Joyous Onlookers Cheer Pope's Return To Vatican

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II left the hospital today, pale and walking slowly, blessing hundreds of patients, doctors, nurses and nuns who burst into song as he returned to the Vatican three months and a day after he was shot in St. Peter's Square.

Back at the Vatican, the 61-year-old pontiff smiled and waved at several thousand faithful waiting in the Square. He prayed at the tomb of St. Peter in the grottoes beneath St. Peter's Basilica, where John Paul's three immediate predecessors are also buried.

"I wanted to honor and thank St. Peter for having wanted to keep alive his successor. As I was praying over the tombs I thought there could have been an additional one but the madonna, that May 13, thought differently," the Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, quoted the pope as saying.

The pontiff shook hands with doctors and nurses in the Gemelli Hospital then stepped into his black Mercedes for the 15-minute trip home. After a few days' rest at his apartment overlooking St. Peter's Square, the pope will go to his summer retreat in Castel Gandolfo in the Alban Hills south of Rome.

The pope was discharged a day after his doctors said in a medical bulletin he was completely healed and could leave the hospital any time he wished. They prescribed six weeks of convalescence.

"He has to act like a man who is waiting to return to the man he was before," Dr. Francesco Crucitti, who performed the two operations on the pope, told reporters.

About 300 people — doctors, nurses, nuns and other patients — pressed against barricades in the lobby of the modern hospital to get a glimpse of the pope. They broke into applause and sang the hymn "Christ Reigns As King."

Flanked by Crucitti and the Vatican secretary of state, Italian Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the pope walked slowly down the line, shaking hands. He then gave his apostolic blessing, broadcast over loudspeakers throughout the hospital.

In a 10-minute message he read to patients, John Paul thanked all who had prayed for his health and expressed hope that his fellow patients would also be able to leave the hospital soon.

"Today, after three months that I have spent for the most part among you ... I can return home. After having recovered my health in the clinical sense, I may recover the indispensable strength for the exercise of my ministry ...," the pope said.

Before leaving the hospital, the pope gave a warm hug to Crucitti. The pontiff, wearing white robes and skull cap, climbed into his limousine convertible and stood up in the back to wave. The convertible top was then closed for the trip.

Doctors said the pope was already up and dressed when they arrived to give him a last-minute checkup this morning. He then thanked the staff members and celebrated Mass in his 11th floor suite.

The pope looked drawn, but his voice was strong and firm. Crucitti said John Paul was in fine health and had gained back all but seven of the 22 pounds he lost since he was shot May 13.

Crucitti said the pope was slightly overweight at the time of the shooting, and now is at a good weight — 187 pounds.

"The pope will be 100 percent himself," Dr. Luigi Candia, director of the hospital, said Thursday. "His physical condition is very good and his spirits are high." He said the spiritual leader of the world's estimated 600 million Catholics probably will not make any public appearances during his convalescence.

Mehmet Ali Agca, a convicted Turkish terrorist, shot the pope at the beginning of John Paul's weekly general audience. Two Americans were injured — Ann Odre, 58, of Buffalo, N.Y. and Rose Hall, 21, formerly of Shirley, Mass., and now a resident of West German.

Food Price Inflation Escalates

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food price inflation accelerated in July, but declines in gasoline and other energy prices held the nation's overall inflation at the wholesale level to an annual rate of 5.5 percent, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said its measure of wholesale prices — the Producer Price Index for finished goods — rose 0.4 percent in July, tying May for the lowest monthly increase this year.

If inflation increased at July's rate for 12 straight months, the rate for that year would be 5.5 percent, Labor Department officials said.

They had reported a 4.6

percent annual rate for May, indicating that that month's rise was probably rounded slightly upward to 0.4 percent while July was rounded downward. The department releases only the rounded monthly figure.

Whatever the exact monthly numbers, they have been coming in far below last year, when the index for the entire year rose 11.8 percent.

The new inflation report said, "Although consumer food price increases accelerated from 0.5 percent in June to 1.5 percent in July, prices for other finished goods edged up only 0.1 percent, far less than in any month since last fall."

In fact, the prices of all finished energy goods fell 1 percent after rising slightly in June, it said.

The July decline included 2 percent drops in the prices of gasoline and fuel oil, although the price of natural gas rose 3.1 percent. It was the third consecutive monthly decline for gasoline.

Economists have credited an ample world petroleum supply for the lower-than-expected energy price increases this year.

Agriculture Department officials have predicted food prices would rise 10 percent or more this year, but increases for food also have been far below the expected levels.

Big food price hikes in July included 10.1 percent for pork and 3.8 percent for beef and veal, the new report said.

All the increases are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

In all, the unadjusted Producer Price Index stood at 271.3 in July, meaning that goods that cost $10 at wholesale in 1967 would have cost $27.13 last month.

While inflation may be bottoming out after months of moderation, it could surge again in the last half of the year, economists suggest.

Private economist Donald Ratajczak, commenting before today's report was released, said not to look for improvement in the months to come.

"High interest rates and a strong dollar continue to squeeze commodity inflation out of the system," said Ratajczak.

Missile Boat Seized

MADRID, Spain (AP) —

One of three French-built missile boats being delivered to Iran was seized off southern Spain and diverted to Morocco by gunmen believed to be Iranians, the Spanish government said today.

The other two boats were held at the Spanish port of Algeciras, awaiting an investigation, the government said.

In Paris, a man who identified himself as an ex-general under the ousted shah said 100 loyalist followers of the late monarch boarded all three boats Thursday and diverted them to waters off Morocco to block their delivery to the Tehran regime.

However, official Moroccan sources denied that any Iranian ship was anchored in Moroccan waters.

The Spanish Foreign Ministry said the incident took place about five miles from the port of Cadiz after the armed group overpowered the captain of a Spanish tug. They had hired for a pleasure trip around Cadiz Bay and used the tug to board one of the Iranian launches.

After learning of the takeover, Spanish navy and air force units trailed the Iranian boats until one of them dropped anchor at Tangiers, Morocco, and the other two docked in Algeciras, a Spanish port across the bay from Gibraltar, the Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

The initial report of the seizure came from a man who identified himself as "Mr. K."

Reagan Policies Building U.S. New Image In Western Europe

By ROBERT MCCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

President Reagan's hard-line defense and economic policies are rapidly giving the United States a new reputation for toughness among its West European allies. The image provokes both respect and irritation.

Former President Jimmy Carter was widely regarded in Europe as lacking authority but Reagan is seen as a leader who throws his weight around, according to an Associated Press survey of official and editorial opinion.

Reagan's recent decisions to build neutron weapons despite European qualms and to fire striking U.S. air traffic controllers have bolstered his reputation.

The political commentator for the Norwegian newspaper Arbeiderbladet, representing the ruling Labor Party, said America began constructing neutron warheads "to show that the U.S. means earnestness, even if acting like an elephant in a china shop."

Under Reagan, the United States seems to be regaining — at least for the moment — the image of a confident superpower that it enjoyed in the 1950s and 1960s before the embarrassments of Vietnam, Watergate and Iran.

Among West Germans answering a poll by the respected Allensbach Institute, nearly a 2-1 majority agreed that "the United States today has finally again become a reliable leader for the Western world."

One of the most visible signs of America's new reputation is the soaring dollar, a product of American high interest rates and the mood of confidence in Reagan generally.

But the return of the "almighty" greenback adds to Europeans' oil bills, forcing them to adopt recessionary monetary policies that encourage unemployment. Europeans must pay dollars for their oil, so the rising U.S. currency raises their costs. In the past year, the dollar alone has forced Belgium to pay $1.9 billion more for its petroleum.

France and Italy have complained that U.S. interest rates are too high.

"Who will invest in France with interest rates at 20 percent? We are strangled by this," said a French government spokesman who asked not to be identified.

Examples of the new U.S. image abound. In Italian political cartoons, Reagan is almost always portrayed as a tall, rangy cowboy with a self-assured grin. One panel showed him squatting next to a globe and holding a branding iron ready to burn a giant dollar-sign onto Europe.

Carter, in contrast, generally appeared as a short, hapless victim of circumstance. After the fall of the shah, one cartoon showed Carter grimacing as pincers extracted one of his famous teeth, labeled "Iran."

Reagan is seen as calling for major shifts in policy to build up American military might and fight inflation.

"Armaments and the dollar have become virility tests for an America whose president has taken office with the intent to revise the history of the past 20 years, no matter what it costs," the Zurich newspaper Tages-Anzeiger said.

As one would expect, conservatives generally praise Reagan and liberals or leftists condemn him.

British Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher says Europeans should be grateful Reagan wants to spend money to defend them, but opposition Labor Party leader Michael Foot said the neutron weapon "lowers the nuclear threshold."

Self-Funded Health Plan Set For City Employees

The City Council last night gave approval to a self-funded hospitalization program for city employees.

It was explained that estimated first-year savings of the program to the city and its employees as compared with the current program could range from $33,000 to some $73,000.

The recommendation to establish the new program followed several months of study by the city staff. The study was initiated after the cost of the city's health and hospitalization coverage increased by over 100 percent in the last two years, it was noted.

When the city received notice of a 35 percent rate hike in April, the personnel office met with all city employees. An employee survey indicated that 87 percent were satisfied with the benefits of the current program, that 88 percent preferred not to have a reduction in benefits in order to reduce premiums, that 87 percent feel the existing hospitalization premium is too high, and that 83 percent wanted the city to look at other insurance plans in order to control costs.

Under the self-funded program, the city will pool its money and employee contributions in a trust account rather than pay a monthly premium to an insurance company. Claims will be paid from the trust account by a professional health plan administrator contracted by the city. To protect the group plan against unusually large claims, the city will purchase insurance which will pay any claims above a set amount.

The new program will become effective Oct. 1.

City Council Approves Changes To Zoning Plan

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Amendments to the Zoning Ordinance removing rooming and boarding houses as permitted uses in the R-6 residential zoning classification and adding them as special uses in the R-6 zone were approved last night by the City Council.

Under provisions of the amended ordinance, existing rooming and boarding facilities in the zone could remain in operation but would become non-conforming uses. Prospective rooming and boarding house operations would require special use approval by the Board of Adjustments.

The amendment action was actually initiated by residents who comprise the Tar River Neighborhood Association, involving the area from Summit to Warren Streets and from Fifth Street to the river. Representatives of the association have made several appearances at city hall meetings to voice concern over what they cited as deterioration of their neighborhood and to seek a means of controlling overcrowding.

Marvin Braxton, SGA representative from the university, said students who live in the rooming and boarding houses affected by the ordinance are not in town now to have a voice in the public hearing process. He urged the Council to postpone last night's hearing until students are back in town and have a chance to express their feelings.

The president of the neighborhood group, John Anema, said no control exists over rooming and boarding facilities now and the amendments would provide a system of "checks and balances." Anema cited a problem of absentee property ownership in the area and subsequent dilapidated structural conditions.

Dr. David Phelps also endorsed the amendments and said the measure would not negate existing boarding houses but would add stability to the neighborhood. Better control of blight would further enhance property values, he said.

Braxton questioned the urgency of passing the amendments, which would apply citywide, last night. He said students will return in a few weeks and they may feel that the rug has been pulled out from under them. Braxton said the timing of the matter is suspect.

David Score narrated a series of slides showing renovated properties in the neighborhood as well as rental structures in need of repairs. He said the residents were "not trying to push this thing through" but had been involved in the matter for over a year.

Councilman Louis Clark pointed out that nothing in existence now would be affected by the amendments as "grandfather" provisions of the ordinance would be involved. He said the measure should help prevent overcrowding in the future.

John Schofield, a Fifth Street resident, said that since May three to four boarding houses have been established in the TRNA area. Postponing action on the amendments for another month would mean additional facilities would be started, he said.

Bobby Roberson, the city's planning director, said that students who roomed at a house a year ago will still be able to room there.

Councilman Clarence Gray said that the Council was listening to only one side last night and he suggested that the students should have a chance to be heard. He expressed reservations about the timing of the matter.

Students are victims of absentee landlords, contended Etsil Gordon, who said that the special use provisions would help alleviate the problem.

Councilwoman Judy Greene said she saw the amendments as a means of upgrading the ordinance and Councilman Dick McKee said the Council was "attempting to improve things."

The Council also approved an amendment to the ordinance adding in the definition section the following new and amended terms: boarding or rooming house; family; hotel; motel; motor lodge; motor inn; and room renting.

The amendment defines boarding or rooming house as "Any dwelling...in which space is let by the owner to not more than four persons who are not related by blood, adoption, or marriage to the owner." The provisions regulate the "renting of rooms in an owner-occupied dwelling to not more than two persons."

The definition stipulating no more than four persons in a rooming or boarding facility was questioned by several people. Ron Sewell, director of engineering and planning, said that he feels the number is justified and he pointed out that the city has had problems enforcing anything relative to rooming houses in the past.

Until now, there has been no limit on the number of people who could reside in a boarding or rooming facility. Roberson said. It was pointed out that the critical aspect involves parking facilities at the boarding or rooming houses.

In related matters, the Council approved amendments to the Zoning Ordinance substituting "zoning administrator" for "building inspector" and substituting "building division for "building inspector."

Approval was also given, following a public hearing, to an amendment to the Subdivision Ordinance setting five years from the date of approval as the expiration date for preliminary plats. The current validity period is one year.

An amendment to the Subdivision Ordinance was approved stipulating that, "Each lot created in a subdivision shall have access to an existing street in accordance with the Zoning Ordinance."

Council members voted unanimously to deny a request by Harry A. Hardee for rezoning a section of his property in the area of NC 43 from RA-20 to R-6. The matter was continued from the July meeting, when Clark expressed reservations as to why the Hardee property had not been subdivided in accordance with state law.

It was pointed out last night that subdivision requirements have still not been met with respect to the Hardee property. No one was present at the meeting to speak on behalf of the petitioners.

Following two additional public hearings, the Council approved the closing of Alpine Drive at the intersection of Alpine and Verdant Drives, and approved an application by Allison Aviation for a one-year permit to place a mobile facility at the airport for use as an office and classroom.

Other action taken by the Council included:

— Reappointment of Dr. William H. Collins to a second three-year term on the Greenville Energy Commission; — Appointment of Herbert P. Norman Jr. and Rufus Keel as alternate members one and two, respectively, on the Planning and Zoning Commission; — Appointment of Michael A. Colombo to the Greenville Foundation to fill the unexpired term (February of 1986) of the late W. W. Speight; — Appointment of Robert G. Deyton Jr. to the Recreation Commission to fill the unexpired term (June of 1982) of Roy Carawan who has moved from Greenville; — Approval of an application by Peaches Inc. for renewal (Please turn to Page 12)

SURVIVALIST FOOD?

I guess I'm what you call a survivalist. I want to prepare myself and my family for hard times I think are ahead by stockpiling nonperishable foods. Most camping-supply-type dehydrated foods don't last longer than seven years. But I've heard there are food like those used aboard the space shuttle that will last a century. Where can I get this kind? R.H.

Try the Enforcement Supply Company Inc., 6915 North Boulevard, Raleigh. The owner says the vacuum-packed dehydrated foods he stocks will last indefinitely if the cans remain unharmed. A sampler pack, which the manufacturer says will nourish the average adult for two weeks, costs $29.95. Many customers build their stockpiles gradually, he said, adding that the dehydrated foods take much less storage space than conventional foods.

Package Yourself For Achievement, Wardrobe Consultant Suggests

By SANDRA L. LATIMER
United Press International
Clothes make the person — particularly in business.

There is a profession devoted to telling business people that. They are called wardrobe consultants.

Execuwear in Chicago is one such firm. Execuwear's Larry Deer talks about a man who worked for a major mail order company, then borrowed money to go into business for himself.

When Deer asked him why he borrowed somewhat more than seemed necessary for a barebones operation, he got a response that makes a point about appearances.

"I used to drive a VW. If a client saw me get out of a VW and I asked him for his business, he'd say 'Why should I do business with him?' But if I get out of a Cadillac, he automatically thinks I'm a prosperous person and people like to do business with a prosperous person."

The man retired eight years later as a millionaire, Deer said.

"I'm not saying he earned his millions because he drove a Cadillac, but he looked successful and people wanted to do business with him," Deer said.

"A person's clothing is the way he packages himself. We spend more than $25 million on ways to make products more appealing, but little attention is taken by people in packaging themselves.

"Clothes cover 90 percent of the body and represent packaging of people. When people meet for the first time, after several minutes they're making decisions about the other person based on appearance alone."

In Columbus, Ohio, Carol Reed, president of Executive Image, a wardrobe consultant service, took a family member to a repair shop to have work done on an appliance.

She recalls that she saw a repairman dressed in a ripped T-shirt and dirty jeans. She said if it were her appliance to be worked on, she didn't want him to do it.

"But if I saw a repairman in a pair of neat overalls, that'd be the man I'd choose."

Dress codes are few
In the business world today, there are few written dress codes, mainly because "we're living in an era now where people have individual rights and they're more vocal about their individual rights than in the past years," Deer said.

Dress codes also would be hard to enforce, these consultants say.

"All an employer can do today is recommend (appropriate dress) unless the employer took it upon himself to buy the clothing for his employees, which would be tantamount to a uniform," Deer said. "He could supply the clothing as an additional non-salary benefit."

Conversely, Ms. Reed says an employee can take a cue from management for a way to dress.

Wardrobe consulting firms are the new kids on the business block. Both Execuwear in Chicago and Executive Image in Columbus have been in existence less than a year.

The consultants talk to employers and employees about how to dress, offer suggestions, and hold seminars to help the employees.

Image Institute in New York runs programs for corporations and individuals on motivation, attitude and image projection in business. Image Institute's Elaine Posta remembers a woman advertising executive sent to her by a firm that wanted to promote the woman.

"Companies can work in this way," Ms. Posta said. "They won't fire you, but they won't promote you either."

The woman was overweight, wore no makeup, and needed something done with her hair, Ms. Posta recalls.

Key to promotion
"Often an overweight person tends to let things go," she said. "This woman did excellent work, but her company didn't feel her appearance went along with the job.

