U.S. Pilots Down 2 Libyan Fighters

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two U.S. F-14 jet fighters shot down a pair of Soviet-built Libyan SU-22 fighter planes over the Mediterranean early today in a one-minute clash about 60 nautical miles off the Libyan coast after an "unprovoked attack" by the Libyans, the Defense Department said.

None of the Americans in the two-man F-14s were hurt, officials said. One Libyan pilot was seen parachuting from his stricken plane.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told a news conference the attack was clearly over international waters and was unanticipated. Libya, however, considers that its territorial rights extend 200 miles to sea.

Weinberger said the United States planned no retaliation as a result of the attack, but that the naval force to which the planes are assigned would finish its planned exercise Wednesday afternoon on schedule.

The Pentagon announced the 2:20 a.m. EDT incident before dawn and Weinberger appeared at the hastily called news conference later to read the official statement, which said:

"Two U.S. Navy F-14 aircraft involved in a previously announced routine exercise in international air space over international waters in the south central Mediterranean were attacked by two Libyan SU-22 fighter aircraft.

"After being fired upon, the F-14s from the aircraft carrier Nimitz took action in response and shot down both Libyan aircraft."

"The U.S. government is protesting through diplomatic channels this unprovoked attack, which occurred in international air space over 60 nautical miles from the nearest land."

Since the United States and Libya do not have direct diplomatic relations, Weinberger said the U.S. protest would be channeled to the Libyan government through the Belgian government.

At the State Department, officials said the administration may seek a meeting of the U.N. Security Council to denounce the Libyan action.

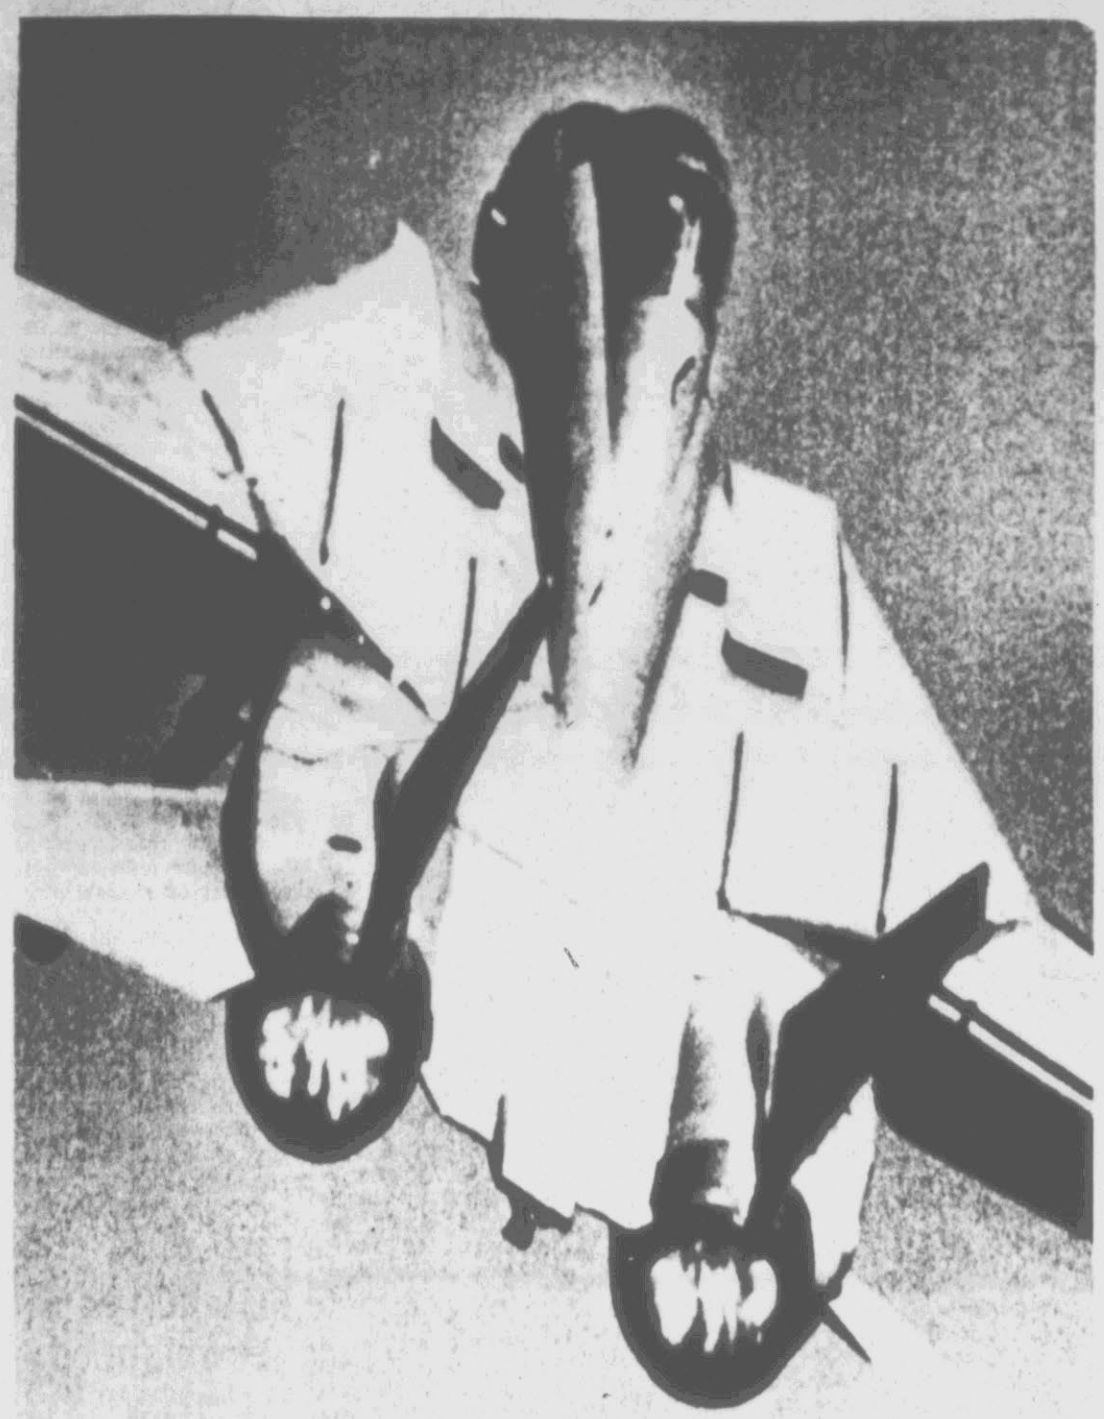

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said council members were informed of the incident this morning through the council president. U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim also was notified.

Sources in Brussels, meanwhile, quoted senior NATO officials as saying the North Atlantic Council, made up of representatives of the 15 alliance nations, will meet at the request of the United States to discuss the incident.

Weinberger praised the performance of the F-14 crews, saying "I think they carried out their mission extremely well."

Libya Confirms Aircraft Fired On By U.S. Pilots

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya today confirmed that U.S. Navy planes fired on two of its warplanes over the Mediterranen but did not verify the Pentagon's report the planes were downed.

A communique issued by the government said the Libyan aircraft were fired on while they were "on a routine reconnaissance mission within our airspace and territorial waters." An early statement by the Libyan news agency JANA also accused the U.S. of provocation through naval maneuvers but made no mention of the dogfight.

The United States said the planes were downed by two Navy fighters after the Libyan jets opened fire in an "unprovoked attack" in international airspace over the Mediterranean, some 60 miles off the Libyan coast.

The Libyans have claimed sovereignty over waters and air space reaching out 200 miles from their coast, but the United States recognizes only the traditional three-mile limit.

The Libyan government statement said:

"In view of the American escalation and aggression against the Libyan people and its revolution, the American Air Force since last night and up to this moment has been extensively, continuously and provocatively penetrating our airspace and territorial waters in the Gulf of Sidra. At 12 minutes past 7 this morning, Aug. 19, 1981, two of our planes were on a routine reconaissance mission within our airspace and territorial waters within the Gulf of Sidra when they were intercepted and shot at by eight American planes."

In Washington, the Pentagon said two U.S. Navy F-14 fighter planes shot down two Libyan SU-22 fighters after they fired on the American aircraft in an "unprovoked attack" in international airspace over the Mediterranean.

The Pentagon said the attack came during a "previously announced routine exercise in international airspace over international waters" some 60 nautical miles off the Libyan coast in the south-central Mediterranean.

Navy Capt. Larry Hamilton, a Pentagon spokesman, said he did not know the fate of the Libyan pilots or if the U.S. fighters were damaged. Navy Cmdr. Charles Klee said none of the U.S. personnel in the normally two-man F-14s was injured.

The Libyan news agency said in a comment by its political editor that the "American maneuvers to be conducted by the American 6th Fleet during the week in the Gulf of Sidra, which is an indivisible part of our sovereign territorial waters, expose the nature and the reality of American aggressive intentions..."

The dispatch said the "joint challenge thrown by the American administration and its agent, (Egyptian

Hospital Rooms Allocated PCC Nursing Education

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees announced last night that 12 patient rooms (about 3,000 square feet) in the new West Bed Tower have been allocated, at least till next July, to Pitt Community College's nursing education program.

This action is taken as one enabler for PCC to increase its entering nursing class size from 50 to 76. "We're pleased with this cooperative effort," PCMH Associate Director for Nursing Services Betty Trought said, adding that she sees aid to the PCC Department of Nursing's effort to increase its number of students as a way to help alleviate the nurse shortage at this hospital. "We recruited 51 percent of this year's PCC graduates," she said.

The new bed tower, the trustees were told, when all beds are open, will increase the bed potential of the hospital 27.5 percent, for a total of 556. The square footage of the hospital will increase from 442,000 to 523,000, a plus of 18.5 percent.

The board approved a bid (the lowest of seven) by Jackson Builders Inc. of Goldsboro to construct a 9,000 square foot educational and storage building at a cost of $74,618.

The board approved bids for mattresses and recliner chairs in the amount of $41,919. Some $205,277.50 was transferred to a reserve account to cover the cost of all new bed tower equipment. A furniture bid of $189,348.90 was approved last month.

Bid documents are being prepared to add 3,200 square feet to the hospital laboratory, 2,100 to medical records, 2,600 to special services and pulmonary function labs, and 4,972 feet to the hospital cafeteria. These projects have been budgeted and funds set aside from capital reserves.

Nursing Services was praised for its fine job of increasing the number of full-time RNs from 270 in 1980 to 344 in July of this year; part-time from 43 to 78. Mrs. Trought said she feels this success is the outcome of improved management efforts and increased consideration for the personal needs of nurses and other hospital employees since the personnel survey and

Power Agency Plan Explained To City Officials

Members of the Greenville City Council and Greenville Utilities Commission met last night with representatives of N.C. Municipal Power Agency No. 3 for a briefing and question-and-answer session on the proposed buy-in agreement with Carolina Power & Light Co. that if approved by power agency members next month, will make the agency the wholesale supplier for Greenville.

Assuming the agreements are approved, Greenville should begin receiving agency power by mid-January.

The anticipated first year savings for Greenville, by purchasing power from the agency rather than Virginia Electric and Power Co., has been estimated at $4.3 million.

The Utilities Commission is expected to vote on whether or not to approve the agreement on September 8, while the City Council is expected to vote on the proposal September 10.

Under the proposal, the power agency will purchase portions of several CP&L generating plants. Municipalities — members of the power agency — which presently purchase electricity from CP&L and VEPCO at wholesale to supply retail customers, will then purchase power from the agency.

The CP&L generating facilities will be purchased through the sale of revenue bonds issued by the power agency and retired through the revenue from the sale of electricity to its customers.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

VOCATIONAL CENTER APPEAL

The staff of the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center has asked Hotline to make a two-fold appeal: for participants in its first annual Pitt County Pig Cookin' Contest and for donations of items for the yard sale to be held in conjunction with the contest and barbecue sale.

The event is to be held at the Pitt County Fairgrounds Friday and Saturday, Aug. 28 and 29. Event chairman Doug Bond said he'd like to have 50 pig cookers competing. Thirty have signed up already, he said, and the next 20 to apply will be included. The entry fee is $80, which covers the cost of the pig, electricity, etc. All who take pride in themselves as pig-pickin' cooks should come out armed with pig cooker and their own special sauce. Businesses are urged to sponsor cooks. The cooking will begin at 9 p.m. Friday and last through the night. Selling of the barbecue will take place Saturday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., after judging by persons from out of the area.

Anyone who has anything to donate for the yard sale is asked to bring it to the Vocational Center or call George Sumerlin, 758-4188.

Proceeds of both of these and other related events will go toward the construction of the center's dormitory and recreational facility, so donations are, of course, tax-deductible.

City Calendar

Students in the Greenville City Schools during school year 1981-82 will be getting seven student holidays in addition to Labor Day, two days at Thanksgiving, one week at Easter and two weeks at Christmas and New Year.

The student holidays are additional employment days scheduled for teachers to work on report cards and school records, to attend inservice training programs and to attend regional conferences.

The calendar as it applies to students of the city schools for the coming year is:

— Tuesday, August 25, pupil orientation day.
— Wednesday, August 26, first day of the 180 day school year.
— Monday, August 7, Labor Day holiday.
— Monday, October 12, student holiday.
— Friday, October 23, student holiday.
— Wednesday, November 11, student holiday.
— Thursday and Friday, November 26 and 26, Thanksgiving holiday.
— Monday, December 21 through Sunday, January 3, two weeks holiday for Christmas and New Year. (One of these days, Dec. 23, is being scheduled as a holiday in lieu of Veteran's Day).
— Thursday and Friday, January 21 and 22, student holidays.
— Tuesday, March 9, student holiday.
— Monday, April 12 through Friday, April 16, Easter Monday and four annual spring holidays.
— Monday, May 24, student holiday.
— Tuesday, June 8, last day of 180 school days.

Tropical Storm Moving Up Atlantic Coast

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Dennis moved into the warm waters of the Atlantic Ocean just off Florida's northeast coast today where forecasters said it could pick up enough strength to become a hurricane by nightfall.

Gale warnings went up along the East Coast from the northern tip of Florida through Georgia and South Carolina coasts.

The storm that dumped flood rains for three days on south Florida, was moving northward at about 10 mph with winds of about 50 mph. It was expected to slow down later today.

The storm brought welcome rainfall to northeast Florida, where residents have been under water-use restrictions for months because of a prolonged drought.

In the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m., Dennis had dropped 2.15 inches of rain on St. Augustine, the nation's oldest city, and 1.37 inches at Jacksonville.

Tides along the coast ranged about a foot above normal, with offshore seas running 4 to 6 feet, causing a rough surf along the beaches.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami warned that if Dennis developed as anticipated and stayed on its projected course it could threaten the coasts of Georgia and the Carolinas.

At 6 a.m. EDT, the storm's center was near latitude 30.0 north, longitude 80.9 west, or about 40 miles east-southeast of Jacksonville. Top winds remained mainly to the east of the storm center.

Gale warnings were posted today for the extreme northeast Florida coast and the coasts of Georgia and South Carolina.

Meanwhile, a tropical depression formed in the central Atlantic about 1,150 miles east of the Leeward Islands. Its highest winds were 35 mph, 4 mph short of tropical-storm status and far below the 75 mph needed to qualify as a hurricane. No significant strengthening was anticipated today.

Boats and four-wheel-drive vehicles were used to evacuate flooded neighborhoods southwest of Miami Tuesday.

Gov. Bob Graham called out units of the Florida National Guard to aid in the evacuation of homes in southwestern Dade County. About 70 people were moved from their homes Tuesday, and local officials opened three storm shelters.

Dennis had picked up speed in the afternoon after stalling for more than 24 hours over the Everglades.

The storm's rains tapered off in Florida in the afternoon. But nearly 13 inches of rain fell in the Miami community of West Kendall in the 24 hours ending at 8 p.m. Tuesday. In Homestead, 35 miles southwest of Miami, 10.02 inches fell, forcing residents of trailer parks and subdivisions to move to higher ground. Miami received 4.01 inches of rain and West Palm Beach received 3.73.

For three days, the southwestern part of Dade County bore the brunt of Dennis' winds and rain. Streets were awash, and water seeped into underground utility cables, disrupting service. Children paddling canoes and skiffs caught fish in the streets of Naranja, a district north of Homestead.

Surgical Scrub Suits: "Hot" Fashion Item

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Surgical scrub suits show up on people in parks, on bikes, meandering in supermart aisles, at the movies, on the beach, behind the wheel of pickups, puffing along the jogging trail — almost anywhere.

Oh, yes. They also show up on doctors, nurses and other types assigned to operating room duty in the nation's 6,000 hospitals. The original purpose of a surgical scrub suit.

While they're showing up at all these non-hospital places, sometimes a surgeon searches in vain for one inside a hospital, claims a report in "Hospitals," journal of the American Hospital Association.

The fact that scrub suits are showing up as a "hot" fashion item all too often pains hospitals in the cashbox, too, says the report.

The situation is expected to worsen. The report says fashion trendsetters even predict the scrub suit may replace the western look.

That may be so. But to say the scrub suits are a "hot" fashion item means more than they are popular — in too many cases, it means they're stolen.

Authorities say ripped off scrub suits are costing individual hospitals thousands of dollars a year. The pilferage has led to some elaborate procedures to end the drain — including machine-dispensing of the outfits. One such machine is activated by an authorized person's plastic card.

The machine was imported after several years of success in hospitals in Europe. It is called Autovalet.

"Much like the now popular automated bank tellers, the Autovalet works 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, dispensing scrub uniforms to staff members and recording frequency of use," the "Hospitals" report said.

"Once the uniform is returned to the Autovalet's soiled-linen chute, laundered, and replaced on its hanger, the employee is credited for the returned garment."

The popularity of scrub suits also has led a hospital supplier to turn out scrub suits for retail fashion outlets. This gives a person with scrub suit fever a choice: either get one the pilferage way or buy a genuine copy.

Superior Surgical Manufacturing Company, the firm making the suits for retail outlets, claims comfort is the main reason people hanker after operating room togs. Superior's Spencer Cohen, a vice president, says it's a lot of hogwash to call popularity of scrub suits a fashion fad.

He traces the popularity to "the realization by the public that the suits are comfortable garments that are absorbent, that look good, and that feel good."

"There is no rhyme or reason why style has to play a role in being comfortable," he told "Hospitals."

Recently, Cohen's company circulated a new line of sportswear scrub shirts and pants dyed in high-fashion colors.

"By putting the suits into the retail market," Cohen said, "we feel that we are doing the hospital industry a favor, because previously, if a person were to want a scrub suit, he would have had to be part and parcel to a scheme in order to get one."

Some hospital auxiliaries, such as the one at St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Centerville, Iowa, have capitalizing on scrub suit fever by selling scrub suits for a profit — with the hospital's permission, of course.

No one knows for certain why ordinary citizens want to puff their egos by strutting about town looking like either a doctor, a nurse or an intern.

Kelly F. Guncheon, staff editor of "Hospitals," and author of the report, said, "Perhaps it started with the medical student who forgot to take off his scrub suit after laboratory class, wore the suit home...

"Perhaps it was the popular television programs with Doctors Casey, Kildare, and Welby who wore scrub apparel that looked extensively tailored, neatly pressed, and consequently very attractive and prestigious.

"Perhaps it is a version of the 'Holiday Inn Syndrome' that compels people to take as souvenirs anything that seems inexpensive yet useful — ashtrays, glasses or towels — whether it be hotel, restaurant, or hospital property."

"Hospitals" gives this size up of losses by some hospitals:

—The Henry Ford Hospital System in Detroit estimates scrub suit thefts came to $18,000 in 1978; $35,000 in 1979; $70,000 in 1980.

—Boston Hospital Laundry Association, a 28-hospital laundry co-op, said scrub suit pilferage now costs the co-op $20,000 a month.

— Northwestern Memorial Hospital, Chicago, recently attempted to cut down $80,000 a year scrub suit losses by having the operating room clothing printed with these words: "PROPERTY of N.M.H. NEVER SOLD — UNAUTHORIZED POSSESSION OF THIS ARTICLE CONSTITUTES THEFT BY CONVERSION." An in-hospital poster campaign showed the front of the scrub shirt with those words on it and proclaimed in big letters — "We really mean it!"

—Hospital Services Inc., a shared-service laundry organization that serves four large metropolitan hospitals in South Carolina, estimated that 75 percent of the $200,000 it spent on scrub suit replacement was due to theft.

"The list keeps growing," Guncheon said, "and the figures are more and more staggering.

"For example, recent statistics from a major textile supplier indicate that scrub pants are being replaced at more than three times the usual rate and scrub shirts at almost four times the norm.

"Although the problem seems to peak during the summer months, the trend may lose its seasonal variations this year.

"Clothing industry spokesmen predict that scrub apparel may soon replace the 'western look' in the fashion marketplace.

"Hospital officials are naturally concerned."

Additional Freezer Space Saves Time, Money, and Work

By the time you stock up on hamburger, hot dogs, chicken, ice cream, frozen juices, and all of the other summer picnic supplies, the freezer space on top or along side your refrigerator vanishes in no time. Many refrigerator/freezers provide you with just enough space to store the necessities and nothing else. "If this situation exists in your home, an additional freezer might be the answer." A separate freezer can provide space to store a wide variety of foods and offers the opportunity to capture the freshness of summer produce while it is plentiful, and less expensive.

Food freezers come in two types—chest and upright—and in a variety of sizes. When figuring how much storage space you'll need, consider the amount of floor space available and the size of your family. The general rule provided by the USDA is to allow six cubic feet per family member. If space is at a premium in your home, consider a compact chest freezer which can still offer the conveniences of freezer living in a minimum amount of space.

Here are some tips that can help you save time, money and work. Store items carefully...air tight packaging is the secret of success in freezing foods. Use containers and wrappings that are designed for freezing, and seal them securely to keep natural juices in and air out. Date and label every package put into your freezer, and then use the oldest package first. Rememeber, that as food freezes it expands, so don't fill your containers too full. Otherwise the top may come off or, if it is glass, it may crack or break.

Blanching is a very important step in freezing your vegetables. Most vegetables that can be frozen, should be blanched. For best results, be sure to follow blanching and freezer instructions found in a freezing guide. Since blanched vegetables are partially cooked, they require less cooking than fresh vegetables when they come from the freezer.

Fresh fruit, another glorious treat of the summer season, is as simple to prepare for freezing as it is good to eat. Select ripe, blemish-free fruits and taste them to be sure of good flavor. Wash and sort fruit carefully and then pack using one of three methods. Syrup pack preserves shape and texture of fruit best, but the syrup dilutes juices. Sugar pack is recommended for berries and rhubarb to be used with recipes calling for sugar and for fruits to be used on special diets.

Even when your freezer is loaded to capacity, there is still room to tuck in a few of the little things that can build your reputation as a fabulous cook. To add flavor to your soups, stews, and gravies, make up herb bouquets (small cheesecloth pouches filled with herbs). Pack the bouquets in bags or wrap them in foil and freeze. When needed, use the bouquets while still frozen. Grate orange or lemon peel, a teaspoon to a small piece of foil. Fold the peelings into a packet and freeze. Store the packets in a labeled bag and they will be handy when a recipe calls for either. Chopped nuts and dates may be frozen, too. Simply wash and slit the dates to remove the pits, then pack them into containers. For best results, leave head space then seal and freeze. Garlic butter can be prepared ahead of time and also stored in your freezer. Make a pound of it, freeze in individual portions on a cookie sheet and store in a polyethylene bag. A plastic ice cube tray will conveniently freeze soups, eggs, sauces, liquid, etc. When frozen, remove from tray and store in a polyethylene freezer bag and use as needed.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for saying that when adopted children become adults they have the right to know who their natural parents are, providing the natural parents want to be found.

I'm adopted, but I am not an adult yet. I love the parents who raised me very, very much, but I would like to know my natural mother. I often wonder, do I look like her? Is she happy? Do I have any half-sisters or brothers?

To my "Mom": Wherever you are, if you bore a daughter on Dec. 10, 1967, I love you.

SHARI (ADOPTED)

DEAR SHARI: Wherever your mother is, whether she reads your message or not, I know she loves you, too. Yes, I do feel strongly that adult adopted children have the right to know where they came from, but I also believe that no adopted child should intrude on the life of his natural parent, nor should a natural parent intrude on the life of a child once given up for adoption.

However, if a reunion is agreeable to both parties, it could complete the lives of all concerned.

There are two organizations where both natural parents and adoptees may register. Cross-matches are made, and information is exchanged only if both parties desire it:

ALMA, P.O. Box 154, Washington Bridge Station, New York, N.Y. 10033.

CUB, P.O. Box 573, Milford, Maine 01757.

DEAR ABBY: I just graduated from college and really treasured my diploma because I worked very hard for a long time to get it.

My mother was also proud, so she decided to surprise me and frame my diploma. Abby, instead of taking it to a professional framer, she took scissors and cut it down to make it fit an old $2 picture frame she happened to have lying around the house! When I saw it I nearly fainted. The diploma is noticeably reduced in size and looks terrible.

My mother refuses to admit she did anything wrong. I want two things from her: 1) an apology; 2) I want her to arrange with the college to send me a replacement. I know I could request a replacement of that diploma myself, but I think since she's the one who mutilated it, she should replace it.

She reads you faithfully in the Los Angeles Times and respects your judgment, so please put your answer in the paper.

Ponder Amnesia Link In Missing Ohio Funds

By ROBERT E. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio is looking for $1.3 million in unaccounted-for money and the one person who might solve the mystery apparently has amnesia and can't help.

The story of Jane Boerger, 48, former head of the cashier's department in the state treasurer's office, unfolded Tuesday following the release of a state auditor's report.

State Auditor Thomas Ferguson said the report showed there was a $1.3 million discrepancy between the amount shown by the cashier's office as its checking account balance and the amount listed in bank records.

The report also said numerous records, which might account for the money, were missing from Jan. 7, 1979 through June 30, 1980 — the period covered by the audit.

"We don't know that any money is missing," said a Ferguson aide.

The auditor's report did not claim illegal acts, nor did it make a finding for the recovery of the money.

It also said "inadequacies of financial record-keeping in the cashier's department made it impossible to pursue the differences (in account balances) further."

Meanwhile, state Treasurer Gertrude Donahey and members of her staff recalled how Ms. Boerger left the office Jan. 17, 1980 — while the audit was in progress — and never returned.

That night, according to members of her family, the woman lapsed into a coma that lasted 10 days. Afterwards, doctors said, she had been stricken with hysterical amnesia and could not recall her past or anything about her work in the treasurer's office.

On Tuesday, she reportedly still had no recollection and was staying with relatives on a farm near Sidney in northwestern Ohio.

Deputy Treasurer Wayne Maloon recalled a strange pattern of behavior by Ms. Boerger in the days before she left, and he said it may have stemmed from his reprimanding her for keeping a messy office.

"I had kind of a hassle with her over her office," Maloon said, adding it was "in a disarray and not well-kept."

He said Ms. Boerger, who joined the treasurer's office in 1971, tended to do most of the cashier's work herself rather than delegate authority.

"I think she just tried to do too much in this office, and it just got to her," Maloon said.

Mrs. Donahey, now in her 11th year as treasurer, reviewed the report with the auditor's staff and said she already has moved to install more computer technology to avoid further accounting problems.

Ferguson's examiners said it was impossible to track the money through BancOhio National Bank.

Oyster Crop Recovering

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — The state's oyster crop is recovering from 74 years of declining harvests, state officials say, but remains far below the peak years of the turn of the century.

According to the state Division of Marine Fisheries, North Carolina fishermen in 1976 hauled in their smallest crop ever — 66,000 bushels. But harvests have been improving for the last five years, culminating in last year's take of 139,000 bushels.

But that is still a far cry from the 1902 peak of 1.8 million bushels.

Bob Pittman, assistant director of the marine fisheries office, said generating the success has been a simple matter of providing places for oysters to grow. That means dumping enough old shells into the brackish tidepools so that freshly spawned oyster larvae will have somewhere to bed down, he said.

Go After Crime Cartels

A federal task force has recommended 64 steps for curbing violent crime.

At the heart of it would be an effort to take criminals off the streets.

To do that the group recommends the building of more jails and asking Congress for $2 billion in federal aid to assist states in building new prisons.

Co-Chairman Illinois Gov. James Thompson, said "all parts of the report which aim at taking violent offenders off the street and through the criminal justice system efficiently, fairly and convincingly have in mind one end, and that is to take the violent in our society and put them where they can't injure inooncent citizens, and that means penitentiaries."

Few would criticize that aim. Clearly violent crime is rampant in our society and something needs to be done to make our streets and homes safe.

What troubles us is that putting violent people in jail is done everyday and it seems to be having little effect on such crimes.

We suspect that the drug culture is behind many of the wanton acts of violence and that brings us to organized crime which we believe controls most of the drug traffic.

If law enforcement were to properly go after organized crime the drug traffic could be curtailed and that should have its effects on violent street crime.

The petty street criminal should go to jail, if he can be properly convicted under our constitution. Let's not forget, however, that there is something much bigger controlling crime. When government decides to go after the crime cartels petty crime will dry up, and huge amounts of previously illegal money can be channeled into productive enterprise.

