

O'Neill Says House Fight All But Lost

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., complaining that his Democratic troops have been "engulfed by telephone calls" urging support for President Reagan's tax cut, today all but conceded the long-awaited showdown to the president.

In his gloomiest assessment yet of Democratic chances, O'Neill declined to repeat his earlier prediction that Democrats would defeat Reagan's tax plan and substitute a two-year, 15 percent proposal of their own.

"All I can say is we are experiencing a blitz ... a telephone blitz like this nation has never seen. It's had a devastating effect," O'Neill told reporters as the House prepared to open debate on the tax legislation.

But deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said today that an administration count of the likely vote in the House showed the outcome "too close to call."

He said White House aides worked "into the wee hours this morning" on the issue and continued calls to members until 10 p.m. Tuesday.

"It is right down to the wire," Speakes said. "We feel we have gotten a number of people in the last 24 hours. We feel the momentum going our way."

The spokesman said Reagan would make telephone calls "to reach maybe two dozen fence-sitters" during the day, although only one member of Congress was scheduled to visit the president.

A victory in the Democratic-controlled House would give the president a double-barreled triumph as the Senate was also poised to vote its expected approval today for his three-year, 25 percent tax cut bill.

O'Neill said Reagan's forces seemed to be making inroads among moderate and liberal House Democrats as well as the conservatives who have supported him in earlier floor victories on budget cuts.

"The Congress of the United States always responds to the will of the people and because (members) have been engulfed by telephone calls, they may think (the president's tax plan) is the will of the people," O'Neill said.

O'Neill said he and other Democratic leaders would work hard right up to the time of the vote later today to try to keep Democrats from defecting.

But, the speaker said, "unless we can hold them in line, there could be tremendous slippage."

Reagan, who has called upon the power of the presidency this week in personal meetings with scores of congressmen, telephone calls and a national television address, said the House battle was "nip and tuck."

His appeal for Americans to contact their congressmen and senators jammed Capitol switchboards on Tuesday with tens of thousands of calls and generated a five-fold increase in telegram traffic.

"This one is going to go down to the wire without any one of us knowing how it's going to come out," the president told radio station KTTB in Tyler, Texas, on Tuesday.

O'Neill accused the White House of making "all kinds of deals" to win Democratic votes and of mobilizing large corporations to get their employees to call wavering congressmen.

These "deals," O'Neill asserted, included what he said were implied threats to defense contractors and to attorneys with clients' cases before federal agencies to help support the president's program.

Earlier, Democrats had predicted a narrow victory in the House; the administration said it would win "at the bell."

Reagan was virtually certain of victory in the Republican-run Senate.

Reagan's plan, the keystone of his economic program, calls for a 25 percent cut in tax rates over 33 months, with all taxpayers getting the same percentage reduction regardless of income. There would be automatic annual reductions to offset inflation starting in 1985.

The rival Democratic bill calls for a 15 percent cut over 21 months, with the largest share of relief going to Americans earning less than $50,000 a year. A third-year, 10 percent cut would be conditional on an improved economy.

Both would take effect Oct. 1, and either would be the largest tax cut in American history.

Because the cuts are permanent, the effect multiplies in future years, saving taxpayers and costing the government $700 billion over the next five years under the Democrats' version and $750 billion under Reagan's plan.

Prince Charles, Lady Di Wed In Splendor Today

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer were wed this morning in the music-filled color and splendor of a 1,000-year-old monarchy, embarking on life as man and wife on waves of love from a devoted people.

"O let the nations rejoice and be glad!" erupted the massed choirs when the Archbishop of Canterbury pronounced the couple wed under the soaring dome of St. Paul's Cathedral.

After the 80-minute Church of England ceremony, the royal couple rode back to Buckingham Palace in an open carriage, wending through a crowd of almost one million people who roared their good wishes and waved a sea of Union Jack flags. Church bells rang across the realm.

At the palace, the prince and his new princess stepped out on the scarlet-draped balcony and waved to the thundering throng. Three generations of the royal family joined them there, along with the five bridesmaids, garlands in their hair, and the two pageboys.

At one point the royal couple kissed and touched off a crescendo of cheers from the surging crowds.

The union of the 32-year-old Prince of Wales and Lady Diana, the 20-year-old kindergarten teacher with the captivating smile, was the first time in three centuries that the heir to the British throne has married an English-born woman.

"This is the stuff of which fairy tales are made," observed the archbishop at the cathedral.

First lady Nancy Reagan was the official U.S. representative, sitting among the foreign dignitaries in St. Paul's. Besides the masses of spectators here, at least 500 million others were believed to have watched the ceremony on television around the world.

"I've never seen anything like it," one veteran bobby said of the crowds. "We've got the whole of Britain ... here." Authorities had feared possible terrorist attacks or other violence during the great event, but no incidents marred the procession or ceremony.

There was a reminder overnight of Britain's domestic problems, however, when new youth rioting broke out in the northwest port of Liverpool.

At St. Paul's altar, the nervous heir to the British throne pronounced, "I Charles Philip Arthur George take thee Diana Frances to my wedded wife, to have and to hold from this day forward..."

Diana, standing in a cloud of white, cast a sidelong glance and smile at her groom.

Then she, speaking scarcely above a whisper, repeated the vow, but slipped up, repeating Charles' full name in the wrong order, promising to marry "Philip Charles Arthur George." Charles also erred at one point, dropping the word "worldly" when he promised to share his "worldly goods."

The Prince of Wales then placed the band of Welsh gold on the bride's hand, and the archbishop, the Rt. Rev. Robert Runcie, declared them wed.

The throngs in the sunshine outside, listening to the ceremony on loudspeakers, broke a hushed silence with loud cheers.

Pitt Commissioners Not Surprised By School Bd.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Board of County Commissioners were not too surprised over action taken by the Pitt County Board of Education July 17 to fund three assistant superintendent positions and a supervisor the commissioners deleted from the school budget for the 1981-82 fiscal year.

County Manager Reginald Gray, in recommending a budget for the new fiscal year, suggested one assistant superintendent and one supervisor be dropped from the county schools' central office staff. Commissioners took his recommendation a step further and deleted two additional assistant superintendents from the school's budget. In all, the total amount of money involved in dropping the four positions amounted to more than $126,000.

Rather than take the money completely away from the schools, commissioners earmarked the funds to be spent for student instructional supplies, repairs to buildings and utilities.

However, after the Board of Commissioners gave final approval to the 1981-82 budget, the County Board of Education met and voted to pay the positions from surplus funds (an estimated $493,600 as of June 30).

School Board member Bill McLawhorn, who made the motion to retain the personnel, said, "It would be a step backward not to fund these positions. We need them to maintain the quality of education we offer our 11,000 county students."

Board member Jack Edwards suggested retaining all the

Israeli, Syrian Jet Fighters In Dogfight

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria and Israel each claimed shooting down a jet fighter in a dogfight over Lebanon today that put the most serious strain yet on the six-day-old cease-fire.

Israel said its warplanes shot down a Soviet-made MIG-25 Syrian jet and returned safely from a "routine reconnaissance mission" over Lebanon. Syria said one Israeli jet was downed, and conceded a Syrian plane was "hit."

Lebanese security forces said the pilot of the downed Syrian jet bailed out, was picked by a helicopter about 30 miles northeast of Beirut and later flown to Damascus, the Syrian capital.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said a pilotless Israeli reconnaissance drone was later shot down by a Syrian anti-aircraft missile fired from eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Syria threatened less than 24 hours ago to shoot down Israel jets on reconnaissance flights as violators of the cease-fire. Israel insists that under the terms of the U.S.-mediated truce it is entitled to conduct reconnaissance flights, and the State Department supports this position.

Anti-aircraft batteries opened fire shortly after the Israeli jets passed over the Lebanese capital early today. The Syrian jet was sent up apparently to challenge the Israeli planes.

It was the 15th Syrian jet reported lost in air battles with the Israeli air force over Lebanon in two years. Israel said it downed a MIG 25 previously, in a dogfight Feb. 13 east of Beirut. The last clash prior to today's occurred July 15, when Israeli warplanes downed a Syrian jet over southern Lebanon.

Damascus Radio said Tuesday night that if Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin "implemented what he had announced, that his war planes would continue to violate Lebanese air space, then Syria is ready to confront these planes and shoot them down."

Israel previously rejected the Palestinian contention that its reconnaissance flights violated the cease-fire. The Israelis said they were necessary self-defense measures and would continue, and the jets have been flying over Beirut almost daily since Friday's truce ended 15 days of fighting that left some 450 Lebanese and six Israelis dead.

Fear Disastrous Toll In Iranian Earthquake

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Tehran Radio reported more than 700 bodies recovered, but the provincial government predicted a toll of more than 4,000 dead in an earthquake that hit the southeast Iranian province of Kerman during the night.

It was the second quake disaster in the region in less than two months and the third in four years.

"The number of victims of the earthquake has surpassed the 700 mark," the Iranian government radio reported this afternoon. "Efforts to recover the bodies of other victims are continuing."

The governor general of the province, Abdolhossein Saveh, said the quake was centered in the small town of Shadhad, about 500 miles southeast of Tehran and 30 miles northeast of Kerman, the provincial capital.

He predicted the toll would be between 4,000 and 5,000 dead, Pars said.

Hospitals in Kerman reported 40 dead and 400 injured in the provincial capital, Tehran Radio reported earlier.

Pars said the quake measured between 6.5 and 7 on the Richter scale and flattened 90 per cent of the buildings in the district.

Army units and rescue squads were trying to clear debris-choked roads in the remote mountainous region as helicopters rushed rescuers, medical personnel and supplies to the area, Pars said, but the rugged terrain hampered operations.

Pars said the first rescue squads "are digging bodies out of the ruins." A team of more than 50 doctors and the head of the Iranian Red Crescent Society flew to the stricken region.

Forty bodies had been recovered nearly 12 hours after the quake struck and more than 400 injured had been pulled from the rubble, Pars reported.

Saveh made an urgent appeal for rescue workers, medical supplies, blankets and tents. He said the Iranian military was flying in help. Pars said a three-day period of mourning has been declared. Pars said the Tehran University Geophysical Center reported the quake hit at 8:54 p.m. and said the epicenter was near the village of Andoogherd, 15 miles south of Shadhad and 220 miles west of the point where Iran borders both Afghanistan and Pakistan.

The U.S. Geological Survey office in Golden, Colo., measured the quake at 7.3 on the Richter scale but estimated that the epicenter was near Tabas, in Khurasan Province north of Kerman.

The Shadhad area is less than 50 miles from the village of Goldbagh, which was flattened by June 11 quake June 11 that the Iranian Red Crescent said killed 1,000 people and injured 1,500 others. It measured 6.9 on the Richter scale.

The same area also was rocked by a quake in 1977 that killed 580 people and injured more than 1,000.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one whole number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake with a reading of 7.0 is considered a "major" quake, capable of widespread heavy damage, while one of 8.0 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

Bonds Sold

The City of Greenville sold $4.5 million in water bonds Tuesday to fund continued construction of the new water treatment plant north of the Tar River off the Old River Road.

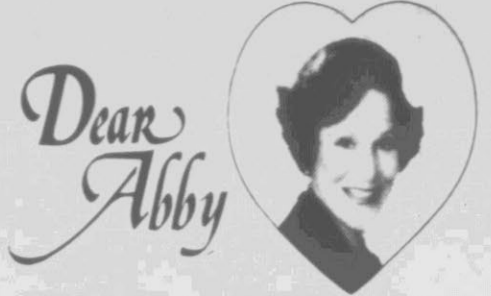

Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. NA and Associates submitted the low of three bids on the water bonds, proposing a net interest cost of 10.5507 percent.

Al Averette, the city's finance officer, said the city will pay an average interest rate of 10.5507 percent on the bonds, which will have an average maturity rate of 9.75 years.

The range of bids submitted yesterday, according to the N.C. Department of the Treasurer, was 10.5507 to 10.6230 percent.

Some $7.5 million of the $14 million in bonds authorized in a 1979 local referendum were sold last July, leaving $2 million in bonds to sell before the treatment facility and related improvements are completed.

The bond transactions took place at the office of the Local Government Commission in Raleigh.

Dear Abby

Wife Thinks Differently

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Re wife searching husband's desk at office. Sorry, Abby, but it is the consensus of every single (or married) secretary with whom I discussed the letter that you are wrong.

As a confidential secretary to a corporate vice president of a major oil company, and as a wife of an executive with the largest automobile manufacturer in the world, I would no more expect my husband's secretary to permit me to go through his desk than I would expect her to jump into his (and my!) bed. In fact, I've never even been to his office, nor has my boss's wife been to his. I would not even think of going through my husband's briefcase in our home. This would be violating not only his privacy, but his company's.

My suggestion to a secretary put in such a spot would be simply to offer to find whatever it is the wife is looking for. If the wife is persistent, I'd stand boldly at the desk watching every move, stating that she should know that I would, indeed, feel obligated to inform her husband of this.

A secretary works for her boss and his company. If a wife has the audacity to intrude, for whatever reason, the marriage is already in trouble, obviously, and the secretary's alliance is to her boss at all times. Your job, Abby, may be saving marriages (lots of luck!); mine, in this particular instance, would be to protect my job.

LOYAL SECRETARY

DEAR SECRETARY: Your answer was better than mine. Thank you. I learned something today.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23 and my fiancée is 22. We've been engaged for a year and went together for three years before that. A Christmas-season wedding is scheduled. My problem is I don't want to marry this woman. We are not happy together and we fight and argue every time we see each other.

I have tried to break the engagement several times, but she cries and carries on and I get nowhere, so I give up.

She said she couldn't consider breaking the engagement because she would be humiliated before her friends.

Another complication: About six months ago, I fell in love with one of her best friends. (This friend was asked to be a bridesmaid.) She loves me, too, and we feel terrible having to sneak around to see each other.

I know I have to break this engagement, but how?

NO NAMES, NATURALLY

DEAR NO NAMES: Tell your fiancée that you cannot marry her knowing that the marriage will not be based on mutual love. Let her know that if it's humiliation she's dreading, she may tell her friends that she broke it off. And don't mention your present love affair. One blow at a time is enough. Good luck. You'll need it.

DEAR ABBY: I have worked 14 years in an office where no smoking was permitted. Six months ago we got a new supervisor who smokes, and now two-thirds of my co-workers have cigarettes going all the time.

My clothes smell terrible, my eyes are red and sore, and I am concerned about the damage secondhand smoke can cause to my health.

How can I get clean air where I work? If I bug my supervisor about it, I could lose my job to a smoker.

SMOKED OUT

DEAR SMOKED OUT: Sorry, there is nothing you can do about it. I know it's unfair. But who ever said life was fair? (P.S. Our country, for all its advantages, is lagging in citizens' rights. A law was recently passed in Switzerland making it illegal to smoke in a public telephone booth. Hooray for the Swiss!)

...

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in reply to the 21-year-old girl who said her boyfriend doesn't kiss her because she wears braces on her teeth. Well, I have no idea why her boyfriend doesn't kiss her, but I'm sure the braces have nothing to do with it. You said that maybe the lips get cut from too much pressure. Wrong. I have a boyfriend with braces and he is better than anyone I've ever kissed!

I had my lip cut once during a kiss and the guy didn't even wear braces!

Blackmail Accusations Said A Publicity Stunt

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Stephen Neal's charges that a conservative group tried to bribe him into voting for President Reagan's tax-cut proposal is "a publicity stunt," the group's head said Tuesday.

John T. Dolan, chairman of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, said at a press conference at Greensboro's Regional Airport that there is nothing wrong with a group telling a congressman it will work to defeat him if he votes against the group's wishes.

"That's what everyone does," he said.

Neal, a Winston-Salem Democrat who has represented North Carolina's 5th District since 1975, has asked the U.S. Justice Department to investigate NCPAC's offer to cancel ads attacking him if Neal supports Reagan's tax cut plan rather than a Democratic alternative.

Dolan said in a letter last week that NCPAC would pay for ads praising Neal if he supported the Reagan plan.

"I construe it to be an offer of a bribe, a threat, and an attempt to blackmail a duly elected official," Neal said in a letter to U.S. Attorney General William French Smith.

The group, which has targeted 13 Democratic congressmen for its tax cut campaign, still plans to spend $40,000 on ads blasting Neal if he votes against the Reagan plan, said Dolan.

Neal said he disagrees with NCPAC's explanation that the political ads are an expression of First Amendment rights.

"I think this fellow Dolan engaged in criminal behavior," he said.

Neal cited a federal law that says, "Whoever directly or indirectly corruptly gives, offers or promises anything of value to any public official ... to influence any official act" is guilty of a crime.

Neal said he was "leaning toward" the Democratic tax cut proposal because it gives a bigger break to those who earn less than $50,000 a year and because it would "provide a lower budget deficit."

Neal said NCPAC's involvement would influence his vote "in no way whatsoever" when the House votes on the tax cut issue.

NCPAC spent more than $8 million last year to help defeat such prominent liberal senators as Frank Church, George McGovern, John Culver and Birch Bayh.

NCPAC already has started its $600,000 campaign against most of the 13 Democratic congressmen because they have announced they will vote for the Democratic tax cut plan, Dolan said.

The group decided to withhold ads criticizing Neal because Neal said he was undecided on how he would vote, Dolan said.

If Neal votes for the Democratic plan, Dolan said, NCPAC plans a campaign of direct mailings, newspapers and radio ads in the 5th District.

But if Neal votes for the Reagan plan, Dolan said, NCPAC will spend a smaller amount to buy ads congratulating Neal. Dolan wouldn't speculate on how much NCPAC might spend to praise Neal, whom he said the group may oppose actively in the 1982 election.

HIT THAT FIRE! — Greenville firefighters work to extinguish a blaze in a 22 x 99 foot building at Home Builders Supply Co. on Dickinson Ave. this morning. The 4:38 a.m. fire caused heavy damage to the structure, used to store storm windows and doors. A new shipment of windows and doors had just arrived yesterday and was lost to the flames, according to manager J.B. Surles. The fire was through the roof before fire units arrived, and it took firefighters approximately 25 to 30 minutes to bring it under control fire department officers estimated. Fire officials reported firemen managed to confine the blaze to the one building, and said no damage resulted to any of the other buildings. Two firemen were injured while fighting the fire when a roof overhang fell on them. None were hospitalized, according to fire department officials. Surles said that the company plans to rebuild the structure as soon as possible. He estimated the damage to the building and contents at $80,000. According to Pitt County Tax Department records, the structure had a tax value of $5,060 and an estimated replacement cost of $15,265. (Reflector Photo by Larry Zicherman)

Instructors At Workshop

Fourteen Adult Basic Education Instructors from Pitt Community College recently attended a 10-hour State ABE Instructors' workshop held regionally this year in Kinston.

This workshop was attended by approximately 125 ABE instructors from the eastern part of North Carolina. Instructors attending from Greenville were Kay Allen, Barbara Atkinson, William Atkinson, Virginia Carlton, Phyllis Collingwood, Anne Cowan, Rebie Crandol, William Crandol, Jennifer King, Louise Mayo, Louise Ormond, Mary Jane Sisk, Ella Telfaire and Martha Tyson.

"Motivation and Stress" by Jim Hamlett, "Developing Learning Styles Versus Learning Styles Relationships" by Jim Godwin and "Evaluating and Selecting Material for ABE Students" by Nancy Gaye were among the main topics of discussion.

Mary C. Outerbridge, ABE Coordinator, feels that engaging instructors in staff development activities such as this will enhance the quality of teaching and improve the Adult Basic Education Program.

A Logical Consequence

Reports of hunger marches and protests against food shortages are a logical consequence of the unrest permeating Poland.

It's just a shade unreal. In many respects Poland is rich in terms of natural resources; but productivity in that country has sharply declined (and necessarily so) because of frequent large scale strikes, demonstrations and protest measures seeking redress and remedial actions in governmental abuses. Now those activities are bearing some bitter fruit.

Long before Lech Walesa and the Solidarity movement took center-stage, the Polish economy was in trouble. Stoppages in all fields of productivity have served to intensify those problems.

Demonstrators may blame the government for their problems — applicable in ordinary times under the system of rule when government runs the economy; but when productivity and services are interrupted by the people, there are many to share the blame.

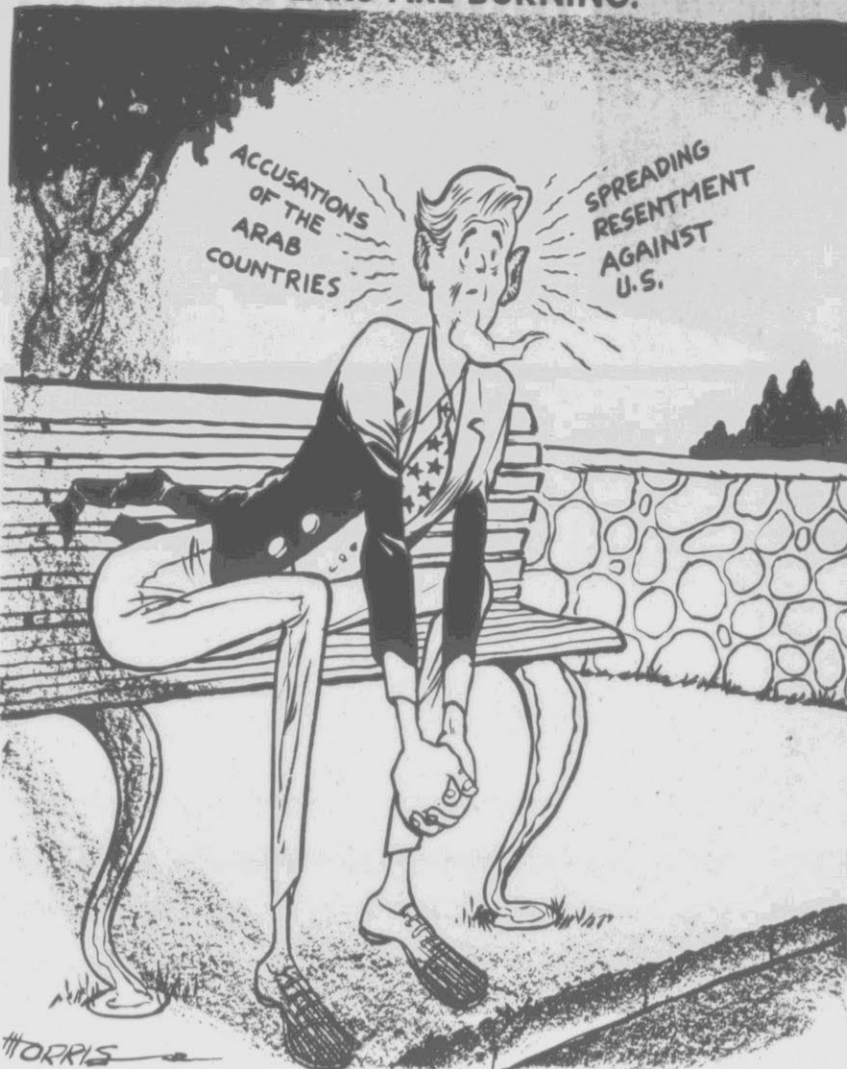

Prospects of further protest strikes and demonstrations are certain to result in greater economic setbacks and possibly even damage the hard-won causes of greater individual freedoms and political rights.

