HELMS AT WAREHOUSE ... Sen. Helms Pledges Tobacco Program To Be Preserved

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"I did not go to Washington to preside over the demise of the tobacco program," U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms told a group of 100 or more people gathered at the Raynor-Forbes Warehouse on Dickinson Avenue this morning.

Helms, who was late arriving for the scheduled 9:30 a.m. gathering because of heavy fog at the Raleigh-Durham and Pitt-Greenville Airports, spoke briefly, then mingled with farmers and businessmen on the warehouse floor, answering questions and discussing the tobacco program as the warehouse's scheduled third sale got underway at 10:30.

"The tobacco program is going to be preserved as it," Helms told the gathering, adding that the price support program "has more support now than at anytime in the past eight years."

Saying "tobacco farmers are not making too much money," Helms, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee emphasized, "I don't want any amendment to that (the farm) bill" now being considered in Washington.

Noting efforts by some Senators to add amendments to the bill, Helms cited "the value" of having "a North Carolinian for the first time in 147 years as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee."

"I pledge this to you. We're going to fight ... to save the tobacco program. I've told members of the Agriculture Committee we cannot accept an amendment" of the magnitude of the Eagleton amendment "without knowing what we are doing. We're going to resist that amendment," Helms said, adding that the "Senate Agriculture Committee will help."

Responding to a question about his opposition to federal welfare programs, Helms said, "I don't have to defend myself" for fighting abuses of social programs.

Emphasizing his feeling that persons really needing assistance should receive it, Helms said persons "too lazy to get off their duffs and go to work ... I don't think they ought to get food stamps."

"I'm going to resist, I'm going to fight the waste of the taxpayers' money," he pledged.

Returning to the tobacco program, Helms said, "John East has done a magnificent job calling on Senators and explaining the tobacco program," since East has been in Washington. The legislative process, Helms noted, is "just like any other selling job," suggesting that North Carolina's representatives in Washington, along with other tobacco program supporters, are trying to sell other Senators and Representatives on the benefits of the program.

Hinckley Is Denied A Request For Bail

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

John W. Hinckley Jr., awaiting trial on charges of trying to kill President Reagan, was denied his request for bail today by federal district judge Barrington D. Parker, who said he felt Hinckley might flee if freed.

Parker said he had weighed the provisions of the federal Bail Reform Act and found that despite the act's presumption of release in most non-capital cases, there are no conditions that would assure Hinckley's appearance at his trial. No trial date has been set.

Parker said he had considered several factors in making his decision, including:

—The fact that Hinckley is charged with serious and violent crimes;

—The extensive media coverage of the shooting, which the prosecution said could lead to threats on Hinckley's life;

—Hinckley's background of drifting around the country without financial resources;

—His mental condition;

—His providing of false information to police when arrested on a weapons possession charge Oct. 9 in Nashville, Tenn.

"After weighing these various factors," Parker said, "the court feels and concludes that bail should not be set in this case and the defendant should be confined pending trial of this matter."

"I will deny bail at this time. There are no conditions which the court finds reasonable and satisfactory that would allow the defendant to be released."

Hinckley, 26 and also charged with shooting presidential press secretary James S. Brady and two others outside a Washington hotel ey, Vincen was not present for today's hearing. His attorney, Vincent J. Fuller, proposed to Parker that Hinckley be sent to a private mental institution and kept under the protection of U.S. marshals.

"The service rendered by U.S. marshals today could be rendered in any institution," Fuller said, referring to the fact that marshals now protect Hinckley at the stockade in nearby Fort Meade, Md., and when he is transported from his cell.

When Parker asked if Fuller preferred a public or private institution, Fuller responded, "If I were able to find one, I would prefer a private institution."

Parker: What type of bail would be required?

Fuller: Personal recognition would be as compelling as anything else.

Parker: What conditions would you suggest?

Fuller: Custodial.

Parker: With who?

Fuller: The family. That would be outside of Denver.

Hinckley's father, a wealthy oil executive, heads the Denver-based Vanderbilt Energy Corp.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger M. Adelman said that in addition to there being no assurance of Hinckley's appearance for trial, "Mr. Hinckley might possibly be in jeopardy if he is released."

Just after the shooting, Adelman said, "two gentlemen right next to him tried to harm Mr. Hinckley."

Nine Executed As 2 More Khomeini Followers Slain

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) —

The Iranian revolutionary regime chose a new leader for its ruling party to replace assassinated Prime Minister Mohammad Javad Bahonar, a party official reported.

Hours after Bahonar and President Mohammad Ali Rajai were buried, two other political-religious leaders were slain and nine leftists executed, Iranian newspapers reported.

Hojatoleslam Ali Khamenei, the fiery orator of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution, was elected secretary-general of the Islamic Republican Party by a party congress Monday, a senior aide reported by telephone to The Associated Press in Beirut.

"But I can assure you he will not become prime minister," said the aide, who declined to be identified by name.

The source said consultations were under way in the Majlis, the Iranian Parliament, to choose a new prime minister to succeed Bahonar. He said announcement of the appointment is expected in two or three days.

The government will then arrange the third presidential election since the monarchy was overthrown in 1979, the source said.

Meanwhile, the ruling Islamic Revolutionary Party newspaper Jamhuri Islami reported today that two assassins fatally shot Hojatoleslam Seyyed Mortaza Ayatollahi Tabatabai Yazdi in front of his Tehran house Monday and escaped on motorcycles.

Tehran Radio reported that Hojatoleslam Seyyed

Naser Bani Jamal, the internal affairs director of the Court Combating Sins of Commission, was killed Monday afternoon by "imperialist agents." The broadcast said a court guard was killed with him, but it gave no details.

The newspaper also said nine Mujahedeen Khalq guerrillas were executed in five Caspian Sea cities Sunday, the day Rajai and Bahonar died when an incendiary bomb exploded at the premier's office.

The newspaper said all those executed were convicted by Islamic courts of anti-government violence.

Khamenei is still recuperating from lung and throat wounds he received in an assassination attempt June 27. His aide declined to say why he would not become prime minister as Bahonar did after he became secretary-general of the party.

Income Limit To Curb Use Of Student Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A public college student whose family earns more than $33,875 a year will be denied guaranteed federal loans, for the most part, under new curbs which take effect Oct. 1.

The income cutoff for loans for students attending the average four-year private college is $46,375, according to figures obtained Monday from the Education Department.

In both cases, the figures assume the student comes from a family of four and is the only child in college. If more than one child is in college or the family is larger, the income eligibility limits for the loans are much higher.

The College Board on Sunday reported that the average cost this fall of tuition, fees, room, board and other expenses will be $6,885 at private four-year colleges and $3,873 at public four-year colleges.

Since 1978, students have been able to borrow up to $2,500 under the Guaranteed Student Loan program regardless of family income or college cost. Congress recently reimposed an income limit to hold down the spiraling costs of the program. Starting Oct. 1, students whose adjusted gross family income is $30,000 or more — including the students' and parents' salary, interest and dividends — will have to pass a needs test to be able to get one of the subsidized loans.

The Guaranteed Student Loan policy office in the education department gave the following examples. All apply to a family of four:

—At the public college costing $3,873, with one child in college, the maximum loan for a student with family income of $30,000 is $1,373; those from families below the $30,000 ceiling can borrow $2,500. The minimum loan of $1,000 is limited to those with income between $30,000 and $33,875. Families earning more than that figure are ineligible for the program.

—If both children attend that public college, each can borrow the maximum $2,500 if the family income is no more than $31,375; each can borrow the minimum $1,000 if the family income is no more than $47,625.

Smooth, Orderly Openings Of Local Schools Are Reported

Over 15,000 youngsters filled city and county classrooms last week and again this week in a school opening officials from both systems termed smooth. Pitt County schools reported a "very good opening" yesterday as they welcomed back over 11,000 pupils. "From all indications, talking with principals and visiting five schools Monday, everything is going very smoothly," said associate superintendent Thomas Craft. "The youngsters seem to be settling down and there's not much movement in the halls."

Superintendent Ott Alford noted that attendance was down yesterday, an occurrence he termed "usual for the first few days — kids are still working at jobs."

"I saw many classrooms where the children were hard at work yesterday, on the first day," added Alford. "The most frequent comment that I heard from the principals is that the kids are settled down more this year."

No tentative enrollment figures for county schools will be available until after the tenth day of school, explained county school employee Catherine Bullock, but enrollment figures from the last month of the 1980-81 school year indicate that at least 11,199 students will enroll this week.

Enrollment during the ninth month of last school year at the four high schools were as follows: Ayden-Grifton, 637; North Pitt, 805; Farmville Central, 703; D.H. Conley, 961.

A.G. Cox and W.H. Robinson reported 788 and 689 students, respectively, with enrollments in the remaining schools hovering between 500-600 pupils.

Greenville City schools opened their doors to students August 24, and city school official Charles Ross reports a total enrollment so far of around 4,700. Approximately 1,150 of these students (Please turn to Page 8)

Bloodmobile Visit A Success

The Bloodmobile had a successful visit Monday at Eaton Corp., collecting 107 pints of blood as almost 39 percent of the total employee force at the plant participated.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross said that in addition to the donors yesterday, 20 people were deferred for various health reasons.

Mrs. Taylor expressed appreciation to Melvin McLawhorn of the plant's personnel staff for his coordination of the blood drive and she also thanked members of the emergency medical team at Eaton for their help. She said, "They were there whenever we needed them."

In addition, appreciation was extended by Mrs. Taylor to the women of the Greenville Service League and the volunteer nurses for their help.

The next Bloodmobile visit will be a special drive on Tuesday, Sept. 8 from 12 noon until 5 p.m. at the new Public Works facility on Beatty Street. Mrs. Taylor said the drive, following the Labor Day holiday, comes at a time when traditionally there is a great need for blood.

The public is encouraged to participate in the Sept. 8 Bloodmobile, she said.

MEDFLY DAMAGE

With all that's been in the news about the Mediterranean fruit fly, I have yet to hear what the fly does to the fruit. Can you find out? R.M.

According to Sam Uzzell, Pitt extension agent, the medfly attacks over 100 varieties of citrus and deciduous fruit, cultivated and wild. The female, he explained, deposits 2-10 eggs in a small hole in the skin of the fruit. In 2-10 days the eggs hatch and the larvae burrow into the pulp and feed on it. "This makes the fruit attractive to bacteria, fungi and yeast," noted the extension agent, "and in addition makes it mealy and produces rot." To compound the problem, more than one female can lay eggs in the spot and each female is capable of producing 800 eggs. "Basically," said Uzzell, "the fruit fly larvae develop in the fruit and feed on it." One-12 generations of the fly can be produced per year.

Judge Too Late To Rule Unplugging Respirator

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Dr. Donald Klinefelter was on the witness stand when his electronic beeper went off. As the judge waited, the doctor phoned the hospital to learn it was too late for the court to rule on his patient's last wish: to end her suffering.

"Pupils are dilated and fixed. This is an indication of brain death," said the note Klinefelter handed the judge when he returned to the bench.

The hearing Monday was called by Cabell County Circuit Judge D.B. Daugherty to decide whether Golda Yoder, a 76-year-old widow, should be granted her wish to be unplugged from her respirator and die.

