

HIGH WATER . . . As an official Greenville Utilities recording of 4.46 inches of rain fell on the area last night, flooding was reported on several streets. At the railroad underpass on Dickinson Avenue, above, water was about 10 feet deep, according to a policeman at the scene. The historical marker (arrow) on the north side of the underpass was almost submerged, and adjoining streets were also flooded. A jeep was stranded at the bottom, and rising water prevented its rescue until the water receded. At left, a local wrecker pulls a truck out of water at the underpass. Other high-water areas included the Reade Street-Cotanche Street intersection downtown and West Tenth Street, and Charles Boulevard at the Southern Railroad underpass. ## Vicious All-Night Storm Hits

By MARY SCHULKEN and TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writers

A vicious all-night storm lashed Pitt and surrounding counties late Tuesday and into the early morning hours Wednesday, punching power lines with lightning and saturating city streets with water.

Acting director of Greenville Utilities Malcolm Green called the storm the "worst I've ever seen in this area." The storm, which lasted from around 7 p.m. Tuesday night to 4 a.m. Wednesday morning, destroyed five Greenville Utilities' transformers. "We had to replace all five," said Green, "which takes about two hours per transformer."

Green added that the utilities had three separate fire calls to respond to and approximately 30-35 fuses to replace because of lightning strikes on lines.

"We called out five teams of additional manpower at about 9 p.m.," he said. Green reported that no main lines or poles were down.

"We did have about a 15 minute outage this morning at West End when a pole caught fire," added the acting utilities' director.

Green said men were hampered by high water, lightning, poor visibility and rain. "Some utility vehicles got caught in high water and had to be dried out," he explained. "We came out of it well, though," Green noted. "By 2 a.m. everything was caught up and by 3:30 crews went home."

The entire town of Winterville was without power for close to three hours, reported town clerk Elwood Nobles. "We had outages in different areas the whole time between about 8 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.," Nobles said lightning apparently knocked out breakers in the town's system.

Ayden reported several small power outages from the thunderstorm, but according to utilities director Mark Suggs, "none were serious — just fuses blown here and there — about 14 of them — and we lost one transformer." Suggs said power was interrupted in scattered areas for period of 15-20 minutes to an hour.

Most major thoroughfares in Greenville were inundated by midnight, making Greenville Boulevard temporarily the only path across town. "We had Dickinson, and 14th streets barricaded," said public works director Mayo Allen, "and Charles, Tenth and other smaller streets were flooded." Stalled vehicles in these areas hampered cleanup operations.

Numerous subdivisions and apartment complexes including Wilson Apartments, Hopkins Park and Belvedere reported flooding.

Harold Ross of the Department of Transportation reported Evans Street and Charles Boulevard were still under water this morning. "Evans Street near the Reese Apartments had water running across it and the water didn't recede between 8 and 11 a.m. today."

Ross said he had no reports of flooded roads in the county, "just a few washouts on dirt roads — but no damage to secondary roads."

Allen said 14th Street was still under water this morning but he predicted that by noon today "everything should be cleared up."

"We had no damage to streets that I know of," he said. "This morning our street division was out checking every basin and flooded area, making sure no pipes were blocked by stumps or debris."

The public works director noted Green Springs Park was (Please turn to Page 16)

Atlantic Airline Traffic Resuming Normal Level

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, bolstered by the support of airlines and Canadian air traffic controllers' resumed handling of U.S. flights, appears to be strengthening its hand in a strike by 12,000 U.S. controllers.

Officials sought to restore air traffic between Europe and the United States to near-normal levels today as Canadian controllers ended a two-day boycott that had cut trans-Atlantic flights to a trickle.

Dick Stafford, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman, said the key trans-Atlantic control center near Gander, Newfoundland, reopened at 6:30 a.m. EDT today after being closed since 4 a.m. Tuesday.

Transport Canada, the government agency that operates Canadian airports, said controllers throughout Canada agreed shortly after midnight today to resume handling flights to and from the United States.

Airline executives, after meeting Tuesday with Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, said they staunchly support President Reagan's handling of the crisis and his decision to fire the striking controllers.

But the executives said the strike, now in its 10th day, will have far-reaching effects on their industry, forcing layoffs, pay cuts and scrapping of marginal routes. Some companies may have to be restructured, they said.

The end of the Canadian boycott and of one in New Zealand leaves only Spanish controllers refusing to handle flights to the United States in support of the American strikers.

But action by controllers in other countries sympathetic to their American counterparts could still create havoc for international travelers. Australian controllers, saying U.S. skies are not safe because of the strike, were seeking a court injunction to stop flights between Australia and the United States. That same safety argument was used by the Canadian controllers in their boycott.

Portuguese controllers have voted a boycott beginning Saturday and the international federation of controllers' unions meets Thursday in Amsterdam to discuss joint international action.

The FAA is seeking ways to ensure service on overseas flights in the event Portuguese controllers carry out a threat to begin blocking a trans-Atlantic route over the Azores on Saturday.

FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms said that if both the northern route over Gander and, and the Santa Maria route over the Azores were interrupted, "we'd have difficulty, major difficulty."

But he said he had a plan that he hoped would prevent total interruption of trans-Atlantic flights should that occur. He would not give details of the plan.

The protest by the Canadian controllers had resulted in scores of cancellations and delays of eight to 10 hours in those flights that were able to depart. Thousands of passengers were stranded at many European airports.

Flights normally going over Gander were rerouted to a new east-west route just south of Canadian air space. The new route, however, could handle only four planes an hour, a fifth of the normal traffic load during peak periods.

The airline industry, which has lost about $430 million over the past 18 months, acknowledged that its attempts at economic recovery were dealt a severe blow by the controllers strike. Industry analysts, nonetheless, said the reduction of services might be beneficial to some carriers in the long run.

"It's not a blessing, it's a curse to our industry," said John J. Casey, chairman of Braniff International. He said his airline already has cut 2,000 people from the payroll since the strike.

A spokesman for the industry put losses at $25 million to $30 million a day since the strike began Aug. 3, but said those figures could drop substantially once flights are stabilized and customers return.

Lewis told reporters after the meeting that commercial flights probably will be kept 25 percent below normal levels until next April, when additional controllers might be ready.

Four Killed As Freight, Commuter Trains Collide

BEVERLY, Mass. (AP) — A freight train that was struck head-on by a whistle-blowing, braking commuter train, killing four people, wasn't supposed to be on the track at the time, a railroad official says.

Many of the 27 people who were injured in the crash Tuesday afternoon had been headed back to Boston from a day at the beach.

Cranes separated the wreckage early today so the mangled bodies of victims could be removed.

The commuter train, with a passenger car and crew compartment in the lead and a locomotive at the rear, was moving along an eight-mile section of rail that had been reduced to a single track for more than a year because of railroad construction, officials said.

The two Boston & Maine Railroad trains collided 200 yards from a station in the wealthy Prides Crossing section of Beverly, about 17 miles northeast of Boston.

Metal exploded. The dead passenger car, its crew compartment shredded, reared atop the locomotive.

It wasn't clear how fast the trains were going when they hit.

The freight train "was on the tracks at the wrong time," said Gloria Stone, a spokeswoman for the Boston & Maine Railroad. "The reason why is under investigation."

"Commuter trains always get priority," she said.

"Somebody got the wrong train orders," said Roger Bergeron, a Federal Railroad Administration inspector. "One of those trains was given the wrong information."

Christopher C. Rich of the state Department of Public Utilities said it was likely the crash would be the subject of separate state and federal investigations. Both studies, he said, would focus on what type of orders were given to the crews of the two trains.

Those written orders, Rich said, "are the Bible."

"If it says go, you go. If it says don't go, you stop," he said. "You don't question that. Evidently, something went wrong."

The body of a conductor on the passenger train, 61-year-old Paul Sullivan of Rockport, was found on the tracks.

The bodies of three crewmen were extricated from the cab of the freight train's locomotive hours after the crash, trooper Edward Connolly of the state police said today. Earlier, authorities had said only two bodies were trapped in the locomotive.

Their identities were unavailable.

Deputy Fire Chief Bill McPherson said two of the men were crew members, but the third was not an authorized member of the crew.

The injured, many of whom suffered cuts and bruises, were treated at nearby hospitals.

Joan Lowery, 32, of Boston, had fallen asleep on the passenger train and woke up just before the collision.

Old Nerve Gas Being Shipped

DUGWAY PROVING GROUND, Utah (AP) — The first of two Air Force C-141 transport planes, each carrying 64 deadly Weyete nerve gas bombs, touched down at Michael Airfield here this morning, completing the first transfer of the bombs from Colorado to Utah.

The flights began a three-week series of 15 flights to carry out the controversial transfer of 888 lethal Weyete bombs from the Rocky Mountain Arsenal to a permanent storage in igloo-like concrete bunkers at the Tooele Army Depot, 35 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

The exact time of the first movement of the bombs, each containing 346 pounds of the nerve agent GB, had been withheld from the public by the Army for what it termed security reasons.

The 45-minute flights over the Rocky Mountains ended at Dugway Proving Ground, 65 miles southwest of Salt Lake City. The bombs will be stored temporarily at Dugway, then moved in weekly truck convoys to Tooele Army Depot for permanent storage.

The Army says the flights will be made once or twice a day, three times a week, until all the bombs are in Utah. Each plane will carry 64 bombs.

HOME BURNED

The mobile home of Wayne and Jean Eubanks and their daughter, Beverly, near Black Jack was struck by lightning and totally destroyed by fire last night. The family was away from home at the time, so they are safe, but they saved nothing. Gethsemane Pentecostal Holiness Church, Grimesland, has asked Hotline to appeal for donations of household goods and clothing for the couple and their 11-year-old daughter.

Sizes are as follows: Wayne — extra large — 36 waist, 30 length, nine EE shoe; Jean, size 9-10 pants and dress, 6 or 6½ shoe; Beverly, 12-14 girl's dress, pants, five shoe. Inquiries may be made by calling the home of Eubanks' sister, Sandra Mayo, 752-2723, and donations may be brought to her home in the Eastern Pines community.

HOUSE DAMAGED IN EXPLOSION — An explosion in a dwelling at 1227 Davenport St. about 11:20 p.m. yesterday "left the house almost totally destroyed" Police Department investigators reported this morning. Chief Glenn Cannon said Ms. Margaret Blackmon told investigators she smelled gas in the dwelling and called a next-door neighbor for assistance. After attempting to turn the gas off, Joe Godette Jr. of 1229

Davenport St. called the Greenville Utilities Commission and the fire department. He and Ms. Blackmon then left the residence. About two minutes later, investigators said, just as fire units arrived, an explosion ripped through the building, causing heavy damage to the wood-frame structure. No one was reported injured in the blast. (Reflector Photo by Larry Zicherman)

Natural Gas Price To Fall

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Utilities Commission members last night were told that natural gas rates will decrease beginning Sept. 1.

According to acting utilities director Malcolm Green, the 57 cents per 1,000 cubic feet decrease in rates — a 12½ percent reduction — will be passed along to both firm and interruptible gas customers.

The rate reduction is being "tracked" by GUC's supplier North Carolina Natural Gas from Transco, from whom NCAE purchases natural gas.

The commission also voted to have consultants conduct a detailed study of health insurance options available for commission employees in an effort to provide the best possible health care insurance at the lowest possible cost.

In other business, commissioners approved low bids for the purchase of a year's supply of wood poles from Escambia Treating Co. for $154,193; three 1500KVA padmount transformers from Mill Power Supply Co. for $41,409; 50,445 pounds of aluminum conductor from GE Supply Co. for $38,842; and a trencher from Contractor's Service and Rental Co. for $10,198.

Commissioners also tabled action on a request for extension of water service to the Moore Subdivision on secondary road 1529, and adopted a resolution assigning all rights of an agreement between the commission and Carolina Power and Light Co. for future service to N.C. Power Agency No. 3 until December 31.

A resolution of appreciation to utilities director Charles Horne from Power Agency No. 3 for his work on the negotiating team, was read at the meeting.

Horne, who is recuperating from an illness, has returned to work part-time and attended the meeting for a short time last night.

Dear Abby

Abby Gives Advice About Her Advice

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for years, but I never thought I'd be writing. However, before I do, I need some answers:

1. If I don't want to sign my name and address, is there any chance that my letter will be answered in your column, or do you use only signed letters?
2. If I want a personal reply, what is your address?
3. If you use a letter in your column from someone who doesn't want to be identified, do you ever change names? How about the cities?
4. When you answer a letter personally, do you ever put your name on the envelope?
5. When you answer with a personal letter, how long does it take to get an answer? Thank you.

NEEDS HELP IN WYOMING

DEAR NEEDS: 1. A letter need not be signed in order to appear in my column.

2. For a personal, unpublished reply, write to: DEAR ABBY, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

And please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. (I am not obligated to answer letters that do not.)

3. The names and locations are sometimes changed in order to protect the privacy of those who request it.

4. I never put my name on the envelope.

5. Unless there is an unusually heavy load of mail, every letter is answered the same week it is received.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the possibilities of outrageously long, hyphenated, compound-complex family names, may I submit the following?

China has a population of over a billion people. However, there are only 100 Chinese family names, and almost all of them have only one syllable, such as Chang, Wang, Yen, Lee, Woo, Chou, Chu, Deng, Ma, Liu.

Would you believe that you have just finished reading 10 percent of all the Chinese family names of the one billion Chinese people? Believe it or not. Amen.

WALTER H. YEH, COLUMBIA, S.C.

DEAR WALTER: Fascinating? Yeh!

DEAR ABBY: The letter from STILL IN SHOCK IN N.C. concerned inappropriate questions asked a widow at the funeral of her husband. ("Did he leave you fairly well fixed?" And, "Do you think you'll ever marry again?")

I think this tops them all. After 22 years of marriage, my husband died. Four months before he passed away, he sold a secondhand truck to a man who had the nerve to come up to me at the funeral and ask, "Did your husband happen to leave any 'touch-up' paint for the truck?"

My blood pressure still goes up every time I think of it. If they gave a bad-taste award, this person would win it.

OHIO WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: Sorry, I think the bad-taste award would go to the woman mentioned in the following letter:

DEAR ABBY: Speaking of stupid, ill-timed remarks: At my husband's funeral, a friend (?) put her arms around me and said, "Well, now that Willie is gone, I'll bet you end up with your old boyfriend Raymond after all. I hear his wife is dying."

SPEECHLESS IN OREGON

CONFIDENTIAL TO HATE HIS GUTS IN JACKSONVILLE: Save your hate. It will eat your guts out long before it will make a dent in his!

DEAR ABBY: I know I must have many sympathizers on this one. I need some up-to-date advice on how to look feminine and glamorous at the office without letting men think I am on the make.

If I wear high-fashion clothes that flatter my figure and bring out the best in me, all the old creeps (never the nice eligible men) make passes at me. If I dress to repel the old creeps, I creep further into old-maidhood. I am 30. Any suggestions?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: "Nice, eligible men" never make passes at anyone. A guide to appropriate office attire includes a long list of don'ts:

Don't strive for "glamour" in the office. Femininity, yes. Glamour, no! Don't wear shorts, or too-short skirts. Don't wear plunging necklines or anything skin tight. See-through blouses are a no-no. Leave the junk jewelry at home. Don't wear cocktail clothes to work. Pants are fine if they are well-tailored and worn with a matching jacket. Lounging pajamas, jumpsuits or jeans with T-shirts are inappropriate.

If you follow the above suggestions, and the old creeps still make passes at you, you'd better check the look in your eye.

Create Clothes With A Western Look

Creating the Western look doesn't require buying a new wardrobe. The addition of trimmings, fringes, piping and buttons or other notions can be added to clothes you make, or those you already own.

Participants in the national 4-H clothing program, supported by Coats & Clark, Inc. and the fashion revue program, sponsored by Simplicity Pattern Co., Inc. recommend a variety of ways to create the cowboy or rodeo look.

For example, when making a shirt, add cording and pearl snaps. Accessories, such as bolo ties, beaded belts and brass buckles combined with denim can be teamed for a real high-plains look. Flounced skirts, calico prints, yokes and ruffles trimmed with eyelets or lace can create a feminine prairie look.

One effective way to decorate your garments is piping—folded bias tape—added to yokes, pockets and cuffs. It comes plain or corded and can be purchased in a variety of colors.

Here are some tips for applying corded piping to a seam:

—Piping is stitched to a single garment section before the two garment sections are sewn together. Pin or baste piping to right side of one garment section with all raw edges even. On curves or corners, clip the seam allowance of the piping, if necessary. Using a zipper foot on the sewing machine, sew over the stitching on the piping.

—Pin or baste the two garment sections together with wrong sides out, raw edges even. With a zipper foot, stitch along former stitching, closer to cord.

Aside from creating fashionable clothing for themselves and others, members in both 4-H programs also learned the skills necessary to make wardrobe accessories through knitting, crocheting or other needlecraft arts. In both programs, conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service, members studied career opportunities associated with the clothing industry.

A variety of incentives are available to members who excel in each activity. In both programs, medals of honor are presented to outstanding 4-H'ers in each county. Both Coats & Clark and Simplicity support expense-paid trips for state winners to attend the 60th National 4-H Congress, November 30-December 3, in Chicago, Ill. Six national winners in each program receive $1,000 scholarships. A highlight of the Congress is the National 4-H Fashion Revue.

Boys and girls, nine to 19, can obtain more information on 4-H programs by contacting the Pitt County Extension Office at 752-2834.

Couple Committed As Companions Can Make Selves And Children Happy, Prof Says

PROVO, Utah. (AP) — Can couples have the best of both worlds — a happy marriage and children too?

Though much research since 1940 shows it's difficult, says a Brigham Young University professor, he believes couples can avoid much of the stress and strain that children pose to marriage without avoiding parenthood.

Dr. Boyd C. Rollins points out that most family studies indicate that, on the average, marital satisfaction begins to decline at the birth of the couple's first child, levels out at the bottom during the oldest child's adolescent years, and then starts rising again about the time the children leave home.

Studies have also indicated that marital satisfaction was higher for couples with no dependent children in the home than for comparable couples with children, adds Rollins, BYU professor of Family Studies and an Associate of the BYU Family and Demographic Research Institute.

Despite such research, he hesitates to label children as the main catalyst for decreasing marital satisfaction.

"Although the amount of time a couple spends together and the amount of time they communicate are correlated with the level of satisfaction toward their marriage or their children, in the studies I have examined the importance married people place on companionship remains high regardless of their situation.

"This suggests that if couples spend a lot of time together children won't interfere with the quality of their marriage," Rollins says.

Rollins discovered that children's activities often push couples into peripheral, time-consuming obligations which ultimately keep them from spending as much time as they would like with each other and with their children.

"When I did my last study, parents were saying things like, 'My primary interest is meeting the needs of my family. I wish I could spend more time with my kids, but really it's for my kids that I'm working overtime. It's for my kids that I'm working in Cub Scouts and coaching Little League baseball and involved with the PTA and doing this church work and helping with this other community project.'

"Some say, 'Well, we have to sacrifice for the benefit of the kids,'" Rollins continues. "But the kids are not going to be helped if the quality of the marriage is decreased. Indirectly that is going to hurt the kids. It always does."

Rollins' research indicates parents must spend as much time together throughout their marriage as they did when newly wed — if they expect marital satisfaction to remain high. For those couples who managed to maintain a higher level of companionship throughout the marriage, marital satisfaction didn't follow the typical decline when dependent children were in the home.

A higher awareness of the potential threats to companionship and more commitment to companionship can keep children from hurting marriages, Rollins explains.

