Price Predictions Cheer Leaf Farmers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Most of North Carolina's tobacco farmers head to the market next week, spurred by predictions of record prices for one of the highest-quality crops ever.

"We're very optimistic," said John Cyrus, chief of the state Department of Agriculture's tobacco affairs section. "The way things look right now, we could easily have the best year since 1978."

That year, sales topped the $1 billion mark for the first time.

Tobacco marketing season in North Carolina begins Monday with the opening of the Border Belt, made up of northeastern South Carolina and southeastern North Carolina.

Opening day for the Eastern Belt, including most of central and eastern North Carolina, is Wednesday. Sales in the Middle Belt, a small area from Durham to the Virginia border, begin July 28 and the Old Belt, encompassing the North Carolina Piedmont and Virginia, opens Aug. 4.

Prices have soared an average of 12 cents a pound over last year's levels in the first three days of marketing on the Georgia-Florida belt, Cyrus said. "We'll be very surprised and disappointed if that trend doesn't continue northward," he said.

He said observers are predicting prices will average at least 15 cents higher than those of 1980, due to higher quality, increased demand and a 12-cent boost in the federal price support.

North Carolina led flue-cured states last year by producing 750 million pounds that sold for an average price of $1.46 per pound.

Cyrus and Fred Bond of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. said rainfall during the next two to three weeks could determine whether the crop is good or outstanding.

"If we get some nice showers during these weeks before August — the key time for upper leaves — we could have a year comparable to 1978 in quality and sales," Bond said.

During a June 26 meeting of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Advisory Committee in Raleigh, officials in all participating states expressed concern that dry weather could severely damage this year's crop.

Cyrus said those fears were eased by rains early this month, which virtually eliminated the possibility of outright crop failure. But he said more precipitation would be welcome.

"Actually, for all our fretting during the spring planting season when it was so dry it's turned out to be a pretty favorable year weatherwise," he said. "We haven't had lots of rain, but we've gotten it at crucial times. A little rain goes a long way with tobacco."

Early maturation has helped the plants withstand sparse rainfall, a factor sadly lacking last year, Cyrus said.

Demos Trying Preserve Minimum Soc. Security

By CLIFF HAAS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democratic leaders, reacting to "a growing public outcry," are trying to preserve the minimum monthly Social Security benefit that Congress has voted to eliminate.

But House Republican

Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois today labeled the move a "political sideshow." Budget-cutting measures passed by the House and Senate would eliminate the $122 monthly benefit, with the Senate bill making the change immediately and the House bill delaying it until next April.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, introduced a resolution Thursday on behalf of Democratic leaders aimed at retaining the minimum benefit.

Wright said the resolution was in response to a "growing public outcry" to restore the benefit.

House-Senate negotiators are working out the differences between the two bills, but under earlier agreements between leaders of both houses the conferees may not drop provisions contained in both bills.

In a letter to Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., Michel said, "I believe the resolution goes beyond the bounds of fair play and comity between the minority and the majority."

He added that forcing a vote now on the issue "would disrupt the conference proceedings for the sake of making a few fraudulent political points."

"They (members of Congress) want off the hook," Wright said. "This will give the conferees a chance to get off the hook."

"This is essentially a sense-of-congress resolution, to give them (conferees) moral sanction to do what otherwise would be flying in the face of orders from ... the House," Wright added.

If passed, the resolution would not be binding on the conferees, but it would put strong political pressure on them.

The resolution "strongly urges that the necessary steps be taken to insure that Social Security benefits are not reduced for those currently receiving them."

A study by the House Ways and Means Committee, which oversees Social Security, said about 1.5 million current recipients would have their benefits reduced if the minimum benefit is halted in April 1982.

Wright tried to have the resolution considered Thursday, but Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas, one of Reagan's conservative Democratic allies, blocked the move.

Wright said he would bring it up under a special parliamentary procedure Monday.

Polish Labor 'Tense'

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — New labor tension swept Poland today, and the extraordinary Communist Party Congress was forced into a second ballot on a new central committee.

Sources in the independent labor union Solidarity said that barring agreement, some 40,000 dock workers would report to work at 6 a.m. next Thursday but would then take part in meetings and other protests.

One Solidarity official said there would be "some unloading of ships whose cargo lies in the interest of society, in other words food."

The dockers' protest, potentially the most serious labor demonstration since a nationwide warning strike in March, would involve workers at four vital Baltic ports.

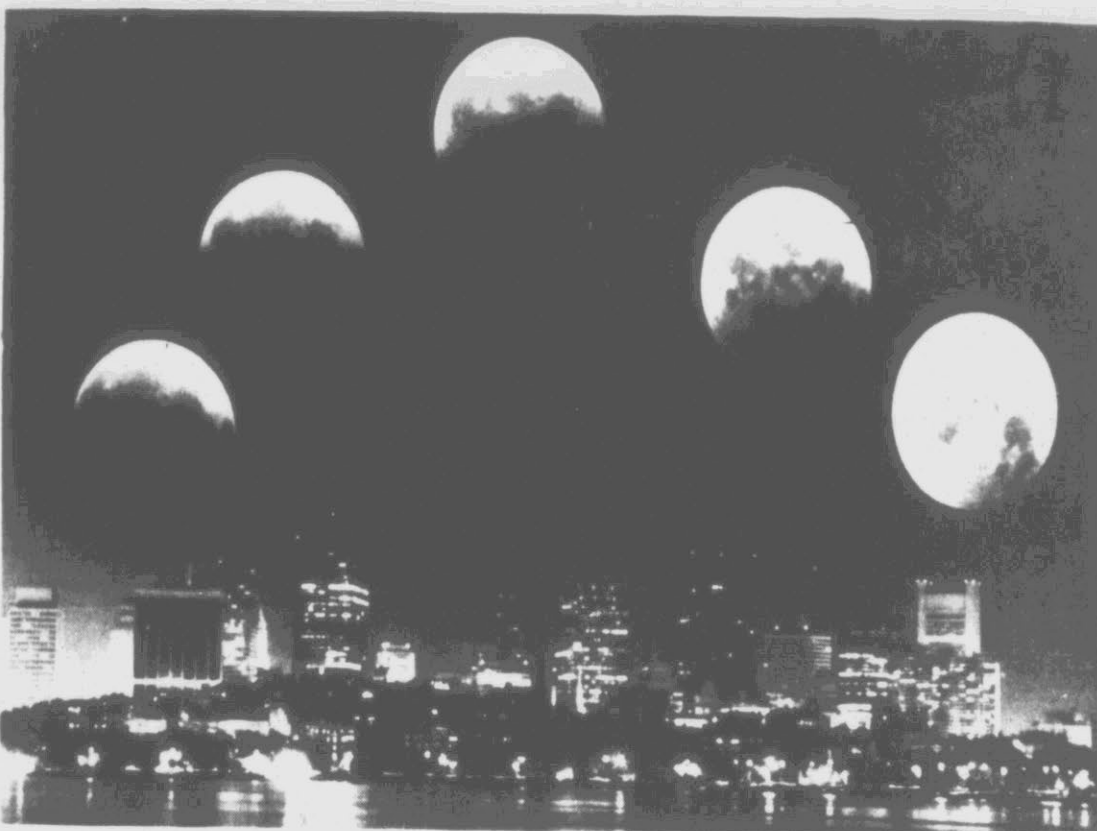

The dockers want improvements in pay and benefits and recognition under a new charter. Workers for the state airline, LOT, also have scheduled a strike. The walkout is set for next Friday unless the government allows the employees to choose their own director.

Fifteen Solidarity chapters met in the central city of Lodz today to discuss what a spokesman described as Solidarity's "losing control of factories and other industrial enterprises in the face of lengthening food lines and a recent hardening position of authorities."

Solidarity's national chief, Lech Walesa, has urged his estimated 10 million members to avoid strikes and adopt a moderate line during the party congress, in hopes of avoiding sterner repression.

Solidarity officials in northwest Pila reported that police and prosecutors searched the union's print shop Thursday night, confiscating brochures and Solidarity publications.