The revolutionary spirit of the Poles has resulted in unheard-of reforms within a member of the Iron curtain community. Thus far it has been reluctantly tolerated.

The Kremlin may have to someday face a choice of crushing dissidence in Poland (and we've heard that before) or allowing an economic collapse with all its misery and hardships as an object lesson to ringsiders within the Soviet bloc.

The months of summer productivity are waning; and time is running out before rigors of winter set in. Poland's idealists are winning victories in their fight for reform, but practicalities of their plight carry with them a legion of menacing potentials.

Israel Holds Veto Power

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK WASHINGTON — The reason the Rev. Jerry Falwell refused to see Arab Christian clergymen who wanted to plead the anti-Israeli cause with him was a personal commitment by the Moral Majority leader to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin giving Israel veto power over such visits.

In repeated telephone conversations with Begin, Falwell has agreed to check out such visitors with the Israeli Embassy. When a friend recently asked him to see a leading churchman from the Middle East, Falwell refused on grounds that the Israeli Embassy had advised him against it.

That opens a possible gap between Falwell and many of his Moral Majority followers, unhappy about Israel's bombing of Beirut and the resulting civilian casualties. The Begin-Falwell tie, which derives from biblical scriptures about the ancient land of Israel, may be frayed by Begin's military operations.

Majority Leader Jim Wright's harsh language describing budget director David Stockman.

Still ranking over the budget defeat suffered a month earlier, Wright showed none of the usual civility practiced in Washington when describing a Cabinet member, much less a former congressional colleague. Wright called Stockman "craven" and "cowardly" and accused him of demanding "100 percent submission" from Congress.

Wright, a staunch supporter of synthetic fuels, charged Stockman with using dictatorial powers to kill the program after failing as a House member to round up more than a handful of votes against it. He then went on to describe Stockman as a second-rate congressman who failed to make his mark on Capitol Hill. Longtime Washington hands never had heard anything quite like it.

Teddy And Fritz Fumble Both Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and former vice president Walter F. Mondale undercut their Pennsylvania prospects in any future campaign for president when they spurred organized labor's plea not to campaign for what turned out to be the losing candidate in the Philadelphia special congressional election July 21.

Ed Toohy, the veteran AFL-CIO leader in Philadelphia, personally asked that both Kennedy and Mondale stay out of the contest. Instead, both campaigned there for city Democratic Chairman David Glancy, who lost badly to labor-backed State Sen. Joseph Smith, a Democrat running as both a Republican and an independent.

Toohy, a longtime political ally of the Kennedys, was particularly vehement in seeking the senator's neutrality in a telephone conversation with Kennedy aide Paul Kirk. But Kirk insisted that Kennedy owed the favor to his old friend, Philadelphia Mayor William Green, Glancy's political patron. That means Kennedy and Mondale may get a cool 1984 reception from Philadelphia labor.

Warning To Boll Weevils A shrouded warning of "disciplinary actions" to Democratic congressmen who voted against their party and for President Reagan in the House has been sounded by Rep. Gillis Long of Louisiana, chairman of the Democratic Caucus, in a confidential letter to all House Democrats.

Long wrote that "I personally believe ... many of our brethren who did not support the party on the budget will find their way home on the tax bill." That was Long's carrot.

His stick: He announced a meeting of the caucus in September "to achieve a greater amount of unity within our caucus." That meeting will follow the tax debate and Long's threat is clear: "Boll weevils" who do not come home in the tax fight will be targets for what Long's letter called "disciplinary actions."

Donovan's Foul Ball?

Contrary to published reports that President Reagan authorized it, Labor Secretary Ray Donovan intervened in the baseball strike despite a warning from the White House.

The warning was a telephone call from presidential chief of staff James A. Baker III that, if not exactly a red light, was a deep shade of amber. While not telling Donovan flatly to keep out, Baker suggested that he move very carefully. "If you know Jim," one White House insider told us, "you would understand he was trying to send Donovan a message."

Donovan got the message sufficiently to hold the renewed negotiations at the Federal Mediation Service offices in Washington rather than the Labor Department. But Donovan is wrong in thinking that put him at arm's length from the talks. He will get either credit or blame for what happens, and the White House would have preferred that he mind his own business.

Resolved By Walking

I am constantly amazed how the airlines are solving their problems. Everyone is aware that one of the big stumbling blocks to future air transportation is airport facilities. No airport in the country is prepared to handle the new air buses carrying 400 passengers that will soon be put into service.

I was under the impression that no one was working on the crisis, but I was wrong. The airlines and airports together are solving the problem in one of the most unconventional ways that human engineers have ever devised.

They're making people walk to their destinations. As the airports get larger, they keep extending their terminals, and the gates to the aircraft keep getting farther away.

I discovered the consequence of this the other day when I had to catch a plane in Chicago for Davenport, Iowa. I started walking toward my gate; then, realizing that I had only an hour to make it, I started jogging. A few miles later I noticed that I still wasn't anywhere near the gate, so I started sprinting. But because I was carrying a briefcase, I just didn't have the spurt I needed for the last few miles, and I missed my plane.

The airline ticket attendant was very sympathetic and said to me, "Why don't you walk to Davenport? It's only a few more miles down the road."

"Only a few more miles down the road?" "Yes, we don't like to talk about it, because we naturally want people to fly, but most of our airline terminals have been spreading out so far, that our departure gates are located only a few miles from where people are going. If you look out the window, you can see the lights of Davenport right over there."

ART BUCHWALD

"That's amazing," I said. "I knew I had gone pretty far, but I didn't think I was anywhere near Davenport."

"Most people don't," the ticket attendant said. "But you see we have to keep extending the wings of the terminal to handle the traffic, and so the cities get nearer and nearer. Next year we plan to link the Davenport and Chicago airports so passengers can walk between the two of them without getting wet. It certainly will solve the pressing airport traffic problems."

I thought Chicago was the only airport doing this, but not long ago I was out in Los Angeles and had to make a plane for Santa Barbara. When I was given my gate number for the flight, I started for it. And you can imagine my delight and surprise when I discovered that by the time I got there I was only five miles from the Santa Barbara city limits.

Then recently I was in Miami and had to fly to Tampa. As I walked through the terminal to my gate, I stopped off for lunch at the Palm Beach Airport snack bar, and then continued straight on to find my plane was parked at a gate number just beyond Orlando.

I found out that every major airport in the country is now working on tunnels and ramps which will eventually hook up with airports in other cities. It's the first breakthrough in airline congestion. Engineers predict that in the not-too-distant future, every airline terminal in the United States will be linked together, and by the time a passenger reaches his gate number on foot he will have arrived at the place where he originally intended to fly.

Strength For Today

HOW WICKED? "The heart of man is desperately wicked."

This is an outstanding understatement of the Bible. When a flood or a great fire, or an earthquake occurs, destroying much property, the first thing the governor of the state does is call out the national guard. Immediately following the great disaster, hundreds of people move into the area, loot the houses, strip the clothes off some of the dead, and go through the pockets of other corpses, looking for money. This kind of behavior is a symbolic reason why the crime bill in the United States is almost one-fourth as large as the sum required to run the entire national government.

We talk about our economic problems, our international and industrial problems, but these are insignificant beside the problem of sin.

The vast sin in the world also exists in the hearts of each one of us, creating problems wherever it is not stamped out. "Desperately wicked"? Yes, and then some. — Elisha Douglass

Applying The Better Way

This we appreciate. Greenville is looking for citizens with the interest and talents to serve on some seven boards or commissions...going so far as to advertise for them.

This opens local government to a more diversified participation than is in general practice. It beats the buddy system, it beats the draft, it beats just about any other imaginable process for filling seats with qualified applicants.

The City Council is reaching out for people to serve in such varied roles as the Greenville Energy Commission, the Board of Adjustment, the Planning and Zoning Commission, the Greenville Foundation, the Redevelopment Commission, the Bikeway Committee and the Recreation Commission.

We are convinced there is a lot of valuable ideas, energies and skills out there that can contribute mightily to a better Greenville.

Step right up ladies and gentlemen. Greenville needs you.

THIS AFTERNOON

Women Move Up

By BILL NOBLITT RALEIGH — It stands to reason that if more North Carolina women must work to help the family make its financial obligations in these inflationary times, they will push upward for better jobs and better paying jobs.

That's one of the reasons for the continued agitation for the Equal Rights Amendment — the guarantees within that simple Constitutional change which would mean that women doing the same jobs as men would get both the pay and the chance for advancement that men get.

Events prove that women are increasingly "upward mobile" in the world of work. A clear demonstration of that is contained in enrollment figures at the state's 57-campus Community College system.

Even in the technical courses, the typical student today is a young female who works full time, makes good money on the job, and is taking community college courses in order to get a better job and earn more.

Less Pay

All of which makes it more astounding that local community college campuses in some sections of the state are coming under fire for hiring men to teach courses when there are women applicants qualified and, indications that in some instances female instructors are being paid less than men teaching the same courses.

A weak explanation was

given for that condition by one Community College official who commented that the schools sometimes have to pay a man more because it's hard to find one experienced and qualified to teach some particular courses. Wouldn't it be just as difficult to find a qualified woman to teach particular courses? And wouldn't that same explanation justify paying women even more than men, when one can be found ready to teach in some highly technical field? Especially since the colleges own census data proves that women in the technical classroom is where the action is?

Just 10 years ago, the typical college student was a young man taking courses for junior college credit, or to transfer credit so he could move on to a senior institution. The community colleges offer two "tracks." One consists of curriculum courses which include college transfer work, general education, special credit courses and technical and vocational training.

The other is called continuing education which includes occupational or academic extension work (such as training dieticians at an institution or going to a plant to train workers in a new skill) and fundamental education for those trying to catch up on education missed in high school so they can gain a diploma.

Even More

With headcounts now demonstrating that more than half of the women among North Carolina's population

Other Editors Say Baffling Laxity

(The Durham Sun)

There is no excuse for the puzzling reluctance of North Carolina's courts to treat driving while intoxicated as a serious offense.

That reluctance is indeed the right word is made clear in figures compiled by Ben F. Loeb Jr. of the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill.

According to Loeb, the conviction rate for driving while intoxicated is falling, despite a tougher law passed in 1975. Moreover, the rate varies widely from county to county.

Buncombe County, for example, convicts a healthy 95 percent of persons charged with driving under the influence. By contrast, Durham County convicts fewer than 60 percent and Orange County fewer than 50 percent. Statewide, the average is 68.4 percent, a disturbing drop from 75.6 percent just six years ago.

What these figures mean, of course, is that a person charged with driving under the influence who registers more than 0.10 on a Breathalyzer, stands a good chance of going scot-free.

Loeb deserves credit for pulling no punches in placing blame for this shameful state of affairs. The new law enacted by the General Assembly, he notes, is "clear, concise and simple." The problem, he believes, lies with the criminal-justice system.

When crime is a problem, blaming lax judges and district attorneys is nothing new. Often such sweeping criticism is unfair.

But the figures compiled by Loeb open the door wide to serious, solid doubts about the commitment of this state's court system to getting and keeping intoxicated drivers off our roads.

Excuses will change nothing. Enforcing the law strictly will.

Brazil Opts For Less Govm't

By BRUCE HANDLER Associated Press Writer RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Brazil, which claims to be capitalist but which has a large measure of state control, is seeking to clarify its image by selling government-run companies to private parties.

One reason, observers here claim, is the feeling that the government bureaucracy has grown too large and unwieldy, and that it contributes to an inflation rate in excess of 100 percent a year.

The offer to transfer assets to the private sector, however, is very limited. First, sizable categories of government-run firms are excluded from the offer, among them businesses linked to the government's definition of "national security." Those falling into the categories of "legal state monopolies," "products of basic strategic importance" and "Brazilian control of the development process," are also excluded.

That means private entrepreneurs, no matter how rich or efficient, can't buy the post office, the Rio de Janeiro Phone Company or the Sao Paulo state railway system. Neither can they bid for Ebraer, Brazil's main airplane factory, or Petrobras, the federal oil monopoly.

Second, no state-run firm up for sale may be turned over to a foreigner. The government doesn't explain why — but there has been criticism recently of multinational corporate activity in Brazil.

President Joao Figueiredo said the sell-off plan is designed to lessen "unfair or unnecessary competition" between the government and local private enterprise. But newspapers here have said a more accurate reason is that Figueiredo, an ex-army general, is extremely upset that many government-linked firms are exceeding their budgets this year, and contributing to the nation's record 120 percent annual inflation rate.

In 1964, when armed forces leaders overthrew a legally elected civilian administration, they explained that among other things that they were seeking to stop Brazil from "going communist."

Since then, however, the federal bureaucracy has expanded so much that critics say it is hard to detect economic differences between "capitalist" Brazil and centrally planned communist states.

According to the latest issue of Visao magazine's "Who's Who in the Brazilian Economy," a sort of "Fortune 500" report, the nation's biggest 32 companies are under some form of government control.

Veja magazine, Brazil's largest newsweekly, reported that of the $96.4 billion dollars of assets represented by the country's 200 biggest firms, 77.9 percent is linked to the government.

In addition to basic areas such as transportation, communications and energy, the government is involved in exporting shoes, running tourist hotels, making computers, distributing movies, mining iron and copper, producing cellulose, offering individual savings and loan accounts, and even administering supermarkets.

Brazilian private businessmen have been complaining for years that the latter are fields for private enterprise rather than government.

Luis Eulalio Vidigal Bueno, president of the powerful Sao Paulo State Industries Federation, probably the country's most powerful private business lobby, cautiously called Figueiredo's plan to sell government companies "opportune."

But Fernando Nabuco de Abreu, Sao Paulo Stock Exchange president, told a Brazilian newsmag the president's plan does not go far enough.

"I suggest they split the Banco Do Brasil (a government-controlled bank that competes with private banks for many personal and commercial banking services) into 10 parcels and sell the shares to private interests," he was quoted as saying.

On that, the government had no comment.

DOWNTOWN FIRE — Firefighters survey the damage to the Eagle Store on Main Street in downtown Williamston last night. Fire units from Williamston, Bear Grass, Griffins Township and Jamesville fought the 6:31 blaze, which "pretty well caused a total loss of the contents, if not the structure," according to Williamston Fire Chief Tommy Price. Damage was estimated between $150,000 and $250,000. Two firemen suffered heat exhaustion fighting the fire, but neither seriously, according to Price. Investigation into the cause is still underway, but arson was not considered responsible. Fire units were on the scene for over four hours. (Reflector Photo By Larry Zicherman)

Fla. County Remains Dry

CHIPLEY, Fla. (AP) — Washington County is still "an oasis" of 3.2 percent beer amid counties that allow the sale of liquor now that residents have voted to keep the rural area dry.

The sale of liquor was opposed by 2,393 voters and favored by 2,081, according to unofficial tallies in the county's first referendum on the question Tuesday, said Rhonda Kowitz, a county elections office spokeswoman.

Another 274 absentee ballots still must be counted, but Elections Supervisor Marie Mitchell said the number was too small to affect the outcome of the referendum. The counting was to begin this morning.

"I think people understand the connection between open bars and crime," said Tillman Pippin, a Chipley real-estate agent who was vice chairman of the Christian Action Committee, which opposed liquor sales.

The Rev. Richard Bloodworth, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church and leader of those opposed to liquor sales, called Washington County "an oasis." All of its neighboring counties allow liquor sales.

Washington County, in the heart of the Florida panhandle between Tallahassee and Pensacola, is one of seven of the state's 67 counties to ban liquor sales. The state's 1885 Constitution allows each county to decide whether to permit sales.

Only beer with 3.2 percent alcohol is available in the county.

A group called Citizens for a Progressive Washington County collected more than 2,500 signatures — nearly a third of the registered voters in this sparsely populated county — to bring the issue to a vote.

are working, even that significant trend is likely to escalate in coming years, based upon community college enrollment data:

More than half (54 percent) of the curriculum students are females; and an overwhelming majority (71 percent) of the continuing education students are women.

The profile of a typical student, thus, is more complicated than in the past. The woman works full time, keeps house, often has children, and is enrolled to improve job opportunities down the road. This means that it takes longer to complete a prescribed course of study — she can't go to school full time — and it means that instead of daytime classes being the rule, more and more classes must be offered in the evenings. As some community colleges heads describe their approach — the class will be taught whenever enough students want it, even if that means two o'clock in the morning.

For these students, the community college is not a "second choice," but rather their first and best hope for building a better future.

DuPont Says Phase-out Won't Hurt So Many

By Tom Baines
Reflector Staff Writer
KINSTON — Du Pont officials say the phase out of the industrial tire and seat belt yarn business here is continuing but the number of employees ultimately affected by a subsequent layoff will be less than expected initially.

Howard Kress, plant manager, said Tuesday that while the company had expected to complete the production phase out by the end of the year with an excess employment figure of some 233 people, it is now anticipated that the maximum excess will be around 80 employees.

Du Pont, he said, is working hard to reduce the employment excess figure and avoid layoffs.

Kress, who briefed media representatives on hand for Media Day at the plant, said the phase out activities have not resulted in anyone being forced off the payroll yet. He explained that so far, 97 employees have left the roll voluntarily, including 39 who moved to other Du Pont facilities, 18 who took voluntary layoff, and 40 who left for other reasons.

The plant manager said that the company is looking at employment opportunities at other locations for additional hourly roll and management personnel. Jobs have been found so far for ten management people, Kress reported.

In addition, Kress said some of those affected by the phase out will be utilized as the plant undertakes limited expansion of existing product lines. Du Pont also expects to be able to utilize some of the equipment idled by the production phase out, he said, and interest is being sought from other company departments in making use of the equipment.

The phase out, announced in March, marks the first time the plant has "gone out of business on a product," the spokesman reported. The Kinston facility began operations in 1953 as the first commercial producer of polyester fiber in the world.

Du Pont is making strides in the life sciences industry but Kress said there are no plans now to establish production capabilities at Kinston for segments of the industry such as pharmaceuticals, medical diagnostics and instruments, or agricultural chemicals. He acknowledged, however, that there are "excellent areas in the existing building" for such production opportunities.

Gene Houck, personnel superintendent here, told the media guests that the level of activity by the steelworkers union toward organizing at the plant had increased "in the last few months." Houck said the company's approach is to continue to treat its employees fairly and Du Pont does not "really feel our employees will benefit by the union."

Houck said that while the union representatives are apparently promising higher wages, Du Pont wages are higher than the average union employee.

Houck said that in order for a vote to take place on union organization, the National Relations Board must be petitioned for an election. Such a petition has not been secured here "as far as we know," he said.

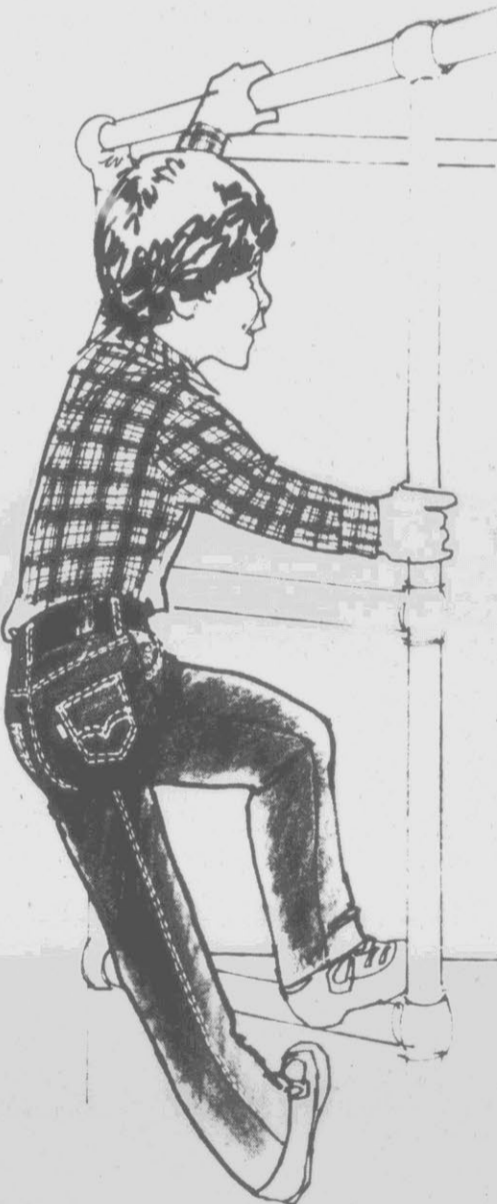

Houck said the plant currently has a roster of some 2,700 employees who take home an annual payroll of more than $65 million. Of the total employment figure, some 950 or 33 percent are from Pitt County.

Commissioners..... New VOA Manager Is Widely Traveled Man

personnel but switch them into alternate positions to keep within the monies appropriated by the Commissioners.

Another board member, James Black, called retaining all personnel in their present positions "only postponing the inevitable. When you spend surplus funds you no longer have surplus funds. We'll have to make a decision sometime — now it's being postponed until next year."

A statement issued following the school board action said: "The Board of Commissioners in reviewing the 1981-82 Pitt County School current expense budget felt the central office staff was top heavy, taking into consideration the allocation of assistant superintendents and supervisors by the state and as compared to other school systems in the state. Therefore the funds previously budgeted for county paid assistant superintendents and supervisors could be better spent in other areas where it would do the most good ... the classroom level and individual students would receive the full benefit of the funds."