For example, one couple had two sons, one in high school and one in junior high. Both boys played basketball, with their games often scheduled at the same time. The parents wanted to support their children and so every week the father would attend one game, the mother the other game and the next week they would switch.

After attending a lecture by Rollins, the couple decided to change the situation. Each boy would now have both of his parents in the audience every other week. In the new arrangement, the parents could enjoy an evening together as well as demonstrate their interest in the sons' athletic events.

Tied to TVs?

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are more attuned to their television sets than to any other appliance in the household except perhaps stoves, according to a report on TV in the United States.

Today, the RCA study showed, there are more than 150 million TV sets playing in American homes — more than telephones, refrigerators, air conditioners, vacuum cleaners, and-or dishwashers.

Other statistics revealed by the report: some 98 percent of the nation's homes have at least one TV set, 85 percent have color and nearly 50 percent have two sets or more. Daily television in American homes averages about 6½ hours.

SOCIAL ACCESS

NEW YORK (AP) — For the many solo men and women traveling today on business, a market-research expert suggests an acceptable way to meet people.

"If restaurants in hotels promoted the option of dining at a 'family style' table for 'single' diners, the clientele would be enthusiastic and the word would spread, improving business for the restaurant, too," said Judith Langer, president of a market-research firm here and publisher of "The Langer Report," which studies consumer attitudes and behavior.

A Special Privilege

You say you need a place at the beach? How about a three bedroom brick, air conditioned cottage with 1½ baths at Cape Hatteras Light-house. Linens and utensils included for only $40 a night.

Nice, huh? It is available. The government owns it and rents it out. The only problem is the government doesn't rent it to all you middle class citizens who pay the bills. This cottage is reserved for Very Important Persons in government, or whoever they choose as their guests.

The house was obtained by the government along with the light-house and it is one of several such hideaways around the country which are available to congressmen, or high administrative officials.

The Cape Hatteras house might not be a palace, but as one park official put it "As beach front property goes, it's not bad."

Regrettably it is one more of those things which hit at the heart of democracy — special services available only to high people in government, those who are supposed to serve the people rather than the other way around.

It is one more thing that should be eliminated from the list of special treatment that government higher ups receive. Like chauffeured limousines, jaunts to Europe and personal flights, the VIP beach house has no place in a government of a democracy.

Air Travel Situation Difficult

Canadian air traffic controllers, plus some controllers in other countries have supported the United States' controllers by slowing down, or refusing to handle U. S. flights.

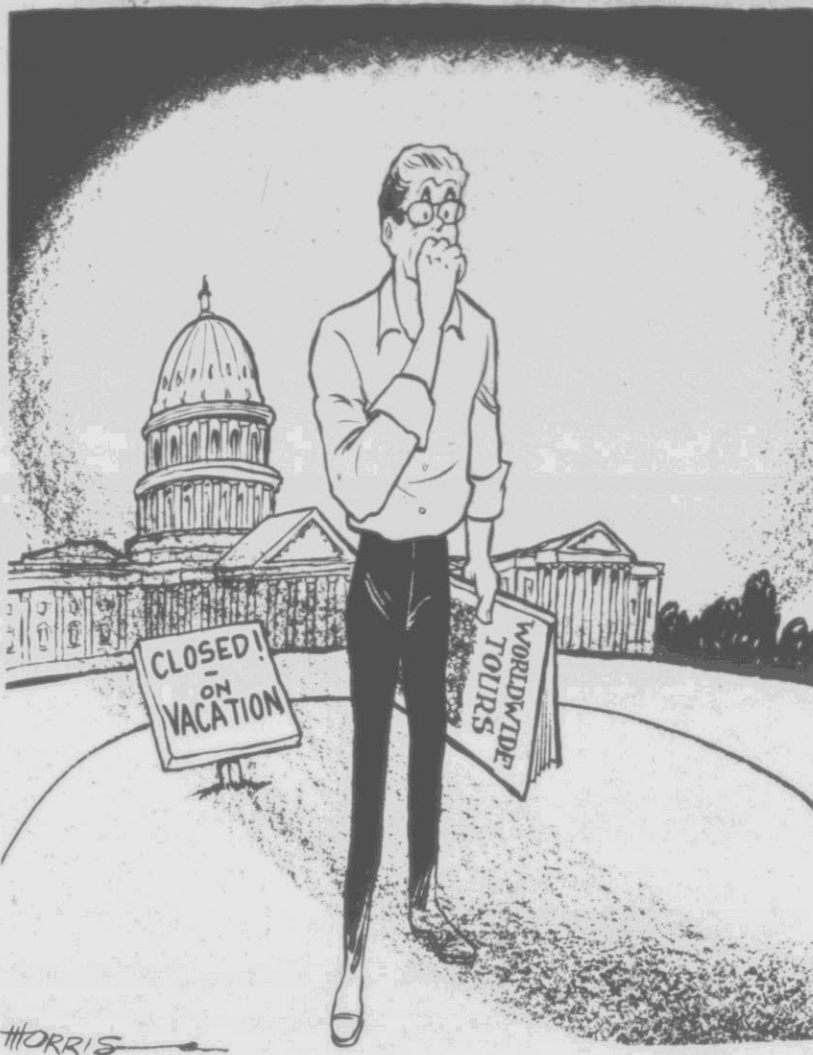

It is regrettable, but it can't change the situation in our country where most agree that an illegal strike has been called by the air controllers' union.

At this point the striking controllers have been fired, their work is being done by supervisory personnel and military controllers and plans are underway to train new controllers to replace those who left their jobs.

It is not any easy predicament for the nation, the striking controllers, the public or the air lines. Nevertheless it is a no-backdown situation for the government, unless somehow can be found to return the striking controllers to their jobs without further concessions.

WONDER WHERE MY CONGRESSMAN IS?

BY ART BUCHWALD

Run For Your Tax Cut

I went down to the White House the other morning to pick up my tax cut. President Reagan was sitting at the gate behind a card table counting out the money. He handed me over $800 and said, "You're much better off today than you were yesterday."

"Yes sir," I said. "This money is going to come in mighty handy."

"What are you going to do with it?" he wanted to know.

"I'm going to invest in America," I assured him. "I'm going to put it in the bank, buy stocks and bonds, a new house, and a new car, and if there's anything left over, I might purchase the Conoco Oil Company."

The president smiled. "I'm glad to hear you say that. That's what my tax-cutting program is all about. The American working man is going to get the fruits of his labor and no longer be burdened with carrying the heavy load of a welfare state."

The president gave me an extra dollar just for good luck.

I walked away happily with the cash burning a hole in my pocket. Just a few blocks from the White House, a man jumped from a doorway and said, "Your money or your life."

"Are you a thief?" I inquired.

"No. I'm from the school board. The government has cut back on all our programs and we're going to have to make it up one way or the other."

"Will you take $200?" I asked.

"It won't cover the lunch program, but we'll let you off easy this time."

I gave the man $200. I still had $600 to play with. I was looking for a good office building to invest in, when I decided to buy a box of cigars. There was a $5 tax on them.

said human resources wasn't the fed's responsibility any more..."

"How much is the sales tax going to take out of my tax cut?" I asked the mayor.

"How much you got?" he asked.

"Five hundred dollars," I lied.

"That should about do it," he said.

When I went back to the office there was a call from my wife, who announced there had been a new assessment put on our house. The enclosed notice warned that unless we sent in our tax in advance the city would no longer be able to provide water or sewage and there would be no street lights after 8:30 p.m.

Well, that more or less took care of my tax cut.

I went back to the White House. President Reagan was still smiling as he counted out the money for each taxpayer.

"Mr. President," I asked, "why are we better off today than we were yesterday?"

He looked puzzled at the question until one of his staff handed him a chart.

"It's self-explanatory," Mr. Reagan said. "All you have to do is follow the solid black line."

So Far, Reagan's Been Lucky

By OWEN ULLMANN

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) —

When it comes to the state of the economy, President Reagan has been pretty lucky.

Inflation is coming down, oil supplies are plentiful, food prices have stabilized, the economy has not collapsed under the weight of record interest rates, the dollar is almighty overseas once again, and — at least for now — even unemployment is on the wane.

The Iranian revolution triggered a worldwide oil shortage in 1979 that sent energy prices soaring and rekindled double-digit inflation in the United States. Bad weather contributed to higher than expected food prices from 1978 through 1980. The U.S. dollar plummeted on the foreign exchanges, forcing Carter to rush to its aid.

Some critics suggest many of Carter's problems were of his own making. His administration might have prevented the 1979 oil shortage had it remained supportive of the late shah of Iran. And Carter might have kept inflation down and the dollar up had he held a tighter rein on federal spending and encouraged the Federal Reserve Board to continue a tight-money policy.

But surely Carter could not be blamed for last year's severe summer drought and other bad weather responsible for rising food prices any more than Reagan can be credited for the mild winter weather and unexpected surplus of beef cattle that have held food prices steady most of this year.

The most encouraging economic development since Reagan took office has been enactment of his economic proposals.

Reagan's string of good luck is something his predecessor could have used. Instead, Jimmy Carter seemed to be a victim of economic misfortune.

MX Crisis Hits Home

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger's proposal to base the MX missile in airplanes has triggered President Reagan's first defense crisis, threatening highest-level Air Force resignations and a bipartisan revolt by defense leaders in Congress.

The defense community was flabbergasted by the result of Weinberger's long, soul-searching study of how to make the mobile MX missile invulnerable to Soviet surprise attack. Reaganauts in both the Pentagon and Congress fret that Cap has knifed the Republican party's pledge for "The earliest possible deployment of the MX in a prudent, survivable configuration." Those words, specifically cleared by candidate Ronald Reagan, were written into the 1980 party platform.

If Reagan and Weinberger succumb to pressures building against the air-based MX system, more months of delay to decide on a substitute are certain. But if they stick to Weinberger's favored basing system, they will confront not only those Air Force resignations but an informed opinion within the defense community that no air-based system can be truly invulnerable.

Why Weinberger has selected the most costly and least effective MX option is unanswerable in technological terms. The suspicion is that Reagan, under pressure from Western state Republicans, ruled out the Carter land-based system. Whatever the cause, the president faces a political crisis over the nation's strategic security.

This danger was brought straight to the Oval Office Aug. 6 when Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, had his first serious MX talk with Reagan as president. With Weinberger present, Tower gave this carefully-considered warning: Congress never will buy the air-based MX system.

At almost the same minute, Reps. Mel Price of Illinois and William L. Dickinson of Alabama, chairman and senior Republican on the House Armed Services Committee, were sending a letter to Weinberger. The air-based system has "no congressional support," they wrote. Dickinson went to the White House to slip a copy of that letter to the president.

At the Pentagon, no public revolt of the air generals is likely, but the administration faces embarrassment. At least two top Air Force officers, Lt. Gen. Kelly Burke and Maj. Gen. Guy Hecker, will quietly take early retirement if the air-based system is chosen. Burke has confided to friends that his retirement would be dictated not by a desire to fight the decision or "go into the streets," but because he could not testify to Congress as an advocate.

Gen. Lew Allen, Jr., the Air Force chief of staff, is also reported by intimates prepared to quit if Weinberger sticks with the air-based system. Allen and the top echelon of the Air Force are convinced that putting the MX into C-5 cargo planes ready for instant takeoff would subject America's ultimate security to the same hazards that always have made bombers vulnerable.

Weinberger only recently removed the MX gag he imposed on the Air Force early this year. That gag was designed to give Weinberger running room on the MX obstacle course without Air Force pressure.

But the gag may have cost Weinberger information he needed. The Carter administration's secretary of defense, Harold Brown, in late 1978 flirted with an air-based MX option, with some Air Force backing. But the more it was studied, the worse it looked. A secret Air Force memo to the White House in the spring of 1979 termed it "inferior" to a land-based system, which then became the Carter administration's choice.

In Weinberger's defense, he has been under great political pressure from Reagan to leapfrog and discredit earlier studies.

All those studies concluded that only a politically, troublesome land-based system would offer maximum security. Apart from Western state pressure, Reagan and his political advisers did not want to be tainted with Carterism in making the first important defense decision of his presidency.

Weinberger is caught in a trap, with time running out. He is trying to persuade the Townes Committee, a group of specialists he named to advise him on the MX, to underwrite his air-based preference, but the Committee wants a land-based system. Now he has been warned that if he does not change his mind, Congress will repudiate him.

That may be overstatement, considering Reagan's way of getting what he wants from Congress. But what Reagan and Weinberger ought to want is nothing less than the best system to make America secure, whatever the original patronage or the political hazard.

Block Grants OK

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Block grants could be the most important development in restoring sanity to the federal and state aid to local governments process; or they could become a serious problem in themselves.

The federal and state governments are already into budget cutting. The U.S. Congress appears directed at balancing the federal budget, and has passed both of President Reagan's major economic proposals — the budget cuts and the tax cuts.

Nonetheless, says Tar Heel county commissioner J. Richard Conder of Richmond County, "Block grants will be the most important legislation to face Congress this year. Upon these terms will rise the foundation of new relations between federal, state and local governments."

Block grants, simply put, are dollars for local programs with local officials and citizens deciding how best to spend them.

"We do not need a new day, a new deal or a new beginning. We need to return to the fundamental rights of citizens to govern themselves," Conder told delegates to the National Association of Counties meeting in Louisville last month. He was installed as president.

Confusion The block grant proposal will seek to replace and at least partially dismantle the burgeoning categorical grant programs which have proliferated during the last half century. Today, some 500 categorical grant programs are available to county governments which can meet the strict and sometimes confusing and conflicting guidelines.

"They have been our blessing and curse, for they allowed us to expand services and make capital improvements we otherwise couldn't afford. At the same time they made us subject to projects, by the time we get hold of that money there won't be anything left," he warned.

Control Funding, Conder fears, "will be politically motivated and allocations could depend entirely on the party affiliation of the various governors."

Close working relationships such as those currently prevailing in North Carolina should not rule out the need for careful structuring of the block grant system, for this relationship is "unusual in our nation and one that may become increasingly rare ... unless block grants are carefully crafted."

County commissioners care about the local people, both those in need of public services to the needy and those who pay the taxes for those programs. The goal must be to return government to that level closest to the people and open communications "between our courthouses and the White House and all levels in between," Conder noted.

County governments must stand up and be heard, willing to fight for their involvement in the planning and implementation of programs at the state and federal level, he feels.

DUST AND LIGHT

What causes the glorious display of colors in the sunset? According to scientists, dust. Just plain, ordinary dust in the atmosphere, with the sun shining through its various layers.

And therein lies the secret of beautiful living, too. We are dust. The Bible says so. But it is not ourselves or the dull routine of our lives, common as dust, which can create beauty. It is the light from above, shining through us.

Without this light men are no better than animals, and viewed in the mass, perhaps more cruel and lustful than most animals. With it, the plainest and most ordinary person becomes a guide and inspiration to those around him.

Gandhi Calls For Disarmament But Says Nuclear Energy To Stay

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Nuclear energy is the only power source able to meet India's demands and "unless we have something positive to take its place, we cannot talk of replacing it," Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said today.

Mrs. Gandhi also called for total disarmament and an end to stockpiling weapons of mass destruction and death, including the neutron weapon.

"We should try and have a world in which there is no war, but if there has to be a war, we should try to avoid a nuclear war," she told a news conference in Nairobi, where she is attending the first United Nations Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy.

Asked whether India would follow Sweden in phasing out nuclear power plants, Mrs. Gandhi said, "It's a very difficult question because I have certain personal views, but I have to take a national viewpoint also." The prime minister is a well-known environmentalist.

"Now, we are using nuclear energy for electricity, for agriculture, for medicine, and it's extremely useful in all those areas," she said. "Ours is not on such a scale that we can think of reducing it much, and unless we have something positive to take its place, we cannot talk of replacing it."

"At this moment, although we are going all out for renewable sources such as solar energy, wind, tidal power, biogas and so on, it isn't anywhere near meeting our requirements, especially the big energy requirements," she said.

India exploded a nuclear device at Pokhran in 1974 and currently has two nuclear plants in full operation. A third is in an advanced state of construction and several more are planned.

Mrs. Gandhi, who gave the keynote address to delegates from more than 140 countries on Monday, said "the world's eyes are on Nairobi," looking for positive action on drawing up a program leading to a world energy policy.

"We fully realize no miracles are possible," she said, "but at least if we take the first steps, there is hope for the next steps."

French Ambassador Joins Evacuation From Iran

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Seventy-five French citizens, including Ambassador Guy Georgy, left Tehran today in the second and final stage of the evacuation of French nationals from Iran, the Iranians news agency Pars reported.

French President Francois Mitterrand ordered the evacuation last week because of deteriorating French-Iranian relations over France's decision to grant political asylum to ousted Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

Pars said the ambassador and 74 other French citizens left Tehran's airport shortly after 6:15 EDT on a Paris-bound Iran Air jetliner.

The Tehran government blocked the departure of the first group of evacuees by special French planes last Thursday. But 57 were allowed to leave Monday aboard the regular Iran Air flight to Paris.

A skeleton staff will remain at the French Embassy in Tehran along with several missionaries and elderly people, said a French spokesman in Paris.

Fears that today's departure could be delayed were aroused on Tuesday when Rajai excoriated Mitterrand for sending him a telegram congratulating him on his election to the presidency.

"Mr. Mitterrand," Rajai's reply said, "you have sent me a congratulatory message and wished me success at a time when your government's diplomacy has changed the French nation into a center of hell and a safe and secure place for elements of Iran's counter-revolutionaries. I am astonished at how there can be such a contradiction between a person's words and actions."

He called France a "second America" for allowing Bani-Sadr to stay there, drawing a parallel with the U.S. admission of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in 1979 which triggered the hostage crisis. And he criticized France for selling fighter jets to Iraq, fighting a border war with Iran, "while at the same time you wish me success."

Rajai's telegram was broadcast by Tehran Radio.

There was no response from Mitterrand.

Also in Iran, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's personal representative in the northeastern city of Gorgan, religious judge Seyyed Kazem Noor-Mofidi, was killed in a machine-gun attack along with two of his bodyguards, Tehran Radio reported.

Lightning Kills Man At Fair

HARFORD, N.Y. (AP) — One man was killed and several people were injured when lightning struck a crowded agricultural fair.

David Seymour, 40, of Blossvale died Tuesday after the lightning hit, officials said. At least 14 people were hospitalized for injuries sustained in the lightning strike and the resulting crush to get out of the area, state police said.

The lightning struck the muddy grounds at the 2,500-acre farm in rural Cortland County where Empire Farm Days had just started its three-day exhibition of new farm machinery. The lightning may have struck a piece of machinery, authorities said.

It was not immediately known if Seymour was actually struck by lightning.

Union Delays Bulletin Vote

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A union representing 200 employees at The Bulletin has postponed a vote on accepting contract concessions.

Newspaper officials say concessions worth $4.9 million a year from eight unions are needed to keep the newspaper from going under.

An "agreement in principle" with the Typographical Workers Union was announced last weekend. But union President Joseph Lombardi said the vote scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday had been put "on hold" until the unions "get some common issues straightened out."

Bulletin officials announced Aug. 3 that the 134-year-old newspaper would fold on Sunday unless the unions agreed to new contracts.

Man Wins Award For 1971 Arrest

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Jacksonville man has been awarded more than $3,000 as part of a suit settlement for his arrest by District of Columbia and Capitol police during the 1971 May Day peace marches against the Vietnam War.

Eugene Enslin received a $3,245.09 check from the government of the District of Columbia as a court settlement for the violation of his First Amendment right to free speech and his Fourth Amendment right protecting him from false arrest and imprisonment.