The union's editor in Pila, Jaroslaw Gruszkowski, was seized for interrogation, "as was another editor of a brochure entitled, 'Cobblestones Are Our Friends.' Cobblestones are a traditional weapon of urban rioters."

Lunar Eclipse In Stages

LUNAR ECLIPSE OVER BOSTON — The moon passes through several phases of its eclipse early Friday morning as it reached 55% of total about 1:25 a.m. before it started to return to its natural state. The photograph of the moon was made with a 600mm lens and the moon exposed on the same piece of film five separate times at 22-minute intervals. The photograph of the Boston skyline was taken on a separate piece of film from the same location then sandwiched with the negative with the lunar eclipse. (AP Laserphoto)

PLO Strongholds Struck From Sea, Air By Israel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israel pounded Palestinian strongholds in Beirut and southern Lebanon from the air and sea today in the heaviest anti-guerrilla action since its 1978 invasion of the southern border area. Police said more than 50 people were killed, but a radio station the death toll was over 100.

Israel said its warplanes destroyed the headquarters of two Palestinian guerrilla movements in Beirut, and that all the jets returned safely to base after the first raid on the capital in more than three years.

The Palestinians disputed the claim that headquarters were destroyed and said one Israeli jet was downed.

The wail of ambulance sirens echoed in the streets of Beirut as police reported more than 35 deaths in the capital and 15 in the port city of Sidon and the neighboring oil terminal area of Zaharani, 25 miles south of Beirut. It was the fifth Israeli air strike in Lebanon in a week.

But the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio station said more than 100 people in the teeming neighborhoods around guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat's command headquarters in the Sabra camp and the neighboring Chatilla camp were killed and more than 350 injured.

Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization said Israeli jets also blasted the guerrilla-held fishing towns of Damour and Saadiyat with repeated bombing and strafing runs that caused heavy destruction and casualties in the two targets.

500 Job Openings Soon

"We will have approximately 500 openings for seasonal work over the next three weeks," Jim Hannan, manager of the local Job Service Office said today. "We hope to have the best summer in years as far as placing people in jobs is concerned."

Hannan said the Job Service Office has been recruiting labor for about a month now to be ready for the surplus number of jobs that will be available when the local tobacco markets open.

Contacts with all the major seasonal employers indicate an excellent year in tobacco, and as a result of this indicator, the Job Service staff expects to place several hundred people into seasonal employment in the local area during the next few weeks.

"If anyone is interested in work during the next few months, we urge them to contact us immediately for possible referral to a job," Hannan said. "Requirements for the job openings are that a person must be 18 years old and be available for night shift work, second and third shifts. Some first shift work is also available," he added.

The Job Service (Employment Security Commission) Office is located at 3101 Bismarck Drive.

Greenville Man Is Slain In New Orleans

Two New Orleans residents were being held today in the murder of a Greenville man and the robbery of his traveling companion in the Louisiana city's famed French Quarter early Thursday.

Police identified the murder victim as David L. LaFone, 33, of 110 W. 13th St. in Greenville. LaFone, who died in surgery less than two hours after he was shot, was on a leave of absence from his job as manager of JJ's Music Hall in Greenville.

His companion, Tamara Reichert, 23, was not injured in the attack by a lone gunman who approached their parked car. She said LaFone was reading a city map when the gunman appeared at the car window, demanded money and then fired two shots, hitting LaFone in the abdomen and chest.

The gunman then grabbed Ms. Reichert's purse and ran, she said.

LaFone was shot about 4:35 a.m. Thursday. He died at 6:04 a.m. while undergoing surgery at New Orleans' Charity Hospital.

New Orleans Police Sgt. Alvin Petrolla and Patrolman William Parsons arrested a man identified as Alfred Miller, 20, Thursday afternoon after going to Miller's house to serve charges related to an earlier street robbery.

Parsons said Miller, who had been listening to radio reports about LaFone's death, confessed when he saw the officers. "I'm sorry, I didn't mean to kill him," Parsons quoted Miller as saying.

Parsons said the officers had not linked Miller with LaFone's shooting until they went to his home. Miller later gave a full statement to detectives, police said.

Police confiscated a .22 caliber pistol from Miller's apartment, they said.

The officers said Miller told them he and a New Orleans woman he had met earlier in the night, Margaret Susan Smith, 27, had been riding through the French Quarter when they saw the parked car and decided to rob LaFone and Ms. Reichert.

Both Miller and Ms. Smith, who voluntarily surrendered Thursday evening to the drug detoxification unit at Charity Hospital, were booked for first-degree murder and Miller for armed robbery. They were being held today in a New Orleans

WHAT'S BEST DEAL?

I received a notice in a phone bill saying I could buy the telephone in my home for a flat fee and quit paying monthly fees forever afterward. This sounds good on the surface, but I wonder what kind of maintenance problems I'll run into. And I didn't see any information about how much this action, if I take it, would reduce my monthly charge. F.B.

Betty Jo Heller, supervisor of Carolina Telephone's Phone Shop here, said this action would be very likely to save you money beginning in the second year after you take it. For instance, if you have a basic rotary-dial desk phone, you can purchase it for $21 plus sales tax and eliminate $1.25 from each month's phone bill. For your push-button desk set, you would pay $32 and knock off $1.75 a month. There's a 30-day warranty on your own set, she said, a year's warranty on newly purchased ones, which cost more than the prices already mentioned. (A new basic rotary desk set is $38.95.)

Asked about maintenance, she explained that the customer who buys his phone is asked not to call repair service before he or she brings the telephone into the office to be checked. Checking is free and repairs are charged based on what's wrong, with a $5 minimum. (Replacing a transmitter is $3.75, a receiver, $6.) If the trouble's in the line inside or outside the house, the work's still done free by the phone company, but if you call their repair personnel out and it's in the phone itself, there is a $27.50 minimum charge for the first hour of service.

Encouragement of buying one's own phone began when telephone rates were increased Apr. 16, Ms. Heller said. This was the first time the line charges and the phone charges were separated in billing.

The phone company hopes, with the new policy, to have to plan and staff for fewer repair visits and to have less money tied up in telephones, she indicated. "We definitely feel the customer benefits by the new policy," she said, "since few things actually go wrong with the phone itself anyway. We think the phone will become like an appliance you purchase and take with you wherever you move, just like an iron or a mixer you plug into the electric company's system. This will be one of the advantages to the customer, she said — he can take his phone with him when he moves and thus save on installation costs."

Ms. Heller admitted, however, that it's a matter of personal judgment on the part of the customer as to whether he or she wants the continued security of free maintenance on the telephone itself or wishes to save money month-to-month and take the risk of needing occasional visits to the phone company for repair work at set costs per job.

Oregon Inlet Five 'Copters Spray Plague Effort Seen

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., said Thursday a high-ranking official in the U.S. Interior Department had told him that the agency would attempt a compromise on the Oregon Inlet stabilization project.

Jones' comment came as state and congressional experts reviewed a letter from Interior Secretary James Watt, in which Watt told Gov. Jim Hunt that the department would not issue permits to build two giant jetties anchored on its land at the inlet because of a "tenuous legal situation."

State officials view the inlet project as crucial because without it, fishing trawlers would be unable to navigate the perilous inlet for entry into the state's new Seafood Industrial Park at Wanchese.

Jones, chairman of the House Marine Fisheries Committee and a champion of the jetties, said Assistant Interior Secretary Ray Arnett had told him the Interior Department was concerned about the negative response Watt's letter had received.

"Mr. Arnett said they are very anxious to continue to negotiate to see if they could find an area of compromise," Jones said.

Jones has threatened to introduce legislation that would remove from Interior domain the land on which the Army Corps of Engineers would anchor the jetties.

"But this would require considerable time," a Jones aide said, "and we are now greatly concerned about escalating cost estimates."

Lupton said the project cost has doubled in the last few years, to $101.7 million.

Big Fine For Poison Swamp

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A man who turned a cypress swamp into a "moonscape" with poisonous wastes from his battery-salvage business has 45 days to pay $11.2 million in damages to the state.

Jerry Sapp couldn't be reached for comment Thursday on the ruling by Marianna Circuit Judge Robert McCrary.

