WILL GIVE HER ALL... Mrs. Erma S. Carr School Board after Mayor Don McGlohon pledged to do her best for the Greenville City swears her in during Monday night's meeting.

City School Board Inducts Member

By SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City School board inducted a new member Monday night in the first information meeting of the year, effective June 1. Mrs. Erma S. Carr pledged to give "everything of myself as a member of the board," while being sworn in by Mayor Don McGlohon. She is filling Nancy M. Jenkins' unexpired term for a period of one year.

Another new face was present at the board meeting, Dr. Delma C. Blinson, superintendent for Greenville City Schools sat in on his first meeting of the year.

Results of the N.C. Annual Testing were given by Director of Instruction Charles Ross. "I think it's something we can be proud of," said board chairman Dr. Jon Tingelstad. Ross echoed this sentiment and added that parents should be excited that they now can know what their children need help in.

The tests were administered to students in first, second, third, sixth and ninth grades of the Greenville City School system. Results will be used to identify specific strengths and weaknesses of the students and to inform parents of their children's progress.

Test results showed Greenville first graders scoring higher than 52 percent of the nation's first graders in reading, and higher than 68 percent of the students in mathematics.

Interpreted in percentile terms, the average student in the second grade in the Greenville City School system scored higher than 72 percent of the second grade students in the nation in reading, and higher than 78 percent in mathematics.

The average Greenville third grader scored higher than 62 percent of the third grade students in the nation in reading, higher than 63 percent in mathematics, higher than 68 percent in language, higher than 70 percent in spelling and 66 percent higher than students in the nation on the total test.

In comparison to sixth-grade students in the nation, Greenville City School students scored higher than 67 percent in reading, higher than 68 percent in mathematics, higher than 75 percent in language, higher than 77 percent in spelling and higher than 72 percent in the nation on the total test.

Ninth graders performed equally as well. Students scored higher than 58 percent in reading, higher than 57 percent in mathematics, higher than 62 percent in language, higher than 64 percent in spelling and higher than 59 percent in the nation on the total test.

Four alternatives for school lunch fees were discussed by the board. Director of Buildings and Grounds Bob Stewart spoke in behalf of Linda Tingle, supervisor of Child Nutrition Services, who was attending a convention in Atlanta.

Choices included leaving the prices as set last year which would result in an $82,000 loss for the year.

Option two called for increasing prices and breaking categories into four areas as opposed to the K-6, 7-12 and reduced prices stipulated in last year's plan. This alternative allows for an increase of 10 cents in K-3 fees bringing the total to 70 cents; an increase of 15 cents bringing 4-6 grade fees to 75 cents; an increase of 15 cents for 7-12 graders bringing their fees to 90 cents; and having reduced lunch participants pay 40 cents, an increase of 30 cents. All breakfast fees would be increased 10 cents. This program would result in a $39,675 loss for the year.

Another alternative increasing K-3 lunches 15 cents, 4-6 graders 20 cents, 7-12 graders 20 cents, reduced lunches up 30 cents, and breakfast fees increased 10 cents would result in a $28,300 loss for the year.

Option 4 includes a 20 cent increase in K-3 lunches, 35 cents for 4-6, 25 cents for 7-12, reduced lunches up 35 cents and a 10 cent increase in breakfast. Stewart said if option four was selected there would be no losses for the year.

The board is awaiting more information from Ms. Tingle before making a decision.

Crop Outlook

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State flue-cured tobacco production is expected to be down 6 percent from last year, according to the N.C. Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The decrease in production is attributed to fewer acres for harvest and lower expected yields per acre.

The crop is currently forecast at 699 million pounds, 6 percent less than the 1980 crop. About 348,000 acres will be harvested this season, also 6 percent less than last year. An average yield of 2,009 pounds per acre is predicted by the service.

The season's first corn forecast is 32 percent higher than in 1980, due to increased acreage and higher yields.

Wheat production is forecast at a record 14.2 million bushels, 35 percent higher than last year's production.

Power Peaks Curbed

By MARY SCHULKEN

Despite hot weather and heavy demand, Greenville Utilities kept power peaks to a minimum throughout the 90 degree plus period since last Friday.

"On Friday we hit our all-time high," said acting director Malcolm Green. "We had a peak demand of 136.4 megawatts, extremely unusual for a Friday."

Since then, explained Green, Greenville Utilities has shaved peaks with the load management system. "Monday we had a peak of 135.2 megawatts but we cut it by perhaps six megawatts," he noted.

Green said utilities experienced no load problems relating to capacity although he called electrical consumption "as heavy as I've ever seen it — not only at peak times but off-peak times too."

"Loads are extremely high with nights as hot as they are," he added.

The acting director said he felt the city had "not come close" to the peak for the year. "In August, when bulk barns are going, ECU's back in session and industry gets (Please turn to Page 8)

Crucial Congress Is Convened In Poland

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist Party leader Stanislaw Kania opened a crucial party congress today with a call for a battle against growing anarchy and counterrevolution in Poland.

"We must roll back all these threats," Kania said to the 1,964 delegates who are meeting under the watchful eye of Poland's Soviet bloc allies. "Millions of Poles expect that the congress will help improve the situation. Our allies hope that we can overcome the crisis by our own means and we shall meet these expectations."

But he said Polish Communists would "stand firmly on the ground of the Gdansk accords," which led to the formation of the East bloc's first independent labor union, Solidarity, and to sweeping political and social reforms.

"We must restore the principles of socialism in the life of the country," said Kania, who survived a hard-line challenge to his position a month ago. "It is not socialism that has failed, it is the violation of its principles that is responsible."

In their first actions, the delegates chose a 203-member congress management group and a 64-member congress secretariat and picked Politburo member Kazimierz Barcikowski, a moderate Kania ally, to preside over the sessions, the Polish news agency PAP reported.

Some observers had predicted that the delegates would decide to open the congress by re-electing Kania in a show of support for the moderate leader. But party officials said today a procedural session was unable to resolve a dispute over how to elect the party leader, so it was broken off for the formal opening and Kania's speech. The officials said the procedural session would resume later.

Before the congress ends it is expected to adopt the political reforms the party has been forced to put in place since the wave of strikes last August that launched the independent union Solidarity. But it is no longer thought likely that the delegates would press forward with more radical changes that would alarm the Soviets.

Kania, once expected to be swept out of office by the reformists, is now seen keeping his job, perhaps in an early vote by the congress.

The Soviet Union has sent four second-string officials to the meeting, suggesting that the Kremlin is taking a cautious stance toward the outcome.

A commentary on Warsaw Radio warned Poles against believing that the meeting would solve all the nation's problems.

"We expect much from the congress, but on the other hand we cannot expect too much," the commentary said. "It will take time to make order in our economy so we cannot expect that everything will change just after the congress ends."

Decorations in Warsaw were subdued by standards of Soviet bloc party congresses, which usually are staged as grand ceremonial affairs. A huge signboard outside the Palace of Culture read, "We must defend socialism like the independence of Poland."

On the eve of the congress, transit workers in Kutno staged strikes protesting short food supplies and dockworkers pledged work stoppages Wednesday if the government does not meet their demands for improved pay and working conditions.

The economic plan unveiled Monday by the Polish government could boost food prices 220 percent and the cost of living by 55 percent this year. Food price hikes caused bloody riots in 1970 and 1976, and increases in the price of meat sparked last summer's nationwide strikes.

The government also said Poland's share of Soviet-bloc trade agreements for the next three years should be renegotiated and warned it would take six to seven years to start cutting the country's staggering $26 billion debt to the West.

"Only the uniting of all social forces can interrupt the current path towards catastrophe in the shape of total collapse of the economy," the 55-page report said.

The report called for "increased efforts and a number of sacrifices," and said, "There is no other way to get out of the crisis."

The government plan, entitled "Government Program for Overcoming the Crisis," said the country's consumer economy was so crippled "there is no possibility of achieving normalization of the situation just by getting more supplies onto the market."

Club May Bid On Property

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Redevelopment Commissioners voted Monday night to qualify the Batchelor Benedict Club, a black civic organization, as a bidder on a Garland Street tract located behind the club facility.

The club, if successful in bidding on the parcel of just under 5,000 square feet, indicated plans to use the property for expansion of present parking facilities, according to Joe Laney, commission executive director.

Laney said the tract has only 41 feet of frontage on Garland Street and, as a sub-standard lot, would be hard to market for residential use. The club earlier purchased from the commission a lot at the corner of Garland and Wyatt Streets for parking.

The commission will advertise the 1603 Garland Street property for bids.

In other business, commissioners voted to grant an easement, subject to City Council approval, to Lily Richardson on property adjacent to the Jones-Lee house parcel on Evans Street, bought by Ms. Richardson for use as an office.

Laney explained that the narrow strip of property on the Eighth Street side of the house is not wide enough to allow anything other than one-way drive through parking and Ms. Richardson has requested an easement from the commission in order to continue parking lot traffic on out to Eighth Street. He added that the easement would involve 20 feet off of a 200-foot lot.

Ms. Richardson is having the Jones-Lee house renovated for use as an office for her real estate business.

Laney, reporting in the absence of Faye Brewington, Southside project manager and staff real estate officer, said that one acquisition took place in the Southside area during June, involving the Garland Street tract that the Batchelor Benedict Club now hopes to purchase.

One demolition, at 1001 Melody Lane in West Meadowbrook, was completed, he said, and three parcels were sold to Hoke Contracting Co. in West Meadowbrook. Options were obtained on single tracts in Southside and in the South Evans area. Laney reported.

Commissioners voted to delay until the August meeting the election of a vice chairman to succeed Gene Taylor, who has moved to Charlotte.

France Festive On Bastille Day

PARIS (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of patriotic French pay homage today to a national landmark that no longer exists, dancing in the streets to celebrate the 192nd anniversary of the fall of the notorious prison known as the Bastille.

Accordion music filters through the air and vin rouge ordinaire flows as merry-makers toast their way toward "wooden mouths," the French term for a hangover.

Village courtyards and city squares were filled Monday night for the traditional Bastille Eve drinking and street dancing festivities.

Complete with military parades and fireworks displays, the July 14th holiday is the equivalent of America's Fourth of July. But the Bastille Day flavor is decidedly French.

This year's celebration falls two months after the victory of Socialist President Francois Mitterrand, who is trying to make Bastille Day a more decentralized holiday.

Mitterrand's political plans include a sweeping reorganization of France's strong federalistic system that would return vast powers to local governments. In keeping with the president's wishes, Bastille Day 1981 tries to stress that all French roads don't lead to Paris.

For the first time, major military parades were scheduled Monday in seven cities scattered around France in an effort to bring the armed forces closer to the people.

The largest military review will still follow tradition, with an estimated 6,800 soldiers marching today in Paris, the site of the infamous Bastille prison whose capture in 1789 marked the start of the French revolution.

The parade down the broad, tree-lined Champs Elysee Avenue leading away from the Arc de Triomphe also includes 280 cavaliers and 280 military ground vehicles, with jets and helicopters flying overhead.

White-gloved French policemen direct the crowds and answer the most foolish question posed by tourists on July 14: "Which way to the Bastille?"

The prison was leveled shortly after its capture by a Parisian mob who stormed it in hope of seizing ammunition. Ironically, there were only seven inmates inside but the destruction of the Bastille came to symbolize the end of despotism in France.

The Bastille took its name from the old French word "bastir," which means to build. It originally was used as a city fortress in the 1300s.

With the reign of Louis XIII, the Bastille (pronounced ba-stee) became recognized as a regular place of confinement. Inmates were detained without trial, often to satisfy personal animosities.

Foster Children Can See What Home Life Can Be

By SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writer

"Offering these children a chance to see what home life can really be like is what Foster Care is all about," said DSS social worker supervisor and one-time social worker Peggy Chandler.

This new home life can be filled with traumas as upsetting to the children as their previous situation, indicated Ms. Chandler. "Feelings of loss, guilt, anger and depression are not uncommon," she said. These difficulties have to be worked out before social workers and foster parents begin trying to undo all the negative experiences that happened to the children. "We get a child and then have to completely reshape them," said Ms. Chandler.

She continued "Oh yes, they do have emotional problems. Often they blame themselves for their families' problems."

The social worker's job is to help the children deal with these feelings and to coordinate visits between the children and natural family. Supervising discipline problems is also part of the social worker's job. But, Ms. Chandler cautioned that no one problem or child can be categorized since each is "an individual case."

One common crisis for the children is the difficult transition from their natural home to the foster home. They feel depressed, suffer a sense of loss, and experience anxiety and anger. Many times the children cannot recognize the origin or object of these feelings. "They just don't feel good about themselves," said Ms. Chandler.

As a result, social workers, the agency, and foster parents receive these negative feelings. Through use of community services such as the mental health center, social workers can help the children come to terms with the obstacles blocking their emotional growth.

In instances when foster parents cannot deal with the children, social workers help set up disciplinary procedures. For example, a hypothetical case involves a foster child who repeatedly runs away, not respecting the foster parents' wishes or responding to punishment. A workable solution to the problem is developed between foster parents, child and social worker.

"A lot of the types of problems we see depend on the ages of the children and the background they come from," said Ms. Chandler. Usually, older children encounter the greatest difficulties.

