Protest Demonstrations In Two Of Libyan Cities

ROME (AP) — Mass demonstrations were reported in Libya's two biggest cities to protest the American downing of two Libyan jets, but there was no indication that any of the 2,000 Americans in the North African country were menaced.

The official Libyan news agency JANA said here that "popular masses" in Tripoli, the capital, and Benghazi, "organized mass demonstrations to show their anger and to challenge the aggressive acts by the American airplanes against two Libyan airplanes."

A European businessman who saw part of the Tripoli demonstration told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that it was well organized and peaceful. He said the protesters chanted in Arabic as they marched. The businessman, who requested anonymity, was interviewed after he returned from Libya.

Most of the Americans in Libya are oil company employees and their families. The government's Tripoli Radio said the American companies rejected a recommendation from the U.S. government to evacuate their employees after the aerial clash Wednesday. But it said none were complying.

In New York, however, a spokeswoman for Exxon said families of a number of its employees were leaving Libya. A Conoco spokesman said it was "business as usual" for its personnel.

In Findlay, Ohio, the Marathon Oil Co. said today its 10 employees would remain in Libya. He said with workers' dependents, the company has about 25 people there, most of them in Tripoli.

NO MORE MAILING FOOD STAMPS

Ed Garrison, director, Pitt County Department of Social Services, reminds all food stamp recipients that, effective Sept. 1, it will be necessary for all households receiving food stamps to go to the Social Services Department, located in the County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth Street, to pick up their monthly allotments of food stamps.

Food stamps will no longer be mailed to households eligible to receive them. Instead, each family will receive an Authorization to Participate card, which they will present at the Department of Social Services to receive the allotment of stamps.

Food stamp allotments have been mailed to eligible households on a monthly basis since August, 1980. However, because approximately $9,428 worth per month have had to be replaced after being lost or stolen, the Pitt County DSS is now requiring that eligible recipients go in person to the DSS to pick up food stamps. Notices of this change in issuance procedure was mailed to all food stamp recipient households earlier this month, Garrison said.

INTERNATIONAL FRIENDSHIP

Chung Joo Suh, president of the International Friendship Society of Seoul, Korea would like to appeal to Americans 12 to 20 years old to correspond with Korean students of the same age. "Many a Korean student is so eager to correspond with your people," he said. "By exchanging letters, they will surely increase their knowledge of students' life and other various topics of the two countries and they might have fun, too," he said. First letters may be sent to him, P.O. Box 100, Central, Seoul, Korea.

"We have contingency plans," said Michael Russo, public relations manager for the oil company. "Marathon relies very heavily on the judgment of its local management. They have their own self-interest at heart. It is very difficult to sit here in Findlay and know what should be done," he said at the company's headquarters.

Oil company spokesmen in New York said the State Department reissued a three-month-old statement advising against travel to Libya but did not tell them to evacuate anyone.

Col. Moammar Khadafy, the leader of the Libyan regime, was in South Yemen when it occurred and then went to Ethiopia, where he remained today. He has not commented directly on the aerial dogfight.

JANA reported a speech by Khadafy on Wednesday in Aden in which he said the United States has gone "too far in its aggression, tyranny, provocations and terrorism ... against the Arab nation." He also deplored American use of Arab oil "to operate the arms factories which destroy our Arab nation."

The Libyan news agency also reported that the Libyan Foreign Ministry refused to accept a "protest memorandum" from the United States accusing the two downed Libyan planes of an unprovoked attack on U.S. Navy planes operating over international waters.

The news agency carried a commentary today that said, "It is impossible to accept any excuse on the part of the aggressor and especially from America, which has tried, with

Notes Arab Oil Fueling West

By The Associated Press

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy has not himself given a direct accounting of the U.S.-Libyan aerial dogfight over the Mediterranean this week, but the state-run media has continued to insist a U.S. plane was shot down.

In a speech Khadafy made in the Arab country of South Yemen, he spoke out against what he described as the American use of Arab oil "to operate the arms factories which destroy our Arab nation."

The Libyan news agency carried an account of the speech Thursday. Khadafy delivered the address Wednesday, the day of the one-minute battle over the waters 60 miles off the Libyan coast.

In the account of the speech, received in London, Khadafy did not mention the aerial dogfight or threaten to cut off the supply of oil to the United States.

He was quoted as saying, however, that the United States "goes too far in its aggression, tyranny, provocations and terrorism against the Arab nation."

In an apparent jab at the Saudi Arabia and other conservative Arab oil states, Khadafy declared, "The Arabs did not employ their oil in developing the Arab world, especially the poorer countries. Instead, oil goes the United States and Britain to operate the arms factories which destroy our Arab nation" by producing weapons used by Israel. JANA said.

Libya is the third largest source of U.S. crude oil imports and the American market represents an estimated one-fourth to one-third of Libya's sales.

Left Legacy To Pet Cats, Dogs

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — Mrs. Nina Hough Worthington, 80, of West Main Street, who died August 12, has left a legacy to her nine pet cats and four dogs, according to a will filed with the Pitt County Clerk of Superior Court for probate.

Mrs. Worthington, a native of Pamlico County and the widow of Robert L. "Doc" Worthington, died August 12. The value of her estate has been estimated at $150,000.

Spokesmen for the Clerk of Court's office said this morning that a probate order will be entered as soon as both witnesses to the will sign an affidavit attesting to the will's validity.

According to the will, Mrs. Worthington's niece, Cora Pauline Lee of Greenville and her nephew Lowenburg Hough (Hal) Moore of Ayden are to share in her "personal effects" and "all other tangible property ... excluding money."

The other property, including money and her automobile go to a charitable trust with Jimmy Lee of Greenville and Moore as trustees, "for the advancement of the support and maintenance of all my cats and dogs living in my residence at the time of my death, no matter how many in number."

The trustees are authorized, "to expend for the use, support and maintenance of my cats $1,800 per year and my dogs $3,000 per year," according to the will, which also directs, "that as long as my dog 'Beauty' shall live, my (car) shall be utilized either by my trustees or by someone employed by them to provide transportation for my dog for pleasure purposes."

Immediately upon the death of "Beauty", Moore is to receive the title to and ownership of the car.

Polish Food Prices Soar

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Polish government today announced a 300 percent hike in the price of bread and indicated meat rations will be reduced. Meanwhile, a large number of printers vowed to continue striking, in defiance of Lech Walesa, head of the independent union Solidarity.

Spokesmen for Solidarity said its 10 million members will accept food price increases only if they are part of an economic reform package that guarantees self-management for factory workers.

One paper that failed to appear after a two-day printers' walkout was the Communist Party daily in the northern city of Olsztyn. The strikers were angry over a report that force was used to keep non-union workers off the job during the walkout.

The Warsaw Solidarity chapter said in a statement that if there is not broad agreement with the proposed price rises, they could lead to "an explosion of uncontrolled social protest."

Solidarity last week called for a two-month moratorium on the strikes and street marches that swept Poland in July and early August in protest against food shortages and price increases. The union's national leaders said they were willing to give Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania and Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski time to reorganize the near bankrupt economy and improve the food situation.

Although the government has tried to blame Solidarity for the food protests, they began as a spontaneous public reaction to announcements that the meat ration was being cut more than a pound a month and prices of staple foods would go up as much as 400 percent because the government could no longer pay the subsidies that were keeping them down.

Food-price increases have caused most of the major upheavals that have shaken Communist rule in Poland and caused sweeping government reorganizations in 1971 and last summer.

However, the main Communist Party newspaper, Trybuna Ludu, was on the stands today and announced that the price of a 28-ounce loaf of bread would be quadrupled — from 4 zlotys to 16 zlotys — to about 50 cents. It said the date of the increase would be announced within the next week.

Trybuna Ludu also said the meat rationing program would be "reviewed" and indicated the present monthly ration of 6.6 pounds per person would be reduced further instead of increased in September as the government promised earlier.

"Even though the anticipated import quotas will be utilized either by my trustees or by someone employed by them to provide transportation for my dog for pleasure purposes."

utilized either by my trustees or by someone employed by them to provide transportation for my dog for pleasure purposes."

Dennis Finds Renewed Strength In Open Seas

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Hurricane Dennis, finding renewed fury in deep waters hundreds of miles off shore, left in its wake a tourism industry disrupted when Dennis was just a tropical storm.

On the Outer Banks, motel rooms that were filled Wednesday night with stranded tourists lost 25 percent of their occupants when warnings of the impending storm surfaced. A spokesman for the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce said losses totalled more than $35,000 in motel rentals alone.

But losses for the more populous resort town of Myrtle Beach, S.C., were estimated at $2 million as 30,000 to 40,000 tourists scurried to safety, the chamber of commerce said. Melanie Ply, executive vice president of the Outer Banks chamber, said retail sales also were off 25 percent Thursday, after a bonanza sales day Wednesday when rainy skies sent tourists scurrying for the shopping plazas.

"Between my two stores, my sales dropped $2,000 just yesterday. That's a lot of money," said George O'Neal, manager of the Red Drum Market at Buxton.

Russ Ochs, owner of a restaurant in Frisco, said his business dropped off 40 percent Thursday.

Ashby Ward, executive vice president of the Myrtle Beach Chamber of Commerce, said most of those who left were campers who would have been hardest hit if the storm had struck the coast.

The National Weather Service said U.S. Air Force reconnaissance planes Thursday afternoon found that Dennis had reached hurricane strength, with highest winds at 75 mph. Little further change was expected during the next 24 hours as the hurricane moved over Gulf Stream waters.

The storm earlier brushed the South Carolina coast, with an area from Charleston north being hardest hit, ac-ording to the National Weather Service in Columbia, S.C.

In that state, Charleston suffered more than 5 inches of rain and some flooding.

The National Weather Service said the storm came ashore around 4 a.m. Thursday close to Salter Path on the Bogue Banks, but its strongest winds remained at sea. By 6 a.m. it had moved up the inside coast of Pamlico Sound, passing north of Cape Hatteras.

The storm forced the closing of a campground on Ocracoke and forced several campers to abandon their tents and seek shelter on Hatteras Island.

Among those who left Myrtle Beach were more than 500 families at Lakewood Family Campground. Campground spokeswoman Gaye McClure said she handed out $2,000 to $3,000 in refunds in the span of a few hours.

"They were really frightened," she said. "A lot of them were from the North and had never seen hurricanes and they wanted to get out of here."

In some areas of the Outer Banks, water a foot deep from the heavy rains flooded the main highway linking the isolated islands, causing cars to stall. Water was deep under many vacation houses built on stilts and winds gusting to 50 miles an hour picked up sand from nearby dunes and hurled it into the air. On North Carolina's scenic and fragile Outer Banks, national parks spokesman said there was little damage to the beach areas, although some erosion was reported.

A number of people remained on the islands, including a hundred or more people who gathered at the base of the Cape Hatteras lighthouse, an East Coast landmark which has become an object of concern because of erosion around its base.

Roy and Ann Kendall, on a week's vacation from Richmond, Va., put away their fishing gear and went out to watch the waves pound the jetty on the beach near the lighthouse.

Kendall said he didn't consider the storm dangerous, and planned to stay around until the end of the week.

Lighthouse And Some Stalwart Tourists Came Through Storm

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — When Tropical Storm Dennis left the Outer Banks for the open sea Thursday, the Cape Hatteras lighthouse and some stalwart tourists were still standing.

After bringing heavy rain and wide-spread flooding to the coastal islands, Dennis moved out to sea and grew to hurricane proportions. But those who stubbornly remained to face the bad weather were there to welcome calm skies and empty beaches late Thursday.

Similarly stubborn in the face of the storm was the Cape Hatteras lighthouse — at 208 feet, the tallest in the country.

The 110-year-old tower has been threatened by earlier erosion, but Dennis brought waves that were only a few feet above normal. "The center of the storm passed very close to us, or over us," said Patrick Reed, north district ranger at the Cape Hatteras National Seashore. "It just didn't have much of a punch, really."

Even the winds were not severe by Outer Banks standards, Reed said.

"Gusts of 45 to 50 miles an hour for out at Cape Hatteras are not a terribly strong wind — 50 miles an hour sustained over a two or three-day period is not unusual out here."

Waves poured over the steel and concrete jetties protecting the lighthouse, but Reed said only moderate erosion was expected. The lighthouse was never in danger, he added.

As many as 100 people gathered around the stone base of the black and white striped lighthouse to watch as the storm passed by. Elsewhere, tourists met the calm weather with a mixture of reactions.

"It's been really funny," said Marti Dennis as she surveyed her flooded campsite and her crumpled tent that was partially submerged in a half foot of water.

"Ignorance is bliss," she added. "We didn't know what we were up against. But we're going to stay — this is our vacation."

Two people who stuck it out, Mark Keyasko and Nancy Paluchowski, both students from Montclair State College in Montclair, N.J., said they remained even as water rose around their tent.

"Our site was like a lake. We were sleeping in a foot of water. They're all floating out there. People left their tents," Keyasko said.

Dear Abby

Boy Doesn't Have Kissing Technique

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I won't beat around the bush. The fact is, I've never kissed a girl and I'm 19 years old. Isn't that ridiculous? It all started in grade school when an older kid told me that kissing a girl wasn't all that easy — there was a right way and a wrong way, and if you didn't know how to kiss a girl, you'd be better-off not kissing one at all. So I never kissed a girl because I was afraid I'd do it wrong and I'd get laughed at.

Now the situation is worse than ever. I've gone all through high school and one year of college with very few dates. I'm fairly good-looking, friendly and have many girls as friends. I have no trouble getting dates, but I never take a girl out more than once because eventually she'll expect me to kiss her, and when she discovers I don't know how to kiss, it will be all over.

I'm too embarrassed to admit this problem to others — they'd die laughing. So tell me, Dear Abby, what do I do? Pay a total stranger to teach me how to kiss?

NEVER BEEN KISSED IN OHIO

DEAR NEVER: Save your money and start dating. When you get the urge to kiss a girl who seems receptive, lead with your lips — gently and slowly. Just act as though you know what you're doing and don't worry about it. Regardless of how inexperienced you are, with a little cooperation, you'll catch on fast. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: I have nine children between 8 and 13 years old, most of them adopted. I would gladly write out a progress report to any mothers and fathers who wanted to know how their children were. Some of these children came to me from agencies, some were given to me personally. I am grateful to all their parents.

My twins were given up at birth by a Korean woman. There are no records of who she was or where in Korea she lived. How I would like to tell her that the twin girls she bore are now 13 — both honor students in seventh grade musically talented and budding artists.

Each of the others has special talents. Nothing earth-shaking, but news of them might mean something to women somewhere who gave them up only after some long and painful pondering. Feel free to use my name.

LAURA BILLINGTON IN MAPLE VALLEY, WA.

DEAR LAURA: Beautiful!

DEAR ABBY: Being the mother of an adopted child, I read with interest the pros and cons of adoptive mothers sending "progress reports" to the natural mother.

If we had sent yearly reports to the mother of our adopted son, here is a sample of what we would have written:

"Child suffered seizures due to brain damage.

"Extreme language difficulties indicate that child will require special education.

"We have called in psychiatrists and neurologists in an effort to determine what to do about our son.

"The boy seems unable to relate to his peers. His ability to comprehend is minimal and his future appears dismal."

Our progress report would have been very depressing. And since the child's natural mother was in no position to help, it would seem unnecessarily cruel to inform her of the above. On the other hand, if one had agreed to submit an annual progress report, the truth would have to be told, would it not?

ANOTHER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You make a point that I had not considered.

DEAR ABBY: I heard you give the commencement address at Westridge School for Girls in Pasadena last June when my daughter graduated. I wish every high school girl in the country could have heard your closing remarks. Will you please share them with your readers?

MR. L., PASADENA, CALIF.