The damage "defies the imagination," said state Department of Environmental Regulation lawyer Randie Denker, who described the swamp and the 70 surrounding acres as a "moonscape."

Sapp's business flourished in the 1970s but has been abandoned.

Says Art Theft Just Too Easy

CHICAGO (AP) — A man who allegedly told police "how naive the art world is in their security measures" confessed to "seven or eight" art thefts in Illinois, Indiana, New York, Florida, Ohio and Wisconsin, detectives said.

Charles Richmond, 48, was arrested Wednesday night and charged with stealing art works valued at between $50,000 and $250,000. He confessed to the thefts Thursday, detectives said.

Police issued a warrant for his arrest following the June 1 theft of a $1,000 bronze bust from the St. Albus Galleries in Chicago, detective Robert F. Mettg said.

Five 'Copters Spray Plague

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — As five helicopters sprayed pesticides over 10 medfly-infested communities today, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said the aerial assault had covered half the target area and predicted the whole 175 square miles would be sprayed in two to three days.

Brown also appealed for federal cooperation in the effort to combat the fast-spreading Mediterranean fruit fly, specifically asking President Reagan to let the helicopters use Moffett Field, an airbase near San Jose. The use of the field already had been approved, a Moffett spokesman said.

The choppers were spraying a sticky, pesticide-laced bait over Mountain View, Los Altos, Sunnyvale, Cupertino, Los Gatos, San Jose, Campbell, Santa Clara, Monta Vista and Saratoga today, the fourth day of spraying.

"We believe we're going to control this pest," Brown said today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

With five choppers airborne today, "we've covered just about half the area to be sprayed ... (and) with any kind of luck at all we'll be able to finish this in two to three days. ... Give us until Sunday night," Brown said.

In the first three days of spraying, when 25 square miles were covered, the helicopters failed to "work as well as we wanted," he said. But two helicopter companies are now tackling the mechanical problems that slowed aerial spraying, he added.

Brown on Wednesday asked the president to declare three infested counties federal disaster areas. In Washington, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said today the request "has finally been received after being mislaid" to the San Francisco regional office of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and "is under consideration."

"This has to be a state, local and a federal effort ... and I appeal to the president" to let medfly workers use federal facilities in the area, Brown said.

The use of the Navy's Moffett Field as staging area for helicopter spraying operations was authorized Thursday by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, according to a Moffett spokesman.

John Shackleton, public affairs officer at Moffett, said the staging area, now at a secret location in the Los Altos hills and at the San Jose municipal airport, probably would not be moved to Moffett before Monday.

Despite the governor's optimism, the fruit fly, which attacks 200 varieties of fruits and vegetables, has moved to within 20 miles of San Francisco and within 40 miles of the rich farmlands of the San Joaquin Valley, officials said.

Not Allowed To Appear

ATLANTA (AP) — A grand jury hearing evidence against Wayne B. Williams in the latest of a string of slayings of 28 young blacks today returned to work after a judge's refusal to allow Williams to appear before the panel.

District Attorney Lewis Slaton said he expected a decision today or at the grand jury's next session Tuesday on whether to indict the 23-year-old black freelance photographer.

Superior Court Judge Sam McKenzie refused on Thursday to allow Williams and his lawyer to appear before the Fulton County grand jury and also turned down Williams' request to have the judge question each juror to see if any are biased against him. McKenzie earlier denied a motion asking that Williams be released on bond.

The judge said the barrage of recent motions filed on Williams' behalf are better left to the discretion of a trial judge, should Williams be indicted.

The prosecution wants Williams indicted for the murder of Nathaniel Cater, 27, a laborer whose body was found in the Chattahoochee River. Although police have filed murder charges against Williams, Georgia law requires that a murder suspect be indicted by a grand jury before standing trial.

Newt And Booze Didn't Mix

CHICAGO (AP) — They may routinely swallow worms with tequila south of the border, but a 29-year-old man who drank a half-pint of whiskey and then swallowed a newt on a dare in 1979 died a few hours later.

The Journal of the American Medical Association reports in its July 17 issue that the newt was of the Taricha granulosa family and contained enough toxin to kill 1,500 white mice.

The newts, found in Oregon, California and southern Alaska, are 100 times as poisonous as their East Coast cousins, the Journal says.

MEETING WITH HAIG SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Costa Rican Foreign Minister Bernd Niehaus will meet this week with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., apparently to discuss matters of mutual economic interest, government sources say.

Life As It's Lived

Even Preparing For The Vacation Is Exhausting

By GAIL MICHAELS
If there's anything more tiring than my normal household routine, it's a vacation. These seasonal hiatuses from the bump and grind of everyday life affect me in somewhat the same manner that moths affect cashmere. Just getting ready for one such leave of absence wears me thinner than the seat of an amateur cyclist's 10-year-old Levi cords.

This results in part from my children's affinity for dirt, an affinity which requires that I either let them masquerade as refugees from a West Virginia coal mine in front of strangers and in-laws alike or that I work my way down to the bottom of the laundry basket. In the course of a routine tidy-up that task could easily take anywhere from three to four months. But before vacation I have to accomplish it in three or four hours.

And when I have every possible change of clothes for every possible sudden change of season clean and folded and sorted, I have to pack them all, along with the toys, books, games, food, diaper wipes, and other assorted accessories necessary to keep two healthy, hyperactive children entertained and comfortable on or off the beach.

Phillip, who considers us ready after he has thrown a bathing suit and a toothbrush into a paper bag, cannot understand my mood on the morning we leave. Just because he has been following me from room to room with his eyes riveted on his watch while I frantically try to remember every essential without benefit of morning coffee is no reason for me to snarl and bare my teeth when spoken to, he asserts. He is going to feed me hot biscuits at Hardee's. What more could I want?

I want Shiny Vinyl, whoever thought of shag carpeting for a resort motel at which the maids regard the vacuum cleaner as Art Deco needs to be wrapped in a Baggie and thrown out to sea. Our carpet yielded up to Zachary's inspection 16 bobby pins, seven straight pins, a darning needle, three raisins, and two antique dynamites.

I also want to stretch out, close my eyes, and sun instead of dogging the footsteps of a whirling dervish with tubes in his ears who plunges into the ocean with the wild abandon of a Labrador Retriever.

And speaking of dogs, I want them diapered. No, it is not sufficient to kick sand over the spot where they, paused and stomp on it. Babies eat sand.

Finally, I want a seashell on my bedroom floor. As Phillip tossed yet another armful from his suitcase to Dan River's Mount Everest, he sighed. "I sure wish we could have stayed a full week." Thank goodness we couldn't afford it.

No Entertaining In The Hospital

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I wish you'd please keep reminding people that their friends and relatives are in a hospital to get well — not to entertain visitors.

I just got home from a 10-day stay in a hospital and I'm glad I had the good sense to tell my friends and relatives I would appreciate it if they didn't come to visit me. Nobody got mad. In fact, they thanked me for my frankness.

My hospital roommate acted so pleased when people came to see her by the dozens, but after they left, the poor thing was exhausted because she really wasn't up to having company. She later told me she really didn't want company but didn't want to hurt their feelings. I'll bet she had 50 visitors every day.

Abby, tell your readers to ask their hospitalized friends and relatives if they honestly want visitors before popping in for a surprise call. A card or telephone call would be so much more appreciated by most folks.

ON THE MEND IN BEND, ORE.

DEAR ON: Well said. And while we're on the subject, I wonder why everyone thinks a "No Visitors" sign on the door means everyone except him?

DEAR ABBY: Is my husband crazy, or am I? He has worn glasses for years, and says when he takes his glasses off, he can't hear. Do you think he should have his head examined?

MOLLY IN GREELEY

DEAR MOLLY: Not necessarily. But it wouldn't hurt to have his ears examined.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

You can trust this blueberry pie recipe. Its donor, Mrs. Harriet Bepler, has been using it for over 40 years, although along the way she altered the proportions of some of its ingredients. She modified them, brought them up to date. Now the pie is less sweet than it once was and has fuller blueberry flavor. Where did the original recipe come from? Mrs. Bepler found it in the long out-of-print "The Mystery Chef Cookbook."

