Walesa Asks Union Avoid Provocation

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa called today for a labor truce while a special Communist Party congress works on solutions to Poland's social and economic problems.

...darity members' in requesting a temporary halt to union protests. He did not elaborate on the alleged provocations, and no strikes or protests were known to be in progress. Negotiations between the government and Baltic dock workers broke off at 2 a.m. but were to resume later today, Solidarity headquarters in the seaport of Gdansk said. The dockers had threatened to call a strike this week, then said the government had "responded" to demands for improvement in working and living conditions. The nearly 2,000 delegates returned to the congress hall today for meetings on party activity in "political, economic and social problems of the country." The official news agency PAP said the delegates would discuss international problems, party rules, economic policy, the mass media and party unity. On Wednesday, the congress fixed blame for the nation's woes by expelling former party chief Edward Gierk and six leaders of his administration from the Communist Party. The congress, which is expected to end Sunday, is to pick a new slate of party leaders later this week. The delegates broke with the standard practice of Soviet-style communism Wednesday by deciding to make the election by secret ballot. Party leaders in other East bloc nations are elected unopposed in open, unanimous (Please turn to Page 16)

Ex-Soldier Files Innocent Plea To Espionage Count

By MATT BOKOR
Associated Press Writer
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) - An ex-Army officer accused of selling military secrets to the Soviets pleaded innocent today to four counts of Espionage Act violations. Joseph George Helmich, 44, brought to his 10-minute arraignment shackled at the ankles and wrists, entered innocent pleas to one conspiracy count and three espionage charges through his court-appointed lawyer, Peter Dearing. Helmich is accused of selling secret codes and coding equipment in 1963 and 1964 while he was an Army warrant officer. The indictment charges that he was taught photography and secret writing by the Soviets and agreed to give them information in the event of "hostilities."

U.S. Magistrate Howard T. Snyder set trial for Sept. 14 before U.S. District Judge Susan Black and continued the $500,000 bond set on Wednesday. While Helmich was being held at an undisclosed location, current and former co-workers gave contrasting pictures of him. Some described Helmich as a "very, very nice gentleman," but others said he collected gruesome pictures of Vietnam and Korean war casualties and seemed to get pleasure out of displaying them. Helmich, who was arrested Wednesday at his Jacksonville home by the FBI, allegedly received $131,000 from the Soviets and was made an honorary colonel in the Soviet army, much like someone might receive an honorary degree from a university, according to the indictment and a statement by U.S. Attorney Gary Betz. The indictment alleged that the bulk of the activity occurred between January 1963 and July 1964. But as late as last year, the charges said, Helmich met Soviet officials to claim money held for him as "future payment for past activities and information." He also agreed to provide information to the Soviets "in the event of anticipated hostilities," the charges said. Federal authorities refused to say whether the reference was to U.S.-Soviet hostilities or when the alleged pact was made. "The damage by the delivery of this type of information (codes) could be very, very grave," Betz said at a court hearing. "It could have given them (Soviets) the ability to make their own devices and decode messages at a time when this country was involved in hostilities in Vietnam." At a bond hearing, Helmich said he made about $190 a week as a tile installer, and couldn't possibly make bond and asked for a court-appointed lawyer. Helmich said he, his wife and child came to Florida about six weeks ago from Niagara Falls, N.Y., "on a shoestring." Betz told Snyder that Helmich likely would try to flee and argued for a high bond because "our investigation has determined that there were funds put away for his use outside the United States and means and methods for him to leave the country."

Grasshopper Horde Eats Up Four-Acre Corn Crop

UNION RIDGE, N.C. (AP) - A grasshopper invasion has left a Union Ridge farmer virtually without a corn crop, though extension agents say the phenomenon is rare in the state. "I ain't seen nothing like it before," Virgil McKinney said as he walked through his rapidly vanishing field of corn. "These ears of corn that they leave ain't going to be no count because they'll die without the leaves. They've already ruined this and they're moving into my other fields now." Crop agent Earl Swan said the grasshopper problem is so unique in North Carolina that his pest control manual doesn't even mention grasshoppers. He said only McKinney has suffered from the infestation thus far. McKinney, 74, said he has crop insurance to cover some of the losses on his four-acre plot. But he won't be able to salvage any of the corn left on the stalks. He said the only way he knows to control the pests is to spray his fields by airplane. But he said with the little amount of corn remaining after the grasshopper attack it would be too expensive to undertake. The insects, sometimes 50 to a plant, surround the foliage like a fog when McKinney walks through the field. They ruined the equivalent of more than 50 bushels of the crop, stripping the stalks of leaves and corn silks.

Fruit Flies Are Spreading Out Of Control In Calif. Farm Belt

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer
LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) - Fruit flies spreading out of control threaten California's $14 billion farming industry with virtual shutdown and the federal government should take emergency steps to help fight them, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. says. Brown asked President Reagan on Wednesday to declare three San Francisco Bay counties a federal disaster area after fruit flies were discovered 10 miles outside a region designated for aerial spraying with the pesticide malathion. Five helicopters covered 20 square miles by dawn, spraying droplets of sticky pesticide-laced bait over a populated area north and west of San Jose. "The increased magnitude of the infestation constitutes a disaster which is now beyond the control of the services, personnel, equipment and facilities" of the state and the three counties, Brown said in a letter to Reagan released Wednesday. He asked for federal funds to help pay for the eradication program, which has already cost $23 million, and he asked for low-interest loans for residents from the Farmers Home Administration and the Small Business Administration. The White House said it had not received a copy of the letter, and Brown said he had no indication that help would be forthcoming. Officials confirmed on Wednesday that maggots of the fast-breeding pest had been found 10 miles north of the infestation area in San Mateo and to the east in Milpitas, as well. In the first two days of pre-dawn spraying of the pesticide malathion, only 7 1/2 square miles were covered in the heavily populated infestation area of more than 129 square miles. The first night, a pump on the lone helicopter broke down. The second night, one of two helicopters used for the spraying malfunctioned. Officials had hoped to spray 45 square miles in two days and the full area in a week. The thick consistency of the malathion bait has clogged the hydraulic pumps, explained Perry Coy, senior pest use specialist for the California Department of Food and Agriculture. Normally, pesticide of a thinner consistency is applied in a mist-like spray, he said. But the medfly bait is being dropped in larger droplets to minimize the chances someone might inhale the pesticide. The entire zone is targeted for at least six sprayings of malathion, a common garden pesticide which many experts have said is safe. The spraying, which began early Tuesday, aroused fierce opposition among local governments in Alameda, Santa Clara and San Mateo counties. They went to court to stop the spraying, but were rebuffed. Red Cross centers, set up to handle thousands, were open for residents fleeing the largely invisible bombardment, but attendance was less than 100 in each of the first two days. "California faces the threat of an economic disaster of unprecedented proportions by the virtual shutdown of the state's $14 billion agriculture industry by federal order," Brown said in his letter to Reagan. Brown, who initially refused to allow aerial spraying, has said he was forced to reverse himself by the Reagan administration's threat that all unfumigated California produce would be quarantined. California farm leaders and agriculture officials in other states demanded the aerial spraying program as medfly discoveries expanded so quickly in the South San Francisco Bay area that state officials compared them to an out-of-control forest fire. And as an added precaution, officials in North Carolina, Tennessee, Louisiana, Texas, Georgia, Florida and Alabama have announced they will examine California fruit to make sure it is medfly-free. None of the flies have been found in commercial orchards, according to agriculture officials, but farmers fear they could spread to the nearby San Joaquin Valley, the nation's vegetable and fruit center. Brown said the quarantine of three infested counties already has caused a loss of $4.2 million to 11,000 farms, ranches and businesses.

Russians Told Part Of Story

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda gave extensive coverage today to remarks by a Polish Communist Party congress delegate who accused anti-socialist forces of trying to bring the party there "to its knees." The newspaper ignored a speech criticizing Polish Communist Party conservatives for blocking reforms, and failed to mention the party's expulsion of former leader Edward Gierk. Quoted at length by Pravda, the Soviet Union's most authoritative newspaper, was G. Bednarski, a leader of the Bydgoszcz chapter of the Polish Communist Party. Pravda quoted him as saying: "In Poland, there are forces which ... strive to reduce the history of the party to an unending series of errors and distortions, dreaming of a party endlessly called to account for errors committed and non-committed, of a party brought to its knees." He also was reported to have called for a "sharpened political struggle" to defend Poland's socialist system and to have accused the independent trade union Solidarity of being of an "opposition and anti-socialist character." "The extremist point of view of the leaders of Solidarity oblige the party and its active members to wage a sharpened political struggle," Bednarski was quoted as saying. Soviet government-controlled newspapers and state-run television and radio, meanwhile, made only oblique references to the decision that all delegates to the congress will elect a party leader in a secret vote. A commentary by Alexander Kaverznev on Wednesday night's nationally televised evening news program "Vremya," said simply that the congress had considered "procedural questions." Soviet media also ignored the speech Wednesday by Polish Vice Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski, who accused Polish Communist Party conservatives of blocking needed reforms.

Eclipse

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Tonight's sky should be darker than usual for half the world as a rare lunar eclipse snuffs the moon from view. The partial eclipse of the moon will pass through Earth's shadow beginning at 11:25 p.m. (EDT) today. The shadow will take a progressively larger bite from the moon's sunlit face until, at 12:47 a.m., a bit over 55 percent will be darkened. By 2:09 a.m., the moon will drift out of the shadow and the show will be over. Barring clouds, anyone in the United States and "everyone on the dark side of the Earth will be able to see it," said Malcolm Cooper of Los Angeles' Griffith Observatory. However, the eclipse will not be visible to the half of the world that will be in daylight when it occurs. Lunar eclipses "are of no real scientific value anymore, but they're fun to look at," Cooper said.

Special Board Meeting

The Pitt County Board of Education will hold a special called meeting on Friday, July 17 at 1 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the county office building, 1717 W. Fifth St. (old hospital.) Discussion will center on the 1981-82 budget.

Department Has Approval

The Council for Standards in Human Service Education has granted Pitt Community College the maximum five-year approval status for its Human Service Technology Program. The council is made up of professionals in the field who set high standards used by visitation teams to evaluate human service programs throughout the United States. Margaret French, chairperson of the department, explained that this approval was a "significant accomplishment which shows PCC's Human Service Technology program is operating under the highest possible standards." The PCC report will be published in the forthcoming issue of the "Bulletin," a national publication of the council. The human services curriculum is designed to train and to prepare graduates to fulfill a wide range of consumer needs in a variety of human service settings, in order to enable people to live a more satisfying, more autonomous, and more productive life. A major emphasis is placed on experimental learning. Personal growth, attitudes, knowledge and skills are distinct components of the human service program.

Women Arrive In Dominated World Of Professional Politics

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
UPI Senior Editor
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The word "politician" may still evoke the cartoon stereotype of a jowly, cigar-smoking man barking into a telephone in a cluttered backroom office. But like many such images in a changing society, it has been overrun by reality.

"Politician" today also means Ann Lewis, Nancy Sinnott and Daryl Glenney, none of whom will be found puffing a cheap stogie or chewing out ward heelers. More likely, these women will be scanning the computer readout of an attitudinal survey, ordering up a hundred or so telephones for a voter blitz or advising a candidate for Congress how to clean up his act.

They are three of the best and the brightest among a growing number of women who have broken into the traditionally male-dominated field of professional politics.

They are not, of course, the first women in the small world of campaign management and political organization.

Women have been key figures in campaigns for some years. In 1972, Jean Westwood took over the gavel of the Democratic National Committee, the first woman to preside over a major U.S. political party. Two years later, the Republicans caught up, electing Mary Louise Smith chairman of the GOP National Committee, a post she held for three years.

Both of these women were fully qualified to head national political parties, moving up after many years of experience in both state and national campaigns and intraparty organizational work.

But because neither had made a living at politics, both probably were regarded more as hardworking, talented amateurs than as professionals.

NANCY SINNOTT

four years later ran a campaign office for Lyndon Johnson and worked for Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla. In 1966, she helped her husband, Gerald, launch his own political career in the Florida legislature. (They are now divorced; he is now Florida secretary of state.)

She went to Boston in 1968 and worked for Hubert Humphrey for president and Kevin White for mayor, later joining White's staff. In 1970, her brother, Barney Frank, ran for the Massachusetts legislature and she helped.

She also worked for Frank in his 1980 campaign for the House seat vacated by Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., although she was busy with Rep. Barbara Mikulski's Maryland re-election effort.

"How could I not?" she asked. "He's my younger brother. I remember when my mother brought him home from the hospital and said, 'The kid wants to be in Congress.'" Both Frank and Mikulski won.

In 1972, her presidential campaigns were for Edmund Muskie and George McGovern. In 1973, she helped Maynard Jackson become the first black mayor of Atlanta, and the next year ran Rep. Mikulski's unsuccessful campaign against Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md.

In 1976, she was in the Birch Bayh presidential effort and in 1980, worked for Sen. Edward Kennedy. In 1981, when Charles Manatt took over the national committee, he selected her as political director.

Nancy Sinnott grew up in the Chicago suburbs but got into politics in Massachusetts, where she attended college. Before her senior year, she was involved in the 1970 Republican gubernatorial campaign and, with time out to return to Wheaton College to graduate in 1972, became a top staff member for Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight.

After Watergate brought GOP hard times, Sen. Edward Brooke sponsored her for vice chairman of the state party in 1975 at age 24. She left that post to run Republican Arthur Mason's losing 1976 campaign against Drinan. (A tough assignment — it took an order from Rome to dislodge Drinan, a Jesuit priest, in 1980.)

She joined the field staff of the GOP congressional committee in 1977; moved up to political director in 1979 and took over the top job in January of 1981.

Daryl Glenney

Daryl Glenney is the late bloomer among the three. Born in California and educated at Stanford, she moved to Washington with her reporter husband and their two daughters in the mid-1960s.

When the marriage broke up, she tried free lance writing and in 1974 Matt Reese, the grand old man of

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

In Sacramento, Calif., history is in the making. The state assembly has just sent to the Senate a "lemon" car bill that would give dissatisfied automobile buyers a new car or their money back.

Good grief, people! If this bill were passed, it could significantly lower the GNP (Gross National Blood Pressure) and elect a car salesman king of the White House by 1984.

Everyone in the world has, at one time or another, bought a lemon. We had a car once that made you pucker when you kicked the tires. Engineering-wise, it was a monument to the committee who constructed a camel and thought they had solved the problem of tall men who needed more leg room.

The sun visor blocked the rear-view mirror.

The carpet under the accelerator had no resistance to the touch.

The radio was wired for static.

The floor of the car burnt your feet.

The steering mechanism quivered at anything over 35 mph.

And you couldn't get to the back seat from the driver's side of the car.

I don't understand it. This country is the only one in the world where men tolerate a lemon of a car longer than they will endure a wife who has run out of gas.

Think about it. Would your husband pay $50 to have you towed anywhere?

If he couldn't keep you running without stalling at every traffic light, would he talk nice to you and let you idle? If your warranty ran out would he stand you to a tuneup out of his own pocket? When your mileage started to deteriorate, would he still stop at every station and fill you up? If you heated up coming back from the ballpark, would he pull off the road and let you cool off? Would he still take you out to dinner if you had a crack in your windshield? If you had to be taken in for repairs, would he be satisfied with a loaner? I don't know why I do that. I always push a parody too far.

Dear Abby

Treat Each Child As Individual

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are having a big fight with her dentist. My wife is getting a full set of dentures. All her life she was ashamed of her teeth because they were yellowish, and now she wants snow-white teeth, but her dentist won't give them to her. He says snow-white teeth look unnatural. Abby, she doesn't care; she says movie stars have snow-white teeth and they look beautiful, and she wants beautiful white teeth too.

Meanwhile her dentist keeps telling her that his job is to give her teeth that will look natural, and if she suddenly comes out with snow-white teeth, people will know the teeth are dentures and they'll think her dentist did a poor job. We are deadlocked. Should a dentist give a patient what she wants or what he thinks she ought to have?

We live in Maine, but if we have to go to California to get what we want, we will go there. And I wouldn't begrudge the cost, either. Help us.

UNHAPPY SENIOR CITIZENS

DEAR UNHAPPY: The dentist discharged his professional obligation when he told your wife that the kind of teeth she wants will look unnatural. Having said this, and being overruled, he should give her what she wants. If he refuses, there are plenty of other dentists in Maine.

DEAR ABBY: A young woman who attends our church brings a large bag containing some kind of needlework, and all during the church service she either knits, crochets or does needlepoint.

I find this very distracting, and from the looks cast her way from others sitting near her, they too are annoyed.

I don't have the nerve to say something to her, and apparently neither has anyone else. She sits toward the back, so the minister can't see what she's doing. It's irritating to see her knitting away during the sermon. Maybe if you mention it in your column, she'll stop.

DISGUSTED IN YAKIMA, WASH.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Here's the needle. I hope she gets the point.

DEAR ABBY: Please say something in your column about mothers who treat children who are not twins like they are twins.

A relative of mine has two daughters, 6 and 4. She dresses them exactly alike, combs their hair the same way and buys them identical toys. (She says, "If everything is identical, one can't be jealous of the other.")

That's not all. The 6-year old can't go anywhere unless she takes her little sister. And if the big one has a playmate her own age over, the mother shoves the younger one off on both of them.

Both girls are constantly upset because they are expected always to be together, play together and stay together. That mother doesn't realize that their interests as well as their capabilities are not the same.

I tried to tell her that I thought she should start treating each child as an individual and drop the twin bit, and she nearly took my head off. If you agree with me, Abby, print this letter so she will see how wrong she is.

AUNTIE

DEAR AUNTIE: I'm with you, and I hope your relative reconsiders and takes your advice.

Three top pros Lewis, Sinnott and Glenney are anything but amateurs. They are very different people and sometimes competitors, but the attitudes and knowledge they hold in common make clear that they also are colleagues in a very specialized line of work.

Ms. Lewis is political director of the Democratic National Committee, in charge of both of the party's campaign work and its internal political process, such as national convention delegate selection. She is the first to handle both of these areas for the national committee.

Miss Sinnott is executive director of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, the organization that works directly with both GOP incumbents and challengers for Democratic seats in the battle for the House every two years. She moved up to the job after two years as the committee's political director.

Ms. Glenney is a free lance political consultant — a "hired gun" in the parlance of the trade. She also is president of Campaign Works, a bipartisan consortium of professional pols who help companies, associations and unions to train their staffs and members in campaign techniques.

There are many more women in professional politics, including a number who are associated with Ms. Glenney's Campaign Works — Susan Bryant, political director of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee; Nancy Brataas, a Minnesota state senator who helped elect the first GOP governors of the century in Texas and Louisiana; Jill Buckley, several of whose 1980 congressional clients were among the few Democrats in the nation to stem the GOP tide; Linda DiVall, a top Republican researcher and pollster; and Mopsi Fahey, whose issues and survey work helped elect two GOP senators and two House members in 1980.

Ann Lewis

Ann Lewis is the veteran of this group and perhaps the one who can best say she has politics in her blood.

"I never wanted to do anything else," she said in an interview. "I started giving out pamphlets for Adlai Stevenson (in 1952) when I was in high school in Bayonne, N.J."

Women In Politics....

but when she became single again and chose to earn her living in politics, credibility was a problem.

"I think it changed around 1975 or 1976," she said during an interview sandwiched between appointments in her national committee cubbyhole office. "Until then, I really had to prove myself." In Boston, the change came when local politicians saw what she could do: "After two campaigns, everybody knows who you are and how good you are."

Miss Sinnott put it much the same way: "You get to know the network and the network gets to know you." She also credited the chairman of the campaign committee, Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich. "He really supported us."

Ms. Glenné also saw a "change in the climate." She said, "I had a hard time being believed, having sufficient credibility" in her first campaigns, "but that changed as my credentials were established." Still, she said she found women candidates frequently "like to have men tell them what to do."

The difference

Ms. Lewis and Glenné believe there is a difference in the way women approach politics; Miss Sinnott thinks the lack of difference is a sign that women have achieved a level of professionalism that equals male expertise.

"I suspect there are differences," Ms. Lewis said. "I am used to working with fewer resources because the history of women's campaigns has been one of fewer resources."

She also sees a difference in outlook: "Whatever job I do, I buy the groceries; I do not have any insulation between me and food prices. I don't need the Department of Labor to tell me every four months what is happening to the cost of living."

Ms. Lewis also is a worrier. "After all, I'm the mother of three daughters. I even worried about Lyndon Johnson winning in 1964."

Glenné added another perspective: "I have gut feeling that there is more direct contact, from the background of a volunteer who is conscious of the work involved in a campaign. I think women are less likely to delegate work and then walk away from the project."

Said Miss Sinnott: "I really don't think there is much of a difference. And I think that in itself is a difference in that a professional in this field is someone who approaches and executes and does a good job professionally." She said "there are a lot of techniques you must master," but also have "a feeling about the process."

GOP technology

All agree, however, that there is a difference in Republican and Democratic campaigning.

Glenné: "Republicans make much better use of technology. They run campaigns in a much more structured, more business-like way."

Sinnott: "We see ourselves as a research center, as a training center. We think it is our job to offer the best training programs for candidates, as well as for campaign managers and staff, to have research services, legal services, financial information and baseline information available for every Republican running for the House of Representatives."

Lewis: "I think we have to assume that their apparatus will be larger than ours. Fortunately, I think we are smarter and harder working than they are, and even more importantly, we have an ally in the Reagan-Stockman budget. It has been my experience that no matter how good your phone bank is and how big your computer is, if you're not for the right things, the things the voters want, you're not going very far."

Attack campaign

It is not likely that the rise of women in professional politics will end the aggressive "attack campaign" tactics that have characterized U.S. politics in recent years.

"Campaigns are nothing more than pointing out differences," Miss Sinnott said, adding that "both negative strategy and positive strategy" are needed to give voters the information needed to make their choices. She said Democrats, while holding power, "bemoan the attack campaign, but I can recall in 1974 and 1976 they were effectively attacking Republicans."

Ms. Lewis, who is extremely critical of the President Reagan and Budget Director David Stockman for their budget cutting proposals, said attacks in that area "is telling the truth... I'm not saying either one of them are bad people." She said "personalizing the issues and evoking negative stereotypes" was the kind of campaigning she opposed.

Ms. Glenné, who is not tied to either party now, said she expected "a lot more" negative campaigning from the Democrats in the near future. "The Republicans do it very well." She also cautioned both to avoid going overboard, suggesting that is what Democratic challenger Alex Seith did to blow a lead in his 1978 campaign against Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill.

Campaigns well done

Professionals seldom find perfection, but frequently have a memory of jobs well done. Ms. Lewis and Miss Sinnott recall campaigns and candidates that approached the ideal.