The award resulted from a class-action suit filed by the National Capital Area American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of the thousands of protesters who, during three "Days of Rage" around May Day 1971, marched on the Pentagon, the Capitol, the Department of Justice and through the streets of Washington to express opposition to the war.

Mexican Governor Faces Grand Jury

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The governor of Coahuila state on the Texas border has resigned in the face of a grand jury hearing into charges he illegally amassed a $30 million fortune at public expense during his six-year term.

"I want the investigation to continue normally and while I am a citizen, not the governor. My only crime was to work," Gov. Oscar Flores Tapia said in a statement Monday.

Byrum Trial Delayed

A motion for deferred prosecution was allowed in Pitt County Superior Court yesterday for Hal A. Byrum, charged with three counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor, and Judge Frank R. Brown signed an order placing the deferred prosecution agreement into effect this morning.

Byrum has pled not guilty to the charges that allege he took indecent liberties within the past year with an 8 and a 10 year old girl.

Under the agreement — essentially a contract between Byrum and the District Attorney's office, and consented to by the parents of the two juvenile girls involved — Judge Brown placed Byrum on probation for two years.

The terms of the agreement provide that Byrum "move from his residence as soon as possible, and not return, but in no event not later than September 11;" that he "submit himself to psychiatric and/or psychological evaluation and counseling," and agree to follow any treatment prescribed; that he not threaten, molest, be in the presence of, or communicate in any manner with "the juveniles or any of their immediate families; and that he not violate any criminal law for the probation period.

The order also provides that the charges against Byrum "will be dismissed upon successful compliance" of the terms of the agreement.

The deferred prosecution law was enacted by the 1981 General Assembly as a means of dealing with defendants who have good reputations and are not likely to commit other criminal acts.

Under the law, if a person fails to comply with the terms of the deferred prosecution agreement, he can be brought to trial on the charges.

Byrum, plant manager for Prepshirt Manufacturing Corp. on North Greene Street, was arrested on the charges June 2.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — AB Volvo of Sweden has tentatively chosen Greensboro as the location for a proposed U.S. truck corporation, Volvo-White.

But the ultimate decision awaits completion of the proposed purchase of White Motor Corp., a leading manufacturer of long-haul, 18-wheel tractor-trailer rigs. That acquisition is currently stalled while White awaits federal court approval after filing for bankruptcy.

An official announcement is expected to follow an on-site inspection of Greensboro by Volvo corporate officials, sources told the Greensboro Daily News.

Once the expected purchase of White becomes final, Volvo-White will move "with all due haste" to Greensboro, Bob Austin of Volvo of America in Rockleigh, N. J., said. Volvo-White plans to be "up and running by January 1," he said.

Mobile Home Is Damaged

Pitt County firemen were called to the mobile home of Wayne and Jean Eubanks, located off rural paved road 1774 near McGowan's Crossroads last night.

According to the Pitt County fire marshal's office, the alarm was received at 11 p.m. with members of the Black Jack and Simpson departments responding.

Family member, Sandra Mayo reported, a passerby saw lightning strike the mobile home, which was heavily damaged in the blaze.

The couple and their daughter were not at home at the time of the blaze.

Justice Department Will Allow Boy To Go Home

CHICAGO (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department has agreed to let the parents of a 13-year-old Soviet boy take him back to his native Ukraine if an appeals court gives them custody of their son, it was reported today.

The confidential agreement was made between the Justice Department and the American Civil Liberties Union, according to a story in the Chicago Sun-Times.

The ACLU is challenging in U.S. District Court the Justice Department's decision last year to grant asylum to Walter Polovchak, who ran away from home rather than return to the Soviet Union with his family.

The Sun-Times reported that the agreement between the Justice Department and the ACLU would be filed Aug. 24 and is aimed at ending the suit. In the pact, the government agreed to accept the decision of an Illinois appeals court.

"This is a sellout of Walter Polovchak," said Henry Mark Holzer, one of his lawyers. "The United States is abandoning him. It is horrendous. The government of this country is turning its back on a person they have already given asylum to."

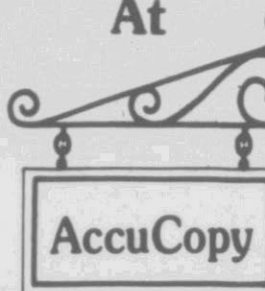

Harvey Grossman, the ACLU's lawyer, would not comment, saying, "We have an agreement of confidentiality with the government."

The Sun-Times said the government agreed to delay action on the boy's application for permanent resident status until the question of custody is decided by an Illinois Appellate Court.

Center Replaces Jungle Hospital

LAMBARENE, Gabon (AP) — An ultra-modern medical center replaces Albert Schweitzer's rotting wooden huts, but the good doctor's jungle hospital faces the future more troubled than at any time since he died in 1965.

Governments and individual benefactors contributed $5 million, including $1 million from the United States, for the reconstruction inaugurated earlier this year. But no provision was made for operating costs, and donations are drying up because oil-producing Gabon is considered one of Africa's wealthiest countries.

When Schweitzer had his 1913 "revelation" to found a hospital along the Ogooue River in one of Africa's most disease-ridden areas, he could not have imagined that Gabon, then an undeveloped French colony, would one day be a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries with an average per capita income exceeding $5,000.

The oil wealth, drawn mostly from offshore wells, has not penetrated to the interior. Many inhabitants still live in primitive bamboo huts. Most children suffer from chronic malnutrition. Virtually every adult has malaria or another crippling parasitic disease. American aid officials estimate that the true annual income averages less than $80, among the lowest in the world.

Yet Gabon's oil wealth legally bars a U.S. government subsidy to the hospital. Switzerland and West Germany together contribute 35 percent of the $1.5 million annual operating budget. The estimated 1981 deficit exceeds $260,000.

Gabon's president, Omar Bongo, regards the hospital as a source of pride. His government contributed $2 million to the reconstruction and promised a $250,000 annual subsidy, one-sixth of the operating costs.

In return, the hospital employs 80 Gabonese nurses, an innovation Schweitzer resisted to the end of his life. The physicians and administrators remain exclusively European or American volunteers, plus some 30 white nurses. They come to Lambarene on 18-month contracts at a fraction of their usual pay, motivated by the Schweitzer ideal of service to the poor.

The hospital's French director, Yves Scheidecker, 50, has little patience with the sentimentality of some of the thousands of Schweitzer admirers who still visit every year and stand in silent tribute by Schweitzer's riverside grave.

"Schweitzer is dead," he said. "We can no longer rely on the charity he raised with his writings and his music and his fame. We have to operate like any modern institution, with a budget and a guaranteed income. Schweitzer never had a budget."

Scheidecker expressed fears that the new hospital, with its sophisticated air-conditioned operating theaters, tropical disease research laboratory and water purification plant, could become a white elephant in the jungle.

"It's like putting all your money into buying a Rolls Royce and then having no money left to run it," he said.

When Scheidecker took over the hospital in April, he imposed drastic austerity measures. All construction was halted. An administrative building and a nurses' residential block remain unfinished. One-third of Gabonese staff of 150 was fired. Travel expenses were severely restricted.

Schweitzer's own hut has become a museum, with his spectacles and his famous pith helmet lying where he left them the day he died. But the roof is leaking, and renovation work was stopped for economy reasons.

Even with the spending cuts, the hospital is digging ever deeper into its overdraft. "We can't go on like this much longer," Scheidecker said.

Gabon is ready to take over full financial responsibility for the hospital but would then insist on integrating it into the national health system.

"That would mean a second death for Dr. Schweitzer," said a young Swiss doctor, who asked not to be identified. "We are now the country's only modern hospital. These Gabonese themselves realize that if we came under their control, the hospital would simply disintegrate. You have to take a look at the public hospitals to understand that."

The public hospital in Lambarene has only one doctor — a Romanian volunteer — and much of the equipment is broken or missing.

Some 20,000 patients come to the Schweitzer hospital every year, often ignoring a public hospital much nearer home. Some walk for zdays through the jungle to get here.

The African traditions on which Schweitzer insisted are maintained: Every patient is accompanied by at least one family member who prepares his meals in an outdoor cooking area, although chickens and goats no longer roam the wards as they did in Schweitzer's days.

Patients are never kept in ignorance about their condition, as in the developed world. When someone dies, a nurse writes "Soul-Departed" across the chart, and the family quietly removes the body.

Dutch nurse Maria Lagendyk, 74, came here in 1938. She is one of the few surviving staff members who worked with Schweitzer.

"He had no money to install electricity and running water," she said. "He would be pleased with the new hospital. But some of his ideas would no longer be acceptable today. In his time, the white man did everything."

"We must find a way to bring the Schweitzer spirit up to date."

Williams Writes Innocent Claim

ATLANTA (AP) — The man accused of two of 28 murders of young blacks here, says in a letter to a sports announcer that he's innocent despite having been convicted, tried and railroaded by the media and law officials, a radio station reports.

Station WAOK broadcast the letter Tuesday which it said was written by Wayne B. Williams, the 23-year-old black man charged with the murder of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21. No trial date has been set.

The two are among 28 young blacks whose slayings over the past two years are being investigated by a special police task force. No arrests have been made in the other 26 cases.

The letter to WAOK announcer Joe Walker was dated July 17, the same day Williams was indicted on the two murder counts, WAOK reported. It was read on the air Tuesday by Walker, who said he is a friend of Williams.

"Joe, I never killed anyone. The only thing that I killed was a cockroach crawling up the wall in my cell," the letter said. Williams is housed in the Fulton County jail.

"I'm just screwed up in the most screwed-up operation in America — that operation being the criminal justice system," the letter said.

Walker said Williams' father delivered the letter to him a few days after Williams was indicted.

Mary Welcome, Williams' attorney, could not be reached for comment, but WAOK news director Jim Miller said Ms. Welcome told him she did not dispute that the letter was written by Williams.

"What really gets to me is that the news media has tried, convicted and sentenced me on so-called information from their so-called sources which is 98 percent a barefaced lie," WAOK quoted Williams as saying.

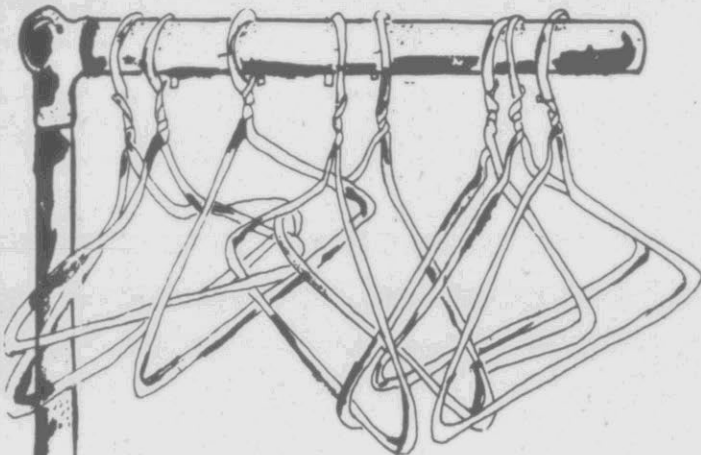

"But because I'm innocent and it will be proven shortly, I'm not going to add fuel to the fire ...," the letter said.

The radio station quoted Williams as saying in the letter that it's "sad" that the federal government "can contribute millions for the investigation in Atlanta, and yet use that money to nail the first person who comes along."

Soviets Arming Castro's Navy?

By MARC D. CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer

VIEQUES, Puerto Rico (AP) — The U.S. naval commander in the Caribbean says Soviet aid is changing Fidel Castro's "defensive" navy into a fleet that can go on the offensive and interfere with shipping.

"The Soviets continue to modernize the Cuban navy's arms with the general thrust of turning it from a defensive organization to an organization with offensive interdiction capability," says Rear Adm. Robert P. McKenzie, the commander of the U.S. Caribbean Contingency Joint Task Force.

He cited the delivery to Cuba in recent years of Foxtrot submarines, missile-firing gunboats, aircraft capable of firing at ground targets and the impending delivery of a frigate, "a very, very capable ship — a fine ship, the biggest one the Cubans will have to date."

The admiral talked with reporters last weekend on this islet off Puerto Rico while watching maneuvers designed in part to signal "the capability and willingness of the U.S. to project military power in the Caribbean Basin."

McKenzie said the sea lanes in the area are "absolutely vital to our country ... 65 percent of our oil comes through the Caribbean, 60 percent of the bauxite, almost 100 percent of some of the very important and sophisticated elements and minerals."

The maneuvers, which were suspended Monday by the threat of tropical storm Dennis, are part of the multi-nation Ocean Venture training exercises being conducted in the Atlantic through October.

In the scenario for the Caribbean phase, a mythical nation is pursuing an expansionist policy in the area with support from an outside power "promoting political instability and projecting its military capability."

That hypothetical relationship is much the same as the one Reagan administration claim exists between Cuba and the Soviet Union.

McKenzie said he believes the Cuban missile crisis of 1962 impressed on the Soviet Union "the extremely strategic location of Cuba vis a vis the Gulf of Mexico."

He pointed out that the island of Cuba forms two "choke points" at the two entrances to the gulf of Mexico, commanding the Straits of Florida on the north and the Yucatan Channel to the east.

"The Soviets remembered that, and so they set about modifying the Cuban military, a modification that has been accelerated in the last four years to give them an offensive interdiction capability," McKenzie said.

The new submarines, gunboats, and aircraft give Cuba "the ability to very significantly interfere with any commercial traffic or shipping that we might want to put through those two choke points," McKenzie said, and the frigate "will give them an additional dimension."

The admiral said President Reagan "is obviously paying much more attention to things in Central and South America and in the Caribbean Basin than President Carter and a number of his predecessors have paid."

"The last time we really looked at this part of the world closely was in 1962, during the missile crisis," he continued. "When we looked away after that and we started following other crises — Southeast Asia and other events throughout the world, ending up with things in the Middle East — we did not pay as much attention to this part of the world as we should."

"During the period that we've looked away, Castro, acting as the Soviet surrogate, has seized upon the underemployment and high population and unrest that exists in this part of the world, to spread terrorism, and revolution, and communism."

"What we are doing now is looking back into this part of the world, very closely, with a renewed interest in the welfare of the people ... and with the idea of maintaining freedom of choice and freedom of the seas."

Storm Dennis Loses Punch

MIAMI (AP) — Former Tropical Storm Dennis appears to no longer be a menace.

The 1981 Atlantic hurricane season's fourth tropical storm was stripped of its name and status Tuesday, and forecasters said the tropical depression was expected only to inflict heavy rains to portions of the Windward and Leeward Islands.

The rains were expected to spread into the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico later today.

Tuesday morning, the storm system's top winds slipped to 35 mph, four mph below the intensity needed for tropical-storm status, said forecaster Miles Lawrence at the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

Little change in strength was expected, Lawrence said.

However, "that it has not strengthened so far does not relieve us of the expectation that it could," Lawrence added.

He said there was an opportunity for development again as the depression faces several hundred miles of open sea.

If the depression regains its strength, it would again be named Dennis. The system would need to develop maximum sustained winds of 74 mph in order to become the season's first hurricane.

At 11 p.m. EDT Tuesday, the depression, its winds still at 35 mph, was centered about 80 miles west of Martinique. It was moving west-northwest at 20 mph.

The storm's top winds had been clocked at 65 mph, but it began weakening early Monday.

Polish Communists Call For End Of Strike Wave

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist Party Central Committee ended an emergency meeting today with a sharp attack on the Solidarity labor federation and a demand for an end to the spreading wave of strikes and demonstrations protesting food shortages and proposed increases in food prices.

The 200-member committee, meeting for the first time since its election at the party congress in July, blamed "irresponsible Solidarity advisers and activists" for the nationwide wave of protests.

It called for "firm" government action to stop the strikes, street demonstrations and "political marches which are a great danger to social peace."

"The government is sternly warning the organizers of these provocative demonstrations and states that it will use all appropriate means to prevent them," Deputy Premier Janusz Obodowski, the economic chief, told the committee.

He said factory managers have been instructed to "restore discipline and protect public property, especially the means of transportation."

Solidarity's national leaders extended a two-day meeting in Gdansk into today, presumably to assess the committee resolution before deciding their next moves. The official explanation was that they needed more time to complete resolutions on relations with the government and an economic action plan.

The federation's national leadership appealed to all its locals to exercise restraint until it determined a future course of action. But locals in Lublin and four other cities issued strike alerts.

The Central Committee's resolution constituted an endorsement of party chief Stanislaw Kania, who opened the 14-hour meeting with a warning that all forces must unite "to bring to a halt as soon as possible the process of deterioration in the situation, to counteract the acute difficulties felt by each and every Polish family."

"There is a new element in Poland," he declared. "Its streets are no longer quiet. We must find a way to make the streets quiet, or it could lead to the largest national tragedy."

Meanwhile, party officials today confirmed that Kania will meet with Roman Catholic primate Jozef Glemp, but said no date had been set. Solidarity's Warsaw chapter had appealed to Glemp to mediate the escalating crisis.

Much stronger criticism of Solidarity came from Zofia Grzyb, the only member of the union on the party's 15-member Politburo, who charged that "the union leadership has betrayed the interests of the workers."

"One year after the creation of Solidarity, every member must ask: Why did I enter this union?" she said. About 20 percent of the Central Committee members are members of Solidarity.

Another Politburo member, Kazimierz Barcikowski, who is considered a moderate, charged that Solidarity was slandering the party, weakening the leadership, paralyzing the economy and undermining Poland's relations with its communist allies.

Refugees Move To Puerto Rico

JUANA DIAZ, Puerto Rico (AP) — A jet brought the first contingent of Haitians from Florida this morning, 10 months and more than $10 million after plans were made to divert some of the refugee flood to Puerto Rico.

The chartered plane load of 125 male Haitians from Miami touched down at Mercedita Airport near Ponce, on Puerto Rico's south coast. They were loaded into three buses and set off in a 17-vehicle convoy for Fort Allen, a former Navy base.

Dozens of armed Immigration and Naturalization Service guards and police ringed the airport. Local residents who opposed bringing the Haitians here had said they would picket, but no protesters were seen.

The refugees had been housed in the overcrowded Florida reception center known as Krome North.

Their new lodging covers 10 acres, with wood-frame, screened tents, each housing 20 people on aluminum and canvas cots. There are communal showers and lavatories and communal mess tents.

"What it amounts to is we're just putting them in jail here," said James Switzer, director of alien processing at Fort Allen. "We're just transferring them from one facility to another."

A chain-link fence topped by barbed wire divides the camp into three sections — for single men, single women and married couples — and another fence topped by barbed wire and razor wire encloses the entire camp.

Switzer took reporters and photographers through the administration building where the Haitians were to be "processed" — "first a strip search, then photographing and fingerprinting, then filling out and issuance of identity cards, then quick health examinations."

Haitian exiles led by Professor Jean-Claude Bajoux of the University of Puerto Rico contend that it is cruel to keep the refugees behind barbed wire on a treeless site baking in the tropical sun.

But Bob Bowen, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, dismissed suggestions that they be housed in the former Navy buildings of concrete and glass that will be used for the workers who will look after them.

"Security would be horrendous," he said. "You've got to be able to watch the people; you've got to be able to keep them under surveillance; you've got to be able to take care of them. And you can't do that if there's a wall around them and you can't see them."

Eventually, as many as 800 Haitians will be brought here, relieving conditions at Krome North, where some 950 refugees have been housed in recent days. The monthly cost of running Fort Allen will be $1.5 million, or $18 million a year, according to Bowen.

