiling on rate increases.

Sen. R.C. Soles Jr., D-Columbus, who introduced the amendment, said that would allow companies to raise rates "out of sight."

Barnes had been concerned about parts of the bill passed by the Senate Wednesday and was unsure of whether he would support an effort to concur even as late as Thursday morning.

He told the House Thursday that he considered it the "best deal" that could be reached this session, and urged them to concur.

increase in the amount of GUC turnover to the city in order to aid what the mayor termed "limited sources of revenue." The requests for additional funds, totaling some $300,000 over the projected $1.15 million GUC has budgeted for the new fiscal year, were rejected by the commission.

Mentioning last night the Council's budget deliberations in recent weeks, McGlohon said, "I don't know of anything we've worked as hard on in the time we've been together."

The Greenville Utilities budget of $49,435,800 includes revenues and expenditures of: Electric Fund, $38,755,000; Water Fund, $2,701,300; Sewer Fund, $1,561,000; and Gas Fund, $6,418,500.

The city and GUC budgets represent a combined total of $61,844,477.

he opposed deploying troops or creating a special police riot squad, but that the use of soldiers could never be ruled out to deal with outbreaks of "extreme ferocity."

"It is not impossible they would be used in certain circumstances, but I hope it would never arise," Whitelaw said in Warrington, Cheshire, 20 miles from Manchester's trouble-torn streets which he was to tour later in the day.

He added that the experience in violence-torn Northern Ireland proved that sending troops in as a "last resort" created another problem: "How to get the army out."

Whitelaw said the government was "perfectly prepared" to reintroduce the Riot Act, repealed 14 years ago, to strengthen police powers to break up mobs and make arrests before violence erupts.

He said the government will certainly propose a law making parents responsible for criminal actions by their children.

Police Federation Chairman Jim Jardine, who met Whitelaw Thursday, said he has asked for police to be supplied with body armor, armored personnel carriers, water cannons and plastic bullets to combat rioters. Most officers now have only steel-reinforced helmets and plastic shields.

"If the police don't win, the rioters will take over the whole of the centers of Liverpool, Manchester or London. Then God help us," Jardine said.

On Thursday night, rioting spread across 11 London neighborhoods and broke out again in Manchester. But the police struck back forcefully and seemed to be getting the upper hand.

Scotland Yard said it met jeering mobs in strength with bobbies carrying riot shields, arrested more than 50 people in London and dispersed the gangs of white and black youths who were roaming the streets and looting shops.

The worst of the violence was in Woolwich, in the southeast, where 27 people were arrested, two cars overturned and shops damaged. Other areas experiencing window smashing, fights between rival gangs and some looting were Fulham, Stoke Newington, Tooting, Balham, Notting Hill, Hammersmith, Catford, Deptford, Brockley and Lewisham.

"We're just looking for some action," one teenager told a reporter in Fulham, where youths smashed bottles in the streets and one police officer was injured.

In Manchester, 180 miles to the north, steel-helmeted riot police patrolled on foot in bands of 30 to 40 or rode in convoys of wireshielded trucks. Police Chief James Anderton said his officers faced urban guerrilla warfare and abandoned their traditional low profile because it "clearly did not work."

Police officers shouted to youths and reporters to get off the streets. Police trucks, engines roaring, drove toward fleeing groups of youths at high speed. One group of about 30 disappeared up a side street before an advancing police patrol with the senior officer shouting, "Go home or get locked up!"

Ask Reduction

Virginia Electric and Power Company (VEPCO) has asked all customers to reduce their use of electricity immediately, according to Nick Parham, VEPCO spokesman in Roanoke Rapids. "Electricity supplies are limited and VEPCO needs its customers to conserve as much as possible to prevent a more serious problem."

VEPCO customers are asked to turn off air conditioners, clothes dryers and non-essential electrical appliances. Minimizing the use of hot water also will help conserve energy. All customers, commercial, industrial and residential are asked to conserve.

"Because of the hot humid weather during the past several days customer demand for electricity is unusually high today," said Parham. VEPCO will keep customers informed through the news media.

Efforts To Revive Day-Care Bill Are Headed Off

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Parliamentary efforts to revive a bill exempting church-related day-care facilities from most licensing requirements were headed off in the state House Thursday.

The vote came just hours after the House Human Resources Committee voted 8-7 to kill the Senate-passed bill.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, no longer would require church-related day-care facilities to obtain a state license to operate. But the centers still would be required to follow immunization and safety regulations.

The facilities would no longer have to comply with staff-child ratios or space regulations.

Rep. Sam Bundy, D-Pitt, introduced a bill that was identical to Swain's several weeks ago in an effort to force the House committee to act on the matter. Supporters attempted a parliamentary maneuver to allow the full House to vote on the matter then, but their efforts failed.

The committee, after holding a public hearing Tuesday, voted 7-7 Thursday to kill the bill. Chairman Rep. Gus Economos, D-Mecklenburg, cast the deciding vote to kill the measure.

But Bundy and other committee supporters of the bill attempted to bring a minority report before the House. The minority report meant that, with the support of a majority of representatives, the bill would have been considered immediately by the full House.

The minority report failed 50-46.

Guns

The Senate tentatively approved a bill setting up the procedure for sheriffs to give out gun permits. It also raises the permit fee from 50 cents to $5.

Rep. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, introduced the bill, which would require sheriffs to determine that permit applicants are buying a gun for protection, target shooting, collecting or hunting.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, amended the bill to allow sheriffs to issue permits only to those living within their own county.

Senate Campaigns

After more than an hour of debate, the Senate voted down a bill that would have required candidates in future state campaigns to indicate which state Senate seats they were running to fill if there were two or more vacancies in a district.

Currently, all candidates in a district run at large with the top vote-getters filling the seats. The bill would have meant that candidate would have to single out a particular candidate and run against him one-on-one.

The bill failed 25-19 after opponents argued that it would discriminate against women and minorities and unfairly aid incumbents.

Precious Metals

The Senate gave tentative approval to a bill that would help local law enforcement agencies track down stolen goods made of gold and silver.

The Senate passed the bill on a vote of 42-2 with only senators R.C. Soles Jr., D-Columbus, and Paul Smith, R-Rowan, dissenting. Soles objected to the final vote, postponing it until today. If the bill passes on the final vote, it would return to the House for concurrence in a Senate amendment.

The bill would require dealers in precious metals to acquire a permit to buy and sell, with a 30-day waiting period. Photographs of all dealers would be required to aid law enforcement agencies to identify the people.

The bill would also ban anyone from buying or selling gold or silver in motels, hotels, mobile homes or any structure not permanently fixed to the ground.

Gifts to Officials

The state Senate gutted a bill that would have made it illegal for elected state officials to accept gifts or favors from persons doing business with the state.

The Senate voted 23-9 to send the bill back to the Senate Rules Committee, and later in the day that panel voted to turn the bill into a resolution calling for a commission to study whether the law is needed. The Legislative Research Commission would report back in 1982.

The bill was sponsored by Sen. Gilbert Lee Boger, R-Davie. He introduced it after prosecutors said that Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green violated no state law, even though he accepted nearly $5,000 in cash from a highway contractor in 1977.

Severance Tax

Two bills that would apply a mining severance tax — as proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt — were filed by Rep. Charles Holt, D-Cumberland. Administration officials said the two were filed as alternatives, and that they did not intend both to be passed.

The administration has given up hopes of passing the tax bills — intended to raise money for the highway system — in the current session. Instead, the administration may push the bills in a fall special session or next year.

One of the bills would apply a percentage tax on the gross value of solid minerals mined, including gravel, clay, phosphate, lime, stone, sand and other minerals. The bill does not specify the percentage, but administration said that was due to an error and they intended that a 4 percent rate be charged. At that rate the tax would raise an estimated $14 million.

Loans

A measure was enacted that would allow banks and savings and loan associations to increase the charge they make on loan assumptions. Under the bill as amended by the Senate, the lender could raise the current $25 fee per loan up to a maximum of $175.

The bill was enacted when the Senate gave its final approval and the House voted to go along with Senate changes.

Skiing

The Senate enacted a new law limiting the legal liability of ski area resort owners and operators. The bill was earlier approved by the House and Senate, and the measure was enacted when the Senate voted 31-2 to go along with House changes.

Rape

A bill was enacted establishing a new program of financial assistance for victims of rape or other sexual assault. The program is intended to provide up to $500 to a victim to compensate them for medical charges for physical examinations that are required to prosecute the cases.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Kenneth Spaulding, D-Durham.

Sunset

The state Sunset Commission, formally known as the Governmental Evaluations Commission, was officially abolished when the Senate voted to enact a House-passed bill. Earlier action by a legislative oversight commission had terminated the commission's staff.

The commission was established in 1977, along with a law requiring that more than 100 state licensing boards and agencies go out of existence unless continued by the Legislature. The Sunset Commission was to review the operations of those agencies and recommend whether they should be allowed to die or should be continued.