"Barbara Mikulski comes very close," Ms. Lewis said. "She is a great campaigner. She has a real genius for speaking in a way that people understand immediately and know that she shares their concerns. After her comes my brother."

Miss Sinnott said Rep. John Hiler, R-Ind., who upset veteran Democrat John Brademas last year, ran a near perfect campaign: "That was a great story, a sort of David and Goliath. They had a tremendous organization and they did almost everything right. They must have, to beat John Brademas."

Ms. Glenné's favorite campaign was the Missouri right-to-work battle. She said when Reese went into the state, polls showed the right-to-work initiative leading 60-30, with 10 percent undecided.

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for six Nazis charged with planning blow up parts of Greensboro were expected to begin presenting their case today after a federal court judge rejected their motions for acquittal Wednesday.

Judge Woodrow W. Jones said he believed there was enough evidence to put the matter before the jury. The six Nazis — including four Forsyth County men and a Mitchell County couple — are charged with conspiring to set off explosions in retaliation for a guilty verdict in the murder trials of six Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis.

The six were acquitted of killing five Communists after a six-month trial.

The defendants in the Asheville trial are Raeford M. Caudle, 38, of Winston-Salem; James C. Talbert, 30, of Winston-Salem; Roger Pierce, 25, and his brother, Gorrell, 28, of Walnut Cove and Frank Braswell, 48, and his wife, Pat, 32, both of Penland.

Government prosecutors completed their case Wednesday and all six defense attorneys immediately moved for acquittal on the grounds of insufficient evidence. While the jury was out of the courtroom, Jones rejected the motion.

Earlier in the day, prosecutors played three tapes of telephone conversations from the Braswell home. Tommy Chapman, an Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent based in Asheville, testified that he helped record and monitor more than 1,700 phone calls in a 28-day period.

In the first tape, recorded Nov. 17 when the Klan-Nazi verdict was announced, Braswell told a man identified as Gorrell Pierce that "we played a hell of a game

You know what brought the verdict... that's right, they don't like napalm."

Chapman said Braswell could have been talking about the group's alleged plan to set off homemade explosives in downtown Greensboro, a shopping mall.

What Was The Delay?

North Carolina's legislators debated for nearly six months before finally enacting an $11.7 billion biennial state budget that does little other than to give government — at least a portion of the government machinery — financial backing to operate.

Still to come are such highly volatile, and emotional, questions as pay raises for teachers and state employees. On paper at least, those are to be decided in a special session in November.

It appears strange that legislative leaders felt it necessary to delay such decisions. Presumably the basis for that decision lies in the uncertainty of about $300 million in federal educational funds that may, or may not, be available. And some legislators say they may not be able to come up with the estimated $106 million needed for recommended pay raises.

North Carolina has experienced problems in the last few years, since the dawning of an era with energy as the guiding light for all else, in raising highway funds, but the state's General Fund collections have remained healthy and an ample surplus has been available most years. Why, then, should the availability or unavailability of $300 million — less than 3 percent of the total two-year budget — make such a difference in a state that traditionally has had sufficient income locally to pay as it goes?

Some legislators made a publicity splash early in the 1981 session by demanding an arbitrary 6 percent cutback in all areas of state spending. Their reasoning has not yet satisfied logical questioning and, after months of fanfare, the "final" budget approved last week reflected only a slight reduction from spending levels of the previous biennium. And the teachers still don't know what they will be paid during the school year that is just around the corner. In some cases, they still don't know if they even have a job.

It seems to us that such questions surely could have been resolved during a six-month session.

WHERE THEY DON'T RECOGNIZE A 'NO' VOTE!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Bradwell To O'Connor

WASHINGTON — It was just the other day that I was invoking the 19th-century shade of Myra Bradwell, but with the nomination of Sandra O'Connor to the Supreme Court, the old story takes on an especially poignant meaning. From Mrs. Bradwell to Mrs. O'Connor, it's been a long, uphill climb for ladies in the law.

Myra Bradwell, may she rest in peace, was a native of Vermont who moved to Chicago sometime in the mid-1850s. Not long after ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment in 1868, she did a most audacious, unfeminine thing: She applied for a license to practice law. Curiously, she did not rely upon the equal protection clause but rather upon the privileges and immunities clause, but in any event the Supreme Court of Illinois summarily turned her down. No women were to be allowed in court.

JAS. J. KILPATRICK

Mrs. Bradwell appealed. In April 1873, the U.S. Supreme Court also gave her the brush-off. It was within the police powers of Illinois to limit membership in the bar to males only. Only Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase dissented, and he didn't say why.

Justice Joseph P. Bradley was so shocked by the whole astonishing idea that he wrote a flaming concurring opinion in which two other justices joined. History, nature, the common law, and "the usages of Westminster Hall from time immemorial" argued against the proposition. Bradley felt impelled to expand upon the wide difference in the spheres and destinies of man and woman.

"Man is, or should be, woman's protector and defender. The natural and proper timidity and delicacy which belongs to the female sex evidently unfits it for many of the occupations of civil life. The constitution of the family organization, which is founded in the divine ordinance as well as in the nature of things, indicates the domestic sphere as that which properly belongs to the domain and function of womanhood ... The paramount destiny and mission of woman are to fulfill the noble and benign office of wife and mother. This is the law of the Creator. And the rules of civil society must be adapted to the general constitution of things, and cannot be based upon exceptional cases."

It would be interesting to know what ever became of Myra Bradwell. She was born a century before her time, but last week's nomination of Sandra O'Connor to the high court vindicates her pioneering effort. The Senate Judiciary Committee expects to expedite confirmation hearings on the nominee, in an effort to complete action before the August recess.

Mrs. O'Connor will be welcome on the court. Members of our highest tribunal come to that bench equipped not only with experience in the law but with all the other experiences of their lifetimes also. It takes nothing from Thurgood Marshall's stature to observe that Lyndon Johnson wanted to say now Mrs. O'Connor might have voted in these cases if she had been sitting on the court. She might have voted just as the departing Potter Stewart voted. But she would have brought to the consideration of these cases a body of personal experience — a cast of mind, if you please — that has not been there before.

None of this, I know, is supposed to matter. Justices in theory approach each case without personal prejudice or bias. They function as carpenters, in one metaphor, who simply lay the boards of law against the square of the Constitution. The theory is specious. Justices are not disembodied spirits. They are mortals, and to this day they have all been mortal men. Now we are to have a mortal woman. Myra Bradwell would be pleased. And so am I.

WHAT IS MAN?
Psychiatrists often note the damage to the personality brought about by feelings of inferiority. No doubt there is much to what they say. But we need to be warned even more against feelings of egotism, conceit, and arrogance.

We 20th century human beings have a tendency to think that with jet aircraft, hydrogen bombs, and intercontinental missiles, we are sitting at the top of the universe. Far from it. With all our material accomplishments we are no

Hope Never Left Scene

BY HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
(AP) — Mother Teresa, the Nobel Peace Prize winner who is called "the saint of the gutters," has set up a mission for the poorest of the poor in the parish where I first went to school.

No, I wasn't raised in the streets of Calcutta.

I was born in Manhattan — Harlem, actually — but entered first grade at St. Augustine's parochial school in Newark, N.J., where the family moved hoping for a better life.

Now Mother Teresa's Missionaries of Charity are opening a soup kitchen and a shelter for women in that vacant, long ago closed school. She went there herself the other day to launch the new mission, her eighth in the United States, and there amid the burned-out buildings and garbage strewn streets spoke of bringing hope to those who had abandoned hope.

"I leave you now, my sisters," Mother Teresa bade farewell to the four nuns who will occupy the old convent on Sussex Avenue. "Go together in search of the poor... Having nothing, we can give them everything."

It is sad to think that the old neighborhood, the very parish, where I made my First Holy Communion (I remember getting car sick in the trolley going to have my picture taken), played punchball in the schoolyard, ate my first slice of pizza, collected my first bubblegum baseball card (Charlie Keller of the Newark Bears), has lost all hope.

After all, this isn't India. It isn't Calcutta. How could it happen? When did the American dream desert Newark's Central Ward?

I wonder what desperation, what poverty, what grip of crime, what neglect by the politicians, by the people themselves, by all of us unseeing and uncaring causes a neighborhood to decay and die?

There was poverty, plenty of it, in St. Augustine's parish when I took my seat in the ground-floor first grade classroom (which also housed the second grade) of that four-room school. The Great Depression was at its bleakest point.

My grandfather, a house painter, went off hopefully every morning to the union hiring hall with his white cap and coveralls and was always home an hour later, a little older, more sad eyed, less communicative. But we three boys, a year apart in age, were glad there was no work. He could take us up to Branchbrook Park after school to feed the ducks and see the scaffolded spires of the great New Sacred Heart cathedral towering above the trees. A quarter of a century would pass before the money was raised to finish the building.

Crime was everywhere, then as now. Grandfather's last job was painting the ceiling of the Newark tavern where Dutch Schultz was gunned down. I still recall the gangland slogan: "You gotta buy the Dutchman's beer."

One day state troopers in broad brimmed hats searched the vacant lot behind the 113th Infantry Armory for the kidnapped Lindbergh baby. Black Buick sedans went over the new Pulaski Skyway with placards on the spare tire: "Don't Shoot... Not John Dillinger." I saw a man clubbed to death by pickets outside a struck dry cleaning plant.

Poverty, crime, violence were early learned facts of life in my boyhood, more real than the dawn thunder of hooves and the rumble of garbage wagons over the cobblestones on Orange Street to the city barn at the top of the hill. We awoke one morning to find the horses all gone, replaced by ugly gray trucks.

But always there was hope.

WPA signs and men with shovels suddenly appeared at excavations worth watching. The initials taught me my first joke: "We Poke Along." Laid off, the A&P delivery boy went off to CCC Camp. Dad pasted an NRA sticker in the livingroom window, expressing his faith in the National Recovery Act at a time when he was seldom sure of a full week's work.

St. Augustine's was a German parish then. The pastor, Father Charles Butner, who spelled his name with an amlaut, prayed very Sunday that the nearby piano factory which enticed the skilled immigrants here would soon reopen. It never did.

He let me start school at 5, because I clung crying to the schoolyard gate when Mother delivered my older brother on opening day. The Sister of Christian Doctrine, who ran the school, were cheerful, kindly, concerned, but never took poverty as an excuse for a dirty shirt, unshined shoes or missed homework. In the second grade, German measles, appropriately, kept my brother and me from First Communion preparations. Mother walked us around the gas works, then an acceptable cure, drilling us in our catechism, and then marched us into the rectory

Attaining Goal By New Path

Back in the mid-1930's, economists of Japan saw a coming shortage of raw materials and energy sources that would strangle the country's economic life, posing a threat to its survival.

So the government launched a war of expansionism which gulped large areas of China, and then eyed the richest and raw materials of Southeast Asia.

As we all remember too well, the "solution" ran headlong into opposition from the United States and Japan plunged into that broader conflict it could not win. To shore up its position in the Far East the government proclaimed a Co-Prosperity Sphere, and the concept drew a lot of support from Asians who were familiar with life as colonies of the affluent and powerful West.

Now the irony. In defeat, Japan turned its industrial talents to a new direction and is today a giant in the Far East with economic ties and influence that dwarf the empire of 1942.

There is now speculation the old idea of an Asian Co-Prosperity Sphere is again within sight and more readily attainable than by force of arms. It is conceivable that Japan will one day surpass the goal unattainable by force.

History certainly has some surprising twists.

THIS AFTERNOON

To A Back-Burner

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Two important developments in health protection which had been thoroughly explored and were ready for action in North Carolina have been pushed to the back burner, if not axed, by the tight-money mindset in government.

While on the face of them, both proposals would appear geared to benefit only state employees, including public school and university personnel, the ultimate impact would have been far greater.

A $25 million plan to provide dental insurance as part of the health and medical care for state employees was a priority item in Gov. Jim Hunt's budget. He had given his pledge to work for that benefit which was vigorously supported by the various organizations of state employees.

At a time when not even a cost-of-living salary increase can be nailed down... that it is being left until the October session of the General Assembly... obviously, a new and expanded health plan for dental care has been quietly shoved aside.

Meanwhile, the bill for routine health insurance has come in and legislators are struggling with some way to pay a $41 million increase without having to make state employees put up part of the money — either by trimming benefits, or boosting the rates for dependent coverage.

And that brings us to the second innovative measure which, given better financial times and a different political climate, might have set the stage for revolutionary change in the state.

A study commission which was the outgrowth of efforts to find a way to contain rapidly rising medical care costs had devised a scheme to net nearly $10 million in public funds from the General Assembly to underwrite a public health corporation.

There were outlined several different ways to operate such a prepaid health plan. Corporations may own and operate a hospital or clinic and hire the medical staff; they may lease a portion of an existing health care facility; or they can merely contract with various health care providers to give required services.

But the common thread in any approach is this: instead of paying medical expenses out of pockets, or paying monthly health insurance premiums to cover expenses when they arise, participants pay a monthly fee to the prepaid health group plan, and any services needed in the health care field — from routine physicals to major surgery — are provided without additional charge.

Those on the study commission believed that establishing such a prepaid health group for state employees, first those clustered in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area, would establish the competition needed to force medical practitioners to hold prices down.

Opposition
When details of the plan became public, the reaction convinced those pushing the measure that there was little hope of getting a direct General Assembly appropriation. Strategy shifted to seeing if the state would underwrite a loan plan so the program could be launched, but as this session of the Legislature progresses, even that hope was lost. Now, backers are looking for private foundation money since it seems neither state nor federal government funds will be available for such experiments.

How would either of these steps affect the general public? Aside from bearing the cost, taxpayers would find soon enough that since state employees had secured such benefits, pressure would be on the private

Views As To Mergers Vary

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Mergers generally produce a net economic gain, the SEC chairman said, and he offered as evidence the sizable premiums often paid to shareholders of the company being acquired.

John S.R. Shad, who recently took over the top job at the SEC, more formally known as the Securities and Exchange Commission, said nothing about the other part of the deal — about those who pay the premiums.

As most shareholders know, those premiums come out of the buyer's equity, which, of course, is the shareholder's equity. There is no such thing as a deal in which you pay dearly but suffer no added expense.

Moreover, with interest rates extremely high, any money borrowed to finance a merger comes at a very high price — a price that may further dilute the equity of shareholders in the acquiring company.

You don't have to be an SEC chairman to test this interpretation. In the stock market, which is supposed to represent some collective wisdom, shares of the bidders in a takeover contest often fall, while those of the company being sought rise, often spectacularly.

Mergers are healthy for the economy, said the commissioner, former vice chairman of E.F. Hutton & Co. But the commissioner's certainty is not shared by all who have studied mergers, including his predecessor.

Harold M. Williams, SEC commissioner during the Carter administration after having been president of Norton Simon Inc., a conglomerate, often wondered whether mergers diverted money from more productive uses.

As they do now, small-business people then found it hard to raise funds to survive. And creative people with sound ideas were unable to raise financial support to launch new businesses.

There is nothing especially new about this; it is the test that entrepreneurs have always faced.

But as critics have argued in books, papers, testimony, speeches and seminars, a country in which productivity gains are increasingly hard to get must be concerned about innovation, efficiency, competition and new jobs, areas in which smaller companies have much to contribute.

Rather than accepting the view that mergers are good, it would seem that many questions are still worthy of being explored by the Justice Department, the Federal Trade Commission and Congress.

As the Reagan administration says, big isn't always bad. This may be especially so among oil companies, which need enormous amounts of capital to explore, build refineries and compete internationally. But in a specific situation, would it be bad for the country, for example, if the second- and ninth-largest oil companies become one, as would happen if Mobil and Conoco merged?

What are the gains or losses for the economy? Will financing of big mergers force up interest rates? Will merger activity hurt or help shareholders? Will mergers further erode the declining position of small business?

That last question is hardly academic to the reader of a 1978 report of the House Subcommittee on Antitrust, Consumers and Employment, from which the following two paragraphs are taken.

First: "It is surprising to some observers that between 1969 and 1976, small business accounted for what can be considered virtually all the new private sector employment in this country."

Second: "The period of 1950 to 1976 has shown a steady increase in the percentage of manufacturing assets controlled by the top 100 and top 200 manufacturing firms. The proportion of those assets controlled by 100 largest firms increased from 39.7 to 47.6 percent..."

Are mergers good for the economy? To say they are is as empty of real content as the claim that big is bad merely because it is big. The issue obviously needs more discussion, and it probably will get it.

Say Non-Quota Tobacco Threatening Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm leaders from several states told a House subcommittee Wednesday that unless non-quota tobacco is regulated, it threatens the entire price-support program.

The controversy centers on Maryland-type tobacco, which does not come under government control. As the amount of the non-quota leaf skyrocketed from 922 acres last year to 9,833 acres this year, burley tobacco growers were the first to be hurt, as cigarette manufacturers have turned increasingly to the Maryland tobacco.

Rep. Charles G. Rose, D-N.C., who is chairman of the Tobacco and Peanut Subcommittee, angrily criticized the U.S. Department of Agriculture for allowing the situation to develop.

for a make-up exam.

Father Butner asked me what the boy Jesus told his distressed parents when they finally found him in the Temple preaching. "He told them," I answered nervously, "to mind their own business." The stern face exploded in laughter until tears blurred his eyes.

"Kids today probably would tell their parents that," he told my mother, honking into a great white linen handkerchief. So we knew times were changing.

But always there was hope. The Newark Bears were on their way to an International League pennant. Two-ton Tony Galento, a tavern keeper in nearby Orange, was bawling his way into the heavyweight picture on a training regimen of three pails of beer (also known as growlers) a day. Sister Miranda, the third grade nun, complained that the boys knew "more about this Galento person than the Cure of Ars." My brother got sent to Mother Superior for asking "Who did he ever fight?"

Dust storms were blowing away the farm belt, but Eddie Cantor was singing "Tomatoes are cheaper..." A new beverage plant opened with a water tower shaped like a huge soda bottle rising over Holy Sepulcher Cemetery where grandfather now lay buried. Dad came home one day and announced a miracle. He had been given a raise at the government Assay Office. To $40 a week. Mom made us get down on our knees right then and pray for people still out of work, like Mr. Koehler, a cabinet maker at the piano works who lived upstairs and played melancholy chords on an old upright all day long.

Thinking back on all this, my hope today is for an even greater miracle: that Sister Teresa's selfless servants can restore hope to the new wave of immigrants living in the old neighborhood.

If Mom were here, I'd be on my knees helping it to happen, instead of just sitting at this typewriter hoping.

He told them to "get their act together" and report back to the subcommittee in September with a solution.

Wayne A. Cawley Jr., Maryland's agriculture secretary, told the subcommittee that farmers in North Carolina and several other Southern states are leasing their flue-cured tobacco allotments to neighbors and growing Maryland-type crops on their farms to cash in on the tight market.

"I'd like to avoid the double-dipping that's going on in North Carolina," he said. "If this situation is not corrected, tobacco growers in flue-cured states could grow as much as 100 million pounds of non-quota tobacco alongside quota tobacco."

Cawley said the surge in Maryland-type tobacco eventually would flood the market and drive Maryland's 5,000 tobacco farmers out of business. He added that an excess of the Maryland-type leaf could displace the sales of burley tobacco, threatening that program.

Some 2,000 North Carolina flue-cured tobacco farmers are estimated to supplement their incomes by planting the non-quota tobacco.

"Without the Maryland tobacco, I'd have gone under last year because my fluecured came up dry," said Donnie K. Price, a Nash County farmer growing 15 acres of the Maryland-type along with his 35-acre flue-cured allotment.

Also appearing before the subcommittee were members of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation, Rep. Charles O. Whitley, D-N.C., and other tobacco state congressmen and farm groups.

"Our primary interest is to protect and safeguard the marketing quota and price support program that has served burley and flue-cured tobacco growers for more than four decades," said William E. Little, commodity director for the Farm Bureau.

Two Maryland congressmen — Republican Marjorie S. Holt and Democrat Roy Dyson — have introduced legislation that would make it illegal to grow non-quota tobacco in quota areas.

Mrs. Holt said it was unfair "to guarantee a grower a minimum income, if they accept acreage allotments, and then permit the same grower to go to the marketplace with additional tobacco in direct competition with free enterprise."

But Rose expressed reservations about that approach, saying he didn't want to put tobacco legislation on the House floor where tobacco's enemies might try to gut the entire price support program.

sector to supply similar fringes for their employees.

Indeed, at one point there was legislation in the works which would have required all major employers in the state to offer a prepaid health program as an alternative to health insurance coverage to those employees who desired that approach. That measure, too, has quietly slipped away...at least for now.

Cost Of Britain's Riots Seen Small As Compared To U.S.

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The racial tension and contempt for police evident in Britain's two-week-old riots may be alarming reminders of America's summers of fury, but the cost of Britain's storm of urban violence pales by comparison to the troubles that shook U.S. cities.

The roots of England's problems appear similar to those that spurred unrest in U.S. cities in the long, hot summers of the 1960s — soaring unemployment especially among non-whites, decaying inner city areas, racial tension, frustration, lawlessness and black complaints of police harassment.

But Britain's worst urban violence this century has a degree of understatement compared with, for example, the racial explosions of Los Angeles' Watts area in 1965 or in Miami's Liberty City last year.

No one has been killed in the disturbances here. And no one has yet produced a firearm.

The typical British riot is still a street confrontation between helmeted police armed with nightsticks and plastic riot shields, and rioters whose main weapons are bricks and gasoline bombs. England's police are traditionally unarmed and public opinion strongly favors keeping them that way. The country's firearms control regulations are among the strictest in the world.

Apart from shotguns for members of sporting clubs or farmers, almost no one outside the strife-torn province of Northern Ireland can acquire a firearm legally.

All firearms require police-issued licenses and firearms dealers must register with the police and record each transaction.

The Home Office, which controls the British police force, says only a "few thousand" civilians out of the 56 million population have weapons licenses.

More than 200 policemen have been injured and some 2,500 rioters arrested, but police report few injuries to rioters. In Miami last year, 18 people died in the Liberty City riots and about 400 others were injured. Damage was estimated at more than $100 million. The 1965 summer race riots in Watts left 34 people dead and more than 1,000 others injured. Damage exceeded $40 million.

Local authorities are still tallying the bills, and no overall estimate is available for damage to the more than 20 English cities and towns hit by violence in the past two weeks. Riot damage to the three worst-hit cities — London, Manchester and Liverpool — has been estimated at $41 million.

Disturbances range from nights of rioting, looting and arson in high-immigrant districts of major cities to a single stone hurled through a post office window.

"This is not a dismal fashion we are going through — a fad for violence — but something very nasty, deep and enduring," noted Jon Akass, political columnist in the mass-circulation Sun newspaper.