DEAR MR. L.: Was this it?

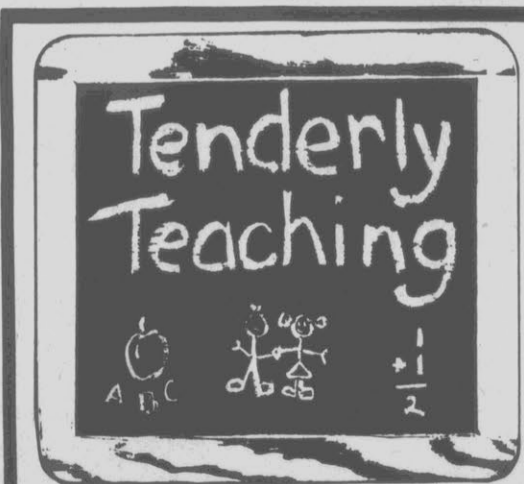

"When you leave this school, your first order of business should be to equip yourself to be independent, self-supporting and in control of your own destiny.

"Learn a skill, so you will never have to ask your mother or your father or your husband or your boyfriend — or heaven forbid, your government — to take care of you."

As luck would have it, I've come on a marvelous new cake recipe that makes a perfect summer dessert.

Light as a feather and with delightful fresh lime flavor, in my opinion it's really worth baking. I like to serve slices of it topped with fresh fruit and whipped cream. Or for a more formal presentation, I slice the cake into three layers, then sandwich them together with fresh berries or other sliced fruit (or a mixture of the berries and other fruit) and then cover the whole cake with plain sweetened whipped cream. Garnish the top with swirled fresh lime slices. Either way, this Fresh Lime Sponge Cake is a lovely, lovely offering.

FRESH LIME SPONGE CAKE

- 6 large eggs, separated
- 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 2 teaspoons grated lime rind (from a small lime)
- 1/4 cup fresh lime juice
- 1/4 cup water
- 1 1/4 cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour
- Confectioners' sugar

In the large bowl of an electric mixer beat the egg whites and cream of tartar until they hold peaks that tilt slightly when the beater is slowly withdrawn. Gradually beat in 1/2 cup of the sugar; continue beating, if necessary, until whites hold stiff straight peaks when beater is slowly withdrawn.

Without washing beater, in a medium-size deep bowl, beat the egg yolks until thickened and lemon color. Beat in the remaining 1 cup sugar a tablespoon at a time, until mixture is thick and ivory color. Add the lime rind, lime juice and water; with mixer at lowest speed, beat gently until blended; gradually beat in the flour until blended. Add to egg-white mixture; with a rubber spatula fold in just until blended.

Pour into an ungreased 10-inch angel cake pan; with a rubber spatula cut through batter to remove large air bubbles. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until cake springs back when lightly touched and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 1 hour.

Her life is dancing. She spends six hours a day practicing and keeping in shape and trying to adjust to the attention and fame that came with the gold medal.

"People stop me on the street now and say 'Aren't you Amanda McKerrrow?' and my first reaction is to say, 'Yes. How did you know?' It takes getting used to. But I still feel the same as I did two months ago."

Miss McKerrrow left high school after the 10th grade and would have graduated this year. She is working on a correspondence course and will soon take an exam for a Government Equivalency Diploma.

She entered the world of ballet at the age of 10, partially because her older sister Melissa, now 21, was doing it. "But she quit before I even started," Miss McKerrrow said.

"When I was young I used to tag after her like kids do. But then I realized that I loved watching dancers. She didn't like it, but I fell in

Gold Medalist Studies For School Degree

By JAY H. HANDELMAN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most people would think a 17-year-old high school drop-out had little future when she walked out the school doors for the last time.

But when you've just become the first American to win a gold medal at the Moscow International Ballet Competition, then the future is a little brighter.

Amanda McKerrrow, who conquered Moscow with her partner Simon Dow, says, "Life is busier and there's an added something extra, but it really hasn't changed me as a person. I still have to practice and rehearse every day if I want to grow as a dancer."

Miss McKerrrow's time is divided between her home in Rockville, Md., and her other world at the Washington Ballet studios.

She and 19 other dancers make up the Washington Ballet, created in 1976 by Mary Day, who wanted to form a company for graduates of the Washington School of Ballet.

love."

But after five years of serious training and competition, she knows it is not an easy profession and many dancers can't handle the pressures.

"It's a very hard career," Miss McKerrrow said. "Dancing is emotionally difficult and physically draining. You need total support from your family and friends or it makes it that much harder to handle the setbacks."

Miss McKerrrow says she knew what she wanted by age 12 after two years of dance lessons. "I knew I wouldn't be happy doing anything else."

The few hours spent away from the dance studios are for relaxation, sleeping and visiting with friends.

"I really love to swim, but I don't get much chance to," she said. "Plus dancers can't get too suntanned because the (stage) lighting will make you look green or something."

Miss McKerrrow can't picture what she'll be doing five or 10 years from now, other than dancing. Choreography is pretty much ruled out, though she admits that she might want to try it sometime.

Beyond Moscow?

"I still have to work hard every day. I still have a lot further to go and farther to grow as a dancer."

She would like to do "Romeo and Juliet." "It's my favorite ballet all around. It's my favorite Shakespearean play and Prokofiev is my favorite composer. It would be a wonderful role to sink your teeth into."

A Dangerous Game

Who's kidding whom? Did the Libyan command really think two warplanes could possibly drive away a U.S. Navy carrier force from its publicly announced exercise site in international waters?

It is far more likely dictator Muammar Khadafy was prepared to deliberately sacrifice two aircraft and their pilots for the sake of creating an irritant, an issue, a nuisance, a war of words. A twisted mind could envisage great possibilities of exploiting any small misstep by the giant he was challenging.

On the surface, the issue would seem to be Libyan claims of territorial rights 200 miles from their shores for one area and 12 miles for the remainder. Granted, the U.S. is no "policeman" for the world, but international law limits such rights to three miles. The Mediterranean is too small a body of water for such grandiose gestures. It is also too important a waterway of world commerce for playing games.

On the whole, we lean to the idea that Khadafy was pulling Uncle Sam's beard much as in bygone days small states relished twisting the tail of the British lion.

It looks great in the propaganda mills, but of no great import in the overall picture. From anyone's point of view, however, Libya is playing a dangerous game.

Hurricanes Are With Us

Tropical Storm Dennis has moved up and beyond the Southeastern United States coastline, and its biggest impact was high waters and heavy rains.

The storm dumped heavy precipitation on Florida, then moved out to sea. Next it followed the South Carolina coast line and swept east of Nags Head.

It meant much rain for inland

Eastern North Carolina, but hurricane strength winds never materialized along the coast.

There is a reminder in the visit of Dennis, however. It is the hurricane season and new storms will be spawned in the Caribbean. The possibilities of devastating hurricanes striking our area are always with us.

Job Skills Target

By GOV. JIM HUNT (Bill Noblitt is on vacation) RALEIGH — Do you wish you had a better job? Do you want to make more money?

If you do, your chances depend on the job skills you have. In industry, higher skills mean higher pay. That is why I will be devoting a lot of time and attention in my second term as Governor to improving programs that teach people job skills.

We need better skill training because, in the next two to three years, more new jobs will be available in industry than ever before.

You may not have realized it, but few states are experiencing more industrial growth than North Carolina.

Since January 1977, industries in our state, as well as across the nation and around the world, have decided to spend over $8.5 billion to expand or build new plants in North Carolina.

When those plants open their doors in the next few years, that will mean over 135,000 new manufacturing jobs.

Many of those jobs will require sophisticated technical skills — electronics, computers, chemicals, pharmaceuticals and metal fabrication. Most of them pay better-than-average wages.

Working To get those jobs and earn those higher wages, people need to master the skills they require.

For several months I have been talking with people who are knowledgeable and experienced in this subject — people in the public schools, the community college system, various government agencies and, most important, private industry.

With their help I am developing an overall policy for skill training in North Carolina.

It is clear that our most valuable training resource is our community college system.

I have decided that this system should be the "presumptive deliverer" of skill training in North Carolina. That means training should be done in one of those 58 institutions across our state, unless we find a good reason otherwise.

As a result, we need to put more money into upgrading equipment and instruction on those campuses.

We also need to work more closely with private businesses and industries to tailor our training programs to their needs. I believe they will welcome the chance to work with us. We need to get away from the idea that government and business should be enemies.

On The Job I think we need more "cooperative" training, where a student learns a skill by studying in a community college classroom and working on the job at a nearby industry.

An important part of this skill-training policy is the question that young people (and not-so-young people) ask themselves every day: What skill should I learn? What jobs are available now? What will be available where I live two or three years from now? What kind of training do I need?

It is not easy to answer those questions. But I am working on ways to improve our labor market information and get that information to people, and you will be hearing more about them soon.

In this column I have tried to explain some of the considerations involved in helping people prepare for better jobs. It has to be a total effort — bringing together the public schools, the community college system, our universities, government and private industry. And it is an effort I am totally committed to.

In 1940, Communist revolutionary Leon Trotsky died of wounds inflicted by an assassin in Mexico City.

In 1956, 18 nations — excluding the Soviet Union — accepted a proposal by U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles for settling the Suez Canal dispute.

And in 1968, Soviet occupation forces seized Czechoslovakia's liberal communist leader, Alexander Dubcek.

That Unexplained Link

"You know what confuses me?" said Pfizer, as we were watching the girls in their bikinis do their stuff on the beach.

"What's that?" I asked him.

"Why do they always link sex and violence together? Every time the Moral Majority or any other minority discuss evils of the day, they make it sound like you can't have one without the other. This is particularly true of people who want to censor what we see or read. Now I have no trouble with violence — I don't like it and I think there's way too much of it for the good of the country. And there may be a lot more unnecessary sex than there has to be, when it comes to entertaining the masses. But I don't see why they both have to be attacked in the same breath."

"Well, what would you link with sex?"

"Banana bread."

"Why banana bread?" I asked.

"I happen to like banana bread, and I also happen to like sex. I don't consider banana bread any more violent than sex, providing the other person has no objection."

"You miss the point. The people who are in the censoring business would get nowhere if they said they were against sex and banana bread. They're unlikable."

"So are sex and violence," Pfizer said. "Now if they want to attack rape and violence, then I might join their club. I might even go along with their reservations about very young teen-agers involved in sex. What I think is wrong is that by generalizing and putting sex and violence together they're making people believe that if you're indulging in one you're committing the other."

"Would you object to sex and frozen yogurt?" I asked him.

"How about linking sex with flying a kite," Pfizer said.

"I don't believe the Moral Majority would do it," I told him. "They see sex as a violent act."

"Maybe that's their problem," Pfizer said. "Anyone with an unhappy sex life is prone towards violence."

"Well, if everything you say is true, what can just two of us do about it besides look at girls in their bikinis?"

"Not much," he said. "Let's find a refreshment stand that sells banana bread and frozen yogurt."

"What good would that do?"

"It would be making a non-violent statement about sex, which everyone on this beach seems to have on their minds."

"Why? Does frozen yogurt turn you on?"

"It does," I admitted. "Every time I see a pretty girl on the beach I think to myself, 'I wish I had a frozen yogurt.'"

"Well, at least frozen yogurt isn't a violent act, unless you push it in someone's face."

"If I had a frozen yogurt I would never resort to violence," I assured him.

Sadat's Role Is Growing

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Personal intercession by Egyptian president Anwar Sadat persuaded President Reagan at literally the last minute to delay by 10 days the release of the embargoed F-16s to Israel, a decision that heralds Sadat's rising influence in the Reagan administration.

The rise of Sadat could mean the further decline of Israeli prime minister Menachem Begin on the eve of his crucial visit to Washington, despite private agreement between Reagan and Sadat that the Israeli leader must be handled with understanding and sympathy. A cooperative Begin is essential as Reagan tries to defuse Arab-Israeli wranglings in the higher interest of Reagan's "strategic consensus" — to keep Moscow out of the Middle East.

Following extraordinarily harmonious conversations between Sadat and Reagan, the Egyptian received this news just one hour before his departure from Washington: the embargoed F-16s would be released within a day or two. Sadat pleaded for at least a one week delay. Anything less, he argued, would gravely diminish his prestige in the Arab world. Reagan quickly agreed.

The core of the Reagan-Sadat policy is to persuade Begin to start talking to moderate Arab states — Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Lebanon — as he began talking to Egypt after Sadat's dramatic 1977 peace mission to Jerusalem. Thus, the U.S. will not apply immediate pressure on Begin to abandon Jewish settlements on the West Bank in hopes that in the months ahead he can be dissuaded from continuing his anti-Arab hostility.

This approach may fail considering Begin's dogmatic intensity, reflected in his public blast at Reagan last weekend over the F-16s. Begin knew the planes had been slated for delivery to Israel 10 days earlier. His attack on Reagan's embargo as "absolutely unjustified" satisfied two Begin aims: It signaled displeasure with Reagan for accommodating Sadat; it paved the way for Begin to take credit when the embargo ended.

But no fellow head of government knows Begin better than Sadat, and he seems willing to put up with such behavior to achieve the larger aim of softening Begin's anti-Arabism. Sadat never asked Reagan, for example, to make the F-16 embargo permanent. What pleased Reagan and his top advisers so much about Sadat's visit was his appreciation of the Begin problem. Not once during hours of talks did Sadat utter a single word of criticism about "my friend Menachem," as he always calls him.

When Sadat went to New York for a private huddle with this country's top Jewish leaders, he scored points in explaining difficulties in his relationship with Begin. He told how Begin had asked to meet with him in the Sinai shortly before the Israeli election and then, three days after the meeting, bombed the nuclear facility in Baghdad.

Sadat asked: Is there any possible explanation for what Begin did to me other than to embarrass me within my own country and with my Arab friends? Not one of the Jewish leaders offered a defense of Begin. Sadat's reception from the Jewish leaders revealed underlying sympathy and showed the remarkable political distance he has traveled in the last four years.

High Reagan administration officials perceive Sadat as the president's top card in building his anti-Soviet "strategic consensus" while Begin's recent conduct has affronted Reagan. Sadat has impressed him with dignity and moderation. "Sadat came over not just as a leader but as a wise statesman with a long view of history," a top administration official told us.

That creates a challenge for Begin in his September talks with Reagan. Abrasive and combative in marked contrast to Sadat, Begin will be judged against the Egyptian's performance.

Complicating Begin's hope of measuring up to Sadat is his battle against Reagan over the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia, a sale Sadat strongly supports. Reagan advisers are praying that Begin will sing his anti-AWACS line in low key and

Strength For Today

OF CONVICTIONS — AND PREJUDICE

Firm convictions have a very stabilizing influence upon one's life, but when these convictions rigidify into prejudice they inculcate a person with hateful qualities.

All of us who profess any religion at all feel that our religion is the best. If we believed there were a better religion, we would forsake what we now profess and adopt what is better. But to be loyal to one's religion is one thing, and to hate everyone else who differs from us is something quite different.

There is not a religion in the world which does not have within it certain good points, or it never would have achieved the loyalty of multitudes. But this is not to say that one religion is as good as another. My religion is best according to me, and your religion is best according to you. But if we have any spiritual vision at all, we can see commendable things in other people's religion which we might strive to incorporate into our own. — Elisha Douglass

Forecasters Aren't Convinced

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — New government tax and spending plans, accompanied by more buoyant business and consumer expectations, hasn't convinced some forecasters that economic matters will quickly improve.

Albert Sindinger sees current economic events, particularly those involving the Federal Reserve, as the prelude to a banking crisis.

Sindinger, founder of Sindinger & Company, a consumer research and microeconomic forecasting firm, foresees federal funds rising to a weekly average of 25 percent, and briefly to 30 percent to 40 percent, by Thanksgiving. The dollar will fall, gold will rise, he says.