Individually, commissioners had their own thoughts. "They are pretty much doing what we thought they'd do," Commissioner Kelly Barnhill said of the school board action. "We were trying to put the money back in the classroom where we hoped it would do the most good, without cutting their budget and cutting down on the per pupil apportionment."

He added, "the surplus will run out one of these days." "We didn't intend for it to be that way," Commissioner Alton Gardner noted, while Commissioner Burney Tucker said, "I've talked with a bunch of teachers ... principals, too, who said we did the right thing."

"It was nothing personal," Commissioner Charles Gaskins pointed out. "They are positions that the state does not fund. They are extra positions and the Board of Commissioners ... agreed we certainly didn't want to pick up funding that the state didn't plan to fund. It appeared to us that the money was certainly needed in other places."

Commissioner Bob Martin noted that, "the N. C. Department of Public Instruction's school standards allocates one assistant superintendent for school units the size of Pitt and includes school units larger than Pitt. I think the Department of Public Instruction is better qualified to say what the school system needs."

"Pitt County has five assistant superintendents, three of which are being paid by county funds. Greenville City Schools, with almost half as many students, has no assistant superintendent."

"Taxpayers are opposed to larger anything. Especially government. We were attempting to trim the fat out of county government."

"Of course," Martin added, "the school board has their own desires and wishes. I have no criticism of them. They have their own priorities."

"We thought the (money) could be used to better advantage in other categories."

By JERRY RAYNOR

After 30 years service with the Voice of America, Edwin (Slo) Davis is stationed nearer his birthplace of Pickens, South Carolina than he has ever been before. Several weeks ago he moved to Greenville to become manager of the Greenville site of VOA.

His wife, Martha Harden Davis, is also a South Carolina native. "Having come from the South, we are both pleased about being here," Davis said. "Of all the places we've lived, we find Greenville the friendliest place."

Davis added that he was first in Greenville in 1962, "when I visited here to help staff the VOA site. There's been lots of changes since then."

Since 1951 when Davis joined VOA, most of the intervening years have been spent on foreign soil. "My first assignment was to Tangier in Morocco, a fascinating place. It's really an exciting international city of intrigue, the colorful place it's depicted to be."

His next assignment was in Munich, Germany. "Munich is where my daughter, Kip, was born. She recently married. Martha and I also have two sons, Barrie and Greg. All our children are grown and away from home now. But," he added, "we're still waiting for our first grandchild, and Martha has taken up painting." Several of her efforts hang in Davis' office.

Assignments after Munich were at Baguio in the Philippine Islands, in Okinawa, in Monrovia, Liberia, in Kavala in northern Greece, "and then, before coming to Greenville, we had our final overseas assignment back at Baguio for a second time."

Noting that he, his wife and children all enjoyed travel and living in different places,

Davis commented "each place we lived had its special appeal and interest. Fortunately, we seemed to be in the right place at the right time. Our tour in Liberia, for example, preceded the coup d'etat there, and in Okinawa, we were there during an exciting period, when the Ryuku Islands were reverting to Japanese control."

"Of all the places we lived in, the Greek town of Kavala was the most isolated. It's a lovely remote place near the Greek border with Turkey and Bulgaria, and the people there were happy, friendly people."

Davis mentioned that "for a short period between two foreign assignments we were stationed in Washington, D. C. A Washington assignment is part of the pattern. We liked being there, but it's a very expensive place to live in."

Education opportunities for their three children posed no real problems. "Most of the time the children attended overseas schools that served the military. One son for a time attended an Episcopal School in Baguio."

During the Vietnamese conflict, Davis shuttled back and forth between the Philippines and Hue, Viet Nam. "These were special mission assignments," he remarked. "John Casey, who retired from VOA in Greenville some years back, was another of the VOA people who had special mission assignments in Viet Nam."

Commenting on the present VOA operation at the Greenville transmitter site, Davis said "there's not been any significant changes in the operation in the past few years except for the use of satellite circuits in broadcasting. From Greenville we are still primarily covering African, European and South American nations."

Blame N.Y. In Crowding

NEW YORK (AP) — The city's prison chief says overcrowding at Rikers Island and seven other city jails is due partly to the presence of almost 800 state prisoners who are costing the city $15 million a year.

City Correction Commissioner Benjamin Ward also charged at a federal court hearing Tuesday that of the 794 state prisoners among the 9,546 in the city's total jail population, 538 "have no reason to be even near New York City, let alone in city jails."

He said the remaining 256 are those whose presence may be required in city courts, but held that there was no reason why they could not be housed in state facilities in or near the city.

However, State Correction Commissioner Thomas Coughlin said all the state's 35 prisons were filled or nearly filled to capacity except at Attica, where he said a special effort has been made to keep the population down since the bloody 1971 riot.

"There is a psychological mind set about Attica," he added. "Every time we let the population drift up ... we have problems."

The two commissioners were testifying before U.S. District Judge Morris Lasker in connection with a complaint filed by the Legal Aid Society, aimed at alleviating overcrowding in the city jails.

LASHING, TOO KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Three left-wing students were sentenced to lashings, prison terms and fines by a military court for burning public buses in anti-government riots last May, authorities said Tuesday.

See Shutdown Of 400 Schools

BOSTON (AP) — Declining enrollments and budget cuts forced by a tax-cutting amendment will result in the shutdown of 400 public schools this fall, officials said.

A spokesman for the state Department of Education said Tuesday the closings this fall, mostly of elementary schools, will be spread evenly around the state. He said only 250 schools were shut over the past seven years since the state's school enrollment was at its peak.

The voter-approved Proposition 2½ forced a statewide reduction in property taxes estimated to cost cities and towns $500 million in revenue this year.

Bani-Sadr Mum On His Escape

PARIS (AP) — Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Iran's fugitive ex-president, escaped to France today in an Iranian military plane, accompanied by the head of the nation's leading leftist underground organization.

The French government granted the 47-year-old Bani-Sadr political asylum. Tehran Radio later reported that the Iranian government officially demanded his extradition in a request presented to the French Embassy in Tehran.

Disguised by having shaved off his customary mustache, Bani-Sadr landed in an Iranian Air Force 707 jet at the Evreux military air base 60 miles west of Paris at 4:30 a.m. After being given political asylum, he was driven to the apartment of a daughter in a Paris suburb.

Pars, the official Iranian news agency, claimed that the plane was hijacked, but details of the escape were not clear.

Bani-Sadr told reporters outside his daughter's

Slip-Ups In Their Vows

LONDON (AP) — In the moments before she became Princess of Wales today, Lady Diana Spencer made her first slip, speaking her husband's name in the wrong order before the hushed congregation at St. Paul's Cathedral and some 500 million television viewers.

But she was not alone. Prince Charles left out a word in repeating his vows.

Diana, in a dress with a 25-foot train and yards of veil, gracefully negotiated a difficult exit from her coach at the foot of St. Paul's steps. She glided down the long, red-carpeted aisle at her father's side without a false step.

But when the Archbishop of Canterbury, Rt. Rev. Robert Runcie spoke the prince's name for her to repeat: "Charles Philip Arthur George," she promised to marry "Philip Charles Arthur George."

The Prince of Wales also made a mistake, after placing the band of Welsh gold on his bride's finger. He offered to share his "goods" but dropping the word "worldly."

But such minor errors did not stop the archbishop from pronouncing the couple "man and wife together" and crowds outside, listening to the ceremony on loudspeakers, broke their silence with loud cheers.

Project Pushed By Ex-Governor

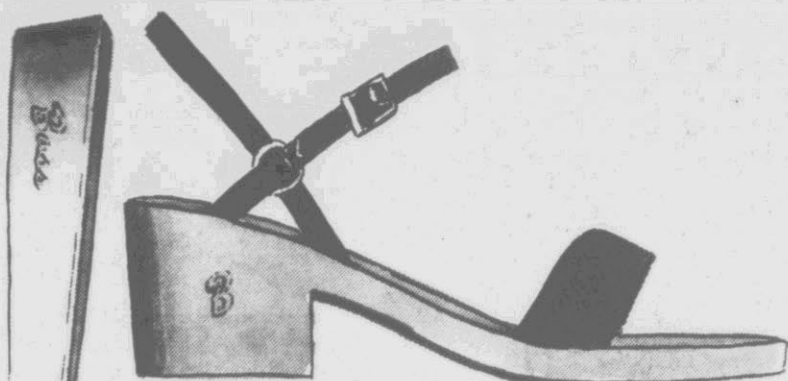

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Dan K. Moore has announced a special advocacy project for abused and neglected children in North Carolina.

Moore, chairman of the board of Child Watch Inc., said this week that volunteers from three pilot communities — Alamance, Wake and Wayne counties — would be trained and supervised as advocates for abused and neglected children.

In the past, only licensed attorneys were allowed under law to serve as advocates in juvenile court abuse or neglect cases.

Suntan Pills Banned But On Market

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Although they've been officially banned, several companies in North Carolina and South Carolina are marketing suntan pills.

Doctors say manufacturers and retailers are getting around a federal ban by selling them as a nutritional supplement that doesn't come under the federal law.

The Food and Drug Administration banned the pills in late May because manufacturers did not follow the correct legal channels for approving the product.

Manufacturers say just a few pills a day will give a sun-tanned look without the sun's hazards: sunburn, sun poisoning and possible skin cancer.

But doctors say the pills have risks of their own.

One Simpsonville, S.C. woman had been taking the Riviera tanning pills, now called Hawaiian Tanning Tablets, for several weeks when she developed hepatitis.

Her doctor said he thinks the pills caused it.

"There's no way to document the truth positively," Dr. Gary Cottingham said. "She did develop a case of toxic hepatitis, with nausea, vomiting, liver problems, a terrible orange color. When she stopped taking the pills, it quickly disappeared."

But the president of cosmetic sciences for Cosmetest Corp., the company that manufactures the tablets, said no other adverse effects from taking the pills had been reported.

Mario Epanietti said the pills had been used in Europe, Canada and the United States for nearly five years. "Over 3½ million have used it since 1977," he said. "One person in 3½ million isn't very much."

All suntan pills contain chemicals that collect in the fat cells under the skin and dye the skin. The resulting color depends on skin type, but can vary from orange to yellow shades of brown.

The main dyes in most of the pills are approved for use as food colors, but are not approved for use in pill form to "tan" human skin.

The FDA ban means no oral tanning products can be brought into the country or sold in states other than where the product is made.

"One manufacturer suggested that because these dyes are allowed in foods and cosmetics, they are automatically permitted in oral tanning preparations," said Harold Davis, FDA consumer safety officer. "FDA considers neither chemical approved for coloring the human body."

Tanning pills marketed in the U.S. before the ban included Dermobronze, Dermabronze, Orobronze, Hawaiian Tan, Tan A Min, and Riviera.

Two brands still available in the Carolinas in spite of the ban include Hawaiian Tanning Tablets and Tan A Min. Carotene Plus, which is marketed as a nutritional supplement but which contains the same coloring ingredient the others do, is available as well.

Long Delay On Water Report

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. waited three years before reporting that toxic chemicals were in the groundwater under its Research Triangle Park facilities, state and company officials said Tuesday.

IBM officials said they reported the problem to the North Carolina Department of Human Resources in September, although it had known of the contamination since 1978, because there was no requirement until last year that IBM make a report.

DHR officials said the chemicals, trichloroethane and methylene chloride, pose no immediate threat to health.

Food Stamp Fraud Sees

7 Arrests

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Food-stamp fraud in Dade County is a "multimillion dollar rip-off," authorities said after five state employees and two other people were arrested in an investigation of welfare fraud.

"We're just in awe at how easy it is to get fraudulent food stamps," said Dade police Lt. Dan Flynn. "We can't help stumbling over leads and people."

Dade County police say investigations since May have "opened up a Pandora's box," resulting in the arrests of the seven on charges of using hundreds of nonexistent southern Florida businesses to cash fraudulently obtained food stamps. An eighth person is being sought in the case.

"It's a hornets' nest," said Detective Harold Hasenbank, who called food stamps "the second form of currency in the country."

Flynn said police are looking into a possible organized-crime link in the alleged multimillion-dollar scam.

Among the seven arrested Monday were five employees of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. Police also are seeking Joseph Henry Brown, 39, on a warrant charging racketeering, grand theft, conspiracy and welfare fraud.

The HRS workers were charged with setting up false businesses and fictitiously named recipients to cash food stamps, investigators said.

Police said the investigation stemmed from the May theft of food stamps from the Joseph Caleb Community Center, a cultural center near downtown Miami.

After investigating leads, police began to unravel what they described as wholesale selling of food stamps for cash.

Investigators said they arrested Leroy Sheffield, also known as Husam Iddin Lateef, on charges of food stamp fraud July 22.

Sheffield had a food store that existed only on paper, police alleged.

Arrested on July 10 was Dorothy Parrish, 33, who allegedly was found with 68 different food stamp eligibility cards in her possession, police said. Officers estimated she had converted more than $134,000 in stamps to cash.

Flynn said both Brown and Ms. Parrish have been charged under organized-crime statutes that allow authorities to seize their assets.

HRS employees Rachel Johnson, Dorothy Wade, Odean Harris, Anthony Turner and Sabrina Martin have been charged with welfare fraud, police said.

"PLOT" ARRESTS
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — At least 24 people have been arrested and charged with belonging to "counter-revolutionary" bands, plotting to overthrow the government, authorities say.

Seek Clues From Study Of Eclipse

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When the skies darken to an eerie twilight over the Soviet Union Friday morning, scientists will be looking at the eclipsed sun's glimmering halo for clues to the development of fusion power.

During the total eclipse, which begins near the Black Sea shortly after 5 a.m. local time (9 p.m. EDT Thursday), only the sun's corona will be visible.

Researchers hope to learn how the hot gases in the corona are held together by magnetic fields. They also want to know how the corona is heated to 4 million degrees Fahrenheit while the temperature on the sun's surface is a relatively chilly 10,000 degrees.

"The magnetic fields holding the hot gas are the type we need on Earth for fusion power," said Jay Pasachoff, an astronomer who will be watching the eclipse from an airplane over the Pacific Ocean.

The development of fusion power reactors — which would use water a fuel for a potentially unlimited source of energy — has been hindered because scientist don't know how to contain gases at temperatures of millions of degrees.

Hundreds of foreign scientists are gathering in Siberia to view the eclipse, many heading to the city of Bratsk that offers one of the best vantage points because the sun will be high in the sky. The sun will be blocked out for about one minute there.

Weather forecasters predicted rain and overcast skies in Bratsk Friday, but a Moscow radio station said some scientists plan to view the eclipse from a plane above the clouds.

It will be the 11th time that Pasachoff, director of the Hopkins Observatory at Williams College in Massachusetts, has chased around the globe to watch a solar eclipse.

"The eclipse phenomenon is the most awesome phenomenon you can see on Earth," Pasachoff said in a telephone interview from Hawaii.

"About a minute before totality we will see, coming from the west, the shadow of the moon on the Earth, a huge column of darkness racing at us at about 2,000 miles an hour."

As the moon slips directly in front of the sun, there will be a few seconds when only one bead of sunlight shines through a valley on the moon. "It shines like a diamond, and it is called the diamond-ring effect," Pasachoff said.

"It goes away after five seconds, then there will be a reddish rim around the sun, and then you see the corona, the beautiful, pearly-white halo that surrounds the sun."

The eclipse, which will sweep across the Soviet Union and the north Pacific and last for a maximum of two minutes in parts of Siberia, is the first total solar eclipse since Feb. 16, 1980, when the moon's shadow crossed India and central Africa.

Americans had their last glimpse of a total solar eclipse on Feb. 26, 1979, and they will not see another one this century. There will not be another solar eclipse in the Soviet Union for 145 years, until Oct. 16, 2126.

The next total eclipse of the sun will occur in Indonesia June 11, 1983, Pasachoff said.

In Honolulu, the sun will be about 60 percent eclipsed, Pasachoff said, but that will be barely noticeable. Close to 80 percent of the sun must be blocked before there is a significant reduction in light.

Tight Security At Royal Rites

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) —
Thousands of uniformed police scanned the crowds along wedding route of Prince Charles and Lady

Diana Spencer today.
Plainclothes officers and special army units mingled with the crowd and watched from rooftops.
Along the final section of the route from Buckingham

Palace to St. Paul's Cathedral, the uniformed policemen were stationed every few yards, chatting and joking with the huge crowd of spectators as Britain mounted one of the largest security operations in its history.

Mail boxes along the route were sealed off to prevent bombs being hidden in them and police with dogs trained to sniff out explosives made final checks inside St. Paul's.

Bomb checks were also made in sewers and police helicopters hovered overhead. Hundreds of television crews from around the world, allowed special vantage points, were given final security checks.

London police refused to disclose how many officers would be stationed along the route. British newspapers said up to 10,000 uniformed officers would be on duty along the two-mile route.

Hundreds of detectives of the elite Special Branch were out on the streets with hidden revolvers while marksmen from special police units who guard dignitaries were posted on top of buildings.

Authorities said soldiers of the British army's secret Special Air Services Regiment, which is trained in counter terrorism, would be posted along the route in plain clothes. Members of the regiment overpowered terrorists who seized the Iranian embassy in London
last year.

The dozens of foreign notables attending the wedding were assigned special-security details by the British and many brought their own body-guards. Nancy Reagan, representing her husband, has been surrounded at public appearances by agents of the U.S. Secret Service and British security officers.

For months British police and intelligence agencies have been preparing for the wedding, trying to assess every possibility and checking every building along the procession route.

People who planned to watch from offices and apartments along the way were checked by police several months in advance and were searched today as they entered them.

Fierce Riot Staged In Liverpool Area

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Fierce rioting raged here for the third straight night as Britain prepared for the royal wedding in London today with thousands of police and troops guarding the festive capital. In Northern Ireland, army experts defused a 400-pound bomb in a mobile home and said they believed Irish Nationalist had planned to set it off as a "wedding spectacular."

Two hundred youths hurling gasoline bombs, stones, bricks and pans of boiling water battled hundreds of police into the wee hours today in the economically depressed and high-immigrant Toxteth district of this port city. Both blacks and whites were involved in the rioting.

In London, 180 miles southeast, more than 5,000 police and troops patrolled crowds expected to swell to one million people hoping to catch a glimpse of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer on their wedding day. Scotland Yard called it the agency's biggest security operation ever.

Military sources said they believed Irish Republican Army guerrillas planted the 400-pound bomb near the border with the Irish republic and possibly intended detonate it by remote control to wipe out a British army patrol. A similarly placed bomb killed five British soldiers last May.

Police and army units braced for violence by Irish nationalists in Northern Ireland as London focused its attention on the royal wedding and two hunger strikers hovered near death at Belfast's Maze Prison in Northern Ireland.

Supporters of the hunger strikers in Dublin, the republic's capital, planned a march to protest television coverage of the wedding and police were stationed around the studios of the Irish station broadcasting the ceremony live from St. Paul's Cathedral.

Authorities in London, meanwhile, dismissed speculation that two junior footmen at Buckingham Palace arrested for stealing explosives were plotting violence linked to the wedding or strife in Northern Ireland. Police called the July 18 arrests "just a local thing."

In Toxteth, police spent more than two hours battling the rioters before the mob dispersed. Rioters erected a street barricade from cars and planks and other material grabbed from a nearby construction site, authorities said, and the mob torched cars and a tire depot.

A Merseyside police spokesman said 21 officers were hurt despite new "get tough" tactics and riot gear. An unspecified number of rioters also were reported injured.

Observers described the violence as some of the fiercest since a wave of urban warfare swept Toxteth and largely nonwhite areas of London and other British cities earlier this month, resulting in more than 3,000 arrests and scores of injuries.

The police spokesman said riot leaders sparked this morning's violence by spreading a rumor that a police van deliberately ran down and killed a man. In fact, a 23-year-old man was hit by a police vehicle and injured in Toxteth on Tuesday, but the spokesman said it was accidental, and he did not die until after the rioting today.

The spokesman, who in accordance with British practice declined to be named, said police "snatch squads" were deployed to grab riot ringleaders, but only nine rioters had been arrested by early morning.

He said the upper Parliament Street area where most of the rioting took place is "very wide and these rioters couldn't have chosen a better place for a battle."

At the height of the battle, a spokesman said the rioters were "throwing everything they can lay their hands on, including workmen's pick-axes."

Environment Secretary Michael Heseltine is in Liverpool to investigate the rioting but repeated his refusal to intervene personally.

Black community leaders blame the violence on constant "police harassment." Authorities deny the charge.

Social workers say frustration over high unemployment, especially among young blacks, is a major cause. One in nine of all British workers is now jobless but unemployment among black youngsters of working age in Toxteth is around 60 percent.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on Tuesday unveiled a $930 million package of work training programs and other measures designed to employ 216,000 jobs by March 1983.

Hunt Says He Would Close All Head Shops

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Tuesday that he would put every drug paraphernalia shop out of business if he could.

"We have a law banning drug paraphernalia," Hunt told a gathering of North Carolina sheriffs. "And if I have my way, that law will be enforced in such a way as to put every head shop in North Carolina out of business."

Hunt told the North Carolina Sheriff's Annual Conference and Retraining Session that the 1981 General Assembly has supplied additional weapons in the war against crime, including laws banning dangerous weapons at parades and public gatherings.

Two years ago, "we had laid a good foundation in our fight against crime in North Carolina," Hunt said.

Measures already in force then included laws requiring speedy trials and fair sentencing as well as mandatory prison terms for armed robbers and severe penalties for drug smugglers, he said.

But this year, "the Legislature has provided for longer sentences for habitual felons, and we have a law requiring those who solicit a crime be subject to the same penalties as the person who carries it out," Hunt said.

"From now on, our courts will be required to make restitution a higher priority than distribution of court funds," the governor said. "I asked for restitution reform because we have not paid enough attention to the victims of crime."

Hunt also applauded the tough bid-rigging law enacted by the Legislature.

Crime prevention, Hunt said, is a major facet of the war on crime.

"Ultimate victory in our war against crime depends on people — dedicated law enforcement officers like yourselves, and a caring and informed citizenry to support the efforts of law enforcement," he said.

He said the best example of this is Community Watch.