Last October, the Carter administration designated 20 acres alongside an unused airstrip at the former naval base for the site of a holding center for thousands of the Cuban and Haitian refugees pouring into Florida.

The site was asphalted over, tents were put up, equipment was brought in and barbed wire strung at a cost of more than $10 million. But there was an immediate outcry from Puerto Ricans fearful of Cuban competition for scarce jobs and fearful of the violence that had already begun to plague such stateside Cuban refugee centers as Fort Chaffee, Ark.

Local residents, unions and the government of Puerto Rico filed suits that blocked the transfer of any of the refugees until last month. The commonwealth government claimed the site could sustain no more than 800 people without detriment to the local environment and public order.

Last month, the Reagan administration and Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo reached agreement on the "temporary" housing here of no more than 800 Haitians. A Federal court set aside the injunction against transferring any refugees to Fort Allen.

Bowen said 700 people will eventually be employed at the camp, including 156 maintenance and clerical workers, 390 security guards and others who will provide food, medical and other services. He said Puerto Rico had been guaranteed that nobody with a communicable disease, criminal record or mental problem would be sent, and there will be no minors without families.

Nevada Towns Face Muddy Task

OVERTON, Nev. (AP) — Residents of several small Moapa Valley farming communities faced the task of removing tons of mud from their homes as they attempt to get life back to normal in a flood-damaged area.

About 700 residents were evacuated from Overton Monday night after two separate floods hit the town. There were no major injuries, although one elderly woman was hospitalized in Las Vegas after spending the night in a field buried to the waist in mud.

Nevada Gov. Robert List, after touring the flooded area Tuesday by helicopter, said he would ask President Reagan to declare it a disaster area. List said he will ask for federal funds to rebuild the area's water and flood control system and low interest loans for residents to rebuild damaged homes.

Overton, a community of 1,700 persons on the shore of Lake Mead some 60 miles northwest of Las Vegas, bore the brunt of the onslaught when flood waters tore through the center of town. A number of mobile homes in a trailer park at the south end of the town were heavily damaged.

The storm, with winds clocked at 68 mph at McCarran International Airport, also knocked out power to about 100,000 customers in the Las Vegas Valley.

The first flood, apparently caused when a levee built to contain flash floods gave way, hit the Robin's Nest trailer park without warning and washed away 85-year-old Lillian Martin. She was found Tuesday morning buried to her hips in mud and was reported in stable condition at a Las Vegas hospital.

Residents had advance warning of the second flood about four hours later when two or three earthen dams on the normally placid Muddy River gave way, sending more water through the town. The river, normally only six or seven feet wide in the summer, was about 25 feet wide Tuesday.

More Surgery Likely For Brady

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady faces the likelihood of undergoing a fourth major operation because of a lingering complication in his long recovery from a bullet wound in the brain.

Doctors said Tuesday that Brady, wounded in the March 30 assassination attempt on President Reagan, is still troubled by a leakage of spinal fluid through his nose — a development that poses the risk of infection in the skull.

The problem began Aug. 3 when Brady suffered a mayor, epilepsy-like seizure. It apparently created pressure in the skull that forced the discharge of the fluid, said Dr. Dennis O'Leary, a spokesman for George Washington University Hospital.

Although the seizures have stopped, the spinal fluid continues leaking into the sinuses from inside the skull along a passage through bullet-damaged bone, O'Leary said.

"It's not life threatening in any sense," O'Leary said. "We don't see him as being in immediate danger from it. The only real risk is infection. That's a relatively low risk but it's a finite risk."

Brady was reported Tuesday in good condition, alert and in good spirits.

He is "back to where he was before the seizure problem developed," O'Leary said.

The doctor said Brady discharged a "significant" amount of the fluid after suffering the Aug. 3 seizure.

A White House medical bulletin Tuesday said Brady "had a small amount of spinal fluid leakage both yesterday and this morning."

"Physicians indicated that persistent leakage of this degree would increase the likelihood of elective surgery within the next several weeks," the statement added.

O'Leary said the surgery was very likely, but added that doctors would not make a final decision until early next week.

English poet Percy Bysshe Shelly was born in 1822.

Panamanians Claim U.S. Violating Treaty On Canal's Ownership

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer
PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanians claim U.S. congressional legislation and other measures are violations of the treaties that will give them control of the Panama Canal by the end of the century.

A senior Panamanian official said a letter protesting the alleged violations will be presented shortly to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. along with a document summarizing the complaints.

"The next step will be for President (Aristides) Royo to contact President Reagan," the official said. "If that doesn't work, we will take our case to any world forum that will listen."

He asked not to be identified by name because the matter is still in a formative phase.

The dissatisfaction has given rise to one incident of violence. Rocks and bottles were thrown at the canal administration building July 28 during a demonstration called to press demands that a Panamanian replace the American director of public affairs for the Canal Commission, the U.S. agency created to run the canal until the year 2000.

The death of Gen. Omar Torrijos in a plane crash July 31 increased the likelihood of more violence. The strongman, who signed the canal treaties with President Carter in 1977, was credited with keeping the militant forces in check, especially the students.

U.S. Ambassador Ambler Moss said most of the discontent is rooted in the legislation the U.S. Congress adopted to carry out the treaties. The Panamanians charge that it deprives the commission of autonomy implied in the treaties and tries to impose U.S. law on Panama.

The treaties gave Panama sovereignty over the U.S. Canal Zone on Oct. 1, 1979, but the U.S.-controlled Canal Commission runs the waterway until Panama takes full possession in the year 2000.

Instead of granting the commission the more independent status of a U.S. corporation, as sought by President Carter, Congress made it a U.S. government agency. That means Congress oversees its budget and other matters. The legislation also imposed portions of the U.S. Labor Code.

One of Panama's treaty negotiators, former Ambassador Carlos Lopez Guevara, maintained that the canal operation and the treaties themselves will be jeopardized if the United States doesn't heed the complaints.

Here is a summary of the complaints:

CANAL COMMISSION: Panamanians contend its present status gives the U.S. Congress too much control over the commission, which is governed by a board of five Americans and four Panamanians.

"If there were a major disaster that needed $15 million to $20 million to fix, such as a major landslide ... and Congress is in recess I'm in trouble," said Dennis P. McAuliffe, the commission's American administrator.

— LABOR CODE: Union

elections must be supervised in accordance with the U.S. Labor Code, even though most of the workers are Panamanians.

— BONUSES: Panamanian labor laws require that workers must be paid an extra month's pay as a bonus each year. The commission refuses, contending to do so would violate U.S. law.

— SALARIES: The commission has begun paying the 1,200 workers hired after the treaties took effect less than workers already on the job, using U.S. wage scales and benefits only for positions that can't be filled locally. As a result, old workers may be paid nearly twice as much as new workers for the same job. Panamanians contend this dual pay system was not called for in the treaties.

— U.S. PAYMENTS: The treaties call for Panama to receive a payment of $10 million per year until they year 2000, plus the first $10 million of any surplus each year. Last year the canal had a $2.7 million surplus. The dispute arises over what operating expenses should be considered in determining a surplus. For example, the commission is obligated to pay $12 million a year in interest on the unrecovered capital investment in the canal. Panama contends the interest payment is not a legitimate operating expense.

— HIRING PREFERENCE: Panamanians claim the United States is not moving fast enough to fill key jobs with Panamanians. Of 8,877 commission employees, 2,130 are still American, commission figures show.

The treaty-implementing legislation is slated for U.S. congressional review by October. Panamanian officials say they hope laws they find objectionable will be rewritten.

Said former negotiator Lopez Guevara: "We can enact laws too, and it should be remembered our police can enforce those laws against the Panama Canal Commission employees."

Space Shuttle Tank Attached

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Technicians worked through the night to lock in place the space shuttle Columbia's huge silo-like external fuel tank in preparation for the Sept. 30 second voyage of the reusable spaceship.

Kennedy Space Center spokesman Hugh Harris said the shuttle was mated to the tank and two 150-foot reusable solid-fuel boosters about midnight EDT Tuesday. The operation was several hours behind schedule.

As the Columbia was hoisted nose-up inside the massive Vehicle Assembly Building Monday, a lift truck hit its left wing, breaking two insulation tiles that must be replaced before the launch. A similar mishap occurred several weeks ago.

Harris said technicians would remove a sling that has held the shuttle upright since Monday night, and the ship will remain vertical until launch. The Columbia is scheduled to be rolled out to the launch pad Aug. 26.

Legislators Warn That NCAE Enemies List May Backfire

percent of the teachers in his district next year.

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The first legislators targeted for opposition by the North Carolina Association of Educators say the teachers' group may be beginning a political battle it will lose.

The NCAE, a group of some 40,000 public school teachers across the state, stepped up its political activity this week by vowing to wage an active campaign against lawmakers it believes has opposed the group on education issues.

The new statewide president, John I. Wilson, said the group would concentrate on unseating 35 lawmakers, to be selected after the General Assembly holds its fall budget session.

In the meantime, he released a list of 11 legislators he said opposed the group most often on five issues the association considers crucial for education.

"They're trying to adopt this get-tough image because I think they're trying to get people to come around for the fall session," said Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, one of the 11. "But it could well be counter-productive."

"It just plain leaves me cold," he added. "Only two years ago, I was one of their darlings. I helped get the new salary schedule adopted and increases for support personnel."

Huskins and other legislators contacted Tuesday said they were surprised to see themselves named by the NCAE as unfriendly to education in the most recent session of the General Assembly.

"I think they're playing some pressure politics," said Rep. Graham Bell, D-Gaston.

The teachers' group failed to win a cost-of-living pay raise from the legislative session, but lawmakers expect to consider that issue again in the special budget session.

Bell said he has supported teachers' efforts to secure a cost-of-living raise. But he said if the NCAE is going to adopt a militant attitude and use threats of political reprisals, they may lose his vote.

"When they get down to playing hardball and pressure tactics, it may backfire on them," he said. "In my case, it may turn a supporter into an opponent."

Wilson, in a news conference, cited the General Assembly for "stagnation" on education issues.

"Our message is that we intend to be more political," he said.

The group released a "report card" assessing all 170 lawmakers by their votes on five issues.

One of the issues was passage of the state budget bill, which Wilson said lawmakers should have opposed because it contained no cost-of-living pay raises for teachers, no reduction in classroom size, no increase in instructional materials and reduced health benefits.

Other "correct" votes, according to the NCAE, were: for the gasoline tax increase; for an unsuccessful amendment removing money for horse and livestock arenas from the budget; for a bill that would have permitted teachers to take leave on days when bad weather keeps them away from school; and for a bill that allowed voluntary payroll reductions for state employee associations.

Wilson listed 11 legislators that opposed the NCAE most often. They were: Reps. Sam Beam, D.R. Mauney and Bell, all D-Gaston; Huskins; Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe; Robie Nash, D-Rowan; Roy Spoon, R-Mecklenburg, and Ron Taylor, D-Columbus; and Sens. Gilbert Boger, R-Davie; Walter Cockerham, R-Guilford, and Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland.

Bell, in a telephone interview, termed the group

"infantile" for targeting the gasoline tax and overall budget bill as issues.

"I've been in this game a long time, and I can play this game just as well as any member of the NCAE or any other trade group," he said. "Any member that's targeted can target the NCAE. The sword cuts two ways."

Cockerham referred to the NCAE leaders as "employing union tactics to try to coerce legislators."

Harris said the NCAE leadership has become more "militant" than its membership wants. He predicted he would win the votes of 75

No Fraud Cases Are Discovered By Commission

During the month of July, the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina reports that no cases of fraud involving unemployment insurance payments were discovered by the office's investigator, Henry Byrne.

However, two previously discovered cases were prosecuted, resulting in findings of guilty in both instances.

To date in 1981, the Greenville ESC office has initiated action that has resulted in the recovery of $15,109 in unemployment insurance overpayments. During the year so far, 15 persons have been prosecuted for fraud, with all 15 being convicted.

Monetary recoupment for fraud is not included in the $15,109 figure due to reporting delay from prosecuting officials on repayment in fraud cases.

Anyone suspecting fraud in unemployment insurance benefits handled by the Greenville ESC office can report, in confidence, such information to Henry Byrne at 756-2686.

Statewide, the N. C. ESC recovered $123,029.41 in unemployment insurance overpayments during July. The unit investigated 217 persons who have claimed or currently are claiming unemployment insurance benefits.

Of that number, 171, or 79 percent, were found to have been overpaid $58,257. The commission classified 69 of those cases, representing $40,071, as fraud cases, and 102, for an amount of $18,186, as non-fraud overpayment cases.

State To Keep Ban On Fruit

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
North Carolina agriculture officials say they will continue a quarantine of California produce at least until next summer.

California officials won't know until then whether they have eliminated the Mediterranean fruit fly, said Pest Control Division spokesman John Scott of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

The state declared the quarantine — which involves inspecting California produce at the North Carolina border — last month after California delayed an aerial spraying program to eradicate the pest.

Scott, who just returned from a fact-finding mission to California, said the extent of the quarantine might be reduced in a few months if the situation improves.

"We need to continue our monitoring because a sudden outbreak out there could be crucial," Scott said. "There's some indication that the fly might be spreading to other counties, so we need to make sure that produce from there has been cleared."

Meanwhile, 30 Agriculture Department inspectors continue to man truck-weighing stations along interstate highways and at major produce reception outlets in North Carolina, looking for trucks hauling fruits and vegetables from California.

They require drivers to show evidence that the produce was treated before leaving California. Those who cannot must either pay to have it fumigated or take it out of the state, though no one has had to do either so far, Scott said.

"There's been quite a bit of California stuff trucked in here the last two or three weeks," he said. "But every one we've checked has had the proper documentation. They've cooperated real well."

About three weeks ago, the state placed special traps at selected spots throughout the state. They are designed to attract Mediterranean fruit flies that might slip past the inspectors. So far, they've turned up nothing.

"If things slow down in California, we might cut back on the inspections and rely more on the traps," Scott said. "But right now things are still too hot out there."

Scott said he was impressed by California's effort to eliminate the fly.

"They've got 4,000 people working seven days a week on this thing," he said. "But there's still a great danger that it'll spread because they just waited too long to get serious about it."

Each discovery of a larvae or live adult means that completion of the mission is at least five months away, the maximum length of two life cycles of the fly, said Scott.

Earthquake Specialists Studying Western N.C.

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — When a mild earthquake rattled dishes in Western North Carolina last April, mountain residents didn't pay much attention to the tremor.

But when a stronger quake shook the mountains a month later, national earthquake specialists decided to monitor the area for further shifts in the earth's makeup.

Some geologists predicted that progressively stronger tremors would continue to rock the North Carolina mountains. Although the earth has been still in the mountains for about three months, the Tennessee Earthquake Information Service in Memphis, Tenn., has set up the Southern Appalachian Seismic Network in that area.

"The two quakes so close together caused us to rethink our network," said Dr. Arch Johnston, who is in charge of the network. "It has caused us to emphasize Western North Carolina more in our studies. We were going to be more concentrated in Eastern Tennessee."

An earthquake measuring about 3.2 on the Richter scale was centered in McDowell and Rutherford counties last April 9, Johnston said. Another quake measuring 3.5 shook Henderson County and parts of upper South Carolina on May 5.

According to Johnston, the state's Blue Ridge Mountains sit on the Brevard fault, which stretched from Virginia to Alabama. Geologists have said the fault is potentially as dangerous as the San Andreas fault in California that triggered the San Francisco earthquake of 1906.

But Johnston called the recent Brevard fault action "left over" from millions of years ago.

"The Brevard fault was a major fault at one time, millions of years ago. It's the boundary between the Blue Ridge (Mountains) and the Piedmont," he said.

"But it appears that what we're seeing now is just moderate action, left over action, so to speak. The fault is not a mountain-building fault anymore. The Blue Ridge Mountains are now eroding," he said.

However, Johnston said there is a possibility of a sizeable earthquake rattling the mountains of North Carolina. He said the Brevard fault is composed of weak rock, "and that's where earthquakes happen."

"There is a small probability of an earthquake that would do minor damage, say about a 5 on the Richter scale. Or even one that would cause major structural damage at about 6. But I don't think that is very likely," he said.

Meanwhile, the Earthquake Information Service has applied to the North Carolina Forestry Service for permission to set up remote stations in the mountains to monitor the area for tremors of any size. The service currently collects information through a station in Asheville.

Johnston said earthquake specialists plan to meet next week in Hendersonville and Asheville with state officials about the request.

"We know there's a lot of interest on the part of area residents about the possibility of another quake by their response to a questionnaire we sent out after the May tremor," Johnston said.

He said more than 400 replies poured into the Memphis center.

Water Sources Tainted

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Three children were born with birth defects in an area state health officials list as having a water system contaminated by radiation.

Department of Human Resources officials said Tuesday that they have found 45 community water systems across the state that have exceeded federal or state levels for radioactive contamination.

Most of the water systems serve subdivisions or small mobile home parks, including 24 in Cumberland County. The department said the water systems, all of which use wells, had quantities of radioactive radium 226 and radium 228, which occur naturally.

The other counties affected by the radioactive contamination are Wake, Nash, Edgecombe, Wayne, Johnston, Harnett, Vance, Catawba, Rowan and Surry.

A group of 67 homeowners in Cumberland County has petitioned the North Carolina Utilities Commission, asking that LaFayette Water Corp. of Fayetteville correct the water problem.

A complaint written by Wanda Scott, a resident of the Iris Garden Subdivision, said three children were born in the area last year with birth defects, including her own child, who died.

"We, the residents, believe the radium level may have caused these defects," Mrs. Scott said in the complaint, filed last month.

The standard set by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for radiation from water samples calls for no more than 5 picocuries per liter of water. EPA tests have shown that one to three additional cancer cases per million people may occur in a population drinking two liters of the contaminated water a day for 50 years at the 5 pCi limit.

Eight of the 45 systems showed radium levels higher than 15 pCi.

Linda C. Sewall, environmental engineer in the state drinking water office, said the EPA suggests that pregnant women — a high-risk group — not drink water above the 5 pCi limit.

The water system operators in areas found to be above EPA limits are required to send residents a public notice of the contamination. The state sends copies of the notice to operators, who are allowed to reword them before sending them to customers.

The state's notice form does not mention the EPA's recommendation to pregnant women, radiation problems. If they can tap a regional water supply, the deadline is January 1986 to give time for the connection.

Pearl W. Faircloth, president of LaFayette, said the water company was waiting for the state tell it how to correct the problem.

Epidemic

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The Brazilian government is flying medical supplies to the northern Amazon jungle where 18 people have died in an epidemic of whooping cough and measles among one of South America's largest remaining Indian tribes.

Officials said vaccine and gamma globulin were being flown to the remote jungle area on the Brazil-Venezuela border where the 10,000 Yanomami Indians live.

A Letter From Pinocchio

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Pinocchio, the ex-puppet who became a real boy in the Disney cartoon fairy tale, is coming to life again for a South African lad who has a rare premature-aging disease that may prove fatal by age 16.

Officials at the Characters Department at Disneyland have written a letter from "Pinocchio" to 8-year-old Fransie Geringer of Orkney, South Africa, in which the character asks Fransie to be his pen pal.

Pinocchio got Fransie's address from an Associated Press article that told about the boy's disease — progeria, or premature aging — and how Fransie wanted to come to Disneyland to meet the boy-puppet, his favorite storybook character.

Because Fransie's father, Herman Geringer, could not afford the trip, the boy said he hoped for the next-best thing, a letter from Pinocchio.

