Bani-Sadr: Khomeini Used Hostages For Power

PARIS (AP) — Former Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was quoted Saturday as saying Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini confided to him that he used the U.S. hostage crisis to fortify domestic standing of the ruling Islamic clergy.

"The Imam clearly explained to me the aim of the affair: the Americans do not want our regime to establish itself, therefore we will keep the hostages until the adoption of the constitution and the presidential and parliamentary elections in Iran," Bani-Sadr told the French news agency Agence France Presse.

"His objective was not anti-imperialist and anti-American as was thought," Bani-Sadr said. "He used the hostages to re-establish despotism, or rather, the dictatorship of the mullahs."

Fifty-two U.S. citizens were held in captivity in Iran for 444 days beginning Nov. 4, 1979 following seizure of the U.S. Embassy.

The interview with Bani-Sadr was conducted Friday night at his residence north of Paris. He escaped to France July 29.

He was granted political asylum on the condition he refrain from making public declarations. But the interview by the French news agency was an indication the government was easing its restriction.

The interview came after last week's evacuation of 107 French citizens from Iran. Bani-Sadr told AFP the French government had requested he remain silent during the past several weeks so as not to endanger French nationals living in Iran.

Commenting on the seizure of an Iranian gunboat by anti-Khomeini forces Thursday, Bani-Sadr said, "They have created a factory in Iran that produces only explosions and executions and there are no other means to make oneself understood except by these types of acts."

Bani-Sadr said unless the violence is stopped it could lead to civil war in Iran.

The French-educated Bani-Sadr said the principles of Khomeini today were vastly different from those he espoused while he himself was in exile in France before the revolution that overthrew Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

"Khomeini must realize that an authoritarian and despotic system can only produce explosions," Bani-Sadr said. "He's wrong if he thinks he can put an end to it by executions, as in the days of the shah.

"It was difficult to foresee that the Imam would permit the executions of 12-and-13-year-old children and urge the people to spy on each other and denounce each other," Bani-Sadr said.

However, he said he had no regrets about participating in the Iranian revolution. He said he was ready to return to Iran if Khomeini re-established liberties that conformed to promises made while he was in exile in France.

"I fear the worst," Bani-Sadr said on Iran's future. "A desperate and torn people can prefer a dictator."

Private Hospital Talk Is Revived

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A move by a group of local physicians to build and operate an outpatient surgical facility here apparently has spurred talk of the possibility of establishing a private hospital.

Although such a possibility does exist, several local doctors last week said they know of no plans to create a private hospital.

"I'm sure there is interest," Dr. Kelly Wallace, chairman of the Pitt County Medical Society, said. "Our biggest problem is beds."

With the number of physicians in the Greenville area doubled over the past few years, Pitt County Memorial Hospital "is not a community hospital anymore. It's a regional medical center. Eastern North Carolina Memorial Hospital is really what we've become," Wallace said.

The purpose of a private hospital would be to provide beds for patients of physicians in private practice. The present 436 beds at Pitt Memorial stay pretty well full. And it is expected that the additional 120 beds in the new bed tower, which is set to open before the end of the year, will fill rapidly.

"Right now, we don't see any threat," PCMH director Jack Richardson said of the possibility of a private hospital. "When we get the beds open (in the new bed tower) it will take care of the pressure from the doctors for some place to put the patients.

"The community has responded with a lot of support," Richardson said of the present medical facility. "As long as the facility is able to meet the needs, it's not necessary for a private facility."

According to Wallace, "We're having more and more problems getting patients in (the hospital). There have been some occasions in the past year when even emergency patients were sent somewhere else.

"We're experiencing growing pains. The new bed tower is going to be full in no time at all. There are so many physicians and patients to take care of," Wallace emphasized.

However, he added, if there is any serious effort to start a private hospital, "I don't know it. We've had a hard enough time getting beds for the hospital and medical school through

Key Advisory Board Calls For Land-Based Missiles

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the prestigious Defense Science Board have recommended that the Reagan administration go ahead with the land-based shelter scheme for deploying the MX missile, administration sources said Saturday.

This recommendation, from what is described by Pentagon insiders as "the premier outside advisory group" on technical matters, adds considerable weight to forces opposed to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's reported preference for placing the missile in big airplanes.

The land-mobile system envisions hiding 200 MX missiles among some 4,600 horizontal shelters in the Great Basin area of Utah and Nevada.

Strong opposition to the air-mobile idea has been made clear by the Air Force and by key members of Senate and House committees, including Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was to meet with Reagan Sunday at the president's mountaintop ranch in California, reportedly to argue in favor of staying with the land-based method for deploying the MX.

The New York Times quoted administration officials in its Saturday editions as saying that Haig, a former commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's armed forces, intends to argue that abandoning the land-based plan would create political pressure in Europe that would make it more difficult to deploy new land-based medium-range missiles there.

State Department officials declined Saturday to discuss the substance of what the Haig-Reagan meeting will entail and deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, in California with the president, said only that it is to prepare for Monday's meeting in Los Angeles of the National Security Council.

There are some reports that the administration, facing mounting opposition to the air-mobile idea, might postpone a decision on how to base the MX and propose additional research and development to demonstrate with hardware which deployment scheme would work best.

Weinberger is expected to recommend building 100 B-1 bombers that would incorporate technological advances made since the Carter administration cancelled production of the B-1 four years ago.

He also is believed likely to call for accelerated research on an "advance technology bomber" that could elude Soviet radar. The advanced bomber, referred to as "Stealth," would not be ready until the 1990s, according to most estimates, and the B-1 fleet, which would cost about $18.7 billion, would be expected to fill the gap until then.

The idea of going ahead with development of the Trident II missile is probably the least controversial part of the package.

Kremlin Boosts Aid To Poland

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin will boost financial aid to Poland to help stem the deterioration of that Warsaw Pact nation's economy, the official Tass news agency said after a meeting between President Leonid I. Brezhnev and top Polish leaders.

Moscow has agreed to allow Poland to defer payment on its debts to the Soviet Union and will increase exports of badly needed raw materials and consumer goods, according to the mildly worded joint communique released by Tass.

The text was issued after the departure of Polish Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania and Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski, who spent two days at Brezhnev's summer vacation retreat in the Crimea.

Diplomats in Moscow were watching the meeting, the first between Kania and Brezhnev since last March, for hints of Soviet intentions in Poland. Western sources say the Soviets might intervene in Poland if it is believed that social unrest there threatened the integrity of the Warsaw Pact military alliance.

The communique, offering the first details of the talks, dropped previous expressions of mutual "confidence" that Polish leaders could solve the nation's difficulties.

However, it contained the unexpected aid package, details of which were not released.

In Poland, the nation's debt to the Soviet Union is estimated at $4 billion in a total $23 billion foreign debt. Polish financial officials claim the previous estimate of $27 billion in foreign debt had been reduced by world currency fluctations.

The joint communique praised a recovery program adopted last month at a Polish Communist Party congress, but also spoke of forces "hostile to socialism."

Controllers Say Being Asked To Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of striking air traffic controllers in at least three cities said Saturday their members were being asked by supervisors to say they were frightened into striking and to request reinstatement in their jobs.

The Reagan administration has fired the 12,000 controllers who went on strike Aug. 3 and says it will not take them back.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis has said several times that anyone who can prove he was frightened into not working will be taken back. Fred Farrar, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said Saturday the agency stood by that position but added, "I don't believe these calls (by supervisors) are being made."

Robert Belanger, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization local at Nashua, N.H., said 15 of his members had received such calls, the gist of all of them being: "Come back, all will be forgiven."

The calls came from supervisors, working controllers and retired controllers over the last three days, Belanger said.

In Leesburg, Va., Raymond Steiner of PATCO Local 204 said, "They're telling our people, 'Come in, talk to us, we can take care of you and you'll get off with a couple of days suspension.'"

The Nashua center handles traffic on the approach to Boston airports. The Leesburg center handles the approaches to Washington airports.

David Siegel, Atlanta-based regional vice president for the union, said controllers in Jacksonsville, Fla., had received similar messages. He did not know how many controllers had been contacted.

"They seem to be bouncing around all over with these offers," he said.

PATCO local leaders in Detroit, Columbus, Ohio; Islip, L.I.; Raleigh, N.C. and Baltimore Baltimore all said none of their members had received such calls.

At PATCO headquarters in Washington, spokesman John Dwyer said the reported calls amounted to "union-busting" because "they're being selective in who they call."

Also, he said, the calls revealed "weakness" in the FAA's operation of the air traffic control system with non-strikers, supervisors and military controllers.

Farrar, however, said 75 percent of the nation's commercial flights operated Saturday, about usual for the strike, with "nothing to report."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Saturday that "fewer than 100" controllers had been taken back after declaring that they had been intimidated.

In other aviation matters, the Federal Communications Commission reported one more bogus radio instruction to a pilot to add to the seven reported Friday.

Near Prescott, Ariz., a voice "came on and told the pilot to switch frequencies. An air traffic controller heard it and told the pilot to ignore it," said Janice Langley, FCC spokeswoman.

The FAA and the FCC have both said there is absolutely no evidence that striking controllers have anything to do with the phony insrtructions, and the FAA says no accidents have resulted.

In Miami, an electrician was arrested during a demonstration sponsored by AFL-CIO unions in support of PATCO when, according to U.S. marshals, he refused to move from a driveway he was blocking. Other demonstrators said he simply was trying to pick up a dropped picket sign.

Storm Grows Stronger

MIAMI (AP) — Dennis, an on-again, off-again tropical storm, strengthened again Saturday as it reached the northern coast of Cuba, and forecast warned it could strengthen more and threaten the Florida Keys.

The tropical storm appeared to be reorganizing Saturday night and forecasters said they might issue hurricane warnings for the Keys before daybreak Sunday, even if Dennis hadn't yet reached hurricane strength.

Gale warnings were likely to be issued for the island chain during the night, said Neil Frank, director of the center. The northern coast of Cuba is just 90 miles from Key West, the southernmost of the Florida Keys.

The storm brought heavy rain to western Cuba, the Keys and South Florida on Saturday and more was forecast for Sunday.

The storm lost some power over Cuba, but it was expected to pick up strength from the warm, open water in the Florida Straits and southeastern Gulf of Mexico.

If Dennis' winds reached 74 mph, it would become the first hurricane of the 1981 Atlantic hurricane season.

Local Seeds Set Stage For Melon Battle

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The battle for the title of the world's largest cantaloupe is in full swing this summer, and Greenville is the headquarters for the friendly competition. In the past several weeks, the contender for the title of the biggest cantaloupe has vascillated back and forth between three states.

Officially, the record in the Guiness Book of World Records still shows a grower in Illinois as the title holder. That was for a 39 pound melon grown in the summer of 1980. Earlier this summer the Illinois grower harvested a cantaloupe that topped his 1980 record holder, one weighing 41 pounds. Then, a couple of weeks ago Gene Daughtridge of Rocky Mount picked a cantaloupe that registered in at 43 1/2 pounds, verified by a member of the Edgecombe County Agricultural Extension Office.

Daughtridge's impressive contender was quickly challenged less than two weeks ago when a verified entry from a Mississippi grower tipped the scales at 49 pounds. As of Wednesday, August 12, the top contender is once more back in the hands of Rocky Mount's grower Daughtridge. His latest champion cantaloupe weighs in at a hefty 51 1/2 pound, veritifed by a Nash County Agricultural Extension agent.

"This cantaloupe would have grown to reach maybe as much as 60 pounds," Daughtridge commented, "but I had to pull it early because of a couple of bad spots that would have deteriorated it if I'd waited to pull it."

Whoever the winner may eventually be, Edward Weeks of Tarboro and Greenville will be able to take pride in the victory. It is the hybrid Weeks N.C. Giant variety of cantaloupe that has produced the whopper fruits here, in Illinois and in Mississippi.

"I began developing giant hybrid cantaloupes as well as breeding giant cabbage and watermelon in 1964," Weeks, a Tarboro native commented. "I've been working on breeding these hybrids since then."

Varieties of large size fruits and vegetables developed by Weeks garnered four world records in 1980, Weeks pointed out. "These records are for the largest watermelon at 197 pounds, the world's longest watermelon, measuring four feet, the largest peanut at three and one-half inches, and the Illinois cantaloupe."

In December 1980, Weeks made a decision to open a walk-in seed store in Greenville, on Dickinson Avenue. "This is more central," Weeks said. "My store here is now the only outlet for my seeds."

Weeks and Daughtridge both have teen-age sons who provide needed summer time help. Wayne Daughtridge lends a hand to his father who grows grows tomatoes, cantaloupes and pumpkins, "not for a living, but for something I enjoy doing," Daughtridge remarked.

Weeks says his sons, Van and Ken, are "a big help to me, but they'll soon be back in school."

Since the photograph of the 43.5 pound cantaloupe went out from Greenville over the Associated Press photo wire a couple of weeks ago, both Weeks and Daughtridge have been receiving inquiries about seeds for the giant cantaloupe. "Ijust received a letter from Georgia yesterday," Daughtridge said.

And one of the questions most frequently asked is "What about the flavor of a cantaloupe this size?" To this Weeks replies. "That forty three and a half pound cantaloupe had a fine flavor. It was pulled fully ripe from the vine and the flavor was as sweet as a regular size cantaloupe. Seven of us ate from it, and still had some left over for another eating."

A CONTENDER ... for a new world record as the largest cantaloupe is this 51.5 pound Weeks N.C. Giant variety developed by Edward Weeks, proprietor of Weeks Seed Co., Greenville. The huge fruit was grown by Gene Daughtridge of Rocky Mount, whose avocation is gardening. Shown with the big cantaloupe are, left to right, Edward Weeks, Wayne Daughtridge and Gene Daughtridge. Police Hurt In Liverpool Rioting

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Two policemen were stabbed and 13 were injured by bricks and stones Saturday as violence erupted again in Liverpool's Toxteth district during a mass march against "police harassment," authorities reported.

One officer was in serious condition after being stabbed in the stomach when he tried to apprehend a black youth who was among a number who had broken off from the main march, Police Inspector Bernard Keegan said.

Keegan said the fighting began outside the old police headquarters on Hope Street that was vacated in a move to new headquarters in another part of the city only hours before the afternoon march got underway.

Wright, who reported no arrests, said police deliberately kept a low profile during the march, which followed rioting in Toxteth last month.

"It is right to say that those stewarding the march did all they could to prevent disorder spreading further," said Wright.

One of the injured policemen was hurt as youths, blacks and whites, returning from the march stoned a police station. A police car was also stoned after the march, but later the city was reported quiet.

Extra police had been brought in and lined the three-mile route of a procession organized by the Liverpool Defense Committee, an organization formed by the city's black community following riots early last month.

The demonstration had been called to protest alleged police harassment and to demand the dismissal of Kenneth Oxford, chief constable for Merseyside which covers the Liverpool area.

the (Eastern Carolina) Health Systems Agency. I think it would be very difficult to get approval for additional beds in a private hospital at this point in spite of the fact we need more beds."

Wallace continued, "I think a private hospital would benefit this community and this area ... not as something that would compete with the medical school, but as something that would give us more flexibility in taking care of patients and the physician makeup of the community.

"There aren't but so many beds and that influences everyone. But I think that in order to really come up with a reasonable impact kind of study — whether a private hospital is needed — you need to put some facts and figures on paper," something that apparently hasn't been done yet.

Citing efforts to get the "outpatient surgical facility off the ground," Wallace said, "We're going to grow as a medical community ... going to have to have all these things available to us. We need a broad spectrum of potential in the delivery of medical care.

"I think the outpatient surgical facility adds to that. I think a private hospital would add to that."

Dr. Jim Carter, one of 18 local physicians involved in the proposed outpatient surgical center, which he emphasized "is not overlapping in reality" with the present hospital, said: "I think there will be a need for additional beds. I think that the new bed tower will be very rapidly filled and there will be a need for additional hospital beds shortly."

But the question of whether the need can "best be filled by a private hospital or Pitt Memorial can't be answered at this point.

Carter pointed out that when the new hospital opened several years ago, there was some discussion with a private firm about purchasing the old facility, now the Pitt County Office Building, for use as a private hospital.

The question of a private medical facility "has been seriously discussed in the past." But according to Carter, there is "no formal movement at this time."

Death Investigated

Greenville Fire/Rescue officials are investigating the death of a Greenville man Friday night as the result of an apartment fire.

According to department officials, a call was received at 11:20 p.m. to the Scottish Manor Apartments at 311 Lewis St., apartment 14.

Firemen arriving found the front room of the apartment full of smoke and a man inside the room. The man was identified by records as Hugh Gordon Bland. Rescue members administering first aid rushed Bland to Pitt Memorial Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Investigators said the fire was around a couch where Bland's body was found.

Fire damage was estimated as medium, while smoke damage was listed as heavy.

A neighbor, identifed as Debroah Walters of apartment 125 noticed flames coming from the apartment and summonded the fire department

Mass Held For Child

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of people crowded St. Maurice Catholic Church here Saturday morning for the funeral of 6-year-old Adam Walsh, whose head was found floating in a canal last week.

The Rev. Michael Conboy, a cousin from Rochester, N.Y., celebrated a Mass of the Angels for Adam Walsh, who was abducted July 27 from the Hollywood Mall.

"So long for now, Cooter," Conboy said, his voice breaking over Adam's nickname. "We'll see you again. We promise."

Many of the mourners didn't know Adam, but were touched by the two-week search that ended Monday when his head was found in a canal along the Florida Turnpike in Indian River County.

Japanese Hold Special Rite Marking Surrender

TOKYO (UPI) — Emperor Hirohito prayed at a flower-bedecked altar today for world peace and Japan's 3 million war dead in ceremonies marking the 36th anniversary of the nation's World War II surrender.

Joining the lean, bespectacled Emperor at the Budokan (Martial Arts) Hall near the moated Imperial Palace were Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and about 7,500 government officials and bereaved relatives.

"Thirty-six years have passed since the end of the war and I still feel pain over the great number of people who died and the sufferings of their families," Hirohito said.

"I mourn the war dead, and together with our people, pray for world peace and the development of our nation," he added.

The 80-year-old emperor then bowed deeply before the altar and offered a silent prayer.

It was noon of Aug. 15, 1945, when Hirohito told the nation in a barely audible radio broadcast he had decided to surrender unconditionally.

Some 3.1 million Japanese were killed in the war that began with Japan's aggression against China in July 1937.

Suzuki also addressed the gathering Saturday, saying "I pledge to the souls of the war dead that, learning a lesson from the last war, we will continue our efforts for the establishment of world peace and national development."

The rite climaxed two weeks of memorial events that began with the anniversary of the world's first atomic bombing at Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 1945, which left an estimated 200,000 people dead. Another 140,000 people were killed in the second atomic blast over Nagasaki three days later.

About 8,000 pro-North and pro-South Korean residents in Japan held separate meetings in Tokyo, observing their country's liberation from Japanese colonial rule.

Leftist and pacifists held a memorial service at the cemetery where 315,000 unknown soldiers are buried and prayed for peace.

Sirens wailed and temple bells tolled at noon in various parts of the nation where memorial services for war dead and anti-war gatherings were held.

Boarding Home Probe Widens

DETROIT (UPI) — Authorities in Michigan and Florida are piecing together an incredibly complicated case against a woman suspected of shuttling elderly pensioners between the two states in a bizzare scheme to get their money.

The whereabouts of the shadowy figure known to her boarders as Cora Galvin remained a mystery Saturday, but police said they had reason to believe she may still be in the Detroit area.

As the case against her mounted, the FBI was studying the increasingly complex web of charges to decide whether to enter the investigation.

"We want to know if there is probable cause that federal laws were broken so we can present it to the U.S. attorney, who will decide whether we enter the case," said FBI spokesman Mark Codd.

Officials said they now believe that the woman they are looking for is actually named Lucille Walker and that she took the name of her mother, Cora Galvin, who is dead, as an alias.

The search for Mrs. Walker began Thursday when five elderly women missing since Aug. 2 at the Tangelia adult foster care home she operated in Miami turned up at a Detroit hospital.

Police said the women, ages 62 to 91, apparently had been kept for 11 days in the basement of a house belonging to Mrs. Walker's daughter in suburban Oak Park. Officers searched that house and another nearby Thursday night and Friday and confiscated several documents linked to the missing woman.

As the investigation intensified, authorities in both Michigan and Florida said it appeared Mrs. Walker — known to have used at least eight aliases — shuttled several elderly people between the two states on numerous occasions. On one of the trips, they said, a man died of a heart attack.

In Miami, Dade County officials said Mrs. Walker apparently was a key figure in an illegal network of unlicensed boarding homes set up to bilk residents out of their incomes.

The network involved as many as 10 unlicensed boarding homes in Miami and at least three in Detroit operated by Mrs. Walker and her relatives, officials said. Elderly people were admitted to one licensed home — the Tangelia — then shuttled to the other homes, they said. Meanwhile, money was drawn from their bank accounts or social security checks.

"It's the most flagrant case of health care violations that I've seen in many years," said Dade Assistant State Attorney Thomas Petersen.

Motel Fires Force Guests Into Dark

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Two suspicious fires forced 170 people from a motel early Saturday, 24 of them rescued by ladder, officials said. No serious injuries were reported.

A large air conditioner burst into flames and rapidly filled a portion of the third floor of the Ramada Inn with heavy smoke and fire, officials said.

Fire investigators said they also found a smaller fire on the second floor, which is separated from the third floor by heavy reinforced concrete.

Police Chief David Walchack said, "The investigation has just started, so I don't want to discuss arson, but there are some things about the fire that just don't add up."

Fire Lt. Robert Constant said, "When we got there, smoke was rolling out the third-floor windows and people were hanging out calling for help."

Safety officials said it was lucky there were no serious injuries in the two-alarm fire at the motel a block from the New Hampshire Statehouse.

"To come out of this without a death is almost unbelievable," Battalion Chief Edward Joaquin said.

Relaxation Fad Ends In Lockup

TORONTO (AP) — A woman locked in a sensory deprivation tank and forgotten about says she does not feel negative about this city's latest relaxation fad.

The mahogany tanks, which resemble large coffins, contain warm salt water and are locked from inside. A person floats naked and wears earplugs in the pitch-black darkness. Sessions last for about 45 minutes.

Barge Owners End Blockade

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Angry barge owners who blockaded the nation's inland waterways for five days say they stopped the protest because they feared violent clashes with police.

The barge owners decided Friday night to end the blockades, which had wreaked havoc on 33 canals and rivers and left cargo sitting on docks. Most blockades had earlier been abandoned after police threatened to break them up.

Paper Faces Key Vote

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Bulletin, once America's largest evening newspaper, publishes what could be its final edition Sunday amid reports of a snag in negotiations to save the 134-year-old daily.

The fate of the newspaper rests with eight unions which have been asked to accept wage cutbacks and other concessions totalling $4.9 million annually.

Progress was reported as talks resumed Saturday morning following an all-night bargaining session attended by federal mediator Robert L. Kyler.

But Teamster Local 628 negotiators broke off their session Saturday afternoon, calling the action "extremely serious" and saying they would not return until called back by Kyler.

There was progress "until a few minutes ago," said William Gullifer, secretary-treasurer of Local 628, the largest union involved, and spokesman for all eight unions.

The dispute involved putting into writing an agreement on working conditions, said Gullifer, who would not be more specific.

Earlier Saturday, Gullifer said of The Bulletin: "I think they have a better understanding of what our problems are, and we have a better understanding of theirs."

Sidney Ginsberg, lawyer for the mailers union, agreed that "some very delicate issues are close to settlement."

That contrasted with the mood Wednesday night when Gullifer broke off talks for a day, saying management was being less than candid.

If The Bulletin folds, it will be the third time this month that red ink has forced a major American daily to cease or curtail publication. On Aug. 7 The Washington Star went under, leaving the nation's capital the biggest one-newspaper city in the country.

And in New York, the Daily News announced Friday it was shutting down its year-old afternoon edition, Tonight, on Aug. 28 as part of a drastic cost-cutting program. That left the New York Post as the only general circulation afternoon paper in the nation's largest city.

The eight Bulletin unions, representing 879 of its 1,901 full-time workers, called meetings Sunday to vote on proposals growing out of negotiations that began Aug. 3. The results will be announced at 5 p.m., and Bulletin officials then will decide whether Sunday's edition is the last.

On Aug. 3 Bulletin publisher N.S. Hayden announced that The Charter Co., the paper's owner, wanted the unions to accept the cuts.

Traffic Wrecks Investigated

According to police a car driven by Lillian Rhodes Eastwood, of Route 5, Greenville, was headed east leaving a parking lot, driving on to Evans, when the vehcile collided with a northbound car driven by Annie Reddick Daughtry, of 1703 S. Greene St. Damage was estimated at $1,000 to the Eastwood auto and $600 to the Daughtry vehcile.

Police were also investigating the hit-and-run of a parked car at Frist and Jarvis streets early Saturday. Police said the car was registered to Arlene Sweatt Searcey of Danville, Va.

Investigators said Ms. Searcey was just leaving the auto when a car approaching from the rear struck the vehicle, causing and estimated $1,500 damage.

The car failed to stop after the collision.

In another hit-and-run accident under investigation, damage was placed at $150. Police records indicated a car driven by Joy Denise James, of Lot D-4, Highland Trailer Park, headed north on Cotanche Street, was stopped for a traffic light when it was struck by another vehicle making a right turn off Fourth Street onto Cotanche.

No charges were filed Saturday in a traffic collision at the intersection of 14th and Chestnut streets that cuased an estimed $1,200 in damage.

According to Greenville Police reports, a car driven by Charlie George Bright of Lot 10, Oakwook Acres Trailer Park, was headed west on 14th Street when it and a vehicle driven by Jasper Earl Carney of 1803-A W. Conley St. collided. Carney was traveling east on Chestnut preparing to make a left.

Investigators said Carney turned into the path of the Bright auto, causing approximately $800 to the Bright car, and about $400 to the Carney vehicle.

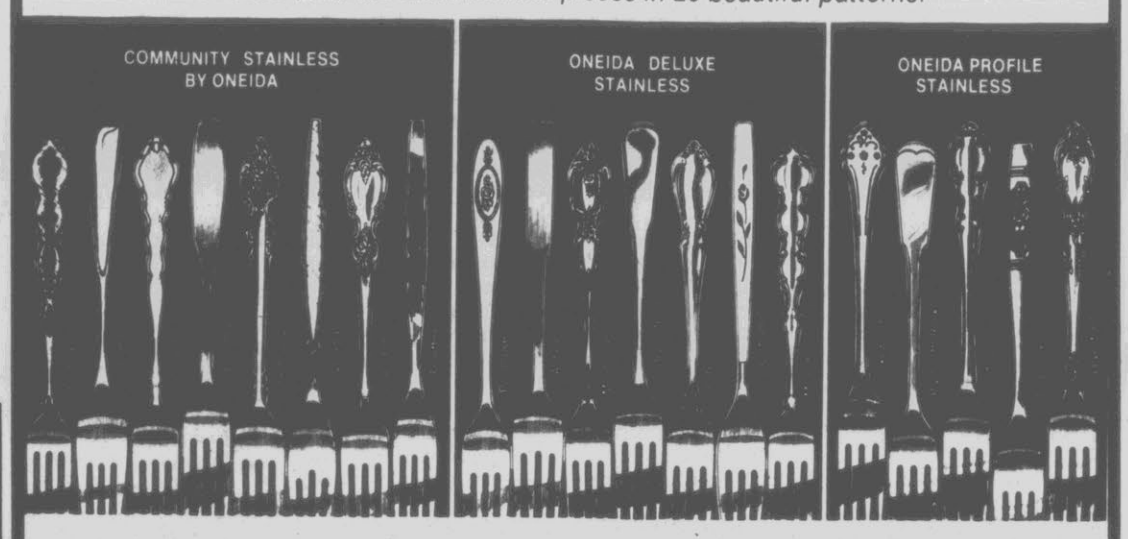

In another Saturday morning accident, Greenville police charged Billy Ray Stocks of Bell Arthur with no operators license following a collision at 14th Street.

Police reports said Stocks was leaving a parking lot when he backed into the path of another car driven by Morris Junior Green of 708 W. 14th St. Damage was placed at $600 to the Green Vehicle and $25 to the Stocks auto.

No charges were filed in a Friday afternoon accident on Evans Street near Red Banks Road.

Sunday Opinion

A Fuel Cost That Is Falling? Can That Be?

Can we be reading correctly? Is the cost of a fuel coming down?

Greenville Utilities Commission last week approved just such a decrease. Natural gas rates will be dropping Sept. 1.

Acting Director Malcolm Green said there will be a 57 cents per 1,000 cubic feet decrease in the rates. That is a drop of 12½ percent in price for both firm and interruptible customers (Interruptibles are those who agree to switch to some other fuel at peak usage times.)

The decrease is substantial and it will be helpful to homeowners and businesses which heat with natural gas. It will be most helpful to industries which use large amounts of natural gas in their operations in keeping them competitive in their fields.

Only a few years back there was a severe shortage of natural gas and Greenville Utilities was being told not to take on any more customers. Now in the mysterious ways of the energy field there is an adequate amount of natural gas with some experts predicting reserves enough to last for generations.

Suddenly using natural gas for energy needs is desirable again — and the price is even coming down.

We don't understand all we know about energy pricing; nevertheless the decrease in natural gas prices is welcome.

Unique Health Plan To Be Inaugurated

Greenville's city government has embarked upon a unique new plan for providing health insurance on its employees.

The plan, approved by the City Council, will take effect Oct. 1. It provides that money paid into the plan, formerly as premiums, will go into a pool from which future claims will be paid. The program will be administered by a professional administrator under contract and unusually large claims will be insured against.

The city foresees a savings of $33,000 to $73,000 annually and the action came after premiums jumped 100 percent in two years with another 37 percent increase in view.

The new plan is certainly worth a try. Medical costs are soaring and with them so is the cost of health insurance. Perhaps with this new plan the city can maintain benefits for its employees and at the same time hold down costs.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Adams planned the event for his wife, Cheryl, and guests received a seven-page set of instructions specifying where they were to be, what was to occur and how the party was to be kept a surprise from his wife.

With planning like that things have to go right, and they did. The party, in fact two of them, was a complete surprise.

It started with a party at the Pizza Inn for which Barry said there would have to be good communications, punctuality, excellent timing and planning, absolute concealment and "Finally, you gotta lie through your teeth like crazy." That worked and all the guests left with Barry and Cheryl remaining behind to clean things up.

The fun wasn't over, however.

The instructions then called for Phase II. The guests gathered at the Adams' house where another round of decorating got under way. There was more blowing up of balloons, banners hung and other arrangements made. Guests' cars were parked in the back yard to prevent Cheryl seeing them.

At 7:46 p.m. the guest of honor arrived and all the participants shouted "surprise!"

The incredible thing is that it all worked ... but then no World War II invasion was more carefully planned.

Col. A E Dubber, retired redevelopment and housing director for the city, has been confined recently, but there was a rewarding moment for him.

The Greenville Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America (SPEBSQA) came to his home and sang for nearly an hour.

The colonel is a charter member of the Greenville chapter and has been an ardent "Barbershopper" for 40 years. The concert was recorded and will be available for him to listen to anytime.

A letter from Jimmy Ellis, a staff writer of many years back who is now with Celanese Fibers Group, recalled the story he considered his best.

"I truly enjoyed the visit to The Reflector office, even if it is not where I, consistently, made mountains out of molehills and vice versa. I except the story I did on Haywood Dail and his ballot-eating for Dear Ol' East Carolina. That was a good one."

It had been rumored for many years that negative ballots were eaten when a bond election was held to establish East Carolina Teachers Training School in Greenville.

Enthusiasm was high for the school, but there were lots of negative feelings toward the bond issue.

Dail confirmed in his interview with Jimmy that he did, indeed, eat some of the negative ballots.

The bond issue passed and we all know the results today.

Strategy

George Gedda

WASHINGTON (AP) — Until this week, there was little indication the Reagan administration felt that a constructive relationship with the Soviet Union was possible or even desirable.

Some observers, among them former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, said the long months of strident anti-Soviet invective by the administration suggested it had a "posture" toward Moscow but no policy.

But Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. took his first tentative steps toward changing that perception in a speech Tuesday in New Orleans. Haig said the administration is, after all, interested in establishing a "more stable and beneficial relationship" with Moscow.

Haig even suggested that conditions are ripe for attaining such a relationship and that he has a coherent strategy for achieving it.

He avoided use of the word detente in describing administration goals, but some of his remarks clearly were reminiscent of the detente era.

"We must compete with the Soviet Union to protect freedom," Haig said, "but we must also search for cooperation to protect mankind."

During its early weeks in office, the administration's message was decidedly different. In late January, for example, President Reagan said the only morality recognized by the Soviet leaders "is what will further their cause, meaning they reserve unto themselves the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat."

The new chill was symbolized by the administration's early decision to strip Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin of his privilege — granted by the three previous administrations — to enter the State Department through its underground garage. Now he has to enter by the front door like all other envoys.

At the substantive level, the changed atmosphere was reflected in such actions as higher defense spending, the offer of weapons to China, the promise of increased weapons sales abroad and a suggestion by Reagan that aid might be provided to anti-communist rebels in Afghanistan.

To some, it seemed the the administration strategy was all stick and no carrot.

Haig's speech Tuesday disspelled that notion, at least somewhat. It made clear that the administration does hold out the eventual hope that a more congenial relationship with the Soviets is possible.

The first phase of the administration's approach was to try to persuade the Soviets that the costs of what Haig describes as Moscow's "aggressive course" far outweigh the benefits.

Haig's New Orleans speech represents the second phase of administration policy. It is no less opposed to interventionism by the Soviets, but it also offers the promise of rewards to Moscow in exchange for Soviet restraint.

Haig said the United States is offering "a reduction in the tensions that are so costly to our societies ... diplomatic alternatives to the pursuit of violent change ... fair and balanced agreements on arms control ... and the possibility of Western trade and technology."

The question now is whether the administration's attempt at accommodation will be any more successful than previous efforts. Haig seemed confident it will be.

He said he believes the previous efforts at detente failed because the West did not keep pace with Soviet military expenditures, thus undermining the balance of power, and because that period was one of relative Soviet prosperity.

Anson Serves As 'Crime Watch' Test County

Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — Law enforcement specialists, particularly crime rate analysts, will be keeping a closer watch on one North Carolina county in coming months.

That is because residents of Anson County are keeping a close watch on one another in an effort to reduce crime.

That southern Piedmont county with Wadesboro as the county seat and chief municipality, and traversed by much-traveled U.S. 74, is the first of North Carolina's 100 counties to have an organized community crime watch program in every neighborhood, says L.D. Hyde, chief of crime prevention in the state's Department of Crime Control and Public Saftey.

Another county, Union, is almost 100 percent organized and should join the exclusive ranks shortly, Hyde said.

Gov. Jim Hunt is credited with launching the crime watch program in this state. He was lieutenant governor in 1972 when he first spelled out the approach and enlisted county sheriffs and municipal police in pushing the effort. As governor, he added impetus by making the program a major part of his newly created crime control agency. Statewide, there are now more than 10,000 Community Watch groups ranging from isolated communities with only a handful of residents to major inner-city neighborhoods with a thousand or more people.

Does it work? Hyde and other specialists are convinced it does. "We have people at Central Prison who tell us they won't hit a store or house in a Crime Watch community," Hyde says.

The single most important thing which a criminal needs is opportunity. If people are looking out for one another and the crooks know that they may be seen and their license plate numbers jotted down, they would rather move on someplace else, Hyde says.

Who says you can't change the system? Not Samuel M. Streit, a lawyer, faculty member at Bush Institute for Child And Family Policy at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and staff attorney with Child Watch Inc., a statewide child advocacy organization.

A new law now in effect allowing nonlawyers to serve as independent advocates for abused and neglected children demonstrates that the system can be changed. Streit was instrumental in getting a previous law on the books by the General Assembly providing a stand-in guardian for a child facing the complexities of the courtroom alone.

But he soon discovered that restricting that advocacy role to lawyers did not serve the needs of the child in all cases. Too many attorneys did not have the time, training, experience, or inclination to do the background digging, investigation of resources, and hours of talking with the child and family needed to come up with the best plan. Streit researched his conviction, produced evidence that nonlawyers could do the job better if they could hire an attorney to help with legal technicalities when necessary. Effective in July, the new law passed by the 1981 General Assembly allows nonlawyer courtroom advocates fort the youngsters.

Meanwhile, the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation of Winston-Salem has put up $47,000 in grant money to launch a pilot project using nonlawyer guardians in Wayne, Wake and Alamance counties, and to follow through with a central project office and resource center for child advocates to exchange information, stimulate improvements, and provide help for local programs in providing advocates for abused and neglected children.

Price Collapse In Housing May Be Coming

John Cunniff

NEW YORK (AP) — According to the rumor, prices of houses have to drop sharply because of the "extraordinary" inflation that has persisted in the housing market for the past decade or so.

So popular is the notion in some circles, among investment analyst groups, for example, and even among some commission-starved real estate agents, that it has become a cult with its own dogma.

And it's scaring the daylights out of homeowners.

When you sit down to examine the so-called extraordinary figures, however, you may be surprised to learn there may be as much yeast in the rumors as there is in the prices.

An analysis by a housing group, for example, observes that "from the end of 1974 to the end of 1980, the median price of new homes sold increased 81 percent, from $37,400 in 1974 to about $67,800."

Sounds alarming, until you consider that housing isn't the only thing affected by inflation. Had the median home price rose in step with the consumer price index, the 1980 price would have been close to $62,600.

It suggests that during that six-year period the median home price seems to have risen about $6,000, a sizeable sum, but small in relation to the inflated figure. What's extraordinary, is the rise in the CPI.

Moreover, some of the homes erected in that period have more built-in value.

In 1976, according to government figures cited by the National Association of Home Builders, 49 percent of new single-family homes had central air conditioning. In 1980, 63 percent were so equipped. In 1976, 67 percent of new single-family homes had two or more bathrooms. Seventy-three percent fit that category in 1980.

Yes, there have been extraordinary jumps in prices of some houses in some areas. In, for example, the prices of already expensive homes; and for homes in areas of great demand, such as on shorefronts and in some Sunbelt areas; and for many condominium and cooperatives units.

For most homes, however, there is reason to doubt that prices are so puffed they are about to collapse like a punctured balloon. Some price declines, maybe. But when stock market prices decline even 10 percent you seldom hear any but the most excitable claim the sky is falling.

The biggest problem with the housing market may not be the price of the house at all but the cost of financing it.

At a 15 percent interest rate, a 30-year, $60,000 mortgage — higher than the typical mortgage but common in suburbs and cities — requires an annual income of $46,704, according to the home builders. That's $758 a month for the note, and $215 for utilities, taxes, insurance.

When the numbers get that high there is bound to be some slack in demand, and when demand falls, or so goes the theory, prices tend to follow.

Collapse is another thing. With construction in a deep depression, with rental vacancies at or near all-time lows, and with pent-up demand growing relentlessly, there is a price base, as they say in stocks.

Meanwhile, as never before there is experimentation with new mortgage instruments. Some of these conceivably could cause more money problems down the road a few years, but others may indeed provide some relief.

The solution to the problem, as distinct from relief, may take longer — that is, until interest rates fall to a more affordable level.

When (if) that promised day comes, homeowners and stockholders alike will probably find considerable latent demand there for their assets.

Cautious Use Of 'Censorship' Is Advisable

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — A massive study of book "censorship" in the public schools, released July 31, contained much useful information and some alarming information, but it had a threshold flaw: The study never tells us what "censorship" is.

A contemporary definition of the ancient term truly would have been helpful. Official censors have been at work since Sparta was in power. Roman censors sought to protect the morals of the empire. In our own time and country, state movie censors had been snipping away until Maryland's board gave up the ghost of the practice a few months ago. We still have a raft of state and federal laws prohibiting traffic in "obscene" materials.

It's a pejorative word, this "censorship." The term conjures up the most unpleasant images. We envision the public official, gaunt and blue-nosed, his matches, razor blades and rubber stamps at hand; his purpose is to burn, excise or condemn material that offends him. Or we see the village yahoos, storming a school board meeting; their objection is that a dictionary includes a definition of "bed" as a verb. Opposed to these oppressive forces is a school librarian, clad in robes of virtue, defending our freedom to read whatever we please.

Well, it doesn't always work that way. It appears that not all the would-be censors are local yahoos. "One of the most startling findings of the survey was that librarians named school personnel (teachers, administrators and librarians) as initiating over 30 percent of the challenges cited." In some cases, respondents to the survey acknowledged that acts of "censorship" were educationally valid.

For example, said one respondent of a partioular book: "It was a piece of adult porn — purchased by mistake, by a teacher. We agreed — parents, librarians, teachers, adminstrators — that the material was not suitable. No question. Junked it."

In another reported instance, a superintendent, acting on his own, had purchased a certain program. "It was viewed as worthless by teachers and principals — too difficult for pre-high schoolers."

Were these two instances acts of "censorship"? They figure in the summary totals demonstrating that "efforts to censor the materials school children may read appear to be on the increase." Yet the decisions in the two cases apparently were wise decisions. Evidently not all censorship is bad censorship.

The study was conducted in the spring of 1980 by the American Library Association in conjunction with the Association of American Publishers and the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development. Nearly 1,900 librarians, principals and superintendents took part. They reported scores of challenges that were plainly ludicrous, such as the demand that the American Heritage Dictionary be removed because its seventh definition of "to bed," citing John Steinbeck, is "to have sexual intercourse with."

My thought is that the opprobrious term "censorship" ought to be used with greater care. What we are talking about, as often as not, is simply the informed critical judgment of a librarian.

Public Forum

To the editor:

It was with great interest that I read about the Pitt County Board of Education's plan to spend $184,309.96 in order to keep four top-level personnel positions. (This figure represents salary, supplement, and longevity pay.) It was even more interesting to note that the retention of these four positions represented a "priority item" on the part of some board members — obviously a higher priority than a new school for Ayden, lunchroom facilities at Chicod and Pactolus, additional teachers for special education classes that are limited by law and are desperately needed in some schools, as well as many other needs that are related to students.

However, I would like to thank Mr. Bill McLawhorn and Mr. Mark Owens for making the public aware of just what their priorities are, and I hope the voters of Pitt County will join with me in keeping this in mind when these men are up for election again.

A.R. Thompson
Ayden

To the editor:

Due to the over-population of cats and dogs in Pitt County, I thought the following statistics might be of interest to the people:

According to public records, the county impounded 2,496 animals and put to sleep 2,428 in 1980. The city impounded 1,282 and put to sleep 517. One hundred forty-four cases were investigated for exposure to rabies. The number of dogs vaccinated was 6,217.

The method of euthanasia for the county pound is the use of carbon monoxide. It takes an animal about two minutes to die. The city pound uses a shot called T-61, which kills instantly.

The approximate number of spays and neuters was 1,100.

These figures really shocked me. Spaying or neutering an animal is not expensive. The average cost ranges from $15 to $50, depending on the size of the animal. Most people spend that amount of money foolishly or they could certainly do without some item they really don't need.

There would be a lot fewer stray cats and dogs if people would only take the time to have their animals spayed or neutered.

I know from experience that you will have an animal with a more loving disposition. Your animal will also get into fewer fights and will stay closer to home.

Neutering also cuts down on prostate trouble in males and on cancer of the reproductive organs in females.

Please don't contribute to the pet overpopulation boom.

Japan's Firearms Industry Eyes U.S. Market

Jim Abrams

TOKYO (AP) — American sporting guns, bearing such legendary brands as Browning and Winchester, now are often American in name alone, as U.S. hunters arm themselves with rifles and shotguns made in Japan, a nation with some of the world's toughest gun controls.

Almost every major American make of sporting gun and shotgun is now made under license in Japanese factories. Japan sold almost $40 million worth of firearms to the United States last year, making it America's top supplier of high quality arms.

"Like our cars, Japanese guns have gained a reputation for being well-made and cost efficient," said Shoichiro Nemoto, technical director of the Japan Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers' Association.

Nemoto said Japan has been making hunting guns for the U.S. market since 1961, when Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., maker of Winchester guns, formed a joint venture with Japan's Olin Kodensha Co.

He said Japan has made "steady gains" in the U.S. market in the past few years, with Japanese-made guns now accounting for 10 percent to 20 percent of the total U.S. firearms market.

Nemoto said Remington is the only major U.S. gunmaker without a plant in Japan today.

According to International Trade and Industry Ministry figures, Japan exported 286,427 hunting guns in 1980, up from 212,473 in 1973. About 80 percent of all exports go to the United States.

In contrast, only 3,977 guns were made for sale in Japan last year — one-tenth the figure for 1973. The drop reflects the tightening of the nation's already strict controls on gun possession.

A Japanese citizen who wants to buy a hunting gun must now undergo both written and shooting tests and pay a high registration fee. Handguns are completely banned, a reason cited for Japan's low rate of violent crime.

Gun enthusiasts often turn instead to elaborately crafted model guns that are non-firing replicas of the originals.

No handguns are made in Japan, and the gun industry must also abide by a government ban on export of military weapons. Nemoto said no fully automatic rifles may be manufactured and guns are made so knives can't be attached. In addition, no sales are made to world trouble spots "so there will be no mistake about our intentions," he said.

The largest Japanese gun manufacturer is Miroku Firearms Manufacturing Co. of Kochi City on the western island of Shikoku. Spokesman Miyusuke Okabayashi said Miroku produced 150,000 guns in 22 models last year. Almost all were shotguns and hunting rifles made under the Browning name. Four out of every five were sent to the U.S.-Canada market, he said.

"Almost all Browning models are now made either in Belgium or by us," Okabayashi said. The Utah-based Browning Co.'s Belgian partner is switching to military weapons, so Miroku's 15-year-old Browning connection should grow even stronger, he said. "Production should be up about 10 percent this year," he predicted.

Winchester-maker Olin Kodensha also expects booming business as its U.S. partner literally lays down its arms. Company director Minoru Katsuta said Olin Mathieson plans to sell its plant in New Haven, Conn., and he expects Olin Kodensha's factory north of Tokyo to take up some of the slack.

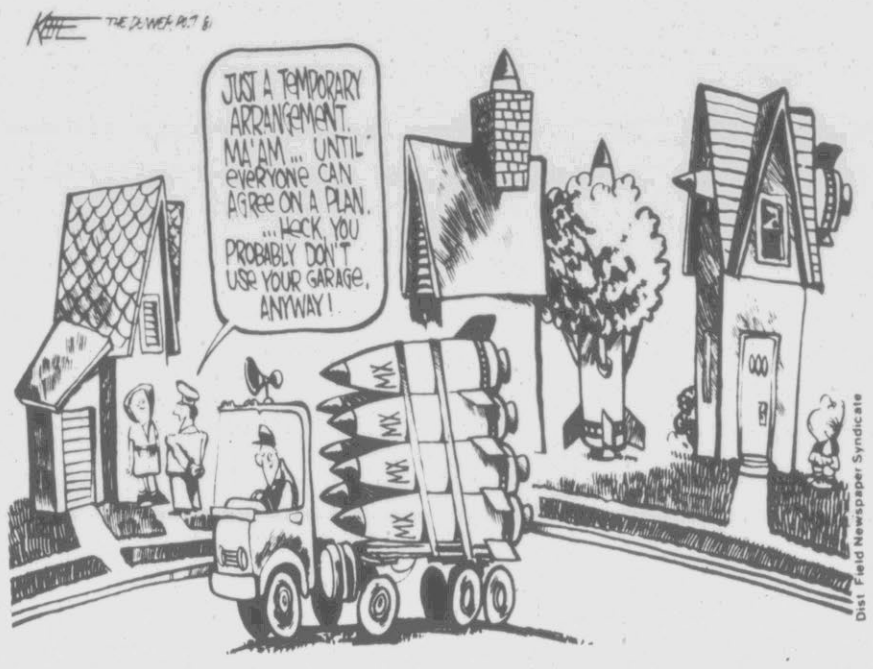

Katsuta said the company made 28,000 Winchesters last year.

Among other major Japanese companies producing well-known American models for U.S. hunters are Fuji Seiki Seisakusho, which last produced some 40,000 Smith & Wesson shotguns, and KTG Industrial Co., which made 20,000 Savage shotguns.

Howa Machinery Ltd. has compensated for reduced orders for automatic rifles from Japan's Self Defense Forces by beginning production of Weatherby hunting rifles. Last year 20,000 rifles, including the Weatherby Vanguard and Mark V bolt-action models, came off its assembly line.

Nemoto said Spain and Brazil may still be the leading exporters to the United States of airguns and other inexpensive guns, but Japan probably at the top in highly crafted, high-priced arms.

He added, however, that despite the excellent quality of Japan's firearms, the industry has yet to find its "Toyota" or "Sony" to challenge the American hunter's attachment to those names out of the frontier past.

Trumans Caused A Stir In Zebulon

Noel Yancey

Clifton Daniel told the throng assembled in the town square at Zebulon it was like having a youthful daydream come true — of returning home to find the whole town assembled to greet him and his famous in-laws, former President and Mrs. Harry Truman.

But Daniel's entire career reads something like a story book — the small-town boy who became a successful war correspondent for The Associated Press, Moscow correspondent for the New York Times, and later a top editor for the Times. He topped off his career by marrying the fairy princess — in this case the daughter of the former president of the United States.

The assemblage at Zebulon that December evening in 1958 was part of a double-barreled event. It marked the first visit by the Trumans to the home of their daughter's in-laws, and it came on the eve of a Truman speech in Raleigh marking the 150th anniversary of the birth of Andrew Johnson, a Raleigh native who grew up to be president.