Federal funds, which are excess reserves of commercial banks that are lent daily to other commercial banks, now carry an interest rate of about 20 percent.

"It is true that interest rates will come down by year-end," says Sindinger, but only "after great damage to many sectors of the economy has been accomplished first on the way up."

International Moneyline, a widely circulated, influential newsletter edited and published by Julian M. Snyder, also sees problems ahead.

"The economy will inevitably crack under the pressure of high real interest rates and there will be a panic in some financial quarters. This will cause the Fed to return to the money printing presses just when inflation seems defeated," says Snyder.

The full inflationary impact won't be felt "for a couple of years, according to Snyder.

"Ironically," he continues, "the tipoff for the next giant inflationary explosion will not be a further rise in interest rates but a sharp rate decline coupled with a recessionary environment."

In turn, he says, "this will permit the liquidity build up necessary for the 'new wave' of inflation which will carry the Consumer Price Index to between 20 and 30 percent."

All this won't be all bad, or so it appears from the latest issue of Moneyline. It will "take some months to come about," he says without being any more specific. Meanwhile, it seems, you can expect:

A new bull market in gold, a new bull market in commodities, a limited but important bond market rally and then a further decline. a stock market boom, sudden dollar weakness around the summer of 1982.

Aside from their particular insights, both writers demonstrate a frame of mind that may take years to dispel, if indeed it is ever dispelled.

It is the fear of an economic apocalypse, arising in part from a belief that economic factors are misunderstood, and from misgivings about the economic policies that are being pursued.

And, of course, from recent economic experiences, in which the most clever forecasters in government, business and academe fell on their collective face.

That kind of situation leaves plenty of room for the independent thinkers, for the mavericks, for the sellers of contrary notions, no matter what their points of view.

How's The Weather?

Democrats Shift Voter Target

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast through Friday predicts showers in the Southeast and extending from the Dakotas south to Arizona. Sunny skies will prevail across the rest of the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Northeast breezes and dry air pumped from a northern high pressure system into North Carolina today, keeping temperatures below seasonal norms.
Early morning skies were clear to partly cloudy to the north and east, but a weak low pressure system to the east and a stationary front along the Gulf of Mexico kept cloud cover heavy elsewhere.

The National Weather Service said the low pressure area would push some rain into the mountains as the day progresses. Forecasts also called for unsettled conditions resulting from the stationary front, producing a small chance of some shower activity over the southern Piedmont and coastal plain.

Pleasant weather was expected to continue today in the northeastern quarter of the state due to the strong high pressure system. But by tonight forecasts called for thickening clouds over most of North Carolina and an increasing chance of rain.
The recreational weather outlook looked good for most activities, except in mountain areas, where rain will be developing. An increasing chance of rain should beset central and eastern sections tonight and Saturday. Mountain sections are going to experience partial clearing on Saturday while the rain chance persists in the east.
High temperatures today and Saturday will be generally in the 80s.

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats, who for years courted minorities and tried to open up the party, now are looking for ways to attract the middle class and shift power from primaries to the politics.

The party's Commission on Presidential Nominations embarked Thursday night on another of the rule-writing campaigns that have preoccupied Democrats for a dozen years.

Gov. James Hunt of North Carolina, the commission chairman, told the panel he is proud of past work to recruit minorities, young people and women and to give the voters a role in the party's processes.

But he added: "There are some people in this party that maybe still feel a little left out. Maybe some of them are the sort of middle-income Americans. ... I hope we can figure out some ways to get them more involved."

The motivation for the latest drive to rewrite party rules comes from the election of a Republican president and a Republican Senate and Democratic defections in the House in favor of Ronald Reagan's budget and tax-cut plans.

Hunt said he is concerned about the future of the two-party system, and the commission's first debate indicated that too many complex rules and too many primaries may be a major part of the problem.

"Today we see so many ticket-splitters. We see so many young people who have no understanding or no loyalty to the parties," Hunt said.
"We see so many candidates and officeholders who seem to go off on a tangent of their own without any regard to the party and what it's positions are."
"We do have to rethink our approaches in this party," he said. "We do have to sharpen our strategies. We do have to renew our appeal to the people in this land."

Minneapolis Mayor Donald Fraser, a former congressman and chairman of one of the party's first reform panels, said primaries have forced presidential candidates to ignore party leaders and appeal directly to the voting public through media campaigns.

"Over the last dozen years, the Democratic party has gradually given up responsibility for selecting the presidential nominee," Fraser said.
Fraser complained that party organization and the national convention are made meaningless by a system in which nominees are selected by delegates elected in primaries and bound to candidates.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., who ran unsuccessfully for the party's presidential nomination in 1976, said early primaries now have a disproportionate role in deciding the nominee.

Political scientist Austin Ranney, a veteran of these commissions, said this system has "almost completely separated the presidential nominating process from the coalition politics necessary to win elections."
Fraser also said presidential candidates should be judged on "such qualities as judgment, understanding, wisdom, thoughtfulness and, frankly, some knowledge about the world."

Udall said the rules have become so complicated that many states turned to primaries because it was easier than trying to construct caucuses and conventions that would comply with all the regulations.

"The rules are too complicated," agreed Fraser, who helped write them. He said the delegate selection rules should be simplified and converted to "more common sense."
The commission will hold a series of hearings across the country and make its report to the Democratic National Committee in the spring. The new rules or revisions will govern nomination of the party's 1984 presidential candidate.

Evans-Novak....

no lobby Congress with fanfare against Ronald Reagan, but they are not counting on it.

To head off just such a possibility, Secretary of State Alexander Haig is passing word to Israelis that the fight is over. The AWACS sale is all but certain to get through Congress, says Haig, now that he has Reagan's commitment to give it as much attention as he gave his budget and tax proposals. By spreading that message, Haig hopes to ward off an anti-AWACS offensive by Begin.

As for Sadat, he is posing this implicit challenge to Begin: Join Reagan and me and the Arab moderates, my dear friend Menahem, and together we will defend the Middle East against Moscow and its allies. Whether Begin says yes or no, Anwar Sadat's influence with Ronald Reagan will continue to rise.

Former Bank Officer Indicted

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A former bank executive charged with diverting $11.33 million into a private checking account denies any wrongdoing, his attorney said.

According to Richard White, attorney for David E. Estes, 35, of San Jose, the "discrepancies" in the accounts are "the result of the absence of internal controls at Crocker Bank."

Optimistic On Brady's Future

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors are optimistic that White House press secretary James S. Brady has cleared the last hurdle to recovery from the head wound suffered in the assassination attempt on President Reagan.

Brady underwent nearly three hours of surgery Thursday in which doctors found and patched a leak that was letting spinal fluid escape from his bullet-damaged brain cavity.

A doctor who saw him after he regained consciousness in mid-afternoon said Brady was awake, coherent and "chattering away."

A hospital statement said the surgeons were "cautiously optimistic" that Brady's fourth major operation since the shooting had been successful but that it would take several weeks and a resumption of Brady's physical activity before they could be sure.

However, Dr. Dennis O'Leary, clinical dean of George Washington University Hospital where Brady is being treated, was more upbeat. While it is true that only time will tell, O'Leary said, "we have every good reason to think we're going to get a good result."

And as for the general outlook, the medical spokesman was more openly optimistic than he has been since the shooting.

"In any injury as serious as Jim's, we expect complications, and we sure have had them," he said. But he added that no further major problems are in sight at this point, and "we really are hopeful at this stage."

O'Leary said the operation "ran almost perfectly on schedule," and Brady was moved from the operating room to the recovery room at 11:40 a.m. EDT. He was pronounced in stable condition at 12:20 p.m. and regained consciousness in mid-afternoon with his wife, Sarah, at his bedside.

Although the post-operative period following surgery around the sinuses is notoriously painful, O'Leary said Brady did not seem particularly uncomfortable and was "asking questions about what's going on in the world."

The spokesman said the surgical team headed by neurosurgeon Arthur Kobrine and nose and throat specialist Norman L. Barr Jr. was pleasantly surprised during the surgery to find a clear, quarter-inch defect in one bony sinus. There was every indication it was that defect that was causing the leakage, O'Leary said. The doctors were not at all sure beforehand they would be able to find any obvious source of the trouble.

The persistent leakage posed a threat of infection and had interrupted the physical therapy Brady still must undergo before he can be released from the hospital. There is no official estimate of when that may be, but some hospital officials say privately they hope it will be in October.

In describing the operation, O'Leary said the doctors made an incision about 1 1/4 inches long just below the point where the left eye meets the bridge of the nose.

They removed several fragments of bullet and damaged bone still in the sinus area in front of and beneath the brain and discovered a hole, wet with spinal fluid, in the bony roof of one of the small sinuses behind the nose.

That site and remaining sinuses that could provide a channel into the brain cavity were packed with fatty tissue taken from Brady's abdomen to form a permanent seal.

Brady's physicians have been concerned for some time about incomplete healing of the normally airtight seal around the brain.

Less than a month after the shooting, the wounded press secretary underwent surgery to repair a membrane leak that triggered a potentially dangerous buildup of air pressure on his brain. O'Leary said the doctors were able to inspect that patch, placed from inside the brain cavity during the earlier surgery, and found it "in place and in good shape."

A few weeks after the membrane repair, Brady was confined to a reclining position in bed for 10 days after doctors thought a few drops of spinal fluid had dripped from his nose. Although they hoped that leak would heal itself, Brady experienced another discharge of fluid during a major, epilepsy-like seizure Aug. 3 that apparently created a sharp increase in pressure inside the skull.

Small amounts of fluid had continued to leak into Brady's sinuses in the two weeks following the seizure, leading to the decision to operate again.

Say Seasonal Laborers Live In Near Slavery

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A chance encounter between two migrant farm workers and a Burlington policeman has led to an FBI investigation of 25 seasonal laborers allegedly held in slave-like conditions on a Caswell County tobacco farm.

Officials first heard about suspicious activities at Florence Plantation when officer Mike Gaudin stopped Rufus Brown of South Carolina and Junior C. Lockhart of Florida for a routine check.

The pair told Gaudin that migrants were being held in a rundown farmhouse with no toilet facilities or running water. The workers also told him that they had been forced to turn over their wages to the crew boss, and those who tried to leave were beaten.

"When they began to tell me their conditions, I immediately called the FBI," said Gaudin.

Washington FBI spokesman John Wilson said the U.S. Department of Justice is considering holding grand jury hearings on the accusations, and is studying whether there is enough evidence for charges of involuntary servitude or peonage. Peonage is a system in which debtors are held until they work off debts to their creditors.

Investigation confirmed that the migrants lived in an abandoned house on the 335-acre plantation located in the Baynes community of southern Caswell County.

The land is owned by Graham Miles, a tobacco farmer who lives on a nearby farm and says he was unaware of conditions at the plantation.

The 25 migrants, all Americans ranging in age from 20 to 65, worked for several farmers, including Miles, the FBI said.

Recruited from towns scattered throughout South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama by a man known only as "Rev.," they were brought to Caswell County with the promise of work in the tobacco fields.

FBI agents and Gaudin joined Caswell County sheriff's deputies at the camp on Aug. 4 and asked the workers how many wanted to leave, said agent Robert L. Pence. About eight stepped forward that day and four more left the next day. The last migrants left the camp 10 days ago.

A search of the premises and conversations with the workers revealed that the sparsely furnished rooms in which the migrants lived were "dirty and dingy looking with clothes strewn about everywhere," said Gaudin.

Workers burned garbage in one of the many old fireplaces, blocked broken windows with cardboard to keep out mosquitoes and were fed poorly, he added.

The workers, miles from town, were at the mercy of the crew leader and his staff for food and staples. They had no choice but to pay the highly inflated prices for a meal, bar of soap or cold beer, said Detective Maynard Smith.

According to Miles, the crew leader collected from the farmers $20 per worker for recruitment and 50 cents for each hour he worked. The workers earned and were paid minimum wage, $3.35 an hour.

Smith said area farmers were not aware the crew leader kept his workers so much in debt to him and kept them from leaving.

Rock Musicians Freed On Bail

HAWTHORNE, Calif. (AP) — Rock musicians Sylvester "Sly" Stewart of the rock group Sly and the Family Stone and George Clinton of Parliament-Funkadelic were released on bail after being arrested on drug-possession charges, officials said.

Stewart, 37, and Clinton, 41, were booked for investigation of possessing a controlled substance, Hawthorne city spokesman Tom Quintana said Thursday. He said the substance was believed to be cocaine.

The two men were arrested shortly before midnight Wednesday in this Los Angeles suburb when officers observed Stewart driving erratically. Clinton was a passenger, Quintana said.

He said officers found vials containing a white powder in the car. In addition, Stewart had two traffic warrants outstanding against him, Quintana said.

Stewart was released early Thursday morning after posting $2,700 bail, the city spokesman said, and Clinton was freed on $2,500 bail.

The two are scheduled to appear in Inglewood Municipal Court Sept. 3, Quintana said.

Children Share In New Torah

NEW YORK (AP) — The Lubavitch organization of highly orthodox hassidic Jews says 304,805 children from around the world have registered in a project for producing a new sefer Torah — a hand-written copy on parchment of the first five books of the Bible.

Each child, the organization says, is to receive a certificate that one letter was written for him or her in the Torah, being completed this week in Jerusalem by a scribe using a goose quill.

Has Doubts On Speech-Makers

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — British theologian Barrington White says Baptist colleges should focus more on God and less on speech-makers.

White, principal of St. Regent's College, a Baptist school affiliated with Oxford University, told a meeting of Baptist educators:

"There should be less emphasis on visiting speakers addressing the congregation and more emphasis on the congregation addressing God."

U.S. Alligators Flown To Israel

MIAMI (AP) — Before they were killed off by hunters, Nile crocodiles roamed a swamp on Israel's Mediterranean coast. Now more than 100 Florida alligators are being flown to Israel to repopulate the swamp, officials say.

The 120 gators, purchased from a Belle Glade alligator farm, will travel "with first-class care" in an El Al airlines 747 departing Tuesday, according to Henry Laskau, cargo supervisor for El Al.

Guy Ben Moshe, an Israeli expert who is supervising the shipment, said crocodiles were living in Israel until about 80 years ago. "Unfortunately," he said, "they were killed off by hunters."

Demonstrations....

its aggression against the two Libyan planes, to commit an act of international terrorism."

Israeli press reports praised the U.S. action, while the 21-member Arab League said the naval exercises held near the Libya coast and the resulting dogfight could only serve to increase Mideast tensions.

The Soviet bloc's press today was sharply critical, with Czechoslovakia's Communist Party paper calling the dogfight a "gangster action."

At the United Nations, Libya again referred to the incident as a "terrorism act" and told the Security Council it was "bound to create turmoil and instability in the region." But the Libyan letter to Council President Jorge Enrique Illueca of Panama did not ask for a meeting of the council.

The Pentagon claims the U.S. planes were attacked by one of two Libyan planes, returned fire, and downed both Libyan aircraft. Libya told the U.N. Security Council one of its planes was lost.

Libya claims the U.S. violated its territorial sovereignty, which it says goes 12 miles out to sea and includes the Gulf of Sidra. The U.S. recognizes only a three-mile limit.

Court Routine Over Telephone

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In an experiment organized by the San Francisco and California Bar Associations, courts are conducting pre-trial proceedings by telephone.

Attorney Michael Melton in Los Angeles, who tried out the system Wednesday with Superior Court Judge Ira Brown here and attorney Lee Pantell in Palo Alto, said it saved him and his client time.

"I would have had to catch a 7 a.m. flight to San Francisco, and that shoots most of the day," he said, adding most of the pre-trial proceedings in Brown's court last six minutes or less.

