Eastern Belt Sales Open Wednesday

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

After watching their crops endure an unsteady growing season that included extreme dryness and unusually cool nights, area tobacco growers will get an idea if their patience paid off as the first Eastern Belt price quotes of the season are heard Wednesday.

The Greenville market will begin its 91st auction season tomorrow morning, joining 13 other Eastern Belt sites in first-day activities.

As usual, opening sales here are expected to get underway with a number of officials, including several state dignitaries, on hand and coverage by the various media segments will focus on the first-day buying figures.

In recent years, Gov. Jim Hunt has included Greenville among his opening day market stops and state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham seldom misses first sales here. John Cyrus, marketing specialist with the N.C. Department of Agriculture, also attends the Greenville opening on a regular basis.

While area tobacco experts report that farmers generally produced a good crop this year, a measure of uncertainty always exists until buyers indicate just what their companies are looking for in their leaf purchases.

The condition of the crop naturally varied this year from one part of the county to the next, with some areas receiving more rain and some sections taking a harder hit from early season dryness than others. Continuing increases in production costs was a problem common to all farmers, however, and favorable prices at the market are the only real remedies.

Roger Cobb, county extension agent, said that, "We've got a good crop in Pitt County at this time — what I've seen cured looks good." He said, "At this point, it looks better than last year."

The extension spokesman said that insect problems this season were worse than last year, while disease problems, particularly with respect to granville wilt and black shank, generally had less impact. There was some increase in mosaic.

This year's crop appeared to cure better as more rain eventually fell and growers used less nitrogen, Cobb said.

While the 1980 marketing season began on what most observers termed a disappointing note, local and state officials are joining the growers in hoping for price levels substantially above last July's opening day figure of $110.21 per hundred pounds. The 1979 opening of $125.73 per hundred pounds set a local record.

Officials have predicted that flue-cured tobacco production in the state will be down some six percent from 1980 due to fewer acres for harvest and lower expected yields per acre.

This year's crop statewide is forecast at approximately 699 million pounds.

Greenville warehouses will begin sales at 8:30 a.m. tomorrow following the opening ceremonies. J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here, said the market will start sales with three sets of buyers on hand.

First sales, Bryan reported, will be at Farmers Warehouse (set one of buyers), New Independent (set two), and Star-Planters (set three).

Bryan said the first set of buyers will be at Keel's for the second sale tomorrow and at Raynor-Forbes & Clark for the third sale. Set two will be at New Greenville for the second sale and Growers for the third sale. Set three will go to New Carolina for its second sale, Hudson's for the third sale, and Cannon's for the fourth sale.

"Every warehouse firm in Greenville will have a sale every day during the season," Bryan said. "Under the designation program farmers have designated the warehouse of their choice on the Greenville market. I would like to urge any farmers who have not already scheduled their sales to please contact the warehouse where their tobacco is designated for sale in order to set up a schedule of sales for the 1981 season."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, Bryan said, has announced the 1981 flue-cured tobacco loan rates. The rates on regular grade tobacco range from $1.01 to $2.03 per pound. The announced rates reflect an average support of $1.587 per pound, up 17.2 cents from the 1980 level.

Bryan said that owners and operators of local warehouses (Please turn to Page 8)

CHARLES BOULEVARD SPEED LIMIT, TRAFFIC LIGHT?

I travel Red Banks Road regularly and I notice the spotlight at its intersection with Charles Boulevard (Highway 43 South) changing in a very irregular pattern. One time I timed the green light and it stayed on only four seconds. That very day over two months ago I called the police and told them about it. They said they'd check into it. This is the intersection where the two little girls and the lady got killed. Then a few days later a boy was killed in the same stretch. Nothing's been changed since my call. E.F.

I live on Charles Boulevard very near its intersection with Red Banks Road. Would it be feasible to lower the speed limit on 43 from Fast Fare to Pirates Chest? That's a very nasty stretch. I know, because I see wrecks there and hear screeching tires very, very often. Could there be a yellow light or some other means of warning motorists that the spotlight is up ahead both leaving town and entering? K.H.?

"In the past few months, this intersection has been a main concern of ours, and we have been watching it closely," District Traffic Engineer Gerald England said. According to England, there are no malfunctions in the signal. He said, possibly based on E.F.'s complaint, people from the traffic office were sent to watch the traffic light, which is tripped by the approach of a car on Red Banks Road. No problems with the functioning of the light have been detected.

England said that the speed limit is set according to the type of traffic traveling the road, the roadway conditions and alignment, the sight distance available to the motorists, and the amount of road side development. Presently along Highway 43, there is residential, farmland and business development. Based on these factors, England feels that the present speed limit of 45 is "a safe and reasonable speed."

England doesn't anticipate the state's lowering the speed limit until more development takes place along the road. He feels that to move the traffic on Highway 43, preventing greater congestion, it is better to keep the speed limit at 45.

As for the numerous wrecks at the intersection of Highway 43 and Red Banks Road, England commented, "All the signal does is give the driver a protected entrance into the main line of traffic. Unless all drivers yield to this and all traffic signals, no one is safe."

Youth Is Killed In Auto Crash

FARMVILLE — A Bell Arthur youth was killed a half mile north of here yesterday afternoon when the car in which he was riding crashed into a ditch bank.

Killed instantly in the 5:55 p.m. one-car accident, according to N.C. Highway Patrol Officer Walter Featherston, was Walker L. "Jay" Miles Jr., 17, of Bell Arthur.

The driver of the car was identified as Scott Lynn Hulvey, 22, of Broken Arrow, Okla. He was not seriously injured, Trooper Featherston said.

Featherston said Hulvey, traveling south toward Farmville on Highway 121, apparently attempted to pass two cars, got past one, was meeting another, swung back into the right lane behind the second car, ran off the road on the right and crashed into a ditch bank on the left. No other car became involved.

Hulvey was charged with driving under the influence and manslaughter, Featherston said.

Miles was employed by his father, Lee Miles, in National Roofing and Siding Company here, a family member said. Hulvey reportedly had recently moved to the Bell Arthur community.

'Strongest Prices' For Border Belt's Opening

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — As the first day of flue-cured tobacco sales in the North Carolina-South Carolina Border Belt ended Monday, state officials and industry representatives repeated earlier predictions that 1981 sales and prices would set records.

"This is the strongest opening I've ever seen," said John Richardson, Robeson County extension agent. "I've been an extension agent for 12 years and I have never seen anything like this."

"If it keeps up, we may see the farmers make some real money for a change."

Over 7 million pounds of tobacco — consisting mostly of lugs and primings — were sold Monday in the Border Belt, which includes southeastern North Carolina and northeastern South Carolina.

The average price was $1.51 per pound, though prices for selected grades of leaf were as high as $1.75.

Those figures ranged from 5 to 25 cents above the federal support levels and were from 29 cents to 40 cents above last year's opening day levels. The opening day average for 1980 was $1.24.

Other North Carolina markets will open later this week and next week.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., which buys any tobacco not priced at least one cent above the federal support level, bought no tobacco Monday. That, observers said, indicated an

Farmville Mart Opening

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Tobacco Market will open tomorrow at 9 a.m. with sales at all five Farmville warehouses, Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade Sales Supervisor Georgia Willoughby said.

The local warehouses in the order in which sales will be held tomorrow are Tucker, Pierce, Planters, New Blue, and Worthington. All major buying companies will be represented, with one set of buyers opening day and two sets Thursday, Willoughby said.

unusually strong market.

William Parham, deputy commissioner of agriculture, said the good opening was caused by the high leaf quality and by a worldwide shortage of flue-cured tobacco.

"I've been impressed by the quality of the tobacco," he said. "It looks excellent so far. We appear to have gotten the rain we needed at the right time and everything else seems to be working out."

Parham said many farmers had elected not to market the four bottom leaves of the stalk, which are of lower quality than the others.

Those who don't, he said, are allowed to grow 10 percent more tobacco than their quota allows.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tentative agreement to avert a nationwide mail strike collapsed today after union leaders said the final Postal Service wage offer contained "a serious inconsistency" with what they had accepted two hours earlier. Postal workers remained on the job, however.

As the negotiations resumed, leaders of the two largest postal unions said there were no immediate plans for a strike by their half-million members.

The unions had threatened to pull their workers off the job at midnight Monday, when the old contract expired.

Moe Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union, told his members today "to hang in tough."

Biller and Vincent Sombrotto of the National Association of Letter Carriers said they thought they had reached agreement about 2 a.m. EDT on a tentative three-year contract.

They announced that to the unions' rank and file on a taped telephone message and even recommended ratification, but five hours later Sombrotto said: "We are now in a position where we don't have a contract."

"At approximately 2 a.m., we made an agreement. We brought that down to our rank and file and our executive bodies for their attention and approval ... and we put in motion our telephone network," he said.

"The terms and conditions ... were discussed at length" in a caucus with top union policy-makers, Sombrotto said.

It was then that "serious questions about it" arose, he added. "Then we returned to the bargaining table. When the wage proposal was presented, we noticed there was a serious inconsistency with what we had agreed to" orally.

The union leaders refused to elaborate on the discrepancy, but Biller said: "We don't view it as a misunderstanding."

U.S. Cease-Fire Call Considered By Israeli As Conflict Escalates

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli and Palestinian gunmen exchanged fire across the Lebanese-Israeli border today, and Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet met to consider an American call for a cease-fire to halt the escalating attacks.

The Israeli military command said gunmen returned fire into Lebanon after Palestinian rockets and artillery shells struck Nahariya on the Mediterranean coast and points in the Galilee panhandle 20 miles inland. Several people were wounded in the Galilee, Israel Radio said.

The Palestinian news agency Wafa said Israeli artillery fire hit Beaufort Castle, a major guerrilla base in southern Lebanon four miles north of the border, and the guerrilla-controlled village of Aychieh. The latest exchange broke a brief respite from overnight artillery and rocket barrages.