"We may not have the same death toll as in America ... but the complaints and the symptoms are horribly familiar." Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government has authorized the use of a whole new range of police anti-riot gear during the current unrest, including water cannon and rubber bullets if necessary.

And for the first time on the British mainland, police used tear gas to quell a public disorder — in Liverpool's multi-racial Toxteth district.

Peanuts Are Right Price

CLEVELAND (AP) — Kevin Herman got a plum of a plane trip for peanuts. Fifty of 'em.

To promote its new service from Cleveland, Texas International Airlines offered 50 free pairs of round-trip tickets on any of the airline's flights. The airline began flights Wednesday to Mexico City, New Orleans and Houston.

The tickets, which went on sale at 10 a.m. Wednesday, were offered to the first 50 people who presented 50 of any of a number of items, including Cleveland plums, Cleveland Browns ticket stubs, or Texas yellow roses.

At the head of the line was Herman, a junior at Kent State University, who arrived at noon Monday with 50 peanuts, 50 hot peppers and a 50-foot chain of paper clips.

Herman arrived 10 hours before the next potential winner, but by 4 p.m. Tuesday, he had been joined by 75 other adventurers.

"I just wanted to get away," Herman said. "I wasn't doing much this summer and it was the perfect opportunity."

Although Herman got what he wanted, the promotional stunt sparked a commotion at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport.

By about 5:30 a.m. Wednesday, more than 400 people were at the desk area. Many stormed what line there had been, ending any semblance of order. The few Cleveland policemen at the airport were reinforced by other patrolmen and the Community Response and Special Weapons and Tactics units.

Then at 10 a.m., the tension in the crowd eased when Ben L. Karr, Texas International marketing director, said that everyone meeting the contest rules would get two free tickets. The airline had planned to give away 50 round-trip tickets, but ended up yielding about 600.

U.S. Seeks El Salvador Policy Support

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is moving U.S. involvement in El Salvador back to the forefront in hopes of reversing a perceptible decline in public support for its policy toward the strife-torn country.

criticism that President Reagan's policy is concentrated on achieving a military solution to the Salvadoran conflict.

The speech comes after an extended period in which the administration has made a studied effort to deflect public attention from El Salvador.

U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said Enders would emphasize that the administration, through large-scale economic aid, is trying to help El Salvador's civilian president, Jose Napoleon Duarte, implement sweeping social and economic reform, including political democracy.

The administration already has sent $35.5 million in military equipment to El Salvador along with 54 military trainers.

Officials said Enders would not use the speech to request additional military aid, even though the U.S. Ambassador in San Salvador, Deane Hinton, has said more arms and training are needed because the Salvadoran Army and leftist guerrillas have fought to a draw.

According to one official, the administration agrees with Hinton's assessment but is reluctant to seek more military aid because it senses there is limited popular support for expanded American involvement.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., chairman of a House subcommittee on inter-American affairs, said in a telephone interview that the reaction in Congress for a substantial military aid increase would be "very negative."

"The mood of skepticism with respect to American policy in El Salvador is growing, not receding," Barnes said, citing continuing reports of human rights violations and the "inability of the civilian forces to gain control over the military."

Last Sunday, the acting archbishop of San Salvador, the Rev. Arturo Rivera y Damas, blamed security forces for the murder of 28 persons found dead under a bridge in Chalatenango Province.

State Department officials said Barnes' assessment of the public mood is accurate. They said there is no detectable public support for a major American-sponsored effort to defeat the guerrillas.

"There are no hawks out there," said one official who has traveled the country extensively explaining administration policy.

As officials see it, the administration's early attempts to depict El Salvador as a victim of massive Soviet-bloc penetration generally have fallen on deaf ears.

Abroad, the attitude toward the administration claims generally has ranged from skepticism to outright hostility. President Francois Mitterand of France has said the problem in El Salvador is popular rejection of "poverty and abasement," not communist subversion.

The administration has steadfastly stood by its contention, outlined in a February "white paper," that El Salvador is "a textbook case of indirect armed aggression" by communist powers, especially Cuba.

But that contention has been overshadowed in recent weeks by several newspaper accounts focusing on alleged flaws and distortions in the February report. The Carter administration's last ambassador to El Salvador, Robert E. White, has called the document a collection of "tall tales."

In addition, Duarte said recently that the greatest threat to his government comes not from leftist guerrillas but from conservative businessmen.

One Injured In Accident

An estimated $7,375 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 1:11 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 300 feet west of the Bismark Street intersection involving cars driven by Larry James Baker of 105 Cherry Court Dr. and Robin Lynne Buck of 120 Greenwood Dr.

Damage was estimated at $3,500 to the Baker car and $900 to the Buck auto.

John David Ezelle Jr. of Route 8, Greenville, was charged with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of a 9:25 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene Street and Mumford Road that injured one person.

Investigators said the Elzelle car collided with a vehicle driven by Walter Cullifer of Route 6, Greenville, causing $1,500 damage to the Ezelle car and $400 damage to the Cullifer vehicle, and injuring a passenger in the Cullifer car.

A truck driven by Richard Earl Hardee of Route 3, Greenville, and a car operated by Connie Hodges Woolard of Branche's Mobile Estates collided about 4:55 p.m. on Fifth Street, 20 feet west of the Greene Street intersection, causing $75 damage to the truck and $1,000 damage to the car.

Reforestation Cost Sharing Funds Depleted

Funds for the cost sharing reforestation programs administered by the N.C. Forest Service and the ASCS office are depleted unless more money is appropriated from state and federal sources, says extension area forester Jim Kea.

Rising cost of reforestation plus budget cuts have created a waiting list in most counties for cost sharing assistance. Costs have risen so fast that in most cases the so-called 60 percent cost sharing is actually 40 percent due to ceiling prices necessarily placed on various reforestation operations," said Kea.

"The result is fewer acres for the same money plus additional cost being paid by the landowner," he added.

Hertford, Bertie, Martin, Pitt and Beaufort counties each reforest between 1,200-2,000 acres per year. This figure is above most counties in both the east and state, according to Kea. "However, four to six times that amount is cut and not adequately regenerated to pine or quality hardwoods," said the forester. "The results will be crippling to the forest industries in the area as well as to landowners in the next 20-30 years."

Kea says much of this waste comes from landowner motivation, poor utilization and poor marketing. "Often the landowner also pays too much tax because he didn't establish a basis on his timber and get capital gain treatment," said the extension agent.

"If all this confuses you and you are contemplating selling timber, you need professional help from a public or private consulting forester," he added.

Kea noted that the cost sharing assistance will probably be eliminated in favor of a tax incentive program.

Persons having comments or needing information about woodlands, should contact the county ranger with the N.C. Forest Service or Jim Kea, extension area forester, P.O. Box 148, Williamston, N.C., 27892, or phone 792-1621.

Has Stop-Smoking Clinic On July 24

"Of all the methods I've tried to quit smoking, hypnosis is the only one that's worked," says Dixie Souther of Greenville about the hypnosis stop-smoking clinic being offered here again by the American Lung Association of North Carolina, Eastern Region.

People attending the weight-control clinics report similar success, says Connie Landen, regional director of the association. The next clinic will be held here Friday, July 24, at the Holiday Inn here. The stop-smoking clinic will be held at 6:30 p.m.; the weight control clinic at 8:30 p.m. For more information, call the American Lung Association, 752-5093, between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. The fee for either clinic is $35. Former clients may return for the reduced fee of $20.

During the clinics, which each include three hypnotic inductions, participants will be offered their money back after the first induction if they feel hypnosis will not work for them.

The fee will be returned after the first induction if the client feels that hypnosis will not work for them, according to John Greer, who offers clinics for the American Lung Association in 74 cities in 11 states. His clinics each include literature and cassette tapes for follow-up reinforcement of the hypnotic suggestions.

The American Lung Association of North Carolina has previously sponsored clinics in 17 N.C. cities.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A Johns Hopkins University study suggests that black students get more out of going to integrated schools if they start early.

So the report says a plan to encourage school integration by offering free college tuition to students who transfer should be modified to encourage blacks to switch schools early.

The report was requested by Gary Orfield, a University of Illinois professor who has acted as court-appointed desegregation expert here.

The original offer — a semester of free tuition at any Missouri school for each year of participation in the desegregation program — was part of a proposal drawn up by the St. Louis Board of Education and the U.S. Justice Department.

N.C. Rewrites Execution Procedures

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Twenty years after North Carolina last carried out an execution, state prison officials have quietly drawn up a new set of procedures in case Central Prison's gas chamber is called back into service.

But even as appeals are slowly being exhausted for some of the 15 prisoners now under a death sentence, officials say it will be a long time before North Carolina actually puts anyone to death.

"Ultimately, I believe someone will probably exhaust every avenue of appeal," said Jacob Saffron, deputy state attorney general. "But I don't know when. I don't have a crystal ball."

One of those sentenced to die in North Carolina is a woman, Velma M. Barfield, and officials say it is her case that has made the most progress through appeals toward an execution date.

The U.S. Supreme Court has refused to review her conviction once already, and last week the North Carolina Supreme Court dissolved a stay of execution for her. A hearing has been set July 23 in Superior Court in Whiteville for Judge Maurice Braswell to set an execution date, which by law must be 60 to 90 days after the hearing.

But Mrs. Barfield's attorneys plan to pursue further appeals in federal court. Saffron said Mrs. Barfield's case can go into U.S. District Court in Raleigh, and from there to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and again to the Supreme Court.

"There are still three good bites at the apple left," he said. "As an educated guess, I can't foresee those three steps being concluded in under two years."

Mrs. Barfield, 47, of Saint Pauls, was convicted in 1978 of poisoning her fiancé. She also has admitted using rat and ant poison to kill three other people, including her mother. She was tried and convicted for only one of the deaths.

Liz Poitras, a paralegal with the Southern Prisoners Defense Committee in Nashville, Tenn., said the group's attorneys — who are handling Mrs. Barfield's case for free — will file federal appeals once the execution date is set.

"We will definitely handle her case and she will exhaust all of her appeals," Miss Poitras said.

Department of Correction officials decline to predict when, if ever, they expect to be called upon to carry out an execution. But they say legal developments of the Barfield case were not the reason they have established a new set of guidelines for handling an execution.

W.L. "Kip" Kautzky, deputy director of prisons, said the procedures set down responsibilities and arrangements for every aspect of an execution — handling the prisoner before the execution, dealing with the family, accommodations for news coverage and disposing of the body afterwards.

The procedures, which have not yet been made public and are still subject to review by the attorney general's office, provide for a small pool of reporters to witness the execution.

"We started on that probably a year ago," Kautzky said.

"In our view, it's a solemn and unquestionably difficult action that must be taken in the name of the law. We felt it only proper that it receive as reasonable and objective a view as we could give it."

The state's gas chamber, located in century-old Central Prison, has remained in working order since Theodore Boykin, convicted of rape and murder, was gassed on Oct. 27, 1961. Officials say there have been 362 executions in the state since 1910, and the last woman to die in the chamber was convicted murderer Bessie Williams, who was executed Dec. 29, 1944.

Central Prison Warden Sam Garrison was an employee at the prison in 1961. He said in an interview Wednesday that he "was involved in that" last execution, but he declined to discuss it. "I'd rather not go into that," he said.

If an execution is held, Garrison said he would be required by law to either throw the fatal gas, delegate that duty or hire someone to do it.

"It's my position that I'm a servant of the taxpayer. Therefore, I don't voice an opinion on the law," Garrison said. "I will do my duty."

'Far Behind'

LONDON (AP) — British wages are falling far behind the growth of taxes and inflation, according to government figures.

The Department of Employment said Wednesday pay levels rose 13 percent in May compared with 19.5 percent in December. The rate of growth which fell for the fifth straight month was the lowest in three years.

Wages are trailing behind living costs and rising taxes, and living standards are expected to suffer as pay raises drop further in coming months. Inflation in Britain is running at 11.7 percent.

TRAVEL AGREEMENT
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam and the Soviet Union have signed an agreement covering travel by their citizens between the two countries, the Vietnam News Agency reports.

TRUSTEES CHAIRMAN — Dr. Hubert Eaton, a Wilmington physician who since 1949 actively sought desegregation of local schools, was elected Wednesday the chairman of the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington — making him the first black named to that post at a predominantly white school in N.C. Eaton, 64, said he was "aware that my election as chairman of this board represents a deviation from past attitudes and customs", and thanked them. (AP Laserphoto)

Prices Climb

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — The average price climbed $2.78 per hundred pounds at Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco markets Wednesday, but grade prices dropped $2 to $6 per hundred for two-thirds of the grades.

Preliminary figures from the Federal-State Market News Service put Georgia sales Wednesday at 2,608,058 pounds at an average of $145.79 per hundred pounds for $3,802,329. Season totals were 6,998,328 pounds at an average of $143.32 per hundred pounds for $1,030,081.

Florida sales were 488,447 pounds at an average of $142.17 per hundred pounds for $694,494 on Wednesday; and 1,168,291 pounds at an average of $144.56 per hundred pounds for $1,688,861 for the season.

Total sales were 3,096,505 pounds at an average of $145.22 per hundred pounds for $4,496,823 on Wednesday; and 8,166,619 pounds at an average of $143.50 per hundred pounds for $11,718,942 for the season.

The top average recorded was $186 per hundred for grade C4F, the service said. Quality showed only minor changes from opening day with primings and nondescript accounting for about three-fourths of the sales.

Quake Survivors Still Struggling 8 Months Later

By CLARA HEMPHILL, Associated Press Writer NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Vincenzo d'Alessandro, who lost his house, his wife and his four children in last November's earthquake, is still living in a tiny camper in a gravel lot in the mountain village of Balvano. He cooks outside and washes in primitive public toilets.

He is one of 100,000 earthquake survivors living in campers in more than 70 cities and towns in southern Italy. The government says it will have prefabricated houses for all by fall, but it will be three to seven years before permanent housing is built.

"We don't want a big house. All we want is two little rooms," said Vincenzo's brother, Pasquale, who shares the 6-by-12-foot metal camper with him.

Reconstruction has not begun in Balvano or the other cities and towns hit by the earthquake Nov. 23 that killed 2,737 people. And many in Balvano and other villages claim the temporary housing has been allocated according to political patronage rather than need.

In the winter, snow and rain seeped through the cracks in the campers. Now, the summer sun is beating down on them, making them unbearably hot. The sewage from the public toilets in the camps is causing health hazards, and the risk of infection is high, according to Balvano's health official, Dr. Giuseppe Sarro.

The physical conditions are grim, but the psychological conditions may be just as bad. Some survivors say they have chronic insomnia and crying spells. Others say they are withdrawn and listless after losing their families, their houses and their jobs.

"I worked in Germany for 11 years to earn a little money to support my family," Vincenzo d'Alessandro said. "I made all the sacrifices. It cost me some. Now I ask, what's the point of working? What does it serve? If you think about it, you go crazy."

He came back to Balvano, a town of 3,000 about 90 miles east of Naples, to bury his family. He has no work — he was laid off from a construction job last month — and his pretty medieval hill town has been reduced to a pile of rubble. But he decided to stay.

It's harvest time in the mountains. The farmers are cutting the hay, some using hand sickles, and piling it in haystacks to dry. Donkeys carry big baskets of vegetables from the fields to towns.

Soon the grapes will be ready. But the villagers in Ricigliano, about six miles from Balvano, say the grapes will rot on the vines because their wineries, wine presses and wine cellars were destroyed by the quake.

In Ricigliano, 90 percent destroyed by the quake, the streets are still piled high with rubble. Only 150 of the town's 1,350 inhabitants live in prefabricated houses. About 800 live in campers lined up along dusty mountain roads. Some, crippled by the earthquake, hobble along on crutches.

Maria Iacullo, who lost her husband in the quake, still has a swollen leg from the gash she got the night the walls came tumbling down. She lives in a small prefabricated house with her 5-year-old daughter, Gerarda, and her 6-month-old son, Pasquale, born two months after the quake.

"My daughter still cries, 'Where is Papa? When is Papa coming back?'" said the 25-year-old widow, dressed in the traditional mourning with a black dress, black stockings and shoes and a black scarf over her head. "There are some days I'm so upset I don't know what to do. I'm so lonely when I go to sleep at night."

The villagers in Ricigliano say they can't understand why foreign aid that they heard was coming hasn't arrived. Rescue officials say much of the foreign aid is earmarked for long-term reconstruction such as building schools.

The U.S. Congress allocated $46 million to build 12 schools. Officials say construction of the schools will start late this year or early next spring. The United States gave $4 million in relief supplies such as tents and blankets immediately after the earthquake.

Ricigliano's mayor, Vito Saracco, defends the efforts of building temporary housing. "I don't think any other government would have done better. It's not disorganization. It's just that there isn't enough money."

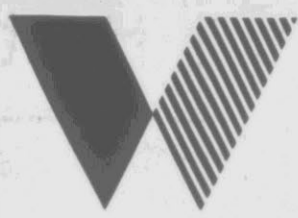

The government rescue headquarters in Naples says everything is going according to plan. About 30,000 prefabricated houses for about 120,000 people have already been built. About 20,000 people are staying in hotels at government expense. Several thousand others are staying with friends or living in schools.

In May, the Italian Parliament approved a bill to provide $8 billion over a three-year period for reconstruction. The law calls for the regional and local governments to draw up plans for permanent housing within three months.

Enzo Mosino, spokesman for the government rescue office, acknowledges that not a single permanent house has been built in the earthquake zone but stresses that careful reconstruction must take time.

"It would be a mistake to build permanent housing now," Mosino said. "You have to draw up plans. To rebuild in less time than three to seven years would be foolishness."

'Information Picketing' At DuPont Plant

KINSTON — Du Pont officials said that a group of plant employees took part in "information picketing" activities at the Kinston facility this morning in support of efforts by the steelworkers union to organize here.
 Gene Houck, plant personnel superintendent, said that "five to ten" picketers were involved in today's activities at the plant entrance, most of them employees of the Kinston facility.
 Houck, in a prepared statement, pointed out that "the steelworkers union UFWA has been trying to gain a foothold at the Kinston plant since 1974. In recent months they have increased their level of activity."
 The spokesman added, "Based on our long-standing track record and commitment in areas of employee relations, wages and benefits, we are confident that our employees have no need or desire to be represented by a union."
 Houck said that "evidence that employees consider the Kinston plant a good place to work includes a very low turnover rate, the high number of second generation employees, and a large number of applications from employee friends and acquaintances. We believe that our individual handling of employee needs will continue to be the basis for ongoing, good employee relations at the...plant."
 The personnel superintendent said the picketers carried signs today and did not attempt to prevent anyone from entering the facility.
 Houck said Du Pont sees the current union effort as "an extension of their attempts to gain more supporters among our employees." Du Pont feels the union is attempting to come between the plant and the employees, he added.
 Houck explained that by law, Du Pont can not prevent any union organizing activities on the part of employees who desire to join but the company's stance is "pro-employee" and he said traditionally it has dealt with employees on an individual basis to meet their concerns and needs.

Falwell Phone Call 'Bothers'

DALLAS (AP) — A telephone conversation between President Reagan and the Moral Majority's Jerry Falwell has angered some Texas Methodists and Baptists.

Spurgeon Dunnam III, editor of the Texas Methodist-United Methodist Reporter, said Wednesday, "I'm bothered, personally, by the type of religious folks Mr. Reagan tends to listen to."
 "I have been under the impression that Ronald Reagan, not Jerry Falwell, was elected president of the United States last fall," Dr. Presnal Wood, editor of the Baptist Standard, said Wednesday.

Saudis To Rebuild Iraq Nuclear Plant

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The Iraqi nuclear reactor destroyed in an Israeli air attack last month will be rebuilt by the Saudi government at the order of King Khaled, the Saudi information minister said.
 Crown Prince Fahd received the orders directly from the king, Mohammed Abdu Yamani said Wednesday.
 He said the decision to rebuild the reactor stemmed from Khaled's policy of standing by other Arab nations for "better or for worse."
 Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, in a speech in Baghdad, called on all peace-loving nations to help Iraq develop its own nuclear technology.
 "Prince Fahd said his majesty King Khaled had discussed this question with French President Francois Mitterrand," Yamani said, and the king "told the French president during their recent meeting in Paris that the kingdom will bear the costs of rebuilding the reactor."
 Israel justified its June 7 attack on the research reactor on grounds of self-defense, saying Iraq intended to use it to make nuclear weapons. Iraq denied any such intent.

Thousands Of Poland Farm Machines Idled

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A spare parts shortage has idled 60,000 farm tractors only days before the start of Poland's harvest, the independent newspaper Zycie Warszawy reported today, citing a new problem for the nation's already crippled economy.
 The newspaper said the tractors and 3,000 combines are out of service because they need tires, batteries and crankshafts.
 The report was released as Polish Communist leaders studied the country's economic problems behind closed doors in the third day of an emergency Communist Party congress in Warsaw.
 Some of the parts would have to be purchased abroad, the newspaper said. Such purchases would require scarce Western currency, which the country's foreign trade bank is unable to provide, it said.
 Extra currency was allotted for agriculture several months ago, but the money had to be used to pay for imports of grain, meat and fats.
 Widespread shortages have become common in Poland during this year of labor strife. Meat, flour, butter, rice and sugar are among a long list of products already being rationed, and there's no sign of improvement.
 Polish economic planners had been counting on this year's harvest to bolster the economy, but there have been warnings since winter that spare parts shortages were keeping farm equipment idle.
 Poland's chief statistical office reported Wednesday that production was down this year for tractors, autos, refrigerators, televisions and vital coal. It also reported reduced production of meat and butter.
 Supplies of milk, long a scarce item in Poland, were down 15 percent this year, the office said.
 Meanwhile, Yugoslavia reported a foreign trade deficit of $3.5 billion in the first half of this year, an increase of 8 percent compared to the same period of 1980, according to official figures.
 The Coordinating Board for Economic Relations with Foreign Countries of the Yugoslav Federal Chamber of Economy said Western imports were more than $4.5 billion, accounting for much of the national trade deficit.

East Carolina Drops Two; NCSU Wins

By The Associated Press
Campbell moved to within one game of capturing the regular season title in the North State Summer league Wednesday night by sweeping a double-header from East Carolina, 12-3 and 6-2.

In the other league game, home runs by Tracy Black and Ronnie Lee propelled North Carolina State to a 7-4 victory over North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

Steve Spain scattered nine hits and went the distance in picking up his second win in four decisions for the Camels in the opener. He was aided by home runs by Wayne Dale and Terry Strickland.

In the nightcap, Chris Didlake made his first start of the season and allowed three hits in 5½ innings. He encountered trouble in the sixth when Jack Curlings homered and Todd Evans doubled. But from the bullpen came Jeff Horne, and the Pirates were disposed of.

Phil Hunt homered for Campbell in the nightcap, while Herb Williams added a triple.

