By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — A large surge in jobs among adult men sent the nation's unemployment rate falling to 7 percent in July, the lowest level in 15 months, the government reported today.

rising unemployment that had been made by most economic forecasters. The jobless rate, which stood at 7.6 percent in May, ebbed to 7.3 percent in June. Until July, unemployment had not been as low as 7 percent since April 1980, when the economy plunged into a deep downturn.

Threatening French Embassy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A prominent Iranian religious leader warned France today its embassy in Tehran would be taken over if France refuses to extradite ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and a leftist leader, Tehran Radio reported.

The warning came from Ayatollah Meshkini, the Friday prayer leader in the holy city of Qom, who took over the post from Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazari, the heir-apparent to supreme leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, according to the broadcast. Meshkini's first name was not given. Addressing French President Francois Mitterrand in a sermon delivered at a Qom mosque, Meshkini was quoted as saying: "If you do not agree to extradite these terrorists to Iran, in the same way that the Iranian nation stood up to America with clenched fists and the call of 'God is Great' and rubbed America's snout in the dust, it (the Iranian nation) will do the same to you."

Three bombs went off overnight outside two French banks and an Air France office in Beirut, Lebanon. An anonymous telephone caller to Beirut newspapers said the bombings would continue until Bani-Sadr was extradited.

The U.S. Embassy in Tehran was taken over Nov. 4, 1979 and occupied for 44 days by Iranian militant students who held 52 Americans hostage. The attack on the U.S. Embassy followed the admission of Iran's deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to a New York hospital for cancer treatment at a time the Iranian authorities were demanding his extradition.

Strike Of Air Controllers Now Considered 'Over'

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, saying it considers the air traffic controllers strike over, is looking for replacements for the thousands of controllers who continued picketing for a fifth day today.

around the country. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan was "very encouraged by our ability to operate the system and the level at which we can operate."

"They can put our people in shackles and put them in jail. We will not go back to work," Poli said. Administration officials said that option is no longer open to the strikers. They repeated there will be no amnesty and, as of 11 a.m. EDT Thursday, all striking controllers were considered subject for dismissal with no opportunity to return.

tion but stopped short of agreeing to a PATCO plea that other unions honor their picket lines. AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said the 15-million-member federation supports the controllers but was leaving it to individual unions whether to honor the pickets.

Despite Reagan's 48-hour ultimatum early in the week to return to work or be fired, only about 1,000 of the controllers that walked out Monday are back on the job. Lewis acknowledged that about 12,000 remain on strike.

Bani-Sadr and the other man Iran seeks, Massoud Rajavi, fled to France in an Iranian air force jet July 29 and were granted political asylum. Since then there have been mass protests outside the French Embassy in Tehran.

The Federal Aviation Administration, which reported 75 percent of all regularly scheduled air traffic flying, continued the massive task of sending out dismissal notices to the strikers. Letters eventually will be sent to about 12,000 controllers, none of whom will work again for the government as long as President Reagan is in office, officials said.

Speakes said the White House also considers the confrontation with the controllers over and added that he knows "of no possibility there could be any change in our position." FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms said 75 percent of regularly scheduled commercial flights were operating, and he said he is freezing that level of operations until Sept. 8.

He said the administration was beginning to focus exclusively on searching for new controllers who can be put to work quickly — scanning an applicant list of 20,000 names and looking into ways to speed up the training process.

As part of the rebuilding effort, the FAA will accelerate plans to close 58 to 61 small control towers serving primarily general aviation, Lewis said. The General Accounting Office last March recommended closing those towers.

But Solidarity union's regional board in Gdansk ignored the warning and scheduled a two-hour strike for Aug. 17 in the Baltic port to protest the "constantly deteriorating social and economic situation in the country and the lack of appropriate action by the government."

A union spokesman said miners remained at the pitheads of at least 60 coal mines and refused to go underground when the day shift started at 6 a.m. He said workers in most big factories in the region joined the protest.

PLO Talks Ruled Out

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, rejecting a recommendation by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, says U.S. negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization are out of the question until the PLO has a change of heart in its attitude toward Israel.

Reagan's comments, relayed to reporters Thursday by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., came after Sadat "expressed his strong view" in a meeting between the two leaders that the PLO should be included in the dialogue for a Middle East peace.

Haig said Reagan explained to Sadat that the United States won't have direct contact with the PLO because it made a commitment to Israel that it would not negotiate with the organization until it recognizes Israel's right to exist and its right to secure borders.

Reagan also told Sadat that "American fidelity to all its commitments, whether to Israel or Egypt, or to the other friendly nations in the region are fundamental aspects in our hopes to achieve peace and stability in the area," Haig said.

Haig said Reagan voiced his response after Sadat "expressed his strong view ... (of) the importance of dealing with the Palestinians and urged the United States to establish contact with the PLO."

After his meeting with Reagan, the third in two days, Sadat appeared to qualify slightly his own public statements here advocating a role for the PLO.

Sadat also disclosed that he and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will meet in Alexandria, Egypt, sometime before Begin visits the United States.

Begin's trip, scheduled for Sept. 9-10, has the same basic purposes as Sadat's: to get to know Reagan personally and to explore ways to resume the stalled Egyptian-Israeli negotiations on autonomy for the 1.2 million Palestinians on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Sadat has said he favors eventual creation of a separate Palestinian state, which Israel adamantly opposes.

Speaking at a news conference at Blair House, Sadat repeated his view that the United States should build on the current cease-fire in Lebanon by establishing a dialogue with the Palestinian people.

"This is not the only option or only alternative," Sadat said. He said the PLO is "not the sole representative of the Palestinians" and that there are others with whom the United States should be in contact.

Sadat planned to go to New York later today. It was learned that former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has accepted Sadat's invitation to accompany him on the flight.

Sadat is scheduled to receive an honorary degree at Georgetown University on Saturday and then go to Plains, Ga., for a private meeting and dinner with former President Carter on Sunday.

From all indications, Sadat and Reagan got along well, despite obvious differences on the role of the PLO, which Reagan has said he considers a terrorist organization.

"I think both leaders understood precisely the position of one another on this and accepted the position of each other," Haig told reporters at a news conference.

Workers Defy Polish Govm't In Walkout

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Nearly 1 million workers struck coal mines and factories in Poland's vital Silesian industrial belt for four hours today to protest the food crisis. The government accused the independent union of mounting "suicidal strikes."

But Solidarity union's regional board in Gdansk ignored the warning and scheduled a two-hour strike for Aug. 17 in the Baltic port to protest the "constantly deteriorating social and economic situation in the country and the lack of appropriate action by the government."

Solidarity was launched in Gdansk in a wave of strikes last summer, and the Soviet Union has been massing warships in the Baltic for weeks, apparently for a marine landing exercise on Soviet soil. The maneuvers could also be a warning to end labor unrest in this key Warsaw Pact ally. The Polish news agency PAP said, "The government ... has sufficient means to protect its citizens and is determined to prevent the provocation of anarchy and the continuation of action which endanger the country's stability."

The government accused the independent union's national leaders of showing "unprecedented arrogance." In a reference to the coal strikes, it said the "actions halting export ... border on sabotage."

A union spokesman said miners remained at the pitheads of at least 60 coal mines and refused to go underground when the day shift started at 6 a.m. He said workers in most big factories in the region joined the protest.

Prelates Plan To Mediate In Bolivia Rivalry

By JOHN ENDERS
Associated Press Writer
LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Roman Catholic prelates were expected to fly to southeast Bolivia today to try to mediate between army rebels there and the military junta in La Paz.

The junta, made up of the commanders of the three armed forces, announced Thursday night that the papal nuncio to Bolivia, Monsignor Alfio Rapisarda, and the president of the Bolivian Conference of Bishops, Monsignor Luis Rodriguez, agreed to its request to help end the four-day-old rebellion led by Gens. Lucio Anez Rivero and Alberto Natusch Busch.

A broadcast from Santa Cruz, the rebel headquarters and Colombia's second largest city, claimed that the insurgents controlled all of eastern Bolivia plus the provinces of Tarija and Potosi. It said the junta apparently had the support of the troops in La Paz, the capital, Cochabamba, the third largest city, and Oruro.

No fighting had been reported yet in the fourth flareup in three months of a power struggle within the ruling military establishment. Sources in La Paz said they heard rebel broadcasts Thursday night reporting some paramilitary units from the capital had landed at dirt airstrips near Santa Cruz and might have engaged rebel forces in combat. But the reports could not be confirmed.

Diplomatic and private sector sources said the junta had ordered troops and armored vehicles toward the rebel headquarters.

"I don't believe there will be a clash. The problem may be solved today," an army commander who asked not to be identified told The Associated Press today.

President Luis Garcia Meza, the head of the military regime since the generals ousted a civilian government in July 1980, resigned Tuesday and turned over the presidency to the armed forces chiefs. But Anez Rivero and Natusch said the resignation was a hoax and demanded that the junta negotiate with them.

The rebels also are demanding that the junta call all military commanders together to choose a president to rule Bolivia. Reports in La Paz also said the coup leaders want all top-level officials tied to the Garcia Meza government to be removed.

Garcia Meza, a former commander of the army, had been the target of three attempted coups by his military associates and one ouster attempt by the right-wing Falange Party. His place at the head of the regime in La Paz appeared to have been taken by Gen. Waldo Bernal, the air force commander and the senior member of the junta.

In an attempt to shake the military's control of the country, the outlawed but still potent labor federation, called a general strike earlier this week and said the workers would stay out until the junta resigned and democracy was restored.

The effect of the strike call was delayed until today because the junta decreed Wednesday a "no work" day and Thursday was the country's biggest national holiday, the 157th anniversary of independence from Spain. Meanwhile, labor leaders reported the arrest of a number of factory workers for supporting the rebellion.

However, the junta could do nothing about oil industry workers in the southeast oil fields who cut the pipeline supplying La Paz and Cochabamba. Estimates of the supply remaining in the two cities ranged from a week to a month.

La Paz was under nightly curfew, and daytime street traffic was greatly reduced during the two holidays. The rebel radio in Santa Cruz said most business activity there was also suspended, and troops from the 8th Division barracks were standing guard at intersections and other strategic points.

The rebel broadcast said a captain had been appointed mayor of Santa Cruz and other military officers had been named to police and government positions.

Strict censorship of the domestic media remained in force in La Paz, but two leading journalists arrested Wednesday were released after eight hours, a relative of one of them reported.

The journalists were the director of the morning newspaper Ultima Hora, former Education Minister Mariano Baptista Gumucio, and Jorge Rios Chacon, the editor of the afternoon paper Jornada. They were accused of publishing "exaggerated and false versions" of the rebellion.

Loses Round In Palimony Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor and musician Ringo Starr has lost a bid to have a "palimony" suit thrown out of court on grounds he was never served with the legal papers, an attorney says.

Lawyer Marvin Mitchelson, representing Nancy Andrews, said the California Supreme Court refused to hear Starr's challenge to the lawsuit. Miss Andrews, 32, lived with the 40-year-old former Beatles' drummer before his recent marriage to actress Barbara Bach.

According to Mitchelson, Starr claimed he never saw the legal papers informing him he had been sued.

Starr was not available for comment.

Williamston Board Talks Water Plans

WILLIAMSTON — The latest proposal for the water system for the Town of Williamston was presented to Williamston Town Commissioners at that board's August meeting. Administrative Assistant John Boykin said the proposal is for a new well, a 300,000 gallon elevated storage tank, and several loopings of water supply lines in areas considered critical.

The total cost is estimated to be about $650,000. Boykin said funding sources are being sought from Clean Water Bond monies, $160,000 at the state level and about $125,000 in FmHA and Coastal Plains Regional Association grants. These sources, however, would still leave about $350,000 to come from local sources.

Town officials are due to meet with county commissioners on August 11 to negotiate the possibility of getting funding for the water additions.

Questions were also raised about future plans to tie in the Everetts-Robersonville system, which is only about two miles away from the Williamston water system.

No action was taken on the proposal, and Boykin was asked to continue to pursue the matter for later consideration by the town board.

New Satellite Put Into Orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A 4,100-pound military satellite has joined four identical units in a space network that lets the president and commanding officers in the United States communicate with remote units anywhere in the world.

The latest satellite was fired into space early Thursday aboard an Atlas Centaur rocket. Officials at the satellite control center in Sunnyvale, Calif., will begin testing the spacecraft Tuesday, and it is expected to be fully operational within two months.

The cost of the system is more than $2 billion, officials said.

Noise At Jail Is Discussed In Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Excessive noise around the Martin County jail in Williamston was one of the agenda items considered by the Martin County Board of Commissioners at its August meeting.

Two residents who live near the jail informed commissioners that recently the situation has worsened. They related that in recent weeks groups gathered outside the jail, and profanity was shouted back and forth between those inside and the bystanders outside.

After a brief consultation with County Attorney William R. Peel, the board agreed to place "no loitering" signs in the area, and to instruct law enforcement officers to enforce action to avoid a similar situation arising again.

Relative to plans being considered for a new county jail or else for a bi-unit jail to serve both Martin and adjoining Bertie Counties, commissioners suggested another public hearing before further action is taken. Several commissioners noted that the public has not been given both sides of the story, citing the cost differential and some of the red tape that they say could be eliminated by a two county jail. At this point, the entire matter is still in the early planning stage.

In another action, commissioners voted to approve a resolution for selling revenue bonds in the amount of $10 million to help finance a pollution control project at the Weyerhaeuser Company facility on the Roanoke River near Plymouth.

Space Shuttle Role Is Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon has announced a 14-month delay in the launching of the first military payloads aboard the space shuttle because of a lag in construction at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

Pentagon officials privately acknowledged that this development will affect the use of the space shuttle to send spy satellites and other military spacecraft aboard Titan III rockets.

The Pentagon blamed the delay from August 1984 to October 1985 on a shortage of contractor engineering manpower at Vandenberg.

At the same time, the Air Force also disclosed a delay from this year until mid-1982 in the availability of an "internal upper stage" for the shuttle, which would be used to loft various space gear into higher orbits.

The announcement Thursday said this part of the project "will experience problems" and cancellation by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration of variants designed for planetary missions.

"A thorough Air Force review found the Inertial Upper Stage to be technically sound and capable of meeting all mission objectives," the Pentagon said.

According to the announcement, the Air Force has reached preliminary agreement with the Boeing Aerospace Corp. on renegotiation of the fullscale development contract for the IUS. It gave no details.

In a statement, Air Force Secretary Verne E. Orr said, "These program adjustments reflect the realities and uncertainties the Air Force faces rather than any change in our strong support for the space shuttle."

In the past, defense officials have predicted that by the mid-1980's the United States will be totally dependent on the manned shuttle placing satellites in orbit.

Life As It's Lived

Options: Do It Right, Or Just Get It Done

By GAIL MICHAELS
Phillip is a stickler for doing things right. That's probably why they rarely get done.

Take our family budget. I wanted to keep up with where the money was going. So Phillip bought a ledger book and ruled off so many columns that I had to use new math to count them. According to him, we should be keeping up with not only how much we spent and on what but what day we spent it, who spent it, how we paid for it, what general category the expenditure fell under, and for whom the purchase was intended. He even worked out a code so the information would not run off the page.

I managed to make the necessary entries for a month even though each entry, from a $150 car repair to a 25 cent candy bar, took at least 15 minutes. Phillip was not quite so persevering. He stopped after one day.

Approximately the same thing occurs when we're making any improvement on the house. For instance, last November I noticed a slight draft roaring across the floor of the den addition and threatening our lower extremities with frostbite. I suggested that we might need some insulation between the den wall and the wall to the storage room.

Phillip was aghast. How could I even think of doing such a halfway job? If we were going to the trouble and expense of insulating, we should insulate the whole room, top to bottom.

I am still tripping over one or two rolls of insulation every time I make a pilgrimage to the dryer.

Then there's the painting. Yes, we are still painting. We will still be painting when the $97.76 worth of paint we bought in July, 1980 turns black with age within the confines of its airtight cans. But I did make up my mind that while Meg was visiting her grandparents, we would paint her room.

So without consulting anyone I hired a babysitter for the Thursday morning before Meg's scheduled Saturday arrival and painted the ceiling. I planned to finish the next day.

"You didn't ask me first," was Phillip's reaction. "Do I need your permission?"

He was pouting. "You should have waited until I felt like it."

"I wanted to get it done before Meg leaves home for college."

"That's not fair."

"I thought it was overly optimistic."

"Very funny," he sniffed. "But if we're going to do it, we might as well do it right."

A figurative 500 pound barbell crashed into my diaphragm. "I don't want to do it right. I just want to get it done."

"Which is precisely why paint is all over the furniture." He pointed to a speck which would have been highly visible under a magnifying glass at high noon. "We have to move the furniture out."

Meg's bookcase alone weighs more than a pregnant elephant.

Even worse than moving the furniture was his insistence that we clean every spot of paint off the hardwood floor.

"But it will have a rug over it!" I protested.

"Have you no pride? What if we want to remove the rug at some point in time? What if we want to sell the house?"

"Phillip, the finish is worn off the floor! The splatters could only help its appearance."

My protests were to no avail. We finished up Monday evening. Meg had to spend two nights sleeping on a cot in the den sandwiched between the utility room door and three stacks of drawers.

Phillip started to step back to admire his work. "Now, aren't you glad we did it right?"

I couldn't help myself. I tripped him.

Dear Abby

Quarrels Cloud Wedding

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am terribly confused about what to do. I am going to marry a wonderful young man and have some tough decisions to make.

First, my parents have been divorced for six years. It was a very unfriendly divorce. My father remarried soon after. My mother is still alone and very bitter. My father is very well-to-do. He paid child support, and wasn't cheap about it, either.

I've always wanted a big, beautiful church wedding, which my mother can't afford, but my father can. However, he says he will pay for any kind of wedding I want if he can walk me down the aisle and bring his present wife.

My mother says if my father brings his wife she will not attend, but if he comes alone, he can walk me down the aisle. And, if he stands in the receiving line, she will not stand next to him. (Won't that look awfully peculiar?)