"She wanted to improve. We started with makeup and then had her hair done by a stylist. This gave her the incentive to lose weight."

"We bought a couple of suits for her. She had been wearing baggy dresses to hide her figure. We got her into a couple of nice suits, fairly feminine. We changed her shoes — gave her a modest heel instead of none, raised her hemline a little and showed her how to stand and walk."

Dear Abby

Homosexual Children Need Unconditional Love Most By Abigail Van Buren

1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you made the statement in your column that lesbians are born, not made.

Abby, I have a beautiful, talented 30-year-old daughter who is a lesbian, and I have always blamed myself for that. When she was a little girl, she hated dresses, so I let her wear blue jeans and T-shirts just like her brothers wore. I didn't think a thing of it at the time, but now I realize I helped to make a tomboy out of her. I blame myself for not insisting that she dress and act like a girl instead of putting her in boys' clothes and encouraging her to play boys' games with her brothers and their friends.

So, my question is, if I didn't contribute to the way she turned out, how in the world did it happen?

PUZZLED IN HOPE, ARK.

DEAR PUZZLED: Don't blame yourself. Millions of little girls are tomboys and prefer jeans to dresses, yet the vast majority of them do not become lesbians. The causes of lesbianism, like those of male homosexuality, are complex and not fully understood as yet, but there is growing evidence that many lesbians are born with a predisposition in that direction.

The important thing to remember is that sexual preference is not a matter of choice; it is determined at a very early age. Children who grow up to be homosexuals need their parents' love and understanding no less than other children do. In fact, they need it more.

DEAR ABBY: I'm always impressed with items about rewards, so let me tell you about an incident that recently happened.

As a professional organist, I was entertaining the family Easter brunch crowd at a local dining club. After several hours of working, a boy of about 7 came up to me and said, "Please play raindrops, mister."

I responded by playing, "Raindrops Are Falling on My Head." The lad was obviously pleased to hear his favorite song.

Later as he and his family were leaving the club, he ran back and handed me three coins — a dime, a nickel and a penny — still warm from being clutched in his hand. Then he ran from the club.

I still have the coins, framed with the caption, "Please play raindrops, mister." They probably represented the boy's entire fortune, given willingly as a reward for a favor.

FRANK FROM FLORIDA

DEAR FRANK: I predict that lad will go far. He's not afraid to ask for what he wants, and he's prepared to pay for a favor.

DEAR ABBY: To get right to the point, I do not care for dogs in my house. This goes for big dogs, little dogs, and even the hairless kind that are not supposed to smell, but do. They are all dogs to me. We reared our children and had dogs for them, but they were never allowed in the house. They slept in doghouses or out in the garage.

My problem: We have relatives who are dog-crazy. They love their dogs more than some people love their children. These relatives have visited us and brought their dogs along — knowing how I feel about them. They even took them into their beds! Abby, we have just redecorated our rooms, installed new carpet and re-covered our furniture, and I do not want dogs in my house!

These relatives are coming again. How can I let them know that they are welcome but not their dogs, without having them think I am an old crab?

NO DOG LOVER

DEAR NO DOG LOVER: You can tell them before they arrive that they are welcome, but their dogs are not. But don't be surprised if you get the "love me, love my dog" bit. They will think you are an old crab, but you'll have kept the dogs out of your home, and that's the object, isn't it?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have decided not to have children because we both have very interesting and rewarding careers. Unfortunately, we are being pressured from all sides to reconsider our decision or "we'll be sorry."

Finally I sat down and assessed those who were urging us to have kids. They were:

- 1) A clergyman friend whose three children were raised by his wife while he was busy with his career. None of his kids is anything to brag about.
- 2) A middle-aged friend of my mother. Her son is in prison for rape, and her daughter married a bigamist and later died in a fire of unknown origin.
- 3) A woman my own age. She keeps asking me to baby-sit her younger child so she can go out and have a little fun.
- 4) A former school friend who has been up to her elbows in diapers for eight years.

Since my marriage I have been to Europe, completed my college education and have had some of my writing published. My husband and I have just bought a lovely home.

Abby, I know this is a one-sided view, and there must be some positive aspects to having children, but perhaps other couples who are childless by choice might feel better reading this.

NO KIDS IN ONTARIO

DEAR NO KIDS: A summary of positive and negative aspects of raising a family would be endless — and irrelevant. That decision is personal in each case.

 "They promoted her even before she lost weight," Ms. Posta said. "She called when she had lost half the weight and said she was going to come back when she lost it all and go shopping with me for a wardrobe."
 Mrs. Posta had a male client — a financial vice president for a very large corporation who wanted to go into the artistic field.
 "We found he was sending conflicting messages. His hair was too long and he had a moustache. His head had a kind of beat look, and he was wearing pinstripe suits.
 Image switching
 "He was trying to get out of the executive look, but what he was doing was looking a little tipsy. We took off the moustache, had his hair trimmed and got him into an exercise program. We got him out of pinstripe and into suits of a more solid color. If he wanted to go into the more creative area, he still needed a professional image."
 What to wear for success, according to Ms. Posta, depends on the area of work, the part of the country and the goals of the individual. The job dictates the style of dress, Ms. Reed says.
 "People should realize when they come to New York, the dress code is stricter, more sophisticated. Los Angeles is the exact opposite," Ms. Posta said. "It is much more relaxed."
 "Both New York and Los Angeles residents should think about that when they move. When a person comes from Los Angeles to New York, he doesn't want to look like a fish out of water."

 And vice versa.
 "A New Yorker should take a business suit, but also take more sport outfits because a lot of business in Los Angeles is done at the country club and outside the office," she said. "This is true for women in various areas of the country. Some of the areas down south are not as formal as New York."

Tips for women
 Men can wear a suit every day, but women are afraid of wearing the same thing every day, Ms. Reed says.
 "Women feel that dressing businesslike will transfer them out of their class. Women feel they will lose their femininity in a business suit. Men dress in a business suit because it is effective business. Women have to learn the same."
 A woman, she says, "can compete in a man's world, but she doesn't have to dress like a man. The jacket can be a Chanel style with no buttons, and the tie should be left at home."
 "Clothes say 'I'm here for business,'" says Ms. Reed. "Women: do your clothes say 'Am I dressing for advances or advancement?' That dress with the side split up to the thigh says 'I'm not here for business' and should be left at home."

"Be consistent. If you break the consistency, you're defeating the purpose of a dress code. The length of a skirt should be consistent — not a peasant length one day and above the knee another."
 She says a woman's wardrobe should include two to three skirts, neutral in color and solid; several blouses in solid colors, maybe one print; a couple of jackets.
 "You should plan your purchases so that everything will go with everything and you can trade off. You'll be spending less money, will have a variety of clothes and a consistent appearance."
 She says you don't necessarily have to shop at the same place, but should have a buying plan.
 "Don't buy at random, but buy consistent to protect your consistency image. Look for appearance, good construction, good fabric and good fit."

 Ms. Posta says women don't necessarily have to dress in drab clothes, but they shouldn't wear really bizarre colors — like a hot pink dress — to work.
 "A woman in clothes that are too frilly will be looked at more as a sex symbol than as a business woman. Women have this conflicting problem as to how they want to be seen. They still want to be attractive to men, but if that is their main goal in business, then they've got a problem."
 "Women should have an easy-to-care-for hair style," Ms. Posta said. "We're tending to get towards that anyway. Women sometimes send conflicting messages with an outlandish hairstyle and makeup but conservative suit. They've got to get it all together. Women should definitely wear makeup, but not overdo it."

Things Never The Same

At the heart of an aura of local government distrust over state allocation of federal bloc-grants is a difference of perception as to the matter of priorities.

Each county and municipality has a range of different interests and needs (it would be near impossible to find any two with identical priorities and degree of need.) All of us share a sense of parochialism.

On the other hand, administrative departments and state functionaries are required to assume a broader viewpoint; but the rivalry for later allotments has always existed and will quite probably intensify...representing another "parochial" approach, making even more difficult the task of apportioning reduced available federal sums by the legislatures and by the offices of governors.

The real pressure of decision-making rests in the legislative and administrative branches of state government; and no matter how fair and far-sighted they try to be, they cannot please everybody...and the cries of anguish and shouts of "foul" are bound to be loud and clear.

Nobody will be happy. Few will believe there is not a better way, and hurt feelings will abound. Those bruises are certain to extend from one fiscal year to the next, and then Whammo!, old bruises will be banged again.

The picture of what-is-to-be should evoke sympathies and understanding of the problem confronting those who are left with unsought responsibility.

Nobody is going to get all they want. Nobody is going to get all they "need". Nobody is going to get all the funding they would like to see. That is certain.

Opinion-shapers and the public should resign themselves to that fact now, and devote their time and energies on how best to make-do with what is available during the period of reshaping an entire nation's economy.

If all goes as hoped, in a few years the bloc-grant shares to states will grow with a growing economy. Even so, things will never be the same.

Monitoring of Vehicle Use

The Pitt County Board Of Education has come up with new and tighter policies regarding the use of its automotive equipment.

Except for those who have special duties, use of the cars overnight will be prohibited in the future.

The action is expected to lead to the development of a motor pool and, hopefully, the number of cars can be reduced.

The move to tighter controls over car use is a sound one. Obviously there is need to provide transportation to school employees in carrying out their duties. The cost of autos is high, however, and careful control over their use is essential to efficient government.

The rules have been set out by the county commissioners. Now it is up to supervisors to see that they are adhered to.

Protection Short

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Women are especially vulnerable to two terrible crimes: rape and wifebeating.

But widespread public apathy toward the victims of those two crimes makes the aftermath even more horrible than the event itself in all too many cases.

There are, in North Carolina, even high-ranking law enforcement officers, judges, and a large segment of society which say the raped women asked for it; that rape can't happen uninvited. And wifebeaters, too, suffer misunderstandings which foster the myth that she only got what she deserved, and if she would do better she wouldn't get beaten.

These public assistants, says M.C. Teague, chief of the violent crimes section of the State Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, make it particularly difficult to combat rape and spouse abuse.

"Women simply are not adequately protected. Too many people think the women are asking for this treatment...that a beaten woman deserves it or that a raped woman asked for it.

Don't Believe
"Jurors have to convict rapists and wifebeaters, but if they, and even highly placed court and law enforcement people are skeptical, then you can see the result," Teague says.

One obvious result is that wifebeating as a crime is not even designated in the statistics. It is lumped in with assaults. And victims are especially reluctant to let friends and neighbors know what they are suffering and turning to the law enforcement community for help is usually a last resort. Besides, many women figure they can change their man, help him, or end the beatings by "doing right."

That, says Teague, is a major mistake. The fact is that wifebeating is one of the few crimes which gets worse as the practitioner gets older and continues to get away with it. And studies show that in all too many cases it is nothing the women did to trigger the violence. It is built into the man, goes click, and the beating begins.

Another result is that far fewer rapes are reported than are actually committed. Still, more than 1,300 were reported in North Carolina last year. Most involved women between 16 and 30 and were about equally split between black and white citizens; that despite the fact that blacks make up only about 25 percent of the state's population. Alarmingly, 48 rapes were reported by women over age 61.

Rapists get away with the crime because women are reluctant to report the incident; the public is unwilling to believe it; and jurors have trouble convicting the man. One statistic helps to explain why some have trouble believing the victim: nearly half the rapists were known to the victim prior to the event — a neighbor, friend, acquaintance, or relative.

Known

But that doesn't mean it didn't happen, says Teague. Southern women are raised to "be cordial" and this simple act of speaking, nodding, offering assistance to someone whose car is broken down can provide the single most important ingredient to a rapist — the opportunity.

"The key thing is, he must get her alone. We could reduce rapes tremendously if women would take the available steps to make sure she cannot be caught alone," Teague says.

Should a lady resist? Teague says there are two general types of rapists — the macho man who goes for sex and thinks no woman can turn him down. He can be persuasive and cool, but is a disturbed person and a genuine rapist. But he can be resisted successfully.

WHOSE FAULT?

Two men were discussing juvenile delinquency. A gang of teen-age boys had just been arrested after a series of house-breaking escapades. One man cited the movies, television and comic books as the cause of such behavior. "Everywhere you turn, it's the same — crime stories," he said. "Even if the crook isn't actually the hero, he's still made such a romantic figure that all the boys envy him."

If this man had heard more about the case histories of the boys who had been

When Flies Foul Up

You can't go off for a few days on vacation without someone fouling up. Take the Mediterranean fruit fly. I specifically left orders that only STERILE flies were to be released in fruit-bearing areas of California.

It was a very simple operation and a child could have done it. I have a copy of my telephone conversation with the people I dealt with.

"Is this the Mediterranean Fruit Fly Company?" I said.

"Si."

"I need 14 million sterile fruit flies to release over the San Jose area this month. Do you have them?"

"Si."

"Now I want to make sure these are the yellow iridescent kind with a wing span of less than a half-inch, and I want only males. You got that?"

"Si."

"What I plan to do is release the males at mating time, have them search out the females and fire blanks. This way we'll wipe out the fruit fly without using harmful insecticides. You get what I'm driving at?"

"Si."

"How do I know that all the flies will be sterile?"

"My brother Carlos inspects each one before it leaves the factory."

"Does Carlos know anything about quality control?"

"Si, we have never ever sold a male fruit fly that could help a female lay a fertile egg. If Carlos even suspects a male is not sterile he'll smash it with a fly swatter and ask questions later."

"I have only Carlos' word for this?"

"With each sterile fly we give you a warranty. If the fly turns out not to be sterile we give you your money back, and you get a free fly on us."

"That's fair," I admitted.

"But it's hard to believe that your brother Carlos would be able to personally inspect 14 million fruit flies."

"He doesn't do it alone. My cousin Luis helps him."

"That explains it," I said. "Just out of curiosity, how do you sterilize a fruit fly?"

"You have to be very careful."

"I know that. But it seems to me, when you're dealing in these numbers, there could easily be a slip-up and a non-sterile male could sneak through. How do you prevent that?"

"My cousin Eduardo stands at the door with a can of 'Raid.'"

"You seem to run a very safe operation. When can I have delivery on the fruit flies?"

ART BUCHWALD

"I'll ask my brother Carlos."

The man came back in a minute. "Will Tuesday do?"

"That seems reasonable. I'm going off on vacation, and I would like all the sterile fruit flies to do their work while I'm gone."

"Si."

Obviously something went wrong, because when I returned I got the word that the Med fly had infested the entire fruit-growing heart of California. I immediately called the Mediterranean Fruit Fly Company.

"All right," I said angrily. "What happened?"

"I do not know, senior. My brother Carlos told me when the 14 million flies left here for California they were all sterile."

"A likely story. What do I do now?"

"I'll let you speak to my Cousin Tomas."

"What for?"

"He's in charge of our company's helicopter spraying division."

To the editor:

While the article in your August 12, 1981 edition concerning the Deferred Prosecution Agreement between the state and my husband Hal A. Byrum, was correct in most respects, I feel that it left out some important information.

On the day of the trial, my husband was offered a chance to enter a plea of "no contest" to a misdemeanor and receive a probationary sentence with the same provisions in the Deferred Prosecution Agreement. He refused this offer. Later in the trial, after the jury had been selected, my husband again turned down this offer and he and his attorney were sitting in the courtroom ready for the trial to begin when the state came and offered Deferred Prosecution upon the same conditions that we had proposed some three months earlier.

These conditions were the ones his attorney, Charles Vincent, offered to Officer Hugh Benson and the District Attorney's Office prior to any indictments. The word "probation" is used because the law requires that a probation officer confirm that the conditions of the agreement are met before the charges are dismissed. To imply guilt for accepting an agreement offered by the state guaranteeing a not guilty result upon compliance is wrong.

are now paying 17 percent for minimum investments of $500, they are not federally insured and interest rates vary from day to day.

There is no dispute, however, that the bulk of the certificates will be sold to upper-income groups.

Before the certificates would begin to pay off, a single taxpayer would need a taxable income — after deductions — of more than $15,000 in 1981 and $18,000 in 1982. A married couple would need a taxable income of at least $25,000 in 1981 and $30,000 in 1982. In terms of gross income, single people making more than $25,000 and couples earning above $40,000 are the likely buyers.

To help offset the cost of this new tax break — an estimated $3.3 billion in lost revenues to the Treasury — Congress is temporarily eliminating a tax break for regular savings. That has angered a number of congressmen who say small savers are being taxed to finance a subsidy for the affluent.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., recently assailed the certificates as "one of the most insidious forms of transferring wealth" from lower-income to upper-income savers.

According to some congressional estimates, affluent savers will get a $900 million tax break and the banking and thrift industries will receive a $2.5 billion break from the new law.

Under current law, taxpayers could deduct interest and dividend income of up to $200 on an individual return and $400 on a joint return for both 1981 and 1982. The new law ends that provision after 1981, replacing it with a deduction solely for dividend income of up to $100 for individuals and $200 for couples.

Starting in 1985, however, the new law will reinstate interest deductions on all types of savings accounts, up to a limit of $450 on an individual return and $900 on a joint return.

The tax-free certificates pay off for people above the 30 percent "marginal" tax bracket — which refers to the rate at which a person's last dollar of income is taxed. The 30 percent figure represents the difference between the interest on a Treasury bill and the interest on a tax-free certificate, which is set at 70 percent of the T-bill rate.

Consider this example: A person in the 40 percent tax bracket could buy a regular 52-week Treasury bill yielding 14 percent interest, but after taxes the net yield is only 8.4 percent. If the person purchased a tax-free certificate, the net yield would be 9.8 percent.

A person in the 50 percent bracket investing in a money market fund that yields 17

Small Saving Provides Pension

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Under the new tax law, a 35-year-old who saves $2,000 a year for 30 years could retire with a life pension of $22,203 a year.

That's after-tax income. And it would be over and above whatever might be provided by Social Security and a company or union pension plan.

It is net income, and it shows the remarkable impact that one aspect of the tax plan, that for Employee Retirement Savings Deductions, may have on raising pensions and relieving pressure on Social Security.