The letter, mailed Tuesday, said: "Dear Fransie, The Blue Fairy told me that you are one of my biggest fans. She also said that you are a real boy like me. Jimmy Cricket (he is my official conscience) sends his love and wants me to make sure that you stay out of trouble. It must be fun to live in South Africa. I wish I could visit there someday. Maybe we could be pen pals."

"I am sending some pictures of me and some of my friends. Your pen pal, Pinocchio."

The letter should take at least a week to reach Fransie, who lives in a small gold-mining town about 100 miles southwest of Johannesburg with his parents and 10-year-old brother.

Bald and emaciated, with only 40 pounds on his 3-foot-8-inch frame, Fransie has old-looking but strong hands. He wears rubber-soled slippers that provide soft padding for his bent toes.

He has big brown eyes, bulging over a spindly nose and once asked his mother, Magda, "Why do I look so ugly?"

"What can I say?" she said. "I say, 'No, you're not ugly. You're a very pretty boy.'"

His doctor, Dr. Martinus van Zyl, says the child will live to be 16 or 17.

"Victims of this disease die of coronary heart disease," he said. "If he gets a coronary, he'll die, just like that."

When Fransie was a year old, his hair began to fall out and he failed to develop fatty tissue. The visits to specialists began.

Haig Warns Against Aggression

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Soviet Union must show "greater restraint in the use of force" if it expects arms treaties and better trade agreements from the United States, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. says.

"The Soviet Union must understand that it cannot succeed in dominating the world through aggression," Haig said Tuesday at the American Bar Association convention, which ends today.

Referring to both the Soviet Union and Cuba, Haig said: "It is time for those who preach peace to contribute to peace. The way to do it is through new restraints, both in Moscow and Havana."

He said it was time "to refashion East-West economic relations" but added that "we cannot have full and economic relations if they (the USSR) are not prepared to respect international norms of behavior."

He said the Reagan administration wants the Russians to show "greater restraint in the use of force," coupled with "greater Soviet respect for the independence of others, and we want the Soviets to abide by their reciprocal obligations" such as the Helsinki accords designed to encourage basic freedoms.

In return, Haig listed what he said the Soviets can expect from improved relations with the United States:

"We offer a reduction in the tensions that are so costly to both our societies."

"We offer diplomatic alternatives to the pursuit of violent change."

"We offer fair and balanced agreements on arms control."

"And we offer the possibility of western trade and technology."

"We are creating incentives for Soviet restraint," Haig said. "We are offering a broader relationship of mutual benefit."

The speech was generally devoid of the Reagan administration's previous harsh statements toward the Soviets.

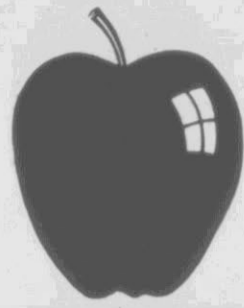

Haig said the United States already has taken steps "toward the achievement of a more stable and beneficial relationship with the Soviet Union."

He noted that President Reagan has written Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev that the United States wants a "constructive and mutually beneficial relationship" with the Soviet Union.

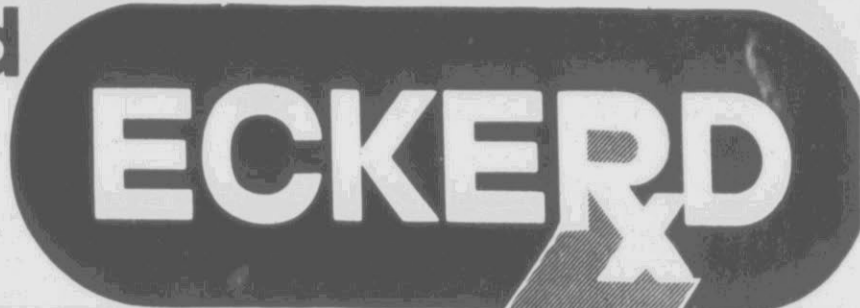

Haig said most of the troubles in U.S.-Soviet relations stem from Soviet intervention in regional conflicts, which he said aggravate tensions and hamper the search for peaceful solutions.

"We have initiated the intense preparations and conceptual studies that must precede a resumption of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks," he said. "We have also launched a frank discussion of compliance with existing arms control agreements."

"It is now up to the Soviet government to put its rhetoric of cooperation into action," Haig said.

Reporters Face Jail Sentence

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — Two reporters, ordered to reveal their sources for stories about a killing, face at least a weekend in jail and $500 fines and possibly indefinite jail terms.

La Plata County District Court Judge Al Haas on Tuesday ordered Durango Herald reporter Barry Smith and Dave Tragethon of KIUP-KRSJ to spend Saturday and Sunday in the La Plata County Jail. If they don't comply with a court order to disclose their sources within 20 days, they will be returned to jail indefinitely, Haas ruled.

Herald Managing Editor John Pfeifferberger said he was shocked at the severity of the punishment. He said the newspaper will pay the fine for the reporters.

A gag order had been issued in a murder case, and Smith and Tragethon had been cited for contempt of court for not answering a judge's questions about the source of news accounts.

President's Aide Says Use Prisons

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Military stockades, many of which are empty or largely unused, could be pressed into service by civilian authorities to ease the crowding of jails and prisons, presidential adviser Edwin Meese III says.

"If you had to isolate one problem" in the criminal justice system "it would be the shortage of prison space and jail space," Meese said Tuesday in an address to an American Bar Association convention.

Meese said Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has begun an inventory of military prisons and hopes to offer them to civilian officials in the next few months.

"There are some camps in which almost brand new facilities had been built" and left empty when the military facilities closed, he said after his speech.

Meese said the government also is examining whether to sell, lease or give away unused federal land for prison construction. He said the proposal does not include "forestland."

Because surveys for both plans have just begun, Meese said he did not know how many facilities or how many states would be involved. He said the prisons would be of "various levels of security."

He said, however, civilian authorities should not expect federal money for fighting the kind of crimes that affect the average citizen most.

"These are the facts of life and of federal fiscal policy. The government role is a limited one and should be recognized as a limited one," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices forged ahead today amid more hopes for lower interest rates.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than a 3-2 margin in the early rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.61 to 950.91 in the first half hour.

Interest rates showed widespread declines Tuesday, continuing a downward trend that has set in gradually in recent days.

The rate on federal funds, overnight loans between banks, dropped below 18 percent — in contrast to the 19-21 percent range in which it fluctuated a few weeks ago.

Many analysts were still wary about predicting a sustained decline in rates, however. They noted, among other things, the prospect of continued heavy borrowing by the federal government.

Crown Zellerbach led the active list, off 3/8 at 41 1/4. A 100,000-share block traded at that price.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.62 to 949.30.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 5-3 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 52.60 million shares, against 38.37 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index gained .75 to 77.65.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 5.53 at 374.67.

completely under water today. At least one downtown store, The Bicycle Post reported minor damage from water seepage.

"With all that water coming down, there was just no place for it to go, so it was just like flash flooding," Allen said. "Greenville is so flat, it's hard to get the water to drain, much less to get it to drain quickly."

Nobles of Winterville reported water still standing on streets this morning. "It's still on streets and it's running off slow," he said.

Greenville Utilities' Water Plant recorded 4.46 inches of rain by 8 a.m. today. The level of the Tar River on the National Weather Service Gauge stood at 3.8 feet at 8 a.m., compared with a reading of 3.1 feet yesterday. The high and low temperatures for Tuesday ranged from 89 degrees fahrenheit to 68 degrees F. Today at 8 o'clock it was 70 degrees.

A ridge of severe thunderstorms extending from Greensboro to Greenville and from Wilson to Fayetteville moved east at 15 miles per hour last night, according to the National Weather Service, bringing the heavy rain and lightning to the area.

Farm officials say the much-needed rain was welcome, despite the possible damage from runoff. "The rain will help soybeans," said Pitt extension agent Sam Uzzell, "but it won't help peanuts."

Uzzell said the county peanut crop has experienced black rot this year, and added "this much water and humidity could make the disease much worse."

"For other crops, though, except some scattered corn crops which may have blown over, the rain will be very beneficial — we didn't get too much because in summer it dries out so quickly," he noted.

AHOSKIE — An Ahoskie man was listed in critical condition after an explosion completely destroyed the two tobacco barns he was tending.

According to Ahoskie Police Department officials, Carlisle Askew, of Route 1, Ahoskie, was preparing to relight his two gas-fired tobacco barns when the explosion occurred Tuesday. Officials said probably the barn's curing system went off when a storm passed over the area about 1:30 p.m.

Askew is the father of Ed Askew, support services manager for the Greenville Utilities Commission in Greenville.

It was reported that apparently a safety feature that should have shut the gas off when the power was interrupted failed to operate allowing the barns to fill with gas.

Askew, it was reported, was standing between the two barns when they were demolished.

Rescuers and firemen responding to the call said they did not know Askew was there until a member of the rescue squad spotted a shoe.

Askew was found under a pile of tobacco, seriously burned with third degree burns over 50 percent of his body.

Bushbeck Gives ECU Needed 'Kick'

ECU's Chuck Bushbeck

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
Until Villanova dropped its football program last spring, Chuck Bushbeck had never heard of East Carolina. Neither had his friends.

"When I told people I was going to East Carolina they said they had heard of North Carolina and South Carolina but not East Carolina," Bushbeck said. "To be honest, I had never heard of (ECU) either."

It was not long before that changed. Almost immediately upon Villanova ending its football program Bushbeck found ECU coach Ed Emory after his kicking services.

A short time later Bushbeck arrived on the ECU campus. It was love at first sight. "I really enjoyed the people. They're friendly and open," said Bushbeck, one of four players to transfer to ECU from Villanova. "The head coach came to my home and that showed me they really were interested in me and that they needed a kicker."

Not anymore. Not if Bushbeck continues to perform as he did for three years at Villanova. In three college seasons, Bushbeck, a soccer-style kicker, has hit 62 of 67 extra points and has made 22 of 42 field goals, including 11 of 15 between the 30 and 39 and 12 of 18 from beyond 40 yards.

In 1980, Bushbeck, who has one year of eligibility remaining, connected on 21 of 22 PATs and nine of 13 field goals, including four of five from beyond 40 yards.

Bushbeck was also Villanova's backup punter, a slot Emory is seeking to fill as fall drills get under way this week.

Had Villanova maintained its football program, the school's sports information department was all set to push Bushbeck for all-America honors. Now, the task is left to ECU.

A performance this season similar to those of the past three years could make Bushbeck hard to ignore and make Emory quickly forget the graduation of three-year starter Bill Lamm. Said Emory, "This is one guy we're very excited about having at ECU."

Not long ago such excitement over Bushbeck was nearly nonexistent. After an on-again, off-again high school career in Philadelphia in which he was injured during both his junior and senior years, Bushbeck was set to graduate without having been offered a scholarship.

Wary of his injuries, colleges were not willing to risk giving Bushbeck a scholarship. Soon, however, at least one school — Villanova — reconsidered its decision.

One day following his senior year at Philadelphia's Father Judge High School, Bushbeck was practicing his kicks for a coach of a city league all-star game. The coach liked what he saw and invited Bushbeck to the all-star game.

During that game, with Villanova head coach Dick Bedesen looking on, Bushbeck hit a 49-yard field goal. Not long after, Bedesen offered the 5-9, 160-pounder a scholarship.

Bedesen's judgment was not faulty. Among Bushbeck

22 field goals during his three years at Villanova, one was a 48-yarder. He has reportedly hit from as far away as 65 yards in practice, but because of a conservative of fensive philosophy at Villanova he had few opportunities to see just how far he could kick in a game.

Coastal Plains Rained Out; To Play Today

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Coastal Plains South team, representing Eastern North Carolina, was rained out in its bid to get back into the action in the Southeastern Regional of the Senior Babe Ruth League tournament last night.

Scheduled to play Alabama at 8:30 p.m., the two had their game washed out.

They are scheduled to try again today at 3 p.m. If it rains, ENC will play again at 8 p.m. A loss, however, would eliminate them from the double elimination field.

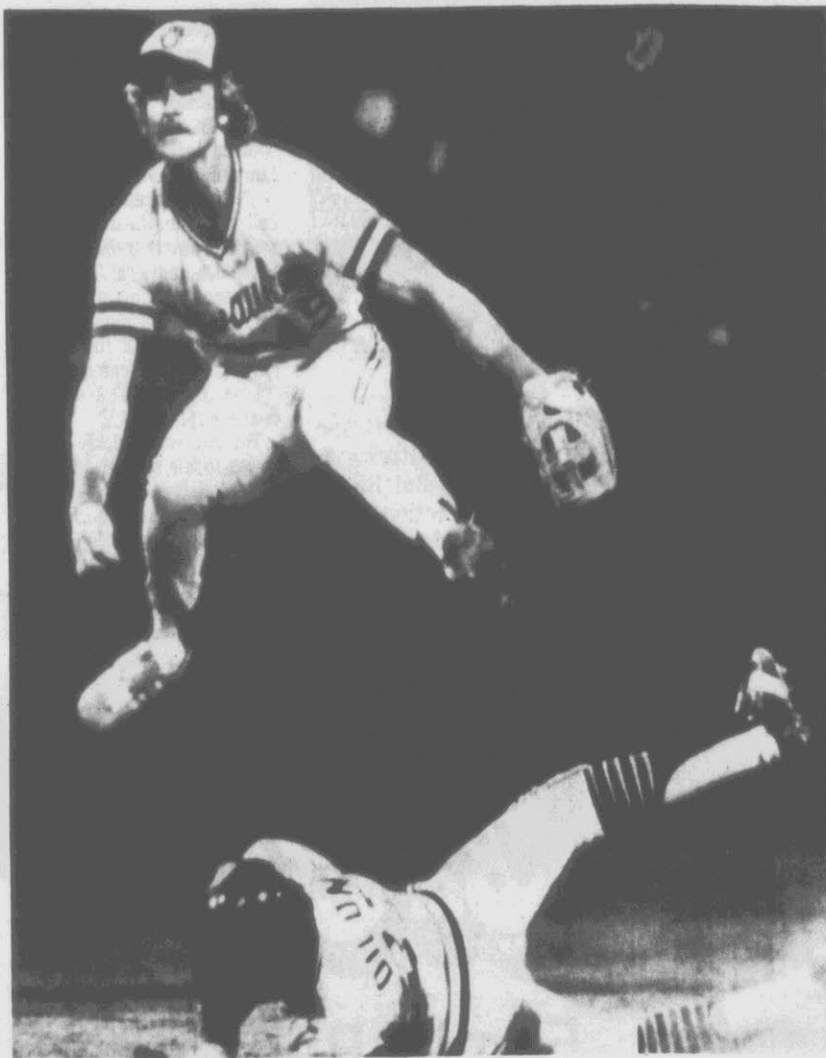

The Coastal Plains team includes four Greenville, four Winterville and four Washington players.

Braves Down Padres, 5-1

Perry Wins 295th Game

By The Associated Press
When you're 42 years old and closing in on baseball history, two months must seem like an eternity.

Unlike Pete Rose, who got the one hit he needed to break the all-time National League hit record on the first day after the 50-day players' strike, Gaylord Perry still needs five more victories to reach the milestone he dearly wants — 300 career pitching victories.

"I think I have a pretty good shot at 300 wins," the Atlanta Braves right-hander said after collecting his 295th triumph Tuesday night. "If I pitch the way I pitched tonight, I'm going to be tough to beat."

Actually, his 5-1 decision over the San Diego Padres must have been one of the easiest victories of his career. He had to go only the required five innings, allowing five hits and one run before leaving the game with a 4-1 lead.

Crowds throughout the league were near average, although Philadelphia and San Diego had much smaller turnouts than they had Monday for the reopening of the major league baseball season.

The Padres drew only 5,360 after Monday night's game in which all seats were free and a record 52,608 showed up. Philadelphia, attracted by Rose's attempt to break Stan Musial's record, had 60,000 Monday night and a more nearly normal 24,549 Tuesday night.

The Braves got a run in the first on Bob Horner's RBI single and took a 3-0 lead in the next inning on a two-run triple by rookie left-fielder Rufino Linares.

Perry, 6-4, coasted through the first four innings before being touched for a run in the fifth on pinch-hitter Broderick Perkins' run-scoring single.

"I felt fine. My control was outstanding," Perry said. "I could have gone another inning or two but (Manager) Bobby Cox said we had a whole bullpen to finish up so why do it?"

Perry, who won Cy Young awards in 1978 with the Padres and in 1972 with Cleveland, said he stayed in shape during the strike by working hard on his peanut farm in North Carolina, "playing some catch and just having fun."

"I played 10 to 15 minutes of catch every day. I was hoeing peanuts and clearing land and I did a lot of fishing for catfish."

Perry said he figures to get 10 more starts before this season ends.

"I'd like more than 300 wins this year," he said. "I haven't talked about next year. I hope I can be back. I hope they ask me."

Mets 4, Cubs 2
New York won its second in a row over Chicago as Hubie Brooks knocked in a run in both the eighth and ninth innings and Doug Flynn singled home the tiebreaking tally.

Trailing 2-1 going into the eighth, the Mets scored two runs on Brooks' sacrifice fly and a single by Flynn. Brooks added a double in the ninth to knock in an insurance run.

Phillies 6, Cardinals 5
Keith Moreland knocked in the tying run in the eighth inning as a pinch-hitter and then won the game for Philadelphia with a bases-loaded, one-out single off ace St. Louis reliever Bruce Sutter in the bottom of the 10th.

Dane Iorg's run-scoring double and a two-run triple by Ken Oberkfell had given the Cardinals a 5-3 lead in the top of the eighth, but the Phillies tied it in their half of the inning on doubles by Larry Bowa and Bob Boone and Moreland's single.

Mike Schmidt had his 15th homer for the Phillies.

El Tianté Headed To Pittsburgh

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Pitcher Luis Tiant, or El Tianté as he has become known in Portland while compiling a 13-7 record with the Pacific Coast League Beavers, is headed back to the major leagues with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Pirates bought the 40-year-old right-hander Tuesday from their Class AAA farm team to fill a vacancy in the pitching staff caused when Don Robinson suffered cuts on the hand in an automobile accident.

Tiant was expected to start for the Pirates against Montreal Thursday night.

Tiant failed to make Pirates' roster last spring and signed with the Beavers as a free agent for more than $100,000.

Beavers General Manager Dave Hersh said Tiant was sold to the Pirates for less than the $25,000 waiver price.

In Portland, Tiant had a 3.82 earned run average. He walked 47 and struck out 111. He pitched an early-season no-hitter in a seven-inning game, and followed that with a one-hitter in his next start. He also pitched two three-hitters.

A veteran of four major league clubs, Tiant had his best seasons with Boston in the mid 1970s when he won 20 or more games in three different seasons. He had a record of 22-13 in 1974.

Among his most memorable games were two victories over the Cincinnati Reds in the 1975 World Series.

His overall major league record is 225-160 with a career earned run average of 3.27.

He has pitched for Cleveland, Minnesota, Boston and the New York Yankees. He was released by the Yankees last season.

Cooper Goes 7-For-9 As Brewers Sweep Indians

By The Associated Press

Cecil Cooper is ready, which means bombs away for the Milwaukee Brewers.

Cooper was a one-man hitting machine for the Brewers Tuesday night, going 7-for-9 with three doubles, two homers and two singles, boosting his batting average 19 points and leading Milwaukee to a doubleheader sweep of Cleveland, 6-5 and 6-1. Milwaukee has won all three of its games since the season resumed after a 59-day interruption that included a 50-day players' strike, while Cleveland is 0-3, extending its losing streak to seven games.