This is why foster parents "have to be able to provide unconditional love," said Ms. Chandler echoing Ms. Starkey's sentiments.

"We want these children to have as normal a life style as possible and an atmosphere where discipline is constant," said Ms. Chandler. She emphasized that foster children are like all other children and once in the foster home are treated as part of the family. They go to school and church, participate in social activities, fight with their siblings, have hobbies and help do the dishes and laundry.

Social workers see to the health needs of foster children and intervene when needed in school affairs. Taking care of day to day needs, and driving the child on a visit to the dentist or doctor are all part of the social worker's job.

Visitation between foster children and their natural parents is allowed, even encouraged, but visits vary depending on situations. Meetings are arranged by social workers and may range from just a few hours to a couple of days. Emotional upheavals often accompany these visits so the social worker again is involved with helping the children understand these feelings and helping foster parents to cope as well.

During the time the children are in foster homes, additional social workers are helping the natural family solve their problems in hopes the family can be reunited. Varying types of services are utilized by the department to aid the natural parents and their children including financial assistance (Aid to Dependent Families with Dependent Children), the Work Incentive Program (WIN), mental health services, vocational rehabilitation, the services of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, the health department and some private community resources when needed. Churches, Real Crisis Center and the Salvation Army are also asked to give assistance. "We just use every available resource to get these families together," said Ms. Chandler.

"Of course," Ms. Chandler said, "some children adapt more easily than others, but the majority get along very well in their temporary homes."

Aerial Spraying Of Med Fly Is Begun

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A low-flying helicopter sprayed pesticide over a residential area of the Santa Clara Valley early today before a pump failure halted the controversial assault against backyard infestations of the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Most area residents stayed at home during the spraying of malathion, despite urgings by some local officials that they leave to protect their health. But a few dozen people, unconvinced by federal assurances that the spraying was safe, slept on cots in Red Cross shelters outside the spraying area. Others fled to hotels and two dozen gathered beneath to path of the helicopter to protest the spraying.

The lone helicopter took off from a secret location exactly at 1 a.m., and made six passes over the infested area before the pump failed less than an hour later, said Gene Cone of the state's Medfly Project.

Hans Van Nes, deputy director of the state Department of Food and Agriculture, said about 100 gallons of the pesticide malathion was sprayed over less than half of the 17 square miles of residential Palo Alto, Los Altos and Mountain View targeted for the first application.

"We had a successful mission. We are pleased the guidance system worked," Van Nes said. "Aerial application at night has never been done before. We did a lot of testing, and we did it with a lot of anxiety."

Van Nes said spraying would resume Wednesday morning.

The state Supreme Court cleared the way Monday for the spraying, over the objections of Santa Clara County and three of its cities. Earlier in the day, Superior Court Judge Bruce Allen turned down a request for an injunction banning the spraying.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. reversed himself and ordered the spraying after the U.S. Department of Agriculture said it would order a quarantine on California produce unless the aerial spraying were undertaken. Agriculture Secretary John Block said the spraying posed no health threat.

Brown spent the night at the Los Altos home of Jim and Delphine Winstead in the spray area.

"I'll be in the spray area,"

Brown said, "but I won't open my mouth, and I won't look up."

A group of about two dozen young men and women gathered at an intersection beneath the path of the helicopter to protest the spraying.

Standing around a signal-light used to guide the helicopter, the people in the group pulled scarfs and jackets around their faces to avoid breathing the pesticide.

"I'm scared to death," said Paul Nicholas of Los Altos Hills. "And there's going to be more times like this."

Four Red Cross shelters outside the spraying area had attracted only about 85 people by late Monday night. One shelter, at the California School for the Deaf at Fremont, was closed because no one showed up.

"I didn't like the idea of malathion being dumped on me," Lauren Melton, 18, of Palo Alto said at a Milpitas high-school gymnasium, where volunteers had arranged green cots in rows.

Hotel owners outside the spraying area reported a crush of bookings, and the Red Cross set up 1,000 beds in schools.

Despite the low turnout Monday, Red Cross spokeswoman Mary Terrell said the shelters would be kept open Tuesday night.

The San Jose Mercury and the San Francisco Chronicle announced that morning newspaper deliveries would be delayed until after spraying ended.

Wedding Is Less Likely For Garwood

ADAMS, Ind. (AP) — Wedding plans apparently are off between convicted Marine collaborator Robert Garwood and his girlfriend, who testified on his behalf during his trial on charges of molesting a 7-year-old North Carolina girl.

"I can't confirm it (that the couple has separated) until I see him next week. But it's the drift I'm getting," his father, Jack Garwood, said Monday night in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "He's not talking much about it right now."

During the trial in May, Donna Long, 37, a widow, testified Garwood was riding his motorcycle to Charlottesville, Va., to visit a psychiatrist at the time he was accused of molesting the child.

After his acquittal May 16, Garwood said he intended to return to a Virginia hospital for psychiatric treatment. He said he and Mrs. Long would announce a wedding date later.

Asked if there is another woman in Garwood's life, his father said, "There appears to be if you read between the lines." But he added that his hunch could be "wrong as rain."

The elder Garwood said the 35-year-old Marine private, who was convicted earlier this year of collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam, is expected home for a couple days next week.

"We plan to do some fishing," he said, adding that he expects his son to return for another brief vacation in September.

Garwood, 62, a retired printer, said he'll be glad to see his son return home. He called the accusations of child molestation "trumped up charges," which his family and friends "didn't take too seriously."

In a separate trial earlier this year, Garwood was charged with desertion and collaboration with the enemy while serving as a Marine in Vietnam.

Downeaster Wins Fight To Fly Huge U.S. Banner

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Hill Greene has won a perilous fight to fly his 20-by-30 foot star-spangled banner over his service station — thanks to a few salvos of public opinion.

The Boone Town Council had ruled on June 17 that Greene must remove his huge flag within 10 days or face a fine and a 30-day jail sentence.

But Greene said he would rather go to jail than pull down his flag.

On June 25, City Manager Marvin Hoffman told a local radio station that the city would not press its case, in light of "a large expression of sentiment both locally and nationally in favor of the flag."

The town council proposed Thursday that an ordinance against flying the 20-by-30-foot flag be dropped, a proposal that was extended on July 9 to include all sorts of oversized banners.

Under the latest proposal, U.S., state, county and city flags of any size could be flown anywhere in town. The proposal now goes to the city planning board, with a final vote by the council scheduled for early August.

Greene was pleased with the decision, and with the reaction of the public after the case aroused national interest last month.

"It happened because the people of Boone were 100 percent behind me," Greene said Monday. "They were ready to petition and throw the officials out of office."

He added, "I had three lawyers from out of town come visit me here at the station," Greene said. "They wanted to take the case for free."

But Greene remains staunchly protective of his right to fly the flag, and less than gracious about the proposed change in the law.

"It should have been that way all the time," he said.

The sweet potato types now are being tested to see if the economics of obtaining alcohol from them are favorable.

Create An Illusion With Fashions

CHICAGO (UPI) — If dieting isn't your thing and you get breathless about halfway through a romp around the block, fashion designer Bonnie August has an alternative: create an illusion with clothing.

Just getting rid of your blue jeans and wearing a pair of pants with a vertical pattern helps, she says.

That's among 642 ways Ms. August describes and illustrates in "The Complete Bonnie August Dressing System" (Rawson, Wade $12.95).

"I wrote the book for everyone," Ms. August said in an interview. "People who are terribly overweight, slightly overweight or not overweight — people who have big bones and, even if they diet down, they won't look like the model on TV."

"Everybody can look much better in a bathing suit by using a few rules," said Ms. August, director of women's designs for Danskin Inc., a New York City manufacturer.

"One is to be sure the suit doesn't have too much elastic to cut into your body and call attention to trouble spots.

The other is to make sure your bottom is covered up."

For women who are self-conscious about their weight problem, she suggests wearing a cover-up with the bathing suit — a matching skirt or shorts tied around the lower part of the body.

"If you can avoid uncovering a problem area, you're a step ahead."

The biggest eyesore is underfashions, she said.

"First of all, people don't look at themselves in a full-length mirror from top to bottom and from all sides. If they did, they would notice white pants where you can see the pantyline crossing over their rear end."

"You shouldn't have a horizontal line across the rear end if you have a problem there."

Panties that cling cause bulges that draw attention to extra weight, she said.

She recommends flesh-colored underwear under white outer clothing because it doesn't show through.

She encourages women to critically evaluate their bodies.

"Don't concentrate on what you consider to be a bad point. You have to evaluate your entire body to see it clearly. Once you draw attention away from the small details and look at your full body, you're on your way."

"If you have always harbored a hope or a hunch that, just as a cookbook could help you cook better, a dressing book could help you look better in the clothes you wear, you're right."

Her "recipes" combine the principles of proportion Ms. August learned in art school with some tricks she picked up from co-workers and clients in the fashion business.

She said ballerina Rebecca Wright of the American Ballet Theater showed her tricks dancers use to elongate their leg lines. Ms. August said she incorporated these into her fashion designs and her Dressing System.

Women who believe they have a weight problem are in good company, she added.

"I've found people no matter how fat, beautiful or famous — even dancers — they all think something is wrong with their body."

She said many famous people, including Elke Sommer and Nancy Reagan, use the Dressing System to appear thinner.

"She really knows how to play up her best points," she said of Ms. Sommer. "She's in wonderful shape. I wrote about her because people could learn a lesson from the way she carries herself. As far as I'm concerned, she doesn't have a problem."

"We really think (famous people) have no faults, but there are many working full time to get their wardrobe together. It just shows that everyone can improve the way the dress and look better."

Son's Wife Ruins His Mother's Day

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor told me that this past Mother's Day she didn't get a card or even a telephone call from her married son. She felt so hurt and neglected she cried all day. She said two days later her son called and told her that the reason he ignored her was because she had not given him anything for Mother's Day. (The son and daughter-in-law have a baby boy who's nearly a year old.) The son told her he really wanted to call and wish her a happy Mother's Day, but his wife wouldn't let him!

Abby, I've always been under the impression that mothers were remembered by their children on Mother's Day. May I have your opinion on this? And what do you think of a son like my neighbor's?

NAMELESS AND NO TOWN

DEAR NAMELESS: Mother's Day is the day when mothers are honored by their children. Your neighbor's son should be ashamed of himself. No reason could justify his unkind behavior, but the reason he gave (that his wife wouldn't let him) is sad. Let's hope he grows up soon, or his son will be a man before he is.

...

DEAR ABBY: What is a 25-year-old woman to do when people come to her door and ask, "Is your mother home?" This has happened to me so many times lately I want to scream.

I am a high school teacher, and at the beginning of the school year, a fellow teacher (whom I had not met yet) stopped me in the hall and asked if I had a "pass" to be out of class.

Abby, I try hard to dress and look my age, but no matter what I do, I still come off looking like a 17-year-old kid. Suggestions?

PATTY IN TACOMA

DEAR PATTY: Yes. Relax and enjoy it! Most women complain because no sooner do their pimples clear up than they start getting wrinkles.

DEAR ABBY: This question has been on my mind for years. How can you discourage people who seem unable to talk to you without grabbing, touching or patting you? I find this very irritating.

H. IN BLUFFTON, OHIO

DEAR BLUFFTON: Most people who grab, touch and pat do so unconsciously. If your unresponsive reaction and drawing away don't communicate your irritation, try the more direct route — the verbal one.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

On my wedding day as I promised to love, honor and cherish, I looked at my partner and tried to imagine what was the worst thing that could happen to us.

Now, after 32 years, my major fear has become a reality.

We are beginning to look alike.

Oh, I haven't gotten to the beard and he hasn't gotten to the rounded hips, but we're getting there. I notice we have the same firm jaw when the red light goes on in the car in downtown traffic. Our eyes droop in unison when one of the kids announces they might have to store their stuff with us for a couple of months. We both chew the inside of our mouths when our accountant calls. We both roll our eyes to the ceiling when a speaker says, "There are 14 major points I'd like to share with you."

Without even planning, we have somehow blended. His hair got longer; mine got shorter. His hands softened; mine hardened. He grew a stomach; I grew upper arms. His chest grew with exercise; mine receded with dieting. My chins came from chocolate; his came from sleeping in a chair, but they're the same chins. We even share the varicose veins experience at the back of the knees.

Other things are positively spooky about us. You know how some couples finish sentences for one another? We don't even start them.

The other morning, we were both reading the paper when I asked, "Are you going again this year?"

He said, "What's the point?"

I said, "You'd think Reagan would issue a statement on..."

He said, "Finish the story. You need anything while I'm out?"

I said, "Why do you go to the same store all the time? You know they never have..."

He said, "They did last week and you didn't want any."

I said, "Do you think we're beginning to..."

He said, "Not a chance."

I said, "Then how come you..."

He said, "Coincidence."

City Budget Sound

Greenville's City Council has approved its 1981-82 budget of $12,408,677 with a tax rate of 49 cents per $100 valuation.

Last year's rate was 77 cents but the two figures are not comparable because of the re-valuation which was done during the year. The comparable rate, taking into consideration the new values on property, would be 44 cents. Thus the tax rate was increased by 13.95 percent over the previous year.