Attorneys say a typical lawyer's visit to court for a pre-trial hearing costs a client much more than a telephone call, with billings that often run more than $90 an hour plus expenses.

Inflation Ate Up Americans' Rising Income Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raises received by American workers melted to less than nothing under the heat of inflation last year, with families' "real" income disappearing faster than in at least a quarter-century, the government says.

"Real," or inflation-adjusted, income fell 5.5 percent in 1980, the biggest drop the government has recorded since it began compiling such figures in 1947, the Census Bureau reported Thursday.

Real income had remained virtually unchanged in 1979 and hadn't dropped by any significant amount since the 4 percent and 2.6 percent declines of 1974 and 1975.

The spring 1980 recession also contributed to last year's negative record, holding income gains to 7.3 percent — about $21,020 annual income for a median family, the report said.

Then inflation — pegged at 13.5 percent for the terms of this survey — more than wiped out what gains were made.

"These adverse conditions harmed all Americans but had especially harsh consequences for the working poor, who are among those most vulnerable to recession-induced unemployment," Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said in a statement accompanying the report.

Backing up that contention, the report said the number of Americans below the federal "poverty level" grew from 11.7 percent in 1979 to 13 percent of the population last year.

That was according to a new poverty level, itself raised by inflation from $7,412 in 1979 to $8,414 in 1980 for a non-farm family of four.

About 6.2 million families — 29.3 million individuals — were classified as poor last year.

Last year's dwindling-income bad news was spread among families of all races, with male or female breadwinner or both, in cities and on farms in all of the nation's main geographic regions.

One exception: Families with no wage-earners at all lost no ground, "in part because income such as Social Security, supplemental security and other retirement income are indexed to changes in consumer prices," the report said.

White families continued to make much more money than non-whites, with a median 1980 income of $21,900. That compared to $14,720 for Spanish-origin families and $12,670 for blacks.

All lost ground to inflation.

Median "real" income for men fell 6.3 percent to $12,530 in 1980, while the median for women was $4,920, "essentially unchanged in real terms," the report said.

When the report refers to median income, that means about half the nation's families had income above that level and about half below it.

The authors cautioned that the figures reflect only money income, which it said "is not always an accurate reflection of economic well-being since many persons receive noncash benefits such as food stamps, public housing, medical care, employer contributions for pension plans and others."

A few of the report's other points on the present and ideas on the future included: — "Baby boom" Americans born in the 1946-65 era have been holding down earnings because of their lack of experience. As they gain experience in the 1980s, "an upward influence on income levels should result."

— Also holding down overall income, and likely to continue to do so in the 1980s, is the rising percentage of households headed by women with no husband — up from 11 percent in 1970 to 15 percent in 1980. Without commenting on possible reasons, the report says "these families tend to have considerably lower incomes than married couples and constitute a very large share of the poverty population." — Partly countering that situation, more married women are taking on jobs — up from 41 percent in 1970 to 51 percent in 1980. They are helping raise their families' income and will continue to do so "if the trend continues into the 1980s."

Here is an explanation of a couple of the report's terms:

— The federal poverty level is based on the Agriculture Department's 1961 "economy food plan," and is set at a level about three times the cost for a family of three of more to feed itself according to that plan.

— The report defines a family as two or more persons living together and related by blood, marriage or adoption.

Such families included about 195 million of the more than 220 million Americans counted in last year's census.

Seminars On Real Estate Scheduled

ECU News Bureau
Two day-long seminars in real estate finance and real estate appraisal will be offered by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education this fall.

"Real Estate Finance," set for Thursday, Sept. 3, will cover such areas as sources of funds for single residential mortgages, V.A. and F.H.A. loans, discount points, closing costs, types of mortgages and provisions of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act.

Instructor is Bob Mallard, vice president of Wachovia Mortgage Co., who has conducted numerous courses and seminars throughout the state.

"Real Estate Appraisal," a Wednesday, Oct. 14, program, will provide information regarding such areas of the valuation process as the nature and purpose of appraisals, basic principles of real property value, neighborhood analysis, land valuation, cost approach and the Market Data Approach.

F. Bruce Sauter, a partner in the Greenville firm of Moore and Sauter, will direct the seminar.

Both programs are designed for real estate professionals, investors and interested consumers. Each runs from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. and will be held in the Willis Building at ECU.

Further information and registration materials are available from "Real Estate Program", Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, ECU, Greenville, N.C., telephone 757-6143.

Open Extended School Aug. 31

The extended school, an extension of the regular Pitt County high schools, will reopen high school classes on August 31 at 4 p.m. in the Whichard Building at Pitt Community College.

Students attending this school earn credit toward the Pitt County High School diploma. Through the "dual enrollment" plan, students may also take college credit courses which count toward high school and college credit simultaneously.

High school classes, provided by public school personnel, are free. Dual-enrolled college courses require the payment of all regular school fees and the purchase of necessary books and materials.

The school office is located in the dark brown trailer behind the White Building. All interested persons are asked to call 756-9572 for additional information.

Optimist Have Safety Drive

The Optimist Club of Greenville is promoting a "Wanted! Alive!" traffic safety campaign as a public service. Pete McLawhon, president of the local Optimist Club, announces that the campaign is now underway.

"Bulletin inserts, place mats, and posters are being distributed throughout Greenville to remind all motorists of their responsibilities to the children of our community," McLawhon said.

About 20,000 of the red, white and black bulletin inserts, place mats and posters are being distributed by Optimist Club members and members of the Greenville City Schools' Safety Committee. They are emphasizing that schools will soon be opening and that every area citizen needs to be aware of safety measures to protect all youth.

The primary message being advocated by the Optimist Club and members of the Safety Committee is the necessity to drive carefully and to be on the alert for children.

May Pay For Future Water

ATLANTA (AP) — Drought in the Southeast may force governments, corporations and farmers to stop taking groundwater for granted, according to an economist with the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta.

Gene D. Sullivan, in the September issue of the bank's publication, Economic Review, suggests that governments charge for water now taken from underground sources for free.

Charging for water is contrary to the traditional view that individuals have full ownership rights to water collected in ponds and reservoirs on private property.

But, Sullivan says, those ideas must change as water becomes harder to find.

A senior agricultural economist for the bank, Sullivan said water problems in a seven-state region date back to a drought which began last summer.

Rainfall has been low, and the drought is compounded by hot weather, when more city residents water lawns and gardens, drink water and seek relief from the heat in swimming pools, he said.

At the same time, Sullivan said, farmers are drawing down water tables by stepping up the irrigation of their crops. Georgia farmers alone increased their irrigation by 23 percent in 1980, adding 1,200 new irrigation systems.

Government must respond to new problems posed by the water shortages, he said, conceding that allocation plans requiring competing users to share scarce resources will be expensive and difficult to enforce.

Sullivan said farmers who turn to irrigation to survive the drought may not be considering the long-term costs.

"Water supplies can be seriously depleted in areas where irrigation is growing rapidly," Sullivan said.

When water supplies are depleted, urban consumers have more difficulty obtaining water and land may cave in as it has in Florida, he said.

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

It is all very well for a defender to take a ruff in an attempt to set the contract. But it is wise to look ahead instead of ruffing blindly. Consider this hand from the Philip Morris European Bridge Cup in Dusseldorf, Germany.

With his minimum opening bid and long suit, South had only one story to tell. North showed fine appreciation of the value of his singleton king when he raised to game.

West led a diamond. Declarer won in dummy, and would have had an easy road to twelve tricks had he known spades were 3-3. However, since the percentages favored a 4-2 division, he cashed the king of spades and then usually tried to get back to his hand with a diamond to the queen. West ruffed, led a club to his partner's ace and scored another diamond ruff. Then West led the king of hearts.

Declarer won in dummy with the ace and had just one hope for his contract—that West had started out with only three trumps. Declarer led his remaining high diamond from the table and stuffed his heart loser. When West discarded on this trick, it was a simple matter to return to the closed hand with a heart ruff, draw trumps and claim the contract.

West was in too much of a hurry to score a second diamond ruff. See what a difference it would have made if, after ruffing the first diamond, West shifted to the king of hearts instead of a club.

If declarer ducks, West can then shift to a club and get his diamond ruff to defeat the game. So declarer must win the ace of hearts. But now he is locked in dummy with no fast entry to his hand. No matter which way declarer turns, he cannot avoid losing a heart, the ace of clubs and another diamond ruff for down one.

This kind of situation crops up frequently at the table. It highlights how important it is to think through the whole hand, rather than take a small immediate advantage.

Pre-Release Graduation

The 24th class of the Pre-Release and Aftercare Program graduated at noon Wednesday from the four-week course conducted in Greenville.

The graduation class of 22 inmates was hosted by the Winterville Christian Church with Rev. Tom Everton opening the program with remarks welcoming the graduates back into society.

The church provided a luncheon for the graduating class, their friends and relatives, which was coordinated by Mrs. Kay Allen.

Ott Alford, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, was the speaker at the ceremony. He encouraged the graduates to move on from their period of confinement to achieve those things they most desire, by learning to cope with stress, avoid peer pressure and stand on their own two feet.

Matt Brewington, training coordinator, and Pat Higgins, center director, awarded the graduating class their diplomas.

The Pre-Release Training program is a four-week session for prisoners who have been identified as requiring improvement of socialization skills prior to being released.

Programs Accredited

ECU News Bureau
Full accreditation for East Carolina University's environmental health degree programs has been granted by the National Accreditation Council for Environmental Health Curricula.
The Council's site review team gave the ECU Department of Environmental Health a favorable endorsement, commenting that the department possesses "one of the strongest and best balanced faculty in the country."
Receiving approval were ECU's four-year BS degree program and Master of Science in Environmental Health (MSEH) program. The undergraduate program, one of only 18 accredited programs in the U.S. and the only accredited undergraduate program in North Carolina, was re-accredited. The graduate program, begun three years ago and one of four recognized programs in the nation, was accredited for the first time.

The Department of Environmental Health, part of the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions, prepares students for careers in disease prevention and health promotion.

Bottled Afterthought: I Am Dying Of Sharks

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Cecilia Leonard never dreamed that her tall tale about a shark attack would survive a trip across the Atlantic in a bottle.
But, at her father's urging, the 8-year-old Outer Banks vacationer included her address before setting the message adrift.
Nine days after Cecilia threw the bottle into the ocean it was picked up by someone in Cascais, Portugal, who wrote her a letter informing her of his discovery.
"Dear somebody," Cecilia's note began. "I am (catching) a lot of fish. My name is Cecilia."
After supplying her birthdate and her age, the note got to the point.
"Well, I gave you this note because I have something to tell you," Cecilia wrote. "Help! I am dying of sharks!"
She added, in a post-script, "Please help me. You see, I was fishing. I caught a shark. He pulled me out in the ocean. Then a shark ate my leg. I only had time to do this note."
Then another addendum, "P.S. Right behind Jack's motel."
Cecilia, who said she "just made up the story" about the sharks, took credit for following through with the plan.
"It was my idea," she said. "But my daddy (Howard Leonard Jr.) didn't want me to do it. He thought somebody at the beach would get it right where I threw it."

But it was Jose Miguel Santos, who found the bottle. He answered the plea for help with a letter and about 30 cents worth of Portuguese currency.
"She wasn't nearly as much in shock as I was," said Cecilia's mother, Lynn. "Nobody believed it, but here's the letter to prove it."
The letter, written in English on stationery from a Lisbon hotel, described the Portuguese fishing village and told of an upcoming bullfight at the nearby Parca De Touros. But there was no indication of the writer's age or where he was from.

But Santos provided Cecilia with a post-script of his own:
"P.S. 'I'll bet you're fooling about the shark biting your leg off!'"

U.S. To Buy Mexican Oil

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy has contracted to buy 24 million barrels of Mexican crude oil this year, plus another 50,000 barrels a day until Aug. 31, 1986, the Mexican Department of Natural Resources has announced.
The purchase is part of a plan to build up the U.S. strategic petroleum reserve as insurance against a future oil crisis.

"The sales will be made at official prices in effect, renegotiated every three months in line with international petroleum market conditions," an announcement from the Mexican Resources Department said Thursday.
Shipments will be handled by Pemex, the Mexican state petroleum monopoly.
The announcement said the United States will buy 200,000 barrels a day from Sept. 1 until Dec. 31 and after that 50,000 barrels daily until Aug. 31, 1986.

Mexico currently sells its heavy-type Maya oil, used to make lubricants and heating fuel, at $28 a barrel. Its lighter-type Isthmus, from which gasoline is derived, fetches $34.50 a barrel.

SEEKING A MAJORITY
THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A three-month-old attempt to form a center-left coalition has failed, and now Queen Beatrix must decide on another political leader to try to put together a majority.

Still Hunt 2 Suspects

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two defendants accused of illegally selling bugging devices and other strategic technology for shipment to the Soviet Union have had their bail reduced, while the search continues for two other people accused in the case.
Anatoli "Tony" Maluta, 61, a Soviet-born U.S. citizen who lives in Redondo Beach, and Sabina Dorn Tittel, 31, of Rancho Palos Verdes were being held in lieu of $250,000 bail each after their bail was reduced Thursday from $800,000.
European and U.S. authorities were searching for the other two people accused — Werner J. Bruchhausen, 42, of West Germany, and Dietmar Ulrichshfer, 41, of Austria, authorities said Thursday.
The four were named in a 60-count federal grand jury indictment handed down Wednesday.
It charged that during the 3½ years ending June 5, 1980, the four conspired to ship items such as electronic monitoring and communications systems and computer components to West Germany and elsewhere without first obtaining export licenses from the Commerce Department and the Department of State.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

HER NAME HAS BECOME PART OF OUR LANGUAGE—JEZEBEL!

IT HAS BEEN A CUSTOM, IN MODERN TIMES, WHEN A WOMAN ATTRACTS AND SEEMS TO EXERT UNDUE INFLUENCE OVER A MAN, OR MANY MEN, FOR PEOPLE TO CALL HER A JEZEBEL. HOWEVER, NO MODERN COUNTERPART COULD EVER COMPETE WITH THE ORIGINAL JEZEBEL FOR DOWNRIGHT EVIL AND MURDEROUS ACTS! BORN A PHOENICIAN PRINCESS, DAUGHTER OF KING ETHBAAL, SHE MARRIED KING AHAB OF ISRAEL (CIRCA 865 B.C.) AND, IN SHORT ORDER, COMPLETELY DOMINATED THIS WEAK-WILLED RULER. ONCE AHAB WAS UNDER HER CONTROL, JEZEBEL IMMEDIATELY SET ABOUT DESTROYING ISRAEL'S RELIGION AND REPLACING IT WITH THE WORSHIP OF BAAL AND ASTARTE, PHOENICIAN DIETIES OF HER HOMETLAND....

...SHE INSTALLED, IN THE PALACE, AND SUPPORTED, NINE HUNDRED PRIESTS OF THIS HEATHEN RELIGION AND, IN TURN, HUNTED DOWN THE PRIESTS OF ISRAEL AND SLAUGHTERED THEM WHERE EVER SHE COULD! LOUNGING IN ORIENTAL LUXURY IN THE PALACE, SHE DIRECTED THE POLICIES OF THE KINGDOM, WHILE AHAB SAT MEEKLY BY HER SIDE, NEVER DARING TO DISPUTE HER. HER SCHEMINGS, HER CRUELITIES, AND HER PASSION FOR BLOOD-SPILLING ARE RECORDED IN THE BOOK OF I KINGS. ONLY ELIJAH, THE GREAT PROPHET, STOOD UP AGAINST THIS WICKED QUEEN AND FOUGHT HER EVIL INFLUENCE AT EVERY TURN. HER OWN DEATH AND DESTRUCTION WAS PREDICTED BY THE PROPHET AND TOOK PLACE EXACTLY AS HE PROPHESED IT WOULD! (I KINGS 9:30-37)

A 'Bridge' Is Largely Rejected

NEW YORK (AP) — "Jesus made me Kosher," proclaimed the T-shirt worn by a young man handing out leaflets on a busy Manhattan street corner.