"Once you get one or two hits, you feel confident," said Cooper, who hit .350 last year and was at .270 when the strike began. "I've been feeling really good at the plate these three games and even before, when we were practicing. I worked out during the strike about three times a week with (Brewers pitchers) Jerry Augustine and Pete Vuckovich and Ricky Keeton. We did that for about five weeks or so."

Cooper hardly was happy with his pre-strike production, but after blasting a pair of solo homers in the nightcap — in which he was 5-for-5 — he was thinking positively.

"I was really swinging the bat terrible then," he recalled. "The first couple of days back I felt bad, but then it was just there. I swung the bat good in exhibition games. I hope it keeps up."

So does Brewers Manager Buck Rodgers.

"You see guys that have good first halves or good second halves but at the end they're always within about 15 points of where they belong," Rodgers said. "The cream is going to rise to the top. A lot of people forget that he hit .350 last year."

In the first game, Robin Yount and Roy Howell hit solo homers to pace a 14-hit Milwaukee attack.

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 4

Toronto struck for six runs and six hits in the first inning, with all the tallies coming on three-run homers by Otto Velez and Buck Martinez.

"That was really something. We haven't had a six-run inning since an intra-squad game," said Toronto Manager Bobby Mattick. "Our hitting's starting to come together. It's got to be better than it was."

Martinez, who is batting .195, downplayed the importance of his hit.

"I don't think one hit makes you come around," he said. "I do feel good at the plate. It's a good feeling to be back, and I think there's a lot of excitement all over the league."

The Tigers got a three-run homer from Lance Parrish in the first.

White Sox 4, Red Sox 2

Greg Luzinski had two doubles and a triple as the White Sox continued to pound Boston pitching. Bill Almon also had three hits, including a solo home run.

"In the spring I usually start fast, but I can't be tired now, not after the long layoff and sitting on the bench except when I go to bat," said Luzinski, who has been used as a designated hitter since being traded to the White Sox by Philadelphia last winter.

Ross Baumgarten, Steve Trout and Ed Farmer held Boston to five hits.

A's 6, Twins 5

"It's going to be doubly important for us to throw strikes and do well because of the strike," said A's reliever Jeff Jones, who preserved the victory with 22-3 innings of scoreless relief.

"Now that the starters can't go as long as they normally would, it's up to us to do our jobs. The relievers will get more work now; it's a nice opportunity."

Oakland, led by speedsters Rickey Henderson and Dwayne Murphy, grabbed a 6-0 lead after two innings. The Twins came back within one run before Jones stopped them cold.

"He pitched just according to the book...perfect," said Oakland Manager Billy Martin, whose team had 94 complete games last season. "You need solid play from every position on a team in order to win. That includes relievers."

Henderson and Murphy each had two singles, scored twice and knocked in a run for the A's, champions of the West for the first half of the season.

Danny Gooden doubled twice and scored three times for the Twins and Pete Mackanin blasted a pinch-hit homer for Minnesota.

Rangers 1, Yankees 0

Rick Honeycutt, Jim Kern, John Henry Johnson and Dave Schmidt combined for a four-hitter. Consecutive first-inning singles by Bump Wills, Al Oliver and Buddy Bell produced the game's only run.

"The biggest problem (following the 50-day players' strike) is getting command of all my pitches," said Honeycutt, 7-1. "I had trouble getting my breaking pitches across the plate tonight."

Mariners 4, Angels 1

Jim Beattie threw eight innings of five-hit ball, Tom Paciorek had a two-run double and Richie Zisk homered for Seattle.

Beattie, 1-0, was 6-9 with Spokane of the Pacific Coast League before being recalled Sunday. In three early-season appearances with Seattle, he posted a 16.62 earned run average. He was relieved by Larry Andersen in the ninth.

DAVE WINFIELD

Yankee Outfielder Not Typical Arrogant Superstar

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Big Dave Winfield doesn't care about being the richest baseball player in the world — he just wants to be the best. The best possible, that is, with the skills at hand.

"I'm not one to think about the first and 15th (paydays)," says the New York Yankees' $24 million outfielder. "That's not why I go out there. I go out there always to do my best."

"Take the All-Star Game in Cleveland Sunday. I didn't look at it as entertainment. I wanted to win. I was very unhappy when we didn't."

Highest paid performer in the majors, the 6-foot-6, 220-pound athletic marvel is an enigma to the skeptics who watch and report the game. Why is he always so charged up? Why does he continually knock himself out as would some raw rookie struggling to make the squad?

Why is he so nice to kids and fans? Why is he always so readily available and amenable to newsmen? Where are the prima donna qualities, arrogance and don't-bother-me brushoffs often associated with highly paid super stars?

"After the game the other night, one of the newspaper fellows around the locker told me I was destroying the super star image," Winfield said. "I didn't know what he meant. He said people who get paid a lot of money and publicity are usually targets of critics."

"It never occurred to me. I don't do anything for image's sake. My aim only is to represent myself, the team and organization the best I know how. If I do that, I don't need to make any apologies. I can sleep at night."

Winfield is almost too good to be true. In the 1920s, he would be a black Frank Merriwell, a faultless hero. In the 1980s, the age of egotism, commercialism and cynicism, he is an anachronistic puzzle.

In the All-Star Game, marked by an explosion of home runs (none by Winfield) and won by the National League 5-4, it was the long-legged, graceful Winfield who elicited the loudest exclamations from NBC's broadcasting team of Joe Garagiola, Tony Kubek and Bryant Gumbel.

In the seventh inning, he raced to the wall, leaped and threw himself against the barrier in an effort to snare Gary Carter's second home run, which barely eluded him.

An inning later, he made a similar racing, wall-banging effort to intercept Mike Schmidt's blast that proved the winning shot of the game. He showed little regard for George Steinbrenner's $24 million piece of baseball bric a brac.

These were the kind of titanic blows that most outfielders would stop and gaze at curiously as they might a winging bird.

Not Winfield.

As if this weren't sufficient evidence of his old college try spirit, the rangy outfielder returned to New York and repeated his heroics in Yankee Stadium in Monday night's 2-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

In the second inning, Texas' Leon Roberts slashed a hooking line drive that had "double" or "triple" written all over it. Winfield made a leaping backhand stab and took a tumble, the ball stashed away in his glove. In the seventh, Buddy Bell poled one of Tommy John's pitches to deep left. With speed and perfect timing, Winfield made a catch that kept the ball out of the stands.

Winfield came to the Yankees as a free agent this year after eight years with the San Diego Padres, a team going nowhere in a hurry. Eyebrows were raised when, carrying a career average of .284 and just under 20 home runs a season, he signed a Yankee contract that would be the envy of a corporate president.

"My eight years at San Diego were a learning experience. But in eight years, I never saw the same lineup three days in a row. I never had the advantage of playing with men of the same age, environment and equivalent ability — as one would with teams like the Yankees, Dodgers and Reds."

"I was expected to carry the team on my back. I wasn't appreciated. I had no close friends. I became a loner."

"Now I am having a new and challenging experience — a team with a high calibre of players, a contender. A load is off my shoulders. I want to be a part of a successful operation."

Bushbeck...

Then came this past spring and the announcement Villanova was doing away with football. "I was at home and my mom said Villanova was dropping football. I told her to be quiet. I was watching Family Feud. Then I realized what she had said and I was more or less shocked."

He was not alone. "I went to the gym and all the players were sitting around with sad faces. It didn't hit me at first and then I was a little bit angry. But I finally accepted it."

The decision was easier to accept once other schools began offering Bushbeck a scholarship. Along with ECU, Bushbeck was also courted by N.C. State and Maryland, among others.

"N.C. State was the first to call and Maryland tried to sell me on its reputation," Bushbeck said. "ECU made me feel important and needed. When I came down here they put out the royal carpet. When I came back (home) they were definitely on the top of my list."

The list was quickly narrowed to one school — ECU. The decision having been made to come to ECU, Bushbeck is now out to prove himself. "I'm not supposing all I have to do is walk on to make the team. I know I've got to prove myself to the team, the players and the coaches."

Inevitably, however, the true test must come during the season. Perhaps it will come when a field goal will win the game, a situation Bushbeck has faced before.

Asked what he thinks about on the sidelines during such times, Bushbeck said, with a smile, "I'm hoping the offense scores a touchdown so I can come in for an easy point after."

Then, more seriously, he added: "I usually stay off by myself. I'm able to block the crowd out. Some kickers step it off before the kick. I find a comfortable spot on the field and go from there, the same motion and rhythm. I'm out to make my body one with the ball, I want to become one with the ball."

Injury A Puzzle To Jet Doctor

By The Associated Press

Running back Marion Barber is proving a puzzle to the New York Jets.

The National Football League team has no complaints about the performance of their No. 2 draft choice from the University of Minnesota. In fact, they have hardly had a chance to see him in action.

Barber, who suffered a concussion three weeks ago, left practice Tuesday still feeling dizzy, leaving the Jets' physicians to try and cure something they can't diagnose.

"In my 19 years with the Jets I've never had one like this," said Dr. Cal Nicholas, the team's internist. "Most people get over a concussion the same day, but a concussion can take bizarre roads of behavior."

"Neurologically, Marion checks out fine. Every test has come back negative. I hope we'll find something with these next tests (scheduled for Thursday.) You don't like to find everything normal in someone who's not feeling well."

Barber suffered his concussion in a collision with linebacker John Woodring, the Jets' No. 9 draft pick from Brown.

The Pittsburgh Steelers also have injury problems. As a result of last weekend's exhibition game in Cleveland, all-pro linebacker Jack Ham has a broken arm while tight end Randy Grossman has two cracked ribs.

"Those things happen," Coach Chuck Noll said upon learning that Ham will be out from 8-10 weeks while Grossman will miss at least a month.

In a bit of good news for Pittsburgh, Terry Bradshaw will start at quarterback Saturday against the Philadelphia Eagles after watching backup Cliff Stoudt pass for three touchdowns and run for two more in the 35-31 victory over Cleveland.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Rams disclosed that reserve quarterback Jeff Rutledge, who suffered a chest injury against New England, will not require surgery and is expected back within a month. The injury was diagnosed as a sprain of the joint where the sternum meets the collarbone.

Rutledge's absence leaves the Rams with Bob Lee, who has had an arm ailment recently, as the only experienced quarterback behind starter Pat Haden.

The Rams traded safety Jeff Delaney and offensive tackle Rick Dozier out of San Jose State to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers for a future draft choice.

In another development, veteran wide receiver Roger Carr, who caught a touchdown pass in Baltimore's 24-23 exhibition loss to New Orleans, left the Colts' training camp Tuesday when a snag developed in his contract negotiations.

"I understood Roger and management had come to an agreement about his contract last Friday," said Coach Mike McCormack. "I thought everything was just fine today, but then (general manager) Dick Szymanski called and said we have a problem."

MONTREAL (AP) — Unheralded Trey Walke stunned third-seeded Jimmy Connors 6-4, 6-3 in the $200,000 Canadian Open men's tennis championship.

Walke, currently 52nd on the Association of Tennis Professionals world computer rankings, kept Connors, ranked third on that list, off balance with a splendid mixture of hard volleys and tantalizing drop shots.

Sipe Looks To Improve Over '80 Season

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Browns quarterback Brian Sipe has his work cut out for him as he prepares for the 1981 National Football League season.

Cleveland Browns' Coach Sam Rutigliano says he expects an even better performance from the veteran quarterback this year.

And Sipe agrees he should strive to improve.

Improvement is a reasonable goal for most, but for Sipe, the 1980 act may be hard to follow. Sipe established himself as a star performer, completing 337 of 554 passes for 4,132 yards, 30 touchdowns and only 14 interceptions.

His ability to engineer several come-from-behind victories, while leading the Browns to an 11-5 regular-season mark, helped him set dozens of team passing records and earned him the honor of NFL Most Valuable Player.

"The key ingredient of our success is Brian Sipe," said Rutigliano, the fourth-year coach who last season guided the Browns to their first American Football Conference championship since 1971.

"I really think Brian is just scratching the surface. I think he'll be a lot better. The key is to surround him with the right company. We've got a good supporting cast and that's what Brian needed to succeed," Rutigliano said at the team's training camp at Kent State University.

"Yes, I believe I can get better," said Sipe, who celebrated his 32nd birthday last Saturday. "Stats are not an accurate indication of a quarterback's ability all the time."

"The important thing is being able to operate an offense effectively and extract the best quality out of each of the players. That's an intangible thing. It's impossible to measure."

"We are awfully good at the big play and quick score, but as far as our total offensive concept and giving our defense a rest, I think we have to control the ball better and develop the running game."

Rutigliano has said during the preseason that Cleveland must try to balance its offensive attack and not depend solely on Sipe to complete the game-winning pass in the final minutes. During the past two seasons, 25 of the Browns' 33 games were decided in the final minute of play.

"As we improve in other areas, we'll take some of the pressure off Brian and it will help him," the coach said. "That is all we can do. We can't teach him to throw the ball any better."

Charboneau To Minors

CLEVELAND (AP) — Outfielder Joe Charboneau, one of the most popular baseball players to hit Cleveland in decades, has been sent back to the minors.

Ironically, he's being replaced on the Indians' roster by Von Hayes — whom many have considered the "next Joe Charboneau."

The 1980 American League Rookie of the Year,

Charboneau hit .289 with 23 home runs and 87 runs batted in last season. Some of his home runs, including one in Yankee Stadium, were considered among the longest in recent years.

But the 26-year-old was bothered by injuries in the closing weeks of the season, and he struggled at the plate during the early months of this season, hitting .206 with four homers and 16 RBI.

He was optioned to the Indians' Class AAA affiliate Charleston Charlies on Tuesday.

"We told him we were sending him to Charleston because then he can play every day," said Indians Manager Dave Garcia. "They'll play 20 games, so he can get 80 at bats, maybe find his stroke and come back and help us."

It was a disappointing turnaround for a player who had captivated the city. Dubbed "Super Joe" by a local writer, he co-authored an autobiography with two reporters describing his colorful climb to the majors, and he was featured on several local TV commercials.

"I'm just going to go down and do my best, and hopefully make it to the big leagues again," he said. "There's no promises about coming back up. I'm not bitter about it, and I'm not going to say anything about the Indians."

Charboneau said he did not consider the demotion a punishment for his weight, which reportedly was a bone of contention with the club when he returned from the strike layoff.

strike layoff. "I practice every day, even swinging a bat in front of a mirror as often as I can."

Giants 3, Astros

Tom Griffin, in the longest pitching stint in the two days since major league play resumed, hurled a six-hitter for 81-3 innings to pace San Francisco over Houston.

The victory snapped a six-game losing streak for the Giants, dating back to June 5.

Joe Morgan scored a run and knocked in another with a double for San Francisco.

Reds 7, Dodgers 6

Dan Driessen slugged a three-run homer to highlight Cincinnati's four-run seventh inning that beat Los Angeles.

Fernando Valenzuela, the NL's starting All-Star pitcher, allowed three runs in 41-3 innings for the Dodgers but wasn't involved in the decision.

Dave Concepcion also homered for the Reds and Dusty Baker had a two-run shot for the Dodgers.

Pirates 6, Expos 3

Pittsburgh, shut out on one hit for seven innings by Bill Gullickson, exploded for six runs in the final two innings off two Montreal relievers.

Trailing 2-1 going into the ninth, Tim Foli and Dave Parker cracked consecutive doubles to tie the game before Mike Zasler put the Pirates ahead with a single. Then John Milner's three-run homer capped the rally.

"It doesn't take me that long to get ready for action," said Milner, referring to the long

Greene Co. Wins State Title

KINSTON — Greene County's 9-12-year-old Babe Ruth League All-Stars captured the State Championship here yesterday, downing Person County, 7-6. Greene County went through the double elimination event without a loss.

Greene took the lead, 3-0, in the top of the first, as Quincey Jones hit a two-run homer. But Person came back with three of its own in the bottom of the inning, all on a homer by John Tingen.

Tingen drove in the go-ahead run for Person in the third, but Greene tied it up in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Jamie Lang. Then, in the fifth, an rbi single by Shea Beaman sparked a three-run Greene rally that capped the victory.

Beaman went three-for-three for the winners, and Ronnie Lee Hall hurled the victory, with help from Anthony Jones in the final inning.

Unproven QB To Lead Sooners

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — In many respects, the 1981 Oklahoma football season shapes up as a repeat of the maiden season of Sooners Coach Barry Switzer.

As they did in 1973, the Sooners are heading into an early-season slugfest with West Coast power Southern California.

And as was the case eight seasons ago, the Sooner wishbone likely will be led by an unproven, redshirt quarterback in the person of Kelly Phelps, a hard-running Oklahoma City product.

In 1973, Switzer took over a team that was just hit by probation and led it to a 10-0-1 season as redshirt quarterback Steve Davis quickly made everyone forget about the Sooners' pre-season quarterback problem.

But Switzer warns against drawing too many parallels between the 1981 Sooners and his first team, which went to the Los Angeles Coliseum in its second game and fought a talent-laden Trojan team to a 7-7 draw.

"We don't have the likes of Little Joe, the Selmon brothers and Jimbo Elrod that we had that year," he said, speaking of halfback Joe Washington, down linemen Leroy and Dewey Selmon and defensive end Jimbo Elrod — all Sooner All-Americans.

His outlook for 1981? "Cautiously optimistic," he said.

"You have to be when you're as young and inexperienced as we are," he added. "On defense, we've got two tackles who have never started, two linebackers who are vastly inexperienced and we're young in the secondary. Although we have young players who are talented, they're still inexperienced."

"On offense, the big question mark is at quarterback. We have no one who has ever started and won a game for us...You have to be concerned."

Sooner coaches say the starting quarterback will be determined during the fall, with Phelps competing with senior Darrell Shepard and junior Rod Pegues, No.2 and No.3 signal-callers last year behind J.C. Watts.

Observers give Phelps the inside track, noting that three of the last four Sooner quarterbacks were redshirts.

Other than quarterback and tight end, the Sooners are set on offense. Returning starters in the backfield are Stanley Wilson at fullback and Buster Rhymes and Chet Winters at halfback. All have good speed.

Quality backups include fullbacks Weldon Ledbetter and Allen Ward and halfbacks Willis Mackey and Jerome Ledbetter.

Last year, Wilson and Rhymes each finished with 659 yards rushing. Wilson also can play halfback.

The line is anchored by guards Don Key, 6-2, 246, and Terry Crouch, 6-1, 275. Both are two-year starters. The tackles likely will be returning starter Ed Culver and Lyndie Byford, a starter in 1979 before being hit by an injury. Bill Bechtold is back at center.

While tight end is a question mark, speedsters Bobby Grayson and Jim Rockford have experience at wide receiver.

Although the defense is young, there does not seem to be any dropoff in talent from last year's unit that helped the Sooners to a 10-2 record and a final No.3 ranking in The Associated Press poll.

The strong points could be in the interior, where tackle Scott Dawson and the noseguard tandem of Johnny Lewis and John Blake return. The other tackle spot probably will go to sophomore strongman Ricky Bryan, touted as the best prospect at that position since Leroy Selmon.

The Sooners have four good athletes at linebacker, including Mike Reilly, a starter last year. Reilly may be tried at end to make openings for sophomores Thomas Benson and Jackie Shipp, two ballyhooed high school linebacking stars from Oklahoma. Also available is veteran Jerry Sanders.