It could have been worse. The City Council had been in a frantic search for additional funds and made more than one effort to get the Utilities Commission to turn over an additional $300,000. The commission turned down the request. There had also been a projection of a 52.7 cents tax rate to meet minimum needs of the city government.

Somehow, ways were found to squeeze funds out of the budget and the 49 cents tax rate is the result.

There will be an overall reduction in personnel in city government for the coming year. Due to shifting of positions, however, four policemen and three more fire-rescue positions were added.

In the capital improvements area, the city will be limited this year to replacement of vehicles, or work done with community development funds or Powell Bill (street) funds.

The Council also approved the Greenville Utilities budget of $49,435,800, a large part of which goes for purchase of electricity, and the combined budgets total of $61,844,477.

City employee raises will be delayed until September and the increases will average 7½ percent.

Even though there is some increase in the tax rate, the city's financial problems indicate that it was necessary and inflation accounts for much of the increase.

It is interesting that when revenue sources run out public officials can find ways to cut expenditures and still furnish services. The City Council has done this in its just concluded budget deliberations and we feel the city can operate soundly during the fiscal year.

Television Sin And Sex

WASHINGTON — The dictionary defines "crusade" as a remedial enterprise undertaken with zeal. People who act with zeal perforce are zealots, and zealots are first cousins of fanatics, and all this is why the Rev. Donald Wildmon and his followers give me the blue willies.

The Rev. Mr. Wildmon, as you may have read, is engagprospect that if they don't like a particular program, nobody else should be able to see it either. That is zealotry in action, and it is an ugly business.

The Mississippi reverend says his crusade is supported by five million families in all 50 states. Maybe yes, maybe no. That leaves roughly 54 million other families unaccounted for. Ninety-eight percent of all these families have television sets, and there is this interesting characteristic about those TV sets. Every one of them has a little switch that is lettered in this fashion: "On" and "Off."

Nothing in this world — no law, no regulation, no economic pressure, nothing at all — compels the reverend and his friends to watch "Dallas" or the "Dukes" or "Flamingo Road." His 4,000 observers and the members of his five million families are freeborn American citizens. It is a reasonable presumption that every one of them is capable of manipulating the little switch. All they have to do in order to avoid offense is to turn the switch to "Off."

Commercial television, let us remember, is just that — a commercial enterprise. The folks at Procter & Gamble are not sponsoring particular programs out of altruistic motives. They are not concerned with promoting art, but with selling soap.

JAS. J. KILPATRICK

ed in a crusade against sex and sin on television. He rounded up 4,000 like-minded volunteers across the country, and for three months these observers solemnly annotated every shot, every kiss, every damn or hell and every jiggle on the tube. When they were done, the reverend ran the results through a computer. Then he put some heavy pressure on the sponsors of the programs deemed most objectionable.

The Procter & Gamble people, who spend almost $500 million a year on TV advertising, quickly got the point. Said board chairman Owen Butler to the networks: "I can assure you that we are listening very carefully to what they say." Mr. Butler thought the reverend's National Federation for Decency was expressing "some very important and broadly held views about gratuitous sex, violence and profanity."

For a while there was talk of a boycott against the products of the offending sponsors, but that talk has subsided. The writers and producers of such bums as "The Dukes of Hazzard" have stopped muttering about censorship and artistic freedom. For the time being the controversy has blown over, but my blue willies remain. Two of the best rules for happy human relations are "Live and let live," and "Mind your own darned business." Why don't we observe them?

These issues ought to be decided in the marketplace. That is one of the things a free society is all about. Implicit in the intolerance of the Wildmon crusaders is the

Noble Effort Is Concluded

Official abolishing of the Sunset Commission by the General Assembly wiped out a noble effort.

It began in 1977 with a law requiring more than 100 state licensing boards and agencies go out of existence unless continued by the Legislature. The Sunset Commission was to review the operations of those bodies and recommend whether they should be allowed to die or should be continued.

Everyone agreed it was a grand move to save money and reduce some of the harrowing complexities of life.

It didn't turn out that way.

Political pressures from the targeted groups effectively prevented any real accomplishments other than the amassing of evidence supporting the claim that many agencies and boards were more costly than their worth to society.

It just doesn't pay to work against the entrenched hangers-on.

Red Tape Jungle

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It isn't just private citizens who feel the increasing weight of governmental bureaucracy and red tape.

Local government officials can give you a litany of state and federal rules, regulations, forms, and oversights which not only add to the daily cost of operating a city or county government, but stifle creativity and initiative.

Gov. Jim Hunt has quietly launched what could develop into a major reform movement in North Carolina by encouraging both city and county governments across the state to catalog the problems and suggest solutions. That process is currently underway and the governor has pledged to take administrative action to solve the problems where that is possible and to help with legislative solutions where that is called for.

The matter is highly technical and not at all exciting to the average taxpayer, dominated as it is by review and auditing of reams of dull paperwork filled with governmental gobbledygook.

Savings

But citizens should get excited over the millions of dollars, thousands of man-hours both locally and at the state level, and the long delays which the process often forces upon local projects such as water and sewer works extensions, school or firehouse construction, locating and building recreational facilities, and such.

For even as small and large private businessmen alike have railed against the burden of government oversight, local governments have suffered the same fate — only moreso.

A preliminary list of problem areas drawn up by a study committee of the North Carolina League of Municipalities runs 26 inches of extremely small type printed quite closely together.

Reaganites 'Wondering'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The upset Democratic victory in the July 7 special election immediately prompted a hush-hush White House inquiry to find out whether Ronald Reagan is in serious political difficulty with the voters.

The president's political aides do not accept the pat explanation from Mississippi that a big turnout of blacks and overconfidence by Republicans accounted for the unexpected loss. They see the Mississippi outcome all too closely following the pattern of two earlier special elections, in Maryland May 19 and Ohio June 25, both with bigger Democratic showings than expected.

"After three of these," one senior aide told us, "we have to wonder whether there is a reaction against the president." Specifically, there is worry that stratospheric interest rates are undermining Reagan's popularity. To begin the inquiry, a White House aide is being quietly dispatched to Mississippi to find out what happened there.

Democratic Discipline
Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill is being pressed by liberal Democratic House members to discipline not only Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas, but one of the most popular members of Congress: Rep. Gillespie V. (Sonny) Montgomery of Mississippi, a 14-year veteran of the House who is chairman of the House Veterans Committee.

Liberals realize that not every Democrat who collaborates with President Reagan can be disciplined, but that only one or two can be singled out for punishment. Because of his aggressive collaboration with Reagan, Gramm always has been tops on the hit list. But pairing Montgomery with him comes as a surprise. The reason: an object lesson to teach committee chairmen their obligations of party responsibility.

Since removal from committee assignment would be impractical before the next Congress convenes in January 1983, current discipline would take the form of expulsion from the House Democratic Caucus. The speaker and other party leaders so far have opposed discipline, but that may be changing. "I know Tip is giving it serious consideration," one liberal told us.

Unhappy About O'Connor
Conservative dismay over President Reagan's selection of Judge Sandra O'Connor extended to the White House staff, including one aide with senior staff status.

That O'Connor's selection came as a total and unpleasant surprise to White House conservatives showed the rising strength of James A. Baker III, the president's chief of staff. Baker conducted the selection process, keeping it secret from right-wing staffers who might have caused trouble.

Not even political aide Lyn Nofziger, who is supposed to give political clearance to top-level appointments, was given advance notice. Although Nofziger is a good soldier who says he is thoroughly happy about O'Connor, conservative lobbyists who know him well describe the veteran Reagan adviser as shaken.

Chinese Uranium Trouble
Casting a cloud over the present sunny state of U.S.-Chinese relations is a top-secret U.S. intelligence report that Peking is clandestinely supplying processed uranium of close to weapons-grade to at least two countries in Africa and Latin America.

That information is a tightly held secret that nobody in the administration will talk about. But it has been made known to the highest level of officials, who are deeply concerned. Their apprehension will be relayed to the Communist Chinese government, if indeed that step has not been taken already.

Export of Peking's nuclear technology long has been a major potential cause of nuclear proliferation. Such shipments have been considered distinctly possible, particularly to countries which in return could supply raw uranium needed by China.

Holding Down Foreign Aid
A bitter backstage battle in which the Treasury and the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) defeated the State Department means President Reagan will go to the Western summit in Ottawa July 20-21 refusing to pour more dollars into a Third World energy fund dispensed by the World Bank.

Assistant Secretary of State Myer Rashish, one of the Reagan administration's few Democrats, wanted the president to join Canada and France at Ottawa in promoting more World Bank aid for underdeveloped nations. But OMB Director David Stockman won approval for this position: If the World Bank establishes an energy fund, it will have to do so with existing U.S. contributions.

A footnote: U.S. officials do not expect much fireworks at Ottawa over high American interest rates. Although French and Italian officials are livid about the flight of their capital to the U.S., Reagan's officials expect support for their hard-money stance from Britain and West Germany.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, July 14, the 157th day of 1981. There are 170 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 14, 1789, the start of the French Revolution was signaled when the people of Paris stormed and captured the Bastille prison.

On this date:

In 1690, seven French privateers captured the New England islands of Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket and Block Island.

In 1798, congress passed the Sedition Act, making it a federal crime to publish false, scandalous or malicious writings against the U.S. government.

In 1966, Richard Speck killed eight student nurses in a Chicago apartment.

And in 1978, Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky was sentenced to 13 years in prison and labor camps on charges of treason, espionage and anti-Soviet agitation.

The Same Explanation Is Used

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When a large company acquires another it inevitably tells shareholders that the move was entirely in their best interests.

And when, as often happens, the acquired company is sold off a few years later, the same explanation is dusted off and used again.

Which is to say that almost never does management concede that it made a mistake, or that its motives were anything but what was best for the shareholders.

But errors often are made, and divorces often are quick. Why? Goals of acquired companies conflict with those of the parent. Assets are found to be less than was believed. Markets change, making a once profitable product a drag on the parent company's earnings.

Whatever the reason, some of those mergers — and there were close to 2,000 mergers of large public companies last year — weren't nearly as well thought out as management would like shareholders to believe.

Otherwise, why the big divorce rate? W.T. Grimm & Co., a Chicago-based broker recognized as an authority on merger-divestiture statistics, estimates that for every three marriages there was a divorce last year.

International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., a giant conglomerate that grew through acquisitions, divested itself of 8 companies in 1980. Itel, Esmark and RCA dropped seven units each. Kennecott, McGraw-Edison and Union Carbide each rid themselves of five operating companies.

Recent merger activity has centered around oil companies, which have two special characteristics these days: 1. They have the cash to buy up other companies; 2. that cash also makes them very attractive to buyers.

Seagram Co., which recently sought to become a factor in oil through acquiring Conoco, last year sold Texas Pacific Oil Co. to Sun Co. for $2.3 billion. Occidental Petroleum, already a factor in oil, became one in plastics by paying Firestone Tire & Rubber $200 million for its Firestone Plastic Co. And Standard Oil of California, well established in oil, decided it also liked phosphates and fertilizers and therefore paid Stouffer Chemical $130 million for such holdings in Utah.

And now Du Pont, which stock analysts thought was moving away from petroleum-based products, has jumped kneedeep into the petropool with an apparently successful bid for Conoco, ninth largest U.S. oil firm.

Will it be a successful move? Obviously Du Pont management thinks so. Clearly, only time will tell. It is fraught with all the hazards of any other marriage.

Grimm blames high capital costs, reflected by high interest rates, for the high number of divestitures.

Seeking to economize, it says, firms seem eager to rid themselves of operations that require large amounts of capital, that are slow to grow, and that show only marginal profits.

Strength For Today

BE OF GOOD CHEER

"In the world," Jesus told his disciples, "ye shall have tribulations." Jesus's saying applies to everyone who has ever lived. Rich or poor, healthy or sick, famous or unknown, everyone has some kind of trouble and sorrow during his years on earth.

We cannot escape tribulation, but we can control our attitude toward it. Sooner or later, or both, trouble is going to come upon us, and we must accept it. Resenting it will do no good; we might as well resent having been born.

We must make the best of our tribulations, not the worst of them. To make the worst of trouble is to let it destroy us — to give up and become unable to work or be useful. To make the best of it is to keep going, no matter how low we feel. Sorrow can be like hard exercise; we ache at the time, but we feel better afterward.

When Jesus told his disciples they would have tribulation, he added the glowing words, "But be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." — Elisha Douglass

Winterville Board Handles Varied Matters

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Board of Aldermen Monday night, approved 80 feet of 60 inch tile to be provided by the Swift Creek Commission for placement under Chapman Street.

Mayor Walter Dail explained the tile was necessary because Chapman Street was washing out in places. Dail also said water lines crossing the Charlotte Worthington project were in need of lowering, with labor and equipment furnished by the town.

In other business before the board, negotiations for the purchase of the North Winterville Cemetery by the city from Joe Tripp were discussed and the matter given to alderman E. C. Hines for further action.

Mayor Dail also reported sealed bids for three police cars will be opened at the town hall, July 25, at 12 noon.

In new business, a request before the Planning and Zoning Commission, for the placement of a mobile home on the Winterville Rest Home property which was denied, was presented to the town board. Town Clerk Elwood Nobles said the need for the mobile home was for the attendant of the home to live nearby. After some discussion, the board did not approve the placement of the mobile unit.