These problems are giving me a big headache. I'd almost be willing to settle for a little, tiny wedding, but my fiance's family knows that my father is rich, and they expect a big, splashy wedding. What should I do?

WEDDING BLUES

DEAR WEDDING BLUES: Look at the facts. Your father has agreed to give you a big, beautiful church wedding only if he can bring his present wife. Your mother says if the new wife comes, she will not attend. So assuming they both mean what they say, you will have to decide whether you want the big fancy wedding without your mother, or the tiny wedding within your mother's means with both parents.

If you choose the big church wedding, you won't have to worry about where your mother will stand in the receiving line because she won't be there.

I think you'd be much happier with both parents at a "little, tiny wedding."

DEAR ABBY: Lately at our family get-togethers, my children, who are themselves parents, use such foul language that it makes me ill. They never heard such language in our home.

Sometimes I feel I never again want to attend another family get-together, but since my husband's death two years ago, I need my children more than ever.

They all have college degrees and should know better. I am too embarrassed to ask my clergyman for advice.

Please, how can I stop the use of such foul language?

DISTRAUGHT MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You can let your children know that you are very much offended by foul language, then hope that out of respect for you, they will clean up their act — at least in your presence.

***

DEAR ABBY: Do you think it's wise to force a child to join something — like the Cub Scouts or Brownies?

I have been accused of allowing my children to rule me

sugar

2 tablespoons domestic or imported kirsch, if desired
Mixed cut-up fresh fruit: pineapple, membrane-free orange sections and strawberries or raspberries

Thoroughly crush raspberries in their syrup to make a thin puree; force through a fine-mesh strainer to eliminate seeds. Beat cream until thick, adding sugar and salt; add pureed berries and beat gently to blend. Turn into an ice-cube tray without dividers. Freeze until ice crystals form around the edge — this may be only 5 minutes; stir until smooth adding kirsch if used. Turn into four 1/2-cup souffle or other individual dessert dishes or glasses; freeze until firm; cover tightly; store in freezer. Before serving, let stand briefly at room temperature or in refrigerator to soften somewhat. Top with the mixed fruit. Makes 4 servings.

because I have given them a choice in such matters. It has been suggested that children are not always good judges of what they will or will not enjoy, that after having been exposed to something they were initially negative about, they changed their minds. What do you think?

YOUNG MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I wouldn't force a child to join anything. But if I thought he would benefit from the experience, I would present it in the most attractive way possible.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very frustrating problem. On many occasions my husband (I'll call him Joe) and I find ourselves spending vacations or holidays at the home of a relative. We have a wonderful time except when it comes time for bed, then Joe refuses to make love because he says it's not polite to make love in someone else's home. Abby, we have a separate room and all the privacy we need, but Joe is very stubborn about this.

This frustrates and infuriates me — especially when the vacations last a week or two. Joe and I have a very healthy relationship at home or in a hotel, and these loveless vacations are making me very unhappy. Can you help me?

DEPRIVED IN BUFFALO

DEAR DEPRIVED: Joe's inhibitions are not uncommon. I hope he is sufficiently considerate of your feelings to get professional help to overcome his hangups about boudoir behavior. The alternative is to stay at a hotel where you can both enjoy a carefree vacation, complete with marital relations. It's expensive. But having a frustrated and furious wife could be even more expensive.

DEAR ABBY: I cried when I read about the poor 11-year-old kid who still wets the bed, so his parents made him wear a diaper and put him out in the front yard where all his friends could see him.

Instead of writing to you about it, that neighbor should have called the proper authorities and had those parents arrested for child abuse!

They may not know it now, but they have lost their son. He will never forgive them to his dying day.

Restraint Saves Coast

Possibly, just possibly, the restraints of private enterprise will do what the Reagan administration, and especially Interior Secretary James Watt, would not do — save North Carolina's in-shore ocean floor from the trauma of an oil-drilling rig.

Bids were taken by the government Tuesday in a lease sale held in New Orleans. It became apparent that oil exploration companies aren't that anxious to tackle deep-water sites. Six environmentally sensitive tracts off Cape Lookout went without bids. That's not to say the companies weren't interested in any of the 130 tracts proposed for lease off North Carolina. One joint bid by Mobile, Amerada Hess and Marathon went for nearly $104 million for a 5,700-acre tract 50 miles east of Cape Hatteras.

But the most interest lay in those disputed tracts off Cape Lookout. Governor Hunt, backed by environmentalists, had opposed the lease of those tracts on the basis they posed to much risk to the shoreline in the event of an oil spill. Hunt threatened to go to court to block the move, but decided to await the outcome of Tuesday's sale. At first blush that now appears to be a moot question. The exploration companies have shown they are going to be selective before gambling doubly in their search for new oil. Those offshore tracts are unproven, and some are as much as 6,000 feet underwater. That's six times as great as the deepest offshore well so far placed in production in U.S. coastal waters.

Blood Need Is Critical Now

Blood collections are down now, so much so that a special blood collection was scheduled at the Greenville Moose Lodge today.

By the time this is read it will be too late to donate today, but it should serve as a reminder that the blood need is critical this time of the year. With people vacationing, donations on the regularly scheduled blood visits fall short in the summer, but the need continues high.

There will be another visit of the Bloodmobile here at the Moose Lodge on Aug. 19. We can all do something for our fellow citizens, and perhaps for our loved ones or ourselves. We can visit the Bloodmobile and donate on its next visit.

Confidence Counts

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — It doesn't matter how good a job government is doing, when there is crookedness — or even the appearance of wrongdoing — any program is a house of cards and comes tumbling down in the eyes of the taxpaying public.

This worries Gov. Jim Hunt who, among his campaign themes in seeking his first term in office more than four years ago, pledged his efforts to restoring trust and confidence in government. That was in the days following Watergate and its aftermath when politicians ranked low in public esteem.

Gov. Hunt put in several reforms: ethics pledge for high state officials, financial disclosure forms, and in the earlier legislative roles worked for campaign reporting laws.

Now, he chairs a committee of the National Democratic Party which will suggest essential changes in the nominating procedures which of themselves will necessarily speak to the honor and integrity of individuals chosen for high national office.

Clean

In North Carolina, always proud of her designation as a state of good and clean government, there has been one after another revelation of ethical problems. The Job Service chief buys expensive photographs of himself, a state farm employee peddles peaches to his wife's produce stand; a highway official accepts a driveway paving job; the lieutenant governor admits to taking a cash gift from a paving contractor; and a host of respected businessmen go to jail for cheating while doing business with the state.

Those almost weekly shockwaves give every responsible citizen pause for concern. Gov. Hunt is among those who believes that government employees — and that includes elected officials at the top or file clerks low on the payroll — must put first priority on legal and moral behavior. Government, and that includes the public and press, must be on constant lookout for people at all levels who are not carrying through properly, the governor feels.

Even minor things such as peaches or pictures are important. They are important both in and of themselves, but also as symbols, says Gov. Hunt. "I don't care how well you do a job, if people don't trust you, they are going to lose faith in government," he feels.

You have to work hard and be alert at all time to guard against unethical behavior, especially at lower levels where the stakes are smaller and the scrutiny not as strong as it is at the top, Hunt believes.

In his unique dual capacity as governor and national committee chairman in the Democratic party, Hunt has had some thoughts as to what needs to be done to make certain this message gets to all levels of government, and that both the public and government officials remain constantly concerned with proper behavior.

Policy

"We should have an overt policy communicated to the people at all levels as to what constitutes legal and ethical behavior. You start at the top.

"There should be a clear definition of overall general policies and procedures...and ethics orders at all branches of government must be made known to individuals, and the rules ought to be rigorously enforced.

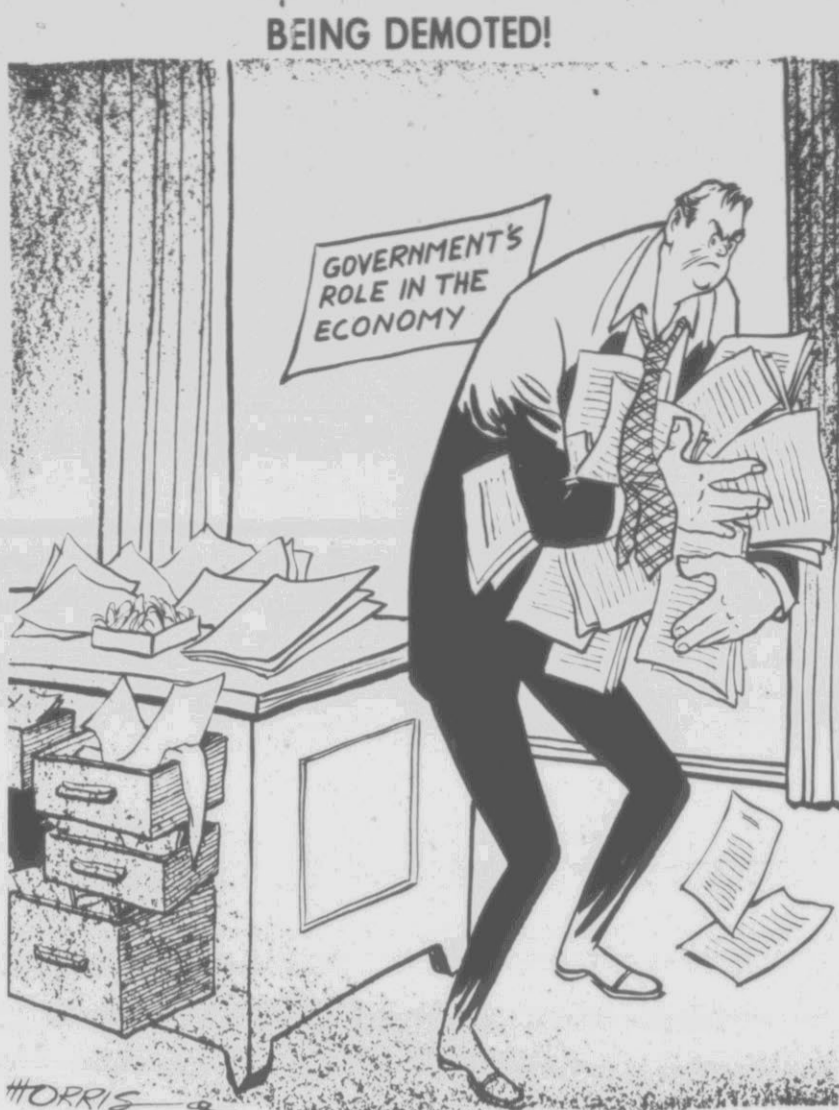

"All of us must be on the constant lookout for people at all levels who are not carrying through."

Meanwhile, back at the top, several measures in the 1981 General Assembly attempted to spell out ethical codes for legislators themselves, but were scuttled. One would have denied expensive gifts, and another would have deprived lawmakers of the endless cocktail parties and dinners which they enjoy nightly while in Raleigh as guests of rich and powerful special interest groups. The efforts at reform were scuttled, but sponsors promise to keep trying.

The Scenario Changeth

The tight money market has caused a complete switch in the thinking of our nation's banks. There was a time when bankers were on their knees begging people to borrow money from them, and everyone had a "friend" at the bank down the street. But now the situation has changed, and it's getting harder and harder to get a loan.

The other day, a man I know walked into a bank in Washington and said to one of the assistant vice presidents, "Hello, friend."

"I'm not your friend," the vice president said. "I have no friends."

"Don't you remember me?" the man said. "I was in here a year ago and wanted to borrow fifteen hundred dollars, and you said I could have three thousand because you liked the suit I was wearing."

"I remember," the VP said.

"And you told me any time I wanted any money to just walk in with a satchel and I could have it. Remember?"

"I may have said it. So what?"

"Well, here I am back again, and I just thought I'd like to have about five thousand to tide me over for six months or so. I brought my satchel with me, hah, hah, hah."

"I couldn't give you five hundred. What's the matter? Do you think banks are made of money?"

"Well, you don't have to get sore."

"Don't tell me not to get sore. Why can't you live within your means like everyone else? That's all people ever think about these days, borrowing money. Haven't you ever heard of thrift?"

"Gosh, I'm sorry. I didn't realize that borrowing was wrong."

"Of course not. You just think any time you run out of money, you can hop down to a bank with a satchel and say, 'Fill it up.' Well, mister, I've got news for you. We're wise to people like you. If you can't make a go of it on your income, we're not about to help you over the rough spots."

"But there's a big neon sign outside that says, 'We Make Loans Any Time, Anywhere to Anybody.'"

"We wouldn't even take the Ford plant in Dearborn for five thousand dollars, if you want the truth. Now are you going to go quietly, or do you want to be arrested for disturbing the peace?"

"I just can't understand it. You are the same man I talked to a year ago, aren't you?"

"No banker is the same man you talked to a year ago," the VP said, wiping away a tear.

"Gee, I didn't mean to make you cry."

Now the VP was sobbing uncontrollably. "If you want to know the real reason you can't have a loan, it's that we don't have any money."

"That's awful," the man said. "Is there anything I can do?"

"That doesn't mean you," the VP said.

"Look, I've got collateral. I could put up my house against the loan."

"Well, isn't that a nice thing to do? You'd risk your house and the welfare of your family for five thousand dollars. Don't you have any shame?"

"I hadn't thought of it that way," the man said. "I have a car. Would you take that?"

Retirement Door Open

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beginning next January, all working Americans will be allowed to open up a personal tax-deferred retirement account — an investment opportunity now set aside only for those without an on-the-job pension plan.

Under the new tax law, all 99 million working Americans could set up an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) or a comparable Keogh plan if they are self-employed.

The measure, approved by Congress and awaiting President Reagan's signature, is intended to stimulate savings and reduce dependence on the ailing Social Security system.

Under current law, only people without group pension plans can open an IRA. But starting next Jan. 1, an estimated 45 million Americans covered by pension plans can start individual accounts, too, and those already eligible will be able to put more away each year without paying taxes on the money until it is withdrawn.

A major reason for the change is to reverse a sharp decline in the nation's savings rate, one of the principal goals of Reagan's economic program.

However, it is not just coincidence that incentives to set up individual pension plans are being increased at a time when the administration is pushing to reduce future Social Security benefits, both to shore up the financially troubled system and to achieve budget savings.

"The primary reason (for the legislation) is to encourage people to make provisions for their own retirement income because we don't want to continue the burden on Social Security," said Norman B. Ture, undersecretary of the treasury for tax policy.

Congress, which is reluctant to enter the political maelstrom created by the administration's proposed Social Security cuts, appeared to act more out of concern for increasing personal savings so that more money would be available for investment and interest rates would come down. But the desire to reduce future pensioners' reliance on Social Security was also a consideration, congressional aides report.

Currently, those eligible to set up an IRA can place no more than 15 percent of their income in an account, up to $1,500 a year. The new law would let anyone deposit all of his or her income in an IRA, up to $2,000 a year.

A married couple with both spouses working can set aside up to $4,000 a year, providing each has a separate account with no more than $2,000 a year added. A couple with one working spouse can set aside up to $2,250 a year divided between two accounts, up from $1,750 under current law.

Self-employed individuals, who can contribute to their own retirement under a system known as a Keogh plan, also could increase their annual tax-deferred contributions. The current limit is 15 percent of compensation up to $7,500; the new law would retain the percentage figure but raises the dollar ceiling to $15,000.

The broadened incentives for both types of retirement plans will cost the Treasury an estimated $9.1 billion in lost revenue through 1986.

Tax-deferred pension plans, which first came into existence in 1975, have not been very popular with the public, but the administration hopes the new incentives will change that.

According to the latest available IRS records, only 2.4 million people had IRAs in 1978, with the average account holding just $1,247. Another 627,000 people had Keogh accounts, with an average deposit of $3,178.

Thirty-seven percent of IRAs are held by people with incomes under $20,000 a year, 27 percent by people with incomes between $20,000 and $30,000 and 36 percent by people with incomes of more than $30,000, the IRS records show.

Most experts expect IRAs to appeal primarily to middle-income groups. Low-income people usually cannot afford to put savings away until retirement, and wealthy people would find little appeal in a plan limited to a $2,000 annual contribution when they could invest far larger sums in tax-exempt bonds.

Contributions to the retirement accounts and the interest that accrues in them are exempt from federal taxes until funds are withdrawn. Withdrawals cannot begin until a person reaches age 59½ or dies, in which case the account can be closed by heirs.

When a person turns 70½, withdrawals must begin at a rate that assumes the account would be emptied within the remaining years of the person's life.

Contributions Can Be Doubled

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You may for the moment have had your fill about taxes, but could you spare another few minutes to consider an ingenious suggestion from the president of the University of Rochester?

There's a reason it may be worth your time: It could almost double your charitable contributions — to arts, education, medicine, religion — without costing you an extra penny.

As a university president, Robert L. Sproull observed that most people who give to his institution are also corporate shareholders. He reasoned:

If these shareholders could tell their companies to donate some of their dividends to charity, instead of accepting the dividends and then making the contributions, the university would gain enormously.

It works this way:

—Corporations can donate money to charitable causes and institutions before calculating profits. Whatever a corporation gives, up to 5 percent is free of federal income taxes.

—Money that a corporation sends to shareholders as dividends is taxed. That is, the dividends to the shareholder are paid after the corporation allows for taxes. And the corporate tax rate is 46 percent.

—If the shareholder decided to forego dividends, telling the company instead to donate the equivalent to charity, that contribution would go to the charity untaxed. The charity would get $185 instead of $100.

Assuming that the shareholder would have given $100 anyway, he or she is no worse off financially. The corporation also is no worse off either. And the recipient has received an 85 percent increase in support.

By now, it is obvious that there is a loser: The Internal Revenue Service. But from most appearances, little has been done to violate the tax code, either in the letter or the spirit thereof.

It is timely too. Government has cut back support of many non-profit cultural and educational activities, so a gap has to be filled. And some foundations are not as able as they were to contribute funds.

Furthermore, as a vehicle of tax-free contributions, corporations have a long way to go before meeting the maximum allowable contributions. Few companies give more than 1 percent, although last year, for the first time, corporations gave more to charities than did foundations.

