FAA Limits Air Traffic As Air Controllers Strike

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration grounded much of the nation's commercial air traffic today as controllers defied a judge's order and launched their first nationwide strike.

The walkout began with the day shift at 7 a.m., local time, and the FAA said early indications were that more controllers were staying off their jobs at some centers than had been anticipated while in other areas some controllers were defying the strike.

No figures were available. President Reagan summoned Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis and Attorney General William French Smith to a mid-morning White House meeting on the strike.

Lewis said beforehand that the government would not try to put controllers in jail, but would seek civil penalties and ask to have the union removed as the controllers' bargaining agent.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan wanted to discuss the "immediate action" the administration will take. He said the president had "expressed disappointment" at the strike and thought the government's offer was "fair."

ACT ON STRIKE? — Two unidentified U.S. Marshals depart the Washington offices of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization today. The marshals refused to give their reason for the visit. Air Controllers began an outlawed strike which could ground half of the commercial air traffic in the United States. (AP Laserphoto)

Air Travel Uncertainties Bring Day-To-Day Watch

By JERRY RAYNOR
and SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writers

Uncertainty and the necessity to play the travel game by ear are major ingredients in air traffic plans today following the beginning of an air controllers strike called at 7 a.m. this morning.

Ms. Mary Wesley Harvey, manager and secretary-treasurer of the Belk Travel Center at Carolina East Mall, said "We are getting lots of calls from people about air travel today and also about future reservations. We are having to tell them that for right now it's a matter of possible day-to-day, even hour-by-hour planning."

"The last time (last strike) things were more organized. Airlines had contingency flights scheduled. This time this appears not to be the case. Everything is happening so fast, it's kind of crazy, trying to predict the next move."

Ms. Harvey noted "I brought a bottle of aspirin with me to work this morning."

Another Greenville based travel agency, Quixote Travel in downtown Greenville, is in the same situation of really not having a great deal of information on developments.

Ms. Maxine Anderson, Quixote manager, comments "the only cancellations we've had this morning so far (at 10:30 a.m.) are for two flights, the Kinston to Atlanta flight, and the U.S. Air (former Allegheny Lines) flight out of Raleigh."

"We're advising each passenger to keep tabs with us, to call us or the airport on the scheduled day of departure to get the latest information. For now it seems to be a case of the status of flights possibly changing each day."

Mrs. Rowena Jones, a travel consultant for M & T Travel

World in Kinston confirmed the uncertainty of the effect the strike will have today and in immediate days ahead. "We're wondering, just like travelers, what effect the strike will have nationally, and how long it might last. We have had lots of people today decide to book by train. They say they're afraid to take chances on air flights now, so figure it's safer to plan to go to Wilson to catch a train."

The Kinston Airport numbers could not be reached — they were constantly busy, obviously indicating the airport's switchboard is being swamped with calls.

The situation for local commercial firms who rely on air passenger travel by planes and pilots assigned to their companies seems a bit more stable.

Billy Hill, Domestic Traffic Manager for Burroughs Wellcome, noted, "Our people have daily flights from here to Raleigh. I understand air controllers are still working in Raleigh, but seminars our people attend nationally will possibly have schedules altered. But this is nothing people can't get around. There's other means of travel that can be used."

On the matter of air shipment of products, Hill said, "The only problem we would have would be if we had a critical shipment due in, but we've been told that drugs and medicines would be pushed through some way or other. The information we have is that shipments of life saving drugs might be one hour late in shipment and that any type of emergency medical supplies could run from a few hours to half a day late."

Bob Moody, traffic manager for Carolina Leaf remarked that "since we depend primarily on ocean carriers and trucks, nothing major is involved for us. We don't have people traveling abroad at this time, and the only possible problem could be people flying in."

Khomeini's Foes Invade Embassy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Mohammad Ali Rajai took office today as Iran's new president, replacing the ousted Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who said from his exile in Paris that he is counting on the military forces he once led to topple the Islamic regime.

Meanwhile, opponents of Iran's clerical regime forced their way into the Iranian Embassy in Bonn, West Germany today, breaking windows, damaging offices and injuring the ambassador in a brief scuffle, authorities said. West German police ejected the invaders.

Investigators found some bomb apparatus in a package at the embassy, but no explosives, said police spokesman Peter Doering. He said 10 people were slightly injured and 80 arrested when about 150 people, most of them expatriate Iranian students, burst into the embassy shortly after it opened.

During the takeover, a man claiming to be a spokesman for the demonstrators telephoned the Associated Press and said "the illegal hangman's regime of (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini is at an end."

Rajai, a 48-year-old former high school mathematics teacher, was sworn in at an open Parliament session today attended by Chief Justice Ayatollah Abdul-Karim Musavi Aradabili and the Council of Custodians, the official Pars news agency reported.

"Should you put a foot wrong, the very 13 million who voted for you would shout, 'Death to you.' This is the nature of revolution," the news agency quoted Khomeini as telling Rajai at a confirmation ceremony Sunday. "The people will no longer submit blindly to anyone."

The voting July 24 gave Rajai a landslide victory to take over the presidency, vacant since Bani-Sadr's impeachment in June. Rajai, backed by Islamic clergymen and a longtime foe of Bani-Sadr, took 88 percent of the vote. There were three token opponents.

But the fugitive ex-president charged Saturday that the election results were rigged and only 2.7 million of Iran's 23 million eligible voters went to the polls.

The Western-educated economist escaped to France from a hideout in Iran on Wednesday. Bani-Sadr was quoted as saying in an interview with the Sunday Times of London that he was counting on the armed forces which he led in battle against neighboring Iraq to "do their duty" and end Khomeini's rule.

Greenville 11th In Construction Among Cities

Greenville ranked 11th among 44 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population in the value of building permits issued in April, according to State Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

The official said that permits valued at $2,097,287 were issued here during the month as Greenville was one of 12 cities to record permit totals exceeding $2 million.

For the first four months of 1981, Greenville had permit valuations totaling $9,120,728, ranking it tenth among the 44 cities, Brooks reported.

Total construction authorized in Pitt County during April amounted to $2,386,696, Brooks reported, including $1,023,515 for 15 single-family structures; $115,000 for four multi-family units; $934,440 for 19 non-residential units; and $313,741 for 56 additions and alterations.

Building value figures for April and for the first four months in several neighboring cities included: Elizabeth City, $305,700, $1,122,164; Goldsboro, $1,329,165, $2,770,864; Jacksonville, $1,256,014, $4,535,679; Kinston, $286,000, $5,035,635;

New Bern, $533,454, $3,278,604; Roanoke Rapids, $448,175, $2,260,346; Rocky Mount, $2,321,969, $6,816,695; Tarboro, $630,100, $2,072,750; and Wilson, $804,537, $6,251,513.

Brooks said that the 44 reporting cities authorized a total of 3,846 construction units in April, with the total value of $100,539,738 reflecting a 61.2 percent increase from the $62,356,979 recorded last April.

Raleigh led individual cities with $26,140,609 in authorized construction for April.

Solid Waste Container Site Bids Approved

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Board of County Commissioners this morning approved awarding a contract to Boyd Associates for the construction of a solid waste container site at Winterville.

The $23,700 bid by the Boyd firm was the lowest of four bids received for the work. Other bids ranged from $24,300 to $31,672.

The board approved the Pitt Memorial Hospital budget for the 1981-82 fiscal year which begins October 1, and also approved several additions to the hospital building.

Ralph Hall, in charge of the physical plant, told commissioners that the additions include construction of a 9,000 square foot metal building for use as storage and educational facilities, a 5,400 square foot addition to the hospital lab and medical records sections, a two-story, 5,400 dining room addition and an addition to the hospital's special service area.

Hall noted that the additions would increase the hospital area to approximately 500,000 square feet, or 12 acres under roof.

In other business this morning the board reappointed Margie Hart to a three year term on the Ayden Planning Board, and reappointed Robert Drew of Falkland, Anthony Holland of Fountain, and Archie Rogers of Grifton to the Pitt County Planning Board.

Warsaw Streets Clogged By Hunger Protestors

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — With horns blaring and headlights flashing, hundreds of buses, trucks and taxis clogged Warsaw streets today in an anti-hunger convoy. The protest underlined the urgency of talks on Poland's food crisis between the government and the Solidarity labor union.

Heavy police patrols monitored the routes snarled by about 80 buses, 80 to 90 heavy trucks and at least 300 taxis, which formed the noisiest caravan in the 10 a.m. — 4 a.m. EDT — demonstration.

Transport workers had promised to put "everything on wheels" in the streets of the capital at the start of a second week of protests over short supplies and rising prices. Many city buses still ran normal routes, however.

An observer said the caravan passed Polish Communist Party headquarters on its way to the Council of Ministers' building where Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski was meeting with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and other unionists.

Police blocked the main avenue leading past the Council of Ministers' building and sent the caravans down a road into Lazienki Park, where they dispersed.

Policemen also formed a human blockade outside the Communist Party headquarters to prevent further caravans from passing, witnesses said.

"We're tired of the shortage of food, of fuel and of engine oil," said one protesting taxi driver.

Earlier, the Communist Party's ruling Politburo authorized special officials to supervise food sales, improve food distribution and crack down on waste, black marketeering and mismanagement, the official Polish news agency PAP reported.

Solidarity, the Soviet bloc's only independent labor union, announced strike alerts and marches in several cities this week despite a Politburo warning that such demonstrations "create a great threat to the country."

Union leaders agreed to discuss the food crisis today with Rakowski, the government's labor troubleshooter. The agreement reversed an earlier union decision to postpone the meeting indefinitely while it prepared a position.

Strike alerts also were announced for today in Piotrkow Trybunalski, south of the capital, and marches were planned in Wloclawek to the west. The local in Gdansk on the Baltic coast said it would meet Wednesday to discuss proposals for new protests, and a protest march was planned Thursday by Solidarity's Krakow chapter.

Political and military officials promised Sunday to launch a coordinated campaign in the spiraling food crisis that the government said was leading Poland to "catastrophe and calamity."

Poland's Military Council, led by Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, outlined "tasks for the military in the economy and for fighting speculation and other social destructive phenomena," PAP said.

The report said "a particular danger is created by street demonstrations" that place "unwarranted pressure on the authorities" and contribute to the country's "march toward catastrophe and calamity."

ANOTHER ELDERHOSTEL THIS SUMMER?

I noted in a Friday "Daily Reflector" article that an Elderhostel program has been held at East Carolina University this summer. Will another be held this year? I'd love to take part. A.M.