"Right now, more than 6,500 communities and neighborhoods in this state are organized into Community Watch," Hunt said. "And in some of those communities, property crimes are virtually a thing of the past."

HEAVY FLOODING
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Floods surmerged vast areas of the Mekong Valley in Laos, putting 25 villages under water and wrecking 20 percent of the rice crop near Vientiane, the Vietnamese News Agency said Tuesday.

Hunt also called for more attention to juvenile crime, giving as an example his own Executive Cabinet on Juveniles.

"Our goal is to reach out to those kids who have committed their first crime, or appear headed for it," he said. "We want to match up every troubled young person with a caring adult."

Nuclear Plans

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — West German and Egyptian officials signed an agreement Tuesday to cooperate in developing nuclear energy, paving the way for sale of nuclear reactors to Egypt, the Middle East News Agency reported.

The agency said Egypt would buy nuclear power plant stations with a capacity of 2 million kilowatts. It was not known how many plants would be purchased.

Egypt, which depends on conventional energy sources, has already ordered two nuclear power plants from France and two from the United States.

Navy To Discipline Commander

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A sailor who died aboard the USS Ranger after allegedly being forced to perform disciplinary exercises while on a diet of bread and water has been "vindicated" by the Navy's decision to discipline the ship's commander and 27 crewmen, his father says.

The Navy said Tuesday that Capt. Dan A. Petersen, skipper of the aircraft carrier, was accused of dereliction of duty in the April 14 death of Airman Recruit Paul Terrice, 20, of Algonac, Mich. The ship was stationed at Subic Bay in the Philippines at the time.

Three petty officers were charged with manslaughter; one petty officer was charged with involuntary manslaughter; two commissioned officers were accused of dereliction of duty, and disciplinary action was ordered against 21 other crewmen.

The Navy charged that Terrice had been assaulted. "My son's name has been vindicated," said William Terrice, the sailor's father. "From the indications in today's report, they did a good investigation."

Terrice, who had been sentenced to 30 days' confinement on charges of falling asleep at his post and leaving the ship without permission, was on a bread and water diet in the ship's brig for three days before his death, according to Pete Kelley, an attorney hired by his parents.

Following an investigation, the Navy said Terrice was punched, shoved, kicked and slapped, denied drinking water and required to perform excessive and punitive exercises just before his death. Earlier, the Navy had said Terrice died of heat stroke.

Kelley said Terrice was forced to run two miles on the ship's deck even though he was ill.

Pedersen faces a flag officer's mast, a non-judicial hearing in which Vice Adm. Robert Schoultz, commanding officer of the Pacific Naval Air Force, may impose punishment under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, the Navy said. No date was set for the hearing.

The Navy said Pedersen faces a possible sentence of 30 days' arrest in his quarters or 60 days' restriction in a limited area.

The two officers and four petty officers face Article 32 investigations. They are similar to a grand jury hearing and usually precede trial by general court-martial, the Navy said.

Capt. Lee Cargill, the Ranger's executive officer, and Lt. Cmdr. Comer L. Williams, the ship's retraining facility officer, were charged with dereliction of duty and violation of an order requiring them to supervise and train petty officers assigned to guard duty and to oversee men being confined.

Charged with involuntary manslaughter was Petty Officer Wilbur L. Coffman. Charged with manslaughter were Petty Officers Daryl I. Summons, George R. Wetherbee and Larry A. Conway.

If convicted by a general court-martial, the petty officers could face a maximum 10 years in prison at hard labor.

After Terrice's death, his parents filed a $4.1 million wrongful death suit against the Navy, while several former Ranger crewmen also have filed a damage suit in federal court in Philadelphia.

Colson Doubts Harsh Penalties

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Capital punishment and harsher prison sentences are not the answers to the rising American crime rate, says former White House aide and ex-convict Charles W. Colson.

"If toughening up on crime would stop it, why do we have the highest crime rate in the western world, a 13 percent increase in violent crime last year and near-anarchy in our streets?" Colson told a news conference Tuesday.

Colson, a self-professed "born-again" Christian who spent seven months in prison for his role in the Watergate scandal, was in Kansas City to address the 1981 Festival of Evangelism.

Colson, 49, said he has long opposed the death penalty for several reasons, including the lack of evidence that it deters homicides.

Opines Better

Way In Tithing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who has battled for months to gain support for his economic plan, says tax-cutters might want to turn to religion for inspiration.

Reagan and Roman Catholic Cardinal John Krol of Philadelphia were posing for pictures Tuesday when a television reporter asked the church leader, "Your eminence, how does the Lord feel about three years versus two years and a trigger?" He referred to Reagan's three-year tax-cut plan and a rival Democratic proposal.

The cardinal deferred to the experts, but Reagan volunteered, "You know, the Lord, really, we could copy him a little bit. The Lord had a simple tax plan: tithing" — a levy of 10 percent of a person's income.

N.C. Medfly Quarantine Test Slated With Traps

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina agriculture inspectors are preparing fly traps to see how well a quarantine of California produce is working, officials said Tuesday.

The inspector haven't had to repel any trucks bearing California produce since a quarantine for the Mediterranean fruit fly began last week, they said.

"To date there's no problem anywhere that I know of," said John Scott, plant protection specialist with the state Department of Agriculture.

"We're averaging 10-15 trucks a day from California, and out of about 60 since the quarantine began (last Thursday) we haven't had to send any out of the state."

Scott said the traps are coated with a sticky substance that will attract the flies and prevent their escape.

North Carolina received 100 traps from the U.S. Department of Agriculture Tuesday. North Carolina agriculture officials will spend the next few days assembling the traps and will place them late next week, Scott said.

"We're going to put them at our inspection sites and at airports handling interstate flights," he said. "We're considering military bases that get lots of interstate flights as well."

He said the traps, called Jackson Traps, measure approximately 5-by-8 inches and are made of plastic-coated cardboard. They are hung on trees and are activated when air passes through them.

"They've been very helpful in California, where people use anywhere from one to 10 per square mile," Scott said. "We'll just have one per produce area. We're mainly interested in detection at this point. If the traps turn up fruit flies, we'll take other action to eliminate them."

North Carolina inspectors are checking trucks that enter the state carrying California produce to make sure they have certificates showing that the cargo has been treated against the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Drivers who cannot produce required documentation or verify through other means that their produce has been cleared will be told to have it fumigated or to take it out of the state.

Inspectors have shifted emphasis this week from distribution sites to weigh stations along interstate highways, Scott said.

"Right now our big concern is that a shipment of infested produce might slip by the California people since the eggs and larvae are so small," Scott said.

"If that happens, since it only takes about 15 days for the fly to go from the egg to adult state we could have adult flies on our hands by the time the shipment arrives here. That's why we need those traps."

Salmon Is Making Amazing Return

By MIKE STANTON
Associated Press Writer
HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — Almost 200 years after dams and pollution drove the Atlantic salmon from the Connecticut River, the popular gamefish is making an unprecedented comeback.

"It's kind of an amazing story," Boyd Kunard of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said. "We've finally gotten to the point where we're seeing some success and convincing the skeptics it can be done."

In record numbers, the majestic, silvery fish are migrating from the North Atlantic into the Connecticut River this year, using artificial fish ladders to hurdle dams that have cut them off from their traditional spawning grounds since 1798.

At the Holyoke Dam, the first obstacle fish encounter on their journey from Long Island Sound, 300 salmon had been captured by early this month for breeding in hatcheries. That's a dramatic jump from the 123 taken last year.

Despite the double threat of acid rain and probable cuts in government funding, officials are optimistic about the future of the $60 million program.

"The salmon's return is a sign of how much the river has been cleaned up — it's proof that we can bring something native back," said program coordinator Steve Rideout of the Fish and Wildlife Service in Hadley, Mass.

The comeback can be traced to a 1965 federal law, the Anadromous Fish Act, which led to a partnership among the U.S. government, the four states touched by New England's longest river and the power companies that operate the river's dams.

Anadromous refers to ocean fish that spawn in fresh water.

Fish ladders and elevators at the Connecticut's three southernmost dams — Holyoke and Turners Falls in Massachusetts, Vernon in Vermont — have been built at a cost of more than $26 million, opening 173 miles of the 410-mile river to salmon.

When ladders are built by 1990 at the next two Vermont dams, in Bellows Falls and Wilder, salmon will be able to reach 270 miles upriver. Sometime in the late 1980s, Rideout predicts, fishermen should be able to cast their lines for the salmon.

Before the river's dams went up, 40,000 salmon migrated upriver every year, Rideout estimates. By 1997, officials hope to have 4,000 to 6,000 salmon a year migrating upriver to spawn and to be able to capture 800 of them for hatcheries. The offspring of hatchery salmon are used to stock tributaries of the Connecticut to create natural salmon runs.

But one aim of the restoration program — to have salmon reproduce naturally — could be endangered by acid rain.

Rain laced with high amounts of acid is threatening fish life across the Northeast and in Canada. The cause is still under investigation, but many naturalists blame coal-burning industry in the Midwest.

Money is a more immediate problem.

President Reagan eliminated the fish act's $3.5 million grant program through which the salmon project was to have gotten $130,000 next year, said Rep. Silvio Conte, D-Mass. He said most of the money has been restored via the Fish and Wildlife budget, although it's still uncertain how much.

"The program will continue, but there will be a greater need for the states involved to put in more money," said an aide to Conte, who asked not to be identified by name.

Massachusetts and Connecticut together contribute about $50,000 a year, Kunard said. Vermont and New Hampshire do not contribute, and Kunard is dubious about increased state spending for salmon in these budget-cutting times.

"The Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife is slated for a 10 to 20 percent cut, so we haven't even explored the possibility of getting more money from them," Kunard said.

One bright spot is that the most expensive parts of the program are already in place. Northeast Utilities and the New England Power Co. are required to pay for fish ladders as part of their right to operate dams.

More than $6.5 million has been spent for a federal hatchery in Bethel, Vt. and $1.5 million is earmarked to build a hatchery in Montague, Mass.

LOGGING FATALITY — Veteran of 25 years of logging, Edward Lamm, 57, of Goldsboro died yesterday morning when the tree he was cutting fell onto him. There were no eyewitnesses to the accident, but co-workers of the Herbert Wiggs Logging Company of Goldsboro said Lamm had been at work since about 8:30 a.m. in an area by himself and had felled several trees. The tree, which according to Medical Examiner Dr. Stan Harris, crushed his chest, apparently was shunted sideways into him when it hit a smaller tree. The accident occurred near Parker's Landing about two miles north of Belvoir off Highway 33. Dr. Harris estimated the time of death at 10:30 a.m. Co-workers went looking for Lamm when he did not show up for a lunch break, Pitt County Sheriff Department investigators were told. The Falkland Rescue Squad was dispatched to the scene and attended the body until the medical examiner arrived. (Reflector Photo By Larry Zicherman)

Postal Workers In Boston Vote 'No'

BOSTON (AP) — Leaders of Boston's postal workers have voted to reject last week's tentative contract agreement with the U.S. Postal Service, and a union chief says the action may spell trouble for the proposal.

The executive board of the Boston local of the American Postal Workers Union voted 17-5 against the contract, Steve Albanese, general president of the local, said Tuesday.

Albanese said Boston's rejection of the pact may affect other voters. He said that in 1978 local executive boards voted down a contract, and general membership also rejected it.

"We could be heading down the same road this year," he said.

The board disagreed with several items in the three-year, $4.8 billion pact, including cost of living adjustments and productivity bonuses, he said. The Boston board was one of the first to take action, Albanese said. The contract now will go before the 4,500 members of Boston's local. There are about 100 locals in the state. The national union has 320,000 members.

"It is up to the to all the national membership to reject the agreement," Albanese said. "They look to us for recommendations."

The union has until Sept. 5 to ratify the contract, according to Postal Service spokesman Jean Babcock. Each member will vote by mail.

The agreement, reached — plus unlimited protection against inflation and rising health benefit premiums.

July 21, would give the half-million members of the two largest postal unions about a 10 percent raise — $900 apiece in base wages and about $1,200 in bonuses

At the time, officials of the National Association of Letter Carriers, the other big postal union, said ratification was expected to take about a month.

Officials Call CP&L Audit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the North Carolina Utilities Commission ordered an audit Tuesday of Carolina Power & Light Co., saying there are so many problems at CP&L's Brunswick nuclear plant that it is "suspect."

The audit, to be conducted by an independent consulting firm yet to be selected, follows several outages at the plant near Southport, said commission Chairman Robert K. Koger.

Allen L. Clapp, engineering and economic adviser to the commission, said: "We would like to know if there is or is not something going on down there (at Brunswick) that we don't know about. They've had so many problems, it is suspect."

Robert Fischbach, executive director of the commission's Public Staff, said his consumer-advocate agency also will investigate the Brunswick unit's performance over the past two years.

William E. Graham Jr., executive vice president and general counsel for CP&L, said the company will offer its cooperation with the commission.

"As a regulated company we are subject to frequent reviews by various regulatory agencies. Our policy is to cooperate with them, and we certainly intend to cooperate with the North Carolina Utilities Commission in this audit."

Problems at the nuclear plant, coupled with increased demand for power because of hot weather, have forced CP&L to rely more heavily than expected on more expensive electricity generated by coal-fired units and to purchase power from other utilities. Those increased costs are expected to be passed along to CP&L customers in North Carolina.

Telephone Companies Help With Crank Calls

GRANTED ASYLUM — Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, the deposed president of Iran, was granted political asylum after landing in France early Wednesday morning, the French Foreign Ministry announced. Photo of Bani-Sadr was made in Tehran in 1980. In background is a poster of Ayatollah Khomeini who also spent several years in exile in France. (AP Laserphoto)

By ED LION

NEW YORK (UPI) — The telephone ring shatters the silence of the night and the woman hesitantly picks up the receiver, her hand clenched in fear.

"Hello."
She is met with no answer — only labored breathing. In terror and frustration she slams down the phone — and anxiously frets about the next call.

Repeated annoyance telephone calls, whether ring-and-run cranks, obscene messages or threats of physical harm, sow fear in the hearts of thousands of people.

Telephone companies nationwide since the mid-1960s have established special services to help take the terror out of crank calls — many of which are made by acquaintances of the victims — so people don't have to live in "fear of the phone ringing in the night," officials say.

And they say with proper handling, namely not giving crank callers "the satisfaction of knowing they are frightening or angering" the victim, the culprits will often stop phoning. If not, the telephone companies will try to trace the calls to help in possible prosecution or move to cut service on the number where the calls originate.

"We understand the anxieties of customers when they get these calls. It can really be terrifying to some," said Gus Ruesch, manager of the New York Telephone Company's Annoyance Call Bureau, which handled 58,000 complaints from callers last year.

"We deal with these type of problems all the time and a lot of the calls are easily stopped if the proper steps are taken."

A spokesman for the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. said the companies in its network received nearly 1.5 million complaints from customers about crank calls.

But most complaints are quickly resolved. Only about 2,000 convictions for crank calls occur each year.

"There is no one profile for people who make these calls," the spokesman said. "They come in all ages, are of both sexes and the motives can vary as much as the people."

Ruesch said, of the complaints his bureau handles, 65 percent involve harassing calls 30 percent are considered obscene and the rest threaten physical harm.

"I found many come from acquaintances of the victims," he said. "It could be linked to a love triangle or neighbor squabbles. I remember one case when a victim of crank calls apparently was making noise late at night and the caller was a neighbor who would phone early in the morning to get back."

"It could also be kids playing pranks. We find that it's very, very rare that you have a pathologically sick person making the call."

Ruesch's bureau handles complaints in much the same manner as other phone company anti-crank call services around the nation.

"If people have complaints, they should call the phone company's local business office," he said.

"Our representatives then hear the problems and counsel the complainants."

If the calls seem "especially serious threatening bodily harm" the caller may best notify police.

But otherwise, he said, a caller is often told "the idea is not to give the caller the satisfaction of knowing they are frightening or angering you because usually that's what they're after."

"So don't react. Ask who the caller is."
"If the person doesn't respond to the question and says something or remains silent, gently hang up the phone. Don't ask 'who is this?' over and over or slam it down because that will show anger and frustration — and that's what they want."

Ruesch counsels not to discuss the frustration of crank calls with associates lest they be the culprits. And he generally doesn't recommend changing phone numbers because if the caller is an associate, he can easily get the new number.

After victims follow the advice, most repeated crank callers seem to stop within a week or so, Ruesch said.

If they don't stop, the cases are referred to the bureau and a member of the staff will talk to the victims to see if they were "handling the call properly," Ruesch said.

"Sometimes we also ask questions like, 'Are you having a fight with a neighbor or are you playing music too loud?' and the people will say 'yes,' not having realized that the disagreement could have prompted the calls. Then if the problem is settled the calls sometimes stop."

But if the calls continue, the phone company will ask the victim to keep a time log of his crank calls. Electronic equipment in switching centers, if possible, will be used to try to trace incoming calls automatically to ferret out the number used by the culprit.

Phone company officials say the length of time it takes to trace the calls varies according to equipment and location of the calls.

Once the crank calls are traced to a particular number, and the victim indicates he wants to press charges, the number is turned over directly to police — not the victim — for investigation and possible prosecution.

"The person from whose number the calls originate isn't necessarily making them — it could be someone using the line without his or her knowledge," Ruesch said. "And to prevent any problems we don't give the number to the victim, only to the police. We let them investigate."

Even if no charges are pressed by a crank call victim, the phone company also can call the suspect number and inform the line holder that calls are originating from his phone. Ruesch said the holder can be warned that he faces a cut-off of service if they are not stopped.

'Last Chance'

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The European Security Conference has adjourned a stormy eight-month meeting until October, and the U.S. delegate says that session may be the "last chance" to preserve the 1975 Helsinki accords.

The warning by Max Kampelman was echoed by most of the Western delegations when the meeting recessed Tuesday with an East-West stalemate over human rights and detente. But the head of the Soviet delegation said the meeting had accomplished 80 percent of its work.

The Helsinki agreement on European security and cooperation, signed by 35 nations including the United States and the Soviet Union, recognized Europe's post World War II boundaries and the basic human rights of the citizens of the 35 countries.

The Madrid meeting was called Nov. 11 to review compliance with the pact. Delegates have set a mid-December target date for a "final balanced document."

This announcement is under no circumstances to be construed as an offer to sell or a solicitation of an offer to buy any of these securities. The offering is made only by the Offering Circular.

Port Dredging Cutback Feared

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)

Federal cutbacks in dredging funds could damage North Carolina's ports, state ports executive director William M.A. Greene said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the Ports Authority's board of directors approved a budget Tuesday that estimates revenues of $15.7 million and a net profit of $3.6 million in the next fiscal year.

The projected revenues would be an increase of 23.9 percent over 1980-81 and the projected profits would be a 152.5 percent increase.

In remarks to the board of directors Tuesday, Greene said, "Small ports like ours would be the ones that would suffer damages from such a bill wherein users' charges or state funds would have to be used to pay for dredging."

Greene went to Washington last week to testify before subcommittees discussing a bill to cut off dredging funds.

Green said the state ports at Morehead City and Wilmington cannot afford to absorb the $6 million annual dredging expense.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has dredged the ports at least every one to three years to remove silt brought into the harbor by tide changes.

For nearly 150 years, the federal government has picked up the bill for dredging harbors, waterways and channels.

Ron Brinson, executive vice president of the American Association of Port Authorities in Washington, said the government spent a total of about $6 billion for dredging last year.

Brinson and Greene said the ports that stand to benefit from the administration proposal are the larger ones, including Baltimore, Norfolk, Houston and New York. They said large ports can keep the cost of dredging low by spreading it among numerous users.

They say the ports that stand to lose the most are those in the South Atlantic — like ports in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Greene noted the U.S. Customs Service takes in about $9.5 billion nationally, which could easily pay for the dredging operation.

WASHINGTON (AP)

The Reagan administration doesn't "foresee an avalanche" of arms sales to China, Undersecretary of State James L. Buckley has told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Buckley testified Tuesday that all such sales will be for cash because the administration has not agreed to extend credit to China as it does for many friendly nations purchasing U.S.

weapons. "Obviously there are economic restrictions on the Peoples Republic of China," Buckley said.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Francis J. West Jr. told the committee the administration is reviewing a list of possible weapons purchases China submitted to former Secretary of Defense Harold Brown in January 1980.

He said a Chinese delegation that was to visit Washington next month to discuss issues.

Before the opening, the government reported that the index of leading economic indicators dropped 1.3 percent in June, on the heels of a revised 1.5 percent decline the month before. The downward trend in the index, which is designed to detect the future course of the economy, came as additional evidence of a developing business slowdown.

But today's data closely matched advance Wall Street estimates, and thus came as no surprise. Early volume leaders among Big Board issues included International Business Machines, off 1/8 at 55 1/4; Norfolk & Western, unchanged at 47 1/2, and Sony, up 1/2 at 21 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 6.47 to 939.40. Declines outnumbered advances by an 8-5 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 38.16 million shares, against 39.61 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index lost .38 to 74.94.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 5.56 at 362.02.

Dean Middleton Stepping Down

Dr. David J. Middleton, dean of the Division of Continuing Education at East Carolina University, announced that he will resign as dean effective next Jan. 1. Middleton, who has served as dean of continuing education and extension programs at ECU for 19 years, will remain on the division's faculty as a tenured professor.

Dr. Robert H. Maier, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs, said "Dr. Middleton has served the university long and well."

During his tenure as dean, the Continuing Education program has expanded into a variety of credit and non-credit programs off campus, reaching as many as 20,000 people annually, including businessmen, teachers, the military, commercial fishermen and others, it was pointed out.

Middleton said the growth of the program "could not have been possible without the support of the ECU administration and most particularly the heavy involvement and interest of the faculty in rendering public service programs."

He added, "Through Continuing Education, the university has reached many people in eastern North Carolina who otherwise would not have had the opportunity to enroll in university programs nor to improve themselves educationally. An important note is that this has been done at low cost to the state and to the taxpayers."

Middleton said, "However, in the immediate future some form of outside funding is of critical importance if ECU is going to continue a role of providing services to a variety of the state's citizens in this region."

McElroy was shot to death as a crowd of 60 people surrounded his truck outside a tavern.