Folks at Zebulon knew Daniel him as E.C. and they basked in reflected glory as they read of his engagement to Margaret Truman, of their wedding a few weeks later in Independence, Mo., and of the awards he had won for distinguished reporting from Moscow.

They were proud as punch of young Daniel, but Truman, the jaunty little man whose stature had increased because of the way he handled the presidency, was the star of the occasion. The Zebulon folk loved it when their distinguished guest thank them for their hospitality.

"Never before has a more cordial welcome been bestowed upon this retired farmer from Missouri who used to the the president of the United States," he said.

"I am fond of this great state," he added. "It is one of the most hospitable in the nation, and I've been in every one."

The speeches at Zebulon came shortly after Gov. Luther Hodges and a host of notables had gathered at the Seaboard station in Raleigh to welcome the Truman party when it arrived in a private car on a Seaboard train. The welcoming party included Jonathan Daniels, editor of the News and Observer who had served in Washington as Truman's press secretary.

Hodges turned his No. 1 limousine over to the Trumans and their hosts, Mr. and Mrs. E.C. Daniel, for the drive to Zebulon at the head of a motorcade escorted by the Highway Patrol. As the motorcade pulled into Zebulon, the high school band struck up the "Missouri Waltz." The party mounted a reviewing stand set up in the town square in front of Daniel's drug store.

After receiving the key to the city, Truman, Mrs. Truman, the Daniels and Clifton made their way to the Daniel's white and green house on a tree-shaded Zebulon street. Margaret did not make the trip. She remained in New York to look after the Daniel's infant son.

A large contigent of reporters was on hand for a Truman news conference the following day in the Senate chamber of the state Capitol. The cocky, smiling little man fielded their questions and kept chiding them for being so slow.

After about 15 minutes, there came a lull, and the 64-year-old former president brought the news conference to an end.

"I think you're running out of soap," he said. "Let's call this thing off."

Poll

George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — The weight of public opinion in the industrialized nations of the world is that these countries must participate in the development of the emerging nations. There is a sharp division of opinion, however, in the extent to which their public citizens believe these countries should increase foreign aid to assist the Third World in becoming self- sufficient.

In a recent survey conducted by Gallup International Research Institutes, the U.S. stood in the mid-range of 12 countries in terms of its citizens' feelings that the developed nations must share responsibility for the emerging nations' problems.

Perhaps partly as a consequence of the Reagan administration's cutbacks in domestic programs, however, Americans were relatively unwilling to increase aid to Third World countries. Of the eight nations responding to this question, only Austrians stood lower than Americans in their readiness to provide more foreign aid.

Six Americans in 10 (61 percent) stated the belief that the industrialized nations must share in the development of the emerging nations while one-third (33 percent) felt these nations must solve their own problems.

At the same time, 60 percent of Americans felt the U.S. should not increase its aid to the developing nations while 32 percent believed our foreign aid should be increased. Similar patterns were recorded in West Germany and Great Britain.

In contrast, by a large margin, the Japanese felt their country should increase its aid to the emerging nations.

Among Americans favoring increased foreign aid, the three types of assistance most often selected (from a list of six) were: providing funding for local people to study ways and means of helping them to solve their own problems, mentioned by 49 percent; providing free technological know-how (36 percent), and sending U.S. experts to make recommendations for development (33 percent.)

Following is the first question asked in the international study and the responses from participating countries.

"Do you feel that the problems of the underdeveloped countries of the world are their own responsibility, or do you feel that the developed countries must share in this responsiblity?"

Problems Of Less Developed Nations

Ireland	82%	13%	5%
Philippines	79	14	7
Canada	76	16	8
Switzerland	74	19	6
Chile	62	24	14
UNITED STATES	61	33	6
West Germany	61	36	3
Great Britain	59	35	5
Argentina	52	23	25
Austria	52	37	12
Brazil	47	35	18
Japan	45	24	31

Note: The figures for some countries do not add to 100 percent due to rounding.

This question was asked in eight nations:

"Do you feel that the United States should or should not increase aid to underdeveloped countries to assist them to become more self-sufficient in the future?"

Aid To Less Developed Nations

	Should increase aid	Should not	No opinion
Ireland	56%	33%	12%
Switzerland	52	42	6
Canada	51	37	12
Japan	48	18	34
Great Britain	35	58	8
West Germany	35	64	1
UNITED STATES	32	60	8
Austria	21	61	18

As shown in the table below, blacks, persons with a college education, younger Americans and persons who attend church regularly are more likely than other population groups to believe U.S. aid should be increased, while no significant difference in this respect is found by political affiliation.

Among the majority of Americans who believe the developed nations must share the problems of the Third World, sentiment for and against stepped-up U.S. aid is very evenly divided, with 45 percent believing the U.S. should and 48 percent, it should not increase aid. As might be expected, there is very little support for more U.S. aid on the part of those who feel the less developed nations must cope the best they can without foreign intervention:

U.S. Aid To Less Developed Nations

	Should be increased	Should not be increased	No opinion
NATIONAL	32%	60%	8%
Republicans	30	63	7
Democrats	33	59	8
Independents	30	63	7
Whites	30	63	7
Blacks	46	44	10

Regular church attenders	39	52	9
Non-attenders	26	67	7
Less developed need external aid	45	48	7
They must help themselves	8	88	4

The U.S. results are based on in-person interviews with 1,519 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities during the period May 8-11.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

The Problems Of Growing Up

Gail Michaels

Meg says that when she grows up, she is going to be an astronaut, a trapeze artist, a construction worker, and the owner of a chocolate factory. I have, on the other hand, postualted at various times that she would become an actress, a bouncer in a bar, a set designer for disaster films, or a Guiness Book of World Records holder for the longest monologue on one gulp of air.

The one field of endeavor I hope she never considers is criticism. A work of liertature, film, or music is never quite the same for me after she has insisted on disecting it.

For instance, not long ago we were listening to Anne Murrayn on the radio, and Meg asked, "Who's she telling to walk right back to her this minute?"

"Her boyfriend or her husband, I suppose."

"Why is she telling him that?"

"Why?"

I was beginning to get irritated. "How should I know? Maybe he was angry or unhappy. Now be quiet and listen to the song."

"But didn't he know how sad he was going to make her? Didn't he?" she persisted. "She's so lonesome every day. She said so, and all because he got unhappy or angry once or twice. That's stupid. Just think what would happen if Daddy left you just because you made him angry. He'd never come back..."

I turned off the radio.

"Why'd you do that, mommy?"

She's even worse when she gets started in a subject much dearer to me, humor. When I make the mistake of watching a situation comedy with her on television, I find my patience totally exhausted within five minutes.

"Is that funny when he says, 'Stifle yourself?'"

"Yes."

"Ha! Ha! Ha!...Why?"

"Why what?"

"Why is it funny?"

"I don't know. It just is."

"Mommy-"

"What?"

"Stifle yourself."

"Meg! that's not funny, You apologize."

"But, Mommy, you just said it was funny. Why isn't it funny now?"

I give up. I no longer laugh at that phrase. I no longer laugh at pratfalls either. As Meg has taken pains to point out, we shouldn't laugh at a situation in which someone could get hurt. I have also stopped laughing at Meg's joke. Her one joke. The one she tells 10 times a day seven days a week.

"Knock, knock."

"I don't want to hear it, Meg. I'm tired of it."

"You're s'posed to say, 'Who's there?' Purple."

"Meg..."

"Say purple who. Please, Mommy, please."

"(Sigh) Purple who."

"Knock, knock."

We repeat this two times. Then "knock, knock."

"(Groan) Who's there?"

"Orange."

"Orange who?"

"Orange you glad I didn't say purple?"

"Not particularly."

"Don't you want to laugh?"

"No, I want to scream."

Meg stamps her foot. "You don't have any sense of humor at all."

I think it runs in the family.

Facing South: Tales Told And Retold

Maxine Harker

GRIFTON — "Used to run a freight boat a way up the river," Cap'n Berkley Harker was telling his grandson.

The boy's father was not listening. He had heard it all before, those tales told and retold, about the early 1900s when his father had hauled farm supplies on his boat up the Neuse River tributaries in the coastal plains of North Carolina.

But Cap'n Harker found a willing ear in his grandson. He had no idea that the boy's tape recorder was silently storing his every word.

"Used to carry fertilizer up to Maple Cypress, Spring Garden and Streets Ferry. Had warehouses on the shore. Farmers came with mule and cart. Now, there wasn't a warehouse at Jolly Oldfield ... just loaded it on to the shore, so I had to start blowin' the whistle a long time ahead so they could meet me. Some of 'em would be there 'fore I could get to the landin'."

The captain's steamboat, the Phillips, was a sternwheeler, built to navigate in confined wates. Old-timers remember her ear-splitting whistle echoing across the flat terrain of eastern North Carolina. That sound brought almost everyone who heard it to the nearest landing. Some walked, some ran, some rode in rumbling mule carts, all hurrying to make a welcome contact with the outside world.

"I used to go up as far as Scuffleton on the Little Contentnea," Cap'n Harker continued. "Had to back out for about two mile. When I did get turned around, I had to start blowin' for the bridge to open. When you're comin' out on a fair tide — like I told the drawbridge keeper — 'If you don't get her open right away, I can't stop and I'm gonna knock 'er open.' He was always ready!"

The boy asked, "Granddad, how much did you make hauling fertilizer?"

"Well," Berkley replied, "the man who shipped the fertilizer paid in advance. I got $5 a bag. If you had 550 bags, figure it out.

"That's what I had one time on a New Bern-to-Seven Springs run. But when I went through Kinston, I hit a stump and knocked a hole in my bow — and she loaded with 550 bags of fertilizer! My fireman called upstairs and said, 'Chief, we're a-sinkin' — we're a-sinking!

"I looked ahead and saw this here old Confederate gun boat (the C.S.S. Ram Neuse) sunk and laying her bow out on the mainland. She was old and there wasn't much left of her 'cept the hull.

"Well, I had busted a hole through a six-inch plate in my bow, so I headed right for that gunboat. I hit 'er and slided right up on 'er. There wasn't no housing on it so I was able to run right up on her deck.

"I had four siphons on board the Phillips — siphoned her out with steam — so, the fireman, he had sense enough and was quick enough to open up all the siphons and we just did save her.

"Then we took a tarpaulin that we used to cover the fertilizer with, and we went up on the bow and threw it overboard, let it come down underneath. Tide always runs out when you got a hard freshet. So it carried the tarpaulin right underneath. When it hit the pole, it cut the water off — kept her from sinkin'.

After we got her all pumped out, I went out 'n bought half a keg o' twenty penny nails and some sheets of metal. Went in there were the hole was. Stuck that tin up there and drove it right full of nails, filled the cracks and painted over it. When I backed off, she didn't lead a doggone bit. I went right on up to Seven Springs.

"On the way back, though, I didn't have enough fuel to get home. So I saw some wood had been cut to cure tobacco with, piled over on the shore. I stopped and loaded up.

"I hadn't anymore than got back home, when I get this bill from a man for $500, for that wood I used. I wrote him back and told him what the law was: how if a boat has an emergency like that, they can only charge you for the actual value of the wood. A few days later, I got another bill for $24."

Some months later, Cap'n Berkley Harker died. Most of the old man's stories were buried with him, but his grandson will be able to hear this one over and over and over again.

Voyager Will Offer Earth Another 'Close

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 2, right on target after a journey of four years and 2 billion miles, is about to give Earthlings their third tour of the mystifying realm of Saturn. It will be the last American cruise to another world for half a decade.

"We're getting out there to it — close up — to see (again) the beauties of that ringed planet," said assistant project scientist Ellis D. Miner. "It's something Galileo (the legendary 17th century astronomer) would really have relished."

Miner concedes Voyager 2 has a tough act to follow. But he says the show, which climaxes with a close encounter Aug. 25, should certainly be worth watching. "Once we get up close and take looks at different areas and with different resolutions, we can't help but uncover a few new surprises that we just didn't anticipate."

When Voyager 1 — sistership of the unmanned spacecraft now closing on Saturn — buzzed the golden planet last November, visibly excited scientists at the mission-controlling Jet Propulsion Laboratory here began using words like "mind-boggling," "bizarre" and "weird."

And the second Voyager, Miner said, with better viewing angles, is already producing better pictures than Voyager 1.

After Saturn, Voyager 2 will sail still deeper into space, aimed for a rendezvous with Uranus in January 1986 and Neptune three years later. Neither planet has ever been reached by man's machines.

When the one-ton Voyager cruises within 63,000 miles of Saturn's swirling clouds of hydrogen and helium, about 14,000 miles closer than Voyager 1, it will mark the last American visit to another planet until the ship reaches Uranus.

Other planetary explorations proposed by space scientists have been squeezed out of a tightening federal budget. Miner said the only mission still drawing [illegible] is Galileo, "a highly sophisticated probe [illegible] Jupiter. Barring new delays, the mission would be launched in 1985 and would reach Jupiter in 1987.

"We're certainly going to relish what comes back a little more," Miner said, "because it's the last for a long time."

The unchallenged star of last year's spectacular Saturn's fabled rings. Every day of the encounter seemed to produce a puzzling revelation.

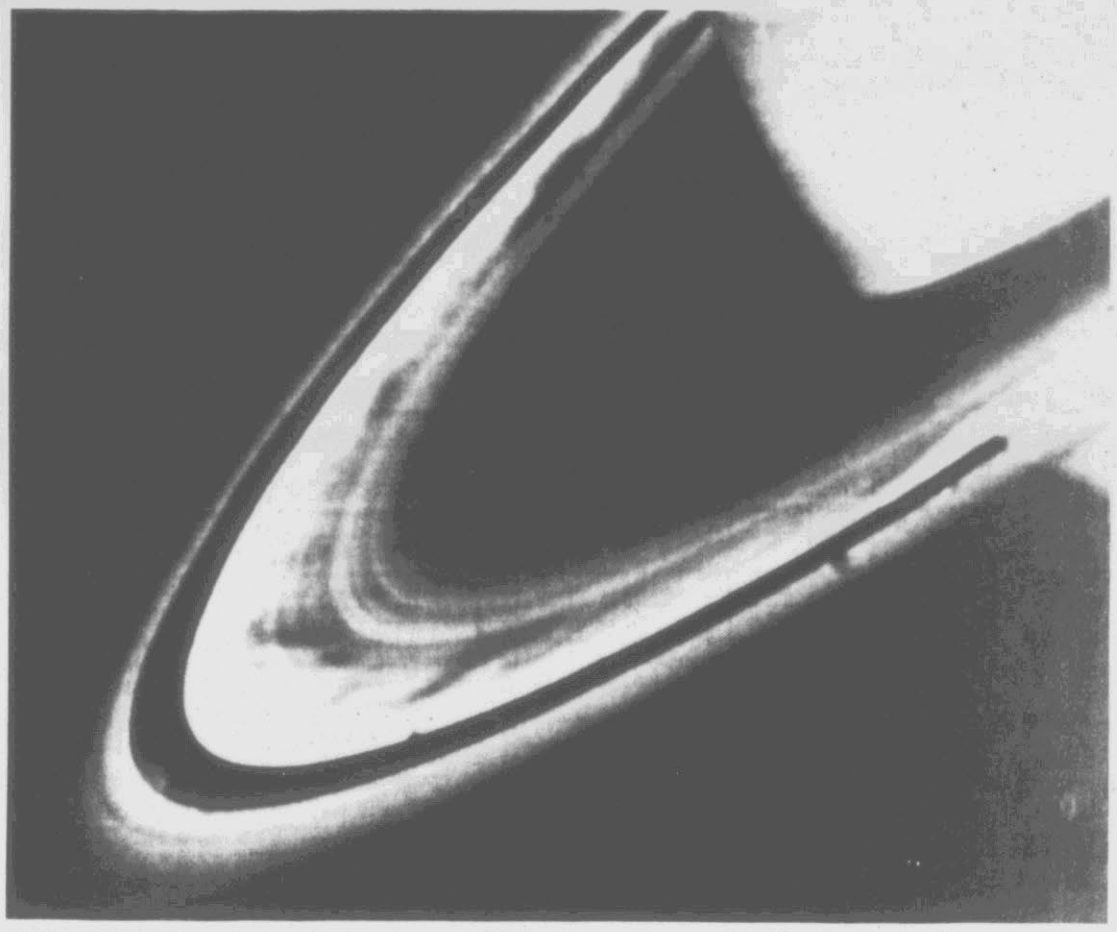

Within the previously known six rings that [illegible] some 400,000 miles of space, Voyager 1's cameras found what first looked like dozens — and now seem to be hundreds or even thousands — of distinct ringlets that spread out from the planet like grooves on a phonograph record.

Several non-conforming ringlets are somehow out-of-round. And two others, for reasons not really understood, seem to be twisted or braided around each other. Equally mysterious are a series of dark spokes that reach across the brightest part of the rings.

"We're still anxious to sort out what's going on at Saturn," Miner said. "We wish we could understand a little better what's causing all these things."

Saturn's gaggle of moons is now up to "17 and counting," he said, "were overjoyed [illegible] (last November) if we hadn't had all the excitement of the rings to look at, [illegible] the satellites would have provided us with equal excitement in [illegible] themselves."

For instance, he said, "we had never seen [illegible] before that has more than one moon in the same orbit. Now we have at least two examples." Two orbiting

Joy Ride Accident Kills Six People In Germany

HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — A "Skylab" merry-go-round crashed into a construction crane at an amusement park Saturday, flinging riders through the air. Six people died and 16 were injured in the worst accident of its kind in West German history.

"I heard the bang, then the screaming," said an employee at the "Hamburger Dom" fairground.

Police said the operator of the crane "misjudged" the distance, getting too close to the Skylab joy ride just as its swinging cars reached top speed.

A 1.5-ton engine being carried by the crane sliced through four cars, hurling riders through the air 45 feet to the ground.

The dead included five young women and a 23-year-old man. At least one of the injured was in critical condition.

Police said the death toll would have much higher had it not been for the fact that the accident occurred close to closing time and only two cars carried riders.

It was shortly after 1 a.m. when 25 people paid $1 apiece to pile into the carousel ride named after the American space ship Skylab for the last ride of the night. A sign alongside the ride promised, "Adventure, action and speed."

"As the cars began to turn I saw the crane getting nearer," said one survivor. "Suddenly it happened.

"The engine on the end of the crane crashed into the Skylab and I saw the bars of four cars ripped apart. It was terrible," he said.

"I was standing right underneath when it happened," said the owner of a nearby fairground booth. "A piece of metal struck me on the arm, a woman hit the ground right next to me."

Reagan Interrupting Vacation For Meetings On Defense Issues

By DEAN REYNOLDS

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — President Reagan took a last day of vacation Saturday before tackling two key defense issues and deciding whether to lift his embargo on the delivery of U.S. warplanes to Israel.

The first question facing Reagan is how to deploy the $50 billion MX mobile intercontinental missile system to prevent destruction of the U.S. nuclear arsenal in a single attack. Three options are available:

—Shuttling the nuclear warheads between locations on land.

Defense Secretray Caspar Weinberger has spoken out in favor of the airborne approach. But Haig reportedly opposed the idea, and the New York Times said Saturday he will use his time at the ranch to argue forcefully against it.

A White House aide said The Times story was incorrect and that Haig will be more concerned with the question of whether to resume deliveries of U.S. warplanes to Israel.

The president has promised to decide next week whether to lift the embargo on delivery of F-15 fighter-interceptors and F-16 fighter-bombers imposed after Israel bombed an Iraqi nuclear reactor and Palestine Liberation Army targets in Beirut.

The White House had no comment on — but did not take issue with — another story suggesting Weinberger was backing way from the airborne approach to MX basing in favor of further study of how best to deploy the weapons system.

Administration officials suggest privately the internal argument has forced Reagan to defer a decision on the MX system. The president said Thursday he will make no decision until after he returns to Washington Sept. 3.

A second issue confronting Reagan is whether to go ahead with the B-1 manned bomber to replace the aging B-52 as the premier U.S. bomber. Reagan must decided whether the enhanced airborne capability is worth the high cost.

Reagan will address both issues again on Monday when he attends a National Security Council briefing at hotel in Los Angeles where he will spend next week.

The president went horseback riding Saturday with first lady Nancy Reagan and chopped wood in the afternoon.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan has been spending roughly "a third" of his time on business during his stay at the ranch, telephoning members of his Cabinet and discussing policy with aides Edwin Meese and Michael Deaver.

John Paul Leads Public Prayer

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — A day after he was released from the hospital, Pope John Paul II prayed Saturday in a strong and clear voice with 80,000 people gathered in St. Peter's Square to welcome the pontiff back to the Vatican.

"After three months of grave illness that almost blocked me from leaving the hospital, today I can again lead the communal prayer of the Angelus in St. Peter's Square," the pope said.

John Paul's 25-minute appearance from his apartment window was his first full-length address to a crowd in the square since he was shot and wounded there May. 13.

The crowd of about 80,000 cheered and applauded when the pope, who was released from the hospital Friday, appeared at the window. Many shouted "Viva il papa" (Long live the pope), while one group sang a hymn.

John Paul's voice was noticeably stronger and clearer than it has been for three months, and it sounded particularly vibrant when he sang the apostolic blessing at the end of the address.

Deacon Guilty In Slavery Case

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The judge who sentenced Jimmy Conyers Friday after he was found guilty of enslaving eight teen-age members of an all-black church said the case included some of the "most heinous evidence I've ever heard in my life."

Conyers, described by witnesses as a "deacon" in the Church of God and True Holiness, was sentenced to 20 years in prison for holding the eight in involuntary servitude.

He and three others — Robert Allan Carr, leader of the all-black church; and Asanthia Carr Cain and Larry Cain, Carr's daughter and son-in-law — were indicted two years ago.

Asantia Carr Cain was sentenced to two consecutive five-year terms and Larry Cain was sentenced to five years.

Prior to sentencing, Conyers' attorney, Steve Allen of Greensboro, argued that his client was once a farm boy who "got involved in what turned out to be a religious misadventure."

"I don't know that any balm would heal the wounds that these young men and women have testified to — I don't know of any salve that would remove the scars," Allen told the judge.

He also reiterated his closing argument that Conyers was a pawn of church leaders.

U.S. District Judge Hiram H. Ward interrupted Allen to say "Hitler had his followers too — someone had to enforce it."

Conyers stood quietly as the sentence was announced, except to say, "There's a record being kept that you and I don't see — the Lord knows what went on in my heart, the Lord holds my heart as I am standing here today."

The evidence against Conyers included testimony by Terry Daniel Sauls, now 20, that in 1977 he was taken from Durham to Florence, where he was to live in a room behind the church with "quite a few others."

"Jimmy Conyers was there guarding the door at night so we couldn't get out," Sauls testified.

During the day, Sauls said, the youths were forced to do menial work for which they received no pay.

"I couldn't go back home to my family (in Wilson) 'cause I didn't have no money to get there," he said. "I knew if I struck off and they caught me, it would either be a whippin' or a fast."

After one confession meeting, he said Carr "put oil on my head and told me not to eat nothin', that he would tell me when to eat." Others who testified said the fast could last up to three days.

Sauls said he once had a paid job at a Florence car wash, but gave all of his earnings to Carr because he was afraid he would be beaten.

When he learned the group and the others were going back to Durham for a weekend, Sauls said, he held seven dollars out of his pay, hoping to escape from the church and catch a bus from Durham to Wilson.

But at a confession meeting in Durham, Sauls said, Carr called him to the front of the church, made him empty his pockets and found the seven dollars. He said Carr told him, "you ain't never goin' back," then had Conyers hold him down while Carr beat him severely with a heavy rope. Robert Graham, now 23, said he and most of the others held during the four-year period were forced to work at one time or another at Cross Poultry Co. in Raleigh, a chicken-processing plant.

He said that if they failed to give all their weekly pay to Carr, they were beaten, sometimes with sticks or bundles of sticks about an inch thick and 3-feet long.

Regular employees of the poultry company testified that there were 20 to 30 church members working at the plant at the time who dressed strangely.

Federal prosecutors produced poultry company records showing that eight teen-age church members alone were paid a total of more than $30,000 for working there.

Carr was arrested last year in California. He pleaded guilty to some of the charges and was fined $5,000 and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Federal agents said they were not able to find Conyers until May, when he was arrested in South Carolina.

NBC's high

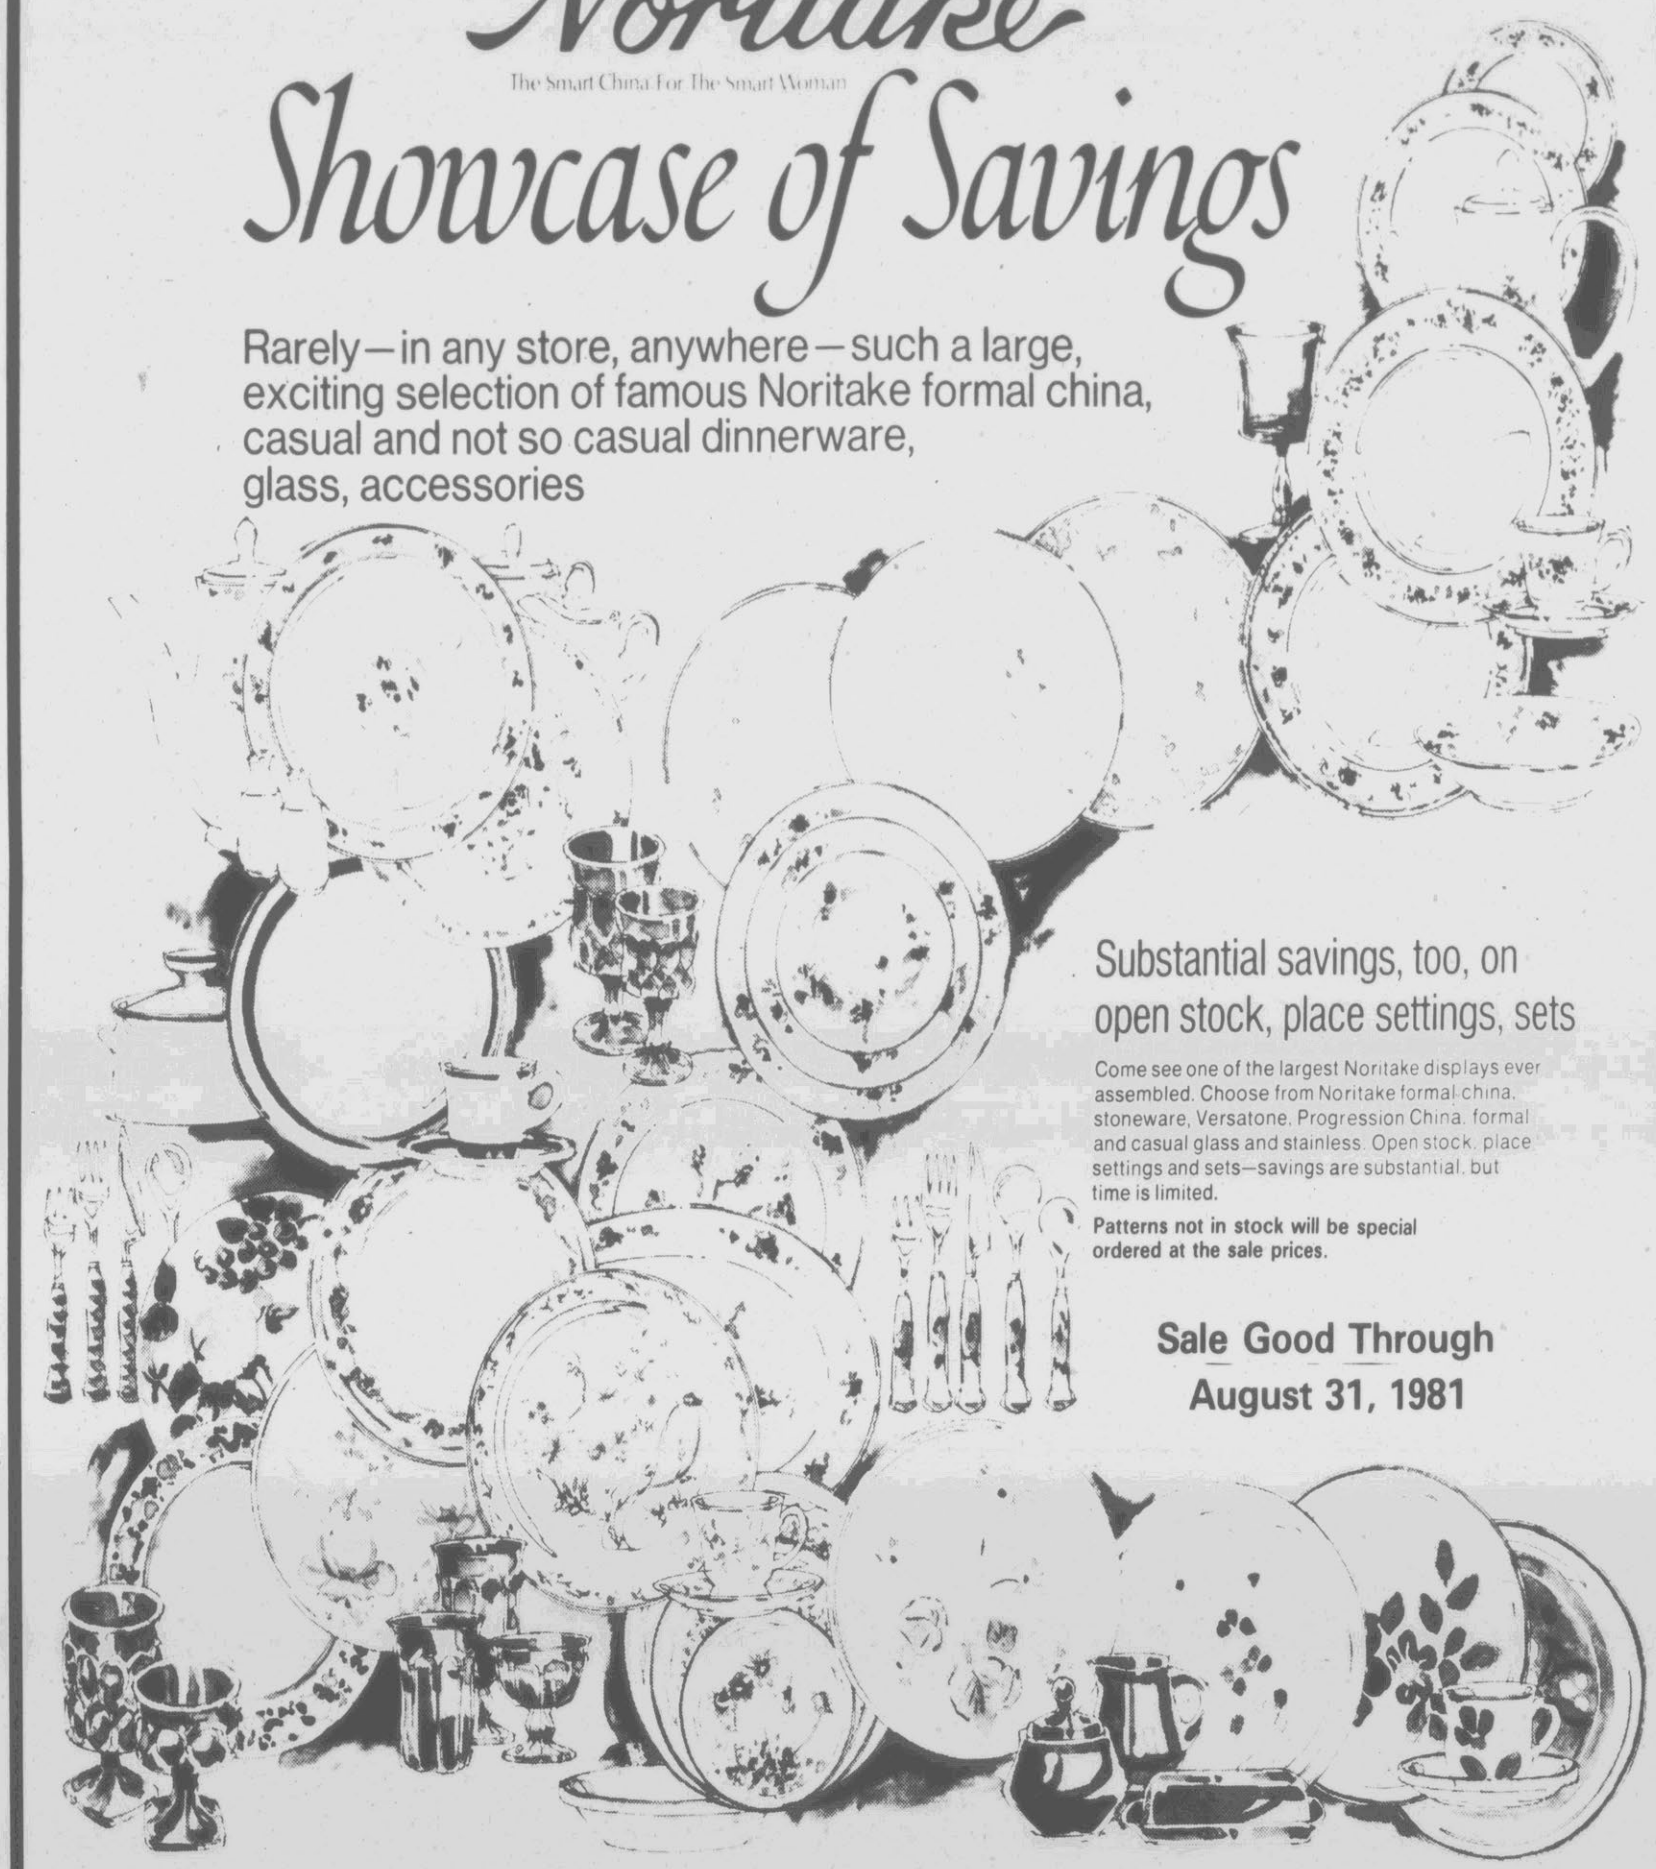

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — NBC will launch an expensive "alternative-to-drugs" campaign Sept. 20 in which more than 50 drug-free American celebrities will participate with young people on a "Get High On Yourself" program.

The opening shot by the network is a one-hour special under the aegis of film producer Robert Evans, who was busted earlier this year for possession of drugs.

Graham Ministry Shows Surplus

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The 1980 report of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association says contributions were up nearly $5 million over 1979 and the ministry showed a surplus for the first time in four years.

The report filed in Washington by the 30-year-old Minneapolis-based religious group said the ministry's total income in 1980 — from contributions and other earnings — rose $10.5 million from 1979, to a total of nearly $50 million.

Tax exempt income for the group also was up in 1980.

For instance, proceeds from movies produced by the ministry were up about $5 million from the previous year, largely due to the success of the film "Joni," the story of a crippled woman whose faith helped her overcome her handicap.

Expenses also rose from $38.5 million to $48 million, leaving a nearly $2 million surplus.

While financial advisers to Graham, a Charlotte-N.C. native, say the rate of giving in 1981 has not slackened, they say the association is being hurt by rising costs, especially the increasing cost of purchasing radio and television time to broadcast crusades.

At the end of 1980, said the annual report disclosed Saturday, the net worth of the Graham organiziation was $25 million, with $12.7 million of the total in cash, savings accounts, securities and accounts receivable.

While 1980 was the first year since 1976 that the association has had a surplus, its net worth has remained nearly constant over the five years — in the range of $23 million to $25 million.

Jay-C-Ettes Discuss REAP

The Greenville Jay-C-Ettes reviewed the activities of Greenville's Remedial Education Activiity Program during their August meeting last week.

Barbara Luce, director of the REAP Center, credited Dr. Malene Irons and Sarah Allen with developing the program in Pitt County because they saw a need to provide education for retarded children.

The center began in 1969 and helps Pitt County meet its mandate to serve retarded children and provides a learning site for college students to study retardation. The center is certified to sevre 20 children and provides developmental programming for children ages 2-8.

President Diane Myers presided at the business portion of the meeting. The Club nominated Evelyn Stroud and Linda Asbell for recognition by the Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club during National Business Women's Week in October.

The Club allocated $50 for awards for an end-of-the-year celebration for the girls at Operation Sunshine. Club members volunteered to assist with the bloodmobile Wednesday by telephoning potential donors.

Kathy Brown and Elizabeth Whitford will serve as chairmen of the club's Boys Home Committee which remembers each boy at Jaycee Cottage in Lake Waccamaw with a birthday gift and purchases other needed items for the boys at Jaycee Park.

Due to the success of the cookie sale, the club voted to extend the sale and continue to take orders in September.

Members were reminded to make items for the craft bazaar to be held at Carolina East Mall, Oct. 10. The quilt which was made by the club will be raffled at that time and will be on display in several Greenville stores. Members also made plans to hold a crafts workshop in September.

Reservists End Special Classes

The certificates were presented in a ceremony at the Greenville Reserve Center by Col. Larry E. Tetteton of Louisburg, commander of the 171st Support Group of Garner.

Bible Training

A Bible Training Meeting will be held at St. Mary Baptist Church Monday and Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. C.C. Craig, executive secretary-treasurer of the General Baptist Convention, Raleigh, will be the coordinator. All St. Mary's members are asked to be present.

Pan Am May Move Offices

MIAMI (AP) — Pan American World Airways may move its airline headquarters and as many as 500 jobs from New York to Miami International Airport later this year as a cost-cutting move, The Miami Herald reported Saturday.

The newspaper quoted management sources as saying Pan Am management hoped to move its entire airline operations staff to southern Florida, except for computer operations in New Jersey and a maintenance base at Kennedy International Airport.

Pan Am's hotel and contract services divisions would remain in the Pan Am Building in New York, as would the company's top corporate staff, The Herald said.

New Type System

PEKING (AP) — China has developed a system that uses computers and lasers to edit and set type — in Chinese characters — for books, newspapers and magazines, the official Xinhua news agency reported today.

Xinhua said the $2 million system, which took five years to develop, will eliminate hot metal typesetting.

Jones Says 'No' To Reagan Plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina Congressman Walter B. Jones says he will not contribute money to President Reagan's campaign to unseat House Democrats, in spite of a letter from the president urging his support.

The fact that Jones is a Democrat may have something to do with his reluctance.

In the letter, Reagan asks Jones to send in "$15, $50, or even $100" to the 1981 GOP Victory Fund.

"I consider winning Republican control of the House in the next election to be our party's number one priority," Reagan said in the letter sent on behalf of the National Republican Congressional Committee.

The letter was sent to Jones' Farmville, N.C. home, apparently by accident.

Jones could be expected to be less than enthusiastic about Republican control of the House. It would, for one thing, lose him the chairmanship of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

With due consideration, Jones said he would have to "respectfully decline" the president's request for a contribution.

Task Force To Release Proposals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Reagan administration task force will release its blueprint for a new war on crime Monday and its tough proposals have both the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Rifle Association worried.

If some of the more controversial recommendations by the Attorney General's Task Force on Violent Crime are enacted, they could form the basis of new court rulings on basic constitutional issues.

Spokesman Bruce Ennis said the American Civil Liberties Union will oppose "virtually all of it." He cited, in particular, a proposal to relax rules of evidence, which he said would lead to "an open season for police" on criminal suspects.

The eight-member bipartisan task force appointed by Attorney General William French Smith, following hearings in seven big cities during the past four months, is making 15 recommendations for action that would not need new laws or new funds to put into effect and 60 proposals for new laws or procedures.

Among them are:

—Denying bail to suspects in serious crimes who have committed crimes while out on bail before. This "preventive detention" proposal, already on the books in the District of Columbia, may be ruled on by the Supreme Court next term.

—Modifying the "exclusionary rule" under which evidence obtained illegally cannot be used against a defendant. The task force said evidence should be allowed "if it has been obtained by an officer acting in the reasonable, good faith belief" he was acting legally.

Panel member Wilbur Littlefield, the Los Angeles public defender, opposed the recommendation. "The exclusionary rule protects everybody," he said at hearings in New York last week. "I didn't have to worry at 3 o'oclock last night that somebody would kick in my door because of the exclusionary rule."

—Tightening the 1968 Gun Control Act to ban importation of unassembled parts of "Saturday night specials," require reporting of lost or stolen small hand guns and impose a waiting period before the purchase of nonsporting pistols.

This proposal aroused the powerful NRA, which endorsed President Reagan's election in return for his campaign promise to support easing of the gun laws. Pete Shields, chairman of Handgun Control, Inc., said he was "delighted" with the recommendation.

Both sides agree with the task force proposal to make jail sentences mandatory for using a gun to commit a crime.

—Building more jails. The task force recommended in June, with strong approval from Smith and presidential counsel Edwin Meese, that the federal government turn over surplus property and unused military bases for use as state and local prisons. The task force also will recommend $2 billion to $4 billion in federal aid to the states to build jails.

—Using a loophole in the law barring the military from apprehending criminals to allow the Navy to patrol the seas and air against drug smugglers.

—Eliminating the insanity defense in trials and replacing it with a plea of "guilty but mentally ill."

—Easing the "habeus corpus rules" to make it harder for state prisoners to claim their federal rights were violated.

—Establishing a computerized national index of criminals.

—Giving federal aid to states that suffer from such "a criminal justice disaster or emergency" that they can't afford to fight it alone.

—Relaxing the Freedom of Information Act.

Oil Ministers To Set Strategy

KUWAIT (AP) — Oil ministers from six key countries will meet Monday in Geneva to plan strategy for the full conference of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries two days later, Kuwaiti government sources said Saturday.

They said Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia would be chairman of the meeting, which will be attended by oil ministers from Kuwait, Algeria, Iraq, Iran and Venezuela.

The pre-conference meeting could signal a serious attempt to adopt a unified policy on prices and production levels. OPEC's 13 members have been unable to agree on a united stand, in large part because of high production and relatively low prices set by Saudi Arabia, the largest oil producer in the cartel.

The leading newspaper in Iraq, a country which has been pushing for higher prices and lower production, said Saturday the need for a unified policy had become urgent.

The paper, Al-Thawra, said the world oil glut had inflicted heavy losses on the economies of OPEC states and impaired their development plans. It described the current situation as "deplorable."

"The oil glut is beginning to affect the economies and development plans of a number of OPEC member states and it is also beginning to threaten the very unity of OPEC itself," the paper said.

Saudi Arabia has been accused of causing the glut by pumping a near maximum 10.3 million barrels of oil per day. The kingdom is the world's largest exporter and its production accounts for more than 40 percent of OPEC's output.

The Iraqi daily indirectly blamed Saudi Arabia for the wide range of prices charged for oil. The Saudis charge $32 a barrel compared to more than $40 for premium crude charged by North African OPEC members.

Saudi Arabia, which has insisted on gradual price increases, refused to go along with a base price of $36 agreed to at the last OPEC meeting in Geneva May 26. Instead, the oil giant kept its production at an all time high in what industry sources said was an effort to force down prices.

Sheik Yamani said Friday that he expected OPEC to unify prices at the meeting next week, and predicted Saudi Arabian production will fall in the next two years.

Kidnappers Free Clothing Magnate

ROME (AP) — Kidnappers released clothing magnate Cesare Menasci after 85 days of captivity, police said Saturday.

The owner of a chain of clothing stores was found wandering in a quiet street Thursday on the outskirts of the Italian capital. Police said he appeared drugged and in poor physical shape, and was taken to a medical clinic.

Relatives said Menasci still bore marks from a beating. He was snatched by five bandits brandishing pistols and rifles May 21 as he returned to his suburban apartment. Police did not say if a ransom was paid.

Pakistan Frees 50 Politicians

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — About 50 opposition politicians were released on the eve of the 34th independence day celebrations, military authorities said Saturday.

Most of the politicians, released Friday night, had been under house arrest or in local jails under martial law regulations imposed since an army coup in July 1977.

Iran Accuses CIA Of Plotting Hijacking

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran accused the CIA Saturday of masterminding the hijacking of one of the regime's three new gunboats. The monarchists who seized the vessel said it was now "the seat of the free government of Iran in exile."

Iran's revolutionary Islamic government also announced 54 more executions — 26 on charges of armed insurrection, 26 on drug-smuggling charges and two on morals charges. Tehran Radio reported that two motorcyclists tossed grenades and fired submachine guns into the house of Chief Justice Ayatollah Abdul-Karim Musavi Ardabili.

The broadcast did not say if Ardabili was in the house at the time of the attack or whether there were any casualties. His predecessor, Ayatollah Mohammad Hussein Beheshti, was killed with 71 other political leaders in a bomb blast June 28 at the headquarters of the ruling Islamic Republican Party.

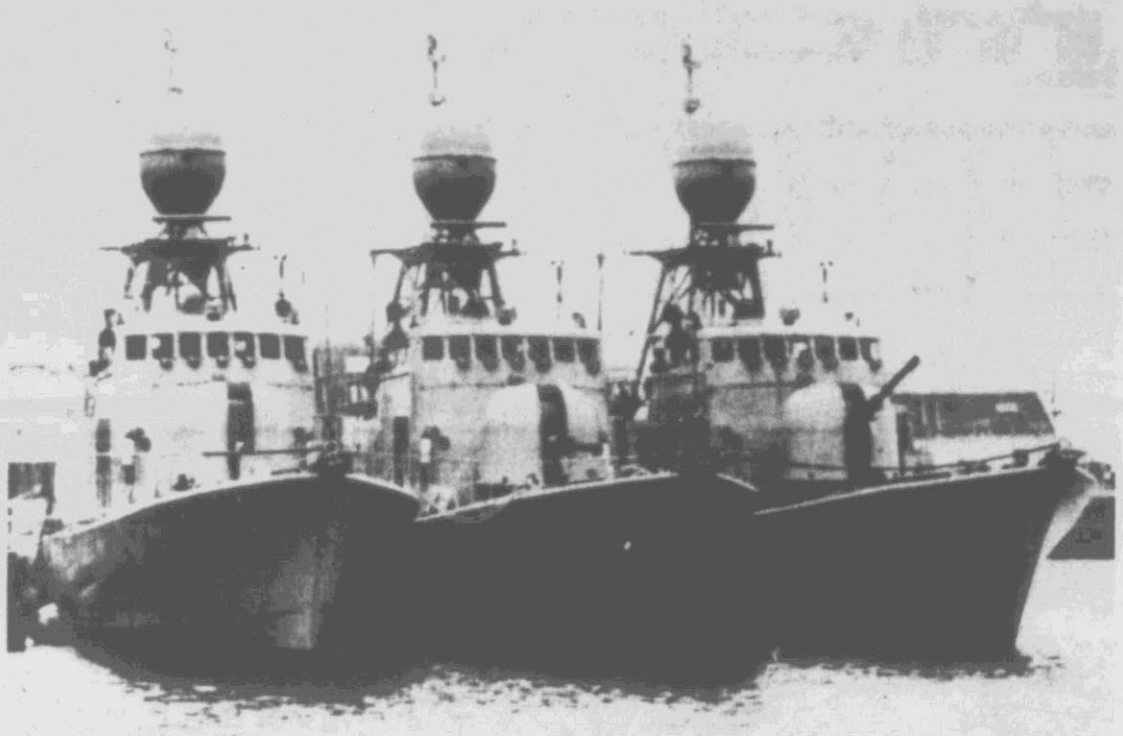

The 52 people convicted of armed insurrection and drug smuggling were executed by firing squad, the Tehran government said. But in the provincial city of Shiraz, the official radio said a homosexual and an adulterer were stoned to death Friday before a large crowd.

Firing squads have executed at least 300 people in the eight weeks since the ouster of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who fled to France July 29 and received political asylum.

In Paris, a spokesman for the Freedom-Seekers' movement which claimed responsibility for hijacking the gunboat said the vessel was "in international waters" and was "the seat of the free government of Iran in exile."

The spokesman said the vessel was preparing for a mission against Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime. He gave no other details, but there were reports on Arab radio stations that the boat was sailing to Egypt.

The elder son of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who has proclaimed himself Shah Reza II, is living in exile in Egypt. He recently issued a statement saying he was in contact with exile groups seeking the overthrow of the Khomeini regime, but he did not name any of them.

GUNBOATS ... The French-built gunboats belonging to Iran are shown in Cherbourg harbor where they were built. One of the three boats was seized at sea off Spain Thursday and taken to Morocco by a group believed loyal to the late Shah of Iran. The other two boats reportedly are being held by the Spanish government. (AP Laserphoto)

The exact whereabouts of the 160-foot gunboat Tabarzin remained a mystery. It was commandeered Thursday in Spanish territorial waters enroute from the yard in Cherbourg, France, where it was built.

The Iranian Foreign Ministry said an investigation made "the hand of the CIA obvious in the piracy" of the boat off Spain's southern port of Cadiz. It reiterated claims the boat was now in Tangier, Morocco, which the Moroccan government has denied repeatedly.

The Foreign Ministry's statement said the hijacking was led by former Admiral Kamal Habibollahi, the exiled naval commander for the late shah.

The Iranian government's position was made public in statements broadcast by Tehran Radio and monitored in Beirut.

The statement claimed that former U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance helped Habibollahi escape from Iran after the monarchy's downfall in 1979. Documents proving Vance's role in the escape were turned over to Khomeini last year by militant students who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, the statement said without elaboration.

The students took over the embassy on Nov. 4, 1979, and 52 Americans were held hostage for 444 days.

Iran's commander-in-chief, Maj. Gen. Valiollah Fallahi, said in a broadcast interview that the Spanish government has a "commitment" to recover and return the gunboat.

"The theft of the boat occurred in Spanish territorial waters and therefore Spain has certain commitments to undertake...including the necessary procedures that would help the recovery," Fallahi said.

He said a special Iranian team has been set up to try to recover the gunboat "through diplomatic moves with Spain."