There will not be another Elderhostel program this summer and next summer's schedule of non-credit programs is not yet set, Phil Martin of the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, ECU, said. He noted, though, that in light of the apparent success of the Elderhostel session held here early in July, it seems likely at least one will be held next summer. This year's session, he said, drew participants from as far away as the Northeastern United States and Hawaii, affording them good non-credit courses, plus such extras as ice cream parties and a trip to Bath to see the outdoor drama, "Blackbeard."

"I don't know what next year's price will be," Martin added, "but this year's tuition, dorm room and meals was $140. 'Now isn't that a bargain? I wish there were Youngerhostels available at that price!'"

Elderhostel is a national program for providing non-credit college experience for persons 60 and older. This year 16 colleges and universities in North Carolina took part.

To have one's name placed on a mailing list for information about future ECU Elderhostel programs, write Elderhostel, Office of Non-Credit Programs, ECU Division of Continuing Education, Greenville, N.C. 27834 or call 757-6143.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old girl with a problem I can't talk to anybody about, and it's getting worse. I'm the oldest of three children. We live in a nice house in a nice neighborhood. We aren't poor and we aren't rich either. Mom works part time as a nurse, and Dad works every day except weekends — and that's when the trouble starts. Dad starts drinking on Friday night and he stays drunk all weekend.

When he's drunk he gets mean to Mom, and there's so much yelling and fighting I'm afraid the neighbors will hear it.

Now Mom has started to drink with him, and she even drinks during the daytime when she's home. When Dad comes home and she's been drinking, they have a big fight. I'm afraid they are going to get a divorce. I'm ashamed to have my friends over, and I don't want to go anywhere when my parents are drinking because I worry about my brother, who's 9, and my sister, who's 6.

What can I do, Abby? Don't tell me to try to talk some sense into them. Who would listen to a 12-year-old kid?

ASHAMED IN INDIANAPOLIS

DEAR ASHAMED: You are not alone. There are more kids with your problem than you know. I recently read an excellent little book titled, "The Secret Everyone Knows." Its author, Cathleen Brooks, grew up with alcoholic parents and knows what a child must do in order to survive in that environment. She explains alcoholism for the disease it is and tells kids how to deal with drinking parents and where to get help in their own communities.

It's not only for children. A 40-year-old friend told me that her father had died 22 years ago of chronic alcoholism, and after reading this little book much of the anger, hostility and shame she had harbored over the years was greatly reduced.

It's available by writing to: Operation Cork, 8939 Villa La Jolla, San Diego, Calif. 92037. If you can send $1 to cover cost of mailing, please do, as it is a non-profit organization. If you don't have the dollar, the organization will send one free.

DEAR ABBY: A follow-up to Donna in the lost-and-found department of Eastern Airlines in Seattle. It's a good idea to put I.D. tags on all your luggage, inside and out, but here's another suggestion:

Put your destination address instead of your home address in the I.D. holders. That way, should your luggage be lost, misdirected or delayed, when located it will be sent to where you are, not where you were!

REILLY, ST. PETERSBURG, FLA

DEAR REILLY: Smart move rather than depending on the luck o' the Irish.

DEAR ABBY: A 7-year-old boy wrote to say he wanted a dog, but his mother said no. He asked for your help in persuading his mother to change her mind, and all he got from you was a long lecture on what it meant to be a responsible pet owner. You asked him who was going to feed the dog, walk the dog and clean up any messes it might make. That made sense.

But how come you asked a 7-year-old kid who was going to pay for the dog license, regular examinations at the vet, shots and the cost of having the dog spayed or neutered?

I want to know how you figure a child that age can come up with that kind of money?

CURIOUS IN FORT DODGE, IOWA

DEAR CURIOUS: I didn't expect the boy to come up with the money. I mentioned it to let every kid who wants a dog know that it costs money to be a responsible pet owner, and while dogs need trees — money doesn't grow on them!

Corn Tour Set For Aug. 12-14

A corn tour will be held August 13-14 sponsored by the Official Variety Test and Extension Test programs. The tour will observe corn entries and experiments in the Tidewater, Coastal Plain, and Piedmont regions. Grain sorghum will be observed in a Piedmont test.

An official variety test will be observed in Pitt County on the Earl Sermons farm on 264-A August 13 at 2:15 p.m. Many different varieties are represented in this test and it will be "quite interesting" said Roger Cobb, Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent.

If anyone would like a schedule of the tour it can be obtained from the Agricultural Extension Service (2nd floor old Pitt Memorial Hospital) or by calling 752-2934 and ask for extension 372.

Registration At School Urged

STOKES — Parents that have children who recently moved into the Stokes Elementary School attendance area, are asked to come to the school's office and register their child before the opening date of school, August 31. Parents of kindergarten children that have not pre-registered, should bring the child's birth certificate and immunization record before the opening date.

Some Results In Housewife's Strike

SPICER, Minn. (AP) — Baseball players struck over free-agent compensation. City workers in San Jose, Calif., demanded equal pay for comparable work. Striking Minnesota state employees want higher wages.

Diane Bonnema just wanted the dishes stacked in the sink.

Extended negotiations with her three teen-age children for more help around the house proved fruitless. So early Friday morning she made good on her threat to strike the Bonnema household.

She was prepared for the walkout, even if her husband, Melverne, and children — aged 12, 14 and 15 — were not.

She set up her picket line at a picnic table in the front yard, identified by a "Strike More Help" sign mounted on a broomstick. Equipped with a coffee thermos, a fly swatter, a radio and a cooler stocked with food, Mrs. Bonnema sat down to wait until her demands were met.

"The kids had been running in and out, not doing chores and all. I told them 'If you don't do your chores, I'm going on strike. I'm gonna embarrass you in front of your little friends.' I've been embarrassed plenty of times (by the state of the household).

"After all, how often do children pull sitdowns on their mothers?" she argued. "You tell them to take the dishes out to the sink and they say 'Right after this commercial.' What if I said, 'Yeah, I'll wash the clothes and make supper right after this movie is over?' With a family of five kids and one left at home, we can all share the work."

So the one-woman bargaining unit stuck it out. She had a lawn chair to sleep in, changes of clothes and a garage to retreat to if it rained. Much of Friday was occupied by reading the "I" section of the World Book Encyclopedia.

She got "a lot of support. People kept coming by. One nice young man on a bicycle was a counselor at a house for juveniles. He said it (the strike) was a great idea, to get the kids to take some family responsibility."

"We (she and her family) had a lot of negotiations. They were begging, 'Mother, come in, you're going to embarrass me.'"

"My oldest married daughter lives about 20 miles away. She wouldn't come near the house. But I guess she kept calling about every other hour to see if Mom had come back in the house yet," she laughed.

"The worst was right after dusk, when the bats started coming around. I had a sheet over my head. My kids and husband said I'd better come inside now, wouldn't I, please? But I just turned up the radio, poured some more coffee and had a couple cigarettes."

Finally, about 1:30 a.m. Saturday, a tentative settlement was declared and Mrs. Bonnema went back into the house.

"I didn't get anything in writing, but I have their word and I'm gonna give 'em a chance. I have to trust 'em 'cause they're mine."

"So far, they've been taking out the garbage like they're supposed to," she said Sunday, "and I have yet to see them not rinse out the dishes and put them in the sink. It's been so good."

Reng on her strike, Mrs. Bonnema said it's "a good way of getting kids to do what you want. If there's a union, it should be for mothers, too."

And she's not alone in that conviction.

"We went to the beach today, and a lady came up to me and said she'd read about my strike in the newspaper. She told me, 'I know exactly what you mean!'"

Agri. Ext. Agent

Every summer in late July and early August, motorists encounter heavy flights of moths along the highway at night. These moths are the adults of the corn earworm and are leaving the dry corn fields to find suitable host crops on which they lay eggs.

Once these eggs have hatched, the corn earworm goes to work on soybeans, peanuts, grain sorghum, cotton and many other green and growing crops. These moths will be apparent at night now.

The corn earworm has been called our most expensive insect. It has the capability to destroy yield potential of certain crops like few other insects can.

It pays to know certain things about the corn earworm. It can feed and survive successfully on many different crops. It can lay literally hundreds of eggs and it is a strong flier that can cover considerable distances. Hot weather enables the insect to develop from egg to moth in about a week on soybeans. All these factors and more mean that it is essential for farmers to actively monitor populations of the corn earworm on soybeans, peanuts and grain sorghum (milo) during August in eastern North Carolina.

There are usually four generations of the corn earworm each year. Some survive the winter as a pupa (a resting stage between the worm and the moth.) These first generation worms attack corn shortly after it emerges and feeds in the whorl of the corn. The ragged leaves unfold and the worm is called the "shatterworm" at this time because of the feeding damage.

The second generation of the year is found in the tips of field corn and sweet corn ears primarily, hence the common name of corn earworm. Usually there is only one worm found per ear — the worms are cannibalistic and only the strongest worm survives. Corn provides an excellent breeding site, and with some two million acres of corn in North Carolina, obviously many corn earworms are produced. In late July, the second generation of the corn earworm is through feeding in corn and the moths (adult stage) leave the corn fields to seek new egg laying areas.

The third generation of the corn earworm is the damaging one and the one that requires close attention. The moths that lay eggs on soybean and peanut foliage can develop rapidly and heavy infestations can strip these crops of leaves and pods.

The fourth generation of corn earworm is not a factor because of heavy losses of eggs and larvae due to poor egg-laying sites and adverse weather in late September and early October.

The time has arrived for eastern North Carolina soybean and peanut growers to be aware of the corn earworm. It is the most damaging insect to these crops, but can be readily controlled with appropriately timed insecticidal sprays. Careful scouting of these crops will make money, not cost money. For further information on scouting for corn earworms, contact your local Agricultural Extension Office.

Transfer 200 Haitian Exiles

MIAMI (AP) — Crowding at the Krome North refugee detention center west of Miami was eased somewhat today after 200 Haitians were transferred to Kentucky.

Anti-Castro Aura Grows

MIAMI (AP) — Although they were unhappy with life in Cuba, many recent refugees also are disillusioned with life here and are giving new life to exile organizations such as the Miami-based Alpha 66, a newspaper reports.

The FBI is investigating Alpha 66 for possible violations of U.S. Neutrality Act, which forbids using American soil as a staging ground for attacks on nations not at war with the United States, officials told The Miami Herald.

The refugees are being trained to return to Cuba and undertake acts of sabotage, such as burning crops and vandalizing government property, intended to disrupt the Castro government, Alpha 66 spokesmen have said.

Silvio Camacho, a 24-year-old Cuban refugee who wants to return to his homeland, and about 25 other refugees are being trained in Miami by the group to carry out the sabotage, the Herald said Sunday.