The U.S. government decided Monday to extend the delay in shipping 10 F-16 jet fighters to Israel because of "the escalating cycle of violence," Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. announced at the seven-nation summit conference in Montebello, Quebec.

In Jerusalem, Begin was to confer with U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, who is trying to bring an end to the current round of fighting and to find a peaceful solution to Lebanon's other conflicts.

There were reports in both Israel and Lebanon both in Israel and Lebanon that the major parties might accept a cease-fire, but only under conditions that would be difficult, if not impossible, to achieve.

The Israeli media predicted that the government would agree to a truce provided that PLO could put in place an overall settlement of the Lebanese crisis — a formidable condition considering the chaos in Lebanon and the proliferating issues and armies.

In Beirut, sources in the Palestine Liberation Organization said today that PLO chief Yasser Arafat would agree to a cease-fire if Israel agrees to stop its military reconnaissance flights over Lebanon as well as the shooting. Begin has insisted that Israel must continue the flights to keep an eye on guerrilla activity.

City School Board Approves Insurance Plan

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville City School Board approved a student insurance proposal offered by Youth-Guard, Inc. to provide student insurance for the coming 1981-82 school year.

The Youth-Guard plan was one of eight plans offered by six insurance agencies.

The school year period fee for each student is $5 to cover school hours, with a premium of $26 for full time coverage during the school year. The maximum medical and dental expense provided by Youth-Guard is $25,000, with a $75 a day coverage for hospital room and board.

For coverage of students involved in football, the premium is $19 for students trying out for football, with an additional $19 charged for students who make the team. These two $19 premium fees are applicable only to students in grades 10-12. Students at junior high are automatically covered in the regular $5 insurance fee with no additional charge if they play football.

The budget resolution for the 1981-82 budget was approved. Approval is a formal action required by the North Carolina General Assembly. Categories in the formal budget and dollar totals are: local current expense fund, $2,803,303; State public school fund appropriation, $6,110,579; federal funds, $786,524; and capital outlay fund, $209,724.

Three budget amendments were approved, all constituting transfer of funds within budget categories and not involving increase or decrease of fund totals.

The resignation of one teacher, Mrs. Jessie Bell, was approved. Mrs. Bell, a first grade teacher at Third Street School, has taught for 40 years. Also, four teachers were elected for the coming school year — two at Middle School, one at Aycock, and one at South Greenville.

Mrs. Ann Harrison, director, Exceptional Children and Pupil Personnel for the Greenville City Schools, gave a report on the continuing downward trend in the suspension record for city schools for the past nine school years, beginning with school year 1972-73. The report shows that for the past school year, 342 suspensions occurred as compared with a high of 1,066 for school year 1973-74.

Mrs. Harrison's multiple report also covered individual reports on the record of administrative hearings and on the record of long term suspensions for the same time period.

Photographer Presses All Kinds of Buttons

DEAR ABBY: FUNNY NAVEL wrote to say that she was embarrassed to wear her bikini to the beach because she had a funny-looking navel. She said, "It's not round like a normal belly button; it's square, and I keep a dime stuck in it to keep it from popping out."

You told her to take the dime out of her navel and call a plastic surgeon. Shame on you, Abby, for suggesting that she change its natural shape!

I hope I'm not too late because I'd like to get in touch with this lady. I'm a singer/composer and writer with a special interest in navels, which I consider the most erotic part of the human anatomy.

Unique navels have always fascinated me. In fact I am writing a book on the subject, and have a collection of photographs of unusual navels from all over the world. I would like to photograph your correspondent's navel for my book. Will you please send me her name and address?

BELLY-BUTTON BUFF

DEAR BUFF: Alas, FUNNY NAVEL requested anonymity. However, you possess a rare kind of navel intelligence. Good luck with your book. I hope you get the no-belly prize.

DEAR ABBY: IN THE MIDDLE asked if she should decline invitations from her ex-husband's family to attend their family gatherings. It seems that her "ex" has remarried and his new wife is uncomfortable at family gatherings with Wife No. 1 present, so consequently Wife No. 2 stays away — and so does her husband.

Abby, you told the "ex" wife that if she was invited, it meant she was wanted, and she should go if she wished. If Wife No. 2 was "uncomfortable" and stayed away, that was her problem.

While your answer sounds reasonable, let's face it, Abby, that's not being fair to the new wife. I know.

My husband was married before, and I know how difficult it is to become accepted by John's family. They loved John's first wife. Marge was part of their family for 10 years, and the fact that John and Marge have children makes it even harder for me to compete.

The ex-wife should let go of those old family ties and give the new wife a chance to become part of her husband's family. If there is real affection between Wife No. 1 and her ex-husband's family, they can invite her on occasions other than family gatherings. Her "ex" and his new wife belong there — she doesn't. And if Wife No. 1 is invited, knowing if she accepts Wife No. 2 will stay away, she should have the good sense to decline.

IN THE MIDDLE TOO

DEAR IN: You make a good point. But this sticky situation could be avoided if the family would refrain from inviting former members, unless they know for sure everyone will be comfortable.

DEAR ABBY: Please referee.

Situation: Man makes luncheon date with woman — a new acquaintance. Half an hour before meeting time, woman telephones man and cancels lunch date in haste, offering no explanation. She says she will call him later in

Hearings Set

Public hearings on two requests for special use permits and on a single request for a variance will be considered by the Joint City-County and Greenville Boards of Adjustments, meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

The joint board will hold a public hearing on a request by Joe F. A. Jolly for a special use permit to operate a pawn shop and flea market at the corner of N. Greene Street and NC 33, and to have residential quarters for resident manager, supervisor or caretaker at the location. The property is zoned for Highway Commercial use.

Public hearings on the city agenda involve: a request by Mrs. Lily Richardson for a special use permit to operate a quilt shop and an interior design shop at 805 S. Evans Street, on property zoned for Office and Institutional use; and by H. A. I. Sugg for a variance in order to construct an addition to the side of the structure at 138 E. Longmeadow Road, on property zoned for R-15 usage.

Later that afternoon woman calls man No. 1 and accuses him of being rude and inconsiderate for not stopping to chat a moment, at least long enough to be introduced to man No. 2. Man No. 1 says "Nuts!" Who's right?

DEAR CURIOUS: Man No. 1. The woman is clever. She knows that the best defense is a good offense.

Improvements Dedication Set

Improvements to the Pitt County Court House will be dedicated at a 2 p.m. ceremony Friday in the new third floor courtroom.

Members of the Board of County Commissioners and representatives of the state Administrative Office of the Courts are scheduled to attend the program.

The renovations and improvements include the addition of a new courtroom and hearing room on the third floor of the court house annex as well as office and storage space for the Sheriff's Department; improvements to the Law Library on the second floor; renovation of the magistrates offices and the addition of a map room for the Register of Deeds in the basement; new carpet for the Superior Court room; and the addition of Superior Court Judges' offices on the third floor of the original court house.

Cost of the renovations, paid for with facilities fees charged persons convicted of law violations, is estimated at $50,000. Most of the work has been done since the county manager's office, the Pitt Board of Education and the county's data processing center moved to the new county office building on West Fifth Street in July 1980.

The original court house was completed in 1910, while the annex was completed in 1966.

Bethel Council Meets

BETHEL — The Bethel Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce held its first meeting last week at the Bethel Rotary Building.

Sixty-four businesses are currently members, reported Robert Young, membership chairman of the Bethel Council.

Chairman of the council Bob Bowers explained the organizational concept at the meeting and provided an opportunity for members to serve in one of four areas.

Executive director of the Pitt-Greenville chamber Ed Walker showed a film, "Making Things Happen" on the history and purpose of chambers of commerce. Also attending from the Greenville area were Barbara Woods and Becky Bell.

Forgeries

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An Employment Security Commission key punch operator has been arrested in an investigation of 20 forged unemployment checks, the State Bureau of Investigation said Monday.

SBI agents arrested Joyce Carolyn Johnson, 33, of Raleigh on Friday, SBI supervising agent D.E. Gilbert said.

She was released from Wake County Jail Sunday after posting $2,000 bond and was arraigned in Wake District Court Monday afternoon. Court officials said she was scheduled for a probable-cause hearing Aug. 3.

"We do anticipate some additional arrests involving other individuals", Gilbert said. "There are a total of 20 checks which we have identified as being suspect checks in this forgery."

Luncheon Meet Held Thursday

The Town and Country Senior Citizen's Club held its luncheon meeting Thursday at the Holiday Inn Restaurant. Some 75 members and guests attended.

Final plans were made for the July 22 trip to the Village Dinner Theatre to see Jay Thomas in the play "The Murder at Howard Johnson's."

The group will leave from St. Paul's Episcopal Church parking lot at 4:00 p.m.

A trip is being planned for October to Nashville, Tenn. to the Grand Ole Opry.

Members planning to go to the "World's Fair" are requested to make their reservations as soon as possible because the World's Fair tickets will go on sale in October.

The date of the birthday luncheon has been changed from Sept. 17 to Oct. 1.

Mrs. Sarah Ashton read the poem, "Our Trip in '81" written by Lillie McLawhorn. The poem was composed about the trip to Asheville and Carowinds.

YOUTH REVIVAL

Youth revival will be held at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church Wednesday through Friday, with the Rev. Willie Joyner as the guest minister.

The Allen Chapel Senior Choir will sing Wednesday; the Echoes of Calvary Thursday; and the Rock Spring No. 2 Choir Friday. Eldress Hattie M. Cobb invites the public.

Find Big Crop Of Marijuana

ELKIN, N.C. (AP) — Some 3,300 marijuana plants were found 10 miles north of Elkin Monday, Surry County sheriff's deputies said.