Well, what holds up implementation of the plan? There seems to be some question among lawyers and accountants about whether the dividend that shareholders did NOT receive might be taxable to them as if they had received it, under the obscure doctrine of Constructive Receipt.

For these purposes, the less said about the doctrine the better. Its mere existence, however, makes Sproull anxious for an IRS ruling and anxious also for a congressional bill to clear the air and encourage corporations to institute the plan. Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., are now working on that particular angle.

There is another reason also for wanting a bill: Some of the biggest investors and recipients of dividends are themselves classified as charitable organizations. Without legislation, complaints might arise about their desire to receive $185 for every $100 of dividends unreceived.

Sproull remains mystified why it hadn't been proposed before, and reasons that the idea may have come to him because of his many roles.

He is a physicist who sees beauty in efficiency, a donor who seeks the most from contributions, a president who must always seek funds and a corporate director who appreciates turning $1 into $1.85.

He declines to estimate the potential dollars involved, but he knows that a major problem of non-profit organizations would be eased if donors contributed partly through corporations rather than directly.

Moreover, he maintains that giving through the company is corporate democracy in action, more so even than the annual meeting.

It would mean, he said, that shareholders "can be an invisible hand vectoring the company, at no cost to the corporation."

expectancy. As money is withdrawn, it is treated as regular income and taxed at the prevailing rates.

If money is withdrawn early, the individual must pay a penalty fee equal to 10 percent of the assets on top of the regular income taxes.

However, for people in high tax brackets, congressional experts say, the additional interest that accrues from avoiding annual tax payments offsets the early-withdrawal penalty within five to eight years. In other words, even after paying the penalty, an individual could come out ahead by putting money in an IRA for up to eight years instead of in a regular, taxable savings account.

If an IRA is started next January, the penalty for early withdrawal could be offset through tax savings within three or four years because of Reagan's plan to cut tax rates by 25 percent over three years, according to the congressional tax lawyers. The reason for this is that the interest income would not be taxed until after the rates have been lowered.

Officials in the administration and Congress g their IRA's as temporary tax shelters rather than as long-term retirement plans, but they said few people are likely to withdraw funds early except in financial emergencies.

The law requires that a bank, insurance company or other financial institution serve as a custodian of an IRA to guarantee the account's long-term security. Some institutions charge management fees, but others do not.

There are no requirements that limit rates of return or how the money is to be invested except that the new bill would no longer allow rare coins, antiques, art objects and other "collectibles" to be used in lieu of cash contributions, as permitted under current law.

As an alternative to setting up an individual account, a person could receive the same tax benefit by contributing up to $2,000 a year to his or her pension plan, providing that the payment is voluntary and does not increase employer contributions in any way.

New Zealand Stakes A Claim To Orville Wright's Record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Orville Wright has always been given history's credit for the first manned, powered, controlled, heavier-than-air flight.

But a replica of a canvas-and-bamboo contraption that originally had tobacco cans for pistons and cast iron drainpipes for cylinders has arrived from New Zealand to challenge that long-held assumption.

The Wright brothers' 12-second flight at Kitty Hawk took place Dec. 17, 1903.

But Gordon Barnaby of the Museum of Transport and Technology of New Zealand, says that two years earlier, on March 31, 1902, a farmer considered a madman by his neighbors took off in his homemade motorized plane from an escarpment on the South Island of New Zealand. Richard Pearse flew at an altitude of 30 feet for five-eighths of a mile and landed in a riverbed.

Barnaby brought a replica of Pearse's plane to Los Angeles, where it went on display Thursday at the World Trade Center. It will remain for two weeks.

But aside from a neighbor and his sister, the only witnesses to Pearse's achievement were a gaggle of schoolchildren.

And Pearse lived the life of a loner, working on airplanes, and dying in frustration and anonymity in 1958.

Five years later, a former pilot was rummaging through an old barn. He found precise drawings, written descriptions and remnants of what appeared to be a crude airplane in a nearby rubbish dump.

Those few witnesses have since been coming forward, telling what they saw 79 years ago.

"The noise just about drowned you," said Pearse's sister, who lives in a rest home in Auckland.

An elderly witness, Robert Gibson, told a film crew: "This (paddock) was one to two miles from Pearse's workshop. And he had apparently transported the machine with the aid of two horses and a dray."

"On the first attempt, the plane, which was headed in a westerly direction, ran into a gorse-covered hollow where the propeller was apparently damaged.

"Then he made a second attempt. The engine started with a frightening noise. Some boys commenced pushing, and as the plane gathered speed they were left behind. They watched as the machine turned over the cliff to the right and flew up the Ophi River until it disappeared behind a pine plantation."

New Zealand scholars have decided that the flight path would have first curved left and then made a gradual swing to the right.

"He probably steered by shifting his weight in the seat," Barnaby theorized.

But there is still a question on whether the flight was controlled, and that's important, according to Claudia Oakes, curator of aeronautics of the National Air and Space Museum in the Smithsonian Institution.

"The distinction that made the Wright flights the first practical ones is that they were sustained, controlled, powered, manned heavier than air — and that the machine landed at a point higher than or equal to the height at which it took off," she said.

Pearse's first flight definitely ended at a lower altitude than it began, but he is said to have made two more flights the following year, still before the Wright brothers. About 35 witnesses have claimed to have seen at least one of the ascents and 15 have signed affidavits.

Man Is Struck By Car, Truck

WILLIAMSTON — A 53-year old man was killed in Williamston just before midnight Wednesday when he was struck, first by a car, then by a tractor-trailer truck.

Alton Smith was the victim of the incident, placed at about 11:55 p.m. Wednesday. The victim, who has reportedly been in ill health, had visited Martin General Hospital and was walking on his way home when struck on the U.S. 264 east by-pass.

According to the report of George Fink, chief investigator for the Williamston Police Department, Smith was struck by a car when he attempted to cross the four-lane road and was thrown onto the roadway. A tractor-trailer truck also struck Smith, and then continued without stopping.

The victim was pronounced dead on arrival at Martin General.

The police department is continuing investigation and has not released the name of the person driving the car that first struck Smith. An alert has been put out in an effort to locate the driver of the hit and run truck.

Embezzling Count For 3 Teamsters

DETROIT (AP) — The former president of a Teamsters' local and two current officers have been indicted on charges of embezzling union funds to finance their re-election campaigns.

They were expected to be arraigned on the charges today.

A federal grand jury Thursday accused Robert A. Lins, 55, of Southgate, of conspiring to grant pay raises to union business agents, who then were ordered to pay $100 a month to Lins and the other two defendants between 1978 and 1980.

Lins narrowly was defeated in a re-election bid last year as president of Teamsters Local 299, the home local of former Teamsters international presidents James R. Hoffa and Frank Fitzsimmons.

Also charged in Thursday's indictment were Local 299's vice president, Raymond H. Banks, 47, of Milan, and a Local 299 executive board member, Eugene Davis, 53, of Brighton. Lins also was accused of obstruction of justice by threatening to harm one of Local 299's business agents who had testified before the federal grand jury investigating the case last February.

Lins' attorney, Norman Lippett, said his client was innocent of the accusations. Lins, Banks and Davis were unavailable for comment.

The conspiracy and embezzlement charges carry maximum penalties of five years in prison and $10,000 fines. The obstruction of justice charge carries a maximum five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Carter Planning Welcome Sadat

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter plans "a good Georgia welcome" for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat when he visits Carter's home here this weekend, aides say.

An open invitation has been issued to the public, and free cold drinks will be served during welcoming ceremonies Sunday for Sadat and his wife, Jihan. The Egyptian president arrived in the United States earlier this week and met with President Reagan in Washington.

Sadat and Carter became close friends during the 1978 Camp David peace meetings with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Welcoming ceremonies are scheduled for late Sunday afternoon at the Plains softball field, where both men are expected to speak.

European Air Controllers Threaten U.S. Flights

By ANDREW WARSHAW
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — European air traffic controllers are threatening to close their airports to U.S. planes in support of their striking American colleagues.

The executive board of the 60-nation International Federation of Air Traffic Controller Associations called on unions in member nations Thursday to "consider refusing air traffic control services to U.S. registered airplanes."

That would mean, for example, that the pilot of an American flight from New York to London would be told before takeoff that British controllers would not handle its arrival in London, aviation sources said. The same message would be given to pilots before takeoff from London to New York.

However, the IFATCA recommendation to member unions is a recommendation, not an instruction, said Ted Bradshaw, one of the five members of the organization's executive board.

It is up to the individual unions to decide what action to take, according to their constitutions, Bradshaw said. Some already have decided to send condemnatory messages to President Reagan, while others are pushing for an all-out strike against U.S. carriers, he added.

Bradshaw said it would take several days to see what would happen. He noted that the organization's executive board was required to take a unanimous decision.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Dennis Feldman said he didn't think IFATCA's recommendation would have any immediate effect. He called it a hypothetical problem since the organization was asking its members to consider a proposal.

Federation President Harri Henschler said IFATCA also asked its member unions not to clear planes of any nationality across U.S. borders. Each pilot would then have to decide whether he wanted to enter airspace declared unsafe by the controllers at his departure point.

Henschler said the federation is concerned that following the firing of striking American controllers, the United States will offer "a substitute system staffed by unqualified personnel."

"Member associations will not clear aircraft into airspace under the jurisdiction of such substitute service," Henschler said in Edmonton, Canada, Thursday. "It has thus become the responsibility of the pilots and the airline industry to ensure safe entry into U.S.-controlled airspace."

He said the action would "absolve air traffic controllers outside the United States from any legal liability as to the safe conduct of the flight while within U.S.-controlled airspace."

"Every member in Europe is firmly behind some form of action" to support the strike by members of the U.S. Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, or PATCO, Bradshaw said.

Most foreign controllers' unions focused their anger on the Reagan administration's firing of the strikers.

The Italian controllers' union began a "work-to-rule" action Thursday afternoon to "underline their opposition to the unjustifiable actions of the American government and their support of the right to strike."

The Italian union said its controllers were following regulations strictly even if they slowed down the system. But the action reportedly had no immediate effect on Italy's air traffic.

The FAA should be "sitting round the table talking instead of behaving like 19th century Victorian mill-owners who slapped people in jail because they didn't like what they were doing," said Doug Bush of the Institute of Professional Civil Servants, representing Britain's 1,500 most senior air controllers.

Bush said representatives of the British controllers sent a message of sympathy to the American union.

Other statements of sympathy for the U.S. controllers went out from France and Denmark. Dutch controllers formally asked Reagan to cancel the firing of the strikers.

Strikes by air traffic controllers occur frequently in those European countries that permit strikes by government employees, and slowdowns are a favorite tactic of controllers in the countries that prohibit strikes.

Controllers and other government employees are barred from striking in France, West Germany, Denmark and Spain. Strikes are legal in Britain, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and Greece.

None of the European controllers has ever been told to end a strike or be fired. The West German government did take action against leaders of a sick-in eight years ago. But other job actions, both legal and illegal, have ended in negotiated settlements that returned the controllers to their jobs.

IF YOU LIKE THEM UGLY — Fawn II, a one-year-old Chinese Shar-Pei who some describe as looking like an unmade bed, took top prize recently at the Petalumas (Calif.) Ugly Dog contest. Her owner, Ernest Albright, said the dogs are bred for the loose skin effect, but Fawn "is more wrinkled than most". Judge voted Fawn "the ugliest by any standards". (AP Laserphoto)

Battleship At Refitting Port

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Amos Brown had to wait a couple of hours, but the old friend he remembered from the Korean War did not disappoint him.

As he stood on the harbor pier Thursday peering into the fog, Brown said, "I'll wait all day if I have to."

Brown, of Buena Park, was among about 200 spectators who awaited the arrival of the USS New Jersey, one of the largest battleships ever built. He was stationed aboard the ship during the Korean War.

The old warship, pulled by six tugboats, rounded the breakwater to cheering from the relatives of its crew and other spectators.

The ship, which has been in mothballs for the last 12 years, will be in Long Beach for the next two years preparing for its fourth commissioning as part of the Navy's plan to refit older battleships for use in modern warfare.

The USS New Jersey is 870 feet long, weighs more than 42,000 tons and is just two feet shy of being able to scrape the sides of the Panama Canal.

It has been commissioned three times; the first was a year after Pearl Harbor for its deployment in the South Pacific.

After being taken out of service for two years following World War II, it was reactivated for the Korean War in 1950.

The battleship was decommissioned again in 1957, and brought back 11 years later for a short tour of duty in the Vietnam War.

The New Jersey will undergo a $326 million overhaul, which includes installation of missile systems, updated communications and electronic equipment, landing facilities for helicopters, conversion of its engines to cheaper distillate fuel, and rearming of its guns.

The ship was moved 1,322 miles from Puget Sound Naval Shipyard in Washington.

As many as 1,000 spectators had come out to greet the New Jersey in the morning, but the numbers dwindled as the fog hung low over the harbor.

Retiree Back In Controller Post

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN
Associated Press Writer
WINTHROP, Mass. (AP) — Since he retired 10 months ago, Harry Collignon has remained within eyeshot and earshot of his old workplace — Logan International Airport, across Boston Harbor from his home here.

"I live on the waterfront, and the backyard is right on the harbor. I can look right at the Logan tower. I have a monitor and I monitor the tower frequency at home," he said.

In the midst of the air traffic controllers' strike, Collignon, 57, decided to get further from the airport but closer to the job. He was back at work today at an administrative post at the New England regional headquarters of the Federal Aviation Administration in Burlington, Mass.

His move frees a younger man for duty as a controller.

"I'm tickled pink to be back," said Collignon. He is one of five retired men back on the job in New England, said FAA spokesman Dave Rickard.

"Retirement is the hard part. All of a sudden, you find yourself in a world by yourself and with your wife, which is fine," said Collignon.

"But you've been trained to work all your life with a group and with problems.

Suddenly, there's no group and there are no problems. You begin to wonder what happened. I'd like to see the controllers get back to work. But I'm happy."

Collignon retired Nov. 5 as chief of operations for the New England region, ending a 35-year federal career, including four years as a Navy pilot in World War II and 15 years as an air controller. Since November, he and his wife have sailed a boat he bought.

While on duty, Collignon says he'll be paid the difference between his pension and the salary rating of a Government Service rank No. 14, one below his last FAA rank.

"I don't have the figures in my head," Collignon said. "But I'd volunteer to go back at no salary."

"After hearing about the strike situation going on in air traffic control, I felt possibly I could lend a hand in some administrative function to relieve someone who was current with procedure and could return to a control position."

"With that in mind, I called the FAA and I'm back at work."

"I think the FAA can handle the strike. I feel the American air traffic system is the best in the world and I just want to support it.

Reagan Begins Long Vacation

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A jovial President Reagan is back at his beloved ranch for his longest vacation since the inauguration and the longest by any president in more than a decade.

Reagan, on his fourth trip to the ranch since he took office, was expected to remain in California until Sept. 3. That would make his trip only two days shorter than President Nixon's Aug. 9-Sept. 8 "working vacation" in 1969.

After an uneventful five-hour flight from Washington, during which aides said Reagan cleared his briefcase, the president transferred to a Marine helicopter for the last leg of his journey to his mountain retreat.

About 20 striking air traffic controllers picketed the gate at Point Mugu Naval Air Station where the presidential jet landed Thursday night. They were not permitted on the base, and Reagan, who has ordered striking controllers fired, did not see them.

The Boeing 707 known as Air Force One when the president is aboard was guided through the flight, as usual, by civilian controllers at air traffic control centers along the route.

"The plane does have priority wherever it flies, strike or no strike," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters on the plane. Earlier, the head of White House military office, Edward V. Hickey Jr., had predicted a routine flight, despite the strike. "There's no impeding the travel of the commander-in-chief," he said.

The jet costs $5,221 an hour to operate. The helicopter cost $840 an hour.

Speakes said Reagan was "cracking jokes" during his helicopter ride from the White House to Andrews Air Force Base and talking about riding horses and chopping wood — his two favorite activities at his 688-acre ranch overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

In Santa Barbara, about 20 miles away, a contingent of aides set up what was called a "miniature executive office of the president" at the Biltmore Hotel "just so the president can function as he would at the White House."

However, the president's White House routine will not be duplicated since just one staff aide, David Fisher, was expected to travel to the ranch daily. The others were staying behind in Santa Barbara to take care of paperwork, such as preparing prospective appointments and bills for signature.

Another group of aides — those who always remain with the president — will work in six temporary buildings whose construction at the ranch grounds was completed recently at an estimated cost of $770,000.

They include the president's doctor, the military aide who has custody of the "football" — the briefcase containing codes for launching nuclear weapons — and communications aides.

Secret Service agents are staying in a Santa Barbara motel and will travel to the ranch in shifts.

Speakes said Reagan will be briefed on the latest developments on the air traffic controllers strike by deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver, who is in Santa Barbara, or by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis in Washington.

Though he will spend most of the next four weeks at the ranch with his wife, the president planned two side trips to Los Angeles. He also will attend three cocktail parties, fund-raisers for the state Republican party, which hopes to gross $500,000, according to Edward Rollins, deputy to political director Lyn Nofziger.

Reagan's daughter, Maureen, is a possible candidate for the U.S. Senate from California.

As for official business, Reagan will sign, probably next week, his most treasured legislative victory, a bill cutting federal income tax rates by 25 percent over three years.

He also will receive each day a written national security briefing compiled in Washington by his national security adviser, Richard V. Allen.

CHECKING FOR CORN EARWORMS — With the recent hot weather, farmers should check carefully for the presence of corn earworms in soybean fields, according to local agricultural extension agents. To check the population of corn earworms in a field, a beat sheet, shown above, should be placed between two rows of beans, and each side shaken vigorously. The number of earworms on the sheet should be counted, and if the number nears or exceeds 12, treatment of the field for the worms is recommended. Soybean growers having questions or threshold levels of earworms should contact the Agricultural Extension Office at 758-1196 for more information. Above, Pitt extension agent Roger Cobb, left, checks for threshold levels with Dan Wynne, right, on his farm. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Judge Refuses Change Scene Of Hobby Trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge refused Thursday to move the fraud and conspiracy trial of state AFL-CIO President Wilbur Hobby to Richmond, Va.