He is a convert to "Jews for Jesus," a group whose members have hit big city streets this summer, aggressively preaching a belief in Jesus Christ as the messiah while clinging to their Jewish identity.

Despite their ambitions of being a bridge between Christians and Jews, they are rejected by traditional Jewish organizations and criticized by some Christians.

"Jews for Jesus," which claims 14,000 followers, is the largest and best organized of several groups of so-called "Messianic Jews." Some observe traditional Jewish customs; others do not. All share allegiance to Jesus Christ and the Jewish state of Israel.

ethnic heritage. He sees no conflict with belief in Jesus.

"If I'm not a Jew, what am I?" Rosen said in a telephone interview. "I was born a Jew. Judaism is more than a religion. We've been presented as the bogey man — as some cult — and it has scared other Jews away from us."

Writing in the evangelical journal "Christianity Today," Tanenbaum argued that a Messianic Jew is "a theological impossibility" because "Judaism is incompatible with any belief in the divinity of a human being."

"When 'Messianic Jews' reenact Jewish rituals of the Sabbath, the Passover, the bar mitzvah, without commitment to the authentic convictions they symbolize, they in fact make a mockery of their sacred meanings — a practice which is not worthy of any high religion such as Christianity," Tanenbaum wrote.

Urged A Closer Churchly Role

TURKU, Finland (AP) — Lutherans around the world have been urged to develop closer working relationships with Roman Catholic churches in view of a newly realized "basic consensus of faith."

The advice came from the Lutheran World Federation's executive committee in a five-page statement to member churches representing more than three-fourths of the world's 70 million Lutherans.

Titled "All Under One Christ," the statement says recent joint Lutheran-Catholic observances of the 450th anniversary of the Augsburg Confession brought out the shared convictions.

It "deepened the awareness for both Lutherans and Roman Catholics of what they hold in common and at the same time has allowed the recognition that many differences are not church dividing, but rather represent legitimate diversity," the statement said.

Supported By Foundation Aid

TUBINGEN, West Germany (AP) — Backed by a $200,000 grant from the Volkswagen Foundation, the controversial Roman Catholic scholar, the Rev. Hans Kung, is establishing a new department at West Germany's Tubingen University on women in Christianity. He says the department will be headed by a woman.

Woman's Day

Woman's Day will be observed at the Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church on August 24. Women will be in charge of the morning service, with pastor Griffin presenting the sermon.

A special Woman's Day Program will be held at 5 p.m. featuring Mrs. Marion W. Jones as the main speaker. The financial results of the Woman's Day effort will also be given at this time.

Have Eyes On Broadcasting

NEW YORK (AP) — The United Church of Christ's Office of Communication has launched a nationwide effort to combat employment discrimination in broadcasting and cable television.

An initial step involved mailing of 3,000 copies of a new guide on access to local stations and their practices to leaders of churches, women's organizations, minority and other public interest groups in every state.

"The battle against discrimination in telecommunications has not been won," the guide says.

The average salary is $4.70 an hour, Mrs. Samick said.

First Teachers To Work Under Union

North Carolina law prohibits collective bargaining for teachers, but Fort Bragg teachers are allowed to do so because they are federal employees. Teachers will be allowed to negotiate for better working conditions and for all terms of their employment, except pay. The Federal Labor Relations Board is now studying whether teacher salaries can be a point of negotiation. "Teachers will benefit in terms of policies, in filing grievances, in terms of teacher protection and utilization of sick leave, and in posting vacancies," said Billy R. King, district director for the NCAE. King confirmed that federal employees are not allowed to strike, which was one of the primary fears of the Fort Bragg Board of Education when the subject of a union came up about two years ago.

DeBruhl succeeds Charles Gordon who resigned in April.

Six In Family Are Executed

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Six relatives were found shot to death at two separate locations today, including four children, ages 2 to 7, who were lined up in bed and slain execution-style, police said.
A domestic quarrel apparently precipitated the shootings, and police said the incident probably was the largest mass killing ever in the city.
The children's mother and grandmother were the two other victims, police said. A seventh person, a man, was critically wounded.
King E. Bell, described by police as a "religious fanatic," was taken into custody, according to Capt. Tim Foley of the police homicide division.
The walls of the Graceland Avenue home where the children were found were covered "several writings ... with religious overtones," he said.
Bell, who police said was related to some of the victims, was chanting "What's happened to my babies, what's happened to my babies" as he was fingerprinted, according to a reporter at the scene.
The children "were all lined up in a bed" in a basement room, Foley said. "It looked like an execution-type slaying. They were four dead babies — just four little children in a row."
The two women were found dead about eight blocks away at a residence on Southerland Avenue. The man was found wounded on West 10th Street.
None of the victims was identified immediately.
The children apparently were shot with a pistol, the women with a shotgun, Foley said.
The sequence of events was not clear. The wounded man was found first, about 7:30 a.m. Police went to the Southerland address after receiving a separate call, Foley said.
A witness where the women were shot led police to the Graceland Avenue home, he said.

See Libyans As 'Lured'

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The independent Hindustan Times newspaper said today that the Reagan administration had been looking for a confrontation with Libya like the Mediterranean aerial dogfight this week.
"The Reagan administration, increasingly irked by Libyan interference in the affairs of friendly countries like Egypt and Sudan, and by its support of many liberation movements in Africa and elsewhere in the Third World, had early on decided to cut Libya down to size," the paper said in an editorial.
"All that the U.S. needed was an excuse to bloody (Libyan leader Moammar) Khadafy's nose, as a prelude to heavier punishment to follow. Khadafy, not famous for discretion, supplied the Americans the excuse" they had sought, the paper said.
The Pentagon says two U.S. Navy F-14s shot down two Libyan SU-22s Wednesday after one of the Libyan planes opened fire at the U.S. jets over the Gulf of Sidra.
Libya claims the gulf, which jets into its central Mediterranean coastline, is its sovereign territory, as well as territory 12 miles from its coast. The U.S. recognizes the traditional three-mile nautical limit.

East Carolina Joins ECAC For 1981-82

From Staff and Wire Reports

East Carolina University has been approved for membership into the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) for the 1981-82 academic year.

The university was given approval by the ECAC's executive committee for basketball and several other non-revenue sports, as yet unannounced.

The committee's decision is subject to final approval by the total ECAC membership, but that is expected to be a formality. The ECAC Schedule Meeting Session and Convention is scheduled for September.

East Carolina's action came along with the decision of Old Dominion, William & Mary, James Madison and Richmond to remain in the league for the 1981-82 year. They had earlier announced their withdrawal from the group due to the NCAA rule on a single round-robin within the league. At the time, there were 11 members in the division.

However, the four, along with East Carolina, will only be joined by George Mason and the U.S. Naval Academy in the ECAC-South division. The other five schools have been reorganized into the ECAC-Metro South division.

A championship tournament will be held March 2, 4 and 6, at a site still to be determined, and the tournament champion will receive an automatic berth into the NCAA tournament.

The last two tournaments were held in Hampton, Va., with ODU winning in 1980 and Madison in 1981.

"We are obviously very pleased with the Executive Committee's decision," ECU Director of Athletics Dr. Ken Karr said. "One of our prime concerns has been to bring ourselves under the ECAC umbrella so that we can compete with those Division I basketball schools of the ECAC-South. This enhances our schedule, provides a chance to play into the NCAA tournament and gives us affiliation with outstanding schools and personnel affiliated with the ECAC. We feel it is another move forward for East Carolina athletics."

ECAC president Seaver Peters, Director of Athletics at Dartmouth, said, "This is a one-year arrangement that the ECAC feels will strengthen the ECAC-South division in a transition period."

Over 200 schools compete in the NCAA's three divisions under the ECAC banner.

While the four returning schools and East Carolina are committed to the league for just one year, they have been pursuing a regional conference through Ben Carnevale, athletic director emeritus at William & Mary and a member of the NCAA basketball tournament committee.

ODU also is looking into other conferences, among them the Eastern Eight and the Sun Belt, and into major independent status.

The five former members of the ECAC-South — Baltimore U., Baltimore Loyola, Robert Morris, St. Francis, Pa., and Towson State — have been shifted to a new ECAC division, the Metro-South.

The ECAC decision to split the large Southern division permits Old Dominion and others to retain a direct avenue to the NCAA tournament without compromising efforts to look for another conference.

The future may be determined by efforts spearheaded by Joe Paterno of Penn State to form an Eastern conference that would embrace football as well as basketball. Members of both the Big Eight and Eastern Eight are interested.

The ECAC will retain three automatic NACC bids for 1981-82 — the North, the Metro-South and the South. A another new division, the Metro Atlantic Association, made up of Army, Fairfield, Fordham, Iona, Manhattan and St. Peter's, will have to wait two years before receiving automatic qualification.

Big East members are Boston College, Connecticut, Georgetown, Providence, St. John's, Seton Hall, Syracuse and Villanova. Paterno is courting Boston and Syracuse for a possible new conference, along with Pittsburgh, West Virginia and Rutgers of the Eastern Eight.

The other Eastern Eight members are Rhode Island, Duquesne, George Washington, St. Bonaventure and Massachusetts.

East Carolina's 1981-82 schedule includes games with George Mason, at ECU and at Fairfax, Va.; William & Mary, also home and away; James Madison, home and away; Richmond, home and away; Old Dominion, in Greenville only, and Navy, at Annapolis only.

East Carolina basketball coach Dave Odom was out of town this week, and unavailable for comment on the conference alignment.

CFA Votes Today On TV Pact

ATLANTA (AP) — The president of the College Football Association says the National Collegiate Athletic Association "pushed the panic button" when the CFA moved into money matters rather than academic and recruiting issues.

The controversy comes to a head today when the CFA decides whether to ratify a four-year, $180 million television contract with NBC, an agreement that would guarantee each CFA member at least two appearances and $1 million.

The NCAA, which has a $263 million package for the same period (1982-85) with ABC and CBS, has threatened to take disciplinary action against CFA members if they adopt the TV package with NBC.

"Naturally that kind of reaction is a little repugnant to me," Dr. Fred C. Davison, president of the CFA and the University of Georgia, said Thursday night.

Davison said threats of prohibition and possibly even expulsion from the NCAA never arose when the CFA pushed for raising academic requirements. But he said the NCAA "pushed the panic button" when the TV issue arose.

"Threats and sabre rattling on their part seem a little strange to me," Davison said. "It's going to be an interesting meeting tomorrow."

The CFA consists of 61 universities, represented by 17 major independents and five conferences — the Atlantic Coast, Big Eight, Southeastern, Southwest and Western Athletic. It includes most of the major powers with the exception of the Pac-10 and Big 10 conferences.

Today's vote will not be binding since the members have a period of reconsideration. That date was set for Sept. 10 but there has been some sentiment to bring it back to Sept. 1.

The CFA's executive committee met Thursday night to take up the reconsideration date issue, but Charles M. Neinas, executive director, said the committee decided to leave the matter up to the membership today.

Neinas declined to speculate how today's vote might go, but he did say that "both numbers and names are important."

One athletic director, who asked not to be identified, estimated that there could be around 37 yeas votes, and that there would be some abstentions.

Two of the leading proponents of CFA activities since its inception in 1976 won't be at the meeting. The Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, executive vice president of Notre Dame, is in Italy this summer and Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant of Alabama is tied up with preseason practice.

It has been estimated that the CFA package would give a school getting the maximum number of appearances $7.7 million, compared with $6.1 million under the NCAA plan during the four years.

Wiles Hallock, commissioner of the Pac-10 and chairman of the NCAA Television Committee, will go over the NCAA plan and hold a question-and-answer session at the start of the meeting this morning.

"We feel that our plan is better for them than their own plan, not strictly in financial terms but in all respects," Hallock said.

New Plan Gives 2nd Half Runner-Up Berth

NEW YORK (AP) — Players union chief Marvin Miller perhaps summarized baseball's problems best when he said that "Einstein himself couldn't devise a system that didn't have bugs in it."

So it was predictable that the response to a new split-season format for major league baseball would be harsh in some quarters. One executive called the new plan "unjust and irrational."

Under the revised format, if the same team wins both halves of a division race, its opponent in the divisional playoffs will be the team with the second-best record in the second half.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn was heavily criticized for the original format, which called for the team with the second-best record for both halves in a division to get a playoff berth in case there's a double division winner. Under this plan, it was possible that a team would need to lose games late in the season to assure itself of a playoff berth.

Thursday's announcement by Kuhn, American League President Lee MacPhail and National League President Chub Feeney, said, "This revision eliminates the outside possibility that a club losing a game or games toward the end of the season would thereby qualify as a wild card team for the new Division Series."

Both the original split-season format — conceived at the end of the 50-day players' strike — and the new plan call for division winners in each half of the season to meet in a best-of-five divisional playoff. The New York Yankees, Oakland A's, Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers, all first-place teams on June 12 when the strike began, were declared first-half winners.

The division playoff victors will advance to the league championship series. The survivors go on to the World Series.

The change in plans hurts teams that did well in the first half, but weren't in first place when the strike started. For example, the Cincinnati Reds were only one-half game behind the Dodgers in the NL West on June 12.

One of those who was upset with the revised plan was Cincinnati President Dick Wagner.

"As the architect of the split season and the leader in promoting this recent decision, the commissioner must take full responsibility," said Wagner. "It was a situation that required surgery and was treated with band-aids. The change is simply an easy way out and whitewash by baseball's leadership."

The Texas Rangers, who were second to Oakland in the AL West in the first portion of the season despite losing one less game than the A's, also weren't happy with the new plan.

"I don't like it," said pitcher Jon Matlack, the team's player rep. "It makes the first half meaningless except for the first place teams. Oh, well, it makes it more interesting to make up the rules as you go along."

"They should have the playoffs between teams with the two best records overall," added Texas pitcher Doc Medich. "Teams that play well all year shouldn't be penalized."

Eckersley Gets Revenge A Year After The Pain

By The Associated Press

The night rekindled memories of pain for Dennis Eckersley of the Boston Red Sox.

One year ago to the day, he had pitched a two-hitter against the Oakland A's, only to lose 2-1 on an unearned run and a home run pitch to Mario Guerrero.

Thursday night, however, Eckersley rewrote the script with a somewhat less classic performance, scattering eight hits in seven innings and pitching Boston to a 6-4 victory over the A's.

The victory halted a three-game losing streak and snapped Oakland's five-game winning string. "That was a year ago tonight? Dynamite," Eckersley said afterward. "I deserved a win like this. I don't care how I win, but a loss like that one hurts."

"That was stupid, that home run pitch, and I was stupid tonight when I gave up the homer to (Cliff) Johnson (on an 0-2 pitch). I've either been real good or real bad this season. Tonight I was so-so," he said.

Dwight Evans broke out of an 0-for-7 slump with a two-run single with two out in the eighth inning, providing the tying and winning runs for Eckersley, 6-5 with his first victory since the strike-torn season resumed.

"I haven't found it. I'm still searching for what I had before the strike," said Evans, who is among the American League leaders with 44 RBIs.

"I was swinging great just before the strike," Evans said. "Even though I was 0 for 4 the last game before the strike, I felt so great that I said to myself the guy pitching that next day was in big trouble."

In other AL games, California defeated Baltimore 6-2 and Cleveland edged Seattle 6-5 in 14 innings.

In the only National League game Thursday, the Atlanta Braves defeated the New York Mets 6-4.