The plants, ranging in height from five to eight feet, would have an estimated street value of $330,000 at maturity, according to detective Jimmy Miller.

He said the marijuana was found in three separate plots, and while there were suspects in the case, no arrests had been made.

The best 1981 fashion news for knitters and crocheters is the comeback of shawls, capes and ponchos, all favorites of needlecrafters. This lacy fan medallion crocheted shawl is great for summer or holiday evenings in white or eggshell, and in bright, light or dark shades for other seasons.

The fan medallions are made in strips that are then sewed together and heavily fringed for drama. The shawl is worked in light-weight, machine washable sports-weight yarn. The directions are written without abbreviations for ease in following.

To obtain directions for crocheting the Fan Medallion Shawl, send your request for Leaflet No. C-9175 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-9175 by sending check or money order for $12 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit contains an instruction leaflet and eight skeins of Wintuk sports yarn, with shipping charges included. Please specify your choice of white, eggshell, cerise, sea coral, cranberry, baby blue, mist green, cocoa brown or navy.

With the exception of shaped garments, much crocheting is done in geometric shapes such as squares, rectangles, triangles, circles and ovals. If you know the basic formulas for making such shapes, you can create an endless variety of original items using fancy pattern stitches or simple basic ones.

Obviously a simple square worked in rows is the easiest. You simply start with a chain of stitches as long as one side of the square and then work in rows until the piece measures the same on all four sides.

For a rectangle, start with a chain the desired width of the lower edge and simply work in rows until you reach the desired height.

Another way of working squares is by starting in the center and working out, as is done in the traditional "granny" square method. In this method you start with a circle and work in rounds for two or more rows. Then you pick four equally spaced points around the circle and mark these points for corners. On the following rows, you increase at each corner and you will see your circle become a square. You can maintain the same pattern stitch throughout or use a variety of stitches on succeeding rows.

Use the "rule of six" to work in circles. Although there are variations, most circular pieces start with a small ring with an average of six increases, evenly spaced all around, on the following rows.

To start a circle, a short chain is worked. Let's start with four chains. Join the last chain worked to the first one with a slip stitch. To do this, chain four then insert the hook into the first chain and

The ad said if I bought an 11-piece coordinated vacation wardrobe, I could make 135 clothes combinations and exist for three weeks living out of one suitcase.

The coordinated ensemble included a basic dress, reversible skirt, slacks, blouse, jacket, shorts, T-shirt, vest, two scarfs and a cap with a bill.

I will not bore you with all 135 combinations... only the interesting ones.

Three days out, I outgrew my slacks.

Four days out, I ripped the breast pocket on the jacket and could wear it only when my arms were folded or if I used one of the scarfs as a sling and pretended I had a broken arm.

Five days out, the blouse did not dry and the scarf faded over it, forcing me to wear it with the darts facing backwards.

The T-shirt shrunk on the sixth day and I found by buying another cap with a bill and joining them with a scarf I had an interesting bra for playing tennis.

The skirt was getting on everyone's nerves and one night as it stood in the corner of my room, I noted it still had my body molded in it. The next day I turned it around, put my blouse on the outside and told everyone I was expecting in four months.

Mercifully on the 11th day, the hem dropped out of the dress, giving me a new look for evenings.

The ugly oil spot on the reversible skirt penetrated both sides on the 14th day, giving me a choice of wearing my handbag on my left side or my right.

The vest was the only clean thing in my suitcase by the 17th day, but I didn't know what to do with it when my blouse was ordered off the sightseeing bus by a vote of 43-0. I wore it sleeveless with pins holding it together.

By the 20th day, nothing mattered anymore. I wore the scarf with the oil-stained skirt, the slacks with the broken zipper with the two caps with a bill, the dress with the torn jacket, the T-shirt with the shorts. On the last night, there was a masquerade party. I went as myself and won first prize.

When I arrived home, there was one scarf that had been soaked in perfume that leaked. The fashion coordinator had thought of everything. All I had to do was to light a match, ignite it and in time... forget all 11 pieces.

The television series Masada helped to acquaint viewers with the historical and physical dimensions of Masada, Israel. A trip to this historic site, however, imparts its true forbidding majesty. Built as a royal refuge by Herod the Great in 36-30 B.C., it was meant to be an impregnable fortress. It stands 1300 feet above the Dead Sea and can be reached by cable car. After 19 centuries, only parts of the walls and columns still stand. However, restorative efforts allow the visitor to see mosaics, plastered walls, swimming pools, numerous baths and the great double walls that ring the summit plateau.

There are a variety of tours and package trips to Israel. They are designed to serve special needs and tastes, and to save money. The travel agents at QUIXOTE TRAVELS INC. can find the right trip to Israel, or anywhere in the world, for you. We are familiar with tours, packages, and special fares, so we can save you time and money when you need them. See us at 319 Cotanche St. 756-3456. Our computers make all our service fast.

draw the yarn through that loop and the loop on the hook. You now have a small ring.

Work six, eight or 12 single crochets in the ring. This is a matter of choice. The more stitches you put in the ring, the more solid your center will be. For the second round, work two single crochets in each stitch. Depending upon the number of stitches in your first round, you will now have 12, 16 or 24 stitches in a round.

On the third round, increase (by working two single crochets in one stitch) in every other stitch around, giving you 18, 24 or 36 stitches. Notice that now, any of these numbers are divisible by six. From this point on, you will make an average of six increases per round.

If you are working with single crochet or with a combination of pattern stitches, you might prefer alternating a non-increase round with a round on which you make 12 increases. If double or triple crochet stitches are used throughout, it is best to increase six stitches per round.

In a future column, I'll discuss ovals, triangles and free-form shapes. For now, though, you should be able to create pillows, placemats, plant holders, glasses cases and an untold variety of other gift items. Happy stitching!

Was It A Dull Day?

We've brooded for a week or more over remarks of Sen. John East at a program in Washington to the effect that former Senator Robert Morgan (also of N.C.) helped undermine the FBI by publicly criticizing the agency in the 1970s.

It didn't set well; sounding too much as though the incumbent was still engaged in his 1980 campaign.

Senator East was wagging a figurative finger (as we read the Associated Press story) at a member of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, and telling his listeners that Morgan's observations were damaging to the national security.

The item did not include mention by East that illicit activities by members of the FBI had been uncovered; nor did the news report include tacit recognition by the present incumbent that it is essential congressional watchdogs be alert as to how federal agencies fulfill their assigned responsibilities.

We trust Sen. East will be equally alert (as Morgan) in blowing the whistle on abuses by any segment of the federal infrastructure.

Still unanswered, however, is the reasoning behind raising an irrelevant doubt as to Robert Morgan's role in the Senate. Another instance of beating a dead horse? A still undisclosed motive? Or was it a particularly dull day for Senator East?

Tobacco Prospects Good

Tomorrow the doors of tobacco warehouses throughout the Bright Leaf Belt will open for another selling season.

It is an anxious moment for tobacco producers and all who depend on a good selling season for tobacco. If a desirable crop is produced and there is demand for it on the world market tobacco will sell well, and that makes a great deal of difference to those who have labored through the year to produce a quality crop.

This has been a difficult growing year for the farmers. The area faced drought early in the season. The rains can just in time to save the crop in the Pitt County area. While total precipitation for this year is still low, rainfalls came at timely intervals and the prospects are for an outstanding tobacco crop this year.

Tomorrow and the next few days will tell how well tobacco will sell. We certainly hope for the very best for the tobacco farmer.

RALEIGH — One would suppose that since members of the North Carolina General Assembly are staying in session longer and more often than ever, have sophisticated computers and copying machines, and operate with a staff of 650 now compared to under 200 just a few years back that much more work is getting done.

Surprisingly, the total volume of legislation — measured by the number of laws enacted — has increased only marginally since 1930, and has actually declined about five percent since 1955.

That is according to figures compiled in a 50 year history of the General Assembly put together by the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill.

The just-adjourned session adopted 970 laws and 66 resolutions. It cost $35,000 per day while legislators were in town. Now that they're gone, the daily cost has dropped to $13,000 per day to keep the fulltime staff at their jobs.

In 1931 and 1933 an average of 1,276 laws were passed. The Legislature met only every two years. In 1953 and 1955 an average of 1,389 laws were passed. The 1977 and 1979 sessions averaged 1,315 new laws.

The 1981 General Assembly will come back in the fall for another period, and again next year so the prospects of boosting output is great. Incidentally, the figures show that the numbers of statewide law has doubled while local laws have been cut in half. Moving into the new State Legislative Building in 1963 launched the growth trend of the General Assembly, and expanding into another $12 million building next year can only add momentum to that direction.

Where does the money go? In reality, the Legislature is behaving much like the U.S. Congress as it moves inevitably to a fulltime, professional agency rather than the citizens legislature to which local farmers and merchants and professional people aspire to join for a term or two and to four years rather than two and spend more time worrying about re-election than ever before.

A review of legislative salaries compiled by the fiscal research staff provides a roadmap to what is happening to the General Assembly budget.

Until the move to the State Legislative Building in the mid-60s, lawmakers got only $25 per day to attend sessions; just as any member of any state board or commission might. There was even a maximum limit cap so that members didn't get paid if they stayed too long.

In 1968 legislators went on salary of $1,800 per year, plus $600 yearly for expenses like telephone calls and postage, and $25 per day while in session to cover room and meals.

The salary went to $2,400 yearly in 1972, and the expense money was doubled to $1,200 and room and board was boosted to $35 daily.

Three years later the salary doubled again to $4,800 yearly. In 1979 it went to $6,000 yearly. Today, legislators are paid $6,936 yearly; get $2,064 yearly for expenses; receive $50 per day for room and meals during sessions (that's seven days a week even when out of town on weekends), and are now plugged in to regular salary increases along with other state employees. All along, members have received mileage money for a roundtrip home each week, now running 25 cents per mile.