The boat was hijacked after a refueling stop during the journey from France's Atlantic shipyard of Cherbourg to Iran's Persian Gulf naval base of Bushehr.

Two other gunboats making the same journey continued toward Iran, but were forced Saturday night by heavy seas to take shelter in the Spanish port of Almeria, the Spanish Defense Ministry reported.

The Freedom-Seekers' movement, which claimed it pulled off the hijacking, is headed by retired four-star Gen. Bahram Aryana, a former Iranian chief of staff during the monarchy now living in exile in France.

Aryana, 73, left two weeks ago for the Iranian border region where 51 other generals and 200 junior officers assembled in a bid to mount an armed campaign to reinstate the monarchy before the end of the year, the London-based Saudi Arabian magazine al-Majalla reported Saturday.

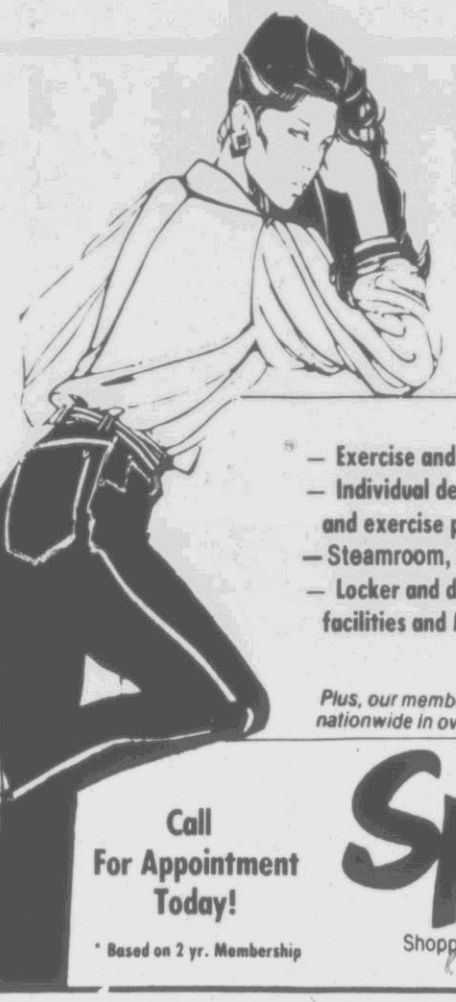

The magazine said Habibollahi belongs to Aryana's movement, which wants to put the late shah's elder son on a restored Iranian throne.

Bombs Thrown

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Bombs were hurled from speeding cars at homes of several prominent politicians, including that of former President Khondokar Mushtaq Ahmed where one person was slightly injured, police reported Saturday.

Other targets of the Friday night bombings were residences of Ataur Rahman Khan, head of the newly-formed 18-party Rightist Alliance and probable candidate in the Oct. 15 presidential Elections; Shafiul Alam Prodhan, founder of the tiny National Democratic Party and former chief of the Islamic Jamat Islami Party; and Golam Azam.

Democrat Gearing Up Now For GOP Challenge

Targeted by state and national Republican organizers as a beatable candidate in 1982, the North Carolina Democrat has found his re-election campaign must begin now if he is to fend off the GOP's challenge to his 8th District seat.

"I'm scared to death," one Hefner staffer said of the prospect of a multi-barrelled Republican attack. "It's going to be 15 months of hell."

Hefner, a 51-year-old gospel singer and radio station owner, doubts whether the kinds of media campaigns that boosted such Republicans as Sen. John East to victory would work in his district, which doesn't feature a single television station.

But the GOP appears to be gearing for a major campaign nonetheless. For example:

— Former Gov. James E. Holshouser, North Carolina's only Republican governor in this century, has organized a search committee to find a candidate and money to beat Hefner.

— The Congressional Club, the conservative fund-raising group for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., sent letters to Hefner constituents to pressure him into supporting President Reagan's budget cuts.

— The National Republican Congressional Committee is examining Hefner's district.

"I'd say we're extremely interested in that seat," a committee field organizer said.

"If we can get the right candidate, I think it's the most vulnerable district in the whole state," said Jim Godfrey, the GOP's 8th District chairman.

Hefner got a taste of how bitter the 1982 campaign might become after he refused in April to vote for Reagan's budget cuts. Holshouser and a group of Republicans went through the district advertising "Preparation H" — a cure for the 8th District that calls basically for ousting Hefner.

Hefner said Holshouser's campaign and the club's pressure were "smears," and even the ex-governor thought his campaign might have been in poor taste.

"I'm not going to sit idly by and let them do the character assassination on me that they did on Robert Morgan," he said, referring to the former senator upset by East.

Hefner added that voting for Reagan's plan wouldn't have helped quiet the GOP anyway.

"If you're a Democrat, you're going to be billed as a liberal and a big spender no matter what," Hefner said. "It wouldn't make any difference if you voted with the president 100 percent of the time."

The GOP holds four of the state's 11 congressional seats, and a Republican — Earl Ruth of Rowan County — represented the 8th District in the early 1970s before losing to Hefner in 1974.

The district also appears as a good base because it gave majorities in 1980 to Reagan and East. Meanwhile, six of the district's 11 counties elected Republicans to the General Assembly or county offices.

National Guard Pushing For Local Draft Boards

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — National Guard officers in North Carolina are working to re-establish 53 local draft boards, but state officials say the campaign does not mean they're getting ready for actually drafting young men.

The action is part of a nationwide effort to re-establish local draft boards. The U.S. Selective Service System has authorized the National Guard to search for people to serve on the local boards. Based on recommendations from the committees of Guard officers, governors are to select draft board members.

Federal officials and William H. McCachren, state director of the Selective Service System, have emphasized that no one would be classified for selection into the armed forces unless an emergency arises.

"To me, it does not indicate any additional preparation, such as getting ready for involuntary induction," McCachren said. "I don't relate this to the beefing up of the military" in President Reagan's 1981-82 budget.

Under the selective service law signed by President Jimmy Carter in 1980 — the first draft registration requirement since 1973 — a male must register at any post office within 30 days of his 18th birthday.

McCachren said Congress wanted the local boards to be in place if the classification system had to be resumed. The boards will be inactive unless the draft is resumed, when their major job would be to rule on individual requests for exemptions from military service.

People may be exempted for conscientious objections to combat, hardship cases in which the man is indispensible to his family and ministerial service.

McCachren said he hoped lists for North Carolina local board members will be given to Gov. Jim Hunt this month. McCachren said his office has mailed letters to civic clubs, local government leaders, veterans organizations and other groups across the state to invite them to submit names of applicants for seats on the board.

Each board will have five members who serve without pay.

The system for selecting draft board members was criticized during the previous draft. People charged that it did not include women, young people and minority groups.

Broxie J. Nelson, a Raleigh attorney and a major with the Selective Service Section of the N.C. National Guard, said the officers are trying to avoid those problems this time.

"We're trying to get boards that reflect the racial, cultural and ethnic backgrounds of the areas," Nelson said.

There are some people who are ineligible to serve on the boards. They include people in the armed forces or reserves, people more than 60 years old and people receiving retirement or disability pensions from the armed forces.

Graham's Mother Dies

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — The woman whom evangelist Billy Graham said "preached some of the best sermons I have ever heard" — his mother, Morrow Coffey Graham — died late Friday after a summerlong illness. She was 89.

Her funeral will take place at 3 p.m. Sunday at Calvary Church, where her internationally famous son is expected to make some brief personal remarks. Burial will be in the Steele Creek Presbyterian Church Cemetery, also in Charlotte.

A meeting in Minnesota with his evangelistic foundation kept Graham from joining his family at his mother's bedside when she died, but he said Friday he visited frequently during the summer.

"In the last two or three weeks I would have to lean down so I could hear her whispering," he said. "Mostly it was Bible verses, or how much she looked forward to going to heaven, or how much we had meant to her."

Mrs. Graham displayed much religious devotion all her life and passed it along to her children. Her younger son, Melvin, recalled that he and Billy were not permitted to go and play until after they had memorized some Scripture.

"She knew the Bible like few women in Charlotte and she lived very close to what she knew," he said.

Billy Graham once described her as "a woman who has preached some of the best sermons I have ever heard in my life."

Born Feb. 23, 1892, in the Steele Creek section of Mecklenburg County, she married W. Franklin Graham, a Mecklenburg County dairy farmer, in 1916. Her husband died 19 years ago.

She taught music and was active in the Steele Creek and Chalmers Memorial Reform Presbyterian churches before she and her husband became charter members of Charlotte's Calvary Church.

In addition to her sons, Mrs. Graham is survived by two daughters, Catherine Morrow McElroy and Jean Coffey Graham; 12 grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren.

Martin Honored

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — The North Carolina Association of County Commissioners honored three of its former presidents Saturday as Commissioners of the Year.

They are J. Richard Conder of Richmond County, M.H. "Jack" Brock of Harnett County, and R.L. "Bob" Martin of Pitt County.

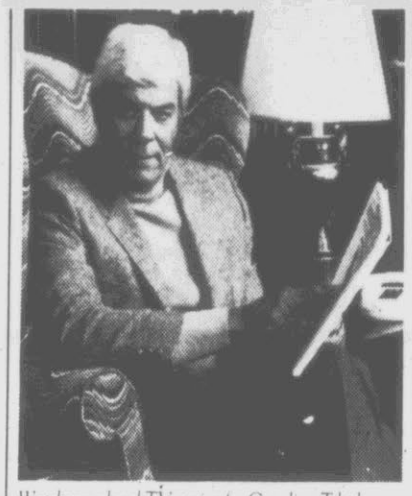

Conder recently become the first North Carolinian ever elected president of the National Association of Counties. He has been a commissioner for 19 years.

Brock has been a commissioner for 18 years and has served on the national association's board of directors since 1975.

Martin has spent 25 years on the Pitt County board of commissioners and has been on the national association board for two years.

In other action Saturday, Grover C. Lancaster of Craven County succeeded Claud "Buck" O'Shields of New Hanover County as president of the state association.

Old State College's 'Big Five' Held Upper Hand From The Start

By DAN FESPERMAN
The Charlotte News

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One is the governor. Another might have been. A third probably would've been but died before getting a chance. And the last two are still hoping they will be.

Add them up and you get the Big Five of old State College, the vintage quintet of farmboys who virtually were student government at N.C. State between 1958 and 1960 — Jim Hunt, Phil Carlton, Robert Futrelle, Eddie Knox and Tom Gilmore.

Carlton, class of '60, might have been but lost his taste for politics and is now a justice on the state Supreme Court.

Knox, class of '60, the mayor of Charlotte, and Gilmore, a high-ranking state bureaucrat and former legislator, class of '59, have set their sights on the 1984 race to succeed Hunt.

State College was a school of about 5,500 mostly male students during the Big Five's reign, and a silver-haired guy named Everett Case was coaching basketball.

Most students were preoccupied with the customary collegiate activities — piling into banged up heaps with beers in hand, grabbing up tickets to the Four Freshmen concert or howling at the Beat Carolina rally.

But the men of the Big Five didn't go in much for that sort of nonsense. They were too busy planning the future of the state under the auspices of the campus Young Democrats Club.

There was Hunt, ultra-serious in a suit, a wide-brimmed hat and a cresting wave of hair big enough for a surfboard. A skinny kid, he didn't smoke or drink but occasionally hitchhiked 36 hours to see his fiance, Carolyn, in Iowa.

There was Carlton, the only bonafide cut up of the bunch.

And finally Knox, a smooth talker from northern Mecklenburg with little time for fun and games except where campus politics were concerned.

The Big Five had all vaguely known each other during high school, mostly through the Future Farmers of America Club.

"All of us came through FFA," Hunt said, "and it gave us super training in parliamentary procedure and public speaking."

To some fellow students, the Fig Five were doubtless too serious with their talk of the state's future. There was no way these guys were actually going to run the state, so why pay attention?

But they have, do and may still run the state for years to come.

And Professor Abraham Holtzman figured all along that they'd pull it off.

"I don't think we've ever had a group before or since who've come close to them," he said. "They were all ambitious, they were all linked together, they all knew where they were going and what they were going to do, and, by God, they did it."

Holtzman, a political science professor who was sometimes a mentor for the Big Five, was particularly impressed with Hunt, who in those days was called Jimmy.

After the first day of class, Holtzman recalls, he told his wife that one of his new students "would be governor, or maybe president someday."

"His sharpness, his control and his polish," Holtzman said. "For all of that to come across on the first day ... my wife and I have talked about that for years."

"Hunt was always the obvious fellow for real success in the future," Carlton said. "He just had an unbelievable maturity at that age."

Hunt says today that he didn't specifically have the governorship in his sights while in college, although he was certainly kidded about the prospect then.

And, he didn't mind occasionally playing along, said Charlotte veterinarian Royce Hagaman, class of '59.

"He would kind of laugh about it and get a twinkle in his eye, and that lower lip would stick out and quiver a little bit," Hagaman said. "But there was no doubt that some day he planned to be governor and that he was working toward it."

Thomas Wolfe, the novelist who went to college about 40 years earlier and 26 miles down the road in Chapel Hill, also detected such ambitions among fellow students.

And in the state of North Carolina, wrote Wolfe, somewhat cynically, any would-be governor worth his salt "developed in college the political craft he was later to exert in party affairs ... came deliberately to the university to bait and set his first traps; deliberately he made those friendships that were most likely to benefit him later. By his junior year, if he was successful, he had a political manager, who engineered his campus ambitions; he moved with circumspection, and spoke with a trace of pomp nicely weighed with cordiality ..."

By Hunt's junior year, he was student body president, and he had not one but two political managers.

Planned Jim Hunt Re-elected President Knox, Fountain, Baxter Win

Hunt Makes Post-Election Statement

TECHNICIAN PROJECTION ...The headline on April 24, 1958, in The Technician, student newspaper at North Carolina State College, told the story: 'Jim Hunt Re-Elected President.' Hunt was student government president, is now governor and has been mentioned for other politicial positions. He was one of five men at old State College in the late '50s who have held prominent roles in North Carolina politics. Eddie Knox, shown in the second photo above, was student government vice president under Hunt. Since then he has served two terms in the Legislature, is now mayor of Charlotte and plans to run for governor in 1984. (AP Laserphoto)

(Futrelle, who earlier headed the YDC, had graduated the year before).

The following year, Knox succeeded Hunt as student body president, while Carlton was elected president of the senior class (Carlton and Knox agreed in advance, at Hunt's request, to divvy up those offices).

For Knox, involvement in campus politics had come almost by accident.

"It was sort of an unusual thing," Knox said. "A fellow named Doc Ray in the freshman class said to me, 'Why don't you run for vice president of the class?' That sounded like sort of a presumptious thing, and then I found out he was running for class president. We didn't run on a ticket, but we both put up signs all over campus ('Use Your Head, Vote For Ed')."

"Anyway, he lost and I won."

Once Knox had tasted victory, he was hooked. He soon formed alliances with the rest of the Big Five.

And through all their subsequent campaigns and twice-a-month meetings of the YDC, the members of the Big Five, as Wolfe put it, "moved with circumspection."

"We didn't party much, we might have been a little prudish in that regard," Knox said.

"We had plenty of fun, but we were very serious about wanting to change things," Hunt said. "I don't know whether that came out of my religion or the values my family taught me, but I had worked hard growing up on the farm, as all these guys had ... goshamighty, by the time I was a little boy I'd saved every penny I had and bought purebred Holstein heifers, and I weighed the milk and sold it, and all the money I got I invested."

Part of the group's seriousness, said Carlton, arose from the state of holy matrimony, which struck Hunt, Carlton and Knox during undergraduate days. Carlton remained single until law school.

"If we had been four single guys (Futrelle had graduated) living in a fraternity house, then I could tell you about how we all got drunk and played basketball nude in the middle of the night," Carlton said. "And I did some stuff like that, because I was single. But they were married, and I was impressed even then with the difference between what a married and a single student could accomplish."

Maybe so, said Knox, who lived with his wife in $13 per month Vetville Barracks housing, "But another circumstance was that neither one of us could afford a lot of that kind of stuff."

His wife-to-be, Carolyn, lived in Iowa, and he hitchhiked to see her every chance he got, even though it took about 36 hours, one way.

"I had it down to a fine science," Hunt said. "I would sleep in the car once I was satisfied that the driver was a safe driver, and that he was a straight guy. I had some weird experiences, and I got out a time or two." Hunt took along a switchblade knife just in case.

In the meantime, Hunt, Gilmore and Carlton had gotten to know Terry Sanford, a promising young Democrat with his sights set on the governor's race for 1960.

"I wasn't anymore than a sophomore or junior (in college) when he (Sanford) asked me if I wold rearrange my schedule to graduate in January of '60 (a semester early) to work for him," Carlton said.

Sanford also invited Carlton's buddies in on the action, and they often met at Sanford's home in Fayetteville with a handful of other college Democrats from across the state.

"He would charcoal hamburgers, and we'd sit around and talk about the future of the state," said Gilmore.

Preyer lost, and Carlton was crushed.

"I was completely disillusioned by the entire political process," he said. "I was through with it."

Carlton then became a judge, but in 1977 Hunt asked him to join his gubernatorial cabinet as director of crime control and public safety, and he accepted. Two years later, Hunt rewarded his old buddy's dedication with an appointment to the state Supreme Court.

Hunt had been rewarded by Carlton much earlier.

Gilmore, meanwhile, had become a state legislator. And when his friend Hunt was elected governor in 1976, Gilmore helped Hunt by leading floor debate for a bill to allow a referendum on gubernatorial succession.

Knox, meanwhile, had served two terms in the state Senate but lost interest and returned home in '74.

"I was pretty content just practicing law until Hunt came down here in '76 and roused me up again," Knox said.

But once again, Knox was hooked on politics, and he won the Charlotte mayoral race in 1979.

Gilmore, who is now deputy secretary of the state Department of Human Resources, after being appointed by Hunt in 1978, also plans to run for governor in '84.

Futrelle had been elected in late 1968 to the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, and nothing but promise was on his horizon.

But in July of 1969, he was badly burned while trying to rescue the victims of a fiery plane crash.

He was rushed to N.C. Memorial Hospital follwoing the accident that eventully took his life, and one of the first persons to visit him was Hunt.

"It was the night that man first walked on the moon," Hunt said. "I remember it very clearly, and I remember how hard I prayed that he'd live ... I'm convinced he would have become governor of this state if he had lived."

Tobacco Prices Climb As Leaf Offerings Improve

By United Press International

Improved quality more than overcame a small drop in grade prices to boost the overall average paid for flue-cured tobacco in the Carolinas and Virginia last week, the Federal-State Market News Service reported. .

About 22.62 million pounds of leaf moved in warehouses across South Carolina and border North Carolina for an average of $165.58 per hundredweight, up $3.26 from the previous week's average. For the season's first four weeks, volume has totaled 95.35 million pounds for $160.93 per hundred pounds.

South Carolina contributed 13.04 million pounds of that total, selling for an average of $164.41 per hundredweight. The Palmetto State has sold 53.85 million pounds this season at $158.93 per hundred pounds.

Border North Carolina auctioneers, meanwhile, sold 9.58 million pounds last week for $167.17 per hundred pounds, making the season totals 41.5 million pounds at $163.52 per hundredwight.

The service said prices declined for most grades but quality improved to the point where leaf composed 34 percent of the offerings.

The Flue-Cured Stabilization Corp. took in 11.8 percent of the sales last week, up 2.1 percent from the previous week. It's season average rose to 5.9 percent, still below the 16.1 percent that had been received by this time last year.

Sales opportunity for this week is 18.25 million pounds. About 36.6 percent of the crop has been sold.

Eastern Belt sales totaled 31.87 million pounds at $166.07 per hundred pounds, $3.97 higher than the previous week's average. In 14 days of sales, 113.74 million pounds of leaf has solf for $163.28 per hundredweight.

Most grade averages held firm or lost $1 or $2 per hundred, the service said. Top grades sold for $188 per hundred pounds. Leaf and cutters comprised 53 percent of the offerings. About 30 percent of the belt's crop has been sold.

A relatively high 16.7 percent of the sales were taken in by the Stabilization Corporation, pushing the season average to 10.1 percent. About 12.1 percent of the Eastern Belt crop was put under loan by this time last season.

Sales opportunity for this week, excluding the Sandhills markets, is 26.86 million pounds.

Old and Middle Markets, like the others, featured heavy volume and improved quality. The belt sold 29.33 million pounds for $148.65 per hundredweight, raising the saeson total to 64.15 million pounds at $148.44 per hundred pounds.

The service said North Carolina's part of the belt handled 19.71 million pounds at an even $150 per hundredweight. Tar Heel markets have sold 47.32 million pounds at $149.75 per hundredweight.

In Virginia, 9.6 million pounds sold for $145.88 per hundred pounds last week, pushing the season total to 16.84 million pounds at $144.77 per hundredweight.

About 60 percent of the grades saw price drops of $1 to $6 per hundredweight. Leaf and cutters comprised 17 percent of the offerings.

About 5.7 percent of the crop went to stabilization, increasing the season average to 3.8 percent — below last year's mark of 4.8 percent at this point in the season.

Sales opportunity for the belt, including the Sandhills, is 28.23 million pounds this week.

Flies Found In New Area

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Officials quarantined more than 264 square miles Saturday after finding at least 56 crop-threatening fruit flies in an area responsible for much of the state's $14 billion-a-year farm industry.

Richard Steffen, spokesman for the Mediterranean fruit fly eradication project in Los Gatos, said produce coming from the quarantined slice of the San Joaquin Valley must be fumigated or processed before it can be shipped out of the area.

"It won't have that much effect on the area, because the main crop being grown there now is canning tomatoes," Steffen said.

He said the peach and apricot harvest in the fertile valley, which produces about $8 billion yearly in agricultural revenue, just ended.

Company Fined

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — State Occupational Safety and Health Administration officials have fined a Concord battery salvage firm almost $13,000 after local health officials linked it to 24 cases of lead poisoning among children.

The state Department of Labor's OSHA division also ordered Martin's Scrap Recycling Inc., located on U.S. 29 west of Concord, to shut down its hammermill area, where battery casings are ground up.

Company owner Bill Martin refused to comment on the action. His company will have until Sept. 4 to contest the citations with OSHA's three-member review board and Martin may appeal the board's ruling to superior court.

The company was cited and fined $11,520 for exposing workers to excessive lead levels, $720 for violating noise standards and $640 for violating acid handling standards.

If Martin's company fails to comply with state orders, it could be fined $10,000 a day for each willful violation and $1,000 for each serious violation.

Charles Jeffress, assistant state labor commissioner, said the citation called the lead exposure levels in the hammermill area "willful, serious and repeated violations which pose an imminent danger" to employees.

Surplus Holdings To Cost More

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It will be more expensive for the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. to hold surplus leaf for future resale under a new federal tobacco loan policy now taking effect.

But officials say the change should not directly affect farmers because the corporation, not the farmers themselves, is responsible for repaying federal loans.

The corporation, with money borrowed from the U.S. Commodity Credit Corp., buys all tobacco failing to bring an auction bid that is at least 1 cent a pound above the federally established support price.

Under the old policy, the interest rate of the loan was set in the year the crop was purchased. The corporation then repaid the loan at that rate over the several years it took to sell the crop. For example, the corporation still is repaying at 6 percent interest the federal loan with which it bought tobacco in 1975.

But under the new policy, the interest rate will be adjusted every six months, in October and April. As long as interest rates continue to rise, the loan rate for the crop will be raised semiannually. The current rate for the 1981 crop is 14.5 percent.

"It will certainly have a deleterious effect on the cost of our tobacco, as compared to the fixed interest rates of, say, the 1975 crop," said Fred Bond, director of the cooperative. "The trend of fixed rates has been positive for us, since rates have gone up. If they had gone down it would be a different story."

The Reagan administration announced the new policy earlier this year, saying the fixed-rate policy had cost the Commodity Credit Corp. $510 million over the past 50 years.

Purchases by the flue-cured cooperative this past week made up about 11 percent of the leaf sold in all markets. It has 406 million pounds of tobacco on hand, including 19 million pounds purchased this season.

Anniversary Of Elvis' Death Brings Thousands To Grave

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — The king of rock and roll died four years ago Sunday, but "Elvismania" lives on.

Some 10,000 fans were in town the week before the anniversary, many returning for a second and third visit to the city Elvis Presley called home until his death Aug. 16, 1977.

The throngs at the gate to Presley's Graceland mansion in Memphis thickened early in the week in anticipation of an array of events to commemorate the superstar.

A memorabilia display and Presley movies were available for Elvis fans. A weekend candlelight service was scheduled outside Graceland, and "The Masters" and several other gospel groups planned a Sunday memorial service at the convention center.

Some of the Graceland visitors said they came out of curiosity. But most, like Betty Page, were Elvis devotees.

Mrs. Page said she moved to Memphis in 1975 and "got hooked" on Elvis. She said she met Elvis once at the mansion gate and was attracted by his magnetic personality.

Most visitors, especially those from out of state, had their pictures taken in front of the iron mansion gate fashioned in the shape of a musical note.

The grounds to Graceland, where Presley lived in relative seclusion just before his death, are open to the public. Visitors can walk up the curved driveway to the "meditation garden" beside the white-columned mansion where Presley's grave lies between those of his parents.

Presley died at the age of 42. His death was officially ruled as heart trouble, but the multitude of prescription pills he reportedly took on a daily basis are believed to have contributed to his early death.

Presley's personal physician of 11 years, Dr. George Nichopoulos, is scheduled to go on trial in Criminal Court next month on charges of over-prescribing drugs to the late rock king.

New ZIP Codes In Use

The much-debated nine-digit ZIP code has emerged in Greenville, according to postal officials, but its use is currently limited to post office box holders and business firms.

"The P.O. boxes are using them and businesses are," said Sonny Lancaster, supervisor of mails and delivery for the Greenville Post Office. "We've notified all post ofice box holders and business firms that they can begin utilizing the added digits."

Lancaster added that the general public won't be notified concerning use of the extra zip until February. "We would like to emphasize, too, that it is completely voluntary.

"If firms will start using it, having stationary printed up with the new ZIPs, it will help everyone get used to the change," he urged.

Lancaster noted that a hyphen must be used between the old digits and the four new ones.

"We're planning to put up a bulletin baord at the main post office to answer questions about the system," explained the supervisor. "There will be a box to drop questions into, then we'll post the answers on the bulletin board."

Persons having questions about the expanded ZIPs should call Lancaster at 752-2153 or Jim Little, plus four coordinator, Rocky Mount, at 446-8182.

ECU Helping To Train Area's Rescue Squads

by GEORGETTE F. HEDRICK
ECU Medical Writer

Bobby Braswell and his colleagues on the Goldsboro rescue squad were watching the popular television show "Dallas" when the telephone rang with a call for a possible heart attack victim.

"We had been to the same residence on a heart attack call before," said Braswell, a 10-year veteran of the rescue squad. "But this time we were better prepared because we were able to offer advance life support services."

Training more emergency medical technicians in advanced life support is the goal of a program that started at the East Carolina University School of Medicine three years ago, according to Dr. E. Jackson Allison Jr., chairman of emergency medicine.

Today, Allison says, the advanced training provides the basis for the development of an emergency medical services system for the region, a project supported by a $500,000 grant from the Department of Health and Human Services and local matching funds from 29 county governments in Eastern North Carolina.

"Appropriate training is just one component of a complete emergency system," said Allison during an interview in his office at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. "The region needs a complete network of trained personnel, facilities and equipment to effectively respond to any emergency — from a traffic accident or cardiac arrest to mass victims of a fire, explosion, or hurricane."

Allison serves as medical director for the Eastern North Carolina Emergency Medical Services Systems, the private, non-profit corporation based in Washington, that developed the grant for the project. Governed by a 30-member board of directors, the agency is responsible for implementing the comprehensive plan to improve not only the skills of emergency personnel but also the communication systems and equipment with which they work.

In 1978, the medical school began poffering the classroom instruction required for certification in advanced life support, a level of care in which emergency personnel in the field receive and respond to medical orders from hospital-based emergency department physicians.

Fourteen members of the Goldsboro rescue squad started the 120 hours of instruction in September 1980 and completed the course in April. On May 1, the first day the advanced services were offered, the squad received the call about the heart attack victim and put their skills to work.

"We started basic life support on the patients," said Braswell, "and then O called the emergency department doctor (Dr. Bryson Bateman) at Wayne Memorial Hospital to request advanced life support.

"The patient made it through just fine. In many cases, having advanced life support and the contact with a physician will really make a difference."

What may also make the difference between life and death is then availability of appropriate equipment and a dependable communication system, said Allison, who noted that the grant will partially fund the purchase of essential life-support equipment requested by rescue squads and hospital emergency departments in the area.

For example, the grant will pay half the cost of a pediatric splint for Perquimans County, an ambulance stretcher for Wilson County and anti-shock trousers for Onslow County.

Hospitals in Chowan, Dare, and Wilson counties will receive mobile radios purchased with grant funds.

The project will also provide 11 community colleges in the region with audiovisual and teaching equipment to supplement the instruction offered in basic life support.

"The end result will be better patient care and more lives saved," said Allison.

Counties in the 29-county service are Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Carteret, Chowan, Craven, Currituck, Dare, Duplin, Edgecombe, Gates, Greene, Halifax, Hertford, Hyde, Jones, Lenoir, Martin, Nash, Northampton, Onslow, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrrell, Washington, Wayne, and Wilson Counties.

Veterans' Condition Is Pleasing To Emory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

In just three short weeks, the first game of the 1981 campaign will be history as far as the East Carolina University Pirates are concerned. But three weeks is a very short time to prepare for that contest, Coach Ed Emory readily admits.

The coach, in his second year at the helm, began practice sessions for the whole team on Friday. The newcomers — freshmen, walkons and transfers, began workouts on Monday, and were joined by the veterans for drills Friday afternoon.

"Three weeks isn't enough time," Emory said. "I'd really like to have four weeks, but under NCAA rules, you can't. You are allowed 29 practices before your first game. You can have one-a-day from the time classes start, and two-a-day prior to that. That brings us back to Friday afternoon."

Actually, the Pirates are currently undergoing "four-a-days." But it involves breaking down what would normally be two long practices into four shorter ones.

Emory was pleased with the condition in which the veterans reported. "Our test scores in strength, flexability and power give us some excitement and enthusiasm."

For instance, Greg Stewart, who wound up the season last year as number one quarterback, reported back 15 pounds lighter. He ran a 4.7 40 and is expected to be competing hard to retain that number one spot. Carlton Nelson, who was injured midseason and missed the spring following a neck operation, is much strong, and has put on needed weight. "He hasn't complained about the injury yet so we are hoping that it has healed," Emory said.

"We just pleased with the overall speed increase and the stregth and power increases," the coach said.

Roy Wiley, a fullback, and Marvin Cobb, another running back, both have reported back stronger. Wiley, who ended the spring at 260, is back to a more managable 230. Split end Carlton Frazier looks, according to Emory, to be in excellent shape "and he is so, so fast."

There are exciting prospects of a real battle at the quarterback position between the two regulars from last year, Stewart and Nelson, along with transfer Kevin Ingram from Villanova and sophomore Larry Brobst.

"We're really going to have competition at nearly every position with the exception of strong safety and rush end, and there Chris Skeeter could become a real surprise," Emory said.

The defense is another area that is pleasing to Emory so far. "We have seven to nine people who could be considered as starters last year, who have run the 40 in 4.7." One of the horses here is defensive end Jody Schulz, 6-3, 235, who dashed through the distance in 4.6, and who has added strength due to the weight program.

Several newcomers have been impressive in their work so far. Like Ricky Nichols, a wide receiver, who ran two 4.3's and who has a vertical jump of 33 inches. "He has outstanding potential," Emory noted. Or like tight ends Damon Pope, who ran a 4.6 or Thad Smith, who stands 6-5 and weighs 240.

Leading a crop of new running backs are Jimmy Waldron, who was the leading rusher for the East in the Greensboro All-Star game, along with Stephon Adams and James Bunn. Add to them Milton Corsey, a transfer from the defunct Villanova football program, and Emory feels he has a group of outstanding rookies.

"Ingram (quarterback from Villanova) has looked very good also," Emory added.

Defensively, newcomer Aaron Carter didn't pass his physical, and will miss the year. He was found to be suffering from a hernia and has returned home for surgery. He will enter ECU in January.

On the plus side, however, Steve Mullins and Fred Garrett, defensive ends; Steve Johnson, nose guard; P.J. Jordan ("possibly the finest prospect ever at East Carolina") at linebacker; and defensive backs Bernard Wynne and Kim Walker and former Rose star Will Barrett (a Chowan transfer) all have looked good so far.

Chuck Bushbeck, the third of the Villanova connection, is by far the leading candidate to take over the placement duties, but Emory notes that his mere presence has brought about an improvement by the other kickers in the stable.

The punting game will probably be handled by either Jeff Bolch, Gray Cooper or Tommy Barnhardt, all of whom have looked good in the early drills.

"Our top priorty is to take up where we left off last spring and strive for more fundamental improvement. We've got to be a better coached football team. We've got to eliminate our mistakes, both mentally and physically. We can't have missed assignments. We have to block better both in the line and in the backfield. Our backs have got to be blockers first and ballcarriers second.

"We've also got to establish a passing game. The line has to be improved. We're bigger than we were last year, but we've got to be better too," Emory said.

Defensively, the same holds true in many ways. "We are going to be young on defense. We're probably only going to have two seniors in the starting lineup. In fact we may not have all that many on offense either.

"So we're still a young team, and we have to put it all together, find the right chemistry and make it work," the coach said.

Up For Grabs
East Carolina University began football practice on Friday afternoon, and one of the jobs up for grabs is the quarterback slot. The top four candidates, all trying to get their hands on the ball, are, left to right: Kevin Ingram, a transfer from Villanova; Larry Brobst, a sophomore; Carlton Nelson, last year's starter; and Greg Stewart, who took over after Nelson was injured in mid-season. Maltbie Vaults Into Hartford Lead

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — After he birdied the 17th hole in the $300,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open Saturday, Roger Maltbie felt he had the third-round lead wrapped up and it felt good.

"I was telling my caddy it's like running into an old friend," Maltbie said. "It's been a long time since I've been in this situation."

Maltbie, a three-time PGA tour winner, stormed in from 4 shots back to take a 2-stroke lead with a 7-under-par 64 in the third round. He managed to build his 13-under-197 total despite strong, gusty and swirling winds on the par-71, 6,534-yard Wethersfield Country Club course.

"I've never beat 200 for three rounds," said Maltbie. 'That's as well as I've ever shot."

"All in all, with no bogeys, it was kind of an easy round, really," he added.

Two strokes behind Maltbie were Fred Couples, Bill Kratzert and Curtis Strange. Couples shot the day's low, an 8-under-par 63, while Strange recorded a 65 and Kratzert 69.

Lonnie Nielsen, the leader for the first two rounds, shot a 71 and fell back to a tie with six other golfers for third place, 3 strokes off the pace. The tie included Lon Hinkle with a 64; George Cadle, 65; Jack Renner, 67; Hubert Green, 67; Mark O'Meara, 70; and Mark Lye, 70.

"I felt pretty much in control of my game. I missed a few fairways by just inches and the putts were rolling over the edges," Nielsen said.

Maltbie's round included seven birdies and no bogeys. He birdied five of his final nine holes on a course that many consider easy because of its lack of distance. His score was 1 stroke higher than the GHO record for three rounds, set in 1977, by Kratzert.

A seven-year pro, Maltbie has three tour victories and $342,423 in career earnings. His best finish this year is a tie for seventh-place in the Sea Pines Classic at Hilton Head, S.C., in March.

While acknowledging the wind caused him to miscalculate on two es, Maltbie said, "The wind doesn't affect how the balls roll on the greens. If you don't hit the ball solidly you could have quite a bit of trouble."

Couples, 21, who turned pro in January, had 10 birdies in his third round, but bogeyed two holes, including the 17th, to stop what could have been an even better round.

"This is probably the second or third time (since turning pro) that I've been near the lead," he said.

Strange's 65 included six birdies, an eagle and two bogeys.

"I probably didn't play as well as I scored," he said.

Pac-10, Big Ten Back NCAA Against CFA

DENVER (AP) — Executive officers of the Pacific 10 and Big 10 conferences met Saturday to reaffirm their loyalty to the NCAA and voted jointly not to join the College Football Association.

The decision throws the weight of the two conferences behind the National Collegiate Athletic Association's major college football television plan as opposed to the CFA's college television plan, said Pacific 10 Commissioner Wiles Hallock.

The CFA plan is seen as a major effort to defy control of major college teleivision by the NCAA.

The 62-college member CFA will meet in Atlanta next Friday to determine its membership's position on its own college football televison plan with NBC or agree to the NCAA plan with CBS and ABC.

The NCAA position is that CFA members do not have right to develop there own television plan within the NCAA.

The NCAA recently completed negotiations with CBS and ABC for a four-year college television package which would pay about $263.5 million over the period.

The CFA reportedly has negotiated a $180 million package for four years with NBC.

The Pacific 10 is made up of Washington State, Washington, Oregon, Oregon State, Stanford, California, UCLA, Southern California, Arizona and Arizona State.

The Big 10 members are Ohio State, Michigan, Michigan State, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Northwestern, Minnesota, Purdue and Wisconsin.

Collins Helps Patriots Win

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — New England's Tony Collins scampered into the end zone from two yards out Saturday night for the go-ahead touchdown as the Patriots edged Tampa Bay 17-16 in a National Football League preseason game.

The Buccaneers led 13-3 at the half, but the Pats exploded in the third quarter with two touchdowns, the first by Ken Toler, who pounced on a teammate's fumble in the end zone, followed by Collins' run around the right end.

The only first-half score for New England was a 33-yard field goal by John Smith.

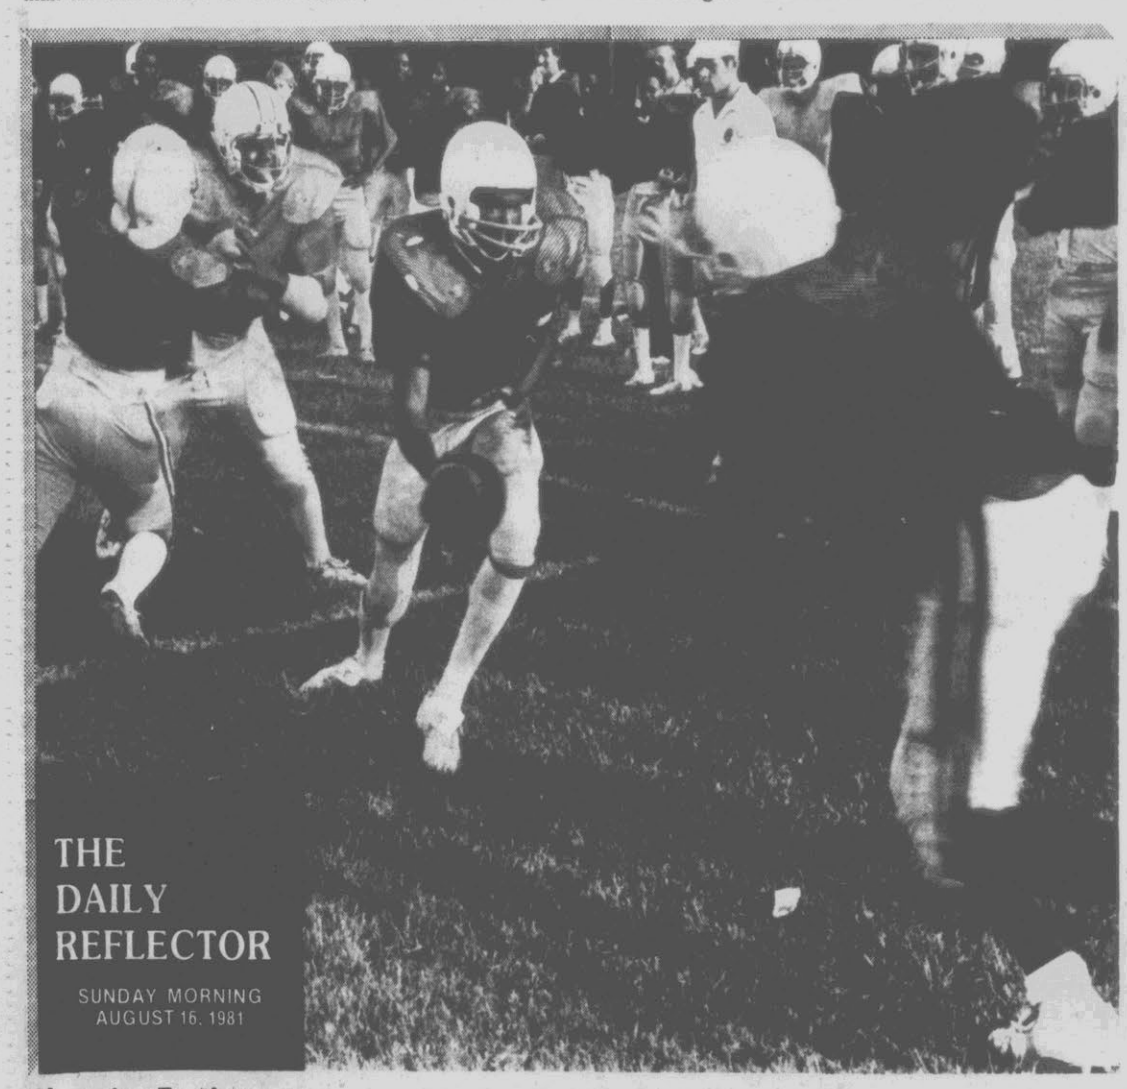

Tampa Bay opened the scoring on its first possession of the game when Doug Williams lobbed a 2-yard pass to Jimmy Giles, a score made possible by Mike Washington's interception of a Matt Cavanaugh pass.

Yepremian made it 10-0 later in the quarter with a 29-yard field goal. He added one from 28 yards out near the end of the half.

New England marched 58 yards in nine plays for its first touchdown. Running back Horace Ivory was carrying the ball for the Pats from 8 yards out, but fumbled into the end zone and Toler, a wide receiver, recovered for the score.

Changing Tactics

Rose Runs Into Some Problems During Switch To I-Formation

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

With two weeks gone, and still three weeks ahead, interim football coach Ronald Vincent has found some things to be happy about, but is far from being satisfied with his Rose High School Rampants.

The Rampants, after a week of conditioning drills, went through their first week in pads last week, and will scrimmage at Washington on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. By then, Vincent hopes to see some improvement.

There have been two problems so far. One of them was expected, but the other was not.

The Rampants are switching this year from the wishbone to the I-formation on offense. "The system hasn't been learned yet," Vincent said Saturday. "But I think a lot of it is in the timing. In the wishbone, you hit and go, but in the I, you have to hold your blocks longer. You have to sustain, especially on the back side, and by both linemen and backs.

"The players are coming along well in learning their assignments, but it could be better and I'm not fully pleased with that aspect either," Vincent added.

The biggest letdown, however, has been in the play of the offensive line. "We haven't blocked well yet — at least on the run. They have done a pretty good job of blocking on the pass, but we need both. We're still looking for the right combination in the line, and for some leadership there, too."

The passing game, so far, is ahead of the running game. "We are really throwing the ball extremely well," the coach said. "Our quarterbacks don't have their timing down yet, but it's still been fine." The three vieing for that position include Tom Buie, Barry Smith and Kenny Kirkland.

Buie missed nearly a week of practice to participate in the Senior Babe Ruth baseball League regional playoffs in Nashville, Tenn., last week, and Vincent acknowledges that it hurt him, but that he should catch up quickly.

But the big delight is the corps of receivers that the three have to throw to. They include Chris McLawhorn, perhaps the top college prospect of the Rampants, Marty Barnes, and Jule Budacz at split end, and Donnell Lee and Ashley Ferrell at slot backs. "All of them have been catching the ball extremely well," Vincent pointed out.

Another problem on offense is going to be the new downfield blocking rule. This year, for the first time, there will be no blocking below the waist outside the neutral zone. "This goes against everything the players have been taught in the past," Vincent said. "It's going to be very hard to unlearn it. They are so used to seeing it, it just comes natural (to thrown the illegial block). Sometimes when you even cut them in the midsection, it looks like (an illegial block)."

Vincent said that in Friday's scrimmage, eight calls were made on bad blocks by the officials. "But everyone is going to have trouble with this rule," the coach added.

Defensively, the Rampants appear to be in much better shape. There is more experience there, although Vincent notes that experience on defense doesn't count quite as much as on offense. "We have good speed, and pretty good depth.

"But we're going to have to depend on the defense to carry us, especially in the early going," he said.

The kicking game should be sound once it rounds into shape. "I was really concerned about it due to the graduation losses," Vincent said. "But we seem to be coming around okay."

Currently Roger Williams, Sammy Hodges and Frank Norris are all battling for the punting job, while Buie, Williams and sophomore soccer-style kicker Willie Levett are going for the placement job.

While there have been some disappointments, Vincent has also found a few surprises. "Several of our juniors have a chance to start this year, and have looked very good. Donnell Lee (split end) looks extremely good. William Rhodes (defensive tackle), Reggie Clark (linebacker), Hodges (safety) and Calvin Joyner (corner back) have all looked very, very good at times."

The scrimmage this week should tell Vincent a lot, but one thing is certain about the Rampants: they are not going to look like the same team.

"We're going to be passing a great deal more than we have in the past. You're not about to see us running on third and long like we have in the past, and you could see us throwing a lot more on other downs, too."

Rose opens the regular season on September 4, traveling to Jacksonville. The first home game is September 11, against New Bern.

Southern Sees More Balance In 1981

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

Most observers of the Southern Conference are convinced that Tennessee-Chattanooga will overcome its one-year drought and recapture the league football championship. But everyone knows that championships aren't won on paper.

Bill Oliver, the UT-C head coach, believes the league's eight members will be tough this season, providing a strong challenge. And the coach of defending champion Furman is not convinced that when the Paladins meet in October, that the league title will be on the line.

"There's more balance in the league," Oliver said at the recent Southern Conference Rouser in Boone. If that is the case, then the Moccasins will find winning the title difficult.

The game between the Mocs and the Paladins is set for Oct. 3 in Furman's new stadium. But Furman coach Dick Sheridan won't call that game the conference's version of the Super Bowl.

"One game will not decide it in this conference," Sheridan said. "There's too much balance and too many things change in a year."

UT-C will have eight returning defensive players for the 1981 season, plus five of last year's offensive starters. Leading the UT-C offense will be quarterback Steve Woods, fourth in the nation in passing efficiency last season. If Woods is hurt, however, there is no experienced backup to replace him.

Joining Woods in the passing attack will be tight end Ed Stanford and split end Tony Jackson. Junior college transfer Willie Gillespie will add experience and support.

The offensive line must be rebuilt, following the loss of all-SC center Robert Lee. Three positions must be filled and depth developed.

Although Gwain Durden is gone, Oliver is excited about sophomore Harold Ricks. Although he carried only five times last season, Oliver thinks he can pick up where Durden left off. The most experienced of the returnees is Dennis King, who gained 295 yards last season. A strong UT-C running game is one year away.

Most of the defense is back, with inexperience evident in the interior. Oliver hopes sophomore nose guards Melvin Thompson and Felix Williams will learn quickly enough to join veteran Willie Little.

Defense will also be a problem for Furman, especially up front where little experience exists. Some players who were on offense last year were switched this spring to fill in the gaps, but a blend must be developed quickly if the Paladins are to stay in their opening contest, a road match with steadily improving Florida.

Furman's strength lies in the return of virtually all of its 1980 offensive unit. Although Mike Glenn and Steve Bishop have left, Stephen White, Brothel Cole and Stanford Jennings provide more than 1,200 yards of experience.

Quarterback Tim Sorrells will lead an offense that sparkled with a 14-2-1 record in his 17 consecutive starts. Sophomore David Charpia saw action in three games last year and will serve as No. 2 unless unseated by incoming freshmen.

But Sheridan's biggest worry is defense, as last year's team surrendered 177 points, 114 in conference games. Sheridan says the defense must mold into a unit fast.

"They're going to have to grow up in a hurry," Sheridan said. "Our players are excited about the opportunity (to meet Florida) and want to see what they can do."

As for the rest of the league:

MARSHALL

After 17 consecutive losses and one tie, Sonny Randle believes this is the year the Thundering Herd will break back into the win column.

Randle has a fleet set of replacements for running back Ron Lear, in Gilbert Orr, Larry Fourqurean and Dickie Rollins. Jon Sharetts and Tony Konopka shared time at quarterback last year, and will be challenged by junior college transfer Scott Moyer.

The defense is not big, but free safety Carl Lee heads a list of starters who will play, what Randle called, "a swarming defense that requires tremendous intensity."

"We feel like we'll be a lot better football team," Randle said. "What that means in terms of wins, I don't know." If it means more than 1980's 2-8-1 record and a conference win, it will be a start in the right direction.

VIRGINIA MILITARY

The defense is sound with 24 lettermen returning, and the offense is graced with 1,000-yard rusher Floyd Allen. But for the third time in his career at Lexington, head coach Bob Thalman enters the season without a proven quarterback.

Junior Dan Fritz was dismissed from school in February, leaving Thalman in search of a replacement who will be game-tough before the Sept. 12 opener against Western Carolina. At the head of the list is 5-9, 155-pound Johnny Mitchell, but four freshmen and a junior college transfer will challenge.

"It's been one of those problems that just sort of hangs with you," Thalman said.

EAST TENNESSEE STATE

The Buccaneers have been to the penthouse. Now they're in the outhouse with no telling when they'll climb out.