After receiving Klinefelter's note, the judge granted the request, but the doctor said later he thought his comatose patient would have died in a day or so had the machine been allowed to run.

"I removed her respirator at 9:26 p.m.," Klinefelter said. "There was a cessation of cardiac activity at 9:35."

Mrs. Yoder's death ended her struggle with a life made painful by terminal cirrhosis of the liver. Six of her seven children fought to keep her alive by artificial means.

Klinefelter said Mrs. Yoder "asked that she be allowed to die four or five days before Aug. 22, the day I wrote out the request that she signed," and he waited before filing the request with Daugherty.

"To be honest, I stalled her for a week, hoping to get a consensus in the family," he said.

Daugherty last week visited Mrs. Yoder's hospital room and issued a temporary restraining order that said the respirator must be kept on. The six children filed a petition to keep the machine going, but withdrew it when the woman sank into a deep coma, and the judge granted the woman's request.

Daugherty said that when Klinefelter gave him the note stating Mrs. Yoder's latest condition, he simply handed it to the children and, "after that, it was just a matter of them giving in and going along."

Klinefelter and Daugherty said they had never been involved in a case in which relatives were divided on such a question. Daugherty, who initially said he felt Mrs. Yoder was asking for somebody to help her commit suicide, confided Monday that he was impressed by the ailing woman's sincerity and desire to end her suffering.

"This isn't any fun," the judge said as he began Monday's hearing. "However, this woman's rights must be considered."

Klinefelter, who said he had two psychiatrists examine his patient before he helped her draw up her last request, said he too was impressed by Mrs. Yoder's strong personality.

"She kept saying she wanted those things disconnected. She said she wanted to be allowed to die," he recalled.

Child's Whole Story Missing A Chapter

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Should a child be told that he is adopted? When my husband (I'll call him Jim) married his first wife, he adopted her 3-month-old illegitimate son who had been fathered by a man who didn't want to marry her. (Jim was aware of all the facts.)

That marriage ended in divorce three years later and Jim married me. The little boy (I'll call him Billy) lives with his mother, but we have him every summer. Billy is now 7, and he thinks Jim is his real father. There are a few people in town who know the whole story—including who Billy's real father is. (He's a respected citizen, now married with children.)

I think Billy should be told that he is adopted. And if he becomes curious about who his real father is, he should be told that, too. His mother refuses to tell him. Jim says he doesn't want to tell him, and I am certainly not going to.

Should we just keep our mouths shut and hope that Billy never finds out?

HAVING DOUBTS IN N.C.

DEAR HAVING: No. Billy should be told the truth when he's sufficiently mature to handle it. His mother should tell him. If she refuses, Jim should. Billy should not hear about it from outsiders, and he surely will since "a few people in town know the whole story."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HEARD IT ALL IN HOUSTON": You are mistaken. I have no ex-husband. I have been married for 41 years to the same man.

Pat's Pointers

Ancient Indian designs, modern plastic canvas and quick and easy needlepoint stitches are used to create an eye-catching tote bag at an easy-on-the budget price. Or you can use the same design to make a striking decorator pillow. Even a rank beginner can quickly master the long, straight stitches that are used throughout. Ten-mesh plastic canvas and four-ply worsted weight yarn are used.

To obtain directions for making the Indian Motif Tote or Pillow, send your request for Leaflet No. MH-31 and $1 to Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector", P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-31 by sending check or money order for $13.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains instructions, yarn, lining, needle and plastic canvas sufficient for one tote bag or one pillow. Please specify your choice of the following color combinations: coffee, bronze and burnt orange on a beige background navy; red, emerald with light blue; black, gray, turquoise with eggshell.

Dear Readers: If you are a novice needlepointer, you may not know that you need to "beware of the fuzzies!" Almost any stitcher must occasionally rip out a few stitches, but what many do not realize is that whenever you do so, fibers from the yarn may cling to the canvas. This wouldn't matter so much except for the fact that these fibers then have a tendency to work their way into the new stitches you take in the same area. And that would not be a problem unless you are introducing a new color in that area or an adjacent one.

These often tenacious fibers have a way of showing up on the right side of your work and are almost impossible to pluck out. Fortunately, however, there is an easy solution. Just wrap some sticky tape — I prefer masking tape — around your fingers and pat over the area where the stitches were ripped. Those pesky fibers will then adhere to the tape and will cause you no further trouble.

The fact that fibers do stick to the canvas illustrates why you should work with relatively short lengths of yarn at all times. Each time the yarn passes through a canvas hole, it wears a little (leaving the fiber behind). When you use excessively long strands of yarn, the yarn becomes thinner and thinner as you work. This, in turn, results in thick and thin spots in your work.

How long is too long? Unfortunately, there is not a single rule for this. Much depends on the mesh-size of your canvas and the type of stitches to be used. With average size canvas (10-to-14-mesh-per-inch) and the basic tent stitch, you should probably not use more than 24-inch strands. With finer canvas and the same type of stitch, I would recommend 18-inch lengths.

When you are using pattern stitches that cover several canvas threads with a single stitch, you can use longer strands in your needle because the yarn is not passing through the canvas as often. In a project such as the one featured today, you can satisfactorily use 30- to 36-inch lengths.

For the same reason, it is and ½ teaspoon salt. Gradually stir in 1 cup milk, keeping smooth; cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens slightly — 8 or 9 minutes. Slightly whisk 2 egg yolks; gradually whisk the hot milk mixture into them. Return to saucepan and, stirring constantly, cook over low heat without boiling 2 to 3 minutes longer. Off heat, stir in ½ teaspoon vanilla and ½ teaspoon almond extract. Chill. Makes about 1 cup.

COOKING IS FUN

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Years ago when I first met Jim Beard (the well-known cookbook author and teacher) and went to a supper party at his house, he served one of the best of fruit desserts — poached pears with a custard sauce and a topping of praline. Coddled apples surrounded by custard sauce had been one of the desserts we often had in our Canadian home during my childhood. But offering poached pears with custard sauce was new to me until I encountered them at Jim's, and certainly the praline topping was a sophisticated addition that would delight anyone.

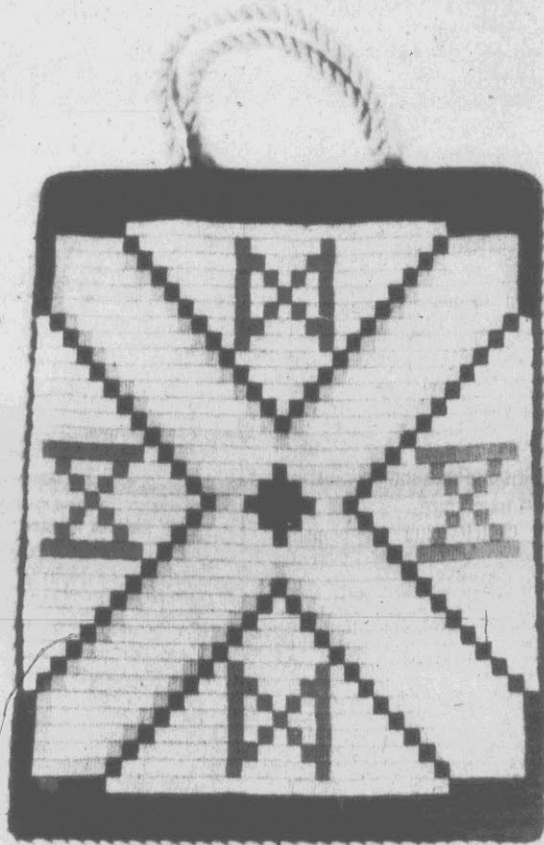

Recently we tried a different version of poached pears with custard sauce, the recipe sent to me from the West Coast, and found it delightful. Directions follow.

POACHED PEARS WITH ALMOND CUSTARD

4 medium ripe but firm Bartlett pears (1½ pounds, scant)
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1-3rd cup orange juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2-3rd cup water
One 2-inch stick cinnamon
Almond Custard Sauce, recipe follows

Peel pears and remove cores from blossom end, leaving stems attached. In a 2-quart saucepan, stir together the sugar, orange rind and juice, lemon juice, water and cinnamon. Bring to a boil, stirring until sugar dissolves. Add pears and boil gently, uncovered, turning with 2 spoons and basting often until pears are tender — 8 to 10 minutes. With a slotted spoon remove the pears to individual serving dishes. Boil the syrup, uncovered, until reduced to ¼ cup — 7 to 9 minutes. Spoon a tablespoon of the syrup over each pear. Chill. At serving time spoon the Almond Custard sauce around the pears. Makes 4 servings.

Almond Custard Sauce: In a 1 or 1½-quart saucepan, stir together 2½ tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon cornstarch

ANCIENT INDIAN DESIGN. . .can be used to make a tote bag or either a pillow.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

For nearly a decade now, parents have been trying to lure their children back to the traditional life ... four years of college, marriage, a house in the suburbs and babies.

It was all so simple. If you know children at all, you know that all you had to do was to make the price on these things out of their reach.

Did you ever see a kid who would eat crab legs BEFORE he found out how much they cost? Or be interested in a sport until he saw the price tag on the equipment? Or play a musical instrument until he discovered there was only one harpsichord teacher in the state?

It's the way kids are raised. If it doesn't have a price tag on it, it can't be worth much.

From the looks of the latest figures, I think we've seen the last of the college drop-outs who wanted time to "find out who I am." Now that tuition, room and board are $10,000 a year with no signs of leveling off, I predict colleges and universities will be jammed.

I think we've seen the last of the flower children nomads who lived in communes (and flew first class) and believed the best things in life were free; indulgent parents. The price of an average home on the West Coast is $86,000 and still climbing.

As for babies, according to a report from Parents magazine, it costs a quarter of a million dollars to raise a child to the age of 18, not counting catsup. There is no reason to believe the cost will stabilize.

Without knowing it, what we have done is to give to our young people the poverty they so desperately need ... the old American dream we all talked about and worked for, but was always out of our grasp. It's never been out of theirs before. The struggle has been missing from their lives.

I look forward to the next ten years, when this generation returns to the Ozzie and Harriet experience. What we're going to see is a return of graduates with pride on their faces ... young marrieds working at staying together while they share their responsibilities, and young parents determined to give their children everything they didn't have.

And the cycle begins again.

Travel Along with

Janet Stoughton

FAA regulations, instituted in 1977 require that animals carried into an aircraft cabin be in carriers no larger than 19 inches long, 17 inches wide and 7½ inches high. This allows only for a very small pet. Larger pets, which go into the baggage compartment, must be in containers "large enough for the animal to sit and stand." Most big jets allocate enough space for 6 of these larger, well-ventilated containers. It is wise to write "LIVE ANIMAL" on the outside of the container, and naturally, it should be leakproof.

Whenever you have questions about traveling with pets, special luggage, or dietary requirements, speak to one of the travel agents at QUIXOTE TRAVELS INC., 319 Cotanche St. We are travel experts, familiar with all the ins and outs of travel and travel regulations. We can arrange a package tour for you, a first class trip, or a family vacation. We're computerized in our agency. 756-3456. Have a good and safe Labor Day. Debate Can't Be Real

The debate over Duke University accepting an offer of Richard M. Nixon's papers just can't be real.