It is designed to raise capital for the economy, too. By one estimate, it will add nearly $15 billion a year of new capital, helping industry to seek more efficient (less inflationary) production.

Under the Employee Retirement Savings Deduction part of the new tax plan, a person can deduct from taxes $2,000 a year for retirement, even if he or she is a member of a qualified tax-deferred pension plan.

Several assumptions are made by actuaries of the American Council of Life Insurance in arriving at the $22,203-a-year income for the future retiree who began saving at age 35.

First, the money is placed in a fully qualified individual retirement account that averages 8 percent a year, with interest left to accrue. Your plan can be any approved plan, the more popular of which seem to be savings accounts, mutual funds, insurance annuities and the like.

The tax rate in this estimate is assumed to be 30 percent before retirement, and 20 percent after. The $22,203-a-year income would come from a lifetime annuity purchased from a life insurance company.

That figure is about the best you might hope for. For young people, it is also realistic. And it remains realistic through higher brackets. At a tax bracket of 35 percent (25 after retirement) income amounts to $20,816, and at 40 percent (30 after retirement) to $19,428 a year.

(Remember, you accumulate your pension fund without paying current taxes. But when you begin drawing on your fund in retirement, you do pay taxes.)

How much of that income results from the tax deferral feature of the new tax plan? Easy enough to figure, say the actuaries.

If the same amount each year were to be saved in a non-qualified account that averaged 8 percent a year, and then used to purchase an annuity at age 65, the yield for a person in the pre-retirement 30 percent bracket would be nearly halved to $11,341. At the higher brackets, the yield would be $9,568 and $8,025, respectively.

Because of the greater amounts invested, and because of the magic of untaxed compound interest over longer periods of time, the 35-year-old would receive much more than the person who begins at ages 45 or 55.

It really doesn't matter a great deal where you set aside the savings, so long as the interest rate is good and you're certain you are meeting terms of the new tax package. You cannot withdraw funds without being penalized. You must leave them there until age 59½, at least.

The new concept in savings-retirement begins this October, but you may be sure that before then you'll hear from stock brokers, insurance companies, banks and the like about their fully qualified plans. You can save through any of them, or even devise and qualify your own plan with the help of a banker, lawyer or account-tant.

There's a very good chance also that you might be hearing from your employer, especially if he doesn't now have a pension plan. Even if an employer cannot afford a plan, he can provide the framework, the administration and the payroll deduction machinery.

And if an employer has a regular pension program, he can set up a supplementary program and offer workers the chance to invest and deduct from taxes up to $2,000 a year for retirement.

With advantages of that sort — to individuals, employers, insurers, bankers, brokers and others — enormous opportunities exist. Be ready for an avalanche of proposals from those who'd like to help you save.

The life insurers conducted a survey when it appeared the new tax plan would permit $1,500 to be squirreled away. At the time, they estimated it would result in about $11 billion of additional individual savings.

Now that the tax-free deduction has been raised to $2,000 they figure the additional savings, which they hope you will consider accumulating with them, will probably come close to $15 billion a year.

Doctors To Keep Salary While Serving As Clerks

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal agency here plans to pay three filling clerks $50,000 a year this fall — making them perhaps the best-paid paper shufflers in the nation.

But the clerks-to-be aren't pleased. They are doctors at the Railroad Retirement Board and they say they've been railroaded into the clerical jobs.

"I think it stinks," said Dr. Paul Kelley, who for seven years has examined patients and written evaluations for the board.

"It's a joke to me," said Dr. Hans Jalakas, a veteran of 42 years in the medical profession and 10 years at the retirement board. He doesn't think filling papers is the most impressive way to wind up his career.

"I just took it (the clerical job) to dramatize the stupidity of it," Jalakas said.

The board, which handles retirement, unemployment and disability programs for the nation's railroad workers, eliminated the medical jobs of Jalakas, Kelley and Dr. Franklin Streiffeld because of President Reagan's cuts in federal spending, said board aide John Thoresdale. The personnel cuts are effective Aug. 24.

However, the law requires that the three civil service employees be offered another job for which they are qualified, Thoresdale said.

"I think everyone agrees it was somewhat demeaning for them to be offered a job like that," he added. "But that is the only other job they were qualified for."

"If we made them computer operators, or claims processors, they wouldn't do it well," said William Poulos, spokesman for the board.

Exiles Headed To Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — For the third time this week, boats bearing Cuban exiles who plan a "peaceful invasion" of Cuba have set out for Guantanamo Bay, the U.S. Coast Guard said today.

A 70-foot shrimp, Franklin and Ian, and two other boats, La Esperanza and The Gold Star, headed out of Miami late Thursday after they were cleared by the Coast Guard, Petty Officer Tom Dignan said.

Dignan said the boats were carrying about 90 Cuban members of an anti-Castro group called United Cubans.

Their first "invasion" was aborted Tuesday when the Coast Guard turned back La Esperanza and The Gold Star because they were overloaded, Coast Guard spokesman Mike Ayres said. Some of the 73 exiles aboard wore camouflage fatigues.

The Gold Star had embarked again on Thursday, but for some reason returned to Miami Thursday night, then sailed off yet again with the Franklin and Ian and Esperanza for a third time, Dignan said.

As the three vessels moved out Thursday, the group told Coast Guard officers again that they would land at Guantanamo and "free Cuba," Dignan said.

Wilfredo Navarro, 38, a Miami businessman and leader of the group, claimed the operation was financed by wealthy people in Switzerland who he declined to identify. Among Navarro's advisors is Watergate burglar Frank Sturgis.

The Coast Guard said the voyage to Cuba would take at least 72 hours. Navarro says the boats out of Miami will converge at sea with a multi-national flotilla, then invade the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay.

Nerve Gas To Be Sent Via Land

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A convoy of 14 Army tractor-trailers will cross a desolate portion of the western Utah desert and the Onaqui Mountains within a week, bearing a cargo of Weyeye nerve gas bombs capable of causing death within minutes.

The slow-moving convoy will be on the last leg in the first phase of the transfer of 888 Weyeye bombs from the Rocky Mountain arsenal in Denver to igloo-like bunkers at Tooele Army Depot, 35 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

Also to be transferred are three one-ton containers of the nerve agent GB. The containers were filled when a dozen bombs of the original 900 were drained after miniscule leaks were detected.

There will be three such convoys over the next three weeks, the Army says.

The first convoy is not expected to get under way until a fifth planeload of 64 Weyeye bombs arrives at Michael Army Airfield, 65 miles southwest of here, from Stapleton International Airport in Denver.

The Army is withholding the timing of the Air Force C-141 Starlifter flights and of the convoy for security and safety reasons.

Four planeloads of the bombs, each of which contains 346 pounds of nerve agent GB, have arrived at Dugway Proving Ground, two Wednesday and two Thursday.

percent, would net 8.5 percent after taxes. So the tax-free certificate would be a better investment.

But for a person in the 25 percent tax bracket investing in the same money market fund would net 12.75 percent interest after taxes, and thus would not find the certificate as appealing an investment.

It seems almost no one in Congress or the Reagan administration is particularly fond of the savings certificate provision.

It was approved ostensibly to encourage Americans to save more and to aid the troubled savings and loan industry, but congressional and administration tax experts doubt either objective will be achieved. Instead, they say the certificates will provide a tax break for the affluent without doing much good for either savings banks or the general economy.

Administration officials have branded tax-free certificates as bad tax policy and members of Congress have expressed serious reservations about the legislation.

Yet the administration would not oppose the provision, which sailed effortlessly through Congress as part of the president's giant tax-cut bill. The reason: the ailing thrift industry badly wanted it and Congress badly wanted to help the thrifts.

During their extensive lobbying campaign, the thrifts argued that their so-called "all-savers" proposal would reverse the nation's eroding savings rate and help lure badly needed home mortgage funds back into savings institutions, which are hurting because of high interest rates.

The infusion of new funds for mortgage lending that the certificates will provide, the thrifts argued, will bring down interest rates, and that will benefit the public at large as well as the S&Ls.

But most other economists and tax experts contend the certificates will simply attract funds from other sources rather than increase overall savings.

Alamance Senator Challenges State's Congressional Alignment

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Objections to a map that redraws North Carolina's 11 congressional districts by splitting Moore County between two districts have been renewed in a letter from state Sen. Cary Allred, R-Alamance, to the U.S. Justice Department.

Allred, in the letter dated Aug. 5, writes that the plan adopted by the 1981 General Assembly "fails to comply with several rulings of the Supreme Court of the United States and is therefore unconstitutional."

At the close of the two-page letter, Allred asks the department to reject the plan. The letter was addressed to Theresa Lynn of the department's civil rights division. Ms. Lynn could not be reached for comment today.

Allred cites several legal cases in the letter, arguing that the redistricting plan should be rejected because the districts vary too greatly in population, the districts are too spread out geographically and the plan adversely affects black and Republican voters.

The Legislature voted in July to change many counties' congressional districts to reflect shifts in population. The plan, which would affect the 1982 congressional race, splits Moore County between the 8th and 9th districts. The plan is the first in North Carolina to split a county between districts.

The plan also moves Alamance from the 6th District with Guilford and Rockingham counties to the 2nd District with 11 other counties — Chatham, Caswell, Person, Granville, Vance, Franklin, Warren, Halifax, Nash, Wilson and Edgecombe.

The 6th District also loses Rockingham County but gains Davidson, Randolph and the northern half of Moore County.

In the letter, Allred argued that Alamance County was placed in a district with counties that have economic interests and industries unlike those of Alamance.

He also noted that by putting Alamance and Chatham counties in the 2nd District while removing Durham County from the area, "the black voters of Durham County cannot combine their voting strength with other 2nd District counties having heavy black voter registration to have a greater influence on elections for Congress."

A number of groups — including Republicans and Democrats in Moore County, Republicans in Alamance and Rockingham counties and Democrats in Guilford County — say they have considered blocking the plan through the courts.

But Moore County Democrats voted not to contest the plan and the organized challenge appeared to fall apart.

Rep. James Craven, R-Moore, said today that he will meet this weekend with James Van Camp, the leader of the county Democrats, to discuss the matter. But he acknowledged that unless that meeting produces a challenge, the redistricting matter "is a dead issue."

"I feel we need to try to do something," Craven said. "The Republicans were waiting and hoping the Democrats would join in with us."

PCC To Share Colleges' Priority Training Funds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's community colleges will get nearly $2 million for high-priority training programs, skills training centers and apprenticeship programs, the state Board of Community Colleges said Thursday.

Twenty-two colleges received more than $750,000 from the board to set up 23 high-priority programs. Each program involves almost $25,000 for operations and more than $8,000 for equipment in 1981-82.

The programs and the schools at which they will be established are:

- Electronics engineering technology at Caldwell Community College and Technical Institute, Davidson County Community College, James Sprunt Technical College, Mitchell Community College, Piedmont Technical College and Wilkes Community College.
- Machinist programs at Martin Community College and Stanly Technical College.

- Industrial maintenance technology at Guilford Technical Institute, Lenoir Community College, McDowell Technical College and Stanly Technical College.
- Industrial maintenance electromechanical training at Anson Technical College, College of the Albemarle, Halifax Community College, Pitt Community College, Rowan Technical College, Western Piedmont Community College and Wake Technical College.

- Electronic Data Processing at Beaufort County Community College, Roanoke-Chowan Technical College and Southeastern Community College.

The community colleges board also allocated funds to eight institutions for developing skills training programs to respond to the particular needs of that area's industries.

Each school will receive a maximum of about $113,000 for the coming biennium. They were awarded the funds because of the number of industries in their area and the need for skills training.

The institutions involved are Catawba Valley Technical College, Guilford Technical Institute, Lenoir Community College, Piedmont Technical College, Pitt Community College, Rowan Technical College, Wake Technical College and Wilkes Community College.

A total of $56,160 was divided among seven schools for instructional programs related to existing apprenticeship programs. The schools are Catawba Valley Technical College, Coastal Carolina Community College, Craven Community College, Fayetteville Technical Institute, Guilford Technical Institute, Stanly Technical College and Wake Technical College.

Vehicle Reason Sought For Boarders' Journey

DETROIT (AP) — The months-long sales slide by U.S. carmakers was halted in the latest sales period but it apparently took customer rebates and other incentives to do it.

The manufacturers reported Thursday that sales in the first 10 days of August were 29 percent above the same period a year ago. That came to 153,372 cars compared with 1980's poor showing of 119,065.

"Obviously the sales figures are good and the percentage increases are gratifying, even accounting for last year being a poor base," said Arvid Jouppe, a Detroit-based analyst. "The consumer has proved he will buy — there's a need for cars."

Authorities are seeking the operator of a Florida boarding home and checking the bank accounts of five confused elderly women who disappeared from the home and turned up here.

And in Florida, a 66-year-old man who had disappeared from the same home was discovered at a house in Dade County. A woman living at the house said the boarding-home operator who was being sought had placed the man there.

The women told police they arrived in Detroit "for a vacation" Aug. 2 and had lived in a basement apartment somewhere in the city since then, said Gerald Hale, Detroit police chief of detectives.

They came to police attention after they were dropped off by at least two people at Detroit Receiving Hospital early Thursday morning. The five thought they were at an airport and asked for tickets to return to Florida, nurses said.

The elderly women were placed in a Salvation Army mission here, police said. Two of the five have been missing since last week; the rest disappeared Tuesday.

Florida authorities said suspicions were aroused several days ago when investigators spotted several unexplained withdrawals from a bank account of one of the women.

Dade County, Fla., authorities were seeking Cora Miller Galvin, the operator of the Tangela Home in Miami.

Dade County Assistant State Attorney Thomas Petersen said he is considering whether to file false imprisonment charges in the case, although police in Detroit said the women did not report being locked up.

"The indication is they didn't leave, but there is no indication they couldn't have left if they had wanted to," Hale said.

But he added that kidnapping charges may be filed if authorities determine the women were brought to Detroit against their will.

In addition, police were checking the women's bank accounts for unusually large withdrawals.

"Fraud is what's going on," Lt. James Morrison of the Detroit police department said. "The ladies know what money was taken from them." He did not elaborate.

The Miami Herald reported today that 66-year-old Harold Osborn was found Thursday evening at the Dade County house of Molly Harvey, who the newspaper said is related to Mrs. Galvin. A neighbor said Mrs.

Harvey was vacationing in Detroit, the Herald reported.

Lucille Travis, 83, another resident of the house, said Mrs. Galvin had brought Osborn there. She and Osborn were taken away from the house by state officials. The Herald reported that Osborn was in good spirits when he was found.

The Detroit Free Press reported today that one of the women, Katie Klaassen, 91, opened a bank account at a suburban Detroit bank Aug. 7 to transfer money from her Florida bank. Ms. Klaassen was accompanied by a woman identified as Lucille Collins.

Mail Patrons Getting Checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service is returning thousands of uncashed checks to customers of an Atlanta-based mail-order company accused of selling 15 health products that don't work.

Athena Products Ltd. claimed in the ads that its products would "dissolve ugly, lumpy fat deposits," "slow down the aging process forever," "raise intelligence and memory" and "make your sex life become everything you ever hoped for."

Judicial Officer James A. Cohen of the Postal Service ordered 4,500 letters containing checks returned to Athena's customers when the firm did not contest a finding by an administrative law judge that it violated the law by using the mail to misrepresent a product.

He also ordered Athena, which sold health products from 14 different mailing addresses, to stop the practice.

Richard Blumberg, spokesman for the company, could not be reached for comment.

Daniel Lewis, the Postal Service attorney in the case, said the 4,500 letters containing checks from consumers around the country had been impounded pending resolution of the case.

At a hearing, the Postal Service produced a pharmacologist, a nutritionist and a physician who testified that the Athena products could not perform as claimed in the ads.

They said the 15 products offer unnecessary, and often excessive, supplementation of vitamins and metals.

In seeking the order, Postal Service attorneys said Athena advertising "artfully blends scientific fact with exaggerated claims. ... Twisted medical logic consistently appears in the promotion of products sold."

The ads were carried in Athena's own publications, Soma Magazine and Athena Health and Beauty News.

Here are the Athena products that no longer can be sold by mail: RNA, RX for Aging, Euzinc-D, Cellulite PM, Cellulite TRE, Ex-Sel, Food for Thought, Meta E, Natural Calm, Athena Nutrition for Women, Chromill GTF, Power Tabs, Athena Stay Young Program, Youth Factor and In-Trim or Control.

Ozone Destruction

NEW YORK (AP) — Measurements taken by the space agency from weather satellites confirm that fluorocarbons, once widely used as propellants in aerosol sprays, deplete the Earth's ozone shield.

"This is the first evidence that a change appears to be taking place," Donald Heath, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration researcher, said Thursday.

"It represents a partial validation of the theory that fluorocarbons will destroy ozone," he said.

Scientists have predicted for years that the substance, also used in refrigerators and air conditioners, would have that effect, but measurements had not been available, NASA said.

Heath, analyzing data from two satellites, said there has been about a 4 percent decrease in ozone at an altitude of about 24 miles.

"It's small, but we feel it's significant," he said.

Heath has not published his results in a scientific journal so they have not undergone scientific review.

The ozone layer, centered at an altitude of 15 miles, absorbs the sun's harmful ultraviolet radiation and keeps it from reaching Earth. Loss of ozone allows more ultraviolet radiation through and will cause an increase in skin cancer, researchers say.

It also can change temperatures in the atmosphere, altering wind patterns, according to Shelby Tilford.

BACKUP ... Cars and trucks were backed up for several miles Thursday on Interstate 580 near Livermore, Calif., as state authorities set up a new checkpoint for fruit flies. The state was trying to keep the Medfly from invading the San Joaquin Valley agricultural area. (AP Laserphoto)

Medfly Spraying Spreads

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — Helicopters have started spraying pesticide over this gateway to California's farming heartland in an effort to stop the eastward creep of a Mediterranean fruit fly "explosion."

The bombardment of malathion over the city of 48,500 began at dusk Thursday, five days after discovery of a fertile medfly here and hours after identification of an egg-laden fly to the south.