Legislators serving as chief aides to the speaker and the lieutenant governor, and those elected leaders of the minority party in each house, get more: $8,664 in salary; and $2,760 in expense money.

This review pales by comparison to the growth which is taking place in the speaker's office, and in the lieutenant governor's office as those two institutions expand into fulltime operations.

Conservatives' Nature

WASHINGTON — The last couple of pop tests seem not to have sunk in. It is time, therefore, for another brief quiz on the nature of American conservatism today.

What is one of the principal doctrines of American conservatism today?

It is the doctrine that the government — especially the federal government — should leave the citizens alone to lead their lives as they see fit; further, that public institutions should not intrude upon private morals.

What is the conservative view of categorical grant-in-aid programs?

The conservative view of categorical grant-in-aid programs holds that such programs tend to inflate the federal bureaucracy and to undermine the power of the states to make their own decisions, therefore such programs, as a general rule, should be avoided.

If you were to name two of the foremost conservatives in the Senate, who might you name?

Two of the foremost conservatives in the Senate are Jeremiah Denton of Alabama and Orrin Hatch of Utah.

Are they the sponsors of S. 1090, the bill to promote adolescent chastity?

They are.

And what consistent sense does that make?

It makes none at all. So ends the week's examination. If the two senators' chastity bill is a conservative bill, the principles of conservatism have been turned upside down. The bill is one more melancholy example of federal paternalism. It is one more reflection of the discredited notion that Washington knows best what is good for the people. The bill would create one more elaborate program of categorical grants-in-aid to the states. Once again, plenary power would be vested in the secretary of health and human services to approve or disapprove applications for grants, in the form prescribed et cetera.

JAS. J. KILPATRICK

containing the following assurances et cetera. There would be forms, reports, advisers, counselors, demonstration projects and research. The bill embraces every bureaucratic evil that ordinarily is anathema to conservatives.

The whole idea is to marshal the resources of the federal government, to the tune of $30 million a year, to persuade teen-agers not to have sex. OK. Let us not minimize or joke about the human and social costs of teen-age pregnancy. The two senators are sincerely troubled, as thoughtful observers must be troubled, by the problems of abortion, illegitimacy and venereal disease.

But the question has to be persistently pressed: What does all this have to do with the federal government? In the name of the Founding Fathers, how is it proposed to spend tax funds "to promote the involvement of parents with their adolescent children"? One might have supposed that true-blue conservatives would shun the prospect of federally prepared "teaching materials" for use in public schools.

The Denton-Hatch bill has been rewritten from top to bottom since its introduction in April, and a good thing, too. In its original illiterate form the bill proposed research "concerning the causes of adolescent pregnancy." That has been amended to read "societal causes." Originally the bill dealt at great length with "promiscuity," defined as "having sexual intercourse out of wedlock." The bill now is directed at discouraging "premarital sexual relations." Remarkably, the bill still contains the original inquiry into measures that might be effective in "mediating" pregnancy. It is a splendid thought: Perhaps an adolescent's pregnancy could be submitted to binding arbitration.

No hearings have been held on the Denton-Hatch bill. The measure was introduced on April 30. Committee staff rewrote the bill in May. On June 24, without a word of discussion or debate, the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources voted without recorded dissent to send the bill to the floor. The only comment came from Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, perhaps the foremost liberal in the chamber. He thought the bill was great. It figures.

Bill Casey's Bitter Pill

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — When just-ousted CIA spymaster Max Hugel was offered a high post in the Small Business Administration last November as a reward for his campaign help to Ronald Reagan, William J. Casey counseled him against it.

Casey, who would soon become director of the Central Intelligence Agency, had a more important job in mind for Hugel, whom he greatly admired for his ability, his attributes as a self-made man and his drive, energy and ambition. So Hugel — alas, for Bill Casey — turned the Small Business job down. Instead, he moved to the CIA with Casey and several months later became deputy director for operations — the master spy.

Hugel's dismissal by resignation after the Washington Post published serious charges of financial irregularities against him was a bitter blow for Bill Casey who, like Hugel, also is a self-made man. However, Casey himself is in no political danger and won a clean bill of health from President Reagan.

Reagan Plumps For AWACS

At a private session with Republican congressmen in the Oval Office July 10, President Reagan went out of his way to lobby for his beleaguered plan to sell AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia. The plan is under heavy attack from the pro-Israeli lobby in Congress.

The Oval Office meeting was called to discuss major weapons questions, such as the MX missile and the B-1 bomber, with Capitol Hill leaders. But when Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, asked the president about the Saudi AWACS, Reagan came back with a strong defense of his plan.

He said the U.S. has finally "established credibility" with many Arab states in the Middle East and that there is more than one nation — Israel — with which the U.S. must do business. It is essential to our security interests, Reagan went on, that the U.S. maintain that credibility. Despite the president's strong position, the prospect that Congress will veto the AWACS deal is close to 50-50.

'Perplexed' By Teddy

The usual forbearance by Massachusetts Democratic politicians toward the liberalism practiced by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy was broken with a biting personal letter complaining about his pro-busing positions from State Senate President Bill Bulger.

Bulger, long a militant foe of busing, said in the letter he was "perplexed" by Kennedy's support of the Senate filibuster being conducted by Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut. Weicker, a liberal Republican, has been trying to prevent a vote on an anti-busing rider.

Bulger and other grassroots Democrats in Boston believe that voters, far from finally embracing compulsory school busing, believe it has ruined their city's school system and are bitter about its supporters — including Teddy Kennedy. Nevertheless, nobody expects Kennedy to have the slightest trouble getting re-elected next year.

OMB's Locked Door

Jude Wanniski, prophet and publicist of supply-side economics, was a backstage mover-in the rise of David Stockman to the Reagan Cabinet, but now is persona non grata at Stockman's Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

The last straw in their deteriorating relationship was a scathing attack on Stockman by business consultant Wanniski in a confidential report to his clients dated July 6. Stockman and his key aides reacted angrily to Wanniski's assault on "the Stockman strategy" of reassuring financial markets through budget cuts. Wanniski's telephone calls to OMB are no longer returned, and dark threats against him come from some OMB officials.

In contrast, Wanniski has been developing a warm relationship with Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan. In preparation for his role as chairman of the Federal Gold Commission, Regan met with Wanniski to hear his views on restoring the gold standard. Just six months ago, Regan was viewed with deepest suspicion by Wanniski and other supply-side purists who had counted on Stockman as their man in the Reagan Cabinet.

Arms Control Fussing

Lt. Gen. Edward Rowny, who resigned from the Army and quit the arms control negotiating team in 1979 to protest Jimmy Carter's policy as too soft, is described by friends as so distressed today that they fear he may quit as President Reagan's SALT negotiator.

"Ed really has been treated shabbily," one administration official told us. Informed at first that he would be Reagan's director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA), Rowny found himself quickly downgraded to chief arms control negotiator. But when Yale Law School professor Eugene V. Rostow arrived as ACDA director, he insisted that Rowny's duties be limited to strategic arms limitations talks (SALT).

Since negotiations on a SALT III Treaty are not in sight, Rowny has little to do. Worse yet, he is being snubbed and ignored by Rostow. Rowny is particularly sensitive to such treatment because of the intentional rudeness to him during SALT II negotiations by Paul Warnke, ACDA director and chief SALT negotiator during the Carter administration.

CONCERNING PROPER DIETS

As the ferry glides from the island to the mainland, leaving a smooth and shimmering expanse of water in its wake, the gulls dart back and forth looking for food.

Their natural food is fish, but in modern times the gull has come to rely a great deal on the garbage which the cook and his helpers heave over the side several times a day. Those who know much about gulls tell us that when the gull is no longer compelled to dive for fish but is given a prepared menu of any kind, he grows fat and sluggish.

This situation reminds us that figuratively speaking there is garbage in many parts of the human environment — in our educational systems, in our entertainment, and even in some parts of our religious beliefs and observances. Like the gulls, many people prefer this to the wholesome, natural food because it is attractive and easier to acquire than the food which comes only after expenditure of effort. But if we make it our diet, we will become fat and sluggish — in the head. — Elisha Douglass

Efficiency And Effectiveness

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK AP) — As the economy becomes more involved in the production of services, C. Jackson Grayson is more concerned that we make a clear distinction between efficiency and effectiveness.

"Efficiency measures if you are doing things right. Effectiveness concerns itself with whether you are doing the right thing," says Grayson, chairman of The American Productivity Center, Houston.

He contends that both must be measured if a worthwhile productivity picture is to be obtained. And he suggests that America's lagging productivity growth is in part a consequence of poor effectiveness.

Should we measure hospital productivity solely by such factors as the number of patients treated? Or is a more productive facility one that teaches people how to remain healthy, and thus treats fewer patients?

In this age of electronic computers, shouldn't productivity be measured not just on the lines of data produced but on the basis of whether that data is read and utilized or just left to gather dust?

He draws still another example from the manufacturing sector. American automakers, he observes, rank their assembly lines as efficiently as they could. But, he contends, "they didn't produce the right cars. The Japanese did. The Japanese were both efficient and effective."

Productivity, says Grayson, is made up of many things, and "to work on one aspect could be a mistake. There is no one answer. And we should not expect improvements to come quickly and easily."

But he does have many suggestions about areas he feels are poorly understood. In service businesses as well as in manufacturing, people should count. Productivity can be improved, he feels, by paying greater attention to worker's job security, goals and need for involvement.

"Involvement means asking employees, listening to them, recognizing their contributions — perhaps with money — sharing information, letting them know about the future, letting them own a share in the business."

Grayson's "own a share" was meant mainly in figurative sense, he said, but he recognizes that a common management reflex is the feeling that involvement with workers ultimately means loss of control.

"I don't think management will lose control," he said. "I don't believe employees want to control. They want to contribute."