Camacho said he plans to return to Cuba as an armed infiltrator, but he doesn't expect to be greeted with open arms. In fact, he says he expects to be executed.

MRS. WILLIAM STEPHEN WHITEHURST

Couple Says Wedding Vows

Jennie Lou Haddock and William Stephen Whitehurst were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in Parkers Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Jim Nason assisted by the Rev. Leon Harris performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Ray Haddock of Rt. 5, Greenville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Warren Whitehurst of Rt. 2, Robersonville.

A program of wedding music was provided by organist Mrs. Pat Nason and soloist Elaine V. Taylor. Selections included "One Hand, One Heart," "We've Only Just Begun," "The Wedding Song," "The Wedding Prayer" and "Hallelujah."

The bride was escorted by her father and wore a formal gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with chantilly lace. The empire bodice was overlaid in French chantilly lace beaded with pearls and enhanced by a sheer insert of cameo embroidery beaded with pearls. The bishop sleeves were trimmed with scalloped chantilly lace. The modified A-line skirt was accentuated by a ruffled flounce of chantilly lace at the hemline. The lace extended to an attached cathedral train with an inserted panel of the French lace trimmed with chantilly lace. She wore a waltz length veil of illusion bordered in French clipped chantilly lace and held in place by a Juliet cap overlaid in lace embellished with seed pearls. She wore her grandmother's wedding band. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, pixie carnations, phalaenopsis orchids and purple statice with tips of bridal fern and baby's breath tied with a white bow.

Angie H. Raper Of Lawton, Okla., sister of the bride, served as matron of honor and wore a formal gown of dahlia chiffon over taffeta designed with an open cowl draped neckline, blouson bodice with short split sleeves, and modified A-line skirt. She carried a classic bouquet of orchid daisies, purple and pink pixie carnations, purple statice and baby's breath tied with lavender satin.

Bridesmaids were Cathy W. Whisnant of Bowden, Ga., sister of the bridegroom, Lola D. Haddock of Chapel Hill, sister-in-law of the bride, Bunny Tripp and Elayne B. Dail, both of Greenville. They wore gowns styled identically to that of the matron of honor in a contrasting shade of lilac chiffon and they carried bouquets fashioned like that of the honor attendant with purple satin bows. All the attendants wore orchid daisies and baby's breath in their hair.

Angela Raper of Lawton, Okla., niece of the bride, served as junior bridesmaid and wore a formal gown of orchid taffeta overlaid with English net featuring an open neckline with a ruffled bertha collar of schiffli embroidered lace. She carried a bouquet like those of the attendants and wore similar flowers in her hair.

Flower girl was Marty Lynn Smith of Bethel, cousin of the bridegroom. She wore a formal of orchid and carried a white basket filled with lavender, pink, orchid

Miss Gay Weds Sunday

WALSTONBURG — The wedding of Winnie Ruth Gay to Phillip Luther Johnson was solemnized Sunday afternoon in the Walstonburg Christian Church by the Rev. John Cave and the Rev. Carl Tinnea.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Robert Gay of Fountain. Mrs. Clarice Johnson and E. Ray Johnson of Rocky Mount are parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white tiana. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline and capped sleeves. The bodice was accented with Venice lace and seed pearls. The semi fitted skirt had a border of Venice lace at the hemline extending into a chapel train. She wore a mantilla of waltz length silk illusion with a double border of Venice lace. The mantilla was worn over a matching lace Juliet cap and she carried her childhood Bible centered with a white orchid and baby's breath.

Mrs. Hazel Browning of Raleigh served her sister as honor attendant and bridesmaids were Tonya Burch of Raleigh, Lisa Ann Ford of Rocky Mount, Carol Ross of Tarboro, Janet Watson of Wilson, Sue Brackenoff of Greenville and Margaret High of Nashville. They wore gown of floral print with white eyelet around the bodice and waist with scoop necklines. They each carried a single pink carnation and baby's breath adorned their hair.

The bride's niece and flower girl, Luran Browning wore a dress of white eyelet accented with pink ribbon at the waist and carried a basket filled with rose petals.

Stewart Phillips, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man and groomsmen were Bert Phillips and Johathon Melvin of Battleboro, cousins of the bridegroom, George Royster of Rocky Mount, Fred Browning of Raleigh, brother-in-law of the bride, Jeff Letchworth of Walstonburg and Leland Galloway of Wilson, cousins of the bride.

Mrs. Joyce Harris was organist and Miss Janet Watson sang "Wedding Song" and "Wedding Prayer." The wedding was directed by Mrs. Audrey Jones.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the fellowship hall with aunts of the bride couple assisting.

Mrs. Johnson graduated from Farmville Central High School and ECU, where she was a member of Alpha Xi Delta Sorority. She is employed by the Edgecombe County Schools. The bridegroom is a graduate of Rocky Mount Senior High School, Campbell College and is a land surveyor with W. B. McIntyre, Nashville. After the rehearsal Saturday, the bridegroom entertained at a pig pickin' at the Fountain Community Building.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will be living in Rocky Mount.

"Serving Pitt County For Over 50 Years"

It's No Time To 'Gloat'

President Reagan, fresh from three apparent congressional victories of major proportions, set the proper tone for reflection when he told aides this "is no time for gloating."

Reagan used unprecedented televised appeals to the public to win congressional support of his economic package, including spending reductions and tax cuts, and then was handed a somewhat questionable committee endorsement of his controversial choice to head the Central Intelligence Agency. All of that came on a day of historic proportions, coinciding with the royal wedding in England.

If simply for the sheer magnitude of his victories, Reagan deserves respect, as Democratic leaders in the House showed after their loss on the tax cut package. Still to come is the final determination as to which side, Reagan or the O'Neill Democrats, was right. And still to come is the determination of what will happen to those lawmakers who bolted party lines to vote their convictions and those of their constituents.

These economic fights have caused tremendous reflection on the part of many lawmakers, especially those with years of experience in Congress. North Carolina's veteran congressman, Rep. L.H. Fountain of Tarboro, is typical. Fountain's loyalty to the Democratic Party and all that it espouses has been unquestioned through decades of public service. Yet, last Wednesday, he voted against a Democrat-backed tax plan and joined 47 other House Democrats who supported Reagan's three-year tax package. Fountain, who earlier voted for a doomed one-year tax cut, said his desire for a balanced federal budget overrode his party loyalty. In party circles the reasoning is weak and unacceptable; for those who tend to look more at the issue and the individual rather than the party logic, it makes sense.

And remember, there were 47 other Democrats, including some northern congressmen who had been viewed as moderates or border-line liberals, who went with the Republican majority on the tax package.

Regardless of the factors involved in the House vote, this now is the time for all concerned to set a common goal of making the economic package work for the benefit of all. Indeed, it is not a time for gloating; it is a time for dedicated work.

GET HIM BACK ON THE JOB!

BY ART BUCHWALD

The Book Blurb Deals

One of the most important functions a writer has is to provide blurbs for other writers' books. The blurb business is one of the biggest in the country, and it is now estimated that 30,500,226 book blurbs are produced every year in the United States alone.

Everyone has seen book blurbs in advertisements such as, "Hym Golderweller has written another 'Godfather,' or, 'Not since 'War and Peace' has anyone caught the spirit of the women's liberation movement better than Sandra Bitter has in 'I Hate You, Marlon Brando.'"

There is a rule in the publishing business that no book can be printed unless the publisher receives 20 blurbs in its favor.

For the public unfamiliar with how book blurbs come about, I think I can be of service. When a book is about to be published, the author is asked by the publisher's publicity department to provide a list of friends, preferably well-known, who will say something nice about the work before publication.

The publicity department then sends out the galleys to people on the list. "Waldo Kransky has asked me to send you the galleys on his latest book, 'The Fingers That Couldn't Walk Through the Yellow Pages.' Would you kindly send us your comments."

Now when I receive the galleys, I am faced with a dilemma. I don't have time to read Kransky's book, but obviously under the rules of the game, I have to provide a blurb. Otherwise when I write a book Kransky won't give me one for my book.

About five books back I had neglected to give Kransky a blurb on his less than bestseller, "The Sexual Myth of the Seat Belt," and I ran because without any blurbs, my publisher saw no reason to advertise my book.

I rifled through the galleys of "The Fingers That Couldn't Walk Through the Yellow Pages" and then sat down to write the blurb: "Kransky has done it again." I sent it off special delivery to his publisher.

Unfortunately, this was not the only book I had received that week. I had, in fact, gotten 14 galleys of books in the mail. Each required a different favorable quote, which wasn't easy since I had no intention of reading any of them.

I may not have made such a great effort, except that I have a new book coming out this fall, and I have been soliciting blurbs for myself. I knew the quality of the blurbs I would get was dependent on the quality of blurbs I wrote.

I spent all last week working on book blurbs for friends' books. It took me a day to come up with "Dynamite!" for a book on dieting, but only an hour to come up with "Eat your heart out, Norman Mailer" for Maynard Bowditch's new biography entitled, "I Never Knew Marilyn Monroe, Either."

There is some talk I may be nominated for a National Book Blurb Award this year. I hope so, because it would really kill Kransky.

into him at a party. He was very miffed. I explained the reason I didn't give a blurb was that his publisher had sent me the typewritten manuscript, which was 900 pages, and I had dropped it on the floor. I could never get the pages back together in any kind of order.

Kransky found this unacceptable, and said he had taken his case to the Author's League, charging me with refusing to give a fellow author a book blurb, which is considered one of the most serious crimes a writer can commit.

A few days later the Author's League ruled in Kransky's favor, and I was forbidden to solicit book blurbs from any member of the league for my next book. This was a cruel blow

Triumph For Kemp-Roth

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — News that spread through congressional cloakrooms 24 hours before Wednesday's tax showdown not only ended Democratic hopes of finally beating Ronald Reagan on the House floor but also killed the party's stubbornly-held notion that voters hate lower taxes.

"I can't believe it," one prominent Democratic congressman told us when he heard the news Tuesday afternoon: Rep. Norman Dicks of Washington state, no "boll weevil" conservative but a regular Western Democrat, was defecting to support the Reagan tax package. That opened a hemorrhage of Democrats jumping party lines that finally reached 48 in Wednesday's historic vote.

It also signalled the folly of years of unremitting Democratic opposition to Kemp-Roth tax rate reduction, before and after the bill's embrace by President Reagan. Dicks and the other Democratic defectors were moved by an unprecedented public demand, spurred by Reagan's video virtuosity but reflecting genuine popularity for deep, continuing tax reduction.