The medfly discovered Thursday was bearing 78 eggs and was trapped near Milpitas, less than a mile outside the spray zone. The area will be included in a new 9-square-mile area where spraying will begin Saturday morning. The spraying zone now covers 535 square miles.

In addition, 9 square miles around Boulder Creek in the county will be sprayed Monday.

Eighty-one square miles of north Santa Cruz County were placed under state quarantine following a medfly find there, bringing the total area under state and federal quarantine to 2,163 square miles.

In Florida, meanwhile, agriculture department officials said Thursday they would resume aerial spraying next week over the same 17-square-mile area around Tampa doused with malathion Wednesday. Ground spraying resumes today in a six-block area around a tree in southeastern Tampa where Florida's fourth medfly was found.

State agriculture spokesman Frank King said documents were distributed in the Florida quarantine zone, which covers 48 square miles of east Tampa, to all 40 produce firms affected by orders that no medfly-host crops leave the area without being checked.

"This fruit fly explosion ...

is totally unprecedented, totally unlike anything experienced anywhere else in the world," California medfly project chief Jerry Scribner said of the bug's emergence in June and subsequent finds a year after the initial outbreak. "Everybody thought we had won."

Livermore is only 14 miles from the San Joaquin Valley, part of the bountiful, 600-mile-long strip that supplies over half the nation's fruits and vegetables.

The region is rich in host crops, which comprise more than a third of the state's $14 billion farming business.

Election Plan Contested

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department says two annexations by New Bern may have diluted black voting strength, but city officials continue to prepare for municipal elections in October.

John Wilson, a spokesman for the department in Washington, said Thursday that his agency is reviewing the city's contention that the annexations do not dilute black voting strength.

If the annexations are not approved by the Justice Department, residents of the annexed areas will not be able to vote in city elections, Wilson said. A decision is expected in about two weeks, he said.

The department has the right to review annexation because Craven County is covered by the Voting Rights Act of 1965, which protects minority voting rights.

The department's Civil Rights Division notified the city last September that it objected to the annexation of about 670 people in November 1979 and of a 72-unit apartment complex with about 180 residents in February 1980. The department said the annexations tended to dilute black voting strength because most of those added to the city are white.

Department officials contend that the percentage of black voters in New Bern has dropped about 3 percent in the last 10 years, but the city maintains it has increased about 5 percent.

Local officials had expressed concern that the Justice Department objections would block the election entirely. But they are proceeding with plans for the Oct. 6 election, which will select a mayor and five members of the board of aldermen. Filing for the offices opens today.

City attorney A.D. Ward said tentative plans indicate residents in the disputed areas might be excluded from voting.

New Bern has about 7,000 registered voters, but the number living in the disputed areas is not available. City officials estimated that the annexations added about 850 people, 80 of whom are members of racial minorities.

Reporter Killed

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — An American newswoman attending a United Nations conference here died this morning after being shot in the head during a holdup, a Nairobi Hospital official said.

U.S. Embassy sources said Every Driscoll, a reporter for the U.S. International Communications Agency based in Washington, was shot Thursday night after she refused the orders of four holdup men to get out of a car.

The 41-year-old Texas native died in the intensive care unit of the hospital, said the nursing supervisor, who asked that her name not be used.

Hugh Muir, the Voice Of America correspondent in Nairobi who was driving the car, obeyed the robbers' orders and was not hurt, the sources said.

The robbers escaped in Muir's car, leaving behind a stolen car whose owner and a companion were found locked in the trunk, sources said.

Ms. Driscoll was in Nairobi to attend the U.N. conference on new and renewable sources of energy.

The U.S. International Communications Agency is a federal agency responsible for information and cultural activities of the U.S. government overseas, including the Voice Of America.

The U.S. Embassy sources said American diplomats were cooperating with Kenyan police in their investigation of the shooting.

Life As It's Lived

Childhood Dreams Stray

By GAIL MICHAELS
As a little girl I dreamed of marrying Prince Charles. Although I eventually settled for the intranquil domesticity of life with Philip and Charles chose someone else, I still looked forward to his wedding with a fascination born of cherished childhood fantasies.

And I thought that Meg, a Brothers Grimm aficionado if there ever was one, would be equally interested. After all, as the Archbishop of Canterbury pointed out, "This is the stuff of which fairy tales are made."

Well, not quite, not according to Meg anyway. Listening to her comments on the ceremony, I soon realized that, unlike the Archbishop and me, she brought to the festivities a set of romantic expectations unsullied as of yet by the extenuations of twentieth century fashion.

Her first unfavorable reaction was to Elizabeth. "That is not a queen," she said flatly. "A queen does not wear a bathrobe to her son's wedding."

"That's not a bathrobe. That's a dress."

Meg snorted. "Some dress. And that certainly isn't a crown on her head."

"No it's a hat."

"I know it's a hat," she sniffed. "Nana has one just like it that she wears to the beach."

Meg was equally critical of the Queen Mother's choice of costume. "Oh no! Look!" She cried, aghast. "Look at her hat! Did she kill some poor little bird to get those feathers?"

She did register her satisfaction with the bridesmaids. "They're beautiful! Now they're all princesses, right?"

"No, but there's a princess," I said as the camera zoomed in on Princess Anne. Meg groaned. "Oh brother."

Even Lady Diana disappointed her. Meg loved the Glass Coach, the dress, and the long train. But she was less certain about the veil. "Why is that thing over her face?"

"It's a tradition. People used to think that it was bad luck for the groom to see the bride before the marriage."

Meg brightened. "Will she turn into a frog if he does?"

She did not care for my answer, but the major disappointment came when Diana's veil was lifted. Meg was anguished. "Mommy, the princess has short hair!"

"Of course, she does."

She shook her head sadly. "You didn't tell me that. This spoils everything."

She regained her enthusiasm only once, as the procession neared the gates of Buckingham Palace. "Oh goodie! The palace has a moat!"

"There's no moat around the palace."

"Yes there is. See? And she pointed to the Victoria Monument. But when she learned that the monument was not the palace and that her moat didn't have one single crocodile, she became totally subdued."

She watched in silence until Prince Charles and Princess Diana went into the palace. Then she heaved a sigh.

"I'm sorry you didn't enjoy it," I said.

"It just made me sad, that's all. Princesses just aren't what they used to be."

Three Cars In Collision

Cars driven by Bobbie Stanfield of 2316 Deal Pl., Annie Spain Nunn of 1302 Cedar Ln., and Linda Jane Archer of 2321 College View Apts., were involved in a 3:20 p.m. collision yesterday on Tenth Street at the Wright Road intersection.

Police Department investigators, who charged Ms. Stanfield with driving under the influence, estimated damage from the collision at $500 to the Stanfield car, $1,500 to the Nunn vehicle and $1,000 to the Archer auto. Officers reported both Ms. Stanfield and Ms. Nunn were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries they received in the mishap.

Justice Department Will Try To Recover Abscam Bribes

NEW YORK (AP) — With four congressmen and two other Abscam defendants fined and sentenced to jail terms, the Justice Department now plans to retrieve $200,000 in bribes paid by undercover agents, according to published reports.

Basing its story on unidentified federal sources, the New York Daily News reported today that the government intends to file civil suits to recover the money.

U.S. District Court George Pratt on Thursday sentenced former Reps. John Murphy, D-N.Y., Michael Myers, D-Pa., and Raymond Lederer, D-Pa., to three-year prison terms and fined them $20,000 each on convictions stemming from the Abscam investigation.

Another former congressman, Democrat Frank Thompson Jr. of New Jersey, was given the maximum 15-year sentence on his bribery conviction, a technicality to enable the judge to order a medical study to determine whether prison would endanger his life.

Pratt freed the six on their own recognizance, pending appeal.

Former Camden, N.J.,

Mayor Angelo Errichetti drew the stiffest sentence, a six-year term for his bribery conviction and an overall $40,000 fine. He immediately lost his seat as a New Jersey state senator when sentenced. He also was sentenced to concurrent five-year terms for conspiracy and interstate travel in the aid of racketeering.

Philadelphia City Councilman Louis Johanson was given concurrent three-year terms for convictions on charges of conspiracy, bribery and the interstate travel count. He also was fined $20,000.

Errichetti's lawyer, Raymond Brown, called the sentences "mass condemnation proceedings" and described his client as "a creature of abject shame."

When lawyer John Duffy called Johanson "a thoroughly decent human being" and "a good family man" in the Brooklyn courtroom, his client began to cry.

Federal prosecutor Thomas Puccio asked for heavy prison terms and fines. He said the defendants had displayed an "utter contempt for the law."

In the Abscam investigation, undercover FBI agents posed as an Arab sheik and his representatives, offering bribes in return for introduction of immigration bills that would guarantee the sheik residency in the United States if he needed it.

Pratt made all of the multiple sentences concurrent.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

MONEY IN A FISH'S MOUTH!

ARAMAIC, THE LANGUAGE WHICH JESUS SPOKE, IS STILL USED IN PARTS OF SYRIA TODAY IN ITS ORIGINAL FORM WITH THE SAME IDIOMATIC PHRASES AND SLANG. ONE OLD EXPRESSION IS "YOU CAN FIND A SHEKEL IN THE MOUTH OF A FISH." MEANING: IF YOU CATCH A GOOD FISH YOU CAN ALWAYS SELL IT EASILY AT THE MARKET. IF A MAN SAID "THERE'S TWENTY SHEKELS IN THE HORN OF MY GOAT." NO ONE WOULD CUT OFF THE HORN LOOKING FOR THE TWENTY SHEKELS—EVERYONE KNEW HE MEANT THE GOAT'S WORTH WAS TWENTY SHEKELS. TODAY, IF A MAN SAYS, "I'VE GOT SIX HUNDRED DOLLARS TIED UP IN MY CAR," WE WOULDN'T SEARCH HIS CAR LOOKING FOR A TIED UP BUNDLE OF MONEY—WITHOUT ANY OTHER EXPLANATION, WE KNOW IT MEANS HE'S SPENT THAT MUCH MONEY ON HIS CAR FOR REPAIRS OR SOMETHING OF THE SORT....

WHEN JESUS WAS IN CAPERNAUM AND THE ROMAN TAX-COLLECTOR ASKED FOR THE HEAD TAX EVERYONE PAID TO ROME (TWO SILVER COINS, WORTH A SHEKEL), JESUS TOLD PETER, WHO WAS A FISHERMAN, TO GO CATCH A FISH WHICH WOULD HAVE A PIECE OF MONEY IN ITS MOUTH (MATT. 17:27). MANY AUTHORITIES ARE AGREED HE WAS USING THE SLANG OF THE DAY—IN OTHER WORDS, TO CATCH A FISH GOOD ENOUGH TO SELL ON THE MARKET FOR A SHEKEL AND THUS PAY THEIR TAX. DURING THE 1ST CENTURY A.D., WHEN THE GREEKS WERE TRANSLATING THE GOSPELS INTO THEIR OWN LANGUAGE, THEY HAD NO UNDERSTANDING OF THE TRUE MEANING OF THESE ARAMAIC EXPRESSIONS AND SO THE STORY CAME OUT AS THOUGH PETER ACTUALLY CAUGHT A FISH SWIMMING AROUND WITH A PIECE OF MONEY IN ITS MOUTH—WHICH DOESN'T MEAN JESUS COULDN'T WORK A MIRACLE IN THIS CASE, FOR HE RAISED THE DEAD AND HEALED MANY WHO WERE "BLIND, LAME, AND HALT"—BUT IT IS INTERESTING TO NOTE HE NEVER PERFORMED MIRACLES FOR HIS OWN COMFORT AND BENEFIT!

GREENVILLE CHURCH OF GOD

Ms. Eva Mae LeFevre of Atlanta, Georgia, will be presenting special music and singing during the revival service on Saturday night, August 15, 1981, at 7:30 P.M. Pastor A. S. Yorkman invites the public to come and hear this well known singer of the gospel.

Moral Issues Involved In Hunger Strikes

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — As the hunger-striking toll of death goes on in northern Ireland, the moral question keeps coming up about whether the victims are directly killing themselves — committing outright suicide.
To deliberately take one's own life, in Christian teaching, is an evil, a grave sin.

But varying views have been expressed about whether the convicted Irish guerrillas, eight of whom have starved themselves to death so far this summer, actually intended to die or expected to gain their demands.

Theologians say the motivation is the determining factor, and that generally is hidden in individual conscience.

Ireland's Roman Catholic bishops, as well as an emissary of Pope John Paul II, have pleaded in vain with the imprisoned members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army to stop their fasting to death.

"We implore the hunger strikers and those who direct them to reflect deeply on the evil of their actions and their consequences," the bishops said in a June 17 statement.

"The contempt for human life, the incitement to revenge, the exploitation of the hunger strikes to further a campaign of murder, the intimidation of the innocent, the initiation of children into violence, all this constitutes an appalling mass of evil."

However, a church memorandum, allowing Christian funeral and burial for the victims, says there is some dispute about whether hunger-striking is suicide or "more precisely, about the circumstances in which it is suicide."

"Ultimately only God can judge the true intentions and motivation of any man and Christian burial is almost never denied to suicides today," the memorandum added, citing Roman Catholic policy that emerged after the reforming Second Vatican Council of 1962-65.

The Rev. Enda McDonagh, an Irish-born theologian at the University of Notre Dame, says the general, objective church view is that "hunger striking unto death is simply suicide and immoral."

He says that in the struggle for Irish independence before 1921, fatal hunger strikes then — of Thomas Ashe and Terrence McSweeney — were justified on grounds of laying down one's life for friends or dying oneself rather than killing.

Also, he writes in the National Catholic Reporter, it might be argued that hunger strikes were justified as being in a just cause, as a last resort with some hope of success, but he added:

"It is difficult to see that the current violence of the IRA in Northern Ireland is justified as proportionate or appropriate to the cause and as the last resort available."

He concludes that "however clear in conscience and heroic in endurance" the hunger strikers in Maze prison may be, "there does not seem to be any moral justification for hunger strikes to death in the circumstances."

But the Rev. Joseph

McVeigh, an Irish priest who has been among chaplains at the prison and who recently was in New York, maintained that the fasting deaths are "absolutely not" suicides.

"There's no justification for thinking in those terms," he said in an interview. "It's a red herring introduced by the British government and the British church."

He said the strikers "don't want to die" but "want to live with dignity and proper human conditions," refusing food "to put pressure on the British" for special prison status. "Until the last minutes they have hope."

To a question, he said the strikes have not been effective, but will "keep going until they achieve what they want." The strikers "are determined," he said. "I support the prisoners in whatever they decide to do."

On the other hand, the Rev. Neal Carlin, who directs a program for ex-inmates of Maze prison, calls the hunger strike there a "blood sacrifice" that is "contrary to good Christian spirit."

Cardinal Basil Hume of Westminster, a top theologian among cardinals, calls the hunger strikes to death a form of violence that "cannot be condoned by the church as being in accordance with God's will for man."

Views of Irish moral theologians, summed up in an article by the Rev. Denis O'Callaghan of Ireland's national seminary at Maynooth, classify hunger strikes in three categories, namely:

— Deliberately striking to death, morally equivalent to suicide.

— An exercise of "brinkmanship" in which death, if it occurs, is accidental and not intended.

— The hunger striker does not want to die, but is prepared to tolerate his own death if the other side is not prepared to give in.

O'Callaghan said most moral theologians would regard the last category as indirect, not direct, self-killing.

Sunday Services

Eldress Phyllis Watts will render the service at 11 a.m. Sunday at Rockspring FWB Church along with choirs, ushers and members from Fleming Chapel. The no. two choir and ushers are asked to sing and usher together.

At 1:30 p.m. Sunday the Rev. James Noble and the choir from Washington, D.C. will be in charge of the service. Lunch will be served at 3 p.m. after the service.

On Saturday at 5 p.m. the no. two choir will rehearse and all members are asked to be present.

Bishop Phillips invites the public to attend.

Award Is Made

Pitt County extension chairman Leroy James has been selected to receive a national award for his leadership in extension programs.

The National Association of County Agricultural Agents has named six North Carolinians, including James, as 1981 recipients of Distinguished Service Awards.

The presentations will be made August 20 at the association's annual meeting in Ithaca, N.Y. James is cited for his educational programs in agriculture and community resource development.

The national association recognized specifically his work with soybean and peanut producers and the assistance he gave to the development of water systems in four rural communities.

James received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from A.&T. University. He has served the extension service for 23 years and is president of the N.C. Association of County Agricultural Agents.

Dr. Revicki Is Appointed

Dr. Dennis A. Revicki has been appointed research coordinator in the Department of Family Medicine at the ECU School of Medicine.

Revicki will coordinate studies dealing with patient attitudes and the physician-patient relationships, family relationships and stress, psychosocial influences on disease, drug therapy and the delivery of patient care.

Revicki received his undergraduate degree from the University of Connecticut, master's degree from Southern Connecticut State College and doctoral degree in educational psychology from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

Prior to joining ECU Revicki was research associate with the Division TEACCH at the UNC School of Medicine.

Collections Going Slowly

WINTERVILLE — Tax collection is going "slower than usual," according to Elwood Nobles, Winterville town clerk.

"It's much slower this August than in previous years," he reported. "I'd like to remind residents that August is the only month for the two percent discount — on September 1, they will no longer be able to save money by paying their tax bills early."

Taxes may be paid at the town hall Monday-Friday from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

SUNDAY SERVICE

The Rev. Shakespeare Mills will preach at Little Creek Disciples Church Sunday at 11 a.m.

The Rev. Cogdell invites the public to attend.

MEN'S DAY

Men's Day will be observed Sunday at 3 p.m. at Phillippi Church of Christ, 1610 Farmville Boulevard.
The Rev. Roger Hooks of Holly Hill Free Will Baptist Church will be the speaker. The Rev. Randy Royall, pastor, invites the public to attend.

SUNDAY SERVICE

Eldress Phyllis Watts will preach at Rock Spring Free Will Baptist Church Sunday at 11 a.m., with the No. 2 Choir rendering music.