Grayson, former dean of business schools at Tulane and Southern Methodist universities, left his post as President Nixon's price commissioner convinced that inflation had roots beyond his reach — that it was based in a productivity slowdown. How, he wondered, could prices be controlled when it was costing more to produce goods?

He was appalled to find that productivity data was unreliable. The government's measure included labor's contributions, in the form of output per manhour, but failed (and still does) to measure the impact of capital invested. (The Productivity Center now has its own index.)

Raising $10 million in five years, he founded the business-supported center to educate the public, produce more reliable measurements of output, and teach management and labor how to implement techniques known to increase efficiency and effectiveness.

He feels the first stage has succeeded. "Awareness is going up," he said. But action, he laments, is lagging. Companies, he asserts, must recognize that productivity "is equally as important as profit."

Which is to say that short-term profits can be squeezed from a company while weakening it in the long run by not budging for productivity improvements. In that sense, the bottom line can lie; it can show profits today at the expense of tomorrow. The company could even die.

PROPER SHOOTING TECHNIQUES — Scouters ranging from 8-10 years old learn to shoot B-B guns using the buddy technique at the Pitt County Cub Day Camp being held at Memorial Baptist Church this week from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. daily. Instructing the boys (not pictured) is Doug Jackson with the Greenville Police Department. Activities at the camp are varied and include handicrafts, games, knot tying and tent pitching, and are supervised by community members said Camp Director Terry Strickland. (Reflector Photo by Sue Fernald)

KNOT TYING AND TENT PITCHING — Wilderness safety and camping skills are part of a boy scout's training. These scouts practice sheep shanks under the watchful eyes of two older scouts, Tommy Strupe of troop 229 Uwharrie Council, Lexington and Scott Brock of Troop 205 Memorial Baptist Church (both in left foreground, Strupe with dark hair and Brock with his back to the camera). The boys will learn about wildlife later in the week said Camp Director Terry Strickland. The Pitt County Cub Day Camp, sponsored by the East Carolina Boy Scouts of America Council, has attendance from all corners of Pitt County. (Reflector Photo by Sue Fernald)

Reagan Plans 'To Set Record Straight' On Social Security

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, accusing Democrats of playing "on the fears of many Americans" to keep the minimum monthly Social Security benefit, says he will go on national television to set the record straight.

The House was considering a resolution today by Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas to preserve the $122 minimum monthly Social Security benefit. In the Senate, Michigan Democrat Donald Riegle was pressing for an amendment to the pending tax bill that actually would restore the benefit.

Outside, the National Council of Senior Citizens was scheduled to hold a rally on the Capitol steps to protest proposed cuts in Social Security.

"I deplore the opportunistic political maneuvering, cynically designed to play on the fears of many Americans, that some in the Congress are initiating at this time," Reagan said in a letter to Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn. "These efforts appear designed to exploit an issue rather than find a solution to the urgent Social Security problem."

In the letter released Monday, the president said he will request television time "as soon as possible" to "tell the American people the facts."

"During this address, I will call on the Congress to lay aside partisan politics and join me in a constructive effort to put Social Security on a permanently sound financial basis as soon as the 97th Congress returns in September," Reagan added.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., responded by questioning Reagan's commitment to protecting benefits for current Social Security recipients.

Budget-cutting measures passed separately by both houses of Congress and endorsed by the administration would eliminate the minimum monthly benefit, which goes to 3 million Americans.

By agreement, House-Senate conference working out differences in the two budget bills are not to drop features in both bills.

Wright's non-binding resolution "strongly urges that the necessary steps be taken to insure that Social Security benefits are not reduced for those currently receiving them."

Riegle's amendment would mandate restoration of the benefit.

Baker said the president is "aware of all the flap" over elimination of the minimum benefit and is trying to cut down partisan bickering over the issue.

But Baker, who met with Reagan last Saturday, told reporters Monday that he has "no indication whatever the administration has changed its position on the minimum benefit."

The administration has argued that other benefit programs will take care of those who need the minimum payment, while eliminating it will save $7 billion over the next five years.

"The highest priority of my administration is restoring the integrity of the Social Security System," Reagan said.

But in a letter to Reagan, O'Neill accused the president of distorting the issue.

"Since taking office, this administration has taken a series of actions which cast doubt on your support for a healthy Social Security System," O'Neill said in the letter, which was released by his office.

O'Neill said it was "unconscionable (for the administration) to create and exploit fears about the fate of the Social Security System so as to make deep cuts in benefit levels."

The White House Office of Management and Budget said Sunday that the number of people actually affected by the elimination of the minimum would be only one-tenth the 3 million getting it.

"While the precise income and need status of the remaining 300,000 beneficiaries is not known," according to the OMB, "there is one certainty: none could fall below an ample social safety net consisting of Supplemental Security Income, food stamps and Medicaid."

Want Hobby Trial Moved

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lawyers for state AFL-CIO chief Wilbur Hobby have asked that his trial on charges of fraud and conspiracy be moved because of pretrial publicity.

"The amount of publicity surrounding the facts of the case, coupled with the nature of the political advertising done during the 1980 gubernatorial campaign, make this case unprecedented in the Eastern District of North Carolina," motions filed in U.S. District Court said.

The attorneys cited articles in the News and Observer of Raleigh and advertisements distributed by the conservative Congressional Club in their motions.

The advertisements, broadcast during the 1980 campaign between Gov. Jim Hunt and Republican I. Beverly Lake Jr., suggested that Hobby's Comprehensive Employment and Training Act contracts might have been a political payoff from the Hunt administration.

Attorneys suggested the trial be moved to Richmond, Va., and asked that the trial be delayed, also on the grounds of pretrial publicity.

Hobby, associate Mort Levi and Robert L. Hughes, a suspended state manpower planner, have been indicted in the alleged misuse of CETA federal job training funds. All three men have pleaded innocent to the charges and are scheduled to be tried Aug. 24.

Duo Charged In Bludgeoning

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two men were indicted Monday on multiple charges in connection with the bludgeoning death of a Wendell man.

Kevin Patrick Mooneyham, 20, and James Robert Owens, 25, were charged with first-degree murder charges in the June 14 death of James Nowell Richardson, 52.

Decide State May Ban 'Bid-Riggers'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Companies suspected or convicted of bid rigging may be banned from bidding on North Carolina Capital Building Authority projects, the authority ruled Monday.

The authority's bid-rigging policy gives the authority the power to suspend from its bidding list any contractor that is not "reputable and qualified" in the panel's estimation.

Under the policy, the authority can suspend convicted, indicted or suspected bid riggers after holding a hearing on the proposed suspension.

The authority handles contracts for most state construction jobs except for highways and the University of North Carolina system.

In May the authority declined to award a contract for a parking lot project at Goose Creek State Park in Beaufort County to a company that had been barred from bidding on state highway projects.

Barrus Construction Co. of Kinston, which had submitted the low bid on the project, was suspended by the State Board of Transportation in September after its former parent company, Ashland Warren Inc., pleaded guilty to federal bid-rigging charges in Virginia.

The authority agreed to reject all bids on the project and readvertise it, a move that resulted in awarding the project to Chance Construction Co. Inc. of New Bern. That company's bid was $368,132.50 — 732.50 higher than the Barrus bid.

Roberson Seeks Sense Of Pride In Transportation Dept. Ranks

By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — William R. Roberson, sworn in as Secretary of Transportation on Monday, says one of his first goals is to instill a sense of pride among department employees.

But Roberson said he won't change things at the embattled department just for the sake of change.

"I'm the new boy on the block," Roberson said after being sworn in by Secretary of State Thad Eure at a ceremony in the House chamber. "For the next 90 days I don't plan to do a lot of talking, but to do a whole lot of listening."

Gov. Jim Hunt said Roberson "will raise the Department of Transportation and the peoples' feelings about roads in this state to a new height."

FOCUS

Fate in the Balance

The great whales remain in mortal danger as the International Whaling Commission (IWC) meets this week. Many scientists believe whales and dolphins have brains that rival those of humans. The cerebral cortex — the part of the brain used for thinking and memory — is larger in whales and most dolphins than in humans. Some say the giant mammals also have more nerve cells in this region, perhaps giving them mental capacity superior to humans. But unless these endangered animals are protected, we may never understand their mysteries. Decisions the IWC makes will help determine whether the whales survive.

North paid his partner a high compliment by allowing him to play at the four-level in a suit that had been opened by the enemy, even though he was void in that suit. It was only fitting that South should justify his partner's faith.

As the cards lie, three no trump would have been a relatively easy contract, but South cannot be blamed for shying away from it with such an unbalanced hand. Since South had been prepared to defend one heart doubled, North knew that his partner had long, strong hearts. Therefore, he decided to stay in four hearts rather than gamble on an eleven-trick contract in clubs. East showed great respect for South's skill when he refrained from doubling.

East won the first trick with the ace of spades and shifted to a diamond. Declarer won in dummy and cashed two high spades, on which he shed two clubs from hand. Next came two high diamonds, on which two more clubs were jettisoned. A spade ruff in the closed hand and the king of clubs overtaken with the ace reduced both East and South to nothing but five hearts each.

Declarer led a diamond from dummy, and no matter what East did he could make no more than two trump tricks. If he ruffed high, declarer would undertrick and then be able to finesse the eight of hearts on the forced trump return. If he ruffed low, declarer would overtrick and force East onto the lead with one of his trump honors, and again declarer would have to score a trick with the eight of trumps.

Note declarer's delicate technique: He took his four side winners immediately to protect against a possible poor club division. Had he tried to cash his high clubs, East would have scored a ruff to defeat the contract.

Southern States Quarantine California Produce

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer
Agricultural inspectors stationed themselves along highways in five Southern states in efforts to prevent California's fruit-fly problems from spreading into their own fertile field and orchards.