In Chapel Hill, the Tar Heels found themselves ever closer to elimination from the four-team North State tournament, which will likely be held in Buies Creek.

Mike Parrott was the winning pitcher for the Wolfpack, while John Cleetwood was the loser.

In other league news, Wolfpack pitcher Mark Roberts was named the league's player of the week.

The Pennsylvanian tossed a pair of complete-game victories last week, including a five-hit shutout against UNC-Wilmington. He also nipped Campbell 4-2, allowing seven hits in notching the victory.

'Room For Optimism,' Sec. Of Labor Says

Donovan Gives Talks A Shove

NEW YORK (AP) — The Secretary of Labor gave the baseball talks a shove — a good one, he thinks.

"I think the country should be encouraged," Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan said Wednesday after his dramatic visit here from Washington. "What I can tell you is we're excited about the fact they're back talking in a serious way."

"I've asked them to get back to serious bargaining. They have done that, and I'm pleased. The collective bargaining system is working."

Later in Washington, Donovan said further, "There is some room for optimism" about the chances of ending the first mid-season strike in baseball history.

Donovan indicated, however, that if there is no reasonably quick movement in the talks between the players and owners, they could move to Washington for closer scrutiny by government labor officials. "It is a possibility," he said.

Federal Mediator Ken Moffett had asked Donovan to step into the talks "in an effort to add new leverage to the bargaining process" and himself was optimistic about a fast settlement because of it.

"I hope it gets done tomorrow (Thursday)," Moffett told reporters Wednesday night in one of the shortest news conferences since the strike began on June 12.

With a sudden news blackout blanketing the talks in the 34-day old strike, Moffett told newsmen after four hours of negotiations Wednesday: "Both sides have decided to make no press comments. Other than that, there's not much to report."

Despite the outward hopes of Donovan and Moffett, at least one negative voice was heard in the crowd. Peter Rose, associate counsel to the players' association, just shook his head when Donovan's name was brought up.

"Nothing happened today," he said. "I am not optimistic. I've given up trying to figure this thing out. I just don't know."

Rose said that the owners made no proposals Wednesday, but that one was expected from them today.

"We're just waiting for a proposal from them," he said. "That's the only thing I can say for the record."

Donovan's appearance was the major news Wednesday in a painful strike that not only has meant the cancellation of 406 games thus far — nearly 20 percent of the season — as well as postponement of the All-Star Game, but caused some damage to the American economy.

The city of Cleveland, for one, reportedly dropped $4 million as a result of the sideline of the All-Star Game last Tuesday night and other major league cities have suffered big losses as well. Cincinnati, for example, has estimated direct losses to the city of close to $500,000.

Meanwhile, a Los Angeles insurance firm reported that it made a $2.175 million payment to baseball owners Wednesday as part of a $50 million strike insurance policy carried by the teams.

"They reinsured and laid off their liability to other insurance companies and brokers," said a spokesman for Allianz Underwriters, Inc. Los Angeles attorney Leonard D. Venger.

Allianz originally handled $19.5 million of the insurance policy, including $7.5 million of the $20 million second level that began about July 3, and it would pay $12 million of $20 million third level if the strike continues, Venger said.

Of the various insurance companies involved, Allianz is ranked second only to Lloyd's of London in the amounts carried.

The Reagan administration reportedly became involved in the deadlocked talks because of concern about the economic impact of the strike.

Donovan's appearance at Wednesday's session, the first since the owners rejected Moffett's settlement proposal last Saturday, marked the administration's initial intervention in a strike.

"He hopes it's settled quickly," Donovan said of President Reagan's views of the walkout.

The secretary added, however, that his message to the players and owners did not come from the president.

"The message was from me," said Donovan.

Long Hitters Favored As British Open Starts Up

SANDWICH, England (AP) — The long hitters started out as favorites over the lush, hump-backed fairways of the Royal St. Georges links today in the hunt for the 110th British Open golf title.

The bookies made American Tom Watson, defending champion, the favorite for the $50,000 first prize. Many of the top players touted Raymond Floyd, enjoying his best-ever season at age 38.

They all agreed on one thing. This undulating 6,829-yard, par 70 course among the sand dunes had been changed by a new watering system and the ball does not bounce and roll as on most British Open courses.

It meant some big driving was needed to clear the hillocks that bar the way to the greens.

Some players, including Watson, thought the course had been Americanized and were disappointed by the lack of bounce.

But Lee Trevino, who won the British Open in 1971 and 1972, declared it the best course he had ever seen for the championship.

"It is in beautiful condition," Trevino said. "I have never seen a seaside links like it."

The British Open began in Scotland in 1860 and it was 34 years before it was first staged in England. Sandwich has been out of favor since 1949, when Bobby Locke of South Africa won the title.

Now the old tournament was back at Sandwich again, and the new watering system was a matter of controversy.

Watson, seeking his fourth Open title in seven years, said he didn't like what he saw.

"You can't roll the ball," he said. "It's a different kind of golf from what we expect when we come to play the British Open."

Like all Britain's ancient seaside links, this one is affected by changing winds.

As the players had their final practice rounds Wednesday, the wind rose and roll as in an hour, spectators lining the 18th fairway had put on coats for the chilly breeze, taken them off when the wind dropped and the sun came out, and then put them on again.

"It can make golf difficult," said Britain's Nick Faldo, who knows the course of old. "You can reach the greens comfortably one day and then find the wind against you the next."

Faldo predicted the title will be won with a four rounds total about ten strokes below par.

That would be 270, and be the lowest winning score since 1977, when Watson won with 268 after a thrilling head-to-head battle with Jack Nicklaus on the last day at Turnberry, Scotland.

Nicklaus won the title in 1966, 1970 and 1978. Watson in 1975, 1977 and 1980.

Other past winners in contention were Trevino, 1971 and 1972, Gary Player of South Africa 1968 and 1974, Miller, 1976, and Ballesteros, 1979.

But this most famous of tournaments is always wide open. Even Arnold Palmer, 51, who last won the title 19 years ago, reckoned he had a chance.

'Itchy' Foyt In Michigan 500

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — A.J. Foyt just wants to go racing.

A virulent case of itchy feet brought about the sudden change of mind which moved Foyt to become a member of Championship Auto Racing Teams and enter Sunday's $500,000 Norton Michigan 500 Indy car race.

The 46-year-old Texan, the only man ever to win the Indianapolis 500 four times and the all-time winningest driver in Indy car racing, said Wednesday his decision was based entirely on his desire to get back in competition.

"I'm here because I want to race," Foyt said. "It had nuthin' to do with money. No amount of money could have brought me here if I didn't want to race."

"My bankers and some of my friends have been trying to talk me into retiring from racing for about 10 years, so it's not the money."

Foyt, acknowledged as one of only two or three name drivers who bring fans through the gates just by their presence at an event, has tried to remain neutral in the long-running dispute between CART and the U.S. Auto Club, the sanctioning bodies battling over control of Indy car racing.

But Foyt was forced to get a USAC license to race in the USAC-sanctioned Indy 500. And he had to become a member of CART in order to take part in this weekend's race at Michigan International Speedway.

"I think these kind of things are petty," Foyt said. "I tried to remain a neutral by running on my FIA (international) or NASCAR licenses, but USAC and CART wouldn't let me."

"I've got mixed emotions about this whole thing. This is like the baseball strike," added

Foyt, part-owner of the National League's Houston Astros. "I don't think nobody knows what that squabble's really about. And I don't think anybody really knows what the USAC-CART thing is about. It's just everybody squabbling."

"But, I also know that I can't expect to run in one or two races a year and still be competitive with these other guys who are racing 10 or 12 times a year."

"If I want to be competitive, I can't be playin' with my horses or be cuttin' hay with my tractor, like I was yesterday," the burly veteran explained. "I've got to get out here and work on the car."

"Besides, I still want to race. The day I lose the desire to win, I'll get out. But it still kills me to watch a race."

Foyt barely had time to get the car off the trailer before the opening practice session Wednesday, but he managed to turn a fast lap of 186.5 miles an hour.

The fastest lap speeds of the opening day were turned in by three-time Indy winner Johnny Rutherford and Tom Sneva, each timed at 197.8 on hand-held watches.

Others over 190 included former Indy champs Rick Mears and Bobby Unser as well as Bill Alsup, Pancho Carter, Gordon Johncock and Steve Krisloff.

The more accurate electronic timers were expected to be ready in time for today's opening session of time trials, during which the pole position will be decided.

For Linda 'Hawkeye' Page, It's Been A Long Year

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The young woman moves like a cat, gracefully gliding to the top of the key where she suddenly straightens from her crouch and rolls the basketball off her fingertips toward the basket.

Swish!

The scene repeats itself time and time again. Finally the young woman leaves the court and heads for the air conditioned lounge where she slumps on the couch. Linda "Hawkeye" Page is tired. It's been a very long year.

For Page, the year began quietly in Philadelphia. She was a senior at Dobbins Tech and a star on the girls basketball team. But by the time the end of the basketball season rolled around, Page was more than a star — she was an event.

More than 100 colleges were vying for her talents. TV stations and national magazines were nagging her for interviews, autograph seekers were hounding her at all the basketball games.

But that tends to happen when you score 100 points in one 32-minute game and break a record held for more than 25 years by a guy named Wilt Chamberlain.

Being a celebrity has its good points but it is tiring, especially for an 18-year-old young woman. "There's more to life than basketball," Page frequently reminds herself and the people around her.

All the anticipatory drama that surrounds the nation's No. 1 high school prospect's choice of a college ended when Page chose North Carolina State. "It was just right," she said. Beside that, Hawkeye Whitney played at the school. And the now Kansas City King is the reason she carries the same nickname and will wear the same No. 43 on the team.

"In the seventh grade our coach made us watch a game on TV and North Carolina State was playing," Page said. "He asked me which player I liked the best and I told him Hawkeye. Then he started calling me that and it stuck."

And it seemed quite appropriate as the years rolled by. She started for the varsity team at Dobbins her freshman years and averaged 18 points a game. It went up to 28 her sophomore year and 33 her junior year.

"I knew I had the potential to be good if I worked at it," Page said while taking a break from coaching a basketball camp at N.C. State. "I've been going to camps since the eighth grade. I always had an edge on the majority of players."

Going into her senior year, Page still was not receiving much attention despite her 33-point average the year before. Then she started averaging 40 some points a game and threw in a couple of 61-point games and an 87-point game for variety. Then the night she was supposed to surpass 2,000 points the media showed up.

When they noticed she had 50 points at halftime, they sat up and really took notice. That night she hit 41 of 57 shots from the field and 18 of 21 from the foul line. Her 100 points broke Chamberlain's city record of 90 points set in 1955.

Modestly she pointed out, "I was hot."

After the game she discovered what being a celebrity means. "When I got 98 points the people in the stands started chanting," she said. "Then when the game ended they started running at me. They surrounded me. I couldn't move. Everybody wanted an autograph. Everytime I turned around there was a microphone in my face. It was pretty stressful."

It took her hours just to get out of the gym, then she was taken the Philadelphia 76ers game where they honored her at halftime. And "it was all over the radio and TV, and people were calling me from all over the country. When I got home there were people all over my house. I tried to be cool but it was pretty frustrating."

It did not let up much. Every game from that point on sold out and she finished with a 48.2 point average.

"People forget that you're human," she said. "It always seems like they're expecting you to do something more or waiting for you to make a mistake."

Summer has not given her a break. First there was the Junior Olympics, then the basketball camps and next comes the National Sports Festival.

"It's all been kind of stressful," Page said. "It's just be play and eat, play and eat. I love basketball but sometimes I just want to go to a movie but I can't. I guess I just have to cope."

Page is human and she says normally a little "crazy." She's straight forward and says "what's on my mind."

She loves to have fun. "I even smile when I'm playing, but it's been hard to smile lately."

"I figure you only got one chance at life and you should live it up, and be happy."

She hopes to be able to play basketball, hit the books and get a college degree at N.C. State, and of course have fun.

Although she wants to be the best in basketball and make the 1984 Olympic team, Page admits, "Basketball is only a vehicle to get that degree so I can live comfortably. I don't want to be rich, just comfortable."

"But I don't get any break. That's the problem. I'm really tired."

She may get some rest but the fact she can't escape is summed up by her high school coach Tony Coma, who has coached Earl Monroe and Walt Bellamy.

"She's the best shooter I've ever seen," he said. "Not just the best girl shooter, the best human shooter. She's an unbelievable scoring machine."

That will continue to attract attention.

Chappell Hopes To Change Attitudes

BETHEL — Saying he hopes to change attitudes and get more kids involved in the Panther football program, B.T. Chappell officially accepted the new North Pitt football coach.

Chappell, a Ayden High School graduate, replaces Pat Smith, who resigned earlier this year to take an assistant coaching job at Southern Nash. Chappell had been rumored in line for the North Pitt job recently but did not sign a contract until earlier this week.

Chappell, 30, takes over a North Pitt program that has managed just one winning season in the school's history. Chappell hopes to change that, starting with what he calls "the little things."

"I have two or three main concerns going into the upcoming year," Chappell said. "I want our guys, our young men to get the idea they are winners. I want to try to change the attitude and make them discipline themselves more."

"I want to get a lot of people into the program and try to get them to practice. In the past that's been one of the problems. There were only about 20 kids who were dependable in attending practice."

"I want to make this a more sound program with a sound foundation. To do that you have to change the attitude and improve the kids' respect for football."

Chappell attended Chowan and East Carolina and has taught in the North Carolina School system for eight years, the last three at Hobpton High School. He was the assistant varsity coach and in his season Hobpton made it to the 2-A eastern finals.

Chappell was also head junior varsity football coach this past season and his team won the Capitol Area 2-A Conference. He also coached JV basketball and girls' basketball.

He is married to the former Patsy Nobles, a native of Greenville, and has three children, Kellie, 6, Tom, 2, and Steven, 6 months.

Greene Co. 9
Tarboro 7

LITTLEFIELD — Alphonza Joyner tripled and then later scored in the top of the sixth for the go-ahead as Greene County edged Tarboro, 9-7, Wednesday in the second round of the 13-year-old District 5 playoffs being held at Ayden-Grifton High School.

Greene County will now play Pitt County, a 6-1 victor over Greenville Wednesday in the tournament semifinals. Tarboro will play Washington, a 12-1 winner over Nash Co. yesterday.

With the score tied at 7-7 going into the sixth, Greene County used a leadoff triple by Joyner and an error to go up by two. Ken Gray reached on a fielder's choice to score Joyner and later scored himself on an error.

Tarboro had runners on second and third in both the sixth and seventh but could not get them home.

Both teams opened the game slugging the ball. Greene County scored four times in the top of the first, sparked by James Scott's two-RBI double. Tarboro did even better in its half of the first.

Tarboro scored six runs in the last half of the first to take a 6-4 lead. The inning including just one single but four walks aided Tarboro's cause.

Tarboro added another run to its lead in the bottom of the second, but Greene County got it back scoring once in the fourth. Greene Co. then tied the game with two runs in the fifth, sparked by Terrell Strong's RBI triple.

No one for Tarboro had more than one hit. Strong had two hits for Greene County.

Pitt-S. Hill Finals Set

Pitt County will open its Area 1 East American Legion championship battle with Snow Hill Friday night at 7:30 in Guy Smith Stadium.

East Carolina has a double-header Friday night with Campbell, forcing Pitt Co. and Snow Hill to play their opener at Guy Smith.

The best-of-five series will continue Saturday night in Snow Hill at 8 p.m. and return to Greenville Sunday. Game time and place have not been decided upon for Sunday's game.

If necessary, a fourth game will be played at Snow Hill Monday night (8 p.m.) and a fifth game Tuesday night at Harrington Field (8 p.m.).

Pitt County, which finished first in the conference during the regular season, swept its semifinal series with Wilson to advance to the finals: Snow Hill, third during the regular season, defeated Rocky Mount, 2-1.

Brown Sorry About UK 'Talks'

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. says he is sorry for any embarrassment caused by the public revelation of his negotiations with George Allen concerning the head football coaching post at the University of Kentucky.

Brown said Wednesday that he did not plan on the negotiations becoming public before he discussed the matter with UK President Otis Singletary.

"All I wanted to do was bring to the attention of president Singletary the availability of someone like George Allen," Brown said in a telephone interview from Chicago, where he was visiting industrial prospects.

"I had hoped it could be done in confidence," Brown said. "The problem is someone found out. I don't know how, but my intention was to go through Singletary. Not a word would have been said if it hadn't been leaked. I didn't force the issue."

"It wasn't my intention embarrass anyone and I apologize if I did," Brown said. "But when the thing broke open, I owed it to the public to say how I felt about it."

Brown's interest in having Allen, the former head coach of the Los Angeles Rams and Washington Redskins of the National Football League, replace current UK coach Fran Curci was first reported Friday in the Cats' Pause, a Lexington periodical covering UK athletics.

The revelation sparked controversy and a spate of comment in newspaper columns and editorials. Allen finally released a statement Tuesday withdrawing his name from consideration for the job he had not yet been offered.

Brown was quoted as criticizing the current Kentucky football program under Curci, who was 3-8 last season and has an eight-year record of 44-43-2 at UK. Kentucky has also had a number of off-the-field incidents involving its football players during Curci's tenure.

Brown said he was not necessarily looking at Allen for the upcoming season.

"I wasn't necessarily talking about this year or next but I certainly was trying to keep his interest to see if he would fit into the program at some point and time," Brown said.

"I don't see us having another opportunity like Allen in the near future," Brown said. "I am disappointed."

Brown said he thinks his actions have been misconstrued in the press.

"It is going out like I was trying to force a football coach on the university," he said. "I certainly was not. George Allen is an unusual talent and all I wanted to do was bring it to Singletary's attention."

The situation appeared to be heading toward a public confrontation between Brown and Singletary, who stood steadfastly behind Curci.

Although Brown had been quoted as saying Singletary should be spanked for opposing him, the governor said he had had a productive personal meeting with the university president Tuesday.

"We had a good visit," Brown said. "We had a very direct conversation and I accept his views. But I also gave him my thoughts on what we have to do to turn the program around."

over the type athlete he brings to the campus," Brown said. "There is rightful criticism and it needs to be handled."

Noting that he helped recruit Curci as head coach, Brown said that he had a right to be disappointed at where the football program stands eight years later.

"Perhaps I let some of my personal feelings get involved," said Brown, a UK graduate. "I just want so bad to have my state do good, win and compete. I like to think that something good will come out of this."

Dixon Trying To Buy Phils

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Millionaire F. Eugene Dixon, who is selling his 76ers basketball team, is part of a group trying to buy the Philadelphia Phillies.

Dixon wants to purchase a minority share in a group organized by Phillies Executive Vice President Bill Giles to buy the National League club, according to Giles.

NCAA May Investigate Maryland

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association is reportedly likely to investigate the University of Maryland's football program because of misuse of a telephone credit card by several players during the 1979 and 1980 seasons.

The Washington Post reports in today's editions that Maryland Chancellor Robert L. Gluckstern said he did not learn of the credit card problem, in which nine players made $6,000 worth of personal phone calls, until it was published in the newspaper Wednesday.

Gluckstern said the university is beginning to provide the NCAA with information about the incident.

The problem apparently started when assistant coach Thomas Groom gave his credit card number to All-ACC tailback Charlie Wysocki and wingback Jan Carinci during the 1979 season. Last January, a university official discovered the phone calls on Groom's credit card bill and reported them.

Allowing athletes to use a coach's telephone credit card for personal calls could violate the NCAA's "extra benefits rule."

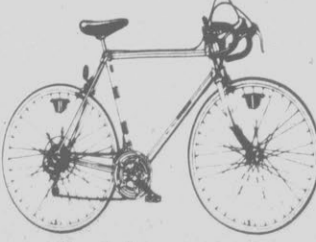

Hale McMenemin of the enforcement division of the NCAA, said he could not comment on whether Maryland will be investigated. The Post said.

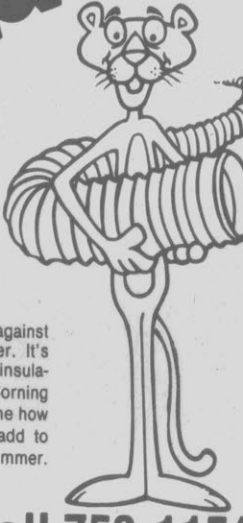

McMenemin did say that if a school is to be probed, it is told by a letter sent to the university president.

Alzado Predicts NFL Strike Near

SENECA, S.C. (AP) — One of professional football's toughest players, found at rural gas station here, has predicted a strike by the National Football League Players' Association.

Cleveland Browns defensive end Lyle Alzado made the comments to WSNW Radio Station's Wayne Morton at the Bounty Land Quik Stop.

Alzado was visiting friends in Seneca and Westminster before the Browns' football camp opens July 24 at Kent State University. The 6-foot-3, 250-lb. Alzado also boxed Muhammad Ali two years ago.

Alzado said one of the main differences between professional football and baseball is that baseball players have a free agent clause in their contracts. And that is one of the main reasons he predicts the football players will strike.

"There's no question that there will be a strike," he said. "The owners have a real hold on the players and they are not about to give in."

"It's the same as if you worked at a civilian job and you wanted to change companies for a better job with more opportunities. In the NFL, you can't change. If you do, no club will hire you ... so you would be forced to change occupations."

Another problem with professional football as a career is the longevity of a player's career. Alzado said the average player lasts four to five years in the NFL.

"Pro football is not something where you can stay until you're 65 and then retire with benefits. It's here ... then it's gone so quickly."

He said most of the players he's talked with agree that the strike will take place after the current professional contracts expire at the end of this season.

Based on what has happened in the past, I really don't think the owners are going to be the least bit compromising," he said. "I predict a long strike. I hate to see it."

Other issues which will affect football negotiations include what Alzado called "uncouth and scurrilous tactics" used by owners when an athlete is dismissed.

"I have friends who would be hunting off in some wilderness and hear on the radio that they've been traded or cut," he said. "Now that's no way for a professional business to operate."

He also said owners make enough money to pay the players salaries in the first few exhibition games. He said the rest of the season is "gravy" for the owners.

ANOTHER COSELL!

Howard's Daughter, Hilary, Filling Void For NBC

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

As if one Cosell is not enough for the airwaves, now we've got two, and show us any red-blooded American male who's going to complain about the other one.

The other Cosell talks in honeyed tones, not the trace of a rasp in her voice, is pleasant to look at, is anything but abrasive, yet, true to her heritage, is exceedingly bright and "tells it like it is."

She is Hilary (one "I," please — "I hate it when they spell my name with two I's") Cosell — Howard's daughter, and one of two reasons that NBC is closing the gap on her dad's rival network, ABC, for the nation's weekend sports audience.