"We went into last season with a quarterback who hadn't had a snap in college," said head coach Jack Carlisle. "This year, we're going in there with one that doesn't have any (experience)."

Scott Nault is the inexperienced one, while Donnie Ruis, who was not in school last year, will try to gain the starting spot, and returning running backs Earl Ferrell, Rick Reeves and Richard Dill could see a lot of action. They could get help from newcomers Todd Bloomer and Rodney Yeatts.

Defensive backs Jack Lee and Donnie Cook are coming off surgery and their status is questionable. The defensive line is troubled by a lack of depth, however, a problem that could delay ETSU's return to respectability.

APPALACHIAN STATE

"I don't mean to sound like we won't show up for any football games this year," said coach Mike Working. "We just have a lot of holes to fill."

The biggest holes are quarterback Steve Brown and Rick Beasley. Brown threw for 2,537 yards in 1980, while Beasley caught 44 passes in 10 games for 948 yards and seven touchdowns. With those figures, the team struggled to a 6-4-1 mark, including a 4-2-1 conference record.

"You don't replace Brown and Beasley," Working said. "This year, we're going to have to spread it around more."

He expects to have two quarterbacks sharing the load. Randy Joyce may have the edge only because he is a natural quarterback. Stan Goodson caught 18 passes in 1980, but he'll be expected to throw a few more in 1981.

THE CITADEL

Like Working, Art Baker had a void to fill in finding a replacement for Stump Mitchell. Unlike Working, however, Baker believes he has his man in Danny Miller.

Miller scored two touchdowns and rushed for 150 before a series of injuries shut him down for the season. He also runs a 4.4-40-yard dash.

Experience at quarterback is another plus for the Bulldogs as Tracey Shrader returns. He completed 51 percent of his passes for more than 1,000 yards and three touchdowns, and ran for another 390.

Baker's squad will also be bigger this fall, the result of a weight training program.

"For the first time, we have a team that will look like a

Emory Leads Off Sports Club Fare

The club is currently starting its membership drive for the 1981-82 year.

This year, the group will return to the Ramada Inn, meeting on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month, as usual.

Dues for this season have been upped to $30, marking the first increase in the fees since the club's organization. Individual meals will be $4.50 for members and $6 for guests.

Persons desiring to join the club may send their membership fees to Greenville Sports Club, P.O. Drawer 8253, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Emory's visit to the club will be an exception to the second-fourth Tuesday rule, as the season opens on September 1 with his talk. East Carolina opens the 1981 season on Saturday, September 5, hosting Western Carolina University.

Other speakers on the list include: September 22, Paul Webb, head basketball coach at Old Dominion University; November 10, Jim Valvano, head basketball coach, N.C. State University; Nov. 24, Red Wilson, head football coach, Duke University; Dec. 8, Dave Odom, head basketball coach, East Carolina University; Jan. 12, Lou Bello, former ACC basketball official; Feb. 9, Cathy Andruzzi, head women's basketball coach, East Carolina University; Feb. 23, Al Groh, head football coach, Wake Forest University; March 9, Jeff Johnson, East Carolina strength coach; and March 23, Bones McKinney, former Wake Forest basketball coach and sports commentator.

Others who have made tentative commitments to speak include: Oct. 13, Bill Foster, head basketball coach, University of South Carolina; Oct. 27, Dale Shealy, head football coach, University of Richmond; and Jan. 26, Jim Clark, former pro football player.

NCAA May Hit CFA Violators

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The NCAA Council has recommended that disciplinary action be started against members of the College Football Association who commit themselves to participate in a proposed television contract with NBC.

The CFA will meet in Atlanta next Friday to decide whether to ratify the four-year, $180 million contract with NBC. If the CFA approves the contract by a majority vote, the members will have a certain period, originally set for Sept. 10, to decide whether to participate in the plan.

The NCAA council took its position at a week-long meeting concluded Friday in Glenenden Beach, Ore., The Saturday Oklahoman and Times reported.

"The council reviewed those recommendations and agreed that it was the proper interpretation and that it would be the proper procedure," Tom Hansen was quoted as saying. Hansen is an assistant executive director of the NCAA and administrator of its television programs.

Hansen said the council also instructed that the infraction proceedings should be handled "'expeditiously."

The 22-member council, which includes three CFA members, is the ruling body of the NCAA.

Ten days before the CFA officials announced the NBC plan, the NCAA had reached an agreement with ABC and CBS for a four-year, $263.5 million TV package covering the 1982-85 seasons, the same season covered by the CFA plan.

The NCAA contends a pact between NBC and the CFA would be a violation of its own plan, and make the CFA schools involved subject to penalties. The 61 members of the CFA also are members of the NCAA.

The NCAA never has spelled out what the penalties would be, but Hansen earlier had said schools could be placed on probation and barred from appearing on television or participating in other NCAA events such as basketball tournaments.

Freshmen Might Have To Fill Some Key Gamecock Positions

By BOB THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA (AP) — University of South Carolina head coach Jim Carlen promised a "wide open" brand of football from the Gamecocks this fall, but said Saturday that freshmen might have to fill some key positions.

"I've never lost in 15 years of head coaching as many quality players as we lost last year," Carlen said at a press luncheon.

The graduation of players such as Heisman Trophy-winning tailback George Rogers, tight end Willie Scott and offensive tackle George Schechterly means South Carolina will have to go to the air more often, he said.

Quarterback is the most crucial position in South Carolina's quest to break into the national rankings. USC, which finished the 1980-81 season with an 8-4 record, opens its season on Sept. 5 against Wake Forest in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Carlen, in his seventh year as Gamecock head coach, said he expects his defense to be strong, although the linebacking corps is inexperienced.

"I think our receivers will be good. I think our offensive line will be capable but not great. But I think our quarterback is the big issue," the Gamecock mentor said.

Juniors Gordon Beckham of Atlanta and Terry Bishop of Thomson, Ga., are the top candidates to succeed Garry Harper at quarterback. Carlen said Beckham is the better passer, although he is not fully recovered from back surgery, and Bishop is a good scrambler.

"The question I get asked most often is, 'Will we miss Rogers?'. I don't think that's even a good question. But the answer is, we will miss Rogers." The tailback from Duluth, Ga., now with the New Orleans Saints, led the nation in rushing last season.

A number of freshmen will get a chance to play for two reasons — heavy losses to graduation and a good recruiting year, Carlen said. "We feel like we have some good young football players."

Five starters return on offense — wide receiver Horace Smith, running back Johnnie Wright, tackle Chuck Slaughter, guard Joe Doyle and center Mark Austin.

Carlen said Wright will move to tailback and Percy Reeves, Carl West and freshman Kent Hagood will probably alternate at fullback. The 48-year-old coach said Hagood "has super hands — he can catch anything," and is breathing down the necks of veterans Reeves and West.

Wide receiver Horace Smith, a senior, is a definite pro prospect, and tight end DeWayne Chivers "was a pleasant surprise in the spring," Carlen said.

Smith, Chivers and freshman Ira Hillary of Johnston, who has "an excellent opportunity to start for us at wide receiver," all run 40 yards in less than 4.6 seconds, he said.

South Carolina will use two tight ends, with sophomore Fred Berkeley expected to get a lot of playing time. Carlen said, "We'll be a little more wide open when we get back to two tight ends."

Sophomores Cas Danielowski and Del Wilkes are vying for one offensive guard position, while Philip Proctor will provide relief at center for Austin, who has had trouble with the heat, the coach said.

Seven defensive starters are returning.

Carlen said defensive end is in good shape, with four returnees. "We feel like Andrew Provence will be an All-American," he said.

Middle guard Emanuel Weaver and defensive back Robert Perlotte are top college players, although the lanky Perlotte has dropped a few pounds, Carlen said.

"I worry about his (Perlotte's) size. He's down about eight pounds, and eight pounds on a 165-pound frame is a lot."

The secondary, with starters Perlotte, Pat Bowen and Harry Skipper returning, should be the strongest since he has been at South Carolina, Carlen said.

"Linebacker is one part of our defense that worries me," he admitted. J.D. Fuller, who was redshirted as a sophomore last year because of an injury, will be ready to play at left linebacker, but the other spot is up for grabs, according to the head coach.

The defensive line, with Provence, Weaver and 1980-81 starting ends Phil Ellis and Hal Henderson returning, should be stronger this year despite the graduation of Chuck Allen, Carlen said.

Junior John Tanner will continue to handle kickoffs and sophomore Mark Fleetwood will probably succeed Eddie Leopard on extra points and field goals.

"Fleetwood, I think, will be a good one," said Carlen. But he said the test will come when Fleetwood kicks before 55,000 or 60,000 people.

Troy Thomas, who returned 12 punts last season, is likely to do that job this year. "I hope we'll get a kid with a good little reckless abandon who will catch the ball and take off. You've got to have that," Carlen added.

Blue Devil Leader

Duke's second year quarterback Ben Bennett, shown in action against Maryland last year, hopes to lead the Blue Devils to a winning season this year. As a freshman, Bennett set ACC fans marveling as he passed for more than 2,000 yards. Duke hosts East Carolina on October 3 in its home opener. (AP Laserphoto)

Bennett's Aerial Feats Boost Duke Fans' Hopes

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — When a brash Californian named Ben Bennett entered Duke University as a freshman last year, he set Atlantic Coast Conference fans marveling at his passing ability.

Throughout the league, Bennett presented himself as one of the most promising passers to reach the area by throwing for more than 2,000 yards. Much ado was made over Bennett's Gatling gun rapidity, sniper accuracy and poise under fire.

"The kid really has a tremendous amount of talent," said Steve Spurrier, Duke's offensive coordinator and quarterback coach. Spurrier himself was a standout at the University of Florida, breaking into the lineup as a freshman, becoming the national player of the year and taking the 1966 Heisman Trophy.

"The way he stands in the pocket with everybody coming at him and never cutting his throw — you can't coach that," Spurrier said of Bennett. "He has a lot of guts. He plays with no fear."

Bennett came to Duke with a regional reputation, so few North Carolinians knew the extent of his talent. It quickly surfaced and he started the first game at quarterback.

"We threw an offense at Ben that usually takes five years to learn," Spurrier said. "He caught on right away and threw over 300 passes. A lot of quarterbacks don't throw that many passes in four years. I threw only 400 balls at Florida in my career."

Although Bennett's debut was brilliant, Spurrier acknowledges that the Blue Devil still needs some polishing.

"He can get better in his overall knowledge of the game, where to throw the ball, reading defenses," Spurrier said.

"In close games, the great quarterback has to make the decisive play, not hand the ball off. Last year we didn't win any games in the fourth quarter. This is where Ben needs to improve."

According to Duke coaches, there is one personal habit Bennett needs to improve — his outspoken manner.

"When Ben came to Duke, his idol was Joe Namath and he tried to act like him, talk like him," Spurrier said. "He said 'I'm going to do this, I'm going to do that' and a lot of his teammates, especially the seniors, resented it.

"I've talked to Ben about this. This year I think all he'll talk about will be the team," he said.

Spurrier's pride in Bennett stands out when he talks about his prize quarterback. When asked whether Bennett can follow in his footsteps, Spurrier said he told the quarterback that, "if we go 2-9, you're never going to get the recognition. You don't throw the football just to be throwing it. What we've got to do is win football games."

WESTERN CAROLINA

Bob Waters has no desire to look back upon last season's 3-7-1 record. But inexperience at several spots may remind him of those troubled times.

Several people have been shifted around, including defensive end George Alston, who is now a linebacker. Underclassmen will man the defensive secondary, but the key may be the freshmen who can come in and play immediately.

Waters' offense shows more promise with the return of quarterback Ronnie Mixon. Former tailback Anthony James will be a new target for Mixon as he moves to wide receiver, joining Jeff Dean and Dwayne Norman.

The addition of Melvin Dorsey at tailback may help, that is, if talent is contagious. Dorsey was at Georgia prior to the arrival of Herschel Walker.

DAVIDSON

The Wildcats are not eligible for the conference title, but that doesn't mean they don't expect great things this season.

Coach Ed Farrell's offensive line will be bigger this year, meaning more holes for all-America candidate Ray Sinclair. Sinclair was third nationally in Division I-AA with 1,339 yards rushing.

The defense will be bolstered by the return of several lettermen assuming the roles of departed starters, most notably Wendell Washington, whose weight has been known to fluctuate between 275 and 330.

Farrell's only concerns are depth and a severe dropoff in experience beyond last year's starters. That could hinder Davidson's efforts to improve on 1980's 5-5 record.

Event Opens With New Record

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Antoaneta Todorova of Bulgaria set a world record with a javelin throw of 235 feet, 10 inches Saturday, the first day of the European Track and Field Cup finals.

Todorova, 18, who studies physical education in Sofia, made the record hurl in her third series, beating the previous mark of 229-11 held by Tatiana Birulina of the Soviet Union.

"I am thrilled, but not entirely surprised although my best throw so far had been near 70 meters," she said.

"I was throwing well and I felt that prehaps I could get in a good throw, although I did not really expect to beat the world record by a full one meter and 80 centimeters," Todorova said at a news conference afterward.

Todorova, who was born in Samovodene, said she hoped to throw between 239 and 242 feet at the next Olympic Games.

Her performance upstaged a brilliant showing of the powerful East German team, which jumped to a confortable lead in both men's and women's events.

Meanwhile, Detlef Michel of East Germany defeated Olympic champion Dainis Kula of the Soviet Union in the javelin.

Michel hurled 298 feet, 1 inch in the first and Kula managed a toss of only 290¼ feet for second place.

Eight European nations are competing in the finals in both men's and women's events.

East and West Germany, France, Britain, Italy, Poland, the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia are participating the men's events.

West and East Germany, Bulgaria, Britain, Hungary, Poland, the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia are participating in women's competition.

The two best teams will qualify for the World Cup in Rome next month.

Martina Steuk of East Germany scored an easy win in the women's 800 meters, overtaking Ljudmila Veselkova of the Soviet Union in a strong finish. Steuk's time was 1:57.16.

when he won the 100-meter sprint, ahead of Frank Emmelmann of East Germany and Herman Panzo of France.

Well's was timed in 10.17 and Emmelmann 10.21.

East German Marita Koch, a world record holder and Olympic champion, easily won the women's 400 meters in 49.43.

Hartmut Weber brought West Germany's first victory when he took the 400 meters, ahead of Mauro Zulianim of Italy and Andreas Knebel of West Germany.

East German Olaf Beyer won the 1,500 meters.

Britan's Steve Cram, who ran instead of injured world record holder Steve Ovett, was edged out of second place by Nikolai Kirov of the Soviet Union at the finish line.

The East German women won five first places in seven events to collect 51 points, eight more than the second-place Soviet Union.

Third was Britain with 37 points, followed by West Germany and Bulgaria sharing fourth place with 35 points each.

Poland was sixth with 23, followed by Hungary with 18 and Yugoslavia with 10 points.

The East German men led the standings with 69 points, after winning six of 10 events. The Soviet Union was second with 62 points and West Germany third with 53.

Fourth was Britain with 47.5 points, followed by Poland with 42, France 37.5, Italy 30 and Yugoslavia 19.

Trucks Race In Atlanta

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Charlie Baker of New Oxford, Pa., set a world record for bobtail truck racing Saturday as he captured the pole position for Sunday's Georgia Bobtail 300 truck race at Atlanta International Raceway.

Baker, driving a Kenworth 10-wheeler, was clocked at 126.075 mph, eclipsing the record of 122.282 mph set last year by Jim Bickel of Akron, Ind.

A total of 26 trucks qualified for the 300-mile race that will get underway at 1 p.m. Sunday over the 1.522 mile Atlanta International Raceway track.

Stephenson In Lead At LPGA

DALLAS (AP) — Jan Stephenson, who boasts she is hard to catch when she gets in front, cooly strolled through 103-degree heat with a 3-under par 69 Saturday to take a five-shot lead after 36 holes of the Mary Kay Golf Classic.

Stephenson, one of the glamour girls on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, fired a course record 65 Friday on the par 72 Bent Tree Country Club Course.

"I've won five tournaments and everytime I've had the lead after the first round," she said. "I'm a frontrunner. I've never come from behind to win but it's hard to catch me with a lead."

Her 36-hole total of 10-under par 134 was the lowest on the LPGA tour this year and put her within distance of the 54-hole record of 16-under by Carol Mann in 1968 at the Lady Carlen Open.

Defending champion Jerilyn Britz started the day two shots behind the 29-year-old Stephenson, but the heat took its toll on the 38-year-old former U.S. Open champion. She was three-over on the front and battled back with three birdies on the back to finish with a 72 and a 139 total.

U.S. Open queen Pat Bradley used only 22 putts en route to a 4-under par 68. Her total of 140 put her six shots behind the sizzling Stephenson.

"It will be very hard to makeup the ground on Jan tomorrow unless she breaks a leg which I don't think she will do," said Bradley, who had six birdies offset by two bogeys.

Also six shots behind the leader was Sandra Hayne who shot a 2-under Par 70.

Stephenson went out with a 3-under par 33 and played even par on the backside of the 6,274-yard course which has lightning fast greens.

Her 36-hole total was a record for the Dallas tournament with the previous mark of 9-under behind held by Sandra Haynie set in 1971.

Stephenson, an Australian who now lives in Fort Worth, Texas, said she loves to play in the hot weather and proved it by knocking in a 15-foot birdie putt on the very first hole to serve notice she was trying to make the tournament the runaway she had predicted.

Rain Hits Net Event

MONTREAL (AP) — The ill-fated Canadian Open men's tennis championship suffered another setback Saturday when rain forced the cancellation of semifinal matches in singles and doubles.

The $200,000 tournament had the makings of one of the best Canadian Open championships ever, but power failures at Jarry Park, rain delays and the withdrawal of second-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden left organizers shaking their heads in disbelief.

The elimination of third-seeded American Jimmy Connors in first-round play and top-seeded John McEnroe's setback in third-round action were added upsets.

The semifinals will be played Sunday with fourth-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia against 15th-seeded Shlomo Glickstein of Israel and 10th-seeded Vijay Amritraj, who upset McEnroe, against sixth-seeded Eliot Teltscher.

The winner of the singles final will pocket $32,000, with the runner-up collecting $16,000.

Cubs Slip By Pirates In 15th Inning

CHICAGO (AP) — Jody Davis raced home from second base with the winning run in the bottom of the 15th inning Saturday on an error by Pittsburgh second baseman Phil Garner, giving the Chicago Cubs a 4-3 victory over the Pirates.

It would have been the final inning of the game before the umpires were to suspend the contest because of darkness.

Davis opened the 15th with a single and Ty Waller laid down a bunt which he beat out for a single. Steve Dillard then chopped a shot toward second that went over Garner's glove into right field as Davis scored.

Randy Martz, 4-5, was the winner while Rod Scurry, 2-3, was the loser as both teams used six pitchers.

The Pirates tied the score with two runs in the eighth. Steve Nicosia led off with a single, advanced to second on an infield out and scored on a two-out single by Dave Parker. Parker then stole second and scored the tying run on an infield hit by Mike Easler. Ivan DeJesus fielded Easler's grounder at deep short but was unable to get Parker at the plate.

The Cubs had gone on top 3-2 when Waller drove in his first major league run with a pinch sacrifice fly in the sixth inning.

The Cubs loaded the bases in the sixth on singles by Bill Buckner and Davis around a walk to Bobby Bonds. Waller, batting for Ken Reitz who had two previous hits but was lifted because of a stomach virus, hit a fly to Omar Moreno in medium left-center. Buckner broke for the plate and when Moreno's throw sailed wide of catcher Tony Pena for an error, Bonds also scored all the way from second.

Chicago starter Mike Krukow allowed one run and five hits in seven innings.

The Cubs went ahead with a run in the second inning off Jim Bibby when Hector Cruz walked, went to second on an infield out and scored on a double by Reitz.

Philadelphia 1

NEW YORK (AP) — John Stearns ripped a tie-breaking double in the seventh inning, and the New York Mets defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 Saturday night.

Lee Mazzilli led off the seventh with a single up the middle, and with Mazzilli running, Stearns doubled into the left field corner to give the Mets a 2-1 lead. Doug Flynn sacrificed Stearns to third, and pinch-hitter Rusty Staub then hit a sacrifice fly.

Mookie Wilson followed with a single, and stole second. When Phillies' right-hander Nino Espinosa, 2-5, walked Frank Taveras, Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green brought in Ron Reed, who ended the inning by striking out Hubie Brooks.

With two out, Garry Maddox was safe on a throwing error by Taveras, the Mets' shortstop. Maddox advanced to second on an infield hit by Manny Trillo. Maddox scored all the way from second when Larry Bowa beat out a hit to deep second. Mets second baseman Doug Flynn handled Bowa's high-hopper and tossed it to Leach, who was covering first. However, the throw was late, and Maddox continued home, while Leach held the ball.

The Mets tied it in the fifth when Ellis Valentine led off with a single and scored on a double to deep center field by Mazzilli.

Leach worked five innings for New York, giving up just three hits and the one unearned run before he was relieved by Pete Falcone, 2-3, who picked up the victory with two innings of relief.

San Francisco 5
Cincinnati 2

CINCINNATI (AP) — San Francisco's Jack Clark and Milt May drove in two runs apiece as the Giants defeated the Cincinnati Reds 5-2 Saturday night.

Clark's two-run homer, his eighth, snapped a 1-1 tie in the sixth inning and handed Cincinnati starter Frank Pastore his fourth loss in seven decisions.

Doyle Alexander, 6-4, defeated the Reds for the first time in his career to become the fourth pitcher to beat all 26 current major league teams. Gaylord Perry, Mike Torrez and Rick Wise have also accomplished the feat.

Alexander, who was 0-8 lifetime against the Reds before Saturday, surrendered a solo homer to Ron Oester in the second inning and then gave up an RBI single to Joe Nolan in the ninth before needing Greg Minton's relief help. Minton posted his 11th save.

Jeff Leonard hit his first homer of the season to give the Giants a 1-0 lead in the second.

Browns Ease By Buffalo; Eagles Dump Steelers

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Dave Jacobs booted a 32-yard field goal in the fourth quarter Saturday night that gave the Cleveland Browns a 13-10 victory over the Buffalo Bills in a preseason National Football League game.

Southpaw quarterback Paul McDonald engineered the winning drive that included a 30-yard pass play to Gregg Pruitt. But the drive lost steam after McDonald was sacked on the Bills' 15, and the Browns had to go for the field goal that turned out to be enough to win the game.

The Browns then moved 73 yards in eight plays for a second quarter touchdown with Mike Pruitt carrying the ball across the goal from one yard out.

Key plays in the drive were a pair of passes from Brian Sipe to Ozzie Newsome, one for 28 yards and the other for 21.

Buffalo then rebounded to tie the score at 10-10 in the second quarter. The Bills started on their own 10 and moved in 10 plays to the Cleveland 23. On the next play Cleveland defender Thom Darden was called for interference on the Browns' 3, and Curtis Brown then carried the ball in from the 3 for a Buffalo touchdown.

Only three seconds before the half, Nick Mike-Mayer booted a 40-yard field goal for Buffalo to tie the score.

Eagles 36
Steelers 20

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tony Franklin kicked three long field goals as the Philadelphia Eagles beat the Pittsburgh Steelers 36-20 Saturday night in a National Football League pre-season game.

It was the first victory for the Eagles, who lost their exhibition opener to Houston, and the initial loss for the Steelers, who beat the Cleveland Browns last week.

The Eagles rallied for 16 second-quarter points after Pittsburgh had taken a 7-0 lead on a 54-yard opening quarter touchdown pass from second-string quarterback Cliff Stoudt to Lynn Swann.

Franklin, who connected on just 16 of 31 field goal attempts last season, started the comeback with a 44-yard field goal.

Franklin added a 47-yarder, Billy Campfield caught a 16-yard touchdown pass and Franklin scored from 49 yards for a 16-7 Philadelphia lead at halftime.

In the third period, Pittsburgh closed the gap to 16-13 on a 67-yard return of a fumble by cornerback Dwane Woodruff.

The Eagles, however, pulled away to the delight of a crowd of 66,712 on a 31-yard field goal by rookie Jim Asmus from Hawaii, a 66-yard touchdown run by Louie Giammona and Campfield's second touchdown of the game, a one-yard dive.

Eagles' first-string quarterback Ron Jaworski completed 11 of 21 for 93 yards and one touchdown, while Campfield caught four passes for 21 yards and gained 76 yards on seven carries.

For Pittsburgh, Stoudt, who passed for three touchdowns and ran for two more in the victory over Cleveland, managed 18-of-35 for 233 yards and one touchdown. Stoudt, who ran one yard for a fourth-quarter touchdown, played the entire game.

Heath's HR Lets A's Win, 8-7

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mike Heath hit a 3-2 pitch from Mike Witt into the left field seats with one out in the bottom of the 13th inning to give the Oakland A's an 8-7 victory over the California Angels in a five-hour marathon Saturday.

Heath's homer, his fifth of the season, marked the second day in a row that Oakland beat the Angels with an extra-inning homer. Dwayne Murphy's two-run shot in the 10th inning won Friday night's game.

Tom Underwood, 2-4, who entered the game in the 12th, pitched the final two innings to earn the victory. Witt, 5-5, came on in the eighth for the Angels.

California's Bobby Grich smacked his second homer of the game and fifth in three games in the top of the 10th to give the Angels a 7-6 lead. It was Grich's fourth hit of the game and broke the game's fourth tie. Grich, who also homered in the fifth to give the Angels a short-lived 3-2 lead, extended his hitting streak to 18 games.

But the A's tied it in the bottom of the 10th. Singles by Jim Spencer and Murphy put runners at first and third with one out. Pinch runner Rick Bosetti scored on pinch hitter Keith Drumright's sacrifice fly.

The Angels who trailed 6-5 after Tony Armas' RBI single in the bottom of the eighth, tied the game in the ninth on an RBI single by rookie John Harris.

The Angels' Rick Burleson hit a solo home run in the third inning as the teams combined for 34 hits, 28 of them singles. The game also included 14 walks, a hit batsman and 27 runners left on base.

TORONTO (AP) — Damaso Garcia capped the first four-hit game of his major league career with an eighth-inning single that scored the winning run as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 4-3 Saturday for their fourth victory in a row.

Garcia also collected a double and two other singles.

Greg Wells opened the eighth with a single and was sacrificed to second by Al Woods. Wells then scored easily from second when Garcia singled through the middle on a 3-0 pitch from reliever Reggie Cleveland, 2-2.

Mark Bomback, 4-5, picked up the victory with 21-3 innings of relief. Joey McLaughlin got the final two outs for his fourth save.

Toronto took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on John Mayberry's RBI single. Milwaukee tied it in the second when Gorman Thomas walked, went to third on a single by Ted Simmons and scored on a grounder by Robin Yount.

Danny Ainge put the Blue Jays ahead 2-1 in the second inning when he singled Garcia home but Cecil Copper tied it for the Brewers when he led off the fourth inning with a home run, his eighth of the season and the 14th consecutive solo homer for Milwaukee.

Toronto took a 3-2 lead in the sixth when pinch hitter George Bell singled Barry Bonnell home from second but the Brewers tied it for the third time in the seventh on Thad Bosley's two-out double that scored Jim Gantner, who reached base on a force play.

Kansas City 5
Cleveland 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Dennis Leonard and Dan Quisenberry combined on a six-hitter and the Kansas City Royals used a four-run fourth inning to defeat the Cleveland Indians 5-3 Saturday.

Leonard, 7-7, yielded all three Cleveland runs on six hits over 7 2-3 innings. Quisenberry retired the final four batters to earn his 10th save.

The Royals took a 1-0 lead in the top of the fourth inning. U.L. Washington walked with one out, went to second on Hal McRae's single and continued to third when left fielder Miguel Dilone bobbled the ball. Willie Aikens then hit a sacrifice fly.

With one out in the bottom of the first, Leonard walked Jorge Orta and Mike Hargrove followed with his first home run of the season, giving the Indians a 2-1 lead.

Kansas City scored their four runs in the fourth against Cleveland starter John Denny, 3-4. Singles by Amos Otis, Frank White and Darryl Motley loaded the bases with none out. Otis was retired at the plate on Jamie Quirk's grounder, but White scored on a wild pitch to tie the game 2-2.

Rance Mulliniks drew a walk to reload the bases and Willie Wilson lined a two-run single, with Mulliniks moving to third. Mulliniks then scored as Washington grounded into a forceout, giving the Royals a 5-2 margin.

With two out in the Cleveland eighth, Hargrove doubled and scored on a single by Ron Hassey, bringing on Quisenberry.

The defeat was Cleveland's 10th in its last 11 games, including six of seven since the end of the baseball strike.

Cherryville Takes Second Straight Win

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Cherryville did not see the true Snow Hill team Friday night. It was somewhere else. The Snow Hill team that did take the field played perhaps its poorest playoff game in 25 tournament contests.

Reverting to the style of play it suffered from during the early part of the regular season, Snow Hill combined five errors — three in the outfield — with four wild pitches and six walks to give Cherryville opportunity after opportunity.

Shouts Encouragement
Jim Fulghum, coach of the Snow Hill American Legion team, shouts out instructions and encouragement to his charges during action Friday night in Snow Hill. Cherryville, the western champ, handed Snow Hill a second straight loss in the game, taking a 2-0 series in the best-of-seven playoffs for the state championship. (Reflector Photo by Larry Zicherman)

Post 100, playing more aggressively from the start then it did in its 4-3 win Thursday night, took advantage of nearly every Snow Hill mistake to capture a 9-4 win in the second game of the American Legion state finals.

Cherryville, 31-5 overall and 17-3 in the playoffs, now heads home with a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series with a chance to clinch the state championship on its own field.

Games three, four and five will be played in Cherryville. Game #3 was to have been played last night. Game #4 will be played this afternoon. If necessary, a fourth game will be held Monday night.

If Post 94 can manage to return to its old self and win at least two games in Cherryville, the series would return to Snow Hill Tuesday night and Wednesday night for games six and seven. If Snow Hill cannot, the series could be over Sunday afternoon.

"We're just gonna have to battle back," Snow Hill coach James Fulghum said. "We've got to have better hitting, we've got to get good pitching and better defense."

Asked whether this was one his team's worse games, Fulghum nodded his head and said, "Yep. We didn't play well tonight. Things got going against us early and we just couldn't get going."

On the other side of the field, Cherryville's first-year coach Don Sane was outwardly subdued despite his club having just come away with a two-game sweep on the road.

"I don't think you've seen the real Snow Hill ballclub yet," Sane said. "Of course we're happy to have won two games here, but we won't look past (Saturday's game). It still takes four games to win it."

Unlike Thursday night, when Post 100 found itself fighting from behind, Cherryville took a 2-1 lead in the first inning and steadily increased its advantage until it reached 8-1 in the fifth.

"We ran a little more tonight, but getting ahead you can do that," Sane said. "We tried to be a little more aggressive tonight. They dropped a ball here, they dropped a ball there and I think we forced a few of those and we were able to take advantage of some of the mistakes."

It did not take Cherryville long to force Snow Hill into its first error. Nor long to take advantage of it.

Leadoff hitter Bobby Reynolds singled to open the first and went to second on Adrian Brewer's sacrifice bunt. Jim Fortenberry followed with a single and then stole second.

On the steal, Snow Hill catcher Jabo Fulghum threw the ball into centerfield, allowing Reynolds to score. When Bobby Avery mishandled the ball in centerfield, Fortenberry scored and Cherryville led, 2-0.

Greg Hardison's leadoff home run over the leftfield fence narrowed the deficit to 2-1. But Cherryville countered with a run in the second when Rusty Stroupe doubled home Shawn Lauer, who had singled earlier.

Snow Hill managed to get runners at first and third in the bottom of the inning but the threat fizzled when Gary Ream hit into the first of two double plays.

It was as close as Snow Hill would get the rest of the evening. Cherryville scored three runs in the third — thanks to an error and two wild pitches — and then scored single runs in the next two innings to go up 8-1.

While his teammates were pounding Snow Hill, Cherryville right-hander Kent Alexander was keeping Snow Hill in check. After giving up a run in the first, Alexander held Post 94 scoreless until the seventh, by which time the game was all but decided.

For the evening, Alexander allowed seven hits, struck out seven and walked five en route to his eighth victory without a defeat this season. Ream, now 6-3, was the loser, allowing 10 hits and eight runs before being relieved in the fifth by Ritchie Chase.

The third started innocently enough with Ream striking out Reynolds and then, after walking Brewer, seeing the Cherryville first baseman thrown out at second attempting to steal.

It was what happened in the next few moments, however, that prompted Fulghum to say afterwards, "When we were down 3-1 we were still in it, but we gave away three runs, just gave away three runs in the third with two outs. That hurt us."

Indeed. Fortenberry walked and Brad Long followed with a single to score Fortenberry. Long then moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on David Buff's single to left. When Wade Corbett misplayed the ball in left, Buff raced to second.

Ream then uncorked his second wild pitch of the inning. This one hit near the plate and bounced straight up in the air. Fulghum was unable to locate the ball and by the time Ream had picked it up, Buff had slid home safely to give Cherryville a 6-1 lead.

Stroupe, Post 100's #8 hitter, walked and scored on Reynolds' suicide squeeze in the fourth to up the margin to 7-1. A bases-loaded walk to Stroupe in the fifth forced home Buff to give Post 100 an 8-1 lead, its biggest of the game.

Cherryville's final run came in the eighth when Stroupe walked and later scored on Reynold's single.

Snow Hill managed a run in the seventh and two in the eighth. In the seventh, Hardison singled and went to third when left-handed hitter Guy Sanderson, pinch hitting for David Shirley, doubled down the third base line. Hardison later scored on Kevin Korpi's ground out.

In the eighth, Chase scored on Ream's single and Avery scored on a wild pitch to make it 9-4. One inning later, the game was over and Snow Hill found itself down two games to none heading to Cherryville.

Ron Bouchard Captures Pole Slot For Today's Champion 400 Race

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Surprising Ron Bouchard followed up his first Grand National stock car victory with his first pole position, gaining the top spot Saturday for the $220,000 Champion Spark Plug 400.

Bouchard, coming off his electrifying triumph in the Talladega 500 two weeks ago, charged around the two-mile, high-banked Michigan International Speedway oval at 161.501 mph.

Gary Balough, another Grand National newcomer, was third in a Buick at 161.121, followed by Terry Labonte at 160.812 in a Buick and Joe Ruttman at 160.733 in the Pontiac Grand Prix formerly driven by 1980 Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt.

Bouchard, a 32-year-old veteran of modified racing, joined fellow rookies Morgan Shepherd and Mark Martin among the 13 different drivers who now have won pole positions in the 21 NASCAR Grand National events this season.

The barrel-chested Bouchard, from Fitchburg, Mass., got his break when car-owner Jack Beebe, a school bus magnate from Madison, Conn., hired him after veteran Harry Gant moved to another team early this season.

That got him back together with chief mechanic Bob Johnson, who once teamed with Bouchard on the modified circuit for five or six years.

"Winning (at Talladega) was quite a shot in the arm for all of us," Bouchard said. "It got everybody really cranked up this week.

"Actually, the car has been running real good all year, but it took time for me to get used to everything, and it took time for them to get used to me."

In past years, it's often been the case that a handful of teams and drivers have completely dominated Grand National racing. This season, there have been eight different race winners along with the baker's dozen of pole winners.

"There's a few good teams that have come along lately, and good drivers have come with the teams," said Yarborough, explaining the phenomenon.

"Ron is an example of that," he added. "He's a good driver and, with 16 years of racing modifieds, he's experienced.

Bouchard won $1,000 from Busch Beer for winning the pole, but he was even more pleased about a $100 bill that was stuck neatly in his breast pocket.

"Early in the year, Jack (Beebe) gave half that $100 bill to Gant and told him he'd get the other half when he won a pole. When Harry left, he gave me that half."

Washington Pays 'Skins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joe Washington, acquired by the Washington Redskins in an off-season deal with the Baltimore Colts, paid his first dividend Friday night.

Washington, brooding over contract problems and reduced playing time in Baltimore, was traded to the Redskins in April for a No.2 draft pick in 1982. The 44,662 fans who saw Friday night's 27-13 Redskin victory over the Colts will swear the deal is the steal of the year.

It was one of two NFL pre-season games Friday night. Seattle beat St. Louis 30-21 in the other one.

Although his game statistics were modest, Washington provided the power in two touchdown drives.

In the first period, Washington put the Redskins ahead, 14-7, with a 4-yard run that included his hurdling one player and driving a second into the end zone.

"When you get that close to the end zone you want to cash in. I felt that was the only way I could get in," said Washington "It's something I have done 100 times — my natural instinct."

The Redskins held a 17-10 advantage in the third period when Washington went into his Superman act again.

The 5-foot 10, 180-pound halfback moved 10 yards up the middle for a first down at the Redskin 47. Two plays later it was Washington on a counter play for 18 yards and another Redskin first down at the Viking 29. On a second and 10 from the 29, Washington took a handoff, moved back and threw a strike to Zion McKinney for a touchdown.

"He's a class guy who can crank it up on every down," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said of his starting halfback.

Gibbs was questioned about the use of the trick halfback option for the second time in as many games.

"It could reveal too much but teams will have to be more cautious because they know we have the run-pass option," Gibbs said.

Gibbs was extremely happy with his team's second win in as many starts in the exhibition season.

Gibbs also credited the defense with "an aggressive effort."

"Except for that one big play when that guy sneaked away from us, our defense played real well," he said.

"We look forward to living with people we've known and people who share our interests."

— Hassell and Hack Thigpen

"There are a lot of nice people involved with The Albemarle — people who share our interests and lifestyles. We can enjoy old friends and make new ones.

"Unquestionably, it will be a very secure place to live. And to us, that's a main point. If you need care, they have it available right there, so you don't have to go out and look for it. It's a total independent living situation that gives you peace of mind.

"The accommodations are very nice — like the kitchenette for example.

"We know that time will come when the convenience of being in town will mean a lot to us, and we're looking forward to being able to walk to the downtown stores.

"We think we're being smart about it by signing up now."

Moreland Sparks Phils With Five RBI's

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

With such illustrious names as Mike Schmidt and Pete Rose among others on the Philadelphia Phillies' roster, a young backup catcher can sometimes be a forgotten man.

But Keith Moreland gave his teammates something to remember Friday night by driving in five runs to help the Phillies beat the New York Mets 8-4.

"I've talked about getting Keith more at bats, and I felt this was a perfect time to start him," said Phillies Manager Dallas Green. He said his confidence in Moreland as a catcher as well as a hitter was growing.

"Bobby (Boone, the first-string catcher) had caught a lot of games, and I felt if I was going to make a change, this would be the game to do it," Green said.

The contest also marked career milestones for Schmidt and Rose. Schmidt hit a two-run homer, giving him a league-leading 17 for the season and 300 in his career. Rose, who passed Stan Musial as the National League's all-time hit leader Monday night, scored two runs to give him 1,881 in his career and tie him for seventh on the all-time list with Tris Speaker.

In other NL action Friday night, it was St. Louis 3, Montreal 1; San Francisco 4, Cincinnati 0 in the first game of a doubleheader and Cincinnati 7, San Francisco 6 in 10 innings in the second game; Houston 5, San Diego 1 and Los Angeles 5, Atlanta 0. The Pittsburgh-Chicago game was postponed by rain.

Moreland hit a two-run single in the first, then smashed a three-run homer in the fifth inning for his five RBI. The Phillies led 4-1 after Schmidt's third-inning homer, and after New York cut the margin to 4-2 on a home run by Dave Kingman, his 16th, in the fourth inning, Philadelphia broke it open with three runs in the fifth.

Larry Christenson, 3-6, worked the first six innings for Philadelphis, striking out nine and walking one. Mike Proly pitched the final three innings for his second save.

Cardinals 3, Expos 1

Sixto Lezcano drove in a pair of runs to help Joaquin Andujar record his eighth career decision without a loss against Montreal as St.Louis beat the Expos.

Andujar, 3-3, who got his seven previous triumphs over Montreal while a member of the Houston Astros, allowed only two hits over the first five innings to earn the victory. He received relief help from Bob Shirley, Mark Littell and Bruce Sutter, who worked the final two innings for his 14th save.

"The guy just beat us, that's all there is to it," said Expos catcher Gary Carter. "We hit the ball hard but it always seemed to be right at someone."

Giants 4-6, Reds 0-7

Ed Whitson tossed a four-hitter and Jack Clark homered and scored twice to pace San Francisco over Cincinnati in the first game of their twi-night doubleheader.

Whitson, 3-5, pitched his first complete game and shutout in his 12th appearance of the season. Whitson, making his first start since the baseball strike ended, walked one and didn't allow a Cincinnati runner to reach second base.

Sam Mejias' infield hit scored George Foster from third base with two out in 10th inning, lifting the Reds over the Giants in the nightcap. Al Holland, 3-4, was the loser.

"It was just luck," said Mejias of his winning hit. "I was running hard all the way. As soon as I hit it I thought it had a chance. I hoped the third baseman wasn't going to be able to catch it because I would have been out."

Astros 5, Padres 1

Tony Scott drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the second while Nolan Ryan stifled San Diego on two hits in six innings as Houston downed the Padres.

Ryan, 6-3, the NL's earned run leader at 1.37, survived a rocky first inning after giving up a leadoff triple by Ozzie Smith and a run-scoring single to Ruppert Jones. But Ryan didn't allow another hit after that and issued only two walks while striking out three.

Dodgers 5, Padres 0

Dave Goltz and rookie Alejandro Pena combined on a three-hitter in pitching Los Angeles over Atlanta, the Braves' first loss of the second half season.

Pedro Guerrero knocked in two runs and Mike Scioscia accounted for three of the Dodgers' 11 hits, all of them singles.

Goltz, 2-0, hurled five innings in his second start of the season. He allowed two hits while walking three and striking out four to earn the win. Pena, recalled from the minors on Wednesday, pitched the final four innings to record his first major league save. He allowed only one hit.

And This Is How I Feel About It
Cincinnati Reds' manager John McNamara glares into the face of home plate umpire Nick Colosi as the two argue about a foul tip off the bat of San Francisco Giants' batter Jack Clark in the fifth inning of a game in Cincinnati Friday. Ali To Try For Comeback

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Muhammad Ali, the three-time heavyweight boxing champion who refuses to retire, says he intends to stage a comeback this fall by boxing a top heavyweight fighter.

The legendary fighter told The Associated Press he will go to Columbia next week for a physical in order to obtain a license to box there.

Ali, who turns 40 in January, has repeatedly ignored pleas by friend and foe alike to call it quits once and for all. He said that if he had listened to people who urged him to retire before, he would not have won the title a second or third time.

Ali said he chose South Carolina because the state is one of three places in the United States to indicate it would grant him a license to box. Ali has had problems getting a boxing license in other areas of the country since his last bout on Oct. 2, when he was beaten badly by World Boxing Council champion Larry Holmes.

Chris G. Hitopoulos, chairman of the Richland County Boxing Commission, said Ali would be granted the license if he passes a physical examination.

"It is our understanding that Mr. Ali has taken three major physicals in the past nine months to satisfy himself that he is physically well, and also in efforts to secure a license for a possible return to boxing," Hitopoulos said.

The boxing commissioner said the examinations took place at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., the UCLA Medical Center and the NYU Medical Center in New York.

"It is the commission's opinion that if Mr. Ali applies for a license to box in Richland County and passes the physical by the commission's physician, we would not only grant him a license, but welcome his comeback against a formidable opponent at the Carolina Coliseum at the earliest possible date."

Hitopoulos said he believes there's an excellent chance Ali would carry through with plans to fight in Columbia.

"I don't see anything to keep it back," Hitopoulos said.

Asked why he would want to stage a boxing match in South Carolina, Ali said, "I want to make history here (America). I don't want to make it in a foreign land."

Hit Batter Starts Chicago Rally, 5-3

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Chicago's Chet Lemon was the man who said "Ouch!" but it was the Baltimore Orioles who eventually felt the pain.

Lemon was hit by a pitch for the 10th time this season Friday night, tying teammate Carlton Fisk for the American League lead and starting a tie-breaking two-run fifth inning that helped the White Sox defeat the Baltimore Orioles 5-3.

"Sure, a hit by pitcher is a weapon," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "Any time you get the first man on base — however he got there — it's a great weapon."

After Lemon was nicked by Sammy Stewart's pitch, Tony Bernazard, 15-for-28 against the Orioles this season, singled him to third. Stewart retired the next two batters but Ron LeFlore and Mike Squires delivered RBI-singles.

Elsewhere, the Detroit Tigers nipped the New York Yankees 1-0, the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4, the Texas Rangers shaded the Boston Red Sox 3-2, the Oakland A's beat the California Angels 4-2 in 10 innings, the Kansas City Royals downed the Cleveland Indians 4-1 and the Seattle Mariners bombed Minnesota 13-3 after the Twins took the opener of a doubleheader 6-1.

After the RBI-hits by LeFlore and Squires, the White Sox held on to win despite four errors and having two runners picked off base.

"The three guys who made the errors each provided offense when we needed it," said Manager Tony LaRussa. He referred to Jim Morrison, Bernazard and Bill Almon, who combined for three runs batted in and four runs scored.

Third baseman Morrison made two errors but hit a two-run homer for Chicago's first runs. Almon singled home an insurance run in the ninth.

Tigers 1, Yankees 0

Milt Wilcox limited New York to three hits with last-out help from Kevin Saucier and Alan Trammell singled home the only run in the third inning as Detroit defeated the Yankees for the first time in eight meetings this season. Wilcox was never in trouble and his fork ball — a new pitch for the veteran right-hander — kept the New York hitters off balance.

"I had real good control," Wilcox said. "I made some good pitches and my fork ball was really working. It acts like a spitter, I know it does. But I'm a legal pitcher. I worked hard on that pitch in spring training. It's not a spitter, I assure you of that."

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 4

Ernie Whitt doubled home Al Woods with the winning run as Toronto rallied for two runs in the seventh inning. Lloyd Moseby led off with a triple and one out later pinch-hitter Greg Wells singled him home with the tying run. After Wells was caught stealing, Woods and Barry Bonnell walked and Whitt followed with his double, offsetting a pair of solo home runs by Milwaukee's Gorman Thomas, who leads the league with 17 homers.

Rangers 3, Red Sox 2

But Sample opened the bottom of the inning with a single, was sacrificed to second and was breaking for third with the pitch when Jim Sundberg singled him home.

"I was so surprised," Sample said of the error. "I guess I will have to look at the films to see what happened. I thought I had caught the ball."

A's 4, Angels 2

Dwayne Murphy hit a two-out, two-run homer in the 10th inning to give Oakland the victory. Rickey Henderson homered in the opening inning for Oakland's first run and the A's made it 2-0 in the fourth on Keith Drumright's grounder. Steve McCatty, who went all the way on a five-hitter, blanked the Angels on a pair of singles until the eighth when Bobby Grich homered and Butch Hobson hit a sacrifice fly. Murphy's homer was his 10th of the season and gave him 12 game-winning RBIs, tops in the AL.

Royals 4, Indians 1

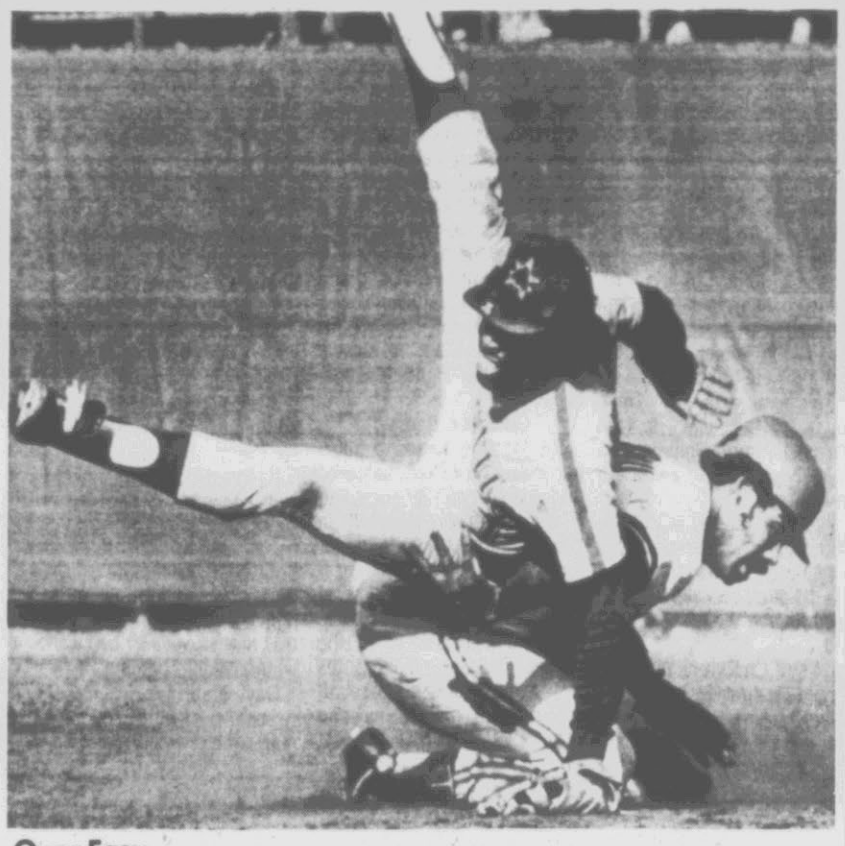

Rookie Mike Jones posted his first major league victory, Willie Aikens and Hal McRae cracked solo home runs while Willie Wilson rapped out four consecutive singles and stole two bases to lead Kansas City. The 22-year-old Jones, just up from the minors, limited Cleveland to one run on seven hits over the first six innings before turning things over to Renie Martin.