Dail read an agreement from Electricities to furnish mutual assistance in the form of manpower, equipment, and materials to other contracting member cities in the time of emergencies and disasters. The matter was given to alderman E. C. Hines and the town attorney for further study.

In executive session following the regular meeting, the board approved the hiring of a new policeman to replace Pat DeCuzzi, who accepted a position with the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.

Dail announced Edward Maehew Haddock, of 110 Sylvania St., will begin his duties July 15. Haddock is a 1971 graduate of J. H. Rose High School, married and has one son.

Plan Closing Shade Tobacco Warehouse

QUINCY, Fla. (AP) — The once-mighty shade-tobacco industry will be gone from North Florida's Gadsden County next month, say company officials who plan to close the last warehouse in a few weeks.

For decades, Gadsden County and a valley in Connecticut were the nation's major producers of shade tobacco. Shade tobacco, sometimes called cigar tobacco because it's used to wrap stogies, is grown under cheese cloth.

"We plan to keep the warehouse open till mid-August, then that's it," said Bob Ennis of Hav-A-Tampa Inc. on Monday. "All the other major cigar companies left Gadsden County years ago. We're the last to go."

At one time, Gadsden

County's shade tobacco production was among the largest industries in Florida's Panhandle, employing nearly 20,000 planters, field hands and warehouse workers.

But an overall decline in the cigar industry, foreign competition and production of cheaper, processed cigar wrappers, combined to drive shade tobacco out of North Florida.

"Most of the wrapper tobacco grown in North Florida was used for medium-priced cigars," Ennis said. "But the medium-priced market has switched to homogenized wrappers."

Meanwhile, other agribusinesses have moved into Gadsden County to fill the void left by the decline of shade tobacco. Investors have built a large-scale mushroom plant in nearby Sawdust that will employ some of the people who formerly handled cigar tobacco.

The work force at the county's last operating shade-tobacco warehouse is about 40 employees, who are sorting the remaining bales in storage here.

Tyson Is Named Commander

Louis H. (Hop) Tyson of Route 1, Greenville, has been selected as the new commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7032 of Greenville for 1981-82.

Commander Tyson is a retired country store merchant and a former justice of the peace and township constable. He is a disabled World War II Army veteran.

Larceny Arrest Is Reported

Jacqueline Tyson, 17, an employee of Hobo's Fried Chicken on Highway 11 north of Greenville, was arrested Sunday by Pitt County deputies and charged with larceny from her employer.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that $111 in cash allegedly taken from Hobo's was recovered in the 1:28 p.m. arrest.

Bond for Miss Tyson, who resides at 202 Rawl Road, was set at $500 pending a first appearance hearing in District Court here.

How's The Weather?

'Shock For God' Device Is Gone

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Members of the Immanuel Baptist Church had the most famous vacation Bible school in the country for a while, but parishioners are not thrilled with the publicity.

Members of the Grand Rapids church say they are getting tired of reporters' questions and the jeers of "There's the electric chair church" from passersby.

The members and their pastor hope now that the "famous little wood chair" is gone, the attention will fade. The church has been flooded with calls from across the country since The Associated Press transmitted photos and a story about its minister, who used a homemade "electric stool" to shock Bible school students.

The Rev. Dwight Wymer, who built the stool and equipped it with a six-volt battery, said the device was meant to prepare children to "hear the word of God."

"I never realized this would cause such a fuss," Wymer told his congregation Sunday night. "To read the papers, you would think that I'm not a very nice man. There are a number of people who have been repulsed by my illustration of a modern-day parable with this gimmick. I publicly ask any that I have offended to forgive me."

Last Friday, Wymer told Kent County Prosecutor David Sawyer he would stop using the device. Sawyer said a transformer coil on a device such as Wymer's boosted the electric shock far past the six volts provided by the battery.

"Because people may be turned away from God through the use of this device, I have discontinued its use," Wymer said. "The famous little wood chair has been eliminated from our plans."

Hot and hazy conditions were expected to be punctuated by scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms today as the high pressure system dominating the North Carolina weather gave way to a weak cold front.

The front was expected to move south from the Ohio valley, according to the National Weather Service, bringing showers late today and cooler temperatures for Wednesday.

Partly sunny skies and hot temperatures kept things sizzling Monday with Rocky Mount reporting a 100 degree reading. Cape Hatteras, the cool point in the east, hit 87 degrees.

Low pressure off the coast spawned scattered thunderstorms over southeastern North Carolina Monday afternoon, but little rainfall accumulated from the storms.

The recreational weather outlook called for continued hot and hazy conditions today with scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs were expected to range from the 80s to the upper 90s.

Forecasters predicted Wednesday would be slightly cooler, with the threat of afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs should be in the upper 70s in the northern mountains and 80s to mid 90s elsewhere, with lows in the 60s and 70s.

Nazi Infiltrator Expected To Take Stand In Asheville Today

By MARY ANNE RHYNE

Associated Press Writer

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —

A federal law enforcement agent was expected to testify today in U.S. District Court about how he infiltrated a group of Nazis now on trial for conspiring to set off explosives in Greensboro.

Government prosecutors say agent Michael H. Sweat of the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Bureau's Asheville office conducted the probe into the alleged Nazi conspiracy.

ATF affidavits say Sweat told defendant Frank Braswell that he was a mercenary with access to airplanes and the ability to smuggle people into South America. Sweat said Braswell and other Nazis planned "a week of terror" in Greensboro.

An all-white jury of seven men and six women was selected Monday in the trial. Proceedings resume today at 9 a.m.

Defense attorneys rejected eight of the potential jurors, including two blacks, after questioning them extensively about their impression of the Nazi party and the Klan. Prosecutors dismissed three prospective jurors, and Judge Woodrow W. Jones rejected three, saying they had read too much about the trial to be impartial. In all, 40 potential jurors were called in.

U.S. Attorney Harold Edwards questioned the prospective panel about their feelings for the Klan, Nazis and other conservative right-wing groups. He also asked them how they feel about law enforcement officials going undercover and disguising themselves to obtain information.

Defense attorneys repeatedly asked prospective jurors whether they had read about the case in the newspaper. They also asked the jurors if they knew any Jewish people or were familiar with Jewish organizations such as the B'nai B'rith or the Anti-Defamation League.

The jurors selected were: — Betty Teen Lawrence, 32, Asheville, a second-year law student at Duke University.

— Pearl Christen Patterson, Waynesville, a middle-aged widow who is a former registered nurse.

— Edna Gad Reed, Asheville, a retired textile worker.

— David Ronald Devlin, 35, of Clyde, a computer repairman.

— Betty Owenby James, Clyde, a young postal clerk.

— Fred Robert McElrath, 61, of Arden, a retired cabinet maker who is disabled.

— Christopher E. Sneed, 25, of Brevard, an employee at a travel agency.

— Ruth Corpening Jones, Brevard, a retired store clerk.

— William K. McCrary, 48, of Asheville, also a textile worker.

— Robert A. Vorel, of Asheville, a construction worker.

— Stanley Creed Robinson, of Leicester, a discount store employee.

— Olie Joe Skidmore, of Canton, a paper mill worker.

Authorities say the four Forsyth County men and the Mitchell County couple planned to set off explosives last year to retaliate for an anticipated guilty verdict in the murder trial of six Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis charged with the deaths of five Communists. The Klansmen and Nazis were acquitted and there were no explosions.

The Nazis who are on trial are Braswell, 48, and his wife, Patsy, 42, of Penland; Gorrell Pierce, 28, and his brother, Roger, 25, both of Walnut Cove; James C. Talbert, 30, of Winston-Salem and Raeford M. Caudle, 38, of Winston-Salem.

The six were indicted March 2 after ATF agents filed affidavits based on 1,700 telephone calls they had monitored. Tapes of the telephone calls made by the Nazis are expected to make up a large part of the government's case.

Loudspeakers have been placed in the courtroom and transcripts of more than 100 pages have been prepared for the jurors.

Also expected to testify today were Jill Arthurs, a State Bureau of Investigation agent who posed as Sweat's girlfriend, Tommy Chapman, another ATF agent, Ralph Johnson, area manager of Colonial Gas Pipeline in Greensboro and Harold Parker, who works at an explosives supply company in Spruce Pine.

According to indictments, Colonial Pipeline — a gasoline tank farm off Interstate 40 — a shopping center and a chemical fertilizer plant were targeted by the Nazis for destruction. The Nazis allegedly planned to use remote-control devices to set off 55-gallon containers of homemade napalm at the sites.

The Braswells, who are defending themselves after dismissing their court-appointed attorney, appeared undaunted Monday by repeated admonitions from Jones.

Declares No Close Hughes' Relatives

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge's ruling that Howard Hughes had no close relatives and left no will when he died five years ago has set the stage for hearings next month to determine who will get the billionaire's fortune.

Probate Judge Pat Gregory declared Monday Hughes had no surviving parents, brothers, sisters, widows or children and swiftly rejected four claims filed against the estate — including one by an elderly woman who disclosed alleged details of Hughes' sex life.

The four claims were the only ones left by people alleging to be Hughes' close relatives.

The judge also set a jury trial beginning Aug. 10 on claims by a group of 22 cousins and other distant relatives and more than 500 people alleging some family link.

In Monday's proceedings, Gregory threw out claims by two women who said they had married Hughes and two people who said they were Hughes' children.

Alma Cruise Hughes, 70, of Houston wept as she insisted Hughes married her in a hospital operating room in Dallas in 1973, three years before Hughes died.

Attorney Wayne Fisher, who represents two of the known relatives, said Alma Hughes' deposition said the tycoon was in Dallas' Baylor Hospital having a hair transplant and she was admitted for hemorrhoid surgery.

According to the deposition, "Mr. Hughes sat on the edge of her bed and flipped her lips with his fingers to get her to say yes," as a Christian minister read the marriage vows.

After they were married, she said, she and Hughes lived apart at his request because "Hughes was awfully rough in bed with his women." She also told Gregory she got pregnant by Hughes by artificial insemination and bore him a son in 1974.

The elderly woman also told Gregory that Hughes' autopsy was falsified because it failed to mention her allegation that he only had one foot.

Another woman, Alyce Hovsepian of Atlantic City, N.J., also claimed she married Hughes in 1946 and had proof Hughes never married his second wife, actress Jean Peters.

According to her deposition, Fisher said, Ms. Hovsepian claimed Hughes "wanted to make her a star and take the name of 'Jean Peters.'"

The other two claims thrown out were by Donald E. McDonald of Los Angeles, who said his real name was Richard Robard Hughes and said he was the magnate's adopted son; and Clare Benedict Hudenberg of Las Vegas, Nev., who said she was an illegitimate daughter of the eccentric recluse.

Could Avert Quarantine

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

The spraying of California fruit crops this morning may have averted a quarantine of that state's fruits and vegetables North Carolina — and possibly by other Southern states considering the action.

The way was cleared for the use of the pesticide malathion Monday night when the California Supreme Court refused to block aerial spraying in the Santa Clara Valley.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham told a Raleigh television station Monday night that the state would not begin its own quarantine if California commenced its airborne assault against the fruit fly at 2 a.m. PDT as originally planned.

In a telegram sent earlier in the day to U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block, Graham said delays in the spraying of the pesticide malathion were "unacceptable."

The quarantine would have gone into effect only if California did not spray its crops, or if federal officials failed to place a quarantine on the California crops.

Group Is Still Opposing Settlement Of UNC Case

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposed settlement of the University of North Carolina's federal desegregation dispute is a "triple end run" around the courts, civil rights laws and the Constitution, attorneys for a group opposing the agreement have charged in legal papers.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., Washington attorney for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, made the charge in a legal memorandum filed Monday in opposition to the proposed agreement between the university and the U.S. Department of Education.

U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. formally received the proposed consent decree in a brief court appearance Monday and said he hoped to issue a ruling this week.

In addition, Dupree received Rauh's memorandum and legal documents supporting the agreement from the university and the government.

Dupree said he had no court cases scheduled this week and would use the time to consider Rauh's friend-of-the-court memorandum and the other documents. Dupree said he had already read the proposed consent decree since being given a copy informally last week.

"I think the wise thing to do is to take the whole matter under consideration until I can digest all this material," Dupree said.

"I plan to take action on this matter this week," he added. "I'm going to give it immediate attention."

Rauh did not appear in court, but his document contends that the Dupree's court, in the eastern district of North Carolina, has no authority to approve the settlement. The approval sought by the university and the government, it said, "is both unauthorized and unwise."

"Such approval would amount to no less than judicial validation of a triple end run by (the Department of Education) and the state — around the federal courts of the District of Columbia, around Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and around the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution," it said.

In the document, Rauh said there is no statutory or constitutional authority for Dupree to approve the agreement, that administrative proceedings by the Department of Education against the university are incomplete, and that a decision by Dupree would be in conflict with the Legal Defense Fund's case in court in Washington.

The proposed settlement was reached in negotiations by lawyers for the university and the Department of Education. If approved by Dupree, the agreement would end the suit brought by the university against the federal government and an end to federal proceedings to cut off some $90 million in annual aid to the university system.

In court for the formal transmittal were UNC President William C. Friday and other university officials and board members. John R. Jordan, chairman of the UNC Board of Governors, said he had hoped Dupree would approve the agreement immediately but was not surprised by the delay.