At 3 p.m., Elder Nobles of Washington, D.C., and his group will be in charge of services. The public is invited to both services.

GUEST SPEAKER

The Rev. G.L. Harris of Ayden will be the guest speaker Sunday at 11 a.m. at Sycamore Hill Missionary Baptist Church.

The pastor, the Rev. Howard W. Parker, invites the public to attend.

FILM TO BE SHOWN

The film, "The Power of the Resurrection," will be shown at Winterville Free Will Baptist Church Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

The pastor, the Rev. Ed Taylor, invites the public.

Francis Chichester completed a round-the-world solo voyage when he arrived in England on May 28, 1967, in his ketch Gypsy Moth IV.

THEREFORE WITH JOY SHALL YE DRAW WATER OUT OF THE WELLS OF SALVATION.

Vikes, 'Skins Seeking New Identities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two teams searching for new identities will be on display tonight when the Minnesota Vikings meet the Washington Redskins in a National Football League preseason game in the nation's capital.

The two National Football Conference foes met last year during the regular season with the Vikings winning 39-14. Steve Dils, who threw two touchdowns in the game, in his only start in a Viking uniform, will open at quarterback, coach Bud Grant announced Thursday.

The Redskins, who beat Kansas City last week, 16-10, will counter with quarterback Joe Theismann.

The game is scheduled to begin at 7:35 p.m. EDT.

Although the Vikings won their 11th Central Division crown in 14 years under Grant last year, the team is undergoing a period of transition.

"The Purple People Eaters are in the past," Grant said of the fearsome defense that led the Vikings to many a title. "We are developing a defensive line ... an area where we need to improve."

The new starter in the defensive line is Doug Martin, last year's No. 1 draft choice. Off to a slow start in 1980, Martin has established himself as the team's right tackle.

James White, the man who replaced the legendary Alan Page in 1978, has been a fixture at left tackle since. The Viking ends are Mark Mullane, the team leader in quarterback sacks, and Randy Hollaway, in his second year as a starter.

The defensive secondary will see a new face on Friday with Marvin Cobb filling in at cornerback for the injured John Turner. Turner cracked a bone just above his right ankle in last week's 20-6 loss to Miami and will be in a cast for four weeks.

The Vikings, who like to throw — 47 times last week — may have problems with a Redskin defense that led the NFL in pass defense last year.

"The whole (Redskin) team is better this year," noted Viking quarterback Tommy Kramer. "We will have to play much better than last year to win."

The Redskins, under new head coach Joe Gibbs, are looking to reverse a 6-10 finish in 1980, the club's worst record in 17 years.

As evidenced by the 83 players the team will dress for Friday's game, Gibbs has been slow to cut his squad which may feature as many as a dozen fresh faces.

Among the players not on the squad last year and likely to earn a spot on this year's team are: Fullback John Riggins, back from a year on the sidelines over a salary dispute; halfback Joe Washington and defensive end Fred Cooke, both acquired in off-season deals with the Baltimore Colts; defensive lineman Wilbur Young, by way of the San Diego Chargers, and halfback Terry Metcalf, the former St. Louis star returning to the NFL after a turn in the Canadian Football League.

Also tonight it's St. Louis at Seattle. On Saturday night it's Houston at New Orleans, Cleveland at Buffalo, Cincinnati at Detroit, New England at Tampa Bay, the New York Jets at Atlanta, Pittsburgh at Philadelphia, Oakland against Green Bay in Milwaukee, Baltimore at the New York Giants, Denver at Miami, Chicago at Kansas City, Dallas at Los Angeles and San Diego at San Francisco.

The Seahawks will be trying to achieve a feat they failed to do at last year — win at home. The Seahawks went 0-8 in the Kingdom — and the string of misfortune stretched to nine games last week when they fell 27-24 to San Francisco in overtime.

The Houston Oilers, now coached by former assistant Ed Biles, venture into New Orleans, where their former head coach, Bum Phillips, is lying in wait. He's now coaching the Saints and he'd love to show the folks that in George Rogers, his No. 1 draft pick, he's got a new Earl Campbell, around whom he built a winner in Houston.

Driver, Crew To Get Shares

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte Motor Speedway officials say they will award a full share of the Winner's Circle purse to the Dale Earnhardt-Richard Childress racing team.

NASCAR's Winners' Circle Committee had decided Tuesday to award Earnhardt's share to the J.D. Stacy team, which Earnhardt left after the Talladega 500 earlier this month.

But speedway president H.A. Wheeler said the speedway would award the Earnhardt team $4,950, the amount it gives all Winners' Circle teams.

"It is not our intention to second-guess NASCAR's Winners' Circle committee. Instead, we are doing this to support our strong convictions toward Earnhardt, Childress and their sponsor, Wrangler," Wheeler said.

He said Charlotte Motor Speedway was influenced by Earnhardt's "excellence" and the need to give his new team financial support.

"I hope that other track operators will follow our lead in this," he said. "There is no question that the success of (the new Earnhardt team) will greatly benefit ticket sales."

Earnhardt left the Stacy team in the wake of an internal dispute. Stacy purchased the team from Rod Osterlund of California in a surprise move in early July.

Although the Osterlund team took national championship honors last year with Earnhardt at the wheel, the NASCAR committee designated the Stacy team and its new driver, Joe Ruttman, Winners' Circle recipients.

A NASCAR spokesman said the decision was based on the fact that the Winners' Circle was created to honor teams, not drivers.

Spokesman Alexis Leras said the Earnhardt situation was unique and said rule changes might be forthcoming at the Winners' Circle committee meeting this fall.

"We hadn't anticipated this, and we had to make our decision based on what the rules were at the time," she said. "But I'm sure this will be discussed at the fall meeting."

Joe Whitlock, spokesman for the Charlotte speedway decision and said he expected other race tracks to duplicate it.

"I'm glad they had enough conviction to go through with this, because it's more than fair that we get the money," Whitlock said.

"It was a pretty gutless decision to give Stacy Winners' Circle status, and I think they (the Winners' Circle committee) were probably intimidated by some lawyers. I hope they rewrite the rules so this doesn't happen again."

Muffed Foul, Homer Top SH

SNOW HILL — This one hurt. Cherryville catcher Brad Long, who entered last night's American Legion championship series riding a 23-game hitting streak, made sure of that.

Having yet to get a hit in three at bats, Long's streak appeared in jeopardy entering the 12th inning. When he lofted a pop fly along the first baseline, the string appeared over. Not quite.

Snow Hill pitcher Kevin Korpi called off catcher Jabo Fulghum for the ball. Both players then watched as the ball fell to the ground untouched. Given a second chance, Long took full advantage of it.

Getting all of Korpi's next pitch, Long launched a drive over the leftfield fence for his seventh home run of the season to lift Cherryville a 4-3 victory over Snow Hill Thursday night.

In the bottom of the 12th, David Shirley walked and moved to second on Jabo Fulghum's sacrifice but was left stranded when Korpi popped out to second and Frank Milkovits grounded out on a check-swing to the pitcher.

The victory gave Cherryville, now 30-5 overall and 16-3 in the playoffs, a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven championship series. Game #2 is set for tonight (8 p.m.) in Snow Hill.

"We had 'em down early and let it get away," said Snow Hill coach James Fulghum, who for the fourth time in six playoff series saw his club lose the opening game. Snow Hill is 25-15 overall and 19-5 in the playoffs.

"This was a championship ballgame," Cherryville's first-year coach Don Sane said. "You never know what kind of game to expect after a five-hour bus ride, but when you get this far you'll take 'em any way you can get 'em."

Through five innings, the game belonged to Snow Hill. Post 94 scored single runs in the first, third and fifth for a 3-1 lead. But after the fifth, Cherryville left-hander John Warlick gave up just one hit and did not allow a Snow Hill runner to reach second until the 12th.

For the game, Warlick, now 9-1, struck out 12, walked eight and threw 181 pitches. Korpi, now 10-3, was the loser after relieving starter Bobby Avery in the eighth.

"It was just a gutty, gutty performance by Warlick," Sane said. "Usually around the fifth inning he finds his rhythm and starts getting really stingy and that's what happened."

Game-Winning Home Run

4-3 victory over Snow Hill last night in the opening game of the American Legion championship series. (Reflector photo by Larry Zicherman)

"I started out slow. I didn't loosen up that much before the game," Warlick said. "I was kind of stiff. But I loosened up as the game went on."

Snow Hill took advantage of Warlick's stiffness in the early going. In the first, leadoff batter Greg Hardison lined a single to centerfield and then stole second. Then, with two gone, Korpi ripped a double over the centerfielder's head to score Hardison.

Post 94 upped its lead to 2-0 in the third. Hardison and Shirley walked to open the inning. Hardison was then forced at third on Fulghum's fielder's choice. A passed ball allowed Shirley and Fulghum to advance before Milkovits singled to score Shirley.

Cherryville cut the deficit to a run in the fifth when Shaun Buff tripled over Kester's head in rightfield. Tim Mayhue then walked and Lauer scored on Bobby Reynolds' sacrifice fly, bring in Korpi. Lauer greeted Snow Hill, however, countered with a run of its own in the bottom of the inning.

With two gone, Milkovits walked and scored when David Kester ripped an 0-1 pitch in the right-centerfield gap for a triple. Kester was stranded at third when Wade Corbett struck out to end the inning.

Cherryville edged closer with a run in the sixth. Jim Fortenberry singled, went to second when Long reached on an error by Milkovits at third and then scored on David Buff's double.

Post 100 then tied the game in the eighth. With two gone, Buff tripled over Kester's head in rightfield. Tim Mayhue then walked to chase Avery and Bobby Reynolds' sacrifice fly, bring in Korpi. Lauer greeted Snow Hill, however, countered with a single to left to score Buff and tie the game.

Cherryville had a chance to go ahead in the ninth when, with two outs, Fortenberry singled and stole second and Long walked. But Korpi struck out Buff to end the threat.

Three innings later, Korpi and Snow Hill were not so lucky as Long connected for a solo home run to extend his hitting streak to 24 games and give the blue pin-striped-clad visitors the victory and the lead in the series.

Owners Cry: Where Are Fans?

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Baseball is in for its worst financial year," predicts Bill Giles, executive vice president of the World Champion Philadelphia Phillies.

"We're going to have to sweat it out," Giles says of attendance problems the 26 major league teams face in the second half of the shortened 1981 season following the 50-day players' strike.

"Last year, eight teams made money," he said in an interview Thursday. "This year there will be fewer than eight that draw well."

The Phillies already are feeling the crunch.

They drew a sellout house of 60,561 fans Monday in the opener after the strike because of Pete Rose's was about to break Stan Musial's National League career hit record.

But the next three nights, the Phillies drew 8,200, 9,100 and then 5,700 less fans than their daily pre-strike average of 32,000.

"I think hard times (in baseball) are pretty much the pattern," Giles said, adding that he figures the Phillies will be off 25 to 30 percent for the rest of the season.

Giles said the average attendance for all 26 major league teams for the first three days of the second half of the season was between 16-and 21,000 fans, 20 percent less than the average before the strike.

Supporting Giles' views is a report in the Battle Creek (Mich.) Enquirer and News which determined ballpark attendance is down since the strike and is dropping each day.

The newspaper said the two major leagues had a combined average attendance of 20,477 per game before the players' strike. On Monday, attendance at major league games averaged 25,737 — boosted by the crowd at Veterans Stadium — but dropped to 17,777 Tuesday and 14,238 Wednesday. Wednesday's attendance represented a drop of 30.4 per cent from the pre-strike games and 44.7 from Monday, the newspaper said.

The newspaper used attendance information recorded in the Sporting News to compute the pre-strike figures. For the first three days of the resumed season, attendance figures from The Associated Press box scores were used.

"Generally, I expect rough times for the next six weeks," said Giles, who heads a group that is negotiating to buy the Phillies from owner Ruly Carpenter.

"I think there's a chance within 10 days or so, that things might bounce back, but I kind of doubt it," Giles added.

The Phillies aren't the only team affected in the early games of the newly-established split season, but such draws as the New York Yankees, Los Angeles Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds were also feeling the pinch, Giles said.

The Phillies executive blamed the strike and the split season, which he said is unpopular with many fans.

"Where we're getting killed is in group sales," Giles said. "Normally, we have 8-to-10,000 at this time."

But because of the strike, people couldn't get organized to make their annual pilgrimage to the ballpark, he said. "We're losing 6,000 (fans) a game in the group sales department."

Offering a glimmer of hope, Giles said: "I think within a few weeks, some interesting second-half races will be brewing."

"But unfortunately, school will start and we'll get hurt in attendance without the kids," he added.

Dawson Spoils Tiant's Debut For Bucs

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Andre Dawson, Luis Tiant, Tommy Boggs and the St. Louis Cardinals are up. Steve Carlton is down and Victor Cruz is out, all due to a trio of National League games Thursday night.

Dawson belted his first major league grand slam home run, spoiling Tiant's return to the from the minor leagues as Montreal topped Pittsburgh 7-2. Gary Carter followed Dawson's blast with another homer, both off Pirates reliever Cruz. After the game, Cruz was sent to the same minor league team — the Portland (Ore.) Beavers of the Pacific Coast League — that Tiant hurled for prior to being purchased by Pittsburgh earlier this week.

Boggs, who had lost nine straight decisions, gave up just three hits in six innings as Atlanta bombed Los Angeles 9-1, making the Braves 4-0 since the season resumed following the players' strike.

The Cardinals were flying high after beating Carlton for the first time in 2½ years. Carlton, the left-handed ace of the Philadelphia Phillies and Cy Young Award winner last season, had won 10 straight against his former team, dating back to opening day 1979, before falling to the Cards 5-2.

In other games, it was San Diego 9, Houston 1 and the Chicago Cubs 6, the New York Mets 1.

Expos 7, Pirates 2

"Andre is hotter than a firecracker," said Carter after he and Dawson broke the game open with their seventh-inning homers.

"Andre is the best there is," said Expos Manager Dick Williams, who claimed the same thing the night before when Dawson, who is hitting .333 and is tied with Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt for the homer lead with 16, went 4 for 4 with another homer.

Dawson's grand slam was his 16th homer of the season and, oddly, his first with anybody on base.

"It's my fifth year and I'm feeling more comfortable each year," said Dawson. "I think it's just a matter of experience polishing the talents you have and having the confidence."

Larry Parrish singled with one out in the seventh for Montreal and took second on a single by Mike Phillips. Rogers, attempting a sacrifice bunt, then forced Parrish at third base but an errant throw by Berra to first put Phillips at third and Rogers at first.

After Tim Lincecum doubled Phillips home, Tiant walked Rodney Scott to load the bases. Then Cruz came in and yielded the two homers.

"That's all anybody talks about, how old I am, and how they are not sure I am 40 or not," said Tiant. "But nobody looks at my record," said Tiant, who was 13-7 at Portland.

"Last year, a sportswriter in New York said I was 139 years old. To me, that's some kind of stupid. I wish I could live 139 years and forget about pitching for a living."

"It looks like he never left the big leagues," said Williams.

Braves 9, Dodgers 1

Boggs, 2-10, won for the first time since April 21, when he defeated Cincinnati. Chris Chambliss slugged a two-run homer in support.

UNC Names West Coach

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Hubert West, the 1972 Atlantic Coast Conference long jump champion, was named Thursday as the new men's and women's track coach at the University of North Carolina, athletic officials announced.

In addition to West's appointment, UNC Athletic Director John Swofford named 1977 ACC 800-meter champion Donald Lockerbie as an assistant to West, as well as men's and women's cross country coach.

West and Lockerbie will replace Joe Hilton, who has announced his retirement as cross country and track coach effective January 1, 1982. Hilton has been track coach since 1963 and will continue to assist West and Lockerbie until the end of the year.

A native of Mocksville, N.C., West is a 1972 graduate of UNC. He was a four-year letterman in his undergraduate years in addition to his long jump title. West has assisted Hilton with the Tar Heel track team since his graduation. He also served as women's cross country coach last year.

Lockerbie is a 1979 UNC graduate who has been teaching at Stratford Academy in Macon, Ga. He is a native of Stony Brook, N.Y.

In addition to his duties as cross country coach, he will also work with all of the UNC distance performers.

"A number of quality people applied for this job," said Swofford in making the announcement. "But, we felt Hubert had the best credentials to carry on the university's excellent track tradition."

Swofford said Lockerbie would be "a good complement to Hubert. He had an outstanding record as a student-athlete here and will do a great job of handling our distance events."

Tiant Returns

Pittsburgh's Luis Tiant fires a pitch during Thursday's game against Montreal. Tiant was called up from the Bucs' AAA farm team in Portland to help in the second half of the season. The veteran pitcher went 6½ innings and gave up four earned runs as the Pirates lost, 7-2. (AP Laserphoto)

Pitt, Penn State Are Still Class Of Eastern Football Powers

By The Associated Press

Just like Oklahoma and Nebraska in the Big Eight (one has had at least a share of every title since 1960), Michigan and Ohio State in the Big Ten (ditto since 1967) and Alabama and Georgia in the Southeastern Conference (see LSU, 1970), Eastern college football also has its own Big Two.

They are Penn State and Pitt — or, in the last couple of years, Pitt and Penn State. In fact, Penn State's string of 42 consecutive non-losing seasons dates back to 1938 and is an NCAA record. Pitt, meanwhile, has recaptured some of its past glory, winning the national championship in 1976 and finishing second to Georgia a year ago.

It is generally conceded that the two Pennsylvania rivals will rule the roost again, although Pitt can hardly expect to be as strong as last year (11-1, including a 37-9 Gator Bowl rout of South Carolina) while Penn State should be improved, although a killer schedule may prevent anything like last year's 10-2 mark (the Nittany Lions trimmed Ohio State 31-19 in the Fiesta Bowl), which was good for eighth place in The Associated Press rankings.

"We're a long ways from having the football team we had last year," says Pitt Coach Jackie Sherrill, who must replace 15 starters, "but unless we have some bad injuries, I don't think we'll dip too far. I think we're certainly in the Top Twenty." And Sherrill's blueprint sees the Panthers contending for the top again in 1982.