U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt denied defense motions that pre-trial publicity had damaged Hobby's chances for a fair trial in North Carolina.

The move clears the way for Hobby to be tried Aug. 24 in Raleigh on charges of fraud and conspiracy in the alleged misuse of federal job-training funds.

Defense attorneys argued that Hobby could not get a fair trial because of adverse publicity in newspapers and on television and because of advertisements put out by the Raleigh-based Congressional Club.

But Britt said he thought some recent news accounts actually had been beneficial to the labor leader.

"I have great faith in the citizen of this country to tell me he believes in the presumption of innocence and will apply it to this case," Britt told a courtroom filled with Hobby supporters. "If my faith is misplaced ... I believe I can find that out in jury selection ... and then I would not hesitate to move this case."

In a hearing on the defense motion, James Luginbuhl, a psychology professor at North Carolina State University, said surveys of former jurors revealed widespread prejudice against Hobby.

He said he surveyed about 301 former jurors and found that 80 percent of those who have an opinion about Hobby's guilt or innocence believe he is guilty.

"To me the appropriate remedy would be a change of venue to where people are not familiar with Wilbur Hobby," Luginbuhl said.

U.S. Attorney James Blackburn challenged the results of the survey, saying that Luginbuhl selected responses to make it appear that prejudice against Hobby was more widespread than it actually is.

Hobby is accused of conspiring to defraud the U.S. government of $27,900 in federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds.

Indictments specify that Hobby made personal use of CETA transportation funds that were allocated to his business, Precision Graphics Inc. He also is charged with conspiring to overcharge CETA for transportation fees for students who took courses at Precision Graphics.

In addition to the motion to move the trial, defense attorneys Thursday asked that indictments against Hobby and two alleged co-conspirators — Mort Levi and Robert L. Hughes Jr. — be dismissed.

Britt, who denied similar motions in the case last month, did not rule on the request.

In One Year: Shriveled Fields To A Bumper Crop

By PHYLIS MENSING
Associated Press Writer
GARDNER, N.D. (AP) — The farmers watched helplessly as their thirsty fields shriveled in the heat. Crop yields hit a 20-year low, and they tightened their belts to get through the winter. A few didn't make it.

That was last year. This spring brought rain and revival for both the fields and farmers' spirits. Planted acreage — 12 million — set a record, and although a July heat wave made some early yields disappointing, the comeback still looks dramatic.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimated on July 1 that North Dakota fields would yield a record 365 million bushels of wheat this year, an average of 31 bushels an acre, to lead the country in production.

If the estimates are correct, the state will produce 223 million bushels of hard red spring wheat, double last year's crop; 138 million bushels of durum wheat, used in making pasta products, an 89 percent increase; and 3.7 million bushels of winter wheat, more than three times the 1980 figure.

Kansas, the traditional wheat leader, is suffering from frost damage and is expected to drop to second this year with 305 million bushels.

Cautious North Dakota farmers warn that the crop isn't in the bin yet. But as harvest gets into full swing, there's a feeling of pride and relief as they look at the golden fields.

"I never like to see another farmer take a loss," Blake Humphrey said above the roar of the combine in his barley field. He bought his father's farm in 1948 after working in the shoe business. His 31-year-old son will farm the land after him.

Last year, Humphrey got roughly five bushels an acre from one 80-acre soybean field. It didn't even fill one truck. His 480 acres of wheat averaged 20 bushels an acre or less — about half the normal yield.

"I really don't think any business or farmer could have stood another year like that," said Humphrey, whose 1,280 acres lie near Gardner, about 40 miles from Fargo. "There's more farmers looking for a good crop this year than there have been for a long time."

"You keep saying, it's going to rain, it's got to rain."

But last year it didn't. It never got better."

He had saved enough money and diversified his crops enough to make it through the winter. Some farmers in southwestern North Dakota weren't so lucky. Caught between drought and high interest rates, they had to sell.

The cities also felt the drought's pinch. In Fargo, Duane Mastel bought out his partner's share of their farm implement business and tried to cut expenses and management staff.

"The large-ticket item purchases are still somewhat slow, due to the high cost of interest, and farmers want that crop in the bin before they start buying those kinds of things," Mastel said this week. "But the small-ticket items, under $10,000, have picked up since May. Everybody's much more optimistic."

There's plenty of wheat around — the current crop is projected at a record 2.81 billion bushels and the country's stockpiles were already at 991 million bushels June 1 — and the market has been sluggish lately.

"We don't have the feeling the farmer is making a big plunge just because he's got a good crop out there," said Doug Larson, vice president of administration for the Production Credit Association in Fargo. "Unless there's some big change, I don't look for any wholesale buying (of equipment and supplies) like we've seen other years."

Indeed, farmers are worried that as the supply of wheat goes up, the prices they get might go down.

"With the heavy crop estimates and lack of much Soviet demand, we looked at things being pretty bleak as far as prices were concerned," Neal Fisher, marketing director for the state Wheat Commission, said.

"It's looking a little better right now. At least we're talking to the Soviets, and the Chinese are supposed to buy more. But looking at sheer supply and demand, there is very little room for optimism."

On Wednesday the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to extend their grain sales pact for a year. The extension provides for the same Soviet purchases of American corn and wheat as did the previous five-year pact, which was to expire Sept. 30 — 6 million metric tons minimum and 8 million metric tons maximum without further consultation.

The Minneapolis price for hard red spring wheat hit a high of just over $5 per bushel last October, and has gone down since. Last week it was $4.40. Durum was $7.25 last July, $4.85 this summer.

Farmers also worry about heat damage and insects after days of 100-degree temperatures in July, and some parts of the state are still dry. The looks of the crop could be deceiving, they say.

"This is Democrat wheat," declared Humphrey, a staunch conservative, as he held it up. "It looks promising, but it doesn't produce anything."

He predicted his wheat would have 3 percent to 5 percent damage.

"I've really never seen the valley look better. I just don't believe it's quite as good as it looks."

Weather is the element he can't control, the risk he has to take.

But he says he loves this life. As his combine moved slowly through the golden rows, Humphrey looked happy. "To me," he said, "the best time of year is right now."

Will Hear Plaints Of 'Wrongful Life'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court agreed Thursday to hear the case of two North Carolina parents who want to sue for "wrongful life" in the birth of their deaf child.

The court agreed Thursday to hear an appeal by James and Wrenn Turpin, who contend they never would have conceived Joy, now 2, if they had been given correct information about their first child, who was also born deaf.

They sued Dr. Adam Sortini of Fresno Community Hospital.

Both the Fresno County Superior Court and Court of Appeal dismissed the suit on grounds that California does not recognize a suit for wrongful life.

The couple, now living in Chapel Hill, N.C., seeks unspecified damages.

The Turpins claim Sortini told them their first child, Hope, now 4, had normal hearing when the child actually was "stone deaf by virtue of an hereditary abnormality."

On the basis of Sortini's advice, they decided to have another child, and Joy was born with the same hereditary abnormality.

In their appeal, the Turpins said their suit should be reinstated because of a 1980 California case that approved a wrongful life suit.

The Turpins' suit said that in contrast to a healthy but unwanted child, Joy "must endure the limitations and hardships of her disability for her entire life. Her injury is real, demonstrable and effects the very quality of her existence."

Power From Sun

TOKYO (AP) — The Electric Power Development Co. of Japan has generated 1,000 kilowatts of electricity with a solar energy power plant, Kyoda news service reports.

It said the pilot plant reached its maximum generating capacity of 1,000 kilowatts after 15 minutes and was kept at that level for 12 more minutes.

It said the plant uses 807 mirrors to reflect solar rays into a central tower. Water circulating in the tower is heated so that the steam turns an underground turbine and generator, Kyoda said.

Limit To His Digging

CASTLEFORD, England (AP) — Yorkshire miner John Thompson set out to build a fish pond in his back garden. He planned it 3 feet by 3 feet, but ended up with a hole 17 feet wide and six feet down.

Up from the hole came 20 bed frames, a washing machine, railroad ties, porcelain ornaments, women's clothes, the skeleton of a dog, a dead parakeet in a box, two kitchen sinks and a four-door car with 73,000 miles on it.

The car's engine still worked. "We got the engine ticking over, but the body fell to bits when we tried to pull it out with a tractor", said the 48-year-old Thompson.

"I reckon the car had been there about 15 years. Someone must have dug a big hole, driven it in and covered it up", he said.

A neighbor recalled the previous tenant liked digging holes.

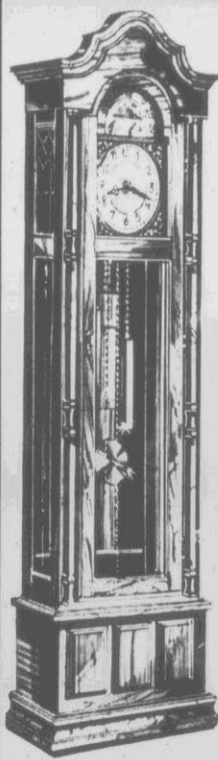

As for Thompson, he says, "I'm not digging any deeper. God knows what I'd find if I did. The hole just got bigger and bigger. Every time I stuck my spade into the ground I found something else."

Some N.C. Air Controllers Trickled Back To Jobs

By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — More than 110 air traffic controllers in North Carolina, defying official threats to fire, fine and arrest them, continued striking Thursday, but a few began trickling back to work.

Controllers from across the state planned a rally today at the Federal Building in Raleigh from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., said Randy Langston, local union leader at Raleigh-Durham airport.

Ninety-six controllers reported for duty Thursday despite a nationwide strike by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization.

Striking controllers at RDU ignored a federal court order and set up picket lines. Police did not intervene, but did order members of the striker's families off the picket lines.

Five airlines at Raleigh-Durham canceled a total of 12 out of 56 flights. Piedmont Airlines operated all 15 of its RDU flights.

Airport officials gave the following totals of striking workers at various airports around the state:

- RDU: 21 of 38 controllers remain on strike, but Langston insisted the number was 22.
- Charlotte: 26 of 45 controllers stayed off the job, and none said they had received formal notice of termination. "We're expecting them at any time," said controller Ron Dixon.

- Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point Regional Airport and Smith Reynolds Airport in Winston-Salem: 22 of 54.
- Asheville: six of 14.
- New Bern: three of six.
- Kinston: five of six.
- Fayetteville: 26 of 30.

At the 15-man Wilmington airport, Federal Aviation Administration tower team supervisor Ed King said local PATCO president Mike Gregory and two other striking union members had been accepted back to their jobs.

Gregory had called FAA tower chief Tom McGonnigal Thursday morning saying the eight union members still on strike wished to return. But the striking controllers later canceled their request.

Later Thursday, Gregory and two other members were allowed to return to their jobs, while four others were denied reinstatement. The three readmitted had not been scheduled for work the previous day and were therefore exempt from the mandatory terminations, Kingsaid.

One controller who remains out is not scheduled to work until Saturday at 4 p.m., Kingsaid.

Charlotte controllers planned to picket in front of the tower this afternoon and part of the day Friday.

At Raleigh-Durham Airport, 15 of 25 striking PATCO members walked the picket line, carrying signs with messages ranging from

"On Strike" to "If you can't retire me, you may as well fire me."

"We need a better retirement program," Langston said. "Statistics show 11 of 100 controllers reach retirement, and you can bet all 11 of them are supervisors. It won't be easy for any of us."

Langston said nationally the union started with 81 percent of its members on strike and only 2 percent have gone back. Four RDU strikers returned to work

Thursday.

"Most who went back were developmental controllers," Langston said. "They can work certain positions, but always must be under supervision. Of the eight who went back, only three were full performance level controllers."

"The airways in the sky are unsafe at this time," Langston added. "If something happens, my conscience is clear."

But a pilot using the Raleigh-Durham Airport disagreed, saying the strike hampered only convenience, not safety.

"I think time and scheduling has had to be compromised because of the strike, not safety," said Capt. Donald L. Boyer of Delta Airlines.

He said the FAA had taken extra safety precautions for the strike. Commercial planes normally can fly as close as 5 miles apart, he said, but with the strike the distance has been increased to 30 miles.

NO FINES TODAY — U.S. Atty. Henry McMaster talks to reporters after a court hearing at which a federal judge cancelled contempt proceedings against striking air traffic controllers because President Reagan has fired the strikers and doesn't want them under court order to return to work. "They couldn't go back to their jobs if they wanted to," he said. (AP Laserphoto)

Fear Ruling On Light Aircraft

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Proposed federal regulations could raise flying costs so high that many pilots of lightweight aircraft and hang gliders would be grounded, sports pilots say.

The Federal Aviation Administration announced last week that it was considering regulations that would impose flight rules on hang gliders and require licensing of motorized lightweight aircraft that are still unrestricted.

Government officials say the rules, which need further review before being enacted, are needed for safety reasons. Pilots of such machines in North Carolina say they are doing a good job of self-regulation and that local governments could handle specific problems as they arise.

Hang gliding has become a popular sport in the North Carolina mountains and at Jockey's Ridge State Park on the coast at Nags Head. But there are only a few powered lightweight craft that would come under the proposed restrictions.

John Harris, a pilot and president of Kitty Hawk Kites, which caters to both types of fliers, said some restrictions are justified. They include restrictions on flying over airports or in airplane corridors.

But other proposals, he said, would push up the cost of sport flying.

For example, the FAA proposals would require ultra-light planes weighing more than 150 pounds and having a fuel capacity of 2.5 gallons to comply with the same basic regulations as bigger aircraft.

Harris said that would negate one of the big advantages of ultra-lights. Flying airplane has become prohibitively expensive for many people, partly because of the need for inspections and maintenance, he said.

But ultra-light aircraft, which weigh between 150 and 200 pounds, are ideal for sport flying.

"They (owners) can keep it in the garage and do the maintenance themselves," he said.

The town of Nags Head banned powered lightweight aircraft in air space over the town several years ago, but hang-gliding is still allowed by permit in certain areas at Jockey's Ridge.

700 LEFTIES!

ALTHOUGH MODERN BASEBALL HAS PRODUCED SOME AMAZING LEFT HANDED PITCHERS WHO THREW WITH EXTREME ACCURACY, SUCH AS LEFTY GROVE, WHITEY FORD, CARL HUBBEL, JOHNNY VANDER MEER, SANDY KOUFAX, IT CAN'T MATCH THE BIBLE'S SEVEN HUNDRED "LEFTY" SLING SHOOTERS!

THE SLING SHOOTER WAS THE COUNTERPART OF A MODERN ARMY'S RIFLE MAN AND THE TRIBE OF BENJAMIN HAD "SEVEN HUNDRED CHOSEN MEN LEFT HANDED" (JUDGES 20:16) ALL OF THEM COULD "SLING STONES AT A HAIR'S BREADTH AND NOT MISS." ALL THE SHEPHERD BOYS USED SLINGS TO PROTECT THEIR HERDS FROM BEASTS OF PREY AND THIS CONSTANT PRACTICE AS THE YOUTHS GREW UP TO MANHOOD ASSURED ISRAEL OF A CONSTANT SUPPLY OF SHARP SHOOTERS IN TIME OF WAR.

'Peace People' Again March

BY GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In a time of military buildup, the "peace" people are marching, praying, fasting and signing petitions. Several denominations have made "peacemaking" a current priority. And some church leaders, including a bold bishop, have advised refusing to pay the portion of taxes that goes for arms.

"Freeze the Nuclear Arms Race" is the call of several national organizations taking part in fasts, vigils, teach-ins, church bell ringings and other demonstrations through the weekend in communities across the country and abroad.

The timing coincided with the 36th anniversary of the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

"For most people nuclear war is unthinkable, but the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. are developing new, first-strike nuclear weapons... which increase the risk of nuclear war," says a flier for the occasion by the American Friends Service Committee.

The pacifist Quaker organization, along with the interdenominational Clergy and Laity Concerned, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and the New Jewish Agenda, are among national groups supporting the weekend activities.

The aim is to build public support for a joint U.S.-Soviet halt to production, testing and development of nuclear weapons. Meanwhile, advocacy of withholding so-called "war taxes" — the share of federal income taxes that go for military equipment — came not just from traditional "peace" denominations, but from a Roman Catholic archbishop.

Archbishop Raymond G. Hunthausen of Seattle, in a mid-June speech that has since evoked wide and varying reactions, suggested Christians refuse to pay the half of their federal income taxes going for armament.

"We have to refuse to give our income — in our day, tax dollars — to the nuclear idol," he said. "I think the teaching of Jesus tells us to render to a nuclear-arms Caesar what Caesar deserves — tax resistance. "Some would call what I am urging 'civil disobedience.' I prefer to see it as obedience to God."

Similar suggestions have come from some other Christians, most solidly from leaders of three relatively small, but historic "peace" denominations — The Church of the Brethren, the Friends and Mennonites.

A joint meeting of them under the banner of "New Call to Peacemaking" said paying for war is wrong and asked members to "consider refusal to pay the military portion of their federal taxes, as a response to Christ's call to radical discipleship."

In separate denominational actions, the Church of the Brethren has supported "open, massive withholding of war taxes" and the Mennonites general conference is fighting in court against being required to withhold taxes partly used for military purposes from employees' income.

The New York-based War Resisters League estimates 2,000 to 10,000 Americans annually hold back part of their taxes, some eventually being forced to pay but continuing to repeat the protest.

By less drastic means, numerous Protestant denominations, United Presbyterians, United Methodists, the United Church of Christ, American Baptists and the Christian Church (Disciples) have launched programs emphasizing the urgency of peacemaking.

Roman Catholic bishops are planning a re-examination of church teachings on war in view of the nuclear potentialities.

"We are at a turning point," said a United Prebyterian assembly. "We are faced with the decision to serve the rule of God, or to side with the powers of death through our complacency and silence."

The Rev. Foy Valentine, head of the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission, told a recent denominational conference on the issue: "We have never lived in a time when it was more important to preach peace, practice peace and do the things that make for peace." The varied and widespread activities planned included a "peace march" between Washington and Moscow — two small towns 35 miles apart in Vermont, with a big rally between them in Montpelier.