Inspectors mounted vigils beginning early Monday along major roads at their states' borders, checking trucks bearing California produce for fear the cargo might be infested with the destructive and fast-breeding Mediterranean fruit fly.
The inspectors demanded that the cargoes be medfly-free.
"The very food supply of this nation is in grave danger from this insidious insect," said Texas Agricultural Commissioner Reagan Brown, whose quarantine was cut short after one day because of a federal court order. "Every precaution should be taken."

He labeled California's medfly eradication program "the biggest Mickey Mouse operation that has ever been perpetrated."
After nearly a day of opening trucks and sifting through fruits and vegetables, Florida state inspectors complained about the logistics involved with searching out possibly contaminated produce.
"Imagine if a semi contains a thousand... bushels, and there's a hundred some-odd pieces per bushel so you have 100,000 pieces of fruit," said Ralph Brown chief of methods development for the Florida Department of Agriculture.

"There's no way you can inspect each piece of fruit."
Florida officials turned back nine truckloads of California produce in the first 12 hours of their quarantine of fruits and vegetables that could host the medfly.
Other states imposing strict quarantines are Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina.
A federal judge late Monday issued a restraining order that temporarily lifted the Texas quarantine, and roadblocks in that state were lifted, Reagan Brown said.

"This crisis is not over," he said following the decision by U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham. "Our growers and citizens are very concerned. Our farmers and producers and consumers are very concerned that this most insidious insect may spread."
The five Southern states imposed the most stringent quarantines, requiring that all fruit from California either be fumigated or certified as coming from a non medfly area. Limited quarantines were being enforced this week in Georgia, Louisiana, North Carolina and Kentucky.

Texas farmers have been fumigating their exported fruit for more than 10 years to prevent the spread of the Mexican fruit fly, said Texas Agricultural spokesman Richard Henderson.
"That makes it a little hard to be sympathetic to California," he said.
The monitoring procedures in Mississippi and South Carolina resembled an international border check. Officials asked truck drivers carrying California fruits and vegetables for certification that produce was not from areas infested with the fruit fly. Spokesmen for those states said it would be physically impossible to check each truck.

In Florida, 35 trucks were admitted after its quarantine became effective at 12:01 a.m. Monday on orders of state Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner. Sixteen inspection stations guard the border leading to Florida's prime agricultural regions.
Dr. Louie Senn, who heads the state Plant Pest Regulatory Service in South Carolina, said officials will be monitoring trucks as they arrive at farmer's markets.

In Alabama, inspectors climbed into trucks and picked out fruit and vegetable samples as spot checks began.
John Bloch, director of agriculture chemistry with the State Department of Agriculture, said Alabama will not put up a full blockade but will enforce spot checks at about 40 receiving areas throughout the state. He said if the produce shows any signs of medfly infestation, it will be confiscated and buried in dumps.

Four Wrecks Investigated By Officers

An estimated $6,500 property damage resulted from four traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police Monday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 10:40 a.m. collision involving a car driven by Nancy Gertrude Barnhill of 116 Osceola Dr. and a city bus driven by Melvin Douglas Harrison of 1203B Myrtle Ave.

Investigators, who said the collision occurred at the intersection of Fourth and Davis Streets, estimated damage at $2,000 to the Barnhill car and $500 to the bus.

None of the eight passengers on the bus at the time was injured.

An estimated $2,000 damage resulted to a car driven by Ora Ann Ross of Route 2, Winterville, when the vehicle collided with a brick wall about 7:17 p.m. on Clark Street, 47 feet west of the Ninth Street intersection.

Police said cars driven by Bruce Brooks Beddingfield of 1701 Rosewood Dr. and Marguerite Byers King of 3100 South Memorial Dr. collided about 9:30 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard at the Greenville Square-Pitt Plaza intersection.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $600 to the Beddingfield car and $900 to the King auto.

A 1 p.m. mishap on South Memorial Drive involved cars driven by James Posey Carney of 1406 Meadowbrook Dr. and Clair Lynn Kent of Sanford.

Investigators estimated damage at $300 to the Carney car and $200 to the Kent auto.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market remained on the defensive today after Monday's sharp selloff.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which fell 18.36 Monday to a five-month low, dropped 1.71 to 938.83 by noon today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2:1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the decline stemmed mostly from a setback to hopes for lower interest rates.

Late last week the Federal Reserve reported a $6.9 billion jump in the basic measure of the money supply. The numbers dashed cold water on many traders' hopes that the Fed might soon ease up on credit.

As a result, interest rates rose sharply Monday in both the bond and short-term money markets.

Federal National Mortgage dropped 1/2 to 8 1/2. The company, known best by its nickname "Fannie Mae," cut its quarterly dividend from 16 to 4 cents a share.

LTV, which reported sharply higher second-quarter earnings from continuing operations, climbed 1 1/2 to 21 1/2.

Several energy issues advanced amid persistent merger speculation. Cities Service rose 3 1/2 to 60 1/2; Kerr-McGee 2 1/2 to 77 1/2; Diamond Shamrock 1 1/2 to 38 1/2; and Amerasia Hess 7 1/2 to 32 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .07 to 74.77. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.32 at 364.97.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.86 million shares at noontime, against 18.38 million at the same point Monday.

'Great Things' Are Expected For Market

"We're expecting great things," at the opening of the Williamston tobacco market tomorrow morning at 9 a.m., said Elmo Lilley of Williamston's New Dixie tobacco warehouse.

The crop "looks like the best I've ever seen," said Lilley who added that he is confident the warehouse will be full for the week. Last year the Williamston tobacco market, consisting of the New Dixie, Roger's and Farmer's Spot warehouses sold a total of 327,885 pounds for $393,639 at an average of $120.05 per hundred.

"We've got a very good tobacco floor here," said Vernon Hardee of Gray's Warehouse in Robersonville. The Robersonville market is also slated to open tomorrow at 9 a.m.

Vernon said, "The quality is a lot better than it's been in several years, due to favorable weather conditions in the Robersonville area."

"To the best of my ability I think prices will average $1.50 to $1.60 per pound and will be better than last year's prices," he said.

Prices per hundred in 1980 for Robersonville

The majority of Martin County farmers followed this plan, according to Allen, "and those who didn't participate followed another plan." These farmers discarded the lower two leaves and cured the upper two. Both of these practices helped cut down on the low grade tobacco that has been entering the market in the past, Allen said.

Those involved in the four-leaf program were able to plant 20 percent more tobacco as the result of discarding sand lugs, said Allen.

Outcome Awaited By Postal Workers

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Postal workers in Greenville may or may not strike along with national workers should no agreement between the post office and letter carriers be reached.

"It's still just hanging," said Ray Hardee, president of the local American Postal Workers Union, which represents clerks, custodians and other non-carrier positions.

"It would have to be put to a local vote," added the union leader, "and so far, we've adopted a wait-and-see attitude."

A meeting of the local APWU was held last night, but, according to Hardee no final decision emerged. "We couldn't really decide anything," he noted. "We'll just have to see what happens on the national scene, then make our own plans."

Local spokesman for the National Association of Letter Carriers Wayne Strawn said some workers of that union may strike if a better contract is not reached.

"Possibly a portion of our workers will walk out if there's no better contract than is being offered now," commented Strawn. "Then, if the strike continues, more will walk out."

Strawn, who is a steward in the local NALC, added "Nobody wants to strike, especially in this area — but the proposals Bolger has made are so ridiculous — trying to reduce both salaries and benefits — that the attitude of most members is that the post office would be causing the strike."

The union official said the NALC also met last night, but came to no agreement on a local walkout.

"This has never really happened to us before," said Strawn, "so we don't know for sure what we would do."

"The union has never actually said we're going to strike," noted the official, "the television and newspapers have said we're going to strike."

Greenville Postmaster Lloyd Mills said the post office has contingency plans for mail delivery in case of a strike.

"Depending on the degree of stoppage, we have plans to keep the mail moving," said Mills. "First we'd bring in the National Guard and management employees, to sort mail. Then if the strike were extensive, we'd put an embargo on certain types of mail."

"We really don't expect any type of work stoppage in this area," he said, adding that the postmaster general has threatened to fire any striking workers.

school year dealt with student withdrawal information at Middle, Aycock and Rose Schools and a follow-up report on students enrolled in the alternative school at Agnes Fullilove.

The withdrawal report enumerates transfer of students from Greenville City Schools. A total of 115 students transferred to schools outside the county; 54 transferred to public schools within the county; 56 transferred to Fullilove Community School; 11 to Pitt Community College; five to the Pitt County Extended Day School; and 17 to private church schools. A total of 30 students dropped out of school during the school year.

School board members expressed most interest on the follow-up report on the 56 students enrolling in Fullilove. Of that total, Mrs. Harrison noted that 13 are considered eligible to return to regular programs at Aycock or Rose and plan to make the return; 32 have opted to remain at Agnes Fullilove; five are attending some other state program; three have moved from the area; and three are out of school altogether.

The board concurred in having Supt. Delma C. Blinson represent them as spokesman in expressing concerns for some of the changes proposed by the State Board of Education. Dr. Blinson said he would get opinions from board members on the proposed changes in order to know the stand of the board.

P&Z Commission Meet

Seven items of business are scheduled for consideration by the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission at Wednesday's 8 p.m. meeting at city hall.

Agenda items include: discussion of the newly created planning and zoning board; approval of final plats of the Harry A. Hardee property located on the east and west sides of NC 43, just north of Bells Fork;

Request by Steve Evans to rezone some 10,000 square feet at Lot 14, Block B, Hillsdale Subdivision on the east side of Memorial Drive, from R-6 to Office and Institutional; discussion pertaining to changing the meeting of the planning and zoning commission;

Consideration of an amendment to the Zoning Ordinance removing the provision, "and a distance of not less than ten feet from the principal structure," from Section 32-12; and consideration of an ordinance amendment adding a new section under Article VI regarding porches, stoops, steps, bay windows, and attached storage buildings.