Twins 6-3, Mariners 1-13

Jeff Burroughs became the first Seattle player to hit three home runs in one game, driving in six runs to power the Mariners to a split of their doubleheader. In the first game, Gary Ward had a pair of run-scoring singles and Rob Wilfong homered for the Twins.

Burroughs socked a three-run blast in the first inning of the nightcap, drilled a two-run shot 420 feet to straightaway center in the fifth and added a solo homer in the seventh.

"My lack of RBIs bothered me a little because it didn't seem like I was coming through enough," said Burroughs. "Since we've come back from the strike it seems like there's runners everywhere and I'm starting to drive them in. I'm absolutely elated about tonight. The ball was just flying out of here."

Hurts Not Permanent

NEW YORK (AP) — The 2½-year-old son of New York Yankees pitcher Tommy John apparently suffered no permanent injury when he fell from a third story window, according to a spokesman for New York University Medical Center.

"There appears to be no irreversible injury" to the boy's brain, John Deats, of the medical center, said. He listed Travis John in "critical, but stable" condition.

The child suffered head injuries in a fall Thursday night from a third-story window of his family's rented vacation home in Bay Head on the Jersey shore.

Deats said the boy's doctor, Fred J. Epstein, expects the patient to stabilize "in the next 48 to 72 hours."

The child was flown to NYU Medical Center Friday morning from Point Pleasant Hospital in New Jersey. At Point Pleasant, the boy underwent 90 minutes of emergency neurosurgery.

"Extensive tests" were run on the boy Friday and he continues to be under observation, according to Deats. The only part of the boy's body that was injured was his head, Deats added.

Mixed Reactions To Chisox Revelation

CHICAGO (AP) — Major league baseball players and managers are expressing mixed reactions to a report that some members of the Chicago White Sox would be willing to throw some games if it meant the team would advance to the American League West playoffs.

"I couldn't do it — I wouldn't do it," Texas Ranger Manager Don Zimmer said Friday. "And even if I did I wouldn't talk about it. I don't have anything else to say."

The Rangers' catcher, Jim Sundberg, agreed.

"I don't like the idea," he said. "I wouldn't do it. I would just have to play as hard as I can, win the games, lose the playoffs, then complain as hard as I can that baseball has come to this."

Texas pitcher Steve Comer said: "If the manager and the players really said that, I would not want to be associated with them as teammates."

But not all of those contacted had such harsh words.

"It could happen," said New York Yankee slugger Reggie Jackson. "One game doesn't mean as much as a season."

Jerry Koosman of the Minnesota Twins also sympathized with the White Sox players.

"It shows they're planning ahead," he said. "Let's hope it doesn't happen, but the system should be such that there's no incentive to lose. I don't know of anybody who wouldn't blow a game to get to the playoff."

Their comments came in response to a copyrighted story in Friday's editions of the Chicago Tribune that said more than 10 Chicago White Sox ballplayers conceded they would throw any or all of the games with the Oakland A's in late September if losing those games provided their only remaining route to the postseason playoffs.

In the story, White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa also indicated he might instruct his team to throw the games in order to gain a playoff berth.

But Friday night, LaRussa said that "under no circumstances" would the team play without intending to win. However, he said he would be willing to forfeit the A's series in order to win the playoff berth.

"My answer for the dilemma is that faced with that situation, I would be in favor of not taking the field and accepting a forfeit, rather than being in a spot of needing to lose a game to make the playoffs," LaRussa said in Baltimore before the Sox took on the Orioles.

Earlier Friday, LaRussa had told The Associated Press, "How do you define winning? The rules say you have to play to win. But the stated objective of every team is also to get into the playoffs to have a shot at the World Series.

"If you try to win a game, and that means you lose a chance to go to playoffs, are you winning or losing?" he continued. "I don't know how to answer that."

Later, in Baltimore, he remarked on how the split season resulting from the baseball strike placed the White Sox in a position where losing a few games could be advantageous.

"What we are trying to do is clarify what winning means within the concept of the split season, which means balancing the winning of a spot in the playoffs against not losing on purpose once we take the field," said LaRussa.

Because of the 50-day player strike, major league baseball owners decided a week ago to split the season and grant the first-half leaders in each division a berth in the playoffs. Should a team win both halves, the owners voted to force a playoff by requiring that team to meet a division contender with the next best record over the entire season.

Under that formula, Oakland captured the first half of the American League West race, leaving the White Sox and a handful of teams in the position where they could lose the second half and still gain the playoffs on the strength of total wins.

For instance, if Kansas City, which trailed the second-place White Sox by 9½ games after the first half, winds up in a close battle with the A's for the second-half championship, the White Sox could ensure their playoff spot by allowing Oakland to sweep next month's four-game series to take first place again.

Eddie Einhorn, president of the White Sox, having talked to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn about the matter, said Friday: "Bowie assured us that there would be administrative action if the situation — however remote — should come up. I don't know what action would be taken but it might be in the form of a forfeit or just simply not play the game."

Bob Fishel, assistant to AL president Lee MacPhail, confirmed that the league would try to take steps to make sure no team could benefit by losing. He said the current playoff system is "not cast in stone. I'm sure some adjustments will be made if they are necessary."

Questions Are All Wrong Ones

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — To Sugar Ray Leonard, the slant of reporters' questions concerning his upcoming fight against Thomas Hearns have been all wrong.

"They say, 'How will you deal with a man as big and powerful as Tommy 'Hit Man' Hearns?' The question should be: 'How will Thomas Hearns deal with Sugar Ray?,'" Leonard said here Friday on the final stop of a nationwide tour promoting the fight for subscription television.

Leonard, the reigning World Boxing Council champion, and Hearns, the current World Boxing Association champ, meet for the undisputed world welterweight title Sept.16 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas.

The bout is scheduled for 15 rounds, but Leonard said it "won't go past 12."

"Hearns has already agreed that I will knock him out," Leonard said somewhat facetiously. "And I have already agreed to let him come over my house for dinner and will let him watch the tape of the fight and explain to him exactly how I knocked him out.

"This is a fight that I've been looking forward to for a number of years," added Leonard. "You have two champions in the same division who are pretty much undefeated ... two guys on the top of the roof and both know there's only room for one."

Hearns will take a 32-0 record, with 30 knockouts, into the ring. Leonard is 30-1 with his lone loss coming at the hands of Roberto Duran in Montreal on June 20, 1980.

From that fight, Leonard said he learned to deal "with all the people and all the hoopla" — something Hearns will have to face for the first time in Las Vegas.

"I feel I have a psychological advantage there," Leonard said. "He's never walked toward the ring with thousands and thousands of fans cheering. I'm used to it now. He'll probably come in tight and I'll take advantage of that."

Some boxing experts say, however, that Hearns' 8-inch edge in reach may prove too much for Leonard to handle.

"I'll be able to neutralize Hearns' reach and leverage with lateral movement. Hearns is not that well coordinated," said Leonard. "And he's never fought for 15 solid rounds.

"Tommy Hearns has never experienced being in the ring and being hit on the chin repeatedly — pow, pow, pow. He's never experienced his knees wobbling and looking over to his corner for assistance.

"He's never been to school," Leonard added. "I consider myself an experienced fighter...and I've always felt that the teacher always dominates the student."

Leonard said fight fans "will witness a great scientific technique display" by him against Hearns "and I just hope, wish and pray that there will not be any excuses when I beat him ... like the second Duran fight.

"I made Duran quit. He walked away, called it stomach cramps. There were no cramps, just temporary insanity," Leonard said. "Duran was quoted as saying last week that he wants to fight me again — for nothing. You can see the mental condition of the guy."

But Leonard said he once told Hearns that "'when you reach the stature of a Roberto Duran, then is the right time to fight me.' And that time is now."

Two Greats Get Honor

NEW YORK (AP) — Home run king Hank Aaron and Alonzo "Jake" Gaither, former head coach and athletic director at Florida A&M Univeristy, will be honored prior to the New York Urban League's annual Football Classic Saturday, Sept. 5.

The game, which will be played at Yankee Stadium, features Grambling vs. Florida A&M.

The Classic benefits the Whitney M. Young Jr. Memorial Scholarship Fund, which each year awards financial assistance to 10 New York college students.

There Is No Kiss For Davis, Rozelle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the aftermath of an anticlimactic mistrial, the Oakland Raiders and National Football League appeared ready to replay their bitter court dispute in a second trial rather than declare a truce.

"Can't you and Al Davis kiss and make up?" a reporter asked NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle as he left a post-trial news conference Friday.

"Al doesn't like kissing men, and neither do I," Rozelle said jokingly.

But more serious comments by both Rozelle and Davis, managing general partner of the Raiders, indicated the likelihood of a settlement outside court was remote.

"I'd never say never," said Rozelle. "But it's not going to be myself and Al sitting down. He continues to bill it as Rozelle against Davis, but it's Al against his 27 partners."

The commissioner said he saw no sign that the 27 other NFL member clubs would change their minds and let Davis move his Raiders to Los Angeles in violation of league rule 4.3.

"The 27 other clubs decided to defend this because they felt they could not let one of these clubs run off and violate the (league) constitution," said Rozelle. "I have no indication they have changed their minds."

The league rule, challenged by the Raiders as being anticompetitive and in violation of antitrust laws, requires approval of three quarters of league member teams for any one team to shift its base to a new city.

Davis, saying his battle with the NFL was governed by "the law of the jungle," vowed to continue his legal fight no matter how long it takes.

"We didn't win this time, but there'll be another time," said Davis. "This game is going into overtime, so we're going to win it in overtime."

The new trial was tentatively set to begin Sept.21, but attorneys anticipated complications before that.

Patrick Lynch, attorney for the NFL, said he would file a motion for change of venue, claiming a fair trial cannot now be had in Los Angeles because of massive publicity and community desire to have the Raiders move here.

"We clearly think this area has been totally poisoned," said Rozelle.

When defense attorneys were asked where they would favor holding the second trial, Oakland Coliseum attorney Ed Heafy said jokingly, "Maybe we should have a home and home. Let's try the next one in Oakland."

NFL attorneys had tried unsuccessfully to move the first trial out of Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, Davis and his attorney, Joseph Alioto, said they would press for a federal investigation of possible misconduct on the jury which deadlocked 8-2 with the majority favoring the Raiders.

Most jurors who spoke to reporters after the mistrial blamed the deadlock on one juror, Thomas Gelker, 66, whom they called "biased."

During 13 days of deliberations, it was discovered that Gelker's cousin once owned a team in the now defunct World Football League — information he had not given lawyers and the judge when they were trying to exclude potential jurors with connections to sports.

Gelker said his cousin's link to football never crossed his mind, and he insisted he had been a fair juror.

"The judge told me they (court investigators) found nothing to impinge on my honessty or character," Gelker told the Los Angeles Herald Examiner. He said the relationship of his cousin "had nothing to do with the verdict or lack of the verdict of the jury."

But jury forewoman Carole Slaten said Gelker was the cause of the mistrial.

"Tom Gelker was biased against Al Davis," Slaten told the Los Angeles Times. "I believe he brought that bias into the courtroom and it was nurtured outside the courtroom."

She identified the second holdout on the jury as Billie Hayes, but said Hayes was swayed by Gelker and "didn't fully understand (the court's) instructions." Some jurors said they believed Hayes would have changed her vote eventually had she been the lone holdout.

"I feel the National Football League has screwed Al Davis," Slaten told the Los Angeles Herald Examiner. "If Tom (Gelker) had been more honest when he was originally picked as a juror, we would have had someone who knew as much as the rest of us — we would have reached a verdict."

Birdie For Early Lead
Mark Lye reacts as he dropped a putt for a birdie-three on the 18th green at Wethersfield Country Club Friday. Lye's birdie gave him the early lead after two rounds at 130, but first round leader Lon Nielsen managed to hold on at 129. (AP Laserphoto)

OSU Quarterback's Fines Suspended

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State quarterback Art Schlichter, convicted of his third traffic offense in a year, had his fines suspended by a municipal court referee who said he sees each Buckeyes football game but didn't recognize the man before him.

Schlichter was charged with driving 84 mph on Interstate 270 in Columbus on Aug. 8. The speed limit is 55.

The player pleaded no contest Monday and was found guilty by Referee Irving Gertner in Franklin County Municipal Court. Gertner fined him $50 and costs, but suspended the penalty for good cause.

Gertner later said he couldn't remember the good cause that Schlichter showed to merit suspension of the fine.

At first, Gertner said he didn't recall handling the case at all, but later he said he "vaguely" remembered it and believed Schlichter appeared in his office.

"I tell you, frankly, I don't miss any football games," Gertner said. "But I honestly didn't know it was Art Schlichter. They are just faces to me."

With three moving traffic violations in one year, Schlichter could have faced a penalty of up to 60 days in jail and a $500 fine.

James Burns, the police officer who stopped Schlichter on Aug. 8, said he thought the quarterback deserved a stiffer penalty.

"He was cutting in and out of traffic like crazy," Burns said. "He said he was on his way home. He's very cocky."

In April, Schlichter appeared before Gertner and pleaded no contest to a charge of failure to yield. Gertner found him guilty and fined him $25 and costs, but suspended the penalty — also for good cause.

Last October, the quarterback pleaded guilty to speeding, and Judge Bruce Jenkins fined him $25 and costs, suspending the costs.

Although the Peppertree Resort Villas are new to Atlantic Beach, we're not new in the Interval Ownership field. The Peppertree Resort Villas are being developed by the same folks who bring you the Great Smokies Hilton Vacation Club in Asheville, N.C. and the Outer Banks Beach Club of Kill Devil Hills, N.C.

Doesn't it make sense... to own your own luxurious villa, forever... in lieu of renting every year with increasing costs? Why not do yourself and your family a favor... consider owning your vacation place this year... Forever.

NOTE: Won-lost records are those after August 9. New York and Oakland in the American League and Los Angeles and Philadelphia in the National League have qualified for preliminary playoffs against second-half division winners. If one team wins both halves, it will meet the division opponent with the next best overall season percentage.

HELPFUL READING

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — Jerilyn Britz, a member of the LPGA, hadn't been putting well and decided to take some remedial steps. Some logical remedial steps.

"I re-read an article I wrote on putting for Golf Digest," she said. "It ran after I won the U.S. Open in 1979. Re-reading my own words helped me a lot."

Special Car Tags Expensive In Crown Colony

By RONNIE WEI
Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) — Movie mogul Sir Run Run Shaw paid about $55,000 for his Rolls Royce in 1979. He paid $66,000 for his license plate — the number 6.

Getting a special license plate in this British colony is an expensive proposition and the demand for them is so high that the government auctions them off.

Sir Run Run wanted the number 6 because he was the sixth born son in his family. Also the number, when pronounced in Cantonese Chinese, sounds like the word for happiness.

Ruy Alberto da Silva, senior executive officer of licensing, said those who want special plate numbers are mostly Chinese, perhaps a carryover of their superstitious tradition.

Many Chinese consider the numbers 3, 6, and 8 as lucky but 4 is "deadly." They also like round and small numbers.

A license plate bearing CM1, for example, brought the equivalent in Hong Kong dollars of more than $42,000 U.S. early this year — $12,000 more than the current listed price of a Cadillac Seville here and $7,000 more than that of a Mercedes Benz 280SE.

The numerals 3 and 8 also are considered lucky because 3 in Cantonese sounds like the word for "life" and 8 the word for "prosperity."

License No. 10 (a small round number) was auctioned for $41,000, CH8 for $40,000, CC1 for $32,000 and 8888 for $31,000.

Although most Chinese dislike the numeral 4 it is not without favor. A tag bearing that number was sold to an investment company for about $29,000.

Da Silva said he was surprised that number fetched such a big sum. "Maybe the buyer is not superstitious," he said. "He just wants a small number."

However, when 4 is connected with other numbers, it could be valueless.

For example, the government, according to licensing officials, has not even tried to auction off tags bearing numerals 1414 because in that combination the number sounds like "definite death, definite death."

There has been no taker for the license plate CH47 which sounds like "dead thief." The government withdrew that number during an auction.

Yet, a tag with numerals 48 brought $21,000 because that combination, when pronounced rapidly, resembles the words: "definite prosperity."

Da Silva said the government has auctioned off 1,010 car license numbers since May, 1973, bringing in $3.35 million.

Lions Set Dedication

Kuib KINSTON — A dedication will be held today at 2 p.m. for the $300,000 building of the Lions Industries for the Blind on West Vernon Avenue. The major speaker will be Judge Coleman C. Cates of Burlington, who is blind.

The workshop, sponsored by Lions Clubs in District 31-H, was established with the aid of a federal grant in 1971, and presently employs a dozen people full time. In addition, seven blind clients are being trained to become self-sufficient in the operations of the agency and will be able to accept jobs in other industries when jobs become available

Charles Waller, chairman of the State Commission for the Blind, will be master of ceremonies, and the invocation will be given by Elbert Ray Bryant, president of the N.C. Association for the Blind.

The building's architect, John Peterson of New Bern, will present the key to the building to director Jimmie Durham.

Prior to the 2 p.m. dedication ceremony, an open house will be held beginning at 1 p.m. for the public to tour the facility. Light refreshments will be served. The ceremony is scheduled to last for about 50 minutes.

New Leader Wants To Provide Affluence For Riches-Short Volta

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer

OUAGADOUGOU, Upper Volta (AP) — Col. Saye Zerbo, who took control of the government in a military coup last November, is laying plans to bring affluence to one of the world's poorest nations.

In a speech early in August, the 49-year-old former member of the French colonial army said the governing military committee he heads is determined to make landlocked Upper Volta and its 6.5 million people self-reliant, self-sufficient in food and "just as viable as any other country."

Ninety percent of the population currently is engaged in subsistence agriculture. Foreign aid makes up 50 percent of the gross national product. Livestock, cotton and oil-producing karite nuts are the principal exports that cover only one-fourth of the cost of imports.

Zerbo also said he wants to encourage research and investment in the country's mineral resources — manganese, phosphates, nickel and some gold — the neglect of which he called "a geological scandal." Foreign aid to the world's 13th poorest country (per capita income is estimated at $160 per year) totaled $196 million last year with France, the former colonial power here, providing the most.

The United States maintains an aid mission here, and combined bilateral and regional development assistance coupled with emergency food aid totaled around $19 million last year.

Foreign diplomats and local sources suggested that the aid — in the form of contracts, supplies, food and some money — made wheeling and dealing difficult to resist.

The military Committee of National Recovery has set an austere tone, in addition to suspending the constitution and banning all political activity.

No beer or alcoholic beverages can be served in public places during working hours, and government employees, the bulk of wage earners, are now under strict orders to spend business hours at work.

Official cars are frowned upon, and it is common to see army officers, bureaucrats, tribal chiefs and mothers with babies on their backs riding motorbikes through this small, pleasant capital.

By most accounts Voltaics, as the people here are known, welcomed the overthrow last Nov. 25 of Gen. Sangoule Lamizana as president.

Lamizana, who first came to power himself in a coup in 1966, had been elected president in 1978 in what was hailed as one of the most open, fair elections in the history of African independence.

He won points during his previous 11-year off-and-on military rule for austerity, liberalism and circumspection, if not for success in dealing with the economy battered by the effects of the 1968-74 drought in sub-Saharan Africa, the area known as the Sahel.

Although industrial activity accounts for only eight percent of the gross domestic product, labor unions are remarkably strong and an important political factor here. Almost half the wage-earners belong to the four main unions. Unionized teachers striking for higher pay caught Lamizana's government off guard in November and set the stage for the military takeover.

"We are well aware of our role in bringing the present government to power," union leader Boniface Kabore said in a recent interview. "They are also aware they have to reckon with us now, and time is slipping away."

In a situation unique in Africa where the principal political actors in an impoverish country are the military and well-organized unions, demands to increase the minimum wage to the equivalent of 50 cents an hour constitute a serious challenge.

In a policy speech that stressed the need for self-reliance last May, Zerbo did not mention wage demands. But he has let it be known the military is prepared to deal quickly with what it considers any attempt to disrupt the country's fragile equilibrium.

He also has warned he will deal severely with merchants who hold grain off the market in opposition to lower prices imposed for urban consumers.

Several Western diplomats have suggested that Libya might be helping the government meet the day-to-day cost of running the country. The Voltaic-Libyan cultural center near the central market offers information to young Voltaics who might want to travel to Libya to find work. Photographs of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy grace the offices of several local Moslem businessmen.

Students Work Through College

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer

CARLINVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A red sun is hanging over Blackburn College where Melody Ippolita, a diminutive coed with a sledgehammer in her hands and a resolute look in her eyes, is smashing a sidewalk to bits next to the administration building.

And out on the green, under the full and bending maples where generations have debated ethics, poetry and the themes of academe, Vicki Martin, an art history major, is at the wheel of a roaring yellow farm tractor with an 8-foot cutting blade.

"I want to work in a museum when I graduate, restoring old paintings," she says. Then she laughs. "Of course, if worse comes to worst, I could always mow their lawn."

Sic transit education, Blackburn-style. Welcome to the college that works.

While other private liberal arts colleges falter amid declining enrollments, rising costs and cutbacks in student aid, Blackburn College rolls right along. It is financially sound and is still offering the advantages of a small, private college education at an increasingly appealing price.

The big reason is the school's work program.

Every student is required as part of his curriculum to work 15 hours a week. Pay is in the form of lower fees.

The students lay brick, pour concrete, mow grass, sort mail. They plan, prepare and serve the meals. They are everything from faculty assistants to bathroom plumbers.

With the exception of teaching, the students virtually run the place.

"The only comparable thing I know of was during World War II when young men were thrust into responsible positions in combat," says John Alberti, president of the small Midwest college 60 miles northeast of St. Louis.

Blackburn still charges only $4,100 a year, including room, board and all fees. It is the lowest private college tuition in Illinois and comparable to the cost of attending a state university.

Administrators say the school saves about $1.2 million a year, mostly in construction and maintenance expenses.

The library, completed in 1970, was built at a cost of about $556,000, according to Glenn L. McConagah, former president and chancellor emeritus. Had a private contractor done the job, construction alone would have topped $2.5 million, he says.

Savings are passed on as lower fees, but administrators say there is another benefit — an appreciation of hard work and free enterprise.

"We are entering a new era of basic values in this country," says Alberti. "The Reagan election made that more clear. There is in the air a return to traditional values, among them the work ethic. The work ethic is the raison d'etre of this institution."

Alberti expects an increase in applications next year and he isn't particularly worried about Washington's current budget-cutting climate. He says a reduction in student loans may make Blackburn more attractive.

The work program is entirely student run. Job assignments are made democratically and on the basis of seniority. A dozen students are chosen each year to head individual work departments on campus and two, one male and one female, are program managers.

Six paid professionals help teach skills from feeding magnetic tape into the school's records system to building a swimming pool. Goldbricks, known as "bozos" in campus lingo, are not popular. Students are fined or even expelled for goofing off and they have a special incentive for doing a good job.

LIFESAVING COURSE

The course will be taught from 6:30-8 p.m. Monday through Friday nights until completion. Each participant will be charged a $5 pool fee for the course, which will be taught by Cindy Harden and Bob Denson.

AGENCY FORMED

Ralph A. Morris and Fred W. Alcock announced the merger of Morris Brothers Insurance and East Carolina Insurance and the formation of a new agency under the name of East Carolina Insurance Agency Inc.

They said the merger combines almost 40 years of experience in general insurance.

SPENDING PROJECTED

Carolina Telephone reported that it plans to spend $96,650,000 for new equipment to expand and improve service during the year.

The company, which now serves about one million telephones, forecasts a growth rate of 3.3 percent this year.

The nation's 1,483 independent or non-Bell System telephone companies, including Carolina Telephone, will spend some $4.5 billion on new construction in 1981, an increase of 6.4 percent over 1980, according to the U.S. Independent Telephone Association.

ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

Randall C. Edlurd of Ayden, a life insurance representative with Combined Insurance Co. of America, received an award for outstanding sales and service to the public, according to Sebby Milano, life sales director for the state.

Milano said Edlurd won the initial award in the WCS International Life Sales Achievement Club, named after W. Clement Stone, the company's founder and board chairman.

NAMED TO ROSTER

J. L. Clemmons, local sales representative of Southern Life Insurance Co., has been named to the company's $1 million insurance in force roster.

Southern Life said Clemmons qualified for the honor as a result of the level of sales and service provided to company policyowners in Greenville and the surrounding area.

Cable "Horn"

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Paramount Video's first production for pay-TV will be "Come Blow Your Horn," starring Elliott Gould.

Included in the cast will be Lou Jacobi, reprising his original role as Mr. Baker from Neil Simon's 1961 Broadway production.

School supplies to cost 49% more

It's going to cost you more to send your kids to school this year than it did last year.

An informal survey shows that you can expect to pay as much as 49% more for school supplies such as pencils, pens, rulers, filler paper, notebooks and crayons.

In some instances, consumers will receive less for their money. One store is selling a pack of ball point pens at last year's prices. The difference is that there are nine pens in the pack instead of the 10 it sold last year.

Rulers	up 25%
Pencils	up 25%
Pens	up 15%
Paper	up 15%
Textbooks	up 15%
Notebooks	up 49%
Crayons	up 49%

This article appeared July 8, 1981 in a major newspaper. Our response to this is . . .

PHOOEY!

Prices may go up in some stores but . . . not at CLARKS

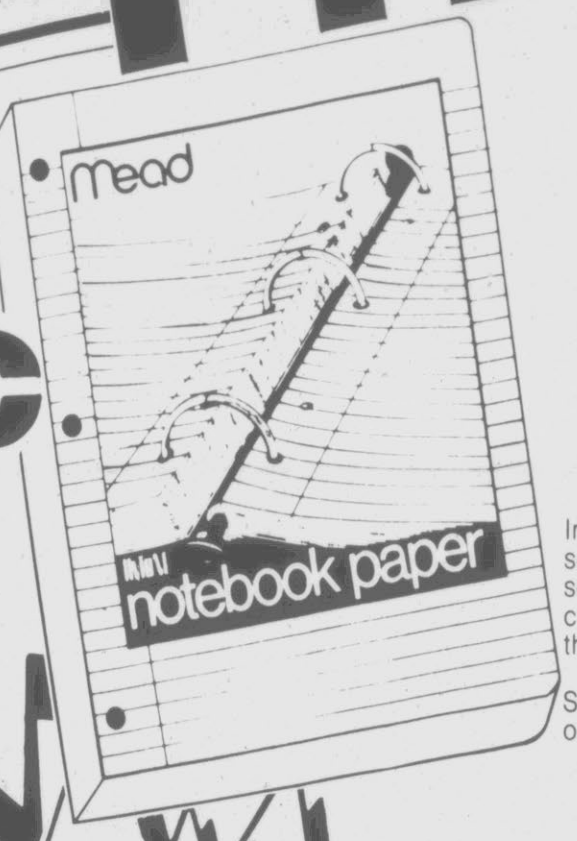

Inflation hits everyone hard - particularly families with children going back to school. Costs are sky-rocketing - but not at Clarks. These popular name-brand school supplies advertised here are the same sale prices as 1980. No increases at Clarks. Our stores mean quality and value at low discount prices so that you, our valued customer, can stretch your back-to-school budget.

Shop and save on these items at 1980 "and 1981" prices. Advertised last year on August 13th, 17th and 24th. Proof available upon request.

Karen Jeffreys Weds At Twilight

In a candlelight ceremony, Karen Elizabeth Jeffreys and James Earl Akers Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at twilight in St. James United Methodist Church.

Performing the double-ring ceremony were the Rev. Daniel T. Earnhardt and the Rev. Dewey M. Tyson.

The bride, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Donald Bearss Jeffreys, is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and is attending East Carolina University.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Earl Akers Sr. of Shawnee Mission, Kan. He is a graduate of the University of Kansas and the University of Kansas College of Health Sciences, where he earned the doctorate degree. He is a faculty member in microbiology in the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Music for the wedding was provided by organists, Mrs. Frances Cain and Paul Tardif, and by Chris Tardif, violinist, and Joanie Stauffer, voice soloist.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of chantilly lace and nylon tulle over silk taffeta. The fitted empire bodice of chantilly lace was designed with a sweetheart neckline, illusion yoke and long sleeves tapering to calla points. Bridal buttons fastened the sleeves and accented the back. Her bouffant skirt featured panels of chantilly lace and ended in a full chapel train of of silk taffeta and tulle. Her fingertip mantilla was bordered with matching chantilly lace and was attached to a Juliet cap of lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white phaleanopsis orchids and stephanotis accented with foliage and baby's breath and wore an heirloom diamond pendant which belonged to her maternal grandmother.

The maid of honor was Jann Calhoun of Greenville. She was dressed in a formal gown of baby-pink lawn cotton with white eyelet and short white cotton gloves, white pearls and baby's breath in her hair. Her colonial bouquet matched those of the attendants.

Bridesmaids, Laurie Smith and Mrs. Bradford Parker, both of Greenville, Patricia Stewart of Brookline, Mass., and Laura Redford of Virginia Beach, Va., were dressed in a formal gowns of daydream blue lawn cotton with white eyelet. They wore pearls and white cotton gloves and carried pastel colonial bouquets of mixed yellow daisies, enchantment lilies, cornflowers and anemones all tied with satin ribbons and accented with baby's breath.

Bridesmaids Hannah Adams of Ohio and Debbie Christine of Wilmington were attired in formal gowns of cloud white lawn cotton in the same design as the other attendants. They carried matching colonial bouquets.

Robert Akers, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Groomsmen were Don Ball, Paul Tardif, Billy Helton and Woody Dixon of Greenville, Cecil Martin of Farmville and Michael Jeffreys, brother of the bride, of Portland, Ore.

The mother of the bride wore a dress of ivory lace, while the mother of the bridegroom was attired in an aquamarine silk gown. Mrs. Russell Powell and Mrs. George Jeffreys, grandmothers of the bride, had seafoam and gray attire.

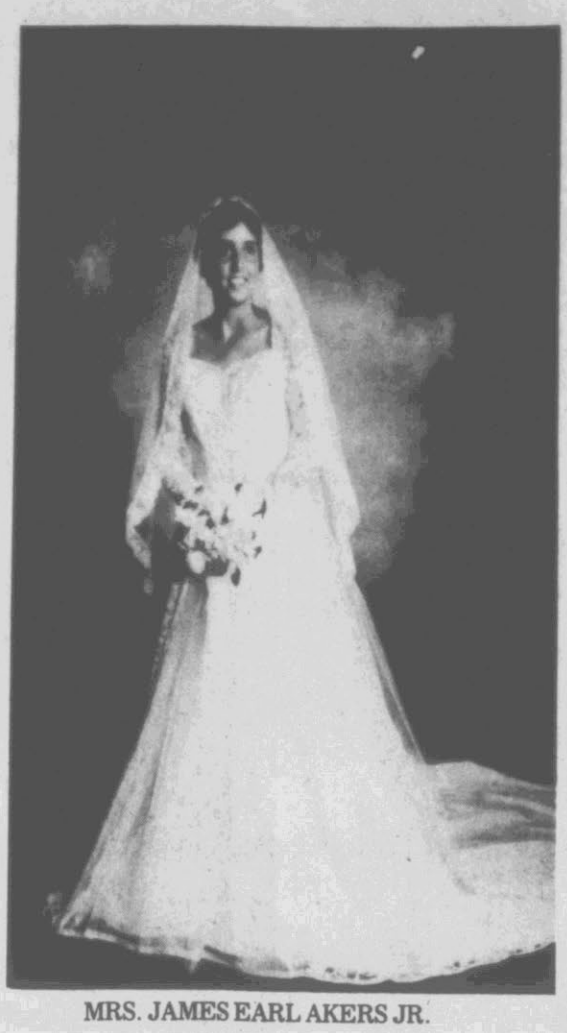

The wedding director was Mrs. Katherine Vinson.

The bride's parents gave the reception in the fellowship hall of the church. Assisting were Mrs. Emily Hall, Mrs. Steve Eller, Mrs. Otis Coefield, Tracey Eubank, Paul Tardif, Mrs. Woody Dayton, Mr. and Mrs. Gilmer Hulsey, Kelly Wall, and Mary Kathryn Clark.

The bridesmaids' luncheon Friday was given by Dr. Henrietta Williams and Mrs. Clarence Johnson at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Smalls Married At Savages' Home Saturday

The wedding of Cynthia Jo Stancil and Wilburn Ernest Small Jr. was held Saturday at 11:00 a.m. on the lawn of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Savage, 2435 Dickinson Avenue, Greenville.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie P. Stancil of Wilson and Mrs. Louise Cherry Small and the late Wilburn E. Small.

The bride wore a formal-length gown of white qiana over crepe designed with an open Queen Anne neckline outlined in silk venise lace. The lace extended down to the semi-waistline which was encircled with a self-fabric sash and bow. The sleeveless gown was also outlined with silk venise lace and the skirt extended to an attached chapel-length train. She wore a garden hat overlaid with organza and silk venise lace with a self-fabric bow in center back. She carried a fan of silk venise lace adorned with yellow sweetheart roses, baby's breath and greenery.

Her sister, Terry Stancil of Goldsboro, was her maid of honor. She was dressed in a formal-length gown of pal blue qiana. The pleated v neckline and open back extended down to the accordian skirt. She carried a single long-stemmed yellow rose with greenery and baby's breath.

The best man was T. Max Wesson of Claremont.

The organist was Marcia Leggett.

A reception was held in the Savage home after the wedding. The table was covered with a blue cloth overlaid with beige lace. The main refreshment table was arranged with a crystal basket of fresh cut flwoers and a pair of silver candelabra. A silver punch bowl and champagne fountain accented the table, along with the four-tiered wedding cake.

The bride's parents honored the couple with a pig-picking the evening of the wedding at the Savage home.

The bride is a radiologic technologist in the office of Drs. Frohbose and Macaulay, P.A. in Rocky Mount. The bridegroom is employed by the N.C. Department of Insurance in its Fire-Rescue Division as a rescue training specialist.

After a wedding trip to Ontario, Canada, the couple will live in Wilson.

MRS. WILBURN ERNEST SMALL JR.

The Great Fire of London began in 1666, destroying 400 streets and buildings such as St. Paul's Cathedral and the Guildhall.

Miss Mills, Mr. Roberson Married Saturday In Candlelight Ceremony

The candlelight wedding of Wanda Elaine Mills and John Ivy Roberson Jr. was conducted Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in the First Christian Church of Greenville.

Dr. Will R. Wallace officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Curtis Mills of Farmville and Mr. and Mrs. John Ivy Roberson Sr. of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a formal-length gown of white silkened organza over white peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in reembroidered alencon lace that continued over the semi-empire bodice finished at the back closure with covered buttons. The long fitted sleeves were adorned with alencon lace and double ruffled cuffs. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel-length train were bordered with reembroidered lace and double ruffled flounce. Her fingertip veil had a camelot cap beaded with seed pearls and chantilly lace. She carried a silk arrangement of yellow miniature roses, white roses, and yellow and white daisies accented with baby's breath. She wore her grandmother's pearls and her aunt's diamond stud earrings.

Her maid of honor was Hope Garris of Farmville; her bridesmaids, Sharon Mozingo of Farmville and Carol Brann of Greenville; and her junior bridesmaids, her sister, Velinda Mills, and her cousin, Doni Ane Bernd of Smithfield, Va. Eva Ann Webb of Farmville was her flower girl.

Miss Garris wore a baby blue crepe formal-length gown and a matching floppy hat. She carried a long-stemmed yellow rose, accented with greenery and baby's breath and tied with yellow and blue streamers.

The bridesmaids wore formal-length yellow crepe gowns and matching floppy hats and carried bouquets like that of the maid of honor. The junior bridesmaids wore formal-length gowns of floral yellow and blue crepe and baby's breath in their hair. Their bouquets were like those of the maid of honor and bridesmaids.

The bride's mother wore an aqua silk chiffon formal-length gown; the bridegroom's mother, a formal-length royal blue gown with a cape. Both were remembered with corsages of carnations and baby's breath, as were the grandmothers of the couple.

The bridegroom's father was best man and the ringbearer was Shaun Dixon of Atlanta, Ga. Ushers were Dean and Greg Bernd, both of Smithfield, Va.; Dennis Roberson, brother of the bridegroom, of Grimesland; and Phil Dixon of Atlanta, Ga.

Music was provided by Jean Wilson, soloist, and Diane Bridger, organist. Mrs. Peggy Bernd, aunt of the bride, directed the ceremony. John Ford of Greenville distributed rice bags; Ed Meeks of Farmville handed out bulletins and Rhonda Coltrain of Washington, N.C. handed out scrolls.

The reception given by the bride's parents following the ceremony was held in the Ladies' Parlor of the church. Mrs. Elsie Mozingo cut cake; Mrs. Joyce Webb poured punch; and Mrs. Marie Joyne assisted in serving. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Durward Murphrey, aunt and uncle of the bride, and goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Coltrain of Washington, N.C.

The after-rehearsal dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Mozingo of Farmville.

The wedding trip will be to the beach and Williamsburg, Va. and the couple will live in Greenville. The bride is employed as secretary of the First Christian Church, Greenville, and the bridegroom works at Procter and Gamble here. She is a graduate of Farmville Central High School; he of D.H. Conley High School.

New Friends Turned Off By Home Movies

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently met a very nice couple who live near us. We seemed to have a lot in common, so we dropped by their house to say hello. They mixed some drinks and invited us to stay for dinner. After dinner they said they wanted to show us something they had just bought, then they turned on this home video projector on top of their TV, and before we knew it we were watching an X-rated movie on their TV!

Abby, maybe we've lived a sheltered life, as we were very embarrassed watching this kind of movie, especially with people we hardly knew. (It really was dirty!)

As soon as the movie was over, we said we had to leave and we did. Our problem: We would like to reciprocate their dinner invitation, but what if they invite us back and start showing some more X-rated movies? They're really a nice couple, and we like them, but we don't know how to handle this.

US IN FORT SMITH, ARK.

DEAR US: If you think you have enough in common with this couple to develop a closer friendship, invite them to your home for dinner. And if they invite you back and attempt to entertain you again with an X-rated movie, tell them candidly it's not your cup of tea. If the friendship cools after that, you'll know you didn't have as much in common with this "nice" couple as you thought you did.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Here's a silly question that has become not so silly recently: About 16 years ago, my wife and I had a large wedding. Recently, apparently for the first time, my mother viewed our wedding album. She took an intense dislike to her appearance in a picture of my father and her dancing. This is the only picture of my parents in the album, Abby, but my mother has requested that we remove it and give it to her to destroy! She says she would hate to have her descendants see that likeness of her, and she reminded us that she never gave her permission to use this picture in the first place.

Both my wife and I think it is an excellent picture of my parents, and had we thought otherwise we would not have included it in our album. Since in our view the sole objection to this picture is an irrational one, which exists only in my mother's mind, and to destroy it would mean there would be no picture of my parents in our wedding album, we have refused her request.

Are we wrong? Or does my mother have a right to this picture? Ironically, I am a guidance counselor.

FAMILY PROBLEM

DEAR FAMILY: It is your wedding album and it will undoubtedly outlast your annoyed mother. If she continues to fuss, remove the picture from the album and return it later.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: In the last five years or so, most couples whom I have married have asked that I omit that portion of the service that asks if anyone present objects to the marriage that is about to take place. However, before each ceremony, I ask the bride and groom separately if they are sure they want to go through with the wedding. A number of times one or the other has said "No," the ceremony has been cancelled with the church filled and the reception waiting.

FIRST UNITED METHODIST CHURCH,
WHITTIER, CALIF.

Miss Smith, Mr. Davis Wed Saturday

FARMVILLE — The wedding of Miss Leila Roxie Smith and John Hunter Davis was solemnized Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in the Farmville United Methodist Church by the Rev. R. Dennis Ricks.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. Albert Wollaston Smith Jr. of Farmville and Mr. and Mrs. Grady Talmage Davis Jr. of Windsor.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal wedding gown of white chiffon over taffeta, fashioned with a fitted bodice, Queen Anne neckline, and a layered skirt that extended into a chapel train. Frills of pearl-encrusted venise lace trimmed the neckline and the deep bodice yoke. The front yoke of lace was reembroidered with tiny pearls and the sheer back yoke had lace applqiues. The long full sleeves of chiffon were interspersed with lace motifs and had wide flounces at the wrists that were edged with jeweled lace frills. Her fingertip mantilla of silk illusion was attached to a lace-covered Juliet cap. Her scalloped veil was edged with flower-designed venise lace and the cap was encrusted with pearls. She wore a strand of pearls that have belonged to her maternal grandmother and carried her mother's wedding Bible, overlaid with a cascade of summer flowers and a silk handkerchief given her paternal grandmother by her grandfather on their wedding day.

Mrs. Albert Wollaston Smith III of Norcross, Ga. was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Libby Minshew of Raleigh, Miss Jenny Dempsey of Greenville, Mrs. Jake Gray of Winston-Salem, Mrs. Robert Brugh of Greensboro, Mrs. Patty Hile of Williamsburg, Va., and Mrs. Jim Haggard of Durham. They wore formal gowns of pink silesta with matching short-sleeved chiffon jackets and carried bouquets of daisies, miniature pink carnations, and gypsophilia.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Groomsmen were Talmage Davis III of Suffolk, Va. and Walton Davis of Asheville, brothers of the bridegroom, Wolly Smith and Sidney Davis of Greenville, brothers of the bride; Alden Davis of Richmond, Va., Chuck Finklea of Wilson, Tim Phelps and Walt Spruill, both of Windsor, Ben Castellow, Boyd Combs, Ed Cherry and Benjamin Goldstein, all of Raleigh, and Kenneth Bohan of Jackson.

The bride's mother wore a formal dress-and-coat ensemble of printed organza in muted shades of rose, green and burgundy. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal dress of mauve chiffon. Both were honored with corsages of Phalaenopsis orchids.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University with a B.A. degree in nursing. She is associated with the ECU School of Medicine Pediatrics Department. Her husband, an East Carolina University graduate, is completed the Master of Business Administration degree at ECU. After a wedding trip to Paradise Island, Bahamas, the couple will live in Greenville.

Parents of the bride entertained at a reception at the DAR Chapter House here following the ceremony. Judge and Mrs. Horton Rountree and Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Carraway greeted guests. Mrs. Brad Minshew and Mrs. Marvin Speight poured punch. Mrs. Ray Sutton of Goldsboro, Mrs. Streeter Tugwell and Mrs. Ruth Brown presided at the bride's table; Mrs. Roland Lang and Mrs. Tammy Tucker at the guest register. Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Duke, Mr. and Mrs. F.T. Carr, Mrs. Reid Eason and Mr. and Mrs. George C. Moye assisted the hosts.

Former Greenvillians Wed, Will Live In Alabama

MORGANTON — Former Greenville residents, Patricia Sandra Grill and Capt. Edward Wilson DuRant III, were married Saturday at 2:00 p.m. in the Morganton First Church of God.

The Rev. Don Smith officiated at the double ring ceremony in which the bride was given in marriage by her father. Ned DuRant, son of the bridegroom, served as best man. Anna DuRant, daughter of the bridegroom, and April Foster, niece of the bride, were flower girls.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. Henry S. Grill of Rt. 2, Valdese, and Mrs. Edward W. DuRant Jr. of Southern Pines.

The bride wore a formal white gown of chantilly lace and organza. Rose chantilly embroidered in pearls overlay the fitted bodice with lace scallops edging both the keyhole neckline and brief lace sleeves. Scalloped lace marked the lifted curved waistline over the demibelle skirt with an inset of crystal pleating in front and bands of scalloped chantilly down each side in a redingate effect, continuing around the hemline with a wide panel of decorate lace beginning at an organza bow in back and flowing to a chapel train. Her juliet cap of delicate schiffli embroidery studded with seed pearls held a waltz-length veil and blusher with a border of the same embroidered lace. Her bouquet was a cascade of pink rubrum lilies, pink roses, gypsophilia and ivy.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Leonard Brendel, sister of the bride, of Drexel. Bridesmaids were Melissa Foster, sister of the bride, of Morganton and Mrs. Ron White of Greenville. The three wore formal-length gowns of mauve satin featuring gathered waists with flowing skirts accented with princess seaming. Each had a contrasting wraparound capelet of mauve and burgundy Georgette over the bodice. Each carried a single long-stemmed white mum surrounded by gypsophilia and ivy and burgundy netting and ribbon.

The wedding director was Mrs. Johnny Watts.

The bridegroom's mother gave the rehearsal dinner at Mom 'n Pop's Steakhouse, Drexel, Friday evening. The sisters of the bride, Mrs. Leonard Brendel and Melissa Foster, gave a shower at the home of Mrs. Brendel in Drexel Thursday. A shower also was given by Mrs. Bryan Dellinger in her home Monday, Aug. 10.

The bridegroom is a 1971 graduate of St. Andrews College who received the Masters in Public Administration degree from East Carolina University in 1981. The bride graduated from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill in 1975 and received the B.S. in Nursing from East Carolina University in 1979. The bridegroom is a member of the U.S. Army Medical Services Corps stationed at Noble Army Hospital, Fort McClellan, Ala. The couple will live in Anniston, Ala.

MRS. EDWARD WILSON DuRANT

Engagement Announced

HARRIET SUSAN KNOTT. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Thomas Knott of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Mark Timothy McGhee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Thorny McGhee of Cary. The wedding will take place Sept. 19.

Father Here After 21 Years

BETHEL — Four Pitt County residents are having a reunion with their father this weekend, being with him for the first time in 21 years.

Bob Pearce of Bremerhaven, West Germany, is here for a reunion with his children and grandson and other relatives and friends. A U.S. military retiree, he has a German wife and works in a hospital in Bremerhaven.

His children here are Ms. Lois Bailey of Rt. 6, Greenville, Mrs. Connie Bond of Bethel, and James W. and Robert Wayne Pearce, both of Rt. 4, Greenville. He's seeing his grandson, Charles Edward Bond III, two, for the first time.

A reunion gathering was held Saturday at the home of Mrs. Bond here.

CRIPPLER

ATLANTA (AP) — Arthritis is the nation's No. 1 crippler and it costs American business a staggering $14 billion, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

The labor force lost 27 million working days last year and employees lost nearly $5 billion in wages, because of arthritis. Approximately $2 billion in annual disability payments, or about 15 percent of all Social Security Disability Insurance payments, were paid to U.S. workers with arthritis.

Elks-Tyer Wedding In Park

Lori Annette Tyer and Johnny Ray Elks were united in marriage Saturday at 3:00 p.m. in Green Springs Park.

The Rev. Haywood L. Martin of Vanceboro performed the double-ring ceremony.

Panel Is Chosen

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The panel of judges for this year's Miss America Pageant will include the comic drunk Foster Brooks, daytime game show host Wink Martindale, movie producer Renee Valente and retired bandmaster Herman Vincent.

Also on the panel will be Evelyn Ay Sempier, who was Miss America of 1954. She is the fourth former Miss America to return to the pageant as a judge. The others were Lee Meriwether (1955), Yolande Betbeze (1951) and Barbara Walker (1947).

Warren-Pollocks Vows Said Saturday

The wedding of Ellen Williams Pollock and George Stephen Warren was held Saturday at 4:00 p.m. in the Oakmont Baptist Church, Greenville.

The Rev. E. Gordon Conklin officiated at the double-ring ceremony. The bride was escorted by her father and the bridegroom was served by his father as best man.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a bateau necklines of reembroidered alencon lace. Matching lace, encrusted with seed pearls, bordered a bertha which fell to a point at the empire waist. The full skirt with insets of chantilly lace ended in a deep ruffle which extended into a chapel train. She carried a prayer book covered with gardenias, tea roses and greenery.

The maid of honor was Eva Meares of Chadbourn. She wore a formal-length gown of print organza in shades of pink and lilac designed with a portrait neckline with ruffled bertha collar and empire bodice. The flared skirt of the sleeveless gown was accented by a deep ruffled flounce at the hemline overlaid by a Southern Belle pickup skirt also with ruffled flounce and side swag with rolled tie-bow trim.

Bridesmaids were Nancy Smith of Jacksonville, Charlotte Lewis, sister of the bridegroom, of Atlantic Beach, Jan Dixon of Raleigh, and Donna McLaurin, Jackie Brown, Robin Conway, Lori Dickens, and Lois Phelps, all of Greenville. Their dresses were identical to that of the maid of honor. Each carried clusters of lavender daisies accented with baby's breath and greenery and tied with satin bows.

The flower girl was Jennifer Lucas, cousin of the bridegroom, of Turkey; the ring bearer, Graham Powell, cousin of the bride, of Greenville. Miss Lucas wore a dress of the same fabric as the bridesmaids', with ruffled neck and full gathered skirt attached to an empire waist. She carried a lace basket of rose petals.

MRS. GEORGE STEPHEN WARREN

Ushers were Timm Warren, brother of the bridegroom, of Newton Grove, Dick Lewis of Atlantic Beach, Joe Pollock, brother of the bride, of Greenville, Joe John of Ayden, Joey Memory and Mike Edmonds, both of Raleigh, Nathan Gay of Clinton and Tim Etheridge of Trenton.

Mrs. Greenville Banks Jr. directed the wedding.

The wedding reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Mrs. W.R. Smith, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Faye Gay, aunt of the bridegroom, served cake. Punch was poured by Mrs. Jimmy Smith and Mrs. Sara Warren, aunt of the bridegrooom. Mr. and Mrs. Greenville Banks Jr. welcomed guests. Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Dickens presided at the guest registry. Mr. and Mrs. Tracy McLaurin said goodbyes. Carolina and Paul Keil Smith of Arlington, Va. distributed rice bags.