About 10,000 Vermont residents have signed a petition supporting a nuclear freeze and the several hundred walkers are collecting more signatures along the way.

Church Members Burn Devil's Work

DARDANELLE, Ark. (AP) — Assembly of God church members here roasted about $2,000 worth of rock 'n' roll albums and other "works of the devil," according to the Rev. Bob Huie.
 "We just did this for the glory of God and the kids," Huie said Thursday. "We have no qualms or apologies to make for our stand."
 He said about 60 people, mostly from Assembly of God churches in the Dardanelle area about 100 miles northwest of Little Rock, also burned country-western albums, T-shirts, calendars, playing cards, tapes, magazines and books.
 Huie said the burning began spontaneously after the group listened to a taped sermon about the hazards of rock 'n' roll music.
 "It was not church-planned or prepared. It was not something I suggested," he said.
 If church members request it, Huie said, another batch of the offensive items will be burned. "There were some who couldn't come Monday night," he said.
 "I used to listen to that stuff before I got saved," said 19-year-old Gary Grimes, after burning part of his record collection.
 Grimes, who said the music can have a hypnotic effect on listeners, suggested that other young people join him in burning their albums.
 "They will want to get rid of them anyway, if they are Christians," he said.
 Huie said country-western music is almost as bad as rock 'n' roll.
 "It's different but it certainly deals with immorality, drinking, fornication and divorce," Huie said. "It certainly doesn't glorify the Lord. There's no redeeming value to it."
 "It's very vexing to the Christian, I feel," the minister added.

New Storm In Atlantic

MIAMI (AP) — The fourth tropical storm of the hurricane season has formed in the eastern Atlantic, the National Hurricane Center in Miami reported today.
 Forecasters said the storm, named Dennis, could strengthen and become a hurricane later today.
 At 6 a.m. EDT, the center of the storm was about 400 miles south-southwest of the Cape Verde Islands. Highest sustained winds were estimated at 50 mph. It was moving westward at 18 mph, and was expected to continue that movement for the next 24 hours.
 Dennis was many days away from land and posed a threat only to shipping, a hurricane center bulletin said.

Arab World Summit Call

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Jordan supports a Lebanese proposal for an Arab summit conference to consider the conflict between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization in southern Lebanon, a government spokesman announced today.
 But the spokesman, Adnan Abu Odeh, acting prime minister and information minister, said King Hussein's government would agree to attend only if the regularly scheduled summit this November in Rabat, Morocco, is canceled.
 Kuwait and Libya previously announced they would attend an Arab summit on southern Lebanon, proposed last weekend.
 The Lebanese government reportedly is seeking Arab curbs on Palestinian guerrilla operations against Israel from Lebanon's southern regions in order to spare the Lebanese population there from Israeli reprisals.
 The PLO is pressing for a summit on southern Lebanon in a separate effort aimed at getting the Arab nations to extend stronger military and financial support to the guerrilla organization to withstand Israeli attacks.
 A cease-fire in southern Lebanon worked out by the United States and the United Nations went into effect July 24 and has survived initial violations.

Overpayments Are Recovered

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Employment Security Commission says it recovered $143,871.67 in unemployment insurance overpayments in June.
 The commission said its anti-fraud unit investigated 247 people who have claimed or are claiming unemployment insurance benefits. Of them, 72 percent or 177 were found to have been overpaid a total of $82,738. The commission classified 89 of those cases as fraud.
 The commission must prove a person knowingly made a false statement on a claim for overpayments to be classified as a fraud case.

Toxic Fumes In Train Accident

BRIDGMAN, Mich. (AP) — A poisonous industrial chemical sent a cloud of fumes from a damaged tank car today after a freight train derailed in Bridgman, forcing the evacuation of nearly half the town, state police said.
 Berrien County Sheriff's Lt. Robert Krause said more than 1,000 people had been evacuated from a 25-square-mile area around this town of 2,300 after the 5:30 a.m. derailment on the Chessie System railroad line.
 Spokesmen at hospitals in Benton Harbor, St. Joseph and Berrien Springs said 12 people had been treated for burning eyes and throats by 8:30 a.m. None required hospitalization.
 One tanker that derailed and punctured in the accident in downtown Bridgman was carrying fluorosulfonic acid, said State Police Sgt. John Grimm. The chemical was leaking out the ground.
 Fluorosulfonic acid is described as a fuming liquid that can cause severe burns and can be fatal if ingested, either by breathing or contact through the skin, according to documents taken from the train to the Bridgman Fire Department.
 George Athanas, a Chessie System superintendent in Detroit, said a Chessie System chemical emergency team was en route to the scene. Krause said experts were also en route from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Chemtrac, an emergency team of the Chemical Manufacturers' Association.
 Police said they would close Interstate 94, which skirts this Berrien County community in southwest Michigan, if the wind changed direction and began blowing fumes toward the highway.
 Fourteen cars of a 77-car freight derailed in the accident. A cause for the derailment had not been determined. Evacuees were being sheltered at the Bridgman high school.
 "We'll try to clear the mess up," said State Police Sgt. Jeff Wallis. "We basically have to... keep it away from the sewer and water systems."
 Athanas said the train was heading from New Buffalo to Grand Rapids. The leaking tanker was from a DuPont Chemical Co. plant in East Chicago, Ind. and was bound for Suspension Bridge, N.Y., he said.

Fewer Jobs..

 employment, but so far, she said, the employment market is not bearing out indications of an economic downturn.
 "It looks like employers are not letting people go," she said. "Either they don't feel the decline or they are waiting to see."
 Over the last year, total employment has increased by 1.9 million, with all the rise accounted for by adult men and women, the government said. Meanwhile, the number of people who have lost their jobs because of layoffs or permanent separations has declined by 640,000 since July 1980.
 Employment in the construction area remained at depressed levels in July, with 20,000 additional jobs lost during the month. In contrast, employment in manufacturing rose by 110,000, the government said. Employment in mining and the service sector also rose. The Labor Department gave the following breakdown on the seasonally adjusted jobless rates in July, as opposed to June:
 —Adult men: 5.6 percent, down from 6.1 percent.
 —Adult women: 6.7 percent, up from 6.5 percent.
 —Teen-agers: 18.1 percent, down from 19 percent.
 —Minority teen-agers: 36.4 percent, down from 38.6 percent.
 —Whites: 6.2 percent, down from 6.4 percent.
 —Non-whites: 13.6 percent, down from 14.2 percent.
 —Hispanics: 9.9 percent, down from 10.2 percent.
 —Full-time workers: 6.7 percent, down from 7 percent.
 President Reagan has pledged to fight inflation and unemployment at the same time rather than use one to combat the other, as previous administrations have done.
 But according to his own targets, his economic program would bring inflation down rapidly while tolerating historically high unemployment.
 The jobless rate will drop very slowly over the next few years and remain above 6 percent going into 1985, according to the administration's long-range economic forecast.
 Since Reagan took office in January, inflation has fallen from a 12 percent annual rate to just under 10 percent a year, while unemployment has stayed around 7.3 percent.
 The drop in inflation is primarily the result of a worldwide surplus of oil, which has forced a leveling off of energy prices, and unexpectedly small increases in food prices.
 Most of Reagan's economic policies have not yet been implemented, so he cannot take the credit or be held responsible for the inflation and unemployment trends until later this year, when his budget and tax cuts go into effect.
 With his program in place, the administration predicts inflation as measured by the Consumer Price Index will slow to an 8.6 percent rise for 1981 and 6.2 percent in 1982.
 Unemployment, on the other hand, is expected to peak at 7.7 percent this year and remain at 7 percent through the end of 1982, according to the administration's latest forecast.
 Between 1983 to 1986, the administration predicts inflation will ease from a 5.6 percent rate to 4 percent, while unemployment will edge down from 6.5 percent to 5.4 percent.
 Each percentage point of unemployment translates into 1,060,000 people without jobs.
 Private economists also predict a rise in unemployment this fall, although few expect the rate to hit 8 percent. They also foresee a slow decline in the jobless rate over the next few years.

Trevino: Nobody's Fault But My Own

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) — Lee Trevino refused to blame anyone but himself after he was disqualified Thursday from the 63rd PGA Championship for failing to sign his scorecard.

Trevino was sipping a cool drink in the clubhouse shortly after firing a 74, four over par over the tough 7,070-yard Atlanta Country Club layout when he was notified of the disqualification.

"It was nobody's fault but mine," said Trevino, one of golf's superstars who has won more than $2.5 million and 25 tournaments.

"It was my fault. No bid deal but I gave you guys a hell of a story.

"I don't mind not signing my card but my wife is going to give me a whipping I'm not going to forget," quipped Trevino.

The mistake was noticed, according to Bill Clarke, chairman of the PGA Rules Committee, after Tom Weiskopf, also a member of the threesome along with Lanny Watkins, said he "was confused about signing a card" that had Trevino's score but not his signature. Weiskopf's signature was in the space where Trevino's should have been.

Clarke said it was clearly an "innocent mistake" by Trevino, who said it was the first time in his career he had made such an error.

Trevino said "I looked at my card and saw two signatures. Unfortunately one was not mine. It's my fault," said Trevino.

"I feel terrible because I signed his card. I feel like if I didn't sign it, this wouldn't have happened," said Weiskopf.

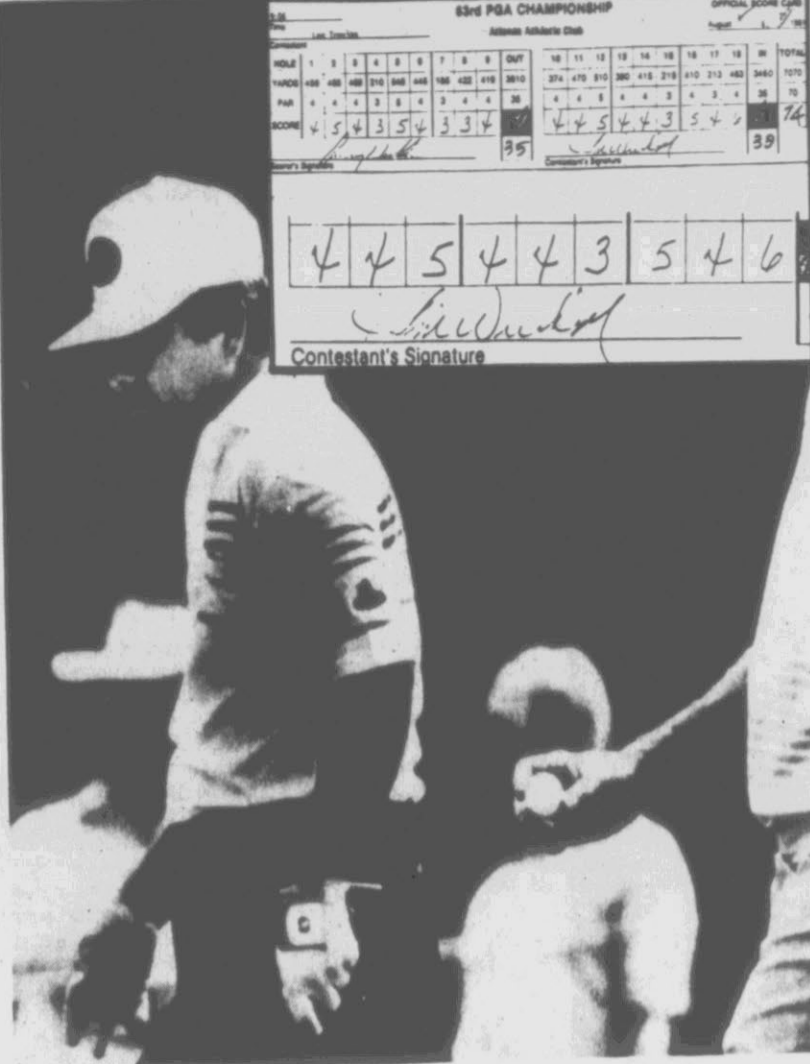

Trevino said it also was the first time his caddie didn't look over his shoulder and check his card. "He also feels bad," he said.

Trevino said Weiskopf appealed the disqualification to the PGA Rules Committee on the basis that "there was confusion" in the tent but "it's still my responsibility to look at it and sign it. I didn't do it. I checked it and didn't sign it because I saw two signatures."

Trevino also failed to blame the official scorer.

"He gave me a second chance. He actually totalled my score 35-39-74 and put the scorecard in front of my face. It's certainly not his fault. It's no one's fault but my own," said Trevino.

Before his disqualification, Trevino spoke in admiration of the course, which favors the long, straight hitter. "This is the longest course I have ever played. It's a little too long for me," said the 41-year-old who captured the PGA title in 1974.

'Shocked' Murphy Leads PGA By 1

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) — Bob Murphy has sensed that winning attitude was rebuilding, but he didn't expect it to blossom this week in the 63rd PGA national championship.

Certainly not after he had been forced out of the Canadian Open last week following a freak accident.

Murphy was surprisingly shocked when he shot an opening 66 — 4-under par over the testing Atlanta Athletic Club course for a one-stroke lead over non-winners Mark Lye and Bob Eastwood.

"I can't say I was mentally prepared for this, but I was relaxed," he said Thursday, referring to a week at home nursing a thumb injury.

"I've been playing well enough to win," said the 38-year-old veteran, winless since his fourth Tour victory in 1975. "I felt it coming for the last three or four months. And it's a good feeling when you do it under the gun, too."

The fourth and last of this year's major championships opened in unusual, if not bizarre, fashion. Consider:

•Defending champion Jack Nicklaus went 4-over par in his first eight holes in a bid for a record sixth PGA and 18th major professional title. He then fired three straight birdies after a 55-minute weather delay for a menacing 71.

•Lee Trevino forgot to sign his scorecard for the first time in his long, successful career, leading to his disqualification after a 74.

•Of Murphy's five closest pursuers, only Andy North owns a Tour victory. And North, tied for fourth with non-winners Vance Heafner and Rex Caldwell at 68, hasn't won since the 1978 U.S. Open.

•None of this year's previous winners of major tournaments shot better than the 72 by British Open king Bill Rogers. Masters champion Tom Watson, No. 1 on the 1981 money list, and U.S. Open winner David Graham matched 75s.

•A second storm wiped out the finish of the round just before darkness swept over this course northeast of Atlanta. Fifteen players were forced to complete their first 18 holes today.

And this $400,000 tournament faced the prospect of more weather problems today and Saturday. The forecast called for 60 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Besides Nicklaus, some of the sport's illustrious names were in challenging position going into the second round today.

Lon Hinkle, Roger Maltbie, Charles Coody and Ron Streck, all previous Tour victors, shared seventh place at 69, making a total of just 10 players who solved par in the field of 148 professionals.

Among those at par-70 were Bruce Lietzke, Fuzzy Zoeller, Lanny Wadkins, J.C. Snead, Dave Stockton and veteran Don January.

Ray Floyd, a three-time winner in 1981, like Watson and Lietzke, joined Jerry Pate, Tom Kite, Seve Ballesteros and Nicklaus in another large group at 71.

Murphy fashioned his best round ever in this event, doing it with four birdies and four par saves from bunkers.

"I had good lies in the traps. Those things happen when you shoot 66; you stand on your head in traps when you shoot 76," he said.

It may be remarkable that Murphy is even competing for the first prize of $60,000. He was on medication four days last week for his injured right thumb and couldn't resume practice until Friday.

He hurt it when a woman bumped into a golf bag he was carrying in an elevator in New York City.

After the storm delay, Nicklaus birdied three holes and saved par on two others to move into contention.

"My first round wasn't a very good one. My second round was better," Nicklaus said, referring to his weather delay on the 11th green.

"I'm alright now. A score of 71 certainly is not bad by any means," said Nicklaus, searching for his 69th career victory, but first in 1981.

Trevino was philosophical over his exit.

Owners Endorse Split Season For Baseball

CHICAGO (AP) — The grand old game will be showing a new wrinkle when play resumes Monday following a 21-3 vote by major league baseball owners to endorse a split season.

"Because of the strike, we were dealing with a unique situation. We needed a unique solution," Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said after Thursday's meetings, during which the National League approved the plan by a 9-3 margin and the American League by a 12-0 vote.

Two AL teams — the Chicago White Sox and Baltimore Orioles — did not vote. NL teams voting against the plan were the Cincinnati Reds, the Philadelphia Phillies and the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It was close," NL President Chub Feeney said of the National League vote, which needed a three-fourths approval of its 12 members. "We had a long discussion, and it was in doubt. But we only voted once."

"The system adopted has the advantage of being clean-cut — to me that has some appeal," said Kuhn. "Considering the problems of the last seven weeks, the teams will be starting with a fresh slate. My instincts tell me that's right."

Under the system — which was spelled out in the agreement with the players' association — teams in first place in their respective divisions when the strike began will meet the winners of the second half of the 1981 season.

If a first-half winner also wins the second half, that team will meet the division contender with the second-highest percentage during both halves of the season.

Both presidents, Feeney and Lee MacPhail of the American League, insisted the split-season plan is for the 1981 season only.

"Normally, I wouldn't be for it," MacPhail said, "but this is a one-shot deal, and only because of the strike problems and the unbalanced season."

Feeney said the National League owners "wouldn't want to see a peculiar result where the team with the best record, winning both halves of the season, somehow didn't win its division title."

Kuhn said the league presidents, who will attend the All-Star Game Sunday in Cleveland, would announce during the weekend how the pre-championship playoffs would be structured and which teams would get the home field advantage in the best-of-five series.

Kuhn said that should the same team win both halves of the season, its playoff series would be "weighted." Such a team could play the first three of the five games at home, or possibly play the first game on the road and return home for the next four, he added.

However, Kuhn emphasized that a final decision would be made by the league presidents. With the league championship and the World Series pushed back one week as a result of the split-season playoffs plan, Kuhn was asked whether the possibility of playing baseball into November worried him.

"I have several sets of long-johns," he deadpanned. "Seriously though, our analysis shows that one week in any of the cities doesn't show a significant change (in weather.)"