Sewer Bonds

WILLIAMSTON - The $300,000 Sanitary Sewer bonds for the town of Williamston sold by the North Carolina State Treasurer's Department in Raleigh on Tuesday will be used to help pay for the town's share of a major outfall project.

About 80 percent of the bond money is earmarked for work on an ongoing project, the Skewarkee Gut Outfall Project.

This project extends from a site at the north end of Williamston, adjacent to Highway N.C. 125 across to the Roanoke River. The project is designed to rectify long standing problems with the old sewer line placed there years ago and which in recent years has been plagued with numerous breaks.

The $300,000 bonds were sold to First-Citizens Bank and Trust Co with an interest rate in five bids ranging from 10.156 to 11.25 percent. The maturity dates average out to 6.15 years.

Gymnast Galimore Rates Perfect 10

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer
SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Gymnast Ron Galimore seeks perfection. And, Tuesday night, he reached his goal at the National Sports Festival.

Galimore, the son of the late Willie Galimore, a star running back for the Chicago Bears until his death in an automobile accident nearly 15 years ago, swooped down the long runway, flew off the springboard and soared to a perfect 10.0 score in the first of two attempts in the finals of the vault competition.

"It felt pretty good to me," said the 22-year-old, who will graduate from Iowa State University in August. "I knew when I landed that it was really good. You always try to be perfect. But, even if everything goes exactly right, you never know if the judges will see it that way."

The perfect score handed out for his leap, a Tsukahara layout position with a full twist, was the seventh of his vaulting career. Galimore is the only American ever to attain such perfection in the event.

He added a 9.9 vault, giving him an average of 9.5 and the gold medal in that individual competition.

Galimore, one of the many U.S. athletes chosen for a 1980 national team but deprived of an Olympic appearance by the American boycott of the Moscow Games, was pleased by his showing in this six-day Festival of American sports, noting that most of the other top performers in gymnastics chose to be elsewhere.

"I think it (the Festival) is a big thing," he explained. "It reminds me of the Olympics, with all the other sports being contested here, too."

"I'm a little upset about some of the other gymnasts not participating. But I wanted to be here for the exposure, and I'm glad I came."

East Rallies From 18 Back To Nip West, 88-87; East Girls Also Win

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — East All-Stars boys' coach Reggie Henderson says his team took advantage of the fatigue of the West team to overcome an 18-point deficit and win the East-West All-Star basketball game 88-87 Tuesday night.

In the girls' All-Star game earlier, the East pummeled the West 69-40.

"When we got behind, we never panicked, and we showed a lot of poise coming back," said Henderson of Rocky Mount. "We didn't want to rush things trying to get back into the game. We wanted to pick our way slowly. I think the West may have gotten a little tired down the stretch and we were able to take advantage of our quickness."

David Shaffer, a Durham Jordan player, slammed in 31 points to provide the foundation for the East victory.

But a 12-foot bank shot from Edward Farmer of Eastman and 13 from Joseph Monroe of Union.

The leading scorer for the West was Brian Ellerby of Wadesboro Bowman with 16 points, followed by Chris Michael of R.S. Central with 15.

Cedric Cokely of Greensboro Grimsley had 13 and Mike Allen of Rockingham County ppped in 11.

In the girls' game, Northern Durham's hot shooting guard Candy Lucas scored a game-high 18 points and Southwest Edgecombe forward Ramona Jenkins added 14 for the East's rout of the West.

Asked why the East allowed itself to trail by 18 points in the first half, Henderson said: "The West shot extremely well and went to the boards better than we did."

The West seemed to have the game under control when Craig Cordes of Albermarle sank two foul shots to give the West an 87-84 lead with 48 seconds remaining.

But with 18 seconds left, center David Glover from Chapel Hill converted two foul shots to bring the East within one.

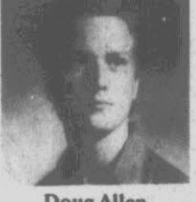

That was never threatened, as Lucas put in 14 first-half points to break out to a 44-13 margin at intermission. Jenkins added 17 rebounds to control the boards for the East.

The other guard, Stephanie Wells of East Wake, poured in 16 points to round out three East players in double figures.

Meanwhile, the West had only one player in double figures as forward Cathy Jones of Greensboro Smith hit 5-9 from the floor to wind up with 11 points.

Hospitalized earlier in the summer in Greenville, the veteran coach, is recovering from the surgery, but currently in the intensive care unit of the hospital, according to Rose Principal Howard Hurt.

"He seems to be doing well, according to what we've heard so far," Hurt said. "He'll be in the intensive care unit for several days before being moved into a regular room. He's expected to be in Duke for about ten days or so altogether."

Snow Hill Uses Big Third Inning To Power Past Raleigh By 7-2

SNOW HILL — Wade Corbett climaxed a seven-run outburst in the third inning with a two-run double, as Snow Hill took a 7-2 victory over Raleigh last night in the fourth game of the best-of-seven series for the Area I American Legion baseball championship.

The win gives Snow Hill a 3-1 lead in the series, with the chance to wrap it up tonight on Post 94's home field. Should Raleigh win, the series would return to the state capital for its finale.

The victor in the series will face the winner of the Richmond County-Brunswick County series in a new best-of-seven playoff.

The third inning contained all the action Snow Hill needed, as Bobby Avery rallied from a first-game loss in the series to effectively shut down Post 1 this time out. Avery scattered seven hits during the evening, and was firmly in command before Raleigh managed to push over a run.

Gary Ream led off the fateful third with a single and Greg Hardison reached on a bunt David Shirley's sacrifice bunt was errored, leaving the bases loaded. Jabo Fulghum and Kevin Korpi both reached on infield hits, each driving in a run. Frank Milkovits singled to left, scoring Shirley, and David Kester's single brought in both Fulghum and Korpi, with Kester taking second on the throw.

Corbett then finished off the inning with a double, driving in both Milkovits and Kester for the 7-0 lead.

Raleigh got on the scoreboard with an unearned run in the fifth. With one down, Thomas Outlaw reached on an error and Bo Marshburn singled. Terry Woodlief then reached on a fielder's choice, allowing Outlaw to score.

Outlaw also accounted for the second Post 1 run, scored in the seventh. He walked and scored when Marshburn doubled.

Marshburn and Eddie Barnette led the Raleigh hitting with two each.

Ream led the Snow Hill bats with three in four trips. Corbett, Hardison and Korpi each had two hits for the winners. Snow Hill will seek to wrap it up tonight at 8 p.m. on its home turf.

Bumgarner In Recovery

Rose High School football coach Dave Bumgarner underwent a triple bypass heart operation yesterday at Duke University Hospital, and according to reports, is responding well.

Hospitalized earlier in the summer in Greenville, the veteran coach, is recovering from the surgery, but currently in the intensive care unit of the hospital, according to Rose Principal Howard Hurt.

"He seems to be doing well, according to what we've heard so far," Hurt said. "He'll be in the intensive care unit for several days before being moved into a regular room. He's expected to be in Duke for about ten days or so altogether."

UNC Athletes To Get Safety Emphasis

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—While University of North Carolina first baseman Joe Reto lies in a coma in a Chapel Hill hospital, UNC athletic officials are trying to help other athletes avoid traffic accidents such as the one last weekend that left him paralyzed.

Officials of the UNC Athletic Department and an expert from the state Highway Safety Research Center are working on a presentation to be made to Tar Heel athletes this fall with emphasis on highway safety and the use of seat belts.

In addition to helping athletes avoid injury in traffic accidents, officials said, they may use the program to enlist the assistance of athletes in getting a safety message across to young drivers.

Reto was the second UNC athlete within the past three months to suffer serious injury as the result of a traffic accident. He was the sixth Tar Heel athlete within the past six years to be either killed or injured in such an accident.

Associate Athletic Director John Lotz said Tuesday that after football player Steve Streater was injured in a traffic accident last May, he asked officials at the research center to help devise a program that would impress upon athletes the need for auto safety.

Lotz said his department cannot restrict the activities of its athletes, but he said it can help them.

"The responsibility for your athletes is such that you really can't do a lot about them off-campus," Lotz said. "But you can become concerned and try to do what you can to help."

Lotz also said his idea was based on reports from the scene of the three accidents.

"Streater, Jimmy Black, Reto—none of them had seat belts on. The seat belt is a major factor in accidents today," Lotz added.

He said he is aware that many others are injured in traffic accidents and suffer some sort of disabling injury. But Lotz said the accidents to Streater and Reto were magnified "mainly because they're athletes."

Dr. B.J. Campbell will work with Lotz in planning and implementing the program. Campbell said the presentation will include a brief talk and a film showing the effects of automobile crashes when seat belts are not used.

"It's just an unbearable tragedy to see this kind of thing happen," Campbell said. "My personal hope is that we can get some kind of community program organized."

Both Campbell and Lotz suggested that athletes may do a series of television commercials to stress the need to use seat belts to younger drivers.

Football lineman David Barrett was paralyzed from the waist down in a 1975 traffic accident in West Virginia. At the time, he was in West Virginia for a job interview.

Another Tar Heel football player, wingback Jimmy Jerome, was killed in late 1975 in a California traffic accident. He was the only UNC athlete in the modern era killed in an accident.

Tailback Mike Voight had graduated from UNC when he was seriously injured in a January 1977 accident while on his way to Norfolk, Va. Voight's car hit a slick spot, crossed a median and collided with a truck. Although Voight recovered after four months in a hospital, he never returned to the Houston Oilers of the National Football League.

Black, a basketball standout at North Carolina, underwent surgery last summer to repair vertebrae damaged in a traffic accident near Chapel Hill. He returned to the team in time for the start of the 1980-81 season.

Streater had just signed this spring as a free agent with the Washington Redskins of the NFL and was returning from Raleigh-Durham Airport when his car overturned on a rain-slick highway.

Reto Has Surgery

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—University of North Carolina first baseman Joe Reto underwent surgery Tuesday night, a North Carolina Memorial hospital spokesman said.

Reto was paralyzed last weekend when a traffic accident broke his neck.

"The operation was to stabilize his neck in the area of the fracture," hospital spokesman Dick Broom said. "Slivers of bone from his pelvis were wired to either side of the spinal column in his neck, bridging the area of fracture."

"This will eventually become fused to the spinal column and give some stability to the spinal column," Broom said.

Reto has been in a coma since the accident. But Broom said that just before he went into surgery, doctors reported that Reto "seemed to be gradually regaining consciousness. He opened his eyes and he moved slightly," Broom said.

Reto remains in intensive care and in serious condition at the hospital, although his vital signs are stable, Broom said.

Irving Hospital, where he was kept overnight for observation. Dr. Patricia Potter of the U.S. Olympic Committee medical staff said Meeker, the Big Ten all-around champion from Minnesota, apparently did not have serious injuries. He took the silver medal in the still rings before the mishap.

In other highlights Tuesday, Roy Palassou of Santa Clara, Calif., won two gold medals in men's gymnastics, winning the floor exercise and the parallel bars, and Richard Savage of West Monroe, La., gained a close decision in the feature bout in the boxing, taking the gold in the 119-pound class.

Brian Babcock of Enid, Okla., won the gold in the pommel horse, while Mark Caso of Syracuse and UCLA, who broke his neck last year in an accident in practice, won the rings and was third in the vault and parallel bars.

Savage, a 21-year-old bantamweight, beat his friend and arch-rival, Cruz, on a 3-2 decision. Afterward, he said he thought he'd won only the first and third rounds of the three-round match. Cruz, on the other hand, said he thought all three rounds were his, not Savage's.

In previous meetings, both this year, Cruz beat Savage for the national Golden Gloves title and Savage came back to beat Cruz for the American Boxing Federation championship.

"It was the hardest fight we've had so far. He fought just as hard as I did...100 percent," Savage said.

U.S. Navy X-ray technician Mark Mahone hardly broke a sweat in disposing of Johnny Keys of San Francisco in the heavyweight title bout. Mahone stopped Keys on one punch, with the referee counting the loser out 10 seconds into the second round.

Tyrone Biggs of Philadelphia, who broke his hand while winning a fight Saturday night in which he qualified for the heavyweight finale, was awarded the silver medal. He was forced to withdraw from the tournament because of the injury.

In an upset, Mark Breland of Brooklyn, N.Y., scored a first-round knockout over Darryl Robinson, the American Boxing Federation champion from Houston, in the 147-pound class.

Among the handful of events today—the last day of the U.S. Olympic Committee-sanctioned Festival—will be the gold medal battles in men's and women's basketball and ice hockey.

The West and South teams earned berths in the men's cage final with victories Tuesday night. The West beat the East 93-83 as Stuart Gray, a 7-foot UCLA recruit from Sepulveda, Calif., led the way by scoring 11 of his 15 points in the last nine minutes. Then Jim Master, a sophomore-to-be at Kentucky, tossed in 27 points to pace the South past the winless Midwest 81-80.

The gold medal contestants in women's basketball are the East and South. Lisa Ingram, a high school senior from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., scored 26 points as the South defeated the Midwest 121-100. And the East beat the West 80-73 behind Medina Dixon's 24 points.

The hockey gold medal matchup will be a replay of Tuesday night's meeting between Great Lakes and Central Great Lakes won the well-played game 6-3, getting two goals and an assist from Notre Dame's Kirt Bjork of Trenton, Mich.

Both were 2-0 going into Tuesday's finale of the round-robin portion of the hockey competition and had been assured of meeting for the gold.

"The two underdogs are meeting in the gold-medal game. It's almost the Olympic story all over again, except there are two teams," said Great Lakes Coach Shawn Walsh, referring to the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y., in which the surprising U.S. team beat the favored Soviet team and went on to take the gold medal.

The New England and Midwest teams, which had been expected to be the favorites here, were to play in the bronze-medal game.

In soccer, the East beat the two-time defending champion Midwest 2-1 in a wild double-overtime, sudden-death shootout. And it was Syracuse University goalie Joe Papaleo who ended it, scoring against Midwest goalie Ed Gettemeire of Ballwin, Mo., in the 11th round of the marathon shootout.

Tuesday's rhythmic gymnastics finals saw Lydia Crabtree, 22, of Redondo Beach, Calif., who won the all-around competition Monday night, add a gold medal in the ribbon competition. Sue Sofie, 20, the six-time national champion from Agoura, Calif., won the rope.

Valerie Zimring, 16, of Cheviot Hills, Calif., was the gold medal winner in the clubs. She also was the silver medalist in the overall. Michele Berube, 15, of Rochester, Minn., won the hoop.

This non-Olympic year forum for 33 summer and winter sports provided the first Olympic-style setting for rhythmic gymnastics, a sport that has flourished in the Eastern-bloc countries.

Little League

North State 3

Greenville's Tar Heel Little League, sparked by first inning homers by Travis King and Rodney Harris, romped to a 16-3 victory over its brother league, the North State, yesterday in the second round of the Area II Little League tournament.

The Tar Heels will now face Roanoke Rapids, an 8-3 winner over Tarboro in the other game. They meet today at 5 p.m. at Elm Street Park, with the winner advancing to Friday's game for the district IV title, also to be played in Greenville.

Terry Warren got the first fateful inning underway for the Tar Heel players, reaching on an error. King followed with the first homer, making it 2-0.

Brian Joyner kept it going with a single, moving to third on wild pitches. He scored on Anthony Cobb's double. Harris then cracked the second two-run homer of the inning, making it 5-0, all the winners would need.

The Tar Heels later added one in the third, five in the fourth—on a three-run homer by Eric Joyner—and finished it up with five more in the fifth.

All three North State runs came over in the second inning, with Scott Davis hitting a two-run homer.

King led the Tar Heel hitting with three, while Joyner and Cobb each had two. No one had more than one for the North Staters.

Roanoke Rapids moved into the finals of the Area II Little League championship tournament with an 8-3 victory over Tarboro yesterday.

Roanoke Rapids will play Greenville Tar Heel League team for the title today at 5 p.m. at Elm Street Park. The winner meets the Area I winner for the district IV title on Friday.

Roanoke Rapids pushed over two runs in the first to take the initial lead in the game. The team added one more in the second.

What proved to be the winning run scored in the fourth. Richie Moore singled and advanced on a passed ball and a wild pitch. He scored when John Allen singled, making it 4-0.

Roanoke Rapids added four more in the fifth, while Tarboro pushed over two in the fifth and one in the sixth.

Moore and Allen each had three hits to lead the Roanoke Rapids' hitting. Larry Gulley had two for Tarboro.

Wilmington 10
Wayne County 3

Wilmington, unbeaten throughout the tournament, romped to a 10-3 victory over Wayne County yesterday evening to win the State Babe Ruth League's 13-15-year-old championship.

Wilmington will now represent North Carolina in the regionals, to be played starting August 9 in Fishersville, Va.

Farmville 7

AYDEN—Greene County eliminated Farmville from the 9-12-year-old Babe Ruth League tournament being played at Ayden, last night.

Greene County will now face Ayden for the right to move into the finals of the double elimination tournament against unbeaten Winterville.

Greene County banged out eight hits and took advantage of four Farmville errors to do its damage. Farmville, helped along by as many misplays, got only six hits, however.

Anthony Jones hurled the victory, while Mike Vandiford was tagged with the loss. Cory Williams had a homer to pace the Greene County hitting.

Winterville 8
Ayden 5

AYDEN—Winterville remained as the final unbeaten team in the field of the 9-12-year-old Babe Ruth League tournament being played at Ayden. Winterville dumped the host team, Ayden, 8-5, and clinched one of two berths for the State Tournament to be held in Kinston, starting August 3.

Winterville will now meet the winner of tonight's Ayden-Greene County game in the losers' bracket, for the championship, to be played on Thursday night. The winner of that game will also draw a berth in the state tourney.

Winterville was outthit by Ayden, 8-6, but played perfect ball in the field, while Ayden was guilty of five errors, and that helped make the difference.

Bronswell Patrick hurled the win, while Gary Langley was the losing pitcher.

Ty Little led the Ayden hitting with three in four trips.

Players, Owners In Separate Meetings

Weaving Through
Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players' Association, the union representing striking baseball players, weaves his way through a throng of press prior to a meeting of the union. The players, after a five hour meeting, reaffirmed their support for their negotiating team. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

The 48th day of the major league baseball strike finds feuding players and owners' negotiators meeting some 3,000 miles apart. Whether the walkout is any closer to a settlement may be known after those separate meetings on each coast today.

While the 26 club owners were scheduled to sit down with their bargaining unit, the Player Relations Committee, in New York, the executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, Marvin Miller, was to meet with a group of players in Los Angeles to brief them on the status of the negotiations.

There has been no bargaining since the talks collapsed in Washington, D.C., last Thursday just as an agreement was rumored to be imminent. No further meetings have been scheduled, but Ray Grebey, the owners' chief negotiator, said he was available for joint talks at any time and a source close to the PRC said it was likely that a session would be held Thursday in New York.

The strike has wiped out more than 25 percent of the season with some 579 games canceled through today.

Although Miller's office indicated that he may return to New York after the Los Angeles meeting, that session also may touch off a series of regional briefings to close what he called "a terrible information gap." He said the gap resulted from the news blackout imposed last week by U.S.

Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan.

Meanwhile, American and National League owners will first meet separately in New York, followed by a joint session.

"The main reason for the joint meeting is that people lost track of things last week during the blackout on information," Grebey said.

However, there were reports that new pressure to reach a settlement may come from three moderate-line American League owners — George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees, Edward Bennett Williams of the Baltimore Orioles and Eddie Chiles of the Texas Rangers.

The rival parties apparently are in agreement on how to compensate teams that lose a "ranking" free agent but remain at odds over where that compensation should originate. The owners want direct compensation from a team signing a free agent while the players insist on a pool of players.

During a five-hour meeting with the union's 30-member executive board in Chicago on Monday night — some 80 other players also showed up — Miller apparently eased the minds of many of them. There had been criticism from some players on how the negotiations were being handled.

In Kansas City, Dan Quisenberry, the Royals' player representative, said major leaguers living in the area would meet either tonight or Thursday for a briefing on the status of negotiations.

Orioles owner Williams, who has been outspoken in his demands for an agreement, said the owners' session would probably be "a good old country meeting. We'll keep meeting and meeting and meeting and, despite all the efforts to thwart me, I'll keep trying. We must settle this week."

PETE PRACTICES
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Practice is the road to success, according to Pete Rose of the Philadelphia Phillies.

"My father taught me that the only way you can make good at anything is to practice and then practice some more," Rose said.

Real Victim Of Strike: Baseball's Innocence

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Perhaps the worst part of the strike that stopped summer is that the two sides have succeeded in robbing baseball of its most basic and perhaps most important quality — innocence.

For a century or so, the sport sold escape. You could go to the local ballpark, and for a couple of hours you could be free of the world's hassles. The stadium was a sanctuary of fresh air, a patch of green in the middle of a concrete city. It was set aside for this very special activity where grown men played a little boy's game.

Baseball restored for its fans a time of innocence in their lives. It supplied winners and losers with no time limits imposed. It provided mortal-sized heroes who didn't have to weigh 300 pounds or stand 7 feet tall to excel.

And most importantly, it supplied a very special continuity from one game to another, one pennant race to another, and one season to another. That was the essence of what baseball was all about.

Now all of it has been destroyed, shattered in the fallout of this strike, provoked by the owners (remember, they even went to court to force it) and carried out by the players.

It has been a sad sight to contemplate. They have taken the bloom off the rose forever. For many of us, there no longer will be a special feeling for The Game. It will be just another industry, concerned with profit and loss — the bottom line.

Good-bye, innocence. Hello, reality. The sweet sound of wood against horsehide, once so very special for a baseball fan, will be no different, essentially, than the noise of another factory drill press turning out its daily supply of widgets. This is no sport. This is a business.

With that in mind, baseball's bosses have been scurrying about piecing together various plans to salvage their season, save the playoffs and World Series and its important revenue. They should have worried about that back in early June when they argued so eloquently in the Rochester court of Judge Henry Werker against an injunction that would have postponed this mess for at least another year. But they wanted this strike now and they got it. The reason, a very businesslike insurance policy that wouldn't have paid $50 million next year.

Every time the slightest bit of progress in negotiations is made — and most of it has been just that, slight — plans begin surfacing about how to put the season back together.

One general manager says let's divide the season into two halves, declaring the leaders on strike day, June 12, the first-half winners and putting them into a pre-playoff playoff against the second-half winners. That would create post-facto champions, which hardly seems fair, especially to the second-place teams, none of which was more than two games behind when the strike hit.