Willis Resigns

Tom Willis, director of the Regional Development Institute at East Carolina University, submitted his resignation today to Don Lemish, vice chancellor of Institutional Advancement and Planning at ECU.

Willis informed Lemish of his decision to resign in a memorandum, citing Lemish's "persistent harassment of me and interference in the day to day management of the Regional Development Institute."

Willis told Lemish, "I had looked forward to being a part of the continuing development of our great state through the Regional Development Institute and sincerely regret that this is now impossible."

Jones Bridge Dedicated

1st District Congressman Walter B. Jones was honored Monday with the opening of the Walter B. Jones Bridge on U.S. 264 near Leechville.

In dedicating the structure which represents the completion of an important improvement to U.S. 264 and the Intercoastal Waterway, Gov. Jim Hunt said it was an appropriate time to honor Congressman Jones "who was instrumental in obtaining the necessary federal funding for construction of this bridge."

Hunt also made a few comments tying the bridge into his Good Roads program. "This new bridge is a vital link in our Good Roads system, a system we must maintain if we are to bring more good jobs to Hyde County and the rest of our state."

Jones attended the ceremony despite a recent knee operation. Newly appointed Secretary of Transportation Bill Robertson was also in attendance.

Mouthpieces Gagged As Strike Talks Continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mouthpieces have been gagged in the baseball talks — once they leave the negotiating table. Whether that means stadiums will soon ring with the cry of "Play ball!" remains to be seen.

The two sides in the 40-day-old strike were to resume negotiations over the issue of free-agent compensation at 9:30 a.m. EDT today, with a news blackout imposed at the suggestion of Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan.

Donovan was due back at today's talks after spending some four hours with the two sides Monday, the first session in more than two months in New York.

Donovan was due back at today's talks after spending some four hours with the two sides Monday, the first session in Washington after more than two months in New York.

"We've had face-to-face talks all afternoon. There's a press blackout," said Kenneth Moffett, acting head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and the mediator for almost two years in baseball's war over free-agent compensation.

Moffett refused to discuss what went on at the session in the federal agency's downtown headquarters, but later told the Associated Press that negotiators "had never been further apart."

Generally, news blackouts are viewed as protection for negotiations reaching a critical stage or close to settlement. Moffett declined to characterize the blackout imposed Monday that way, but reiterated that he felt the intensive media coverage of the talks while in New York had hindered progress.

"The main reason for the blackout is the same reason we came to Washington," he said. "The two sides should be allowed to talk back and forth without having to come down here (to the press room) like it's a tennis match."

Members of the two negotiating teams declined comment as they left the building.

"Hope you guys have a nice evening," Raymond Grebey, director of the owners' Player Relations Committee, said to reporters as he departed.

Marvin Miller, the usually talkative executive director of the Major League Players Association, would only smile and nod as reporters approached him.

Donovan also declined comment.

Donovan had called the two sides to Washington to try to budge the stalled talks toward a settlement.

"You're hoping for the best always," said Miller as he entered the building Monday.

Grebey, the club owners' chief bargainer, said he saw no significance in the shift from New York.

"I don't feel that the location has much impact," he said.

"We will bargain however we feel is best."

Donovan met with each side separately for about 45 minutes Monday, then attended a joint negotiating session which ended just before 6 p.m. EDT, as the two sides broke for caucuses, according to D.J. Yount, a spokeswoman for Moffett.

Nancy Broff, the Mediation and Conciliation Service's acting general counsel, said Donovan told the two sides "he hoped we would get a settlement," but declined to say if he had applied pressure for quick resolution.

"We have had negotiations and we are continuing to have negotiations," Broff said. "The secretary has spent some time listening and some time talking."

The toll of the strike grew as negotiations resumed. Since it began June 12, 476 games including 14 today have been wiped out. That amounts to 23 percent of the 2,106-game schedule. In addition, the All-Star Game scheduled for last Tuesday night in Cleveland has been postponed indefinitely.

Donovan, who talked with the two sides for about one hour in New York last Wednesday, was asked upon arriving Monday if he expected to reach a quick end to the 40-day-old walkout.

"Gee, I pray to God we do," he said. "I expected to accomplish to get things moving again (by bringing the talks here,) and we have things moving again."

Negotiations broke down last Thursday after Grebey presented, along with a modification of the owners' free-agent compensation plan, a set of conditions for a settlement. One would deprive players of credit for major league service for at least the first 35 days of the strike.

Service time, while it affects all 650 players in such areas as eligibility for salary arbitration and pensions, also is a key factor in determining eligibility for free agency. A player must have put in at least six years of major league service to be eligible to become a free agent. The Basic Agreement says 172 days make a baseball year.

ECU-NCSU Rained Out; Tourney Near

From Staff & Wire Reports

RALEIGH — East Carolina had a chance to clinch second place in the North State Summer League but the rain put the Pirates' hopes on hold for at least one day.

ECU's game with N.C. State Monday night was rained out and has yet to be rescheduled. The Pirates, who have beaten the Wolfpack five out of eight games this season, will play North Carolina tonight in Chapel Hill. ECU is 16-14 this season.

With the first North State Summer Baseball League post-season tournament set for Thursday, three of the top four spots remained undecided on Monday, and weather threatened to leave them up to a coin toss.

Campbell University has clinched first place and is hosting the four-team double-elimination event. N.C. State, tied with ECU at 16-14, was scheduled to play Campbell tonight, and the Pirates have their makeup game with UNC tonight, so the seedings remain very much up in the air.

The only team out of the running is UNC, beset with numerous injuries and posting a 7-23 record.

Campbell is hosting the tournament, which will run through Saturday, with a possible seventh game Sunday if necessary.

Campbell athletic director Wendell Carr announced Monday that ticket prices for the tournament will be $2 per session for those 13 and older. There will also be a season book available for $5, he said.

The tournament opens at Buies Creek with the No. 2 and No. 3 seeds clashing, followed by Campbell against the No. 4 seed.

Carr said that if the major league baseball strike continues, Gaylord Perry of the Atlanta Braves is scheduled to appear Thursday night, between games.

For Summer Without Baseball

Blame Owners, Players Not Press

By HAL BOCK

AP Sports Writer

Now that we've reached the 40th day and 40th night without baseball, the parties in this flying circus called strike negotiations have marched off to Washington, two-by-two probably, in a sort of modern-day Noah's Ark operated by Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan.

The reason for the change in venue, as explained by federal mediator Kenneth Moffett, an otherwise level-headed guy, was to get the talks out of the glare of the media. At last, we have found a suitable villain for this summer without baseball.

If you buy that explanation, then Ray Grebey (who will be played in the film version of this epic by George C. Scott) and Marvin Miller (Douglas Fairbanks Jr. in the movie) are innocent of any guilt in this baseball-less merry-go-round. The cause of all the problems says Moffett (David Hartman gets this role) are those nosey folks with pads and pencils or microphones and cameras.

Baloney.

The negotiators were well-insulated from the media during talks in New York City. Fifteen floors of a Manhattan hotel separated the bargaining table from the press room and no newsman went upstairs to force the two sides to come down. Miller and Grebey visited the press room if, and when, they were good and ready to do so.

For the most part, the media was well-behaved. On the one occasion that demeanor broke down, Donovan himself was the person responsible. Instead of agreeing to go to the press room, step in front of the microphones and make a statement in an orderly fashion, Donovan chose to carry on a running news conference in the lobby of the hotel. The media had to scramble that day, which must have been the way Donovan wanted it. But to his credit, the labor secretary did stop and help one cameraman who was knocked down and nearly trampled in the stampede.

If Moffett and Donovan didn't want the media coverage, there was a simple way to avoid it. Instead of announcing where and when the negotiations would be held each day, they could have simply pulled the talks out of the public arena. There are plenty of private federal offices in New York City where the negotiations could have been held without the media being able to nail them down.

But there was no effort to hide the negotiations and, because baseball happens to be a rather high-visibility industry, the talks attracted widespread coverage. It should not have come as any surprise to those involved.

The negotiators for both sides in this tug of war are labor professionals, accustomed to the glare of the spotlight. They know how to handle it and, in fact, often tried to use the media to their advantage. That's perfectly understandable and explains why Miller announced the union's bid for binding arbitration to newsmen before sending word of the players' strategy shift to the owners. Management, in turn, answered the suggestion through the media, not in direct, across the table bargaining with the union.

It is true that both sides have been posturing throughout the strike, trying to win sympathy for their side. And to that extent, Moffett is right about the media's glare. But the people to be blamed are not the poor souls assigned to the strike watch, but the union and the owners.

What's more, do Moffett and Donovan think Washington's press corps is any less zealous than New York's? The logistics may be more difficult, but newsmen will continue to cover these talks, wherever they are held.

Of course, Moffett can be excused for being slightly disconcerted during the talks. The air traffic controllers are unhappy with the contract he helped negotiate for them last month and that settlement is threatening to fall apart. And he's had the postal unions to deal with, too. Both industries are slightly more vital to the nation than the baseball business.

But, as one wag suggested, all these problems are really related. If the controllers and postal workers strike, you won't be able to send an airmail letter to a ballplayer.

U.S. Basketball Team Starts Fast At Games

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Host nation Romania won two gold medals, the world record holder Vladimir Polyakov of the Soviet Union States basketball team got off to a fast start and International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch warned of possible troubles ahead on the first day of the World University Games Monday.

Romanian gymnast Kurt Sziller, a crowd favorite said to be the boyfriend of former Olympic gymnastics champion Nadia Comaneci, had to share his individual gold medal with Yuri Korolev of the Soviet Union after the Soviets protested an apparent scoring error.