Concerning the split-season vote, Ruly Carpenter of the Philadelphia Phillies said: "It was a very simple vote and concurred with the basic agreement. The fact that three of our clubs voted against it shows merely that there was a lot of good, hard discussion."

"Obviously, Jerry (Reinsdorf, chairman of the board of the White Sox) and I are disappointed," said Eddie Einhorn, president of the club. "A lot of people thought the way the agreement (with the players) was phrased left the formula for the second half open."

Einhorn proposed that the winners of the second half play the team with the next best record in all of 1981.

Dick Wagner, president of the Reds, said: "I guess we'll have to call the winners of the first half 'designated winners.' The fans in our area are against it, and we are violently against it. I can give you 15 or 20 good reasons, and you can start with the integrity factor."

"There might be circumstances where a team that has already won might be in a position to determine its playoff opponent."

Both leagues claimed they had only two choices: either continue the season or split it.

Prior to the meetings, Calvin Griffith, owner of the Minnesota Twins, said: "Splitting the season is the only thing you can do. We're 18 games behind, and if we don't split the season, we might as well not open our gates."

As indicated by the votes, most team owners held Griffith's opinion.

S. Hill Downs Hamlet

SNOW HILL — Gary Ream drove in five runs with a triple and a double and also struck out nine to lead Snow Hill to a 7-3 victory over Hamlet Thursday night in the third game of the teams' American Legion East championship series.

Snow Hill now leads the best-of-seven series two games to one. Game #4 is set for tonight (8 p.m.) in Snow Hill.

After three scoreless innings, Hamlet jumped ahead, 2-0, in the top of the fourth. One inning later, Snow Hill countered with a four-run outburst, keyed by Ream.

David Kester walked, Wade Corbett singled and Bobby Avery reached on an error to load the bases in the fifth. Ream then tripled home all three to give Snow Hill a 3-2 lead.

After Greg Hardison grounded out, David Shirley squeezed home Ream with the fourth run of the inning. Despite not getting a hit, Shirley had two RBI.

Hamlet narrowed the margin to 4-3 with a run in the sixth, but Snow Hill answered that challenge with three runs in the bottom of the inning.

Kevin Korpi singled and moved to second on Frank Milkovits' sacrifice. With two gone, Corbett reached on an error, stole second and Avery walked to load the bases.

Ream then doubled to score both Korpi and Corbett. After Hardison walked to load the bases again, Shirley walked to force home Ream and Snow Hill led, 7-3.

Snow Hill was led at the plate by Ream, who was three for four. Ream also went the distance on the mound for his sixth victory in eight starts. Ream struck out nine and walked four.

Korpi was two for four for Snow Hill and Hardison had a double for the winners.

Hamlet was led by Fred Burr, who was two for four. Mike Bird had a double for the visitors.

Cox was the leading hitter for the team in the state tournament, hitting .625, while Hooks was next, getting seven hits in 11 trips.

The winner of the regional will advance to the nationals, to be held August 22-29 at Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

CP South Set For Regionals

The Coastal Plains South All-Star team, which won the North Carolina State 16-18 Senior Babe Ruth League tournament, opens regional play in Nashville, Tenn., Monday night.

The team, which features four players each from Greenville, Washington and Winterville, will be going up against the host team, Nashville, which is the defending national champion in an 8:30 p.m. (CDT) contest.

The team leaves the area on Saturday, and is to check in on Sunday afternoon.

Allen Elder, a Rose High School graduate, is the manager of the team.

Elder is expected to start Scott Galloway, a Rose High player, in the opening game of the double elimination tournament. Washington's Mike Askew, who also is available for catching duties, is slated to go in the second game. Should the team continue in the tournament, Galloway would come back for the third game, with Washington's Jerry Sawyer, a lefty, in the fourth.

Rounding out the battery will probably be Greenville's Crowell Pope, who also has seen duty at third base. Mike Hooks, who also catches, will be at third if Pope is behind the plate.

The other infielders include Dixon Page at first, Jeff Cox at second and Roy Lassiter at shortstop. All three are from Winterville.

The outfield is expected to include Billy Dough of Greenville in right and Sammy Tucker of Winterville in center.

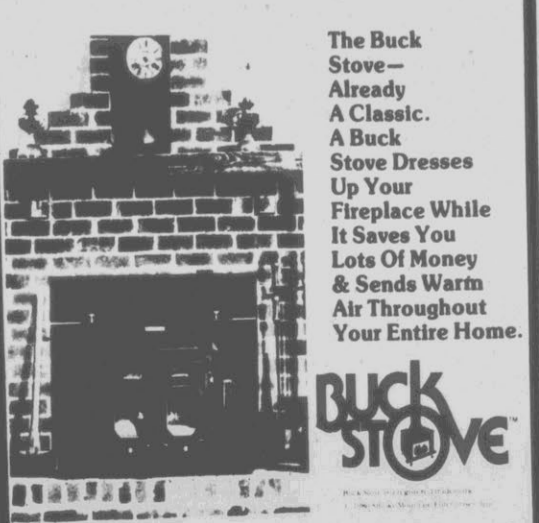

Winterville Wins

KINSTON — Winterville defeated Dare County "Blue," 9-3, Thursday in the 9-12-year-old Babe Ruth baseball state tournament.

All other tournament games, including Greene County's game with Kinston, were rained out and will be played today.

Oakland's Martin Says Split Season 'Stupid'

By The Associated Press

Leave it to Billy Martin to look a gift horse in the mouth. "I think it's stupid," Martin said of baseball's split-season plan, even though its adoption meant his Oakland A's automatically qualified for the intra-division playoffs since they were the leaders of the American League West when the strike began June 12.

Under the split-season system, adopted by the club owners Thursday, the remainder of the season will be played as a separate entity, with the division winners facing the teams which led the divisions at the time of the strike to see who advances to the league championship series. If the same team wins both halves, it faces the club with the next-best record in its division.

That last point was what bothered Martin. "If we win the second half, we win nothing," said the manager of the A's. "In other words I should root for Seattle to win — root for a team you can beat. I suppose it means every time we play Seattle or Toronto I should use my second-line pitchers and save my starters for teams I have to beat. That's what they're telling me, aren't they?"

"I can see it now: Now playing in the World Series, the Chicago Cubs and the Seattle Mariners. I guess they're taking care of the teams that didn't do well. The new rules help out other clubs, not ours. But I guess this is going to sound like sour grapes, isn't it?"

Well, now that you mention it, yes. But while most players and managers liked the split-season concept, Martin wasn't the only one to find fault with it.

Paul Molitor of the Milwaukee Brewers observed, "With a split season, you could end up with the best record and not get into the playoffs."

Indeed, a team could finish in second place by as little as one-half game in each section and have nothing to show for its near-misses, while a team that won one section would be in the playoffs even if it did miserably in the other.

Martin wasn't the only member of the division winners who wasn't satisfied. Members of the Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Yankees, who took the first half of the NL West and AL East, respectively, also voiced their displeasure.

"I'm in favor of the concept with the stipulation that if the first-half champion won the second half, it would draw a bye," said Dodgers first baseman Steve Garvey. "In essence what they could be doing is penalizing success."

Indeed, a situation could arise where it would be to the advantage of a team like the Dodgers, which won the first half, to lose some games late in the season in order to insure a supposedly weaker team winning the second half.

"I understand everything to the point where if a team wins both halves, it could still lose," said Los Angeles pitcher Jerry Reuss. "It's unusual to have won something and still be playing, but it's not going to hurt my motivation. What a player has to do is wipe such things from his mind."

Relief ace Rich Gossage of the New York Yankees wasn't worried about motivation.

"We've got enough incentive. His name is George," said Gossage, referring to the club's outspoken owner, George Steinbrenner.

The Yankees were pretty much split on the split-season idea, although nobody liked the idea of having to play in the extra tier of playoffs even after winning both halves of the season.

"There should be a bye," declared Manager Gene Michael. "If you win both halves you should be in the final playoffs. Then there would be no criticism of this thing. If we win both halves will we still be in the playoffs or will they have to vote again to include us?"

"I don't understand how a second-place team can be in the playoffs," questioned pitcher Rudy May. "I don't think that's fair. But you want me to figure it out for you? More games and more money."

Reggie Jackson took the opposite position. "I like the idea," he said. "I think the game is hurting as a result of the strike. The fans are scarred, the game is scarred and I think the game will benefit."

Manager Dallas Green of Philadelphia, the other first-half division winner, said he favored the split season plan all along. "Selfishly, I could say I favored it because we've already won the first half, but starting fresh will give more teams a chance," said Green.

Will it be hard to play the second half since the Phils have already won the first half?

"It could be a problem," Green conceded. "I'm going to lean on their professionalism. We're not going out there to lose. But there may come a time when I'll manage a little differently. I might rest a player now and then."

As could be expected, managers of teams which did poorly before the strike welcomed the split-season idea, since it wipes their slates clean.

"It creates some excitement for the players and also for the fans," said Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox. "It's about the fairest way they could handle it."

"I'm happy because we're all starting out with same with equal opportunity," said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner. "Everybody will have it going down the stretch, so it's a good idea."

"It gives us a new life," said San Diego Manager Frank Howard. "We've got a public relations gap to fill and this is one of the ways to do it."

Fans Returning To Ballparks

By The Associated Press

Baseball is back. And so, it appears, are the fans.

After a 55-day absence, 50 of which saw the players on strike, the national pastime returned Thursday night for the first time since June 11 with exhibition games in six major league ballparks as a prelude to Monday's resumption of what is now a split major league season.

The three contests where fans were admitted free attracted the largest crowds — 45,000 in Dodger Stadium where the Pacific Coast League-leading Albuquerque Dukes edged the parent Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0, 35,000 in Arlington Stadium where the Houston Astros nipped the Texas Rangers 2-1 on Dave Roberts' 10th-inning triple and 19,133 in San Diego where the Padres and Oakland A's battled to a 3-3 tie in a game called after nine innings.

Some 8,422 fans paid $3 a head in Philadelphia, where the Phillies nipped the Baltimore Orioles 4-3, and the Milwaukee Brewers attracted 9,112 for the same price to see them turn back the Atlanta Braves 5-4. The proceeds in both cases went to charity.

The smallest turnout was in Cleveland, site of Sunday night's upcoming All-Star Game, where the Indians charged regular-season prices and drew 6,729 who watched them defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2.

"I missed it a lot. It drove me nuts going through July without a pennant race," said Marty Roppelt, a Cleveland fan.

"The crowd showed that people obviously are hungry for baseball," said Pirates first baseman Jason Thompson.

And nowhere was that more evident than in football-mad Texas, where Rangers owner Eddie Chiles handed out free admission and parking and was rewarded with a standing ovation.

"I was worried," Sam Meason, the Rangers' executive vice president, admitted. "But it indicates that what we had was not a fan problem — it was a player-owner problem that the Rangers did not create. I watched the people coming in and I kept thinking, 'I don't believe it.' I think all 35,000 of them were here when the gates opened."

Although the players are undergoing summer camp rather than spring training, the pitchers were ahead of the hitters, just like the start of any exhibition campaign.

"We're not ready to swing the bat," said Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda, whose team was held to a pair of singles by three pitchers from a minor league staff with a 4.25 earned run average. "We haven't had much hitting. We've only been at it a few days."

"The pitchers are always ahead in spring training and this isn't much different," said outfielder Dusty Baker. "We're human, man. Fifty days is a long time. This wasn't much of a help; none really. It just showed us how far behind we are."

"It's going to be the same everywhere. It's going to be a while. Pitchers can go out and run and throw. A hitter has to hit a lot of different pitches and work on his timing."

The only Los Angeles hits were an infield single by Pedro Guerrero in the fifth inning and Steve Yeager's solid single in the eighth.

Oakland's Mike Norris is ready to go after giving up one hit in two innings against San Diego.

"Everything felt so natural I wanted to keep going," he said.

Norris, who may be the American League's All-Star Game starter, said he would like two innings of work Sunday night "so I can be ready for Monday."

Rickey Henderson homered for Oakland while Terry Kennedy rapped a pair of RBI singles for San Diego.

"The pitching pleased me but the hitters are not quite as ready as they should be," Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green said after the Phillies beat Baltimore in a seven-inning game. "I think you'll see some scurrying for batting practice. I was surprised the pitching was so far ahead of the hitters, but the hitters' timing and coordination showed what 50 days of can rob you of."

Catcher Bob Boone, the National League's player representative and a key figure in the strike negotiations, drove in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly, including the game-winner.

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver, however, was happy with the Orioles' performance.

"It was almost like a midseason ballgame. Our pitchers threw as well as they did before the strike. I think we're ready to play baseball," Weaver said.

Loftin Wins Putt-Putt Tourney

Jake Loftin broke away from a four-way first-round tie with a nine-under-par 63 to win the Thursday Nite Amateur Tournament at the local Putt-Putt golf course last night.

Eddie Robinson finished second at 64 for the two-round tournament. Dean Wilson was third at 65. Randy Stallings edged Sandy Hemingway for fourth in a sudden death playoff after both ended regulation tied at 69.

In the women's division, Delphia Beacham was an easy winner with a 78. Leslie Bosse was second with a 94.

In Junior League play, the Squirrels, led by Steve Iavoni, Duncan Parks, Coy Triplett and Aaron Williams, downed the Otters for the league title.

Following the match, the league's most valuable player and all-stars were named. Robbie Erhmann was named MVP with a 31.07 average and was joined on the all-star team by Rodney Hooks, Iavoni, Triplett and Parks.

Simmons Named AL Reserve

NEW YORK (AP) — Ted Simmons, three times an All-Star in the National League with the St. Louis Cardinals, has been named to his first American League All-Star squad, Manager Jim Frey has announced.

On Thursday, Frey named 12 reserve players to his squad to supplement the contingent of All-Stars elected in fan balloting. Along with Simmons, now of Milwaukee, Frey named Bo Diaz of the host Cleveland Indians as the backup for catcher Carlton Fisk of the Chicago White Sox, who will start for the AL. It will be Diaz's first time on an All-Star team.

The AL will square off against the National League Sunday night in Cleveland Stadium as the major league baseball season resumes after a seven-week strike. The AL will be seeking to snap a nine-game losing streak. The AL has not won since 1971 at Detroit, and the NL leads the series 32-18. One game ended in a tie.

Simmons was hitting only .207 when the season was interrupted on June 12, but he had 30 RBI, six of them game winners, and nine home runs. Diaz was hitting .356.

Frey also named six outfielders to back up starters Ken Singleton of Baltimore and Reggie Jackson and Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees.

They were Gorman Thomas of the Milwaukee Brewers, who leads the major leagues with 15 home runs; Boston's Dwight Evans, the league's leading hitter with a .341 average; Fred Lynn of California (.274); a 6-3, 6-1 victory over country woman Hana Strachanova.

Like Simmons, Oliver includes the league's two top winners, Detroit's Jack Morris and Ken Forsch of California, each 9-3.

The other AL pitchers were Mike Norris of Oakland (8-3), Dave Stieb of Toronto (4-7), Baltimore's Scott McGregor (6-2), Britt Burns of the Chicago White Sox (6-2), Len Barker of Cleveland (5-3), Rich Gossage of the Yankees (2-1, 17 saves), Doug Corbett of Minnesota (2-2, 7 saves) and Milwaukee's Rollie Fingers (1-2, 12 saves).

Ten of the AL players will be making their All-Star debuts — Diaz, Paciorek, Armas, Thomas, Barker, Burns, Corbett, McGregor, Norris and Morris.

The Yankees head the AL with five representatives, followed by four from California and three apiece from a 10-man pitching staff from Baltimore and named earlier by Frey that Milwaukee.

Clerc, Lendl, Jaeger Win

INDIANAPOLIS — Defending champion Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina won his 22nd straight match by beating Andres Gomez of Ecuador 7-6, 6-3 in the third round of the U.S. Open Clay Court Tennis Championships.

Top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia moved into the men's quarterfinals with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Israel's Shlomo Glickstein.

In women's action, top-seeded Andrea Jaeger disposed of Britain's Sue Barker 6-1, 6-7, 6-2. Number-two Virginia Ruzici of Romania beat Susan Mascarin 6-3, 0-6, 7-5. Third-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia downed Anne Smith 4-6, 6-1, 7-5, and fourth-seeded Regina Marskiva of Czechoslovakia advanced with a 6-3, 6-1 victory over country woman Hana Strachanova.

Biles, Oilers Down Philadelphia, 13-10

HOUSTON (AP) — Rookie head coach Ed Biles went to great pains to be modest after his Houston Oilers won the first game since former coach Bum Phillips was fired last winter.

"It was good to win the first game, but I really didn't think that much about this being the first win for me personally," said Biles, whose Oilers beat the Philadelphia Eagles 13-10 in a National Football League exhibition game Thursday night.

"This is not Ed Biles' football team. This is the Houston Oilers and there were over 60 guys out there playing hard to win," he said.

He also praised new quarterback Gifford Nielson, who was pressed into service as the club's No. 1 quarterback after veteran Kenny Stabler surprised team officials and announced his retirement after summer training camp had opened.

But it was a couple of old hands — Earl Campbell and Tony Fritsch — who scored most of the points for Houston.

Campbell, who sat out the second half, scored a touchdown from four yards out on the Oilers' first possession, and Fritsch kicked a 41-yard field goal in the third quarter that broke a 10-10 tie and put the Oilers out front to stay.

Philadelphia unveiled a new shotgun formation which produced the Eagles' only touchdown, a 10-yard pass from Ron Jaworski to Alvin Hooks near the end of the first half.

The two teams earlier traded field goals — a 35-yard kick by Bill Capece of Houston and a 33-yard boot by Tony Franklin of the Eagles.

The Eagles' new shotgun was slow to get on track. Jaworski threw four incomplete passes and got sacked once in his first six tries.

But on the next two plays he scrambled 33 yards and threw the touchdown pass.

"(Guy) Morriss did a good job with the snaps for the first time out," said Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil. He said he was generally pleased with the new formation, which he said he devised because of the success Dallas and Buffalo have had with it.