Things Stay The Same

In the strange world of United States' Middle Eastern policy, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, Jr. has announced that the suspension of shipment of warplanes to Israel has been lifted.

Shipments of the aircraft were held up following Israel's raid on an Iraqi nuclear reactor.

The suspension was designed to offset an uproar from Arab states in the Middle East which are friendly to the United States.

Now the shipment of F-16 jet fighters will resume and our Middle Eastern relations will probably be the same — friendly nations will continue to be friendly and our enemies will stay as they are.

Our support of Israel is well-known but we are also generous with our friends in the Middle East. It's a delicate balance that all concerned seem to understand, and we can be thankful for that.

THIS AFTERNOON

Creating New Jobs

By GOV. JIM HUNT
(Bill Noblitt is on vacation)

RALEIGH — "Chips" — some people call them the crude oil of the 1980s. The Japanese call them the "rice of industry."

One "chip" is smaller than your fingernail and can process huge amounts of information that once required room-sized computers. We are increasingly becoming a computer-oriented society, and "chips" are the raw materials of this new technology.

As governor, I am working to attract the microelectronics industry, which produces the "chips," and other high-technology industries to North Carolina to provide more high-skilled, high-paying jobs for our people.

The 1981 General Assembly, at my urging, provided $24.4 million for a Microelectronics Center of North Carolina. North Carolina can become the East Coast center for this industry, and that is why I urged establishment of this new Microelectronics Center.

The Center will be a magnet for microelectronics research and development companies. And companies that use the "chips" will be attracted to all parts of our state.

A First

Our Microelectronics Center is the first in the nation to combine strong academic and research institutions and strong state leadership and support. The Center will bring together the resources of five separate universities, an outstanding community college system plus the private research capabilities of the Research Triangle Institute.

The universities participating are North Carolina State University, Duke University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, North Carolina A&T State University and the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. The State Community College System will work closely with the Center to equip North Carolinians with the kind of technical training needed by the microelectronics industry and its support industries.

The value of microelectronics production in the United States is expected to grow from $8 billion last year to $20 billion in 1985. The microelectronics industry and its support industries are looking for room in California where most are now clustered.

That kind of overcrowding cannot happen here. Expansion in Silicon Valley is strictly limited by the Santa Cruz Mountains on one side and the San Francisco Bay on the other. But, in North Carolina, the industry can locate throughout the state, with no real physical limitations.

To have the equivalent in North Carolina of the overcrowding in the San Francisco Peninsula, two million people would have to live and work in a seven-mile-wide strip along I-85 from Mebane to Greensboro.

Ready

We are prepared to do the kind of planning needed to ensure adequate housing, water and so forth as a result of the industry locating here.

North Carolina is attactive to most industries already. That is proven by the more than $8.5 billion in industrial investment announced by industry since January 1977 and the more than 135,000 new industrial industrial jobs that will result from that investment.

Through the Microelectronics Center, we can provide the trained people and research capabilities needed by the microelectronics industry, and at the same time provide the overall atmosphere desired by all industry. General Electric's decision to locate its major new microelectronics research and development facility in North Carolina proves that we can attract that industry.

And attracting those companies here means more high-paying jobs for our people. In January the average hourly manufacturing wage in North Carolia was $5.77. In electronics it was $6.90. Nationally, in December 1980 that wage for production workers in the microelectronic industry was $7.22.

For too long, North Carolina has been on the bottom rungs of the ladder in terms of per-capita income, manufacturing and so on. If we're going to be more than 49th or 50th or 39th or 40th, we need a dramatic breakthrough.

I believe the

To the editor:

Recently, I read a very good article in the paper which was ruined by the attention on abbreviations used. I do not think good reading should be hampered by print or the modern style of spelling (abbreviation).

Could the use of Ms. for a married woman in the business field have gotten started by the "Miss America" contest? That is, the postal service abbreviations, use of Ms. as for Mississippi, since the women in Mississippi try so hard and so young for that title?

When did the Ms. business begin? Does it suggest availability to men, that the woman is "foot loose and fancy free?" Does it put down family life and promote single life? (In Dallas, there are more apartments than homes — the city in Texas, not the tv show).

WHILE YOU'RE TRYING TO ENJOY YOUR SUMMER-

BY ART BUCHWALD

The Syndicate At Work

It may be my imagination but every summer the syndicate bosses hold a briefing just as I'm about to go on vacation.

The intelligence briefing officer is standing in front of the map of the island.

He has a pointer. "Our agents inform us that Buchwald will be vacationing here in this house. His bedroom is located up here. Our objective is to see that he gets no sleep. Any suggestions?"

"The roof next to the house needs repair. I was going to do it in the fall, but I could start pounding away at 7 in the morning as soon as Buchwald arrives."

"Good thinking, Tashetego. That should take care of the morning. Now what do we do once he's to hit the ball?"

"Are you certain your tree saw can make enough noise to disturb his game?"

"No sweat. I took the muffler off it this morning."

"Anybody got any ideas for lunch? He usually has a sandwich at the snack bar on the beach."

"I could start up the water skiing motorboat. If I run it close enough to the shore you can't hear yourself think."

The man with the pointer said, "Good. Now we have discovered that Buchwald plans to work in the afternoon from 2 to 4. How do we take care of that?"

"Send a team over to cut his lawn as soon as he starts typing."

"We can't cut his lawn everyday."

"We can cut all the lawns around him. That should take a month."

"What does he do after he types?" someone asked

"He takes a nap."

"We could have all the airplanes that land and take off at the airport buzz his house first," someone suggested.

"All right. We'll have low-level flights from 4 to 6, no more than 500 feet off the ground at irregular intervals. Now this is most important. Our source says when Buchwald is on the island, the hour that means the most to him is from 6 to 7 when he can sit on the porch with a cold glass of beer and look out to sea. How do we ruin that moment?"

"Cut his lawn again?"

"That's not very imaginative, Edgarton."

"I've got it. We send the garbage truck around at 6 o'clock at night."

ART BUCHWALD

"Won't we have to pay overtime to the truck drivers?"

"What's money if we can ruin the guy's holiday?"

"What time does he go to sleep?"

"Usually around 11."

"I belong to a motorcycle club. We could come over and rev up our engines in front of his house for three hours."

"Excellent. You've all done your homework. Are there any questions?"

"I have one. Why are we going to all this trouble to drive a guy on vacation up the wall?"

The leader said, "Because he's there."

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 19, the 231st day of 1981. There are 134 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 19, 1934, a German plebiscite approved the vesting of sole executive power in Adolph Hitler as fuehrer.

On this date:

In 1940, Italian forces took British Somaliland from British forces in World War II.

In 1960, a Moscow court convicted American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers of espionage and sentenced him to 10 years in prison.

In 1973, George Papadopoulos was sworn in as the first president of Greece.

And in 1977, China's Communist party, holding its first Congress since the death of chairman Mao tse-Tung, elected a new central committee.

Ten years ago: AFL-CIO President George Meany said he had "absolutely no faith" in President Nixon's ability to manage the U.S. economy.

Five years ago: President Gerald Ford was nominated at the Republican National Convention to seek a full term in office. Ford picked Kansas Sen. Bob Dole as his running mate.

One year ago: A Saudi Arabian jetliner caught fire shortly after taking off from Riyadh, killing all 265 persons on board.

Today's birthday: Jockey Willie Shoemaker is 50 years old.

Thought for Today: It is never too late to be what you might have been. — George Eliot, British novelist (1819-1880).

Strong Brew By Stockman

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — As washington's August doldrums began, budget director David Stockman crossed the Potomac to tell Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that future military spending must be cut deeply — a shocker forcing a policy crisis for Ronald Reagan that threatens his principles and his goals.

Stockman's visit to the Pentagon signalled political retreat on substantial short-term reductions in Social Security costs. But his desperate search for other ways to cut the budget connotes a more basic abandonment: loss of faith that President Reagan's tax cuts can generate additional revenue, ae prescribed by the Laffer Curve.

Indeed, Stockman is bracing himself for $70 billion budget deficits, not much smaller than those projected by his Democratic critics. They are predicated on continued double-digit interest rates that escalate debt service. So, Stockman may be tempted by the lure of enormous budgetary savinge to seek lowered interest rates by a radical route: the gold standard.

Slumbering here is a witch's brew of seemingly unconnected problem issuee: defense, Social Security, budget deficits, interest rates and, most important, overall economic policy. Splitting wood on his California mountaintop in the glow of his tax triumph, Reagan has yet to signal his interest in it all. But serious policy decisions await him and senior aides when they return to Washington in September.

Stockman is the principal brewmaster. No member of the Reagan team has been more steadfast in pursuing a radical economic policy, including tax rate reduction. But the bookkeeper's mentality pervading the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) is taking over. Abandoning supply-side faith, he has accepted Keynesian dogma that the Laffer Curve — higher revenues from lower tax rates — will not work in an inflationary climate.

It was those inexorable budget deficits that caused Stockman's premature advocacy of Social Security reform that probably cost the Republicans a congressional seat in Mississippi and have given the Democrats their only, political leverage this year. Stockman has come to the reluctant conclusion that the administration cannot embark on any short-term Social Security scheme ambitious enough to remedy the budget plight.

That isolates the huge Pentagon budget as Stockman's obvious target. The defense oommunity for weeks has expected the OMB director to drop the shoe, and he obliged in his Aug. 7 meeting with Weinberger. Stockman argued, ingeniously, that the "get well" boost in real defense spending this year was 19 percent, meaning that future spending boosts are 9.4 percent a year above the anemic Carter years' not the 7 percent Reagan target.

Consequently, Stockman proposed a $100 billion defense cut between now and fiscal year 1984, which would devastate Pentagon plans for modernization of non-nuclear forces. A listless Weinberger made no response, but he is expected to resist etrenuously.

So also may Ronald Reagan, who has not concealed vastly greater affection for defense than Social Security. On the 1980 campaign stump, Reagan specifically gave defense a clear priority over budget balancing. But condoning the $70 billion deficit raised by Stockman ie another matter.

A few insightful Reagan administration officials are desperately seeking an exit from this trap marked "lower interest rates." Defenders say the Laffer Curve surely will work if only interest rates would fall quickly enough and low enough to let reduced tax rates do their job. In any event, a 9 percent interest rate today would save $30 billion a year in the future — enough by itself to finesse the defense cuts.

But Reagan policy today is so rigidly focused on regulating the money supply that the Treasury does not even hope for 9 percent interest rates but, on the contrary, offers 30-year bonds likely to yield 15 percent. The same policymakers, headed by Treasury Under Secretary Beryl Sprinkel, abhor the thought of seeking quick drop in both inflation and interest rates by making dollars convertible to gold at fixed rate.

The Reagan administration is filled with closet gold bugs (including Stockman), whether the administration seeks to reopen the gold window, cloeed 10 years ago on Aug. 15 by Richard M. Nixon and John B. Connally, depends on Ronald Reagan.

Earlier this summer, Professor Arthur Laffer stressed the urgency of gold at a regular meeting between the Strength For Today

MAN THE STRIVER

Someone has said that man is the only creature who refuses to remain what he is. He is different from the lower creatures in that he has a soul, and while this lays open for him a great destiny, it also involves him in no end of trouble. The animals live and die, and some people envy their placid existence.

But should we? "Strive to enter in by the narrow gate," said Jesus. We cannot simply live and die as the creatures. We are created in such a fashion that we cannot be content to remain as we are. Sometimes we are hounded by frustration because we agonize to excell, to triumph.

Why? Because, as the Bible testifies, we are the sons of God, and, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." Because we have upon us the image of God, we cannot remain as we are born.

The creatures of the animal kingdom were made to be in subjection. Man was made to live in eternal fellowship with God. — Elisha Douglass

'Hard Assets' People Angered

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The hard assets people feel they've been given "a kick in the teeth with a hobnail boot" by the president and Congress, and they're ready to fight about it.

That's what one of them said in a newsletter recently, but rather than licking his wounds, he's out to lick the enemy. "Those people need to know that we cannot be casually dumped on," he announced.

Howard Ruff, a financial adviser who sells a $145-a-year newsletter, conducts seminars, writes books, testifies, and appears on radio and television, is very hardnosed about hard assets.

Hard assets include gold, silver, stamps, coins and land, which have been highly attractive to people worried about the deterioration of paper money, economic mismanagement and possible economic collapse.

The hard assets people believe their holdings — unlike soft assets, such as certificates of deposits and savings — will maintain value through the economic ups, downs and collapses that threaten.

So what does Congress do? It eliminates from use in individual, tax-deferred pension plans the same hard assets that are so important in the investment philosophy of Ruff and others of like mind.

Reagan then signed the law, completing Ruff's "a kick in the groin and a punch in the kidneys." It really hurt. It called for action.

On Aug. 7 Ruff blasted Rep. James Shannon, D-Mass., the Mutual Savings Banks Association and a "negligent Congress and White House" for a "sneaky amendment to the president's tax cut bill that will affect all hard-money investors."

What the amendment is designed to do, says Ruff, is "divert money from flowing into hard assets, and send it back in CD's." In other words, into the inflation-infested vaults of the soft-money crowd.

Nothing wrong with such investments, says Congress, but the whole idea of granting tax deductions is to get money into more productive uses. If the money were to be invested in CD's, for example, it would be reinvested in factories, in homebuilding and the like.

The hard-assets people maintain they have a right, even a moral obligation, to protect their economic futures by investing in items that have a proven record of being able to hold value. They think Uncle Sam is close to tampering with private rights.

Ruff seeks immediate legislation to repeal the offensive part, Section 314, of the tax law. He asks people to write a personal letter to the president, to senators and congressmen. And he seeks contributions too.

"This is an issue of great consequence to those of us who believe you're dead without hard asset strategies to hedge for your future," says the editor of "The Ruff Times," which claims 170,000 customers.

Police Feared Another Bomb

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Police pressed to make arrests early this month in the extortion bombing at Harveys Resort Hotel-Casino for fear that the first anniversary of the incident Aug. 27 would be marked with another blast, a federal prosecutor says.

John Birges Sr., the high-rolling gambler indicted in the case Tuesday with his two sons and three other people, has been accused by the FBI of stealing dynamite to build a second bomb.

Agents said they feared the bomb would be used either at Harveys, near Lake Tahoe, or at the Bank of America's headquarters in San Francisco.

A federal grand jury indicted Birges, 59, accused of masterminding the plot; his two sons, John Waldo Birges Jr., 20, and James William Birges, 19; Ella Joan Williams, 47, with whom the elder Birges lived; and Terry Lee Hall, 25, and Willis "Bill" Brown, 50, both of Fresno, Calif. The Birges family lives in Clovis, Calif.

The indictments charge them with conspiracy to attempt extortion, interstate commerce in the pursuit of unlawful activity, interstate transport in the aid of extortion and the transport of explosives. The maximum penalty is 40 years in prison and a $40,000 fine.

The six were expected to appear before a U.S. magistrate today in Fresno for a removal order. Arraignment was to follow in Reno.

The two younger Birgeses may be treated lightly because they cooperated in the investigation of their father, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ed Kane said Tuesday. He said he expected them to testify against the others.

John Birges Jr. was charged Friday with perjuring himself before a federal grand jury in February in Reno.

The bomb was wheeled into the Stateline, Nev. resort disguised as a shipment of office equipment. A note demanded $3 million for the instructions on defusing it. The resort raised the cash, but no one showed up at a rendezvous point to claim it.

The bomb went off in the evacuated resort, causing no injuries, while officers tried to disarm it by remote control. The resort reopened in May after a $12 million renovation.

Birges was once a coddled guest at Harveys and lost thousands at the casino's blackjack tables, resort officials said. But Kane said the motive for the bombing "was purely and simply money."

"I don't know that there was any heavy revenge motive," he said.

Kane said investigators were concerned that a repeat bombing would be attempted on the anniversary of the explosion.

Kane described the elder Birges as a self-taught electronics wizard who gained familiarity with explosives while doing landscape work.

"His house is a real heaven for any electronics freak," Kane said. "He has developed over the years a practical knowledge of electronics that would be the envy of many better-educated experts."

The three Birgeses are accused of stealing dynamite from the Helms Creek hydroelectric project east of Fresno. Ms. Williams is alleged to have typed the extortion note, and Brown and Hall are accused of placing the bomb inside the casino.

Before going into debt at Harveys, the elder Birges received full "high-roller" treatment, including free rooms, liquor and food, Harveys President Eldon Campbell said.

Campbell said Birges owed the casino about $15,000 and was denied credit about six months before the bombing, although he occasionally gambled with his own money until the casino was closed by the explosion.

Legal Actions Plague UNC

WASHINGTON (AP) In an attempt to derail a desegregation agreement between the University of North Carolina and the U.S. Department of Education, the NAACP Legal Defense Fund has filed a court brief claiming the settlement is inadequate.

Joseph L. Rauh, who represents in the Defense Fund and other plaintiffs in the case, said the brief was filed Monday in the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The brief asserts that the settlement failed to meet the criteria established by the courts in earlier phases of the case. It also claims the plan resembles one submitted by the state in 1974 and disapproved by the courts at the time as falling short of establishing an equal educational system for blacks and whites.

The settlement calls on the state to conduct recruitment activities which inform prospective applicants of the state's nondiscrimination policy, set limited student desegregation goals over a five-year period and authorize additional programs at the state's predominantly black institutions.

The plaintiffs maintain the programs in question do not represent a new funds commitment.

Plaintiffs also contend that the agreement fails to suggest ways of closing the gap between the percentages of black and white high school graduates entering universities in the state, the percentages of blacks and whites from the state who graduate and the percentages of blacks and whites entering graduate schools when compared to their representation in the state's population.

The lawsuit complains that no provision was made for a system-wide commitment to improve the ratio of black faculty and staff to white ones; that there are no plans to end program duplication at predominantly black and predominanty white schools in the same area; and that there was no commitment to avoid changes in the system which might interfere with implementing desegregation.

The plaintiffs said the district court's acceptance of the settlement "would nullify 11 years of patient effort by (them) to secure vindication of their rights so long violated. It would cause the unravelling of the entire proocess set up by, and under, this court's 1973 decision, to desegregate public higher education in the nation."

Two Wrecks Investigated

An estimated $2,200 damage resulted from two traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 6:15 p.m. mishap on Memorial Drive, 75 feet north of the Glenwood Drive intersection, involving cars driven by Donald Ray Daughtridge of 309 Hillcrest Dr., and Patricia Summerlin Cates of Route 2, Winterville.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $450 to the Daughtridge vehicle and $1,000 to the Cates auto.

An 8 a.m. collision at the intersection of Elm and 14th Streets involved a car driven by Angelo Anthony Volpe of 109 Queen Anne's Rd., and a truck operated by Thurston Roosevelt Boyd of 407 Perkins St.

Police set damage at $600 to the Volpe car and $150 to the Boyd truck.

Falkland School To Begin Year

FALKLAND — The students of the Falkland Elementary School area are to report to school at 8:15 on August 31. This will be a full day of school with lunch being served. Lunch for the K-3 students is 60 cents and grades 4-5 students is 75 cents.

Bus routes and times are basically the same as last year. A county-wide schedule will be published at a later date. Any kindergartern students who have not preregistered must bring their birth certificates. Persons having further questions should call the school, at 752-7820.

Understudy Pinch Hits

NEW YORK (AP) — The classic "My Fair Lady" is back on Broadway — with a real-life subplot straight from "42nd Street" — the tale of a young actress called to step in for an ailing star.

Understudy Nancy Ringham — a 26-year-old with seven performances under her belt and two lucky pennies in her change purse — was thrust into the limelight Tuesday night to co-star opposite Rex Harrison.

Cheryl Kennedy, originally cast as Eliza Doolittle, withdrew Monday night after her laryngitis developed into a severe case of nodes on the vocal cords.

"It's all happened so fast," said Miss Ringham, who as a child used to listen to the soundtrack that made Julie Andrews famous, "never dreaming that would someday be me."

While Harrison had been insistent on having a British actress play the part and had said Miss Kennedy was his personal choice, "he's been wonderful, helping me and being there during this trying time," his new co-star said.

With all 1,900 opening-night tickets sold and her parents, two brothers and a sister in front seats, the young singer — who a year ago was waiting tables in a New York restaurant — had "a few butterflies in the old stomach, to say the least."

Women Viewed A Necessity To Motorcycle Gangs

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The motorcycle gangs that have taken root in North Carolina and South Carolina are fueled in part by women who are attracted by a free ride, but end up supporting the bikers with their bodies.

The seemingly unending supply of such women, and the lives they lead, formed the basis for part four of The Charlotte Observer's five-part series on motorcycle gangs, released in its Wednesday editions.

"I don't understand it, but the girls say there's something magical about a motorcycle," says John Reilly, a district attorney from Media, Pa., who has studied the phenomenon as director of a regional task force on motorcycle gangs.

"Once they ride on that motorcycle, that's it. Eventually, they'll do anything. The gangs just wear them out and cast them off like old shoes."

According to a Charlotte police officer who monitors the gangs: "She's treated kindly at first, shown the art of sex and given free drugs. Then she's put to work as a prostitute. She's hooked on drugs. Her mind is no longer hers, and she submits to all their desires. She becomes a slave and supports them with her body."

A typical example, officials say, is a prostitute known to her customers as Charlie.

Though only in her 20s, she has the look of a woman with bitter wisdom.

"They could kill me tomorrow," she told a reporter June 27, squinting through the acrid smoke.

"I mean, I've led a full life. I've been a biker's old lady."

But the life of a free-wheeling biker's moll is losing its luster.

Her husband, a former member of the Outlaws, had been beaten by his own gang a few months earlier.

Like other biker women, Charlie is part of a surreal society — a midnight world of Quaaludes and sex with strangers on plastic sheets, of stale beer smells and strip joints, boredom and fear.

Charlie is one of the lucky ones. As Alvin's "old lady," she is the property of one man. Other women ride this ragged fringe with fewer guarantees, as "mamas," or common property of the gangs.

Either way, the women are vital to the gangs' existence.

They make the money, take the heat, salve the wounds and cry at the funerals. And in all probability, they'll be replaced when they get old.

Police experts estimate there are hundreds of women in the Carolinas who are controlled by the gangs and their members.

A gang of 12 members might have 15 or 20 women, some regular girlfriends, some hangers-on. All are white, and most are in their teens or early 20s, rebellious and impressionable.

Most are simply used — as housemaids, hustlers, concubines, spies and drug peddlers — often under circumstances that amount to slavery.

Whether they are mamas or steady girlfriends, the women are expected to support the gang.

They do as they're told, work where they're placed and turn over their wages to their boyfriends, who give them allowances.

An enterprising young prostitute can make more than $1,000 a week, according to police experts and Observer interviews with six current and former biker women. Most interviews were obtained on condition that the women not be identified.

"It's like shining shoes after a while," said one former Outlaws prostitute of her life in a massage parlor. "You just take 'em one after the other."

Police believe the prostitution may front for illegal drug deals, and that women often are used as fronts for vehicle registrations, deeds of trust and other legal transactions.

It isn't unusual for an entire chapter's vehicles to be registered to one or two trusted women, officials said. Members of the Hell's Angels in Durham, Winston-Salem and Charlotte each have women who serve on paper as owners of as many as 12 vehicles.

In Charleston, police issued four pistol permits to Patricia Jo Arnold in 1979 before learning Ms. Arnold was the girlfriend of Hell's Angel Terry Dale Hyatt.

The idea of women as objects is so well defined in the biker world that female degradation is a form of accomplishment, rewarded with patches the bikers wear on their denim vests.

What attracts women to the gangs is a mystery to parents and police, and often to the women themselves. But many of the women who ride with the gangs share an unarticulated contempt for middle-class conventions.

Some are high school dropouts from small towns where life as a teenager can seem an endless stream of soda fountains, soap operas and baby-sitting jobs.

Life on big-city strips soon puts them in the company of outlaw motorcycle gangs.

Even the steady girlfriends and wives are thought of as property, and some wear patches or tattoos identifying them as such.

"I'm proud to be his property," said Gail Grayson, wife of Pagan leader Michael "White Bear" Grayson, who lives in Pilot Mountain. "What's wrong with that?"

Most biker women realize that men call the shots. If they forget, they're quickly reminded.

Yet women develop emotional bonds for gang members that are not easily broken.

Police have photographs of them - bruised and bloodied from a beating. In the end, no charges are filed.

And those who run away often return, either voluntarily or by force.

"It's hard for us to understand," says a Charlotte detective who is counseling the parents of a recent Hell's Angels runaway who are trying to keep their daughter home. "But all it takes is a voice on the phone, and they'll come right back. It's like a cult."

Boating Incident Brings Charges

Two Beaufort County men pled guilty in District Court last week to charges involving the careless and negligent operation of a boat and skis on the Tar River August 12.

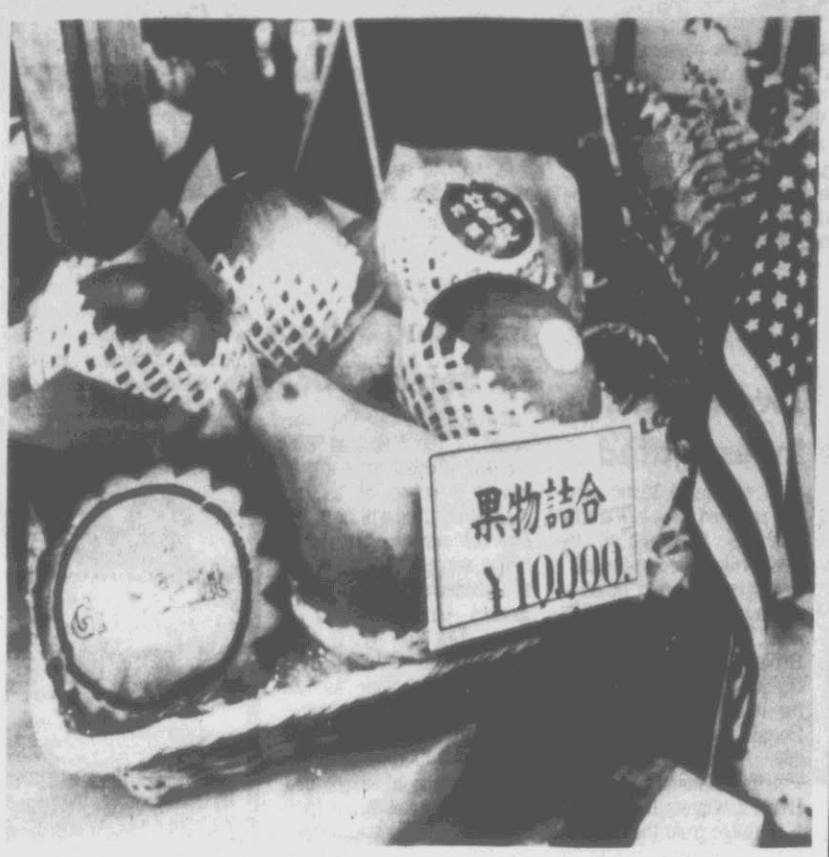

Tony Blanton, 19 of Washington, who pled guilty to a charge of careless and negligent manipulation of water skis, was ordered to pay a $100 fine and costs, while Lewis Sumrell, 23 of Chocowinity, pled guilty to charged of operating a motor boat in a reckless and negligent manner and manipulating water skis in a reckless and negligent manner.

Judge Herbert O. Phillips, who ordered Sumrell held in the Pitt County jail for two days before sentencing, ordered him to pay a $250 fine and court costs.

North Carolina Wildlife Protector Kay Dunn said the charges were made against Blanton and Sumrell after the pair wet three young women in a canoe on the river between Greenville and Yankee Hall.

Dunn noted that the women filed a complaint after they were sprayed with water from the boat and skis six times over a period of an hour.

An investigation of the incident by Dunn and Wildlife Protector Johnny Waters led to the arrest of the two men.

Declares 2 In Contempt

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Two men were found in contempt of court Monday — one for leaving the courtroom and the other for his actions in court.

Judge Robert E. Gaines ruled Deris Bell, 17, and Douglas Williams had "willfully and without justification or excuse" disrupted the court.

Before the court on a charge of first-degree burglary, Bell left while the jury was deliberating. Bell's lawyer said his young client had been frightened, but turned himself in when he learned Cornelius had issued an order for his arrest.

The jury found Bell innocent of the burglary charge, but Gaines sentenced him to seven days in jail and $35 for his absence without leave.

Williams had been called to appear in court Aug. 4 as a state witness in an assault case. Bailiff Terry Chisholm testified that Williams had been cautioned about his behavior several times during the day and attributed the behavior to intoxication.

Gaines postponed sentencing for two years and suggested Williams seek counseling for alcohol abuse.

Man Jailed In Shooting Death

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Carl Peterson, 43, of Lowell, was jailed without bond early Sunday and charged with murder in the shooting death of his brother-in-law, Gaston County police said.

Peterson is charged with the murder of Tommy Milburn Adair, 32. Officers said Adair was shot shortly after 3 a.m. at his Gastonia residence and died a few hours later.

Sgt. Mark Stewart said the shooting stemmed from a domestic quarrel concerning Peterson's 5-year-old daughter.

Gunboat Hijacker Meeting With French Officials

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — The leader of a band of anti-Khomeini Iranians who hijacked an Iranian gunboat last week met today with French naval authorities at the Mediterranean port of Toulon to discuss giving up the vessel, Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson announced.