Can you imagine a seat of learning rejecting the papers of any historical figure, likeable or unlikeable, despised or beloved?

From the standpoint of historical research such papers would be priceless...drawing scholars present and future.

Granted, our former president proved not to be an admirable character; but his administration figured prominently in significant decisions and accomplishments which helped shape today's world and will be influencing the future.

An educator who, on the basis of emotional feelings, wants no part of the Nixon record safeguarded in North Carolina lacks a professional objectivity which makes his (or her) qualifications suspect.

A private citizen who looks askance at the idea should think again: he is living in a world profoundly shaped by the Nixon years. Indeed, he touched the lives of all Americans to one degree or another.

Would these same objectors similarly oppose acceptance of the papers of the Shah of Iran, Adolf Hitler, Abigail Van Buren, Charles Darwin?

Accepting papers of value does not entail a "shrine" to the memory of anyone.

It is The Daily Reflector's opinion that a Nixon library on the Duke University campus would be a valuable asset to that institution and to North Carolina as a whole.

Saving Is Again Attractive

Interest rates have prospective auto buyers and potential home owners on the sidelines.

There is, however, another side, and that is the people who have money to invest.

Banks and thrift institutions are conducting vigorous campaigns for the savers' dollar and the campaigns are spurred on by current high interest rates and the recently enacted tax break on savings.

In some cities interest of 35 percent is being advertised, although the fine print notes the rate is based on annual return and is effective only one month.

Nevertheless there is real reason to save these days with an assured high rate of return on investment.

THIS AFTERNOON

New Tourism Data

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Travel and tourism has meant big bucks for the Variety Vacationland for a long time. But not nearly as much money as some might have believed.

Insiders have long complained that travel industry annual reports did not provide a way to measure how much money was actually generated by visitors, and how much was being spent locally.

If you filled up your tank at the local station, then stopped by a fast-food place for a burger, the dollars were lumped into the state's annually glowing report on travel and tourism action.

This year, specialists with the Center for Population and Urban-Rural Studies at the Research Triangle Institute attempted to give a more accurate portrait of the Tar Heel travel industry in a 1980 travel survey prepared for the Department of Commerce.

The bottom line remains encouraging: total industry spending up 16 percent in 1980, for a new record of $2.4 billion. The previous year's total was $2.1 billion.

Two-Thirds
A lot of new information was pumped into the various formulas making up this annual travel and tourism report. Statewide figures from skiing resorts, data on visitors stopping at welcome centers, notes from historical sites and parks were analyzed and adjusted.

Based on this study, analysts conclude that about two-thirds of the total spending (or, $1.6 billion) came from out-of-state visitors. The remaining $784 million is estimated spending by citizens of North Carolina.

But another worrisome factor inflating the travel and tourism figures is simple dollar increases in travel services, particularly the cost of gasoline and food at restaurants which have been rising at a pace ahead of the general economy. Obviously a considerable portion of the new record spending level had to come from higher prices, not more people calling North Carolina their vacationland.

Detailed figures from 1980 help to put that aspect into focus: actual numbers of visitors to the state was up only 2.4 percent at 49 million during 1980. An estimated 2.78 million persons stopped at the five welcome centers — and that is only a one percent increase from the previous year.

Analysts compared cost increases in all phases of the travel industry to conclude that overall, price changes reflected an upward trend of nearly 13 percent, so that this information stacked against the 15 percent travel spending boost and viewed in the context of the slight increase in numbers of visitors paints a considerably less enthusiastic picture than appears at first glance.

Upward
Still, the trend is upward — though somewhat slower than the unexamined figures might indicate.

One major segment of the travel and tourism industry often overlooked by most people is convention business, and commercial activity. Traveling salesmen not only travel to make sales, but big sales meetings and training seminars make up a big part of the travel industry. The same for conventions of civic, professional and governmental organizations.

During 1980, there were 1,871 conventions of various sorts held in nine major cities of the state; a three percent increase in raw numbers. Attendance was up 32 percent from the previous year with far more than half-a-million people attending meetings in the state. Estimated total spending was $108 million, based on national averages which show conventioners spend

To the editor:

A history professor wrote you condemning a decrease in Federal spending. He must not bother to read his books. Thucydides, Herodotus, Plutarch, and Gibbons all teach that state welfare destroys the moral fiber of the people and every civilization which uses it.

On the other hand, the early days of Greece, Rome, the Dutch Republic and Colonial and Federated America thrived and prospered because there was no central government monopoly.

For any who can think, read this: Under President Eisenhower, the Federal budget was $75 billion, including the cost of the Korean War. Now the government spends more than that every year in the medical industry alone — running up the price so nobody can afford it.

The budget is 10 times what it was in Eisenhower's time. If we don't take some of the money away from government and give it to production workers, we are going to have what Macauley predicted — loss of freedom, prosperity, civilization and law and order.

Ed Newton
Fountain

To the editor:

A letter-writer in last Thursday's issue of this paper said, in effect, that President Reagan's economic policies are taking food out of the mouths of school children. The writer was a history professor. Not surprising. Most history professors are ideologically to the left, and if a shipment of milk to a school turned out to be sour, the left would shriek, "Reagan did it!"

The taxpayers of this nation can no longer afford to subsidize every Tom, Dick and Harry as has been done in the past. Everyone knows that when people get lots of money in their hands, they spend more. Increased spending means increased demand, and because of low productivity, supply cannot keep up. Therefore, manufacturers must increase their prices to hold down the demands. That is what causes inflation.

So when government spends all its money, the same thing happens. Now, if the 25 percent tax cut had not passed, what would the government have done with it? There's absolutely no doubt the money would have been spent. However, the people are more apt to invest and save that money than the government.

So stop bickering! The economic program is in place, and that is that. I just hope the howling left won't take to the streets like they did in the 60's.

DUSTING OFF AN OLDIE--BUT GOODIE!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

We've Come Full Circle

RICHMOND, Va. — Back in 1857, in the famous case of Scott vs. Sandford, Chief Justice Taney recalled the status of Negroes at the time the Constitution was adopted. They were then regarded as beings of an inferior order, he said, "so far inferior that they had no rights which the white man was bound to respect."

We come full circle. Little by little the federal courts are creeping up on an answer to the flip-side of Taney's observation. In such areas as education, employment and voting rights, we approach the reverse of the proposition. Do whites have no rights that blacks are bound to respect?

The Supreme Court ran into the issue of reverse discrimination in higher education in the DeFunis case from Washington in 1974, but escaped a decision by scooting down the path named "mootness." The same issue could not be avoided in the Bakke case from California in 1978, but the court's 5-4 decision had the decisive impact of moonbeams on goose down.

In 1979 the court waffled again in the Weber case, holding that discrimination in employment against a white worker could be sanctioned, even though it patently violated the Civil Rights Act, because it was "private" discrimination. A year later in the Fullilove case, a sharply divided court held that white contractors could be making the identical allegations that black folks have been making in recent years. Discrimination!

It would take pages to recount the tangled history of Richmond's City Council over the past decade. It may suffice to say that in 1977, after seven years in which there had been no elections at all, a federal court at last approved a ward system in which four wards were heavily black, four were heavily white, and one was intended to be a swing ward reflecting the city's 50-50 racial composition. Under this system, blacks elected five and whites four, and so the council has remained ever since.

But the census of 1980 disclosed significant changes. Because of population shifts, one of the safe black wards was becoming unsafe. Heaven forbid! The black majority in City Council sprang into action. With the accelerated speed that may be commendable in railroads, but not in parliamentary chambers, the black council members in June rigged up a gerrymandered scheme of new wards, no one bothers to deny that the scheme is designed intentionally to guarantee a black majority into the foreseeable future. The racial motivation is conceded.

JAS. J. KILPATRICK

denied a right to bid on $400 million in federal public works. A program to encourage minority business enterprise, even though it was racially discriminatory, was "limited in extent and duration" and of "transitory economic impact."

A different aspect of the same basic question is heading for the courts in a nicely ironical case from Richmond. Here the issue arises under the Voting Rights Act. It qualifies as news under the old definition of dog bites man, and man bites dog. The plaintiffs are not black folks, alleging invidious shenanigans. Here the plaintiffs are white folks.

The question is, is it constitutional? The four white councilmen, plaintiffs in the proceeding, have taken every stock phrase off the shelf of black plaintiffs in the past. The rights of the city's white minority will be "denied and abridged." Their voting

Reagan Sees A Labor War

WASHINGTON — Warnings to President Reagan by political aide Lyn Nofziger that AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland intends to lead a labor-dominated Democratic Party to victory over Reaganism were given substance the past week in deteriorating relations between organized labor and the White House.

Kirkland and two lieutenants refused to fill spots on the president's Productivity Commission that had been offered them against Nofziger's advice. Simultaneously, both Reagan and Labor Secretary Ray Donovan were disinclined to speak before next month's bricklayers convention. Meanwhile, the AFL-CIO's principal pursuit is a massive anti-Reagan rally in Washington Sept. 19 ("Solidarity Day"), with the Democratic National Committee an eager helper.

Never since labor's emancipation by the 1935 Wagner Act has its high command been so estranged from the White House. Unlike 16 previous years of post-war Republican rule when a strained congeniality usually prevailed, political war has been waged since Jan. 20.

Superficially, the roots of war lie in labor's unusually harsh attack (especially Kirkland's personal assaults) on the Reagan candidacy. The president's men have not been eager for intimate embrace with erstwhile tormenters. Their coolness, in turn, is cited by labor chiefs as cause for deepening hostility.

But such explanations avoid transcendent political change that made a labor-Reagan confrontation inevitable. Reagan's goal is to dismantle the liberal settlement effected by the New Deal a half-century ago. As the settlement's defender, Kirkland is ahead of Democratic politicians in envisioning a broad-based coalition built on anti-communist foreign policy and liberal social welfare policy.

Nevertheless, presidential counselor Edwin Meese III did not want to break relations. He recommended Kirkland to serve on the Productivity Commission headed by former Treasury secretary William Simon. Two other seats were offered Glenn Watts of the communications workers, a close Kirkland ally, and Bob Georgine of the construction workers, a rising labor light.

Nofziger was appalled. He argued Kirkland had two goals: take over the Democratic party and destroy Ronald Reagan. Why invite your enemy into the bosom of your family? As usual, Meese won the argument, and the AFL-CIO three were invited.

But Kirkland was not happy. He informed Republican friends that previous presidents, from both parties, consulted the AFL-CIO president before naming such commissions. There was grumbling about having to serve on a commission headed by the reactionary likes of Bill Simon and controlled by right-wing businessmen and leaders of pro-Reagan unions (including the despised Teamsters).

Besides, it might be a trifle embarrassing for Kirkland to sit on a government commission while mobilizing opposition to Reagan on "Solidarity Day" at the Washington Monument. While the AFL-CIO contends there is no political partisan flavor to the demonstration, staffers at Democratic National headquarters wear "Solidarity Day" badges. They also provide more substantial backing.

"I have pledged our support for Solidarity Day to President Kirkland," Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt wrote on Aug. 12 to national committee members. He urged them "to show your backing" for the anti-Reagan demonstration — if possible by joining in themselves.