The bride's parents gave a buffet dinner in the fellowship hall of the church after rehearsal Friday. A bridesmaids' luncheon was given the same day at the home of the bride by Mrs. Howard Smith, Mrs. S.N. Smith, Mrs. W.R. Smith, and Mrs. Gilbert E. Smith, aunts of the bride.

The bride is the manager of the Athletic Attic, Carolina East Mall. The bridegroom is minister of youth at Oakmont Baptist Church. She is a graduate of Rose High School and has attended East Carolina University and Pitt Community College. He is a graduate of Northwest High School in Littleton and N.C. State University and is attending Southeastern Baptist Seminary in Wake Forest.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, the couple will live in Greenville.

St. Paul's Church Scene Of Clark Wedding

Beverly "Rushell" Pearson of Garner became the bride of Steven Alan Clark Saturday at 6:30 p.m. in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and Mr. Clark was his son's best man.

The bride was dressed in a gown of white silk organza over taffeta. The empire bodice had a Queen Anne neckline and cap sleeves. Reembroidered alencon lace with accents of pearls and sequins overlay the bodice and sleeves. The full antebellum skirt had tiers of lace ruffles mounting a mushroom flounce that encircled the skirt and chapel train. She carried a bouquet of white and light pink hand-rolled China silk roses surrounded by white tulle, lace, white sik stephanotis and pink silk lilies of the valley. Long satin ribbons with love knots completed the bouquet. Her veil was a waltz-length mantilla bordered with peau d'ange lace and scattered seed pearls. Panels of lace cascaded from the chapel cap.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Terri Pearson Williams, sister of the bride, of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Miss Rhonda Altman of Georgetown, S.C., and Miss Keila McGlohon and Miss Cindy Talbert, both of Greenville. They all wore gowns of blush knit featuring scooped necklines with deep cowl drapes trimmed in silk venise lace, natural waistlines and floor-length flared skirts. They carried bouquets of hand-rolled silk roses in three shades of pink, surrounded by lace silk cherry blossoms and star flowers. Streams of satin ribbon in differing shades of pink were tied at the stems.

Margaret Smith of Garner was the flower girl. She wore a long white dress of dotted swiss with long sheer ruffled sleeves and carried a basket filled with pink roses.

The ring bearer was Tripp Smith, brother of the flower girl, of Garner. Ushers were Tommy Pearson, brother of the bride, of Garner, Tommy Williams of Greenville, and Stan Clark, brother of the bridegroom, Bill Davies, Tim Nauss and Ricky Rogers, all of Florence, S.C.

Ms. Nancy Lancaster was organist and Mrs. Terri Williams and Maurice Phelps were soloists.

A reception was given by the bride's parents at the Casablanca here. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Hayes, godparents and aunt and uncle of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Parker, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom. An arrangement of pink sweetheart roses and baby's breath on the bridal layer of the four-tiered wedding cake was made by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Ruby Wood. The cake was cut by Dr. and Mrs. Sam T. White, who also assisted in greeting guests.

MRS. STEVEN ALAN CLARK

The after-rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Casablanca.

The bride is employed by Eveleigh's Needlework Shop in Bennettsville, S.C. and the bridegroom is employed by Transouth Financial Corporation, Bennettsville. She attended East Carolina University and he is a graduate of the University of South Carolina.

After a wedding trip to Nags Head and Hatteras Island, the couple will live in Bennettsville, S.C.

Kay Whitehurst Spoke

In her opening remarks, Mrs. Whitehurst said, "We need to be about our business in education with prayer and humility." She said her main interest is curriculum for youngsters. Child-centered education is her credo. "Nobody, regardless of his or her credentials, has any definitive answers to how and why people (including young people) learn," she said. "We all must approach our tasks as amateurs who learn as we do, who keep open minds and constantly seek to answer the questions posed to us by our responsibilities. Educators, like parents, do not have the luxury of starting over with individual children."

Mrs. Whitehurst advised, "Be in touch with your children's teachers. Get to know them."

She outlined the framework and operation of the city's educational system and distributed printed materials for later perusal by her listeners.

New Welcome Wagon hostess, Jackie Heath, was introduced.

The August board meeting will be held at the home of Ellen Hollis Wednesday, Aug. 26 at 10 a.m.

JILL GWENDOLYN TRIPP. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim H. Tripp of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Timothy Ames Webster, son of Mrs. Linda Webster of Summerville, S.C. and Mr. Jimmie Webster of Florence, S.C. A Sept. 6 wedding is planned.

Mr. Edwards Married In New York

HUNTINGTON, N.Y. — Richard Lee Edwards of Greenville took as his bride Barbara Frances Springer in a wedding ceremony held in St. John's Episcopal Church here Saturday at noon.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie F. Edwards of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Springer of Greenlawn, N.Y.

The Rev. Robert Brand was assisted by Jeff Garland, S.J., in performing the double-ring ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of white satin with a full skirt, fitted bodice with accents of venise lace and pearls, a Queen Anne neckline with lace insets and a lace Victorian collar, and bishop sleeves with appliques of floral lace. Her veil was triple-tiered. She carried a prayer book and a bouquet of white roses and ivy.

The maid of honor was Jennifer Springer, sister of the bride, of Greenlawn, N.Y. Bridesmaids were Donna Edwards, sister of the bridegroom, of Greenville; Sarah Lyn Billingsley of San Francisco, Calif.; Kathleen O'Brien of Greenlawn, Nancy Outzs of Boston, Mass., and Ann Walker of New Brunwick, N.J.

Each wore a light blue Victorian print dress with fitted bodice with lace and satin accented, full gathered skirt with bolero jackets with victorian collars. TMiss Springer's bouquet consisted of stephanotis, carnations, blue cornflowers, white roses and ivy. The bridesmaids' bouquets were like that of the maid of honor, but without roses.

William F. Pritchard Jr. of Greenville was best man. Ushers were Daryl Brautigam of Ithaca, N.Y., Mickey Hartsell of Lansing, Mich., Stan Moeschl and John Mulroy, both of Boston, Mass., and Bill Springer, brother of the bride, of Greenlawn, N.Y.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at Dowd's Steak House in Centerport, N.Y. Friday night.

A shower was given in Greenville at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Jackson by Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Leon raymond Hardee, Mrs. Earl Spain, Mrs. Norman Sutton, Mrs. Billy Rollins, Mrs. Earl White, Miss Mavis Brown, and Miss Martha Rollins.

After a wedding trip to New York City, New England, Quebec and Montreal, the couple will live in Washington, D.C.

The bride, a 1981 graduate of Duke University with a B.S. in Nursing, is a nurse at Georgetown University Hospital in Washington. Her husband is an attorney with the Washingtonfirm of Bergson, Borkland, Margolis and Adler. He graduated from Rose High School in 1974, from Duke University in 1978 and from Cornell Law School this year.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

You can get some idea of what a big week I had when I tell you that my biggest decision was standing in front of the shelves of air freshener at the supermarket trying to decide on a fragrance.

I discarded Hint of Mint, Jungle Paradise, Cinnamon Ecstasy, Mountain Pines, Mixed Bouquet, and Lemon Plantation, and sprung for Autumn Harvest.

When I brought it home my husband asked, "What does Autumn Harvest smell like?"

I told him I hadn't a clue.

He said, "Then why do you want the house to smell like Autumn Harvest?"

I said, "For the same reason you had the inside of our car spritzed with The Blueberry Experience the last time you had it washed."

When did Americans become consumed with making everything smell like Knotts Berry Farm? Sometimes it makes no sense at all. I buy fish and put it in a deodorized bag to store in the refrigerator. While it is cooking, I put a moist wick of air freshener beside it. After the fish eaten, I grab an aerosol can and make another swipe through the kitchen to make sure the odor is gone. Then I pop a breath mint in my mouth to take away the fishy taste.

It makes one wonder why you bother to eat something that smells so bad in the first place.

Frankly, I don't know what is real anymore. My kids smell like a forest, my underarms transport you to a rose garden, my foot odors are erased with the scent of a thousand limes, and my breath will knock you over with wild grapes.

My toilet tissue is scented with spices from the Orient, my soaps smell like an orchard, and my bleach will make you pucker.

Sometimes, when I nearly overdose on paradise, I reflect on the good old days. Remember when a kitchen smelled like onions and bacon and there was yeast bread in the oven and beans cooking slowly in a pot? Remember when there were apples in a bowl on the coffee table and a couple of them had gone bad and it was the most pungent odor you ever inhaled? And a kid left a window open and the rain warped the sill and the ground smelled wet and you knew the wood and it sputtered and smoked up the place . . . and . . .

You know, I think I had autumn harvest all the time and didn't know it.

SOAP BOX SHIPMENT

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Venezuelan youths ordered 250 race-car kits from the All-American Soap Box Derby to help their nation win the classic event this year.

A race official called it "the largest international shipment of kits in the 44-year history of the Soap Box Derby." The miniature cars weighed more than 15,000 pounds, according to Emery Air Freight, the company that delivered them.

Components were shipped in several stages from Akron to the YMCA in San Bernadino, Venezuela. They were distributed to youths 10 to 15 years old.

The fastest drivers in two age categories from Venezuela, Canada, West Germany and 35 states in this country will square off for the Derby finals in Akron Aug. 15.

LIGHT SUPPER

Blueberry Pie Beverage

PESTO DRESSING

1 clove garlic
¾ to 1 cup packed fresh basil leaves
2 tablespoons pine nuts
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
¼ cup corn oil
1½ tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 large egg yolk
½ cup olive oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

In a processor with the metal blade, and the machine running, drop the garlic through the feed tube and process until minced. Stop the machine and uncover; add basil, nuts and cheese; process until pastelike. Through the feed tube, with the machine running, pour the corn oil in a thin steady stream. Turn off the machine and uncover; add the vinegar and the egg yolk; process until just blended. With the machine running, through the feed tube, pour the olive oil in a thin steady stream and process just until as thick as mayonnaise. Stir in salt and pepper. Makes about 1 cup (generous).

Bananas Highlight Show Of Wood Sculptures

ALLEGORY OF SACRED AND PROFOUND LOVE . . . is the title ECU graduate art student James Rouse, shown here with the work, has given this wall sculpture of wood, cloth, metal and dried bananas. Rouse's graduate thesis show, entitled "Irrefutably Bananas" is currently on view at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street.

"Irrefutably Bananas," the title given by James Rouse to his thesis show now on view in the south galleries of the Greenville Museum of Art is more than just a catchy show title. Bananas, dried and preserved, bananas in bronze and in lead, are very present motifs integrated with wood and cloth in his exhibition of sculptural work. Rouse also uses apples, though to a lesser degree than bananas, in this show which is comprised of about 20 pieces, large and small.

"The use of withered bananas and decayed apples in my work is a symbolist gesture," Rouse explained while installing the show on Thursday. "Apples figure prominently in the judgment of Paris myth and all the love associations that go with it, and the banana is used as a phallic symbol."

Rouse concedes there's considerable "ambiguity in my art, but the meaning is I give it is important to me whether or not its clear to the viewer. I make these pieces, and hope the viewer will find them interesting, and will respond as individuals forming their own personal associations."

Despite the emphasis Rouse gives bananas (and apples) as symbolic elements in his work and the personal relationships involved in his employment of these fruits, it is apparent that his greater talent is in the crafting of wood. Rouse is a young artist with considerable technical skill and an obvious dedication to the highest standard of meticulous craftsmanship in his work.

He readily admits to being a perfectionist. "My brother calls me a master of detail," he commented. "I can't leave anything unfinished, even the back of pieces or interior details that do not show." This of course, leads to long hours spent constructing larger pieces. A large double bed, for example, required well over 500 working hours. The bed, constructed of intricately interlocked pieces of cherry, maple and purple heart (a wood from a South American tree, pink moi), also features a series of cedar lined, material inlaid drawers. The bed linen boasts a dried banana peel design. A practical sleeping unit in addition to being a work of sculpted art, the bed rates its own title — "To Bait the Hook or Hook the Bait."

Another large piece, inspired by a kitchen theme, is entitled "Deluxe Slice-o-Matic." A triangular floor piece, it has at its base a several feet long cloth-covered banana and a gleaming gold colored blade poised several feet in the air — more like a guillotine than a food slicer. Fortunately, this piece is strictly decorative.

Impressive as the larger pieces are, the smaller and medium sized pieces are more effective in design and scale. Rouse has a good feel for the affinity for matching non-wood material with the architectural properties inherent in the lines and textures of wood. This is particularly evident in works such as "Allegory of Sacred and Profane Love," "Jackanapes Delight," and "Temporal Duel."

A native of West Long Branch, New Jersey, Rouse will soon receive the MFA degree with a major in sculpture from the School of Art, East Carolina University. He holds the BA degree from Monmouth College, N. J. and has shown previously in graduate student shows at Gray Gallery on the ECU campus and in shows at Monmouth College.

"Irrefutably Bananas" offers the viewer interesting insights into one person's interpretation of symbolism combined with a flair for excellent craftsmanship.

Piano Teacher To Speak Here

Marilyn Brown, Raleigh pianist, teacher and adjudicator, will be the guest speaker at the first fall meeting of the Greenville Piano Teachers' Association. Her subjects will be "Motivation and Rhythm" as they apply to teaching and study.

The meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 25 at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans St.

In addition to teaching, Mrs. Brown has served as certification chairman for the N.C. Music Teachers' Association and has judged at piano festivals and contests throughout the state.

Area piano teachers who would like more information about the organication may call any member of the executive committee: Annemarie Lalik, president, 758-0502; Barbara Caspar, vice president, 758-3698; Frances Cain, treasurer, 756-2539; Viola Hilton, secretary, 752-5962; or Carlene Ragan, past president, 758-4870.

A Review

Small Book Of Marsh Beauties

A Guide to Salt Marsh Plants Common to North Carolina. By Elizabeth Jean Wilson, illustrations by Carolyn Hoss and Mary Ann Nelson. Raleigh. N.C. State University, UNC Sea Grant College. Paper, 31 pages, $1.50.

A short time ago I was out taking pictures of ferns along the roadside in Beaufort County when a stranger pulled up behind me. He was a farmer, excited about what he thought was perhaps a rare wild orchid he'd found in flower in a boggy area of his farm. I went with him to the site. The plant turned out to be a marsh pink, a lovely flower with five silky bright pink petals and a distinctive yellow center.

By one of those happy coincidences, I had with me a copy of "A Guide to Salt Marsh Plants Common to North Carolina" and was able to show the farmer the correct identification of his discovery.

The location of this plant this far inland is interesting in that its habitat is typically in the upper intertidal zone in a muddy substrate soil area — another bit of information I was able to point out to the farmer with the aid of the guide.

This small book, featuring fine line drawings and an exceptionally easy to use format does, as the word "common" in the title implies, cover only the plants found in abundance in coastal salt marshes. The coverage includes five examples of shrubs, four of vines, nine of herbs and six of grasses.

Despite this limitation, chances are that for the average nature lover, these two dozen specimens will include a goodly number of plants he's often seen but never knew precisely what it's name and most common locale might be.

The identification value of this booklet is further enhanced by the inclusion of concise information on "the salt marsh habitat;" "the value of salt marshes;" "plant characteristics;" and "zonation." Each of these brief sections provide basic facts that make identification of salt marsh plants more rewarding.

This information also serves as a vivid reminder of the critical role nature has assigned to the marshes and wetlands of our fragile coastal lands.

Other data included in this guide include illustrations of leaf shapes and leaf margins, a key to identification, a list of selected references, and indexes to common and scientific names.

One of the added pleasures of "A Guide to Salt Marsh Plants Common to North Carolina" are the personal touches supplied by the author. Ms. Wilson informs us, for example, in the description of the seashore mallow or marsh mallow, that "original 'marsh mellow' was made from the roots. Young leaves may be added to thicken stews."

The Story Of Military Taps

The most touching part of any military funeral comes at the moment when taps is sounded by the bugler for his fallen comrade. The origin of taps is an interesting one.

Taps was composed in July 1862 by Gen. Daniel Butterfield of the Army of the Potomac for use in his own brigade, supposedly to replace the shots fired at military funerals so the Confederates would not know a burial was taking place.

It soon replaced the earlier tattoo, or lights out, as the last call of the day, and became a popular call throughout the Union Army.

The earliest official reference to the mandatory use of taps at a military funeral is in the U.S. Army "Drill Regulation" of 1891. Its unofficial use as a finale to the firing salute has been customary since its inception in 1862.

More than 1,000 persons drowned when the Empress of Ireland collided with a freighter 67 years ago on May 29, 1914. Life-saving boats could not be launched as the Empress keeled over at once

The Battle of Midway, turning point of World War II in the Pacific, began June 3, 1942.

WOOW Classics

English music, from early to late, ranging the spectrum from early instrumental music to a 20th century symphony, is the fare being offered by hostess Karen Hause on "WOOW Classics" tonight.

The weekly Sunday evening program is aired by Mrs. Hause over WOOW Radio, 1340 on the dial.

Selections chosen for tonight's program begins with a recording of Early English Instrumental Music performed by the Julian Bream Consort. This will be followed by Handel's "Concerto a deue cori," — No. 1 in B flat and No. 3 in F.

The music of William Boyce will be featured in his Symphonies numbers 1 through six — actually concerti grosse works. Two compositions by Malcolm Arnold will be played, his overture to "Peterloo" and four "Cornish Dances."

The major work of the evening's program is "Symphony in G minor" by the 20th century composer Ernest John Moeran.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Chemistry is the focal point on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" program today, airing from noon to 1 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7. Guests for this program were all interviewed on tape at the American Women in Radio and TV National Conference held earlier in Washington, D.C.

Guests and their topic are:

— Dr. Patrick Oriel, Dow-Chemical, Calgary, Canada, "DNA Genetic Engineering;"

— William Schwartz, management manager, Food Independent Division, Stauffer Chemical Co., New York, "Food Additives in the Total Food Supply" and "Do You Know How to Read Food Labels."

— Charles Brookes, vice president, W.R. Grace & Co., "Allegations Regarding Toxic Dump Sites."

— W.L. Ramgay, assistant director of marketing, Health and Nutrition Division, Eastman Chemical Products, "Food Additives: Who Needs Them?"

— Frank Peterus of Phillips Chemical Company, Oklahoma, "The Invisible Push;" and

— Dr. Stephen Riggi, director Research & Development, Pharmaceutical Division, Pennwalt Corp., "The Doctor Knows Best: Weight Control Should be a Serious Decision."

Two Wetlands Centers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Wildlife Federation, the nation's largest conservation organization, has launched a major effort to alleviate the destruction of one of the country's most threatened wildlife habitats — its wetlands.

With a grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the National Wildlife Federation has opened two wetlands education centers — the Southern Wetlands Project in New Orleans and the Carolinas Wetlands Project in Raleigh.

The centers will be staffed by biologists, legal experts and public education specialists who will assist state and local governments, developers, landowners, and other citizens in understanding why the nation's remaining wetlands are vital resources and how they can best be conserved.

"At one time the nation's wetlands — the marshes, swamps, and bogs found across the country — were considered to be useless areas, fit only for draining and filling," explained Dr. Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the federation. "Fortunately, we've come to realize that wetlands are, instead, priceless natural resources. Our wetlands centers will bring this message to the public, teaching them the value of wetlands and how to work with landowners, developers, and government officials in preserving them."

Hair emphasized that in recent years scientists have realized that wetlands serve many vital ecological functions. They are breeding grounds and refuges for many species of wildlife and they produce plant life that is the source of much of the organic matter consumed by shellfish and other aquatic life.

They aid, too, in the natural purification of water, neutralize sewage and other contaminants, and "recharge" ground water resources. In coastal areas, wetlands also act as buffer zones, protecting landward areas against storm damage, erosion and floods.

"Hundreds of species of wildlife are dependent on wetland habitat," noted Dr. Alan Wentz, assisant director for wildlife and fisheries of the federation's Resources Defense Division.

"They include beaver, otter, raccoon, mink, moose, muskrats, ducks, geese, and woodcock. In addition, wetlands are absolutely essential to the nation's food supply. Two-thirds of the fish caught commercially off the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts, and one-half caught off the Pacific Coast spawn and feed in wetlands. The nation's wetlands also serve as recreation areas for sportsmen, photographers, birdwatchers, and tourists."

According to Hair, the federation wetlands centers will place special emphasis on the importance of Section 404 of the Federal Clean Water Act in conserving wetlands. Section 404 requires the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to grant permits for wetland development only after it considers such factors as economics, fish and wildlife, flood-damage prevention, recreation, water supply, and water quality.

The Environemtal Protection Agency shares enforcement responsibility with the Corps and is also responsible for publishing environmental guidelines used to review the Section 404 permits. "Our wetlands centers will help EPA meet these responsibilities."

"The federation has long fought against needless habitat destruction, which is the major threat to the continued health of the nation's wildlife populations," he said. "It is tragic that we have already obliterated so many acres of wetlands. Nearly half of the wetlands that existed in what are now the 'lower 48' states when the first settlers stepped ashore in America have been destroyed.

"Unfortunately," he added, "this alarming rate of destruction continues, especially in Louisiana, where nearly 26,600 acres of coastal marshes vanish each year.

"In another vulnerable area — the so-called pocosin wetlands in North Carolina, which are an important habitat for black bear and other wildlife species — hundreds of thousands of acres are being drained for agricultural use. We're hopeful that our wetlands centers will help slow down this needless destruction."

A STAMP . . . calling attention to wetlands was issued recently by the U.S. Post Office.

Two Win In Photo Contest

Maxine Carey Harker of Grifton and Dr. Stephen W. Thomas of Greenville have won awards in a statewide amateur photography contest sponsored by the N. C. Association of Realtors.

David Nichols, president of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors, said that Mrs. Harker took second place in the color photography and that Thomas was awarded second place in the black and white category.

Both had earlier won first-place prizes in local competition.

Wins More Awards

Dean James, a Greenville photographer who recently won a first place and "Court of Honor" award for his print, "Serenity," at the Annual Competition of the Virginia Professional Photographers Assocation, has received word that he is also winner of two additional awards in the competition. His print "Wally" received a second place award, and another print, "Ebony Eyes," received a third place award, both in the "Out-Of-State" category.

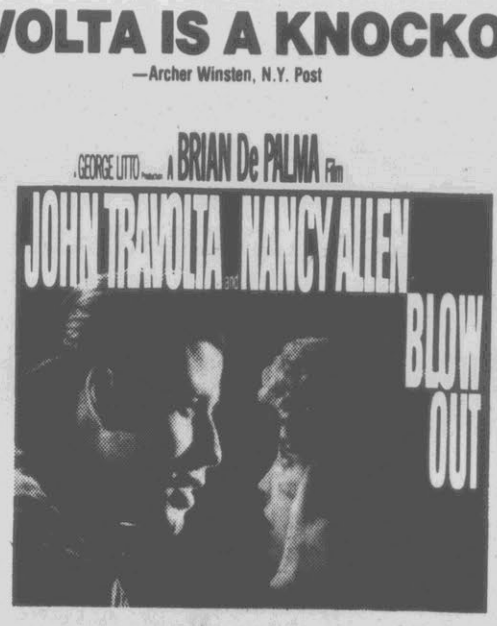

Canadians who live in Manitoba and who can't afford to pay court fines won't be put in jail when a new program starts next year. The program will allow individuals to work off their fines by serving the community, according to Gil Goodman, assistant deputy attorney general.

State Library Services For The Handicapped

RALEIGH - This year's Pulitzer Prize winning novel is available to North Carolina's more than 70,500 eligible visually and physically handicapped citizens.

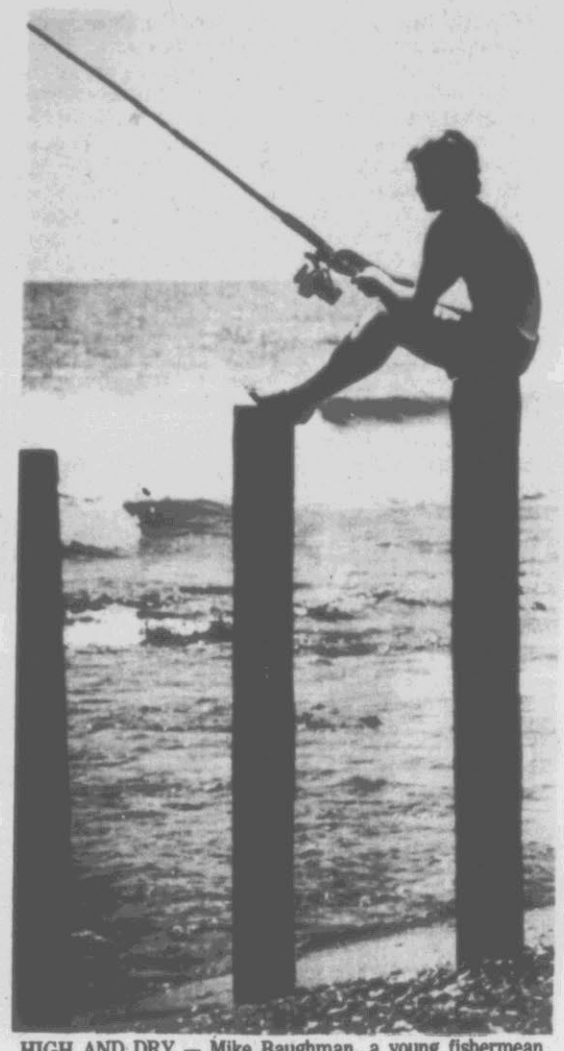

By the time the 1981 Pulitzer winners were announced, "A Confederacy of Dunces" by John Kennedy Toole was already recorded on cassette by the Library of Congress program for the blind and physically handicapped.

The posthumous award for "A Confederacy of Dunces" has an unusual poignancy. During the 1960s the author, considering himself a failure because he could not find a publisher for his book, committed suicide. However, his mother did not give up. During the 15 years after his death, she visited publisher after publisher, finally locating one who was interested.

Toole's new novel and other library services are available to eligible citizens from the N.C. Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, an agency of the Department of Cultural Resources.

The library offers fiction and nonfiction books in Braille, large-print, cassette and disc editions. Readers can order free subscriptions to Braille and recorded magazines covering a variety of interests.

All services are free to qualified visually impaired or physically handicapped readers. For details, contact: Chkarles Fox, N.C. Library fo the Blind and Physically Handicapped. 1811 North Boulevard, Raleigh, N.C., 27635; or call, toll free, 1-800-662-7726.

Celebration Set For Reading Program

In celebration of the "Extra! Read All About It" summer reading program, Sheppard Memorial Library is sponsoring a free picnic for participants and their families, to be held at Green Springs Park, East Fifth Street, on Tuesday, Aug. 18.

Activities will begin at 6:30 p.m. A clown show is scheduled. Certificates will be given to all children who have read at least 25 easy or 10 juvenile books. Free refreshments will be served, and participants are asked to bring their own food. In case of rain, the program will be moved to the auditorium at East Branch Library, 2000 Cedar Lane.

The Summer Reading Program set new records for Sheppard Library, involving 836 youngsters who read books at the Main Library, East and Carver Branches and the Pitt County Bookmobile. Over 15,400 books were borrowed by young readers in the program.

The "Extra! Read All About It" series was conducted from June 15 to Aug. 14. Young readers recorded their reading progress on individual charts at the various sites. Both the Greenville and Pitt County school systems particpated in the program by keeping records at their facilities and by encouraging young people to sign up at the public library.

The Gordon Riots began in London June 2, 1780, when Lord George Gordon, son of a Scottish duke, led a mob to petition Parliament to reimpose penalties on Roman Catholics which had been lifted two years before. About 450 casualties resulted from several days of chaos, during which Newgate Prison and the Bank of England were stormed and Catholic homes and chapels were pillaged. Gordon was acquitted of treason charges since it could not be proven that he instigated the rioting, but in 1783 he died in prison while serving time for libel. He was 42.

Offers Piano Lesson For Young Students

The piano pedagogy program at the School of Music, East Carolina University, is offering piano instruction for students ages 6-18. E. Gregory Nagode, assistant professor and director of the pedagogy degree program, will head the teaching program.

Now in its seventh year, the program offers a combination of group and private music study. Students are taught piano repertoire and musicianship skills.

People interested in enrolling their children are to contact Nagode at 757-6331 or at 758-0451 for additional information and the schedule of fees charged.

Now beginning his seventh year on the ECU music faculty, Nagode is a native of Illinois. During the past academic year, he was on a leave of absence from ECU to teach and do doctoral study at Northwestern Univrsity, Evanston, Ill. He is presently the vice president of the N.C. Music Teachers Association and past president and founder of the Greenville Piano Teachers Association. Nagode also provides teacher training workshops. Last fall, he was a guest speaker at the National Piano Pedagogy Conference held at the University of Illinois.

Events Today At NCMA

RALEIGH — "Assumption Day as Reflected in Art" is the topic of today's 2:15 p.m. gallery talk to be given by docent Elizabeth Reid Murray at the N. C. Museum of Art, 107 E. Morgan St., downtown Raleigh.

Among works to be discussed is Stanzione's "The Assumption of the Virgin."

Other events, free and open to the public, scheduled at the Museum today are:

— 3 p.m., a jazz performance by trumpeter Donald Byrd. Byrd, an adjunct professor of music at N.C. Central University, will be accompanied by the 125th Street New York City Band.

— 4-6 p.m., an opening reception for "Photographs by Joshua Mann," a new exhibition on view in the Collectors Gallery, first floor.

New Dimensions To Festival

Judge Johnson—Molder Of Responses To Civil Rights Needs

Judge Frank Johnson and Human Rights in Alabama. By Tinsley E. Yarbrough. University of Alabama, University of Alabama Press, 1981. Illustrations, bibliography, notes, index, Pp. ix, 270, $19.95.

During 1967 and 1968 three "governors" helped mold law and government in Alabama: Lurleen Wallace, who in 1966 had been elected by the people; her husband, George, the de facto executive who could not succeed himself as governor; and U.S. District Court Judge Frank Minis Johnson Jr., whose decisions changed the way the government of Alabama responded to the needs of all of the state's citizens.

Indeed, for twenty-four years as judge for the Middle District of Alabama prior to his elevation in 1979 to the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, Judge Johnson handed down important decisions that destroyed or weakened many barriers to the enjoyment of civil and basic human rights.

In this scholarly yet well-written interpretation of Johnson's powerful role as a jurist, the chairman of the Department of Political Science at East Carolina University succeeds in revealing the ability of an assertive court to change outdated laws and ineffective institutions despite the recalcitrance of lawmakers and administators.

Johnson's progressive career probably shocked and angered many of his fellow Republicans. Following his graduation from the University of Alabama law school in 1943 and service in the U.S. Army overseas, Johnson joined the Jasper, Alabama, firm of Curtis and Maddox. A year after Dwight D. Eisenhower's 1952 presidential victory, Johnson gained the post of U.S. attorney for the Northern District of Alabama. The conscientous attorney set the tone for his judicial career when in 1954 he successfully prosecuted two members of the wealthy Sumter County Dial family for imposing involuntary servitude on poor black farm tenants.

A year later Johnson secured the vacant judgeship of the United States District Court. His appointment came shortly after the watershed "Brown v. Board of Education" Supreme Court decision that invalidated segregation in public schools; and, just as the court's ruling accelerated civil rights initiatives begun by presidents Roosevelt and Truman, Johnson's tenure as district judge stimulated reform in Alabama.

Acting alone or as a member of three-judge panels, Johnson helped bring about school desegregation, widespread voter registration of blacks, and desegregation of public transportation and facilities. He required public officials to upgrade Alabama's physically inadequate, understaffed prisons and mental hospitals. His innovative decisions regarding prisons and hospitals charted largely unexplored legal ground. In many cases, his opinions rode roughshod over the ineffective protests of George Wallace, a law school classmate.

Yarbrough weaves his narrative from a variety of sources. He heavily depends on court records, judicial decisions, and personal interviews (including nine with Johnson). Quotations from the interviews, many of which are included in the text parenthetically, enliven the biography. The author also uses printed materials and Judge Johnsoln's personal files, but one suspects that he could have consulted additional manuscript material and more secondary sources concerning Southern history and the civil rights movement.

The result, despite Yarbrough's uneasiness about the increasingly powerful role of courts in formulating public policy, is a very sympathetic portrait of a reformer who grounded his actions in the basic rights provided in the constitution.

Johnson as a district court judge viewed the constitution as a flexible document. Consequently, regartdless of his fiscal and personal conservatism, he saw in it the means to provide equality for many people suffering from a variety of handicaps. Yarbrough also attributes his subject's seemingly inexplicable but successful career to his northern Alabama background, his penchant for hard work, and his sympathy for the underdog.

Yarbrough, whose scholarly articles attest to his familiarity with U.S. legal history, convincingly underscores the significant effect of Johnson's career on recent Alabama history.

He causes the reader to ponder the frailties of local government and the need for federal intervention to provide basic human rights for all people. Published at time when such rights escape many people abroad and seem to be brushed aside by the momentum of President Ronald Reagan's first months in office, "Judge Frank Johnson and Human Rights in Alabama" is a useful contribution to knowledge.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By WILLIE MAE GIBBS

Among the new books at the library are several that deal with the subject of book selection for children. All are invaluable guides for parents, teachers, and anyone with an academic interest in children's books.

"How To Grow A Young Reader" by Kathryn and John Lindskoog is a browser's guide to children's literature that begins with the first known book for children in 1671 and continues to the present. It is a key to over 400 books including classics, tales of fantasy, realistic fiction and biography, Christian novels, poetry and nonsense, fact books, and recorded readings.

In addition to being a shopper's guide helpful in determining which books are worthy, and which are a waste of time, this book also suggests ways to encourage the reading habit and make reading a family pastime even in the age of TV.

Betsy Hearne, children' book review editor of Booklist, the review journal of the American Library Association, shares some simple, concise guidelines for selecting the right book for a child in "Choosing Books for Children: A Commonsense Guide."

In her book she recommends over one hundred titles by the best authors and artists in children's books. Chapters in her book are devoted to the selection of preschool books, easy-to-reads, humorous story books, poetry and young adult fiction. Adults who have selected blindly or turned to an old favorite from their childhood will find Mrs. Hearne's book an essential for helping children make enlightened decisions at the library or in the bookstore.

The new seventh edition of "Children's Books Too Good To Miss," revised by Ruth M. Hadlow, is testimony to its extensive use in libraries, schools and homes. This book chooses from the numerous volumes published for children to the best of the most recent crop — about 260 titles of outstanding merit.

The selections represent the judgment of a group of specialists who have had much experience working with children and children's literature to determine which of the old children's books have significance for today and which of the new ones measure up to the same standard of excellence.

Riot police seized the embattled University of Rome in 1968 from 2,000 rebellious students who had held the campus for three days.

In 1865, President Andrew Johnson issued an amnesty to Civil War rebels willing to take an oath of allegiance to the United States.

Area Farm Ponds Serve Many Purposes

Text And Photographs

By Jerry Raynor

Forty years ago a pond or small lake in eastern North Carolina was a rarity. Although numerous streams and creeks, and a number of rivers lace the countryside, ponds were almost non-existent as part of the area's natural physical character.

Today, the situation is significantly different, with Pitt and other eastern North Carolina counties liberally dotted with artificial ponds and lakes.

Albert Coffey, District Conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, notes that in Pitt County alone "there are 19 existing artificial ponds and lakes of over five acres in size." In addition to these larger man-made bodies of waters on Pitt farms, Coffey said "there are numerous smaller ponds, most of them designed to provide water to irrigate tobacco plant beds. Some also have the capacity to furnish water for more extensive irrigation purposes."

The pond construction boom, according to Coffey, occured "during the span of two decades, the 1940s and 1950s. Some were constructed in the 1960s, and a few have been constructed even in recent years, but not many."

In earlier years, Coffey explained "farm pond construction was funded on a cost-shared basis with Agricultural Stabilization providing money and the Soil Conservation Service furnishing technical assistance.

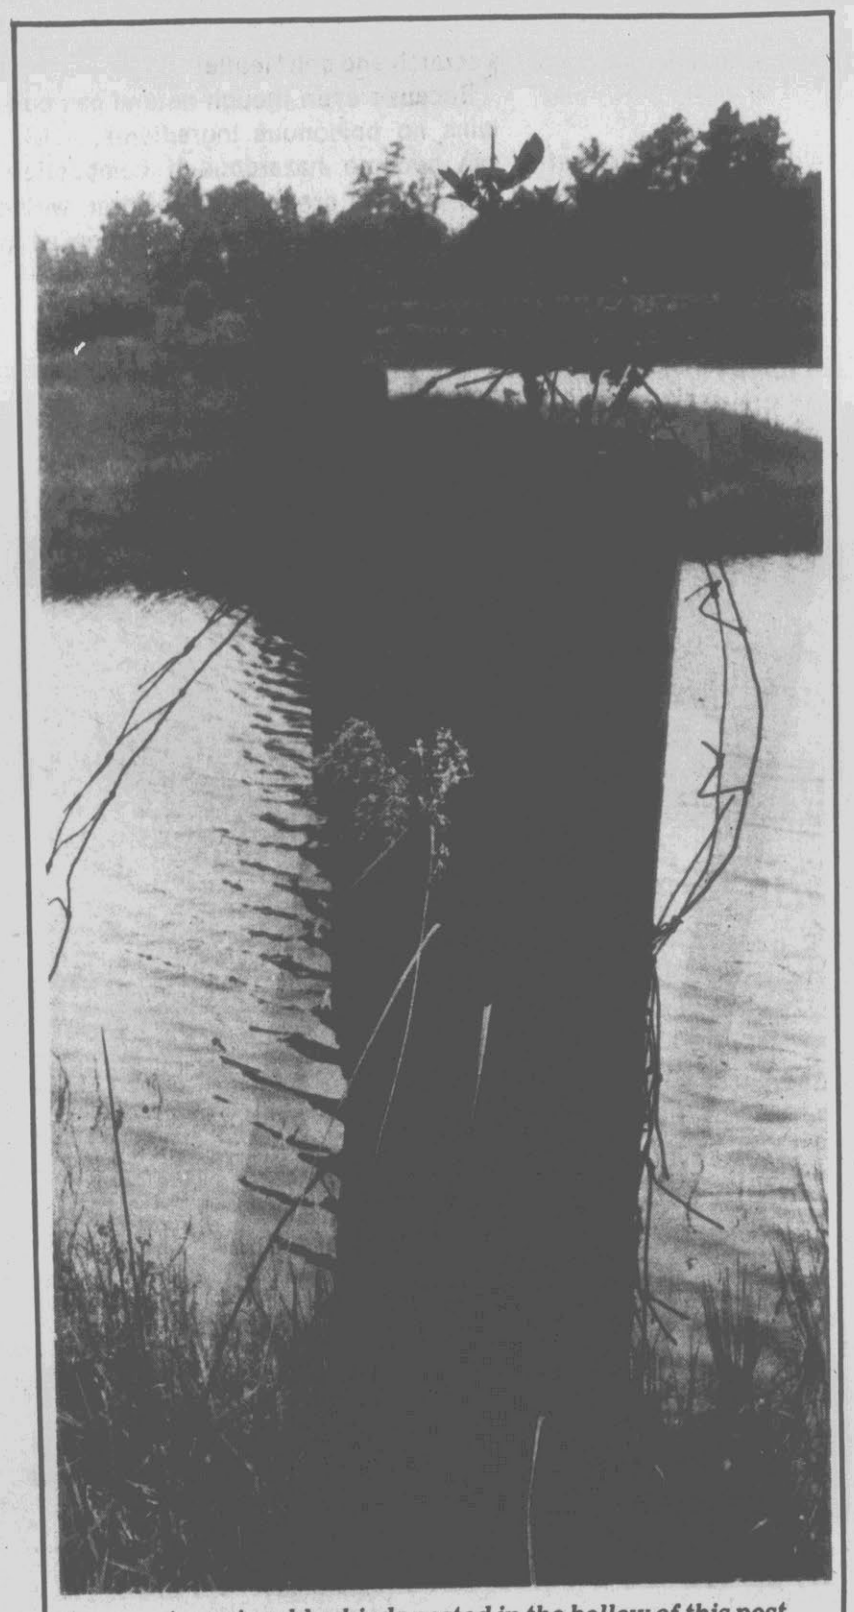

"Actually, it used to be that a farmer could get a pond constructed for a song and dance. This is no longer true, funding is now a private matter."

On most eastern North Carolina farms, the average lay of land included "a low wet area, sometimes adjacent to a small stream, ideally suited to pond construction. As long as these sites had soil types with seasonal high water table at or near ground service, these places were good choices for pond locations."

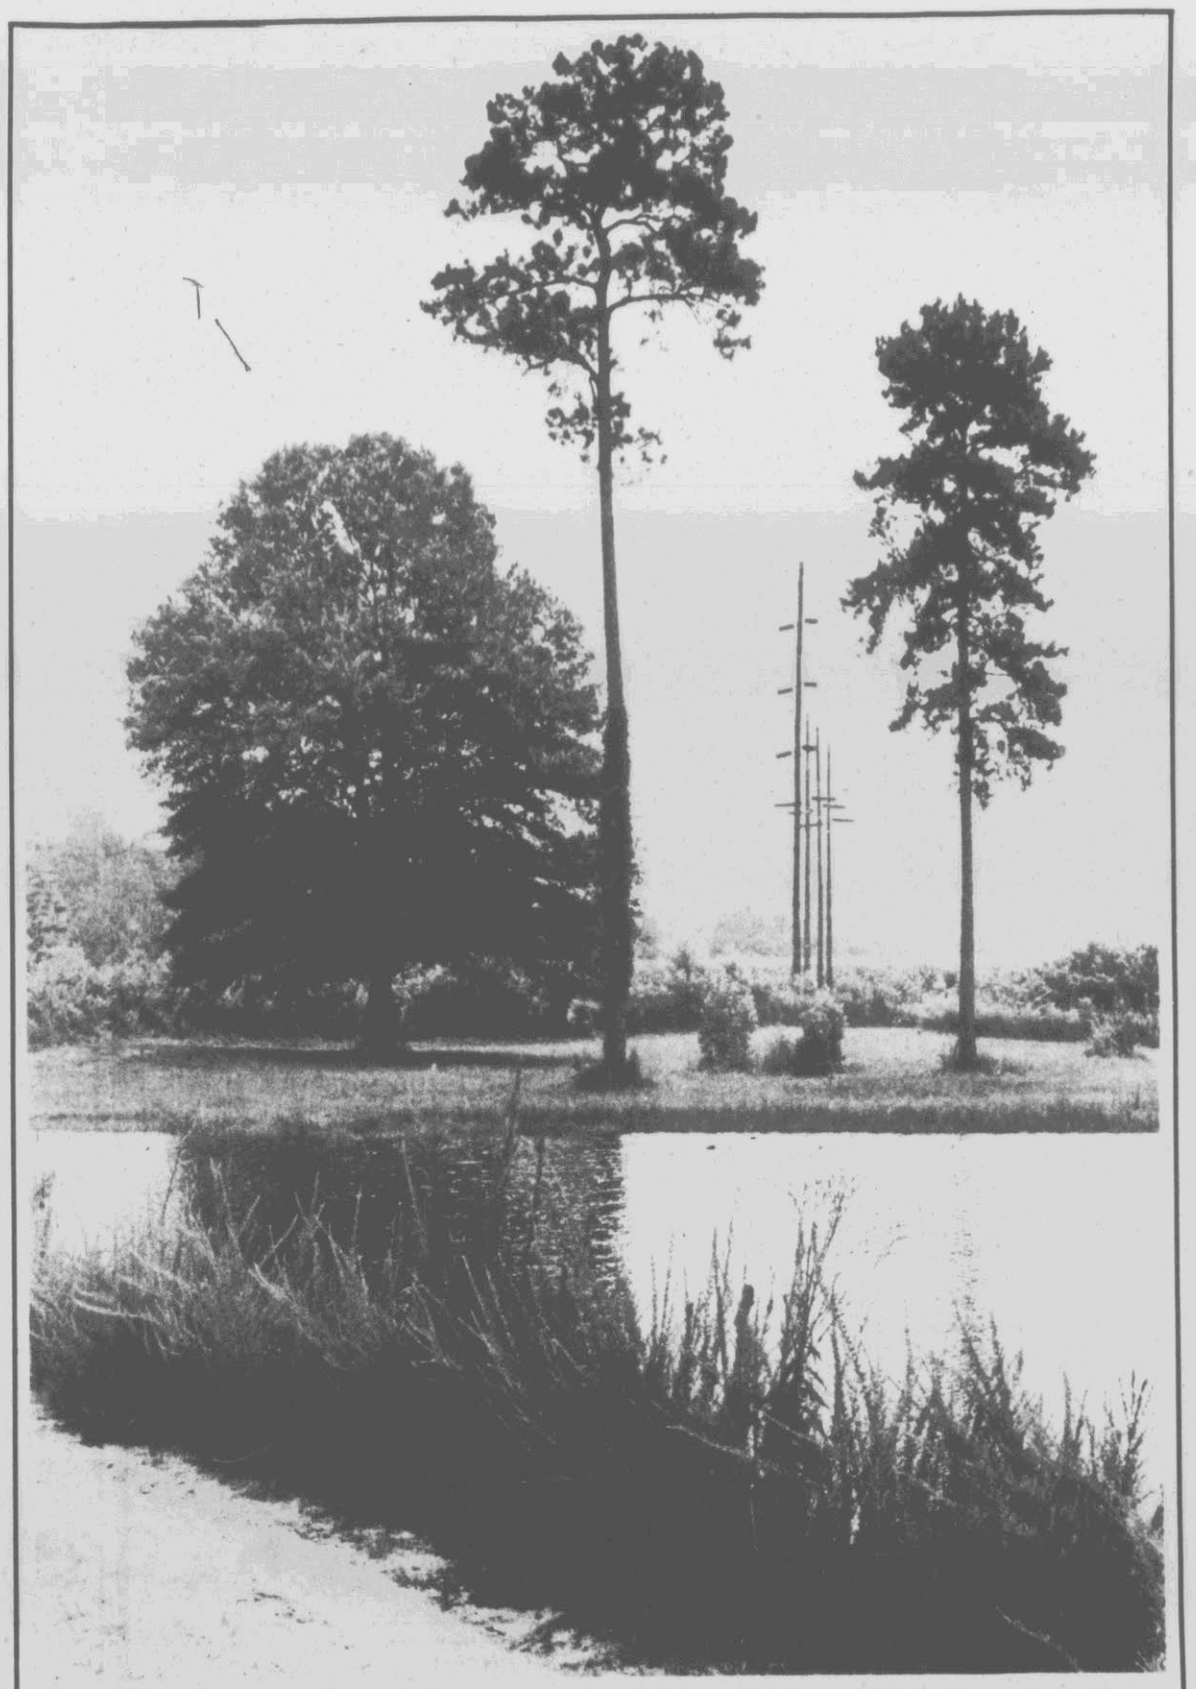

Irrigation is but one of many benefits gained from farm ponds. "Nearly all the ponds have been stocked with fish," Coffey said. "Generally, fish used to stock ponds include big mouth bass, brim, red ear sunfish, and in some instances, catfish."

The size and population of fish in a typical pond depends, of course, on the upkeep of the pond and the fish stock. In a few instances, owners with well stocked, accesible ponds have turned these bodies of water to economic gain by permitting fishing for a fee.

As shore grasses and trees have become established, these ponds are increasingly being used by owners and their friends for recreational purposes. The combination of convenience and tranquility make these ponds ideal for picnics, cookouts, studying wildlife, or in these hot August days, just loafing in the shade to the gentle sounds of breezes rippling water and the music of birds and insects.

Public Television's 'Market To Market' Spotlights Food Issues

By CHARLES J. ABBOTT

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Producer Dan Miller threw on his headset and threaded together a telephone call linking a reporter in California, a film crew in Congress and a co-worker next door.

"Is that OK?" he asked after a high-speed, four-way conversation. "We'll shoot for the interview in the morning."

The plan kept the crew open for a major hearing on estate taxes while supplying a key interview — and film — on the top story of the week, the fruit fly invasion of California.

Miller and his small Iowa Public Broadcasting Network crew have plenty of experience in hurdling time and distance barriers. They run a fast-paced schedule in turning out "Market to Market," one of the most watched public television shows and the only one devoted entirely to the food industry.

"Market to Market" is on the "cutting edge" of the developing battle for control of world resources, Miller said.

"We think the food business will come into its own, more and more," said host Chet Randolph. "One of these times when they have a drought for a couple of years in one part of the world, it'll be on the front page."

Some topics which have been examined on the show are "workfare," school lunches, elderly farmers living in poverty in the nation's lush breadbasket and the scramble for water to irrigate western vegetable farms.