Cheysson said the 160-foot gunboat Tabarzin would be returned to the Iranian government if it was surrendered. He said the possibility of asylum for the hijackers was being studied, although Iran's foreign minister warned against their being given refuge.

A French tug towed the Tabarzin from Marseille Tuesday night and it anchored 2½ miles off the French naval base at Toulon. It was flying the imperial Iranian flag.

A spokesman in Paris for the monarchist group that sponsored the hijacking said the leader of the commandos, Adm. Kamal Habibollahi, was negotiating with the French for fuel to continue his journey. He claimed the ship was still the seat of government for "Free Iran."

Cheysson said officials were not sure if any French laws had been broken and that was being reviewed.

Twenty heavily armed Iranian exiles, members of the pro-monarchy Azadegan group, seized the gunboat and its 31 Iranian crew members Thursday off the coast of Spain and sailed to the Moroccan port of Casablanca. It was one of three French-built gunboats being transferred from France to Iran. The other two were not attacked and were reported Tuesday in Oran, Algeria, on their way to Iran.

At Casablanca, the commandos threatened to blow up the gunboat, loaded with a large number of weapons and ammunition, unless they were provided with fuel and provisions.

Moroccan officials said they feared an explosion would destroy the port and complied with the demands. Then the hijackers took the boat to Marseille, France's chief Mediterranean port. They were believed heading for Egypt, where the late shah of Iran's heir, young self-proclaimed Shah Reza II, lives in exile.

In Marseille, the hijackers demanded more food and fuel to get them farther along and again threatened to blow up the boat if their demands were not met. After negotiations, they allowed French authorities to remove 29 members of the crew who asked to be returned to Iran but held on to the captain and another officer. They also agreed to be towed to Toulon, where they would do less damage if they may good on their threat to blow up the boat.

French Defense Minister Charles Hernu said Tuesday night the government would not provision the comandeered vessel and suggested that the hijackers take it back into international waters. However, he said it would be against tradition for the navy to force it to leave.

French officials said they believed the Tabarzin had enough fuel to travel between 150 and 200 miles.

Reminding France of the Iranian government's anger when it granted ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr asylum after his escape from Iran, Foreign Minister Mir Hossein Musavi said: "This adventurist act has once again put France to the test."

"Granting asylum to pirates is undoubtedly tantamount to legalizing terrorist actions on the high seas," Musavi declared, according to Tehran Radio.

Meanwhile, Bani-Sadr in an interview with The Associated Press said the U.S. government had given him permission to emigrate to the United States. But State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said the claim was "totally false," and another U.S. official in Washington called it "hogwash."

Bani-Sadr in the interview said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the revolutionary leader who made him president and then broke him, is subject to many weaknesses, ignorant in the fields of politics, economics and world affairs, and enjoys the support of only 15 to 20 percent of the Iranian people.

Khomeini in a broadcast speech called Bani-Sadr and his leftist supporters "flies who are in the last days of their lives" and challenged them to try to overthrow him.

CP&L Officials Look For Reactor Shutdowns

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. officials say scheduled and unscheduled outages at its nuclear plants will cause at least one nuclear unit to be out of service for most of 1982.

Lynn W. Eury, CP&L senior vice president for power supply, said in an interview Tuesday that maintenance and other major modifications will mean at least one of the three units will be down during 42 to 46 weeks next year. And that will end up costing customers in rate increases.

"The less time nuclear units operate, the higher overall your energy costs will be," Eury said.

It costs CP&L about half a cent to generate a kilowatt-hour from nuclear fuel, compared with 1.8 cents for coal, the next cheapest energy source.

The utility has already been plagued with a number of unscheduled shutdowns.

Brunswick Unit 1 near Southport has been out of service since April 17, most recently for turbine repairs, and Unit 2 was out of use for about a week last month. The 10-year-old Robinson nuclear plant near Hartsville, S.C. is also out of service, but is scheduled to be back on line by early September.

CP&L officials are hoping to delay what could be a yearlong operation in replacing steam tubing at Robinson bu reducing the plant's power output.

Scheduled shutdowns include a possible 12-week layoff for Robinson in January, Eury said, including removal of all fuel rods and inspection of the reactor core. Brunswick Unit 1 will be taken down in midsummer of 1982 for 20 to 24 weeks to replace steam condenser tubes corroded by salt water. And Unit 2 will be out for about 10 weeks next spring for work including refueling and safety modifications, Eury added.

The unusually high fuel costs incurred in May led to a request by the utility for permission to increase October and November bills by $4.66 per 1,000 kilowatt hours. If the N.C. Utilities Commission approves the request, the average residential customer's bill could increase from $52.75 to $57.41 per month.

Meanwhile, the commission's public staff is investigating the nuclear units.

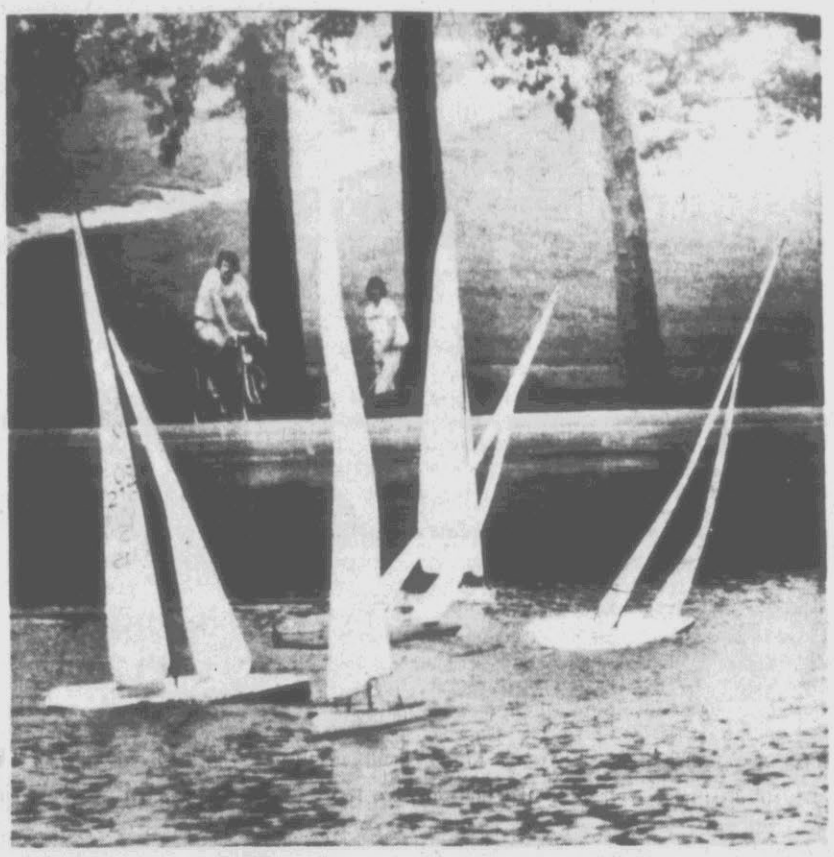

"One of the things we want to do is take a closer look at the operation of these units and determine what does lie ahead, next year, the year after and beyond," said staff director Robert Fishbach.

Eury said he hoped for significant improvements in the plants by then.

"If we look back at the performance of the Brunswick units over the past couple of years, it has not been as good as we would have expected," he said.

He added that in 1983, Brunswick 2 may face 17 weeks of down time for work including modifications of its gas filtration system.

"We're very hopeful that we'll see a significant improvement" in the plant's performance after the modification, Eury said, resulting in lower fuel costs.

Elephant On Water Skis

MARINA DEL REY, Calif. (AP) — The three-ton mass of gray streaking by on bright pink water skis could never be mistaken for a bathing beauty. But her water skiing prowess did turn heads.

Bubbles has been water skiing for only a year now, but she outdoes anyone in her class — the pachyderm class, that is.

Bubbles is a 14-year-old Indian elephant that stepped onto a pair of 22-foot water skis Tuesday and breezed around the main channel of this Los Angeles community at a modest 15 mph.

Local residents wondered if they were seeing what they thought they were seeing, and the harbor patrol reported getting many phone calls.

The elephant took to her skis to promote a new film "Honky Tonk Freeway."

Bubbles' manager, Hubert Wells of Animal Actors, said the elephant can ski for as long as an hour and a half, but Tuesday's outing was confined to 20 there are two-bles, however, does have to use all four legs. There are two-foot wells on each ski the same size as her feet.

"The rope that pulls her is attached to the skiis and the boat," said Michele Reese of Universal Studios. "All she has to do is keep her balance."

It took five weeks to train her.

"Mainly we had to gain her confidence," Ms. Wells said. "Once we established that, it was easy. We first put her on a pair of skis on dry land. Then we pulled her around on a tractor. Once she was used to that we put her in the water."

Hospital Board.....

management training here last year. Positive changes made in salary scales, benefits and working conditions have made the difference, she said.

The hospital work force will increase by 217 additional full-time positions in the coming year as the new bed tower is opened, for a total employee contingent of 1,877.

James Cheatham was welcomed back to the board meetings. Cheatham served four years as a trustee and is now returning in a capacity of hospital attorney.

A letter from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals was reviewed. It indicated that the hospital has met the requirements of its interim self survey, part of he two-year accreditation process. The hospital received two-year accreditation in 1980 and will be surveyed again in 1982.

In a financial report, Hospital Director Jack Richardson said revenues of the hospital so far this year are four percent ahead of projections; net revenues, 1.3 percent ahead. Costs are 2.6 percent under projections. There has been a 16.5 increase in "other funds," largely because of high interest earnings on cash accounts, a 47 percent increase in earnings on money saved over that of last year. Patient days are running about 1,000 ahead of projections, he added.

Vice Chief of the Medical Staff Dr. John D. Rose recommended and gained approval from the trustees for provisional active staff privileges for the following physicians: Charles H. Hicks in internal medicine, subspecialty, cardiovascular diseases; Dennis Sinar in internal medicine, subspecialty, gastroenterology; James Paul Gatai in pediatrics; Robert A. Shaw in internal medicine, pulmonary disease; Andrea L. Brand in family medicine; Robert C. Turner in internal medicine; and L.J. Barnhill Jr. in psychiatry, subspecialty, child psychiatry. He asked for and received consulting staff privileges for Gregory R. White, M.D. in emergency medicine.

East Carolina University Medical School Dean Dr. William Laupus thanked board members for attending the reception held Saturday for the 52 entering medical students and their parents in the hospital cafeteria. He said work has begun on plans for a radiation therapy center, with architects being talked with and a search committee for a director appointed.

Board chairman Henry Leslie expressed his pleasure at the "esprit de corps" he perceives among hospital employees.

All Pitt County Schools will open their doors to students August 31. Teachers will report to work August 24.

Roy Wilkins Is Seriously Ill

NEW YORK (AP) — Roy Wilkins, the longtime director of the NAACP, is in serious condition in New York University Medical Center, a spokeswoman for the hospital said today.

The spokeswoman said the family would not allow the hospital to release any more information about Wilkins, who will be 80 Aug. 30.

Wilkins, a recipient of numerous honorary degrees and awards, was the executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from 1955 to 1964 and the organization's executive director from 1965 to 1977.

It was not known what Wilkin's ailment is or when he was admitted to the hospital.

Libya Confirms.

President Anwar) Sadat, in the region, exemplified by the maneuvers to be conducted by the American fleet and the Egyptian regime's land forces, is another link in the chain of imperialism, the search for war and aggression against the peoples and their freedom."

It said the Libyan people "will fight by all means for its territorial waters and any inch of its land or air space whoever is the aggressor party, whether it is America or any other force."

Omar Sodani, the press attache at the Libyan Embassy in London said:

"American vessels and American airplanes were maneuvering in our territorial waters and in our airspace for some time. We stated this before, telling this to the world that the Americans are breaching our sovereignty. This was reported in different newspapers and magazines....

"Everybody knows that the American administration said that it wants to destabilize the regime in Libya and wants to support anybody who wants to take military action against the (Socialist People's Libyan Arab) Jamahiriya, and we believe that this action ... comes under the context of provocation and destabilization of the regime in the Socialist People's Libyan Jamahariya.

Just before the Pentagon announced the aerial clash, a pro-Libyan newspaper called today for a summit conference of leftist Arab states to conclude an anti-U.S. military pact in the Mideast.

The Beirut newspaper As-Safir condemned the U.S. 6th Fleet exercises in the Sidra Gulf as part of a drive to overthrow Col. Moammar Khadafy's pro-Soviet regime in the oil rich North African Arab state.

Last Friday, Libyan supporters of the pro-Moscow Khadafy threatened to assassinate President Reagan and launch the "biggest commando operation in history" against U.S. interests.

The group, the Free Unionist officers, said in a communique carried by JANA that they were angered by reports that the CIA planned to kill Khadafy. The report was carried by Newsweek Aug. 3.

Polish Newspapers Said Idled

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A two-day strike by union printers kept the official Communist press from reaching Warsaw streets early today, but the government insisted that its two main dailies had been published.

Other major cities were also reported without newspapers, but local editions appeared in Bydgoszcz and Szczecin in defiance of the strike, said officials of Solidarity, the independent labor federation.

The government radio and television services were not affected by the printers' walkout demanding more exposure on the national and local media for Solidarity.

Kiosks in Warsaw, where the nation' s major papers are published and printed, were without daily newspapers. Some were closed, with red and white Solidarity signs on their windows. Those that were open sold other goods and weekly publications.

"A newspaper?" asked one female vendor with a laugh. "There is a strike. Come back in a few hours and maybe I will have Trybuna Ludu."

Solidarity spokesman Seweryn Jaworski told a news conference Tuesday that Trybuna Ludu, the Communist Party's chief newspaper with a nationwide circulation of 1.1 million, was being printed at military printing plants, and the government was planning to deliver it in army trucks.

"The government will try to break our strike," he said, "but we have appealed to readers not to buy newspapers and to kiosk sellers not to sell the dailies."

PAP, the official news agency, carried a press review quoting from Trybuna Ludu and the army daily Zolnierz Wolnosci. Warsaw Radio said the two papers appeared, but the party daily had only four pages and the army paper was printed in its usual six-page format in a military printing house.

Warsaw printers quit work Tuesday on today's newspaper editions and struck the largest printing houses in the capital. Strikers wearing red-and-white armbands occupied the plants to insure that no property was damaged, union officials said.

An executive of Zycie Warszawy, the capital's most popular paper, said the staff was "trying to publish. The format will be the same but maybe only two or four pages."

It was believed to be the first newspaper strike in the Soviet bloc, but the government made no attempt to avert it. There were no negotiations on the strikers' demands, and plant directors made no attempt to stop the printers who left their presses, a Solidarity official said.

The strike was ordered by Solidarity's Warsaw local despite a call from the union's national leaders last week for a two-month suspension in the recent strikes and street marches protesting food shortages and the government's plans to increase food prices.

However, the Solidarity no-strike call specifically exempted the printers' walkout and said it would go ahead as planned if their demands were not met.

The union charged it was unjustly blamed for the food protests, which it said were a spontaneous public reaction to a disastrous situation created by the government.

Oversight

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The state Department of Transportation may have come up with a way to make North Carolinians flock to the new "First In Flight" automobile license tags.

They may be the only tags available that will accommodate a validation sticker.

Gonzalie Rivers, director of the department's vehicle services section, said the problem was noticed when the state moved the words "North Carolina" from the bottom of the tag to the top — a move instituted when the historically disputed "First In Freedom" motto was deleted.

Unfortunately, he said, "We noticed it after we'd already made the tags."

DOT spokesman Cy Lynn said there were ways to get the stickers on the old tags, for those who don't want to change over to the new tags.

"If people are concerned about it, they can trim the edges a little bit, and as long as they don't get into any of the numbers (on the sticker) then they'll be in good shape," he said.

Rooming House Limit Planned

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Rooming house owners in Greenville may be facing a time limit on how long they will have before being forced to comply with new regulations restricting the number of unrelated occupants that can be housed in one structure.

Greenville's Planning and Zoning Commission briefly discussed a proposed amortization plan Tuesday night to bring existing rooming houses into compliance with zoning amendments approved last week by the City Council. Action by the commission was delayed until September, or later, to allow the City Planning Department time to determine the number of houses that would be affected and how long they have been owned by current owners.

Under the tentative plan, owners would be given a specified number of years — probably three to five years — to reduce the number of occupants in the homes. Under the City Council amendment, no more than four unrelated people will be allowed to reside in new or newly converted rooming houses.

If the amortization plan is implemented, existing rooming houses also would be brought under the four-occupant restriction over a period of time.

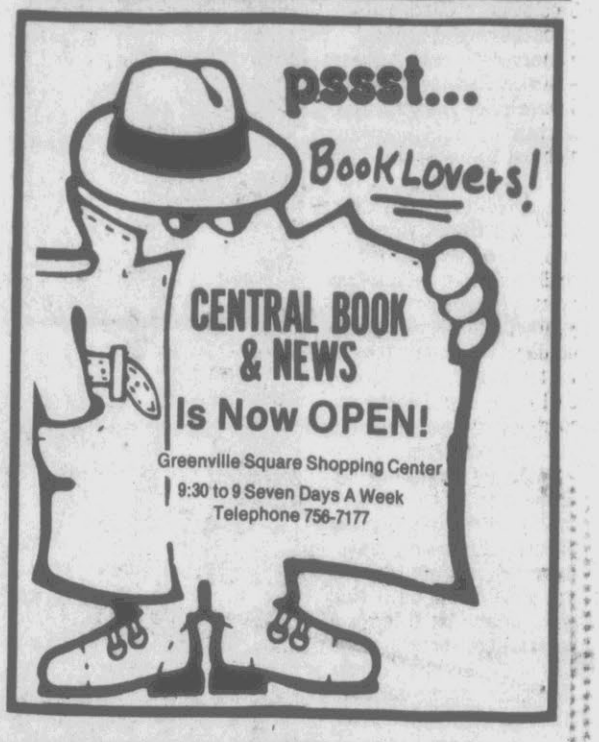

The City Council approved the amendment as a result of a drive initiated by the Tar River Neighborhood Association, which was protesting the increasing number of homes being converted to rooming houses for East Carolina University students. Planning Director Bobby Roberson said Tuesday night there were more than 20 such homes already in the Tar River area.

The rooming house topic highlighted a session in which the commission also recommended that the zoning ordinance be changed to delete requirements that a zoning map be recorded with the register of deeds.

The commission gave its approval to preliminary plats for Twin Oak Townhomes, Courts D, E and F, involving 5.2 acres at the intersection of Lisa Lane and David Drive; Twin Oak Subdivision, Section 5, involving three lots at the intersection of David Drive and Greenville Boulevard, and to Greenridge Subdivision, on the east side of State Road 1204, one-half mile south of N.C. 43.

It denied a request by Steve Evans to rezone about 10,000 square feet of property at Lot 14, Block B, Hillsdale Subdivision on Memorial Drive from high-density residential to office and institutional. The denial came when Evans failed to appear on behalf of the request.

Japan Boycotts Calif. Fruit

By The Associated Press

Japan said it would begin restricting imports of California fruit today, fearing a fruit fly infestation would be carried across the Pacific, and state legislators began hinting of support for "retaliatory trade restrictions."

As the Japanese boycott went into effect, several states renewed calls for a domestic quarantine of all California produce susceptible to the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Texas filed suit Tuesday against the U.S. Department of Agriculture to force a total ban, saying the fruit and vegetables are trucked through Texas to the Southeast.

And in Florida, another round of aerial spraying of malathion was to begin today, with the pesticide to be targeted on an area near downtown Tampa, not far from where five medflies were found. The area is just west of Florida's lucrative citrus belt. State officials have blamed California for the infestation.

Japan's agriculture ministry, fearing the fruit fly would spread to the Orient, said it would restrict all citrus and other fleshy fruit from California as of today. No restrictions, however, have been placed on fruit loaded for shipment to Japan before today.

Japan is the largest foreign buyer of California produce. Last year, it imported about $120 million in products that are potential hosts for the medfly.

Gray Davis, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s chief of staff, said Tuesday Brown told Japanese Ambassador Yoshio Okawara that although Brown opposes trade restrictions, there is strong sentiment among California legislators for retaliatory restrictions on Japanese products if the boycott were imposed.

No specific legislation was mentioned by Brown to the Japanese, Davis added.

Japan's move comes more than 14 months into California's battle against the medfly, which can attack more than 200 varieties of fruits and vegetables.

Although the state has sprayed more than 700 square miles with malathion, imposed quarantines and spent $56 million to fight the insect, the fly has continued to spread. Last week, it was discovered in the state's richest fruit-growing area, the San Joaquin Valley.

State officials fear other nations may follow Japan's lead. South Korea, Taiwan and the island of Yap already have imposed sweeping embargoes of California produce, but none is a major market for the state.

Okawara met Tuesday in Washington with Deputy Secretary of State William Clark on Japan's embargo, and President Reagan's press spokesman, Larry Speakes, said in Los Angeles the USDA had tried to persuade Japanese officials to limit the boycott.

A hearing is scheduled Saturday in U.S. District Court in Dallas on the suit filed by Texas Attorney General Mark White against the USDA to force it to quarantine the entire state of California and fumigate all produce bound from California to Texas.

White's suit was filed on behalf of Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, who announced he will start fumigating California produce arriving in his state Sunday. The suit asks the federal court to prevent the USDA and California growers from interfering.

"We, in a sense, are going to be protecting the entire southeastern United States because it (California produce) all flows through Texas," White said. "We are at the choke point on the funnel."

He said the USDA has moved too slowly in combating the medfly in California, bowing to pressure from growers not to impose a quarantine that goes beyond the five counties where the pest has been found.

A statewide quarantine "would be extremely devastating" for the nation's biggest farm state, said Clark Biggs, spokesman for the California Farm Bureau Federation.

The state does not have — and probably could not build — enough fumigation chambers to handle all of the $4.7 billion worth of medfly-host crops, Biggs said.

The largest California citrus producer, Sunkist, has constructed a fumigation system, which it may move to the docks at Long Beach to treat fruit for shipment to Japan, said Jack Heeger, Sunkist spokesman.

Word-War

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies are urging the 40-nation Geneva disarmament conference to draft an international treaty banning "production, stockpiling, deployment and use of nuclear neutron weapons."

Chief Soviet delegate Victor L. Issraelyan charged Tuesday that President Reagan's decision to go ahead with production of neutron warheads has brought "nuclear war closer to us."

The United States and Canada accused the Soviet Union of hypocritically ignoring its own vast nuclear potential, and Australia and Britain also defended the U.S. decision to build the low-blast, high-radiation warhead.

TONS OF TEA

PEKING (AP) — All the tea in China amounted to 300,000 metric tons last year, but that's far from enough for the nation's 1 billion people, the People's Daily reported.

HUMAN BEEHIVE — In a demonstration on the campus of UC Irvine yesterday, Charlie Duncan of Santa Monica, president of the Western Apicultural Society, turned himself into a human beehive to prove a point. Charlie and the society set loose 30,000 Italian bees, proving that bees can be controlled and are not as harmful as everyone says they are. The bees swarmed onto his arm and upper torso because he was holding a small amount of an artificial Phermone — the same substance that the queen bee secretes to attract her swarm. Charlie didn't get a single bee sting. (AP Laserphoto)

Faulty Reports Seen Factor In Air Incidents

By The Associated Press

An improper position report to air traffic controllers may have played a role in the fatal collision of two small planes in the air over San Jose, Calif., a federal investigator says.

Meanwhile, a representative of the striking air controllers union contended only two people were in the San Jose Municipal Airport tower at the time of the crash Monday instead of the usual five or six. One person was killed in the crash.

Keith McGuire, an investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said the air controller involved did his job properly.

After examining taped communications between the pilots and an air controller, McGuire said Tuesday "something there doesn't add up, so I would expect it's one of the position reports of one of the pilots."

The tape indicates minutes before the collision that killed James E. Moses and injured two other people there was a series of communications, ending with a warning to one pilot that another plane might be near.

The two planes were operating on visual flight rules, not on radar control. Under those rules, pilots are responsible for maintaining the proper distance between planes. Under such situations, however, air controllers do give landing instructions and warn pilots of dangerous situations.

Moses, 47, was the pilot of a Cessna 172. Bruce Marlow, 25, of Los Altos, Calif., was piloting a Piper Cherokee and carrying a passenger, Robert Short, 54, of Mountain View, Calif. Both planes were heading for the airport.

McGuire said Marlow told him later he had seen the Cessna slightly below and to the right of his plane the moment before they hit.

Dominic Torchia, vice president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, said "there is every indication to us that one of the supervisors was working three positions combined in one.

"I can also tell you that all our indications are there were two people in the tower when normally there are five or six," he said.

Meanwhile in Grand Canyon, Ariz., a pilot and six passengers were injured Tuesday when a Grand Canyon Airlines sight-seeing plane apparently had engine trouble and crash-landed in a field near the Grand Canyon airport, authorities said. The plane was a single-engine Cessna.

The injured were taken by helicopter to Flagstaff Hospital for treatment of back injuries, fractures and other injuries, the airline said.

In Fort Lauderdale, Fla., meanwhile, a Pan American World Airways pilot told investigators Tuesday he aborted a takeoff Monday because of engine problems, NTSB Ira Furman said.

Furman said a preliminary investigation revealed the Boeing 727 had reached the speed needed to bring the nose wheel off the ground when the pilot, John Mitvalsky, reported a power problem in the No. 2 engine and aborted the takeoff.

The jet was moving about 120 mph when it slipped off the runway at Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport and plowed about 400 feet through the mud before coming to a stop, officials said.

The flight, bound for Houston and Las Vegas, Nev., bore 58 passengers and a crew of six. Three passengers and a firefighter, who responded, were injured slightly.

Subdividing Of Estate Feared

GLADWYNE, Pa. (AP) — Neighbors of soul singer Teddy Pendergrass are upset over his plan to subdivide property in an affluent Philadelphia suburb.

Pendergrass has proposed dividing his 13-acre estate — on which his $600,000 house is located. The home formerly was owned by television talk-show host Mike Douglas.

Pendergrass' lawyer, John Frazier Hunt, told a planning commission meeting his client "has absolutely no intention of selling or moving in the near — or even distant — future." But neighbors in the secluded Montgomery County community are not pleased.

"I'm all against it," said Mrs. James Allen Montgomery. "The more subdivision, the more people living here. We all like things just the way they are around here. And whoever tries to change things will be closely scrutinized."

The 30-year-old singer, who has recorded five platinum albums, said during his childhood in a Philadelphia ghetto he never dreamed of moving to the suburbs, "because I didn't even know they existed."

ANITA LOOS DIES — Anita Loos, the prolific author who captured the jazz era with her play "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes", died Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Writer Anita Loos Is Dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Anita Loos, the tiny dynamo who wrote witty lines for stage and film stars ranging from Mary Pickford to Marilyn Monroe and convinced a nation that "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," is dead at age 88.

Miss Loos, who was born and remained a brunette, died Tuesday at Doctors Hospital, which she entered Monday night. The cause of death was not immediately known. One friend, Michael O'Shea, said Miss Loos's sight and hearing had been failing.

She wrote the popular "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" in 1925, a novel about a dumb blonde named Lorelei Lee. It became a hit play and movie. Then she coined another phrase when she wrote the book "But Gentlemen Marry Brunettes."

So successful was "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" it obscured in the public mind a long career ranging from early scenarios for silent films through numerous movie scripts and Broadway hits to witty novels and Hollywood memoirs, including "A Mouse is Born," "No Mother to Guide Her" and "Kiss Hollywood Goodbye."

Her last book, "The Talmadge Girls," published in 1978, was based on her career from 1916 to 1925 as a screenwriter for silent screen stars Norma and Constance Talmadge.

It was, in fact, Miss Loos who thought up the idea of adding printed captions to the scenes in silent movies, and she wrote the first subtitles for "Macbeth" in 1916. The same year she wrote the subtitles for the classic D.W. Griffith spectacle "Intolerance."

Many of those Miss Loos met along the way from Hollywood to Broadway, such as Helen Hayes, Lillian Gish and Carol Channing, remained her friends in later life.

On Thursday she was to have appeared at the Grand Central Art Gallery, where an exhibition of memorabilia and photographs entitled "Anita Loos and Friends" was to open and run through September. It will open as planned as a memorial.

Miss Loos once said she wrote "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" on a long train ride between coasts, and meant it as a spoof of a romance between the satirist H.L. Mencken and a beautiful-but-dumb blonde.

"I had no thought of its ever being printed," she said. "My only purpose was to make Henry Mencken laugh, which it did."

Miss Loos' husband died in 1954 after a long illness. She is survived by a niece, Mary Anita Loos.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

How Tar Heel Senators, Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes before the summer recess.

HOUSE

SAVINGS BONDS — The House rejected, 182 for and 233 against, an amendment to prohibit the Treasury Department from promoting the sale of U.S. Savings Bonds. The voted occurred during debate on an FY 1982 appropriations bill (HR 4121) later passed and sent to the Senate. The amendment sought to delete $13.6 million earmarked for bond promotion.

Supporter Fortney Stark, D-Calif., said: "We are offering eight percent in the name of patriotism....Why should we ask the poorest of the poor to take eight percent? We are offering major corporations ten, fifteen percent, on Treasury bills."