In the 1930s, The Mystery Chef had a nationally broadcast radio program devoted to "talks on cooking," and he wrote several cookbooks.

In the introduction to one of his books, he said he came to the United States in 1906 from London, took up cooking as a hobby and ended by making it a career. He prided himself on cooking all the meals for his wife and himself and adopted a pseudonym only because, as he wrote, "My dear mother was horrified when she first heard that I had taken to cooking ... In deference to her wishes, I decided to use the name of The Mystery Chef."

Although, amusingly enough, he introduced his wife and himself as "Mr. and Mrs. Mystery Chef," I discovered from the copyright line in his books that his name was John Macpherson. As a cookbook collector, I've always wished he hadn't been so secretive about how and where he gathered his culinary knowledge because, in some ways, he was ahead of his time. It would be interesting to know more about his background.

4 cups fresh blueberries
1/2 cup sugar

2 tablespoons cornstarch
1/4 cup water
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 cup heavy cream
9-inch baked pie shell
Mash 1 cup of the blueberries. In a 2-quart saucepan stir together the sugar and cornstarch. Gradually stir in the water until smooth. Stir in the mashed blueberries and the lemon rind. Over medium heat, stirring constantly, cook until thickened and boiling and boil 1 minute. Turn into a bowl; cover with wax paper; cool. Fold in the remaining blueberries. Whip cream until double in volume; spread 1 1/2 cups of it over the bottom and up the sides of the pastry shell. Fill with the blueberry mixture. Garnish with the remaining 1/2 cup whipped cream. Chill until set — about 3 hours.

Better Use For Millions

Objectively, an extra four million dollars for North Carolina's schools is not a lot of money; a drop in a very big bucket, you might say.

Still, it could have been used in a variety of ways which would be appreciated. One could mention retaining a few extra teacher-aides, augmenting libraries, defraying the cost of more vocational training equipment and teaching aids...the list of possibilities runs long.

Instead, the N.C. General Assembly voted $4 million for two horse arenas; one in Raleigh, another in Asheville.

We like horses.

We have known some horses who were smarter than people (well, in an equine way). And the beauty of a thoroughbred is instinctively recognized by the merest clod.

But four million dollars for showing off horses? It's a bit much. The horses will never appreciate such generosity to pet projects during an assembly session marked by belt-tightening and tax increases that reach down into the ranks of Tar Heels who have never owned a horse, never hope to own a horse; and whose only aspirations are to assure enough food on the table, reasonable health care, and an opportunity to aim for a better life for their children.

On the surface, our lawmakers are not that close to the people.

Watts Is Controversial

A revolution in economic policies of the nation is a hallmark of the present administration in Washington. In brief, it is to create new wealth rather than continue the redistribution of existing wealth. It is hoped that such an achievement would aid more people, and in a more practicable manner than hand-outs could ever achieve.

Proponents have four years to prove their point (small wonder they are in a hurry) when you consider that even with the most favorable circumstances such a goal would probably require more time to show real results.

Attempted shortcuts are inevitable. Such would explain Interior Secretary James Watts and his attempts to open up national resources to development.

To conservationists he is a natural enemy; to others he is a messiah leading the way to reversing environmental and regulatory excesses.

Secretary Watts thus becomes one of the most controversial figures in Washington today. How he fares, and how the nation fares, is of something more than passing interest.

The Overly-Soft Sell

One of the problems with today's economy is that it's very hard to find young people who are good salesmen. Many students coming out of college are more interested in a customer's motivation than they are in closing a sale. They also have a tendency to be too honest, which can play havoc in the retail business.

A friend of mine has a dress shop here in Georgetown, and she told me of the problems she had with a young lady, a psychology major, whom she hired as a salesgirl.

This, in essence, is what happened:

The first day a lady came in the store, and the salesgirl (let us call her Miss Brampton) asked if she could be of help.

"I'd like a suit for the fall," the lady said.

"What price range?" Miss Brampton asked.

"It doesn't make any difference," the lady replied.

"Well, let me ask you this question: Do you want the suit because you need it? Or have you just had a fight with your husband, and are trying to get even by making a very expensive purchase?"

"I beg your pardon?" the lady said.

"Perhaps you suspect him of some infidelity, and you think this is the only way you can get back at him."

"I have no idea what you're talking about," the customer said.

"Spending money in anger is a very expensive form of hostility. My advice to you is to think it over for a few days. Try to patch up your differences. Buying a new suit won't save your marriage."

"Thank you very much!" the customer said frostily and left the store.

"She's angry with me now," Miss Brampton told the dress shop owner, "but in a week she'll be grateful I talked her out of it."

My friend the shop proprietor decided to let the incident pass; but that afternoon people stop and stare."

By this time, the dress shop owner decided to step in.

"Miss Brampton, if the lady wants an evening dress, let her see our evening dresses."

"No," the customer said. "Your girl is right. Why spend $500 to get a few compliments from people who really don't care what I wear? Thank you for helping me, young lady. It's true I've been insecure all these years and didn't even know it."

The customer walked out of the store.

The final straw for the dress store owner took place an hour later when a coed came in to buy a hotpants outfit, and Miss Brampton gave her 30 minutes on women's lib and then said, "All you do when you buy hotpants is become a sex object."

That night the dress shop owner put a sign in the window: HELP WANTED - NO PSYCHOLOGY MAJORS NEED APPLY another customer came in, and Miss Brampton asked if she could be of help.

The lady said, "I need something really exciting. I'm going to the Kennedy Center, and I want a dress that will knock everyone dead."

Miss Brampton said, "We have some lovely evening dresses over here for insecure people."

"Oh, yes. Didn't you know that clothes are one of the main ways women compensate for insecurity?"

"I'm not insecure," the lady said angrily.

"Then why do you want to knock them dead at the Kennedy Center? Why can't you be accepted for yourself instead of what you wear? You are a very attractive person, and you have an inner beauty you try to disguise. I can sell you a new dress that will attract attention, but then you would never know if it were you or the dress that made

Defense Bill Over Hurdle

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With House approval, President Reagan is virtually assured of the $136 billion he wanted next year to begin rebuilding the nation's arsenal. Now the Pentagon says it may need even more money in 1983.

John Beach, plans director for the Pentagon's comptroller, acknowledged Thursday that an increase in the administration's projected defense budget for fiscal 1983 is possible. But he said a decision was premature because Congress has not yet completed action on the 1982 budget.

By a 354-63 vote Thursday night, the House approved the $136 billion military authorization bill for 1982 and sent the measure to a conference with the Senate, which had passed a similar $136.4 billion version in May.

After seven days of debate on some 50 amendments, the House-endorsed bill would allow the Pentagon to set aside in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 about $52.4 billion for purchase of ships, planes, combat vehicles and other weaponry, $63.3 billion for operation and maintenance expenses and $20.2 billion for research and development work.

The total exceeds by nearly $25 billion the amount authorized for the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, and is within $400 million of the money the administration said it needed to begin rebuilding the nation's military might.

The authorization money would push the total 1982 defense budget to about $220 billion, including funds actually spent during the year.

Defense officials, meanwhile, have said Reagan's projected $254 billion defense budget for fiscal 1983 may fall some $2 billion to $10 billion short of what is needed to pay for vast increases in military buildup programs. The $254 billion estimate was made only a few weeks after Reagan took office Jan. 20.

"General discussion about a possible increase" already is under way, Beach said.

"We won't decide until about November or December" whether a 7 percent "real growth" in the defense budget for fiscal 1983 will be necessary, he said. By real growth, he meant in addition to inflation. A recent Pentagon internal memorandum suggested that the planned 7 percent real growth in defense spending over the coming five years "does not permit the services to implement all the programs planned earlier."

The memo suggested that the target may have to be raised to 9 percent.

The House, meanwhile, spent nearly half of Thursday considering — and then rejecting — amendments by liberal members that would have forced Reagan to identify $8 billion in wasteful military spending and would have prevented the Selective Service System from acquiring the Social Security numbers of draft registrants.