"We will have a fine football team, there is no doubt about that," says Penn State's Joe Paterno, owner of a 141-31-1 log in his 15 years atop Mt. Nittany. "We have to have a strong team to operate against our schedule, which is the most difficult in Penn State history." It includes the likes of Nebraska, Miami (Fla.), Alabama, Notre Dame and, of course, Pitt.

The National Football League drafted a dozen Pitt players and seven others were signed as free agents. The losses include defensive end Hugh Green — a three-time All-American, winner of the Lombardi Award and runnerup in the Heisman Trophy voting — and offensive tackle Mark May, who won the Outland Trophy. Green, May and fullback Randy McMillan were first-round draft picks.

Pitt's strength will be on offense, especially the high-powered aerial duo of quarterback Dan Marino and flanker Dwight Collins. The only returning defensive regulars are linebacker Sal Sunseri and safety Tom Flynn, but the key will be tackle John Hendrick, who is coming back from knee surgery and could anchor a defensive line that lost all five starters.

Paterno says his first concern, too, is to rebuild the defense. And he said that before standout end Larry Kubin, sidelined most of last year with a knee injury, jumped to the NFL.

The Lions have some exceptional people on the attack, including tailback Curt Warner, flanker Kenny Jackson, guards Sean Farrell and Mike Munchak and tackle Jim Brown, although the last three are all recovering from injuries.

The East, and college football in general, received a shock when Villanova suddenly dropped football smack in the middle of spring practice. However, there are hopes for improvement at Syracuse and Boston College, both of which have new coaches, and at West Virginia, where Don Nehlen is in his second campaign.

The new man at Syracuse is Dick MacPherson, who came from the NFL's Cleveland Browns. Star running back Joe Morris, quarterback Dave Warner and what is expected to be the first sound defense in years make the Orangemen a threat. Morris is the school's career rushing king with 3,105 yards.

Jack Bicknell moves from Maine to Boston College, where he inherits 38 lettermen — including linebacker Jim Budness, 278-pound defensive tackle Juor Poles, running back Shelby Gamble... and the most challenging schedule in B.C. history. The Eagles' main concern is the offensive line, usually their strength.

West Virginia lost most of its offense but fortunately quarterback Oliver Luck returns. The other skill positions are the biggest question marks. The Mountaineers have not been known for defense in a long time but nine starters return on that side of the ball.

Army has more experience and balance than in recent years and a realistic schedule (Brown, Harvard and Princeton, among others) gives the Cadets a shot at a break-even campaign. Navy returns six starters from a defensive unit that finished sixth nationally a year ago but their are big holes in the offensive line. The Midshipmen boast a trio of standouts in tailback Eddie Meyers, nose guard Tim Jordan and placekicker Steve Fehr.

Rutgers lost heavily from its best-ever senior class and has gaping holes on both units. The defense has strong linebacking and a pair of large tackles in Bill Pickel and Mike Rustemeyer but the best of the Scarlet Knights could be placekicker Alex Falcinelli.

PROOF OF GOOD TASTE.

Serve a better mixed drink with Canada Dry gin, vodka or bourbon. They're three ways to really improve your spirits.

"I was really happy for him," said Chambliss. "He's pitched a lot of 2-1 and 1-0 games. I'm glad we finally got him some runs."

Boggs was especially grateful for the offensive help. "Things haven't been going my way since early in the season," said Boggs. "It feels good to get some runs and be able to coast."

"The strike may have been a blessing in disguise. I was able to forget the first half of the season."

The crowd of 27,418 was the smallest at Dodger Stadium since September 22, 1980 and lowered the Dodgers' 1981 average to 44,855.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 2

"Maybe this is the start for us beating him. From now on, maybe his luck has run out," Cardinals shortstop Garry Templeton said of Carlton, who is 30-9 against St. Louis. It was Templeton's two-run single that highlighted a four-run second inning for St. Louis, the Cards' biggest inning against Carlton since Sept. 17, 1979.

St. Louis took three of four games from the World Champion Phillies, whose Pete Rose saw his 17-game hitting streak stopped.

"It feels good to finally beat him," added outfielder Tito Landrum. "It was a long time coming. He didn't look as sharp as he has before."

Padres 9, Astros 1

The Padres won their first game of the post-strike "second season" as catcher Terry Kennedy drove in three runs with a single and a double and scored three runs despite feeling "tired."

"I was catching well before the strike. Now it's like I haven't been out there for a year," said Kennedy. "There is no way to practice catching but to get out there and catch."

Rookie pitcher Chris Welsh, 4-4, limited Houston to six hits before leaving the game with leg cramps after the seventh inning.

Cubs 6, Mets 1

Jody Davis, who was a Met farmhand, and Jerry Morales, who played for New York last season, did in the Mets with home runs. Davis, a catcher, slugged a three-run homer in the fourth inning and Morales came through with a two-run pinch homer an inning later.

"The count was 2-0 and I was looking for a slider and there it was," said Davis of his fourth-inning blast off Greg Harris.

The victory was Chicago's first after three losses to New York.

Mariners Enjoying Their Stay In First

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Break up the...Seattle Mariners?

And make that the first-place Seattle Mariners of the American League West, if you please.

What's this, the Seattle Mariners in first place on Aug. 13? Well, okay, so it really isn't midseason, after all, and the Mariners wouldn't be in their exalted position but for the baseball strike that forced a split season upon the national pastime. Just let them enjoy it while it lasts.

And how long might that be?

"It's a cliché, but it's the truth — anyone can win this thing now," Rene Lachemann, who replaced Maury Wills as Seattle manager in early May, said Thursday night after the Mariners took over sole possession of the top spot by bombing the Minnesota Twins 11-1 behind a club record 19-hit assault. "I've been involved in short seasons in winter ball before so I know it can be done. If we play .750 ball over the last 50 games, I like our chances."

In other AL action, the Milwaukee Brewers trimmed the Cleveland Indians 8-5, the New York Yankees blanked the Detroit Tigers 3-0, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Kansas City Royals 2-1 and the Boston Red Sox outslugged the Chicago White Sox 9-6.

Richie Zisk belted a three-run homer — his 11th of the year but his first with anyone on base — while Tom Paciorek and Bruce Bochte each had three hits and Jeff Burroughs delivered a tie-breaking, two-run single to lead the Seattle attack that boosted the Mariners' second-half record to 3-1. They were 21-36 in the first part of the season and trailed Oakland by 14½ games when the strike began.

"I was just hoping to be around on Aug. 13," Lachemann admitted. "To tell you the truth, during the strike I didn't even think there was going to be any baseball on Aug. 13."

"We've got a good lineup," added Paciorek. "I think we can make it interesting the rest of the way. It's a matter of who gets hot early."

Brewers 8, Indians 5
Milwaukee's Cecil Cooper is red-hot. Cooper continued his torrid poststrike hitting with a home run, double and two singles and Roy Howell also homered to pace a 15-hit attack. Cooper, who hit .352 a year ago, rapped off 13 hits in 23 at-bats for 26 total bases in the five-game series against the Indians, lifting his average from .270 to .300.

"You get locked in a groove, the hits start to fall and it just kind of steamrolls," Cooper said. "I'm seeing the ball well and thinking, I feel like I did last year."

"The guys around me, that really helps. You know we'd hit sooner or later because we're a good hitting team. It's just kind of surprising that it happened so fast. I thought the pitchers would have the advantage, but it doesn't seem that way. I feel like I can hit the ball hard every time up there."

Yankees 3, Tigers 0

Ron Guidry pitched five innings of one-hit ball while Oscar Gamble and Graig Nettles rapped RBI singles in the first inning as the Yankees defeated Detroit for their seventh victory in as many meetings with the Tigers. Guidry struck out eight and walked one before turning the pitching chores over to three relievers, who gave up one hit apiece.

"Guidry throws the slider so hard you can't pick up the rotation," said Detroit outfielder Lynn Jones. "That's why you see so many hitters swinging at bad balls. I think I can read pitches pretty well, but I don't know if I'll ever pick up his slider when he gets it down and in. I'm glad he only went five innings. It could have been really embarrassing out there."

Orioles 2, Royals 1

A two-run, first-inning single by Doug DeCinces and a clutch relief job by Tim Lincecum were the highlights for Baltimore.

"I'm usually a power pitcher, but tonight I was more of a control pitcher," said Stoddard, who choked off threats in the eighth and ninth innings despite a tender elbow. "I tried to hit spots. I knew I couldn't blow the ball past anybody."

Kansas City third baseman George Brett suffered a severe bruise of the right thumb while making a stop of a hard smash by DeCinces in the sixth inning. X-rays proved negative but Brett could miss a week or more.

"The ball got me on a short hop," Brett said. "I was going crazy. The hand wouldn't stop shaking. I was praying the next batter wouldn't hit me the ball. If he had, I was thinking about taking off my glove and throwing left-handed."

Red Sox 9, White Sox 6

Carl Yastrzemski, who will turn 42 next week, drove in three runs with a homer and double, moving into a tie with Paul Waner for 10th place on baseball's all-time hit list with 3,052.

"He looked like the Yaz of old. The way he swung the bat was like when I was against him," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said. "He's just an amazing athlete who has kept himself in condition throughout the years. He doesn't have a very high average this year, but he's the most productive of all our hitters for driving men in from second base. He also never seems to leave a man at third."

Chicago's Reggie Patterson, a 22-year-old right-hander, learned the facts of major league life quickly in his debut as Yaz drilled a two-run homer in the first inning.

White Sox Would Lose If It Would Help Them

CHICAGO (AP) — A majority of players on the Chicago White Sox say they would throw a four-game series in Oakland next month if it meant the team could get into the American League West playoffs, the Chicago Tribune reported in a copyright story today.

The story related the results of a Tribune survey in which seven members of the White Sox' starting lineup were questioned, along with three starting pitchers and several utility players. All of those questioned were promised anonymity.

But White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa, speaking for the record, said he would probably instruct his players to lose the series if it was the only way to get into the playoffs.

Wynne Is Put Winner

Jay Wynne led the lead in the first round of the 1981 Nite Amateur Tournament with a nine-under-par 63 last night at the Greenville Putt golf course.

Wynne shot an opening-round 29 and then faltered with a 34 to leave his victory in doubt until the final hole.

Rodney Hooks finished second with a 64 after missing a putt on the last hole that could have forced a playoff.

Jake Loftin was third with a 66, followed by Andy Maddox at 67 and Mickey Myrick with a 69.

In the women's division, Delphia Beacham shot a 67 (37-30) to take first place.

Missy Strong won the girl's division with a 91 while Elizabeth Maddox was second with a 99.

There will be a 72-hole medal play tournament Sunday starting at 7:30.

"It's clear to me that nobody is going to take care of us except ourselves," LaRussa said. "The league and the commissioner have not proven to me they are concerned with the White Sox franchise to any great extent."

The decision by major league club owners to split the season after settlement of the players' strike and to insist on a playoff even if the same team wins both halves created the situation that led to the Tribune survey.

The owners decided that if the same team won both halves of the season, then the team with the next-best record for the overall season would get into the playoffs.

Since the White Sox finished the first half of the season with a 9½-game lead over the defending American League champion Kansas City Royals, the Royals and the Oakland A's could wind up fighting for a second-half championship while the White Sox still held a comfortable, overall lead over the Royals.

As a result, the Tribune said, if the White Sox played to win the series with Oakland that begins Sept. 25, they could conceivably be helping the Royals win the second-half championship, thereby knocking themselves out of a playoff berth.

Rodgers To Tell It All

ATLANTA (AP) — "The Seduction of 17-Year-Olds."

That's the unofficial title of the book Pepper Rodgers is working on, a "light expose" he says will examine the world of collegiate football recruiting.

It's a subject Rodgers knows something about. He was fired as head football coach at Georgia Tech after the 1979 season, and has also coached at Kansas and UCLA.

Raider-NFL Trial Ends In Hung Jury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After long and tense deliberations, a federal jury has proven incapable of unraveling the dispute between the National Football League and it's Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders.

A mistrial was declared Thursday night, and a new trial set for Sept. 21 in the battle between Oakland's Managing General Partner Al Davis and the other 27 NFL teams.

The U.S. District Court jury heard 55 days of testimony about how and why the league blocked the Raiders' planned move to Los Angeles in early 1980.

Then the jury of seven women and three men deliberated for 13 days, and appeared to be deadlocked 8-2 in favor of the Raiders when Judge Harry Pregerson decided it was impossible for them to reach a verdict.

The end of the trial was like a goal line stand. The Raiders were bitter that they didn't score in their bid to move to Los Angeles. The NFL attorneys wouldn't say they were happy about the lack of a winner, but they had kept Oakland from moving.

Davis, the drama's central figure, was not present at the courthouse for comment on what obviously was a bitter loss for him, even though it counts as a tie.

But Davis scheduled a news conference for today at 10 a.m. PDT.

Other spokesmen for the two sides expressed anger afterward — with the Raiders' attorney Joseph Alioto calling for an investigation of one of the jurors who had been harshly criticized by the jury forewoman. NFL Attorney Pat Lynch talked of the huge legal expenditure, estimated at millions of dollars before and during the trial that began last May 11.

"The cost of this lawsuit to the league is enormous. It's outrageous that it has to be tried again," Lynch said.

"We'll try it again in September and we'll beat them in overtime," said the Raiders' attorney, former San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto. In the meantime, Alioto said he will seek a U.S. attorney's office investigation of one juror whose unyielding support of the NFL drew harsh criticism from the jury forewoman earlier in the week.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle was present in court for the finish that didn't finish anything. Rozelle then said: "I'm disappointed we didn't win it. That's what we came here for."

"But considering it's a local issue, and it was tried here in Los Angeles, it would be like Ronald Reagan breaking even with Jimmy Carter in Plains, Ga.," Rozelle said, adding that the NFL is prepared to go ahead and contest the Raiders again at the second trial.

Rozelle would not speculate on possible negotiations to end the dispute without a second trial, saying that was up to the 27 other clubs in the league. He said he thinks the league will soon add two expansion teams but added: "I can't say that Los Angeles is going to have one. I have no vote."

The trial had appeared over at 3 p.m. Thursday when sources close to attorneys said a mistrial was about to be declared. But it took nearly eight more hours for the judge to bring it to an official end. In the meantime Pregerson met with jurors individually to question them, and talked with attorneys about how issues in a second trial could be streamlined.

Speaking in a weary voice as he announced the mistrial shortly before 11 p.m., Pregerson told the jurors they had been conscientious in face of the turmoil inside the jury room.

Not mentioning any particular juror or jurors, the judge told them: "Unfortunately, a sharp difference of opinion developed and you were unable to bridge the gap. Certain tensions and frictions developed. Certain statements were made that are perhaps regretted."

Raiders attorney Alioto and Maxwell Blecher, attorney for the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, had tried unsuccessfully Wednesday and Thursday to have the judge remove juror Thomas Gelker and let the jury deliberate without Gelker.

"It's perfectly clear that but for Tom Gelker, the jurors would have had a unanimous verdict in this case," said Alioto. "He concealed material facts when questioned. The interrogation of individual jurors, made by the judge tonight clearly established the fact that Gelker knew a lot more about football and the commissioner's office than he professed at the time he was chosen for this jury."

During questioning by the judge, Alioto said, Gelker revealed that he was "an expert" in the structure of the now-defunct World Football League. It was disclosed Tuesday that a cousin of the juror, hotel owner Bruce Gelker of Santa Ana, had been owner of the WFL's Portland franchise.

"The judge started the investigation tonight by interrogating the jurors. We going to request that he turn over that transcript to the U.S. attorney to look at it," Alioto said.

On Wednesday, jury forewoman Carole Slaten was asked by the judge in open court if any juror had flatly stated "that he or she would not be bound by the court's instructions on the x-;," he forewoman replied that "in substance and effect" one juror had taken such a stand.

She identified him as Gelker, and said: "He made a statement on the first day that indicated to me personally that it wouldn't matter what we said or what evidence was taken out of the files, and that's that."

Regardless of Thursday's mistrial, pro football will continue to be played in Oakland this fall. The Raiders recently signed an agreement with the Oakland Coliseum covering the 1981 season.

And those who spoke as if they were least affected by the no decision trial were the Raider players and coaches. In 1980 the team was able to ignore the controversy swirling around the planned move to Los Angeles and win pro football's biggest annual prize, the Super Bowl game.

"All it means is, they'll just have to go back and do it again," Raider offensive line-man Gene Upshaw said of the team's owners. "What we got to do is get ready for the season."

Oakland Coach Tom Flores said the "disappointment" of the mistrial was not going to affect the team's concentration on this weekend's preseason game against Green Bay.

Nielsen Makes Start, Grabs Hartford Lead

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — When the power went off in Lonnie Nielsen's motel room on the eve of the first round of the $300,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Great Hartford Open, he was afraid he might miss his early morning start.

The only alarm clock he had was electric and his telephone was out of service, eliminating the possibility of a wake-up call.

Nielsen didn't miss his Thursday morning start, but he left the rest of the 156-man field undoubtedly wishing he had.

The 28-year-old Cedar Rapids, Iowa, resident shot the best round of his five-year career, an 8-under-par 63 that was just one stroke short of the tournament's opening-round record.

His round of six birdies, one eagle and no bogies gave him a three-shot lead in the tourney being played at the par-71, 6,334-yard Wethersfield Country Club course.

"I played extremely well," said Nielsen. "The whole round revolved around my putting, as most 63s do."

After finishing, Nielsen then watched to see whether someone would overtake him, but only four golfers were able to come close.

Shooting 65s were Bill Kratzert, the 1977 GHO champion, Phil Hancock, Jay Haas and Roger Maltbie.

Nine golfers were at 66. They were Dave Stockton, the 1974 GHO champion, Dana Quigley, Tim Simpson, Mike Morley, John Amazza, Rex Caldwell, Bill Britton, Mark Lye and Scott Simpson. Sixteen golfers shot 67s.