The House tax vote capped the passage of Reagan's entire economic package in 200 days, a feat unmatched since Franklin Roosevelt's 100 days in 1933. It also was a unique personal triumph for Rep. Jack Kemp, who began his tax crusade seven years ago against bipartisan ridicule. But in addition, it revealed profound political misconceptions by the Democrats.

They had talked themselves into a series of comforting notions: that Kemp-Roth was a political albatross around Reagan's neck, sure to defeat him for the presidency; that Reagan did not really like Kemp-Roth and never would push it; that across-the-board, multiple-year tax reduction was not acceptable to scores of Republican congressmen, much less to enough Democrats to pass it in the House.

That framework of misconceptions guided Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's strategy as Ways and Means Committee chairman in drafting a Democratic alternative.

But congressional Republicans knew there was one sweetener Rostenkowski never could match: permanent tax indexing, to adjust for inflation, after three years of tax cuts (originally part of the Kemp-Roth bill but removed by cautious Reagan administration policymakers). Rep. Barber Conable, senior Republican on Ways and Means, turned the tide a week before the vote when he finally talked the administration into tax indexing.

That had a profound impression on scores of congressmen — including Norm Dicks, a longtime aide to liberal Sen. Warren Magnuson before his election to Congress in 1976 and certainly no conservative (rated 5 percent by the American Conservative Union last session). Over the weekend of July 24-25, he first entertained thoughts of backing the Reagan bill, thoughts enhanced by a Monday telephone call from Reagan himself.

The president's Monday night speech generated a telephone campaign impressing Dicks, among other congressmen. On Tuesday morning, he had his first personal meeting with Ronald Reagan, in the Oval Office. On Tuesday afternoon, word of Dicks' defection reached stunned Democratic leaders. They knew then that the battle was over.

In his considerably-less-than-gracious speech closing Wednesday's debate, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill showed he had learned nothing. Beginning by calling this "a great day for aristocrats," he claimed the nation's big corporations had artificially stimulated that flow of telephone calls to congressional offices. To the very end, Tip O'Neill could not believe the people really prefer lower taxes to bigger government.

DISCOVERING SPIRITUAL TRUTH

What do we mean by the term "supernatural"? We mean just what the word indicates — above nature. This does not mean necessarily that it is contrary to natural law, or even that it is natural law working in unfamiliar combinations or with unaccustomed potency. It means something that is above nature.

The word "supernatural" does not of course occur in the Bible, but the Bible deals with almost nothing else than the supernatural. Scripture calls it the will of God, the power of God, the revelation of God. It calls it miracle, and mighty works, and God's wrath, and God's loving purpose.

Science has no technique for laying hold of any such information. Spiritual things can be apprehended only spiritually; that is, through the medium of faith. And with faith, even simple-hearted people can make discoveries more significant than any discovery ever made by a scientist. — Elisha Douglass

Curse Or Blessing

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Whether coal will become a curse or a blessing for North Carolina is much on the minds of governmental officials, environmentalists, and especially coastal area residents on the path of what can become an internationally important export route.

This state lies in a direct path between coast and the major coal-mining regions of the Appalachian and the Midwest. Just as tourists flock through North Carolina communities to reach the shore, so will coal become an important commodity moving through in years to come.

The development of coal-handling facilities at Morehead City hold the key to what the future will look like. It is not that this port city is so much closer than others to the north such as Norfolk or Baltimore, but that relatively underdeveloped as it is, ships can move in and out without the long delays which keep them anchored — at a cost of thousands of dollars daily — offshore waiting on a place to tie up, and service at the larger, busier ports.

Big Loader

Additionally, there are some new techniques in loading coal off train cars and onto ships. Gulf Interstate Company plans a coal-handling facility on 77 acres which it owns on Radio Island located near the state port, and smack in the middle of the just-blooming Beaufort-Morehead City coastal resort community.

Coal handling will essentially mean long trains rumbling up to dumping points; storage which can turn acres and acres into moonscapes; and onloading pumps and pipes and towers which will necessarily make noise, dust, and sharp changes to the coastal skyline.

Says Art Cooper, chairman of the planning and special issues committee of the Coastal Resources Commission: "There are implications for this proposed reclassification (of land use to allow the coal facility), such as deepening of the channel, water pollution from spills and runoff, increased volume of shipping and train traffic, coal dust problems, and track vibration."

The Commission is taking a slow look at the implications, and has assumed the lead responsibility for holding hearings and conducting studies to see if the operation should be allowed.

Further upstream on the coal-export track, some residents fear the pounding freight trains and the subsequent noise, traffic jams, and jarring of historical buildings particularly in and around New Bern, will make the entire process undesirable.

The man in the middle of this controversy is Greenville Attorney Tom Taft, a former aide to Gov. Jim Hunt and currently chairman of the N.C. State Ports Authority.

Sensitive

"We are sensitive to the fragile nature of the Coastal environment. But the fact is that the nation cannot survive as an independent individual trading unit. Coal has become an international commodity...it will help our allies, and it will help us, to exploit this resource," Taft thinks.

Coal is becoming this nation's key answer to energy resources in the face of worldwide escalation of petroleum prices. Both this state and the nation are committed to export coal. "If we had our 'drathers', we would 'drather' that oil not be high priced. And, we would 'drather' not export coal...but those are not the choices," Taft is convinced.

He and Gov. Hunt agree that the option is to export coal; to build North Carolina ports business by becoming a leader in that boomlet; and to work with Coastal interests to protect the environment as much as possible.

State agencies from natural resources to cultural resources are taking a close look at the entire chain of export activities to see what the impacts will be, and how to guard against the noise, dust, hammering, landscape change, and potential wash of coal dust and chunks into the waters of the Morehead City area.

Other Editors Say Seeking Mr. Clean

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

The 1984 elections are a long way off. But at Democratic Party gatherings and in the press we have widespread speculation about the stable of potential candidates for governor.

Some of the folks mentioned seem a bit shopworn. Being resurrected are such names as Richardson Preyer, Robert Morgan and Carl Stewart — all demonstrated losers in their last campaigns.

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram managed re-election to that position in spite of himself and a horde of critics. But he lost his bid for the U.S. Senate, although polling a good vote despite poor financing and tepid support of the party hierarchy. One cannot help but sense that he might be beginning to suffer from overexposure.

Then we have Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, blessed with a repertoire of good stories, a propensity to sing hillbilly songs and the advantage of occupancy of a statewide office.

But the question of style versus substance gnaws within some of those who regard Rufus as an enjoyable good of boy.

Lieutenant Governor Jimmy Green has been widely regarded as a leading potential candidate. But his image has been severely tarnished by disclosure that he accepted $5,000 and paving of his personal business property from a man later convicted of highway bid-rigging.

That doesn't set too well with a public getting fed up with skulduggery in public office.

The time may well be at hand for a fresh new face — a non-political figure: Someone who might fit the mold of the late Luther Hodges who came on the scene as a political unknown, became lieutenant governor, then governor and subsequently Secretary of Commerce.

In short, the time might be right not for a political pro, a retread or a recognized wheeler-dealer, but for a bright new Mr. Clean.

Such a person, whether Democrat or Republican, could well be the next occupant of the governor's mansion.

Stopgap For Medicare Funds

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer
Senior citizens spend millions of dollars each year on private insurance to close the gap between health bills and Medicare payments, but buyers may not always get the protection they want.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has some advice for prospective policyholders in a new pamphlet called "Guide to Health Insurance for People with Medicare." The guide was prepared by the department's Health Care Financing Administration and the National Association of Insurance Commissioners. It's available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 632J, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

A 1978 report from the staff of the House Committee on Aging said more than $1 billion of the $4 billion paid annually by the elderly for health insurance premiums goes for coverage that is unnecessary or does not provide the expected benefits.

Before you buy anything, make sure you understand what Medicare itself does and does not cover. Medicare is the federal health insurance program for people over 65. It should not be confused with Medicaid programs, which are operated by individual states and help pay medical bills for low-income people of all ages.

Senior citizens who are covered by Medicare may be entitled to Medicaid protection as well. And the Department of Health and Human Services says individuals with both types of coverage probably do not need any more, private insurance.

Medicare does not pay all health care expenses. In many cases, however, the services that are excluded from Medicare coverage also are excluded from most private insurance policies. Nursing home care, for example, generally is not covered by either Medicare or private insurance. Medicare does not pay for any treatment not considered medically necessary; neither do private policies.

The government does not sell or service supplemental coverage. State insurance departments approve policies sold by insurance companies, but approval means only that the company and the policy meet requirements of state law.

If anyone tries to sell you a supplemental policy and tells you it is part of a government-sponsored program, report him or her to the state insurance department. It is illegal for insurance companies or agents to suggest they represent the government. It also is illegal for a company or agent to knowingly sell you a policy that duplicates Medicare coverage but will not pay duplicate benefits.

The Medicare program has two parts — A and B. Part A covers hospital costs; there is no charge for this part of the protection policy. Part B helps pay for doctors' bills and other medical services; there is a charge of $11 per month. When you sign up for Medicare, you will automatically be enrolled in Part B as well as Part A, unless you specifically say you do not want the extra coverage.

Both Part A and Part B of the Medicare program pay only part of the medical bills. In both cases, there is a deductible amount — like the deductible on an auto insurance policy — which you have to pay. Individuals also must pay a percentage of any amount beyond the deductible for certain services under Part B of Medicare. Benefits cover only 80 percent of the approved amount for doctors' services, for example. You — or your supplemental insurance — must take care of the remaining 20 percent.

The phrase "approved amount" is an important one. Under the Medicare program, a "reasonable charge" is set for each medical service. It may be more or less than the actual bill you face, but Medicare payments will be based on the approved amount only. Most private policies also use the approved amount as a guideline.

Suppose your doctor charges $500 for an operation. The approved amount under Medicare is $360. There is a deductible of $60, which you pay. Medicare will take care of 80 percent of the $300 remaining, or $240. Most private insurance policies will pay 20 percent of the $300, or $60. You have to pay $200 — the $60 deductible, plus the difference between your doctor's bill and the approved amount. *

Desegregation Agreement To Cost UNC Millions

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina may have to pay millions of dollars to comply with a recent desegregation agreement with the federal government, UNC officials say.

The officials say UNC's pledge to establish 29 new programs at its five black campuses will require at least two new buildings. The pledge was included in a consent decree approved last month by U.S. District Judge

Franklin Dupree, resolving an 11-year dispute between UNC and the government. The government had alleged that UNC was not trying hard enough to eliminate vestiges of its former dual system for whites and blacks. Eleven of the 16 campuses still are predominantly white.