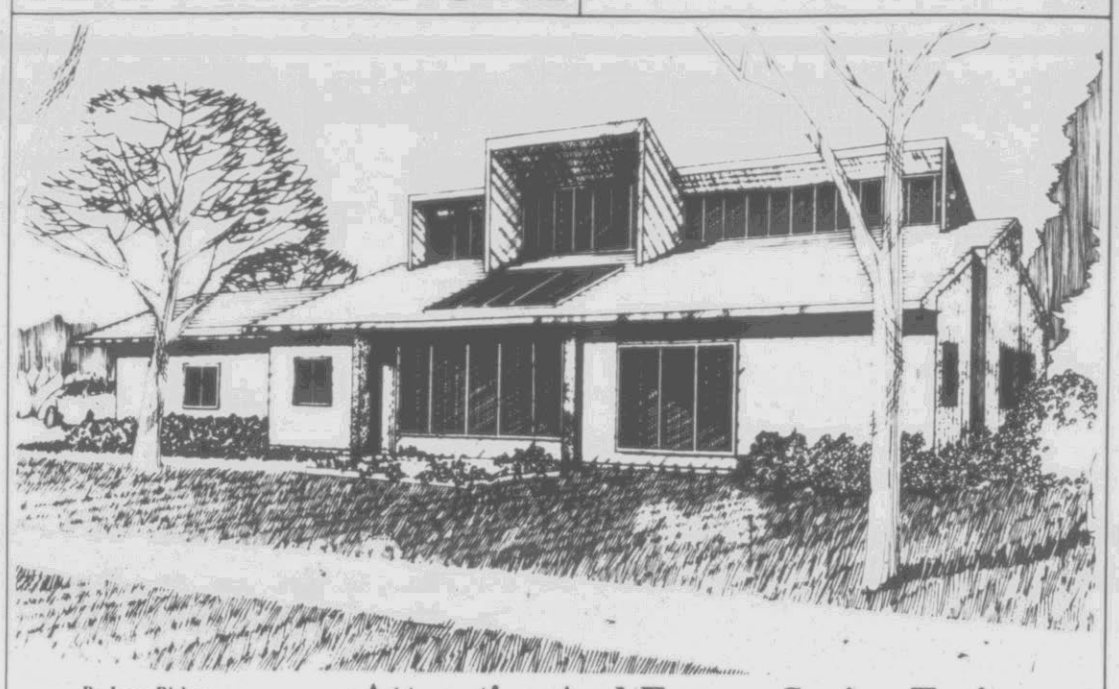

Viewers have seen the discreetly worded, but deadly serious, scuffles between farmers and diplomats for control of U.S. grain sales and the bitter battles over how to ship the crop — and the question whether huge U.S. grain crops are exhausting the rich soil.

The television audience apparently appreciates the mix. In May, the Nielsen ratings made "Market to Market" the 24th most watched public television show. The program is aired in 30 states and reaches at least 205,000 households.

In its hometown, "Market to Market," produced by IPBN, outdraws "Wall Street Week," a heavy hitter in public television. Nationally, "Market to Market" is more popular than Dick Cavett's interviews and is tied with the "Firing Line" program of William F. Buckley.

"We're dealing with major issues that are of interest to a major audience," Randolph said.

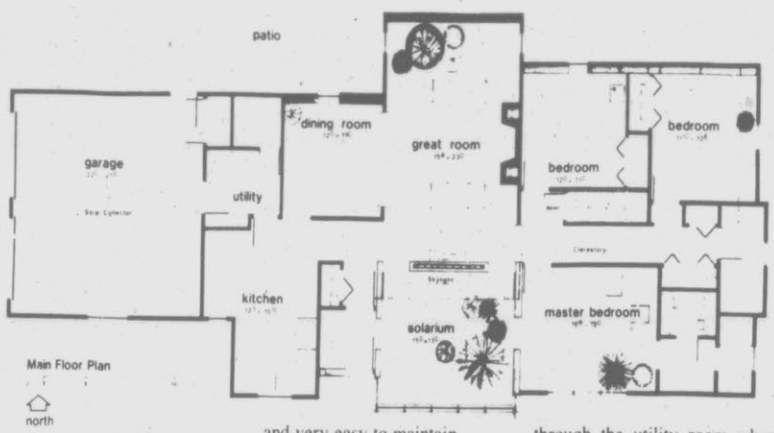

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Sedalia

Attractive And Energy Saving Too!

By Jerry Bishop

Rising energy costs and a desire to actively help solve our energy problems have fueled public interest in energy-efficient sun-tempered homes. The Sedalia is designed to meet stringent energy requirements. Incorporating passive solar design techniques with energy conservation techniques. The passive design techniques includes south-facing windows to receive solar energy with interior walls and floors designed to store it. Energy conservation techniques include very well insulated walls and ceilings, double and triple-glazed windows, insulating curtains and an air-lock entry. With emphasis on energy conservation more and more families planning to build are turning to solar homes. Contrary to popular opinion solar homes are economical, stylish and very easy to maintain.

The Sedalia has approximately 2,300 square feet of living area, with three bedrooms occupying one wing of the house. The master bedroom has a private bath and loads of closet space. The other two bedrooms share a bath, conveniently located at the end of the hall. Upon entering this interesting home through an air-lock entry, one finds themselves in a bright sunny solarium. A built-in fireplace in the living room helps with the utility costs while providing a cozy atmosphere. The spacious well designed kitchen has space enough for a breakfast area, the dining room provides a more formal setting. Access from the garage is through the utility room where there is space for the washer and dryer as well as storing coats, boots and other things. This design features south facing clerestory windows and a large skylight over the solarium. Solar heat is stored in the solarium concrete floor and the interior masonry walls. Internal concrete block walls for heat storage, insulated draperies and carefully designed overhangs are some of the other energy conserving features.

At one time or another, it seems, Shakespeare said something about everything. Even rust.

Here is a Shakespearean quote from a National Bureau of Standards booklet about corrosion:

"Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them."

And it will. Moisture is the corrosion-promoting substance that invites and fosters rust. Some metals are more susceptible to corrosion than others, but the prevention and inhibition of rust is the same. Something must be placed between the metal and the environment. When this barrier — paint, clear finishes, greases, oils, waxes, etc. — is there, corrosion either cannot occur or is minimized. Simply put, you must keep air from reaching the metal, since it is the combination of air and moisture that causes the trouble.

Even though you may be putting paint or some other finish on metal, a primer is essential. Since no finish is ever perfect and no film remains unbroken forever, rust eventually develops even in pin holes. When moisture penetrates even the tiniest crack, rust occurs and continues to spread under the finish. That's why, when rust is present, you must wire brush and scrape rusty areas to remove scaling and other loose paint or other film.

The next step is to use a strong detergent solution or special rust cleaner to get off dust, grease and oil. After that comes a rust-inhibiting preparation, formulated so that it will do its work even if all the rust has not been removed. It is essential, though, that there be no rust flakes. The chemical is designed to neutralize further corrosive action and works well when the directions on the container are followed carefully. These days, the rust-inhibiting preparations come in a variety of colors.

One of the things that can cause corrosion is the placement of two metals alongside each other. For instance, if you combine copper pipe with ordinary steel pipe, the chances are that the steel pipe will corrode. This is called galvanic corrosion. Some common galvanic corrosion-promoting combinations include steel bolts and washer used to fasten brass sheets exposed to marine atmosphere; steel nails used to install aluminum gutters, or copper gutters installed with aluminum or galvanized downspouts; and copper wire or iron objects left in the bilge and bottom of an aluminum boat.

We all know that aluminum pots sometimes tarnish. This usually takes place when the pot is used to cook eggs or to heat certain types of tap water. Want to remove it? Use the pot to cook sour foods, such as sauerkraut, tomatoes or even tart apples. Tarnish can be removed from copper, bronze or brass with salt, flour and vinegar, but first you must remove any lacquer finish with lacquer thinner in an area where there is plenty of ventilation and no open flame. When the lacquer has been taken off, wash thoroughly with warm water and a detergent.

Here's the Answer

Q. — Some years ago I bought a table with a marble top. I had always thought marble could not be stained, that it was one substance from which almost anything but acid could be removed. Recently, though, we had company and used the table quite a bit. A couple of hours after the company left, my husband noticed a dark stain on the table. We aren't sure what caused it, but it did not yield to ordinary rubbing and we were afraid to use any chemical on it for fear of causing further trouble. We can only guess that the stain was from some peanut butter that had been served with crackers. Is there any way to get this off without damaging the marble, which we now know can be stained rather easily?

A. — Yes, marble can be stained, since it is porous. Unfortunately, the longer the stain has been there, the harder it is to remove. Try this time-tested method: Rub the stain with ordinary household ammonia. Use a clean cloth, rubbing it over the area around the stain as well as on it. A complete rinsing with slightly warm water is necessary. Repeat this procedure three or four times. If the stain is still there, buy some powdered whiting and mix it with a little acetone to form a thick paste, which should be spread over the complete stain.

Q. — Can I use mineral spirits to thin oil paint or is it necessary to use turpentine?

A. — You can use mineral spirits.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O., Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I have recently heard that there has been considerable controversy about who invented point-count bidding. I always thought that you were the one who did. Now I hear all sorts of stories about others having invented it, but that you took the credit for it! Is this true?—H.A. Newark, N.J.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—Every now and then there is a great brouhaha about who invented point-count bidding. Several persons have laid claim to the title, but, more often than not, those claims have about as much substance as a mesh shirt while skiing on the Alps. About the only person who never claimed to have invented it is yours truly, but somehow or other point-count bidding has become associated with my name.

There have been many forms of point-count valuation, each awarding different values to the high cards. Some of these date back to the days of bridge whist. The one I popularized is the 4-3-2-1 count devised by my mentor, Milton Work.

The Work count was a high-card count only. As such, it was good for no trump bidding but not for suit play. Several people had devised a distributional count. The first one to be published, to my knowledge, appeared in Britain, circa 1933.

In the United States, there were two pioneers of a distributional point count. The first was Richard Miller of York, Pa. He was followed by Fred Karpin of Silver Spring, Md. I was not quite satisfied with either of their counts, so I took my problem to a friend of mine who was an actuary—Bill Anderson of Toronto. It was he who devised the distributional point count that, in conjunction with the Milton Work count, is still the basis of what most people teach and play today.

More than 30 years ago I published my first book of point-count bidding. It was an instant success. For the first time, the average player could be armed with a method of valuing hands that heretofore had been the sole prerogative of the expert. Suddenly, the rabbit who had been nothing but cannon-fodder for the expert in tournament bridge found that he could hold his own in the bidding of the hand.

Because of the fact that I was primarily a teacher, I like to think that I played no small part in the growth of bridge by being able to put forward the essence of the game in a clear, easy-to-follow text. By the time other writers decided that point-count was indeed the way to go, the "Goren" point-count was firmly established in the minds of the bridge-playing public.

Personally, I find the argument about who invented point-count bidding a trifle tiring. It was not I. If anyone else wants to claim that he is responsible, he has my blessing. The only thing I am sorry about in the whole matter is that the great amount of work put into point-count bidding by Bill Anderson, and the accuracy and simplicity of his concepts, has not been fully recognized.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Charles Goren and Omar Sharif personally cannot undertake to answer all questions submitted.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, AUG. 16, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to express peaceful ways of living and to avoid arguments or adverse results could occur. Figure out a practical way to solve a problem that has been bothering you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Meditation can reveal how best to gain your finest aims. Study both sides of any matter before coming to a definite decision.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get out of that bad mood you're in and strive for more harmony at home. Find a better way to handle regular chores.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't burden others with your problems but handle them quietly by yourself and to the best of your ability.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good day to handle personal affairs. Engage in amusements in afternoon but safeguard your reputation.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't become involved in outside activities for the time being. Follow your intuition which is most accurate at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study civic conditions that could prove advantageous to you. Try to clear up a situation that has been confusing to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take the time to extend a helping hand to a friend who needs your help now. Build up your self-esteem for the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Showing others that you are a responsible person is wise now. Don't run off on any foolish tangents at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Show good friends that you are truly interested in their welfare. Make plans to have more abundance in the days ahead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Consult with an expert before making definite plans on a new project you have in mind. Be more optimistic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be more alert to opportunities coming your way. Rid yourself of limitations and make plans for a successful future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Look over your environment and make plans for improvement. Plan new week's activities before retiring.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will know intuitively how to handle any difficult problem that may come up. Teach your progeny not to lose temper when put in a challenging position, otherwise a wonderful quality in this chart could be lost.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, AUG. 17, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You can start the week right looking directly at whatever practical problems that need to be done. Make necessary changes that could give you added income in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Some outside affair may pose a problem but you can easily overcome it. Avoid one who is a troublemaker and be happy.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have to change your view and attitude if you are to advance more quickly now. Analyze what a new contact says.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Persevere and attend to important obligations that you have neglected. Arrive on time for an important appointment.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may find friends moving or making changes, so be prepared for such. Be more thoughtful on the job.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your duties well and know where to make the right changes so that you have better results. Be more cooperative.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A new activity comes up and you should go along with it. Put aside thoughts of pleasure for the time being. Be logical.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study the situation at home carefully and make sure you change your tactics for better results. Take it easy tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Discussions with associates in the morning can make regular routines more efficient. Be careful in motion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your true aims in life and make those changes that are necessary in order to get ahead faster. Avoid gossip.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you feel disappointed in yourself, you can offset this by constructive thinking. Study new channels of expression.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Organizing the practical side of life intelligently will see you accomplishing more. Use your own good judgment.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have to make changes if you want your personal life to have more meaning. Contact a friend who has drifted away.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she must be taught to use ethical methods to get what is wanted and this life can be a most successful one. Direct the education along artistic lines for best results. Don't neglect religious and ethical training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

'Sickle Cell Month' Observance Slated

September is "Sickle Cell Month" in North Carolina.

Sickle cell anemia is a disease which affects one in every 500 black children born in North Carolina. The disease also is found in people of the Mediterranean, East Indian, American Indian, Mexican and caucasian descent. It is a genetic disease for which there is no known cure, but there is treatment available to help the victims live more productive lives, free of many of the complications associated with sickle cell.

In North Carolina there is a team approach to government services offered to persons with this genetic disorder. Not only are supportive services offered to those with the disease and to families with the trait, the state also offers help with other potential health problems that the individuals may have. The goal of the sickle cell syndrome program is to reduce death and disease through a comprehensive range of services, particularly to the non-white population.

Because of the nature of the disease, individuals with sickle cell anemia have a greater tendency to develop other types of chronic diseases such as kidney disease, blood related diseases, heart problems, etc.

The education testing, counseling, follow-up counseling, and referral services are free and available through the North Carolina Division of Health Services, Sickle Cell Syndrome Program, at local county health departments and local sickle cell centers.

For information on the statewide Sickle Cell Syndrome Program in North Carolina call George Cherry ar (919) 733-7437 or CARELINE (toll free) at 1-800-662-7030.

Perfect Animal Sought

By MARK PETERSON
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Everything about him was perfect. Weight, bone structure, coloring, breeding potential — it all was put together just right.

The reward for perfection? Over $1 million. The adonis? A 1,800-pound, 2-year-old purebred Hereford bull who goes by the name of Centennial.

"He was a humdinger ... really something else," recalled Bud Snydow, assistant secretary of the American Hereford Association.

Centennial won $250 in prize money just for strutting his stuff at the show. But Snydow said that over Centennial's lifespan, the sale of his semen and offspring will likely reap more than $1 million for his proud owners, the V Bar Ranch of Stanton, Texas.

At the same show in Denver, the AHA auctioned off a half interest in the 1980 champion, LeGrand Domino 7184, for $301,000. If he performs as anticipated, the bull will earn more than three times that.

Centennial, like other grand champions, was no fluke. A finely sculpted bull or cow is the product of decades of pure breeding, a quest for the perfect specimen. That's where the AHA and other cattle organizations come in.

The AHA, celebrating its 100th year, is based in Kansas City, on Hereford Lane. To get there, just look for the giant plastic bull, perched high atop a 90-foot brick pylon, resplendent in the Hereford colors of burnt-orange and white.

"He doesn't have a name," Snydow said. "We just call him 'the bull in the sky.'"

He may not have a name, but he has a rich hertage in the cattle industry. And much of it is to be seen at the AHA's Heritage Hall, a Hereford hall of fame. For example, there's a majestic color portrait of Anxiety 4th.

Snydow said Anxiety 4th is considered the father of American Herefords, which were imported in 1881 from Herefordshire, England.

"A hundred years later, the organization functions magnificently and with a vitality its founders scarcely could have imagined," boasted Don Ornduff, who for 51 years worked for the American Hereford Journal. "The babe in swaddling clothes has become a giant."

It has indeed.

Stored in the AHA's computerized registry is information on 18.2 million head of cattle. About 225,000 registrations are added each year, at an average fee of about $7.50 a head. Hereford breeders alone spend more than $1.7 million a year for performance data. They have to.

"Breeding is one heck of a competitive business," explained Keith Evans, director of communications for the American Angus Association in St. Joseph, Mo.

Commercial producers are searching for "superior performers" — those which take on the most weight on the least amount of food, Snydow said. When looking to purchase seed-stock, a producer turns to the cattle organizations.

Simple. But it hasn't always been that way. The AHA, AAA and other cattle organizations didn't begin keeping thorough documentation on pure breds until about 25 years ago.

Barnes Joins 'Three's Company'

Due to a high-level decision at ABC, starting this fall, "Three's Company" is going to become a "four's company" of sorts as blonde actress Priscilla Barnes is added to the newly established menage-a-trois of John Ritter, Joyce DeWitt and Jenilee Harrison. This is known in Hollywood as reshuffling the cast to increase ratings.

Harrison, who was originally hired as a temporary replacement for Suzanne Somers, will still portray Chrissy's cousin, Cindy Snow, but she will be leaving the apartment to live in a dorm at UCLA while she studies veterinary medicine, and Barnes, who is presumably the permanent replacement for Somers, will portray a nurse named Terri who works in an emergency ward in a hospital and takes Cindy's place in the apartment. Simple, isn't it? All this really means is that there will be another blonde to look at.

Pulling up stakes and moving is old hat to Priscilla Barnes. Being the daughter of a U.S. Air Force Colonel, Priscilla traveled all over the United States from airfield to airfield while she was growing up.

After graduating from Antelope Valley High School in California, she moved in with her sister in San Diego, where she won a number of beauty contests. Nevertheless, her primary ambition was to be a professional dancer. This career was cut short, however, after she suffered a badly-broken leg while performing with a children's group at the Hollywood Bowl.

"I told Bob how upset I was that I would never dance again," said Priscilla. "But he encouraged me to try acting. So on his advice, I headed to Hollywood — but I wound up as a waitress in a hotel."

It was two years before Priscilla got her next bit of luck. Actor Peter Falk came in a restaurant where she was working and began talking about acting. "At that point in my career, the only work I had done was to scream for less than 30 seconds on an episode of "Cannon," said Barnes. Falk helped her get a role on his show, "Columbo."

PRISCILLA BARNES WILL BE added to the cast of ABC's "Three's Company" airing Tuesday (9-9:30 p.m.) this fall as a permanent replacement for Suzanne Somers.

Divorce And Separation

The subjects of divorce and separation are sensitively explored from the man's point of view in "Breaking Up Is Hard to Do," airing as the "ABC Sunday Night Movie," Aug. 16 (9 p.m. to 12 a.m.).

Inspired by a true incident, the film follows the lives of six men who all separate from their wives at about the same time. The men spend the summer together at a beach house in Malibu, where they cope with the wreckage of their marriages and reveal to each other their hopes, fears and desires.

During the summer the men take a hard look at themselves, at their expectations and their needs, at their lost wives and new girlfriends, and at their fantasies and their dreams.

For the first time in their lives, the men speak openly about their feelings and, in the process, gain new insight into what makes the relationship work and what loving and being a man is all about.

Erin In Movie

Energetic actress Erin Moran is quite the time-traveler. Best known as Joanie Cunningham, the bubbly teen of "Happy Days," the lovely Ms. Moran can now be seen in her first starring role in a feature film, the futuristic science fiction thriller, "MINDWARP-An Infinity of Terror."

In this suspenseful story of a space rescue mission, Erin portrays Alluma, a beautiful intelligent woman who possesses the power to sense the presence of unknown life forms.

Despite an exhausting schedule, Erin filmed the New World picture, which also stars Edward Albert and Ray Walston, during the tail end of the "Happy Days" season, often racing across town from the series' stage at Paramount Studios in Hollywood, to the motion picture set in seaside Venice, California. Hectic? Yes. But not too much of a price to pay to launch a rising young star into space.

'The Story Of Prinze'

The compelling drama of the meteoric career of one of the decade's most popular young entertainers will be presented in "Can You Hear the Laughter? The Story of Freddie Prinze," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," Aug. 18 (9-11 p.m.).

Ira Angustain stars as Freddie Prinze, the late comedian, whose brilliant career was swiftly cut short by his growing dependence on drugs and alcohol and his inability to cope with the pressures of Hollywood success. Prinze, a star of major nightclubs, as well as the hit television series, "Chico and the Man," died by his own hand in January, 1977, at the age of 22.

Kevin Hooks stars in the drama as Nat Blake. Prinze's closet friend, dating back to his days as a New York City high school student. Michael Binder portrays comedian Alan Bursky, and Ken Sylk stars as David Brenner. Portraying the women in Prinze's life are Randee Heller as his secretary, Carol; Julie Carmen as his childhood sweetheart, Rose; and Devon Ericson, starring as his wife, Kathy. Stephen Elliott portrays Prinze's first agent, Jonas.

Journalist Peter S. Greenberg, a former Newsweek correspondent who knew Prinze, spent more than two years on the project and served as producer. The drama is based on Greenberg's Playboy magazine article, "Good Night, Sweet Prinze," which was published in the June 1977 issue.

Reminders of the late comedian were never far from the set of the production.

Many of Prinze's friends visited the set, advising the actors who were portraying them in the drama. For example, Kevin Hooks, whose character was Nat Blake, was coached by the real Nat Blake. And Randee Heller met often with Prinze's actual secretary, Carol Novak.

Also, Michael Binder was coached by the real Alan Bursky. But unlike other cast members, Binder had met his real life counterpart many times.

IRA ANGUSTAIN STARS as the comedian in the dramatic motion picture-for-television, "Can You Hear the Laughter? The Story of Freddie Prinze," airing Tuesday, Aug. 18 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

TO ALL OF YOU WHO HAVE BOMBARDED US WITH QUESTIONS ABOUT "GENERAL HOSPITAL" SUPERSTAR — RICK SPRINGFIELD.

This definitely single guy is going places! He hasn't been with "General Hospital" long, and already Rick (Dr. Noah Drake) is one of daytime's hottest stars.

An award-winning international rock star as well as actor, Rick is knocking them dead with his hit single 'Jessie's Girl' and his most recent album 'Working Class Dog.'

His interests range from Tae Kwon Do, in which he has a brown belt; motorbikes, snow-skiing and horseback riding, but music is his "major hobby."

He made his professional acting debut on television in "The Six Million Dollar Man."

Q: Would you please give me some background information about Burt Ward who plays Robin on "Batman." K.W., STANTONSBURG, N.C.

A: Holy beginner's luck! It was instant Robin for Burt Ward. He was an unknown with no acting experience when he was signed for the part of Batman's side-kick. Before Batman, Burt was doing very well in his undergraduate studies at UCLA and was a karate expert who could crack bricks with his bare hands. He is an excellent tennis player and at the age of two — yes two — he was an accomplished ice-skater. "That came naturally," he says. "My dad was owner and operator of one of the greatest ice shows, 'Rhapsody on Ice.'" The demise of the "Batman" series threw Burt into almost instant oblivion, although he still makes a few personal appearances.

Q: Could you please give me some information about John Beck who plays on "Flamingo Road." S.H., LUCAMA, S.C.

A: Believe it or not, this handsome guy was an exceptionally shy high school student until a speech course in his senior year exposed him to the joys of acting. Born on January 28 in Chicago, Illinois, John did some, summer stock and studied drama at various universities before he decided to strike out for Los Angeles. From then on it was all uphill. A few TV commercials and some bit parts on "Bonanza," "Mannix," and "Gunsmoke" led to a co-starring role with James Garner in NBC's 1971 short-lived series, "Nichols." He played Lee Remick's lover in the NBC-TV miniseries "Wheels," and co-starred in the films "Audrey Rose," "The Big Bus" and "The Other Side of Midnight." John and his wife Tina reside in Montecito, California.

There Is Still Hope

The finale of NBC's opening week will be Bob Hope's first of four fall shows for the network. He will do a takeoff on the upcoming season. His second show will be at the dedication of the Jerry Ford Museum with Ford, Ronnie Reagan and Canada's Trudeau among his guests. This season will be Bob's 31st year with NBC.

Jones To Return

Newman Is Buffalo Bill

Paul Newman stars as Buffalo Bill, master showman, charlatan and affable egotist, who meets his match when the enigmatic Sitting Bull joins his Wild West Show, in "Buffalo Bill and the Indians." Robert Altman's satirical look at the beginnings of modern show business and at the first media superstar will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Late Movie" Aug. 19, (11:30 p.m.).

In Altman's comically detailed panorama of the carnival hoopla and theatrical extravaganza of the Wild West show, supporting roles are played by Joel Grey, Kevin McCarthy, Harvey Keitel, Geraldine Chaplin, John Considine, Frank Kaquitts, Will Sampson, Burt Lancaster, Mike Kaplan, Bert Remsen, Denver Pyle, Pat McCormick and Shelly Duvall.

Buffalo Bill is depicted as an arrogant showman who revels in being a living legend, has a weakness for opera singers, has an estranged wife seeking a big settlement, and worries about maintaining his looks and his reputation.

To complicate matters, Ned Buntline (Lancaster), the writer of dime novels who created the Buffalo Bill myth, arrives, hoping for a job. Bill doesn't want him around. Nostalgia "ain't what it used to be," he says, and he already has a publicist (McCarthy). Moreover, Buntline is somewhat given to debunking the very myth he created.

PAUL NEWMAN STARS as Buffalo Bill in director Robert Altman's "Buffalo Bill and the Indians," a satirical look at the hoopla of the Wild West Show, to broadcast on "The CBS Late Night Movie," Wednesday, Aug. 19 at 11:30 p.m.

Karras In True-Life Drama

Jimmy Butsicaris was 35 years old when his first and only "son," Andre, came into his life. Andre Reynolds, street smart, trying to earn a living out of a shoebox, was 10.

The story of the birth and development of their heart-warming father-son relationship is told in "Jimmy B. & Andre," to be rebroadcast on Wednesday, Aug. 19 (9-11 p.m.).

The film highlights the period in the lives of Jimmy B. (Alex Karras) and Andre (Curtis Yates) when each needed a change. Andre, fatherless, with problems at home, ventured into the streets to drum up work to help out his family. Jimmy B. a widower with three grown daughters, was in transition. He was successful and well-liked, but in need of something more in his life.

"Andre came to Lindell's with his shoeshine box, found out who the owner of the place was and got into his life," said Karras, who was also executive producer of the real-life drama. "It worked out, eventually. Jimmy's a street kid, too; and they were alike in many ways, especially in that they both had experienced some pretty hard knocks."

"The only difference," interjected Jimmy Butsicaris, "was that I had a mom and a pop. The kid didn't. And he's black. His mother was on drugs. His war-hero father was dead. I saw the kid heading for jail. That was his future. But I had this nagging feeling — he was different."

Andre struck a chord with Jimmy B., and there was something about the kid that reminded him of himself. "The kid just walked into Lindell's like he owned the place." Subsequently, after many wrangles, Butsicaris gave in and let Andre have a space at Lindell's to shine shoes, do odd jobs and be the restaurant's unofficial mascot.

By the time Reynolds was 12, his mother had died, and an aunt took him in, somewhat reluctantly. Meanwhile, the relationship between Jimmy B. and Andre continued to grow. "The kid started calling me Pop before I knew it," Jimmy B. recalled.

Perkins Pizza

Jack Perkins, NBC News Correspondent and a principal reporter on "NBC Magazine With David Brinkley" spends a lot of time away from his wife and kids because of his heavy travel schedule with the show. However, being on the road so much hasn't deterred him from developing some keen culinary abilities.

"I love to cook," said Perkins. "I always have. When I get back from a trip my treat is to cook for my family rather than all of us going out. My Szechuan noodles and home-made pizza will someday be entered in a contest.

BOB KEESHAN, who has portrayed Captain Kangaroo for a quarter of a century, hosts an hour-long musical and comedy special celebrating the award-winning children's series "Good Evening, Captain," airing Friday, Aug. 21 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Top Stars Celebrate 'Captain Kangaroo'

For those of you who don't get a chance to watch "Captain Kangaroo" on weekday mornings, CBS is airing a nighttime variety special entitled "Good Evening, Captain" on Friday, Aug. 21 (8-9 p.m.) that promises to deliver all the entertainment of the morning show — and more. Joining Bob Keeshan, who created his role of Captain Kangaroo in 1955, are Jean Stapleton, Barbara Mandrell and Mike Farrell.

Cosmo F. Allegretti (who created the characters of Mr. Moose and Bunny Rabbit) and Hugh "Lumpy" Brannum (whose many characters include Mr. Greenjeans) join Keeshan in the musical number "Stick Together," an apt selection since the three have worked together since the premiere of the series.

Stapleton stars as Doris Wagner Pruitt, the Captain's biggest fan, who explains, in a series of comedy skits, how she watched the first show of "Captain Kangaroo" on her wedding day and has not missed one episode since.

Barbara Mandrell, the popular country music entertainer, narrates a fashion show of dolls from the past 25 years, presenting an unusual insight into the changing tastes and aspirations of the nation's youngsters.

"Both 'M*A*S*H' and 'Captain Kangaroo' are programs I have a great deal of respect and affection for," Farrell noted.

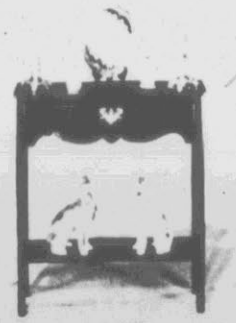

"My own opinion," continued Farrell, "is that some of the problems so ripe in our society today, including alcoholism, drugs and crime, start from a lack of self-esteem on the part of individuals. Conversely, if they are loved and nurtured, they grow up with a sense of their own value and worth. And that's the message that Bob Keeshan stresses to parents on his show — love your children."

Gossett On Stage

Louis Gossett Jr., who will star in NBC's "The Powers of Matthew Star," almost had a career as a pro basketball player. While appearing in "The Desk Set" on Broadway in 1958, Gossett was drafted by the New York Knicks, but he chose the stage over the basketball court and went on to do more than 60 Broadway shows in 15 years.

Barbara Marvels

"My TV show can reach as many as 40 million people in an hour," she said, "while a concert may entertain, on the average, about 10,000 at a time."

Elliot Stars

Jane Elliot, the popular daytime actress who received the 1980-81 Emmy Award for Outstanding Supporting Actress in a Daytime Drama, has joined the cast of the long-running serial "Guiding Light."

Miss Elliot is perhaps best known to daytime television viewers for her portrayal of villainess Tracy Quartermaine on the serial "General Hospital."

She will be joining "Guiding Light" to play the newly created role of Carrie Todd, an illustrator who joins the staff of Spaulding Enterprises.

"Her new character, Carrie, will be the total opposite of Tracy Quartermaine," says series head writer Douglas Marland (himself an Emmy Award winner).

Good Ole' Richard

Twitty Defends 1980 Title

CBS Sports will broadcast live the final round of the Sammy Davis, Jr. Greater Hartford Open from the Wethersfield Country Club in Hartford, Conn. on Sunday, Aug. 16 (2:30-4:30 p.m.). Commentators Pat Summerall and Ben Wright will be joined by Ken Venturi to provide expert analysis of this PGA tour event. Venturi was the 1964 Greater Hartford Open Champion.

Howard Twitty will defend his 1980 Hartford Open title against a field of golf's finest. Twitty won the tournament last year by defeating Jim Simmons. After 4 rounds of golf, both Simmons and Twitty scored an 18-under-par round of 266 for the tournament. In the ensuing sudden-death-playoff, these two fought head-to-head for five holes. Finally, Twitty scored a birdie on the 6th playoff hole and captured the title.

Twitty, who is 32-years-old, resides in Pardise Valley, Arizona and graduated from Arizona State University in 1972 with a major in business administration. One of the biggest men on the tour at six-feet-five inches, 220 pounds, he once was asked why he didn't concentrate on football. With a grin, he replied, "I like to keep my blood in my body."

HOWARD TWITTY DEFENDS his 1980 Sammy Davis Jr., Greater Hartford Open title on CBS-TV, Sunday, Aug. 16 (2:30-4:30 p.m.).

As a sophmore and junior at Arizona State, Twitty really showed promise. He won the important 1970 Sunnehanna and 1970 Porter Cup amateur events and, when he was a senior, he finished right behind Texas co-champions, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite, in the NCAA Championship.

Twitty turned pro in 1973 and twice failed in the PGA Tour Qualifying School before meeting success in June of 1975. That was the same year he won the Thailand Open during a second trip to the Far East Circuit.

As a pro, Twitty has captured the 1979 B.C. Open and last year's Greater Hartford Open. Last year, Howard also placed second in the Greater Milwaukee Open and third in the Hall of Fame Open. He entered 32 events on the tour and won money in 23 of them. He was a top-ten finisher six of those times. His 342 birdies on the tour last year also brought him recognition as the eighth leading birdie maker on the 1980 tour.

This year has not been quite as successful for Howard, yet. He tied for 13th at the Kemper Open, in Bethesda, Md. and is currently ranked number 93 on the 1981 PGA Money Leaders List with close to $30,000 in winnings. Last year he was 14th on the PGA 1980 Money Leaders List with earnings of more than $160,000. On the PGA Career Money Leaders List, Twitty is currently ranked 65th with career earnings totaling $561,000.

Pike's Peek

By Polly Vonetes

HOLLYWOOD — A lot of us held our breath when we heard BOB KEESHAN had had a heart attack in Toronto's airport. Fortunately, the place was full of doctors and TV's Captain Kangaroo was given immediate care. The latest from Canada is that he is steadily improving.

As referred to in last week's TV Chatter the role for JAMES FARENTINO has been set in "Dynasty." It must be a good one for he has signed a mammoth three year contract with the series.

An excited PRISCILLA BARNES (Suzanne Somer's replacement in "Three's Company") will make her debut on the show in a one-hour season opener titled "Jack Bares All." So much for the Moral Majority.

BURT LANCASTER and KIRK DOUGLAS have teamed together to portray, of all things, Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer as senior citizens in a new play called "The Boys of Autumn." After a one-month run in Frisco it will move on to the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. I wonder if they will be in overalls and bare foot!

October the fifth should be a red-letter day for CBS viewers who have tired of those summer re-runs. The new primetime season premieres that week with such new shows as "Shannon" starring KEVIN DOBSON, "Jessica Novak" starring HELEN SHAVER, "The Vintage Years" — Jane WYMAN'S first series for TV and "Mr. Merlin" with ELAINE JOYCE and BARNARD HUGHES. It has been a long dry summer for TV viewers and writers alike.

At the wrapparty of "Seduction," the movie starring MORGAN FAIRCHILD, she was presented with a Cartier watch in appreciation for the wear and tear from the beating she had to take from co-star ANDREW STEVENS.

Coffman's

and The Quality Difference

...Our basic buying philosophy is built on the premise of "quality first". It's what we look for when we choose any of our fine menswear. The difference to you is more than fashion and fit. You're buying a high degree of personal satisfaction and a standard of value. When you're buying a fine suit or sport coat you assume that things like detailed handwork on the armholes, fullness in the linings, numerous underpressings, hand fitted collars, are all there. We make sure they are! At Coffmans we never take quality for granted so you, our customer, can!

We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Help for one billion people worldwide.

FOR ALAN A. REICH, President, U.S. Council for the International Year of Disabled Persons

How many disabled persons are there in the U.S.? How is the year of disabled persons being commemorated? —R.S., Trenton, N.J.

● Thirty-five million is the most widely accepted number of physically or mentally disabled Americans, but this doesn't include what I call disability families. There are about 80 million families in this country, and a billion people worldwide, adapting their lives to disability. This year, there are grass roots programs underway in more than 1,750 towns and cities throughout America. With encouragement and support from the U.S. Council, partnership committees of disabled and non-disabled individuals are planning and initiating desired changes in communities where disabled persons live.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

● Actor Robert Morse claims he will never tire of telling the story of the time he lunched with Richard Burton at the Union Plaza Hotel in Las Vegas. The waiter suggested they try a new delicacy on the menu — pig's feet. Replied Burton, in a flash: "No thank you. It would be cannibalism for one ham to eat another"...It seems as though singer Anne Murray is getting bored with her girl-next-door image. Asked if she'd consider making a soap commercial, she looked disappointed and suggested "try me on a beer ad"...When Richard "Cheech" Marin, star of Cheech & Chong's Nice Dreams, was quizzed at a press conference on the pros and cons of computer dating, he said, after considerable thought: "I've nothing against it — but only if the two computers are really in love."

Murray: In a lather over her image.

Why did you wait such a long time to get married? —S.M., Olympia, Washington

● Until I met John I never had the desire to march down the aisle. We were both past 30 at our wedding, and old enough to know our own minds. Before our marriage we decided that if any problem or crisis arose, we'd try to figure out what was happening. So far, so good.

FOR CHRISTOPHER REEVE, star of Superman II

How did making Superman II differ from making Superman? —V.S., Easton, Pa.

● On Superman II we had a new director. There is no way I can compare the two films — the second one is played in a different way, lighter and more romantic. It does not have the kind of mythical overtones that overshadowed the first one. As to the stunts, once you have learned the basics, it's all the same. It's just a question of improvisation.

FOR JOHN PHILIP SOUSA III (writer and grandson of John Philip Sousa, "The March King")

Did you ever want to be like your grandfather? —T.K., Albany, N.Y.

● No. Not in the least. My grandfather did everything so well my siblings and I knew we could not emulate him. My father's field was writing about sports and his children were not pressured to take up music. I was drawn toward writing. If I have inherited anything from my grandfather, it's his orderliness and sense of humor.

FOR WILLIAM G. MILLIKEN, Governor of Michigan

As of March 31, 1981, Michigan legalized tear gas for self-defense. Where can we obtain instruction on its use? —J.S., Jackson, Mich.

● Tear gas comes with instructions for use and requires no formal training, but if you have any questions contact your local law-enforcement agency. Remember: tear gas devices can be used against you by an assailant and misused by children. Before purchasing one, weigh the advantages and disadvantages carefully.

FOR COOKU DUGGAL, hostess at Raga, Indian restaurant

Now that you're in America, how do you feel about pre-arranged marriages (such as your own)? —P.M., Canton, Ohio

● Even today, most marriages in India are pre-arranged, and they usually work out well. If I had to do it all over, I would like it to happen just the way it happened many years ago. As they say in India, "we fell in love after we got married."

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

● Now that Prince Charles has lost the title of "The World's Most Eligible Bachelor," we've been asked to come up with a list of candidates for the position. According to a group of bachelorettes we interviewed on this question, 10 definite possibilities are: Burt Reynolds; Reggie Jackson; Al Pacino; Governor Jerry Brown; Warren Beatty; Hugh Hefner; John Kennedy, Jr.; Joe Namath; Tom Selleck; Prince Albert of Monaco.

PRO AND CON

Should High School Driver Education Courses Be Abolished?

PRO Leon S. Robertson, senior research associate, Yale Center for Health Studies

Yes. Experiments find that, on the average, students assigned to high school driver education have no better driving records than others. But students taking the course get their licenses earlier than they would if they did not have high school driver education. When the courses were abolished in nine school districts in Connecticut, licensure and crashes of drivers under 18 declined dramatically. Driver educators are using taxpayers' money to support a school program that increases the taxpayers' risk of being injured or killed by teen-age drivers.

Question submitted by Daniel Paley, Hollywood, Fla.

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON William D. Cushman, executive director, American Driver and Traffic Safety Education Association

No. Personal mobility is a necessity. Everyone, young people included, must get to work, the store, the bank, recreation, etc. So we drive. Since driver education teaches people to drive better, it's a sound investment. Its graduates have fewer, less costly collisions and fewer violations. Imagine eliminating driver education and turning 18-year-olds loose on the highways without formal preparation. That's frightening! The issue isn't whether driver education should be continued, but how it can be made even more effective.

COVER STORY

The Winning Ways of Carol Burnett

Be it as comedienne, actress, mother or plaintiff, this effervescent redhead has proven she's a multi-talented fighter. Looking back, Carol says, "To gain courage, you must go through pain."

By Mary Ellin Barrett

Orlando/20th Century-Fox

Eighteen years ago, when Carol Burnett was a promising young comedienne fast becoming a star, her friend and mentor Garry Moore made a prediction. "A talent the size of Carol's is a terribly mixed blessing," he said. "She has a difficult life ahead."

As it turned out, his forecast was accurate — but there was something he had overlooked. In describing Burnett's genius, Moore had neglected to mention one of her greatest gifts: an uncanny talent for smiling through the worst of times — and coming out a winner.

Certainly no one can ignore that talent now. Last spring, having waited five years for her libel suit against the National Enquirer to come to trial, Burnett emerged the victor — and was awarded $800,000 in damages. Things also have been looking up on Burnett's once-troubled home front. Her oldest daughter, who has undergone treatment for a drug problem, is now starting to put her life back together. And, as always, Burnett's career is moving forward. She recently delighted audiences with her performance in the movie The Four Seasons and is now starring in Chu Chu and the Philly Flash.

The secret, explains Burnett, 48, is a positive attitude. "You have to have faith that there is a reason you go through certain things," she says. "I can't say I'm glad to go through pain but, in a way, one must in order to gain courage and really feel joy."

One joyous experience, she says, has been playing the role of Chu Chu, an eccentric San Francisco street woman whom Burnett describes as "tough but vulnerable beneath it all." The same mix of strength and sensitivity seems to be characteristic of Burnett as well. In person she appears much shyer and more subdued than she does on screen. She's also much prettier. Her features, when not being distorted in the service of comedy, are surprisingly delicate. This doesn't mean, however, that Burnett is too fragile to stand up for what she believes in. She'll freely tell you what she thinks — and how she feels.

Both Burnett's strength and her tenderness have their source, no doubt, in her childhood. As the daughter of alcoholic parents, she experienced pain and learned endurance early. She was raised by her grandmother in a one-room apartment in Hollywood, Calif., and the family often had to depend on welfare assistance for support.

Fortunately, "Nanny" was more than equal to the task of child rearing. "She was the one stabilizing force in my life," Burnett says. Nanny also kept her charge in good spirits. "She had blue hair and she used to take out her teeth to make me laugh," Burnett recalls, smiling. "She was a very attractive woman, and I remember her going to a party at 80 and pulling her dress all the way up until somebody said, 'Mrs. White, you have the prettiest legs,' and then pulling the dress down as if it were an accident. At 82, she had a 40-year-old boyfriend."

CBS

Burnett in a skit on the Garry Moore Show and (above) in Chu Chu and the Philly Flash: Says her colleague Alan Alda, "She can do anything."

Growing up, Carol, like many youngsters, sought out a rich fantasy life at the neighborhood movie theater. "I saw eight movies a week; I'd come home and pretend I was Betty Grable and Ava Gardner." But she had no intention of performing professionally — her dream was a career in journalism — until she played the role of a hillbilly in a show at U.C.L.A. "It was a comedy," she recalls. "I heard the laughter and the approval and it hooked me."

In 1954, following her junior year at college, Burnett came to New York City where, with characteristic determination, she masterminded her own first break. Fed up with discouragement, she organized a group of associates at the Rehearsal Club, where she lived, and they put on a revue. She was discovered by an agent, and soon after signing with him she began appearing on television, first with ventriloquist Paul Winchell and later as a regular on the Garry Moore Show.

While working for Moore, Burnett met Joe Hamilton, the producer of the series, whom she married in 1963. Hamilton went on to produce The Carol Burnett Show, which in its 11-year run won 18 Emmy Awards and consistently high Nielsen ratings. Today they're still living and working together, their latest cooperative effort a television special based on Burnett's "Higgins family" characters which will air on CBS this fall. "They laugh at the same things," observes actor Tim Conway, a friend of the Hamiltons. "I don't think jealousy has ever entered into their relationship."

A key factor in their happiness has been keeping a professional attitude about their marriage. "We treat each other at work as if we're not married," Burnett explains. Besides, she adds, as producer, Joe isn't in rehearsal constantly, "so I don't see him that much except at home."

It should be easy for the Hamiltons to separate home and work now. Last December they moved from their house in Beverly Hills to a condominium on the Hawaiian island of Maui — and Burnett couldn't be happier about it. "There's something magical about an island," she says. "It may take a day or two or three to wind down, but you find yourself breathing more slowly. I think your body needs that, your mind needs that."

On Maui, the Hamiltons lead a quiet, family-centered life. They eat dinner with their daughters every night. "We eat at 6:30 on the dot — on the dot," Burnett explains. "And there are never any arguments or any dissension at the table, ever. Because when I was growing up that was the time when parents would start to get mad at their kids. And you wondered why you went to bed with a lump in your stomach."

Only two of Burnett's three daughters, Jody, 14, and Erin Kate, 13, are living at home. Carrie, 17, who recently left the Palmer Drug Abuse Program in Houston, now lives on her own in Los Angeles and works as a receptionist at a radio station. "Carrie is almost 18 and she wants to be her own person," Burnett says. "It's that youthful thing of 'I can do it.' She's making her own way. Naturally, Momma wants her to go to school but she won't do well unless Carrie wants it. And something I learned which they teach you in the Palmer Drug Abuse Program is that if you can't be comfortable with what they want to do, you must release them.

Wide World

Carol and daughter Carrie: "You have to love them enough to let them hate you."

"She's been feeling good about herself," Burnett continues. "I don't know exactly what is going on, but she's not in the state that she was in before. She looks healthier and every time I talk to her there's somebody in there."

With two younger daughters embarking on adolescence, Burnett is still very concerned about drug abuse — and determined to do something about it. Drugs are "the biggest worry every parent has today," she says. "That's the peer pressure every kid has to face.

"I'm on a bandwagon about the industry," she adds. "I try to appeal to my fellow performers if they do get high not to talk about it in print or in public. We have to get out and fight. What we're trying to do is save our kids' lives. Sure they'll hate us for it. But you've got to love them enough to let them hate you."

Burnett has also been on a bandwagon about the newspaper business. She is giving part of her Enquirer settlement to the journalism schools at the Universities of California and Hawaii — with the stipulation that it be used for the teaching, study and research of journalistic ethics.

Burnett has said that she intends to give all the money away (in fact, she has already chosen the charities). Still she says she would have liked to have seen her Enquirer damages remain at $1.6 million (they were reduced later to $800,000). "I didn't care about the money," she remarks. "I would have loved to have seen the verdict stand only because I think the more they're slapped with a fine, the more of a deterrent it will be."

Some editors are concerned that Burnett's suit will be a deterrent to freedom of the press. She disagrees: "The only people who are going to be hurt are the ones who have lied. And they should be. And the honorable journalists will be happy to get rid of the rotten apples."

With the libel suit behind her, at least for the moment, (the Enquirer plans to appeal), Burnett is free to focus on her career. After she finishes filming the musical Annie, she'll be working on a television movie based on the life of Beatrice Jorgenson, a reformed alcoholic who started a halfway house in Los Angeles for women with drinking problems. "She's a real character from Texas," Burnett explains. "She reminds me of my mother. I met her. I fell in love with her and I'm going to do her story."

Playing Beatrice will no doubt offer Burnett yet another opportunity to demonstrate that she is not only a formidable comedienne but also a gifted dramatic actress. Indeed, since the end of her television series in 1977, Burnett has made several forays into drama. In the 1979 TV movie Friendly Fire, she played a farmer's wife radicalized by her son's death in Vietnam — and won an Emmy Award nomination for her efforts. In The Tenth Month, another television movie, Burnett played an unwed mother.

"She can do anything," observes Alan Alda, who directed Burnett in the comedy/drama feature film, The Four Seasons. "She can work convincingly in just about any style of acting that she's called on to do."

"I love it all," Burnett says emphatically. "What happens is that people are categorized — this one's a comic, this one is a dramatic person, this one is musical and so forth. But one shouldn't label oneself. That's putting a cap on yourself, and I don't believe in that."

Ever in search of new challenges, Burnett also plans to learn how to fly an airplane: "When we go to the different Hawaiian islands there's only one pilot on the plane, and with my imagination I'm expecting him to have ptomaine poisoning one day. I want lessons so when they say, 'Is there a doctor on the plane?' I can say, 'No, but I can land it.' In an emergency it would be nice to know something like that." FW

PEOPLE QUIZ

Will Sleeping More Help You Worry Less?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How long you sleep has an effect on your ability to think creatively.
2. People who sleep less worry less.
3. There are two distinct sleeper types — the early-to-bed-early-to-rise type, which psychologists term larks; and the later-to-bed-later-to-rise type, termed owls. Each type has advantages over the other.
4. Daytime sleep has a different effect on you than nighttime sleep.

ANSWERS

1. True. In studies at San Jose State University, investigators first pretested more than 360 college students with a questionnaire on sleep habits, identifying those who for six or more months had been short sleepers (no more than six hours) or long sleepers (eight and a half hours or more), and who reported being satisfied with their sleep. Subjects were then given a test designed to assess their ability to think and reason creatively. The test contained questions such as, "What would be the result if everyone suddenly lost the ability to read and write?" Each person tested was asked to generate as many consequences as possible to the situation posed by the item in a two-minute period. Results showed that the long sleepers averaged the highest scores on the ability to think creatively. There are, of course, plenty of exceptions in the general population.

2. False. In further San Jose State University studies of personality differences between long and short sleepers, tests and interviews showed that short sleepers average significantly higher levels of worry and anxiety than others. The findings indicated a chief source of apprehension: anxiety about how their achievements were evaluated by others.

3. True. And while the "owls" may have more fun getting the most mileage out of nighttime pursuits and activities, University of Florida studies of the characteristics of both types show that the "larks" have a decided edge in other departments. They were found to sleep better, were less subject to insomnia or fitful tossing and spells of wakening in the night and, as a result, awakened more rested, feeling more fit and able to face the rigors of the day than the "owls," who slept later in the morning. The "larks" were also found to have fewer physical problems, such as susceptibility to ailments and various indispositions.