Another GM likes four-team, pre-playoff, round-robin shootouts in each division. But since everybody knows more is better, why not make it six teams in the National League and seven in the American? Then nobody will be left out.

There are other, more contrived plans bouncing around, too.

Well, if management has any respect at all left for the fans, it will scrap these outrageous schemes. The strike already has created enough chaos to last a lifetime for baseball. We don't need more.

This is an asterisk season right now, and further defiling it with gimmickry will hardly serve any purpose. Ten-player lineups with hitting specialists in one league and the proliferation of plastic grass in the other is more than enough rule-bending, thank you, for the few remaining traditionalists who care about The Game.

If by some miracle, a solution is constructed for that festering called free-agent compensation, and then the two sides somehow solve the credited-service dilemma and end the strike, then by all means, bring baseball back. Pick up the season based on the calendar and play the remaining schedule.

If that means crowning division champions based on 100 games or less, well, that's the way it goes. But please, no gimmicks. You've killed innocence already. Don't trample on tradition, too.

Raider-NFL Decision Is In The Hands Of Jury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Football League has concluded its presentation in the frequently bitter courtroom battle against the Oakland Raiders, with the jury expected to begin today what could be lengthy deliberations.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said after Tuesday's closing arguments by league attorney Patrick Lynch that he thought the NFL finished its defense in the antitrust case on a strong note.

"I thought he was really sharp," Rozelle said outside court following Lynch's lengthy presentation to the jury. "If I'm right and they (the jurors) will determine there was no oral contract ... that would extend to other parts of the case."

Lynch dwelled at length on the claim of Oakland Raider managing general partner Al Davis that he had an oral contract with the league to allow him to shift the team from Oakland to Los Angeles.

Flashing onto a screen in the courtroom previous testimony by team owners who attended a league meeting where the oral contract was supposedly made, Lynch said the statements back the NFL's claim that no such deal was struck.

Edwin Heafey Jr., representing the Oakland Coliseum, led off Tuesday's closing arguments for the defense, accusing Davis of perpetrating a long-standing master plan to "rip" the team away from its Oakland fans and move it to Los Angeles. Heafey implied that Davis mapped out the strategy as he would have mapped out a football game plan.

"If you're going to have a plan, you have to have a villain and in this case, I guess it's the Oakland fans who supported the Raiders in the Oakland Coliseum," Heafey said.

He also disputed the Raiders' claims that the facilities in Oakland were not good enough, pointing out that the stadium and practice facilities were a sufficient base for the team's drive to a Super Bowl title last season.

Lynch told the seven women and three men of the jury, who must reach a unanimous verdict, that they face a weighty task.

"We are trusting the fate of the National Football League as we know it to you 10 people," he said.

He defended rule 4.3 of the league's constitution, requiring that three-fourths of the league's 28 owners approve a move. The owners voted 22-0 against allowing Davis to move his team from Oakland to Los Angeles and the rule is one of the key issues in the case.

"Rule 4.3 only defines where the competition for a franchise will be held," Lynch said. "Will it be held with the owner, who can be bought off, or with the league and all its constituents."

Bobby Unser, After Long Delay, Gets Chance To Tell His Story

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Unser never has denied he passed a line of cars as he left the pits under the yellow caution light. What he vehemently denies is the contention that his conduct on the crucial 150th lap of last May's Indianapolis 500 was in any way improper.

Unser's third Indy victory was overturned by a unanimous vote of five U.S. Auto Club race stewards a day after the May 24 classic, and he has been waiting seven weeks for a chance to tell his story.

"One thing is to try to show the panel there was a reason why I did that," said Unser, expected to be the final witness in his own behalf at a special USAC hearing, "that in fact, it wasn't against the rules and in fact there's no real written rule against that."

awarded the victory to Mario Andretti cost the Indianapolis Motor Speedway a "tremendous amount of credibility."

"They've gone way down in people's minds all over the world. You're talking about a hundred million people, the whole world, not just the city (of Indianapolis)."

"The people will assume because of the ABC thing, that Bobby Unser violated a rule, and they'll accept that as it was given them," Unser said. ABC announcer Jackie Stewart pointed out the alleged violation on television. His comments were added to the edited television tape several hours after the race and after Andretti had filed his protest.

"The part they won't accept was how you take the race away the next day. The public would have accepted a penalty on a supposed infraction at the time. But they're not buying this."

According to USAC witnesses, including Chief Steward Tom Binford, a driver must blend into the pack behind the car to his immediate right at the end of the pit wall. The car entering the track, however, must stay beneath a yellow line separating the track and the track apron until he comes through turn two.

Binford said the rule is clear cut. Unser said there was no such rule.

"My job is to utilize the rules to my best advantage, staying within the rules," Unser said. "Normally I'm pretty good at doing that."

Unser said the "rule was never intended to mean leaving the pits."

"It was never meant to cover a situation (where a car is) on an extension of the pits," Unser said. "I honestly believe he (Binford) knows it down deep."

Tired U.S. Team Set For Rematch

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — It was a tired, battered United States squad that prepared for its rematch today with the Soviet Union for the men's basketball gold medal at the World University Games.

"Tomorrow will be our 18th game in 27 days," U.S. Coach Tom Davis of Boston College said Tuesday. "We are near exhaustion in several positions."

Borgmann and Barbara Major. The U.S. water polo team, which needed only to win its final match against Romania to take the gold, was upset 6-4 and had to settle for a silver medal. Cuba took the gold by swamping the Soviet Union 11-6. Romania earned the bronze medal.

The Soviets defeated the United States 96-75 in the women's basketball final.

Galina Krisevici paced the winners with 27 points, and the Americans were never in the game. Lataunya Pollard of Cal State-Long Beach led the U.S. team with 13 points, while 6-foot-8 center Anne Donovan of Old Dominion, playing with a swollen knee, added 12.

Donovan was injured in a preliminary game and had to sit out Monday's victory over Romania.

In swimming, Kim Linehan and Kris Kirchner, both also from the University of Texas, won their second gold medals of the Games. Linehan won the women's 200-meter butterfly in a Games record 2:15.71. Kirchner was a member of the victorious men's 400-meter freestyle relay team.

Bruce Baumgartner, 20, of Indiana State won the gold medal in the freestyle wrestling unlimited weight class. Mike Land of Iowa State took a silver in the 130-pound category, and Dave Schultz of the University of Oklahoma won the silver in the 160-pound event.

Schramm Would Just As Soon See Pressure On The Eagles

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Dallas Cowboys are favored to win the National Football League's National Conference Eastern Division this year. It's an honor Tex-

Schramm can do without. "I wish the Eagles had all the pressure of everybody picking them," said Schramm, the Cowboys' president and general manager. "Here they come out of the Super Bowl and they are getting a free ride."

The Cowboys have been installed as 5-1 picks to play in the Super Bowl by the Las Vegas books.

"Philadelphia should be the favorites, but then they don't have 15 years of tradition behind them, and I guess that's what the public looks at," Schramm said.

Last year, Dallas was picked as low as fourth in their division. The Cowboys finished with a 12-4 record, however, and came within a game of going to the Super Bowl, losing to Philadelphia in the NFC title game.

"I can tell you right now that matching last year will be a tough act to follow," Schramm said. "I'll take 12 wins right now. We have the nucleus to get back to the Super Bowl, but we could play better than we did last year and still not have as good a season."

One of the pleasant surprises for the Cowboys this year has been the play of fullback Ron Springs, who suffered the "sophomore slump" last year. With Robert Newhouse and Timmy Newsome still sidelined by leg injuries, Springs has become the frontrunner in the three-way battle for the starting fullback position alongside halfback Tony Dorsett.

"Springs definitely looks quicker," running back coach Al Lavan said. "I think that's mainly because he has a year of experience behind him at fullback and he knows the position much better."

In Tampa, police and the NFL security people are investigating a series of death threats directed at Bucs safety Neal Colzie.

Colzie, whose two step-sisters were fatally shot in Atlanta in January, said he has received four or five threatening telephone calls. Police have determined that the calls were long distance but haven't been able to trace them.

The Los Angeles Rams on Tuesday signed linebacker Mel Owens of Michigan, their No. 1 draft choice, and he immediately reported to the team's training camp. Owens signed a series of three one-year contracts. No terms were disclosed.

Tight end Mike Cobb has returned to his regular spot, ending a Chicago Bears' experiment to turn him into an offensive tackle.

"I still think in time he could make a good tackle," said Bears Coach Neill Armstrong. "If he makes the team at tight end and there comes a time we need a tackle, he could probably go there."

Veteran Cleveland running back Greg Pruitt insists he can start for the Browns this season. The ninth-year pro underwent knee surgery midway through the 1979 season and saw only limited action last year, being used mainly as a receiver coming out of the backfield.

Pruitt will have to beat out veterans Charles White and Terry Miller.

"I see myself as a starter," said Pruitt, the former Oklahoma star. "I welcome the challenge. What those other guys have done in the past speaks for itself. What I've done in the past speaks for itself, too. But all that is history. The only thing that matters is what we do now."

Tony Galbreath says he is encouraged by Bum Phillips, the New Orleans Saints' new head coach.

"I think a lot of things were brought out in the open last year, and a lot of us didn't know what was going on," Galbreath said. "That hurt us — as a coaching staff, as players and as a team."

Galbreath, who left training camp last year in an economic dispute, was relegated to a backup spot by Dick Nolan, who was fired as coach with four games remaining last year.

Space Shuttle's Mechanical Arm Is Tested

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts and aerospace workers solved a computer problem, then flexed the space shuttle Columbia's new mechanical arm without a hitch during a flight rehearsal, officials said.

The rehearsal was delayed about six hours when technicians had problems opening and closing the Columbia's cargo bay doors and programming an on-board computer to run the robot arm. But Kennedy Space Center spokesman Dick Young said about an hour of the delay was made up Tuesday night after technicians got things going, and the test ended early today.

"The test has ended and it was successful," said test director Andy Brown. "The minor problems we had before the test were resolved."

"They've finished most major functions," Young said late Tuesday, adding there were no problems with the test for the Columbia's second space mission.

Dr. Robert Gray, manager of the shuttle projects office, said the orbiter's second launch is still "go" for Sept. 30.

The 20-hour rehearsal originally was scheduled to end about 9 p.m. Tuesday. It had been postponed twice before it even started.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly, who will fly the reusable spacecraft's second mission, were in the cockpit about 13 hours Tuesday, Young said. They and other astronauts took part in testing the "remote manipulation system," a mechanical arm that folds out from the cargo bay to place and retrieve satellites and other objects in space.

The astronauts also operated computers to make sure they are compatible with all systems, including the shuttle's payload of instruments.

Officials still were tangling with a big problem — overpressurization of the Columbia's twin solid rocket boosters. Work on the problem continued and would be "cutting it pretty close" to the deadline, said Gray. But he added he was confident the problems would be solved in time.

Gray told reporters he was "90 percent sure" a water-spray system would be used to dampen and deaden shock waves that jolted the orbiter during its first launch April 12. The waves were caused by stronger-than-anticipated pressure from the solid fuel rockets.

Testing on such a system is being conducted at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., and a decision is expected soon on whether to go ahead with its installation, Gray said.

"I am confident we will be able to beat the overpressure problem and be ready for a launch," he said. "I think we feel real, real good compared to this time preceding the first launch. There are far less open items and unknowns."

Gray said about $3 million will have been spent by the time work is completed on the pressurization difficulties with the solid rockets.

The spray system will consist of nozzles placed around the holes into which the rocket boosters' exhausts fit on the mobile launcher platform. Water would be sprayed horizontally across the exhaust holes at a rate of about 70,000 gallons a minute. Gray said initial tests show this reduces the pressure from each solid rocket.

Officials fear that excessive vibration could harm the orbiter, its crew or cargo during launch.

 Y Z I E E L V U K Y T Z V T L

Today's Cryptquip clue: F equals L.

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

 Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

There is a fascination about ruffing a loser with a low trump that many find hard to resist. But that seemingly useless trump might be needed for more important purposes.

North-South bid smoothly to an excellent game. Note North's raise with only three trumps. We prefer that action on three trumps to an honor and a ruffing value to the less descriptive, and less encouraging, rebid of one no-trump.

West led the ten of spades, and declarer thought that his only problem was to hold his diamond losers to one. Since a diamond could be ruffed in dummy, declarer gave the hand little thought. He won the king of spades in dummy and led the king of diamonds. East took the ace and returned a spade. Declarer won on the table, led a diamond to his queen and ruffed a diamond. Then he cashed the queen of hearts, but when West showed out, declarer realized that he would have to lose a trump trick as well as two clubs. Down one.

Declarer was most unlucky to run into a 4-0 trump division, but even that could have been overcome with correct technique. After winning the first spade, declarer should cash dummy's queen of trumps. If both defenders follow, declarer knows that the trumps can be no worse than 3-1, so he can afford to ruff a diamond on the board.

But when West fails to follow to the first trump, declarer needs all of dummy's trumps to pick up East's trumps. Therefore, he cannot afford to ruff a diamond, for that would leave dummy one trump short for declarer's primary goal. Another method would have to be found to avoid the diamond loser.

The winning line is for declarer to continue with a low heart from dummy at trick three. East must split his honors. Declarer wins in hand, reenters dummy with the remaining high spade and leads dummy's last heart, drawing East's trumps with the help of the proven finesse. Now all that remains is to lead a low diamond to dummy's ten and pray. When that forces the ace declarer is home.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do you know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. A Vestige Of Railroad Luxury Aboard The Amtrak 'Crescent'

By LESLEY TAYLOR
 United Press International
 The monuments of Washington, D.C., slip into the horse country of Virginia.

At breakfast, travelers see Atlanta's Peachtree Station. Lunch is in Birmingham, Ala.

In 29 hours, passengers aboard Amtrak's Crescent get an eye-level tour through 11 states while reveling in service befitting the antebellum South.

The Crescent, one of six long-distance Amtrak trains in danger of dissolution by the Reagan Administration, retains much of the deluxe service which made it the flagship of the Southern Railway, when the Southern Crescent was the last of the elegant trains.

In April, 1981, 47,403 people boarded the Crescent en route to one of its 36 stops between New York and New Orleans, said Amtrak spokesman Jung Lee.

Lee says there is no tally of how many booked themselves into the sleeper cars or the more economical roomettes, but on one journey in May the sleepers were filled. The rest of the 16 cars well stocked with passengers.

The trip between Philadelphia and New Orleans takes 29 hours, covers 1,288 miles and costs $388 for two — which includes a room with moveable stuffed armchairs, a porter whose sole concern is eight passengers, a sunset view of Manassas, Va., and what passengers describe as the incomparable experience of being lulled to sleep by the clack of train wheels coursing through the Carolinas.

The Crescent is among Amtrak's more popular long-distance trains, losing less money than most, said Lee. It carries 183 passengers per train mile, 33 more than the average, and loses only eight cents per passenger mile.

To survive in-house elimination, an Amtrak long-distance train must fall below the loss of 10 cents per passenger mile.

The Montrealer, the most heavily traveled Amtrak long-distance train running from Montreal to Washington, D.C., boasts 360 passengers per mile and the Broadway Limited, from New York to Chicago, carries 243 passengers per mile.

Falling below the Crescent in popularity are the Washington-to-Cincinnati Shenandoah, which Lee said will be discontinued in October, and the Boston-to-Kentucky Hilltopper, which was eliminated last year.

None but the Broadway Limited come close to matching the history and mystique of the Crescent.

Once in the vanguard of luxury trains, the Crescent still adorns its widewindowed dining car tables with fresh flowers and matches its table and napkin linens. The maitre d'hotel seats passengers and trusts only himself to open and pour the wine or champagne.

Until dining service was downgraded to microwave oven food this summer, Amtrak Crescent's menu reflected its route, as do most of the long-distance train menus. Grits is a breakfast choice and red snapper Creole is on the dinner list.

Lady Di's Prince

Heir apparent to the British Throne, Prince Charles, 32, holds the titles of Prince of Wales, Earl of Chester, and Duke of Cornwall among others. He is the first member of the immediate royal family to hold a university degree. In the military he flew supersonic jets and commanded a minesweeper. Among members of the royal family, only he and the Queen are privy to government secrets. In 1980 his landholdings brought him $500,000. Charles, who travels as a "super salesman" for Britain, sees his main job as "encouraging people." Today he becomes Lady Diana Spencer's prince, the first King-to-be since 1659 to marry an English woman.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the official residence of the British royal family?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — James Watt is Secretary of Interior.

Slain U.S. Priest Feared He Would Be A Victim

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer
SANTIAGO DE ATITLAN, Guatemala (AP) — "Father, you're in extreme danger. You must get out immediately," a parishioner warned the 46-year-old priest from Oklahoma six months ago. He left, came back three months later and on Monday night was assassinated, presumably by a right-wing death squad.

The Rev. Stan Rother said he was frightened when a member of his flock told him on Jan. 10 he had been marked for execution.

He said death squads aided by the army had killed about 30 Indians in this village on the shore of Lake Atitlan in the last few months.

He saw one death squad in action, standing helplessly by Jan. 3 as a Tzutujil Indian catechist, Diego Quic, was dragged from the front porch of the rectory and shoved into a car.

The priest said Quic was screaming when the car and its escort of two military jeeps passed a busload of townspeople just outside the village. Quic was never seen again.

Rother left Jan. 11 and returned to the United States. But he said he was haunted by what was happening in the village and returned April 11.

I interviewed Father Rother in late April in connection with a story on the growing restlessness among Guatemalan Indians. He spoke fluent Cachiuel, one of the major local dialects, and had worked for spent 13 years working among the Tzutujil, who once belonged to the loose-knit Mayan empire.

The priest seemed startled at seeing a reporter and not too pleased. As he spoke in a slow, Oklahoma drawl, his eyes kept scanning the Indians in the courtyard in front of the church.

"I may be in a good deal more danger than I thought when I came back," he said on the porch. "I'm told I'm being watched and I'd rather not say anything now."

Later he told his story in a hotel room in Panajachel, across the lake from Santiago de Atitlan: "The troubles began in Santiago de Atitlan Jan. 1, 1980, when a group of 20 or 30 guerrillas took over the town," Rother said.

"They were armed but they didn't threaten anyone. They talked about injustice and said they were seeking understanding and support."

Some of the townspeople applauded the rebels, and he believed this was reported to Gen. Fernando Romeo Lucas' military government.

Military patrols showed up with increasing frequency and the authorities established a network of 40

"orejias" — informers. "On Oct. 20, 1980, the army set up a compound outside of town. Two days later two villagers disappeared and were never seen again."

The manager of a radio station was dragged from his home and killed.

Another man disappeared Oct. 26. On Nov. 17, five other men were kidnapped, including the night guard at the radio station. The station had been denouncing the lot of the Indians and urging them, in native dialects, to become more involved politically.

"People were afraid to go out of their houses at night." Quic, the priest's close friend, was kidnaped Jan. 3.

"I came out of the rectory when I heard the scuffle. There were three of them and they had gun. They just stared at me, daring me to do something. It was a helpless feeling."

The priest said the incidents followed a pattern that has been repeated with increasing frequency throughout the Indian highlands. It begins with a guerrilla attack followed by army retribution that drives more Indians into the guerrilla camps.

Father Rother said the guerrillas came back into the area Jan. 7, attacking a military truck not far from the village.

"There was no announcement of government casualties but they must have been heavy," he said. "Soldiers came the next day and went to the nearest coffee finca and began rounding up pickers."

Seventeen people were killed or disappeared, the priest said. Their bodies began turning up around the countryside, some showing signs of torture.

Father Rother said mass for the dead and consoled the distraught families.

"These Indians are basically pacifists," he said. "But the government is afraid it's losing control. Middle-of-the-roads are being driven over to the guerrillas."

The U.S. Embassy and church officials in Guatemala City announced that Rother was shot and killed by unidentified gunmen Monday night about midnight. His body was found in his rectory by nuns who heard the shots.

Many Arms Sent Cuba

BOSTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. says the Soviet Union is shipping levels of advanced weapons to Cuba that could rival the record amount sent in 1962, the year of the Cuban missile crisis.

In a Washington interview with the Boston Globe, published in Wednesday's editions, Haig said the Russians had shipped about 40,000 tons of "sophisticated" weapons to Cuba in the first seven months of this year — more than twice that of last year.

He said the figure could reach the amount sent in 1962, the year that the Soviet Union attempted to install intermediate-range ballistic missiles there. The buildup led to a U.S. naval blockade of the Caribbean island before the missiles were removed.

Haig reiterated administration contentions of "solid evidence" that some of the weapons now being sent are en route to El Salvador and Nicaragua.

"While most of the tonnage is believed earmarked for Cuba, for its regular armed forces and its newly created territorial militia, there is solid evidence some of these goods are being shipped to El Salvador and Nicaragua," he said.

Haig said the Russians are "very much aware of our concern" about such actions, saying the United States might be compelled to take action against "the source" of the arms. He did not specify what sort of action, saying, "it never serves any useful purpose to lay out contemplated steps." But he stressed that "talk alone is inadequate."

Butz Hopes To Avoid Limelight

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Former U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz says he'll try to stay out of the limelight now that he's been released from a federal prison after serving 25 days for income-tax evasion.

Butz, 72, who was agriculture secretary under former Presidents Nixon and Ford, said in a telephone interview Monday he was "getting a little rest" at his West Lafayette home.

Royal Rites Are Costly

LONDON (AP) — From $40,000 for the cake and breakfast to $10,000 for the bridesmaids costumes, the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer will be one of the most expensive in history — costing an estimated $2 million, Buckingham Palace officials say.

The huge bill, which will include everything from the cost of security and renting St. Paul's Cathedral to printing wedding programs for the congregation, is being shared by British taxpayers, Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Charles.

According to published reports and palace officials, these were among the major costs:

- $600,000 for security.
- $100,000 for decorations, flowers and barriers along the wedding procession route from Buckingham Palace to St. Paul's Cathedral.
- $100,000 for a pre-wedding reception Monday.
- $40,000 for the wedding breakfast and cake.
- $300,000 for a two-week honeymoon cruise on the royal yacht Britannia.
- $60,000 for Diana's sapphire and diamond engagement ring.