The other reason is Linda Jonsson, Hilary's boss and the coordinating producer of NBC's new three-hour Saturday feature, "The Summer Season," hurriedly conceived to fill the void left by "Saturday Baseball," a victim of the current strike.

They are a potent pair, these statuesque blonde beauties, who have usurped a part of the man's world and made a success of it.

Jonsson, 31, born of Swedish parents, worked her way up from secretarial duties to become coordinating producer of NBC's Sunday "Sports World" and later undertake similar responsibility with the Summer Season when big league baseball came to an abrupt halt.

Cosell, 29, after attending Sarah Lawrence, New York University and Northwestern where she got her Master's Degree, is assistant coordinating producer and does a segment on the Saturday show called "Sports Journal." She scrapes the crust off issues and personalities and presents them with the same impact characteristic of her dad.

She does the research and the writing, but doesn't appear on camera, more's the pity.

"It's not 'investigative reporting' — that's what Watergate was," says Hilary. "Mine is more feature, magazine-oriented reporting."

Among her subjects have been Paul Newman, the actor-auto racer, and Hollywood Henderson, with his drug problems, the latter a TV first.

Jonsson, a New Englander who studied law at the University of Colorado and skied to her heart's content, toured Europe for six months after graduation and then came home to take a secretarial job in the sports department of NBC.

She watched others work on exciting assignments such as the World Series, Super Bowl and Wimbledon and said, "This is what I should be doing."

When Don Ohlmeyer came over from ABC to take the reins as NBC sports boss in 1977, he gave Linda a shot at production. Her rise has been meteoric. In none of the major networks has a woman held so important a position in the sports field.

As coordinating producer of both Saturday's Summer Season and Sunday's Sports World, her weekend is almost non-stop from 8:30 a.m. Friday to 4 a.m. Sunday.

Largely as a result of her enterprise and expertise, Sports World beat out the two rival networks this year in the May Sweeps, a trade rating system on which advertising fees are based.

Once dwarfed 3 to 1 by ABC's award-winning "Wide World of Sports," the NBC show has moved into a strong competitive position in second place ahead of CBS' Sports Sunday.

Jonsson explains that the concept of Summer Season is to make it "more relaxed and less frenetic" than what is normally seen on the big Saturday and Sunday spots.

For example, this Saturday, in place of baseball, viewers will see the Michigan 500 auto race, a boxing bout in Tampa, Fla., a rodeo in Arizona, the Tour de France cycling classic and a horse race in Ireland.

"You would be surprised at the reaction we get from the Tour de France," Linda said. "People have read about it for years. Boxing always is well received and everybody relates to auto races. They drive cars, take sharp corners and battle with traffic. What we present is a collection of events — more slow paced than the traditional anthology-type shows."

Speaking of his two feminine stars, Ohlmeyer said, "If I had 15 Lindas, I could rule the world. As for Hilary, she has a lot of Howard's traits — she is very, very bright, has dogged determination and knows sports. When she scents a story, she goes after it."

Hilary was asked how it felt being the daughter of one of the most identifiable personalities in sports.

"The highest compliment anyone can pay me is to say that I am as professional as my father," she replied. "I think he is the best."

Weaver, Tillis To Battle For Title In Oct.

CHICAGO (AP) — World Boxing Association champion Mike Weaver will fight undefeated challenger James "Quick" Tillis Oct. 3 in the Chicago area's first heavyweight title match since Ernie Terrell won the WBA crown over Eddie Machen in 1965.

The bout had been scheduled for Feb. 28 but was postponed when Weaver injured a hand during training.

Weaver, 29, last fought Oct. 25, 1980, when he retained his title by knocking out South America's Gerry Cooney in the 10th round.

The 6-1, 210-pound Weaver had reporters he also looked forward to fighting against World Boxing Council champion Larry Holmes and top heavyweight contender Gerry Cooney before retiring next year.

But the WBA champion, of Pomona, Calif., insisted he was not "stepping down in class" by meeting Tillis instead of Cooney.

"This fight is in the same class as a Weaver-Cooney fight; I'm taking it just as seriously," he said.

Weaver has a 23-9 career record with 16 knockouts. He gained the heavyweight crown March 31, 1980, in Knoxville, Tenn., when he decked WBA titleholder John Tate with 45 seconds left in the 15th round.

The 6-2, 218-pound Tillis, a native of Tulsa, Okla., who now lives in Chicago, is 20-0 with 16 knockouts and is ranked second by the WBA, eighth by the WBC and ninth by Ring Magazine. He scored his biggest victory Nov. 13, 1980, when he knocked out then third-ranked Domingo D'Elia in the fourth round at the International Amphitheatre here.

Tillis' trainer Angelo Dundee, rebuffed suggestions that "Quick" never had fought a superior opponent in his young career. "We have not yet seen the best in James," Dundee said. "He's still growing physically and Mike Weaver will bring out the best in him, and his best will beat Weaver."

The night's card also will include the world middleweight title defense of Marvin Hagler against contender Mustapha Hamsho of Syria and will be aired live on cable television. New York promoter Bob Arum told a news conference attended by Weaver, Tillis and their trainers.

"To be a champion, you got to be a fighting champion," Tillis, 24, said, referring to Weaver's lengthy layoff.

"But it's gonna be a great match," said Tillis, who also is nicknamed the "Fighting Cowboy" and was jauntily sporting a cowboy hat at the news conference. "Weaver can't be underestimated. He's a very strong fighter and I got to be in top condition."

Arum said Weaver would receive $750,000 and Tillis $250,000 for the match, while in the middleweight bout, Hagler would get $1 million and Hamsho $200,000.

See Fraud In Used Cars

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — State investigators say at least 30 used car dealers are involved in a scheme to roll back odometers on cars sold at out-of-state auctions.

North Carolina Division of Motor Vehicles officials estimate that more than 5,000 used cars have changed hands in the multi-million dollar operation.

In Yadkin County, state investigators said one used-car dealer alone was suspected of more than 100 odometer rollback incidents. When confronted with that evidence, the dealer told agents they didn't know the half of it.

"He said it's so widespread that other dealers are having to do it to stay in competition," said John Santsing of the North Carolina License and Theft Division.

"We found one (1978) model vehicle that was purchased from a leasing company in a northern state," he added. "At the time it was purchased, it had 1,002 miles on it. This dealer later resold it and at the time he resold it, it had 28-thousand miles on it."

Santsing, in an interview with WSOC-TV, said solid cases have been made against about a dozen dealers in Yadkin, Surry and Davidson counties and that formal charges were expected to be filed in about a week. He said other investigations centered on Wayne and Rutherford counties.

Rutherford has the state's largest concentration of used car firms, with 250 dealers. State agents said at least 13 dealers were thought to be involved in the scheme there.

Few sales of the rolled-back mileage cars were made to the public in North Carolina, agents said. Instead, the cars were sold to other dealers and auto auctions in Tennessee, South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

VEPCO Avers Boost In Rates Needed Now

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co. says a $210.5 million rate increase is needed now to cope with a construction program necessary to keep the lights shining.

Veeco President William W. Berry, testifying Wednesday before the State Corporation Commission, said the utility is looking at the need for $4 billion in construction by the end of 1985.

The SCC today continued hearing testimony on the utility's request for an Aug. 29 rate increase that would increase electric rates for Veeco's 1.3 million Virginia customers by 14 1/2 percent.

Other Veeco executives were to testify today and be cross-examined by lawyers for opponents of the rate increase.

Among those objecting to the full rate increase is the SCC staff, which told the commission last week Veeco could get along with a $100 million rate hike.

Berry disagreed with the SCC staff, saying construction expenditures in Veeco's budget are necessary "if we are to continue to provide adequate and reliable service as our load continues to grow — which we now project happening at a rate of 2.1 percent in summer and 2.8 percent in winter."

Such a load growth, Berry said "will necessitate construction expenditures of about $4 billion" between 1981 and 1985.

He also said that during the same period "an additional $619 million must be raised to re-finance maturing debt issues."

Some of Berry's testimony bore on Veeco's recovery of the cost of disposing of spent nuclear fuel, which the utility estimates at $21 million a year and has made a part of its rate increase package.

Under the SCC's present treatment of spent fuel costs, Berry said, Veeco is "accumulating huge commitments for future expenditures that are attributable to past and current operations. And each day that passes makes this problem worse."

Veeco, Berry testified, is "pushing forward on future generations of ratepayers obligations to pay for costs that were not incurred to serve them..."

"These costs must be recovered," he said. "They can only be recovered from customers, and the obligations are accumulating rapidly."

"We believe it is absolutely essential that we correct this problem immediately and begin recovering the funds required to satisfy the obligations."

Approximately 300 At Summer Music Camp

ECU News Bureau

Approximately 300 young musicians from the Carolinas and Virginia participated in the first session of East Carolina University's 28th annual Summer Music Camp.

The junior and senior high school musicians are affiliated with school orchestras, bands and ensembles in their home areas. The ECU program is designed to provide a wide range of musical and recreational activities during each two-week session.

Music campers live in campus dormitories and have access to social and recreational facilities at ECU. Each camper participated in small ensemble classes, clinic sessions and music workshops as well as rehearsals with one of several camp bands or orchestras.

A final concert concluded the first session.

All campers also attended regular concerts featuring professional musicians and participated in classes in conducting, arranging and general music which were taught by ECU music faculty members.

Director of the first session camp was Harold Jones of the ECU School of Music faculty.

Names, hometown addresses and instruments of area first session music campers follow:

Furniture Market Continues 'Strong'

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's regional furniture market, the nation's largest, remains strong despite dwindling participation in other regions, a spokesman said Wednesday.

"We're the least expensive of any to come to," said Bob Gruenberg, general manager of the Southern Furniture Market Center. "That makes a difference, plus the fact that there's still lots of smaller dealers out there who can get what they want when they want it from us."

Gruenberg said more people participated in this market than a similar one held this time last year, with sales figures "running neck and neck with the best we've done in the past four years."

Regional markets throughout the country operate for four days every January and July, while nationwide markets are held in April and October.

"This is a good fill-in market for small- and middle-sized retailers who want to (replenish) their stocks in time for the big fall season," Gruenberg said. "It's primarily for the mom-and-pop dealers who have just sold off their spring inventory."

Retailers usually come to the regional markets with specific buys in mind and seldom splurge, a fact which sometimes disgruntles salesmen, he said.

"You don't have to look very hard to find someone who's not upset about something," he said. "But I'll tell you this: we have 300 to 400 spaces and they're always filled."

votes in the party Central Committee, which in turn is elected by acclamation on the floor of the party congress. Polish delegates said the closed vote would make party leaders more accountable.

A Soviet television commentary on Wednesday's session said the Polish delegates had considered "procedural questions" — but did not explain that the procedures had been changed to provide for a secret ballot.

Party First Secretary Stanislaw Kania, who replaced Gierek last September while Poland was convulsed by strikes and demands for more freedom and democracy, is expected to win re-election. But he is likely to face at least six challengers.

The known contenders for the job included Tadeusz Grabski, a hard-line critic of Kania's leadership who headed a commission studying the expelled officials' responsibility for the current crisis.

The commission's report was voted onto the congress agenda by 1,455 votes to 33, official sources said, prompting the debate that led to the expulsions.

Gierek's expulsion was the first such decisive removal of a party leader in Poland's communist history. Deposed party chief Wladislaw Gomulka's membership was "suspended" after he was replaced by Gierek in 1971.

Also expelled Wednesday were former leaders Edward Babiuch, the premier whose announcement of meat price increases touched off last summer's strikes, Deputy Premier Tadeusz Pyka, labor chief Jan Szydlak, propaganda chief Jerzy Lukaszewicz, Central Committee Secretary Zdzislaw Zandarowski and Katowice party boss Zdzislaw Grudzien. All had been removed from their posts long before.

See Effort To Provoke Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the nation's two largest postal unions are charging that Postmaster General William F. Bolger "is determined to provoke a nationwide postal strike."

Moe Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union, and Vincent Sombrotto, head of the National Association of Letter Carriers, said Wednesday that the Postal Service has failed to make a wage offer or respond to the one offered by the unions.

In a joint speech to the National Press Club, the pair claimed that the Postal Service is refusing to meet with them. The only dialogue, they said, is through federal mediators.

After listening to the speech, Postal Service spokesman Walter Duka commented: "We have been at every session that has been called. That hardly can be considered a refusal to bargain."

Duka said the Postal Service has given counter proposals to the unions' non-wage demands and added that the two unions have not scaled down any of their original proposals.

Negotiations between the Postal Service and the two unions, which represent 500,000 of the 600,000 unionized postal workers, are making little progress toward reaching a new agreement by midnight Monday, when the current three-year contracts expire.

Meanwhile, the Postal Service released a study Wednesday that showed unionized workers earn more than those in almost all parts of the private economy. The only exception was mining, the service said.

The study by economist Michael Wachter of the University of Pennsylvania said postal workers earn one-third more than comparable workers in the retail and wholesale sector, 26 percent more than in local government, 13 percent more than in durable manufacturing, and 9 percent more than in construction. He said mining workers earn 12 percent more.

The report differs from one released by the two unions last week that showed postal wages moving up slower than those in other industries.

Wachter said another measurement of the attractiveness of postal jobs is the rate at which people quit them. The "quit rate" last year was 28 employees per thousand workers. In comparison, about four times as many workers quit their jobs in the highly unionized, high-wage, durable goods manufacturing industry, he said.

Naples Facing More Murders

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Police say 17-year-old Sandro Cassese was shot to death in a fight over a cup of coffee.

His slaying in a Naples cafe reflects a crime wave authorities blame on poverty, high unemployment and a chronic housing shortage exacerbated by the Nov. 23 earthquake that left 100,000 people homeless.

Three or four years ago, murder was rare here, with a homicide an average of every five months, according to Detective Umberto Leone of the police homicide squad. Now there is a murder nearly every day.

This week has had half a dozen, including the shooting of Sandro Cassese.

Cassese is one of 106 people slain in Naples so far this year — 25 percent higher than the homicide toll at this time last year.

About 40 percent of the murders are attributed to the Camorra, the Mafia-style Neapolitan crime syndicate that controls the vast black market economy of Naples and demands protection money from many of Naples' businesses.

Cassese entered a cafe at about 7 p.m. Sunday, the same time as Giorgio Improta, 24, reputed to be a neighborhood underworld boss. According to underworld protocol, Improta should have been served first. When Cassese refused to give way, a fight broke out, police said.

Cassese was shot in the chest and died on the spot. Improta fled.

When police arrived, a crowd of 2,000 had gathered around the cafe but no one would say what happened. Finally, police collared about 30 reluctant witnesses and took them to police headquarters to get their testimony. Improta is now being sought by police.

Officials say the banal excuses which trigger a shooting — a fight over a cup of coffee — reflect the struggle by rival Camorra factions for control of the contraband market and the extortion business which makes up a large part of Naples' economy.

"Contraband in Naples is like Fiat in Turin," reputed Camorra boss Michele "The King" Zaza told a television interviewer recently. "If you get rid of it, the city collapses."

Police agree. An estimated 15,000 people make their living selling smuggled cigarettes which have not been taxed. Many others steal cars or break into houses — and then sell the property back to its rightful owners at a "thieves market."

Legione says the fight against organized crime and common delinquency requires more than arresting the guilty — the city must also attack the problems of jobs and housing.

"Police can't do it all," he said. "You have to change everything, from the social structure to the economy."

Reinstatement Order Praised

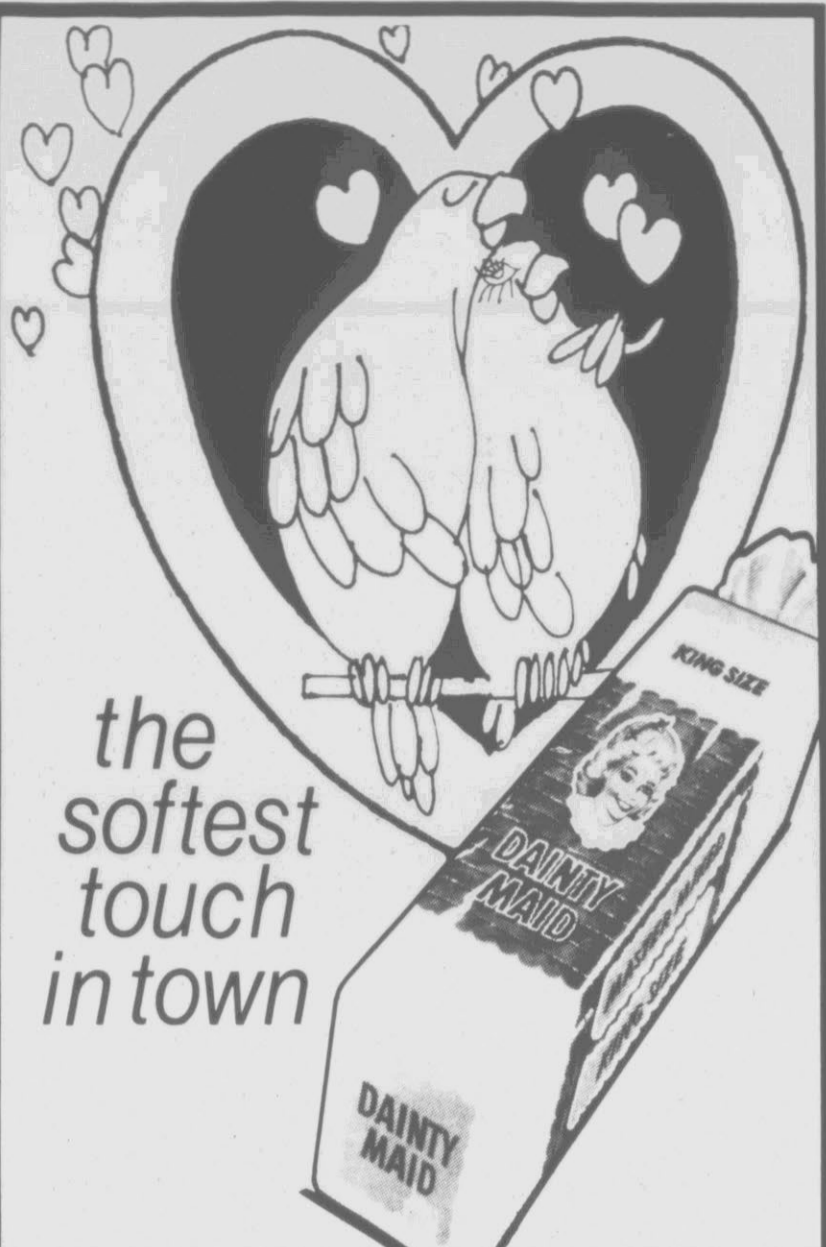

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Association of Educators President John Wilson praised a Transylvania Superior Court judge's order Tuesday reinstating a probationary teacher and ordering that she receive back pay.

Wilson said the decision by Judge William Freeman was "a landmark decision that shows that good teachers can't be dismissed at the whim of some school board."

Freeman's order came in the case of Jolene Previt-Parker, who sued the Transylvania County School Board, saying she had been dismissed in an arbitrary and capricious manner.

Mrs. Parker was employed by the board in 1976 and taught successfully there for three years.

Says Failure Assured In Quick-Fix Syndrome

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The man who changed the face of NBC Sports says the quick-fix syndrome that doomed Fred Silverman at NBC won't work for Grant Tinker either. He recommends a little hocus-pocus — at least at the beginning.

Don Ohlmeyer, the dynamic executive producer of NBC Sports, doesn't mean the kind of programming spell that Silverman said he would cast over NBC, instantaneously turning a frog into a prince.

He means the great art of illusion, giving the viewer less than meets the eye but making him think it's more.

"The first thing Grant has to do is change the public's perception of NBC," said Ohlmeyer, who defected from ABC in 1977.

Ohlmeyer resorted to fancy footwork in NBC Sports until he could improve the product. Now Tinker, NBC's new chairman, faces a similar task: raising the image and ratings of the last-place network.

"I knew right away that I couldn't change NBC Sports overnight," Ohlmeyer said. "What I could do immediately was change the form of our programming. Later we could change the content. The cosmetic changes are the easiest, and they're often perceived as what we're all about."

Ohlmeyer said the first patch-up job involved the programs' openings and promotions.

"While we were improving the form, we were working all the while on the substance."

It might have been a charade, but it worked. NBC's Sports has reached parity with its rivals in style and substance and has made some small inroads into ABC's large ratings lead on the weekends. New RCA Chairman Thornton Bradshaw praised NBC Sports as one of the bright spots of the Silverman era.

Ohlmeyer is a disciple of ABC News and Sports President Rooney Arledge, who has built ABC from a journalistic also-ran into a razor-sharp news department. It took time before ABC's news content was strengthened, but Arledge immediately put it in a prettier package.

ABC's news quality now can sell itself. In the fierce battle for network news supremacy at night, ABC is now closer to No. 1-rated CBS than it is to No. 3 NBC. The Nielsen figures from last week give CBS a 10.6 rating and a 25 share, followed by ABC's 10.1 rating and 23 share and NBC's 9.1 rating and 21 share.

NBC's problems in daytime and prime time are more difficult. All the networks report the same news. It's the entertainment programming that varies so greatly in quality and public acceptance. And already the industry's forecasters are predicting another third-place finish for NBC in 1981-82.

Tinker says it's probably too late for major surgery on NBC's announced fall programs. However, he didn't rule out placebos until NBC finds a real cure.

"If you give (viewers) something good and you leave it there and promote it properly, they will find it," Tinker said.

RCA has shown to be as impatient as the public.

"I've been here four years and we've already had three chief executive officers, three chairmen and three presidents," Ohlmeyer said. He feels CBS and ABC are better off because they are self-controlling broadcast entities and don't have to answer to a parent corporation like RCA.

"You can't solve the problems immediately. There are no quick solutions," Ohlmeyer said. "That's what Fred found out. The press and RCA expected we'd be No. 1 right away. It wasn't realistic. Fred inherited a lot of bad commitments. He had to work things off, and Grant does too."

"It's like Mayor Koch (in New York.) Before he could succeed, he had to pay for the sins of the previous administrations."

Marvin Rainwater Has Found Home In Kitchen

HEYBURN, Idaho (AP) — What's a former country and western singing star doing working over a grill in this small southern Idaho town?

"My wife can breathe here," says Marvin Michael Bee McGeehee, better known as Marvin Rainwater, who made it to the top of the country and western record charts in the 1950s with hits like "Blue Eyes Crying In The Rain," and "Gonna Find Me A Bluebird."

Rainwater is working as a cook at The Wayside Inn because, he says, "I'm not kidding myself — I'm getting too old to make it big anymore."

Rainwater, 65, and his 57-year-old wife of 11 months, Flo, had been living near Vancouver, Wash., until the Mount St. Helen's eruption dirtyed the air and made breathing difficult for Mrs. Rainwater, who has had four heart attacks.