Opponent carroll Campbell, R-S.C., said that passage of the amendment would "wipe something out in the name of fiscal austerity that in fact is a vehicle for many Americans to save."

Memabers voting "yea" wanted to ban promotion of U.S. Savings Bonds on grounds that low interest yield makes them a bad investment.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, and W.G. Hefner, D-8, voted "yea."

Reps. Eugene Johnston, R-6, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "nay."

TENNESSEE — TOMBIGBEE — By a vote of 198 for and 208 against, the House rejected and amendment to deny an additional $189 million for the Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway, estimated to cost nearly $2 billion. The project, largest ever undertaken by the Army Corps of engineers, is a 232-mile waterway connecting the tennessee and Tombigbee rivers to provide a route for barges from the Appalachian coal fields to the Mississippi River and the Gulf of Mexico. About $1.5 billion has already been appropriated. The amendment was offered to an appropriations bill (HR 4144) later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, a supporter of terminating the project, called it a "monument to the extravagance of the congressional prok barrel."

Rep. David Bowen, D-Miss., an opponent of eliminating the funding, said: "It would be an environmental disaster if we tried to stop the project now. We would have the longest swamp in America."

Members voting "yea" opposed the Tennessee-Tombigbee project.

Fountain, Neal, Johnston, Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Rose, Hefner and Hendon voted "nay."

PRIVATE SCHOOLS — The House adopted, 337 for and 83 against, an amendment depriving the Internal Revenue Service of money to enforce regulations that deny tax-exempt status to private schools discriminating against minorities. A federal judge has approved IRS affirmative action regulations for private schools in Mississippi, and the policy may be extended nationwide. The vote came during debate on an appropriations bill (HR 4121) later passed and sent to the Senate.

Sponsor John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, said: "Liberal activists want racial quotas enforced in America's private schools, and they are looking for a way, any way, to get them imposed...."

Opponent Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., said: "We know that there are schools that have been set up deliberately in defiance of the law designed to end segregation and to give an equal opportunity for education to all our children."

Members voting "yea" opposed using IRS tax-exemption regulations to integrate private schools.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

SENATE

MARRIAGE PENALTY — By a vote of 35 for and 57 against, the Senate rejected a more rapid reduction of the so-called marriage penalty that requires couples to pay higher taxes than they would pay if single. The tax cut bill (HR 4242), later signed by President Reagan, rovides couples with a special tax deduction of up to $1,500 in 1982 and up to $3,000 in 1983. this amendment would have permitted the $3,000 deduction a year earlier.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., sponsor of the amendment, said congress should "avoid tax distortions of Americans' basic choices such as whether or not to marry."

Opponent Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said the amendment should be rejected "in order to reach a balanced budget as soon as possible."

Senators voting "yea" favored a quicker remedy for the marriage penalty.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

ELDERLY TAX CREDIT — The Senate rejected, 44 for and 50 against an amendment that would have increased the existing tax credits for the retirement incomes of persons over 65 years of age. although Social Security payments are not taxable, other pension benefits are subject to income tax. This amendment to the Senate's version of the tax cut bill (see vote above) would have increased the maximum credit on retirement income from $375 to $450 for single persons and from $562 to $675 for couples.

Supporter Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said that "when we are lowering taxes for the wealthiest individuals in this country, we should bring retirees up to some degree of equity and fairness."

Opponent Steven Symms, R-Idaho, said the amendment "does not comply with the intention of this tax measure" to encourage economic productivity and growth.

Senators voting "yea" favored increasing tax credits for retirement income.

East and Helms voted "nay."

Hasty Harvest Danger Raised

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attempts by flue-cured tobacco growers to cash in early on high tobacco prices are undermining the market, agriculture experts said Tuesday.

Spring and summer weather have cooperated to mature flue-cured crops about a week earlier than usual, said John Cyrus, tobacco market specialist for the North Carolina Department of Agriculture. But he said some farmers are still rushing nature in harvesting more than half of their crops.

He said growers are carrying an immature, unripe tobacco to market when the demand right now is for "fully ripened, high-quality tobacco."

The presence of only one really good flue-cured crop — in 1978 — in five years is spurring that demand.

"There is a world shortage of good-quality, fully ripe U.S. flue-cured tobacco," said Cyrus. "Supplies of these better grades are exhausted both in our foreign exchange markets and domestic."

"Money has been an influence on some growers and it has been a bad influence," said Cyrus. "They have rushed their harvest of flue-cured trying to get the tobacco to market while prices are good.

"It's hurting the market and it's really hurting the farmers,"

As of Monday, harvest continued well ahead of last season's progress with 60 percent out of the fields. Last year at the same time, only 47 percent was harvested and the 5-year mid-point average was 52 percent for 1976-1980.

On the Border Belt, 67 percent of the crop has been harvested; on the Eastern Belt, 61 percent; and on the Middle Belt, 39 percent.

So far this season, prices on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt have averaged $160.93 per hundred pounds. On the Eastern Belt, the average price per hundred pounds is $163.28; and on the Old and Middle Belt, the average per hundredweight is $148.44.

MARCH AGAINST VIOLENCE — Singer-songwriter Harry Nilsson and his son Beau, 4, make their statement against handgun violence in this photo taken at Nilsson's home in Bel-Air, Calif. Nilsson has been hard at work gathering names of Hollywood celebrities and like-minded politicians for a march on Washington in October to express the anti-handgun feelings. (AP Laserphoto)

Parents Of Siamese Twins Refused Arrange Care

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

FOREST CITY, N.C. (AP) — The Rutherford County Social Services Department has filed a petition to take legal custody of Siamese twin girls born to a Forest City couple last year.

According to doctors and social services officials, the court action stemmed from the parents' refusal to make arrangements for medical care for the babies.

A hearing is scheduled in district court Wednesday. The petition was served on the parents, Kim and Arlin Beaver, late Monday.

"This is something we don't like to see happen but the doctors in the case have recommended it and we have to go from there," said Reid Jones, social-services director.

Jones said the department will not try to take the 18-month-old babies from their parents but will take only "legal" custody of them. "Of course, if the parents didn't comply with court orders, that would be a different story."

Jones said the department would make certain that the twins were taken to doctors for regular check-ups in Forest City and at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville, where the babies were taken shortly after birth in February 1980.

The twins, joined just below the ribs at birth, were separated this past January by a team of specialists at the Asheville hospital. Each of the babies — Fonda Michelle and Shannon Elaine — had its own spinal cord and heart. But they shared a pelvis, bladder, colon and rectum and had only one leg each.

Doctors call the twins "unique in all the world," saying they are the only living twins to be joined as they were and to be successfully separated.

But doctors say the infants need regular medical care and special testing to make sure they are doing well. The babies are supposed to participate in physical therapy every week. The social-services department has been picking up Mrs. Beaver and the babies and taking them to therapy sessions, Jones said.

Dr. Bobby England of Forest City, who delivered the twins, said he has had problems getting the Beavers to bring the babies in for regular checkups.

"I think the father sees the doctors involved as meddling in their lives, trying to tell them how to raise their babies," he said. "But these are special babies and they need all the medical assistance they can get."

Last week, doctors put the twins back in Memorial Mission hospital for tests because the twins were not gaining weight as quickly as doctors hoped they would. The babies weighed about 16 pounds when they were separated but had only gained about 4 pounds in eight months.

The parents took the babies out of the hospital earlier this week without allowing doctors to conduct some of the tests.

"I don't know what their thinking was," England said. "The doctors in this case are working in the babies' best interest, not against the family."

England said Beaver, 21, had threatened him, other doctors and the social-services department.

"I think he sees us as the enemy but under the circumstances we had no choice," he said. "It makes me very sad because I have cared for those babies from the very beginning. They are very special to me."

The Beavers denied that the babies haven't received proper medical care, saying they had only missed two doctors appointments.

"Sometimes things come up and you can't make appointments," Mrs. Beaver said. "They have to go to physical therapy two times a week and to Dr. England's every two weeks to be weighed."

Mrs. Beaver also challenged doctors' statements that the twins had not gained enough weight.

"Look at them. Do they look neglected to you," she asked reporters, while showing off the twin girls.

Mrs. Beaver, who was 14 when the twins were born, is now 16. Her husband is 21 and unemployed. The family lives in a tiny trailer in rural Rutherford County and has refused the offer of a larger, brick home, Dr. England said.

"I know he (Beaver) wants to provide for his family but this is a special case. If only he'd let those of use who genuinely care about them and their babies help them," he said.

Asks States 'Cooperate'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Cooperating among Southern states will be needed in order to use fewer federal dollars in the face of budget cuts, said Mississippi Gov. William Winter on Tuesday.

He told participants in the 75th annual Southern Legislative Conference that they must be more aggressive and resourceful to compete with other regions for diminished federal funds.

Winter told about 100 legislators that the South has achieved a great deal in the past several decades, largely through cooperation among Southern states.

"I come from a state that hasn't had the economic resources others have had," he said. "And I can say if it hadn't been for regional cooperation, we would not — and a lot of other states would not — have been able to meet our obligations and responsibilities to our citizens."

Winter cited the interstate highway system and improvements in higher education in the South as proof of regional cooperation.

"We cannot ignore this fact — if we are going to be able to compete for diminishing resources at the federal level, we must do it with effective representation in Washington," Winter said. "In our new approach to the federal goverment, we have to be more resourceful than we have ever been before. And this calls for an increased degree of cooperation."

Winter headed a panel speaking on "The Southern Region's Evolving Role in the Federal System."

Later, Rep. James Sumner of Mississippi, vice president of the Southern Growth Policies Board, said the South is facing tough money-spending decisions in the wake of cutbacks in federal funding.

Nat'l Gallery To Be Examined

WASHINGTON (AP) — The exterior of the National Gallery of Art will be given a structural examination because a 6-by-9-foot marble slab fell off the 40-year-old building.

Gallery officials said Tuesday, however, that the trouble was caused by "an utter irregularity, an inherent fault in the marble" having nothing to do with "structure, neglect or vandalism."

They said the slab fell from a side of the building closed to visitors and was discovered Monday night by a security guard.

Whites Seeking Recourse In Voting Rights Act

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, whites are trying to take advantage of the 1965 Voting Rights Act by asking the federal government to disapprove a local election law change which they say discriminates in favor of blacks.

The four white Richmond, Va., city council members, along with 25 white business and civic leaders, asked the Justice Department on Tuesday to use its authority under the act to block a new redistricting plan for the council.

The whites claimed that the council's five black members unfairly drafted the plan, based on the 1980 census, to guarantee a permanent black majority.

During the past 16 years, black civil rights groups have come to view the act as the nation's most important civil rights law, arguing that it allowed thousands of blacks in the South to register, vote and gain political power.

They are waging a campaign to convince Congress to renew the act before it expires in August 1982. Many white Southerners have argued it is no longer needed.

Tuesday's meeting was the first time whites anywhere, much less the South, ever tried to use the law for their own benefit.

Justice Department spokesman John V. Wilson said the group of white leaders met for 90 minutes with Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the civil rights division, and other division attorneys.

In the 1980 census, the city of 219,000 people was 51.2 percent black, 47 percent white and 1.8 percent other. In the 1970 census, the city was 42 percent black.

The redistricting plan has five districts with black majorities and four with white majorities.

Wilson, who attended the meeting, said the white group argued for a plan with four white-majority districts, four black-majority districts and one "swing" district in which blacks would comprise 49.6 percent of the voting age population and an estimated 45 percent of registered voters.

The group said the redistricting plan submitted for federal approval would intentionally abridge the right to vote on account of race and would guarantee a black majority on the city council forever, Wilson said.

The whites said no race should be guaranteed a majority on the council in a situation where the population was so close to an equal split, Wilson added.

Under the Voting Rights Act of 1965, any electoral changes in nine states and parts of 13 others must be approved in advance either by the Justice Department or the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

Reynolds, who must approve or reject the new redistricting plan by Aug. 31, assured the group that the civil rights division would analyze their views and written submissions, Wilson said. Reynolds will meet later this week or early next week with the five black city council members, Wilson said.

During the 1970s, Richmond generated a landmark Supreme Court ruling on voting rights. The high court ruled that annexations were covered by the act and forced the city to switch from at-large council elections to single-member districts after it annexed a 23-square-mile area with 50,000 residents, including 47,000 whites.

The four white council members at Tuesday's meeting were William J. Leidinger, George S. Kemp, Aubrey H. Thompson and Carolyn C. Wake. They were joined by civil and business leaders including Virginius Dabney, retired editor of The Richmond Times-Dispatch; J. Smith Ferebee, retired vice president of Equitable Life Assurance; Howard B. Cone, senior vice president of Universal Leaf Tobacco, and Charles E. Moore, vice president of United Virginia Bank.

Going Through Appeal Motions

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Striking air traffic controllers at Raleigh-Durham Airport and Federal Aviation Administration officials are going through the motions of appealing the recent firings of controllers. But no one expects to be rehired as a result.

Randy Langston, spokesman for the RDU strikers, described the hearings as "just format and very boring." He said the controllers had no intention of returning to work without a settlement of the dispute.

Meanwhile, FAA officials in Atlanta indicated the controllers would have no worries on that score because the meetins were purely procedural and that no striking members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization would be rehired.

In Charlotte, PATCO chapter president Don Conner said two to five of about 250 construction workers refused Tuesday to cross picket lines set up by the striking controllers at Douglas Municipal Airport.

Local PATCO members were picketing near a construction site for a new terminal.

"We're in a tremendously strong non-union area, and we weren't out to turn their operation around," said Conner. "So to us, this was a side benefit."

Conner said the controllers told the construction workers they were affiliated with the AFL-CIO, and the workers refused to cross the picket line.

Nationwide, about 12,000 of the country's 17,000 controllers walked off their jobs Aug. 3, when negotiations broke down between PATCO and the FAA.

The dispute centered on PATCO's disagreement with the federal government over pay and working conditions.

Shortly after the walkout, President Reagan ordered all 12,000 controllers fired, including more than 100 in North Carolina.

Compiled By Another Agency

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press erroneously reported Tuesday that a report on alleged oil company overcharges was compiled by the Energy Institute of America.

The report was compiled by the Energy Information Administration, a branch of the U.S. Energy Department.

The report, issued Monday, said oil companies may have overcharged customers by more than $1.3 billion in 1979 by passing off old price-controlled oil as decontrolled, higher-priced oil.

Surviving Her Fall Is Parachutist's Miracle

HANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Cathy Haberman began believing in miracles the day she fell 3,500 feet to earth under a parachute which had opened only one-third of the way.

She knows she is lucky to be alive.

The 27-year-old dental technician told the story of her first, and perhaps last, jump six weeks later with her legs in plaster casts resting on a pillow.

Ms. Haberman said she hadn't known she was in trouble until she hit the ground. Onlookers, including her roommate here, Becki Lynne, thought she fell "like a bag of cement."

Rescuers took 30 minutes to find her lying in powdery dirt between grape rows in a vineyard seven miles from her target near this central California community.

"After I hit, I felt a tremendous pain, and I knew it wasn't just a sprain," Ms. Haberman said. Her pelvis, legs, ankles and toes were broken and she suffered back injuries.

"I heard a voice say, 'Is she alive?' and I heard someone else say 'It doesn't look like it,'" she recalled. "Then I knew something was wrong."

Since the jump, "There hasn't been a night gone by that I haven't thanked God I'm not a paraplegic or dead," Ms. Haberman said. 'I was religious before, but it's more intensified. It was a miracle, and I saw it with my own eyes."

Her mother, Dorothea, expressed the same thought as she helped with the recuperation.

"I believed in miracles before — lightly — but now I believe completely," she said.

Ms. Lynne learned of her roommate's danger from an experienced jumper who yelled, "She's in trouble, she's in bad trouble," shortly after the woman leaped from a single-engine plane.

"I started being very belligerent with God," Ms. Lynne said. "I thought that was the last I would ever see of her. I thought she was dead."

When she caught her first glimpse of her roommate on the ground, Ms. Lynne told herself that it was great she was alive, but felt certain Ms. Haberman would never walk again.

Ms. Haberman is certain of walking, but pastimes like karate, water skiing and motorcycling are doubtful.

Paramedics were shocked to find Ms. Haberman relatively free of blood or broken bones, Ms. Lynne said.

"They couldn't believe everything was still inside where it belonged," she added.

An initial federal investigation determined the probable cause of Ms. Haberman's hasty five-second fall was an improperly packed parachute.

MOVING REFUGEES

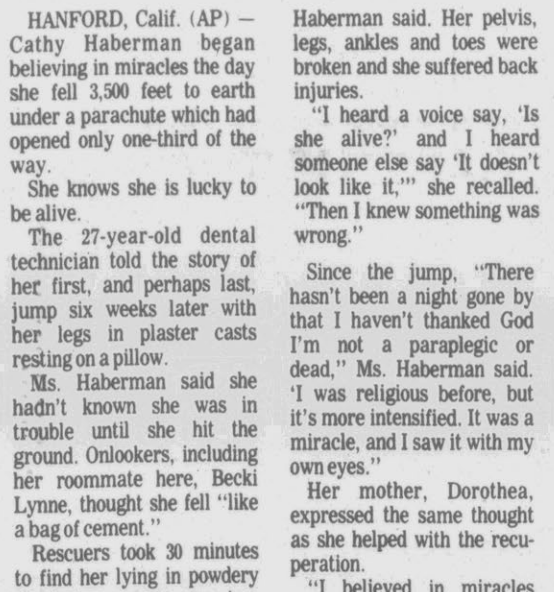

JUANA DIAZ, Puerto Rico (AP) — A fourth group of Haitians from an overcrowded refugee camp near Miami will arrive today to be put in Fort Allen, where 347 Haitians are now housed, Puerto Rican authorities say.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, showing some signs of stabilizing after the broad decline of the past three sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off almost 20 points since last Thursday to its lowest level of the year, recovered .38 to 924.75 in the first half hour.

But losers outnumbered gainers by a 5-4 spread in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said persistent high interest rates remained a major obstacle to any sustained rally.

They also noted that the market appeared to be going through the throes of an unwinding of takeover speculation in many energy stocks.

The pitfalls of such speculation were illustrated Tuesday when the stock of Delhi International fell 37¼ points after Delhi said a search for a party to buy it had resulted in no offers for the company as a whole.

Delhi, traded on the American Stock Exchange, recovered 1⅞ to 79⅛ in early trading today.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 2.38 to 924.37, its lowest close since it finished at 918.09 last Dec. 16.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 3-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 47.27 million shares, against 40.84 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost .73 to 75.55. The Amex the market value index was off 5.63 at 367.94.

Coast Seafood Festival Still On

BEAUFORT — The annual Strange Seafood Festival of the Hampton Marine Museum here will be held tomorrow at 3 p.m., as planned, if it's only rainy, a museum spokesman said this morning.

The location has been changed to the museum boat shop around the corner from the museum itself because of expected rain. "If the hurricane is in the area or near enough to cause really bad weather, it will be postponed, of course," she added.

U.S. Pilots.....

the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the mission of the F-14s was to fly patrol over the fleet, which includes two aircraft carrier battle groups and their escorts. The second carrier is the Forrestal.

Military officials said that such patrols are normal procedure and that one of their purposes, in addition to guarding the fleet, is to warn unwary aircraft from possibly wandering into an area where missile firing exercises are being held.

Weinberger and Gast both said the pilots of the F-14s were acting under rules permitting them to defend themselves.

"If an enemy aircraft conducts a hostile act, the (U.S.) aircraft commander has the right to defend himself," said Gast.

Libya has claimed jurisdiction over air space and waters reaching out some 200 miles. The United States does not recognize that claim but has generally regarded international waters and air space as extending out three miles.

Weinberger did not address the three mile question at the news conferencer but noted that the incident occurred about 60 nautical miles at sea and said "there isn't a basis to any claim that these were national waters."

Libya's official news agency, JANA, in a dispatch apparently prepared before the clase, denounced the "provocative manuevers" by the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Gulf of Sidra.

The dispatch said the Libyan people "will fight by all means for its territorial waters and any inch of its land or air space whoever is the aggressor."

The last time anything like today's incident occurred was in March 1973, when two Libyan Air Force jets fired on an unarmed U.S. Air Force C-130 about 83 miles off the Libyan coast. The American plane escaped.

Last fall, there were unofficial reports that Libyan fighters had been intercepting high-altitude U.S. Air Force planes in international airspace over the southern Mediterranean, but so far as is known, there was no shooting.

The United States, at last report, had 25 naval ships in its Mediterranean 6th Fleet.

Weinberger said President Reagan was notified after the clash and "approved the action taken" plus the continuation of the naval exercise, which Weinberger said had been made a matter of public record in advance with a formal notification to mariners. That notification, officials said, was issued on Aug. 12 and announced an open-ocean missile firing exercise in the Mediterranean for Aug. 18 and 19.

In Los Angeles, Reagan was awakened at 4:24 a.m. PDT by presidential counselor Edwin Meese III, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters.

Speakes said Meese, who had been informed of the clash earlier, "brought him (Reagan) up to date after we had the details fully in hand."

Gast, who was on duty in the National Military Command Center in the Pentagon during the night, said he received word of the air engagement six minutes after it occurred and that he promptly notified Weinberger and General David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Describing the engagement, Gast said the two Libyan planes were picked up on radar about 30 to 40 miles from the F-14s and that the Libyan planes were traveling in a northerly direction. The F-14s made visual contact at 5 to 6 miles, Gast said.

As he described it, one of the Libyan planes fired an Atoll air-to-air missile and the other plane was "engaging," which seems to mean the plane was maneuvering into position for an attack.

The Atoll missile fired by the Libyan missed its target.

Gast said both F-14s then fired heat-seeking Sidewinder missiles, which shot down both planes, which Gast said he assumed were flown by Libyan pilots.

Gast told reporters the battle took only a minute and was fought an altitude of about 20,000 feet.

Asked whether the United States would call off the remainder of the fleet exercise, Weinberger said "it would be imprudent" to do so, suggesting this might lend weight to the Libyan claims of jurisdiction over those waters.

Weinberger said there had been no reaction from the Russians, who maintain a sizable naval force in the Mediterranean.

He also said that all U.S. ships in a naval exercise are normally in a state of alert.

The twin-engine F-14 is the most advanced U.S. carrier-based fighter and has a fire-control system that permits it to shoot at a number of attacking planes simultaneously.

The single-engine SU-22 is flown by a single pilot and has been exported by the Russians to several countries. Both planes are capable of speeds of about 1,5 00 miles and hour.

The Nimitz is a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, the biggest afloat, displacing over 90,000 tons and normally carrying about 100 aircraft of various types.

The United States last May 6 expelled all Libyan diplomats from the United States.

The State Department justified the order by citing Libya's alleged support of international terrorism, its military occupation of Chad and its alleged campaign to assassinate opponents of the Libyan government.

Libya's leader, Col. Moammar Khadafy, is a hard-line Arab who has been strongly critical of U.S. policies in the Middle East, particularly the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace accords between Israel and Egypt.

NLRB Chairman Sworn Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — John R. Van de Water has been sworn in as chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, but he is not expected to begin his duties until next week.

The swearing-in occurred Tuesday at the U.S. Embassy in Cairo, Egypt. Van de Water is out of the country attending a daughter's wedding.

Kay Warren Is Re-Named Director

The executive director of the 1981 Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival is Kay Warren, who was renamed by the Festival Board of Directors at a recent meeting. Miss Warren had served in the same capacity during the 1980 festival.

Miss Warren noted she was "excited about how well plans are progressing for the 1981 Festival and enthusiastic about the cooperation from the executive committee and the board of directors."

"I am more and more intrigued with the tobacco industry, realizing how important it is to our economy, which in turn makes my position of executive director worthwhile," said Warren.

"Hopefully I can make a small contribution to our tobacco program as we inform the public about its operation," added the director.

Warren is a native of Roseboro wherre she attended Roseboro-Salemburg High School. She also attended Hardbarger Business College and N.C. State Univeristy in Raleigh.

Prior to her position with the Tobacco Festival, she worked with the N.C. Department of Agriculture, the N.C. Legislature and WNCT-Radio in Greenville.

Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Warren of Roseboro are her parents.

F-14 Rated One Of Best

WASHINGTON (AP) — The F-14 jet fighter, two of which clashed with Libyan Russian-built SU-22 fighters in international airspace over the Mediterranean Sea today, is rated among the most advanced warplanes in the U.S. arsenal.

The F-14 is a twin-engine supersonic fighter manned by a crew of two. Its primary purpose is defense of the U.S. Navy fleet.

The plane's key feature is an advanced weapons-control system capable of guiding as many as six Phoenix missiles against targets. In addition to the Phoenix missiles, the F-14 carries four Sparrow missiles, four sidewinder missiles and one 20 mm Vulcan cannon.

The swing-wing aircraft can reach speeds twice that of sound, or about 1,500 miles an hour.

The SU-22, which has been exported by the Soviet Union to a number of countries, is somewhat less sophisticated than the versions flown by the Russian air force.

The aircraft is flown by a single pilot, has a maximum speed roughly that of the F-14 and is armed with Atoll air-to-air missiles, as well as twin 30-mm guns.

The SU "fitter" is designed for ground attack as well, with the capacity to carry up to 11,000 pounds of bombs and guided missiles such as the air-to-surface Kerry.

Mr. Swinson was s native of Farmville, where he attended local schools and church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Grace B. Swinson of the home; his mother, Mrs. Ianithia Swinson of Farmville; one sister, Mrs. Mary S. Blount of Farmville; and two brothers: Roland Swinson of Washington, D.C., Glascow Swinson of Baltimore, Md.

Volume Heavy At Farmville

FARMVILLE — With two sets of buyers on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday, volume of sales was heavy compared to the previous day, according to Georgia Willoughby, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Demand remained steady and prices on most grades showed little change from Monday. Good quality cutter and leaf grades accounted for most of volume.

The market sold 711,880 pounds for $1,228.491.20, for an average of $172.57 per hundred pounds. To date, the market has sold 9,512,711 pounds for $15,833,642.22 for a season average of $166.45. The season average for the same day last year was $140.

TRIBUTE

A tribute to J. B. Rogers was held Sunday at the Grindle Creek Church of God here. He was honored with a service in observance of his service as the Sunday School superintendent for 20 years. An engraved plaque from the church was presented to him by the pastor, Ronnie Dyson.

ECU's Sutton, Hawkins Cut

Two more former East Carolina University running backs were among those cut by the National Football League yesterday as teams pared their rosters down to 60 by 4 p.m. Tuesday.

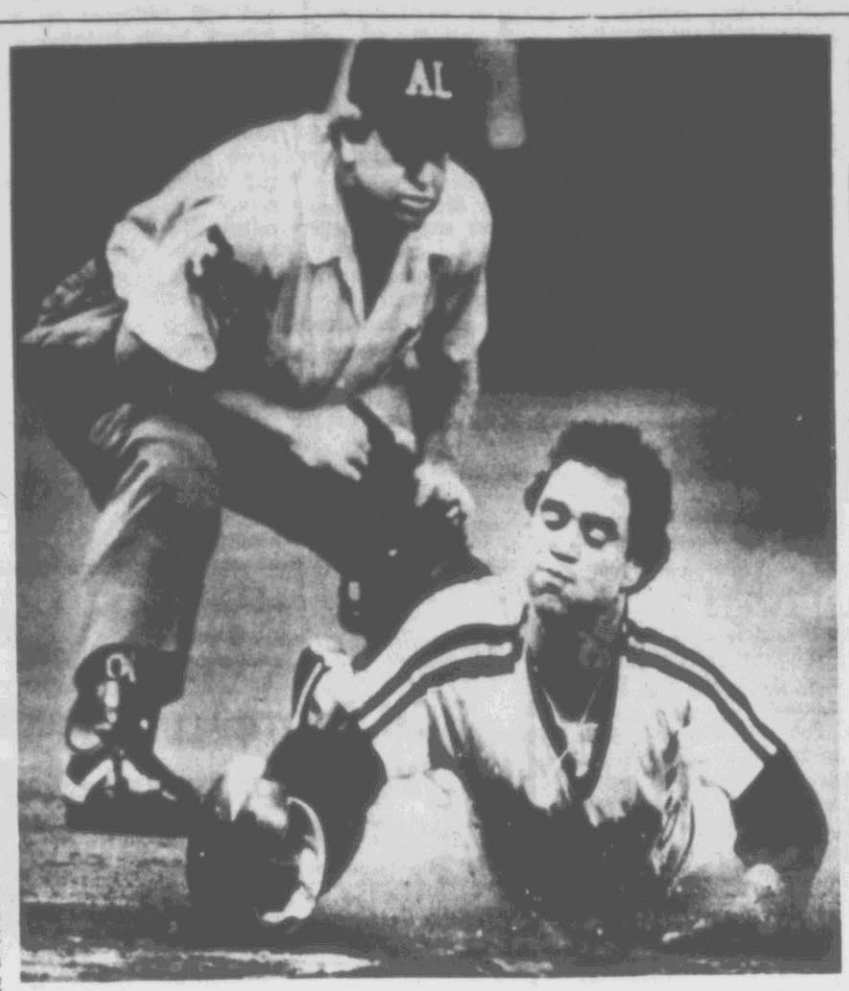

Mike Hawkins, signed as a free agent by Atlanta, and Theodore Sutton, a Dallas free agent signee, were both among those cut by their respective teams in the first of the NFL's official trim-downs.