The air controllers strike provided a welcome escape hatch. It enabled Kirkland and Watts to send identical twosentence letters to Reagan declining to serve on the Productivity Commission (Please turn to Page 6)

Strength For Today

INVESTMENTS

What is the best investment you ever made? You may answer by pointing to some stock in which you had a 100 point rise in two years. Or perhaps you bought a piece of real estate a couple of years ago and now find that it is worth several times the price you paid for it.

But those people who are aware of the really important values in life might describe as their best investments the money they spent on education, the sums they gave away to charity, the money they loaned to a worthy friend who went into bankruptcy. Money investments are trivial in value when compared with those kinds of investments. And perhaps the most worthwhile investments of all are those made in love, solicitude, and kindness.

As we look back over our lives we may find that we almost never made financial investments that were very successful. But if we look beyond those to investments made in personal improvement and human relations, we may find that we have been much more successful than we have imagined. — Elisha Douglass

Strong Feelings About August

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The economic forecast index dropped just one-tenth of 1 percent in July — not a bad performance in view of the widespread feeling it will take a while to get the economy moving again.

But that was in July, a month or so ago.

Something worse, than that probably occurred in August. There aren't many numbers to document the feeling, and whatever figures exist are subject to revisions. But the feeling is strong: August wasn't good.

Feelings can't be ignored, because they come from the same source as the numbers. Feelings are measures of economic activity. And while they can distort, they can reflect accurate observations too.

These are some of the observations: Car sales are dimly poor, well below industry expectations. Housing is sinking into an abandoned cellar hole. Small business, unable to absorb costs and often unable to raise prices in a bad way. Companies of all sizes are closing plants and laying off workers, often in wholesale lots.

This is hardly the mood that was expected to follow a massive realignment of federal priorities, expressed in budget and tax cuts and designed to spur confidence, inspire investors, and encourage savers, risk-takers and business to commit themselves to the economic future.

Wall Street, not as representative of random opinions as it used to be but still an indicator of attitudes, has had a fainting spell, produced in part by the shocking realization that it had been listening to its own and Washington's advertisements rather than to the marketplace.

The most serious intrusion into this reverie was the realization that the Federal Reserve Board means to take a stand — a stand so strong that hopes of a sharp decline in interest rates have been abandoned.

The typical comment from analysts a week or so ago went something like this:

"This is a new beginning. The tax and budget bills weren't the very best, but they'll accomplish a lot. The country finally is pointed in the right direction again, and that's good news for investors."

Today, the mood is decidedly more reserved, and the once-confident voice of your broker may have a quiver in it as he observes:

"Things will get better, that's for sure, but first we're going to have to get by the Fed, which is hell-bent on having its way. Soon as those interest rates come down we'll be okay. When? I don't know."

Here's the actual analysis of one brokerage house, as of last Friday. It's E.F. Hutton, the company you seldom if ever hear talk, but which writes a rather typical commentary:

"Future Shock. It seems like a few days ago we were being told how bullish Reaganomics would be. Now all of a sudden, Reaganomics means big government deficits, continued high interest rates, and deterioration in the private sector of the economy because of 'crowding out.'"

It explains that earlier "the market was discounting the favorable aspects of disinflation and ignoring the unfavorable aspects." Now, it concludes, "it is doing the reverse."

But why? A collective finger points at the Fed, and a feeling exists in the marketplace that a single finger with much more collective power will soon be pointing that way too. It would be the president's finger.

The country is being torn two ways, the analysts are saying. Whipped into submission by a Federal Reserve that feels the nation has been too soft on itself, and exhorted to be tough and confident by a president who declares the future is there to be conquered for the good of all.

If the latter is the case you cannot tell it from the actions of the field generals. They seem to be saying we're going nowhere until the Fed releases more oil from the machinery. And in the meantime, there's a lot of activity that suggests they're digging in for a muddy winter.

The economic numbers we rely on — to tell us what we already suspect — won't be ready for another 10 days or more. But there's a fairly widespread feeling they'll confirm a less than happy situation.

The president is coming back from vacation just in time to rege with the Fed.

(giving Georgine no choice other than to follow suit). Jack Joyce of the bricklayers also seized on Reagan's treatment of the air controllers union (PATCO) to disinvite both the president and secretary of labor from his union's convention.

But the source of deepening conflict is surely not PATCO. Nor is it AFL-CIO complaints of insufficient contact with the administration; labor's high command has a standing invitation to call the White House with any problem, and union leaders from Kirkland on down attended a recent getacquainted party with the president, vice president and Cabinet members. Nor is it really even the more serious (and accurate) complaint that the AFL-CIO is not consulted about personnel or policy affecting labor.

Even if union officials had been present, health and safety (OSHA) regulations for workers would have been softened as part of Reagan's transformation of how the government works. The policy gap cannot be bridged. Lane Kirkland appreciated that reality when he savaged Ronald Reagan last fall, when he opened fire on the administration Jan. 20 and when he declined to serve on the president's commission — giving Lyn Nofziger some new believers in the White House.

strength will be "diluted." The new plan would create five wards at least 68 percent black. Assuming bloc voting by blacks, whites would be effectively frozen out of any realistic possibility of winning a majority in the council.

If any such blatantly discriminatory plan were proposed by whites, in an effort to disfranchise blacks, the U.S. attorney general would reject it in an instant. But the 15th Amendment of 1870, on which the Voting Rights Act of 1965 is based, clearly was intended for the benefit of the "unfortunate race" so vividly described by Taney in the Dred Scott case. Three members of the present court — Marshall, Brennan and Blackmun — warmly support reverse discrimination. Three others — Burger, White and Powell — support it reluctantly. Rehnquist and Stevens stand fast for colorblindness. The Richmond case, once it matures with Mrs. O'Connor on the bench, will offer a splendid test of changing times, and changing judges.

Three Injured In City Wrecks

Three persons were reported injured and an estimated $6,600 property damage caused in a series of four traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 6:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of First and Elm Streets, involving cars driven by Mina Lynette Mustian of Louisville and Constance King Stormer of Farmville.

Police, who charged Ms. Mustian with failing to stop for a stop sign, set damage to the vehicle at $1,000 each.

Donald Ray Daughtridge of 309 Hillcrest Cir. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 7:42 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Sunset Avenue and Hillcrest Circle.

Investigators said the Daughtridge car collided with an auto driven by John Daniel Langley Jr. of Ayden, causing $1,000 damage to the Daughtridge car and $900 damage to the Langley vehicle. A passenger in the Langley vehicle was reported injured.

Annie Joyce Moye of 100½ Tyson St. and Tony Hampton Whitley Jr. of Rocky Mount were reported injured when their cars collided about 3:40 p.m. at the intersection of 14th Street and Farmville Boulevard.

Officers, who charged Whitley with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $700 to the Moye car and $1,000 to the Whitley vehicle.

Police charged Thomas Harold Carter of Route 1, Fayetteville with hit and run driving and improper registration following investigation of a 9:10 a.m. incident at the intersection of Evans and Fifth Streets.

Investigators said the tractor-trailer driven by Carter allegedly struck a canopy at Beddingfield's Drug Store and a utility pole at the intersection, causing $1,000 damage to the pole, canopy and the trailer.

Two Attend Conference

WINSTON-SALEM — Business teacher Mary Thompson of D.H. Conley High School and former Coney student David Adams attended the annual summer conference for business and office education held recently at the Hilton Inn here.

The theme for all vocational conferences was "Vocational Education — Making the Future Happen." Workshops on learning how to use the microcomputer in accounting and office occupation classes and learning how to program in basic were held.

Two successive roundtable discussions were held on phases of Future Business Leaders of America. They dealt with how to organize a chapter and integrating the chapter work into classroom activities. Advisors from across the state and state FBLA officers led these roundtable discussions. Mrs. Thompson led a session on parliamentary procedure. Attended by approximately 250 BOE personnel, the conference emphasis began with "Business Education's Role in teaching Computer Literacy" and ended with "Change — Password for the Eighties."

Nuclear Sub

CHERBOURG, France (AP) — France launched its second nuclear-powered submarine today, the 2,400-ton Saphir.

The 236-foot Saphir carries a crew of 66 and is armed with four missile launchers. It is powered by a 48-megawatt nuclear engine.

The ship, which has a cruising speed of 25 knots, is expected to become operational in 1984 following tests and exercises.

On July 7, 1979, France launched its first nuclear-powered submarine, the Rubis, which is to become operational next summer.

The French submarine program calls for a construction of a total of five nuclear submarines.

dents are at Rose High School, with 754 at E.B. Aycock Junior High.

All K-3 schools are "pretty close" in enrollment numbers, reports Ross, with Sadie Sauter the largest at 370 pupils. Elmhurst and Eastern Elementary are close behind, with 340 and 335 students respectively. Third Street reports 260 pupils.

South Greenville is the largest of the intermediate schools to date, with 560 students. Wahl-Coates, according to Ross, has 505, and Greenville Middle has 405. Agnes Fullilove reports 100 students attending for 1981-82.

These figures reflect little change from last year, says Ross. "The total enrollment is a little fewer than when school ended last year," he noted. "All in all it's evened off."

"We had an extremely smooth opening," reported Dr. Delma Blinson, Greenville city school superintendent. "I was in each of the schools last week and on Friday you never would have known it was the third day of school — kids were hard at work in most classrooms."

"I attribute this to good planning on the part of the staff and faculty," said the superintendent. "The only problem we see right now is the students that we were expecting to enroll that have not showed up. We hope they will sign up and begin attending immediately."

Blinson noted that he was "very pleased" with the way the buses operated last week. "We had very few complaints, and those we had are now tapering off."

Average At High Point

FARMVILLE — The Tobacco Market average reached the highest point for 1981 season on Monday. Volume purchased by buying companies allowed only light deliveries to the Stabilization Corporation. Leaf grades accounted for most of the volume and the highest price paid by a buying company was $1.90.

The Farmville Market sold 352,846 pounds for $637,109.73, an average of $180.56 per 100 pounds. To date, the market has sold 13,059,052 pounds for $22,046,765.21, a season average of $168.82.

The season average for the same day last year was $145.11.

Seattle Snaps 10-Game Losing Skid

By The Associated Press

"I got the game ball," said Manager Rene Lachemann after Monday night's 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles. "We're going to autograph it and send it to Cooperstown."

If Lachemann sent the ball to the Hall of Fame, it wouldn't surprise too many people. The victory snapped a 10-game losing streak for the Mariners and signaled a time for euphoria — and jokes — in their locker room.

"It was nice to shake hands with everybody," said Lachemann. "A lot of the guys I haven't met for a couple of weeks."

Lenny Randle, a player not known for the long ball, surprised most everyone by hitting a two-out shot in the ninth for Seattle's winning run.

"I always close my eyes when I hit one out," said the high-spirited third baseman. "I never see them. I'm just afraid it's going to rain and I'll lose it."

Added Randle: "I was just trying to put the ball in play, to get on base and let the 'animals' hit the ball out."

Randle connected on a 1-0 delivery from Sammy Stewart, 3-5. It was Randle's third hit of the game and his third RBI.

"It was a fastball that didn't have a lot on it," said Stewart, who allowed only three hits in 7-1/3 innings of otherwise strong relief pitching. "I got two quick outs and I went 1-0 on him. I wanted to hit the plate so I wouldn't go 2-0 and give in to Paciorek (Tom Paciorek, the next batter). I thought, 'Let him hit the ball,' and Lenny did."