On the advice of Mrs. Rainwater's physician, the couple decided to move east looking for clean air.

They stopped in Coeur d'Alene and Boise, where Rainwater played his guitar to pick up a few bucks, but the air didn't really improve until they reached the Heyburn area on May 9. They decided to stay.

Rainwater had been traveling around the country until he met Flo in Vancouver about a year ago.

As soon as he introduced himself as "Marvin Rainwater," he recalls, Flo told him "goodbye" because she said she wasn't good enough for him.

"But I wouldn't let her go," Rainwater remembers, his dark eyes sparkling. "I tell her I'm just an old blanket but she cusses me for saying that. She's one hell of a woman — and I just love her. I tell you, I've found happiness — and that's what's important."

The couple is retired, but Rainwater says he went to work at the cafe because "I've got to do something." The job lets him use some of the skills he acquired while studying for five years at a French cooking school. "I'm one hell of a chef," he says.

He was born in a teepee in Oklahoma in 1916. His mother, Katina Dawn Rainwater, was the daughter of a Cherokee Indian chief.

Rainwater says his father bought him his first guitar when he was 8 years old. The boy would sit listening to the family radio, strumming along.

When he was 16, Rainwater auditioned for a part as "an Indian singer" with Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys. Although he only had "a little catgut guitar," he got the part and moved to Nashville.

While playing lead and backup guitar in Nashville, Rainwater began writing songs and eventually got a contract with Decca Recording Co.

"I ran with Hank Williams for years," he says. "He was the best musician I ever knew. Hank was dying on that stage, but he was still smiling to the people."

Rainwater's first hit was "Blue Eyes Crying In The Rain," in 1947. He came out with "Gonna Find Me A Bluebird" in 1959.

He's written four new songs he's getting ready for publication. Two were for Flo — "Red Hair And Green Eyes," and their wedding song, "Under Arrest," which Rainwater says is as good as "Bluebird."

"I've played music all my life, but I really wasn't happy. I played to my audience and I gave them the best I had — and I wasn't too shabby. But she's my best audience right now," he says, pointing to his wife.

Brolin Replaces Ailing Actor

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — James Brolin has replaced ailing Sam Elliott in "The Ambush Murders," a two-hour TV film for Charles Fries Productions and CBS.

Fries announced the replacement, adding that Elliott had been hospitalized for an undiagnosed illness.

RCA has shown to be as impatient as the public.

N.C. Quarantine Order Is Taking Effect Today

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
 Associated Press Writer
 RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's quarantine on produce from California went into effect at noon today, as state agriculture officials tried to prevent the Mediterranean fruit fly from gaining a foothold there.

The North Carolina quarantine does not ban the entry of California fruit and vegetables into the state, but requires that any California produce carry certification that it is not contaminated with the Medfly. Officials said the produce would have to come from an unaffected area of California or go through a fumigation process before gaining entry.

Ken Sorensen, extension entomologist at North Carolina State University, said the insect is similar to several types of maggots that have been found in North Carolina. He said it can live in more than 100 cultivated and wild fruits and vegetables.

"It does pose quite a threat if it was to gain entrance here," he said. "We don't have citrus, but it does pose a threat to tomatoes and other vegetables as well."

Sorensen said he expected the fumigation process to take place outside North Carolina. He said the most common method of fumigation is with the chemical methyl bromide, although other chemicals can be used. Or, he said, the produce could be fumigated by temperature controls over a long period of time.

North Carolina officials joined at least six other Southern states in imposing the quarantine, but Virginia, Tennessee and South Carolina have not gone along with the procedure. California has been criticized for being "too slow and ineffective" in eradicating the insect.

"This quarantine is the least action we can take for the protection of the North Carolina food and vegetable industry," said William G. Parham Jr., deputy state commissioner of agriculture. "This pest has a short life

Man Charged With Chemical-Dumping

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A High Point businessman was charged Wednesday with littering in connection with dumping 14 barrels of chemicals along six Guilford County roads, but environmental charges are still pending in the case.

Gary Davis Smith told officials from the State Bureau of Investigation and environmental agencies that he was responsible for dumping a barrel of hydrochloric acid being cleaned up by a hazardous waste team, said Thomas Owens, director of the county environmental management office.

He also gave officials the locations of dumping sites for 13 other barrels which he said contained cleaning agents used in his truck cleaning business, Owens added.

O.W. Strickland, director of the Solid and Hazardous Waste Branch of the N.C. Department of Human Resources, said he would review Smith's case this week and decide whether to recommend additional charges.

In addition to the littering charge, the state Highway Patrol has charged Smith with failure to secure a load on his truck.

"The second charge developed from a witness seeing the barrel fall off," said Lt. Rick M. Lemmond.

Owens said Smith told him he discarded the drums of cleaning agents because "he wasn't satisfied with it and got rid of it."

State and county authorities began their investigation of the dumping Sunday night after a resident of the Vickery Chapel Road area reported finding them. The next day, investigators

Search For The 'Unsinkable'

"There will never be another like her," a crew member said years after the Titanic sank on April 14, 1912. In its time the Titanic, eleven stories high and four city blocks long, was the largest, most luxurious vessel ever sent to sea. But on its maiden voyage the British liner crashed into an iceberg off the Newfoundland coast. About 1500 of the 2200 passengers and untold wealth went down with the liner known as "the ship God himself couldn't sink." Diamonds locked in the Titanic's safe are now believed to be worth $300 million. This month Texas millionaire Jack Gumms is conducting a search for the ship's exact location. Later he plans to explore for its treasure.

DO YOU KNOW — Following the Titanic's ruin, what international organization was formed to protect ships?

GOING ONCE... GOING TWICE...

GONE!

The "235" financing program is running out of funds and may not be renewed by the federal government.

Don't miss your chance to buy one of the two homes we have left on this program.

Did you know that a family of five could qualify for house payments as low as $295.00 monthly and still make as much as $20,500.00?

Call one of our realtors to make an appointment to see one of these homes.

But hurry...first come-first served...and time is running out!

Administration Joining Baseball Strike Talks

NEW YORK (AP) — The Reagan Administration, billing itself as the voice of the American people, has stepped into the major league baseball strike following another day of fruitless negotiations in which each side rejected proposals made by the other.

Shortly after the club owners rejected Thursday night a union proposal that the entire issue be turned over to final and binding arbitration, U.S. Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan invited both sides to his Washington office today.

"I firmly believe Mr. (Marvin) Miller and Mr. (Ray) Grebey will be in Washington at my office tomorrow (Friday) and we'll take it from there," Donovan said in an interview with Enterprise Radio late Thursday night. He called the walkout "a strike against the American people, from one point of view," and said he would "try to be the voice of the American people I think has been missing at that (bargaining) table."

Frustrated after five weeks on strike, the players association offered the arbitration route as a possible solution to the walkout, now in its 36th day. The strike, which began June 12, has canceled 419 games, nearly 20 percent of the full major league season, and forced postponement of the All-Star Game last Tuesday night. But the Player Relations Committee, bargaining arm of the owners, turned down the arbitration idea.

Donovan said that Miller, head of the players' union, and Grebey, chief negotiator for the 26 major league club owners, "will be at a meeting in my office separately for conversation" and added that he was "still optimistic that over the weekend they'll be able to get this thing back on the table."

"I think Washington would provide a better atmosphere for the talks," said federal mediator Kenneth Moffett. "Several things can happen in Washington. For one thing, we can get away from this press business. I don't like the two sides reading all the papers across the country before showing up to bargain each day. We've been negotiating in a fishbowl."

Donovan noted that the government cannot invoke any laws to bring about a settlement because the strike does not affect the nation's health and welfare. But he said, "The power of persuasion of this office I hope will get this thing back on track."

Donovan emphasized that he will discuss with Miller and Grebey "exactly what has to be done," adding, "Hopefully, we can get the entire bargaining group back at the table on Monday."

He went on to say that the strike "could be settled in a matter of hours" and said if it isn't, "then the height of obstinacy and stubbornness will have been reached in collective bargaining."

Both sides made proposals Thursday which they said were aimed at ending the walkout. But each side rejected the other's ideas and the bargainers seemed at a dead end.

There had seemed to be movement on significant issues with the owners shuffling numbers in their proposal on free agent compensation and the players accepting levels of compensation for two-thirds of eligible ranking free agents.

"You reach a point," said Miller, "when you get a feeling nothing will happen to solve the issue through negotiations. The events of yesterday (Wednesday) and today (Thursday) were convincing that this will not be resolved through negotiation."

So Miller suggested the arbitration route, something both sides had previously rejected. But Grebey wouldn't buy the proposal, calling it "a public relations ploy."

In a formal statement issued by the PRC after Miller's proposal, the owners said that arbitration "is not an acceptable alternative on the issue of compensation." And Grebey noted that Miller's arbitration proposal came about one hour after talks had adjourned.

The long, frustrating day began with a new proposal submitted by management to the players. It reduced to eight the number of ranking free agents who would require professional player compensation in 1981. That number would increase to 10 next year and to a maximum of 14 in 1983. The owners also increased to 23, 25 and 27 the numbers of players who could be protected by clubs required to supply professional players as compensation for signing free agents.

But tied to the proposal was the troublesome question of service time. The owners said no service time would be credited for the period of the strike. The union has insisted throughout the walkout, which began June 12, that there could be no settlement without fucasee benefits such as eligibility for free agency and salary arbitration are computed by credited service time. A player must have six years of credited service to file for free agency and two years of service to qualify for salary arbitration.

"Our position is the contract is clear," Miller said of the issue. "The Basic Agreement says you get credited service every day you are on an active roster, disabled list or suspended. Even a player suspended for cause and found guilty by the arbitrator gets credit for service time. They (the owners) know that. There is no industry where you subtract service time (in a strike). It's never happened."

Miller said the owners also asked that as part of the deal the union drop its charges of unfair labor practice, which were tried by the National Labor Relations Board before an administrative law judge last week.

The players association rejected the owners' package, which Miller said still called for direct compensation and was not substantially different than the proposal the owners have had on the table throughout this labor crisis.

At the same time, the players offered to adjust the level of compensation

Crenshaw In 2nd Round Lead

SANDWICH, England (AP) — Ben Crenshaw birdied the 7th and 8th holes today and assumed sole control of the lead early in the second round of the 110th British Open Golf Championship.

Crenshaw started the day two over par but got back to even with an opening birdie-birdie burst and went one under for the tournament when he chipped to about 18 inches for the go-ahead birdie on the par-5 7th.

He went to two under with a second consecutive birdie on the 8th. That put him four under for the day and two shots clear of the field, most of whom were still awaiting their starting times.

Vicente Fernandez of Argentina, who shared the first-round lead with a par 70, backed off quickly. He lost four shots to par on the front side and was four over par for the tournament through 16 holes.

Nick Job of England, the only other man able to match par 70 in the first round over the 6,829-yard Royal St. George's Golf Club course, had a late starting time today.

Defending champion Tom Watson, who had an opening 73, scored an eagle-3 on the 7th, made the turn in one-under-par 34 and was two over par for the tournament through 13 holes. Jack Nicklaus, who had an 83 that ranked as the worst round of his professional career

Thursday, made a slight rally. He was one under par for the day after six holes but needed even further improvement to be assured of qualifying for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Among the late starters were Isao Aoki of Japan and Tony Jacklin of England, each with a first round 71; Bill Rogers and Greg Norman of Australia, each with a 72.

Arnold Palmer, who had an opening 72, and U.S. Open champion David Graham of Australia, very much in title contention at 71, weren't scheduled to start play until 12 noon EST.

Since the British Open golf championship began in 1860, there never was a first day like there was yesterday.

Nobody broke par. Jack Nicklaus, a three-time champion, shot 83 — his worst round in 20 British Opens — after hearing that his son Steve had been charged with drunken driving back in Ohio.

Tom Watson, defending champion, predicted the title may be won with an unprecedented total of 6-over par.

And amid all the high scoring in the shifting winds, 51-year-old Arnold Palmer lost an argument with officials over a free drop and probably was robbed of a share in the lead.

The 6,829-yard Royal St. George's links lived up to its reputation as a terror for golfers unfamiliar with the hump-backed fairways, invisible bunkers and winds that blow in from Pegwell Bay.

Only two of the 153 players, Vicente Fernandez of Argentina and Nick Job of Britain, made par 70. They shared the lead, with six men one stroke behind them — Johnny Miller and U.S. Amateur champion Hal Sutton of the United States, U.S. Open winner David Graham of Australia, Isao Aoki of Japan, Simon Owen of New Zealand and Tony Jacklin of Britain.

All the top players had predicted the course would be difficult, but probably none of them expected it to be as tough as this. The pins were awkwardly placed, the wind differed from hole to hole and the greens were slow.

At the center of the drama was the tragic figure of Nicklaus, who has never finished outside the top six in the last 15 years.

Few of the 19,000 fans who lined the undulating fairways knew of his family worries. All they saw was a great golfer

Wachovia To Serve As ECU Ticket Outlet

A Staff Report

In a move officials hope will increase ticket sales across eastern North Carolina, East Carolina University's Department of Athletics has joined with Wachovia Bank to market football tickets this fall.

Wachovia will serve as a ticket outlet for ECU tickets in 27 eastern North Carolina cities. Wachovia has 44 branches in those 27 cities.

The decision was announced Wednesday at an 11:30 press conference and is the first time ECU has ever had an outlying ticket outlet.

"This is not new, it's not novel," ECU Sports Information Director Ken Smith said. "This has been done throughout the state and is still being done."

"One of our most crucial needs is to sell more tickets," Smith said. "When people want a ticket they want it then. They don't want to have to drive here from Jacksonville or call."

The decision will make tickets more readily available throughout the eastern part of the state and, ECU officials hope, lead to more ticket sales.

"As Director of Athletics I felt it was vitally important that we make tickets available to fans of East Carolina," ECU AD Ken Karr said. "Without exception, having only a ticket outlet at Minges were are very much at the mercy of the elements on game day to sell tickets."

Nicklaus Shoots Worst Score Ever

SANDWICH, England (AP) — He didn't want to talk about it at first.

"Tell the boys I'll talk about today's round tomorrow," Jack Nicklaus said and declined to come to the press tent, where an international press corps was waiting to hear the details of the worst round of his unmatched pro career, a dismal, 13-over-par 83 in Thursday's first round of the British Open golf championship.

"I'm afraid I might say something I'd be sorry for," he said.

Later, however, Nicklaus went over it at length, steadfastly maintaining that an accident involving his son had nothing to do with it at all.

Steve Nicklaus, 18, was charged with driving while intoxicated after a one-car accident on a highway named for his famous father in suburban Columbus, Ohio, early Wednesday morning.

"No, no, nothing to do with it," Jack said.

"He fell asleep. Had a couple of beers and fell asleep. Got a couple of scratches."

"I talked to him by phone. He's all right," Nicklaus said.

And he continued to insist that had no bearing on his career-worst performance.

"I guess there's one day when you shoot the worst round of your life," he said. "I just didn't play well. There are no excuses."

But the figure that carefully kept a blank expression to hide the pain of a deeply embarrassing effort was a far cry from the Nicklaus who won 17 major professional titles and established himself as the most proficient player the game has known.

He went from trouble to trouble. He lost nine shots to par on a string of five holes. He played the back in 9-over-par 44. He found seven fairway bunkers. He spent most of the chilly, windy day in wet, knee-deep rough.

"I just didn't play very well," he said. "I kept hitting some good shots and making double bogey."

In a press release dated July 16, Karr said, "Our target market for saturation of Pirate support is within a 75-mile radius of Greenville. Wachovia will be providing access in this total area for our fans to purchase tickets."

Wachovia Regional Vice-President Tom Bennett, an ECU graduate, was the bank's representative at the press conference and said the decision was "simply an extension of a relationship" Wachovia has long had with ECU.

"I hope it works," said Bennett, who was recently elected to the ECU Board of Trustees. "We don't have any guarantees, though. I'm just happy to help East Carolina University."

Tickets will be available for purchase at Wachovia starting July 20 and continuing throughout the football season.

The tickets themselves will not be available at the banks. Instead, a football ticket voucher will be purchased and then presented at the Wachovia Window at Minges Coliseum on game day to receive the tickets.

Individual game tickets are $9. A season ticket book costs $45. A special "Economy Plan" season ticket is also available for the first time this season.

The 27 cities serving as ticket outlets are: Ahoskie, Aulander, Aurora, Bayboro, Belhaven, Bethel, Elizabeth City, Goldsboro, Greenville, Jacksonville, Kinston, La-Grange, Morehead City, Mt. Olive, Sea Level, Hamilton, Harker's Island, New Bern, Pantego, Robersonville, Rocky Mount, Snow Hill, Vanceboro, Walstonburg, Washington, Williamston and Wilson.

To End Baseball Strike

Binding Arbitration Needed?

NEW YORK (AP) — Binding arbitration is the only route left to a settlement of the major league baseball strike, according to National League player representative Bob Boone.

"At this point in time, I see it as the only viable alternative to use to reach a settlement," Boone said Thursday night. "We've exhausted every other avenue to settle the strike."

Boone made his comment before Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan announced he had called the chief negotiators to his office Friday for meetings.

Boone, the Philadelphia Phillies' catcher, spoke after negotiations in the five-week-old strike broke off and the Major League Players Association asked for the case to be submitted to an independent arbitrator.

However, management promptly rejected the idea, drawing this reaction from Mark Belanger, the Baltimore Orioles' player representative:

"What is the alternative as far as they're concerned? We feel that they (the owners) are not negotiating in good faith. We feel without this (arbitration) process that the 1981 season could be in jeopardy. We always have been trying to reach an agreement. We felt it could not be reached in collective bargaining the way they have stonewalled negotiations. We think this (arbitration) is appropriate."

Raymond Grebey, director of the Player Relations Committee and the club owners' chief bargainer, has repeatedly turned down proposals by federal mediator Kenneth Moffett to go to arbitration. And Doug DeCinces, the American League player rep, said the time may have come for Grebey to be overruled.

"It's up to the 26 owners to decide that, if they want to play baseball, they might have to not listen to Ray Grebey," said DeCinces, the Baltimore Orioles' third baseman. "It will show their true colors, won't it?"

DeCinces acknowledged that the players were taking a chance in asking a third party to decide their fate, but added that they had no choice.

"When you reach the point where no matter what you do won't work, you have to crumple a little bit," he said. "You're talking about the whole season."

There had been optimism earlier Thursday that a settlement of the strike might be near. Donovan had said he was encouraged after meeting with the two sides Wednesday, and the owners were to present a new package on the issue.

But when Grebey also announced that the plan would strip the players of credit for major-league service for at least the first 35 days of the strike, the optimism cooled.

"It's a public relations game," said Boone. "We were held for seven hours yesterday (Wednesday), and we got nothing."

provided in a proposal submitted to the two sides by Moffett last week. That proposal had been accepted by the union and rejected by management.

"The owners expressed concern that the mediator's proposal would leave two-thirds of the cases without professional player compensation, and that only one-third would require compensation," Miller said. "We've offered to double that one-third so that two-thirds would be getting direct compensation. They characterized it as no movement."

The union change would have required compensation for players moving laterally from one team to another within the same won-lost guidelines, as well as for players moving up from a team with a poor record to a team with a good one. No compensation would be required for players moving down from teams with strong records to clubs with poorer ones.

At an afternoon session, the union offered another proposal, incorporating some of the ideas contained in the last management offer. That, too, was rejected.

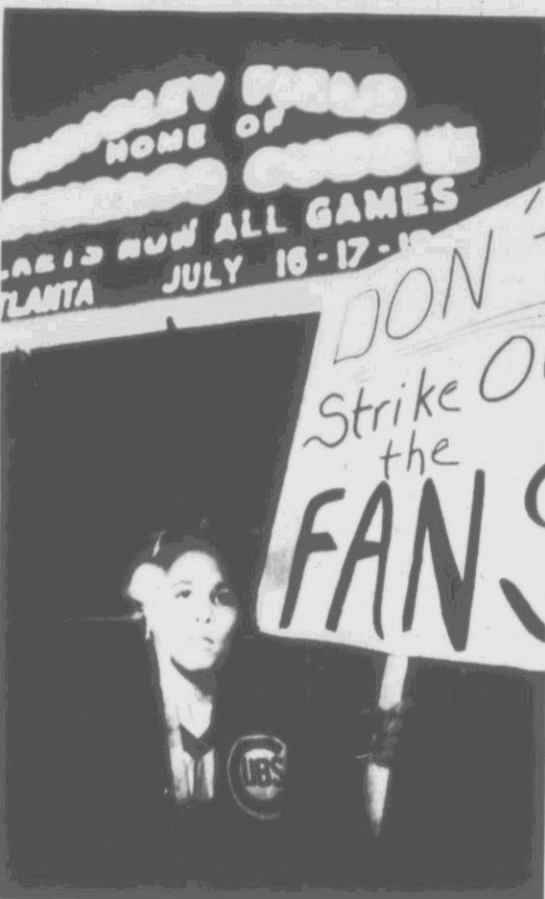

That's when the union decided to advance the binding arbitration idea.

"At this point, after all these weeks, we're still nowhere," Miller said. "It's more than an ordinary gap. It's as if we're going down different roads. Given the fundamental differences between us, we propose submitting the issue to final and binding arbitration."

Moffett said he had suggested the arbitration route to both sides throughout the strike.

"I have been urging this since before the strike and about once a week since then," he said.

Miller said the union's acceptance of arbitration was not a sign of weakness by the players.

Pitt Co. Wins, In District 5 Finals

Pitt Co. 11
Greene Co. 5

LITTLEFIELD — Ricky Farron drove in four runs and Pitt County scored five runs in the second inning to advance to the finals of the 13-year-old District 5 playoffs with an 11-5 victory over Greene County Thursday afternoon at Ayden-Grifton High School.

Greene County will now play the winner of the Washington-Greenville game and the winner will meet Pitt County for the championship Saturday in the double elimination tournament.

Washington defeated Tarboro, 14-1, in the other game yesterday.

Greene Co. jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning yesterday but Pitt Co. countered with a five-run second and never trailed again. With one gone, Scott Rawls, Lenny Langley and Farron all singled to score two runs.

Then, with two gone, Shannon Peece reached on an error, Curt Tucker singled and Steve Mills reached on an error to score two more runs. Pitt Co.'s final run came home on an error.

Pitt Co. scored another run in the fourth and then added four more runs to its total in the fifth, sparked by Scott Rawls' double and singles by Langley, Farron, Jody Vines and Tucker.

Greene Co. scored one run in the fifth and sixth for its total. Adrian Smith led Greene Co. with two hits. Rawls, Mills, Langley and Farron all had two hits for Pitt Co.