"I'd say this is perfectly normal procedure in a case of this magnitude, to take the matter under advisement," he said.

The Legal Defense Fund, which filed suit against the federal government in 1970 to eliminate vestiges of segregation of higher education in North Carolina and other southern states, has challenged the agreement in federal court in Washington. Rauh said the Legal Defense Fund is continuing its challenge before the U.S.

Court of Appeals in Washington, despite the court's refusal to grant a temporary injunction.

The agreement supported by the university and the government requires the university to add 29 academic programs over five years at the five predominantly black UNC campuses.

It also sets desegregation goals for all 16 campuses. It preserves for the UNC system the right to decide what courses are taught at the campuses, a key point of contention in the long dispute.

TRUCK IS DAMAGED

A truck driven by Aurora Cano Guerrero of 120 Manhattan Ave. swerved off Chestnut Street, 100 feet east of the Manhattan Avenue intersection about 5:30 p.m. yesterday and collided with a tree and utility pole.

Police Department investigators, who estimated damage to the vehicle at $3,000, charged Ms. Guerrero with driving without a license.

afoot Monday by North Carolina congressional delegations to have the land on which the jetties would be anchored transferred from the Interior Department to the Corps of Engineers.

That would negate the need for Watt's approval and, barring lawsuits, would clear the way for the jetties.

Home Theft Investigated

Pitt County deputies are investigating a Sunday night break-in at a rural mobile home that resulted in the theft of personal property valued at nearly $1,300.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Mike Hatcher of Rt. 4, Greenville reported that his residence was entered Sunday and a color television set, 30.06 rifle with scope, .12 gauge shotgun, a skill saw and chain saw, valued collectively at $1,290, were taken.

Entrance to the mobile home was apparently gained after a glass in a rear door was broken out, the sheriff said. Damage to the facility was set at $20.

He said the incident was reported at 9:21 p.m. Sunday.

Plan Award For Fitness

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An annual award for the North Carolina business that does the most to promote fitness and health for its employees was announced Monday by Gov. Jim Hunt's office.

Known as the Governor's Award for Fitness and Health in Business and Industry, it will be jointly sponsored by the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness and Health and Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina.

"Businesses, industries and other organizations that have implemented employee fitness programs have found that they result in noticeable improvements in the overall health of their employees, lowered absenteeism and increased productivity," Hunt said. "In addition, health care authorities believe that such programs can help moderate the rising costs of health care."

Hunt said the award will not only recognize and commend organizations already promoting healthier lifestyles for their employees, but will also encourage additional employers to establish fitness and health programs for their employees.

Thomas A. Rose, president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, said his

Alternative To Jetties Sought

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Interior Secretary James G. Watt is looking into alternatives to Gov. Jim Hunt's request that the Army Corps of Engineers be permitted to build two jetties to stabilize Oregon Inlet.

In a letter to Hunt, Watt denied the request, which required his approval because it would impinge on the Cape Hatteras National Seashore. But he said department ecologists were undertaking new talks with the Corps of Engineers in an effort to discover a "reasonable and viable alternative" to the jetties.

A Hunt spokesman said the governor was "deeply disappointed" by Watt's action, which further delays channel improvements considered by state officials to be vital to the $7 million Wanchese Seafood Industrial Park.

The mile-long jetties were to have been part of an $83 million stabilization project known as the Manteo-Shallowbag Bay Project. But the $11.9 million jetties — organization is looking for nutrition seminars, jogging and walking trails, health education programs and "anything that encourages employee fitness on the job."

Pont stock on the NYSE was halted at their request shortly before 11:30 a.m. Both companies said they planned announcements, presumably regarding their recent agreement for Du Pont to acquire the oil company in a cash-and-stock deal valued at $6.9 billion.

Before halting trading, Conoco had gained 1% to 86%, and Du Pont was unchanged at 47 1/4.

Several big oil companies have indicated some interest in trying to unravel Du Pont's deal. Speculation on the outcome of such a bidding war has fueled interest in the oil sector while most other stocks have been lackluster.

Pan American World Airways, which announced a 10 percent reduction in flights shortly after the market opened, was unchanged at 4.

Big Board volume totaled 17.92 million shares, compared with 15.98 at the same point Monday.

The NYSE's composite index fell 29 to 74.99.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .39 at 363.89.

Ayden Bd. Amends Ordinance Code

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — Displays and goods were banned from nighttime sidewalks in an amendment to the code of general ordinances approved by the town board of commissioners Monday night.

The action, voted on in the board's regular monthly meeting, prevents merchants from leaving displays, including tables and crates, in the sidewalk right-of-way at night. It does not prohibit vending machines.

The action is an amendment to an ordinance passed two years ago allowing merchants to display wares on the sidewalk right-of-way. According to board members and police chief Tommy Burney, some merchants were leaving their tables and crates out all night, causing security problems.

The board also voted to participate in the balance growth policy, a program involving specific areas being designated for potential growth.

Ulster Seeing New Disorders

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Rioters set fires and attacked police and British troops with firebombs and bullets today as IRA sympathizers mourned the death of the sixth guerrilla hunger striker in two months.

Security forces came under a hail of stones, bricks, bottles and firebombs in Roman Catholic areas of Londonderry, Belfast and other towns. Snipers fired at troops and police, but no one was hit and security forces did not use live ammunition.

One policeman was wounded when gasoline bombs were thrown at officers trying to dismantle barricades in Portadown, 20 miles south of Belfast. Two stores in Belfast and a library in Londonderry were set on fire.

Officials said the rioting overnight and during the early hours today was widespread but less intense than violence after the deaths of the five other hunger strikers at Maze Prison.

The violence came after Irish Republican Army guerrilla Martin Hurson, 27, died before dawn Monday in his 45th day without food.

A coffin bearing Hurson's body and draped in the Irish tricolor was escorted Monday night to his home in Cappagh, County Tyrone, a hamlet outside Belfast. About 100 cars followed the cortege.

Hurson was lying in state in the front parlor of his family's house, where relatives, friends and supporters came to pay their respects. He will be buried Wednesday.

His death came hours before an estimated 100,000 Protestants marched through Belfast and 17 other Northern Ireland communities in the 21st anniversary celebration of the Protestant victory over Catholic forces in the Battle of Boyne in 1690.

The hunger strikers are demanding a series of prison reforms amounting to political prisoner status.

"The bad thing about this," said the acting director, "is that VEPCO is depending heavily on oil resources and purchased power and that drives the fuel charge sky-high."

Temperatures on Sunday ranged from 93-73 degrees F. On Monday the high reached 94 degrees, while the low dipped to a mild 68 degrees. By 8 a.m. today the temperature was 80 degrees.

On Monday .15 inch of precipitation was recorded during a 2 p.m. storm. The Tar River has remained at 3.1 feet on the National Weather Service Gauge since Sunday.

ON DEAN'S LIST

BOONE — Three area students were named to the dean's list at Appalachian State University for the spring quarter.

Receiving academic honors were David Kent Holley, Greenville; William Thomas Whitehurst, Grifton; and Clarence Earl Hamilton, Simpson.

TRIP PLANNED

Seats are still available, and those wishing to go should call Soror Esther Porteur at 752-4867 and Arthur Best at 752-6031.

GRADUATE

NORTHFIELD, Mass. — Paul Alfred Ravaris, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. Lewis Ravaris of Greenville graduated from Northfield Mount Hermon School recently. He plans to attend the University of Vermont in the fall.

"We qualify for the community employment center designation," explained town manager Don Russell. "The qualifications include having at least five percent of the county population and being what's termed an 'urban cluster'."

Russell reported that Farmville is designated as a community employment center, and quoted the town as saying the classification "had been used."

"We do know the state uses these classifications for water and sewer grants," he added. The board voted to submit an application as a growth center.

In other business: — The board voted to remain with Blue Cross/Blue Shield for the town's medical insurance, despite the increases in premiums. Employees of the Housing Authority were added to the health insurance plan.

— Peggy Hill and Margie Hart were re-appointed to the planning board for three-year terms. Charles Tullock was appointed to a three-year term, replacing Marvin Baldree Jr.

— After a public hearing, a conditional use permit for a day-care center at 214 Juanita Ave. was granted to Mrs. Pat Carman.

— A contract $24,000 with Talbert, Cox & Associates for completion of the community development project was approved. This contract includes inspection of dwelling units, rehabilitation work, preparation of necessary reports, supervision of demolition, property acquisition, relocation and final close-out and receipt of certificate of completion from HUD.

— A $2,026 bid on a 1969 line truck belonging to the utilities' department was accepted.

— Town manager Don Russell reported that the lift station at Fairmont Village was completed and was "an excellent station and should provide as many years of service as the old one did."

More Rioting In 6 British Cities

LONDON (AP) — Rioting erupted overnight and early today in six English cities, including the army garrison town of Aldershot, in the 11th straight night of urban violence in Britain.

But the new disturbances were minor compared to previous nights, and no new incidents were reported in London.

Jim Jardine, chairman of the Police Federation, denied charges by black leaders that police harassment was a factor in the turmoil. He urged bobbies to take a harder stance against screaming mobs who heave bricks and firebombs at them.

"I don't give a damn for the bleeding hearts, the so-called liberals and Marxist agitators who can do nothing but complain about police brutality," Jardine said Monday in a speech to the Derbyshire branch of the union.

"Because we have been so sensitive about civil rights, hundreds of policemen have found themselves in the hospital (and) thousands of ordinary citizens have had their lives ruined," Jardine said.

Police said a small gang of about 25 youth smashed the windows of a supermarket and a post office Monday night in Aldershot, home of a British army base about 35 miles southwest of London. Nineteen people were arrested, including eight boys aged under 17.

"They didn't get very far and they were only a small group," a police spokesman said. "I think it was a copycat situation. They heard all about the others and decided to have a go."

Aldershot, like Dundee,

Scotland, where rioting broke out Sunday night, has virtually no non-white immigrant population. The most serious rioting so far has been in areas with high concentrations of black and Asian immigrants and their descendants.

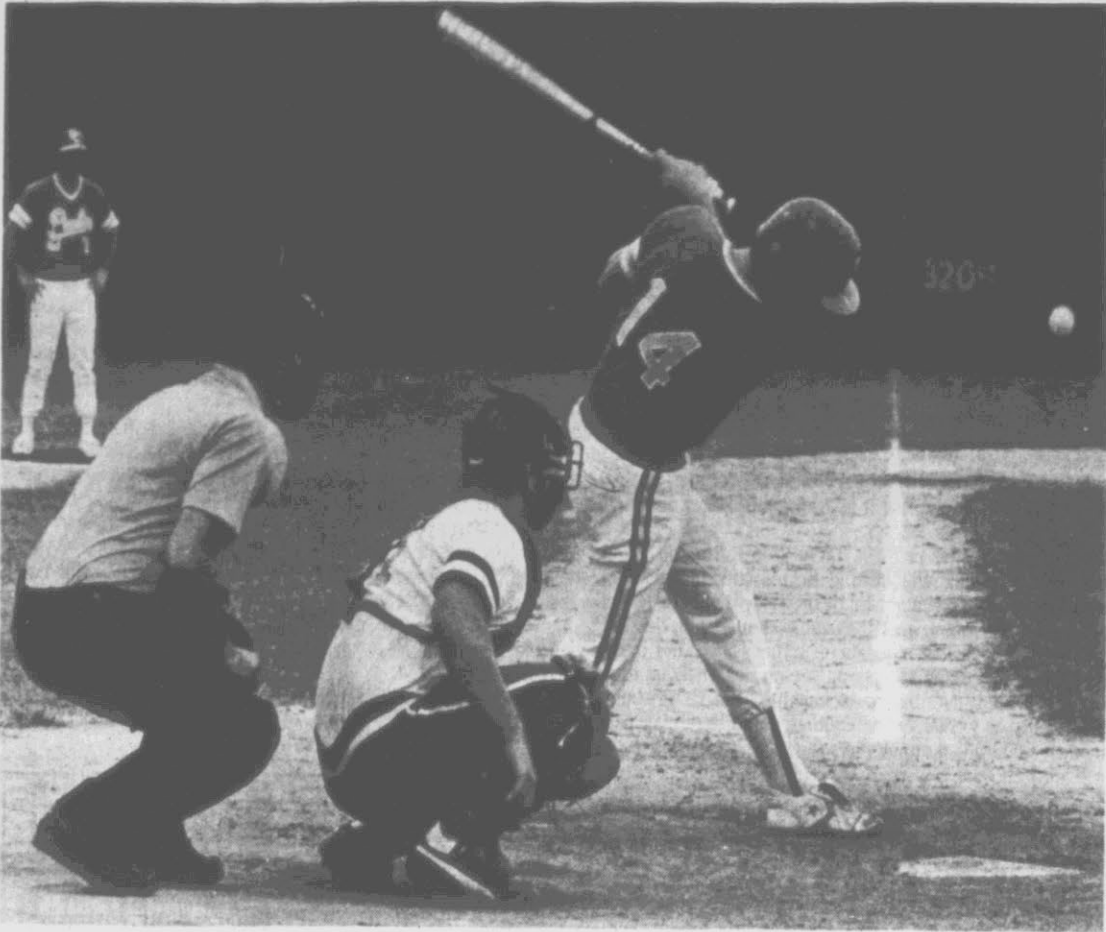

Worst hit in the latest flare-ups was Leicester in the English midlands, where hundreds of youths rampaged through the streets for the third night running, hurling bricks, bottles and stones at police.