Boston trailed 4-3 after Johnson's leadoff homer in the sixth, and that's how it stood when Dave Stapleton started Boston's three-run eighth inning with a one-out single off Steve McCatty, 8-5. One out later, Joe Rudi walked, chasing McCatty. Reliever Bob Owchinko walked Jerry Remy to load the bases, and Dave Heaverlo came to the mound.

Evans drilled Heaverlo's 0-1 delivery to right field, scoring Stapleton, who had homered in the second, and Rudi. Jim Rice drove in the inning's third run with a single.

Angels 6, Orioles 2
Geoff Zahn scattered nine hits in the first complete game in nine second-half outings for California pitchers, and Brian Downing drove in a pair of runs to help beat the Orioles.

In the midst of a 5-for-26 slump, Downing drilled two-out RBI singles in the first and fifth innings, the former capping a three-run outburst that gave Zahn all the support he needed. Zahn, 8-6, struck out one and didn't walk a batter.

Afterward, Downing said the joy of his offensive performance was diminished by the boos at Anaheim Stadium that greeted him in left field. Normally a catcher, he has struggled in the outfield.

"I didn't have any pleasure out of this game other than the fact we won," he said. "I feel like I struck out six times."

Indians 6, Mariners 5
Alan Bannister singled home Mike Hargrove with two out in the top of the 14th to lift the Indians over Seattle. Hargrove had walked with one out, and Chris Bando followed with another single.

One out later, Bannister singled to left off loser Dick Drago, 4-4, scoring Hargrove. Bando was thrown out trying for third, but the winning run already had scored.

Mike Stanton, 3-2, who combined with Dan Spillner for 122-3 innings of scoreless relief, was the winner. Cleveland relievers have not allowed an earned run in 272-3 innings.

Cleveland tied it 5-5 with three runs in the ninth, two on Pat Kelly's pinch single and another on an RBI double by Miguel Dilone.

Braves 6, Mets 4

Phil Niekro, 42-year-old Atlanta knuckleballer, gave up six hits in seven innings and survived some early wildness to help the Braves to their seventh victory in 10 second half games.

Glenn Hubbard hit a solo home run and drove in another run with a fielder's choice grounder to back Niekro, 5-4.

Atlanta snapped a 2-2 tie with two runs in the fourth on an RBI hit by Chris Chambliss and Hubbard's grounder. The Braves scored two more in the seventh when rookie Brett Butler hit a run-scoring double and scored on a single by Claudell Washington.

New York scored twice in the third inning, aided by a hit batsman and three walks, but Niekro settled down after that. Rick Camp finished up for Niekro, earning his 11th save.

Mookie Wilson tripled twice and scored two runs for New York.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add the high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Bushbeck In Surgery

East Carolina place kicker Chuck Bushbeck underwent surgery yesterday for the removal of a lump in his chest.

Bushbeck, a senior transfer from Villanova, had recovered enough yesterday afternoon to attend practice, although he did not take part. ECU officials said.

Tests of the mass removed from the player were still underway this morning, and a definite diagnosis was not expected until sometime this afternoon. Should all go well, he is expected to return to practice in a few days.

The kicker is considered a definite all-America candidate by ECU officials, having had an outstanding career at Villanova, which dropped its football program last spring.

Raiders, Chargers Seen As Class Of AFC's Western Battlefield

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders went through the off-season with zero turnover in their roster, a National Football League rarity. "No one wanted to retire. They all wanted to be here to get their Super Bowl rings." Coach Tom Flores explained when training camp opened. But the Raiders never have been a team to stand still, as shown through 16 consecutive winning seasons and owner Al Davis' legal fight to move the franchise to Los Angeles. Improvement in 1981 may be necessary since the team is co-favorite, at best, with the San Diego Chargers in its own division, the American Football Conference West.

"We're not a totally set team. There's some pretty good competition going on. It's not for public knowledge but, believe me, it's there," said Flores. He faced the summer task of making room on the roster for two first-round draft picks, offensive lineman Curt Marsh and cornerback Ted Watts, and also for some players injured last season. Former starting quarterback Dan Pastorini, coming off an injury, thinks he'll be traded elsewhere before this season begins. Super Bowl hero Jim Plunkett is clearly the No. 1 quarterback on the veteran offensive unit which, were it not for last season's performance, would be called too old. On defense, the Raiders are young as well as good. "Under our scheme of things, we play man-to-man pass coverage 75 percent of the time. But if we didn't have the best front seven in football, we couldn't do it," says Lester Hayes, the cornerback named NFL Defensive Player of the Year in 1980, in praise of the Raiders' linemen and linebackers. Oakland and San Diego both finished the regular 1980 season 11-5. The Kansas City Chiefs and Denver Broncos, both 8-8, were next in the AFC West and the Seattle Seahawks, a disappointing 4-12, were the only team in the division under .500. Dan Fouts of San Diego is coming off a spectacular season in which he threw for an NFL-record 4,715 yards, but All-Pro receiver John Jefferson is a contract holdout. The defensive unit will be out to prove it is much better than it appeared in a 40-17 December loss to Washington and the 34-27 setback to Oakland in the AFC title game.

Kansas City's eight victories, its most since 1972, included two over the Raiders, and Chiefs' fans expect even better things this year because of good young players such as quarterback Steve Fuller, 24, and defensive end Art Still, 25. The Denver Broncos, under new management, present a rebuilding challenge for Dan Reeves, the new head coach who says, "There's no question the AFC West is the toughest division." Seattle was 0-8 at home last year, when Seahawk problems included weak defense and a knee injury which sidelined running back Sherman Smith. The Raiders won Super Bowl XV, beating the Philadelphia Eagles 27-10, at the end of the longest championship trail in NFL history. They were a wild card team, forced to play four postseason games, because San Diego was awarded the division title under the NFL tie-breaking formula. "We were a Cinderella team last year, so just think what we JAMESVILLE — It was the final game of the season, a game Jamesville could have won but did not because of mistakes.

Mistakes: The story of Jamesville's 1980 football season.

Regulation ended with Jamesville and Creswell scoreless. However, early in the overtime the Bullets had first and goal on the five and victory seemed near. But two consecutive offsides penalties sent the Bullets reeling. Not long after Creswell scored to take a 6-0 victory and send Jamesville to its ninth loss in 11 games.

For Jamesville coach Jerry Godley, who only two years ago led the Bullets into the state playoffs after winning the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference title, the 1980 season was not a pleasant one. The losses were too many, the wins too few.

But now, as the Bullets prepare for the upcoming season, Godley hopes his club can learn from last year.

"We were an inexperienced team going into the season," Godley said, "and even though the kids had gone through a season they had to be played under that kind of pressure."

"I keep reminding the kids that we had some bad breaks last year," he said. "Last year a lot of people didn't take into account we had eight players who had never played football before."

That problem does not exist

this season. Depth, as usual, is a problem but the Bullets return seven starters — including the entire offensive line — and a half dozen other players who saw action last season.

"Overall, we look pretty good right now," Godley said. "We're pretty big on the offensive line. In fact, I'd say this is one of the better ones we've had here."

Leading the returnees are tackles Keith Waters (6-1, 215) and Jeff Rogers (5-11, 190), both of whom are four-year starters.

At guards will be senior Dwayne Biggs (6-0, 192) and junior Kenny Moore (6-3, 215), both of whom are two-year starters.

Two-year starter Stanley Roberts (5-11, 176 junior) will be at center.

Senior Ronnie Barber (5-11, 170) is set to start at tight end. Barber started at fullback last season but was moved to tight end to replace graduated all-conference tight end Greg Sullivan.

A two-way battle for quarterback has developed. Junior David Hardison (5-11, 176), who started last season, is being challenged for the starting slot by freshman Ritchie Ange (5-8, 125).

"(Ange) has looked just fantastic," Godley said. "In an intersquad game he gained 82 yards on the ground himself and threw a number of nice passes."

In the backfield, Godley has seniors Onwood James (5-11, 173) and William Moore (5-7, 145) and sophomore Matthew Moore (5-7, 145).

Matthew Moore, who gained over 100 yards last year against Belhaven, is the fastest of the three, having run a 4.5 40-yard dash. James and William Moore have run 4.6-4.7 40s.

Sophomore Carlton Rogers (5-9, 180) will start at fullback. Rogers started at fullback last season before injuring an ankle. When he returned Godley decided to keep him or defense at linebacker.

William Moore, along with Ange, are also being considered at split end. Two others also expected to see a lot of action on offense are split end Ed Modlin (5-11, 135 sophomore) and offensive/defensive lineman Thyrion Williams (5-8, 170 sophomore). Defensively, Rogers and Moore will start at tackles. Waters and Dwayne Biggs at ends and either Roberts or senior Keith Biggs (6-0, 230) at nose guard.

At the linebackers will be Barber and Rogers, or, possibly, Roberts.

In the secondary, William and Matthew Moore will be at the corners while Hardison and James are set at the safeties.

Ange and freshmen Greg Hardison (5-5, 117) and Terry Perry (5-3, 100) may also see action in the defensive backfield.

Others who have a chance to break into the starting lineup include nose guard Wit Brown (5-5, 140 freshman), defensive end Earl Bowen (5-9, 145 freshman) and freshman offensive/defensive back Jeff Armstrong (5-5, 135).

Waters or Ange will do the punting for Godley this season and either Waters or Moore will do the place kicking.

"I feel a lot better this year than I did last year," Godley said. "We made some major accomplishments last year considering what we had. At least the kids came into practice knowing the fundamentals of football."

Godley will begin learning whether those fundamentals have been learned well tonight when the Bullets entertain Plymouth in a scrimmage game.

"We'll look at it as a learning experience," Godley said. "We don't expect to beat Plymouth. Even with the championship team I had we lost to them. But it'll be good to see how we can compete against this type of experience."

One week from tonight's scrimmage, on Aug. 28, the Bullets open their 1981 season on the road at Princeton. One week later Jamesville begins its conference schedule at Columbia. How does Godley view the league this season? "Talent-wise and experience-wise, Belhaven gets my vote," he said. "Bath will be up somewhere close, but those are the only two predominate teams right now."

As for the Bullets, Godley said: "We're hoping for third but we want to be on top. I believe if the kids come around we're gonna give some of the top teams a run for their money."

"I don't think anybody is going to look at us as a pushover. They didn't even do that last year when we had a terribly weak team."

Jamesville's 1981 Schedule
Aug. 21 — Plymouth (scrimmage); Aug. 28 — at Princeton; Sept. 4 — at Columbia; Sept. 11 — Chocowinity; Sept. 18 — at Belhaven; Sept. 25 — Bath; Oct. 2 — at Aurora; Oct. 9 — Mat-tamuskeet; Oct. 16 — Midway; Oct. 23 — OPEN; Oct. 30 — Creswell (Homecoming); Nov. 6 — at Bath. *The Bullets play Bath twice this season. The first game will count in the conference standings.

Today could possibly be one of the most fateful days ever in the history of college athletics.

Today, the 61 members of the Collegiate Football Association vote on whether they will accept and participate in a rich contract offered them by the National Broadcasting Company, in opposition to the contracts signed by the NCAA with CBS and ABC.

Should the group decide to accept, it could mean the destruction of college football as we know it.

The NCAA has promised swift and strict action against those schools who do participate in the NBC contract. This could involve a ban on those schools participating in any NCAA sanctioned event in any sport. How would that then affect the NCAA basketball tournament? Or the bowl games?

Many, many legal difficulties could arise from this.

If, eventually, the CFA is able to strike out on its own, without the NCAA, the latter organization would lose much of its punch. And it would probably be relegated to small time athletics.

The CFA could then, on its own whim, bring in new members. But in all likelihood, it would remain an elitist group, spelling the end of many of the border-line programs, such as that here at East Carolina. Without the opportunity at the big television money, many, many football programs would disappear.

The CFA teams claim all they are doing is exercising the freedom to set their own destinies. The more powerful of them, however, were opposed to the recruiting limits set by the NCAA, holding down team size. This has allowed some of the smaller schools to get "richer" by being able to glean from the leftovers; leftovers that would probably sit on the bench for four years under the old rules at one of the biggies.

True, that has helped some of the lesser CFA members, too, but generally, the players have filtered down through the system to all.

More than likely, should the CFA teams vote today to accept the contract, a long, long legal war is ahead. Whether college athletics can survive it may be the ultimate question.

Record Hoolala Puts Pressure On Bear

By The Associated Press
Will Bear Bryant become the coach with the most wins in college football history this fall?
"I wish everyone would forget about it," says Bryant. "I think it's going to be hard for me to coach my team this year with all the hoolabaloo going on."
He needs nine wins to top Amos Alonzo Stagg's mark of 314. Since the University of Alabama won more than 100 games in the last decade, the record seems likely to fall in the latter part of the regular season.

If it will be the Year of the Bear in Alabama, it will be the Year of the New Coach (Gerry Faust) at Notre Dame and the Year of the Quarterback in such outposts as Brigham Young (Jim McMahon), Ohio State (Art Schlichter) and Stanford (John Elway).
Notre Dame stunned the football world by hiring Faust, a brilliant high school coach at Cincinnati Moeller, to succeed Dan Devine and follow in the legendary footsteps of Rockne.

Leahy and Parseghian.
Herschel Walker is back for his sophomore season at Georgia, after turning down the Montreal Alouettes' offer. He will help the Georgia Bulldogs defend their first-ever national championship.
Things are back to normal on the West Coast with last year's five ineligible teams in the Pacific-10 Conference — including Southern Cal — back in the bowl picture.
From coast to coast, the national contenders are expected to feature many of the old familiar names, with a newcomer to such exalted company perhaps slipping in here and there: Penn State and Pitt in the East; Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi State, Florida, Louisiana State, North Carolina, Clemson and Miami in the South; Michigan, Ohio

State and Notre Dame in the Midwest; Oklahoma and Nebraska in the Big Eight; Texas, Baylor, Houston and Southern Methodist in the Southwest; Brigham Young in the Rockies; Southern Cal, Washington, Stanford, Oregon, Arizona State and UCLA in the Pac-10.
The big question in the East is what can Pitt do for an encore. Jackie Sherrill, who replaced Johnny Majors after Pitt's 1976 national championship, brought the Panthers home eighth nationally a year later. The 1980 Panthers wound up second in the rankings behind Georgia. This time Sherrill has a bigger rebuilding job. He lost 15 starters, including three-time All-American defensive end Hugh Green.
Penn State will try to extend its record NCAA string of 42 consecutive nonlosing seasons against a rugged schedule that includes an early road game at Nebraska and an Alabama-Notre Dame-Pitt finish. Coach Joe Paterno, has talent galore on offense, led by tailback Curt Warner and guard Sean Farrell.

No one seems capable of challenging Penn State or Pitt in the East.
The South, however, doesn't lack for contenders. Bryant and Alabama saw their dream of an unprecedented third consecutive national crown go down the drain last fall and the Bear kept things hopping with a spirited conditioning program during the off-season.
The Crimson Tide returns a sturdy defense led by linebacker Thomas Boyd and strong safety Tommy Wilcox but Bryant must come up with a quarterback ... and eight other new starters on offense.
Georgia, of course, has Walker. If he wasn't a one-man show last year, he may be this time with the Bulldogs riddled by graduation. Mississippi State has suddenly become a national power and Florida and LSU aren't too far away in what should be a wild and woolly Southeastern Conference race. North Carolina, led by tailback Kelvin Bryant and linebacker Darrell Nicholson and Clemson loom as the class of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Michigan is being touted as the class of the Midwest. Now that he's finally won a bowl game, the only mountain left for Bo Schembechler to climb would be a national championship. The Wolverines are loaded on offense with a super line and All-American flanker Anthony Carter but Schembechler warns against going overboard unless "the defense approximates what it did last year (no touchdowns over the last 22 periods) and the quarterback turns out to be something special. Then you're talking about something else."
As usual, Ohio State will be Michigan's last stumbling block. A September clash, though, will send the Wolverines against Notre Dame, where Faust has enthusiasm at fever pitch. Devine was kind enough to leave him scads of talent, including linebacker Bob Crable, tailback Phil Carter and wide receiver Tony Hunter.