Instead of requiring the $8 billion in wasteful spending to be cut from the Pentagon budget, the House voted unanimously to require Reagan to report by Jan. 15 on ways to increase efficiency in the Defense Department. The amendment also would require the president to describe the implementation of any cost-saving recommendations by the General Accounting Office.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., failed by a 289-125 vote in his effort to remove provisions that could require young men to give their Social Security numbers when they register for the draft and make registration lists available to military recruiters.

Weiss and others contended that the right to privacy was at stake. But opponents said a system of cross-checking those who signed up with the names of young men enrolled in Social Security was needed to make the year-old registration program work.

In a bit of symbolic support to the ailing U.S. auto industry, the House voted 231-187 to adopt an amendment that would bar the Pentagon from buying foreign-made light trucks, vans and other non-combat vehicles unless a suitable U.S. product was not available. The measure was introduced by Reps. Elwood Hillis, R-Ind., and William Brodhead, D-Mich.

Today In History

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, July 17, the 198th day of 1981. There are 167 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On July 17, 1936, the Spanish Civil War began as General Francisco Franco led an army force in revolt against Spain's government.

On this date: In 1603, Sir Walter Raleigh was arrested for suspected complicity in a plot to dethrone England's King James I.

In 1832, Spain ceded Florida to the United States.

And in 1975, U.S. astronauts and Soviet cosmonauts linked their Apollo and Soyuz spacecrafts while in orbit.

Strength For Today

THE SEED OF TRUE WISDOM

We all remember the famous statement of Socrates that he was sure he was the wisest man in the world because he alone realized that he knew nothing.

One reason why it is so hard for people to learn is because they do not recognize the necessity for learning. They think they know quite enough already. They may be failing in life, but this is because of hard luck. They may be unhappy, but this is because of the malice and devilry of their associates.

In spiritual matters, enlightenment begins with the realization that life and its problems are too big for our poor powers and that we must yield to a higher power if we are to get through to triumph. Someone has said that man knows very little, and may someday become sufficiently aware of his own ignorance to fall down and pray. When he does, the heavens will open and help will descend. The landscape of his life will break forth into greenery and freshness. — Elisha Douglass.

Other Editors Say Make Laws Last

(The Robesonian, Lumberton)

Adjournment of the state legislature provides a bit of relief from day-to-day concern about what it might do. In the interim, before a budget session in the fall, the public gets a chance to assimilate what has been done and make adjustment to it.

Among the outstanding actions of the legislature were adoption of a tax package including a 3-cent boost in the gasoline tax, the rearrangement of the congressional and legislative districts, and the adoption of a sterner law against bid-rigging. Each was in response to an obvious need to do something — in the case of the tax boost, a need to do something about highway maintenance.

A report of the session says 970 laws (presumably including minor changes in laws) were enacted and 66 resolutions were adopted. This was in response to the introduction of 1,384 bills and resolutions in the House and 772 in the Senate. If that many changes were needed or seemed desirable, the laws enacted in previous sessions must have had a lot of shortcomings.

Some flexibility is necessary, to accommodate changes in federal programs affecting the state. However, there is a growing trend toward legislative sessions more often than each two years. This has the effect of making legislation seem more temporary and more readily subject to change.

Unless the public wants to encourage that trend and maintain constant alertness as to what the legislature might do next, it would seem necessary to reduce the number of requests for new laws and changes in laws, and encourage legislators to enact such laws as they think the public can live with for at least two years.

Interest Rates Strain Others

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When the president meets next week in Ottawa with the heads of other industrial nations, he'll have to be more convincing than he has been about this country's high interest rates.

A few days ago, he sought to reassure Western European leaders, worried because those rates tend to worsen their inflation and draw investment money away from their economies, that the rates are a short-term phenomenon.

His secretary of state and his treasury secretary also have offered similar assurances in the past few days, leaving little doubt that lower rates are eagerly hoped for.

But now the cat's out of the bag. There is more hope than certainty in those assurances and forecasts.

Does anyone really understand them?

Speaking with reporters on Tuesday, William Niskanen, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, conceded that the persistence of high rates had him and his colleagues somewhat confused and puzzled.

All along, the administration's forecast of lower interest rates has been based on expectations that confidence in a more stable economic future would assure lenders and encourage them to accept lower yields.

It hasn't happened. There has been evidence of rising hopes, as expressed in the forecasts of lower rates by important bankers, but that's as far as it's gone. Hope seems to be a level below confidence.

As Niskanen indicated, there is much confusion about this situation. The inflation rate has receded some, but interest rates have not, and the gap between the two is the widest in the memory of many money men.

Assuming, for example, that the overall inflation rate is around 10 percent, why did New York Telephone Co. this week have to offer 15.625 percent to encourage individuals and institutions to buy its bonds?

That spread between inflation and interest rates is about twice the usual size, and it has persisted for many weeks. During this time, confident that a more normal pattern would assert itself, some of the best-informed of bankers have forecast a decline in interest charges.

"Interest Rates and Inflation: Something's Got to Give," said the headline of one economic forecasting service nearly seven weeks ago. It declared that the gap had to be closed, that either interest rates would drop or inflation would worsen. The odds, it said, were that interest rates would give. But since then, nothing has happened.

What does it mean — that's the question. There are great demands for money from corporations that must finance their considerable short-term debt. And the Federal government, of course, is still in the red.

Still, say those who feel they are as informed as the next guy, that gap shouldn't be what it is. Does it mean, they ask a bit fearfully, that the market feels President Reagan's economic program will fail?

It does present problems with representatives of industrial nations who will be gathered at Ottawa, and who already have said they believe their economic problems are a consequence of U.S. interest rates.

If it is puzzling to those Americans who should know, how can it be explained clearly to foreigners? And then, how can you convince those foreigners that it is temporary, bound to vanish in mere months?

U.S. Backs Elections For El Salvador

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, now blaming right-wing extremists as well as Marxist insurgents for El Salvador's civil strife, is pledging continued U.S. military and economic aid to ensure a political solution to the Central American country's "long agony."

In a speech Thursday night intended as a major policy statement, Assistant Secretary of State Thomas O. Enders said the ultimate answer to El Salvador's problems rests with a democratic process now under way that will culminate in presidential elections in two years.

But he said a "rational and legitimate political process" could not be achieved unless U.S. assistance is sustained. Enders was vague about future military aid, saying only that it should continue at the current "limited" level.

The administration has provided $35.5 million in military equipment and has 48 military advisers remaining in El Salvador. It also has committed $144 million in economic aid.

While Enders was delivering his address to the World Affairs Council, several dozen demonstrators outside chanted, "Money for jobs, not war, U.S. out of El Salvador."

The speech avoided the Cold War rhetoric that marked the administration's early approach, when it sought to portray the conflict as indirect, armed communist aggression and threatened punitive action against Cuba because of its alleged role as a source of weapons for Salvadoran guerrillas.

But Enders gave no hint that any such measures are being considered now. He said there has been an "ominous upswing" recently in arms deliveries from Cuba and Nicaragua but limited himself to saying that "Cuban and Nicaraguan supplies to the guerrillas must stop."

He also made clear more forcefully than the administration has before that leftist insurgents are only partially to blame for El Salvador's bloody civil war.

While denouncing the "left's violent methods," Enders said there is "an equally violent minority on the extreme right that seeks to return El Salvador to the domination of a small elite."

"More Salvadoran Army leadership is needed, both to fight rightist death squads and to control security force violence," he said. "This is a primary objective of our military training effort. There must be improvement."

Enders strongly endorsed the Salvadoran government's plan to elect a constituent assembly next March charged with writing a constitution, and to hold presidential elections in 1983.

"We believe that elections open to all who are willing to renounce violence and abide by the procedures of democracy can help end El Salvador's long agony," he said.

But he added: "Should members of the guerrilla command believe that they can make gains by military means, no participation, no meaningful negotiations, no political solutions are likely to be forthcoming."

"The point is not that sustained U.S. assistance might lead to a government military victory," Enders said. "It is that a political solution can only be achieved if the guerrillas realize they cannot win by force of arms."