Greenville 16
Martin Co. 6

LITTLEFIELD — Van Alston drove home three runs and two other players had two RBI to lead Greenville by Martin County, 16-6, Thursday in the 13-year-old District 5 playoffs being played at Ayden-Grifton High School.

Greenville will now play Washington, a 14-1 winner over Tarboro yesterday. The winner will then meet Greene County for the right to face Pitt County for the tournament championship.

Washington defeated Tarboro, 14-1, yesterday in the other game of the double elimination tournament.

Greenville moved ahead, 3-0, after the first inning but saw Martin Co. tie the game with three runs in the top of the second. Greenville countered with three runs in the bottom half of the inning for a lead it never lost.

With one gone, Robbie Ehrmann walked and moved to second on Alston's sacrifice bunt. Clark Stallings then walked and Tyrone Jones followed with a triple to score both runners. Jones later scored on James Matthews' single.

Greenville scored twice more in the third to move ahead, 8-3, before Martin County scored three runs in the fourth to cut the deficit to 8-7. That was as close as the home team could get, however, as Greenville scored four runs in the bottom of the inning and four more runs in the sixth for its total.

No one for Martin Co. had more than one hit. Jones, Matthews and Ehrmann had two hits for Greenville.

newsmen's questions aside, but finally said he thought the ruling was unfair.

"I don't think you should be penalized because you are in an unplayable area that is part of the putting area," Palmer said. "That's all I'll say about it."

But Graham, who was paired with Palmer, spoke out more strongly.

"Arnold was 100 per cent right," the Australian said. "There should be no local rule that overrides the general rules."

"A player should not be penalized for unintentionally hitting the ball into the spectators' area. It is not right to take a man's ball from a good lie and drop it into a lie that is unplayable."

Everybody appeared to sympathize with Palmer except the tournament committee of the R and A (Royal and Ancient Club.) John Salvesen, chairman of the committee, said the rules must be observed and added: "You are bound to find some cases that are more unlucky than others."

Graham himself was in a rumpus on the fourth fairway, where he got into a difficult bunker and a group of

Duran Preparing For Return

ORWELL, Ohio (AP) — Roberto Duran stepped away from what Carl King — son of fight promoter Don King — calls "the actual place of work" — a boxing ring on the second floor of King's Boxing Camp barn.

"I'm all right," he said in Spanish, making his way across the barn's plywood floors and into the showers Thursday.

There were no cheers and no boos. A small group of local fans gingerly approached the Panamanian boxer for autographs.

Two days ago, Duran arrived here from New York. Thursday, he was getting the feel of things. Six rounds of sparring were under his belt, and he appeared to feel good about a post-workout bout with reporters and a camera crew which posted him in front of a grain harvester and Ohio corn fields for a filming session.

Duran is to face Nino Gonzalez Aug. 9 in Cleveland in a 10-round junior middleweight fight.

"He's OK," said Simon Smith, a Panamanian policeman who has been Duran's sparring partner for five years and who helped Duran work up a heavy sweat.

"He has to get his weight down a little, that's all," Smith and Luis Resto, a New Yorker, had worked Duran into his characteristic reverie of "bings," "bams" "ee's" and other guttural sounds that the boxer uses in the ring.

At 30, Duran is still one of the winningest fighters ever. He has a 72-2 record.

NCSU Puts Hold On Campbell's Title Hopes

By The Associated Press
North Carolina State spoiled what might have been a celebration for Campbell Thursday night, capturing a 4-2 North State Summer League baseball victory and denying the Camels a chance to clinch the league's regular season title.

In Wilmington, Carl Willis twirled a one-hitter in the nightcap to lead UNC-Wilmington to a 7-1 victory over North Carolina and a split of their doubleheader.

Brian Rice's six-hit performance, combined with Chip Gibson's three RBIs, gave the Tar Heels an 8-1 triumph in the opener.

Campbell's loss sliced their lead in the league to 4½ games with five contests left in the season. Their magic number remains at one.

After jumping to a 1-0 lead in the fourth, RBI singles by Chris Baird and Ray Wojkovich gave the Wolfpack a 3-0 lead.

The Camels got two of the runs back in the fifth, but a Ronnie Lee solo home run in the seventh proved to be adequate insurance.

Willis surrendered a leadoff single to Mitch McCleney in the first inning, then pitched hitless ball for the remainder of the contest.

McDougald Trying To Make Comeback

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — When James McDougald graduated from Wake Forest two years ago there was one word the tough running back didn't know much about — injury.

The Maxton, N.C., native had never been hurt enough to miss any playing time during his college football career, during which he collected an impressive collection of honors including being named All-Atlantic Coast Conference twice and ACC Rookie of the Year in 1976.

Last summer, after surprisingly being passed by in the National Football League draft, McDougald signed as a free agent with the Atlanta Falcons. The club needed help in the backfield and he thought it would be a golden opportunity to show the pros that his 5-foot-7, 190-pound frame could withstand the punishment of big-league football.

So he traded in his black and gold Wake Forest jersey for the black and red of Atlanta and prepared himself for the chance of a lifetime.

But McDougald never got that chance last season. Just two weeks into training camp, he was sidelined for the year by painful back injury caused by a twisted vertebrae.

This summer McDougald is trying to make a comeback with Atlanta. Last Wednesday marked the first day since the injury that he felt the familiar weight of shoulder pads and helmet as the Falcons pre-season camp got underway.

His desire to get back into action is easy to understand.

McDougald would just as soon forget about the costly back injury and regain new confidence in his running talents that helped him become Wake Forest's all-time leading rusher. Missing last year hurt him tremendously and he remembers very well one of the most discouraging times of his life.

"I was lifting weights, doing one of those exercise that I learned when (head coach John) Mackovic was on that weight lifting kick at Wake," McDougald said. "I was lying on my back and didn't have anyone spotting for me. All of a sudden I felt a sting in my back but didn't think anything of it."

"But four or five days later I couldn't walk or run so I went to the doctor."

What the doctor ordered for the ailing Deacon was five straight weeks on his back and regular visits to the medical office.

The Falcons put McDougald on the injured reserve list, enabling them to keep his playing rights.

"It was really hard sitting out," he said. "Of all my years in football, I've never missed a game and then bang, you're out for a season."

"The first few days were really tough because when I came to camp, I was in the best shape ever in my life. Then I was laid up on my back and I just felt like I wanted to explode with energy."

Once he began treatments, McDougald showed very little improvement and he began getting very depressed.

But a visit to a chiropractor started McDougald down the road to recovery and he hopes the injury is history. Still, he knows the real question won't be answered until takes that first hard knock in practice.

"I feel pretty good about my chances of making the team this year," McDougald said.

"There is a lot of anticipation and nervousness, but it's mainly because of my previous injury. You know a lot of times, an injury is more mental than physical."

McDougald hopes to make the Falcons, winner of the NFL's Western Division last season, as a running back or even a specialty team member. He feels he has a slight advantage over the other rookies and free agents at Suwanee.

"It really helps out a lot that I was here last year," he said. "I've been through all it once. The peer pressure will get to a lot of them and I've also been through all that."

Atlanta coaches have taken a wait-and-see attitude with McDougald and he knows what they expect from him and vice-versa.

"Here, they don't say too much about what they expect from you," he said. "You know you have a job to do and if you do it, then fine, and they tell you you're doing your job. And if you don't, then they tell you about that, too."

Currently, McDougald and his wife are living near Atlanta. Last year, he worked as an insurance agent in his first experience in sales.

"I've been doing quite well with the company," he said. "A lot of people don't like to talk insurance much and they sort of put up a force field around them. But I've learned a whole lot. It has given me good experience and has taught me how to be a pretty good salesman."

The most important thing McDougald learned last year, though, came from the injury.

"The injury really made me realize that sports is a day-to-day thing. It can be here today and gone tomorrow," he said. "A lot of times, people get tunnel vision and all they can see is playing sports."

"Last year showed me how quick I could be out. It would just be crazy of me to neglect my family and not have some type of extra protection," McDougald added.

So, as McDougald fights another tough battle this summer trying to make the Falcons, he realizes that maybe his toughest fight has already been won — how to survive off the football field.

Collins Inks With Pats

FOXBORO — Former East Carolina running back Anthony Collins late yesterday afternoon signed a series of one-year contracts with the New England Patriots.

Collins' agent, Ken Hutcherson, would not divulge the terms or length of the contract but did say Collins was happy with it.

Collins, a 5-11, 202-pounder, finished his career at ECU as the school's fourth-leading ground gainer with 2,207 yards on 367 carries for a 6.1 average. He also returned 79 kicks for 1,939 yards, an average of 24.5 yards per carry.

Collins best year at ECU came in 1979 when he gained 1,130 yards and scored 14 touchdowns. That season he averaged 7.3 yards per carry.

Baseball Antitrust Rule Safe For Now

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Peter Rodino of the House Judiciary Committee sees little chance for legislative action to strip baseball of its antitrust exemption before next year, if then.

Rodino, a New Jersey Democrat who gained national fame for his handling of the Watergate hearings, said the subcommittee on monopoly and commercial law, which he also chairs, will need to gather more information on the impact of antitrust laws on professional sports before making a decision.

The subcommittee concluded three days of hearings Thursday on the current applications of federal antitrust laws to pro sports, such as the purchase and sale of franchises, territorial restrictions, movement of franchises, player entry and mobility and broadcasting.

The panel also is studying specific legislation to eliminate baseball's antitrust exemption, limit the movement of franchises, and to broaden the distribution of television revenues among the teams of a league.

"I think the testimony has disclosed that this committee ought to act," said Rodino. "How is the question?"

He said future hearings will be scheduled, probably after the August Congressional recess.

"It is important to schedule other hearings to get the full range of testimony," he said.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn is expected to be called, but not until after the 36-day-old baseball strike is resolved.

"We have not asked the commissioner to appear because of our reluctance to get into the strike," said Rodino.

He said he did not know whether the committee would take any action in the area of pro sports, despite the overwhelming weight of testimony calling for the stripping baseball of its antitrust exemption and putting it on the same level as other sports and businesses.

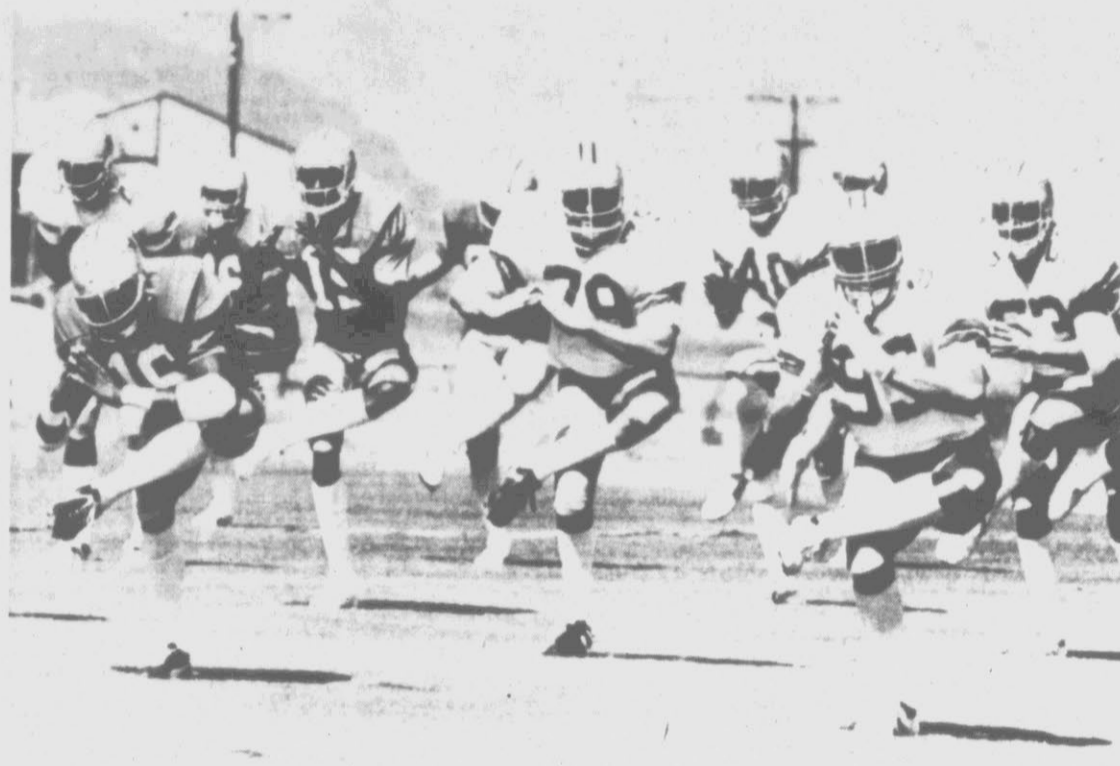

"The reason for all this (the hearings) is to decide whether we should act," he said. "We're setting the groundwork. There is a pretty broad range of subjects, a number of questions... we think we ought to be addressing those."

Rodino's comments came after two witnesses, ABC-TV's Howard Cosell and Larry Fleisher, general counsel for the National Basketball Players Association, testified that pay television will play a major role in the future of pro sports.

Fleisher said, "The predictions as to the gross revenues brought in by individual teams resulting from the new technology of television are, in many instances, beyond belief."

He said a sport could gain as much as $100 million a year, if, for example, it could attract a million subscribers who would be willing to pay $100 for a year of events.

Cosell told the committee: "The potential for pay TV will be tremendously huge. In a reasonable number of years, network television will bear little resemblance to what we see now."

Amateur Atop LPGA Tournament

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Edwina Kennedy, a 22-year-old amateur from Australia, has been playing golf ever since her grandmother taught her to swing a club at the age of 2.

Twenty years later, however, Kennedy has no desire to join the Ladies Professional Golfers Association tour.

Not even a 2-under-par 70 in the opening round of the $125,000 Western Union International Classic at the Meadow Brook Club Thursday will change her mind.

The native of Sydney hit every green as she carded a 34-36 with four birdies and two bogeys on the 6,347-yard course. Kennedy found herself in a four-way tie for sixth place in the four-day, 72-hole competition that is offering $18,750 as top money.

Sally Little, a 29-year-old South African who is the defending champion, and Vivian Brownlee shared the lead at 4-under 68.

Cathy Reynolds, Jerilyn Britz and Vicki Fergon followed with 69.

"I came over here to play in six tournaments over eight weeks," said Kennedy, who finished in an 11-way tie for 30th place in last week's Mayflower Classic in Indianapolis.

Kennedy, who is paying her own expenses ($4,000) for the two-month junket, added, "This is a once-in-a-lifetime thing for me. I saved up a lot of money and it's a worthwhile investment."

Sally Little, who hasn't successfully defended any of her 10 LPGA titles, could snap that jinx if she continues to play well.

Brownlee, who has only one championship since joining the tour in 1975, had a double-bogey and a bogey on the front nine, but countered with seven birdies that more than offset three putts on the 17th hole.

Lloyd Leads U.S. Into Cup

CHICAGO (AP) — Tennis Association and the Wimbledon champion Chris Evert Lloyd heads a team of Americans who begin competition for the Wightman Cup today against a British team led by Virginia Wade, veteran of more than 20 years of cup matches.

Pairings for the match in the International Amphitheatre were to be drawn this afternoon.

Lloyd, at 26 the world's top-ranked woman player and three-time Wimbledon champion, is teamed with Tracy Austin, Andrea Jaeger, Pam Shriver and Rosie Casals.

Lloyd, Austin and Jaeger are ranked one, two and three in the world by the Women's lately desirable in every way," said Wade, "except that the basic reason for being the underdog is that they're a better team than you are."

Shriver, a semifinalist at Wimbledon, thinks the Americans are a lot better.

"Unless some catastrophe happens, we should annihilate them," she said.

The cross-Atlantic rivalry began in 1923, when Mrs. George Wightman of Boston presented a silver vase to the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association as a trophy for women's international competition.

Great Britain challenged the United States for the cup in its first year of existence, and the rivalry was born.

Curl In Midst Of Mini-Streak

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Rod Curl says he's in one of his mini-streaks, nothing that compares to those for golf's big games, but still good enough to lead the Quad Cities Open.

"I played good at Milwaukee last week. There's a carryover here. I feel I shouldn't be over par, especially on this course," said the 35-year-old veteran, a Wintu Indian.

"Tom Kite, Ray Floyd, Tom Watson — their streaks last forever, 10-15 years. My best one has been good for four-five weeks," said Curl, a one-stroke leader going into the second round of this $200,000 tournament today.

Curl, tied for 17th at Milwaukee last week, opened with a 5-under-65 and said, "It was a very unusual round. I turned a regular round into a good round."

Curl, whose only victory in 13 Tour seasons came in the Colonial seven years ago, did not have a single four in his first nine holes, posting seven threes.

"That's the most threes I ever had in one nine," said Curl, who used the performance for a front side of 31, 4 under for the Oakwood Country Club course.

Curl's successive birdies at 14 and 15 first moved him into a five-way tie for the lead and then the sole leadership over this mediocre field, shy of the sport's big names who are competing in the British Open or taking the week off.

And he promised more of the same today, saying, "I don't see why I should be over par. I feel good. I'm healthy. I'm working hard."

Some obscure names were chasing Curl.

Dinner Theater Good Comedy

Greenville has a dinner theater, and playwright Stuart Aronson has himself a forte.

Plot-dependent comedy, that sine qua non of successful dinner theaters, requires a ludicrous story, well-timed pauses with strong laugh lines, and flexible actors to pull the whole thing off. Witness "So Who Needs Pheromones," an adult comedy with first performances on Friday and Saturday evenings at the Morocco Room of the Casablanca.

Bob Myers gave us a super performance as chemistry professor Kermit Womble, who isolates the potential aphrodisiac, Pheromones. Myers' rendition of his character brings Womble depth and sensitivity; Aronson's professor is not your basic mad scientist.

Joey Pollock "became" chemistry department chairman Adrian Pugh. Some of Aronson's best dialogue, delivered with Pollock's intense artistry, brought interrupting applause from the audience more than once. That's taste.

Elizabeth Phillips gave us Home Economic teacher Dr. Penelope Prendergast, stereotypical at first, but happily a real live woman after all. Body language is important in "Pheromones," and Ms. Phillips is fluent.

Phyllis Kivett plays the very friendly Honey Lamb, and proves once again that the girl-in-the-closet routine still works.

Jeffrey Krantz, as Bobby Bannister, Womble's assistant, delivered his best performance at the show's opening, in a scene which finds him on a desk top underneath Ms. Kivett. His character's insistence on marketing the aphrodisiac, however, does allow the growth of Myers' Womble, precipitating the heavier-than-you-figured theme: what is the responsibility owed to society by scientists?

Stage manager Chris Halsey and set designer Linda Bredin round out the combined effort which turns out to be (that endangered species) a pleasant surprise. "So Who Needs Pheromones" is good comedy, and worth a trip up north of the river.

Christine Rusch

"So Who Needs Pheromones" is being performed at the Casablanca tonight and Saturday night.

Dinner begins at 7 p.m., and curtain time is at approximately 8:30 p.m. Price per person is $20, which includes dinner, the performance and dancing afterwards. Additional production dates for the play will be announced later.

Limit Visitors For Entertainer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Officials at Methodist Hospital South, where Jerry Lee Lewis is recuperating from two stomach operations, have restricted visitors to the critically ill entertainer.

"The most important factor at this time is rest and conservation of his strength during the period of recovery," said a medical bulletin issued Thursday.

Lewis, 45, was admitted June 30, complaining of stomach pains. He was operated on the same day for a ruptured stomach and had a second operation July 10 after X-rays showed a number of abscesses had developed on his stomach.

The flamboyant rock 'n' roll star has remained in critical condition since the second operation but had been allowed visitors.

Punk-Rocker Is Again Charged

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The luxurious Manila Hotel has been ordered to pay $5,700 to a honeymooning couple bumped out of their bridal suite five hours before their time was up.

Justice Onofre Villaluz of the Court of Appeals declared the hotel failed in 1977 to meet provisions of an advertised "bridal package" that promised Rey Alcasid and his bride, Wilhelmina, wedding rites at the hotel chapel, breakfast for 100 guests and 24 hours in a bridal suite.

After the Jan. 1, 1977 wedding, the couple was told no room was immediately available, so they had to leave the hotel in their wedding clothes and wait for three hours elsewhere, the suit said.

They were then required to check out after only 19 hours in the honeymoon suite, the complaint said.

'Texas' Survives Competition

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's "Texas" premiered Aug. 4, 1980, in the toughest time slot in daytime TV — opposite top-rated "General Hospital" on ABC and CBS' enduring "Guiding Light." As recently as the first of this year, "Texas" appeared doomed, a victim of barely measurable ratings.

All that has changed, and the show approaches its first anniversary with a new executive producer, a new team of writers, a new look and a new slant on life. Even the ratings have improved a bit, from 14 percent to 15 percent of the audience in the time period in November and December to 15 percent to 16 percent today.

"We have Houston like 'Ryan's Hope' has New York City," says Gail Kobe, who took over "Texas" as executive supervising producer in March, "and we feel a real tie with that city. We've got to reflect in the show what's happening in that real town, and I think we're doing that."

It was a significant step, taking "Texas" — its roots in the fictional Bay City of NBC's "Another World" — to a real-life setting.

"I don't think it's got to be the kind of place people can't find on the map," says Ms. Kobe. "I think the audience in daytime is more prepared for reality today."

It meant giving the show a recognizable Houston backdrop, a more contemporary sound — country and western performers like Ray Price will appear periodically — and a lighting system that would clearly represent the hot, bright Texas sunlight.

"Texas" faced difficult odds from the start, the competition and the inevitable comparison with CBS' prime-time superhit, "Dallas," notwithstanding. There was the problem of introducing a multiplicity of characters, many of them imports from "Another World," as well as a story line, in an hour-long format.

"It was the first show to start at an hour," says Ms.

Kobe, a former actress who had been supervising producer for Procter & Gamble Productions, which owns "Texas" and five other daytime shows. "It's very difficult to fill that much time with a large cast, and not leave the viewer confused."

"With a daily show, you have to let the audience know who to root for," she says. "And if you're trying to begin a story, too, no one's going to keep track."

The changes began even before Ms. Kobe took the show from Paul Rauch, who had faced the seemingly impossible task of producing both "Texas" and "Another World" simultaneously. Beverlee McKinsey, whose generally unpleasant character, Iris, had come to "Texas" from "Another World" as a young ingenue, was given back her mean streak.

"She had become a sweet woman," Ms. Kobe says, "and the audience was used to seeing her do terrible things. It just didn't work."

Joyce and Bill Corrington, who had created the show with Rauch, were replaced as head writers in February by Dorothy Purser and Samuel Ratcliffe. Ms. Kobe came aboard the next month, hired a new lighting designer — Alan Posage — a new set designer — Richard Hankins — and suggested a faster pace for the show.