The process was widely hailed at the start but quickly ran into heavy political opposition when the commission recommended major changes or termination of boards licensing professions that had ties to political leaders.

The new law establishes in its place a Legislative Commission on Agency Review. But Sen. William G. Hancock, D-Durham, argued that the bill removes all dates requiring expiration of agencies, thus removing any teeth left in the law.

How It Stands

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Here is a department-by-department breakdown of the 1981-83 state budget enacted this week by the General Assembly. The $11.7 billion budget also includes various emergency reserve funds and aid money from the federal government.

It is not yet complete. The legislators plan to re-gather this fall to act on additions and other revisions pending congressional action on the federal budget.

The budget is broken into two parts — one providing money for continuing operations and the other providing money for capital-improvement projects. All appropriations come from General Fund revenues except in the Department of Transportation, where money for maintaining and operating roads comes from the Highway Fund. The Highway Fund gets money from the state gasoline tax and other sources.

The figures below are rounded off in millions:

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

TO MAKE A LIVING—PICK UP STICKS!

AS IN EVERY PERIOD THROUGHOUT THE WORLD'S HISTORY, THE POOR AND NEEDY OUTNUMBERED THE WEALTHY AND MIDDLECLASS IN BIBLICAL TIMES—ESPECIALLY IN THE CITIES! THOSE WITHOUT A FAMILY BUSINESS, OR SOME SMALL PLOT OF LAND ON WHICH TO GROW FOOD, WERE HARD PUT TO EKE OUT AN EXISTENCE! ONE MEAGER METHOD BY WHICH A POOR MAN COULD MANAGE TO SUBSIST, WAS GATHERING TWIGS FOR FIREWOOD. IN A PLACE LIKE JERUSALEM, IT WAS AT A PREMIUM FOR NONE COULD BE FOUND IN THE CITY, AND THE OUTLYING AREAS BOASTED OF VERY LITTLE MORE! EVERY STICK AND TWIG THAT LAY ON THE FLOOR OF THE KIDRON VALLEY, EVERY FALLEN BRANCH FROM THE OLIVE TREES ON THE MOUNT ABOVE, WAS POUNCED UPON. THE WOOD-GATHERERS SPENT LONG, BACK-BREAKING HOURS AT THIS TASK, FINALLY TO CARRY THEIR HEAVY BUNDLES IN A WEARY CLIMB UP THE HILL TO THE CITY, DURING THE DIM TWILIGHT AT THE END OF DAY—THERE, TO BARGAIN WITH SOME ANXIOUS HOUSEWIFE NEEDFULL OF WOOD TO COOK THE EVENING MEAL OR TO WARM THE HOUSE AGAINST A CHILLY NIGHT!

PERHAPS THE OLIVE GROVES WERE THE BEST PLACES FOR WOOD GATHERING, ALTHOUGH IT DID MEAN A LONG TRUDGE DOWN INTO THE KIDRON VALLEY AND A HARD CLIMB UP THE MOUNT OF OLIVES TO GET THERE! BUT, WHEN THE TREES WERE PRUNED, ALL FALLEN TIMBER BELONGED TO THE WOOD-GATHERERS, FOR THIS CAME UNDER THE MOSAIC LAW OF GLEANING, AS STATED IN DEUT. 24:19-21. LIFE WAS HARD FOR THE POOR BUT AT LEAST THESE LAWS GAVE THEM SOME HELP!

Prison Fellowship Is 'Working' New Pastor In Greenville

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Charles "Chuck" Colson, whose fall from power to prison turned him into a Christian ally of convicts, has developed one of the fastest growing, most dynamic movements of modern times to reform prisoners — and prisons.

"It's working," he says. "One thing was the vision, but another is to see it take place. It's happening."

His "Prison Fellowship" operation has more than doubled in the last two years in scope, resources and personnel, now involving 102 employees, an annual budget of $3.2 million and 6,000 church volunteers working regularly in 126 of the nation's 600 state and federal prisons.

"What's thrilling to me is to find all these people actively involved," he said in an interview. "Wherever I go, the momentum has really set in. For the first time in history, we have a nationwide volunteer movement working in prisons."

When Colson started the project in 1976, himself shaken by seven months in prison and gripped by a new faith in Christ to help those behind bars, he had trouble getting permission to work in some prisons.

But as once dubious officials saw beginning results and publicly commended them, the gates have been thrown open to him and his co-workers on a wide basis.

"We now have great acceptance," he said. "Historically, it's been almost tougher for outsiders to get in prison than for insiders to get out. But we're changing that."

Colson, 49, ex-White House strategist who served prison time for his Watergate involvement under former President Nixon, said, "Once you've been in prison, you're never the same. It changes your life."

"We hope eventually to change the system."

In that cause, he spends much time on the road, conferring with governors, testifying in state legislative hearings, speaking to civic and church groups as well as visiting prisoners — about 500 visits so far in 200 prisons, some repeatedly, getting to know hundreds of prisoners.

"Young kids are thrown into these cold, concrete holes and either turn violent themselves or come out feet first," he said. "Prisons train people to be more serious criminals."

"We're the only country in the world that does that. It's crazy, catastrophic."

Colson, a Boston-born former U.S. Marine and lawyer whose advocacy for faith retains his crisp, gritty style but with clearly wholehearted dedication, emphasizes that his prison movement is anchored in the teachings of Christ.

"That's the bottom line of everything we do."

He said the prison system "has demonstrated it doesn't work. In the last 10 years, we've doubled the prison population and tripled the average sentence, and we have more crime today per capita than we've ever had in the United States."

He said the effects are shown in the fact that four out of five crimes are committed by former inmates, molded by the prison experience. "We're seeing both the highest imprisonment rate and highest crime rate in the world."

He said the "basic mistake" is putting all prisoners together, non-violent young offenders, such as for car stealing or narcotics possession, surrounded by violent criminals, knife-users, stranglers.

"We take a young kid who could have been rescued and turn him into a violent criminal. Someday, probably in my lifetime, it will be held unconstitutional to take a non-violent person and put him in these violent place where he must live in constant danger to his life."

"It's immoral and I don't think society has a right to do it."

To try to relieve the situation and to bolster the hopes and prospects of prisoners, Colson's organization has recruited church volunteers in about 1,000 communities to meet regularly with prisoners.

"We don't go into prisons just to preach," he said, although forming Bible study and prayer groups is part of the process.

"The answer is in a person going to an imprisoned criminal and establishing a one-to-one concern, one guy caring for another, Christians caring for other human beings in need."

Besides such activity, now carried on in 28 of the 33 major federal prisons and 98 of the 567 state prisons, Colson's group also takes convicts out of prison for two-week training periods.

About 600 so far have spent such periods at his organization's headquarters in Great Falls, Va., near Washington, D.C., where about 70 staff members work. About 200 others serve across the country.

Several are ex-convicts themselves. "A lot of guys out of prison are now working in the ministry," Colson said. "It's no more pushing dope, but holding jobs, running half-way houses, teaching Christ."

"That's the payoff."

Welcoming New Pastor

Greenville Church of the Nazarene is welcoming a new pastor this week. Rev. Winston L. Huff moved here this week from Nashville, Tenn., where he recently received his Bachelor of Arts degree in Pastoral Ministry from Trevecca Nazarene College. He is originally from Louisville, Ken., where his father, Rev. Oliver C. Huff, has pastored the Farmdale Church of the Nazarene for 38 years. Rev. Huff has formerly pastored churches in Mayfield, Ken., and Summertown, Tenn.

Rev. Huff is married to the former Beverly Blackburn of Knoxville, Tenn. They have one daughter, Courtney Susanne, who is seven months old.

Greenville Church of the Nazarene has been recently organized and this is their first time to call a pastor. They are meeting Sundays at First Federal Savings and Loan on Greenville Boulevard. Sunday School is at 10:00 a.m. and worship is at 11:00 a.m. Sunday night service is at 6:00 p.m. The mid-week prayer meeting is held on Friday nights at 7:00 at the home of Bailey Biggs, 517 Lee Street, Winterville.

Pastor Applies Shock For God

SHOCK FOR GOD? — Brian TenHopen, age 8, a student at a Vacation Bible School, winces as he receives a shock from a 12-volt battery. (AP Laserphoto)

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The minister places the child on a small stool. As the Bible school class watches, he counts down from 10 and pushes a button, sending piercing shocks from a 6-volt battery into the child's buttocks.

The Rev. Dwight Wymer says he has been pushing the button for six years now as his way of teaching children how to "hear the word of God," and says the practice "is not dangerous."

"I've done nothing wrong — I'm teaching God's word," he said.

But Dr. Richard Potter, director of the city health department, said he thought the shocks did the children no good, physically or mentally.

"It seems to me like it would have the opposite effect and cause the child to reject the teachings because of the association with pain," Potter said.

Three children received shocks Monday night at the opening session of the one-week summer Bible school at Wymer's Immanuel Baptist Church. At Thursday night's class, some parents said they were uncomfortable with what was going on, but were not pulling their children out of the class.