4. True. Even the character of dreams tends to be entirely different during daytime sleep. University of California studies show that while nighttime sleep can produce dreams which are exciting, action-packed, colorful or seductively romantic, daytime sleep tends to produce dull, passive, lackluster and completely uninteresting dreams, which — if you were a sleepwalker — you'd undoubtedly walk out on. And studies conducted by a team of behavioral scientists at Italy's Universita di Trento indicate that if something that is important to be remembered is absorbed just before retiring, nighttime sleep can facilitate the recall processes, but daytime sleep did not have the same effect.

Fall In Virginia. It's Always Warm Enough For Oceans Of Fun.

Up and down the golden coast of Virginia, the ocean beaches are now warming up for your fall vacation. The sun is shining, the seafood is scrumptious, and the water is great for swimming till well into October. In the majestic southwest mountains, Jefferson National Forest has never been lovelier. Sometimes it seems that half the world is crimson and gold.

Monticello

In Colonial Williamsburg, visitors stroll in the autumn of the eighteenth century, to craft shops, to Market Square and to graceful old mansions. Just a few miles away, the children cap off their summer excitement with a visit to Jamestown, the first permanent English settlement in the New World.

On the beautiful islands off the Eastern Shore, migrating waterfowl pause before moving south, and the wild ponies of Assateague kick up their heels in the fresh autumn air.

Autumn in Virginia. It means oceans of fun from the mountains to the sea. And it means a fall vacation that's oceans apart.

Blowing the Whistle on Federal Waste

Although nearly half of America's Federal workers witness waste and fraud, the few who step forward find that honesty may not be the best policy.

By Michael D'Antonio

Twice a week, just before 11 A.M., a nervous Federal Government employee slips away from his Washington office to a coffee shop nearby.

Across town, at precisely 11, a pay phone rings on Capitol Hill — and it's answered by a reporter from The Washington Post who's been waiting for the call. The Federal worker has been telephoning the reporter each week for almost two years to describe the millions of dollars of Government waste that he sees. Oh, he tried going to his superiors first, but they wouldn't listen. One day he decided it was time to blow the whistle.

According to a Government study completed early this year, nearly half of the nation's two million Federal workers witness blatant fraud, waste and mismanagement in their own offices. Some of these employees have stepped forward. They've pointed the finger at billions of dollars in cost overruns for military hardware; they've exposed faults in Government contracting that have made overcharging and shortchanging commonplace, and they've spotlighted cases of rampant sexual harassment in Federal offices.

But many of these whistle blowers pay for their actions. They are often harassed on the job, transferred, demoted or fired. In the Government study, 73 percent of those who witnessed abuse said they kept their mouths shut because they believed nothing would be done to right the wrong, and 19 percent were silent because they feared retribution.

"Morally, it was worth it. Otherwise, I'm not so sure," says Joseph Pate, a former Federal contracting officer now in early retirement. While working for the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (L.E.A.A.), Pate pointed out a series of contract abuses and flaws in the Government's purchasing system. Testifying before committees in Congress, Pate showed how bureaucrats maneuvered around laws limiting and controlling how they spend the Government's money. He explained how purchases were rushed through a system of checks, with the justifications for them following months later. And he showed how the Government routinely failed to use and reuse existing supplies and equipment, opting instead to buy all new materials any time a new project or program was started.

"The waste I found in Government is not just in contracts, it's everywhere," Pate says. "You can find duplication and overstaffing in the hiring process, and in the awarding of Government grants."

Not long after stepping forward, Pate was slowly shut off from the flow of work in his office, and eventually offered early retirement at age 44 when the L.E.A.A. began to shut down most of its operations. Instead of being offered a job in another agency, Pate, with 20 years of Government experience, was squeezed into retirement.

Pate's former boss at the L.E.A.A., Robert Diegelman, insists that Pate's departure was routine, that at 44 he was expendable in an agency that was severely cutting back operations due to budget cuts. But Pate claims that after he blew the whistle he was given a choice of either retiring or working without management support in intolerable conditions.

Unfortunately, Pate's experience is not unusual. Take the case of Ernest Fitzgerald, perhaps the best known Federal whistle blower. He exposed more than $2 billion in cost overruns in the construction of the military's fleet of C5A cargo planes, the biggest planes in the world. Fitzgerald says he was literally hounded from his job as a Pentagon cost-cutter. Fitzgerald eventually sued his employer in Federal district court and won a place back in Government service, but he has never regained the high-level role he once played in Air Force procurement.

Twelve years after he first spoke up, Fitzgerald says little has changed. "The Government still accepts substandard equipment, and no one seems to care."

Other famous whistle blowers include Anthony Morris, Ph.D., a Food and Drug Administration scientist who said the swine flu epidemic expected in the mid-1970's would never show up and that inoculations could be harmful. (Morris, now retired from Government, works as a private consultant.) There is also William Clinscales, the Government investigator who helped indict more than 100 officials for cheating taxpayers and was eventually exiled to a desk in a hallway where he does only paperwork and spends most of his time reading.

And anonymous whistle blowers at the Pentagon have tipped off Wisconsin Congressman Les Aspin, a Democrat, to millions in Defense Department waste during the past decade. Among the examples are: servants for admirals and generals costing $5 million per year and subsidized pet care for the military costing $1.4 million per year.

Even when a whistle blower is proven right, he can still be punished. Robert Tucker, who worked for the General Services Administration in Boston, reported contract abuses in renovation and construction jobs that cost the Government hundreds of thousands of dollars. G.S.A.'s own investigator confirmed what Tucker claimed. Both men were then fired. They went to the courts to get their jobs back and won.

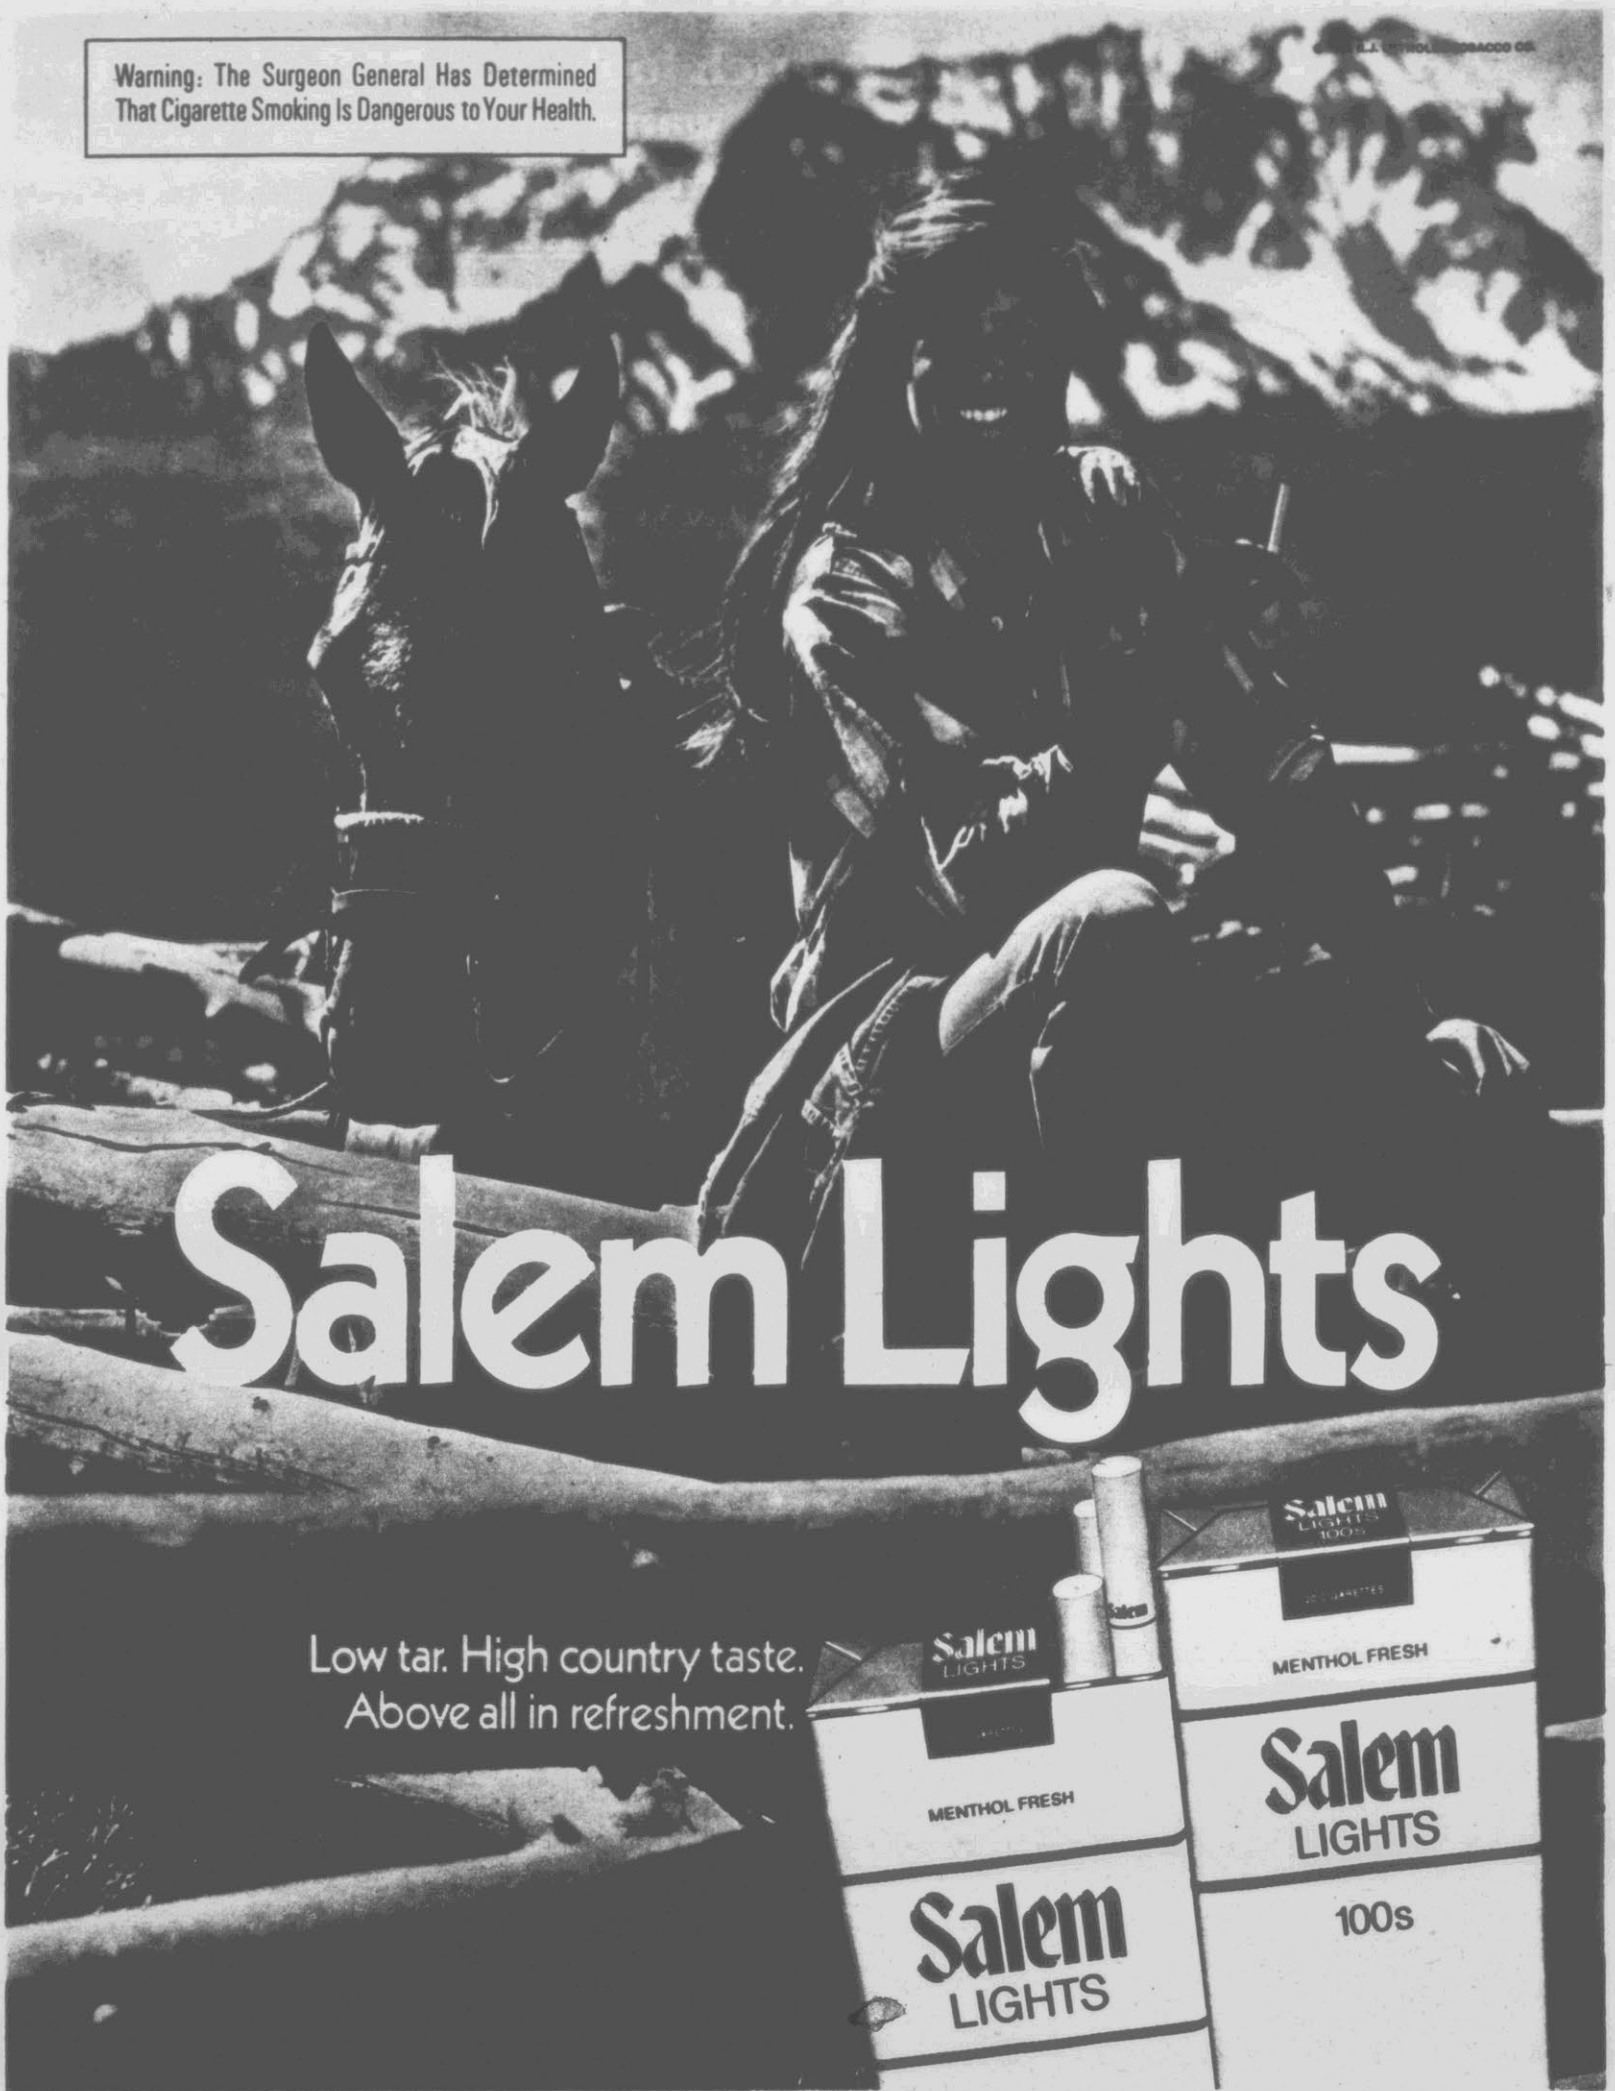

Tucker, who now works in another city for the G.S.A., is reluctant to talk about his whistle-blowing experience. Nervously, he says, "I still see problems." But five years after Tucker spoke up, he may soon see some positive results. Officials at G.S.A. are working on new rules and tighter controls for contracts. The agency, which handles all nonmilitary Government purchases, may soon require cost comparisons and more extensive bidding for routine Federal purchasing.

As the White House changed hands during the past two decades, it seems little was done to make whistle blowers less reluctant. Louis Clark, head of a whistle-blower advocacy group called the Government Accountability Project, (run under the auspices of the Institute for Policy Studies, a Washington think tank), notes that new Presidents tend to clean up messes left by past Presidents but install few reforms in the bureaucracy. "The check and balance of parties taking over the White House is healthy that way, but it's hard to distinguish any difference in the way administrations have treated whistle blowers," he explains.

Still, there is some evidence that Ronald Reagan is serious about encouraging fair investigation of whistle-blower charges. A few days after taking office he fired the inspector generals who served as watchdogs in every department. Reagan said the inspectors often impeded investigations and pledged to fill the offices with more zealous men and women.

At G.S.A. in Washington, Leo Brady of the Inspector General's office says that under Reagan "we're getting a lot more assistance from the White House and other Government offices." Brady expects that the new Administration will try to do more to protect whistle blowers. But he's skeptical, adding, "They have to do a lot more than make speeches. They have to change the attitudes at the top. The President has to direct Cabinet members that business as usual won't do," because, Brady says, "if the attitude at the top is that these people are to be frozen out, they will be."

Nearly everyone who has been a whistle blower, or worked with one, seems to agree that the bureaucratic system tends to reward people who don't make waves and punish those who do.

UPI

"A besieged bureaucrat has a choice," explains Clark. "If a little guy comes to him with a complaint, it's often easier to squeeze that person out of the Government than to deal with the problem." Government managers, up to the highest levels, consider loyalty an important trait for employees. And although whistle blowers generally believe in the value of good Government and are only trying to protect taxpayer money, they are usually regarded as disloyal. Adds Clark, "So the question for the employees is whether they must be loyal to their bosses, or loyal to the public and the law."

According to the Government Accountability Project, 90 percent of whistle blowers complain first to their immediate supervisors and then work up the chain of command in their departments. The Accountability Project counsels nearly all whistle blowers against going public unless their case is dramatic. If they do go to the press, it's usually only after all internal paths have been blocked. Prime places to 'leak' the story are, CBS's 60 Minutes, The Washington Post and The New York Times.

Of course, not every person who comes forward with a complaint is a legitimate whistle blower, and the people who deal with real cases are quick to point that out. Sometimes an employee tries to raise a smokescreen to cover his own mistakes or crimes. In other instances perfectionists can see waste where more reasonable investigators find none. "There are some Don Quixotes," says inspector Brady. "They think they're saving the world, but you can't tell what from."

True whistle blowers must have courage, stamina and conviction to follow their claims through the maze of Government offices that are supposed to resolve problems but which often compound them. Government managers can force employees to take psychiatric exams, claiming they are acting irrational, and then use the diagnosis to justify demotions or dismissals. Bosses can make life tough for "disloyal" workers by transferring them to other cities, taking away support staff, isolating them from important projects or simply taking their work away.

The psychological toll of blowing the whistle can be severe. Alan Westin, public law professor at Columbia University, has written a major study on whistle-blowing in business and industry, and it has been his finding that speaking up "is a terribly unnerving, emotionally draining experience."

There is a bright side to the whistle-blower story. In 1978 the Government created the Federal Merit System Protection Board, in part to help shield whistle-blowing employees from retribution. In order to become more effective, the board is using the recent study of Federal workers who witnessed abuses.

The Accountability Project is also making inroads on behalf of whistle blowers. Offering free legal aid, it encourages employees to step forward and works hard to protect them once they do.

In several states, including Michigan and Maryland, whistle-blower laws have recently been put on the books to protect workers in state government and industry from being fired for speaking up on the public's behalf.

And finally there is a movement on Capitol Hill to write some strict laws to protect whistle blowers. The Senate Judiciary Committee is planning hearings to discover possible ways to protect and encourage whistle blowers. Committee staffers say the group will consider everything from establishing a special agency to provide counsel and legal protection, to bonuses, raises and promotions for employees who spotlight waste, mismanagement and abuse.

"There is an enormous amount of retribution, in every department and agency, against whistle blowers," says Senate staffer Frank Silbey. "I would be astounded to find one whistle blower who has been really protected.

"But we're going to have some open hearings that hopefully are going to lead to legislation, which hopefully will mean things are going to change."

Observations

Summer daze. The mind dozes in August: Lazy, hazy hammock daydreams, A Midsummer Night's Dream with crickets, easy-to-take film fantasies, sunning, fishing....It's too hot to argue when the only energy problem seems to be dragging yourself out of that lawn chair. But sometimes what you hear seems as contradictory as that old cliché, "cold day in July." Witness those opinion polls that ask whether the public wants energy or a healthy environment. Nuclear power? You bet...but not here. As O. Henry put it: "A straw vote only shows which way the hot air blows."

Feeling poll-axed? The problem isn't just the polls, it's that old American habit of wanting to have your icebox cake while eating it, too. Well, here's a refreshing fact: You can have energy and a decent environment. Take Mobil's new Caballo Rojo (red horse) coal mine in Gillette, Wyoming. We continuously replace soil on one side of the mine as we dig on the other. Then the earth is contoured, its topsoil carefully replaced, and the area seeded with native grasses. Result: a new "old" landscape where wildlife–and humans–can feel right at home.

"Your dog is biting my leg. Would you call him off: A. Now B. Soon C. Never?"

High dune. Here's a horse of another color. Environmentalists on tiny Sable Island off Nova Scotia are using Mobil funds to rebuild dunes worn down by winds that constantly scour the island. The dunes are also being filled with transplanted vegetation which will help hold them together. This will preserve the habitat of the island's most famous residents–a herd of wild horses whose ancestors may have swum ashore centuries ago from a shipwrecked Spanish galleon. We're also preserving the offshore habitat, where Mobil is carefully drilling for oil and natural gas.

Surf's up! But how about operations in waters closer to home? While more than 25,000 offshore wells have been drilled in U.S. waters since the '50s, there have been fewer than half a dozen major spills. All were promptly cleaned up and there was no permanent damage to the environment. And the fish? They're thriving around offshore rigs. Seems they accept them as natural reefs, feeding on the marine growth clinging to platform legs. The whole idea, as we see it, is to bring you more energy, while protecting nature. It'll take this kind of compromise to get America back on the high energy road again. If you want such sane balance in our country's life–send a postcard (or better, a letter) telling your elected officials in Washington so. They'll get the picture.

It's a fact: The oil industry has invested nearly $18 billion in air, water, and land environmental improvements since 1970.

Sizzlin' Good Barbecue Suppers

By Marilyn Hansen

This weekend I have composed a collection of recipes that you might like to try for an upcoming outdoor dinner. A few simple marinades and basting sauces, a succulent shish kebab, a superb stuffed fish and some ever-welcome vegetable dishes, might readily fit in with your menu planning.

ZUCCHINI SPECIAL

6 cups (about 1½ lbs.) thinly sliced zucchini squash
1 small green pepper, cut in strips
1 medium-size clove garlic, minced
½ teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (6 fl. ozs.) vegetable cocktail juice
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt

1. In 2-quart saucepan, combine zucchini, green pepper, garlic, basil and butter.
2. Heat to boiling; reduce heat, cover and simmer 10 minutes or until just tender, stirring occasionally. Combine remaining ingredients; stir until smooth. Stir into vegetable mixture.
3. Cook, stirring until mixture boils and is thickened.

Makes about 4 cups, 8 servings

ORIGINAL CRAZY BARBECUE SAUCE

½ cup Worcestershire sauce
½ cup ketchup
½ cup strong coffee
¼ cup butter or margarine
2 teaspoons sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

1. In medium-size saucepan, combine all ingredients; bring to a boil.
2. Reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 20 minutes; stir occasionally.
3. Use as a basting sauce for chicken, steaks or ham.

Makes 1¾ cups

EGGPLANT-IN-A-JIFFY

6 cups (about 1 lb.) diced eggplant
1 cup sliced celery
1 cup sliced onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (10¾ ozs.) condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 large tomato, cut in wedges
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

1. In 2-quart saucepan, combine eggplant, celery, onion, parsley, oregano and butter.
2. Heat to boiling; reduce heat, cover and cook 10 to 12 minutes. Add remaining ingredients; reduce heat and simmer 5 to 8 minutes.

Makes about 4½ cups, 8 to 10 servings

BEER LOVER'S BASTING SAUCE

2 tablespoons light brown sugar
¼ teaspoon dry mustard powder
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
½ cup chili sauce, ketchup or bottled barbecue sauce
½ cup beer
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar

1. In small bowl or blender, combine all ingredients; stir or process until blended.
2. Brush sauce over spareribs, pork chops or chicken during last 30 minutes of grilling. A fine baste for kielbasa sausage also.

Makes 1½ cups

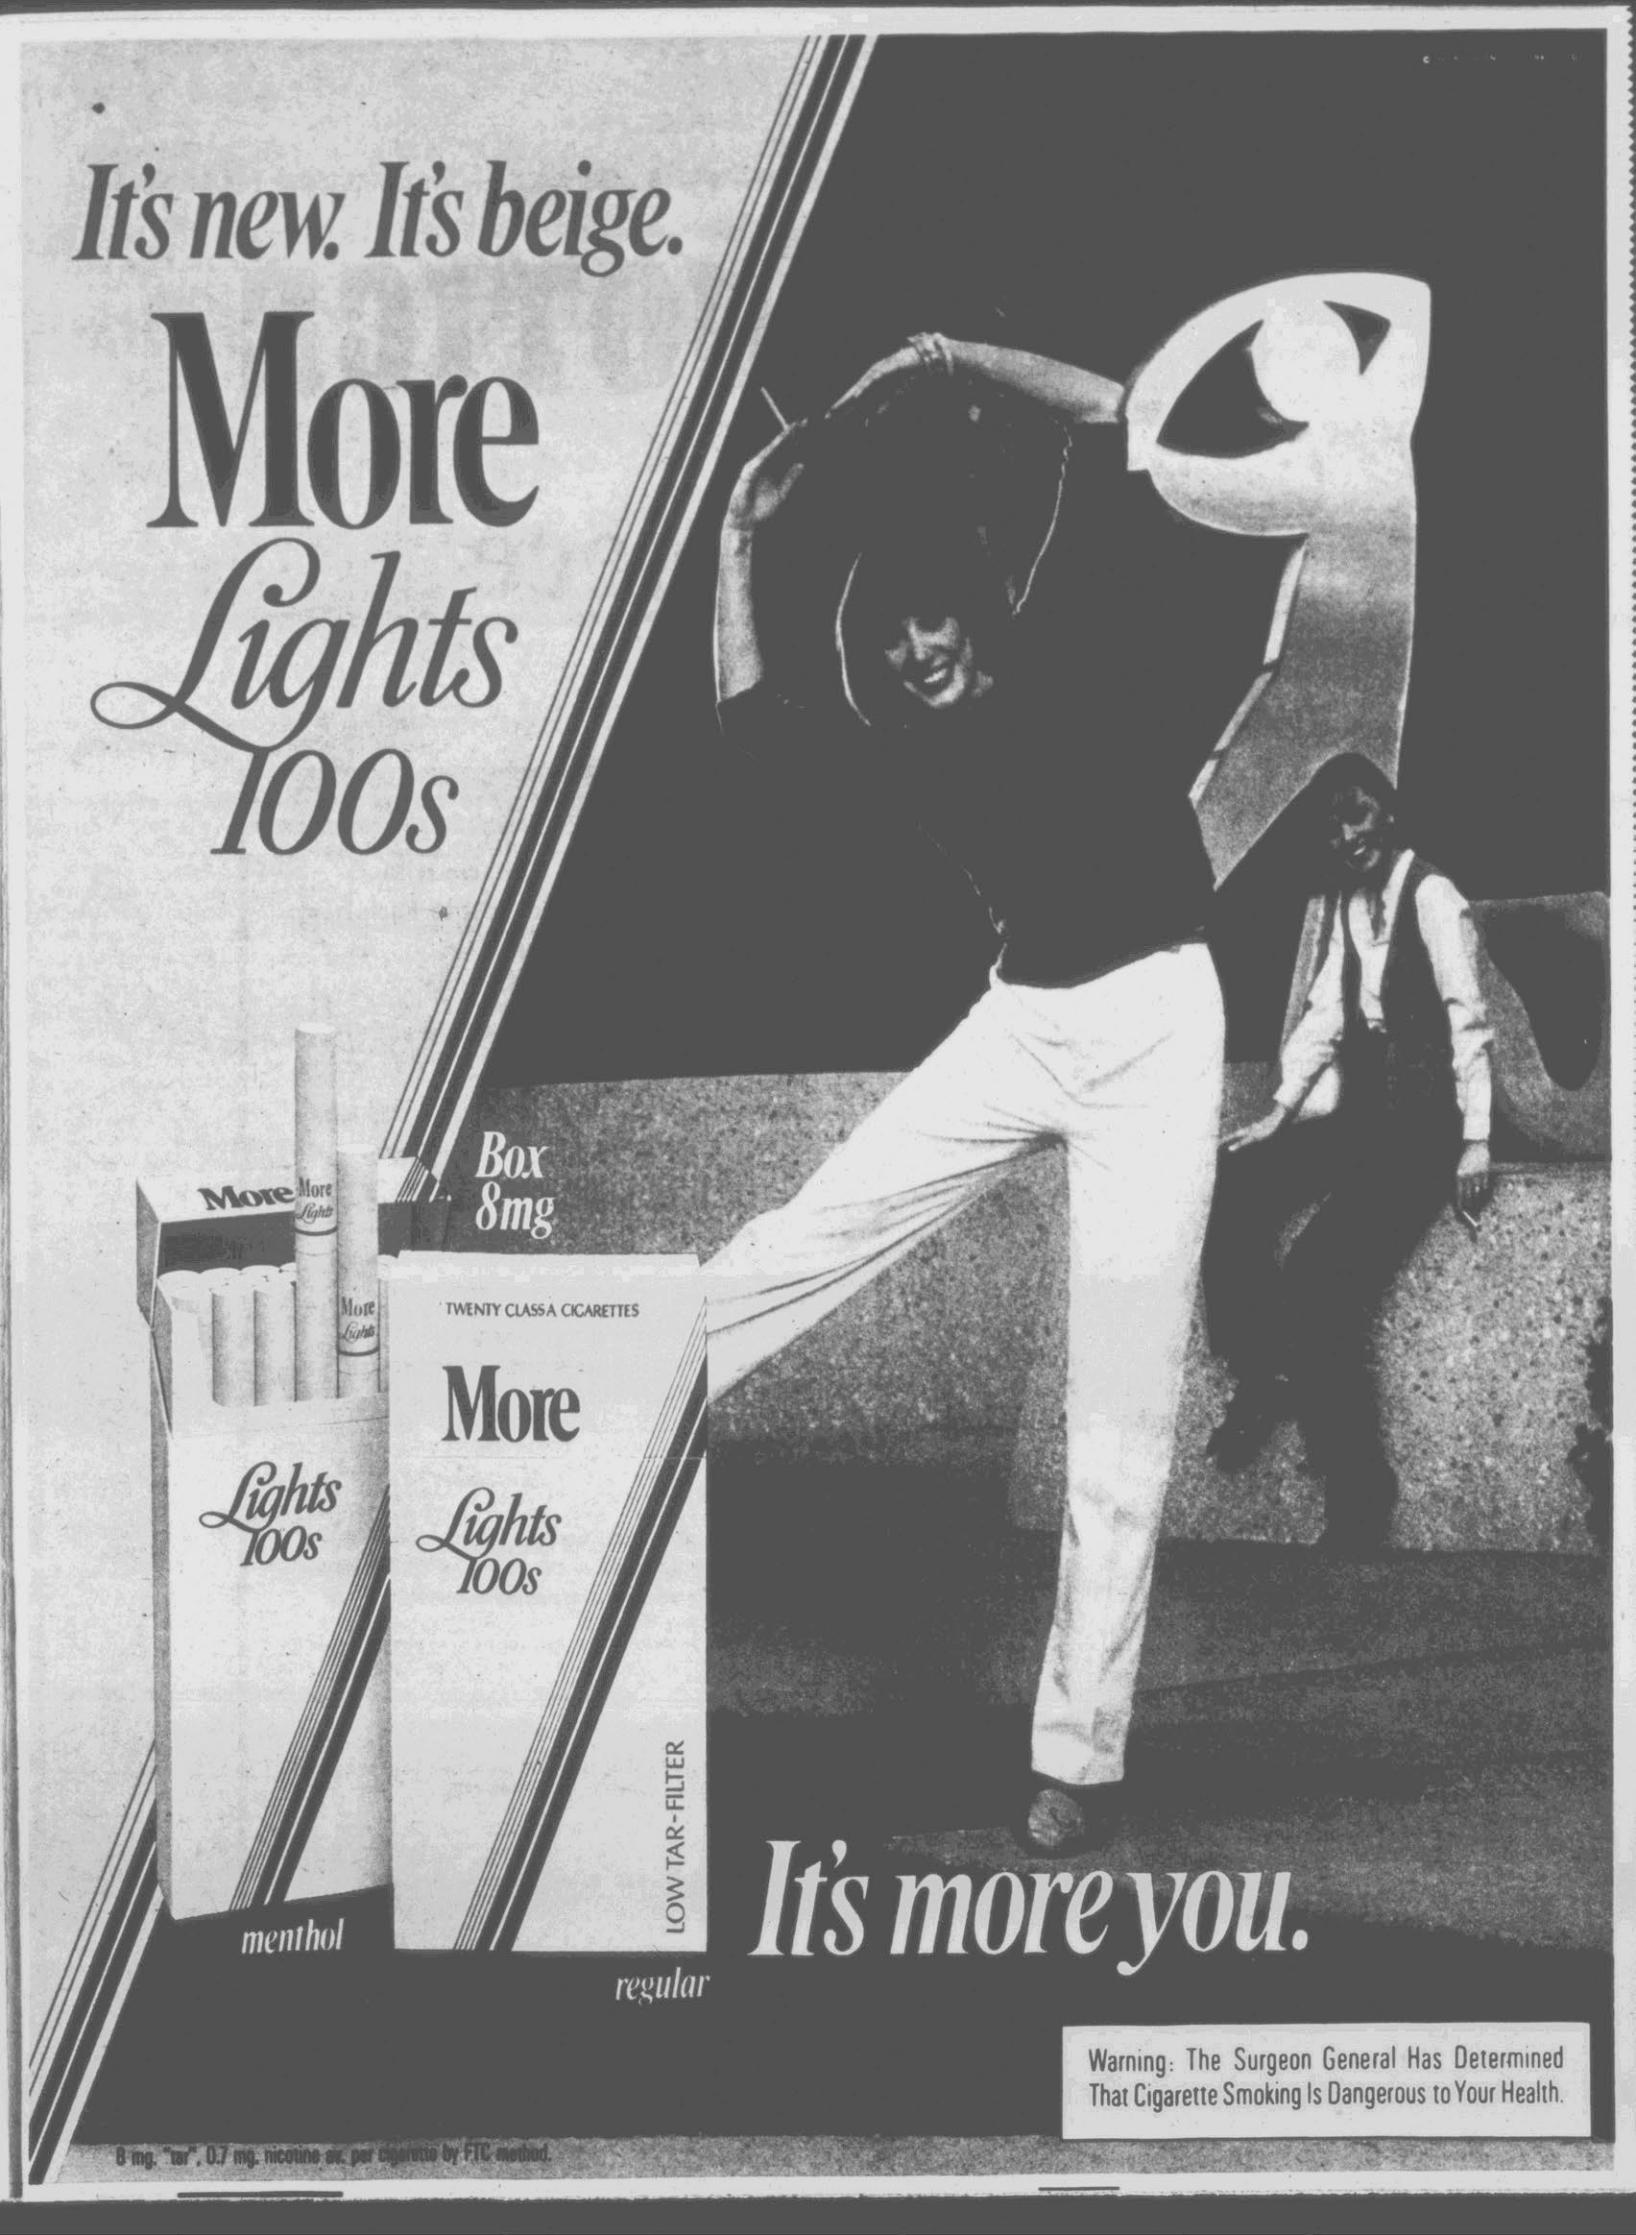

SHISH KEBAB

2 lbs. leg of lamb, deboned, trimmed of fat and gristle and cut into 1½-inch cubes
¼ cup dry red wine
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup diced onions
½ teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
½ cup olive oil
½ clove garlic, minced, optional
Dash cayenne pepper, optional
8 cherry tomatoes or small plum or egg tomatoes
8 to 10 onion quarters and/or 8 to 10 pieces of green bell pepper not exceeding 1½ square inches

1. Have butcher prepare meat or bone and cut it yourself.
2. Combine dry red wine, pepper, salt, onions, oregano, olive oil, garlic and cayenne.
3. Place lamb cubes in stainless, glass or porcelain container. Pour marinade mixture over meat, mixing well. Cover and place in refrigerator for at least 6 hours.
4. Prepare outdoor grill or heat broiler. Thread meat on skewers and broil until done as desired.
5. Skewer tomatoes, onion and green pepper squares together and start broiling when meat is half cooked.
6. Serve shish kebab and vegetables on a bed of rice or bulgur pilaf.

Makes 6 servings

Fall Clothes: Wild & Woolly

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

In this fall's collections, designers have not spared the fabric. Clothes are fuller, longer and display incredible variety. Here is some of the fashion bounty you can choose from this season:

There are blanket shawls, blousons, vests, tunics, poet blouses, circular skirts, metallic tops and lots of pants.

You'll also discover a whole array of clothes for the working woman. The options are many, and no longer confined to the ultra-conservative suit. There are split skirts, ruffled and lace blouses and dresses galore.

Designer Bill Blass takes the most versatile approach to this fall's clothes. He shows full-sweep, calf-length skirts in richly colored fabrics, as well as mid-calf coats with full regency sleeves and wide-bodied shapes, cinched with wide belts.

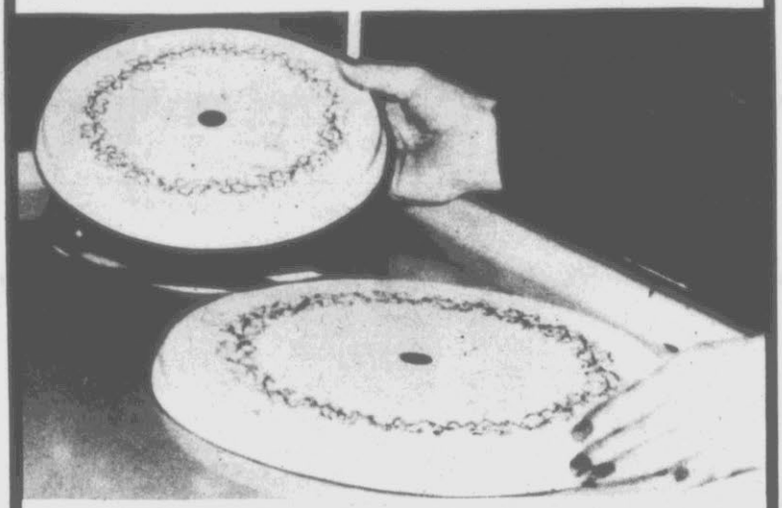

The looks from designer Geoffrey Beene this season are characteristically streamlined and elegant. He shows easy, unconstructed camel coats and jackets, cut to swing long and wide, double-faced in brilliant colors like pistachio, melon and sapphire blue. Beene says: "My clothes might be called 'American Exotica.' In fabric and design they represent a one-world melding of cultures, countries and continents."

Designer Adri works her silhouettes in a contemporary vein. "I simply don't opt for ethnic or nostalgic looks," she states. Some of her best designs this season blend sophisticated, offbeat colors — turtle green with fawn, seal brown with a shock of red. She also offers a wide range of low-key shades from nutmeg to curry. Her play of textures combines poodle knit with satiny doeskin and metallic leather with airy mohair. Examples include a big curly wool jacket worn belted over a full-sweeping skirt and a bronzed vest over a bloused long shirt and below-calf pants.

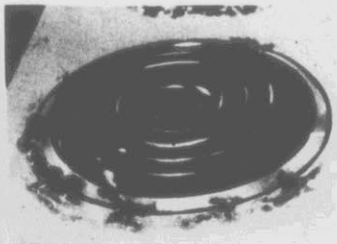

Fashion Tips

- If you have a generous waistline, try one of the new tunic styles, loosely belted.
- If you're bottom-heavy, count your blessings with the new fuller skirts and easy jackets in longer cuts. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

A FIX ON EXERCISE

A hormone produced by the brain and pituitary gland may explain why regular exercise can be both pleasurable and addictive and why athletes feel the pain of exercise less than nonexercisers.

The hormone, beta-endorphin, is produced in response to strenuous activity and is a natural opiate — producing effects similar to those of morphine. In a test of joggers and nonjoggers, Dr. Lee Berk of California's Loma Linda University found that those who jogged regularly produced beta-endorphin more quickly and in far greater amounts than the nonjoggers.

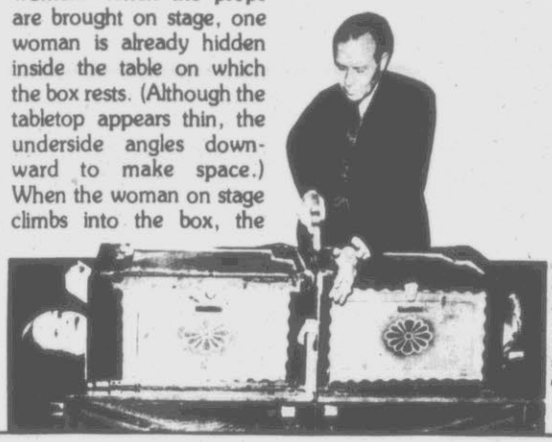

"This may explain why runners feel so good after working out — the 'runner's high,'" says Berk. "It may also explain why a regular jogger can feel blue after missing a day or two. The beta-endorphin level drops, and the runner suffers a feeling similar to morphine withdrawal."

CUTTING OPEN AN OLD SAW

Sorry to spoil it for you, but in her new book, How Do They Do That?, Caroline Sutton explains, among 150 other things, how magicians saw a woman in half. The fact is, the illusion involves two women. When the props are brought on stage, one woman is already hidden inside the table on which the box rests. (Although the tabletop appears thin, the underside angles downward to make space.) When the woman on stage climbs into the box, the other one climbs up into the box through a trap in the table and pokes her feet out of the end. She curls up with her head bent forward between her knees while the other woman draws her knees up to her chin. Thus, only an empty space lies in the pathway when the magician begins slicing.

TIP TIPS

Remember the day when tipping was a reward for good service ("tip" originally stood for "To Insure Promptness") rather than an obligation to dole out whether you got the red-carpet treatment or were merely swept under the rug? John Schein remembers, and 10 years ago founded Tippers International, an organization to demystify tipping.

Schein now puts out all sorts of tipping paraphernalia, like the comprehensive "Guide for Tipping," which answers every conceivable question on who and how much, from a waitress at a buffet (10 percent if she just brings drinks and clears dishes) to the paperboy ($5 or $10 at Christmas) to a Russian bellhop (30 kopeks per bag).

BABY TALK

Have a question on how often to feed your new baby, or what the symptoms of colic are, or how long an infant should sleep? Try calling The Beech-Nut Infant Nutrition HotLine, a tollfree general information source on baby care. The HotLine is not an emergency service and won't give medical diagnoses, but it will match your question with one of 65 different tape recordings prepared by well-known medical experts. Questions not covered by the tapes are researched in the HotLine's reference library. The lines are open from Monday to Friday, 9 A.M. to 4 P.M. Eastern time. Call 800-523-6633. LOVE, ALLIGATOR STYLE

For months now, letters have been pouring in asking, "What is the sex life of an alligator like?" Well, because you asked for it, we called Kent Vliet, a grad student at the University of Florida who, with zoologist Walter Auffenberg, spent the past year underwater, five feet from the gators, unobtrusively observing their courtship habits.

Each April, reports Vliet, as the female alligators bask in the sun, the males begin a series of ritualized strength tests — like pushing each other underwater — as if to show off for the ladies. After a while, the females get interested and come down to check out the muscles of their prospective suitors for themselves. "Any male she can force underwater too easily, she quickly loses interest in," says voyeur Vliet. "The ones who put up a good fight she'll be more receptive to when it comes to actual mating later."

TRIAL MARRIAGE: JURY STILL OUT

Living together before marriage is often seen today as a prerequisite to a successful relationship, and the practice has tripled over the past decade, with about 1.5 million unmarried couples now living together. However, a new study in Psychology Today says that couples who live together before marriage are just as likely to get divorced as those who don't.

In 1972, two U.C.L.A. psychologists interviewed 159 couples applying for marriage licenses, about half of whom had lived together. Four years later, they checked up on 77 of the couples. Thirty-one percent were divorced, with the rate the same for cohabitants and noncohabitants. Among the couples still married, both groups expressed equal marital satisfaction. The cohabitants seemed less likely to bicker but had more problems with alcohol, drugs and infidelity.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Pants are different. 2. Tree is missing. 3. Cliff bag is missing. 4. Mole is smaller. 5. Shirt is tucked in. 6. Mortimer is missing.

● OVEN HANDED? Follow directions carefully; put the right letters together and see what you can bake: One-sixth of butter, one-third of rye, one-third of egg, one-fifth of apple and one-fourth of dill. Hint: It's what's up front that counts.

● City Safari! Find a city in each sentence: 1. The Stamp Act failed. 2. It soared over the roof. 3. Let's end all assaults. 4. He tends the garden very well. P.S.: Three begin with "D."

1. Tampa. 2. Dover. 3. Dallas. 4. Denver.

● Sum Fun! Take a number. Add the next consecutive number. Add 9. Divide by 2. Subtract the original number. Add 6. Answer's below.

JIGSAW STANDS FOUR-SQUARE

To begin, cut one corner from a cardboard square, as indicated by dotted lines of figure 1. Then hand someone the L-shaped piece and challenge him or her to divide it into four segments, all of the same size and shape, which, when fitted together, will form a hollow square similar to the original.

IT'S A BREEZE! It's easy to see how the couple above keeps cool on a hot summer day. Connect dots 1, 2, 3, etc.

TIGER

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

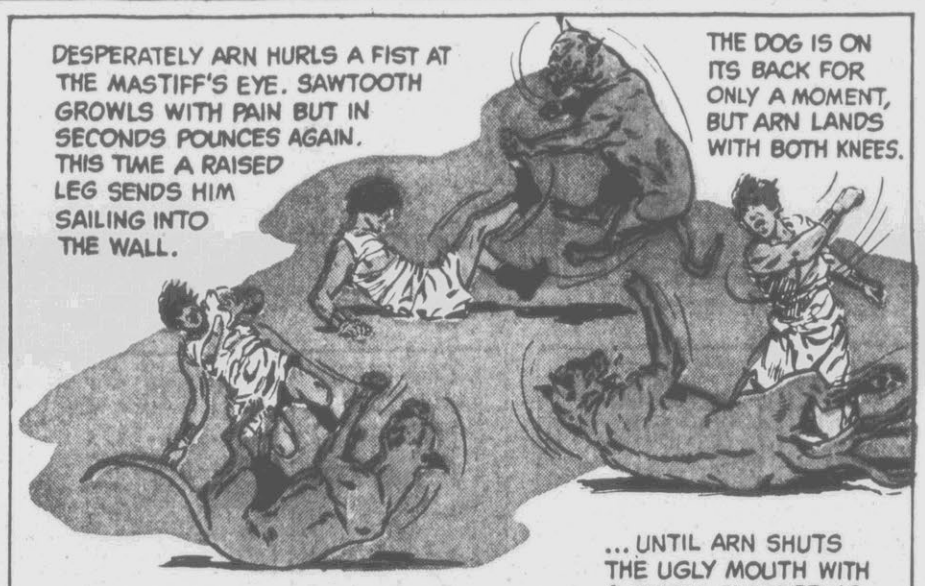

Our Story: REBUFFED BY THE DOE-EYED HUNTRESS, ARN FINDS HIMSELF THE CAPTIVE OF HER HOUNDS RATHER THAN HER HEART. LIKE SHEEPDOGS, THE PACK URGES HIM TOWARD A VILLAGE. THERE, AT MAEVE'S COMMAND, THE TOWNSFOLK GATHER. AN OLD MAN RUBS HIS HANDS WITH GLEE. "OLD 'SAWTOOTH' WILL EAT WELL TONIGHT."

"A STRANGER HAS LANDED," MAEVE ANNOUNCES. "BY OUR LAWS HE MUST FACE SAWTOOTH. IF THE BOY WINS, HE WILL LEAVE HERE IN AN OPEN BOAT. IF HE LOSES...." A GREAT ROAR OF APPROVAL SHAKES THE RAFTERS WHEN ARN IS LED TO THE PIT.

THE CAGE IS OPENED AS SAWTOOTH DROOLS. FOR A MOMENT HE DANCES AROUND, SIZING UP HIS PREY. THEN HE LUNGES FOR ARN'S LEGS. THE YOUNG PRINCE LEAPS OVER HIS ATTACKER BUT THE AGILE SAWTOOTH TURNS QUICKLY AND THROWS HIMSELF AT ARN'S BREAST.

AT DAYBREAK THE TOWNSPEOPLE TOW ARN A LEAGUE OUT TO SEA. HE DOES NOT NOTICE THE WOMAN WITH THE DOGS WATCHING SADLY FROM THE CLIFFSIDE.