Cut earlier in the week were former ECU and Rose High School linebacker Mike Brewington by the New York Jets, and veteran Al Hunter, another Rose product who attended Notre Dame, by the Seattle Seahawks.

Eddie Hicks, another ECU back, was cut by the Philadelphia Eagles earlier.

The cuts leave four former Pirates and one other area player in the NFL. Veteran linebacker Zack Valentine continues with the Pittsburgh Steelers, while defensive back Reggie Pinkney is still with Baltimore's Colts. Running back Sam Harrell, on the injured reserve list last season

NBC To Aid CFA If Legal Fight With NCAA Ensues

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The College Football Association has confirmed that NBC would pay half the legal costs if its battle with the NCAA goes to court, raising a new storm of controversy in the war over control of football television rights.

Ohio State President Harold Enarson said he was "astonished" that the CFA would enter into such an agreement. And Andy Geiger, athletic director at Stanford, termed the news "incredible."

Meanwhile, Charles M. Neinas, CFA executive director, said the oranization might shorten the three-week "reconsideration period" in which CFA schools can change the ballot they cast Friday. All 61 CFA members will gather in Atlanta Friday to vote on whether to ratify a four-year television deal with NBC.

The NCAA has reached agreement with ABC and CBS for the same period, 1982-85, and has said it would begin disciplinay action against any schools that adopt the NBC-CFA plan. This could lead to a split of the CFA schools from the NCAA, a situation many CFA and NCAA supporters alike say could lead to athletic chaos.

The CFA includes all major independents and five conferences — the Big Eight, Southeastern, Southwest, Western Athletic and Atlantic Coast. The Big Ten and Pac-10, of which Ohio State and Stanford are members, do not belong.

This is not the first time the CFA's relationship with NBC has stirred controversy in the athletic community. Earlier, it was learned that Neinas, in a report to the CFA board of directors, had said that in the event of a CFA pullout from the NCAA, "... NBC is willing to commit the means to support CFA activities in other sports ..."

"This really astonishes me," Enarson, a frequent NCAA critic in the past, said in an interview with the Associated Press, "that there could be any serious consideration of letting any external agency — in this case, big-time, big-money television — pull the strings as it were.

"The handling of one's legal services is as close to the heart of institutional integrity as anything I can imagine. I think one would be naive in the extreme to believe one could let someone else pay half your legal fees without having that other party share mightily in the control of policy. Frankly, I find it mind-boggling."

Neinas confirmed the CFA had such an arrangement with NBC.

"The reason we suggested that clause be included in the contract is simple," he said. "If the CFA and NBC are partners and as a result of an agreement, litigation evolves, then the partners should be prepared to share in the expense. People can read what they want into things."

"President Enarson's point is exactly on target," Geiger said in an interview. "The relationship is indeed a partnership, and it is a significant departure from the stated purpose of the CFA at its inception. It has strayed giant strides away from the special-interest lobbying group it claimed it was going to be."

Chief executive officers of the Big Ten and Pac-10 schools met in Denver last weekend and issued a statement reaffirming their support of the NCAA. While the NCAA has maintained a low profile this week, Big Ten and Pac-10 presidents have been on the phone urging presidents of CFA schools to vote against adoption of the CFA plan and avoid a possiby destructive

'Bama, Heels Top South Picks

East Carolina Opponent Miami Heads Independent List

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach Bear Bryant of perennial power Alabama can count on one setback before the 1981 college football season begins.

"I wish everyone would forget about it," Bryant says of a wish that won't be granted.

Bryant, trying to steer the Crimson Tide to its eighth Southeastern Conference title in 10 years, says he'd prefer that fans and members of the news media forget about his chase of the all-time record for coaching victories.

Bryant enters the campaign with 306, eight shy of the record held by the legendary Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Much to his dismay, that chase will overshadow the battles for conference championships and independent supremacy in the South this year.

Alabama, as usual, is favored to win the SEC and Dick Crum's North Carolina Tar Heels are a solid pick to repeat in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Coach Howard Schnellenberger has Miami of Florida primed to head the list of a dozen Southern independents and Furman and Tennessee-Chattanooga are expected to wage a battle for the Southern Conference crown.

"It embarrasses me," Bryant says of the attention his chase of Stagg has generated.

"He (Stagg) is the Huckleberry Finn of football, like Babe Ruth. Nobody will ever replace him in the record book. There's no way you can compare two totally different eras of football.

"I wish everyone would forget about it," he added. "If you subtracted the games my teams won despite me, there wouldn't be any record chase."

The area's top individual performer is a mere sophomore — All-American tailback Herschel Walker of defending national champion Georgia.

Walker smashed the NCAA record for yards rushing by a freshman last fall when he dashed for 1,616 in the regular season and added another 150 in the Bulldogs' Sugar Bowl victory over Notre Dame, leaving Georgia with college football's only perfect record, 12-0.

Since Alabama captured championships in 1978 and 1979, the SEC would be the first league ever to win four straight Associated Press national crowns if one of its members accomplishes that feat this year.

There are several teams capable of winning the SEC besides Alabama, which lost 14 starters from last year's Cotton Bowl championship team.

Georgia, the defending champion, has to be considered with Walker and All-SEC quarterback Buck Belue back, but Coach Vince Dooley has to rebuild his offensive line and defensive secondary.

Mississippi State, which ended Alabama's 28-game winning streak last year, could make it to the championship behind sophomore quarterback John Bond and such defensive standouts as linebacker Johnie Cooks and tackle Glen Collins.

Charley Pell has Florida on the rebound, going 8-4 last year after a 0-10-1 disaster the previous season. The Gators will be tough, but won't have the element of surprise again.

Jerry Stovall begins his second season at Louisiana State with 15 starters back and Johnny Majors has 13 starters returning at Tennessee. LSU and the Vols are regarded as darkhorses in the SEC race.

Auburn has a new coach, Pat Dye, but lost a brilliant runner, James Brooks and Mississippi received a blow during the summer when quarterback John Fourcade broke his hand in a softball game.

Both Kentucky and Vanderbilt return 17 starters, but still don't figure to challenge in the conference. Vandy has lost 30 consecutive conference outings.

North Carolina's Crum said, "I think we can again be a pretty good football team. I think our offense has the potential to be an exceptionally good one."

Carolina will build its offense around All-ACC running back Kelvin Bryant and quarterback Rod Elkins.

There should be a three-way battle for second among Clemson, North Carolina State and Maryland.

Clemson features an excellent receiver in Perry Tuttle, N.C. State has 15 starters back and Maryland counts All-ACC running back Charlie Wysocki among four returning offensive starters.

Virginia expects to be better, Duke has 18 starters returning and Wake Forest will be in a transition period under new coach Al Groh.

Georgia Tech, which again faces a tough slate, is still not eligible to compete for the ACC title, but has an excellent quarterback in Mike Kelley, who has 4,362 career passing yards.

Miami is counting on Jim Kelly, who threw for 1,519 yards and 11 scores, to keep the Hurricane in the Top 20 rankings.

Florida State, the area's top independent the last two years, is minus 14 of last year's starters and faces an extremely difficult schedule that includes five road games in succession at Nebraska, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and LSU.

Sammy Winder and Reggie Collier are back to lead Southern Mississippi and John Holman, who threw for 2,444 yards last year, is back at Northeast Louisiana, which has a new coach, Pat Collins.

Tulane should go to the air frequently with top receivers Robert Griffin and Rodney Holman.

Virginia Tech has 43 letter winners back, including ace runner Cyrus Lawrence, and South Carolina will be missing Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers.

Richmond should be stronger with 43 lettermen back, including Barry Redden, who had 1,033 yards in the last six games last year Louisville returns 18 starters and Memphis State operates under a new coach, Rex Dockery.

Furman will be strong offensively, but must rebuild its defense to ward off Chattanooga, which featured excellent quarterback Steve Woods.

The Citadel and Virginia Military could give the top two some trouble, but no other team figures strongly in the race.

Floyd Allen of VMI was second in the Southern in rushing last year with 1,276 yards, finishing behind Citadel's departed star, Stump Mitchell.

Bob Hayes Just One Of Gaither's Kids

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Jake and Sadie Gaither celebrated their golden wedding anniversary three weeks ago in Tallahassee, Fla., and guess who showed up as a surprise guest at the party?

Bob Hayes.

On Sept. 5 Gaither, 78-year-old legendary football coach and athletic director at Florida A&M, along with home run king Hank Aaron, will receive one of the most cherished awards that can be bestowed upon a black American — the Whitney M. Young Jr. Memorial Award.

The ceremony will take place at halftime of the Urban League's annual Football Classic matching Florida A&M and Grambling College in Yankee Stadium.

Guess who is almost certain to be in the audience?

Bob Hayes.

"He is a fine kid," said Gaither in New York Tuesday when the award was announced. "I looked upon him as a son. If ever there was a kid I wanted to adopt it was Bob Hayes."

To Gaither, they are all "kids" — these youngsters who passed through the Gaither Gridiron Finishing School between 1945 and 1969 en route to the outside world, 43 of them into the National Football League.

None had greater impact on his life than Bob Hayes, product of a broken home in a Jacksonville ghetto, later to become the "world's fastest human," Olympic gold medalist, ace receiver with the Dallas Cowboys and finally convicted drug peddler.

Man and boy — it's one of the most poignant stories in sports.

Gaither never deserted his prize pupil. Hayes never forgot the aging man and his wife who were always there to grab him before he could sink irretrievably into the quicksand.

"Bob didn't have much chance at the start," Gaither, a dignified gentleman with salt-and-pepper hair and mustache, recalled. "His father, crippled by the war, operated a pool hall. He lived with his mother, a domestic.

Jake Gaither

"The first year on campus, a kid of 16, he and another kid were arrested for robbery and assault. What they took was a nickel pack of gum and a penny coin — altogether worth six cents."

Hayes spent five days in jail and then was assigned to Gaither on 10-year probation, a harsh sentence not lifted until five years later by the governor of Florida.

Hayes became a football sensation at the black school while making world headlines as a record-setting sprinter and establishing himself as one of America's brightest Olympic hopefuls.

"Once, I remember, he came to me disturbed because the kids on the team were teasing him about being a big shot and going Hollywood. I called a squad meeting but told Bob to get lost. I then lectured the other players: 'You boys should be proud to play on a team with someone as good as Bob.' Then I told them, 'If you want to get as much attention as he does, just outrun him.' They got the message."

Hayes won the 100 meter dash in Tokyo in 1964 and anchored the winning 400-meter relay team. He came home to sign a football contract with the Cowboys. Blinding speed and good hands made him a standout pass receiver, catching 365 passes for 7,295 yards and 76 touchdowns.

"Then, the Cowboys began drafting fresh talent," Gaither explained. "Bob was benched. Later he was traded to the 49ers. He was cut and he sued the 49ers for breach of contract. That's when his real trouble started."

In April, 1978 Hayes was arrested on drug charges. In March, 1979, after pleading guilty to selling cocaine to an undercover agent, he drew a five-year prison sentence.

"It was very involved and a case of Bob being betrayed by a man he had befriended," Gaither said. "My wife and I were character witnesses at his trial."

On Feb. 27, 1980, after serving some 11 months, Hayes was released.

Bills, Pats Out For East Crown

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The AFC East used to belong to the Miami Dolphins, but it has produced four champions in the last five years and developed a reputation as one of the National Football League's least predictable divisions.

New England has the best talent in the division but somehow usually finds a way to lose near the end of the season. The most explosive offenses belong to the Baltimore Colts and New York Jets, but their defenses keep them from winning consistently. With Miami rebuilding, that left the Buffalo Bills to climb to the top last season.

In its first decade, the division knew only three champions — the Dolphins, Patriots and Colts. But the Bills changed that in 1980, winning the title with an 11-5 record built on a strong defense and versatile rookie back Joe Cribbs.

Buffalo Coach Chuck Knox, the NFL's Coach of the Year in 1980, has built a favorite for consecutive titles with judicious draft choices and a blend of seasoned veterans. The Bills are expecially tough on defense.

"It's the Bermuda Triangle because ballcarriers have a habit of getting lost in our territory," says 270-pound nose tackle Fred Smerlas, a Pro Bowler in his second season. The other points of the triangle are inside linebackers Shane Nelson and Jim Haslett, whose 125 tackles led the team. Isiah Robertson and Lucius Sanford play outside in the 3-4.

Left end Ben Williams had 12 sacks last year, while Sherman White complements the pass rush on the other side.

Strong safety Steve Freeman led the team in interceptions with seven, while free safeties Jeff Nixon and Bill Simpson and cornerbacks Mario Clark and Charles Romes complete a solid, veteran unit.

With 225-pound fullback Booker Moore, this year's No. 1 draft choice, out of action because of a nerve ailment, the Bills again will rely on 203-pound Curtis Brown to carry the ball or block for Cribbs.

Cribbs set a Buffalo rookie record with 1,185 yards rushing and also caught 52 passes, a team record for a back.

Quarterback Joe Ferguson threw for 2,805 yards and 20 touchdowns last year. His top receivers are Jerry Butler and Frank Lewis and tight end Mark Brammer.

The offensive line is strong, with underrated tackles Ken Jones and Joe Devlin flanking guards Reggie McKenzie and Conrad Dobler and center Will Grant.

New England is a statistician's dream and an analyst's nightmare with five first-round draft choices in the secondary, a 441-point output and 10-6 record in 1980 — and no playoff berth.

Tight end Russ Francis has retired, but Coach Ron Erhardt still has reserve Don Hasselbeck and wide receivers Stanley Morgan and Harold Jackson, the top active receiver in the NFL with 532 receptions.

Strong-armed quarterback Steve Grogan has been inconsistent.

Completing the backfield are Vagas Ferguson, who rushed for 818 yards as a rookie, and Don Calhoun.

The Patriots get good linebacking from Steve Nelson and Rod Shoate and rugged defensive play from ends Mel Lunsford and Julius Adams.

Miami Coach Don Shula has 193 career victories in 18 years of NFL coaching despite an 8-8 mark last season.

In the fourth game last year, he put David Woodley at quarterback, and the eight-round pick passed for 1,850 yards and 14 touchdowns.

Now Shula must rehabilitate the running game, which wasn't helped when No. 1 choice David Overstreet defected to Montreal of the Canadian Football League.

Tony Nathan and rookie fullback Andra Franklin show promise. Nathan caught 57 passes for 588 yards last year, better than wide receivers Nat Moore (47 catches) and Duriel Harris (33).

Miami defensive ends Kim Bokamper and Doug Betters play ahead of linebackers A.J. Duhe, Larry Gordon and newcomer Bob Brudzinski.

Injury-riddled quarterback Bert Jones gives the Colts another dimension on the field, and he stayed healthy long enough last year to set personal records with 348 completions for 3,134 yards.

Baltimore whipped Buffalo twice in 1980 and could be the sleeper of the division with a revved-up offense based around receivers Roger Carr (61 catches) and Ray Butler, and with first-round choice fullback Randy McMillan to pair with 800-yard rusher Curtis Dickey.

The Colts finished 21st in pass defense, but should improve with a stronger pass rush and the work of strong safety Bruce Laird, cornerback Derrick Hatchett and linebackers Barry Krauss, Mike Woods and Sanders Shiver.

At 4-12 after an 8-8 season the previous year, the Jets were the AFC's disappointment of 1980.

Injuries, a woeful defense and the unsteady play of quarterback Richard Todd knocked Coach Walt Michaels' club off schedule.

Todd completed 264 passes for 3,329 yards but also threw 30 interceptions. Many of his passes went to backs — kick returner Bruce Harper caught 50 and led the NFL in all-purpose yardage with 2,072 — but this year he will seek to take advantage of the speed of wide receivers Johnny Jones (25 receptions) and Wesley Walker (19).

Buffalo's Ritcher Still Nursing Knee

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It may be three weeks before former All-America center at North Carolina State Jim Ritcher can show the Buffalo Bills what he can do at his new position as a guard.

Ritcher, the 1979 Outland Trophy winner, suffered a pulled ligament in his left knee during the first hour of training camp for the National Football League franchise. And watching his Buffalo Bill teammates practice while he sits on the sidelines nursing an injured knee is not his idea of fun.

"It has been boring for me," the 252-pound Ritcher said in a telephone interview this week. "I can lift weights with the upper body, but can't do many other physical things. I'm just trying to learn what I can."

The Bills made Ritcher their first-round draft choice two years ago but he could never get a solid hold on the starting center spot. So he spent the off-season working on new techniques and seemed to be moving into the guard position successfully — until the injury.

"It's just good the injury happened on the first day," Ritcher said of the July incident. "Now the other guys have got the jump on me, but I feel comfortable at guard. I will at least get to play a lot there."

As far as the switch, he said, "Guard's easier. I don't have to mess with the ball and I can get off the ball a little quicker."

He said his troubles at center came with the differences between college play and the pros.

"I had trouble with it," he said. "It was a lot different than college and it fouled me up a little. I finally got it down near the end of the season, but he (coach Chuck Knox) didn't want to make many changes then."

During his layoff, Ritcher has been keeping track of other ex-Atlantic Coast Conference players at Buffalo.

Former Wolfpack quarterback Johnny Evans, currently the No. 2 signal caller behind Joe Ferguson, is "punting real well," Ritcher said. And former N.C. State running back Roland Hooks "is looking real good."

Clemson's Jerry Butler is still hauling down passes and North Carolina's Dee Hardison is working at offensive tackle.

"Dee has had a few adjustment problems at tackle but he's working out pretty good. I've never met a naturally stronger guy than Dee. He doesn't even have to lift weights. I think the coaches tell him not to lift ..."

Farmville Names AD, Baseball Coach

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central High School has announced the appointment of Hilda Worthington as athletic director and Bill Davis as head baseball coach for the coming year.

Worthington and Davis both replace Carl Brock who resigned to take a position at another school. Brock, who served as baseball coach last year, was named AD this spring following the resignation of Gene Brewer, who moved to Fayetteville South View.

A native of Calhoun, Ga., Worthington graduated from Raleigh Broughton High School, where she played basketball. She received her undergraduate degree from East Carolina, and taught a half-year at Greenville Middle School prior to taking her master's degree at the University of Tennessee. She has since taught at Randolph-Macon Women's College, and Rose High School. For the past ten years, she has been on the Farmville Central staff, serving as girls' basketball and track coach for the past nine seasons.

Last year, she was chosen as an assistant for the East team in the Greensboro All-Star game for girls.

She is married to Sam Worthington Jr., and they have two daughters, Lydia and Polly.

There are only two other women serving as athletic directors in the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. They are Norma Harbin of West Forsyth, and Ruth R. Pool of Durham Hillside.

Davis, a recent graduate of East Carolina, is a native of Bertie County, where he played basketball and baseball. At East Carolina, he was a member of the pitching staff. This past season he served as an assistant coach at Rose High School in baseball and was assistant coach on the Pitt County American Legion baseball team.

This will be his first full-time coaching job in high school. Davis is single.

Players, Owners At It Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's second season marked the return of the strike-marred national pastime, but its controversial format also has brought negotiators for the owners and players together again.

And first signs are not good.

Marvin Miller said Tuesday night that baseball's hierarchy had prosposed a revised plan for deciding winners in the second half of the season, but the union found the new format "favorable only in part."

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, American League President Lee MacPhail and National League counterpart Chub Feeney met Tuesday, but did not announce a new format for the split season. A spokesman for the commissioner hoped he would be able to release something today.

Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, said the union would have to approve any change in the second season format "because we are dealing with a contractual term. It is no different than changing any other term of employment."

Miller said he was given a "piece of paper" by Ray Grebey, the owners' chief negotiator, Monday afternoon, outlining a proposed new format for the second half of the season.

"Mr. Grebey gave us a piece of paper with a draft of a proposal and asked us what we thought of it," Miller said. "We found it acceptable only in part. We're still talking and we'll be back again tomorrow. We're not stiffnecked."

Miller did not reveal the contents of the proposals.

Grebey said the proposals he gave Miller were not final.

"We did not give Marvin the final format for the second half of the season, just a few suggestions to think about," said Grebey from his home in Connecticut.

Thinking is what a lot of baseball people have been doing since they realized last week that a team could benefit in the second season by losing.

Following the settlement of the 50-day strike, baseball owners decided on a split-season format to choose divisional winners and hopefully renew fan interest. Under the plan, the teams in first place at the time of the strike — the Philadelphia Phillies, Los Angeles Dodgers, New York Yankees and Oakland A's — were declared division winners for the first half of the season and thus qualified for the divisional playoffs.

The format also set up a system for deciding opponents for those teams in the division playoffs. The guideline provided that if any of those four teams finished first in the post-strike portion of the season, the club in the division with the second-best percentage for te entire year would meet the first-half winner in the best of five series for the divisional title.

That's where clubs losing on purpose comes into play.

For example, if the Kansas City Royals and A's were battling for the second-half title in the American League West, and the Chicago White Sox were playing Oakland, Chicago might make the playoffs by intentionally losing games to Oakland so the A's would repeat as the AL West Division winner.

The White Sox would miss out on the playoffs if the Kansas City won the division title for the second half of the season and thereby qualified to play Oakland. On the other hand, Chicago might make the playoffs if it had the second-best overall percentage in the division if Oakland won both halves.

The controversy reached a peak when Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa said he would favor forfeiting games to make the playoffs.

When Kuhn heard LaRussa's comments and similiar remarks by St.Louis Manager Whitey Herzog, he pledged to revise the system or at least make an adjustment in it to preclude the possibility of a team losing to get ahead.

"Once you have four first-half division winners, then you have problems," Miller said. "You can't change the past. It is possible to make one plan with less bugs than another, but it's imposible to make a plan without bugs."

Some possibilities mentioned for dealing with the second season were giving a team that wins both halves of the season a bye into the league championship or scrapping the split-season format entirely.

"If there is a better system, we will consider it," Miller said.

But he remained adamant that the players will have the last word in any change.

"He (Kuhn) has no authority to change the contract," Miller said. "We're dealing with a contractual term."

Leach, Ainge Star In Different Game

By The Associated Press

Rick Leach was a football hero and Danny Ainge made his fame in basketball in college.

Now the ball is bouncing in a different direction for both of them, as they seek to make it big in baseball. And Tuesday night, both did well on the diamond.

"I know I have major league ability and I know I can play," said Leach after his three-run homer helped the Detroit Tigers beat the Minnesota Twins 3-0.

"I'm a winner," added Leach after blasting his first major league homer. "All I can compare tonight with is beating Ohio State and going to the Rose Bowl."

Leach starred at quarterback for the University of Michigan.

Ainge, an All-America basketball player for Brigham Young University, has been struggling with the Toronto Blue Jays. But Tuesday night, he reached base four times to help his team beat the Kansas City Royals 5-3.

"Basketball can't help but be on my mind when people keep bringing it up," said Ainge.

Ainge's three singles against the Royals raised his average to .199.

Leach's homer came in the sixth inning and it was all the runs Detroit needed as Milt Wilcox and Kevin Saucier combined on a six-hitter. The victory was Detroit's fifth in a row, matching the Tigers' longest streak of the season, while sending the Twins to their fifth straight defeat.

Brewers 3-6, Rangers 1-8

Ben Oglivie hit a three-run homer in the first inning and Moose Haas scattered seven hits in 71-3 innings as Milwaukee stopped Texas in the first game of their doubleheader. Haas, 7-4, recording his first victory over Texas since 1979, needed eighth-inning relief help from Jamie Easterly and Rollie Fingers, who pitched out of a one-out, bases-loaded jam and went on to record his 16th save.

Yankees 4, White Sox 0

Ron Guidry and George Frazier combined on a six-hitter as New York defeated Chicago and snapped a four-game losing streak.

Guidry, 7-3, allowed three Chicago hits over the first six innings. He did not walk a batter while striking out seven and has pitched 11 scoreless innings since the season resumed, yielding only four hits and fanning 15.

Orioles 6, Angels 5

Scott McGregor survived a rocky start to pitch Baltimore over California with relief help from Sammy Stewart. It was the left-hander's seventh straight victory over the Angels, dating back to early 1979.

McGregor, 8-2, allowed three runs and five hits in the first two innings but then recovered with Stewart's relief help.

Angel second baseman Bobby Grich extended his hitting streak to an AL high 20 games with a run-scoring single in the first inning.

Indians 5, Mariners 2

Andre Thornton's pinch-hit home run leading off the seventh inning triggered Cleveland past Seattle. Thornton hit a 3-2 pitch from Seattle's Bryan Clark, 2-3, into the left field seats after Seattle had tied the game 2-2 in the bottom of the sixth on Richie Zisk's RBI single.

A's 3, Red Sox 2

Bill Campbell's wild pitch with the bases loaded in the bottom of the 15th inning scored Jeff Newman from third base with the winning run as Oakland beat Boston.

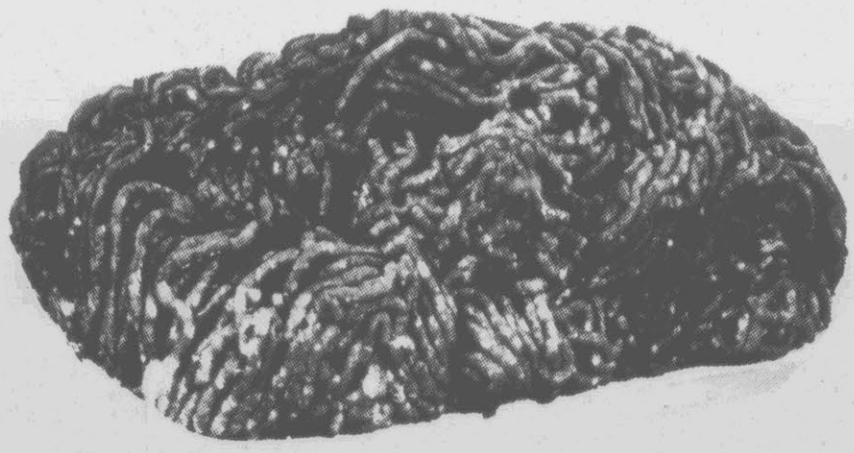

The Red Sox had taken a 2-1 lead in the top of the 14th on Julio Valdez's RBI single before Tony Armas tied the game 2-2 with his 14th home run. Bob Owchinko, the third A's pitcher, hurled the last 12-3 to improve his record to 4-2.

City Champs

If you think the cheapest ground beef you can find is a bargain,
Overton's says, "Baloney!"

You can be sure of just one thing if you buy the cheapest ground beef you can find: it will be made of the cheapest ingredients. With all the fat that can legally be put into it.

The fact is, at $1.69/lb. the ground beef we make and sell at Overton's is a much better value than the $1.19/lb specials they run at some other stores. There's less fat. Less shrinkage. And it's made from choicer meats. Plus we don't truck beef in already ground. We grind our beef fresh several times daily.

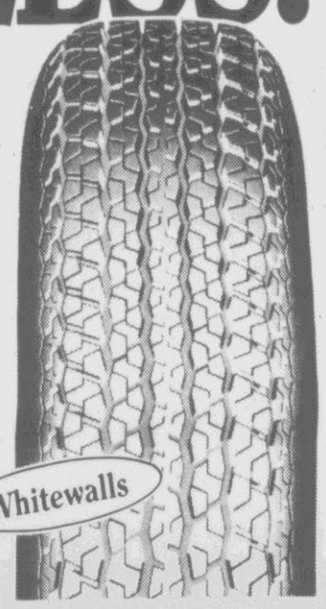

Oh, we could sell you ground beef for $1.19/lb. But we won't do it. Our quality standards are too high.

At Overton's, we believe we sell the finest meats in town. And if that means our ground beef costs a little more, we think we make up for it by offering you a better value.

So, try some ground beef from Overton's. And after you've tasted it, we think you'll say, "Hot dog!"

Mets Blank Braves On 2 Kingman HRs

By The Associated Press

When the New York Mets got a Valentine on May 29, it was like giving Dave Kingman a Christmas present.

Ellis Valentine has had only sporadic success since being acquired from Montreal just two weeks before the players' strike, but Kingman says that his own power groove was given a big boost by having Valentine batting behind him in the lineup.

In the last 16 games before the strike and eight games after, Kingman has 12 home runs and 25 runs batted in, including two solo homers and a run-scoring double as the Mets blanked the Atlanta Braves 4-0 Tuesday night.

"In my mind it's an immense advantage knowing a threat like that is behind me," said Kingman, who bats fourth in the Mets' lineup ahead of Valentine. "Prior to and just after the strike I've been getting pitches to hit. To me, he's (Valentine) been a big help."

Kingman's homers, in support of the combined six-hit pitching of Ed Lynch and Neil Allen, were his 17th and 18th of the strike-shortened season, tying him with Mike Schmidt for the major league lead.

"I'm just comfortable at the plate," said Kingman. "I'm very relaxed. I'm hitting more off-speed pitches now and you have to be relaxed to do that."

Kingman's RBI double came in the first inning off loser Rick Mahler, 3-3. It scored Mookie Wilson, who had singled and stole second.

Kingman got both of his home runs off reliever John Montefusco, on the first pitch of the sixth and eighth innings. Both shots carried into the left field seats.

Lynch, 2-3, allowed five hits in 72-3 innings before he was relieved by Allen with two runners on base in the eighth. Allen retired Bob Horner on a grounder to end that threat and went on to earn his 10th save.