"Sometimes God talks to you and calls you and we just don't listen," Wymer told the children that first night. "But sometimes he can shock you into hearing his word, and this just makes that demonstration clear."

Brian TenHopen, 8, said the shock he received "hurt me until I went home and got in the tub. But it was fun, everybody was laughing, and I wanted to do it."

Seven-year-old Pat Popma said he volunteered for the shock but "wouldn't do it again. It hurts. I was going to cry, but all my friends were watching me."

Kent County authorities could not be reached on whether Wymer could be prosecuted, and the city attorney said he would not address the issue unless a complaint were brought against the minister.

"Enter now into a time of refreshing, then establish for me a stronghold in this land and refresh my people." These were the words the Lord spoke to Rev. Richard (Dick) Arno while he was visiting Pitt County on April 3, 1981. Dick was the pastor of Salem United Methodist Church, Simpson, North Carolina, from 1972 to 1976. Since that time, he has served the Lord as the Director of The 700 Club's National Counseling Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia. He hosted a television and radio show for CBN and plans to do radio and television work in the Greenville Area. As a result of his work in counseling at CBN, Dick realizes there are many hurting people who need a place to receive solid Christian counsel. Therefore, Dick plans to establish a counseling retreat called "The Refreshing" located 7 miles west of Greenville on route 264 (Wilson Highway). Also, Dick believes there are many people in Pitt County who would like to establish a place of worship where the Name of Jesus is freely lifted higher. If you are interested in helping establish a Counseling Retreat and a place of worship, there will be an Information Meeting at the Rotary Building, Rotary Avenue, Greenville on Sunday, July 12th at 3:00 p.m. For further information, call 753-2775.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed some scattered losses today amid continuing uncertainty over the interest-rate outlook.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 5.52 on Thursday, slipped back 4.38 to 954.62 by noon.

Gainers clung to a slight lead over losers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said Thursday's advance seemed to stem mainly from internal market forces after the sharp drop of late June and early this month, when the Dow Jones industrial average fell more than 57 points.

They noted that high and volatile interest rates remained as a major obstacle in the path of any further gains.

Some oil issues which had climbed sharply of late on merger rumors turned downward. Cities Service dropped 3 to 57 1/2 and Marathon Oil fell 2 1/2 to 66 1/2, both in active trading.

The NYSE's composite index lost .05 to 75.01. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.39 at 363.44.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.44 million shares at noon, against 18.32 million at the same point Thursday.

 petitioners, said that the subdivision matter had been scheduled for presentation at the last Planning and Zoning meeting but at the last minute more information was requested. The matter is now set for this month's planning board meeting, he said.

Clark noted that the property owners can not secure a building permit until the subdivision requirements have been met.

Council members gave their approval to an amendment to the City Code relative to the composition of the Greenville and Joint-City County Planning and Zoning Commission. Clark said the planning board had suggested that one 11-member commission be established, with six members from the city and five from the extrajurisdiction.

Clark proposed last night a nine-member board, with three alternates, made up of six members from city and three from the extrajurisdiction area. Two of the three alternates would be from the city and the third would be appointed from the extrajurisdiction.

The new board, according to Clark, would serve as one commission, conduct one regular meeting, with members present voting on all agenda items. Five members, regardless of where they reside, would constitute a quorum.

Amendments to the Zoning Ordinance were also approved following a public hearing, including: Section 32-137 to provide that the filing fee ($50) for the Board of Adjustments be established in the Manual of Fees; Section 32-144 to reduce the time for zoning amendments to be placed in the newspaper from 15 to ten days; and Section 32-94 to add "but not less than 25 feet from any right-of-way line."

The Council approved an application by Ms. Lillian Joyce Barfield for a special use permit to operate a nightclub/lounge at 709 N. Greene Street, contingent upon the petitioner correcting minor building code deficiencies, meeting parking requirements, and other pertinent conditions.

Ms. Barfield said the club would offer country-western music with a live band performing once a week. She said a brown bagging permit would be sought.

A recommendation by the planning board that a portion of John's Avenue at the rear of Trinity Free Will Baptist Church be closed was approved by the Council. The street segment, which is unimproved, involves a 160 foot by 50 foot section.

Rob Dillon, an attorney representing Mrs. Nell Moseley, who owns property on the northern end of the street, voiced opposition to the closing, saying the action would deny his client the ability to develop the property. He said he questioned whether the closing action would serve a general need, but rather benefit only the church.

Robinson said access to the property is available from Cedar Lane and US 264.

Council members accepted the annual report of Greenville Cable TV Inc. and, upon the request of Tar River Communications Inc., adopted a resolution approving the transfer of the effective ownership and control of Greenville Cable TV.

A resolution was adopted providing for the issuance of $4.5 million in water bonds to be sold on July 28. City voters, on April 3, 1979, approved an order authorizing $14 million in water bonds, it was noted. Some $7.5 million of the bonds have been issued.

The Council scheduled public hearings for the August meeting on several matters, including five amendments to the Zoning Ordinance, three Subdivision Ordinance amendments, and the closing of Alpine Drive at the intersection of Alpine and Verdant Drives.

Other business included: — Acceptance of streets in Section I of Lindbeth Subdivision for permanent maintenance;

— Approval of a request by Phil Carroll that a portion of his property on the south side of 14th Street be deleted from the fire district;

— Authorization for the city manager to file an amendment to the 1979-80 Community Development program with the Department of Housing and Urban Development;

— Approval of a request by David Nichols Jr. for a resolution authorizing the execution of a quitclaim deed for Section II of Orchard Hills;

— Appointment of Mrs. Erma Carr to the Greenville City School Board to fill the term of Mrs. Nancy Middleton Jenkins (expires June of 1982), who resigned;

— Appointment of Mrs. Farris to a full term as a regular member on the

City Names New Inspector

Ron Sewell, P.E., Director of Engineering and Inspections, announced the appointment of James Edward Kaufman as Chief Inspector for the City.

Kaufman has been engaged in the building and plumbing business for the last 20 years. Prior to accepting the position of Chief Inspector, he was employed by the City of New Bern as the building inspector.

His principal responsibilities with the city of New Bern have included planning, organizing and directing the activities related to enforcement of the State Building Code. Kaufman's duties also included serving as the Building, Electrical, Mechanical, Plumbing and Energy Inspector, Zoning Officer and the enforcing agent for the New Bern Historical District Ordinance.

Kaufman is licensed and certified by the North Carolina Code Officials' Qualifications Board as a Building, Electrical, Mechanical, Energy and Plumbing Inspector.

He will assume his duties as Chief Inspector on July 15, 1981.

Lawmen Raided Wrong Address

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fayetteville lawmen on Wednesday smashed out a window, broke a door latch and pried open the door to a trailer seeking a suspected drug dealer, but later found they had broken into the wrong house.

Fayetteville police and City-County Narcotics Bureau agents had a warrant to search lot 417 in Dreamland Trailer Park for a man identified only as "Boxcar Willie." But neighbors said he lives at lot 416, across the street.

Edna L. Cameron, 30, said she returned home from work Wednesday at 4 p.m. to find a crowd of neighbors in her yard, her trailer broken into and clothing strewn about inside.

Ms. Cameron, a dental assistant at Ft. Bragg, said after neighbors told her what happened, she called Captain Paul Warner, the acting police chief, to complain.

Warner said he apologized and assured Mrs. Cameron that all damaged property would be repaired, and by Thursday afternoon, the broken door and smashed window had been replaced.

Warner said Thursday that an informant had provided the mistaken address and that the address had been

Mystery Envelopes: Do They Hold Key?

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The contents of mysterious envelopes delivered to representatives of club owners and players could hold the key to settlement of the baseball strike that entered its fifth week today.

Hours before the start of a meeting of all 26 club owners in New York Thursday night, federal mediator Ken Moffett delivered large envelopes to the adversaries' chief negotiators, the player union's Marvin Miller and management's Ray Grebey. Moffett also arranged for the negotiators' first bargaining session in six days for today at 2 p.m.

The New York Times said the envelopes contained a proposal designed to lead to an end of the strike.

"He didn't come all the way from Washington just to arrange a meeting (for today) and those envelopes did not contain engraved invitations to the meeting," the Times quoted an unnamed source as saying.

"I'm going to be very disappointed if nothing good happens" in upcoming sessions, Moffett said after returning home to Washington, D.C.

Both sides in the strike have claimed a united front after meeting among themselves this week. Player representatives had met in New York on Tuesday.

Ed Fitzgerald of the Milwaukee Brewers, chairman of management's Player Relations Committee, said after Thursday night's meeting that the owners had engaged in "a full discussion" and said recent reports of splits among them are untrue.

"There are no dissidents," Fitzgerald said. "The communications throughout have been excellent. The discussions proved we are all aware of how everyone else felt. We will continue the process we have been working on since we started seeking a solution."