There should be no problem at defensive end, with four players back who have seen experience, including Steve Goodlow, Mike Weddington and Steve Whaley. Weddington may be shifted to tight end, however.

The biggest trouble spot could be in the secondary. Darrell Songy is a standout at cornerback, and safeties Steve Haworth and Gary Lowell are proven commodities.

Southern California game, the Sooners open Big Eight Conference action Oct. against Iowa State before its annual grudge match with Southwest Conference power Texas in Dallas. The Sooners face a tough season-ending slate against Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma State.

As usual, the Sooners and Nebraska are expected to battle for the Big Eight championship. Oklahoma has won or shared the league title each year since Switzer was elevated to head coach. In his eight seasons, Switzer's teams have compiled a combined 83-2-9 record.

Cheers For Pete

Pete Rose waves his hat in acknowledging the fans' cheers Monday night after he hit his 3,631st career hit to break Stan Musial's NL record during a game against St. Louis in Philadelphia. Rose admitted having "goose bumps" while the fans gave him a thunderous ovation. (AP Laserphoto)

Rose Happy, Now After Aaron, Cobb

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pete Rose said he had no afterthoughts the day after.

"I'm just happy all those people didn't get disappointed," said Rose Tuesday night before the Philadelphia Phillies met the St. Louis Cardinals, and a day after he became the National League's all-time hit leader before 60,561 fans.

Rose erased Stan Musial's National League career hit mark Monday night with an eighth-inning single off Cards' reliever Mark Littell, giving Rose a career total of 3,631 hits. On Tuesday night, he added another single to the growing total.

Next in line for Rose on the all-time hit parade is Hank Aaron, who has 3,771. Then, if the 40-year-old Rose can play long enough he'll try to pass Ty Cobb's all-time major league record of 4,191.

What was the day after like?

"I was up at 6:30 (A.M.) and in a television studio for an appearance on 'Good Morning America,' said Rose who didn't get to bed until after 2 A.M.

Rose said he remained in the studio to do a tape for a local show with Janet Davies, who comes from the Phillies' first baseman's home town of Cincinnati.

"I was back in bed by 9:30 and slept until it was time to come to the ball park," Rose said.

He insisted that there was no pressure on him to get the record-breaking hit Monday night. He went hitless in three at-bats before delivering the shot that created bedlam.

"If there was (pressure) I didn't know it," Rose insisted. "I know people don't believe it, but it's true."

"How can there be pressure when you're not running out of time?" Rose asked.

"If Monday night was the last game of the season and it was my last at-bat, that would be different," Rose declared.

"The only pressure is the playoffs, unless you're pursuing some sort of record and time is involved."

Hung Jury Possible In NFL-Raider Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A hung jury appears to be a definite possibility in the Oakland Raiders-National Football League antitrust case, but U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson hasn't given up hope that a verdict can be reached.

Pregerson turned down two motions for a mistrial Tuesday night after questioning jurors, who haven't reached a verdict after 11 days of deliberations and don't appear close to any such decision. Deliberations were scheduled to continue today.

The mistrial motions were made by the NFL and the Oakland Coliseum Commission after Pregerson questioned one juror about his possible relationship to a man who once owned a franchise in the now-defunct World Football League.

Pregerson, the presiding judge in the trial, was attempting to determine if juror Tom Gelker is related to Bruce Gelker, who owned the Portland Storm of the WFL. There was no announcement Tuesday night as to whether the Gelkers are related, but it is believed that they are cousins.

Pregerson's clerk, Dick Johnson, said if Tom Gelker responded that he was a relative of Bruce Gelker, the judge intended to ask him if that affected his deliberations and why he did not previously reveal the relationship.

The Raiders and the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission motioned that Gelker be removed from the jury. Pregerson took the motion under consideration.

The judge also questioned every other member of the 10-person jury individually, posing three questions to each: Was there any reasonable chance to reach a verdict? Has any juror stated flatly he or she wouldn't be bound by the court's instruction? And if the answer is affirmative to the second question, who?

Ed Heafey, attorney for the Oakland Coliseum Commission, said after the seven-woman, three-man jury had been released for the day that eight of the 10 jurors told Pregerson they felt that there was little or no chance of reaching a verdict on any of the issues.

Heafey, who sat in on the questioning, said two jurors told the judge that there was a remote chance of a verdict being reached.

Nine of the jurors answered that no juror had refused to be bound by the court's instruction. The remaining juror, who was not identified, said that there was one member of the panel who she felt wouldn't be bound by the court's instruction. There was no identity made public in that regard.

The judge's decision to talk with the jurors came after the panel indicated by note that it was unable to reach a decision on whether NFL rule 4.3 regulating franchise moves was in violation of antitrust laws.

The jury's verdict in the case must be unanimous.

The panelists indicated they would like to hear further closing arguments by the attorneys, particularly to explain the relationship between NFL rule 4.3 and antitrust law.

The jury, which received the case on July 31, also reported it was unable to reach a unanimous decision on whether there was a breach of good faith by the NFL in its dealings with the Raiders.

The Raiders and the L.A. Coliseum Commission sued the NFL because the league blocked the proposed shift of the team to Los Angeles. Rule 4.3 requires that three-fourths of the league's team owners approve a move, and the Raiders' proposed switch to Los Angeles was turned down by a 22-0 vote with five abstentions.

Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, did not vote.

Former Queen Lives In Tenn.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Twenty years ago next month, Maria Beale Fletcher, a hazel-eyed beauty from Asheville, became North Carolina's only Miss America.

What ever happened to her? What becomes of Miss Americas when the spotlight has finally fallen away from them? Do they allow themselves to grow plump and go to the store in curlers or are they forever locked into their roles as beauty queens, living out their lives on a stage and a cottage cheese diet?

Maria Fletcher, 39 now, married a doctor, Jim Growdon. ("People say, 'Oh, you married a doctor. All Miss Americas marry doctors or lawyers.' I could just scream. I did not choose to pursue marriage with a doctor. I met him in English class at Vanderbilt. He was just a freshman. I was 26 months older. I thought he had possibilities except for his white socks and his flat-top haircut," she said.)

The Growdons have two children, a daughter 11 and a son 9. They have a large house — four bedrooms, 3½ baths — in Nashville, Tenn. They do all their own housework — including the laundry — except for some help with the floors, bathrooms and vacuuming four hours a week by a professional janitor.

Ms. Fletcher jealously rears her own children. "I plotted and planned to bring them into the world and I want to raise them," she said by telephone. "If I didn't, it would be like going to a movie and leaving at the good part. Nobody else could do it as well as I. Isn't that smug? I wanted to be there when they first experienced flowers outside, things like that. It all sounds like sentimental slush, but these things are important to me."

She still finds time for a profession, though. She's becoming a professional songwriter — country & western, gospel, whatever mood strikes her — and has formed her own music company, American Gold. A couple of her songs have been recorded but not yet released.

Obviously, the former Miss America has adjusted smoothly to life without adoring crowds. Only occasionally now does a stranger recognize her as the former beauty queen.

"I went into a store recently to shop for a gift for a friend," said Ms. Fletcher, "and I noticed the woman helping me seemed to be more interested than she might normally be. She said, 'I know you. You're Maria Fletcher.' That doesn't happen often. I suppose I should be flattered, but I wish it wouldn't happen. It's always the furthest thing from my mind. It's one thing to be promoting a product. Then you don't mind talking about it. But it's another thing when you're just doing something mundane."

"Another thing — when they recognize you, you think maybe they're saying to themselves, 'My, Miss America is getting a few gray hairs' or 'Miss America has wrinkles, too.'"

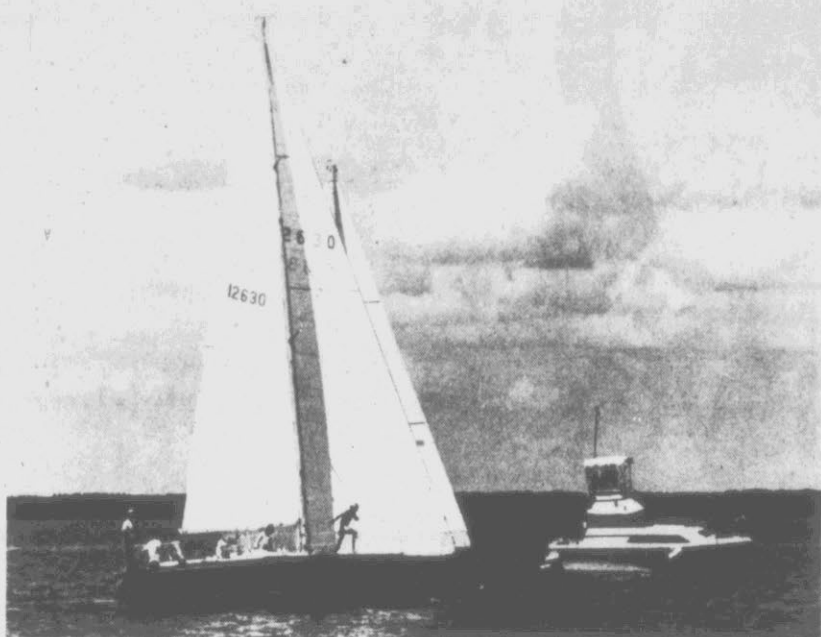

"We can't compare ourselves to what we once were."

Ms. Fletcher nevertheless feels compelled to maintain a certain level of appearance. She says she probably would, anyway, but being a former Miss America, she dashes out in jeans and an old shirt only to visit friends, "but I certainly don't dress that way even to go out to buy a quart of milk."

"I realized people expected Miss America to dress a certain way. They also expected you to act a certain way, but that's where I rebelled against. I was going to be myself. I refused to rethink everything I said before I said it. I retained my spontaneity. I wasn't going to be a mannequin."

She was 5-feet-5½, 118 pounds and had measurements of 35-24-35 when she was chosen Miss America. Today, she says, "I weigh a couple of pounds less than when I was Miss America, but I'm sure my measurements have redistributed themselves some way. Being a 39-year-old lady, though, I'm in pretty good shape. When I put on 3 or 4 pounds and my clothes get a little tight in the waist, I feel like a lump, and I take it off and promise I'll never do that again. But I do."

DOG DAYS REGATTA WINNER — Smoke, a C&C 37 boat sailed by Robert Taylor of Chapel Hill, won first place honors in a photo finish with a lead of several inches over Free Spirit, a C&C 30 sailed by Bob Taylor of Fayetteville (almost hidden behind Smoke). Some 150 boats entered the event, sponsored by Texasgulf through the Pamlico Sailing Club. The regatta course was between the Texasgulf site and Indian Island. It is the largest event of its type held on the east coast between Annapolis, Md., and St. Petersburg, Fla.

Emerald Isle

Sets Referendum

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. (AP) — Emerald Isle voters go to the polls next Tuesday for the second time in two years to decide if mixed beverages can be sold in the resort town.

Supporters are predicting passage because no opposition has surfaced.

Consistent opposition from county church groups was thought to be responsible for the defeat of the 1979 referendum.

Lunch Prices Rising

By The Associated Press
School systems in North Carolina are raising lunch prices this fall by 5 to 10 cents per meal in response to federal budget cuts.

But the increases of 7 to 15 percent are far less than the 100-percent jumps that officials had feared earlier. Congress decided July 31 to cut the federal Child Nutrition Program by $1.5 billion.

"When they first started talking about the cuts, we were afraid we'd have to put prices up so high we'd price the paying student right out of the market," said Catherine Cochrane, assistant director of the Winston-Salem-Forsyth schools' food services.

Lunch rates in the system will increase 15 cents — from 60 cents to 75 cents for kindergarten through sixth grade and from 65 cents to 80 cents for seventh through 12th grade, she said.

Guilford County's three school systems may suffer the steepest lunchroom fee increase, although exact figures have yet to be announced.

A county official said the county board of education has heard recommendations to keep the price under $1.

Greensboro's city schools may also be hit hard. Their fees have remained constant for the past eight years in the face of inflation, but officials say that may change drastically.

Food service director Nancy Kennon said the prices had been kept artificially low — 45 cents for elementary school and 50 cents for secondary school — to boost patronage.

Lunch prices in the Fayetteville City schools will increase from 60 cents to 65 cents for kindergarten through second grade, from 60 cents to 70 cents for third through fifth grade and from 65 cents to 75 cents for sixth through 12th grades.

"We're not hurting nearly as much as we thought we would," said Sara Riley, director of the system's Child Nutrition Program.

In High Point, prices will go from 60 to 65 cents in elementary schools and from 65 to 75 cents in junior and senior high schools.

Cumberland County's board of education has delayed a decision on increasing lunch prices because of lingering uncertainty about federal allocations, said food service director Donnie Pollard.

Cumberland schools are "on the borderline" of a new federal cutoff point for system eligibility, he said.

The new guideline says counties that have served free or reduced-price lunches to less than 60 percent of their students won't get reimbursed for local lunch expenditures. Pollard said Cumberland's status is still undetermined.

State Reports

Nursing Posts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Department of Human Resources said Tuesday that there are 100 vacancies among the 800 nursing positions in state institutions under the department's direction.

The shortage came about because nurses are leaving state institutions for higher paying jobs in private facilities, the department said.

Dorothea Dix Hospital, the state mental health facility in Raleigh, leads the vacancy list with 24 nursing vacancies. AT the hospital, 145 registered nurses and 27 licensed practical nurses are employed.

The loss of nurses could eventually jeopardize the national accreditation sought by the state hospitals from the Joint Commission for Accreditation of Hospitals, said department spokesman June E. Milby.

The commission cited Dix in 1980 for "insufficient nurses to provide adequate coverage for patients during evening and night shifts."

"There is not such thing as how many or what the patient-staff ratio should be," Ms. Milby said. "They (the commission) just tell us when we're not doing it right. As a result of that, we have added more nurses and upgraded some nurse technician positions."

Oil Plan Warning Issued

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Interior Secretary James G. Watt's proposed accelerated leasing for offshore oil could exceed the nation's ability to properly address potential environmental hazards, representatives from Virginia and 22 other coastal states have warned.

It could also exceed the petroleum industry's capacity for developing resources opened up to it, and problems could be created that would slow down, rather than speed up, efforts to increase domestic oil production, state officials said.

Such concerns were discussed at an Outer Continental Shelf Policy Committee meeting in Norfolk Tuesday.

A different view was supported by federal and industry officials.

Department of Interior officials defended Watt's proposal as a means of keeping the good points of the existing program while eliminating bureaucratic delays that prevent the nation from using its energy resources more effectively.

Oil company executives praised the administration's effort to shorten the long approval process now required before offshore leasing can begin.

Citing the nation's need to reduce its dependence on "uncertain and costly foreign energy supplies," Watt proposed a program of 42 lease sales during 1982-86.

Under the proposal, environmental impact studies of individual tracts would not be required until after a lease sale. The studies would be done by the oil companies awarded the lease and then checked by government agencies. If government approval were then granted, exploratory production could proceed.

In the past, detailed environmental analysis of individual tracts has been done before the lease sale by the Bureau of Land Management. If unacceptable environmental hazards were found, a tract could be withheld from sale.

Under the proposed program, federal agencies would do a regional study rather than center on individual sites.

Federal officials said the proposed program would cut the current 2 1/2-year to 3-year approval process preceding a sale by several months.

In a letter to Watt, Virginia Secretary of Commerce and Resources Maurice B. Rowe said the proposed program could lead to a scattered bidding process "completely guided by the single-minded desires of the current exploration people in the petroleum industry."

In a later letter, D. C. LeVan, the state's chief geologist, said "the capacity of various levels of government, including those in Virginia, to deal properly with (outer continental shelf) matters could easily be exceeded" by the new program.

LeVan also questioned whether the petroleum industry has sufficient resources to conduct exploration and development on the scale proposed under the accelerated schedule.

The current program provided "orderly but expeditious growth," Edward F. Wilson, state coordinator of Outer Continental Shelf Activities, said. "We don't have any objections to speeding it up. But we question whether the changes are going to speed it up or slow it down."

J. Robinson West, assistant secretary for policy, budget, and administration in the Department of Interior, said the proposed program would eliminate "bureaucratic redundancy and red tape" that has resulted in "an enormous waste" of available energy resources.

Responding to concern from state representatives that the new program would not provide adequate environmental safeguards, he said, "I think this is an extraordinarily safe program."

Israeli forces carved out a 48-kilometer front along Egypt's Mediterranean coast in the Six-Day War in 1967 and Egypt closed the Suez Canal.

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE FOR GREENVILLE FOOD SHOPPERS

DON'T BE FOOLED BY CLAIMS OF "LOWEST FOOD PRICES!"

WINN-DIXIE URGES YOU TO JUDGE FOR YOURSELF!

There's a food store in town that makes a lot of claims about having the "Lowest Food Prices in North Carolina (LFPINC).

However, the Charlotte Better Business Bureau did an independent survey that showed this food chain didn't even have the lowest food prices in Charlotte, much less the rest of the State!

Blindness Doesn't Stop Cook

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP) — This summer more 1,000 youngsters are enjoying the culinary delights cooked up by Lena Clark at Wake Forest's Camp Kanata. Five of the young people working as the kitchen staff at the camp are learning Mrs. Clark's cooking secrets. But Mrs. Clark, who is blind, is sharing more than recipes with the youngsters. She is teaching them that being blind doesn't stop her from doing what she likes best. Mrs. Clark, 58, sees only shadows because of cataracts on her eyes. But according to camp director Steve Gerger, she performs her duties as if she had 20-20 vision. Mrs. Clark teaches her pupils a variety of kitchen skills.

"They learn to make biscuits, fry fish and chicken and cook bacon under the broiler without burning it up," she said. "They can bake and carve a ham as well."

The kitchen serves three meals a day for 240 people but there are times when sandwiches or other foods are served that do not take much cooking time. "I take that time to teach my assistants how to cut down our recipes into smaller portions so that when they go home and cook for their families, they won't make too large a quantity," she said.

PROBLEM SOLUTION — When architect Jens Drefahl of Frankfurt, West Germany, found that mowing his grass roof got his goat, he did the obvious. He got a goat — two, in fact.

The rooftop grazers keep the grass down, and provide milk as a bonus. (AP Laserphoto)

Rapides Schools Start 2nd Year

By KEVIN NOBLET, Associated Press Writer, ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — When a federal judge's school desegregation order descended on Rapides Parish last year, there were parental protests, court battles and "white flight." Officials hope things go as well this fall.

They say it could have been much worse. About 1,500 children fled the public schools. New private schools doubled in number, from four to eight. Three white girls made national headlines when their parents steadfastly refused to obey an order that the girls no longer attend an all-white high school in Buckeye.

Parents in the mostly white community of Forest Hill attracted similar attention when they occupied an elementary school closed by the order and taught their own children. Yet most of the parish's 25,000 schoolchildren rode the buses each day without incident, say school officials in this central Louisiana parish.

"We had a very good year, a very fine year," said James Cleveland, principal at Jones Street Junior High in Alexandria, a school often at the center of the desegregation furor.

Jones Street, with 750 students, saw more busing than any other school in the parish. It used to be almost all black, but U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott decided last year to send many of its children to rural, white schools outside the city.

At the same time, white children from towns like Pineville and Buckeye were bused as many as 25 miles to integrate Jones Street.

"A lot of people anticipated a lot of problems. We overcame that," Cleveland said. "For example, we had 79 kids who came out for football — 36 were white and 43 were black. They were the first white students ever to play on our team, and we won a championship."

Roughly 40 percent of the parish's schoolchildren are black. Proponents of desegregation said the black children attended inferior, often run-down schools while white children got better classes and teachers.