Earlier Thursday, Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., said the United States, Cuba and Nicaragua should agree to halt arms supplies to El Salvador and then press for peace negotiations. He said he made that proposal to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. on Tuesday but got no response.

Solarz said he also favors elections in El Salvador, but he said they would be useless unless the junta and guerrillas first agree to a peace plan including elections. He said he drew that conclusion after an 11-day trip through South America last week that included talks with Cuban President Fidel Castro and leaders in El Salvador and Nicaragua.

Criminal Charges Face Postal Serv. Strikers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department, saying a postal strike would have a "significant detrimental impact on this nation," is threatening to bring criminal charges against postal workers who walk off the job when their contract expires next week.

Echoing the hardline approach taken by Postmaster General William F. Bolger, Assistant Attorney General D. Lowell Johnson said Thursday that a law barring strikes by federal employees "is designed to prevent and punish" walkouts.

A postal strike, he said, "would have a significant detrimental impact on this nation and its citizens."

Bolger has said strikers would be fired and could be barred from future government employment.

No progress has been reported in negotiations with the two largest unions, the American Postal Workers Union and the National Association of Letter Carriers, which represent about 500,000 of the 600,000 unionized employees. The current three-year contracts expire at midnight Monday.

Jensen said the Justice Department reviewed the law recently because of strike threats by air traffic controllers. He said criminal sections of the law could be enforced if federal workers strike without first using civil or administrative remedies.

His statement was made in a letter to Bolger, and copies also were sent to leaders of the postal unions.

Dan Driscoll, a spokesman for the postal workers union, said the Jensen statement is "no surprise. It is part of the whole campaign. We are aware of that law, but we also know about the National Labor Relations Act, which requires collective bargaining."

"Collective bargaining is what the Postal Service up to now has refused to enter," he said. "We say that the laws cannot be selectively enforced in this country."

Leaders of the two unions said the Postal Service has made no wage proposal and refuses to meet with them. All discussion is being carried out through federal mediators, the union leaders said.

The Postal Service said contract demands made by the two big unions would cost the Postal Service $25 billion over three years and increase the cost of mailing a letter to 45 cents by 1984.

Union leaders are seeking pay raises and a cost-of-living clause that would amount to an increase of 14.7

Marijuana Rain Is No Blessing

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — An estimated $1.8 million worth of marijuana bailed out of an airplane over Bladen County and into the hands of law enforcement officers Thursday.

Law officers were alerted to the drop by residents complaining that the burlap-wrapped bales were cascading down on the ground and in trees.

Sheriff Earl Storms said he believed the 40 bales, weighing from 50 to 75 pounds each, originated in Colombia.

Five men were arrested near the "drop zone" as they stood beside a 1/4-ton pickup truck, but one later escaped from the sheriff's office in Elizabethtown. He was last seen running into the forest.

The escapee had not been captured late Thursday, and officials withheld names pending confirmation of identities.

The main drop zone appeared extend from an area three miles east of White Oak, through an elementary school area, to a point six miles north of Elizabethtown.

An Army helicopter from Fort Bragg that helped officers spot the bales on the ground during the day was expected to assist in the search again today.

Early callers to the sheriff's office reported hearing low-flying aircraft soon after midnight.

Nelson Davis, a peach grower and farmer, said the aircraft circled the area near his farm and disturbed his dogs. He said after sunrise, a bale of marijuana was found in one of his corn fields.

James R. Munn of White Oak told officers that a neighbor called him to say he heard a low-flying plane and saw it circling the area. The neighbor, Curtis McMillan, found a bale of marijuana near his home Thursday morning.

Aleene Worley told officials she found another bale lodged in a tree.

Four other bales were discovered in a lake five miles north of Elizabethtown Thursday afternoon.

NORWICH, England (AP) — A widow whose husband uncovered a hoard of Roman treasure valued at $494,000, is being given only one-third of the cash equivalent because he was late in reporting the find to the British Treasury.

Greta Brooks was told Thursday that she can keep only $165,604 worth of the gold and silver jewelry found with a metal detector in November 1979. The hoard was held in a bank vault until it was declared six months later.

Mrs. Brooks said she was not disappointed with the award and said she would give half the money to owners of the site where it was found since her husband was no longer alive to enjoy it. "It is not the same without him", she said.

Closing Arguments Today In Trial Of Six Nazis

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Closing arguments were scheduled today in the U.S. District Court trial of six nazis charged with planning to set off a series of explosions in Greensboro.

With the trial entering its fifth day, the case also could go to the jury today.

Judge Woodrow W. Jones denied motions Thursday to acquit the six defendants because of insufficient evidence.

The defendants are charged with conspiring to set off bombs in Greensboro in retaliation for a guilty verdict in the murder trials of six Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis. After a six-month trial, the Klansmen and Nazis were cleared of the charges of slaying five Communist Workers Party members.

The Nazis on trial at Greensboro are Raeford M. Caudle, 38, of Winston-Salem; Gorrell Pierce, 28, and his brother, Roger, 25, both of Walnut Cove; James C. Talbert, 30, of Winston-Salem and Frank Braswell, 48, and his wife Pat, 32, both of Penland.

All six defendants took the stand Thursday and said that by last October they believed a man who identified himself as Maj. Mike Swain, a mercenary, was really some kind of investigative agent. The man was Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent Michael Sweat, who has testified that he posed as a soldier of fortune to gain the confidence of the defendants while investigating a firearms violation.

Gorrell Pierce said that by last Oct. 8, he was convinced that Sweat and a frequent companion — State Bureau of Investigation Jill Arthurs, who posed as Sweat's girlfriend — were both agents. Pierce said he became suspicious when the couple refused food and drink at the Braswell's home and refused to remove their coats during several visits.

Referring to several times when Sweat travelled to Spruce Pines in an ATF plane, Pierce said, "I wondered why would somebody with billion-dollar planes would be so hand-over-foot about helping out six Nazis in western North Carolina who do good to buy a tank of gas."

The defendants testified that the let Sweat lead the conversations and they agreed to discuss any subject he brought up. Braswell said he feared for his family's safety so he went along with Sweat to keep him happy.

Braswell testified that he feared Sweat partially because of a 1979 incident in which he was "ambushed" at his house. A former law enforcement officer was convicted in the shooting.

Braswell also said he urged the others to "tell the most horrible and gruesome things (they) could think of, but there was never any plans to do any act of violence or terrorism."

Caudle said he went along with Sweat's talk in an effort to uncover the agent. He mentioned ATF agent Bernard Butkovich, who was involved in investigating the Klan before its confrontation with Communists Nov. 3, 1979. Caudle's 16-year-old son was indicted in the shootings but never tried.

Caudle also said he helped expose Butkovich by passing along information to reporters.

Butkovich was subpoenaed by defense attorneys but was never called as a witness.

Braswell acknowledged that he discussed possible explosions and making "an example out of Greensboro" on the telephone, but said that was because he knew it was tapped by the government. "Due to the fact we knew the telephone was bugged I was going to fill their ears full," Braswell said.

Prosecutors did tap the Braswell phone for a 28-day period last November.

Another witness to appear Thursday was Klan-Nazi defendant Jack Wilson Fowler. He testified that no one solicited his help in blowing up Greensboro. Sweat said he understood some of the Klan-Nazi defendants would help set off the explosions in Greensboro.

Renew Licenses For UNC-TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission Thursday granted license renewals to eight University of North Carolina public TV stations, after accepting UNC plans to increase minority and female employment in them.

The eight TV licenses will now be renewed through the remainder of the normal 3-year license term, which ends Dec. 1. Later this fall, the university will have to submit new license renewal applications for the next 3-year term just like all other stations in North Carolina.

The eight stations, comprising the state's public television network, located in Chapel Hill, Columbia, Linville, Asheville, Concord, Wilmington, Greenville and Winston-Salem, are licensed to the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina.

The FCC had refused last summer to extend the licenses through the current term until the university submitted a new affirmative action plan and a timetable for achieving the plan's goals.

The commission acted after considering a request by the North Carolina Coalition for Responsive Media that it deny license renewal because the UNC television network had failed to meet the FCC's guidelines for employment of minorities and women.