"If there is dissension among the owners, it was not visible at the meeting today," said American League President Lee McPhail.

Eddie Chiles, owner of the Texas Rangers and reported to be one of the dissident owners, emerged from the meeting with handkerchief around his head as he met reporters.

"I'm bloodied but unbowed," he said.

He quickly added that he was joking.

"There was a lot of constructive conversation," he said. "It was not a meeting where specific proposals were presented, but a general discussion of the whole situation, where we've been, where we're going and how we'll get there."

"There was quite a spirit of unanimity by all the owners."

Meanwhile, hearings before a National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge were expected to conclude today.

Joe Burke, general manager of the Kansas City Royals, testified that management does not have complete control over baseball's salary structure.

Burke pointed to salary arbitration, where an independent third party chooses between wage proposals from the player and the club, and also noted more indirect influences.

"If you stop signing the players that make up the nucleus of your club, you come under tremendous pressure from your fans and the press," Burke said.

Burke was among five witnesses called during the fourth day of testimony before Judge Melvin Welles involving the Major League Players Association's charge of unfair bargaining by the owners.

The union, on strike since June 12, wants Welles to order the owners to open the clubs' financial records.

Miller, the players association's executive director, testified as a rebuttal witness that, without the financial records, the players "are still bargaining in the dark without very basic information."

The strike "is over a demand that the players give up something that they have," Miller said in reference to free agent movement without compensation.

"It is a demand which, in my mind, the players might give more consideration to if they saw that the clubs' financial situation was precarious," Miller said.

After the owners' first collective meeting since the strike started June 12, Fitzgerald said it was "merely an exchange of views. We're always interested to receive those views. As far as bargaining, we do that at the table. Views were exchanged and PRC was asked to continue what it has been doing — find a solution by bargaining."

Grebey, director of the PRC, called the discussions "the most positive meeting of PRC shareholders I've ever attended. We had a good dialogue and conversation and none of it will be wasted. It was a constructive meeting."

The session was held under tight security at the offices of Louis Hoynes, National League attorney and a member of the PRC bargaining committee. Each club was represented and the importance of the meeting was emphasized by the fact that John Fetzer, owner of the Detroit Tigers, attended.

Fetzer rarely appears at major league meetings, preferring to leave those matters to Jim Campbell, president of the Tigers.

In strike-related developments, AL umpire Mike Reilly said he had received his entire paycheck for the month of July although the umpires were contractually entitled to be paid only through July 12. Reilly responded that the league "probably wants to stay on the good side of us."

Ted Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves, gave striking pitcher Preston Hanna a job as a sports production assistant with Turner's Cable News Network.

Owners' Meeting Tagged 'Best' By Ranger Chief Eddie Chiles

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Chiles, sometimes a maverick, stuck to the party line this time.

"It was the best meeting I've ever been to — there was quite a spirit of unanimity," said the Texas Rangers' owner Thursday night after he and his colleagues, veiled in secrecy and protected by skin-tight security, met for more than three hours in a midtown Manhattan skyscraper office building.

It was the first collective meeting for the major league owners since baseball players went on strike June 12 over the free agent compensation issue. They came out of it with a consensus "unified and positive" position and sent their representatives into today's resumption of negotiations with the players in a high-spirited mood.

Chiles' remark reflected the general tone of the owners' post-meeting press conference. He even injected a little levity into the occasion when he sauntered to a battery of microphones with a white handkerchief plastered on his forehead and commented: "I may be bloodied, but unbowed." Then, "Uh, just joking ..."

That brought chuckles from the large body of newsmen in attendance, but no one was smiling later when the usually chatty Chiles took the Fifth Amendment on two big questions.

Asked first if he thought that free agent compensation was necessary, Chiles remarked: "I'll pass that."

Then the Ranger owner was questioned if he thought that the issue was worth striking over, he said: "I'll pass that one, too."

The often-outspoken Chiles, who has challenged the direction of his own Player Relations Committee, did say that he thought there was "a lot of constructive conversation" at the owners' meeting.

"This was not a meeting where specific proposals were made," he said. "It was just a general discussion of the whole situation. There was quite a spirit of unanimity among the owners. It will contribute a great deal toward settlement of the strike."

Chiles did say that "some new ideas — some very good ideas" were tossed about at the meeting. However, when asked what the ideas were, Chiles replied, "We'll leave those things up to Mr. Grebey."

Chiles referred to Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the owners in the baseball talks.

Grebey was among the first to address the press after Thursday night's meeting, sounding the general tone that it was "a most positive meeting — three hours of excellent discussion and ideas. We shared ideas with the owners. There was good dialogue — none of it wasted."

Added Grebey: "We look hopefully to an early resolution of the strike. We want the fans to know that the owners care for them."

Although the owners generalized about the meeting, preferring not to air their plan of attack in the press, there were reports that some form of rescue was coming from Ken Moffett, the federal mediator in the negotiations.

Moffett reportedly delivered a large envelope to each of the chief negotiators. According to the New York Times, the envelope contained a proposal designed to lead to settlement of the strike.

"He didn't come all the way from Washington just to arrange a meeting, and those envelopes did not contain engraved invitations to the meeting," said a source quoted by the Times.

The Times said the envelopes were delivered six hours before the 26 major league owners gathered in the office of Louis Hoynes, National League attorney and a member of the PRC committee. When Marvin Miller, the players' labor leader, was asked about the reported envelopes, he said: "I'm not at liberty to comment."

Three hours before the owners' big meeting, the Times said that a small group of owners held a secret meeting (Please Turn To Page 12)

Wind Gusts At Milwaukee Open Don't Bother Leader Stockton

MILWAUKEE (AP) — That's because Stockton, who won the GMO in 1968 and 1973, is familiar with the vagaries of the field in the Greater Tuckaway Country Club's Milwaukee Open golf tournament Thursday, but they suited Dave Stockton just fine.

Stockton, battling what he said is his worst putting slump of his 18-year career, compensated with superb woods and iron play and shot a first-round 65, 7-under par for the 7,010-yard layout.

Tour rookie Rod Nuckolls was one stroke back at 66, while Thomas Gray, another rookie, and Bobby Wadkins had 67s.

George Archer, whose 12 tour victories include the 1969 Masters, had a 68. So did David Sann, Jay Haas, Lyn Lott, Bob Gilder, Rod Curl, Chi Chi Rodriguez, John Fought, Tim Simpson, Skeeter Heath, Mike Smith and Tom Storey.

Defending champion Bill Kratzert shot a 72. Lon Hinkle, 16th on the tour's 1981 earnings list at $116,004 and top money winner entered here, was in danger of missing the cut after his 76.

The GMO, bypassed by many of golf's big names because of next week's British Open, lost one of its best draws when Bobby Clampett was disqualified after he failed to sign his scorecard. Clampett, who had a 71, is 25th on the earnings list at $92,564.

Stockton, who set Tuckaway's competitive course record with a 63 enroute to his victory here in 1973, flirted with that mark Thursday. He was 8-under par through his first 17 holes before he missed an 11-foot putt and took his only bogey on No. 18.

Stockton, 39, said he was able to cope with the winds because he knows Tuckaway well. "This is a wide open field," he said. "It's not the U.S. Open, and it's a tournament that's important for a lot of young kids to win."

"But if the wind blows like today and you have to figure different shots because of it, it helps the older guys who have played here before," he said. "Today the wind was just the opposite of the way it was blowing yesterday."

Stockton has won 11 championships and $1.1 million on the tour, but has collected only $17,983 this year. He has missed the cut in nine of 16 tournaments this year, including the last six he has entered.

"I've really been depressed of late," he said. "I started well this year, but my putting is the worst it's ever been. That's really been frustrating because I'm driving as well now as I ever have. If you play golf, you know that if one part of your game comes around, something else is going to go wrong."

"When you're not playing well, you tend to start out with negative thoughts, but when you started, my partner, Rod Curl, said we ought to be able to start well," he said. "The more I thought about it, he was right."

"I birdied the first two holes and both of them were downwind," he said. "Then I birdied 10, 11 and 12, and all of them were downwind."

Stockton's round included 27 putts, down from his recent average of 36.

"My putting didn't improve that much today," he said. "I missed a lot of close putts, but I hit the ball close."

Nuckolls, 24, recorded seven birdies, in the process sinking three putts from 30 feet, one from 25 and another from 20. He three-putted his seventh hole for his only bogey.

"I drove it real well today. I only missed one fairway. That set me up for some easy putts, and I also made some long ones," said Nuckolls, who qualified for the tour last fall and has earned $6,399 this year.

Camels Top UNC Twice

BUIES CREEK, N.C. — Bobby Spicer's sixth-inning grand slam lifted Campbell to an 8-6 victory over North Carolina in North State summer league baseball action Thursday, enabling the Camels to sweep a double-header from the Tar Heels.

Campbell took the nightcap 14-2, scoring 10 runs in the second inning.