The Mets, 17-34 before the strike, are showing new life in the second season. They have won six of their eight starts and are in first place by a half game in the NL East.

Dodgers 5, Cubs 0

Burt Hooton allowed no Chicago runners past second base as he pitched a four-hitter for his 25th career shutout.

Dusty Baker, who extended his consecutive-game hitting streak to 15, had two run-scoring singles for Los Angeles and Ken Landreaux added a two-run single.

Reds 3, Phillies 1

Tom Seaver outdueled Steve Carlton, surrendering only four hits in 81-3 innings to pace Cincinnati in a battle of three-time Cy Young Award winners.

"It doesn't make any difference (who the opposing pitcher was)," said Seaver. "You condition yourself hard, regardless of whether you're pitching against someone who's 1-10 or 10-1, a first-place team or a last-place team."

Seaver, 8-2, had a three-hitter through eight innings, but needed relief help in the ninth. Carlton, 9-3, gave up two runs in the sixth on a run-scoring single by Ray Knight and the first of two sacrifice flies by Sam Mejias.

Astros 6, Expos 3

Houston, 6-3 in the second half, took over first place in the West as Cesar Cedeno knocked in three runs with two singles and Bob Knepper blanked Montreal for 82-3 innings.

Knepper was working on his fifth shutout of the season with two outs in the ninth when he was victimized by a two-run homer by Larry Parrish.

Padres 4, Cardinals 3

Luis Salazar hitor seven innings as San Diego won only its second game in nine decisions since the strike ended.

Welsh had a 4-1 lead going into the eighth, but he gave up a two-run homer to Gene Tenace to make it close. St. Louis got two runners on base in the ninth against reliever Dan Boone, but John Urrea retired the last two batters for his first save.

Giants 4, Pirates 2

Former Pirates Ed Whitson and Milt May paced San Francisco's victory over Pittsfore having to leave the game with a hyperextended elbow. May knocked in two runs with a pair of singles.

Taking Two

Atlanta Braves second baseman Glenn Hubbard (17) goes high to avoid the flying feet of New York Mets Frank Taveras (11). Taveras was forced out at second on an infield grounder by Hubie Brooks. Brooks was out on the relay to first for the double play. (AP Laserphoto) confrontation.

Enarson predicted many of the CFA presidents would be repelled by the CFA-NBC alliance.

"I really can't believe those 61 presidents will buy that," he said. "How can the CFA say blythly, 'Oh, by the way, we will abide by some of your rules some of the time, but we will decide which rules we will abide by ...'

"When the chips are down and the presidents of these 61 institutions see what's involved, I have difficulty believing they are going to rip and tear at the structure of the NCAA with complete indifference to the consequences," he said. "I think they're going to have second thoughts real quick when they see who is pulling the strings and when they see they would be in partnership in a legal situation against the institution they belong to."

"I remember when entreaties were made to the Pac-10 to join that there were assurances this sort of thing would not happen," said Geiger. "The NCAA as a membership association isn't perfect because it is that. It is a democratic, legislative association of institutions that meet at convention once a year. It has a strong staff. It has many, many things it does exceedingly well."

On Buick Open Course

Kite Upset Over 'Rough'

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — There won't be much rough on the 7,001-yard Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club for this week's Buick Open, and Tom Kite, for one, isn't happy about it.

"I'm disappointed in the course," Kite said following a practice round for the $350,000 championship which begins Thursday in this community near Flint. "They don't have any rough.

"The course isn't nearly as demanding as last year and the winning score, then, was 12 under par."

There hasn't been much rain in southeastern lower Michigan this summer and tournament officials say they simply haven't been able to give the rough the water needed to make the grass grow tall and thick.

"If you miss a shot, in my opinion, you deserve to be penalized," Kite continued. "The way this course is set up this week, guys who are not driving very well are still going to get away with some good scores.

"I predict the winning score will be well below 12 under."

Kite, a 31-year-old Texan, will be working on an incredible string of having made the cut in 29 successive PGA Tour events.

With his tie for fourth at the PGA two weeks ago at Atlanta, Kite has now finished in the top seven in 11 of his last 12 starts and has been in the top 10 in 15 of the 20 Tour appearances he has made this season.

"Actually, finishing 29 times is a very low priority on my list," Kite said. "Winning tournaments is my main concern."

However, Kite will have to overcome one of the toughest fields in Buick Open history to pocket the $63,000 winner's check this week.

In addition to defending champion Peter Jacobsen, eight of this year's Tour winners — including U.S. Open champ Larry Nelson, PGA titlist David Graham and British Open winner Bill Rogers — are scheduled to tackle the par-72 layout.

Peter Oosterhuis, who recently won the Canadian Open, also is entered and, unlike Kite, considers this course a stiff challenge.

"This course has some big greens," Oosterhuis noted. "You have to go for the pins. If you don't, you can find yourself three-putting very quickly."

Also on hand will be Japanese star Isao Aoki, winner of 31 tournaments in his native land but who hasn't won since joining the U.S. Tour in March.

McEnroe Wins, Warned

New Yorker Says Warning 'Nonsense'

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Wimbledon champion John McEnroe insists that he's trying to control himself on the tennis court, but that he can't run away from his quarrelsome reputation because officials and fans provoke him.

McEnroe, the top-seeded player in this week's $200,000 Association of Tennis Professionals championship, had little trouble putting away Schlomo Glickstein of Israel, 6-4, 6-0, in their first-round match Tuesday night. But he was annoyed that even a minor display of temper drew a warning from umpire Ken Stubbs.

"It was nonsense; it just shows how obvious (it was) that the guy was looking out for it," McEnroe said. "It wasn't even anything."

McEnroe drew the warning when he slammed a ball into the net after losing a point on Glickstein's serve early in the second set.

"I really don't think that warranted anything," McEnroe said. "It wasn't as if it was out of the court, number one, which is ball abuse or whatever he called it. And it wasn't near anybody, as if it was going to hit anyone. It was just at the net. It wasn't as if I didn't have any control over where I was hitting it."

Although he obviously was put out by the warning, McEnroe mulled it for a while, then protested to Stubbs following the next point.

"It just bothered me," McEnroe said. "I didn't want to say something then, but then I just realized that it would be better if I said it because I think it was really wrong of him to do that.

"That happens every tournament I play in; it always happens with the officiating. They're always quick to jump on you — it's not that it surpised me, it's just a typical example."

Stubbs, a Volvo Grand Prix official from St. Louis, Mo., said he could not talk about his courtside discussion with McEnroe, which held up play for only a minute or so.

"He made a mistake and maybe I should have just forgotten about it," McEnroe said. "But it was a pretty important point. It was the first game of the second set and I wanted to get up on top and I didn't want nonsense like that."

McEnroe said he's trying to grow away from his "bad boy" image but he believes that some spectators go to see him play just to watch him throw a tantrum.

"I think some people come to watch that and that's unfortunate," McEnroe said. "But the bottom line is coming to watch.

"I don't do it to bring people in; that's the way I am, and I'm trying to get better," he said. "When you get people who want to go in there and bug you and try to get a rise out of you, they shouldn't be allowed in the place.

"But I shouldn't talk to them either. We're both wrong."

In upsets Tuesday, Bruce Manson defeated third-seeded Gene Mayer 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 and Tim Gullikson defeated eighth-seeded Yannick Noah 3-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Second-seeded Jimmy Connors breezed to the second round with a 6-1, 6-3 victory over Van Winitsky.

Changed Lloyd Out To Defend Crown

TORONTO (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd has seen the enemy, and for the first time in years, it is not herself.

From 1974 to 1978, when Lloyd dominated the world of women's tennis, she found herself head-and-shoulders above the rest. She lived in her own mechanical world at the baseline where she would always pump out one more well-placed groundstroke than any of her opponents.

"I didn't feel as though too many women were pushing me to produce my best tennis," said Lloyd of the years when she collected three U.S. Open titles, two Wimbledon crowns, two French Open championships and two Italian Open titles.

During that time she also compiled an amazing clay-court winning streak of 125 matches, a streak that ended on May 11, 1979, when she bowed to 16-year-old sensation Tracy Austin.

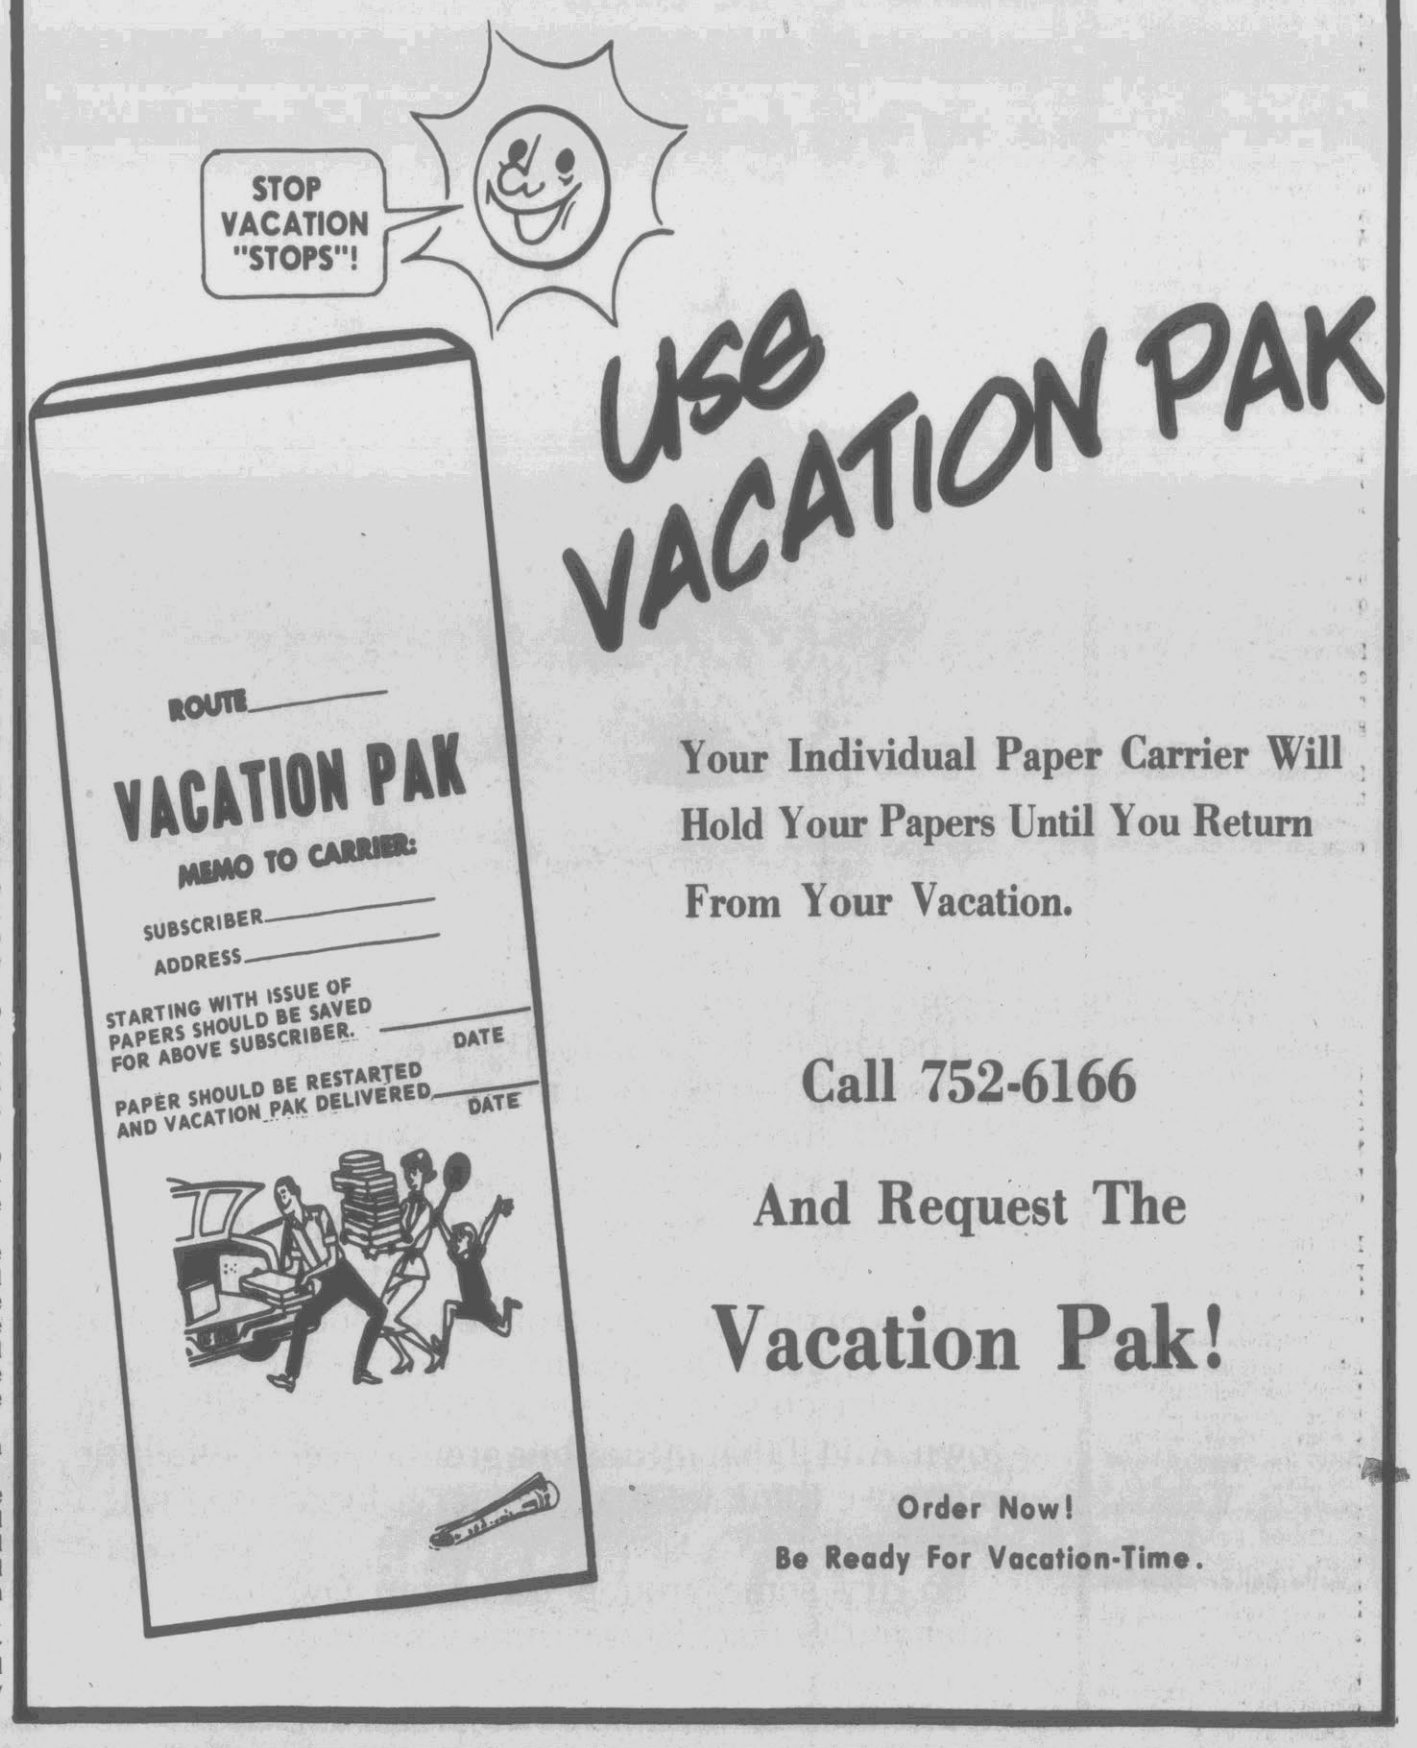

Now Lloyd, 26, can calmly recall this sudden turnabout in her career just before she takes to the court to begin defense of the Canadian Open women's title she won here last year. She can even be thankful that the competition is "a lot tougher now. It's more satisfying."

But things were not so tidy and relaxed for the usually cool Lloyd after her clay-court streak was broken. Austin began to beat her at will, making her then recent marriage to British professional John Lloyd seem to be a bad omen. In February, 1980, she even quit for a few months.

"She had the psychological edge over me," Lloyd said of Austin, the No.2 seed here. "Everyone has a nemesis, the player they have the most difficult time with, and Tracy was that player for me because our styles are so similar.

"I had a tough time dealing with that. Everyone else I played had serve-and-volley games and I never had any experience playing someone who played like me."

The turning point for Lloyd was last year's U.S. Open, when she avenged her 1979 loss — which had stopped her from breaking the record of four consecutive titles — to Austin. From there, Lloyd soon regained the top spot in the world after falling to third.

Nebraska Defense May Be Even Better In 1981

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The University of Nebraska defense was one of the best in college football last year, ranking third nationally in total defense, third in rushing defense and second in points surrendered.

But ninth-year Coach Tom Osborne says this year's edition of the "Blackshirt" defense — with nine returning starters, including an end who can outrun every offensive back on the team — might be even better.

One good reason for Osborne's optimism is defensive end Jimmy Williams, a 6-foot-3, 225-pound senior who is the fastest player on the squad with 4.4 speed over 40 yards. He dropped opposing backs for 137 yards in losses with a team-leading 72 tackles in 1980 and was named Most Valuable Lineman in the Cornhuskers' Sun Bowl victory over Mississippi State.

Osborne says the only problems he foresees defensively are developing depth from untried younger players and finding an end to replace graduated Derrie Nelson at the flank opposite Williams.

He didn't mention the loss of defensive coordinator Lance Van Zandt, who went to the New Orleans Saints after four campaigns at Nebraska. Osborne didn't name a new defensive coordinator.

Tackles Henry Waechter and Toby Williams and nose guard Curt Hineline return in the defensive line, as do Steve Damkroger and Steve McWhirter at linebacker.

In the secondary, starters Rodney Lewis, Ric Lindquist and Sammy Sims are back. The other spot probably will go to Jeff Krejci, a battle-tested reserve a year ago.

Most of Osborne's questions are with the offense, where he must replace running backs Jarvis Redwine and Andra Franklin, both second-round draft picks by the National Football League.

Only third-string I-back Roger Craig, a junior, has playing time under his belt. But saying Craig was a third-string back is a bit deceiving. Despite playing behind Redwine and Craig Johnson, Craig rushed for 782 yards and scored 90 points, good enough to tie him for sixth place nationally in scoring.

"Roger is a very good back, but he's the only one with any game experience and he's never started a game. We'll try to play Roger as much as we can, but we'll have to find somebody to back him up," says Osborne.

The quarterback situation is up in the air. Mark Mauer, backup to senior Jeff Quinn last year, finished spring practice No.1 on the depth chart. But strong challenges are expected from Nate Mason, Turner Gill and Bruce Mathison, especially Gill.

"They are all good athletes, but we'll have to wait and see about Mauer," Osborne said. "He injured a toe and developed a bone chip."

Franklin's fullback spot will be filled by Phil Bates and Mark Moravec, a pair of reserves who saw clean-up duty last year.

Osborne said the quarterback situation will have to develop rapidly to take advantage of excellent receivers in split end Todd Brown, wingback Anthony Steels and tight end Jamie Williams.

Unlike last year, Osborne will return a veteran offensive line.

"Offensively, we feel the line should be awfully strong," he says. Osborne labels center Dave Rimington and tackle Dan Hurley as "very solid." Rimington and tackle Randy Theiss were starters last year as sophomores, a rarity in the Nebraska line.

A weak point last season was the punting game,, but Osborne picked up junior college standout Grant Campbell to handle that chore.

"Other than the fact we play a tough schedule, I think we'll have a pretty good year," Osborne said.

The Huskers open with Iowa, then meet Florida State, Penn State and Auburn before jumping into Big Eight competition.

Nebraska has a tough conference road schedule, playing defending champ Oklahoma and perennial contender Missouri away from home.

"I suspect we're going to have some close games this year," Osborne said, "but we're cautiously optimistic. We'll have a good team, but we'll also play some great teams so we'll have to wait and see."

Legion Awards

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team was honored by Post 39 last night at a dinner for the team. During the activities, three special awards were presented to players. Those receiving the awards included, Roger Williams, left, Most Valuable Player, and Emmett Walsh, right, Most Dedicated. Mark Douglas, named Best Sportsmanship, was not present. (Reflector Photo)

Paterno Predicts Lions To Be 'Fine'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — If optimism wins football games, Penn State should wind up #1 in the country.

Coach Joe Paterno, usually cautious with any preseason predictions, says he expects to have a "fine football team."

He'll need it with an 11-game schedule that has an away date with Nebraska as the second game and finishes with Alabama, Notre Dame and Pittsburgh.

In between is no picnic, with Cincinnati, Temple, Boston College, Syracuse, West Virginia, Miami, Fla., and North Carolina State on the slate.

"We have to have a strong team to operate against our schedule, which is the most difficult in Penn State history," Paterno observed as he prepared for fall practice.

Penn State, according to Paterno, could have a potent offense if tackles Jim Brown and Mike Munchak and guard Sean Farrell recover from injuries. Brown is coming off a broken leg, Munchak and Farrell knee surgery.

Paterno says his key job is finding depth for some critical positions.

"We have to avoid injuries," said the coach.

"Our first concern is to rebuild the defense. We stressed that in the spring and made considerable progress. We have some good, young defensive linemen to go with (senior) tackle Leo Wisniewski who could be an outstanding player," Paterno noted.

"I'm confident we'll have a good defense, but it will be untested early in the season," said Paterno, whose team was ranked eighth at the end of last season.

Paterno, whose teams have been in the Top 10 eight of the last 10 years and reached bowls 13 of the past 15, glows when talking of his offense.

"We have some outstanding skill position players with good depth at running back and wide receivers. We appear to be over injuries and it could be the best group we ever had," he said.

Paterno said he has a strong secondary, with Paul Lankford, Giuseppe Harris and Matt Bradley returning. He also likes his linebacking corps, although Larry Kubin, the team's top quarterback sacker the past two seasons, will be missing.

Kubin signed with the Washington Redskins of the National Football League two weeks ago, forfeiting a fifth year of eligibity that the NCAA awarded him because he sat out the remainder of the 1980 season after injuring his knee in the third game.

The Lions' coach says Farrell is as good a guard as you'll find in the country, and that the duo of Farrell and Munchak is the best set of guards in college football.

Paterno also is high on tailback Curt Warner, a junior who rushed for 922 yards last year.

Daniel Out To Defend World Champ Title

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — For most lady professional golfers, one victory and winnings of more than $113,000 in less than eight months would represent a successful year.

That is not the case with Beth Daniel, defending champion in the $150,000 World Championship of Women's Golf opening Thursday.

Her 1981 achievements do not measure up to last year, when Daniel won four times, collected an unprecedented $231,000 and became the LPGA Player of the Year.

"I had just won two in a row when I came here last year," said Daniel, leading a select international field of 12 into this two-year-old format. "I had a lot of confidence. It's just a frame of mind.

"I just have to be close to the hole. It's been my irons. My putting is OK."

Daniel, shooting 282, won this event last year when it was called the World Series of Women's Golf at The Country Club in Pepper Pike, another Cleveland suburb. She won $46,500, edging Nancy Lopez-Melton by a single shot.

To avoid a court battle with the PGA Tour over the use of the name World Series, its sponsor, International Management Group, changed the name. The sponsors also increased the first prize to $50,000, largest ever for this women's sport, and switched the site to Shaker Heights Country Club, a 6,225-yard test that plays to par of 72.

It's practically the same field as 1980, however. Besides Daniel and Lopez-Melton, qualifiers again were Pat Bradley, Amy Alcott, Sally Little, JoAnne Carner, Donna Caponi, Jane Blalock and U.S. Amateur champion Julie Simpson Inkster.

Hope For Cape Hatteras Lighthouse Is Not Dead

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Leaders of a fund-raising drive to save the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse from the ocean say they're encouraged by the response of National Park Service officials visiting the landmark last week.

At that time, Linville entrepreneur Hugh M. Morton said the officials made their firmest commitment to date to help pay for permanent protection of the lighthouse. The park service manages the lighthouse.

But a spokesman for the National Park Service's regional office in Atlanta said he was not overly optimistic that Congress would appropriate money for the project with the understanding that it could fail to keep the ocean from destroying the landmark.

A number of people, who often have been at odds politically, are joining forces to raise a goal of $1 million toward saving the lighthouse. Morton and Raleigh attorney Tom Ellis are organizing the drive while Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt and Republican Sen. Jesse Helms — who may face each other in the 1984 Senate race — are the titular heads of the drive.

Much of the mailing and behind-the-scenes work is being done by Helms' political organization — the Raleigh-based Congressional Club.

Morton said he and Ellis conducted an aerial survey of the erosion problem last week with William A. Harris, superintendent of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, and Robert Baker, a regional director for the National Park Service in Atlanta. Morton said Hunt made available the state helicopter for the trip.

When the lighthouse was built in 1870, the ocean was more than a quarter of a mile away. But today, the turbulent waters churn less than 100 feet from the base of the structure.

Park service officials say temporary erosion-control measures appear to be working but they quickly add that summer and fall are not the worst seasons for beach erosion. Winter storms, driven by northeastern winds, are the worst for eating away the sands beneath the 208-foot-tall structure.

"This (fundraising drive) has strengthened our hand so we can get the rest (of the money for saving the landmark) through the park service's routine budget process," Morton said in a telephone interview. "Two months ago we couldn't get anybody to listen to us, now we've got things rolling."

Ellis said the federal government's commitment is "as firm as they can make it" and noted that any money would have to be appropriated by Congress. He said the fundraising drive has shown federal officials that "people down here will support it (the lighthouse) and they feel it's worthwhile to save it."

U.S. Interior Secretary James Watt, in a recent visit to Wilmington, promised the federal government would supply an unspecified amount of money to protect the landmark.

National Park Service officials say it will take more study to decide how much it will cost to save the lighthouse, but initial estimates run as high as $4.5 million.

"The reason it's in the trouble it's in right now is because over a 25-year period, they (the park service officials) have not been doing the things they should have been doing," Morton said. "We've got to go into a crash program to save it."

Jim Howard, public affairs officer with the park service regional office in Atlanta, said the agency "will continue to take whatever emergency steps are necessary to give the lighthouse temporary protection."

That includes a project scheduled to begin in the next 30 days to extend the southernmost groin around the lighthouse.

"We are happy others are interested enough in undertaking a project (to save the structure," Howard said. "We appreciate their interest but I wonder in these hard times whether they can come up with the money."

As it always has, he said the fate of the lighthouse continues to rest in the hands of Congress. "We always consider the lighthouse problem wnen seeking money for the park service," he said. "It might be money wasted if the effort (to save the structure) doesn't work. It's pretty hard to convince the members of Congress to take the risk."

Right now, he said, the park service is looking at the situation day-by-day "to see what we have to do to keep the lighthouse there tomorrow."

Howard said that although there have been numerous small-scale fundraising drives for various park service projects across the nation, the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse drive is the largest he can remember.

Morton said the response to news of the drive has encouraged him.

"I've been getting a lot of telephone calls and mail," Morton said. "It's not going to be all big contributors. This is a grassroots campaign. The lighthouse is one of North Carolina's most famous landmarks and everybody's got pride in it."

He said he and Ellis will pick a campaign chairman from each of North Carolina's 100 counties and invited them to Raleigh for an organizational meeting Sept. 8. Both Hunt and Helms are expected to speak to the group.

So far, no letters seeking donations have been mailed nor funds received. But Morton said the campaign is operating smoothly.

"All these people who expected a fist fight to break out are going to be disappointed," Morton said, referring to the diverse political elements involved in the campaign. "They recognize if you get in any in-fighting you're hurting the lighthouse and not anything else."

As early as 1930, North Carolinians began efforts to save the lighthouse from tumbling into the ocean by placing groins along the beach. Between 1936 and 1950, the lighthouse was replaced by a steel tower farther inland until erosion stabilized.

It has been estimated that the federal government has spent $20 million over the years to build groins and pump sand onto the nearby beach. An estimated $3 million has been spent to protect the lighthouse itself.

Require Permit From Doctors

NEW YORK (UPI) — Baby food salesmen in Thailand now need written approval from a doctor or a nurse to help sell their products to expectant mothers. World Environment Report, a newsletter, says the Thai code is in line with a recent World Health Organization recommendation to encourage breast feeding in preference to breastmilk substitutes. The WHO recommendation caused controversy in the United States when the Reagan administration ordered it not be signed. The code drafted in Thailand will become mandatory there if baby food distributors ignore it. The code says the public must be informed that breastfeeding is the best form of nutrition for babies. Pictures of chubby babies are to be removed from baby food labels.

SALE OF MEMENTOS

LONDON (AP) — A battered upright piano owned by Paul McCartney, a valuable Steinway that once belonged to John Lennon, and a custom watch Elvis Presley had made for his chauffeur will be up for sale in an auction of pop and rock 'n' roll mementos this winter, Sotheby's auction house says.

The State Of Status, American Style, Changeth

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

His household staff at attention. His Rolls-Royce in prominent view. His castle behind him.