L.V. Hackley, associate vice president for academic affairs for the 16-school UNC system, said final estimates of the total cost are not available because most of the proposals have not been submitted by the officials of the schools involved.

But he said at least two $7.6 million buildings — one for a new library at Fayetteville State University and the other for engineering programs at North Carolina A&T State University in Greensboro — will be needed as part of the programs.

A bachelor's degree program in chemical engineering was one of 10 programs promised to A&T in the decree and in the UNC Board of Governors' long-range plan to further desegregation.

A&T also will gain a bachelor's degree program in civil engineering and master's programs in architectural and mechanical engineering.

When the decree was submitted, UNC officials told state legislators that no additional funds would be needed during the 1981-83 biennium except what the board already had outlined in its budget.

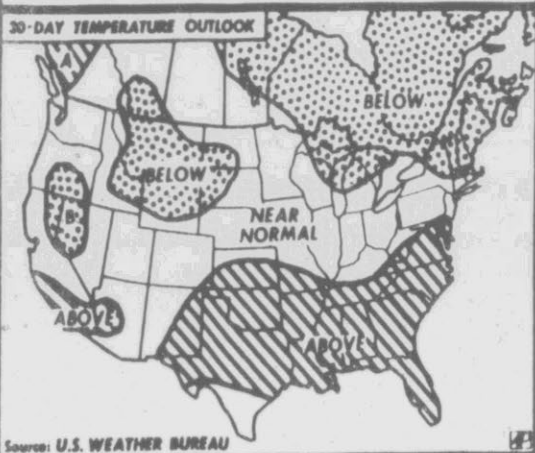

To avoid asking the Legislature for massive appropriations in the future, UNC will try to finance the programs with funds appropriated for enrollment growth or by reorganizing course offerings, Hackley said.

But the Legislature appropriated only $18 million of the $155 million requested by the board of governors for new facilities.

As a result, UNC President William Friday had to recommend to the board which projects needed immediate funding. Neither the A&T engineering building nor the FSU library were among Friday's four recommendations, which the UNC board approved Friday.

Friday said the FSU library and the A&T requests would be the board's top priorities when the Legislature meets this fall and in June 1982.

Weekend N.C. Traffic Kills 8

By The Associated Press
Traffic accidents in North Carolina over the weekend killed eight people, the state Highway Patrol said early today.

The deaths bring the total for the year to 790, compared with 855 at the same time last year.

In the latest reported death, Jerry Wayne Milam, 24, of Lexington died when he tried to pass the car in front of him as the car behind him was trying to pass him. The accident occurred at 10:20 a.m. Sunday on U.S. 64 5 miles east of Knoxville in Davie County.

Minutes earlier, in Nash County, Clearthur Wilkins, 36, of Spring Hope, died when his car sped off Rural Paved Road 1717 and overturned, throwing him from it. Wilkins was wearing no seat belt, troopers said.

Glenda James Gardner, 26, of Rockingham, died when her speeding car ran off the right side of Rural Paved Road 1434, crossed the road again and overturned, throwing her out of the car. Ms. Gardner also was wearing no seat belts in the accident, which occurred at 3:25 a.m. Sunday in Richmond County.

Also early Sunday, 23-year-old Randy Keith Shipping of Valdeese was killed when the car in which he was a passenger lost control on Rural Paved Road 1007, crossed U.S. 64-70 inside Hildebrand, overturned and hit a utility pole. Shipping also wore no seat belts.

On Saturday night, 53-year-old James Godwin of Greensboro was killed when his car ran off the road and overturned on Rural Paved Road 1945 3 miles north of Lumberton.

The other victims were identified as Leslie London, 19, of Wausau, who was a passenger in a car involved in a head-on collision on U.S. 117 four miles south of Greensboro early Saturday; 21-year-old William Coward of Greenville who was killed Friday night when the car he was driving collided head-on with a car on U.S. 264 north of Greenville; and William Miles, 21, of Mount Olive, who was struck by a car Saturday while walking on a rural road in Duplin County.

Water Safety Demonstrated

Representatives of the Pitt County chapter of the Red Cross came to Candlewick pool to give a water safety demonstration for the Candlewick Flames 4-H club recently.

Dick Lavin explained to the 28 members and friends attending the procedure of rescue with a life preserver, a ball, and a plastic jug with a rope tied to the end of it. In this method, the rescuer does not get in the water. Lavin also demonstrated mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

The safety course lasted one hour.

Pursuit of Wings

The dream of human flight has fascinated people for centuries. Thousands of years ago people supposedly tried to fly by tying feathers to their arms and flapping them like wings. Today, nearly 80 years after the first powered flight at Kitty Hawk, many individuals pursue the dream of flying by building their own planes or restoring and flying antique ones. This week many will show off their planes, including unique designs like this, at the 125,000-member Experimental Aircraft Association's annual "Fly-in." During the Fly-in, about 400 take-offs and landings per hour are expected to make Wittman Field in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, the world's busiest airport.

DO YOU KNOW — Who flew the first engine-driven heavier-than-air machine?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — A lunar eclipse occurs when Earth passes between the sun and the moon.

Rising costs got you down? Look around. Relief for your tight budget is in sight. See all those unwanted dust collectors? They may be dead weight to you, but they're sure to be just what someone else is looking for. Why not sell them?

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell this morning amid concern the federal government may pay record interest rates when it borrows nearly $22 billion this week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had gained 15.60 points last week, was off 6.66 points to 945.68 at noon. Declines outnumbered advances by about a 7-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume by noon was 18.52 million shares. The NYSE's composite index was down 0.35 to 75.60. At the American Stock Exchange, the market-value index was down 3.18 at 358.79.

A large part of the Treasury's borrowing is for its quarterly refinancing, and some analysts say the new issues will have to be sold at near record-high yields to be attractive.

High interest rates again boosted the U.S. dollar against key foreign currencies today. The dollar reached a five-year high against the West German mark in early European trading.

At the top of the NYSE most-active list at noon, Uniroyal traded at 9, down 1/8. Conoco Inc., the target of a three-way takeover fight, held the No. 2 spot on the active list, rising 2 1/4 to 93 1/2. Mobil Corp. today raised its bid for Conoco to $8.6 billion.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., which led the early most-active list on the NYSE, was down 1/2 to 17 1/4. Exxon Corp., which was unchanged at 35.

Phibro Corp., a New York commodity trading company, today announced plans to acquire Salomon Brothers, a private concern and Wall Street's fourth largest investment firm, for $250 million in securities. Phibro opened at noon, two hours late, at 29 1/2, up 1.

On the American Stock Exchange, Wang Laboratories topped the most-active list, trading at 32 1/2, unchanged from Friday.

Lightolier also was heavily trading, rising 3/4 to 24 1/2. The chairman of the company, Edward H.R. Blitzer, wrote to shareholders today asking them to reject a tender offer from Criton and saying Lightolier is exploring "possible interest by others in the acquisition of the company."

FAMILY CONCERN — Irish Republican Army hunger striker Paddy Quinn, 29, appears in this undated file photo. Quinn was in the 47th day of his fast Friday. His family signed documents authorizing doctors at the Belfast, Northern Ireland, Maze Prison to give Quinn medical attention after his condition seriously worsened. It was the first time since the hunger strikes began five months ago that the family of a faster took such action. (AP Laserphoto)

Theatre Performances Are Planned

The Greenville Recreation & Parks Department's Youth Theatre program will present three nights of drama on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday this week.

On Tuesday and Thursday nights, Aug. 4 and 6, the 13-16-year-old age group will present five one-act plays. They are "Exclusive Model," "Overtones," "Bad Habits," "Fiddlers in the Forest," and "Schubert's Last Serenade."

On Wednesday, Aug. 5, two groups will present plays. The 7-9-year-olds will present "The Little Girl Who Wouldn't Believe," and the 10-12-year-old group will present "The Tale of Oni-roku."

All performances will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be presented in the auditorium of the Recreation & Parks Department on Cedar Lane. The public is invited to attend the free performances.

Replacing N.C. Auto Licenses

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — All license plates in the series numbering AAA-101 through JAY-999 will be replaced, says Motor Vehicles Commissioner Elbert L. Peters Jr.

These license plates will be replaced when the owner's vehicle registration expires, he said.

"We are replacing these 1975 license plates because these are the oldest plates and many of them are faded and illegible," said Peters.

Obituary Column

Avery
Mrs. Verna Dare Corey Avery, retired dietician, died Sunday morning at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The funeral service was conducted today at 3 p.m. at St. James United Methodist Church by her pastor, the Rev. Dewey Tyson, and Dr. William K. Quick, a former pastor. Burial was in Greenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Avery, a Pitt County native, spent her youth in Winterville and was a graduate of East Carolina University. She taught home economics in Ahoskie, Dunn, and Walstonburg. She later attended Paly-Clinic Hospital in New York where she studied to be a dietician and worked in a number of hospitals in that position. She was a member of the Greenville Shrine No. 7, Order of the White Shrine of Jerusalem, the Greenville Business and Professional Woman's Club, and the Greenville Woman's Club. N.C. Business Activity Down WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The level of business activity in North Carolina moved downward in June, according to the latest figures from the Wachovia Business Index.

The index registered 154.9, down by .5 percent from the May level.

In the non-manufacturing sector, contract construction, trade services and government employment did not reach expected seasonal levels in June. A shorter work week also contributed to a decline in the index.

The business index measures the level of economic activity in North Carolina on a monthly basis. Using 1967 as the base of 100, it reflects indicators of employment, production and spending in the state's economy. All figures are adjusted by Wachovia-calculated figures for expected seasonal fluctuations.

Economic Losses Due To Strike Incalculable

By The Associated Press

The lost games can easily be added up: 712, or 33.8 percent of the season. But the economic losses caused by major league baseball's seven-week strike are probably too high to calculate.

The American League, with 14 teams, will have 382 canceled games and the 12-team National League 330 by the time the season starts again next Monday, after the delayed All-Star Game in Cleveland the day before.

Major league owners will meet in Chicago Tuesday to vote on the settlement reached last Friday by negotiators. They also must decide if they should resume the season with teams keeping the same records they had when the strike started June 12, or wipe the slate clean and divide the season into two halves, with the winners meeting in a mini-series.

Meanwhile, team officials and representatives of the 24 major-league cities have begun economic assessments of the strike — with their estimates of losses varying widely.

An economic consultant for the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce said the city suffered $21 million in losses because of the strike.

"Those are real and permanent losses," said Bruce Crutcher, group executive for economic development for the Chamber of Commerce.