Terry Strickland led the Camels with four hits in five trips including a homer, a triple and a pair of doubles to drive in five runs in the two games.

Relief man Jeff Horne got the win for the Camels in the opener to make his record 4-0 while sophomore Danny Crewe went the distance in the nightcap to raise his mark to 4-1.

Campbell is now 16-6 while North Carolina fell to 6-16.

Bumgarner Is In Hospital

Rose High School football coach Dave Bumgarner is in Pitt County Memorial Hospital undergoing tests for heart problems, according to principal Howard Hurt.

Bumgarner, 38, reportedly experienced chest pains while jogging, according to Hurt. Dr. Donald Tucker, Bumgarner's physician, said he did not have a heart attack.

"He entered the hospital for tests to determine the problem," Dr. Tucker said. "His condition is good or excellent."

While Bumgarner is in the intensive care section of the hospital, Dr. Tucker emphasized that it was not because of his condition. "We wanted him to be (on a heart monitor), but none were available in the general hospital. We expect him to conclude tests today and probably go home tomorrow."

As to Bumgarner's status for the coming football season, Hurt said he hoped to have some word in the next couple of days. "Should he be unable to coach this fall, we would have several possibilities available to us, but it would be next week before I would be able to talk with the superintendent about which way to go."

Dr. Tucker said that he did not expect Bumgarner to coach during the early weeks of the season, should he decide to continue in that role. Football practice is scheduled to begin in three weeks.

A graduate of Valdese High School, Bumgarner was a record-setting end under Jack Boone and Clarence Stasavich at East Carolina College, twice participating in post-season bowl games. He played one year of professional ball in the Canadian Football League prior to entering the coaching ranks at Edenton High School.

After serving for several years as an assistant coach at Rose High School under Bud Phillips, he took over the head job in 1970, and is preparing for his 11th season as head coach. His 1975 team won the State 4-A championship.

Bumgarner is married to the former Cindy Faulconer, and the couple expect their first child this month.

In addition to his coaching duties at Rose, Bumgarner serves as assistant principal.

Dave Bumgarner, Rose High School football coach, is in hospital.

Owners' Meeting...

at a New York hotel where New York Yankee owner George Steinbrenner stays when he is in the city.

Moffett reportedly delivered the secret envelopes while visiting a National Labor Relations Board hearing here on the players' charge of bad-faith bargaining by the owners.

The owners, meanwhile, generally expressed satisfaction with the PRC's stand in the talks, despite reports that some of their number — including Chiles — were unhappy with Grebey's work.

"There are no dissidents," said Ed Fitzgerald, chairman of the PRC. "This meeting we had tonight was one of the best in major league history, in regard to labor relations. The PRC was instructed by the owners to go back and bargain just as we have been doing. There were no votes taken on anything — it wasn't necessary. The owners just told us to continue the program that we have embarked on."

Referring to the owners' last proposal, which was turned down last Saturday by the players' committee, Grebey called it "a very significant movement."

In that last negotiating session, the owners altered their free-agent compensation proposal. They limited to 12 the number of ranking players whose signing through the re-entry draft would require compensation to their old teams in the form of professional players. Grebey has indicated that number is negotiable.

The players' union is still insisting on a pool of players drawn from all clubs participating in the re-entry draft to supply free-agent compensation.

"We can't get away from the compensation issue," says Dan Galbreath of the Pittsburgh Pirates, "but I don't think we've had much communication in this area so far. I'm very unhappy with the strike, of course, and I'm exploring all avenues to end it. One of my jobs is to find some answers. I might ask some off-the-wall questions some time ... just to start people talking."

Galbreath, though, was generally pleased with the night's results — as was Bud Selig of the Milwaukee Brewers, who said: "It was, without a doubt, the most constructive meeting I've seen in my all my years in baseball."

Davis Cup Play Begins

NEW YORK (AP) — The weather was expected to play a major role in the quarterfinal round of the Davis Cup tennis match between defending champion Czechoslovakia and the United States, which started today.

The National Weather Service predicted sunny weather with temperatures in the 90s and high humidity.

"It was in the 60's in England," newly crowned Wimbledon champion John McEnroe said Thursday. "You can be in shape to play in England, but the heat and humidity here will definitely be a factor."

Czechoslovakia, the defending Davis Cup champion, announced it planned to use only two players throughout the three-day match — Ivan Lendl, the world's fourth-ranked player, and Tomas Smid. The United States will retaliate with McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world, and third-ranked Jimmy Connors in the singles, while Stan Smith and Bob Lutz will play the doubles.

"McEnroe and (Peter) Fleming are the best doubles team in the world," Ashe said in explaining why he picked Smith and Lutz, "but I don't want to have McEnroe playing all three days. I want him fresh for Sunday."

Under the Davis Cup format, there were to be two singles matches today, the doubles on Saturday and two singles on Sunday. Today's matches sent McEnroe against Lendl and Connors against Smid. The two Americans will change opponents on Sunday, while the McEnroe-Smid match leading off the final day of the best-of-five format.

ESPN, the all-sports cable network, will televise all of the matches in their entirety. Each day's matches begin at 1 p.m. EDT.

"If we play well, they shouldn't have a chance," said Arthur Ashe, the non-playing captain of the U.S. team. "But you never can tell!"

Lendl, who has been practicing in the heat and humidity of Florida since he was eliminated in the opening round at Wimbledon, said he was upset that Czechoslovakia had to play the United States in the second round.

"I don't think it's right," Lendl said. "We are the defending champions and we are seeded between fifth and eighth (in the 16-team field)."

McEnroe also said the draw was unfavorable, but noted it was made before Czechoslovakia defeated Argentina and then went on to beat Italy in the 1980 Davis Cup finals.

McEnroe, who with Fleming won the Wimbledon doubles title, defeating Smith and Lutz, refused to say whether he would have preferred to play the doubles along with the singles.

"That's up to the captain, not me," the New York left-hander said.

But he did note that not playing the doubles — considering the weather — might help him in the singles, "especially if there were some five-set matches."

Antonin Bolardt, the non-playing captain of the Czechoslovakian team, agreed with Ashe that the U.S. squad should be favored.

"They have the two top players," he said. "We have no chance in the match, but we have a lot of experience in Davis Cup, especially Tomas Smid."

Bolardt, who play ice hockey for Czechoslovakia — "I have no tooth," he said, pointing to the front of his mouth — said the heat wave encompassing New York "is the same for both teams."

Lendl's encounter with McEnroe was the first time the two have met since the quarterfinals of the French Open, which was played on slow, red clay. Lendl won that battle, eventually losing in the finals to Sweden's Bjorn Borg.

"The surface is more important, not the site," said Bolardt. "Slow, red clay is better for us."

invited to become a member of the exclusive All England Lawn and Tennis Club. All previous singles champions have automatically been accorded honorary membership.

The club, in a statement, said its decision was made "because his on court behavior brought the game into disrepute."

McEnroe was embroiled in controversy throughout the two-week tournament.

The surface at the National Tennis Center at Flushing Meadow is just the opposite — a fast, hard surface. With the sun beating down, temperatures on the court were expected to rise about 100 degrees.

Czechoslovakia advanced to the quarterfinals with a 3-2 victory over Switzerland. The U.S. defeated Mexico 3-2 in the opening round.

In other quarterfinals this weekend, Sweden meets Australia, New Zealand takes on Great Britain and Argentina plays Romania.

If the United States defeats Czechoslovakia, it will advance to the semifinals against the Sweden-Australia winner at Portland, Ore., Oct. 24.

McEnroe had no comment Thursday when he was told that the Wimbledon Championship Committee had announced that he would not be

WASHINGTON — Scott Galloway pitched a two-hit shutout at the Greenville Kiwanis last night as Clifton Insurance advanced in the Coastal Plain Senior Babe Ruth League's post-season tournament, 10-0.

Galloway struck out 11 on the way to the victory.

Tom Bule led the Clifton hitting, getting three in four trips, including a double and a triple.

Of the ten runs, nine were unearned, as the Kiwanis made nine errors during the evening. Clifton, in the losers' bracket of the tournament, will now meet Red Oak, a 10-5 victory over Cooper's of Nash County, in the losers' bracket semifinals on Saturday. Tonight, the winners' bracket finals will be held with Washington meeting Winterville.

Saturday at 3 p.m., Clifton and Red Oak meet, with the winner meeting the loser of tonight's game. The championship is scheduled for Sunday, starting at 3 p.m.

The losses last night eliminated both the Kiwanis and Cooper's.

Dodgers Hold Tryout

ROCKY MOUNT — The Los Angeles Dodgers will hold a try-out camp on Monday at N.C. Wesleyan College.

The tryout session will get underway at 9:30 a.m. It is open to players, 16-22 years of age. American Legion players must have written permission from coaches to participate if their season is still underway.

Candidates must furnish their own gloves and shoes. Jim Garland and Tommy Mixon, Dodger scouts, will conduct the tryout.