The integration plan was designed to get both races to mix and give blacks a better shot at a good education. But not everyone agrees it was successful — or should have been.

Joseph Page Jr., 10, was one of the black youngsters sent to Pineville Elementary to help integrate that school. "I saw a change in his attitude, and it wasn't good," said his father, Joseph Sr., who said the boy was better off in his neighborhood school.

"The teachers and principal assumed from the start that the black kids were backward," Page said. "Most of them were shipped immediately into remedial classes, whether they needed them or not."

But many did need special help, said Gloria Hearne, a teacher who spent last year at Jones Street. Her first visit to a predominately black parish school was six years ago. "I nearly cried," she recalled. "The children were not reading in the first grade. They were so far behind it was pathetic."

Louis Berry, a civil rights lawyer who battled for more than a decade for an integration plan, said Page's experience was the exception.

"Black parents had some negligible complaints, but they centered mainly on the parent-teacher conflicts you find in any school," he said. "Now, blacks sit with whites in the classroom, learn with them and compete with them in academics and sports. They're losing the feeling of inferiority."

"At the same time, it's purging white children of the notion that have been handed down by their parents that being white is, per se, superior."

Rapides Parish's largely rural character may have had much to do with residents' general willingness to comply with the desegregation order.

People here are strong believers in law and order, and there was no violence even at the height of the Buckeye and Forest Hill protests. When the Ku Klux Klan tried to rally support with a cross-burning in Forest Hill, most of the spectators were reporters.

The Forest Hill and Buckeye protesters took their cases to the courts.

They lost. "Busing is here to stay," Berry said.

Charles Waites, the principal at Buckeye High School, hopes not.

Buckeye High has 600 students. It used to have more than 700, but 106 were ordered to Jones Street.

"With all this instability, you can't settle down to education," Waites said. Students were given parish-wide proficiency tests for the first time last year, so officials can't yet say whether learning has improved or suffered.

If Waites is worried as a principal, he is angry as a father.

Last year, he pulled his 13-year-old son, Brad, out of public school rather than see him bused to Jones Street. Brad attended the Philadelphia Christian School in Buckeye — one of the new private schools.

"Brad'll go there again this year," Waites promised.

But Berry predicts white flight will decrease, not only because the desegregation plan is working but also because private schools cost money.

"Unemployment in Rapides Parish is the highest in the state," he said. "The per capita income is among the lowest in the state."

"Once people get over the emotional part of it, they have to get down to economic facts. They can't afford white flight."

'Hill Street Blues' Could Lead To New TV Shows

By FRED ROTHENBERG, AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC expects big things this year from "Hill Street Blues," the only show that seems to have attracted more Emmy nominations than viewers. So big, in fact, that the network already is thinking of a spinoff.

"We have the feeling that 'Hill Street' could just take off," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment. "We're working on a spinoff with Hill and Renko (the black-white cop team played by Michael Warren and Charles Haid.)"

For unbridled optimism, television programmers are akin to baseball managers in spring training. But planning a spinoff show for a program that was in danger of cancellation and finished 83rd in the ratings? Is NBC counting its chickens before they're even conceived?

"We sat in scheduling sessions last spring and were convinced that 'Hill Street' was about to explode," said Tartikoff. "We felt the show was just a season away, much the same way 'M-A-S-H' moved to become a hit. Fred Silverman said we had to keep it on the air. He predicted it would pick up seven or eight Emmys and the audience would discover it in the fall."

If Silverman were a better program prophet for NBC, he wouldn't be unemployed today. But he may be right on this one. The first phase of his prediction was on target. Last week, "Hill Street," a police drama with strong character and comic threads, earned 21 Emmy Award nominations.

Emmys may be a reflection of program quality, but they don't always measure viewer appeal. Several shows were dead and buried when they won Emmy Awards. But in the case of "Hill Street Blues," there are legitimate signs that the Emmy nominations are not the kiss of death.

First, it is a superior show that should become ever more watchable this season through some format changes. Tartikoff and new NBC boss Grant Tinker both feel that the program bit off too much last season, spinning too many stories per episode without reaching any resolutions.

"We will attempt to satisfy the viewer more," said Tartikoff. "While we may have had five running stories last year, this year we'll have three and end one every week."

"The producers were a little overambitious last year. They were trying to be 'M-A-S-H' right away. The public wasn't familiar enough with the characters to take all those liberties."

Second, the attention given to the Emmy nominations and the overwhelming media praise should stimulate some viewer tune-in. When "Hill Street" seemed close to cancellation last year, several TV writers initiated letter-writing campaigns to save the show.

In all, 10,000 letters and forms were mailed to NBC, and they weren't the usual crayon rantings. "They were well-written, type-written and loaded with good prose," said Gene Walsh, an NBC spokesman.

The show's quality and these "Dear Fred" letters were factors in saving "Hill Street" when NBC programs "Buck Rogers," "Lobo" and "BJ and the Bear" were getting higher ratings and still getting their pink slips.

Although "Hill Street" survived, it was sometimes hard to find. The migration went from Thursdays to Saturdays to Wednesdays to Saturdays to Tuesdays. This fall, it has a home on Thursday nights at 10, opposite ABC's "20-20" and CBS' new show "Jessica Novak."

Tartikoff is confident about the new night, although industry analysts, writing before the award nominations, target "Hill Street" to finish third in its time slot. They don't think much of the lead-in program, "Gimme A' Break," and figure "20-20" to have a solid audience and "Jessica Novak" to be one of the season's most successful new shows.

TelCom Associates predicted "20-20" would end up in 35th place, "Jessica Novak" in 45th and "Hill Street" in 51st.

"Hill Street Blues" comes from MTM Productions, which was headed by Grant Tinker before he came to rescue NBC last month.

The Real Estate Corner
When you're ready to sell, you want to make sure you list with someone who has all the tools to help you best sell your house. The most important thing is this: Don't just list with anybody. To compare, ask these six questions:

The six important questions to ask before listing your house.
1. Do you have a referral network so you can send me potential buyers from all across the country?
2. Do you have a display of photos in your office so people can preview my house?
3. Are all your salespeople professionally trained?
4. Do you advertise extensively in newspapers and on the radio?
5. Will you put into writing exactly what you will do for me or else I can cancel the listing?
6. Do you spend over $20,000,000 to advertise on television so effectively that more than 9 out of 10 potential buyers recognize your sign in front of my house?
There is only one real estate sales organization that can answer yes to all these questions. CENTURY 21. At CENTURY 21, We'll Give Our Word To You.™

At least two books have been written recently about trump management, so you can understand how important this subject is. Here's a rule of thumb for drawing trumps: "If you can count enough tricks for your contract, draw trumps. If not, delay drawing trumps until you've planned your strategy."

After his partner opened one no trump, North used the Stayman Convention in the hope of locating a major-suit fit. When South showed a spade suit, North confidently raised to game.

West led the top of his club sequence. Declarer took the ace, crossed to the jack of trumps and led a heart to his king. West won and returned a trump, and declarer began to realize that he was in trouble. He tried to rescue something from the shambles by playing on diamonds, but East won the third diamond and played another trump. Declarer eventually had to settle for eight tricks—down two.

Declarer's trouble was that he didn't stop to count his tricks. Had he done so, he would have seen that he had only seven top tricks. Applying our rule, that means that declarer should have postponed drawing trumps.

The fact that declarer held all the high trumps should have alerted him to the possibility of using dummy's high trumps as ruffers. Add three ruffs to seven tricks, and you have enough to fulfill the game.

Declarer need only take advantage of the entries in his hand to ruff clubs in dummy. After winning the ace of clubs, declarer should ruff a club, cross to the ace of diamonds and ruff another club. Back to the king of diamonds for another ruff to guarantee ten tricks, and now declarer can afford to lead to the king of hearts in an effort to make an over-trick.

Note that declarer cannot afford to give up the lead more than once before scoring his ruffs. If he does so, the defenders can defeat him by returning a trump whenever they gain the lead.

American Heads Jesuit Order

ROME (AP) — An American, the Rev. Vincent O'Keefe, is serving as temporary head of the Jesuit religious order during the illness of the Rev. Pedro Arrupe, who is hospitalized with a blood clot in the brain.

O'Keefe, 61, has acted as temporary vicar of the Society of Jesus previously when the superior general was on foreign trips. O'Keefe is assistant general of the order.

Arrupe was admitted to the Salvador Mundi Hospital on Friday. Doctors said the blood clot has partially paralyzed his right hand and impaired his speech. The 73-year-old Spaniard offered last year to retire but Pope John Paul II asked him to stay on.

Airport Named For Torrijos

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Tocumen International Airport is being renamed Gen. Omar Torrijos International Airport today in honor of the 52-year-old Panamanian strongman killed in a plane crash, the government announced.

Military and commercial pilots presented a petition to the government last week asking for the name change. Torrijos and six others were killed July 31 when their plane hit a cloud-covered mountain 60 miles west of here.

Tocumen is an Indian place name. The $75 million airport 12 miles south of the capital was opened in 1978.

China Silences Malayan Propaganda Broadcasts

By HARI S. MANIAM
Associated Press Writer
KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — China has silenced broadcasts by the Voice of the Malayan Revolution — a development that is being closely studied by Malaysian and foreign diplomats here.

The radio had been Peking's main propaganda contribution to the banned Communist Party of Malaya, which has waged a guerrilla war in the jungles since 1948.

The Communist Party still regards Malaysia and neighboring Singapore as a single country which they still call Malaya, the name of the peninsular area when it was a British colony.

Ever since it established diplomatic relations with China in 1974, Malaysia has argued that if Peking truly wanted friendship it should silence broadcasts by the Voice of the Malayan Revolution or VMR from southern China and withdraw its support of the Malayan Communist Party. China ignored the requests.

But since the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia in late 1978 China has been seeking the active support of Malaysia and the other members of Association of Southeast Asian Nations — Thailand, the Philippines, Singapore and Indonesia — to get Vietnamese troops out of Cambodia.

On June 30, VMR suddenly went silent. But on the next day another radio, the Voice of Malayan Democracy began broadcasting from the jungles of southern Thailand, where communist guerrillas are known to operate.

The signals are weak and they appear to emanate from a small, mobile station that is difficult to track, according to Malaysian monitors.

They said the new station does not assail Malaysian leaders in such terms as "running dogs," as VMR had done, although the thrust of the propaganda is similar.

U.S., British, Indian and other diplomats here say China appears to have reached agreement with the Malayan Communists to shut down VMR but they note the new station began broadcasting the next day. This indicated some coordination, they said.

They express a belief that China, while giving the appearance of meeting Malaysia's objections, is actually continuing the propaganda campaign under a new name.

China also has been beating broadcasts to other Southeast Asian countries, particularly to Thailand, along the lines of the VMR.

Officials and diplomats here say they are waiting to see if China also will terminate broadcasts to these countries and whether other new stations will spring up to replace them.

People studying the new broadcasts say that they appear to be aimed at Malays rather than the Chinese here.

Although the Malaysian population is multiracial and Malays form 55 percent of it, the Malayan Communist Party, which is believed to have a guerrilla force of about 3,000, has been mostly Chinese.

The propaganda emphasis on the Malays could mean the Chinese realize that for any communist movement to succeed in Malaysia it has to have Malay backing since a Chinese-dominated party would not be accepted, some of the diplomats said.

Malaysian officials indicate that they view China as the long-term threat in this area of the world.

Total Exercise

There's nothing like swimming for pure pleasure — and your health. Swimming is a total exercise because it involves every part of the body. Like joggers, swimmers strengthen their hearts, blood vessels, and lungs by burning and consuming large amounts of oxygen. But swimmers are seldom troubled by knee or back injuries that disable other athletes. Swimming is also a fast way to lose weight. You would need to do 68 minutes of walking but only 32 minutes of swimming to burn off the 356 calories in a piece of cake. Swimming is one of the oldest sports. Cave drawings show people swimming. Today swimming is one of the most popular participant sports in the U.S.

Extension Service Puts On Drive To Promote Use Of Solar Energy

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With federal funds promoting home solar power soon to run dry, the North Carolina Energy Extension Service is putting on a drive to promote energy efficiency throughout the state.

The federal allocation for the EES, administered by the state, is dwindling in the last year of a three-year grant. But the service is starting a new project to back installation of solar-powered hot water heaters in homes.

The plan offers do-it-yourself courses at community colleges throughout the state on assembling and installing the heaters, and provides the hardware for $1,000.

And that's a bargain, according to Martha Hannon of the state Department of Commerce, which oversees the service in North Carolina.

"For one thing, it means a 65 percent tax credit," she said. "But more than that, solar energy just makes good economic sense. It's renewable, efficient and cheap. It's the source of the future."

The service offers advice and assistance for energy efficiency to farmers, the construction industry, small businesses, local government and anyone who drives.

"We're trying to help people make energy go as far as it can. It's really as simple as that," said Ms. Hannon.

That's the theory behind another service project: construction of a solar education and demonstration house adjacent to N.C. State University's McKimmon Center.

The house, a conventional wooden structure, will have facilities for solar space and hot water heating. It will be open to the public soon after its completion and dedication in mid-September.

It will be of a hybrid construction, utilizing both passive and active solar power. The energy is considered actively produced when machines are used to harness it and passive when none are used.

Ray DeBruhl, an N.C. State University civil engineering extension specialist, is overseeing construction of the house.

"What we want is to show people how solar systems can be integrated into the conventional residential dwelling," he said.

"We want them to see firsthand how it can be done without detracting from the home's appearance."

Builders who want to pursue the idea of solar heating in homes can get assistance through yet another of the extension service's residential projects: Solar Spec.

It offers expense-paid consultation with architects who specialize in solar design, during which the architects suggest blueprint revisions to accommodate collection, storage and distribution of solar heat.

Al Boyers, an NCSU mechanical engineering extension specialist, said the service's heavy emphasis on residential solar heating doesn't mean solar heat is always the most cost-efficient option.

"People often ask whether solar energy has 'arrived,' and it's tough to give a blanket response," he said. "Passive solar hot-water heating definitely is here — it's the best way going. But in pure terms of costs, passive space (room) heating hasn't (arrived) yet."

The extension service's efforts are continuing in the other four areas, though fund reductions could cause some to be de-emphasized unless the state or private donors fill in the gaps, Ms. Hannon said.

In the local government sector, extension specialists have provided "energy accounting systems" through which officials can keep track of energy usage and thus find ways to conserve.

Working closely with the Agriculture Extension Service, the energy extension service has recommended conservation methods to farmers, including alternative energy sources for insulation of breeding houses and incubation.

In the area of transportation, the extension service instituted the "Drivec" program, a clinic in which people could learn how to save energy by changing their driving habits and taking better care of their vehicles.

Finally, the service conducted on-the-spot inspections of small businesses — especially furniture manufacturers and restaurants — to point out wasteful habits.

"We've reached some 60 businesses so far," Ms. Hannon said. "With them the big thing is seeing how they handle their equipment and appliances, especially cooling. You'd be surprised at how much money restaurants lose when cool air is sucked up their ventilator hoods."

RESEARCH VESSEL — The research vessel "Cape Hatteras" steams toward the Duke University Marine Laboratory at Beaufort in its maiden voyage from shipyards at Jacksonville, Fla. The 132-foot vessel will be operated by Duke for the North Carolina Oceanographic Consortium. It will be fitted with scientific equipment and dedicated on Oct. 2. (AP Laserphoto)

Paper Thrives On 'Democracy'

By KATY BUCHANAN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) —

One recent summer night, a group of 20 laborers, housewives and retirees clustered in a tiny North Side house, the staff of that month's edition of a home-spun city paper bearing the unlikely name of the Mill Hunk Herald.

Their task was to review each of 85 articles, stories and letters. Every person in the group had written at least one of the items under scrutiny. On the back of each piece, they scrawled comments and a numerical rating between 1 and 5, with 1 indicating top-quality stuff.

Top-rated pieces got the nod for publication.

Founder Larry Evans, his wife, Leslie, and what they affectionately call a "strong core" of friends and supporters, boast that the Herald is the only democratically run newspaper in the country.

Democracy is dear to the young couple — THE Herald even sponsors a women's softball team whose players vote on their starting lineup — and it was Evans' fervor for majority rule that helped get the Mill Hunk started.

"We think it's an example of how the future is going to roll. There's got to be a more democratic way of expressing how things go into the magazines," said the tan, blond steelworker who regularly punches a clock at U.S. Steel's mill in the city's Homestead section.

The tiny paper (circulation 5,000) is a freestyle collection of blue-collar commentary — mostly pro-little guy and anti-big companies and government.

An example: "Whatever happened...? Our unions, just like politics, have become corrupt with hand-picked men that are only personal friends of our top union officials. Now who do we have to represent us? No one."

There is also poetry: "Aint shor bout tamaro — but shor bout today

"gonna meet my gal in phille — goin back ta pit-tsberg p-a

"...I wuz born in dat distric — da one calld da hill

"wen yore born in dat distric — da nex stops da mill"

"We won't go and revise somebody's work," Evans said. "If somebody has something to say, we want them to say it in the language they know best. We try to keep the free spirit of the writer."

That goes for humor, too. "One of the things that characterizes the Herald is that it has a sense of humor. Satire goes over real well," said Mrs. Evans.

The seed for the Herald sprouted first with The Union Coupler, a mimeographed news sheet started in 1977 by Evans and several others at the McConway Torley mill here.

Evans said they were unhappy with the mill's union paper, which he described as "full of obituaries and bowling scores."

"We'd sit in the bar sometimes before the midnight shift, and I'd write as they talked. I'd read it back to them and say 'Is that OK?' and that'd be their article," Evans recalled.

The Coupler was not popular with management, and Evans claims that's the reason he and his 13 fellow contributors were fired. Evans moved on to the Homestead mill.

Vehicle Recalls Not Publicized

DETROIT (AP) — Recalls for safety defects in U.S.-made cars have gone unannounced publicly by the manufacturers or the federal government, according to a report published today.

Ford Motor Co. has conducted eight recalls of thousands of new Escort and Mercury Lynx models as well as their sports coupes derivatives, the Ford EXP and the Mercury LN7, since Oct. 7, 1980, without releasing details to the news media, the Detroit Free Press said in a copyright story.

Roger Maugh, director of Ford's office of automotive safety, said Monday that the carmaker had not issued press releases on the recalls because the problems were considered low risks and announcements "would induce some alarm in the public that is unjustified."

News organizations, he said, "used to get them on all our recalls because the federal government was making announcements of them on a routine basis. To my knowledge, they are no longer making announcements as a routine matter of course."

"... I presume the change has occurred as a result of the change in administration."

Chrysler Corp. and Volkswagen of American also have conducted unannounced recalls of new cars, the newspaper reported.

However, late Monday, Chrysler announced the recall of 110,000 1981 K-cars — the Dodge Aries and Plymouth Reliant — because faulty switches could cause the stop lights not to light when the brakes are applied.

But the Free Press said that recall was announced after the newspaper made inquiries about the carmaker's failure to issue recall announcements.

Baptists Sign Satellite Lease

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Southern Baptist leaders have signed a $2.1 million-a-year lease to use a communications satellite for their nationwide television network.

The lease, signed Monday with Southern Pacific Communications, is for a satellite that will be shot into orbit in 1984.

The Baptist network would seek no money on the air, in contrast with the "electronic church" religious programming dominated by fundamentalist preachers, said the Rev. Jimmy Allen, president of the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission.

Donations instead will be sought through direct mail programs, he added.

"This is a new step for a new day," Allen said. "We are at the point of having a permanent home in space."

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered.