Rainwater Not Retired

ATLANTA (AP) — Country and western singer Marvin Rainwater says he'd like to exchange letters with a 65-year-old Idaho cook who claims to be Rainwater, to "see what's on his mind."

"Well, does he sing better than I do? I hope he does," said Rainwater, 56, in Atlanta this week for a singing engagement at a local club. Questions about Rainwater's whereabouts were raised after the South Idaho Press in Burley, Idaho, published a story on May 17 based on an interview with Michael McGeehee, who said he was the Rainwater who made it to the top of record charts in the 1950s with hits like "Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain," "Running Bear," and "Gonna Find Me A Bluebird."

McGeehee told the newspaper that he dropped the Rainwater name when he stopped performing. He said he had moved to Heyburn, Idaho, on May 9 from near Vancouver, Wash., because his wife, Flo, had trouble breathing after the Mount St. Helens volcanic eruption.

Mike Feiler, South Idaho Press managing editor, said, "We did everything and then some that was reasonable" to check McGeehee's story before publication, including poring over old record labels and rock 'n' roll trivia books.

An Associated Press story based on the newspaper's account was published this week in many newspapers across the country. The AP story and a photo of McGeehee were seen by Rainwater's 85-year-old father, C.P. Rainwater, in Jacksonville, Ala.

"It's not my son," he told The AP by telephone. "It's nothing like him."

Series Of Suits Seen In Hospital Kickbacks

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — James C. Phelps' admission last week that he took $567,500 in illegal kickbacks as administrator of Wesley Long Community Hospital may set off a series of lawsuits and tax and insurance claims.

Hospital attorneys Wednesday filed suit against Phelps and the Greensboro contractors who paid the kickbacks, W. Boyd Brame and Gary D. Jobe, seeking to recover money lost to the fraud.

Earlier Brame filed his own suit, asking a federal judge to determine the ownership of $229,000 he says Phelps gave him in May 1980, about a month after a federal probe into hospital financial affairs began.

The criminal case against Phelps, Brame and Jobe, who have pleaded guilty to a variety of federal charges, was expected to be closed after sentencing of the three today in U.S. District Court.

Phelps, 52, faces a possible 15 years in prison and a $16,000 fine on three counts of mail fraud, obstruction of justice and tax evasion. Brame, 36, who cooperated with investigators in building a case against Phelps, could serve a maximum of three years and pay a $5,000 fine for tax evasion. Jobe, 35, faces a maximum of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine for a misdemeanor mail fraud charge.

But civil litigation resulting from the kickback scheme is likely to continue.

Attorneys say Medicare and Medicaid officials may deduct from future payments to the hospital the money overpaid in the past due to inflated cost reports submitted during the time of the kickback scheme. Medicare, which pays medical bills for the elderly, and Medicaid, which serves the poor, together pay the bills of about 40 percent of Wesley Long patients, according to hospital sources.

Blue Cross-Blue Shield of North Carolina and other private insurance companies may similarly ask Wesley Long for the return of money overpaid on behalf of patients covered by their policies. Blue Cross insures about 20 percent of Wesley Long patients, with the remaining 40 percent divided between various other private insurers.

Wesley Long will probably bring claims against Aetna Life and Casualty Co., which insures the hospital against employee fraud.

If it pays the hospital's claims, Aetna then has the right to seek to recover its own losses from Phelps and others by means of civil suits.

The Internal Revenue Service will probably pursue Phelps and Brame for the federal income taxes they have said were unpaid. In the grand jury indictments against the two, the government says Phelps owes $284,109.69 in taxes underpaid from 1975 to 1979. It says Brame underpaid his taxes during the same period but does not say by what amount.

Former Wesley Long

employees Harvey E. McGehee Jr. of Greensboro and Al Braxton of Snow Camp in Alamance County both say they are considering suing Phelps or the hospital. McGehee and Braxton claim they were dismissed because Phelps thought they were revealing his illicit activities to outside authorities.

Hunt Will Seek To Halt Leases

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A spokesman for Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday that the administration plans to file suit Friday or early next week to halt the sale of leases for oil and gas drilling off the North Carolina coast.

The suit, to be filed against the U.S. Interior Department, is directed against the sale of six lease tracts for oil and gas exploration within 25

Accidents Investigated By Police

An estimated $3,900 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from an 8:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets involving cars driven by Robert Alan Wicks of 216 Beth St., and Bernard Paige of 1605 Hopkins Dr.

Damage was estimated at $1,500 to the Wicks car and $500 to the Paige vehicle by investigators who charged Paige with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Eugene Douglas Fallon of 1505 Mills St. was charged with exceeding a safe speed following investigation of a 4:05 p.m. collision on Elm Street, 100 feet north of the 14th Street intersection.

Police said the Fallon car collided with an auto driven by Avon Hope of Farmville, causing an estimated $100 damage to the Hope car and $1,000 damage to the Fallon car.

Trucks driven by Charles Hubert Hagan Jr. of 504 Eleanor St. and Jackson Theoffice Baker of 1119 South Overlook Dr. collided about 4:20 p.m. at the intersection of Greene Street and Airport Road, resulting in an estimated $700 damage to the Hagan truck and $100 damage to the Baker truck.

Warning Flags Fly For Savers

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Without congressional help or a fast drop in interest rates, more and more banks and thrift institutions will find themselves facing severe financial trouble, top federal regulators predict.

The head of the Federal Reserve Board says, however, that a rapid drop in interest rates over the next few months "is unlikely" and ailing savings and loan institutions would be "very imprudent" to count on it.

But the chairman of both the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. say their funds to cover losses should be adequate to protect the tens of thousands of depositors that could be affected.

In the past seven weeks, about another 100 savings and loan associations have been added to the government's list of most-troubled thrift institutions, according to Richard Pratt, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

At the end of May, that list stood at 263 of the 4,700 S&Ls across the country, up from 79 just 17 months earlier. The board's Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. had no available estimate of the assets held by those problem institutions.

"Assuming interest rates continue on the same path," Pratt said, "there would be substantial pressure (on the industry) this year and again next year."

The exact number of thrifts getting into trouble since May has not been determined yet, he said, but "it will be a substantial increase — a hundred or more."

S&Ls are hurt by high interest rates because they hold many old mortgages, typically payable over 30 years, made at much lower rates. High rates reduce the value of those mortgages because other institutional investors will buy them only at a substantial discount from face value. The discount appears because other forms of investment — bonds, for example — cost less for equivalent yields.

At the same time, S&L passbook depositors are tempted to withdraw their money and put it into higher-yielding government securities or into money-market mutual funds. The S&Ls were permitted to offer their own high-yield certificates in 1978, but such certificates raise interest costs to the institution.

Irvine Sprague, FDIC chairman, said volatile interest rates could cause problems for some major banks by the end of 1982. Sprague, whose agency oversees the nation's nearly 15,000 banks, said bank failures so far have been limited to institutions with less than $100 million in deposits.

"A dismal economic scenario" occurs, he said, "there is a real possibility that there will be failures of large institutions."

As for failure prospects among the nation's 350 banks with over $500 million in deposits, Sprague said, "We could see a possibility of having to handle maybe as many as half a dozen institutions by the end of next year."

As Pratt and Sprague were appearing before a House subcommittee on monetary affairs Thursday, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker told the Joint Economic Committee that "it would be very imprudent" for ailing S&Ls to count on near-record interest rates falling in the near future.

Volcker, along with Pratt and Sprague, called on Congress to approve legislation that would help the institutions.

Volcker said legislation deregulating thrifts so they could better compete with other financial institutions would be "a first step."

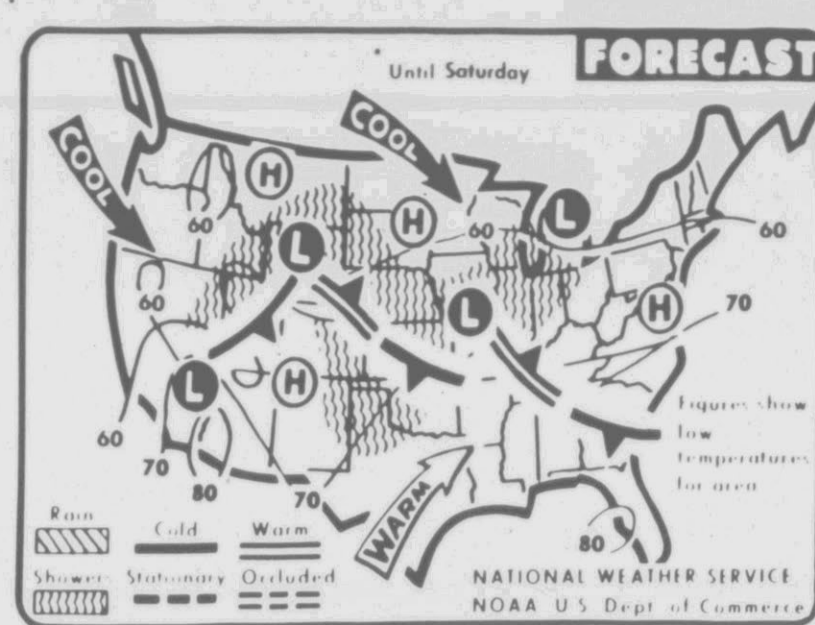

Pratt said a congressional proposal to create tax-free savings certificates to lure money back into S&Ls, termed expensive and inefficient by Volcker, might help but only time would tell. The Senate approved such a plan Thursday, but the House has not acted.

Paul Horvitz, professor of finance at the University of Houston, told the House Government Operations subcommittee that failure of large banks poses the most serious problem because of the concentration of deposits in them.

To handle possible failures, the FSLIC has a fund of about $6 billion while the FDIC has a fund of some $10.5 billion.

Pratt and Sprague said those amounts are enough. "But," Pratt added, "it is a volatile situation.... When you have a $600 billion industry and a $6 billion fund there are contingencies where that will not be sufficient. But we don't expect that."

Find Sabotage At Nuke Plant

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — One act of sabotage at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick nuclear plant has been uncovered and a possible second attempt is being investigated, a CP&L spokesman said Thursday.

Mac Harris, of CP&L's Raleigh office, told The Associated Press that in the first incident dirt, gravel and other foreign substances were found May 18 in the lubricating system of the Unit 1 turbine generator.

He said the first act was considered to be "deliberate" and occurred while the reactor was out of service for scheduled maintenance. It was reported to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Harris added.

"There was no question that someone was attempting to damage the system," he added.

Donald F. Johnson, senior resident inspector for the commission at the Brunswick plant, said the incident "was obvious sabotage."

Last week, while Unit 1 was being returned to service, more debris slowed the turbine to a stop, said Caudle Julian, chief of the reactor operations section of the NRC in Atlanta. An investigation turned up small bits of foreign metal imbedded in the turbine bearings, he said, adding that such metals are not naturally found in the lubrication wats.

Officials said the debris could be responsible for keeping the unit off line until September.

But officials declined to say what the sabotage was.

Plant Manager Charles Dietz said, "The investigation is too premature to arrive at any conclusion."

But Johnson went further, saying he did not think it was deliberate.

"It appears right now to be a result of a poor quality of maintenance activities and shoddy workmanship," he said.

CP&L investigators have removed four of the 10 Unit 1 bearings to determine the extent of the damage. Dietz said, Two of these four "exhibited a moderate degree of damage."

The other bearings are now being removed for investigation, he said, but he could not estimate how long the investigation would take, nor was he able to estimate the cost of the damaged equipment.

Meanwhile, Harris said the investigation has not linked the two incidents.

"We have no reason to connect the two except that they were on the same system," he said.

Harris said both CP&L employees and contract laborers routinely work in the area of the turbine lubrication system, and CP&L management and supervisory personnel oversee work done in that area.

Harris said there was no danger that the damage would affect the reactor at the plant.

"That is not a part of the nuclear system of the plant," he said. "You might have more extensive damage to the (turbine) system, but not to the rest of the plant."

Insect Plague

"It's a plague!" said a New Englander about this year's unusually large infestation of gypsy moths. Early each summer gypsy moth caterpillars eat huge quantities of leaves, defoliating more than 5 million acres of forests nationwide. Normally they attack only hardwood trees, which produce new leaves. But this year's near-record population has also attacked evergreens and softwood trees, and experts aren't sure whether those species will recover. By mid-July victims will feel a respite when the caterpillars form cocoons and metamorphose into moths. However, each female lays thousands of eggs that will hatch as caterpillars next spring.

DO YOU KNOW - For what unsuccessful commercial venture were gypsy moths brought to the U.S.?
THURSDAY'S ANSWER - After the Titanic's ruin, the International Ice Patrol was formed to protect ships.

Water Spout And Tornado Thursday

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - A towering water spout tore across Lake Norman Thursday afternoon, and a tornado touched down in southwest Stanly County, but no injuries were reported.

The twister touched down briefly in Locust, officials said, a town of about 1,600 just inside the Cabarrus-Stanly county line. It left a house trailer upended in its wake, but no one was inside.

The water spout, spotted west of Davidson, died after hitting land.

Scott Henderson, 15, was sitting on the porch of his family's Lake Norman home at about 3:10 p.m., waiting for a thunderstorm to hit, when he looked across the lake and saw "this white cylinder. It was up maybe 200 feet."

The spout was funnel-shaped at first, he said, but then began to dissipate at the bottom, then at the top. And it began to bend over.

"It started to get thin at the top. It started to look like a pencil," Henderson said.

The National Weather Service said the intense summer storm, born of high moisture and heat, struck across parts of the mountains and the southern Piedmont.

Rescue At Sea

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) - A U.S. Navy cruiser rescued 37 survivors who abandoned the Greek-registered ship Irene Sincerity after it caught fire, a U.S. embassy spokesman said today.

The cruiser California took the Irene Sincerity crew members aboard about 100 miles off Karachi in the Arabian Sea, said embassy spokesman James Thurber. He said the American vessel was headed for Karachi, the main Pakistani port.

It was not known how many people were aboard the 15,000-ton Greek ship.

Cheerleading Camp Is Set

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will be offering one more session of Cheerleading Camp this summer. Times for the two week session is from 3 to 5 p.m. each day Monday through Friday. Basic exercises, cheers, and chants will be learned during the session.

It is open to girls in the third through the seventh grades. Lisa McCullough will instruct. A minimum of five girls is needed to form a class. Classes meet at Jaycee Park, 2000 Cedar Lane. Cost for the session is $10. For registration call 752-4137, extension 201 before 5 p.m. today.

SUNDAY SERVICE

Rev. Tyrone Turnage and his congregation will be at Poplar Hill FWB Church Sunday night at 7:30 for the Pastor's Aid Club. Rev. J.L. Tyson invites the public to attend.

CRYPTOQUIP

Yesterday's Cryptoquip - LIVID FAN TURNED ON AFTER LINE DRIVE FOULED OFF.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: U equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The average player expects to make a normal number of errors during a session of play. However, he tends to think that the expert is immune to such human failings—an impression perhaps fostered by bridge columns. Nothing could be further from the truth! Just as the expert has a tremendous talent for making the right play, every now and then he will commit a spectacular gaffe. This example is from the European Championship some years ago, with two of Europe's finest players sitting North-South.

The bidding needs some explanation. The opening bid was the artificial club used by proponents of the Roman System to cover a wide variety of hands—in this case, opener intended to describe a strong, balanced hand with his rebid. That is what his double showed. South's jump to three no trump was gambling, based on a long, strong minor and some outside cards. North was over-impressed with his queen-jack of diamonds when he elected to pass in the close-out seat—prudence seems to suggest a retreat to four clubs, which was obviously

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices edged higher today as the market continued to drift.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, after managing a small gain in light trading Thursday, rose 1.14 to 956.62 in the first two hours of trading.

Advances led declines by a 6-5 margin, among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Mobil announced this morning that it was entering the bidding war for Conoco with an offer it said was worth $7.7 billion. The bid, involving a cash payment of $90 a share for about 51 percent of Conoco's stock, is designed to unravel Du Pont's agreement to buy Conoco for about $7.3 billion.

Conoco said its board would review the Mobil offer next week. Those developments delayed the opening of Conoco, Mobil and Du Pont stocks for the session's first two hours. Mobil opened at 30 1/4, off 1/4; Du Pont was down 1/4 at 46 1/2, and Conoco off 1 1/4 at 86.

Big Board volume totaled 19.07 million shares, up from 17.72 million at the same point Thursday.

The NYSE's composite index rose .20 to 75.90.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .22 at 370.45.

NOT JUST RESTING — Greenville Police and Fire-Rescue workers look on as a wrecker crew tries to right a Sealtest ice cream truck which overturned this morning at the corner of Elm Street and Greenville Boulevard. According to police, the truck, operated by Edward Keely Pate of Lucama, was traveling west on Greenville Boulevard when the light changed. The driver attempted to stop, but the brakes would not hold. A car was traveling north on Elm, and Pate made a hard right turn attempting to avoid the car. The truck hit the curb and flipped over, investigators reported. Since the truck was loaded with ice cream, the wrecker could not turn it upright, and a heavy-duty wrecker had to be brought from Wilson to do the job. Pate was charged with a brake equipment failure violation in the incident. (Reflector Photo by Larry Zierman)

U.S. Navy 'Strained'
LONDON (AP) — America has "a one-and-a-half ocean navy striving to carry out a three-ocean job" while the quickly growing fleet of Soviet warships places the U.S. Navy in an era of emergency, the new edition of "Jane's Fighting Ships" warns.

The survey said new Russian warships include the first nuclear aircraft carrier to be built outside the United States; 30,000-ton "Typhoon" submarines, the world's largest, with 20 intercontinental nuclear missiles, and subs with torpedo-proof titanium hulls.

The 84th annual survey of world warships, published Thursday, said Western navies are plagued by low budgets, bureaucracy and political indecision "at a time when there are grave dangers inherent in the naval situation."

Western navies are sapped by delays in planning and building, Jane's said, and ships often take 10 years to pass from design to completion, outdated before they are ready.

The authoritative survey said the Soviet Union is quickly building dozens of mighty warships as the United States and Western allies struggle to replace aging fleets. "This present era is an emergency for the U.S. Navy, described clearly (by American naval leaders) as a one-and-a-half ocean navy striving to carry out a three-ocean job," wrote Jane's editor Royal Navy Capt. John Moore. Jane's, which has close links with Britain's navy, has often warned of a Soviet naval threat and called for increased defense spending.

While NATO navies often spend half their budgets on pay and benefits, Russia pours most defense money into ships and weapons. Jane's said the Soviet navy drafts sailors, spends 53 percent of its budget on new ships, 40 percent on operations and the rest on pay and benefits. Meanwhile, a fleet of Soviet, Polish and East German cruisers, destroyers and supply ships began returning through the Danish straits Thursday from week-long maneuvers in the North Sea, Danish naval authorities said.

The joint maneuvers were seen by Danish military sources as another indication that the Warsaw Pact's naval forces in the Baltic Sea are moving their forward defense line — so far believed to be the northern mouths of the Danish straits — into North Sea waters between Denmark, Norway and the British Isles.

In Moscow, a senior Soviet defense official said Thursday that the Soviet Union is strengthening its strategic nuclear arsenal to counter increased U.S. military spending. Marshal Nikolai Ogarkov, armed forces chief of staff and deputy defense minister, said in the Communist Party theoretical journal Kommunist that the Kremlin ordered the build-up because the Reagan administration was pursuing what he called an unfettered arms race.

Unofficial estimates indicate Soviet defense spending runs between 12 percent and 14 percent of the nation's gross national product, compared with 5.5 percent for the United States, 5.2 percent for Britain, 4 percent for France and 3.3 percent in West Germany, Jane's said.

Marshall Nikolai Ogarkov, armed forces chief of staff and deputy defense minister, said in the Communist Party theoretical journal Kommunist that the Kremlin ordered the build-up because the Reagan administration was pursuing what he called an unfettered arms race.

Insect Plague

"It's a plague!" said a New Englander about this year's unusually large infestation of gypsy moths. Early each summer gypsy moth caterpillars eat huge quantities of leaves, defoliating more than 5 million acres of forests nationwide. Normally they attack only hardwood trees, which produce new leaves. But this year's near-record population has also attacked evergreens and softwood trees, and experts aren't sure whether those species will recover. By mid-July victims will feel a respite when the caterpillars form cocoons and metamorphose into moths. However, each female lays thousands of eggs that will hatch as caterpillars next spring.

DO YOU KNOW — For what unsuccessful commercial venture were gypsy moths brought to the U.S.?
THURSDAY'S ANSWER — After the Titanic's ruin, the International Ice Patrol was formed to protect ships.

 Today's Cryptiquip clue: U equals M

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The average player expects to make a normal number of errors during a session of play. However, he tends to think that the expert is immune to such human failings—an impression perhaps fostered by bridge columns. Nothing could be further from the truth! Just as the expert has a tremendous talent for making the right play, every now and then he will commit a spectacular gaffe. This example is from the European Championship some years ago, with two of Europe's finest players sitting North-South.

The bidding needs some explanation. The opening bid was the artificial club used by proponents of the Roman System to cover a wide variety of hands—in this case, opener intended to describe a strong, balanced hand with his rebid. That is what his double showed. South's jump to three no trump was gambling, based on a long, strong minor and some outside cards. North was over-impressed with his queen-jack of diamonds when he elected to pass in the close-out seat—prudence seems to suggest a retreat to four clubs, which was obviously

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A towering water spout tore across Lake Norman Thursday afternoon, and a tornado touched down in southwest Stanly County, but no injuries were reported.

The twister touched down briefly in Locust, officials said, a town of about 1,600 just inside the Cabarrus-Stanly county line. It left a house trailer upended in its wake, but no one was inside.

The water spout, spotted west of Davidson, died after hitting land.

Scott Henderson, 15, was sitting on the porch of his family's Lake Norman home at about 3:10 p.m., waiting for a thunderstorm to hit, when he looked across the lake and saw "this white cylinder. It was up maybe 200 feet."

The spout was funnel-shaped at first, he said, but then began to dissipate at the bottom, then at the top. And it began to bend over.

"It started to get thin at the top. It started to look like a pencil," Henderson said.

The National Weather Service said the intense summer storm, born of high moisture and heat, struck across parts of the mountains and the southern Piedmont.

Rescue At Sea

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A U.S. Navy cruiser rescued 37 survivors who abandoned the Greek-registered ship Irene Sincerity after it caught fire, a U.S. embassy spokesman said today.

The cruiser California took the Irene Sincerity crew members aboard about 100 miles off Karachi in the Arabian Sea, said embassy spokesman James Thurber. He said the American vessel was headed for Karachi, the main Pakistani port.

It was not known how many people were aboard the 15,000-ton Greek ship.