In New York, comptroller Harrison J. Goldin said a conservative estimate was that the strike had cost at least $8.4 million in lost business and wages.

"Individuals dependent on baseball-generated revenue have suffered tremendously," said Goldin, citing the owner of a bar across from Yankee Stadium whose revenue had dropped from $2,000 a day to as little as $100 daily during the strike.

Similarly, two restaurants in the vicinity of Comiskey Park in Chicago were forced to close for lack of business during the strike.

In Milwaukee, County Stadium Manager William Anderson said the strike would cost the county nearly $1.5 million and Mayor Maynard Jackson of Atlanta said that taxpayers would have to pay for a $300,000 increase in the Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium deficit.

In Los Angeles, where the Dodgers averaged 46,236 fans per game before the strike, club officials estimated they lost $7.6 million in revenue.

The story is the same in other cities, where cab drivers, hotel owners, ballpark employees and souvenir vendors all felt a financial pinch because of the canceled games. In addition, lost taxes in the 22 American major league cities came to another $10 million, according to a U.S. Conference of Mayors survey.

Per-game tax losses, according to responses in the survey, ranged from $10,000 in San Diego to $20,000 in Baltimore.

A loss that can't really be measured, at least until after the season resumes and teams see if fans return to the games in the same numbers as before, is the loss of goodwill.

Ray Kroc, owner of the San Diego Padres, took a lesson from his hamburger chain's slogan, "You deserve a break today," and announced that he would charge no admission for his team's reopener next Monday against the Atlanta Braves.

"It's our way of telling the fans we're sorry," said Kroc. Seating will be on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Other teams said they would reschedule popular giveaway and Old-Timers game dates that had been planned for the period of the strike.

Opening Day II next Monday will have a lot of similarities with last April's beginning, particularly in the American League, where the same 14 teams will be playing in the same seven cities where they started the season.

Chicago was at Boston, Kansas City at Baltimore, Milwaukee at Cleveland, Texas at New York, Toronto at Detroit, Oakland at Minnesota and California at Seattle. That's the identical schedule next Monday.

In the National League, the New York Mets are again in Chicago and Pittsburgh will be in Montreal, just as they were April 9. The other four openers have Philadelphia at St. Louis, Cincinnati at Los Angeles, Atlanta at San Diego and Houston at San Francisco.

As for the lost games, Pittsburgh lost the most, 60, and Kansas City missed the most at home, 34.

Oakland will have the fewest games remaining, 49, while Cleveland and Kansas City have the most left, 55.

Oddly, Cincinnati and San Francisco both have an equal number of home and road games left to play. The Reds and Giants both have 26 games at home and 26 on the road.

Gibson, Foster Mize Named To Baseball Hall

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP)

For Bob Gibson, the trip to Cooperstown was as short as possible.

For Johnny Mize, it was long and agonizing.

Gibson and Mize, along with Negro League pioneer Rube Foster, were inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame Sunday. Gibson, 45, returned to the spotlight only five years after his retirement. He is only the 11th man elected to baseball's shrine in his first year of eligibility.

Mize, meanwhile, has been retired for 28 years and eligible for the Hall for 23. But he was bypassed 20 times by the Baseball Writers' Association of America and twice by the Veterans Committee before making it this year.

"I certainly am proud to be here," said Gibson, who amassed 251 wins, 56 shutouts and 3,117 strikeouts in his outstanding 17-year career. He is the only pitcher to win the seventh game of a World Series twice and had seven consecutive Series victories in a 7-2 postseason record.

"I've devoted my life to baseball."

Never one to do things at half-speed, Gibson was the most intimidating pitcher in the game for much of the 1960s. He was so dominant in 1968 — 22-9, 13 shutouts, 268 strikeouts and a phenomenal 1.12 earned run average — that he won the first of his two Cy Young awards and the National League's Most Valuable Player honor.

Following that season, which Gibson capped with a record 17-strikeout performance in Game 1 of the World Series against Detroit, baseball lowered the pitching mound to give batters a better chance to hit against the likes of Gibson.

"A writer asked me how I'd like to be remembered," said Gibson, now a coach with the New York Mets. "I think as a person who was a competitor and gave 100 percent every time I went out on the field. I might not have been so good, but I gave it my all."

Gibson nearly gave his all to another sport after starring in basketball and baseball at Creighton University.

"I was looking for a $35,000 bonus to sign," he recalled. "Bill Bergesch, who's with the (New York) Yankees now but was scouting for St. Louis, was the only one to tell me the truth. He said a lot of scouts were saying the closest I'd get to $35,000 was $3,000."

"I said I liked basketball better anyway and wouldn't play baseball."

"But that's the reason I signed with St. Louis... honesty."

Mize would have had an honest beef with the selectors about being overlooked despite some excellent career statistics. He hit 359 homers, including a National League record for left-handed hitters of 51 in 1947 with the New York Giants. He won or tied for the NL home run title four times, captured the RBI crown three times and the batting title once.

And he's the only major leaguer to have hit three homers or more in a game twice in a season in two different years.

But Mize, 58, betrayed no bitterness at the ceremonies.

"Somebody said to me the other day that getting in by the Veterans Committee was going in the back door," said Mize, known as "Big Cat" when he was belting the ball for the Cardinals, Giants and Yankees from 1936-53. "I said, 'no. Look at who is on the committee: managers, general managers, players. Who do you want to pick you? They're your peers.' In Hollywood, when your peers elect you, you receive an Oscar."

Mize said he learned how to hit while in high school and never forgot his lessons.

"My first game as a pro, in Greensboro, N.C., I got a hit the first time up and fell over first base because I was watching the ball," he said. "I watched it ever since."

Foster, who died in 1930, was represented by his son Earl. One of the pioneers of the Negro leagues, he was a pitcher from 1897, when he toured as a 17-year-old with the Waco (Texas) Yellow Jackets, until 1915.

In 1911, Foster formed the Chicago American Giants and embarked on a career as an owner and manager. And, in 1920, he founded the Negro National League.

Also honored at the ceremonies were Ernie Harwell, who received the Ford C. Frick Award for excellence in baseball broadcasting, and sports writers Milton Richman of United Press International and Joe Reichler, formerly of The Associated Press, who received the J.G. Taylor Spink Award for their contributions as baseball reporters.

Briton Wins Canadian Open

Oosterhuis Slips Past Nicklaus

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP)

Although he had encountered little but frustration since joining the American PGA Tour, Peter Oosterhuis never really considered returning to his native England where he once dominated pro golf.

"I now have homes in Palm Springs and Santa Barbara (Calif.). My children are in school in the States.

"It would be a bigger move, a much bigger move, to return to England now than it was to come to the States," said Oosterhuis, who joined the American tour seven years ago and finally broke through to a victory Sunday in the Canadian Open, this country's national championship but also a part of the U.S. PGA circuit.

"When I was playing in Britain, I didn't have a home. I just traveled all the time," he said.

In those travels, the pleasant, 6-foot-5 Oosterhuis established himself as the outstanding player in Europe. He topped the British Order of Merit four consecutive seasons and collected 19 international titles.

Then he joined the American tour and it all turned sour. He lost a playoff for the 1974

Pensacola Open title and didn't finish higher until the weekend, when a last-gasp challenge by Jack Nicklaus fell short.

Oosterhuis won $76,500 in Canadian funds and the spectacular Peter Jackson trophy with a final-round 70 and a 280 total, four shots under par on the difficult, 7,060-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course in suburban Toronto.

Nicklaus, who designed the course as a permanent home for the Canadian Open, left critical putts short of the cup on three of the last four holes and finished second again a single shot back at 281.

"Yes, I'm disappointed," said Nicklaus, who has yet to win this title and now has finished second five times. He'll defend his American PGA title in Atlanta this week.

Nicklaus had a closing round of par-71 and was tied with Bruce Lietzke and Andy North, each of whom had a closing 70.

Mark Hayes, who was tied for the lead until he double bogeyed the 17th hole, finished with a 74-282. Third round leader Leonard Thompson was another shot back at 283 after a 76.

Tom Watson shot 72-288 and Lee Trevino, a three-time winner of this event, had 74-289.

For much of the last seven years, it has been a series of deep frustrations for Oosterhuis. From the leading player on the European tour he became another face in the American crowd, a career struggler, an also-ran.

He brushed aside any suggestion he may have thought of giving up the game.

"Any time I started thinking of a different way to make money, it took me only about 10 seconds to decide I'd better go practice my golf game," he said. "I have no other interests, no other desires."

The break-through victory occurred in peculiar fashion, with Oosterhuis sitting in the scorer's tent watching the other challengers finish. He played about 20 minutes in front of the other contenders, salvaged a scrambling, oneputt par-5 on the 18th and then had to wait.

"What an unbelievable way to finally win," he said. "Sitting there and watching the others and seeing my name staying up on top."

The victory, which came after he'd made only one check in the first 10 tournaments of the year, also caused him to make some major changes in his schedule. Instead of going home to California, he now is set to play in this week's PGA championship, won his way into the World Series of Golf this fall and will be eligible for next spring's Masters and the Tournament of Champions.

Rookie Edges Waltrip In 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Grand National rookie Ron Bouchard, a hash-browns man, outwitted the grits crowd with help from one of the good old boys to win his first NASCAR stock car race.

The 32-year-old furniture truck driver from Fitchburg, Mass., finished two feet ahead of Darrell Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., to capture Sunday's Talladega 500.

One foot behind Bouchard in a three-car dash for the checkered flag was Terry Labonte of Corpus Christi, Texas.

Bouchard said after pocketing his $38,805 check, the biggest payoff in his 16-year racing career, that Buddy Baker, the strapping, slow-talking driver from Charlotte, N.C., had given him some pointers on how to attack a major track like the 2.67-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway.

"I had to listen closely a couple of times to understand him," said Bouchard of the language barrier between him and Baker.

He did not say what tips Baker gave him, but they paid off.

Bouchard was running third behind Waltrip and Labonte into the final stretch.

"I waited for Terry to make his move because he was second," Bouchard said. "He went high and that left the bottom open and I took it."

"By the time Darrell saw what happened I was ahead of him."

Bouchard became the 13th different winner in the 13 Talladega 500 races.

"I've never been superstitious and I hope I don't start now," said Bouchard, whose previous top pay day was about $11,000 in a 300-miler.

After they crossed the finish line, Bouchard said, he glanced at Waltrip and "Darrell looked as happy as I did. I think he must have been happy for me."

Cleveland Preparing For All-Star Game

CLEVELAND (AP) — Officials in Cleveland, scurrying to prepare for next Sunday's baseball All-Star Game, are no strangers to having national events plopped in their laps on short notice.