The commission's review last year found in 1978 — the last year of the previous license term — the TV network had employed only eight minority members and 18 women out of 90 full-time employees.

The FCC ordered the development of a new equal employment plan rather than denying license renewal, however, after finding the university had been making a conscientious effort to recruit minority and female applicants.

"It appears the network has been quite active in recruiting minorities and women and soliciting job applications from them," the commission said in July 1980. "Nevertheless, we are concerned that with such extensive recruitment contacts which resulted in a large applicant pool of minorities and women, few have been hired and stayed at the network."

The new plan submitted by the university and approved Thursday calls for an increase in overall minority employment from the 9 percent recorded in July 1980 to 12 percent by Dec. 1, and an increase in female employment from 23 percent in July 1980 to 27 percent by the end of the year.

The staff will increase in size from 90 last year to 104 by Dec. 1, the university said, with the number of minorities rising from eight to 12 and the number of women from 21 to 28.

Other minority and female employees who are already on the payroll will be promoted before Dec. 1, the university pledged, adding it is launching a new internship program and further expanding its efforts to identify qualified applicants.

The following girls have been chosen as Miss Operation Sunshine of the week: Shelia Harrell, Traveda Freeman and Mary May.

Will Rule On Pageant

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge agreed Thursday to rule on a lawsuit filed by Miss New York State that would bar CBS from televising the Miss Universe Pageant and block the winner of the Miss USA crown from competing in the contest.

U.S. District Judge Vincent L. Broderick scheduled a hearing for 2 p.m. EDT Friday.

The plaintiff, Deborah Ann Fountain, was disqualified from the competition for Miss USA because she allegedly wore "falsies."

Her lawsuit, filed earlier this week in state Supreme Court, seeks to bar Miss USA, Kim Seelbrede, from competing for the Miss Universe title.

Miss Fountain claims she was illegally disqualified from competing for Miss Universe. She said she was forced to use padding because a swim suit she was issued was the wrong size, and pageant officials refused to correct it.

Defense lawyers claimed the case belongs in the federal court on grounds of diversity of citizenship. They say Miss Fountain is only temporarily living in the city and is a resident of Wilmington, N.C.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

IT TOOK A CASE OF LEPROSY AND AN EARTHQUAKE TO STOP THIS KING!

UZZIAH, SON OF AMAZIAH, ASCENDED THE THRONE OF JUDAH AT THE AGE OF SIXTEEN TO REIGN FOR FIFTY-TWO YEARS (809-757 B.C.). DURING THIS RULE, HE SERVED AS A WISE AND PIOUS KING. HE REBUILT JERUSALEM, STRENGTHENED ITS WALLS, ENCOURAGED THE ARTS, WAS VICTORIOUS IN BATTLE WITH HIS NEIGHBORING COUNTRIES AND, IN FACT, RAISED THE KINGDOM BACK TO THE POWER AND GLORY IT ENJOYED IN KING SOLOMON'S DAY! HOWEVER, WHEN HE MADE HIS ONE AND ONLY MISTAKE, IT WAS AS STUPENDOUS AS WERE HIS MANY TRIUMPHS! ELATED BY ALL HIS GOOD DEEDS, HE DECIDED HE SHOULD ALSO BE HEAD MAN IN THE TEMPLE, CERTAINLY ON HIGH OCCASIONS—AFTER ALL, OTHER KINGS DID THIS, DIDN'T THEY? WHO BETTER TO SERVE GOD IN THE HOLY OF HOLIES THAN UZZIAH, HIMSELF, WHO HAD DONE SO MUCH FOR HIS KINGDOM? BUT...

...WHEN HE MADE THIS ATTEMPT, HE WAS WARNED BY THE HIGH PRIEST, AZARIAH, THAT ONLY A PRIEST COULD LAWFULLY ENTER THE HOLY PLACE AND OFFER INCENSE ON THE ALTAR (2ND CHRON. 26:17-19). UZZIAH WAS ENRAGED AND ABOUT TO USE FORCE WHEN, THE BIBLE TELLS US, GOD, IN HIS ANGER, INTERVENED AND UZZIAH WAS SMITTEN WITH LEPROSY, THEN AND THERE! NOT ONLY THAT—THE DIVINE WRATH WAS SO TEMPESTUOUS THAT IT CAUSED AN EARTHQUAKE WHICH SPLIT THE ROOF OF THE TEMPLE AND SENT ONE HALF OF A MOUNTAIN, SITUATED TO THE WEST OF JERUSALEM, CRASHING INTO THE VALLEY BELOW, WHICH DESTROYED AND COMPLETELY COVERED UP THE ROYAL GARDENS! THIS WE HAVE ON THE WORD OF JOSEPHUS, THE ANCIENT HISTORIAN OF THE JEWS, WITH FURTHER CORROBORATION IN THE BIBLE (AMOS 1:1) (ZECH 14:15). FROM THAT DAY ON, UZZIAH HAD TO LIVE IN SECLUSION AS A LEPER, HIS SON, JOTHAM, ADMINISTERING THE AFFAIRS OF GOVERNMENT IN HIS FATHER'S NAME. A RATHER FORCEFUL REMINDER TO ALL ISRAEL THAT, NO MATTER HOW GREAT, NO ONE COULD GET AWAY WITH BREAKING GOD'S LAW!

Flying Missionaries Face Terrorists

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
WAXHAW, N.C. (AP) — Missionaries and pilots training in this tiny Piedmont village to spread the Gospel around the globe are accustomed to the risks of jungle life and the hazards of remote dirt airstrips. But they are facing a new danger that seems to be surfacing with increasing regularity — terrorism. "We always tell our people to relay the message that we will not be blackmailed," says Martin Huyett, executive director of the Jungle Aviation and Radio Service, the branch of Wycliffe Bible Translators that transports linguists to dozens of nations around the world. "That is, we will not pay if one of our missionaries is taken hostage." JAARS, located in the piney forests on the outskirts of Waxhaw, seems isolated from the dangers facing missionaries who fan out across the globe. About 275 missionaries live in JAARS housing at its training center and in homes around Waxhaw. JAARS provides a training ground for flights by linguists, and it stays in radio contact with missionaries and pilots through an international network of ham-radio operators. Terrorism was not a major problem for the linguists of Wycliffe, which has about 4,500 workers worldwide — including about 2,000 in Third World areas — until recently. But the gravity of the problem was demonstrated in March when Chester Bitterman, 28, a linguist and graduate of Columbia Bible College in South Carolina, was shot to death by terrorists in Bogota, Colombia.

Bitterman, who had moved to Colombia with his wife and two daughters about 18 months earlier, was taken captive when guerrillas burst into a dormitory where he was staying, abducted him and said they would kill him unless Wycliffe linguists left Colombia. He was killed after being held for six weeks.

Since that time, Ecuador has ordered linguists out of that nation, saying their work has become too controversial. JAARS and Wycliffe officials are reluctant to talk about terrorism, but they staunchly maintain that it has not affected their efforts to translate the Bible into every language.

"We will continue to do what we have been doing, and that is help people everywhere get the word of God," Huyett said in an interview. "We always clear our work with a country's government and go through the proper channels. When we've done all we can, we're in God's hands after that."

Translating the Bible into another language is a lengthy process that sometimes requires linguists to live in a native country for 10 to 12 years in order to produce grammar books, write the language and translate the Bible. JAARS pilots, trained to make short takeoffs and landings in rugged terrain, are responsible for taking missionaries to and from the mission fields and providing their only link to their homes and the rest of the world.

The JAARS center resembles a small town, complete with more than 50 brick buildings, its own 3,300-foot airstrip and hangar and apartments for some of its workers. "All money we get to do our work comes from donations by churches and friends," said Huyett said. JAARS received $1.3 million in donations last year, he said. Missionaries' pay comes from the Wycliffe business office in California and depends on donations.

"I never worry about money," said 85-year-old William Cameron "Uncle Cam" Townsend, Wycliffe's founder. "The Lord always provides, I've found over the years."