Award-Winning Director William Wyler Stricken

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — William Wyler, who directed the award-winning epic "Ben-Hur," has died of a massive heart attack — just one day after returning from London and a final public tribute to his work.

Wyler, who directed more actors to Academy Award-winning performances than any other filmmaker and won three Oscars himself, died Monday at the age of 79.

"His wife was with him. He died at the Beverly Hills," Wyler's daughter, Judith Sheldon, said Tuesday. "My parents had just returned home Sunday evening from Europe, where he was honored in London by the British Film Institute.

They played all his movies over two months, and then he appeared and spoke."

Wyler also was in London when he received his Academy Award.

At the time, he was a lieutenant colonel in the Army Air Corps. He received a call from a reporter in 1942, telling him he'd won an Oscar for "Mrs. Miniver."

"Of course I was surprised and pleased," he once recalled in an interview. "But the thrill I had looked forward to for so long just wasn't there. In the middle of a war, amidst so much suffering and death, Hollywood seemed far off and unimportant at that moment."

He used his war experiences in directing his second Oscar-winner, "The Best Years of Our Lives," in 1946.

His work ranged from comedies to westerns to dramas, and he even produced an Oscar-winning wartime documentary, "The Memphis Belle." He photographed some of the sequences himself during combat missions.

Wyler took on the epic "Ben-Hur" in 1959 and won his third Oscar for it. He gave it a human quality Cecil B. de Mille could not manage in his biblical spectacles. "Ben-Hur" proved to be the biggest money-maker in film history to that time and rescued ailing MGM.

"He gave me two of the best parts I ever had, and if you can't make a career out of two Wyler films you might as well give up," said actor Charlton Heston, referring to "The Big Country" and his

Oscar-winning role in "Ben-Hur."

Audrey Hepburn, who won an Oscar under Wyler's direction for "Roman Holiday" in 1953 and appeared in two more of his movies said, "Willie totally changed my life the day he entered it... Apart from the love I had for him, he was the cornerstone of my career."

Other actors who won Oscars under Wyler's direction were Walter Brennan, "Come and Get It" and "The Westerner;" Bette Davis, "Jezebel;" Greer Garson and Teresa Wright, "Mrs. Miniver;" Fredric March and Harold Russell, "The Best Years of Our Lives;" Olivia de Havilland, "The Heiress;" Burl Ives "The Big Country;" Hugh Griffith, "Ben-Hur," and Barbra

Streisand, "Funny Girl." Wyler's first musical, "Funny Girl," was also Miss Streisand's debut. There were reports of clashes between star and director, but both ended the experience with praise for each other.

Samuel Goldwyn Jr., who worked with Wyler and Heston on "Ben-Hur," and was an old friend, said from London: "Willie's passing is a great loss to all of us who knew and loved him. Fortunately the enduring quality of his work will survive for many generations to appreciate his genuine understanding of the human heart."

Among other of his highly acclaimed films were "Wuthering Heights," "The Little Foxes," "Carrie," "The Desperate Hours" and "Friendly Persuasion."

Wyler is survived by his second wife, Margaret Tallichet Wyler, and four children.

He was married to actress Margaret Sullivan in 1934 after directing her in "The Good Fairy." They were divorced in 1936.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Namesakes Celebrating, Too

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — They share a name, but little else. He is Prince of Wales, while she is untitled. And so on Charles Windsor's wedding day, several of his namesakes in America weren't planning to toot trumpets in celebration.

"I don't go for that jive, princes, kings and queens. I believe we're all equal," said Charles Windsor of Crownville, Md. "I'm not going to watch it."

"There's no way I'll watch it in the morning, man. I work for a living," said Charles Windsor of Potomac, Md., who owns a gas station in Washington. "I'll be at the station and we don't have a TV there."

This Charles Windsor did say he'd probably be watching highlights on tonight's news, "but you've got to feed the family first."

These Windsors notwithstanding, U.S. TV networks were expecting big audiences for today's live coverage of the wedding of Prince Charles of the House of Windsor to Lady Diana Spencer. All planned more than five hours of early coverage with news reports and prime-time highlight shows later today.

Windsor, as in the landmark Windsor Castle, is an old English name that British royalty adopted when it cast off its German connections during World War I. Britain's George V began his reign in 1910 in the House of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and died in 1936 as a Windsor.

Charles Windsor, a retired aircraft company executive from St. Louis, was in college in 1936 when the Duke of Windsor became king and then abdicated to marry Wallis Simpson, an American. "I got the nickname Duke from some fraternity brothers, and it's stuck with me all my life," he said.

He said a rich relation struck oil in Texas and decided to burn $5,000 on a family tree. "It went back to the original Windsor Castle with a guy who fell out of favor with the king and was beheaded."

This member of the St. Louis Windsors has "no burning desire to watch his namesake get hitched. 'It's not my way of life.' Married 40 years, he has three children. "I gave them all good American names — Bob, Bill and Rick," he said.

Capt. Kangaroo Is Recovering

TORONTO (AP) — Bob Keeshan, known to millions of children across North America as Captain Kangaroo, is progressing favorably in his recovery from a heart attack, a hospital spokesman said.

However, the spokesman at Etobicoke General Hospital said Keeshan still is not allowed any visitors other than his immediate family.

Sinatra Made Honorary Chief

MEMPHIS, TENN. (AP) — The president of this South African tribal homeland says Frank Sinatra is "the king of show business."

And to prove the point, Lucas Mangope on Tuesday made the 65-year-old entertainer an honorary chief and awarded him the order of the leopard, the country's highest honor.

Mangope also gave Sinatra an old chair only a chief may use and said the capital was honored to have him in the country.

He also praised Sinatra for coming to sing at the plush Sun City resort, even though many people still refuse to accept the territory as independent from white minority-ruled South Africa.

For Charles Windsor of Los Angeles, Windsor is a name his ancestors picked up when they arrived from Poland. It once took him to a high place.

"I went to Las Vegas and they invited me to the President's Suite," said the retired aircraft worker. "They were disappointed when they saw Margaret (his wife) and me. People tell me I looked like the Duke of Windsor."

During World War II, he almost made it to England. His outfit was sent there, just after Windsor was shipped to Okinawa.

In Los Angeles, the first network coverage on NBC began at 2:30 a.m., and this Windsor planned to watch. "I watch everything. I'm retired. I have nothing to do."

Charles Windsor of Bloomfield, Mich., has been to England on business and pleasure several times. The retired chemical company executive said the name sometimes helped break the ice. "They were interested in my relatives. My father was a blacksmith before automobiles and my mother came from Staffordshire in 1910."

Charlie Windsor, 20-year-old accounting major and football player at the University of Missouri, certainly doesn't. He just knows Lady Diana is an attractive bride.

"Too bad she's not available anymore," said the St. Louis native. "The prince is not the greatest looking guy for such a good looking girl. I guess when you have all that money and power, things come a little easier."

Cherokee Language Kept Alive By Radio Show Host At Asheville

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — When Jim Richeson was a little boy playing cowboys and Indians with his friends, his father told him something that gave new meaning to his games. One of the fair-skinned, blue eyed boy's ancestors was a full-blooded Cherokee Indian.

For Richeson, the knowledge of his Indian heritage made a major impact on his life. He became fascinated with the Indian way of life and read everything he could find on the Cherokees. He worried over the plight of what he had come to think of as his people — the discrimination, unemployment and poverty they faced.

After years of studying the Cherokees, Richeson, now 33, has come up with a way to promote Indians and keep the dying Cherokee language alive. Once a week from a small studio at the University of North Carolina at Asheville, Richeson hosts the country's only regular radio broadcast in the Cherokee language.

"It's been a dream of mine, something that will give the language and the Cherokees a good reputation," said Richeson, a part-time student and full-time groundskeeper at the university.

About 5,700 Cherokee Indians live on a reservation in western North Carolina. Membership in the Eastern Band of the Cherokee is 8,700.

Richeson began his half-hour Cherokee broadcasts about two months ago at WUNF-FM, the student radio station at UNC-A. But because of the station's 10-watt power limits the program was heard only about five miles from the campus. Recently, the station received a grant that will enable the station to boost its power to 100 watts, which will send the broadcast about 30 miles from the station.

"But we still won't be able to reach the far-western counties where the reservation is and where most Cherokees in the state live," Richeson said. He plans to send tapes of his shows to stations in those counties for rebroadcast.

Richeson, who admits he can carry on only a simple conversation in Cherokee, learned the language from reading and two courses at Western Carolina University. Most of his guests on the show are Cherokees who speak the language fluently.

"I just ask them a few simple questions to get the ball rolling and they take it from there. They don't need much help from me," he said. The shows' topics range from Cherokee legend to preparing a traditional Cherokee meal.

The show is family-oriented but Richeson is especially interested in reaching young Indians. "That's where our hope lies if we want to save the language and the whole Cherokee way of life before it's too late. We have to instill a sense of pride in the young people. We have to make them proud to be an Indian."

Back in the 1940s and 1950s, Richeson said, Indian children were punished for speaking Cherokee in public schools. He said the children were shamed by teachers into speaking only English and the language began to die out.

"When you're made to feel inferior because of what you are, it's hard to feel any sense of pride in your way of life," Richeson said. "That's what I'm trying to do here, to change alter people's perception of what Cherokees are, to show what positive thinkers they are."

The Cherokee language, a gentle, melodic language, is not an easy one to learn. There are 85 characters, one for each sound in the language. Only a handful of Cherokee classes are offered in the entire United States and most of those are taught in Oklahoma, where the western Cherokee tribe lives.

Meanwhile, Richeson is trying to gain official membership in the Cherokee tribe. In order to qualify, he has to produce a birth or death certificate of a relative who was a Cherokee. The federal Bureau of Indian Affairs would handle his request.

"There would be no rights to property or financial gain in it for me," he said. "It's just a matter of pride. I'm proud of my Indian blood and I want to officially be a Cherokee."

NOTICE OF FINDING OF FACTS ON THE ENVIRONMENT
July 29, 1981
The City of Asheville, North Carolina, N.C. 27834 (919) 252-4327
TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS, AND PERSONS:
The City of Asheville proposes to request the US Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) to be used for the following project:
1. The South Street widening project (EDs 24, 31, and 32).
2. The project will include acquisition of blighted areas, relocation of individuals affected by acquisition/demolition activities, demolition of dilapidated structures, rehabilitation of deteriorating structures, systematic code enforcement activities, street improvements, gas, utility improvements (water, sewer, gas, and electric).
The project area is located in the City of Asheville, Pitt County, North Carolina.
The total cost of the project will be $4,053,046 of which $2,994,046 is programmed for Small Cities funds. The project will be multi-year in duration.
It has been determined that such relocation can be expected, upon completion, to constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).
The reasons for such decision not to prepare such statement are as follows:
Noise and dust levels will be increased in the project area during the implementation phase. These increases will result from activities associated with water, sewer, and gas improvements, street construction/paving activities, and housing demolition activities.
During the street construction phase, motorists on Fourteenth Street will experience delays or may even encounter short detours. In addition, paving activities on Glen Arthur and 7th Streets may inhibit automobile passage for short periods.
Water, sewer, and gas service may be interrupted temporarily to homes and business in the western suburbs as these services are upgraded or replaced.
Beneficial impacts include:
Demolition of dilapidated housing stock and rehabilitation of deteriorating housing stock. These activities should promote pride in the neighborhood and enhance residential re-investment in the project area.
(2) Service interruptions will be much less frequent as water, sewer, and gas lines are replaced or abandoned. Reliable service can be expected from the system upon completion.
(3) Unpaved streets will be curbed and guttered and paved. Access to homes and businesses will be improved, to be provided on the same level as any other residence without any visible effort other than completion of the system upon completion.
(4) Increased traffic loads on Fourteenth Street have created the need for a wider street, present traffic loads, as well as anticipated future loads, can be handled effectively.
(5) Traffic accidents in this area is a major impact. For many years, this area has been deteriorating without any visible effort other than through code enforcement activities, by anyone to arrest this decline. The City of Asheville is dedicated to the clearance of this remaining slum within the City. As service levels increase (i.e. dependable water and sewer service) so will pride in the neighborhood in particular and the City in general.
During the construction phase of Fourteenth Street, it may be necessary for automobiles to utilize alternate routes. Also, during water, sewer, and gas line replacement, motorists may have to see alternate routes.

Noise and dust levels from project activities will be short term and limited only to the length of the project. No long-term deleterious impacts are anticipated.
An Environmental Review Record respecting the project has been made by the City of Greenville which documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons which such statement is not required. The Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying upon request at the Office of the City Planner, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays. No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

All interested agencies, groups, and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City of Asheville to the Office of the Mayor. All such written comments should be at City Hall, P.O. Box 1905, Greenville, N.C. 27834 on or before August 17, 1981. All comments received will be considered and the City will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action on the within projects prior to August 17, 1981.

A buffet breakfast Monday will be followed by a business meeting and a talk by Jeff Napier, president of the National Marine Manufacturers Association. Napier, an authority on the marine industry, will talk on "The State of the Industry."

Grady-White dealers will travel to Bath Monday afternoon for an in-water boat testing program where they will have the opportunity to become familiar with the 1982 model year boats produced by Grady-White.

An awards banquet, followed by a dance, will be held at the Greenville Country Club Monday night.

Offer Students Real Experience

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) - An experimental college-business program that gives marketing majors an opportunity to experience the real-life world of industry has been instituted between a branch of Indiana-Purdue University and an air freight forwarding company.

Under the arrangement, students in the Division of General and Technical Studies act as sales representatives for Airborne Freight Corp. in the Fort Wayne area.

"Thus far," says Bernie Norman, a program director at Indiana-Purdue, "the program has reinforced the business curriculum. Students get hands-on experience which develops self-confidence, a hard trait to teach or learn in school."

Junkmen Aid Assembling Of Museum

By WERNER VOLLMAN
Associated Press Writer
ARDAGGER, Austria (AP) — Here by the Danube River, in a part of rural Austria once thought inhabited by a Germanic cult, Harald Werner and Heinrich Gruber struggle with their nine-year-old museum to the German Wehrmacht. "Our only difficulties are financial," says Werner of what seems almost certain to be one of the most extensive public displays anywhere of relics of the Hitler-era German army. Some 30,000 people visited the Ardagger Wehrmacht Museum last year, inspecting some 200 uniformed mannequins, 50 Wehrmacht vehicles and 200 weapons. The museum's vast assortment of relics also includes money from a German concentration camp at Theresienstadt, French, Russian and Italian firearms and a copy of Hitler's "Mein Kampf" in Hungarian, titled "Harkom."

Werner and Gruber first put their museum together when Werner's uniform collection outgrew his storage space and Gruber collected so many vehicles his service station could hardly operate among them. A local politician recommended at the time that they form a military history association to oversee the museum and protect themselves from charges of being Nazi sympathizers. The association now has 100 members. "We are careful whom we taken on as a new member," Werner says.

Austria became part of Hitler's Third Reich in 1938 and thousands of Austrians died in the ranks of the Wehrmacht. The army's service to Hitler, himself an Austrian, bars much public reference to its existence. Vienna's huge Military History Museum, one of the world's most elaborate, stops firmly with World War I.

"We have no political inclinations, because for me the Nazi time is too far back to remember," says Werner, a 30-year-old clerk. "I have no connection with it, but I believe that each era should have a historic record." The two collectors say almost 90 percent of the museum's pieces are bought, rather than donated. The best suppliers are junkmen and chimneysweeps, the latter because of their work in Austrian attics.

Ardagger itself, near the site of a sacrificial stone linked to an early Germanic cult, is in a part of Austria once rich in World War II relics. Remnants of the Wehrmacht were caught in the area in 1945 between Americans in the West and Russians in the East.

Many of the museum's relics, however, come from much farther away. One visitor from South Africa sent the museum a pair of boots, and from Finland it has a packet of Wehrmacht tobacco, still in its original packing.

A one-time paratrooper recently brought in his own rusted helmet, hidden in a cave on the island of Crete after he was wounded there, and finally retrieved during a vacation trip. The collection, shifted to new and bigger quarters two years ago, has grown so large that its size is a key problem for its collectors. The museum gets no state financial support.

"Whatever we take in," says Werner, "we have to spend again on maintenance and restoration." So far, the museum has escaped demonstrations from either the right or left. Local officials appear to consider it a distinct tourist attraction.

POLLUTION COMPLAINTS
STOKYO (AP) — A government report shows complaints of noise pollution are on the rise in Japan. It said an increasing number of people are suffering from "psychological" damage due to pollution rather than from physical effects.

Artistry In Tombstones Is Reviving

Associated Press Writer
MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP)—The lace on her dress looks freshly starched and her curls fall gently on her shoulders. There's no sign of a crease in her stockings as she leans demurely against a flower-covered wooden post. She stares at you with innocent eyes that are not blue, or brown, or green.

They're granite-gray and seem even more real than the rest of the statue that has stood guard for most of this century over the Montpelier grave of its model, 9-year-old Margaret Pitkin.

About 15 miles away in a Barre cemetery, a likeness of Elia Corti has a more severe look in its detailed eyes. The figure sits pensively, dressed in a formal suit, and leans forward as if he has something to tell a passer-by.

It's safe to say the Barre man liked to think of himself that way — he started the life-size sculpture before his death in 1909. It was completed later by family members.

The statues are probably two of the most talked about grave markings in an area whose reputation as one of the tombstone capitals of the country was carved by European artisans and their descendants.

Judging from the many statues of angels, it's easy to see that the craftsmen liked to show off their talents on the arched wings and the peaceful looks on the faces of the heavenly creatures.

But other tombstones make it clear that angelic figures were not the only way to display the art of making tombstones.

And the figures depicting Gwendolyn and William Halvosa resting in bed and holding hands above their joint crypts is certainly not an ordinary way to mark one's passing from this life to the next.

Halvosa and his first wife picked out the design before her death more than 20 years ago, and the 74-year-old Barre man said he has never doubted that the marking best represents their 18 years together.

"I wanted something that meant something to me," he said, adding that his second wife also has an unusual gravestone with a sketch of a house where she lived for many years.

Like Halvosa, people years ago liked to choose and help design their own grave-stones, especially the stone-cutters who spent their lives chiseling away at other people's grave markings.

Tom McGuire, a spokesman for Rock of Ages Corp., the area's largest granite quarry, said the custom declined during the mid-1900s, but is becoming popular again.

He said the designs now consist mainly of etchings on square slabs of stone because the hand carving that was popular 100 or 50 years ago has been replaced by sand blasting machines.

And the work that was once took thousands of workers now requires only hundreds working with machines, McGuire said.

Though not as elaborate as in days gone by, the tombstones produced in Vermont's granite industry now are just as unique.

Etchings of tennis racquets, briefcases and dune buggies on some of the newer grave-stones in the area show that many people want to be remembered by their lifestyle, rather than by a statue of how they looked.

"They're moving away from the traditional and into the more individualistic," said McGuire.

Halvosa, who worked in the granite industry for 44 years, said people during the past few decades haven't appreciated the beauty and the sense of history in a graveyard and therefore, had little interest in tombstones.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how the members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 16-22.

HOUSE
AUTO POLLUTION — The House rejected, 177 for and 184 against, an amendment to prevent annual inspections aimed at controlling air pollution by motor vehicles. The vote leaves intact a federal law that, beginning in 1982, will require states to police auto emissions in 37 metropolitan areas having the nation's dirtiest air. The amendment was offered to a fiscal 1982 appropriations bill (HR 4034) for the Environmental Protection Agency and other agencies. The bill was sent to the Senate.

Supporter Doug Walgren, D-Pa., said the federal policy "is wrong because it puts the burden on the car owner, and not the car manufacturer... Detroit should be making devices that are long-lasting and devices that work."
Opponent Henry Waxman, D-Calif., said an appropriations bill was not the vehicle for changing the 1970 Clean Air Act, and he added that "poor maintenance by motorists" is the main reason auto emission inspections are needed.

Members voting "yea" wanted to avert state inspection of auto-emission devices.

Reps. Eugene Johnston, R-6, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Ike Andrews, D-4, and Stephen Neal, D-5, voted "nay."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Charles Whitley, D-3, Charles Rose, D-7, and James Broyhill, R-10, did not vote.

SELECTIVE SERVICE — By a vote of 125 for and 290 against, the House rejected an amendment to prevent the Selective Service System from using Social Security numbers to enforce the draft registration requirement. The amendment was offered to the defense authorization bill (HR 3519), later sent to conference with the Senate.

There currently is no military draft, but 18-year-old men are required to register for possible conscription. About 88 percent are complying. Selective Service wants registrants to list Social Security numbers and access to Social Security files to find out who has not registered.

Supporter Barry Goldwater, R-Calif., said "this chilling effect upon our citizens in utilizing some universal identification number is only the beginning of the erosion of our freedom."

Opponent Bill Nichols, D-Ala., said: "I do not want to send anybody to the penitentiary, but we need to get their attention and it is the Social Security System that is going to help us..."

Members voting "yea" opposed requiring draft registrants to provide Social Security numbers.

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

A FEDERAL COMMISSION — The House

rejected, 201 for and 216 against, an amendment to kill a $30,000 appropriation to fund the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Commission. The panel was formed 26 years ago to plan an FDR Memorial in Washington, but despite spending about $500,000 has been unable to come up with a proposal acceptable to Congress. It was described in debate as the longest-running single-purpose commission in U.S. history. The bill (HR 4035) was sent to the Senate.

Sponsor Dan Glickman, D-Kans., said "let us end this little bit of nonsense which is costing the taxpayers $30,000 to $50,000 per year."

Opponent Sudney Yates, D-Ill., said the commission should be kept alive for one more year and that to terminate it now "will result in the destruction of every attempt to try to provide a worthy memorial for the late, great president."

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose and Hefner voted "nay."
Martin did not vote.

SENATE

SOCIAL SECURITY — The Senate killed, 52 for and 46 against, an amendment to preserve minimum Social Security payments for persons now receiving them or scheduled to receive them during 1982. Congress has not yet given the final word, but the vote increases chances that the minimum benefit will be eliminated as early as Aug. 1. The Administration has proposed — and the House and Senate in previous votes endorsed — eliminating the minimum $122 monthly payment to all eligible for old-age benefits. The three million persons affected would have had their benefits lowered as a result of recalculations based on earnings history with a safety net extending to the very poor. The vote came during debate on the sweeping tax-cut bill (HJ Res 266), which was headed toward final passage and House consideration.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., a supporter of killing the amendment, said "we are not trying to take anything away from anyone" and that the main issue was austerity — "whether Congress is going to lose its nerve and start backing away from some of the spending cuts for which a large majority in both parties have voted."