The winner was Larry Andersen, 2-3, who replaced Seattle starter Ken Clay after Ken Singleton drew a walk to open the eighth. Andersen fanned Eddie Murray and then got John Lowenstein to ground into a double play. A two-run homer by John Lowenstein, who had snapped an 0-15 streak in his previous at-bat, pulled the Orioles into a 3-3 tie in the sixth.

Brewers 5, Royals 1

Ben Oglivie hit a two-run homer and Mike Caldwell gained his 100th career victory as Milwaukee beat Kansas City and spoiled Dick Howser's debut as the Royals' manager. Oglivie's first-inning homer was his eighth of the season and his third straight extra base hit off Royals starter Dennis Leonard, 7-9.

Caldwell, 9-7, scattered six hits and walked three before giving way to Reggie Cleveland in the seventh inning. Rollie Fingers, pitched the final 21-3 innings to record his 20th save of the season, tops in the AL.

Howser was managing his first game for the Royals in the wake of Jim Frey's firing earlier Monday.

Red Sox 4, Angels 1

Carl Yastrzemski triggered two run-scoring innings with hits and Dennis Eckersley scattered seven hits in leading Boston over California. Yastrzemski singled and eventually scored the tying run on a groundout by Dave Stapleton in the second.

After walking in the fourth, he doubled in the sixth but had to leave the game for pinch-runner Reid Nichols because of a pulled left hamstring. Nichols promptly scored Boston's third run as Carney Lansford singled.

Eckersley, 7-5, allowed a run in the second on a triple by Don Baylor and a single by Dan Ford. California starter Dave Frost, 1-4, took the loss.

Yankees 7, Twins 0

Oscar Gamble hit his 10th homer of the year and Barry

Footé keyed a four-run sixth inning with a two-run single as New York routed Minnesota. Gamble's towering homer in the third inning gave New York a 2-0 lead and the Yankees broke the game open against loser Al Williams, 3-7, with four runs in the sixth.

Dave Righetti, 4-2, stopped the Twins on three hits in eight innings to win his first game of the second season. Rich Gossage pitched the ninth for the Yankees.

A's 5, Indians 3

Dwayne Murphy drove in four runs, three with a homer in the fifth inning, and Tom Underwood hurled 2-3 innings of hitless relief to pace Oakland over Cleveland. Murphy's homer off Bert Blyleven, 9-6, highlighted a four-run fifth that gave the A's a 4-1 lead. Murphy also singled home a run in the ninth.

Underwood gained his first save of the season in support of starter and winner Rick Langford, 8-8. Langford allowed nine Cleveland hits over the first 6-1/3 innings and combined with Underwood to snap a five-game Cleveland winning streak.

"This year I've been hitting in a lot of clutch situations," said Murphy. "It seems that I'm always getting those chances. I feel comfortable in those situations."

Blue Jays 3, Rangers 0

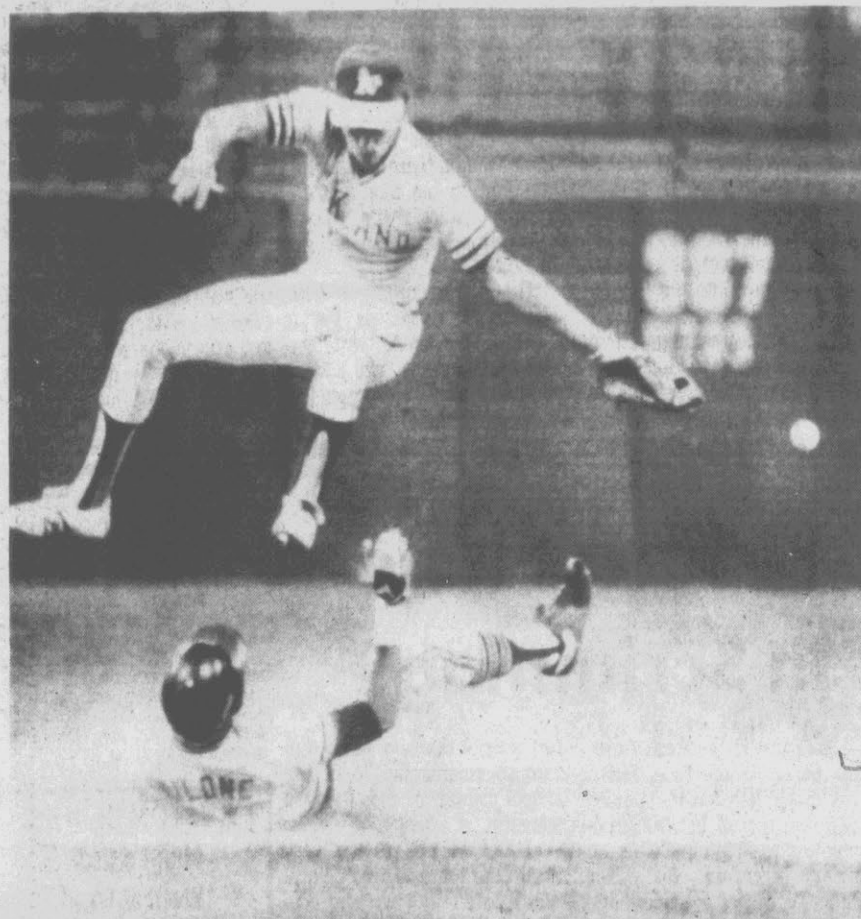

Dave Stieb scattered seven hits and catcher Ernie Whitt's squeeze bunt capped a three-run eighth inning as Toronto beat Texas.

Stieb, who had a 6.39 earned run average against the Rangers in 12 innings this year, earned his seventh victory against nine losses while Ferguson Jenkins dipped to 5-7. Stieb struck out three and walked one in his route-going performance.

Tigers 3, White Sox 1

Steve Kemp lashed a two-run triple and Kirk Gibson extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a pair of singles and scored on a single by Al Cowens to lead Detroit over Chicago.

Milt Wilcox, 9-5, was the winner and turned in his fifth complete game with a five-hitter. Ross Baumgarten, 5-7, was the loser despite being backed by a triple play in the second inning.

Cats Expect Potent Offense

When Western Carolina University visits Greenville on Saturday for the opening football game of the 1981 season, the Catamounts will be seeking to snap a six-game losing streak against East Carolina's Pirates.

Western, which lost last year's game, 24-14, on a rainy Homecoming weekend, hasn't won since 1962. Overall Western trails in the series which goes back to 1936, 13-16.

This year's Catamount team hopes to show radical improvement from the 3-7-1 record of last season. One reason for projected optimism is a strong running game featuring the number one running back of last year and a transfer from Georgia who is expected to put lightning into the game.

The leading quarterback also returns from last season, giving the Catamounts a potent passing game to compliment the running action. The offensive line is also larger and stronger, and there is more experience overall on that unit.

However, Western's defense was hard hit by graduation, and the Catamounts are having to replace eight starters from that unit.

"Our defense is still our main area of concern," Coach Bob Waters, entering his 13th season, said. "We have some bright spots, but overall it is a young, inexperienced defense that must mature quickly for us to be successful."

On the offensive unit, Ronnie Mixon returns at quarterback to direct the multiple-formation. "Ronnie has had a super pre-season and has gained the confidence of everyone," the coach pointed out. "There is no doubt that his emergence has been the most pleasing thing I have seen during pre-season practice."

"Last year, as we approached our first game, our main concern was with our inexperienced quarterbacks and we felt that our defense was our strong point. This year, it is just the opposite."

Mixon hit on 101 of 193 passes as he shared quarterbacking duties last season. He has 1,275 yards in completions, had seven picked off and had two touchdowns.

The top receiver, Gerald Harp, is graduated, but Eddie McGill (6-6, 225, Sr.) returns at tight end, having caught 33 passes for 465 yards last year. Jeff Dean (5-9, 171, Sr.) was the third leading receiver with 28 catches for 383 yards and Waters feels he is vastly underrated.

Anthony James, running from the tailback position, led all rushers last year with 602 yards on 123 carries. The 5-10, 166-pound junior, has moved out to the slot or "catback" position, while Melvin Dorsey (6-0, 198, So.), a transfer from Georgia, moves in at tailback. Dorsey is expected to be one of the Southern Conference's outstanding runners this year. Greg Thompson (5-11, 203, Jr.) rounds out the backfield at fullback.

The offensive line includes three starters in the five positions. The returning players include left guard Vernon Greene (6-1, 235, Sr.), center Mitch Vestal (6-2, 230, Sr.), and right guard Lonnie Braxton (6-5, 236, Sr.) Newcomers Mike Cucinella (6-4, 248, So.) and Nathan Williams (6-1, 230, Jr.) will be the tackles.

On defense, only three starters return, end Scott Strickland (6-3, 220, Sr.), nose guard Eddie Estes (6-0, 220, Sr.), and free safety Richard Dukes (6-2, 180, So.). The rest of the positions will be manned by returning lettermen or newcomers.

Kickoff is set for 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium Saturday evening.

Clemson Finds New Confidence In Its Offense With QB Jordan

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Perry Tuttle flat-out, unequivocally loves catching a football. So much so that the Clemson wide receiver says, "I wish they could throw it to me on every down."

The joy that Tuttle gets from pass receiving was evident Monday as he talked to reporters during a stop on the press tour of Atlantic Coast Conference campuses.

Also evident was a new-found confidence in the Tigers' offense, which this season will be centered around junior quarterback Homer Jordan.

Jordan alternated at quarterback last year with Mike Gasque and Andy Headen. But this year, with Headen shifting to defensive end, Jordan has the starting signal caller slot all to himself — and Tuttle is looking forward to that.

"There's a lot more confidence there in the offensive team," said the All-America prospect from Winston-Salem, N.C. "It's a lot better for the team."

"Confidence plays a really big part in it, and you can see that in Homer now. He'll take control of the offense, even in the huddle. If you're talking where you should be quiet, he's going to tell you to shut up," Tuttle said.

Tuttle said it was difficult last season to adjust to the different throwing styles of the three quarterbacks. "If you've got one quarterback who throws the easy ball (like Jordan) and one guy who has a rifle arm, you know, it's hard to adjust."

Jordan, wide receiver Jerry Gaillard and Tuttle worked out together about five days a week for half the summer, getting patterns and timing down.

Tuttle said Jordan's running ability will take "a lot" of the lanky frame, has shown "re-pressure off the receivers, markable progress" at defensive end. But former fullback Edgar Pickett, who was also switched to end, is "not up to what he should be yet."

"We're concerned about our end play right now," Ford admitted.

Ford said one aspect where he has noticed much needed improvement was in team attitude.

"Never at any time last year did I see our football team play up to what they were capable of playing," he said. "The way we played defense last year is now the way Clemson is supposed to play defense."

"I think their attitude this year is super," he added. Freshman lineman William Perry of Aiken, one of South Carolina's most heavily recruited prep players, "can be an exceptional player," Ford said.

Perry, who stands 6-11, came into camp weighing 315 pounds but has trimmed down to 295, Ford said. "Perry's big. He's not fat. He's so wide he makes two of most of us."

Ford said that while Perry is still missing some blocking assignments, "We don't have anybody in camp who can block him one on one."