And John Duke of Bedford, staring into a television camera, confesses: "I'm a duke. But these days people aren't as impressed as they used to be."

What does impress people, the duke says, is a certain green charge card.

Status once was such a simple matter: You had to have money — and spend it so everyone else knew you had it. Blue blood helped; the Social Register was a scorecard.

But status seeking has changed sharply since the day when 19th century industrialist J.P. Morgan launched the world's longest yacht — and delivered the now classic line: if you have to ask what it costs to operate, you can't afford it.

The traditional status symbols — suburban homes, yachts, big cars and expensive dress — now are within the reach of many. As a result, the breed of things we think of as status has expanded, now encompassing everything from daredevil forms of recreation — hanggliding, skydiving and skindiving — to "high tech" home decoration.

"Years ago, there was a consensus among the haves and the have-nots — the Ivy League school, the right family background and what you owned clearly deliniated and defined status," says Barbara Kaplan, vice president of Yankelovich Skelly and White Inc., a New York consulting firm whose business is to keep up with trends.

"These things still apply to certain people. But the definition of status has been broadened to include things not so rigidly defined. Now it can take any kind of direction."

And it does: roller skates in California, a prominent table at Regines, a sturdy new pickup truck in the heartlands, a winter suntan in the North, a weekend trip to Paris, supporting the local playhouse with checks in three and four figures ... the list runs into the thousands.

Among the rich, irony is emerging. John Brooks, author of "Showing Off in America," calls it conspicuous display "in the new mode — the flip side up."

Homes once furnished with the classic touch — marble, teak, leather and crystal — now are filled with industrial equipment in the "high tech" design wave that turns restaurant booths into dining tables and steel shelves into bookcases.

It can be abstract as well. Consider the telephone.

A top executive once gained status by being out of a phone's reach. Perhaps he was on his yacht, at lunch with an important client or at the theater. Now he carries a beeper and interrupts his lunch or leaves during Act II to make an "important" phone call.

Regional vagaries are evident, too.

The Texas millionaire may head for his high-rise office in cowboy boots, a traditional symbol of the lowly ranch hand, and the Hollywood entrepreneur may wear blue jeans, the working man's outfit.

While the struggle for status may seem boorish and self-important to some, sociologists and psychologists say it is an important determinate of self-esteem in an identity conscious world.

"It's been around since time immemorial," says Dr. Robert Conroy, a Menninger Foundation psychologist. "It's important that people get to feeling good about themselves."

"One of our needs is not to be the same as everybody else, yet still be a productive member of society," says Mike Marsden, director of the Center for Popular Culture at Bowling Green State University. "Through various kinds of status symbols, we get resolution of that tension."

Sweeping changes in the social strata are partly responsible for new definitions of status. It's become a game most everyone plays, with hundreds of different rulebooks.

"Everybody marches to the same drummer in status," says University of Cincinnati sociologist Dana Hiller. "It's just that the specific way it gets played out has to do with what is within the reach of each social class."

The wealthy once were the 'leisure class." But now some blue-collar workers with fat union contracts and abbreviated work weeks have become a "leisure class."

There also are a growing number of families where both the husband and wife work — not out of economic necessity but because they want to. With a combined income of $40,000, $50,000 or $60,000 they buy townhouses, take expensive vacations, hire interior decorators and park their new foreign automobiles at the curb.

The family with two incomes has shot a whole class of Americans into upper-income brackets — and meant changes for status, particularly among women.

"Now that women are free to achieve, their status is not so fixed," Ms. Hiller says. "Being attached to the right male is not the only route to a status. Status for women is becoming more achieved than ascribed."

'Western' Restaurants

NEW YORK (UPI) — Even restaurants are going western.

Fourteen cowboy-oriented eateries have opened in the Denver area in little more than two years, according to an article in an industry newspaper, Nation's Restaurant News.

A Chicago restaurant features rattlesnake and buffalo on its Western buffet.

A Miami-based chain that features spareribs in Western-motif outlets has added 17 new restaurants in a 30-month period.

Also in Florida, a motel-restaurant group is converting two restaurants to the western theme. Keith Bates, the group's assistant manager, expects the conversion to pay off in doubled sales.

"Nobody hates the West," restaurateur Jim Errant told the trade paper. Errant operates a Chicago-area chain of Western theme restaurants. "It has an openness, a freedom and it's American."

Some operators feel the trend might be ready to fade into the sunset — but many say it's just beginning and are convinced Western-style spareribs will remain a popular menu item.

Luce Conducts Group Meeting

Scott Luce, president of the Pitt County Epilepsy Association of North Carolina, presided at the quarterly meeting of the Chapter Development Committee of the state association, held in conjunction with the E.A.N.C.'s August board of directors meeting in Asheville.

Luce, along with other officers and member of the Pitt County chapter, represented the Greenville/Pitt County area. Among the topics discussed were selection of a North Carolina delegate to the national Epilepsy Foundation of America convention to be held Oct. 9-11 in Washington, D.C., and possible funding of a pilot program of child restraint devices for use in the Wake County area. Use of such devices is a proven preventive measure for seizures in children due to auto accidents. A law concerning the use of these devices has recently been passed by the N.C. legislature and goes into effect July, 1982.

For further information regarding epilepsy and the local chapter, call Luce, 752-7151, days and 752-3769, evenings.

Hidden Dots Will Fight Torah Theft

NEW YORK (AP) — A wave of torah thefts has forced Jewish groups to abandon 3,300 years of tradition and institute a registration system under which the sacred religious scrolls are marked in invisible ink.

"The theft of a torah is a travesty of the highest order," Rabbi Israel Miller, chairman of the group that developed the registration system, said Tuesday. "The sanctuary used to be a refuge. Unfortunately, this is no longer so."

More than 80 torahs have been stolen from New York synagogues already this year — more than twice the total for all of last year — and Jewish leaders say thefts are on the rise around the nation and in Israel.

Torahs are hand-copied on parchment by scribes using special ink and quills. By ancient tradition, they contain nothing but the Hebrew words of the first five books of the Old Testament.

The scrolls, most of them stolen in burglaries at older, smaller temples, are resold to unsuspecting congregations in the United States and abroad, according to the New York police.

The plan for the Universal Torah Registry calls for identifying code dots to be marked on the scrolls, Jewish leaders said at a police headquarters news conference.

Despite its break with tradition, Miller said the registration plan had been embraced by leaders of the orthodox, conservative and reform branches of Judaism. The method will be used in the United States and Canada and eventually Israel.

A scribe, Rabbi Michael Fuld of Queens, explained that religious scholars gave their blessing to the plan for two reasons: It employs symbolic dots instead of letters or numbers, and the dots are invisible.

Torahs' margins will be stamped with a series of dots, the arrangement and number of which indicate the nationality (American, Canadian or Israeli), telephone number and registration number of the synagogue which owned and filed the scroll.

The code, visible only over an ultra-violet light, will enable congregations wanting to buy a torah to check with the torah registry to make sure the document is neither stolen nor forged, Miller said.

The registry will be operated by a private information firm and supervised by a Jewish organization based in Brooklyn.

The theft of scrolls increased this year as thieves discovered a market for them, Police Commissioner Robert McGuire said.

A used torah costs between $5,000 and $10,000 and a new one between $10,000 and $20,000, officials said.

Careerist Will Be Ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthur Adair Hartman, a career diplomat currently serving as U.S. ambassador to France, will be nominated to be U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, the White House has announced.

An administration source said Tuesday that banker Evan Galbraith would probably be chosen to succeed Hartman in Paris.

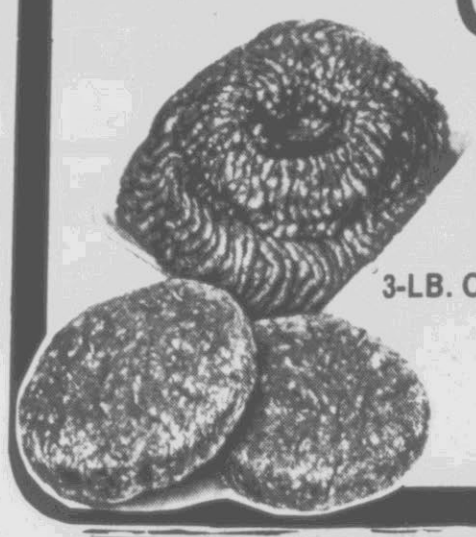

Hartman previously served in Saigon, Brussels and London as well as in various international relations posts in Washington. Before going to France, he was assistant secretary of state for European affairs.

The White House also announced that another career diplomat, Harry G. Barnes Jr., will be nominated to be ambassador to India. Barnes is now director-general of the foreign service and State Department's personnel director.

FEAR 'SERVITUDE'

Performed A Caesarian On Herself

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — A young woman who cut herself open with a pocket knife and delivered her premature infant by Caesarian section was recovering, and her 2-pound baby girl was expected to survive, police say.

The woman — identified by a hospital spokeswoman as Deborah Stagg — chewed through the umbilical cord, sewed up her skin with a needle and thread and was spotted by officers as she carried the baby Sunday morning, her slacks stained with blood, police said.

Police said Tuesday they had considered charging the woman with reckless endangerment, but Tompkins County District Attorney Joseph Joch recommended against such charges until psychiatric tests on the woman could be completed.

The unmarried woman, who is in her 20s, apparently was not in labor but no longer wanted to carry the baby, authorities said.

Police said she had been under casual observation in recent weeks by police officers who knew her.

At 10:30 a.m. Sunday, patrolling officers spotted the woman with a baby carrier strapped around her neck. In it, they found the naked infant, unprotected from the cool morning air, authorities said.

Police said when they approached the woman and her newborn, she asked a patrolman for 75 cents to buy cigarettes.

Officers alerted an ambulance crew. The infant was wrapped in blankets, given oxygen and taken to Tompkins Community Hospital, where she arrived conscious and crying. The baby was moved to a hospital in Syracuse for specialized treatment.

Officers said the infant at first was given slim chance of survival but was doing "remarkably well" Tuesday and doctors said they believed she would survive.

Police said the woman's name was not released by the district attorney's office because her psychological condition had not been determined. But a nursing supervisor at St. Joseph's Hospital Health Center in Syracuse, who asked not to be identified, said the baby was named Anna Stagg and remained in critical condition Tuesday.

An official of Tompkins Community Hospital, who declined to give her name, said a Deborah Stagg who had been brought in after having had a Caesarean section was in serious condition.

The hospital official said the woman had been seven months pregnant when the baby was delivered.

Police said the woman performed the Caesarian on herself at her home using a pocket knife and that the baby wasn't injured during the procedure.

Carters Take A Fishing Holiday

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter turned down an invitation to attend the ground-breaking of the Federation of Fly Fishermen here, but he did come to town for a fishing vacation.

Carter; his wife, Rosalynn, and their children, Amy and Chip, arrived here Tuesday by private jet. After chatting briefly with spectators, the Carters were driven to Yellowstone Village near Hebgen Lake where they plan to enjoy the trout fishing until Sunday.

Carter had been invited to attend opening ceremonies Thursday evening for a new building to house the fly fishermen, who are holding their international convention here this week.

But an FFF spokesman said he was told by an official in the Carter party the former president would not attend the ceremony.

WELFARE SCAM

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A cousin of President Chun Doo-hwan and four other men were arrested by National Police today in connection with a $67,000 welfare scam.

Determined Keep Pledge

CONTINUED TO WORK — Air traffic controller Bill Christiansen says "The whole issue is the oath. When I take an oath, I also make it to God." — AP Laserphoto)

By MELISSA JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — For Bil Christensen, the decision tc cross his union's picket line during the nationwide air traffic controllers' strike boiled down to a promise.

"As a Christian man," he said, "when I take an oath for someone or with someone ... I also make it to God. So if I break it I not only break it with the government, I break it with God. That's not right to me."

Christensen, a 2½-year veteran of O'Hare International Airport's control tower who earns $33,000 a year, said two weeks into the walkout by fellow PATCO members that he is as firm, and even as enthusiastic, as ever in his decision to work.

"I told them two months ago that I wasn't going to walk if they went," he said.

"The whole issue is my oath that I took (not to strike)," said Christensen, 33, a member of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization for seven years. "If it wasn't against the law, maybe I would have gone — maybe. But I took a sworn oath.

"I have no misgivings. I'm totally confident in my decision."

Christensen said the strike hasn't changed his life, which revolves around his wife, his 10-year-old daughter and 8-year-old son who attend private school, and his church.

He said he endured stony silence from many coworkers once his decision became known.

'pAfter that, I got the cold shoulder. They wouldn't talk to me. No one would relieve me while we were working so I could take a break and none of them would let me relieve them," he said.

One day the papers in his mail slot were replaced by a union resignation slip. Written on it was the message, "Sign it, scab."

"One day you're OK and the next day you're like a disease. They hate to be around you. To have them shun you and treat you like that, it does affect a person," said Christensen. "But I didn't lose any sleep over it."

Christensen worked 12 hours overtime the first week of the strike at O'Hare, where he said one other PATCO member refused to strike from the beginning and at least a half-dozen have since returned from the picket lines.

But the atmosphere in the tower is relaxed, Christensen said, and the skies are safe. "If it were dangerous, I wouldn't be up there. I'm a professional. I wouldn't jeopardize my career."

Christensen now makes his way through O'Hare by a little-known route to avoid confrontations, but before he changed his path, he said, he was heckled twice.

"I was real cautious because I really don't know what they're thinking — if the frustration could lead to the point where they might strike me," he said. "I really don't know what to expect, especially when there are three or four of them. I try to stay out of their way as much as possible.

"But I respect everybody that went because it was a hard decision for them. It means a job. It means their career. As far as I'm concerned they're done. They're fired. I think President Reagan had to make a decision, he made a decision and I think has to live up to it. But I'm not happy that anybody lost his job."

And he added: "I've got three priorities in my life. The first is my God. The second is my family. And the third is my job. Everything or everyone else is last. I guess in this case, PATCO was fourth or fifth."

Enlistment Rate Higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's armed services are meeting their manpower goals but a planned increase in military strength and a diminishing pool of military-age youth may pose problems in the future, a Pentagon official says.

Lawrence J. Korb, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, said Tuesday that for the nine months ending last June the Army and Navy hit 100 percent of their planned strength while the Air Force and Marine Corps reached more than 99 percent of their goals.

He said the quality of enlistees has improved significantly at the same time the numbers were increasing.

Korb credited the "strong performance" to an 11.7 percent pay increase voted by Congress last year and other benefit improvements, as well as increased resources devoted to recruiting and greater "support and appreciation from the American public for our young people in uniform."

He warned, however, that future problems that may arise because of a diminishing number of young people, expected increases of about 200,000 in U.S. military strength and "the challenge to retain military members should an improved economy accelerate the civilian wage scale."

THREE MUSICIANS . . . of The Cultural Movment of Goldsboro are shown performing. The company will be in Greenville on Saturday, August 22, at Wahl-Coates Laboratory School with workshops for children from 9:00 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and an evening entertainment for the general public at 7 p.m. There is no admission and the public is invited to attend. The event is sponsored by the Greenville City Schools Community Schools Program.

'Cultural Movement' Performers At School

"All Day African Experience" is the title of an multi-facted entertainment by The Cultural Movement group being presented on Saturday, August 22, at Wahl-Coates Laboratory School as an attraction funded and sponsored by the Greenville City Schools Program.

There is no admission charge, and the public is invited.

Activities for students will be held in the morning, beginning at 9 a.m. and continuing to 1 p.m. These activities will include learning about African clothing, jewelry and instruments.

Registration will be from 9 to 9:20 a.m., with a warm-up activity, "Getting to Know You (Alafia)" scheduled for a brief period. This will be followed by workshops, on a hourly rotating basis, making possible three one-hour sessions for each child participating. These workshops will be from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. with the entire group coming back together for a one-hour session from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. on "Bringing the Arts of Africa Together."

From 7:00 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. Saturday, a special program for the entire family will be presented. This program encompasses costuming, dance, drumming and chants from African countries in an "Evening of African Culture."

The title of the entertainment to be presented at Wahl-Coates on Saturday evening is "So Goes a Day in the Life of an African Village." Cast members are: drummers, Ayinde Hurrey and Milford Best; shakere, Dana E. Roberts; dancers, Barbara Cooper, Brenda Davis, Vikkii Moore, Colette Hurrey, Anne Hurrey, Edna Roberts and Linwood Butler; also members listed above are to be seen in the roles of Salamatu, Titilayo, Ife, a young warrior, a high priestess, a lead chanter, Elegba, Ogun, and Obatala. Additional cast members are Tori Coper and Ayanna Hurrey as young sisters and initiates.

The original presentation was choreographed by Chuck Davis, Artistic Director, the Chuck Davis Dance Company, Bronx, N. Y., with Ngoma Woolbright as music director.

The Cultural Movement, based in Goldsboro, is a professional African Dance Company specializing in drum, dancers, and chants of the Yoruba people of Nigeria. The company has performed extensively in North Carolina and has made an appearance in Virginia. Among their performances have been ones at festivals and in-the-park events in Wilson, Goldsboro, Kinston, and Morganton. A highlight occasion for the company was an invitation earlier this summer to dance in the "African Village Festival" of the American Dance Festival at Duke University. The performance was one of those videotaped to be shown on public television as a special scheduled for airing this fall.

Lerner Is Wed For 8th Time

LONDON (AP) — American songwriter Alan Jay Lerner has married for the eighth time, the Daily Mail reported today.

The newspaper said the 62-year-old Lerner — who wrote the lyrics for "My Fair Lady," currently being revived on Broadway — was wed recently to Liz Robertson, 26, the actress daughter of a security officer in the Port of London.

Linda Blair: 22 Going On 50

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Linda Blair, at 15 the star of "The Exorcist," smiled when she said, "I've crammed a lot of life into the last seven years and things can only get easier from now on."

Linda, 22, starred in 13 movies in the past seven years, survived a succession of live-in boyfriends, a cocaine drug bust, an Academy Award nomination and some bad reviews.

She covered a lot of territory in the seven-year span. Her movie parts often have been as controversial as her off-screen life.

Linda's role as a teenage runaway who is raped in a girl's reform school in the TV movie "Born Innocent" allegedly inspired a real-life assault four days after it aired and led to a court case regarding effect of TV on crime.

She played the title role in another TV movie, "Sarah T: Portrait of a Teenage Alcoholic."

Linda is a survivor with a future and the star of the new horror movie, "Hell Night," a story of fraternity and sorority kids who spend a freaky night in a cavernous, blood-soaked mansion as part of their initiation rites.

She has starred in such other horror films as "The Heretic" and "Stranger in The House," neither of which was memorable.

"Hell Night" is a far cry from "The Exorcist," but Linda, who says she doesn't like horror films, believes it will be a hit. She also believes in herself.

"I don't think I had too much too soon," she said during lunch at the Beverly Hills Hotel's Polo Lounge. "I was only 14 when I did 'The Exorcist' and I found it all very exciting."

Linda's pink cheeks glowed with enthusiasm. Her round, brown eyes were as friendly as a puppy's.

"I certainly didn't get too much money too soon," she went on. "I worked for scale in 'The Exorcist.' But I did get a lot of attention and worldwide fame in a big hurry.

"I guess you could become totally obnoxious with that much happening to you in such a short time. Every door was open to me world-wide. But I think I handled it okay. I wouldn't change anything much. I did the best I could.

"I mean, I'm still here. I'm a nice person.

"Sure, I've asked myself why all this happened to me. I packed a lot of experience into the past seven years and I went through a lot of hardships for someone my age. But I've come out smiling."

What hardships? she was asked.

"Well, the pressures of working and living with people in relationships like marriage and divorce — only not really marriages and divorces, if you know what I mean. It works on you emotionally.

"And I've had people threaten to kill me. I had FBI protection when I was 15 and again when I was 18.

"I'm still on probation for the drug bust and I have a year to go. Part of the probation is giving four talks a year on drug abuse. Believe me, I don't take drugs or get near people who use them.

"I don't enjoy drugs. I've got too many other things going for me, acting and horses. I like to get out and do things. I get high on life.

"It's not easy to live with a lot of recognition. I like being a celebrity sometimes because people are very nice. But I use a different name — and I don't tell anyone what it is — for appearances in horse shows.

"I haye to concentrate very hard when I'm competing and I can't afford to be distracted by people who are concerned about watching Linda Blair, actress."

Linda spends half of each year appearing in horse shows around the country, competing with her five hunters and jumpers for prize money. She lives part of the time in a rented San Fernando Valley home and part time with her female partner-trainer on a farm in Virginia.

The youthful actress laments she has no serious boyfriend at the moment but she is determined to be married and rear a family.

"I'm one of the few people I know at my age who want to get married very much," she said. "I think I would make a good mother because I've been through so much as a kid myself.

"My own mother has been like riding in the passenger seat of my race car in the Indianapolis 500 of life."

Linda paused to make a face, an expression of wide-eyed terror.

"I wonder if I'd want a daughter like me. I think I could handle her.

"You know, I don't feel like I'm only 22. It's not that I think I'm all that sophisticated. I'm ageless.

"What I welcome most right now is peace and contentment. I have no expectations for anything because I don't want to be disappointed. If you expect too much, you find yourself being let down all the time.

"To avoid that, I find the little things in life please me the most."

Bob Hope Will Join Benefit

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope is slated to appear at next month's annual Roy Clark Star Night, a benefit for the Children's Medical Center here, the show's producers said.

Hope and Clark will be joined at the Sept. 12 event by Doc Severinsen, Woody Herman and his orchestra, country music singer Jimmy Dean and comedian Norm Crosby, the Jim Halsey Co. said Tuesday.

CRYPTOQUIP 8-19

ZCFVSHK GBGK'N QRKN NF SHHN BK ZCBVBG QRNHC.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — GREAT HORNED OWL HOOTS IN WOODS ALL NIGHT.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals O

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

Ocean Wealth

"The ocean is a universal mine which can never be exhausted," science fiction author Arthur Clarke once wrote. Scientists believe nodules on the ocean floor hold up to 100,000 tons per square mile of cobalt, nickel, and other metals. Ocean waters also contain vast quantities of dissolved minerals. The estimated 15 billion tons of dissolved aluminum and 320 tons of dissolved silver in the oceans may surpass known quantities of those and other metals on land. In 1970 the UN resolved that "the seas are mankind's common heritage." Representatives from 163 nations are meeting in Geneva, Switzerland this week to discuss ways to share the oceans peacefully and regulate the vast "universal mines."

DO YOU KNOW — What percentage of Earth's surface do ocean's cover?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — The science of growing plants is called horticulture.

"Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

"I feel sure that you will find my client, Mr. South, blameless of any guilt on this hand. He and his partner, Mr. North, who is instituting this action for damages, reached an excellent six spade contract which, as you can see, depends on no more than losing only one trump trick.

"West led a low club. Declarer won in hand and laid down the king of spades. East, an old hand, tried the 'black on black' stunt by discarding a club, but my client was awake. He realized the danger of losing two trump tricks, and saw that, to avert it, he had to shorten his trumps to the same length as West. To accomplish that, he had to ruff two red-suit cards in his hand.

"Since he held seven diamonds and only five hearts between the two hands, my client naturally tackled the heart suit first. Unfortunately, West held only two hearts as well, so he overruffed the third heart and exited with a club, and my client still had to lose a trump trick.

"We maintain that Mr. South was a victim of bad luck and not poor play. Therefore, we request that you find his partner's suit to be frivolous and without merit."

"We, the jury, unanimously find in favor of the plaintiff, Mr. North. However, since Mr. South was on the right track, we recommend that the damages be nominal.

"There is one flaw in the defendant's argument. Since he had to ruff a diamond anyway if he were to bring about the required end position, the success of the contract hinged on finding West with at least three diamonds. Therefore, declarer should have ruffed a diamond before starting hearts. When West shows up with four diamonds, a heart ruff becomes unnecessary — declarer knows that he can safely cross to the dummy with the king of hearts and ruff another diamond. Declarer then simply cashes his high clubs and the ace of hearts before exiting with a low trump. West must then lead from his queen of trumps into declarer's king-jack, and the contract is home."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, AUG. 20, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is filled with difficulties between persons in which greed may be the primary cause. The afternoon and evening gives you a chance to achieve success.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A conversation with financial experts in the morning can prove helpful. Attend the social tonight and make new contacts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A credit matter does not work out right in the morning, but be patient and you'll get the backing you need later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle private matters yourself and don't rely so much on others at this time. Remember, work comes before pleasure.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Keep out of any altercation between two associates and avoid trouble. Make serious plans for the future.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Obeying all rules and regulations that apply to you keeps you out of trouble now. Come to a better accord with associates.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't neglect your work to dash off to seek pleasure, but carry through in a steadfast and wise fashion. Express happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Instead of worrying about some obligation, carry through with it in a conscientious manner and you'll get the right results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to be careful in the handling of regular routines at this time. Take health treatments and improve your appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Show increased cooperation with co-workers and get much accomplished. Don't be too blunt with others now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make sure you can afford an expensive recreation you have in mind before you indulge in it. Sidestep an opponent.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't become involved in arguments with family members at this time. Strive for increased happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use good sense in the handling of money matters. Alter your budget so you can have more working capital in the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she must be taught to cooperate with others instead of fighting for everything that is desired, otherwise your progeny could have a difficult life. There's a marked ability to adapt to new conditions. A good education is a must.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Mixed Drinks Win Approval

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. (AP) — Residents of Emerald Isle approved mixed drink sales by a 179-45 vote Tuesday.

A coalition of church groups in the Bogue Banks resort town had defeated liquor by the drink in a 1979 vote, but the proposal had no organized opposition in this summer's campaign.

Remembered As Math Giant

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Srinivasa Ramanujan, who died some 60 years ago when he was 32, is considered to be one of the giants of 20th-century mathematics, said Dr. George E. Andrews of Penn State University.

Ramanujan, a poor Indian, created his own math formulas. In college, he was so single-minded toward math that he failed other subjects.

Business Chief Needs Talent

ELMHURST, Ill. (AP) — A company which promotes a marketing or engineering executive to the presidency should make sure he's equipped to handle the financial aspects of the job, advises a financial consultant.

According to Robert Muchow, president of Graphic Management Services, "few decisions by the chief executive are more critical than what prices he should charge; yet it is an area in which many new presidents are unprepared.

Environment Aids Nutrition

CHICAGO (UPI) — A favorable home environment even in a poor population can reduce the likelihood of severe malnutrition in children, says Henry N. Ricciuti, of Cornell University's Department of Human Development and Family Studies. Writing in the August Journal of The American Dietetic Association, Ricciuti says a nurturing home with learning opportunities has been shown to reduce substantially the adverse neurological and intellectual consequences associated with low birth weight and prematurity. Even when children with cystic fibrosis are malnourished for organic reasons, he says, the malnourishment does not have a major impact when the home is nurturing.

Computer Crime Loss Expected

BRIARCLIFF MANOR, N.Y. (AP) — Between 1,800 and 2,700 computer crimes will be committed this year at a cost of from $1.2 to $1.8 billion, according to a security firm.

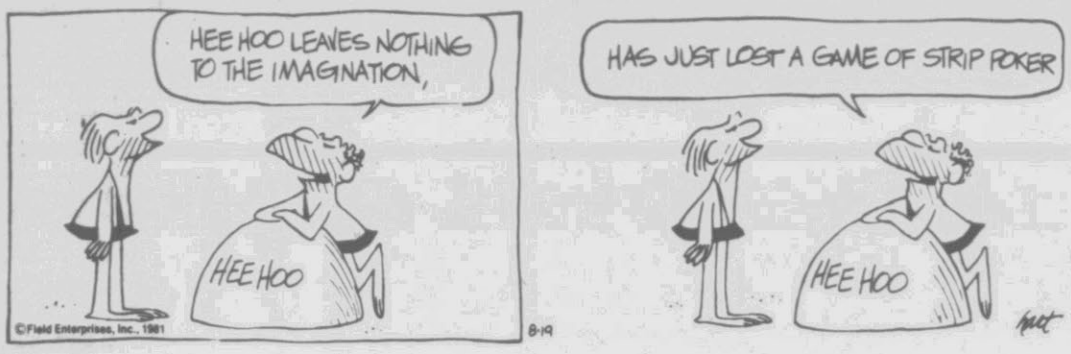

To arrive at the figure, Burns International Security Services Inc. used loss projections for 1980, based on 680,000 installed computer systems.

It also factored in the assumption that only 15 percent of such crimes are detected, said Herchell Britton, executive vice president.

Big Risks All In A Day's Work For Stuntwoman

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Hyla Marrow, a petite, brown-eyed blonde, breezily described one of her recent work days: "I did a 118-foot fall down a construction site with a 250-pound man strangling me all the way — he was actually harnessed to my neck."

Ms. Marrow is a professional stuntwoman, one of a handful working in New York City. The scene she described was filmed for the latest Brian De Palma movie, "Blow Out," starring John Travolta and Nancy Allen.

"I know how to do dive rolls, but my character was already dead, so my arms and legs were flying all over the place as I fell, and when I came down, everybody rushed over, they were sure my legs were broken," Ms. Marrow said.

"I went down three times," she added, with a smile, "and I didn't get hurt."

Ms. Marrow, 26, has worked as a professional stuntwoman for six years. For the past two years, she has been a member of the Professional Stuntmen's Association. She is one of three female members of the 20-member association.