They recall a similar situation just last fall, when Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan dropped in almost unannounced to hold their nationally televised presidential debate.

"Ours is not to reason why," said Mayor George Voinovich, smiling, as he discussed the upcoming game. "There are lots of people who dump things on me without consulting me beforehand."

Many of the problems presented by the debate have resurfaced for the All-Star Game.

Hotel space is at a premium, with most downtown hotel rooms already accounted for, and hundreds of media representatives are seeking confirmation of their game credentials.

The security problems presented by presidential candidates have been replaced by traffic problems to be handled by about 100 police officers.

A total of about 140,000 people are expected to watch a preseason football game between the Cleveland Browns and Pittsburgh Steelers on Saturday night and the All-Star contest the following evening, both at 76,685-seat Municipal Stadium.

Another 9,000 are possible for the Roberto Duran-Nino Gonzalez boxing match Sunday afternoon at nearby Public Hall.

Mize: King-Sized HR Hitter

By The Associated Press

The scene is etched in your mind's eye, burned there indelibly. It is a memory, a link to the past that you can not — must not — ever surrender. For after all, without our pasts, what have we left?

It's true that everything is magnified when you're young. You're a pint-sized person in a full-sized world. That has an effect. Home runs look longer when you're 8 than they will when you're 28 or 48.

For one particular 8-year-old, no home runs will ever be quite as long as the ones Johnny Mize used to hit.

The year was 1947 and Mize was playing first base for a team called the New York Giants in an oddly shaped stadium called the Polo Grounds. It was a place well-suited for polo perhaps, but rather poor for baseball.

In that marvelous summer when this particular 8-year-old discovered the wonders of baseball, the Giants' team resembled their nickname. They were a club of huge sluggers, slow moving on the field but a treat to watch at bat.

That summer they would hit 221 home runs, setting a National League record for long-ball clouts. They also would finish fourth in an eight-team league, a matter of little importance to the 8-year-old. For him there was nothing quite so wonderful as a giant-sized Giant home run. And no one delivered them as frequently as Johnny Mize.

In the summer of 1947, Mize hit 51 home runs. No National League left-handed hitter before or since has reached that total.

The scenario was repeated time after marvelous time. Mize would stride up to the plate, his broad shoulders stretching his uniform jersey to its limits, the huge No. 15 on his back. He'd carefully position himself in the batter's box and eye the pitcher, sizing up the enemy.

Mize was no guess-hitter. He studied the pitchers. When he went to the plate, he was prepared. He had a mental book on the hurlers and he referred to it all the time.

In the field, Mize was hardly a gazelle. He was a big man and played first base the way you'd expect a big man to do it. He would not be mistaken for a Gold Glove winner, but, like the Giants' annual standing, it hardly mattered to the 8-year-old. Just keep swinging, Johnny. Keep swinging.

When the 8-year-old got a miniature Giants uniform for his birthday, he requested and received No. 15. When he picked up a bat in a sandlot game or a broomhandle in a stickball game, he swung for the long ball. Let somebody else worry about singles. He'd take the homers, just like Big Jawn. When he finished, Mize had spent 15 years in the majors walloping 359 home runs and compiling a .312 career batting average. Those are impressive numbers, especially when you consider that he missed three years at the prime of his baseball career because of Navy service during World War II.

On Sunday, baseball saluted Mize's achievements by inducting him into the Hall of Fame along with Bob Gibson, Lake Speed and Kyle Petty. It was an honor long overdue and it brought back memories of the man who used to hit all those home runs.

Writers, Coaches Say UNC To Repeat

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Sportswriters and head football coaches say North Carolina, flush with last year's Atlantic Coast Conference championship victory, will hold the ACC football title in 1981.

North Carolina, with 13 starters returning from last year's Bluebonnet Bowl team, won 65 first-place votes among the 73 participants in the media poll.

Four of the league's coaches chose UNC, led by coach Dick Crum. Coaches were not allowed to vote for their own team.

After first place, the two polls differed greatly on who would be the runner-up to the Tar Heels. The media nominated Maryland for second place by nine points over Clemson. North Carolina State was fourth, while Virginia, Duke and Wake Forest brought up the rear.

Clemson and North Carolina State tied for second in the coaches' poll, while the Tarps slipped to fourth. Behind Maryland are Duke, Wake Forest and Virginia.

Georgia Tech was not considered in the voting since it will not be eligible for the football championship.

Last year, both the coaches and the media selected North Carolina to capture the title and the Tar Heels responded with a perfect 6-0 league mark, including a victory over the Yellow Jackets.

The media poll has correctly predicted the conference champion in four of the last five years. The exception was in 1977, when Maryland was chosen to win, but ended the season in a tie with N.C. State for third, while UNC won the title.

The point-by-point breakdown for the media poll was: North Carolina 499, Maryland 377, Clemson 368, N.C. State 328, Virginia 190, Duke 164 and Wake Forest 118.

The coaches' votes were as follows: North Carolina 34, Clemson and N.C. State 28, Maryland 24, Duke 12, Wake Forest 11 and Virginia 10.

Rookie Races To Victory...

The first seven finishers drove Buicks, with pole-sitter Harry Gant, Bobby Allison, Lake Speed and Kyle Petty finishing behind Labonte.

Allison led most of the race until his car began losing power near the end. "I had the strongest car on the track until the time it counted, the last five laps," Allison said.

Waltrip, commenting on the run to the flag, said, "Labonte and I got to racing each other and completely forgot about old Ron Bouchard. Where did he come from, anyway? When we got three abreast going for the flag, I was doing all I could do to hold off Terry and then a long sneaks Bouchard...Bouchard went by me and Terry like we were out tied to a tree somewhere."

Said Labonte, "I thought I had Darrell right where I wanted him for the last lap. I was running right ahead of him going through the tri-oval and then Bouchard snuck right under us at the flag. Darrell and I were so busy racing each other that he just slipped right by."

Caponi Withstands Streater Vows He'll Walk Again

BOSTON (AP) — Donna Caponi, a Ladies Professional Golfers Association superstar by day and a disco queen by night, tripped the light fantastic to the bank again today, but she had better watch her step.

LPGA officials are going by the rule book, playing no favorites. And that includes Caponi in her chase to become a $1 million winner on the tour in her 16th season at the age of 36.

Caponi, a two-time winner of both the U.S. Open and LPGA titles, withstood controversy and fired a 1-under-par 71 for a 72-hole total of 276 Sunday in capturing her fifth crown of the year in the $150,000 Boston Five Classic at Ferncroft Country Club.

With top prize money of $22,500, Caponi boosted her earnings for the year to $158,395 and her career total to $982,521 in a goal to join Kathy Whitworth in the millionaire quendum.

However, Caponi, also bidding for LPGA "Player of the Year" honors for the first time, was virtually overshadowed by controversy in the four-day tournament, which drew a crowd of 63,090 for the tour's second stop here.

The turmoil started in the second round Friday when rookie pro Deanie Wood sank her tee shot for an ace on the 16th hole. A spectator's guide inadvertently said an ace on the hole was worth a new car. It should have been listed for the sixth hole.

The sponsoring Boston Five Cents Savings Bank admitted the error and settled for a $3,500 cash award to Wood. The Oklahoma City resident gladly accepted "my biggest check of my career." She went on to earn $322.50 with a 302 score in the tournament.

But trouble really bubbled during the final two rounds. Oregon's Kathy Young, winless in three years on the tour but tied for the halfway lead, was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard after the third round Saturday. That was the same day that LPGA Hall of Famer Carol Mann was penalized two strokes for slow play.

Officials really lowered the boom Sunday. Whitworth, who became the first LPGA player to win $1 million in official prize money with a third-place finish in the U.S. Open a week ago, was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard. She signed a card that showed she had a 4 on the ninth hole when she actually shot a 5.

Caponi led Jan Stephenson by three strokes and JoAnne Carner by six as they teed off together for the last round. Caponi took bogeys on two of her first three holes and Stephenson pulled into a tie with a birdie on the third green.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina defensive back Steve Streater, who plans to return home this Friday, says he's determined to walk again after being paralyzed in an April accident.

"My goal is to walk," he said in a recent interview with the Charlotte Observer.

April 30, which started out being the most satisfying day of Streater's life, turned out to be the most tragic.

Streater, 22, was returning to Chapel Hill after a visit to Washington, where he signed a contract with the Washington Redskins of the National Football League. His boyfriend dream to become a professional football player was about to come true.

Driving from the Raleigh-Durham Airport in a drizzle, Streater lost control of the car he was driving. The car skidded and overturned on the slick road.

Streater's sixth cervical vertebra was fractured, resulting in paralysis from the waist down.

Nine weeks ago, Streater was transferred to Charlotte's Rehabilitation Hospital for therapy. Doctors say there is always hope, but that so far there has been no breakthrough in regenerating damaged spinal cord nerves.

The simplest tasks are now a challenge for the former all-Atlantic Coast Conference defensive back and punter. Putting on a pair of basketball shorts requires almost eight minutes. Another task task is to slip on a pair of canvas shoes that must be fitted to his feet.

"That's a killer," Streater said, "Like a hot day at football practice."

Streater is slowly but surely using his hands for a variety of tasks. Asked how much finger movement he had immediately after the accident, he said, "None. None at all. Then it began to come back. I'm righthanded, but now I toss a ball more accurately with my left hand."

Streater says he is regaining strength in his chest, arms, shoulders and hands. He plans to return to UNC this fall to complete work for a degree in education. He has reserved an apartment and ordered a lightweight wheelchair.

"I've got certain goals," Streater said. "My number one goal is to get on my feet and walk. I know it will be hard. I'm willing to do what it takes. I'm thinking positive. I don't have time to get bored. I don't have time to get down."

The Soviet men won the decathlon competition, 46,740 points to 36,885. Soviet women captured the heptathlon, 18,484 points to 16,372.

Alexander Nevsky of the Soviet Union won the men's individual event with 8,170 points. Yekaterina Gordinenko of the Soviet Union triumphed in the women's competition with 6,320 points.

A Review

The Will To Win Sets Theme Of Big Movie

It might seem that after four decades another film based on World War II experiences would have at best to be a repeat of ground already covered. Not so. The Paramount film "Victory," showing at the Buccaneer movies, has capitalized on impressive talents — an excellent screenplay by Evan Jones and Yabo Yablonsky, a direction by veteran John Huston; and acting talent supplemented by a bevy of international soccer players.