Nielson completed 15 of 25 passes for 156 yards, but quarterbacks on both clubs had trouble dodging defenders. Houston suffered five sacks and Philadelphia got caught for four.

Oilers veteran defensive end Elvin Bethea, who led the charge on one sack, said it felt great to win even though it was only exhibition.

Tonight, two more former assistants (offensive coordinators) make their head coaching debuts — Dan Reeves in Denver and Joe Gibbs in Washington. The Broncos host the New York Jets and the Redskins take on the Kansas City Chiefs.

Reeves was one of the architects of the intricate multiple-set offense with which the Dallas Cowboys buffaloed so many teams. And Gibbs was one of the men who turned the San Diego Chargers' aerial attack into one of the most potent in NFL history.

On Saturday night it's Pit-sburgh at Cleveland, Detroit at Buffalo, Cincinnati at Tampa Bay, Baltimore at New Orleans, St. Louis at San Diego, Green Bay at Dallas, Miami at Minnesota, Atlanta at Oakland and the New York Giants at Chicago. New England visits Los Angeles next Monday night.

Matt Robinson can't wait to break the first huddle for the Broncos and start throwing against the Jets. It was, after all, the Jets who cast him out before last season, after he'd injured his thumb fooling around with some teammates before the season opener, then hiding the injury and winding up on the bench. It shattered his hopes of replacing Richard Todd as the Jets' No. 1 quarterback.

Gibbs has the kind of problem a lot of coaches would like to have — what to do with the diverse talent in the Washington backfield.

He's got John Riggins, a 1,000-yard rusher two years ago (and twice before that), returning after a year's exile at home in Kansas because of a contract dispute.

He's got Joe Washington, Baltimore's leading rusher and receiver two years ago, who split time with Curtis Dickey last year, asked to be traded and was after the Colts named Pitt's Randy McMillan as their No. 1 draft choice.

And he's got Terry Metcalf, the former St. Louis Cardinals speedster and star all-purpose back of the mid-1970s who expressed his unhappiness a few years ago by quitting the NFL for the Canadian Football League.

With all that firepower — plus quarterback Joe Theismann — Gibbs can afford to say: "We want to always be aggressive with the idea that we're going out to win games on offense. We're not going to be the aggressor."

Rogers' Father Charged With Auto Homicide

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — George Rogers Sr., father of Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers, has been charged with two counts of vehicular homicide, police say.

Gwinnett County Police Investigator Mike Jenkins said Rogers, of Duluth, remained hospitalized Thursday after a July 31 auto accident in which a Lawrenceville man and his 16-year-old daughter were killed.

Jenkins said blood tests indicated Rogers, who was driving one of the two cars involved, was intoxicated at the time of the crash.

Two warrants were sworn out against Rogers, but Jenkins said they would not be served until his condition improves.

Rogers, who suffered several broken ribs, internal bleeding and a collapsed lung, underwent surgery Wednesday, Jenkins said.

15th Junior Olympics Begin

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Young people from across the nation competed in basketball, water polo and gymnastics Thursday as the 15th Annual Sears AAU Junior Olympic Games continued.

Competition begins today in wrestling, judo, track and field, synchronized swimming and boxing, with most events continuing through Sunday. About 2,500 athletes between the ages of 8 and 18 from all 50 states are participating.

In basketball action Thursday, Arkansas eased into a 2-0 gift win as South Carolina forfeited the first match of the day.

New York coasted to a 103-92 win over West Virginia behind Chris Mullins' 37 point outburst. Leading scorer for West Virginia was Curtis Townes with 21.

New Jersey's Mike Brown scored 31 points to help topple Illinois 106-61, despite 13 points from Charlie Wallace for the losers. Balanced scoring from both teams characterized Washington's 66-64 win over Utah. Scott Bardwell and Blair Rasmussen scored 16 points each for Washington, while Utah's hot shooting pair of Josh Bergen and Dave Heaton tossed in 15 points apiece.

Jerald Hyatt scored 18 points to lead Tennessee to a 69-37 waltz over Ohio, as Lemar Prentis' 13 points failed to put a dent in the Tennessee lead.

In late basketball matches, Louisiana used a 16-point binge by Jerome Batiste to defeat St. Louis 82-63. Pat Hatter was high for St. Louis with 9. And North Carolina-Raleigh bowed to Kansas City 94-63 despite a game-high 26 points from Jim Dillard. Mike Graham and Rick Williams both had 14 for Kansas City.

The New Mexico girls' water polo team took its first loss Thursday after winning five matches Wednesday against the South Toledo YMCA and the Tucson Red Devils in the 15-and-under bracket and against Toledo, Tucson and North Miami Beach in the 17-and-under competition.

But that streak was snapped as Chicago Land defeated New Mexico 7-6 in the 17-and-under bracket, despite a four-goal performance by Cathy Benson for the losing cause. Nancy O'Brian led Chicago with three.

Also in 17-and-under girls' action, the Tucson Red Devils defeated North Miami Beach 6-4 behind Cheryl Kirschner's three goals.

No leaders emerged in the early rounds of boys' water polo. In the 15-and-under competition, Merced defeated Miami 13-0 as Matt Coupland poured in five goals. Meanwhile, Corona Del Mar put together another lopsided victory as it defeated Portage Park 13-2, powered by six goals from David Imbermino. In other action, Mark Radville led Chicago Land to a 12-4 win over the Miami Raiders and West Coast was paced by two goals each from Doug Kadlaok and Mike Hoffman to beat Portage Park 7-4.

In boys 17-and-under action, the West Coast defeated the Miami Raiders 11-6, aided by Eric Grant's four tallies, and Stanford blew by New Mexico 12-2 as Russ Tanner and Bob Abbott scored three apiece.

Merced battled Downey to a 10-10 tie in boys 17-and-under competition with Merced's Coupland — earlier the high scorer in a 15-and-under match — and Downey's Bruce Horny both scoring four.

In an even tighter matchup, Chicago Land deadlocked with Commerce of California 6-6 as five players scored two goals.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — ENERGETIC GO-GO GIRL STARTLED CONSERVATIVE DANCER.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: X equals G

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Pressing On

The death of the WASHINGTON STAR today highlights the plight of many U.S. newspapers. But not all daily newspapers are suffering. Nearly 1,750 dailies publish about 62 million copies each day. Most of the nation's 100 million daily newspaper readers buy papers published in the afternoon. But in recent years, the number of morning papers has grown steadily. About 400,000 Americans work for newspapers — the nation's third largest manufacturing industry. In 1980, newspaper advertising sales, which provided about three-fourths of the industry's income, surpassed combined earnings from TV and radio advertising.

2 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Some card combinations are hardly discussed in the textbooks. That is because you have to rely on bluff rather than technique in handling them. Here's a case.

North-South arrived at four hearts after a straightforward auction. South gave full value to his fit for partner's club suit when he chose to jump to game.

West led the jack of diamonds, covered by the queen and won by the ace. East continued with the king, and declarer ruffed. Declarer drew two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, and was now faced with the prospect of holding his spade losers to two if he was going to make his game.

Those prospects were not bright. The fact that East did not shift to the king of spades at trick two, combined with the fact that West had not raised his partner's overall or led a high spade, suggested that the spade honors were split. The only legitimate way for declarer to limit his losers in the suit to two is to find a defender with a doubleton spade honor and to guess which defender that is. For example, suppose that East had one fewer card in spades. Declarer leads a low spade to his queen, forcing out West's king. Next time he leads the suit, declarer plays low from dummy and East must win the ace "on air," establishing dummy's jack.

But declarer was aware that the chances of a 5-2 spade distribution were against the odds, especially since neither defender had tried for a ruff in the suit. He decided that he had a better chance relying on the human element. So he led the jack of spades from dummy, as if he were finessing! East played low and West won the king. Declarer ruffed the diamond continuation, crossed to dummy with a high club and led another spade toward his queen, thus establishing the lady as his tenth trick.

We will leave it up to the readers to decide whether East should be charged, but we will permit a peek at our crime sheet: East should have realized that the defenders would probably need three spade tricks to defeat the contract. Is there any holding where, if declarer has the king, the defenders can score enough tricks in the suit?

Plan No Action On Fla. Medfly

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Prompt action by Florida officials against the medfly means North Carolina officials will take no action against Florida fruit, a North Carolina Agriculture Department spokesman said Thursday.

Florida's agriculture commissioner told the department Wednesday that three flies believed to be Mediterranean fruit flies had been caught in a trap near Tampa, said Howard Singletary, plant-pest administrator for the department.

No medflies have been found in North Carolina, he added.

Florida has promised to take prompt action, including spraying the infested area, and will not be required to provide certification for fruit such as that now required on fruit from California, Singletary said.

"Based on the information we have and the fact that Florida is taking prompt action, we plan no action against Florida fruit," he said. "In the interim, we will monitor the situation."

North Carolina now requires certification on all produce from California indicating that fruit from three counties infested with the fly has been fumigated, checked by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, or comes from areas not infested. Singletary said North Carolina agriculture inspectors have placed 50 flytraps at produce points around the state, and the traps are checked weekly. He said none of the flies, which lay their eggs in fruit and can cause serious damage to fruit, have shown up in North Carolina.

"We don't see as much a threat from Florida fruit as we do from California," Singletary said. "The prompt action Florida is taking offers us a greater degree of protection."

Singletary said he has sent an inspector to California to monitor the fruit fly situation.

He said inspectors in North Carolina are making periodic checks at produce receiving points to make sure the fruit is certified, and spot checks are being made at truck weight stations.

He said there have been no cases where trucks from California have been turned back, and only several instances where telephone calls were necessary to verify compliance with North Carolina laws.

"We've had tremendous cooperation from produce handlers. They've said they won't accept produce without certification, which has forced all the trucks to get certification first," he said.

Pitt County Scouts Attended National Jamboree

Eighteen Pitt County youths were among the 30,000 Boy Scouts attending the 1981 National Scout Jamboree, which concluded Wednesday, August 5 at Fort A.P. Hill, Virginia.

Dignitaries who appeared during the weeklong Jamboree were King Carl Gustaf of Sweden, Secretary of the Army John C. Marsh, Jr., Virginia Senator John Warner and Bill Hillcourt, author of the revised scout handbook.

Hillcourt, now 80 years old and a recognized authority on leadership, signed autographs during the week for thousands of scouts, including the Greenville and Pitt County youths. Some scouts displayed his famous signature, "Bill," with two horizontal bars through his name, on everything from calling cards to the Jamboree neckerchiefs.

One of the highlights for Pitt County Jamboree Troop 570 occurred when the National Jamboree director, Bill Huffman, accepted an invitation to lunch prepared by the Pitt scouts.

The scouts were treated to a performance by the Golden Knights Army Parachute Team and displays of hot air balloons, including one from the U.S. Navy.

Entertainment was furnished by such nationally known personalities as the Oak Ridge Boys and folk singer Burl Ives.

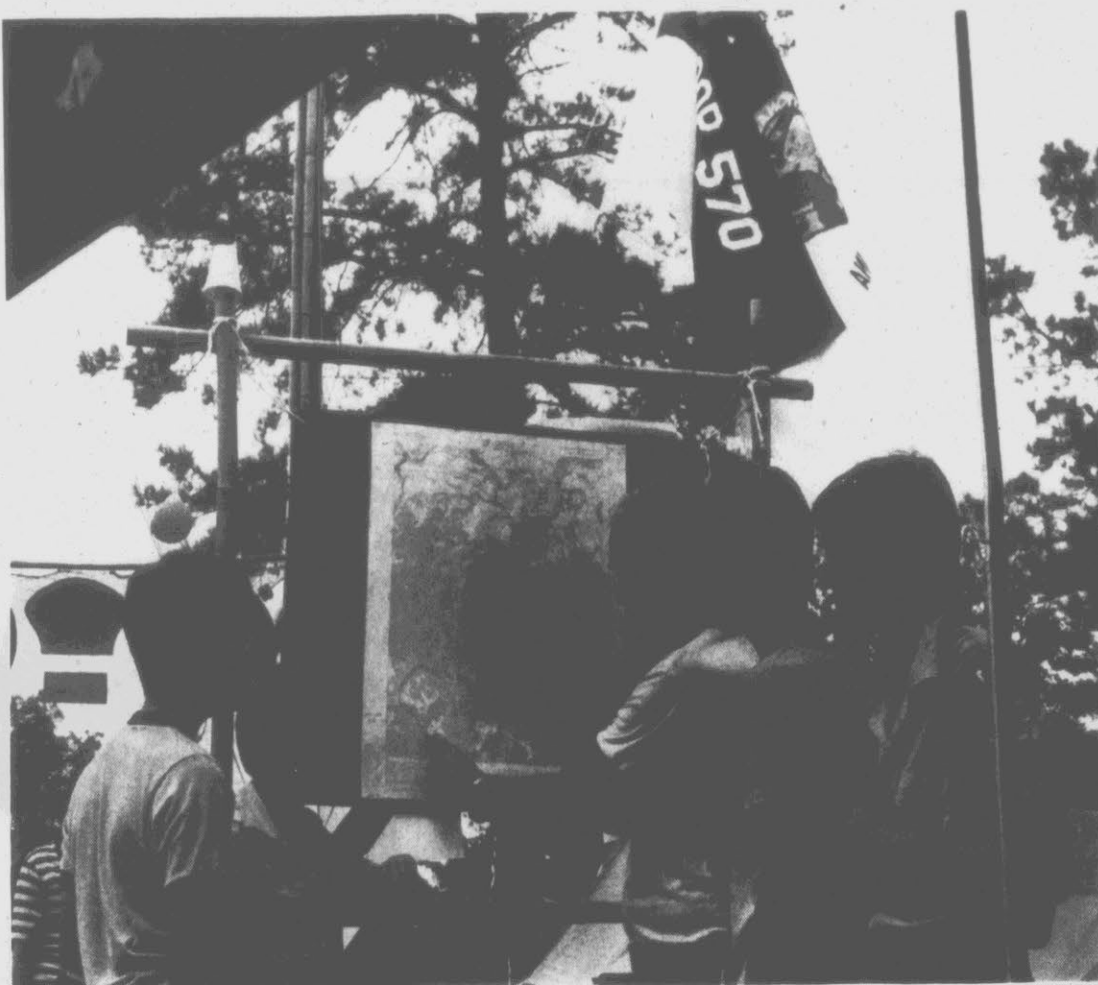

During their stay at Fort A.P. Hill, the scouts slept in tents, prepared their meals in ten-man patrols with two adult leaders, and washed their own clothes.

The Jamboree, which attracted national television and newspaper coverage, was spread out over 7,000 acres of the sprawling 70,000 acre-plus army training base. A complete telephone system and medical facilities were set up especially for the event. Dr. James Carter, Greenville surgeon, was among the on-duty medical personnel.

Colonel Tom Parsons of Greenville served as scoutmaster for the Pitt County Jamboree Troop, with George Attmore, Pitt District Commissioner, as his assistant.

Each troop prepared an arch featuring special aspects of its area. The Pitt County group's arch included a replica of the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse with fish nets from Morehead City and paintings depicting the tobacco industry.

Scouts and leaders at the Jamboree came from all 50 of the United States and from at least 13 foreign countries.

'Krypton Factor' Just A Bomb

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The Krypton Factor," premiering on ABC tonight, is a fabricated competition with pretentious space-age overtones. It's an outgrowth of the reality programs in vogue today, and, in reality, it's a bomb.

The concept, according to an ABC release, is that four average Americans from "all walks of life pit their mental and physical prowess against each other." This involves such ludicrous events as video games, concentration exercises and a futuristic obstacle course.

The host is Dick Clark, who has shed his teen-age image by wearing a tuxedo and saying that the contestants "will be challenged to their very limits." Give us back "American Bandstand." This show doesn't have a good beat, and you can't dance to it. We'll give it a 2.

A SELL-OUT — Dancer Rudolph Nureyev is in Puerto Rico, prepping to perform with the San Juan Ballet. The Arts and Culture Development Administration, which is sponsoring the performance, said all available tickets have been sold. (AP Laserphoto)

All of this is set to the kind of music available in a planetarium while the competitors' identities are flashed on the screen through computerized graphics. Like we said, pretentious.

The first phase (another space term) was a video-game competition. It's hard to figure America's fascination with these games in arcades, but it's even more boring watching others playing them on TV.

Phase 2 supposedly tests mental agility by having the players recite, in reverse order, the names of five American cities. Now it would have been a real test if Soviet or Chinese cities were used. In one great feat, a contestant recalled Denver, Cheyenne, Pierre, Minneapolis and Chicago.

The next phase tested physical ability with an obstacle-course-of-the-future, complete with slides, balance bridges, twisting tubes, swings and jet skis. To lend authenticity to the challenge, a gymnastics coach fired the starter's pistol and the competitors donned life jackets for the jet skis.

"The Superstars" does this much better because well-known athletes are testing their skills. The public will have a hard time finding the competition in "The Krypton Factor" credible or meaningful.

The producers blew their serious cover by adding canned laughter as the one women competitor got stuck on one of the foam-rubber traps.

The most absurd segment was the "Observation Phase," in which the contestants get to see a clip from the movie "The Legend of Lone Ranger" and try to remember meaningless facts. This was a forgettable movie in the first place, but you must remember "The Krypton Factor" is looking for impossible challenges.

Some sample questions: Was the gallows lever pulled with the left or the right hand? How many swords were on the wall? Which actor played the character with the moustache in the hanging scene?

To answer that last question, the producers stole a page from "To Tell the Truth" and brought out six actors. None of the contestants picked the right one, proving "The Legend of Lone Ranger" was hard to watch even in condensed form.

So was "The Krypton Factor," which Alan Landsburg, one of the producers, says will be a success "if the audience gets involved in the show. We want the people playing at home with us." Tonight's show is the first of five this summer. If the program catches on, 16 more are scheduled for later.

In an interview, Landsburg said "The Krypton Factor" is a search for a person who has super qualities.

The search stops with anybody who can sit through this show.