One big hole for the Tigers to fill is at placekicker.

Rose's Hustle Turned Schmidt Loose

By The Associated Press
The hustle of a player such as Pete Rose can make a big difference in a ballgame, even when the ball is flying out of the park all night.

Glenn Hubbard—One of the sluggers was Mike Schmidt, who clubbed his 23rd homer of the season, a three-run blast in the fifth inning that put the Phillies ahead to stay.

But Schmidt said a seemingly insignificant play by Rose set up his big home run. With the Phillies trailing 4-2, Rose and Bake McBride hit consecutive singles with one out, and Rose hustled to third when center fielder Dale Murphy bobbled the ball. With a runner on third with one out, Schmidt felt free to swing from the heels.

"The key was the bobble Murphy made to let Pete get to third base," Schmidt said. "That put me in a sacrifice fly position, so I could just swing at the ball."

Schmidt's blast gave the Phillies a 5-4 lead, and Keith Moreland immediately followed with another homer.

Lonnie Smith and Luis Aguayo also hit solo homers as the Phillies pounded out 17 hits and stopped a six-game losing streak, their longest since 1976.

The Phillies needed all the hustling and slugging they could get because their starter, All-Star Dick Ruthven, was struggling.

In addition to Hubbard's grand slam in the first inning, he was chased by a four-run Atlanta rally in the sixth.

"I'm glad the team could win despite the worst game I've thrown or overthrown in four years," Ruthven, 10-5, said. "I've never been more grossed out by my performance."

"To win despite my weak excuse for pitching is great," Dallas Green celebrated his second anniversary as the Phillies' manager with the victory, only the seventh in 20 games in the second season for the Phillies, who were division winners in the first half.

"It's a struggle for us to win these days, but I'll take it just to get back into the feel of things," Green said. "We're in an adverse situation right now but we'll fight our way out of it," said Schmidt.

Does His Job

Philadelphia Phillies' Mike Schmidt (20) forces Atlanta Braves' second baseman Glenn Hubbard (17) high off the base, spoiling his throw to first letting Keith Moreland get there safely, avoiding a double play. The action was in the eighth inning of Monday night's games at Atlanta, won by the Phillies, 11-8. (AP Laserphoto)

Sanctioning Apparently Will Be No Problem

By The Associated Press
A little talk over a cup of coffee apparently has secured World Boxing Council sanctioning of the Sugar Ray Leonard-Thomas Hearns welterweight showdown.

Not that it matters. The fight is too big not to be sanctioned by the WBC and the World Boxing Association. And it's on closed-circuit television, not network TV. A lot of the strength of the WBC and WBA comes from the networks' insistence that fights be sanctioned. With the demand for title fights for free home TV, sanctions seem to be the networks' out when a fight is a poor one. Blame the WBC and the WBA. They sanctioned it.

Neither group ever has said it wouldn't sanction the bout, but the question arose as to whether the promoters would be willing to pay the WBC fee which is based on a percentage of the total purse. Although no one seems sure exactly what those percentages are rumors

At this point, Trainer "set a were that for a fight as big as fight we thought was right, this one the WBC fee could run as high as $500,000. This compares to a flat fee of $1,500 by the WBA for championship sanctioning, according to course, Leonard is the champion Dan Duva.

Neither group officially has notified Duva of official sanction, but Duva doesn't anticipate any problem with the WBA, and Mike Trainer, Leonard's attorney, thinks WBC President Jose Sulaiman is satisfied with an arrangement worked out over coffee.

Should any problems arise, the end result would be that a member of the commission either or both groups would be and a WBC supervisor at many put in the laughable position of fights, suggested "approval be not recognizing as a title bout a subject of WBC and WBA major fight between their champions — Leonard holds the WBC welterweight title, while Hearns is recognized by the WBA.

The fight, which is shaping up as the richest in history, will be held. The contracts term it a 15-round championship bout. Duva has received a promoter's license and approval of the Sept. 16 date for the match at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas from the Nevada State Athletic Commission.

Trainer says he met with Sulaiman when the Mexican was in Las Vegas recently for Salvador Sanchez' successful defense of the WBC featherweight title against Wilfredo Gomez.

Sulaiman "indicated he would sanction it because it was a great fight," said Trainer. Then, according to Trainer, Sulaiman listed the things the WBC did for of the total purse. Although no one seems sure exactly what those percentages are rumors

ECU Makes Changes

East Carolina University, as a new member of the ECAC-South for basketball, has had to make three changes from its earlier announced schedule.

UNC-Charlotte will move to Wednesday, January 27; Richmond to Saturday, January 30, and James Madison, to Wednesday, February 17.

The 12 game home schedule opens on November 28, the first game of the season, against Ohio University.

Other home dates include Campbell, William & Mary, Western Illinois, UNC-Wilmington, UNC-Charlotte, Richmond, Baptist, Old Dominion, Eastern Illinois, James Madison and George Mason.

Still, it will be the starting 11 that will determine in large measure how good the Knights are. And that starting lineup will be led by Phil Bird, an inside forward who scored over a dozen goals last season.

Greenville Christian Sees Good Year Ahead For Soccer Program

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer
This could be the year soccer makes it big at Greenville Christian Academy, or at least head coach Dale Thatcher hopes so.

"I am anticipating the best year ever for soccer here," Thatcher said. "Last year we beat three of the teams without as good a team as we have this year. This year I don't think many of the teams we play will be as good as we are."

"I'm excited about the year. I don't want to go too far, but if we don't win we won't have any excuses."

Greenville Christian, which opens its 1981 season Sept. 8 at home against D.H. Conley's club team (4 p.m.), returns nine starters from last year's 4-6 team. In all, there are 16 players on the team, giving Thatcher the depth he has so often lacked in past seasons.

Still, it will be the starting 11 that will determine in large measure how good the Knights are. And that starting lineup will be led by Phil Bird, an inside forward who scored over a dozen goals last season.

Only a sophomore, Bird is already called by Thatcher the best soccer player the Knights have ever had.

Joining Bird at the inside forward is senior Joseph Sasser. At outside forwards will be Chris Harris, who returns from last year, and senior Troy Hudson, who played as a sophomore but sat out last season.

Joel Nason, a junior, returns at center fullback. On either side of Nason will be sophomores Mike Griner and Chris Stox, both of whom played last season.

Senior John Parnell returns in goal for the Knights.

Reserves include seniors Jerry Simpson and David Andrews, sophomore Duane Roeser and freshman Kevin McGowan and Joey Laney.

Thatcher said the Knights, who opened practice nearly two weeks ago, are quickly rounding into shape.

"I think some of the boys worked out on their own during the summer, but most work," Thatcher said. "It's taking some time for them to get smooth."

"That's the problem with soccer. You can't go get a pickup game going with the neighborhood kids," he added. "If you're going to practice it's usually by yourself."

If the Knights have a weakness, it is that they don't shoot enough. "With everybody back I can't really say we have a weakness," Thatcher said. "But we've got to stress shooting the ball more."

"We had the ability to shoot the ball last year but tried to take it too far, and you don't get one-on-one with the goalie too often. We've got the legs to shoot it, we've just got to do it."

The Pirates' open their 1981 season Tuesday, Sept. 8, at home against Atlantic Christian.

The Turk Cleans Out Notable Lockers

By The Associated Press
Don Cockroft and Dan Pastorini saw the "you're expendable" writing on the wall early. So did Fred Dryer, but a funny thing happened to Dryer's message. Someone erased it.

Cockroft, who holds many of the Cleveland Browns kicking records, and Pastorini, the Oakland Raiders veteran reserve quarterback, were two of the more notable players who received their walking papers Monday as the National Football League's 28 teams cut their rosters to the opening day 45-man limit.

Dryer was a little luckier. The 35-year-old defensive end had said last week he had been told by Los Angeles Rams Coach Ray Malavasi that he would be cut. He wasn't.

Cockroft was one of three players waived by Cleveland. Sam Rutigliano termed it, "One of the hardest things I've had to do since I became head coach."

But the move didn't surprise Cockroft, who missed 3-of-6 extra points and 3-of-4 field goal attempts during this pre-season and was made expendable by the fine kicking of free agent Dave Jacobs.

"I believe the decision was made to a great extent a long even before Saturday," said Cockroft. "I sensed it coming. I think it possibly might even go back to the playoff game last season."

Cockroft missed a crucial field goal attempt in the second-round playoff game against Oakland last season and the Browns elected to go for a touchdown late in the fourth quarter instead of letting Cockroft kick a potential game-winning three pointer. The Raiders eventually won the game played in bitter cold weather 14-12.

The Browns also released fourth-year running back Terry Miller, who gained over 1,000 yards one of those seasons with Buffalo.

Pastorini, who was acquired by the Raiders last season in a straight deal for Kenny Stabler, played just five games with Oakland last year before breaking a leg. Jim Plunkett then took over and led the Raiders to the Super Bowl title.

That made Pastorini, in his 11th season, expendable. "I guess I'll just wait and see if somebody picks me up," said Pastorini, told of the move by Raiders Coach Tom Flores Monday.

The Raiders also released veteran wide receiver Rich Martini and linebacker Greg Bracelin.

In Anaheim, Calif., where Dryer will remain for the time being, the Rams released former No.1 draft pick Elvis Peacock, the Oklahoma running back, and three other players.

But Dryer, who was told he was staying on Sunday, was the story.

"Why would they order me back to a team that has openly and blatantly stated they don't want me here. These people are insensitive and inhuman to allow this to happen in the first place," said Dryer.

While Dryer was blowing off some steam, trade winds were filtering through other parts of the country.

The New Orleans Saints shipped fullback Tony Galbreath to the Minnesota Vikings, the San Francisco 49ers sent veteran signalcaller Steve DeBerg to the Denver Broncos and the Miami Dolphins traded punter George Roberts to the San Diego Chargers—all for future draft choices.

Galbreath, for all practical purposes, lost his job when the Saints drafted Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers No.1.

"Tony Galbreath was a fine asset to the Saints as a person and a player," said Coach Bum Phillips. "He will be the same for Minnesota."

The Saints also picked up linebacker Rob Nairne from the Broncos and cut four players, including No.7 draft pick Kevin Williams, a wide receiver from Southern Cal.

The Broncos got DeBerg to be a backup for Craig Morton and released second-year reserve quarterback Jeff Knappe. DeBerg, who started for the 49ers in 1979 and most of last season, set an NFL record of 578 pass attempts with 347 completions in 1979. Roberts, who was fourth among NFL punters last season, was traded because he took one too many steps for the Dolphins purposes. They kept two-step punter Tom Orosz of Ohio State instead.

The Dolphins also placed linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, the former Dallas Cowboys showoff, on the injured reserve list. He suffered a neck injury in Miami's last preseason game.

Tim Mazzetti, the former bartender who became a standout placekicker for Atlanta, was one of four players cut by the Falcons, who elected to let rookie Mick Luckhurst handle the placekicking. Coach Leeman Bennett alsoHagins, a wide receiver who came to Tampa Bay in its expansion season of 1976, and defensive lineman Steve Furness, obtained in a trade with Pittsburgh last week, were among five players cut by the Bucs. Linebacker Dewey Selmon was placed on the injured reserve list.