Officials had flashed Sziller's winning score of 57.59 points onto the scoreboard and gave Korolev 57.90. But minutes later the standings were changed showing both gymnasts with the identical higher score. A Romanian official said the change was due to a mathematical error.

Soviet Artur Akopian took the men's individual bronze medal.

Romania took the men's team gold medal with a score of 173.50, ahead of the Soviet Union and China.

Gymnastics was the only sport in which medals were awarded Monday. The Games, which have attracted more than 5,000 athletes from 80 nations, continue through the next 10 days.

The U.S. men's basketball team completely outclassed Senegal 91-35 in its opening group match, but Coach Tom Davis of Boston College warned the squad about the dangers of overconfidence after its walkover against the Africans.

"I told them I didn't know if they were good enough to win here," he said. "The gap has been closing every year between the U.S. and the international competition. This year there may not be a gap."

The muscular, fast-moving American team next takes on South Korea, which beat Greece 91-72. If the U.S. squad advances to the semifinals, it figures to face Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union.

The American women beat Finland 68-49 in a preliminary basketball match.

Track and field competition began Tuesday with Willie Banks of UCLA favored in the triple jump and Michael Carter of Southern Methodist the leading contender for the shot put title.

The pole vault promised tough competition between world record holder Vladimir Polyakov of the Soviet Union and Thierry Vigneron of France, the only two men ever to clear 19 feet.

Mel Lattany of the University of Georgia topped the field in the 100 meters, with Cliff Wiley of Kansas facing 1980 Olympic champion Viktor Markin of the Soviet Union in the 400.

As competition got underway Monday, IOC President Samaranch said he was concerned that a U.S. three-game tour by the South African Springboks rugby team could lead to a boycott of the Los Angeles Olympics in 1984. Black African nations boycotted the 1976 Games in Montreal because some of the competing nations had sporting links with South Africa.

Samaranch said he had contacted the Los Angeles Games organizers about the situation.

"I am sure they will do everything possible to prevent these (rugby) matches from taking place," he said.

Chinese springboard diver Li Yuhua led American Megan Meyer of the University of Florida 466.02 to 457.89 after 10 dives in preliminary women's competition.

Venezuelan Is Miss Universe

MISS UNIVERSE — Irene Saez, of Venezuela, poses in swim suit during the Miss Universe competition. She was named Miss Universe Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Irene Saez Conde had watched the Miss Universe pageant since she was a child, and she had always dreamed of being named the most beautiful woman in the world.

Miss Conde's dream came true Monday night when, as Miss Venezuela, she was crowned Miss Universe 1981.

The 19-year-old civil-engineering student from Caracas said the first thing she did when she learned she had won the pageant was to thank God. Miss Conde won more than $100,000 in cash and prizes along with her title, including a Mazda RX-7 automobile, a sport boat, jewelry, a mink, a wardrobe and $20,000 cash.

Miss Venezuela was among 76 contestants. There had been 77, but Miss Mauritius got homesick and went home Sunday, according to Steve Solomon, a spokesman for the pageant.

The five runners-up were, in order, Miss Canada, Dominique Dufour, 22, of Toronto; Miss Sweden, Eva Lundren, 19, of Pitea; Miss Brazil Adriana Oliveira, 20, of Rio de Janeiro; and Miss Belgium Dominique Van Eeckhoudt, 20, of Brussels.

The 12 judges for the contest, including Brazilian soccer star Pele, fashion photographer Francesco Scavullo and actor Lee Majors, judged the beauties throughout the week in three ways — swimsuit competition, evening gown competition and personal interviews.

Early in the evening they narrowed the field to 12 semifinalists. Besides the five finalists, they included contestants from Holland, Ecuador, New Zealand, Norway, Germany, Tahiti and the United States. Miss U.S.A. is Kim Seelbrede, a 20-year-old model from Germantown, Ohio.

The Venezuelan ambassador to the United States, Alberto Martini Urdaneta, who came on stage after Miss Venezuela won her title, said, "It is a very happy day for all the country and for all the people. All of Venezuela is with her." He noted that it was the second Miss Venezuela to be chosen Miss Universe in three years.

Asked what she hoped to accomplish in her year as Miss Universe, she answered through an interpreter, "to give everything that's in me for the peace of the world."

She said a sister and a niece had seen her win her title. Her father, two other sisters and three brothers were not able to come, and her mother is dead.

Ex-Newsman Tries Comedy

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — For 23 years, Frank Blair broke the news to us gently on the "Today" show. In all that time, he says he never cracked a smile for fear of being accused of slanting the news. Now he's in the comedy business.

Blair, who retired from NBC's morning program in 1975, is cast as loony weatherman Dave Johnstone on the comedy pilot "Live Eye" about a TV news team in Atlanta.

To Romance

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Bertha Barclay, an elevator operator at the Commercial National Bank Building, is Peoria's old-fashioned answer to computer dating.

"Bert knows everybody in the building, and everybody knows Bert," said Mike Hilary, an accountant. "If you see a good-looking girl in the building, Bert will find out if she's available, and if she is, Bert will get her phone number for you."

During 29 years as an elevator operator and erstwhile matchmaker at the Commercial National Bank building, Bert has arranged hundreds of dates.

Consider the case of Diane Shaffer, who found love between floors — and wedding bells besides.

"Bert said there was this guy in the building who was about my height, had blond hair and nice manners," she said of Steve Bundy, a young accountant Bert had spied earlier.

"She asked me if she could give him my phone number," said Ms. Shaffer. "We met Nov. 18 on a blind date and got married exactly six months later. Love that Bert."

going to Scotland after their wedding in 1947.

The 6,000-acre estate has been owned by Mountbatten's grandson, Lord Romsey, since the soldier-statesman was killed by Irish Republican Army guerrillas in August 1979.

As Blair and the producers shop the pilot around the television networks, it won't be confused with "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

On the surface, Blair would appear to be an unlikely choice for laughs. His news delivery is remembered as utterly straightforward, a morning piece of toast, without jam, and certainly no substitute for that first cup of coffee.

If he has comedic talent, it wasn't discernible in the pilot, which had the look of a home movie, with strange camera angles cutting off heads and speakers indiscriminately. Blair wasn't funny, but he wasn't given much to work with. In one bit, he forecasts the weather by opening the window. And in another bizarre gag, he monitors the nesting habits of squirrels in the belief that the height of their winter homes will provide clues to the impending snowfall.

In Atlanta?

Blair sees the character as lovable and eccentric, "if he's developed properly."

But in the pilot, he was spaced-out and idiotic. "I don't think we did a good job on the tape. We worked a little too fast," said Blair. He predicts major changes, and offers the pilot merely for the networks to get a line on the concept and the character development.

For his part, Blair, 66, thinks he can play high comedy, although his previous work in commercials and movies never moved him out of character.

"I have a sense of humor," Blair says, mentioning Archie Bunker as a character who tickles him. "This is not incompatible. I'm not in news anymore, so I'm not concerned about that kind of credibility. If I can make the character believable, what's wrong with having a little fun in my declining years? I'm entitled to it."

Of course he is. But Blair himself raises questions about the need for public figures to protect the image they've spent a lifetime nurturing.

"In 25 years at NBC, 23 on the "Today" show, I built up a reputation and an image. It's my most valuable asset, and since I've left the show I've been extremely careful not to tamper with it. I've been very careful, very selective in the commercial area."

Blair has plugged Bayer aspirin, but balked at the chance to sell a laxative.

"I didn't think it would be right for my image. My wife would divorce me," he said.

Blair admits he has qualms about the role of the zany weatherman. He remembers Edward R. Murrow tarnishing his reputation as journalism's white knight by doing some smarmy Hollywood interviews on "Person to Person."

"As long as the part isn't degrading and I can show another side of my personality, that's OK," Blair said. "In the last six years I've tried very hard not to tamper too much with the public's memories, staying away from what I think is distasteful, rude or vulgar."

Jerry Lee Off

Critical List

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis, who underwent two stomach operations and lingered near death for nearly three weeks, has been taken off the critical list. Methodist Hospital South reports.

Lewis, 45, whose condition is now considered "serious but stable," will remain in intensive care for one to two weeks.

Festival Dates Are April 1-4

GRIFTON — The date of next year's Shad Festival has been set for April 1-4, according to secretary-publicity coordinator Janet Haseley.

"The Azalea Festival and Easter are the middle two weeks of April again in 1982," Mrs. Haseley said, "and by the last weekend of April all the fish are gone and it's hard to buy enough for the fish fry," she added.

With the first weekend for Shad Festival again in 1982, the Fishy Tales story-telling contest can again be held on April Fool's Day as the first event, she added.

Honeymoon To Be 'Divided'

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles and his bride will divide their honeymoon between the estate of his late uncle and the royal yacht, Buckingham Palace announced.

In a brief statement released Monday, the palace said Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer will spend the first three nights after the July 29 wedding at Broadlands, the Hampshire country estate of the late Earl Mountbatten of Burma, Charles' great-uncle.

On Aug. 1, they will fly to Gibraltar, where they will board the royal yacht Britannia for a two-week cruise of the Mediterranean.

Charles' parents, Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip, began their honeymoon at Broadlands before

Festival Grant

A Grassroots Arts grant of $355 for the 1982 Shad Festival arts program has been approved by the North Carolina Arts Council, according to Grifton Mayor Dave Bosley.

"While the grant is only half the amount awarded for the 1981 festival, we are pleased that the North Carolina Arts Council continues to see merit in our efforts to provide quality arts programs to a wide segment of North Carolina people," Bosley said.

The Shad Festival arts events have been among the most popular events, he added, and together with the street dance and parade represent the major out-of-pocket expenses the Shad Festival incurs.

According to a report filed with the North Carolina Arts Council by Shad Festival officials, cash expenses for arts events for 1981 were $2,957.05.