'Hill Street Blues' Takes 21 Emmy Nominations

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The police show "Hill Street Blues" has swept the Emmy nominations, but "Lou Grant" and the two miniseries "Shogun" and "Masada" were not far behind.

"Hill Street Blues," which airs on NBC, received 21 nominations, believed to be a record number for a regular dramatic series. Only "Roots," with 33, got more, the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences announced Thursday.

"Shogun," also on NBC, had 14 nominations, and ABC's "Masada" and CBS's "Lou Grant" tied at 13 each.

Two comedy series, ABC's "Taxi" and CBS's "M-A-S-H" each got nine. Other multiple nominations went to CBS's "Playing for Time" and "Dallas" and PBS's "Dance in America," six each; NBC's "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters," CBS's "WKRP in Cincinnati" and PBS's "Cosmos" and "National Geographic Specials," five each.

CBS led in nominations with 104. NBC was second with 92, and ABC was third with 79. PBS got 32, and seven went to syndicated shows.

Nominations are for programs telecast between July 1, 1980 and June 30, 1981.

The prime-time Emmy Awards will be presented Sunday Sept. 13 at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium. CBS will carry it live.

"Hill Street Blues" was nominated as best dramatic series, and seven members of the cast were selected. Daniel Travanti was nominated for best actor in a dramatic series, and regular Veronica Hamel and guest star Barbara Babcock were nominated as best actresses. Supporting nominations went to Michael Conrad, Charles Haid, Bruce Weitz, Barbara Bosson and Betty Thomas.

"Shogun," in which Richard Chamberlain played a shipwrecked English sailor who became a samurai and Toshiro Mifune was a Japanese warrior, was nominated for best limited series. They were nominated as best lead actors, Yoko Shimada was nominated as best lead actress, and supporting nominations went to Yuki Meguro and John Rhys-Davies.

"Masada," the tale of the epic struggle between the Romans and Jewish zealots, also was nominated as best limited series. Peter O'Toole, as the Roman general, and Peter Strauss, as the Jewish leader who personified the struggle, were nominated for best lead actors in a limited series. David Warner and Anthony Quayle were nominated as best supporting actors.

"Lou Grant," which dominated last year's nominations, was selected for best dramatic series. Other nominations went to Edward Asner as best lead actor and to Mason Adams, Robert Walden, Linda Kelsey and Nancy Marchand for their supporting roles.

"Taxi" and "M-A-S-H" were nominated as best comedy series. Alan Alda was nominated as best actor in w comedy for "M-A-S-H" and Judd Hirsch for "Taxi." Guest star Eileen Brennan was nominated for best lead actress for an episode of "Taxi." Supporting nominations went to Danny DeVito of "Taxi" and to Harry Morgan, David Ogden Stiers and Loretta Swit of "M-A-S-H."

TV Taping Halted By Estrada Feud

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A legal dispute between Erik Estrada, star of the TV series "CHiPs," and Metro Goldwyn Mayer Film Co., has halted taping of the series' new season.

Production was shut down when Estrada failed to report for work, a "CHiPs" spokesman said Thursday. A spokeswoman at Estrada's office said the star did not show up for work as scheduled Wednesday because he feels MGM breached its contract with him.

"The way we see it, he does not have a contract now and he can't go back to work at this time," Estrada's spokeswoman said.

Estrada filed a $6.2 million suit against MGM Tuesday, and MGM filed a $20 million countersuit Wednesday in the dispute over Estrada's starring role in "Sell Out," a TV movie for NBC — the same network that broadcasts "CHiPs."

Estrada, in his suit, claimed that MGM caused him to give up the film role by giving him a starting date for "CHiPs" that conflicted with the TV movie schedule. He alleged that MGM demanded $100,000 to delay the starting date of "CHiPs" and allow Estrada to shoot the movie.

MGM asks damages for Estrada's failure to show up for work on the scheduled starting date for taping of the series.

NBC, which is not a party to the lawsuits, issued a brief statement saying, "NBC is hopeful MGM and Erik Estrada can resolve their differences soon."

Bill Barron, spokesman for the show, said he hoped shooting could start Monday.

Calling Off His TV Boycott

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Tennessee minister says he is calling off his boycott of television shows sponsored by General Foods Corp. and American Home Products.

The Rev. John M. Hurt, pastor of the Joelton Church of Christ said Thursday both companies made significant changes in the kinds of shows they sponsor after the "Clean Up TV" campaign began last year.

"We are, therefore, asking the thousands of churches and individuals participating in the campaign to end the current boycotts against these two companies effective immediately," Hurt said.

Thousands Are Applying For Air Controller Jobs

By JANET PLUME
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Striking air controllers say they're underpaid, understaffed and overworked. But thousands of people around the country are interested in giving the job a try anyway. The government has started printing 100,000 flyers outlining qualifications for air traffic controllers. Thousands of people are asking for applications. And the federal training center here is gearing up for an unprecedented flow of new students, now that pink slips have begun going out to 13,000 controllers on an illegal strike. Officials at a Federal Aviation Administration training center here said they are prepared to triple the nation's yearly output of civilian air traffic controllers. The center has been turning out about 1,800 controllers a year.

The application process — from filling out the first form to arriving at the training center — normally takes two months to a year. But that can, and probably will, be reduced to a month, said Mark Weaver, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman at the training center. Branches of the federal Office of Personnel Management around the country have been flooded with job inquiries since the first controllers got dismissal notices Wednesday, the agency said Thursday. In New York City, for example, 1,760 people — including insurance salesmen, teachers and dancers — filled out applications in a five-hour period. Most regional personnel offices are getting about 400 telephone inquiries a day, according to Bill Farris, chief of the special examining unit at the FAA training center. The process formally begins when the Federal Register announces openings for applicants, from Aug. 17 to 28. At that time, more than 100,000 announcements about qualifications will be distributed to people interested in a controller's job, said training center director Tony Hoppers.

"We're anticipating a very heavy response," Farris said, adding that he probably would have to beef up his staff of four specialists to review and rate applicants. Once applicants sign up, the FAA contacts them and schedules psychological, physical and aptitude tests. "We hope to start scheduling exams a week after the Register opens," Hoppers said. Applicants who pass are reviewed and rated by FAA specialists, who then refer them to one of 11 regional FAA agencies. The regional offices decide whom to approve as a trainee, and the trainees are then sent to the Oklahoma City training center. Farris estimated that 7,500 applications are now backlogged. "We have a good supply of applicants should they be needed," Weaver added.

After the initial 11- to 14-week training period, trainees spend six weeks in radar training and up to two years in field training before certification as a journeyman controller. "The real problem in the long run is getting them into the journeyman classification once they are in the field," Weaver said.

White Neighborhood In Denver Invites Blacks

DENVER (AP) — Parents in a predominantly white neighborhood have taken out newspaper advertisements urging black families to move in and help them battle a school desegregation plan. If the campaign attracts enough black families, the parents say, their neighborhood might meet court-imposed standards for racial balance, allowing their children to walk to school. "Thinking about moving?" said the one-column ad in the Denver Weekly. "We invite you to consider Harvey Park in beautiful southwest Denver, a family community (with) neighborhood schools, naturally integrated neighborhood."

Gretchen Palmer, a member of the group organizing the effort, said about 20 black families had expressed interest in moving to the area since the ad first appeared two weeks ago. "I'm not certain a large number of blacks could afford to move out here," Ms. Palmer said, adding that the housing available ranges from moderate to upper income levels. "But at least they'll know the community is here and that we have an open mind."

The newspaper, which circulates in northeastern Denver, has an almost exclusively black readership. Ms. Palmer said she and other parents in the Doul-Denison Community Association were conducting a survey of 3,800 homes to check up on the ethnic-population figures used by the school board's ad hoc committee, which submitted the latest desegregation plan. It calls for busing. The board committee proposes to close one of the two neighborhood elementary schools and bus children to a school outside the area for three of their six elementary-school years.

Judge Dismisses Suit By Evangelist Falwell

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed evangelist Jerry Falwell's $50 million libel suit against Penthouse magazine, calling it a "broad-based attack" on the freedoms of speech and press.

But U.S. District Judge James Turk's decision, released Thursday, leaves room for Falwell to keep the case alive as a contract dispute.

Two free-lance writers published an interview with the Lynchburg minister in the March issue of Penthouse. Falwell alleges he granted them interviews only after telling the writers they couldn't sell it to Penthouse, which he considers pornographic.

"Plaintiff is free to pursue a breach of contract action against the journalists," Turk wrote in his opinion. He gave Falwell's lawyers 30 days to do so.

"But (Falwell) is trampling upon fundamental constitutional freedoms by seeking to convert what is essentially a private contractual dispute into a broad-based attack on these principles of freedom of speech and press which are essential to a free society," Turk wrote.

Falwell declined to comment on the decision until he and his lawyers have a chance to study it.

Penthouse spokesman Rich Jachetti praised Turk's defense of freedom of the press. Penthouse has sufficient evidence to defend itself and the writers should Falwell accuse them of breach of contract, he said.

"There never was a contract," Jachetti said. "It never came up in the conversation," between Falwell and the writers. The two men interviewed Falwell separately in March and October 1980.

"Let him sue the authors," said Penthouse attorney Roy Grutman. "I don't think he'll do it. There's no money in it."

Falwell filed the lawsuit Jan. 30, and Turk suspended

For example, Falwell's attorneys claimed his statements to the press are protected by a common law copyright. There is no such law, Turk wrote.

Turk said Falwell "cannot seriously contend that each of his responses (in the interview) is a product of his intellectual labors which should be recognized as a literary or even intellectual creation. There is nothing concrete which distinguishes his particular expression of ideas from the ordinary."

Falwell contended that the article defamed him. Turk dismissed that by noting even Falwell admits the writers accurately reproduced his comments.

Most upsetting to Falwell was the implication that he willingly granted an interview to Penthouse, which might alienate his followers. But again Turk wrote that a case based on the contract laws could address that.

The claim that the writers and Penthouse conspired to injure Falwell was also dismissed. Falwell produced no evidence that the "defendants acted for any more sinister purpose than to sell magazines," Turk wrote.

He also ruled that laws against invasion of privacy don't apply in this case. Elsewhere in the opinion he pointed out Falwell "has aggressively nurtured the public spotlight to promote and disseminate his personal views."

Falwell's personal dislike for Penthouse isn't enough to base the case on, Turk wrote. "The First Amendment freedoms of speech and press are too precious to be eroded or undermined by the likes and dislikes of persons who invite attention and publicity."

Ask Closing Sauce Plant

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — State officials have asked the courts to close a Durham County Dillard's Bar-B-Q Sauce plant at which bird feathers and insects were discovered in a vinegar tank.

A lawsuit filed in the name of State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham says the vinegar was used in making the sauce manufactured by Dillard Foods Inc.

The department already has ordered a recall of the barbecue sauce and has placed an embargo on the sauce stored at the plant.

A department spokesman said the birds apparently were entering a large storage tank for vinegar through an unprotected vent. Unable to get out, the birds died and decomposed in the vinegar, he said.

Defendants named in the suit are James Dalton Jr., president of Dillard Foods, and William A. Marsh, registered agent for the company.

The suit asks for a preliminary injunction halting operations at the plant.

It says a plant employee told inspectors on July 21 that Dalton had been shown the feathers before but that he took no action.

COOL CONE FOR RACCOON — Ashley Perry of Stone Mountain, Ga., shares her ice cream cone with an enthusiastic friend during visit to the Wildlife Game Ranch at Stone Mountain Park. The raccoon is a member of the ranch's population which includes most of the animals found on farms or in woods in the Southeast. (AP Laserphoto)

Future College Enrollment Prospects Considered

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

A University of North Carolina admissions official says the nation's sluggish economy could have a stimulating effect on applications for college admission. But other state college officials say they don't expect the economy to affect their applications or enrollment.

Dr. James C. Blackburn, director of admissions at UNC-Asheville, says economic uncertainty tends to make people think about their careers and improving their skills.

"Many of these people look to higher education as a way to increase their employability," he said.

Blackburn said applications for admission to the 1981 fall term at the Asheville university were up about 18 percent over last year.

He said increased applications do not always translate directly into increased enrollment.

However, other North Carolina university officials say they have seen no evidence at their schools to support Blackburn's theory.

"We have seen no dramatic increase in the number of applications to Duke over the past year or two," said Duke University Admissions Director Jean Scott. "And our enrollment for the fall term is about what it has been for a while. We try to keep our student body at about 5,700."

Ms. Scott said she believes the rising cost of attending college may be discouraging some high-school students from applying to colleges.

"One thing the economy has produced is higher college costs. And that fact with the decline in high-school students, I think, may actually cut down on applications to colleges," she said.

At the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, applications and enrollment also are about the same as two years ago.

"I'd have to describe our enrollment and applications picture as stable," said Dick Baddour of the admissions office. "We aren't really gaining but we're not losing any, either." Baddour said so far the university hasn't been hurt by the economy. "But on the other hand, it isn't helping, either," he said.

He said UNC in-state and out-of-state applications and enrollment are running about the same as last year. The school has about 14,000 undergraduate students.

Enrollment is up about 2 percent at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee but applications for admission are slightly behind last year, according to Joseph Creech, director of academic services.

"Of course, it is obvious from our figures that decreased applications don't necessarily mean decreased enrollment and vice versa," he said.

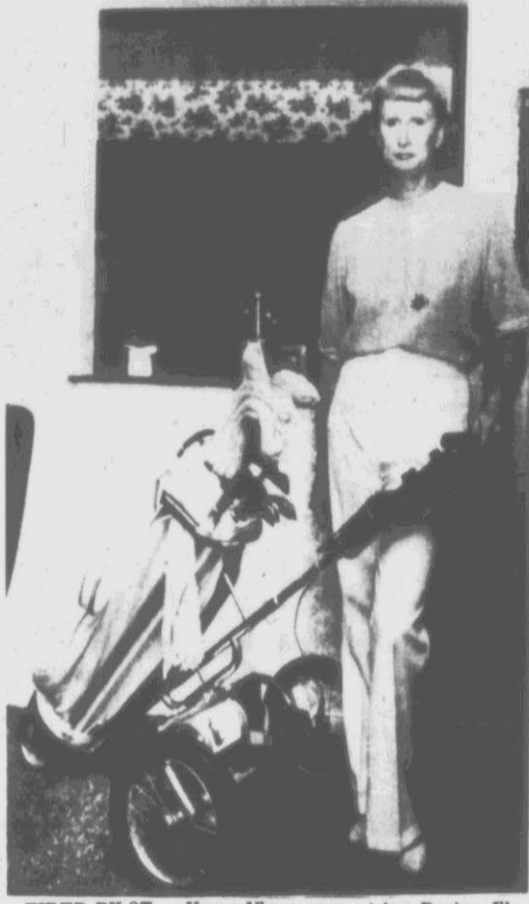

Creech said WCU's enrollment has steadily increased over the past several years. "But I can't say with any certainty that the economy has had anything to do with it. In fact, I tend to think that rising college costs would depress enrollment."

However, George Dixon, associate director of admissions at North Carolina State University in Raleigh, believes Blackburn's theory "is right on the nailhead." Dixon said N.C. State's applications were up more than 6 percent for the fall term.

"It seems to me that when the economic picture and job picture is bleak, people start to think about careers and making a living," Dixon said. "So from that standpoint, I think the theory makes sense."

"But I also see that costs and reduced financial aid may make more people want to go to college. But in reality fewer people may be able to go to college because of the cost," he added.

Slain Man Said Court Witness

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — An Eden man shot to death in front of his home Tuesday night apparently was scheduled to appear before a Roanoke, Va., federal grand jury investigating alleged weapon and narcotics trafficking in the Virginia coalfields.

Relatives of Clarence Wayne Tilley, 35, a brewery worker, said Thursday that they have been told by law enforcement officers that Tilley was a potential witness.

"None of us knew anything about it until Tuesday when we talked to investigators," Elwood Tilley, Clarence's brother, said in a telephone interview.

Tilley died at a hospital Tuesday night, shortly after he was cut down by gunfire from a vehicle outside his home.

He was a part-time pilot and flight instructor at Rockingham County's community airport, a site suspected by authorities for years as a dropping point for drugs in the area.

Elwood Tilley said that his brother "was supposed to go up (to Roanoke) and testify about guns and drug trafficking." He said he learned that his brother had been cooperating with federal authorities in Greensboro, N.C.

Tilley said that his brother had been agitated Tuesday and had not slept before leaving his mother's house for work about 9:30 Tuesday night.

"He knew something was wrong but he would not reveal it," Elwood Tilley said. Eden Police Chief Charles R. Perry said investigators had no suspects and no leads and that the only trace of evidence they have is a description of a vehicle seen in the area near the time of the shooting. Police are not sure the car is related to the shooting.

The U.S. attorney in Roanoke, an FBI spokesman in Greensboro and agents for the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms all refused to discuss the case.

In recent court proceedings, federal officials have confirmed the existence of a grand jury investigation into an alleged weapons and drug operation centered in Wise County, Va.

It is thought the operators are trading American guns for drugs in Columbia, South America, and using the coalfields of southwest Virginia as a cover for the smuggling.

High Point Drug-Seizure

HIGH POINT, N.C. — Heroin with a street value of more than $200,000 was seized Thursday and State Bureau of Investigation agents arrested a New York City man in connection with trafficking the drug, High Point police said.

William Allen Vicks Jr., 21, of 425 E. 125th St., was arrested at the High Point bus station and charged with trafficking in heroin, felony possession of heroin, possession of heroin with intent to sell, manufacturing heroin by packaging and carrying a concealed weapon.

Vice and narcotics officers said Vicks was disarmed of a .38-caliber pistol when he got off a bus and was taken into custody without incident.

Officers said 245 packets of heroin, weighing around one-quarter of a pound, were seized from an overnight bag the suspect was carrying.

Police Capt. Paul Wood said the packets were valued at $25 each.

Wood said he believes the heroin would have been cut 4 or 5 times to reduce its strength, adding, "New York heroin would kill users here, who are used to about two percent heroin."

He said the confiscation of the heroin was one of the largest ever in North Carolina.