If either redshirt Kelly Phelps or backup Darrell Shepard surfaces to direct Coach Barry Switzer's Wishbone offense, Oklahoma could have its best team since the national championship years of 1974-75. The Sooners' strength will be a massive offensive line featuring guard Terry Crouch. Nebraska will be its usual mighty self, especially if sophomore quarterback Turner Gill is as good as they say.

The word from Texas is that another 7-5 debacle will cost Coach Fred Akers his job. Akers has finally settled on a quarterback, handing the spot to Rick McIvor and switching Donnie Little to split end. The Longhorns have a potent ofensive line and a veteran defense, anchored by All-American tackle Kenneth Sims.

Baylor has a great runner in Walter Abercrombie but overwhelming problems at linebacker. Houston is always a threat under Coach Bill Yeoman while SMU features the nation's best 1-2 tailback punch in Craig James and Eric Dickerson and its best defense in years. The question is whether probation will hurt or help the Mustangs.
BYU's McMahon is on the verge of becoming major college football's all-time passing and total offense king. The Cougars are far and away the class of the Western Athletic Conference.
Southern Cal, embarrassed by last year's fraudulent academic credit scandal, will resume its quest for the Rose Bowl with an improved offense, led by guard Roy Foster and tailback Marcus Allen, and a sturdy defense featuring linebacker Chip Banks.
Stanford has one of the best offenses with Elway pitching and Darrin Nelson running and catching. Washington and UCLA are almost always right up there while Arizona State and Oregon are contenders again.
Other conference favorites include Yale in the Ivy League; Central Michigan in the Mid-American Conference; Tennessee-Chattanooga in the Southern Conference; Tulsa in the Missouri Valley and San Jose State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

Caponi Is Not Resting Easy

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Donna Caponi didn't put much stock in her first-round lead in the $150,000 World Championship of Women's Golf.
Beth Daniel, the defending champion and one of Caponi's pursuers for the record first prize of $50,000, agreed.
"People put a big thing on leading, but we've got three rounds left. There are going to be some girls shoot in the 60s tomorrow. A two-shot lead on this course is nothing," said Caponi after her opening 2-under-par 70 Thursday.

Actually, she led by a single shot over Sally Little of South Africa, the only other member of this 12-player field to break Shaker Heights Country Club's difficult par of 72. Little had a 71.
Daniel was one of four golfers nestled at par.
"If somebody is playing mediocre, you can make up strokes here," Daniel said. "You don't have to play poorly to have a bad round. This course can jump up and bite you."

Joining Daniel in a three-way tie for third place going into today's second round were Jan Stephenson, last week's victor at Dallas, Nancy Lopez-Melton and Amy Alcott.
Pat Bradley, the U.S. Women's Open champion and No. 1 money winner this year, stood at 73; Kathy Whitworth and Jane Blalock had 75; Jenny Lee Smith of Great Britain had 76; JoAnne Carner had 77; and Juli Simpson Inkster, the lone amateur here, scrambled to an 82.

Caponi says that winning this record purse and becoming the sport's all-time money champion here is her prized goal. She played like she meant it in the opening 18 holes.
If she wins her sixth tournament this year, the 36-year-old veteran would have 17-year earnings of $1,032,521 and bypass Whitworth, providing the latter doesn't finish second. Whitworth is the only LPGA millionaire, with $1,009,802.

Aoki Seeking First PGA Win

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Japanese golfer Isao Aoki has been an international star for years, with 37 victories to his credit.
However, the 38-year-old resident of Yokohama who won his PGA Tour card last March, has never won in the United States and that rankles him a bit.

"Winning a tournament in the U.S. was a dream when I was playing in Japan," the 6-foot, 170-pound Aoki said through an interpreter Thursday after shooting a 7-under-par 65 to share the lead with Hale Irwin in the $350,000 Buick Open going into today's second round.
"As a pro, winning here would be a final goal for me."

Irwin, the two-time U.S. Open champion who won the Hawaiian Open earlier this year, says he prepared for this tournament by vacationing at Kapalua on the island of Maui.
"This tournament carries sufficient prize money ($63,000 to the winner) to get my attention," Irwin said.

Aoki, who has qualified for next week's World Series of Golf as the winner of the Japanese Order of Merit, made the turn Thursday in 32 and came back with a 33 on the back nine over the 7,001-yard layout at Warwick Hills.
Irwin went out in 33 and shot 32 on the back nine.
After watching the assault on the firm greens under near-perfect weather conditions, Irwin flatly predicted that the tournament record of 14-under-par set by Julius Boros in 1963 would be broken this week.
Canadian Dan Hallderson began today's play one stroke behind the leaders with a 66.
Dave Hill, the 1969 Buick Open winner who grew up about 100 miles from here in Jackson, was tied at 5-under 67 with Bill Loeffler, the 25-year-old pro from Colorado whose best finish this season was a tie for 32nd at Quad Cities last month.
Defending champion Peter Jacobsen was in at 4-under 68 along with Bill Kratzert, Calvin Peete and Roger Maltbie.
The winners of three of golf's four major tournaments also are here, but were well back of the leaders. British Open champion Bill Rogers and U.S. Open titlist David Graham each had 2-under 70, while PGA champ Larry Nelson shot a 2-over 74.
Meanwhile, U.S. Senior king Arnold Palmer was in at 5-over 77.
Seventy-eight of the 154 golfers in the field shot par or better Thursday.

Donna Caponi didn't put much stock in her first-round lead in the $150,000 World Championship of Women's Golf.

Industrial Champs

Would You Believe Ali Vs. Joe In Columbia?

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Would you believe a 1981 boxing match between Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier?
The thought might not be as ludicrous as it seems, since both former world heavyweight champions are talking about making their comebacks this year.
Ali was in Columbia Thursday, where he obtained a license to box a still unnamed opponent, when Joe Frazier's name came up.
But the 39-year-old Ali's tongue-in-cheek reply was, "He's too old."
Frazier, who is 37, recently signed with Philadelphia promoter Jan Aronson for a fight sometime in November, which is the same time Ali is talking about fighting.
Ali still hasn't signed a contract to fight anyone although he says he'll fight a high-ranked heavyweight in Columbia.
"The whole world's gonna come to Columbia, South Carolina," he told laughing reporters at a news conference Thursday. "Columbia, South Carolina, will be known in Morocco."
Ali chose this slow-paced city of 100,000 for his latest assault on the impossible because boxing officials elsewhere who saw

Larry Holmes rough up the paunchy former champ last October believe Ali should relax and enjoy his retirement.
But Curtis G. Hitopoulos, chairman of the Richland County Boxing Commission, and doctors who examined Ali Wednesday were on hand at the news conference and pronounced him fit to fight.
Dr. Christopher Biser, one of four doctors who administered the medical tests, said all Ali needs to do is lose about 20 of his 244 pounds and get in shape.
"All of us agree he's in perfect health, excepting the stress cardiogram, which should be perfect when he has a chance to get back to full training," Biser said.
Ali registered about 88 percent on his stress tests, Biser said, "which is excellent, considering he's not in training."
"We're hoping for a fight here in November," Hitopoulos said. "Around Nov. 1."
Ali refused to name an opponent, because he said if he did, it would inflate the cost of the deal. "A guy who can't get $5,000, he'd ask for $5 million," Ali said.
"We'll get offers," he added. "They'll knock the doors down. We will choose one of them, if they're lucky. That's my attitude."

Ali said "attitude" had made him a winner in tough situations before, and he predicted it would do so again.
"I'm still pretty. Look at me. A little heavy. I'll lose some weight, get back in shape, make my comeback," he said.
The former champion said his opponent would be enough of a contender that a victory would place Ali among the top 10 heavyweights. After that, Ali said he would fight once more before going for the title, probably about a year from now.

California's Medfly Spraying Is Again Extended

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Aerial spraying with the insecticide malathion has been expanded to combat new infestations of the Mediterranean fruit fly found in the lush farmlands of the San Joaquin Valley.

Seventeen square miles were added to the 701-square-mile spraying zone Thursday, said Dick Thompson, a spokesman for the medfly eradication project in Los Gatos.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has quarantined the spray zone and much of the acreage around it, bringing to 2,427 square miles the area in which the export of fruit is forbidden without guarantees of no medfly infestation.

The new insecticide area covers Newark, which is in southern Alameda County and just across the southern tip of San Francisco Bay from San Jose, where the first medfly of the current infestation was spotted in June 1980. Thompson said two flies found there Tuesday were confirmed Thursday to be fertile.

Another fertile fly was confirmed Thursday in the same apricot orchard in Westley where the pest first was noticed last week in the lush San Joaquin. Westley is in Stanislaus County, part of the valley that lies in the center of California between the coastal mountains and the Sierra Nevada foothills.

Before that find, the infestation had been contained in the Santa Clara Valley, a largely suburban region whose produce is a mere speck in California's $6 billion-plus produce basket. The much bigger San Joaquin accounts for half the state's produce output.

Three DC-4s were to dust Newark and a narrow belt along Interstate 5 in the San Joaquin Valley tonight.

Meanwhile, Japan, the largest foreign buyer of California produce, said it still might ban California produce because of the fly.

Michiru Okuma, second secretary of the Japanese Embassy in Washington, said Japan may impose restrictions if U.S. officials now in his country do not dispel fears that the infestation is out of control. Japan had decided to begin an embargo Wednesday, but backed off after talks with United States.

In Virginia, officials said Thursday produce from areas of California infested by the fly will face a 90-day quarantine beginning Aug. 26. That means fruits and vegetables from those areas must be accompanied by a document certifying them free of the flies.

Fumigation is required for produce from the quarantine area.

California is awaiting a U.S. Supreme Court decision on its request to stop other states from imposing produce embargoes. California asked the high court Thursday to forbid Georgia from enforcing its ban on shipments of untreated produce from outside the USDA quarantine area.

Four other states have tried to impose quarantines, but their actions have either been discontinued or stopped by court rulings.

Florida agriculture officials, who have covered 24 square miles with malathion, say the next aerial attack against the fly there will be Sunday. Department of Agriculture spokesman Jerry Redding said that day was picked because the zone includes downtown Tampa and the spray can damage car paint. Downtown will be sprayed Sunday, and the application completed Monday, weather permitting, he said.

Five medflies have been discovered in Florida just west of the state's lucrative citrus belt.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Questions About the Gallbladder

Q: What is the gallbladder and what does it do?

A: It is a small pouch which lies beneath the liver high on the right side of the abdomen. The gallbladder collects and temporarily stores the bile (gall) that is manufactured by the liver. Bile, vital to complete digestion, is released from the gallbladder as the body requires it.

Q: What is meant by a gallbladder attack?

A: A sudden acute inflammation or infection of the gallbladder, or a stone in the bile passages, may cause the onset of an attack.

Abdominal pain, nausea, vomiting, chills and malaise may be the symptoms. It must be noted that these same symptoms may be caused by many other conditions. It is therefore hazardous and unwise to try to make a self-diagnosis of a gallbladder attack.

Q: What causes a stone to form in the gallbladder?

A: The adage about gallbladder stones is that they occur most commonly in "the fat, fair and 40 group of adults" and in women more frequently than in men. This is not always true. The bile contains salts and pigments that sometimes form deposits. These grow larger with disturbed gallbladder and liver functions and become gallstones.

Q: Can X-rays show the presence of stones and gallbladder disease?

A: Yes. By using special dyes, the filling and the emptying of the gallbladder can be followed by X-ray studies. Inadequate emptying of the gallbladder is indicative of chronic inflammation and disease. Most stones are visible by X-ray examination.

Q: Can stones in the gallbladder be dissolved?

A: In the past 10 years drugs have been tried as a method of dissolving stones. Physicians and scientists are still working to perfect the technique. The answers are not all in yet.

Q: Is surgery always necessary for the treatment of gallbladder disease and stones?

TRANS-SEA PIPELINE ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Work has begun to pump Algerian natural gas through the recently completed 653-mile trans-Mediterranean pipeline from the Sahara to Sicily, the official Algerian news agency reports.

A: Some cases of gallbladder inflammation and infection can be controlled with antibiotics, drugs and diet. The need for surgery depends entirely upon the individual case, its severity, and its complications.

With today's highly-perfected techniques of anesthesia and surgical skills, an operation, when indicated, is often the safest, simplest, and most conservative form of treatment for gallbladder disease — with or without stones. The combined judgments of the physician, surgeon and radiologist, carefully evaluate each individual's problems to determine the best course of treatment for a safe and speedy return to health.

According to investigators, cars involved were driven by Beverly Jean Peggs of Green Mill Run Apartments and Deborah Ann Knox of Winterville. Damage was set at $650 to the Peggs car and $310 to the Knox auto.

Cars driven by Maggie Mooring Newton of 408A Roundtree Dr. and Glynn Harper Brown of 301 Nash St. collided about 12:35 p.m. causing $350 damage to the Newton car and $200 damage to the Brown auto.

A 12:15 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Reade and Fourth Streets involved cars operated by John Oliver Mitchell of 1000 West Third St. and Christine Smith Bland of 102 Westwood Dr.

Officers, who charged Mrs. Bland with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $300 to the Bland car and $200 to the Mitchell auto.

Brightening Nuclear Future In Five-Year Forecast

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In the next five years North Carolina will see a 76 percent increase in nuclear power use, a report presented to the state's Energy Policy Council predicted Thursday.

The North Carolina Energy Division, in part of an "Energy Outlook Report" to be published this fall, that energy consumption will continue to rise through 1985, but at a slower pace than in recent years.

By 1985, the forecast predicts there will be an increase in overall energy consumption of 11.3 percent over 1980 and an increase in personal energy consumption of 4.9 percent. In addition, industrial energy consumption is expected to grow by 21 percent.

Cliff Kelly, an economist with the state Energy Division, said North Carolina will rely less on petroleum as time goes by, but intimated that coal generation would still account for 60 percent of the total energy in 1985.

Kelly predicted that nuclear power will generate 36.6 percent of the state's electricity by 1985, leaving hydroelectric and petroleum sources producing the remaining 3.4 percent.

Fuel demand is expected to reach 846.8 trillion Btus by then, an increase of 26 percent, with all energy sources showing growth.

He said the figures presume that the industrial sector will gain momentum during the early 1980s as the rate of inflation and interest rates moderate and employment levels increase.

By 1985, the industrial sector is expected to consume almost half — 41.2 percent — of all energy used in the state.

The forecast also projects that gasoline consumption will decline 16 percent by 1985, natural gas use will peak early in the 1980s and begin to decline at the end of the five-year period and prices for petroleum and coal will rise only 3 percent to 5 percent in the interim.

Natural gas prices, however, were expected to rise faster in comparison as the government begins decontrol in 1982.

Although actual consumption figures are not available for 1980, the forecast predicts those figures will show that North Carolina used 1,601.1 trillion Btu, or the equivalent of 31 million barrels of oil. That figure is expected to jump to 1,781.5 trillion Btu by 1985.

In other business, environmentalist spokeswoman Jane Sharp asked the council to delay for six months a proposed purchase agreement between Carolina Power & Light Co. and North Carolina Municipal Power Agency No. 3.

She said the delay past the Oct. 21 deadline would give cities time to consider the impact of the purchase on consumers.

"The (CP&L) proposal asks rate-payers to assume risks properly confined, we believe, only to the company and its stockholders," she said.