Townsend founded the linguistic institute in 1934 to train missionaries to go into remote areas with unwritten languages, develop alphabets, writing, and to translate the Bible. He started JAARS 12 years later.

"It was necessary ... to be able to get people in and out of remote areas where they were working," he said. "We would go for five or six months and not hear a word from some of our people. It was just too dangerous and we had to be able to back them up."

JAARS currently has about 60 aircraft, including helicopters, and 90 pilot-mechanics flying missions all over the world. At the Waxhaw airstrip 15 pilots and other technical workers maintain aircraft brought back from missions and rebuild damaged aircraft.

"Our people have to be able not only to be crack pilots, they must be able to do their own maintenance," said Don Manning, assistant director of aviation.

WOMEN'S DAY

Seminaries 'Off Limits'

DALLAS (AP) — For students studying for the United Methodist ministry, some theological schools of other denominations have been declared off limits, says the weekly, United Methodist Reporter.

It says he number of such schools was not disclosed immediately, pending notification of them by United Methodist accrediting agency.

So far, it has ruled on the acceptability of about 60 of the 186 non-United Methodist seminaries that historically have been approved as places for study by United Methodist ministerial candidates.

However, a review of them was ordered by the denomination's 1980 governing conference, breaking with a former policy of putting any nationally accredited seminary on the denomination's approved list.

Of the 186 seminaries once on the list, 24 declined the review and were removed automatically, including seven Roman Catholic, five Episcopal, three Southern Baptist and two Lutheran schools. Other seminaries, besides the 60 dealt with so far, are to be reviewed over the next three years.

New Congregation To Lease Church Building

Claude Bland, chairman of the Steering Committee of the newly formed Greenville Free Will Baptist Mission, announced today that the newly formed congregation will begin meeting at the former People's Baptist Church building this Sunday at 9:45 a.m. for Sunday School and 11:00 a.m. for worship service.

The mission church began four weeks ago at the American Legion Building. Bland said that because of the rapid growth, the 150 members of the new mission have voted to lease a building on 264 By-pass West that was used by People's Baptist Temple and the Landmark Baptist Church in recent years.

A steering committee has been elected by the members of the mission to guide the church through its formative state. They are Claude Bland, chairman; Larry Balder; Thomas Barefoot; Hubert Edwards; H.C. Edwards; Mitch Turner; and John Fleming.

The newly formed Sunday School is headed by Jeff Heath. The Music Ministry is lead by David McGowan and Corbett Joyner. Eloise Jackson is the pianist and Amy Mills directs the Youth Choir.

Workshop Titles Are Intriguing

These were among the intriguingly varied names of workshops at the recently concluded annual meeting of the National Assembly of Women Religious, made up of about 50 Roman Catholic sisters' councils.

Other workshop titles included "The Making of a Prophet: Take Off Your Shoes," "Exile from Strangers," "A Voice in the Marketplace," and "Communism — Feeding Ourselves."

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices edged higher today as the market continued to drift.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, after managing a small gain in light trading Thursday, rose 1.14 to 956.62 in the first two hours of trading.

Advances led declines by a 6-5 margin, among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Mobil announced this morning that it was entering the bidding war for Conoco with an offer it said was worth $7.7 billion. The bid, involving a cash payment of $90 a share for about 51 percent of Conoco's stock, is designed to unravel Du Pont's agreement to buy Conoco for about $7.3 billion.

Conoco said its board would review the Mobil offer next week. Those developments delayed the opening of Conoco, Mobil and Du Pont stock for the session's first two hours. Mobil opened at 30 3/4, off 1/4; Du Pont was down 1/4 at 46 3/4, and Conoco off 1 1/4 at 86.

Big Board volume totaled 19.07 million shares, up from 17.72 million at the same point Thursday.

The NYSE's composite index rose .20 to 75.90.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .22 at 370.45.

NOT JUST RESTING — Greenville Police and Fire-Rescue workers look on as a wrecker crew tries to right a Sealtest ice cream truck which overturned this morning at the corner of Elm Street and Greenville Boulevard. According to police, the truck, operated by Edward Keely Pate of Lucama, was traveling west on Greenville Boulevard when the light changed. The driver attempted to stop, but the brakes would not hold. A car was traveling north on Elm, and Pate made a hard right turn attempting to avoid the car. The truck hit the curb and flipped over, investigators reported. Since the truck was loaded with ice cream, the wrecker could not turn it upright, and a heavy-duty wrecker had to be brought from Wilson to do the job. Pate was charged with a brake equipment failure violation in the incident. (Reflector Photo by Larry Zicherman)

U.S. Navy 'Strained'

LONDON (AP) — America has "a one-and-a-half ocean navy striving to carry out a three-ocean job" while the quickly growing fleet of Soviet warships places the U.S. Navy in an era of emergency, the new edition of "Jane's Fighting Ships" warns.

The 84th annual survey of world warships, published Thursday, said Western navies are plagued by low budgets, bureaucracy and political indecision "at a time when there are grave dangers inherent in the naval situation."

The authoritative survey said the Soviet Union is quickly building dozens of mighty warships as the United States and Western allies struggle to replace aging fleets.

"This present era is an emergency for the U.S. Navy, described clearly (by American naval leaders) as a one-and-a-half ocean navy striving to carry out a three-ocean job," wrote Jane's editor Royal Navy Capt. John Moore. Jane's, which has close links with Britain's navy, has often warned of a Soviet naval threat and called for increased defense spending.

In the last two years the Soviets completed 40 naval vessels while the U.S. Navy got 18 and the British navy ordered one, the survey reported.

Moore said the U.S. Navy suffered under President Carter but that Americans are growing more aware they need a strong naval defense. The Reagan administration has pledged to increase the U.S. fleet from 400 to 600 vessels.

Unofficial estimates indicate Soviet defense spending runs between 12 percent and 14 percent of the nation's gross national product, compared with 5.5 percent for the United States, 5.2 percent for Britain, 4 percent for France and 3.3 percent in West Germany, Jane's said.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Joseph Bonanno Jr., son of the reputed Mafia boss, refused to enter a plea to a charge of bilking elderly people in a home-repair scheme. So a judge entered a plea of innocent on his behalf.

Bonanno's lawyer disputed the method used in charging his client with 21 counts of grand theft and one conspiracy count. Superior Court Judge Stanley Golde entered the plea Wednesday.

Walter Jones Is Recovering From Operation

Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., said today he was recovering nicely from an operation 10 days ago to remove an aneurysm from behind his right kneecap.

"They put in a bypass ... and it's healing beautifully," the Farmville congressman said.

Jones, in a telephone interview from Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C., said stitches were removed from the incision today. Jones said he had gone to the hospital after experiencing what he thought to be "a series of cramps" in his leg.

"I will have to have a little assistance," Jones said, but explained he plans to attend the dedication Monday of the $4.2 million Walter B. Jones Bridge spanning Wilkerson Creek in Hyde County.

The high-rise, two-lane bridge, which carries U.S. 264 across the Intracoastal Waterway, is the first such structure funded totally by the federal government, Jones said.

Jones said he would be flown to the dedication site by the Coast Guard and would be accompanied by Army Gen. Bernard Mittermeyer from the Walter Reed Hospital staff.

Heavy Rainfall Soaks County

Nearly an inch of rain soaked Pitt County yesterday, a welcome respite from recent dry weather.

Greenville Utilities' water plant recorded .99 inch of precipitation by 8 a.m. this morning, most of which fell from 2-4 p.m. Thursday. Despite the large rainfall in this short period, no serious problems were reported by area police and public works departments.

Mayo Allen, director of Greenville's Public Works Department, noted that "no flooded streets were reported to the department at all."

"There may be the possibility of slow run-off in places but we had no streets barricaded," he added.

Cars stalled in water in the areas of Tenth Street and Dickinson Avenue, but no traffic problems were reported by Greenville Police.

The temperature reached 85 degrees Fahrenheit yesterday, then dipped to a low of 65 degrees F. At 8 a.m. today the water plant recorded 77 degrees F., with the level of the Tar River at 3.9 feet on the National Weather Service Gauge.