Defending champion Howard Twitty shot a 3-under-par 68. Jim Simons, who Twitty beat in a six-hole playoff, shot a 72.

The chase for the tournament's $54,000 first prize was to continue in today's second round.

Nielsen said after his power went off, he opened his room curtains in hopes that the morning sun would wake him. Nielsen also "kept one eye open all night so I didn't oversleep."

When he finally woke up, he had a feeling that "something was going to happen," but it wasn't until he sank a putt for a par on the first hole that he realized it would be something good.

"The first hole I hit a terrible putt," he said. "It just sucked right in. I never saw anything like it, and I thought this must be the day."

Nielsen, who has won $15,466 this year, predicted that this year's winning score could set a record. The tournament record of 20-under par was set in 1973 by Billy Casper and tied by Rod Funseth in 1978.

Maltbie also indicated a record was possible because the course was "immaculate" and the greens "perfect."

"It's very easy to roll a ball on this course, which is probably evidenced by the scores," Maltbie said. "The course plays exactly like you'd want a golf course to play."

Ninety-nine golfers finished below par in the opening round. Many of golf's top players skip the GHO because they believe the course offers no challenge.

Rafer Johnson Wouldn't Swap Past For Present

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
Twenty-one years after fulfilling his greatest dream, Rafer Johnson doubts that, given the chance, he would take it back and swap it for another.

"The money and exposure in baseball and professional football are staggering and heady," said the onetime world's best all-around athlete, "but I'd never want to give up my Olympic gold medal. Nor would I want to sacrifice my present involvement with helping kids."

"It's good to have money, but money's not everything in life. There are other priorities."

A gifted athlete who lettered in four sports and was president of his Kingsburg, Calif., high school class, Johnson followed his dream to Rome in 1960 where he won the most demanding and prestigious event of the Olympic Games — the two-day, 10-sport decathlon.

He came home to wide acclaim and endless offers, including proffered contracts from the Los Angeles Rams football team and the LA franchise in the old American Basketball Association.

"I was all-state three years in football as a left halfback and defensive safety," he said. "I hit .500 in baseball. But my best shot would have been in football playing safety. I've thought about what might have been but I am perfectly happy with the way my life has turned out."

As one in a long and distinguished line of American decathlon champions, dating back to Jim Thorpe in 1912, Rafer may have missed sport's megabucks but he has prospered, served and made an indelible mark in society.

As vice-president in charge of community affairs for the Continental Telephone Co., part-time movie actor, network sportscaster, active in numerous charity foundations, he currently is national spokesman for Hershey's National Track and Field Youth Program. He also is national coach of Eunice Shriver's Special Olympics for retarded children.

The Hershey program involves 2.5 million boys and girls between the ages of 9 and 14 who compete in local, state and regional meets leading up to the National Track and Field Finals. Five hundred survivors compete for prizes Saturday in Charleston, West Va.

"It is a wonderful program," Johnson said during a stopover in New York. "It gives these kids a chance to travel, to be part of a larger effort, to feel they belong and are accomplishing something."

"It is a positive experience. They learn discipline. It is hard work, but they get a chance to think of what they want to do. It is a specific and definitive challenge, and they get a chance, just as I did, to dream."

Johnson said his ambition to become an Olympic decathlon champion "was fired in 1952 when, as a 19-year-old just out of high school, he went to Tulare, Calif., to watch Bob Mathias qualify for the shot at his second straight Olympic gold."

"Right then," said Rafer, "I told myself I wanted to be an Olympic decathlon champion." Decathlon winners traditionally emerge from the Olympics with the highest identity and commercial value, just as do women figure skaters in the Winter Games. They wind up well.

Thorpe, the Carlisle, Pa., Indian, was the most tragic, having his medals taken from him on a silly charge that he once played a baseball game for pocket change. Yet he still is acclaimed the greatest all-around athlete in American history.

Glenn Morris (1936) and Milt Campbell (1956) enjoyed wide recognition. Mathias became a Congressman and later a wheel in the U.S. Olympic development program. Bruce Jenner parlayed his dramatic 1976 victory at Montreal into a fortune as a huckster for a cereal and as a TV and movie personality.

Johnson, an impressive athlete at 6-feet-3 and 200 pounds with a good mind and rare leadership qualities, had the credentials to follow the road of either Mathias or Jenner.

He chose to share his political, movie and TV aspirations with the young, disadvantaged and handicapped. He serves voluntarily on a dozen boards aimed at helping the blind, mentally ill and generally the young searching for a foothold on life.

"When I won at Rome, the TV coverage consisted of 15 minutes prime time and 15 minutes of tape a day on the entire Olympics," he said. "We are now living in a different world."

At age 46 — 47 next Monday — and still a marvelous athletic specimen, he made his choice.

"When I was a kid, a lot of people helped me," he said. "I felt I should give something back."

John's Son Is Hurt In Fall

POINT PLEASANT BEACH, N.J. (AP) — Doctors say they're hopeful the 2½-year-old son of New York Yankees pitcher Tommy John will recover from a serious head injury he suffered when he tumbled three floors from the family's vacation home.

John's son, Travis, suffered a "serious cranial injury" in the fall Thursday evening, said Dr. Stanley Weinstein, a member of a Point Pleasant Hospital neurosurgery team that operated on the boy for 90 minutes.

Neither Weinstein nor hospital spokesman William Eastmond would elaborate on the boy's injuries, but Weinstein said he was hopeful the boy would recover.

Travis was rushed by police to the hospital from the scene of the accident in the neighboring seashore town of Bay Head.

Dr. John Crisanti, an emergency room physician who first examined Travis said he had suffered a "critical injury."

Following 90 minutes of neurosurgery, Travis was placed in the hospital's intensive care unit in critical condition, Eastmond said.

The boy had been playing in a third-floor room of the oceanfront home the family was renting when he climbed up to a window sill 2 feet off the floor, pushed against a screen and tumbled three stories onto the family's station wagon and onto the driveway about 6:25 p.m., said police officer Jeffrey Wells.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Murphy's Law states: "If anything can go wrong, it will!" Declarer obviously never heard of this "law" because he overlooked a simple precaution that would have permitted him to make his slam.

Six no trump would have been proof against any quirk of distribution, but South, with his highly distributional hand, can't be blamed for preferring a suit contract. South was aware of slam possibilities the moment North jump raised the opening bid. However, his doubleton club was a warning against launching into Blackwood. Instead he cuebid his ace of spades. When North showed his club control in response, South settled in a small slam after discovering that one ace was missing.

West led the queen of clubs, and declarer was delighted with his dummy.

Since it seemed that the only loser was the ace of trumps, declarer grabbed the ace of clubs and hurriedly led a trump off the table. West won the ace and continued with the jack of clubs to dummy's king. East ruffed for a one-trick set.

A 5-1 club split is considerably against the odds, so South could consider himself unlucky for running into such a foul distribution. But he had only himself to blame—he should have taken steps to guard against that possibility. Declarer failed to make the most of his assets.

At trick two, declarer should have led a spade to his ace, and then followed by cashing the ace of diamonds and ruffing a diamond in dummy. Now declarer can discard a club from his hand on the king of spades. The contract would then be secure against any break. Declarer now turns his attention to drawing trumps. It makes no difference which defender wins the ace of trumps or how the suit divides. Since all of declarer's and dummy's trumps are high, no return can do any harm.

Daniels Family Plans Reunion

The annual reunion of the Daniels clan will be held Aug. 19 at 4:30 p.m. at the United Methodist Church in Wanchese.

Sen. Melvin R. Daniels Jr., a member of the family, announced that this year the family would honor East Carolina University and its importance to eastern North Carolina, especially the Daniels family.

"Daniels Day was started on Roanoke Island 48 years ago by the late Josephus Daniels, editor of The News and Observer, and the late Melvin R. Daniels Sr., Dare County's veteran register of deeds. The event, which is open to the public, has now grown to be one of the nation's largest family gatherings.

Clan president Archie Daniels of Eden invites all ECU alumni to pack a picnic basket and join in a picnic on the church grounds. Music and entertainment is to be provided by Pearl Scharff and Rena Tillett.

For Disney Animations, Time Is 'Before Mickey' And 'After Mickey'

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Born as a stiff, paunchy little water fowl, Donald Duck had become a spluttering, raving international star by the time he went to war in 1942.

Now the irascible duck is a star among stars in the current Disney animation exhibition at the Whitney Museum of American Art, which focuses on the prewar and wartime years at the Walt Disney Studios. In one phenomenal decade, the Disney animators created Mickey Mouse, Goofy, Pluto, the Silly Symphonies and the first feature-length cartoons.

"In animation, time is b.m. and a.m. — before Mickey and after Mickey," said Greg Ford, guest curator of the exhibition.

Referring to the evolution of Disney technique, he said: "You look at Steamboat Willie (the first Mickey Mouse talkie in 1928) and then Pinocchio (1940). It is absurd how much happened in just 10 years."

The Whitney's second floor has been transformed into a big, dark rumpus room where adults and tots jockey for position around television screens showing the Seven Dwarfs or Dumbo. Drawings cover the walls, and cartoons play twice a day in a small theater.

Ford, a 32-year-old New Yorker, said he wanted to demonstrate that Disney was not a one-man show, but a big band in which many talented animators played distinctive solos.

In the 1934 cartoon

"Orphan's Benefit," animator Dick Lundy invented Donald's "fighting mad" pose, in which a squawking duck hops up and down, holding one arm out in a stiff jab and swinging the other menacingly.

Among Ford's favorite solos:

—Vladimir Tytla's sense of dramatic musculature and body mass in drawing Stromboli, the corpulent puppeteer in Pinocchio.

—The subtle arm motion of Mickey Mouse by Frank Thomas in "The Brave Little Tailor" (1938).

—Lundy's three-minute dance between the spider and the fly in "Woodland Cafe" (1937).

—Pluto tangled in flypaper in "Playful Pluto" (1934), drawn by Norm Ferguson. Ford said it is the first cartoon sequence which shows the character "thinking."

The flypaper scene is dissected in a series of sketches retrieved from Disney archives for the Whitney exhibit.

"Some people think I am taking the magic out of it. I don't think so," Ford said. "The more I look at it the more magical it seems, the great pains to seem effortless."

"I have an interest in identifying as many animators as I can, because to this day people don't know what they did."

As a kid, Ford confessed, he preferred the Warner Brothers' Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck.

STAR AMONG STARS ... Cartoon character Donald Duck is a star among stars in the current Walt Disney animation exhibition at New York's Whitney Museum of American Art. The exhibition focuses on the prewar and wartime years at Walt Disney Studios. (AP Laserphoto)

"Disney always seemed too precious to me," he said. "I started getting interested in Disney when I got interested in animation, about 10 years ago."

The show includes very little of Disney's post-war work. A strike by animators in 1941 marked the end of the first golden era at Disney Studios, and although many animators returned to finish their contracts, they later drifted to other studios, Ford said.

"I like the wartime cartoons because everyone is at the height of his powers, but the films are very casual,"

Ford said.

Donald Duck drew several wartime assignments, but Ford could not recall Mickey ever going to war. Minnie Mouse did her bit by saving bacon drippings in "Out of the Frying Pan," and Goofy sank most of the Japanese navy, and the Rising Sun, too, in "How to be a Sailor."

In "The Old Army Game" of 1942, Donald is a GI who believes he's been seen in half in a scrape with a sadistic sergeant. Reduced to tears by the illusion of his haloed hindquarters ascending to heaven, Donald contemplates suicide before locating his legs again.

The same Saturday afternoon audience which roared at Donald's double amputation was hushed after seeing "Education for Death," a 1943 propaganda film about Nazi education.

The animators make their case with riveting transmutations — a crucifix is warped into a swastika-studded dagger, a Bible becomes Mein Kampf. Worse, a big-eyed boy who loved bunnies becomes a little thug who cheers for foxes, finally to become a hulking robot in Hitler's legions. The last scene transforms the ranks of soldiers into ranks of crosses, stretching on to the horizon.

Donald was back that same year to play a German munitions worker in "Der Fuehrer's Face." Starving, overworked, goaded by loudspeakers, constantly interrupted by the imperative of saluting images of Hitler, Donald is captive in a state so totalitarian that six bayonets threaten every time he wavers.

An oafish German band puts music to his misery: "When Hitler says we are the master race, we go 'hell, hell,' in the Fuehrer's face." — a song which was a million-seller for Spike Jones.

But it's all a bad dream. Donald wakes up in America and plants a duck kiss on a little Statue of Liberty. The final image is of a tomato splattering — on the Fuehrer's face.

Dereks Get Last Tarzan Laugh From Box Office

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — After having received some of the sourest film reviews of the season, John and Bo Derek are enjoying the last laugh.

Trade publication advertisements are trumpeting the box-office figures for "Tarzan, The Ape Man" — $20,428,716 in the first 17 days of release, including the biggest three-day New York opening in MGM history.

The first week's take of $10 million from 930 theaters also proved an MGM record, and that didn't include New York City, where bookings were not available until Aug. 7. Tarzan opened later in New York than in other cities.

In their offices at CBS Studio Center, the Dereks were elated. John, the director, said: "We've been vindicated. The public understood what we were trying to do, even if the critics didn't."

What he and his wife, who was both producer and star, were trying to do was make a comedy out of the Tarzan legend. Most reviewers weren't amused, and the notices were scathing.

Vincent Canby of The New York Times wrote that "Tarzan, The Ape Man" is the kind of movie that might seem funny when seen after several martinis. Viewed stone-sober, it's a movie of mere squirms than screams.

Daily Variety's review said, "This endless R-rated romp through the jungle, lacking any focus, fun or excitement (sexual or otherwise), seems merely a reason for husband John (Derek) to find another 1,001 ways to photograph wife Bo in varying stages of undress."

But the Dereks found another source for reviews. They taped interviews with moviegoers emerging from "Tarzan" at a Century City theater. Excerpts will be used for TV previews in this country and Europe, Derek said.

"The results were fantastic," he said. "Of course, it was hard for the people to be interviewed by the star of the movie, but they responded positively. One woman said she left her children at home because of the publicity about the nudity."

Disney's Jewels

Walt Disney, the world's master of animation, required that each of the 1440 drawings needed for a single minute of animated film be "a little jewel." Once in his quest for perfection Disney assigned an artist to apply makeup to Snow White's face in more than 50,000 drawings. Later, he spent today's equivalent of $200,000 to achieve a sense of depth in "Pinocchio's" opening seconds. Disney believed in doing things "the proper way" no matter what the cost. As a result, his feature films took years to produce and his studio often flirted with bankruptcy. Animated Disney masterpieces, like this drawing, are now on display at the Whitney Museum in New York City.

DO YOU KNOW — What was Walt Disney's first feature-length animated film?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Britain, France, and the U.S. controlled West Berlin after World War Two.

Voyager Closes In on Saturn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Man's last chance in the foreseeable future to look closely at Saturn is nearing as the Voyager 2 spaceship rapidly closes in on the famous ringed planet, scientists say.

Voyager 2, heading for an Aug. 25 close encounter, will send back even better pictures and more details of the rings than were produced by the spectacular fly-by of its sister craft nine months ago, project scientists said Thursday.

The hardy little craft, launched almost four years ago, is almost 950 million miles from Earth, heading toward Saturn at 35,000 mph.

The scientists, promising more than just a ret of Voyager 1's successful pass, said they will look in detail at some of the previous, puzzling discoveries.

They also will try to gather all the new data they can before the craft moves back into the void because, as far as they know, it's their last chance.

The United States has planned no new deep space missions to follow the successful $500 million Voyager program, and the Soviet Union has never sent a craft to the outer planets.

Dr. Edward Stone, chief Voyager scientist, said Voyager 2 is the last planned mission to Saturn and there may not be another opportunity to study the planet in detail for a generation. But in this case, the last may be the best, he added.

"This time we are coming in above the ring plane on the lighted side of the rings," Stone told a National Aeronautics and Space Administration briefing.

"The pictures should be even more spectacular than the ones from Voyager 1, which went beneath the ring plane and got images mostly from the dark side of the rings," he said.

Scientists said Voyager 2 will get closer, more detailed pictures of some of the moons seen only at a distance by the first craft. It also will get pictures of the moon Phoebe, which was missed on the first mission.

"We are fortunate to have another spacecraft to look at Saturn," said Dr. Bradford Smith, leader of the picture-taking team. "With the second spacecraft, we have an opportunity to plan the mission better and get details of things only hinted at in the first mission."

But the encounter won't be the last stop for Voyager 2. If all goes well, Saturn's powerful gravity will fling the robot ship onto a path that will take it to Uranus in 1986 and onward to Neptune in 1989.

Reagan Says Deficits May Exceed Projections

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Now that he has signed his tax and spending reductions into law, President Reagan concedes that future deficits may be larger than expected and says he will just have to find deeper cuts to balance the federal budget.

After signing the tax-cut and budget bills Thursday, Reagan said Americans also should "watch for a sagging economy for the next few months."

Reagan said he remains confident interest rates will begin to decrease toward year's end but cautioned that the tax and budget bills won't take effect until October and added, "Our own projections have been that for the next several months this soft and soggy economy is going to continue."

The president, wearing faded blue denim trousers and jacket, said he still hopes to balance the federal budget by 1984 — but only after making further spending cuts for the 1983 and 1984 fiscal years.

The administration has projected a $55.6 billion budget deficit for fiscal 1981, which ends Sept. 30, and $42.5 billion for 1982.

"Now the possibility of increasing deficits in the coming years over our previous figures are due in part to not getting totally what we had asked for in the budget cuts," Reagan said Thursday.

Another reason for ballooning deficits, he added, is "that the tax package finally came out with additional reductions," which he embraced in an effort to outbid House Democrats for support.

Reagan said he would "continue to work on this and work for more budget cuts and it just means that we're going to have to try to get more additional budget cuts than we might have had to get before."

That drive begins next week when Reagan meets in Los Angeles with budget director David A. Stockman to begin plotting the next round of budget cuts.

At a signing ceremony at Reagan's fog-shrouded ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains, the president said the tax and budget bills represent a historic turnaround in the way government does business.