East Carolina was having its troubles. Three innings into its game against N.C. State, not only did the Wolfpack lead, 4-1, having already chased ECU starter Rick Ramey, but ECU had yet to manage a hit.

It was not long, however, before the Wolfpack was having its own troubles, troubles that made ECU's feeble in comparison.

The cause of NCSU's troubles were three mainly: one, a five-run fourth inning sparked by Todd Hendley's two-run home run; two, a four-run sixth highlighted by Jay Carraway's three-run home run, and three, the final score — an 11-5 victory for the Pirates.

ECU is now 14-11, having won four of its last five games. After losing their first two games to NCSU, the Pirates have now won four of their last five against the Wolfpack. NCSU is now 11-12.

Last night's victory was all the sweeter for ECU coming as it did before an estimated crowd of over 500, all of whom were admitted free. Bob Barbour AMC/Jeep picked up the cost of the tickets.

It was by far the largest crowd to see a summer league game this season at Harrington Field. Until the fourth, it was a subdued crowd, having been given little to cheer about.

Three innings, 10 runs and nine hits later, however, the crowd was wide awake. Asked afterwards why it took the Pirates four innings to break loose, ECU coach Gary Overton had no answer.

"I don't know. It's hard to say," Overton replied. "We did have some opportunities, but we didn't take advantage of them. But we got some timely hits, some big hits and we did swing the bats well."

After the third inning, that is. As they went into the fourth, the Pirates were down by three and had yet to manage a hit. Carraway ended that when, with one out and Persico on first with a walk, he roped a single down the third baseline.

Mike Sorrell followed with a double into the left-centerfield gap to score Carraway and Persico. Hendley then ended the Pirate scoring for the inning when he hit a 1-2 pitch over the leftfield fence for his third home run of the season.

After ECU scored another run in the fifth on an error, the Pirates erupted for four runs in the sixth to finish off the Wolfpack. With one gone, Jack Curlings doubled to deep center and then scored on Persico's single.

After Smith walked, Carraway hit a 1-2 pitch that easily cleared the leftfield fence for his second home run of the season. This one was a three-run shot giving ECU an 11-4 lead.

NCSU scored its final run in the sixth. Otherwise, Parsons shut down the Wolfpack in his 4½ innings of relief. Parsons, now 1-3, struck out two and walked one.

Early on, the Pirates had their opportunities against NCSU's Bill Henderson. The left-hander walked the first two batters he faced but managed to escape the inning without giving up a run.

Henderson was not so lucky in the second. He walked the first batter he faced — Pete Persico — but when Charlie Smith grounded out and Jay Carraway lined out to second, Henderson appeared nearly out of trouble.

Nearly, but not quite. He walked Robert Wells and Wells immediately took off for second. Instead of throwing to second, NCSU catcher Jim Towman rifled the ball to third. The ball went into leftfield, allowing Persico to score and give ECU a 1-0 lead.

It was a lead short-lived, however. The Wolfpack pounded Ramey for four runs in the third to take the lead. Two walks brought out Overton but before the coach had time to make his way back to the dugout Towman doubled home two runs.

"Actually, I went out there to tell him how to pitch to the batter," Overton said. "You could tell he didn't have it early. He told me then he was losing it and losing it quick. We were just hoping he could get out of the inning."

Ramey, who threw 77 pitches in his 2½ innings of work, couldn't. Another walk and a single scored another run and Ramey's exit. Enter Kirk Parsons. NCSU's Moe Barbour greeted the right-hander with an RBI single and the Wolfpack led, 4-1.

For the moment, ECU was in trouble. But three innings and 10 runs later, it was the

Walk Forces In Winning Run In 11th

S. Hill Edges Rocky Mt.

SNOW HILL. — It took 11 innings, but Snow Hill managed to escape elimination in the Area I American Legion playoffs.

After losing a two-run lead in the ninth, Snow Hill rallied twice in the last three innings, once on a Jabo Fulghum home run and again in the 12th when Fulghum walked to force home the winning run as Snow Hill defeated Rocky Mount, 5-4, Monday night.

The win evens the best-of-three series at one game apiece and sends the series back to Rocky Mount tonight for the deciding game. The winner will meet Pitt County for the Area I title.

Rocky Mount trailed, 3-1, going into the ninth but managed to tie the game with two outs, one on and a two-strike count on Tim Hux. Hux singled to move Bill Wilkes to second. Barry Butler then tripled home both runners to tie the game at 3-3.

Richard Maude, RM's #9 hitter, put the visitors up, 4-3, with a solo home run in the 10th but Fulghum countered with a solo shot in the bottom of the inning to tie the game once more.

Then, after Rocky Mount failed to score in the top of the 11th, Snow Hill scored the winning run after three straight walks by Chubby Butler.

With one gone and Wade Corbett on second after a walk and sacrifice by Gary Reams, Butler walked Greg Hardison and David Shirley to load the bases. Butler, who has signed a grant to play for East Carolina, then walked Fulghum to force home Hardison with the winning run.

Rocky Mount jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first against Snow Hill starter Kevin Korpi. But Korpi settled down after that, recording 11 strike outs before being relieved in the 10th by Bobby Avery. Avery struck out three in his two innings of work.

Snow Hill, meanwhile, tied the game with a run in the second and then used single runs in the fifth and seventh to take a 3-1 lead.

Snow Hill was led by Hardison, Shirley, Korpi and Fulghum, all of whom had two hits.

Forsch: Owners Playing 'God'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Right-hander Bob Forsch of the St. Louis Cardinals says major league owners are trying to "play God" in rejecting a proposed settlement for baseball's 33-day-old strike.

"To tell the truth, I don't know how I feel," an angry Forsch said Monday. "The players have bent over backwards trying to end this thing. They (owners) are trying to play God."

Dane Iorg, a St. Louis outfielder, said full impact of fans' resentment over a protracted idle period by baseball, may not be felt until 1982.

"People may not be in a hurry to buy season tickets for next season if they don't resume soon," a frustrated Iorg said. "I can't believe that there's not a common ground. I'm beginning to lose interest in working out."

Since the strike's outset, Forsch and Iorg have been working out three times each week at Maryville College in west St. Louis County.

A teammate, Ken Oberkfell, took two weeks off to go fishing and has since joined a semipro team in neighboring Illinois. "The owners re stuck on the 16th player for compensation," Oberkfell said disdainfully Monday. "It's ridiculous."

Mike Bertani, the ticket manager of the Cards, said Monday the National League team has refunded 28,842 tickets since outset of the strike.

"Since the strike is more than a month old now, we know we can't play before July 23," Bertani said. "It's been busy here, but people haven't been flocking to us," he said, however.

The president of the Civic Center Redevelopment Corp., owner of Busch Stadium, said the quasi-public agency has lost more than $500,000 since the strike started June 12.

Glennon J. Walsh calculated the losses on the 13 home dates which had been canceled. He said an average baseball crowd of 24,000 would net the stadium's owners $40,000 a game.

"This could kill the game," the 31-year-old Iorg speculated of a dispute which came as he was hitting .304. "I hope I can play a few more years before they screw up the game completely."

Charge! 6 Down, Palmer Rallies To Win Playoff

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — When Arnold Palmer talks, mainly about getting from three down to even again.

Palmer shot an even-par 70 over the treacherous 6,798-yard South Course at Oakland Hills to win the U.S. Senior Open golf championship in a three-way playoff Monday. But he was nearly out of the running after the first few holes.

The 51-year-old Palmer bogeyed three of the first six holes and was six strokes behind unknown Bob Stone who birdied the 511-yard, par-5 second hole and holed a 170-yard 7-iron for an eagle 2 on No. 5.

"I talked to myself a little bit," Palmer admitted. "If it got too far away, I was aware I might not recover."

Stone, a club pro from Independence, Mo., made his first mistake when he three-putted for a bogey 5 at No. 7.

From that point on, Palmer, who put the word "charge" into golf's vocabulary, put on the pressure and never let up.

"I don't think about that old term 'charge!' so much,"

Palmer said. "I thought some reason," said Casper, who was due to face 150 youngsters at his golf camp in San Diego today. "I didn't have too many chances for birdies, so consequently I didn't make any birdies."

Palmer, who earned $26,000, headed immediately for the British Open.

"To have won this tournament makes me look forward more than ever to going to the British Open," Palmer said.

"After missing the cut (in the U.S. Open) at Merion I was about as down as I've been in some time."

"And then, all of a sudden, I worked on my game a little and got some encouragement out of it."

"Now, I'm really kind of anxious to go to England and see if it continues."

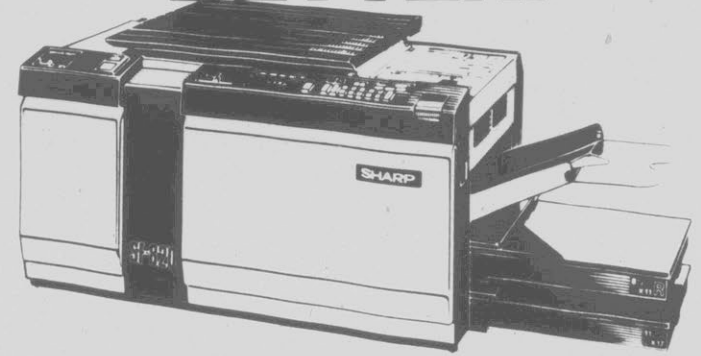

Billy Casper, the third man in the playoff after finishing 72 holes deadlocked with Palmer and Stone at 289, could not get anything going and finished at 7-over 77.

Casper and Stone each pocketed $9,586.

Plucknett Banned, Loses World Mark

LONDON (AP) — Ben Plucknett lost a lot more than a world record when the International Amateur Athletic Federation banned him for life from international competition after tests for anabolic steroids proved positive.

Plucknett, 27, had set the world record in the discus last May in California with a toss of 233 feet, 7 inches. He bettered his mark last week in Stockholm with a throw of 237-4. Now, neither will be recognized as the IAAF took disciplinary action, involving lifetime bans, Monday against Plucknett and female discus thrower Gael Mulhall of Australia.

John Holt, general manager of the IAAF, said the results were obtained from routine tests taken after the Pacific Conference Games in Christchurch, New Zealand, in January.

Plucknett, who was unavailable for comment after the announcement, had denied using anabolic steroids after bettering his record toss in Stockholm last Tuesday.

Anabolic steroids are synthetically produced male hormones that allow athletes to train harder, recover faster and become generally fitter. When used in conjunction with weightlifting, they produce muscle growth. They are prohibited in track and field, partly because of potential side effects include damage to reproductive organs and kidneys, hepatitis and, in up to 80 percent of those using steroids, abnormal liver function.

Plucknett, who at 6-foot-7, 305 pounds is known as "Gentle Ben", and Mulhall both won their events in Christchurch, but those victories and all subsequent achievements are now scratched from the record books.

Since both record-tossing performances were stripped from Plucknett, a former bouncer from Nebraska, who is now based in San Jose, Calif., the mark reverts to Wolfgang Schmidt of East Germany, who threw 233-5 on Aug. 9, 1978.

A statement issued by the IAAF in London said that samples taken from the two athletes in Christchurch revealed that "a measure of anabolic steroids were present."

It said the tests had been confirmed at a European laboratory in the presence of representatives from the two nations involved.

Although the bans imposed on Plucknett and Mulhall both are for life, the athletes' national associations can appeal the decision after 18 months. Several other athletes, including a number of discus throwers, have been suspended for using anabolic steroids.

Fans Hopeful, Keeping Tickets; Cleveland May Get 1982 Game

By The Associated Press

The folks who foot most of the bill for keeping major league ballplayers living well during the summer are holding onto millions of dollars in tickets, hoping they will soon hear the words "Play Ball," baseball clubs say.

A relatively small percentage of fans who bought advance tickets to games canceled by the strike have asked for refunds, according to most clubs. Instead, ticketholders are hoping the season will be restarted soon, so they can exchange tickets for future dates.

While the St. Louis Cardinals, for example, have made nearly 29,000 refunds, ticket manager Mike Bertani said Monday that most of his patrons are optimistic the strike, which began June 12, will end in time to resume the season.

"Basically, it seems like a majority of people are holding onto their tickets and hoping for a settlement so they can exchange their tickets for another game," he said. "It's been busy here, but people haven't been flocking to us."

Two clubs, the New York Mets and the Philadelphia Phillies, said they had redeemed only about 20 percent of their outstanding single-game advance tickets, while the Kansas City Royals placed their figure at closer to 10 percent.

"Advance, single-game tickets we treat like rain checks, but the majority of people are just waiting it out," Mets ticket manager Robert L. Mandt said. "I'd rather not go into the exact figures, but we've redeemed about 20 percent of our tickets outstanding, so there are quite a number still in the hands of the patrons."

Dean Vogelara, public relations director of the Royals, said: "Most of our fans have been very patient. We've never had a crush. The majority of our fans have said they want to wait until the strike is over."