She has never suffered a serious injury.

"Some people say, you're crazy, you're doing something dangerous, but I don't think I'm doing something dangerous," she said.

Does she ever think about getting hurt?

"I think about it when I'm offered the stunt. The first thing I think about is the danger, am I qualified, and, secondly, which is very important, who am I working with, because you have to trust the people you're working with," she said.

She is, however, insured by her union.

Is she ever afraid?

"I am afraid of fire and I won't do anything with fire," she said.

Ms. Marrow's stunt work may involve getting hit in the face during a fight scene, dodging speeding automobiles or jumping out of windows. But Ms. Marrow, who stands 5-feet 4½ and weighs 100 pounds, says her work doesn't require physical strength. What it does require, she said, is training, technique and stamina. She says she trains regularly with other members of the Professional Stuntmen's Association.

"It's only in the past couple of years," she said, "that women have done stunts." She wouldn't recommend the profession to other women unless they've had a lifetime of athletic training, years of experience, and are truly obsessed with the idea of working as a stuntwoman.

Ms. Marrow, who does both acting and stunt work, has appeared in more than 80 films, including "So Fine," starring Ryan O'Neal, and "Rocky III," starring Sylvester Stallone. "I'm supposed to be doubling Mia Farrow in Woody Allen's new picture, which should be really exciting," she said.

One of her goals is to star in a comedy film that combines both acting and stunts, "because I like my face in front of the camera, too." She said she believes her ability to combine acting and stunt work makes her unique.

"You get paid by how many times you do the stunt. Every time you do the stunt, you get your fee. You get your normal actor's wage and then you also get something on top," she explained. "You don't get paid anything extra if you do it wrong."

Ms. Marrow said she had been a dancer, gymnast, sportswoman and athlete since childhood. She attended Indiana University, where she studied music and dance, before moving to New York City at the age of 19. She toured with a ballet company "but I didn't like to be in the chorus, I just couldn't stand it." Then one day, she decided to try acting.

"The first film I did was 'The Godfather' and then I did 12 films in two weeks. Just little bit parts. And I thought, wow, this is easy!" she said. She was asked to do her first stunt for the film, "Deadly Hero," in 1975.

Ms. Marrow says working as a stuntwoman gives her the feeling of being somebody very special.

"We're treated so well, doing stunts. The directors treat you with kid gloves and stunt people respect you and the crew, you're like one of the guys on the crew."

And for Ms. Marrow, there is that wonderful feeling of doing something she really loves to do. "I'm getting paid to do something fun," she said. "I don't work."

Joint Custody Choice Is Rising

NEW YORK (UPI) — A dramatic increase is occurring in the number of parents choosing joint custody in divorce settlements, says divorce lawyer Joseph Steinberg. Steinberg adds that a joint agreement greatly reduces the chances of settlement violations and further court confrontations. The Hartford, Conn., attorney says 50 percent of all post-divorce parents in the past had returned to court later as a result of disputes over child support payments or custody stipulations. Steinberg's views were expressed in a special report on joint custody appearing in the August-September issue of Working Mother magazine.

Author's Protege Now Fleeing Murder Charges

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Henry Abbott was the toast of the town's literary set just a month ago, an untrained writer who'd parlayed a hellish lifetime behind bars into an acclaimed new book and a promising new life.

Today Abbott is on the run, possibly in Mexico, trying to dodge a murder charge, trying to hide the letters J, A, C, K that are tattooed on the four fingers of his left hand.

His writing since mid-July seems to have been limited to two letters mailed to his sister in Salt Lake City, naming her recipient of royalties from "In the Belly of the Beast," a vivid collection of letters Abbott wrote to author Norman Mailer about prison life.

Police say that on July 18, six weeks after he was moved from a Utah prison to a Manhattan halfway house, Abbbott argued with a waiter. They stepped out to the sidewalk, where the waiter was knifed and killed.

Since then, Mailer, the man who discovered Abbott, helped him get his letters published, wrote a letter to his parole board and gave him a job in New York has refused to discuss the case.

Mailer is "still unwilling to talk about it. I think that unwillingness will be permanent," Scott Meredith, literary agent for Mailer and Abbott, said Monday.

"He's just heartsick. He's so distressed about how this turned out," Meredith said of the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer, who is spending August in Maine.

Mailer has been alternately criticized for ignoring or glamorizing Abbott's record of violence, which began with reform school at age 14 and culminated with a conviction in 1966 for killing a fellow inmate. Abbott is now 37.

"The press is mad at Norman because he won't talk about this," said an associate who asked not to be identified. "And they have a right to be. He shouldn't have crawled into a cocoon like this, especially since he's usually so open."

The detective supervising the manhunt said Abbott would be caught eventually. He has spent all but 10 months of his life since age 14 in custody, and "he is fundamentally incapable of coping in free society," said Detective William Majeski.

"He's a survivor," Majeski conceded. "But that was in prison. In New York he had trouble from the start."

Majeski said that although Abbott never showed signs of paranoia or violence to Mailer or Meredith, he was unable to deal with routine matters.

Meredith said he was shocked by the knifing.

"Even when we had small business disagreements he was mild, pleasant and gentle. There was never the slightest indication of a tendency toward violence," he said. "I would have walked down any street with Jack, and I can't say that for all my clients."

When Abbott was in prison, Meredith, Mailer and Random House editor Eroll McDonald wrote letters to his parole board, praising his writing. But others say that was not why he was granted parole, effective Aug. 25, and moved to a halfway house in the interim.

Lawyers with the Prisoners' Rights Project at the federal prison in Marion, Ill. say Abbott made a deal: in return for criticizing prisoners' lawyers at Marion and recanting a story about being tortured by guards there, he would be sent back to Utah state prison, where he could seek parole on state charges.

The prison lawyers imply — and federal officials deny — Abbott was released early because he charged the lawyers with encouraging an inmate work strike.

"You'll have to draw your own conclusions, but until he talked to them, he was not getting out," said Jacqueline Abel, a staff lawyer who had represented Abbott.

JACK ABBOTT

Capt. Thomas Bona, director of the maxiumum security unit at the Utah prison, told a reporter he opposed Abbott's release. "Abbott was a dangerous individual who should be given a re-hearing (for parole) in two years," Bona said of his feelings at the time. "... His attitude, his demeanor indicated psychosis."

"In the Belly of the Beast" has gone into its third printing and should earn its author at least $250,000 when foreign sales are included, Meredith said. Abbott had been paid about $16,000, most of which went for lawyers' fees.

Meredith said it was too early to determine the crime's effect on sales.

"People have said this is great publicity, but we're very nervous about that. It could be people will walk away from the book," he said.

On whether he remains Abbott's agent, Meredith said, "Well, I'd like to hear his side before I answer. But I suppose I am.

"I think he's gone for good. He won't come back. He can't. He's a great talent, but it was a horrible crime."

NOW Walk To Be Held Saturday

The Greenville Chapter of the National Organization for Women will sponsor a Walk for Women's Equality Saturday.

The walk will begin at Green Springs Park at 8:30 a.m.

The Greenville NOW Walk is part of the final year's campaign to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The deadline for passage of the amendment, which would give women equality of rights under the law is June 30, 1982. The event also commemorates the Aug. 26, 1920 passage of the 19th Amendment which granted women the right to vote. August 26 has been declared Women's Equality Day by every president since 1974. This is the fifth and final year NOW has held nationwide walks for women's equality. With funds raised from these events, the organization plans to fulfill the work of the suffragists by ratifying the Equal Rights Amendment, Greenville NOW President Lil Simmons said.

Each participant will be sponsored in the walk by individuals or companies which have pledged a contribution to NOW's ERA ratification fund. The 10-mile walk will take about three hours to complete. Women, men and children are invited to participate as walkers or sponsors. For more information, contact Lil Simmons, 752-4440, or Phyllis Conner, 752-4940, after 5:30 p.m.

Kick-Off Set For Fund Drive

RALEIGH — Monday, August 24 is the date set for the kick-off of the 1981 N.C. Special Olympics Sponsor Campaign — a direct-mail program aimed at raising $20,000 for the mentally retarded of North Carolina.

The N. C. Special Olympics (N.C.S.O) is a year-round program of physical fitness, sports training and athletic competition, and presently serves over 20,000 mentally retarded citizens throughout the state.

Those who wish to participate can call the N.C.S.O. State office at 787-6714, or write to: N.C. Special Olympics Sponsor Campaign, P.O. Box 30191, Raleigh, N.C., 27622.

New Numbers For Phone Co.

Telephone customers in Greenville, Ayden and Bethel will need to dial a new number to conduct their business with Carolina Telephone starting Aug. 25.

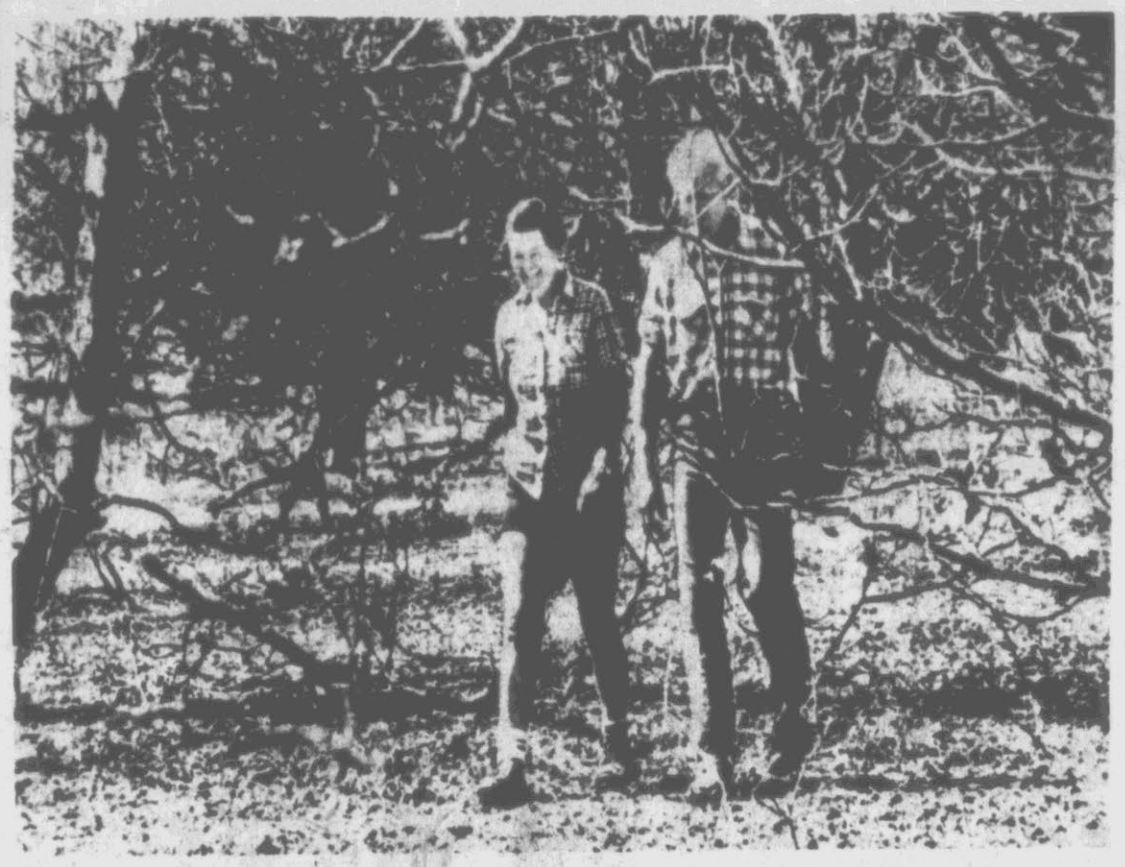

The customers in these three communities are served by the business office/phone shop here. Residential customers will need to dial 355-9111 and business customers will need to dial 355-5131 to get assistance with orders for service and equipment and make inquiries about their bills.

Dick Flye, district commercial manager, said, "This change complements the installation of a new computerized communications system in March. It allows each business and residential caller to talk directly with his service representative about his service needs without going through a switchboard attendant."

The new number appears in the updated Carolina Telephone directory, which customers are now receiving.

Offer Personal Finance Class

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — A course in handling personal finances was so successful with San Diego's elementary, junior and senior high school students that it's being introduced in all of California's public schools this fall. The three-part program was developed by Crocker Bank to teach students how to use money effectively. Among its subjects are the basic skills of budgeting, savings, checkwriting and record keeping.

TREETOP STROLL — Sam and Ann Hornstra used to spend evenings walking under the trees in their nut orchard and dairy farm along the Cowlitz River. But since Mount St. Helens' mammoth eruption in May, 1980, rocks, mud, pumice and other debris have buried their once-fertile trees. Now, says Mrs. Hornstra, they stroll among the treetops and reflect on the days when their valley was referred to as "God's country". (AP Laserphoto)

Becoming Emperor Was Mistake, Says Bokassa

EDITOR'S NOTE — On July 14, 1977, Michael Goldsmith was arrested while on assignment in the Central African Empire and jailed for 30 days, during which he was sometimes shackled and beaten. On the first occasion — at the royal palace — Emperor Jean-Bedel Bokassa administered the beating himself, striking Goldsmith on the head with a heavy stick and knocking him to the ground. The correspondent was accused of spying for South Africa, apparently because he filed a story to Johannesburg dealing with Bokassa's plans for his coronation the following December. The emperor said pleas from Goldsmith's wife prompted him to free the reporter. The two men met again Sunday for an exclusive AP interview.

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Exiled dictator Jean-Bedel Bokassa says the decision to proclaim himself emperor of the Central African Republic was "the greatest mistake of my life."

"Everyone became jealous of me because I had an empire and they didn't, so they conspired to overthrow me," the 60-year-old former monarch said in his Ivory Coast home.

In the third interview he has been allowed to give in his two years here, Bokassa blamed former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing for his downfall. But he said, "I got my revenge later when I helped to end Giscard's own political career."

A French-supported coup in September 1979 toppled Bokassa from his imperial throne, and he has lived since in the Ivory Coast government's official guest palace.

Bokassa's predecessor, David Dacko, succeeded him, taking over as leader of the former French colony. But the underdeveloped, landlocked country remains in political turmoil, virtually bankrupt after Bokassa's $30 million coronation in 1977 and his often brutal 14-year rule. Bokassa, who took over in a 1966 coup, led the country as president until he decided to become emperor.

He vehemently denied his alleged participation in atrocities committed under his rule, including the massacre of more than 100 schoolchildren in Bangui's Ngaragba prison, alleged cases of cannibalism in his one-time residence and the accusation that he fed live prisoners to the crocodiles he kept in his garden.

"The crocodiles were merely a decoration," he said. "Some people have compared me to (former Ugandan dictator) Idi Amin. But Amin was overthrown because he really did commit atrocities and because he went to war against Tanzania.

"I always lived in peace and harmony with all my neighbors."

Bokassa said he had "neither the ambition nor the intention of returning to power.

"If the people of the Central African Republic should one day see no solution other than to ask me to return, I would accept — but only as president, never as emperor," he added.

Bokassa acknowledged that his elaborate coronation was modeled on that of Napoleon Bonaparte, his hero, but, unlike Napoleon, he refused to carry his imperial titles and protocol into exile.

"Everyone now calls me Mr. President," he said. "That's the way I want it."

He received me Sunday in the simple waterfront apartment occupied by three of his sons. The eldest, formerly "Crown Prince" George, arranged the interview with elaborate security precautions.

I had spent a week looking for Bokassa in Abidjan. I finally found George, then arranged three meetings before Bokassa showed up for the fourth one — cheerful and in high spirits.

He embraced me three times, just as he had done when I left him four years earlier, and again after the two-hour interview. He put the blame for my arrest on his chief of police, who he said had deceived him about me.

Bokassa's stubbly beard has turned partly gray, but he appeared more fit and relaxed than during his two-year reign.

The former emperor expressed his gratitude to Ivory Coast President Felix Houphouet-Boigny for allowing him and his 23 children to settle in this West African country, although he was kept under virtual house arrest until early this year.

Bokassa said he felt proud and gratified to have made a "decisive contribution" to Giscard d'Estaing's defeat in last May's French presidential election.

Bokassa's repeated charge that he gave Giscard d'Estaing and his wife, Anne-Aymone, numerous gifts of diamonds and elephant tusks became known as the "French Watergate." Giscard d'Estaing belatedly acknowledged receiving small quantities of diamonds, but he said he sold them and gave the proceeds — about $8,000 — to charities in the Central African Republic.

"That estimate was ludicrous," Bokassa declared. "Giscard was my friend for 10 years. He visited me at least once a year and on every occasion I gave him substantial amounts of top-quality diamonds and entire ivory tusks. Their total value over the years must have been well over 600 million (CFA) francs ($2 million).

"I have never met the new French president, Francois Mitterrand, but I have the highest esteem for him. Although I don't usually say it publicly, I feel he owes me a small debt of gratitude."

Bokassa, a veteran of the French Army who rose through the ranks to infantry captain, still receives his monthly captain's pension from the French Embassy in Abidjan. But the Mitterrand government has not granted him the French passport to which he claims he is entitled.

Bokassa owns extensive property, including several chateaus in France, but cannot visit there because he has no valid travel document.

Dacko overthrew Bokassa's empire with the help of French paratroopers on Sept. 19, 1979, while the emperor was conferring with Libya's Moammar Khadafy in Tripoli on a "vast Libyan aid program" to the Central African Empire.

"Two hours after I left his palace, I heard that I had been overthrown — and I never saw Khadafy again," Bokassa said.

When Bokassa's private plane then took him to France, Giscard d'Estaing refused to let him set foot on French soil.

The commandant of Ngaragba prison, Joseph Mokoa, and Bokassa's son-in-law, Dr. Jean-Bruno Bedeavode, were sentenced to death and executed in Bangui for their alleged role in the January 1979 massacre of the schoolchildren. Bokassa himself was sentenced to death in absentia, but Houphouet-Boigny has rejected Dacko's demand for extradition.

On the lapel of his elegantly tailored beige safari suit, Bokassa wore a black button of mourning for Bedeavode and for another relative who committed suicide in Bangui after Dacko's coup.

"All the accusations against me and my family were infamous lies," he declared.

Bokassa's son Nicaise, 20, is a student in Washington D.C.

"I always had a special admiration for the United States," the exiled emperor said. "In the unlikely event that the Central African people should ask me to return to power, I would continue my 100 percent pro-Western policy.

TALKING UP SPACE SHUTTLE — It takes a lot of talk to put America's space shuttle into orbit, most of it on the telephone. Here at Kennedy Space Center in Florida, two technicians man a GTE No. 2 EAX Electronic Telephone Switching System. NASA uses the system to serve 15,000 people using more than 9,000 telephones, process about 90,000 telephone calls a day, and interconnect with more than 800 computer communication modems. Urging A New Way To Control Air Pollution

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The blame for poor air quality in many parts of the country lies at the feet of government, not industry, argues a Yale law professor in a new book.

Bruce A. Ackerman, who wrote "Clean Coal, Dirty Air" with one of his students, William T. Hassler, believes Congress and the Environmental Protection Agency have handled the problem of air pollution ineptly. The book focuses on the creation and enforcement of the Clean Air Act as it applies to emissions from the burning of coal.

"Congress's well-intentioned effort to improve the administrative process has driven EPA to an extraordinary decision that will cost the public tens of billions of dollars to achieve environmental goals that could be reached more cheaply, more quickly and more surely by other means," Ackerman said in a recent interview in his office at the Yale Law School.

"This is the way it ought to be done: Congress should set goals in terms of what it wants. That is, a healthier environment should extend the life of 25,000 or 50,000 people or whatever for one year.

'The second step should be for EPA to determine how to achieve those goals — what sort of things you can control, and set goals for industry. And then leave it to industry to find the best way to meet those goals."

Ackerman maintains that if industry were allowed to burn coal that gave off "x" amount of sulfur oxides and were sufficiently taxed on the amount over that figure, industry would find a way to remove the pollutants at a cost less than the tax.

"But the present system doesn't do that," Ackerman said. "Congress instead chose to go for the 'pie-in-the-sky' of wanting clean air, instead of stating operational goals. The law lacks real human values."

Congress tried to "force" the issue of clean air by removing it from the discretion of the agency and setting a particular policy. But in doing so, Congress and the EPA became fixated "with the scrubber as a symbol of technological salvation," the Yale professor said.

Ackerman argues in his book that by determining that scrubbers were the best method of emission reduction, the government overlooked "the enormous quantity of sludge" they generate and introduced a costly process it was not technically capable of evaluating.

Ackerman believes the nation could achieve the same clean-air goals at about half the current cost.

"An effluent tax is the mechanism to force industry to clean up its emissions," said the 37-year-old native of New York City, explaining that business will naturally find the cheapest way to do things.

("Clean Coal, Dirty Air" is published by Yale University Press.)

Rural Fire Report Issued

During July the rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 57 alarms with 47 fires, County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner reports.

There were two house fires; two house trailers; 16 buildings, 13 motor vehicles, one grass or woods fire, two false alarms, 11 "others" and 10 mutual aids.

There was $119,800 involved in fires; $404,800 exposed; $68,700 lost; and $455,900 saved by the rural fire departments. The Farmville and Staton House Departments had the most fires — seven each.

"RACIST ADS" — Jan Hammil (right), vice-president of the American Indians Against Desecration, complained last week that the character "Injun Andy" (left) used by the Indiana State Fair Board in advertising was racist and derogatory to native Americans. Ads on radio and television were pulled following the complaint but billboard ads and the lifesize character will be at the fair when it opens Thursday. Another group of Indians said the mascot was not offensive. (AP Laserphoto)

Murder Charges Filed In An Old Yachting Mystery

By LINDY WASHBURN
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — No one ever expected a body.

That's why no murder charges were filed.

But when the waves heaved a battered aluminum trunk to the edge of Palmyra Lagoon in January, the last link in a chain of clues led to two murder indictments.

A couple walking on the beach after anchoring their boat at the remote Pacific atoll spotted the trunk, its lid agape. Inside were bones, the burned and broken skeleton of Muff Graham.

Muff and her husband, Malcolm, a wealthy San Diego yachting couple, had been listed as missing almost seven years.

Graham had been bid farewell in a "ceremony of aloha" near Diamond Head on Nov. 10, 1974. The sea swallowed the vanda orchids dropped from the decks of a half dozen yachts in memory of Mac and Muff. It seemed then that the sea had also swallowed Mac and Muff, along with any clues to their disappearance.

All that remained was their yacht, the 38-foot ketch Sea Wind. Shorn of its figurehead and nameplate, painted lavender over its original gleaming blue, it was anchored at Honolulu's Coast Guard station.

The boat had been piloted 1,100 miles from Palmyra to Honolulu by Stephanie Stearns and Buck Walker, who were tried the following year and convicted on federal charges of stealing the yacht.

Miss Stearns served a year in prison and a year on probation, then moved to California. Walker, who had a criminal record to the 1950s, served 42 months in a federal penitentiary before escaping in July 1979.

In February, a month after the bones were found, a federal grand jury in Honolulu indicted Miss Stearns and Walker for killing Eleanor Lavern "Muff" Graham in "an attempt to perpetrate a burglary or robbery."

Miss Stearns, now 34, surrendered in March and pleaded innocent April 2. Her trial is to begin here Oct. 20.

Walker was arrested last Wednesday in Yuma, Ariz. and taken into federal custody. Barring any problems in transferring him to Hawaii, officials said they hoped to combine his trial with that of Miss Stearns.

The Grahams were deepwater sailors, living a dream of an endless cruise. They already had circled the globe once, a voyage of six years, when they set out in June 1974 on a two-year journey across the Pacific. Mac was 43, Muff 42.

Sailors who moored near the Grahams in Palmyra Lagoon, a stopping-off spot on the long trip between Hawaii and Fiji or Tahiti, told of invitations to dinner where they sipped champagne from crystal goblets.

But the Grahams, who sought solitude, were not to be left alone.

Three days before the Grahams arrived, Walker and Miss Stearns — who were calling themselves Roy and Stephanie Allen — ran aground on the Palmyra reef. Neither the motor nor the radio in their leaky sailboat, the Iola, was working.

The crews of two boats moored in the lagoon helped the "Allens" off the reef. They were a "hippie" couple, those sailors later testified. The description stemmed from the Iola's condition as much as Walker's wild appearance — 37 years old, he was missing several front teeth and had long red hair, a bushy beard and tattoos on his chest and arms.

With three dogs to feed and very little food, he started felling coconut trees with a chain saw and shooting fish with a gun. The seeds the couple brought in hopes of "living off the land" were eaten by crabs and birds.

So they mooched, begged and traded for food. They grew hungry.

In July and August, the "Allens" and the Grahams were the only people continuously moored at Palmyra. Other sailors who dropped anchor — Edwin Pollock of Honolulu, Thomas Wolfe of San Diego and others — later told of bad feelings simmering between the couples.

So did Curtis Shoemaker, a ham radio operator in Hawaii who spoke with the Grahams every Monday and Wednesday night. Shoemaker talked to Graham for the last time Aug. 28, 1974.

"I remember Mac saying, 'I guess they're going to declare a truce. They're bringing over a cake tonight.' That's the last I ever heard from him," Shoemaker said.

Six weeks later, he reported the couple missing to the Coast Guard.

In mid-October 1974, the "Allens" sailed the Sea Wind to Oahu, put the boat into drydock, repainted the hull and moved on to the Ala Wai Boat Harbor in Waikiki.

The distinctive double-masted ketch was recognized immediately.

The Coast Guard acted Oct. 28, arresting Miss Stearns. Walker was picked up 11 days later, his hair cropped and beard shorn.

In their trials, the two testified that Mac and Muff Graham, with whom they had become "close friends," invited them to dinner Aug. 28. Miss Stearns said the Grahams had told them in advance to "make ourselves at home" and gone out fishing.

The next day, according to Miss Stearns, the Grahams' overturned dinghy was found in the lagoon.

The jury rejected their story. Each was convicted of stealing the yacht and $400 in the cabin and knowingly transporting stolen property.

But the Grahams' disappearance was a mystery.

Seven years later, a strolling couple found a box filled with bones. The skull, identified by dental records as Mrs. Graham's, had a small hole in the left temple. The bones and the trunk were charred.

Mac Graham's remains are still missing.

STILL A MYSTERY — Muff and Malcolm Graham, listed as missing since 1974, but 7 years later a strolling couple found a box at the Pacific atoll of Palmyra. Inside were bones of Muff Graham, but Mac is still officially missing. (AP Laserphoto)

Bank Robbery Sees A Decline

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a summer when, as the police commissioner said, thieves seemed to have declared "open season" on the city's banks. They robbed 139 in a month — as many as 13 in a day — making New York City in 1979 feel like Dodge City in 1879.

But two years later the criminal run for the money in New York banks apparently has subsided. Although the city's overall crime rate continues to rise, bank heists are down about 19 percent compared with 1979. In that year the bank robbery rate soared 36 percent for a total of 860, even though crime in general was only up 10 percent.

That summer "was incredible, bizarre," recalls Citibank Vice President William Heron, whose bank would have "one or two robberies a day."

There are many theories for why the number of bank robberies has dipped in the Big Apple, but there is agreement that banks are more secure and police better organized than two summers ago.

Bandit barriers — bullet-proof glass or plastic windows — now separate tellers from the public at more than a third of the city's 1,700 branch banks; police say the vast majority of robberies now occur at offices without the shields.

A study by New York police indicates that robberies at a series of branch banks dropped by 79 percent once bandit barriers were installed. Attempted robberies were down 37 percent.

Meanwhile, police work also has improved, thanks to an FBI-city task force and the local department's own major case squad. Officers record, plot and study robberies, look for patterns and try to predict where offenders will strike next.

Thus, while in 1979 only one bank robbery in two ended in arrest, this year three out of four cases are solved.

Another sign of the times was the arrest earlier this month of a man who police have accused of being a one-man crime wave. Jesse Copeland is charged with stealing $50,000 from 29 New York state banks since April, including $2,000 from a Greenburgh bank on the day before his arrest.

Whatever caused the spree of robberies in 1979, the mere mention of that summer makes bankers and detectives shudder.

There was the daily record of 13 robberies on July 1; the monthly record of 125 in July; and then a new record of 139 in August.

By October bandits had made off with $5.5 million, and the New York State Bankers Association called for wholesale construction of bandit barriers.

In the months that followed, the mania spread to the suburbs. A man with a gorilla mask robbed a bank in Dunkirk; a Rockland County man was accused of five bank robberies — in a wheelchair; Nassau County has a "smiling bandit" robbing its banks.

Nor were bank guards much help. In a survey of 102 robberies, it was found that on 50 occasions the guard did not even realize a robbery was taking place; in 19 others he was away from his post. In only nine cases was the guard able to apprehend the robber.

Another problem, said pyschologist Robert Rieber, was that banks had been trying to get rid of "the punitive father image banks have always had" and replace it with "a more nurturing mother image" — thereby inviting bank robbery.

In his view, attempts to reach out to the public — as evidenced by gifts for deposits, advertising for loans and reduction of security — had backfired by making the average man — and robber — too comfortable in a bank.

Now, "it's as if the word has gotten around," says Chief of Detectives James Sullivan. "Banks are no longer an easy score in New York City."