Ms. Sharp said the matter was appropriate for the council to discuss because the agreement would encourage the growth of nuclear power and not the growth of renewable energy resources.

CP&L spokesman Bob Royster countered Ms.

Sharp's claims, saying the power agency had "done some very shrewd negotiating for their members" over a period of more than two years.

Good Day At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Thursday was another good day on the Farmville Tobacco Market as buying companies paid as much as $1.92 per pound for top quality tobacco. The volume of sales was heavy compared to the previous day's total.

Demand was up from Wednesday and delivery to the Stabilization Corporation decreased. Good quality cutter and leaf grades continued to account for most of the volume.

On Thursday the Farmville Market sold 799,646 pounds for $1,223,89.64 for an average of $172.46 per 100 pounds. To date the market has sold 10,579,498 pounds of tobacco for $17,665,964.89 for a season average of $166.98 per 100 pounds.

The season average this date last year was $141.64 per 100 pounds.

FRB Loans Offered To Needy Savings & Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Savings and loan institutions strapped for cash can now go the Federal Reserve Board for loans if they cannot find "reasonable" offers of credit elsewhere.

The Federal Reserve Board on Thursday set the rates on medium-term loans, acknowledging that several hard-pressed thrifts have applied for them under a never-before-used program. The Fed's lending to financial institutions normally is limited to member banks and for very short terms only.

The longer-term loans, available to both banks and S&Ls, will carry rates ranging from the short-term "discount rate" of 14 percent for the first 60 days up to 16 percent after five months.

The loans will be made available under a provision allowing "extended credit to banks and thrift institutions under sustained liquidity pressures" — those strapped for ready cash, the Fed said.

"As you know, access to liquidity has not generally been a problem in the past," Fed Chairman Paul Volcker said in a letter to Richard Pratt, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates S&Ls.

"However, looking to the future, we fully realize thrifts may increasingly seek Federal Reserve credit," Volcker's letter said. The rapid rise of interest rates over the past months has badly hurt the thrift industry, driving up S&Ls' cost of luring new deposits while they collect much-lower interest on old home loans.

Even while offering interest as high as 16 percent to win deposits, the S&Ls have found themselves outbid by money market mutual funds which are not subject to government reserve requirements.

Pratt told Congress earlier this year that perhaps one-third of the nation's 4,700 S&Ls are "not viable under today's conditions" of high, volatile interest rates.

Federal Reserve officials refused to say how many institutions have applied for the longer-term credit.

Arrest Made By Deputies

GRIFTON — Wilson Bell Jr., 33 of Grifton, was arrested by Pitt County Sheriff's Department deputies about 9 p.m. yesterday in connection with the alleged rape of an 8-year-old Route 1, Grifton girl an hour earlier.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Bell allegedly ran when the girl's mother returned home and found Bell assaulting her daughter.

He was taken into custody by officers on Secondary Road 1907 and jailed without bond pending a court hearing, Tyson said.

Ditching Vehicle Has Its Risks

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For an actor of Erik Estrada's caliber, there's security in having a safe vehicle like "CHiPs." Ditching the California freeways for the open road may be fraught with potholes.

Mr. Ultra Brite didn't show for this week's shooting of NBC's "CHiPs" because of a contract dispute, raising the possibility that Estrada may take his spokes and smiles elsewhere. But could he find happiness on another highway?

TV stardom does not ensure success in movies or other small-screen vehicles. When Farrah Fawcett left "Charlie's Angels," her first movie was a bomb and her star and poster sales went down. Her most recent publicity has been as sparring partner to boyfriend Ryan O'Neal.

Suzanne Sommers got too big for her T-shirt on "Three's Company," demanded more pay and was written off the show. Another blond joined the cast, and the ABC hit never suffered.

Ponch, Jill and Chrissy became household stars because TV viewers invited them into their living rooms. Without that weekly visit, the public quickly dropped them. The invitations went to other actors with big smiles and pectoral muscles. Already former Olympic hero Bruce Jenner has been signed to guest star in several episodes of "CHiPs."

"We used to joke that we should give Pernel Roberts a job as a $100,000-a-year consultant," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment. "We'd just let him talk to actors in their Winnebagos about the pitfalls of leaving successful series."

Roberts left long-running "Bonanza" in 1965 because he grew tired of Adam Cartwright and shallow scripts. There were no public campaigns to bring back Pernel Roberts, and the show ran through 1972.

Meanwhile, Roberts was pretty much forgotten until he surfaced as "Trapper John, M.D." 14 years later.

In most cases, the vehicle makes the star, not the other way around. "M-A-S-H" survived the loss of Wayne Rogers and McLean Stevenson, who then flopped in several shows, including "Hello, Larry." Alan Alda probably would be an exception to the rule. Hawkeye is the show's glue and identity.

Alda is a fine TV and movie actor. Talent is his insurance policy. John Travolta could leave "Welcome Back Kotter" and successfully display his talents in "Saturday Night Fever." But even he couldn't make the bomb "Moment to Moment" a hit.

There's a big difference between the 19-inch and 19-foot screens. On TV, the character and actor often merge. The public likes the character, not necessarily the actor, and is more apt to overlook acting deficiencies. That's not the case when movie-goers pay for their entertainment.

Talent can take many forms. Barbara Mandrell can call the shots on her variety show. Robin Williams is indispensable to "Mork and Mindy," as was Redd Foxx in "Sanford and Son." When Foxx fought with NBC and left the show, NBC tried to salvage something with "Sanford Arms." It died quickly.

Foxx then went to ABC for the "Redd Foxx Comedy Hour." His put-down humor works in a situation comedy and his off-color comedy does well in Las Vegas. Neither flourished in this variety format.

Then when Foxx came back to the situation comedy business last season in "Sanford," the welcome mat had been taken in.

Are you listening, Erik?

REPORTED RECOVERING — Jerry Lee Lewis poses with his daughter Phoebe Thursday for the first public photo since the 45-year-old entertainer was hospitalized for a ruptured stomach 52 days ago. Lewis was given a 50-50 chance of survival after two stomach operations within 10 days, but is now in "serious but stable condition." He said Thursday that "only by the grace of God am I still alive." (AP Laserphoto)

Singer Sued For Support

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer-actor Kris Kristofferson is being sued for $250,000 in child support, but he says he is not the father of the 11-year-old boy whose mother has filed the suit.

Peggy Hanson, 44, a Nashville insurance agent, says she met Kristofferson in Nashville in 1969 when she was a waitress and he was starting his music career. She said he fathered her child, Carl Evans Hanson.

Ms. Hanson is asking for $250,000 in past child support and an undisclosed amount for the future, to be determined by a court.

Attorney Jack Norman Jr., representing Kristofferson, said Thursday he believes his client last saw Ms. Hanson in 1969 but that she began writing him letters about the child two or three years ago.

"He knew this woman when he was starting out here, but he is not the father of the child," Norman said. "He also denies he has given her any support for the child."

ATLANTA (AP) — The Cable News Network plans to start a second cable news channel with a continuous, fast-paced cycle of news stories and headlines, according to Turner Broadcasting System Chairman Ted Turner.

CNN currently provides news, sports and features to about 8 million cable homes across the country 24 hours a day. The new service will provide constant news summaries as a supplement to CNN, which now provides summaries but also "softer" feature news.

The Atlanta Constitution quoted sources within the Turner Broadcasting System as saying the service will cost $15 million to operate the first year and will require about 150 additional employees.

CNN, the nation's first all-news TV network, has operated at a loss since it began in 1980, but Turner executives predict it will break even by the end of 1981.

Last week, Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.'s Group W Satellite Communications and ABC Video Enterprises announced a joint venture to develop their own 24-hour cable news service to start next spring. It would provide short, continuous summaries of breaking news.

It had been reported that the ABC-Westinghouse venture will be given free of charge to cable systems, which are expected to provide it free for subscribers. CNN charges cable systems 15 cents a subscriber for its news service.

In an interview on his own network, Turner said CNN II had been in the planning stages for some time, indicating it was not a response to the ABC-Westinghouse competition.

Occasionally We Take The Uncivilized Anyway

By GAIL MICHAELS
Phillip and I stand in awe of McDonald's marketing genius. Not only do we have a row of Muppet glasses in our cabinet when in the strength of its reviews we wouldn't see in the movie on free passes, but in a definite triumph of mind over taste buds Meg is convinced that cheeseburgers are a deftly rivaling Chateaubriand and Fudgesicles.

I think I know at least part of the secret of McDonald's success. It's really the only restaurant chain which appreciates the presence of its under-21 patrons, and the kids know it.

Other restaurants are not as tolerant of this particular human subspecies. A waitress on the Phil Donahue Show recently voiced rather vehemently the prevailing opinion: "For (bleep) sake, leave them at home!" She wasn't talking about expensive restaurants; she was talking about any restaurant which requires shirts and shoes.

I can see her point. After our family leaves a restaurant, Health Department officials usually move in to condemn our table. Still, it is a rare occasion on which Phillip and I can afford to eat a decent meal out, pay the ever-escalating tip, and pay a babysitter, too.

Does this mean that, until we manage to civilize our children, we are confined either to fast food (which neither Phillip nor I particularly like) or to the slim pickings of a TV dinner whenever I feel disinclined to cook? No, occasionally we take the kids anyway.

We take them even though I insist after every meal on foraging guiltily under the table for half-chewed hushpuppies, fish, and the larger saline cracker crumbs while Phillip hisses through a wooden smile that I'm being undignified.

We take them even though Zachary usually responds to being seated at close quarters by grabbing a handful of slaw, then patting the hair of the lady behind him.

We take them even though just one of Zachary's screeches could give every person within our seating area acid ingestion and even though Meg's normal speaking voice can be clearly heard half a mile away.

We take them even though most of the waitresses fill their glasses too full and have never learned that kids in training pants shouldn't be seated over carpet.

That is, we took them until Meg gulped down her Coke too fast at our favorite local restaurant and promptly threw up on the table. I won't be able to bring myself to show my face there again until I have aged beyond recognition.

We took them until Meg looked up from the menu one evening and announced, "I want steak."

Phillip's face turned pasty white. "How about a nice chicken leg?"

"No, I want steak. See, it's right here. S-T-E-A-K-7-9-5."

Now when I insist that I can't take another minute in the kitchen, Phillip joins Meg in singing, "You deserve a break today..."

Okay but I want my own Miss Piggy glass.

Would Hike Military Aid No Paradise In Jonestown Life

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States' ambassador to El Salvador wants to increase U.S. military aid for the Central American country's embattled government if leftist guerrillas gain more power militarily.

Deane Hinton said in an interview in today's editions of The Washington Post that he "would recommend" raising the current $35 million in U.S. military aid to El Salvador to match any increase in aid to the leftists.

"We don't want to do it," he said. But "increases and decreases in the mix are a function of the formula needed to make sure the Carpios of this world do not win." Salvador Cayetano Carpio is a guerrilla leader.

The United States also has sent about 50 military advisers to El Salvador to help the government battle the guerrillas and has increased non-military aid from $10 million in 1978 to $135 million this year.

Earlier this week in San Salvador, Hinton said, "We are asking the Congress for still greater aid for the coming years." He did not elaborate.

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Residents of the Peoples Temple settlement in Guyana, including Larry Layton, endured physical and mental abuse but never complained for fear of public punishment or death, a former cult leader says.

Harold Cordell, one-time chief of armed security for the Rev. Jim Jones' cult in California, testified Thursday in Layton's murder-conspiracy trial that the jungle settlement was anything but the paradise Jones promised it would be.

Under questioning by defense attorney Tony Tamburello, Cordell said residents of the jungle settlement, including Layton, worked 12-hour days and subsisted mainly on rice and water.

Jones held nightly meetings, some of which lasted for 10 hours, and staged drills known as "alerts" during which he talked of suicide and warned residents they would be gunned down by CIA mercenaries if they tried to escape into the jungle.

Layton, 35, is charged in a four-count federal indictment with conspiring to kill Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., and Richard Dwyer, deputy chief of the U.S. Mission in Guyana.

Ryan, three journalists and a temple defector were killed Nov. 18, 1978, in a hail of bullets at the remote Port Kaituma airstrip just hours before Jones and 912 of his followers died in a mass murder-suicide ritual. Dwyer survived the attack.

Ryan was in Guyana investigating reports that some residents were being abused by the cult and held as virtual prisoners.

Ron Javers, a former San Francisco Chronicle reporter who accompanied Ryan, testified late Thursday the journalists at Jonestown became concerned after two temple members passed NBC-TV newsmen Don Harris a note.

The message, scrawled in felt pen, read, "Please help us get out of Jonestown."

"That gave us the first solid indication there were problems in Jonestown, that people were being held against their will," Javers said.

Cordell, who defected from the temple with other residents when Ryan came, said he became concerned when he saw Layton board a truck with other defectors heading for the airstrip.

"I said I don't know why he's here," Cordell said. "I don't really believe he's a defector."

Cordell said he was hit in the back with a piece of bloody skull during the ambush that killed Ryan, defector Patricia Parks, Harris, cameraman Robert Brown and San Francisco Examiner photographer Greg Robinson.

Cordell, who belonged to the temple for 23 years, said he recognized several temple leaders among the attackers.

When the shooting ended, he said, he saw their vehicle heading back to Jonestown.

FOCUS

Czechoslovakia Remembered

Thirteen years ago today Czechoslovaks awoke to find 600,000 Soviet and East European troops invading their country. Throughout the "Czech Spring" of 1968, Czech Communist Party Chairman Alexander Dubcek had given in to demands for greater personal freedoms and economic reform. Fearing that this undermined communist rule, the Soviet Union and its allies seized Czechoslovakia's government. Czech leaders were forced to sign a "friendship" treaty now known as the Brezhnev Doctrine. This gives the Soviets the right to invade any East European communist nation that breaks with its authority. The Soviets may use the Brezhnev Doctrine to justify an invasion of Poland should Moscow decide recent reforms there have gone too far.

DO YOU KNOW - Who is the Communist Party Chairman of Poland?
THURSDAY'S ANSWER - Alan Jones of Australia was the 1980 Grand Prix champion.

Levitas warned that increased power for the states will result in more bureaucracy and the proliferation of regulations at the state level. And he called for veto power for states to turn down unnecessary regulations.

"We have become a nation not of law but of regulation, often ordered by unelected bureaucrats," he said.

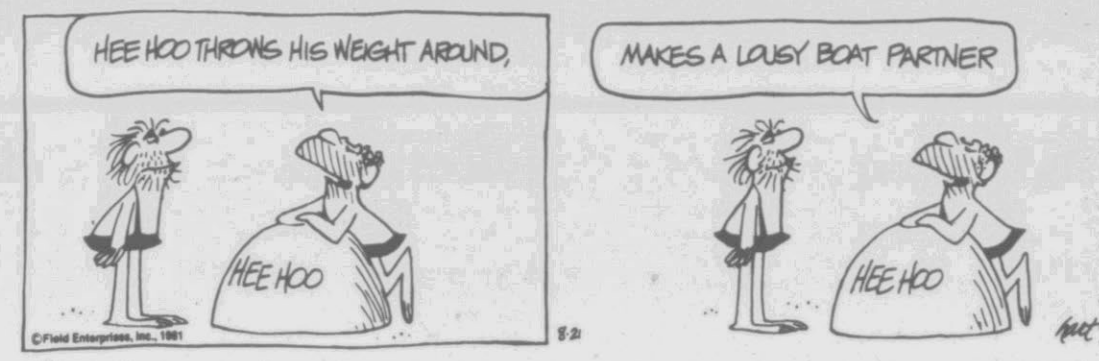

"State legislators need to be able to be responsible for these regulations that spew out."