New York Yankees publicist Dave Szen estimated the club had "a couple hundred-thousand tickets outstanding. People seem content to hang onto their tickets, ride it out and hope the season will start again, when they can exchange their tickets."

Most clubs will honor requests for refunds only after the date has passed, and many are asking season ticketholders to wait until the strike is over before exchanging tickets. "It would be a little silly to exchange for another game that may not be played," said Phillies director of sales Dave Montgomery.

CLEVELAND (AP) — With tonight's scheduled major league All-Star Game indefinitely postponed by the baseball players' strike and prospects seemingly bleak for holding it at a later date, baseball officials were discussing a 1982 game in Cleveland.

Next year's All-Star Game had been set for Montreal, with the National League Expos as host. Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Monday it is possible Cleveland could host the game next year.

A strike impasse forced Kuhn last Friday to postpone the game.

"It is our hope that we will play in Cleveland in 1981," Kuhn said in a statement. "By no means has that been ruled out. However, if we cannot play the All-Star Game this year, it is a possibility the game could be rescheduled there next year. We would have to work out a number of other factors first."

Chuck Adams, a spokesman in Kuhn's office, said July 30 would be a likely date to play a rescheduled game this year, but he said no decision has been made when the game will be played, or if it will be played at all in 1981.

Adams said no decision had been made on when Montreal would host a game if Cleveland gets to host it next year.

"Commissioner Kuhn definitely wants the All-Star Game played this year, and that's the way we are thinking now," said Expos president John J. McHale. "If that is not possible, however, I'm afraid the earliest we could think of having the game in Montreal would be 1984."

Bob Wirz, the commissioner's public information director, said consideration is being given to holding the 1983 classic in Comiskey Park, the home of the Chicago White Sox. That would mark the 50th anniversary of the first All-Star Game, which was played in Chicago.

Assurances that the game be played in Cleveland in 1982 might, to some extent, pacify businessmen in the city who had anticipated tourist and All-Star Game fan revenue.

Thousands of souvenir T-shirts, mugs and pennants are locked away, 50,000 programs are printed and 1,600 hotel rooms had been reserved.

Holders of some 77,000 tickets, assuring the largest crowd in the history of major league All-Star contests, were told to sit tight for the time being.

U.S. Golfers Scarce At '81 British Open

Americans Not Coming

SANDWICH, England (AP) — Tom Watson says they have tried to Americanize one of England's oldest golf courses for this week's British Open.

Yet a lot of Americans are not coming. The 110th Open, starting Thursday on the Royal St. George links here will have the lowest number of American entries in many years.

"This golf course is so lush you can't roll the ball," Watson said. "I'm disappointed. It makes this an altogether different golf course."

"I know they have had a lot of rain, but I know they also have a watering system. I hope they are not going to continue doing this to the British Open courses."

As Watson practiced over the 6,829-yard, par 70 course among sand dunes beside the English Channel, more Americans pulled out.

Gil Morgan was in a car crash, had a suspected broken collarbone and was anxiously watching over his 2-month-old daughter Molly, who was seriously injured.

Andy Bean and Tom Weiskopf also pulled out. Other American absentees will include Hale Irwin, Larry Nelson, Bob Gilder and Don Pooley.

Watson, who has won the British Open three times, said he would get less pleasure from playing because of the condition of the course.

"We come over here expecting to play a different kind of golf," he said. "We expect to hit the ball hard and bounce it on the greens."

"American golf is for America. The golf courses here in Britain should be firm."

Jack Nicklaus, also a three-time winner, went out on the course after Watson and apparently did not fully agree with him.

"They have had a lot of rain," Nicklaus said. "I don't really expect to see the golf course get really fast. But I don't see that it's like an American golf course. There are no trees, and I have never seen greens like these in the States."

The withdrawals left 16 Americans in the lineup, plus more who may win places in the current qualifying tournament.

Australia's David Graham, the U.S. Open champion, said: "This course contains a lot of blind shots, which some players will not like."

"It's exceptionally long, and the player who drives the ball well will be the player to win the title."

Graham skipped his practice round because the grass on the greens had not been cut.

"They are going to be quite different when the tournament starts," he said.

Taft-Carrow Win Monday Tourney

Jeff Taft and Johnny Carrow opened up a four-stroke lead after two rounds and continued to pull away in the third and final round to easily win the Monday Nite Bestball Putt Putt Tournament last night.

Taft and Carrow combined for a 77, 31 under par, to beat Robert Beacham and Eddie Wooten by six strokes. Danny Pollard and Junior Knox edged Eddie Robinson and Jeff Joyner in sudden death for third. Both teams had tied at 84 after regulation play.

Coy Triplett and Don Lewis shot an 88 for fifth place.

In 1971, Oklahoma rushed the ball for 711 yards in one game against Kansas State to set an NCAA record.

Memo Topic In Latest Day Of NFL Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A memo written by James Kensil, the president of the New York Jets, was a major subject of testimony in the latest session of the antitrust trial of a suit brought by the Oakland Raiders and Los Angeles Coliseum Commission against the National Football League.

Kensil was questioned Monday in U.S. District Court about the memo he wrote after an NFL meeting in October, 1978 in Chicago when the league by-laws were changed to make it easier for a team to move.

Kensil, who was NFL executive director before joining the Jets in 1977, denied the Raiders' claim that Al Davis, the club's managing general partner, exacted a concession from the rest of the league allowing the Raiders to move if Davis saw fit.

Prior to the meeting, all 28 NFL owners were required to approve a franchise move. The rule was changed to a three-quarters majority being necessary to approve a move.

To change the rule, a unanimous vote was needed. The rule was changed by a vote of 27-0 with Davis abstaining. Kensil's memo, which has been stressed by Raider attorneys, said: "The pass vote was by Oakland, which claimed it may wish to assert in the future that no votes at all are needed to move a team."

Under questioning by Raiders' attorney Joseph Alioto, Kensil insisted that he understood Davis did not reserve the right to move, but rather Davis was only "reserving his rights" to contest the NFL rule at some future meeting.

"It means he reserved his rights," said Kensil. "That's what I thought he meant. He would bring it up at some future meeting."

Kensil also testified that the Raiders should not be allowed to move out of Oakland even though the Los Angeles area can support two NFL teams. The Raiders and L.A. Coliseum Commission are suing the league over its refusal to allow the Raiders to move.

Coke In Tourney Finals

Coca-Cola scored four runs in the third and fifth innings and went on to defeat Aaction Movers, 11-5, Monday to advance to the finals of the Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament.

Coke will now meet the winner of the Aaction Movers-Home Builders tonight in the double elimination tournament. Home Builders defeated Wachovia, 10-0, yesterday.

Aaction Movers will play Home Builders at 5:30 today. The first game of the finals will be played at 8 p.m. today. A second game, if necessary, will be played Wednesday at 7 p.m.

In yesterday's victory over Aaction Movers, Coca-Cola led, 2-1, after the first inning only to see AM go up, 3-2, with a two runs in the second. One inning later, Coke took the lead for good with a four-run outburst.

With two gone, Eric Woodworth reached on an error and moved to second when Billy Michel singled. After a passed ball, Battle Emory walked to load the bases. Two more walks followed — to Ronnie Moore and David Hammond — to force home two runs.

Emory then scored on a passed ball and Moore came home on Mike Iaboni's single to give Coke a 6-3 lead. Jay Wyn's two-run home run in the fourth brought AM back to within one, at 6-5, but Coke scored four runs in the fifth and another in the sixth to seal the victory.

The run in the sixth inning came on a solo home run by Emory.

Michel had three hits for Coke, including a triple, while Iaboni and Woodworth had two each. AM was led by Billy Godley and Wynn, both of whom had two hits.

Home Builders . . . 10
Wachovia . . . . . 0

John Ravoris hurled a four-hitter and Home Builders scored five runs in the third inning to defeat Wachovia, 10-0, Monday in the Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament.

Home Builders will now play

Aaction Movers today for the right to face Coca-Cola in the tournament finals later tonight. The winner will play Coke at 8 p.m. in the opening game of the finals of the double elimination tournament. A second game, if needed, will be played tomorrow.

In yesterday's victory over Wachovia, Ravoris went the distance to record the win. He gave up three singles and a two-out triple to Tom Moore in the fifth while striking out one and walking two.

Home Builders got all the runs it needed in the first inning when James Smith singled, moved to second on a ground out and then stole third before scoring on an error.

Two innings later, Home Builders made sure of the win with a five-run surge. The inning was sparked by Ravoris' RBI single and a two-run error.

Home Builders added four more runs to its total in the fourth for its final tally.

No one for either team had more than one hit.

Game Erupts Into Brawl

METAIRIE, La. (AP) — Disciplinary action is expected today against the coach and members of an American Legion baseball team involved in a bench-emptying brawl which resulted in the hospitalization of an umpire, league officials said.

"Something definitely will be done, but we have to let the people involved know first," said Paul Foote, chairman of the Legion's Second District.

"There are certain steps that must be taken and the post commander has to be notified of the action," Foote said.

Clem Froeba, 46, a 12-year member of the New Orleans

Umpire's Association, was treated at a hospital after the Sunday afternoon fight, which broke out at the end of a game in which he was base umpire.

He said a cut over his eye required eight stitches. In addition, he said he was bruised, his glasses were broken and he lost his watch when several members of the team piled on him after the game.

Homeplate umpire Robert Bigler and at least two other umpires who watched the game from the stands pulled Froeba and the players apart.

A similar incident involving another team took place earlier this summer at Lake Charles, and both the team and coach were suspended for the season.

Froeba said the fight happened after he was confronted by a black player who was in a group of players on the bench who had been razzing him.

"I did tell him to shut his black mouth," Froeba said in an interview. "Maybe I was off base there, but we don't feel that was justification, regardless."

The player, Tony Williams, an outfielder and the only black member of his team, could not be reached for comment.

Froeba said the black player confronted him and asked him what he said. The umpire said he repeated it and the player spit on him. He said he grabbed the black player "and spun him around" to keep him from spitting again.

"It looked like a set-up job to me," Silva said. "The commissioner was at the game, and that's the only game of mine he's been to this year except for the one where I played his team. And there were five or six umpires there in plain clothes, and that's very unusual."

Hank Glover, president of the Umpires' Association, said his organization is not going to work any Metairie games even if a suspension is not forthcoming.

Welcome To The All-Star Break

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Welcome to the All-Star break, the annual pause in the long, hot summer.

It's a built-in baseball holiday, a chance for fans to catch their breath, sit back and consider the excitement of the first half of the season, then anticipate the thrilling pennant races that lie ahead.

To mark this milestone, 76,000 fans who had planned to be in Cleveland Stadium tonight will find other ways to spend another evening in baseball's silent season.

They will not see Pete Rose come hightailing it into home plate, crashing into the catcher to deliver the winning run, the way he did in Cincinnati in 1970. They will not see Reggie Jackson hit a huge home run that keeps rising in the night until it collides with an electric generator box, the way he did in Detroit in 1971. They will not see Steve Garvey beat a steady tattoo on American League pitchers to capture the All-Star MVP crown, the way he did in 1974 and 1978.

Sorry, folks. Come back next year. That is, of course, if baseball decides to have a next year.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, a study in timing throughout this sorry summer, announced the All-Star postponement on Friday. That seemed sensible since it would have been difficult to stage the gala without any players.

There is this strike, you see, and it is now in its second month. This summer's All-Stars are Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, Ray Grebey, director of management's Player Relations Committee, and Kenneth Moffett, the poor soul from the Federal Mediation Service trying to help them fashion some sort of settlement in this mess.

Do you want to know how close the two sides are to settling the strike after 32 days and 392 of the season's regularly scheduled 2,106 games have been wiped out?

Owners Said Working On Several New Ideas

By The Associated Press

The baseball owners' bargaining team, which rejected the most recent proposal put forward to end the 33-day-old players' strike, apparently is working on several new ideas to present in future bargaining sessions.

The owners' negotiators met Monday in advance of a meeting today of the board of directors of management's Player Relations Committee, which establishes the owners' negotiating policy. The bargaining team consists of chief negotiator Ray Grebey, American League President Lee McPhail, National League President Chub Feeney, NL lawyer Louis Hoynes and counsel Barry Rona.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said he spoke to representatives of both sides Monday but did not set a firm date for resuming negotiations, but hoped to bring them together Wednesday or Thursday.

Some owners, including New York Yankees chief George Steinbrenner, have said it's up to the owners to come up with a new settlement proposal because it was their side that rejected the previous one by Moffett last weekend.

"This week will tell" if there will be more baseball in 1981, said Steinbrenner, who added that he was optimistic the answer would be yes.

Tonight was to have been the night for baseball's 52nd All-Star Game in Cleveland. Speculation arose Monday over whether that city would play host to the game next season if the strike is settled too late to have the game this year.

"It is our hope that we will play in Cleveland in 1981," baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said. "By no means has that been ruled out. However, if we cannot play the All-Star Game this year, it is a possibility the game could be rescheduled there next year. We would have to work out a number of other factors first."

Montreal is slated to be the host city next year, and Chuck Adams, a spokesman in Kuhn's office, said no decision had been made on when Montreal would host the game if they play it in Cleveland next year.

Chicago wants the game in 1983 because that would mark the 50th anniversary of the first All-Star classic in Comiskey Park, the home of the Chicago White Sox.