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., who wanted to preserve the minimum benefit said $122 monthly "is an absolutely critical amount of money to those people living in poverty and trying to scrape by, most of whom are very elderly."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to end the minimum Social Security benefit.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

OIL TAX BREAKS — By a vote of 47 for and 49 against, the Senate refused to kill an amendment to the pending tax cut legislation (see vote above) that would have given the oil industry $18 to $20 billion in relief by phasing out over four years the windfall profits tax on newly discovered oil. The amendment later was withdrawn, however, because this vote showed that opponents had sufficient strength to maintain a filibuster. An oil tax cut of $250 million over five years was later approved.

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.V., a supporter of killing the amendment, called the proposal a windfall for the oil companies "wrapped in the flag of supply-side rhetoric and free market forces."

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., sponsor of the amendment, asked: "Should there be some penalty imposed on somebody who wants to go out and discover more oil to get away from dependence on foreign sources?"

Senators voting "yea" opposed the larger oil industry tax cuts.

East and Helms voted "nay."

TAX INDEXING — The Senate voted 57 for and 40 against to prevent inflation from moving taxpayers into higher tax percentage brackets. Beginning in 1985, the limits of each tax bracket and deduction would be increased to match the upward movement of the Consumer Price Index. The purpose of the measure, which would cost the Treasury about $12 billion in 1985, is to stabilize the buying power of taxpayers in each bracket. The amendment was offered to the pending tax cut bill (see votes above).

Supporter William Armstrong, R-Colo., said indexing "merely avoids an unlegislated, untargeted tax increase."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to index taxes to offset the effects of inflation.

Hopeful News in Medicine

Raynaud's disease is a vascular condition that prevents the free flow of blood and oxygen through the arteries to the tips of the fingers and toes. It is not identical with Buerger's disease, a vascular condition I referred to in a recent column.

There are many variations and degrees of Raynaud's disease. Recently Dr. Peter Clifford, of the British Royal Infirmary in Bristol, England, attained improved success in the treatment of Raynaud's Disease using prostaglandin E1. His results have been most exciting. His patients — suffering from cold fingers, blue discoloration of the tips of the fingers and severe pain — were markedly improved by the intravenous use of this particular prostaglandin.

The temperature of the finger tips can be measured by a process known as thermography. By this new method the thermograms indicated that more blood and oxygen was flowing through the blood vessels and that the danger of gangrene was minimized. These initial studies give evidence of great hope for patients who are severely handicapped by this distressing vascular condition.

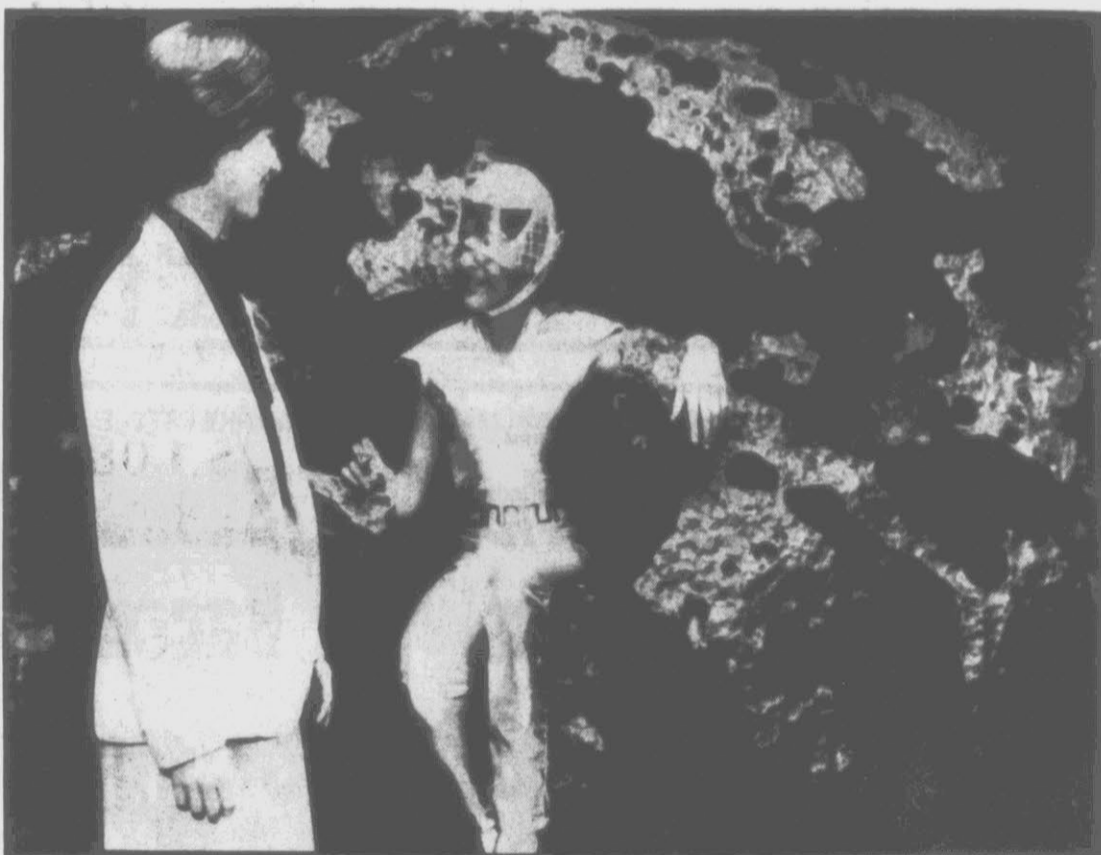

A new series of treatments against cancer of the ovary is calling forth a great deal of enthusiasm. Dr. Mark Pasmantier, professor of clinical medicine at the Cornell University Medical College, and his associates, are treating a group of patients with ovarian cancer with three highly specialized chemicals. In this study are patients who have been free from complications of the ovarian cancer for up to 4 years. These research workers have been experimenting with different combinations of drugs in an effort to find the ideal mode of treatment for each case after surgery.

A few other hospitals in this country are trying the same technique. There's good reason for hope in this small but significant group of patients.

An additional form of treatment is now being tried for patients with advanced Parkinson's disease. Some of these patients who have lost their initial responsiveness to the drug levo-dopa are now being treated by the drug, pergolide mesylate. Dr. Abraham Lieberman, professor of neurology at the New York University Medical School, believes that the drug can reduce some of the distressing symptoms of Parkinson's. Some of his patients have shown marked dramatic clinical improvement when the newer drug was used in combination with the levo-dopa.

Any scientific contribution that can bring further aid to the courageous people who suffer from this debilitating condition must be greeted with the greatest joyful enthusiasm.

Bunker's Place", the scholastic editor for "Omni" magazine and the head of a national campaign to stimulate interest in space among youngsters. The two were among participants in part of a week-long program of space-related programs at the planetarium. (AP Laserphoto)

Wonder At Venezuela's Arms Plans

By EDUARDO GALLARDO
Associated Press Writer
CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Venezuela's plans to become Latin America's first nation to buy the sophisticated U.S.-made F-16 jet fighters are stirring some controversy here and in neighboring countries.

Guyana, Venezuela's small English-speaking neighbor in the northeastern tip of South America, has formally asked the U.S. State Department to block the sale of the planes to Venezuela.

Colombia, another Venezuelan neighbor, has expressed "concern" about the risk of an arms race in the area.

Venezuela has border or territorial disputes with both nations.

Some domestic opposition also has been voiced although so far it has been low-keyed. Left-wing Congressman Hector Perez announced that he will summon a special Chamber of Deputies session to express his opposition to the planned purchase. He did not give the reasons for his opposition but another member of his party mentioned the high cost of the planes — $13.5 million each.

Former President Carlos Andres Perez, a leading figure in the opposition Accion Democratica Party, told reporters that the announcement by the government that it plans to buy the planes "has caused me some concern." But he refused to elaborate.

The government says the controversy is at least premature and by all means unwarranted.

"We are not embarked in an arms race," said President Luis Herrera, who is a member of the Social Christian Party. He added that Venezuela has "no aggressive plans" against any nation.

"What we are doing is merely to renew some obsolete equipment of our armed forces to bring it in line with the country's needs," he said.

At present, the Venezuelan air force's most advanced jet fighter aircraft is the French-made Mirage-5.

The government has not said yet how many of the supersonic F-16 fighters it plans to buy or when it expects to order them. Press reports have indicated that Venezuela wants to buy 24 to 48 planes.

The government also is dismissing reports that the State Department may block or indefinitely postpone the authorization for Venezuela to buy the planes because of the Colombian and Guyanese opposition.

"At this point, we don't see anything that may indicate that Venezuela will not be able to buy the planes," Herrera said.

The air force commander in chief, Brig. Gen. Maximiliano Hernandez, told reporters he is "convinced" that Washington will approve the sale.

"We even have some Venezuelan pilots already trained to fly the F-16s," Hernandez said.

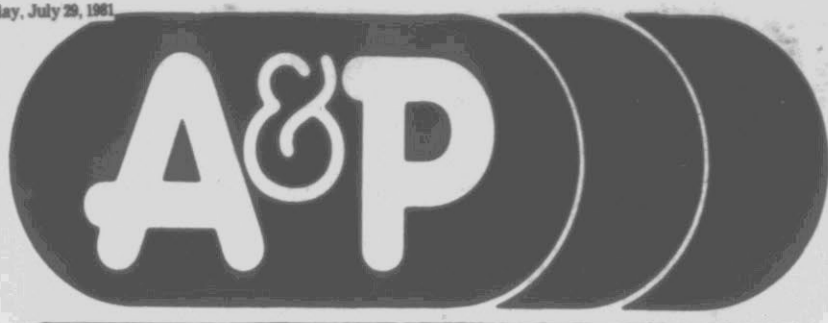

During a visit here in June, U.S. Undersecretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, Thomas O. Enders, appeared to suggest that an eventual request by Venezuela would not meet opposition in Washington.

"We would not attempt to dictate to friendly countries what their defense needs are," Enders said.

A Foreign Ministry official who asked not to be quoted by name said Venezuela should be considered "a stabilizing force" in the strategic Caribbean area and, because of that, it may be "in Washington's best interest" to authorize the sale.

He said there is a "coincidence" of U.S. and Venezuelan positions and policies on some crucial Caribbean and Central American issues, including El Salvador.

SUMMER SAVINGS

Old Number 1374 Being Refurbished

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
Associated Press Writer
UNION, Ill. (AP) — If Chicagoans had loved old No.
1374 the way Steve Iverson loves her, this turn-of-the-century trolley car still would be carrying passengers through the Windy City.

Iverson leaves his family bakery in Rogers, Ark., about twice a month to join other streetcar buffs at the Illinois Railway Museum, where they are restoring No.
1374 to her original splendor.

donating more than $100,000 in labor, and the museum is spending about $25,000 on the project.

"I just fell in love with this place," said Iverson, who became an active member of the museum in 1974, several years before moving to Arkansas. "I come back for the weekend and spend the nights in one of the cabooses out here."

Soon, the 1903 wooden streetcar will carry museum visitors down the mainline and back to the heyday of electric railroading. They probably won't realize how difficult the restoration of No. 1374 was. The seats and much of the brass trim were missing because No. 1374 had been converted to a work car.

"It was completely gone — just a skeleton with a little siding when we got it," said Frank Sirinek of Elgin.
"We've been working on this car since 1975."

A tip led the restoration crew to Wisconsin, where an identical Chicago streetcar was being used as a hot dog stand. A farmer took them to a wooded area where the seats had been discarded, and the volunteers chipped out the valuable parts in weather 37 degrees below zero.

The exterior now is perfect in every detail, including the original color and type of paint and the Chicago Surface Lines emblem. Iverson and Sirinek are refinishing the cherry, mahogany and birch wood interior.

When No. 1374 is back on her motorized wheels, she will join a dozen other streetcars, interurbans, a steam train, a diesel-powered streamliner, and some old rubber-tired trolley buses.

"There is no other museum in the country with the mix of equipment we have," said Nick Kallas, museum general manager.

About 100 of the 1,200
members operate equipment that carried 52,000 visitors last year.

"Old railroaders don't really like to do this," said Kallas, an Arlington Heights school teacher. "It's nuts like us who push pencils all day."

Out on the 1½-mile main line, which stretches from a McHenry County farmhouse to downtown Union, Bob Opal is at the controls of a 1923 interurban once owned by the Illinois Terminal.

"Learning to stop smoothly with these air brakes is the hardest thing," said Opal, a Downers Grove attorney who teaches others to be motormen.

His stop is flawless, and he tells riders to flip the backs of their seats so they will be pointing in the right direction for the ride back to the museum station. Trolleys also run on a mile-long loop that takes riders past the metal buildings that house many of the 140 pieces of railroad equipment.

Kallas said members probably would add 1½ miles to the mainline this year. The museum owns a five-mile right-of-way but installing and maintaining track is expensive — $75,000 a mile — and it's hard work, he said.

Still, there is only one reason to fix streetcars and put them on tracks.

"I can't see myself spending half of my life restoring these cars and then not running them," said Sirinek, who enjoys taking the controls when he needs a break from the car shops.

Offering Home Delivery

RUNS USED-HOUSE LOT — Tony Lozano stands before one of several houses on his "Used-house" lot near Stockton. In a housing market that has become as tight as a pair of designer jeans, Lozano can deliver a house for less than $15,000. (AP Laserphoto)

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Behold the ultimate in home delivery: salvaging the house that Jack built and hiring Tony to move it.

For less than $15,000, hardly enough for a downpayment on the average California house, Tony Lozano will give you the pick of his used-house lot.

He doesn't just bring the purchase to the door. He actually brings the door, along with the porch, a fireplace, three bedrooms and the kitchen sink — everything but the view.

In a housing market as tight as a pair of designer jeans, Lozano hoists houses on wheels and rolls right past the soaring mortgage rates and real estate prices that are forcing many to abandon their hopes of home ownership.

As Lozano has discovered, one person's cast-off can be another person's castle. "People who have got $100,000 to build another home don't stop to think that a number of people might want the home they already have," he said.

Just now, Lozano has a list of 200 prospective buyers but only eight houses in his 17-acre lot near Stockton, about 75 miles east of here.

Demand far outstrips supply partly because Lozano has to beat the wrecking ball to doomed properties.

"They sure hate us," Lozano said of the demolition crews. "There are a large number of wreckers who are tearing down homes, and it's a shame to see them doing it. I go out and pay for these houses and move them and find a new place for them, while people actually have to pay the wreckers to destroy these homes."

Lozano might typically buy a used house for $800 from a couple who feel they can't sell it or who want to build a new home on their land — and who are ready to pay wreckers $1,200 for the privilege of flattening the place. He then sells it for $15,500 to a family itching for a home on their empty lot.

He'll even finance the transaction for up to three years, a necessity in light of banks' refusal to lend money for houses that aren't married to some land.

"The bank isn't going to loan money for John Doe to buy a house to move from point A to point B," Bank of America spokesman Ronald Owens explained. "The house could crumble en route, and then the collateral is gone. If the structure has value, that value is risked once you lift it off the foundation and try to transport it."

But as far as Jeff Duke and his fiancée, Geney, are concerned, there's no risk with Lozano. "The way they get under trees, around corners and over bridges is amazing," said Geney, who used four rolls of film to catch the move of their 100-year-old house to Valley Springs. "I think only three windows were broken."

The deal Lozano made with Jeff and Geney gives them six months to get a loan, freeing the couple and Geney's three children from the confines of a two-room mobile home.

Total cost: less than $17,000 for a three-bedroom house Geney calls a "storybook home," with turrets and gingerbread and bay windows that scream for flower boxes.

Geney said they were told it would cost them $100,000 to build a suitable house. She estimated their monthly payments would be about $200 — less than they now pay for their tiny trailer.

So Lozano was happy, Jeff and Geney were thrilled and the couple who sold the house, so they could build anew, were "tickled to death," Geney said.

"The woman said she had raised four children in that house. There were tears in her eyes when she said she was so happy there were going to be children in it again."

The first atomic bomb was exploded 36 years ago on July 16, 1945, above the desert near the Alamogordo Air Base in New Mexico.

Associated Press Writer
ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A new traffic bridge over the River Maas will be adorned with a sculpture that townspeople have already dubbed "the clothesline." It will be as long as two football fields and cost 1 million guilders ($400,000).

The suspension bridge is getting Holland's largest single public art commission under Rotterdam's "1 percent rule." After much heated debate, the city declared the 100-million-guilder ($40-million) bridge to be covered by the rule that 1 percent of the cost of public buildings must go to artwork.

Both the cost and the radical concept of artist Auke de Vries' sculpture have fueled the debate here on the 1 percent rule and its application to what opponents say is just a public works project.

De Vries' work, to be erected next spring, stretches 660 feet horizontally and weighs 30 tons. The backbone is formed by lengths of steel cable stretching parallel to the riverbank from a concrete piling of the new bridge to a piling of the old bridge downstream. Spliced between the pieces of cable will be steel and aluminum rods, tubes, rings and rectangles, up to 15 feet tall.

The massive interlinking cables will start at the traffic deck level of the new bridge, a few yards out from the riverbank, and will end in a huge, concrete-block counterweight draped over a piling of the soon-to-be-dismantled old bridge.

Some parts of the artwork will touch the water at high tide, undulating in the wake of passing barges in the world's busiest port.

De Vries, explaining the gigantic, mobile-like sculpture in an interview in his studio in The Hague, said passers-by will wonder how it stays up in the air and in one piece. To make sure it does, engineers will conduct wind-tunnel tests, then complete the drafting work later in the fall.

The 43-year-old sculptor and graphic artist, who also teaches at the Royal Academy of Art in The Hague, said he got the commission after submitting a proposal at the invitation of the City Council. A previous advertisement for public bids had produced no acceptable proposals.

He said he won't be able to retire on the profit, despite the uproar over the cost of the project. His share will be about 10 percent of the total, for two years of work. The rest will go to material costs, fabrication and construction subcontracts with machining shops, and related costs.

"Rotterdam wants to bring the heart of the city closer to the river, to focus attention on the river that has made it prosperous," he said. From here, barge traffic heading up the Rhine River system goes as far as Switzerland, and deep-sea traffic comes to the refineries and container terminals from all over the world.

De Vries said he wanted to create in his sculpture a visual expression of the invisible tension in the graceful new suspension bridge itself. He said he wanted people to be aware "that it has tension, that it has movement, that it shakes, that it rills. These are the facts of harbor life — of the bridge, of the towboats, of the water."

False Witness Draws Life

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A 28-year-old white man with a felony record has been sentenced to life in prison for lying to investigators about the death of a black youth found hanging from a tree.

Johnny Ray Kelly was convicted of giving false testimony that led in part to the arrests of three white men in the strangulation and hanging of Michael Donald, 19. The three were released, and the case remains unsolved.

Alabama's Habitual Offender Act required Mobile County Circuit Court Judge Joseph Hocklander to sentence Kelly Monday to the maximum life term because of four previous felony convictions.

Farmers Get Techniques For Drought

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer
OURICURI, Brazil (AP) — Experimental techniques that combine the modern with the ancient are being taught to dirt farmers in an effort to turn Brazil's drought-prone northeast into a productive agricultural region.

Brazilian government agricultural researchers, using low-cost techniques within the means of northeastern subsistence farmers, are showing that survival is possible in this region, with its chronic poverty and the problem of millions of migrants that have fled to escape hunger and disease.

Essentially the program is built around techniques that preserve water when it rains and to use it when dry spells set in.

One of the farmers who applied for and received government help in the project is Luis Pereira de Araujo, 45, and he now is harvesting 75 acres of corn, beans, sorghum and cotton while his neighbors lost their crops in this year's drought.

"Most of the people around here don't believe this is all mine," Pereira recently told a visitor. "They don't believe the government lets me keep all of this."

He added that his production is good enough to care for his wife and seven children and his 15 cows and 22 goats.

The semihumid tropics division of the Brazilian Farm Research Institute, EMBRAPA, is responsible for the program. It is using Pereira's farm to encourage government support for their method of combating drought with simple solutions.

The organization says state governments are preparing to provide funding to bring simplified technology to large numbers of farm families in the region. The adjoining state of Rio Grande do Norte is preparing a program for 65,000 farmers. Other states are following, EMBRAPA says.

Drought is a problem here because rain is not evenly distributed over the year, institute technicians say. So they've developed ways of capturing the water that does fall in reservoirs, which are strategically placed to provide low-cost irrigation.

In the first half of the year, there were 23 inches of rain here. But of that amount, all but three inches fell in March. It did not rain at all here in May or June.

With the reservoir and cistern collection systems, the rains of March would be enough to store supplies for much of the year.

The agricultural technicians built a small reservoir on Pereira's property, designed to be on higher ground than the land it irrigates. So by installing an inexpensive pipe system and digging earthen canals, the water collected can be rationed to provide emergency moisture for crops threatened by drought. It is a main irrigation source in normal rain conditions.

An existing pond on the property has also been used. The researchers taught Pereira how to use residual moisture from the pond to grow survival crops. As the pond dries up, he plants successive rows of beans and corn parallel to the receding water line.

Both planting schemes make use of animal-drawn plows, which the officials say prove better on the fragile, shallow topsoil of the northeast, than the tractors which cut deeper into the earth.

Other projects include irrigating beans and other crops with buried clay pots, their tops open and filled periodically with water in a method known for several thousand years. A modern version of the same technique uses a capsule system which sucks water from a tube and tank device as the soil moisture level drops.

The Ouricuri farm also is fitted with a biodigester unit, which converts animal waste into cooking fuel and powers a tiny electric generator.

"What we were looking for was a simple, complete system for helping (the subsistence farmer), on his own level," said Antonio Jose Simoes, a coordinator at the EMBRAPA research institute at Petrolina, 120 miles south of here.

Lowe's Pricing Policy:

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail price does not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference (tail price or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy:

If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown can be ordered for you.