The public is invited to attend. There is no admission charge.

KC Official Says Clubs Don't Have Full Control

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball club owners have far-from-complete control over how much they pay their players, according to General Manager Joe Burke of the Kansas City Royals.

Burke told a hearing before a National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge Thursday that there are many pressures — some direct, others more subtle — on salary decisions by management.

"We do not have absolute control over salaries ...," Burke testified under questioning by Al Blyer, an NLRB attorney.

The Royals' GM pointed to salary arbitration, where an independent third party chooses between wage proposals from the player and the club, and also noted more indirect influences on how much to pay.

"If you stop signing the players that make up the nucleus of your club, you come under tremendous pressure from your fans and the press," Burke said.

Burke was among five witnesses called during the fourth day of testimony before Judge Melvin Welles involving the Major League Players Association's charge of unfair bargaining by the owners.

The union, on strike since June 12, wants Welles to order the owners to open the club's financial records. The players argue that the books are needed for examination because they feel the owners' plans to change the free-agent compensation system is based on financial need. The owners deny that money is involved.

The final witness in the case — Los Angeles Times sports writer Harry Bernstein — was expected to be called today. There was no indication when Welles would rule.

Marvin Miller, the players association's executive director, testified as a rebuttal witness Thursday that, without the financial records, the players "are still bargaining in the dark without very basic information."

The strike "is over a demand that the players give up something that they have," Miller said in reference to previous court decisions, arbitration rulings and bargaining victories which gave the players freedom of movement from club to club.

"It is a demand which, in my mind, the players might give more consideration to if they saw that the clubs' financial situation was precarious," Miller said.

Ray Grebey, director of the Player Relations Committee and the owners' chief negotiator, concluded a seven-hour stint on the witness stand, where he was often involved in fiery exchanges with union attorney George Cohen.

Grebey said the owners had purchased $35 million in strike insurance in late 1979, but a strike was narrowing averted in the spring of 1980. This year, the owners are receiving daily payments from $50 million in strike insurance.

The hearings were interrupted briefly when federal mediator Kenneth Moffett made a surprise appearance and drew an agreement from Miller and Grebey to resume bargaining today.

Also testifying Thursday were American League President Lee MacPhail and Chicago Sun-Times sports writer Jerome Holtzman.

Diet Man Will Trim 76er Fat

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The new owner of the Philadelphia 76ers, a millionaire who made his fortune in the diet business, says he plans to trim the fat from his National Basketball Association team.

"We will make cuts in the front office, and even in player salaries," Harold Katz said Thursday, after announcing that he was paying more than $12 million for the Sixers.

Katz, who owns a nationwide chain of diet centers, said his lifelong ambition was to own an NBA team and that he has been in the market for two years.

"Many people have called me a little bit crazy," said the 44-year-old Katz at a press conference. "I guess you have to be a little bananas to buy a sports franchise."

"Since I can't play for the Sixers, and can't coach them, the next best thing was to buy them," Katz said. "My youngest son plays high school basketball and he was the driving force for me to buy the club. He said money isn't everything."

But the business of running the team will be important to Katz.

"I am in this to enjoy myself, but I do not intend to lose millions of dollars," he said. Katz's first official act, even while lawyers prepared the necessary papers for the transfer, was to make it clear that Billy Cunningham would stay as coach.

"It's going to be a very easy transition," Cunningham said. "We met casually and just talked about everything. I see no problems."

Katz agreed: "I am going to depend heavily on Billy, and also on Pat Williams (the general manager). I am not going to run this team myself. I definitely understand the game and I will be involved."

Decision In 1975 Led To Today's Strike

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Peter M. Seitz, the man whose arbitration ruling changed the face of baseball, sits in his book-lined Central Park West apartment, peacefully smoking his pipe and pouring over new papers while the game lies dormant in the throes of a labor stalemate.

Brooklyn Dodger fan, who ruled that pitchers Dave McNally and Andy Messersmith, their contracts terminated, could offer their services to another club.

He would be the last to regard himself as the "Trigger Man" although the current 29-day-old strike by players can be traced indirectly to the landmark decision he made two days before Christmas in 1975.

This epic finding, upheld later in the courts, shattered baseball's century-old reserve clause, binding a player to one club for life or until traded or sold, and opened the door to free agency, spawning scores of instant millionaires.

"I decided it as a lawyer and an arbitrator," said the grand-fatherly, scholarly New Yorker, a self-styled onetime

It is the owners' efforts to recover some of the power they lost 5½ years ago that has shattered big league ball parks in the first midseason strike in the game's long history.

quences, he has discovered that his statements often are taken out of context and given the wrong interpretation. So, lawyer-like, he insists that he not be quoted.

Apparently the veteran arbitrator, who has handled numerous important cases unconnected with the playing fields, sees bigtime, well-heeled sports suffering the same growing pains that has plagued all aspects of private industry during the past century.

It's a tug-of-war of economic strength, listing from side to side like some huge ocean liner caught in a stormy sea.

The clout, it so happens, now belongs to the players. They have had it only since Seitz's decision in 1975 and are reluctant to give too much of it back. After all, the owners exercised dogmatic control for decades, resisting every effort for change.

A phone call was placed to Seitz, asking if he had any opinions on how the current strike might have been averted. What went wrong? Who went wrong? Were the owners too stiff-necked and unyielding in surrendering some of the power they held so long? Were the players, after finally being released from their chains, too greedy, demanding too much, too quickly?

It was felt that Seitz, a man of brilliance and understanding, could address himself to the subject to the enlightenment of all.

He preferred to pass. His reasons are respected.

It is interesting to hark back to those chilly December days in 1975 and to note how baseball reacted to the shock.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, "it would be a disaster for the players, the clubs and, most of all, the fans."

Lee MacPhail, president of the American League and a man who learned baseball at the knee of his father, called it "financially suicidal."

The heads of the other major sports organizations were equally shocked, and apprehensive lest the same blow fall on the roofs of their houses. They predicted a new age of bargaining and com-

It is a crisis situation for the game. Players are strong and adamant in their determination to cling to long-denied gains. The owners are split and desperate, grasping for a vantage log to keep them afloat.

As for Seitz, he was fired by baseball owners two minutes after he made his decision. It didn't shake him at all.

"What I did was inevitable," he said at the time. "The owners were too stubborn and stupid. They were like the French barons in the 13th Century. They accumulated so much power they wouldn't share it with anybody."

It came to pass, but not the way expected. Baseball had five years of prosperity — bigger crowds, greater interest, larger TV contracts, a mushroom of new millionaire super stars. Then came the strike.

It was no Emancipation Proclamation. "Involuntary servitude had nothing to do with it."

It was strictly law.

Edwin Moses Latest No-Show For US-USSR Track In Leningrad

LENINGRAD (AP) — American star hurdler Edwin Moses failed to arrive in Leningrad only hours before the start of the U.S.-Soviet track meet, and a team manager said another American has been substituted for tonight's 400-meter hurdle race.

Moses's absence reduced to 11 the number of U.S. national champions who will take part in the two-day meet at Lenin Stadium, the first between the two track squads in three years and the first major U.S.-Soviet athletic competition since the American-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Assistant team manager Fred Newhouse said Moses had been expected to fly in from Western Europe by this morning at the latest, but the 25-year-old hurdler from Laguna Hills, Calif., had not appeared by midday and was no longer expected to start.

Newhouse said Moses would be replaced in his event by David Lee of University City, Mo., who finished third in last month's U.S. national championship meet in Sacramento, Calif.

Moses, undefeated in nearly four years, was regarded as close to a sure winner for the U.S. team. His last defeat was in August 1977, and he has won more than 60 consecutive races since then.

Among the 30 Americans champions, others who passed up the U.S.-Soviet meet included teen-age sensation Carl Lewis, the U.S. titlist in the 100 meters and long jump, and Evelyn Ashford, U.S. women's champion in 100 and 200 meters.

Still, the meet has generated widespread interest. The Soviets said it is being televised in 32 countries and reported by 250 journalists from 15 nations.

"You've got two countries that really don't care for one another," said U.S. 110-meter hurdle champion Greg Foster of Los Angeles, summarizing intensity of the competitors.

Added Benita Fitzgerald, a 20-year-old hurdler from Woodbridge, Va., who first competed in the Soviet Union in a junior competition in 1978: "It's not really until you step out there in your uniform that you realize you're not only running for yourself and for your hometown but for your country, too."

Lloyd Cutler, former White House counsel, was quoted this week as expressing "surprise" at U.S. participation here. "I would have thought that the policy (of non-participation) would continue since the invasion (in Afghanistan) continues."

U.S. Coach Harmon Brown of Foster City, Calif., said, "American athletes were very disappointed by having several years of preparation frustrated by not being able to compete in the Olympic Games. But I think one must realize that American sportsmen, like those all over the world, are not politicians ... and are subject to the same will of the people as occurs in all other aspects of a democratic society."