"Commissioner Kuhn definitely wants the All-Star Game played this year, and that's the way we are thinking now," said Expos President John J. McHale. "If that is not possible, however, I'm afraid the earliest we could think of having the game in Montreal would be 1984."

Playing the game in Cleveland in 1982 might help pacify businessmen in the city who had anticipated tourist and fan revenue because of the game. Thousands of souvenir T-shirts, mugs and pennants are locked away, 50,000 programs are printed and 1,600 hotel rooms had been reserved.

Well, the last time they talked, some of the words being tossed around were "scurrilous," and "character assassination" and "futility" and "useless" and "lies."

And that was publicly. Can you imagine what's going on behind those closed doors on the 17th floor of New York's Doral Inn?

"SKY KING" LISTENS — Western film star Kirby Grant, known to television viewers as "Sky King" in the 1950s, watches the activity at the annual Western Film Fair at Charlotte, N.C. # Western Film Fair Lures Old Heroes

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — In the days of western film back in the 1940s and early 1950s, life was simple: The good guy wore a white hat and the bad guy wore black. Justice always triumphed, with the good guy getting the girl and riding off into the sunset and the bad guy getting his just rewards. At the Western Film Fair in Charlotte, those days live again. The stars of the horse operas are grayer and paunchier than the hard riding cowboys of 30 or 40 years ago but they're still heroes to their fans.

"Hey, Sky King, can I get your autograph?" a woman calls out to the tall man in the big white hat and western-cut suit. "My husband and I have been fans of yours for 30 years."

Sky King, or Kirby Grant as he is known in real life, is one of dozens of "B" western film stars attending the annual fair. Also on hand are such western standouts as Lash LaRue, Victory Jory, James Brown of the "Rin Tin Tin" television show and Fay McKenzie, who starred with the singing cowboy Gene Autrey in a dozen movies.

The film fair, a three-day event that attracts hundreds of western fans from as far away as Europe, is a combination flea market and movie-viewing party. The projection rooms run old black and white western movies about 12 hours a day — such films as "Texas Cyclone" with Tim McCoy and "Laramie Kid" with Tom Tyler.

In the dealer's room, western buffs can buy cowboy hats and boots, belt buckles, tee-shirts with their favorite star's picture on the front, books, records, old posters and reels and reels of western films.

The film fair is a good way for loyal fans to keep up with the stars and for the stars to get together with old friends and co-stars.

"Last year was the first time I had ever participated in one of these fairs and I enjoyed it so much I came back this year," said Grant, who lives in Florida and handles public relations for a Florida corporation.

Grant, was a concert violinist when he was 16, got into westerns when he tested for the role of the television show "Sky King" in 1952. "I had no idea when I got the role that it would be so big and would go on for so long but it was great," he said. "Sky King" ran on Saturday mornings from 1952 until 1956.

Many of the old-time film stars are still active in show business. Grant recently appeared on "Good Morning, America" along with two former members of the old "Sky King" show. Brown plays one of J.R.'s evil sidekicks on "Dallas," and western heavy Jory appears in the current release "Mountain Men" as a 110-year-old Indian.

Film fairs like the one in Charlotte are growing in popularity, according to fair producer Wayne Short, with several fairs scheduled all over the country this year. One reason for their appeal is the simple, family entertainment that the old westerns provided.

"Back then it was very simple — good guys wore white and bad guys wore black," Short said.

"There was nothing done in those films that the whole family couldn't see and enjoy. That's sure not the way it is now. People really want a return to those good old days."

Composer-Drama Coach Finally Finds Himself In The Spotlight

By FRED YAGER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — After years of teaching others how to find fame and fortune in the entertainment world, Albert Hague is finally finding himself in the celebrity spotlight.

Last summer, Hague, a Manhattan-based composer and drama coach, played a tough-talking but sympathetic music teacher in the movie "Fame."

The United Artists film took a realistic view at what teen-agers in a high school of performing arts go through in hopes of achieving stardom.

"The life of a celebrity is like an iceberg," said Hague. "Most of it remains underwater and just a little bit sticks out. You just hope the little bit that sticks out is the good part."

Hague is about to re-create his role in the television pilot of "Fame" for NBC. A network spokesman said the series probably will not be in the fall lineup, but will be scheduled later as a midseason replacement.

"It's startling," said Hague of his recent rise to fame at age 60. "I was just waiting for a cab on my way to this interview when people in cars said hello to me. That's never happened before. The visibility has been incredible."

"It's a good thing I played a nice guy," he added, "because some of my students who appear on soap operas often have to play unpleasant characters. Old ladies in subways hit them over the head, screaming, 'How could you do that to your husband?'"

For Hague, the movie and television series are departures from his career as a Broadway composer and teacher.

"One reason I was asked to do 'Fame,'" he said, "is because in real life, I teach a new concept called 'theater politics.' Like one of the themes in 'Fame,' the course deals with the ability to collaborate."

"Everything today is a team job," said Hague, "but in the entertainment field, you have instant teams. People are literally thrown together. You shake hands and come out writing."

Hague has built a reputation in the industry as someone to turn to for help in dealing with one of the most politically oriented areas of entertainment, the audition.

"A lot of performers in their eagerness to get a job," Hague explained, "overlook the fact that an audition has

Judge OKs Tarzan Film

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge cleared the way Monday for MGM to release its remake of "Tarzan, the Ape Man" by rejecting a copyright infringement claim lodged by the heirs of the character's creator, Edgar Rice Burroughs.

U.S. District Judge Henry F. Werker refused to enjoin Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc. from releasing the picture, which stars Bo Derek, on July 24.

Edgar Rice Burroughs Inc. of Tarzana, Calif., the licensing entity, had claimed that proper licensing rights had not been purchased. MGM, which made previous versions in 1931 and 1959, said it held the rights.

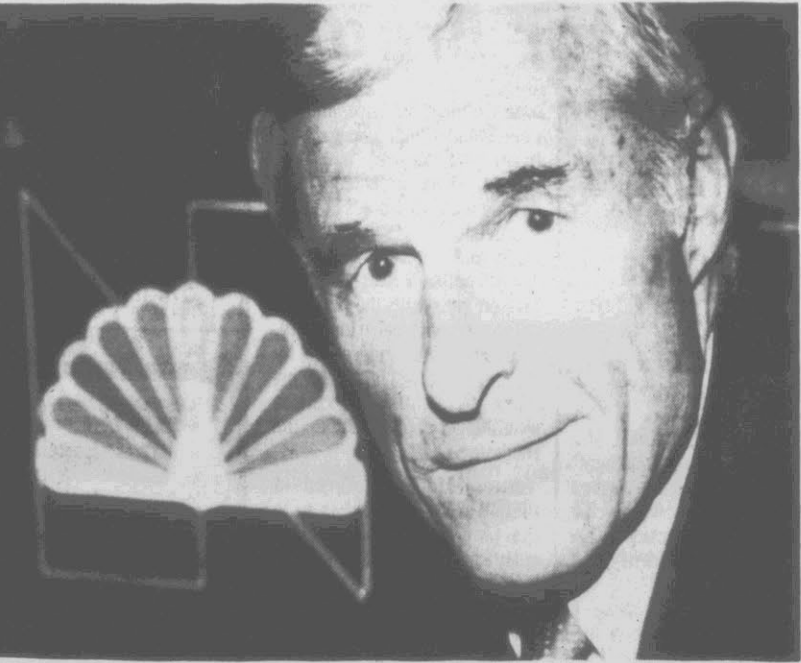

Before issuing his final ruling in the case, Werker unsuccessfully sought to have the court disputants settle their differences in order to avoid taking on the role of a censor.

During recent conferences with both parties, the judge viewed MGM's 1931, 1959 and new version of the "Tarzan" movie. Sources said MGM followed the judge's suggestions and made editing changes in the latest remake.

Symphony Ranks Reduced

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Symphony Director Max Abbott said Monday that seven administrative employees are being dismissed in an effort to cut $1 million out of the symphony budget.

Abbott said the jobs would be taken over by existing staff. He also said that all employees, including himself, would begin working 11 months instead of 12, thus saving more than $100,000.

NEW FACE AT N.B.C. — Grant Tinker, former head of MTM Enterprises and the new chairman of NBC, admits he has a lot to learn about his new job, but he wasn't ready to make any predictions about NBC changing its ratings as he assumed his new role. Talking with members of the press during an appearance at Chasen's Restaurant in Los Angeles, Tinker said he has no intentions of initiating sweeping changes at the network. (AP Laserphoto)

Writers' Strike Ends, TV Season To Be Late

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Even if screenwriters approve a contract tonight ending their 13-week strike, it appears TV audiences can expect a rerun of last year's season debut — beginning in October instead of September.

The 8,500-member Writers Guild of America was scheduled to vote on a proposal boosting basic salaries for hour TV shows from $9,872 to $15,135 after four years. Writers also would receive a coveted 2 percent of pay TV sales.

Ratification could set typewriters clacking Wednesday, but it's still doubtful new shows will debut before Oct. 1 — a two-week delay for CBS and NBC.

Most producers said returning shows had completed some episodes before the April 11 writers' walkout, but new scripts could not be ready for filming before August. Network officials said not enough shows would be ready in time for a "premiere week."

"Our hunch, from talking with producers, is that the Sept. 21 that we initially talked about is totally out of the question," said CBS Entertainment President Bud Grant. "Sept. 28 is marginally possible, but Oct. 5 is more likely."

"New one-hour shows may not get on the air until the end of October, the first of November," Grant said. "We look forward to the same type of situation as last year, just not quite as severe."

Last year's three-month actors' walkout kept some shows off the air until January. Grant said the writers' strike would keep some series on hold until enough episodes are ready for an uninterrupted run while production continues.

NBC spokesman Gene

Walsh said resolution of the major league baseball strike could stall the network's new season until mid-October.

"If the baseball strike continues, and there are no playoffs or World Series, we may be able to go before mid-October. But if the baseball strike ends and playoffs and World Series go on as scheduled, it is unlikely we would premiere until mid-October," he said.

Walsh explained NBC would be reluctant to interrupt its late-September premiere to televise the playoffs, then send its new schedule against ABC's World Series, a notorious ratings monster.

ABC's smaller number of half-hour taped shows left it at a disadvantage compared with the other networks. But a spokesman said ABC still planned to introduce "at least a portion" of its lineup by Sept. 28, as scheduled.

Among producers surveyed, Lorimar Productions had five episodes of "Dallas" — last year's top-rated show — finished before the strike.

Say Entertainer Condition Stable

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jerry Lee Lewis remained in extremely critical condition today, although doctors treating him for a ruptured stomach said the rock 'n' roll star's condition was stable.

A spokesman at Methodist Hospital South said Monday physicians were administering powerful antibiotics to Lewis in an effort to ward off a possibly fatal stomach infection.

Lewis, 45, was admitted to the hospital June 30 after complaining of stomach pains. He underwent emergency surgery to repair a stomach perforation.

He underwent surgery again last Friday after X-rays showed "a multitude of abscesses" on his stomach.

Doctors gave Lewis a 50-50 chance of survival after the second operation and said his condition was extremely critical.

Lewis, who is in the intensive care unit, is being allowed visitors.

Myra Brown Lewis, the entertainer's former wife, and entertainer Johnny Cash and his wife, June Carter Cash, were among the weekend visitors.

Mrs. Lewis and Lottie Jackson, Lewis' maid for 20 years, visited Monday.

FOCUS

Read All About It

Today Polish citizens will read about the opening of their nation's Communist Party Congress. Press coverage of those meetings will be broader than before Solidarity, the 10 million-member union, received official recognition last year. Since then, Solidarity has threatened strikes to gain press freedom. Poles now have access to detailed accounts of national problems. One paper has even criticized Poland's socialist economy. The official party paper is now so liberal that some communist governments forbid their citizens to read it. Millions of Poles hope the Congress will endorse additional reforms. But Soviet threats put further change in question.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the leader of Solidarity, the independent Polish labor union?

Bridge is a game for four. So it is only natural that, on occasion, you should enlist the enemy to help you bring home your contract.

North-South were using 15-17 point no trump opening bids. North trotted out the Stayman Convention on the offchance that South might have four hearts, and when that proved to be the case, he confidently leaped to the obvious game.

West led a low spade, and declarer played the jack—it was unlikely that West would be leading away from an ace into the no trump bidder's hand when he could not be sure that dummy would have more than one card in the suit led. East won the ace and shifted to a diamond. Since it was most improbable that East would lead a diamond from the queen, declarer placed West with that card. Therefore, he was faced with a diamond loser to go with the ace of spades, and the fate of the contract depended on whether declarer could limit his losers in clubs to one. That could be accomplished only via an end play.

Declarer drew trumps in three rounds, cashed the king of diamonds, then ruffed a spade in dummy. Then he led the jack of diamonds from the table, forcing West to win with the queen.

West was down to three clubs and a diamond. If he led a diamond, he would give declarer a ruff-and-slug; if he led the ace of clubs, he was giving up. So West returned a low club. Having gone right so far, declarer was not going to slip at the last hurdle. He played low from dummy and won in hand with the king. A club to the queen made sure that he lost only one club trick, and thus, the contract was made.