Dallas traded third-year cornerback Aaron Mitchell to the Bucs for an undisclosed draft choice and placed veteran center John Fitzgerald on injured reserve.

Detroit cut third-year fullback Bo Robinson and four others, including offensive lineman Burton Lawless. The Lions also put linebacker Steve Towle on injured reserve.

The Chicago Bears released four players, including rookie kicker Hans Nielsen, who had kicked during the preseason but was sent packing after regular kicker Bob Thomas recovered from a leg injury.

The Baltimore Colts released placekicker Obed Ariri and acquired placekicker Mike Wood from the Chargers for a draft choice. San Francisco also sent wide receiver James Owens to Tampa Bay for running back Johnny Davis and waived four players, including seven-year defensive end Jimmy Webb and rookie Alabama running back Major Ogilvie.

Kansas City waived four players—six-year tackle Brad Oates and three free agents. The Chiefs also placed wide receiver Ron Washington, a fourth-round draft pick, on the injured reserve list.

Elsewhere, the defending National Conference champion Philadelphia Eagles placed five on waivers, including tight end Greg LaFleur, their No.3 draft pick this season.

New England traded defensive back Bill Currier to the New York Giants and cut four other players. The Patriots also placed linebacker Larry McGrew, wide receiver Preston Brown, and offensive lineman Ron Wooten on injured reserve.

Linebacker Kevin Turner was acquired by the Washington Redskins from the Giants for an undisclosed draft choice.

Meanwhile, the Giants waived five players—defensive back Lyle Blackwood, wide receiver Alvin Garrett, offensive lineman Terry Falcon, running back Cedric Brownlee and defensive back Jerome King.

The club further reduced its roster, placing defensive end Gary Jeter on the injured reserve list.

Buffalo got down to the 45-man limit by releasing wide receiver Lou Piccone, quarterbacks David Humm and Dan Manucci, tight end Reuben Gant and punter Greg Catter.

The New York Jets placed fullback Clark Gaines, who missed most of last season with a broken leg, on the injured reserve list. The Jets also waived four players, including veteran receiver Paul Darby.

Although the NFL dictated the cuts be made by Monday, seven teams exercised an NFL option which allows them to withhold the names of those released until today.

Royals Hopeful Howser Can Turn Them Around

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — It remains to be seen whether Manager Dick Howser will be the spark needed to rekindle the fortunes of the Kansas City Royals.

But Jim Frey's efforts, in the opinion of many of the Royals, had been as effective as a book of wet matches.

"Hopefully this will turn us around and get us playing the way we're capable of playing," said pitcher Rich Gale. "Because we haven't been playing like champions, the way we can."

Howser, fired by the New York Yankees after losing three straight games to Kansas City in the 1980 American League playoffs, was named manager of the Royals on Monday.

He promised a more aggressive offense than the Royals had shown under Frey, who was fired after the defending AL champions had stumbled to a 20-30 mark before the players' strike and were 10-10 since play resumed.

"I like the speed on the ballclub," said Howser, 45. "One thing this ballclub is going to have to do to win, I think, is run, run, run. They can run clubs out of the ballpark — if they get on base."

Howser was given a three-year contract, the longest any Royals manager has ever received. Frey, who was hired in October 1979, had been given a new one-year pact shortly before the end of last season.

Howser had one year remaining on his contract to manage the Yankees and had another year to go on his contract as a scout for New York owner George Steinbrenner's organization.

The low-key Howser, who led the Yankees to a 103-59 record in his only full season as New York manager, promised a smooth transition but said he preferred a set lineup to Frey's platoon system.

Monday night, before the Royals lost 5-1 to Milwaukee, he named Johnathan No. 1 catcher, returned U.L. Washington to shortstop and said he would stay with a five-man pitching rotation.

The defeat left Kansas City one game below .500, but only one game behind Oakland in the AL West and still solidly in the running for a playoff berth.

"I like the ballclub. That's one of the reasons why I'm here. You have a good nucleus," Howser said. "Every team has some problems. But all you have to do is look at last year, and most of those players are still here."

The dismissal left Frey "stunned," according to General Manager Joe Burke, who met with Howser last Friday in Kansas City and informed Frey of his decision Monday morning.

Burke, who is undergoing chemotherapy treatment for cancer of the lymph glands, said he had been thinking of a managerial change after the Royals lost two of three games with Toronto two weeks ago.

'Expecting' Guidelines

By FRED ROTHENBERG

AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's White House correspondent Judy Woodruff returns from vacation next week, but you won't know by watching TV that she's about to deliver a bouncing, baby tax deduction.

Ms. Woodruff is more than eight months pregnant, but NBC's cameras will focus on the face, not the belly.

"We're framing her a bit higher than normal for journalistic reasons," said Bob McFarland, senior Washington producer for NBC's "Nightly News." "Her pregnancy would be distracting to viewers. We want them to listen to what she's saying, not watch her. That's why correspondents don't wear plaid clothes."

Ann Compton, ABC's White House correspondent, once was in clear violation of a similar policy. She was showing, and the nation was seeing.

"We wanted a shot of the House and Senate," Ms. Compton said. "The cameraman got me, the House, the Dome and every monument in Washington. Across America, people were saying: 'Look, Martha, she's pregnant.'"

Jeff Gralnick, executive producer of "World News

Tonight" quickly informed Ms. Compton of the Elbow Rule. "He didn't want to see my elbows until the baby was born."

Although women have broken most barriers on television and have reached an accommodation between motherhood and careers, they still can't edit Mother Nature; it takes nine hard months to have a baby.

"Morning sickness isn't the right word because it doesn't just happen in the morning," said Joan Lunden, co-host of "Good Morning America." Ms. Lunden missed work early in the pregnancy but stayed on the show until a week before her due date.

McFarland said Ms. Woodruff plans to work "until the last minute." Her producer, Jim Lee, says the pregnancy hasn't affected her work, even when President Reagan visited an aircraft carrier.

"That was a lot of jiggling on helicopters and climbs up flights of steps. She was a real trooper," Lee said.

Can chasing stories and working long hours be dangerous to pregnant women?

"When I was on the road, I was careful not to just eat Burger King and airline food," said Ms. Compton. "Sleep is the biggest thing. I needed a lot more of it. I told people I was eating for one but sleeping for two."

Carol Martin, a reporter for WCBS-TV in New York, found street-work too tough. "I was on a story at JFK Airport, and I couldn't keep up. It hurt me to run, and I missed my spot."

Ms. Martin was given more in-studio anchor work and more flexible hours. "I was also concerned about doing live remotes because my doctor thought the high frequency signals from the transmitting equipment could be dangerous to the fetus."

WCBS didn't advertise Ms. Martin's condition, although her final report, before leaving in her eighth month, was on the high cost of having a baby.

Other stations have made the pregnancies "news" and promoted them. "I wouldn't have done it if I was on a news show," said Ms. Lunden. "I didn't want me or my baby to be exploited."

But during her pregnancy, Ms. Lunden's coffee-table interviews didn't hide her condition. In fact, she realized that manufacturers weren't making appropriate on-air maternity clothes and said so in a report. "You can wear a cotton jumper to the grocery store, but for my job I needed something more chic and businesslike."

So the next time you see Ms. Woodruff on camera, check out the latest in maternity fashions ... from the neck up.

Reruns Of 'Doonesbury'

FAIRWAY, Kan. (AP) — Reruns of "Doonesbury" cartoon strips will appear during the week of Sept. 7 because cartoonist Garry Trudeau took time off the job after his wife, Jane Pauley, suffered a miscarriage Aug. 25.

Lee Salem, editorial director for Universal Press Syndicate, which distributes the strip, said that "Doonesbury" is usually drawn 10 days in advance, a short time compared to most

Actor Cary Grant Sues Enquirer: $10 Million

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Cary Grant has filed a $10 million libel suit against the National Enquirer because it implied in an article that his wife forced him into marriage.

Grant, 77, and his wife Barbara Harris Grant, 30, filed the complaint Friday in Superior Court here, charging a May 12 article entitled "The Untold Story: Why Cary Grant Married Again" was false and defamatory. The tabloid and the writer of the article, Allan A. Zullo, were named as defendants.

Grant joins a list of celebrities suing the Enquirer that includes Richard Pryor, Shirley Jones, Ed McMahon, Marty Ingels, Jeff Wald and Paul Lynde.

In the only Enquirer libel case of its kind to make it to court, a jury in March awarded entertainer Carol Burnett $1.6 million, including $1.3 million in punitive damages, although a higher court cut the award in half.

Sorrel Trope, Grant's longtime personal lawyer, said the Grants were outraged by the article's implication that Mrs. Grant pushed a reluctant Grant into marriage.

"The idea that their relationship was created out of anything other than romantic love is factually false," Trope said. The Grants wed April 12, according to the complaint.

Zullo's article said Mrs. Grant "felt increasing humiliation attending Hollywood high-society affairs as Grant's live-in girlfriend rather than as his wife." The statement was based on a "source close to the couple."

Zullo wrote that when the couple were invited to a party given by Frank Sinatra, Mrs. Grant said she would not go "like some sort of escort." Trope said there was no truth to the implication that Mrs. Grant felt humiliation as an unmarried partner to the actor.

He said he would vigorously pursue the name of the Enquirer's source because he did not think it was authentic.

Attached to the lawsuit was a demand for retraction sent the paper by Trope, who said the tabloid so far has not printed one.

Spokesmen for the Enquirer could not be reached at the newspaper's Lantana, Fla. headquarters.

Miss Burnett sued over an article that left the impression she was drunk in a Washington restaurant.

Jerry Lee To Resume Tours

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis plans to resume touring in mid-October if his health is restored.

"I'm anxious to get out there and start playing and recording," Lewis said Monday.

The 45-year-old singer is resting at his ranch at Nesbit, Miss., 10 miles south of Memphis, after spending 61 days in a hospital for stomach problems. Lewis was released Saturday afternoon from Methodist Hospital South.

Lewis underwent more than nine hours of surgery on two separate occasions this summer to repair a 2-inch tear in his stomach.

After the second operation, Lewis' doctor gave him a 50-50 chance of survival.

If his health continues to improve, Lewis said, his first live appearance will be a special on cable television in October. He said he also plans to make up most of the performances he missed while hospitalized, including a tour of Europe.

FRAGILE NOTES

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Rebecs, gyternes and citternes may not be as popular as the electric guitar, but they are sought after by musicians all over the world.

They are among the many medieval stringed instruments authentically reproduced by a small company here, which puts Emery Air Freight in charge of the delicate deliveries.

comic strips.

"Garry works very close to deadline and that's one of the reasons for his success," Salem said Monday night. "He tries to stay on top of things."

Salem said Trudeau was back on the job, and original cartoon strips would resume Sept. 14.

Groups Say Lewis Telethon Harmful

By MIKE FEINSILBER

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Even as comedian Jerry Lewis raises millions of dollars for the handicapped this weekend, two groups that claim to speak for the disabled say his "Labor Day of Love Telethon" does more harm than good.

Two organizations claiming to represent the disabled say the program hurts the victims of muscular dystrophy by making Americans think of them as helpless, childlike objects of pity rather than as adults, married and raising families, holding meaningful jobs and enjoying the everyday joys and heartbreaks of life.