"The boycott decision," Brown said, "was supported by a good majority of the American people."

Nikolai Popov, chairman of the Leningrad Sports Committee, told reporters that the boycott was the United States' "own business" but said, "We did not suffer greatly because the U.S. team did not come. The U.S. athletes lost more."

Other U.S. stars include Foster in the 110-hurdles; triple jump national champion Willie Banks of Los Angeles; women's 100-meter hurdler Stephanie Hightower of Columbus, Ohio; and veteran

Old Man Snead Still Making Title Noises

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Sam Snead, still a formidable golfer at age 69, figures it's way too early to call the dogs and go home.

Snead, showing flashes of the brilliance that enabled him to chalk up 84 PGA tour victories during a long career, fired a 2-over 72 Thursday and was just two strokes behind first-round leader Lionel Hebert going into today's second round of the U.S. Senior Open at Oakland Hills.

"You've got to have strength and you've got to have that touch to play this game,"

Snead said following a round which was twice delayed by thunderstorms for a total of 55 minutes in this affluent suburb north of Detroit.

"Most of all, you've got to have desire and keep your head in it. If you can't keep your head in it, you might as well call the dogs, wet on the fire and go home!"

Snead's round Thursday included an eagle 2 on the 358-yard, par-4 sixth hole when he hit a 7-iron and watched as the ball bounced once and jumped into the hole.

Still wearing his familiar straw hat, Snead told reporters he thought the rugged terrain over the 6,798-yard golf course — site of many major championships over the years — would likely take a toll on the legs of the players, all of whom must be at least 50 years old to enter this $150,000 championship.

"I didn't know, myself, whether I'd be able to walk this much. I generally play out of a cart now," Snead explained. "I've walked only five rounds since the Masters (in April). It's not over yet."

Hebert, the 1957 PGA champion, was the only golfer in a field of 150 pros and amateurs to finish at par over the tough course — considered one of the sternest tests of golf.

"I'd say 70 is good anyway, but especially at this place," the 53-year-old Hebert said. "I think it's important to start well."

"This is the kind of tournament where a guy could start fast and just go run away from the field."

A pair of former Masters champions — Art Wall, who earned the green jacket in 1959, and Bob Goaly, who won at Augusta in 1968 — were one stroke behind Hebert at 1-over 71 along with Jim Ferree. Amateur Bill Campbell, a 58-year-old insurance broker from Huntington, W. Va., who finished runner-up to Roberto DeVicenzo in this tournament last year, was tied with Snead and several others at 72.

Campbell, who won the U.S. Senior Amateur last year, was 3-under after nine holes, but struggled around the back side in 5-over 40.

Also at 72 going into today's play were Arnold Palmer, Gardner Dickinson, Tom Nijporte, Bob Stone and Murry Jacobs.

Ground Broken For Velodrome

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — Shovels full of dirt gave evidence that physical preparations for the 1984 Summer Olympic games are under way.

A ground-breaking ceremony for the cycling velodrome at California State University-Dominguez Hills, the start of a $4 million privately financed structure, was held Thursday.

Actually, ground preparation had started a few days before the officials applied their shovels to the soil.

Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, commented, "Southern California now has the potential of being the cycling center of the United States."

Money for the velodrome comes from the Southland Corporation of Dallas, which operates the 7-Eleven stores throughout the nation.

The firm's board chairman, John P. Thompson, said while he wasn't a cyclist, he "hopes this will mean a resurgence of the sport in the United States. We haven't made very good showings."

The velodrome will be an outdoors facility with a paved course.

Emphasis was placed on the fact the LAOOC has asked private industry to finance the Games so there would be no cost to the taxpayers. The velodrome was the first facility to be started although several corporations have made commitments in other fields.

The oval will be 333.3 meters (11,093 feet) and will have 30-degree banking. There will be permanent lighting and seating for 2,000.

Ueberroth said 50 nations were expected to compete in cycling with about 550 individuals entered. The sport includes both the track racing and road road racing with individual and team events.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: T equals S

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Arrested 8 In Drug Ring

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Eight people were arrested Thursday in connection with a major drug wholesale operation with ties in eastern North Carolina and three northeastern United States, officials said.

Federal, state and local police arrested seven men and one woman, according to District Attorney Dan Edwards.

Edwards said the ring dealt in heroin and preluin pills. And he said the eight suspects were "big fish" in the drug operation.

The Durham Police vice squad, the federal Drug Enforcement Administration and the State Bureau of Investigation cooperated on the investigation, he added.

The eight were in federal custody Thursday night, awaiting the filing of state charges today.

The purpose of the investigation was to get leaders in the ring and break the distribution chain, Edwards said.

Surveillance and intelligence gathering began a year ago, while undercover work got underway six months ago.

Edwards said the operation is one of the most important roundups in recent memory.

has its aficionados, and at recess I would overhear them as they huddled in the hallway and critiqued the performances.

Few authors have been able to resist the raw human emotions that are unleashed before the bar. Nor could television. Besides such courtroom dramas as "Perry Mason," "The Defenders" and "Judd for the Defense," real cases were re-enacted in "Day in Court," "Accused" and "Traffic Court."

Now, in this age of reality television, comes "The People's Court," in which actual small claims cases are tried before a judge and are legally binding.

"The People's Court," from Ralph Edwards Productions, will be syndicated to stations for airing five times a week in the fall.

Presiding over the cases is former Judge Joseph A. Wapner, who sat on the Los Angeles Superior Court for 18 years and still hears special cases. The litigants have agreed to a hearing that is taped in a courtroom set in a studio.

Two cases were heard in the pilot. In the first, a woman who bought three Cartier watches demands her money back because the watches are fake. In the second, a woman seeks $100 damages from a mover she claims scratched her furniture.

Neither sounds particularly exciting, but you'd be surprised at the amount of emotion the parties can work up over such small amounts. And that emotion is what causes spectators to creep into the backrows of courtrooms.

Unfortunately a game show atmosphere has crept into "The People's Court." Stephanie Edwards, who guides us through the proceedings, is, well, the hostess. It takes on the aspect of which-contestant-will-win? When the judge retires to consider his decision, Miss Edwards solicits the opinions of the spectators.

In the first case, the plaintiff, confined to a wheelchair, bought the so-called Cartier watches out of a cigar box from a young woman in a restaurant. She paid $75 each for the watches that normally sell for $1,000. After hearing both sides, the judge decided for the defendant. He said the plaintiff "knew the value of a Cartier" and it was a matter of "buyer beware."

The second case is rather humdrum, except for an amusing digression about whether the mover filched a box of the woman's underpants. The judge again finds for the defendant. He says, "It's a case that requires proof, and you didn't even tip the scales."

In both cases Miss Edwards found that the spectator's opinions coincided with the judge's decisions.

After each decision the loser is asked for reaction. Both were bitter. The mover tried to put in a word, but Miss Edwards told him not to speak. He ignored her and said, "This goes to show that crime doesn't pay."

Wapner says he hopes the cases have been not only entertaining "but educational in the judicial process of arbitration and how to conduct yourself in court."

James F. Nelson, presiding judge of the Los Angeles Municipal Court, said in a letter to the producers "the judges and staff members present (for the screening of the pilot) were enthusiastic about the quality and realism of the show."

Nelson added, "Certaining your show will do much to increase public awareness of the nature of the small claims proceeding and its value to a public which, all too often, thinks of the courts as remote and inaccessible as well as time consuming and expensive."

I won't argue with that. I'm sure the benchwarmers I used to encounter in court will love it. The game show fans may love it, too. But, I'd rather take my case to a higher court.

Try Determine Life And Death

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — As Congress considers when life begins, a presidential commission says it ends with the "irreversible cessation" of all brain or circulatory and respiratory functions — even if a person can be kept alive artificially.

The commission, chartered by Congress in 1978, is urging states to adopt its definition of death to help cope with situations in which people are being kept alive on respirators.

Brain-dead people are "people who have expired whose hearts and lungs are kept working, though the function of the brain isn't there," said Alexander Capron, the commission's executive director.

"When there is no clear definition, the physician faces a difficult choice," he said. "There are the old vital signs of life: a heartbeat, a heaving chest, a warm skin. But he knows that if he weren't giving respiration, there would be a corpse."

Commission members said Thursday that a uniform definition of death would prevent problems that might result by a person being declared dead in one state and alive in another.

Also Thursday, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee approved a bill defining life as beginning at conception. The proposal to give all unborn fetuses full constitutional rights is a step toward reversing legalized abortions.

A vote by the full Judiciary Committee on the so-called human life bill has been put off until fall or winter while conservatives debate what kind of anti-abortion legislation they want. Some say a constitutional amendment would be preferable.

Sen. John East, R-N.C., the subcommittee chairman, said the bill is designed to reverse a 1973 Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion but failed to resolve a key issue: "Namely, when does life begin?"

Although Congress is considering a federal law defining life, the commission said a definition of death would be better left to the states. It recommended that they adopt its proposed Uniform Determination of Death Act.