Despite its war period setting, a concentration camp within Germany, there's little insistence on calling attention to the presence of war outside the camp's tall fences. The deadly boredom of men confined in a day by day passive situation, both conquered and conquerors, is subtly emphasized in touches that ring true.

The fate of war has thrown together in this dreary locale two men whose passion in life is soccer — Captain

Colby (Michael Cane), a British prisoner, and Von Steiner (Max Von Sydow), the camp's German propaganda officer. Colby, a former soccer star in England, has assembled a ragtag Allied team and taught the men the fundamentals of this game. Von Steiner, casting about for something to break the mold of canned propaganda, conceives the idea of a match between a prisoner team and a German team.

Expectedly, opposition develops. Colby's superior officer, typically prim and proper British and resentful of Captain Colby's workingman background, insists such a game would constitute conduct akin to treason. Von Steiner's immediate superiors consider it a joke until a higher official calls it a brilliant propaganda stroke and directs fulfilling Colby's demands for proper uniforms, separate housing and better rations for the allied team.

From this point on, the excitement factor in the film accelerates. A shift in attitudes occur, with pettiness giving way to interest in a common goal.

The camp's most restless occupant, Hatch (Sylvester Stallone), a brash American bent on escape, becomes the fly in the ointment in the otherwise smooth running procedures in readying the team for the big game to be held in Paris. He does escape, but a chance to be the possible tool for the escape of the team after the Paris games makes honor over personal gain come reluctantly to the forefront.

The big game, attended by 50,000 Frenchmen, is predictably, a highly charged emotional event. The momentous game ends in a tie, and the well laid plans for escape with the help of the French underground goes awry, but an even more effective escape takes place as the 50,000 spectators swarm past helpless Nazi guards into the field and take the players away.

"Victory" is a big, sprawling canvas of the human spirit that effectively distills the hope to survive and the will to win. The film also has the added lure of a roster of international soccer stars, including the Brazilian great, Pele. Teenagers and adults will cheer and be cheered by this warmhearted, very human film.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8 ♠AK10942 ♠A62 ♠KJ4
The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—While you have a good hand, your singleton spade is not necessarily an asset—indeed, it might be a liability, since it suggests the possibility of a misfit. Thus, we recommend that, for the moment, you proceed quietly. Bid two hearts—if partner passes, it's unlikely that you have missed game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q107 ♠A1054 ♠962 ♠873
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have a weak hand, and you should get out of the auction as quickly as possible once you have found a playable spot. Pass—North's rebid was not forcing, so there is no need to bid again. Don't give preference to two clubs — that raises the level unnecessarily.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠982 ♠KJ10 ♠K763 ♠874
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Partner's bid is not forcing, but even though your hearts are much stronger than your spades, you should take a preference to two spades. As a general rule, you should presume that partner's first-bid suit is longer than his second, so you should return to his first-bid suit with equal length in his two suits, especially if you can do so without increasing the level of the contract.

Q.4—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A7 ♠J832 ♠AKQ1095 ♠9
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—Now that you have found a major-suit fit, there is no point to jump rebidding your diamond suit—that action would not be forcing and you could easily miss a superior heart contract. Jump to three hearts. While that is also not forcing, the knowledge that a good fit exists might encourage partner to stretch to game on many relatively weak hands.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1076 ♠K82 ♠J73 ♠92
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Now that partner has raised your suit, your hand revalues to 12 points, and your side's combined assets should be in the game range. To invite game by raising to three spades could place undue pressure on your partner, who might pass with many hands that would produce ten tricks. Bid four spades.

Q.6—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K7 ♠AQ8 ♠KJ73 ♠10954
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 NT Pass 2 NT Pass
What action do you take?

A.—Pass. You started with a minimum opening bid, and nothing has happened to improve your hand. Partner's raise to two no trump shows about 11 points, so your side appears to be short of the assets required for game.

Phil Donahue Show Is Under Monitors' Eyes

CHICAGO (AP) — A conservative TV watchdog group says it will begin monitoring the Phil Donahue show, claiming that most topics on the award-winning program viewed by millions of American housewives deal with "abnormal sex."

In announcing plans for monitoring the program, the National Federation for Decency said it would publish lists of companies that sponsor the hour-long "Donahue" shows dealing with sex and would encourage consumers to boycott products advertised on such programs.

"Never before in television's history have we had a sex activist broadcaster such as Phil Donahue," the group said in a news release issued Saturday.

Donahue and spokesmen for the popular daytime program, which is videotaped at the WGN-TV studios here and syndicated nationally by Multimedia Program Productions, Inc., could not be reached for comment.

"Approximately two out of three of his shows are sex shows, and most of those promote abnormal sex, which Mr. Donahue prefers to call 'sexual alternatives,'" the group said. "Such shows have a mind-warping effect on youth and adults."

"Donahue" has dealt with a number of topics about sexuality such as incest, birth control, abortion, rape and homosexuality in the 11 years it has been syndicated nationally.

The program — which has won a George Foster Peabody Award and nine Emmy Awards, including one this year for Outstanding Talk or Service Series — also has focused on non-sexual topics and interviews with celebrities.

Joyce Gorringer, a spokeswoman for the 4-year-old, Tupelo, Miss.-based federation, said other "pro-family" groups in the Chicago area would join the monitoring effort, which is intended to make sponsors aware of the sexual content of some of Donahue's programs.

"We find that some of the sponsors have not watched the Donahue show and are not aware of what's being put on," Mrs. Gorringer said. "What we really would like to show them is exactly what is being presented."

Asked if the advertisers were expected to exert pressure on Donahue to change his subject matter, Mrs. Gorringer said, "I think the sponsors will decide for themselves what they'll do."

The National Federation for Decency was started by the Rev. Donald E. Wildmon, who earlier this year also launched the Coalition for Better Television. The coalition has threatened a selective boycott of prime-time TV advertisers who sponsor shows with sex and violence, but so far it hasn't materialized.

Wildmon has said the Rev. Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority is a member of the coalition, the biggest of 300 affiliated groups nationwide.

Nuke Plant Fire Set By A Guard

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)

A McGuire nuclear plant security guard admitted Sunday that he set a fire at the plant so he could impress his Duke Power Co. employers and earn more money for his financially troubled family.

"I have made a mistake. I'm sorry for it," Douglas Norwood, 24, told the Charlotte Observer. "My biggest regret is letting down my friends and supervisors on the security force."

Norwood, who works for Southern Security Services Inc., said he expects to be fired from the guard service. He has been relieved from his duties at McGuire, 17 miles northwest of downtown Charlotte, a Duke spokesman said.

The Friday night incident sparked a security furor at McGuire, where authorities issued a "Code 102" alert that meant no one could enter or leave the plant.

Duke officials also notified the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the FBI and the Mecklenburg County police and began making plans to give polygraph tests to approximately 140 employees who were in the area, police said.

But Norwood, Duke authorities and an NRC spokesman said there never was any danger to people or the plant.

The incident began about 8 p.m. Friday after Norwood, who was on patrol in a storage area, told a supervisor he found a 5-gallon metal container with a burnt wick made out of paper towels in it, according to a police report.

The report said Norwood told the supervisor he found the wick burning and extinguished it.

But Norwood told The Observer Sunday night that he lit and extinguished the paper towel in a smoking area about 100 yards from the storage area.

Then he carried the extinguished paper towel to the storage area and placed it next to the metal can, Norwood said.

"There never was any danger," he said. "There never was any fire."

Duke spokesman Mary Cartwright said that even if the paint thinner had caught fire, it couldn't have done much damage since there weren't many things that would burn in the storage area.

Late Sunday morning, Norwood admitted to Duke authorities in a written statement that he had fabricated the incident, Ms. Cartwright said.

"He has been relieved of his duties at the McGuire nuclear station," she said. It could not be learned if he was still employed by the security service.

County police said charges probably will not be brought against Norwood.

"I don't think we have a violation," said Police Capt. Paul Cash. "The question is — when all the smoke clears — what North Carolina general statute did he violate? There apparently was no intent to cause a fire," Cash said.

Warn Counties Pay Off Debts

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP)

The state has told several North Carolina counties to pay off their Medicaid debts by mid-September or suffer the loss of their share of state-collected taxes.

Gaston County reportedly owes $479,654. Gaston officials say withholding is the only way state government will ever get the money. Gaston officials anticipate receiving $3.2 million in tax distributions this year.

The debt dates back to 1978, when the state increased the county's share of Medicaid. But Gaston and other counties have apparently refused to acknowledge the change.

Federal Judge James B. McMillan of Charlotte has made clear he intends to have the county spend money for jail improvement.

Gaston owes a larger Medicaid debt than any other county, according to Marvin Dorman of the state Budget Office. The next largest debt is Harnett County's $87,724.

Answer to Saturday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 8-3

CWJ ZCCJAT BGHSAGSCZB FTBQFSA

WHTJBGHQA HSMFBM

Saturday's Cryptquip — CHICKEN CHICKENED OUT AT PROSPECT OF DULL FRICASSEE.

Today's Cryptquip clue: M equals T

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Greensboro Papers To Combine Staffs

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Greensboro Daily News and The Greensboro Record reported Sunday that they will combine their reporting and editorial staffs over the next several months.

Robert D. Benson, president and publisher, said combining the news staffs will enable the papers to expand their efforts beyond what ordinarily would be possible in an area this size.

Benson said the Daily News and The Record would remain separate newspapers and, in some ways, become more distinctive.

The editorial pages will not be affected by the change, because each page will remain under the direction of an editor free to take a point of view independent of the other, Benson said.

Editors also announced a reorganization of news department management. Irvin Smallwood will become deputy executive editor of the papers, leaving his previous role of managing editor of the Daily News since 1966.

Ned Cline will succeed Smallwood. Cline was a Raleigh correspondent who returned to the Daily News two years ago as an assistant managing editor.

Alfred T. Hamilton Jr., who became managing editor of The Record in November, will remain in that position.

Howard Covington will become executive city editor for both papers, with responsibilities for the Greensboro reporting staff. Van King will become state editor with responsibility for coverage outside Guilford County.

persons who can help you get ahead in your line of endeavor. A new project needs more study.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Arrange a meeting with key persons so you can advance more quickly. The evening should be quiet and restful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Finding a better method of operating can pave the way to greater success. Be sure to cut down on unnecessary expenses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You may feel at a low ebb in the morning but the rest of the day you can accomplish a great deal. Express happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to obtain the truth of a situation that is puzzling to you. Make sure your work is done before engaging in recreation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she should be taught humanitarianism to go along the desire to get ahead. A good education must be provided in order to achieve success. Don't neglect religious training. Be sure to expose to sports and teach fair play. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