Under the legislation, a 25 percent cut in taxes begins Oct. 1, when the amount withheld from most workers' paychecks will drop about 5 percent. A 10 percent reduction in withholding will come next July, with another 10 percent cut a year later. Overall, individual and business income taxes will be slashed $749 billion through the 1986 fiscal year — the largest tax cut in the nation's history.

At the same time, planned spending on domestic programs will be reduced an estimated $130.5 billion in the next three years.

Reagan said he is counting on seeing "people begin to have more money in their pockets from their earnings (while) the lowered expenditures of government begin taking effect."

The signing ceremony marked Reagan's first public appearance since he arrived at his ranch Aug. 6 for a four-week vacation.

Reagan Suggests 1982 Summit

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With President Reagan suggesting that they "sit down sometime," a summit meeting with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev is a definite possibility next year, an administration source says.

Reagan told reporters Thursday at his California ranch that he has written Brezhnev suggesting a summit, probably dealing with arms control, to reduce tensions between the two superpowers.

While Reagan gave no hint when or where the summit might be held, a well-informed government source said it would be within a year.

"My impression is that they are talking about next year, maybe a year from now," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

He said U.S. officials are aware that the 74-year-old Brezhnev, who is known to have health problems, might not maintain his position as Soviet leader many more years.

When Brezhnev steps down, "new genies will be coming out of the bottle" and probably would not want to hold a summit until they have solidified their positions at the pinnacle of the Soviet hierarchy, the source said. That could be several years, he added.

The last U.S.-Soviet summit was in June 1979 in Vienna between former President Carter and Brezhnev.

Brezhnev proposed a summit with Reagan last February, but Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has said that would not be possible until relations between the two countries improved at lower levels.

Reagan said Thursday, however, he told the Soviet leader that "maybe we might sit down sometime and see what it was the people really wanted."

"I made a suggestion at one time in correspondence with Brezhnev that sometimes...it seems that the government sometimes gets in the way of the people," Reagan said. "And I think that the people of all countries have a great many things in common, a desire to raise their families, a desire to choose their occupation, to have some control over their lives."

He added: "I doubt that the people have ever started a war and so I made that suggestion" to talk.

The president said there would have to be preliminary meetings at the ministerial level "before we're ready to go in and actually negotiate legitimate arms reduction to remove this nightmare that hangs over the world today of strategic weapons."

The source said he did not think Reagan meant to imply he would negotiate an arms agreement personally. Rather, the source said, it is more likely Reagan and Brezhnev would meet to put "their seal of approval" on any agreements negotiated at lower levels.

Reagan's discussion of his letter to Brezhnev came two days after Haig told the American Bar Association in New Orleans that the United States is interested in establishing a "more stable and beneficial relationship" with the Soviet Union.

That speech was billed in advance by the State Department as a major foreign policy statement and did not contain the kind of strident anti-Soviet rhetoric that marked the Reagan administration approach in its first few months in office.

The administration is committed to beginning negotiations with the Soviets later this year on limiting deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Mrs. Anne Duffus is vice president; Eunice Pierce is secretary; Reid Hooper is treasurer; and Eugene Rogers is assistant treasurer.

James Dupree is the outgoing president.

Named to the finance committee were Reid Hooper, chairman, Malcolm Howard, vice chairman, Thomas Taft, Robert L. Martin, William Manson, and Lenward Thomas; to buildings and grounds — Kenneth Dews, chairman, Lynn Gower, vice chairman, Ross Persinger, Roscoe Norfleet, Jack S. Warren and James Dupree; to personnel — Ed Walker, chairman, Eugene Rogers, vice chairman, Wilton (Rusty) Duke Jr., Dr. Andrew Best and Edward Carter; to special gifts — Morris Brody, chairman, Anne Duffus, vice chairman; Irving Smith, Russell Griffin, and Chris Farrior; to nominating — Anne Duffus, chairman, Edward Carter and Lenward Thomas; to industrial advisory — Fred Swayze, chairman, John Huber, Ed Morris, Ernie Berg and Mike Whaley.

The Department of Public Transportation has given the center a grant for four new vans equipped with two-way radios, it was announced. These will be paid for with 80 percent federal funds, 10 percent state and 10 percent county, according to the Pitt County Transportation for Human Services.

The battery terminal lug equipment had to be returned to Richmond for redesigning, it was explained. The Vocational Center has the exclusive rights to produce all battery terminal lugs for the General Services Administration, which is worth over $1 million yearly. The program will be used for training and employment of the severely handicapped.

The picture-framing contract, under the guidance of Ray Harrell, has had several changes made and is now producing about 2,000 per day. It is profitable and provides training potential as well as work for some severely handicapped.

Andy Frith, director of the CETA program, has presented the Vocational Center's proposal for 1981-82. The executive director has been encouraged that it has a good chance of being funded, since the center ranks in the top 10 percent in the state and has more than 85 percent placement.

The staff will sponsor a pig-cooking contest and barbecue Aug. 28 and 29 at the Pitt County Fairgrounds. The net profit will go toward the housing and recreation building under construction. Plates will sell for $2.75 each. A yard sale and merchandise demonstrations by various businesses will be an added feature, as will all-day entertainment.

Tom Brown, Human Resources chief architect from the Atlanta Regional Office, was here recently and said that the housing-recreation building is soundly constructed and that financial records are in excellent condition.

Morris Brody reported that about $400,000 more needs to be raised for the building project. Interested persons and organizations are urged to contact the center, P.O. Box 613, to learn how to take part in this endeavor.

The Center does not have an industrial engineer and Procter & Gamble is giving the time of Fred Swayze, a center board member, to make an in-depth study of the center's entire production program as to inventory, production, cost and purchases.

The cutback in federal and state funds has adversely affect the center's total program, it was reported. The recycling program suffered a loss because of the depression in price of corrugated and plastic materials. These are now showing a more favorably, however. The center will purchase two-liter plastic bottles, aluminum and steel (blended metal), newsprint, corrugated paper, and plastic over the scales. Donations of these materials are appreciated. Place these materials in the center's collection houses around town or take them to the center. Individuals and companies that donate are eligible for tax deduction.

The center served more than 500 persons in its three programs last year — vocational rehabilitation, adult day activity and CETA. It has placed 76 in competitive employment in the last 12 months.

Appreciation was expressed to James Dupree for the many accomplishments during his time of leadership as president.

Carcinogen Found In Parsnips

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parsnips have been found to contain a lot of a chemical that can cause genetic mutation and cancer in animals, but the scientist who discovered that says there is no immediate reason for people to stop eating them.

In a study published today in Science magazine, U.S. Agriculture Department scientists said parsnip roots contain high levels of psoralens which are not destroyed in normal cooking.

The report said scientists have known for years that parsnips contain psoralens, naturally occurring chemicals known to cause genetic mutation and cancer in animals when exposed to ultraviolet light. Until now, though, no one knew how much, the study said.

"On the basis of the amounts of psoralens found in the parsnip samples studied here, it is apparent that consumption of moderate quantities of this vegetable by man can result in the intake of appreciable amounts of psoralens," the scientists said.

Therefore, the researchers concluded, "psoralen-containing food plants may present some toxicological risk to man."

They added, however, "that it is not possible to accurately assess that risk, if it exists, on the basis of the information available to date."

Dr. G. Wayne Ivie, who collaborated with Douglas Holt and Marcellus Ivey on the report, said in a telephone interview that just because it is not possible to assess a potential risk does not mean that a risk exists.

"The last thing I would recommend is that people stop eating parsnips," said Ivie, a chemist at the Agricultural Research Service laboratory in College Station, Texas. "People have been eating parsnips for years with no ill effects we know about. The potential is there, but I think it's rather small."

The researchers said they tested parsnips — a white root vegetable that closely resembles its cousin, the carrot — obtained from a local supermarket.

The samples contained total concentrations of 40 parts per million of the three types of psoralens tested. More than 100 psoralens are known and if some of the untested types are in the vegetables, the concentration could be higher, Ivie said.

Peeling the vegetable before cooking would reduce the psoralens in the portion served by about 30 percent, the researchers reported.

Carrots contained less of the chemical than the smallest amount the test method could detect, about 0.3 part per million.

Because of their action when exposed to light, plant psoralens have been used for centuries to treat some skin disorders, and are still used in some cases of psoriasis or vitiligo, a skin disease characterized by loss of color.

The researchers found that a two-ounce serving of cooked parsnip root contained 4 to 5 milligrams of total psoralens, equivalent to a therapeutic dose for vitiligo.

Hunt Says Strings Still Tied To Federal Money

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Reagan administration budget cuts have not taken the "strings" off remaining federal aid to states, Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday.

In a speech to about 100 Robeson County officials at the Pinecrest Country Club, Hunt said the major effect of the budget cuts was the change from direct funding for welfare programs to block grants, which must be indirectly funneled to localities by the state government.

"I am sorry to report that a lot of strings have not been taken off block grants," Hunt said.

"Block grants were something we had been hoping for," he said. "Local governments can put the money where it is most needed if they (federal officials) take the strings off it."

Hunt said the most important step the federal government must take is to cut out

"the red tape, the nit-picking, costly, burdensome regulations from Washington."

While hailing the restructuring of government called for by the Reagan administration, Hunt reminded the officials that "federalism is a two-way street."

"It won't do for Washington to simply turn over the responsibilities to the states, without giving us the powers and the flexibility that we need to carry them out," he said. "What good are block grants, for example, if they come so tightly wrapped in red tape that the states can't make the changes that are needed?"

"We may get the budget cuts — up to almost 40 percent when you account for inflation — without the flexibility we need to minimize the hurt to people," Hunt added.

A 10 percent cut could be handled by reducing waste and red tape, but the cuts coming down are far too large to be absorbed without trouble, he said.

American Firms Going Into Jungles For Gold

By DAVID EINHSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Hollywood scriptwriter would have a hard time matching the story about to unfold in the wilds of a Pacific island.

Two American companies plan to take on the jungle to mine an estimated 2 million ounces of gold and 1 billion tons of copper ore.

In a $1.5 billion project announced this week, Bechtel of San Francisco and Morrison-Knudsen International of Boise, Idaho, plan to carve their way through 100 miles of rain forest to reach Mount Fubilan, a remote 7,100-foot peak on Papua New Guinea north of Australia.

Bechtel, believed to be the world's largest engineering and construction firm, says the mountain is rich with copper and capped by gold worth $800 million at today's price.

The plan, called the Ok Tedi (pronounced awk teddy) Gold and Copper Project, will take a decade to complete and present considerable engineering challenges, said Bechtel spokesman Larry Thomas.

"In terms of going into a remote area and building everything from the road to support facilities and the mine itself, it represents a significant challenge to people in the business," he said.

"The way it measures most impressively is in the sheer challenge and difficulty of construction and logistics."

Construction will begin this month on an access road to project areas such as the mine, a processing plant, a hydroelectric generating plant and a town site for 1,250 workers. Eventually, 3,000 workers, most of them nationals, will work on the project on the slopes of Mount Fubilan, where rainfall averages 300 to 500 inches a year.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, AUG. 15, 1981

YOUR DAILY
Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have much emotional warmth now and you're eager to make conditions at home more comfortable. Show loved one the depth of your affection instead of taking this person for granted.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be more thoughtful of family members today and try to make improvements to your surroundings. Evening is fine for entertaining.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Keep appointments with persons who can help you advance in career matters. Attend the social tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Contact a financial expert and discuss how you can have a greater income in the future. Catch up on your reading.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good day to study your environment and to make plans for improvement. Think constructively.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You are now able to carry through with responsibilities of a personal nature which you have delayed in doing for a long time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact close ties who can help where personal ambitions are concerned. Attend a group affair tonight and have fun.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day to handle a civic affair. Take care of a small credit matter without delay and avoid trouble. Find a better way to advance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Bring those ideas you have to an expert and find out how to commercialize on them. Avoid one who wastes your time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Doing something kind for those who have done you favors in the past is only right. Thing along constructive lines.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Discussing mutual aims with an associate can bring about a far better understanding. Make new plans for the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Forget about going on worthless tangents and get busy on regular chores that have accumulated. Take health treatments.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contact close friends and make plans for recreation. Show more kindness to neighbors who have helped you in the past.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who needs to be encouraged in order to break through a wall of shyness that is in this nature. Then, this could become a most successful life, particularly in the field of selling. Don't neglect ethical training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Soviet Summer Means Rush For Vacations

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet constitution provides that every citizen has "a right to rest and leisure." Each summer, including this one, citizens stand on that constitutional right — many of them in a line.

In Yalta, the popular Black Sea resort, a million more visitors show up than the public facilities can handle, forcing vacationers to scramble for rooms in private homes.

Individual Soviet families have the right to buy their own plane or train tickets and go wherever they want in the Soviet Union on their vacations. But such trips can be difficult.

"There are so many people competing for tickets and hotels that getting a reservation is a problem," said one young Moscow worker. "It's better if you can get a pre-organized package."

These packages are available from trade unions and government travel agencies. About 55 million people participated in trade-union package tours last year; many others couldn't get bookings because of limited facilities.

One Moscow travel bureau sells a 20-day Volga River cruise, with sightseeing in 11 cities and all meals, starting at 90 rubles, the equivalent of $118, or about half an average worker's monthly pay.

Many places of work organize their own resort packages, for as little as 60 rubles ($78) for room and board for 14 days. Lodging, however, may be in spartan hostels with four or more people to a room.

Workers who can't get a package can travel to a resort area and look around for a bed in a private home, often for about 2.50 rubles ($3.30) a day.

Vacationers with health problems can seek admission to medical treatment resorts like the Svetlana Sanitarium for 320 men, women and children in northern Moscow. A 24-day visit there normally costs 45 rubles ($59).

At the center, recently shown off to foreign newsmen, children with hyperactivity and insomnia are offered "electrosleep." A weak current that cannot be felt is passed through their heads by electrodes, supposedly regulating their bodies' electrical systems and improving sleep patterns.

Other treatment for children includes romping in a swimming pool — labeled "hydrokinesis therapy" by the terminology-conscious staff. Adults receive inhalation therapy, get massages as they lie partially underwater in bathtubs, and are encouraged to rest in the open air — "climatological therapy," officials call it.

Healthy children spend all or part of their vacations at Young Pioneer Camps that host 14 million children a year.

University and technical school students often spend summers in student construction units building rural houses or other projects and making pocket money. Students still trying to get into a prestigious institute, however, often spend much of the summer deep in textbooks, preparing for August entrance exams.

Restaurants and discotheques are crowded in the cities, although the press complains that discos which only play music foster ideological laziness. A responsible discotheque, the papers say, should teach something — at least dancing.

Perhaps mindful of such criticism, Moscow's former Olympic Disco one recent night offered an announcer in a bow tie who urged new steps on the dancers.

"Now bend from the waist," he cried. Then he added, surveying the floor with disappointment, "You're not bending from the waist. You're not doing what I said."

For his audience, vacation clearly meant not having to take orders from anyone.

Junior Achievers Believe In Free Market

By MASHA HAMILTON
Associated Press Writer

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Who'd have thought that making gumball machines could earn a big profit — nearly a 274 percent return on invested capital after just five months?

Ask the B.G. Vending Co. of Denver, a bunch of high-school kids who did just that in their first venture in the American capitalist system.

"Free enterprise is great because anyone who has incentive and a goal and a dream can make it come true, if they just push," said Shani Kramer, vice president for manufacturing.

She and her 30 partners bought shares in the tiny company, purchased raw materials and hired workers to assemble and sell the gumball jars, kept the books, paid their taxes — and turned a tidy profit.

The kids who made B.G. Vending Co. work are among the 400,000 students nationwide who take part each year in the Junior Achievement program.

Miss Kramer and her partners from Arvada West High School in Denver are among 17 finalists competing here this week for national honors as the top Junior Achievers of 1981.

In the process, they and 3,300 other teen-agers are getting an opportunity to meet leading business executives and discuss capitalism with the men and women who make America work.

About 350 business executives came to Indiana University on Wednesday for the 38th annual National Junior Achievers Conference, mostly aboard corporate aircraft, for informal seminars with the youngsters.

"If we could build this up, get about 2 million high school kids going through this program, we'd have no problem in this country with what the general public feels toward business," said Roy Little, retired founder of Textron Industries and a Junior Achievement sponsor.

"Right now, you know, the general attitude isn't too good."

But among successful Junior Achievers, there's no doubt capitalism is OK.

Miss Kramer's attitude is typical: "You have to have competition to keep everybody working harder and harder to make themselves a success," she said. "Anybody can make something of themselves if they really want to."

Her company produced and sold bubble gum machines made out of fruit jars. The five officers were paid $2.50 an hour; regular employees got 40 cents an hour. And taxes — actually a contribution to the local Junior Achievement program — amounted to $100.

The final dividend was $9.60 a share.

Local Group Attends Meet

Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., held its 36th national convention in Washington, D.C., August 1-5. Activities were concentrated in the Sheraton Washington Hotel and the Washington Hilton Hotel.

Highlights of the convention included an Ecumenical service Sunday, Aug. 2. This service was culminated with a reunion march down First and Pennsylvania Avenue, over the same route taken by Delta's Founders for women's suffrage.

A salute to the black performing arts was also on the agenda. During this program five Osceola awards were presented in memory of Osceola McCarthy Admas, one of Delta's 22 founders.

Sorority members attending from the Greenville Alumnae Chapter were, Argie Cannon, Mrs. Paulette Dove, Lillian Jones, Mrs. Doris Lee, Jean E. Mills, Mrs. Lillian Powell, Deborah Rhodes and Mrs. Gladys Sanders.

Mothers Freed From Prison

PARIS (AP) — Twenty-one imprisoned mothers, including West German automobile heiress Christina von Opel, have been freed from jail by French President Francois Mitterrand.

"This presidential amnesty for the women is also an amnesty for the children," Mitterrand said in a communique Wednesday. Most of the women had served two-thirds of their terms, it said.

Ms. Von Opel, 31, has a 6-year-old daughter and has been serving five years in prison for a drug conviction.