A uniform death statute is long overdue, said Morris B. Abram, the commission's chairman. Medical advances that can keep a body functioning after severe injury and disease make definitions of death based on a heart stoppage or cessation of breathing obsolete, the commission said.

"We have concluded that, in light of the ever-increasing powers of biomedical science and practice, a statute is needed to provide a clear and socially accepted basis for making determinations of death," Abram said.

The commission cautioned that laws defining death should be kept separate from those governing termination of life-sustaining treatment and organ transplant donors, issues the group also is studying.

These issues could confuse and complicate a death law, which should stand by itself, it said.

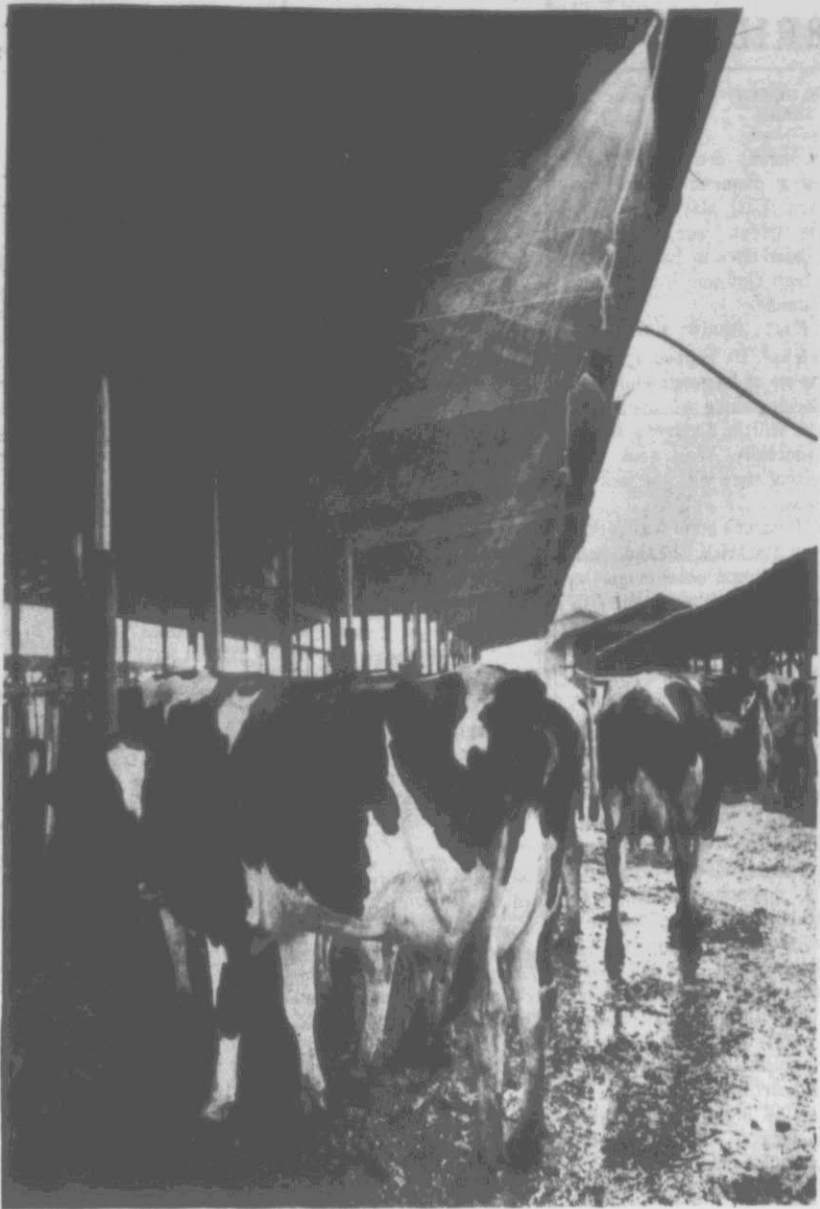

In the past decade, 27 states have passed laws redefining death as a function of brain activity, but there also is a diversity in these statutes. The commission recommended that they also adopt its proposal.

The model has been endorsed by the American Bar Association, the American Medical Association and the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

In addition to urging the model law on the states, the commission encouraged Congress to pass a uniform death law to cover areas under federal jurisdiction, such as the military and government hospitals.

The model law approved by the commission reads: "An individual who has sustained either (1) irreversible cessation of circulatory and respiratory functions, or (2) irreversible cessation of all functions of the entire brain, including the brain stem, is dead. A determination of death must be made in accordance with accepted medical standards."

COOL COWS KEEP MILK FLOWING . . . That's what area dairymen hope as the current heat wave pushes milk production down about ten percent. The fogger above, recently installed on the Radford Dairy in Pitt County, is one way of reducing heat stress on livestock. In addition to decreased production, temperatures above 85 degrees Fahrenheit, coupled with high humidity, causes a drastic drop in conception rates in both cattle and hogs. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Heat Stress Problem For Area Livestock

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Hot weather means losing money for area livestock producers, according to Mike Regans, county extension agent, particularly for hog producers and dairymen.

"Most pork producers experience a decline in the conception rate of sows bred during the month of July, August and September," Regans explained. "Herds whose conception rate may average 80 percent or more most of the year will suddenly drop to 40-60 percent during the summer."

In addition, pork producers face increased pregnancy termination, more embryonic deaths, smaller litters and a decrease in weight gain due to appetite loss, says Regans.

"Heat stress is the main problem," emphasized the farm agent. "Hogs are hassling from the heat, they don't want to eat, and boars exposed to high temperatures for several days show a drop in fertility until about 60 days after the heat stress."

Dairy farmers also struggle with high temperatures in the summer. "When it gets above 85 degrees, milk production drops a great deal," said Steve McLawhorn of Charles McLawhorn and Sons Dairy near Winterville. "High humidity also affects production."

McLawhorn estimated that the recent heat wave has trimmed milk production on his farm by ten percent. "It has also cut conception rates in our cows below half," he noted. Last summer, said the dairy farmer, only two cows out of approximately 46 bred during the hottest part of the summer calved.

"Cows produce milk from the water and feed they consume," explained McLawhorn. When it's hot, they don't eat and drink as much. They want to stand in the shade or go down in the woods where it's cool.

"If they don't eat and drink water then they don't produce milk," he concluded.

Beef cattle also experience a decrease in weight gain due to loss of appetite, but this decrease is negligible according to Farmville beef producer Jerry Flanagan. "When it's hot the animals lose their appetite and don't eat as much — this is what causes the slight decrease in weight gain," he noted. "We just make sure they have plenty of water." Flanagan's cows cope by spending a good part of their day in the farm pond.

To help his animals deal with the heat, McLawhorn has erected some shelters in the fields made from thin fiberglass material. "They're taking advantage of it on these 100-degree days," he said.

Other means of helping livestock cope with heat, according to Regans, is providing them with adequate water supplies — 35 to 40 gallons per cow per day for milking dairy cattle, 8-12 gallons per cow per day for beef cattle, 1-2 gallons per hog per day — and running foggers or sprinklers periodically.

"For hogs, one automatic waterer per 25 market hogs is recommended," said Regans. "Other precautions include breeding only during the coolest parts of the day, breeding females twice and not overworking boars." Maximum services for a young boar (7-12 months) is two per day, eight per week. The maximum for a mature boar is three per day, 12 per week.

"Dairy farmers can help by making sure water supplies for their animals are adequate — keeping farm ponds filled, troughs tipped off," said the farm agent. "Foggers can also help dairy cattle keep cool."

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Ideal day to start building on a new foundation that could increase your income. Be more willing to accept change. VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study the promises you have made and be sure to carry through conscientiously. Come to a fine accord with loved one. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good time to improve your surroundings. Don't permit an opponent to take unfair advantage of you. Be happy. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take care of matters you were unable to do earlier in the week. A good time to catch up on your reading. Be more optimistic. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A day to engage in recreations you really enjoy. Showing more affection for loved one is wise at this time. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If the situation is tense at home, don't make matters worse by using the wrong words. Count your blessings. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle communications in a most intelligent way and remain cool at all times today. Obtain important data you need. PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study new ways of advancing in your line of endeavor. Look to a successful person for new ideas. Relax at home tonight. IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be full of ideas, but should be taught to differentiate between the good and the bad. Your progeny requires a good academic training in order to become successful. Religion is a must in this chart. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Cents Off Makes Sense Imagine buying $247 worth of groceries for $67! One shopper did just that, and many others attest to saving thousands of dollars yearly by clipping and refunding coupons. Today about 75 percent of all American households clip coupons, each of which gives shoppers an average of 18.5 cents off a purchase. This year shoppers are expected to redeem about 4 percent of the record 100 billion coupons circulated. If the nearly $20 billion worth of coupons were redeemed, many manufacturers would go broke. Coupon fraud has also become big business. The FBI is investigating illegal coupon redemptions totaling about $250 million annually.