The Muscular Dystrophy Association, which puts on the annual television appeal, counters that, to most of the crippled victims the show serves, the critics' concept of "image" is far less important than the question of survival.

The dispute between MDA and the American Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities (ACCD) and the Ralph Nader-formed Disability Rights Center has been going on behind the scenes for several years.

It bubbled to the surface as Lewis was in Las Vegas preparing his 12th television appeal. Last year, the show raised $31 million in pledges from 93 million viewers.

The coalition, representing 126 groups with 8 million members, and the center outlined their objections in letters to the program's corporate sponsors and executives of the nearly 200 television stations that will carry the 21½-hour telethon.

"Far from evoking pity," said Craig Wood, an MDA spokesman, the Lewis telethon seeks to profile adults overcoming their difficulties in ways that are "meant to evoke admiration."

Wood, in an interview from Las Vegas, said the charity's poster child is the only stricken youngster shown.

Lewis was not available for comment, but Wood quoted him as saying, "I think my telethon has done more for the image of the disabled than any effort in history. Anybody that criticizes it for the way it presents the disabled just hasn't been watching the show."

Retorted Reese Robrahn, director of ACCD, in an article detailing his complaints: "I am acutely aware that what good is achieved by the telethon is vastly outweighed by the harm done through its pity approach."

He added: "It implies that the 36 million disabled people of this nation are and necessarily must be second-class citizens. It reinforces and even helps to build attitudinal barriers to equal opportunity in education and employment and equal access to transportation, housing and recreation. Its emphasis on finding cures creates the impression that disabled people are sick and that we cannot be happy unless we are cured."

Responded Wood: "There are many among the segment of the disabled community that MDA serves that face such a desperate situation the concept of 'image' is far less important to them and those who love them than is the question of survival."

The charity's spokesman implied that the criticism represents a minority viewpoint within the handicapped community.

Wood also suggested that the attack arises from bitterness on the part of Evan Kemp, director of the Disability Rights Center. He says Kemp applied to MDA in 1980 for a $250,000 grant.

Kemp said DRC has never asked MDA for any money. He said he has sent registered letters to Lewis for years, seeking to meet with him, but has been ignored.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 2, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you need to use tact and diplomacy in dealing with others since there is unusual sensitivity in the air. As the day progresses you'll find conditions improving.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Attend to those duties ahead of you without delay and don't ask others for help. Not a good day to ask for advice.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't take advantage of the rights of others today or you could meet with stiff opposition. Maintain your poise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Anything of a civic nature needs to be handled carefully at this time. Be sure you handle credit matters wisely.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may feel you want to delve into new projects that appear inviting, but it's better to wait for a better day.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't overlook obligations you must meet today. Loved one may be moody, but don't antagonize. Cooperate more with others.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Pay close attention to the wishes of others today, particularly where your associates are concerned. Strive for success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take extra time to engage in duties that could add to your income. Rely more on yourself than others at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be cheerful, even though those around you may be morose, for some reason. Don't spend too lavishly on amusements now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) An outside affair should await a better time before going ahead with it. Establish more harmony with family members.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Recheck a routine matter today and avoid a costly mistake. Being critical of an associate is unwise at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Not a good day for delving into money matters since your judgment is not up to par. Be more helpful to others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be positive in any business dealings today for best results. Avoid a group affair. Follow your hunches which are accurate now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have a knack for getting into trouble, so teach ways to solve problems instead of creating them, and then this becomes a successful chart. There is musical talent here. Don't neglect ethical training.

NAMED DIRECTOR
BUIES CREEK — Announcement of the appointment was made by Frank Upchurch, director of Corporate Relations at Campbell University.

Defending His Country

When Tony Esposito, shown here, recently became an American citizen, he pledged to defend the U.S. Beginning today, he'll keep that promise in the way he knows best — as goaltender for Team U.S.A. in the Canada Cup international hockey tournament. Esposito, 38, who has been a star NHL goalie for the past 13 seasons, is the oldest member of the U.S. team. Esposito predicts the Soviets, who hope to avenge their 1980 Olympic defeat, will be the team to beat. The Soviet and European teams are entering competition in mid-season form, while North American skaters have been on vacation for several months. The Canada Cup was cancelled last year to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the coach of Team U.S.A.?

A team captained by Dr. George Rosenkranz of Mexico City and including four Texans defeated a strong New York sextet to win the Grand National Team Championship. In so doing, they became the first team to qualify for the trials to select the North American team for the 1982 World Championship.

On this deal from the final, the final contract was three no trump in both rooms. South's one club opening bid was strong and artificial. Thereafter the auction was natural, with North's one diamond response being negative.

In both rooms the opening lead was a low spade. Where

Dr. Rosenkranz was the declarer, he called for a low spade from dummy. East, an American internationalist, fell from grace and played the queen. Declarer won and immediately returned a spade. West won the jack and shifted to the jack of hearts.

Declarer won the king, crossed to the queen of hearts and led the ten of spades to set up a spade trick in dummy. West won the ace and was reluctant to provide declarer with the entry to dummy, which he obviously did not have, so he shifted to a diamond.

East perforce won the ace and returned a club. Declarer won the ace, cashed the two top diamonds and then presented West with his diamond trick, discarding a heart and the jack of clubs from dummy. No matter what West did, declarer had the rest of the tricks.

Sitting East in the other room was former world champion Jim Jacoby of Dallas. Declarer played the ten of spades on the opening lead, but East played low! Declarer won the eight and made the good shot of a low diamond. East won the ace and led a low spade to declarer's king and West's ace.

West continued with a spade to East's queen, and East shifted to a club. Declarer won the king, cashed the king and queen of diamonds, then took his three heart tricks. Since East was marked with three spades and a singleton diamond, and since he could not have more than four hearts, he had to have at least five clubs. Therefore, the percentage play was to finesse for the queen of clubs.

But percentages are just that. This time the odds-against play would have worked. West won the queen of clubs and took the rest of the tricks for down two.

The black turpentine beetle is a frequent pest of pine trees east of the Mississippi River. The turpentine beetle most often attacks unhealthy loblolly or slash pines. It can infest healthy pines, but pines under stress are preferred. Freshly-cut stumps often serve as a breeding site for the beetles.

The black turpentine beetle is the insect referred to as a "pine borer." The beetles usually attack the lower portions of the trunk. Sometimes the attacks occur as high as 12 feet. Infested trees are characterized by large reddish to whitish pitch tubes on the bark surface. From a distance, pitch tubes may look like popcorn stuck on the bark of the tree.

The turpentine beetle in eastern North Carolina finds acceptable trees to attack around new home construction sites. The reason why so many pines are killed after the attack of beetles is because the roots nearby are disturbed by heavy construction equipment first. Sometimes roots are removed directly by the heavy machinery, sometimes roots are crushed, or the soil is compacted near the tree. Trees that have lost portions of their root systems are stressed and as a result, are much more susceptible to beetle invasion. Healthy trees are often able to "pitch out" pine beetles because they have a strong flow of sap in the tree. When the pitch tubes are clear or white in color, the tree is holding its own against the turpentine beetle.

When the pitch tubes take on a reddish color or have bits of sawdust in them, the tree is in trouble. Where pitch tubes are noticed, sprays with the insecticide lindane may help. The lower portions of the trunk can be sprayed whenever pitch tubes are first noticed.

Merely spraying the tree is often not enough. It must be assumed that the tree is under stress sur to other causes. Drought, flood, lightning, construction damage, disease of lack of space between trees may make a tree more susceptible to insect attack. If crowding of pines is the problem, then thinning pines to allow more room is an obvious solution. Where there has been a loss of root system fertilization may increase root growth. Lightning is usually fatal to pines.

To stimulate new roots, fertilizers that are relatively low in nitrogen and higher in phosphorus and potash should be used. Such fertilizers as 0-10-20, 3-9-18, 5-10-10 are better than using 10-10-10 as a source of nitrogen such as soda.

Black turpentine beetles are active through most warm parts of the year. They only affect pine trees, especially loblolly and slash pines and will not attack broadleaved trees. Where evidence of these beetles is seen, there is a good possibility that the affected tree is under stress, and depending upon the severity of attack, may need removal.

Farmville Is Offering New Program

The business and office education department of Farmville Central High School is expanding its curriculum beginning with the new school year by offering a new program — cooperative office occupations or COO. At the present time the school is recruiting training sponsors for the upcoming school term.

COO stuents will attend morning classes including two hours of office occupations class which entails work-related instruction. In the afternoon and evenings they will move to a job site receiving on-the-job training through the guidance and supervision of employers. The students earn a unit of credit for the work experience.

"This new program will allow students to learn more about the office environment and polish the skills already possessed," said Mrs. Barbara Wooten, coordinator for the program. "Also, this program will provide a source of part-time office workers in the community. The students are very eager to put their secretarial and office skills to work."

The students who are enrolled in this program have developed job-entry level office skills by taking such courses as typewriting, accounting, recordkeeping, shorthand and office occupations. The COO program will enable the students to put their job skills to work and learn at the same time. Any interested employer who would like more information or would like to employ one of the students is urged to get in touch with the COO coordinator, Mrs. Barbara Wooten, at Farmville Central, 753-5138.

ELECTED TO BOARD BUIES CREEK — Dr. David Frazier, president of Peace College in Raleigh, has been elected to the Board of Directors of the American Association of Presidents of Independent Colleges and Universities. Dr. Frazier replaces Dr. Lawson Pendleton, president of Urbana College in Ohio.

RECEIVES LICENSES Elder licenses have been awarded to the Rev. Carrie Gooding of Washington, D.C., formerly of Greenville, N.C. Making the presentation were Dr. J. L. Melvin, bishop and officers of the Goldsboro and Raleigh District Disciples of Christ Assembly.

THE NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN RESOURCES PROPOSED PLAN FOR WINTER HOME HEATING ASSISTANCE
The State of North Carolina is requesting the advice of citizens on how they feel the winter home heating program for this year can best be administered. The U.S. Congress has passed the following requirements for states:
States must certify that they will use the federal aid funds to provide assistance only to households with incomes that do not exceed the greater of 150 percent of the poverty level or an amount equal to 60 percent of the state's median income.
—conduct outreach activities to assure that eligible households, especially those with elderly and/or handicapped individuals, are aware of assistance available under this Act and similar energy-related assistance;
—coordinate activities under this Act with similar federal and state government programs;
—in a manner consistent with the timely and efficient payment of benefits, provide the highest level of assistance to households with the lowest incomes in relation to income, taking into account family size;
—if the state chooses to pay home energy suppliers directly, establish procedures and safeguards required in the Act;
—use not more than 10 percent of its allotment for state planning and administration;
—establish fiscal control and accounting procedures to assure the proper dispersal of and accounting for block grant funds;
—permit and cooperate with federal investigations of this program in the state;
—provide for public participation in the development of the plan; and —provide an opportunity for a fair administrative hearing to individuals whose claim for assistance is denied or is not acted upon with reasonable promptness.

Four comments will be considered in developing the plan. In order to have time to assimilate the information the department requests that written public comment be postmarked by September 2 and sent to the North Carolina Division of Social Services, 323 N. Salisbury Street, Room 712, Raleigh, N.C. 27611. Comments received may be reviewed Monday through Friday between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at the same location. Public briefings on the state proposal will be held during October 1, 1981.
